Key for Catholicks,

To open the Jugling of the Jesuits, and satisfie all that are but truly willing to understand, whether the Cause of the Roman or Resormed Churches be of God; and to leave the Reader utterly unexcusable that after this will be a Papist.

The first Part.

Containing some Arguments by which the meanest may see the Vanity of Popery; and 40. Detections of their iFraud; with Directions, and Materials sufficient for the Consutation of their Voluminous Deceits: particularly refelling Boverius, Richlieu, H.T's. Manual, some Manuscripts, &c.

With some Proposals for a (hopeless) Peace.

The Second Part sheweth (especially against the French, and Grotians) that the Catholick Church is not United in any meerly Humane Head, either Pope or Council.

To his Highness

SIR,

Hese Papers presume to tender you their service, because the Subject of them is such, as it most neerly concerneth both us and you that you be well acquainted with. The Roman Canons that batter the Unity, Catholicism and Purity of

Church of Christ, are mounted on the frame which I have here demolished. The swords, and pens, and tongues that you are now engaged against, and which you must expect from henceforth to assault you, are whetted and managed by the senseless, tyrannous, un-godly principles, which I have here Detected. As unreasonable as they appear to the unprejudiced, they are such as have animated the studies and diligent endeavours of thousands to captivate the Princes and Nations of the Earth to the Roman yoke. As vain as they appear to us that see them naked, they are such as have divided and distracted the Churches of Christ, and troubled and dethroned Princes, and laid them at the feet of the Roman Pope; They have absolved fubjects from their Oaths and other obligations to fidelity: They have involved many a Nation in blood: O the streams of the blood of Saints that have been shed by these Roman Principles, in Savoy, France, Bobemia, Poland, Germany, Ireland, England, and many other Lands! As easie a war as here I manage, it is against those adverse Principles that have armed Thoufands and Millions against the innocent, or against their lawful Soveraigns, whom God had bound them to obey: They have fastned knives in the breasts of the greatest Kings, as the lamentable case of Henry the third and fourth of France doth testifie: They have in a few days time in Paris, and the adjoyning parts of France, perfidiously butchered Nobles and other persons of eminency, and people of all sorts, to the number of neer thirty thousand (as Thuanus reckoneth them, if not forty thousand, as Davilah.) The Doctrines which I here confound, have invaded England by a Spanish Armado, (whether by the Popes confent, and upon the account of Religion, I have after shewed out of their own Writers:) they have prepared knives and poylon for our Princes, which God did did frustrate: they have laid Gunpowder to blow up King and Parliament, and hellishly execute the fury of the deluded zealots in a moment, and then to have charged the Puritans with the fact: They have in a time of Peace, by a sudden insurrection, murdered so many thousands in Ireland in a few days or weeks, as posterity will scare believe. They are dreadful Practicals, and not meer speculations that we dispute against. I befeech you therefore that you receive not this as you would do a Scholastick or Philosophical Disputation about such things as seem not to concern you; but as you would interess your self in a Disputation upon the Question, Whether you should be deposed or murdered as an Heretick? And whether we should be Tormented and burnt as Hereticks? And whether the lives of all the Princes and People upon earth whom the Pope judgeth Hereticks, should be at his mercy? &c. so do in this cause. I speak not this to provoke you to deal bloodily with them, as they do with the fervants of the Lord! I abhor the thoughts of imitating their cruelty! It is only the Necessary Defence of your Life, and Dignity, and the Lives of all the Protestants that are under your Protection and Government, and the fouls of men, that I defire. On what terms we stand with those men whose Religion teacheth them to kill us if they can, and to venture their lives for it, is easie to understand. When we have no fecurity from them for our lives, but their difability to destroy us, we must disable them or die. I utter not melancholy dreams nor flanders: I have here shewed it in the too plain and copious Decrees of the approved General Council at Lateran, that the depofing of Princes, and absolving their Subjects from their fidelity, and giving their Dominions to others, not only for supposed Heresie, but for not exterminating such as deny Transubstantiation, &c. is an Article of their Faith; and no man can disown it, without disowning Popery in the Essentials. If once they will renounce the Decrees of General Councils approved by the Pope, we shall be soon agreed. Sith Costerus Enchirid. cap. 1. p. 46. Qua sane Decreta si veritatem, si obsignationem Spiritus Sancti, si prasentiam Christi spectes, idem habent pondus & momentum quod Sancta Dei Evangelia. They believe these Decrees to be as true as the Gospel. I need not therefore tell you that Bolius Hofliensis, and many more of them make the Pope to be the Lord of all the World: Or that Bellarmine and the stronger side do carry it, as [The common judgement of all Catholick Divines, (see what a rabble he heaps up De Pontif. Rom. li. 5. c. 1.) that the Pope, ratione spiritualis, habet saltem indirecte potestatem quandam; eamq; summam in temporalibus. Which cap. 6. he faith; Tis just such over Princes as the soul hath over the body or sensitive appetite; and that thus he may change King. doms, and take them from one and give to another, as the chief Spiritual Prince, if it be but necessary to the safety of souls.] cap. 78. He gives us his proof of this. And whether the Pope do take your Government to be for the good of fouls, I need not tell you. It is the stupendious judgement of God on Christian-Princes for their fins, that they have been so far blinded as so endure such an usurper folong, and have not before this blotted out his name from among the fons of men. [Non licet, &c. It is not lawful (faith Bellarmine ib. c. 7.) for Christians to Tolerate an Infid.l, or Heretical King, if he endeavour to draw his Subjects to his-Heresie or unbelief: but to judge whether a King do draw. to Heresie or not, belongeth to the Pope, to whom the care.

of Religion is committed: therefore it belongs to the Pope to judge a King to be deposed, or not deposed.] You see here it is not Lawful for such Christians as the Papists to Tolerate you: which may help your judgement in the point of their Toleration. Si Christiani (saith Bellar. ib.) olim non deposuerunt Neronem-Valentem Arianum & similes, id fuit quia deerant vires temporales Chri-Rianis. 7 You have your Government and we our Lives, because the Papists are not strong enough. They tell you what to trust to. Saith Tollet (one of the best of the Tesuites, li. 1. de Instruct. Sacerd. c. 13.) [They that were bound by the bond of fidelity or Oath, shall be freed from such a bond, if he fall into Excommunication: and during that, Debtors are absolved from the obligation of paying to the Creditor that debt that is contracted by words —] These are no private uneffectual Opinions. Saith Pope Pius the 5th himself in his Bull against our Queen Elizabeth, [Volumus & mandamus, We will and command that the Subjects take Arms against that Heretical and Excommunicate Queen.

But their crueltie to mens fouls, and the Church of Christ, doth yet much more declare their uncharitableness. It is a point of their Religion to believe, that no man can be saved but the Subjects of their Pope, as I have after proved, and is to be seen in many of their writings, (as Knot, and a late Pamphlet called Questions for Resolution of Unlearned Protestants, &c.) and Bishop Morton hath recited the words of Lindanus, Valentia and Vasquez. (Apol. lib. 2. c. 1.) [defining it to be of Necessity to Salvation to be subject to the Roman Bishop.] And would not a man think that for such horrid doctrines, as damn the far greatest part of Christians in the world, they should produce at least some probable Arguments: But what they have to say, I have here faithfully detected. If we will dispute with them, or turn to them, the Scripture must be no further Judge then as their Church expoundethit: The Judgement of the Ancient, yea or present Church, they utterly renounce; for the far greatest part is known to be against the Headship of their Pope; and therefore they must stand by for Hereticks. Tradition it felf they dare not stand to, except themselves be Judges. of it; for the greatest part of Christians profess that Tradition is against the Roman Vice-christ. The internal sense and experience of Christians they gainsay; concluding all besides themselves to be void of charity or faving grace, which many a thousand holy souls do find within them, that never believed in the Pope. Yea when we are content to lay our lives on it, that we will shew them the deceit of Popery, as certainly and plainly as Bread is known to be Bread when we fee it, feel and taste it, and as Wine is known to be Wine when we see and drink it; yet do they refuse even the judgement of sense, of all mens senses, even their own and others. So that we must renounce our honesty, our Knowledge of our selves, our senses, our reason, the common experience and senses of all men, the Judgement and Tradition of the far greatest part of the present Church, or else by the judgement of the Papists we must all be damned.

Whether such opinions as these should by us be uncontradicted, or by you be suffered to be taught your Subjects, is easie to discern. If they had strength, they would little trouble us with Disputing. Nothing more common in their Writers scarce, then that the Sword or Fire is sitter for Hereticks then Disputes. This is but their after-game. Though their Church must rule Princes, as the soul ruleth the body, yet it must be by

Secular

Secular Power; excommunication doth but give fire: it is Lead and Iron that must do the execution. And when they are themselves disabled, it is their way to strike us by the hands and swords of one another. He that saw England, Scotland and Ireland a while ago in blood; and now sees the lamentable case of so many Protestant Princes and Nations destroying one another, and thinks that Papists have no hand in contriving, counselling, instigating, or executing, is much a stranger to their Principles and Practices.

Observing therefore that of all the Sects that we are troubled with, there is none but the Papist that disputeth with us with flames and Gun-Powder, with Armies and Navies at their backs, having fo many Princes, and so great revenews for their provision, I have judged it my duty to God and his Church, 1. To Detect the vanity of their cause, that their shame may appear to all that are impartial; and to do my part of that necessary work for which Vell. Paterculus so much honoured Cicero (Hist. lib. 2. c. 34.) Ne quorum arma viceramus, eorum ingenio vinceremur And 2. To present with greatest earnestness these following Requests to your Highness on the behalf of the cause and people of the Lord (wherein the Papists also shall see, that it is not their suffering, but only our Necessary Defence that we desire.)

adhere to the cause of Truth and Holiness, and afford the Reformed Churches abroad the utmost of your help for their Concord and Defence, and never be tempted to own an Interest that crosseth the Interest of Christ. How many thousands are studiously contriving the extirpation of the Protestant Churches from the Earth? How many Princes are conse-

(a3) dera

derate against them: The more will be required of you for their aid. The serious endeavours of your Renowned Father for the Protestants of Savoy, discovered to the world by Mr. Morland in his Letters, Arc. hath won him more esteem in the hearts of many that fear the Lord, then all his victories in themselves considered. We pray that you may inherit a tender care of the cause of Christ.

2. We humbly request that you will faithfully adhere to those that fear the Lord in your Dominions. In your eyes let a vile, per son be contemned; but honour them that fear the Lord, Pfal. 15.4. Know not the wicked; but let your eyes be upon the faithfull of the Land, Plal. 101. 4,6. Compassionate the weak and curable, Punish the uncurable; restrain the froward; but Love and cherish the servants of the Lord. They are under Christ the honour and the strength of the Commonwealth; It was a wife and happy King that profefsed that his Good should extend to the Saints on earth, and the excellent in whom was his delight, Pfal. 16.2, 3. This strengthening the vitals is one of the chief means to keep out Popery and all other dangerous diseases. We see few understanding Godly people receive the Roman infection, but the prophane, licentious, ignorant or malignant that are prepared for it.

3. We earnestly request your utmost care, that we may be ruled by Godly, Faithfull Magistrates under you : and that your Wisdom and Vigilancy may frustrate the subtilty of Masked Papists or Infidels that would creep into places of Council, Command, or Justice, or any publick office. If ever such as these should have a hand in your affairs, or be our Rulers, we know what we must expect. The Reafons of our jealousies of such men are, because we know that the defign is agreeable to their principles and interests: and we know it is their usual course: and we find that such men swarm among us: we hear their words, we read their writings, we see their practices for Popery and Infidelity. The jealousies of many wife men in England are very great concerning the present designs of this Generation of men; and not without cause. We fear the Masked Papists and Infidels, more then the bare-faced, or then any enemy. The men that we are jealous of, and over whom we desire you to be Vigilant, are these Hiders that purposely obscure and cover their Religion. He that wilfully concealeth his Faith, alloweth me to suspect it to be naught: The chief of them are, 1. The Seekers that have not yet found a Church, a Ministry, Ordinances, or Scripture, nor some of them a Christ to believe in. 2. The Paracelsians, Behmenists, and other Enthusiasts, that purposely hide themselves in felf-devised, uncouth, cloudy terms, and pretend to visible familiarity with spirits. 3. The Vani, whom God by wonders confounded in New England, but have here prevailed far in the dark. 4. The fecret guides of the Quakers. 5. Those that make it their business to argue against the Religion of all others, but affert little of their own, endeavouring to bring all men to uncertainties, and loose them from the faith. 6. Those that are still vilifying or undermining the faithfull Godly Ministry. 7. Those that do secretly or openly plead the cause of Infidels : (which are alas, too many: whether ex animo, or for promoting Popery, time will disclose:) that deride the Scriptures, and deny the Immortality of the Soul, the Resurrection of the body, or that there are any Devils, or is any Hell. 8. The Libertines, that would have liberty for all that they can call Religion, though against the certain Principles of Chriflianity; and that tell us the Magistrate hath nothing to do with mens Religion (of which anon.) 9. The Democratical Polititians, that are busie about the change of Government, and would bring all into confusion under pretence of the Peoples Liberty or Power, and would have the Major Part of the Subjects to be the Soveraign of the rest; that is, the worst, that are still the most; and the ignorant, that cannot Rule themselves; and the vicious, that are enemies and hinderers of piety; and the worldlings, that mind nothing but what is under their feet, and have no time to think of Heaven, they have so much to do on earth; and as Augustine faith; had rather there were one Star less in Heaven, then One Cow less in their Passures: these must be our Soveraigns, 10. Those that under pretence of defending Prelacy, and of uniting us with Rome, do adhere to the course of Grotius and Sancta Glara, and Unchurch all the Reformed Churches, degrade all the Ministers that are not of their way, while they maintain the verity of the Church of Rome, and the validity of her Ordination, and would have the Poper to be the Princivium Unitatis to all the Church, and the Western Parts to obey him as their Patriarch, yea and himfelf to be the Ruler of the whole, so he do it by the Laws of General Councils, and deprive not inferiour Bishops of their Priviledges. These ten sorts of men we are Jealous of; and if ever you advance them into places of Command or Power, it will increase our jealousies. God knows, I have no personal grudge to any of them. But the Gospel and the souls of men, and the hopes of our posterity, are not so contemp. 'tible tible as to be given away as a bribe to purchase these mens good will, or to stop their mouths lest they should reproach us. As it is the common, but a poor redress, that after the Massacres of thousands, the surviving Protestants have still had from the Papists, viz. to disclaim the fact, or cast it upon some rash discontented men (which will not make dead men alive again.) So will it be a poor relief to us, when these men are our Masters, and have deprived us of all that was dear to us in the world, that we escaped their ill language while the work was doing.

4. We also humbly beseech you, that you will go on with the purging, and encouraging of the Ministry: Casting out the Ignorant and Ungodly; and countenancing those that are Able, and Faithfull. They deny their ease, and dignity and the riches of the world (which other employments would afford) to encounter with Satan and the worlds corruptions, for the happiness of souls! And therefore the more oppose them and revile them, and unthankfully requite them, the more are you obliged for the fake of Christ, and mens salvation, to assist them. All their enemies contending to surpass the Devil in impudency, accuse them of Covetousness, Idleness and Ambition, as if these were the things that they seek after in the world. If our practice seconding our profession, be not enough to confute these calumnies of malignant men, let this be added to confute them, that we make it our earnest request to your Highness, that all such Ambitious, Idle, Covetous, or otherwise scandalous Ministers may be cast out. You have Commissioners in every County for this work: Require them to do it faithfully: If we defired this much against our Reproachers, they would say we persecuted them: We desire you therefore but to turn this perfecution against our selves. We also desire you, that you will not advance us to Temporal Honours, or Dignities, or Power; nor make us Lord Bishops, nor to abound with the riches of this world: These things agree not with our caling: We only defire food, and rayment, and necessaries to furnish us for our work, and express some charity to the needy that daily expect it from us; and we crave of you that we may be no richer. We also defire you, never to put the fword into our hands, nor enable us to execute any of our private passions upon any, nor yet to touch mens Bodies or Estates; but only to manage the word and Keyes of the Kingdom of Christ upon mens Consciences, and Guide his Church according to our office, and let it prevail as God shall bless This is all the advancement we defire. We have doubly renounced all the world, as Christians, and as Ministers of Christ; we have given up our selves to a. difficult flesh-displeasing work: we crave no more of you but so far to countenance us as Christ commandeth you, and the good of our peoples souls requires. And God will be judge between us and our malitious reproachers, whether these requests are Covetous, Ambitious, or Unreasonable.

5. We also humbly crave your aid, for the procuring and maintaining an Union and Concord among all the Pastors and Churches in your Dominion. All that sear God are Agreed in the main: and they have a special Love to one another, and these are good preparatives to their fuller reconcilement. I know that there is no such distance in their principles, but that they may in blessed Concord carry on the work of God: Our poor people need this, that are offended at our smalless distances. All our strength united is too little to bear down down the oppositions of Hell and Earth that we must daily encounter in our work. Your help may do much to procure our Concord, of which I shall presume to say more to you in another address.

6. Lastly we befeech you that Toleration may be limited by Execution as well as by Law; And therefore that as the Approved Ministers must have an Instrument of Approbation, and must be responsible before the Commissioners of ejection, for any thing that forfeitethit; so the Tolerated may be tryed according to your Laws of Teleration, and may have an Instrument for their Toleration, before they have Liberty publikely to propagate their Opinions to others: and that they may be as responsible before the Commissioners for ejection as we. And that publikely nor privately Papifts, nor Infidels, nor any that deny the effentials of the faith may not be suffered to seduce the people. If any think that this is defired by us, because we fear the power of truth, or would deprive them of any just freedom of debate, I provoke them folidly to answer what is here said in the following Dispute; and we disswade not your Highness if you were in any doubt (which we do not imagine) of the truth of the Christian or Reformed Do-Arine, to invite us to an equal Disputation, and try whether we shall not open the shame of Infidelity and Popery (the two great evils that threaten this land) at any time. But if you are resolved of the wickedness of both these wayes, we have reason to expect that you suffer not the poyson to be administred to your people. Give not leave to every seducer to do his worst to damn mens fouls; When you will not tolerate every Traytor to draw your Armies or people into Rebellion; nor to every wicked man to solicite others to whoredom, murder, theft or deceit. And verily if men have (b 2)

leave to preach against the Scripture, Churches, Ministry, Ordinances, yea and against the life to come under the name of Seekers, Quakers or such other Sects, we had far rather that they had leave to pull off their vizor, and do it openly in the name of Papists. For as Papists they will disown abundance of the abominations, which as Seekers, &c. they propagate on design: And as plain dealing in Religion is better then jugling, fo we had rather that open quiet Papists were tolerated, then these jugling deceivers. They that pretend to know the Jesuites and Fryars, do profess that they are more common in Princes Councils and Families, and in the houses, if not the closets of Noble men, Commanders, and persons of publick trust or service, then we that live and mean fimply do imagine. And who would have thought that had not know it, that they had so infinuated into the several sects among us, and that they were so industrious in their work, as the New. castle Scottish Jew was, to be circumcised or become Jew, and then rebaptized, &c. and all to decieve :

Judge I beseech you by these three Reasons, how far their seduction is to be tolerated. I. That they preach Treason against Princes and States, I have shewed undenyably, is part, and a principal part of their Reli-

2. Their doctrine corrupteth almost all Morality: What need we fuller clearer proof, then the Fansenian hath given us in his Mysterie of Fesuitism: and much more may be added. Morton hath long ago produced enough to tell us what to expect from such men: Apolog. Part. 1.1.2.c.13. As from Tollet himself 1.4. de instruct sacerd. c.9. [Quantum ad intentionem dilectionis, non tenemur sub pracepto Deum plus omnibus diligere] Stapleton 1. 6.

de justif.c. 10. & Valent. l. de Votis c. 3. [Hoc praceptum diligendi Deum ex tota mente, doctrinale est, non obligatorium] See here, a precept, and the greatest precept, even to Love God above all, is not obligatory? A strange precept! And p. 322. he reciteth the words of Tollet, ibid. l. 4. c. 21. & 22. teaching Equivocation upon oath before a Magistrate, and so maintaining perjury. And p. 327. he citeth the same Author maintaining that Murder, and Blasphemy in a passion and not deliberate, is no mortal sin, unless in one that is used to Blaspheme. And p. 329. how Bellarm. Costerus, Valentia maintain that Fornication in a Priest is better, or a smaller sin then to marry. The like he shews of their doctrine of Thest, False witness, &c. p. 332, 333, &c. This from him.

3. But above all their other mischiefs, the Propagating of Infidelity by them is the greatest: Which they do in two wayes. 1. Under the Vizard of Infidels and Seekers they plead against Scripture and Christianity, in defign to loosen men from all Religion, and perswade. them that they must needs be Insidels or Papists: Veron and his followers have given them full Directions to manage this design. And while, with debauched Consciences) they thus perswade men to be Infidels in jest, they have made abundance such in good sadness: so that. upon my knowledge there are many fuch swarm among us, that sometime seemed pious persons, that plead against Christ anity it self. 2. And no wonder, whensome of the leading Papists do seem to be Christians in jest, and Infidels in good fadness themselves. I shall instance now but in their Champion, Tho. White, who in his Euclid. Metaphys. Stocch. K. pr. 16. maintaineth that. in a manner, or almost all incorporated souls shall be faved by the world as the Instrument, or else the world were (ub-substantially evil, and the souls that fail of Blessedness, non fint sufficientes ad partem considerabilem totius multitudinis constituendam. He that believeth this, cannot believe Christ, nor well perswade men to believe in Christ; This happy news to the Pagans and M. hometans, might somewhat affright the Christians being the fewest, lest they should be that inconsiderable number, but that he that talks of the damnation of so few, its like by his Arguments believeth it of none. The same he afferts in his Treatise of the middle state of souls, Rat. 5. p.41. And Rat. 10. he disputeth against Vindictive Justice as athing not becoming God: and p. 88. denyeth that finners injure God, forsooth because he suffereih it willingly. Pag. 95 (Translat.) he saith that souls are exempt from all such pains as may be caused by any outward agent: And pag. III. That God Governeth not the world as a Monarch, buti as an Engineer; And pag. 134. he saith [the punishment of sin whether external or internal, is nothing else but the increase and exaggeration of sins in those who are perverse, and the decrease and diminution of them in those who amend] And pag. 90. that [the defeet of Gods konour occasioned by Peter, was not supplyed and repaired by any other] and so not by Christ! And pag. 146. [that Gods aim is alwayes the utmost good of every creature] And he oft enough telsus that God attaineth all his will. And is this man a Papist? or are Papists in good sadness, that tell the world that none but the subjects of the Pope can be saved: and yet now the number that perish will be inconsiderable; and God aimeth at the utmost Good of every creature. Sure he thinks that all the Toads must be made men: and all men made Angels; and every star must be made a Sun! I shall pass by the Books that are written against the Creation, and against Scripture.

Scripture, and against Hell, &c. which swarm among us; only advising your Highness to take heed that you venture not upon any worldly motives, to stand guilty before the living God of allowing or tolerating such Books to be published, and such doctrines as these to be preached to your People, to the everlasting undoing of their precious souls.

If you ask who it is that presumeth thus to be your Monitor? It is one that serveth so great a Master that he thinks it no unwarrantable presumption, in such a case to be faithfully plain with the greatest Prince. It is one that stands so neer Eternity, where LaZarus shall wear the Crown, that unfaithfull man-pleafing would be to him a double crime: it is one that rejoyceth in the present happiness of England, and earnestly wisheth that it were but as well with the rest of the world; and that honoureth all the providences of God by which we have been brought to what we are; but dare not own all the actions of men that have been the Inframents, as he hath thought meet to manifest in this writing, and leave upon record. And he is one that concurring in the Common Hopes of greater Blef-fings yet to these Nations under your Government, and observing your Acceptance of the frequent Addreffes that from all parts of the Land are made unto you, was encouraged to do what you dayly allow your Preachers to do, and to concur with the rest, in the tenders (and some performance) of his fervice; and particularly the County of Wilts who have Petitioned you for the Summ of what I have here exprest; and whose Petitions I desire may be written written upon your heart. That the Lord will make you a healer and preserver of his Churches here at home, and a successfull helper to his Churches abroad, is the earnest prayer of

Your Highnesses faithfull Subject

J. T. O. I WILL

Reader,

F thou come hither with a practical esteem of Truth, desiring to know it that thou maist obey it, or with an humble mind dost study and pray to the Father of Lights, and art impartially willing to receive the Truth in the Love of it that thou maist be saved, and with diligence and meekness to read and weigh the Evidences that I bring thee, thou art then the person to whom I recommend these Papers with confident expectation of success. The Controversies here handled are those that have made, and still are making, the greatest combustions in the Christian world. And yet to almost all men of learning on both sides they seem exceeding easie. I seldom meet with a Learned Protestant but taketh Popery for such transparent fallacies, that he is little or no whit troubled with any doubtings in the business: And I seldom meet with a Learned Papist but is as confident on the other side, as if besides them, all the Christian world were blind and mad. Interest and prejudice must needs do much then on one side at least. And which side hath the greatest worldly interest to by as their understanding, is soon discerned by one that knows the Papal power, their Cardinals, Prelates, and the Riches, Honours and priviledges of their Clergy, and that knows our state. And if thou wilt hear the Reasons of the confidence of both sides, I will tell it thee here as briefly and plainly as 1 can.

We are confident of our own Religion, because we believe the Gospel: and we have no other Rule and Iest of our Religion: And we are confident that Popery is a deceit, because we both believe the Gospel and the judgement of the ancient and present Churches, and because we believe our sense it self: As sure as we know Bread from Flesh, and Wine from Blood, by seeing, tasting, &c. so sure know we that Popery is false. And if a Controversie is not at an End when it is brought to the judgement of all the senses of all the sound men in the world (it being about the object of sense) then we are past hope of ending controversies: And therefore as we will not waste our time with every sellow that will dispute with us that Snow is black, or the Fire cold, no more will we trouble our selves with these men that tell us that Bread is not bread, and Wine is not wine.

And if you would know the Reasons of the considence of the Papills, I know no more of them but what their Writings and speeches do express, and those I have bereafter given you. Two things they are still harping on: the first is, that in our way we have no assurance that the Christian Religion is true, or that Scripture is the word of God. Save me the labour of repetitions, and read but what I have witten in the Preface to the second Part of the Saints Rest (Edit 2.&c.) where I give you the Resolution of our faith, and in my Sase Religion, Disp. 3. and then believe them if thou canst.

Their second is, that threed-bare Question [Where was your Church before Lusher? Where hath it been successively in each age?] And here meer Sophistry carryeth it through the Papal world, to the deluding of the simple that will be catcht with chaffe, and are not able to see things for Names. I have dealt with some of them that harped in this string, and never met with any thing from them that should seem considerable to a discerning man, save only the two unanswerable arguments of Considence (that I say not Impudence) and Loquacity. Though I have more fully

you at the entrance, a short view of the case.

The men that ask us, where our Church and Religion was, either know not (through ignorance) or will not let others know (through wickedness) what our Church and Religion is. [. Shew us (fay they) a Church in all ages that held the thirty nine Articles, or that held all that the Protestants hold, or else they were not Protestants ?] For sooth, we must receive from them a Definition of a Protestant, and then we must prove the succession of such. Know therefore before you dispute about the succession, what is the thing whose succession is questioned. [A Protestant is a Christian that holdeth to the holy Scriptures as the fufficient Rule of faith and holy living, and protesteth against Popery. The Protestant Churches are Societies professing the Protestants Religion. The Protestant Religion] is an improper speech, but I the Protestants Religion] is a phrase that we shall own. For [Protestancy] is not our Religion it self, but the Rejection of Popish corruptions of Religions or defiling Additions. If my Reje-Etions of other mens Additions be themselves Additions, then is it in the power of any Heretick in the world to force me to Add to my Religion at his Pleasure. A thousand new Articles & Forms of Worship be may devise, and then must I add to my Religiouby rejecting them all: even as I add to my Apple by wiping the dirt of it, or to my Cleaths, by brushing them. The Protestants Religion is only the Christian Religion the naked Christian Religion alone: The Papists the Christian Religion corrupted with abundance of additions. The Protestants ever defavowed any Confessions of men as presended to be the Rule or Law of their Religion. The Protestants Religion is the Holy Scriptures alone] The Papifts Religion is all that is decreed by the Pope and Councils. Our Religion containtd in the Scoipture hash its Es-(62) (entials sentials and Integrals. All the Essentials and as much of the Integrals as (in the use of means) we are able to understand, we believe particularly and explicitely: the rest we believe generally and implicitely to be all true. So that as the Papists will not give us leave to take the writings of Gre. ser, Bellarmine or any of their Doctors, yea the Articles of their Divines at Thoren, Ratisbone, &c. to be therefore Articles of their faith, but only those that are contained in General Councils approved by the Pope; so we require the same justice of them that they call Nothing the Articles of our Faith, but what is contained in the Holy Scripture, which is the only Rule of our Religion. Do they know our Religion better then we do? This is our Religion, and this we stand to.

Well! Consider now whether any thing be easier then for a Protestant to shew you a visible Church that hath succes-lively been of his Religion.

The Christian Religion hath been in all ages since Christin visible Societies: The Religion of Protestants is the Christian Religion: therefore the Religion of Protestants hath been in all ages since Christ in visible Societies.

2. That Religion which is contained in the Holy Scripture as its Rule or sufficient Revelation, hath been professed in all ages in visible Churches. But the Religion of Protessants is contained in the Holy Scriptures as its Rule or sufficient Revelation: therefore the Religion of Protestants bath been professed in all ages in visible Churches.

We name the Societies, from the places of their residence: Our Church (as Augustine tels the Donatists) begun at Hierusalem, and thence was dispersed into Asia, Africa and Europe; it hath continued in Syria, Athiopia, Agypt, India, Greece, &c. If I could name but one Nation that had been of my Religion, I should suspect it were not the true Religion. It is the Christian world that is instead of a Catalogue to us.

O but, say the Juglers, This is a General answer, to say you are Christians: there are more sorts of Christians then One. I Reply; It is the General or Catholick that we are speaking of; and therefore if it were not such a General answer, it were not pertinent to the Question: There are no more sorts of Christians but One; that is, there is no Essential difference among them; but there is a gradual, integral and modal difference. But may not Christians of seweral Degrees of Knowledge be in the same Catholick Church? Our question is not, [Where any Sect, or any particular Church hath had its succession:] but [where that Catholick Church hath been, of which we are members.] And surely Christ hath but One Catholick Church.

O but, say they, would you make men believe that Ethiopians, Armenians, Greeks, &c. are Protestants?

you may be ashamed of so gross a fiction.

I answer, Is it the Name of Protestants, or their Religion, that you would have us prove a succession of? These deceivers cheat abundance of poor souls by this one device, even supposing that the word [Protestant] doth denominate our Church from its Essential parts, and so call for a Catalogue of Protestants. But I would ask them, whether we or they do better know our Religion? and consequently what a Protestant is! If they know it at all, it is from our writings or expressions; For sure they will not pretend withous signs to know our hearts, and that better then our selves. You must take it from as, if you will know what our Religion is, as we must take it from you, if we will know yours. And therefore delude not filly souls by perswading them that you know what our Religion is better then we. If you will believe our Books that tell you, believe our sayings also, and believe me that here tell you my own Religion. [A Protestant is a Christian that protesteth against Popery] Christianity is our Religion: Protesting against Popery is our Negation or Rejection of your Corruptions of Religion. Men that never heard of the name of Papist or Protestants, may be of the same Religion with us. If many Nations of the world never received Popery, and we reject it; if they never knew it, and we know it and disown it, are we not both of one Religion, even in the Integrals? One man never heard of the Leprosie: another catcheth it and is cured of it; and a third flyeth from it and preventeth it; And I think all these are truly men; yea and (in tantum) sound men. When you call to us for a proof of our succession, either you mean it, of the Essentials of our Religion and Church, or of the Negation of your Corruptions: Either you mean it of the points that we are Agreed in, or of those we differ in: Christianity is it that we are Agreed in; and that is our Religion, and nothing but that : Protestancy as such, is but our wiping off the dirt, or curing the scab that you have brought upon our Religion, Is he not a man as well as you that will not tumble with you in the dirt, or come into your Pesthouse? If we know not our own Religion, then we cannot tell it you; and then you cannot know it: And if we do know it, believe us when we profess our own Belief: We still profess before men and Angels, that we own no Religion but the Christian Religion, nor any Church but the Christian Church, nor dream of any Catholick Church but one, containing all the true Christians in the world, united in fesus Christ the Head. We protest before men and Angels that it is the Holy Scriptures that are the Law and Rule and Test of our Religion; And why are we not to be Believed in this our own Profession, as well as you are in yours, when you make the Decrees of Popes and Councils to be your Law and Rule and Tests?

We perform therefore more then you demand. You ask us Where was our Church before Luther? And we answer, Where our Religion was. You ask us, Where was that? and we tell you Where ever the Christian Religion was, and the Holy Scriptures were received. This were enough for its in answer to your Question: But we do more: We tell you not only where our Church and Religion was, but where there were men that owned not your grand Corruptions, no more then we: What can you demand more of us, when you call for a succession of Protestants, then that we tell you of a succession of Christians (which are of our Religion) and which were no Papills, yea against Popery, (which therefore were of our integrity) And who knoweth not that the foresaid Abassines, Armenians, Egyptians, Greeks, &c. are against your Papal Soveraignty, Infallibility, and all that is by us renounced as Essential to Popery?

O but, say the fuglers, these are not Protestants; they differ from you in many particulars. I answer, Call them by what name you please; they are not only Christians, but also Anti-papists, or free from Popery, and then they are of our Religion and Church. But indeed, must the world be made believe that all that we Believe is essential to our Religion, and that no man that differeth from us can be of our Religion, be the difference never so small?

But say they, tell us of a Church that professes your 39 Articles. Silly deceivers! Do not those very Articles profess that [The Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation, so that whatever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man that it should be believed as an Article of the Faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to Salvation.] Art. 6. We never took these Articles Articles instead of the Scripture, but the Articles and all Protestants profess the Scripture to be the only Rule and Test of their Faith and Religion. The substance of the 39 Articles may easily be proved to have been successively held by the Church from the beginning; but it is not incumbent on us to prove that every word in the writings of every Divine, or Church, hath been so continued; no more then you will own the writings of any Divines or Provincial Synods of your own, as being the Rule of your Faith. As you profess that the Decrees of Popes and general Councils approved by him, besides the Scriptures, are the Rule and Test of your Religion; so do we profess that the Scriptures alone (with the Law of Nature) is the Rule of ours.

But, what (fay they) will you be of the same Church with Nestorians, Eutichians, and other Hereticks ! I Answ. I. We will not take all for Nestorians, or Eutichians, that a railer can call such, that never knew them, nor can prove it. 2. Hereticks indeed that deny any essential part of Christianity, are no Christians, anh therefore none of the Church that we are of : but if you will call those Hereticks that have all the essentials of Christianity, because they err in lesser points, we know that there are such in the Catholick Church: We will be none of them our selves, if we can escape it (yet indeed have no hope of escaping all error till we are perfect in knowledge:) But we will not run out of the family of God, because there are children and sick persons in it: Nor will we for sake the Catholick Church because there are erring persons in it.

O but, saith the Papist, We acknowledge not your distinction of points Essential and not Essential, all points of Faith are Essential with us, and of necessity to Salvation. Answ. Reader, thou shalt see here such impudent and faithless jugling, as may make thee blush to think that Christianity bath such professors. 1. The Outside of their assertion damneth no less then all the world (that live to the use of Reason) 2. The Inside of their deceitful meaning is almost clean contrary, and leaveth Heathens and Insidels in the Church, or in a state of salvation as well as Christians. 3. It leaveth no one Article of faith essential to a Christian, or to one that shall be saved; and leaveth the Church an Invisible thing, clean contrary to their own assertions of its Visibility. 4. And when they have thus wrangled themselves into a wood of contradictions and Unchristian absurdaties, the wifest of them say as we say, in the main point. All this I will now manifest to thee.

1. The Out-side of their assertion is that Every point that we are bound to belive by a Divine faith, is fundamental, or essential to Christian faith, or of necessity to salvation. And if so, then no man breathing can be saved: For no man knoweth all that he is bound to know. And no man believeth that which he understandeth not: It is impossible to believe that such a Proposition is a truth distinctly and actually, when I understand not what the Proposition is. And that we all know but in part, even what we are obliged to know, no man will deny, but he that is madby pride or faction: All that God hath revealed in his word is the matter of our faith: There is no man can say, I have no culpable ignorance of any one Truth of God that I should believe. Had we been more perfect in our diligent studies, and prayers, and use of all means; and had we never sinfully grieved the spirit that should illuminate us, (to say nothing of our Original finfull darkness) there is not one of us but might have known more then we do. If sin of the will and life be consistent with true faith, then some sin in the under standing is consistent with faith. But the former is true: therefore, &c. But (d) according according to the out-side of their doctrine, no man that hath any sinfull ignorance (and consequently unbelief) in his understanding can be saved; that is, no man in the world. If he that thinks he knoweth any thing, knoweth nothing as he ought to know, 1 Cor. 8. 2. what shall be said of these men, that think they and all the Church do know all things that they ought to know, and that their understandings have no sin? And must we needs be of that faith that damneth all men, and of that Church where none are Saved?

2. As the Out-side of their Assertions is made for a bug-bear to frighten fools, so that the In-side (as expounded by many of them) is that Heathens and Infidels may be of their Church or saved, and that nothing of the Chrian faith at all is necessary to salvation, is plain: For they tell us that they mean, that all points are of necessity, where they are sufficiently proposed, and mens ignorance is not invincible; but where there is no sufficient proposal, but mens ignorance is invincible, or such as comes not from a wilfull neglect of means, there no ignorance of the articles of faith is damnable, and so no article absolutely necessary: so that the question indeed is not Whether men believe or not? but Whether they are Unbelievers or Heathens or ignorant persons, by a willfull neglect of sufficiently proposed Truth or not? So that all that part of the Heathen or Infidell world (O how great) that have no such proposals of the Gospel, may not only be saved, but be better and safer then most Christians (if not all) who certainly are sinfully ignorant of some truth which they ought to know.

obj. But (say they) it will not stand with faith to deny belief to God in any thing, sufficiently revealed: for he that believeth him in one thing, believe

veth him in all. 7

Answ. Very true, if they know it to be the Word of God. And if this be all , the Protestants are ready to averre upon their most solemn Oaths, that they believe every thing without exception which they know to be a Divine Revelation: and no wonder; for (o doth every man that believes that there is a God and that he is no lyar. If this will serve your turn, you have no more to say against us; your mouths are stopt. But may it not stand with faith to be ignorant, and that through sinfull neglect, of some revealed truth of God, or of the meaning of his word? If you are so proud as to think that all the justified are perfeet and have no sin, yet at least consider whether a man that liveth in Heathenism till fourscore years of age, and then turns Christian, is not afterward ignorant through his former sinfull negligence? But dare you say that you have no sinfull ignorance to bewail? Will you confels none, nor beg pardon, nor be beholden to Christ to pardon it?

That they make no point of faith necessary, while they seem to make all necessary, see but what I have after cited from Frans. à S. Clara probl. 15, 16, 17. and abun.

dance more that are mentioned there by him.

3. And that by this Protean jugling, they make the Church invisible, is apparent. For what man breathing knoweth the secrets of the souls of others, whether they have resisted or not resisted the light? and whether they are ignorant of the articles of faith upon sinful contempt, or for want of some due means of faith, or internal capacity, or opportunity? We are as sure that all men are ignorant of some thing that God hath revealed to be known (in nature and Scripture) as that they are men: But now whether any one of these men be free from those aggravations of his ignorance (and that in every point) upon which the Papists make him an unbeliever, is unknown to others:

When the Faith or Infidelity of men, and so their being in the Church or out of it, must not be known by the Matter of Faith which they profess, but by the secret passages of their hearts, their willingness or unwillingness, resistance or not resistance, and such like, the Church then is invisible; no man can say which is it, nor who is of it: He that professeth not the Faith, may be a Catbolick; and be that professeth it, for ought they know, may be an Insidel, as being sinfully yet ignorant of some one truth that is not in his express consession: thus by consusting on the builders of Babel marre their work.

4. And that the wisest of them, say in the main as we say, see bere in some proofs. Bellarm. de Verbo Dei, lib.
4. cap. 11. [In the Christian Doctrine both of Faith and Manners, some things are simply necessary to salvation to all; as the Knowledge of the Articles of the Apostles Creed, of the ten Commandements, and of some Sacraments: The rest are not so necessary, that a man cannot be saved without the explicite Knowledge, belief and profession of them—— These things that are simply necessary and are profitable to all, the Apostles preached to all——All things are Written by the Apostles which are Necessary to all, and which they openly preacht to all] see the place.

Costerus Echirid. c. 1. p. 49. Non inficiamur præcipua illa fidei capita quæ omnibus Christianis cognitu sunt ad salutem Necessaria, perspicuè satis esse Apostolicis scriptis comprehensa. That is; We deny not that those Chief Heads of the Faith which are to all Christians necessary to be known to salvation, are perspicuously enough comprehended in the Writings of the Apostles. I fudge by these two (to spare the trouble of citing more) whether they be not forced after all their Cavils, to say as we, in distinguishing of Articles of Faith. And they cannot be ignorant, that the Church hath hath still had Forms of Profession, which were called ber Symbols, as being the Badge of her Members; and did not suspend all upon uncertain conjectures about the frame and temper of the Professors minds.

But if indeed it be not the want of Necessary Articles of Faith that they accuse us of, but the want of willingness or diligence to know the truth, let them prove their accusations, and let those persons that they prove guilty bear the blame. Do they think we would not as willingly know the truth as they? and that we do not pray as earnessly for Divine illumination? Do we not read their Books? (I verily think incomparably more then they do ours,) and are we not willing to confer with the wifest of them that can inform us? I have often privately and publickly desired you that if any of them can say more then all these Schoolmen, Fryars and Fesuites say, which I have read, they would let me hear it, that I may want no means they can afford me for my fuller information.

But yet they have not done with us. When we prove a succession of our Religion, by proving a succession of such as adhered to the Scriptures, which are the Dostrine of our Religion (an Argument that no Papist under heaven can confute,) they vainly tell us, that All Hereticks pretend to Scripture, and therefore that will not prove the point.

But 1. Doth it follow that Scripture is not a sufficient Rule of our Religion, because Hereticks may pretend to it? You take the 39 Articles for our Religion, and yet may Hereticks that are far from our minds, pretend to them. It's the liker to be the Rule because all Hereticks pretend it, and would borrow credit from it to their Heresies. The Law of the Land is the Rule of our fustice, and yet Lawyers and their Clients that are contrary to each other, do plead it for their contrary Causes. The Creed it self is pretended by Arrians for their Heresie. What must we have have no Rule or Test or discovery of our Religion which a Heretick can pretend for his impiety. What words of God or man are not capable of being misinterpreted? If we should give you every day a confession of Faith, some Hereticks might pretend to hold the same: No wonder then if they do soby the Scriptures.

2. And can any Learned Papists be so ignorant, as not to know that the Arrians pretended the Authority of General Conncils? and so do many other Hereticks; and that the Authority of Pope and Councils are frequently pretended for contrary opinions among them, and may be pretended by many an Heretick? And will they therefore grant that the Decrees of Popes and Councils are no sufficient discovery of their Faith? If Hereticks pretending to your Test of Faith, disprove not that to be your Faith, then Hereticks pretending to our Rule and Test of Faith (which is the Holy Scripture) is no proof that it is not our

Rule of Faith.

I do therefore conclude, that the Proof of a Succession of such Churches as have received the Holy Scriptures, is a valid proof of a succession of Churches of our Religion, seeing we have no Religion (doctrinally) but the Holy Scriptures. And this as far as modesty will permit, I challenge all the Fesuites on Earth to confute with any solid Reasons: yet adding that we do ex superabundanti prove a succession also of Churches that never owned Popery, even the greatest part of the Christian world. But let these men themselves but prove to us a succession of their Church, even such as they require of us; Let them prove that from the Apostles days the Catholick Church (or any one Congregation of twenty men) did hold all that now their Councils and Popes have Decreed, and are esteemed Articles of their Faith, and I am contented to be their bond-slave for ever, or to bear a fagot, or be used by them as cruelly cruelly as their malice can invent, or flames or their strappado's execute. Let my Head be at their Mercy if they can but prove that Succession of Popery, as they require us to do of Protestancy, or as I have produced of our Churches and Religion. In the 15th and 16th Detection I have more largely spoken to them of this point, to which I refer the Reader.

In the very principal point of their Papal Soveraignty, they have nothing but this gross deceit to cheat the world with: The Roman Emperors divers ages after Christ, did give the Bishop of Rome a Primacy in their Empire, and hence these men would persuade us, that even from Christ they have had a Soveraignty over all the Christian world. Wink but at these small mistakes, and they have won the Cause: 1. Suppose but Christs Institution to stand in stead of the Emperors. 2. Suppose divers hundred years after Christ, to have been in the Apostles days. 3. Suppose strimacy to be Soveraignty or Universal Government.

4. But especially grant them, that the Roman Empire was all the Christian world; and then they have made good that part of their Cause.

That there were many Nations without the reach of the Ronan Empire, that had received the Christian Faith, is past doubt. Socrates lib. 1. c. 15. saith that Thomas chose Parthia, Bartholomew chose India, Matthew Ethiopia, to plant the Gospel in; but the middle India was not converted till Constantines days, by Frumentius and Edesius; and Iberia by a Maid. So Euseb. 1. 3. c. 3. tells us of Thomas his Preaching to the Parthians, and Andrew to the Southians. Et in vit. Const. 1. 4. c. 8. that there were many Churches in Persia, & cap. 91. how Constantine wrote for them to the King. Godignus and others of them maintain that the Abassines did receive the Gospel from the beginning. Besides Scotland.

and many other Countries that were not under the Roman Power. And none of these were Governed by the Pope.

These three Arguments against the Papal Cause, I shall here premise to more that follow.

1. If all that part of the Christian world that was out of the reach of the Roman Empire, did never submit to the Soveraignty of the Pope, then hath he not been successively (or at any time) the actual Head of the Universal Church: But the Antecedent is most certain: therefore so is the Consequent.

How an old woman, the Emperors Mother of Habassia, did haffle their fesuites, by asking them [How it came to pass, if obedience to the Pope be necessary to salvation, that they never had heard from him till now?] I have told you after from themselves.

If Primacy were Soveraignty, and Emperors and Councils were Gods, yet the Indians, Abassines, Persians, and many more in the East, and the Scots, and Irish, and Danes, and Sweeds, and Poles, and Muscovites, and most of Germany in the West and North, should be no subjects of the Pope.

2. If the Rule and Test of the Faith of Papists never had a Real Being, or no succession from the Apostles, then their Faith and Church hath either no Real Being, or no succession: But the Antecedent is true: as I prove.

It is either General Councils, or Popes, or the Church Essential (as they use to call it, that is, the Whole Body) that is the Rule of their Faith. If it be General Councils, I. They had no being from the Apostles till the Council of Nice; therefore the Rule of the Papists Faith was then unborn.

2. Yea they never had a being in the world: There was never any thing like a General Council since the days of the Apostles to this day. The first at Nice had none, (save one John of Persia, who its like was some persecuted Bishop Bishop that was fled, or if one or two more its not material), but the Bishops of the Empire, and out of the Western parts so few as was next to none: The following Councils, as Constantinop. 1. &c. were only out of one piece of the Empire: The Council of Trent I disdain to reckon among the modester pretenders to an Universality.

2. And if it be not General Councils, but the Pope that is the Rule of their Faith; then, I. Their Faith hath been interrupted, yea and turned to Heresie and to Insidelity when the Pope hath so turned. 2. And why then do they tell our people, that they take not the Pope for the Rule of their Faith?

3. If it be the Major part of the Universal Church,
1. It's known that two to one are against them, or at least the Greater part: therefore by that Rule their Faith in the Papal Soveraignty is false. 2. And yet it would be hard, if a man must be of no Belief, till he bave brought the world to the pole for it.

Argum. 3. If all the stir that the Papists make in the world for the Papal Government be but to rob Christian Princes and Magistrates of their Power, then are they but a seditious Sect: But the Antecedent is apparent: For there are but two forts of Government in the Church: The one is by the Word applyed unto the Conscience, which worketh only on the willing; either by General exhortations as in Preaching; or by personal application, as in Sacraments, Excommunication and Absolution: And this is the work of the present Pastors, and cannot be performed by the Pope: Nor would be be content with this, to govern Volunteers. The other is by Commands, that shall be seconded with force: And this is proper to the Magistrate. But if they will be deluded to give up their Crowns and Scepters to the Pope, let them stand as the objects of the compassion of Spectators.

Much

Much more then I have here given you, I had prepared of the Testimony of Antiquity against them. But here is more then they are able solidly to answer, and I was afraid of over-whelming the capacity of ordinary Readers. I understand not the French Tongue; but by the Testimony of Learned men that understand them, and especially by the help * of a Noble friend that hath vouch fafed to translate some part of them for my use, I am imboldened to a confidence, that the two famous Confutations of the great Person, will stand to the perpetual shame of Popery, which none of them will be ever able to Reply to, without as great a dishonour to their Cause as will follow their not daring to Reply: I mean, Blondell's Book De Primatu in Ecclesia (which overwhelms them utterly with the witness of Antiquity) & Pet. Molinaus de Novitate Papismi (which I hope his Reverend Son of his name may live to help us to in English.) But if any of the Romanists that dare not meddle with those Champrons, nor dash themselves upon those Pillars, shall yet vouchsafe an Answer to this smaller work, I do hereby assure him, that if he will do it soberly, in the fear of God, in a way of close and solid Arguing, he will perform a task that will be very acceptable to me. But niblers, snarlers, cavillers, and senseless praters I shall contemn.

Key for Catholicks,

To open the juglings of the fesuits, and satisfie all that are but truly willing to understand, whether the cause of the Romane, or the Resormed Churches, be of God: and to leave the Reader unterly unexcusable, is after this he will be a Pap st.

C.H A P. I.

HE thoughts of the divided state of Christians have brought one of the greatest and constantest sadness to my Soul, that ever it was acquainted with; especially to remember, that while we are quarrelling, and plotting, and writing, and sighting against each other, so many parts of the world (about five of six) remain in the Infidelity of Heathenism, Judaism or Mahometanism, where millions of poor souls do need our help; and if all our strength were joyned together for their Illumination and Salvation, it would be too little. Oh horrible shame to the face of Christendom, that the Nations are quietly serving the Devil, and the Turk is in possession of so many Countries, that once were the Inheritance of Christ, and that his Iron-yoak is still upon the necks of the persecuted Greeks, and that he stands up at our doors in so formidable a posture, still ready to devour the rest of the Christian world; and yet that instead of combining to resist him, and vindicate the cause and people of the Lord, we are greedily sucking the blood of one another, and tearing in pieces the body of Christ with surious hands, and destroying our selves to save the enemy a labour, and spending that wit, that treasure, that labour and that blood, to dash our selves in pieces on one another, which might be nobly, and honestly, and happily spent in the cause of God.

These thoughts provoked me to many an hours consideration. How the wounds of the Church might be yet healed; And have made it long a principal part of my daily Prayers, that the Reconciling Light might shine from Heaven, that might in some good measure take up our differences; and that God would at last give healing Principles and dispositions unto men, especially to Princes and the Pastors of the Church. But the more I studied how it might be done, the more difficult, if not impossible it appear'd, and all because of the Romane Tyranny, the Vice-Christ or pretended Head of the Church, being with them become an effential part of it, and the Subjection to him effential to our Christianity it felf. So that (faith Bellarmine de Eccles. 1.3.c. 5.) No man though be would can be a Subject of Christ. that is not subject to the Pope; and this with abundance of intolerable corruptions they have fixed by the fancy of their own Infallibility, and built upon this foundation a worldly Kingdom, and the temporal Riches and Dignity of a numerous Clergy, twifting some Princes also into the Interest; so that they cannot possibly yield to us in the very principal points of difference, unless they will deny the very Essence of their New Christianity and Church, and pluck up the foundations which they have fo industriously laid, and leave men to a suspicion that they are fallible hereaster, if they shall confess themselves mittaken in any thing now; and unless they will be so admirably self-denying, as to let go the temporal advantages which fo many thousands of them are interested in : And whether so much light may be hoped hoped for in so dark a generation, or so much love to God, and felf-denval in millions of men so void of self-denval, is easie to conjecture: And we cannot in these greatest matters come over to them, unless we will flatly betray our Souls, and depart from the Unity of the Catholick Church, and from the Center of that Unity to unite with another called the Romane Casholick Church, in another Center. And if we should thus cast away the Truth and Favour of God, and fin against our Knowledge and Conscience, and so prove men of no Faith or Religion, under pretence of desiring a Unity in Faith and Religion, yet all would not do the thing intended, but we should certainly miss of these very ends which we feek, when we had fold the Truth and our Souls to obtain them. For there is nothing more certain, then that the Christian World will never unite in the Romane Vice-Christ, nor agree with them in their Corruptions, against plain Scripture, Tradition, Consent of the ancient Church, against the Reason and common sense of Mankind, This is not by any wife man to be expected. Never did the universal Church, or one half of it center to this day in the Romane Soveraignty: And why should they hope for that which never yet was done? When they had their Primacy of Place (to be the Bishop of the first Seat, and first of the Patriarcks) it made the Pope no more a Soveraign and a Vice-Christ, then the King of France is Soveraign to the Duke of Saxony or Bavaria; or then the Senior Justice on the Bench is the Soveraign of the rest : and yet even this much he never had but from the Romane Empire: What claim did he ever lay in his first Usurpations, to any Church without those bounds? It was the Empire that raised him, and the Empire limited his own Usurpations. Saith their own Reinerius, (or whoever else) Cont. Waldens. Catal. in Biblioth. Patr. To. 4. pag 773. [The Churckes of the Armenians, and Æthiopians, and Indians, and the rest which the Apostles converted, are not under the Church of Rome.] Yea in Gregories days, they found the Churches of Brittain and Ireland both strangers and adversaries to their Soveraignty insomuch as they could not procure them to receive their Government, nor change so much as the time of Easter for them, no nor to have Communion with them at last: Anno 614. Laurentins their Arch-Bishop here wrote this Letter (with B 2 Mellitm

Mellitus and fustus) to the Bishops and Abbots in all Scotland (that is, Ireland) (while the Sea Apostolick after its manner directed us to preach to the Pagan Nations in these Western parts, as in the whole world; and we happened to enter this Island, called Brittain, before we knew them, believing that they walked after the manner of the universal Church, we reverenced both the Brittains and the Scots in great Reverence of their Sanctity. But when we knew the Brittains, we thought the Scots were better. But we have learnt by Daganus the Bishop in this forementioned Island, and by Columbanus the Abbot coming into France, that the Scots do nothing differ from the Brittains in their Conversation. For Bishop Daganus coming to us, refused not only to eat with us, but even to eat in the same House where we did eat.] Usher Epist. Hibern. 7. p. 18.

Our most perceable Bishop Hall was forct to write a [Romairreconciliabilis.] While we are thinking of Reconciliation, they are about our ears with Plots and violence, and with swarms of Rome-bred Sects, and are day and night industriously undermining us; so that by their continual Alarms, I am called off to these defensive wars which here I have undertaken; yet still resolving that the Desperateness of the Cureshall not make me run from them into a contrary extream, nor be out of the way of Peace, nor neglect any necessary means,

The Work that here I have undertaken, is, I. To give you briefly those Grounds on which you must go, if you will keep your ground against a Papist. 2. To give a few invincible Arguments, which the weakest may be able to use, to overthrow the principal grounds of the Papists. 3. To detect their Frauds, and give to the younger fort of Ministers, sufficient Directions for the Consutation of all the Papists in the world. 4. To propound (though in vain) such terms of Peace as we can yield to.

CHAP. II.

D'Efore I mention the Grounds or Cause that you must maintain, I must premise this Advice to the Common People.

1. Wrong not the Truth and your selves by an unequal con-Aich. Enter not rashly upon Disputes with those that are Learned and of nimble tongues, if you be ignorant, or of weak capacities your felves. Though I shall here shew you that Scripture, Church, Tradition, Reason and Sense are on your fide, yet experience tels us how the words of Juglers have made millions of men deny belief to their eyes, their tafte and other fenses. An ignorant man is soon silenced by a subtile wit; and many think that when they cannot answer, they must yield, though they deny both Sense and Reason by it. If any of them fecretly entice you, defire them to debate the case with some able, learned, experienced Minister in your hearing. It is the office of your Pastors to defend you from the wolves: If you once despile them or straggle from them and the Flocks, and trust to your own Reason that is unsurnished and unprepared for fuch work, you may take that you get by it, if you be undone. You need the help of Pastors for your sou's, as well as of Physicians for your Bodies, and Lawyers for your Estates : or else God would never have set them over you in his Church. Let them but come on equal terms, and you shall see what Truth can do. In this way we will not avoid a Conference with any of them. But alas! with ignorant unlearned people , what may not such Deceivers do ? that can perswade so mamy thousand souls to give no Credit to their own eyes, or taste. or feeling, but to believe a Priest, that Bread is not Bread, and Wine is not Wine.

2. Yet I would have the weakest to endeavour to understand the reasons of their Profession, and to be able to repell Deceivers: And to that end, I shall here give you first some Directions concerning the cause which you must defend.

And concerning this, Observe these things following.

