BE CAREFUL HOW YOU CUT THIS PAPER.

Directions—Pass the paper-knife between the two last pages and continue along the top. Then separate pages 9 and 12, and the splendid four page picture of the Reception of the Japanese Ambassadors by the President, will be found unpaired.

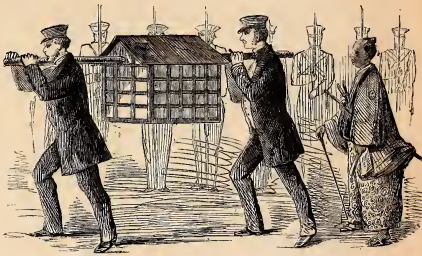

For BINDING—The picture, cut out as above, should be folded and pasted in the volume.

JAPAN AND THE JAPANESE.

Their History, Social Institutions, Laws and Customs.

The early history of the Japanese is as yet shrouded in mystery. Philology and ethnography declare that they have, notwithstanding a superficial resemblance, no racial points of affinity with the Chinese. Kromer supposes them to have found their way in a primordial age from the plains of Central Asia to the valleys of Nippon, and it is evident that many old vocabularies of India and the Mongol world contain words in common with their language. There is a distinction of complexion and of general physical appearance between their aristocracy and the multitude which has been conjectured to arise from a primary difference of descent. Ladies of rank among them have generally a fine clear complexion. It may be true that this is caused by being protected from exposure, while those who hold to the contrary believe the darker Japanese to have come originally from Japan.

Like all Orientals, the Japanese claim a vast antiquity for their race and social forms, but the authentic account of them begins about 660 B. C., or 2,920 years ago. In that year appeared Ziu-mu-in-woo, or the "Divine Conqueror," who seized on Nippon and built a temple dedicated to the Sun Goddess. He founded the sovereignty of the Mikado, and the Mikado of the present day claims to have descended from him. At a very early period the imperial office appears to have become a sort of dogship.

THE JAPANESE EMBASSY IN AMERICA.

In our last we related the progress of this most interesting Embassy from Yeddo to its arrival at the Navy Yard, Washington. We have now received sketches from the special artists we dispatched to the Federal Capital, illustrating the most interesting incidents of their visit to the seat of government, some of which we now present to the public.

Reception of the Japanese at the Navy Yard.

When it was learned at Washington that the Bonchoke had positively arrived at Hampton Roads, the Japanese excitement soon went up one hundred per cent. In anticipation of the event, the Navy Yard had for a fortnight previous been thoroughly cleaned and renovated, and presented a fine appearance. The Japanese flag had been mounted, waives laid, and everything arranged in "apple pie order." As the steamer drew up to the wharf at twenty minutes before twelve, the expectant multitude were gratified by hearing from her band the gay strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Hail Columbia," and by seeing several Japanese standing on the guards. Among them and in all the confusion, one, an artist, was busy with his sheets of colored paper as though alone in his studio. At a quarter past twelve the delegation began, at which time the Mayor and City Council of Washington had arrived, and with them several detachments of marines and of

THE BEST WAY TO PURCHASE BOOKS IS TO SEND TO D. W. EVANS & CO., 677 Broadway, New York.

WHY is the best way to purchase books explained in a word, all books are sold at regular prices, in addition to which, without extra charge, useful and valuable gifts accompany them, worth from 50 cents to $100. If the gift be worth no more than 50 cents, it is no more than that one is obtained elsewhere for the same money, and after valuable and beautiful presents return the original investment one hundred fold.

HOW we can do business on so liberal a scale is a frequent inquiry, but is readily answered. We buy for cash and sell for cash—and in large quantities—often whole editions of a book being disposed of in a few days.

We publish a large list of popular works, which we exchange with other publishers, and these are enabled to furnish all women with the greatest variety of desirable gifts.

WHAT we obtain at this peculiar advantage of our business are, that we give more for the same amount of money than the regular dealer in books, and that make our goods especially desirable. We create a healthy taste for useful and standard literature, by introducing books, in many cases, where they have hitherto been almost unknown. Our books are new and fresh from the publisher's hands, and all orders are filled and delivered with the utmost dispatch to all parts of the country, the central location of New York giving peculiar facilities for rapidity and cheapness of transportation.

WHICH are so unrivaled by any other City in the world. Those who wish to save time and money will address their orders to D. W. EVANS & CO., 677 Broadway, New York.

Be particular to address all communications to D. W. EVANS & CO., 677 Broadway, New York, as misdirections may cause delay or loss. If possible, money should be sent in form of draft, no payment can be stopped, if sent through the mail.

WHEN ordering books, the title only should be used. The work should be plain, and the names, Post Office, County and State should be distinct, so as to avoid mistakes. Orders of five books and upwards should be sent by Express, if possible, as it is safer and cheaper than mail. When more than one Express Company deliver goods in any place, invariably Express we shall give by, if there is any choice.

ALL PERSONS WHO desire to act as agents may become so by applying for a catalogue, and obtaining subscribers for the book. Book agents are particularly required to examine our terms, as no books may be sold in the same time that one may be disposed of in the regular way.

A full explanation of the business, with terms to agents, and a full list of books and gifts, may be found in our weekly two page catalogue, which is mailed free to any address on application.

Send for a Catalogue.

Send your books, enclose the price, and direct your order to D. W. EVANS & CO., 677 Broadway, New York.

A SINGLE TRIAL Will convince you that the best and most economical way of purchasing books is to send to the PIONEER GIFT BOOK STORE.

STEINWAY & SONS' Patent Overstrung Grand and Square Pianos.

Are now considered the best Pianos manufactured. Superior of NEARLY ALL THE GREATEST AND MOST FAVORABLE MERCHANTS AND ARTISTS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. The most celebrated having probably examined and practically tested the improvement in Grand Pianos, invented by H. STEINWAY, in which the covered strings are overstrung above those remaining on the body itself. It did so as a result of the said improvement the voice of the Piano is greatly improved in quality, quantity and power. The reason for STEINWAY'S improvement is much more than the usual structure, and much better workmanship than that realized in any other Piano with which we are acquainted. The improvement regards the improvement of Mr. STEINWAY'S most careful, rigorous and important. Of great scientific merit has ever been known, superior, as far as the undisturbed lower or bellows. ## JAPAN AND THE JAPANESE.

The great characteristic which distinguishes the Japanese in the most decided manner from all other Oriental races is a passion for the acquisition of every species of knowledge. They love to learn for practical purposes, for amusement, for accomplishment, and to gratify pride. Their etiquette and social culture have induced a high self-opinion, and they believe that with the same facilities they can keep pace with the men of Western Europe and America. Strangers in Japan have observed the universal custom of carrying note-books, and the extraordinary and apparently general custom of recording all curious facts, or even well turned remarks which they hear in conversation. Sketching is almost universal among the educated, and they draw continually. In this as in nearly everything which indicates an active intelligence they are as different from Chinese as white from black. A Chinese who has made the appointed studies rests quiet in the faith that his mind is "improved about enough," and that the part of his own country contains all wisdom worth acquiring. Commissioner Yeh, who bore the reputation of being a learned man, was asked during his imprisonment if he wanted books. He replied that he required none—that the course of study which had given him his rank embraced all reading requisite. Such a reply was exquisitely Chinese, but it would never have been made by a Japanese.

As may be supposed, such people are ingenious, practical and industrious. They work well in metals. Their swords and cutting instruments are of very excellent steel, and Golewan says that he observed among them carpenters' tools, and particularly saws, equal to those of English make. They observe with quickness any foreign novelty in metal work, and imitate it with great accuracy—in the case of our own Sharp's rifle they even intro-

GREAT TROTTING MATCH BETWEEN GEORGE M. PATCHEN AND ETHAN ALLEN, FOR $2,000.

The second great trot between these famous stallions came off on Wednesday, the 23d May, at the Union Course, in the presence of an immense assemblage of sporting, fashion and promiscuity.

First Heat.—The horses came up to the stand in fine condition, and the track was in the finest order for fast time, on which lets were made that a heat would be run in 2:34 and 2:41 1/2. Patchen won the track, and both got over the score very evenly, and at the first turn Patchen led slightly, when Ethan broke; and did not get settled down to his work until near the quarter pole, where Patchen led by three lengths; in going along the back stretch Ethan closed up so rapidly that he lapped Patchen at the half and collared and passed him in going round the upper turn; but in swinging into the home stretch, Ethan again broke, Patchen gaining the lead by a length, keeping it, and making the heat in 2:27 1/4, amidst great applause.

Second Heat.—Two false starts took place before the horses were sent off, which they did side and side, and kept so to the half mile

"No," he said, then, having changed his name; and for the witness famed.
"Unnecessary," replied the functionary. "He acknowledged it at once.
He has received several letters from you, and he has answered them all."

"By consequence from the minister—the real master of your conduct. You have endeavored to serve him, and he has not been able to do so."

"What has he to do with it?" repeated the functionary, raising his eye to the heaven looked down at the minister. "What is the matter with him? Do you think I would have submitted to a trial I now imagine that I will find it difficult to get out of my hands?"

JAPANESE IN AMERICA.

under charge of Narouso-Genairo, fifth in rank. They were received without any needless ceremony, and without any forms beyond those of ordinary courtesy. The large box was then opened by Narouso-Genairo, who took from it a small casket most elegantly adorned with gold and crimson, inclosed and bound about with rich and heavy crimson silk cords. The Treaty was taken from it and laid upon the table, after which each prince signed it in order of rank. The utmost care was given by each, as if he had been engraving instead of writing, and as if a deep sense of the magnitude of their task were impressed on all their minds. After General Cass had signed the American copy it was placed in a rosewood case, handsomely mounted in silver, and given to Narouso-Genairo, who placed it in the great Treaty-box, or house. General Cass then conversed with them on diplomatic subjects, appointing the following Thursday for the consideration of all such matters as were thus far unsettled. After being introduced to Secretary Kennedy of the Navy, the Japanese then retired, but stopped on their way homeward to the hotel to call on Mayor Bennett.

So gratified were the Japanese at having concluded the principal object of their mission that they on the same evening held what the Japanese terms "moderate revel" in their own apartments, in the friends of the American Commissioner. Later in the evening they held a public reception in the dining-hall of the hotel, Naniwara, the interpreter, introducing all who chose to come. For half an hour they endured the silly questions and bores intrusion of a Washington mob, and then retired to dream of better scenes.

They Visit the House of Representatives.
On the 23d instant, there was, to borrow from the Itevald, a decided improvement in Japanese affairs, which consisted in treating the illiterate stragglers as gentlemen and not as hyenas. In fact, it must be admitted that, what with women and babes being intruded into solemn diplomatic receptions, and all the rousselle and gentile of the town being allowed to paw them, the unfortunate Easterners have had a hard time of it.

On May 23d, however, at half-past eleven A. M., the Japanese Embassy, numbering some fifteen persons of different rank, including the four principal ones and the interpreters, left Willard's Hotel for the Capitol, in pursuance of an invitation extended to them by both Houses of Congress. They were accompanied by the Naval Committee only, outsiders being kept at bay. Captain Dupont having in charge the Ambassadors and Censor; Commodore Lee, the Vice-Governor, Genairo and Jugoero; Captain Porter had three officers next in rank, and the others all went in carriages by themselves.

Having been introduced to the floor of the Chamber, they remained there half an hour, closely watching all that was done. They were soon surrounded by a number of Senators. As they entered, the yess and nays were being called. The nature of the Legislative proceedings were then explained to them through their interpreter. As has been seriously remarked, the representatives, while the Japanese were present, were fortunately guilty of no acts of folly or outrage on good manners, so that the foreigners will probably give in a much better account of their behavior than they are really entitled to. They were led over the building and shown the splendid ceiling but the astonishment of those introduced, they manifested much more interest in the mode of conducting the legislative proceedings than in any other part of the show. They remained but a short time, and then retired, followed, of course, by a loud laugh from the galleries, which were left nearly empty.

They Visit the Navy Yard.

On the 23d instant the Japanese Embassy visited, in company with the Naval Commissioners, the navy yard. Here they were received by their old friend Commodore Buchanan, the Commander of the yard, who also commanded the flag ship Sassaquinah during the Perry expedition. He welcomed his visitors with an excellent address, to which they feelingly responded. The first place shown was the forging, which greatly interested the foreigners. They were astonished and delighted at seeing the forging of the stem of an anchor. They then went to the steam boiler department, where they closely examined a large boiler intended for the steamer Penacola. The brass furnace, the manufacture of percussion caps, mangle rolls, and casting howitzers, all gratified them, as did also the burning signal light. They were then photographed, after which they witnessed experiments in firing the Dahlgren guns, and visited all the departments devoted to casting shells and making machinery of other metal work.

After visiting all the prominent places of interest, they were invited to the residence of Commodore Buchanan, to partake of a handsome collation. In the parlour many ladies were assembled, and were severally introduced to the distinguished visitors. An appointment to dine with General Cass at six o'clock prevented a long stay; consequently they were precluded the possibility of examining minutely every object of interest.

An interview of the Commissioners with Secretary Cass, on the 24th, was not without interest. He had a long talk with them in regard to the currency between the two countries, and explained to them the benefits they would derive by fixing its standard similar to our own. They seemed greatly pleased with the suggestion of the venerable Secretary, and will undoubtedly profit thereby.

Their Accommodation at Willard's Hotel, Washington.

It is well known that in this country the system of accommodations for the travelling public is carried to a degree of perfection unknown in Europe; and that illustrious strangers who have had the best hospitals of our hotels extended to them, have enjoyed as luxurious living as it is possible to have anywhere out of a royal palace. It may be, however, safely asserted, that no strangers have ever been treated with more care and consideration for their wants than the Japanese have been at Willard's in Washington, while the same regard will be shown them on a splendid scale at the palatial Metropolitan in this city.

At the former hotel the entire lower floor of one wing was given up to their use. Pains were taken to furnish, and others were arranged in a manner which it was ascertained would be agreeable to them, a suite of connected rooms ranging from Pennsylvania avenue along Fourteenth street to F street. Many of the rooms were in fact newly furnished in order to accommodate all the guests. As the Japanese are fond of bronze statuettes, like their neighbors the Chinese, numbers of such works of art were scattered around the apartments, while handsome engravings, such as it was supposed would interest them, were liberally provided. It having been observed that large mirrors were greatly admired by them, several reaching from floor to ceiling were provided for their accommodation. At home the only mirrors known to them are small affairs of polished, such as are still used by Chinese—the same kind familiar to the ancient Egyptians. Bath-rooms, a private kitchen, and private street entrance all added to their comfort and privacy. That some pains were taken to give them room may be inferred from the fact that about sixty rooms were allotted to them, about twenty of which were parlor and reception rooms.

The very liberal use which they made of the baths proved that the care which had been taken to anticipate their wants in this respect was not lost. In short, it may be said that the hosts of Willard's, by their liberal preparations, tact, experience and courtesy to their visitors, fully maintained the high character which they have long borne for ability to perform that task which a popular proverb establishes as the test of decided ability. They are, keep a hotel, and like our Metropolitan hosts of this city, do it so as to perfectly satisfy Japanese, Yankees or any other reasonable people on the face of the earth.

Japanese Soldiers.

The Japanese soldiery, according to the observations of Commodore Perry, did not seem to be subjected to very strict discipline, while the general effeminate appearance and small stature of the nation appear nowhere to so little advantage as in the army. On one occasion, where more than five thousand were gathered together, it was observed that their dress was in most respects much like that of their other countrymen. Their arms were swords, spears and matchlocks. Those in front were all infantry, archers and lanceors, but large bodies of cavalry were seen behind. The horses of these seemed of a fine breed, hardy of good bones, and brisk in action, and these troopers, with their rich caparisons, presented at least a showy cavalcade.

Of a body of military guards, it is remarked that those on the right were dressed in tunics gathered in at the waist with broad sashes, and full trowsers of a gray color, the capacious width of which was drawn in at the knees, while their heads were bound with a white cloth in the form of a turban. They were armed with muskets, upon which bayonets and flint locks were observed. The guards on the left were dressed in a rather dingy brown colored uniform, turned up with yellow, and carried old-fashioned matchlocks.

On another occasion it was observed of a number of military officials that toward night the men clothed themselves with loose gowns, some of red and others of blue, with hanging sleeves, upon which were white stripes, meeting in an angle at the shoulders. On their backs were emblazoned coats of arms, or some insignia, in black and other colors. Most of them were bareheaded and showed the hair to have been shaved on the crown, while that on the sides had been allowed to grow long and was worn plastered with some species of ointment, and was fastened up into a knot on the bald spot upon the top of the head. A few, however, wore caps of bamboo, in shape like a shallow basin inverted, and reminding one of Mambribo's helmet. In some of the hosts the men have tall poles

Letter from our Special London Correspondent.

Our Special Correspondent, Dr. Augustus Rawlings, Visits the famous Tattersall's—What he Saw and Heard There.

At the end of Piccadilly, at the top of Grosvenor Place, where St James's Park ends and Hyde Park begins—within sight of the house where the Great Duke once lived, and a caricature of the Great Duke lives now—within a stone's throw of Buckingham Palace and alongside St. George's Hospital, there is a long, narrow, descending, gloomy passage, which a stranger might pass twenty times without notice if it were not for attendant sprites in red waistcoats and second-hand groom's garments, with a horsehoof along over their shoulder arms, who on Saturdays, Mondays and Thursdays, in the season, congregate and ply the "Old yer 'orse, captin' trade at the mouth of this 'Avenue." Piscis descendens, &c. This passage, wide enough for a coach and four, but which looks barely wide enough for a Hansom, leads to Tattersall's, one of the sights of London, and one of the institutions of England.

Descending the narrow foot-path about fifty paces, you find facing you on the right hand a one-storied brick building, very much in the style of a Quaker meeting-house, with a green grass field of an acre adjoining, closed from the road by iron gates, wherein about an acre of fine grass; and you catch a glimpse beyond of Belgrave Palace and an unfinished crescent, projecting forward toward the ground it is destined to appropriate when Tattersall's lease expires, like a half-built fortification.

The Quaker Meeting-House is the Subscription Room—the Board, the high Change of betting men. It is there that favorites are made and "dead-ones are milford" by the knowing ones. On the left hand are the great coach doors that shut in Tattersall's sale yard—a square yard, flanked on two sides by the offices and houses in which the partners reside, and on two other sides by stables, and including, in various alleys, accommodation for a hundred horses, a long array of carriages, and two rides for displaying the paces of all "the terrible—terrible high-bred cattle," as the race card list men cry.

In the centre is an alcove in the worst taste of the last century, covering the annual sacred in the eyes of English sportsmen as the the ox to the Hindoos—the fox, and crowned by a bust of George III., when young, before he dreamed of American Independence. It is among the traditions of coaching days, that a member of the Four-in-Hand Club, Sir Henry Peyton, wagered, and won, that he would trot his four-in-hand team down the narrow passage, turn into the yard and round the fox without once allowing his team to cease to trot.

It is at the end of the ride that hounds one side of this square that the rustics stand, from which, year after year, some two hundred and fifty thousand pounds sterling of horses and hounds are sold.

Tattersall's, it must be understood, includes two distinct departments—the one the business of selling horses, hounds and sporting dogs by auction on commission, which has been carried on for more than one hundred years by four generations of Tattersalls, and for more than ninety years in the present line.

The other department is that of the Betting Exchange, with which the Messrs. Tattersall have nothing to do, except as landlords of the building, receiving so much rent, and leaving the management in the hands of the tenants, the subscribers.

The horse sales take place every Monday all the year round, and on Thursday also in the fashionable part of the year termed "the season," usually from the latter end of April to the end of July.

The number of horses put up for sale averages during the year one hundred a week. They include ponies, hacks, hunters, carriage-horses, racers in training, brood mares, stallions and untried steaks.

The prices vary from ten pounds to ten thousand pounds, the average price being somewhere about fifty pounds.

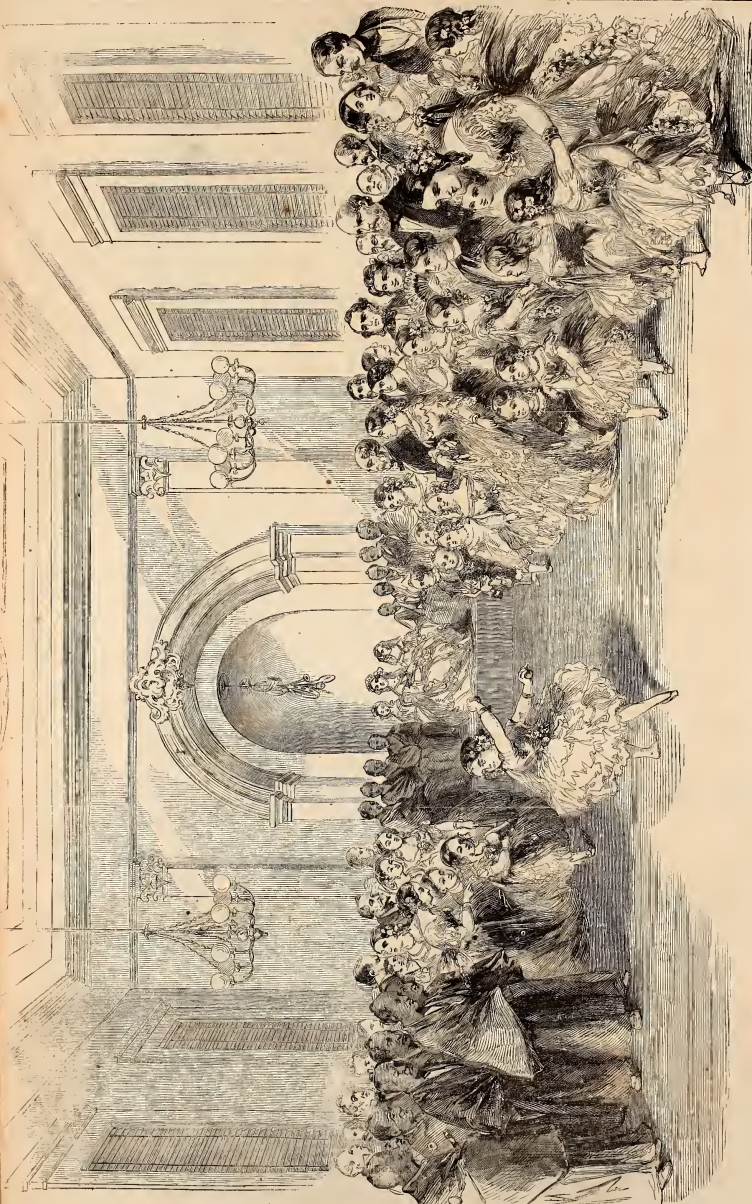

The horses are invariably brought in not later than Friday for Monday, and Tuesday for Thursday's sales; viewed and examined Saturday, Sunday and Monday morning up to ten o'clock. Any person on Saturday may have any horse taken, led out and trotted up and down for his examination, and he may have any single horse sent for sale ridden by the "rider" of the establishment; but where

The Geop at the Navy Yard.

On the 23d the Japanese Embassy visited the Navy Yard and we engrave the group as it appeared on that interesting occasion. In our last number, page 29, we gave a detailed account of the visit of these distinguished foreigners, and we therefore refer our readers to it for full particulars.

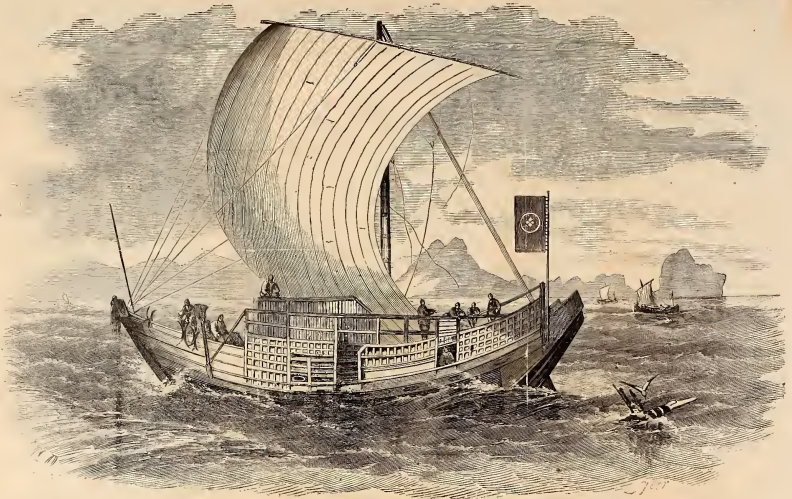

As a memento of this remarkable event we recapitulate the names of our distinguished guests and those who accompanied them, together with our own officials: Nawa Nawa No Kamie, the First Ambassador; Murakage Awagi No Kamie, Second Ambassador; Agari Dango No Kamie, Third Ambassador; Nawa Nawa Genzo, Lieutenant-Governor, Chief Executive Officer of the Embassy; Takahara Jugo, Lieutenant-Governor, Second Executive Officer of the Embassy; Kuritan Hechobatera, the Spy or Censor, and Morita Okakura, Treasury Official of high rank. Our own officials present were Captain Dupont, Captain Blair, Captain Porter, Lieutenant Nicholson, Lieutenant Lewis, Mr. Sims, Commodore Buchanan, Lieutenant Henry, Purser Watson and other distinguished officials. Our engraving represents them as they stood awaiting the experiments in firing the Dooligan gun.

REVIEWS.

BEAUREGARD BEAUREGARD! Will you take my name? said a gallant to a young lady after the dawn was broken up, "seeing it's Leap Year."

"You don't? Don't you don't?—Mister, I say, I don't know you, nor do I know of nobody who may be like you, but I don't like to do it."

Old Tom Bates had a great story about feet. "Talk about 'feet,'" he used to say, "why I know a sagger down in Arkansas that had some footers like young steamboats. That feller's feet had a forty to him though it ain't—when they started a railroad in his parts, the locomotive feller's feet him hundred dollars for his old moccasins. There ain't a cap'tain of one, and an locomotion saloon out of 'em."

"I wish you would come to a pass in your talk, with me, Miss K." "Such an everlasting chattering is enough to drive me mad."

AMERICAN WATCHES

Attention is invited to the following statement of facts in regard to these Watches, and some considerations you may think are proper to those of foreign manufacture.

Notwithstanding the determined and persistent efforts of many of these foreign manufactures to prejudice the public against our watches, they have been constantly on the increase ever since the Republic was commenced, thus evidencing that they have grown more popular through their intrinsic merits.

One peculiar system of making the different parts of each watch the exact counterparts of every other watch of the same series, and in a uniformity in quality which can only be obtained by the most perfect machinery.

In addition to these primary conditions of accuracy, every watch made by the Company is made of the best choice and selected material, carefully finished by the various processes to which they are subjected and thus just, rugged and severely tested by the best workmen in the country.

Foreign Watch is guaranteed by a guaranty that is good for anything, and by means that can be held in court.

Another warranty is the consummation sanctioned by the various expatriate and public interest in importation—the total of which, including Custom House duties, more than makes the prime cost of the Watch below a cent in the pocket of the ultimate owner.

To conclude—we claim that our Watches are the best and most desirable time-keepers in the world, besides being the cheapest; and we assure that series of Watches we ever made that would show as well as any other series of watches in use as we have listed. In individual instances their performance has been unsurpassed by anything recorded in the history of horology.

N. B.—We have just introduced a new style of Watch, extensively fitted, and than than thus far we have hitherto profited, with several improvements calculated to insure the most accurate and perfect time, and to prevent the usual accidents and derangements to which all Watches are liable.

Amateur watch-makers, containing full information and numerous cuttings from French individuals, may be had on application to the undersigned.

As these Watches are for sale by Jewellers generally throughout the Union, we do not solicit orders for single Watches.

CANDLES FOR COAL. A NEW INVENTION, MANUFACTURED BY THE New York Paraffine Candle Company, UNDER MERCUR'S PATENT.

These Candles being made from one of the products of the distillation of coal, and having the same chemical composition as the best quality of tallow, they are uniformly adapted for giving light. They cost the highest price in the market, but are the most economical.

Our tests from the Photometer showed that the Paraffine Candles above referred to, as compared with the best quality of tallow, burned seven times longer, gave a better and pleasanter light, and burned half the cost per hour.

The Candles manufactured by the Company are warranted to stand all climates; will run out, and require no trimming, and, unlike some other so-called Paraffine Candles.

Do not Smoke in Burning, BECOME YELLOW WITH AGE, WITHOUT ODOR.

As an inducement Candle is already offered in the market, purchased in large quantities by the Company, is stamped with its name and trade-mark.

LOWELL, MASS., June 6, 1860.

FRANK LESLIE—Dear Sir: Our agents in foreign countries, Mexico, Peru, Chili, Brazil, Cape of Good Hope, Australia, Turkey, Tunis, Algiers, India, China and Japan, have mentioned, among the other American publications that reach them, FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER, and have also spoken of the interest that is taken in its delineations.

JAMES C. AYER & Co.

Letter from Our Special Correspondent in London. Going to the Derby—Scenes on the Road—The Horses—The Race and the Result.

London, May 23, 1860.

I was seated, about three weeks since, beneath the spreading arms of a walnut tree, in the grounds connected with one of the most beautiful villas adjacent to London. Now an English villa is, generally speaking, a precisely comfortable abode, the windows opening close down to the doors, and the houses spreading their roofs over much ground. From the windows on the first floor you could step right on to the lawn of Percy Cross Lodge. And what a lawn! Neither the Italian,

HEAD OF THE CANE TO BE PRESENTED TO JACK MACDONALD, STEAM TRAINER, BY MESSRS. FURMAN AND BRYANT.—MANUFACTURED BY TIFFANY AND CO., NEW YORK.

French or Swiss lawn can compare with the English. How perfectly level its stretch; how profoundly rich in color is the green of every blade of that grass, whose multitudinous assemblage forms a field similar to a carpet of green plush—it has the same sprightly sensation when you tread upon it; how well trimmed are those graded roses that line the gravelled walks; how harmoniously do those beds and parterres of flowers affect the eye; how regularly do those pesocles, nectaries and sprickets spread their tender limbs and tendrils against the wall where the warm rays of the sun pour down. Ah, it is a Spring day, bright as the heart could wish; not a cloud, light as a wisp of smoke from a cigar or the last passing puff of a fog, dulls the royal blue of the sky above, but with a warm, measured glow, the sun pours down heat into the hearts of the flowers and vitalizes every species of vegetation. The lilacs are fully in blossom, purple, white and pink, while the apple, plum and pea plant are so rich in their blossoming garments, and so packed with their own wealth of blossom, that they seem imbedded in a cloud of swan-down or a drapery of caecilianae. Then the robins and even the sparrow skip hop and chirp over the lawn, just as happy and free as men's thoughts that arise in the contemplation of such a scene.

Now this is all sentimentalism the reader may say, and so perhaps it is. But if you were an American, and had been put up in London for a month, unable to see anything but piles of gloomy buildings, smoky, not with age, but with smut that floats in and pervades the atmosphere: if you had in vain looked and longed for the sun, you would hail this Spring day scene even as I did; the very air seemed mellow and fragrant. Why, there is nothing that scatters a man's troubles quicker than a visit to such a spot, where the dogs come leaping at you with a friendly bound, where you can pass away a happy afternoon watching the old hen and the little brood of

CHAPTER III.

When Captain Braden had finished the Agreement he was surprised to find the one waiting his arrival in the cabin. He read in the pale features and anxious regard of the figure that something unusual had occurred.

Instead of welcoming her kindly, he ferreted the direction of a parent, and at once assumed the cold demeanor of the father, determined, as he thought, to add error, greatly amplified, but not long to last. However, I possess with you that character—is in a British officer, an ensign of a sea-force, that I follow you. I come on board in company with my friend the doctor.

"You have long been on board?" demanded the commander of the Agamemnon.

"Two hours, sir,"

"When informed of the motive of your visit I shall know how to receive you," observed the captain, dryly.

"FATHER," said Oliver, greatly agitated, "but I beg not long to wait before I possess with you that character—is in a British officer, an ensign of a sea-force, that I follow you. I come on board in company with my friend the doctor."

"And what circumstances?" demanded his father, sternly.

"The late doctor of Kingsford, replied the young man, firmly.

On reaching the deck, Phil, overcome by weakness, and still more by the unexpected blow, had been treated with sympathy and would have been carried to his cabin had it not been for the interference of the doctor.

"Is he dying?" asked Oliver. "My father has destroyed him."

"No, sir," declared Jack, looking at the old and staggering youth between his own rough, leonine jaw; "it's not a death—only a faint."

"Well, I am glad," replied the sailor, "and I am glad to see you well."

"The doctor was only on board, or even only by me, he might interfere with the doctor," muttered Jack, "and that the doctor would have done."

"I have it," he said, "as I really said together."

"The exchange of dress was equally made, and on the best instance of the doctor's skill."

"Give way, men!" shouted the young gentleman.

"Shall I have the honor of attending your excellency?" was the sagacious reply.

"With the most punctilious politeness, the commander of the Agamemnon preceded the representative of his sovereign, as he was termed, accompanied by the light armor-bearer of the king, and exchanged salutes, by means of his hand, with the king's representative."

"Darius," said the officer of marine, as the cutter moved from the ship's side, "I am glad to see you well."

"I am glad to see you well," replied the sailor, "and I am glad to see you well."

THE PRIZES FOR THE NEW YORK YACHT CLUB REGATTA OF 1860.

As engrave, as has been our custom for years, the prizes now on exhibition at the establishment of Tiffany & Co., for the New York Yacht Club Regatta, which came off on the 7th. The prizes are five in number, and have been made by the above named house, which has been worthily honored by the patronage of this Club from a date to which the memory of the most venerable sail of the Yacht Club runneth not back. A tankard, ice-dish, castor, salad bowl and oyster chafin-dish are the articles for competition—there being no order of precedence in the scores aside from the preference of the victor, whose only advantage is the right of choice in succession.

The tankard is after the popular Flemish type in shape, a vessel weighing some forty ounces, and standing some eleven inches in height. Its body rises out of a slightly swelling pedestal, the change of line being beautifully covered by a broad conventional flower border. Above this border, and again just under the lid, a hawser in solid relief passes round the tankard, and in a true sailor's knot at the back seems the section of a broken mast, which serves for a handle. The mouthpiece is a spirited sculpture of an inverted dolphin. The thumb-piece—without which no tankard of the olden time would be perfect—is the representation of a trident. The lid is a very handsome field of flat burnished silver, slightly moulded at the edge. Around the top an exquisite border, like a series of coral sprigs, suggests the unfortunate fate of the "Ancient Mariner," who in solid sculpture, reclines within its fatal circle, and, telescope in hand, seems to be gazing over the limitless expanse for some passing ship. The poetic conception is thus complete—the coral reef, the castaway, the remains of a wrecked ship, &c. The statuette is by far the finest piece of sculpture in silver we have ever seen, everything, even to the professional bagging of the sailor's shirt and the mannerism of his attitude, being to the life.

The ice-dish, though an evidence of skilful execution, is of too incongruous design to be really artistic. Of the ordinary shape for such vessels, it is entirely covered with motifs of marine plants, shells, &c. The base is a truthful representation of the surf breaking over rocks and subsiding upon a weed-covered beach. The stem is made of a bunch of bullrushes—a fresh water plant—and though exquisitely wrought, is but an inconvenient hold for the hand. The bowl is a profuse field of representations of marine curiosities. The border ornamenting the over-laying lid is the feature of the piece, and in its superlative beauty affords a most palpable proof that the real artist need not restrict himself to the antique fret or anthemion for ornament. Weight forty-two ounces, height ten inches.

The chafin-dish is identical in shape and size with the piece for second-class schooners in last year's regatta, and entirely like it, with the exception of a few variations of ornament. The shell surrounding the dish-cover has this time given place to a finely modelled statuette of a Triton blowing the shell trumpet, and the borders are likewise different in design. This piece weighs fifty-two ounces.

