TO THE HIGH AND MIGHTY CHARLES, PRINCE OF WALES.

HE First Part of this Poem (most Illustrious Prince) leadicated to your deceased Brother of most famous memory, whose princely bounty, and usage of me, gave me much encouragement to go on with this Second Part, or Continuance thereof; which now, as his Successor, I owe to your Highness. If means and time fail me not, being now arrived at Scotland, I trust you shall see me crown her with no worse flowers than I have done her two Sisters, England and Wales: and without any partiality, as I dare be bold, to make the Poets of that Kingdom my judges therein. If I arrive at the Orcades, without sinking in my flight, your Highness cannot but say, that I had no ill perspective that gave me things so clearly, when I stood so far off.

To your Highness

Most humbly devoted,

MICHAEL DRAYTON. .

To any that will read it.

HEN I first undertook this Poem, or, as some very skilful in this kind have pleased to term it, this Herculean labour, I was by some virtuous friends persuaded, that I should receive much comfort and encouragement therein; and for these reasons: First, that it was a new, clear, way, never before gone by any; then, that it contained all the Delicacies, Delights, and Rarities of this renowned Isle, interwoven with the Histories of the Britans, Saxons, Normans, and the later English: And further that there is searcely any of the Nobility or Gentry of this land, but that he is some way or other by his Blood interested therein. But it hath fallen out otherwise; for instead of that comfort, which my noble friends (from the freedom of their spirits) proposed as my due, I have met with barbarous ignorance, and baso detraction: such a cloud hath the Devil drawn over the world's judgment, whose opinion is in few years fallen so far below all ballatry, that the lethargy is incurable: nay, some of the Stationers, that had the selling of the First Part of this Poem, because it went not so fast away in the sale, as some of their beastly and abominable trash, (a shame both to our language and nation) have either despitefully left out, or at least carelessly neglected the Epistles to the Readers, and so have cozened the buyers with unperfected books; which these that have undertaken the Second Part, have been forced to amend in the First, for the small number that are yet remaining in their hands. And some of our outlandish, unnatural English, (I know not how otherwise to express them) stick not to say that there is nothing in this Island worthy studying for, and take a great pride to be ignorant in any thing thereof; for these, since they delight in their folly, I wish it may be hereditary from them to their posterity, that their children may be begg'd for fools to the fifth generation, until it may be beyond the memory of man to know that there was ever other of their families: neither can this deter me from going on with Scotland, if means and time do not hinder me, to perform as much as I have promised in my First Song:

> Till through the sleepy main, to Thuly I have gone, And seen the Frozen Isles, the cold Deucalidon, Amongst whose iron Rocks, grim Saturn yet remains Bound in those gloomy caves with adamantine chains.

And as for those cattle whereof I spake before, Odi pro-fanum vulgus, et arceo, of which I account them, be they never so great, and so I leave them. To my friends, and the lovers of my labours, I wish all happiness.

MICHAEL DRAYTON,

To my Honor'd Friend, Mr DRAYTON.

NGLAND'S brave Genius, raise thy head; and see,
We have a Muse in this mortality
Of virtue yet survives; All met not death,
When we intomb'd our dear Elizabeth.

Immortal Sydney, honour'd Colin Clout,
Presaging what we feel, went timely out.
Then why lives Drayton, when the Times refuse,
Both means to live, and matter for a Muse?
Only without excuse to leave us quite,
And tell us, durst we act, he durst to write.

Now, as the people of a famish'd town, Receiving no supply, seek up and down For mouldy corn, and bones long cast aside, Wherewith their hunger may be satisfied: (Small store now left) we are inforc'd to pry And search the dark leaves of Antiquity For some good Name, to raise our Muse again, In this her crisis, whose harmonious strain Was of such compass, that no other Nation Durst ever venture on a sole translation; Whilst our full language, musical, and high, Speaks as themselves their best of Poesy.

Drayton, amongst the worthist of all those, The glorious Laurel or the Cyprian Rose Have ever crown'd, doth claim in every line, An equal honour from the sacred Nine: For if old Time could, like the restless main, Roll himself back into his spring again, And on his wings bear this admiréd Muse, For Ovid, Virgil, Homer, to peruse; They would confess, that never happier pen, Sung of his Loves, his Country, and the Men.

POEM.

ROM CORNWALL'S Foreland to the Cliffs of DOVER,
O'er hilly CAMBRIA, and all ENGLAND over,
Thy Muse hath borne me; and (in four days) shown
More goodly Prospects, than I could have known

In four years' Travels; if I had not thus Been mounted, on thy winged PEGASUS.

The famous Rivers, the delightsome Fountains, The fruitful Valleys, the steep rising Mountains; The new-built Tow'rs, the ancient-ruin'd Walls; The wholesome Baths, the beds of Mineralls; The nigh-worn Monuments of former Ages; The Works of Peace, the Marks of Civil-rages; The Woods, the Forests, and the open Plains, With whotsoe'er this spacious Land contains, For Profit, or for Pleasure: I o'evlook, (As from one Station) when I read thy Book.

Nor do mine eyes from thence behold alone, Such Things, as for the present there are done; (Or Places, as this day they do appear) But Actions past, and Places as they were A hundred ages since, as well as now:
Which he that wearies out his feet to know,
Shall never find, nor yet so cheap attain
(With so much ease and profit) half that gain.
Good-speed befall thee; who hast wag'd a Task,
That better censures, and rewards doth ask,
Than these Times have to give. For those, that should
The honor of true Poesy uphold,
Are (for the most part) such as do prefer
The fawning lines of every Pamphleter,
Before the best-writ Poems. And their sight
Or cannot, or else dares not, eye the Flight
Of free-born Numbers; lest bright Virtue's fame,
Which flies in those, reflect on them, their shame.

'Tis well; thy happy judgment could devise, Which way, a man this age might poetize, And not write Satires: Or else, so to write That 'scape thou may'st, the clutches of Despite. For, through such Woods, and Rivers, trips thy Muse, As will or lose or drown him, that pursues.

Had my Invention (which I know too weak)
Enabled been, so brave a flight to make;
(Should my unlucky pen have overgone
So many a Province, and so many a Town)
Though I to no man's wrong had gone astray,
I had been pounded on the King's highway.

But thou hast better fortune, and hast chose So brave a Patron, that thou canst not lose By this Adventure. For, in Him, survives His brother Henry's virtues: and he lives To be that comfort to thy Muse, which He Had nobly (ere his death) began to be.

Yet, overmuch presume not, that these times,

Will therefore value these Heroic Rhymes,
According to their merit. For, although
He, and some few, the worth of them shall know:
This is their FATE. (And some unborn will say,
I spake the truth; whate'er men think to-day)
Ages to come, shall hug thy POESY,
As we our dear friends' pictures, when they die.
Those that succeed us, DRAYTON'S name shall love,
And, so much this laborious PIECE approve;
That such as write hereafter, shall to trim
Their new Inventions, pluck it limb from limb.
And our great-grandsons' children's-children may,
(Yea shall) as in a glass, this ISLE survey,
As we now see it: And as those did too,
Who livéd many hundred years ago.

For, when the Seas shall eat away the Shore, Great Woods spring up, where Plains were heretofore; High Mountains level'd with low Valleys lye; And Rivers run where now the ground is dry. This POEM shall grow famous, and declare What old-Things stood, where new-Things shall appear.

And hereunto his name subscribeth He, Who shall by this PREDICTION live with Thee.

An Acrostic Sonnet upon his Name.

M UST Albion thus be stellified by thee,

I n her full pomp, that her the world may praise,

C heerful, Brave Isle, yea shall I live to see

II im thus to deck, and crown thy Front with bays,

A nd shall I not in zeal, and merit too

E xpress to thee my joy, my thanks to him;

L ess (sure) than this I may not, will not do.

D rayton, sith still Parnassus thou dost climb,

R ight like thyself, whose heaven-inspired Muse,

A s doth the Phænix still herself renewing,

Y e into other the like life infuse;

T how his rich subject, he thy fame pursuing.

O hadst thou lov'd him, as he thee hath done,

No Land such Honour, (to all times) had won.

THE NINETEENTH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Muse, now over Thames makes forth, Upon her progress to the North, From Cauney with a full career, She up against the stream doth bear; Where Waltham Forest's pride exprest, She points directly to the East, And shows how all those Rivers strain Through Essex, to the German Main; When Stoure, with Orwell's aid prefers, Our British brave Sca-voyagers; Half Suffolke in with them she takes, Where of this Song an end she makes.

EAR bravely up my Muse, the way thou went'st before,

And cross the kingly Thames to the Esseriau shore,
Stem up his tide-full stream, upon that side to rise,
Where Cauney,* Albion's child in-isled richly lies,
Which, though her lower site doth make her seem but mean,

* An Island lying in the Thames, on Essex side.

Of him as dearly lov'd as Shepey is or Greane, And him as dearly lov'd; 'for when he would depart, With Hercules to fight, she took it so to heart, That falling low and flat, her blubber'd face to hide, By Thames she well-near is surrounded every tide: And since of worldly State, she never taketh keep, But only gives herself, to tend and milk her sheep.

But Muse, from her so low, divert thy high-set song To London-wards, and bring from Lea with thee along The Forests, and the Floods, and most exactly show, 15 How these in order stand, how those directly flow: For in that happy soil, doth pleasure ever wonne, Through Forests, where clear Rills in wild meanders run; Where dainty summer-bowers, and arborets are made, Cut out of bushy thicks, for coolness of the shade. 20 Fools gaze at painted Courts, to th' country let me go, To climb the easy hill, then walk the valley low; No gold-embosséd roofs, to me are like the woods; No bed like to the grass, nor liquor like the floods: A City's but a sink, gay houses gawdy graves, 25 The Muses have free leave, to starve or live in caves:

But Waltham Forest still in prosperous estate,
As standing to this day (so strangely fortunate)
Above her neighbour Nymphs, and holds her head aloft;
A turf beyond them all, so sleek and wondrous soft,
Upon her setting side, by goodly London grac'd,
Upon the North by Lea, her South by Thames embrac'd.
Upon her rising point, she chauncéd to espy,
A dainty Forest-Nymph of her society.

Fair Hatfield, which in height all other did surmount, And of the Dryads held in very high account; Yet in respect of her stood far out of the way, Who doubting of herself, by others' late decay, Her sister's glory view'd with an astonish'd eye, Whom Waltham wisely thus reproveth by and by:

Dear Sister rest content, nor our declining rue, What thing is in this world (that we can say) is new? The ridge and furrow shows, that once the crooked plow Turn'd up the grassy turf, where oaks are rooted now: And at this hour we see, the share and coulter tear The full corn-bearing glebe, where sometimes forests were; And those but caitiffs are, which most do seek our spoil, Who having sold our woods, do lastly sell our soil; 'Tis virtue to give place to these ungodly times, When as the fost'red ill proceeds from others' crimes; 'Gainst lunatics and fools, what wise folk spend their force? For folly headlong falls, when it hath had the course: And when God gives men up, to ways abhorr'd and vile, Of understanding He deprives them quite, the while They into error run, confounded in their sin. 55 As simple fowls in lime, or in the fowler's gyn. And for those pretty birds, that wont in us to sing, They shall at last forbear to welcome in the Spring, When wanting where to perch, they sit upon the ground, And curse them in their notes, who first did woods confound. Dear Sister Hatfield, then hold up thy drooping head, We feel no such decay, nor is all succour fled: For Essex is our dower, which greatly doth abound, With every simple good, that in the Isle is found: And though we go to wrack in this so general waste, 65 This hope to us remains, we yet may be the last.

When Hatfield taking heart, where late she sadly stood, . Sends little Roding forth, her best-belovéd Flood; Which from her crystal fount, as to enlarge her fame, To many a Village lends, her clear and noble name, 700 Which as she wand'reth on, through Waltham holds her way, With goodly oaken wreaths, which makes her wondrous gay; But making at the last into the wat'ry Marsh, Where though the blady grass unwholesome be and harsh, Those wreaths away she casts, which bounteous Walthum gave, With bulrush, flags, and reed, to make her wondrous brave, 760 And herself's strength divides, to sundry lesser streams, So wantoning she falls into her Sovereign Thumes.

From whose vast beechy banks a rumour straight resounds, Which quickly ran itself through the Essexian grounds, That Crouch amongst the rest, a River's name should seek, As scorning any more the nickname of a Creek, Well-furnish'd with a stream, that from the fill to fall, Wants nothing that a Flood should be adorn'd withall. On Benge's* batfull side, and at her going out, 85 With Walnot, Foulnesse fair, near wat'red round about. Two Isles for greater state to stay her up that stand, Thrust far into the sea, yet fixéd to the land; As Nature in that sort them purposely had plac'd, That she by sea and land, should every way be grac'd. Some Sea-Nymphs and besides, her part (there were) that took, As angry that their Crouch should not be call'd a Brook; And bad her to complain to Neptune of her wrong.

But whilst these grievous stirs thus happ'ned them among, Choice Chelmer comes along, a Nymph most neatly clear, 95 Which well-near through the midst doth cut the wealthy Sheere,

Many Towns that stand on this River, have her name as an addition: as Kythorp Roding, Leaden Roding, with many others.
 * The fruitfullest Hundred of Essex.
 "Denge I believe it should be."—[MS, Note.]

By Dunmow gliding down to Chelmsford* holds her chase, To which she gives the name, which as she doth imbrace Clear Can comes tripping in, and doth with Chelmer close: With whose supply (though small as yet) she greater grows. She for old Maldont makes, where in her passing by, She to remembrance calls that Roman Colony, And all those ominous signs her fall that did forego, As that which most express'd their fatal overthrow; Crown'd Victory revers'd, fell down whereas she stood, And the vast greenish sea, discoloured like to blood. Shrieks heard like people's cries, that see their deaths at hand; The portraitures of men imprinted in the sand. When Chelmer scarce arrives in her most wished Bay, But Blakwater comes in, through many a crooked way, Which Pant was call'd of yore; but that, by Time exil'd, She Froshwell after hight, then Blakwater instil'd. But few, such titles have the British Floods among. When Northey near at hand, and th' Isle of Ousey rung With shouts the Sea-Nymphs gave, for joy of their arrive, 115 As either of those Isles in courtesy do strive, To Tethis' darlings, which should greatest honour do; And what the former did, the latter adds thereto.

But Colne, which frankly lends fair Colechester her name, (On all the Essexian shore, the Town of greatest fame) Perceiving how they still in courtship did contend, Quoth she, wherefore the time thus idly do you spend? What is there nothing here, that you esteem of worth, That our big-bellied sea, or our rich land brings forth? Think you our Oysters here, unworthy of your praise? Pure Walfleet, t which do still the daintiest palates please :

upon the River Chelmer.

† Anciently called Camolodunum, where these ominous signs foreran that great overthrow given to the Roman Colony by the Britans. See the Eighth Song. # Walfleet Oysters.

As excellent as those, which are esteemed most, The Cizic1 shells, or those on the Lucrinian1 coast; Or Cheese, which our fat soil to every quarter sends, Whose tack the hungry clown, and plow-man so commends. If you esteem not these, as things above the ground, Look under, where the Urns of ancient times are found: The Roman Emp'rour's coins, oft digg'd out of the dust, And warlike weapons, now consum'd with cank'ring rust: The huge and massy bones,2 of mighty fearful men, To tell the world's full strength, what creatures livéd then; When in her height of youth, the lusty fruitful earth Brought forth her big-limb'd brood, even Giants in their birth. . Thus spoke she, when from sea they suddenly do hear A strong and horrid noise, which struck the land with fear: For with their crooked trumps, his Tritons Neptune sent, 141 To warn the wanton Nymphs, that they incontinent Should straight repair to Stour, in Orwell's pleasant Road; For it had been divulg'd the Ocean all abroad, That Orwell and this Stour, by meeting in one bay, 145 Two, that each other's good, intended every way, Prepar'd to sing a Song, that should precisely show, That Medway3 for her life, their skill could not out-go: For Stour, a dainty Flood, that duly doth divide Fair Suffolke from this Shire, upon her other side: 150 By Clare first coming in, to Sudbury doth show, The even course she keeps; when far she doth not flow, But Breton a bright Nymph, fresh succour to her brings: Yet is she not so proud of her superfluous springs, But Orwell coming in from Ipswitch thinks that she, 155

Should stand for it with Stour, and lastly they agree, That since the Britans hence their first discoveries made, And that into the East they first were taught to trade. Besides, of all the Roads, and Havens of the East, This Harbour where they meet, is reckoned for the best. 160 Our Voyages by sea, and brave discoveries known, Their argument they make, and thus they sing their own:

In Severn's late tun'd lay, that Empress of the West,
In which great Arthur's acts are to the life exprest:
His Conquests to the North, who Norway did invade,
Who Groneland, Iseland next, then Lapland lastly made
His awful Empire's bounds, the Britans' acts among,
This God-like Hero's deeds exactly have been sung:
His valiant people then, who to those Countries brought,
Which many an age since that, our great'st discoveries thought.

This worthiest then of ours, our Argonauts* shall lead.

Next Malgo, who again that Conqueror's steps to tread,
Succeeding him in reign, in conquests so no less,
Plow'd up the frozen sea, and with as fair success,
By that great Conqueror's claim, first Orkney over-ran;
Proud Denmarke then subdu'd, and spacious Norway wan,
Sciz'd Iseland for his own, and Goteland to each shore,
Where Arthur's full-sail'd Fleet had ever touch'd before.

And when the Britans' reign came after to decline,
And to the Cambrian Hills their fate did them confine,
The Saxon swaying all, in Alfred's powerful reign,
Our English Octer put a fleet to sea again,
Of th' huge Norwegian Hills and news did hither bring,
Whose tops are hardly wrought in twelve days' travelling.
But leaving Norway then a-starboard, forward kept,
And with our English sails that mighty Ocean swept,
Where those stern people wonne, whom hope of gain doth call,

Then Woolstan after him discovering Dansig found, Where Wixel's<sup>2</sup> mighty mouth is pour'd into the Sound, And towing up his stream, first taught the English oars, The useful way of Trade to those most gainful shores.

And when the Norman Stem here strong and potent grew, And their successful sons, did glorious acts pursue, One Nicholas nam'd of Lyn, where first he breath'd the air, Though Oxford taught him Art, and well may hold him dear, I' th' Mathematicks learn'd (although a Friar profess'd), To see those Northern Climes, with great desire possess'd, 200 Himself he thither shipp'd, and skilful in the globe, Took every several height with his true astrolobe; The Whirlpools* of the seas, and came to understand, From the four card'nal winds, four indraughts that command: Int' any of whose falls, if th' wand'ring barque doth light, It hurried is away with such tempestuous flight, Into that swallowing gulf, which seems as it would draw The very earth itself into th' infernal maw. Four such immeasur'd Pools, philosophers agree, I' th' four parts of the world undoubtedly to be; 210 From which they have suppos'd, Nature the winds doth raise, And from them to proceed the flowing of the seas.

And when our Civil Wars began at last to cease,
And these late calmer times of olive-bearing peace,
Gave leisure to great minds, far regions to descry;
That brave advent'rous Knight, our Sir Hugh Willoughby,
Shipp'd for the Northern Seas, 'mongst those congealed piles,
Fashioned by lasting frosts, like mountains, and like isles,
(In all her fearfull'st shapes saw Horror, whose great mind,

The great river of Russia. The greatest river of Danske.
* The greatest wonder of Nature.

In lesser bounds than these, that could not be confin'd, 220 Adventuréd on those parts, where Winter still doth keep; When most the icy cold had chain'd up all the deep) In bleak Arzina's Road his death near Lapland took, Where Kegor from her site, on those grim Seas doth look.

Two others follow then, eternal fame that won,
Our Chancellor, and, with him, compare we Jenkinson:
For Russia both imbarqu'd, the first arriving there,
Ent'ring Duina's mouth, up her proud stream did steer
To Volgad, to behold her pomp, the Russian State,
Moscovia measuring then; the other with like fate,
Both those vast Realms survey'd, then into Bactria past,
To Boghor's bulwark'd walls, then to the liquid waste,
Where Oxus rolleth down twixt his far distant shores,
And o'er the Caspian Main, with strong untiréd oars,
Adventuréd to view rich Persia's wealth and pride,
Whose true report thereof, the English since have tried.

With Fitch, our Eldred next, deserv'dly placéd is; Both travelling to see, the Syrian Tripolis.
The first of which (in this whose noble spirit was shown)
To view those parts, to us that were the most unknown, 240
On thence to Ormus set, Goa, Cambaya, then,
To vast Zelabdim, thence to Echubar, again
Cross'd Ganges' mighty stream, and his large banks did view,
To Baccola went on, to Bengola, Pegu;
And for Mallaccan then, Zeiten, and Cochin cast,
Measuring with many a step, the great East-Indian waste.

The other from that place, the first before had gone,
Determining to see the broad-wall'd Babylon,
Cross'd Enphrates, and row'd against his mighty stream;
Licia, and Gaza saw, with great Hierusalem,
And Our Dear Saviour's seat, blest Bethlem, did behold,
And Jourdan, of whose waves, much is in Scriptures told.
Then Macham, who (through love to long adventures led)

Medera's wealthy Isles, the first discovered, Who having stol'n a maid, to whom he was affied, 255 Yet her rich parents still her marriage rites denied, Put with her forth to sea, where many a danger past, Upon an Isle of those, at length by tempest east; And putting in, to give his tender love some ease, Which very ill had brook'd, the rough and boist'rous seas; And ling'ring for her health, within the quiet Bay, 261 The mariners most false, fled with the ship away, When as it was not long, but she gave up her breath; When he whose tears in vain bewail'd her timeless death: That their deservéd rites her funeral could not have. 265 A homely altar built upon her honour'd grave. *When with his folk but few, not passing two or three, There making them a boat, but rudely of one tree, Put forth again to sea, where after many a flaw, Such as before themselves, searce mortal ever saw; 270 Nor miserable men could possibly sustain, Now swallowed with the waves, and then spu'd up again; At length were on the coast of sun-burnt Affrick thrown: T' amaze that further world, and to amuse our own. Then Windham who new ways, for us and ours to trie, 275 For great Morrocco made, discovering Barbarie. Lock, Towerson, Fenner next, vast Guiney forth that sought, And of her ivory, home in great abundance brought. The East-Indian Voy'ger then, the valiant Lancaster, To Buona Esperance, Comara, Zanziber, 280 To Nicuba, as he to Gomerpolo went, Till his strong bottom struck Mollucco's Continent; And sailing to Brazeel another time he took Olynda's chiefest Town, and Harbour Farnambuke,

And with their precious wood, sugar, and cotton fraught,

It by his safe return, into his Country brought.

Then Forbosher, whose fame flew all the Ocean o'er, Who to the North-west sought, huge China's wealthy shore, When nearer to the North, that wand'ring seaman set, Where he in our hott'st months of June and July met 200 With snow, frost, hail, and sleet, and found stern Winter strong,

With mighty isles of ice, and mountains huge and long. Where as it comes and goes, the great eternal Light, Makes half the year still day, and half continual night. Then for those bounds* unknown, he bravely set again, 205 As he a Sea-god were, familiar with the Main.

The noble Feuton next, and Juckman we prefer, Both Voyagers, that were with famous Forbosher.

And Davies, three times forth that for the North-west made Still striving by that course, t' inrich the English Trade: 200 And as he well deserv'd to his eternal fame, There by a mighty Sea,† immortaliz'd his name.

With noble Gilbert next, comes Hourd who took in hand To clear the course scarce known into the New-found Land, And view'd the plenteous Seas, and fishful Havens, where 205 Our neighbouring Nations since have stor'd them every year.

Then Globe-engirdling Druke, the Naval Palm that won, Who strove in his long course to emulate the Sun: Of whom the Spaniard us'd a prophecy to tell, That from the British Isles should rise a Dragon fell, so That with his arméd wings, should strike th' Iberian Main, And bring in after time much horror upon Spain. This more than man (or what) this demi-god at sea, Leaving behind his back, the great America, Upon the surging main his well-stretch'd tacklings flew'd, so To forty-three degrees of North'ly latitude; Unto that Land before to th' Christian world unknown, Which in his Country's right he nam'd New Albion;

And in the Western Ind, spite of the power of Spain,
He Saint Iago took, Domingo, Cartagene:
And leaving of his prowess, a mark in every Bay,
Saint Augustin's surpris'd, in Terra Florida. [wrought,

Then those that forth for sea, industrious Rawleigh And them with everything, fit for discovery fraught; That Amadas (whose name doth scarcely English sound) 325 With Barlow, who the first Virginia throughly found. As Greenvile, whom he got to undertake that Sea, Three sundry times from hence, who touch'd Virginia. (In his so rare a choice, it well approv'd his wit; That with so brave a spirit, his turn so well could fit. 330 O Greenvile, thy great name, for ever be renown'd, And borne by Neptune still, about this mighty round; Whose naval conflict wan thy Nation so much fame, And in th' Iberians bred fear of the English name. [lie,

Nor should Fame speak her loud'st, of Lane, she could not Who in Virginia left, with th' English Colony, 336 Himself so bravely bare, amongst our people there, That him they only lov'd, when others they did fear; And from those barbarous, brute, and wild Virginians wan Such reverence, as in him there had been more than man. 340

Then he which favour'd still, such high attempts at these, Rawleigh, whose reading made him skill'd in all the Seas, Imbarqu'd his worthy self, and his adventurous crew, And with a prosperous sail to those fair Countries flew, Where Orenoque, as he, on in his course doth roll,

Seems as his greatness meant, grim Neptune to control;
Like to a puissant king, whose realms extend so far,
That many a potent prince his tributaries are.
So are his branches seas, and in the rich Guiana,
A Flood as proud as he, the broad-brimm'd Orellana:
And on the spacious firm Manoa's mighty seat,
The land (by Nature's power) with wonders most repleat.

30 Leigh, Cupe Di tion saw, and Itamens Isles again,
As Tompson undertook the Voyage to New-Spain:
And Hawkins not behind, the best of these before,
Who hoising sail, to seek the most remotest shore,
Upon that new-nam'd Spain, and Guinny sought his prize,
As one whose mighty mind small things could not suffice,
The son of his brave sire, who with his furrowing keel,
Long ere that time had touch'd the goodly rich Brazeel. 360
Courageous Candish then, a second Neptune here,
Whose fame fill'd every mouth, and took up every ear.
What man could in his time discourse of any Seas,
But of brave Candish talk'd, and of his voyages?
Who through the South Seas pass'd, about this earthly ball,
And saw those stars, to them that only rise and fall, 366
And with his silken sails, stain'd with the richest ore,
Dar'd any one to pass where he had been before.
Count Cumberland, so hence to seek th' Asores sent,
And to the Western-Ind, to Porta Ricco went,
And with the English power it bravely did surprise.
Sir Robert Dudley then, by sea that sought to rise,
Hoist sails with happy winds to th' Isles of Trinidado:
Paria then he pass'd, the Islands of Granado;
As those of Sancta Cruz, and Porta Ricco: then
Amongst the famous rank of our sea-searching men,
Is Preston sent to sea, with Summers forth to find,
Adventures in the parts upon the Western-Ind;
Port Santo who surpris'd, and Coches, with the Fort
Of Coro, and the Town, when in submissive sort,
Cumana ransom crav'd, Saint James of Leon sack'd;
Jamica went not free, but as the rest they wrack'd. [won),
Then Sherley (since whose name such high renown hath
That Voyage undertook, as they before had done:
He Saint Iago saw, Domingo, Margarita,
By Terra firma sail'd to th' Islands of Jamica,

Up Rio Dolce row'd, and with a prosperous hand,
Returning to his home, touch'd at the New-found-land,
Where at Jamica's Isles, courageous Parker met
With Sherley, and along up Rio Dolce set,
Where bidding him adieu, on his own course he ran,
And took Campeche's Town, the chief'st of Jucatan.
A frigate and from thence did home to Britain bring,
With most strange tribute fraught, due to that Indian King.

At mighty Neptune's beck, thus ended they their Song, 395 When as from Harwich all to Loving-land along, Great claps and shouts were heard resounding to the shore, Wherewith th' Essexian Nymphs applaud their lovéd Stour, From the Suffolean side yet those which Stour prefer Their princely Orwell praise, as much as th' other her: 400 For though clear Briton be rich Suffolke's from her spring, Which Stour upon her way to Harwich down doth bring, Yet Deben of herself a stout and stedfast friend, Her succour to that Sea, near Orwell's Road doth send.

When Waveney to the North, rich Suffolke's only mere,* 405
As Stour upon the North, from Essex parts this Sheere;
Lest Stour and Orwell thus might steal her Nymphs away,
In Neptune's name commands, that here their force should stay:

For that herself and Yar in honour of the Deep, Were purposéd a Feast in Loving-land to keep.

* Suffolke bounded on the South and North.

THE TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Muse that part of Suffolke sings,
That lies to Norfolk, and then brings
The bright Norfolcean Nymphs, to guest
To Loving-land, to Neptune's Feast;
To Ouze the Less then down she takes,
Where she a flight at river makes:
And thence to Marsh-land she descends,
With whose free praise this Song she ends.

ROM Suffolke rose a sound, through the Norfolceen shore

That ran itself, the like had not been heard before: For he that doth of sea the powerful trident weld,

Es

His Tritons made proclaim, a Nymphall* to be held In honour of himself, in Laving-land, where he The most selected Nymphs appointed had to be. Those Seamaids that about his secret walks do dwell, Which tend his mighty herds of whales, and fishes fell, As of the Rivers those, amongst the meadows rank, That play in every ford, and sport on every bank,

Were summon'd to be there, in pain of Neptune's hate: For he would have his Feast, observ'd with god-like state,

When those Suffolcean Floods, that sided not with Stoure, Their streams but of themselves into the ocean pour, As Or, through all the coast a Flood of wondrous fame, Whose honoured fall begets a Haven* of her name; And Bluth a dainty Brook, their speedy course do cast, For Neptune with the rest, to Loving-land to haste: When Waveney in her way, on this Septentrial side, That these two Eastern Shires doth equally divide, 20 From Laphamford+ leads on, her stream into the East, By Bungey, then along by Beckles, when possest Of Loving-land, 'bout which her limber arms she throws, With Neptune taking hands, betwixt them who inclose, And her an Island make, fam'd for her site so far. 25 But leave her, Muse, awhile, and let us on with Yar, Which Gariena some, some Hier, some Yar do name; Who rising from her spring; not far from Walsingham, Through the Norfolcean fields seems wantonly to play, To Norwich comes at length, towards Yarmouth on her way. Where Wentsum from the South, and Bariden do bear Up with her by whose wealth she much is honoured there, To entertain her Yar, that in her state doth stand, With Towns of high'st account, the fourths of all the land: That hospitable place to the industrious Dutch, 35 Whose skill in making stuffs, and workmanship is such, (For refuge hither come) as they our aid deserve. By labour sore that live, whilst oft the English starve: On roots and pulse that feed, on beef and mutton spare, So frugally they live, not gluttons as we are. 40

But from my former theme, since thus I have digress'd, I'll borrow more of Time, until my Nymphs be dress'd: And since these Foods fall out so fitly in my way, A little while to them I will convert my lay.

*The Colewort, Colifloure, and Cabidge in their season, The Rouncefull, great Beans, and early-ripening Peason; The Onion, Scallion, Leek, which housewives highly rate; Their kinsman Garlick then, the poor man's Mithridate; The savoury Parsnip next, and Carret pleasing food; The Skirret (which some say) in sallats stirs the blood; The Turnip, tasting well to clowns in Winter weather. Thus in our verse we put, roots, herbs, and fruits together. The great moist Pumpion then, that on the ground doth lie, A purer of his kind, the sweet Muske-million by: Which dainty palates now, because they would not want, 55 Have kindly learn'd to set, as yearly to transplant: The Rudish somewhat hot, yet uring doth provoke; The Cucumber as cold, the heating Artichoke; The Citrons, which our soil not eas'ly doth affourd; The Rampion rare as that, the hardly-gotten Gourd.

But in these trivial things, Muse, wander not too long, But now to nimble Yar, turn we our active Song, Which in her winding course, from Norwich to the main, By many a stately seat laseiviously doth strain, To Yarmouth! till she come, her only christ'ned Town, whose fishing through the Realm doth her so much renown, Where those that with their nets still haunt the boundless lake.

Her such a sumptuous feast of solled Herrings make,
As they had robb'd the Sea of all his former store,
And past that very hour, it could produce no more.
Her ownself's Harbour here, when Yar doth hardly win,

But kindly she again, saluted is by Thrin, A fair Norfolcean Nymph, which gratifies her fall.

Now are the *Tritons** heard, to Loving-land to call,
Which Neptune's great commands, before them bravely bear,
Commanding all the Nymphs of high account that were,
Which in fat Holland lurk amongst the queachy plashes,
Or play them on the sands, upon the foamy washes,
As all the wat'ry blood, which haunt the German deeps,
Upon whose briny curls, the dewy morning weeps,
To Loving-land to come, and in their best attires,
That meeting to observe, as now the time requires.

When Erix, Neptune's son by Venus, to the shore To see them safely brought, their Herault came before, And for a mace he held in his huge hand, the horn Of that so much-esteem'd, sea-honouring Unicorn.

1 Next Proto wondrous swift, led all the rest the way, Then she which makes the calms, the mild Cymodice, With god-like Dorida, and Galatea fair, With dainty nets of pearl, cast o'er their braided hair: Analiis which the sea doth salt, and seasoned keep; And Batheas, most supreme and sovereign in the deep, Brings Cyane, to the waves which that green colour gives; Then Atmis, which in fogs and misty vapours lives: Phrinax, the billows rough, and surges that bestrides, 95 And Rothion, that by her on the wild waters rides; With Icthias, that of fry the keeping doth retain, As Pholoë, most that rules the monsters of the main: Which brought to bear them out, if any need should fall, The Dolphin, Sca-horse, Gramp, the Wherlpoole, and the Whall, An hundred more besides, I readily could name, With these as Neptune will'd, to Loving-land that came.

* Supposed to be Trumpeters to Neptune.

These Nymphs trick'd up in tires, the Sea-gods to delight:

Of Coral of each kind, the black, the red, the white;

With many sundry shells, the Scallop large and fair,

The Cockle small and round, the Periwinkle spare,

The Oyster, wherein oft the pearl is found to breed,

The Mussell, which retains that dainty Orient seed;

In chains and bracelets made, with links of sundry twists,

Some worn about their waists, their necks, some on the wrists.

Great store of Amber there, and Jet they did not miss;

Their lips they sweet'ned had with costly Ambergris.

Scarcely the Nereids* thus arrived from the seas, But from the fresher streams the brighter Naiades,† To Loving-land make haste with all the speed they may, 115 For fear their fellow-Nymphs should for their coming stay. Glico the running streams in sweetness still that keeps, And Clymene which rules, when they surround their deeps. With Water-cans again, some wantonly them dight, Whose larger leaf and flower, gave wonderful delight To those that wistly view'd their beauties: some again, That sovereign places held amongst the wat'ry train, [grow, Of Cat-tails made them crowns, which from the Sedge doth Which neatly woven were, and some to grace the show, 140 Of Lady-smocks most white, do rob each neighbouring mead, Wherewith their looser locks most curiously they braid.

Now thus together com'n, they friendly do devise,
Some of light toys, and some of matters grave and wise. 144
But to break off their speech, her reed when Syrinx sounds,
Some cast themselves in rings, and fell to Hornepipe-rounds:
They ceasing, as again to others' turn it falls,
They lusty Galiards tread, some others Jiys, and Braules.
This done, upon the bank together being set,
Proceeding in the cause, for which they thus were met,
In mighty Neptune's praise, these sea-born Virgins sing:

*Let earth, and air, say they, with the high praises ring, Of Saturn by his Ops, the most renowned son, From all the gods but Jove, the diadem that won, Whose offspring wise and strong, dear Nymphs let us relate, On mountains of vast waves, know he that sits in state, 156 And with his trident rules, the universal stream, To be the only sire of mighty Polypheme. On fair Thoosa got old Phorcus' loved child, Who in a feignéd shape that God of Sea beguil'd. 160 Three thousand princely sons, and lovely Nymphs as we, Were to great Neptune born, of which we sparing be: Some by his goodly Queen, some in his leman's bed; Chryasor grim begot, on stern Medusa's head. * The Song of the Sea-Nymphs in praise of Neptune.

Who was old Nestor's sire, the grav'st and wisest Greek. Or from this King of waves, of such thou lov'st to hear. Of famous Nations first, that mighty Founders were: 170 Then Cadmus, who the plot of ancient Thebes contriv'd. From Neptune God of Sea, his pedigree deriv'd. By Agenor his old sire, who rul'd Phænicia long: So Inachus, the chief of Argives great and strong Claim'd kinred of this King, and by some beauteous niece, So did Pelasqus too, who peopled ancient Greece. A world of mighty Kings and Princes I could name. From our God Neptune sprung; let this suffice, his fame Incompasseth the world; those stars which never rise. Above the lower South, are never from his eyes: 180 As those again to him do every day appear, Continally that keep the Northern Hemisphere: Who like a mighty King, doth cast his watchet robe, Far wider than the land, quite round about the Globe. Where is there one to him that may compared be, 185 That both the Poles at once continually doth see; And giant-like with Heaven as often maketh wars? The Islands (in his power) as numberless as stars, He washeth at his will, and with his mighty hands, He makes the even shores oft mountainous with sands: 190 Whose creatures, which observe his wide emperiall seat. Like his immeasured self, are infinite and great.

Thus ended they their Song, and off th' assembly brake, When quickly towards the West, the Muse her way doth take; Whereas the swelling soil, as from one bank doth bring 193 This Waveney* sung before, and Ouse the Less,* whose spring Towards Ouse the Greater points, and down by Thetford glides, Where she clear Thet receives, her glory that divides, With her new-naméd Town, as wondrous glad that she, * The fountains of these rivers, not far asunder, yet one running Northward, the other to the East.

For frequency of late, so much esteem'd should be: 200
Where since these confluent Floods, so fit for hawking lye,
And store of fowl intice skill'd Falconers there to fly.

Now of a Flight* at brook shall my description be:
What subject can be found, that lies not fair to me?
Of simple Shepherds now, my Muse exactly sings,
And then of courtly Loves, and the affairs of Kings.
Then in a buskin'd strain, the warlike spear and shield,
And instantly again of the disports of Field;
What can this Isle produce, that lies from my report?
Industrious Muse, proceed then to thy Hawking sport.

When making for the brook, the Falconer doth espy On river, plash, or mere, where store of fowl doth lie: Whence forcéd over land, by skilful Falconers' trade: A fair convenient flight, may easily be made. He whistleth off his hawks, whose nimble pinions straight, Do work themselves by turns, into a stately height: 216 And if that after check, the one or both do go, Sometimes he them the lure, sometimes doth water show: The trembling fowl that hear the jigging hawk-bells ring, And find it is too late to trust then to their wing, 220 Lie flat upon the flood, whilst the high-mounted hawks, Then being lords alone, in their etherial walks, Aloft so bravely stir, their bells so thick that shake; Which when the Falconer sees, that scarce one planet they make.

The gallant'st birds, saith he, that ever flew on wing, And swears there is a Flight, were worthy of a King.

Then making to the flood, to cause the fowls to rise, The fierce and eager hawks, down thrilling from the skies, Make sundry canceleers e'er they the fowl can reach,

† After Pigeons, Crows, or such like.
‡ When they soar as Kites do.
$ Crossing the air in their down-come.

Which then to save their lives, their wings do lively stretch. But when the whizzing bells the silent air do cleave,

And that their greatest speed, them vainly do deceive,

And the sharp cruel hawks, they at their backs do view,

Themselves for very fear they instantly ineawe.*

The hawks get up again into their former place,
And ranging here and there, in that their airy race,
Still as the fearful fowl attempt to 'scape away,
With many a stooping brave, them in again they lay.
But when the Falconers take their hawking-poles in hand,
And crossing of the brook, do put it over land,
The hawk gives it a souse, that makes it to rebound,
Well-near the height of man, sometime above the ground;
Oft takes a leg, or wing, oft takes away the head,
And oft from neck to tail, the back in two doth shred.
With many a Wo-ho-ho, and jocond lure again,
When he his quarry makes upon the grassy plain.

But to my Floods again: when as this Ouse the Less
Hath taken in clear Thet, with far more free access
To Ouse the Great she goes, her Queen that cometh crown'd,
As such a River fits, so many miles renown'd;
And pointing to the North, her crystal front she dashes
Against the swelling sands of the surrounded Washes;
And Neptune in her arms, so amply doth imbrace,
As she would rob his Queen, fair Thetis, of her place.
Which when rich Marsh-land sees, lest she should lose her state.

With that fair River thus, she gently doth debate:
Disdain me not, dear Flood, in thy excessive pride,
There's scarcely any soil that sitteth by thy side,
Whose turf so batfull is, or bears so deep a swath;
Nor is there any Marsh in all Great Britain, hath
So many goodly seats, or that can truly show

Such rarities as I: so that all Marshes owe Much honour to my name, for that exceeding grace, Which they receive by me, so sovereign in my place. Though Rumney, as some say, for fineness of her grass, 265 And for her dainty site, all other doth surpass: Yet are those Seas but poor, and Rivers that confine Her greatness but mean Rills, be they compar'd with mine. Nor hardly doth she tithe th' aboundant fowl and fish, Which Nature gives to me, as I myself can wish. 270 As Amphitrite oft, calls me her sweet and fair, And sends the Northern winds to curl my braided hair, And makes the Washes* stand, to watch and ward me still, Lest that rough God of Sea, on me should work his will. Old Wisbitch to my grace, my circuit sits within, 275 And near my banks I have the neighbourhood of Lyn. Both Towns of strength and state, my profits still that vent: No Marsh hath more of sea, none more of continent. Thus Marsh-land ends her speech, as one that throughly knew, What was her proper praise, and what was Ouze's due.

With that the zealous Muse, in her poetic rage,
To Walsingham would needs have gone a pilgrimage,
To view those farthest shores, whence little Niger flows
Into the Northern main, and see the glebe where grows
That saffron (which men say), this land hath not the like,
All Europe that excells: but here she sail doth strike.
For that Apollo pluck'd her eas'ly by the ear;
And told her in that part of Norfolke, if there were
Ought worthy of respect, it was not in her way,
When for the greater Ouze, her wing she doth display.

THE ONE-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Now from New-market comes the Muse, Whose spacious Heath she wistly views, Those ancient Ditches and surveys, Which our first Saxons here did raise: To Gogmagog then turns her tale, And shows you Ring-taile's pleasant Vale. And to do Cambridge all her rites, The Muses to her Town invites. And lastly, Elie's praise she sings, An end which to this Canto brings.

Y this our little rest, thus having gotten breath,
And fairly in our way, upon Newmarket-Heath,
That great and ancient Ditch,* which us expected long.

Inspiréd by the Muse, at her arrival song:

O Time, what earthly thing with thee itself can trust,
When thou in thine own course, art to thyself unjust!
Dost thou contract with death, and to oblivion give
Thy glories, after them, yet shamefully dar'st live?
O Time, hadst thou preserv'd, what labouring man hath done,
Thou long before this day, might'st to thyself have won

* The Devil's Ditch.

A deity with the gods, and in thy temple plac'd, But sacrilegious thou, hast all great works defac'd; For though the things themselves have suffered by thy theft, Yet with their ruins, thou, to ages might'st have left, Those Monuments who rear'd, and not have suffered thus 15 Posterity so much, t' abuse both thee and us. I, by th' East Angles first, who from this Heath arose, The long'st and largest Ditch, to check their Mercian foes; Because my depth, and breadth, so strangely doth exceed, Men's low and wretched thoughts, they constantly decreed, That by the Devil's help, I needs must raised be, Wherefore the Devil's-Ditch they basely named me: When ages long before, I bare Saint Edmond's name, Because up to my side (some have supposéd) came The Liberties bequeath'd to his more sacred Shrine. 25 Therefore my fellow Dykes, ye ancient friends of mine, That out of earth were rais'd, by men whose minds were great, It is no marvel, though Oblivion do you threat. First, Flemditch* next myself, that art of greatest strength, That dost extend thy course full seven large mile in length; And thou the Fivemile+ call'd, yet not less dear to me; With Brenditch, ‡ that again is shortest of the three; Can you suppose yourselves at all to be respected, When you may see my truths belied, and so neglected? Therefore dear Heath, live still in prosperous estate, And let thy well-fleec'd flocks, from morn to evening late, (By careful shepherds kept) rejoice thee with their praise; And let the merry lark, with her delicious lays, Give comfort to thy plains, and let me only lye, (Though of the world contemn'd) yet gracious in thine eye.

I From Melburne to Fulmer, the shortest of the four.

Thus said, these ancient Dykes neglected in their ground, Through the sad agéd earth, sent out a hollow sound, To gratulate her speech; when as we met again, With one whose constant heart, with cruel love was slain: Old Gogmagog, a Hill of long and great renown, Which near to Cambridge set, o'erlooks that learnéd Town. Of Balsham's pleasant hills, that by the name was known, But with the monstrous times, he rude and barbarous grown, A Giant was become; for man he caréd not, And so the fearful name of Gogmagog had got: 50 Who long had borne good will to most delicious Grant: But doubting lest some god his greatness might supplant. For as that dainty Flood by Cambridge keeps her course, He found the Muses left their old Bastian source. Resorting to her banks, and every little space, 55 He saw bright Phæbus gaze upon her crystal face, And through th' exhaléd fogs, with anger lookéd red, To leave his loved Nymph, when he went down to bed. Wherefore this Hill with love, being foully overgone: And one day as he found the lovely Nymph alone, Thus wooes her: Sweeting mine, if thou mine own wilt be, C' have many a pretty gaud, I keep in store for thee. A nest of broad-fae'd Owls, and goodly Urchins too; Nay Nymph take heed of me, when I begin to woo: And better yet than this, a Bulchin twa years old, 65 A eurl'd-pate calf it is, and oft could have been sold: And yet beside all this, c' have goodly Bear-whelps twa, Full dainty for my Joy, when she's dispos'd to play; And twenty Sows of Lead, to make our wedding-ring; Bezides, at Sturbridge Fayre, chill buy thee many a thing: 70 Chill zmouch thee every morn, before the Sun can rise, And look my manly face, in thy sweet glaring eyes.

Thus said, he smug'd his beard, and strokéd up his hair, As one that for her love he thought had offered fair: Which to the Muses, Grant did presently report,
Wherewith they many a year shall make them wondrous sport.

When Ringdale* in herself a most delicious Dale,
Who having heard too long the barbarous Mountain's tale,
Thus thinketh in herself: Shall I be silene'd, when Rude Hills, and Ditches, digg'd by discontented men,
Are aided by the Muse, their minds at large to speak?
Besides my sister Vales, supposing me but weak,
Judge meanly of my state: when she no longer stay'd,
But in her own behalf, thus to the other said: [thrown,

What though betwixt two Sheeres, I be by Fortune That neither of them both can challenge me her own, Yet am I not the less, nor less my fame shall be: Your figures are but base, when they are set by me; For Nature in your shapes, notoriously did err, But skilful was in me, cast pure orbicular. 90 Nor can I be compar'd so like to any thing, By him that would express my shape, as to a Ring: For Nature bent to sport, and various in her trade, Of all the British Vales, of me a circle made: For in my very midst, there is a swelling ground, About which Ceres' Nymphs dance many a wanton round. The frisking Fairies there, as on the light air borne, Oft run at Barley-break upon the ears of corn; And catching drops of dew in their lascivious chases, Do cast the liquid pearl in one another's faces. 100 What they in largeness have, that bear themselves so high, In my most perfect form, and delicacy, I, For greatness of my grain, and fineness of my grass; This Isle scarce hath a Vale, that Ringdale doth surpass. When more she would have said, but suddenly there sprung,

A confident report, that through the country rung, 106 That Cam her daintiest Flood, long since entituled Grant, Whose fountain Ashwell* crown'd, with many an upright In sallying on for Ouze, determin'd by the way, [plant, To intertain her friends the Muses with a lay. 110 Wherefore to show herself ere she to Cambridge came, Most worthy of that Town to which she gives the name, Takes in her second head, from Linton coming in. By Shelford having slid, which straightway she doth win: Than which, a purer Stream, a delicater Brook, Bright Phabus in his course, doth scarcely overlook. Thus furnishing her banks; as sweetly she doth glide Towards Cambridge, with rich Meads laid forth on either side; And with the Muses oft, did by the way converse: Wherefore it her behoves, that something she rehearse, The Sisters that concern'd, who whisperéd in her ear, Such things as only she, and they themselves should hear. A wondrous learnéd Flood; and she that had been long, (Though silent, in herself, yet) vexéd at the wrong Done to Apollo's Priests, with heavenly fire infused. 125 Oft by the worthless world, unworthily abused: With whom, in their behalf, hap ill, or happen well, She meant to have a bout, even in despite of Hell. When humbly lowting low, her due obedience done. Thus like a Satyr she, deliberately begun:

My invective, thus quoth she, I only aim at you, (Of what degree soe'er) ye wretched worldly crew, In all your brainless talk, that still direct your drifts Against the Muses' sons, and their most sacred gifts, That hate a Poet's name, your vileness to advance,

For ever be you damn'd in your dull ignorance.

Slave, he whom thou dost think, so mean and poor to be, Is more than half divine, when he is set by thee.