1. Understand what the Religion is that you must hold and maintain: It is the autient Christian Religion. Do not put every

Truth among the Essentials of your Religion: Our Religion doth not stand or fall with every Controversie that is raised about it. That which was the true Religion in the Apostles days is ours now: that which all were baptized into the Profession of, and the Churches openly held forth as their Belief. Reformation brings us not a new Religion: but cleanfeth the old from the drofs of Popery, which by innovation they had brought in. A man that cannot confute a Papilt, may yet be a Christian, and so hold fast the true Religion. It followeth not that our Religion is questionable or unsafe; if some point in Controversie between them and us be questionable or hard. The Papilts would fain bring you to believe that our Religion must lie upon some of these Controversies: but its no such matter. Perhaps you will say, Thattben it is not about Religion that me differ from them. I answer ; yes : it is about the Essentials of their Religion, but it is but for the preserving the Integrity of ours against the Consequences and additions of theirs. They have made them a New Religion (which we call Popery) and joined this to the Old Religion (which we call Christianity.) Now we stick to the old Religion alone; and therefore there is more effential to their Religion, then is to ours; fo that our own Religion, even the ancient Christianity, is out of Controversie between us. The Papists do confess that the Creed, the Lords Prayer, the ten Commandments are true, yea that all the Scripture is the word of God, and certainly true: fo that our Religion is granted us as past dispute: And therefore it is only the Papifts Religion that is in question between us, and not ours. If you will make those lower Truths to be of the Essence of your Religion which are not, you will give the Papifts the advantage which they defire.

2. If the Papists call for a Rule, or Test of your Religion, and ask you where they may find it, assign them to the Holy Scriptures, and not to any Consessions of Churches, further then as they agree with that. We know of no Divine Rules and Laws of Faith and Life, but the holy Scripture (and the hearts of Believers have an impersed Transcript of them.) The Consessions of Churches are but part of the Holy Scripture, or Collections out of them, containing the points of greatest weight: And if in phrase or order (much more in matter) there be any thing humane, we make it not our Rule, nor are we bound to make it good, no more then the Writings of godly men. A point is not therefore with us an Article of Faith, because our Churches or a Synod put it into a Consession, but because it is in the Word of God. For a Councils determinations do with us differ but gradually from the Judgement of a single man, in this respect. And therefore we give them the Scripture only as the full Doctrine of our Faith, and the persect Law of God; And those points in it, which Life or Death is laid upon, and God hath told us, we cannot be saved without, we take as the Essentials of our Religion, and the rest as the Inte-

If they ask, why then we do draw up Confessions of Faith? I answer, 1. To teach and help the people, by gathering to their hands the most necessary points, and giving them sometimes an explication of them. 2. To let our Accusers see that we misunderstand not the Scriptures. 3. To let Pastors and other Subjects know what sence of Scripture the Magistrate will own within his Dominions. 4. And to let the Pastors and the world know what sence in the principal Points we are agreed in. But still we take not our Confessions for our Divine Rule; and therefore if there be any errour in a Confession, there is none in the Rule of our Religion, and consequently none in the Religion which we all agree in; but only in such a persons or Churches exposition of the Rule, which yet among Christians is not in any essential Point.

3. Understand well what is the Casholick Church, that when the Papists ask you what Church you are of, or call to you to prove its antiquity or truth, you may give them a sound and Catholick answer. The Catholick Church is the whole number of true Christians upon earth (for we meddle not now with that part which is in Heaven.) It is not tyed to Protestants only, nor to the Greeks only, much less to the Romanist's only, or to any other party whatsoever; but it comprehendethall the members of Christ; and as visible, it containeth all that profess the Christian Religion by a credible profession. If the Christian Religion may be known, then a man may know that he is a Christian, and consequently a member of the Catholick Church. But if the Christian Religion cannot be known, then no man can know which is the Church, or which is a Christian. All Christians united to Christ the Head, are this Catholick Church. If you tyethe Church to your own party, and make a wrong description of it, you will ensure your selves, and spoil your belief, and your desence of it.

4. Run not into extreams: mix not any unfound principles with your Religion. For if you do, the Papifts will cull out those, and by different them, will feem to different your Religion.

5. Use not any unsound Arguments to desend the Truth. For if you do, the truth will suffer, and seem to be overthrown by the weakness of your Arguments.

6. Joyn not with those men that cast out any Ordinance of God, because the Papists have abused it. Reformation of corrupted Institutions is not by the Abolition of them, but by the Restauration of them. There are few things in use among the Papists themselves as parts of worship, but may lead us up to a good original, or tell us of some other real Duty which did degenerate into thefe.

7. Joyn not with those ignorant, unpeaceable, self-conceited, womanish, rabious Divines, or private men, that pour out unworthy reproaches at godly men among our selves, as if they were Hereticks, or such as the Churches should disown. For these are they that please the Papists, and harden them in their Error, and offend the weak. They think they may call us Hereticks or Blasphemers by authority, when we call one another so. Such Railers teach them what to say, and play their game more effectually then they could do their own. When they are alluring the simple people, how soon will they prevail, if they can but prove their charge against us from the pens of Protestants themselves?

Having told you on what grounds you must make good your cause against them, I shall next give you three or sour ease Arguments (some of them formerly given you) by which even the weakest may prove that Popery is but deceit.

Argum. 1. IF there be any godly honest men on earth besides Papists, then Popery is false and not of God. But there be godly honest men on earth besides Papists: therefore Popery is falle, and not of God.

The Major is proved thus. It is an Article of the Popish faith. that there are no godly honest men on earth, besides. Papists: therefore if there be any fuch, Popery is faife, (By godly honest men, I mean such as have true love to God, and so are in a state of falvation.) The Antecedent I prove thus. 1. Their very definition of the Church doth make the Pope the Head, and confine the membership only to his subjects, making the Roman Catholick Church (as they call it) the whole. 2. But yet lest any ignorant Papilts Say, I may be a Roman Catholick without believing that all others are ungodly, and shall be damned, I will give it you in the Determination of a Pope and general Council. Leo the tenth, Abrog. Pragm. sanct. Bull. in the 17th. General Councilat the Laterane, faith [And feeing it is of necessity to salvation, that all the faithful of Christ be subject to the Pope of Rome, as we are taught by the testimony of divine Scripture, and of the holy Fathers, and it is declared in the Constitution of Pope Boniface 7. &c. | And Pope Pius the second was converted from being Aneas Sylvius by this Doctrine of a Cardinal, approved by him at large, Bull. Retrast. in the Vol.4. of Binnius, p. 514. I came to the Fountain of Truth, which the holy Doctors, both Greek and Latine hew; who with one voyce fay, that he cannot be saved that holdeth not the unity of the holy Church of Rome; and that all those vertues are maimed to him that refuseth to obey the Pope of Rome; though he lye in lack cloth and ashes, and fast and pray both day and night, and seem in the other things to fulfill the Law of God.] So that if a Pope and General Council be falle, then Popery is falle. For their infallibility is the ground of their faith, and they take it on their unerring authority. But if the Pope and a General Council be to be believed, then no man but a subject of the Pope can be saved : no, though he fast and pray in fack-cloth and ashes day and night, and seem to fulfill the rest of the Law of God. Its certain therefore that if any one of you that call your sclves Romane Catholicks do not believe that all the world shall be damned save your selves, you are indeed no Romane Catholicks, but are Hereticks your selves in their account; for you deny a principal Article of their faith; and deny the Infallibility of the Pope with a General Council, which is your very Foundation.

And therefore we find that even in the great charitable work of reducing the Abassines, the Jesuite Gonzalus Rodericus in his speech to the Emperours mother laid so great a stress on this point, that when she prosessed her subjection to Christ he told her, that [None are subject to Christ that are not subject to his Vicar,] [Negavi Christo subject qui ejus vicario non subjectur.] Godionus de reb. Abassin. Lib. 2.c. 18. in Roderic. liter. p. 323.

And Bellarmine saith (de Eccl. 1.3.6.5) that [no man though he would can be subject to Christ that is not subject to the Pope] that is, he cannot be a Christian. And therefore Card. Richlieu (then Bishop of Lusson.) tels the Protestants that they were not to be called Christians. And Knot against Chillingworth, with abundance more of them, asserting that Protestants cannot be saved, do easily learn to practice this Lesson of the Pope and Council. I come now to prove that your Pope, and Councill, and Faith are salse, and that others besides you may be in a state of Charity and Salvation. (For you consess your selves, that he that is in a state of Charity, is in a state of Salvation.)

1. If a man may know his own heart, then there are others besides Papists that are in Charity, and are godly men: (and so in a state of Salvation) But a man may know his own heart:

therefore, &c.

The Consequence of the Major is plain by inward experience to every godly, honest manthat knoweth himself. If I can know my own heart, I must needs say I love God, and am not void of sincere Godliness and Honesty. And that I may know my own heart I can tellalso by experience: For to know my own Knowledge and Will is an ordinary certain thing, if not by intuition it self. And if a man cannot know whether he believe and love God or not, then no man can give thanks for it, normake Profession of it: nay men cannot converse together, if they cannot know their own minds. And Bellarmine consesses that the

we may have a moral Conjectural certainty that we have true Love, and are justified. And then I have a moral conjectural certainty at least, that Popery is false; because I have at least such a certainty that I am not ungodly or unjustified. So that look what measure of knowledge or perswasion any Protestant hath that he is truly bonest and justified, that measure of knowledge must be needs have (if he understand himself) that Popery is a deceit.

So that from hence you may gather these four conclusions;

1. That all that have any knowledge or persuasion that they are not ungodly unjustified persons themselves, and void of the orne Love of God, are quite out of danger from turning Papists, if they understand but what Popery is; and if they do not, they cannot turn to it, but in part.

2. That never any beneft godly man did turn Papist in the world; and this the Papists themselves will justifie: For they say (by a Pope and general Council) that no man can be saved but a Papist: and they generally hold, that all that have Charity and are justified, shall be saved if they so die. So that if Popery be true, then no man had Charity or true Godlines before he was a Papist: and therefore never did one godly man or woman turn Papist. And therefore let them take the honour of their wicked seduced Ones. What glory is it to them that none ever turned to them but ungodly people?

3. And it followeth that the Papifts do not so much as desire or invite any godly man to turn to them. If you understand their meaning, they call you not to turn to them, if you are not un-godly persons.

4. And hence it follows that every one that turneth Papist, doth thereby confess that he was a wicked man before, and that he had not the least true love to God; that he was not justified, but a graceless wretch.

In a word, all you that do but know or hope that you have any faving Grace, have an Argument here against Popery, which all the fessites in the world cannot consute. For you know your own hearts better then they: And they have no way to turn you to them, but by perswading you that you are not what you are, and that you know not what you know. So that plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons of the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I have good persons or the plainly this is your Argument, [I know, or I know, or swasions that I am not utterly void of Charity or saving Grace; therefore I know, or have the same perswasions that Popery is false, which determine that none have Charity or saving Grace but

Papilts. 7

2. But I proceed to a further proof of the Minor; A man may have a very strong Conjecture that many others that are no Papills have faving Grace: though he had no perswasion that he hath such Grace himself. And consequently he must have as strong a conjecture that Popery is falle. What abundance of holy heavenly persons have we known of all ranks among us! Such as have lived in dayly breathings after God, spending no small part of their lives upon their knees, and in the serious and reverent attendance upon God in holy worship, meditating day and night upon his Law; hating all known fin, and delighting in holiness, and longing for persection; and living in constant Temperance and Chastity, abhorring the very appearance of evill, and making conscience of an idle word or thought, devoting their lives and labors, and all they have to God, giving all their Estates (some of them) to pious and charitable uses. except what is necessary for their dayly bread, even mean cloathing and food; taming their bodies, and bringing them into subjection, and denying themselves, and mortifying the slesh, and contemning all the Honors or Riches of the world, refolving to fuffer death it felf. (as many of their Brethren have done from the Papists) rather then fin wilfully against God and their consciences: in a word, living to God, and longing to be with him, and manifesting these longings to the very death; grieving more at any time, if they have but lost the sense and perswasions of the love of God, then if they had lost all the world; and would give a thousand worlds, if they had them. for more of the Love of God in their fouls, and fuller affurance of his Love and Communion with him. As far as words, and groans, and tears, and the very drift of a mans life, and the expending of all that he bath, can help us to know another mans heart. fo far do we know all this by others, that have lived amongus. And may we not conjecture, and be strongly perswaded that these, or some of these, or some one of these, was a holy justified person?

And now Reader, if ever thou be tempted to be a Papist, I will tell thee what a task thou hast: Look on one side on the Lives of holy men among us, such as was Mr. Dodd, Mr. Paul Bayn, Mr. William Fenner, Mr. Arthur Hildersbam, Mr. Robert Bolton, Mr. Greenham, Mr. Hooker, Dr. Sibbs, Dr. Preston, Dr. Stonghton, Mr. Perkins, with many hundreds more; Besides blefsed Bradford, Glover, Sanders, Hooper, and the rest that laid down their lives in the flames in testimony against Popery; besides all the thousands that in other Nations have dyed by the Papists hands, because they durst not sin against God; and besides all the Learned holy Divines of other Nations, and the millions of Godly Protestants there; as also look upon all the godly that are now living, men or women, that live in most carnest feeking after God and ferving him; look on those about you, enquire of others; read the writings of holy Divines: and then remember, you cannot turn Papist till you have concluded that all these are damned, and are utterly void of Saving Grace and the Love of God; If there be but one Protestant that you know, or any one of all that have been, that you take to be in a faving state. you cannot possibly turn Papist, if you know what you do. For it is essential to Popery to contradict all this.

Nay, this is not all: but think of all the Greek Church that lyeth under the tyranny of the Turk, and of all the Armenians, and Abasines, and other Christians in the world, that are: more in number far then the Papists; and you must conclude, that not one of all these are saved before you can be a Papist. And is this an easie task to one that hath the heart of a man in his brest? If you are no true Christians your selves, dare you conclude that not one of these are true Christians? If you confess that you love not God your selves, dare you say that among the far greater part of the Christians of the world, there is not one man or woman that loves God? This you must say if you:

will be a Papist.

And then on the other hand, Look on the words of Jesus Christ, and see what thanks he will give you for such a censure, Mat. 7.1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Judge not, that ye be not judged: for with what judgement ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure you meet, it shall be measured to you again. And why beholdest thou the mote in thy brothers eye, but considerest not the beam: that is in thine own eye?—Thou hypocrite! first cast out the beam:

out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see cleerly to cast out the more out of thy brothers eye.] 18m.4.12. There is one Law giver that is able to fave and to destroy: who art thou that Indgest another? | Rom. 14. 1,2,3,4,10. [Him that is weak in the faith receive re, but not to doubtful disputations. For one believeth that be may eat all things, another who is weak eateth herbs: Let not · him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and let not him that cateth not judge him that eateth: for God bath received him. Who art thou that judgest another mans servant? to his own ma-· Ner he standeth or falleth; yea he shall be holden up, for God is able to make him stand. One man esteemeth one day above another another esteemeth every day alike: Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind ____ But wby dost thou judge thy brother, or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? We shall all stand before the Indgement feat of Christ. For it is written, as I live faith the Lord, every knee shall bom to me, and every tongue shall confess to God; so then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Let us not therefore judge one another any more. Matth. 18.6. But wholoever shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a milstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the Sea. Mat. 25.40,45,34,41. Come ye bleffed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom - For I was hungry and ye gave me meat - Verily I Say unto you, in as much at you have done it unto one of the least of these my Brethren, ye have done it unto me. And ver. 41. Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire - Verily I say unto you, in as much as you did it not to one of the least of these, you did is not to me.

I will recite no more: Judge now by such passages as these, how Christ sets by one of the least of his servants: and consequently, how he will take it of you, to judge the far greatest part of his Church to be graceless and none of his Church, but such as shall be damned. And if you dare not venture on so unreasonable and inhumane a censure, against the experience of so much holiness as appeareth in them before your eyes, then you cannot be Papists: And if you dare venture on it, I leave you to consider, whether under pretence of being the only Christians, you have not done violence to the common reason and nature of man. So much for the second proof of the Minor.

3. But I have yet another proof, that many that are no Papists are good Christians, and consequently, that Popery is a deceit, and that is the Testimony of many of their own Writers. I will not call for their testimony concerning our selves (for we know our selves better then they do) but concerning other Churches whom they condemn as Hereticks, or that are no subjects of the Pope of Rome. And I will at this time content my self with one of many that might be cited; and that is a Monk, Burchardis that lived in the Holy Land, and having wrote a Description of it, and those that inhabit it, saith of them as followeth, p. 325, 326.

[And for these that we judge to be damned Hereticks, as the Nestorians, Jacobites, Maronites, Georgians, and the like, I found them to be for the most part good and simple men, and living sincerely toward God and men; they are of great abstinence, &cc.

And of the Romane Catholicks he faith, page 323. [There are in the Land of Promise men of every Nation under Heaven, and every Nation lives after their own Rites: and, to speak the very truth, to our own great confusion, there are none found in it, thatare worse, and more corrupt in manners then Christians] (he means

Papists.)

And page 324. he tels us, that the Syrians, Greeks, Armenians, Georgians, Nestorians, Nubians, Jubeans, Chaldwans, Maronites, Ethiopians, Egyptians, and many other Nations of Christians, there inhabit; and that some are schismaticks not subject to the Pope; and others called Hereticks, as the Nestorians, Jacobites, &c. but (saith he) there are many in these setts that are very simple (or sincere) knowing nothing of hereses: devoted to Christ: macerating the slesh with fastings, and cloathed with the most simple garments, so that they far excel the very Religious of the Church of Rome. To you hear an Adversaries testimony.

Well then, when a Papist can prove to me, that I love not God, contrary to my own experience of my self: and when he can make me believe that no one of all the holy Heavenly Christians of my acquaintance, Ministers, or people, are in a state of charity or Justification: and that no one Christian on earth shall be saved but a Papist, then I will turn Papist: And till then they do not desire me to turn. But I must solemnly profess that this belief is so difficult to me, and abhorred by my reason, and my whole heart, and so contrary to my own knowledge, and to abundant abundant evidence, and to all Christian charity, that I think I shall as soon be persuaded to believe that I am not a man, and that I have not the use of sence or reason, or that Snow is black, and the Crow white, as to believe this Essential point of Popery. I should a hundred times easier be brought to doubt whether I have the love of God my self, then to conclude all the Christians in the world save the Papills, to be the heirs of damnation.

CHAP. IV.

Argum. 2. Hat Doctrine is not true nor of God which teacheth men to renounce all Christian Love and Works of Christian Love, towards most of the Christians upon earth: But so doth the D. Etrine of Popery; therefore it is not of God.

If their Error were meerly speculative, it were the less; but here we see the fruits of it, and whither it tends. The major Proposition is plainly proved from John 13.35. By this shall all men know that ye are my Disciples, if ye have love one to another. Col. 1.4. It must be a [Live to all the Saints.] I Thess. 4.9. But as touching brotherly love, ye need not that I write unto you, for ye your selves are taught of God to love one another.

This special Love is the Commandment of Christ, the new Commandment; without this, no min can be a Lover of God, nor be loved of him as a Member of Christ, as you may see, 1 70hn 3. 11,12,14,23. & 4.7,8,11,12,20,21. 2 90hn 5. Fohn 13.34. & 15.12.17. 1 Per. 1.22. He that loveth not a Christian as a Christian, with a special love, you may see in these Texts is none of the Sons of God. And that the Papills reach men to deny this special Christian Love to most Christians in the world. I prove. They that teach men to take most true Christians in the world for no true Christians, but for Hereticks or ungodly persons that shall be damned, do teach them to deny the special love and works of love to most true Christians: But thus do the Papists; therefore, &c. How can a man love him as a Christian or a godly man, whom he must take to be no Christian, or an ungodly man? Its true they may yet love them as Creatures, and so they must the Devils; and they may love them as men, and so they must the Turks and Heathens: But no man can love him as a member of Christ, whom he believes to be no member of Christ, but of the Devil. And all Papists are bound to this uncharitableness by their Religion, even by the Pope and general Council. And so as Christ bindeth his servants to Love one another with a special Love; so the Pope and Council bind the Papists not to love the most true Christians with a special Christian love: they cannot do it without being Hereticks themselves, or overthrowing the foundation of Popery.

And here you have a taste of the Popish Charity, when they boast above all things of their Charity. I must profess, it is their horrible inhumane uncharitableness that seems to me their most enormous crime. And also you may see here the extent of their Good works, which they so much Glory in. He that is bound not to love me as a Christian, is bound to do nothing for me as a Christian. So that they will not give a cup of cold water to a Disciple in the name of a Disciple, unless he be also a Disciple of the Pope: nor can they love or relieve Christ in his servants, when they are bound to take them as none of his servants: and so the special Love and Charity of a Papist extendeth to none but those of their own Sect: and such a Charity the Quakers, and Anabaptists, and Familists have as eminently as they. Let them take heed lest they hear, In as much as you did it not to one of the least of these, you did it not to me.

CHAP. V.

Argum. 3. That Dostrine which teacheth men to destroy or undo them whom Christ hash bound them to love as Christians, and absolveth Subjects from their Allegiance to their Princes, and requireth the deposing of them, and committing the Government of their Dominions to others, because they are judged to be Hereticks by the Pope; yea or if they will not destroy and extirpate such as he calleth Hereticks; I say this Dostrine is not of God, nor such as Christian Princes should smile upon. But such is the Dostrine of Popery: therefore, &c.

I know that a Paper entituled An explanation of the Roman Catholikes Belief, and other the like, do feem to renounce the opinion of breaking faith with Hereticks, and of promise breaking with

D Magistrates

Magistrates (It seems they think they owe no more obedience to their Magistrates then they promise.) But as I refer the Reader to what King fames and his defenders have faid on this point (besides many more) so I shall now give you but the words of one of their own approved General Council 12. the fourth at the Laterane under Innocent 3. as Binnius and others of their own record it. In the first Chapter they set down their Catholike faith, two Articles of which are, I. That no man can be laved ont of their Universal Church. And 2. That the bread and wine in the Sacrament of the Altar are transubstantiate into the Body and Blood of Christ, the appearances remaining. And in the third Chapter they fay, [We excommunicate and anothematize every herefie extolling it felf against this boly orthodox Catholike faith, which we have before exponed, condemning all hereticks by what names soever they be called - And being condemned, let them be left to the present secular Powers, or their Bailifs to be punished, the Clergy being first degraded of their Orders; and let the goods of such condemned ones be confiscate, if they be Lay-men. but if they be Clergy men, let them be given to the Churches whence they had their stipends. And these that are found notable only by suspition, if they do not by congruous purgation demonstrate their invocency, according to the confiderations of the suspition and the quality of the person, let them be smitten with the sword of Anathema, and avoided by all men, till they have given sufficient satisfaction; and if they remain a year excommunicate, let them then be condemned as bereticks. And les the secu'ar powers, in what Office soever, be admonished and persuaded, and if it be necesfury compelled by Eccle siastical censure, that as they would be reputed and accounted Believers; so for the defence of the faith, they take an Oath publikely, that they will study in good earnest according to their power, to exterminate all that are by the Church denoted hereticks, from the Countries subject to their furisdiction. So that when any one shall be taken into Spiritual or Temporal power, he shall by his Oath make good this Chapter. But if the temporal Lord, being required and admonished of the Church, shall neglest to purge his Countrey of beretical defilement, let him by the Metropolitan and other Comprovincial Bishops be tyed by the bond of Excommunication. And if he refuse to satisfic within a year, let it be signified to the Pope, that he may from thenceforth denounce his Vasfals absolved from his fidelity, and may expose his Countrey to be feifed on by Catholikes, who recting out the hireticks. may possessit without contradiction, and may keep it in the purity of faith; (aving the right of the principal Lord; so be it that he bimself do make no hinderance hereabout, and oppose any impediment: and the same Law is to be observed with them that are not principal Lords. And the Cathelikes, that taking the fign of the Cross shall set themselves to the rooting out of the hereticks, shall enjoy the same indulgences and holy priviledges, which were granted to these that go to the releif of the holy land. Moreover we Decree, that the believers, receivers, defenders, and favourers of Hereticks, Shall be excommunicate; firmly decreeing, that after any such is noted by excommunication, if he resuse to satisfie within a year, he shall from thenceforth be ipso jure infamous, and may not be admitted to publike Offices or Councils, or to the choice of such. nor to bear witness. And he shall be intestate and not have power to make a will, nor may come to a Succession of inheritance. And no man shall be forced to answer him in any cause: but be shall be forced to answer others. And if he be a Judge, his sentence shall be invalid, and no causes shall be brought to his hearing. If he be an Advocate, his Plea shall not be admitted. If a Notary (or Register) the Instruments made by him shall be utterly woid, and damned with the damned Author. And so in other the like cases, we command that it be observed.] Thus they go on further commanding Bishops by themselves, or their Arch-deacons, or other fit persons, once or twice a year to search every Parish where any Heretick is found to dwell, and put all the Neighbourhood to their Oaths, whether they know of any Hereticks there, or any private meetings, or any that in life and manners do differ from the common conversation of the faithful, &c. And the Bishops that neglect these things are to be cast out, and others put into their places that will do them.

And Pope Gregory 7. l. 4. Epist. 7. expressly stirs up the people to cast off their Princes, saying [And for the conspiracy of Hereticks and the King, we believe it is not unknown to jou that are near them, how it may be impugned by the Catholike Bishops and Dukes, and many others in the German parts: for the faithful of the Church of Rome are come to such a number, that unless the King shall come to satisfaction, they may openly profess to choose another King, and observing fustice, we have promised to favour them, and will keep our promise sirm, &c.]

The sum of all is, that all that the Pope calls Hereticks, must be condemned and destroyed, and all Kings, Princes or Lords. that will not execute his fentence and root them out, must be disposessed of their Dominions, and the subjects absolved from their fidelity (whatever Oaths they had taken) and all others that do but favour or receive them be utterly undone.

I fetch not these things out of the writings of the Protestants. nor from any private Doctors of their own, but from the very words of a General Council confirmed by the Pope, and unquestionably approved by them. And abundance the like might be produced. And many ages faw this doctrine put in execution, when the Emperors of Germany were deposed by the Pope and the Subjects absolved from their Allegiance, as the many volumes written in those times, and published together by Gol-And the King of France, or any other that tole: dastus testifie. rate any of the supposed Hereticks, may see what a censure they are exposed to, if meer necessity were not their security.

Perhaps some will say, that this Decree was not de side, but a semporary precept. Answ. When a precept requireth duty, it may be a point of Faith to believe it. Precepts are the Objects of Faith, at least as they are affertions, that the thing commanded is our duty. It is an Article of faith, that God is to be loved and obeyed, and our Superiors to be honoured, and our Neighbour to be loved, and Charity to be exercised, &c. The Creation, the Incarnation of Christ, his death, resurrection, ascension, glorification, intercession, his suture Judgement, the Resurrection of the body, &c. are all matters of sact, and yet matters of faith too. If practicals be not Articles of faith, then we have no Articles of faith at all : for all our Theology and Religion is practical. Do Papists murder poor Christians by the thousands, and yet not fide divina believe that it is their duty so to do? Either it is a duty, or a fin, or indifferent. If a fin, woe to their Pope and Council (and if this be no sin with them, I know not why the world should be troubled by them with the name of sin.) If it be indifferent, what then shall be called sin? If they can swallow such Camels, as the blood of many thousand Christians, what need they strain at Gnats, and stick at private Murders.

Murders, or Fornication, or Lying, or Slandering, any more then the Jesuit Casuists do, that are cited by the fansenian in his Mysterie of Jesuitism? But if these Murders and deposing Kings be indeed a duty, how can they know it to be so, but by Believing? And indeed if a General Council and the Pope are to be believed, who give it us with a Decernisms & firmiter statuimus, then it is doubtless a point of faith: and if they are not to be believed, then Popery is all but a meer deceit. Object. 2. But may we not be Roman Catholikes though we joyn not with them in this point? Have not many such renounced it? and so may we. Answ. If you renounce the Decrees of a Pope and General Council, you renounce your Religion in the very foundation of it, and cannot be Papilts, if you know what you do; but are in the Roman account as errant Hereticks as those that they have tortured and burnt to ashes: though here in Engl.nd where they cannot handle you as they would do they dare not tell you fo. And if you may renounce the Decrees of a Pope and General Council, when they fay, [It is a duty, or lawful to extirminate all as Hereticks, that believe not Transubstantiation, and to seize upon the Lands of Princes that will not do it, and to deliver them to others that will, and absolve their Vassals from their fidelity I say, if you may renounce them in this, why may not we have as free leave to renounce them in other things. as groundless?

CHAP. VI.

Argum. 4. THE true Catholike Church is Holy: the Church of Rome hath for many generations been unholy: therefore the Church of Rome was not in any of those Generations the true Catholike Church.

The Major Proposition is an Article of the Creed professed by themselves, as much as by us, [I Believe the Holy Catholike

Church.

The unholine's of the Church of Rome, I prove undenyably, thus: If an Essential part of the Church of Rome, even its Head, hath been unholy through man; Generations, then the Church of Rome hath been unholy for man; Generations: but an Essential all part, even the Head, hath been unholy: therefore, &c.

The Consequence of the Major is past denyal. Bonum est excansis integris. Though it will not follow that the Church is Holy, because one Essential part is Holy, yet it clearly followeth that the Church is unboly, because an Essential part is unboly. As it followeth not that the Body is sound, because the Head is sound; yet it followeth, that the man (or the body) is unfound or sick, because the Head is unsound or sick. As it is not a Church without all its Essential parts, so it is not an Holy Church without the Holiness of all its Essential parts.

And that they make the Pope the Head of the Catholike Church, and an Effential part, I am loth to prove; I would I could but entice them to deny it: for it is the principal contro-versie between them and the true Catholikes.

And that abundance of their Popes have been unholy, I have formerly proved, and they dare not I hope deny it; when their own Historians describe their Impieties, and their own Writers, even those that are bitterest against us, do freely confess it; yea General Councils have judged them and cast them out. The number of these Monsters is so great, that it would make a volume greater then I intend, but to name them and recite their crimes. I will give a brief instance of one of them.

Pope John the twenty third was accused and deposed by the General Council at Constance, upon about seventy Articles which in Binnius take up about thirteen columes in folio: and therefore I suppose you would give me no thanks to trouble you with the recital of them all. The first Article was, that he was from his youth, a man of a bad disposition, immodest, impudent, alvar, a rebell and disobedient to his parents, and given to most vices, and then was, and yet is commonly taken for such a one by all that knew him. The fecond Article was, how by Simoniacal and unjust means he grew rich. The third Article that by Simony he was promoted to be a Cardinal. The fourth Article, that being Legat at Bononia he governed Tyrannically, impiously, unjustly, being wholly aliene from all Christian piety, and justice, divine and humane, &c. The fifth Article, that thus he got to be Pope, and yet continued as bad, and as a Pagan despised the worship of God, and if he performed any, it was more lest he should be totally blamed of herefie and cast out of the Papacy, then then for any devotion, and he hudled it up like an Hunter or a Souldier. The first Article was, that he was the oppressor of the poor, the persecutor of righteousness, the pillar of the unjust, and the Simonlacal, a server of the sless, the dregs of vices, a stranger to vertue, slying from publike consistories, wholly given to sleep and earnal desires, wholly contrary to the life and manners of Christ, the mirror of infamy, and the prosound inventor of all mischiess; so far scandalizing the Church of Christ, that among Christian Believers that knew his life and manners, he is commonly called, The Devil incarnate. The seventh Article was, that being a vessel of all sins, repelling the worthy, he Simonically sold Benefices, Bishopricks and Church dignities openly to the unworthy that would give most for them.

Reader, I should but weary thee to add threescore more of these Articles. These were all proved to be Notorious by Cardinals. Archbishops, Bishops, and many more. Yet I will crave thy patience while I add but two or three of the last. Ano. ther was, that he came to be Pope by causing Pope Alexander and his Physician Dr. Daniel de sopbia to be poysoned. Another was that he committed incest with his brothersWife, and with the holy Nuns, and Whoredom with Virgins, and adultery with mens Wives, and other crimes of incontinency, for which the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience. Another that he was a wicked man, notoriously guilty of Murder, Witchcraft and other grievous crimes, a diffipater of the Church goods, a notorious Simonist, and pertinacious Heretick. The next Article was, that often and often before divers Prelates and other honest men, by the Devils perswasion, he obstinately asferred, dogmatized, and maintained, that there is no life everlasting, nor any other after this; Moreover, he said and obstinately believed that the foul of man doth die and is extin & with the body like the bruit beafts, and that the dead shall not rife again at the last day, contrary to the Article of the Resurrection. The last and some other Articles are about his perfidiousness. And hereupon the Council deposed him.

And now Reader I leave thee to judge, whether the Romane Chnrch had a holy Head, when it had a Heathen and a Devil

as being [A rebel against the holy Canons, a notorious disturber and scandalizer of the peace and unity of the Church, a Simonist and a perjured wretch, incorrigible, a schismatick, and an obstinate Heretick.

Pope John 13. alias 12. was in Councill convicted of ravilleing Maids, Wives, Widows at the Apostolick doors, and committing many murders: he drunk a health to the Devil, and at Dice caled to Jupiter and Venus for belp, and at last was stain in the act of Adultery. Saith Plutina | he was from his youth a man contaminated with all dishonesty and filthiness; and if he had any time to spare from his lusts, he spent it in hunting, and not in praying.] And after he calls him [a most wicked man, or rather a Mon. ster] and saith that ! the life of this most wicked man being judged in a Council of Italian Bishops, for fear of them he fled and lived like a wild beast in the woods. I till at last he got the better again by the help of his friends at Rome; till an angry man that found him naught with his wife, got the better of him, and fent him to answer it in another world. And their own writers note that this was the first Pope that changed his name, whom his followers imitated. And do you think the Head of the Roman Church was then Holy?

If it were a disputable matter, I would prove out of abundance of their own writers, that many others of them have been most wicked wretches, common adulterers, and fornicators, yea Sodomites, poysoning their predecessors to get the Popedom. &c. But its needless, because they deny it not. Baronius their flattering Champion saith (Annal.ad an. 912.) What then was the face of the boly Roman Church? How exceeding filthy, when the most potent, and yet the most sordid whores did rule at Rome? by whose Pleasure Sees were changed, Bishops were given, and which is a thing horrid to be heard, and not to be spoken, their Lovers (or mates) were thrust into Peters Chair, being false Pepes, who are not to be written in the Catalogue of the Roman Popes, but only for the marking out of such times. And what kind of Cardinals, Priests, and Deacons think you we must imagine that these monsters did choose, when nothing is so rooted in nature as for every one to beget his like?

And Genebrard that spleenish Papist (li.4. Sec. 10.) saith [In this one thing that age was unhappy, that for neer one hundred and fifty years about sifty Popes did wholly fall away from the virtue of their ancefors, being rather irregular and Apostatical, then Apostolical] So that the Church of Rome had not then either a Holy or Apostolical Héad.

And Pope Adrian the fixth himself writeth (De Sacram. Consir. Art. 4.) that there have many Popes of Rome been Hereticks. And two or three several General Councils did condemn Pope Honorius for an Heretick.

And if I should tell you but what their own writers say of the wickedness of the Roman Clergy, in many ages; and of the wickedness of the Roman people, of the large summs of money that the Pope hath yearly for the licensed or tolerated Whorehouses in Rome, you would think that the body of the particular Roman Church were neer kin to the Head, and therefore not the Holy Mistris of all Churches.

But perhaps some will say, that the Pope was holy because his Office was Holy, though his person visious. Ans. I. If this be the Holiness of the Catholick Church, mentioned in the Creed, then the Institution of offices is it that makes it Holy, and while the office continueth, the Holiness cannot be lost. 2. Then let them prove their Holiness by Saints no more. 3. Let them not then delude the people, but speak out, and tell them that they mean such Holiness as is consistent with Heathenism, or Instidelity, Murders, Sodomie, and may be in an incarnate Devil! Is this the Holiness of the Catholick Church?

Object. But you may have unholy persons among you also, that yet say you are of the true Church.

Answ. But they are no Esential part of the Catholick Church which we believe; and therefore it may be a Holy Church, though they be unholy. But the Pope is an Essential part of the Roman Church which they believe in; and therefore it can not be Holy, if he be unholy.

Object. By this means you leave no room for the Church of Rome or any Papist in the Catholick Church which is truly Holy.

Answ. Not as Papists: so they can be no members of it. But if with any of them Christianity be predominant, and prevail against the infection of Popery, so that it practically extinguish not Christianity, then as Christians they may be members of the Church, and be saved too, but not as Papists.

CHAP. VII.

Argum. 5. HE true Catholick Church of Christ is but One: The pretended Roman Catholick Church is more than One: Therefore the pretended Roman-Catholick

Church is not the true Catholick Church of Christ.

The Major is confessed. The Minor I prove thus, 1. where the e are two Heads or Soveraign Powers specifically distinct, there are two Societies, or Churches. But those called Papists, or the Roman Catholick Church, have two Heads or Soveraign Powers specifically distinct. Therefore they are two Churches.

The Major is granted by all Politicians, who do without contradiction specific Common wealths and other Political Societies from the Soveraign Powers: and so the Monarchical, Aristocratical and Democratical are several Species. The Belgian Common-wealth, and the French, be not specifically the same.

The Minor hath two standing proofs so visible that he must be blind indeed that cannot see them. First there are the many Volumes that are written by both sides for their several forms: Bellarmine, Gretfor and the rest of the Italian faction proving that the Pope is the chief Power, and above a General Council, and the feat of Infallibility, and not to be judged by any, being himself the Judge of the whole world. And the other party proving that a General Council is above the Pope, and that he is to be judged by them, and may be deposed by them. If any say, that they are but few and no true Catholicks of this Opinion, I answer, then a General Council are but sew and no true Catho-Micks, which yet is faid by them to represent the whole Catholick Church: For the General Council of Constance and of Basil have peremptorily afferted it, and repeat it over and over; yea the Council of Basil say, Sef. altim. that Not one of the skilfull did ever doubt but that the Popemas subject to the Judgement of a General Council, in things that concern faith. And that he cannot without their consent dissolve or remove a General Council; rea and that this is an Article of faith, which without destruction of Salvation cannot be denyed and that the Council is above the Pope, de fide, and that it cannot be removed without their own consent, and that he is an heretick that is against these things | See Rinnius

Binnius page 43.79.96. And Pope Eugenius owned this Council ibid.page 42. And for the Council of Constance, Martin the fifth was chosen by it, and present in it, and personally confirmed it in these words [Quodomnia & singula determinata, conclusion, & decreta, in materiis sidei per prasens concilium, conciliariter tenere & inviolabiliter observare volebat, & nunquam contraire quoquo modo. Ipsag; sic conciliariter sasta approbat & ratificat, & non aliter, nec alio modo] (that is, what they did as a Council, and not what private members did:) you see then even General Councils representing the Catholick Church do not only say that a Council is above the Pope, but make it an Article of faith, and damn those that deny it. (What then is become of Bellarmine and the rest of their champions?)

But perhaps you'l say, they are but sem on the other side. I answer: yes: Not only most Popes, and the Italian Clergy, and the predominant party of Papists, but another General Council, even that at the Lateran, under Julius 2. and Leo. 10. expressly determine on the contrary, that the Pope is above a General Council. So that here is not only an undenyable proof that General Councils are fallible by their contradicting each other, and that there is a Necessity of rejecting some of them, and consequently that the Foundation of Popery is rotten; but also here is one Representative Catholick Church against another Representative Catholick Church, and one Council for one Species of Soveraignty, and another for another Species of Soveraignty. So that undoubtedly it is not the same Church, that had two heads of several sorts.

2. And the Nations that are on both fides to this day, are a proof beyond denyall of their division. The French on one fide, and the Italians on the other; and other nations divided between both. So that the thing which they call by one name, is two indeed. But so is not the true Catholick Church.

Object. What though some in England took the King to be the Soveraign, and some the Parliament, and soom thought it was in both (onjunct; did this prove that you were more than one Common wealth?

Answ. Where the Soveraignty is mixt and not in either alone, if any one shall set up the one as the only Soveraign, and subject the other to them, they change the form of the Commonwealth, but do not fet up two Commonwealths; but if half take one for the Soveraign, and the other half take the other for the Soveraign, they plainly divide the Commonwealth into two: if they do it only in mind, and the fecret thoughts of their hearts, this cannot be known to others, and so cannot be the ground of a Society: but if they do it by a publike confent and practice, they evidently make two Commonwealths. What else brought us into a war which ended not till one party was subdued? It is not possible that one Political body should have two Soveraigns specifically distinct. Indeed it may have five hundred natural perfons in the Soveraignty (as in a Senate;) but they are but one Political person, or one summa potestas.

2. But I prove the Minor by another Argument. Where there are two three or four Heads or Severaigns at once numerically distinct, there are two or three or four Churches. But the Roman Church pretending to be Catholike, hath had two or three or four Heads at once numerically distinct; therefore it was two or three or four Churches.

The Major is a known truth to all that are verse in any degree in the doctrine of Politicks. It is not only two species of Soveraignty, but two individual Soveraigns that are inconsistent with the numerical Unity of a Political body. Two, or ten, or two hur dred may joyn in one Soveraignty, as one Political person (as I said) but if there be two Soveraigns, there are certainly two Societies: for if both be Supream, neither is Subordinate. The Minor is not to be denyed: for the Papists lay their very foundation on a supposed division: for sooth Peter and Paul were both at once their Bishops. And there is not many of them that adventure to tell us, that Peter only was the Supream, and that Paul was under him: but they make them as equals, or coordinate; and some of them say; that Paul was the Bishop of the uncircumcifion, and Peter of the Circumcifion (and then Peters Church is confined to the Jews) And they do not tell us, that one Headship was divided between them: For then that example would direct them still to have two Popes, or two Bishops to a Church: fo that Peter being a Head, and Panl a Head, they had fure diffinct bodies.

But whether they stand to this or not, they cannot deny their many following divisions. The twenty third schifme (as tweet-nerns a zealous Papilt in fasciculo tempor. reckons them) was between Felix the fish and Eugenius: of which the said Wernerus speaking saith, [That hence arose great contention among the writers of this matter, pro & contra, and they cannot agree to this day: for one part saith, that a Council is above the Pope, the other part on the contrary saith, No, but the Pope is above the

Of the twenty second schisme the same wernerns saith thus, (ad annum 1373.) [the twenty second schisme was the worst and most subtile schisme of all that were before it. For it was so perplexed, that the most Learned and Conscientious men were not able to discuss (or find out) to whom they should adhere. And it was continued for fourty years, to the great scandal of the whole Clergy, and the great loss of souls, because of Heresies and other evils that then sprung up, because there was then no discipline in the Church against them. And therefore from this Urbane the sixth to the time of Martin the sifth, I know not who was Pope

After Nicolas the fourth there was no Pope for two years and anhalf, and Celestine the fifth that succeeded him resigning it. Boniface the eighth entered, that stiled himself Lord of the whole world in Spirituals and Temporals, of whom it was said, He entered as a Fox, lived as a Lyon, and dyed like a Dog, saigh the same Wirnerus.

The twentieth schissne (saith the same Author) was great between Alexander the third, and four Schismaticks, and it lasted seventeen years.

The nineteenth schisme was between Innocent the second, and Peter Leonis: and Innocent get the better, because he had more on his side (saith he.)

The thirteenth schisme (saith Wernerus) was between another and Benedict the eighth.

The fourteenth schisme (saith the same Author) was scandalous and full of confusion between Benedict the ninth and five others; which Benedict (saith he) was wholly vitious, and therefore being damned, appeared in a monstrous and horrid shape; his kead and tail were like an Asses, and the rest of his body like a Bear, saying, I thus appear, because I lived like a beast. In this schisma (saith Wernerus) there were no less then six Popes at once. I. Benedict was expulsed. 2. Silvester the third gets in, but is cast our again, and senedict restored. 3. But being again cast out, Gregor ty the fixt is put into his place; who because he was ignorant of letters (and yet infallible no doubt) caused another Pope to be Consecrated with him to perform Church Offices; which was the fourth; which displeased many, and therefore a third is chosen, (which was the fifth) instead of the two that were fighting with one another: but Henry (the Emperor) coming in, deposed them all, and chose Clement the second, (who was the sixth of all them that were alive at once)

But above all schisses that between Armosus and Sergius, and their followers, was the sowlest, such saying and unsaying, doing and undoing there was, besides the dismembring of the dead Pope, and casting him into the water. And of eight Successors, saith Wernerus, [I can say nothing observable of them; because I find nothing of them but scandalous, because of the unheard of contention in the holy Apostolike sea one against another, and together

Reader, wouldst thou be troubled with any more of these Relations? I tell thee nothing but from their own Historians, and that which multitudes of them agree in: I go not to a Prote-flant for a word. But one Pope in those contentious times, I find lived in some peace, and that was Silvester the second, of whom saith Wernerus (as others commonly) [This Silvester was made Pope by the help of the Devilto whom he did homage: that all might go as he would have it:—but he quickly met with the usual End, as one that had placed his Hope in deceitful Devils.]

Well! I shall now appeal to reason it self, whether this were one Church, that for fourty (or say others fifty) years together had several Heads, some of the people following one, and some another, and the most Learned and most Conscientious not able to know the right Pope, nor know him not to this day. If England were sourty years thus divided between two Kings, it were certainly two Kingdoms. But the true Catholike Church of Christ is but one.

CHAP. VIII.

Argum. 6. THE true Catholike Church hath never ceased or discontinued, since the founding of it to this day. The Church of Rome bath ceased or discontinued: therefore the Church of Rome is not the true Catholike Church.

I prove the Minor (for the Major they will grant.) If the Head which is an Essential part, bath discontinued, then the Church of Rome hath discontinued. But the Head hath discontinued:

The Minor only needs proof: and that I prove 1. There have been many years interregnum or vacancy, when there was no Pope at all. And where then was the Church when it had no Head?

2. There have been long successions of such as you confess your selves, were not Apostolical, but Apostatical. 3. Your own Popes and Councils command us to take such for no Popes. For example, Pope Nicelas in his Decretals (see Caranza pag. 393.) saith [He that by money or the favour of men, or popular or military tumults is intruded into the Apostolical seat without the Concordant and Canonical election of the Cardinall and the following religious Clergy, let him not be taken for a Pope, nor Apostolical, but for Apostatical.] And even of Priests, he commandeth, [Let no man hear Mass of a Priest whom he ceratainly knoweth to have a Concubine or woman introduced] Caranza, pag. 395. and ibid, he saith, [Priests that commit fornication, cannot have the honour of Priesthood.]

4. But our greater Argument is from the authority of God, and the very nature of the office. An Infidel, or notorionsly unagodly man, is not capable of being a Pastor of the Church (in sensure to composito, while he is such) But the Popes of Rome have been Infidels, and notoriously ungodly men: therefore they were uncapable of being Pastors of the Church (and consequently that Church was Headless, and so no Church.). The Major I prove.

1. Where there is not the necessary matter and disposition of the matter, there can be no reception of the form: But Insidels and notoriously ungodly men, are not matter sufficiently disposed to receive the form of Pastoral Power: therefore they cannot receive its.

The Minor is proved. 1. As every true Church is a Christian Church

Church (it being only a Congregation of Christians that we so call, in our present case) so every Pastor is a Christian Pastor: but an Infidel or notoriously ungodly man is not a Christian Pastor: therefore not a true Pastor. 2. Otherwise a Mahometan, Jew, or Heathen may be a true Pope; which I think they will deny themselves. 3. If any Disposition or Qualification at all be necessary to the being of the Pastoral Office (besides manhood) then is it necessary, that he own God the Father, and the Redeemer (that is, be not notoriously an Infidel, or ungodly.) But some qualification is necessary: therefore, &c. None can be named more necessary then this.

And that Popes have been such as I here mention, is proved before. Not to mention Marcellinus that sacrificed to an Idol, or Liberius that subscribed to the Arrian profession; (for I believe there is an hundred times more hope of their Salvation by Repentance, then of an hundred of their Successors) fohn the twenty second held that the soul dies with the body, of which the Parisians and others condemned bim. John the twenty third, as I shewed before, denyed the life to come, and so was an Insidel. The Witchcraft, Poysonings, Simony, Sodomy, Adulteries, Incest, &c. of others, are sufficiently re-

Argum. 7. TO the foregoing Arguments, I add the recital of one formerly mentioned, for the use of all that have the use of their wits and senses.

If a man may be sure, that he knows bread to be bread, and wine to be wine, when he seeth, seeleth, and tasteth them, then he may be sure that Popery is a deceit. (This Consequence they cannot question) But a man may be sure that he knoweth bread to be bread, and wine to be wine, when he seeth, feeleth, and tasteth them: therefore, &c.

Note that I speak of such a knowledge as belongs to men of sound wits and senses, and a convenient object and medium. It is the senses of the whole world that I appeal to, and not of one or two: it is bread and wine that are near us, in the hand or mouth that I speak of, and not at a miles distance: in the daylight, and not in the dark. So that take the bread and wine into your hand, and judge of it, and let this decide our Controversie. If you can tell whether that be bread or no bread, you may tell whether the Papifts or we are in the right. Those therefore that be not learned and subtile enough to judge by Disputations and writings of Learned men, may yet judge by their fight and feeling. Either you know bread and wine when you see it, taste it, feel it, or you do not. If you do, then the Controversie is at an end; for the senses of all sound men in the world, will be against the Papists that say the bread after Consecration is no bread, and the wine is no wine. But if you cannot know bread when you see, feel, and eat it, then see what follows. 1. Then we are sure that the Pope and all his Council are not at all to be trusted : for if sence be not to be trusted, then the Pope and his Council know not when they read the Scripture. and Canons, and Fathers, and hear Traditions, but that they are deceived. 2. Then we are uncertain of any Judgement that Pope or Council can give : for when they spoke or wrote it, we are uncertain whether our eyes and ears, or reason judging by them, are not deceived in the hearing or reading of their words. 3. How ridiculously then do they call for a Judge of Controversies? and what a foolish quarrel is it that they make, who shall be the Interpreter of Scriptures, or Judge of Controversies? For what can a Judge do but speak or write his mind? and when he hath done, you know not what it is that you hear or read. because your senses may deceive you. Its a far harder matter to understand a sentence or book of the Pope or Council when you read or hear it, then to know bread when you fee, and feel, and eat it. Many thousands know bread, that know not the Popes sentence, nor a word of a book. 4. And by this rule, it is uncertain whether Scripture be true, or Christianity the true Religion. For we cannot know it but by our fences; and if they are fo uncertain, all our Religion must needs be uncertain. 5. Yea we cannot tell what Revelation to desire that should end our Controversies and make us certain. For if God should send an Angel or other Messenger from heaven to decide the Controversies between us and the Papists, what could he do more but speak it to us as from God? and we should still be uncertain of what we

Controversies, if Popery be true.

And here you may see upon what terms we dispute with Papifts, and what hope there is of fatisfying them. We dispute with men that will not believe their own senses, or the senses of the world. The damned man, Luk. 16. thought if one might have been sent to his brethren from the dead, they would have believed. And if Abraham say to them, If they will not hear Mofes and the Prophets, neither will they be perswaded though one rise from the dead; we may say of Papists, sure, if they will not believe their own eyes, and ears, and taste, and know not bread when they see, and feel, and eat it, how should they be perswaded, though one were sent to them from heaven to resolve them? Can we think by all our Arguments to make any matter plainer to a man then that Bread is Bread, when he feeth and eatethit? If this be uncertain to them, what can you prove to them, or what way can you devise to deal with them? For indeed, if fense be uncertain, we have no certainty of any thing in the world.

But to this H.T. (they say H. Turbervile) in his Manual of Controversies saith thus. [Answ. Substance is not the proper and immediate object of sense, but colour, quantity, &c. Nor can sense judge at all of substance though it be under sensible accidents, unless it be the subject of those accidents, and have a sensible and corporal manner of being, which the Body of Christ neither is, nor hath in that Sacrament. It hath a spiritual manner of being, and is not the subject of the accidents of bread; they are without a subject by Miracle; therefore no wonder, if sense be deceived in this matter. Here Sense and Reason must vail bonnet to faith, and submit to the Authority of God revealing, and the Church propounding; they are no competent judges what God can do by his Omnipotence.] Thus H.T.

Repl. And is this all that these Rabbies have to satisfie the world that it is not Bread and Wine which is seen, and felt, and tasted! Let us first take notice of the by-passages of his answer, and then reply to the substance. I, Is not this like the rest of their contradictory imaginations? That Christ hath not a Corporal manner of Being in the Sacrament: and yet it is not Bread, but his Body that is there: yea before pag. 207. he saith,

[We

We maintain not his Corporal, but real and spiritual presence in the Sacrament. So that either they affirm that his Body is prefent, and yet deny his Bodily presence; or else they affirm his Bodily presence, but not his Corporal presence. Most learnedly! We shall at last be taught to distinguish between Bodily and Corporal! But is not the Juggle in the word [Manner?] Perhaps the Corporal presence is not denyed, but the Corporal manner. Answ. I. Yes, in terms its said [We maintain not his Corporal presence] 2. And can a Body be present, and not in a Bodily manner? And why is [Spiritually] put as contradiffinct? Sure when Paul said our Bodies shall be raised spiritual bodies, he thought that they were nevertheless bodies for being spiritual; and therefore it is nevertheless a Bodily manner of presence. for being a spiritual manner. But it by the Corporal presence or manner (denyed) be meant nothing but the qualities and quantity by which it is fit to be the Object of our fenfes, why had we not this plainly without jugling? To fay Christ is present in Body but not sensibly, is plainer English, then to sav that he is present in Body but not Bodily present.

2. Note also that he calls them [The accidents of bread] and yet saith [they are without a subject] And so doth the Explanation of the Roman Catholike Belief, and their ordinary writers say that the Body of Christ is under the forms of Bread and Wine; and yet say that Bread and Wine are none of the subject of those

3. Note also that he professeth Transubstantiation is a Miraicle, and so every ignorant, drunken, adulterous Priest of theirs hath the gift of Miracles, which he worketh as oft as he confecrateth: No wonder if Miracles be the glory of their Church, and the proof of their Infallibility; But let us come to the substance of his Answer.

1. He tells you that substance is not the proper and immediate object of sense, but colour, quantity, &c. But 1. Is not the Mediate Object [Proper] as well as the Immediate? 2. But what gather you hence? be it a Proper or improper Object, I hope we may yet have leave to believe that Reason by the help of sense doth judge as infallibly of Substances as Accidents. If you think otherwise, then all the forementioned consequences are undenyable. You know not whether the world saw Christ on earth: or whether he were crucified, dead, buried, rose, or ascended: It might be but colour and quantity which men saw; and when Christ told them a spirit hath not sless and blood as ye see me have, they might have answered, the see no sless and blood, but colour and quantity: And Thomas had then small reason to be convinced by seeing and seeling, when he saw but colour and quantity, and selt but quantity and quality. By this reasoning the world is not sure that everthere was a Pope of Rome, but the Colour of a Pope, or other accidents. And you know not that there is any earth under your feet, or that you are a man, or have a body, because your senses perceive but the accidents of it.

2. But what manner of men did H. T. imagine he had to deal with, when he puts off his Readers with fuch an answer as this? Mark Reader the unfaithfull dealing of these men, and how grofly they abuse poor people that follow them with meer de. ceits. The Question or Objection which he undertook to answer Was, Whether sense telling us that it is Bread after the Consecra. tion be deceived? To this he takes on him to give an answer, and cunningly speaks to another question, and passeth this by. Its one question, Weether sense can infallibly discern Christ in the Sacrament, if be were there, or discern that he is not there? and another question Whether sonse can infallibly discern Bread and Wine, and know whether they be there? The last was the question in hand: but he flily answers to the first instead of it; and tells us, that sense cannot judge of substance, though under sensible accidents, unless it be the subject of those accidents, and have a sensible and corporal manner of being, which the body of Christ neither is nor buth in the Sacrament. And so goes on. And what of all this? [therefore Cirist may be in the Sacrament and you not difcern him by fen e] Well: and whats that to the question ? O Sir, is it not the holy truth of God that you are about? and should you thus abuse it, and the souls of men? you knew the question is, Whether sense (and the intellect thereby) be infallible in judging Bread to be Bread when we see, feel and eat it? Had you never a word to fay to this? to perswade men that they have eyes and fee not, and hands and feel not, or that the world knoweth not certainly what they feem to know by feeing and feeling? I pray you hereafter deal by us as fairly as Bellarmine did (and yet we

we will thank you for nothing) who quite gave away the Roman cause by granting and pleading [that sense is infallible in Positives: and therefore we may thence say, This is a Body because I see it; (and so this is Bread or wine because I see, seel and tasteit) but not in Negatives: and therefore we cannot say, this is not a Body because I see it not] I pray you give over talking of the Pope, or Church, or Religion, or Men, if you are uncertain of substances which are (suppose but per accidentia) the Objects of your sense. And take nothing ill that I write of you, till you are more certain that you fee it, and know what you fee.

3. But you'l say [Sense and Reason must here vail bonnet to faith. Answ. In the Negative case let it be granted, and any case where faith can be faith. But if sense (and the Intellect therewith) be fallible in Positives, so that we cannot know Bread when we see and eat it, faith cannot be faith then. What talk you of faith, if you credit not the soundest senses of all the men in the world, when sense and reason are presupposed to faith. How know you that faith here contradicted sense? You'l say, because the Church or Scripture saith: This is my Body: and that there is no Bread? But how know you that there is any such thing in Scripture? or that the Church so holdeth? you think you have read or heard it: But bow know you that your sense deceived you not? He that cannot know Bread when he seeth and eateth it, is unlikely to know letters and their meaning when he seeth them.