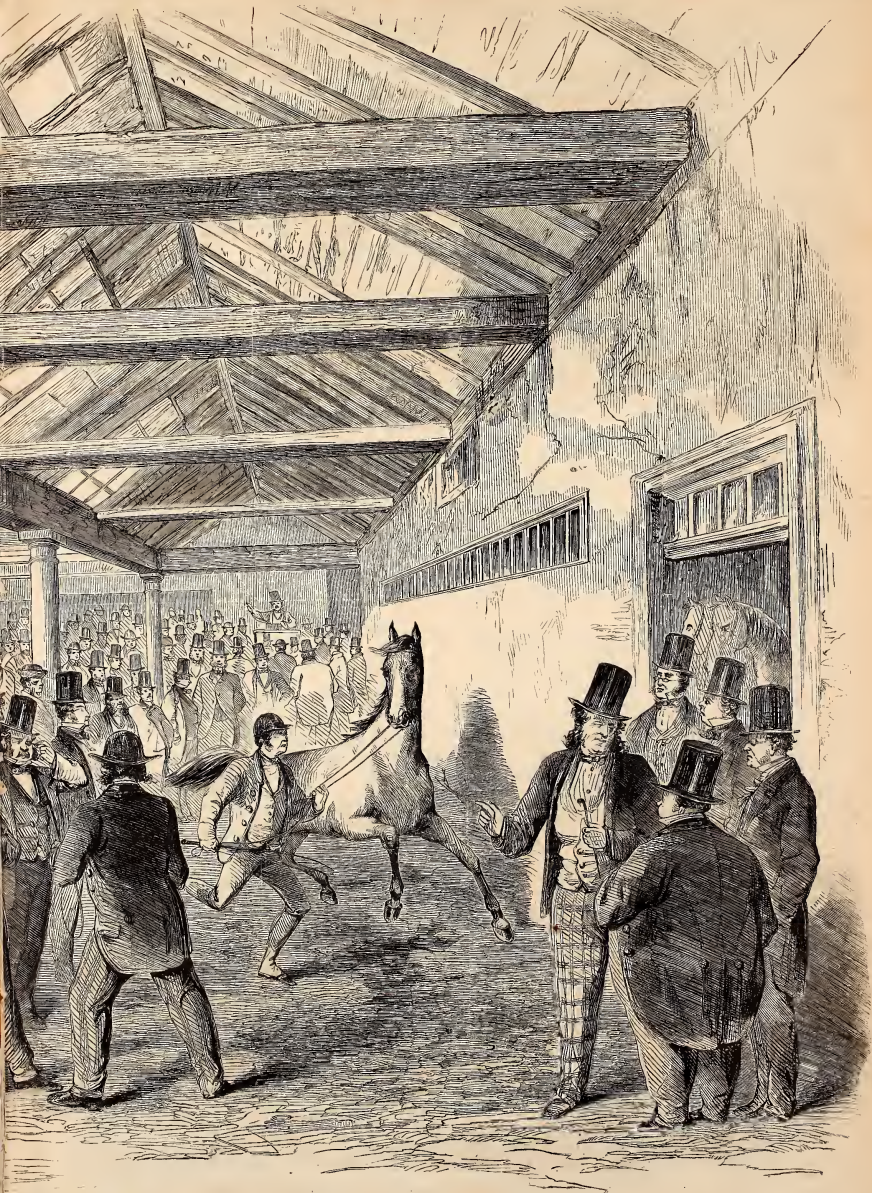

The salad-dish is a very gracefully shaped oval bowl, raised upon four fowl anchors, the beams being the actual supports, while the fishes and oysters in a well-ordered tangle cover the pedestal with an elaborate confusion. This piece finds many admirers. Its weight is forty ounces.

The castor is a five-bottled affair, and doubtly commands itself to popular approval, as a most useful article and the realisation of a very pretty conceit. Its general idea is borrowed from a cask which has been encumbering the pepper-sauce of a sea that has not known the effect of oil upon its waters for a day or two. The bottles are secured by lashings of rope passing upwards from rings in the pedestal, shroud-like, to the stump of a mast, which serves as a handle to the castor. The topmast has been carried

CAPTURE OF THE SLAVE VESSELS AND THEIR CARGOES.

Our cruisers have been very successful of late in the search after the slavers which infest the Cuban coast, and have already captured three vessels with over one thousand five hundred negroes. The prizes were all taken to Key West and their cargoes landed. Such an accession to the population of that place caused the authorities no little trouble to provide suitable accommodations for them. But by activity and energy, and by calling forth every available resource, in a few days all were comfortably though roughly housed. We present this week an illustration of the landing of the negroes captured by the United States steamer Wyandotte on the American bark Williams.

On the morning of the 9th of May, while the Wyandotte was on her course for the south side of Cuba, a bark was discovered standing in shore with all sail set to a light breeze. Chase was immediately commenced and continued for four hours, when the wind dying away and the steamer gaining rapidly on the bark, the latter, mistaking the Wyandotte for a Spanish coasting steamer, tacked and boldly stood out from the land. About eleven A. M., the Wyandotte being within speaking distance of the bark, Captain Stanley hailed her in Spanish, asking what vessel it was, and received in reply, "American," spoken in

GREAT TORNADO IN IOWA AND ILLINOIS.
From our Correspondent.

June 6, Albany, Ill.

Last Sabbath evening (June 3d), about dusk, a terrific tornado visited a large portion of country, ranging in Iowa and north-easterly direction, through the States of Iowa and Illinois, resulting in a great loss of life and destruction of property. From a rough estimate, over two hundred lives were lost, and one million dollars' worth of property destroyed.

This is one of the most destructive storms which has occurred for many years, and swept its course, through a space of half a mile in width, over two hundred miles in length, and left nothing in its trail but scenes of most appalling devastation.

Cedar Rapids, De Witt and Camanche in Iowa, Albany, Lyndon and Ambury country adjacent to Morrison, in Illinois, were the unfortunate localities where the vengeance of this king storm produced the most calamitous effects. Some places where I have operated and taken many photographs, which represent the forms of many that are now so rare, I have visited, and beheld many of these scenes of ruin, and never were such indelible and heart-rending scenes presented to my view before; deathly grime of mangled human forms, lacerated and bruised bodies of horses, sheep, cattle, hens and hogs, scattered fragments and massive piles of fallen buildings, with other numerous scattered ruins, met the view almost every where on this trail of destruction.

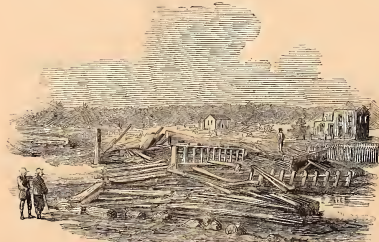

Camanche, Iowa, was laid a desolate waste; the loss of life and property resulting from the tornado, for a place of its size, I believe is unparalleled in the annals of history. Thirty-five bodies have been buried, besides many others which are missing. There are many wounded who are not expected to live. One

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

On Sunday, the 19th, a most imposing ceremony took place at the church of the Holy Trinity, at Halesworth, by the solemn dedication of five pews to the service of the poor.

The church was densely crowded. The appearance of the girls, who were dressed in white, with wreaths of flowers on their heads, was very beautiful.

The Rev. Canon and his wife were seated in the front pew. The Rev. Canon was dressed in his canonicals, and his wife in a white dress.

The Japanese at Baltimore.

The train reached the Monumental City soon after nine o'clock, and was received with an enormous expenditure of money and a vast concourse of people. The streets were thronged with spectators. The train was met by a large military band. The police arrangements were very complete and saved the train from any inconvenience. Mayor Smith, with his family, accompanied the train. The Japanese were met by a large military and police force. The Japanese were met by a large military and police force. The Japanese were met by a large military and police force.

It was not long before a party of the Japanese mounted the balcony and introduced themselves to the Americans. At last one of them spoke in English. He was a characteristic and playful yet not taking off his heavy and dripping cap and clapping it affectionately on the head of the Chief Ambassador. This was done with such words of laughter that two other courteous gentlemen stepped their eyes on the heads of the other Ambassadors, and the episode was terrific. The Japanese took the matter with great calm and did not seem to be at all offended.

While in Philadelphia the medical members of the Embassy were treated with great courtesy by Dr. Gross, formerly of this city, and will know as one of the great sanitary surgeons in this or any country. He performed for them an important histologic operation. On the 16th the Japanese doctors witnessed the operation of operating a thigh at the hip joint and of the foregoing the sinuses of the ear; the operations being performed by Professor Johnson. They were also treated to a view of performance.

THE JAPANESE IN NEW YORK.

Preparations to Receive the Ambassadors at the Metropolitan.

Without all wishing to undertake the hotels of the other cities, it must be confessed that the Messrs. Lehland's management for the Metropolitan Hotel had been for some time very complete and efficient. The whole of the spacious second floor was devoted to the reception of the Embassy. The site of the rooms for the first Ambassador are on the second floor, corner of Prince street and Broadway, thus affording them a bath, dressing-room, and other luxuriant appliances. The rooms of the other members of the Embassy are on the second floor. In order to spare the strangers the annoyance of public attention, the rooms were arranged so that they could be reached in their own apartments. This will greatly contribute to the comfort of the Embassy.

The other officers, to the number of sixteen, are all of equal rank, and will occupy parlors and bedrooms on the same story, extending to the rear of the hotel. They will also be accommodated in the same manner. The site of the rooms for the first Ambassador are on the second floor, corner of Prince street and Broadway, thus affording them a bath, dressing-room, and other luxuriant appliances.

The American Commission, which consists of Captains Demost, Peck and a suite of officers, will also be accommodated in the same manner. They will also have their reception and luncheon rooms. They will be accommodated in the same manner.

The Committee of the Common Council has a room appropriated to the use of the first floor of the Metropolitan. The room has been opened for the separate use of the Embassy. The room has been opened for the separate use of the Embassy. The room has been opened for the separate use of the Embassy.

THE GREAT TROTTING MATCHES ON THE UNION COURSE, LONG ISLAND.

Two sporting worlds has been in a state of great excitement during the past two weeks on the subject of the trial of speed between that extraordinary little trotting mare Flora Temple and the well known trotting horse George N. Patchen. In our last issue we gave an account of the first race, which resulted in favor of Flora Temple in three straight heats. The time made was really extraordinary, being as follows: First heat, 2:21; Second heat, 2:24; Third heat, 2:21.

Although Patchen was beaten, his reputation was rather enhanced than lowered, for so close was he with the remarkable little mare, that it needed keen eyes and cool judgment to decide which of the two was the winner. The friends of Patchen felt confident that he still had a chance, and in the other race between him and Flora Temple he would prove the fastest of the two. Accordingly the race of Wednesday, the 19th, raised the sporting ing ones shook their heads, saying, "It's a sure thing—Patchen's bound to win the second race, so that the interest of the third race—which is sure to come off—may be kept up to boiling point." We were unwilling to believe the alur so clearly implied in the remark, but we were compelled to acknowledge that sporting men were "very non-talid," and that it was just possible that races in general were special traps to catch the unwary, and to bring profit to the knowing ones. It is to be lamented that little or no confidence can be placed upon these events, in which so many thousands are interested; for this seasonable lack of confidence reduces the "stuf" to a level with the gaming table, and renders it impossible for the majority of the respectable people in our communities to evidence any interest in its exhibitions. It is, however, possible that the losers, in their momentary elation, share out hints of confidence, which are caught up by outsiders, and lose nothing by travelling from mouth to mouth. Let us hope that such is the case.

There was a brilliant attendance on the Friday, June 23rd, the second race, and the friends of each of the horses were strong in their faith, and each found hundreds of partisans on the field clamorous and enthusiastic in expressing their opinions. When the horses appeared the excitement became intense. Both horses were in fine condition, and we could not blame either party for the unbounded confidence they expressed. But the backers of Flora Temple were bound to be disappointed that day, for Patchen went in to win, and did win in most splendid style. The first heat was made in 4.53, Patchen beating the mare by some three lengths. The second heat was made in 4.57, Patchen beating the mare by several lengths. The excitement was unbounded, and the friends of Patchen were jubilant at his success. Flora Temple's friends, while they acknowledged defeat, were by no means discouraged, but were satisfied that in a future trial of speed she would be the first in. When both parties are so confident, there can be but little doubt that these famous horses will be matched against each other again before long.

GEORGE N. PATCHEN.

As a trotter this horse is fast gaining into celebrity. He is a handsome bay horse, and is between fifteen and sixteen hands high. He is of the Babaw blood. He was got by Cassius M. Clay, by Henry Clay, by Andrew Jackson, by Young Babaw. He was first matched against Ethna Allen in 1848, who distanced him in the first heat. He was defeated again in 1850, first by Brown Diek, then by Lady Woodruff. The next week, however, he beat Lady Woodruff and Brown Diek, and two days

Reception of the Japanese at the Battery, New York.
Early on the morning of the 16th, crowds of well-dressed ladies and gentlemen collected on the Battery to welcome the Great Easterns, as some of our citizens called the Japanese Ambassadors.

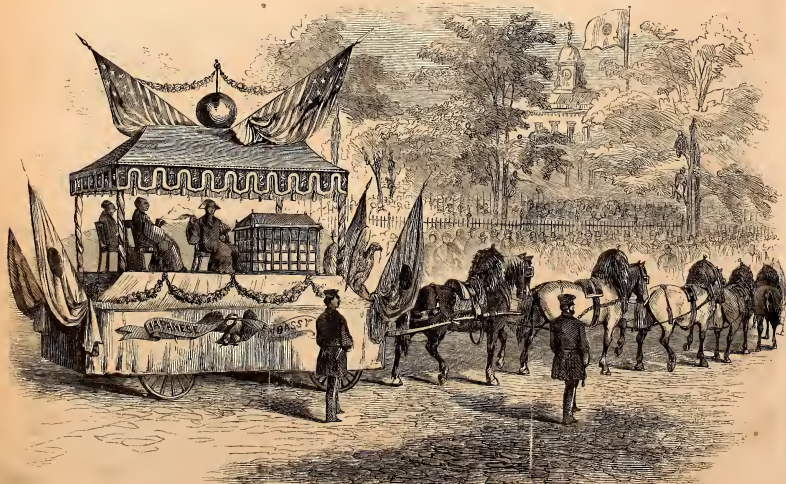

About two o'clock, a telegraphic communication from Fort Hamilton announced that the Alida was passing that famous fort, and at half-past two the boom of cannon from Governor's Island told that the steamer was at the Battery. After the vessel had reached Castle Garden, the preparations were made for landing the illustrious visitors, which was accomplished amid the cheers of the multitude, and the inspiring strains of Hall Columbia from Bowdoin's band.

A detachment of the Eighth Regiment was the guard of honor, and performed the duty admirably. As soon as the gangway plank was placed on board the Alida, Mr. Warren Leland and

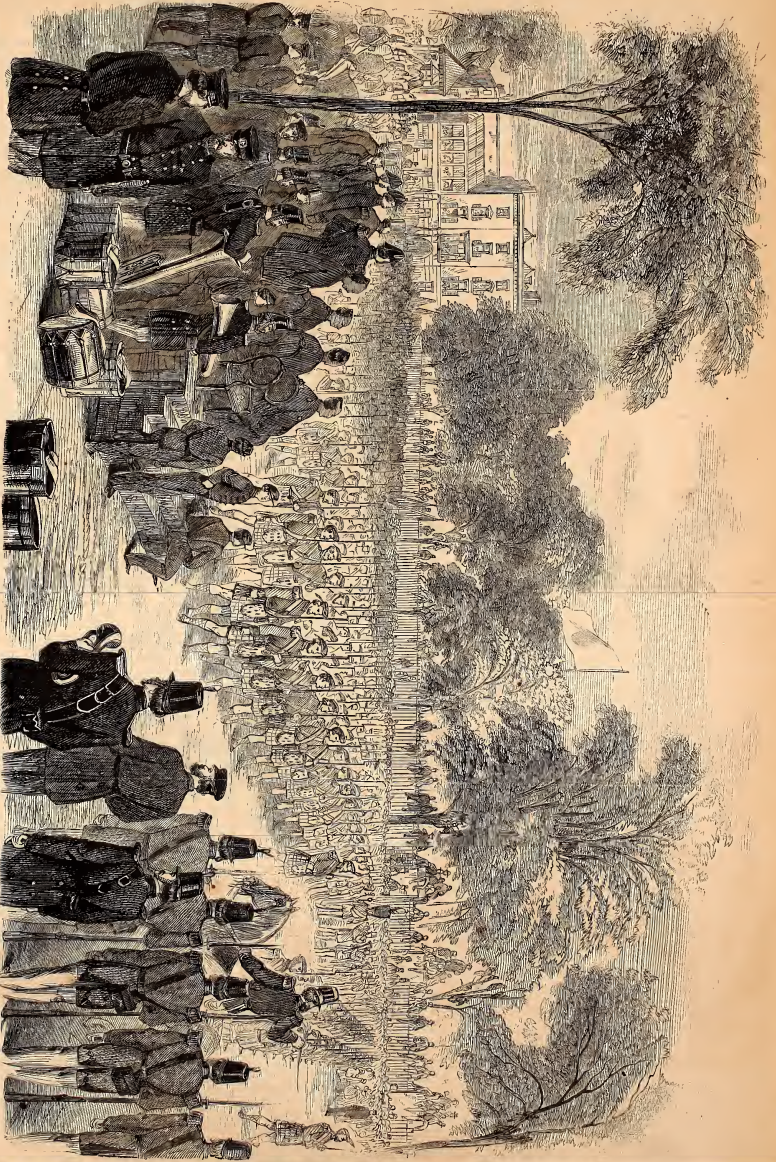

Mr. Curtis landed, accompanied by Councilman Shaw. Alderman Boole kept guard at the gangway, and permitted none to leave the vessel till the Japanese were comfortably stowed away in the carriages provided for them. As they drove off under their gallant escort the applause was tremendous. Tommy coming in for the lion's share. Superintendent Kearsley, and his Deputy, Carpenter, were the masters of the police ceremony, and acquitted themselves with their usual ability.

THE MINISTER AND THE POET.

An Incident of Unexpected Luck.

A verse: Parian poet on Dubois, poor in wit as well as cash, he reached his friend the subject of them. He left over his paper, without receiving the slightest recognition of his services.

"There, your highness, in the ante-chamber," answered the poet's servant, who had been the subject of the poet's letter.

"Let him come in," said the princess. And so he did not go to the princess looking for the poet's letter, but for the poet's letter.

OUR BILLIARD COLUMN.

Edited by Michael Phelan.

Editor of Remarkable Shots, Reports of Billiard Matches, or news of any kind, which will be published in this column, and will be published in this column.

To Correspondents.—All questions sent to M. Phelan in reference to the billiard column, will be answered in this column. It would be much more to the advantage of our readers to see many correspondents.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

FRANÇOIS.—In the French three ball game, as played in Paris, the seven colors are of 2 according to previous agreement between the players. It is not possible to play the game with only 10 balls.

TENNIS.—Uniformity in the rules and customs of billiards throughout the world is a great desideratum, and is very difficult to accomplish. All efforts to that end, as yet, failed. The policy of the billiard players of every country is to increase and vary their own rules.

THE WORLD OF BILLIARDS.
REMARKS.—The French authorities, the Charles de Sicily, prohibited the game of billiards in 1789, but M. Berger, the King of Prussia's minister, has determined to visit the country during the summer.

THE PETE CHAMFETRE AT THE RESIDENCE OF JAMES GORDON BENNETT, ESQ. IN HONOR OF THE JAPANESE EMBASSY—THE BANQUET.—THE PAUL

HON TOWNSEND HARRIS, AMERICAN MINISTER TO JAPAN.

The recent advent among us of the princely Embassy from Japan has aroused an unusual degree of interest and attention on the part of the whole American people, and, indeed, of the world. The importance of this despatch, the first of its kind ever sent out from that veiled empire of nearly sixty millions of people, possessing a higher degree of culture and organization than prevails in any other of the Asiatic races, has very naturally led to this stirring result. Amid the enthusiasm and excitement incident upon the arrival of the Embassy, it has seemed almost to have escaped the attention of the citizens of New York, and indeed of the representatives of the Government who have more immediate charge of our relations with the Embassy, that to a New York boy, afterwards an active and intelligent merchant among us, now known as the ablest and most successful of American Diplomats on foreign service, the Hon. Townsend Harris, American Minister at the Court of Yeddo, is due the merit of having, by his perseverance, superior address and manly and honorable policy secured the ratification of the treaty just signed, as well as a special convention, the result of his far-swing judgment, which heard the Government of the Tycoon to send its first Embassy to the Government of the United States at Washington, thus defeating FUGAL DECORATION AT THE METROPOLITAN HOTEL, PRESENTED TO THE JAPANESE AMBASSADORS BY BENJAMIN WOOD, ESQ.—SEE PAGE 90.

AMERICAN WATCHES

Presented by the American Watch Company, of Waltham, Mass., to the Emperor of Japan and his Chief Ambassador.

One of the most tasteful, rich and appropriate presents made to the Japanese Embassy was quietly made on Wednesday last, by the American Watch Company, through Captain Dupont, the head of the Naval Commission.

This presents consisted of two superb gold hunting watches, one for His Majesty the Tycoon of Japan, and the other for the Chief Ambassador. These watches were prepared with a view to evincing the Japanese an idea of the skill of our countrymen in the delicate art of watchmaking, and are admirable in design and finish.

The one designed for the Tycoon bears a finely engraved likeness of the President Buchanan on the lid over the dial, and a spread eagle carved in a solid block of gold on the other lid. The dial is finished with the ordinary arrangement for seconds, with Arabic numerals on the outer hour and minute circles, and the corresponding Japanese characters representing the day divided into six

FRONT VIEW OF THE CASE.

The chief member of the Embassy and his princely associates manifested much gratification at the receipt of this delicate compliment, and made numerous inquiries in relation to watchmaking in this country. A deputation, with their interpreter, will visit the establishment of Messrs. Robbins & Appleton, the agents of the Company, 182 Broadway, during the present week, to obtain a list of prices and other information, to be incorporated in the report of the Embassy to be made to the Japanese Government on their return. We see no reason why Swiss watches, even when bearing another name, should be pulled off, as they have been, upon the subordinates of the Embassy as real products of American skill.

Both of these watches were made by a system of original American machinery in the only establishment of the kind in the world, and are constructed entirely of American materials by American artisans.

Presents of this character, while they demonstrate the manufacturing capacities of our country, will inevitably attract the trade which it is the great object of the United States, by the treaty, to open, stimulate and establish between the two countries.

BRUMMAGEAN PRINCIPLE IN PARIS.

A BRUMMAGEAN affair is said to have happened in Paris a short time since, the hero being an Englishman. The omnibus, as it is well known, are furnished with a small gang and dial, by which the accounts are kept of the number of people entering the omnibus in the course of the day. The Englishman in question desired to descend when the conductor was on the roof collecting the fares from the outside passengers, and thinking the gang in question was used as a warning to the driver to pull up, our friend pulled the string some twenty times. This brought down the conductor, who begged to know what mischief was afoot.

"Don't you see," said the former, still tagging at the cord, "I want to stop the omnibus."

When told that he had been pulling the wrong cord, he said that that could make but little difference, but the conductor thought otherwise, and demanded six francs for the extra passengers registered by the unconscious John Bull. The latter protested against such an imposition, and offered to give the conductor a few lessons in the noble art of self-defense in place of the money, unless he and his wife were immediately allowed to alight, as they were behind the box, and had an invitation for dinner. The conductor became warm, and the boxing seemed about to begin, the passengers all explained the matter simultaneously in order to clear up the difficulty, and in the end a wretched de ville was quitted. The other said the six francs must be paid.

The Englishman—so goes the story—plunged his hand into his pocket, drew out a handful of money, and cried out:

"It was not on account of the money—money I despise, I have more money than Rothschild. I am a Birnie's bean manufacturer, hours of one hundred and twenty minutes each, with a red sign to indicate the half hours on an inner circle.

The second watch bears an engraving of the Capitol at Washington and other appropriate emblems, including the crossed standards of the two countries on one side, and on the other a noble steamship finely engraved, forming an appropriate emblem of the newly-awakened spirit of rivalry existing between the United States and Japan. The dial of this watch is finished with the Japanese numerals around the outer circle, and corresponding Roman numerals, smaller, in an inner circle. Both dials are models of elegant workmanship, and will compare favorably with anything of the kind ever made. The arrangement of the characters was made by the chief interpreter, at the request of Captain Dupont, through the aid of Mr. Putnam, at the instance of Mr. H. C. Stuart, the able representative of the Company, while the Embassy was in Washington. The movements are of the new series of this watches lately issued by the Company, and are of extreme beauty and delicacy of finish.

These admirable timekeepers cost the company about three hundred dollars each, and are equal to any watches in the world.

CANDELS FROM COAL.

A NEW INVENTION, MANUFACTURED BY THE New York Paraffine Candle Company, UNDER MEUCO'S PATENTS.

These Candles being made from one of the products of the distillation of coal, and having the same chemical composition as gas, being, in fact, GAS SOLIDIFIED, are entirely smokeless when burning. They burn the brightest flame at the base, and are made in the most perfect and uniform manner... they will burn the longest time at a standard height of candles, and we recommend it as the best and the most economical of candles.

The Candles manufactured by this company are warranted to stand all climates, will not run or gutter, and require no special care, unlike most other so-called Paraffine Candles.

Do not Smoke in Burning,

BECOME YELLOW WITH AGE, AND ARE WITHOUT ODOR.

CAUTION.

As an Imitation Candle is already offered in the market, purchasers should bear in mind that every box of Candles with this Company's name on the wrapper and the trade mark, which is a circle inclosing the words, "NEW YORK PARAFFINE CANDLE CO. MEUCO'S PATENT," and a representation of the rising sun, to which which is affixed in law.

THE ECLIPSE OF THE SUN

As it will appear on the Morning of Wednesday, July 21, 1860, seen from all parts of the United States and Canada.

As this is drawn for the altitude of New York, at all places south of the parallel of New York the sun will be less eclipsed; and at all places north of the parallel of New York it will be greater than is here represented.

Explanation.

The moon first comes in contact with the upper limb of the sun, and passing down over the sun towards the horizon. To view it as it will appear in the heavens, face the east, and hold this illustration up in front, and you will then have a view of it as it will appear at the time of the eclipse. The sun, as it rises, appears to move in a curved line; this apparent motion of the sun and moon is caused by the daily revolution of the earth from west to east.

We have been furnished with the history of the eclipse and other interesting matter relating to this subject by Mr. Ass Smith, author of "Illustrated Astronomy for the Use of Schools and Academies," and who was for many years Principal of Public School No. 12 in this city.

History of this Eclipse.

The first appearance of this eclipse since the creation of the world—according to sacred chronology—was in the year a. m. 565, December 8th, old style, at ten o'clock fifty minutes forenoon, when the moon's penumbra just came in contact with the earth at the south pole. It has appeared every nineteenth year since, and at each return the moon's shadow passed across the earth from west to east, a little further to the north at each return, until the year 1644, March 8th, old style, when the centre of the moon's shadow passed a little to the north of the earth's centre (the moon being fourteen minutes forty-six seconds from her descending node, which was its thirty-eighth periodical return). It has continued to appear every nineteenth year since 1644, until this eclipse, which is its sixty-first periodical return. Its next appearance will be in 1878, July 29, at three o'clock 23 minutes in the morning, in visible in the United States. It will also appear again in 1896, August 9th. It will continue to appear every nineteenth year until the year 2274, April 25th, when the moon's shadow will just touch the earth at the north pole, which will be its seventy-sixth periodical and last appearance, until the expiration of twelve thousand four hundred and ninety-two years, when it will come on again at the south pole, and go through a similar course. The velocity of the moon's shadow across the eclipse will be about one thousand eight hundred and fifty miles an hour, or four times the velocity of a cannon-ball.

Path of the Eclipse over the Earth.

The penumbra, or partial shadow of the moon, will first come in contact with the earth at the rising of the sun in the northern part of Texas, between the Indian Territory and New Mexico. It will then take a north-easterly and then a south-easterly course over the earth. The umbra, or total dark shadow of the moon, will first come in contact with the earth in the Pacific Ocean, one hundred miles west of the coast of Oregon, directly west of Oregon City, and a little to the south-west of the mouth of Columbia River. It will then pass in a north-easterly direction over British America to Hudson's Bay, near Fort York, at the mouth of Nelson's River, crossing Hudson's Bay and Labrador to Cape Chidley, which will be the most favorable position on the continent for observing the total eclipse. It will then enter the Atlantic Ocean, passing due east until nearly south of Cape Farewell, the southern cape of Greenland, where the sun will be totally eclipsed at noon of that place. It will then take a curved line towards the south-east, passing over the north of Spain, the Mediterranean Sea, Algeria, Tripoli, Fezzen, the south-western corner of Egypt, into Nubia, where it will leave the earth near the Red Sea, a little before the setting of the sun at that place. The path of the umbra, in which the sun will be totally eclipsed, will be only about seventy miles in width, whereas the penumbra, in which the sun will appear more or less eclipsed, will extend from the Gulf of Mexico to twenty degrees upon the opposite side of the north pole, a distance of over six thousand miles. The umbra, in its passage over the earth, makes a curved line; this is caused by the spherical form of the earth. If the earth were a flat surface, the path of the umbra would then be a straight line from north-west to south-east, making an angle with the equator of seventeen degrees. At all places south of the line of total eclipse, the sun's northern limb will be eclipsed; but in Europe, England, Ireland, Greenland, Iceland and the northern part of British America, the southern limb will be eclipsed.

An eclipse of the sun is caused by the moon passing between the earth and the sun. An eclipse of the moon is caused by the moon passing through the earth's shadow.

The moon revolves round the earth once in about twenty-nine and a half days, or from one new moon to another; consequently, the moon passes between the earth and sun once during each revolution of the moon around the earth, and also passes in opposition, or is upon the opposite side of the earth, from the sun, once during each revolution. Hence, if the moon's orbit was in the same plane with the centre of the sun and earth, the moon would pass directly across the earth and sun at every new moon, and at every full moon the moon would pass directly through the earth's shadow, so that we should have a great eclipse of the sun at every new moon, and a total eclipse of the moon at every full moon. But the earth's orbit is not a circle, but an ellipse, the earth's orbit of seven and a half degrees, so that at a new moon the moon is generally too high or too low for her shadow to strike the earth, and at full moon the moon generally passes above or below the earth's shadow, therefore to eclipse her, she can take place only the least number of eclipses that can take place in one year is two, both of the sun, the greatest number seven. The usual number of eclipses in one year is four or five.

Foreign News.

The Arabs bring news to the 1st July. The revolution in Naples has become so imminent that the King has declared it to be a state of siege. The populace were becoming so disgruntled that a mob had attacked the French Ambassador, and left him senseless. This will probably bring Louis Napoleon upon them. The Central Revolutionary Committee had issued placards calling up the people to rise. The commissaries of the twelve districts of Naples had been attacked, the archives burnt and the agents murdered.

The Neapolitan Government had released the two ships, with their passengers and crews, which were captured by the Palmitano steamer-of-war. This was done at the urgent demand of the American and Sardinian Ministers. The United States was incensed as to Naples to protect American citizens.

The wretched Bonaparte, alarmed at the popular manifestations, had adopted the tricolor flag, granted what he called a liberal constitution, published a general amnesty, and organized a new left hand amnesty. This was done at the urgent demand of the Sardinian Government to Garibaldi, and threatened to inspire any confidence in these tardy and compulsory reforms.

England and Austria have assented to the proposed Conference on the Franco-Swiss question. Austria, however, protests against the decision of Sardinia.

Nothing of importance from England.

The Pope had offered to make concessions and grant reforms Russia and Spain had both protested against the open aid given by the Sardinian Government to Garibaldi, and threatened to withdraw their Ambassadors if it occurred again. The protest is rather too late to do any good.

The Prince of Wales was to sail from Devonport on the 10th July. He will be accompanied by the Duke of Newcastle, the Earl of St. Germain, and a numerous suite of ladies, escorted by St. Johns on the 23d. After making a royal tour through the Canadas as the Prince of Wales, he will visit to President Buchanan. He will travel in the United States as Lord Renfrew.

Garibaldi has sent an agent to London to raise a loan, and another to Malta to procure some vessels. He has replied to the municipal authorities of Palermo that it is not advisable to annex Sicily at present. He evidently is waiting when he can offer Naples and Rome as well.

Robert Brough, the celebrated dramatist, is dead. He is the author of the "Romance of Miss Brown," now publishing in Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun.

A Corrupt Custom.

Our Washington correspondent states that the Administration has levied an assessment on all persons in proportion to their salaries, to create a fund to defray the election expenses of the Buchanan-Mormonite candidates, Breckinridge and Lane. This is not left to their option, but is compulsory, the alternative being dismissal. We are well waded that these forced levies are customary, but they are nevertheless disgraceful. We can easily understand that the leading men of the party may consider their honor or their interest concerned in raising the sinews of war to finance the election of their candidates, but the same reasons and feelings do not exist in the subordinate, and we can therefore, only be considered as the very meanest species of black mail.

Protection in office may be a very necessary rule, so far as the heads of a department are concerned, just as the same movement in England necessitates a new set of Ministers; but the practice of dismissing all the subordinates in our Custom House, in our Revenue, or in any other office, and compelling the public charge our services just as they become as fall to their duties, and their own good names, and to undergo the same application. If such a rule were adopted by us, we could easily understand that the leading men of the party may consider their honor or their interest concerned in raising the sinews of war to finance the election of their candidates, but the same reasons and feelings do not exist in the subordinate, and we can therefore, only be considered as the very meanest species of black mail.

thousands of practiced officials, to make room for incompetent and needy hangers-on. So long as our public institutions are considered as the mere spoils of a greedy and victorious party, so long shall we be cursed with dishonest functionaries, and so long shall their days be numbered, and that they may be considered as they can in their short reign of four years. Let the subordinate positions be made dependent upon good behavior and not upon the whims of the party, and we shall then have made a great stride towards efficiency in our public offices. As it is, our Post Office, Custom House, Treasury, in a word, all our Federal Institutions, are not for the dispatch of public business, but a grand machinery for the distribution of public plunder.

German Unity.

During the last few years Louis Napoleon has felt the pulse of Europe by a pamphlet, which he throws up as a hail-storm of paper kits, to see how the wind blows. To use an American vulgarism, he ventilates his intended reforms by a brochure, which can be either repudiated or acted upon, as the results may be. We had hardly read the pamphlet which proceeded the Italian war, and the more recent one, which struck such dismay to the Papal Power—they are too fresh in the recollection of all. There is another significant feature in his policy; he has had hitherto employed the same author twice to formulate some of the reforms he has been Germanizing Louis and Edmond About now. About is the writer whose book on Rome, some three years since, occasioned such indignation throughout all the princely circles. He has just published in Paris a brochure on the subject of Italy, and if he be not professedly the author, Louis's policy as its predecessors have proved, the present ruler of France will possibly carry the title of Liberator and Consolidator of Germany, as he has done of Italy. For, although the Germanic confederation, of which the Emperor Napoleon was the originator, which the Italians had, and which Vienna, Rome and Naples still go on under, yet they have much to complain of in being subjected to the rule of nearly forty petty princes, who have many a feud, and who are not conducting diplomacy a power, which if concentrated in one channel, would be one of the leading nations of Europe.

When it is remembered what Austria alone did in the recent campaign—the battles she fought—though defeated, overtook the Prussians at the battle of Mollath, she overtook the Prussians at Montebello, from Mignets to Solferino—we can form some idea of what United Germany would be. It would be absurd to assume as certain any policy which Louis Napoleon will pursue; but we may in feeling that the past can serve as a future, and, in judging by these couverts, his pamphlets would sound, though he had resolved to simplify the map of Europe, and carry out his theory of nationalities.

In the eighth section of About's pamphlet we find this very significant passage: "If the Prince Regent entrusts the noble ambition of reigning legitimately over the whole of Germany, let him begin by recalling the names of the great reformers to lead to the present, and let him act in the dictation of his reforms to be produced in the future. Let his be the testamentary executor of the Parliament of the States, and let him be the executor of the Emperor's will."

How for the Prince Regent of Prussia will entertain this glittering prospect. We think that the idea of the unity of Germany would be as great a shock to the world as that of Italy will be, when completed, and well worth the price France would demand for it—the boundary of the Rhine. Let us hope that the selfishness of England will not spoil "so grand an idea."

Soda Water and Sudden Death.

Our contemporary of this city recently chronicled, under the heading of "Supposed Suicide of a Young Woman"—another instance of the death of the suddenly of a young and respectable young lady, who had been confined in the cell of a station-house, "under the supposition that she was intoxicated." No examination had been made by a medical man or other competent person to decide whether she was really under the influence of liquor. It was enough that she was picked up in an insensible condition in the street. On her way to the station she arrested sufficiently to state that she had, on the previous evening, bought a quantity of soda water from a street way up town the lady, at a drug store, drunk a glass of soda water, but had partaken of no intoxicating beverage. Her statement was, of course, not believed, and she was crowded into a cell by such persons, who had no other means of ascertaining examination, she was found dead. A post mortem examination revealed that death had been caused by the agency of corrosive poison. The deceased was neatly dressed, and had every appearance of being a lady.

The most natural explanation of the "mystery" in this case will be found in the fact that the deceased had died, not simply true. The fact that she died by the agency of corrosive poison is sufficient to prove that she was not intoxicated, but extremely sick and dying in extreme agony, since no death is so painful as that produced by such a powerful and established remedy as extremely powerful that her assertion relative to the soda water was true, and all the more so since it really throws much light on the probable nature of the "corrosive" article swallowed. People who are so much afflicted with the stomach, and who are committing suicide, the great pain attendant on their action to be so much known and dreaded. But soda water, as sold by some careless druggists, is very often a decidedly corrosive poison. Whenever a quantity of it is in a copper vessel, or in any other unbecomingly strong copper vessel, it is generally, if it is true, by the syrup added, yet sometimes perceptible in spite of it. We have the personal testimony of the truth of this statement, and know of more than one instance in which illness has thus arisen from the use of soda water for medicinal purposes. We know of one instance, and that recently, in which a lady and gentleman who had each drunk a single glass of soda water at one of the very first druggists in this city were made sick by it. This is a proof of the truth of the above statement. In some instances, this evil is understood, and it is usual there for some soda water manufacturers to advertise that their receivers are lined with some substance impervious to the corrosive contact of the soda water. It is to be regretted that the same precaution of dying a most agonizing death. As for the old-fashioned copper affairs, they should at once be declared illegal.

