ARGUMENT.

Lady Harriet, a lady of rank at the court of Queen Anne of England, tired of the amusements which court-life affords, forms a plan to visit the Servant's Fair at Richmond in the disguise of a servant girl in search of employment. She is accompanied by Nancy, her maid, and Sir Tristan, a cousin and admirer of hers, and rather advanced in years, all appropriately attired for the occasion.

Hither also repair two young farmers, Lionel and Plunkett. Lionel is the adopted child of Plunkett's parents, now both deceased. His parentage is unknown. His father was found, one evening, at the door of the farm-house, where he had sunk down from exhaustion. Lionel, then a small boy, was with him. Both were taken in and provided for, but the father soon died, leaving his son to the charity of Plunkett's parents. He left to his son nothing but a ring, with the injunction to present it to the Queen if he should ever be in distress. The two foster-brothers come to the Fair with the purpose of engaging help for their farm, which had been left to their management by their mother, just deceased. Here they are struck with the personal appearance of Lady Harriet and her maid, and offer to engage them. The Lady and Nancy, who relish this joke exceedingly, accept the offer and take the earnest-money, unaware that thereby they are bound in law to serve them for the space of one year. When they want to leave the Fair, the farmers detain them; Tristan's interference is useless, and as Lady Harriet does not wish to reveal her name and character, lest her reputation should suffer by it, she is obliged to mount with Nancy the farmer's wagon and drive off with them.

Arrived at the farm, the foster-brothers soon find out that their new servants know absolutely nothing of their duties. But as Lionel is quite smitten with the Lady, and Plunkett pleased with the maid, their domestic incapacity is excused. Nancy teases Plunkett, who in his turn gets angry. The maid, frightened, runs away to hide in the kitchen, pursued by Plunkett. Lionel, left alone with his new servant, (who has adopted the name of Martha,) makes advances. Lady Harriet answers evasively. Asked to sing, the Lady treats him to the old Irish ballad, "The Last Rose of Summer." Lionel, who now is completely enamored, asks her to become his wife. Lady Harriet laughs at him. They are interrupted by Plunkett and Nancy, the latter just caught after a hard chase. The clock strikes midnight, and masters and servants part to go to rest. Then Tristan, who has followed the track of the prisoners, enters through a window and assists in the escape of the ladies. Plunkett, who in his apartment has heard loud talking in the hall, comes in again, meaning to send the servants to bed, whom he thinks yet up and chattering. Seeing the window open, and hearing the noise of carriage wheels dying away in the distance, he becomes alarmed, thinks they have been robbed, and calls in Lionel. They become aware of the flight of their servants; Plunkett rings the large bell out in the farm-yard; the whole neighborhood assembles, hear what has transpired, and all start in pursuit of the fugitives, who, however, make good their escape.

A little while after this occurrence, the Queen, with the Ladies of her court—among whom are Lady Harriet and her maid—hunt in a forest adjoining the village of which Plunkett's farm forms a part. A accidentally Plunkett and Lionel fall in with a party of huntresses, headed by Lady Harriet. They recognize their former servants; but the ladies deny all knowledge of them. Their cortege comes to their assistance, and the two farmers are about to be arrested when Lady Harriet, who at last was touched by Lionel's wild grief, causes them to go off unharmed, stigmatizing them as madmen, unworthy of serious notice. Lionel, driven almost frantic by the cruel calmness with which Martha pretends not to know him, bethinks himself that he has the ring left him by his father. He entrusts it to Plunkett, and as the Queen is passing by, Plunkett immediately delivers it to her. By means of this ring it is found out that Lionel is the only son of the late Earl of Derby, who ended his days in disgrace, into which he unjustly had fallen. Queen Anne causes the title and all the possessions of the late Earl to be restored to the son by an Act of Parliament.