See more of my answer to such Objections in a Book entitled

The simplest Reader that hath honesty and charity, is secured against Popery by the first Argument, which he may make good to his own soul against all the Jesuites on earth. And he that is unable to proceed on that account, may by the evidence of this last Argument consute any Papist living, if he be a man of sense and reason. And having brought all our controversie so low, that sense it self may be the judge, I shall go no surther in Argument, as thinking it vain to use any reason with that man that will not believe his own eye-sight, nor the sight, and seeling, and taste of all the world besides.

CHAP. X.

Come now to the next and principal part of my task, which is to open to you their Deceits, and give you Directions for the discovery and consutation of them, that by the help of these you may see the Truth.

that If you prove them guilty but of any one Error in points of belief determinea by their Church, you thereby disprove the whole body of Popery, as such. For you pull up the foundation which they build on, and the Authority into which they resolve their faith. They will grant you, that if they are deceived by the Church in one thing, they have no Certainty of any thing upon the Churches credit. So that if you read Pauls discourse against Praying in an unknown tongue, or the many precepts for our reading and medicating in the Law of God, or the like, and can but perceive that the Popsh Latine service, or their forbidding men to read the Scripture, &c. are contrary hereto, or if you find out but any one of their Errors, you cannot be a Papist, if you understand their Prosession.

But it is not so with us: for though we know that the Scripture and all that is in it is of infallible Truth, and that every true Christian (while such) is infallible in the Essentials of Christianity; (for else he were no Christian) yet we profess that we know but in part, and that our own Writings and Confessions may possibly in some things be besides the sense of Scripture; and there being much more propounded in Scripture to our saith, then what is of absolute necessity to salvation, we may possibly after our studying and praying mistake in some things that are not of the Essence but the Integrity of Christianity, and are necessary to the Melius essentials. So that every Error in their saith destroyes their grounds, and so their new Religion; but so doth not every Error of ours.

Or to speak more distinctly; let us distinguish between the Fides qua et qua; their Objective faith, and our Subjective faith.

1. Their Objective Faith hath Errors in it, but ours hath none by their own confession: For their sis all the Decrees of their Popes and Councils: and ours is only the Holy Scripture, which they confess to be infallible. Our own writings do but shew how we understand the Scriptures, and so whether our subjective faith be right or not. 2. We confess that it is not only possible but probable, that we are mistaken in some lower points, about the meaning of the Scriptures, and yet our foundation is still sure. But they have in a fort confounded their Subjective and Objettive faith: and one believes it on that account because others do believe it; and so one age or part do but seek for the Objett of their faith in the Actual faith of the other. Yea 3. They conclude that every point which is of faith, that is, thats determined by the Church to be so, is of such necessity to salvation that no man can be faved that denyeth it, or that doth not believe it (if fufficiently proposed.) But we are assured, that though all that is in Scripture be most true, yet through misunderstanding, some points there proposed to our faith, may possibly be denyed and disputed against by a true believer; and yet his salvation not be overthrown by it. The Papills cry out against us for distinguishing between the Fundamentals (or effentials) of Religion and the Integrals: but we know it to be necessary.

CHAP. XI.

Detect. 2. WHEN you have brought the matter thus far, and fee that if they have one errour in faith, their whole cause is lost, then consider, whether it be Possible for that Doctrine which is so contrary to Scripture, and to it felf, to be free from all Error. I. How contrary it is to Scripture, I. To forbid the reading of Scripture in a known tongue: 2. And their Publick Praying in an unknown language: 3. And their administring the Lords Supper to the People by the halves, denying them the Wine, and giving them the bread only: 4 And their affirming men to be perfect without sin in this life: 5. And their calling some sins venial which deserve a pardon, and yet are truly no sins: 6. And their absolute forbidding their Priests to marry, 7. And saying that there is no Bread and Wine left after the Confectation, with abundance the like: the very reading of the texts may satisfie you. As for the first, see Dens. 6.7, 8, 9. Dens. 11.18.

2. And that they are contrary to themselves, appeareth: 1. In that (as I said before) not only several persons, but several Countries go feveral wayes; the French are of one way, and the Italians of another, even in the Fundamentals of their Faith, which all the rest is resolved into. 2. Their Popes have ordinarily been contrary to one another in their Decrees; which made Platina lay | Following Pores do still either infringe or wholly abrogate the Decrees of the former Popes] And Erasmus saith that Pope John 22. and Pope Nicolas are contrary one to another in their whole Decrees, and that in things that seem to belong to matter of faith | Had we no instances but of Sergius and Formesus and their following partakers, it were enough. And Celestines case puts Bellarmine to filly shifts. 3. That their Councils contradict each other, I have formerly manifested. They confess that the Arrians have had many Councils as General as most ever the Orthodox had: and if it be only the want of the Popes approbation that nullifieth their authority, then let them tell us no more of Councils and of [all the Church] but fay plainly that is but one man that they mean.

But even their approved Councils have been contrary: As the fixth Council at Constantinople approved by Pope Adrian, is now confessed to have many errors. The Council of Neocasarea confirmed by Pope Leo 4. and by the Nicen Council (as saith the Council of Florence Ses. 7.) condemned second marriages, contrary to Scripture and the present Church. The Council at the Laterane under Leo the tenth determines that the Pope is above a General Council; and the Councils of Conflance and Basil determine that the General Council is above the Pope, and that this is de side, and its heresie to deny it.

CHAP. XII.

Detect.3. If you enter into Dispute with any Papist, enquire sirst what he will take for sufficient Proof, and what common Principles you are agreed on by which the rest must be decided. For men that agree in nothing at all, are not capable of a dispute. For the Principles in which they are agreed, are those that the rest must be reduced to. And when you have made this enquiry, you shall find that the Popish way of Disputing is to forbid you to Dispute, unless you will first yield the cause to them as beyond dispute: and that they are not agreed with the rest of the world in any common principles to which the differences may be reduced for tryal, and so that there is no fort of Proof that they will admit of as sufficient: For if there be any ground of Proof at all, it must be 1: From the senses.

2. Or from Reason. 3. Or from Scripture. 4. Or from the Church; but they will stand to none of all these.

1. Begin at the bottom of all, and know of them whether they will take that for a Valid Proof, which is fetcht from sense, even from the soundest senses of all men in the world, supposing a convenient object and Medium? If they will not take this for Proof, how can you dispute with them? Or what Proof can be admitted, if this be not admitted? We have this advantage in dealing even with those Heathen that have blotted out much of the Law of nature it self, that yet they will yield to an Argu-

But if they would yield to the Validity of this proof, then they give away their cause, seeing sense telleth us that it is bread which we see, and feel, and eat after the Consecration. They know this; and therefore they must disown and deny this fore of proof.

2. But will they then admit of Proofs from Reason? No, that cannot be, if proof from sense be not admitted. For Reason receiveth its object by means or occasion of the senses, and must needs be deceived if it be deceived: And Reason hath not a principle that it holds faster, then that sense is to be credited; that this is white or black which my own eyes and the eyes of all other men do see to be so: and so that this is bread which we all see and feel and tafte to be fo. And therefore the Papifls tell us that Reason must stoop to faith, that is, they will not stand to Reason when it contradicteth the doctrine of their sect. It feems they are in some parts of their Religion unreasonable. But I would know, whether they have any Reason to be unreasonable. If they have, then why might not our Reason be valid as well as their Reason which they bring against Reason? by which they contradict themselves. For if Reason be vain, why Reason they to proveits Vanity or invalidity? But if they have no Reason against Reason, let them confess it, and offer us none, and then their disputes will do no harm. We easily yield, that we have Reason to believe Gods Revelations, about those things which we had no Reafonto believe if they were not Revealed: And that many of those Revelations are above Reason, so far as that Reason cannot discern the truth of the thing without them; yea it would rather judge the things improbable: But yet Revelations are received by Reason, and inform Reason, and not destroyit; nor do they so contradict Sense or Reason, as to make that credible which Sense and Reason have sufficient ground to judge false.

So that here we must break with a Papist, even where we might join in dispute with a heathen. And how will Papists deal with Heathens if they will deny the proofs from sense and reason?

3. But will they stand to the Validity of Proofs from Scripture? No; For 1. They take it to be but part of Gods word, so that we may nor argue Negatively, [It is not in the holy Scripture: therefore it is not an Article of faith or a Lam of God] For they will presently appeal to Tradition. 2. And even so much as is in Scripture, though they confess it to be true, yet they confess it not to be by us intelligible, and will not admit of any proof from it, but with this limitation that you take it in that sense as the Church takes it. For they are sworn by the Trent Oath to take it in that sense as the Holy Mother Church doth hold, and bath held it in, and never to take or interpret it but according to the unanimous sense of the Fathers.] So that they must know what sense all the Fathers are unanimous in before they can admit mit a proof from Scripture. And before that can be done, above a Cart-load of books must be read over or searched: and when thats done, they will find that most texts were never medled with by most of those Fathers in their writings; and in those that they did meddle with, they disagreed in multitudes, and where they disagree they are not unanimous; and there the Papists are sworn to believe no sense at all. And if they would have come down to a Major vote, it is no short or casse matter to gather the votes. And if they know the Fathers unanimous consent, yet must they have the sense of the present Church too: And is it not all one to make your adversary the sunanimous for casse.

as the Judge of your Evidences and all your proofs?

4. Well, but at least may we not hope that they will stand to the Judgement of the Catholick Church? And if so, we will not take it for our adversary? No: they will not do so neither. For I. When they deny proof from sense and reason, they must needs deny all thats brought from the Church: For the Church cannot judge it felf but on supposition of the infallibility of sense. 2. And when you argue from the judgement and practice of the greater part of the Church, they presently disclaim them all as Hereticks or Schismaticks, and will have no man be a Valid witness but themselves. The Greeks, the Æthiopians, the Armenians, the Protestants, all are Hereticks or Schismaticks save they; and therefore may not be witnesses in the case. So that you see upon what terms we stand with the Papists, that will admit of no proofs upon the Infallibility of Sense or Reason, or the sufficiency of Scripture, or the testimony of the Catholick Church, but only from themselves.

CHAP, XIII.

Detect. 4 Nderstand what the Papists mean when they are still calling to you for a Indge of Controversies.

If you would dispute with them, they are presently asking you, [11/ho shall be the judge?] and perswading you that it is in vain to dispute without a living Judge: for every man will be the Judge himself; and every mans cause will be right in his own eyes, and all the world will be still at odds till we are agreed who shall be the Judge.

To help you to fee the sense of this deceit, and then to confute it; I. You may easily observe that this is the plain drift of all, to perswade you to make them your judges, and yield the cause instead of disputing it. For it is no other judge but themselves that they will admit. Yield first that the Pope or his Council is the judge of all controversies, and then its folly to dispute against them: so that if you will yield them the cause first, they will then dispute with you after.

2. But what is to be faid to the pretence of the Necessity of a Judge? I answer, 1. Its against all reason and experience to chink that all enquiries or disputes are vain, unless there be a Tudge to decide the case. A Judge is a Ruling decider; not to satisfie mens minds, so much as to preserve Order, and Peace. and Justice in the Society. But there are thousands of cases to be privately discussed, that we never need to bring to a Judge. Every Husbandman, and Tradesman, and Navigator, and other Artificer doth meet with doubts and difficulties in his way which he laboureth to Discern, and satisfieth himself with a Judgement of Discretion without a Ruling Judge. We eat, and drink, and clothe our selves, and follow our daily labours without a Judge, though we meet with controversies in almost all, what meat or drink is best for quality or quantity, and a hundred like doubts. Men do marry, and build, and buy, and fell, and take Phylick, and dispatch their greatest worldly business without a Judge. Judges are only for such controverted cases as cannot well be decided without them, to the attaining of the Ends of Government.

2. Is it not against the daily practice of the Papists to think or say that all disputes and controversies must have a Judge? Who is the Judge between the Nominals, Reals and Formalists, the Dominicans, Franciscans and Jesuites, in all those controversies which have Cartloads of Books written on them? Their Pope or Councils dare not Judge between them. Do they not daily dispute in their Schools among themselves without a Judge? and still write books against one another without a Judge?

3. Understand well the use and differences of Judgement. The sentence is but a means to the execution: and Judges cannot determine the mind and mill of man: but preserve ommand Order, if men will not fee the truth themselves. Me thinks the Jesuits that are so eager for free will, should easily grant that the Pope by his definition cannot determine the Will of man. And they see that Hereticks remain Hereticks, when the Pope hath said all that he can: 'And if he can cure them all by his dererminations, he is much too blame that he doth not. mans mind be to be settled, an Infallible Teacher is fitter then a Judge. Judgement then being for Execution, when you ask, Who shall be the Judge? I answer that Judgement is either total, absolute and final: Or it is only to a certain particular end, limited, and subordinate, from which there is an Appeal. In the former case, there is no Judge but Christ, and the Father by him. No absolute decision can be made till the great Judgement come; and then all will be fully and finally decided. And for the limited present Indgements of men, they are of several sorts, according to their feveral Ends. When the question is, who shall be corporally punished as an Heretick? the Magistrate is Judge; For coercive punishment being his work, the Judgement must be his also. But when the question is, Who shall be excommunicated as an Heretick, as Gods Law hath told us who in specie, and so is the Rule of decision about individuals: so to try individual persons, and cases according to this Law, belongs to the Governours of the Church: but not to the Governours of other Churches a thousand miles off, that never received such an authority, and are not capable of the work: but to the Governours of the Church in which the party bath Communion, and into which he shall at any time intrude and feek communion. And all men have a Judgement of discerning that are concerned in the Execution.

So that if a disputing Papist will say that his business is not to Dispute with you, but to Excommunicate, or hang, or burn you for an Heretick, then I confess, its all the reason in the world that you should first agree of the Judge. But why the Pope should:

be the Judge, I know not, unless it be in his own charge.

CHAP. XIV.

Detect. 5. When you have proceeded on these grounds, the Papists will tell you, that in their may there is an End of Controversies, but in yours there is none: For if you will not stand to ones Judgement as infallible, you may difpute as long as you live before you come to an End.

To direct you in discussing this part of the Deceit also: 1. We confess that on earth there will be no End of all controversies among the best: nor of the great controversies which salvation lyeth on, between the believers and the unbelievers: that is, there will be still Insidelity and Heresie in the world, and errour in the godly themselves. 1. Hath it not been so in every age till now? And why should we expect that it should now be otherwise? 2. Doth not Paul tell us that here we know but in part, and prophesie in part? and when is it that that which is imperfect will be done away, but when that which is perfect is come? While we know but in part, we shall differ in part.

2. Hath your way put an End to controversies any more then ours? Are you not yet at controversie with Infidels, Whether Christ be the Redeemer: and with Hereticks whether he be true eternall God? Are you not yet as full of controversies among your selves, as any Christians on the face of the earth? I do not believe but in the many Volumes of your Schoolmen, Casuists, and Commentators, I can shew more controversies yet depending, then you can find among stany fort of Christians in the world; yea then you can find among all other Christians in the world set together.

3. And is there any thing in your may that better tendeth to the deciding of controversies then in ours? Nothing at all; but contrarily, you have made more Controversies then you have ended. For, I. We have a Certain infallible Rule to decide our controversies by, even such as you confess your selves to be infallible; Even the Holy Scriptures: but you have an uncertain Rule, even the Decrees of your Popes and Councils, and the many Volumes of the Fathers, which are at odds among themselves; your very Rule is self-contradicting, and your Judges are together by the ears (as hath been shewed.)

2. Our Faith consisteth in those points which are granted by your felves, and so are beyond Controversie between us and you. But years lyeth also in a mixture of mens corruptions, which will ever be controverted and condemned.

3. Our Faith confisses in the sew ancient Articles by which the Church was alwayes known (as to its essentials.) But you consound the Essentials with the integrals: and the Number of your necessary Articles is so great, as must needs be matter of more controversie then ours.

4. We know our Religion, and where to find it: For it is perfect at the first, and receiveth no additions or diminutions. One generation cometh, and another goeth, but the word of the Lord endureth for ever. But you never know when you have all, because you know not when your Pope will have done defining: that is an article of faith to you one year that was none the year before nor ever before.

5. We need no Judge to decide any controversies among us in the points of Absolute necessity to salvation: both because the Scripture is so plain in those points, as to serve for decision without a Judge; and because we abhor to make a controve sie of any of them; and where there is no controverse. there needs no Judge. We are all agreed, through the plainness of the Scripture, that there is but one, Eternal, most Wise, and Good, and Omnipotent God; and that there is one, Mediator between God and man, who is himself both God and man, that was crucified, dead, buried, went to adis, rose again, ascended, intercedeth for us, and is King and Head of the Church: and will raise the dead, and judge the world, some to Heaven, and some to Hell: These and all the rest of the Essentials of our faith, and many more points that are not effentials, are so plain in Scripture that we are past making them matter of Controversie. If any man deny an Essential point of faith, he is none of us, no more then of you. But you are it feems fo deep in infidelity, that you must have a judge to decide your Controversies in the. necessary Articles of Faith. For whatever is de fide, you make to be of such equal necessity, that you deride our distinguishing the Fundamentals from the rest, (as may be seen in Knots Insidelity unmaskt against Chillingworth) Seriously tell us, Do you think Christians need a Judge, or must put it to a Judge to decide, whether Christ be the Messias or not? whether he died and rose any such points. If he be a Judge, he must have power to oblige you to stand to his Determination on which side soever he determine. And what if John 22 determine that the soul is not immortal, or John 23. that there is no resurrection or life to come, but a man dieth like a beast: would you stand to this decision?

6. If you say that your Judge hath power to oblige you only on one side, that is, when he judgeth right (and so make no Judge of him, but a Teacher) we have such Judges as well as you even Teachers to shew us the Evidence of truth.

7. If you say that you have a fudge to determine of heresies in order to the Punishing of them by the sword: So have we as well as you, and better then you. For your Pope is a Priest that hath nothing to do with the sword, (at least out of his own Principalities): but our Princes and other Rulers are lawful Magistrates, that are appointed to be a terror to evill doers, Rom. 13.4, 6.

8. If you say that you have a Judge to determine of heresie in Order to Excommunication, so have we in every Church: even the Pastors of the Churches, who are bound to unite and a sist each other in such works. What is to be accounted Heresie, the Law of God sufficiently determineth: And what particular persons are to be Judged hereticks and excommunicated according to that Law, the particular Pastors that are on the place can better decide then a Pope that is a thousand, or sive thousand miles off, and cannot hear the witnesses. And do you not your selves decide almost all such cases through the world (that is of your subjection) by the present Pastors or Bishops, and not by the Pope? And why may not we do so then as well as you?

9. But if you lay all upon your Popes or Councils Infallibility, I desire you but to read my third Disputation in a Book against Popery, called the Safe Religion; and then believe that Infallibility if you can. I should think my self a miserable man, if I were not my self more Infallible then many of your Popes have been. Every Christian (while such) is infallible in his belief of the Christian faith; And the Scripture is an infallible ground of our belief.

10. Is it not a plain Judgement of God upon you, that while you make the Scripture so dark and not intelligible, and cry up the Necessity of a living Judge, you should not only swarm with differences among your selves, but should be utterly disagreed, and at a loss to know who is this Judge of Controversies, one saying it is the Pope, and another that its the Council; and what the better are you for faying. There must be a fudge, as long as you cannot tell Who it must be? Its not only uncertain among you Whether Pope or Councill be the Infallible Indge, but also which is a true Pope, and which is a lawfull General Council? For fourty years at least together, the Church could not know the true Pope, but the more learned and conscionable men were divided : Nor is it known to this day. Frequently the strongest hath carried it, and success been his best title. Nay General Councils themselves knew not the right Pope. The Council at Constance and Basil knew not the right Pope. They of Bafil thought Felix the fifth the true Pope, and Engenius no Pope: But friends and strength confuted a General Council, and proved deposed Eugenius the Pope. And for Councils themselves, who knows which to take for current and of Authority? What Catalogues have you of reprebated Councils, and of doubtfull Councils, and partly approved, partly reprobate, and who knows which and how far; bue only that is approved, that pleaseth the Pope, and that reprobate that displeased him, and yet perhaps approved by a former Pope: So that you are all in a consusion and uncertain about your true Popes and General Councils.

And if you knew them, yet what a loss are you at to know their Decrees and Canons? What a Fardel of false Decretall Epistles have you thrust upon the world, as Blondell, Dallens, Reignolds and others have fully proved. For sooth decretals that use a translation of the Scripture that was formed a long time after the death of the supposed Authors of those Epistles: And Decretals which make mention of persons and things that were many score or hundred years after the death of the said Authors. These are your new Scriptures, and by these our faith must be regulated, and our controversies decided.

And your Canons are abundance of them as uncertain: some of your own will have but twenty Canons of the first General Council at Nice: some will have the new sound rabble of additions. Much more uncertainty or certain forgery there is in the

Canons called the Apostles : and the like we may say of abundance more.

And now I appeal to all the impartial Reason in the world, whether your voluminous, apocriphal, uncertain faith that needs a living Judge, and cannot find one, or agree upon him, and that leaves your controversies still undecided, be a liker way to peace and unity, then our short and plain Articles and infallible Scripture faith, that bath less matter of contention, and better means to prevent it, even faithful Teachers and Judges in every Church and Commonwealth, which shall so far determine as may preserve the peace of those societies, levaing the final sull Decision of all to the Eternal Judge that is even at the door.

11. Yea and is not Gods hand of Judgement yet more obfervable against you, that when your Popes and Councils have past their judgement, the several Sects are unable to understand them? witness the late sentence against the Jansenists, of which the persons that seem to be condemned, say, that there is no such thing or words in all fansenius writings, as the Pope stath are in him, and condemneth as his: and the Controversic is as far from a decision, as if the Pope had held his peace. Yea your great Disputer here in England, Thomas White the Novelist, is the same for all the Popes determination.

- Take another instance in the forementioned Case, Whether the Pope or Council be Supream: The Councils of Constance and Bafil determined it one way as de fide, and yet that made no end of the Controversie. The Council of Lateran and Pope Lco determined it the other way; and yet it is a Controversie after two contrary decisions: and some say one way, and some the othe : and some say, It is yet undecided (for fear of angring the French by casting them'off as Hereticks.) Another instance. The Council at Basil Self. 36. (pag 80. in Binnins) hath fully determined the Controversie between the Franciscans and Dominicans about the Virgin Maries immaculate conception: and yet it is undetermined still; and Thomas White presumes to affirm, that [Certainly there is no Tradition for it, nor any probability that ever the Negative will be defined. Apolog. for Tradit, pag. 64, 65, 66. yea he carryeth it as boldly out, as if never Council had made or medled with it. I will therefore recite the words.

words of the Council, which are these [A hard question hath been in divers parts, and before this holy Synod, about the Conception of the glorious Virgin Mary, and the beginning of her Sanstification; some saying that the Virgin and her soul was for some time or instant of time actually under Original sin : others on the contrary, saying, that from the beginning of her Creation, God loving her, gave her grace by which preserving and freeing that bleffed person from the Original spot - we, having diligently looke into the authorities and reasons, which for many years past have in publike relation on both sides been alledged before this holy Synod, and having feen many other things about it, and weighed them by mature consideration, do Define and Declare, that the doctrine affirming that the glorious Virgin Mary the Mother of God, by the fingular preventing and operating grace of God, was never actually under Original sin, but was ever free from all Original and actual sin, and was holy and immaculate, is to be approved, held and embraced of all Catholikes as godly and Consonant to Churchworship, Catholike faith, right reason, and sacred Scripture: and that henceforthit shall be lawful for no man to preach and teach the centrary | Is not this plain Defining?

Obj. But this was not an approved Council. Answ. 1. It was owned by Pope Eugenius himself. And here once for all I prove that the Council of Basil was approved by the Pope:. for Pope Felix the fift (one of the best Popes that ever Rome had this thousand years) approved it in this point: not only by accepting their election, but in express terms professing sirmly to held the faith of the Councils of Constance and Basil, and to keep it inviolate to a tittle, and confirm it with his foul and blood: promising faithfully to labour to defend the Catholick faith, and for the execution and observation of the Decrees of the Conncils of Constance and Basil, smearing to prosecute the celebration of Generall Councils, and confirmation of Ele-Elions, according to the Decrees of the Holy Council of Batil See Binnius Sef. 40. page 87. If they say that Felix was not a true Pope: I answer, then Martin the fisch chosen by the Councill at Confiance was no true Pope; and then where is your fuccession? These things are plain and cannot be denyed, though unconscionable shifters, that argue according to their Wills, may find words to beguile the simple.

2. It feems then your Eatholick Church representative is nothing if one man like it not.

One more instance: How largely hath the Council of Trent dealt about originall sin: And yet the foresaid Thomas White-ibid saith thus [If the People were taught Original sin is nothing but a Disposition to evil, or a natural weakness, which unless prevented brings infallibly sin and damnation: and that in it self it deserves neither reproach nor punishment, as long as it proceeds not to actual sin, the heat of vulgar devotion would be cooled, &c.] See here a meer Pelagian issue of all the Determinations about Originall sin, which they should swear to believe.

CHAP. XV.

Detect. 6. And they will ask you what reason you have among all these Sects to believe one of them rather then another? So that they would perswade you that they will these so that they would perswade you that they will the people into how many sects we are divided, and that the Catholick Church is but one: but we are many: and here they will tell you of all the names they can reckon up, Presbyterians, Independants, Anabaptists, Antinomians, Arminians, Socinians, Quakers, and what not. And they will tell you that all this Division comes by departing from the Roman Catholick Church; every man being lest to be of what Religion his fancy leadeth him to, for want of an universal Judge of controversies. And they will ask you what reason you have among all these Sects to believe one of them rather then another? So that they would perswade you that there is no way for Unity but by turning to be Papists, that we may be united in the Pope of Rome.

To all this deceit (for it is no better) we give them our full answer in these Propositions. 1. It is not every kind of unity that is desirable: but Unity with truth, and honesty, and safety. Its easier to agree in evil then in good: for evil findeth more friendship with corrupted nature, and hath more servants in the world. The wicked are more agreed, and far more in number, of one mind, then the Godly are. The Mahometans are far more agreed; and that in a far greater number, then the Papists are.

The.

The Devils have some agreement in their way: They are all agreed to hate Christ and his members, and to seek night and day whom they may devour. It is easier to agree in a Papists work then in ours: To center carnally in a finfull (and oft a most wicked) man; to agree in certain forms and ceremonies, which shesh and blood is glad to delude themselves with, instead of the Lise of faith and Love; its easie to agree in such a carnal religion. To spare the labour and time of study and searching after truth, and to cast their souls upon the faith of others, even the Pope or a Council, this is an easie thing for lazy ungodly men to agree in: But to make the Truth our Own, and get the Law of Christ written in our own hearts, and to live upon ir, and walk in the light, and embrace all those truths that are most against our slessly inclination and interest, this is not so easie for corrupted nature to agree upon.

2. Christ hath told us that it is a little flock to whom he gives the Kingdom, Luke 12.32. and that the gate is strait, and the way narrow that leads to life, and few there be that find it; and the gate is wide and the way broad that leads to destruction, and many there be that enter at it. And therefore it is no great wonder if error and fin have the greater number.

3. And yet for all this I dare boldly fay that there is a far more excellent Unity and Concord among the true Reformed Catholicks, then among the Papifts, and that they do but cheat poor fouls with the falfe pretence of unity. And this I shall make ap-

about that very power in which they should unite, and which they pretend must agree them in all other things. One half of them are for the Soveraignty of a Pope, and the other of a General Council: and that as a point of saith. So that there is no possibility of Union with them, that are divided in the very point in which they invite us to Unite with them. If the eye bedark how shall the body see? If they cannot agree about that power that they say must agree them in all things else, what a hope of an agreement with them?

But for our parts we are all agreed that Christ only is the head of the Church, and in him we all unite.

2. With us, they are usually but here and there a stragling perfon, or some sew half-witted self-conceited Novices that sall off and disagree from us in any thing that destroyeth salvation: But with the Papists, Princes are against Princes, and Nations against Nations, and which is much more, General Councils against General Councils, even in the Poundation of their faith. So that let the General Councils be never so sull and learned, and justily called, yet if they be against the Popes Soveraignty over them, the other party call them but Conciliabula, salse Councils and Conventicles. Of how great moment this difference is, let the learned Cajetane be a witness, who in his Oration in the Councils at Pisa, Constance and Basil, makes one to be Babel, and the other ferusalem.

3. As I proved before, the Papifts are divided into two several pretended Catholick Churches, by making themselves two Soveraigns: but so are not we: For we have but one Head Jesus Christ. That they are two Churches (besides what is said) hear the words of Cajetane in the foresaid Oration (in Bin. p. 552.) [This Novelty of Pila, sprung up at Constance, and At Basil it sprung up again and is exploded: and if vanilled. you be men, it will n walso be repressed as it was under Eugenius the fourth. For it cometh not from heaven, and therefore will not be lasting. Nor doth it embrace the Principality of that One, who is in the Church triumphant, and preserveth the Church militant; and which the Synod of Pila ought to embrace if it came from heaven, and not, as it doth, to rely on the Government of a multitude. The Church of the Pilans therefore doth far differ from this Church of Christ. For one is the Church of believers; the other of Cavillers: One of the houshold of God; the other of the Errone: us: One (is the Church) of Christian men: the other of such as fear not to tear the coat of Christ, and divide the mystical members of Christ from his mystical body. This was spoken in Council with applause. And can there yet be greater divisions then these?

4. They have been utterly divided about the very power of choofing their Pope, in whom they must unite. In one age the People chose him: In another the Clergy chose him; sometime both together: For a long time the Emperours chose him: At last only the Cardinals chose him. And sometime a General Council hath chosen him. Our Catholick Church hath no such uncertain Head, but one thats the same yesterday to day and for ever.

5. They have often had two or three Popes at once, and one part of the Church hath followed one, and another the other: yea (as is faid for forty years together, none knew the true Pope) faith Cajetane ubi sup. [Of the Schism of that time there were three so accounted Popes, that none of them might be essemed the Successor of Peter either certain, or without ambiguity.] For many ages one part hath been running after one, and the other after the other, or striving about them. But we are all agreed in our Head without Controversie.

6. They have killed multitudes of persons in their divisions about the choice of their Pope (as in Dansasus choice) And they have had many bloody wars to the dividing of the Church about their Popes and between Pope and Pope. This was their Unity. It would make a Christian ashamed and grieved to read of the lamentable wars and divisions of Christendom, either between or about their Popes.

7. Their Popes and Christian Emperor, Kings and Princes, have been in yet longer and more grievous wars.

8. They have fet Princes against Princes, and Nations against Nations in wars about the Causes of the Popes for many ages together: and it is too seldom otherwise.

9. They have set Kings and their own subjects together in wars, as England and almost all Christendom hath known by sad experience.

10. They have Excommunicated Princes, and encouraged their subjects to expell them, and to murder them: hence were the inhumane murders of Henry the third, and Henry the fourth, Kings of France; and the Powder Plot, and may Treasons in England: This is their Unity.

r1. They center and unite the Church in an impotent, insufficient Head, that is not able to do the Office of a Head, to the hundredth part of the Church, and therefore cannot possibly preserve unity. But our Head is all-sufficient.

12. They set up not only a Controverted head, which all the Churches never agreed to, nor ever will do, but also a salse usurping Head, which the Churches dare not and ought not to unite in. Whereas Jesus Christ is beyond contro-

versie the just and lawfull Head of the Church.

13. Your Agreement and Unity is with none but your own feet: and is this fo great a matter to boast off? you divide your felves from most of the Catholick Church, and cast them off as Hereticks, or Schismaticks; and then boast of a Unity among your selves. And so may the Quakers, the Anabaptists, the Socinians, as well as you: Orifyou magnifie your Unity from the greatness of your number that agree, the Greek Church alfo is numerous: and yet in this we far exceed you. For the true Catholick is in Union with all the Members of Christ on earth. Welay our Unity on the Essentials of Christianity, and fo are united with all true Christians in the world: even with many of them that reproach us: when you laying your Unity on I know not how many doubtfull points, yea, on you know not what your selves, can extend it no further then to your sect. Which is the more notable and glorious Unity? to be United to the truly Catholick body containing all true Christians in the world, or to be at Unity with a feet, which is the leffer and more corrupted part of the Church?

14. With what face can Papills glory in their Unity, that are the greatest Dividers of the Church on earth? Who is it that condemneth the greatest part of the Church, and prosecuteth that condemnation with fire and fword, or so much vehemence, as the Papills do? when they have most audaciously divided themselves from all others, and arrogated the title of Catholicks to themselves, they call this abominable Schism by the name of Unity. If you say that the Resormers have divided themselves from all others too: I answer not as from Hereticks or no members of the same body with us, as you do: but only as from unfound mistaken Brethren: And therefore properly we are not divided from them, but only from their mistakes. We think it not lawfull to join with the dearest Brethren in finning, or in that worship (by personal local communion) where we cannot keep our innocency: But yet we hold the unity of the Spirit with them in the bond of Peace: and are one with them in all the substance of Christianity, and holy worship. Even where distance of place, or circumstantiall differences keep us from Communion in the same Assemblies: yet our several Assemblies have communion in faith, and Love, and the substance of worship as to the kind, so that our division from other Christians is nothing to the Papifts.

15. But yet when any differ from us in any point Essential to our Religion (that is, to Christianity,) they are none of us, nor owned by us; and therefore you cannot fay that we are at difference among our felves, because some Apostates have faln off from us. You will not allow us to fay you have many sects, because some of you have turned Socinians, or because thousands of yours have turned to the Reformers, in the dayes of Luther, Calvin, &c. And why then should those sects be numbred with us that are not of us, but went out from us? If men turn Infidels, Seekers, Quakers, Socinians, &c. they are not of us no more then of you. If you say that we bred them : I anfwer, no more than you breed them, when they turn to the same fects from you: Nor no more then you bred the Lutherans, far better men. They went out from you, and yet you bred them not : But on the other side, you cherish those as part of your Church, which differ from you in your fundamentals; fo that the Pope dare not unchurch or disown them (as the French, &c.) bur so do not we.

16. Our Unity is in Positives, and theirs is in Negatives: Ours is a Unity in faith; and theirs is in not believing the contrary: And so dead men, may have a fuller Unity in the grave then the Papistshave.

17. Our Union is Divine, having a Divine Head and Center, and Divine Doctrine and Law in which we agree. But the Papists is humane, having a carnal Head and Center, and Humane Decrees and Canons for its matter and Rule.

18. They have not so sure a means of retaining men in their unity as we have: Let experience be Judge of this: For where one hath for saken our Unity and Communion, I suppose hundreds, if not thousands, have for saken theirs, as France, Belgia, Germany, Sweden, Denmark, Poland, Hungary, Transilvania, England, Scotland Ireland, &c. can witness: and if themselves might be believed, the Greek Church, and all, or almost all the Christians else in the world have gone from their unity. And yet will they glory in the effectualness of their means of unity? Why then did they not retain all these Nations in their unity?

19 Moreover, indeed they have very little Religious unity at all among them; for its force and terror that keeps men in their Church: And who can tell under such violence how many stick to them in Conscience and willingly? He that will for sake their Religion in Spain, must be tormented and burnt at a stake, and in other Countreys where they have full power, he must be at least undone. So that 1. Theirs is a unity of bodies more then of minds: 2. And their union is not procured by the Pope as Pope; but by the temporal fword, which the Pope hath usurped over some countreys, and which deluded Princes use by his perswasson in other Countreys. What a jugling deceit then is this, to perswade poor souls, that the only way to unity is to Center in the Pope of Rome, and that this is the most effectual means of ending differences! when in the mean they make so little use of it, and place so little confidence in it themselves, but uphold their unity by the Magistrates sword? And if this be the way, we have Magistrates among us as well as they, that can as effectually compell men to unity, as far as their Judgements tell them it is fit: And besides this force, it is the riches and preferment of their Clergy, with their immunity from secular power, & the like, that is the means of their unity. But it is the light of holy Scrip. ture opened by a faithfull Ministry, and countenanced by Christian Magistracy without tyranny, that is our means of unity.

If the Papal Headship be so effectuall a means of unity as they pretend, and if they are so much of a mind as they say, let them give us leave but to preach one 12. moneths in Spain and Italy if they dare: or let them give men leave without fire and sword to choose their Religion.

20. And yet besides all this, and after all this tyranny, they have more difference among themselves then we have, or then all the Christians that I hear of in the world. And to hide the Insamy of their differences, they tolerate them, and extenuate them. For differences in Discipline, and order of Worship they allow abundance of sees called Orders, that men and women may choose which they please. And the voluminous differences of their Schoolmen, Casuists and Commentators, they say are not in matters of faith. But call them what you will, they are many of them greater differences then are with us. I pray read over the Iansenians Mysterie of Jesuitism, and take notice of the differences between the Jesuites and them in Case-Divi-

Divinity, and judge whether they be small. And let it not offend your ears if I recite some of their Differences in that Papists own words, as he cites the Jesuites, and tells you where to find what he saith.

Pag. 89. Filintius the Jestite holds, that if a man have purposely wearied himself with satisfying a whore, that he might be dispensed with from fasting on a fasting day, he is not obliged to falt, But the Jansenians think otherwise.

Basilius Pontius & Bunny the Jesuites teach, that a man may seek an opportunity of sinning primo & per se, when the spiritual or temporal concernment of our selves or our neighbours inclineth kim thereto, But the Jansenists think the contrary: Pag. 91.

Eman. Sa the Jesuite holds, that [a man do what he conceives lawfull according to a probable opinion, though the contrary be the more certain: and for this the Opinion of one grave Doctor is sufficient.] And Filintins the Jesuite held [that it is lawfull to follow the less probable opinion, though it be the less certain, and that this is the common opinion of modern authors] Fag. 95. And yet the Jansenists are against it.

Layman the Jesuite holds, that [If it be more savourable to them that ask advice of him, and more desired, it is Prudence to give them such advice as is held probable by some knowing person, though he himself be convinced that it is absolutely salse.] But the Janienists are against this. Pag. 96.

Bunney the Jesuite holds [that when the patient follows a probable opinion, the confessor is bound to absolve him, though his judgement be contrary to that of the penitent: and that he sins mortally if he deny him absolution] Myster. of fesuit. pag. 97. But the Jansenses deny this.

Father Reginaldus and Cellot hold, that [the modern Casuists in questions of Morality are to be preserved before the antient Fathers, though they were nearer the Apostles times | Pag. 98. But the Jansenists think otherwise.

Pope Gregery the fourteenth declareth Murderers unworthy to have Sanctuary in Churches. But the Jesuits and Jansenists agree not who are the Murtherers. The 29 Jesuites in their Praxis page 600, by murderers understand those who have taken money to kill one treacheroush: and that those who kill without receiving any reward, but do it only to oblige their friends, are not called murtherers.] But the Jansenists think otherwise. (No marvail if you cannot understand the Scripture without a judge, when you can no better understand your judge, no not what he means by a murtherer.)

Vasquez the Jesuite saith [that in this Question, rich men are obliged to give alms out of their superfluity; though the affirmative betwee, yet it will seldom or never happen, that it is obligatory in post of practice | Pag. 105. But the Jansenists think otherwise.

Valentia the Jesuite, Tom. 3. p. 2042. holds, that [If a man give money not as the price of a Benefice, but as a Metive to refignit, it is not Simony, though he that refigns do look at the money as his Principal end] and so Tannerus, p. 115. But the

Jantenists think otherwise.

Father Gaspar Hurtado saith [that an Incumbent may withent mortal sin wish the death of him that hath a pension out of his living, and a son his fathers death; and may rejoyce when it happens, so it proceed only from a consideration of the advantage accrewing to him thereby, and not out of any personal hatred] pag. 136. But the Jansenil's believe not this.

Layman the Jesuit, and Pet. Hurtado: thinks that a man may lawfully fight a duell, accepting the challenge to defend his honour or eftate, Pag. 138. But the Jansenist thinks otherwise.

Sanchez and Navarrus allow a man to murder his adversary, secretly, or dispate him at unawares to avoid the danger of a duell:
p. 140. And Molina thinks you may kill one that wrongfully, informs against us in any Court: and Reginaldus, that you may kill the false witnesses which the prosecutor brings; And Tannerus and Emanuel Sa, that you may kill both witnesses and judge which conspire the death of an invocent person But so think not the Jansenists.

Henriquez saith one man may kill another who hath given him. abox on the ear, though he run away for it, provided he do it not ont of batred or revenge, and that by that means a gap be open for excessive murther, destructive to the State. Anothe reason is, a man may as well do it in pursuance of his reputation, as his goods; and he that hath had a box on the ear is accounted dishoneurable till he hath killed his enemy. And Azorius saith, Is it lawfull for a person of quality to kill one that would give him a box on the ear, or a bang with a stick? Some say not — But others affirm it lawfull,

and for my part I think is probable, when it cannot be avoided otherwife: For if it were not the reputation of innocent persons were fill exposed to the insolency of the malicious. pag. 142, 143, 144. many other are of the same mind, in so much that Father Leffins Saith [It is lawfull, by the consent of all Casuists, to kill him that would give abox on the car, or ablive with a flick, when a man cannot otherwise avoid it, p. 145. Father Boldellus faith It is lawfull to kill him that saith to you thou lyest] if a man cannot right himself otherwise. And Lessius faith [If you endeavour to raine my reputation by opprobrious speeches before tersons of bonour, and that I cannot avoid them otherwise then by killing you, may I do it? According to modern Authors I may; may though the crime you lay to my charge be such as I am really guilty of, it being supposed to have been so secretly committed, that you cannot discover it by mays of justice. Tis proved if when you would take away my reputation by giving me abox on the ear, it is in my power to prevent it by force of arms, the same deferce is certainly landfull, when you would do me the same injury with your tonque. Besides, a man may avoid the affront of those whose ill language he cannot hinder. In a word, henour is more precious then life, but a min may kill in defence of his life, ergo, he may kill in defence of his honour pag. 146. But the Jantenists are against all this.

Escombar saith, that regularly it is lawfull to kill amon for the value of a crown, according to Molina. p. 151. Father Amicus saith [It is lawfull for a Church-man, or a keligious man to kill a detractor that threatens to divulge the scandalous crimes of his community or himself, when there is no other means left to hinder him from doing it, as if he be ready to scatter his calumn es, if not suddenly dispatched out of the way] p. 152, 153. And Caramovel in his Fundamental Theologie takes it for certain, and thence concludes, that [a Priest not only may kill a detractor on certain. occasions, but sometimes ought to do it And yet the previsit Jansenist.

But I must stop: you may read in the said Jansenians Mysteric of Jesuicism, a volumn of such passages of the Jesuices, allowing men to give and receive the Sacrament when they come that day from Adultery: and allowing a man to eat and drink as much as he can with his health: and discharging men from a Necessage of Loving God, unless it be once in their lives, or as.

others say, upon Holy-daies, or as Hurtado de Mendoza, once a year, or as Conink, once in three or four years, or as Henriquez, once in five years, or as Anthon. Sirmond, not at all, so we do not hate him, and do obey his other commands, with abundance more.

Now Reader I would here leave it to thy confideration, whether all these differences among the Papists are so small as to be no matters of faith. And I intreat you to read over the forementioned Book, (the Mysterie of Jesuitism) and then judge whether Papists or the Reformed Catholicks are more at unity

Well! but suppose the loving of God, the avoiding murder. bribery, and the like, be no matter of faith at Rome, yet I have not done with them fo. I defire to know whether the holy Scripture be matter of faith or not? They dare not deny but it is. Well I and what is the Scripture, but the words nt figna, and the sense or matter nt res significata? And are the Papilts agreed among themselves about either of these? no: For the words. its well known how some of the best Learned of them have stood for the preheminence of the Hebrew and Greek Texts: and others, and the most, for the vulgar Latine. And that vulgar Latine Translation hath been altered and altered again by them. And after many others comes Pope Sixtus the fift, and makes it so compleat, that the Church is required to use his Edition; yet after him comes Pope Clement the eighth and mends it in many hundred, if not thousand places, and imposes this upon the Church: which of these Popes was Infallible? I am sure they much differ in their Translations.

And for the fense of scripture, though men must swear to take Scripture in the Churches sense, yet will not any Pope or Council to this day, tell us the sense of them, either by giving us an infallible Commentary, or by deciding the many thousand differences that are among their Commentators. Do not all these Commentators for swear themselves, having sworn (those that lived since the Council of Trent) to expound Scripture in the sence of the Church, and only according to the unanimous consent of the Fathers. And why doth not the Pope decide these controversies? seing it is their happiness to have such a Judge of Controversies to keep them all of a mind?

But perhaps they will say, that all these Scriptures be not matters of faith. No! where are we then? what is matter of saith if Scripture be not? And if all be not, how shall we know which is? But at least, tell us, Is no one of all those many hundred or thousand Texts which your Commentators differ about any matter of Faith? If not, then sure you have no Faith. If it be, then surely the Papists differ among themselves in matters of Faith. It is not a sew Texts that Lyra's excepter and Bargensis differ about, to name no more. And of the forestaid Editions of the Bible by Pope Sixtus, and Clement, see Dr. fame's Bellum Papale, vel Concordia discors.

CHAP. XVI.

Detect. 7. By what hath been said, you may discern how to deal with them, when they would industriously confound the Essentials and the Integral parts of our Faith: for this is another of their juglings.

They cannot endure to hear us distinguish the fundamentals (that is, the Essentials) of our Religion from the rest: and therefore they call out to us for a Catalogue of our fundamentals; and would perswade us that whatsoever is matter of faith, is of Necessity to salvation to be believed, and those are damnable Hereticks that deny them, and therefore we must not make any such difference. See Knot against Chillingworth. Their design in this is to perswade peop'e that the world must be wholly of their mind in matters of faith, or else they cannot be saved. And by this trick they would prove that the Protestants and many other Churches are all Hereticks, and therefore have no place in General Councils, and are no parts of the Catholick Church. But let us consider how judiciously they proceed.

1. We must desire the Papists to tell us whether Christianity be any thing or nothing? If any thing, it hath its Essence; and 2. Whether this Essence of Christianity be Knowable or not? If nor, then they cannot know a Christian from another; and they cannot know the Church from other Societies. If it be knowable, then its Essence must needs be knowable. 3. And we would be informed by them, whether all true Christians in the world are of the same stature or degree of knowledge and explicite belief? If they be, then there's no difference between Fathers and Babes, Strong and Weak, Priest and People; and then the Jesuites have no more Knowledge or Faith then the simplest woman of their Church: but if there be a difference. then 4. We would know whether the Essence of Christianity be varyed according to these degrees. If so, then there are as many forts of Christianity in the world, as there be degrees of Faith: which they have more wit, I suppose, then to affirm. If not, then the Essence of Christianity is distinguishable from the Integrity or superadded Degrees, which is the thing that we contend for. 5. We defire also to know whether the Apollles did not go on to teach their people more, after they had made them Christians, in a state of salvation. And whether the Priests, Fryers, and Jesuits will give men up, and teach them nothing more when they have made them Christians. I know they will say, There's more to be taught. And if so, then the Essentials of Christianity are distinguishable from the Integrals or Degrees. 6. And we would know elfe how they will understand that in Heb. 5.10, 11, 12, 14. and 6.1, 2. For when for the time ye ought to be Teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first trinciples of the Oracles of God, and are become such as have need of milk and not of strong meat. For every one that useth milk is unskilful in the word of righteousnels, for he is ababe. But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern good and evil: therefore leaving the Principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to ferfection, not laying again the foundation, &c.] Tell us now whether the Apostle do not here distinguish between babes and strong men; milk and strong meat; the principles or foundation and perfection? 7. And we would know of them whether all that is Revealed by God be of absolute Necessity to every mans falvation that do or may hear it? If fo, then no man can be faved that knoweth not all that God hath revealed; and then no one in the world can be faved: for here we know but in part. And their own Commentators differ about the word of God, which shewerlithat they are imperfect in the Knowledge of its sense. And their Pope knows it not, or else he is shamefully to blame, that will not tell it the world, and reconcile his Commentators and Disputers. But if all revealed be not of Absolute Necessity, then we may have leave to distinguish between points absolutely Necessary, and the rest. 8. And we would know when ther all shall be damned, that know not as much as the most Learned and Wife? if not, then fill we may have leave to distinguish. o. Further we demand, whether any ignorance or error that is culpable, will stand with Charity and Salvation? If not, then who shall be saved? If yes; then we may still distinguish the points of Absolute Necessity from the rest. 10. We demand also, whether the whole holy Scripture be the word of God? If so, then whether we ought not to believe it all as far as we can understand it? And if so, whether it be not all, de fide matter of Faith? If not, they must tell us, what part of Gods word is to be believed, and what not. If yea; then certainly men may erro de fide in points of Faith, and yet have Charity, and be faved: as their disagreeing Commentators, Casuilts and Schoolmen do. 11. We would know whether the matters that their Divines are disagreed in, be Revealed by God, or things unrevealed? If not revealed, do they not deferve to be kickt out of the world, for troubling the world fo with unrevealed things? If they be Revealed, are they not Revealed to be believed, and so are de fide? 12. And we would know whether there be not some things Essential to true Obedience, and some things not Essential? If not, then no sinner bath sincere Obedience, and can be faved : If yea; then why may not the some be said of faith? 13. Also we would know, when they baptize the Adult, whether they require any profession of the faith from them or not? If not, they may as well baptize Infidels or Heathens. If they do, then what is that profession? Is it a profession of every particular truth that God hath revealed to be believed? No fure: for then none but Doctors must be baptized. Nor they neither. Or is it a profession of some particular Truths only? If of some only, why of those more. then the relt, if they be not the Essentials distinguishable from the relt? And do they make men true Christians by baptizing them, or not? If they do, then sure the Baptismal faith must contain all that is Essential to Christianity. 14. We desire also to be informed by them, what is the use of the Churches Creed. and why they have used frequently to make confession of their faith:

faith? Was it not the whole faith Essential to Christianity which they confest? If not; then it was not fit to be the badge of the Church: or of the Orthodox: if yea; then it feems those. Creeds had in them the effentials distinguished from the rest. 15. we would know whether every thing delivered or defined by any General Council, be of such necessity to salvation, that all must explicitely believe them all that will be faved ? If so: then whether any Papist can be saved, seeing they understand them not all? If not, then fure a distinction must be made. 16. And we would know how they can countenance ignorance fo much as they do, if all things revealed be of equal necessity. ro falvation. 17. And what mean they to distinguish of Implicite and Explicite faith? Is it enough to believe as the Church. believes, and not know what in any particular? then it is not, defide, or necessary to salvation to believe the resurrection of Christ, or of man, or the life to come. For a man may believe. that the Church is in the right, and yet not know that it holdeth any of thefe. Is it enough to believe the formal object of faith. (which with us is Gods veracity) without the material? Or is it enough to remain Infidels; and only believe that the Church are. true Believers ? If you hold to this, you make no act of faith, but one (the believing that the Church, that is, the Pope or Council are true believers) to be of Necessity to salvation. But if there be something that is Necessary to be altually (that is explicitely) believed, then must not that be distinguished from the rest and made known ? 18. Whence is it that you denominate men fideles; believers with you? Is it from a Politive faith, or for not holding the contrary? If the latter, then Stones, and Beafis, and Pagans, and their Infants may be believers. If the former, then that Positive faith from whence all believers are denominated must be known. To Is not that true faith and all that is: effential to Christianity, which doth consist with saving grace or (to use your phrase) with true Charity? If not, then either Infidels and no Christians may have true Charity, or else true Charity may be in the unjustified; or both: If yea, (which doubtless you will yield) then sure men of lower knowledge and faith then Doctors, may have true Charity, and therefore true faith. 20. Lastly, I appeal to your own confessions. Bellarmine often distinguisheth between the points that all must of Necessity explicitely believe, and the rest. And Suarez in three parts. Thom. Disp. 43. Sect. 4. saith of the Article of Christs descending into Hell Listy an Article of faith we understand a truth which all the faithfull are bound explicitely to know and believe, so I do not think it necessary to recken this among the Articles of faith, because it is not altogether necessary for all men Here you see that Suarez distinguisheth between Articles of Necessity to all, and those that are not and that he excepts even the Descent into Hell from this number of Articles Necessary to all I might cite many more of your writers, but the thing is well known.

But perhaps you'l lay, that though all that is de fide, be not necessary to be believed explicitely by all, yet implicitely it must. I Ans. 1. that which you call Implicite believing is no believing that point, but another point: yea a point that doth not so much as infer that: for it followeth not [the Church is infallible, therefore Cibrist descended into Hell.

2. And we believe all that is de fide with an Implicite faith as well as you: But it is an Implicite Divine faith, and not humane: For we are sure that All that God saith is true; and this Divine unity is the formal object of our faith. And we believe that all that is in Scripture is true, and that all that was ever delivered by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost is true.

Object. But all that is de fide is so necessary, that it will not stand with salvation to believe the contrary, or deny or dis-believe any point of faith. Answ. 1. That cannot be true, For no man can prove that a point may not be denyed and disputed against by a true Believer as long as he is ignorant that it is true, and from God: the same ignorance that keeps him from knowing it. may cause him to deny it, and gainsay it. 2. Do not your own differing Commentators, Schoolmen and Casuists (on one side at least) dispute voluminously against some Truths of Divine revelation? If you change a many mind from the smallest error by dispute, do you take that to be a change of his state from death to life? Eneas Sylvins thought a General Council was above the Pope : but when he came to be Pope Pins the second, he thought the Pope above a General Council; was this a change from death to life? It seems by his Bull of Retractation, he thought K 2 thought fo, but fo did not feveral General Councils: was the .Catholick Church Representative at the Councill of Basil, or Constance, or Pifa in a state of death and damnation for believing the Pope to be subject to a General Council? or was the Council at Laterane (another Representative Catholick Church) in a state of death for holding the Contrary? Must either Pope Pobnthetwenty second, or Pope Nicolas be damned because of the contrariety of their Decrees? If the Council of Tolerane the first ordain that he that hath a Concubine instead of a wife, shall not be kept from the Sacrament, doth it prove them all in a flace of death? If Bellarmine confess that the fixth General Council at Constantinople have many errors, doth' it follow that the Catholick Church representative was in a damnable state?-If the second Council at Nice maintain the corpereity of Angels, and the first Council at the Latarane maintain the contrary, doth it follow that one of them was in a state of death? I think not : (though I am sure it proves a General Council fallible, when approved by the Pope, and therefore Popery a deceit.) fometime tells us of the change of his own Bellarmine mind.

And the Retractations of Austin (a better man) tell use of the change of his mind in many things: And yet it followeth not that he was in a state of death and unjustified before.

Object. But all that is de fide is of Necessity to the Salvation of some, though not of all. Answ. I. If that be granted, vet you must grant us leave to diftinguish between Points necessary to be believed by all, and points that are not thus necessary to all. 2. But in what case is it that you mean, that other points are of Necessity to some? 1. Is it to those some that know them to be of Divine Revelation? we easily grant you that: But that is: not because the Things themselves are simply necessary to Salvation, but because a Belief of Gods veracity, and the Truth of all: that he Revealeth in general, is of necessity: and he that Believerb that God is True (verax) cannot chuse but believe all! to be True which he knows God revealeth. He that thinketh; God to be a Lyar, in one word, doth not believe bis veracity; and fo hath no Divine faith at all. And therefore you need not fear lest any one should be guilty of not believing that which they. know know is the word of God, but those that take God to be a Lyar, and that is those that take him not to be God, and so are Atheishs. But still the thing of Absolute necessity is but first to believe in General that God is true in all his word, secondly and to believe the truth of the effential points of Christianity in particular (embracing the Good propounded in them.) Now its true that secondarily all known Truths are of necessity to be believed, because else our General belief of Gods veracity is not sincere. But yet we must say that an eccedently even to that person, these superadded truths were not of Necessity to his Salvation to be believed, because they were not of such Necessity to be Known; and if they had not been known, you would say your selves there had not been such Necessity of Believing them.

But if you go further, and say, that all that were obliged to know them, or that had opportunity, or the Revelation of the truth, and yet did not, and thereupon deny them oulpably, are in a state of death; I deny that, and shall prove it salse. Its true, that a wilfull resusing the Light; because men love darkness rather then light; is a certain sign of a graceless wretch. But every culpable ignorance and unbelief is not Damning ignorance or unbelief.

1. Otherwise no man should be saved: For no man is void of culpable ignorance, and confequently of culpable unbelief. Had we never been wanting in the use of means, there's no man but might have known more then he doth. Is there any one of you that dare refuse to ask God forgiveness of your ignorance, unbelief; or the negligence that is the culpable cause of them, or that dare fay, you need no pardon of them ? 2: If you plead for venial fin, how can you deny a venial unbelief upon venial ignorance? But then I pray you learn more wit and piety, I: then to fay. that your venial unbelief or fin is no fin, fave as Analogically so called; or 2. then to say it deserves a pardon, or deserves not everlasting punishment. But if you will call it venial. because being consistent with the true Love of God and habitual Holiness, and saving saith, the Law of Grace doth pardon it, and not condemn men for it, thus we would agree with you that there is veniall fin; but then you must yield us that there is venial unbelief.

