HELD FAST BY CHAINS.

About ninety patients in the small cells, many of whom were taving maniacs, and some in chains and fetters, had no means of escape. The fire was discovered by J. A. McKenna of Burlington, Vt., who only entered the asylum this morning for treatment for the loss of memory. He was one of the first to notice the outbreak. He was sitting in a room after being examined, and felt the plaster on the wall growing warm. He sprang to his feet and ran out, shouting "fire." He became confused after being nearly smothered with smoke, but gained the door, accompanied by J. J. Enright of Burlington. McKenna was quite rational, but greatly terrified, and lost all of his effects.

LIKE A FLASH.

The fire broke out in the northwestern building, rushed up the ventilator and attacked the roof. From there it spread to the large central building with incredible rapidity considering the solid character of the structure, and swept everything before it. Dense volumes of smoke burst through the windows, then the flames shot through the roof high into the air, red, massive and terrible, dyeing the sky for miles.

The smoke increased and the flames burst through every barrier. Within an hour the vast pile was doomed. The roof of the central building fell in with a loud report like heavy cannon. The heat became so intense that the fierce glow could be felt on the cheek from the high road at the end of the long avenue. The walls toppled and fell, and only their black and ragged remains were left standing at 2 o'clock.

HELPLESS MANIACS.

No power on earth could have checked the fire. Sixteen hundred inmates were in the building, many of whom were bed-ridden. «As fast as possible they were rushed to the western wing and hurried downstairs and out upon the grounds.

There upon the wet grass, huddled to gether under cover of blankets or wandering through the grounds with faces un- Over Three Million Dollars' Worth of touched by the horror of the scene, others lying down sleeping, with old quilts for pillows, or humming airs which breathed the spirit of happiness, or looking up into the flames, with misery stamped on their pallid countenances, while around them walls fell and roofs crashed in, more than a thousand helpless creatures were gathered together within the inclosure guarded by only one

One young girl in the midst of the drizzling rain sat at a piano in the grounds and played sweet music while the flames rose above her. Those who saw the spectacle will never forget it.

FRANTIC PRISONERS. Sub-chief Naud was asked how many lives were lost. He said: "I don't know. I heard there were some burned, but who could tell now?"

A fireman said: "I saw dozens of people struggling against those bars"-pointing to the top windows in the rear of the central building. "They were blackened and shrieking, but no help could reach them and they fell back into the flames."

"I saw a large number of men and women clinging to the windows," said Fireman Laporte, "but nothing could be done. How many perished no one knows. I tried to rescue two women, but could not reach them."

SEVEN NUNS BURNED.

Seven nuns are known to be among the victims who were roasted to death. Their names, as far as can be ascertained, are: La Mere Lahia of the Sacred Heart, Sault au Recollect; Sister Marie Gravelle, her sister Julia, and two other nuns named Gilbert and Bouthelier, all from Quebec. The less hopeless cases were treated in the lower wards. These were removed without difficulty, but from the upper wards where the violent patients were confined, came the wildest screams as the unfortunates resisted the efforts of the men to aid them in making their escape. At the windows were maniacs peering through the bars, grinning and jabbering until, enveloped in the flames, they were compelled to release their hold, and drop back to an awful death.

When the firemen found it was impossible ter and him to save the building, they turned their atwanted to insure the child's happiness. tention to the inmates, and burst in the doors with axes.

Dinner Given on the Fortieth Anniversary of the Chamber of Commerce.

A VERY NOTABLE ASSEMBLAGE.

The Army and Navy Represented. Responses to Toasts to the Commerce and Industries of a Great American City-What Was Said and What Was Eaten.

There were 135 of San Francisco's representative men present at the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce which was given at the Palace Hotel last night, The event was in many respects one of the most important of the year in commercial circles, and a finer-looking body of gentlemen never, perhaps, assembled in this city.

Among those present were a number of officers of the army and navy, including General Nelson A. Miles, Rear-Admirals Brown and Benham and Captain George C. Remy of the flag-ship Charleston.

At 8 o'clock the guests began to assemble in the parlors of the Palace, and before 9 o'clock, the hour for the banquet to begin, all, or nearly all, had arrived. An informal reception was held, and for an hour, while a band, which had been stationed in an adjoining room, played a number of airs selected especially for the occasion, the guests mingled together or chatted in groups.

AT TABLE. The tabl es had been set in dining-room 4, and promptly at 9 o'clock the gentlemen, headed by the President, with General Miles on his arm, led the way to the banquet-ball, where plates had been laid for 135. Following the President came the me mbers and the invited guests, in the order of their arrangement at the tables.

No attempt had been made at decoration other than the center-pieces with which the table was ornamented. They were "The Progredientur, Sailing Ship"; "The Two Light-houses," "Horn of Ceres" and "Temple of Commerce." They were composed of glace fruits and sugar, and were designed by Head Steward Young for this particular occasion. The "two light-houses" were intended to represent those at the Farallones and Point Lobos, while the "Temple of Commerce" was symbolic of the great central mart to which the banqueters belonged.

tables across the room from east to west. CONSPICUOUS GUESTS. In the seat of honor at the middle of the main table sat ex-Governor Perkins, rresident of the Chamber of Commerce, while on his right sat Rear Admiral Brown, and General Nelson A. Miles occupied the seat on his left. Among those noticeable at the main table was C. P. Huntington, who talked earn- stly with Collector Phelps, while Mayor Poud smiled his most pleas-ant smile and stove to entertain D. O. Mills, who seemed to take a lively interest in the Mayor's conversation. Governor Waterman, who had been expected to grace the festal board, remained at Sacramento and sent his regrets by Private Secretary M. D. Bornek. Altogether it was a most notable assemblage, and did honor to the commerce and industries of the great city to which they owe their allegiance. The menu was a most excellent one and re-fected great credit on the tasts and experience of steward Young, to whom all details had been left by the committee having the matter in charge. Two hours were devoted to the follow-ing menu: Menu.