Nay more, I will avow, and justify him then, He is a god, compar'd with ordinary men. 140 His brave and noble heart, here in a heaven doth dwell, Above those worldly cares, that sinks such sots to hell: A caitiff if there be more viler than thyself, If he through baseness light upon this worldly pelf, The chimney-sweep, or he that in the dead of night. 145 Doth empty loathsome vaults, may purchase all your right: When not the greatest King, should he his treasure rain, The Muses' sacred gifts, can possibly obtain; No, were he Monarch of the universal earth, Except that gift from heaven, be breath'd into his birth. 150 How transitory be those heaps of rotting mud. Which only to obtain, ye make your chiefest good! Perhaps to your fond sons, your ill-got goods ye leave, You scarcely buried are, but they your hopes deceive. Have I not known a wretch, the purchase of whose ground. Was valued to be sold, at threescore thousand pound; That in a little time, in a poor thread-bare coat. Hath walk'd from place to place, to beg a silly great? When nothing hath of yours, or your base broods been left. Except poor widows' cries, to memorize your theft. 160 That curse the Serpent got in Paradise for hire, Descend upon you all, from him your devilish Sire, Grovelling upon the earth, to creep upon your breast. And lick the loathsome dust, like that abhorréd beast.

But leave these hateful herds, and let me now declare, 165
In th' Heliconian Fount, who rightly christ'ned are:
Not such as basely soothe the humour of the Time,
And slubberingly patch up some slight and shallow rhyme,
Upon Pernassus' top, that strive to be install'd,
Yet never to that place were by the Muses call'd.
Nor yet our mimic Apes, out of their bragging pride,
That fain would seem to be, what nature them denied;

Whose Verses hobbling run, as with disjointed bones. And make a viler noise, than carts upon the stones; And these forsooth must be, the Muses' only heirs, 175 When they but bastards are, and foundlings none of theirs. Inforcing things in verse for poesy unfit, Mere filthy stuff, that breaks out of the sores of wit: What Poet recks the praise upon such antics heap'd, Or envies that their lines, in cabinets are kept? 180 Though some fantastic fool promove their ragged rhymes, And do transcribe them o'er a hundred several times, And some fond women wins, to think them wondrous rare, When they lewd beggary trash, nay very gibb'rish are. Give me those lines (whose touch the skilful ear to please) That gliding flow in state, like swelling Euphrates, In which things natural be, and not in falsely wrong: The sounds are fine and smooth, the sense is full and strong, Not bumbasted with words, vain ticklish ears to feed; But such as may content the perfect man to read. 190 What is of painters said, is of true poets rife, That he which doth express things nearest to the life, Doth touch the very point, nor needs he add thereto: For that the utmost is, that Art doth strive to do. Had Orpheus, whose sweet Harp (so musically strung) 195

Had Orpheus, whose sweet Harp (so musically strung) 195
Inticéd trees, and rocks, to follow him along:
Th' morality of which, is that his knowledge drew
The stony, blockish rout, that nought but rudeness knew,
T' imbrace a civil life, by his inticing lays:
Had he compos'd his lines, like many of these days,
Which to be understood, do take in it disdain:
Nay, (Edipus may fail, to know what they would mean.
If Orpheus had so play'd, not to be understood, [wood;
Well might those men have thought the Harper had been
Who might have sit him down, the trees and rocks among,
And been a verier block, than those to whom he sung.

O noble Cambridge then, my most beloved Town. In glory flourish still, to heighten thy renown: In woman's perfect shape, still be thy emblem right, Whose one hand holds a Cup, the other bears a Light.1 Phocis bedew'd with drops, that from Pernassus fall, Let Cirrha seek to her, nor be you least of all, Ye fair Bootian Thebes, and Thespia, still to pay My Cambridge all her rites: Cirrhea send this way. O let the thrice-three Maids, their dews upon thee rain, 215 From Aganippa's fount, and hoof-plow'd Hippocrene. Mount Pindus, thou that art the Muses' sacred place In Thessaly; and thou, O Pimpla, that in Thrace They chose for their own hill, then thou Pernussus high, Upon whose bi-clift top, the sacred company 220 About Apollo sit; and thou O Flood, with these Pure Helicon, belov'd of the Pierides. With Tempe, let thy walks, and shades, be brought to her,

And all your glorious gifts upon my Town confer.

This said, the lovely Grant glides cas'ly on along,
To meet the mighty Ouze, which with her wat'ry throng,
The Cantabrigian fields had ent'red, taking in

Th' in-isléd Elie's earth, which strongly she doth win [Isle, From Grant's soft-neighbouring grounds, when as the fruitful Much wond'ring at herself, thought surely all this while, 230 That by her silence she had suff'réd too much wrong.

Wherefore in her self-praise, lo thus the Island sung.

Of all the Marshland Isles, I Ely am the Queen:
For Winter eachwhere sad, in me looks fresh and green.
The horse, or other beast, o'erweigh'd with his own mass,
Lies wallowing in my Fens, hid over head in grass:
And in the place where grows rank fodder for my neat,
The turf which bears the hay, is wondrous needful peat:*

My full and batning earth, needs not the plowman's pains; The rills which run in me, are like the branchéd veins In human bodies seen; those ditches cut by hand, From the surrounding Meres, to win the measured land, To those choice waters, I most fitly may compare, Wherewith nice women use to blanch their beauties rare. Hath there a man been born in me, that never knew Of * Watersey the Leame, or th' other call'd the New? The Frithdike near'st my midst; and of another sort, Who ever fish'd, or fowl'd, that cannot make report Of sundry Meres at hand, upon my Western way, As Rumsey-Mere, and Ug, with the great Whittelsey? Of the aboundant store of fish and fowl there bred, Which whilst of Europe's Isles Great Britain is the head, No Meres shall truly tell, in them, than at one draught, More store of either kinds hath with the net been caught: Which though some patty Isles do challenge them to be 255 Their own, yet must those Isles likewise acknowledge me Their sovereign. Nor yet let that Islet Ramsey shame, Although to Ramsey-Mere she only gives the name; Nor + Hantingdon, to me though she extend her grounds, Twit me that I at all usurp upon her bounds. Those Meres may well be proud, that I will take them in, Which otherwise perhaps forgotten might have been. Besides my tow'red Fane, and my rich Citied Seat, ‡ With Villages and Dorps, to make me most compleat.

Thus broke she off her speech, when as the Muse awhile, Desirous to repose, and rest her with the Isle,

Here consummates her Song, and doth fresh courage take,
With war in the next Book, the Muses to awake.

Famous Ditches, or Water-Draughts in the Isle.

† Though Ey be in part of Cambridg Shire, yet are these Meres for the most part in Hantingdon Shire.

THE TWO-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Muse Ouze from her Fountain brings Along by Buckingham, and sings: The Earth that turneth wood to stone, And t' Holy Wells of Harlweston: Then shews wherefore the Fates do grant, That she the Civil Wars should chant: By Huntingdon she Waybridge meets, And thence the German Ocean greets.

NVENTION as before, thy high-pitch'd pinions rouse, Exactly to set down how the far-wand'ring Ouze. Through the Bedfordian fields deliciously doth strain,

As holding on her course, by Huntingdon again, How bravely she herself betwixt her banks doth bear, E'er Ely she in-isle, a Goddess honoured there [sweet, From Brackley breaking forth, through soils most heavenly By Burkingham makes on, and crossing Walling-Street, She with her Lesser Ouze, at Newport next doth twin, Which from proud Chillern near, comes easly ambling in. The Brook which on her bank doth boast that earth alone:

(Which noted) of this Isle, converteth wood to stone.* That little Aspleye's earth we anciently instyle, 'Mongst sundry other things, a Wonder of the Isle: Of which the Lesser Ouze oft boasteth in her way, As she herself with flowers doth gorgeously array.

Ouze having Ouleney pass'd, as she were waxed mad,
From her first staider course immediately doth gad;
And in meandred gyres doth whirl herself about,
That, this way, here, and there, back, forward, in, and

And like a wanton girl, oft doubling in her gait,
In labyrinth-like turns, and twinings intricate,
Through those rich fields doth run, till lastly in her pride,
The Shire's hospitious Town, she in her course divide,
Where she her spacious breast in glorious breadth displays; 25
And varying her clear form a thousand sundry ways, Streaks through the verdant meads; but far she hath not gone,

When Ivell a clear Nymph from Shefford sallying on,
Comes deftly dauncing in through many a dainty slade,
Crown'd with a goodly bridge, arriv'd at Bickleswade,
Encouragéd the more her Mistress to pursue,
In whose clear face the sun delights himself to view:
To mix herself with Ouze, as on she thus doth make,
And lovingly at last hath hapt to overtake;
She in her crystal arms her sovereign Ouze doth cling,
Which Flood in her ally, as highly glorying,
Shoots forward to Saint Neols, into those nether grounds,
Towards Hantingdon, and leaves the lov'd Bedfordian bounds.
Scarce is she ent'red yet upon this second Sheere,
Of which she sovereign is, but that two Fountains clear,

* One of the Wonders of this Island.

† After this River hath entered Bedfordshire, there is scarce any River in this Island, that runneth with so many intricate gyres and turnings as this Ouze.

At Harlweston* near hand, th' one salt, the other sweet, At her first entrance, thus her greatness gently greet:

Once were we two fair Nymphs, who fortunately prov'd, The pleasures of the woods, and faithfully belov'd Of two such Sylvan gods, by hap that found us here; For then their Sylvan kind most highly honoured were, When this whole Country's face was foresty, and we Liv'd loosely in the weilds, which now thus peopled be. Oft interchang'd we sighs, oft amorous looks we sent, Oft whispering our dear loves, our thoughts oft did we vent Amongst the secret shades, oft in the groves did play, And in our sports our joys, and sorrows did bewray. Oft cunningly we met, yet coyly then imbrac'd, Still languish'd in desire, yet liv'd we ever chaste. And, quoth the saltish Spring, as one day mine and I, Set to recount our loves, from his more tender eye The brinish tears dropp'd down, on mine impiercéd breast, And instantly therein so deeply were imprest, That brackish I became: he finding me depriv'd Of former freshness quite, the cause from him deriv'd, On me bestow'd this gift, my sweetness to requite, That I should ever cure the dimness of the sight. And, quoth the fresher Spring, the Wood-god me that woo'd, As one day by my brim, surpris'd with love he stood, On me bestow'd this gift, that ever after I Should cure the painful itch, and loathsome leprosy.

Held on with this discourse, she on not far hath run, But that she is arriv'd at goodly Huntingdon; Where she no sooner views her darling and delight, Prond Portholme,† but became so ravish'd with the sight, 70 That she her limber arms lasciviously doth throw About the Islet's waist, who b'ing imbracéd so,

Her flow'ry bosom shews to the inamoured Brook;
On which when as the Ouze amazedly doth look 74
On her brave damask'd breast, bedeck'd with many a flow'r
(That grace this goodly mead) as though the Spring did pour
Her full aboundance down, whose various dyes so thick,
Are intermix'd as they by one another stick,
That to the gazing eye that standeth far, they show
Like those made by the sun in the celestial bow.
80

But now t' advance this Flood, the Fates had brought to pass,

As she of all the rest the only River was:
That but a little while before that fatal war,
Twixt that divided Blood of Yorke and Lancaster,
Near Harleswood, above in her Bedfordian trace,
By keeping back her stream, for near three furlongs space,*
Laying her bosom bare unto the public view,
Apparantly was prov'd by that which did ensue,
In her prophetic self, those troubles to foresee:
Wherefore (even as her due) the Destinies agree,
She should the glory have our Civil Fights to sing,
When swelling in her banks, from her aboundant spring,
Her sober silence she now resolutely breaks,
In language fitting war, and thus to purpose speaks:

With that most fatal Field, I will not here begin,
Where Norman William first the Conqueror, did win
The day at Hastings,† where the valiant Harold slain, Resign'd his crown, whose soil the colour doth retain,
Of th' English blood there shed, as th' earth still kept the scar:
Which since not ours begot, but an invasive war,
Amongst our home-fought Fields, hath no description here:
In Normandy nor that, that same day forty year,

That Bastard William brought a conquest on this Isle,
Twixt Robert his eld'st son, and Henry, who the while
His brother's warlike tents in Palestine were pight,
In England here usurp'd his eld'st-born brother's right;
Which since it foreign was, not struck within this land,
Amongst our Civil Fights here numb'red shall not stand.

*But Lincolne Battle now we as our first will lay, Where Maud the Empress stood to try the doubtful day, 110 With Stephen, when he here had well-near three years reign'd, Where both of them their right courageously maintain'd, And marshalling their troops, the King his person put, Into his well-arm'd main, of strong and valiant foot: The wings that were his horse, in th' one of them he plac'd Young Alan that brave Duke of Britaine, whom he grac'd us With th' Earls of Norfolke, and Northampton, and with those, He Mellent in that wing, and Warren did dispose. The other no whit less, that this great day might sted. The Earl of Aubemerle, and valiant Ipres led. 120 The Empress' powers again, but in two squadrons were: The vaward Chester had, and Gloucester the rear; Then were there valiant Welsh, and desperate men of ours, That when supplies should want, might reinforce their powers. The battles join, as when two adverse seas are dash'd Against each other's waves, that all the plains were wash'd With showers of swelt'ring blood, that down the furrows ran, Ere it could be discern'd which either lost or wan. Earl Baldwin, and Fitzurse, those valiant Knights, were seen To charge the Empress' Horse, as though dread Mars had been There in two sundry shapes; the day that beauteous was, 131 Twinkled as when you see the sunbeams in a glass, That nimbly being stirr'd, flings up the trembling flame At once, and on the earth reflects the very same. With their resplendent swords, that glist'red 'gainst the sun;

The honour of the day, at length the Empress won. King Stephen prisoner was, and with him many a lord, The common soldiers put together to the sword.

The next,* the Battle near Saint Edmundsbury fought, By our Fitz-Empress' force, and Flemings hither brought By th' Earl of Leister, bent to move intestine strife, For young King Henry'st cause, crown'd in his father's life; Which to his kingly sire much care and sorrow bred, In whose defiance then that Earl his ensigns spred, Back'd by Hugh Bigot's power, the Earl of Norfolke then, 145 By bringing to his aid the valiant Norfolke men. 'Gainst Bohun, England's great High Constable that sway'd The Royal forces, join'd with Lucy for his aid Chief Justice, and with them the German powers, to expell The Earls of Cornewall came, Gloster, and Arundell, From Bury, that with them Saint Edmond's Banner bring, Their battles in array; both wisely ordering The armies chanc'd to meet upon the marshy ground, Betwixt Saint Edmund's town, and Fornham (fitly found). The bellowing drums beat up a thunder for the charge, 155 The trumpets rend the air, the ensigns let at large, Like waving flames far off, to either host appear: The bristling pykes do shake, to threat their coming near: All clouded in a mist, they hardly could them view, So shadowed with the shafts from either side that flew. 160 The Wings came wheeling in, at joining of whose forces, The either part were seen to tumble from their horses, Which empty put to rout, are paunch'd with gleaves and piles. Lest else by running loose, they might disrank their files. The Billmen come to blows, that with the cruel thwacks. 165 The ground lay strew'd with mail, and shreds of tatter'd jacks: The plains like to a shop, look'd each where to behold, Where limbs of mangled men on heaps lay to be sold;

Stern discontented War did never yet appear With a more threat'ning brow, than it that time did there.

O Leicester (alas) in ill time wast thou won
To aid this graceless youth, the most ingrateful son
Against his natural sire, who crown'd him in his days,
Whose ill-requited love did him much sorrow raise,
As Le'ster by this war against King Henry show'd,
Upon so bad a cause, O courage ill bestow'd!
Who had thy quarrel been, as thou thyself was skill'd
In brave and martial feats, thou evermore hadst fill'd
This Isle with thy high deeds, done in that bloody field:
But Bigot and this Lord, inforc'd at length to yield
Them to the other part, when on that fatal plain,
Of th' English and the Dutch, ten thousand men lay slain.

As for the second Fight at Lincolne, betwixt those Who sided with the French, by seeking to depose Henry the son of John, then young, and to advance The Daulphin Lewes, son to Philip King of France, Which Lincolne Castle, then most straitly did besiege; And William Marshall Earl of Pembroke for his liege, (Who led the faithful Lords) although so many there, Or in the conflict slain, or taken prisoner; Yet for but a surprise, no field-appointed fight, 'Mongst our set Battles here, may no way claim a right.

The Field at Lewes* then, by our Third Henry fought, Who Edward his brave son unto that conflict brought; With Richard then the King of Almaine, and his son 195 Young Henry, with such Lords as to his part he won, With him their Sovereign Liege, their lives that durst engage. And the rebellious league of the proud Baronage, By Symon Mountford Earl of Lester their chief Head, And th' Earl of Gloster, Clare, against King Henry led; 200 For th' ancient freedoms here that bound their lives to stand.

The aliens to expulse, who troubled all the land, Whilst for this dreadful day, their great designs were meant; From Edward the young Prince, defiances were sent To Mountford's valiant sons, Lord Henry, Sim, and Guy, 205 And calling unto him a herauld, quoth he, Fly To th' Earl of Leister's tents, and publickly proclaim Defiance to his face, and to the Mountfords' name, And say to his proud sons, say boldly thus from me; That if they be the same, that they would seem to be, 210 Now let them in the field be by their band-rolls known, Where as I make no doubt, their valour shall be shown. Which if they dare to do, and still uphold their pride, There will we vent our spleens, where swords shall it decide.

To whom they thus replied: Tell that brave man of hope, He shall the Mountfords find in t' head of all their troop, 216 To answer his proud braves; our bilbows be as good As his, our arms as strong; and he shall find our blood Sold at as dear a rate as his; and if we fall, Tell him we'll hold so fast, his Crown shall go withall. 220

The King into three fights his forces doth divide, Of which his princely son* the vaward had to guide: The second to the King of Almaine, and his son, Young Henry he betook; in the third legion Of knights, and men-of-arms, in person he appears.

Into four several fights, the desperate Barons theirs. I' th' first those valiant youths, the sons of Leister came, Of leading of the which, Lord Henry had the name; The Earl of Gloster brought the second battle on, And with him were the Lords Mountchency, and Fitz-John; 230 The third wherein alone the Londoners were plac'd, The stout Lord Segrave led; the greatest, and the last, Brave Leicéster himself, with courage undertook. The day upon the host affrightedly doth look,

To see the dreadful shock, their first encounter gave, 235 As though it with the roar, the thunder would out-brave. Prince Edward all in gold, as he great Jove had been: The Mountfords all in plumes, like estriges were seen, To beard him to his teeth, to th' work of death they go; The crowds like to a sea seem'd waving to and fro. Friend falling by his friend, together they expire: He breath'd, doth charge afresh; he wounded, doth retire. The Mountfords with the Prince vie valour all the day, Which should for knightly deeds excell, or he, or they; To them about his head, his glist'ring blade he throws, They waft him with their swords, as long with equal shows: Now Henry, Simon then, and then the youngest Guy, Kept by his brothers back, thus stoutly doth reply: What though I be but young, let death me overwhelm, But I will break my sword upon his pluméd helm. 250 The younger Bohun there, to high achievements bent, With whom two other Lords, Lucy, and Hustings went, Which charging but too home, all sorely wounded were, Whom living from the field, the Barons strove to bear, Being on their party fix'd; whilst still Prince Edward spurs, To bring his forces up to charge the Londoners, T' whom cruel hate he bare, and joining with their force, Of heavy-arméd foot, with his light Northern horse, He putting them to flight, four miles in chase them slew: But ere he could return, the conquest wholly drew 260 To the stout Barons' side; his father fled the field, Into the Abbey there, constrainéd thence to yield. The Lords Fitz-warren slain, and Hilton that was then Chief Justice (as some say) with them five thousand men; And Bohun that great Earl of Her'ford overthrown, With Bardolfe, Somery, Patshull, and Percie known By their coat-armours then, for Barons, prisoners ta'en; Though Heavy ware the Crown, great Le'ster yet did reign.

Now for the Conflict next, at Chesterfield that chanc'd 'Gainst Robert that proud Earl of Darby, who advanc'd His ensigns 'gainst the King (contrary to his oath), Upon the Barons' part, with the Lord Deuell, both Surpris'd by Henry Prince of Almain with his power, By coming at so strange an unexpected hour:

And taking them unarm'd; since merely a defeat, With our well-ordered Fights we will not here repeat.

The fatal Battle then at fertile Eusham* struck,
Though with the self-same hands, not with the self-same luck:
For both the King and Prince at Lewes prisoners taken,
By fortune were not yet so utterly forsaken;
But that the Prince was got from Le'ster, and doth gather
His friends, by force of arms yet to redeem his father;
And th' Earl of Glo'ster won, who through the Mountfords' pride

Disgrac'd, came with his power to the emperial side. When now those Lords, which late at Lewes won the day, 285 The Sacrament receiv'd, their arms not down to lay, Until the King should yield th' old Charter to maintain. King Henry and his son Prince Edward swore again, They would repeal those Laws that were at Oxford made, Or through this bloody war to their destruction wade. But since the King remain'd in puissant Lei'ster's power, The remnant of his friends, whom death did not devour At Lewes' Battle late, and durst his part partake, The Prince excites again, an army up to make, Whom Roger Bigot, Earl of Norfolke doth assist, England's High Marshal then, and that great martialist, Old Henry Bohun, Earl of Her'ford, in this war, Gray, Basset, and Saint-John, Lisle, Percie, Latimer, All Barons, which to him their utmost strengths do lay, With many a Knight for power their equal every way;

And William Valence, Earl of Pembroke, who had fied From Lewes' Field, to France, thence with fresh succour sped. Young Humphrey Bohun still, doth with great Le'ster go, Who for his country's cause becomes his father's foe.

304
Fitz-John, Gray, Spencer, Strange, Rosse, Segrave, Vessey, Gifford, Wake, Lucy, Vipount, Vaux, Clare, Marmion, Hastings, Clifford.

In that black night before his sad and dismal day, Were apparitions strange, as drad Heaven would bewray The horrors to ensue, O most amazing sight!

Two armies in the air, discernéd were to fight,

Which came so near to earth, that in the morn they found The prints of horses' feet remaining on the ground,

Which came but as a show, the time to entertain,

Till th' angry armies join'd, to act the bloody scene.

Shrill shouts, and deadly cries, each way the air do fill, 315 And not a word was heard from either side, but 'kill;' The father 'gainst the son, the brother 'gainst the brother. With gleaves, swords, bills, and pykes, were murthering one another.

The full luxurious earth, seems surfeited with blood,
Whilst in his uncle's gore th' unnatural nephew stood;
Whilst with their chargéd staves, the desperate horsemen meet,

They hear their kinsmen groan under their horses' feet. Dead men, and weapons broke, do on the earth abound; The drums bedash'd with brains, do give a dismal sound. Great Le'ster there expir'd, with Hinry his brave son, when many a high exploit they in that day had done. Scarce was there noble House, of which those times could tell, But that some one thereof, on this, or that side fell; Amongst the slaughtered men, that there lay heap'd on piles, Boleuns, and Beauchamps were, Basets, and Mander les: soprares, and Saint-Johns seek, upon the end of all, To give those of their names their Christian buriall.

Ten thousand on both sides were ta'en and slain that day: Prince Edward gets the goal, and bears the palm away.

All Edward Longshanks' time, her Civil Wars did cease, 335
Who strove his country's bounds by conquest to increase.
But in th' insuing reign of his most riotous son,
As in his father's days, a Second War* begun;
When as the stubborn heirs of the stout Barons dead,
Who for their country's cause, their blood at Eusham shed,
Not able to endure the Spencers' hateful pride, 341
The father and the son, whose counsels then did guide
Th' inconsiderate King, conferring all his graces,
On them who got all gifts, and bought and sold all places,
Them raising, to debase the Baronage the more 345
For Gavaston, whom they had put to death before.
Which urg'd too far, at length to open arms they brake,
And for a speedy war, they up their powers do make.

Upon King Edward's part, for this great Action bent, His brother Edmund came, the valiant Earl of Kent, 350 With Richmount, Arundell, and Pembroke, who engage, Their powers, (three powerful Earls) against the Baronage.

And on the Barons' side, great Master of the war,
Was Thomas (of the Blood) the Earl of Lancaster,
With Henry Bohun, Earl of Hereford, his peer,
With whom (of great command and martialists) there were Lyle, Darcy, Denvile, Teis, Beach, Bradburne, Bernvile, Knovile,
With Badlesmer, and Bercks, Fitz-william, Leyburne, Lovell,
Tuchet, and Talbot stout, do for the Barons stand,
Mandute, and Mowbray, with great Clifford that command
Their tenants to take arms, that with their landlords run;
With these went also Hugh, and Henry Willington;
Redoubted Damory, as Audley, Elmesbridge, Wither,
Earls, Barons, Knights, Esquiers, embodied all together,

At Burton upon Trent who having gathered head, 365 Towards them with all his power the King in person sped; Who at his near approach (upon his march) descried, That they against his power the bridge had fortified: Which he by strong assault, assays from them to win, Where as a bloody fight doth instantly begin, 370 When he to beat them off, assays them first by shot; And they to make that good, which they before had got, Defend them with the like, like hailstones from the sky, From cross-bows, and the long, the light-wing'd arrows fly: But friended with the flood, the Barons hold their strength, Forcing the King by boats, and piles of wood at length, 376 T' attempt to land his force upon the other side. The Barons, that the more his stratagems defied, Withstand them in the stream, when as the troubled flood, (Within a little time) was turnéd all to blood; And from the boats and bridge, the mangled bodies fell'd, The poor affrighted fish, their wat'ry walks expell'd. While at the bridge the fight still strongly doth abide, The King had learnt to know, that by a skilful guide, He by a ford not far might pass his power of horse, Which quickly he performs, which drave the Barons' force From the defended bridge, t' affront th' approaching foe, Imbattelling themselves, when to the shock they go, (On both sides so assail'd) till th' water and the shore Of one complexion were, distain'd with equal gore. Oft fore'd to change their fights, being driven from their ground,

That when by their much loss, too weak themselves they found,

Th' afflicted Barons fly, yet still together keep.

The King his good success, not suff'ring so to sleep,

Pursues them with his power, which Northward still do bear;

And seldom 'scapes a day, but he doth charge their rear:

Till come to Burrough Bridge, where they too soon were staid By Andrew Herckley, Earl of Carleill, with fresh aid Being lately thither come, King Edward's part to take. The Barons range their fights, still good their ground to make; But with long marches tired, their wearied breath they draw, After the desperarst fight the sun yet ever saw.

Brave Bolom there was slain, and Lancaster forsaken
Of Fortune, is surprised; the Barons prisoners taken.

For those Rebellions, Stirs, Commotions, Uproars, here In Richard Burdeaux* reign, that long so usual were: 406 As that the first by Straw, and Tyler, with their rout Of rebels brought from Kent, most insolent and stout, By ent'ring London, thought the Island to subdue: The first of which, the Mayor of London bravely slew. Walworth, which won his name much honour by the deed: As they of Suffolke next, those rascals that succeed, By Litster; led about, their Captain, who enstil'd Himself the Commons' King, in hope to have exil'd The Gentry from those parts, by those that were his own, By that brave Bishop§ (then) of Norwitch overthrown. By such unruly slaves, and that in Essex rais'd By Thomas that stout Duke of Glo'ster, strongly seiz'd, As that at Radcot Bridge, where the last named Peer, With four brave Earls I his friends, encount'red Robert Vere, Then Duke of Ireland call'd, by Richard so created, And 'gainst those Lords maintain'd, whom they most deadly hated;

Since they but garboyles were, in a deformed mass, Not ordered fitting war, we lightly overpass.

* Richard the Second, born at Burdeux.

At Hatfield.
Warwicke, Darby, Arundell, and Nottingham.

*I chuse the Battle next of Shrewsbury to chant, 425 Betwixt Heury the Fourth, the son of John of Gant, And the stout Percies, Henry Hotspurre and his Eame The Earl of Wor'ster, who the rightful Diadem Had from King Richard reft, and heav'd up to his seat This Henry, whom (too soon) they found to be too great, Him seeking to depose, and to the Rule prefer Richard's proclaiméd Heir, their cousin Mortimer, Whom Owen Glendour then in Wales a prisoner staid, Whom to their part they won, and thus their plot they laid: That Glendour should have Wales, along as Sererue went, 435 The Percies all the North, that lay beyond the Trent; And Mortimer from thence the South to be his share, Which Henry having heard, doth for the war prepare, And down to Cheshire makes (where gathering powers they were)

At Shrewshiry to meet, and doth affront them there:
With him his peerless son, the princely Henry came,
With th' Earl of Stafford, and of Gentlemen-of-name,
Blant, Shyrley, Clifton, men that very powerful were,
With Cockague, Calverly, Massy, and Mortimer,
Gausell, and Wendsley, all in friends and tenants strong,
Which in the open field before the ranged fights,
He with his warlike son, there dubb'd his maiden Knights.
Th' Earl Dowglasse for this day doth with the Peecies stand,

To whom they Berwicke gave, and in Northumberland

Some Seigniories and Holds, if they the battle got,
Who brought with him to field full many an angry Scot,
At Holmdon Battle late that being overthrown,
Now on the King and Prince hop'd to regain their own;
With almost all the power of Cheshire got together,
By Veuables (there great), and Veruon must'red thether.

VOL. III.

The vaward of the King, great Stafford took to guide. The vaward of the Lords upon the other side, Consisted most of Scots, which joining, made such spoil, As at the first constrain'd the English to recoil, And almost brake their ranks, which when King Henry found Bringing his battle up, to reinforce the ground, The Percies bring up theirs, again to make it good. Thus whilst the either Host in opposition stood, *Brave Dowglasse with his spurs, his furious courser strake, His lance set in his rest, when desp'rately he brake 466 In, where his eye beheld th' emperial ensign pight, Where soon it was his chance, upon the King to light, Which in his full career he from his courser threw; The next Sir Walter Blunt, he with three other slew, All aimed like the King, which he dead sure accounted; But after when he saw the King himself remounted: This hand of mine, quoth he, four Kings this day hath slain, And swore out of the earth he thought they sprang again, Or Fate did him defend, at whom he only aim'd. When Henry Hotspurre, so with his high deeds inflam'd, Doth second him again, and through such dangers press, That Douglasse valiant deeds he made to seem the less. As still the people cried, A 'Percy Esperance.' The King which saw then time, or never to advance 480 His battle in the field, which near from him was won, Aided by that brave Prince, his most courageous son, Who bravely coming on, in hope to give them chase, It chanc'd he with a shaft was wounded in the face: Whom when out of the fight, his friends would bear away. He strongly it refus'd, and thus was heard to say: 48G Time never shall report, Prince Henry left the field, When Harry Percy staid, his trait'rous sword to wield.

Now rage and equal wounds, alike inflame their bloods,
And the main battles join, as do two adverse floods

Met in some narrow arm, should'ring as they would shove
Each other from their path, or would their banks remove.
The King his trait'rous foes, before him down doth hew,
And with his hands that day, near forty persons slew:
When conquest wholly turns to his victorious side,
His power surrounding all, like to a furious tide;
That Henry Hotspurre dead upon the cold earth lyes,
Stout Wor'ster taken was, and doughty Douglasse flyes.
Five thousand from both parts left dead upon the ground,
'Mongst whom the King's fast friend, great Stafford's corse was found;

And all the Knights there dubb'd the morning but before, The evening's sun beheld there swelt'red in their gore.

Here I at Bramham Moor, the Battle in should bring, Of which Earl Percie had the greatest managing, With the Lord Bardolfe there, against the County's power. Fast cleaving to his friend, even to his utmost hour: In Flanders, France, and Wales, who having been abroad To raise them present powers, intending for a road On England, for the hate he to King Henry bore; His son and brother's blood augmenting it the more, 510 Which in his mighty spirit still rooted did remain, By his too much default, whom he imputed slain At Shrewsbury before, to whom if he had brought Supplies, (that bloody Field, when they so bravely fought) They surely it had won: for which to make amends, Being furnished with men, amongst his foreign friends, By Scotland ent'red here, and with a violent hand Upon those Castles seiz'd within Northumberland His Earldom (which the King, who much his truth did doubt, Had taken to himself, and put his people out), Toward Yorkshire coming on, where (soon repaid his own)

At Bramham's fatal Moor, was foully overthrown: Which though it were indeed a long and mortal fight, Where many men were main'd, and many slain outright: Where that courageous Earl, all hopes there seeing past, 525 Amongst his murthered troops (even) fought it to the last: Yet for it was achiev'd by multitudes of men, Which with Ralfe Roksby rose, the Shreefe of Yorkshire then, No well-proportion'd fight, we of description quit, Amongst our famous Fields; nor will we here admit 530 That of that rakehell Cades, and his rebellious crew, In Kent and Sussex rais'd, at Senok-fight that slew The Staffords with their power, that thither him pursu'd, Who twice upon Black-heath, back'd with the Commons rude, Incamp'd against the King: then goodly London took, There ransoming some rich, and up the prisons broke, His sensual beastly will, for law that did prefer, Beheaded the Lord Say, then England's Treasurer, And fore'd the King to flight, his person to secure, The Muse admits not here, a rabble so impure. 540

But brings that Battle* on of that long dreadful war, Of those two Houses nam'd of Yorke and Lancaster, In fair Saint Alban's fought, most fatally betwixt Richard then Duke of Yorke, and Henry call'd the Sixt, For that ill-gotten Crown, which him his Grandsire† left, 545 That likewise with his life, he from King Richard reft, When underhand the Duke doth but promove his claim, Who from the elder son, the Duke of Clarence came, For which he raiséd arms, yet seem'd but to abet The people, to pluck down the Earl of Somerset, 550 By whom (as they gave out) we Normandy had lost, And yet he was the man that only rul'd the roast.

With Richard Duke of Yorke (into his faction won) Salsbury and Warwicke came, the father and the son;

The Nevils' nobler name, that have renown'd so far.

So likewise with the King in this great action are,
The Dukes of Somerset, and Buckingham, with these
Were thrice so many Earls, their stout accomplices,
As Pembroke great in power, and Stafford with them stand
With Devonshire, Dorset, Wilt, and fierce Northumberland,
With Sidley, Bernes, and Rosse, three Barons with the rest,
When Richard Duke of Yorke, then marching from the West; Towards whom, whilst with his power King Henry forward set,

Unluckily as 't hapt, they at Saint Alban's met;
Where taking up the street, the buildings them enclose, 565
Where front doth answer front, and strength doth strength oppose;

Whilst like two mighty walls, they each to other stand, And as one sinketh down under his enemy's hand, Another thrusting in, his place doth still supply, Betwixt them whilst on heaps the mangled bodies lie: The stalls are overthrown with the unwieldy thrust, The windows with the shot, are shivered all to dust. The Winter's sleet or hail was never seen so thick, As on the houses' sides the bearded arrows stick, Where Warwick's courage first most comet-like appear'd, 575 Who with words full of spirit, his fighting soldiers cheer'd; And ever as he saw the slaughter of his men, He with fresh forces fill'd the places up agen. The valiant Marchmen* thus the battle still maintain, That when King Henry found on heaps his soldiers slain, 550 His great Commanders calls, who when they sadly saw, . The honour of the day would to the Yorkists draw, Their persons they put in, as for the last to stand; The Duke of Somerset, Henry Northumberland, Of those brave warlike Earls, the second of that name, 585

The Earl of Stafford, son to th' Duke of Buckingham, And John Lord Clifford then, which shed their noble gore Under the Castle's sign (of which not long before, A Prophet bad the Duke of Somerset beware) With many a valuant Knight, in death that had his share: So much great English blood, for others' lawless guilt, 591 Upon so little ground before was never spilt. Proud Yorke hath got the goal, the King of all forsaken, Into a cottage got, a woeful prisoner taken.

*The Battle of Blore-heath, the place doth next supply, 595 Twixt Richard Nevill, that great Earl of Salisbury, Who with the Duke of Yorke, had at Saint Alban's late, That glorious Battle got with uncontrolled fate: And James Lord Audley stirr'd by that revengeful Queen, To stop him on his way, for the inveterate spleen She bare him, for that still he with the Yorkists held, Who coming from the North (by sundry wrongs compell'd To parley with the King) the Queen that time who lay In Staffordshire, and thought to stop him on his way, That valiant Tuchet stirr'd, in Cheshive powerful then, 605 T' affront him in the field, where Cheshire Gentlemen Divided were, th' one part made valiant Tuchet strong, The other with the Earl rose as he came along, Incamping both their powers, divided by a brook, Whereby the prudent Earl, this strong advantage took: For putting in the field his army in array, Then making as (with speed) he meant to march away, He caus'd a flight of shafts to be discharged first. The enemy who thought that he had done his worst, And cowardly had fled in a disord'red rout, 615 Attempt to wade the brook, he wheeling (soon) about, Set fiercely on that part, which then were passed over; Their friends then in the rear, not able to recover

The other rising bank, to lend the vaward aid. The Earl who found the plot take right that he had laid, On those that forward press'd, as those that did recoil, As hungry in revenge, there made a ravenous spoil: There Dutton, Dutton kills; A Done doth kill a Done; A Booth, a Booth; and Leigh by Leigh is overthrown; A Venubles, against a Venubles doth stand; And Troutbeck fighteth with a Troutbeck hand to hand; There Molineux doth make a Molineux to die; And Egerton, the strength of Egerton doth try. O Cheshire wert thou mad, of thine own native gore So much until this day thou never shedst before? 630 Above two thousand men upon the earth were thrown, Of which the greatest part were naturally thine own. The stout Lord Audley slain, with many a Captain there; To Salsbury it sorts the palm away to bear. 634

*Then fair Northampton next, thy, Battle place shall take, Which of th' emperial war, the third fought Field doth make, Twixt Henry call'd our Sixt, upon whose party came His near and dear allies, the Dukes of Backingham, And Somerset, the Earl of Shrewsbury of account, Stout Viscount Beaumount, and the young Lord Egremount, 'Gainst Edward Earl of March, son to the Duke of Yarke, on With Warwicke, in that war, who set them all at work, And Falkonbridge with him, not much unlike the other; A Nevill nobly born, his puissant father's brother, Who to the Yorkists' claim, had evermore been true, And valiant Bourcher, Earl of Essex, and of Eau.

The King from out the town, who drew his foot and horse, As willingly to give full field-roomth to his force, Doth pass the River Nen, near where it down doth run From his first fountain's head, is near to Harsington, Adviséd of a place, by Nature strongly wrought,

Doth there encamp his power: the Earl of March who sought To prove by dint of sword, who should obtain the day, From Tawcester train'd on his powers in good array. The vaward Warwicke led (whom no attempt could fear); 655 The middle March himself, and Falkoubridge the rear.

Now July ent'red was, and ere the restless sun, Three hours' ascent had got, the dreadful fight begun By Warwicke, who a straight from Viscount Beaumout took, Defeating him at first, by which he quickly broke 660 In, on th' emperial host, which with a furious charge, He forc'd upon the field, itself more to enlarge. Now English bows, and bills, and battle-axes walk, Death up and down the field in ghastly sort doth stalk. March in the flower of youth, like Mars himself doth bear; But Warwicke as the man, whom Fortune seem'd to fear, 666 Did for him what he would, that wheresoe'er he goes, Down like a furious storm, before him all he throws: So Shrewsbury again of Talbot's valiant strain, (That fatal scourge of France) as stoutly doth maintain, 670 The party of the King; so princely Somerset, Whom th' others' knightly deeds, more eagerly doth whet, Bears up with them again: by Somerset oppos'd At last King Henry's host being on three parts enclos'd, And aids still coming in upon the Yorkists' side, 675 The Summer being then at height of all her pride, The husbandman, then hard upon his harvest was: But yet the cocks of hay, nor swaths of new-shorn grass, Strew'd not the meads so thick, as mangled bodies there, When nothing could be seen, but horror everywhere: So that upon the banks, and in the stream of Neu,* Ten thousand well resolv'd, stout, native English men. Left breathless, with the rest great Buckingham is slain, And Shrewsbury whose loss those times did much complain,

Egremont, and Beaumont, both found dead upon the field, &

The miserable King, inforc'd again to yield.

*Then Wakefield Battle next, we in our bead-roll bring,
Fought by Prince Edward, son to that oft-conquered King,
And Richard Duke of Yorke, still struggling for the Crown,
Whom Salsbury assists, the man with whose renown,
The mouth of Fame seem'd fill'd, there having with them then

Some few selected Welsh, and Southern Gentlemen: A handful to those powers, with which Prince Edward came; Of which amongst the rest, the men of noblest name, Were those two great-born Dukes, which still his right prefer, His cousin Somerset, and princely Excester, The Earl of Wiltshire still, that on his part stuck close: With those two valiant Peers, Lord Clifford, and Lord Rosse, Who made their march from Yorke to Wakefield, on their way To meet the Duke, who then at Sandall Castle lay, Whom at his (very) gate, into the Field they dar'd, Whose long expected powers not fully then prepar'd, That March his valiant son, should to his succours bring. Wherefore that puissant Lord, by speedy mustering His tenants and such friends, as he that time could get, 705 Five thousand in five days, in his battalion set 'Gainst their twice doubled strength; nor could the Duke be Till he might from the South be seconded with aid; As in his martial pride, disdaining his poor foes, So often us'd to win, he never thought to lose.

The Prince, which still provok'd th' incenséd Duke to fight, His main battalion rang'd in Sandal's lofty sight, In which he, and the Dukes, were seen in all their pride: And as Yurke's powers should pass, he had on either side Two wings in ambush laid, which at the place assign'd 713 His rereward should inclose, which as a thing divin'd,

Just caught as he forecast; for scarce his army comes From the descending banks, and that his rattling drums Excite his men to charge; but Wiltshire with his force, Which were of light-arm'd foot, and Rosse with his light horse, Came in upon their backs, as from a mountain thrown, In number to the Dukes, by being four to one. Even as a rout of wolves, when they by chance have caught A beast out of the herd, which long time they have sought, Upon him all at once courageously do set, 725 Him by the dewlaps some, some by the flank do get, Some climbing to his ears, do never leave their hold, Till falling on the ground, they have him as they would, With many of his kind, which, when he us'd to wend, What with their horns and hoofs, could then themselves defend.

Thus on their foes they fell, and down the Yorkists fall; Red Slaughter in her arms encompasseth them all. The first of all the fights in this unnatural war, In which blind Fortune smil'd on woeful Laucaster. [last,

Here Richard Duke of Yorke, down beaten, breath'd his And Salsbury so long with conquest still that past, 736 Inforcéd was to yield; Rutland a younger son To the deceaséd Duke, as he away would run, (A child scarce twelve years old) by Clifford there surpris'd, Who whilst he thought with tears his rage to have suffic'd, By him was answer'd thus: Thy father hath slain mine, 741 And for his blood (young boy) I'll have this blood of thine, And stabb'd him to the heart: thus the Lancastrians reign, The Yorkist in the field on heaps together slain.

*The Battle at that Cross, which to this day doth bear 745 The great and ancient name of th' English Mortimer, The next shall here have place, betwixt that Edward fought, Entitled Earl of March (revengefully that sought

To wreak his father's blood, at Wakefield lately shed, But then he Duke of Yorke, his father being dead), 750 And Jusper Tudor Earl of Pembroke, in this war. That stood to underprop the House of Lancaster, Half-brother to the King, that strove to hold his Crown, With Wiltshire, whose high prowess had bravely beaten down The Yorkists' swelling pride in that successful war At Wakefield, whose great'st power of Welsh and Irish are. The Duke's were Marchers most, which still stuck to him close, And meeting on the plain, by that forenamed Cross; As either General there for his advantage found (For wisely they surveyed the fashion of the ground). 760 They into one main fight their either forces make, When to the Duke of Yorke (his spirits as to awake) Three suns at once appear'd, all severally that shone, Which in a little space were joinéd all in one. Auspicious to the Duke, as after it fell out, Who with the weaker power (of which he seem'd to doubt) The proud Lancastrian part had quickly put to chase, Where plainly it should seem, the Genius of the place, The very name of March should greatly favour there. A title to this Prince deriv'd from Mortimer: To whom this trophy rear'd, much honoured had the soil. The Yorkists here enrich'd with the Lancastrian spoil, Are Masters of the day; four thousand being slain, The most of which were those, there standing to maintain The title of the King. Where Owen Tudor's lot 775 Was to be taken then; who this young Earl begot On Katherine the bright Queen, the Fifth King Henry's bride, Who too untimely dead, this Owen had affied. But he a prisoner then, his son and Ormond fled, At Hereford was made the shorter by the head; When this most warlike Duke, in honour of that sign. Which of his good success so rightly did divine,

And thankful to high Heaven, which of his cause had care, Three suns for his device still in his ensign bare.

*Thy Second Battle now, Saint Alban's I record, 785 Struck twixt Queen Marg'rets power, to ransom back her Lord.

Ta'en prisoner at that town, when there those factions fought, Whom now the part of Yorke had thither with them brought, Whose force consisted most of Southern men, being led By Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolke, and the head Of that proud faction then, stout Warwicke still that sway'd, In every bloody field (the Yorkists' only aid) Ifixt, When either's power approach'd, and they themselves had Upon the South and North, the town them both betwixt, Which first of all to take, the Yorkists had forecast, Putting their vaward on, and their best archers plac'd The market-sted about, and them so fitly laid, That when the foe came up, they with such terror play'd Upon them in the front, as fore'd them to retreat. The Northern mad with rage upon the first defeat, 800 Yet put for it again, to enter from the North, Which when great Warwicke heard, he sent his vaward forth, T' oppose them in what place soe'er they made their stand, Where in too fit a ground, a heath too near at hand, Adjoining to the town, unluckily they light, 805 Where presently began a fierce and deadly fight. But those of Warwick's part, which scarce four thousand were, To th' vaward of the Queen's, that stood so stoutly there, Though still with fresh supplies from her main battle fed; When they their courage saw so little them to sted, Deluded by the long expectance of their aid, By passages too strait, and close ambushments stay'd: Their succours that foreslow'd, to flight themselves betake, When after them again, such speed the Northern make,

Being followed with the force of their main Battle strong, $15 That this disord'red rout, these breathless men among, They ent'red Warwick's host, which with such horror strook The Southern, that each man began about to look A way how to escape, that when great Norfolke cried, Now as you favour Yorke, and his just cause, abide. $20 And Warwicke in the front even off'red to have stood, Yet neither of them both, should they have spent their blood, Could make a man to stay, or look upon a foe: Where Fortune it should seem, to Warwicke meant to show, That she this tide of his could turn, whene'er she would. $25

Thus when they saw the day was for so little sold; The King, which (for their ends) they to the field had brought, Behind them there they leave, but as a thing of nought, Which serv'd them to no use: who when his Queen and son, There found in Norfolke's tent, the battle being done, so With many a joyful tear, each other they imbrace; And whilst blind Fortune look'd with so well-pleas'd a face: Their swords with the warm blood of Yorkists so imbrued, Their foes but lately led, conrageously pursued. [high,

*Now followeth that black scene, borne up so wondrous That but a poor dumb show before a tragedy, s36 The former Battles fought, have seem'd to this to be; O Towton, let the blood Palm-Sunday spent on thee, Affright the future times, when they the Muse shall hear, Deliver it so to them; and let the ashes there s10 Of forty thousand men, in that long quarrel slain, Arise out of the earth, as they would live again, To tell the manlike deeds, that bloody day were wrought In that most fatal field (with various fortunes fought) Twixt Edward Duke of Yorke, then late proclaiméd King, s15 Fourth of that royal name, and him accompanying, The Nevills (of that war maintaining still the stream),

Great Warvicke, and with him his most courageous Eame, Stout Falconbridge, the third, a firebrand like the other, Of Salisbury surnam'd, that Warwick's bastard brother. Lord Fitzwater, who still the Yorkists' power assists, Blount, Wenlock, Dinham, Knights approvéd martialists. And Henry the late King, to whom they still durst stand. His true as powerful friend, the great Northumberland, With Westmerland, his claim who ever did prefer 855 His kinsman Somerset, his consin Excester. Dukes of the Royal line, his faithful friends that were, And little less than those, the Earl of Devonshire, Th' Lord Ducres, and Lord Wels, both wise and warlike With him of great command, Nevill and Trolop, Knights. 860 Both armies then on foot, and on their way set forth, King Edward from the South, King Henry from the North. The later crownéd King doth preparation make, From Pomfret (where he lay) the passage first to take O'er Aier at Ferybridge, and for that service sends 965 A most selected troop of his well chosen friends, To make that passage good, when instantly began The dire and ominous signs, the slaughter that foreran.

A most selected troop of his well chosen friends,
To make that passage good, when instantly began
The dire and ominous signs, the slaughter that foreran.
For valiant Clifford there, himself so bravely quit,
That coming to the Bridge (ere they could strengthen it) sto
From the Lancastrian power, with his light troop of horse,
And early in the morn defeating of their force,
The Lord Fitzwater slew, and that brave bastard son
Of Salsbury, themselves who into danger run:
For being in their beds, suspecting nought at all,
But hearing sudden noise, suppos'd some broil to fall
'Mongst their misgovern'd troops, unarméd rushing out,
By Clifford's soldiers soon incompasséd about,
Were miserably slain: which when great Warwicke hears,
As he had felt his heart transperséd through his ears,

To Edward mad with rage, immediately he goes,

And with distracted eyes, in most stern manner shows The slaughter of those Lords: This day alone, quoth he, Our utter ruin shall, or our sure rising be.

When soon before the host, his glittering sword he drew, sss And with relentless hands his sprightly courser slew, Then stand to me (quoth he) who meaneth not to fly, This day shall Edward win, or here shall Warwicke die.