3, And we easily prove all this from the Law of God. It is the nature of the preceptive part to constitute Duty only. and the violation of that is fin : But it is the fanction the promise and threatning that Determines of the Reward and Penalty: Now it is only the old Law of works that makes the Threatening as large as the prohibition, condemning man for every fin: but so doth not the Law of Grace. The precept Still commandeth Perfect obedience, and so makes is a duty; but the promise maketh not perfect obedience the condition of Salvation; but Faith, Repentance and fincere Obedience, though imperfect. The Law of Nature still makes everlasting Death due to every sin: But it is such a Due as hath a Remedy at hand provided and offered in the Gospel; and is actually remedyed to all true believers. So that as it is not every fin that will damn us, though damnation be due to it (because we have a present Remedy;) so it is not every culpable ignorance or unbelief that will damn us, though it deserve demnation, because the Gospel doth not only not damn us for it, but pardons it. by acquitting us from the condemnation of the All this may teach you, not only to mend your abominable doctrine about Mortal and veniall fin, but also to discern the reason why a man may deny some points of faith that are not of the effence of Christianity, and yet not be damned for it, because the Law of Grace doth not condemn him for it, though he be culpable, because the Law of Grace may command further then it peremptorily condemneth in case of disobedience. It is the Promise that makes faith the Condition of Life, though it be the Precept that makes it a duty: Now it faveth not as a performed Duty directly, (because the precept gives not the Reward) but as a performed Condition : And therefore unbelief condemneth not effectually as a meer fin directly but as such a sin as is the violation or non-performance of that condition. But it is not a belief of every thing that is preceptively de fide, which is made the condition of life.

ment of the Catholick Charch as that which must be the ground of faith, and the decider of all Controversies:

And to this end they plead against the sufficiency of Scripture, and bend all the force of their arguings and designs, as if all their hope lay in this point, and as if it were a granted thing that the day is theirs, and we are lost, if the Catholick Church be admitted to be the Judge. Hence it is that they cry out against private faith and opinions, and call men to the faith of the Church, and perswade the poor people, that the Church is for them, and we are but branches broken off.

Well, we are content to deal with them at their own weapon, and at that one in which they put their trust. For our parts we know that the true Catholick Church (nor any member of it; in finfa Composito) cannot err in any of the Essentials of Christianity (for then it would cease to be the Church:) But we have too much reason to Judge that it is not free from error in lesser things. But yet for all that in the main cause between the Papists and us; we resuse not their judgement. Nay we turn this Canon against the Canoneers, and easily prove that the Papists cause is utterly lost, if the Catholick Church be Judge.

But is it the Ancient Church, or the present Church that must decide the cause? Well! It shall be which you will. For the most Ancient Church in the Apostles dayes, we are altogether of its belief, and stand to its decision in all things; and if you prove we mistake them in any thing, we shall gladly receive instruction and be reclaimed. To them we appeal for our Essentials and Integrals. And for some sollowing ages, we will be tryed by them in the articles of our saith, and in the principal controversies we have with the Papists.

Tea, but this will not serve their turn: It is the present Church that must judge or none: For say they, if the ancient Church had power; so bath the present: and if the ancient Church had possession of the truth, how shall we know it but by the present? It amwer, 1: We may know it by the Records of those times far

furer then by the reports of men without writing: Controverfies or numerous myslerious points are sorrily carryed in the memories, especially of the most, even of the Teachers. And for the Records, one diligent skilfull man will know more then ten thousand others. One Baronius, Albaspinaus, Petavus, among the Papists, and one Osher, Blondell, Salmasius, Gataker, &c. among the Protestants, knew more of the mind of antiquity, then a whole Country besides, or perhaps then some Generall Councils.

2. Well! but if you appeal to the greater number, to them shall you go. You must be tried by the present Church; Why then you are condemned. Is it the lesser number or the greater, or the better that must be judge? You will not say the leser, as such: If you do, you know where you are. If you say, the Better part shall be judge: who shall be Judge which is the Better part? we are ready to prove the Reformed Churches the Better pare: and if we do not, we will give you the day, and lofe our cause. But I suppose you will appeal to the Greater part. Content ! Then the world knows you are loft. The Greeks, Moscovites, Armenians, Abassines, and all other Churches in Asia. Africa and Europe are far more then the Papilts : and your own . pens and mouths tell us that these are against you. Many of them curse you as Hereticks or Schismaticks; the rest of them. know you not or refuse your government. They all agree against your Popes universall Headship or Soveraignty, and so against the very form of your new Catholick Church: So that the world knows the Judgement of the far greatest part of Christi. ans on earth to be against you in the main, so that you see what you get by appealing to the Catholick Church.

But I know you will say, that all these are Schismaticks, or Hereticks, and none of the Catholick Church: But they say as much by you, some of them, and all of them abhor your charge; and how do you prove it? and who shall be Judge whether they, or you be the Catholick Church? You tell us of your succession, and of twenty tales that are good, if you may be Judges your selves; but so do they say as much which is good if they be Judges. When we offer to dispute our case with you, you ask us who shall be Judge, and tell us the Catholick Church must be Judge: But who shall be Judge between you and them which is the Ca-

tholick Church? you will not let us be Judges in our own cause, and why then should you? Are we Protestants the lesser number as to you? so are you to all the rest that are against you. And what reason have we to let the lesser number Judge over the Greater? If still you say, because you are the Better, let that be first tryed; but no reason you should there also be the Judges.

So that the case is plainly come to this, Either the Papists must stand to the Greater number, and then the controversie is at end: or they must shamefully say, we will not dispute with you, unless we may be the fudges our selves, though the sewer. Or else they must lay by their talk of a Judge, and dispute it equally with us, by producing their evidence, which we are ever ready for.

CHAP. XVIII.

Detect. 9. THE most common and prevalent Deceit of the Papists is, by ambiguous terms to deceive those that cannot force them to distinguish, and to make you believe they mean one thing, when they mean another, and to mock you with cloudy words. I shall here warn you to look to them therefore especially in three terms, on which much of their controversies lies, that is, the words Church, Pope, and Council. For there's but sew understand what they mean by any one of these words.

1. When you come to dispute of the Church with them, see that you agree first under your hands of the Definition of that Church of which you dispute. And when you call them to Define it, you will find them in a wood, you will little think how many severall things it is that they call [the Church:] For example, sometime they mean the whole Body, Pastors and People: but more commonly they mean only the Pastors, which are the far smallest part. And sometime they mean the Church Reall: and sometimes only the Church Representative, as they call it in a Generall Councill. But whether they mean the Pastors or People, they exclude all saving the Pope of his subjects, and so by the [history] mean but a part or set. Sometime in the Question about about Tradition, some of the French take the [Church] for the community, (as fathers deliver the doctrine of Christ to their children oc.) And sometime they take it in its Politicall sence, for a holy fociety, confisting of a visible Head and members : But then they agree not of that Head, some setting the Pope highest, and some the Councill. But frequently they take the word [Church] for the supposed Head alone, as in most questions. about Infallibility, Judging of Controversies, expounding Scripture, keeping of Traditions, defining points of faith, &c. They fay, The Church must do these: but commonly they mean. the supposed Head: And one part mean a Generall Councill: and the Tesuites and Italians, and predominant part do mean only the Pope: fo that when they talk of the whole Catholick Church, and call you. to its Judgement, and boast of its Infallibility (you would little think it) they mean all this while but one poor sinfull man: and such a man as sometime hath been more unlearned then many of your school boys of twelve or fourteen years of age; and sometime hath been a Murderer, Adulterer, and (if General Councils, or the common vote may be believed) an Heretick, an Infidel, an Incarnate Devil. This man is their Church, as Gretfer, Bellarmine, and the rest of that strain profess.

So that if you do but force them to define and explain what they mean by the Church, you will either cause them to open their nakedness, or find them all to pieces about the very subject.

of the Dispute.

2. So also when they use the name of [a Pope] in disputation, make them explain themselves, and tell you (in a Definition), what they mean by [a Pope.] For, though you would think this term were sufficiently understood, yet you shall find them utterly at a loss, and all to pieces about it. Let us consider distinctly of the Efficient, Matter, and Form. 1. As to the efficient cause of their Pope, there must concur a Divine Institution (which they can no where shew) and a call from man (Some dat quod non habet, what man or men have power to make a Head to the Catholick Church.) But whether they will call it an Efficient Cause, or only a Causa sine qua non, Election and Ordination must go to make a Pope. Now either they will put the leinto their Definition, or not. If not, know of them whether a man without Election and Ordination may be Pope: If so, what makes him one? If Possession, then he that can conquer Rome, and fit down in the chair is Pope: If not possession, what then? and why may not any man fay, I am Pope? well: but doubtless they will tell you that Election, or Ordination, or both, is Necessary. then first for Election, is it Necessary to the being of a Pope, that Some certain persons Elect who have the Power, or will any Electors ferve whosoever? If any will serve, then every Monastery or every Parish may choose a Pope: If there must be certain Authorized Electors, see that those be named in the Definition: or at least declared. And then first know whether these Electors are impowered to that work by Divine Law, or by Humane: If by Divine, let them shew it if they can. In Scripture they can never find who must choose the Pope. And their Tradition (if that were a Divine law) hath no such precept, as appeareth by the alterations and divers wayes. And if it be but by a Humane Ecclesiasticall Canon, then it seems the Papacy is so too: for the Power received can have no higher a cause then the Power giving or authorizing.

2. When you come to know who these Electors must be, you open their nakedness For first if they say, It must be the Cardinals, ask them, where then was the Pope when there were no Cardiwals in the world? And whether that were a Pope or not that was chosen by the whole Romane Clergie? or whether those were Popes or not that were chosen by the People? Or those that were chosen by the Emperours? or those that were chosen by Councilled If they tell you that it must be the Romane Clergie; Know whether the Cardinals be the whole Romane Clergie. who are Bishops of other Churches, or whether they are not meerly Titular, at least many of them? And whether the People, the Council, or the Emperours were the Romane Clergy? If they would perswade you, that either the people, or the Emperour, or Council did not elect the Pope, but only shew whom the Romane Clergy should elect, interposing exorbitantly some unjust force, with the Due Election, then all currant History cryeth Thame against them, and we will lay the Dispute on that with them readily, though it were with Baronius himself. almost is more evident in the Papal History, then that there have been at least these five ways of election among them. Let them put it upon this issue with us when they will.

LZ

If they allow of any of these as valid, which ever it be (as they must, or give up their succession) then I. We would know by what Law of God the Emperour of Germany may choose a Head for the Catholick Church, any more then the Emperour of Habassia, or the King of France or Spain? 2. And we would know when the Emperour hath chosen one, and the Clergy another (if not some others a third) whether both were not true Popes, if both parties were authorized Electors? And if yet the People choose one, and the Romane Clergy another, and the Cardinals alone a third, and the Emperour a fourth, and the Councill a fifth, must all these stand, or which of them and why? Or if they tell you that it must be the particular Roman Church: then I. If the people of that Church choose one and the Clergy by major vote another, and the Cardinals a third, which is the true Pope? 2: And then the succession is gone however: For they were no Popes that Emperors or Councils chose.

2. If they shall tell you that it is not Election but Consecration that makes a Pope, yea or that Consceration is of Necessity with Election; then I. Demand of them whether it be any one. whosoever that may Consecrate, or whether this kish power be confined to certain hands? If any may serve, or any Bishops, then he that can get three drunken Bishops to consecrate him may be Pope. And then there may be an hundred Popes at once. But if it be confined to certain hands, 2. Let it be put down in the Definition, or at least declared who those are that must ordain or confecrate him. 3. And if they fay, that It must be only, the Italian Bishops that must consecrate, then I. Know of them by what Law of God they have power to confecrate a Head to the universal Church, when all nations are agreed that gnod pertinet ad omnes, ab omnibus tractari debet. 2. And by what Law they can create or Generate a creature of a more noble species then themselves, as if a beast should beget a man? Or whether this prove not that as a Bishop at first was but Presbyter prime sedis, (like the fore man of a Jury) and thence sprung an Archbishop, who was Episocopus prime sedis, and thence a Patriarck, who was Archiepiscopus prima sedis; so in process of time, when Pride grew riper, the Pope grew to be Patriarcha prima sedis; but not till long after, the Head or Governour of the univer-Isll Church, nor Patriarcha Patriarcharum; no more then the Archbeshops or Bishops were at first Episcopi Episcopo num.

But if they can shew us no law of God empowring these speciall consecrators, any more then others, then where is the Papacy, that dependeth on it? There is nothing in Scripture to empower the Italian Bishops any more then the Gallicane, Germane, or Asian, to Consecrate a Head for the Catholick Church.

3. But suppose there were, yet we must be resolved whether it be some or all the Italian Bishops that must do it? It but some, which be they? and how is their power proved? If all or any, then 1. What shall we do when some of them confecrate one Pope, and some another, and some a third, which hash sallen out: which of these is the Pope? If Consecration give the Power, then all are Popes.

2. And still the Papal succession is overthrown while many Popes had no Consecration by Italian. Bishops.

Thus you may see what a case the poor Jesuits or Fryars will be in, if you put them but to insert the necessary Electors and Consecrators in their Definition of a Pope.

2. But that's not the worst, you must require them to put his necessary Qualification in the Description. For if no Disposition of the Matter be necessary, but ex quolibet ligno fit mercurins Romanus, then a Jew or other Infidel may be Pope: which they will deny. And if any Disposition of the subject be of neceffity to the Reception of the form, then cause them to put it down. And then J. It is either true Godliness; and then farewell Papacy. 2. Or it is common honesty and sobriety: and then Still farewell Papacy. 3. Or it is learning and knowledge: and then Alphonfus à Castro, and others of their own will bear witness that some Popes understood not their Grammar, and one good man being (faith Wernerus) rudis literarum, was fain to get another Compope to fay his offices, (though it happened that they could not agree, and fo a third was chosen, and his choice diffiked, and a fourth chosen, till there was fix chosen Popes alive at once.) 4. If age be necessary, then the Children Popes (oneat leaft) have interrupted the succession. 5. Yea, if the Masculine Gender be but Necessary, Pope Joan hath interrupted thesuccession, unless between forty or fifty of their own Historians deceive us. 6. But all this is the imallest part, the Question.

is whether faith in Christ be of Necessity to a Pope? If so, then what will you say to fohn the twenty third, that denyed the life to come, and to those that have been guilty of Herese? So that by that time they have put the necessity Qualification of a Pope into their Definition, you shall find them hard put to it.

- 3. But yet the worst is behind. They be not agreed about the very form of the Papacy: For some say, He is the Head of all the Catholick Church. But others with the General Councils of Constance and Basil say, that he is the Head only of the singular members, but a subject to the Catholick Church represented in a Council, which receive thits power immediately from Christ, so that you may see what a case they will be in, if they be but forced to tell you what they mean by a Pope, and to Define him too.
- 3. And if they use the name of a General Council, call them to Define what they mean by a General Conneil: some of them will say, It must be a true Representative of the whole Catholick Church: fo that Morally they are all Consenting to what is there done. But then the doubt remaineth whether there be a Neceffity of any certain Number of B shops? If not; it seems the whole Church may agree that twenty or ten, or two, or one shall represent them, and be a general Council. But if this must not hold, then Must All the Biships of the world be there or only some, and how many? Binnius saith, Vol. 1. pag. 313. that [a General Council is that where all the Bishops of the whole world may and ought to be present, unless they be lawfully hindred, and in which none but the Pope of Rome by himself or his Legates, is wont to preside.] And vol. 3. pag. 229. It is when all the Church is morally Represented, the Pope presiding.] But what a loss are we here at? I. How prove they that only Bishops should be members of a Council, and not Presbyters?
 - 2. But if that were granted them (without proof and contrary to practile) yet we are at a far greater loss to know what a Bishop is that must here be a member? Is he only the Primus Presbyterorum in a presbyterie? Or is he the Ruler of a Presbyterie, (the Ruler of presbyterie? Or is he the fole Ruler of Presbyters and people? And is he to be in every Parish where are divers resbyters? Of only in every Classis or lesser Synod? or only in every County, or Frovince? Or shall the old Rule stand, that every City must have one? If so, then are not all our Corporations true Cities? And so by any of these Rules, there have been sew General Councils in the world. And what word of God is there why London, Worcester, Canterbury should have Bishops; and Shrewsbury, Ipswich, Plimouth and hundreds such should have none? so that if the very matter of your Councils be so humane and disordered, what is the Council composed of such? As most of them use the term Bishop, you would put them as hard to it to Define a Bishop al nost, as to define a Pope.

3. But suppose they help you over this rub, yet by their Definition they null many General Councils, because the Pope presided not there: even the first General Council itself at

Nice (what soever they boldly feign to the contrary.)

4. And by this Rule, either we never had a General Council. or but few: For instance, At the first Session of the Council of Trent (the last and most famous Council) there were but four Archbishops, and twenty two Bishops, taking in the Titular Bishops of Upfal, Armach, and Worcester. And at divers other Selfions after, but eight, or nine, or very few more. In the fourth Session which Decreed to receive Tradition with equal: pious affection and reverence as the holy Scriptures, and which gave us a falle Catalogue of the Canonical Books, there were but the Popes Legates, two Cardinals, nine Archbishops (titular and all) and forty one, or forty two Bishops (titular and all.) Now we would fain know whether this was the whole Church morally represented? and whether these twenty two, or forty one were all the Bishops of the world, or the hundreth part of them? Yea whether all the Bishops of the African, Afian, and other Churches could and ought to have been there?

If they say that most of the Bishops of the world are Hereticks or Schissmaticks, and had nothing to do to be there, we aresure that this is but the impudent censure of a sect, that unchurcheth most of Christs Church, for far less faults then it self is guilty of: But how is this heavy censure proved?

5. Nay to make short of it, its plain by this Definition, that a General Council is but a name (at least since the daies.

when the Churchlay in a narrow room) and that no fuch thing is to be expected in the world. For i. If all Bishops, or half come thither, what shall their poor flocks do the while? 2. How many years must they be travailing from America, Ethiopia, and all the remote parts of the Christian world ? 3. So much shipping, and provision, and so many thousand pound a man is necessary for the Convoy of many, that also the poor Bishops be not able to defray the hundreth part of the charge. 4. Abundance of them are so aged and weak, that they are unfit for the journey. 5. Their Princes are some of them Infidels, and some at wars, and will never give them leave to come. 6. They must pass through many Kingdoms of the enemies, or that are in wars, that will never suffer them to pass. 7. The tediousnels, and haz irds of the journey, with change of air is like to be the death of most of them, and so its but a plot to put an end to the Church. 8. The length of General Councils is such (some of them being ten years, and some (as that at Trent) eighteen years) that so many Bishops to be so long absent from home, is but to give up the Church to Infidelity or Impiety (unless the Bishops be such things as the Church can spare.) 9. When they come together, they cannot many of them understand one another because of the diversity of their languages. 10. And the Number would be so great, that ten or twenty Council-houses or rooms would not hold them: fo that they could not Converse in one Assembly: fo that a true General Council now, is but a name to amuse those that think the world is no bigger then a man may ride over in a weeks journey.

6. And yet even this Definition of Binnins is ridiculous: For he makes it enough that all the Bishops of the world may and ought to be there, whether they be there or not. But then what if lazinels or danger deterr them or detain them? Is that a Council where Bishops ought to be and are not? How many must de facto be present, any or none? Proveifyou can that forty Bishops are a General Council, because the rest ought to be there. And who shall be judge of each mans case, whether he could or ought to have been there? will you judge men before they are heard, or their cause known? Your saying that they ought to have been there, is no proof.

Good still! If all the Bishops in the world be lawfully hindered, it seems it is a General Council when no body is there: You see now what you put the poor Papists too, if you put them to define a General Council, or tell you what they mean by that word.

And therefore I again advise you; let them not befool you with empty or ambiguous words. And when they are all to pieces among themselves, let them not make you believe they are united by agreeing in One word, when they are several things that are meant by that one word.

CHAP. XIX.

Detect. 10. Hen they go about from Councils or other History to prove the Soveraignty of the Pope, let them not cheat you by confounding, I. An bumane Ordinance with a Divine: 2. And an alterable point of Order with an unalterable essential part of the Church: 3. Or a meer Primacy in the same Order or office with a Governing Soveraignty, or a different Order or office.

First therefore we would learn of them, whether the preheminence and order of the five Patriarchal Sees, began not about the first General Council to be lookt after, but was setled some while after: For till there were General Councils (fuch as were to called) there was no great occasion of determining which should have the first, second, or third seat.

2. Or when ever the time was, yet we enquire, whether these other Sees as of Jerusalem, Antioch, Alexandria, or some of them were not Patriarchal as foon as Rome? and whether Councils that speak of priority or posteriority, do not in the same manner, and on the same grounds, and to the same ends give Alexandria, and Antioch, their places, as they give to Rome the first place? Surely we find them speaking of them as matters of the same Order and nature, faying, Rome shall have the first place or fear, Constantinople the second, Alexandria the third, Intioch the fourth, and ferusalem the fifth. 4. And therefore we enquire whether all these have not the same kind of right to their preheminence, whether it be Divine or Humane. And that the very fonn-M dation of this Patriarchall order, yea of Romes Patriarchall Primacy, (which was the preparative to its universal Soveraignty) was not a meer humane invention, given on occasion of the Imperiall seat at Rome, and not any institution of Christ to Peter and his Successors, I defire you not to take from my word; but all that will not be fool'd out of all Historicall verity by Popish audacity, let them take it from the express words of the fourth great approved General Council, viz. of Calcedon, which the poor Jacobites and other Churches of the East and South are so reproached for rejecting. In Act. 16. Binnii pag. 134. these are their words [Definitiones Sanctorum Patrum sequentes ubiq: & Regulam, & que nunc relecta sunt 150. Deo amanissimorum Episcoporum, qui congregati sunt sub pia memoria Imperatore majore Theodofio in Regia civitate Confrantinop. B.) patres consequenter privilegia reddidirunt. Et eadem intentione permoti 150. Deo amantissimi Episcopi aqua sanctissima sedi nova Roma privilegia tribuerunt, rationabiliter judicantes Imperio & Senatu Urbemornatam aguis Senioris Regie Roma privilegiis frui. 7 i. c. [We following alway the Definitions of the boly fathers, and the Canon, and knowing those that now have been read of the hundred and fifty Bishops, most beloved of God, that were Congregated under the Empersur of pious memory Theodosius the Greater, in the Royall City Constantinople (new Rome,) have our selves also defined the same things, concerning the Priviledges of the same most hoty Church of Constantinople, new Rome. For to the feat of old Rome, because of the Empire of that City, the Fa: thers consequently gave the Priviledges. And the hundred and fifty Bishops most beloved of God, being moved with the same inten: tion, have given equall Priviledg s to the most holy Seat of New Rome: reasonably judging, than the City adorned with the Empire and Senate, Shall enjoy equal Priviledges with old Regal Rome.

I do not stand to note that this Council was called by Alartian: that his Lay Officers were called the Judges, or how light the Council made of Rome when they said | Qui contradicunt Nesteriani sunt: qui contradicunt, Romam ambulent] Bin. p. 98.

Nor.

Nor do I stand so much on it, that they gave Constantinople equal priviledges. But it may consound all the Papal Juglers on earth to find an approved General Council affirming, 1. That Romes Priviledges (even its meer primacy) were given by the Fathers. 2. And that because it was the Imperial City. 3. And therefore on the same reason they do the like by Constantinople. 4. And that the General Council of Constant. had gone before them on these grounds: so that you have the vote of two of the first sour great General Councils, that it was not so from the beginning, nor an Apostolical Tradition, but the act of the Fathers, because of the Imperial City. If a General Council can err, Popery is a deceit. If it cannot err, then the very Primacy of order in the Pope was then but new, and humane, on a Carnal ground, done by man, that might do the like by others, and therefore undo this again.

But say they, Pope Leo confirmed not this. Answ. 1. Still then the Church Representative it seems may err, and the Pope only is infallible. 2. Leo and his Delegates were offended at Anatolius his rising, and the equaling him with Rome: but they never excepted one word (that ever I found) against the saying, that it was because of the Empire that Rome by the Fathers had

And the Reason given by themselves Concil. Constant. Can. 5. is, [because Constantinople is new Rome] But Binnius saith that Rome receiveth not the Canons of this Council neither, but only their condemnation of Macedonius. And he saith [that every Council hath just so much strength and authority as the Apostolick seat bestoweth on it. For (saith he) unless this be admitted, no reason can be given why some Councils of greater numbers of Bishops were reprobated; and others of a smaller number consirmed Bin. Vol. 2. p. 515.

What would you have more Sirs? Do you not see yet what the Popish Catholick Church is; and what they mean when they mouth it out to you, and ask you whether your private Judgement be safer or wiser then that of the whole Church, or of all the Christian world? You see they mean all this while but one man, whom Greefer and others plainly confess they call the Church. So that indeed it is General Councils, and all the Christian world or Church that are the ignorant, fallible, and ofc erring part; and it is one man, (that sometime is reputed an incarnate Devil by a General Council too) that is the unerring Pillar of the Church, and wifer then all they, Do you not fee that they make a meer nothing or mockery of General Councils, any further then they please the Pope? And can you expect that any thing should please them that is against his Greatness. or, as fulius the second calls it, [his holding the place of the great God, the Maker of alithings, and all Laws?] What a vile abuse is it then of the Pope to trouble the world by the meetings and Consultations of General Councils, when he can sit at Rome and contradict them infallibly, and, Good man, is fain to fave the Catholick Church from the Errors that General Councils (the Representative Catholick Church) would else lead them into : and therefore could he not with less ado infallibly make us Laws, Canons, and Scriptures without them? For fure that which the Pope can do against a General Council, he can do without them. If he can Infallibly contradict a General Council. and Infallibly Rule us contrary to their Judgement, he may no doubt Infallibly Rule us without them. And therefore of late times they have learnt fo much wit, that you may look long enough before you fee a General Council. And I think the Council of Constance were no better Prognosticators then William Lilly, nor no more effectuall Lawgivers then Wat Tyler, when they Prognosticated or Ordained Decennial Councils: And I will be judged by all the world.

And here also you may see what account the Papists make even of the first General Councils. Its all one with them to judge others Hereticks for contradicting especially the four first General Councils (compared to the four Evangelists) as the Scripture it self: and yet (who would have thought it) they profess themselves to reject the Canons or Decrees of both these,

the first of Constantinople, and that of Calcedon in part.

And, now I think on it, by this priviledge I cannot fee but the Pope is priviledged from all possibility of being an Heretick personally. But these things are on the by, I return to the point in hand, which is to prove to you, that not only the Romish Universal Monarchy and Vice-godhead, but even its Patriarchal Primacy was no Apostolical Tradition, but an Humane Institution; founded on this Consideration, that Rome was the Imperial Seat and City.

5. And

5. And Humane it must needs be. 1. For we find that Councils did not declare it as any part of the Law of God, but Ordain it as an act of their own. 2. We find them adding the Patriarchate of Constantinople, which was a new seat, neither Patriarch nor Bishop residing there in the Apostles dayes, or long after. 3. Yea we find them giving this new Patriarch the second place, and once making him equal with old Rome, which they would never have presumed to do, if they had thought that the Patriarchship of Alexandria, Antioch, or Rome had been of Divine Institution: for what horrible arrogancy would that have been, when the Holy Ghost by the Apostles had made Alexandria second, and Antioch third, and Rome first, for a Council to set Constantinople before two of them, and equal with the sirst?

6. And therefore we have reason to think that if Patriarchs be desirable creatures, there may more and more new ones now be made, as lawfully as Constantinople was.

7. And we do not think that a General Council or Pope can make a man of one Nation to be Patriarch of the Church in another Nation, that perhaps may be in wars with the Prince of the first Nation: but that each Prince with the Church under their Power, hath more to do in it then either Pope or Council. And if Portugal and France set up Patriarchs at home, they do as lawfully as the Patriarch of Constantinople was set up.

8. And therefore we must needs judge, that to disobey the Pope, or withdraw from his subjection (if he had never sorfeited his Patriarchship by the claim of an Universal Headship) were no greater a sin, then to disobey or withdraw from the Patriarch of Alexandria, Antioch, or Constantinople: either the Government by Patriarchs and Arch-bishops is of Gods ordaining and approving, or not: if not (as most of the Protestants hold) then it is no sin to reject any of them. If it be of God, then to reject any of them (though in simple error) is a sin of disobedience through ignorance, but is far from proving a man to be no member of the Catholick Church: for sure Patriarchs are far from being Essential parts of the Catholick Church.

For, 9. We conclude, as in the Papists own Judgement, the Catholick Church may be without the Patriarch of Constantinople, Alexandria, or Antioch; so may it therefore without the Pope of Rome.

CHAP-

CHAP. XX.

Ditect. 11. THE great endeavour of the Papills is to advance Tradition: The Council of Trent Sef. 4. hath equalled it with the Scriptures, as to the pions affection and reverence wherewith they receive it. On pretence of this Tradition they have added abundance of new Articles to the faith. and accuse us as Hereticks for not receiving their Traditions: And this is a principall difference betwixt us, that we take the Scriptures to be sufficient, to acquaint us with the will of God. as the Rule of faith and holy living: and they take it to be but part of the word of God, and that the other part is in unwritten Tradition, which they equal with this (as afore.) For the maintaining of Tradition it is that they write fo much to the difhonour of the holy Scripture, as you may find in Rushworthe Dialogues, and Tho. Whites Defence of them, and many others : fo like to the Arguments and Language of the Seekers and Infidels, that we can scarcely know whom we hear when they speak to us.

For the discovery of their desperate fraud in this point, and the right consuting of them: 1. You must distinguish them out of their consusion: 2. You must grant them all that is true and just, which we shall as stiffly defend as they: 3. You must reject their errors and consustence : And 4. You may turn their own principall weapon against them, to the certain destruction of

Of all these briefly in course.

1. For the first two I have spoke at large in the Preface to the second part of the Saints Rest, and in the determination in the first part of my Book against Insidelity. But breisly to touch some of the most necessary things here, i. We must distinguish the Tradition of the Scriptures, or the Scripture doctrine, from the Tradition of other doctrines, pretended to be the rest of the word of God.

2. We must distinguish between a certain proved Tradition, and that which is unproved and uncertain, if not grossy seigned. 3. We must distinguish between the Tradition of the whole Catholick Church, or the greater part, and the Tradition of the lesser more corrupted selfish part (even the Roman part.) 4. We must distinguish stinguish between a Tradition of necessary doctrine or practice, and the Tradition of mutable Orders. 5. And we must distinguish between Tradition by way of Testimony, or History, or by way of Teaching Ministry, and Tradition by way of Decisive Judgement, as to the Universal Church: suffer them not to jumble all these together, if you would not be cheated in the dark.

2. And then concerning Tradition, we grant all these following Propositions, (so that it is not all Tradition that we deny.)

1. We grant that the Holy Scriptures come down to us by the certain Tradition of our fathers and Teachers; and that what the feeing and hearing of the Aposses was to them that lived with them, that Tradition and belief of certain Tradition is to us, by reason of our distance from the time and place: So that though the Scripture bear its own evidence of a Divine author, in the Image and superscription of God upon it, yet we are beholden to Tradition for the Books themselves, and for much of our knowledge that these are the true writings of the Aposses and Prophets, and all, and not depraved, &c.

2. We thankfully acknowledge that the Essentials of the faith, (and more) hath been delivered even from the Apostles in other wayes or forms, besides the Scriptures: as. 1. In the Professions of the Churches faith. 2. In the baptismal Covenant and signs, and whole administration. 3. In the Sacrament of the Lords Supper. 4. In Catechisms or Catechizings. 5. In the prayers and praises of the Church. 6. In the hearts of all true believers, where God hath written all the Essentials of the Chriflian faith and Law .: So that we will not do as the Papilts perverfly do: when God delivereth us the Christian Religion with two hands, Scripture (compleatly) and Verbal Tradition, (in the effentials) they quarrell with the one hand (Scrip ure) on pretence of defending the other: fo will not we quarrell with Tradition (the other hand :) but thankfully confess a Tradition of the lane Christianity by unwritten means, which is delivered more fully in the Scripture: and this Tradition is in some respect subordinate to Scripture, and in some respect. co-ordinate, as the spirits lest hand as it were, to hold us out the truth.

3. We confess that the Apostles delivered the Gospel by voice as well as by writing, and that before they wrote it to the Churches.

- 4. By this preaching we confess there were Christians made, that had the doctrine of Christ in their hearts, and Churches gathered that had his ordinances among them, before the Gospel was written.
- 5. And we confess that the Converted were bound to teach what they had received to their children, servants and others.

6. And that there was a setled Ministry in many Churches ordained to preach the Gospel as they had received it from the Apostles before it was written.

7. And that the said ordinances of Baptism, Catechizing, Professions, Eucharist, Prayer, Praise, &c. were instituted, and in use before the Gospell was written for the Churches.

8. And that when the Gospel was written, as Tradition bringeth it to us, so Ministers are commissioned to deliver both the Books, and the doctrine of this Book, as the Teachers of the Church, and to preach it to those without, for their conversion.

9. And that Parents and Masters are bound to teach this doerine to their children and servants: yea if a Minister or other person were cast into the Indies or America without a Bible, he must teach the doctrine, though he remembred not the words.

10. We grant that to the great benefit of the Church, the writers of all ages have in subserviency to Scripture delivered down the Sacred Verities, and Historians the matters of fact.

11. And that the unanimous Confent of all the Churches, manifelted in their constant professions, and practices, is a great confirmation to us.

12. And so is the suffering of the Martyrs for the same truth.

13. And the Declarations of fuch consent by Councils is also a confirming Tradition.

14. And the Confessions of Hereticks, Jews and other Infidels, are Providentiall and Historical Traditions, for confirmation.

15. And we profess that if we had any Certain proof of a Tradition from the Apostles of any thing more then is written in

Scrip-

Scripture, we would receive it: All this we grant them for Tradition.

3. But in these points sollowing we oppose them. 1. We take the holy Scriptures as the Compleat universal Rule or Law of saith and Holy living, and we know of no Tradition that containeth another word of God; Nay we know there is none such because the Scripture is true, which afferteth its own sufficiency. Scripture, and unwritten Tradition are but two wayes of acquainting the world with the same Christian doctrine; and not with divers parts of that Doctrine, so as that Tradition should add to Scripture: yea contrarily it is but the substance of greatest verities that are conveyed by unwritten Tradition: but that and much more is contained in the Scripture, where the Christian doctrine is compleat.

2. The manner of delivery in a form of words, which no man may alter, and in so much fullness and perspicuity, is much to be preferred before the meer verbal delivery of the same dostrine. For 1. The Memory of man is not so strong as to retain as much as the Bible doth contain, and preserve it safe from alterations or Corruptions; Or if one man were of so strong a memory, no man can imagine that all or most should be so: Or if one Generation had such wonderfull memories, we cannot imagine that all their posterity should have the like. If there were no statute Books, Records, or Law-books in England, our Laws would be but forrily kept, and obeyed and executed.

2. If all the world had such miraculous memories, yet men are apt to be negligent either in learning or keeping of holy dodrine; All have not that zeal that should excite them to such wonderfull diligence without which such a treasure could not be preserved.

3. When matter and so much matter, is committed to bare memory without a form of unalterable words, new words may make an alteration before men are aware: The change of one word sometimes doth make a whole discourse seem to have another sense.

4. There are so many carnal men in the world that love not the strictness of that doctrine which they do prosess, and so many hereticks that would pervert the Holy Doctrine, that it would purposely be altered by them if it could be done; and it might much more easily be done, if it lay all upon mens memories: For one party would set their memory against the others, and (as it was about Easter a publick matter of set) tradition would be set against tradition: especially when the sar greater part of the Church turn Hereticks, as in the Arrians dayes, then Tradition would be most at their keeping and interpretation; and if we had not then had the unalterable Scriptures, what might they not have done?

5. A whole Body of Doctrine kept only in Memory, will be foon disjoynted and dislocate; and if the matter were kept safe, yet the method and manner would be lost.

6. And there could not be such satisfactory Evidence given to another of the Integrity or Certainty of it, as when it is preserved in writing. We should all be diffident that the Laws of England were corrupted, or that Lawyers might combine to do it at their pleasure, if there were no Law Books or Records, but all lay in their memories. If they were never so faithfull, yet they could not give us such evidence of it.

I do not think any man of common reason can heartily believe, that all the holy Truths of God, Historical, Doctrinal, Practical, Prophetical, &c. could (without a course of miracles, or extraordinary means) have been kept through all ages, as well without writing, as with it.

7. And if writing be not necessary, why have we so many Fathers, Histories, and Canons? And why do they setch their Tradition from these, and ridiculously call them unwritten verities? Are they unwritten, when they turn us to so many volumes for them? And if mans writing be necessary for their preservation, me thinks men should thankfully acknowledge that God hath taken the best way in giving it us in his own unalterable phrase:

3. If they do prove that some matters of sact are made known to us by Tradition that are not in the Scripture, or that any. Church Orders or Circumstances of worship then used are so made known to us, (which yet we wait for the proof of) it, will not follow that any of these are therefore Divine Institutions, or universal Lawes for the unchangable obligation of the whole Church. If there be some things Historically related in the Scripture, that were obligatory but for a season, and ordain.

ed occasionally, and ceased when the occasion ceased (as the Love feasts, the Kiss of Love, the washing of feet, the abstaining from things strangled and blood, the anointing the sick, the Prophesyings one by one, mentioned I Cor. 14.31. miraculous gifts and their exercise, &c.) then it will not follow, if they could prove that the Apostles sasted in the Lent, or used the sign of the Cross in Baptisme or holy Ordinances, or confirmed with a Cross in Chrysme, &c. that therefore they intended these as universal Laws to the Church, though I suppose they will never prove that they used the things themselves.

4. We will never take the Popes Decision or bare word for a Proof of Tradition: nor will we receive it from pretended Authority, but from rational Evidence. It is not their saying, we are the authorized keepers of Tradition, that shall go with us for proof.

5. And therefore it is not the Testimony of the Papists alone, (who are not only a lesser part of the Church, but a part that hath espouled a corrupt interest against the rest) that we shall take for certain proof of a Tradition: but we will prefer the Testimonie of the whole Catholick Church before the Romish Church alone.

6. They that can produce the best Records of Antiquity, or rational proof of the Antiquity of the thing they plead for, though they be but a few Learned Antiquaries, may yet be of more regard in the matter of Tradition then millions of the vulgar, or unlearned men: so that with us, universal Tradition is preserved before the Tradition of the Romiss set, and Rational proof of Antiquity is preserved before ignorant surmises. But where both these concur, both universal consent, and records or other credible evidence of Antiquity, it is most valid.

And as for the Romish Traditions which they take for the other part of Gods word: 1. In all Reason they must produce their sufficient proof that they came from the Apostles, before we can receive them as Apostolick Traditions. And when they have done that, they must prove that it was delivered by the Apostles as a perpetual universal doctrine or Law for the whole Church: and when they have well proved both these, we shall hearken further to them.

2. Either these Traditions have Evidence to prove them Apo-N 2 sholical, stolical, or no Evidence. If none, how can the Pope know them? If they have Evidence, why may not we know it as well as the Pope? at least, by the helps that his charity doth vouchsafe the world.

3. If there be any Proof of these Traditions, it is either some Antient Records or Monuments; and then our Learned Antiquaries may better know them then a multitude of the unlearned: Or it is the Practice of the Church: And then 1. How shall we know how long that practice hath continued, without recourse to the writings of the ancients? The reports of the people is in many cases very uncertain. 2. But it it may be known without the search of Antient Records, then we may know it as well as they.

4. If the Pope and Clergy have been the keepers of it, have they in all ages kept it to themselves or declared it to the Church? (I mean to all in common) If they have concealed it, I. Then it seems it belonged not to others. 2. Or else they were unfaithfull and unfit for the office. 3. And then how do succeeding Popes and Clergy know it? If they divulged it, then others know it as well as they. We have had abundance of Preachers from among the Papists, that were once Papists themselves, as Luther, Melanthon, Zninglins, Calvin, Beza, Peter Martyr, Bucer, &c. and yet these knew not of your truly Apostolical Traditions.

5. And it mars your credit with us, because we are able to. prove the beginning of some of your traditions, or a time when they had no being, fince the death of the Apostles.

6. And also that we are able to prove the death and burial of many things that have gone long under the name of Traditions.

7. And when we find so lame an account from your selves of the true Apostolical Traditions: You are so consounded between your Ecclesiastical Decrees and Traditions, and your Apostolical Traditions, that we despair of learning from you to know one from the other: and of seeing under the hand of his Holiness and a General Council a Catalogue of the true Apostolical Traditions. And sure it seems to us scarce sair dealing that in one thousand and sive hundered years time, (if indeed there have been Popes so long) the Church could never have an enumeration and description of these Traditions, with the proofs of them. Had you told us which are Apostolick Traditions but as fully and plainly, as the Scriptures which you accuse of insufficiency and obscurity, do deliver us their part, you had discharged your pretended trust.

8. And it is in our eyes an abominable impiety, for you to equal your Traditions with the holy Scripture, till you have enumerated and proved them. And it makes us the more to suspect your Traditions, when we perceive that they or their Patrons have such an enmity to the Holy Scriptures, that they cannot be rightly defended without casting some reproach upon the Scriptures. But this we do not much wonder at: for it is no new thing with the applauders of Tradition. We find the eighth General Council at Constantinople, Can. 3. decreeing, that [the Image of Christ be adored with equal Honour with the Holy Scripture,] But whether that be an Apostolical Tradition, we doubt.

9. And if General Councils themselves, and that of your own, should be for the sufficiency of Scripture; what then is become of all your Traditions? Search your own Binnius, page 299. whether it past not as sound doctrine at the Council of Basil (in Raqusii Orat.) Sup. 6. [that faith and all things necessary to salvation, both matters of belief, and matters of pra-Etice, are founded in the literal sense (of Scripture,) and only from that may are mmentation be taken for the proving of those things that are matters of faith, or necessary to salvation; and not from those passages that are spoken by allegory, or other spiritual sence Sup. 7. The Holy Scripture in the literal (enfe foundly and well understood, is the infallible and most sufficient Rule of faith Is not here enough against all other Traditional Articles of faith? A plain man would think fo. Yea, but Binnius noteth that he meaneth that explicitely or implicitely it is fo. Well! I confess. the best of you are slippery enough: but let us grant this; (for indeed he so explaineth himself afterward : yet that's nothing for Tradition. He there maintaineth that Scripture is the Rule of faith (not part of the Rule) [For (faith he) when the intellect hapneth to err, as in hereticks, its necessary that there be some Rule, by the deviation or conformity to which the intel Et may perceive that it doth or doth not err. Else is would be still in doubt and fluctuate _____ it appeareth that no humane scierice ence is the Rule of faith. It remaineth therefore that the Holy Scrip. ture is this Rule of faith. This is the Rule, John 20. where be faich, thefe things are written that you might believe, that fesus is the for of God, and believing might have life in his name. And 2 Pet. 2. You have a more sure word of prophety to which ye do well that ye attend as to a light, &c. And Rom. 15. What soever things were written, were written for our learning, &c. - And its plain that the foresaid authorities are of holy Scripture; and speak of the holy Scripture, &c. The second part also is plain, because if the boly Scripture were not a sufficien: Rule of faith, it would follow that the Holy Ghost had insufficiently delivered it, who is the author of it: which is by no means to be thought of God whose works are all perfect. Moreover if the Holy Scripture were wanting in any things that are necessary to salvation, then those things that are wanting might lawfully and deservedly be superadded from some thing else (aliunde) or if any thing were superfluous, be diminished. But this is forbidden, Rev. 22. From whence its plain that in Scripture there is nothing defective, and nothing superfluous, which is agreeable to its author, the Holy Ghost, to whose Omnipotency it agreeeth that nothing deminately; to his Wisdom that nothing superfluously; and to his Goodness that in a congruous order, be provide for the Necessity of our salvation, Prov. 30. 5, 6. The mord of God is a fiery buckler to them that hope in bim: Add thou not to his words lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a lyar.] How like you all this in a Popish General Council? and in an Oration against the Sacrament in both kinds.

Well! but perhaps the distinction unsaith all again? No such matter; you shall hear it truly recited. He proceeds thus [But for the further declaration of this Rule as to that part, it must be known, that the sufficiency of any doctrine is necessarily to be understood two mayes; one way Explicitely, another way Implicitely. And this is true in every Doctrine or science, because no dectrine was ever so sufficiently delivered, that all the Conclusions contained in its principles, were delivered and expressed explicitely and in the proper terms: and so it is in enr purpose: because there is nothing that any way or in any manner (N.B.) pertained to faith and salvation, which is not most sufficiently contained in the hely Scripture explicitely or implicitely. Hence saith Austin

Austin [every erath is contained in the Scriptures, latent or patent, as in other sciences Speculative, or Moral and Civil, the Conclusions and determinations are contained in their principles, &c. and the deduction is by way of inference or determination—] This is the plain Protestant Doctrine. There is nothing any way necessary to faith or salvation, but what is contained in the Scriptures, either expressly, or as the Conclusion in the premises. Good still! we desire no more. Let holy Reason then discern the Conclusion in the premises, and let us not be sent for it to the Authority of Rome; nay sent for some thing else, that is no Conclusion deducible from any Scripture principles: we grant Tradition or Church practices are very useful for our better understanding of some Scriptures. But what is this to another Traditional word of God? Prove your Traditions but by inference from Scripture, and we will receive them.

Yet let us hear this Orator further clearing his mind [Adding to a Dollrine may be understood four wayes. 1. By way of explication or declaration. 2. By way of supply. 3. By way of amplia-

tion or declaration. 2. By may of supply. 3. By may of ampliation. 4. By may of destruction, or contrary. The sirst way is necessary in every science and doctrine, and specially in Holy Scripture; not for it self, which is most sufficient, and most cleare in it self, but for us: (This we all yield) The second way is necessary to sciences diminutely and insufficiently delivered by their authors, for their supplement: so Atistotle is supplemented by Albertus Magnus, &c. The third way, specially if it be not excessive, is tolerable to the well being, though it be not necessary. The sourth way—assertively is to be rejected as Poyson—Thus are the authorities to be understood, that forbid to add to, er diminish from the Scripture;

Well! by this time you may see, that when such doctrine as this for Scripture sufficiency and perfection as the Rule of faith and life, admitting no addition as necessary but explication, nor any other as tolerable, but moderate ampliation (which indeed is the same,) I say, when this doctrine past so lately in a Popish General Council, you may see that the very Doctrine of Traditions equaled with Scripture, or being another word of Ged, necessary to saith and salvation, containing what is wanting in Scripture, is but lately sprung up in the world. And sure the Traditions themselves be not old then, when the conceit of them came but lately into the world.

4, Well ::

4. Well: I have done the three first parts of this task: but the chief is yet behind, which is to shew I How little the Papills get by their Argument from Tradition. 2. And how much they lose by it : even all their cause.

1. Two things they very much plead Tradition for the one is their private doctrines and practices, in which they disagree from other Christians: and here they lose their labour with the jud cious. 1. Because they give us no sufficient proof that their Tradition is Apostolical. 2. Because the dissent of other Churches sheweth that it is not universal: with other Reasons before mentioned.

2. The other Cause which they plead Tradition for, is the Doctrine of Christianity it self. And this they do in design to lead men to the Church of Rome; as if we must be no Christians, unless we are Christians upon the credit of the Pope, and his Subjects. And here I offer to their Consideration these two things, to shew them the vanity of their arguing.

1. We do not strive against you in producing any Tradition or Testimony of Antiquity for the Scripture, or for Scripture Doctrine: we make as much advantage of fuch just Tradition as you. What do such men as White, Vane, Creffy, &c. think of, when they argue so eagerly for the advantage of Tradition to prove the Scripture and Christian faith? Is this any thing against us? Nothing at all. We accept our Religion from both the hands of Providence that bring it us; Scripture and Tradition: we abhor the contempt which these partial Disputers cast upon Scripture; but we are not therefore fo partial our selves asto refuse any collateral or subordinate help for our faith. The more Testimonies, the better. The best of us have need of all the advantages for our faith that we can get. When they have extolled the Certainty of Tradition to the highest, we gladly joyn with them, and accept of any certain Tradition of the mind of God. And I advise all that would prove themselves wise defenders of the faith, to take heed of rejecting Arguments from Providences, or any necessary Testimony of man, especially concerning matter of fact, or of rejecting true Church History, because the Papists overvalue it under the name of Tradition, lest such prove guilty of the like partiality and injuriousness to the truth as the Papists are. And whereas the Papists imagine, that this must lead us to their Church for Tradition, I answer that in my next observation, which is,

2. We go beyond the Papilts in arguing for just Tradition of the Christian faith, and we make far greater advantage of it then they can do. For 1. They argue but from Authoritative Decision by the Pope, under the name of Church-Iradition (excepting the French Party) whereas we argue from true History and certain Antiquity, and prove what we fay.

Where note 1. That their Tradition is indeed no Tradition: for if it must be taken upon the credit of a man as supposed Infallible by supernatural (if not miraculous) endowment, this is not Tradition but Prophesie. And if they prove the man to be such a man, its all one to the Church whether he say that This was the Apostles destrine, or, This I deliver my self to you from God. For if he were so qualified, he had the power and credit of a prophet or Apostle himself. And therefore they must prove the Pope to be a Prophet, before their kind of Tradition can get credit: and when they have done that, there is no need of it: this their honest De. Holden was ware of, upon which he hath so handsomely canvassed them.

2. Note also that such as Dr. Holden, Cress, Vane, White and other of the French way that plead for Tradition, mean a quite other thing then the Jesuited Italian Papist meanes; and while they plead for universal Tradition, they come nearer to the Protestants, then to their Brethren, if they did not contradict themselves, when they have Jone, by making meer Romish Tradition to be universal.

3. Note also, that when Papists speak of Tradition confusedly, they give us just reason to call them to Define their Tradition, and tell us what they mean by it, before we dispute with them upon an ambiguous word; seeing they are so divided among themselves, that one party understands one thing by it, and another another thing; which we must not suffer these juglers to jumble together and consound.

2. Another advantage in which we go beyond the Papists for Tradition, is, that as we argue not from the meer pretended supernatural Infall bility or Authority of any, as they do, but from rational Evidence of true Antiquity; so we argue not from a set or party as they do, but from the Universal Church:

As far as the whole Church of Christ is of larger extent and greater credit then the Popish party, so far is our Tradition more Credible then theirs. And that is especially in three things.

1. The Papiss are sewer by far then the rest of the Christians in the world. And the testimony of many, yea of all, is more then of a part. 2. The Papilts above other parties have espoused an interest that leads them to pretend and corrupt Tradition, and bend all things to that interest of their own, that they may Lordi it over all the world: But the whole Church can have no such Interest and Partiality. 3. And the Papists are but one side; and he that will judge rightly, must hear the other sides speak too. But the Tradition that we make use of, is from all sides concurring; yea Papists themselves in many points.

Yea our Tradition reacheth surther then the Universal Church: for we take in all rational Evidence: even of Jews, Heathens, and Hereticks, and Persecutors, that bear witness to the matters of sack, and what was the doctrine and practice of the Christians in their times, and what Books they made the ground of their saith: so that as true Universal impartial naturally-or-rationally-infallible History or Testimony, different from a private, pretended-prophetical affertion, or from the Testimony of one party only; so doth our Tradition excell both the sorts of Popish Tradition, both that of the Papal, and that of the Courcill party. And now judge who may better boast of or extol Tradition, they or we; and to what purpose, Criss, White, and such men do bring their discourses of Tradition.

2. But yet we have not so done with them, till Tradition have given them their mortal stroak. You appeal to Tradition, to Tradition you shall go. But what Tradition mean you? The Tradition of the Catholick Church? And where is this to be found and known? but in the profession and practice of the Church, and in the Records of the Church. Well then! of both these let us enquire.

The first and great Question between you and us, is, Whether the Pope be the Head and Soveraign Ruler of the whole Catholick Church: and then whether the Catholick Church and the Roman. are of equal extent? What saith Tradition to this?

1: Let us enquire of the present Church: and there we have the profession and practice of all the Greek Church; the Syrians, the Moscovites, the Georgians, and all others of the Greek Religion dispersed throughout the Turks Dominions, with the Jacobites, Armenians, Egyptians, Abassines, with all other Churches in Europe, &c. that disclaim the Headship of the Roman Pope; all these do with one mouth proclaim that the Church of Rome is not, and ought not to be the Mistriss of the world, or of all other Churches, but that the Pope sor laying such a claim is an usurper, if not the AntiChrist. This is the Tradition of the Greeks; this is the Tradition of the Abassines: the sar greatest part of the Church on earth agree in this. Mark then what is become of the Roman Soveraignty, by the verdict of Tradition; even from the vote of the greatest part of the Church. Rome hath no right to its pretended Soveraignty. Babylon is saln by the judgement of Tradition.

If you have the faces again to say that all these are Hereticks or Schissmaticks, and therefore have no vote, weanswer. If a minor party, and that so partial and corrupt, seeking Dominion over the rest, may step into the Tribunal, and pass sentence against the Catholick Church, or the greatest part of it, blame not others, if on sar better grounds they do so by that part. And for shame do not any more hereaster use any such self-condemning words, as to ask any Sect, [How dare you condemn the Catholick Church? Do you think all the Church is for saken but you, &c?] And let us ask you, as you teach your followers to ask us, [If we must turn from the Universal Church to any Sect, why rather to yours then another? why not as well to the Anabaptists.

or other party, as to the Papists?

But your common faying is, that the Greeks, Protestants, and all the rest were once of your Church, and departing from it, they can have no Tradition but yours, for their spring is with you. To which we answer. I. The vanity of this your siction shall by and by be answered by it self. 2. You say so, and they say otherwise: why should we believe you that are a smaller, partial and corrupted part? 3. Well then let us go to former ages, seeing it is not the present Church whose voice you will regard (only by the way, I pray forget not, I. That you do ill then to call us still to the Judgement of the present Church, and dare not stand to it. 2. And that you do ill to perswade men that the greater part of the Church cannot err, if you sentence the greater part as Schifmaticks or Revolters.) But how shall we knowthe way and mind of the ages past? If by the present age. then the greater part giveth us in their sence against you. If by the Records of those times, we are content to hear the Testimony of these. And first when we look into the Antients themselves, we find them generally against you; and we find in that which is antiquity indeed no footsteps of your usurped Soveraignty; but a contrary frame of Government, and a consent of antiquity against it. 2. When we look into later History we find, how by the advantage of Romes temporal greatness and the Emperors residence there your greatness begun, and preparation was made to your usurpation, and how the translation of the Imperial Seat to Constantinople made them your Competitors, yea to begin in the claim of an universal Headship; and we find how it being once made a question, you got it by a murdering Emperor resolved on your side for his own advantage. We find that it was long, even till Hildebrands dayes, before you could get any great possession, for all this sentence. It would but be tedious here to recite our Historical Evidence: we refer you to what is done already by Goldastus and Bishop Usher de statu & success. Ecclesiar. and in his Answer to the Jesuits Challeng, and in his Discourse of the Antient Religion of Ireland, &c. specially by Blondel in his French Treatise of Primacy, and Dr. Field, and many others that have already given you the testimony of Antiquity. More then you can give a reasonable answer to, I have produced in my Book called the safe Religion. In plain English, instead of Apostolical Tradition for your Soveraignty; we find that eight hundred years after the dayes of Christ, you had not neer so much of the Catholick Church in your subjection, as you have now: that at four hundred, or five hundred, if not till fix hundred years after Christ you had no known part of the world that acknowledged your universal Soveraignty; but only the Latine Western Church submitted to the Pope as their Patriarch, and the Patriarch prima sedis, the first in order among the Patriarchs; and that before the dayes of Constantine and the Nicene Council, he was but a Pishop of the richest and most numerous Church of Christians : and we see no proof that of an hundred years after Christ he was any more then the chief Presbyter of a particular Church. If

If all this will not serve? we have National Evidences beyond all exception, that the Ethiopian Churches of Habassia, the Indians, Persians, &c. were never your subjects to this day. That England, Scotland, and Ireland here in your Western Circuits, were not only long from under you, but resisted you, maintaining the Council of Calcedon against you, and joyning with the Eastern Churches against you, about Easter day, &c. And that the Eastern Churches and many great Nations, (as Tendue, Nubia, &c.) that now are revolted, were never your subjects, and some of them had little to do with you.

And yet if all this will not serve, we have your own Consessions. I have essewhere mentioned some: Canus Loc. Theol. lib. 6. cap. 7. fol. 201. saith [Not only the Greeks, but almost all the rest of the Bishops of the whole world, have vehemently fought to destroy the Priviledge of the Church of Rome: and indeed they had on their side, both the Arms of Emperors, and the greater number of Churches: and jet they could never prevail to abrogate the Power of the one Pope of Rome] Mark here whether the Catholick Church was then your subjects, when the greater number of Churches, and most of the Bishops of the whole world, as well as the Greeks were against you, and vehemently sought against your pretended priviledges.

Rainerius (supposed) contra Waldenses Catal in Bibliotheca Patrum, Tom. 4. pag. 773. saith [The Churches of the Armenians, and Ethiopians, and Indians, and the rest which the Apostles converted, are not under the Church of Rome.] Read and blush, and call Baronius a parasite. What would you have truer or plainer? And what Controversie can there be, where so many Nations themselves are witnesses against you? And you may conjecture at the numbers of those Churches by what a Legate of the Popes that lived among them, saith of one Corner of them, saich à Vitriaco Histor. Orient. cap. 77. that the Churches in the Easterly parts of Asia alone exceeded in multitude the Christians both of the Greek and Latine Churches] Alas, how little a thing then was the Roman Catholick Church!