After the repast had been disposed of, Presi-dent Perkins arose and welcomed the guests as-sembled. He spoke substantially as follows: " I welcome you in the name of the Chamber of Commerce. ward March,' and call upon 'Hon. T. G, Phelps to reply." Mr. Phelps in a few brief remarks recounted the old but ever new story of the search for free-dom which had begun when the forefathers of this nation set their faces to the new world, and which had grown from year to year and from dec-ade to decade. That spirit has fought its way westward to the Mississippi, through the deflies of the Rocky Mountains, and here, on the shores of the Rocky Mountains, and here, on the shores of the Pacific it had halted, and was building up an empire that would, in the near future, sur-pass the wildest dreams of those who had gone before. IRVING M. SCOTT. OF FERMANENT BENEFIT. Some of these recommendations will ripen into fruition; some will doubtless be neglected and for-gotten; those now least considered in time may prove the most beneficial. Of one thing the Ameri-can people may be assured—what has been done by this conference will be of permanent benefit to all the Americas, acd as time passes these benefits will be more fully realized, and will afford a marked and most certain remedy for the mistakes of the past.

IRVING M. SCOTT.

IRVING M. SCOTT. "American Saliors Afloat and American Ships to Float Them" was responded to by Irving M. Scott, who was greeted with applause as the builder of the Charleston. In prefacing his re-marks he said: "It was Archimedes who said. "Give me a futerum on which to rest and I will move the earth." The first part of our sentiment presupposes the second, and of our gallant satiors we may say, "Give them ships on which to stand and they will move the world." That we are now striving to do, and how well we have succeeded I leave for you to say." He then spoke of the heroic achievements of the men who had manued our vessels in the years now gone, and prophesied for those now in service and for those to counc the same unselfish devotion to country and to duty. THE PACIFIC COAST. No part of the American Union will receive greater advantages from this conference than the Pacific States and Territories because we are more remote from the eastern portion of our own coun-try than from a large part of Mexico and Central America. Our business interests are thus largely allied to the countries south and nearest to us. We produce and manufacture what they do not. They produce what we do not. Our tr-de with them is a neccessity to us-their trade with us is necessary to them. The Central and South American republics are willing to pay their share to maintain steam-ship communication with us, and this great country will have to bear its portion or cease to compete in American markets.

American markets. GENERAL MILES—"OUR ARMY." At the conclusion of Mr. Estee's remarks the President introduced General Nelson A. Miles, who stock to the sentiment, "Our Army—Good Quality, Small Quantity," and the distinguished soldier, who is soon to leave San Francisco for his new post of duty, replying, said in substance: Gentlemen of the Chamber of Commerce: I might quote a remark made by a citiz-n of this city who said that he thought that a military man was one who would rather die than run. I think that there are times when the flag is in danger when men would rather die than run. There have been times when the army was reduced to a skeleton and a time when it was raised to a milition of men. It is no time now to discuss the modein appliances of war it becomes the republic of the United States either to do likewise or to be at the mercy of any third, fourth or fifth class power who might choose to assail us. To show you how the art of war has changed i will say that I recently ex-amined a Maxim gun, the work of an American inventor, but not unfortunitely, adopted by our Govenment, and found that by the simple re-coil of the gun it was capable of firing 700 shots in sixty seconds. It occurred to me that if we wished to hold our own among the nations of the work dow navely been made. Arbitration is a good thing, but unless we are armed to meet a foe it is folly to think of it. years how gone, and prophesied for those now in service and for those to come the same unselfish devotion to country and to duty. MAYOR POND. "I give you 'San Francisco, the Great Com-mercial Metropolis of the Pacific,' and call upon your Mayor to respond," were the words of the President at the close of Mr. Scott's remarks. Rising, the Mayor said: "I thank you for the honor. Speaking of our city in those terms is not at all extravagant when we recall that it looks out upon an ocean which washes from pole to pole and teems with a thousand islands with their rich and varied products. It has been said that the harbor of San Francisco can aflord more anchorage than all the other harbors of the Pacific from Cape Horn to Cape Flattery, and while nature has done much, we must remember that nature cannot do all. The work of man must come to her aid. Among all the advantages which we possess there are other things necessary, and these we must look to well. Our citizens must be enter-prising and vigilant. The stringfle for supremacy is sharp, and if we would not be outdone we must pot forth our greatest efforts to make the most of what has been given us." BROMLEY'S BONANZA.

THE BALL SQUABBLE.

Robinson's Account of the O'Neil-Chipman Quarrel.

> The trouble between Umpire Chipman and Norris O'Neil at the Sacramento ball grounds last Sunday and the arrest of the atter is still the leading topic in base-ball circles. An effort will be made to have the case settled before it comes to trial, but it is doubtful if President Euright will consent to a dismissal of the charge against the Oakland Captain. Enright is said to entertain a bitter feeling against O'Neil, and is reported to have said he would cause the tain a bitter feeling against O'Neil, and is reported to have said he would cause the arrest of Norris every time he entered Snowflake Park. The charge of disturbing the peace against the shortstop will be tried before a Jury, and Robinson says he will spend $500 to defend his player. In reference to the squabble Robinson yesterday said: "A number of residents of Sacramento came to me after the game and stated it was a shame O'Neil was re-moved from the ground by the police. He had simply protected himself from the as-sault of Chipman, who began the attack. It was myself who asked Chipman to um-pire the game, and of course I cannot and will not say anything about his decisions. But the very thing for which both O'Neil and McDonald were called out happened in the early part of the game without the um-pire the game, and of course I cannot and will not say anything about his decisions. But the very thing for which both O'Neil and McDonald were called out happened in the early part of the game without the um-pire taking notice of it. Goodenough was on first base and was forced to second on an infield hit. He was thrown out at sec-ond and prevented the baseman from throwing the batsman out at first base. "What O'Neil objected to was the re-fusal of the umpire to allow one of the runs to score. He did not find fault with the de-cision allowing the double play, but claimed the man on third had scored before the play was completed. He went to the scorer and I ordered him to continue the game. As he was going back to the infield he passed Chipman, who said, 'I'Il smash you.' O'Neil answered, 'Weil, you'd bet-ter strike an attitude before you do it.' Then Chipman struck him. O'Neil did not retaliate, but threw his hands about the umpire's neck, and when the two were separated 'Tip's' nails scratched Chipman's face. He was driven to his hotel and bail was deposited for him before he went to the police station. A large crowd saw him to the train and they appeared to sym-pathize with him. M. M. ESTEE.