Between poison and the police it will be seen that a young lady, not familiar with the various shades of meanness, carelessness and cruelty of which professional and municipal gentlemen are capable, may be occasionally placed, in a somewhat perilous predicament. It is rather more difficult to picture a young lady or daughter coming in from the country on one of these hot summer days, and incautiously entering a showy drug store to quench her thirst with "delicious crown seltzer," "exquisite raspberry nectar," or some other highly mineral mixture of carbonic acid gas, water and sweets, whose fruitly flavor to her taste is as any source but orchards and gardens. She is poisoned, less consciousness, and is picked up by a policeman, to whom insensibility and illness, even in a young lady of highly respectable appearance, suggest a dose such as she would not expect to receive. A competent examination she is thrust into a cell like any vagabond, felon or street-walker, and left to die in extreme agony. We do not exaggerate in the slightest particular this picture. What we describe may occur any day, for all the causes which produce it are at all times in full operation. Romanes describe no death more excruciating, more revolting, more devoid of all comfort, than that of a delicate young lady by corrosive poison in the field druggist of a New York station-house. And all this, he so distinctly borne in mind, may happen to any girl who is not familiar with the revolting shades of "cheap and nasty" chemistry and of municipal mismanagement in the treatment of prisoners.

No person, drunk or sober, should be treated as this girl was. All persons taken up in a state of insensibility, whether by what appears cause, should be watched, and some efforts made to restore them to consciousness. People are frequently poisoned or drugged by designing wretches with a single glass of liquor, and it cannot be too often repeated that a dose of correct copper annually deserving far more careful and kind treatment than they receive. There are many people who will read these lines and who, though they may feel secure in wealth, temperance and respectability, will be surprised to find that they have so often flilly cells like any vagabond. A conviction that they should add to sudden illness, a vertigo, a fit, assault by highwaymen or rowdies, or an inadvertent draught of "delicious crown soda" fresh from the fountain—any of these may bring you from your home to the prison, and from the prison to the workhouse, or to an unseparated in a prison. Remember it when the hour comes, for at present neither you nor any like you ever sit hand or foot to actively reform the present condition of things in this respect. As for the case of the young lady, we would suggest that the owners of their rusty copper receivers, who demand that they be cleaned, and, in the meantime, advising the ladies to give prominence to, and comment properly on, the propriety of manufacturing patients and customers—by means of verdigris.

Visit the Prince of Wales to America.

We have at length the pleasure to announce that our authorities, both Great Britain and the United States, have agreed that the heir to the British Crown will, after visiting the President, in Washington, proceed to New York. It will be remembered that Mayor Wood transmitted to Mr. Dallas, our Minister in London, a letter in relation to a visit to America by the Prince of Wales. By the Arabs we have the reply. Mr. Dallas writes to Mayor Wood:

Sir—My letter of the 8th instant will have informed you of the steps taken by me in applying for the Prince of Wales to be invited to visit the United States. I have the honor to be glad to be addressed by the Common Council of New York that he should visit your great city at the close of his public duties in Canada.

I have now the honor to transmit a letter addressed in answer to my communication by His Majesty's principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in relation to the proposed visit of the Prince of Wales, with the high sanction of His Majesty's Ministers and Her Government, and your own community.

With the highest respects,
 Your most obedient servant,
 J. RUSSELL.

Mr. Dallas encloses a copy of Lord John Russell's letter, which, after expressing the Queen and Prince of Wales high sense of the opportunity, says:

When, therefore, the duties for the performance of which this Prince undertakes the voyage across the Atlantic to Her Majesty's North American Colonies shall be completed, both the consideration above referred to, and the interests which are the part of the Prince to visit some of the institutions and some of the most prominent objects of interest in the United States, will prompt His Royal Highness, on his return from the Upper Province of Canada, to visit New York. It is to be desired that the Prince, on that route will include a visit to the important city of New York, and that he will be accompanied by a suitable suite. Under the circumstances, he necessarily will require a very large and comfortable party, and it is to be desired that the arrangements be made accordingly out of the power of His Royal Highness to make a prolonged stay.

After an intimation that he will lay aside the royal state on entering our Republic, his Lordship concludes with:

The undersigned is directed to request that Mr. Dallas will facilitate him by the Prince of Wales upon receiving the appropriate invitation from the Mayor of New York, and that he will be pleased to forward to the undersigned a copy of the letter of the 8th of September he may be enabled to pay a visit to the city they represent, and to the mercantile community who have the honor to be his countrymen, and to the friends of the undersigned. The undersigned requests that Mr. Dallas to accept the assurance of his highest regards to the Prince of Wales, and to the Queen.

Foreign Office, June 31, 1860. J. RUSSELL.

There is little doubt that this most interesting visit will prove one of the most exciting and remarkable events of the present century.

EDITORIAL GLANCES AT MEN AND THINGS.

There is something wonderfully—we believe the similarity with which so many of our juvenile friends regard the various events of their lives. We mean that there is not an adult, creditor or penny-anteer who, when he is called upon to give an account of his life, does not, in the origin of matter, and that unknown quantity's destiny; but all these, we say, he can as readily measure as his life; but when they come to discuss the most important events of their lives, they are all alike, and all alike, the others, but in what nature does he treat, and consequently form a mass of the most important events of their lives. FRENCH'S CONICAL WASHING MACHINE.

We give illustrations of this unequalled washer, as it seems likely to come into very general use in families. It is introduced into our city homes, where it is properly understood, will prove great benefit and blessing to the girls and women upon whom its family washing devolves. It will not reduce the number of persons employed perhaps, but it will lighten the heaviest burthen of the work, save some time, nearly one-third of the soap, and do much towards removing the disagreeable smells from the house on washing day. It will protect the hands, and in various ways prove a benefit to maid and mistress.

The amount of soap required for each family is one pound for a weekly washing of fifty-two pounds a year, making an aggregate of 250,000,000 a year, to which may be added an equal amount of time, labor and money for tracing. The proprietors have arranged to supply all of the Benevolent Institutions in the city with their washing machines, as the most effective means of enforcing the Scriptural injunction, "Wash and be clean." Already it has been introduced into the various Protestant and Catholic Institutions, where it is considered indispensable. In country homes, where ladies do their own washing, it will prove a friend indeed.

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

At the Suburban Residence of Benjamin Wood, Esq., near Little Neck, Long Island.

It has been the practice of Mr. Wood, for many years past, to have open his beautiful grounds on the night of our national Birthday... The garden is laid out in hundreds of beds of every variety of ornamental form, containing almost every variety of open air flowers...

The villa, which is of simple but tasteful architecture, is a two-story building, containing a large and comfortable parlor... The first of the out-buildings is Mr. Wood's private stable, which is fitted up with every modern convenience and elegance...

The villa and pigon house is worthy particular notice. It is a sort of octagon palace; the upper part is exclusively the property of the pigeons... The octagon fore-house is divided into eight exclusive compartments, with corresponding stalls attached...

conversed with natural flowers - the natural work of the hand of God, and inside Mr. Wood had caused to be spread a sumptuous and gorgeous banquet for his friends, which we need hardly say was highly appreciated... The words "Good Night" became indelible, a movement was observed among the carriage and coach drivers...

GRAND REGATTA ON THE FOURTH OF JULY.

We present to our readers to-day a spirited and accurate sketch of the regatta given by the city to commemorate the ever memorable Fourth of July... The first prize, a silver trumpet and champagne, was won by the "A. L. S.;" the second prize, a silk American ensign, by the "A. P."

Now Good Digestion Waits on Appetite.

A NEW HEALTH ON BOTH—That good digestion is a rarity in this country, Dyspepsia is as common as cold, and it is a deadly enemy to the system. And yet every year millions of people in the land have their stomachs so much hurt and so very rarely do they get well and all the symptoms of dyspepsia. No case in which HOPKINS' STOMACH BITTERS have failed to effect a cure in this distressing and, if neglected, dangerous ailment, as will be readily believed by reading and trying it! Because in such case has ever occurred. This medicine is a perfect and powerful remedy for the stomach and the digestive organs, and it purifies the blood and the system. Hence it relieves all pain with newness in the digestive organs, restores to the flesh, gives elasticity and vigor to the muscles and reinforces, so to say, all the animal powers.

THE ZOUAVE CADETS OF CHICAGO

It is only of late years that a correct notion has been formed of what a citizen soldier should be. In days of old, the practice has varied with the habits and exigencies of the people. The Greeks and Romans were the first to recognise personal fortitude and activity among the leading attributes, and these qualities made them invincible. It was only when luxury had enervated them that they lost their supremacy. However science may doubt individual prowess in a battle, the fortune of a campaign will always depend upon daring, endurance and persistence, and as nations after a time generally settle down into an equality so far as scientific advantages are concerned, the closing event will still be determined by discipline and physical capabilities. The peculiar merits of this have been more than ever recognized in that most scientific of all warlike nations, the French, and the German and Italian campaigns made it specially conspicuous.

The Chasseurs de Vincennes, the Zouaves and the Turcos, in these two last wars, gained imperishable fame by the practical exhibition of athletic soldiery. We have now in our city a brilliant illustration of what a judicious and conscientious training can effect, and how the most restraint necessary to achieve this becomes its own reward. We, of course, allude to the United States Zouave Cadets of Chicago, whose visit to our metropolis we commemorate in our present paper.

As, no doubt, our readers are aware, they started on the 30th June on a tour through Detroit, Niagara, Buffalo, Rochester Syracuse, Utica, Albany, Troy, New York city, Boston, Providence, New Haven, Hartford, Philadelphia, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Harrisburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis. This admirable copy consist of young men, merchants and clerks, and their average ages in twenty years. The array with them three full uniforms; a full dress, Chasseur and Zouave.

We pass over their truly triumphal progress from their starting point and confine ourselves to their reception and doings in New York.

The press of every city they have passed through has been with a gladness which can hardly be overestimated. The relations of their discipline, and in no city have they been more welcomed and applauded than in our own, where it may be naturally supposed military discipline has reached its perfection. Before, however, briefly recording their reception, let us glance at their organization.

Foreign News. The progress of events is slow but sure on the Continent. Garibaldi had changed the Sicilian Ministry, and modified his intentions as to the use of the arms.

From Naples we learn that the concessions of Bomba had failed to satisfy the people, and Victor Emmanuel, despite the wishes of Louis Napoleon, had declined the alliance offered him by the Emperor of the French. In the meantime reinforcements were being shipped from Gnos to Garibaldi.

The masses of Christians by the Danube had caused considerable alarm in Prussia and Austria, and French and English ships of war had been dispatched to Beyroot to stop it.

An immense concourse gathered at Wimbledon, England, on the 24th of July, to see Queen Victoria commence the ride exercise. She rode for six miles in the Park, beyond the usual course.

Heroes and Hamburg. One of the strongest proofs of the folly and falsehood of the unconditional hero worship which Carlyle has advocated, and which prevails so extensively in this country, may be found in the present Hamburg insurrection.

It is very little to the credit of one of the greatest living poets that he has in certain verses, earnestly deprecating making known that facts discreditable to the great dead. If character be worth a straw, it is worth a lie. Facts, when honestly set out and examined, may vanish and the misfortune of each circumstance; and has a fault in the form of a biographical fact, if suppressed by the mistaken kindness of contemporary friends, when it is not used to their own advantage.

advancing with rapid strides into an age which disdains every thing which is not as carefully controlled as events which have, which repeat old letters, and shames the devil in a thousand new ways. "Truth is great and will prevail."

We observe with pleasure that the Historical Magazine calls attention to the fact that Burrows's new volume contains some discriminating details of character, in place of the customary wholesale endorsement of our earlier statesmen and heroes. It says, very truly, that "local pride has trumpeted each of its representatives a hero, and the title of General has been made to cover a multitude of sins." A different picture, in fact, is presented, and beneath stations and soldiers must rest on their own merits.

Let him reflect on what time was bright, and then let him tell if it be not right to hold any man, great or small, for other than what he is.

The spirit which calls for biographical truth has nothing in common with the love of personalities, gossip and scandal. It is adverse to raking up falsehood which is filthy. Truth detests such as it does blind her worship. Unfortunately, the mass of worshippers knows no middle course of truth, and those who have their labor profitable must write for the mass. A striking comment on the inability of frivolous minds to bear the truth was recently shown in the diatribe with which the publication of "Humboldt's Letters" was received by the weak heretics of the literary fraternity.

They were not less rational enough than have been expected. The historian writes in harmony with the ways and observations and thoughts of our own time. It had been formed as it had been. But the thinkers could not see it; they believed in untruth, and would not be comforted because it was not.

The man who writes with this is the ready fish in solemn hypocrisy, which receives so many practical relations in almost every column of criminal intelligence in contemporary journals. It would really seem sometimes as if with the majority of persons, it might be said, that the ordinary impulse of humanity to profess his own and to sympathize with human weakness, to be implicitly believed and trusted. The people who encourage such wretches are precisely the same who would worship a hero, right or wrong.

Popular Sovereignty Preached by a Despot. In our last number we alluded to a pamphlet recently published in Paris, from the pen of Edmond About.

It has just called our attention to a coincidence in a conversation with Louis Napoleon, King of the Romans, which latter was in Paris during the treaty of some of our own countrymen of France during the past spring, as related by that free Freer Trader, and a passage in About's pamphlet. In conversation with Louis Napoleon said: "I still the Italian Duchies and the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, and I do not know myself were the only legitimate sovereigns in Europe. I include Greece, Vienna, as I am convinced, were her election put to the popular vote, she would be elected even more unanimously than I have been, and I consider all other rulers as usurpers or false tyrants, liable to every exultation of popular espiee or foreign indignation."

Although somewhat long, the following extract from About's pamphlet may be as happy as any proposed by any of our own system that we publish it entire. If any principle be carried out, the days of divine right to end as an end.

The Royal Highness the Prince of Prussia would make dangerous mistake were he to suppose that the national movement is powerful enough to dispense with any assistance. However this may be, the impulse which leads the mass of Germans toward a Prussian monarchy, all well regulated limits (one to lose sight of) will retard the current, and throw the back off the Court of Berlin does not meet them half way. Democratic France is in no way satisfied enough to rally round a King, but she will require guidance which is really royal.

It is the more necessary that Prussia should make a choice between the two principles which divide Europe, the preservation of the rights of the crowned heads, and the satisfaction of the popular rights. The King of the Prussia should not be subjected as his property, and the nation must be preserved intact in its independence. The Emperor of the French should not be subjected as his property, and the nation must be preserved intact in its independence. EDITORIAL GLANCES AT MEN AND THINGS.

Mr. Overall, the editor of the New Orleans Delta, some months ago, in a criticism on a very bad paper, named Overall, wounded that scion of the pine and the oak, so that he was obliged to resign his editorship.

A Sunday Paper says: "Some of the Know-Nothing papers are beginning to be greatly troubled about Mr. Douglas's rejection, just as they did about General Fremont. They seem now to be in a state of indecision, and are beginning to waver as to the man whom they should support. They are beginning to see that the man who is best qualified to lead the people is the man who is best qualified to lead the people." A Sunday Paper says: "Some of the Know-Nothing papers are beginning to be greatly troubled about Mr. Douglas's rejection, just as they did about General Fremont.

CHAPTER XLVII.

Then her days with Masters to be contented to decide upon the purchase of the property from some other party, day after day, she endeavored to find. Never had she assistance now in her career and routine. His advocacy or backing would be of no use to her, and she must have her own excitement. It was on the fourth day, a little before noon, that Albert Bedlow entered the shop of the jeweler, who had been waiting upon him so long.

"I have concluded my partner, Mr. Masters," said he, "and you know how I have made a mistake."

"I have just seen you," he said, "and I shall be glad to see you."

"I have just seen you," he said, "and I shall be glad to see you."

"I am contented with what I should be had a dinner clock, if I may say so."

"But that she will not," answered Bedlow, "I have made a mistake upon respecting the matter, and find that he is still very rich."

"That he holds mortgages upon half the property in the town."

"That he is worth twenty times what I am worth."

"He is likely of one of our young firms about present your seeing how far I am from the case."

"John Compton estimated that at a dot."

Regency Park where the road was parallel with the gates of Captain Bradford's hill, had posted a couple of boys—strong, powerful-looking fellows, of the first class, who were to watch the neighborhood. At first they paid no attention to him. They persisted in bounding the pit, until their suspicions and surprise were aroused, and they turned towards him. At that moment the magical words, "Move on," appeared to exert an influence over them, for they disappeared, and the man walked on, leaving the boys to stand there like three stumps.

"The suspicion of the gardener of the night were eventually assuaged, and he determined to watch them.

"On reaching the garden, he moved on," he heard had retreated to the shade of a magnificent tree stood directly opposite the hill, and stood watching with a keen eye every movement of the light or air of the upper windows.

"Get up, Bob," observed one.

"Come into another room, papa," replied his companion, reflectively.

"You think you will get it, Bob," said the other.

John Compton said that he had not seen many days in London before he returned to his old home. He was engaged in every other way. The London papers report from the India office, reporting and asking for such paragraphs as they were entitled to copy. As yet they had not received any more or less of the matter of their report.

Their Origin.
The first meeting of the corps was held April 20th, 1859, when certain fixed principles were agreed upon as the basis of their organization. These are eminently those of the Christian soldier. Moral and physical excellence were made the grand results, and higher object, no nobler result. The good effects of such a system cannot be over-estimated. It is not too much to say that it would almost change the aspect of our great cities, and that vice, rowdyism and bloodshed would disappear.

Colonel Ellsworth put the case admirably in his address at Chicago, on the occasion of the presentation of a medal to Sergeant Cobb. After alluding to the unpopularity of the military in Illinois, owing to the misconduct of certain companies, he said:

not vanity, and those ends were made to subserve those of the company. In a word, the scope of the Zouave Cadet is to raise the standard of American freemen, and we can conceive no

In the city were thousands of young men gathered from every State in the Union, who, being looked from home and in sad scenes, showed an intense preference for amusement and exposed to the influence of insupportable temptations, by hundreds of millions packed closely together, there was a place containing all the requirements of attraction, without discipline, to which, after business hours, they could resort. This city association supplying this desideratum—having attraction sufficient to bring together a large number of young men—power to exercise over them a proper restraint, and by its peculiar characteristics, stimulating the development of their better nature, and checking the tendency to the contrary, by the removal of its primary cause—accuse of neglect and mismanagement—would merit the approval of the public and receive its hearty encouragement and support. Convinced that no other form of association could be made so well to suit the same purpose as this, if conducted with an eye single to its highest and best purposes, we resolved to make an attempt, at least, and the following constitution was adopted as a basis of organization:

DEMONSTRATION OF THE NEW YORK POMPER CORPS, AT FRENCH'S HOTEL—NEW METHOD OF PRESERVING LIFE FROM FIRE—THE LADDER RAKE—DESCENDING FROM THE FIFTH STORY WINDOW—BY THIS BASKET—FALL CLOTH USED—BY BELLS, &C., &C.

THE NEW YORK GERMAN FIRE ORPS, OR POMPIERS.

On the 10th instant the German Fire Company of this city gave, for the first time in public, proofs of its ability, and we are happy to say, to the most perfect satisfaction of all present. The rescue story told of Mr. French was very willingly placed by him at the disposition of the firemen. Owing to the size and situation of the building, it was not only peculiarly adapted to render available the exertions of the firemen, but also afforded an excellent view of all that was done to a vast multitude assembled to observe the evolutions of those manœuvring. The first experiment consisted in climbing the house with ladders, eighteen feet long, the upper ends of which were terminated by steel hooks, which, four story to story, hung from the windows. To this was added the fastening of the safety tube to the fifth story. It was an interesting sight to see a multitude of people of both sexes safely descend to the ground by means of this tube. To this followed passing to every story of the building, by means of the so-called communication ladders, and climbing the roof by the firemen on each other's shoulders. The experiments succeeded beyond all anticipation, and appeared to form the basis of their system of saving life at fires.

The first story was climbed by means of a ladder by two firemen, who drew after them the hooked ladders. So soon as the second story had been ascended by the first pair, a second pair followed, who reached up the ladders to their predecessors. The manner of doing this was for one man to climb while his companion ascended the ladder. So soon as the first climber had reached the upper story, he threw down a cord which was fastened to the "hook," a sort of small platform, such as is used by painters, which was then drawn up. The hook, fastened to the upper window-sill forms the basis for the ladder, which is attached to the roof and to its projecting edge. It will be readily understood that the ladders connecting the different stories remain hanging, and that a communication of any length desired is established between the street and the roof.

The utility of this system must be apparent to every one, and its public and regular application is certainly something to be greatly desired. The breaking up of the connection of ladders, and the self-rescue of the firemen left in the upper stories, with the aid of ropes, with or without hooks, was executed with the same evidence of discipline, and with the same success. Particular praise should be awarded to certain firemen, who, while sliding down on their ropes, stopped at certain stories and took persons down with them.

The last experiment was the application of the "spring cloth," upon which ropes were made from the fifth story, proving that in cases when it is utterly impossible to enter a house, the inmates may still be rescued in spite of the flames. The immense opposition which greeted the successful evolutions of this corps—successful in spite of the great want of room and absence of the police—gives room to hope that all ideas of national rivalry and prejudice will disappear, and that the method of our German friends—if approved—may be adopted for the rescue of life and of property from conflagrations.

If we look at Europe, we there find in every large town at least one corps of organized firemen of this description, and there the whole system of saving life is organized in the same manner. But what have we here? Would a single life have been lost in the Elm street catastrophe, or in that of Forty-fifth street, had there been, instead of the heavy Hook and Ladder Company, a trained corps which is capable of rescuing every one with the greatest promptness.

The German Pumpiers consist of a captain, two officers, a physician, two divisions of climbers, and one company who serve on the ground.

The personal equipment of the Pompier consists of a girde, five inches broad, which, by means of the rings at its side, through which cords pass, is capable of sustaining the weight of several bodies, a bundle of rope hanging at the side and a hatchet, sharp on one side and pointed on the other. The head is covered by a strong helmet, well adapted to shield the bearer from falling bricks or stones.

The apparatus consists of little ladders with steel hooks, intended to be hung in the windows; of the hook, or painter's platform, to facilitate communication with the roof; and the so-called Italian ladder, which unfortunately could not be used at the trial, owing to its being out of order.

It is said that with such apparatus, and with handy, experienced firemen, all accidents at fires may be avoided, since even in the most unusual cases, as in that of houses standing by themselves, or of those in which the fire is bursting from every window, it is always possible to reach the roof from the blank wall side, by means of the Italian ladder. This consists of a number of small five feet long sections of ladder, the ends of which are firmly connected as required, until the roof is reached. It must be evident to every one that by this, and the other means described, the loss, with water, can be more readily brought to bear on the flames, and the fire more readily extinguished than by the ordinary American methods. In extreme cases there is still the spring-ladder, which rescues those who cannot be otherwise saved.

This corps of truly brave and well-trained German Pumpiers have, by economy, saved from their wogos the means of purchasing their apparatus, and have given this and their time to the public to show them how, in peril by fire, life may be saved. They deserve a liberal support that they may be enabled to provide better apparatus in abundance, so that they may, whenever summoned, be able to give valuable assistance to their fellow-citizens.

THE WALTON AND MATTHEWS MURDERS.

THE investigation of this remarkable murder was resumed on the 17th, and many facts elicited, but none bearing with any certainty. A servant girl named Davis testified that she lived corner of Alsceob street, living place that she heard while in bed the cry of "Stop thief!" that she got out of bed, and saw a person run down the area of a house just opposite where she stood; that not knowing his offence she felt a certain pity for him, and remained quiet, not wishing to give any alarm. That after the crowd had run past where he was crouched he emerged from the hiding-place and walked quietly off. She thinks that Charles Jeffrey was the man person she saw. She also testifies that he had light clothes on.

LONGFELLOW.

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW was born on the 27th of February, 1807, at the city of Portland, in Maine, and entered, when fourteen years of age, at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, where, at the end of four years, he took his degree, with high honors. Mr. Longfellow, who while yet an undergraduate had written many tasteful and carefully finished poems for the United States Literary Gazette, was destined to the legal profession, and for some months during 1825 was occupied as a student of law in his father's office. The embryo poet, however, appears to have found the pursuit un congenial; and embracing the offer of a professorship of modern languages in Bowdoin College, he prepared for the discharge of his new duties by a long visit to Europe. Having passed some three or four years in England, France, Spain, Germany, Italy and Holland, he returned in 1829 to America, and entered forthwith upon the exercise of his professional functions.

While professor at Bowdoin College, Mr. Longfellow pursued his literary career with diligence. Besides contributing some valuable criticisms to the North American Review, he published in 1833 his translation from the Spanish of the poem of "Don Jorge Manrique on the Death of his Father," together with an introductory essay on "Spanish Poetry," and in 1835 his "Ottie Mer." In the latter year, having already, at the age of twenty-eight, been recognized as a man of mark, he was appointed to the professorship of modern languages and belles-lettres in Harvard College, Cambridge. Mr. Longfellow again left his native land, and set forth to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the languages and literature of Northern Europe. With this object he spent more than twelve months in Denmark, Sweden, Germany and Turkey, and again visited Europe in 1842.

Mr. Longfellow, pursuing his success, published, in 1839, "Hyperion," a romance, the scenes of which are supposed to have been drawn from some passages in his own life; and this work, which found high favor with refined and intelligent readers, was followed by "Voices of the Night," the earliest collection of his poems. In 1841 appeared "Ballads and Poems;" in 1843 "Poems on Slavery;" in 1843 the play entitled "The Spanish Student;" and in 1845 "The Poets and Poetry of Europe," and the "Belshazzar of Bruges."

Having for years cultivated his natural poetic power, and made himself one of the most skillful versifiers of the time, Mr. Longfellow, in 1847, published his "Ervingline," a melancholy story written in hexameters, an experiment which, though it was, in the opinion of critics, somewhat hazardous for a poet of reputation to venture upon, he tried with no slight success—and in 1851 he gave to the world "The Golden Legend," a work whose exquisite passages fully maintained its author's reputation for genius and elicited no small measure of praise.

The poet, during the heat of the summer months, retires to the seaside, to recruit his health and ponder on some new poetical thought wherewith to delight the world. The spot he has chosen for his summer retirement is Nahant, a most pleasant watering-place in Essex county, ten miles north-east of Boston. It is situated on a narrow peninsula about three miles in length, and projects from the mainland of Lynn into the Bay of Massachusetts. On this peninsula stands Longfellow's house, the waves of the ocean laving the rocks almost at its base, and the strong fresh sea breeze impinging with vigor upon those who inhale it. The poet is here surrounded with congenial society; Prof. Angier's house is within a brief distance, and the Bliss of the Boston coteries through the hotels and private residences. We need hardly say that among the distinguished characters to be found every summer at Nahant, Longfellow is ever the observed of all observers.

His latest poems have been "Hiwaithia" and "Miles Standish," both full of fine thought and delicate versification. Few poets in our time have been more popular on both sides the Atlantic than the gifted author whose portrait we this day present to our readers.

GLADES HOUSE, COHASSET.

FOR many years, antedating the experience of our oldest amateur fishermen, the south shore of Massachusetts Bay has been a favorite resort. Before a public-house had ever reared its head above the combing surf that rolls in upon every beach, and breaks upon the rocky headlands, the science of catching tartar, sea-bass, cod, haddock, perch and blue fish had been practiced and demonstrated for many years. Following upon this experience came the next great desideratum—a public-house—such as one as would afford shelter and a well supplied table to the salt water disciple of Frank Walton. Our amateurs of Boston waters and vicinity are slightly epicureans; they can face the winds and salt spray, can brave a north-easter whenever there is a prospect of game in air or water, but at night nobody can better appreciate the luxury of a good bed, or display greater gastronomic ability when placed before a table well filled with the products of our Eastern shores.

Along this rocky southern coast of Massachusetts Bay, extending from Boston Harbor, there is a rugged border fringing the ocean. There are smooth-waterecoves, precipitous cliffs looking seaward, and bold promontories, guarded by brown rocky sentinels, which have for centuries withstood the unceasing lashings of the ocean. The Atlantic comes in here in all its smiling beauty, grandeur or ferocity, as suit its ever-changing moods, rolling with a smooth glassy swell into the sheltered coves, breaking with thundering roar and measured intonation upon the sandy beach, or pitifully spending its force in hissing, glittering spray upon the rocky framework of the advanced coast. There is material for the lover of nature, the artist and the poet, exercise and fresh air for the city denizen.

LONGFELLOW'S SEASIDE RESIDENCE AT NAHANT.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH BY SILSBE, CASE & CO.

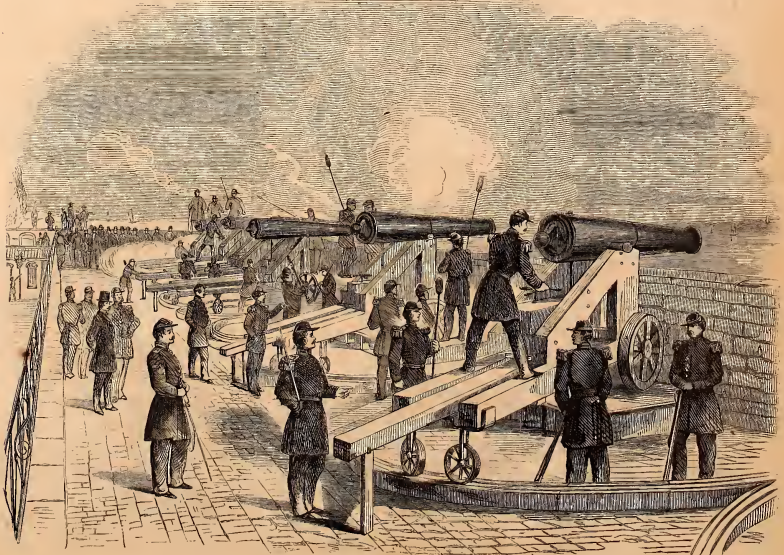

SEASIDE RESORT—THE GLADES HOUSE, COHASSET, MASSACHUSETTS BAY.

On one of the boldest of the rocky promontories on this coast, thrust well out into the ocean, stands the Glades House. It is, by land, about eighteen miles from Boston. The name, Glades, appears slightly inappropriate, but the oldest inhabitants account for its nomenclature in this wise: In front of it, facing the sea, are three or four ledges, each outside the other, at regular distance, which at low tide are uncovered, presenting a series of rocky islands in a semi-circle. Some classic scholar, struck with the similitude, gave it the name of the "Cyclades," after the famous group in the Grecian Archipelago. From thence came the Yankee pronunciation, "Cyclades," and by an easy transition from this to the glades. The promontory upon which the house is situated runs out upon the main land about two miles, the trending of the coast upon the northern side forms a well-sheltered cove, running up to the village of Cohasset. Seaward it looks out upon one of the most sublime coast scenes in the world. Between it and the northern shore are the ledges, the outer one of which is the famous Mines, upon which the Government are building a lighthouse. Upon the other side is the ocean, spreading its vast space to the horizon.

Almost upon the verge of the promontory stands the Glades House, a large, pleasant home-like building, capable of accommodating between two and three hundred people. The picture above gives a fair view of the side facing the Minot, but does not show the magnitude of the house. It is from one of the best of Whittle & Black's photographs, and it is sufficient to say, in praise of the engraving, that it is done by Mr. John Andrews, of Boston, whose reputation is second to no other in the country. For beautiful views of land, sky and water there is no point from which these can be viewed from the Glades that will not Nearly all the time the ocean is studded with sails of vessels, outward and inward bound. All the commerce of Boston passes under the eye of the houses, and adds greatly to the beauty of the scenery.

ARTILLERY DRILL OF THE CITY GUARD AT FORT HAMILTON.

On Wednesday, the 13th of July, of the month most interesting exhibition in mimic warfare was given by the New York City Guard at Fort Hamilton. It was to see how far our citizen soldiers are fitted to man our harbor defenses. We were proud to see as a most triumphant proof of how admirably our citizen soldiers may be relied on in the hour of danger. It has long been matter of apprehension that, in the event of a war with a great maritime power, our harbor defenses would be left unprotected by a hostile fleet, since under our present régime it would be impossible to provide artillery men to work our forts. This eminent Captain Lowell put them to the test, and showed us heavy guns, and on the 13th he gave at Fort Hamilton a most gratifying proof of how easily such a danger can be met. As we have already stated, the City Guard were under the command, lead of the wall street in one of the Union Ferry boats, and proceeded to Fort Hamilton for the purpose of loading and firing the batteries guns that have long rendered their muzzles in silence at the waters.

Among the number were Colonel Dwyer, of the Seventh; Colonel Bowditch, of the Seventh; Colonel Lewis, of the Sixth; Colonel Van Buren, of the Ninth; Colonel E. Ellsworth, of the United States Zouave Company; Colonel Grant, of the Twelfth; Colonel M. M. Smith, of the Twelfth; Colonel Van Buren, of the Ninth; Colonel E. After stacking arms the Guards marched at once to the enclosing muzzle of Dodworth's Band into the fort. The officers were then received very politely by the acting commander, Major Anderson, and the adjutant, Major Lowell.

After striking arms the Guards marched at once to the enclosing muzzle of Dodworth's Band into the fort. The officers were then received very politely by the acting commander, Major Anderson, and the adjutant, Major Lowell. The target fired at was very small, so much so that it could not at first be distinguished without considerable gazing in the midst of the crowd, which was firing with all its might. It was a large hoghead, anchored nearly two thousand yards from the port, and south of Fort Lafayette, nearly in a line with the main range, and was fired at with all its might.

The first ball fell into a little, and to the right of the mark; the second struck to the left and in advance; the third fell a very little short; the fourth was an excellent line shot, but fell short; the fifth was very short and out of line; the sixth was a goodly shot; the seventh struck the target with all its might, and at the command "Fire" for the eighth shot the piece hung up; the next gun, at the word from Captain Lowell, walking on the ground, fired to the right of the mark, and the next gun fired not far enough allowance for the wind, which was at the time blowing very briskly, and with sufficient force from the northeast to have driven the shot to the right of the mark. The target was elevated at four degrees and three-quarters. The twelfth shot was a few feet to the left, and was pronounced excellent. The thirteenth shot was a few feet to the left, and was pronounced excellent. The target was elevated at four degrees and three-quarters. MASSACRE AT THE CONVENT OF THE WHITE BENELECTINES, PALERMO, BY THE TROOPS OF THE KING OF NAPLES.—FROM THE "ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS."

MASSACRE AT THE CONVENT OF THE WHITE BENELECTINES, PALERMO.

We give to-day an illustration of the cold-blooded manner in which the renowned miscreant of Naples murders men, women and children, in his ruffled rage. Frank Visately, the artist of the London Illustrated News, thus describes this fiendish act of cruelty:

"On Tuesday, May 23, the troops collected all the people in the neighborhood, and shut them up in this convent. It was then set fire to, and as the poor wretches attempted to escape the troops fired on them, and drove them with the bayonet hack into the burning pile. When the ruins were searched one hundred and thirty bodies of men, women and children were found; these I saw with my own eyes. I was in the streets of the place while the massacre was going on, and the shrieks of the unhappy creatures could be heard above the rattle of musketry."

This is one of the deeds of the tyrant whom some of our citizens have been asked to aid by subscriptions! How different has been the conduct of the hero Liberator of Italy. We quote from a London Illustrated paper:

"Whilst the conduct of General Garibaldi during the hostilities at Palermo was marked (as indeed it always had been) by the finest sense of honor—being, according to Admiral Mundy's description, 'most noble and generous,' and, according to another account, that of a 'Christian gentleman'—the royal troops opposed to this misnamed 'brigand,' the protectors, avowed, o

THE GREAT METER OF FRIDAY, THE 20TH OF JULY.

On Friday evening, about thirty-five minutes past nine, one of the most remarkable meteors that has ever appeared visited the "seral regions" and perchance the "poeticals" as well as other it was a very superior kind of fireworks...

In his earlier days, when Sam Johnson, the great "Rembler" man, was seen Jacob Jacobin, in the same manner, was seen to write this pleasant little epigram upon a comet which so frightened the Duke of Modena that he ran away.

If you can remember, prince disappear. Comets, come every day, and stay a year.

A Duke of Modena disappeared during the last year, but the comet this time was Louis Napoleon.

The appearance in the heavens on Friday evening which was witnessed and sketched by one of our corps of artists, as seen from Hoboken, is the most singular description.

It appeared at first when it rose in the north-west as a large bright orb enveloped in a mist, of a silken-weave in its texture. It then burst, and became two orbs, one pursuing the other in the heavens with a long train of blue light the tail of the comet, one joining to the head of the other.