If all this were not enough, the Tradition of your own Catholick Church is ready to destroy the Papacy utterly. For that a General Council is above the Pope, and may judge him and depose him, and that is deside, and that its Heresie to deny it, and that all this is so sure that ne unquam aliquis peritorum dubitavit no wife man ever doubted of it, all this is the judgement of the General Council of Basil, with whom that of Constance doth agree: And whether these Councils were confirmed or not, they confess them lawfully called and owned, and extraordinary full: and fo they were their Catholick Church Representative; and so the Popes Soveraignty over the Council is gone by Tradition: but that's not the worst. For, if a free General Council should be called, all the Churches in the world must be equally there represented: And if they were so, then down went the usurped Head-ship of the Pope: For we are sure already that most of the Churches in the world are against it: and therefore in Council they would have the Major vote. And thus by the concession of the Roman Representative Catholick Church the Pope is gone by Tradition. So that by that time they have well confidered of the matter, me thinks they should be less zealous for Tradition.

CHAP. XXI.

Detect. 12. A Nother of the Roman frauds is this: They persuade menthat the Greeks, the Protestants, and all other Churches, were once under their Papal soveraignty, and have separated themselves without any just cause: and therefore we are all schismaticks; and therefore bave no vote in general Councils, &c.

A few words may serve to shew the vanity of this accusation.

1. Abundance of the Churches were so strange to you, that they had not any notable communion with you.

2. The Greek Churches withdrew from your Communion, but not from your subjection. If any of the Patriarcks or Emperours of Constantinople did for carnal ends at last submit to you, it was not till lately, nor was it the act of the Churches, nor owned, nor of long continuance. So that it was your Communion and not your subjection that they withdrew from.

2. And as for us of the Western parts, we answer you, 1. We that are now living, our Fathers, or our Grand-fathers, were not of your Church: and therefore we never did withdraw.

2. There

- 2. There were Churches in England before the Roman Power was here owned: And therefore if it was a fin to change, the first change was the fin, when they subjected themselves to you; and not the later, in which they returned to their ancient state.
- 3. And for the Germanes or English or whoever did relinquish you, they have as mood reason for it, as for the relinquishing of any other sin. If they did by the unhappiness of ill education or delusion, submit to the usurped Soveraignty of the Pope they had no reason to continue in such an error. Repentance is not a Vice, when the thing Repented of is a vice. Justifice therefore your usurpation, or else it is in vain to be angry with us for not adhering to the usurper, and the many corruptions that he brought into the Church.

CHAP. XXII.

Detect. 13. A Nother deceit that they manage with great confidence, is this; say they, If the Chirch of Rome be the true Church: then yours is not the true Church, and then you are Shifmaticks in separating from it: But the Church of Rome is the true Church; For you will confess it was once a true Church: when Paul wrote the Epistle to the Romans: and if it ceased to be a true Church, tell us when it ceased, if you can: If it ceased to be a true Church, it was either by herese, or Schism or Apostacy: but by none of these: therefore, &c.

Aman would think that children and women should see the palpable sallacy of this Argument; and yet I hear of sew that the learned Papists make more use of. But to by open the shame of it in brief I answer 1. The deceit lieth in the ambiguity of the word [Church.] As to our present purpose, observe that it hath these several significations. 1. It is taken oft in Scripture for one particular Church, associated for personal community on in Gods worship. And thus there were many Churches in a Countrey, as Judea, Galatia, &c. 2. It is taken by Ecclesiastical writers often for an Association of many of these Churches for Communion by their Passors; such as were Diocesan, Provincial,

Nationali

National Churches; whereof most were then ruled by Assemblies, where a Bishop, Archbishop, Metropolitan or Patriarck (as they called them) did preside. 3. It is taken oft in Scripture for the Body of Christ, the boly Catholick or Universal Church containing all true Believers as mystical, or all Prosessors of true faith as visible. 4. It is taken by the Papilts oft for one particular Church which is the Mistris or Ruler of all other Churches.

And now I come to apply these in answer to the argument. I. If the Question be of a true particular Church, we grant you that the Church of Rome was a true and noble Church. in the daies of Paul and long after; and thus Paul owneth it in his Epistle as a true Church. And to the question when it ceased to be a true Church: I answer, 1. What matter is it to us whether it be reasoned or, nor any more then whether Corinth. Ephesus, Colos, The Salmica, or Jerusalem be true Churches or ceased? In charity we regard them all: but otherwise what is it to the outh or salvation of the world, whether Rome or any one conese be yet a true Church, or be ceased? I know not , i whether there be any Church at Colofs or Philippi, or fome other places that had then true Chnrches: And doth it there. fore follow that I am not a true believer? what would you fav to such a fellow that should argue thus concerning other Churches, as these men do of Rome? and say, e.g. [If Philippi, be a true Church, then England are no true Churches, If it be net, when did it cease to be a true Church?] Would you not an-Swer him, What is it to me whether Philippi be a true Church or not? May not we and they be both true Churches? How prove you that? And whether it be ceased or not ceased, doth no whit concern my faith or salvation, further then as my charity is to be exercifed towards them 7 So say we of Rome: It was a true particular Church in the Apostles dayes. And if it be still a true Church what hinders but we may be so to? But whether it be so or not, is little to me. It concerneth not my faith or Salvation to know whether there be any such place as Rome on earth, or whether it were confumed long ago. If a man were so simple as to believe a report that Rome was destroyed by Charls of Bourbon, and never inhabited, or had a Pope since, he were but such a Heretick as Pope Zachary and Bishop Boniface made of Virgi. lius.

lius, for holding there be Antipodes (though further from the

2. And if you take the word [Church] in the second sence, for a Diocesan or Patriarchiall Church, or Association of Churches; supposing such forms proved warrantable, the same answer serveth as to the first.

3. But (to come to the true state of our Controversie) If by [atrue Church] you mean either of the two last, that is, I. The whole Universal Church: 0.2. A Mistris Church that must Rule all the rest, it was never such a true Church in

And therefore here we turn this argument of the Papills against themselves. If the Church of Rome were neither the thole Catholick Church, xor the Mistris of all other Churches when Paul wrote bis Epistle to them, then it is not so now, nor ought to be so accounted. But the former is proved: 1. That the Church of Rome was not the whole Catholick Church then, no man thats well in his wits can doubt, that reads what a Church there was at Ferusalem, what a Church at Ephesus, and Philadelphia, Smyrna, Thyatira, Laodicea, Cerisib, and abundance more. Prove that all or any of these were parts of the Church of Rome if you can. 2. Where doth Paul once name them either the Catholick Charch, or the Mistris or Ruler of all Churches? or give the least hint of any such thing? or mention any Pope among them whom the whole world was to take to be their Soveraign Head? Is it not an incredible thing that Paul (and all the Apostles) would forget to make any mention of this priviledge, or teach them how to use it, or teach other Churches their duty in obeying the Church of Rome, if indeed they had been made the Mistris Church? Men that can believe what they lift, may fay what they lift. But for my part I will never think so hardly of Panl and all the Apofiles, as to accuse them of so great oblivion or negligence. And therefore I conclude Rome was neither the Universal Church, nor the Mistris Church then (nor many an age after) and therefore it is not so to be accounted now. So that you see how easily this filly Argument shews its shame.

But (though it concern not our main question) I shall tell them further, that the Matter of the Roman Church must be distinguished from its New Political Form. For the Matter, so many of its members as are true Christians, are part of the. Catholick Church of Christ, though not the whole: And for the form, I. There is the form of its severall parts, and the form of the whole. The form of any parts of the Roman Church that are Congregations or particular Churches of true Christians, may make those parts true Churches: that is, there may be many a true Parish Church that yet live under the Papall Yoak. But as to the Politicall form of their Roman Catholick Church, as it is a Body Headed by one claiming an Universall Monarchy, so the form is false and Antichristian, and therefore the Church as Papall, must be denominated from this form; and can be no better.

And this is our true answer to the question, whether the Church of Rome be a true Church? There are I doubt not among them many a thousand true members of the Cathelick Church, and there may be true particular Churches among them, having true Pastors and Christian people joyned for Gods worship (though I doubt there is but sew of them but do scarfully pollute it: and I am consident that salvation is much more rare and difficult with them, then it is with the Resormed Catholicks; yet that many among them are true Christians and saved, I am fully perswaded, especially when I have read such writings as Gersons, Guil. Parisiens, Ferus, Kempis, &c.) And I think the better of Bellarmine himself for saying of Kempis de imitatione Christi [Egoterte ab adolescentia & usq; in senettam hoc opusculum sapissime volvi, & revolvi, & semper mibi novum apparuit. & nunc etiam mirisice cordimeo sasit. Bellarm. de Scriptor. Eccl.pag. 298.]

But the Pope as a pretended Universal Monarch is a false Head, and consequently their Papall Church, as such, is a false Antichristian Church, and no true Church of Jesus Christ.

And (by the way) I conceive you are thus to understand a clause in a late oath of Abjuration drawn up by the last Parliament to be offered to the Papists, viz. that [the Church of Rome is not the true Church] that is, 1. Not the whole Catholick Church, but part of it, as they are Christians. 2. Nor a true, Church at all as Papal, and so formally as the Now Somistic Church. But all this is little to our main Question.

CHAP. XXIII.

Detect. 14. A Nother great Endeavour of the Papists is, to make men believe that they only have a fixedness, unity, consistency and settedness in Religion: but we are fill at uncertainty and to feek, incoherent, not tyed together by any certain bond, but still upon divisions, and upon change: And they instance thus [A while ago you were Episcopal, and then Presbyterian, and now you are nothing, but every one goes his own way: A while ago you worshipped God in one manner, in Baptifing, Marrying, Burying, Common Prayer, the Lords Supper; and now you have all new. Where is the Church of England now? some of you are for one Government, and some for another : the Lutherans have superintendents, the Calvinifts are Presbyter uns: And what names of reproach do the Episcopal give the Presbyterians? and the Presbyterians take them to be Antichristian. Some of you are Arminians; some Calvinists; some lay Christ dyed for all, and some say xo; some are for fustification only by Christs Passive Righteonsness, and some also by his active; with other such differences even in these fundamentall points.]

I repeat their words just as I have heard they make use of them with the people, and now I shall open the deceit of them in particular Answers to each part.

And 1. For the matter of unity, I have spoken of it before, and dare leave it to all the world that are judicious, whether the Papists or we are more unanimous, or more divided. Only to the Instances of division, I shall speak further now. 1. For the matter of Church Government, we are all agreed in the substance of it (except a very sew straglers;) As concerning the duty of Penitence, Consession, Restitution, Contrition, and of the excommunicating the obstinate, and Absolving the penitent, &c. All this we agree is the duty of the Presbyters; and we agree that these Presbyters may have a President, only some think that the President is ejustem ordinis, of the same order, differing but in degree, and bath no power jure divine, but what the Presbyters have, but only the exercise is restrained as to the Presbyters, by men; but others think that the President is a Bishop eminently of another order, having not only the exercise, but the power above the Presbyters. And is this difference fo great a business? And do not these cheaters know, that if for this they would reproach us, they must do so by themselves? Know they not that among their own Schoolmen there is the same difference, or in most points the same? And know they not that if differences in Ceremonies or Modes should unchare h us, or difgrace us, it would fall as foul on the whole Catholick Church, and that in the very primitive times? Did they never read of the difference between the Asian and the Roman Churches. about the celebration of Easter day, and how Polycrates and the rest did plead Tradition against the Church of Romes Tradition; and how Irenans did reprehend the Bishop of Rome for his uncharitable censure of the Churches for so small a difference? And how Polycarp and Anicetus Bishop of Rome could not agree. as building upon contrary Traditions: but yet maintained Christian peace; as Ensebins out of Irenaus his Epistle to Victor tels us, lib.5. Hift. Eccl. cap. 26. And the English and Irish Churches long after that adhered to the Asian way; even after the Councill of Nice had ended the controversie on the Roman fide. And who knows not how many more controversies greater then these of ours have been among the Churches of Christ, without their unchurching or desparagement to Religion.

And for the Doctrinal Controversies mentioned, most of them lie more in words then in sence, and all of them are far from the soundation, though they be about Christ, who is the Foundation. If one of your picture-drawers mistake the complexion of Christ, or is one should say he was not buried in a sheet, these are errours about Christ that is the soundation, and yet far from the soundation. Those of us that say Christ dyed for all, and those that say he dyed not for all, do agree as your School-men do, that he dyed for all, as to the sufficiency of his death and price: but he dyed not for all as to the assmall efficiency of pardon and salvation: Is not this your doctrine? and is not this ours? and are not you as much disagreed about it as we? what else meant the late decision against the Jansenists? and what meaneth the present persecution of them in France? And yet have you the faces to make this a reproach of us? And for-the righteensness of Christ, we are commonly agreed that it is both his Obedience and Passion that we are justified and saved by: though we are not all of a mind about the reason of their several interests; which difference is so far from unchristening us, that it makes no considerable odds among our selves, who are censorious enough in cases of difference.

And for different forms of worship, sure these men do wilfully forget what a number of Offices and Mass books have been among themselves and other Churches? and what a number of Letanics or Liturgies of several ages and Churches they have given us in the Bibliotheca Patram: but more of this anon.

2. And as for the changes and unfixedness which they charge us with, we are contented that 1. Our principles. 2. And our practises be compared with the Papilts, and then let even modest and judicious enemies be judges which of us are more fixed, or more mutable.

I. For our Principles: we take only Christ to be the chief Foundation of our Faith, and his inspired Prophets and Apostles to be the secondary foundation: whereas the Papists build upon many a most ungedly ignorant man, because he is the Pope of Rome. And which of these is the firmer foundation?

2. We take nothing for our Rule but the fure word of God contained in the holy Scriptures: but the Papists take the Decrees of all Popes and Councils for their Rule: Our Rule they confess to be Divine and infallible: Their Rule we affirm to be humane and fallible. Which then is like to be more firm? Our Rule (the facred Scriptures in the Original languages, as to the words, and the matter of them, as to the sence) the Papists themselves confess unchangeable; but whether they will fay as much of their own, I will try by two or three Instances. 1. What an alteration Pope Sixtus, and Pope Clement made in the Vulgar Latine Bible, which is one part of their Rule, I told you before, and Dr. James his Bellum Pavale will tell you the particulars. 2. The other part is their Decrees, of which Pope Lee the tenth in Bulla contr. Luth. in Binnius, page 65 5. Saith [the holy Popes our predecessors never erred in their Canons and Constitutions] And yet hear what Pope Inline the second saith in his General Councillat the Laterane with their approbation, Cant. pragmat. Santt. monitor. Binnins, vol. 4. pag. 560. [Though the Institutions of sacred Canons, hely Fathers, and Popes of Rome—and their Decrees be judged immutable, as made by Divine Inspiration; yet the Pope of Rome, who, though of unequal merits, holdeth the place of the Eternal King, and the Maker of all things, and all Laws on earth, may abrogate these Decrees when they are abused.]

You see here from the mouth of Infallibility it self (if the Roman saith have any) of what continuance we may judge their Immutable Decrees to be of, which are made as by Divine inspiration; they are Immutable till the Pope abrogate them, who being in Gods place, though of unequal merits (O humble confession!) is of power to do it.

3. We have a Rule that was perfetted by (brist and his Apostles, to which nothing can be added, and therefore we are at a Certainty for our Religion: for we have a sure and perfect Rule from Heaven. Nothing may be added to it, or taken from it. But the Papists do 'profess that the Determinations of the Pope or Council may make a point (and so five thousand points, for there is no certain number) to be de fide articles of faith, and necessary to salvation, though not in se, yet quoad nos, as to us. (And what it is for a Law to be obligatory in se, and not quoad nos, is hard to understand.). So that the Papists never know when their faith is perfect and grown to its sull stature. For ought they know a thousand more Articles yet may be added. And yet these men of uncertain growing faith, have the face to perswade men that we are mutable, and they are fixed. You see our several Principles: now to our Practices.

For our part, I. We never changed our Head, our Lord, our Faith, or one Article of our Faith: if malice it self be able to charge us with changing the smallest Article of our Faith, let them say their worst: we change not our Rule, the holy Scriptures, nor one clause or sentence of it, but endeavour the preservation of the same, which at the first we received. In our contests with the Papists, our great offence is at their mutation from the antient Rule and way; we contend but for the saith once delivered to the Saints: the old may with usis the good may: we abhor a Religion that is new sprung up, or is less then one shouland five hundred and sifty years standing at least. If we change in any thing, it is but by repenting of our former change. ableness while our Nation was Popish; having then changed from the Apostolick simplicity, we change from that sinful change, and return to the antient way again. And if we have made any further changes since our first change at the Reformation, it is but a perfecting the change to Antiquity, and Apostolick simplicity which we then begun. Rome was not built in a day, and is not pulled down in a day. The work of Reformation is but one change, though it be not done all at one time. If we find some spots of Romish dire upon us, that escaped us at our first washing, it is no dangerous mutability yet to wash it off. If a man converted by faving grace be not per'ectly rid of all his former fin the first day of his Conversion, should be be reproached as mutable for striving against it all his life after, and 'casting it off' by degrees as he is able? If a man did but recover by degrees from the relicks of his disease, they will not therefore reproach him as mutab'e? If he sweep the dust or dirt out of his house every day, they will not fav. He is mutable and knows not where to rest. These men might as well reproach us as mutable, because we rise in the morning and do not still lie in bed; or because we go to bed at night, and do not stay up still.

But what is it that we are changeable in? we have changed none of the substance of worship : did we baptize before, and do we not to still? Did we pray or administer the Lords Supper before, and do we not so still? what is the change? why, 1. We before used the common Prayer book and now we do not. 2. Before we nsed prayers at the baria of the dead, which now are omitted. 3. Before we used the Cross and Surplice, and kneeled at the Sacra. ment, which are now omitted. And what then? therefore we have changed our Religion. Even as a man changeth his cloaths by brushing them, or his house by sweeping it, or his face by washing it. Do these men think us so sortish as to place our Religion, in these Circumstances? God hath bid us Pray continually : but he hath not told us whether we shall use a Prayer book or not, but left that to mens necessities or conveniences to determine of. And doth a man change his Religion or Worship of God, if he either begin or cease to use a Book? If any man had so little wit or Religion, as to place their Religion in a Prayer book, its no, great loss to them if they have lost their Religion, when the

Prayer book is taken from them. We doubt not but Prayer books are profitable to some, and hinderances to others: some should use them, and some should not : but whether we use them. or not use them, is no part of our Religion at all, but a meer Accident or common help and appurtenance. God hath not told preachers whether they shall use any Notes for their memory in Preaching: to one it is an binderance: to another an help. Doth a man change his Religion when he changeth a custome of using Notes? God hath not told us what Chapter we shall read. or what Pfalm we shall sing, or what Text we shall Preach on this day or that day. What if one age think it best that some Pastors give Laws to all the rest, that they shall read no Chapter? preach on no Text, and fing no P falm but by their direction: and the next age think it meeter to leave it to each Minister, as thinking it unfit to Ordain such Ministers that have not wit enough to choole their Text, or Chapter, or Pfalm according to occasions. Will you say that here is a change of Religion? These outside Hypocrites tell the world what a thing they take Religion to be. and in what they place it. What if one man usean hour-glass in preaching, and another use none? What if one read a Chapter with spectacles, and another without? or if one preach in a Pulpit, and another below : or if one preach in a white garmenr, or another in a black : or if one stand at the Sacrament, and another fit, and another kneel: Are we therefore of several Religions? or is this any part of the worship it self? Do we not all now either stand, fit, or kneel at the hearing of a Sermon, as we please? Do we not kneel or stand at Prayer as we please? Yea do not men commonly in finging Pfalms of Prayer or Praise to God, fit or stand as they please? And what if we do so at the Sacrament? Is it not all one? Or doth standing, kneeling or fitting make another Religion, or any part of it? And for Marrying, Burying, Baptizing, and the rest, we have altered no part at all of the worship of God; but order them in that manner as seemeth most convenient. What ignorant souls are these, that think that the using a Prayer book, or praying without book, or the using this gesture, or that, these words, or those words that are to the same sence, doth make different Religions or Ordinances of worship? These are tricks that none but the fortishly ignorant will be deluded with, that know not what Religion

Religion or worship is. They may as well say, If I change my Lecure-day from Thursday to Friday, that I change my Religion or the worsh'p of God. These are our great changes.

Well! will you now hear whether the Papists or we be the greatest Changlings? I. Some just changes they have made themselves, that they know well enough are as great as ours. It was so common in the antient Church to Prayonly standing on every Lords day, and not to kneel at all in any part of the worship of that day, that it was taken for an universal Tradition, and to kneel was taken for a great sin, and condemned by General Councils many hundred years after Christ; and yet the Church of Rome, and other Churches as well as we, have cast off this pretended Tradition, violated this Decree of General Councils, and for saken this universal Custom of the Church. And the Papists receive the Eucharist kneeling, for all this Law and Custome.

In the primitive Church, and in Tertullians dayes, a Common Feast of the Church was used with the Lords Supper, and the Sacrament taken then. But now this Custom is also changed. It was then the Custom to sing ex tempore in the Congregation to Gods praise. But now Rome it self hath no such Custom. It was once the Custom to give Infants the Lords Supper: but now Rome it self hath cast off that Custom. Once it was a Canon that Bishops must not read the books of Gentiles, (Concil. Carthag. 4.) which yet Poul made use of, and the Papists now do too much value. Abundance such changes might be mentioned, greater then ours, in which we are justified by the Papists themselves.

2. But they have yet other kind of changes then these. They have changed the very Essence of the Catholick Church (in their esteem;) they have changed the Officers, the Doctrine, the Discipline, the Worship, and what not, as though they had been born for change, to turn all upside down.

In the Primitive times, the Church had no universal Monarch but Christ: but they have set up a new universal Monarch at Rome

In the primitive times the Catholick Church was the Univerfality of Christians; and they have changed it to be only the subjects of the Pope.

In the Primitive times Rome was but a particular Church, as fe-

Ferufalem and other Churches were: but they have changed it, to be the Mistres of all Churches.

For many hundred years after Christ, the Scripture was taken to be a sufficient Rule of faith; but they have changed it to be but part of the Rule.

In the antient Church all forts were earnestly exhorted to read, or hear, and study the Scripture in a known tongue: but they have changed this into a desperate restraint, proclaiming it the cause of all Heresies.

In the antient Church the Bread and Wine was the Body and Blood of Christ Representative and Relative: but they have changed it into the real Body and Blood.

Heretofore there was Bread and Wine remaining after the words of Confecration: but they have changed so, that there remaineth neither Bread nor Wine, but the qualities and quantity, without the substance, and this must be believed, because they say it, against Scripture and Antiquity, and in despisht of sense it self.

In the antient Church the Lords Supper was administred in both kinds, bread and wine to all: but they have lately changed this into one kind only to the people, denying them one half of the Sacrament.

Of old the Lords Supper was but the Commemoration of the facrifice of Christ upon the Cross, and a Sacrament of our Communion with him and his members: but now they have changed it into a propitiatory facrifice for the sins of the quick and dead: and in it they adore a piece of Bread as very God, with Divine worship.

Of old, men were taught to make daily confession of sin, and beg pardon, and when they had done all, to confess themselves unprofitable servants: but now they are so changed, that they pretend not only to be persed without sin, and to Merit by the Condignity of their works with God, but to supererogate and be more persect then innocency could make them, by doing more then their duty.

Of old those things were accounted fins deserving Hell, and needing the blood of Christ for pardon, which now are changed into venial sins, which properly are no fins, and deserve no more then temporal punishment.

Qf.

Of old the Saints had no proper merits to plead for themselves; and now men bave some to spare for the buying of souls out of Purgatory.

Of old the Pastors of the Churches were subject to the Rulers of the Commonwealth; even every soul, not only for wrath, but for Conscience sake was obliged to be subject: but now all the Clergy are exempted from secular Judgement, and yet the secular power is subject to them: for the Pope hath power to depose Princes, and disposses them of their Dominions, and put others in their rooms, and dissolve the bonds of Oaths and Covenants, in which the subjects were obliged to them, and to allow men to murder them by stabbing, poysoning, &c. If you do not believe me, stay but till I come to it, and I shall give you yet some further proof.

Would you have any more of the Popish Changes? Why I might fill a volume with them. Should I but recite all the changes they have made in Doctrines, and all that they have made in Church Orders, and Discipline, and Religious Orders and their D.scipline, and in Worship, and Ceremonies, I should be over tedious: their very Liturgy or Mass-book bath been changed, and made by changes, such abundance of additions it hath had since the beginning of it. What changes Sixtus the sist, and Clement the eighth made in their Bibles, I told you before: as also what changes they have had in the election of their Popes.

And now I am content that any impartial man be judge whether Papists or the Reformed Churches are the more mutable and unsetled in their Religion? and which of them is at the greater

Detect. 15. A Nother fraud of the Papists, which they place not the least of their confidence in, is this:)
They perswade the people that our Church and Religion is but nem,) of the other dayes invention: and that their sis the only old Religion. And therefore they call upon us to give them a Catalogue of the prosessor our Religion in all ages; which they pretend we cannot do: and ask us where our Church was before Luther?

To this we shall give them once more a brief, but satisfacto. ry answer. I. We are so fully affured that the oldest Religion is the best, (since the date of the Gospell) that we are contented that our whole cause do stand or fall by this tryall. Let him be esteemed of the true Religion, that is of the oldest Religion. This is the main difference between us and the Papifts: We are for no Religion that is not as old as the dayes of the Apostles: but they are for the Novelties and Additions of Popes and Councils. Their own Polidore Virgil de Inven. Rerum, p. 410. lib 8. c. 4. calling us a Sect, doth give you a just description of us [Ita licentia pacta loquendi, &c. i.e. Having once got leave to speak, that sett did marvailously increase in a short time; which is called Evangelicall, because they affirm that no Law is to be received which belongeth to salvation, but what is given by Christ or the Apostles. Mark what they confess themselves of our Religion: And yet these very men have the face to charge us with Novelty; as if Christ and his Apostles were not of fufficient Antiquity for them. Our main quarrel with them is, for adding new inventions in Religion, and their principal business against us is to defend it, and yet they call theirs the old Religion, and ours the new.

Our Argument lieth thus. That which is most conform to the Dostrine and Prastice of Christ and his Apostles, is the truly Antient Religion and Church. But our Religion and Church is most conform to the dostrine and prastice of the Apostles: therefore it is the truly antient Religion and Church. The Major they will yield: For no older Religion is desirable, surther then as the Law of Nature and Moral Determinations of God are still in sorce. I suppose they will not plead for Judaism. For the Minor, we say our cause upon it, and are ready to produce our evidence for the Consormity of our Religion and Churches to the doctrine and practice of the Apostles.

That Religion which is most conform to the Holy Scriture is most conform to the doctrine and practice of Christ and his Apostles: But our Religion (and Churches) is most conform to the holy Scriptures: therefore, &c. They can say nothing against the Major, but that the Scripture is Insufficient without Tradition: But for that, 1. We have no Rule of faith but what is by themselves confessed to be true: They acknowledge Scripture to be the true word of God: So that the Truth of our Rule is Justified by themselves. 2. Let them shew us as good Evidence that their Additional Articles of faith or Laws of life came from the Apostles, as we do that the Scriptures came from them, and then we shall confess that we come short of them : Let them take the Controversies between us point by point, and bring their proof, and we will bring ours, and let that Religion carry it that is Apostolicall: But we are fure that by this means they will be proved Novelifts. For 1. Their Traditions in matter of faith superadded to the Scripture, are meer Hereticall or Erroneous forgeries, and they can give us no proof that ever they were Apostolicall. 2. The Scripture affirmeth its own sufficiency; and therefore excludeth their Traditions, 3. I shewed you how in their own General Council at Basil, the Scripture sufficiency was defended. 4. I have shewed you in my Book called the Safe Religion. that the ancient Fathers were for the sufficiency of Scripture. 5. Their Traditions are the opinions of a dividing fect, contrary to the Traditions or doctrine of the present Catholick Church: the far greater part of Christians being against them. 6. We are able to shew that the time was for some hundred years after Christ, when most of their pretended Traditions were unknown or abhorred by the Christian Church, and no such things were in being among them. 7. And we can prove that the chief points of Controversie mantained against us, are not only without Scripture, but against it, and from thence we have full particular evidence to disprove them. If the Scriptures be true, as they confess them to be, then no Tradition can be Apoltolicall or true that is contrary to them: For example: the Papifts Tradition is, that the Clergy is exempt from the Magistrates judgement: But the holy Scripture saith [Let every Soulbe Subject to the higher power, Rom. 13. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. The Papills Tradition is for serving God publickly in an unknown tongue. But the holy Scripture is fully against it. Their Tradition is against Ley mens reading the Scripture in a known tongue, without special License from their ordinary: But Scripture and all antiquity is against them. The like we may say of many other Controversies.

So that these seven wayes we know their Traditions to be Q 3 deceit.

deceitfull; because they are 1. Unproved. 2. Against the sufficiency of Scripture. 3. Against their own sormer confessions. 4. Against the concent of the Fathers. 5. Contrary to the judgement of most of the Catholick Church. 6. We can prove that once the Church was without them. 7. And they are many of them contrary to express Scripture.

And if Scripture will but shew which of us is neerest the doctrine and practice of the Apostles, then the controversie is ended, or in a fair way to it: For we provoke them to try the cause by Scripture, and they deny it: we profess it is the Rule and test of our Religion; but they appeal to another Rule and test. And thus you may see which is the old Religion: which will be somewhat fullyer cleared in that which followeth.

II. And that our Church and Religion hath been continued from the dayes of Christ till now, we prove thus. I. From the promise of Christ, which cannot be broken. Christ hath promised in his word, that that Church and Religion which is most conform to the Scripture, shall continue to the end: But our Church and Religion is most conform to the Scripture: therefore Christ hath promised that it shall continue to the end.

2. From the event. The Christian Religion and Catholick Church hath continued from the dayes of Christ till now. But ours is the Christian Religion, and Catholick Church : therefore ours hath continued from the dayes of Christ till now. The Major they will grant: the Minor is proved by parts; thus. 1. That Religion which hath all the Effentials of Christianity. and doth not deny or deliroy any Essential part of it, is the Christian Religion: but such is ours: therefore, &c. 2. That Religion, which the Apostles were of, is the Christian Religion: But ours is the same that the Apostles were of: therefore, &c. 3. That Religion, which is neerer the Scripture then the Romiff Religion, is certainly the Christian Religion: But so is ours: therefore, &c. 4. They that believe not only all that in particular that is contained in the Ancient Creeds of the Church, but also in generall all that is besides in the holy Scripture, are of the Christian Religion: But thus do the Reformed Churches believe, &c.

2. And for our Church; 1. They that are of that one holy Catholick Church, whereof Christ is the head, and all true Christians are members, are of the true Church: (For there is but one Catholick Church:) But so are we: therefore, &c.

2. They that are Sanctified, Justified, have the love of God in them, are members of the true Catholick Church: But such are all that are sincere Professors of our Religion: therefore, &c.

But all this will not ferve them without a Catalogue, and telling them where our Church was before Luther: To this we further answer; we have no peculiar Catholick Church of our own; for there is but one, and that is our Church: Wherever the Christian Church was, there was our Church. And wherever any Christians were congregate for Gods worship, there were Churches of the same sort, as our particular Churches. And wherever Christianity was, there our Religion was: For we know no Religion but Christianity. And would you have us give you a Catalogue of all the Christians in the world, since Christ? Or would you have us as vain as H. T. in his Manuall, that names you some Popes, and about twenty professors of their faith in each age, as if twenty or thirty men were the Catholick Church: Or as if those men were proved to be Papists by his naming them? This is easie, but filly disputing.

In a word, Our Religion is Christianity. 1. Christianity hath certain Essentials, without which no man can be a Christian; and it hath moreover many precious truths, and duties necessary necessitate pracepti, and also necessitate medii, to the better being of a Christian. Our being as Christians is in the former; and our strength and increase and better-being is much in the latter. From the former, Religion and the Church is denominated. Moreover, 2. Our implicite and actuall explicite Belief (as the Papists callthem) must be distinguished; or, our General and our particular Belief. 3. And also the Positives of our Belief must be distinguished from the implyed Negatives; and the express Ar-

And now premising thesethree distinctions, I shall rell you where our Church liath been in all Ages since the birth off Christ.

1. In the dayes of Christ and his Apostles our Church was where they and all Christians were: And our Religion was with with them in all its parts, both Essential and perfective. That is, we now Believe 1. All to be true that was delivered by the Aposlles as from God, with a General faith, 2. We believe all the Essentials and as much more as we can understand, with a Particular faith. 3. But we cannot say that with such a particular faith we believe all that the Aposlles believed or delivered; for then we must say that we have the same degree of understanding as they; and that we understand every word of the Scriptures.

2. In the dayes of the Apossles themselves, the Consectaries, and implied Verities, and Rejections of all Herefies were not particularly and expressly delivered either in Scripture or Ira-dition (as the Papills will confess.)

3. In the next ages after the Apossles, our Church was the one Catholick Church, containing all true Christians, Headed by Jesus Christ: and every such Christian (too many to number) was a member of it. And for our Religion, the Essential parts of it were contained both in the Holy Scriptures, and in the Publick Professions, Ordinances, and Practices of the Church in those ages, (which you call Traditions:) and the rest of it, even all the doctrines of faith and universal Laws of God, which are its persective parts, they were fully contained in the holy Scriptures. And some of our Rejections and Consecutives, were then gathered and owned by the Church, as Heresies occasioned the expressing of them: and the rest were all implyed in the Apostolical Scripture doctrine which they preserved.

4. By degrees many errors crept into the Church: yet so, that 1. Neither the Catholick Church, nor one true Christian (in sensu composito at least) did reject any essential part of Christianity. 2. And all parts of the Church were not alike corrupted with error, but some more, and some less. 3. And still the whole Church held the holy Scripture it self, and so had a perfect General or Implicite belief; even while by evill consequences they oppugned many parts of their own pro-

5, When in process of time by claiming the universall Soveraignty, Rome had introduced a new pretended Catholick Church, (fo

(so far as their opinion took) by superadding a New Head and form, there was then a twofold Church in the West; the Christian as Christian headed by Christ; and the Papal as Papal Headed by the Pope; yet so as they called it but one Church; and by this usurped Monarchy as under Christ endeavoured to make but one of them, by making both the Heads Essential, when before one only was tolerable. And if the Matter in any part may be the same, and the same Man be a Christian and a Papist, and so the same Assemblies: yet still the forms are various: and as Christians and part of the Catholick Church, they are one thing: and as Papists, and members of the separating sett, they are another thing. Till this time there is no doubt of our Churches Visibility.

6. In this time of the Romish Usurpation, our Church was visible in three degrees, in three severall sorts of persons.

1. It was visible in the lowest degree among the Papists themselves, not as Papists, but as Christians. For they never did to this day deny the Scriptures, nor the Ancient Creeds, nor Baptism, the Lords Supper, nor any of the substance of our Positive Articles of Religion. They added a New Religion and Church of their own, but still professed to hold all the old in consistency with it.

Wherever the truth of holy Scriptures and the ancient Creeds of the Church were professed, there was our Religion before Luther: But even among the Papists the holy Scriptures and the said Creeds were (visibly) professed: therefore among them was our Religion.

And note here that Popery it self was not ripe for a corruption of the Christian saith professed, till Luthers opposition heightned them. For the Scripture was frequently before, by Papists held to be a most sufficient Rule of saith, (as I shewed before from the Council of Basil:) and consequently, Tradition was only pleaded as conservatory and expository of the Scripture; but now the Council of Trent hath in a fort equalled them. And this they were lately driven to, when they sound hat out of Scripture they were unable to consute or suppress the truth.

2. At the same time of the Churches oppression by the Papacy, our Religion was visible (and so our Church:) in a more illustrious fort, among the Christians of the most of the world,

Greeks, Ethiopians, and the rest, that never were subject to the usurpation of Rome, but only (many of them) took him for the Patriarch prima sedis, but not Episcopus Ecclesia Catholica. or the Governour of the Universall Church. So that here was a visibility of our Church doubly more eminent then among the Romanists: 1. In that it was the far greatest part of the Catholick Church that thus held our Religion, to whom the Papists were then but few. 2. In that they did not only hold the same Positive Articles of faith with us, but also among their Rejections, did Reject the chief of the Popish errors as we do. Besides many particular points named in my Safe Religion they Rejected with us, the Popes Catholick Monarchy, the pretended Infallibility of the Pope or his Councils: the new form of the Papall Catholick Church, as Headed by him, with other fuch points; which are the very fundamentall controversies between us and the Papists. So that (besides that the Papists themselves profess our Religion), the major part of the Catholick Church did professit, with the Rejection of the Papacy and Papall Church : and so you may as easily see where our Religion was before Luther, as where the Catholick Church, or most of Christians. were before Lather.

3. And beside both these, our Religion was prosessed with a yet greater Rejection of Romish corruptions, by thousands, and many thousands that lived in the Western Church it self, and under the Popes nose, and opposed him in many of his ill endeavours against the Church and truth, together with them that gave him the hearing, and were glad to be quiet, and gave way to his tyranny, but never confented to it.

Concerning these we have abundant evidence, though abundance more we might have had, if the power and subtilty of the Papall saction had not had the handling of them. 1. We have abundance of Histories that tell us of the bloody wars and contentions that the Emperours both of East and West have had with the Pope to hinder his tyranny; and that they were forced by his power to submit to him, contrary to their former free prosessions. 2. And we have abundance of Treatises then written against him, both for the Emperours and Princes, and against his doctrine and tyranny: some store of them Goldastus hath gathered: And intimations of more you have in their own expurgatory Indices. 3. And we have the histories and professions of the Albigenses, Waldenses, Bohemians and others that were very numerous, and if Raynerius fay true, they affirmed (about the year one thousand one hundred) that they had coutinued fince the Apostles, and no other Originall'of them is proved. 4. Particular evidence unanswerable is given in by Bishop Wher de Succes. & statu Eccl. and Answer to the Jesuites, and the Ancient Religion of Ireland, and in Dr. Field, and Morneyes Myfferie of Iniquity, and of the Church, and Illyricus, and many others. 5. Even Generall Popish Councils have contended, and born wieness against the Popes superiority over a Councill. 6. And in that and other points whole Countreyes of their own are not yet brought over to the Pope. 7. They have still among themselves Dominicans, Jansenists, &c. that are reproached by the Jesuites as fiding with Calvin in many Controversies, as Catharinus and many more in others. Most points of ours which we oppose to Popery, being maintained by some or other of them. 8, But the fullest evidence is, the certain history or knowledge of of the case of the common people and Clergy among them, who are partly ignorant of the main matters in Controversies hetween us (as we see by experience of multitudes for one, to this day) and are generally kept under the fear of fire, and sword, and torments; so that the truth of the Case is this: the Roman Bishops were aspiring by degrees to be Arch-bishops, and so to be Patriarchs, and so to have the first seat and vote, and to be called the Chief Bishops or Patriarchs, and at last they made another thing of their office, and claimed (about fix hundred years or more after Christ) to be universal Monarchs or Governours of all the Church: But though this claim was foon laid, it was comparatively but few even in the West, that made it any Article of their faith; but multitudes fided with the Princes that would have kept the Pope lower, and the most of the People medled not with the matter, but yielded to necessity, and gave place to violence, except such as the Albigenses, Bohemians, Wickles is and the rest that more openly opposed. So that no man could judge of the multitude clearly, which fide they were on, being forced by fire and fword, and having not the freedom to profess their minds.

So that in summ, our Religion was at first with the Apostles, and the Apostolick Church: and for divers hundred years after, it was with the universal Christian Church: And since Romes usurpation, it was even with the Romanists though abused, and with the greater part of the Catholick Church that renounced Popery then, and so do now; and also with the opposers of the Pope in the West under his own nose. You see now what Succession we plead, and where our Church and Religion still was.

with the Greeks, Abassines, and most of the Christian world, (yea all that is truly Christian) I easily prove it. 1. They that are Christians joyned to Christ the Head, are all of the same Church and Religion (for none else are Christians or united to Christ, but the Church which is his Body) But the sincere Greeks, Abassines, &c. and we are Christians united to Christ the Head: therefore we are all of one and the same Church and Religion.

2. They that believe the same holy Scripture, and differ in no essential part of the Christian faith, are of the same Church and Religion: but so do both we and all true Christians: therefore we are all of one Church and Religion.

3. They that are truly regenerate, and Justified, hating all known fin, longing to be perfect, Loving God above all, and feeking first his Kingdom and Righteousnels, and accounting all things but as dung in comparison of Christ, these are all of the true Catholick Church, and the true Christian Religion: but such are all that are fincere, both of the Greeks, Abaffines, Ge. and the Reformed Churches; as we prove, 1. To others by our Profession and Practice, by which only they are capable of judging of us. 2. To ourselves infallibly against all the Enemies of our falvation in Hell or Earth, by the knowledge and acquaintance with our own hearts, and the experience of the work of God upon them. All the Jesuites in the world cannot perswade me that I love not God, and hate not sin, and prefer not the Love of Christ before all the world, when I feel and know that I do; till they can prove that they know my heart better then I do.

4. If Christ Consent to it, and we Consent to it, then we are all (that are sincere in their profession) of the true Catholick Church and Religion (for if he consent and we consent, who is there that is able to break the match?) But Christ consenteth, and we consent: as we prove by parts. 1. His consent is expressed in his Gospel, that whoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life; and whoever will, may drink of the water of life freely. 2. And our consent we openly professed at Baptisme, and have frequently renewed, and our own souls are acquainted with the sincerity of it, whatever any that know not our hearts may say against it.

5. All that are truly Baptized, and own their Baptismal Covenant, are visible members of the true Catholick Church: (For it is the very nature and use of Baptisme to enter us into that Church:) But Greeks, Abassines, Georgians, Armenians, Sec. and Protestants, are all truly Baptized, and own their Baptismal Covenant: therefore we are all of the true Catholick

Church.

What is ordinarily said against ebis succession of our Church, I have answered in my safe Religion. I now add an answer to what another, viz...H. Turbervile in his Manuall saith against us in the present point. The caliness of his Arguments, and the open vanity of his exceptions, will give me leave to be the shorter in confuting them.

His first Argument (pag. 43.) is this. [The true Church of God hash had a continued Succession from Christ - But the Protestant Church, and so of all other Sectaries, bath not a continued Succession from Christ to this time : therefore, &c. 7 Answ. 1. I pray thee Reader be an impartial Judge what this man or any Papist ever said with sense and reason, to prove that the Eastern and Southern Churches have no true Succession. Let them talk what they please of their Schisme, the world knows they have had as good a Succession as Rome. Are they not now of the same Church and Religion as ever they have been? All the change that many of them have made, hath been but in the entertaining of some sopperies, common to Rome and them. And if any of these (which you call Sectaries) can prove their Succession, it destroyes your Argument and Cause. Me thinks you should not ask them, where their Church was before Luther?

2. But how doth this Disputer prove his Minor, that we have no Succession? Only by a stark falshood: for sooth [by the Concession of the most Learned Adversaries, who freely and unanimously Confess, that before Luther made his separation from the Church of Rome for nine hundred or one thousand years together, the whole world was Catholick, and in obedience to the Pope

Answ. O horrid boldness! that a man that pleads for the sanctity of his Church, dare thus speak so notorious an untruth. in the face of the world! At this rate of Disputing, the man might have faved the labour of writing his Book, and have as honestly at once have perswaded his Disciples, that his Adverfaries unanimously confess that the Papists cause is best. What if the fifteen cited by him had faid fo, when I can bring him one thousand five hundred of another mind, and cite him fifteen for one of another mind, is that the unanimous confession of his Adversaries? But unless his Adversaries were quite beside themselves, there is not one of them could say as he seigneth them to fay. For doth not the world know, that the Eastern and Southern Churches, far exceeding the Romanists in number, did deny obedience to the Pope of Rome? Would this perfwade his poor Disciples that we all confess, that there are, or were no Christians in the world but Protestants and Papists? His first cited Confession is Calvins [that all the Western Churches have defended Popery 7 A fair proof! Doth this Difputer believe in good sadness, that the Western Churches are all the world, or a fixth part of the world? But this is the Popill arguing. What Calvin speaks of the Western Churches, that is, the prevailing power in each Nation of them, he interprets of all the world. So he deales with Dr. White, who expressy in the words before those which he citeth, affirmeth the visibility of the Churches of Greece, Ethiope, Armenia, and Rome; but only faith, that at all times there hath not been visible diftine companies free from all corruption: which one would think every penitent man should grant that knows the corruption of his own heart and life. It would be redious to stand to shew, his odious abuse of the rest: when they that say most of the word [world] but as it is used. Luk. 2. 1. so much of his first argument.

His

His second is this. Without a continued number of Bishops, Priests, Laicks, succeeding one another in the profession of the same faith from Christ and his Apostles to this time, a continued succession cannot be had: But Protestants have no continued number, &c.

Answ. And how proves he the Minor? No how at all; but puts us to disprove it; and withall gives us certain Laws, which we will obey when they grow up to the bonour of being reaforable. His first Law is that We must name none but only such as held explicitely the thirty nine Articles, all granting and denying the same points that the late Protestants of England granted or denyed - for if they differ from them in any one materiall point, they cannot be esteemed Protestants] Answ. A learned Law! And what call you [a material point?] You may yet make what you lift of it. If they differ in any point Essentiall to Christianity, we grant your imposition to be necessary. But there is not the least Chronologicall, or Geographicall, or other truth in Scripture, but is a Materiall Point, though not Essential. Must you needs know which these Essentials are? In a word: Those which the Apostles and the ancient Church pre-required the knowledge and profession of, unto Baptism. And because all your fond exceptions are grounded on this one point. I shall crave your patience, while I briefly, but sufficiently prove that Men that err, and that in points materiall, may yet be of the same Church and Religion.

Argum. 1. If men that err in points material (that is, precious truths of God, which they ought to have believed.) may yet be true Christians and hold all the Essentials of Christianity: then may they be of the same true Church and Religion: But the former is true: therefore so is the later. The Antecedent is proved, in that all truths which may be called Ma.

teriall, are not of the effence of Christianity.

Argum. 2. The Apostle Thomas erred in a Materiall point (which is now an essential) when he would not believe Christs Resurrection: and yet was a member of the true Church: therefore, &c.

Argum. 3. The Papills err in material points, and yet think themselves of the same true Church: therefore they must confess that differing in Material points may be the case of members of the same true Church. For proof of the Minor, I demand:

Are

Are none of the points Material that have been so hotly agitated between the Jesuites, and Dominicans and Jansenists? the Papall party, and the Councill party? The Thomists, Scotists, Ochamists, &c. At least review the Jesuite Casuists cited by the Januais Mysterie of Jesuitism; and rell us whether it be no whit Material Whether a man may kill another for a Crown? or may kill both Judge and witnesses to avoid an unjust sentence? Or whether a man should go with good meanings into a Whorehouse to perswade them to penitonce, that hath found by experience that when be comes there he is naught with them himself ? Or whether a man may lawfally lie and calumniate to put by a calumny? Or speak fally with mentall reservations? Or forbear loving God many years together, of not all his life? Are these points no whit Material? You know that one part of you (with a Pope and General Council) are for deposing Heretical Kings. and murthering and stabbing them, and others of you disavow it: Is this no whit material? And yet you are all of one Church and Religion. A bundred more of your differences I could name.

Argum. 4. Frominstances of the Fathers that bave erred in Material points, and yet are taken to be of the same Church and Religion. How many Churches differed about Easter day? what abundance of errors are in your Clementines, and other such writers owned by you? Instin Martyr was a Millenarie: Numbered divers Infidels with Christians: thought that Angels lived by meat, and generated with Devils, &c. Athenagoras thought that second Marriages were comely Adultery and that the Angels fell by the love of women, and begot Gyants of them, &c. Irenans hath the like: Theophilus Antioch, worfe: Terenllian and Orrigen you will confels had yet worse, Clem. Alexand. was for the salvation of Infidels and Heathens: against swearing and many such, besides those before mentioned. Greg. Thaumaturgus hath divers, if the confession and other works be his that are ascribed to him. Cyprian, Firmilian, and the whole Council at Carthage were for rebaptizing those baptized by hereticks; Against all Wars and Oaths Lactantins (with many more) was a Millenary, and hath too many great errors. I have no delight to rake into their faults; but if it be necessary I shall quickly prove many and great errors by fourty more of them at the leaft. And yet all these or most, are confessed by you to be of one Church and

Argum. 5. From your own Confessions. Bellarmine, lib. 1. de Beat. SS cap. 6. saith that he feeth not bow the fentence of Justin, Irenæus, &c. can be defended from error. Of Tertullian he saith, There's no trust to be given to bim: lib. 4. de Rom. Pont. c. 8. Eusebius he saith was addicted to the Hereticks. Cyprian he saith did seem to sin mortally: de Rom. Pont. lib. 4. cap, 7. Augustine is accused by many Jesuites for going too far from Pelagius. Hierom is ost pluckt by you. And so are many more of the Fathers. And yet you confess some of them at least were of the true Church and Religion.

Argum. 6. If there be no perfect concord to be expected till we come to the place of perfect knowledge and happiness, then it is not perfect concord, that is recessary to prove us of the same Church or Religion But the Antecedent is alas too far past

Argam. 7. If the godly and learned Doctors of the Church (and all men) have some (alas how many) culpable errors in matters of Religion (yea of faith, if you call that de side, which we are obliged to believe) then those that have such errors may be of the same Church and Religion: But the Antecedent is so true and evident that I think none but a blind proud Pharisee will deny himself to beg of God daily to pardon and heal his culpable errors. So much to prove that men of errors and differing minds (if not about the essence of the Church) may be of the same Church.

2. But why is it that they must all needs explicitely hold the thirty nine Articles? 1. I pray you tell us, whether all your own Church do explicitely hold and believe all your Articles? that is, all that Popes and General Councils have defined or declared. Dare you say that one of five hundred, of five thousand, doth explicitely believe all this? And why then is it necessary in our case that all must explicitely believe all those Articles? 2. Yea with us it is far more unnecessary. For we take not those Articles for the Rule of our faith, but only the holy Scripture: And therefore you may as well tell us that no man is of our Religion, that did not write or speak all the same words that Jewell, Reignolds, Perkins, or such other have written in their whole works. 3. Its easie to prove for all that, that the sense and substance of those Articles have been owned by the Churches in all ages.

3. But what if we grant your conclusion, that [else they cannot be esteemed Protestants] what of that? As if none but Protestants were of the same Church and Religion with us. Sure you think we make a sect of our selves like you, and exclude all others from the Church and Salvation as you do! The word [Protestant] is not the first denomination of our Religion from its estence; for so we call our selves [Christians] only; But it is a title that accidentally accrewed to our Religion, from our Protesting against your innovations and corruptions; and our Rejecting the errors contrary to our Religion which you had introduced. Now those that were not involved in your errors as our forestathers were, but lived at a further distance from you, might have no occasion to make such a Protestation; and yet be of the same Church and Religion as we are.

Now to your particular Laws. I. Saith H.T. [Let him not name the Waldenses: for they held the Real presence, that the Apostles were Lay men, that all Magistrates fall from their dignity by any mortal sin, that it is not lawful to swear, &cc. and

Answ. I. We have better affurance of the faith of the Waldenses in their own published Confessions, then from the mouth of their Adversaries. 2. The Lutherans hold the real presence, and yet are of the same Religion and Church with us. 3. The Apostles were Lay-men in the Jews account and sense, as not being Priests or Levites, but not in Christians account that believed their mission: and thus thought the Waldenses. 4. They thought that Magistrates and Ministers do by Mortal sin forfeit all the right and title to their office, from which themselves may have comfort and justification in judgement: But they never thought that they were not to be obeyed by others, or that their actions were not valid for the Churches good. 5. Many of the ancientest Fathers thought it unlawfull to swear at all, that yet are cited by you as of your Church. But the Waldenfes are slandered in these points. 6. Though Waldo was but about one thousand one hundred and fixty, yet the same Religion and Church under other names, and before those names were fastned on them, was much elder, as Ragnerius may satisfie you. So that for all this, the Waldenses and we are of one Church and Religion.

He adds [Let him not name the Hussites, for they held Mass, Transabstantiation and seven Sacraments, that the universal Church consisted only of the predestinate, &c. 7 Answ. O what a fort of men have we to deal with? The Council of Constance burnt John Hus, to ashes for saying that there remained the substance of Bread and Wine after Consecration, and that Transub. Stanciation was a new word to deceive men with as Binnius himfelf expresseth among their accusations of him: And among the articles for discovery of the Hussites, one was Whether they take it to be a mortall fin to reject the Sacraments of Confirmation, extream unction and marriage.] And yet now Huss is burnt for it, the poor lay-Papists are perswaded by their deceivers, that the Hussiles were for Transubstantiation and seven Sacraments. Why then did a General Council accuse or receive accusation and witness against him for the contrary? 2. That the universal Church as invisible, and as taken in the first fignification, containeth none but the truly sanctified (and so predestinate) we believe as well as Hus: though in the fecond Analogical fignification, the Church as visible, containeth all the Professors of faith and Holiness, whether fincere or not. 3. And that they were condemned by the Council of Constance, and Huss and Hierom burnt after they had a fafe conduct, doth shew that the faith of Papists is perfidiousnels, (for why should the people be more just then a General Council?) but it shews not that we and they are not of the same Church or Religion: you condemned and burnt those of our Religion too: therefore you thought at least that we are neer kin.

But H.T. proceeds with his precepts [Let him not name the Albigenses: for they held all marriages to be unlawfull, and all things begotten ex coitu to be unclean: They held two Gods, &c.] Answ. These are not only such falshoods by which you uphold your cause, but the more inexcusable and shameless, by how much the more frequently and fully detected long ago, and yet continued in. Perrin, Viguerius and many others might have prevented your error: especially Bishop Osher de Succes. Eccles.

cap. 6, 7, 8, 9, & 10. who hath given you enough out of your own writers to have satisfied you; and shewed you, that it was from the Arrians and Manichees, inhabiting those Countreyes among them, that the heavy charges of Bernard. Eckberius Schonaugiensis and others were occasioned. And see by him there cited what the same Bernard saith against your Church of Rome, and then judge which he spoak hardlier of.

As for the Catharits next added, they were not the Puritan Waldenses as you speak, but part of the Manichees: and if such as they are described, we are content to lose their names, and are

He adds Let kim not name the Wicklistans: for they held: that all things came to pass by fatall necessity; That Princes and Magistrates fell from their dignity and power by mortall sin. Answ. We know by many of wicklifs own books printed and manuscript what his judgement was, what ever your Council at Constance accuse him of. It was a Divine Necessity opposed to uncertainty, and to the determination of an unruled will, that he mentioneth. And do not your Jesuites lay as heavy a charge on the Dominicans sometimes? and with as great cause may many of your Schoolmen be disclaimed for this as Wicklife, if you will understand him; and them. Wicklife was known toobey and teach obed ence to Magistrates. But is it not a fine world, when wicklife must not be of our Church because he is supposed. to deny the power of Magistrates in mortal sin? and yet the Pope and his Council determine that Princes or Lords that will not root out such as the Pope cals Hereticks must be cast out, and their Countrey given to others. It seems you take Wicklife to be some kin to your selves. But we doubt not but he was of the Catholick Church and Religion, and therefore of the same with us.

H.T. adds [Let b'm not name the Grecians: for they rej Eted the Communion of Protestants. Censur. Eccl. Ocient. They nere at least seven hundred or eight hundred year in Communion with the Church of Rome. — they were united to the Church of Rome again in the Council of Florence: They held Transubstantiation. seven Sacraments, unbloody Sacrifice, Prayer to Saines, and for these dead.

Answ If one Patriark, or twenty men rejict our Communion, whats that to the Millions of Greek Christians that never rejected it? And whats that to all Patriarcks before and after that rejected it not? Did Cyril reject our Communion. that hath published a Protestant consession, and was so maligned, and treacherously dealt with to the death, and falfly accused to the Turks by the Jesuites, for his constancy? 2. Do you think the world knoweth not by what inducements you drew a few poor men at Florence to subscribe to a certain union with you? and what death the Patriark dyed? and how the Greeks refented his fact? and what a return they made to your Church? I pray perswade your selves that they and we and all are Papists. 3. If the Greeks did disclaim Communion with us, they are nevertheless of the same Church and Religion with us, for all that. Paul and Barnabas were both Christians when they parted in diffention. If one ne ghbour in anger call another Traitor unjustly, and say he will have no Society with him, they may be both the Kings subjects and members of one Common wealth for all that. 4. As to the Greeks opinions, and the Papists false accusations of them, I have spoken already against pretended Veridicus in my Safe Religion. It is not you nor all the Jesuites on earth that can prove the Greeks and us to be so distant, as not to be of the same Catholick Religion and Church.

You add [Let him not name the Egyptians: for they held Transubstantiation and unbloody Sacrifice, as is manifest by their Liturgies; but denyed the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Son, and held but one will in Chrift. Godignus de reb. Abas. lib. 1. cap. 28.] Answ. 1. Godignus talks not of the Egyptians but the Abassines. This learned man it seems, is so home-bred, and confined to the Roman Church, that he little regardeth the rest of the Christian world; or else he would have known a difference between the Egyptians and Abassines: He is likely to know well the true Catholick Church that while. 2. You cannot prove that they hold Transubstantion. Nor shall your bare naming their Liturgy make us believe it. The Egyptian Liturgy you tell us not where to find, nor I suppose do you know your selves. An Ethiopick Liturgy your compilers of the Bibliotheca Patrum have given us, Tom. 6. But 1. It hath nomention of Transubstantiation in it, that I can find, but only a

Elia

Hoc est Corpus, &c. which we say in our Administration as well as they. 2. And I find that Liturgy fo contrary to the reports , of your own writers concerning the practice of the Ethiopians. (as about the Elevation, Confirmation, &c.) that I must needs conclude, that either the Liturgy or much of it is forged, or that the generality of your own Relators of their practice are grofly deceived, and do deceive, (which is not likely, because they are many, and write at feveral times, and it is against themfelves.) 3. And as for the procession of the Holy Ghost, and the denjal of two wills in Christ, some of your own writers profels, that the former in the Greeks, and the later in many others. is found to be but a verbal difference, the same words not signifying the same thing in their esteem as in ours, 4. However, if they would but become the subjects of the Pope, they might be of your Church for all this: and therefore feeing they are the subjects of Christ, we shall take both Ethiopians and Copties to be of the same Catholick Church with us, for all these and many other of their errors.