When Mr. Estee arose he was greeted with ap-plause, and spoke as follows:

When Mr. Estee arose he was greeted with ap-plause, and spoke as follows: The speaker began by giving a brief history of the creation and organization of the Interna-tional American Conference, which he said was something new in national affairs, as more na-tions were represented and more questions con-sidered than ever before on similar occasions. Then he continued: The time of the meeting was an anspicious one. Profound peace prevailed over the Continent. The embilitered feelings of war did not enter into or give direction to what was done. The most powerful and the weakest of the American republics met as equals. The conference was created for, and it as an advanced messenger of commercial progress on the American antions met the United States in a spirit of friendship, with a sincere desire to pro-mote the common good, and the most conspicuous efforts were made by all the American trade among the American house.

THE GRAVEST QUESTION.

The gravest question presented was: What would be of advantage to all the American republics? International arbitration scemed to be the one point about which there could be no difference, be-cause none of the American republics were warlike people, because it made the most powerful and the weakest nations equals, and because it placed right in the scale against might. There was also substantial unanimity on all ques-tions tending to build up trade among the Ameri-can States. ter of letter-heads such as used at Camp Bartlett at Healdsburg. Brigade head-

Lions tending to build up trade among the American States. Reciprocity, though possible, could not be reached without a change in the revenue laws of all the American countries, a thing most difficult to do. Free trade was impossible, because not only the United States but every other American nation largely maintained its Government by imposing duties on imports. Our imports from these countries are chiefly coffee, hides, india rubber, cinchona, etc., all of which comes in duly free; and while the Argentine Republic sells us wool, and upon which a duty is churged, yet last year we imported from that country more than six times as much wool as was bought during the same period by free-trade Great Britain; in other words the United States was a better market for the Argentine wool than was England. TARIFF AND RECIPROCITY.

the wool that was England. TABIFF AND RECIPROCITY. It is a failacy to suppose that our tariff laws have had any considerable effect on our South American trade; and it is equally failacious to suppose that treelprocity would prove an adequate remedy for the evils complained of. In view of these facts it was deemed hest by the conference to adopt, in so far as was possible, uniform commercial and trade regu-ations, without attempting to change import dues. We neglected our South and Central American trade, but times have changed in the United States; we now have a large and ever increasing population who are producers. So new markets must be found, and this is substantially true of all the other nations on this continent.

THE BALANCE OF TRADE.

THE BALANCE OF THADE. We saw by the statistics that for the year 1889 the Southern republics, including Cuba and other West India Islands, exported of their productions $564,000,000 and imported $522,000,000. That of all their exports, the United States bought 36 per cent, while they bought of us but 15 6-10 per cent of their imports. That to balance our accounts with the countries south of us for that year, we had to pay them in goid $121,000,000, and what was worse, this was our fault. To add to the folly of our posi-tion we paid this $121,000,000 in exchange on Lon-don.

don. It was one of the aims of this conference to fur-nish a remedy for this condition of things, and we have taken the first step in the right direction. RECOMMENDATIONS. To build up trade among the American na-tions, the following recommendations were

On examining the contents he was surprised to find among receipts, bills and other papers two checks on banks in Germany, one for $1000 and the other for 5000 francs, equivalent in round figures to $1000. Mr. Sainsevain cleared the mud from the papers and book and placed them in his desk, where the owner will probably find them. The name of the owner, who is a blacksmith, was on a bill-head among the papers.—San Jose Herald, May 6th.

The flume was badly damaged and extensive repairs were found necessary. Some delay was caused by the roads being blocked, and a steamer and scow were chartered to take the outfit up to the mouth of Taylor Creek. After providing for the comfort of the expedition, the seines were drawn for several nights, but only a few fish were caught. The streams were low, the water cold and the season was backward. What spawn was obtained was sent to the hatchery at Tahoe. The assistants of Mr. Woodbury, Messrs. Hunt and Benton, will continue fishing until the hatchery

Ar-rangements have been made with the North Pa-cific Game and Fish Club to receive 100,000 trout eggs from Shovel Creek and hatch them out at Glen Ellen and distribute the young trout into Sonoma Creek and the Russlan River and its branches. The club will do this free of cost to the State. Arrangements have also been made with Mr. Knox and Mr. Green to have them re-ceive 50,000 eyed trout eggs from Shovel Creek, which they will send to the hatchery on Los Gatos Creek. They will hatch out these eggs and distribute the young fish, one-half into the headwaters of San Lorenzo Creek. Filty thou-sand trout eggs will be shipped to Alexander Badiam's new hatchery near Mount St. Helena. These eggs will be a good addition to the streams and cost but higte to the State. afternoon. An action was commenced in the Superior Court yesterday by Leopold and Agatha Villegia against the First National Bank of this city. It is averred by the plaintiffs that Mrs. Villegia is the owner of the property located on the west side of Sansome street, forty-five feet north of Bush, and the defendant is the owner of the property on the northwest corner of the tions. streets named. Prior to August 2, 1888, the bank began the erection of a brick building on its lot, and in December of the same year Mrs. Villegia began proceedings to prevent the bank from going on with the building, as one of the walls abutted about a foot over her property. In spite of a no-tice served upon the back people they built their basement wall upon plaintiff's property one and three-quarters feet. This projecting wall is an obstruction to plaintiff's property, and the court is asked to declare it a nuisance and give judgment for $20,000.

The Sacramento River Convention, to consider ways and means for maintaining the navigable condition of the river, may be called together soon. A meeting at this time would have for its object the furnishing of information to the commission which was sent to Washington, and to whose its annual picnic on May 24th at Laundry efforts is largely due the bill now before Congress appropriating $30,000 for the improvement of the river. It will be remembered that a fund of $110,000 was placed, last winter, in the hands of the War Department engineers for the repairing of the Paine break in the levees, and a contract has been let accord-ingly. The break is still unrepaired, and in places the country remains under water. The convention deems it important that this state of affairs should come to a speedy end, and will endeavor to hasten it as uch as possible.

firm offers from Brazil to sell at even lower rates than those now current in the United States. Not-withstanding the present sound statistical position of the article and the probability that stocks in the consuming markets of the world will continue to decrease during the next two or three months, there appears to be a general apprehension of still lower prices, under the influence of possibly large crops in Brazil for next season, beginning on July 1st next. During April the deliveries for consumption in all markets have been small, showing the general disposition of dealers to reduce their stocks. This has certainly been the case in this market, resulting in restricted business and some irregularity in prices, when applying to importers, while such "I do not." Cox's examination will be resumed to-day. In the case of Robert Willis vs. Elizabeth Willis, Judge Lawier has ordered a dismissal of the cause. Judge Lawier said he was unable to decide which of the two was entitled to a divorce. Judge Hoge westerday divorced Maggie Cof. in restricted business and some irregularity in prices when applying to importers, while such parcels as were forced on the market sold with more or less concessions. The majority of im-porters, however, are not anxious sellers, being gov-erned in this course, independently of their individ-ual opinions as to the general future of the article, by a belief in moderate receipts from Central Amer-ica and by the knowledge, besides, gained by pas-experience, that the pressing of stocks at a duit time and on unwilling buyers would depress prices un-reasonably. A REWARD-SEEKER.