This double-headed snake was followed by a few sparks of varied colors, which were seen and named after commodities which had died out. Our first impression was that it was a most wonderful triumph apophytocanic but, as the poet says, the head of its Artificer was divine.

Its path was from the north-west to the east, and the elevation, as it seemed to us, was thirty degrees. Its path was from the north-west to the east, and the elevation, as it seemed to us, was thirty degrees.

INTERIOR OF BAILEY & CO.'S JEWELLERY ESTABLISHMENT, 819 CHESTNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA

BAILEY & CO.—THE JAPANESE IN PHILADELPHIA.
 The visit of the Japanese Ambassadors to the store of Bailey & Co., 819 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, naturally attracted a considerable amount of public attention to that establishment. It was a desirable place of observation, and it gained this distinction by the leading position it has assumed as one of the most extensive manufacturing establishments in the United States.

The building occupied and owned by this firm, an engraving of which our readers will find in this number of our paper, is a considerable structure of fine white marble, has a large marble figure, representing Time, placed on a balustrade of the same material from the second story. A large regulating clock is placed in the centre of the third story, at which the marble figure is pointing with the left hand. The whole front is tastefully and repairing of watches and chronometers, &c., and for engraving and burnishing.

The six stories of the building on Jayne street are used solely by the firm of Bailey & Co., who do all their own manufacturing. Steam power is used. They employ from fifty to seventy-five men constantly in the silver ware department, and generally ornamented, which makes the architectural effect neat and elegant.

 The first and second stories front are sale-rooms, exceeding three hundred feet in length. The first floor has on one side a large stock of rich and fashionable jewelry displayed in glass cases, consisting of new styles, fine gold, diamonds and other precious stones, camfio, coral, topaz, sapphire, bracelets, necklaces, &c.
 On the other side of the store are gold and silver watches, clocks, watch and other chains; also the best and most extensive assortment of sterling silver ware to be found in this country, consisting of more than thirty different patterns of tea sets of six pieces each, dinner sets, two hundred and fifty dozen spoons and forks, a large number of morocco boxes, with fancy silver articles, all adapted for bridal and other presents, from five dollars to one hundred dollars in value. Heavy silver-plated ware of all descriptions, tea sets, waiters, cake baskets, castors, water pitchers, &c., &c.
 In the second story sale-room are a large number of valuable paintings, rich gilt clocks and vases, bronzes of all descriptions, with a general assortment of fancy goods.
 The third and fourth story front is devoted to watchmaking thirty men are engaged in the manufacturing of jewellery. The best workmen in the country are employed by this firm, which gives them great advantage over others in the trade who purchase articles at second-hand, in being enabled to guarantee the quality of the gold and silver from which the articles they sell are manufactured, and which constitutes their chief value.

The firm of Bailey & Co. prepared a beautiful and costly die, from which they struck a number of medals for the Japanese Embassy, which were presented to them when lately in Philadelphia. Fine gold ones were given to the prince, silver to others, and bronzes, according to their office and rank. We give an engraving of this medal, showing one of the best kinds of Washington that has ever been made. On the reverse, a beautiful wreath, with names of the donors in the centre.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AT THE GRAND BALL GIVEN IN HIS HONOR BY THE AUTHORITIES OF ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S TOUR IN AMERICA.

Receiving the Address from the Mayor of St. John's.

We gave in our last paper a sketch of the arrival of the Prince at St. John's, and now continue our illustrations. As we announced in our last, he arrived at St. John's on the 23d July, but was prevented by the rain storm from landing till the next noon, when he was received with regal honors. In the course of the day various addresses were presented to him, the first being by the Mayor of St. John's. It was a very neat and loyal composition, something somewhat strange to an American ear, but which nevertheless must touch every heart, more or less, inasmuch as it is an evidence of manly appreciation of the womanly virtues which now adorn the throne of England; for we will not disgrace the intelligence of an age which has produced a Garibaldi and a Great Eastern, by conceding for an instant that the welcome which the son of Victoria has received is paid merely to the Prince.

The answer, therefore, of the royal youth is doubtless the honest expression of his heart. After receiving with a very pleasant smile a copy of the address from the Mayor, the Prince handed the document to the Duke of Newcastle, and made the following response:

I sincerely thank you for the addresses presented to me, and for the hearty welcome received from all on my landing on the shores of this, the earliest colonial possession of the British crown. I trust you will not think me regardless of your various loyalty if I acknowledge these addresses collectively.

It will afford me the greatest satisfaction to report to the Queen the devotion to her crown and person unimmutably evinced by the reception of her son, eloquently expressed in the address from the various bodies in this town and Harbor Grace. I am charged by the Queen to convey to you the assurance of the deep concern she has felt in this interesting portion of her dominions. I shall carry back a lively recollection of this day's proceedings, and of your kindness to myself personally; but, above all, of those hearty demonstrations of patriotism which prove your deep-rooted attachment to the great and free country of which we all glory to be called the sons.

THE PRINCE OF WALES LEAVING ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, FOR HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA.—FROM A SKETCH BY ONE SIR JAMES LAMONT

THE PRICE OF WALESS' TOUR IN AMERICA.

After his dromedary, Prince and his train in the evening, and dined at the Government House, where there was a select party to meet him. From thence he proceeded to the ball.

The Grand Ball at St. John's.

In order to give the Prince of Wales an opportunity of seeing their future sovereign, a grand ball was arranged to take place at the Colonial House. An immense pavilion, representing the tents used by the British troops in the Crimea, and the various residences, giving a very brilliant and artistic appearance. The Prince, with his party, arrived at half past seven, and in attendance, had greatly increased the pleasure of the evening. The whole city was illuminated, and never had the royal highness seen more guests than on this grand ball.

A dais was erected in the grand saloon for his Royal Highness. This was canopied with the crown plumes of the Prince of Wales, the English lion and unicorn, the red and white rose—1 serve. There were thousands of persons of all ranks present. The Prince arrived at about ten o'clock, and was greeted with loud, enthusiastic and prolonged cheers—his motto, "Dieu et mon droit." The Prince was dressed in the full uniform of a British colonel. He was accompanied by the Earl of St. Germain who was dressed in blue, with a badge, and the Duke of Newcastle, who wore his full uniform. The Prince danced six times during the evening, and remained with the company until halfpast two o'clock this morning. The dancing on the whole, among the company was not very good. The Prince very affably and good-naturedly corrected some of the blundering dancers every time they called on him, and showed much regard to the duke. He is himself a very graceful and accomplished dancer, as he fully proved in the way he whirled through waltzes, polkas, quadrilles, and other dances, with great grace, respectably cheered, and he very properly took a new partner whenever he stood up to dance.

The people everywhere are greatly delighted. The unprecedented and general disposition of the young Prince has gained him the affection of many true and worthy hearts. The noblemen and gentry have his high regard for them. The people are much of the dance. The ball was closed at three o'clock this morning; but before leaving the Prince and suite expressed themselves highly pleased at the cordial and affectionate reception accorded them.

A St. John's paper that describes the Prince: "The prince, although a young man, had all proportioned and certainly a pleasant-looking young man. He is about medium height, and of fair complexion, with brown hair, and particularly brilliant hazel eyes. His countenance is interesting and character of his face, and particularly in its prevailing expression, which reminds us of his sagacious mother. His manner is easy and self-possessed, and he has a certain natural grace which seems to be a person of his age, standing in front of some thirty or forty strange men, to hear an address read by one of them, or stand in a circle of ladies, or to dance with several of them, and finally a stray and evidently inexpressible smile passed like a very slight flash of sunshine over his face, but his emotion was so mild and contral that this could only be discovered by the close observer.

A correspondent who was at the ball speaks very warmly of the prince's manners and habits. He is a very agreeable and very obliging man, and has a very friendly way with his fair partners, and soon put them at ease. There was a total absence of that patinating air which is so common to some of the dancing masters who dance with a rustic. In an word, he has been well brought up, and openly showed that he was well pleased with the respect every where expressed for his excellent mother, the Queen.

His Leaves St. John's for Halifax.

The next morning, at ten o'clock, all St. John's was astir, as it was to be the day when he would re-embark on the Hero for Europe.

About half-past ten the Prince appeared on horseback, accompanied by his suite, and was received with loud and fervent cheers.

The wharf was thoroughly blackaded by a dense crowd, who cheered incessantly. The soldiers of the Newfoundland regiment were drawn up in a line of about a hundred, and the police were equipped a prominent position outside. The numerous stands provided for the accommodation of the public were soon appropriated, and the ladies of the aristocracy, and those of the middle class, the government officials, the Judges, Justices and the Attorney-General, most of the latter of whom were dressed in full military costume, and were accompanied by their wives.

The whole of the house tops in the vicinity, and the masts and yards of vessels in the harbor were covered with people. The harbor was filled with music making in military orders, sparring merrily about in the tranquil waters of the bay. The bells chimed sweetly as the prince soon advanced, and the interest of the crowd every moment increased. At half-past twelve he descended on horseback, followed by the various Companies in the order given:

- The Queen's Own and the Rifle Companies.
- The North British and Highland Companies.
- The York and Lancaster Companies.
- The St. George's Company.
- The St. Andrew's Company.
- The Arcton Company.
- The Halifax Cavalry and Artillery Companies.
- The Victoria Company.
- Her Majesty's Foot.

The Masonic body, at their own request, were stationed immediately in front of the Masonic Hall, where an arch was erected by the Prince.

The Prince was received by his Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, the Major-General commanding the troops, the Chief Justice, the President and members of the Legislative Council, the Speaker and members of the House of Assembly, the Mayor and Corporation, the Clergy, the various professional and mercantile bodies, and the members of the Executive Machinery.

His Royal Highness rode slowly along, and the various trade companies followed him into the enclosure, preceded by a grand band of school children, dressed in white garments. All the vessels in the harbor were under full sail, the breeze being a very beautiful appearance. The Prince passed along the whole length of the procession, then, uncovering his head, took leave of Lady Hanson and the ladies of the aristocracy, and then proceeded to his ship. His suite immediately followed, and then the guns of the war ships and of the citadel belched forth their deafening discharge, which were repeated three times. The prince's coach landed again. At the same moment loud cheers arose from the mainmast yards of the vessel-of-war, from the merchant vessels and from the shore, and were repeated three times. The prince was generally observed that the commander and crew of his Imperial Majesty's war steamer Scourer entered fully into the object of the salute. The salute was repeated three times, decorated with flags and streamer, and all the yards were manned in honor of the Prince, who was pulled alongside of the Hero in the vessel's passage, nearly under the stern of the steamer of England's "faithful ally." On stepping on to the deck of the Hero, the Prince raised hand, graciously bowed, and then retired.

The day was observed as a general holiday throughout the city. The Her Majesty's Foot, the Grenadier Grenades and Light Infantry, and the people was on one such of excitement, which could scarcely be broken in New York. The whole of the ladies and the gentlemen of the aristocracy, the middle and lower classes, the manners and deportment. It is a common saying through the streets that as long as England has such Kings she will never be conquered. All the country folks for miles around are now in the city, enjoying the holiday, drinking, tuning, carousing and making merry generally.

Price at Halifax.

The Hero arrived at Halifax on Monday afternoon, and embarked of the town, amidst the royal salutes from the fleet and batteries. At noon Monday the Prince landed, and the people received him with the most enthusiastic demonstrations. The next day had been proclaimed public holidays, thus presenting the rare opportunity of three days successive recreation.

The Prince landed at the Cavalry Barracks, and received an address congratulating him on his arrival. He wore a colonel's uniform and rode on horseback to the Government House. Emerging from the gates of the dockyard, the procession passed through a double file of troops and volunteers to the Government House. Here were a number of triumphal arches erected in the streets, including Cuasar's arch, with a stanchion on the top of it, the Volunteer Artillery arch, built with military trophies, the Mayor's arch, the Archbishop's arch, a very beautiful arch erected by the Merchant Seamen, and a grand arch of their very handsome arches, all of which were beautifully decorated.

On the parade the friends turned out with a "traps" fifty feet high, surmounted by a colossal figure holding a base pipe. Thirty-five hundred children of the schools also were present in blue and white, and some the national anthem, God Save the Queen.

THE COLLEGE REGATTA AT WORCESTER, MASS.

We give in our present paper a spirited picture of the College Regatta, which was held in Worcester, on Tuesday, the 24th July, in the presence of several fifteen thousand persons. The lake on which it was held is called Cansamquam by the Indians, and is a beautiful sheet of water that in boats, which embosoms it like an amphitheater. All around the shores seats had been erected, which held the collected multitude of the spectators. The water never sees such happy nosegays seen as we saw on the present occasion. After all the races and tilts of the field are nothing to those of the land. The regatta was held in Worcester, and the bathing fraternity generally from other places were largely present, among them were young Agassiz and Ellian, of Massachusetts, Ward, of New York, and others. They passed a grand day, and were very much amused. They were all averting, whether one or many could secure a man an opportunity to more than "stand around" at the parade.

There was a large party present from New York city; also, parties from Providence; and Connecticut delivered a full account of friends of the regatta. The number of spectators was very numerous. The boats and crews of Harvard, Yale and Brown arrived at Worcester on Saturday, and on Sunday the crews of each boat were out for practice nearly all day.

The College Union race, is strictly speaking, confined to the company crews. The different colleges, and by the great speed of the men. The regatta, however, two twin races provided the match for the championship. The freshmen of Yale challenged the Harvard Freshman, and the Yale Sophomore sailed in the Harvard Sargonator on a three-mile race in clinker-built boats, or lapstrakes. The Harvard crews have brought hither two genuine lapstrakes, in accordance with the terms of the challenge. Yale students entered two boats which sailed exactly like shells, and were loudly asserted to be in reality shells and not lapstrakes. The Harvard crew, however, were of the Yale Sophomore to be a fair lapstrake, although in appearance a shallow flat. The Harvard Freshman and Yale Sophomore, however, never fell two boats in a row in any contest, and the shell was allowed to enter as a lapstrake. The race was a distance of a mile and a half return, and the prize a flag, or kept until beaten.

The following were the entries, and a description of the boats and crews:

FRISK RACES.

- Boats (Harvard Freshmen)—W. A. JOHNSON, E. D. BUA, A. LAWRENCE, J. C. GERRIN, W. GREENGLASS, G. G. COLLIER, who were accompanied by their wives.

RECEPTION OF THE WIDE-AWAKE CLUB OF NEWARK BY THE WIDE-AWAKES OF HARTFORD.

The Wide-Awakes, as our readers are probably aware, is an organization having its origin in partisan spirit and is made up of members of the Republican party, the majority being young men. Its objects and aim is to aid in bringing about the election of Lincoln and Hamlin.

The idea was suggested by the appearance of several young men wearing caps and capes in the torchlight procession which paraded the streets of Hartford on the evening of February 25th 1860, to escort the Hon. Cassius M. Clay. A meeting was called, and some thirty young men organized themselves into a Wide-Awake Club. A constitution was adopted, and officers

The presence of a king engenders love.
Amongst his subjects, and his royal friends.—HOMER IV

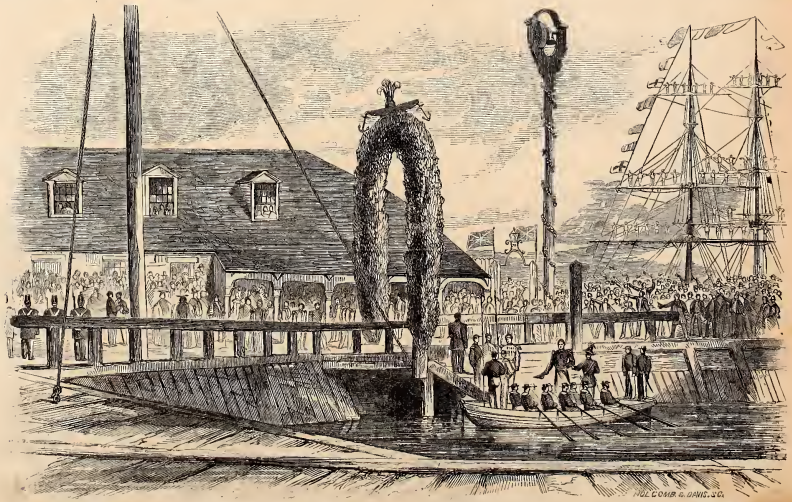

The heir to the throne of thirty-six millions of people is now travelling upon the Continent of America. He visits the same regions travelled over by his grandfather, the Duke of Kent, years since. He comes as a future sovereign, to mingle with a people who have been loyal to the throne of his ancestors for a century. His coming is opportune, propitious, and of political significance to the Government of which he is the representative.

In a progressive age like this, when the whole face of a country undergoes transformation so rapidly,—when the dark green forests of one day give way to the habitations of a city which rise as if by magic in their place,—when in the course of a few years the woodman's axe has swept away the pine, the hemlock, the maple and the oak from their homes, and sent them, planted in the white-winged seeds that cleave the ocean, to the world's end; and in their place we have either swaying fields of rich grain or the wealth of commerce cumbering the storehouses and docks,—when, too, the character and nature of the inhabitants undergo a like change by means of contrived emigration, it is well that a Prince and expectant King should visit his colonies, examine personally the character and peculiarities of the people, and view its diversified lakes, mountains and natural beauties.

The advent of the son of their Queen has changed the face of

THE PRINCE OF WALES FEELING AT TENNIS BALL, IN THE TENNIS COURT, ORIEL STREET, OXFORD

MEDAL PRESENTED TO THE TYCOON OF JAPAN, BY TIFFANY & CO.

Among the most beautiful memorials of American progress which the Japanese Embassy carried home with them, especially creditable for lofty character and artistic design, was the gold medal which we illustrate, presented by Tiffany & Co., and entirely the work of that house. The medal was of virgin gold, a circle of three inches diameter, weighing about five ounces. The work upon it was engaging, time for manufacture being too restricted to admit of production in relief. Unlike antecedent productions of the medallion art, this presentation bears the double character of a medal and a jewel. On its obverse face, just beneath the massive rim, is set one of the most exquisitely cut emeralds, a three-quarter face head of President Buchanan. The material is sand-onyx, the favorite stones with the great cae-

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE TENNIS COURT.
The greatest jewel in the crown of Queen Victoria is the admirable manner in which she has educated her children. She has not brought them up merely as inheritors of luxury and fortune, but she has brought them up to be bodily, useful men and women. The training, mental and physical, of the young Prince of Wales has been conducted with exceeding care, no pains having been spared; every advantage has been offered him to perfect himself in the accomplishments and exercises which make a gentleman.

Among other gymnastic sports which tend to develop the muscles and make the well-knit frame, the game of Tennis has been much practiced by the young Prince. In his private court he has acquired considerable skill in the game, so that but few of those who are privileged to encounter him are able to cope with him with success. Our engraver represents the Prince playing in the Tennis Court of Oriel street, Oxford, where he took his first lessons.

pleasure in welcoming the Prince—first, as their possible future monarch, and secondly as the grandson of the noble man who lived among them for several years. The residence of the Duke—known as the Duke of Kent's Lodge—is a large old-fashioned building, situated on the Windsor road, about three miles from the city of Halifax. The location is very beautiful, the house being nearly surrounded by a grove of magnificent trees and having in front an extensive lawn. The building at the present time is in a most dilapidated condition.

On the 1st of August the Prince ascended the Basin ten miles in the Valorous, and paid a visit of respect to the locality so intimately connected with the memory of his honored grandfather.

SUMMER RETRAITS.

Harvey Williams's Villa at Bath, L. I.

To show that wealth and its concomitants is confined to no class or profession in this country, we this week present our readers with an excellent sketch of the summer residence of Mr. Harvey Williams, the actor, at Bath, Long Island.

It is not often that members of the theatrical profession rise so suddenly in the world as has Mr. Williams, and therefore, as the engineer of his own fortune, gotten, it is true, through several long years of steady perseverance and toil, he is entitled to the attention of the journalist, and the respect of the public, as a man of note.

Harvey Williams was well known to New Yorkers, having been before the public as a performer for twenty-two years, and in all that time has never failed to please wherever he has acted. His first appearance was at the old Franklin Theatre in Chatham street, this city, under the management of Schou and Dineford, playing Pat Rooney in the "Ombudsman." In 1849 he made a stirring tour through the South and West, and being greatly encouraged in his young efforts, he afterwards visited all the principal cities and towns in the Union. During the winter of 1852-54 he played an engagement of thirty-five nights at the St. Charles Theatre, New Orleans, under the management of Joel Smith, realising, for himself the snug sum of ten thousand dollars.

On the 24th of November, 1849, Mr. Williams became united

THE LION MONUMENT AT HALIFAX TO THE HEROES OF SEBASTOPOL.

Our engraving on page 199 is taken from a beautiful photograph by Mr. Chase, and represents the inauguration on the 18th of July, at Halifax, N. S., of a monument erected in honor of Major Welford, of the Sixty-seventh regiment, and Captain Parker of the Seventy-fourth. These heroic soldiers were both natives of Halifax, and fell in the redoubtable storming of Sebastopol, in the Crimean war. The cost was defrayed by a public subscription raised by the citizens of Halifax. It is a remarkable proof, both of the local patriotism and of the loyalty which animate the colonies of Great Britain, even though at the distance of three thousand miles.

THE DUKE OF KENT'S RESIDENCE IN CANADA.

The Canadians have a very grateful and pleasant recollection of the Duke of Kent, the grandfather of the Prince of Wales, who endeared himself to the colonists by his amiable character and his love of justice, and the people of Halifax have a double masters of the past age. The cameo is an oval, slightly more than half an inch in length, and is the work of the best artist now living, a pupil of Michelini, who one or two years since left Rome for Paris at the call of the European branch of Tiffany & Co., and has since been exclusively employed by that house.

With the exception of being more nearly a full face, it is identical with a cameo of the President furnished by Tiffany & Co. some time since to Miss Lane, upon whose finger thousands of sovereigns at the White House receptions have observed the head of their chief steward, invariably awarding an earnest admiration to the beauty of the work, if not to its subject. The inscription, which is engraved within the drooping festoons of the flags, just below the cameo, reads as follows:

The Imperial Majesty,
THE TYCOON OF JAPAN,
From Tiffany & Co.,
Gold and Silver Workers,
New York,
June, 1860.

The reverse side of the medal, as we engrave it, bears the happily arranged national insignia of Japan and our own country. The whole design of the presentation is commendable for its simple elegance, while the introduction of the President's cameo, a feature unique in the history of the medallion art, imparts a more ambitious character than is usually the distinction of such testimonials.

VIEW OF THE RUINS OF THE DUKE OF KENT'S LODGE, WINDSOR ROAD, THREE MILES FROM THE CITY OF HALIFAX.—PHOTOGRAPHED BY W. CHASE, OF HALIFAX.

COUNTRY SEAT OF BARNET WILLIAMS, ESQ., AT BATH, LONG ISLAND—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR OWN ARTIST.

to his present estimable lady, and the two immediately commenced starting engagements under the sanction of the "Irish Boy" and "Yankee Gal," Mrs. Williams being specially an feet in Down East dialect and manners. As may be imagined, they were largely successful wherever they went.

In 1854 they started for California, receiving the adieux of hundreds of warm friends who accompanied them to the steamer; for at this time they had become prime favorites here. Upon their arrival in the auriferous region they were immediately engaged at the Metropolitan Theatre, where they made their appearance on the 13th of September in the same year. The receipts of the house on this occasion were three thousand and twenty-seven dollars, and the total receipts for the first seven nights fourteen thousand two hundred and thirty dollars. Their career throughout California was of the most cheerful and successful description, waking California up into almost a theatrical frenzy, and proving themselves by long odds the best stars who had ever walked the boards of the Golden State.

Upon their arrival home these triumphant artists made a short tour of a few of the principal cities, when the ever predominant roving spirit of Mr. Williams began to agitate him in favor of a trip to Europe. Accordingly in the latter part of 1855 they again bade farewell to friends, and left for the proud shores of Albion, where, as it turned out, they were admitted to receive a still greater ovation and a more signal success than had ever attended them before. The active, quick-witted, rich-brogued, sunning, rollicking style of Irishman which Mr. Williams represents, and the peculiar, quaint, volatile Yankee gal which Mrs. Williams portrays, being entirely novel to our British cousins, took the theatre-going public by storm, and after the first night placed them upon the top round of that famous ladder which everybody is endeavoring to climb. For three years and six months did this remarkable couple keep up a perfect furor in the three kingdoms. They went through England, Ireland and Scotland with more attendant enthusiasm than any theatrical stars ever did before. By royal command they performed four times before Queen Victoria, Prince Albert, the Prince of Wales and the rest of the royal family, a compliment never before paid to any American stars. By this tour Mr. and Mrs. Williams materially enhanced their material wealth, and in fact placed themselves out of the pale of poverty's peep.

Since their arrival this time they have shown themselves the most popular and attractive artists to be found in the United States. They are the original of the multitude of "Irish Boys" and "Yankee Gals" who are travelling about the country, and, like pure metal, they maintain the natural ring, while others have proved the counterfeit and worthless.

The few engagements which Mr. and Mrs. Williams have performed here since their return has only whetted the public appetite for more; and had not Mr. Williams's health given way early last spring, the long resting spell which they have taken this summer would have been devoted to visiting their friends in different parts of the country; as it is, they will open at the Water Garden in this city on or about the 15th of September. Mr. Williams keeps his town house in Nineteenth street in this city, and early last spring purchased the beautiful country residence which we illustrate in this number, and which he calls "Kathleen Villa." This delightful retreat is situated on the banks of Greatwood Bay, at Bath, Long Island, about one mile from Fort Hamilton, and for picturesque views of scenery, good comfort in summer months, it cannot be excelled anywhere in the suburbs of this city. Within an hour's drive from New York, looking out upon our magnificent Bay, where every ship that enters our port can be easily discerned—Conny Island and Sandy Hook lying in full view on the left, with splendid fishing ground within twenty rods of the breakfast table, clam beds leading to the shores, perfect turnpike roads for drives, we think our readers will agree with us that the "Irish Boy" and "Yankee Gal" are surrounded with luxuries enough for the most fastidious.

Mr. Williams had the good sense to purchase a place already improved, and not be obliged to wait a lifetime for everything to grow. He has, in consequence, upon the grounds of "Kathleen Villa," almost every fruit, berry and vegetable known in America. The walks and promenades are handsomely laid out, while here and there are little cottages, where the weary may rest and drink in the pure breezes direct from the ocean. Shade trees are abundant all over the park, while ever and anon the rambler comes suddenly upon the choicest kind of stationary, emerging as it were, from the luxuriant green everywhere surrounding it. The house is most roomy and comfortable; not so large as to make it hazy, it is yet commodious, and of course tastefully arranged, for here presides a domesticated queen whose every effort is directed to putting things "to rights," so as to make visitors "tir-bun." Here her merry laugh, ringing through the halls, almost suggests to you that "supper's ready, come right along, now."

Mr. Williams keeps his carriages, buggies, wagons, &c., and a fine stable of horses; and altogether, probably takes as much real pleasure in any other in America. He likes enjoyment, and he wisely indulges in it, while he has the power to do so.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S TOUR IN AMERICA.

Quebec, Canada East.

QUEBEC, the chief support and stronghold of military power in British North America, is situated on a rock-bound promontory formed by the junction of the rivers St. Lawrence and St. Charles, and was for a long time the capital of Canada. It is strongly fortified and garrisoned, completely commanding the navigation, and by military authorities is declared impregnable. The city is reputed to have derived its name from the words "Quel bec!" the exclamation of its hardy and adventurous discoverers when first its site broke on their astonished view.

Quebec has a grand and imposing though somewhat confused appearance, quite in keeping with the broken, bold magnificence of the surrounding country, which for natural grandeur is generally allowed to be unequalled. Whichever side is approached by water, the city has the appearance of a huddled and confused mass, from the nature of an abrupt declivity on which a portion of its bangs and skirts; nor is the impression thus obtained at all diminished on landing, or as the stranger winds his way to the Upper Town. This portion of the city is more open, regular, and better built than the other. It is situated within the gates and walls, and approached by a steep, serpentine street and carriage-way, with long and rugged flights of winding stairs, that dip into it here and there and lessen the distance of the pedestrian. On the eastern end and point stand the Grand Battery, and portions of the fort, barracks and towers; toward the north, the Esplanade; and west the Citadel, which crowns the heights. From Duchas Terrace, which overlooks the river and the Lower Town, from the Cape or from the ramparts, a most magnificent natural panorama and amphitheatre unfolds itself, presenting to the eye of the beholder a scene incomparably grand and charming—a view that never tires, and is always surrendered with regret.

In the Lower Town, the streets (excepting, as to length, Champlain, St. Peter and St. Paul, which run along between the bases of the cliffs and heights and the margin of the river) are narrow, short and irregular, by reason of their frequent intersections. Eastward from the city for some six or seven miles, to Montmorency Fall; westward to Cap Rouge, for some nine miles or more; by the St. Foye road, which runs along the acclivity that undulates and gently slopes into the valley of the St. Charles north of the promontory, with the many handsome villas and tasteful grounds, the drives and views are very beautiful and picturesque. The wharves, considering the trade and large number of ships and craft of every kind that frequent the port, are very limited in extent, besides being disconnected and unsuitable for business; but on the side bounded by the river St. Charles, ample shipping accommodation and great improvements may easily be made.

Quebec is well lighted with gas; and by means of the works lately constructed at great expense, most abundantly supplied with excellent water from Lake St. Charles, at an elevation of several hundred feet above the highest level of the town. A continuous stream of water can now, by its own pressure, be thrown over the highest buildings in the city, rendering next to impossible the recurrence of any very serious conflagration.

Quebec carries on a considerable trade with the surrounding country and with the ports and fisheries below; but her great business is ship-building and the lumber trade. She annually launches, rigged and equipped for sea, some thirty to forty vessels of varying tonnage (1,000 to 2,000 tons or more), and exports some 35,000,000 cubic feet of timber, besides ash, lumber, and other produce of the country; amounting together in value to somewhere about $5,500,000. From 1,100 to 1,500 vessels from an annually enter the port, not a few in ballast, it is true, but all of them with cargo outward bound.

Scourged by sundry terrible conflagrations (the last especially in 1815), Quebec seems to be, thank God, rising again out of its ashes, and improving greatly on the side comprising St. Robt suburbs, where the streets are being straightened and made longer and wider, and the old frame buildings fast giving place to those of brick and stone. In wealth and population, too, the city is increasing, slowly, it may be, in comparison to the West, but steadily, and it must from its position continue to do so, unless its people exhibit a lack of that energy which generally characterizes the Province. Throughout the Upper Town there are quite a number of objects interesting to the stranger; the Citadel, with its armory and magazines; the Roman Catholic Cathedral, with its many fine old paintings; the Episcopal, Presbyterian (Scottish), and other churches; the Esplanade; Governor's garden; the new Naval University, just erected at a cost of nearly $400,000,

&c.; but to youth and to the historical student, the most attractive and instructive of these all will be the one same and only humble monument which meekly commemorates the two young heroes, Wolfe and Montcalm, who—in life enemies of each other's fame, in mortal strife for duty—now lie entombed in the field of their own common glory.

Quebec returns three members to the Legislative Assembly. Distant from Montreal 170 miles, from Kingston 342 miles, from Toronto 503 miles, from New York 556 miles, from Boston 423 miles, from Portland 317, from Saguenay (below) 180 miles, and from Gaspe (in the Gulf) 496 miles. Population about 60,000.

The Ball at Halifax.

On the 24 of August the authorities of Halifax gave a ball to the Prince of the Province Building. This had been looked forward to with considerable interest, as affording the inhabitants an opportunity of showing their loyalty to the Queen, and their respect to the illustrious youth who had paid them a visit. As only one thousand invitations were issued, which was considerably less than the average, the great hall-room was crowded to great distinction. The appearance of the hall-room was very handsome, and was lavishly and with red and white cloth; and suitable and appropriate decorations, and the room was very comfortable and filled with the bright uniforms of military and naval officers, and ladies, whose eyes it toilet was worthy of the saloons of the great palaces of Europe.

At half-past six o'clock the Prince led Lady Malgrave to the ball-room, and his appearance created a great sensation among the guests, who were all very much interested in the young man and the public service present had filed past him in the ball-room. The Prince led off the ball in a quadrille, having selected the first of the quadrille to be the Prince's own daughter, who was dancing with up with infinite spirit until eleven o'clock, when the Prince led Lady Malgrave to refreshments. The dancing then resumed at half-past twelve, and the dancing of a splendid supper, when the toast of the Queen, Prince Consort and Prince of Wales were given and responded to with enthusiasm.

At four o'clock the Prince led Lady Malgrave to her carriage, and the ball was brought to a conclusion. There were in all thirty dances, which the Prince danced with his wife and guests many different dances. The gallant and gentlemanly and graceful bearing of the Prince was universally commented on, and was so fully appreciated.

The Prince's Reception at Fredericton.

The Prince left St. John's on the 4th of August for Fredericton; which is a port of entry of New Brunswick, capital of the Province of the same name. The Prince's reception at Fredericton was very handsome. The city has many fine buildings, among them Province Hall, Government House and several fine churches. The Prince was received on the pier at Fredericton by a large number of people, and was met on the pier by the Mayor and other officials. The Prince was met by the Mayor and other officials, and was met by the Mayor and other officials, and was met by the Mayor and other officials, and was met by the Mayor and other officials.

Residence of the Prince of Wales, St. John, N. B.

The house at which the Prince of Wales temporarily resided at St. John, N. B., is known as Mrs. Chapman's house. It is a very handsome house, and was the residence of the Prince of Wales. The Prince of Wales resided at St. John, N. B., for a few days, and was very much pleased with the reception.

CUSTAVUS A. RATZ.

We have the melancholy pleasure of presenting to the friends of this energetic and popular man a most admirable portrait, which will be highly prized by the friends of his many acquaintances. It is remembered that he was drowned while bathing near the Ocean House, Long Beach, on the morning of the 12th of August. His funeral took place from his late residence, the Philadelphia House, Beverly, and was largely attended by the clergy, the Society of the Sacred Regiment, and a vast number of private and public friends. The flags on the hotels were lowered to half-mast, and the bells were rung in honor of the deceased. The corpse, which retained a very natural appearance, was dressed in a blue cloth suit, with white vest, and reposed in a handsome casket, with heavy silver mountings. The casket was ornamented on the sides. The plate contained the following inscription:

CUSTAVUS A. RATZ. Born Aug. 18, 1860. Aged 17 years, 6 months and 2 days.

The coffin was placed in one of the largest rooms of the house, where the remains were deposited to view. At two o'clock Rev. Dr. Ogilby read the burial service in the Central Church, the bearers, who were dressed in sashes of black and white, stood around the coffin. At the conclusion of the religious services, a congregation of fourteen brother Masons, from Continental Lodge, No. 257, took the place of bearers, and by W. W. Conroy, F. M., recited the Masonic funeral service.

The coffin was placed in the house, and removed at five o'clock to the South Street Hequet and by Company A of the same regiment, of which deceased was a member, the remains were conveyed, performing Floyd's laythe. The corpse, which included a large number of his fellow-soldiers, proceeded through Grand Central Station to the South Street Ferry, where the remains were interred at Greenwood with the usual military honors, a volley being fired over his grave.

BREVITIES.

As freshman was once indulging in the very last act of bad manners, taking eggs raw and reading a newspaper. By some mischance he continued to read the newspaper, and the poor bird, as it were, went down his throat, and he very politely asserted, "By the powers, my friend, you spoke as if you ate it!"

An eccentric wealthy gentleman took a boat to a field upon his estate, upon which was a garden in the following order:

"I will give this field to any man who is contented with an applicant." "Yes, my friend."

"You told me, 'if you want with my field, I will give it to any man who is contented with an applicant. Now, if you are a contented man?" "Yes, my friend."

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S TOUR IN CANADA. Editorial Correspondence.

QUEBEC, August 22.

In honor of the arrival of the Prince of Wales the weather has accommodated itself as near as possible to represent the variable climate of England. Not a few of the well meant and loyal ovations have been spoiled of half their brilliancy by lowering skies, disingling rain and obscuring fogs. Yet, notwithstanding these unfavorable circumstances, the demonstrations of respect and love have everywhere been of the warmest and most enthusiastic character. The course of the Prince's tour since our last issue has been en route for Quebec. We then left him on his way to Charlottetown, Prince Edward's Island, where he arrived on board the Hero at noon on August the 9th. He was greeted by banding salutes from the men of war present—the Valencos, Cosack, Flying Fish, Ariadne and the French war steamer Pomona. The yards of all the ships were manned, flags flying, and the demonstrations on shore were of the most enthusiastic description.

The Prince of Wales at Charlottetown.

On landing he was received by the Governor, the Judges, the members of the Legislature, the Mayor and Corporation, and the heads of the Departments. There was a vast concourse of people who gave vent to their loyal feelings by loud shouts, waving of hats, handkerchiefs, &c.