Which words by Warwicke spoke, so deeply seem'd to sting The much distempered breast of that courageous King, That straight he made proclaim'd, that every fainting heart, From his resolvéd host had licence to depart: And those that would abide the hazard of the fight, Rewards and titles due to their deservéd right: And that no man, that day, a prisoner there should take, sos For this the upshot was, that all must mar or make. A hundred thousand men in both the armies stood, That native English were: O worthy of your Blood What conquest had there been! But ensigns fly at large, And trumpets every way sound to the dreadful charge. Upon the Yorkists' part, there flew the ireful Bear: On the Lancastrian side, the Cressant waving there. The Southern on this side, for Yorke 'a Warwicke' cry. 'A Percy for the right,' the Northern men reply. The two main battles join, the four large wings do meet; What with the shouts of men, and noise of horses' feet, Hell through the troubled earth, her horror seemed to breath: A thunder heard above, an earthquake felt beneath: As when the evening is with darkness overspread. Her star-befreekled face with clouds inveloped, 910 You oftentimes behold, the trembling lightning fly, Which suddenly again, but turning of your eye, Is vanished away, or doth so swiftly glide, That with a trice it touch t' horizon's either side : So through the smoke of dust, from ways, and fallows rais'd,

And breath of horse and men, that both together seiz'd one The air on every part, sent by the glimmering sun, The splendour of their arms doth by reflection run: Till heaps of dying men, and those already dead, Much hind'red them would charge, and letted them that fled. Beyond all wonted bounds, their rage so far extends, That sullen night begins, before their fury ends. Ten hours this fight endur'd, whilst still with murthering Expecting the next morn, the weak'st unconqueréd stands; Which was no sooner come, but both begin again To wreak their friends' dear blood, the former evening slain. New battles are begun, new fights that newly wound, Till the Lancastrian part, by their much less'ning found Their long-expected hopes, were utterly forlorn, When lastly to the foe, their recreant backs they turn. Thy channel then, O Cock,* was fill'd up with the dead, Of the Lancastrian side, that from the Yorkists fled, That those of Edward's part, that had the rear in chase, As though upon a bridge, did on their bodies pass. That Wharfe to whose large banks thou contribut'st thy store, Had her more crystal face discoloured with the gore 936 Of forty thousand men, that up the number made, Northumberland the great, and Westmerland there laid Their bodies: valiant Wels, and Dacres there do leave Their careases (whose hope too long did them deceive). Trolon and Nevill found massacred in the field. The Earl of Wiltshire forc'd to the stern foe to yield. King Henry from fair Yorke, upon this sad mischance To Scotland fled, the Queen sail'd over into France, The Duke of Somerset, and Excester do fly, 945 The rest upon the earth together breathless lie. †Muse, turn thee now to tell the Field at Hexam struck.

Upon the Yorkists' part, with the most prosp'rous luck Of any yet before, where to themselves they gain'd Most safety, yet their powers least damage there sustain'd, 950 Twixt John Lord Mountacute, that Nevill, who to stand For Edward, gathered had out of Northumberland A sort of valiant men, consisting most of horse, Which were again supplied with a most puissant force, Sent thither from the South, and by King Edward brought In person down to Yorke, to aid if that in ought 956 His General should have need, for that he durst not trust The Northern, which so oft to him had been unjust: Whilst he himself at Yorke, a second power doth hold, To hear in this rough war, what the Lancastrians would.

And Henry with his Queen, who to their powers had got, The lively daring French, and the light hardy Scot, To enter with them here, and to their part do get, Their faithful lov'd ally, the Duke of Somerset, And Sir Ralfe Percie, then most powerful in those parts, 965 Who had been reconcil'd to Edward, but their hearts Still with King Henry stay'd, to him and ever true, To whom by this revolt, they many Northern drew: Sir William Taylboys (call'd of most) the Earl of Kime, With Hungerford, and Rosse, and Mullins, of that time 970 Barons of high account, with Nevill, Tunstall, Gray, Hussy, and Finderne, Knights, men bearing mighty sway.

As forward with his force, brave Monntacule was set, It happ'd upon his way at Hegly More he met With Hungerford, and Rosse, and Sir Ralph Percy, where, 576 In sign of good success (as certainly it were) They and their utmost force were quickly put to flight: Yet Percy as he was a most courageous Knight, Ne'er boudg'd till his last breath, but in the field was slain. Proud of this first defeat, then marching forth again, 580 Towards Livells, a large waste, which other plains out-braves,

♥OL, 111,

Whose verge fresh Dowell* still is wat'ring with her waves, Whereas his posting scouts, King Henry's power descried, Tow'rds whom with speedy march, this valiant General hied, Whose haste there likewise had such prosperous event, That luckless Henry yet, had scarcely clear'd his tent, His Captains hardly set his battles, nor enlarg'd Their squadrons on the field, but this great Nevill charg'd: Long was this doubtful fight on either side maintain'd, That rising whilst this falls, this losing whilst that gain'd: The ground which this part got, and there as conquerors stood,

The other quickly gain, and firmly make it good, To either as blind Chance, her favours will dispose; So to this part it ebb'd, and to that side it flows. At last, till whether 'twere that sad and horrid sight, 995 At Saxton that yet did their fainting spirits affright, With doubt of second loss, and slaughter, or the aid That Mountacute receiv'd; King Henry's power dismay'd: And giving up the day, dishonourably fled, Whom with so violent speed the Yorkists followed, 1000 That had not Henry spurr'd, and had a courser swift, Besides a skilful guide, through woods and hills to shift, He sure had been surpris'd, as they his henchmen took, With whom they found his helm; with most disastrous luck, To save themselves by flight, ne'er more did any strive, 1005 And yet so many men ne'er taken were alive.

Now Banbary† we come thy Battle to report,
And show th' efficient cause, as in what wondrous sort
Great Warwicke was wrought in to the Lancastrian part,
When as that wanton King so vex'd his mighty heart: 1010
Whilst in the Court of France, that warrior he bestow'd,
(As potent here at home, as powerful else abroad)
A marriage to intreat with Bona bright and sheen,

Of the Savoyan Blood, and sister to the Queen, Which whilst this noble Earl negotiated there. 1/15 The widow Lady Gray, the King esponséd here. By which the noble Earl in France who was disgrae'd, (In England his revenge doth but too quickly haste) T' excite the Northern men doth secretly begin, (With whom he powerful was) to rise, that coming in, He might put in his hand (which only he desir'd), Which rising before Yorke were likely to have *fir'd The City, but repuls'd, and Holdorn them that led, Being taken, for the cause made shorter by the head. Yet would they not desist, but to their Captains drew 1025 Henry the valiant son of John the Lord Fitz-Hugh, With Coniers that brave Knight, whose valour they prefer, With Henry Nevill, son to the Lord Latiner, By whose allies and friends, they every day grew strong, And so in proud array tow'rds London march along. Which when King Edward saw the world began to side With Warwicke, till himself he might of power provide, To noble Pembroke sends, those rebels to withstand. Six thousand valiant Welsh, who must'ring out of hand, By Richard Harbert's aid, his brother them doth bring, 1935 And for their greater strength (appointed by the King) Th' Lord Stafford (of his house) of Powick named then, Eight hundred archers brought, the most selected men The Marches could make out: these having Sereme crost, And up to Colswould clome, they heard the Northern host, 1 10 Being at Northampton then, itself tow'rds Warwicke way'd, When with a speedy march, the Harberts that forlay'd Their passage, charg'd their rear with near two thousand horse,

That the Lancastrian part suspecting all their force Had followed them again, their army bring about,

Both with such speed and skill, that e'er the Welsh got out, By having charged too far, some of their vaward lost, Beat to their army back; thus as these legions coast, On Danemore they are met, indifferent for this war, Whereas three easy hills that stand triangular, 1050 Small Edgcoat overlook; on that upon the West The Welsh encamp themselves; the Northern them possest Of that upon the South, whilst (by war's strange event) Young Nevill, who would brave the Harberts in their tent, Leading a troop of youth (upon that fatal plain) 1055 Was taken by the Welsh, and miserably slain; Of whose untimely death, his friends the next day took A terrible revenge, when Stafford there forsook The army of the Welsh, and with his archers bad Them fight that would for him; for that proud Pembroke had Displac'd him of his inn, in Banbury where he His paramour had lodg'd; where since he might not be, He backward shapes his course, and leaves the Harberts there. T' abide the brunt of all: with outcries everywhere The clamorous drums and fifes to the rough charge do sound, Together horse and man come tumbling to the ground, 1066 Then limbs like boughs were lopp'd, from shoulders arms do flv:

They fight as none could 'scape, yet 'scape as none could die. The ruffling Northern lads, and the stout Welshmen tried it; Then head-pieces hold out, or brains must sore abide it. 1070 The Northern men 'Saint George for Lancaster' do cry: 'A Pembroke for the King,' the lusty Welsh reply; When many a gallant youth doth desperately assay, To do some thing that might be worthy of the day: Where Richard Harbert bears into the Northern prease, 1075 And with his poleaxe makes his way with such success, That breaking through the ranks, he their main battle past, And quit it so again, that many stood aghast,

That from the higher ground beheld him wade the crowd. As often ye behold in tempests rough and proud, O'ertaken with a storm, some shell or little crea, Hard labouring for the land, on the high-working sea, Seems now as swallowed up, then floating light and free O' th' top of some high wave; then think that you it see Quite sunk beneath that waste of waters, yet doth clear 1055 The main, and safely gets some creek or harbour near: So Harbert clear'd their host; but see th' event of war, Some spialls on the hill discernéd had from far Another army come to aid the Northern side, When they which Clapham's craft so quickly not espied, 1000 Who with five hundred men about Northampton rais'd, All discontented spirits, with Edward's rule displeas'd, Displaying in the field great Warwick's dreaded Bear: The Welsh who thought the Earl in person had been there, Leading a greater power (disheartenéd) turn the back Before the Northern host, that quickly go to wrack. Five thousand valiant Welsh are in chase o'erthrown, Which but an hour before had thought the day their own. Their leaders (in the flight) the high-born Harberts ta'en, At Banbury must pay for Henry Nevill slain.

Now*Stamford in due course, the Muse doth come to tell, Of thine own naméd field, what in the fight befell, Betwixt brave youthful Wells, from Lincolnshire that led Near twenty thousand men, tow'rd London making head, Against the Yorkists' power, great Warwicke to abet, 1105 Who with a puissant force preparéd forth to set, To join with him in arms, and jointly take their chance. And Edward with his friends, who likewise do advance His forces, to refell that desperate daring foe, Who for he durst himself in open arms to show, 1110 Nor at his dread command them down again would lay.

His so outrageous son, with his lov'd law-made brother,
Sir Thomas Dymock, thought too much to rule the other,
He strangely did to die, which so incens'd the spleen 1115
Of this courageous youth, that he to wreak his teen
Upon the cruel King, doth every way excite
Him to an equal field, that com'n where they might smite
The battle: on this plain it chanc'd their armies met:
They rang'd their several fights, which once in order set, 1120
The loudly-brawling drums, which seeméd to have fear'd
The trembling air at first, soon after were not heard,
For out-cries, shricks, and shouts, whilst noise doth noise confound.

No accents touch the ear, but such as death do sound: In thirsting for revenge, whilst fury them doth guide: As slaughter seems by turns to seise on either side. The Southern expert were, in all to war belong, And exercise their skill, the Marchmen stout and strong. Which to the battle stick, and if they make retreat, Yet coming on again, the foe they back do beat, 1130 And 'Wells for Warwicke' cry, and for the rightful crown; The other call 'a Yorke,' to beat the rebels down: The worst that war could do, on either side she shows, Or by the force of bills, or by the strength of bows; But still by fresh supplies, the Yorkists' power increase: 1135 And Wells, who sees his troops so overborne with prease. By hazarding too far into the boist'rous throng, Incouraging his men the adverse troops among, With many a mortal wound, his wearied breath expir'd: Which sooner known to his, than his first hopes desir'd, 1140 Ten thousand on the earth before them lying slain, No hope left to repair their ruin'd state again, Cast off their country's coats, to haste their speed away, (Of them) which Loose-coat field is call'd (even) to this day,

Since needsly I must stick upon my former text,
The bloody Battle fought, at *Burnet followeth next,
Twixt Edward, who before he settled was to reign,
By Warwicke hence expuls'd; but here arriv'd again,
From Burgundy, brought in munition, men and pay,
And all things fit for war, expecting yet a day.
Whose brother George† came in, with Warwicke that had stood,
Whom Nature wrought at length t' adhere to his own blood:
His brother Richard Duke of Gloster, and his friend;
Lord Hastings, who to him their utmost powers extend;

And Warwicke, whose great heart so mortal hatred bore To Edward, that by all the Sacraments he swore, Not to lay down his arms, until his sword had rac'd That proud King from his seat, that so had him disgrac'd: And Marquess Mountacute, his brother, that brave stem Of Nevil's noble stock, who joined had to them, The Dukes of Somerset, and Excester, and take The Earl of Oxford in; the armies forward make, And meeting on the plain, to Barnet very near, That to this very day, is called Gladmore there.

Duke Richard to the field, doth Edward's vaward bring; And in the middle came that most courageous King, 1166 With Clarence his reclaim'd, and brother then most dear; His friend Lord Hastings had the guiding of the rear, (A man of whom the King most highly did repute.)

On puissant Warwick's part, the Marquess Mountacute 1170 His brother, and his friend the Earl of Oxford led The right wing; and the left which most that day might sted, The Duke of Excester; and he himself do guide The middle fight (which was the army's only pride) Of archers most approv'd, the best that he could get, 1175 Directed by his friend, the Duke of Somerset.

O Sabbath ill-bestow'd, O dreary Easter day,

In which (as some suppose) the sun doth use to play,
In honour of that GOD for sinful man that died,
And rose on that third day, that sun which now doth hide
His face in foggy mists; nor was that morning seen,
So that the space of ground those angry hosts between,
Was overshadowed quite with darkness, which so cast
The armies on both sides, that they each other past,
Before they could perceive advantage, where to fight;
Besides the envious mist so much deceiv'd their sight,
That where eight hundred men, which valiant Oxford brought,
Ware Comets on their coats: great Warwick's force which fdress'd. thought They had King Edward's been, which so with Suns were First made their shot at them, who by their friends distress'd, Constrainéd were to fly, being scattered here and there. 1191 But when this direful day at last began to clear, King Edward then beholds that height of his first hopes, Whose presence gave fresh life to his oft-fainting troops, Prepar'd to scourge his pride, there daring to defy His mercy, to the host proclaiming publicly His hateful breach of faith, his perjury, and shame, And what might make him vile; so Warwicke heard that Of Yorke, which in the field he had so oft advanc'd, And to that glorious height, and greatness had inhanc'd, 1200 Then cried against his power, by those which oft had fled, Their swift pursuing foe, by him not bravely led, Upon the enemy's back, their swords bath'd in the gore Of those from whom they ran, like heartless men before. Which Warwicke's nobler name injuriously defi'd, 1205 Even as the ireful host then joined side to side.

Where cruel Richard charg'd the Earl's main battle, when Proud Somerset therein, with his approved men Stood stoutly to the shock, and flang out such a flight Of shafts, as well-near seem'd t' eclipse the welcom'd light, Which forc'd them to fall off, on whose retreat again, 1211 That great battalion next approacheth the fair plain, Wherein the King himself in person was to try, Proud Warwick's utmost strength: when Warwicke by and by, With his left wing came up, and charg'd so home and round, That had not his light horse by disvantageous ground Been hind'red, he had struck the heart of Edward's host: But finding his defeat, his enterprise so lost, He his swift currers sends, to will his valiant brother. And Oxford, in command, being equal to the other, To charge with the right wing, who bravely up do bear; But Hastings that before raught thither with his rear, And with King Edward join'd, the host too strongly arm'd. When every part with spoil, with rape, with fury charm'd, Are prodigal of blood, that slaughter seems to swill Itself in human gore, and every one cries kill. So doubtful and so long the battle doth abide, That those, which to and fro, twixt that and Loudon ride, That Warwicke wins the day for certain news do bring, Those following them again, said certainly the King, Until great Warwicke found his army had the worse. And sore began to faint, alighting from his horse, In with the foremost puts, and wades into the throng; And where he saw death stern'st, the murthered troops among, He ventures, as the sun in a tempestuous day, With darkness threat'ned long, yet sometimes doth display His cheerful beams, which scarce appear to the clear eye, But suddenly the clouds, which on the winds do fly, Do muffle him again within them, till at length, The storm (prevailing still with an unusual strength) His clearness quite doth close, and shut him up in night; So mighty Warwicke fares in this outrageous fight. The cruel Lions thus inclose the dreaded Bear,

Whilst Montacute, who strives (if any help there were)

To rescue his belov'd and valiant brother, fell:

The loss of two such spirits at once, time shall not tell;

The Duke of Somerset, and th' Earl of Oxford fled,

And Excester being left for one amongst the dead,

At length recovering life, by night escap'd away,

Yorke never safely sat, till this victorious day.

Thus Fortune to his end this mighty Warwicke brings, This puissant setter up, and plucker down of Kings. He who those battles won, which so much blood had cost, At Barnet's fatal fight, both life and fortune lost.

Now *Tewksbury it rests, thy story to relate, 1255 Thy sad and dreadful fight, and that most direful fate Of the Lancastrian Line, which happ'ned on that day, Fourth of that fatal month, that still-rememb'red May: Twixt Edmund that brave Duke of Somerset, who fled From Barnet's bloody field (again there gathering head) 1260 And Marquess Dorset bound in blood to aid him there, With Thomas Courtney Earl of powerful Devonshire: With whom King Henry's son, young Edward there was seen, To claim his doubtless right, with that undannted Queen His mother, who from France with succours came on land 1265 That day, when Warwicke fell at Barnet, which now stand, Their fortune yet to try, upon a second fight. And Edward who imploy'd the utmost of his might, The poor Lancastrian part (which he doth eas'ly feel, By Warwicke's mighty fall, already faintly reel) 1270 By battle to subvert, and to extirp the Line; And for the present act, his army doth assign To those at Barnet field so luckily that sped; As Richard late did there, he here the vaward led, The main the King himself, and Clarence took to guide; 1275 The rearward as before by Hastings was supply'd.

The army of the Queen, into three battles cast,

The first of which the Duke of Somerset, and (fast To him) his brother John do happily dispose; The second, which the Prince for his own safety chose 1280 The Barons of Saint John, and Wenlocke; and the third, To Courtney that brave Earl of Devonshire referr'd. Where in a spacious field they set their armies down; Behind, hard at their backs, the Abbey, and the Town, To whom their foe must come, by often banks and steep, 1985 Through quickset narrow lanes, cut out with ditches deep, Repulsing Edward's power, constraining him to prove By thund'ring cannon shot, and culvering to remove Them from that chosen ground, so tedious to assail; And with the shot came shafts, like stormy show'rs of hail: The like they sent again, which beat the other sore, Who with the ordnance strove the Yorkists to outroar, And still make good their ground, that whilst the pieces play, The Yorkists hasting still to hand-blows, do assay, In strong and boist'rous crowds to scale the combrous dykes; But beaten down with bills, with poleaxes, and pykes, Are forced to fall off; when Richard there that led The vaward, saw their strength so little them to sted, As he a Captain was, both politic and good, The stratagems of war, that rightly understood, 1300 Doth seem as from the field his forces to withdraw. His sudden, strange retire, proud Somerset that saw, (A man of haughty spirit, in honour most precise; In action yet far more adventurous than wise) Supposing from the field for safety he had fled, Straight giveth him the chase; when Richard turning head, By his incounter let the desperate Duke to know, 'Twas done to train him out, when soon began the show Of slaughter everywhere; for scarce their equal forces Began the doubtful fight, but that three hundred horses, 1310 That out of sight this while on Edward's part had stay'd,

To see that near at hand no ambushes were lay'd, Soon charg'd them on the side, disord'ring quite their ranks, Whilst this most warlike King had won the climbing banks, Upon the equal earth, and coming bravely in Upon the adverse power, there likewise doth begin A fierce and deadly fight, that the Lancastrian side, The first and furious shock not able to abide The utmost of their strength, were forced to bestow, To hold what they had got; that Somerset below, 1320 Who from the second force, had still expected aid, But frustrated thereof, even as a man dismay'd, Scarce shifts to save himself, his battle overthrown; But faring as a man that frantic had been grown, With Wenlock happ'd to meet (preparing for his flight) Upbraiding him with terms of baseness and despight, That cow'rdly he had fail'd to succour him with men: Whilst Wenlock with like words requiteth him agen, The Duke (to his stern rage, as yielding up the reins) With his too-ponderous axe pash'd out the Baron's brains.

The party of the Queen in every place are kill'd,

The ditches with the dead, confusedly are fill'd,

And many in the flight, i' th' neighbouring rivers drown'd,

Which with victorious wreaths, the conquering Yorkists erown'd.

Three thousand of those men, on Henry's part that stood, 1335 For their presumption paid the forfeit of their blood. John Marquess Dorset dead, and Devonshire that day Drew his last vital breath, as in that bloody fray, Delves, Hamden, Whittingham, and Leuknor, who had there Their several brave commands, all valiant men that were, 1340 Found dead upon the earth. Now all is Edward's own, And through his enemies' tents he march'd into the town, Where quickly he proclaims, to him that forth could bring Young Edward, a large fee, and as he was a King,

His person to be safe. Sir Richard Crofts who thought 1345 His prisoner to disclose, before the King then brought That fair and goodly youth; whom when proud Yorke demands,

Why thus he had presum'd by help of trait'rous hands His kingdom to disturb, and impiously display'd His ensigns, the stout Prince, as not a jot dismay'd, 1350 With confidence replies, To claim his ancient right, Him from his grandsires left; by tyranny and might, By him his foe usurp'd: with whose so bold reply, Whilst Edward throughly vex'd, doth seem to thrust him by; His second brother George, and Richard near that stood, 1255 With many a cruel stab let out his princely blood;* In whom the Line direct of Lancaster doth cease, And Somerset himself surprised in the prease, With many a worthy man, to Gloster prisoners led, There forfeited their lives: Queen Margaret being fled To a religious Cell (to Tewksbury, too near), Discover'd to the King, with sad and heavy cheer, A prisoner was convey'd to London, woeful Queen, The last of all her hopes, that buried now had seen.

But of that outrage here, by that bold Bastard sont 1365 Of Thomas Nevill, nam'd Lord Falkonbridge, which won A rude rebellious rout, in Kent and Essex rais'd, Who London here besieg'd, and Southwarke having seis'd, Set fire upon the Bridge: but when he not prevail'd, The suburbs on the East he furiously assail'd; 1370 But by the City's power was lastly put to flight; Which being no set Field, not yet well-ord'red fight, Amongst our Battles here, may no way reckoned be.

Then #Bosworth here the Muse now lastly bids for thee,

Thy Battle to describe, the last of that long War,
Entit'led by the name of Yorke and Lancaster;
Twixt Henry Tudor Earl of Richmond only left
Of the Lancastrian Line, who by the Yorkists reft
Of liberty at home, a banish'd man abroad,
In Britany had liv'd; but late at Milford-Road,
Being prosperously arriv'd, though scarce two thousand strong,

Made out his way through Wales, where as he came along, First Griffith great in blood, then Morgan next doth meet Him, with their several powers, as off'ring at his feet To lay their lands, and lives; Sir Rice ap Thomas then, 1385 With his brave band of Welsh, most choice and expert men, Comes lastly to his aid; at Shrewsbury arriv'd, · (His hopes so faint before, so happily reviv'd) He on for England makes, and near to Newport town, The next ensuing night setting his army down, 1390 Sir Gilbert Talbot still for Lancaster that stood. (To Henry near allied in friendship as in blood) From th' Earl of Shrewsbury his nephew (under age) Came with two thousand men, in warlike equipage, Which much his power increas'd; when eas'ly setting on, 1305 From Lichfield, as the way leads forth to Atherston, Brave Bourcher and his friend stout Hungerford, whose hopes On Henry long had lain, stealing from Richard's troops, (Wherewith they had been mix'd) to Henry do appear, Which with a high resolve, most strangely seem'd to cheer, His oft-appalléd heart, but yet the man which most, Gave sail to Henry's self, and fresh life to his host, The stout Lord Stanley was, who for he had affied The mother of the Earl, to him so near allied: The King who fear'd his truth (which he to have, compell'd) The young Lord Strange his son, in hostage strongly held. 1406 Which fore'd him to fall off, till he fit place could find,

His sen-in-law to meet; yet he with him combin'd Sir William Stanley, known to be a valiant Knight, T' assure him of his aid. Thus growing tow'rds his height, A most selected band of Cheshire bow-men came. By Sir John Savage led, besides two men of name: Sir Brian Sanford, and Sir Simon Digby, who Leaving the tyrant King, themselves expressly show Fast friends to Henry's part, which still his power increas'd: Both armies well-prepar'd, towards Bosworth strongly preas'd, And on a spacious moor, lying Southward from the town; Indifferent to them both, they set their armies down Their soldiers to refresh, preparing for the fight: Where to the guilty King, *that black fore-running night, 1420 Appear the dreadful ghosts of Henry and his son, Of his own brother George, and his two nephews done Most cruelly to death; and of his wife, and friend, Lord Hastings, with pale hands prepar'd as they would rend Him piece-meal; at which oft he roareth in his sleep.

No sooner gan the dawn out of the East to peep, But drums and trumpets chide, the soldiers to their arms, And all the neighbouring fields are covered with the swarms Of those that came to fight, as those that came to see, 1429 (Contending for a Crown) whose that great day should be.

First, Richmond rang'd his fights, on Oxford and bestows
The leading, with a band of strong and sinewy bows
Out of the army pick'd; the front of all the field,
Sir Gilbert Talbot next, he wisely took to wield, [were;
The right wing, with his strengths, most Northern men that
And Sir John Savage, with the power of Lancashire,
And Cheshire (chief of men) was for the left wing plac'd:
The middle battle he in his fair person grac'd,
With him the noble Earl of Penbroke, who commands
Their country-men the Welsh (of whom it mainly stands, 1110)

For their great numbers found to be of greatest force), Which but his guard of gleaves, consisted all of horse.

Into two several fights the King contriv'd his strength, And his first battle cast into a wondrous length, In fashion of a wedge, in point of which he set 1445 His archery, thereof and to the guidance let Of John the noble Duke of Norfolke, and his son Brave Surrey: he himself the second bringing on, Which was a perfect square; and on the other side, His horsemen had for wings, which by extending wide, 1450 The adverse seem'd to threat, with an unequal pow'r. The utmost point arriv'd of this expected hour, He to Lord Stanley sends, to bring away his aid; And threats him by an oath, if longer he delay'd His eldest son young Strange immediately should die, 1455 To whom stout Stanley thus doth carelessly reply: Tell thou the King I'll come, when I fit time shall see, I love the boy, but yet I have more sons than he.

The angry armies meet, when the thin air was rent, With such re-echoing shouts, from either's soldiers sent, 1460 That flying o'er the field the birds down trembling dropp'd. As some old building long that hath been underpropp'd, When as the timber fails, by the unwieldy fall, Even into powder beats, the roof, and rotten wall, And with confuséd clouds of smould'ring dust doth choke 1465 The streets and places near; so through the misty smoke, By shot and ordnance made, a thundering noise was heard. When Stanley that this while his succours had deferr'd, Both to the cruel King, and to the Earl his son, When once he doth perceive the battle was begun, Brings on his valiant troops, three thousand fully strong, Which like a cloud far off, that tempest threat'ned long. Falls on the tyrant's host, which him with terror strook, As also when he sees, he doth but vainly look,

For succours from the great Northumberland, this while, 1475 That from the battle scarce three-quarters of a mile, Stood with his power of horse, nor once was seen to stir: When Richard (that th' event no longer would defer) The two main battles mix'd, and that with wearied breath, Some laboured to their life, some laboured to their death, 1480 (There for the better fought) even with a spirit elate, As one that inly scorn'd the very worst that Fate Could possibly impose, his lance set in his rest, Into the thick'st of death, through threat'ning peril prest, To where he had perceiv'd the Earl in person drew, Whose Standard Bearer he, Sir William Brandon, slew, The pile of his strong staff into his arm-pit sent; When at a second shock, down Sir John Cheney went, Which scarce a lance's length before the Earl was plac'd, Until by Red gond's Guard, invironed at last, With many a cruel wound, was through the body gride. Upon this fatal field, John Duke of Norfolke died; The stout Lord Ferrers fell, and Ratcliffe, that had long Of Richard's counsels been, found in the field among A thousand soldiers that on both sides were slain, O Red-more, it then seem'd, thy name was not in vain. When with a thousand's blood the earth was coloured red. Whereas th' Emperial Crown was set on Henry's head, Being found in Pichard's tent, as he it there did win, The cruel tyrant stripp'd to the bare naked skin, 1500 Behind a herauld truss'd, was back to Le'ster sent, From whence the day before he to the battle went.

The Battle then at Stoke,* so fortunately struck, (Upon King Henry's part, with so successful luck, As never till that day he felt his Crown to cleave Unto his temples close, when Mars began to leave His fury, and at last to sit him down was brought)

I come at last to sing, twixt that Seventh Henry fought; With whom, to this brave Field the Duke of Bedford came, With Oxford his great friend, whose praise did him inflame To all achievements great, that fortunate had been 1511 In every doubtful fight, since Henry's coming in, With th' Earl of Shrewsbury, a man of great command, And his brave son Lord George, for him that firmly stand.

And on the other side, John Duke of Suffolk's son, (John Earl of Lincolne call'd) who this stern war begun, Suborning a lewd boy, a false impostor, who, By Simonds a worse priest, instructed what to do, Upon him took the name of th' Earl of Warwicke, heir To George the murthered Duke of Clurence, who (for fear 1520 Lest some that favouréd Yorke, might under hand maintain) King Henry in the Tower, did at that time detain. *Which practice set on foot, this Earl of Lincolne sail'd To Burgundy, where he with Margaret prevail'd, Wife to that warlike Charles, and his most loved Aunt, 1525 Who vexéd that a proud Lancastrian should supplant The lawful line of Yorke, whence she her blood derived; Wherefore for Lincolne's sake she speedily contriv'd, And Lovell, that brave Lord, before him sent to land Upon the same pretence, to furnish them a band 1530 Of Almaines, and to them for their stout Captain gave The valiant Martin Swart, the man thought scarce to have His match for martial feats, and sent them with a fleet For Ireland, where she had appointed them to meet, With Simonds that lewd clerk, and Lambert, whom they there The Earl of Warwicke call'd, and publish'd everywhere 1536 His title to the Crown, in Direlin, and proclaim Him England's lawful King, by the Fifth Edward's name:

† The Lord Francis Lorell.

Then joining with the Lord Fitz-Gerald,* to their aid Who many Irish brought, they up their anchors weigh'd 1546 And at the rocky pyle of Fowdray† put to shore In Lancashire; their power increasing more and more, By soldiers sent them in from Broughton; (for supply) A Knight that long had been of their confederacy; Who making thence, direct their marches to the South. 1546

When Henry saw himself so far in danger's mouth, From Coventry he came, still gathering up his host, Made greater on his way, and doth the country coast. Which way he understood his enemies must pass: When after some few days (as it their fortunes was) At Stoke, a village near to Newarke-upon-Trent, Each in the other's sight pitch'd down their warlike tent. Into one battle soon, the Almains had dispos'd Their army, in a place upon two parts inclos'd With dells, and fencéd dykes (as they were expert men) 1555 And from the open fields King Henry's host again, In three fair several fights came equally divided; The first of which, and fitt'st, was given to be guided By Shrewsbury, which most of soldiers choice consisted: The others plac'd as wings, which ever as they listed, Came up as need requir'd, or fell back as they found Just cause for their retire: when soon the troubled ground. On her black bosom felt the thunder, which awoke Her Genius, with the shock that violently shook Her intrails; this sad day when there ye might have seen 1565 Two thousand Almains stand, of which each might have been A leader for his skill, which when the charge was hot, That they could hardly see the very sun for shot, Yet they that motion kept that perfect soldiers should; That most courageous Swart there might they well behold, ‡ Sir Thomas Broughton.

With most unusual skill, that desperate fight maintain, 1571 And valiant De la Poole, most like his princely strain, Did all that courage could, or noblesse might befit; And Lovell that brave Lord, behind him not a whit, For martial deeds that day: stout Broughton that had stood With Yorke (even) from the first, there lastly gave his blood To that well-foughten Field: the poor trowz'd Irish there, Whose mantles stood for mail, whose skins for corslets were, And for their weapons had but Irish skaines and darts, Like men that scornéd death, with most resolvéd hearts, 1580 Give not an inch of ground, but all in pieces hewn, Where first they fought, they fell; with them was overthrown The Leader Gerald's hope, amidst his men that fought, And took such part as they, whom he had thither brought. This of that field be told,* There was not one that fled, 1585 But where he first was plac'd, there found alive or dead. If in a foughten field, a man his life should lose, To die as these men did, who would not gladly choose, Which full four thousand were. But in this tedious Song, The too laborious Muse hath tarried all too long.

As for the Black-Smith's Rout, who did together rise, Encamping on Blackheath, t' annul the subsidies By Parliament then given, or that of Cornwallt call'd, Inclosures to cast down, which overmuch enthrall'd The subject: or proud Kets, who with the same pretence 1595 In Norfolke rais'd such stirs, as but with great expense Of blood was not appear'd; or that begun in Lent By Wyat \ and his friends, the marriage to prevent, That Mary did intend with Philip King of Spain; Since these but riots were, nor fit the other's strain, § Sir Thomas Wyat.

She here her Battles ends: and as she did before,
So travelling along upon her silent shore,
Of all that Forest-kind, by Time's injurious theft
Of all that tract destroy'd, with wood which did abound,
And former times had seen the goodliest Forest-ground,
This Island ever had: but she so left alone,
The ruin of her kind, and no man to bemoan.
The deep intrancéd Flood, as thinking to awake,
Thus from her shady bower she silently bespake:

O Flood in happy plight, which to this time remain'st, As still along in state to Neptune's Court thou strain'st, Revive thee with the thought of those forepassed hours, When the rough Wood-gods kept, in their delightful bowers On thy embroidered banks, when now this Country fill'd, 1615 With villages, and by the labouring plowman till'd, Was Forest, where the fir, and spreading poplar grew. O let me yet the thought of those past times renew, When as that woody kind, in our umbrageous wild, Whence every living thing save only they exil'd, 1620 In this their world of waste, the sovereign empire sway'd. O who would e'er have thought, that time could have decay'd Those trees whose bodies seem'd, by their so massy weight, To press the solid earth, and with their wondrous height To climb into the clouds, their arms so far to shoot, 1625 As they in measuring were of acres, and their root, With long and mighty spurns to grapple with the land, As Nature would have said, that they should ever stand: So that this place where now this Huntingdon is set, Being an easy hill where mirthful Hunters met, 1630 From that first took the name. By this the Muse arrives At Elie's isled marge, by having pass'd Saint Ires, Unto the German Sca she hasteth her along, And here she shutteth up her Two-and-Twentieth Song,

In which she quite hath spent her vigour, and must now, 1635 As workmen often use, a while sit down and blow; And after this short pause, though less'ning of her height, Come in another key, yet not without delight.

THE THREE-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

From furious Fights Invention comes,
Deaf'ned with noise of rattling drums,
And in the Northamptonian bounds,
Shows Whittlewood's, and Sacie's grounds;
Then to Mount Hellidon doth go,
(Whence Charwell, Leame, and Nen do flow)
The Surface which of England sings,
And Nen down to the Washes brings;
Then whereas Welland makes her way,
Shows Rockingham her rich array:
A Course at Kelmarsh then she takes,
Where she Northamptonshire forsakes.

tow'rds the Midlands now, th' industrious Muse doth make, [take; The Northamptonian earth and in her way doth

10

As fruitful every way, as those by Nature, which The Husbandman by art, with compost doth inrich, This boasting of herself; that walk her verge about,

And view her well within, her breadth, and length throughout.

The worst foot of her earth, is equal with their best, With most aboundant store, that highliest think them blest. When Whittlewood betime th' unwearied Muse doth win
To talk with her awhile; at her first coming in,
The Forest thus that greets: With more successful Fate,
Thrive than thy fellow Nymphs, whose sad and ruinous state
We every day behold, if anything there be,
That from this general fall, thee happily may free,
'Tis only for that thou dost naturally produce
More under-wood, and brake, than oak for greater use:
But when this ravenous Age, of those hath us bereft,
Time wanting this our store, shall seise what thee is left.
For what base Avarice now inticeth men to do,
Necessity in time shall strongly urge them to;
Which each divining spirit most clearly doth foresee.

Whilst at this speech perplex'd, the Forest seem'd to be, A Water-nymph, near to this goodly Wood-nymph's side, (As tow'rds her sovereign Ouze, she softly down doth slide) Tea, her delightsome stream by Tawcester doth lead; 25 And sporting her sweet self in many a dainty mead, She hath not sallied far, but Sucy soon again Salutes her; one much grac'd amongst the Sylvan train: One whom the Queen of Shades, the bright Diana oft Hath courted for her looks, with kisses smooth and soft, 30 On her fair bosom lean'd, and tenderly imbrac'd, And call'd her, her Dear Heart, most lov'd, and only chaste: Yet Sacie after Tea, her amorous eyes doth throw, Till in the banks of Ouze the Brook herself bestow.

Where in those fertile fields, the Muse doth hap to meet Upon that side which sits the West of Watling-street, 36 With Helidon* a Hill, which though it be but small, [call, Compar'd with their proud kind, which we our Mountains Yet hath three famous Floods, that out of him do flow, That to three several Seas, by their assistants go; 40 Of which the noblest, Nen, to fair Northampton hies,

By Owndle sallying on, then Peterborough plyes Old Medhamsted: * where her the Sea-maids intertain, To lead her through the Fen into the German Main,

The second, Charwell is, at Oxford meeting Thames, 45 Is by his King convey'd into the Celtick't streams. Then Leame as least, the last, to mid-land Avon hastes, Which Flood again itself, into proud Severne casts: As on th' Iberiant Sea, herself great Severne spends; So Leame the dower she hath, to that wide Ocean lends, so

But Helidon wax'd proud, the happy Sire to be To so renowned Floods, as these fore-named three, Besides the Hill of note, near England's midst that stands, Whence from his face, his back, or on his either hands. The Land extends in breadth, or lays itself in length, Wherefore, this Hill to show his state and natural strength, The surface of this part determineth to show. Which we now England name, and through her tracts to go. But being plain and poor, professeth not that height, As falcon-like to soar, till less'ning to the sight. CO But as the sundry soils, his style so alt'ring oft, As full expressions fit, or verses smooth and soft, Upon their several sites, as naturally to strain, And wisheth that these Floods, his tunes to entertain, The air with haleyon calms, may wholly have possest, As though the rough winds tired, were eas'ly laid to rest. Then on the worth'est tract up tow'rds the mid-day's sun, His undertaken task thus Hellidon begun. fcharge,

From where the kingly Thames his stomach doth dis-To Devonshire, where the land her bosom doth inlarge: And with the in-land air, her beanties doth relieve, Along the Celtick Sea, call'd oftentimes the Sleeve:

A description of the surface of the sundry Tracts of England,

Although upon the coast, the Downs appear but bare, Yet naturally within the Countries woody are.

Then Cornwall creepeth out into the Western Main,
As (lying in her eye) she pointed still at Spain:
Or as the wanton soil, dispos'd to lustful rest,
Had laid herself along on Neptune's amorous breast.

With Denshire, from the firm, that Beak of land that fills, What landskip lies in vales, and often rising hills, so plac'd betwixt the French, and the Sabrinian Seas, As on both sides adorn'd with many harborons Bays, Who for their trade to sea, and wealthy mines of tin, From any other tract, the praise doth clearly win.

From Denshire by those shores, which Severne oft surrounds, The soil far lower sits, and mightily abounds 86 With sundry sort of fruits, as well-grown grass and corn, That Somerset may say, her batning moors do scorn Our England's richest earth, for burthen should them stain; And on the self-same tract, up Severn's stream again, 90 The Vale of Eusham lays her length so largely forth, As though she meant to stretch herself into the North, Where still the fertile earth depresséd lies and low, Till her rich soil itself to Warwickshire do show.

Hence somewhat South by East, let us our course incline,
And from these setting shores so merely maritine,
The Isle's rich in-land parts, let's take with us along,
To set him rightly out, in our well-ord'red Song;
Whose prospects to the Muse their sundry sites shall show,
Where she from place to place, as free as air shall flow,
Their superficies so exactly to descry,
Through Willshire, pointing how the Plain of Salisbury
Shoots forth herself in length, and lays abroad a train
So large, as though the land serv'd scarcely to contain
Her vastness, North from her, himself proud Cotswould vaunts,

And casts so stern a look about him that he daunts The lowly Vales, remote that sit with humbler eyes,

In Barckshire, and from thence into the Orient lies
That most renowned Vale of White-horse, and by her,
So Buckingham again doth Alsbury prefer,
With any English earth, along upon whose pale,
That mounting Country then, which maketh her a Vale,
The chalky Chilterne, runs with beeches crown'd about,
Through Bedfordshire that bears, till his bald front he shoot,
Into that foggy earth towards Ely, that doth grow
Much fenny, and surrounds with every little flow.

So on into the East, upon the in-land ground, From where that crystal Colue* most properly doth bound, Rough Chilterne, from the soil, wherein rich London sits, As being fair and flat it naturally befits 120 Her greatness every way, which holdeth on along To the Essexian earth, which likewise in our Song, Since in one tract they lie, we here together take, Although the several Shires, by sundry soils do make It different in degrees; for Middlesex of sands 125 Her soil composéd hath; so are th' Essexian lands, Adjoining to the same, that sit by Isis' side, Which Loudon over-looks: but as she waxeth wide, So Essex in her tides, her deep-grown marshes drowns, And to inclosures cuts her drier upland grounds, Which lately woody were, whilst men those woods did prize: Whence those fair Countries lie, upon the pleasant rise, (Betwixt the mouth of Thames, and where Ouze roughly dashes Her rude unwieldy waves, against the queachy washes) Suffolke and Norfolke near, so named of their sites, 135 Adornéd every way with wonderful delights, To the beholding eye, that everywhere are seen,

Abounding with rich fields, and pastures fresh and green, Fair havens to their shores, large heaths within them lie, As Nature in them strove to show variety.

From Ely all along upon that Eastern Sea,
Then Lincolneshire herself, in state at length doth lay,
Which for her fatning Fens, her fish, and fowl may have
Pre-eminence, as she that seemeth to out-brave
All other Southern Shires, whose head the Washes feels, 145
Till wantonly she kick proud Humber with her heels.

Up tow'rds the Navel then, of England from her flank, Which Lincolneshire we call, so levelléd and lank. Northampton, Rutland then, and Huntingdon, which three Do show by their full soils, all of one piece to be, 150 Of Nottingham a part, as Lester them is lent, From Bever's batning Vale, along the banks of Trent. Se on the other side, into the Set again, Where Severne tow'rds the sea from Shrewsbury doth strain, Twixt which and Aron's banks (where Arden* when of old, Her bushy curléd front, she bravely did uphold, 156 In state and glory stood) now of three several Shires, The greatest portions lie, upon whose earth appears That mighty Forest's foot, of Worstershire a part, Of Warwickeshire the like, which sometime was the heart 160 Of Arden that brave Nymph, yet woody here and there, Oft intermix'd with heaths, whose sand and gravel bear A turf more harsh and hard, where Stafford doth partake, In quality with those, as Nature strove to make Them of one self-same stuff, and mixture, as they lie, Which likewise in this tract, we here together tie.

From these recited parts to th' North, more high and bleak, Extended ye behold, the Mooreland and the Peake, From either's several site, in either's mighty waste, A sterner low'ring eye, that every way do cast

On their beholding hills, and countries round about; Whose soils as of one shape, appearing clean throughout. For Moreland which with heath most naturally doth bear, Her winter livery still, in summer seems to wear; As likewise doth the Peake, whose dreadful caverns found, And lead-mines, that in her, do naturally abound, Her superficies makes more terrible to show: So from her natural fount, as Severne down doth flow, The high Salopian Hills lift up their rising sails; Which Country as it is the near'st allied to Wales, In mountains so it most is to the same alike.

Now tow'rds the Irish Seas a little let us strike,
Where Cheshire (as her choice) with Lancashire doth lie
Along th' unlevell'd shores; this former to the eye,
In her complexion shows black earth with gravel mixt,
A wood-land and a plain indifferently betwixt,
A good fast-feeding grass, most strongly that doth breed:
As Lancashire no less excelling for her seed,
Although with heath, and fen, her upper parts abound;
As likewise to the Sea, upon the lower ground,
With mosses, fleets, and fells, she shows most wild and rough,

Whose turf, and square-cut peat, is fuel good enough.
So, on the North of Trent, from Nottingham above,
Where Sherwood her curl'd front, into the cold doth shove,
Light forest-land is found, to where the floating Dou,
In making tow'rds the Main, her Doneaster hath won,
Where Yorkshire's laid abroad, so many a mile extent,
To whom preceding times, the greatest circuit lent,
A Province, than a Shire, which rather seemeth: so
It incidently most variety doth show.

Here stony sterile grounds, there wondrous fruitful fields,
Here champaine, and there wood, it in abundance yields:
Th' We triding, and North, be mountainous and high,

But tow'rds the German Sea the East, more low doth lie. This Isle hath not that earth, of any kind elsewhere, But on this part or that epitomizéd here.

Tow'rds those Scotch-Irish Isles, upon that Sea again,
The rough Virgivian call'd, that tract which doth contain
Cold Cumberland, which yet wild Westmerland excells
For roughness, at whose point lies rugged Fournesse Fells, 210
Is fill'd with mighty moors, and mountains, which do make Her wild superfluous waste, as Nature sport did take
In heaths, and high-cleev'd hills, whose threatning fronts do dare

Each other with their looks, as though they would out-stare The starry eyes of heaven, which to out-face they stand. 215

From these into the East, upon the other hand,
The Bishopricke, and fair Northumberland do bear
To Scotland's bordering Tweed, which as the North elsewhere,
Not very fertile are, yet with a lovely face
Upon the Ocean look; which kindly doth imbrace
Those countries all along, upon the rising side,
Which for the batfull glebe, by nature them deni'd,
With mighty mines of coal, abundantly are blest,
By which this tract remains renown'd above the rest:
For what from her rich womb, each harbourous road receives.

Yet Hellidon not here, his lov'd description leaves,
Though now his darling Springs desir'd him to desist;
But say all what they can, he'll do but what he list.
As he the Surface thus, so likewise will he show,
The clownish Blazons, to each Country long ago,
Which those unlettered times, with blind devotion lent,
Before the Learned Maids our fountains did frequent,
To show the Muse can shift her habit, and she now,
Of Palatins that sung, can whistle to the plow;
And let the curious tax his clownry, with their skill
He recks not, but goes on, and say they what they will.

*Kent first in our account, doth to itself apply, (Quoth he) this Blazon first, Long Tails and Liberty. Sussex with Surrey say, Then let us lead home Logs. As Hamshire long for her, hath had the term of Hogs. 240 So Dorsetshire of long, they Dorsers us'd to call. Cornwall and Devonshire cry, We'll wrastle for a Fall. Then Somerset says, Set the Bandog on the Bull. And Glostershire again is blazon'd, Weigh thy Wooll. As Burkshire hath for hers, Lets to 't and toss the Ball. 245 And Wiltshire will for her, Get home and pay for all. Rich Buckingham doth bear the term of Bread and Beef, Where if you beat a L'sh, 'tis odds you start a Thief. So Hartford blazon'd is, The Club, and clowted Shoone, Thereto, I'll rise betime, and sleep again at Noon. 250 When Middlesex bids, Up to London let us go, And when our Market's done, we'll have a pot or two. As Essex hath of old been named, Calves and Stiles, Fair Suffolke, Maids and Milk, and Norfolke, Many Wiles. So Cambridge hath been call'd, Hold Nets, and let us win; 255 And Hantingdon, With Stilts we'll stalk through thick and thin. Northamptonshire of long hath had this Blazon, Lore Below the girdle all, but little else above. An outery Oxford makes, The Scholars have been here, And little though they paid, yet have they had good cheer. Quoth warlike Warwickshire, I'll hind the sturdy Bear, Quoth Worstershire again, And I will squirt the Pear. Then Staffordshire bids Stay, and I will beat the Fire, And nothing will I ask, but good will for my hire. Bean belly, Lestershire her attribute doth bear. And Bells and Bagpipes next, belong to Lincolneshire. Of Malt-horse, Bedfordshire long since the Blazon wan. And little Rutlandshire is terméd Raddleman. To Darby is assign'd the name of Wool and Lead.

As Nottingham's, of old (is common) Ale and Bread.

So Hereford for her says, Give me Woof and Warp.

And Shropshire saith in her, That Shins be ever sharp,
Lay wood upon the fire, reach hither me my Harp,
And whilst the black Bowl walks, we merrily will carp.

Old Cheshire is well-known to be the Chief of Men.

Fair Women doth belong to Lancashire agen.

The lands that over Ouze to Berwicke forth do bear,
Have for their Blazon had the Snaffle, Spur, and Spear.