Suspicious Charge Against a Respectable Young Man.

Judge Rix heard a suspicious charge of larceny against Edward Maloney yesterday, and reserved his decision until to-day. Edward Maloney, a young man who went to the Cooper Medical College about three weeks ago for treatment, was accused by J. Salisbury with stealing a clasp-pin from Miss Kate Overacker, a student.

Salisbury swore he saw Maloney take the pin from the young lady's coat. Instead of telling her or the police, he kept his coun-sel concerning the matter, but made in-quiries about the possibility of receiving a reward for apprehending Maloney. Finally he had the young fellow arrested, and went to Miss Overacker for his reward, which he received received.

Salisbury denied having been in the State Prison when asked this question, but ad-mitted inferentially that he knew considerable about the inside of other jais. The defendant's attorney accused him of being a "stool pigeon" and professional thief. Maloney swore that he found the pin upon lege stairs, and that Salisbury saw him pick it up.

The men work for 15 cents an hour, and put in eight hours, or as many hours per day as they choose; at the end of the job they divide any profit which remains, and we presume if there is no profit, in consethey divide the loss. This appears to be a sensible enterprise. In Europe, workmen's co-operative societies have occasionally ucceeded, to the satisfaction of their pro-

There is no reason why workmen should not be their own bosses. The boss for whom they generally work was formerly one of themselves. No change took place in his mental or physical attributes when he ceased to work for wages and began to employ others to work for him. He was simply a little smarter than his fellows; he realized his opportunities and turned them to account. Lots of men in his service are as capable as he, and would suceed as well if they possessed the same am-

The trouble with co-operative societies of workmen arises from the difficulty of maintaining discipline. The normal tendency of every member of each society is to want to boss the job, and as all the members cannot be bosses, the societies often go to pieces from internal dissensions. This is a tendency which the growth of intelligence in the wage-earning class should gradually overcome. Each member of the society ly and as uncomplainingly as if he was taking his orders from a stranger who paid him wages and could discharge him at will. When workmen learn this simple duty they will become their own emwill find their vocation gone. It is singular that workmen have not perceived that this plan would solve the difficult problems of hours of labor and rates of wages. Under the present system, antagonism is the normal relation of the contractor and his hands. The former tries to get the most work out of his men for the least money. The latter try to give him the least work for the most money. The result is chronic friction, varied by sporadic outbreaks. Now, if the employer class were removed from the area of conflict and the consumer of labor dealt directly with the laborer, questions of wages and hours of labor would be settled by the latter as he chose, without conflict or controversy. It is quite immaterial to the man who builds a house whether the carpenters and masons and nainters who work on it put in eight or six or ten hours a day, or how they divide the money which he pays for the completed structure. In their society the members would decide how many hours they could afford to work per day so as to make termine the length of their day's work accordingly. The man who was to own the house would have nothing to say in the matter. If their working day was too short, the man who wanted the house might not choose to wait so long, and the might go to some other workmen's association. Competition would regulate the mat-In France and Belgium, where co-operative societies of workmen have flourished for many years, the men have experienced difficulty in obtaining the capital necessary in those countries. The fashion of hoarding savings in old stockings still obtains. use. In this country savings are usually placed where they will fructify, and a large ody of intelligent, industrious workmen can always borrow a little money to start works with, and gradually increase them as the profits of their business grow. There are a few workmen's associations in Northstock in the associations command a precess of similar combinations in this country, sound principles, and keep clear of politics and wild theories of social reform. WHO PAYS TARIFF DUTIES? A free-trade paper says: "If it is true be equally true that we Americans pay the which we export goods." There is no emprotected country we make a voluntary country. We say "voluntary" because we please. It is the price we have to pay to exporter takes enough less for his goods to Mexico reduce the duties on American products? Because we would have a less goods in the Mexican market. Why would England like to have the United States take place a given amount of cloth in the Amercan market. England sends to the United States woolen cloth which sells here for $4 a yard. The duty on a yard of that quality of cloth would be $2 40 if it were invoiced

THE MEAT OUESTION.

The facts brought out by Senator Vest's Committee on Meat Products are of interest to every portion of the country. The committee's report proves that while the price paid for cattle to the producer has been declining for several years the price paid by the cousumer has been increasing; the differ ence going into the pocket of middlemen, who have practically established a monopoly of the trade in meat. These middlemen are controlled by four beef-packing act making a grant of public lands, or as firms in Chicago, with the great house of limiting the rights granted to purchasers or Armour & Co. at their head. The consumer has no relief given to the fact that in 1889 upward of if competition does not come to his assist-It is different in the East. It is quite within the power of State Legislatures and of the Interstate Commerce Commission to invalidate railroad contracts which discriminate between one cattleman and another or one consignee and another, and which in effect compel the cattle-raisers of Iowa, New Mexico, Texas, Montana and Idaho to ship to one of the four firms and to no one else. Such contracts are in vioation of public policy, and would be declared void by any court. If they were got out of the way the meat trade would adjust itself on the regular basis of supply and demand. Statistics prove that there are more beef cattle in this country, in proportion to population, than there were twenty years ago. There is no reason why meat next. should be dearer in the retail markets. On how unsound a basis the present trade in meat products rests is shown by the slaughter of cows, two-year-olds and calves for meat. Such wanton extravagance can only be explained on the theory that cattleraisers have been impoverished by the exactions of middlemen, and are forced to realize on every animal that will sell. That is, however, also the case in States like California, where the beef barons have no such reason to sacrifice their property. One seldom sees a steer in market that will dress over 900 pounds, and most of them run to much lower figures; while as to sheep, the animal is unknown to our retail interest. butchers. They deal in tough lambs, which a long march over dusty roads have converted into mere bone and sinew. We neither have the delicate, tender spring lamb of the East-which, with mint sauce and a leaf of lettuce, is a dish for Lucullus -nor have we anything like the juicy, nutritious four, and five year old sheep, a chop from which is a dinner for a laboring man. THE COLORADO ROUTE.