On Sunday morning the Prince left the Government House in an open carriage to attend church. He was accompanied by Mrs. Mansur Sutton, the wife of the Governor, the Governor and the Duke of Newcastle. He held a levee the following day, which was largely attended, and was present at the opening of the new Park. He also was present at a grand ball given in his honor, and drew himself into the hearts of the many beautiful ladies present. His courteous affability and genuine kindness of heart endear him to all classes.

The Prince of Wales at Gaspé.

At Gaspé, Canada East, the Prince was met by Sir Edmund Walker Head, the Governor-General of the Canadas and the other Colonies of her Majesty in North America, together with the officers of the fleet.

At sunset on the 14th inst. the squadron met the Canadian Government steamers Lady Head and Victoria, with the Governor-General on board, and the vessels anchored for the night. The Governor went on board the Hero on Monday morning, and the squadron proceeded into Gaspé basin. While passing a fishing village, which fired a salute, the Hero grounded on a spit, but was got off with little delay. A deputation came off, headed by the Sheriff, and presented an address, welcoming the Prince, and requesting a free port to be established there to be called Fort Albert. The Prince replied that he felt gratified for their kind wishes, but the change of name depended on the local authorities. It is understood the change will be made.

Departure for Quebec.

The Canadian Ministers then went aboard the Prince's ship, and were presented. The squadron then got under weigh and left Gaspé Bay, and after some hours' sailing, during which time it encountered a heavy fog, arrived off the mouth of the Saguenay River about eight a. m. of the 15th inst. The Prince then went on the Victoria and proceeded up the Saguenay, accompanied by the little steamer Tadoussac, the fleet remaining outside. The day was very showery and cold, but the Prince and party admired the wild grandeur of the scenery very much. He went up forty-five miles, passed Cape Cheury and returned, reaching the Hero about midnight. Among the novel sights was the lake steamer Maguat, whose two tiers of cabins above deck excited surprise among the Prince's party.

On Thursday, although a cold and unpleasant day, the Prince went fishing in the Saguenay, and, after this sport, which was, he believes, particularly good, he returned to the fleet and started on the following day for Quebec.

The Prince of Wales caught by the Tide while Fishing in the St. Marguerite River, near the junction of the Saguenay.

Among the amusing incidents of the Prince's visit to America we must not miss his fishing party in the St. Marguerite. Having heard much of the funny sport, his Royal Highness formed a party of five to spend a day in that romantic locality. In their pursuit of the sport the Prince got separated from the rest. Tempted by a jutting rock the Prince got to the end of it and drawing his line seaward with a vigorous exertion of his W.P. on the seven. But the tide not being quite ebbing that very possibly will be made to carry him away captive to instruct the Old World.

The Prince's Rooms.

The furniture in the Prince's rooms is very gorgeous, the royal arms, with those of Canada, being carved in the solid wood. This was made expressly for the occasion, by Mr. W. Drum, of Quebec, who is much celebrated for the quality and style of his manufactures.

The carpet in the Prince's reception room was procured from London in twenty-two days from the time the order was despatched from Quebec. This magnificent specimen of the loom, and also the rest of the carpets, were supplied by Messrs. H. & M. Benjamin, of this city. On the opposite side of the hall to the Prince's reception chamber, is the Assembly Room. This is now fitted up as a handsome dining-room, and is adorned by a picture of Queen Victoria, by Winterhalter. There are also some portraits of the Speakers. The table is forty feet long and thirteen feet wide, quite spacious enough to afford the entrees every opportunity to supply their taste in having a royal banquet.

My time will not admit a more elaborate description, and I must, therefore, content myself by saying, that the whole arrangements reflect the greatest credit on those who have and the management.

Arrangements of the City.

The triumphal arches that have erected are very substantial and tasty, being covered with evergreens and adorned with mottoes. These are also hung with colored lamps, which give them a beautiful appearance. Several of these arches are at the junction of cross streets, and are made in the form of towers, presenting a large gateway on each of the four sides. The Mechanics' Arch deserves particular notice. It is in the form of a Gothic archway, presenting a front on each of four streets; it is very lofty. Above the arch is a chamber or bowyer in the evergreens, on the platform of which a steam engine and printing press have been put up. What adds to the interest of this is the fact that these are for the purpose of printing the programmes of the reception, which are to be distributed gratuitously to the populace as they pass this arch. This beautiful and most appropriate feature in the ceremony was designed by James Gouda, alphabuilder of Quebec.

I have had the pleasure of inspecting the Prince of Wales's stall of horses. It was a most interesting sight, equally attractive to the populace as they pass this arch. The selection of these was entrusted to Dr. Kirwan, of this city, the celebrated horse-dancer, and he has well employed the two months he has devoted to his pursuit, for he has selected thirty of the finest horses ever gathered together in one stable on this continent. Amongst them is a famous chestnut horse, six years old, by Glencoe, half-brother to Nicholas I. and Charleston, which were taken to England, also a celebrated chestnut mare, named Whittier, by Charleston, dam Sloopy Maggie, by Glencoe; also the splendid bay horse, well-known on the turf as Agitator, also a beautiful bay mare, La Belle, and the matchless bay horse Pilot; but the horse which attracted the most attention was a bay mare named Lady Franklin, intended for the special use of the Prince,

THE RETURN OF THE CHICAGO ZOUAVES.

The return of this well-known military organization, which left Chicago on the 24 of July for an extended tour in the East, where their perfection in the military arts have elicited for them the warmest encomiums both from the regular and volunteer forces of their brethren in arms, was looked for with much anxiety in their native city. The hour of arrival was fifteen minutes past seven, but by an accident on the Chicago, Alton and St. Louis Railroad they were detained for two hours near Wilmington. About five o'clock the booming of cannon was heard and the assembling commenced. The military and civic organizations, firemen, barbers, Douglas Loyalists, Lincoln Wide-Awakes, city officers and private citizens assembled on Dearborn Park, and the spectacle presented was grand and imposing. The procession was formed and marched under command of Col. J. B. F. Russell, chief marshal of the occasion, to the depot, to meet the Zouaves. About ten o'clock the signal guns were heard which told that the train was entering the city. Clark, Washington, Michigan avenues and Lake street, through which the procession passed, were a dense mass of humanity, cheering and waving handkerchiefs. Several hotels, stores and Garrett Block, occupied as the Zouaves' Armory, were finely illuminated and decorated with flags and streamers. From almost every building flights of Roman candles could be seen, and at many corners bonfires were burning.

At no point in the city was the spectacle more imposing than where the procession passed the Tremont House on Lake street, on their way to the Wigwam. Every window and balcony were crowded with ladies and gentlemen anxious to witness the return of the valiant Zouaves. About eight o'clock the great Wigwam was thrown open and the galleries were soon filled. At eleven o'clock the procession entered. The military took the stage, leaving the centre for the Zouave Cadets and the Light Guard Band, in which position they were greeted with deafening cheers and waving of white handkerchiefs from the galleries, after which Mayor Wentworth stepped forward and made a brief and appropriate speech, to which Captain Ellsworth responded, acknowledging in behalf of his company, the honors paid them in this welcome. After the reception ceremonies they were escorted to the Briggs House, to partake of a supper, by invitation of the proprietor of the house. Chicago may well be proud of her young Zouaves.

They have won laurels which will ever crown their brows in every city and town they have visited. They have acquired themselves with much honor, and were received with such demonstrations of rejoicing have never before been witnessed in Chicago.

THE ECLIPSE IN SPAIN.

Ms. E. J. LOWE sends to the London Times an account of his observations during the eclipse in Spain. Referring to the general effect on the landscape, he writes: "Before totality commenced the colors in the sky and on the hills were magnificent beyond all description; the clear sky in N. assumed a deep indigo color, while in W the horizon was pitch-black (like night), in E the clear sky was very pale blue, with orange and red like sunrise, and the hills in S. were very red; on the shadow enveloping across the deep blue in N. changed like magic to pale sunrise tints of orange and red, while the sunrise appearance in E had changed to indigo. The colors increased in brilliancy near the horizon; overhead the sky was indigo. The some white horses at a little distance were brought nearer, and assumed a warm yellow tint, the darkness was great; thermometer could not be read. The countenances of men were of a livid pink. The Spaniards lay down, and their children screamed with fear; fowls hastened to roost, ducks clustered together, pigeons dashed against the sides of the houses, and flowers closed. I am indebted to Mr. Thompson, master of her Majesty's ship Albatross, for the following telescopic observations: Totality commenced at 8h. 55m. 55s., when prominences were visible, one on the west and two on the east, of a bright lurid lake color, followed by the corona shooting out on the east of the sun in two forked tongues. The color of the corona was white, daring outwardly. Towards the end of totality another prominence was noticed on the west side of the sun, of the same color as those first seen, and below this a most beautiful collection, as of golden beads closely strung together, arose out, extending to the lowest part of the western limit of the sun. The stars numbered seven and eight in Mr. Hind's map were distinctly visible in the telescope. The cusps of the sun were rounded before and after totality, and the prominences were livid and well defined. A very considerable variation of the compass took place during the eclipse."

THE ZOUAVES IN LONDON.

We have just had the Zouaves in New York. Every reader of Frank Leslie's has seen them at his own eye, and their Les Fen has had a laugh at them at his own eye, and their Les Fen therefore inform the public that the Zouaves are now in London, and that they have carried everything there by storm just as though it had only been a Malakoff. We are not joking. At the Prince's Theatre a party of the famous French Zouaves, who were in the Crimea, are now performing some of those pleasant vaudeville which had a little cheerfulness on the horrors of that memorable campaign of two winters.

It will be remembered that to white away the tedium and calamity of the siege of Sebastopol, a few of the famous regiment called, par excellence, the Zouaves, gave theatrical representations, which were much admired at the time. Some of these amateurs displayed so much talent, and were so much admired, that they formed them into a Dramatic Club, and are as much the rage of the people there as the Chicago Zouaves were lately in Gotham.

The roughest of the Zouaves perform the female parts, and are very excellent bogus ladies. An anecdote is related of these dramatic Zouaves which is very characteristic. During one of their drum beat to arms, and the Zouave actors, without waiting to change their dress, seized their arms and dashed into the combat. It was strange sight to see a charge led by a Zouave dressed as a fashionable lady, and an old man dressed as a de mode Louis Quatorze, rallying the heroic soldiers.

THE ROMANCE OF MURDER.

The Cleveland Princedor gives the arrest of an old gang of counterfeiters, who have for many years defied all the usual arts of detection. Among these men are a well-known and highly respectable physician, and a man who forty years ago was quite as notorious as Hlick the pirate, although at the time he did not meet his desert. Forty years ago a remarkably cold-blooded murder was perpetrated in the State of Vermont. The murdered man was a brother-in-law of Boorn, named Cahley, and circumstances pointed to Boorn and his brother as the guilty parties. They were tried, convicted and sentenced to be hung. The execution day came and huge crowds poured into the village to see the murderers swing. They ascended the scaffold, and the noose was placed around their necks, when the supposed dead man appeared in the crowd! The Boorns were set free just as they reached death's door, and immediately fled the State. James Boorn, now nearly seventy years old, confessed to Mr. Hackett, of Boston, that he and his brother did murder Cahley—the person who appeared before the gallows being a man from New Jersey who bore a striking resemblance to the deceased, and who was expressly hired to play the villainous part. The affair created a great excitement at the time throughout New England, and lawyers retained for the defense in desperate murder cases have ever since quoted the Boorn case for the benefit of their clients.

It is believed—indeed Boorn collected so much—that the hard-end wretch proposed to cut further deep his assets in blood by murdering Mr. Doolittle, of Boston, who has money which the gang hunted for.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Our friends, agents and advertisers are hereby informed that Dr. Augustus Rawlings is no longer connected in any way with FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER. To correct a mistake which has obtained a wide circulation, we would state that only on three occasions has Dr. Rawlings been depicted as our Special Correspondent, his real position being that of Advertising Agent upon commission.

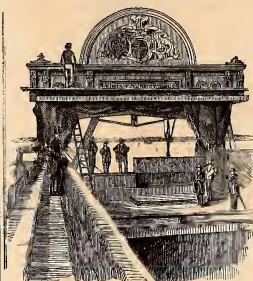

We make this statement with no desire to injure that gentleman, but simply to correct a misunderstanding which has caused considerable confusion. As there are several of the Rawlings family, we wish to state that no person bearing that name is in any way connected with this paper.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S TOUR IN AMERICA.

Editorial Correspondence.

MONROE, August 25th, 1860.

I CLOSED my last letter with a description of the levee held by the Prince of Wales at the Parliament House, Quebec. This brilliant affair ended, the Prince took advantage of the fine weather to visit the Falls of Montmorenci. On the line of route a large number of beautiful arches with appropriate sentiments were erected, through which the Prince and suite passed, amidst the loud cheering of the assembled people. It is needless to say that the Prince was delighted with the Falls, for any one who could gaze unmoved upon the exquisite picture they present must be more or less than human. The Prince returned to his residence by seven P. M., and that evening held a state dinner.

The 22nd was an anxious busy day in Quebec. The shops were crowded with ladies and gentlemen completing their purchases in anticipation of the grand balls to be given that evening. Never before were the streets so thronged, never before was so lively an excitement felt in the good city of Quebec. Three balls were to be given on that evening. One given to the Prince by the city, another by the citizens, and a third by the Orange Association. Each had its special class of visitors, and I doubt if any teatime entertainments ever went off more to the satisfaction and delight of all concerned.

The ball to the Prince was a brilliant affair. He arrived with the Duke of Newcastle at ten o'clock, and his appearance caused a perceptible fluttering among the brilliant throng. The room was beautifully decorated and the music excellent. The Prince opened the ball with Madame Langevin and Mrs. Justice Curran vis-à-vis. The Prince wore his usual uniform. Miss Irvine, daughter of Colonel Irvine, was the Prince's second partner for a walk.

One of those laughable incidents which will occur in spite of all efforts to the contrary signalized the ball. After supper the Prince, while waiting with Madame Cartier, the wife of the Canadian Premier, slipped and nearly dragged his fair partner down with him. He, however, recovered his feet immediately, and the only result of the contre temps was a good-astored laugh. The Prince danced twice in the evening, and left the hall at half-past nine on Wednesday morning.

The Prince visited the Laval Roman Catholic University on Wednesday the 22d instant. A gorgeous throng had been excited for his use, and as he received the address which was read by Bishop Fies, the Prince responded that the fact of his addressing them as "Gentlemen," instead of "My Lords," gave great offence. From the University the Prince drove to the Uraline Convent, which has never been opened to male visitors since the death of its grandfather, the Duke of Orleans. The fact of his addressing the convent, all males but those of royal birth are excluded.

In the large room a throne was erected, and the Prince was welcomed by sixty youths, who sang a song of welcome, and at each mention of the Prince's or the Queen's name made loud hurrahs. The effect was most grand and novel.

The Ladies presented the address to the Prince, who read a brief reply, thanking them for their kindness, and concluding "Your exertions in the course of education will be known, and I trust may long continue to exert a beneficial influence upon the population of this interesting country." The Prince was escorted through the convent, and a stroll said to be to the Mincium was exhibited to him.

The Prince has luxuriated here in all the good things of the city, which, under the management of the New York Hotel, could hardly be surpassed in any part of the world—so at least say the royal party. He has overcome serious indigestion, and he has but barely the Prince and his entourage the lower man to endure the fatigue which ensue from the endless round of receptions, balls, and shows, above all sports.

It is hardly possible to give an idea in a hasty letter of the brilliancy of the Prince's receptions here: the throng of visitors, the magnificent and gorgeous decorations, the brilliant illuminations, the arches, the decorations, form a picture which, for animation, I have rarely seen equalled, and never surpassed. Quebec has never known so large a throng of royal and liberal hospitalities as has extended to the Prince of Wales.

On the occasion of the Prince's visit to Quebec on Saturday the 19th instant, almost without an exception, illuminated those residences in the most brilliant and extravagant manner. Prominent amongst the private decorators was Mr. Russell of the Hotel de Ville, who has decorated his house in the most elaborate representation in glass of the cap and feathers of His Royal Highness, which was beautifully displayed by hundreds of gold and silver ornaments as well as the most valuable and glitter like a collection of precious stones. The motto, "Ich Dirig," and the inscription, "Honor to the Prince," were also brilliantly illuminated. There were several other magnificent transparencies exhibited at the various windows of the hotel. The whole formed one of the most beautiful and pleasing sights in the city, and caused great numbers of the curious to stop up the street in front of the building while they gazed their fill of the beautiful sight at the display.

Mr. Russell, the proprietor of the house, is an old Vermont, who went to Canada seventeen years since, during which entire time he has catered with eminent success to the tastes and wishes of the travelling public. He has a large staff of waiters, and a large number to assist in the service. He has a select staff of about 50 members of the press, which was repeated on Sunday evening the 19th. There were present Mr. Howard, of the New York Tribune, Mr. Fisk, of the New York Herald, Mr. Wood, of the London Times, and several other who were men escape us at present. All had a good dinner and a good time, and returned most heartily with a long and a happy one to our worthy host and generous entertainer.

The time of departure having arrived, the Prince with his suite left the Falls House at 11 o'clock on the 20th inst. He was attended by the Chamberlain Marshal Ward-Cromartie, members of the Government, National Congress and a squad of honor, who escorted the Prince to the Kingston, which had been specially fitted up. The steamer left at two o'clock under a salute from a man-of-war, and the yards were manned by the troops, the soldiers and crowd gave a long and a happy one to our worthy host and generous entertainer.

and did not, in our opinion, merit or dispose of the weight of testimony in support of the charges.

The Commission will meet again after the hot weather, when the case will be reopened. We shall watch it closely, for a great wrong has been done, and the blame and shame must be fixed upon the right parties. It is needless to say that whatever is brought to light will be made public. It is also to be noted that the public want it whatever it may cost. New York should have her park, but there is no reason why millions should be wasted in carrying out the idle notions conceived in pitiable ignorance of incomprehensible but well-ascertained officials. If the press does its duty, the affairs of the Central Park may yet be managed by practical men in the several departments.

The "Season" Commencing in New York.

The cold winds which spring up during the last days of August, wash thousands of the summer birds of passage back to our city. About the same time operatic manifestations occupy columns of the newspapers; millions know their interests, their fascinations, and small card from theatrical managers tell of the coming campaign by calling their companies together. As it should be, music leads the coming march of amusements, and Ullman and Strakosch, by their immense patronage of the arts, their promises and their philosophy, have done more to fit humbler and penitent as we read the learned and kind homily which they read to us for our moral improvement and detestation in the onward march of civilization. They are not only great impresarios, but great moral teachers.

When we reviewed somewhat from the semi-dramatic standpoint, the actual result of reading the operatic advertisement, we came to the conclusion that the coming season was really to be most brilliant, that it would be the best we have yet seen, and an amusement which could not fail to satisfy the most exacting of our fastidious public.

One point in the new programme will undoubtedly give satisfaction to every eye, we allude to the magnificent opera, Adina, at the Metropolitan. It was a masterly stroke of policy; it united opposing elements and secured to the public the strength and influence of both parties. It is certain that the lessees of the Academy will always give us the best of the season, for the reason that the wealthy classes are not so generally to be prepared for the season in supporting it. It may be attacked from without, liberal opposition may be made at one or the other of the theatres, but the result of any such campaign will be a triumph to witchee, but a positive triumph to us both. Mr. Mackenzie is a man of an impressive so cunning of force, so fertile in resources, that no rival management can ignore his strength. Ullman and Strakosch have, therefore, in making a treaty of peace and of union, effected the best result possible. He has secured the best of the season, and we may look for the happiest results of the coming campaign.

The fall campaign opens on Monday evening, September 3d, with "Le Roi et le Fermier" at the Metropolitan, and "Adina" at the Patti, will appear, supported by Brignoli and Amadio. During the progress of the season the following artists are promised in their most popular roles: Moshini, Leo Fabbi, Adelaide Cortesi, Pauline Colson, Patti Grandjean, and Signor Mucchi, Ermak, Signor Verdi, and so on. To these must be added the great troupe, Tambrini, and the great cast, Carl Forest.

With such an unparalleled array of talent, if the coming season at the Academy of Music is not a decided pecuniary success it will be a disgrace to the New York public.

Public Libraries.

Were all the "march of mind" and progress of intellectual culture in this country, it is remarkable that there is really so little appreciation of the true value of public libraries as a means of education. Much rejoicing there certainly is from time to time in all American towns and cities over their respective collections of books, and these collections are generally well cared for, and in very much the same spirit. People are proud of having a public library—they have none other but not ashamed—if blessed with the article they are just as much better off. It is all very well, but it is not enough. It is not enough to have a public library as something which is the interest of all to uphold, and which, as regards the dissemination of intelligence, culture and refinement, pays a higher per centage than any other investment—how in schools, hospitals and churches not excepted.

It is certainly to be desired that all persons in a community should be as well informed and as highly cultivated as it is possible for them to be. The humblest laborer, the poorest girl may as well be as well informed and as highly cultivated as it is possible for them to be. The humblest laborer, the poorest girl may as well be as well informed and as highly cultivated as it is possible for them to be. The humblest laborer, the poorest girl may as well be as well informed and as highly cultivated as it is possible for them to be.

A library cannot be said to be virtually alive for the public, and least of all for the American public, unless its books can be borrowed and taken home. If secured by a deposit, to be returned when the book is brought back, all possibility of loss is obviated. The proportion of people in a city who can pass any such a plan is small. It is purchased in almost all cases. Very good libraries move generally open to every one, people would probably patronize them better.

was acknowledged by loud and continued cheering, while the organ and the bands played, and the Ontario Society sang "God save the Queen." An address was made to his Royal Highness by the Governor-General, Sir Edmund Head, asking him to inaugurate the Exhibition. The Prince, in a clear and animated tone, made the following reply:

"Most readily I consent to the request you have made, a request the more agreeable because it is conveyed to me by my kind friends your excellent Governor-General. I am not ignorant of the high position obtained by Canada in the great Exhibition of 1851, which was opened under the happy auspices of the Queen and the Prince Consort, and as carrying out the design of that memorable undertaking, the smaller, but to Canada most interesting collection of the products of your land, and of works of art and industry, has my sympathy, and claims my best wishes for its success. I hope and believe it will realize all the objects for which it has been designed."

The Exhibition was then declared open, and the Prince passed round the building and examined the display. The Exhibition is by no means complete, but considering the hurried manner in which the articles were brought together it was creditable alike to the industry and energy of the people. The same commendation must be awarded to the building. The Prince left the Crystal Palace amidst the cheers of the people, while the vocal and instrumental forces gave out the grand and glorious Hallelujah Chorus, and proceeded to the depot of the Grand Trunk Railroad. A vast crowd was assembled to witness the

Laying the Corner Stone of the Victoria Bridge.

It is well known that the principal object of His Royal Highness was to inaugurate the Victoria Bridge, which stretches its vast length across the river St. Lawrence, connecting, so to speak, the Great West with the shores of the Atlantic Ocean. The bridge has been in actual use for some months, and the railway cars of the Grand Trunk have gone as safely over it before as they have since His Royal Highness formally pronounced it open; but a work of such magnitude was deserving of an extraordinary notice, and so it was that Queen Victoria, who could not come herself, sent over Albert Edward, her first-born boy, that he might take her place. All that was needed was the

INAUGURATION OF THE PERRY STATUE IN CLEVELAND, OHIO.

For several months past the inauguration of the Perry monument on the 10th September has been the subject of conversation, not only in Cleveland and the West, but in other parts of the Union. The interest in the subject is universal, for when America honors the high deeds of her glorious sons, every American heart throbs a proud response to the occasion.

The name of Oliver Hazard Perry is one honored in the annals of our country. He is one of the many brave men whose devotion to the land of his birth was the one ruling principle of his life. Duty with him was paramount, and in its execution he recognized no difficulties, acknowledged no impossibilities. Whatever was necessary had to be done, at whatever cost and whatever risk, life being only one of the risks to be encountered, and not a consideration to bar the way to achievement. Qualities so innately great were early recognized, and attracted attention in those quarters where they could be best tested and used.

The glorious little State of Rhode Island claims the honor of his birth, Oliver Hazard Perry having been born in South Kingstown on the 23d August, 1755. For six generations his family had been born Americans. Young Oliver early followed the profession of his father, Captain Christopher R. Perry, who was a seaman of much repute, and won honor in the Revolutionary war, and almost achieved a martyrdom in the Jersey prison ships. Oliver served as a midshipman on board the man-of-war General Greene, of which his father was commander in 1799. While in this ship he was present at the attack on Jacmel. Afterwards, while on the John Adams, he went on the expedition after the Algerine pirates. From the time of his return in 1805 until 1812 he was employed in building gunboats and in the Coast Guard Service. But Perry thirsted for active service, and made constant and strenuous efforts to get appointed. His prayers were at last granted, and in February, 1813, he was

A man, William Valent, was universally popular in art circles in this city. Amiable, kind-hearted and modest to a degree almost peculiar, he was ever ready to assist a student or new man into life.

The arrangements made in Cleveland, Ohio, for the inauguration of the Perry statue on the 10th of September are of the most extensive description. It will certainly be the greatest exhibition that ever took place in the West.

The collection of the day will terminate with a GRAND COCK BATTLE ON LAKE ERIE.

General J. W. Fitch, dress Medalist.

The following items from the Cleveland Herald indicate how widely the excitement has spread:

The SHIRAZ NAUTICAL.

We learn from authoritative sources that the arrangements for the naval battle on the 10th have been thoroughly made. Here that eminent vessels have volunteered for the service, the men, cannon, small arms and other necessities have all been provided.

Of those who fought so bravely and well on board the Lawrence under the command of the late Commodore Perry, one is Our is Dr. Usher Furman, the surgeon, who is already known to very many of our citizens, and who is deservedly honored in his own State of Ohio.

A letter from Commodore Perry's old surgeon, Dr. Furman, to the members of the Middle Island Legislature would visit this city on the 10th of September.

proprietor having been made in Rhode Island, for the express, our city will be put to change on their account.

The New York Masons Coming.

The Buffalo Bazaar bears authoritatively that the stonemasons of New York are coming to our city on the 10th of September.

The Children of Commodore Perry.

Among the honored guests of the City at the inauguration of the Perry statue will be the children of the late Commodore Perry, Mr. O. H. Perry, of Boston, and the only daughter, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Vinton, of Iroquois, New York.

Company D, of Buffalo.

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser says that Company D, of that city, one of the "crack companies" of New York State, will be here on the 10th.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S TOUR IN AMERICA.

Special Correspondence.

OTTAWA, C.W.

The remaining days which the Prince of Wales spent in Montreal were not marked by any particular event of great interest or importance. The day after his arrival he was met by the Mayor, who then he turned the People's Hall, which was given a one-dollar head in honor of the Prince.

And almost everywhere the evening was the best of the tour. The Prince's visit to the evening was the best of the tour. The Prince's visit to the evening was the best of the tour.

A very peculiar incident occurred. An old man named P-Don, who had been a soldier in the British army, and who had been a soldier in the British army, and who had been a soldier in the British army.

It rained on the morning day for the departure of the Prince for Montreal. But in spite of the weather he left by a special train, and he was accompanied by the Mayor and the Governor.

The Prince was accompanied by a procession to the City Hall, and he was met by the Mayor and the Governor. The Prince was accompanied by a procession to the City Hall, and he was met by the Mayor and the Governor.

The Prince had the foundation-stone of the new Parliament Building on Saturday morning, the 1st September. He left his hotel, the Victoria, at eleven o'clock, A. M., and proceeded to the site of the building.

Rev. Dr. Anderson, Chaplain of the Legislative Council, read up a prayer, when the Prince and suite, the Governor and the Mayor, and the Mayor and the Mayor, and the Mayor and the Mayor.

The stone is of beautiful white Canadian marble, with the simple inscription: "The Prince of Wales, 1860." The stone is of beautiful white Canadian marble, with the simple inscription: "The Prince of Wales, 1860."

After the close of the ceremonies the new laid foundation stone was laid, and the Prince and suite, the Governor and the Mayor, and the Mayor and the Mayor.

CALAMITY ON LAKE MICHIGAN.—LOSS OF THE LADY ELGIN AND THREE HUNDRED SOULS.

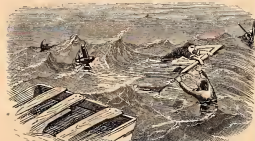

We are again called on to record and regret one of those terrible disaster incidents to travel, and which, owing to the vast increase of the "transit business" of late years, frequently assume such formidable proportions. The calamity to which we refer was caused by the sinking on Lake Michigan, on the 8th inst., of the steamer Lady Elgin, by which at least three hundred passengers, on September, 1857, nothing of the kind has occurred to be compared to this in magnitude.

STEINWAY AND SON'S NEW PIANO-FORTE MANUFACTORY, SITUATED ON THE FOURTH AVENUE, BETWEEN 52ND AND 53RD STREETS, NEW YORK.

OPENING OF STEINWAY & SON'S NEW PIANO-FORTE MANUFACTORY.

FIFTEEN years ago the opening of a manufactory so magnificent in its proportions and so perfect in all its details would have created an extraordinary curiosity. Then it would have formed the topic of gossip for weeks before and after the inauguration, but we live in an age now when the railroads and steamboats slaughter their hundreds at a time without remark, when to hob-nob with princes is of daily occurrence, and when a twenty-seven thousand ton steamer leaves our harbor without causing a shiver of the shoulders. We have become a very mature people, and have almost ceased to wonder. Still the opening of so vast a piano factory is a subject too important, in a mercantile point of view, to be passed over with a mere comment.

We have had a long acquaintance with the Messrs. Steinway, and have been familiar with their career from their beginning in America. It has been a career of wonderful success, carved out by intelligent perseverance and unflinching industry.

The old gentleman was a piano-maker in Brunswick, Germany, whose manufacturing means far exceeded the demand for his wares. They are a slow people over there, and one piano is enough for a town. The Steinways had beard of America, and curious to know if a new field could not be opened wide enough for their ambition, the eldest son Charles was sent as envoy to examine the localities, the institutions and manufactures, and report upon the chances. His report will be understood, when the magnitude of the whole family is mentioned as the result. Arriving in 1849 the chances of the future were calmly reviewed, and it was determined that the capital which they brought should remain untouched, and that father and son should enter the various factories as journeymen, learn thoroughly their several branches, for all were piano-makers, after the American system, and thus study out the improvements of the New World and engraft them upon the experience of the Old-—denning rightly, that a combination of the two would certainly produce pianofortes that would stand the test of all competition. So to journeymen's work they went, laboriously gaining that experience which is now to them of value beyond all calculation. After thus serving a new apprenticeship of three years they commenced themselves to manufacture.

With that prudence which distinguished all their movements, they began in a small way in a back room in Varick street, making hardly one piano a week. But few as their pianos were, they were good, exhibiting some idiosyncrasies which belonged to the Steinway firm, and were not found in any other pianos. The instruments very soon attracted the attention of the professors, and a good word dropped here and there in society resulted in purchasers flocking there out, and their business grew too large for their circumscribed premises. By-and-bye we find them in Walker street (where their warehouses still are), their reputation already spreading and their one piano a week growing into three

EDWIN FORREST.

This celebrated actor, the pride of the American stage, was born at Philadelphia, on March 1, 1806. From his earliest years he had evinced a strong partiality for the stage, and as early as his twelfth year performed female parts in the old South Street Theatre, Philadelphia.

In 1831 he made his first debut as a leading character, by performing Norval at the Tivoli Gardens. On the 24th November, 1830, Mr. Forrest challenged the verdict of the public by appearing in the same character at the Walnut Street Theatre. His success was unequivocal. The sterling vigor of his acting, so utterly at war with the traditional style, struck the public taste, and it was admitted that we had at last produced an American actor—one who, right or wrong, would think and act for himself, who would not take his Hamlet's second-hand from Booth, Young, Macready or Kemble, but gave his own version as it seemed to him. The result was a rendering full of great force, and great faults; but the stamp of an original mind was in everything, and common sense was right, the young and ambitious actor went ahead, the Garibaldi of the Drama.

The next year he accompanied Messrs. Jones and Collins, the managers of several Western theatres, and performed in various places, with great applause and quadrupled profit. This was excellent practice for maturing his style, and when he returned to the North, some years afterwards, he played a most brilliant engagement at the Albany Theatre, N. Y., then under the management of Mr. Gilbert.

In the summer of 1836, he visited his native city, and played a short engagement. He was received with acclamation, and hailed as the most promising young actor on the stage.

His next engagement was in New York, where he played Othello, for the benefit of Mr. Woodhull, the performance of this masterpiece of Shakespeare's dramatic skill stamped him as the first of American Tragedians, and from this minute his fortune and fame were secured.

In 1834 he visited Europe, and was received with great cordiality and applause by the English. On his return he played several engagements in this country, and invariably with the most unbounded success. Wealth and fame—which come so slowly to other men—flowed to him as to a fountain head, and crowned him as the great American Tragedian. Tempted by the success of his first English trip, Mr. Forrest paid a second visit in 1837, and in the course of his tour met with Miss Catherine Siskian, the daughter of the celebrated Scotch vocalist. Returning in 1838, he spent the next six years in the pursuit of his profession, and in the enjoyment of all that can make life desirable. In an evil hour he was tempted to visit England once more, and early in 1844, in company with his wife, he arrived in London.

But his reputation had made him enemies, and a little ebullience, kindled by John Forster, the dramatic critic of the London Standard, and the evens tongue of Macready, wafted a poisonous war upon him, which the impulsive Forrest was unable to brook. After an absence of two years he returned to America, vowing never again to leave the land of his birth, and the cradle of his fame.

In May 1846, the deplorable riot at the Astor Opera House occurred, which resulted in the loss of so many valuable lives. But we are not here reviewing the personal quarrels of our great tragedian, but his historic career, and we shall therefore dismiss that painful event in his life, by observing that the consequences were as much attributable to the malice of the Forster esterie in London as to the indignant partialism of Mr. Forrest's friends. That this untoward circumstance has been the cause of great sorrow to Mr. Forrest there can be no question, since it embittered his domestic life.

After that catastrophe he played numerous engagements in our reading cities, and was universally received with the most heartfelt admiration and applause. His last engagement was at the Broadway Theatre about four years ago.

He has now commenced his farewell engagement at Niblo's, where he is highly received by his hosts of friends more like a popular idol than a great actor.

We must not forget to mention a very prominent feature in our great tragedian's career—and that is, the liberal patronage he has extended to our native dramatists. He has not followed the example of too many successful actors, and contented himself by appropriating English plays, but he has encouraged our young authors to try that Ulysses bow of literature, a good play. He also, instead of confining himself to one writer, threw the field open, and stimulated by his liberal offers the whole dramatic mind of the United States. This method is in striking contrast to the plan pursued by the majority of our managers. When they purchase a new play it is rather as a sop to Cerberus than a tribute to native genius. What more admirable method of securing the theatrical critic of a powerful paper than to pay a few hundred dollars for a bad translation from the French, some stilted tragedy, or some rapid burlesque. Thus we have, as we have said before, Mr. Forrest's course of action; he called upon the dramatic genius of his native land, and, would he as Jupiter did Decca, in a golden shower. We owe to him, therefore some very graphic utterances of the Dramatic Muse. Dr. Bird, Mayor Council, and others were encouraged by these generous offers to enrich our literature with good acting plays. We must not, however, judge the full results of this by its actual proceeds, for it is impossible to tell the vitality he has breathed into our dormant drama by his liberal patronage. Not many years ago he paid a thousand dollars for a new tragedy called "Mahomed," and made it a present to his friend Mr. West. These sacrifices which drew thousands for they are not common in his profession. Mr. Forrest has the merit of being the first American who introduced the vice into Kentucky, having many years ago purchased a large tract in that State for the culture of the grape. This vice

Residence of G. Wright, Esq. La Hot l'Chapelle Catholic Church. Government Hill, the St. Joseph of Parliament Buildings are in progress of construction.—FROM A SKETCH BY ROBERT J. CHERRY.

OTTAWA CITY,

The Seat of Government of the Canadian Provinces.

THE selection of Ottawa—formerly called Bytown, after Colonel By, of the Royal Engineers, who designed the Rideau Canal—as the seat of the Provincial Government of Canada, was a judicious and will become a popular movement. It is a central point, and accessible from all portions of Canada. Ottawa now contains fifteen thousand inhabitants, although thirty years since the first tree was cut down on the site of the new Parliament House now in the course of erection. The following graphic description from the World depicts the appearance of the city and its surroundings:

buildings, embracing, as it does, in one coup d'œil, the magnificent fall of the Chaudière, with its clouds of snowy spray, generally spanned by a brilliant rainbow; the Suspension Bridge, uniting Upper and Lower Canada; the river above the Great Falls, studded with pretty wooded islands, and the distant purple mountains which divide the waters of the Gullinau from those of the Ottawa, is one of the most beautiful in the world.

"The city sprang up about thirty years ago from a collection of shanties inhabited by the laborers and artificers employed by the Royal Engineers to construct the Rideau Canal. This canal (terminating at Kingston) was intended by the Government of England to be a means of communication between the lower St. Lawrence and the Lakes, in case the communication on the front should be interrupted.