Lastly saith H. T. [Let him not cite the Armenians: for they shold but one nature in Christ, and that his slesh was changed into his Divinity, and were condemned by the Council of Calcedon.]

Answ. The Armenians are a considerable part of the Catholick Church. Binnins in the life of Engenius the third saith, their Catholick (so call they their chief Bishop) hath infinite, that is, above a thousand Bishops under him. Oth. Frisingensis hath the like.

1. Though they held but one nature in Christ, it was not by permixtion or consustion of the natures, as Eutiches imagined, but Conjunction or Coalition: Nicephor. Hist. Eccles. lib. 18. cap. 53. And divers of your own writers say the difference is found to be but in words. And even all this they now deny, as you may see in their own Confession published not eighty years ago, Artic. 26, 27, 28, 29, 30. &c. 2. That they change the humane nature of Christ into the Divinity, is your slander, and therefore no good argument. 3. That they were condemned by (the five Acts, or in any Act of) the Council of Calcedon, is another untruth: sure you go much upon trust, that dare venture to stuff your book with such falshoods. But the best is, your simple Papists know not but all is true: they must believe you, and cannot disprove you. The Armenians then and we are of one Catholick Church and Religion, notwithstanding all your forgeries and vain exceptions. I know that one or two petty Councils chid them for not mixing water with wine in the Eucharist; and more then that, the Canons of the General Council called Quinifexti do condemn the same error as theirs. and also their deputing the Sons of Priests successively to the Priesthood, and not shaving their hair and their eating eggs . and cheese on Saturdayes and Sundayes in Lent. But 1. We fear not to fay that we are of the same Church with men that err more then not shaving, or then eating eggs and cheese comes to, or any of this. 2 And remember that this is one of your Reprobate Councils. 3. And one that the third time (when two General Councils before had done it) did Canon. 36. give aqualia privilegia, equal priviledges to the Seat of Conftantinople as Rome had. So that I think you will have no mind of this General Council. And if any other have judged them Eutichians, though I renounce that opinion, yet I must tell ! you, that my Charity covereth far greater errors in the Papifts. or else I could not take them for Christians. If the Question had ever been started in a Council, whether mans soul and body are two Natures or but one, its ten to one but it would have made another herefic, and yet perhaps the real difference have been no more then it is now there is no Controversie about it. But H.T. addeth [Procestants precence to the Fathers of the first five hundred years, is very idle; because mere it true, as it is most false, that those Fathers were Protestants, yet could not that suffice to prove them a continued Succession of one thousand fix hundred years.

Answ. 1. It sufficeth us if those Fathers were Christians, as we are, though having no usurper of an universal Monarchy to Protest against, they were not to be called Protestants. 2. It is an idle pretence indeed, to go about to prove a Succession of one thousand six hundred years, by the bure instance of sive hundred years: but your idle head hath forged more idle pretences then this, by way of calumniation. But yet we may prove the Antiquity of our Religion from those Fathers, and the Novelty of yours, and a Succession for those five hundred years: and for the rest, if the whole Christian world had been big enough for you to see, you might have discerned our Evidence of a turther Succession.

He adds [2. Because those of the sixth age must needs know what was the Religion and Tenets of them that lived in the sisth age, by whom they were instructed, and with whom they daily conversed better then our Protestants can now do; who have Protested on their salvation, that it was the very same with theirs, received from them by word of menth, &c.]

Ansir. 1. Any thing will serve for the simple that will believe you. But I pray you tell us whether it were all or some of the fixth age that made this folemn Protestation that you mention. If all or most, or the ten thousandth man, tell us where we may find that Proteflation. If a few, they were not the fixth age. 2. If Pope Biniface alone was not the fixth age, tell us where that age did Protest on their salvation, that the Bishop of Rome was taken by their Fore sathers for the univerfal Monarch and Head of the Church (beyond his bare Primacy of order) 3. What age bath protested on their salvation, that the Roman prohibition of reading Scriptures, or of receiving the Eucharist in both kinds, or other points anon to be mentioned, were the Religion of their Fore-fathers, and fo from age to age? 4. I pray you tell us where to find this Protestation of the tenth age, which Genebrard, Bellarmine, and others of your own to complain of, as having not learned men, nor any Council, but Apostatical Popes and an ignorant wicked Clergy, that suspected a man of Heresie if he understood Greek or Hebrew, and of Magick or Conjuring, if he medled with Mathematicks? 5. It is legible in the writings of the fixth Age, that they did fetch the doctrine of the fifth age from their writings, and not only from word of mouth. What else mean the preservation of those writings and those numerous citations out of them? Nay more: they would not trust their memories in a General Council for the Canons of the Church: no nor for the Canons of the next preceding Council, no nor for the Common Creed; but had all read and repeated out of the writing before the Council when there was occasion. And let Conscience be free to speak truth for a few sentences, and tell us in good sadness, whether you believe that the Oral Tradition of all the Church did preserve the Knowledge of Augustines, Epiphanius.

Epiphanius, Chrysostomes, &c. doctrine, so much as their writings do? Is the doctrine of Aquinas, Scotus, Gabriel, &c. yea the Council of Trent preserved now more certainly in mens memories, then in writing? If so, they have better memories then mine that keep them, and they have better hap then I that light of such keepers. For I can scarce tell how to deliver my mind so, in any difficult point, but one or other is misunderstanding and misreporting it; and by leaving out or changing a word, perhaps make it another matter: so that I am sorced to refer them to my writings: and yet there by negled they misinterpret me, till I open the book it self to them.

6. Either the Fathers of the fifth age are intelligible in their writings, or not. If they be, then we may understand them I hope with industry. If they be not, then 1. Much less were their transferit speeches intelligible. 2. And then the writings of the fixth age be not intelligible, nor of any other: and so we cannot understand the Council of Trent (as the Papists do not that controvert its sense voluminously,) nor can we know the Churches judgement.

7. By your leave, the Roman Corrupters take on them so much Power to make new Laws and new Articles of Faith quoad nos, by definitions, and to dispense with sormer Laws, that unless they are all Knights of the Post, they can never swear that they had all that they have from their Fore-fathers.

8. Well! but all this is the least part of my answer. But I grant you that the fixth age understood and retained the doctrine of the fifth age, and have delivered it to us. But that there were no Hereticks or corrupters, you will not fay your selves. Well then ! the far greatest part of the Catholick Church did not only receive from the fifth age the same Christian Religion, but also kept themselves from the grossest corruptions of the Pope and his flatterers, that were then but a small part: And thus we stick to the Catholick Church succeeding to this day, and you to an usurper that then was newly set on the Throne of universal Soveraignty. So that your chief Argument treadeth Popery in the dirt: because the greater part of the Catholick Church not only in the fifth and fixth age, but in the seventh, eighth, nineth, tenth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fisceenth and fixteenth ages, have been aliens or enemies to the Roman universal Monarchy:

Monarchy: therefore if one age of the Church knew the mind of the former age, better then the Pope did, we may be sure that

The third Argument of H. T. is, that the Fathers of the first five hundred years taught their tenets: therefore its impossible they should be for the Protestants. Answ. 1. Protestants are Christians, taking the Holy Scriptures for the Rule of their faith. If the Fathers were Christians, they were for the Protestants, but its certain they were Christians. If you could prove that they were for some of your mistakes, that would not prove them against the Protestants in the doctrine of Christianity, and the holy Scriptures; and so that we are not their Successors in Christianity, and of the same Church, which was it that you should have proved, but forgot the question. And of this we shall speak to you more anon.

Well! by this time I have sufficiently shewed the succession of our Church: and continuation of our Religion from the Apostles, and where it was before Luther, and given you the Catholick Church instead of a dozen or twenty names in each age, which it seems will satisfie a Papist; but yet we have not done with them, but require this following Justice at their hands.

Seeing the Papists do so importunately call to us for Catalogues and proof of our succession. Reason and Justice requires that they first give us a Catalogue of Papists in all ages, and prove the succession of their Roman Catholick Church: which they can never do while they are men.

And here I must take notice of the delusory ridiculous Catalogue wherewith H. T. begins his Manual. His Argument runs thus [That is the only true Church of God, which hath had a continued succession from Christ and his Apostles, to this day, (very true:) But the Church now in Communion with the Sea of Rome and no other, hath had a continued succession from Christ and his Apostles to this time: therefore, &c. ____] For the proof of the Minor he giveth us a Catalogue. And here note the misery of poor souls that depend on these men, that are deluded with such stuff, that one would think they should be ashamed the world should see from them.

1. What if his Catalogue were true and proved, would it prove the Exclusion, that [no other Church:] had a succession? Doth it prove that Constantinople, or Alexandria had no such succession, because the Romanists had it? where is there ever a word here under this Argument to prove that exclusive part of his Minor?

2. And note how he puts that for the Question that is not the Question between us. A fair beginning! The Question is not about Churches in Communion with you, but about Churches in subjection to you: But this is but a pious fraud, to save men by decieving them. The Ancient Church of Rome had the Church of Hierusalem. Corinth Philippi, Ephessis, and many a hundred Churches in Communion with her, that never were in subjection to her.

3. And if the Papists can but prove themselves true Christians, I will quickly prove that the Protestants are in Communion with them still, as Christians, by the same Head (Christ) the same spirit, baptism, faith, love, hope, &c. though not as Papists, by subjection to the same usurper.

4. Our question is of the Universal Church: And this man nameth us twenty or thirty men in an age that he saith were professors of their Religion: And doth he believe in good sadness that twenty or thirty men are either the universall Church, or a fufficient proof that it was of their mind?

5. But principally, did this man think that all, or any belides their subjects had their wits so far to seek, as to believe that the persons named in his Catalogue were Papists, without any proof in the world, but meerly because they are listed here by H. T.? Or might he not to as good purpose have saved his labour, and faid nothing of them?

6. But what need we go any further? we will begin with him at his first Century, and so to the second, and if he can prove that Jesus Christ, or the Virgin Mary, or John Baptist, or the Apolles, or any one of the rest that he hath named, were Papists, (much more all of them) I am resolved presently to turn Papist. But unless the man intended to provoke his reader to an unreverent laughter about this abuse of holy things, one would think he should not have named John Baptist, that was dead not only before Rome had a Church, but also before the time that Bellarmine and his Brethren pretend that Peter received ceived his Commission, to be the universall Head. And did not this writer know that Protestants can give him the same names as for them? and if printing them be proof, their proof is as good: If it be not, what proof shall we have? Our proof is the Holy Scriptures, written by the Inspiration of the Holy Ghost in those times. Thence we prove that the first Church held the same belief as we have : yea, though it be not incumbent on us, we will thence prove that the Catholick Church was not then Papists. Why else do we still appeal to Scriptures, and they refuse to fland to the tryal of it any otherwise then asexpounded by the Pope, but that we are confident, and they diffident of them? We know the Apostles faith from the Apofiles; but the Papists will not know it but from the present Church of Rome. They tell you the Apostles were for them: but how know we that? Why by the testimony of the next age: and where is that testimony? Why the third age received it; and how is that proved? Why because the sourth age was of their mind; And how prove you that? Why in the upshor, because the present age is of their mind: Why but most Chri. stians of the present age, are against them: yea, but they arenone of the Church: It is only the present Church of Rome. Well! but the present Church of Rome represented in a General Council may err. I, but the Pope cannot in Cathedra and in approving a Councill. So that the fumm is this: If the Pope himself may be judge the Apostles were Papists: But if the Apofiles may be heard themselves, they were none.

I make no doubt (though Bellarmine deny it,) but other Churches can prove as good a succession as the Romane, as to Bishops; And poor Bellarmine after all is fain to give up this Mark as insufficient to prove a true Church. Lib. 3 de Eccles. cap. 8. Dico secundo, Argumentum à successione legitima adferri à nobis pracipne ad probandem non esse Ecclesiam ubi non est hac successio, quod quidem evidens est: ex quo tamen non solligitur necessario, ibi esse Ecclesiam ubi est successio. By his own consession then, succession will not prove the Romanists as

But as to a succession of Religion, and a continuation of the Catholick Church, for my part, I am so far from declining it, in argumentation, that I here solemnly profess to all the Pa-

pifts that shall read these words, that, AS SOON AS I SHALL SEE ANY CERTAIN PROOF, BY CATALOGUE OR ANY OTHER WAY, THAT THE CATHOLICK CHURCH, HATH SUCCESSIVELY FROM AGE TO AGE BEEN PAPISTS, I WILL TURN PAPIST WITHOUT DELAY: AND I CHALLENGE THEM TO GIVE US SUCH PROOF IF THEY CAN.

Nay if they will prove that in the first age alone, or the fecond, or third alone, the Catholick Church were Papists, I am am resolved to turn Papist: Nay I am most consident they cannot prove that in any one age to this day, the Catholick Church were Papists.

And as to H Ts. Catalogue, I return him further answer, that no one named by him in the first age had any one of their errors: And no one named by him to the year four hundred, (I may add, to the year six hundred, if his false catalogue be truly corrected) was a Papist; so well hath he proved the Popish Succession.

But for the plainer opening of this, I shall add the discussion of

CHIAP. XXV.

Detect. 16. A Nother notable fraud of the Papists, is, to confound all their own errors and corruptions together, and then to instance in some of those errors that are common to them with some others, and to omit the Essentiall parts of Popery: And so they would make the world believe, that if they prove the Antiquity of any points in difference between them and us, they do thereby prove the antiquity of Popery (and so of the succession) And so they would make our Religion also Essentially to consist in every inferiour difference between us.

Suffer them not therefore thus to juggle in the dark, but diflinguish between the Essentials of Popery, or the main difference between them and us, and the other errors, which are not proper to them alone.

Thus:

Thus Bellarmice opens his jugling lib. 4. de Ecclef. cap. 9. where he pleadeth Antiquity of Doctrine as a Note of the true Church : And (faith he) fam duobus modis, &c. Two wayes the may by this Mark prove our Church. I. By hewing the sentences of the Ancients, by which we confirm all our tenets, and refute our adversaries. But this way (saith he) is most prolix, and obnoxious to many calumnies and objections. (Mark Papists and take heed of appealing to Antiquity.) The other way (saith he) is shorter and surer, by shewing first from the confession of the advirsaries, that our tenents are the doctrine of all the antients, &c.] And indeed if the weakness or rashness of any Protestants be the Papists strength, its time for us to be more prudent: but if it be the Papills unhappiness that cannot understand the antients in the antients, but only from the Pope or the Protestants, the Fathers are faln into the hands of Babies as well as the Scriptures; and the Protestants have too little wit if they will join with the Pope in an abusive interpreting the Fathers for the Papills. And thus Bellarmine proceeds to cite Calvin, and the Centurists, as giving them the Fathers. But wherein? For sooth in the point of Free-will, Limbus, Concupiscence, Lent, Lay baptism in necessity, &c. And therefore by our Confessions Antiquity is for the Papists. And this is their shortest and surest way. (The more fools we then.) Is not here great diffidence in the Fathers, when they have more confidence in our fayings then their writings?

But this jugling will not serve the turn. Take up the Essentials of Popery, and prove a Catholick succession of them, and you shall win the day. In Explication of my former professions, I here again solemnly promise and protest, that [WHEN EVER I SEE A VALID PROOF OF A CATHOLICK SUCCESSION OF THESE FOLLOWING POINTS, I WILL PRESENTLY TURN PAPIST: OR OF ANY ONE OF THEM, I WILL TAKE UP THAT ONE.] And I provoke the Papists that boast of Tradition, Succession and Antiquity, to do this if they are able.

1. Let them prove a Catholick Succession, or continuation of the spoint, that The Pope of Rome is appointed by Christ to be naiversall Monarch, Soveraign, Governour, Head of the Catholick tholick Church, and the Vicar of Christ on earth, and holding the place of God himself, whom all must obey.

2. And that the true and only Catholick Church is a Society thus headed and Governed by the Pope, and that no man is a true member of the Catholick Church, that is not the subject of the Pope as universal Monarch: Nor can any other be saved, as being without the Church.

3. And that the Church of Rome is by Gods appointment the Mistris of all other Churches.

4. And that the Pope of Rome is Infallible.

5. That we cannot believe the Scriptures to be the word of God, or the Christian doctrine to be true, but upon the Authoritative Tradition of the Roman Church, and upon the knowledge or belief of their Infallibility: that is, we must believe in the Pope as Infallible, before we can believe in Christ (who is pretended to give him that infallibility.)

6. That no Scripture is by any man to be interpreted but according to the sence of the Pope or Roman Church, and the unanimous consent of the Fathers.

7. That a General Council approved by the Pope cannot err;

but a General Cenncil not approved by the Pope may err.

8. That nothing is to us an Article of faith till it be declared by the Pope or a General Council; (though it was long before declared by Christ or his Apostles as plain as they can speak.)

9. That a General Council hath no more validity then the Pope giveth it.

10. That no Pastor hath a valid Ordination, unless it be derived from the Pope.

11. That there are Articles of faith of Necessity to our Salvastion, which are not contained in the Holy Scriptures, nor can be proved by them.

12. That such Traditions are to be received with equal pions affection and reverence as the holy Scriptures.

13. That Images have equal honour with the Holy Gospel.

14. That the Clergy of the Catholick Church ought to swear obedience to the Pope as Christs Vicar.

15. That the Pope should be a temporal Prince.

16. That the Pope and his Clergy ought to be exempted from the

the Government of Princes, and Princes ought not to judge and panish the Clergy, till the Pope deliver them to their power, having degraded them.

17. That the Pope may disposses Princes of their Dominions, and give them to others, if those Princes be such as he judgeth hereticks, or will not exterminate Hereticks.

18. That in such cases the Pope may discharge all the subjects from ibeir allegiance and fidelity.

19. That the Pope in his own Territories, and Princes in theirs, must burn or otherwise put to death, all that deny Transubstantiation, the Popes Soveraignty, or such distrines as are afore expressed, when the Sope hath sentenced them.

20. That the people should ordinarily be forbidden to read the Scripeure in a known tongue; except some few that have a license from the ordinary.

21. That publick Prayers, Prayses and other publick worship of God, should be performed constantly in a language not understood by the People; er only in Latine, Greek or Hebrew.

22. That the Bread and Wine in the Eucharist, is Transabtantiate into the very body and blood of Christ; so that it is no more true Bread or Wine, though our eyes, tast, and feeling tell us that it is.

23. That the consecrated host is to be worshipped with Divine worship, and called our Lord God.

24. That the Pope may oblige the people to receive the Eucha-rist only in one kind, and forbid them the Cup.

25. That the fins called venial by the Papifts, are properly no sins, and deserve no more but temperal punishment.

26. That we may be perfect in this life by this double perfection.

1. To have no sin, but to keep all Gods Law perfectly. 2. To sn-pererogate, by doing more then is our Duty.

27. That ear works properly merit salvation of God, by way of Commutative fusice, or by the Condignity of the works as proportioned to the Reward.

28. That Priests should generally be fordidden Marriage.

29. That there is a fire called Purgatory, where souls are tormented, and where sin is pardoned, in another world.

30. That in Baptism there is an implicite vom of obedience to the Pope of Rome.

31. That

31. That God is ordinarily to be morshipped by the Oblation of a true proper propitiatory sacrifice for the living and the dead, where the Priest only shall eat and drank the body and blood of Christ, who le the Congregation look on and partake not.

32. That the Canon of Scripture is the same that is dec'ared by the Council of Trent.

I will pass by abundance more to avoid tediousness; And I will not stay to enquire which of these are proper to the Papists. But I am resolved so to receive many of them as they can prove a Catholick succession of; that is, that they were in all ages the Doctrine of the Universal Church: And I crave the charity of such a proof from some Papist or other, if they have any charity in them; and that they will no longer keep universal Tradition in their purses.

And I would defire H. T. to revise his Catalogue, and inflead of twenty or thirty dead and silent names, that signifie no more then Blanks or Cyphers, he would prove that both those persons and the Catholick Church did in every age hold these thirty two forementioned doctrines. And when hath done, then let him boast of his Catalogue. Till they will persorm this task, let them never more for shame call to us for Catalogues or proof of succession. But if they are so unkind that they will not give us any proof of such a Catholick succession of Popery, we shall be ready to supercrogate, and give them sull proof of the Negative, That there hath been no such succession of these thirty two points, as soon as we can perceive that they will ingeniously entertain it: though indeed it hath been often done already.

But certainly it belongeth to them that superinduce more Articles of Faith, to prove the continuation of their own

Articles through all ages; of which anon.

Well! but one of these Articles at least (the Popes Soveraignty) H.T. will prove successively, if you will be credulous enough. In the first age he proves it from Peters words, Act. 15.7,8,9, 10. God chose Peter to convert Cornelius and his company: therefore the Pope is the Universall Monarch. Are you not all convinced by this admirable argument? But he forgot that Bellarmine, Ragussus (in Concil. Basil.) and others of them say, that no Article can be proved from Scripture, but from the proper literall sence. To say somewhat more, he unseasonably

In the secondage he hath nothing but the names of a few that never dreamt of Popery, and a Canon (which you must believe was the Apostles) that Priests must communicate. Of which we are well content.

In the third Age he nameth fifteen Bishops of Rome, of whom the last was deposed for offering incense to Saturn, Jupiter, &c. But not a syllable to prove that one of thele Bishops was the universal Monarch: Much less that the Catholick Church was for fuch Monarchy. But to excuse the matter, he tells you, that the second and third Age produced no Councils (the greater deceivers then are the Papilts that have found us Councils then) and so you have no Catholick succession proved. Yea, but he faith, they have successions of Popes, Martyrs and Confessors, which is sufficient for their purposes. See the Arength of Popery! Any thing is sufficient for your purposes, it seems. Rome had Bishops, therefore they were the Universal Rulers of the Church: A strong consequence! Rome had Martyrs and Consessors: therefore it was the Mistris of all Churches. Who can refist these arguments? But why did you not prove that your Confessors and Martyrs suffered for attesting the Popes Soveraignty 1 If they suffered but for Christianity that will prove them but Christians, and not Papists. Thus you fee to the confusion of the Papills, that they have nothing to shew for the succession or antiquity of Popery for the three first Ages. Yea worse then nothing: For here he comes in with some of the Decretals for footh of some of their Bishops. Decretals unknown, till a while ago in the world, brought out by Isidore Mercator: but with so little cunning as left them naked to the shame of the world; the falshood of them being out of themselves fully proved, by Blondell, Reignolds, and many more, and confessed by some of themselves. Here you see the first foundation of Papal succes? fion; even a bundle of fictions, lately fetcht from whence they! please to cheat the ignorant part of the world.

But in the fourth and fifth ages H.T. doth make us amends for his want of proof from the three first. But suppose he down what that to a succession, while the three first ages are strangers to Popery? Well! but lets hear what he hath at last. His first

proof (after a few filent names) is from the Council of Nice; And what faith that? why i . It defined that the Son of God is confubstantiall to his Father, and true God And whats that to Popery? 2 But it defined the Popes Soveraignty: But how prove you that? Why it is in the thirty ninch Arab. Canon. O what Consciences have those men that dare thus abuse and cheat the ignorant! Asif the Canons of the first General Council had never been known to the world, till the other day that Alphonsus Pisanus a Jesuite publisheth them out of Pope Julius and I know not what Arabick book. These men that can make both Councils and Canons at their pleasure above a thousand years after the supposed time of their existence, do never need to want authori-And indeed this is a cheaper way of Canon-making in a corner, then to trouble all the Bishops in the world with a great deal of coll and travail to make them. But if this be the foundation, the building is answerable. Their Bishop Zosimus had not been acquainted with these new Articles of an old Council, when he put his trick upon the fixth Council of Carthage, where for the advancement of his power (though not to an universall Monarchy, yet to a preparative degree) he layeth his claim from the Council of Nice, as faying [Placuit ut si Episcopus accusatus fuerit, &c.] which was that If an ejected Bishop appeal to Rome, the Bishop of Rome appoint some of the next province to judge; or if yet he destre his cause to be heard the Bishop of Rome shall appoint a Presbyter his Legate, &c. In this Council were 217. Bishops, Aurelius being president, and Augustine being one. They told the Pope that they would yield to him till the true copies of the Council of Nice were fearched; for those that they had seen had none of them those words in, that Zosimus alledged. Hereupon they fend abroad to the Churches of the East, to Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, &c. for the ancient Canons. From hence they received several copies, which all agreed; but none of them had either Zosimus forgery in; nor the forged clause which Bellarmine must have in; much less the eighty Canons of Pisanus the Jesuite, or this one which H T. doth found his succession on , but only the twenty Canons there mentioned; which have not a word for the Popes Soveraignty.

And here note 1. That Zosimus knew not then of Pisanus Canons, or else he would have alledged them; nor yet of Bellarmints mines new part of a Canon for the Primacy of the Bishop of Rome. 2. That Zosimus himself had not the faith, the wit or the memory, to plead either Scripture, Apostolical Institution, or Tradition, for his priviledge; but only a falle Canon of the Council of Nice: as looking no higher it feems for his authority. 3. How early the Roman Bishops begun both to aspire. and make use of forgeries to accomplish it. 4. That there was no such Apostolick or Church Tradition for this Roman power, as our Masters of Tradition now plead for; which all the Catholick Church must know. For the whole Council, with all the Churches of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, &c. that is, in a manner all fave Rome were ignorant of that which Zofimus would have had them believe; and Bellarmine and H. T. would have us to believe. 5. Note also how little the Church then believed the Popes infallibility. 6. Yea Note, how upon the reception of the several Copies of the Nicene Canons, they modelly convicted Zosimus of falshood: And how the Council resolved against his usurpation. See in the African Councils, the Epistleof Cyril and Alexandria, and Actions of Constantinople: and the Epistles of the Council to Boniface and Celestine. their Epistle to Beniface before they, had received their an-Iwers from other Churches about the Nicene Canons, they tell him that they believed they Should not suffer that Arrogancy [non sumus istum typhum passuri] But to Celestine they conclude more plainly, though modestly [Presbyterorum quoq; & sequentium, &c.i.e. Let your boliness, as beseemeth you, repell the micked refuges of Presbyters and the Clergy that follow them; because this is not derogate, or taken from the African Church by any Definition of the Fathers; and the Nicene Decrees most plainly committed both the inferiour Clergy, and Bishops themselves to the Metropolitans. For they did most prudently, and most justly provide, that all businesses (N.B. all) should be ended in the very places where they begun; and the Grace of the holy Ghost will not (or should not) be wanting to each province: which equity should by the Priests of Christ be prudently observed. and most constantly maintained: Especially, because it is granted to every one to appeal to the Conneils of their own Province, or to a Universall Council, if he be offended with the judgement of the Cognitors. Unless there should be any one that canthink.

think that our God can inspire a justice of tryall into any one man (N.B.) and deny it to innumerable Priests that are congregated in Councill. Or how can that judgement that's past beyond sea be valid, to which the necessary persons of the witness could not be brought, either because of the infirmities of sex, or of age, many other impediments intervening. For that any (i.e. Legates) should be Sent as from the side of your helines, w. find not constituted by any Syrod of the Fathers. Becamfe that which you fent us by our fellow Bishop Faustinus as done by the Nicene Council in the truer Councils, received as the Nicene, (fent from boly Cytil our fellow Bishop of the Church of A'exandria, and from venerable Acticus the Biship of Constantinop'c, out of the Authentick (Records.) which also heretofore were sent by us to Boniface your predecessor, Bishop of venerable memory, by Innocent a Presbyter. and Marcellus Subdeacon, by mbom they were from them to us dirested,) in which we could find no such matter. And do not ye send your Clergy executors to potent men; do not ye jield to it; lest me seem to bring the smoaky Arrogancy of the world (or secular ar. rogancy) into the Church of Christ, which preferreth the light of simplicity and day of hamility for them that desire to see God. For of our brother Faustinus, we are secure, that the safe brotherly charity in your holine ses honesty and moderation, can suffer him to say no longer in Africa. 7

Well said Aurelius! Well said Augustine! Well said all you African Fathers! Had others fluck as close to it as you, the Papacy had been kept from the Universall Monarchy.

Note here 1. That this Council lookt no higher for the power of the Pope and other Metropolitans, then to the Council of Nice, and thought it a good argument, that the Pope had no fuch power, because no Council had so subjected the Assican Church: And therefore they never dreamt that Christ or the Apostles had given it him. 2. Note that they evince the Nullity of his pretended power out of the Nicene Council, 3. Note that they took him not to be above a Council, having power to dispense with its Canons. 4. Note that by the Nicene Council, not some, but all business must be ended where they begin, and this Council so interpreted them: and therefore there's no appeals to the Pope. 5. And that he that saith otherwise unjustly churgeth the Holy Ghost to be wanting to the Church. 6. That the order is to be held fast. 7. That they took it for a sufficient reafor against appeals to Rome, because all might appeal to a provincial or general Council. 8. Note that they thought it a thing not to be imagined by a man, that God should give his Spirit to any one man, even to the Pope, to enable him to try and judge. and deny it to a Council, General or Provincial. This feemed to them a thing that none should imagine, so that they little dreams of the Roman infallibility or power of Judging all the world. 9. Note also that they thought the Pope to be uncapable of this universal judgement, were it but by distance, and the natural impediments of age, fex, and many the like that must needs hinder the necessary witnesses from such a voyage or journey. So that they give an Argument from Natural necesfity against the Popes pretended Soveraignty and judgement. 10. Note also that they plainly make such judgements to be invalid for want of necessary witness and means of prosecution. 11. And whereas the Pope might object that he could prevent all this by his Legates, they flatly reject that too, and fay they find no fuch thing Constituted by any Synod: fo that they both rejected the Popes trying and judging by Legates in other Metropolitans jurisdiction; and they took it for a sufficient ground to do so, that there was no Council had so constituted: little dreaming of a Scripture constitution, or Apostolical Tradition. And if the Pope may neither judge them by himself nor his Legates, he may fit still. 12. Next they convince the Roman Bishop of sending them a false Canon of the Nicene Council. 13. And they shew us here what way the Pope then took to get and keep his Power : even by fending to the fecular commanders of the Provinces, (in whom they had special interest by their residence at Rome,) to execute their wills by force. 14. And note how the Council plainly accuseth them for this. of introducing fecular Arrogancy into Christs Church, that better loveth simplicity and humility and light. 15. And note how plainly they require the Bishop of Rome to do so no more. 16. And how plainly they tell him that Faustinus his stay any longer in Africa will not stand with that honesty and moderation of the Bishop of Rome which is necessary to the safety of brotherly charity.

I give you but the plain passages of the Council as they lie before you, and scrue no forced consequences from them. And now let Binnius and his brethren go make women and children believe that it was not Appeals to Rome, but a trouble some manner of tryal that the Council was against. And let H. T. tell men that take him for infallible, of a Nicene Canon for the Popes Supremacy and Monarchy. And let him perswade ideots and dotards that the Catholick Church in the tourch and hifth ages was for the universal Government of the Pope. At d so I proceed to his next proof.

Saith H. T. [The first Constantinop. Council dereced the Bistop of Constantinople to be chief next the Bishop of Rome.

Answ. 1. You see then that Primacy was but the Initiation of Councils, for order sake. 2. You see then that it was grounded on a secular reason; for so saith the Canon | because it is new Rome.] 3. You see then that the Popes Primacy was but honorary, and gave him no universal Government. For the pirmacy here granted to Constantinople, gave them no Government over Alexandria, Antioch, &c. 4. Yea expressly the second Canon limits all Bishops without exception to their own Diocess. And so doth the third Canon, expressly affirming that according to the Nicene Council in every province, the provincial Council ought to administer and govern all things.] Seenow what a proof here is of Catholick succession of the Roman Monarchy! Nay how clearly still it is disproved to that time.

The next proof of H.T. is from the third Ast of the first Council of Ephelus, that Peter jet lives and exercises judgement im his Successors] Answ. He turns us to look a needle in a bottle of hay. That Council is a large volume, containing six Tomes in Binnius, and not divided into Acts. But I suppose at last I have found the place, Tom. 2. c. 15. where the words [that Peter was the Head of the Apostles] though nothing to their purpose, are neither spoken nor approved by the Council, but only by Philip a Presbyter, Celestines Legate. And the Council, though specially moved by his concurrence to excoll Celestine to the highest, yet 1. Never spake a word of his Governing power or Soveraignty, but only his concent: And when they mention the Roman Church, it is only their corcent which they predicate. 2. And they extoll Cyril equally with Celestine. [Novo Paulo Celestine (they forgot Peter) Novo Paulo Cr-

rillo: -- Unu Celestinus, Unus Cyrillus,] &c.

The next witness brought is the Council of Calcedon, as caling Leo Universal Archbishop and Patriarch of old Rome, and sentence is pronounced against D. oscorus in the names of Leo and Saint Peter.] Answ. I. This is but one of your common frauds. It was not the Council that called him universall Archb shop, but two Deacons in the superscription of their Libels, viz. Thedo. doras and Ischirion. And were they the Catholick Church? 2. By [Universal Archbishop] its plain that they meant no more then the chief in dignity and order of all Archbishops: and not the Governour of all. 3. I have newed you before that this very Council in its Canons not only give the Bishop of Constantinople equal priviledges with the Bishop of Rome, but expresly say that Rome received this primacy of order à patribus, from a Council, because it was Sedes Imperii, the seat of the Empe. rour. I thought I had given you enough of this Council before. Sure I am when Bellarmine comes to this Canon, he hath nothing to fay for his cause, but plainly to charge this samous sourth General Council with lying or falshood, and to say, that the Pope approved not this Canon. But approved or not approved. if this was the Catholick Church representative, fure I am that their testimony is valid to prove that there was then no Catholick reception of the Roman Monarchy as of God, but contrarily a meer primacy of Dignity and Honour given it newly by men.

In the fixth age he had not one Council to pretend it feems for the Roman Soveraignty, for he cites none, but about other matters (of which anon.)

In the seventh age (which he calls the fixth) though then the Soveraignty was claimed by Boniface, he citeth no Council for it niether.

In the eighth age (from the year seven hundred) he cites the second Council of Nice, as approving an Epissle of Pope Adrian, wherein he saith that the Roman Church is the Head of all Churches.] Answ. 1. But whether Adrian himself by the Head meant the chief in Dignity, or the Governour of all, is a great doubt.

2. But whatever he meant, the Synods approving his Epissle for Images, is no proof that they approved every word in it. 3. Yea Tharasius seems to imply the contrary, calling him only, Veteris Rome primas & testatorum principum successor; as if his Sea had the Priviledge only of being the Primate of Rome, and not the Ruler of the world. 4. But if this Council did (as it did not) openly own the Papal Soveraignty, it had been no great honour to him: For as in their decrees for Images they contradicted two Councils at Constantinople; and that at Frankford contradicteth them; fo might they as well contradict the Church in this: Even as they defined Angels to be corporeal, which the Council of Laterane afterward contradicted. But the plain truth is, it was the scope of Adrians Epistle as for Images, which they expressed themselves to approve. And that their Image-worship it self hath no Catholick succession, me thinks they should easily grant, considering not only, 1. That there is nothing in the first ages for them. 2. And that Epiphanius and many before him speak expresly against it. 3. But specially that there have been more General Councils of those ages against them then for them, and that before this of Nice decreed for them, the representative Catholick Church (except still the Pope be the Catholick Church) did condemn them.

I suppose by this time you will think it needless for me to follow H. T. any surther in his Catalogue. I am content that any impartial sober person judge, whether here be a satisfactory proof of a Catholick succession of the Papal Soveraignty, when through so many ages, they bring not a word for any succession at all; much less that it was owned by the Catholick Church: and least of all that all the rest of Popery was so owned.

Object. But at least some other points of Popery are proved by H.T. to have such a succession. Answ. Peruse his proofs and freely judge. Two of the thirty two Articles which I mentioned before he speaks to: The one is that Bishops, Priests and Deacons should abstain from their Wives, or be degraded. But 1. The Council which he cites for this, is but a Provincial Council in Spain in the fifth Age: and whats this to Catholick succession? 2. The Evidences for the Antiquity of Priests marriages are so clear and numerous, that I will not thank any of them to confess their doctrine a Novelty. I Cor. 9. 5. Have we not power to lead about a Sister, a Wife as well as other Apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord and Cephas? I hope they will not deny that Peter had a Wife? I Tim. 3. 2, 4. A Bishop must be blame. less, the husband of one Wife - One that ruleth well his own honse, having his children in subjection with all gravity. ver. 12. Let the Deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children, and their own houses well, Tit. 1. 7. If any be blameless, the husband of one Wife, having faithfull children, - The Antient Canons called the Apostles, say, Can. G. Let not a Bishop or Presbyter put away his own Wife on pretence of Religion. And if he reject her, let him be excommunicated : but if he persevere, let him be deposed.] Let Bellarmine perswade those that will believe him, that this Canon speaks but of denying them maintenance: Canons as well as Scripture are unintelligible to these men. The Canons at Trull. of the fifth and fixth Council, do expresly expound this Apostolick Canon as I do here: and they profess it was the Apostles concession then to the Bishops to marry: and they themselves forbid any to separate Priests from their Wives, and professedly oppose the Roman Church init, Can. 12, 13. For this Bellarmine, lib. 2. cap. 27. de Pontif. Rom. reproacheth them, and that's his answer. Forsooth, the Pope approved not these Canons: 1. Let Adrians words be read, and then judge. 2. What if he did not? Our enquiry is of Catholick Tradition and succession, and not of the Popes opinion. But its easie to bring much more for this.

Another point that H. T. proves, is, The same Canon of Scripsure which they own: And for this he brings one Provincial Council, Carth. 3. as in the fixth Age. An excellent proof of Catholick fuccession through all Ages. But have we not better proof of the contrary? Let him that would be satisfied peruse these records and judge. Euseb. Eccles. But what need I cite any more, when Dr. Cofin hath done it in a volume purposely? where this allegation also of the third Conc. Carthag. is answered.

A ND now having shewed you that Papists cannot prove any Catholick Succession, or Continuation, or Tradition of their Religion, let us consider of their silly shift, by instancing in some by-points common to them with others. Of which I shall say the less because I have spoke to it already in my Safe

Religion.

And before I mention any particulars, remember that I have proved before that ignorance or difference about many points not effential to Christianity, may consist with our being of one Religion and Catholick Church, and therefore such differences are nothing to the point of succession of the Catholick Church or Religion. This is plain to any reasonable man. And that the Papists may see that for their parts they have nothing to say against it, I shall add to what is said, that they tolerate or plead for the toleration of greater differences among themselves, which yet they affirm to consist with the unity of faith. I will now give you but an instance or two.

The Jesuits maintain, that is a man do but believe in their Pope and Church as infallible, he may (not only as some say, be ignorant of some Article of the Creed it self, and yet be a true Catholick, yea and be saved, but also) believe a salse Article as from God and the Church: The former is commonly taught not only by such as Snarez, that say the Article of Christs Descent into Hell is not to all of Necessity to Salvation, but by many others in the Doctrine of Implicite saith. The later clause you may see among others in Franc. Albertinus the Jesuite, Corollar. pag. 250. where his objectors put this case [Suppose twenty Bishops preach to a countrey man a salse Article, as if it were spoken by Ged and the Church: that proposal of the twenty Bishopsis so sufficient, that the Countrey man prudently formeth an evident practical judgement, and morally certain, to believe with a speculative assent the Article proposed by the ement, Bishops, for the Authority of God as the formal reason. Three absurdicies seem hence to follow. I. That the Countrey man Gould be obliged under mortall fin, to believe the twenty Bishops. and so the precept of faith should bind to believe a falshood. 2. The Country man should be in Gods Grace without faith. In Grace, because he commits no mortal sin, yea he obeys the command of believing: Yet without faith, because he believes a falshood opposite to faith, and so loseth faith. 3. God should concur to deceive - To the first Albertinus answereth that its no Absurdity that the command of faith do oblige to believe a falshood, it being not per se, but per accidens. To the second he saith, that the Countres man doth not lose his grace or faith, because the falshood believed is not formally opposite to the true faith (but materially) Here you see that a man may hold an Article opposite to the faith materially, and yet not only be a true Christian in grace and faith, but also in so doing obey by accident the command of believing, so be it he believe in their Church. And if that be fo, with what face can these men say, that our Church or Religion is new, or not the same with the Greeks, &c. when we have the same formal Object of faith, and differ in no Effential Material point? See here their lubricity and partiality.

One Instance more: The second Council of Nice that decreed for Image-Worship, doth yet expresly decree that Latria, Divine morship is to be given only to God; Thomas Agninas sum. 3. 9.25. art. 3. & 4. purposely maintaineth that Latria, Divine Worship is to be given to the Image of Christ. and to the Cross that he dyed on; and to the sign of that Cross. Here is an Article of their faith expresly contradicted: And yet Aquinas is a member of their Church; And if any say, he is no member, its proved past doubt, for the Pope hath Canonized him for a Saint: So that now it is a part of their Religion to take him for a true believer : And Albertinus hath (as he thinks) proved, that though in many other matters of fact the Pope be fallible, yet in the Canonizing of Saints he is infal. lible, because of some promise of Gods special assistance (if one knew where to find it.) Abundance of fuch Instances might be brought that prove, that the Papists own men as true believers.

that deny or contradict Articles' of their faith. But what need we more, then that France and thousands elswhere are yet members of their Church, that deny the Laterane and Florentine definition for the Popes Supremacy above a General Council? and when most Papists hold that Angels are incorporeal, contrary to the definition of the said second Council of Nice. And therefore by their own law, nay much more, we may well say that those were of our Religion that differed from us in nothing that is in deed or our esteem Essential to the saith. Now to a few particulars.

I The Papists tell us that [Fulk confesseth that Hierom, Austin, Ambrose, &c. held the invocation of Saints] H.T.p.49.

Answ. I. If any hold that they should desire the departed Saints to pray for them, as they do the living, we have reason enough to take it for their error, but its no proof that they are not of the same Church and Religion with us: As long as they give no part of that adoration or honour to Saints which is proper to God the Father, Son, or Holy Ghost, it is not inconsistent with true Faith and Christianity.

2. But yet we must tell you that the Primitive Church was unacquainted with the Romish prayer to Saints. Till the end of the fourth Century they are not able to prove that ever three men (if any one) were for any prayer to the Dead at all, except such a conditional speech in an Oration as Greg. Nazianzen hath [If holy souls have any care or feeling of such things as these, receive this Oration orat. II. I intreat the Reader that needeth information of the way of Antiquity in this point, to read Bishop Ofhers Answer to the Jesuite on this point, page 418, &c. Where he faith that [for nine parts of the first four hundred years, he dare be bold to say that the fesuite is not able to produce so much as one true testimony out of any Father whereby it may appear that any account at all was made of it? Where he citeth the full express words of the Fathers of those first ages against praying to Saints, as Origen in Jus. Hom. 16. And in Rom. lib. 2. cap. 2. And Contr. Celsum lib. 8. page 432,433, 406, 411, 412. & lib. 5. pag. 239. Tertullian Apol. cap. 30. Tertullian and Cyprian of Prayer: Athanasius Orat. 4. Cont. Arrium pagi 259, 260. Ecclef. Smyrn. apud Euseb. Hist. lib.4. &c. I am loth to recite what is there already given you.

3. And:

3. And when Prayer to the dead did come in, how exceedingly it differed from the Romish Prayers to the dead, I pray you read there in the same Author. 4. And also of those Adorations and Devotions offered by the Papists to the Virgin Mary, I desire you to read in the same Author, and Place, enough to make a Christian tremble, and which for my part I am not able to excuse from horrid Blasphemy or Idolatry, though I am willing to put the best interpretation on their words that reason will allow.

5. The Reason why in the old Testament men were not wont to pray to Saints, Bellarmine saith was, because then they did not enter into heaven nor see God. Bellar. de sanct. Beat. li. 2. cap. 19. So Suarez in the third part, Tom. 2. disp. 42. Sect. 1. But abundance of the chief Doctors of the Church for divers Ages were of opinion that the Saints are not admitted into Heaven to the clear sight of God before the day of Judgement (as most of the Eastern Churches do to this day) therefore they could not be for the Popish Prayer to Saints.

And here again observe, that men may be of the same saith and Church with us, that differ and err in as great a matter as this. The Council of Florence hath now defined it, that departed souls are admitted into Heaven to the clear sight of God: And yet Stapleton and Francis. Pegna. à Castro, Medina, Sotus, affirm that Irenaus, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Clemens Romanus, Origen, Ambrose, Chrysostome, Austin, Lattantius, Vittorinus, Prudentius, Theodoret, Aretas, Oecumenius, Theophilatt, Euthymius, yea and Bernard, have delivered the contrary sentence. See Staplet. Defens. Eccles. author. cont. Whitak. lib. I. cap. 2. With Fran. Pegna in part. 2. Director. Inquisitor. com. 21.

Now as all these must needs be against the Popish Invocation of Saints, so they were against that which is now determined to be de fide; Whence I gather (on the by) 1. That the Romish faith increaseth, and is not the same as heretosore. 2. That they had not this Article by Tradition from any of these Fathers, or from the Apostles by them (unless from the Scriptures.)
3. That men that err in such points as are now defined by Councils to be de side, are yet accounted by Papists to be of their Church and saith: And therefore they may be of ours,

notwithstanding such errours as this in hand. 4. And note also by this tast, whether the Papists be not a perjured generation, that swear not to expound Scripture but according to the ananimens consent of the Fathers.

6. The Council of Laodicea condemned them as Idolaters that prayed to Angels, Can. 35. (which Caranza, Crab, and other Papills have turned into Angulos; whose falsification you may see fully detected by the said Bishop Ofher, ibid. pag. 470, 471, 472. Read there also the full Testimonies of Greg. Nissen, Athanasius, Epiphanius, &c. against praying to Saints and Angels, and the detection of Bellarmines fraud, that pretendeth the Fathers to speak of the Gentiles Idolatry when they mention the Virgin Mary and the Saints, and say expressly they were not to be adored.

But for all this, H. T. Manual.page 291, &c. hath Fathers for this Adoration of Angels and Saints. And who are they? The first is Dionysius: to which I answer, I. There is never a such a word in the place cited in Dionysius, in the Book that I have at hand, printed Lugdun. 1572. 2. We are for praying the Saints to pray for us too, that is, those on earth: And the words cited by him, mention not the Saints in heaven. 3. That Dionysius is not Dionysius but a spurious Apochryphal Book: Not once known and mentioned in the world till Gregory the greats dayes, (six hundred years after Christ) as Bellarmine himself saith Lib. de Scriptor. Eccles. de Dionys. And lib. 2. de Monach. cap. 5.

The second is Clem. Apostol. Constit. 5. Answ. 1. The words speak only of honouring the Martyrs, which is our unquestioned duty; but not of Praying to them. 2. Its an Apochryphal forgery, and neither the Apostles nor Clements Work which he citeth (but any thing will serve these men:) Let him believe Bellarmine de scriptor. Eccles. pag. 38, 39. where he proveth it, and saith that [in the Latine Church, these Constitutions are of almost no account, and the Greeks themselves Canon. 2. Trul. reject them as depraved by Hereticks, and that the receiving of them is it that misleadeth the Ethiopians.] See more against them in Cooks Censura, pag. 17, 18, 19. and Rivets Crit. Sac. & Dalaus in Pseudepigrap. The third Testimony of H. T. is from Institute second Apol.

Anfw.

Answ. It is not Praying to Angels that Justin seemeth to intend, but giving them due honour, which we allow of. His intent is to stop the mouths of Heathens that called the Christians impious for renouncing their Gods: To whom he replyeth, that we yet honour the true God, and his Angels, &c .--

His Testimony for the third age is only Origen (and yet none of Origen) First in his Lament. Answ. 1. Origen there mentioneth the Saints, but not the dead Saints. It may be all the Saints in the Church on earth whose prayers he desireth. 2. If this satisfie you not, at least be satisfied with this, that you cite a forgery that is none of Origens works. Not only Erasmus saith that [This Lamentation was neither written by Origen, nor translated by Hierom, but is the sisting of some unlearned man, that by this trick devised to defame Origen:) But Baronius Annal. Tit. 2. ad an. 253. p. 477. witnesseth that Pope Gelasius numbers it with the Apocryphals.

But H.T. hath a second testimony from Origen. in Cantic. Hom. 3. Answ. 1. That speaks of the Saints prayer for us, but not of our prayers to them one word, which is the thing in question. 2. But Erasmus and others have shewed that neither is this any of Origens works. Sixtus Senensis saith, that some old Books put Hieroms name to it: And Lombard and Aquinas cite passages out of it as Ambroses.

You see now what Testimonies H. T. hath produced for the first three Ages, even till above four hundred years after Christ. And yet no doubt but this is current proof with the poor deluded Papists that read his Book.

2. The next exception to be considered is, Praying for the Dead: which they say the ancient Church was for.

Answ. 1. We are for the Commemoration of the holy lives and sufferings of the Saints: and the first fort of the ancients prayers for them began here, as the occasion. 2. We are for thankfull acknowledgement of Gods Mercies to the departed Saints, and to the Church by them. And the first prayers for them were such as these. 3. Bishop Ofher hath copiously proved that they were Saints, supposed to be in Heaven or Paradise, and not in Purgatory, that were then prayed for: and therefore that it was not the Popish praying for tormented souls that was then pracised: And therefore their prayers

then were besides Commemorations and Thanksgivings, the petitioning of all those following Mercies for them which are not to be received till the refurrection: Bellarmine himself proving that though me were certain that the bliffed fouls shall have a raised olorified body, and be justified in the last Judgement, yet may it be prayed for, because it is yet future. Now we are far from being of another Church or Religion then those that hold such an opinion as this. Saith Ofher pag. 224. when he had cited many teftimonies [In these and other prayers of the like kind, we may descry evident feetsteps of the primary intention of the Church in ber supplications for the dead: which was that the whole man (not the foul separated enly) might receive publick remission of sins, and a solemn acquittal in the judgement of that great day; and so obtain both a full escape from all the Consequences of fin (the last enemy being now destroyed, and death swallowed up in victory) and a perfect consummation of blis and happiness: all which are comprized in that short prayer of S. Paul for One siphorus (though made for him while he was alive) [The Lord grant unto him that he may find mercy of the Lord in that day | Yea, divers prayers for the dead of that kind are still retained in the Roman offices; of which the great Spanish Doctor John Medina thus writeth: Although I have read many prayers for the faithfull deceased, which are contained in the Roman Misfal, yet have I read in none of them that the Church doth petition, that they may more quickly be freed from pains: but I have read that in some of them petition is made, that they may be freed from everlasting pains.] Again there be other prayers (faith Medina) wherein petition is made, that God would raise the souls of the dead in their bodies unto blis at the day of judgement.

You fee then, that our Question is not whether the dead may be prayed for: but what prayers may be made for them. And therefore to find that about three hundred years after Christ (more or less) men begun to pray for the dead, is no proof that they were not of our Church or Religion; or that therefore we want succession. It was not a praying to be sooner out of Purgatory that then was used, as Papists do, but a Praying for the mercies promised at the Resurrection: And thus we think it lawfull to pray for the dead; were it not for

And its further to be noted, that as Pegni, Stapleton and others confess, the Fathers, Greek and Latine, before mentioned, did believe that men had not their perfect Joyes till the Resurre. ction: and therefore they had the far stronger motive to pray for the dead. And if Protestants had not been partly of this mind (fave only that we put not the foul into hidden receptacles, nor anywhere but with Christ) Bellarmine had not found so much occasion of that unworthy calumny against Calvin for the words cited by him in his Instit, as if he denved the beatifical vision, if not the immortality of the soul: Even because he took not our bliss to be perfect till the Resurrection. but somewhat short of what we shall then be. Now seeing the Fathers were so commonly of that mind, and the Greeks and Athiopians are still of that mind, and Bellarmine faith Luther and Calvin are of that mind, you may see that neither in that nor the point of praying for the dead as used by the ancients. is our distance so great as to weaken the proof of our succession, or make us to be of two Churches or Religions.

And here you may see the differences between the Prayers for the dead which are used by the Papists, and by the Eastern Churches to this day. And yet if upon private unsound opinions any should go somewhat surther in this point, it followeth not that such error changeth the faith. I desire the Reader that would have a suller sight of the face of Antiquity in this point, to read Bishop Officer of it in the forementioned Answer to the Tesuite.

3. Another point that they much challenge us about, is, The Veneration or Adoration of Images, Reliques, and the Cross, to which I may join, peregrinations to places esteemed by them to be of eminent holiness. Concerning Peregrinations, you may see by a plain Epistle of Gregory Nyssen (in the end of his printed works, but in the midst of a M.S. in Paris Library) written purposely against going on Pilgrimage to servasalem, what is to be thought of this. He advise the even the retired Monasticks even in those Countreyes that were near Judaa, to sorbear such Pilgrimages as dangerous and unnecessary, and not at all commanded manded in the Scripture. The Papists did as long as they could perswade the world that this Epistle was none of Gregories, and when they were made ashamed of that, they would expound it as prohibiting Pilgrimages to none but the Monasticks: And sure if it should be forbidden them, then much more should others be forbidden, that have not the leisure, and pretend not to the devotions which these pretend to. Read but the Epistle it self without either Molinaus his notes on our side, or Gret-fers frivilous answers, and judge as thou seeft cause.

As for Images, we allow the Historical use of them, and the feeting them up in Churches the Lutherans allow, and we diflike it only as dangerous and a needless snare, but take not our selves to be of another Church or Religion from those that are otherwise minded: No nor from those that Reverence them as they respect the persons whom they signifie. But its one thing to use Images, and another thing to use them Popifuly, which is to make them mediate objects of Divine worship, yea to worship the very Image it self, and the Cross and the sign of the Cros with the same worship as we do him that is signified by them: So that we confidently affirm, 1. That the Primitive Church did make no use of Images at all in the worship of God; no nor endure them in the place of Worsh p. 2. That when they were first brought in the Popish use of them was still renounced and detefted. Clemens Alexandrinus Protreptic, ad Gent, faith that [We are plainly forbidden to use that deceitfull Art] (of painting or image-making) - And [We have no fensible Image made of any sinsible motter, but such an Image as is to be conceived with the understanding | Origen against Celsus lib. 7. page 373, 384, 386. 387. is large and plain against this use of Images, as the Protestants are. And the Eliber. Concil. C. 36. taith [Placuit picturas in Ecclesia esse non debere, ne quod colitur, aut adoratur in parietibus depingatur. It scemeth good to us, that Pictures ought not to be in the Church, lest that which is worshipped or adored should be painted on Wals | Some Papists would fain find a sense for this caron contrary to the words: But Melch Canus plainly faith, that the Council d dnot only imprudently but impiculty make this law to take away Images, Loc. Theol. lib. 5. cap. 4. conc. 4. I shall cice no more, but increat the Reader that is willing to be informed how much Antiquity

Antiquity was against the Papists in the points of Images, to peruse only Dallaus de Imaginibus, and Usher in his Answer to the Tesuite and Sermon to the Parliament: And I provoke the Papills to confute what is in them, alledged if they can.

H. T. hath no better shift to salve their credit (Manual page 319, 320.) then to fet their own Schoolmen and General Conneil together by the ears. The second Council of Nice (that did most for Images) did openly renounce the adoring them with Divine honour, and Tharasias solemnly professed. Duntaxat in unum verum Deum latriam & fidem se referre & reponere \ They did refer and repose faith and divine worship in the true God alone] But Aguinas sum. 3.9.25. a. 3. 6. 4. maintaineth (as I before observed) that the Image of Christ, and the Cross and the sign of the Cross are to be worsh pped with Divine morship. I And what saith H. Turbervile to this? Why This is a meer school opinion and not of faith with us: Urge not therefore what some particular Divines say, but hearken to the Doctrine of Gods Church. -- Very good! Is not this fo gross a kind of jugling, that would never down if devout ignorance and implicite faith had not prepared the stomacks of the people? 1. You fee here that to contradict the Determination of a General Council. is not of faith with them. But it is not against your faith? Do. you give leave to meer school opinions to contradict General Councils? See here what's become of the Popish faith? If the Determinations of Councils be not Articles of faith with you. then you have no faith, but give up your cause? And if they be, then Aquinas and his followers are Hereticks. 2. And then fee whats become of the Popes Infallibility in Canonizing Saints, that have fainted Thomas Aguinas that proves a Heretick by your Law: fo that your cause is gone which way ever you turn you. 3. And then see what it is to pray to Saints, when some of them are made Hereticks by your own Laws. 4. And then also see, at what Unity the Church of Rome is among themfelves, when it is the very common doctrine of their learned Schoolmen, which contradicteth a General Council: Are you not well agreed that while? 5. And lastly note what a Holy Church you have, when the common fort of your most learned Divines are thus made Hereticks: See Bishop Oshers allegations of Th. Arundels Provincial Council at Oxford, 1408, ex Guil. Linewood lib 5. And fac. Naclaneus in Rom.cap. 1. fol. 42. saith [We must not only confess, that the faithfull in the Church do Worship before the Image, as some causelously speak. but that they adore the Image, without any scruple: yea and that they worship it with the same worship as the Prototype: so that if it be worshipt with Divine worship, the Image must have Divine worship -] And Cabrera in 3. part. Thom. qu. 25. art.3. disp. 2. num. 15. there cited by Usher, saith that it is of faith that Images are to be worshipped in Churches and without: and we must give them signs of servitude and submission, by embracing, lights, offering incense, uncovering the head, &c. 2. That Images are truly and properly to be adored, with an intention to adore themselves, and not only the samplars represented in them. This Conclusion is against Durandus and his followers, whose opinion by the Moderns is judged dangerous, rash, and savouring of Heresie: and M. Medina reporteth that M. Victoria reputed it heretical: but our conclusion is the common one of Divines. If Images be improperly only adored, then they are not to be adored simply and absolutely; which is manifest Heresie. And if Images were to be worshipped only by way of Remembrance, because they make us remember the samplars, which we thus adore as if they were present, it would follow that all creatures are to be adored with the same aderation as God - which is absurd. 3. The Opinion of Saint Thomas, that the Image must be worshipped with the same act of adoration, as the samplar which it representeth, is most true, most pious, and very consonant to the decrees of faith Thus Cabrera, who adds that this is the doctrine of Thomas and all his Disciples and almost all the old Schoolmen, and particularly of Cajetan, Capreolus, Paludanus, Ferrariensis, Antoninus, Soto, Alexand. Ales. Albertus Magnus, Bonaventura, Richardus de media villa, Dionysius Carthusianus, Major, Marsilins, Thom. Waldensis, Turrecremata, Clichtovaus, Turrian, Vasquez, &c. And Azerius saith [It is the constant opinion of Divines, Institut. Moral. tom. I. lib. 9. cap. 6. Yea in the Roman Pontifical published by the Authority of Clement the eighth, it is expressed, that [The Legates Cross shall have the right hand, because Divine worship is due to it See here whether the Pope himself be not an Heretick, and the Pontifical contain not herefie, and the whole rabble of the Schoolmen: Schoolmen hereticks, by contradicting the determination of the General Council at Nice 2. which H. T. citeth, and the doctrine which he faith is the doctrine of Gods Church, such is the faith and unity of the Papists.