The San Diego Sun thinks there is a reasonable prospect that a railroad will soon be built from the Colorado River to San Diego. Colonel Stanton has just completed a survey of the Colorado Canyon route to Yuma upon which he has been engaged for a year past. He has been in con-sultation with the San Diego Chamber of Commerce and reports that the only obstacle in the way of the proposed road is the lack of funds. Capitalists will not will-hold out a reasonable prospect of local business. On this point, however, Colonel Stanton thinks he can demonstrate the practicability of the route. From Grand Junction, he says, to a point where the agricultural country. In what is known as anthracite coal than in the whole State of Pennsylvania. In Utah the route passes through immense maple forests. After reaching Grand Canyon fine placer gold ued to the Gulf of California, at which point the Colonel took the Southern Pacific would come to San Diego, he said:

The original intention was to reach tide water at the nearest point, and that is at the head of the Gulf of California, but at that time we were counting only on the coal business and looking only after trade down the coast. After my visit hare, however, I must say that we would rather have a terminal in the United States than in Mexico. Again, here you already have the facilities for doing business, which would neces sarily have to be developed on the gulf. Again, by coming to San Diego we could do business up the coast, as well as down, and could do the latter

CLEVELAND AND CAMPBELL.

There is the suggestion of a compromise in the Cleveland and Campbell ticket. The former represents the free-trade wing of measure that the Constitution grants Congress the power to prescribe the time, place and manner of elections for Repre-

The necessity of encouraging American $150,000,000 was paid to the ship-owners of other nations for the transportation of American commodities. With a view to facilitate the free delivery system the Postmaster-General has appointed a commission to select a letter box for the use of private houses. It is thought that if some cheap and convenient box is devised and recommended by the department it may be put in general use by householders. Anything that tends to facilitate the service is an advantage to the public.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTH-ING SYRUP should always be used when children arc cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as " bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It southes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain. relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the bes known remedy for diarrhea, whether arising teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a

SWEETHEART ROBIN.

NTERLOCKED boughs of the hawthorn How barely your brown twigs glisten ! What! have your blossoms forgotten their pledge? Is it not May-time? Listen! Surely I heard a binebird sing, And smeit the breath of the clover. [What is the word he was whispering— Whispering over and over?] Daffadowndilly, how late thou art, Danadowndniy, how nate choi art, Thou spring-time's earliest comer! The gladness of summer is in my heart, And on my cheek there is summer, Thrilling me through at the bluebird's call, As the sun when it kisses the clover! ['Gainst my cheek did a sunbeam fall? Ah, why was he bending over?]

Petals of white from the hawthorn-tree Over the lush grass blowing: Light is my heart as your breezes be-Why surely it cannot be snowing! A moment ago the dream-soft skies Arched above fields of clover! [Why did he look me so full in the eyes? And why did my head droop over?]

And why did my head droop over ?] I know that I heard a bluebird's call: [That word for a whole heart's hushing!] I know that I felt a sunbeam fall: [Ah, what on my cheek was brushing ?] The sky showed never a sign of ran; [His cycs-he was bending over!] And I know, though I walked in a winter lane, I smelt the breath of the clover! CHARLES WASHINGTON COLEMAN, in Harper's Magazine.

THE CONFESSION

-OF A CRIME.

HE spacious salon of the "Prado" was deserted. It could be late, perhaps a lit-tle past 5. Instead of ladles and centle-place outside; they rolled hoop, jumped rope, played ball, and amused themselves at hide and seek, sham bathes, and other games doubtless as profitable and certainly more healthui than chess, ombie, roulette and seven-and-half, in which their elders pass their time. If 1 did not fear coming too close to sacred subjects, 1 would go so far as to say that, even with regard to men assembled in Parliament or on the Exchange, the comparison would apply equally as well.

ney Towle made the closing argument for the Liverpool Blythes. Arguments will be resumed this morning at 11 o'clock.

equally as well. The sun still flooded the place. The children jumped about in the sand, like a swarm of files on a marble table. The nursery-maids, the faithful shepherdesses of every herd, with their white-frilled caps, low-hanging braids of hair, red hands and healthfully flushed cheeks, which I envied them, grouped themselves on a bench in Mchael O'Brien to Elizabe h O'Brien, lot on E. line of Bryant ave., 116 N. of Twenty-third st. gossip, without loosing sight for one moment-to their honor be it said-of their restless charges. Occasionally one of their number would rise from her seat to go to the help of one of the un-lucky little ones who had fallen on its face and rolled about in the sand, rending the air with loud crices. Or a naughty child was called away, summoned before the tribunal of maids and servants, admonished gently or censured se-verely for his or her fault, according to the sys-tem or the temperament of the special nurse in charge. I had seated myself on one of the iron benches in the place towarch the coming of the people, in an absent-minded mood to look at the play of the children. Near my seat, at one side, were two girls about 11 or 12 years of age, whose profiles-nothing more visible from my place-were most charmingly clear and regular. Both had fair hair and seemed to me dressed with un-usual taste and elegance. This last is not at all uncommon in Madrid, where the mammas who have abjured coquetry for themselves perpetuate it in their daughters and make common cause with them in damaging onslaughts on the purses of the papas. My attention.

with them in damaging onslaughts on the purses of the papas. My at eation was arrested by the serious air of these two girls and the marked indifference in their attitude toward the children playing about them. At first I thought their gravity was as-sumed, with a yiew of making the other children ashamed of their boist-rous play; and this struck me as very conical. But closer attention con-vinced me that something very serious was oc-cupying their thoughts. As I had nothing else to do, I quietly changed my seat for one as close to them as possible, hoping to learn something of what was occupying their minds. One of them was very cale, and sat with down-cast eyes, while the other from time to time cast an uneasy glance at her. As I drew near they both became silent, but presently the first broke the stilhess, softly and with melancholy in her voice:

The far-off houses in the Paseo di Recoletos glistened at this moment like silver. The salon was filled with people. After the girls had discussed the matter on all sides with the greatest vehemence, and Lolita had energetically refused their unanimous pro-posals, she took refuge in a dull silence. As her friends observed this wavering, they returned to the attack with renewed zeal, each one launching a more or less important new argument. Luisa especially showed herself untiring in drawing conclusions, accompanied by warm eutreaties. At last Lolita came slowly back, her face bent on Asucion. The poor girl was still in the same melancholy mood, her face buried in her hands. At sight of this distress a tender feeling must have stirred the heart of this already yielding sister; she pressed through the group and, as she reached her friend, threw her arms around her beek and said: "Don't erv. The golden and the dark heads lay for a moment close together. The friends encircled them and not one was without tears. "Come, children, people are looking at us," said Luisa; "dry your eyes and let us go to walk." And so they pressed their handkerchiels to their eyes, Luisa first and then the others, and, with cheerful, tresh faces, mingled by couples with the crowd, and I lost sight of them.—Ar-mando Falacio Vaides, in Five Stories a Weck. M.'s Acorn will leave Victoria, British Columbia, for the south on the 10th itst, and will call at this port. The Champion is now in the Pacific on her way north and will also call in here. The Amphion is still on the graving dock at Esquimalt. When she comes off, she will stay in Victoria harbor until relieved by the Champion. The Warspite, the new flag-ship of the British squadron in the Pacific, is expected to arrive here about the middle of June. The weather was foggy and cloudy at Point Lobos yesterday, and the wind all day from the borthwest, blowing twenty miles an hour. The barometer read: 8 o'clock A. M., 29.99; noon, 29.99; 5 o'clock P. M., 29.96. The trade between this port and Coos Bay must be growing, as yesterday no less than four steamers arrived from there, namely, the Maggie Ross, Ajax, Emily and Arcata.

Had the usual bad weather from 50° to 50°. On March 4th, off Cape Horn, spoke American ship Samaria from Philadeipibla for San Francisco, Crossed equator in Pacific on April 10th. Was withn 100 milesi of the port the last four days with caims. The Sargent has had quite an eventful experi-ence in coming to this port. She sailed from Liverpool on April 18, 1889, with a general cargo, but encountered heavy weather in the At-lantic, had her rudder sprung and had to put icto Montevideo for repairs. While entering that harbor she grounded ou English Bank, and ti took four tugs to haul her off. She made no agreement with them as to salvage, and after be ing hauled off a survey was held. The vessel's cargo was then discharged and sold and the Sar-gent went to New York, where she was over-hauled and then loaded for this port.

God knows who told her." This news must have made a deep impression on the mind of Asuncion, for she sat with com-pressed lips and listened in agitation while her friend, in a positive if not an entirely coherent manner, set forth her reasons. The place was becoming thronged with peo-ple; the sun was setting and now glorified only one of the angels in ithe salon. The atmosphere remained pure and bright, and revealed in ad-mirable clearness the obelisk of the "Dos de Mayo" and the roof of the Museum of Arthilery and San Jetonimo.

The children had retreated at the approach of their enemies, the elders, to a more remote cor-ner, and were there continuing their games. A little golden-haired boy in a sailor suit, with much audacity, remained standing before our two girls, watching them with great composure, and, not liking their seriousness, begon to make faces at them. Luisa, finding herself inter-rupted in this manner, started up and began pulling his hair. The boy ran away howing. After a few minutes, as I was getting ready to leave my seat to walk about a little, I heard Luisa call out: "Hush, hush, I think there is Lola coming." Asuncion straightened up and leaned quickly forwaid. "Yes, yes, it is she," Luisa continued, "she is coming with Pepita, Concha and Eugenia. It is the first Sunday she has been here since her brother's death. Don't look so, girl, don't be afraid; you will see, I will make everything all right."

fervor which carried the report even to my ears. Asuncion did not move. As the group drew near they received cordial greetings from all sides, of which Lola, in ner mourning dress, certainly received her fuil share. After the first friendly salutes were exchanged, I noticed that Luisa made signs to Asuncion, which the latter energetically refused to obey. But Luisa was determined, notwithstanding her friend's opposition, to carry out her plan, and, drawing near to Lola, she said: "Asuncion has something to say to you: sit friend's opposition, to carry out her plan, and, drawing near to Lola, she said:

"Asuncion has something to say to you; sit down by her."
Lola came with a melancholy air and asked tenderly, while she stroked her face;
"What have you to say to me, Conchita ?"
The poor, almost overwhelmed Asuncion did not answer. But the other sat down and urgently begged her to say what made her sad.
"Ah, Lola," she began with a trembling, almost inaudible voice, "If I tell you, you will never love me again."
Lola denied this with a deprecaling gesture.
"No, no, you will not love me-give me a kiss; afterward, when you know all-you will never give me on again."
Lolita seemed surprised; but she gave her two resounding kisses.
"To-morrow it will be a month since your brother Pepito died, Lola; I know that you had convulsions when you saw hits coffin. They wouldn't let me go to your house, because they said it would make an impression so deep on me -but 1 cried all day-Luisa will tell you so-I cried, because Pepito and I were engaged-didn't you know it?" ave. eried, because Pepito and I were engaged-didn't yon know it ?" "No!" "We had been for two months, Lola. He wrote me a letter and gave it to me; when I was going to find you one day he came quite suddenly out of a room and put it into my hand-and ran away. He said that, ever since he had first seen me, he wanted to be engaged to me, if I would say yee, and that, when he had finished his study of law-which was what he intended to choose for a profession-we would be married. I was too ashamed to answer him, but as Paco Nunez had written at the same time to Luisa and asked her to be engaged to him, I gave him one day in Pasco a message from her: 'Paco, I am to say 'yes'' to you from Luisa.' And another time Luisa said to Pepito: 'Pepito, I am to say 'yes'' to you from Asuncion.' And so we were en-gaged. Sundays, when we used to dance at your house, he chose me oftener than the other girls, but he was ashamed to talk with me. I feit un-comfortable about it, and asked him once when we were dancing and he was so sad and quiet, 'if I bored him.' He said: 'No one bores me, least of all you.' I blushed, and he did too. Every afternoon he watched for me when school was out; he walked up and down till came out; then he walked behind me till igot home." Here Asuncion stopped, and Lola, who had histened to her with a sad curiosity, waited a minute for her to go on. Then she asked: "But why did you say that I would not kiss you again and such things when you had told me? On the contrary, now I really love you for the first time-don't you see?" And as Lolita spoke, she kissed her friend pas-sionately. " Walt, walt, don't kiss me. Of what did your about to transmit their report to the Treas-ury Department at Washington. And as Lolita spoke, she kissed her friend pas-sionately. "Walt, walt, don't kiss me. Of what did your brother die? Did not the doctor say that he died of 'getting wet?" "Yes." "Now, Lola, he got wet by my fault—yes, by my fault. One afternoon it was pouring, and he waited for me at the school. I saw him through the window standing in a doorway—the doorway opposite, you know—and he had no umbrelia. As we came out, 1 was well protected because the servant had brought one umbrelia for me and another for herself. Pepito followed us without an umbrelia. It poured in torrents, and I, instead of offering him mine and going under the servant's, let him get wer all the way home. But it wasn't because I didn't care. Lola, do not believe it, for God's sake—It ouly happened because I was ashamed." As he said this, her feelings overcame her, her volee choked, and she broke into sobs. Lolito gazed at her a long time with an angry look, while face, and bent brows; at last she rose and went to ber friends, who were standing at a little distance. I observed how she related the story to them with vehemen gesiures, growing quite stormy at last, and how the tears came into her eves with.