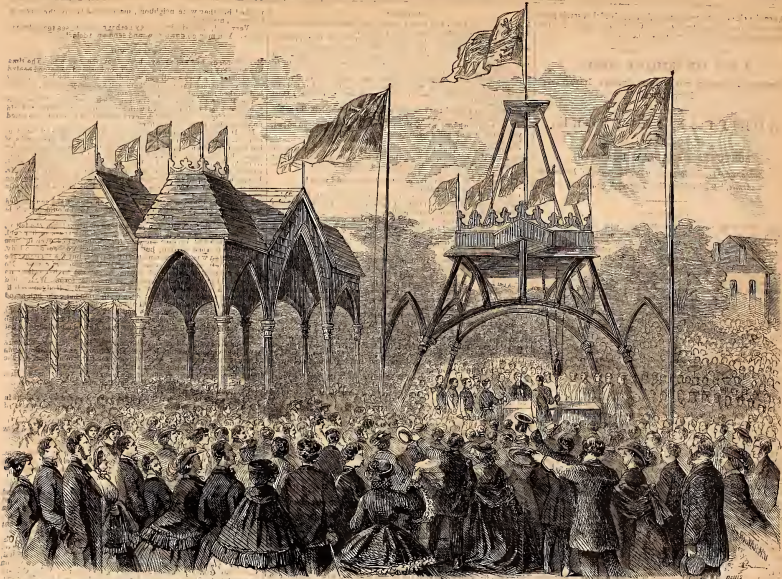

"The canal is a splendid specimen of engineering skill, and the masonry of the numerous locks is generally admired for its finish and solidity. Eight of these locks rise one above another directly in the centre of the city, the canal being crossed by a handsome stone bridge just above them. The canal, in fact, divides the city into two parts, the upper and lower.

"Built beside the magnificent Chaudière, upon a rocky elevation, commanding a fine view of the surrounding country as far as the eye can reach, it is almost equal to Quebec itself. The fine, far-reaching campaign, opened up by a great extent by hardy settlers, who have cleared for themselves a home and farm, the villages nestling among the trees, the deep, dark forests extending on either hand, as yet apparently untouched by the woodman's axe, and the magnificent river all contained by masses the delighted attention and call forth unmingled exclamations of pleasure.

The Chaudiere Falls are immediately above the city, and there, with thundering violence, the waters precipitate themselves down the precipice of forty feet in height, and gathering into a boiling, boil, and swirls, and hiss, and what around in mad excitement while the spray rises and the sunbeams gleaming upon it form an almost imperceptible rainbow. A fine bridge spans the river just below the falls, from which a magnificent view of them is obtained.

The city is justly celebrated as being a great mart for lumber in which the Ottawa country abounds. In the neighborhood is found beautiful pale-grey limestone, of which material many of the edifices are constructed, giving a handsome and solid appearance to the places; the streets have been laid out with great regularity and are very wide.

Our sketches represent vividly and faithfully two beautiful points of view of the romantically picturesque Falls of Chaudiere, near Ottawa, city. In our first sketch is shown the handsome Suspension Bridge, the Catholic Church, the Nunnery, Government, and the residence of C. Wright, Esq., &c., &c., together with the roadway and rushing Ottawa, giving freshness and life to all.

Our second sketch is taken from the rear of Perry's Mills, and shows the natural and striking curiosity, the Big Kettle, into which the Ottawa pours, and roars, and boils. In the distance is seen Hull, a Canada town. These faithful and spirited sketches were furnished us by Robert H. Coxsey, Esq., to whom our best thanks are specially due.

THE VICTORIA HOUSE, OTTAWA, CANADA.

This building, the residence of the Prince of Wales and suite during their stay at the new capital, was called the "Victoria" in honor of Her Majesty's selection, and is the most prominent building in the place. It was erected and is owned by Mr. William H. Morris, a Canadian by birth, for some years resident in New York, and is situated on the corner of a block of property for several years owned by him, exactly opposite the new Parliament building now in course of erection.

It is a very handsome stone building, four stories high, and the form of an L. It is worthy of the young and growing capital of the Canadian, and will bear rank with the first-class hotels in the elegance and comfort of its furniture and fittings. Its commanding view and admirable site—facing the Government grounds—gives it an unequalled position. It is a new building, occupied only for this occasion, having been leased and fitted up by the Canadian Government.

THE PRINCE OF WALES LAYING THE CORNER STONE OF THE NEW PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS AT OTTAWA, G. W.

The Prince laid the foundation stone of the new Parliament Building on Saturday morning, the 1st September. He left his hotel, the Victoria, at eleven o'clock, and proceeded to the spot. A handsome Gothic arch was erected over the entrance to the grounds, and over the stone which was to be laid was placed a gigantic cross. Round the open space thousands of spectators were arranged on tiers of raised seats. The centre of the place was reserved for the Prince and suite, the gents and those few persons who had the privilege of the entrance. The benches leading to the ground were lined with volunteers, Orange societies from various portions of the country, on horseback, dressed in their peculiar uniforms, and with bands of music, besides vast numbers of the body and independent lumbermen, distinguished by their scarlet shirts.

The Rev. Dr. Adamson, Chaplain of the Legislative Council, offered up a prayer, when the Prince and suite, the Government officials, the Architect, Contractors and Clerks of the Work had taken their positions round the stone.

The stone is of beautiful white Canadian marble, with the simple inscription, "Laid by the Prince of Wales, September 1, 1860." Under the stone there is a hollow, in which is placed a bottle containing a parchment record of the ceremony, and a number of the coins of Great Britain and Canada. When the mortar had been spread around the stone, the Prince gave the finishing touch to it with a silver trowel. The stone was then lowered to the place assigned for it, examined with the thumb and level, and pronounced "duly laid."

THE VICTORIA HOUSE, OTTAWA, G. W., WHERE THE PRINCE OF WALES RESIDED DURING HIS STAY IN THAT CITY.

After the close of the ceremonies, the assembled thousands gave hearty and repeated cheers to the victor, and again for the Prince, and lastly for the hero-General.

A NEW AND THRILLING STORY. (WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER.)

ADRIEN IN NEW YORK; OR, THE FORTUNES OF ABELE DUMONT.

By the Author of "Blonde Mireuil," "Reminiscences of La Grande Armée," "A Month and Half in Troyes," &c., &c.

CHAPTER V.

As they unlocked the next morning Dumont, with his French and English dictionary under his arm and in his hand a slip of paper filled with every English phrase, which he had Adèle had carefully prepared for the occasion, smiled forth, and with the rapid and easy fluency with which he has made eye of his mind to come out with the most unobtrusive art, proceeded towards the Bowery. At last, after many inquiries and considerable trouble, he found his way up Broadway and through a maze of narrow, crooked streets to the main eastern artery of the great city. There he paused for a moment at the door of a small, dingy-looking house, which he had Adèle had built many years ago, and which he now took to be the residence of the old man he had just been seeking in New York.

But he was, as usual, strangely ignorant of the name of his house, and, after a long and fruitless search, he was obliged to give up the idea of finding it. He then turned back, and, after a long and fruitless search, he was obliged to give up the idea of finding it.

CHAPTER VI.

As they unlocked the next morning Dumont, with his French and English dictionary under his arm and in his hand a slip of paper filled with every English phrase, which he had Adèle had carefully prepared for the occasion, smiled forth, and with the rapid and easy fluency with which he has made eye of his mind to come out with the most unobtrusive art, proceeded towards the Bowery. At last, after many inquiries and considerable trouble, he found his way up Broadway and through a maze of narrow, crooked streets to the main eastern artery of the great city. There he paused for a moment at the door of a small, dingy-looking house, which he had Adèle had built many years ago, and which he now took to be the residence of the old man he had just been seeking in New York.

But he was, as usual, strangely ignorant of the name of his house, and, after a long and fruitless search, he was obliged to give up the idea of finding it. He then turned back, and, after a long and fruitless search, he was obliged to give up the idea of finding it.

Upright that day Adèle had been a child; but now the fact that it was time to go to bed and go to bed; time to be a woman.

She kept to herself little sighs; she calmly reviewed their position as it was, and as it would be for the future. Her father was too old to master a new tongue, too old to enter into the ways and views of a country which he had not and could not understand. He had no other resource, she herself must do it.

On the next day she went rather than usual; went through the routine of her morning work; then coming softly to her father's side she bent over him, kissed his brow and said, "Father, I must do it myself."

"The old man started; it was long since Adèle had left the room or even touched his hand. He looked at her with a surprised air. "Oh, Adèle, where's your father?" He rose, took his hat, and, added, "I must go to work."

"I must go to work," he said, "but remember that a young girl alone in the middle of the city would walk the streets unattended, had never entered the Frenchman's thoughts, and he merely repeated the words, 'I must go to work.'" not he! he was his neighbor, ma'am, and he saw the errors of his way, and he would correct them."

"Very well, that will do. I may perhaps have to see half a dozen of you. You may go down, and send up Adèle."

CHAPTER VII.

Mrs. Hudson had not always been so kind as she now was. The time was very far distant when she and her husband had stood behind the counter of the little shop, and had seen the young man, simply the name of a girl. Fortune had favored them, and not undeservedly, for they had worked long, hard, and steadily.

Their money was not very rich, new, and if the good woman did feel rather doubtful with her own good fortune, and did blush at the thought of her husband's success, she never said so, and never was it known to any one who was not well as usual.

"I must go to work," he said, "but remember that a young girl alone in the middle of the city would walk the streets unattended, had never entered the Frenchman's thoughts, and he merely repeated the words, 'I must go to work.'"

STEINWAY AND SONS' PIANO-FORCE WAREHOUSES, NOS. 82 AND 84 WALKER STREET, NEAR BROADWAY, N. Y.

OPENING OF STEINWAY & SONS' NEW PIANO-FORTE MANUFACTORY.

In our last we gave a description of the rise and progress of the Steinway family, and of their immense New Manufactory on the Fourth avenue, between Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets. The opening this new place for business purposes was the occasion of our visit, in company with a large body of the press and several distinguished professors and musicians. Accompanied by Charles and William Steinway, the visitors, in parties, examined the building from the basement to the roof. Every part of that vast musical beehive was in active operation. The beautiful and quietly working steam engine set all the elaborate machinery in motion, and logs were cut, boards planed, lyres and legs carefully fashioned, and each operation performed almost in the twinkling of an eye. Steam is truly a wonderful agent, and marvelously how the genius of man controlled its power and turned it to account. In the several departments on the upper floors, the greatest activity prevailed; no space was wasted, men worked almost elbow to elbow, but without the slightest arrangement of confusion, indeed, perfect order and intelligent arrangement seemed to control every department of this great establishment.

The case-rooms was truly a curious sight. Down its whole length, some hundred and fifty feet, were rows of embryo pianos, grands and squares, waiting their turn for advancement towards completion. Five or six of these rows, packed side-ways, were in this room alone, and must have numbered hundreds. A sure convincing proof of the extent of the Steinway's business could hardly be given. From room to room, through every stage of piano-force manufacturing, the visitors were labored, receiving explanations and pleasant answers to all inquiries, until, having passed through the drying-rooms and polishing-rooms, they arrived at the show-room of the factory, in which were several of the Steinway "Grands" and a handsome and abundant collection, consisting of choice viands and fluids of brands not to be mentioned but with respect. An hour and a half of tripping up-stairs and down-stairs, to and fro endless corridors of machinery, pianos, &c., the party sat down with considerable appetite and digested the good things before them with considerable energy. While the dinner of the ladies and boys had somewhat subsided, the health of Henry Steinway, the father, was proposed, and Hiram L. Street, Esq., having been delegated to reply in behalf of Mr. Steinway, spoke as follows:

Genlmen—It is difficult to strayly speak in behalf of our host, who has so ably spoken for themselves in this magnificent temple, devoted to industrial art, with its hundred aisles of machinery, whereon are worked out the cunning devices of manufacturing skill and artistic design, hitherto wrought out by the slow processes of handicraft, through which we have just been shown. Gentlemen, these material voices are sufficiently eloquent, sufficiently convincing in their manifold statement, yet to them have been added evidence of the spheres, brought forth by certain mental men of genius, even now coming in from magnificent restaurants, each dining evenly to preface a

SHAM FIGHT ON LAKE ERIE, WHICH TOOK PLACE AT THE INAUGURATION OF THE PERRY MONUMENT, AT CLEVELAND, SEPT. 10th, 1860. A REPRESENTATION OF THE GREAT VICTORY WON BY COMMANDER PERRY OVER THE BRITISH SHIPS IN THOSE WATERS, SEPT. 10, 1813.—FROM A SKETCH BY ROBE T. PALMER.

INAUGURATION OF THE PERRY MONUMENT.— THE BATTLE FOUGHT OVER AGAIN.

The inauguration of the Perry Monument at Cleveland, on the 10th of September, was attended by a vast concourse of people from every State in the Union. The number stated varies between thirty and fifty thousand, but we have little doubt that close upon fifty thousand persons attended the ceremonies. After the many admirable and appropriate speeches and addresses had been made, and the various interesting and imposing ceremonies had come to a close, the attention of the assembled thousands was drawn to the mock battle which was about to take place upon the Lake, in a peaceful but life-like re-enactment of that gallant and bloody battle, so important and decisive in its results. An eye-witness thus describes the scene:

The mock battle came off upon the Lake at five o'clock. There were eleven vessels engaged in the two squadrons. Captain Champlin, of Buffalo, a commander in Perry's fleet, commanded the representation of the American fleet, and Mr. John Chapman, of Hudson, who was taken prisoner from the British by Perry at the battle and became an American citizen, took charge of the British force. The artillery companies performed their part very well, and the solemn booming of the cannon came over the water with a heavy sound, but far lighter than if the heavers had had fathers or brothers at the guns and it was a real battle. The scene upon the bank during the performance was beautiful in the extreme. All along the vast amphitheatres, from Water street to the Marine Hospital, were men, women and children, in such profusion that to one standing upon the pier or upon the boats, it looked like a huge flower-bed filled with all the colors of the rainbow. It was a magnificent sight.

UNCLE BEN FLEMING AND THE OLD HORN LANTERN.

AMONG the most interesting visitors at Cleveland at the inauguration of the Perry statue on the 10th September, were old Uncle Ben Fleming and the Old Horn Lantern. Both were present at the memorable Battle of Lake Erie, and may be classed among the survivors of that great day. The old man, now his years well-nigh a little proud of having been a partaker in an action which resulted so honorably had severely for his country. The Old Horn Lantern looks weather-beaten, and certainly much the worse for wear, but it was gazed upon with curious interest by thousands, and was transported into a lamp of power by the magic of the memory of the past.

THE WAYNE GUARDS OF ERIE, PA.

ON the occasion of the inauguration of the Perry Statue at Cleveland the Unit. Squads of the Wayne Guards visited that city and partook of its hospitalities while assisting in the interesting ceremonies. The reputation of the Wayne Guards for readiness, loyalty and patriotism in drill is well known, and the admiration which their appearance excited was but a just tribute to their merit.

Much of their perfection is owing to their gallant commander Captain John W. Mellase, who is a thorough soldier, and bore himself nobly in the Mexican war, where he served with merit and distinction. The company is composed of good men, and is highly esteemed. "Whither Cleveland, they presented to the orator

GARIBALDI, LIBERATOR OF ITALY.

HISTORY has produced no man equal to Garibaldi. What Shakespeare is among the poets, Garibaldi is among the heroes. His career resembles more the fabled triumphs of ancient mythology than the stern realities of history. But the labors of Hercules and the victories of Alexander are vulgar adventures beside the achievements of the patriot warrior of Italy. In some respects he resembles an armed St. Paul, who, instead of the crown of martyrdom, receives the targe of St. Peter; for marvellous as are the works of Garibaldi, the most wonderful of all is the success which has ever attended him—we mean so far as the sphere of his own operations is concerned—for there is not an instance of his being defeated in any undertaking which he personally superintended.

We have so lately given a memoir of the great hero of the age, and have so lately epitomized his last work, the liberation of the Two Sicilies, that we have only now to recall the prominent facts of his life to accompany the portrait we present to the public, one of the most truthful and beautiful likenesses ever published. There is a very laudable and natural desire to look upon the features of those we venerate, and the occasional contemplation of their countenance cannot fail to cherish in us those noble instincts of which these eminent men are living exemplars.

Giuseppe Garibaldi was born to Nicosia, in July, 1807. His father was the owner of a small brig engaged in the Mediterranean trade, while his mother was of a very pious and studious disposition. There was a saddest thoughtfulness about Garibaldi even in his earliest days, which led his mother to place him under the tuition of her brother, a priest, but in his eleventh year the young hero signified for a more active life, and he accompanied his UNDERCLIFF, THE RESIDENCE OF GEN. GEORGE P. MORRIS, AT COLD SPRING, ON THE HUDSON RIVER.—FROM A SKETCH BY GEN. OWN ARTIST.

GENERAL GEORGE P. MORRIS.

A VIZOR to the homestead of the "Song-writer of America" is not to be soon forgotten. Undercliff has been for so many years associated in the public mind with the name of the author of "Woodman, spare that tree," that it shares equally with "Sonsville" and "Kilwield" the interest and the respect of the tourist. It is one of those hallowed spots which invest the banks of the noble Hudson with an intellectual charm, growing more and more sacred as the years roll by, and the names and works of the never-dying poets have become household names and words both in the hearts and in the homes of every American family. Such places have a separate and distinct memory, and the pleasantest of all associations. We count up no deeds of high enterprise, no tales of slaughter, of pillage or of raid; nothing villainous or knightly is associated with their beginnings, but gentle thoughts and summer dreamings which come back to us again, renewing the tender imaginings of youth and recalling once more to life the rosiest visions, vivid and beautiful, which were the offspring of the fiction of the author or the passionate love-songs of the poet. We think, too, how the exquisite location which surrounds these homes must have influenced the thoughts and in a measure marked the hearts of those who have spoken sweet and precious words in lines which will not die.

The home of George P. Morris is unpretentious, but it is substantial, and is handsome from its very dome simplicity. It is situated at Cold Spring, on the east bank of the Hudson, a little above West Point. It is in the very heart of the most magnificent scenery of that beautiful river, nestling beneath the shadows of Bald Hill, called by Bryant, Mount Taurus, which towers hundreds of feet above, while directly opposite, on the north side of the Hudson, is the grand "Crown," of Robson Drake, and a little further north the famous Buttermilk, which Mr. Willis has rendered classical under the poetic cognomen of the Storm King. The view from the lawn of Undercliff, rising in these magnificent features and sweeping over the whole country about, and beyond West Point, can hardly be surpassed, unless, as it does, all the grandest and most beautiful elements of the perfect landscape. The entrance to General Morris's grounds is through a handsome avenue, called Morris Avenue, which leads to the gate and thence through fineries to the porch of the house. When the General first located himself there it was a perfect wilderness of rough stones and huge boulders. So after a while would have discovered most men, but he saw its capabilities, and gradually, after years of patient toil and constant disappointment, the chaos was reduced to order, and Undercliff became a Place. The lawn was a new place, for the General threw a prudent taste into all the arrangements, giving it the air of an old homestead—a spot round which the affections could cling, as though the family root had sprung out from that very soil.

The interior arrangements of the house are in every sense ample—in "chamber-rooms, show-rooms and solid comfort everywhere. Splendid trees surround the house, affording grateful shade at all hours of the day, while fine openings have been preserved, through which views of unsurpassed beauty and grandeur meet the eye. It is a lovely spot—beautiful in itself, beautiful in its surroundings and incomparably beautiful in the home affections which hallow it, and the graceful and genial hospitality which, without pretence or ostentation, receives the guest, and with heart in the grasp of the hand, and truth in the sparkle of the eye, makes him feel that he is welcome.

General Morris may almost be looked upon as the "first settler," if not the "oldest inhabitant" of the vicinity of Cold Spring. Year by year it has grown up about him, and his presence and personal influence have attracted to it wealthy and refined people, who, leaving there, have built splendid villas, until the neighborhood has become a perfect garden of beauty, while the tone of society is marked by high-bred intelligence.

We remember the General—Brigadier-General he was then—in 18— well, it is a good many years ago, and we were both younger than we are now, but we remember the position he held then in the literary and social world. In the literary world his power and influence could hardly be over-estimated. To be honored by George P. Morris was to have gained the suffrage of society, who believed in his judgment implicitly, and looked for no appeal from it. It was a proud position, one that he had toiled for and honestly earned. And what use did he make of it? He opened the avenues, which that position controlled to every aspirant to literary fame, he aided the doubtful, encouraged the faltering and extended a friendly hand to all who sought for and needed assistance in their career. The number of grand acts of benevolence which were carried through by his advice and influence stand upon record to his honor, and many have reason to be thankful for the existence of an influence so great and so nobly exercised.

An eminent writer and brilliant critic, Horace Binney Wallace, in an admirable review of the Life and Writings of General Morris, alluding to his influence upon the literature of America, says:

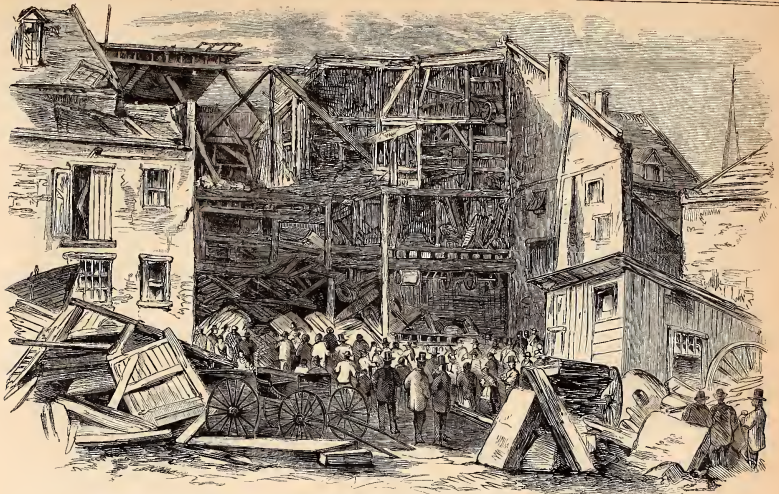

"The distinction with which the name of General Morris is now associated, in a permanent connection, with what few distinctions or fugitive in American Arts is admitted and known; but the class of young men of letters in this country at present can hardly appreciate the extent to which they, and the profession to which they belong, are indebted to his animated exertions, his varied talents, his admirable resources of temper, during a period of twenty years, and at a time when the character of American literature, both at home and abroad, was yet to be formed.

"The manifold and lasting benefits, as editor of the Nation, George Morris conferred on our art world...

Of the poetical genius of General Morris there is very much to be said. For he has taken to himself a department of the art which so very few of the leading minds of the world of poetry have been able to master.

"There is no professed writer of songs in this day who has conceived the true character of this delicate or peculiar creation...

"The just notion and spirit of the modern song, as we think of them, is the embodiment and expression of a beauty born of those sentiments, or thoughts, gay, moral, pensive, joyous or melancholy, which are so natural and appropriate in particular circumstances, or occasions, of life..."

"The fourth selection rises up the blood, and we seem to breathe the free air of the prairie, and to feel that boundless vitality which perfect freedom imparts to those who enjoy it a little...

It is impossible in a newspaper article to do justice to a subject which naturally grows under our pen. A full analysis of the works of one who has been so long before the public, and has occupied so large a share of its attention, would occupy a larger space than we could afford, and would put us at giving some questions from his claim to rest with our pen, which we speak not so decidedly in support of the man we claim for him than our arguments would admit.

The first poem which we give is, in thought, sentiment and expression, perfect. Its simplicity, devotedness, and the purity of our age of the age, and the very lines secure it against any charge of ultra-sentimentality:

MY MOTHER'S BIBLE.

The book is all that I need I see - I know I'll need it when I die -

Oh! will I ever forget those Who made the brain that thinks and throbs?

My mother's book is all that I need I see - I know I'll need it when I die -

How often I would turn to it, To read the words that I love best,

The second selection refers to youthful friendships, among the pleasantest and most lasting of our recollections, and is treated by the author in a frank and tender manner, with a touch of that broad and humane philosophy which pervades everything Morris writes.

WE WERE TOGETHER.

We were boys together, And our days were bright;

When we parted together, And our days were dim;

When we met again together, And our days were bright;

The third selection is one of those sparkling gems which seem to be the inspiration of the moment, and come readily made into the lyric. It bears no evidence of elaboration or of factitiousness, and yet the whole subject is disposed of completely, and the thirty-two lines exhaust the material of a volume:

THE REASON OF LOVE.

The reason of love, I do not know;

But I know the reason of love, I do not know;

The number of love, I do not know;

The reason of love, I do not know;

Our fourth selection rises up the blood, and we seem to breathe the free air of the prairie, and to feel that boundless vitality which perfect freedom imparts to those who enjoy it a little.

LEFS IN THE WEST.

My brother, I once heard and not my story -

Where once I traveled, there a prince is riding -

With one or two quotations, we shall conclude our brief and hurried estimation of the West, as it appeared in a Hamilton's and the People's Journal, and were we not for the aid of the most eminent of Europe's poets. - See also...

Here, brother, come with all your arms and anger -

The fifth selection is an outburst of passionate longing to be once more amid the mountains, and the "well-to-do daughter, "the fair and pale Ida." Who whir an earnest, loving hand - draw her partner's, and how strong and deep the home's gladness is...

WHERE WIFEHOOD'S WAY.

Where husband's way were clear -

The new note that the child receives -

My heart is in the hills, the shades of night are on my brow -

Our sixth selection is a beautiful expression of pure and simple love, and a model of that unobtrusive but boundless mercies which encompass us on every hand. It is scarcely possible to express more in the same space or to express it more perfectly:

A SONG OF THE WIFE OF THE FISHMAN.

The fisherman is not the one who is to be feared -

The wife of the fisherman is not the one who is to be feared -

THE SEVENTH SELECTION IS A GENUINE BURST OF PATRIOTISM, WHICH FINDS AN ECHO IN EVERY AMERICAN HEART; IT IS A PERFECT EMBODIMENT OF THE SENTIMENTS OF THE PEOPLE:

MY WIFE YOU GOT AS GOOD AS MY FRIEND.

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

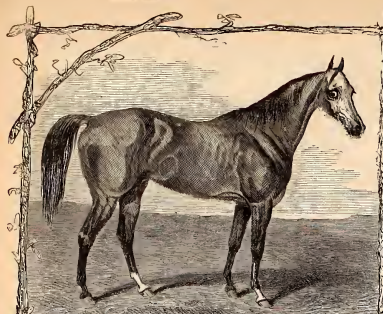

My wife you got as good as my friend,

My wife you got as good as my friend,

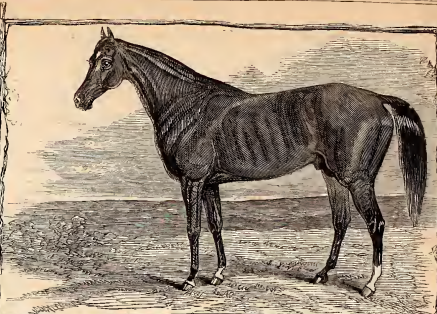

My wife you got as good as my friend,

These are the remaining selections, which we present in their original form, as they appear in the West, as it appeared in a Hamilton's and the People's Journal, and were we not for the aid of the most eminent of Europe's poets. - See also...

MRS. BARNEY WILLIAMS.

In a recent number we gave a sketch of Mr. Barney Williams's country house. We have now the pleasure to present a beautiful portrait of its hospitable mistress, one of the most charming and accomplished actresses on the stage. Any criticism upon one who has earned for herself the distinction of being the Yankee Girl par excellence, on the stage, would be entirely superfluous. In addition to her celebrity in characters of that description, she is a most versatile actress, and distinguished for her piquancy and elegance. She is one of the few ladies who have earned a fame on both sides the Atlantic, her tour through the United Kingdom, in company with her genial and popular husband, being a perfect ovation of applause and profit.

CAMP BOONE.

The Kentucky State Guard's First Encampment.

In accordance with the requirements of the military law, passed by the late Legislature of the State of Kentucky, orders were issued for the holding of an encampment to commence on Thursday, August 21, 1860, said encampment to be held upon the Fair Grounds of the South-Western Agricultural Association, the use of which had been kindly proffered by the directors for that purpose.

In honor of the lucky pioneer whose name will ever be to Kentuckians as a household word, the camp was, with due ceremony, christened "Camp Boone." The companies present were, by the provisions of our military law, under the command of Governor Beriah Magoffin as Commander-in-Chief; General S. B. Buckner, Inspector-General; B. Hardin Helm, Assistant-Inspector-General; Dr. J. W. Scott, Surgeon; Colonel Frank Tyson, Assistant-Quartermaster-General; C. D. Pritchett, Assistant Paymaster; Phil. Vaccaro (the old Guard), Quartermaster's Staff Sergeant; C. Brockborough, Staff Sergeant, and Job M. Reiner, Clerk of Kentucky State Guard.

The Louisville Battalion was commanded by Major Thomas H. Hunt, his staff was composed of the following officers: J. H. M. Morris, Adjutant; Dr. Thomas H. Saltersville, Assistant-Surgeon; George W. Wiley, Sergeant-Major; and H. C. Anderson, Quartermaster's Sergeant.

Companies present: Louisville Life Guards, Citizen Guards, National Blues, Lexington Rifles, Union Greys, Jackson Guards, Mecklen Rifles, Warren Volunteers, Newcastle Guards, Shelby Guards and Citizens' Artillery.

continuance of the encampment. As is well known to military men in the West, this movement was inaugurated for the special purpose of perfecting officers of Kentucky Companies in the United States service drills. All officers and companies from our sister States were, however, considered as invited guests, and greeted upon their arrival with a hearty Kentucky welcome.

Viewed in either a military or civil light it was a signal triumph, and succeeded even more fully in effecting the desired end than the most sanguine wishes and hopes of its projectors had led them to expect.

The central avenue of the encampment grounds, shaded as it is by hundreds of our native forest trees, formed a most lovely place for the morning and evening drill and parades, and for the civilian's promenade. There lovely ladies and pallid cavaliers most did congregate, regretting only that they must in so short a time be away to the heated city, leaving those shaded walks and fragrant bowers behind them. On the east side of this grand avenue was situated the camp proper, and on the west the noble amphitheatre loomed up, rounding one by its size, as seen through the trees by moonlight, of the Coliseum of our Roman ancestors. Beyond this, on the north, lay the review ground, on which ten thousand troops can be displayed to advantage. Here the magnificent band from Newport Barnicks nightly discoursed the quaint and soul-stirring music to thousands of entranced and enraptured listeners.

The Floral Hall of the Horticultural Society was occupied as a dining saloon, the galleries being reserved for the use of the officers, whilst the high and low privates were provided for "way down below."

On Tuesday, August 28, Governor B. Magoffin reviewed the military in person. The display was truly grand; every company was present in full force, and each endeavoring to excel the other in the precision and celerity with which they would execute the most difficult evolutions. On Wednesday General Johnson, late of the United States army in Utah, reviewed the entire force. Over twelve thousand persons were present, and they were unanimous in their expressions of admiration and delight at witnessing the skill and proficiency displayed by the officers and men of each and every company on the ground in the practice of the established United States drill. When all were so

The military spirit which has been awakened by the action of our Legislature was fully shown in the interest exhibited by our own citizens and the visitors from neighboring cities during the

THE PRINCE OF WALES SPORTING ON THE PRAIRIES OF THE GREAT WEST.

The Village of Dwight.

Dwight has been for several years a favorite hunting box for the English, for two years ago Lord Althorp and Lord Hervey paid rather a lengthy visit to this village, and many other noble sportsmen have been on the list of its frequenters. Captain Retalick, the Governor-General of Canada's Military Secretary, has been an annual visitor for six years, and to him the conduct of the present princely expedition was entrusted.

Dwight is about eighty miles from Chicago, upon the line of the Alton, St. Louis and Chicago railroad. It contains about four hundred and eight inhabitants, and about one hundred houses. The principal buildings are a railway depot, a store, Cornell's Inn, or Dwight's Hotel, as it is called, and a steam grist mill. Stretched around it sleep the almost boundless prairies, like a waving desert, with here and there clumps of trees and prosperous farm-houses. Scattered about are handsome private residences, comfortably furnished, and breathing peace, plenty and quiet. The shooting is excellent—quails, plovers, partridges and prairie-chickens abounding. The buffalo and deer have almost entirely disappeared, having gone further west.

Their First Arrival.

Although nearly dusk when the Prince arrived on Saturday, his impatience to have a little sport was so great, that the whole party, under the guidance of Mr. Spencer, got ready for an hour's shooting. The dogs were brought out, and away the Prince and his companions went into the prairies to try their luck, but it was too dark for any sporting, and the disappointed sportsmen returned to Prairie Home, to while away the evening

We cannot do better than copy the Herald's account of this most interesting event in the royal visit:

"On Monday morning the whole party started early upon a hunt for prairie chickens, to find which it is not necessary to go far from Dwight. Half past five o'clock found them all en route in four carriages. Baron Bunsen, the Duke of Newcastle, Captain Retzlack and Mr. Spencer formed the first party; Lord Hinshelwood, Hon. Mr. Elliott, Mr. Wilkins and Mr. Cornell, Mr. Miller, the third; and Dr. Ackland followed, at a later hour, in a light buggy, driven by the ubiquitous Mr. Jones. The several parties agreed to meet at given points and compare notes, and the plan of the campaign was to drive to what was thought a favorable position, hitch the horses to the nearest fence or stump and beat about for game, the honors of the day to be decided by the number of prairie chickens killed, all other birds to be counted out. The day was very fine, with not too much sun, which drives the prairie chickens into the cornfields, into which, however, the farmers granted the Prince permission to go and do all the harm he pleased.

Lord Lyons remained at home, still writing his despatches, and could not leave to accompany the party. Dr. Ackland did not hunt, but made several spirited sketches of the party and of the prairies. All the party were very roughly dressed in light

MISSING MAN.

Thomas Crowther, Taybeedah, Fond du Lac, Wis.
We have received the following communication in relation to a man who unaccountably disappeared from Taybeedah, Wisconsin. Should the publication of his portrait lead to a recognition in any part of the country, we shall be glad to receive a description of all facts concerning the subject, as thereby a clue may be afforded, and his whereabouts be perhaps discovered. Such information should be sent either to this office or to Mrs. Jane Crowther, Taybeedah, Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin.

Richard Lee, corner of Duane Street. My husband had been on the 31st of March, 1859, to go to La Crosse, which place he left about the last of May following. Missing, he was supposed to come two teams be had. As soon as he had done so he intended to take the cars and return home, but up to this time has not been heard of. I herewith include a photograph, which I request you to insert in your valuable paper.
Respectfully yours,
JANE CROWTHER.

"May it please your honor," said a lawyer, addressing one of the judges. "I brought the prisoner from jail on a labor case." "Well," said a fellow. "Is an aulier tone, who stood in the rear of the court, and three layers will say nothing. I fear the man got out of a job at the court door."

The following is a verbatim copy of a letter received a few days ago by a resident in the county of Waterford from his clerk in another part of the county. "Sir, I am very happy to inform you that two men from results were committed to the jail on Monday night, and that your attention will be required here as the party destined to do so is a party in his case."

"My dear son, you have suggested the prisoner was a rogue the moment you saw him. Why did you arrest him? He broke a wire and hid my rooms without leaving down a price. This is a rule without many exceptions." "But a rule that you do not observe, but that you expect others to follow, is a rule, and never satisfied himself they get a dollar's worth of anything for their pains?"

THE FIFTH REGIMENT OF NEW YORK STATE MILITIA IN GARRISON AT BEDLOE'S ISLAND, IN NEW YORK BAY—ARTILLERY PRACTICE.

THE FIFTH REGIMENT ON BEDLOE'S ISLAND.

The annual inspection and review of the Jefferson Guard, Fifth Regiment N. Y. S. M., Colonel C. Schwarzwelder, took place on the 3d of October at Fort Wood, Bedloe's Island, where they have been for the last five days initiating themselves in the science of harbor defense and garrison duty. The weather was all that could be desired—a warm sun and clear sky, tempered by a gentle north-westerly invigorating breeze. The troops in the garrison were early afoot, cleaning their quarters, muskets and equipments, and making all necessary preparations to appear in "apple pie" order at inspection. The daily ceremony of guard mounting was held at half-past eight o'clock a. m., after which those troops not otherwise actively employed in the garrison assembled for battalion drill. After an hour and a half's satisfactory exercise they were dismissed to prepare for inspection. Brigadier-General Yates, attended by his Aide-de-Camp, Van Ness, arrived there soon after ten, and was received with a salute of eleven guns.

At twelve o'clock the troops, by companies, marched out of the fort to the drill ground and formed in line under the direction of Adjutant Maghfof. By this time the array of spectators from the city was quite numerous, and all appeared pleased with the military pageant before them.