Now Nen extremely griev'd those barbarous things to hear,

By Helidon her sire, that thus delivered were: 280 For as his eld'st, she was to passéd ages known, Whom by Aufona's name the Romans did renown. A word by them deriv'd of Avon, which of long, The Britans call'd her by, expressing in their tongue The full and general name of waters; wherefore she 285 Stood much upon her worth, and jealous grew to be, Lest things so low and poor, and now quite out of date, Should happily impair her dignity and state. Wherefore from him her sire immediately she hastes; And as she forth her course to Peterborough easts, She falleth in her way with Weedon, where 'tis said, Saint Werburge princely-born, a most religious maid, From those peculiar fields, by prayer the wild-geese drove, Thence through the champaine she lasciviously doth rove Tow'rds fair Northampton, which, whilst Nen was Avon call'd. Resum'd that happy name, as happily install'd Upon her Northern* side, where taking in a rill, Her long-impoverish'd banks more plenteously to fill, She flourishes in state, along the fruitful fields; Where whilst her waters she with wondrous pleasure yields,

To Wellingborough* comes, whose fountains in she takes, 301 Which quickening her again, immediately she makes To Owndle, which receives contractedly the sound From Avondale, t' express that River's lowest ground: To Peterborough thence she maketh forth her way, Where Welland hand in hand, goes on with her to sea; When Rockinghum, the Muse to her fair Forest brings, Thence lying to the North, whose sundry gifts she sings:

O dear and dainty Nymph, most gorgeously array'd, Of all the Dryads known, the most delicious Maid, 310 With all delights adorn'd, that any way beseem A Sylvan, by whose state we verily may deem A Deity in thee, in whose delightful bowres, The Fauns and Fayries make the longest days but hours, And joying in the soil, where thou assum'st thy seat, Thou to thy handmaid haste (thy pleasures to await), Fair Benéfield, whose care to thee doth surely cleave, Which bears a grass as soft, as is the dainty sleave, [deer, And thrumm'd so thick and deep, that the proud palmed Forsake the closer woods, and make their quiet levre In beds of platted fog, so eas'ly there they sit. A Forest and a Chase in everything so fit This Island hardly hath, so near allied that be;

Brave Nymph, such praise belongs to Benéfield and thee. 3.4 Whilst Rockingham was heard with these reports to ring, The Muse by making on tow'rds Welloud's ominous spring. With Kelmarsh't there is caught, for Coursing of the Hare, Which scorns that any place, should with her Plains compare:

Which in the proper-terms the Muse doth thus report:

The man whose vacant mind prepares him to the sport, 500

The Finder* sendeth out, to seek out nimble Wat, Which crosseth in the field, each furlong, every flat, Till he this pretty beast upon the form hath found, †Then viewing for the Course, which is the fairest ground, The Greyhounds forth are brought, for coursing then in case, And choicely in the slip, one leading forth a brace; The Finder puts her up, and gives her Coursers law. And whilst the eager dogs upon the Start do draw, She riseth from her seat, as though on earth she flew, Fore'd by some yelping Cutet to give the Greyhounds view, Which are at length let slip, when gunning out they go, 341 As in respect of them the swiftest wind were slow, When each man runs his horse, with fixed eyes, and notes Which dog first turns the Hare, which first the other cotes,$ They wrench her once or twice, ere she a turn will take, 345 What's off'red by the first, the other good doth make; And turn for turn again with equal speed they ply, Bestirring their swift feet with strange agility: A hard'ned ridge or way, when if the Hare do win, Then as shot from a bow, she from the dogs doth spin, 350 That strive to put her off, but when he cannot reach her, This giving him a cote, about again doth fetch her To him that comes behind, which seems the Hare to bear; But with a nimble turn she easts them both arrear: Till oft for want of breath, to fall to ground they make her, The Greyhounds both so spent, that they want breath to take her,

Here leave I whilst the Muse more serious things attends, And with my Course at Hare, my Canto likewise ends.

The fatal Welland from her springs, I ais Song to th' Isle of Ely brings: Our ancient English Saints reviews, Then in an oblique course contrives, The Rarities that Rutland shows, Which with this Canto she doth close.

HIS way, to that fair Fount of Welland hath us led, At Nashy* to the North, where from a second head Runs Avon, which along to Severne shapes her course.

But pliant Muse proceed, with our new-handled source, Of whom from Ages past, a prophecy there ran,† 5 (Which to this ominous Flood much fear and reverence wan) That she alone should drown all Holland, and should see Her Stamford, which so much forgotten seems to be; Renown'd for liberal Arts, as highly honoured there, As they in Cambridge are, or Oxford ever were; 10 Whereby she in herself a holiness suppos'd, fame

Both to the British first, then to the English name, For their abundant faith, and sanctimony known, Such as were hither sent, or naturally our own, It much her Genius griev'd, to have them now neglected, Whose piety so much those zealous times respected. Wherefore she with herself resolved, when that she To Peterborough came, where much she long'd to be, That in the wished view of Medhamsted, that Town, Which he the great'st of Saints doth by his name renown, She to his glorious Fane an off'ring as to bring, Of her dear Country's Saints, the Martyrologe would sing: *And therefore all in haste to Harborough she hied, Whence Lestershire she leaves upon the Northward side, At Rutland then arriv'd, where Stamford her sustains, By Deeping drawing out, to Lincolneshire she leans, 30 Upon her bank by North, against this greater throng, Northumptonshire to South still lies with her along, And now approaching near to this appointed place, [brace: Where she and Nen make show as though they would im-But only they salute, and each holds on her way, When holy Welland thus was wisely heard to say:

I sing of Saints, and yet my Song shall not be fraught With Miracles by them but feignéd to be wrought,
That they which did their lives so palpably belie,
To times have much impeach'd their holiness thereby:
Though fools (I say) on them, such poor impostures lay,
Have scandall'd them to ours, far foolisher than they,
Which think they have by this so great advantage got

Their venerable names from memory to blot,
Which truth can ne'er permit; and thou that art so pure, 45
The name of such a Saint that no way canst endure;
Know in respect of them to recompense that hate, [date:
The wretched'st thing, and thou have both one death and
From all vain worship too; and yet am I as free
As is the most precise, I pass not who he be.

Antiquity I love, nor by the world's despight,
I cannot be remov'd from that my dear delight.
This spoke, to her fair aid her sister Nen she wins,
When she of all her Saints, now with that man begins:

*The first that ever told Christ Crucified to us, 55 (By Paul and Peter sent) just Aristobulus, Renown'd in Holy Writ, a Labourer in the Word, For that most certain Truth, opposing fire and sword, By th' Britans murtheréd here, so unbelieving then. Next holy Joseph came, the mercifull'st of men, G0 The Saviour of mankind in Sepulchre that laid, That to the Britans was th' Apostle; in his aid Saint Durian, and with him Saint Fagan, both which were His scholars, likewise left their sacred Reliques here: All denizens of ours, t'advance the Christian state, At Glastenbury long that were commemorate. When Amphiball again our Martyrdom began In that most bloody reign of Dioclesian: This man into the truth that blessed Alban led (Our Proto-Martyr call'd) who strongly discipled 70 In Christian patience, learnt his tortures to appeare: His fellow-martyrs then, Stephen, and Socrates, At holy Alban's Town, their Festival should hold; So of that Martyr nam'd (which Ver'lam was of old), A thousand other Saints, whom Amphiball had taught, Flying the Pagan foe, their lives that strictly sought,

Saint Angule put to death, one of our holiest men, 85 At London, of that See, the godly Bishop then In that our Infant Church, so resolute was he. A second Martyr too grac'd London's ancient See, Though it were after long, good Voadine who reprov'd Proud Vortiger his King, unlawfully that lov'd 90 Another's wanton wife, and wrong'd his nuptial bed; For which by that stern Prince unjustly murthered, As he a Martyr died, is sainted with the rest. The third Saint of that See (though only he confest) Was Guithelme, unto whom those times that reverence gave, As he a place with them eternally shall have. 96 So Melior may they bring, the Duke of Cornwall's son, By his false brother's hands, to death who being done In hate of Christian Faith, whose zeal lest time should taint, As he a Martyr was, they justly made a Saint. 100 Those godly Romans then (who as mine Author saith)

Wan good King Lucius first t' imbrace the Christian Faith, Fugatius, and his friend Saint Damian, as they were Made denizens of ours, have their remembrance here: As two more (near that time, Christ Jesus that confess'd, 105 And that most lively faith, by their good works express'd) Saint Elvan with his peer Saint Midwin, who to win The Britans (com'n from Rome, where Christ'ned they had bin),

Converted to the Faith their thousands, whose dear grave, That Glastenbury grac'd, there their memorial have.

As they their sacred bones in Britain here bestow'd, So Britain likewise sent her Saints to them abroad:* Marsellus that just man, who having gatheréd in The scatteréd Christian Flock, instructed that had bin By holy Joseph here; to congregate he wan This justly-naméd Saint, this never-wearied man, Next to the Germans preach'd, till (void of earthly fear) By his courageous death, he much renown'd Trevere.

Then of our Native Saints, the first that died abroad; Beatus, next to him shall fitly be bestow'd, In Switzerland who preach'd, whom there those Paynims slew, When greater in their place, though not in faith, ensue Saint Lucius (call'd of us) the primer-christ'ned King, Of th' ancient Britons then, who led the glorious ring To all the Saxon Race, that here did him succeed, 125 Changing his regal robe to a religious weed, His rule in Britain left, and to Helretia hied. Where he a Bishop liv'd, a Martyr lastly died: As Constantine the Great, that godly Emperor, Here first the Christian Church that did to peace restore, 130 Whose ever-blessed birth (as by the power Divine). The Roman Empire brought into the British Line, Constantinople's Crown, and th' ancient Britans' glory. So other here we have to furnish up our Story, Saint Melon well-near, when the British Church began, (Even early in the reign of Rome's Valerian) Here leaving us for Rome, from thence to Roan was call'd, To preach unto the French, where soon he was install'd Her Bishop: Britain so may of her Gudwall vaunt, Who first the Flemings taught, whose Feast is held at Gaunt. So others forth she brought, to little Britain vow'd,

Saint Wenlocke, and with him Saint Sampson, both allow'd Apostles of that place, the first the Abbot sole Of Tawrae, and the last sate on the See of Dole: Where dying, Maglor then thereof was Bishop made,
Sent purposely from hence, that people to persuade,
To keep the Christian Faith: so Golvin gave we thither, Who sainted being there, we set them here together.

As of the weaker sex, that ages have enshrin'd Amongst the British dames, and worthily divin'd: 150 The Finder of the Cross Queen Helena doth lead: Who though Rome set a Crown on her emperial head, Yet in our Britain born, and bred up choicely here. Emerita the next, King Lucius' sister dear, Who in Helvetia with her martyréd brother died. 155 Bright Ursula the third, who undertook to guide Th' Eleven Thousand Maids to Little Britain sent, By seas and bloody men devouréd as they went: Of which we find these four have been for Saints preferr'd, (And with their Leader still do live incalender'd) 160 Saint Agnes, Cordula, Odillia, Florence, which With wondrous sumptuous shrines those ages did inrich At Cullen, where their lives most clearly are exprest, And yearly Feasts observ'd to them and all the rest.

But when it came to pass the Saxon powers had put

The Britans from these parts, and them o'er Severue shut,
The Christian Faith with her, then Cambria had alone,*
With those that it receiv'd (from this now England) gone,
Whose Cambrobritans so their Saints as duly brought,
T' advance the Christian Faith, effectually that wrought, 170
Their David (one deriv'd of th' royal British blood),
Who 'gainst Pelagius' false and damn'd opinions stood,
And turn'd Menenia's name to David's sacred See,
Th' Patron of the Welsh deserving well to be:

With Cadock, next to whom comes Canock, both which were Prince Brechan's sons, who gave the name to Brechocksheere; The first a Martyr made, a Confessor the other. So Clintanck, Brecknock's Prince, as from one self-same mother, A Saint upon that seat, the other doth ensue,

A Saint upon that seat, the other doth ensue,
Whom for the Christian Faith a Pagan soldier slew.
So Bishops can she bring, which of her Saints shall be,
As Asaph, who first gave that name unto that See;
Of Bangor, and may boast Saint David which her wan
Much reverence; and with these Owdock and Telean,
Both Bishops of Landaff, and Saints in their succession;
Two other following these, both in the same profession,
Saint Dubric whose report old Carleon yet doth carry,
And Elery in Northwales, who built a Monastery,
In which himself became the Abbot, to his praise,

And spent in alms and prayer the remnant of his days.

But leaving these Divin'd, to Decumun we come,
In Northwales who was crown'd with glorious Martyrdom.

Justinian, as that man a Sainted place deserv'd,
Who still to feed his soul, his sinful body sterv'd:
And for that height in zeal, whereto he did attain,
There by his fellow-Monks most cruelly was slain.
So Cambria, Beno bare; and Gildas, which doth grace
Old Bangar, and by whose learn'd writings we imbrace,
The knowledge of those times; the fruits of whose just pen,
Shall live for ever fresh, with all truth-searching men:

Then other, which for hers old Cambria doth aver, Saint Senan, and with him we set Saint Deiferre,
Then Tather will we take, and Chyned to the rest,
With Baruk, who so much the Isle of Bardsey blest
By his most powerful prayer, to solitude that liv'd,
And of all worldly care his zealous soul depriv'd.
Of these, some liv'd not long, some wondrous agéd were,
But in the mountains liv'd, all Hermits here and there.

O more than mortal men, whose faith and earnest prayers, 'Not only bare ye hence, but were those mighty stairs
By which you went to heaven, and GOD so clearly saw,
As this vain earthly pomp had not the power to draw
Your elevated souls, but once to look so low,
As those depresséd paths, wherein base worldlings go.
What mind doth not admire the knowledge of these men? 215
But zealous Muse return unto thy task agen.

These holy men at home, as here they were bestow'd, So Cambria had such too, as famous were abroad. Sophy King Gulick's son of Northwales, who had seen The Sepulchre three times, and more, seven times had been On pilgrimage at Rome, of Beniventum there 221 The painful Bishop made; by him so place we here, Saint Macklore, from Northwales to Little Britaine sent, That people to convert, who resolutely bent, Of Athelney in time the Bishop there became, 225 Which her first title chang'd, and took his proper name. So she her Virgins had, and vow'd as were the best: Saint Keyne Prince Brechan's child (a man so highly blest, That thirty born to him all Saints accounted were). Saint Inthwar so apart shall with these other bear, 230 Who out of false suspect was by her brother slain. Then Winifrid, whose name yet famous doth remain, Whose Fountain in Northwales intitled by her name, For moss, and for the stones that be about the same, Is sounded through this Isle, and to this latter age 235 Is of our Romists held their latest pilgrimage.

But when the Saxons here so strongly did reside,
And surely seated once, as owners to abide;
When nothing in the world to their desire was wanting,
Except the Christian Faith, for whose substantial planting,
*Saint Augustine from Rome was to this Island sent;
241

And coming through large France, arriving first in Kent, Converted to the faith King Ethelbert, till then Unchristenéd that had liv'd, with all his Kentishmen, And of their chiefest Town, now Canterbury call'd, The Bishop first was made, and on that See install'd. Four other, and with him for knowledge great in name, That in this mighty work of our conversion came, Lawrence, Melitus then, with Justus, and Honorius, In this great Christian work, all which had been laborious, 250 To venerable age, each coming in degree, Succeeded him again in Canterbury See, As Peter born in France, with these and made our own, And Pauline whose great zeal, was by his preaching shown. The first to Abbot's state, wise Austen did prefer, 255 And to the latter gave the See of Rochester: All canoniz'd for Saints, as worthy sure they were, For establishing the Faith, which was received here. Few Countries where our Christ had e'er been preachéd then. But sent into this Isle some of their godly men. 260 From Persia led by zeal, so Ive this Island sought. And near our Eastern fens a fit place finding, taught The Faith: which place from him the name alone derives, And of that sainted man since called is Saint-Ives; Such reverence to herself that time Devotion wan. 265 So sun-burnt Affrick sent us holy Adrian, Who preach'd the Christian Faith here nine and thirty year. An Abbot in this Isle, and to this Nation dear, That in our Country two Provincial Synods call'd. T' reform the Church that time with Heresies enthrall'd. 270 So Denmarke Henry sent t' encrease our holy store, Who falling in from thence upon our Northern shore In th' Isle of Cochet* liv'd, near to the mouth of Tune, In fasting as in prayer, a man so much divine,

That only thrice a week on homely cates he fed,

And three times in the week himself he silencéd,

That in remembrance of this most abstenious man,

Upon his blessed death the English men began,

By him to name their babes,* which it so frequent brings,

Which name hath honoured been by many English Kings. 280

So Burgundy to us three men most reverend bare, Amongst our other Saints that claim to have their share, Of which was Felix first, who in th' East-Saxon reign, Converted to the faith King Sigbert: him again Ensueth Anselme, whom Augusta sent us in,

And Hugh, whose holy life to Christ did many win, By Henryt th' Empress' son holp hither, and to have Him wholly to be ours, the See of Lincolne gave.

So Lumbardy to us, our reverend Lanfranc lent, For whom into this land King William Conqueror sent, 290 And Canterbury's See to his wise charge assign'd.

Nor France to these for hers was any whit behind, For Grimbald she us gave (as Peter long before, Who with Saint Austen came, to preach upon this shore) By Alfred hither call'd, who him an Abbot made, 295 Who by his godly life, and preaching did persuade, The Saxons to believe the true and quick'ning Word: So after long again she likewise did afford, Saint Osmond, whom the Sec of Salsbury doth own A Bishop once of hers, and in our conquest known, 300 When hither to that end their Norman William came; Remigius then, whose mind, that work of ours of fame, Rich Lincolne Minster shows, where he a Bishop sat, Which (it should seem) he built for men to wonder at. So potent were the powers of Church-men in those days. 305 Then Henry nam'd of Bloys, from France who cross'd the Seas.

With Stephen Earl of Bloys his brother, after King, In Winchester's rich See, who him establishing, He in those troublous times in preaching took such pain, As he by them was not canonized in vain.

As other Countries here, their holy men bestow'd; So Britain likewise sent* her Saints to them abroad, And into neighbouring France, our most religious went, Saint Clare that native was of Rochester in Kent, At Volcasyne came vow'd the French instructing there, So early ere the truth amongst them did appear, That more than half a God they thought that reverend man. Our Judock, so in France such fame our Nation wan For holiness, where long an Abbot's life he led At Pontoyse, and so much was honoured, that being dead, 320 And after threescore years (their latest period dated) His body taken up, was solemnly translated. As Ceofrid, that sometime of Wyremouth Abbot was, In his return from Rome, as he through France did pass, At Langres left his life, whose holiness even yet, Upon his reverend grave, in memory doth sit. Saint Alkwin so for ours, we English boast again, The Tutor that became to mighty Churlemaigne. That holy man, whose heart was so with goodness fill'd, As out of zeal he wan that mighty King to build That Academy now at Paris, whose foundation Through all the Christian world hath so renown'd that As well declares his wealth, that had the power to do it, As his most lively zeal, persuading him unto it. As Simon call'd the Saint of Burdens, which so wrought, 335 By preaching there the truth, that happily he brought The people of those parts, from Paganism, wherein Their unbelieving souls so long had nuzled bin. So in the Norman Rule, two most religious were,

Amongst ours that in France dispersed here and there, 240 Preach'd to that Nation long, Saint Hugh, who born our own, In our First Henry's rule sate on the See of Roan, Where reverenc'd he was long. Saint Edmund so again, Who banished from hence in our Third Henry's reign, There led an Hermit's life near Pontoyse (where before, 345 Saint Judock did the like), whose honour to restore, Religious Lewes there interr'd with wondrous cost, Of whose rich funeral France deservedly may boast. Then Main we add to these, an Abbot here of ours, To Little Britain sent, imploying all his pow'rs 350 To bring them to the Faith, which he so well effected, That since he as a Saint hath ever been respected.

As these of ours in France, so had we those did show In Germany, as well the Higher, as the Low, Their faith: In Freezelund first Saint Boniface our best, 355 Who of the See of Mentz, whilst there he sate possest, At Dockum had his death, by faithless Frizians slain, Whose Anniversaries there did after long remain. So Wigbert full of faith, and heavenly wisdom went Unto the self-same place, as with the same intent; 360 With Eglemond a man as great with God as he; As they agreed in life, so did their ends agree, Both by Radbodius slain, who rul'd in Frizia then: So in the sacred roll of our Religious men, In Freeze that preach'd the Faith, we of Saint Lullus read, 365 Who in the See of Mentz did Boniface succeed; And Willihad that of Bren, that sacred Seat supplied, So holy that him there, they halfly deified; With Marchelme, and with him our Plechelme, holy men, That to the Freezes now, and to the Saxons then, In Germany abroad the glorious Gospel spread, Who at their lives' depart, their bodies gathered, Were at old-Seell enshrin'd, their Obiits yearly kept;

Such as on them have had as many praises heapt,
That in their lives the truth as constantly confest,
As th' other that their faith by Martyrdom exprest.

In Freeze, as these of ours, their names did famous leave, Again so had we those as much renown'd in Cleave; Saint Swibert, and with him Saint Willick, which from hence, To Cleeve-land held their way, and in the Truth's defence sso Pawn'd their religious lives, and as they went together, So one and self-same place allotted was to either:

For both of them at Wert in Cleaveland seated were,

Saint Swibert Bishop was, Saint Willick Abbot there. So Guelderland again shall our most holy bring,

As Edilbert the son of Edilbald the King Of our South-Saxon Rule, incessantly that taught The Guelders, whose blest days unto their period brought, Unto his reverend corpse, old Harlen harbour gave; So Werenfrid again, and Otger both we have, 390 Who to those people preach'd, whose praise that country tells. What Nation names a Saint, for virtue that excells Saint German who for Christ his Bishopric forsook, And in the Netherlands most humbly him betook, From place to place to pass, the secrets to reveal, Of our dear Saviour's Death, and last of all to scal His doctrine with his blood; In Belgia so abroad, Saint Wynock in like sort, his blessed time bestow'd. Whose reliques Wormshault (yet) in Flanders hath reserv'd. Of these, th' rebellious flesh (to win them heaven) that sterv'd,

Saint Menigold, a man, who in his youth had been A soldier, and the French, and German wars had seen, A Hermit last became, his sinful soul to save, To whom good Arnulph, that most godly Emperor gave Some ground not far from Leedge, his Hermitage to set, 403 Whose floor when with his tears, he many a day had wet.

He for the Christian Faith upon the same was slain: So did th' Erwaldi there most worthily attain Their Martyrs' glorious types, to Ireland first approv'd, But after (in their zeal) as need requir'd remov'd, 410 They to Westphalia went, and as they brothers were, So they, the Christian Faith together preaching there, Th' old Pagan Sacons slew, out of their hatred deep To the true Faith, whose Shrines brave Cullen still doth keep. So Adler one of ours, by England set apart 415 For Germany, and sent that people to convert, Of Erford Bishop made, there also had his end. Saint Liphard likewise to our Martyrologe shall lend, Who having been at Rome on pilgrimage, to see The Reliques of the Saints, supposed there to be, 420 Returning by the way of Germany, at last, Preaching the Christian Faith, as he through Cambray past, The Pagan people slew, whose Reliques Huncourt hath; These others so we had, which trode the self-same path In Germany, which she most reverently imbrac'd. 425 Saint John a man of ours, on Salzburg's See was plac'd; Saint Willibald of Eist the Bishop so became, And Burchard English-born, the man most great of name, Of Witzburg Bishop was, at Hohemburg that rear'd The Monastery, wherein he richly was interr'd. So Mastreight unto her Saint Willibord did call, And seated him upon her See Episcopall, As two Saint Lebvins there amongst the rest are brought; Th' one o'er Isell's banks the ancient Saxons taught: At Over-Isell rests, the other did apply, 435 The Gueldres, and by them interr'd at Deventry. Saint Wynibald again, at Hidlemayne enjoy'd The Abbacy, in which his godly time employ'd In their conversion there, which long time him withstood.

Saint Gregory then, with us sprung of the Royal blood,

And son to him whom we the elder Edward style, Both court and country left, which he esteeméd vile, Which Germany receiv'd, where he at Myniard led A strict monastic life, a Saint alive and dead.

So had we some of ours for Italy were prest, 445 As well as these before, sent out into the East. King Inus having done so great and wondrous things, As well might be suppos'd the works of sundry Kings, Erecting beauteous fanes, and monuments so fair, As Monarchs have not since been able to repair, 450 Of many that he built, the least, in time when they Have (by weak men's neglect) been fall'n into decay: This Realm by him enrich'd, he poverty profess'd, In pilgrimage to Rome, where meekly he deceas'd, As Richard the dear son to Lothar King of Kent, 455 When he his happy days religiously had spent, And feeling the approach of his declining age, Desirous to see Rome in holy pilgrimage, Into thy country com'n at Lewa, left his life, Whose miracles there done, yet to this day are rife. 460 The Patron of that place, so Thuscany in thee, At fair Mount-fluscon still the memory shall be Of holy Thomas there most reverently interrid, Who sometime to the See of Hereford preferr'd; Thence travelling to Rome, in his return bereft 465 His life by sickness, there to thee his body left.

Yet Italy gave not these honours all to them
That visited her Rome, but from Jerusalem,
Some coming back through thee, and yielding up their spirits,
On thy rich earth receiv'd their most deserved merits.

O Naples, as thine own, in thy large territory,
Though to our country's praise, yet to thy greater glory,
Even to this day the Shrines religiously dost keep,
Of many a blesséd Saint which in thy lap doth sleep!

As Eleutherius, com'n from visiting the Tomb, 475 Thou gay'st to him at Arke in thy Apulia room To set his holy cell, where he an hermit died, Canonizéd her Saint; so hast thou glorified Saint Gerrard, one of ours (above the former grac'd), In such a sumptuous shrine at Galinaro plac'd; 480 At Sancto Padro so, Saint Fulke hath ever fame, [name, Which from that reverend man 't should seem deriv'd the His reliques there reserv'd; so holy Ardwin's shrine Is at Ceprano kept, and honoured as divine, For miracles, that there by his strong faith were wrought. 455 'Mongst these selected men, the Sepulchre that sought, And in thy realm arriv'd, their blesséd souls resign'd: Our Bernard's body yet at Arpine we may find, Until this present time, her patronizing Saint.

So countries more remote; with ours we did acquaint, 400 As Richard for the fame his holiness had won, And for the wondrous things that through his prayers were From this his native home into Calabria call'd, And of Saint Andrewe's there the Bishop was install'd, For whom she hath profess'd much reverence to this land: Saint William with this man, a parallel may stand, 496 Through all the Christian world accounted so divine, That travelling from hence to holy Palestine, Desirous that most blest Jerusalem to see, (In which the Saviour's self so oft vouchsaf'd to be) 500 Prior of that holy house by suffrages related, To th' Sepulchre of Christ, which there was dedicated; To Tyre in Syria thence remov'd in little space, And in less time ordain'd Archbishop of that place; That God-inspiréd man, with heavenly goodness fill'd, 505 A Saint amongst the rest deservedly is held.

Yet Italy, nor France, nor Germany, those times Implov'd not all our men, but into colder climes,

They wand'red through the world, their countries that forsook.

So Sigfrid sent from hence, devoutly undertook
Those Pagans wild and rude, of Gothia to convert,
Who having laboured long, with danger oft ingirt,
Was in his reverend age for his deserved fee,
By Olans King of Goths, set on Vexovia's See.
To Norway, and to those great North-East countries far; 515
So Gotebald gave himself holding a Christian war
With Paynims, nothing else but heathenish rites that knew.

As Suethia to herself these men most reverend drew, Saint Ulfrid of our Saints, as famous there as any, Nor scarcely find we one converting there so many. 520 And Henry in those days of Oxsto Bishop made. The first that Swethen King, which ever did persuade, On Finland to make war, to force them by the sword, When nothing else could serve to hear the powerful Word; With Eskill thither sent, to teach that barbarous nation, 525 Who on the Passion-day, there preaching on the Passion, T' express the Saviour's love to mankind, taking pain, By cruel Paynims' hands was in the pulpit slain, Upon that blesséd day Christ died for sinful man, Upon that day for Christ, his Martyr's crown he wan. So David drawn from hence into those farther parts, By preaching, who to pierce those Paynims' hard'ned hearts, Incessantly proclaim'd Christ Jesus, with a cry Against their heathen gods, and blind idolatry. Into those colder climes to people beastly rude, So others that were ours courageously pursued, The planting of the Truth, in zeal three most profound, The relish of whose names by likeliness of sound. Both in their lives and deaths, a likeliness might show, As Unaman we name, and Shanaman that go, 546 With Wynaman their friend, which gladly martyréd were In Gothland, whilst they taught with Christian patience there.

Nor those from us that went, nor those that hither came From the remotest parts, were greater yet in name, Than those residing here on many a goodly See, 545 (Great Bishops in account, now greater Saints that be) Some such selected ones for piety and zeal, As to the wretched world, more clearly could reveal, How much there might of GOD in mortal man be found In charitable works, or such as did abound, 550 Which by their good success in after-times were blest, Were then related Saints, as worthier than the rest.

*Of Canterbury here with those I will begin, That first Archbishop's See, on which there long hath bin So many men devout, as rais'd that Church so high, 555 Much reverence and have won their holy hierarchy: Of which he first that did with goodness so inflame The hearts of the devout (that from his proper name) As one (even) sent from GOD, the souls of men to save,' The title unto him, of Deodat they gave. 560 The Bishops Brightwald next and Tatwin in we take, Whom time may say, that Saints it worthily did make Succeeding in that See directly even as they, Here by the Muse are plac'd, who spent both night and day By doctrine, or by deeds, instructing, doing good, In raising them were fall'n, or strength'ning them that stood.

Then Odo the Severe, who highly did adorn
That See (yet being of unchristened parents born, Whose country Denmarke was, but in East England dwelt),
He being but a child, in his clear bosom felt 570
The most undoubted truth, and yet unbaptiz'd long;
But as he grew in years, in spirit so growing strong:
And as the Christian Faith this holy man had taught,

He likewise for that Faith in sundry battles fought. So Dunstan as the rest arose through many Sees, 575 To this Arch-type at last ascending by degrees, There by his power confirm'd, and strongly credit won, To many wondrous things, which he before had done. To whom when (as they say) the Devil once appear'd, This man so full of faith, not once at all afeard. 580 Strong conflicts with him had, in miracles most great. As Egelnoth again much grac'd that sacred seat, Who for his godly deeds surnamed was the Good. Not boasting of his birth, though com'n of Royal blood: For that, nor at the first, a Monk's mean cowl despis'd, 585 With winning men to GOD, who never was suffic'd. These men before exprest: so Eadsine next ensues, To propagate the Truth, no toil that did refuse; In Harald's time who liv'd, when William Conqueror came, For holiness of life, attain'd unto that fame, 590 That soldiers fierce and rude, that pity never knew, Were suddenly made mild, as changed in his view. This man with those before, most worthily related Arch-saints, as in their Sees Arch-bishops consecrated. Saint Thomas Becket then, which Rome so much did hery, 595 As to his Christ'ned name it added Canterbury; There to whose sumptuous Shrine the near succeeding ages, So mighty off'rings sent, and made such pilgrimages, Concerning whom, the world since then hath spent much breath. And many questions made both of his life and death: 600

And many questions made both of his life and death:

1 f he were truly just, he hath his right; if no,

Those times were much to blame, that have him reckon'd so.

Then these from Yorke ensue, whose lives as much have grae'd

That See, as these before in Canterbury plac'd: Saint Wilfrid of her Saints, we then the first will bring, 605 Who twice by Egfrid's ire, the stern Northumbrian King, Expuls'd his sacred Seat, most patiently it bare, The man for sacred gifts almost beyond compare. Then Bosa next to him as meek and humble-hearted. As the other full of grace, to whom great GOD imparted 610 His mercies sundry ways, as age upon him came. And next him followeth John, who likewise bare the name Of Beverley, where he most happily was born, Whose holiness did much his native place adorn, Whose vigils had by those devouter times bequests 615 The ceremonies due to great and solemn Feasts. So Oswald of that seat, and Cedwall sainted were, Both reverenc'd and renown'd Archbishops, living there, The former to that See, from Worcester transferr'd, Deceased, was again at Worcester interr'd: 620 The other in that See a sepulchre they chose, And did for his great zeal amongst the Saints dispose. As William by descent com'n of the Conqueror's strain, Whom Stephen ruling here did in his time ordain Archbishop of that See, among our Saints doth fall, 625 Deriv'd from those two Seats, styl'd Archiepiscopall.

Next these Arch-Sees of ours. now London place doth take, Which had those, of whom time Saints worthily did make. As Ceda (brother to that reverend Bishop Chad, At Lichfield in those times, his famous seat that had), 430 Is sainted for that See amongst our reverend men, From London though at length remov'd to Lestingen, A monastery, which then he richly had begun. Him Erkenvald ensues th' East English Offa's son, His father's kingly court, who for a crosier fled, 435 Whose works such fame him won for holiness, that dead, Time him enshrin'd in Paul's (the mother of that See), Which with revenues large, and privileges he Had wondrously endow'd; to goodness so affected,

That he those Abbeys great, from his own power crected 610 At Chertsey near to Thames, and Barking famous long. So Roger hath a room in these our Sainted throng, Who by his words and works so taught the way to heaven, As that great name to him sure was not vainly given.

With Winchester again proceed we, which shall store
Us with as many Saints, as any See (or more)
Of whom we yet have sung; as Heada there we have,
Who by his godly life, so good instructions gave,
As teaching that the way to make men to live well,
Example us assur'd, did preaching far excell.
Our Swithen then ensues, of him why ours I say,
Is that upon his Feast, his dedicated day,
As it in harvest haps, so plow-men note thereby,
Th' ensuing forty days be either wet or dry,
As that day falleth out, whose miracles may we Believe those former times, he well might sainted be.

So Frithstan for a Saint incalendred we find, With Brithstan not a whit the holiest man behind. Canoniz'd, of which two, the former for respect Of virtues in him found, the latter did elect 660 To sit upon his See, who likewise dying there, To Ethelbald again succeeding did appear, The honour to a Saint, as challenging his due. These formerly express'd, then Elplug doth ensue; Then Ethelvald, of whom this alms-deed hath been told, 665 That in a time of dearth his Church's plate he sold, T' relieve the needy poor; the Church's wealth (quoth he) May be again repair'd, but so these cannot be. With these before express'd, so Britvald forth she brought, By faith and earnest prayer his miraeles that wrought, That such against the Faith, that were most stony-hearted, By his religious life, have lastly been converted. This man, when as our Kings so much decayed were,

As 'twas suppos'd their Line would be extinguish'd here, Had in his dream reveal'd, to whom All-doing Heaven, 675 The Sceptre of this land in after-times had given; Which in prophetic sort by him deliveréd was, And as he stoutly spake, it truly came to pass.

So other Southern Sees, here either less or more, Have likewise had their Saints, though not alike in store. 680 Of Rochester, we have Saint Ithamar, being then In those first times, first of our native English men Residing on that Seat; so as an aid to her, But singly sainted thus, we have of Chichester, Saint Richard, and with him Saint Gilbert, which do stand 685 Enroll'd amongst the rest of this our mitred Band, Of whom such wondrous things, for truths delivered are, As now may seem to stretch our strait belief too far.

And Cimbert, of a Saint had the deserved right,
His yearly Obiits long, done in the Isle of Wight;
A Bishop, as some say, but certain of what See,
It scarcely can be prov'd, nor is it known to me.

690

Whilst Sherburne was a See, and in her glory shone, And Bodmin likewise had a Bishop of her own, Whose Diocese that time contained Cornwall; these 695 Had as the rest their Saints, derivéd from their Sees: The first, her Adelme had, and Hamond, and the last Had Patrock, for a Saint that with the other past; That were it fit for us but to examine now Those former times, these men for Saints that did allow, 700 And from our reading urge, that others might as well Related be for Saints, as worthy every deal. This scrutiny of ours, would clear that world thereby, And show it to be void of partiality, That each man holy call'd, was not canoniz'd here, 705 But such whose lives by death had trial many a year. That See at Norwich now establish'd (long not stirr'd)

710

At Eltham planted first, to Norwich then transferr'd Into our bead-roll here, her Humbert in doth bring, (A counsellor that was to that most martyréd King Saint Edmund) who in their rude massacre then slain, The title of a Saint, his Martyrdom doth gain.

So Hereford hath had on her Cathedral Seat,
Saint Leofgar, a man by Martyrdom made great,
Whom Griffith Prince of Wales, that town which did subdue,
(O most unhallowed deed) unmercifully slew.

So Worster (as those Sees here sung by us before), Hath likewise with her Saints renown'd our native shore: Saint Egwin as her eld'st, with Woolstan as the other, Of whom she may be proud, to say she was the Mother, 720 The Church's champions both, for her that stoutly stood.

Lichfield hath those no whit less famous, nor less good:
The first of whom is that most reverend Bishop Chad,
In those religious times for holiness that had,
The name above the best that livéd in those days,
That stories have been stuff'd with his abundant praise;
Who on the See of Yorke being formerly install'd,
Yet when back to that place Saint Wilfrid was recall'd,
The Seat to that good man he willingly resign'd,
And to the quiet Close of Lichfield him confin'd.

So Sexulfe after him, then Owen did supply,
Her trine of reverend men, renown'd for sanctity.

As Lincolne to the Saints, our Robert Grosted lent,
A perfect godly man, most learn'd and eloquent,
Than whom no Bishop yet walk'd in more upright ways, 732
Who durst reprove proud Rome, in her most prosperous days,
Whose life, of that next age the justice well did show,
Which we may boldly say, for this we clearly know,
Had Innocent the Fourth the Church's suffrage led,
This man could not at Rome have been canonized.

Her sainted Bishop John, so Ely adds to these,

Yet never any one of all our several Sees Northumberland like thine, have to these times been blest, Which sent into this Isle so many men profest, Whilst Hagustald had then a Mother-Church's style, 745 And Lindisferne of us now call'd the Holy-Isle, Was then a See before that Durham was so great, And long ere Carleill came to be a Bishop's seat. Aidan, and Finan both, most happily were found Northumberland in thee, even whilst thou didst abound With Paganism, which them thy Oswin that good King, is people to convert did in from Scotland bring: is Etta likewise hers, from Malrorse that arose, being Abbot of that place, whom the Northumbers chose 'he Bishopric of Ferne, and Hagustald to hold. 755 and Cuthbert of whose life such Miracles are told, As Story scarcely can the truth thereof maintain, 'If th' old Scotch-Irish Kings descended from the strain, To whom since they belong, I from them here must swerve, And till I thither come, their holiness reserve, Proceeding with the rest, that on those Sees have shone, As Edbert after these born naturally our own. The next which in that See Saint Cuthbert did succeed, His Church then built of wood, and thatch'd with homely reed.

He builded up of stone, and coveréd fair with lead,
Who in Saint Cuthbert's grave they buried being dead,
As his sad people he at his departure will'd.
So Highald after him a Saint is likewise held,
Who when his proper See, as all the Northern shore,
Were by the Danes destroy'd, he not dismay'd the more,
To But making shift to get out of the cruel flame,
His Clergy carrying forth, preach'd wheresoe'er he came.
And Alwyn who the Church at Durham now, begun,

And Alwyn who the Church at Durham now, begun Which place before that time was strangely over-run

With shrubs, and men for corn that plot had lately ear'd, 775 Where he that goodly Fane to after ages rear'd, And thither his late Seat from *Lindisferne** translated, Which his Cathedral Church by him was consecrated.

So Accu we account 'mongst those which have been call'd The Saints of this our See, which sate at Hagenstuld, 780 Of which he Bishop was, in that good age respected, In Calendars preserv'd, in th' Catalogues neglected, Which since would seem to show the Bishops as they came: Then Edilwald, which some (since) Ethelwoolph do name, At Durham by some men supposéd to reside 785 More rightly, but by some at Carleill justified, The first which rul'd that See, which Beauclerket did prefer, Much gracing him, who was his only Confessor. Nor were they Bishops thus related Saints alone; Northumberland, but thou (besides) hast many a one, 790 Religious Abbots, Priests, and holy Hermits then, Canonizéd as well as thy great Mitred men: Two famous Abbots first are in the rank of these, Whose Abbeys touch'd the walls of thy two ancient Sees.

Thy Roysill (in his time the tutelage that had
Of Cullibert that great Saint, whose hopes then but a lad,
Express'd in riper years how greatly he might merit
The man who had from GOD a prophesying spirit,
Foretelling many things; and growing to be old,
His very hour of death, was by an Angel told.
At Malroyes this good man his Sainting well did earn,
Saint Oswald his again at holy Lindisferne,
With Ire a godly Priest, suppos'd to have his lere
Of Cullibert, and with him was Herbert likewise there
His fellow-pupil long (who as mine Author saith)

* An Isle near to Scotland, lying into the German Ocean, since that called Holy Island, as you may read in the next page following.

† Henry the First.

810

So great opinion had, of Cuthbert and his faith, That at one time and place, he with that holy man, Desir'd of GOD to die, which by his prayer he wan.

Our venerable Bede so forth that country brought, And worthily so nam'd, who of those ages sought The truth to understand, impartially which he Deliveréd hath to time, in his records that we, Things left so far behind, before us still may read, 'Mongst our canoniz'd sort, who calléd is Saint Bede.

A sort of Hermits then, by thee to light are brought, 815 Who liv'd by alms, and prayer, the world respecting nought. Our Edilwald the Priest, in Ferne (now Holy Isle) Which standeth from the firm to sea nine English mile, Sate in his reverend Cell, as Godrick thou canst show, His head and beard as white as swan or driven snow, 820 At Finchall threescore years, a Hermit's life to lead; Their solitary way in thee did Alrick tread, Who in a forest near to Carleill, in his age, Bequeath'd himself to his more quiet Hermitage. Of Wilgusse, so in thee Northumberland we tell, 825 Whose most religious life hath merited so well, (Whose blood thou boasts to be of thy most royal strain) That Alkwin, Master to that mighty Charlemaigne, In verse his Legend writ, who of our holy men, He him the subject chose for his most learnéd pen. 830 So Oswyn, one of thy dear country thou canst show, To whom as for the rest for him we likewise owe Much honour to thy earth, this godly man that gave, Whose reliques that great House of Lesting long did save, To einders till it sank: so Benedict by thee, 835 We have amongst the rest, for Saints that reckoned be, Of Wyremouth worshipp'd long, her Patron buried there, In that most goodly Church, which he himself did rear. Saint Thomas so to us Northumberland thou lent'st, Whom up into the South, thou from his country sent'st; 840 For sanctity of life, a man exceeding rare, Who since that of his name so many Saints there are, This man from others more, that times might understand, They to his Christenéd name added Northumberland.

Nor in one country thus our Saints confinéd were, But through this famous Isle disperséd here and there: As Yorkshire sent us in Saint Robert to our store, At Knarsborough most known, whereas he long before His blesséd time bestow'd; then one as just as he, (If credit to those times attributed may be) 850 Saint Richard with the rest deserving well a room, Which in that country once, at Hampoole had a tomb. Religious Alred so, from Rydall we receive, The Abbot, who to all posterity did leave, The fruits of his staid faith, delivered by his pen. Not of the least desert amongst our holiest men, One Eusac then we had, but where his life he led, That doubt I, but am sure he was canonized, And was an Abbot too, for sanctity much fam'd.

Then Woolsey will we bring, of Westminster so nam'd, see And by that title known, in power and goodness great; And meriting as well his Sainting, as his Seat. So have we found three Johns, of sundry places here, Of which (three reverend men) two famous Abbots were. The first Saint Alban's show'd, the second Lewes had, see Another godly John we to these former add, To make them up a trine (the name of Saints that won) Who was a Yorkshire man, and Prior of Berlington.

So Biren can we boast, a man most highly blest
With the title of a Saint, whose ashes long did rest
At Dorchester, where he was honoured many a day;
But of the place he held, books diversely dare say,
As they of Gilbert do, who founded those Divines,

Monasticks all that were, of him nam'd Gilbertines:
To which his Order here, he thirteen Houses built,
When that most thankful time, to show he had not spilt
His wealth on it in vain, a Saint hath made him here,
At Sempringham enshrin'd, a town of Lincolneshire.

Of sainted Hermits then, a company we have, To whom devouter times this veneration gave: 880 As Gwir in Cornwall kept his solitary Cage, And Neoth by Hunstock there, his holy Hermitage, As Guthlake, from his youth, who liv'd a soldier long, Detesting the rude spoils, done by the arméd throng, The mad tumultuous world contemptibly forsook, 885 And to his quiet Cell by Crowland him betook, Free from all public crowds, in that low fenny ground. As Bertiline again, was near to Stafford found: Then in a forest there, for solitude most fit,. Blest in a Hermit's life, by there enjoying it. 890 An Hermit Arnulph so in Bedfordshire became. A man austere of life, in honour of whose name, Time after built a town, where this good man did live, And did to it the name of Arnulphsbury give. These men, this wicked world respected not a hair, 895 But true professors were of poverty and pray'r. [style Amongst these men which times have honoured with the

Of Confessors (made Saints), so every little while,
Our Martyrs have com'n in, who sealed with their blood,
That Faith which th' other preach'd, 'gainst them that it withstood;

900

As Alnoth, who had liv'd a herdsman, left his seat,
Though in the quiet fields, whereas he kept his neat,
And leaving that his charge, he left the world withall,
An Anchorite and became, within a cloyst'red wall,
Inclosing up himself, in pray'r to spend his breath,
But was too soon (alas) by Pagans put to death.

Then Woolstan, one of these, by his own kinsman slain At Eusham, for that he did zealously maintain The verity of Christ. As Thomas, whom we call Of Dover, adding Monk, and Martyr therewithall; 910 For that the barbarous Danes he bravely did withstand, From ransacking the Church, when here they put on land, By them was done to death, which rather he did choose, Than see their heathen hands those holy things abuse.

Two Boys of tender age, those elder Saints ensue,
Of Norwich William was, of Lincolne little Hugh,
Whom th' unbelieving Jews (rebellious that abide)
In mockery of our Christ at Easter crucified,
Those times would every one should their due honour have,
His freedom or his life, for Jesus Christ that gave.

So Willshire with the rest her Hermit Ulfrick hath Related for a Saint, so famous in the Faith, That sundry ages since, his Cell have sought to find, At Hasselbury, who had his Obiits him assign'd.

So had we many Kings* most holy here at home, As men of meaner rank, which have attain'd that room: Northumberland, thy seat with Saints did us supply Of thy religious Kings; of which high hierarchy Was Edwin, for the Faith by heathenish hands inthrall'd, Whom Penda which to him the Welsh Cadwallyn call'd. Without all mercy slew: But he alone not died By that proud Mercian King, but Penda yet beside, Just Oswald likewise slew, at Oswaldstree, who gave That name unto that place, as though time meant to save His memory thereby, there suff'ring for the Faith, 935 As one whose life deserv'd that memory in death. So likewise in the Roll of these Northumbrian Kings. With those that Martyrs were, so forth that country brings Th' anointed Oswin next, in Deira to ensue,

Whom Osray that brute King of wild Bernitia slew:

140

Two kingdoms, which whilst then Northumberland remain'd In greatness, were within her larger bounds contain'd;

This kingly Martyr so, a Saint was rightly crown'd.

As Alkmond one of hers for sanctity renown'd,

King Alred's Christ'ned son, a most religious Prince,

145

Whom when the Heathenish here by no means could convince,

(Their Paganism apace declining to the wane) At Darby put to death, whom in a goodly Fane. Call'd by his glorious name, his corpse the Christians laid. What fame deserv'd your faith (were it but rightly weigh'd). You pious Princes then, in godliness so great; Why should not full-mouth'd Fame your praises oft repeat? So Ethelwulph her King, Northumbria notes again, In Martyrdom the next, though not the next in reign, Whom his false subjects slew, for that he did deface The heathenish Saxon gods, and bound them to embrace The lively quick'ning Faith, which then began to spread. So for our Saviour Christ, as these were martyred: There other holy Kings were likewise, who confest, Which those most zealous times have sainted with the rest. King Alfred that his Christ he might more surely hold. 961 Left his Northumbrian Crown, and soon became encowl'd, At Malroyse, in the land, whereof he had been King. So Egbert to that Prince, a parallel we bring, To Oswoolph his next heir, his kingdom that resign'd. 965 And presently himself at Lindisferne confin'd. Contemning courtly state, which earthly fools adore: So Ceonulph again as this had done before, In that religious House, a cloist'red man became. Which many a blessed Saint hath honour'd with the name.

Nor those Northumbrian Kings the only Martyrs were, 971 That in this Seven-fold Rule the sceptres once did bear. But that the Mercian reign, which Pagan Princes long Did terribly infest, had some her Lords among,
To the true Christian Faith much reverence which did add
Our Martyrologe to help: so happily she had 976

Rufin, and Ulfud, sons to Wulphere, for desire
They had t' imbrace the Faith, by their most cruel sire
Were without pity slain, long ere to manhood grown,
Whose tender bodies had their burying rites at Stone.*

So Kenelme, that the King of Mercia should have been,
Before his first seven years he fully out had seen,
Was slain by his own Guard, for fear lest waxing old,
That he the Christian Faith undoubtedly would hold.
So long it was ere truth could Paganism expell.

Then Fremund, Offa's son, of whom times long did tell, Such wonders of his life and sanctity, who fled His father's kingly court, and after meekly led An hermit's life in Wales, where long he did remain In penitence and prayer, till after he was slain

By cruel Oswaye's hands, the most inveterate foe, The Christian Faith here found: so Etheldred shall go With these our martyréd Saints, though only he confest, Since he of Mercia was, a King who highly blest Fair Bardney, where his life religiously he spent,

And meditating Christ, thence to his Saviour went.

Nor our West-Saxon reign was any whit behind Those of the other rules (their best) whose zeal we find, Amongst those sainted Kings, whose fames are safeliest kept: As Cedwall, on whose head such praise all times have heapt, That from a heathen prince, a holy pilgrim turn'd, Repenting in his heart against the Truth t' have spurn'd, To Rome on his poor feet his patience exercis'd, And in the Christian Faith there humbly was baptiz'd. So Ethelwoolph, who sat on Cedwall's ancient seat.

A town in Staffordshire.

