GEORGE J. CAREY.

The Palo Alto (Republican) in commenting on the nomination of George J. Carey, democratic nominee for supervisor in the fifth district, pays him this compliment:

George J. Carey received the democratic nomination for supervisor for this district by the unanimous vote of the delegates. M. Farrell, of Mountain View, had been mentioned for the office, but when it was learned that Mr. Carey would accept, all opposition was withdrawn.

Mr. Carey came to this county with his parents in 1876, when but a lad. The home place was in the Calaveras valley, in the old fifth supervisor district. He began business with his brothers at age of 14 and was engaged in farming, cattle raising and subsequently in the butcher business. He opened a market in Palo Alto fourteen years ago, which he conducted successfully until about two years ago, when he sold the business and acquired a partnership in the Toggery, the well-known men's furnishing store. Mr. Carey is a man of marked business ability and sound judgment. Some years ago he was appointed a member of the city council to fill a vacancy and at the following election he was elected a member of the board, serving until last spring, when he declined again to be a candidate. He proved to be one of the most earnest and efficient trustees the town has had, and it was largely due to his initiative that the campaign of street improvements was inaugurated, which has given Palo Alto better streets than any other town on the peninsula.

Mr. Carey states that he will make a thorough, straightforward campaign and will visit every part of the large district. He bases his hopes of success on the long-entertained desire of Palo Alto and the northern end of the county to be represented on the board of supervisors and to have a voice in directing the affairs of the county, of which this section forms so important a part.

That is certainly a splendid testimonial to the ability and high standing of Mr. Carey, coming from the community in which he lives, and the plea that section of the district makes for recognition is only fair and reasonable. There are good reasons why that rapidly developing section should be recognized. The agitation heretofore made whereby Palo Alto, Stanford, Mayfield, and surrounding country should be annexed to San Mateo county comes out of the feeling that end of the county has in not being treated as its importance deserves. It would be a calamity to Santa Clara County to lose the prestige that comes from having the Stanford University and that noted section, with its wealth, in our county. The same short-sighted policy toward Gilroy and the southern end of the county has been the means of keeping the county division question alive, it reaching the stage whereby a bill was proposed at the last session of the legislature for county division. It is for this reason, everything else being equal, that we are in favor of giving the outlying districts their just due, and in conceding to Palo Alto the supervisor we will be doing this.

MR. BRYAN IN THE EAST.

The kind of reception Mr. Bryan is meeting with everywhere on his present trip through the east is well indicated in the following report of his meeting at Steubenville, Ohio, as published in the New York World:

Mr. Bryan was literally mobbed. He attempted to speak from the train, but was dragged to the ground by the local committee, while the crowd shrieked its approval, and taken to a temporary platform. It took him five minutes to make himself heard. The crowd seemed to be content merely with seeing him and kept shouting his name and cheering.

Steubenville is a local center of the oil and steel industry. One big furnace there has been closed for a long while, and another at Mingo Junction, six miles away, is idle. Railroad men told Mr. Bryan that one-third of their number are still laid off. Steubenville has been a republican stronghold, more than three to one, but when Mr. Bryan called for a show of hands the great audience assured him unanimously that it would vote for him.

Mr. Bryan's return to his car was one of the most strenuous incidents of all his campaign experiences. Women joined in the frenzied rush to touch him. One woman snatched a rose out of his buttonhole, and others on the outskirts of the crowd shouted "God bless you! God bless you!" The jam became so terrific that Mr. Bryan became frightened. Back on his car he called to the crowd not to rush the women.

A smoke begrimed railroad man in overalls climbed to the platform and waving his cap shouted:

"I am a republican all my life, but I'm with an honest man now."

"We're republicans, but we're with you," the crowd roared back.

Inspired by the unprecedented demonstration, Mr. Bryan put the popular planks of his platform to a vote. Thousands of hands went into the air each time, and the shout might have been heard across the river. When the train pulled out the great crowd rushed after it a hundred yards, yelling and shouting.

"There has never been anything like the change in this section in my political experience," explained Committee-man Gruber of Ohio to Mr. Bryan. "It is due to the fact that furnaces here are shut down, that workmen are unemployed and that they have lost confidence in the republican party. I have been a democrat in these parts for many years, and it has been a famine for us. Now we are having a feast. You're going to sweep this country by the greatest landslide ever known."

It has been the same in West Virginia, Maryland, and every place he has appeared. It is no longer "the enemy's country."

The democratic party is no longer a sectional party. It is united, aggressive and strong, just the same in the east as in the west.

Mr. Bryan is no longer the leader of a faction, the "boy orator of the Platte." He is the leader of a reunited party, and of hundreds of thousands of republicans besides. Jim Hill went to Wall street to report that Bryan has "remarkable strength" in the west. Before election day they will be reporting, one dismayed plutocrat to another, that he has "remarkable strength in the east."—Omaha World-Herald.

The re-election of Judge M. H. Hyland to the Superior Court bench is as certain as any political forecast can be. Republicans everywhere concede this. After twelve years of unusual satisfaction on the bench, with never a criticism of his acts, it would be indeed very foolish to not re-elect him. The extra duties which he has been called upon to perform—that of presiding over the juvenile court—has been invaluable to the county. His great and sympathetic interest in the very many young offenders who have been under his care, is the strongest reason why Judge Hyland should be retained just where he is. A less sympathetic and painstaking Judge would undo much good that has already been accomplished for these unfortunate young people. Judge Hyland will be elected.

"I have known George W. Waldorf ever since he has been practicing law in this county, and know him to be absolutely honest in all his transactions" said one of San Jose's most respected and successful business men to the editor of this paper a few days ago. This simply voices the feeling that exists relative to Mr. Waldorf, who has been given the nomination by the democratic party for Superior Judge. Never having been mixed up in any shady transaction he comes before the people as a young man with a clean record. He is qualified for the position he aspires to and if we mistake not he will be given a most gratifying vote.
