PERSONS IMPLICATED: Craigie, British Ambassador; UGAKI, Kazushige; HIROTA, Koki

CRIMES TO WHICH DOCUMENT APPLICABLE: All China Military Aggression

SUMMARY OF RELEVANT POINTS

1. In the Japanese reply to Ambassador Craigie's representation, the following points were included:

a. Any attack on ~~Hongkong~~ depended on China's attitude.

b. Reference to HIROTA's statement that Japan was aware of delicate situation created in any occupation of Hongkong.

c. UGAKI stated to Craigie that Japan had no intention of occupying Hainan Island unless circumstances forced Japan into such action.

2. Britain's Chief Interests and Rights in Canton Presented in Relation to Japanese Occupation Plan:

Doc. No. 2780

a. Hongkong is looked up as Britain's first and last base of activity in China as far as politics and economics is concerned.

b. Capture of CANTON, which adjoins Hongkong, would give offence to Great Britain's rights and interests.

c. Japan should carefully guard against "unforeseen" accidents which might infringe upon Britain's rights and interests.

d. To avoid infringement on Britain, Japan should keep away from British leased territories and waters.

e. Japan must not be trapped by China's tactics of involving a third nation (Great Britain) as a belligerent.

f. Japan should clarify her aims to Britain and assure Britain that her rights and interests will be respected.

3. Japanese argument Re Capture of Hainan Island: Hainan capture must be strictly independent from attack on Canton.

a. UGAKI assured Ambassador Craigie Japan had no intention of capturing Hainan Island.

b. Japan's policy must be to avoid attacking Hainan Island simultaneously with Canton to prevent aggravating Britain.

c. Japan must avoid possible bond between France and Great Britain.

4. Japanese Arguments for Executing Attack on Canton:

a. Japanese occupation of Hankow would lead Britain to consider the inevitability of similar occupation of Canton.

b. Attack on Canton after capture of Hankow would facilitate operation against Canton by lowering morale of Canton.

c. Japan must guard against strong resistance in Canton so that there is no unforeseen occurrence with Britain.

d. In considering international relations, Japan must make the operation against Canton under circumstances of least resistance.

TITLE: (Discussion or Plan) Occupation of ^{CANTON} ~~KWANTANG~~ and ~~HANKAO~~ HANKOW

Caption of this file: Points to be considered in parallel with the occupation of ~~KWANTANG~~ CANTON.

Date: - 3 Sept 1938

~~1.~~ 1. outline of course of diplomatic negotiations.

Summary: - 1.

a) This section is devoted to Foreign Minister's reply to Ambassador CRAIGIE's representation. ^{The} minister said that the attack of HONKONG depended on the attitude on the part of CHINA.

b) This section refers to HIROTA's reply that Japan is well aware of delicacy ^{regarding} the occupation of HONKONG.

c) URAKI's reply is referred ^{to} here. He confirmed ^{to} CRAIGIE that Japan has no intention to occupy HAINAN ISLAND at present, but ^{that} circumstances may force Japan to resort to the occupation.

2. This part contains the chief interests and rights possessed by Britain in and around KWANTONG. CANTON

3. Here is mentioned that possible deliberate measures be taken if HONGKONG is attacked.

4. This section deals with the non-occupation policy with HAINAN ISLAND.

5. The time when KWANTONG will be occupied.

This section says the best time for the attack of KWANTONG is after the fall of HANGKAO.

(3) Briefly, HONG KONG may be said as Britain's the first and last base of activity against China as regards politics and economy. ^{is concerned} Therefore capture of CANTON which adjoins HONG KONG would give a to Britain in any case, that it is imperative to take highest precaution lest her national feeling as well as her old rights and interests be injured. Hence -

(a) Infringement upon ^{the} Britain's rights and interests that would otherwise follow our military operation should carefully be guarded. None of such kind as unforeseen accidents should ever occur at all.

(b) To avoid such an occurrence, it would be practical for us to keep away as far as possible from the British dominion, least territories and waters.

We must also be on our guard not to be trapped by China's tactics in being driven to involve a third nation, particularly Britain as our belligerent.

(a) In the event of opening military operation, we should clarify to Britain on a suitable occasion, the aim of our action and get her understand that her rights and interests will be duly respected so that there should be any useless suspicion and irritation of feeling.

4 - In connection with the capture of CANTON, we anticipate argument, emanated principally from the Navy, for the capture of HAINAN island.

However we have least such intention as was stated by the Minister UGAKI in his interview with the ambassador. Moreover, France is not the only nation that is shocked by our capture of CANTON, but British nation is equally affected. Indeed, she has neglected in ascertaining our intention respecting to the capture of CANTON and that of HAINAN island. Should therefore we attack HAINAN island simultaneously with CANTON, Britain would be extremely irritated to aggravate the matter more and enlighten the bond between France and Britain by which our international relation will be seriously affected.

Hence there should be an established principle by which the question of capture of HAINAN be strictly an independent problem once we make attack CANTON.

5. Our study on the chances of attack against CANTON follows -

(a) Sensibly, occupation of HANKOW by Japanese force will induce the idea that CANTON will be also so fated, and the same idea may be harbored to some extent in Britain who would ~~to~~ consider the situation as inevitable to some extent.

It would less affect the British sentiment than making attack on CANTON before the capture of HANKOW.

(b) Attack on CANTON after the capture of HANKOW will facilitate operation against CANTON. The morale of CANTON will be dwindled through the surrender of HANKOW.

If an attack on CANTON should be strongly resisted which leads to a desperate fight, then the result will bring unexpected calamities.

to HONGKONG and its vicinity affecting ~~with~~ other rights and interests of her country. It is liable to lead ^{an} unforeseen occurrence between British nation.

If we admit ^{the} international relation in our thinking, the operation against CANTON should be made under the circumstance where it is concluded with least resistance.

To sum up foregoing, attack on CANTON be executed after the capture of HANKAW.