For charitable deeds, who almost was as great,
As any English King, at Winchester enshrin'd,
A man amongst our Saints, most worthily divin'd.
Two other Kings as much our Martyrologe may sted,
Saint Edward, and with him comes in Saint Ethelred,
By Alfreda, the first, his stepmother was slain,
That her most lovéd son young Ethelbert might reign:
The other in a storm, and deluge of the Dane,
For that he Christ'ned was, receiv'd his deadly bane;
Both which with wondrous cost, the English did inter,
At Wynburne this first Saint, the last at Winchester,
Where that West-Saxon prince, good Alfred buried was,
Among our Sainted Kings, that well deserves to pass.

Nor were these Western Kings, of the old Saxon strain, More studious in those times, or stoutlier did maintain 1020 The Truth, than these of ours, the Angles of the East, Their near'st and dear'st allies, which strongly did invest The Island* with their name, of whose most holy Kings, Which justly have deserv'd their high canonizings, Are Siafrid, whose dear death him worthily hath crown'd, 1025 And Edmund in his end, so wondrously renown'd, For Christ's sake suff'ring death, by that blood-drowning To whom those times first built that City† and that Fane, Whose ruins Suffolke yet can to her glory show, When she will have the world of her past greatness know. 1030 As Ethelbert again allur'd with the report Of more than earthly pomp, than in the Mercian court, From the East-Angles went, whilst mighty Offa reign'd; Where for he Christ'ned was, and Christian-like abstain'd To idolatrize with them, fierce Quenred, Offa's Queen Most treacherously him slew out of th' inveterate spleen She bare unto the Faith, whom we a Saint adore.

So Edwald brother to Saint Edmund, sung before, A Confessor we call, whom past times did inter,

At Dorcester by Tame (now in our Calendar).

Amongst those kingdoms here, so Kent account shall yield Of three of her best blood, who in this Christian field Were mighty, of the which, King Ethelbert shall stand The first; who having brought Saint Augustine to land, Himself first Christ'ned was, by whose example then, The Faith grew after strong amongst his Kentishmen. As Ethelbrit again, and Ethelred his peer, To Edbald King of Kent, who natural nephews were, For Christ there suff'ring death, assume them places high, Amongst our martyréd Saints, commemorate at Wye. To these two brothers, so two others come again, And of as great descent in the Southscrian strain: Arwaldi of one name, whom ere King Cedwall knew The true and lively l'aith, he tyrannously slew: Who still amongst the Saints have their deserved right, 1055 Whose vigils were observed (long) in the Isle of Wight. Rememb'red too the more, for being of one name, As of th' East-Saron line, King Sebba so became A most religious monk, at London, where he led A strict retired life, a Saint alive and dead. Related for the like, so Edgar we admit, That King, who over eight did solely monarch sit, And with our holiest Saints for his endowments great, Bestow'd upon the Church. With him we likewise seat That sumptuous-shrined King, good Edward, from the rest Of that renowned name, by Confessor exprest.

To these our sainted Kings, rememb'red in our Song, *Those Maids and widowed Queens, do worthily belong. Incloyst'red that became, and had the self-same style, For fasting, alms, and prayer, renownéd in our Isle,

As those that forth to France, and Germany we gave,
For holy charges there; but here first let us have
Our Maid-made-Saints at home, as Hilderlie, with her
We Theorid think most fit, for whom those times aver,
A virgin strictlier vow'd, hath hardly livéd here.

Saint Wulfshild then we bring, all which of Barking were,
And reckon'd for the best, which most that House did grace,

The last of which was long the Abbess of that place. So Werburg, Wulphere's child (of Mercia that had been A persecuting King), by Ermineld his Queen, 1080 At Ely honouréd is, where her dear mother late, A recluse had remain'd, in her sole widow'd state: Of which good Audry was King Ina's daughter bright, Reflecting on those times so clear a vestal light, As many a virgin-breast she fired with her zeal, 1085 The fruits of whose strong faith, to ages still reveal The glory of those times, by liberties* she gave, By which those Eastern Shires their privileges have. Of holy Audry's too, a sister here we have, Saint Withburg, who herself to contemplation gave, 1090 At Deerham in her cell, where her due hours she kept, Whose death with many a tear in Norfolke was bewept.

And in that Isle again, which beareth Ely's name,
At Ramsey, Merwin so a veiled maid became Amongst our Virgin-Saints, where Elfled is enroll'd,
The daughter that is nam'd of noble Ethelwold,
A great East-Anglian Earl, of Ramsey Abbess long,
So of our Maiden-Saints, the female sex among.
With Milburg, Mildred comes, and Milwid, daughters dear,
To Mervald, who did then the Mercian sceptre bear.
At Wenlock, Milburg died (a most religious maid,
Of which great Abbey she the first foundation laid:

And Thanet as her Saint (even to this age) doth hery Her Mildred. Milwid was the like at Canterbury.

Nor in this utmost Isle of Thanet may we pass,
Saint Eadburg Abbess there, who the dear daughter was,
To Ethelbert her lord, and Kent's first Christened King,
Who in this place most fitt'st we with the former bring,
Translated (as some say) to Flanders: but that I,
As doubtful of the truth, here dare not justify.

King Edgar's sister so, Saint Edith, place may have With these our Maiden-Saints, who to our Powlsworth gave Immunities most large, and goodly livings laid.
Which Modwen, long before, a holy Irish maid, Had founded in that place, with most devout intent.

As Eanswine, Eadwald's child, one of the Kings of Kent, At Foulkston found a place (given by her father there) In which she gave herself to abstinence and prayer.

Of the West-Saxon rule, born to three several Kings, Four holy virgins more the Muse in order brings: 1120 Saint Ethelaive the child to Alfred, which we find, Those more devouter times at Shaftsbury enshrin'd. Then Tetta in we take, at Winhurne on our way, Which Cuthred's sister was, who in those times did sway On the West-Saxon seat, two other sacred Maids, As from their cradles you'd to bidding of their beads. Saint Cuthburg, and with her Saint Quinburg, which we here Succeedingly do set, both as they sisters were, And Abbesses again of Wilton, which we gather Our Virgin-Band to grace, both having to their father Religious Ina, red with those which rul'd the West, Whose mother's sacred womb with other Saints was blest, As after shall be show'd: another virgin vow'd, And likewise for a Saint amongst the rest allow'd, To th' elder Edward born, bright Eadburg, who for she 1135 (As five related Saints of that blest name there be), 4

Of Wilton Abbess was, they her of Wilton styl'd: Was ever any Maid more merciful, more mild, Or sanctimonious known? But Muse, on in our Song, With other princely Maids, but first with those that sprung From Penda, that great King of Mercia; holy Tweed, 1141 And Kinisdred, with these their sisters, Kinisweed, And Eadburg, last not least, at Godmanchester all Incloyst'red; and to these Saint Tibba let us call, In solitude to Christ, that set her whole delight, 1145 In Godmanchester made a constant Anchorite. Amongst which of that House, for Saints that reckoned be, Yet never any one more grac'd the same than she. Deriv'd of royal blood, as th' other Elfled then Niece to that mighty King, our English Athelstan. At Glastenbury shrin'd; and one as great as she, Being Edward Out-lawe's child, a Maid that liv'd to see The Conqueror enter here, Saint Christian (to us known) Whose life by her clear name divinely was foreshown. For holiness of life, that as renowned were, 1155 And not less nobly born, nor bred, produce we here, Saint Hilda, and Saint Hien, the first of noble name, At Strenshalt, took her vow, the other sister came To Colchester, and grac'd the rich Essexian shore: Whose reliques many a day the world did there adore. 1160 And of our sainted Maids, the number to supply, Of Eadburg we allow, sometime at Alsbury, To Redwald then a King of the East-Angles born, A votress as sincere as she thereto was sworn. Then Pandwine we produce, whom this our native Isle, not As foreign parts much priz'd, and higher did instyle, The holiest English Maid, whose vigils long were held

In Lincolneshire; yet not Saint Frideswid excell'd, The Abbess of an House in Oxford, of her kind

The wonder; nor that place, could hope the like to find. 1170

Two sisters so we have; both to devotion plight, And worthily made Saints; the elder Margarite, Of Katsby Abbess was, and Alice, as we read, Her sister on that seat, did happily succeed, At Abington, which first receiv'd their living breath. Then those Northumbrian Nymphs, all veil'd, as full of faith, That country sent us in, t' increase our Virgin-Band, Fair Elfled, Oswald's child, King of Northumberland, At Strenshalt that was veil'd. As 'mongst those many were, O Ebba, whose clear fame, time never shall out-wear, At Coldingham, far hence within that country plac'd; The Abbess, who to keep thy veiled virgins chaste, Which else thou fear'st the Danes would ravish, which possest This Isle, first of thyself and then of all the rest, The nose and upper lip from your fair faces kery'd, And from pollution so your hallowed House preserv'd. Which when the Danes perceiv'd, their hopes so far deluded, Setting the House on fire, their martyrdom concluded. As Leofron, whose faith with others rightly weigh'd, Shall show her not out-match'd by any English maid: Who likewise when the Dane with persecution storm'd, She here a martyr's part most gloriously perform'd. Two holy Maids again at Whithy were renown'd, Both Abbesses thereof, and Confessors are crown'd; Saint Ethelfrid, with her Saint Congill, as a pair Of Abbesses therein, the one of which by pray'r The wild-geese thence expell'd, that Island which annoy'd, By which their grass and grain was many times destroy'd, Which fall* from off their wings, nor to the air can get From the forbidden place, till they be fully set. As these within this Isle in cloysters were inclos'd:

As these within this life in cloysters were inclosed. So we our Virgins had to foreign parts exposed; As Eadburg, Ana's child, and Sethred born our own,

Were Abbesses of Bridge, whose zeal to France was known: And Ercongate again we likewise thither sent 1205 (Which Ercombert begot, sometime a King of Kent), A Prioress of that place; Burgandosora bare, At Evreux the chaste rule, all which renownéd are In France, which as this Isle of them may freely boast, So Germany some grac'd, from this their native coast. 1210 Saint Walburg here extract from th' Royal English Line, Was in that country made Abbess of Heydentine. Saint Tecla to that place at Ochenford they chose; From Wynburne with the rest (in Dorsetshire) arose Chaste Agatha, with her went Lioba along. 1215 From thence, two not the least these sacred Maids among, At Biscopsen, by time encloyst'red and became. Saint Lewen so attain'd an ever-living name For martyrdom, which she at Wynokebergin wan, Maids seeming in their sex t' exceed the holiest man. 1220 Nor had our Virgins here for sanctity the prize, But widowed Queens as well, that being godly wise, Forsaking second beds, the world with them forsook, To strict retired lives, and gladly them betook To abstinence and prayer, and as sincerely liv'd. 1225 As when the Fates of life King Ethelwold depriv'd, That o'er the East-Angles reign'd, bright Heriswid his wife, Betaking her to lead a strait monastic life, Departing hence to France, receiv'd the holy veil, And livéd many a day incloyst'red there at Kale. 1230 Then Keneburg in this our Sainted front shall stand, To Alfred the lov'd wife, King of Northumberland, Daughter to Penda King of Mercia, who though he Himself most heathenish were, yet liv'd that age to see Four virgins, and this Queen, his children, consecrated

As likewise of this sex, with Saints that doth us store,

Of Godmanchester all, and after Saints related.

Of the Northumbrian Line so have we many more; Saint Eanfled widowed left, by Osway reigning there, At Strenshalt took her veil, as Ethelburg the peer 1240 To Edwin (rightly nam'd) the holy, which possest Northumber's sacred seat, herself that did invest At Lymming far in Kent, which country gave her breath. So Edeth as the rest after King Sethrick's death, Which had the self-same rule of Wilton Abbess was, Where two West-Saxon Queens for Saints shall likewise pass, Which in that self-same House, Saint Edeth did succeed, Saint Ethelwid, which here put on her hallowed weed, King Alred's worthy wife, of Westsex; so again Did Wilfrid, Edgar's Queen (so famous in his reign), 1250 Then Eadburg, Ana's wife, received as the other, Who as a Saint herself, so likewise was she mother To two most holy Maids, as we before have show'd At Wilton (which we say), their happy time bestow'd, Though she of Barking was, a holy nun profest, 1255 Who in her husband's time, had reignéd in the West: Th' East-Saxon Line again, so others to us lent, As Sexburg sometime Queen to Ercombert of Kent, Though Iua's loved child, and Audry's sister known, Which Ely in those days did for her Abbess own. 1260 Nor to Saint Osith we less honour ought to give, King Sethred's widowed Queen, who (when death did deprive Th' Essexian King of life) became encowl'd at Chich, Whose Shrine to her there built, the world did long enrich. Two holy Mercian Queens so widowed, Saints became, 1265 For sanctity much like, not much unlike in name. King Wutphere's widowed peer, Queen Ermineld, whose life At Ely is renown'd, and Ermenburg, the wife To Mervald reigning there, a Saint may safely pass, Who to three Virgin-Saints the virtuous mother was, 1270 The remnant of her days, religiously that bare,

Immonast'red in Kent, where first she breath'd the air. King Edgar's mother so, is for a Saint preferr'd, Queen Algyre, who (they say) at Shipston was interr'd. So Edward Outlawe's wife, Saint Agatha, we bring, 1275 By Salomon begot, that great Hungarian King; Who when she saw the wrong to Edgar her dear son, By cruel Harold first, then by the Conqueror done, Depriv'd his rightful crown, no hope it to recover, A Vestal habit took, and gave the false world over. Saint Maud here not the least, though she be set the last, And scarcely over-match'd by any that is past, Our Beaucleark's Queen, and born to Malcolme King of Scots, Whose sanctity was seen to wipe out all the spots Were laid upon her life, when she her cloyster fled, And chastely gave herself to her lov'd husband's bed, Whom likewise for a Saint those reverend ages chose, With whom we at this time our Catalogue will close.

Now Rutland all this time, who held her highly wrong'd, That she should for the Saints thus strangely be prolong'd, As that the Muse such time upon their praise should spend, Sent in her ambling Wash, fair Welland to attend 1292 At Stamford, which her Stream doth eas'ly overtake, Of whom her mistress Flood seems wondrous much to make; For that she was alone the darling and delight 1295 Of Rutland, ravish'd so with her belovéd sight, As in her only child's, a mother's heart may be: Wherefore that she the least, yet fruitfull'st Shire should see, The honourable rank she had amongst the rest, The ever-labouring Muse her beauties thus exprest: 1300

Love not thyself the less, although the least thou art; What thou in greatness want'st, wise Nature doth impart In goodness of thy soil; and more delicious mould, Surveying all this Isle, the sun did ne'er behold. Bring forth that British Vale, and be it ne'er so rare,

But Catmus with that Vale, for richness shall compare: What Forest-Nymph is found, how brave soe'er she be, But Lyfield shows herself as brave a Nymph as she? What River ever rose from bank, or swelling hill, Than Rutland's wandring Wash, a delicater rill? 1310 Small Shire that can produce to thy proportion good, One Vale of special name, one Forest, and one Flood. O Catmus, thou fair Vale, come on in grass and corn, That Bever ne'er be said thy sister-hood to scorn, And let thy Ocham boast, to have no little grace, That her the pleased Fates, did in thy bosom place, And Lyfield, as thou art a Forest, live so free, That every Forest-Nymph may praise the sports in thee. And down to Welland's course, O Wash, run ever clear, To honour, and to be much honoured by this Shire. And here my Canto ends, which kept the Muse so long, That it may rather seem a Volume than a Song.

THE FIVE-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Tow'rds Lincolnshire our progress laid, We through deep Holland's ditches wade, Fowling, and fishing in the Fen; Then come we next to Kestiven, And bringing Wytham to her fall, On Lindsey light we last of all, Her site and pleasures to attend, And with the Isle of Axholme end.

OW in upon thy earth, rich Lincolnshire, I strain,
At Deeping, from whose street, the plenteous ditches drain, [fall]

Hemp-bearing Holland's Fen, at Spalding, that do Together in their course, themselves as emptying all Into one general sewer, which seemeth to divide, so Low Holland from the High,* which on their Eastern side Th' in-bending Ocean holds, from the Norfolcean lands, To their more Northern point, where Wainfleet drifted stands,

† The length of Holland by the seashore, from the coast of Norfolke to Wainfleet.

Do shoulder out those seas, and Lindsey bids her stay, Because to that fair part, a challenge she doth lay. 10 From fast and firmer earth, whereon the Muse of late, Trod with a steady foot, now with a slower gait, Through quicksands,* beach, and ooze, the Washes she must Where Neptune every day doth powerfully invade The vast and queachy soil, with hosts of wallowing waves, 15 From whose impetuous force, that who himself not saves, By swift and sudden flight, is swallowed by the deep, When from the wrathful tides the foaming surges sweep, The sands which lay all nak'd, to the wide heaven before, And turneth all to sea, which was but lately shore, From this our Southern part of Holland, call'd the Low, Where Crowland's ruins yet, (though almost buried) show Her mighty Founder's power, yet his more Christian zeal, She, by the Muse's aid, shall happily reveal Her sundry sorts of Fowl, from whose abundance she Above all other tracts, may boast herself to be The Mistress, (and indeed) to sit without compare, And for no worthless soil, should in her glory share, From her moist seat of flags, of bulrushes and reed, With her just proper praise, thus Holland doth proceed: † Ye Acherusian Fens, to mine resign your glory, Both that which lies within the goodly territory Of Naples, as that Fen Thesposia's earth upon, Whence that infernal Flood, the smutted Acheron, Shoves forth her sullen head, as thou most fatal Fen. Of which Hetruria tells, the wat'ry Thrasimen In history, although thou highly seemst to boast, That Hannibal by thee o'erthrew the Roman host. I scorn th' Egyptian Fen, which Alexandria shows, Proud Mareotis, should my mightiness oppose,

Or Scythia, on whose face the sun doth hardly shine, Should her Meotis think to match with this of mine, That coveréd all with snow continually doth stand. I stinking Lerna hate, and the poor Libyan Sand.

Marica* that wise Nymph, to whom great Neptune gave 45 The charge of all his shores, from drowning them to save, Abideth with me still upon my service prest, And leaves the looser Nymphs to wait upon the rest: In summer giving earth, from which I square my peat,† And faster feedings by, for deer, for horse, and neat. 50 My various Fleets for fowl, O who is he can tell, The species that in me for multitudes excell? The Duck, and Mallard first, the falconer's only sport, (Of river-flights the chief, so that all other sort, They only green-fowl term) in every mere abound, 55 That you would think they sat upon the very ground, Their numbers be so great, the waters covering quite, That rais'd, the spacious air is darkened with their flight; Yet still the dangerous dykes, from shot do them secure. Where they from flash to flash, like the full epicure 60 Waft, as they lov'd to change their diet every meal: And near to them ye see the lesser dibbling Teal In bunches, § with the first that fly from mere to mere, As they above the rest were lords of earth and air. The Gossander with them, my goodly Fens do show 65 His head as ebon black, the rest as white as snow, With whom the Widgeon goes, the Golden-Eye, the Smeath, And in odd scatt'red pits, the flags, and reeds beneath; The Coot, bald, else clean black, that whiteness it doth bear

Upon the forehead starr'd, the Water-Hen doth wear
Upon her little tail, in one small feather set.
The Water-woosell next, all over black as jet,
With various colours, black, green, blue, red, russet, white,
Do yield the gazing eye as variable delight,
As do those sundry fowls, whose several plumes they be.
The diving Dob-chick, here among the rest you see,
Now up, now down again, that hard it is to prove,
Whether under water most it liveth, or above:
With which last little fowl, (that water may not lack,
More than the Dob-chick doth, and more doth love the brack*)

The Puffing we compare, which coming to the dish, Nice palates hardly judge, if it be flesh or fish.

But wherefore should I stand upon such toys as these. That have so goodly fowls, the wandring eye to please. Here in my vaster pools, as white as snow or milk, 85 (In water black as Stix) swims the wild Swan, the Ilke, Of Hollanders so term'd, no niggard of his breath, (As poets say of Swans, which only sing in death) But oft as other birds, is heard his tunes to roat, Which like a trumpet comes, from his long archéd throat, 90 And tow'rds this wat'ry kind, about the flash's brim. Some cloven-footed are, by Nature not to swim. There stalks the stately Crane, as though he march'd in war, By him that hath the Herne, which (by the fishy car) Can fetch with their long necks, out of the rush and reed, 95 Snigs, fry, and yellow frogs, whereon they often feed: And under them again, (that water never take, But by some ditch's side, or little shallow lake, Lie dabbling night and day) the palate-pleasing Snite, The Bidcocke, and like them the Redshanke, that delight

Together still to be, in some small reedy bed,
In which these little fowls in summer's time were bred.
The buzzing Bitter sits, which through his hollow bill,
A sudden bellowing sends, which many times doth fill
The neighbouring marsh with noise, as though a bull did roar;

But scarcely have I yet recited half my store: And with my wondrous flocks of Wild-geese come I then. Which look as though alone they peopled all the fen, Which here in winter time, when all is overflow'd, And want of solid sward enforceth them abroad. Th' abundance then is seen, that my full fens do yield, That almost through the Isle, do pester every field. The Barnacles with them, which wheresoe'er they breed, On trees, or rotten ships, yet to my fens for feed Continually they come, and chief abode do make, And very hardly forc'd my plenty to forsake: Who almost all this kind do challenge as mine own. Whose like I dare aver, is elsewhere hardly known. For sure, unless in me, no one yet ever saw The multitudes of fowl, in mooting time they draw: 121 From which to many a one, much profit doth accrne.

Now such as flying feed, next these I must pursue; The Sea-mew, Sea-ppe, Gull, and Curlew here do keep, As searching every shoal, and watching every deep, To find the floating fry, with their sharp-piercing sight, 125 Which suddenly they take, by stooping from their height. The Cornorant then comes, (by his devouring kind) Which flying o'er the fen, immediately doth find The fleet best stor'd of fish, when from his wings at full, As though he shot himself into the thick'ned skull, 150 He under water goes, and so the shoal pursues, Which into creeks do fly, when quickly he doth choose, The fin that likes him best, and rising, flying feeds.

The Ospray oft here seen, though seldom here it breeds,
Which over them the fish no sooner do espy,
But (betwixt him and them, by an antipathy)
Turning their bellies up, as though their death they saw,
They at his pleasure lie, to stuff his glutt'nous maw.

*The toiling fisher here is tewing of his net: The fowler is employ'd his limed twigs to set. 340 One underneath his horse, to get a shoot doth stalk; Another over dykes upon his stilts doth walk: There other with their spades, the peats are squaring out, And others from their cars, are busily about, To draw out sedge and reed, for thatch and stover fit, That whosoever would a landskip rightly hit, Beholding but my fens, shall with more shapes be stor'd, Than Germany, or France, or Thuscan can afford: And for that part of me, which men High Holland call, Where Boston seated is, by plenteous Wytham's fall, 150 I peremptory am, large Neptune's liquid field. Doth to no other tract the like aboundance yield. For that of all the Seas invironing this Isle, Our Irish, Spanish, French, howe'er we them enstyle, The German is the great'st, and it is only I, 155 That do upon the same with most advantage lie. What fish can any shore, or British sea-town show, That's eatable to us, that it doth not bestow Abundantly thereon? the Herring, King of Sea, The faster-feeding Cod, the Mackrell brought by May, 160 The dainty Sole, and Plaice, the Dabb, as of their blood; The Conger finely sous'd, hot summer's coollest food; The Whiting known to all, a general wholesome dish; The Gurnet, Rochet, Mayd, and Mullet, dainty fish; The Haddock, Turbet, Bert, fish nourishing and strong; 165

The Thornback, and the Scate, provocative among: The Weaver, which although his prickles venom be, By fishers cut away, which buyers seldom see, Yet for the fish he bears, 'tis not accounted bad; The Sea-Flounder is here as common as the Shad: 170 The Sturgeon cut to keggs, (too big to handle whole) Gives many a dainty bit out of his lusty jole. Yet of rich Neptune's store, whilst thus I idly chat, Think not that all betwixt the Wherpoole and the Sprat, I go about to name, that were to take in hand, 175 The atomy to tell, or to cast up the sand; But on the English coast, those most that usual are, Wherewith the stalls from thence do furnish us for far; Amongst whose sundry sorts, since thus far I am in, I'll of our Shell-Fish speak, with these of scale and fin: 180 The sperm-increasing Crab, much cooking that doth ask,

The sperm-increasing Crab, much cooking that doth ask,
The big-legg'd Lobster, fit for wanton Venus' task,
Voluptuaries oft take rather than for food,
And that the same effect which worketh in the blood
The rough long Oyster is, much like the Lobster limb'd:

The Oyster hot as they, the Mussel often trimm'd
With Orient pearl within, as thereby Nature show'd,
That she some secret good had on that shell bestow'd:
The Scallop cordial judg'd, the dainty Wilk and Limp;
The Periwinkle, Prawn, the Cockle, and the Shrimp, 190

For wanton women's tastes, or for weak stomachs bought.

When Kestiven this while that certainly had thought, Her tongue would ne'er have stopp'd, quoth she,* O how I hate,

Thus of her foggy fens, to hear rude Holland prate,
That with her fish and fowl, here keepeth such a coil,
As her unwholesome air, and more unwholesome soil,

For these of which she boasts, the more might suffred be: When those her featheréd flocks she sends not out to me, Wherein clear Witham they, and many a little Brook, (In which the sun itself may well be proud to look) 200 Have made their flesh more sweet by my refined food, From that so ramish taste of her most fulsome mud, When the toil'd cater home them to the kitchen brings, The cook doth cast them out, as most unsavoury things. Besides, what is she else, but a foul woosy Marsh, 205 And that she calls her grass, so blady is, and harsh, As cuts the cattle's mouths, constrain'd thereon to feed, So that my poorest trash, which mine call rush and reed. For litter scarcely fit, that to the dung I throw, Doth like the Penny-grass, or the pure Clover show, 210 Comparéd with her best: and for her sundry fish, Of which she freely boasts, to furnish every dish. Did not full Neptune's fields so furnish her with store, Those in the ditches bred, within her muddy moor, Are of so earthy taste, as that the ravenous crow 215 Will rather starve, thereon her stomach than bestow.

From Stamford as along my tract tow'rd Lincolne strains, What Shire is there can show more valuable veins Of soil than is in me? or where can there be found, So fair and fertile fields, or sheep-walks ne'er so sound? 220 Where doth the pleasant air resent a sweeter breath? What country can produce a delicater heath, Than that which her fair name from Ancuster* doth hold? Through all the neighbouring Shires, whose praise shall still be told,

Which Flora in the spring doth with such wealth adorn, 225 That Bever needs not much her company to scorn, Though she a Vale lie low, and this a Heath sit high, Yet doth she not alone, allure the wond'ring eye

With prospect from each part, but that her pleasant ground Gives all that may content, the well-breath'd horse and hound: And from the Britans yet, to show what then I was, One of the Roman Ways near through my midst did pass: Besides to my much praise, there hath been in my mould Their painted Pavements found, and Arms of perfect gold. They near the Saxons' reign, that in this tract did dwell, 235 All other of this Isle, for that they would excell For Churches* everywhere, so rich and goodly rear'd In every little dorp, that after-times have fear'd T' attempt so mighty works; yet one above the rest, In which it may be thought, they strove to do their best, 240 Of pleasant Grantham is, that piramis so high, Rear'd (as it might be thought) to overtop the sky, The traveller that strikes into a wondrous maze, As on his horse he sits, on that proud height to gaze.

When Wytham that this while a list'ning ear had laid, 245 To hearken (for herself) what Kestiven had said, Much pleas'd with this report, for that she was the earth From whom she only had her sweet and seasoned birth, From Wytham t which that name derived from her springs, Thus as she trips along, this dainty Rivelet sings:

Ye easy ambling streams, which way soe'er you run,
Or tow'rds the pleasant rise, or tow'rds the mid-day sun:
By which (as some suppose by use that have them tried)
Your waters in their course are neatly purified.
Be what you are, or can, I not your beauties fear,
When Neptune shall command the Naiules t' appear.
In River what is found, in me that is not rare:
Yet for my well-fed Pykes, I am without compare. [source,
From Wytham mine own Town, first wat'red with my
As to the Eastern Sea, I hasten on my course.

Who sees so pleasant plains, or is of fairer seen, [green, Whose swains in shepherds' gray, and girls in Lincolne* Whilst some the rings of bells, and some the bag-pipes ply, Dance many a merry round, and many a hydegy? I envy, any Brook should in my pleasure share, Yet for my dainty Pykes, I am without compare.

No land-floods can me force to over-proud a height; Nor am I in my course, too crooked, or too straight: My depths fall by descents, too long, nor yet too broad, My fords with pebbles, clear as Orient pearls, are strow'd; My gentle winding banks, with sundry flowers are drest, 271 The higher rising Heaths, hold distance with my breast. Thus to her proper song, the burthen still she bare, 'Yet for my dainty Pykes, I am without compare.'

By this to Lincolne com'n, upon whose lofty site,
Whilst wistly Wytham looks with wonderful delight,
Enamouréd of the state, and beauty of the place,
That her of all the rest especially doth grace,
Leaving her former course, in which she first set forth,
Which seeméd to have been directly to the North:
She runs her silver front into the muddy Fen,
Which lies into the East, in her deep journey, when Clear Ban a pretty Brook, from Lyndsey coming down,
Delicious Wytham leads to holy Botulph's town,†
Where proudly she puts in amongst the great resort,
That their appearance make in Neptune's wat'ry court.

Now Lyndsey all this while, that duly did attend,
Till both her rivals thus had fully made an end
Of their so tedious talk, when lastly she replies:

‡Lo, bravely here she sits, that both your states defies.
Fair Lincolne is mine own, which lies upon my South,
As likewise to the North, great Humber's swelling mouth

Encircles me, twixt which in length I bravely lie:

O who can me the best, before them both deny?

Nor Britain in her bounds, scarce such a tract can show, 295

Whose shore like to the back of a well-bended bow,

The Ocean beareth out, and everywhere so thick,

The villages and dorps upon my bosom stick,

That it is very hard for any to define,

Whether up-land most I be, or most am maritine.

What is there that complete can any country make,

That in large measure I (fair Lindsey) not partake,

As healthy heaths, and woods, fair dales, and pleasant hills,

All wat'red here and there, with pretty creeping rills,
Fat pasture, mellow glebe, and of that kind what can Give nourishment to beast, or benefit to man,
As Kestiven doth boast, her Wytham so have I,
My Ancum (only mine) whose fame as far doth fly,
*For fat and dainty Eels, as hers doth for her Pyke,
Which makes the proverb up, the world hath not the like.
From Razin her clear springs, where first she doth arrive,
As in an even course, to Humber forth doth drive,
Fair Barton she salutes, which from her site out-braves
Rough Humber, when he strives to show his sternest waves.
Now for my bounds to speak, few tracts (I think) there be

(And search through all this Isle) to parallel with me: Great Humber holds me North (as I have said before), From whom (even) all along, upon the Eastern shore, The German Ocean lies; and on my Southern side, Clear Wytham in her course, me fairly doth divide

From Holland; and from thence the Fosdyke is my bound,

+ The Bounds of Kestiven.

Wytham Eele, and Ancum Pyke, In all the world there is none syke.

Which our First Henry cut from Lincolne, where he found, Commodities by Trent, from Humber to convey:

So Nature, the clear Trent doth fortunately lay,
Toward me on the West, though farther I extend,
And in my larger bounds do largely comprehend
Full Axholme (which those near, the fertile do instyle),
Which Idle, Don, and Trent, imbracing make an Isle.

But wherefore of my bounds, thus only do I boast, When that which Holland seems to vaunt her on the most, By me is overmatch'd; the fowl which she doth breed: 331 She in her foggy fens, so moorishly doth feed, That physic oft forbids the patient them for food, But mine more airy are, and make fine spirits and blood: For near this batning Isle, in me is to be seen, 335 More than on any earth, the Plover gray, and green, The corn-land-loving Quayle, the daintiest of our bits, The Rayle, which seldom comes but upon rich men's spits: The Puet, Godwin, Stint, the palate that allure, The miser and do make a wasteful epicure: 340 The Knot, that called was Canutus' bird of old, Of that great King of Danes, his name that still doth hold, His appetite to please, that far and near was sought, For him (as some have said) from Denmarke hither brought. The Dotterell, which we think a very dainty dish, Whose taking makes such sport, as man no more can wish:

For as you creep, or cow'r, or lie, or stoop, or go,
So marking you (with care) the apish bird doth do,
And acting everything, doth never mark the net,
Till he be in the snare, which men for him have set.
The big-bon'd Bustard then, whose body bears that size,
That he against the wind must run, ere he can rise:
The Shouler, which so shakes the air with saily wings,
That ever as he flies, you still would think he sings.

These fowls, with other soils, although they frequent be, 355 Yet are they found most sweet and delicate in me.

Thus whilst she seems t' extol in her peculiar praise,
The Muse which seem'd too slack, in these too low-pitch'd lays,

For nobler height prepares, her oblique course, and casts A new Book to begin, an end of this she hastes.

THE SIX-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Three Shires at once this Song assays,
By various and unusual ways.
At Nottingham first coming in,
The Vale of Bever doth begin;
Tow'rds Lester then her course she holds,
And sailing o'er the pleasant Oulds,
She fetcheth Soare down from her springs,
By Charnwood, which to Trent she brings,
Thun shows the braveries of that Flood,
Makes Sherwood sing her Robin Hood;
Then rouses up the aged Peak,
And of her wonders makes her speak:
Thence Darwin down by Darby tends,
And ot her fall, to Trent, it ends.

OW scarcely on this tract the Muse had entrance made,

Inclining to the South, but Bever's batning slade
Receiveth her to guest, whose coming had too long
Put off her rightful praise, when thus herself she sung:
Three Shires there are (quoth she) in me their parts that claim,*

Large Lincolne, Rutland rich, and th' North's eye Nottingham. But in the last of these since most of me doth lie, To that my most-loy'd Shire myself I must apply.

*Not Eusham that proud Nymph, although she still pretend Herself the first of Vales, and though abroad she send Her awful dread command, that all should tribute pay To her as our great Queen; nor White-horse, though her clay Of silver seem to be, new-melted, nor the Vale Of Alsbury, whose grass seems given out by tale, For it so silken is, nor any of our kind, 15 Or what, or where they be, or howsoe'er inclin'd, Me Berer shall out-brave, that in my state do scorn, By any of them all (once) to be overborne, With theirs, do but compare the country where I lie, My hill, and oulds will say, they are the Island's eye. 20 Consider next my site, and say it doth excell; Then come unto my soil, and you shall see it swell, With every grass and grain, that Britain forth can bring: I challenge any Vale, to show me but that thing I cannot show to her (that truly is mine own), 25 Besides I dare thus boast, that I as far am known, As any of them all, the South their names doth sound, The spacious North doth me, that there is scarcely found A roomth for any else, it is so fill'd with mine, Which but a little wants of making me divine: 30 Nor barren am of brooks, for that I still retain Two neat and dainty Rills, the little Snyte, and Deane, That from the lovely oulds, their beauteous parent sprong From the Lecestrian fields, come on with me along, Till both within one bank, they on my North are meint, 35 And where I end, they fall, at Newarck, into Trent.

Hence wand'ring as the Muse delightfully beholds The beauty of the large, and goodly full-flock'd oulds,

She on the left hand leaves old Lecester, and flies, Until the fertile earth glut her insatiate eyes, 40 From rich to richer still, that riseth her before, Until she come to cease upon the head of Soare, Where Fosse,* and Watling* cut each other in their course At Sharnford, t where at first her soft and gentle source, To her but shallow banks, beginneth to repair, Of all this beauteous Isle, the delicatest air; Whence softly sallying out, as loth the place to leave, She Sence a pretty Rill doth courteously receive: For Swift, a little Brook, which certainly she thought Down to the banks of Trent, would safely her have brought, Because their native springs so nearly were allied, Her sister Soare forsook, and wholly her applied To Avon, as with her continually to keep, And wait on her along to the Sabrinian deep.

Thus with her hand-maid Sence, the Soare doth eas'ly slide By Lecester, where yet her ruins show her pride, 56 Demolish'd many years, that of the great foundation Of her long-buried walls, men hardly see the station; Yet of some pieces found, so sure the cement locks The stones, that they remain like perdurable rocks: Where whilst the lovely Soare, with many a dear imbrace, Is solacing herself with this delightful place, The Forest, which the name of that brave town doth bear, With many a goodly wreath, crowns her dishevell'd hair, And in her gallant green, her lusty livery shows Herself to this fair Flood, which mildly as she flows, Reciprocally likes her length and breadth to see, As also how she keeps her fertile purlieus free: The herds of fallow deer she on the launds doth feed, As having in herself to furnish every need.

The two famous Ways of England. See to the Thirteenth Song.
 A little village at the rising of Sourc.
 Lecester Forest.

But now since gentle Soare, such leisure seems to take, The Muse in her behalf this strong defence doth make, Against the neighbour Floods, for that which tax her so, And her a Channel call, because she is so slow. The cause is that she lies upon so low a flat. 75 Where Nature most of all befriended her in that, The longer to enjoy the good she doth possess: For had those (with such speed that forward seem to press) So many dainty meads, and pastures theirs to be. They then would wish themselves to be as slow as she, *Who well may be compar'd to some young tender maid, Ent'ring some Prince's court, which is for pomp array'd, Who led from room to room amazéd is to see The furnitures and states, which all imbroideries be; The rich and sumptuous beds, with tester-covering plumes, And various as the suits, so various the perfumes; Large galleries, where piece with piece doth seem to strive, Of pictures done to life, landskip, and perspective; Thence goodly gardens sees, where antique statues stand In stone and copper, cut by many a skilful hand; 90 Where everything to gaze, her more and more entices, Thinking at once she sees a thousand Paradises. Goes softly on, as though before she saw the last, She long'd again to see, what she had slightly past. So the enticing soil the Soure along doth lead, 95 As wond'ring in herself, at many a spacious mead; When Charnwood from the rocks salutes her wished sight, (Of many a Wood-god woo'd) her darling and delight, Whose beauty whilst that Soare is pausing to behold Clear Wreakin coming in, from Waltham on the ould, 100 Brings Eye, a pretty Brook, to bear her silver train. Which on by Melton make, and tripping o'er the plain, Here finding her surpris'd with proud Mount-Sorrel's sight,

By quick'ning of her course, more eas'ly doth invite Her to the goodly Trent, where as she goes along By Loughborough, she thus of that fair Forest sung:

105

O Charnwood, be thou call'd the choicest of thy kind, The like in any place, what Flood hath hapt to find? No tract in all this Isle, the proudest let her be, Can show a sylvan Nymph, for beauty like to thee: 110 The satyrs, and the fauns, by Dian set to keep, Rough hills, and forest-holts, were sadly seen to weep, When thy high-palmed harts the sport of bows and hounds, By gripple borderers' hands, were banished thy grounds. The Dryads that were wont about thy lawns to rove, To trip from wood to wood, and scud from grove to grove, On Sharpley* that were seen, and Cadman's* aged rocks, Against the rising sun, to braid their silver locks; And with the harmless elves, on heathy Bardon's height, By Cunthia's colder beams to play them night by night, Exil'd their sweet abode, to poor bare commons fled, They with the oaks that liv'd, now with the oaks are dead. Who will describe to life, a Forest, let him take Thy surface to himself, nor shall he need to make Another form at all, where oft in thee is found 125 Fine sharp but easy hills, which reverently are crown'd With aged antique rocks, to which the goats and sheep, (To him that stands remote) do softly seem to creep, To guaw the little shrubs, on their steep sides that grow; Upon whose other part, on some descending brow, Huge stones are hanging out, as though they down would drop.

Where under-growing oaks, on their old shoulders prop The others' hoary heads, which still seem to decline, And in a dimble near (even as a place divine,

For contemplation fit), an ivy-sealed bower, 135 As Nature had therein ordain'd some sylvan power; *As men may very oft at great assemblies see, Where many of most choice, and wond'red beauties be: For stature one doth seem the best away to bear; Another for her shape, to stand beyond compare; 140 Another for the fine composure of a face; Another short of these, yet for a modest grace Before them all preferr'd; amongst the rest yet one, Adjudg'd by all to be, so perfect paragon, That all those parts in her together simply dwell, For which the other do so severally excell. My Charnwood like the last, hath in herself alone, What excellent can be in any Forest shown,

On whom when thus the Soare had these high praises spent, She easily slid away into her sovereign Trent, 150 Who having wand'red long, at length began to leave Her native country's bounds, and kindly doth receive The lesser Tume, and Messe, the Messe a dainty Rill, Near Charnwood rising first, where she begins to fill Her banks, which all her course on both sides do abound 155 With heath and finny oulds, and often gleaby ground, Till Croxal's fertile earth doth comfort her at last When she is entring Trent; but I was like t' have past The other Sence, whose source doth rise not far from hers, By Ancor, that herself to famous Trent prefers, The second of that name, allotted to this Shire, + A name but hardly found in any place but here; Nor is to many known, this country that frequent.

But Muse return at last, attend the princely Trent, Who straining on in state, the North's imperious Flood, 165 The third of England call'd, with many a dainty wood,

Being crown'd to Burton comes, to Needwood where she shows Herself in all her pomp; and as from thence she flows, She takes into her train rich Dove, and Darwin clear, Darwin, whose fount and fall are both in Darbysheere; 170 And of those thirty Floods, that wait the Trent upon, Doth stand without compare, the very paragon.

Thus wand'ring at her will, as uncontroll'd she ranges, Her often-varying form, as variously and changes, First Erwash, and then Lyne, sweet Sherwood sends her in; Then looking wide, as one that newly wak'd had bin, 176 Saluted from the North, with Nottingham's proud height, So strongly is surpris'd, and taken with the sight, That she from running wild, but hardly can refrain, To view in how great state, as she along doth strain, 180 That brave exalted seat, beholdeth her in pride, As how the large-spread meads upon the other side, All flourishing in flowers, and rich embroideries drest, In which she sees herself above her neighbours blest. As rapt with the delights, that her this prospect brings, 185 In her peculiar praise, lo thus the River sings:

What should I care at all, from what my name I take,
That Thirty* doth import, that thirty rivers make,
My greatness what it is, or thirty abbeys great,
That on my fruitful banks, times formerly did seat:

190
Or thirty kinds of fish, that in my streams do live,
To me this name of Trent did from that number give.
What reck I: let great Thames, since by his fortune he Is Sovereign of us all that here in Britain be,
From Isis, and old Tame, his pedigree derive:

195
And for the second place, proud Severne that doth strive, Fetch her descent from Wales, from that proud Mountain sprung,

Whence Trent is supposed to derive her name. See to the Twelfth Song,

Plinillimon, whose praise is frequent them among,
As of that princely Maid, whose name she boasts to bear,
Bright Sabrin, which she holds as her undoubted heir.

Let these imperious Floods draw down their long descent
From these so famous stocks, and only say of Trent,
That Mooreland's barren earth me first to light did bring,
Which though she be but brown, my clear complexion'd spring,
[rise,
Gain'd with the Nymphs such grace, that when I first did
The Naiades on my brim, danc'd wanton hydagies,
And on her spacious breast, with heaths that doth abound,
Encircled my fair fount with many a lusty round:

And of the British Floods, though but the third I be, Yet Thames, and Severne both in this come short of me, For that I am the Mere of England, that divides The North part from the South, on my so either sides, That reckoning how these tracts in compass be extent, Men bound them on the North, or on the South of Trent; Their banks are barren sands, if but compar'd with mine, 215 Through my perspicuous breast, the pearly pebbles shine: I throw my crystal arms along the flow'ry valleys, Which lying sleek, and smooth, as any garden-alleys, Do give me leave to play, whilst they do court my stream, And crown my winding banks with many an anadem: My silver-scaléd skuls about my streams do sweep, Now in the shallow fords, now in the falling deep: So that of every kind, the new-spawn'd numerous fry Seem in me as the sands that on my shore do lie. The Barbell, than which fish, a braver doth not swim, 225 Nor greater for the ford within my spacious brim, Nor (newly taken) more the curious taste doth please; The Greling, whose great spawn is big as any pease; The Pearch with pricking fins, against the Pike prepar'd, As Nature had thereon bestow'd this stronger guard, 230

His daintiness to keep (each curious palate's proof), From his vile ravenous foe: next him I name the Ruffe, His very near ally, and both for scale and fin, In taste, and for his bait (indeed) his next of kin; The pretty slender Dare, of many call'd the Dace, 235 Within my liquid glass, when Phabus looks his face, Oft swiftly as he swims, his silver belly shows, But with such nimble sleight, that ere ye can disclose His shape, out of your sight like lightning he is shot. The Trout by Nature mark'd with many a crimson spot, 240 As though she curious were in him above the rest, And of fresh-water fish, did note him for the best; The Roche, whose common kind to every flood doth fall; The Chub (whose neater name), which some a Chevin call, Food to the tyrant Pike (most being in his power), Who for their numerous store he most doth them devour; The lusty Salmon then, from Neptune's wat'ry realm, When as his season serves, stemming my tideful stream, Then being in his kind, in me his pleasure takes, (For whom the fisher then all other game forsakes) 250 Which bending of himself to th' fashion of a ring, Above the forced wears, himself doth nimbly fling, And often when the net hath dragg'd him safe to land, Is seen by natural force to 'scape his murderers' hand; Whose grain doth rise in flakes, with fatness interlarded, 255 Of many a liquorish lip, that highly is regarded. And Humber, to whose waste I pay my wat'ry store, Me of her Sturgeons sends, that I thereby the more [sent: Should have my beauties grac'd, with something from him Not Ancum's silvered Ecl exceedeth that of Trent; Though the sweet-smelling Smelt be more in Thomes than me, The Lamprey, and his less,* in Severne general be; The Flounder smooth and flat, in other rivers caught,

Perhaps in greater store, yet better are not thought:
The dainty Gudgeon, Loche, the Minnow, and the Bleake, 205
Since they but little are, I little need to speak
Of them, nor doth it fit me much of those to reck,
Which everywhere are found in every little beck;
Nor of the Crayfish here, which creeps amongst my stones,
From all the rest alone, whose shell is all his bones: 270
For Carpe, the Tench, and Breame, my other store among,
To lakes and standing pools, that chiefly do belong,
Here scouring in my fords, feed in my waters clear,
Are muddy fishing ponds to that which they are here.

From Nottingham, near which this River first begun, 275 This song, she the meanwhile, by Newarke having run, Receiving little Snyte, from Bever's batning grounds, At Gaynsborough goes out, where the Lincolnian bounds. Yet Sherwood all this while not satisfied to show Her love to princely Trent, as downward she doth flow, Her Meden and her Man, she down from Mansfield sends To Idle for her aid, by whom she recommends Her love to that brave Queen of waters, her to meet, When she tow'rds Humber comes, do humbly kiss her feet, And clip her till she grace great Humber with her fall. When Sherwood somewhat back, the forward Muse doth call; For she was let to know, that Soare had in her song So chanted Charnwood's worth, the Rivers that along, Amongst the neighbouring Nymphs, there was no other lays, But those which seem'd to sound of Charnwood, and her praise:

Which Sherwood took to heart, and very much disdain'd, (As one that had both long, and worthily maintain'd The title of the great'st, and bravest of her kind)

To fall so far below, one wretchedly confin'd

Within a furlong's space, to her large skirts compar'd:

Wherefore she as a Nymph that neither fear'd, nor car'd

For ought to her might chance, by others' love or hate, With resolution arm'd, against the power of Fate, All self-praise set apart, determineth to sing That lusty Robin Hood, who long time like a king Within her compass liv'd, and when he list to range For some rich booty set, or else his air to change, To Sherwood still retir'd, his only standing court, Whose praise the Forest thus doth pleasantly report:

*The merry pranks he play'd, would ask an age to tell, 305 And the adventures strange that Robin Hood befell, When Mansfield many a time for Robin hath been laid, How he hath coz'ned them, that him would have betray'd; How often he hath come to Nottingham disguis'd, And cunningly escap'd, being set to be surpris'd. 310 In this our spacious Isle, I think there is not one, But he hath heard some talk of him and Little John; And to the end of time, the tales shall ne'er be done, Of Scarlock, George a Greene, and Much the Miller's son, Of Tuck the merry Friar, which many a sermon made, 315 In praise of Robin Hood, his out-laws, and their trade. An hundred valiant men had this brave Robin Hood, Still ready at his call, that bow-men were right good, All clad in Lincolne green, with caps of red and blue, His fellows' winded horn, not one of them but knew, 320 When setting to their lips their little bugles shrill, The warbling echoes wak'd from every dale and hill: Their bauldricks set with studs, athwart their shoulders cast, To which under their arms, their sheafs were buckled fast, A short sword at their belt, a buckler scarce a span, Who strook below the knee, not counted then a man: All made of Spanish yew, their bows were wondrous strong; They not an arrow drew, but was a cloth-yard long. Of archery they had the very perfect craft,

With broad-arrow, or butt, or prick, or roving shaft, 330 At marks full forty score, they us'd to prick, and rove, Yet higher than the breast, for compass never strove; Yet at the farthest mark a foot could hardly win: At long-buts, short, and hoyles, each one could cleave the Their arrows finely pair'd, for timber, and for feather, With birch and brazill piec'd, to fly in any weather; And shot they with the round, the square, or forked pile, The loose gave such a twang, as might be heard a mile. And of these archers brave, there was not any one, But he could kill a deer his swiftest speed upon, 340 Which they did boil and roast, in many a mighty wood, Sharp hunger the fine sauce to their more kingly food. Then taking them to rest, his merry men and he Slept many a summer's night under the greenwood tree. From wealthy abbots' chests, and churls' abundant store, 345 What often-times he took, he shar'd amongst the poor: No lordly bishop came in lusty Robin's way, To him before he went, but for his pass must pay: The widow in distress he graciously reliev'd, And remedied the wrongs of many a virgin griev'd: 350 He from the husband's bed no married woman wan. But to his mistress dear, his lovéd Marian Was ever constant known, which wheresoe'er she came, Was Sovereign of the Woods, chief Lady of the Game: Her clothes tuck'd to the knee, and dainty braided hair, 355 With bow and quiver arm'd, she wand'red here and there, Amongst the forests wild; Diana never knew Such pleasures, nor such harts as Mariana slew.