BRANCH CLUBS NEEDED.

BRANCH CLUPS NEEDED. Owing to the manner in which the game laws are at present violated by hunters in the interior who persist in killing game birds and animals at all seasons of the year, it is deemed imperative that branches of the present association, with a membership of 450 in this city, be formed in every town and city of the State. With sportsmen's clubs established in every town throughout the State the vandalism which is now being carried on by bide and game hun-ters in direct defiance of the game laws, would very soon come to an end, as the large rewards which would be offered by the association for the airest and conviction of the vio-lators would encourage sportsmen to go in pursuit of the poachers and bring them to jus-tice. As matters stand at present there are no inducements offered by the State, or any sports-men's club, for that matter, that would influence any man to arrest hunters found with game in their possession killéd during the close season. Mr. Stackpool spoke at length on the game question, and criticized severely the hunters who are now engaged in killing mallard ducks in the marshes of Suisun and Alvarado. At this sea-son of the year the birds are mating and breed-ing, and it is a very easy matter for hunters to kill the parent birds, which hover around their nests when disturbed by man or dog. Messrs. LIBRARY GUARANTORS.

The Trustees Will Force Them to Pay for Lost Books.

At the meeting of the Free Library Trustees last evening, Librarian Cheney explained that since November, 1887, when he assumed charge, the loss of books in two sections of the library had been found, by . investigation, to aggregate eighty-six volumes, or a possible loss in the entire library of 600 books.

There were formerly three methods by which loss of books was entailed: First, those taken out on cards and unreturned; second, those taken out on duplicate doorchecks, made by splitting the pasteboard check used, and third, those stolen by employes. The latter cause Mr. Cheney regarded as very slight indeed. Since the in-troduction of brass checks, the second cause has been overcome. The main difficulty still remains, viz, the loss by cards. Of the eighty-six volumes lost, fifty-eight were by this means, and Mr. Cheney sug-gested to the board that it take measures to compel guarantors to pay the value of lost books. The three lawyers on the board thought it might he well to enforce the thought it might be well to enforce the library's claims through the courts, and besides recovering the money due the library force the guarantors to pay more money as costs. With this idea in view, the matter was referred to the Book Committee, with power to act. The branch librarians were directed to 82500. ENGLISH OPINION OF PETTIT. The London Field, in a long review of the tennis player Pettit and his style of play, con-cludes by saying: "Wherever the ball may chance to come Pettit's racket is there. With great rapidity he determines on his course of ac-tion, and instantly drives the ball over the net with great violence, so that none but the most active and watchful adversary can get near the ball before it fails. To a player with Pettit's certainty and swithness of return it matters little whether he makes one close or another. If he misjudges a ball he returns it behind his back, between his legs or under this arm. If a ball is anywhere within reach (for he is all over the court) it goes over the net somehow or other, and when returned it goes over the net again, generally in a way that puzzles his adversary." Jack Dempsey writes from Portland to a mem-ber of the California Club that he has made up his mind to visit New York, and will leave for the East about the middle of this month. ATHLETIC TRAINING.

ATHLETIC TRAINING, Malcolm W. Ford, the celebrated amateur ath-lete, has written several very interesting articles for a New York journal on athletic training, which have been of great value to beginners. Ford has had probably more experience in fooi-racing than any of the amateur athletes of Amer-ica, and his advice is always sought after by representatives of the New York athletic clubs. As to the best way to train for a two-mile race, Ford says: If there is no track in your town, go to a plece of

As to the best way to train for a two-mile race, Ford says: If there is no track in your town, go to a piece of road which may be ievel and practice running any-where from one mile to three miles every day, being careful not to run too much. You might find a convenient place to stop, say about one mile from your starting place. You can rest there anywhere from fifteen minutes to half an hour, and then you can run back to your home and take a bath. The latter is not necessary, though, and should be in-dulged in only when you feel like it. A fiannel shoes, should do fra costume for running on the road. A track would be a better place to practice on, but if you have perseverance the road would do almost as well. Vary your distance every day and run fast very seldom. It is the slow runs which build one up, while a fast pace con-tinually used wears one out. Your own judgment must be used in determining how much work to do or how fast to run in practice. If a friend will go with you simply for the sake of his company and occasionally time you, your work will be more agreeable than if you werk alone. If you find feel-ing of lassitude coming over you caused by hot weather or too much running, you must go very easy. Ease up in your work during the last week and reguiate your thirst as well as you can so as not to drink too much, for a distance runner should have rather a dry diet. Get plenty of sieep and en-gage in nothing which bends to excitement and wor-riment. You should run every day, but vary dis-tance and speed im accordance with your feelings. ment. <text><text><text><text><text><text><text> proper Circulars. Thomas E. McCann, the Stockton druggist, charged by the Society for the Prevention of Vice last July with mailing medical circulars containing indecent literature, was sentenced by Judge Hoffman yesterday to two years' imprisonment in the State Prison with hard labor:

McCann fled to Canada last August, when ut on bonds of $1000, but on April 3d was arrested by Postoffice Inspector Fleming at Bloomington, Ill., and returned to this city. He pleaded guilty a week ago and was ordered to appear for sentence yester-day. Judge Hoffman gave McCann a lecture, which the prisoner will, no doubt, consider in his cell. The Judge considered the distribution of these circulars a source of demoralization and dissemination of a knowledge of practices from which every father would carefully guard his child. There was no telling into whose hands the hurtful circulars might fall when sent through the mails, or what the result might

A DIAMOND TRANSACTION.