Lady Harriet has, after the unfortunate meeting in the forest, become aware that she is deeply in love with Lionel, and now, anxious to re-establish herself in the favor of the new-created earl, contrives to be the first one to communicate to him the news of his parentage. But Lionel receives her coldly, and when the lady, who is a prey to the most violent feelings of affection towards Lionel, and of remorse for having repulsed him so harshly, offers her hand to him, and kneeling, prays him to accept her, he even then cannot overcome the bitter feeling in his heart towards the false and cruel lady. But the indefatigable Lady Harriet, with the assistance of Plunkett, who in his alarm for the health, and even life of his foster-brother, was easily persuaded to take part in the scheme, contrives still another plan to bring about a reconciliation. A part of the lady's park is artfully transformed into a fac-simile of the market-place at Richmond. Farmers and servants appear, a counterfeit sheriff presents himself, and the lady in her peasant's dress mingles with the throng. Hither Lionel is conducted. At the sight of Lady Harriet in the costume of a servant all his former love for her comes back, and the two lovers are at last united. So are Plunkett and Nancy; and the curtain descends on two happy couples.

MARTHA.

OVERTURE.

The first system of the Overture begins with a piano introduction. The music is written for a grand piano in 3/4 time. The right hand starts with a series of chords, while the left hand plays a rhythmic accompaniment of eighth notes. A dynamic marking of ff (fortissimo) is present. The tempo is marked risoluto. (resolute).

The second system continues the piano introduction. The right hand features a melodic line with some grace notes, while the left hand maintains the eighth-note accompaniment. The key signature remains one sharp (F#).

The third system shows the piano introduction continuing. The right hand has a more active melodic line with some slurs, and the left hand accompaniment becomes more complex with some sixteenth-note patterns.

The fourth system features a more prominent melodic flourish in the right hand, starting with a grace note and a series of eighth notes. The left hand accompaniment continues with eighth notes. A fermata is placed over the final note of the right-hand flourish.

The fifth system is marked Larghetto. and features a change in time signature to 9/8. The right hand has a melodic line with some grace notes, and the left hand plays a steady eighth-note accompaniment. The key signature remains one sharp (F#).

The sixth system continues the Larghetto section. The right hand has a melodic line with some grace notes, and the left hand plays a steady eighth-note accompaniment. The key signature remains one sharp (F#).

The first system of the musical score consists of two vocal staves and a piano accompaniment. The vocal staves are in treble clef with a key signature of two flats (B-flat and E-flat). The piano accompaniment is in bass clef. The music features a melodic line in the vocal parts and a rhythmic accompaniment in the piano part.

The second system of the musical score includes two vocal staves with lyrics and a piano accompaniment. The lyrics are: "Ah!... Ah!... ach!...". The piano accompaniment continues with a steady rhythm. A dynamic marking of p (piano) is present above the vocal lines.

The third system of the musical score includes two vocal staves with lyrics and a piano accompaniment. The lyrics are: "Ah!... Ah!... ach!...". The piano accompaniment continues with a steady rhythm. A dynamic marking of p (piano) is present above the vocal lines.

(Lady Harriet and Nancy mount with Lionel and Plankett a farmer's wagon which is driven up in the rear of the stage. Plankett takes the reins, and the curtain falls while they depart.)

ACT SECOND.

QUARTET.

No. 7. Siam giunti, o giovinette. (This is your future dwelling.)

The great hall of a farm-house. In the middle an outer door. Close by the same hangs a stout rope connecting with a large bell outside. On the right a window, and before it a bench. On the left a side door; a table and several stools. In the corner two spinning-wheels. Farming implements hang about on the walls.

PIANO. Andante.

Plunkett opens the outer door and enters, followed by Lionel. They invite the ladies, who are lingering behind, by gestures, to come in. Lady Harriet and Nancy enter, hesitating at every step.

FINALE.

No. 22. CHORUS. Là le panche su due file. (Every thing is now prepared.)

An open place in front of Pluckett's farm-house. Country people and servants, busily arranging booths, benches &c. in the same manner they were disposed of on the market place at Richmond. Some of the country people dress up a farmer in the garb of a magistrate. During the Chorus Lady Harriet and Nancy enter in their peasant dresses.

Allegro poco vivace.