Of merry Itobin Hood, and of his merrier men, The song had scarcely ceas'd, when as the Muse again Wades Erwash* that at hand, on Sherwood's setting side, The Nottinghamian fields, and Derbian doth divide,

And Northward from her springs, haps Scardale forth to find, Which like her Mistress Peake, is naturally inclin'd To thrust forth ragged cleeves, with which she scatt'red lies, As busy Nature here could not herself suffice, Of this oft-alt'ring earth the sundry shapes to show, That from my entrance here, doth rough and rougher grow, Which of a lowly dale, although the name it bear, You by the rocks might think that it a mountain were, 370 From which it takes the name of Scardale, which express'd, Is the hard Vale of Rocks, of Chesterfield possess'd, By her which is instyl'd; where Rother from her rist, Ibber, and Crawley hath, and Gunno, that assist Her weaker wand'ring stream tow'rds Vorkeshire as she wends, So Scardale tow'rds the same, that lovely Iddle sends, That helps the fertile seat of Axholme to in-isle: But to th' unwearied Muse the Peake appears the while, A withered beldam long, with bleared wat'rish eyes, With many a bleak storm dimm'd, which often to the skies She cast, and oft to th' earth bow'd down her aged head, 381 Her meagre wrinkled face, being sullied still with lead, Which sitting in the works, and poring o'er the mines, Which she out of the ore continually refines: For she a chemist was, and Nature's secrets knew, 385 And from amongst the lead, she antimony drew, And crystal there congeal'd (by her enstyled flowers), And in all med'cines knew their most effectual powers. The spirits that haunt the mines, she could command and tame.

And bind them as she list in Saturn's dreadful name:

She mill-stones from the quarrs, with sharp'ned picks could get,

And dainty whetstones make, the dull-edg'd tools to whet. Wherefore the Peake as proud of her laborious toil, As others of their corn, or goodness of their soil,

Thinking the time was long, till she her tale had told,
Her Wonders one by one, thus plainly doth unfold:

*My dreadful daughters born, your mother's dear delight. Great Nature's chiefest work, wherein she show'd her might; Ye dark and hollow caves, the portraitures of hell, Where fogs, and misty damps continually do dwell; 400 O ve my only joys, my darlings, in whose eyes, Horror assumes her seat, from whose abiding flies-Thick vapours, that like rugs still hang the troubled air, Ye of your mother Peake, the hope and only care: O thou my first and best, of thy black entrance nam'd The Devil's-Arse, t in me, O be thou not asham'd, Nor think thyself disgrac'd, or hurt thereby at all, Since from thy horror first men us'd thee so to call: For as amongst the Moors, the jettiest black are deem'd The beautifull'st of them; so are your kind esteem'd. 410 The more ye gloomy are, more fearful and obscure, (That hardly any eye your sternness may endure) The more ye famous are, and what name men can hit, That best may ye express, that best doth ye befit: For he that will attempt thy black and darksome jaws, In midst of summer meets with winter's stormy flaws, Cold dews, that over head from thy foul roof distill, And meeteth under foot, with a dead sullen rill. That Acheron itself, a man would think he were Immediately to pass, and stay'd for Charon there: 420 Thy floor drad Cave, yet flat, though very rough it be. With often winding turns: then come thou next to me, My pretty daughter Poole, t my second loved child. Which by that noble name was happily enstyl'd, Of that more generous stock, long honour'd in this Shire, 425 Of which amongst the rest, one being out-law'd here,

For his strong refuge took this dark and uncouth place, An heir-loom ever since, to that succeeding race: Whose entrance though depress'd below a mountain steep, Besides so very strait, that who will see 't, must creep Into the mouth thereof, yet being once got in, A rude and ample roof doth instantly begin To raise itself aloft, and whose doth intend The length thereof to see, still going must ascend On mighty slippery stones, as by a winding stair, Which of a kind of base dark alablaster are, Of strange and sundry forms, both in the roof and floor, As Nature show'd in thee, what ne'er was seen before. For Elden* thou my third, a Wonder I prefer Before the other two, which perpendicular 440 Div'st down into the ground, as if an entrance were Through earth to lead to hell, ye well might judge it here, Whose depth is so immense, and wondrously profound, As that long line which serves the deepest sea to sound, Her bottom never wrought, as though the vast descent, 445 Through this terrestrial globe directly pointing went Our Antipods to see, and with her gloomy eyes, To gloat upon those stars, to us that never rise; That down into this hole if that a stone ve throw, An acre's length from thence (some say) that ye may go, 450 And coming back thereto, with a still list'ning ear, May hear a sound as though that stone then falling were.

Yet for her Caves, and Holes, Peake only not excells, But that I can again produce those wondrons Wells Of Buckston, as I have, that most delicious Fount,
Which men the second Bath of England do account,
Which in the primer reigns, when first this Well began
To have her virtues known unto the blest Saint Anne,†
Was consecrated then, which the same temper hath,

As that most dainty Spring, which at the famous Bath, Is by the Cross enstyl'd, whose fame I much prefer, In that I do compare my daintiest Spring to her, Nice sicknesses to cure, as also to prevent, And supple their clear skins, which ladies oft frequent; Most full, most fair, most sweet, and most delicious source. To this a second Fount,* that in her natural course, As mighty Neptune doth, so doth she ebb and flow. If some Welsh Shires report, that they the like can show, I answer those, that her shall so no Wonder call, So far from any sea, not any of them all. My Caves, and Fountains thus delivered you, for change, A little Hill† I have, a Wonder yet more strange, Which though it be of light, and almost dusty sand, Unalt'red with the wind, yet firmly doth it stand; And running from the top, although it never cease, 475 Yet doth the foot thereof, no whit at all increase. Nor is it at the top, the lower, or the less, As Nature had ordain'd, that so its own excess, Should by some secret way within itself ascend, To feed the falling back: with this yet do not end 480 The Wonders of the Peake, for nothing that I have, But it a Wonder's name doth very justly crave: A Forest such have I (of which when any speak, Of me they it enstyle, The Forest of the Peake), \pm Whose hills do serve for brakes, the rocks for shrubs and To which the stag pursu'd, as to the thicket flees; 486 Like it in all this Isle, for sternness there is none, Where Nature may be said to show you groves of stone, As she in little there, had curiously compil'd The model of the vast Arabian stony wild. 490 Then as it is suppos'd, in England that there be Seven Wonders: to myself so have I here in me,

My seven before rehears'd, allotted me by Fate, Her greatness, as therein ordain'd to imitate.

No sooner had the Peake her Seven proud Wonders sung, But Durwin from her fount, her mother's hills among, 406 Through many a crooked way, oppos'd with envious rocks, Comes tripping down tow'rds Trent, and sees the goodly flocks

Fed by her mother Peake; and herds (for horn and hair, That hardly are put down by those of Lancashire), 500 Which on her mountains' sides, and in her bottoms graze, On whose delightful course, whilst Unknidge stands to gaze, And look on her his fill, doth on his tiptoes get, He Nowstoll plainly sees, which likewise from the set, Salutes her, and like friends, to Heaven-Hill far away, 505 Thus from their lofty tops, were plainly heard to say:

Fair Hill be not so proud of thy so pleasant site,
Who for thou giv'st the eye such wonderful delight,
From any mountain near, that glorious name of Heaven,
Thy bravery to express, was to thy greatness given:
Nor east thine eye so much on things that be above,
For saw'st thon as we do, our Darwin, thon wouldst love
Her more than anything, that so doth thee allure;
When Darwin that by this her travail could endure,
Takes Now into her train (from Nowstoll her great sire, Which shows to take her name), with many a winding gyre.

[Wyr.

Then wand'ring through the wilds, at length the pretty From her black mother Poole, her nimbler course doth ply Tow'rds Darwin, and along from Bakevell with her brings Lathkell a little brook, and Headford, whose poor springs, 520 But hardly them the name of riverets can afford; [stor'd, When Burbrook with the strength, that Nature hath her Although but very small, yet much doth Darwin sted. At Worksworth on her way, when from the mines of lead,

Brown Eclesborne comes in, then Amber from the East, 525 Of all the Darbian Nymphs of Darwin lov'd the best, (A delicater Flood from fountain never flow'd) Then coming to the Town, on which she first bestow'd Her natural British* name, her Durby, so again, Her, to that ancient seat, doth kindly intertain, 530 Where Marten-Brooke, although an easy shallow Rill, There offereth all she hath, her mistress' banks to fill, And all too little thinks that was on Darwin spent; From hence as she departs, in travelling to Trent, Back goes the active Muse, tow'rds Lancashire amain, Where matter rests enough her vigour to maintain, And to the Northern Hills shall lead her on along, Which now must wholly be the subject of my Song.

* Darwin, of the British Doure Guin, which is white water. Darby from thence, as the place by the water.

THE SEVEN-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

The circuit of this Shire exprest, Erwell, and Ribble then contest; The Muse next to the Mosses flies, And to fair Wyre herself applies; The fishy Lun then doth she bring, The praise of Lancashire to sing, The Isle of Man maintains her plea, Then falling Eastward from that Sea, On rugged Furnesse, and his Fells, Of which this Canto lastly tells.

CARCE could the labouring Muse salute this lively Shire,

But straight such shouts arose from every Moss and Mere,

And Rivers rushing down, with such unusual noise, Upon their pebbly shoals, seem'd to express their joys, That Mersey (in her course which happily confines Brave Cheshire from this tract, two County Palatines) As ravish'd with the news, along to Lerpoole ran, That all the shores which lie to the Vergivian,*

* The Irish Sea.

Resounded with the shouts, so that from creek to creek, So loud the Echoes cried, that they were heard to shriek 10 To Fournesse' ridgéd front, whereas the rocky Pile Of Foudra is at hand, to guard the out-laid Isle Of Walney, and those gross and foggy Fells awoke; Thence flying to the East, with their reverberance shook The clouds from Pendle's head (which as the people say, 15 Prognosticates to them a happy haleyon day), Rebounds on Blackstonedge, and there by falling fills Fair Mersey, making in from the Derbeian Hills.

But whilst the active Muse thus nimbly goes about,
Of this large tract to lay the true dimensions* out,
The neat Lancastrian Nymphs, for beauty that excell,
That for the Horn-pipe† round do bear away the bell;
Some that about the banks of Erwell make abode,
With some that have their seat by Ribble's silver road,
In great contention fell (that mighty difference grew),
Which of those Floods deserv'd to have the sovereign due;
So that all future spleen, and quarrels to prevent,
That likely was to rise about their long descent, [plead,
Before the neighbouring Nymphs, their right they mean to
And first thus for herself the lovely Erwell said:

‡Ye lasses, quoth this Flood, have long and blindly err'd,
That Ribble before me, so falsely have preferr'd,
That am a native born, and my descent do bring,
From ancient gentry here, when Ribble from her spring,
An alien known to be, and from the mountains rude
Of Yorkshire getting strength, here boldly dares intrude
Upon my proper earth, and through her mighty fall,
Is not asham'd herself of Lancashire to call:
Whereas of all the Nymplis that carefully attend
My Mistress Mersey's state, there's none that doth transcend

* The circuit and true dimension of Lancashire.'
† The Lancashire Horn-pipe.
‡ Erwell's oration.

My greatness with her grace, which doth me so prefer, That all is due to me, which doth belong to her. For though from Blackstonedge the Taume come tripping down, And from that long-ridg'd rock, her father's high renown, Of Mersey thinks from me, the place alone to win, 45 With my attending brooks, yet when I once come in, I out of count'nance quite do put the Nymph, for note, As from my fountain I tow'rds mightier Mersey float, First Roch a dainty Rill, from Roch-dale her dear dame, Who honoured with the half of her stern mother's name, 50 Grows proud; yet glad herself into my banks to get, Which Spodden from her spring, a pretty Rivelet, As her attendant brings, when Irck adds to my store, And Medlock to their much, by lending somewhat more, At Manchester do meet, all kneeling to my state, 55 Where brave I show myself; then with a prouder gait, Tow'rds Mersey making on, great Chalmosse at my fall, Lies full of turf, and marl, her unctuous minerall, And blocks as black as pitch (with boring-augers found), There at the general Flood supposéd to be drown'd. 60 Thus chief of Mersey's train, away with her I run, When in her prosperous course she wat'reth Warrington, And her fair silver load in Lerpoole down doth lay, A Road none more renown'd in the Vergician Sea. Ye lusty lasses then, in Lancashire that dwell, 65 For beauty that are said to bear away the bell, Your country's Horn-pipe, ye so mincingly that tread, As ye the Egg-pie love, and Apple cherry-red;* In all your mirthful songs, and merry meetings tell, That Erwell every way doth Ribble far excell. 70

Her well-disposéd speech had Erwell scarcely done, But swift report therewith immediately doth run

He that will fish for a Lanca hire man, at any time or tide, Must bait his hook with a good Egg-pie, or an Apple with a red side.

To the Vergivian shores, among the mosses deep,
Where All a neighbouring Nymph for very joy doth weep,
That Symonds-wood, from whence the Flood assumes her spring,
75

Excited with the same, was loudly heard to ring; And over all the moors, with shrill re-echoing sounds, The drooping fogs to drive from those gross wat'ry grounds, Where those that toil for turf, with peating spades do find Fish living in that earth* (contrary to their kind) Which but that Pontus, and Heraclia likewise shows, The like in their like earth, that with like moisture flows, And that such fish as these, had not been likewise found, Within far firmer earth, the Paphlagonian ground, A Wonder of this Isle, this well might have been thought. But Ribbell that this while for her advantage wrought, so Of what she had to say, doth well herself advise, And to brave Erwell's speech, thus boldly she replies: With that, whereby the most thou think'st me to disgrace, That I an alien am (not rightly of this place). 90 My greatest glory is, and Lancashire therefore, To Nature for my birth, beholding is the more; That Yorkshire, which all Shires for largeness doth exceed, A kingdom to be call'd, that well deserves indeed, And not a fountain hath, that from her womb doth flow 95 Within her spacious self, but that she can bestow; To Lancaster yet lends, me Ribbell, from her store, Which adds to my renown, and makes her bounty more. From Penigent's proud foot, as from my source I slide,

And Ingleborow Hill of that Olympian brood, With Pendle, of the North the highest Hills that be, Do wistly me behold, and are beheld of me,

That Mountain my proud sire, in height of all his pride, 100 Takes pleasure in my course, as in his first-born Flood:

These Mountains make me proud, to gaze on me that stand: So Long-ridge, once arriv'd on the Lancastrian Land, Salutes me, and with smiles, me to his soil invites, So have I many a Flood, that forward me excites. As Hodder, that from home attends me from my spring; Then Caldor coming down, from Blackstonedge doth bring 110 Me eas'ly on my way, to Preston the great Town, Wherewith my banks are blest; whereat my going down, Clear Darwen on along me to the sea doth drive, And in my spacious fall no sooner I arrive, But Savock to the North, from Longridge making way, To this my greatness adds, when in my ample Bay, Swart Dulas coming in, from Wiggin with her aids, Short Tand, and Dartow small, two little country maids, (In those low wat'ry lands, and moory mosses bred) Do see me safely laid in mighty Neptune's bed; And cutting in my course, even through the very heart Of this renowned Shire, so equally it part, As Nature should have said. Lo thus I meant to do: This Flood divides this Shire thus equally in two. Ye Maids, the Horn-pipe then, so mincingly that tread, 125 As ye the Egg-pie love, and Apple cherry-red; In all your mirthful songs, and merry meetings tell, That Bibbell every way your Erwell doth excell.

Here ended she again, when Merton's Moss and Mere, With Ribbel's sole reply so much revived were, That all the shores resound the River's good success, And wondrous joy there was all over Andernesse,* Which straight convey'd the news into the upper land, Where †Pendle, Penigent, and Ingleborow stand Like giants, and the rest do proudly overlook;

Or Atlas-like as though they only undertook
To under-prop high heaven, or the wide welkin dar'd,
Who in their Ribble's praise (be sure) no speeches spar'd;
That the loud sounds from them down to the Forests fell,
To Bowland brave in state, and Wyersdale, which as well, 140
As any sylvan Nymphs, their beauteous sites may boast,
Whose echoes sent the same all round about the coast,
That there was not a Nymph to jollity inclin'd,
Or of the woody brood, or of the wat'ry kind,
But at their fingers' ends, they Ribbel's Song could say, 145
And perfectly the note upon the Bag-pipe play. [sped,

That Wyre, when once she knew how well these Floods had (When their reports abroad in every place was spread) It vex'd her very heart, their eminence to see, Their equal (at the least) who thought herself to be, 150 Determines at the last to Neptune's Court to go, Before his ample state, with humbleness to show The wrongs she had sustain'd by her proud sisters' spite, And off'ring them no wrong, to do her greatness right; Arising but a Rill at first from Wyersdale's lap, Yet still receiving strength from her full mother's pap, As down to seaward she, her serious course doth ply, Takes Caldor coming in, to bear her company. From Woolferay's cliffy foot, a Hill to her at hand, By that fair Forest known, within her verge to stand. So Bowland from her breast sends Brock her to attend, As she a Forest is, so likewise doth she send Her child, on Wwesdale's Flood, the dainty Wwe to wait, With her assisting Rills, when Wyre is once replete: She in her crooked course to seaward softly slides, 165 Where Pellin's mighty Moss, and Merton's, on her sides Their boggy breasts out-lay, and Skipton down doth crawl, To entertain this Wyer, attained to her fall: When whilst each wand'ring Flood seem'd settled to admire,

First Erwell, Ribbell then, and last of all this Wyre, 170 That mighty wagers would have willingly been laid, (But that these matters were with much discretion stay'd) Some broils about these Brooks had surely been begun. When Coker a coy Nymph, that clearly seems to shun All popular applause, who from her crystal head, In Wyresdale, near where Wyre is by her fountain fed, That by their natural birth, they seem (indeed) to twin, Yet for her sister's pride she careth not a pin, Of none and being help'd, she likewise helpeth none, But to the Irish Sea goes gently down alone 180 Of any undisturb'd, till coming to her Sound, Endangered by the sands, with many a lofty bound, She leaps against the tides, and cries to crystal Lon, The Flood that names the Town, from whence the Shire begun

Her title first to take, and loudly tells the Flood, That if a little while she thus but trifling stood, These petty Brooks would be before her still preferr'd. Which the long-wand'ring Lon, with good advisement heard. As she comes ambling on from Westmerland, where first Arising from her head, amongst the Mountains nurst, 190 By many a pretty spring, that hourly getting strength, Arriving in her course in Lancashire at length, To Lonsdale* shows herself, and lovingly doth play With her dear daughter Dale, which her frim cheek doth lay To her clear mother's breast, as mincingly she traces, And oft imbracing her, she oft again imbraces, And on her darling smiles, with every little gale. Next them she Henbourne hath, and Robourne, which do bring Their bounties in one bank, their Mistress to prefer,

That she with greater state may come to Lancaster,
Of her which takes the name, which likewise to the Shire,
The sovereign title lends, and eminency, where
To give to this her Town, what rightly doth belong,
Of this most famous Shire, our Lun thus frames her Song:

*First, that most precious thing, and pleasing most to man, Who from him (made of earth) immediately began,
His she-self woman, which the goodliest of this Isle,
This country hath brought forth, that much doth grace my style;

210

Why should those ancients else, which so much-knowing were,

When they the blazons gave to every several Shire, Fair women as mine own, have titled due to me? †Besides in all this Isle, there no such cattle be, For largeness, horn, and hair, as these of Lancashire; 215 So that from every part of England far and near, Men haunt her marts for store, as from her race to breed. And for the third, wherein she doth all Shires exceed, Be those great race of hounds, the deepest-mouth'd of all The other of this kind, which we our Hunters call, 220 Which from their bellowing throats upon a scent so roar, That you would surely think, that the firm earth they tore With their wide yawning chaps, or rent the clouds in sunder, As though by their loud cry they meant to mock the thunder. Besides, her natives have been anciently esteem'd, 225 For bowmen & near our best, and ever have been deem'd So loyal, that the Guard of our preceding Kings, Of them did most consist; but yet 'mongst all these things, Even almost ever since the English Crown was set Upon the lawful head, of our Plantaginet, 230

In honour, next the first, our Dukedom was allow'd, And always with the great'st revenues was endow'd: And after when it hapt, France-conquering Edward's blood Divided in itself, here for the Garland stood; The right Lancastrian Line, it from Fork's issue bare; 235 *The Red-Rose, our brave badge, which in their helmets ware, In many a bloody field, at many a doubtful fight, Against the House of Forke, which bare for theirs the White.

Which Fulness doth import, of waters still increase:
To Neptune lowting low, when crystal Lun doth cease,
And Conder coming in, conducts her by the hand,
Till lastly she salute the point of Sunderland,§
And leaves our dainty Lun to Amphitrite's care.

So blithe and bonny now the Lads and Lasses are, That ever as anon the Bag-pipe up doth blow, Cast in a gallant Round about the hearth they go, 250 And at each pause they kiss, was never seen such rule In any place but here, at Boon-fire, or at Yule; And every village smokes at Wakes with lusty cheer, Then 'Hey' they cry 'for Lun,' and 'Hey for Luncashire ?' That one high Hill was heard to tell it to his brother, 255 That instantly again to tell it to some other: From Hill again to Vale, from Vale to Hill it went, The High-lands they again, it to the lower sent, The mud-exhausted Meres, add Mosses deep among. They cease not to resound it over all the deep,
And acted it each day before the Isle of Man,
Who like an Empress sits in the Virgivian,
By her that hath the Calfe,* long Walney, and the Pyle, 265
As hand-maids to attend on her their Sovereign Isle,
To whom, so many though the Hebrides do show,
Acknowledge, that to her they due subjection owe:

And what an Empire can, the same this Island brings
Her pedigrees to show, her right successive Kings,
Her chronicles and can as easily rehearse,
And with all foreign parts to have had free commerce;
Her municipial laws, and customs very old,
Belonging to her state, which strongly she doth hold:

This Island, with the Song of Lun is taken so,
As she hath special cause before all other, who
For her bituminous turf, squar'd from her mossy ground,
And trees far under earth (by daily digging found),
As for the store of oats, which her black glebe doth bear, 285
In every one of these resembling Lancashire,
To her she'll stoutly stick, as to her nearest kin,
And cries, 'the day is ours, brave Lancashire doth win.'
But yet this Isle of Man more seems not to rejoice
For Lancashire's good luck, nor with a louder voice 290
To sound it to the shores, than Furnesse whose stern face,
With mountains set like warts, which Nature as a grace

Bestow'd upon this tract, whose brows do look so stern, That when the Nymphs of sea did first her front discern, Amazédly they fled, to Amphitrite's bower. Her grim aspect to see, which seem'd to them so sour, As it malign'd the rule which mighty Nentune bare, Whose fells to that grim God, most stern and dreadful are, With hills whose hanging brows, with rocks about are bound, Whose weighty feet stand fix'd in that black beachy ground, Whereas those scattered trees, which naturally partake, 301 The fatness of the soil (in many a slimy lake, Their roots so deeply soak'd) send from their stocky bough, A soft and sappy gum, from which those Tree-geese grow, Call'd Barnacles* by us, which like a jelly first To the beholder seem, then by the fluxure nurst, Still great and greater thrive, until you well may see Them turn'd to perfect fowls, when dropping from the tree Into the meery pond, which under them doth lie. Wax ripe, and taking wing, away in flocks do fly; 310 Which well our ancients did among our Wonders place: Besides by her strong site, she doth receive this grace, Before her neighbouring tracts (which Fournesse well may vaunt).

That when the Sarons here their forces first did plant,
And from the inner-land the ancient Britans drave,
To their distress'd estate it no less succour gave,
Than the trans-Severn'd Hills, which their old stock yet stores,
Which now we call the Welsh, or the Cornubian Shores.
What country lets ye see those soils within her seat,
But she in little hath, what it can show in great?
As first without herself at sea to make her strong,
(Yet howsoe'er expos'd, doth still to her belong)

To sea-ward then she hath her sundry Sands again, As that of Dudden first, then Levin, lastly Ken, Of three bright Naiades nam'd, as Dudden on the West, That Cumberland cuts off from this Shire, doth invest Those Sands with her proud style, when Levin from the Fells, Besides her natural source, with the abundance swells, Which those two mighty Meres, upon her either side Contribute by recourse, that out of very pride, She leaves her ancient name, and Fosse herself doth call, 345 Till coming to the Sands, even almost at her fall, On them her ancient style she liberally bestows. Upon the East from these, clear Ken her beauty shows. From Kendale coming in, which she doth please to grace, First with her famous type, then lastly in her race, Her name upon those Sands doth liberally bequeath, Whereas the Muse awhile may sit her down to breathe, And after walk along tow'rds Yorkshire on her way, On which she strongly hopes to get a noble day.

THE EIGHT-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Invention hence her compass steers,
Towards Yorke the most renown'd of Shires,
Mukes the three Ridings in their stories,
Each severally to show their glories.
Ouse for her most-lov'd City's sake,
Doth her Duke's Title undertake;
His Floods then Humber welcomes in,
And shows how first he did begin.

HE Muse from Blackstonedge, no whit dismay'd at all,
With sight of the large Shire, on which she was to fall,

[her arrive]

(Whose Forests, Hills, and Floods, then long for From Laucashire, that look'd her beauties to contrive)

Doth set herself to sing, of that above the rest

A Kingdom that doth seem, a Province at the least,

To them that think themselves no simple Shires to be;

But that wherein the world her greatness most may see,

And that which doth this Shire before the rest prefer,

Is of so many Floods, and great, that rise from her,

Except some silly few out of her verge that flow, So near to other Shires, that it is hard to know, If that their springs be hers, or others them divide, And those are only found upon her setting side.

Else be it noted well, remarkable to all,*

That those from her that flow, in her together fall.

Nor can small praise beseem to beauteous Brooks as these, For from all other Nymphs these be the Naiades, In Amphitrite's bower, that princely places hold,

To whom the Orkes of sea dare not to be so bold,

As rudely once to touch, and wheresoe'er they come,

The Tritons with their trumps proclaim them public room.

Now whiles the Muse prepares these Floods along to lead, The wide West-riding first, desires that she may plead The right that her belongs, which of the Muse she wins, 25 When with the course of Don, thus she her tract begins:

†Thou first of all my Floods, whose banks do bound my South,

And off'rest up thy stream to mighty Humber's mouth, Of yew, and climbing elm, ‡ that crown'd with many a spray, From thy clear fountain first through many a mead dost play, Till Rother, whence the name of Rotheram first begun, 31 At that her christened Town doth lose her in my Don, Which proud of her recourse, tow'rds Doncaster doth drive, Her great'st and chiefest Town, the name that doth derive From Don's near bordering banks, when holding on her race, She dancing in and out, indenteth Hatfield Chase, 36 Whose bravery hourly adds, new honours to her bank: When Sherwood sends her in slow Iddle, that made rank With her profuse excess, she largely it bestows On Marshland, whose swoln womb with such abundance flows, As that her batning breast, her fatlings sooner feeds, 41

And with more lavish waste, than oft the grazier needs: Whose soil, as some report, that be her borderers note, With th' water under earth undoubtedly doth float: *For when the waters rise, it risen doth remain High whilst the floods are high, and when they fall again, It falleth: but at last, when as my lively Don, Along by Marshland's side, her lusty course hath run, The little wand'ring Went, won by the loud report Of the magnifique state, and height of Humber's Court, Draws on to meet with Don, at her approach to Aire. Now speak I of a Flood, who thinks there's none should dare Once to compare with her, suppos'd by her descent, The darling daughter born of lofty Penigent, Who from her father's foot, by Skipton down doth scud, And leading thence to Leeds, that delicatest Flood, Takes Caldor coming in by Wakefield, by whose force, As from a lusty Flood, much strengthened in her course; But Caldor as she comes, and greater still doth wax, And travelling along by Heading-Halifar, t 60 Which Horton once was call'd, but of a Virgin's hair, (A Martyr that was made, for chastity, that there Was by her lover slain) being fast'ned to a tree: The people that would needs it should a Relique be. It Halifar since nam'd, which in the Northern tongue, 65 Is Holy hair: but thence as Caldor comes along, It chanc'd she in her course on Kirkbeut cast her eve. Where merry Robin Hood, that honest thief doth lie, Beholding fitly too before how Wakefield stood, She doth not only think of lusty Robin Hood, 70 But of his merry man, the Pindar of the Town Of Wakefield, George à Greene, whose fames so far are blown,

For their so valiant fight, that every free-man's song,
Can tell you of the same, quoth she be talk'd on long,
For ye were merry lads, and those were merry days;
When Aire to Caldor calls, and bids her come her ways,
Who likewise to her help, brings Hebden, a small Rill:
Thus Aire holds on her course tow'rds Humber, till she fill
Her fall with all the wealth that Don can her afford.
Quoth the West-riding thus, with Rivers am I stor'd.

Next guide I on my Wharfe, the great'st in her degree, And that I well may call the worthiest of the three, Who her full fountain takes from my waste Western wild, (Whence all but mountaineers, by Nature are exil'd) On Langstrethdale, and lights at th' entrance of her race, 55 When keeping on her course, along through Barden Chase, She wat'reth Wharfdale's breast, which proudly bears her name;

For by that time she's grown a Flood of wondrous fame, When Washbrooke with her wealth her Mistress doth supply; Thus Wharfe in her brave course imbracing Wetherby,* 90 Small Cock, a sullen Brook, comes to her succour then, Whose banks receiv'd the blood of many thousand men, On sad Palme-Sunday slain, that Towton-Field we call, [fall, Whose channel quite was chok'd with those that there did That Wharfe discoloured was with gore, that then was shed, The bloodiest Field betwixt the White Rose, and the Red, 96 Of well-near fifteen fought in England first and last.

But whilst the goodly Wharfe doth thus tow'rds Humber haste,

From Wharndale Hill not far, outflows the nimble Nyde,
Through Nydersdale along, as neatly she doth glide
Tow'rds Knarsburg on her way, a pretty little Rill, Call'd Kebeck, stows her stream, her Mistress' banks to fill,
To intertain the Wharfe where that brave Forest' stands,

Entitled by the Town, who with upreared hands Makes signs to her of joy, and doth with garlands crown 105 The River passing by; but Wharfe that hasteth down To meet her Mistress Ouse, her speedy course doth hie: Dent, Rother, Rivell, Gret, so on my set have I, Which from their fountains there all out of me do flow. Yet from my bounty I on Lancashire bestow, 110 Because my rising soil doth shoot them to the West: But for my Mountains I, will with the Isle contest, All other of the North in largeness shall exceed. That ages long before it finally decreed, That Ingleborow Hill, Pendle,* and Penigent, 115 Should named be the high'st betwixt our Tweed and Trent. My Hills, brave Whelpston then, thou Wharnside, and thou Cam.

Since I West-riding still your only mother am, All that report can give, and justly is my due, I as your natural dam, share equally with you; 120 And let me see a Hill that to the North doth stand, The proudest of them all, that dare but lift a hand O'er Penigent to peer; not Skiddo, that proud Mount, Although of him so much, rude Cumberland account, Nor Cheriot, of whose height Northumberland doth boast Albania+ to survey; nor those from coast to coast That well-near run in length, that rew of Mountains tall, By th' name of th' English Alps, that our most learned call; As soon shall those, or these remove out of their place, As by their lofty looks, my Penigent out-face: Ye thus behold my Hills, my Forests, Dales, and Chases Upon my spacious breast: note too how Nature places Far up into my West, first Langstrethdale doth lie, And on the bank of Wharfe, my pleasant Bardon by,

With Wharfdale hard by her, as taking hand in hand: Then lower tow'rds the sea brave Knursborough doth stand, As higher to my North, my Niddersdale by Nyde, And Bishopsdale above upon my setting side, Marshland, and Hatfield Chuse, my Eastern part do bound, And Barnsdale there doth butt on Don's well-wat'red ground: And to my great disgrace, if any shall object 141 That I no wonder have that's worthy of respect In all my spacious Tract, let them (so wise) survey My Ribble's rising banks, their worst and let them say; At Giggleswick where I a Fountain can you show, 145 That eight times in a day is said to ebb and flow, *Who sometime was a Nymph, and in the Mountains high Of Craven, whose blue heads for caps put on the sky, Amongst th' Oreuds† there, and Sylvans made abode, (It was e'er human foot upon those Hills had trod) 150 Of all the Mountain-kind and since she was most fair, It was a Satyr's chance to see her silver hair Flow loosely at her back, as up a cliff she clame, Her beauties noting well, her features, and her frame, And after her he goes; which when she did espy, Before him like the wind, the nimble Nymph doth fly; They hurry down the rocks, o'er hill and dale they drive; To take her he doth strain, t' outstrip him she doth strive, Like one his kind that knew, and greatly fear'd his rape, And to the Topick Gods; by praying to escape, 160 They turned her to a Spring, which as she then did pant, When wearied with her course, her breath grew wondrous seant:

Even as the fearful Nymph, then thick and short did blow, Now made by them a Spring, so doth she ebb and flow.

And near the stream of Nyde, another Spring have I,
As well as that, which may a Wonder's place supply,
Which of the form it bears, men Dropping-Well do call,
Because out of a rock, it still in drops doth fall,
Near to the foot whereof it makes a little pon,
Which in as little space converteth wood to stone,
Chevin, and Kilnsey Crags, were they not here in me,
In any other place, right well might Wonders be,
For their gigantic height, that mountains do transcend?
But such are frequent here, and thus she makes an end.

When Your* thus having heard the Genius of this Tract,
Her well-deserved praise so happily to act,
This River in herself that was extremely loth,
The other to defer, since that she was to both
Indifferent, straitly wills West-Riding there to cease;
And having made a sign to all the wat'ry prease
For silence; which at once, when her command had won,
The proud North-Riding thus for her great self begun:

*My Sovereign Flood, quoth she, in nature thou art bound T' acknowledge me of three to be the worthiest ground:
For note of all those Floods, the wild West-Riding sends, 185
There's scarcely any one thy greatness that attends,
Till thou hast passéd Yorke, and drawest near thy fall;
And when thou hast no need of their supplies at all,
Then come they flatt'ring in, and will thy followers be;
$\frac{150}{2}$ as you often-times these wretched worldlings see,
That whilst a man is poor, although some hopes depend
Upon his future age, yet there's not one will lend
A farthing to relieve his sad distresséd state,
Not knowing what may yet befall him; but when Fate
Doth pour upon his head his long-expected good,

Then shall you see those slaves, aloof before that stood.

And would have let him starve, like spaniels to him crouch,

And with their glavering lips, his very feet to touch:

So do they by thee Your; whereas the Floods in me,

That spring and have their course (even), give thy life to thee:

For till that thou and Swale, into one bank do take, Meeting at Borough-Bridge, thy greatness there to make: Till then the name of Ouse thou art not known to owe, A term in former times the ancients did bestow On many a full-bank'd Flood; but for my greater grace, 205 These Floods of which I speak, I now intend to trace From their first springing founts, beginning with the Your. From Morvil's mighty foot which rising, with the power That Bant from Sea-mere brings, her somewhat more doth fill, Near Bishops-dale at hand, when Cover a clear Rill. 210 Next cometh into Your, whereas that lusty Chace For her lov'd Cover's sake, doth lovingly embrace Your as she yields along, amongst the parks and groves, In Middleham's amorous eye, as wand'ringly she roves, At Rippon meets with Skell, which makes to her amain, 215 Whom when she hath receiv'd into her Nymphish train, (Near to that town so fam'd, for colts there to be bought,* For goodness far and near, by horsemen that are sought) Fore-right upon her way she with a merrier gale, To Borough-Bridge makes on, to meet her sister Swale, 220 (A wondrous holy Flood† (which name she ever hath) For when the Saxons first receiv'd the Christian Faith, Paulinus of old Yorke, the zealous Bishop then, In Swale's abundant stream christ'ned ten thousand men, With women and their babes, a number more beside, 225 Upon one happy day, whereof she boasts with pride) Which springs not far from whence Your hath her silver head;

And in her winding banks along my bosom led,
As she goes swooping by, to Swaledale whence she springs,
That lovely name she leaves, which forth a Forest brings,
230
The Valleys' style that bears, a braver sylvan maid,
Searce any Shire can show; when to my River's aid, Come Barney, Arske, and Marske, their sovereign Swale to guide,

From Applegarth's wide waste, and from New Forest side.
Whose Fountains by the Fauns, and Satyrs, many a year, 235
With youthful greens were crown'd, yet could not stay them there,

But they will serve the Swale, which in her wand'ring course, A Nymph nam'd Holgat hath, and Risdale, all whose force, Small though (GOD wot) it be, yet from their Southern shore, With that salute the Swale, as others did before, At Richmond* and arrive, which much doth grace the Flood, For that her precinct long amongst the Shires hath stood: But Yorkshire wills the same her glory to resign. When passing thence the Swale, this minion Flood of mine Next takes into her train, clear Wiske, a wanton girl, As though her wat'ry path were pay'd with orient pearl. So wondrous sweet she seems, in many a winding gyre, As though she gambolds made, or as she did desire, Her labyrinth-like turns, and mad meand'red trace, With marvel should amaze, and coming doth imbrace North-Alecton, + by whom her honour is increast, Whose Liberties include a County at the least, To grace the wand'ring Wiske, then well upon her way, Which by he count'nance thinks to carry all the sway; When having her receiv'd, Swale bonny Codbick brings, And Willoubeck with her, two pretty Rivellings. And Bedall bids along, then almost at the Oute.

Who with these Rills enrich'd begins herself to rouse. When that great Forest-Nymph fair Gautresse on her way, She sees to stand prepar'd, with garlands fresh and gay To deck up Ouze, before herself to Yorke she show, So out of my full womb the Fosse doth likewise flow, That meeting thee at Yorke, under the City's side, Her glories with thyself doth equally divide, The East part wat'ring still, as thou dost wash the West, 265 By whose imbraces Yorke aboundantly is blest. So many Rivers I continually maintain, As all those lesser Floods that into Darwin strain. Their Fountains find in me, the Ryedale naming Rye, Fosse, Rycall, Hodbeck, Dow, with Semen, and them by 270 Clear Costwy, which herself from Blackmore in doth bring. And playing as she slides through shady Pickering, To Darwent homage doth; and Darwent that divides The East-Riding and me, upon her either sides, Although that to us both, she most indifferent be, And seemeth to affect her equally with me, From my division yet her fountain doth derive, And from my Blackmore here her course doth first contrive. Let my dimensions then be seriously pursued,

Let my dimensions then be seriously pursued,
And let great Britain see in my brave latitude,
How in the high'st degree, by Nature I am grac'd;
For tow'rds the Craven Hills, upon my West are plac'd
New-Forest, Applegarth, and Swaledale, Dryads* all,
And lower towards the Ouze, if with my Floods ye fall,
The goodly Gautresse keeps chief of my sylvan kind,
285
There stony Stammore view, bleak with the sleet and wind,
Upon this Eastern side, so Ryedale dark and deep,
Amongst whose groves of yore, some say that elves did keep;
Then Pickering, whom the Fauns beyond them all adore,
By whom not far away, lies large-spread Blackimore,

The Cleeveland North from these, a state that doth maintain, Leaning her lusty side to the great German Main, Which if she were not here confined thus in me, A Shire even of herself might well be said to be.

Nor less hath Pickering Leigh, her liberty than this, North-Alerton a Shire so likewise reckonéd is; And Richmond of the rest, the greatest in estate, A County justly call'd, that them accommodate; So I North-Riding am, for spaciousness renown'd, Our mother Yorkshire's eld'st, who worthily is crown'd 300 The Queen of all the Shires, on this side Trent, for we The Ridings several parts of her vast greatness be, In us, so we again have several seats, whose bounds Do measure from their sides so many miles of grounds, That they are called Shires; like to some mighty King, May Yorkshire be compar'd* (the lik'st of any thing), Who hath Kings that attend, and to his State retain, And yet so great, that they have under them again Great Princes, that to them be subject, so have we Shires subject unto us, yet we her subjects be; 310 Although these be enough sufficiently to show, That I the other two for bravery quite out-go: Yet look ye up along into my setting side, Where Teis first from my bounds, rich Duncluct doth divide, And you shall see those Rills, that with their wat'ry prease, Their most belovéd Teis so plenteously increase, The clear yet lesser Lune, the Bander, and the Gret, All out of me do flow; then turn ye from the set, And look but tow'rds the rise, upon the German Main, Those rarities and see, that I in me contain; My Scarborough, which looks as though in heaven it stood, To those that lie below, from th' Bay of Robin Hood, Even to the fall of Teis; let me but see the man,

That in one tract can show the Wonders* that I can, Like Whitbie's self I think, there's none can show but I, O'er whose attractive earth there may no wild-geese fly, But presently they fall from off their wings to ground: If this no Wonder be, where's there a Wonder found, And stones like serpents there, yet may ye more behold, That in their natural gyres are up together roll'd. 330 The rocks by Moultgrave too, my glories forth to set, Out of their crannied cleeves, can give you perfect jet, And upon Huntclipnab, you everywhere may find, (As though nice Nature lov'd to vary in this kind) Stones of a spherick form of sundry mickles fram'd, 335 That well they globes of stone, or bullets might be nam'd For any ordnance fit: which broke with hammers' blows, Do headless snakes of stone, within their rounds enclose. Mark Gisborough's gay site, where Nature seems so nice, As in the same she makes a second Paradise, 340 Whose soil imbroidered is, with so rare sundry flowers, Her large oaks so long green, as summer there her bowers Had set up all the year, her air for health refin'd, Her earth with allome veins most richly intermin'd. In other places these might Rarities be thought, 345 So common but in me, that I esteem as nought. Then could I reckon up my Ricall, making on By Rydale, towards her dear-lov'd Darwent, who's not gone Far from her pearly springs, but underground she goes; As up towards Cruren Hills, I many have of those, 350 Amongst the crannied cleeves, that through the caverns creep, And dimbles hid from day, into the earth so deep, That often-times their sight, the senses doth appall, Which for their horrid course, the people Helbecks call, Which may for ought I see, be with my Wonders set, 355 And with much marvel seen: that I am not in debt

To none that neighboureth me; nor ought can they me lend. When Darwent bad her stay, and there her speech to end, For that East-Riding call'd, her proper cause to plead: For Darwent a true Nymph, a most impartial maid, 360 And like to both allied, doth will the last should have That privilege, which time to both the former gave, And wills th' East-Riding then, in her own cause to speak, Who mildly thus begins: *Although I be but weak, To those two former parts, yet what I seem to want 365 In largeness, for that I am in my compass scant, Yet for my site I know, that I them both excell; For mark me how I lie, yea note me very well, How in the East I reign (of which my name I take), And my broad side do bear up to the German Lake, 370 Which bravely I survey; then turn ye and behold Upon my pleasant breast, that large and spacious Ouldt Of Yorke that takes the name, that with delighted eyes, When he beholds the sun out of the seas to rise, With pleasure feeds his flocks, for which he scarce gives place

To Cotswold, and for what becomes a pastoral grace,
Doth go beyond him quite; then note upon my South,
How all along the shore, to mighty Humber's mouth,
Rich Holdernesse I have, excelling for her grain,
By whose much plenty I, not only do maintain
Myself in good estate, but Shires far off that lie,
Up Humber that to Hull, come every day to buy,
To me beholding are; besides, the neighbouring Towns;
Upon the verge whereof, to part her and the Downs,
Hull down to Humber hastes, and takes into her bank
Some less but lively Rills, with waters waxing rank,
She Beverley salutes, whose beauties so delight
The fair-enamoured Flood, as ravish'd with the sight,

That she could ever stay, that gorgeons Fane* to view, But that the Brooks, and Bourns, so hotly her pursue, 390 To Kingston and convey, whom Hull doth newly name, Of Humber-bord'ring Hull, who hath not heard the fame? And for great Humber's self, I challenge him for mine: For whereas Fowley first, and Shelfleet do combine, By meeting in their course, so courteously to twin, 'Gainst whom on th' other side, the goodly Trent comes in, †From that especial place, great Humber hath his reign, Beyond which he's mine own: so I my course maintain, ‡From Kilnsey's pile-like point, along the Eastern shore, And laugh at Neptune's rage, when loudliest he doth roar, 400 Till Flamborough jut forth into the German Sea. And as th' East-Riding more yet ready was to say, Ouse in her own behalf doth interrupt her speech, And of th' imperious land doth liberty beseech, Since she had passed Yorke, and in her wand'ring race, By that fair city's site, receivéd had such grace, She might for it declaim, but more to honour Yorke, She who suppos'd the same to be her only work, Still to renown those Dukes, who strongly did pretend A title to the Crown, as those who did descend 410 From them that had the right, doth this oration make, And to uphold their claim, thus to the Floods she spake:

§They very idly err, who think that blood then spilt, In that long-lasting war, proceeded from the guilt Of the proud Yorkist part; for let them understand, 415 That Richard Duke of Yorke, whose brave and martial hand The Title || undertook, by tyranny and might, Sought not t' attain the Crown, but from successful right,

I The title of the House of Yorke to the Crown.

Which still upheld his claim, by which his valiant son, Great Edward Earl of March, the Garland after won: 430 For Richard Duke of Yorke, at Wakefield Battle slain, Who first that title broach'd, in the Sixth Henry's reign, From Edmond a fifth son of Edward did descend, That justly he thereby no title could pretend, Before them com'n from Gaunt, well known of all to be, 425 The fourth to Edward born, and therefore a degree Before him to the Crown; but that which did prefer His title, was the match with Dame Anne Mortimer, Of Roger Earl of March the daughter, that his claim, From Clarence the third son of great King Edward came, 430 Which Anne deriv'd alone, the right before all other, Of the delapséd Crown, from Philip her fair mother, Daughter and only heir of Clarence, and the bride To Edmond Earl of March; this Anne her daughter tied In wedlock to the Earl of Cambridge, whence the right 435 Of Richard as I said, which fell at Wakefield fight, Descended to his son, brave Edward after King, (Henry the Sixth depos'd) thus did the Yorkists bring Their title from a strain, before the line of Gaunt, Whose issue they by arms did worthily supplant, 440

By this the Ouze perceiv'd great Humber to look grim; (For evermore she hath a special eye to him)

As though he much disdain'd each one should thus be heard,
And he their only King, until the last deferr'd,
At which he seem'd to frown; wherefore the Ouze off breaks,
And to his confluent Floods, thus mighty Humber speaks: 446

*Let Trent her tribute pay, which from their several founts, For thirty Floods of name, to me her King that counts, Be much of me belov'd, brave River; and from me, Receive those glorious rites that Fame can give to thee. 450 And thou marsh-drowning Don, and all those that repair

With thee, that bring'st to me thy easy ambling Aire, Embodying in one bank; and Wharfe, which by thy fall Dost much augment my Ouze, let me embrace von all. My brave West-Riding Brooks, your King you need not scorn, Proud Naiades neither ye, North-Riders that are born; My yellow-sanded Your, and thou my sister Swale, That dancing come to Ouze, through many a dainty Dale, Do greatly me inrich, clear Darwent driving down From Cleeveland; and thou Hull, that highly dost renown 460 Th' East-Riding by thy rise, do homage to your King. And let the Sea-Nymphs thus of mighty Humber sing: That full an hundred Floods my wat'ry Court maintain. Which either of themselves, or in their greater's train. Their tribute pay to me; and for my princely name, 465 From Humber King of Hunns, as anciently it came; So still I stick to him: for from that Eastern King Once in me drown'd, as I my pedigree do bring: So his great name receives no prejudice thereby; For as he was a King, so know ye all that I 470 Am King of all the Floods, that North of Trent do flow; Then let the idle world no more such cost bestow, Nor of the muddy Nile, so great a Wonder make, Though with her bellowing fall, she violently take The neighbouring people deaf; nor Ganges so much praise, 475 That where he narrowest is, eight miles in broadness lays His bosom, nor so much hereafter shall be spoke Of that (but lately found) Guyanian Orenoque, Whose cataract* a noise so horrible doth keep, That it even Neptune frights; what Flood comes to the deep, Than Humber that is heard more horribly to roar? 481 For when my Higret comes, I make my either shore Even tremble with the sound, that I afar do send.

No sooner of this speech had Humber made an end, But the applauding Floods sent forth so shrill a shout, That they were eas'ly heard all Holdernesse about, Above the beachy brack, amongst the marshes rude, When the East-Riding her oration to conclude, Goes on: My Sisters boast that they have little Shires Their subjects, I can show the like of mine for theirs; My Howdon* hath as large a circuit, and as free, On Ouse and Humber's banks, and as much graceth me, My latitude compar'd with those that me oppugn: Not Richmond nor her like, that doth to them belong, Doth grace them more than this doth me, upon my coast, 495 And for their wondrous things, whereof so much they boast, Upon my Eastern side, which juts upon the sea, †Amongst the white-scalp'd cleeves, this Wonder see they may The mullet, and the auke (my fowlers there do find), Of all great Britain brood, birds of the strangest kind, That building in the rocks, being taken with the hand, And cast beyond the cliff, that pointeth to the land, Fall instantly to ground, as though it were a stone, But put out to the sea, they instantly are gone, And fly a league or two before they do return, 505 As only by that air, they on their wings were borne. Then my Prophetick Spring at Veipsey, I may show, That some years is dried up, some years again doth flow; But when it breaketh out with an immoderate birth, It tells the following year of a penurious dearth.

Here ended she her speech, the Ridings all made friends, And from my tiréd hand, my labour'd Canto ends.