But they will say still that though all these worship the very Cross and Images themselves, and that with Divine worship. ret there be some of a better mind, that do but worship God by the Image, such as H. T. &c. Answ. And do you think that rational Pagans did not know as well as you that their Images were not Gods themselves, and so worshipped them not as Gods, but as the representers and instruments of some Diety? Lactantius Instit. lib. 2. cap. 2. brings them in saying thus Non ipsa. &c. We fear not them, but those whom they represent, and to whose names they are consecrated [And Arnobius thus [Deos per simulachraveneramur: It is the Gods that we worship by Images And Augustine thus reporteth the Pagans sayings [in Psal. 96. Non ego lapidem, &c. I do not wor hip that stone, nor that Image, which is without sense] And in Psal. Psal. 113. cono. 2. Nec simulachrum, nec damonium colo, &c. I worship neither the Image, nor a Spirit in it; but by the bodily likeness I behold the sign of that which I ought to worship.] Yea that many of them renounced the worshipping of Devils, appeareth by Augustines repott of their words, in Psal. 96. Non colimus mala damonia. &c. We worship not evil spirits: It is those that you call Angels, that we worship, who are the powers of the great God, and the Ministers of the great God To whom Austin answers [Would you would worship them (that is, honour them aright,) then you would easily learn of them not to worship them] And doubtless few could be so silly as to think there were as many fupiters or Apollos as there were Images of them in the world. So that you see here that some of the Pagans as to Image-worthip disclaimed that which the Papists ascribe to them, viz. Din vine worthip.

Oh but faith H. T. tellus not of particular Dollors, but of the Dollorine of Gods Church. Answ. What not of Saint Thomas? What! not of the Army of School Divines before mentioned? What! not of the [Communis sententia Theologorum:] the common judgement of Divines? for so they call it; What? not of that which is defide, or consonant to it, and whose con-opinion) what! not of Pope Clement the eighth and the Romane Pontifical? (pag. 672.) wonderful! are all these no body in your Church? O admirable harmony that is in your united Church!

But you can agree to leave out the fecond commandment lest the very words should deter the people from Image worship; and to make an irrational division of the tenth to blind their eyes. And yet you cry up the Testimony of the Fathere, when you are fain to hide one of the ten commandments, fo that thousands of your poor seduced followers, know not that there is such a thing. No wonder if you cast away Gregory Nyssen's Epistle against Pilgrimages; and Epiphanius his words (in the end of his Epissle to Johan. Herosol.) against Images; and if Valquez (in 3 Thom. disp. 105. c. 3.) contrary to the plain words do fain that it was the Image of a prophane or common man that Epiphanius puld down; and Al. Cope (Dial. 5. c. 21.) say, that the epistle is counterfeit and not Epiphanius's: and if Bellarmine (de Imag. c. 9.) and Baronius (ad an. 392.) say that this part of the Epistle is forged: and if Alphoni, a Castro. (cont. Hæres. de Imag.) reproach Epiphanius for it as an Iconoclast: so well are you agreed also in the confutation of the Fathers Testimonies, that any way will serve your turn, though each man have his several way. Fair fall Vasquez that plainly confesseth, that indeed the Scripture doth forbid not only the morship of an Image for God, but also the worshiping of the true God in an Image: but faith that this commandment is now repealed, and therefore under the Gospel we may do otherwise. (Vasq. li. 2. de Adorat. Disp. 4. c. 3. Sect. 74.75. & c. 4. Sect. 84.

But of this point I shall say no more now but this. 1. Many Christian Churches do reject Images from their Churches and worship as well as Protestants. 2. More reject statues that reject not pictures. 3. Many that keep them, worship not them, ror God in them, or by them, as by a mediate object. 4. General Councils have been against Images, that want nothing but the pleasure of the Pope to make them of as good authority as the Council that was for them. 5. That Council that was for them (Nice 2.) condemneth the Schoolmen and Pope Clement himself as Hereticks, for worshiping them, or the Cross with Divine worship. 6. I again urge any Pspilt to answer Dallaus book rationally that can. 7. To spare me the labour of saying more of the judgement of the ancient Catholick Church against the Popish use of Images, I desire the Reader to peruse what Cassander an honest Papist hath written to that and, Consultat. de Imag. et simulac. who begins thus [Ad Imagines vero sanctorum quod attinet, certum est, initio pradicati Evangelii aliquanto tempore inter Christianos, prasertim in ecclesiis, imaginum usum non suise, ut ex Clemente & Arnobio patet: Tandem pieturas in ecclesiam admissa ut rerum gestarum historiam exprimentes & ... And he produceth abundance from antiquity against the present Popish use of them.

4. Another point in which the Papills pretend to better Countenance from Antiquity then we, is the point of the Corporal presence with Transubstantiation: But of this there is so much said by multitudes of our Divines, that I shall now say no more, but desire the studious to Read at least Bishop Oshers Answ. to the Jesuite of it, and Edmundus Abertinus de Eucharistia: a Treatise so full of evidence from Scripture, Reason, and the judgement of the Fathers, that I boldly challenge all the Papills in the world to give a tolerable answer to it, that is a better

When we have thus shewed them the stream of Antiquity to have been against them, they pass us by, and thrust into the ignorant peoples hands, a few musty scraps of abused words, which are answered and cleared over and over: Thus do H.T. D. Baily, and others.

5. In the point of Satisfaction and Purgatory, besides what Sadeel, Chamier and others have said, Other and the foresaid Dallans in a full Treatise have shewed the Papists nakedness from Antiquity, so that modesty should forbid them to pretend the Fathers for them any more, if any modesty be lest.

6. About their Fasts (though that be no essential of Religion) both the time, manner &c. is so fully spoak to by the said Dallaus in another just volume de fejuniis, that Popery in this also is openly condemned by the Fathers in the view of the impartial confiderate world.

The point of Free will, and most of the rest in which they imagine that we dissent from Antiquity or the Eastern Churches,

I have spoak to already in my first Book against Popery. I had thought to have gone through the rest particularly, at least the rest mentioned by H.T. and D. Baily; but sinding them so frequently and fully handled already, I will forbear such labour in vain.

CHAP. XXVI.

Detect. 17. A Nother of the Papists Deceits, and one of the Principal that they support their cause with, is, A false interpretation and application of all the sayings of the Fathers, which they can but force to a shew of countenancing their supremacy. That you may find out their jugling in this, I shall shew you some of of their Footsteps more particular-

- I. Any claim that their own ambitious Bishops have made to a further power then was due to them, they use as an Argument for their universal soveraignty: when as we deny not but that there was too much pride and Ambition in their Prelates (which is all that this will prove;) even in some that otherwise might be good men. We deny not but that Zosimus would fain have extorted a confession of his usurped power, and a submission to it from Aurelius, Augustine, and the rest of the Africane Council. But yet he could not do it. We confes that Leo the first, and Gregory the first, and others, were very busie for the extending of their power: And that the Romane Bishops were long endeavouring to have put the halter on the Africanes heads, year and long about the French before they got them under. And shall these partial ambitious men be the witnesses? And because they would have had more power, doth it follow that it was their due ?
- 2. Again, if they find that any distressed Churches or Bishops have but sent to Rome for help, they presently gather thence that they took the Pope to be Christs Vicar General. As when Chrysostome sent to Innocent, and Basil and the rest in the East did send so oft for help into the West, when as the reasons were but such as these; I. Because Rome during the Emperors residence there, was the place where life or death was last pronounced on every mans Z cause cause by the secular power: and therefore the Bishop of Rome had the greater opportunity to befriend other Churches. 2. And afterwards Rome had a great secular influence on the Empire. 3. And because in the divisions of the East about Arrianisme, they thought the countenance of the Orthodox in the West might have done somewhat to turn the scales. 4. Because the Bishop of Rome being taken for the Patriarch of the first place,

I will delay you now which no more instances, then thoseof Basils time from the East. Enfebius, Meletius, Basil, and the rest of the Orthodox, being both pestered with the Arrians, and all to pieces also among themselves, do send for help to the West. (Basil. Epist. 69.) But to whom? and for what? Not to the Bishop of Rome only, nor by name, but equally to the Bishops of Italy and France, without any mention of the Romane pow-And it was not that the Pope might decide all by his foveraign power, which certainly was so neer a way to their relief, that no wife man can imagine them fo mad as to forget it. if it had been a thing then known and approved of. But only they defire that some may be sent to help them to be the stronger party in a Synod, or at least some one to comfort them, and put some countenance on their cause. And Epist. 70. Basil writeth himself (in the name of the rest:) but to whom [To the Bishops of France and Italy.] and France before Italy, without taking potice of an universal Head of the Church at Rome. And what doth he so importune them for ? not that the Pope would decide the controverse: but that they would acquaint the Emperour with their state (because the West had an Orthodox Emperor, and the East an Arrian) or fend some to them to see how it stood with them: fo that it was but either help from the Emperor, or countenance from the number of Bishops (because they were over voted quite at home) that they defired. So Epift. 74. Basil again writes, [to the Bishops of the West;] (and so no more to the Romane Bishop then the rest,) and he giveth these as his Reasons For, (saich he) what we here speak is suspected, as if we spoke through private contention. — But for you, the further you are remote from them by habitation, so much credit you have with the people, whereto is added that the grace of God helpeth you to religue the oppressed: Andif Many of you ununimously decree the (Ams: Same things, it is manifest that the multitude, will produce a certain reception of your opinion. Wonderfull! if there were then a Vicar General of Christ at Rome, that it never came into their mind to crave his decision or help, as such?

O but fay the Papilts, that was because they had to do only with the Arrians, that cared for no authority that was against them. Answ. 1. But would these Arrians have so much regarded the votes of the French and Italian Bishops, yes or a few men fent from them, and yet not regard the Head of the Church? The Arrians sure had heard of this Headship, if any had. And would not the Orthodox defire fo much as a word from Rome for this advantage? 2. But it is false that they were only the Arrians that they called for help against. They expresly say, that it was also because they were divided among themselves, (by personal quarrels.) How importunately doth Gregory Nyllen afterward call for help from others, and telleth Flavianus in his Epift. to him, of their misery as if all were lost ? And the only sad instance was, that Helladius (counted a good Bishop) had proudly neglected him, and made him stand at his door (when he went to visit him) a great while before he was let in; and then did not bid him sit down; and then did not speak to him first but two or three strange angry words. This was the great bufiness. But to proceed with Bafil. Epift. 77. he falls to chiding the Western Bishops, for not sending to them, nor regarding them and their communion : and to touch their pride. headdeth, [We have one Lord, one faith, one hope: Whether you think your selves the Head of the universal Church : the head cannot say to the feet, I have no need of you; or if you place your selves in the order of other Church-members, you cannot say to us, we need you not.] And would you here believe that the Papifts have the faces to cite this passage of Basil, for their Headthip, because here is the word Head! When as its plain, I. That Basil by the Head means but the chiefest part, and not the soveraign power. 2. That he speaks to all the Bi-Thops of the West, and not only to the Romane Bishop. 3. That he doth it as a smart reproof of their arrogancy, and not in any approbation at all. But any thing will ferve them. More from Basil I shall have occasion to mention anon.

3 Nore also, that when the Papists find but any Heresie condemned by the Bishop of Rome, they cite this as a testimony of their Soveraignty: As if other Patriarch and Bishops condemned them not as well as they; Or as if we knew no that the Church desired the most general vote against Hereticks, and therefore would be loth to leave so great a Bishop out.

4. And when they find the Pope excommunicating forreign Bishops, they cry up this as a Testimony of his Headship: As if we did not know, 1. That to refuse Communion with another Church or Bishop is no act of Jurisdiction over them. other Bishops have made bold also to excommunicate the Pope: I'le now but recite those words of Nicephorus lib. 17. cap. 26. which you use to glory in (as many do in their own shame) Vigilius (saith he) proceeded to that insolency, that he excommunicated Mennas for four moneths. And Mennas did the Same by him : But Justinian being moved to anger with such things, fent some to lay hold on him. But Vigilius being afraid of himself, fled to the Altar of Sergius the Martyr, and laid hold on the Sacred Pipes, would not be drawn away till he had pul'd them down - But by the Mediation of the Empress Theodora, the Pope was pardoned, and Menna and he absolved one another. A fair proof of the Vicarship! 3. And so it was, that Pope Honorins was condemned for an Heretick by two or three General Councils.

5. Also when they meet with any big words of their own Popes (as I command this or that) they take it for a proof of the Vicarship: As if big words did prove Authority. Or as if we knew not how lowlily and poorly they spoke to those that were above them. As Gregory the first for instance, was high enough towards those that he thought he could master: but what low submissive language doth he use to secular Governors that were capable of overtopping him? And what flattering language did his successors use to the most base murderers and usurpers of the Empire?

6. Another Roman deceit is this; When they find any mention of the exercise of the (now thriving) Roman Power, over their own Diocess or Patriarchal circuit, they would hence prove his universal Power over all. And by that Rule the Patriarch of Alexandria or Conftantinople may prove as much.

7. Also

7. Also when they meet with the passages that speak of the elevation of their Pope to be their first Patriarch in the Roman Empire, or any Power that by the Emperors was given him, they cunningly confound the Empire with the world, and especially if they find it called by the name of the world; and they would persuade you that all other Christians and Churches on earth, did ascribe as much to the Bishop of Rome, as the Roman Empire did. Its true that he was in the Empire acknowledged to be first in order of dignity, because of Rome the seat of his Episcopacy; especially when General Councils began to trouble themselves and the world about such matters of precedency. And its well known from the language of their writers, as well as from the words of Luke 2. 1. that they usually called the Empire all the world: And from such passages would the Papists prove the Primacy at least of the Pope over all the world. But put these Juglers to it, to prove if they can, that beyond the Rivers Meroes and Euphrates, and beyond the bounds of the Roman Empire, the Pope did either exercise Dominion, or was once so much as regarded by them, any more then any other Bishop, except there were any adjacent Island or Countrey that had their dependence upon the Empire. I hope they will not deny that the Church extended much beyond the Empire. (Though our History of that part of it be much defective.) And let them prove if they can, that ever any of those Churches had any regard to the Roman Bishop, any more then to another man. Let them tell you where either the Empire of the Abasfines or any other out of the line of the Imperial power, was any whit like fubject to the Pope.

8. But their chief fraud is about names and words. When they meet with any high complemental title given to the Bishop of Rome, they presently conclude that it signifieth his Soveraignty. Let us instance in some particulars, and show the vanity of their conclu-fions from them.

1. Sometimes the Roman Bishops are called [Summi Pontifices,] the chief Popes: and hence some gather their Supremacy. But I suppose you will believe Baronius (their chief flatterer) in such a case as this. And he tells you in Martyrolog. Roman. April. 9. that [Fuit olim vetus ille usus in Ecclesia, ut Episcopi omnes, non tantum Pontifices, sed & summi Pontifices diceren-tur—i. e. It was the ancient custom of the Church to call all Bishops not only Pontifices Popes, but chief Popes] And then citing such a passage of Hierom Epist. 99. he addeth [Those that understand not this ancient custom of speech, refer these words to the Popedom of the Church of Rome.)

2. As for the names Papa, Pope, Dominus, Pater Sauctissimus, beatissimus, dei amantissimus, &c. its needless to tell you that these were commonly given to other Bishops.

3. And what if they could find that Rome were called the mother of all Churches? I have formerly shewed you, where Basil saith of the Church of Casarea, that it is as the mother of all Churches in a manner. And Hierusalem bath oft that Title.

4. Sometime they find where Rome is called Caput Ecclesiarum, and then they think they have won the cause. When if you will consult the words, you shall find that it is no more then that Priority of Dignity which (not Christ, but) the Emperours and Councils gave them, that is intended in the word. Its called the Head, that is, the chief Seat in Dignity, without any meaning that the Pope is the universal Monarch of the world.

5. But what if they find the Pope called the Archbishop of the Catholick Church, or the Universal Bishop? then they think they have the day. Ianswer, indeed three flattering Monks at the Council of Calcedon, do so superscribe their libels; but they plainly mean no more then the Bishop that in order of dignity is above the rest; And many particular Churches are oft called Catholick Churches. There's difference between [A Catholick Church] and [The Catholick Church.] And the Bishop of Constantinople had that Title, even by a Council at Constant. an. 518. before the Bishop of Rome had it publikely. or durst own it: It was settled on the Patriarch of Constantinople to be called the Occumenical or Universal Patriarch. Who knoweth not that Emperours gave fuch Titles at their pleafure? Instinian would sometime give the Primacy to Rome, and at another time to Constantinople, laying [Constantinopolitana Ecclesia omnium aliarum est caput: The Church of Constantinople is the Head of all other Churches.] An. Dom. 530. C. de Epifcopis. 1. 1. lege 24. And its known that this Justinian that sometime time calls Rome the Head, did yet when the fifth General Council had condemned Vigilius Pope of Rome, permit Theodora his Empress to cause him to be fetcht to Constantinople, and drag'd about the street in a halter, and then banished, till they had forced him to subscribe and submit to the Council: even as they had deposed Pope Silverius his predecessor. And Baronins himself mentioneth a Vaticane Monument which as it calls Agapetus Episcoporum princeps on one side, so doth it call Menna [the Apostolick Universal Bishop:] Which Baronius faith, doth mean no more then that he was Universal ever his own Provinces: and if that be so, any Bishop may be called Universal. And do not these men know what Council of Carthage decreed that the Bishop prime sedis should be called neither Summus Sacerdos, nor Princeps Sacerdosum, vel aliquid hujusmedi, tantum Episcopus prima sedis : i.e. Not the chief Priest. or the chief of Priests but the Bishop of the first seat] And how long will they that their eyes against the I estimony of two of their own Popes, Pelagius and Gregory the first that condemned the name of Universal Bishop?

Sometime they find the Church of Rome called Apostolick, and so were others as well as that, as is commonly known.

And sometime the Pope is called the Pillar of the Church; And what of that? so are many others as well as he; as all the Apostles were as well as Peter? The Church is built on the Foundation of the Apostles and Prophets. That the Pastors of the Church were ordinarily called the Pillars and props of it, as by Nicephorus Gildas, Theodoret, Basil, Tertullian, Dionysius, Hierom, Augustine, &c. you may see proved in Gatakers Cinnus page 395,396.

And lastly, when the Papists read their Popes called the Successors of Peter, they take this as a proof of their Soveraignty. Whereas 1. Peter himself had no such Soveraignty. 2. They succeed him not in his Apostleship. 3. They are called Pauls Successors as well as Peters. 4. Others are called Peters Successors too as well as they, by the Fathers. 5. And other Bishops ordinarily are called the Apostles Successors, and other Churches called Apostolick Churches.

I shall only set before them the words of one man at this time, (Hesychii Hierosol. apud Photium Cod. 269.) and desire them to tell me whether ever more were said of the Pope, yea or of Peter, then he saith of Andrew, calling him [Chorie Apostolici primogenitus, primitus desixa Ecclesia columna, Petri Petrus, sundamenti sundamentum; principii principium vel primitia, qui vocavit antequam vocaretur, adduxit priusquam adduceretur] i.e. [The sirst begotten of the Apostolick Chore, the sirst sixed Pillar of the Church; the Peter of Peter, or the Rock of Peter, the Foundation of the Foundation; the Principal of the Principal, who called before he was called, and brought (others) to (Christ) before he was brought to him (by any others.)

275. [This ignomiator, &c. i.e. With what Praises may I fet forth the servant and Brother of Christ, the chief Emperour (or Commander or Captain) of the New Hierusalem; the Prince or chief of Priests, the President or Principal of the Apostles, the Crown or Leader among the Heads, the principal Lamp among the Lights; the principal planet among the Stars; Poter speaketh to the people; but James giveth the Lam (or sets down the Lam) Can they shew us now where more then this is said of Peter himself? Much less of the Pope?

CHAP. XXVII.

Detect. 18. A Nother of the Principal Deceits of the Papists, is, the forging and corrupting of Councils and Fathers, and the citation of such forgeries. Be carefull therefore how you receive their Allegations, till you have searched and know the Books to be genuine, and the particular words to be there, and uncorrupted.

They have by their greatness obtained the opportunity of possessing so many Libraries, that they might the easilyer play this abominable game. But God in mercy hath kept so many monuments of Antiquity out of their hands, partly in the Eastern, and partly in the Resormed Churches, as suffice to discover abundance of their wicked forgeries and falfifications.

Of

Of their forging Canons, yea feigning Councils that never were, (as Concil. Sinnessan. Concil. Rom. sub Silvestr. See Bishop Whers Answer to the fest pag. 12, 13. As also of their forging Constantines Donation, and Isidore Mercators forging of a fardell of Decretals; and of their falsifying and corrupting in the Doctrine of the Sacrament, the works of Ambrose, of Chrysost. (or the Author openis Impersection), of Fulbertus Bishop of Chartres; of Rabanus of Mentz, of Bertram, or Ratrannus, &c. Read I pray you the words detecting their horrible impious cheats.

But their Indices expurgatorii will acquaint you with much more. And yet their secreter expurgations are worst of all.

What words of Peters Primacy, and others for their advantage, they have added to Cyprian de unitate Ecclesia, see in Jer. Stephens his Edition of it, where much more additions to Cyprians works are detected out of many Oxford Manuscripts.

Andreas Schottus the Jesuite publishing Basils works at Antwerp Lat. A. D. 1616. with Jesuitical fidelity, lest out the Epiltle, in which is this passage following, which should not be lolt: speaking of the Western Bishops he saith weily the manners of Proud men do use to grow more insolent, if they be honoured. And if God be merciful to us, what other addition have we need of ? But if Gods anger on us remain, what help can the pride of the West bring us? when they neither know the Truth, nor can endure to speak it; but being prepossessed with false suspicions, they do the same things now, which they did in the case of Marcellus, contentiously disputing against those that taught the truth, but for Herefie, confirming it by their authority. Indeed I was willing (not as representing the publike person of the East) to write to their Leader (Damasus) but nothing about Church matters. but that I might intimate that they neither knew the truth of the things that are done with us, nor did admit the way by which they might learn them. And in general, that the; should not insult over the calamitous and afflicted, nor think that Pride did make for their dignity, when that one sin alone is enough to make us hatefull to God] so far Basil in that Epistle left out by the Jesuite; in which you may see the Romane power in those daies, in the consciences of Basil and such other Fathers in the East.

And (by the way) how Tertullian reverenced them, you Aa may may see lib. de pudicit. pag. 742. where he calls Zepherinus, as we say, all to naught: And the Asian Bishops condemning of Victor, with Ireneus his reproof of him; Cyprians and Firmilians condemning Stephen: Marcellinus his condemnation by all : Liberius his being so oft Anathematized by Hilary Pictar. the resistance of Zosimus and Boniface by the Africans, &c. fhew plainly in what esteem the now-infallible universal Head was then among the Fathers, and in all the Churches. But when the Papilts come to the mention of such passages, what juglings do they use? sometime they silence them: sometime they pass them over in a few words that are buried in a heap of other matters: sometime they bring in some forgeries to obscure them. But commonly they make a nose of wax of Councils and Fathers, as well as of Scripture, and put any ridiculous sence upon them that shall serve their turns, though perhaps fix men among them may have five or fix Expositions.

An Epistle of Ciril of ferusalem to Austin is forged by one, that their Molanus calleth Abarbarous impostor (Histor. Imag. 1. 3. c. 36.) about the miracles of Hierom; where Purgatory and other errors are befriended. When as Ciril himself dyed thirty years before Hierome. And yet Binssield, Suarez and other of the most learned Papists stick not to make use of this forgery for all that.

But it would be tedious to recite their particular forgeries. The studious Reader may find many of them discovered up and down by Bishop Other and other of our Writers. And for his fuller help, I advise him to read Dr. Reignolds de Libris Apocryph. and Dr. Th. James his corruptions of the Fathers, and Scultetus his medulla patrum t yea of the Papists themselves, read Sixtus Senensis his Bibliothes. and Bellarm. de Scriptorib. Eccles. and Possevines Apparatus, and Erasmus censures on the Fathers which he dealt with: But especially let him not be without Cooks censura Patrum, and Blondell on the Decretals; to which also add Rivets Critica Sacra, and Dallaus de Pseudepigraphis.

Of their abominable Legends I shall say nothing, but that the wifer fort of themselves are ashamed of them. And if any Ancients have abused the Church by shameless forgeries, the Papists make use of such as considertly as if they were the word of God.

For instance, Let any man but read over the Books of Basil Bishop of Selencia (if it be his indeed) of the life & Miracles of Thecla, and try his faith upon it, whether he be able to believe that Thecla stood so long at the window to hear Paul while all those daily applications and orations were made to her? that Demas and Hermogenes were there to stir up the people against Paul as a deceiver, under the cloak of being his companions; that any of these Orations recited are true, when the Anthor like a professed fabler useth to fay [I suppose thus or thus they said: I that her Mother Theoc'xs, and her lover Thamiris were on the Indden so cruel as to burn her, while they are said so much to burn in Love to her; that when Thecla bad formed her body like a Cross, and cast her felfinto the flaming pile, the flames in reverence of the Cross, became as a Chamber to her, covering her like a vault from the peoples light, and not approaching her; and that the earth making a grievous noise, the showrs and hail destroyed the people. and Theela went her way without observance, finding Paul and Onesiphorus bid in a Sepulcher at prayer for ber: that Paul permitted ber to cut ber hair, and change ber habit, and become his fellow travailer; that Alexander the Governour was so inflamed with her beauty at Antioch, even before she came in full sight of the people in the City Gate, that he could not forbear, but presently must leap upon ber like a mad dog; that she tore his Cloak, and threw off his Crown, and so saved her Virginity; that for this the was cast and tyed to wild beasts, and the Lyons couched to her, and one Lyoness fought for her, and killed the rest that assaulted her; shat yet they turned more upon her: that she leaped into the Fish pond among the devouring Sea Calus; and that five from Heaven came down into the Water, and there made her a chamber, and saved her from those Sea-beasts; that Falconilla's soul appeared to her Mother Tryphana to beg Thecla's prayers that she might be admitted into heaven, telling her how much Thecla was admired in Heaven. (She knew who was admired in Heaven before she could be let in:) that at Thecla's prayers she was admitted into heaven; (but tells us not where she was before:) shat when Theela was again tied to wild bulls, and fire fet to their posteriors to enrage them, the fire killed them, and burnt the bonds, and she was unhurt. That Thecla again puts on mans cleaths; and seeks Paul; (whether she wore breeches I find not;) that Aa 2

Paul hereupon pronounceth her an Apostle (a predecessor of Pope Joan) and ordaineth her to go and preach the Gospel: and appointeth her to one Pagan City (as if either women were Apostles, or ordained to be preachers of the Gospel, that by Paul were forbidden to speak in the Church: or Apostles were confined to a City:) that she fixed at Seleucia, and there converted and baptized many, and at last (after many miracles) did not die, but entred alive into the earth, which opened it self for her in the place where the holy Table stood; that after her death she wrought those one and thirty miracles that fill a second Book, and many more; appearing to this Basil, and encouraging him when he was weary, to go in in the writing of her praises, and plucking him by the ear, and so curing his headach, which else would have prevented his Oration in her praise the next day, with abundance more that are more strange then this.

I have instanced but in this one case of Thecla, because it would be endless to tell you of all the rest of their fictions (were I acquainted with them all) Nor do I mention this as one of their Legends, no nor as a piece of Metaphrastes, but as the works of St. Basil (not Basil the great) an ancient Father, Now either this is Basils work, or it is not. If it be not, then you see what trust is to be given to the Papists Antiquities, and supposed Fathers: For this is one of them, and this story vindicated by Petrus Pantinus, yea by no less a man then the Great Baronius, the Master of Antiquities, who Annal. Tom. 1. ad. An. D. 47. bringeth a whole Army of Fathers to attest the Acts of Thecla, and approveth of this of Bafils, and the like of Metaphrastes. Two Testimonies trouble him shrewdly. One is no later then Tertullian, who (de Baptis. cap. 18.) faith thus [But if any women read the pretended writings of Paul, and defend the example of Thecla, for womens Liberty to teach and baptife, let them know that a Presbyter in Asia, that framed that writing putting Pauls name instead of his own was cast out of his place, being convicted of it, and confessing that he did it in love to Paul.]

The other is Hieroms testimony de Script. Eccles. who citing the fore-cited words, saith i The travails therefore of Paul and Thecla, and the whole fable of the baptized Lyon, we reckon among Apocryphal writings: For how can it be that the inseparable companien of the Apostle (Luke) was ignorant of this only among all his matters?

But yet Baronius thinks that these are not the same Books that Tertullian and Hierom speak against: and why so? Because 1. Here is no mention of Theclaes Preaching and Baptizing, nor of the Lyon baptized. 2. Because so many Fathers attest the story. But the first is a visible falshood, contrary to the express words of the story, which feign Paul to have sent her to preach as a true Apostle, and mention her baptizing the people of Selencia. And for the baptized Lyon, perhaps Hierom spoke de baptismate sanguinis: and meant the Lyon that dyed in the defence of Thecla: And in that place Thecla is brought as calling Death a Baptism: However that word which might easily be mistaken is no great disproof that this is the same story. And for the Fathers Testimony, as we believe that a samous Martyr called Theela there was from whence the occasion of the story rose. so it doth but shew how unfit the Fathers are to be the Authors of our Faith, or to be esteemed infallible, that so easily believe and recite the forged stories of an Asiatick Presbyter, even when Tertullian had before revealed the deceit.

But if really this Book was written by Basil of Selencia, and was not spurious, then we yet surther see, that they that rest upon the Holy Scriptures alone for the matters of their faith, do take a surer wiser way, then they that build all on the credit of such credulous imprudent fabulous Fathers as this author was.

By this little taste you may see how their Records and Testimonies from Antiquity are to be trusted: Even as Zosimus report of the Nicene Canon to the African Council was, who proved it a forgery, and so rejected it, when the writings are only in their keeping, and their interest calleth them to deprave them, they are little to be trusted; who dare venture to corrupt those that are in the hands of the Christian world.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Detect. 19. A Nother of the Popish devices is, when they have laid their own cause upon so many forgeries, and uphold it by so many false reports, to make the people believe that it is we that are the lyars, and that we are not to be believed in any thing that, we say of them: and that we misreport the Fathers, belge the Roman Catholicks, and therefore no man Chould read our Books, or discourse with us, so as to afford us any credence. So that indeed they get as much by meer perswading the people that we are Lyars, as by any way that I know. We cannot tell them what is in their own Writers, but the ignorant people are commonly taught to fay, me flander them. Though we cite the book, and page, and line, and tell them that they were printed at Rome, or Colen, or Antwerp, or Paris, by men of their own Profession, yet they believe us not, for they are instructed to hold us for lyars, that we may be uncapable of doing them good. If we cite any of the Fathers, they tell us that we misalledge them, or have corrupted them, or they fay no such thing. If we shew them the books published by their own Doctors, and licensed by their Superiors, and printed by Papifts, yet they will not believe us. And fo they are taught the easiest way in the world to repell the truth, and confute those that would do them good. It is no more but fay, you lye, and all's done.

In such a case as this, what is there to be done? Ignorance and Incredulity thus purposely conjoyned, are the wall of brass that is opposed to our endeavours. To what purpose should we speak to them that will not hear? In such a case I know but one of these two wayes. I. To endeavour to revive the stupisted humanity and Reason of these men: and ask them, Is Religion the work of a man or of a beast? Of a wise man, or of a mad man? Is it a Reasonable or an Unreasonable course? If it be Reasonable, why then will you go without Reason upon other mens bare words? But if you are so little men as to venture your souls without Reason, me thinks you should not venture against it? Would you rest on the bare word of one of these men, if it went against Reason? If so, then you renounce your manbood. But suppose you will be so unreasonable, yet I hope you have your five senses still? What if a Priest shall tell you that the Crow is white, and the snow is black, or that you see not when you know you see, will you believe him? If you will believe them before your eyes, and taste, and seeling, then I have done with you; who can dispute with stocks and stones, or men so far for saken of God, as to renounce all their senses? But if you will not besieve a Priest against your eyes, and other senses; then why do you believe him that Bread is not Bread, and Wine is not Wine, when the eyes, and smell, and taste of all men say it is? And if your senses tell you that your Priests deceive you in one thing, me thinks you should not be so consident of them in other things, as to believe and hearken to none but them.

2. If this will not serve, try whether you can procure their Priests to discuss those points before the incredulous people, that so they may hear both sides speak together. Get a conserence between them, and some experienced judicious Divine. But this will hardly be obtained. For if it be to dispute with one that is able, they's presently pretend a danger of persecution: and no promise of security will satisfie them. But if it be a weak unexperienced man that challengeth them, then they will venture, and take the advantage.

If nothing else can be done, it is the best way to offer them some small Book against Popery to read. If they are so captivated that they will neither Hear nor Read, and their Leaders will not be drawn to a Dispute, I know not what to do but leave them, and let them take what they get by their unreasonable obstinacy: They are unworthy of truth that see

CHAPLXXIX.

Detect. 20. A Nother of their deceits is by pretended Miracles. If they do but hear of a Wench that hath the frangulatus uteri, or furor uterinus, or such hyfterical Paffions in any violent degree, they prefently go to cast the Devil out of her, that so they may make deluded people think that they have wrought a Miracle. And usually the Countrey people, and perhaps the diseased woman her telf, may be so much unacquainted with the difease, as verily to believe the Priests that they have a Devil indeed : and so turn Papists when the cure is wrought, as thinking it was done by the finger of God. The nature of this disease is to cause such strange symptoms, that most ignorant people that see them, do think that the persons are either bewitched, or have a Devil. At this very time while I am writing this, I am put to disswade a man from accusing one of his neighbours of witchcraft, because his daughter hath this disease; and cryeth out of her. Lest the Pa; pilts get further advantage by this ignorance of the people. I shall acquaint them briefly with some of the symptoms of this disease. It usually seizeth upon young women between the Age of feventeen and thirty two years : And most commonly on those that are of a found complexion; somewhat sanguine, or at least, fleshly and strong, and but seldom on the weaker fort (in this manner.) When it is but a meer strangulation, women commonly know it, by the rifing to their throat, and fweling, and the like : But when it comes to the dilease we mention, it causeth them to fall by fits into sudden trances, and swoons. in which at first usually they seem stupid as dead, if it be in a colder body, but after they grow to violent motions, and strivings, and ragings, so that its as much as two can do to hold them. And when the fit is over, they are well again. Sometime there will be motions like convulfive in the head, the hands, and the fingers diffinctly: so that you shall see one hand violently moved to some part of the body, so that it will be hard to removeit. Sometime one finger fet double, and then another, and after that another, so that it will be hard till the fit is over to fet them strait. Usually the body tost up and down with

with raging madness. And some of them will continue a year, or two, or feven in this case, daily falling in such fits as one would think should destroy or weaken them presently, and yet after the fits, be almost as well as ever, and their strength doth not much decay. If they hear any mention of a Witch, they will likely take a conceit that they are bewitched; and then in their fits they will cry out upon the Witch, and if they fee her, they will fall into a fit. If they get but a conceit that they are Poffef. fed with a Devil, (by hearing the mention of others that were possessed) they will by the power of corrupted fancy, play the pares of the pofferfed, and rage, and rore, and swear, and speak as in the person of the Devil, and take on them to prophesie, or tell of fecrets. All this I have known : and I have eased some of them by medicine in a few moments, and cured them (at that time) in a few dayes: So that I could eafily have made the common people believe that I had cast out a Devil, if I had but had the defign and conscience of a Papilt. A while ago a neighbour Minister told me of a neighbour that was handled thus, I told him what disease it was, and advised him to perswade her to a judicious Physician. But the next I hear of her was. that neglecting the Physician, she was cured by some Papist Priest, and thereupon was turned Papist. And no doubt but among themselves it is reported for a Miracle.

The same course they take also in some distractions and other diseases. And sometime persons are trained up by them to dissemble and counterfeit a lunatick or possessed state.

And here because H.T. in his Manual, pag 85, 86. doth plead their Miracles, I shall revive the memory of one of the great Miracles that was done among their Profesites in the Parish of Welverhampton: though I have mentioned it heretosore. I have the Book by me (Printed at London by F. K. for Will. Barret, 1622.) and have spoke with many persons that knew the Actor himself, being yet alive: so that I suppose that no Papist about Wolverhampton will deny it, what ever they do elsewhere.

At Bilson in the Parish of Wolverhampton in Stafford-shire there was a Boy named William Perry, Son of Tho. Perry, who seemed to be bewitched or possessed with a Devil: (about thirteen years old, but of special wit above his age.) In his sits he seemed to be deaf, and blind, writhing his mouth aside, continually groaning and panting, and when he was pricked, pinched, whipped, be seemed not to feel. He seemed to take no food that would digelt, but with it cast up rags, thred, straw, pins, &c. his belly almost as flat as his back, his throat swel'd and hard, his tongue stiff and rolled up towards the roof of his mouth, fo that he seemed alwayes dumb, save that once in a fortnight or three weeks he would speak a few words. It was thought he was bewitched by one Foan Cocks, because I. He would discern when that woman was brought into the room, though it were secretly done, as was tryed before the Grand Jury at Stafford. 2. He would not endure the repeating of the first verse of John, In the beginning was the word, &c.] but other texts he would endure. When the Parents had been a while wearyed with him, and the Countrey flockt in to fee him, a Priest of the Romith Religion was invited to cure him. The Priest exorcifed, him praying in Latine over him, hanging a stone about his neck, washing him with Holy water, Witch water, and anointing him with Holy Oyl, &c. which seemed to ease him, and make him speak, and sometime cure him for the time. They-Hallowed all his meat and drink: He would not so much as ear Raisins, or smell to flowers, unless they were blest by the Priest: He told them that while the Puritans stood by him he saw the Devilassault him in the shape of a black bird. The Priest requireth the chief fiend to shew himself : then the boy puts out " his tongue swel'd: The Priest commandeth him to shew the People by the sheet before him, how he would use those that dyed out of the Roman Catholick Church, Whereupon he puls, and bites, and toffeth the sheet, till the people cry out and weep. Then he commandeth the Devilto tell him, how he did use Luthen, Calvin and John Fox: and he playeth the same part more fiercely then before. Then the Priest commands him to shew what power he had of a good Catholick that dyed out of mortal fin: and then he thrust down his arms, and hang'd down his head, and trembled. The Boy promiseth when his fit is over, that the will live and die a Catholick, perswading his parents and friends, &c. On this manner three Priests one after another followed the cure, still succeeding, but yet not curing him, that they might draw the Countrey to a longer observance of them, (and preacht to them in the house) and that the Miracle might be the more famous. For for footh there were many Devils in him, they faid, to be cast out. And it stopt the cure. because the Mother would not promise them to turn Papist if they cured him. But in the mean time the supposed Witch is brought to tryal at Stafford Assizes, 1620. before Judge Warburton and Judge Davies: But in the end the Judges defired Bishop Morton then present to take care of the Boy: who took him home to his Castle at Eccleshall, and after certain weeks time (the Bishop being abroad) the said Bishop comes to the Boy, and tells him that he understood that he could not endure the first verse of John, and saith he, the Devil understandeth Greek as well as English, being a Schollar of almost fix thoufand years standing, and therefore he knows when I recite that verse in Greek: And so calling for a Greek Testament, he read the 12. verse; and the Boy thinking it had been the first fell into his fit: And when that fit was over, the Bishop read the first verse, and then the Boy had no fit, thinking it had been some other verse. And thus they proved him a deceiver, and the Boy was much confounded, but pretended more distraction; and then that he might get away, he complained of extream fickness, and made water in the Urinal, as black as ink, groaning when he made it: But the third day after they espred him mixing ink with his Urine, and nimbly conveying away the Inkhorn. And when they came in upon him, and found him in the conveyance, he broke out into tears, and was suddenly cured, and confessed all, how he had been taught his art, and how he did all, and confessed that his intent was to be cured by a Priest, and to turn Papilt (and whether they have catche him again or no, I know not; for I hear he is a Quaker in Briffol, or at least, a reviler of the Ministry) The Bishop took his examination at large, Octob. 8. & 13. 1620. If any doubt of the story, they may be satisfied yet by the Boy himself, or by the Reverend Bishop yet alive, or by any of the neighbours in Bilson that were at age there but thirty seven years ago.

But before the Bishop had discovered the knavery, one of the Conjuring Priests writes the Narrative of the business (which is printed with the rest) and is Entituled [A Faithful Relation of the proceedings of the Catholick Gentlemen with the Boy of Billon, shewing, &c.] And they begin with [Not to us O Lord, but to thy Name give the Glory !] And so they proceed to make their report of it, for deluding the people, as a Miracle. And the writing was by a Papilt Gentleman examined, attested upon Oath to be received from one Mr. Wheeler, &c. But when they heard of the Discovery, they were ashamed of their faithful Relation. At last, the Bishop brought the Boy at the next fummers Affizes, July 26. 1621. to ask pardon openly of God. and the woman accused by him, and of the Countrey cheated by him, and there was an end of that Popish Miracle. Abundance more such I could give you out of certain records; but I recited this for the fake of H. T. and the Papills of Wolver-

And for your Miracles; I befeech you, if you regard not us, yet open your ears to a Jesuite that speaks the Truth. Foseph Acosta (de temporib. noviss. lib. 3.c. 3.) [To all the Miracles of Antichrift, though he do great ones, the Church shall boldly oppose the Belief of the Scriptures: and by the inexpugnable Testimony of this Truth, shall by most clear light dispell all his juglings as Clouds. - Signs are given to Infidels, Scriptures to Believers; and therefore the Primitive Church abounded with Miracles, when Infidels were to be called: But the last, when the Faithful are already Called, shall rest more on the Scripture, thenou Miracles. Yea I will boldly say, that all Miracles are vain and empty, unless they be approved by the Scripture; that is, have a doctrine conform to the Scripture. But the Scripture it felf is of it self a most firm Argument of Truth.

And the same Acosta consesseth in his Indian History, that they do no Miracles in the Indies (where the boast is.) And if they did, it would confirm Christianity, but not Popery.

Yea if Miracles be so much to be lookt at, why will you not give us leave to observe them? The same Miracles that you boast of, do testifie against you, if they be true. To instance now but in one. Prosper makes mention of a Miracle (which Thyraus: de Damoniac. pag. 76. and many more of yours recite,) that was done by the Sacramental Wine: A person possessed by the Devil was cured, (after many other means used in vain) by the Drinking of the Wine in the Eucharist. And doth not this Miracle justifie us that give the people the Wine, and condemn you, that refuse to give it them? Many other Miracles I could recite. that the Fathets say were done by the Sacrament in both kinds received, which condemn you that forbid it.

CHAP. XXX.

Detest. 21. A Nother of the Papilts waies of deceiving is, by impudent Lyes and Slanders against their Adversaries; which they vent with such confidence, that the seduced people easily believe them. They that are taught to believe their Priests against their own seeing, hearing, feeling, tasting and smelling, must needs believe the vilest Lyes that they are pleased to utter, in cases where the miserable people are unable to disprove them. I will give you but a few of that multitude of Instances that might be given.

1. In a Manuscript of the Papists which I lately received from a Neighbour of Sturbridge, as sent from Wolverbampton, there are these words, with which they conclude [Luther having richly supped, and made his friends merry with his facete conceits, died the same night. This is testified by Cochleus in vita Lutheri. And John Calvin, a branded sodomite, consumed with lice and worms, died blaspheming and calling upon the Devil. This is registred by Schlusselburge and Bolseck; these were the Ends of the Parents of the Protestant and Presbyderian presended Reformed Religions.

And as if their own tongue must sentence them to Hell, in the very words before they say All Lyars, their part shall be in the pool barning with fire and brimstone, which is the second death] And so make Application of it to the Protestants, as being Lyars; and when they have done conclude with the two forecited impudent Lies of Luther and Calvin. The like words of Calvin hath the late Marquels of Worsester (or Dr. Baily for him) in his Papers to King Charles; the whole writing being stuffed with such impudent Lies, that one would wonder that humane nature should be capable of such wickedness, and that the filly people should swallow down such heaps of falshood. And it is not these two alone, but multitudes of Papists that have writtenthese Lies of Luther and Calvin. Thyrans the Jesuite in his Book de Damoniacis, part. 1. cap. 8. pag. 21. tells us this story:

that the same day that Luther dyed, there was at Gheola a Town in Brahant many persons possessed of Devils, that waited on their Saint Dymna for Deliverance, and were all that day delivered: but the next day they were all possessed again; whereupon the Exorcist or some body asked the Devils where they had been the day before; and they answered, that they were commanded by their Prince to be at the Funeral of their sellow Labourer Luther. And for proof if this, Luthers own servant that was with him at his death, looking out at the window, did more then once, to his great terror, see a company of ugly spirits leaping and dancing about without: and also that the Crows sollowed the Corps all the way with a great noise.]

O wonderful patience and mercy of God, that suffereth such abominable Lyars to live, and doth not cause some sudden vengeance to befall them! Reader, I will tell thee now the case of these two servants of Christ that are thus revised (even as their Master was before them, that was said to do Miracles by

As for Luther, he was oft taken with a great pain in his breast, about the mouth of the stomack, and thought his Death when it came would be sudden; which made him say, Feri Domine, feri clementer, quia ipse paratus sum: strike Lord, strike mercifully, for I am ready | Having preached his last Sermon at Wittenberge, Jan. 17. he took his journey the 23. to Count Mansfields Countrey, whither he was called. When he came thither, he was grown so weak, that they almost despaired of his life; yet by the use of somentations he had so much case, as that he preached sometime, and did other work from Jan. 29. to Febr. 17. The last day of his life, though he was weak, yet he sate at the table with them, and at Supper his discourse was upon the Question, Whether we shall know one another in Heaven? which he affirmed and proved, in that Adam knew Eve as soon as he saw her, that the was flesh of his flesh: and therefore much more shall we know one another in Heaven, &c. After Supper, he withdrew himself as he used, for private prayer; but the pain of his breast increased on him. When he had taken a medicine, he lay down on a Couch and flept sweetly two hours, and then went to his Chamber, saying to those about him [Pray God to preserve the Doctrine of the Gospel to as; for the Pope and Council of Trent have strange Contrivances.] When he was laid down and had flept a while he awakened, and found by the increase of his pain, that he was near his End, and spoke to God as followeth in their bearing [Omy beavenly Father, the God and Father of our Lord Felus Christ, the God of all Consolation, I thank thee that thou halt revealed to me thy Son Fesus Christ, in whom I bave believed, whom I have professed, whom I have loved, whom I have (elebrated (or Honoured) whom the Pope of Rome and the rest of the rabble of the ungodly do persecute and reproach: I befeech thee O my Lord fesus Christ receive my Joul. O my heavenly Father, though I am taken from this life, and though my body must now be laid down, yet I know certainly that I shall abide with thee for ever, and that none can take me out of thy hands.] Then he said [So God loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoever believeth in him, bould not perish, but have everlasting life Then he repeated part of the 68. Psalm: and when he had drunk a medicine that was given him, he faid [1 go hence: I now return my spirit unto God] presently adding [Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit, thou bast Redeemed me O God of Truth] And so he dyed as if he were setting himself to sleep, without any fign of further pain : but when they faw him dying, Dr. Jonas and Calius cryed to him [Reverend Father; do you die constant through Christ in his doctrine which you bave bitkerto preached?] And he answered [Yea] and never spoke more. When he was dead (at Islebe) Count Mansfield would have kept his body, but the Duke of Saxony would not fuffer him, but caused it to be brought back to Wittenberge, and there with great solemnity interred.

This is the true report in brief of Luthers Death, delivered to the world by those that stood by him, and were eye witnesses. And yet these impudent Lying Papists have perswaded their followers that the Devils were seen dancing about him, that when he should be buryed there was a horrible thunder, and the body was taken away out of the Cossin by the Devil. and a stink of Brimstone lest behind, with more such stuff as this, which they have printed, and which one would think the Father of Lies should be ashamed of.

Cahierus, and others publish to the world, not only that he was an Epicure, but a Sodomite, and was burnt on the shoulder for Sodomie with a hot iron at Noviodunum where he was born. Yea Lessius the Jesuite impudently calls Christ to witness, that shall judge all men according to their works, that he doth not devise these things of his own brain, but from good authors, and forty years currant same. And his Authors are these Papists, Bolsecus, Brigerus, Stapleton, Campian, Duraus, Surius, and Reginaldus. Hath Hell any greater calumnies then these to fill the mouths or writings of men withall?

Reader, I shall shew thee what credit these men are of by this instance. As for the time when they say he was stigmatized for Sodomie, it was when he was a Papist, and therefore if it had been true, it had been a greater dishonour to them then to us. But its a meer forgery of the Devil and a Fryar. Hierom Bolleck a Fryar, seemed to turn Protestant, and coming to Geneva, he began to preach the Pelagian doctrine there, and openly contend against the Pastors in the Congregation; and being confounded by Calvin, the Magistrates imprisoned him, and banished him for sedition. Then he betakes himself to the neighbour Towns, to play the same game there: but the Magistrates of Bern also banish them out of their Countrey. Whereupon he turned Papist again, and when Calvin was dead, he wrote all these abominable lies of him, and all the rest (with Schlusselburgins the Lutheran, an enemy of Calvins) do take up the report from this one Lying heretical Papist : and fo it becomes a currant fame with them, as if it were as true as the Gospel: Whereupon our writers call to them provoke them, challenge them to fearch the Records at Noviodunum, where they fay the thing was done, and prove that ever there was such a thing, or else bear the open shame of Lyars. But they can bring no proof, but call on us to disprove it: When the City are Papists, and baters of Calvin. But after all this, as God would have it, the Papist Dean of that City, called facobus le Vasseur, publisheth at Paris, 1633, the Annals of their Cathedral Church, and therein pouring out his hatred against Calvin, and saying what he can against him, doth yet out of their records clear him of all these accusations, and lets the world know that there was never any such thing, and that they had no crime at all against him, but that he turned from the Papists; and that the Major or chief Governour of the City went away with Calvin, when he was forced to fly from his native Countrey. He recites all the passages of Calvins life there, but professet that they had no more against him. Thus God consounded the Lying Papists by one of themselves, and the Records of that City, where they said the thing was done. And yet they believe one another, and carry on the Lye to this day.

Mr. Rob. Amstrowther, Chaplain to the King of Englands Embassadors with the Emperour, being at Vienna, heard the Jesuites and other repeating confidently this stander of Calvin; Whereupon he opened to them this Evidence against it; and satisfied them of the salshood, so that they told him, they never knew so much before, and promised him they would never mention it

If any would fee the very words of their own Records, and Doctor Vasseur, he may read them in Rivers Sum. Contr. against Baily, and again in his Jesuita Vapulans.

Cap. 2.

And as for the life of Calvin after he for fook the Papists, if you will but believe that the City of Geneva, and all the Ministers and others that were about him, in his life and at his death, did know better then Bolseck, a fugitive Apostate Papist that was his enemy, and then far off, you may fee at large in Melchior Adamus, and Beza, the description of such a shining burning light as Rome hath not to boast of. He was a man of admirable wit, judgement, industry, and piety. When he had forsaken his own Countrey for the Gospel sake, and taken up in Geneva, and planted the Gospel there, with Farellus and Viretus, at last the ungodly part getting the Head, the Ministers were banished. And so he settled in in another City. The four Bayliffs of Geneva that banished the Ministers, within two years were ruined by the judgements of God. One of them accused of fedition, feeking to scape through a window, fell, and was Another was put to death for murder. broken to death. The other two being accused of Mal-administration, H d and were condemned. Calvin is sent for and intreated to return to Geneva: which by importunity, and Bucers perswasion, he vieldeth to. There was he continually molefled by the ungodly, and loved by the good. The Malignants whom he would restrain by Discipline from Whoredom, drunkennels, and other wickedness, were still plotting or raging against him, and called their Dogs by his name. But shame was still the end of their attempts. His revenge was to tell them I fee I should have but forry mages if I served man: but its well for me that I serve bim that alway performeth his promises to his servants] As for his work he preached every day in the week each second week, and besides that, he read three dayes a week a Divinity Lecture. And every Thursday he guided the Presbyterie; and every Friday at a meeting he held an Expository conference and Lecture: so that the whole came to almost twelve Sermons a week. Besides this, he wrote Epistles to most Countries of Christendom (in Europe) to Princes, Divines and others; And he wrote all those great volumes of most Learned judicious Controversies, Commentaries, and other Treatises, which one would have thought might have been work enough for a man that had lived an hundred years, if he had done no other. And many Hereticks he confuted, and some convinced and reduced. He fet up among the Ministers a course of teaching every Family from house to house, of which he found incredible fruit; For all this his labour he endured the affconts, contradictions, and reproaches of the rabble, yea and sometime hath been beaten by them: because he would not administer the Sacrament to ungodly men, that were rulers in the place, he was at first banished, and after threatned, and continually molested by them, and railing fellows fet to preach and write against him. And whether he were an Epicure, you may soon judge: He alwayes used a very spare dyet: and for ten years before his death did did never taste one bit, but at supper, as his constant course. fo that every day was with him a better fast then the Papists use to make on their fasting dayes. By this extream labour, speaking, and fasting, and watching (for he dictated his writings as he lay in bed much,) he overthrew his body, and falling first into a Tertian, and then into a Quartan, after that he fell into a Consumption, with the gout and stone, and spitzing of blood, and the disease in the Hemorrhoid veins, which at last ulcerated by over much fasting, speaking, and use of Aloes: besides the head-ach which was the companion of his life. In these sickness he would never for bear his labour, but when he he was perswaded to it, he told them, that he could not bear an idle life. And when he was near to death was still at work, asking those that intreated him to forbear, Whether they wealdhave God find him idle? Under all these pains of Gour. Stone, Collick, Head-ach, Hemorrhoids, Consumption, &c. those that were about him testified to the world that they never heard him speak a word unbeseeming a patient Christian. The worst was that oft repeated word [How long , Lord! how long!] as being weary of a miserable world. Witnesses he had enough; for he could scarce have rest, for people crowding to him to visit him. On Mar. 23. he went among the Ministers to their Meeting, and took his farewell of them there. The next day he was wearyed by it : but the twenty feventh day he was carryed to the Court to the Senate of the City, where he made a speech to them, and took his farewell of them, with many tears on both fides. April. 2. he was carryed to Church, and staid the Sermon, and received the Sacrement. Afterward the Senate of the City came to him, and he made an heavenly Exhortation to them. On April 25. he dicated his Will, which I would his flanderers would read. His Library ic felf, and all his goods being prized, came scarce to three hundred Crowns. May 11. he wrote his sarewell to Farellus. May 19. all the Ministers came to him, with whom he sate, and did eat, and cheerfully take his leave of them. On the twenty feventh of May his voice seemed to be stronger, and so continued till his last breath that day, which was with fach quietness as men compose themselves to sleep. The next night and day the City Magistraces, Ministers, Schollars, people and strangers, were taken up in weeping and lamentation. Every one crowded to fee the Corps, among whom the Queen of Englands Embaffador to France was one. He was buryed according to this defire in the common Church yard, without any Monument or Pomp: and hath left behind him such a Name, as in despight of all the Devils in Hell, and all the Papifts on earth, shall be precious till the coming of Christ; and such writings hath he left as are Cc 2 the

Reader, this is that Calvin that is so hated by the bad, and loved and honoured by the good: whom these Papists have-called an Epicnre and Sodomite, and said that he died blaspheming, and calling upon the Devil, and was eaten with lice and worms. Is not God exceeding patient, that will suffer such wretches to live on the Earth? What man could they have named since Augustine, yea since the Apostles dayes, that was more unfit for such a standard then Calvin? Yet because one man Bolseck that was banished and turned Papist, and lived then I know not in what Countrey, hath written these things against him, the rest of them, even as much as the late Marquels of Worcester, take them up as considently, as if the infallible Chair had uttered them.