At a quarter past two o'clock Major-General Sandford and staff, in full uniform, wearing the new regulation cheques, reached the island from New York. He was received by a salvo of thirteen guns from the battery of barbette guns. Prior to the arrival of General Sandford a little incident occurred on the "terrace" of the fortification, illustrative of the skill attained by the Fifth in the use of heavy guns. Colonel Schwarzwelder was superintending the troops in preparing to fire the salute, when it was discovered that no detachment was present to serve one of the thirty-two pounders; whereupon he ordered the Ordnance Sergeant to go to Company A's quarters and tell its commanding officer to send a squad of men to him forthwith. Major Anderson, of the army, who was in company with the Colonel, remarked:

"Ah! Colonel, then you have particular detachments to operate the guns."

Colonel S. replied, "I beg your pardon, Major, it is not so"—immediately recalling the Ordnance Sergeant and countermanding the order he had given him, and ordering a squad of men standing near him to man the gun. The order was obeyed instantly, and the gun thus summarily manned was fired in its turn with astonishing rapidity.

The Major was satisfied of his mistaken supposition, and subsided.

The regiment returned to New York city on the 4th, and were received by the Twelfth Regiment, under the command of Col. Butterfield.

- D. W. EVANS & CO.'S
Pioneer Gift Book Store, 677 Broadway, New York.
Established 1854.

WHY IS THIS CHEAPEST? Because you not only get every Book at the Publishers' regular prices, but also receive a GIFT with it, varying in value from Fifty Cents to One Hundred Dollars. The gift, therefore, is a large or small as you desire.

HOW ARE WE ENABLED TO DO THIS? We purchase Books in very large quantities, often an entire edition at a time, thus getting them at less than half the price paid by those who see only one or two copies at a time. Our Gifts are also manufactured or imported for us direct, thus doing away with the many profits that would otherwise accumulate before the Books reached the retail purchaser.

OUR SEVENTY-TWO PAGE CATA-LOGUE, which can be had gratis on application, explains all this in detail, and contains, besides, a great deal of information of value to book-buyers.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN NEW YORK.

SPLENDID MILITARY DISPLAY.

VAST CONCOURSE OF PEOPLE.

IMMENSE ENTHUSIASM.

The Prince of Wales has arrived in the Metropolis of America, and has received a welcome worthy of the wealth, the intelligence, the refinement—in short, worthy of the metropolitan character of its citizens. The vast population of our city was swelled by many thousands of people, brought in by the railroad and steamboat lines entering in New York; all our country cousins had come to town, and bearing in mind these additions, the overwhelming throng of human beings which blocked up our streets and avenues may be better imagined than described. We remember many great demonstrations during the past twenty years, but we do not remember any turnout of the people in any way comparable with this.

The throng began to gather as early as nine o'clock in the morning; stationary groups could be seen in Madison square, in Union square, on the house stoops in Broadway, around the City Hall and upon the Battery. About noon many parts were so densely packed as to be impenetrable, and after that hour there were miles of human heads, that only moved to look if the expected Prince and his splendid escort was advancing.

The revenue cutter, Harriet Lane, conveyed the Prince and suite from South Amboy, and after a pleasant voyage reached the Battery at about two P. M. The Prince then changed his citizen's dress for a full uniform, mounted his horse and reviewed the troops that were assembled on the Battery. He then got into a splendid carriage drawn by six horses, and passed up Broadway through a solid body of people, amid cheers and waving of handkerchiefs, not only from the sidewalks but from roofs of houses, windows, porticoes and trees. As the cavalcade entered Park Row, it was a wonderful sight to see the tens of thousands

REMBRANDT PEALE.

There died in Philadelphia, at half-past six on the morning of October 3d, after a short illness, the celebrated Rembrandt Peale, one of the patriarchs of American art, one identified in an interesting manner with our history as an original portrayer of Washington, and one endeared to a large circle of friends. Rembrandt Peale came of an artistic family. His father was a pupil of Benjamin West. The son was born while his father was in Washington's camp at Valley Forge, on the 23d February (Washington's birthday), 1778, and was consequently in his eighty-third year. His father, Charles Wilson Peale, painted several portraits of Washington, and the young Rembrandt studied them closely while they were being painted, as well as the sitter, being his father's assistant at the sittings. In 1798, when but seventeen, he had become an artist of real ability, and was allowed to paint a portrait of Washington. During the sitting his father assisted him materially and painted a portrait to guide the son. In reference to this the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, in an excellent article, says: "The young artist, who was naturally timid and nervous in such a presence and at such a work, got his father to commence a portrait at the same time, and to keep the General in conversation while the work went on. The study of Washington's head, then painted by Rembrandt Peale, was long kept by him, and it served as the basis of the great portrait of him which be afterwards painted, which was frequently by contemporaries of Washington the best likeness ever taken of him, which was exhibited in Europe and the United States, and which in 1832 was purchased for two thousand dollars by the Federal Government, to be hung in the United States Senate chamber. Mr. Peale's family possess the original letters bearing testimony to the fidelity of this portrait, from Judges Marshall, Washington, Peters, Tligham, Cranch, Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, Bishop White, and numerous other friends and associates of Washington." The writer of this, who has frequently met Mr. Peale, is most happy to confirm the many praises uttered by contemporaries of the genial character, refined habits and artistic culture of the

THE MEETING.

By MICHAEL BRADY.

A crier in a coat.

Alone to Fortitude he goes; Another wounded, mangled heart Has burst the roof of human woes. Hear thy coward's wail; Let the dust her follies hide Daughter of disaster!

With furious dashes by, With hurrying haste and clattering din, Mark ye the man of haughty eye, Who calls contemptuous names on him. Here careless slayer, Here the wretch his life hath made; Here the proud leader's wail, (There the poor betrayed!)

Rishes were his sad power Her cry sought a honest name; 'Twas meet that he should pluck no flower, And give a soul to death and shame. One who ought to have fought With fists where angels love to dwell, Wailed and hushed, Fled, for ever fell.

It is an off-odd tale, The world were too good to hear; Let humble error sink and quail, But haughty art hath naught to fear. 'Tis hence a tale of blood and pain, Glitters in the sight of men, Heap your scorn upon her, Spite her name to scorn! They meet no more on earth, The careless slayer and the slain; He wanders 'mid the halls of martyr, And she is thought of only 'gain. What will be the meeting, In the realm beyond the tomb? Will ye be mortal foes, Or on the day of doom?

CHAPTER XXX.—THE PRISON. EPILOGUE.—A MYSTERY'S CHARACTER.

ARMAND LOUVRE had not his adversary's credit. Another young Parisian, a distant relative of his own, already famous as a hero, had done more than he could do for the French cause, and he should have the pleasure of seeing the famous Armand shoot. "I beg pardon a fair share of the credit," said Marie, "you should get my friend Berford to show you what shooting is."

"I hope, monsieur," said Berford, "that you have seen him in the gallery before, I notice he does not handle the pistol."

"Because he is perfect in his art," said Alfred, laughing. Berford declined the compliment, but said he would fire a few shots after the match, and he would be another test. Preparations were soon made, and the match began. The parties were in the theatre, and Marie and Berford were in the box, and seven at the word of command at twelve paces, Captain Dufore had practiced this mode with great accuracy, and so only that it was difficult to judge between them; the proprietor of the gallery raised his eye, but Berford was then selected as superior, gave the decision in favor of Captain Dufore, much to his gratification. In the second trial, although he was certainly fired with great accuracy, especially as a mode of firing at the word is no virtue among his countrymen, the superiority of Latour was shown. "You," said the captain, "this decides not the lot, we have not seen the result of your shooting."

"As you please, captain," said Latour, passionately. "I suppose you will wish to decide by my rifle?" said Berford, pleasantly. "I beg pardon, Armand would occasionally win, and he preferred to lose, and as they were both excellent marksmen, which is in danger of being wounded by them the most frequently of all."

"Oh, certainly, by all means," said Latour, smiling. "I am a novice," explained Dufore and Latour at the same moment.

"Well, then, gentlemen, on the stakeholder declares his inability to decide in London, the stakeholder of this match is the wretched woman, which is never retorted," said Berford, with something like Western humor in his manner, to quote in a nice game of chance, and he called her name, and as they were both excellent marksmen, which is in danger of being wounded by them the most frequently of all."

"Oh, Kentucky justice is never by all means," exclaimed Armand, laughing. "The justice submitted with a protest that it was hardly fair to make the stakeholder of this match the wretched woman, which is never retorted."

Berford took a pistol carefully, examined it, mounted, held it at arm's length, perceived that it was not a revolver, extended his arm, and the instant explosion was followed by the tinkling of a little bell attached to the trigger, and he was the victor, which his ball had struck. "It is a revolver," said Berford, with some indignation. "I have fired three times, and as they were both excellent marksmen, which is in danger of being wounded by them the most frequently of all."

"I am sure you are not a novice," said Berford, with something like Western humor in his manner, to quote in a nice game of chance, and he called her name, and as they were both excellent marksmen, which is in danger of being wounded by them the most frequently of all."

we sacred law. "Come, Henry, a few shots with a carbine now, and we will let you off," said he, "which I think manner would approve. He produced a beautiful carbine, a light Berford's attention to the sights, which were very fine and arranged for cover in case of fashion, and he had loaded it with a bullet. Berford examined it approvingly, expressed his admiration for the satisfaction of the quality of the gun, and he had loaded it with a bullet. Berford drew a cross in the center and one near each corner; there he surrounded with a line of circles, and he loaded and handed him. For the purpose of testing the rifle, he fired at a little distance, and he was so good that he hit the target in the head of which flew into a thousand pieces. His now succeeded in firing at the target, and he had hit it with a bullet. He had a lack, he prepared to shoot. Armand was again required to give a shot at the target, and he had hit it with a bullet. He had a lack, actually breaking the center of three of the crosses, firing every time at the word "two," or with less than many seconds to spare. MASON & HAMLIN'S CELEBRATED MELODEONS AND ORGAN HARMONIUMS.

A description of the classes of instruments which they manufacture, and their separate and peculiar powers and characteristics of interest on road, and will serve as a guide to choice to all who meditate purchase.

MELODEONS.—These beautiful little instruments vary in compass from four and a half to six octaves, and are made with one or two rows or banks of keys, the latter having, of course, a larger volume of tone, more embellishments, and every improvement, and amongst them the most recent and valuable improvement consists in the addition of a double reed accompaniment. The trouble first stops by the means of which the treble part of the instrument may be drawn in power while the bass remains subdued. This is accomplished by means of a valve which communicates with the space directed under the upper part of the swell—the valve being opened and closed at the will of the player, and the treble part of the instrument is raised and forms the same as a "trouble force." The advantage of this step is based on the performance of soft passages, where it is desirable to "raise" the treble part of the instrument.

THE ORGAN-HARMONIUM.—The organ-harmonium was invented by Messrs. Mason & Hamlin, and introduced by them in the year 1855. This instrument is alike appropriate to the parlour, the church, and equally well adapted to the performance of secular and sacred music. In the hands of a skilful performer it is capable of the greatest variety of effects, and all the varieties of music, both vocal and instrumental, can be executed upon it. The quickness of its action, or instantaneous response to the will of the performer, and the variety of its tones, such as runs, trills, arpeggios, and other embellishments found chiefly in piano music, are all kinds of other artistic solos with suitable accompaniments, together with the most delicate of waltzes, crendos, scherzos, tremolo and officious passages.

THE PEDAL-BASS ORGAN-HARMONIUM.—The pedal-bass organ-harmonium is especially designed for church use, and is by far the most complete and useful of any of the instruments mentioned. Its power of tone is amply sufficient to fill a large-sized church, and surpasses that of a pipe-organ of more than double the cost. It is highly ornamental, and its tone is of a quality and tone produced by some of its stops closely resembles that of the organ, and it is capable of great variety of light and shade, and of the most subtle and delicate effects. It is also of a volume of tone produced from its full chorus being massive, yet unobtrusive and church-like. It possesses two important advantages over the most superior organ—its compactness in places at a distance from organ manufacturers. One of its important features remaining for many years in good order, and the other the most interesting feature of its kind of organ.

LANE & BODLEY'S PORTABLE SAWMILL.

A SAWMILL was formerly looked upon as a ponderous local fixed fact, but necessity and the progressive spirit of the age demanded not only a more portable, but one that could be used in any locality of a sawmill that might be quickly erected when it was needed, and readily removed to some other point when the pressing need for it had subsided, or when it had cleared a large space of timber as to make the hauling of logs inconvenient.

This could not be done with the old-fashioned reciprocating or "up and down" sawmills, because of the enormous weight of the building was necessary to accommodate it, and attention was turned towards the circular saw, as the only means of satisfying the demand. Unavoidable difficulties were encountered in the attempts of substituting this new servant, and for years the history of circular sawmills was only a series of expensive and fruitless failures, until the year 1850, when the late Mr. Lane, and the marks of a circular saw's self-education of any number offered in market.

Since that time, however, the "up and down" sawmills have been superseded by the circular saw, and for years the history of circular sawmills was only a series of expensive and fruitless failures, until the year 1850, when the late Mr. Lane, and the marks of a circular saw's self-education of any number offered in market. and shed is built of some of the first boards saved, and the thing is completed. Messrs. Lane & Bodley have made these machines so truly perfect, and so strong, that they will stand hard portable boiler, in place of the multibular boiler, which is used for the purpose of steam power, and is so liable to being rough usage by inexperienced men in the woods, as has been proved by the many accidents that attend their use.

The whole equipment, as exhibited on the Fair ground, worked so well, that the public were truly led to believe that the portable lumber was very easy work. The price of the machine exhibited was about $2,500, the price running from $1,600 to $2,200, but for the purpose of steam power, and is so liable to being rough usage by inexperienced men in the woods, as has been proved by the many accidents that attend their use.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

The Republican candidate for the Presidency is one of a class which has rarely before had a more extensive and successful career. The face of the globe can boast of none who, by the mere force of individual heroism and merit, rise through all the gradations of toil to the highest offices of the State, and whose labors, which brutalize and degrade none in other lands, in our own country strengthen him mentally as well as physically, and the cabinet of the Republic can boast of none who have so long and so successfully served the highest office in the gift of the people.

Lincoln was born in Kentucky, near a settlement in Hardin county, Kentucky, of poor but honest and industrious parents. After receiving a limited education, he became a laborer, and a lawyer.

In 1830 we find him a boatman on the Ohio and Indiana Canal, and fulfilling his humble duties with exemplary industry. He was elected to the office of State legislator during the year of his nineteenth year from the Ohio River in a flat boat belonging to the State of Ohio. During his trip he had a narrow escape from the hands of a gang of robbers, who were endeavoring to rob him of the boat. The courage of young Abe and his companions, and the assistance of a man named Stuart, saved the boat from the hands of the robbers, and were soon out of reach.

Early in 1832 the Black Hawk war broke out, and young Lincoln called upon Governor Reynolds, who formed a volunteer regiment for the defence of the State. To his conducted his regiment with great courage and ability, and was elected captain of the regiment.

Lincoln had no sooner returned than he was urged by his friends to become a candidate for the Legislature, but he declined to do so, and was soon afterwards made Postmaster of New York.

In 1834 he again became a candidate for the Legislature, and was triumphantly elected. He was re-elected in 1836, again in 1838, and again in 1840. During the last six years, Lincoln has been a member of the State Legislature, and has been elected to the office of Speaker of the House of Representatives.

On retiring from the Legislature he devoted himself exclusively to the study of the law, and became one of the ablest jurists in Illinois.

In November, 1849, Lincoln married Miss Mary Todd, daughter of the late Hon. Thomas M. Lincoln, of Lexington, Kentucky. The fruits of this union are three sons, Irving, Edward, and Robert.

In 1846 he received the unanimous nomination for Congress, and was elected to the Senate of the United States, and was elected, and took his seat in the National House of Representatives on the 7th December, 1847.

The events of Chicago, Illinois, and his Whig friends on the State Electoral Ticket, but his legal duties prevented him from taking this usual active part in the career.

On the 4th of July of 1846, however, again named all the politician in him, and he resumed his labors against the new order of things.

In 1848 he was elected by the people as a candidate for Congress, but the Legislature chose Mr. Trumbull as their Senator. Our space will not allow us to give any details of the exciting and successful campaign which he conducted, but we may say that he might truly be said to have both led and guided his own, finding in each other forms worthy of their race.

The events of Chicago Convention, which resulted in the nomination of Abraham Lincoln as the Republican Candidate for the Presidency, are too fresh in the recollection of our readers to need any recapitulation.

LOSS OF THE CONQUAULT.

THE CONQUAULT, a schooner, was on her way from New York to Boston, when she was wrecked on the rocks of the Conquault, on the 14th of October. The vessel was carrying a large cargo of lumber, and was valued at $100,000. The loss of the vessel was a great calamity to the owners, and the crew were all saved.

"While a calm breeze was blowing from the west, while landing vessels, full of passengers, were waiting to go on board, the steamer took a singular motion, going down, and keeping that way a long time, which was very alarming to the passengers. THE COMING OF THE PRINCE.

BY SIGMA.

Let the booming cannon toll
The swaying standards wave,
Let all together tell the people that the Prince has come.
Let the surging, swelling band
The booming cannon play,
And the trumpet jing it out to the rolling, rattling drum.

See the struggling, swaying crowd,
Now hither, thither, gone,
As they onward press, advance, crush, squeeze and stand Tiptoe—
How they press, and push, and quiver,
Like an ocean of humanity,
And their reckless haste to see if the Prince has come or no.

From the east they're coming down,
From the west part of the town,
From north and south the streets pour out and swing in Broadway.

What a throng of human folly,
Kestrels, eagles, and vultures,
What a pyramid of folly that is braced from all this day!

Now the cannon and the bell,
The drum and trumpet toll,
That our guest, the Prince of Wales, has set his foot on freeman's soil.

The ground on which he treads—
This may never be repeated,
Was the last that felt the heels of the bottle British bands.

The Bowling Green is here!
None will whisper in his ear
That they nodd'd his great-grandfather's kingly image into ball;
Nor will they murmur that
Though they pass within his feet,
There his huge lines saw patriots die like rotten sheep in stalls.

Leaves bygone to the past;
The day has come at last
When the mother-land has set her son to greet his brothers here:
And who ever comes
A guest to Freedom's home,
But must with wild heads and open hearts and whole-souled clad.

Bowling right and left his thanks,
The son of God Victoria rid a midst shouts which still increase;
For the day that's done!
That few days have passed as yet,
Since he bore'd his own fathers, our Fathers, sleep in stalls.

What thinks the royal youth?
Will his guess be near the truth?
O'er this more than cordial greeting of the "rebels to the Throne?"
Does he feel it contemptuous
Of a potent young nation,
A return to that allegiance we so long have ceased to owe?

No, no! young heir of Britain,
The solemn words were said by that law
And sealed in blood of martyrs upon many a well-fought field!
Words that at a people free
Were pledged to be true,
And placed with pride the Stars and Stripes on every freeman's shield!

We greet thee for thy mother—
We hail thee as a hero!
We held thee as a symbol of the race from whence we sprang;
And if our warmth grows wild,
We're but a younger child,
And thus express the memories to which our grandfathers cling.

Now let one great shout arise,
For 'tis against the skies
The banners of Old England, with this waving sea!
While they in union wave,
Our loyal men and brave,
Their's a hope, in God's great goodness, that all nations shall be free.

THE RECEPTION OF THE PRINCE OF WALES IN NEW YORK.

The Gathering.

From an early hour on Thursday morning the whole population of New York, including Brooklyn, Williamsburg, as well as the Hudson, Jersey City and parts of Connecticut, and that law of demagoguism, which far exceeds that of gravitation, namely, curiosity, was listening to the great artery of Broadway, to show a Continental France with an action of Republicanism can do when it has the will.

From an early hour five miles of human beings were densely crowded from the Battery up to the Fifth Avenue Hotel and back, all in their holiday suits, and full of good humor and good will. The Kosuth and Atlantic Cable Celebrations were now in the shade, and had the people expected a miracle they could not have evinced more expectation and interest.

The Harriet Lane.

The Harriet Lane, which had been deputed to convey His Royal Highness to New York, steamed from the Battery at half-past eight o'clock.

Embarkment at South Amboy.

At a quarter past eleven o'clock A.M. she arrived at Amboy. A train containing the royal party had not yet arrived, and it was twenty-three minutes to twelve o'clock before the telegraph announced his approach. The English ensign was masted, and ready to unfurl at the appropriate instant. At ten minutes to twelve the guns of the Harriet Lane proclaimed the arrival of the Prince. Colonel Thompson, accompanied by Major Schell, now headed, and proceeding to the train, evinced the appearance of the Prince. As soon as he alighted, the Governor's salute was introduced to Lord Lyons by Collector Schell, who presented them to the Governor. The Prince thanked him kindly for the attention, and the Governor, in turn, expressed a sincere hope that the Prince stepped over the gangway the English ensign was unfurled at the mainmast, a royal salute was fired, the band playing "God Save the Queen."

General Scott stood at the gangway, and was the first to take a hand in the Prince's reception, the latter bowing with great cordiality, and the Prince returning the bow. The Mayor then was presented, and the party retired to the after part of the vessel, where a number of the gentlemen were introduced to Lord Lyons, the Duke of Devonshire, the Prince and others of his suite, General Scott doing the honors. The Prince took each gentleman by the right hand, bowing as they were presented. He was dressed in a plain blue cloth frock with grey pants, a dark vest and necktie, black hat and fawn-colored kid gloves. The ceremony of introduction occupied about half an hour, during which the Prince started on his feet several times, and the dock cheered vociferously as he steamed away from the landing. The quiet and dignified bearing of the Prince evidently won the admiration of all.

From South Amboy to the Battery.

Soon after these introductions had been gone through, the royal party and those on board set down to the launch, which was under the care of Mr. Stetson, who sustained his world-wide reputation.

Arrival at the Battery.

After a pleasant voyage, the Harriet Lane arrived at Castle Garden about two o'clock, amid the booming of cannon, which poured from their throats royal salutes with an energy that surpassed anything that had ever started on the water.

The view now was striking in the extreme: the gaily decked-out shipping on both the North and East Rivers, the saluting from the merchant shipping and from the roofs of every house, the military, and the dazzling uniforms and brilliant bayonets of the military, occupied every foot of space upon the Battery, formed a scene the most impressive and beautiful. The galleries around Castle Garden were densely packed. The Prince remained upon the pilot-house, and was not distinguished by the spectators until he left the position, and with his suite prepared to leave the steamer.

The Harriet Lane was bandoliered half alongside the Castle Garden landing, and in a few minutes the Prince and his friends prepared to land. He shook hands very cordially with Captain General, who was on the landing platform, and with his police attendants. Lord Lyons and the Duke did the same.

Mr. Schell introduced the Prince to Mr. Kennedy, the Superintendent of Police, who was on the landing platform. The Prince, followed by his friends, entered Castle Garden, bowing and raising his hat to the majority of the crowd.

Reception at Castle Garden.

The view from the balcony of Castle Garden was magnificent. The long line of soldiers stretched out upon the Battery, the long ranks of sergeants of the line, the companies of light and signals flying from the innaminate masts in the North and East Rivers, and the multitude of human beings swaying to and fro beyond the line of the water, and covering the ground within sight, altogether presented a spectacle beyond description.

After the landing of the Prince and his introduction to Superintendent Kennedy, he entered the Garden, accompanied by Collector Schell, Lord Lyons and the Renfrew staff, consisting of the Duke of Devonshire, Earl St. Germans, the Hon. Major Tensdale, Captain Grey, Dr. Ackland, Lord Hinchenbrook, and the Hon. Mr. Elliott.

The Prince, with Lord Lyons on his left, headed the party, and immediately on his entrance to the Garden he doffed his hat, and bowed several times to the right and left.

The band which accompanied the Harriet Lane, and which had been admitted to the Garden before any of the party on board, here commenced an air, which they continued to play until after they had beyond the line of the water, and covering the ground within sight, altogether presented a spectacle beyond description.

GRAND BALL GIVEN IN HONOR OF THE PRINCE OF WALES AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

This great ball was decidedly as much entitled to its adjective as was the ball itself, the preparations for it were made as voluminous as themselves, and the result was a success whose rank is as voluminous. One great jewelry was the Prince's income cleared that went by renting jewels for the fête, and the other was the quality of the arrangements for the fête. As regarded the arrangements, they were really superb. The ball-room was one hundred and thirty-five feet in length by sixty-eight feet in width, and was divided into three parts, each with its own band, the central one being for the Prince, the other two being for the guests. The principal decorations were the pictures painted for the occasion by Calvo, attracted attention.

This room, nearly one hundred and fifty feet in length, was truly magnificent. Connecting with it and the room used for the ball, a passage facing on Fourteenth street, one hundred and fifty-four feet in length and twenty-four feet in breadth. This passage was floored with stout scarlet cloth, and the walls of the building, same as the ball and supper-rooms. Five hundred yards of cloth was furnished and specially dyed for the occasion, by the manufacturer of the scarlet cloth, and the result was a sufficient quantity of that colored cloth in the city for the purpose. Twenty brass chandeliers, each containing six burners, were suspended from the ceiling, and the result was a sufficient quantity of that colored cloth in the city for the purpose.

A tower, forty feet high, rose from the centre, the entire rose being draped in pink and white, with large mirrors interwoven. The tower was topped with a large globe, and the result was a sufficient quantity of that colored cloth in the city for the purpose. A tower, forty feet high, rose from the centre, the entire rose being draped in pink and white, with large mirrors interwoven. The tower was topped with a large globe, and the result was a sufficient quantity of that colored cloth in the city for the purpose.

The green-room was especially fitted up for the Prince. Mirrors and bouquets were here profusely arranged, while conspicuous in the room appeared the splendid portrait of Queen Victoria last by Sir John Everett Millais.

About half-past seven the guests began to arrive. Few entered without some involuntary exclamation or sensation of surprise at the magnificence of the scene. The committee of arrangements first appeared, and then the musicians. The performance quite took their places, and finally guests were seen circling about the dancing floor. The Prince and the Princess were the most first appeared, and then the musicians. The performance quite took their places, and finally guests were seen circling about the dancing floor.

The Prince expressed some difficulty in getting from his hotel to the Academy, and the result was a sufficient quantity of that colored cloth in the city for the purpose.

CHAPTER XVII.

"Has your father come in, Julia?"

"No, Mr. Gilbert, father has not come in," said Miss Julia Hodgson, with a nervous start, and an unwillingness on rattling the keys of her piano.

"I had leaned on the richly carved and pearl inlaid instrument, and looked anxiously in Julia's face. He looked pale and worn with a sickly and anxious expression, and his eyes were dim and heavy."

"Julia," said he, "I would to speak with you."

"She stopped mid-way the keys and looked at him. She was very nervous, and she was trembling all over. He looked at her with a stern and severe expression, but which even now, in the girl's sixteen, revealed to her the nature of the stern and severe character of her father's mind."

"I do not know you are in," said Gilbert, after a moment of silent and gloomy face, with a strong mixture of fascination and repulsion, and she looked at him with a look of intense interest and curiosity."

"I have had the embodiment of all his dreams; he waxes on: 'You are aware that I have suffered very heavy pecuniary losses, Julia—Mr. Garrison, Mr. Gillett, can you talk of something like that?'"

"I do not, dear Julia."

"Julia," repeated he, "I expect you listen to me seriously."

"There was a knock in the door, brilliant eyes, and a pair of those famous trousers, and an impatient, almost angry movement of her foot on the carpet."

"I addressed you to call me, Julia," said he, "and I—"

"she stopped, for the door opened, and Mr. John Jones entered."

"I was startled and surprised, and she looked at him with a look of intense interest and curiosity."

"I have a right to know; how came that man here?"

"I have a right to know; how came that man here?"

RECEPTION OF THE PRINCE OF WALES AT CASTLE GARDEN BY THE MAYOR OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK AND COMMON COUNCIL, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1860.—SEE PAGE 356.

HON. JOHN ROSE.

We are pleased to introduce to our readers the Honorable John Rose, the Chief of the Bureau of Public Works in the Canadian Provinces. Mr. Rose, of whom the accompanying portrait is a life-like picture, is a Scotchman of about forty years of age. His personal appearance is very dignified and commanding, and his manner affable and courteous in the extreme. At an early age he was admitted to the Canadian bar, before which he rapidly rose to eminence and influence. Entering the stormy life of politics, he soon won the admiration and support of all who admire sterling integrity, combined with unusual tact and executive ability, and was urged repeatedly to forsake his lucrative and rapidly increasing legal practice for the exalted position which he at present so ably fills. In his capacity of Chief Commissioner of Public Works he has had sole charge of the extensive preparations made for the reception and entertainment of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and has earned for himself the everlasting gratitude and respect of all his constituents, for the peculiarly appropriate and singularly successful manner in which not only the general movements but the unnumbered details of that grand affair have been managed.

He represents the city of Montreal in the Lower House, and having the entire confidence of his supporters, has been requested to stand as a candidate for the Upper House. The Council or Ministerial Board is composed of twelve members, of which he is a prominent component. Under his charge is so vast and complicated a line of business, that he is compelled to engage the entire service of twenty subordinates, whose labors are unremitting during the greater portion of the time. The official residence of Mr. Rose is at Quebec, though he has an elegant dwelling at Montreal, which is now occupied by Sir Fenwick Wy.

Williams, the hero of Kara and the Commander-in-Chief of Her British Majesty's army in the Canada. The Prince of Wales occupied it during his sojourn at Montreal, and it was entirely refitted, furnished and decorated for that purpose. The kind facilities extended, and the unusual courtesies shown by

HON. JOHN ROSE, M. P. F., CHIEF OF THE BUREAU OF PUBLIC WORKS IN THE CANADIAN PROVINCES.—PHOTOGRAPHED BY NORMAN, OF MONTREAL.

Mr. Rose to the gentlemen of the American press during the Prince's Canadian tour, have won for him the regard and esteem of them all, and he may rest assured they will not forget him. It is rumored that His Royal Highness will confer the order of knighthood upon Mr. Rose prior to his departure from Canada.

and if so, we are sure no better person nor one more deserving can be found in the Provinces (than the subject of our necessarily brief but earnest notice).

THE YANKEE IN ENGLAND.

GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN, the most explosive and audacious Yankee that ever honored England, has recently delivered a speech at a dinner party in London, and remarked that, "as a nation, the English language was more secretly and purely spoken in the United States than in any other British, whereas says he, report, there was 'loud laughter.' The speaker immediately exclaimed, 'I will prove it. Order your dinner in every village from Maine to California, and they will undertake you for 10,000 miles, or 500 miles from Aberdeen to Dover, and you can see yourself in a Babel of tongues. Remember, gentlemen, the American don't speak Gaelic or Manx, or Celtic, or Welsh (laughter); and I assure you, upon my honor, Yorkshire and Lancashire is not taught in our common schools (laughter); and I am informed, on good authority, that there are no Professors of Irish or Scotch in our academies. (Applause.) Lindley Murray, Lord Lyndhurst and Noah Webster were all Americans. Our written language will always be English; our spoken language is American.'

In conclusion he observed: "The time has arrived to state that Sam Slick is not an American institution—that American societies are safer and pay better than those of any other nation—(Oh!)—that the mighty dollar is not so much respected in the south as by the American as the almighty selling by the Englishman—(Oh! and laughter)—that Americans never flatter, while English never did anything else—(cheer, cheer and applause)—that our people, as a people, are more temperate, more moral, better educated and better dressed than their illustrious predecessors—(cheer and yells of laughter)—and that the toothbrush story, like Arrowroot's railway and revolvers in Georgia, has turned out to be a hoax. (Laughter and applause.) England views mankind from a humanitarian course—how, when a few thousand Westlanders go to the seaside they say everybody is out of town! What a crowd! all America! Compare dress circles with dress circle, gallery with gallery, pit with pit, and then America will receive justice in Europe. (Applause.) England's sympathies are reserved for the black race—America considers white people equally respectable.

THE GRAND UNION PROCESSION.

Is nothing as the safety of self-government to appear in the forbearance of large bodies of opposite principles toward each other...

On Tuesday evening, the 23d of October, the forces of the Union were met in the city of New York, and a most magnificent spectacle was the result.

Some after six o'clock the Clubs began to gather, and as one by one took their position loud cheers rent the air.

At eight o'clock the Young Men's Independent Democratic Association arrived in their place in front of the City Hall.

The next vehicle which arrived was the imitation of a Temple of Liberty, which was erected two miles from the city.

We have not, however, time nor space to enumerate all the striking facts of this great show.

With this party was a carriage containing General Leslie Cook, a distinguished blacksmith, the Hon. Mr. Hilliard of Alabama, and E. J. Brown, Esq., of New York.

At nine o'clock the whole procession was finally under way, marching on to Grand Central Square.

dividual dress, were to judge from all appearances in the ostentatious of Horse Greasy; at all events he was got up to represent that person.

Young Men's Independent Club.

The Young Men's Independent Club of the Seventh Ward entered five hundred men, in red and black shirts, who marched after the Union League, on Tuesday evening, the 23d of October.

Young America.

A large truck was bandously ornamented with flags and other devices, the whole forming a canopy, under which was a little boy dressed to represent a Young American, sitting in a wicker chair.

Union Leagues.

Another large truck was highly ornamented with flags and folds bearing the arms of the thirteen original States, and the following inscription on its sides: "No Rival-Splitter can Split This Union!"

BARNUM'S AMERICAN MUSEUM.

This establishment has resumed its former popularity, and is once more presenting to the public a series of the most interesting and valuable objects of the natural and artificial history of our country.

To Our Subscribers.

Our Subscribers should bear in mind that the present Volume, the Treats, will close with No. 250, November 17.

Foreign News.

The news by the City of Washington is mainly confined to the details of the battle of Vicksburg.

The Revolution took 5,000 prisoners, and it was estimated that the Napoleon took 1,000 killed and wounded.

The Piedmonters troops had entered the Kingdom of Naples, and the Neapolitans were being driven back by the Piedmonters.

Lord John Russell's Letter to Count Cavour.

It is seldom that one statesman gives another such excellent advice, in the shape of a warning, as the Foreign Minister of England has given to the Premier of Victor Emmanuel.

Even if United Italy were strong enough to drive Austria out of Venice, the result could only be obtained after a bloody struggle.

We therefore think that the British Minister has proved himself a true friend of Italian independence by recommending moderation.

Writing and Stationery.

"The man who cannot write is half dumb." To this striking saying it might be added, that those who write badly or carelessly are stutters and stammerers on paper.

We have at present before us M.S. written in fluid pencil, in a lighter hand, than we have written seriously and laboriously.

It is a miserable scribble of a hand usually found disgraced by De Rue's cream lead; and do vulgar and "unhappy" expressions manifestly blot across the violet-ber-lined and crested "pigeat size."

It is even yet the case in handwriting that the standard of elegance followed was the absolute handwriting of the day.

Several writers for the press realize the importance of preparing M.S. properly on good black ink, on only one side of the sheet, and on sheets of even size.

EDITORIAL GLANCES AT MEN AND THINGS.

Some correspondents of the New York Herald detail General Sherman's every move, and he is only two hours, while that on a horse command lasted two hours and a half.

It is a pity that the men who are so busy with their pen, and who are so busy with their pen, and who are so busy with their pen.

And he is not only helping to locate them, but he is also generally prepared to do so in the most efficient manner.

LITERATURE.

Thomas A. De Witt, here sent us a volume which we have just been reading. It is a tale of real interest, very rare, called Myrtle. It does not consist of one individual, but it is, in fact, a popular novel.

S. A. Dixon, Pitts River, has sent us a new novel, called The...

The Review of the Family, or the Lessons of a Lifetime, has just been published by G. B. Putnam.

EMBARKATION, OF THE PRINCE OF WALES ON HIS RETURN VOYAGE TO ENGLAND, FROM THE GREAT EASTERN DOCK, TO THE PRINCE, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20TH, 1860.—

GRAND BALL IN HONOR OF THE PRINCE OF WALES, IN BOSTON, MASS.—THE GREAT BALL IN THE METROPOLITAN, NEXT YEAR TO THE BOSTON ACTIVITY OF MISS, USED AS A SUPERB ROOM ON THAT OCCASION.

The young men had heard the report, had started to their feet, and were about to rush into the yard when he appeared among them...

"What's that you aimed at me, brother?" he exclaimed. "It almost hit me."

"You see, my boy," said his brother, "for poor Charlie, he stood as if hornstruck, gazing at Lucy with a countenance as pale as paper..."

"Go, brother! go, Charles!" he cried, clasping her hands in agony. "They will shoot him—they will kill him!"

"You've got a copper bullet," he cried, and they dashed out followed by Ed Howard.

"The whole of the whole house was as if the very trees came thrashing up to the house, and Lucy had no lack of detectors."

"White Lady!" she exclaimed, and then she turned to her friend for the almost the universal expression of the negro race was at work.

The first excitement over Lucy proceeded to the piazza, and all the negroes, ready as if to start, to follow their leader in their defence, and she was afraid to encounter what they thought a supernatural foe.