THE NINE-AND-TWENTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

The Muse the Bishoprick assays,
And to her fall sings down the Teis,
Then takes she to the dainty Wer,
And with all braveries fitted her.
Tyne tells the Victories by us got,
In foughten Fields against the Seot.
Then through Northumberland she goes,
The Floods and Mountains doth dispose;
And with their glories doth proceed,
Not staying till she come to Tweed.

酿

HE Muse this largest Shire of England having sung, Yet seeing more than this did to her task belong, Looks still into the North, the *Bishopvick** and views.

Which with an eager eye, while wistly she pursues, Teis as a bordering Flood (who thought herself divine), Confining in her course that County Palatine, And Yorke the greatest Shire doth instantly begin, To rouse herself; quoth she, Doth every Rillet win Applause for their small worth's, and I that am a Queen,

With those poor Brooks compar'd, shall I alone be seen Thus silently to pass, and not be heard to sing, When as two Countries are contending for my spring:* For Cumberland, to which the Cumri gave the name, Accounts it to be hers, Northumberland the same, Will needsly hers should be, for that my spring doth rise, 15 So equally twixt both, that he were very wise, Could tell which of these two, me for her own may claim. But as in all these tracts, there's scarce a Flood of fame, But she some Valley hath, which her brave name doth bear: My Teisdale, nam'd of me, so likewise have I here, At my first setting forth, through which I nimbly slide; Then Yorkshire which doth lie upon my setting side, Me Lune and Bauder lends, as in the Song before Th' industrious Muse hath show'd; my Dunelmeniant shore, Sends Huyd to help my course, with some few other Becks, Which time (as it should seem) so utterly neglects, That they are nameless yet; then do I bid adieu, To Bernard's battled Towers, and seriously pursue My course to Neptune's Court, but as forthright I run, The Skern, a dainty Nymph, saluting Darlington, 30 Comes in to give me aid, and being proud and rank, She chane'd to look aside, and spyeth near her bank, Three black and horrid pits, which for their boiling heat, (That from their loathsome brims, do breathe a sulphurous sweat)

Hell-kettles rightly call'd, that with the very sight,
This Water-Nymph, my Skern is put in such affright,
That with unusual speed, she on her course doth haste,
And rashly runs herself into my widenéd waste.
In pomp I thus approach great Amphitrite's state.

† The Bishoprick of Durham.

But whilst Teis undertook her story to relate, 40 Wer waxeth almost wood, that she so long should stand Upon those lofty terms, as though both sea and land [say, Were tied to hear her talk: quoth Wer, what wouldst thou Vain-glorious bragging Brook, hadst thou so clear a way T' advance thee as I have, hadst thou such means and might, How wouldst thou then exult? O then to what a height 46 Wouldst thou put up thy price? hadst thou but such a Trine Of Rillets as I have, which naturally combine, Their springs thee to beget, as these of mine do me, In their consenting sounds, that do so well agree? 50 As Kellop coming in from Kellop-Law her sire, A Mountain much in fame, small Wellop doth require, With her to walk along, which Burdop with her brings. Thus from the full conflux of these three several springs My greatness is begot, as Nature meant to show 55 My future strength and state; then forward do I flow Through my delicious dale, with every pleasure rife, And Wyresdale still may stand, with Teisdale for her life: Comparing of their sites, then casting on my course, So satiate with th' excess of my first natural source, 60 As petty Bourns and Becks, I scorn but once to call, Wascrop a wearish girl, of name the first of all, That I youchsafe for mine, until that I arrive At Ankland, where with force me forward still to drive, Clear Gandlesse gives herself, when I begin to gad, 65 And whirling in and out, as I were waxed mad, I change my posture oft, to many a snaky gyre, To my first fountain now, as seeming to retire: Then suddenly again I turn my wat'ry trail, Now I indent the earth, and then I it engrail With many a turn and trace, thus wand'ring up and down, Brave Durham I behold, that stately-seated Town, That Dunholme hight of yore, even from a desert won,

Whose first foundation Zeal, and Piety begun, By them who thither first Saint Cuthbert's body brought, 75 To save it from the Danes, by fire and sword that sought Subversion of those things, that good and holy were, With which belovéd place, I seem so pleaséd here, As that I clip it close, and sweetly hug it in My clear and amorous arms, as jealous time should win Me further off from it, as our divorce to be, Hence like a lusty Flood most absolutely free, None mixing then with me, as I do mix with none, But scorning a colleague, nor near me any one, To Neptune's Court I come: for note along the strand, 85 From Hartlepoole even to the point of Sunderland, As far as Wardenlaws* can possibly survey; There's not a Flood of note hath entrance to the sea.

Here ended she her Speech, when as the goodly Tyne, (Northumberland that parts from this Shire Palatine)

Which patiently had heard, look as before the Wer
Had taken up the Teis, so Tyne now takes up her,
For her so tedious talk, Good Lord (quoth she) had I
No other thing wherein my labour to imply,
But to set out myself, how much well could I say
In mine own proper praise, in this kind every way
As skilful as the best; I could if I did please,
Of my two fountains tell, which of their sundry ways,
The South and North are nam'd, entitled both of Tyne.
As how the prosperous springs of these two Floods of

Are distant thirty miles, how that the South-Tyne nam'd, From Stanmore takes her spring, for mines of brass that's fam'd,

How that nam'd of the North, is out of Wheel-fell sprung, Amongst these English Alps, which as they run along,

England and Scotland here impartially divide.

How South-Tyne setting out from Cumberland is plied,
With Hartley which her hastes, and Tippall that doth strive,
By her more sturdy stream, the Tyne along to drive;
How th' Allans, th' East, and West, their bounties to her bring,

Two fair and full-brimm'd Floods, how also from her spring, My other North-nam'd Tyne, through Tyndale maketh in, 111 Which Shele her hand-maid hath, and as she hastes to twin With th' other from the South, her sister, how clear Rhead. With Perop comes prepar'd, and Cherlop, me to lead. Through Ridsdale on my way, as far as Exham, then Dowell me homage doth, with blood of Englishmen. Whose stream was deeply dy'd in that most cruel war Of Lancaster and Yorke. Now having gone so far Their strengths me their dear Time, do wondrously enrich. As how clear Durwent draws down to Newcastle, which The honour hath alone to entertain me there. As of those mighty ships, that in my mouth I bear, Fraught with my country coal, of this Newcastle* nam'd, For which both far and near, that place no less is fam'd, Than India for her mines; should I at large declare My glories, in which Time commands me to be spare, And I but slightly touch, which stood I to report, As freely as I might, ye both would fall too short Of me; but know that Type hath greater things in hand: For, to trick up ourselves, whilst trifling thus we stand, 130 Bewitch'd with our own praise, at all we never note How the Albanian Floods now lately set affoat. With th' honour to them done, take heart, and loudly cry Defiance to us all, on this side Twee! that lye; And hark the high-brow'd Hills aloud begin to ring, With sound of things that Forth prepared is to sing:

When once the Muse arrives on the Albanian shore,
And therefore to make up our forces here before
The on-set they begin, the Battles we have got,
Both on our earth and theirs, against the valiant Scot,
I undertake to tell; then Muses I intreat
Your aid, whilst I these Fights in order shall repeat:

When mighty Malcolme here had with a violent hand, (As he had oft before) destroy'd Northumberland, In Rufus' troubled reign, the warlike Mowbray then, This Earldom that possest, with half the power of men, For conquest which that King from Scotland hither drew, At Anwick* in the field their armies overthrew; Where Malcolme and his son, brave Edward both were found, Slain on that bloody field: So on the English ground, When David King of Scots, and Henry his stern son, Entitled by those times, the Earl of Huntingdon, Had forag'd all the North, beyond the River Teis, In Stephen's troubled reign, in as tumultuous days As England ever knew, the Archbishop of Yorke, †Stout Thurston, and with him join'd in that warlike work, Ralfe (both for wit and arms), of Durham Bishop then Renown'd, that called were the valiant Clergymen, With th' Earl of Aubemarle, Especk, and Peverell, Knights, And of the Lacies two, oft try'd in bloody fights, 160 Twixt Alverton and Yorke, the doubtful battle got, On David and his son, whilst of th' invading Scot, Ten thousand strew'd the earth, and whilst they lay to Ours followed them that fled, beyond our sister Tweed. And when Fitz-Empresse§ next in Normandy, and here, And his rebellious sons in high combustions were, William the Scotlish King, taking advantage then,

And ent'ring with an host of eighty thousand men, As far as Kendall came, where Captains then of ours, Which aid in Yorkshire rais'd, with the Northumbrian powers, His forces overthrew, and him a prisoner led.

So Longshanks, Scotland's scourge, him to that country sped, Provokéd by the Scots, that England did invade, And on the Borders here such spoil and havoe made, That all the land lay waste betwixt the Tweed and me. This most courageous King, from them his own to free, Before proud Berwick set his puissant army down, And took it by strong siege, since when that warlike town, As Cautionary long the English after held. But tell me, all you Floods, when was there such a Field 180 By any nation yet, as by the English won, Upon the Scottish power, as that of Halidon,* Seven Earls, nine hundred Horse, and of Foot-soldiers more, Near twenty thousand slain, so that the Scotlish gore Ran down the Hill in streams, even in Albania's sight. By our Third Edward's prowess, that most renowned knight, As famous was that Fight of his against the Scot, As that against the French, which he at Cressy got. And when that conquering King did afterward advance His title, and had past his warlike powers to France, 190 And David King of Scots here ent'red to invade. To which the King of France did that false Lord persuade, Against his given faith, from France to draw his bands. To keep his own at home, or to fill both his hands With war in both the realms: was ever such a loss, To Scotland yet befell, as that at Nevill's Crosse, + Where fifteen thousand Scots their souls at once forsook, Where stout John Copland then, King David prisoner took, I' th' head of all his troops, that bravely there was seen ! When English Philip, that brave Amazonian Queen,

Encouraging her men, from troop to troop did ride,
And where our Clergy had their ancient valour tried:
Thus often coming in, they have gone out too short.
And next to this the Fight of Nesbit* I report,
When Hebborn, that stout Scot, and his had all their hire, 205
Which int' our Marches came, and with invasive fire,
Our villages laid waste, for which defeat of ours,
When doughty Douglasse came with the Albanian powers.
At Holmdon do but see, the blow our Hotspurre gave
To that bold daring Scot, before him how he drave
His army, and with shot, of our brave English bows,
Did wound them on the backs, whose breasts were hurt with blows,

Ten thousand put to sword, with many a lord and knight, Some prisoners, wounded some, some others slain outright, And ent'ring Scotland then, all Tividale o'er-ran.

Or who a braver Field† than th' Earl of Surrey wan, Where their King James the Fourth himself so bravely bore, That since that age wherein he liv'd, nor those before, Yet never such a King in such a battle saw, [draw, Amongst his fighting friends, where whilst he breath could He bravely fought on foot, where Flodden Hill was strew'd With bodies of his men, well-near to mammocks hew'd, 222 That on the mountain's side, they covered near a mile, Where those two valiant Earls of Lenox and Arguyle, Were with their sovereign slain, Abbots, and Bishops there, Which had put armour on, in hope away to bear 226 The victory with them, before the English fell.

But now of other Fields, it fits the Muse to tell, As when the noble Duke of Norfolke made a road‡ To Scotland, and therein his hostile fire bestow'd On well-near thirty towns, and staying there so long,

Till victual waxéd weak, the winter waxing strong, Returning over Tweed, his booties home to bring, Which to the very heart did vex the Scottish King, The fortune of the Duke extremely that did grutch, Remaining there so long, and doing there so much, Thinking to spoil and waste, in England as before, The English men had done on the Albanian shore, And gathering up his force, before the English fled To Scotland's utmost bounds, thence into England sped, When that brave Bastard son of Dacres, and his friend, John Musgrave, which had charge the Marches to attend, With Wharton, a proud knight, with scarce four hundred Horse,

Encount'ring on the plain with all the Scottish force,
Thence from the Field with them, so many prisoners brought,
Which in that furious fight were by the English caught, 236
That there was scarce a page or lackey but had store, [more,
Earls, Barons, Knights, Esquires, two hundred there and
Of ordinary men, seven hundred made to yield,
There scarcely hath been heard, of such a foughten Field, 260
That James the Fifth to think, that but so very few,
His universal power so strangely should subdue,
So took the same to heart, that it abridg'd his life.
Such foils by th' English given, amongst the Scots were rife.

These on the English earth, the English men did gain; 255 But when their breach of faith did many times constrain Our nation to invade, and carry conquests in To Scotland; then behold, what our success hath been, Even in the latter end of our Eighth Henry's days, Who Seymor sent by land, and Dudley sent by seas, with his full forces then, O Forth, then didst thou bear, That navy on thy stream, whose bulk was fraught with fear, When Edenbrough and Leeth, into the air were blown*

With powder's sulphurous smoke, and twenty towns were thrown

Upon the trampled earth, and into ashes trod;
As int' Albania when we made a second road,
In our Sixth Edward's days, when those two martial men,
Which conquered there before, were thither sent again:
But for their high deserts, with greater titles grac'd,
The first created Duke of Somerset, the last
The Earl of Warwicke made, at Muscleborough Field,
Where many a doughty Scot that did disdain to yield,
Was on the earth laid dead, where as for five miles space
In length, and four in breadth, the English in the chace,
With carcases of Scots, strew'd all their natural ground,
The number of the slain were fourteen thousand found,
And fifteen hundred more ta'en prisoners by our men.

So th' Earl of Sussex next to Scotland sent again,*

To punish them by war, which on the Borders here,
Not only robb'd and spoil'd, but that assistants were

To those two puissant Earls, Northumberland, who rose
With Westmerland his peer, suggested by the foes
To great Eliza's reign, and peaceful government;
Wherefore that puissant Queen him to Albania sent,
Who fifty rock-rear'd pyles and castles having cast
Far lower than their sites, and with strong fires defac'd
Three hundred towns, their wealth, with him worth carrying brought

To England over Tweed; when now the Floods besought The Tyne to hold her tongue, when presently began A rumour which eachwhere through all the country ran, 200 Of this proud River's speech, the Hills and Floods among, And Lowes, a Forest-Nymph, the same so loudly sung, [ran, That it through Tindale straight, and quite through Kidsdale And sounded shriller there, then when it first began,

That those high Alpine Hills,* as in a row they stand, 295 Receiv'd the sounds, which thus went on from hand to hand.

The high-rear'd Red-Squire first, to Aumond Hill it told, When Aumond great therewith, nor for his life could hold, To Kembelspeth again, the business but relate, To Black-Brea he again, a Mountain holding state With any of them all, to Cocklaw he it gave; nd Cocklaw it again, to Cheviot, who did rave Vith the report thereof; he from his mighty stand, Resounded it again through all Northumberland, That White-Squire lastly caught, and it to Berwick sent, 305 That brave and warlike town, from thence incontinent. The sound from out the South, into Albania came, And many a lusty Flood, did with her praise inflame, Affrighting much the Forth, who from her trance awoke, And to her native strength her presently betook Against the Muse should come to the Albanian coast.

But Pictswall† all this while, as though he had been lost, Not mention'd by the Muse, began to fret and fume, That every petty Brook thus proudly should presume To talk; and he whom first the Romans did invent, And of their greatness yet, the long'st-liv'd monument, Should this be over-trod; wherefore his wrong to wreak, In their proud presence thus, doth agéd Pictswall speak:

Methinks that Offa's Ditch in Cambria should not dare
To think hinself my match, who with such cost and care
The Romans did erect, and for my safeguard set
Their legions, from my spoil the prolling Pict to let,
That often in-roads made, our earth from them to win,
By Adrian beaten back, so he to keep them in,
To sea from East to West, begun me first a wall
Of eighty miles in length, twixt Type and Eden's fall:

Long making me they were, and long did me maintain.

Nor yet that Trench which tracts the Western Wiltshire

Plain,

Of Woden, Wansdyke call'd, should parallel with me, Comparing our descents, which shall appear to be 330 Mere upstarts, basely born: for when I was in hand, The Saxon had not then set foot upon this land, Till my declining age, and after many a year, Of whose poor petty Kings, those the small labours were. That on Newmarket-Heath, * made up as though but now, 335 Who for the Devil's work the vulgar dare avow, Tradition telling none, who truly it began, Where many a reverent book can tell you of my Man, And when I first decay'd, Severus going on, What Adrian built of turf, he builded new of stone, 340 And after many a time, the Britans me repair'd, To keep me still in plight, nor cost they ever spar'd. Towns stood upon my length, where garrisons were laid, Their limits to defend; and for my greater aid, With turrets I was built, where sentinels were plac'd, 345 To watch upon the Pict; so me my makers grac'd, With hollow pipes of brass, along me still that went, By which they in one fort still to another sent, By speaking in the same, to tell them what to do, And so from sea to sea could I be whispered through: Upon my thickness, three march'd eas'ly breast to breast, Twelve foot was I in height, such glory I possest.

Old Pictswall with much pride thus finishing his plea, Had in his utmost course attain'd the Eastern Sea, Yet there was Hill nor Flood once heard to clap a hand; 355 For the Northumbrian Nymphs had come to understand, That Tyne exulting late o'er Scotland in her Song, (Which over all that realm report had loudly rung)

The Calidonian Forth* so highly had displeas'd,
And many another Flood (which could not be appeas'd), 360
That they had vow'd revenge, and proclamation made,
That in a learnéd war the foe they would invade,
And like stout Floods stand free from this supputed shame,
Or conqueréd give themselves up to the English name:
Which these Northumbrian Nymphs, with doubt and terror
strook,

Which knew they from the foe, for nothing were to look, But what by skill they got, and with much care should keep, And therefore they consult by meeting in the deep, To be delivered from the ancient enemy's rage, That they would all upon a solemn pilgrimage 370 Unto the Holy-Isle, the virtue of which place, They knew could very much avail them in this case: For many a blessed Saint in former ages there, Secluded from the world, to abstinence and prayer, Had given up themselves, which in the German Main, And from the shore not far, did in itself contain Sufficient things for food, which from those holy men, That to devotion liv'd, and sanctimony then, It Holy-Isle was call'd, for which they all prepare, As I shall tell you how, and what their number are. $\pm$ 380 With those the farthest off, the first I will begin, As Pont a peerless Brook, brings Blyth which putteth in With her, then Wansbeck next in wading to the Main. Near Marget meets with Font, which followeth in her train; Next them the little Lyne alone doth go along, When Cocket cometh down, and with her such a throng, As that they seem to threat the Ocean; for with her

Comes Ridley, Ridland next, with Usway, which prefer Their fountains to her Flood, who for her greater fame, Hath at her fall an Isle, call'd Cocket, of her name,

As that great Neptune should take notice of her state;
Then Alne by Anwicke comes, and with as proud a gait,
As Cocket came before, for whom at her fair fall,
(In bravery as to show, that she surpass'd them all)
The famous Isle of Ferne, and Staples aptly stand,
And at her coming forth, do kiss her crystal hand.

Whilst these resolv'd upon their pilgrimage, proceed, Till for the love she bears to her dear Mistress Tweed, Of Bramish leaves the name, by which she hath her birth; And though she keep her course upon the English earth, 400 Yet Bowbent, a bright Nymph, from Scotland coming in, To go with her to Tweed, the wanton Flood doth win. Though at this headstrong Stream, proud Flodden from his height,

Doth daily seem to fret, yet takes he much delight
Her loveliness to view, as on to Tweed she strains,
Where whilst this Mountain much for her sweet sake sustains.

This Canto we conclude, and fresh about must cast, Of all the English Tracts, to consummate the last.

THE THIRTIETH SONG.

THE ARGUMENT.

Of Westmerland the Muse now sings, And fetching Eden from her springs, Sets her along, and Kendall then Surveying, beareth back again: And climbing Skidow's lofty Hill, By many a River, many a Rill, To Cumberland, where in her way, She Copland calls, and doth display Her beauties, back to Eden goes, Whose Floods, and Fall she aptly shows.

ET cheerly on my Muse, no whit at all dismay'd,

But look aloft tow'rds heaven, to Him Whose powerful aid; [dry soils,

Hath led thee on thus long, and through so sun-Steep Mountains, Forests rough, deep Rivers, that thy toils Most sweet refreshings seem, and still thee comfort sent, a Against the bestial ront, and boorish rabblement Of those rude vulgar sots, whose brains are only slime, Born to the doting world, in this last iron Time, So stony, and so dull, that Orpheus which (men say) By the inticing strains of his melodious lay,
Drew rocks and aged trees, to whether he would please;
He might as well have mov'd the universe as these;
But leave this fry of hell in their own filth defil'd,
And seriously pursue the stern Westmerian Wild,
**First seizing in our Song, the South part of the Shire,
Where Westmerland to West, by wide Wymander Mere,
The Eboracean fields her to the Rising bound,
Where Can first creeping forth, her feet hath scarcely found,
But gives that Dale her name, where Kendale town doth stand,

For making of our cloth scarce match'd in all the land. Then keeping on her course, though having in her train, But Sput, a little Brook, then Winster doth retain. Tow'rds the Vergivian Sea, by her two mighty Falls, (Which the brave Roman tongue, her Catadupæ calls) This eager River seems outrageously to roar. 25 And counterfeiting Nile, to deaf the neighbouring shore, To which she by the sound apparantly doth show, The season foul or fair, as then the wind doth blow: For when they to the North, the noise do easliest hear, They constantly affirm the weather will be clear; 30 And when they to the South, again they boldly say, It will be clouds or rain the next approaching day. To the Hibernick Gulf, when soon the River hastes, And to those queachy Sands, from whence herself she casts, She likewise leaves her name as every place where she, In her clear course doth come, by her should honoured be. But back into the North from hence our course doth lve. As from this fall of Can, still keeping in our eye, The source of long-liv'd Lun, I long-liv'd do her call; For of the British Floods, scarce one amongst them all.

Such state as to herself, the Destinies assign, By christ'ning in her course a County Palatine, For Luncuster so nam'd, the Fort upon the Lun, And Lancashire the name from Lancaster begun: Yet though she be a Flood, such glory that doth gain, 45 In that the British Crown doth to her state pertain, Yet Westmerland alone, not only boasts her birth, But for her greater good the kind Westmerian earth, Clear Burbeck her bequeaths, and Barrow to attend Her grace, till she her name to Lancaster do lend. With all the speed we can, to Cumberland we hie, (Still longing to salute the utmost Albany) By Eden, issuing out of Husseat-Morvill Hill, And pointing to the North, as then a little Rill, There simply takes her leave of her sweet sister Swale, Born to the self-same Sire, but with a stronger gale, Tow'rds Humber hies her course, but Eden making on, Through Malerstrang* hard by, a Forest woe-begone In love with Eden's eyes, of the clear Naiades kind, Whom thus the Wood-Nymph greets: What passage shalt thou find,

My most beloved Brook, in making to thy bay,
That wand'ring art to wend through many a crooked way,
Far under hanging hills, through many a cragged strait,
And few the wat'ry kind, upon thee to await,
Opposéd in thy course with many a rugged cliff,
Besides the Northern winds against thy stream so stiff,
As by main strength they meant to stop thee in thy course,
And send thee eas'ly back to Morvill to thy source?
O my bright lovely Brook, whose name doth bear the sound
Of God's first Garden-plot, th' imparadizéd ground,
Wherein He placéd man, from whence by sin he fell.
O little blesséd Brook, how doth my bosom swell,

· The first place of note which she runs through.

With love I bear to thee, the day cannot suffice For Malerstang to gaze upon thy beauteous eyes.

This said, the Forest rubb'd her rugged front the while, 75 Clear Eden looking back, re-greets her with a smile, And simply takes her leave, to get into the Main; [strain When Below a bright Nymph, from Stanmore down doth To Eden, as along to Appleby she makes, Which passing to her train, next Troutbeck in she takes, 80 And Levenant, then these, a somewhat lesser Rill, When Glenkwin greets her well, and happily to fill, Her more abundant banks, from Ulls, a mighty Mere On Cumberland's confines, comes Eymot neat and clear, And Loder doth allure, with whom she haps to meet, 85 Which at her coming in, doth thus her Mistress greet: Quoth she, Thus for myself I say, that where I swell,

Quoth she, Thus for myself I say, that where I swell,
Up from my fountain first, there is a Tiding-well,
That daily ebbs and flows, as writers do report,
The old Euripus doth, or in the self-same sort,
The Venedocian* Fount, or the Demetian Spring,*
Or that which the cold Peake doth with her Wonders bring,
Why should not Loder then, her Mistress Eden please,
With this, as other Floods delighted are with these?

When Eden, though she seem'd to make unusual haste, & About clear Loder's neck, yet lovingly doth cast. Her oft-infolding arms, as Westmerland she leaves, Where Cumberland again as kindly her receives. Yet up her wat'ry hands, to Winfield Forest holds. In her rough woody arms, which amorously infolds. Clear Eden coming by, with all her wat'ry store, In her dark shades, and seems her parting to deplore. [Sands,

This Cumberland cuts out, and strongly doth confine, 105 This meeting there with that, both merely maritime, Where many a dainty Rill out of her native Dale, To the Vergivian makes, with many a pleasant gale; As Eske her farth'st, so first, a coy-bred Cumbrian lass, Who cometh to her road, renowned Ravenglasse, 110 By Devock driven along (which from a large-brimm'd lake, To hie her to the sea, with greater haste doth make), Meets Nyte, a nimble Brook, their rendezvous that keep In Ravenglasse, when soon into the bluish deep Comes Irt, of all the rest, though small, the richest girl, 115 Her costly bosom strew'd with precious orient pearl, Bred in her shining shells, which to the dew doth yawn, Which dew they sucking in, conceive that lusty spawn, Of which when they grow great, and to their fulness swell, They cast, which those at hand there gathering, dearly sell, This clear pearl-pavéd Irt, Bleng to her harbour brings, 121 From Copland coming down, a Forest-Nymph, which sings Her own praise, and those Floods, their fountains that derive

From her, which to extol, the Forest thus doth strive:
Ye Northern Dryades* all adorn'd with mountains steep,
Upon whose hoary heads cold winter long doth keep,
Where often rising hills, deep dales and many make,
Where many a pleasant spring, and manya large-spread lake,
Their clear beginnings keep, and do their names bestow
Upon those humble vales, through which they eas'ly flow;
Whereas the Mountain-Nymphs, and those that do frequent
The fountains, fields, and groves, with wondrous merriment,

By moon-shine many a night, do give each other chase, At Hood-winke, Barley-breake, at Tick, or Prison-base, With tricks, and antique toys, that one another mock,

Then Copland, of this Tract a corner, I would know,
What place can there be found in Britain, that doth show
A surface more austere, more stern from every way?

That who doth it behold, he cannot choose but say,
Th' aspect of these grim hills, these dark and misty dales,
From clouds scarce ever clear'd, with the strong'st Northern gales,

Tell in their mighty roots, some mineral there doth lye,
The Island's general want, whose plenty might supply:
Wherefore as some suppose of Copper Mines in me,
1 Copper-land was call'd, but some will have 't to be
From the old Britans brought, for Cop they use to eall,
The top of many hills, which I am stor'd withall.
Then Eskdale mine ally, and Niterdale so nam'd,
Of floods from you that flow, as Borowdale most fam'd,
With Wasdale walléd in, with hills on every side,
Hows'ever ye extend within your wastes so wide,
For th' surface of a soil, 'a Copland, Copland' cry,
Till to your shouts the Hills with echoes all reply.

Which Copland scarce had spoke, but quickly every Hill, Upon her verge that stands, the neighbouring valleys fill; 156 Helvillon from his height, it through the mountains threw, From whom as soon again, the sound Dunbalrase drew, From whose stone-trophied head, it on to Wendrosse went, Which tow'rds the sea again, resounded it to Dent, 100 That Broadwater therewith within her banks astound, In sailing to the sea, told it in Egremound, [long, Whose buildings, walks, and streets, with echoes loud and Did mightily commend old Copland for her Song. Of Borowdale her dam, of her own naméd Isle, 175 As of her Royal Mines, this River proud the while, Keeps on her course to sea, and in her way doth win Clear Coker her compeer, which at her coming in, Gives Coker-mouth the name, by standing at her fall, Into fair Darwent's banks, when Darwent therewithall, Runs on her wat'ry race, and for her greater fame, Of Neptune doth obtain a Haven of her name,

When of the Cambrian Hills, proud Skiddo that doth show The high'st, respecting whom, the other be but low, Perceiving with the Floods, and Forests, how it far'd, 185 And all their several tales substantially had heard, And of the mountain-kind, as of all other he, Most like Pernassus' self that is suppos'd to be, Having a double head, as hath that sacred Mount, Which those nine sacred Nymphs held in so high account, Bethinketh of himself what he might justly say, 191 When to them all he thus his beauties doth display:

The rough Hibernian Sea, I proudly overlook,
Amongst the scattered rocks, and there is not a nook,
But from my glorious height into its depth I pry,
Great hills far under me, but as my pages lie:
And when my helm of clouds upon my head I take,
At very sight thereof, immediately I make
Th' inhabitants about, tempestuous storms to fear,
And for fair weather look, when as my top is clear;
Great Fourness' mighty Fells, I on my South survey:

So likewise on the North, Albania makes me way, Her countries to behold, when Scurfell* from the sky, That Anadale doth crown, with a most amorous eye, Salutes me every day, or at my pride looks grim, 205 Oft threat'ning me with clouds, as I oft threat'ning him: So likewise to the East, that rew of Mountains tall. Which we our English Alps may very aptly call, That Scotland here with us, and England do divide, As those, whence we them name upon the other side, 210 Do Italy, and France, these Mountains here of ours, That look far off like clouds, shap'd with embattled towers, Much envy my estate, and somewhat higher be, By lifting up their heads, to stare and gaze at me. Clear Darwent dancing on, I look at from above, As some enamouréd youth, being deeply struck in love, His mistress doth behold, and every beauty notes; Who as she to her fall, through fells and valleys floats, Oft lifts her limber self above her banks to view, How my brave by-clift top, doth still her course pursue. 220 O all ye Topick Gods, that do inhabit here, To whom the Romans did, those ancient altars rear Oft found upon those hills, now sunk into the soils, Which they for trophies left of their victorious spoils, Ye Genii of these floods, these mountains, and these dales, That with poor shepherds' pipes, and harmless herdsmen's tales 226

Have often pleased been, still guard me day and night, And hold me Skidow still, the place of your delight.

This speech by Skidow spoke, the Muse makes forth again, Tow'rds where the in-born Floods, clear Eden entertain, 230 To Cumberland com'n in, from the Westmerian wastes, Where as the readiest way to Carlill, as she casts, [wild, She with two Wood-Nymphs meets; the first is great and What sylvan is there seen, and be she ne'er so cov. Whose pleasures to the full, these Nymphs do not enjoy, And like Diana's self, so truly living chaste? For seldom any Tract, doth cross their wayless waste, With many a lusty leap, the shaggéd Satyrs show Them pastime every day, both from the meres below. And hills on every side, that neatly hem them in ; The blushing morn to break, but hardly doth begin, But that the ramping goats, swift deer, and harmless sheep, Which there their owners know, but no man hath to keep, The dales do over-spread, by them like motley made; But Westward of the two, by her more widened slade. Of more abundance boasts, as of those mighty Mines, Which in her verge she hath: but that whereby she shines, Is her two dainty Floods, which from two Hills do flow, 251 Which in herself she hath, whose banks do bound her so Upon the North and South, as that she seems to be Much pleased with their course, and takes delight to see How Elne upon the South, in sallying to the sea 255 Confines her: on the North how Wampull on her way, Her purlieus wondrous large, yet limiteth again, Both falling from her earth into the Irish Main. No less is Westward proud of Waver, nor doth win Less praise by her clear Spring, which in her course doth With Wiz, a neater Nymph scarce of the wat'ry kind: And though she be but small, so pleasing Waver's mind, That they entirely mix'd, the Irish Seas embrace, But earnestly proceed in our intended race.

At Eden now arriv'd, whom we have left too long, Which being com'n at length, the Cumbrian Hills among, As she for Carlill coasts, the Floods from everywhere,

Prepare each in their course, to entertain her there. From Skidow her tall sire, first Cauda clearly brings In Eden all her wealth; so Petterell from her Springs, (Not far from Skidow's foot, whence dainty Canda creeps) Along to overtake her Sovereign Eden sweeps, To meet that great concourse, which seriously attend That dainty Cumbrian Queen; when Gilsland down doth send Her Riverets to receive Queen Eden in her course. As Irthing coming in from her most plenteous source, Through many a cruel erag, though she be forc'd to crawl, Yet working forth her way to grace herself withall, First Pultrosse is her page, then Gelt she gets her guide, Which springeth on her South, on her Septentrion side, 280 She crooked Cambeck calls, to wait on her along, And Eden overtakes amongst the wat'ry throng. To Carlill being come, clear Bruscath beareth in, To greet her with the rest, when Eden as to win Her grace in Carlil's sight, the Court of all her state, 285 And Cumberland's chief town, lo thus she doth dilate:

What giveth more delight (brave City) to thy seat, Than my sweet lovely self? a River so complete, With all that Nature can a dainty Flood endow, That all the Northern Nymphs me worthily allow, 290 Of all their Naiades' kind the neatest, and so far Transcending, that ofttimes they in their amorous war, Have offered by my course, and beauties to decide The mastery, with her most vaunting in her pride, That mighty Roman Fort, which of the Picts we call,* 295 But by them near those times was styl'd Severus' wall, Of that great Emperor nam'd, which first that work began, Betwixt the Irish Sea, and German Ocean, Doth cut me in his course near Carlill, and doth end At Boulnesse, + where myself I on the Ocean spend.

And for my Country here (of which I am the chief Of all her wat'ry kind) know that she lent relief, To those old Britans once, when from the Saxons they, For succour hither fled, as far out of their way. Amongst her mighty Wilds, and Mountains freed from fear, And from the British race, residing long time here, Which in their Genuine tongue, themselves did Kimbri name. Of Kimbri-land,* the name of Cumberland first came; And in her praise be't spoke, this soil whose best is mine. That Fountain bringeth forth, from which the Southern Tyne. (So nam'd, for that of North another hath that style) This to the Eastern Sea, that makes forth many a mile, Her first beginning takes, and Vent, and Alne doth lend, To wait upon her forth; but further to transcend To these great things of note, which many Countries call 315 Their wonders, there is not a Tract amongst them all, Can show the like to mine, at the less Sakeld, near To Eden's bank, the like is scarcely anywhere, Stones seventy-seven stand, in manner of a Ring, Each full ten-foot in height, but yet the strangest thing, 220 Their equal distance is, the circle that compose, Within which other stones lie flat, which do inclose The bones of men long dead, (as there the people say); So near to Loder's Spring, from thence not far away, Be others nine-foot high, a mile in length that run, 325 The victories for which these Trophies were begun, From dark oblivion thou, O Time, shouldst have protected. For mighty were their minds, them thus that first erected: And near to this again, there is a piece of ground, A little rising bank, which of the Table-round, 330 Men in remembrance keep, and Arthur's Table name. But whilst these more and more, with glory her inflame, Supposing of herself in these her wonders great,

All her attending Floods, fair Eden do intreat,
To lead them down to sea, when Leven comes along,
And by her double Spring, being mighty them among,
There overtaketh Eske, from Scotland that doth hie,
Fair Eden to behold, who meeting by-and-by
Down from these Western Sands into the sea do fall,
Where I this Canto end, as also therewithall
My England do conclude, for which I undertook,
This strange Herculean toil, to this my Thirtieth Book.

HIS, Drayton's earliest, work has never been included in any edition of his Poems. The only known existing copy of the original black-letter 4to. is in the Royal Library at the British Museum, and is presumed to be unique. The story of its suppression will be found in our Introduction. It has been twice reprinted from that copy, by my friends Mr. Dyce and Mr. Payne Collier; by the former, for the Percy Society, in 1843; and by the latter in his valuable edition of some of Drayton's rarer works, in a handsome 4to., for the Roxburghe Club, 1856. The present impression is from Mr. Dyce's edition, carefully compared with Mr. Collier's and the original in the Museum. The orthography only has been modernized.

Though Drayton never reprinted "The Harmony of the Church," it has considerable claims to our attention, says Mr. Dyce, as the earliest publication of so celebrated a poet.

TO THE GODLY AND VIRTUOUS LADY, THE LADY JANE DEVEREUX, OF MERIVALE.*

Goop Madam,—Oft imagining with myself how to manifest my well-meaning unto your Ladyship, and in my love towards you most unwilling to be found ungrateful, either in the behalf of my country, or the place of my birth: to the one your godly life being a precedent of perfect virtue; to the other your bountiful hospitality an exceeding relief.

Then, good lady, myself, as an admirer of your many virtues and a well-wisher unto your happy and desired estate, do here present the fruits of my labours unto your modest and discreet consideration; hoping that you will measure them, not by my ability, but by their authority; not as poems of Poets, but prayers of Prophets; and vouchsafe to be their gracious Patroness against any graceless parasite; and endeavour yourself, with this good Deborah, Hester, and Judith (whose Songs of Praise I here present to your Ladyship) to the advancing of God's glory and the beautifying of His Church. Thus committing your Ladyship and all your actions to the protection of the Almighty, and my short translation to your courteous censure, I humbly take my leave. London, this 10th of Feb. 1590.

Your Ladyship's to command, in all dutiful services,

TO THE COURTEOUS READER.

GENTLE READER, my meaning is not with the variety of verse to feed any vain humour, neither to trouble thee with devices of my own invention, as carrying an overweening of mine own wit; but here I present thee with these Psalms or Songs of Praise, so exactly translated as the prose would permit, or sense would any way suffer me: which (if thou shalt be the same in heart as thou art in name, I mean a Christian) I doubt not but thou wilt take as great delight in these as in any poetical fiction: I speak not of Mars the god of wars, nor Venus the goddess of love, but of the Lord of Hosts That made heaven and earth: not of toys in Mount Ida, but of Triumphs in Mount Sion: not of vanity, but of Verity: not of tales, but of Truths.

Thus submitting myself unto thy elemency, and my labours unto thy indifferency, I wish thee as myself.

Thine, as his own,

Or as the grass is nourish'd by the rain.

11.

I will describe Jehovall's Name aright, And to That God give everlasting praise: Perfect is He, a God of wondrons might, With judgment He directeth all His ways. He only true, and without sin to trust, Righteons is He, and He is only just.

H

With loathsome sin now are you all defil'd, Not of His Seed, but bastards basely born: And from His mercy therefore quite exil'd Mi chievous men, through folly all forlorn: Is it not He Which hath you dearly bought, Proportion'd you, and made you just of nought?

IV.

Consider well the times and ages past.

Ask thy forefathers, and they shall thee tell,
That when Jehovah did divide at last
Th' inheritance that to the nations fell,
And separating Adam's heirs, He gave
The portion His Israel should have.

v.

His people be the portion of the Lord,
Jacob the lot of His inheritance:
In wilderness He hath thee not abhorr'd,
But in wild deserts did thee still advance;
He taught thee still, and had a care of thee,
And kept thee as the apple of His eye.

VI.

Like as the eagle tricketh up her nest,
Therein to lay her little birds full soft,
And on her back doth suffer them to rest,
And with her wings doth carry them aloft;
Even so the Lord with care hath nourish'd thee,
And thou hast had no other God but He.

VII.

And Great Jehovah giveth unto thee
The fertil'st soil the earth did ever yield,
That thou all pleasure might'st behold and see,
And taste the fruit of the most pleasant field;
Honey for thee out of the flint He brought,
And oil out of the craggy rock He wrought.

VIII.

With finest butter still He hath thee fed,
With milk of sheep He hath thee cherished:
With fat of lambs and rams in Bazan bred,
With flesh of goats He hath thee nourished.
With finest wheat He hath refresht thee still,
And gave thee wine, thereof to drink thy fill.

IX.

But he that should be thankful then for this,
Once waxing fat, began to spurn and kick:
Thou art so cranck,* and such thy grossness is,
That now to lust thy provender doth prick,
That He that made thee thou remembrest not,
And He that sav'd thee thou hast clean forgot.

X.

With idols they offend His gracious eyes,
And by their sin provoke Him unto ire;
To devils they do offer sacrifice,
Forsake their God, and other gods desire,
Gods whose beginnings were but strange and new,
Whom yet their fathers never fear'd nor knew.

XI

He Which begat thee is clean out of mind,
The God Which form'd thee thou dost not regard:
The Lord to anger was therewith inclin'd,
His sons and daughters should Him so reward,
And there He vow'd His cheerful Face to hide,
To see their end, and what would them betide.

Spenser, Ecl. ix.

XII.

For faithless they and froward are become,
And with no God move Me to jealousy;
To anger they provoke Me all and some,
And still offend Me with their vanity,
And with no people I will move them then,
And anger them with vain and foolish men.

XIII.

For why, My wrath is kindled like the fire,
And shall descend to the infernal lake;
The earth shall be consumed in Mine ire,
My flames shall make the mighty mountains quake;
With many plagues I will them still annoy,
And with Mine arrows I will them destroy.

XIV.

With hunger, heat, and with destruction,
I will them burn, consume, and overthrow;
They shall be meat for beasts to feed upon,
The ground invenom'd whereupon they go;
In field, in chamber, still My sword shall slay
Man, maid, and child, with him whose head is gray.

XV.

And I will scatter them both far and near,
And henceforth make their memory to cease,
Save that the furious enemy I fear,
And that his pride should thereby more increase,
And they should say, and forth this rumour ring,
That they, and not the Lord, have done this thing.

XVI.

They are a nation void of counsel quite,
To understand there doth not one intend;

But were they wise, in it they would delight,
And would consider of their latter end:
Can one or two put thousands to the flight,
Except the Lord do help them with His might?

XVII.

For with our God their gods may not compare, Our foes themselves will still the same confess; Their vines of Sodom and Gomorra are, Their grapes of gall, clusters of bitterness; Their wine is like to dragons' poison sure, Or gall of asps that no man may endure.

XVIII.

And have not I laid up in store this thing?

Amongst My treasures do I not it hide?

The recompence with vengeauce will I bring,

And all in time their foot awry shall slide;

For their destruction, lo, is now at hand,

And mischief here even at their heels doth stand!

XIX.

For why? the Lord doth judge the earth alone,
And to His servants show Himself most kind:
When He shall see their power is past and gone,
And none kept up in hold nor left behind,
When men shall say, let us your gods behold,
Where be they now whom ye so much extoll'd?

XX.

Which oft did cat the fatted sacrifice,
And drank the wine of the drink-offering?
Unto your help now let us see them rise:
Lo, I am God, and there is no such thing!
I kill, give life, I wound, make whole again;
Out of My Hands no man can ought retain.

XXI.

I lift My Hands on high to heaven above,
Immortal I, and only live for ever;
My glittering sword I sharp for My behove,
In righteous judgment still I do persever;
I will send vengeance on Mine enemies,
And many plagues on them which Me despise.

XXII.

Mine arrows then of blood shall have their fill,
My sword shall eat the very flesh of men;
For such My saints as they do slay and kill,
And for the captives they imprison then;
And when I once begin revenge to take,
From plague and vengeance then I will not slake.

XXIII.

Ye nations all, honour His people then,
He will revenge His servants' guiltless blood,
And surely plague the vile and wicked men,
Which stoutly have against Him ever stood;
He will show mercy still unto His land,
And on His people brought forth by His Hand.

A Sony of Moses and the Israelites for their Deliverance out of Egypt.

The xv. Chap. of Exodus.

I.

I WILL sing praise unto the Lord for aye, Who hath triumphéd gloriously alone; The horse and rider He hath overthrown, And swallowéd up even in the raging sea. II.

He is my strength, He is my song of praise, He is the God of my salvatión; A temple will I build to Him alone, I will exalt my fathers' God alway.

III.

The Lord Jehovah is a Man of War; Pharaoh, his chariots, and his mighty host, Were by His Hand, in the wild waters lost, His captains drowned in Red Sea so far.

IV.

Into the bottom there they sank like stones, The mighty depths our enemies devour: Thy own Right Hand is glorious in Thy power, Thy own Right Hand hath bruiséd all their bones.

V.

And in Thy glory Thou subverted hast The rebels rising to resist Thy power; Thou sent'st Thy wrath which shall them all devour Even as the fire doth the stubble waste.

VI.

And with a blast out of Thy nostrills*
The flowing flood stood still as any stone;
The waters were congealed all in one,
And firm and sure as any rocks or hills.

* Noticills must be pronounced as a trisyllable, a not uncommon pronunciation in old writers. So fire above is her.

VII.

The furious foe so vainly vanneth still, And voweth to pursue with endless toil, And not return till he have got the spoil; With fire and sword they will destroy and kill.

VIII.

Thou sent'st the wind which overwhelm'd them all; The surging seas came sousing in again; As in the water, so with might and main, Like lead, unto the bottom down they fall.

IX.

O Mighty Lord, who may with Thee compare? Amongst the gods I find none like to Thee, Whose glory's in holiness, Whose fears in praises be, Whose chief delights in working wonders are.

 $\mathbf{X}$

Thou stretchest out Thy Right and Holy Arm, And presently the earth did them devour; And Thou wilt bring us by Thy mighty power, As Thou hast promis'd, without further harm.

XI.

And for Thy people, Lord, Thou shalt provide A place and seat of quietness and rest:
The nations all with fear shall be opprest,
And Palestina quake for all her pride.

TIX

The dukes of Edom shall hang down the head, The Moabites shall tremble then for fear, The Canaanites in presence shall appear, Like unto men whose fainting hearts were dead.

XIII.

And fear and dread shall fall on them, alas! Because Thou helpest with Thy Mighty Hand; So still as stones amazed they shall stand, O Mighty Lord, while Thine elect do pass!

XIV.

And Thou shalt bring Thy chosen and elect Unto the mount of Thine inheritance, A place prepar'd Thy people to advance; A sanctuary there Thou shalt erect,

Which Thou, O Lord, establish'd hast therefore, And there Thy Name shall reign for evermore!

The most excellent Song, which was 'Sulomon's, wherein is declared the true and unfrigued love between Christ and His Church, containing riii. chapters.

CHAP. I.

LET Him embrace His dear with many a friendly kiss,
For why, Thy love than any wine to me more pleasant is;
In smell Thou art most like sweet odours unto me,
Thy Name like precious ointment is, so sweet as sweet may be;

Therefore the virgins all of Thee enamoured are,
Entice me on to follow Thee,—lo, we ourselves prepare!
The King kath brought me into chamber richly dight;
He is my joy, His love is sweet, the good in Him delight.
Ye daughters of Jerusalem, although that brown I be,
Than arras rich or cedar's fruits I seemlier am to see:
Disdain me not, although I be not passing fair,
For why, the glowing sunny rays discolouréd have my laire;*

My mother's darlings dear, with envy swelling so, Have me constrain'd to keep their vine, thus I mine own forgo.

Tell me, my Sweet and Dear, where Thou Thy flock dost feed,

Or where Thy little lamblings rest about midday indeed,

Else shall I walk about, all wandring like a stray,

And seek Thee, after other flocks, through many an unknown way.

If that my paths, O paragon, be so unknowen to Thee, Go feed Thy flock amongst the tents where none but shepherds be.

My True and Loyal Love, I may Thee well compare

To famous Pharaoh's horses great, which in his chariots are:

Thy cheeks bedeck'd with precious stone, most lovely to behold;

About Thy neck likewise do hang great massy chains of gold.

Fine costly borders, for my Love, of gold we will prepare, 25 With silver stude accordingly, of work surpassing rare.

Whiles He at table sat, perfumes then did I make

Of spikenard sweet and delicate, all for my True Love's sake.

My Love, more sweet than myrrh, between my breasts dcth lie,

Or camphere that doth spring and grow in vine* of Engady.so How fair art thou, My love, My dove, My darling dear! Thine eyes most like unto the doves in sight to Me appear:

O, how exceeding fair and seemly to be seen!

The bed where we together lie is hung with pleasant green;
The beams our house uphold, they all of cedar be;
35

The reaching rafters of the same of fir, that stately tree.

THE SECOND CHAPTER.

I am the fragrant flower of brave vermilion hue,
And lily in the valley low ysprong up fresh and new.
As lily flower excells the thorn or little chyer* of grass,
So far My love the virgins all in beauty doth surpass.
Or as the barren crooked stock unto the straightest tree.
No more the sons unto my Love may ought compared be.
To rest by His sweet side, to me a heavenly bliss;
The fruit that springeth from my Love exceeding pleasant is.

To cellar He me brings of wine aboundant store:

His love displayed over me, how can I wish for more?

Fill forth your flagons, then, whereof the fume may fly;

Bring forth your cates to comfort me,—ah me, for love I die!

His left hand clippingt close about my neck doth hold, His right doth sweetly me imbrace, and eke my corps enfold.

I charge you by the roes and hinds, ye Jewish daughters all,

Not once to stir nor wake My love, until she please to call. But stay, methinks, this is mine own Love's voice I hear: Lo, how He skips from hill to hill! lo, you He doth appear! My Love is like a roe that frisketh in the wood, Or like the strong and stately hart in prime and lusty blood:

He closely shrouds Himself behind our wall, I see,
And through the gate He doth disclose and show Himself to me;

* Chyer. The word is unknown to me. Mr. Dyce queries spire. Mr. Collier says chyre or chire, i.e. blade.

And, calling then, He saith, Come to thine own, My dear, For, lo, the clouds are past and gone, the skies are crystal clear;

The flowers in the field so fair and freshly spring;

The birds do chant with merry glee, the turtle now doth sing;

The fig-trees bear such store that boughs with weight are bent,

The vines with blossoms do abound, which yield a sweet accent!*

Come to thine own, My dear, My darling and My dove; Leave thou the place of thine abode, come to thine own true love.