Suit to Recover Money Paid for Some of the Precious Stones.

Suit was begun in the Superior Court yesterday by George M. Perine against A. W. Stott to recover $2000 and to cancel an agreement between the parties. It is alleged that on August 27, 1889, it was agreed that the defendant would sell to the plain-tiff two diamond ear-rings for which $3000 would be paid in installments of $500, it being provided, however, that upon the re-turn of plaintiff's father to this State the diamonds should be submitted to him for his opinion as to their value. If the father gave it as his opinion that the diamonds were of less value than $3000 the plaintiff should have the option within a reasonable time thereafter to cancel said agreement, and defendant would upon the delivery of the diamonds return all sums that had been paid Perine's father upon his return said that the diamonds were not worth over $1400. At this time plaintiff had paid $2000. On the 29th of last month he visited Stott and expressed his dissatisfaction with the bargain and requested the return of the $2000 in exchange for the diamonds. Stott re-fused to pay over the money, hence the suit.

A Thief of Time.

Yesterday morning a young man, who gave the name of M. A. Graham, walked into W. Little's office in the Mechanics' Mill, corner of Mission and Fremont streets, and stole an eight-day clock from the wall. He was seen by the mill em-ployes escaping with his booty and arrested and turned over to a police officer, who booked him at the South Harbor Station on a charge of petty larceny.

The inducement held out was that the Union had $800 in its treasury, the earnings of its re-cent picule, and was otherwise financially pre-pared to stand a siege. The millmen came out, but were considerably surprised when they were told by President Floyd of the union to return to mine hours' labor. As the carpenters had in a measure gained their point they deserted the millmen, Mr. Meanwell declared. The mill-hands refused to return to work, and became incensed against the carpenters. SACRED TO SANTA ROSALIA, The adorned patron Saint of Palermo. A mag-nificent yearly festival, celebrating the deliver-ance from the terrible Sicilian plague of 1624, is annually held between the 11th and 15th of July, when an effigy of Rosalia is drawn twrough the principal streets on a trumphal car, 100 feet long, 20 wide, and 50 to 75 feet high, by from 80 to 100 caparisoned mules, the effigy being in sil-ver upon a dome supported by colossal figures of apostles and saints, below which are masses of roses and trees of artificial coral, and the framed motto, which has become a noted Sicilian shrine, is adorned by the statue of the adorned saint, by the sculptor Gregorio Ledeschi, clothed with a robe of solid gold, and another gigantic statue in marble stands near the grotto on the brinks of a mighty precipice. To this figure of Santa Rosalia the devout mariner and fisherman always turn for protection against the drade evils of the mighty sea. The devoit mariner and fisherman always turn for protection against the dread evils of the mighty sea. The architecture as well as the dialect of Sicily is a mixture of Greek. Arabic, Norman and Spanish. Nowhere else is this more noticeable than in Palermo, whose streets disclose a most various composite of structures, though the effect is always extremely bright and interesting, if never artistically whooly satisfying; while with the people who are seen upon them there are striking gayety and jauntiness as universal char-acteristics or the lowly, blended with astonishing elegance on the part of the possessors of wealth and the nobility in general. While the shops and cafes are very beautiful, the street facades above present a grotesque commigling of surken gaileries like cloisters, colounaded fronts of the most classic severity and projecting balconles as graceful and delicate as may anywhere be found in Southern Spain. At all hours of the day the streets, which for the most part are exceedingly narrow, swarm with priests, officers, nobles and picturesque moun-taineers, with every manner of the lowly city folk of the South, while carpenters, tailors, coopers, cobblers, locksmiths and the various petty artisans, nuconceraed for the comfort of pedestrians, pursue their several vocations with delightful conscious importance entirely outside their sho doors, gossiping, whistling and sing-ing, adding much to the picturesque confusion of the thoroughfares. Indeed in no other part of the world have I come upon such meiodious activity. Everybody hums, whistles or sings as he labors, and on infrequently is the passer halted and enthrailed by the delicious adandon with which some laborer, unconscious of own meoidic power, pours forth untrained, but per-fect notes, rising as clear and iond above the distracting sound of the street as the lark's song above the chirpings about farm-house and meadow. uneadow. Unlike the custom in Spain and some-Italian provinces where women are treated as persons requiring never-ending surveillance, in Sicily, and particularly in Paleruo, no hateful restric-tions of this nature seem to be required. Women are seen in the streets, shops and cafes as free from any restraint, and universally treated with as much respect and consideration as in Amer-ica. Indeed, if there is a difference it is in favor of the Sicilian man, whose courtesy and chivalry are astounding and endiess. This gives the trav-eler most gratifying opportunity for the study of Italian women in Sicily; and I most unhesitat-ingly pronounce those of Palerno more vivacions than French women, more beautiful than the best examples of Spanish female loveliness and more graceful and altogether sparkling and charming than any I have elsewhere seen. My own observation disclosed a singular condition of contrasts.

others have in a measure succeeded in having their demands granted as to hours. About 100 union carpenters are idle, of which about eighty are of the Mahoney Brothers' employes, who were granted the eight hours but are resisting a reduction in wages. It is believed that this question has been settled quietly, and that the men will go to work to-day or to-mer-About seventy members of the Mill Machine-hands' Union gave up the eight-hour fight yes-terday morning and returned to work. They may not remain, however, as the bench hands will endeavor to induce them to co-operate and force all the planlag-mills to close down or grant their demands. The bench carpenters say that it is useless for the machines to turn out woodwork when there are no men at the benches to put the pieces to-gether, and that it will be only a short time when accumulated stock will cause the proprie-tors to lay the machines off until the bench-men return. The latter assert that the contractors and builders will assist them for their own bene-fit, because if the mills are not furnishing mate-rial building cannot progress. the same number of hours. A conference of the four United Carpenters' and Joiners' unions was held in the evening at Harmony Hall, at which there was a large at-tendance. President Floyd presided. The following resolutions were passed: Resolved, That $3 50 shall be considered the standard wages for a competent mechanic for eight hours' work. Resolved, That a member of this association shall not in any case strike, without first consulting the Executive Committee of the combined unions. Any one doing so will do it at his own personal risk and shall not look to the union to sustain such ac-tion.