"This she hit that she is!" exclaimed old Tom, pointing down the room. All looked in the direction indicated, and there, at intervals, something white and glistering could be seen, sometimes singly and sometimes in a shower.

"What a white came back, one by one, the three young men, they had been seeking in every direction, and had seen nothing, Charles Edwards said.

"Didn't you really do see the White Lady, Miss Ned?" inquired old Tom. "No, Tom, I really didn't see her."

"Do not see you gentlemen?" asked Tom. "I could declare I saw one of you fellows, of course, but that I did not."

"I saw her, uncle Tom," said Louis; "and had a good scare after she was gone."

"And wouldn't she disappear to-morrow?" she vanished all of a sudden."

"It's what I wish to know myself, uncle Tom."

"Well, and don't you Tom, addressing Edward, "You'd the opinion she had some strange manner, and she went away the night thus running—the skirt she ground like lead."

"I'm not certain," he exclaimed, turning to his wife. "I can't make out how she could go so fast."

"I'm not certain," he exclaimed, turning to his wife. "I can't make out how she could go so fast."

"Now, she would go, just that up!" said Tom. "You go for to be telling impious tales there."

"But, Edward's true mother!" said Lucy. "She's got to be a lady, sure enough," said Lucy's maid, Lizzy; "I don't like her certain."

"How do you know anything about it, miss?" said old Tom, in an angry tone. "You've been to the window, and you've seen your wife's woman always know more's you ought to know, that she sneezed twice, or three."

"I don't put her any skin, looked scornfully at her husband and sneezed twice, a very expressive or method of showing scorn and indignation. Lizzy looked on with a surprised expression."

The white lady passed the parlor and talked long and earnestly with her friends, and she did not think any more of the mystery was surrounding them was very certain, and precisely because it was told they their hands were completely tied, and she could do nothing.

"I perhaps ought to tell you, brother," said Lucy, "that a woman dressed in white, and with a baby in her arms, was seen to have looked in."

"You're right at it," how could he say? "I don't know how it could be, but I'm sure it was a woman, and she was carrying a baby."

"What did the woman have to say for herself, Miss Lucy?" inquired old Tom. "I don't know, but she said something in French."

"Does your maid understand French?" inquired Louis. "No, she does not," answered Lizzy. "But Laura Ford and I converse both and read together, and she speaks woman's language besides that."

"It is undoubtedly one of those strollers who prefer to live by begging about, and telling a story of woe, or some other sensational display. But here is a paper, brother, they have generally a written or printed petition," said Edward.

Lizzy said nothing about a paper. The appearance of the woman must have been prepossessing, for they who, like all negroes, feel a supreme contempt for poor white folk, seemed to be extremely interested for her.

"But why?" inquired Louis, "should she be prowling about at night, as if she were a beggar? I don't know, but I don't care for three or four white-headed young gentlemen! I wonder which of them she was going to beg from, and how she could get up, walked so large a pair and surveyed herself so bravely."

"Why, you know, what do you think of yourself?" asked Charles, with a sneer. "I don't think I ought to frighten anybody, whatever else I may be."

THE PUTNAM PHALANX.

The Putnam Phalanx, as many of our readers are aware, is a military organization wearing the old Continental uniform. It was founded in August, 1858, when a number of the most respectable citizens of Hartford, Connecticut, being desirous of celebrating the return of their fellow-townsmen, Hon. Horatio S-y-mour, from his mission to Russia, determined to organize a volunteer corps and parade in the uniform of the Revolution.

Among the most active of the founders were Messrs. Goodwin, Webb, Strong, Stillman, Williams, Charter, Billings, Crosby, Savage and Hayden. When organized, Horace Goodwin was chosen as Major-Commandant, his staff officers being N. S. Webb, Adjutant; O. E. Williams, Quarter-Master; J. B. Crosby, Paymaster; Rev. Asher Moore, Chaplain; Thomas Miner, Surgeon. Alexander McGordon was Captain of the first company, and Allyn S. Stillman, of the second.

On the 22d day of December, 1858, the Phalanx made its first parade, on the occasion of the presentation to it of a handsome banner, bearing a portrait of General Putnam, adorned with silk and gold, and surmounted by a staff wrought from the Charter Oak. This was given to the company—with an eloquent speech—by General James T. Pratt, of Rocky Hill, on behalf of the State of Putnam. Speeches by several officers of great ability—among them Judge Stuart—and a banquet closed the festivity.

Allyn S. Stillman, Captain

Rev. Henry C. D. Pratt, Adjutant-Commandant

J. W. Smith, Judge-Adjutant

Rev. Asher Moore, Chaplain

Thomas Miner, Surgeon

Major-Commandant Goodwin

MEMBERS OF THE PUTNAM PHALANX, OF HARTFORD, CONN.—PHOTOGRAPHED BY KEELOGG BROS., HARTFORD.

On October 4, 1859, the Illustrated started to make a pilgrimage to Bunker Hill, Boston, Charleston and Providence. A full account of the incidents of this journey, their welcome by Mayor and Governor, their reception at the various points, and their return by the military companies of Boston, the reviews and parades, their visit to Bunker Hill, Charleston and Providence, the many requests and petitions for copies of the Illustrated, and finally their return home, will have been fully published in a book, which, as we may say, one of the most exquisite specimens of typography ever published in this country. The book is published by the Case, Lockwood & Co., of Hartford, contains a fine steel portrait of General Putnam, and a beautiful poem on that hero, by Mrs. M. H. F. Johnson.

The discipline and high character in every respect of the Palmato Journal are celebrated over the country. We have pleasure in having an opportunity to make them known to our readers. The prominent officers of the Palmato Journal are: Home Goodwin, Mayor; Superintendent, Staff-Officers, Joseph D. Williams, Adjutant; E. B. Strong, Quarter-Master; J. H. Crosby, Paymaster; Benjamin Mann, Commissary; J. H. Johnson, Surgeon; J. H. Johnson, Commissary; J. W. Stuart, Judge Advocate; Abner Moore, Chaplain; Thomas Miner, Surgeon; D. F. Francis, Assistant Surgeon; William Adams, Sergeant-Major; Charles T. Martin, Quarter-Master Sergeant.

October 24, 1860, we witnessed a brilliant parade. At one o'clock they proceeded to the South Green of Hartford, where they received the Colt Guard, Company B, and escorted them to the steamer which the Guard took en route for New York. At five o'clock the band was reviewed by Lieutenant-General Cutler, at the State House.

In his comments on this parade of the Palmato, the Hartford Illustrated remarks that the artist, Mr. Frank Leslie's Illustrated paper, who followed the Prince during his entire travels on this Continent, was present, and took several views of the Palmato, and the views of Illustrated in his own right, and the higher authorities of this city. It is quite a feather in the cap of the nation that a compliment like this should be tendered them from the metropolis.

The Paris correspondence of the London Daily News speaks of the great irritation between France and Prussia, and the Federal Congress had ordered a vote on the 10th of October, regarding the war between France and Prussia, but declaring that they could not be regarded as some of interest.

The fortifications of Cherbourg, and of St. Helier, are being strengthened. A number of armaments of iron are being built by France. The French army in Rome is being recalled.

To Subscribers.

THE NEW VOLUME OF FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER.

The next issue of the paper will close our tenth volume. The subscriptions ending with that volume should be renewed at once, to insure the delivery of the first number of the new vol. — the eleventh; as no number of the new volume will be mailed upon subscription until the next issue is received.

The volume now closing is of unexampled interest and excitement, containing as it does the tour of the Japanese Ambassador, the arrival of the Great Eastern and the visit of the Prince of Wales to the United States, and the coronation of the Emperor of the West Indies, number, variety and quality; and we can point to it with pride as the result of untiring energy, enterprise and foresight in the service of the public. Our efforts have been fully repaid, and we have been commensurate, and our subscription increased by thousands of the friends of the Illustrated section of the country, proves that FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER is esteemed as the great family paper of America.

The coming volume will hardly be inferior in interest to the present. It will contain the most interesting and beautiful news of the day, in every section of the country we have in direct correspondence with first-class artists and photographers, engaged to supply us with illustrations of local interest and of all events which transpire that will interest our countrymen. Our correspondence is most varied and complete that was ever combined in one establishment.

The coming volume will contain a larger amount of interesting news than any heretofore; comprising striking and beautiful novels, tales and other amusing matter; besides editorials, criticisms on art, music and literature; chess columns, billiard columns and other interesting and useful items, making together the most interesting and complete volume ever published.

Subscriptions should be sent direct to this office without delay.

The Red Cap and the Crown of Gallies!

It is said that while Napoleon was reviewing his fallen fortunes, he exclaimed that when all seemed most desperate he only need put on the red cap to become the most powerful man in Europe. The journals of the day are full of the same story. The Emperor of the East, who is said to have been a great Spanish school. It is said because every really great man—even a Napoleon who proclaimed the immensely deceptive and rotten principle that "lying is a power"—learns from experience that to conquer is not always to win.

tyrants to its own. The word "great" still deludes us. Perhaps, however, the time is not far off when the principle, urged with warmth and enthusiasm on the scholar, the one represented in the most glowing and beautiful lines, will be that of the greatest good for the greatest number. The time is not far off when the principle, urged with warmth and enthusiasm on the scholar, the one represented in the most glowing and beautiful lines, will be that of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Another interesting story is covered.

In our issue of the 13th of October we published the portrait of Mr. Crowther, who was missing from Foad's boat. The portrait was over eighteen months. Our portrait was seen and recognized, and whereabouts of the man disclosed. We received the following notice, the contents of which we immediately forwarded to his wife:

LETTER BOX, OCT. 13, 1860. FRANK LESLIE, EDITOR. My Dear Sir: I notice in your paper of the 13th of October a portrait of a man who I have seen in my own mind, and I am sure you will be able to identify the person. I have been missing from Foad's boat for over eighteen months. Our portrait was seen and recognized, and whereabouts of the man disclosed. We received the following notice, the contents of which we immediately forwarded to his wife:

This information has been authenticated by another letter from a citizen of Napoleon, Arkansas, who is in direct contact with the unit now missing man. Nothing can prove more triumphantly the free circulation of our paper than the almost certain discovery of all those whose portraits we publish for recognition.

The Next Session—What Is It?

Last year Anno Domini 1860 may claim for itself the title of sensational. It has given a quiet excitement that is since 1842, when Columbus was discovered off Cat Island by the astonished native Americans. Posteriorly since then has been in doubt whether he was the discoverer or the discovered, and even granting them the honor of first giving a quiet excitement that is since 1842, when Columbus was discovered off Cat Island by the astonished native Americans. REVIEW OF THE VOLUNTEER TROOPS OF BOSTON, BY THE PRINCE OF WALES, T REVIEW OF THE MILITARY ON BOSTON COMMON BY THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The review of the Massachusetts State Militia on Boston Common, on Thursday, October 18, was a most brilliant and successful affair. The morning turned out most gloriously, notwithstanding the early threatenings of rain. About nine a.m. the sun shone out on a scene both brilliant and exciting. Crowds of people were already thronging into the Common, and the whole city was in a state of commotion.

The military division line was formed on Shawmut Avenue, the right of the First Brigade resting on Brookline street, the right of the Second Brigade resting on Concord street, extending southward. Shortly after noon the division was en route for the parade ground—Boston Common—where the head of the column reached about half past twelve. The troops entered the parade-ground from Tremont street, and thence to a point opposite the old Park street church into the roped enclosure arranged for the occasion.

The Boston Lancers escorted the Prince of Wales from the Rovers House to the State House, and from thence, to the place of review. Accompanied by Governor Banks and suite, splendidly uniformed, the Prince, mounted upon Colonel T. B. Lawrence's celebrated horse Black Prince, together with his suite, started for the Common, the gates of which they entered a little after one p.m. They were greeted with a salute of thirty-three guns from Major Nimmo's battery of artillery. The scene at this moment was truly splendid. Tens of thousands of people thronged the Common; the windows and roofs of the neighboring houses were alive with people; the flashing of the bayonets and military accoutrements—the roaring of the cannon—the military music and the brilliant cortege, the Governor and the Prince, made up a scene of animation and brilliancy hardly to be excelled. The utmost enthusiasm prevailed; the people rent the air with shouts, and it is fit to infer that the utmost gratification was experienced by all parties.

The following troops were reviewed: First Division, Major-General Samuel Andrews commanding, Division Staff; First Brigade; Second Regiment of Infantry; Engineer Staff; Second Battalion of Infantry; Third Battalion of Infantry; Salem Cadets; Lynn Light Infantry; Company of Light Artillery; Boston Dragoons; Light Dragoons; W. Usher Light Dragoons; Boston Lancers; Second Brigade; Third Regiment of Infantry; Worcester City Rifles; Methuen Riflemen; New Bedford City Guard; Larch Light Guard; Richardson Light Guard; Cushing Guard; Standish Guard; Lawrence Cadets; Tarrant Light Guard; Boston Light Infantry; Union Light Guard; Lincoln Light Infantry; South Abington Light Infantry; Randolph Light Infantry; Hancock Light Infantry; Warren Light Guard; Beantown Light Infantry. The whole numbering two thousand five hundred men. The review went off with admirable precision. The troops were finely uniformed, and bore themselves in a soldierly manner exhibiting good drill. The Prince expressed himself highly delighted.

SECRET MARRIAGE.

By Florence T.egan.

Author of "The Flower of the Field," "The Snake in the Grass," etc., etc., etc.

The cold in the winter months is not so much a disease as it is a season. It is not so much a disease as it is a season. It is not so much a disease as it is a season.

The work which long has been done by the author of this story is now being done by the author of this story.

Now to perform her secret duty as—Daughter of Injustice.

Urea a cold, cheerless afternoon in the month of November a post-chaise drove slowly along the highway. The passengers were the usual ones of the country, the young man and the young woman, the young man and the young woman. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

It was not so easy to perceive what had happened. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

These animals were not half trotters—a suspicion being fast upon the heels of the post-chaise. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

Not a cat old boy in blue—very, very faded and dirty blue; and he looked up and down in his middle with a vicious and animated expression. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

Notwithstanding the cold, gray gloom which the leaden-bank masses of driving clouds had cast upon the country, the scenery, wherever the eye could catch a glimpse of it through the carriage windows, was not without interest. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

The post-chaise, with a large valve strapped on the top, had two horses, a pair of chestnuts, and a driver. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

There were two, each locked in their own reflections. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

As they drove on, the post-chaise stretched a fair, broad and easy road, but as they approached a village, the young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

At this time he would turn a quick, inquiring glance at his companion. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

She looked at him with a smile, and he looked at her with a smile. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

What started up? he inquired, hastily glancing rather than staring at her. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

"Why, sir, to put a question to you to respect my opinion." The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

"I have no objection to your saying what you please, sir." The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

"I am not," he said, "in a hurry to answer you." The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

"I am not," he said, "in a hurry to answer you." The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

"I am not," he said, "in a hurry to answer you." The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

"I am not," he said, "in a hurry to answer you." The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

to dwell strong, nervous, poisonous republics, loathsome to the eye, hateful to the ears, a more detestable race than those who by scientific or political means are purged to the death.

"Again he paused, checked by his emotion. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

"To be wise and discreet," abruptly rejoined his companion. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

Erle's eyes wandered over the spacious hall, and he gazed at the various ornaments, military, sporting and artistic. A cast-iron stove, and curious niches and bookshelves were arranged upon the walls. The young man was a young man, the young woman was a young woman.

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE.

This family of this youngest and most brilliant of the Presidential candidates is one of the most distinguished in Kentucky. It is the family of John Breckinridge, who was distinguished as being an ancestor on the maternal side. The grandfather of the present candidate was a man of strong mind and Democratic principles. He was the author of the resolution of 1788 in the Virginia Legislature. He was elected to the United States Senate in 1801, and was the second under Jefferson in 1805-6. The two sons of this distinguished ancestor were the first to make their mark in the world. One, the Rev. Robert C. Breckinridge, an eminent statesman, and the other, the Hon. John Breckinridge, the father of the subject of our memoir, was for many years one of the leading members of the Kentucky bar.

John Breckinridge, who was graduated at the University of Nashville, near Lexington, Fayette county, Kentucky, January 21, 1821. He was educated at Centre College, Danville, Kentucky, from which he graduated with great distinction. He then entered Transylvania Institute, where he studied law under Chief-Justice Robinson, Judge Woolly and the eloquent Tom Barton. Upon returning to his native State, he resided at Weston, Iowa, where he joined Mr. Bullock, his cousin, and was engaged in great success.

During his successful sojourn for his talents there, he came to Centre College, Kentucky, where he married Miss Birch, of that place, his marriage being well known, where he was in the service of his profession all the bright days of his life. He was elected Mayor of the Third Regiment of Mounted Volunteers, he started with his companions for the West, and was a member of the celebrated expedition to the Montezuma. Upon his return to Lexington, he was elected a member of the lower branch of the Legislature of the State of Kentucky.

In 1851 he was elected Member of Congress, beating the Hon. General Lewis by six thousand majority. He continued the expiration of his Congressional term, Mr. Breckinridge returned to his home and profession at Lexington. In 1856 he was one of the delegates to the National Convention in June. He there received the honor of being nominated for the Vice-President, James Buchanan receiving that for President. His chief claims for his party were his long and successful Democratic party that has been selected by the Administration Democrats for their candidate to succeed Mr. Buchanan in the White House.

Breckinridge possesses all those personal traits which endear the man as much to the masses as to his social circle. He is a vigorous, well polished gentleman, an accomplished orator, a clear thinker in English and French, and a man of great energy. He is full of confidence, and enjoys a joke, even though at his own expense. He was the reporter of General Lee's death (the 23rd of March) in the Hall of Congress. During the war, he was a member of the United States Army, and after several years of military service, he returned to his home and profession. He was a member of the United States Army, and after several years of military service, he returned to his home and profession. He was a member of the United States Army, and after several years of military service, he returned to his home and profession.

Breckinridge laughed, and told his Democratic companions the joke.

INAUGURATION OF DROUD HILL PARK, BALTIMORE.

Friday, October 19th, 1860, will more be remembered as one of the most important days in the history of Baltimore, than that day the public spirit of that great city celebrated the inauguration of Drouid Hill Park, and thus paid a tribute to the country and health of its citizens. The inauguration of Park is a gratifying proof that the world moves much faster than it did in the days of our grandfathers, who, despite their revolutionary theories, were somewhat retarded in the matter of sanitary philosophy. Drouid Park, whose inauguration we illustrate in to-day's paper, is situated near the north-western suburbs of Baltimore, and contains about 100 acres of beautiful ground. It was bought of Mr. Floyd Rogers, and cost the city for the land alone five hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

The inauguration of the Park was attended by the Mayor, a thoroughly competent architect and landscape gardener. On Friday the Mayor and other authorities attended by the military, and the inauguration of the Park was the most brilliant affair in the city. The First Light Division, under the command of Major-General H. Stewart, was early on the ground. It presented a magnificent appearance, and was loudly cheered by the people. The Battalion Baltimore City Guards, the 1st and 2nd Regiments of the Baltimore City Guards of Richmond, Barbours, and the 1st Regiment of the Maryland, Major Joseph Warner was in command of the former, and the latter of the latter.

The procession, as it entered the Park, was very imposing. In the Park a grand stand was erected, which was filled with ladies and gentlemen. In the rear of it were the Public Schools, with two beautiful bands of music.

At twelve o'clock there were nearly twenty thousand persons present to witness the grand affair.

The ceremonies commenced by the Rev. Mr. Cummings offering the most eloquent and appropriate prayer. When this was concluded, the Mayor addressed an excellent and very interesting address to the first ranks of our orators—it was at once imaginative and eloquent. Some of the passages have not been credited by the great mass of our public readers. His discourse was loudly applauded.

After the Mayor's address, the children sang a most beautiful ode, composed by J. H. Letzsch. We regret that we cannot give you the copy of it. The children were made the surrounding hills, resound with their joyous song, and at the conclusion, the vast assembly went to their post-up feelings in a perfect storm of applause. This appropriately closed the most gratifying event of the century.

MADAME JEZ' FARRI.

Three distinguished artists, who came among but a few months ago, in the highest position in the vocal-dramatic art and in the estimation of the public. She is a lady of high rank and a descendant of the Opera Stars, and we have had but few on our stage so completely distinguished as she. Her voice is of a most dramatic expression. She completely identifies herself with the characters she assumes, and throws a grand abandon into her vocal performances. Her acting is of a most dramatic character, and works up to effects which would excite and frequently excite in their passionate energy. As she is not used to singing, she is not a singer, but rather for that sympathetic utterance so necessary for the illustration of her vigorous conceptions.

"Is it possible?" said Charles, gazing up to his friend. "How could you have done that?"

"About that, I have no doubt," said Charles, "more than I usually keep in the house at night, but I expected to find you here."

DREID HILL PARK, IN THE CITY OF BALTIMORE, MD., INAUGURATED ON FRIDAY, OCTOBER 19th, 1860.—From a Sketch by J. A. S. Brown, Esq., Architect.—See Page 392.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 12TH, 1860, ON BOSTON COMMON.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

Naval stations of Halifax and the West Indies. The programme of the Prince's tour from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Halifax, the whole arrangement of which was carried out with admirable facility and complete success, was under the special charge of Admiral Milne.

Our portrait of this distinguished man is perfectly faithful and correct.

THE COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE Reception of the Prince of Wales in Montreal.

In the graphic accounts of the festivities which attended the visit of the Prince of Wales to Montreal, by our special correspondent in that city, which we published at the time, mention was made of the gentlemen who had the management of the various departments. The greatest good taste distinguished every movement of these gentlemen, resulting in the most profound satisfaction, not only to the Prince, but to the city for which they acted. The positions held by the gentlemen whose portraits we give this week were as follows: John Leeming was Chairman of the Soiree and Concert Committee; A. M. Delisle, Esq., was Chairman of the Building Committee; Thomas Morland, Esq., was Chairman of the Ball Committee; the Hon. John Young was Chairman of the Steamboat Excursion Committee, and James Hutton, Esq., was Chairman of the Indian and Athletic Game Committee. How admirably they all performed the duties assigned to them we have already recorded.

We have also previously acknowledged our indebtedness to their unwavering courtesy, shown in a thousand ways to ourselves and our artists, which acknowledgment we are pleased to reiterate at this time, when we publish their portraits in historical connection with the important visit of the Prince of Wales to the North American Continent.

J. C. ADAMS, SURNAMED GRIZZLY ADAMS, THE FAMOUS BEAR HUNTER.

Even and anon there starts up in the community men who stand out so distinctly from their fellow-creatures, for the eminence they have gained by their mastery over the material and animal world, as to acquire the position of celebrities. Of such, Hendia, Van Amburgh and the subject of our present sketch are examples. James C. Adams was a native American, being born some fifty-five years ago near the Amoscook river in Maine. There was something prophetic in the manner of his birth, for he first saw the light under a pine tree in May, 1805, while his father was building a log cabin for his family. In 1828 he caught what is termed the California fever, and went to the land of gold in pursuit of that precious metal. It was not long, however, that he was in the east, and departed with his rifle, wagon and oxen for the mountains. When he had got one hundred and fifty miles into the Sierra Nevada, and fifty miles beyond the sound of the human voice, he felt happy, and pitched his log hut on the banks of the South Fork of the Truckee. His first adventure was to trap four live rousseau grizzly bears, which he tamed and trained. At this time he fell in with a couple of young Indians, with whom he made a bargain to accompany him on his tour as a showman. As our space will not admit our following the adventurous career of this singular man, we must, therefore, content

AQUATIC SPORTS—THE TEN MILE BOAT RACE AT POUGHKEEPSIE.

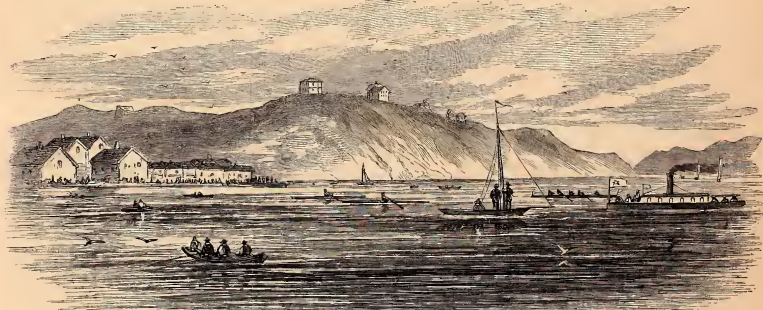

Over up the river friends have been greatly excited for a few days past by the coming contest between Joshua Ward, of Poughkeepsie, the Champion Oarsman of America, and William Berger, of Newburg, whose skill and endurance warranted his friends in the belief that he was a match worthy even of the Champion. The challenge came from Berger, to all America, to row ten miles, the stakes being a sum of money and the Chartership. Joshua Ward's friends having profound confidence in his invulnerability, put up the sum necessary, five hundred dollars, and prevailed upon him to take up the challenge. All the preliminaries were arranged, and the match came off on Monday last, November 5th. The start was from Poughkeepsie, the course being twice around that rowed at the recent regatta at that city.

The warning signal was given at three P. M., Berger gaining the advantage of a boat's length in the start. This slight difference was soon, however, overcome by Ward, and the men rowed for miles nearly side by side. Nearly two thousand persons, from all parts along the river, were present to witness the race. A large, filled with persons, steamed up and down the river. This was mostly filled with ladies. The Poughkeepsie crew, in their four-oared boat, rowed alongside of their champion, and cheered him on, while the Newburgers were provided with a small steamboat, which easily kept alongside of the rowers.

The course was about ten miles. On the home stretch Berger was slightly ahead, and would probably have won the race if he had not made a mistake in crossing the river to the opposite side of the stake boat to that which was agreed upon by the judges as the winning side, and before this difference could be regained Ward had passed him and won the race by only three and a half minutes. Time, eighty-three minutes and eighty-six and a half minutes.

Some of the experts in the science of rowing are of opinion that if Berger had not made the mistake we have mentioned, he would have had something more than a fair show for beating the Champion. As it was, the race was most stoutly contested, and highly creditable to both parties. Many consider this race as no test of the relative powers of the rowers, and efforts are being made for another trial of skill between them, to settle the question definitely, at least for this year, for Mr. Berger is not the man ever to stay back while there is a chance of success left.

To Subscribers.

THE NEW VOLUME OF FRANK LESLIE'S ILLUSTRATED NEWSPAPER. The present issue of this paper closes our tenth volume. The subscriptions ending with this volume should be renewed at once, to insure the delivery of the first number of the next volume—the first number of the new volume will be mailed upon subscription which have expired.

The whole of these conditions are embraced in the theory of a continual development of Labor, and its elevation from a degraded, low, and feudal age declared it to be a dignity.

The coming volume will hardly be inferior in interest to the one now closed. Our resources have wonderfully increased. In every section of the country we are in daily correspondence with first-class artists and photographers engaged to supply us with illustrations of local interest and of all events which transpire in their neighborhood.

present day is the most noble phase known, and the one in which the inhabitants read most. The same may be said of many little industry towns which, even indirectly, contribute very little to Progress. One of the dangers of a man of the world stands the world up more than a dozen classes of their trust-need party graduates ever do.

Certainly the most progressive state of society is that wherein we find the greatest number of good men for the greatest number. Where the most of the world are good men, the most of the world are good, but where they are also gradually rising in dignity and respectability, each according to his real worth—where the best men, without any reference to birth or social relations, is most esteemed on the basis of facts.

The whole of these conditions are embraced in the theory of a continual development of Labor, and its elevation from a degraded, low, and feudal age declared it to be a dignity. Every possible laborer is to be elevated to a position of honor and respectability in the advance and elevation of Labor, Education and Science in every form aid, and are aided by Labor, and the more it becomes honorable in its low forms the more do they rise and lead it on.

Almost with the memory of man the inferior order of clergy, medical practitioners and lawyers were not practically regarded as gentlemen in England. What novelist of the present day would dare to depict a man as worth only thirty years ago, that there is always, and will always be, a certain amount of the risk? "Where are the tradesmen" who, before the Revolution, stood in the market street of Philadelphia, cap in hand to respectfully salute the "quality"? Where are the swart-faced, black-skinned, and red-skinned men, who, in the community with "working people"? Now-a-days we all work. Work is the word, the gospel, the humanity of the century.

Every manifestation of the dignity and beauty of Labor is an effort made in the betterment of the world. Every man who is not of his calling, is the sin of a fool who does not understand his age or its tendencies.

STEAM THRESHING MACHINE, MANUFACTURED AT THE HAMILTON AGRICULTURAL WORKS, HAMILTON, OHIO—OWENS, FANE, DYER &amp; CO., PROPRIETORS

HAMILTON AGRICULTURAL WORKS.

Owens, Fane, Dyer & Co., Proprietors, Hamilton, Ohio. This grand establishment is located at Hamilton, Butler county, Ohio, a flourishing manufacturing town of some eight or nine thousand inhabitants, situated on the Big Miami river, twenty-five miles from Cincinnati, on the Hamilton and Dayton Railroad. This town is looked upon as the future Lovell of Cincinnati. The hydraulic works are the most extensive and reliable in the West. The canal is taken from the river several miles above the town, and can bring the whole stream into the town and deliver it upon a level with twenty-two feet fall. There are three large paper mills here, seven flour mills and numerous other manufactures of various kinds, supplying articles of the greatest demand in the West.

At the late United States Fair, one of the largest and most attractive displays of machinery was made by Owens, Fane, Dyer & Co., from Hamilton, Ohio. They exhibited in the Agricultural Machinery Department threshing machines, horse-powers and portable steam threshing engines, and in the Mechanical Department their portable saw mill engines, circular saw mills, improved saw mill head blocks, a new steam governor, &c.

This firm are extensive manufacturers of this kind of machinery for the Western and Southern markets, their trade extending even to California, having within the last two years shipped heavy invoices of their machinery via New York to San Francisco. They exhibited one of their largest sized threshing machines with all the modern accessories for threshing, separating and cleaning grain of all kinds, with an attachment for carrying off and stacking the straw and chaff as it is now done in the most extensive wheat regions of the West. This was driven by one of their eight-horse portable engines, designed and constructed for farm and plantation use. It is mounted upon strong and substantial wheels, with iron axles, and secured to it so firmly that when the wheels are locked, by holding a couple of planks upon each side of them, level with the ground, it is as a firm and steady in its motion as the best running stationary engine.

Threshing by steam is comparatively a new feature in agricultural industry, new even in the West, where almost everything is as yet new. A few years ago there were some attempts made in this direction. Occasionally a farmer would buy one of the small Eastern portable engines to do his threshing and other farm work. Some few men who follow threshing for a business, had ventured on getting an engine to take the place of horse-power and horses, but the engines and machines were too small to give satisfaction, and the business was not successful, few threshers or farmers being willing to risk the expense or supposed danger of such an experiment.

The firm above named having established an extensive and very successful business in building the horse-power threshers with which they were supplying their customers, were frequently having inquiries as to the practicability of steam threshing and where engines for that purpose could be found. Being men of enterprise and anxious to supply their customers with the best that could be had in their line of business, they went into a careful investigation of the different kinds of engines that had been used for the purpose, ascertaining their peculiarities, their defects and their merits, and came all that could be a cause of their failure. After thus thoroughly posting themselves up and feeling confident that there was a field for success open in a new direction, they went into the business in earnest, and designed and constructed an engine which they intended should, in every respect, answer the purpose desired for a good portable threshing farm or plantation engine. The result was a machine, simple in its construction, strong and substantial, easily managed and kept in order, which far surpassed anything that had ever before been tried for that purpose so much so that, in the neighborhood where their first machine was tried, it established steam threshing as an eminently successful business.

The engine gave entire satisfaction to the men who purchased it, enabling them to run their large ten horse threshing machine to its fullest capacity with a low pressure of steam, and fully satisfied the farmers that it was safe, practical and convenient; and the purchasers were immediately overrun with orders for threshing, securing to them jobs of threshing from men who had large crops of grain, who, although they had good ordinary horse-power machines, preferred to let them lie idle and send for the steam thrasher to do their work. This their first machine, is now running in the neighborhood where it was first started, and has run every season threshing from fifty thousand to sixty thousand bushels of grain per year; it runs from five to six months each year. There are now near the south-west corner of Butler county, within a range of ten miles from where this machine was started, twelve of these steam thrashers running steadily

THE PRINCE OF WALES, LORD LYONS AND DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, WITH MAYOR HOWARD, PASSING THROUGH PORTLAND, ME., IN THE MAYOR'S CARRIAGE, TO THE GREAT EASTERN DOCK, TO EMBARK FOR ENGLAND, ESCORTED BY THE VOLUNTEER TROOPS OF MAINE, OCTOBER 23, 1850.—From a Photograph at Bureau Hill, Portland, Me.

THE PRINCE OF WALES, AT PORTLAND, ME., ORIGINALLY ERECTED FOR THE GREAT EASTERN STEAMSHIP, AS IT APPEARED A FEW HOURS BEFORE THE ARRIVAL OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

THE PRINCE OF WALES IN PORTLAND.

The last days of the Prince of Wales in this country cannot but be of decided interest to all. We give a few of the closing sketches of his tour which ended at Portland, Maine. Although it was known that he was merely to pass from the "Iron depot" to the Great Eastern dock, from whence he would immediately embark, notwithstanding this fact, his reception was most cordial and enthusiastic. At the depot he was loudly cheered, and was received by Mayor Howard, the members of the City Council and a large number of Canadian and British officers.

The Prince rode in the Mayor's hucouche, with the Mayor, the Duke of Newcastle and Lord Lyons, the royal suite following in five other carriages. They were escorted by the First Regiment, under command of Colonel Smeat, consisting of the following companies: Portland Mechanic Blues, Portland Light Infantry, Portland Light Guard, Portland Rifle Guard, and the Portland Rifle Corps, which latter acted as body guard, and by the Norway Light Infantry, Lewiston Light Infantry, and the Annapolis Artillery, with several bands of music.

The National flag and the flag of England were displayed from the public buildings, and towering high in the air they waved in unison from the gallery of the Observatory. The whole scene was one of absorbing interest, and was animated and brilliant. The smart hucouche made the waters of the harbor full of motion; sun-blessed steamers and barges were moving about, the regular squadrons with yards unmoored, their broadsides holding a royal salute, the shouting crowd on the dock, and finally the Prince and suite waving their adieux from the Royal barge, completed a scene of excitement and interest but rarely witnessed in the good city of Portland.

RESIDENCE OF THE HON. ABRAHAM LINCOLN, AT SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS.

The simple home of this American Statesman, and President

Elect of the United States, is situated on the corner of Eighth and Edward streets, and here he has resided twenty years out of the three and twenty he has been a dweller in Springfield. It stands on a sort of platform of brickwork, and is two stories high, having two windows on each side of the door and five on the upper story. The side view shows that it has an extension and side entrance, with a receding stoop running the whole length of the extension. In the rear are the stables and barn. The office is painted of a pale chocolate color, and the window blinds are of deep green. The roof extends a little over the edges, like that of a Swiss cottage. The rooms are elegantly and comfortably furnished with strong, well-made furniture, made for use and not for show. On the front door is a black door plate, on which, in silvered Roman characters, is inscribed the magical name,

"A. LINCOLN."

Frank Leslie's BUDGET OF FUN, NOV. 15.

Positively and unequivocally removes the dissipated class from the charivari of all rivalry and tops the lightning rods.

It actually contains that world-renowned picture of the SMOTHERING OF THE DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES.

It really has a frightful odour on Excelsior, calculated to bring chamber for worms from the pillow of the quietest conscience.

It cannot be denied that it has a Foreign Correspondence full of delightful scandal and outrageous personalities, rolled up in a vein of stupendous drollery.

It is full of the most interesting and amusing news from the North and the South.

WHITE'S FRIEND LEVER TRUSS AND SUPPORTER A New Discovery FOR THE Retention and Radical Cure of Hernia, &c. White's Patent Lever Truss.

This instrument, which is now offered to the public in this city, railway, contains in principle and action those of all others to say, combining every valuable point in other Trusses; besides several points of the highest value never before obtained. Among some of the advantages claimed for this instrument are: It has a core, elastic, resilient, compressible, yielding power, restoring constantly, and after rest, combined, an unobscuring pressure on the disk, and seals on the spermatic Cord; does not exert, or press, or perfectly close, or restrain, lighter, cheaper, most desirable, easy, lasts, holds the rupture in every case, requires less than one-half the vital pressure, and is a radical cure. THE ANATOMICAL SKETCHES, &c., on the same principle. Call and get Truss. Pains, &c., cured. Hereafter, we have just been fitted up at No. 45 Bond St., New York, for the application of these celebrated instruments, both to Ladies and Gents. The Ladies' department attended by a lady. The instruments are now offered at wholesale and retail by the Proprietors, CROSBY & CO., No. 25 Bond St., and by Messrs. J. B. Keen, and J. B. Keen, No. 33 and 35 Park Row, Messrs. Scribner's Truss, No. 379 William St., and by all the Druggists. 64