Let me behold Thy Face, most pleasant to the sight,
And hear my best beloved's Voice that most doth me delight.

Destroy the subtle fox that doth the grapes devour,
For, lo, behold, the time is come, the vines do bud and flower!
My Love to me is true, and I likewise His own,
Which in the lilies takes repast, Himself even all alone:
Until the day doth spring, or shadows fade away,
Be as a roe, or like the harts which on the mountains play.

THE THIRD CHAPTER.

By night within my bed I roaméd here and there;
But all in vain, I could not find my Love and friendly Fere.†
Then straightways up I rose, and searching every street
Throughout the city far and near; but Him I could not meet.

 $\dagger$  Fere = companion.

* Accent. Mr. Payne Collier says that perhaps this is the only instance in our language where accent is used for scent.

The watchmen found me though, to whom I then can say, 5 Have ye not seen mine own true Love of late come this a way?

Then passing them, I found my Love I long had sought,
And to my mother's chamber then my Darling have I brought.

I charge you by the roes and hinds, this yow to Me you make,

Ye Jewish daughters, not to call My love till she do wake. Who's that which doth from wilderness in mighty smoke appear,

Like the perfumes of odours sweet, which merchants hold so dear!

About the bed of Salomon, behold, there is a band
Of threescore valiant Israelites which all in armour stand;
All expert men of war, with sword still ready prest,*

15
Lest foes in night time should approach, when men suspect them least.

King Salomon hath made of Liban tree so sure

A palace brave, whose pillars strong are all of silver pure:
The pavement beaten gold, the hangings purple grain,
The daughters of Jerusalem with joy to entertain.

Ye Sion daughters, see where Salomon is set
In royal throne, and on his head the princely coronet,
Wherewith his mother first adorn'd him (as they say),
When he in marriage linkéd was, even on his wedding day.

THE FOURTH CHAPTER.

Behold, thou art all fair, My love, My heart's delight: Thine eyes so lovely like the doves appear to Me in sight;

* Prest ready, prepared.

Thy hair surpassing fair, and seemly to the eye,
Like to a goodly herd of goats on Gilead-mountain high;
Thy teeth like new-wash'd sheep, returning from the flood,

Whereas not one is barren found, but beareth twins so good; Thy lips like scarlet thread, thy talk doth breed delight; Thy temples like pomegranate fair doth shew to Me in sight; Thy neck like David's Tower, which for defence doth stand, Wherein the shields and targets be of men of mighty hand; wherein the shields and targets be of men of mighty hand; which feed among the lilies sweet, their hunger to assuage. Until the day do spring, and night be banish'd hence, I will ascend into the mount of myrrh and frankincense. Thou art all fair, My love, most seemly eke to see; From head to foot, from top to toe, there is no spot in thee. Come down from Libanon, from Libanon above, And from Amanah's mountain high come to thine own true

From Shener's stately top, from Hermon hill so high, From lions' dens, and from the cliffs where lurking leopards lie.

My spouse and sister dear, thy love hath wounded Me; Thy lovely eye and seemly neck hath made Me yield to thee: Thy love far better is than any wine to Me, Thy odours sweet doth far surpass the smell where spices be.

Thy lips like honeycomb, under thy tongue doth lie

The honey sweet; thy garments smell like Libanon on high:
My spouse a garden is, fast under lock and key,

Or like a fountain closely kept, where sealed is the way.

Like to a pleasant plot I may thee well compare,

Where camphere, spikenard, dainty fruits, with sweet pomegranates are,

Even spikenard, saffron, calamus, and cinnamon do grow, With incense, myrrh, and aloés, with many spices more.

O fountain passing pure, O well of life most dear,
O spring of lofty Libanon, of water crystal clear?
Ye north and southern winds, upon my garden blow,
That the sweet spice that is therein on every side may flow;
Unto His garden place my Love for His repast
Shall walk, and of the fruits therein shall take a pleasant taste.

THE FIFTH CHAPTER.

WITHIN My garden plot, lo, I am present now!

I gatheréd have the myrrh and spice that in aboundance grow;

With honey, milk, and wine I have refresh'd Me here: Eat, drink, My friends, be merry there with hearty friendly cheer.

Although in slumbering sleep it seems to you I lay,
Yet hear I my Beloved knock, methinks I hear Him say,
Open to Me the gate, My love, My heart's delight,
For, lo, My locks are all bedewed with drizzling drops of night!

My garments are put off, then may I not do so:
Shall I defile My feet I wash'd so white as any snow?

Then fast even by the door to me He show'd His hand;
My heart was then enamoured when as I saw Him stand.
Then straightways up I rose to ope the door with speed:
My hands and fingers droppéd myrrh upon the bar indeed.
Then openéd I the door unto my Love at last;
But all in vain, for why, before my Love was gone and past.
There sought I for my love, then could I cry and call;
But Him I could not find, nor He nould* answer me at all.

* Nould ne would, would not.

The watchman found me then, as thus I walk'd astray;
They wounded me, and from my head my veil they took away.

Ye daughters of Jerusalem, if ye my Love do see,
Tell Him that I am sick for love, yea, tell Him this from me.
Thou peerless gem of price, I pray thee to us tell
What is thy Love, what may He be that doth so far excell?
In my Beloved's Face the rose and lily strive;

Among ten thousand men not one is found so fair alive:
His head like finest gold, with secret sweet perfume;
His curled locks hang all as black as any raven's plume;
His eyes be like to doves on rivers' banks below,
Ywash'd with milk, whose colours are most gallant to the show;

His cheeks like to a plot where spice and flowers grow; His lips like to the lily white, from whence pure myrrh doth flow;

His hands like rings of gold with costly chrisalet; *
His belly like the ivory white, with seemly sapphires set;
His legs like pillars strong of marble set in gold;
His countenance like Libanon, or cedars to behold;
His mouth it is as sweet, yea, sweet as sweet may be:
This is my Love; ye virgins, lo, even such an one is He!
Thou fairest of us all, whither is thy Lover gone?
Tell us, and we will go with thee; thou shalt not go alone. 40

THE SIXTH CHAPTER.

Down to His garden place mine own true Love is gone, Among the spice and lilies sweet to walk Himself alone. True am I to my Love; and He my loving make,† Which in the lilies makes abode, and doth His pleasure take.

With Tirzah or Jerusalem thy beauty may be weigh'd, 5 In show like to an army great, whose ensigns are display'd. O, turn away thine eyes! for they have wounded Me: Thy hairs are like a herd of goats on Gilead-mount that be; Thy teeth like new-wash'd sheep returning from the flood, Whereas not one is barren found, but beareth twins a good;

The temples of thy head, within thy locks, to show,
Are like to the pomegranate fruit that in the orchards grow.
Of concubines four score there are, of queens twice treble ten,
Of virgins for the multitude not to be number'd then;
But yet My dove alone and undefiled fere,
Her mother's only daughter is, to her exceeding dear.
The virgins saw My love, and they have lik'd her well,
The queens, and eke the concubines, they say she doth excell.
Who's she I do behold, so like the morning clear,
Or like the moon when towards the full in pride she doth appear?

Bright as the radiant rays that from the sun descend,
Or like an army terrible when ensigns they extend?
Unto the nuts down will I go and fruitful valleys low,
To see if that the vine do bud and the pomegranates grow.
Myself I know not I, ne nothing knew I then:

25
Let me be like a chariot, even of thy noble men.
Return again, O, make return, thou Shulamite so dear;
Let us enjoy thy company; I pray thee sojourn here.
What see you in the Shulamite t in her what may you see,
But like a troop of warlike men that in the armies be?

THE SEVENTH CHAPTER.

How stately are thy steps with brave and lofty pace, Thou dainty princess, darling dear, with comely gallant grace! The joints of thy fair thighs, the which so straight do stand, Are like to curious jewels wrought by cunning workman's hand:

Thy navel like a goblet is, which still with wine doth flow; 5 Thy belly like an heap of wheat, about which lilies grow;

Thy breasts I may compare like to two little roes,

Which follow on their mother's steps, when forth to feed she goes;

Thy neck like to a tower of costly ivory fram'd;

Thine eyes like Heshbon waters clear, by that Bathrabbin nam'd:

Thy nose like Libanon tower, most seemly to the eye, Which towards Damascus city fair, that stately town doth lie; Thy head like scarlet red, thy hair of purple hue: The king in thee doth take delight as in his lady true. How fair art thou, My love, and seemly to the sight! The pleasures that abound in thee, they are My chief delight: Thy stature like the palm, the tall and straightest tree; Thy breasts, the which do thee adorn, most like to clusters be. Upon the pleasant palm, I said, I will take hold,

And rest upon her pleasant boughs, I said, I will be bold: 20 Thy breasts are like a bunch of grapes on the most fruitful vine;

Thy nose in smell like to the fruit of all most pure and fine; The roof of thy sweet mouth like purest wine doth taste, Which makes the very aged laugh, forgetting sorrows past. I am unto my Love a faithful friendly fere, And He is likewise unto me most tender and most dear. Go we into the field, to sport us in the plain, And in the pleasant villages, my Love, let us remain: Then early will we rise, and see if that the vine do flourish, And if the earth accordingly do the pomegranates nourish. 20 I feel the mandrakes smell, within our gates that be: The sweetest things both new and old, my Love, I kept for Thee.

THE EIGHTH CHAPTER.

- O that Thou wert my brother born, that suck'd my mother's breast!
- Then sweetly would I kiss Thy lips, and by Thee take my rest.
- Unto my mother's closet sure mine own Love will I bring, And be obedient unto Him in every kind of thing:
- There will I give to Thee, my Love, the dainty spiced wine.
- And pleasant liquor that distils from the pomegranate fine
- With His left hand He shall support, and eke my head uprear,
- And with the right most lovingly He shall embrace His dear.
- Ye daughters of Jerusalem, do not My love dis-case,*
- But suffer her to take her rest so long as she shall please.
- Who's that which from the wilderness you cometh from above,
- And in this sort familiarly doth lean upon her Love?
- Under a pleasant apple tree, from whence like fruit doth spring,
- Thy mother first conceivéd thee, even forth which did thee bring.
- Let it be like a privy seal within thy secret heart,
- Or like a signet on thy hand thy secrets to impart;
- For jealousy is like the grave, and love more strong than death,
- From whose hot brands there doth proceed a flaming fiery breath:
  - . Dis-case di turb.

The floods cannot allay his heat, nor water quench his flame,
Neither the greatest treasure can countervail the same. 20
Our little sister hath no breasts: what shall we do or say,
When we shall give her to her Spouse upon her wedding day?

If that she be a wall, on that foundation sure
A princely palace will we build of silver passing pure;
And if she be a door, she shall inclosed be
With brave and goodly squared boards of the fine cedar tree.

I am a mighty wall, my breasts like towers high;
Then am I passing beautiful in my Belovéd's eye.
King Salomon a vineyard had in fair Baalhamon field;
Each one in silver yearly doth a thousand pieces yield:
But yet My vineyard, Salomon, thy vine doth far excel
For fruit and goodness of the same, thou know'st it very well:

A thousand silver pieces are even yearly due to Me,
Two thousand likewise unto them the which her keepers be.
O Thou that in the garden dwell'st, learn me Thy voice to know.

That I may listen to the same, as Thy companions do! Fly my Belovéd, hence away, and be Thou like the roe Or as the hart on mountain tops, whereon sweet spices grow.

The Song of Annah for the bringing forth of Samuel her son.

The Second Chap. of the First Book of Samuel.

My heart doth in the Lord rejoice, that living Lord of Might,

Which doth His servant's horn exalt in all His people's sight:

I will rejoice in their despite which erst have me abhorr'd, Because that my salvation dependeth on the Lord.

None is so holy as the Lord; besides Thee none there are; 5 With our God there is no god that may himself compare.

See that no more presumptuously ye neither boast nor vaunt,

Nor yet unseemly speak such things, so proud and arrogant; For why, the counsel of the Lord in depth cannot be sought, Our enterprises and our acts by Him to pass are brought. 10 The bow is broke, the mighty ones subverted are at length, And they which weak and feeble were increased are in strength.

They that were full and had great store, with labour buy their bread.

And they which hungry were and poor, with plenty now are fed;

So that the womb which barren was hath many children borne,

And she which store of children had is left now all forlorn. The Lord doth kill and make alive, His judgments all are just; He throweth down into the grave, and raiseth from the dust.

The Lord doth make both rich and poor; He all our thoughts doth try;

He bringeth low, and eke again exalteth up on high. 20
He raiseth up the simple soul, whom men pursu'd with hate,
To sit amongst the mighty ones in chair of princely state;
For why, the pillars of the earth He placed with His hand,
Whose mighty strength doth still support the weight of all the land.

He will preserve His saints; likewise the wicked men at length

He will confound; let no man seem to glory in his strength.

The enemies of God, the Lord, shall be destroyed all; From heaven He shall thunder send, that on their heads shall fall.

The mighty Lord shall judge the world, and give His power alone

30

Unto the king, and shall exalt His own anointed one.

The Song of Jonah in the whale's belly. In the Second Chap, of Jonah.

In grief and anguish of my heart, my voice I did extend Unto the Lord, and He thereto a willing ear did lend; Even from the deep and darkest pit and the infernal lake, To me He hath bow'd down His ear, for His great mercy's sake.

For Thou into the midst of surging seas so deep

Hast cast me forth, whose bottom is so low and wondrous

Whose mighty wallowing waves, which from the floods do flow.

Have with their power up-swallowed me, and overwhelm'd me tho.

Then said I, lo, I am exil'd from presence of Thy Face!

Yet will I once again behold Thy house and dwelling place:

The waters have encompass'd me, the floods enclos'd me round,

The weeds have sore encumbered me, which in the seas abound:

Unto the valleys down I went, beneath the hills which stand;

The earth hath there environ'd me with force of all the land:

Yet hast Thou still preserved me from all these dangers here,

And brought my life out of the pit, O Lord, my God so dear!

My soul consuming thus with care, I pray'd unto the Lord, And He from out His holy place heard me with one accord. Who to vain lying vanities doth wholly him betake, Doth err, also God's mercy he dot's utterly forsake:

20 But I will offer unto Him the sacrifice of praise,

And pay my vows, ascribing thanks unto the Lord always.

The Prayer of Jeremiah, bewailing the Captivity of the People.

In the Fifth Chap. of his Lamentations.

Call unto mind, O mighty Lord, the wrongs we daily take! Consider and behold the same, for Thy great merey's sake. Our lands and our inheritance mere strangers do possess, The aliens in our houses dwell, and we without redress. We now, alas, are fatherless! and still pursu'd with hate; 5 Our mourning mothers now remain in woeful widows' state. We buy the water which we drink, such is our grievous want,

Likewise the wood even for our use that we ourselves did plant.

Our neeks are subject to the yoke of persecution's thrall, We wearied out with cruel toil, and find no rest at all. 10 Aforetime we in Egypt-land and in Assyria served,

For food our hunger to sustain, lest that we should have starved.

Our fathers, which are dead and gone, have sinnéd wondrous sore,

And we now scourg'd for their offence, ah, woe are we therefore!

Those servile slaves which bondmen be, of them in fear we stand,

Yet no man doth deliver us from cruel caitives' hand. Our livings we are forc'd to get in perils of our lives, The dry and barren wilderness thereto by danger drives. Our skins be scorch'd, as though they had been in an oven dried,

With famine and the penury which here we do abide. 20
Our wives and maids deflowered are by violence and force,
On Sion and in Juda-land, sans pity or remorse.

Our kings by crucl enemies with cords are hanged up,
Our gravest sage and ancient men have tasted of that cup.
Our young men they have put to sword, not one at all they spare,
25

Our little boys upon the tree sans pity hangéd are.
Our elders sitting in the gates can now no more be found,
Our youth leave off to take delight in music's sacred sound.
The joy and comfort of our heart away is fled and gone,
Our solace is with sorrow mix'd, our mirth is turn'd to moan.

Our glory now is laid full low, and buried in the ground, Our sins full sore do burden us, whose greatness doth abound. O holy blessed Sion-hill, my heart is woe for thee!

Mine eyes pour forth a flood of tears this dismal day to see, Which art destroy'd, and now liest waste from sacred use and trade:

Thy holy place is now a den of filthy foxes made.

But Thou, the everliving Lord, Which dost remain for aye, Whose seat above the firmament full sure and still doth stay,

Wherefore dost Thou forsake Thine own? shall we forgotten be?

Turn us, good Lord, and so we shall be turned unto Thee; 40

Lord, call us home from our exile to place of our abode Thou long enough hast punish'd us; O Lord, now spare Thy rod!

The Song of Deborah and Barak.

The Fifth Chap. of Judges.

PRAISE ye the Lord, the Which revenge on Israel's wrongs doth take,

Likewise for those which offered up themselves for Israel's sake.

Hear this, ye kings, ye princes all, give ear with one accord; I will give thanks, yea, sing the praise of Israel's living Lord.

When Thou departedst, Lord, from Seir, and out of Edomfield,

The earth gan quake, the heavens rain, the clouds their water yield:

The mountains high before the Lord have melted every del,*
As Synay did in presence of the Lord of Israel.

In time of Sangar, Anath's son, and in old Jael's days,

The paths were all unoccupied, men sought forth unknown ways:

The towns and cities there lay waste, and to decay they fell, Till Deborah a matron grave became in Israel.

They chose them gods; then garboilst did within their gates abound;

A spear or shield in Israel there was not to be found.

In those which govern Israel my heart doth take delight, 15 And in the valiant people there: O, praise the Lord of Might!

• Del = deal, part. + Garboils = tumults, troubles.

Speak, ye that on white asses ride, and that by Midden* dwell,

And ye that daily tread the ways, see forth your minds you tell.

The clattering noise of archers shot, when as the arrows flew,

Appeased was amongst the sort which water daily drew. 20 The righteousness of God the Lord shall be declared there, And likewise Israel's righteousness, which worship Him in fear.

The people with rejoicing hearts then all with one consent, I mean the Lord's inheritance, unto the gates they went.

Deborah, up, arise, and sing a sweet and worthy song: 25 Barak, lead them as captives forth which unto thee belong. For they which at this day remain do rule like lords alone: The Lord over the mighty ones gives me dominion.

The roots of Ephraim arose gainst Amalek to fight,

And so likewise did Benjamin with all their power and might.

From Machir came a company which chiefest sway did bear,

From Zebulon, which cunning clerks and famous writers were.

The kings which came of Issachar were with Deborah tho, Yea, Issachar and Barak both attend on her also.

He was dismounted in the vale: for the divisions' sake of Reuben, the people there great lamentation make.

Gilead by Jordan made abode, and Dan on shipboard lay, And Asher in the desert, he upon the shore doth stay.

* Midden. Where Drayton got the idea that this is a proper name, I cannot imagine. The word in the original, which our translators have rendered "judyment," is supposed to mean "silken trappings" or "carpets." Though this may be controverted, in no version that I am aware of is the rendering Midden = a proper name.

They of Zebulon and Nepthali, like worthy valiant wights, Before their foes, even in the field, advanc'd themselves in fights.

The kings themselves in person fought, the kings of Canaan, In Tanach-plain whereas the stream of swift Megiddo ran. No pay, no hire, no coin at all, not one did seem to take;

They served not for greedy gain nor filthy lucre sake.

The heavens high and heavenly powers these things to pass have brought;

The stars against proud Sisera even in their course have fought.

The stream of Kishon's ancient brook hath overwhelm'd them there:

My soul, sith thou hast done thy part, be now of hearty cheer.

The hardenéd hoofs of barbéd horse were all in pieces broke By force of mighty men, which met with many a sturdy stroke.

The angel hath pronounc'd a curse, which shall on Meroz fall,

And those that do inhabit there a curse light on them all; Because they put not forth their hands to help the Living Lord

Against the proud and mighty ones which have His truth abhorr'd.

Jael the Kenite, Heber's wife, most happy shall be blest 55 Above all other women there which in the tents do rest.

He askéd water for to drink; she gave sweet milk to him, Yea, butter in a lordly dish which was full trick and trim.

Her left hand to the nail she put, her right the hammer wrought,

Wherewith presumptuous Sisera unto his death she brought; , co

And from his corpse his head she cut with mortal deadly wound,

When through the temples of his head she nail'd him to the ground:

He bowéd then unto the earth, and at her feet can fall;
And where he fell, there still he lay bereav'd of senses all
The mother then of Sisera, in window where she lay,

55
Doth marvel much that this her son doth make so long a stay:

Her ladies then, they hearing that, make answer by and by; Yea, to her speeches past before her self doth this reply,—Hath he not gotten mighty spoils, and now division makes? Each one a damsel hath or twain which he as captive takes;

Sisera of costly coloured robes, full rich with needle wrought, Hath got a prey, which unto him as chiefest spoils are brought.

So let Thine enemies, O Lord, sustain and suffer blame; And let Thy chosen blessed ones, that love and fear Thy Name.

Be like the sun when in the morn his glory doth increase, 75

Or like the land which many a year hath been in rest and peace!

Another Song of the Faithful for the Mercies of God.

In the xii. Chap. of the Prophecy of Isaiah.

T.

O LIVING Lord, I still will laud Thy Name!
For though Thou wert offended once with me,
Thy heavy wrath is turn'd from me again,
And graciously Thou how dost comfort me.

II.

Behold, the Lord is my salvatión;
I trust in Him, and fear not any power:
He is my song, the strength I lean upon;
The Lord God is my loving Saviour.

III.

Therefore with joy out of the well of life
Draw forth sweet water which it doth afford,
And in the day of trouble and of strife
Call on the Name of God, the Living Lord:

IV.

Extol His works and wonders to the sun,
Unto all people let His praise be shown,
Record in song the marvels He hath done,
And let His glory through the world be blown:

V

Cry out aloud and shout on Sion-hill;
I give thee charge that this proclaimed be,—
The Great and Mighty King of Israel
Now only dwelleth in the midst of thee.

A Song of the Faithful.

In the Third Chap, of the Prophecy of Habakkuk.

Τ.

Lord at Thy voice my heart for fear hath trembled; Unto the world, Lord, let Thy works be shown; In these our days now let Thy power be known, And yet in wrath let mercy be remembered.

II.

From Teman, lo, our God you may behold, The Holy One from Paran-mount so high! His glory hath clean coveréd the sky, And in the earth His praises be inroll'd.

III.

His shining was more clearer than the light; And from His hands a fulness did proceed, Which did contain His wrath and power indeed; Consuming plagues and fire were in His sight.

1V.

He stood aloft and compassed the land, And of the nations doth defusion make; The mountains rent, the hills for fear did quake: His unknown paths no man may understand.

V.

The Morians' tents, even for their wickedness, I might behold—the land of Midian Amaz'd and trembling, like unto a man Forsaken quite and left in great distress.

VI.

What, did the rivers move the Lord to ire? Or did the floods His majesty displease? Or was the Lord offended with the seas, That Thou camest forth in chariot hot as fire?

VII.

Thy force and power Thou freely didst relate; Unto the tribes Thy oath doth surely stand; And by Thy strength Thou didst divide the land, And from the earth the rivers separate.

VIII.

The mountains saw, and trembled* for fear; The sturdy stream with speed forth passed by; The mighty depths shout out a hideous cry, And then aloft their waves they did uprear.

IX.

The sun and moon amid their course stood still; Thy spears and arrows forth with shining went: Thou spoilest the land, being to anger bent, And in displeasure Thou didst slay and kill.

X.

Thou wentest forth for Thine own chosen's sake, For the safeguard of Thine Anointed one: The house of wicked men is overthrown, And their foundations now go all to wrack.

XI.

Their towns Thou strikest by Thy mighty power, With their own weapons made for their defence, Who like a whirl-wind came with the pretence, The poor and simple man quite to devour.

XII.

Thou madest Thy horse on seas to gallop fast, Upon the waves Thou ridest here and there: My intrals trembled then for very fear, And at Thy voice my lips shook at the last.

XIII.

Grief piere'd my bones, and fear did me annoy, In time of trouble where I might find rest; For to revenge when once the Lord is prest,† With plagues He will the people quite destroy.

XIV.

The fig-tree now no more shall sprout nor flourish, The pleasant vine no more with grapes abound, No pleasure in the city shall be found, The field no more her fruit shall feed nor nourish.

XV.

The sheep shall now be taken from the fold, In stall of bullocks there shall be no choice; Yet in the Lord, my Saviour, I rejoice, My hope in God yet will I surely hold.

XVI.

God is my strength, the Lord my only stay; My feet for swiftness it is He will make Like to the hinds who none in course can take; Upon high places He will make me way.

A Song of Thanks to God, in that He showeth Himself Judge of the world in punishing the wicked and maintaining the godly.

In the xxv. Chap. of the Prophecy of Isaiah.

I.

O LORD, my God, with praise I will persevere, Thy blessed Name in song I will record, For the great wonders Thou hast done, O Lord! Thy truth and counsels have been certain ever.

II.

A mighty city Thou makest ruinate, The strongest towns Thou bringest to decay, A place where strangers usually do stay, And shall not be reduc'd* to former state.

* Reduc'd=brought back.

III.

The proudest people therefore stoop to Thee, The strongest cities have Thee still in fear: Thou strengthenest the poor man in despair, And helpest the needy in necessity.

IV.

Thou art a sure refuge against a shower, A shadow which doth from the heat defend: The raging blasts the mighty forth doth send, Is like a storm which shakes the stateliest tower.

V

Thou shalt abate the foreign stranger's pride, Like as the heat doth dry the moistest place; The glory of the proud Thou shalt deface, Like as the clouds the sunny beams do hide.

VI.

The Lord of Hosts shall in this mount provide, And to His people here shall make a feast Of fatted things and dainties of the best, Of marrow and wines finely purified.

VII.

And in this mountain by His mighty Hand That same dark cloud the Lord will clean destroy, Even with the veil which doth His folk annoy; And death no more before His Face shall stand.

· VIII.

The Lord will wipe out of His chosen's eyes The tears which do their faces so distain; And their rebuke shall now no more remain; Thus saith the Lord, these be His promises.

IX.

And men shall say then, lo this same is He, This is our God on Whom we did attend, This is the Lord that will us still defend! We will be glad and joyful Lord, in Thee.

X.

Thy Hand, O Lord, here in this mount shall rest, And cursed Moab shall by Thee be beaten, As in Thy judgment Thou of long dost threaten, As in Mamena* straw of men is thresht!

XI.

And over them the Lord His Hand shall hold, As he that swimmeth stretcheth him at length; And by His power and by His mighty strength The proud and stout by Him shall be controll'd.

XII.

Thy highest walls and towers of all thy trust He shall bring down, and lay them all full low; Unto the ground His Hand shall make them bow, And lay thy pride and glory in the dust.

Another Song of the Faithful, wherein is declared in what consisteth the Salvation of the Church.

In the xxvi. Chap. of the Prophecy of Isaiah.

I.

And in that day this same shall be our song, In Juda-land this shall be sung and said: We have a city which is wondrous strong, And for the walls the Lord Himself our aid.

*Mamena. Here again Drayton translates by a proper name; and so indeed it is rendered in the margin of our version "as straw is threshed in Madmenah." Buxtorf tells us that in the present passage, according to Aben Esra, Madmenah should be translated sterquilinium, dunghill; but in Isaiah x. 31, it is a proper name.

II.

Open the gates, yea, set them open wide, And let the godly and the righteous pass; Yea, let them enter, and therein abide, Which keep His laws, and do His truth embrace.

III.

And in Thy judgment Thou wilt sure preserve In perfect peace those which do trust in Thee: Trust in the Lord Which doth all trust deserve; He is thy strength, and none but only He.

1V.

He will bring down the proud that look so high; The stateliest buildings He will soon abase, And make them even with the ground to lie, And unto dust He will their pride deface.

V.

It shall be trodden to the very ground; The poor and needy down the same shall tread. The just man's way in righteousness is found; Into a path most plain Thou wilt him lead.

VI.

But we have waited long for Thee, O Lord! And in Thy way of judgment we do rest; Our souls doth joy Thy Name still to record, And Thy remembrance doth content us best.

VII.

My soul hath long'd for Thee, O Lord! by night, And in the morn my spirit for Thee hath sought: Thy judgments to the earth give such a light, As all the world by them Thy truth is taught.

YOL. III.

VIII.

But shew Thy mercy to the wicked man,—
He will not learn Thy righteousness to know;
His chief delight is still to curse and ban,
And unto Thee himself he will not bow.

IX.

They do not once at all regard Thy power; Thy people's zeal shall let them see their shame: But with a fire Thou shalt Thy foes devour, And clean consume them with a burning flame.

X.

With peace Thou wilt preserve us, Lord, alone, For Thou hast wrought great wonders for our sake; And other gods beside Thee have we none, Only in Thee we all our comfort take.

XI.

The dead and such as sleep within the grave, Shall give no glory nor yield praise to Thee, Which here on earth no place nor being have, And Thou hast rooted out of memory.

XII.

O Lord! Thou dost this nation multiply, Thou, Lord, hast blest this nation with increase: Thou art most glorious in Thy majesty; Thou hast enlarg'd the earth with perfect peace.

XIII.

We cried to Thee, and oft our hands did wring, When we have seen Thee bent to punishment; Like to a woman in childbirth travailing, Even so in pain we mourn and do lament.

XIV.

We have conceiv'd and labouréd with pain, But only wind at last we forth have brought; Upon the earth no hope there doth remain, The wicked world likewise avails us nought.

XV

The dead shall live, and such as sleep in grave With their own bodies once shall rise again: Sing, ye that in the dust your dwelling have: The earth no more her bodies shall retain.

XVI.

Come, come, My people, to My chamber here, And shut the doors up surely after thee; Hide thou thyself, and do not once appear, Nor let thine eyes Mine indignation see.

XVII.

For from above the Lord is now dispos'd To scourge the sins that in the world remain: His servants' blood in earth shall be disclos'd, And she shall now yield up her people slain.

FINIS.

Hereafter followeth certain other Songs and Prayers of godly men and women, out of the Books of Apocrypha.

The Prayer of Judith for the Deliverance of the People.
In the ix. Chap. of the Book of Judith.

O Lord! the God of Simeon, my sovereign father dear, To whom Thou gavest strength and might the sword in hand to bear, To take revenge on those which first the maiden's womb did tame,

And spoiléd her virginity with great reproach and shame;

For which offence Thou gavest up their princes to be slain,

So that their wounds with gory blood their beds did all distain;

Their servants with their lords, each one, have felt Thy wrath alike,

Who sitting in their royal seat Thou sparest not to strike; Their wives, their daughters, and their goods, Thou gav'st, for Thy behove,

As preys, as captives, and as spoils, to those whom Thou didst love,

Who, mov'd with zeal, could not abide their blood defil'd to see;

Then hear me, Lord, a widow poor which here do call to thee.

Things past, and things not yet discern'd, Thy providence hath wrought,

Things present, and the things to come, by Thee to pass are brought;

Each thing is present at Thy call Thy wisdom doth devise,

Thy secret judgments long before Thy knowledge doth comprise.

Th' Assyrians now in multitude a mighty number are,

Whose horsemen on their barbéd horse themselves to war prepare;

Their hope in footmen doth consist, in sling, in spear, and shield;

They know not Thee to be the Lord Whose force doth win the field.

Let all their force, their strength, and power be by Thy might abated,

Who yow Thy temple to defile which Thou hast consecrated, Yea, to pollute Thy tabernacle, Thy house, and holy place, And with their instruments of war Thine altars to deface.

Behold their pride, and pour on them Thy wrath and heavy ire,

And strength my hand to execute the thing I now desire; Smite Thou the servant and the lord, as they together stand,

Abate their glory and their pride even by a woman's hand; For in the greatest multitude Thou takest not delight,

Nor in the strong and valiant men consisteth not Thy might;

But to the humble, lowly, meek, the succourless, and poor, Thou art a Help, Defence, Refuge, and loving Saviour.

My father in Thy Name did trust, O Israel's Lord most dear, Of heaven, of earth, of sea and land! do Thou my prayer hear:

Grant Thou me wit, sleight, power, strength to wound them, which advance

Themselves over Thy Sion-hill and Thine inheritance:

Declare to nations far and near, and let them know full well,

Thou art the Lord Whose power and strength defendeth Israel.

The Song of Judith, having slain Holofernes.

In the xvi. Chap, of the Book of Judith,

Tune up the timbrels, then, with laud unto the Lord, Sound forth His praise on cymbals loud, with songs of one accord; Declare and shew His praise, also His Name rehearse, In song of thanks exactly penn'd, of sweet and noble verse. The Lord He ceaseth wars, even He the very same,

'Tis He that doth appease all strife; Jehovah is His Name; The Which hath pitch'd His tent, our surest strength and aid,

Amongst us here, lest that our foes should make us once dismay'd.

From northern mountain-tops proud Assur came adown,
With warlike men, a multitude of famous high renown,
Whose footmen stopt the streams where rivers wont to flow,

And horsemen coveréd all the vales that lay the hills below.

His purpose was for to destroy my land with sword and fire,

To put my young men to the sword did thirst with hot desire,

My children to captivity he would have borne away,
My virgins so by rape and force as spoils and chiefest prey.
But yet the High and Mighty Lord His people doth defend,
And by a silly woman's hand hath brought him to his end;
For why, their mighty men with arms were not subdu'd,

Nor with their blood our young men's hands were not at all imbru'd,

No, none of Titan's line this proud Assyrian slew,

Nor any giants' aid we crav'd this soldier to subdue;

But Judith she alone, Merari's daughter dear,

Whose heavenly hue hath bred his bane, and brought him to his bier.

She left her mourning weed, and deck'd herself with gold,

In royal robes of seemly show, all Israel to behold;

With odours she perfum'd herself after the quaintest* guise, Her hair with fillet finely bound as art could well devise; Her slippers neat and trim his eyes and fancy fed, Her beauty hath bewitch'd his mind, her sword cut off his

Her beauty hath bewitch'd his mind, her sword cut off his head.

The Persians were amaz'd, her modesty was such, The Medes at her bold enterprise they marvelléd as much; Amongst th' Assyrians then great clamours can arise, Whenas the fact so lately done appear'd before their eyes. The sons, which erst my daughters have even on their bodies born,

Have slain them as they fled in chase, as men so quite forlorn:

Even at the presence of the Lord the stoutest turn'd his back.

His power did so astonish them that all things went to wrack. A song now let us sing of thanks unto the Lord,

Yea, in a song of pleasant tune let us His praise record. O God, Thou mighty Lord! who is there like to Thee?

In strength and power to Thee, O Lord, none may compared be!

Thy creatures all obey and serve Thee in their trade,
For Thou no sooner spak'st the word but every thing was made;

Thou sentest forth the Spirit Which did Thy work fulfill, 45 And nothing can withstand Thy voice, but listen to Thy will.

Shakespeare says "My quaint Ariel," and again "But, for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten of it."—Much Avo about Nothing, iii. 4.

Archbishop Trench has well illustrated the word in his excellent

"Select Glossary."

* Quaintest = graceful, elegant. So Chapman, Odyssey, xiii. 327:
"Minerva, like a shepherd, young, and quaint."

The mountains shall remove where their foundation lay, Likewise the floods, the craggy rocks like wax shall melt away:

But they that fear the Lord, and in Ilim put their trust,
Those will He love, and still impute amongst the good and just.

But woe be those that seek His chosen flock's decay!

The Lord God will revenge their wrongs at the last Judgment Day;

For He such quenchless fire and gnawing worms shall send Into their flesh, as shall consume them world without an end.

A Prayer of the Author.

In the xxii. Chap. of Ecclesiasticus.

Τ.

LORD of my life, my Guide and Governour, Father, of Thee this one thing I require; Thou wilt not leave me to the wicked power, Which seek my fall, and still my death desire.

H.

O who is he that shall instruct my thought, And so with wisdom shall inspire my heart, In ignorance that nothing may be wrought By me with them whose sin shall not depart?

TIT.

Lest that mine errors grow and multiply, And to destruction through my sins I fall, My foes rejoice at my adversity, Who in Thy mercy have no hope at all.

IV.

My Lord and God, from Whom my life I took, Unto the wicked leave me not a prey; A haughty mind, a proud disdainful look, From me Thy servant take thou clean away.

3.7

Vain hope likewise, with vile concupiscence, Lord, of Thy mercy take Thou clean from me; Retain Thou him in true obedience, Who with desire daily serveth Thee.

1.1

Let not desire to please the greedy maw, Or appetite of any fleshly lust, Thy servant from his loving Lord withdraw, But give Thou me a mind both good and just.

The Prayer of Salomon.

In the ix. Chap, of the Book of Wisdom.

O God of our forefathers all, of mercy Thou the Lord, Which heaven and earth and all things else createdst with Thy Word,

And by Thy Wisdom madest man like to Thyself alone, And gavest him over Thy works the chief dominion, That he should rule upon the earth with equity and right, 5 And that his judgments should be pure and upright in Thy sight!—

Give me that wisdom which about Thy sacred throne doth stay,

And from amongst Thine own elect, Lord, put me not away;

For I Thy servant am, and of Thy handmaid born,
A silly soul, whose life, alas! is short and all forlorn,
And do not understand at all what ought to be my guide,
I mean Thy statutes and Thy laws, lest that I slip aside;
For though a man in worldly things for wisdom be esteem'd.

Yet if Thy wisdom want in him, his is but folly deem'd.
Thou chosest me to be a king, to sit on royal throne,
To judge the folk which Thou of right dost challenge for

Thy own:

Thou hast commanded me to build a temple on Thy hill,

And altar in the self-same place where Thou Thyself dost dwell,

Even like unto Thy tabernacle in each kind of respect,

A thing most holy, which at first Thyself Thou didst erect. 20 Thy Wisdom being still with Thee which understands Thy trade,

Whenas Thon framedst first the world, and her foundation laid,

Which knew the thing that most of all was pleasant in Thy sight,

Thy will and Thy commandéments wherein thou tak'st delight;

Send her down from that heavenly seat whereas she doth abide,

That she may shew to me Thy will, and be my only guide; For she doth know and understand, yea, all things doth foresee.

And by her works and mighty power I shall preserved be; Then shall my works accepted be and liked in Thy sight,

When I upon my father's throne shall judge Thy folk aright. 30 Who knoweth the counsel of the Lord, His deep and secret skill,

Or who may search into His works, or know His holy will

For why, the thoughts of mortal men are nothing else but care,

Their forecasts and devices all, things most uncertain are.

The body is unto the soul a weight and burthen great, 35
The earthly house depresseth down the mind with cares replete:

The things which here on earth remain we hardly can discern,

To find their secret use and trade with labour great we learn;

For who doth search, or seek to know with travail and with care,

The secrets of the Mighty Lord, which high in heaven are?

Who can Thy counsels understand, except Thou do impart Thy wisdom and Thy Holy Spirit dost send into his heart? For so the ways of mortal men reformed are, and taught

The things that most delighteth Thee, which wisdom forth have brought.

A Sony of Jesus the Son of Sirach. In the last Chap, of Ecclesiasticus.

Ŧ

I WILL confess Thy Name, O Lord, And give Thee praise with one accord! My God, my King, and Saviour, Unto Thy Name be thanks and power!

11.

1 have been succouréd by Thee, And Thou hast still preservéd me, And from destruction kept me long, And from report of slanderous tongue.

Ш.

From lips still exercis'd with lies, And from my cruel enemies, Thou me in mercy dost deliver; Thy blessed Name be prais'd for ever!

IV.

From monsters that would me devour, From cruel tyrants and their power; In all affliction, pain, and grief, Thou succourest me with some relief;

V.

From the crucl burning flame, Poor I inclos'd within the same, From the deep infernal pit, From venom'd tongues that poison spit;

VI.

From speeches that of malice spring, From accusation to the king, From all reproach and infamy, From slander and like villany.

VII.

My soul, to death praise thou the Lord, And laud His Name with one accord; For death was ready thee to take, And thou near the infernal lake.

VIII.

They compassed me round about,
But there was none to help me out;
I look'd when succour would appear,
But there was none that would come near.

IX.

Upon Thy mereies then I thought, And on the wonders Thou hast wrought, How from destruction Thou dost save Such as in Thee affiance have.

In prayer then I did persever, That Thou from death wouldst me deliver: Unto the Lord I cry and call. That He would rid me out of thrall.

XI.

Therefore I still will praise Thy Name, And ever thank Thee for the same; My prayers shall of Thee be heard. And never from Thy ears debarr'd.

XII.

Thou savest from destruction, And other mischiefs more than one. Therefore will I praise Thee, O Lord, And in my songs Thy Name record !

The Prayer of Hester for the Deliverance of her and her people.

In the xiv. Chap. of Hester.

O MIGHTY Lord, Thou art our God! to Thee for aid I cry, To help a woman desolate, sith danger now is nigh. Even from my youth I oft have heard my predecessors tell, That from amongst the nations all Thou chosest I rael, And chosest those our fathers were from theirs that went before.

To be Thine own, and hast perform'd Thy promise evermore.

Now, Lord, we have committed sin most grievous in Thine eyes;

Wherefore Thou hast deliveréd us unto our enemies; Because that to their heathen gods with worship we have gone.

Knowing that Thou art God the Lord, the righteons Lord alone.

Yet not content nor satisfied with these our captives' bands, But with their idols they themselves have join'd and shaken hands.

Quite to abolish and subvert what Thou appointed hast,
And this Thine own inheritance even utterly to waste,
To shut and stop the mouths of those that yield Thee
thanks and praise,

Thy glorious temples to defile, Thine altars up to raise, And to induce the heathen folk to laud their idols' might, To magnify a fleshly king, a man, a mortal wight. Then let not such the sceptre sway whose glory is of nought, Lest they deride us when that we to misery are brought, 20 And those devices they have wrought t'entangle us withall, May turn unto their own decay, and on their heads may fall.

Remember, Lord, and shew Thyself to us in time of need, And strengthen me, Thou King of kings, and Lord of power indeed;

Instruct my tongue with eloquence, my speeches to impart 25 Before the lion's face, and by Thy wisdom turn his heart To hate our deadly enemy, so wholly bent to ill,— Destroy him and all such as do consent unto his will;
But let Thy Hand deliver us, and help and succour me,
Sith I am now left comfortless, and have no help but Thee. 30
Thou know'st right well all things, O Lord! and this Thou knowest then,

I hate the glory and the pomp of wicked sinful men,

And utterly detest the bed of any heathen wight,
Uncircumciséd, most impure, and odious in Thy sight.
Thou knowest my necessity, and that with hate I bear 35
This token of pre-eminence which on my head I wear,
And as a filthy menstruous cloth I take thereof such shame,
As, being by myself alone, I never wear the same;
And that at Haman's table yet Thy handmaid hath not fed,
Nor took delight in princes' feast, nor drank wine offeréd; 40
And never joy'd in any thing, since first I hither came,
Until this day, but in the Lord, Thou God of Abraham!
O Thou the High and Mighty God, hear Thou the voice and cry

Of them, whose hope, whose trust, and stay only on Thee doth lie!

And now in need deliver us out of their cruel hand,
And from the dread and fear, O Lord, wherein we daily stand!

The Prayer of Mardocheus. In the xiii. Chap, of Hester.

J.

O LORD, my Lord, That art the King of might, Within Whose power all things their being have! Who may withstand that liveth in Thy sight, If Thou Thy chosen Israel wilt save?

For Thou hast made the earth and heaven above.

For Thou hast made the earth and heaven above, And all things else that in the same do move.

H.

Thou madest all things, and they are all Thine own, And there is none that may resist Thy will: Thou know'st all things, and this of Thee is known, I did not erst for malice nor for ill,

Presumption nor vain glory else at all, Come nor bow down unto proud Haman's call.

HI.

I could have been content for Israel's sake
To kiss the soles even of his very feet,
But that I would not man's vain honour take
Before God's glory being so unmeet,
And would not worship none, O Lord, but Thee!
And not of pride, as Thou Thyself dost see.

1V.

Therefore, O Lord, my God and heavenly King, Have mercy on the people Thou hast bought! For they imagine and devise the thing How to destroy and bring us unto nought, Thine heritance, which Thou so long hast fed, And out so far from Egypt-land hast led.

V.

O hear my prayer, and mercy do extend Upon Thy portion of inheritance! For sorrow now some joy and solace send, That we may live Thy glory to advance; And suffer not their mouths shut up, O Lord, Which still Thy Name with praises do record!

A Prayer in the Person of the Fuithful.

In the xxxvi. Chap. of Ecclesiasticus.

I.

Have mercy on us, blessed Lord, Which madest all things with Thy Word; Behold us, Saviour, from above, Illuminate us with Thy love:

Behold us, Saviour, from above, Illuminate us with Thy love:

II.

And let the wicked dread Thy Name, Which never sought unto the same, And know that Thou art God alone, And like in wonders to be none.

III

O Lord, lift up Thy mighty Hand! The world Thy power shall understand: As by us Thou art sanctified, By them so be Thou magnified;

IV.

That they may learn Thy power to know, As we that be Thy servants do:
Thou art the Living Lord alone,
And other gods beside Thee none.

V.

Renew the signs, Lord, Thou hast shown, And let Thy wondrous works be known; Declare the strength of Thy right Hand, Let them Thy power understand:

VI.

Arise to judgment in Thine ire, Pour out Thy wrath as hot as fire; Destroy the cruel adversary, To spoil our foes, Lord, do not tarry:

VII.

Shorten Thou these wicked days; Think on Thine oath at all assays;**

&quot; "At all assays." This expression, not unfrequently found in Vol. III.

Let Thy wonders, Lord, appear, And be Thou praiséd far and near.

VIII.

In burning fire, Lord, let them die Which do escape and seek to fly; And let them perish with annoy Which seek Thy people to destroy.

TX.

Cleave Thou the heads of mighty kings, Our enemies in godly things; And let the world behold and see That we are chosen unto Thee.

X.

Lord, gather Jacob unto Thee, That they Thy might and power may see, That they Thy wondrous works may show, And to be Thine themselves may know.

XI.

Unto Thy folk impute no blame, Which ever call'd upon Thy Name; To Israel, Lord, be thou mild, Thy only heir, Thy first-born child.

XII.

Unto Jerusalem shew pity, Thy sanctuary and Thy city; Bless Sion where Thy prophets live, Thy glory to Thy people give.

our old writers, is thus rendered by Palsgrave, "En tous poynts, or a tous poynts." Lesclar. de la Lang. Fr. 1530, fol. eccexxxviii. (Table of Aduerbes); and Horman has, "He is a frende at all assayes. Omnium horarum amicus est." Vulgaria, sig. y iiii. ed. 1530. Dyce.

XIII.

And be Thou witness unto those Which have been Thine still to dispose; And raise them up, O Lord, on high, Which in Thy Name do prophesy!

XIV.

Reward them, Lord, that wait for Thee, That they Thy prophets' truth may see; Hear Thou Thy servant's prayer, O Lord, As thou to Aaron gavest Thy word!

XV

Guide us in way of righteousness: The earth Thy glory shall express: And to the world it shall be known, Thou art Eternal and Alone.

A Prayer of Tobias, exhorting all men to praise the Lord. Tobias, Chap. xiii.

I.

Bless'd be that King Which evermore shall reign, So ever may His Kingdom blessed be! Which punisheth and pitieth again, Which sends to hell and likewise setteth free; Before Whose Presence may no creature stand, Nor anything avoid His heavy Hand.

11.

Ye children of His chosen Israel,
Before the Gentiles still confess His Name,
With whom He hath appointed you to dwell,
Even there, I say, extol and laud His fame:
He is a Lord and God most gracious,
And still hath been a Father unto us.

19-2

III.

He will scourge us for our iniquity;
Yet mercy will He take on us again,
And from those nations gatheréd shall we be,
With whom as strangers now we do remain,
If in your hearts He shall repentance find,
And turn to Him with zeal and willing mind.

IV.

Whenas your dealings shall be found upright,
Then will He turn His Face from you no more,
Nor thenceforth hide His Presence from your sight,
But lend His mercy then, laid up in store;
Therefore confess His Name, and praises sing
To That most Great and Highest Heavenly King.

V.

I will confess Him in captivity,
And to a wicked people show His might:
O turn to Him, vile sinners that you be,
And do the thing is upright in His sight!
Who's there can tell if He will mercy show,
Or take compassion on you, yea or no?

VI.

I will extol and laud Thy Name always,
My soul, the praise of Heaven's King express;
All tongues on earth shall spread abroad His praise,
All nations shew forth His righteousness;
Jerusalem, thou shalt be scourged then,
But He will spare the sons of righteous men.

VII.

Fail not to give the Lord His praises due,
And still extol that Everlasting King;
And help to build His tabernacle new,
In which His saints shall ever sit and sing,
In which the captives shall have end or grief,
In which the poor shall ever find relief.

VIII.

Many shall come from countries far and near,
And shall great gifts unto His Presence bring;
Many before His presence shall appear,
And shall rejoice in this Great Heavenly King:
Curséd be those which hate Thy Blessed Name,
But bless'd be those which love and like the same.

IX.

Triumph with joy, ye that be good and just;
Though scatteréd now, yet shall you gatheréd be;
Then in the Lord fix all your hope and trust,
And rest in peace till you these blessings see:
Blessed be those which have been touch'd with grief,
When they have seen thee scourg'd and want relief.

X.

Those only shall rejoice with thee again,
And those shall be partakers of thy glory,
And shall in bliss for aye with thee remain,
Now passéd once these troubles transitory:
Then, O my soul, see thou rejoice and sing,
And laud the Great and Highest Heavenly King!

XI.

And He will build Jerusalem full fair With emeralds and with sapphires of great price; With precious stones He will her walls repair, Her towers of gold with work of rare device; And all her streets with beryl will He pave, With carbuncles and ophirs passing brave:

VП

And all her people there shall sit and say, Praised be God with Alelluiah!