But yet if thou think this Enemy Bolfeck is more to be believed then those that lived with Calvin, and the City of Geneva, that had continual access to him, I will give thee such a Testimony as shall shame the Papists, that have a spark of modesty. Hear then what other Papists themselves say that knew better what they said, or made more Conscience of their words.

Florimundus Raimundus a Papist of Burdeaux (or the Jesuite Richeome that wrote in his name) writing for the Pope and against Calvin, hath these words of him. [Under a dry and lean body he had a sharp and lively wit, ready in answering; bold in attempting; a great faster; even from his youth, whether for his health to overcome the head-ach, or for his studies—There is scarce a man found that ever matched Calvin in Labours: for the space of twenty three years, in which he remained in the Episcopacy of Geneva, he preached every day once, and twice on the Lords day of times. And every week he read publick Lectures of Divinity (besides) and every Friday he was at the conference of the Pastors: The rest of his time he spent either in writing Books, or answering letters.]

Reader, is this Testimony from a Papist like the rest? But yet thou shalt have more. Papirius Massonius a Learned Papist, and Schollar to Baldions one of Calvins Enemies, wrote Calvins life; and he saith of him, [No day almost passed in which he did not preach to the Citizens. Thrice every eight daies as long as the sived; he professed (or publikely taught). Divinity (in the Schools;);

Schools;) being Laborious, and alwayes writing or doing something. Of a weak body, but worn by watchings, reading. writing, meditations, diseases, businesses, preachings. He took very little fleep; and therefore much of his morks he dictated in bed to bis servant that wrote them from his mouth. He did eat but once a day: and confessed that he found not a more present or surer Re. medy for his weakness of stomack and head-ach. His cloathing was of small price, to cover him rather than adorn him. - At Worms and Ratisbone be exercised the strength of an excellent wit with so great applause of the Germane Divines, that by the judgement of Melanchthon and his Associates; by a peculiar priviledge he was called The Divine. He wrote as much and as well as any man of the contrary parties, whether you respect number, acuteness, language, sharpness, emphasis, or subtilty: not a man of all his Adversaries, whether Catholicks. Anabaptists, Lutheranes, Arrians, or the forsakers of his Party, that wrote against him, did seem to match him in gravity of writing. and weight of words and sharpness, in answering his principles. He almost terrified Pighius himself discoursing of free will, and Sadaletus. These are the words of a Learned Papist.

But this is not all. Abundance of Papists tell us of a story how Calvin hired one in Geneva to take on him dead, that he might have the honour of raising him from the dead. This the Jesuite Thyraus de Damoniacis writes, and many others, and it goes among them for a currant truth; and all from the report of Bolseck. But, as God would have it, Pap. Massonius confuteth this also, and saith, that his Master Baldwinus knew nothing of it, who lived at Geneva, and after turned Papist, and Calvins enemy: and other reasons he giveth to disprove this and the other slanders that were raised of Calvin, saying, that they were but scriptores plebii, maledicendistudio, &c. vulgar Writers, that study or love to reproach or speak evil, that vend these things. And so much shall serve against the Papists Lies against

If you would see more of that heap of Lies consuted, which the Marquels of worcester gave in to King Charles, read Mr. Chr. Cartwrights Reply to them, where part of them (and but part) are detected.

And as they have done by these, so by others also. When Beza was eighty years of age, a falle report came to the Papilts that he was dead. Whereupon Clandins Puteanus with his Jefuitical Companions wrote a Book, that at his death he turned Papilt and renounced his Religion: fo that the old man (that lived seven years longer) was fain himself to write against them, to prove that he was not dead, nor turned Papilt: These be the means by which men are reconciled to the Church of Rome.

They have printed also a story that Calvins own Son being bitten by a mad dog, was sent by his Father to one of their Saints Images for Cure, when no other means would serve; and being cured, he turned Papist: when as the world knew that Calvin never had a Son. Also they tell us of a saying of Luthers, that [This Cause was not begun in the Name of God, nor will it be ended in the Name of God] This Luther spoke of Eckins and the other Papists, as himself professeth in his Answer to Enrserus, Tom. 1. fol.404. And these shameless Lyars considently publish that he spoke this of himself, as the Marquess of Worcester to King Charles did.

Another saying of his they as impudently abuse, viz. [If the wife will not, let the Maid come,] perswading the world, that Luther would have a man lye with his Maid, if his Wise resuse. whereas he only labours to prove, that Desertion is a sufficient cause of divorce: and that if the Wise resuse, she should be warned again and again before others and the Judges, and in Case of utter resusal and desertion, Vasthe may be rejected, and Hester the Maid taken to Wise: which many a Papist is ready to justifie.

Yea they annex that Luther would have men Contain but five dayes; when as he vehemently detested it, and urgeth the contrary, telling them that God no doubt will enable them to be Continent, if they will use his Means, Tom. 5. serm. de Matrimon. They forgot that the 5. suppositious Epist. of their Clement pleading for the Community of all things, adds [In.omnibus autemsunt sine dubio & Conjuges] [Among these All no doubt but Wives and Husbands are contained.]

Of the horrid Lyes of Genebrard, Possevine, and other Papists against Peter Martyr, Beza, Calvin and others, see Dr. Reynolds ad Anglica. Seminar. ante lib. de Idololatria Rom. Eccl. §. 5. pag. 20,21,22,23.

When the fall of their house at Black-fryars had killed their Priests, Priests, and such abundance of the people that were hearing him in the midst of the Sermon, they printed a Book to perswade the people beyond sea, that it was a company of the Hereticks or Puritans that were killed at the hearing of one of their preachers: Dr. Gouge tells you when and where it was printed, and many read it.

When the Gunpowder Plot was in hand, they had contrived presently to give it all abroad that the Puritans did it: Read Mr. Samuel Clark of it in his Mirror of Gods Judgements, Fol.and you shall find this fully detected.

When Fisher the Jesuite had held his conference with Dr., Featley, and Dr. White, there being present two Earls, one of them (the Earl of Warnick) having business shortly after, beyond sea, fell unknown into Dr. Westons company at Saint Omers, who presently tells it him for news, how Fisher had confounded the Protestant Doctors, and that two Earls and so many people were turned by it to the Church of Rome; not knowing that he that heard him was one of the two Earls, and that there were not so many people there, and how they were confirmed against Popery by that Dispute. And when the Earl of Warnick brought home this jeast, Dr. Weston hearing what sport was made with it in England, write a simple excuse for his Lying, which I have at hand, but find it had been better for him to have said nothing.

Should I recite but half the forgeries of this nature, by which the Priests and Jesuites cheat the poor people, I must be volu-

But alas, their very worship of God is much of it composed of Lyes, and is not that like to be acceptable worship? How their Offices and Legends are stust with sections, Canus and many of their own consels. And Cassander saith that so sew of the reliques in all Germany would be found true ones if examined, that its better quite take off the people from the veneration of them. Instancing in one of old that was worshipped as a Saint, and upon enquiry was found to be the bones of a Thief.

Agobardus Bishop of Lyons (faith Osher) complained about eight hundred years ago, that the Antiphonary used in bis Church had many ridiculous and phantastical things in it: and that therefore be corrected much of it, cutting off what seemed superfluous, or light, or lying, or blasphemons. Agobard. ad Cant. Lugd. de Correct. Antiphon. pag. 396. And not long since Lindanus made the like complaint, that [Not only Apochryphal matters out of the Gospel of Nicodemus and other toyes are thrust in, but even the secret prayers, (yea, alas for shame and grief, the very Canon varying, and redundant) are desiled with most filthy faults.

Reader, I will trouble thee no more with stirring in this puddle; but only warn thee, as thou lovest thy soul, trust it not on the bare reports of such Lyars, but try before thou trust; and give not up thy sense and Reason to men that make so little, or so ill a use of their own. If thou refuse this Council; say not but thou wast warned.

CHAP. XXXI.

Detect. 22. A Nother of their Deceits is by quarrelling with our Translations of the Bible, and making the people believe that we have so corrupted it, that it is none of the word of God, and so they openly scorn it, and decide it.

As to this point, though Learned men can foon confute them by vindicating the Text as in the Original Languages, and then vindicating our Translation; yet the common disputant need not put them and himself to so much trouble. If really they will but let the Law of God contained in the Holy Scripture be the Rule by which our difference shall be tryed and decided, we will cut short the rest of the controversie, and take it wholly together, and we will stand to the Vulgar Latine, which is it that themselves applaud. We are content that this be the Rule between us. Yea rather then they shall shift off the unlearned by these tricks, we will admit of their own Translation, which the Rhemists have (with little friendship to our cause) composed. Only we must intreat them that their Commentaries and conceits be not taken into the Text as part of the Word of God. So that this quarrell is quickly at an end. The Scripture is fo full against them, that no Translation that makes it not another thing, can make it to be on their side.

CHAP, XXXII.

Detect. 23. A Nother of the Designs of the Papists is, to bring all the faithfull Pastors of the Churches into contempt or suspicion at least with the Reople that so they may draw them to refuse our helps, and the Papists may deal with them alone, whom they know they are easily able to over-reach. Though our people have not that absolute Dependance upon their Teachers as theirs have, yet an ordinate Dependance is Necessary to them, or else God would never have appointed Teachers and Pastors for his Church. The Papists dare not trust their followers so much as to read a Bible in their vulgar tongue. Much less to Read our writings against their errors and impieties: No nor their Priests and Fryars ordinarily to read them: No nor commonly to read the writings of their own Party: No not those, nor the strongest of those that are written against us: for fear lest the objection should prove too hard for the answer; or lest they should understand the truth of our doctrine in some measure. Sr. Edw: Sands in his Europe Specul. professeth how hard he found it, to meet with the Works of Bellarmine himself in any Book-sellers shop in Venice or other parts of Italy. But our people have all leave to keep and read the Papilts writings: We dare venture them upon the light upon equal terms: But yet we know them to be infufficient, for the most part, to defend even plain and necessary truths against the Cavils of adversaries that overmatch them in learning and other abilities. Now lest we should but afford them our assistance, the Papists principal design is to bring them into false conceits of the Ministers, and make us odious to them; that they may neglect our help, and the eafilyer hearken to other Teachers. And if they can but prevail in this design, the day is their own. and the fouls of our unhappy people are like to be undone.

And the more is it to be feared, lest at last they should this way prevail, both because of the sin that lyeth on our selves in too reserved and negligent a doing of our work; and because of the great obstinacy and unprofitableness of the people, that hate the light, and unthankfully despiseit, or will not obey it.

The defigns of the Papists against the Ministry are these 1. They principally endeavour to delude the Rulers of the Land and set them against them, of which more anon.

2. They are very busie to procure an overthrow of their established maintenance: To which end they animate all sees to rail against Tythes.

3. They labour by scoffs and nicknames to make them odious. As they were the Authors or chief somenters of the old scorn under the name of Puritans, so are they of many more of late. If in Court, or Parliament, City or Countrey; you hear men set themselves of parpose to scorn or vilific the Ministry, its very probable that they are either secret Papists, or their deluded serviters. If they speak of men that regard the Ministry, and be not hardened as they to a despising of Christ in his servants, they call such [Priest ridden] and the Pastors they scornfully call [fack-Presbyters, Drivines,] and many other scoffs are at hand, to serve the ends of the Devil and the Pope, by alienating the Affections of the people from their Teachers, that so they may devour them at pleasure.

4. Another of their wayes of reproach is, by telling the people what odious divisions are among us, and how many minds we are of, and how oft we change, and such like reproaches, by their mouthing it they can make something of; while they never tell them how much more changeable they have been, and what divisions are among themselves, incomparably beyond all ours. Nor do they ever tell them how far we are united, and how small the differences among us are, and such as must be expected while we all know but in part.

5. Another reproach that the Papilts cast on the Ministry, is Greediness, Covetousness, and being hirelings. And therefore they put these into the mouths of Quakers and other Sectaries. And whats their ground ? Forfooth because we take Tythes, or other set maintenance. Because we have food and rayment, and our daily bread. I have said enough of the Cause it self in my several writings against the Quakers. If any doubt whether the Papilts be their Teachers, or of the same mind, besides many greater Evidences, the Manuscript from Wolverhampton before mentioned may be full satisfaction. This tells men that

for

with Pleasing words they scratch all ears that itch.
That Mammon (whom they serve) may make them rich.
For they are Mercenaries, that will be hir'd
To preach what destrines are by men desir'd.

Answ. I must profess unseignedly that the experience of such horrid wickedness of men, is a great help to may faith against all temptations that ever would provoke me to doubt whether there be a Hell; When I see and hear that unreasonable villang, that I should scarce have believed humane nature could have been capable of, if God or such experience had not told it me. But when I see Abominations before my eyes as incredible or horrid as Hell it self almost, it silenceth temptations to such unbelief.

Reader, I will give thee a brief comparison between the Papists Priests and the Ministers of Christ, that thou maist see whether these men be sit to rail at us as Mercenaries, and such as are the servants of Mammon.

Itsa well known case that the Ministers of this Land, and of all the Reformed Churches commonly do many of them want necessaries, and some want food and rayment, and the rest of them for the most part have little more: Or if one of an hundred have two hundred pounds a year, its ten to one but taxes and other payments bringeth it so low, that he hath no superfluities. And some that have not Wives or Children, do give all that they can gather to the poor; and some upon my knowledge give more to charitable uses, then they receive for the work of their Ministry, living on their own means. And they have themfelves been the means of taking down the Lordly Prelacy and Riches of the Clergy: and though they would not have had the Lands devoted to the Church to have been alienated, yet they would have had it so distributed as might but have reacht to have made the maintenance of Ministers to be an hundred pounds a year. This was the height of their Coverousness and Ambition, as you call it.

And now will you take a view of the Popish Clergy, for Greatness, Riches, and Numerousness. 1. For Greatness, the Pope who is their chief Priest, pretendeth to the Government of all the Christian world. Emperors and Kings have kist his feet, and held him the flirrup. One Emperour was forced to wait bare foot at his Gates a long time in patience, till he pleased to open them. Another being forced to prostrate himself to him, the Pope fet his foot upon his neck, profanely abufing the words of the Psal. 91.13. He shall tread on the Lyon and Adder. &c. Divers Princes hath he deposed: He hath claimed a Supremacy in Temporals and Spirituals, and his more moderate flatterers subjed Princes to him in ordine ad spiritualia. General Councils approved by him, decree that he shall Excommunicate and depose Princes, that will not extirpate those that he calleth Hereticks, and shall commit the Government to others, or give their Countreys to the first that can seize on them; and absolve all their Vassals from their Allegiance, (in despight of Oaths and Gods Commands.) He is a Temporal Prince himself having large Dominions. He hath so numerous a Clergy in the Countreys of all Popish Princes, as makes him great and formidable to them. His Cardinal Priests are equal to Princes, and greater then many Princes are. 2. And for their Riches and Numbers, to fay no more of their Pope and Cardinals, they have such multitudes of Arch-bishops, Bishops, Priests, Abbots, Priors, Fryars. Jesuites, and such others, as take up a great part of the Land where they live. I will at this time give you but one Instance, and desire you to compare it with our Ministers and their maintenance : and that is of the Popish' Clergy in France.

Their own writers tells us as followeth. Bodin (a Jodge in France) faith, (as Heylin Geograph. pag. 148. reciteth it)
That the Revenues of the Clergy there are twelve millions, and three hundred thou fand livres, which is one million and two hundred thou fand pounds of our English money per annum; and that they possess seven parts of twelve of the whole revenue of the Kingdom, which is above half. But we will take up with the lower reckoning of the Book called Comment. destat. and saith Heylin, this tells us that the Clergy have near a fourth part of the very Lands of all the Kingdom, besides the Offerings, Churchings, Buryals, Diriges, and such like Casualties, which amount to as much as their Rents, (So that there is another fourth part, which comes to half the Kingdom) upon which Sr. Edwin Sands computes their revenue at fix millions yearly: And for the number, that one Kingdom hath thirteen Arch-bishops, an hundred and four Bishops, a thousand four hundred and fifty Abbies, five bundred and forty Archpriories: twelve thousand three bundred and twenty Priories, five bundred sixty seven Nunneries: seven hundred Convents of Fryars: two hundred fifty nine Commanderies of Malta; besides all the Colledges of the Jesuites. And the Parish Priests are an hundred thirty thousand of all sorts. And whereas the Kingdom is supposed to have about sisteen millions of people; the Clergy and their Ministers are judged to be three millions of them.

Judge now like men of reason and impartiality, whether the tongues of these men be sit to call us Mercenaries, or Hirelings, or such as preach for silthy lucre. Or whether ever greater impudence was manifested by the vilest Son of Adam, then for such men that Lord it over Emperors, Kings and Princes, and devour the wealth of the Christian world, to call poor Ministers of Christ, Covetous, or Hirelings, that are content with sood and rayment, and a mean education of their children, and that have done so much to take down the Lordliness and Riches of the Clergy. Judge of this dealing; and if you had rather have the Popish Priesthood, with the numberless swarm of Fryars and several orders, you may take them, and say, you had your choice.

Detect. 24. A Nother of their designs, Conjunct with the last mentioned is, to persuade the world that they only have a true Ministry or Priesthood, and an Apostolical Episcopacy and true Ordination: and that we and all other Churches have no true Ministers, but meer Lay men under the name of Ministers, because we have no just Ordination. And how prove they all this? Why, they say, that they have a Pope that is a true Successor of Saint Peter, but we have no Succession from the Apostles, and therefore no just Ordination, because no man an give that Power which he hath not. And we are Schismaticks

separated from the Church, and therefore our Ordinations are invalid: And some of our Churches have no Bishops, and therefore say they, we have no true Ministry there, nor are they true Churches. These are their Reatons.

In answer to which I shall first refer the Reader to my Second sheet for the Ministry in Justification of their Call; Where these Reasons are consuted, and our calling vindicated: and I shall sorbear here to repeat the same things again: Also I refer you for a suller Answer to the London Munisters Jus Divinum Ministerii, and to Mr. Tho. Balls Book for the Munistry; and Mr. Masons Book in vindication of the Ministry of those Reformed Churches that have not Prelates, and to Vocious Desper. Caus.

2. Though we need not fetch our Ordination from Rome. yet, as to them, we may truly fay, that if they have any true Ordination and Ministry, then so have we: For our first Reformers were Ordained by their Bishops, which is enough to flop their mouths. If they fay that our Schism hath cut off our power of Ordination, I answer ad hominem, that (though it is they that are indeed the Notorious Schismaticks, yet) if we were what they falfly fay we are, it would not null our Ordination, Confirmation, or such other acts. And this is the Judgement of their own writers. I shall at this time only cite the words of one of them, and of many in that one; and that is Thom. à fesu de Conversione Gentium, lib. 6. cap. 9. Where he affirms it to be one of the Certainties agreed on [that Schismaticks lose not, nor can lose any spiritual power consisting in the spiritual Cara-Her of Baptism, or Confirmation of Orders: For this is indea lible as Dr. Thomas teacheth here, Art. 3. and Turrecremata confirmeth, lib. 4. sum. part. I.c.7. and Silvefter verb Schismatici: and it appeareth by Pope Urbans Can. Ordinationes, 9. q. I. Who judgeth those to be truly ordained, that were ordained by Schismaticall Bishopt: And from Austin lib. 6. de Bapt. Cont. Donatist. cap. 5. Where he saith that [A Separatist may deliver the Sacrament as well as have it.] He next addeth that yet such are deprived of the faculty of Lawfull using the Power which they have, so that it will be their sin to useit, though it be not a nullity if they do use it: and that thus those are to be understood that speak against the Ordination, Confirmation, &c. of Schifmaticks; viz. that it is unlawfull, because their power is suspended by the Church, but not a Nullity, because they have the Power. pag 316. He puts the Question | Whether Schismatical Prefbyters and Bishops as want the Power of Order, or only want Jurisdiction?] And he answereth out of D. Thom. 22.9.39. art. 3. that [they want farifaiction, and cannot Absolve, Excommunicate, or grant indulgences, and so they cannot elest and give Benefices, and make Laws - But yet they have the holy Power of Orders; and therefore a schismaticall Bishop doth truly make and consecrate the Eucharist, truly Confirm, truly Ordain; and when he Electeth and promoteth any to Ecclesiastical Orders, they truly receive the Character of Order, but not the Use, because they are suspended, if knowingly they are ordained by a Schismatical Bishop. Henext asketh, [Whether this pnnishment depriving them of Jurisdiction, take place with all Schifmaticks And answers that [some say that before the Council of Constance this punishment belonged to all notorious Schismaticks, but not to the unknown ones: but since that Councill, it takes place only on those that are expressy and by name denounced, or manifest strikers of the Clergy Others say otherwise: But he himself anfivers, that I If a schismatick be tolerated, and by the common error of the people be taken for lawfull, there's no doubt but all bis acts of furifdiction are valid, which we shall affirm also of Hereticks: But if a Presbyter or Bishop be a manifest Schisma. tick, then some say that those acts that require furifdiction are invalid; but others say that they are all valid in case the Schismatick be not by name excommunicated, or a manifest striker of the (lergy) Thus far Thom. a fest opening the judgement of the Papills Doctors themselves in the point.

And by the way, our new superprelatical Brethren that degrade others that want their Ordination, yea or commands, and nullifie their Acts, should learn not to go beyond the Papists themselves, if they will go with them.

And observe, that it is but their own Canons, that is, their own wills, that the Papists here plead when the Council of Constance bath so altered the business.

2. Though this that is said is enough as to the Papists, yet I add for fuller satisfaction, that their succession is interrupted; and therefore they are most unfit to be our Indges in this. They have had so long schisms in which no man knew who was the right Pope, nor knoweth to this day; and so long removes and vacancies, and such interpositions of various wayes of choosing their Pope, and interruptions by Hereticall Popes, condemned by General Councils; besides Murderers, Adulterers, Symonists, and such as their own Writers (as Genebrard) expressly say, were not Apostolical, but Apostatical; yea Popes that by General Councils have been judged or charged with insidelity it self (as I have formerly proved, I that there's nothing more certain then that their succession hath been interrupted.

3. They cannot be certain but its every age interrupted, and that theres no true Pope or Bishops among them, because the intention of the Ordainer or Confecrator is with them of necessity to the thing: and no man can be certain of the Intention of the Ordainers. And therefore Bellarmine is fain to take up with this, that though we cannot be sure that he is a true Pope, Bishop, or Presbyter that is ordained, yet we are bound to obey him. But where then is the Certainty of

4. What succession of Episcopal Consecration was there in the Church of Alexandria, when Hierom (Epist. ad Evagrium) tells us that [At Alexandria from Mark the Evangelist even till Heraclus and Dionysius their Bishops, the Presbyters did alwayes name one man that Bishop whom they chose from among themselves, and placed in a higher degree. Even as if an Army make an Emperour or the Deacons choose one of themselves. whom they know to be industrious, and call him the chief Deacon. Thus Hierom shews that Bishops were then made by meer Presbyters. And in the same Epistle he proves from Scripture, that Presbyters and Bishops were then all one. And if fo, there were no Prelatical Ordinations then at all. And your Medina accusing Hierom of error in this, saith, that Ambrose, Austin, Sedulius, Primasius, Chrysostom, Theodoret, Oecumenius, Theophilact, were in the same heresie, as Bellarmine himself reporteth him. So that Presbyters now may either ordain, or make themselves Bishops as those of Alexandria did, to do it. Andias Hierom there faith, [All are the successors of the Apostles,] and our Bishops or Presbyters are such, as much, at least, as yours: yet Apostles as Apostles have no Successors at all 38 Bellarmine larmine well teacheth, lib. 4. de Pontif. cap. 25. faving, [Biflops de not properly succeed the Apostles, because the Apostles were not ordinary, but extraordinary, and as it were, delegate Pastors, who have no Successors. Bishops have no part of the true Apostolick Authority. Apostles could preach in the whole world, and found Churches, but so cannot Bishops. The Apostles could write Canonical Books, but so cannot Bishops. Apostles had the gifts of tongues and miracles, but so have not Bishops. The Apostles had Jurisdiction over the whole Church, but so have not Bishops. And there is no Succession, but to a Predecessor: bist Apostles and Bishops were in the Church both at once, as appeareth by Timothy, Titus, Evodius, and many more. If therefore Bishops succeed Apostles. to what Apostle did Titus succeed? and whom did Timothy succeed? To conclude, Bishops succed Apostles, but in the same manner as Presbyters succeed the seventy two Disciples --- But its manifest that Presbyters do not properly succeed the seventy two Disciples, but only by similitude. For those seventy two Disciples were not Presbyters, nor did they receive any Order or furifdiction from Christ. Philip, Stephen and others that were of the seventy two had never been after Ordained Deacons, if they had been Presbyters before Thus Bellarmine.

See now what's become of the Popish Apostolical Successors among their Bishops? And the scope of all this is to prove, that all Bishops receive their Power from the Pope; and so their succession is confined to him alone; and therefore as oft as there have been interruptions in the Papal Succession, so oft the Suc-

But if B shops succeed not Apostles, and have not any of the Apostolick Power, who then doth the Bishop of Rome succeed a Why, Bellarmine hath a shift for this: but how forry an one it is, you shall hear, cap. 25. he faith that [The Pope of Rome properly succeedeth Peter, not as an Apostle, but as an Ordinary Pastor of the whole Church.] Let us then have no more talk of the Apostolick seat, or at least no more Arguing from that name. You see then that Peter was not the Universal Vicar as an Apostle, nor doth the Pope so succeed him. And do you think this doth not give away the Vicarship? Which way hereafter will they prove it?

But an Objection salls in Bellarmines way, that [If this be so, then none of the Bishops of Africk, Asia, esc. were true Bishops, that were not made by the Pope: To which he answers (as well as he can) that its enough that the Pope do Consecrate them Mediately, by making Patriarchs and Arch-bishops to do it: and To Peter did Constitute the Patriarchs of Alexandria and Antioch, who thus receiving authority from the Pope, did Rule almost all Asia and Africk] But 1. That [almost] marreth the whole Cause. For where now is the universal Headship? 2. Did Bellarmine think in good sadness that Alexandria and Antioch were made at first the seats of Patriarchs, having as large Turisdiction as afterward they attained? 3. How will he prove that Peter made these two Patriarchates, and that not as an Apostle, but as an Ordinary Vicar General? 4. Who made the Patriarchate of Constantinople, and gave them that vast Jurisdiction ? Did Peter many hundred years after his death? Or did the Pope of Rome, that tooth and nail refisted, and still fought to diminish his Power? Or rather did not the General Councils do it by the Emperors Commands, the Pope excepting and repining at it. 5. Who made the Patriarch of Jerusalem? and who made James Bishop of Jerusalem? did Peter? And who made Timothy and Titus Bishops? did Peter or Paul? And who gave Paul that Power? not Peter certainly. Reader, do not these men jest with holy things? Or is it like that they believe themselves?

6. Bellarmine confesseth that the Potestas Ordinis, & interioris jurisdictionis are both as immediately from God to every Bishop as to the Pope, cap.22. And why then should it be denyed of the power of exterior Jurisdiction? I. Is one part of the Essence of the Office given by the Pope, and the rest without him? 2. And what if it be proved that exterior and interior Jurisdiction of a Pastor is all one? Though the matter of obedience be exterior, yet the Jurisdiction is exercised only on the soul directly, in one case as well as another; it being the mind on which the obiglation lyeth, and the Pastoral Rule is powerful and essential: and surther then you procure consent, you are despited: For its the Magistrates work to use violence: Bishops as Bishops can but perswade and deal by words with the inner

5. Most of the Ministers in England, till within these sew years were ordained by Bishops Is that were of Necessity, they have it.

6. He that is ordained according to the Apostles directions, or prescript in Scripture, hath the true Apostolical Ordination; but so are we Ordained; therefore, --- The Apostles never Confined Ordination to Prelates, much less to those Prelates that depend on the Pope of Rome: The Bishops to whom the Apostles committed this Power, are the same that are called Presbyters by them, and they were the Overseers or Pastors but of one fingle Church, and not of many Churches. And fuch are those that O: dain among us now. Gregor. Nazianzen. Orat. 18. faith thus I I would there were no Prefidency, nor Prerogative of Place, and Tyrannical Priviledges; that so we might be known only by vertne, (or meer defert:) But now this Right fide, and Left fide, and Middle, and Lower Degree, and Presidency, and Concomitancy, have begot us many Contritions to no purpose, and have driven many into the Ditch, and have led them away to the region of the Goats.]

What Hierom saith, both in his Epistle to Evagrius, and on Tit. cap. 2. is commonly known. The many plain Testimonies of Anselmn are commonly Cited, as plain as Hieroms Alphons. à Castro advers. Hares. lib. 6. in nom. Episcop. had more ingenuity then to joyn with them that would wrest Hieroms words to a sence so contrary to their most plain importance. Tertullian cap. 17. de Bapt. thought Lay-men in Necessity might Baptize, (and so doth the Church of Rome now.) Why then may not Presbyters in such a case at least Ordain? when, as he there saith, Quod ex aquo accipitur, ex aquo dari potest | And ibid. he saith, that it is but propter Ecclesia bonorem, that Bishops Rule in such matters, and that peace may be kept, and Schism avoided. But that probati quique seniores did exercise Discipline in the Assembly, he testifieth in Apoliget.

Mr. Prin hath cited you abundance of Fathers that were for the parity of the Ministry, or against I'relacy jure Divino.

Artic. 14. saith 11: is agreed among all, that of old in the Apostles dayes, there was no difference between Bishops and Presbyters, but asterwards for Orders sake, and the avoiding of Schism, the Bishop was set before the Presbyters. And Ockans determineth, that by Christs Institution all Priests of what degree soever are of equal Authority, Power and Jurisdiction.

Reynold Peacock, Bishop of Chichester wrote a Book de Mini-

And Richardus Armachanus, lib. 9 cap. 5. ad Quest. Armen. saith [There is not found in the Evangelical or Apostolical Scriptures any difference between Bishops and simple Priests, called Presbyters; whence it follows, that there is one Power in all, and equall from their Order.] & cap. 7. answering the Question, Whether any Priest may Consecrate Churches, &c. he saith [Priests may do it as well as Bishops, seeing a Bishop hath no more in such matters then any simple Priest: though the Church for reverence to them appoint that those only do it, when we call Bishops — It seems therefore that the restriction of the Priests Power was not in the Primitive Church, according to the Scripture.]

I refer you to three Books of Mr. Prins, viz. his Catalogue; his Antipathy of Lordly Prelates, &c. and his unbishoping of Timothy and Titus; where you have the Judgements of many writers of these matters. And also to what I have said in my Second Disputation of the Episcopal Controversies, of purpose on this point.

7. The chief error of the Papists in this cause is expressed in their reason, [No man can give the Power that he hath not:] wherein they intimate, that it is Man that giveth the Ministerial Power: whereas it is the gift of Christ alone: Man doth but design the person that shall receive it, and then Christ giveth giveth it by his Law to the person so designed: and then man doth invest him and solemnize his introduction. As a woman may choose her an husband, but it is not she that giveth him the Power over her, but God who determineth of that Power by his Law, affixing it to the person chosen by her, and her action is but a condition sine qua non, or cause of the capacity of the matter to receive the form. And so is it here. When do but obey God in a right choice and designation of the person, his Law doth presently give him the Power, which for orders sake he must be in a solemn manner invested with. But matters of Order may possibly vary; and though they are to be observed as far as may be, yet they alwayes give place to the Ends and substance of the work, for the ordering whereof they are appointed.

8. Temporal power is as truly and necessarily of God, as Ecclesiastical, and it was at first given immediately by him, and he chose the person: And yet there is no Necessity that Kings must prove an uninterrupted Succession. God useth means now in designing the persons that shall be Governors of the Nations of the earth: But not alway the same means: nor hath he tyed himself to a successive Anointing or Election: else sew Kings on earth would hold their Scepters. And no man (from any diversity in the cases) is able to prove that a man may not as truly be a lawful Church-governor, as a lawful Governor of the Commonwealth, without an uninterrupted succession of Mini.

9. If Bellarmine be forced to maintain that with them it is enough that a Pastor have the place, and seem lawfull to the people, and that they are bound to obey him, though it should prove otherwise. Then we may as well stand on the same terms as they.

10. In a word, our Ordination being according to the Law of Christ, and the Popes so contrary to it, we are ready at any time, more fully to compare them, and demonstrate to any impartial man, that Christ doth much more disown their Ordination then ours, and that we enter in Gods appointed way. Mr. Eliot in New England may better Ordain a Pastor over the Indians converted by him, then leave them without, or send to Rome, or England for a Bishop, or for Orders. But

CHAP. XXXIV.

Detect. 25. Nother of their Deceits is, In pretending the Holiness of their Churches, and Ministry, and the unholiness of ours. This being matter of fact, a willing and impartial mind may the easier be satisfied in it. They prove their Holiness, 1. By the Canonized Saints among them. 2. By the devotion of their Religious Orders, and their strictness of living. 3. By their unmarried Clergy. 4. By their sanctifying Sacraments and Ceremonies: In all which they say that we are wanting, and so far wanting, that being out of the Church, there is no true Holiness among us.

When in the Preface of my Book against Popery, called The Safe Religion, I had truly spoken my experience, that I had never the happiness to be acquainted with any Papilt of a serious spiritual temper, and holy life, but only some of a Ceremonious formall kind of Religion, and but with very few that lived not in some gross sin, I was passionately censured by some of the Papists, as one that condemned all for some. When as I. I only spoke of my own acquaintance, 2. And I added withall, that yet I was confident that God had his fervants among them, though I had not the happiness to know them. 3. And is it not a ridiculous business, that these same men should be so passionare with me, for speaking but the truth, concerning the ungodliness of fome of them, when at the same time they make it an Article of their faith, and an effential point of Popery, That no one Protefant bath charity or can be faved; yea, that no Christian in the world is sanctified really, and can be saved, but a Papist. O the partiality of these men! 4. Yea when they necessitate us to mention their ungodliness, by calling us to it, and laying the stress of all our cause upon the point: yea laying the very Christian faith it self upon the Holiness of their Church. For we must not know that Scripture is Gods word, or that Christianity is the true Religion, till we first know that the Church of

Rome

Rome is the true Church, that we may receive it on their credit: And we must know that they are the true Church by being the only Holy people in the world. I must profess that if my faith lay on this foundation, I know so much of the falshood of it, that I must needs turn insidell: and I can no more believe this, then I can believe that the snow is not white.

They confess (I thank them for nothing) that their common people are bad; but yet fay they, [there is some good ones among us, Inter hareticos autem nullus est bonus: but among the hereticks not one is good] So faith [Thom. à fesu de convers. omn Gent. pag. 53 1. And saith H. Turbervile Manual p.84. But I never yet heard of any Protestant Saints in the world. O wonderfull perverseness of the hearts of Sectaries! O wonderfull Patience of God! Did not this mans heart tremble or smite him to write so horrid, so impudent a reproach against so many precious Saints of God? Durst he thus attempt to rob the Lord of the fruit of his blood? and to vilifie his Tewels? and as Rabshakah, to reproach the Israel of God? to attempt to pluck them out of Christs hand that are given him by his Father; and to shut them out of heaven, that are redeemed and made heirs by so dear a Price; and to spit in their faces whom Christ hath washed with his blood? Did he not fear that dreadfull threatning of Christ, Mat 18.6. [but who so shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it were better for him that a milstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the Jen.] Though I see so much impiety among the Papifts, I dare not say, I dare not think that God hath not some Holy ones among them. Its dangerous condemning those that Christ will Justifie; and making his members to be the members of the Devil, and abusing so grossly the apple of his eye. If I fee a man live wickedly, I dare fay that he is of a wicked life; but I dare not fay that All are fo, unlessit be among men, whose principles I am sure are inconsistent with godliness, and I know that they hold those principles practically or prevalently. And therefore I must say again, that I have been acquainted with some Papills, learned and unlearned, The unlearned few of them knew what Christianity was, nor whether Christ were God or Man, Male or Female, nor whether ever he was the King, Prophet or Priest of the Church, nor for wher: what end he dyed, nor what faith, or repentance is; but were infidels under the name of Papifts, or Catholicks. The learned and unlearned live in some gross sin or other, either all or neer all that I have been acquainted with. The better fort would ordinarily swear, by their Lady, and by the Mass.] and sometime greater oaths. The rest were some fornicators or adulterers. some drunkards or revellers, and gamesters, or such like: And never had I the happiness to be acquainted with one that would speak experimentally and savourily of the work of Grace upon his foul, of the life of faith, of communion with God, and of the life to come; but their Religion lay in being the Popes subjects, and in fasting on Fridayes and in Lent from some forts of meat, and in faying over so many Ave Maries, Pater Nosters, or the like; and in observing dayes, and hours, and Cereremonies. Yet I again say, I fully believe that there be better among them, though I am not acquainted with them.

But if these men that [never heard of a Protestant Saint] and that conclude [there is no one saved but a Papist,] and build their salvation on this as an Article of their faith, had known but those that I have known, and yet know, they would either have been of another mind, or have been left unexcusable in a malicious reproaching of the Saints of the most high. I bless the Lord that I can truly fay, that I know many and many, that (as far as the heart of another can be known, by words and a holy life) do live in much communion with God; whose fouls are daily longing after him; and some of them that have vacancy from worldly necessities, spending much of their lives upon their knees, having had many a special extraordinary return to their importunate requests: whose delight is in the Law of the Lord, in which they meditate day and night (which is lockt up among the Papists.) Whose hearts smite them for vain words or thoughs, or the loss of a few minutes of time; that live in exemplary humility, meekness and self-denyal, beating wrongs patiently, and doing good to as many as they can, as the servants of all; contemning the Riches and Honours of the world, mortifying the flesh, and some of them longing to be dissolved and to be with Christ, in whom the world never knew either once drunkenness, fornication, or one rash oath, or any other gross sin, that I could ever hear of. And is it certain that all these shall be damned, because they believe not in the Pope? Nay is it not certain by Promise that all such shall be saved?

I must again profess, that when the Papists lay their faith and cause on this, that their Church is Holy, and ours and all other are every man unholy, its almost all one to me as if they said that no menbut Papists have souls in their bodies, and laid their faith on this; and as soon I think should I believe them, if this were their belief. Its a good preservative against Popery, when a man cannot turn Papist without putting out his eyes, and renouncing his wit, and reason, and common experience, as well as his charity; yea without denying of what he knoweth by his own soul!

But let us come to their Evidences. I. They say, We have no Canonized Saints. I answer I. All the Apostles and Saints of the first ages were of our Religion; and many of them have been beholden to the Pope for Canonizing them.

2. We have no usurper among us that pretendeth Infallibly to know the hearts of others, nor to number Gods Saints. But with us, the Holy Ghost maketh Saints, and their lives declare it; and those that converse with them discernit, so far as to be highly consident, and men discernit in themselves, so far as to be Infallibly (though not persectly) certain.

3. It seems the Pope takes Saints to be rare with them, that they must be named and written with red Letters in an Almanack: And H. T. Man. pag. 84. is fain to send us for proof to their Chronicles and Martyrologies; and he nameth four Saints that they have had, viz. Saint Austin the Monk, Saint Bennet, Saint Dominick, and Saint Francis. Now we all know that none but Saints are saved, and that without holiness none can see God, Heb. 12. 14. So that it seems it sanctity be so rare among the Papists, salvation must be rare.

But as for us, we make it our care to admit none but Saints to our Church Communion: though we preach to others to prepare them for it: For we believe that the Church is a Holy Society, and find Paul calling the whole Churches that he writes to, by the title of [Saints,] and we believe it is [the Communion of Saints] that is there to be held. And if we had no more Saints in one County at once, yea in some one Parish at orce, then would fill up the Popes Calendar, so as to have one for every day in the year, we should betake our selves to bitter lamentation.

Whereas the Church of Rome takes in all forts of the unclean. and is so impure and polluted a society, that its a wonder how they should have the face to boast of their holiness to men that live among them and know them. Thousands of their members are stark Infidels, as not knowing the Essentials of the Christian Faith. Its known here in Ireland, that abundance of them know not who Christ was, but that he was a better manthan Saint Patrick: Bishop Ofher saw it and lamented it, that they perished as Heathens for want of knowing Christianity it self, while they went under the name of Catholicks : and therefore he would have perswaded the Popish Priests to have Consented that they should be all taught a Catechism of the common principles that we are agreed in; but he could not procure it : when Dr. 70. White asked one of them in Lancasbire, who fesus Christ was? The answered, that [sure it was some good thing, or else it Chould not have been put into the Creed.

And how much swearing, whoredom, drunkenness, and other wickedness is in their Church, is known not only by the complaints of their own writers, but by the too common experience of Travailers. We have known Papifts that have turned from them by the experience of one journey to Rome, and feeing what is there. And for Church censures by which any of these should be purged out, they are laid by, and reserved for other uses, even as thunder-bolts for the Popes Adversaries, and the servants of Christ whom they take for Hereticks; and for Princes whom the Pope would have deposed and murdered. These things are not meer words, but the lives of many Kings and Princes have

And what need you any further proof that their Church is as the common wilderness, and not as the Garden of Christ, and is a Cage of all unclean birds, then that they actually keep them all in their Communion. It made my heart rife at their hypocrifie and filthiness, to read one sentence in one of the most learned, and sober, and honest of all their Bishops that have written, and that is Albashinaus Observat. 1. pag. 1. saith he Signis unquam hoc seculo, (quod nescio an acciderit) Communione fuit

privatus, sola suis Eucharistia perceptione: in reliquis sua vita partibus, quam ante Excommunicationem habuis, candem cum cateris sidelibus consuetudinem, & usum retinuit.] That is [If ever any one man in this age was put from the Communion (which I know not whether such a thing hath come to pass,) it was only from the receiving the Eucharist; in the other parts of his Life, be retained the same familiarity and converse with other believers, which he had before his Excommunication.

Here you see from a credible Bishop that lived in the thickest of their Clergy in France, that he knew not that any one person in the age that he lived in, was ever kept from the Lords Supper; but if he were, yet that was all: he was still a member of their Church, and familiar with the rest. Let the Christian world then observe by their practice, what an abominable hypocritical contest they make, for to prove the Power of Church-government to be only in their Pope, and the Prelates to whom he giveth it; and when they have done, do make no more use of the Power which they so pretend to, as not to exercise the Censures of the Church upon one offendor there in an age. How were that man worthy to be thought of, or to be used, that would fet all the world on fire by contending, that no Schoolmaster or Physician should be suffered in the whole world, but himself and fuch as he giveth power to : and when he hath done, will not by himself or his subjects and dependants teach or heal one person in an age? were such an one meet to live on the earth? Or should we judge that man in his wits that would believe him? O what a flye is the Roman Society! what dunghills are in their Affemblies? and yet must not the Shovel or the Beesom be used once in an Age? what! no weed pulled up? no superfluous branch cut off? Is this the use of all the Canons of their Church concerning Excommunication, and abitention? Must the Christian world be at such a vast expence, to maintain so rich and numerous a Clergy for this? And must we cast our our Pastors to receive such as these? when we should be ashamed, if we had not exercised more of the cleansing power of the Keyes in one Parish Church, then Albaspiness knew of among the Papists i a whole age.

But perhaps there is little of this filth among them to be cast out: He that readeth their own writers, or liveth among them, and feeth their lives, will hardly think fo. He that had but feen the Murders of their Popes for the obtaining of the Popedom. or how Pope Stephen raged against the Carcais of Pope Formofus, drawing it out of the grave, and changing its Pontifical habit to a secular, and cutting off his fingers; or he that had feen Pope Christopher casting the Corps of Pope Leo the fife into the River Tiber; or Pope Sergius keeping the faid Christopher bound in prison; or Pop? Boniface the seventh putting out his Cardinals eyes; would scarce believe that the Holy Seat of Pe. ter were indeed Holy: (all which Platina and others of their own writers give us notice of.) He that readeth Baronius himself telling us (To. 10. an. 897. n 6.) how Pope Stephen the Seventh defiled St. Peters feat with unheard of sacriledge, not to be named; and ((ect. 4. ib.) and how the Princes of Tuscia were brought into Peters Chair and Christs Throne, being monstrous men, of most filehy lives, and desperate manners, and every way most filthy.] He that shall read the same flattering Cardinal. faying, (Can. 900. feet. I.) [that ugly monsters were thrust into the Papacy, that it was dambed with dung, infected with stinks. defiled with filthiness, and collowed by these with a perpental infamy] And (an. 912. feet. 8.) [that at Rome, the most powerful and the most serdid whores did Rule; at whose will the feats were changed, Bishops were made, and, which is horrid to be heard, and not to be spoken, their sweet-hearts false Popes were thrust into Perers seat. And [that for an hundred and fifty years the Popes were Wholly faln from the vertue of their Predeceffors; being disorderly, and Apostatical, rather then Apostolical, not entring by the door, but by the back-door] faith a passionate Papist, Genebrard, Chron. 1 4. an 901. I say he that shall read these impartially, will scarce think the Head of their Church hath been Holy, which is an Effential part of it, (nor that their succession is uninterrupted.)

But if besides these you would read but Nic. Clemangis, Alvarus Pelagius de planetu Ecclesia (lib. 2. art. 2. sol. 104.) and many such like; or their Poets Mantuan, Pantes, &c. or Petrarch, Mirandula, &c. you would think the Holiness of Rome should be the poorest proof in the world of their being the only Church.

Their

Their Espensaus and others recite that Distich,

Platina faith (in vita Marcellini) [Our vices are so increased, that they have scarce left us any place for mercy with God. How great is the Covetousness of the Priests! especially of those that rule all! how great lust! how great ambition and point! how great ignorance of themselves, and of the Christian doctrin! how little Religion, and that rather counterfeit, then true! how corrupt manners! even such as in the prophanest scenlar men were to be detested! its not worth the speaking: when they sin so openly and so publikely, as if they songht Praise by it.]

Their Claudius Espenseus on Tit. pag. 75. saith [Where is there under the Sun a greater liberty, clamor, impunity of all evil; that I say not infamy and impudency (then at Rome:) verily it is such as no man can believe but he that hath scenit, and no man can deny it that hath seenit] This was written since the Council of Trent.

And in the Council of Trent, their Cornelius Muss, a Bishop there, and the wonder of his ageamong the Papills, saith that there was no monsters of filthiness, or fink, or plague of unclean ness, with which both people and Priest was not defiled: In the very Santtuary of God, there was no hame, no modefly, no hope or regard of good living: but unbridled and unlamed lust, singular audaciousness, incredible wickedness.] And after more of the lke he adds, | Would they had not faln from Religion to Superstition from faith to infid: lity, from Christ to Antichrist, yea as men that bad no fon's, from God to Epicurus or Pythagoras, faying in an impious heart, and an impadent mouth, there is no God. And yet now of a long time, there hatb been no Paffor that would require, (or feek them again) I say there was none to feek them, because they all sought their own things, but not one the things of fesus Christ The same Bishop Cornelius Mussaite, the Council writes thus (To. 2. Serm 2. Dom. V. Quadr.) [The Roman Name is hatefull with all Nations; and see I pray you kow litile esteem the Church it self is of, becamse of the scandals that are heard, seen and felt. I speak not now of enemies that call it Babylon, Hell, the Whore, and say it is the sink of all Errours: But I speak of friends, that grown and daily sigh within themselves, saying, O holy City, how art thou thus profaned! O glorious City! that art thus become vile; thus contemned, and neglected. These and many more such Testimonies of their own writers, Rivet, and many of ours have oft let before them.

Guicciardine their Historian saith, that [Those are called Good Popes, whose Goodness is not worse then other mens wickedness.]

And if you think that now the matter is much mended, read but Claud. Espensaus in Tit. 1. pag. 75. complaining that the promises made by the Pope of Reformation, at the Council of Trent were all broken, and nothing done but deceit and shews. And of Pope Sixtus the fifth Bellarmine gave out his judgement, that he thought when he dyed, he went to the Devil, saying, Qui sine panitentia vivit, & sine panitentia moritur, proculdubio ad infernum descendit | [He that lives without Repentance, and dyeth without Repentance, undoubtedly goes to Hell. And faith Wat son of him (in Quodl.b. pag. 56, 57.) Bellarmine said to an English Doctor [Conceptis verbis, quantum capie, quantum sapio, quantum intelligo, Dominus noster Papa descendit ad infernum] [As far as I canreach, as far as I have any wildom, as far as I understand, in plain terms, our Lord the Pope is gone to Hell. But which way he went thither, all the world knows not, but Barthol. Morisot. in the Life of Henry the Great of France, cap. 17. saith [That when the Spaniards perceived his contrivances to for sake their party, lest he should join with the enemy they caused him to be strangled in the night by a Franciscan, or one in a Monks habit; and the next day gave out that a Domestick Devil had strangled him, and to make good the report, a Book was written of his life, and printed, where all the wickedness of Pope Alexander the fixth is charged on him. ?

And how the Popes are still chosen by impious Juglings and combinations Rivet tells you out of your own champion, Cardinal Perron, his Legationes & Negotiat. And of the saying of Cardinal Offatus ad D. Ville roy Epist. 87. concerning Pope Clement the eighth, esteemed one of the very best of them, who

perswaded the King of France to join with the Spaniard in the Invasion of England; and when the Cardinal answered that the King of France was under an Oath of Peace with the Queen of England, the Pope (their best Pope) replyed, that [the Oath was made to an Heretick; but he was bound by another Oath to God and the Pope | and added that | that Kings and other Soveraign Princes tolerate themselves in all things that make for their commodity: and its now come to pass that it is not imputed to them, nor taken to be their fault; I and he alledged the saying of Francisc. Maria Duke of Urbine, that a Noble man, or Great manthat is not the Soveraign, is blamed and counted infamous of all men, if he keep not his faith; but supream Princes may make Covenants, and break them again without any danger to their credit, and may lye, betray, and commit such like practiles.

These are your best Popes ! Poor men! that can forgive other mens fins, and pardon them the pains of Purgatory, and cannot fave their own fouls from Hell! Are they not like to Govern the Universal Church well, that can no better Govern themselves, or that one City where they dwell? And are not these men worthy to be consulted as infallible Oracles, by those that dwell at the Antipodes, though it cost them their lives to sail or travail to them? Can be be a Christian or be saved that believeth not in one of these men? Or can any man receive the Christian faith or Scriptures, till he first know these good men to be Christs infallible Vicars?

And how many thousand Whores are licensed at Rome, how fumptuoufly they live, what revenues come to the Pope by them? many of your own mention. And though some of you write for it, and your Pope still maintaineth it, yet Mariana one of your Jesuites (though he was for King-killing) condemneth this, lib. de Spectaculis, cap. 16. And your Cland. Effenseus lib. 3. de Continentia. cap. 4. sets it out with a witness, lamenting Rome, as if it were turned all into one Whore house; and bewailing it, that the Jews should so far shame you, that no one of their children may play the harlots, unless they first turn (Popish) Christians and be baptized, and then they have thier liberty.

Papirius Massonius that wrote the Deeds of the Popes for their honour, and sought his Reward from Sixtus Quintus, saith (De Episcop urb. lib. 6. in Gregor. 13.) [No man doth now a dayes look for Holiness in Popes 1 those are judged the best, that are a little good, or less naught then other Mortals use to be. Pope Pins the second was one of the best that your Papal feat a long time had; and yet in his Epistle to his Father (Epift, 15.) that was angry with him for fornication, he faith, [Ais dolerete ___ i. e. You say you are sorry for my crime, that I. begot a son in sin (or bastardy.) I know not what opinion you have of me. Certainly you that are flesh your selves did not beget a son that is made of stone or iron. You know what a Cock you were your felf. And for my part I am not gelded, nor one of them that are frigid (or impotent) Nor am I an hypocrite, that I should desire rather to seem good, then to be good. I ingenuously confess my error, for am not holyer then David, nor wiser then Solomon. Its an antient and usual sin; I know not who is without it. (A holy Church you are that while) This plaque is spread far and neer, if it be a plaque to make use of our naturals, though I seeit not, seeing Nature, which doth nothing amis, hath bred this Appetite in all living creatures, that mankind should be continued. This was he that was the glory of your Papacy, that knew none without this beaftly

And Orichovius tells Pope Julius the third, that Pope Paul the second his predecessor had a Daughter in the eyes of all men.

And of this Pope Julius the third, Onuphrius himselfsaith, that [Being a Cardinall he followed voluptuousness as by stealth, but being made Pope, and having what he would have, he cast away all care, and gave up himself to his mirth and disposition] Of whom Thuanus saith (Hist. lib. 6.) that he was very infamous as a Cardinall, but after past his life in greater infamous?

And Alvarns Pelagius, (lib. 2. art. 73. fol. 241, &c.) lamenting Whoredome as a common fin, but specially of the Clergy, tells us that the cause is, because [Commonly the Religious of that age were Gluttons or belly Gods, Arrogant, Proud, incomparably beyond secular men, conversing with women, &c. And drink more wine in their Religious state then before, and are commonly carnal. And that the Monks had their semale Devotaries, with whom, by the I relates license they conversed. And being sent to preach, they go to play the whoremongers: And that there was scarce any one of the Holy Nuns without her carnall male Devotary, by which they broke their first faith with Chrift, ಲ್ಲೆ. 7 This was your Holy Church.

And li. 2. art. 28. he saith That most of the Clergy mix themfelves with gluttony, drunkenness and whoredom, which is their common vice, and most of them give themselves to the unnaturall vice (Sodomie) — Thus continually, yea and publikely do they offend against that holy chastity which they promised to the Lord;
besides those evils not to be named which in secret they commit, which Papers will not receive, nor pen can write.] Abundance more he hath of the same subject, and their putting their choicest youth into houses of Sodomie. This book of Alvarus Pelagius Bestarmine calleth Liber insignis (de Scriptor. Ecclesiast.)

Math. Paris (in Henr. 3. p. 819.) tells us of Cardinal Hugo's farewell speech to the people of Lons when he departed with the Popes Court [Friends, (saith he) since we came to this City we have brought yen great commodity and alms. When we came hither we found three or four whore houses, but now at our departure we leave but one: but that one reaches the from the East Gate to the West Gate.] O Holy Pope! and Holy Church!

But Costerus the Jesuite easily answers all that I have said, Enchired cap. 2. de Eccles. that [The Church loseth not the name [Holy] as long as there is but One thats truly Holy.] Answ. Is this your sanctity? I deny your conclusion. For 1. If the Head be unholy, an effential part is unholy; and therefore the Church cannot be Holy. 2. One person is not the Matter of the Church, as one drop of Wine cast into the sea doth not make it a sea of Wine; and one Italian in England makes not England Italian; nor one Learned man make England Learned.

And let the Papists observe, that it is from the very words of their own that I have spoken of them what is here recited, and not from their adversaries. And therefore I shall be so far from believing the Gospel upon the Account that their Church is Holy that recommendeth it, or from believing them to be the only Church of Christ, because of their Holiness, that I must bless God that I live in a sweeter air and cleaner Society, and should be loath to come out of the Garden into the Channel or sink to be made clean or sweet, but say, that the travailer learned more wir, that lest us this Resolution, Roma vale; vidi; satis est vidisse; revertar Cam lene aut meretrix, scurra cinadus ero.

THE second Proof which they bring of the Holiness of their Church, is, the strict life of their Fryars, as Carthusians, Franciscans, and others. Answ. Having been so long already on this point, I will be but short on this branch. In a word, I. I have no mind to deny the Graces of the spirit in any that have them. Though travellers tell me lamentable stories of your Fryars, & Guil. de Amore, and his companions said much more, and many other Popish Writers paint them out in an odious garb, yet I do not doubt but God hath his servants among them.

2. But I must tell you that this also shews the Pollution of your Church in comparison of our Churches; that Holiness and Religion are such rarities, and next to Miracles among you, that it must be cloistred up, or confined to certain orders that are properly called Religious, as if the People had no Religious for Holiness. When our care and Hope is to make all our Parish Churches far more Religious and Holy then your Monasteries or Convents: Yea were not this Church much more Religious and Holy where I live, I think I should have small comfort in it.

3. Their third Proof of the Holine's of their Churches, is, their unmarried Clergy. Answ. 1. I will not stir too long in this puddle, or else I could tell you out of your own writers of the odious fruits of your unmarried Clergy. Only (because the essential parts of your Church are they that neer-liest concern your cause) I will ask you in brief, whether it was not Pope John the eleventh that had Theodora for his whore? whether it was no Pope Sergins the third that begot Pope John the twelfth of Marosia? whether John the twelfth, alias the thirteenth (saith Luisprandus, and others of your own) did not ravish maids and wives at the Apostolick doors, and at last was killed in the Act of Adultery? whether it were not Pope Innocent of whom a Papist wrote this distich?

Octo Nocens pueros genuit, totidemą; puellas. Hunc merito potuit dicere Roma patrem.

And whose Son was Aloisus, made Prince of Parma by Pope Paul the third? And for your Arch-bishops, Bishops, Priests, &c. I shall now add but the words of your Dominicus Soto de Instit. & Jure qu. 6. art. 1. cited by Rivet, [We do not deny (saith he) that in the Clergy, such as keep Concubines, and are Adulterers, are frequent.]

2. We have many that live unmarryed, as well as you, but not on your terms.

3. We know that Paul directed Timothy and Titus to ordain him a Bishop that was the Husband of one Wise, and ruled well his house, having his children in subjection; and that the Church a long time held to this doctrine, and that Greg. Nyssen was a marryed Bishop. But if you are wiser then the Spirit of God, or can change his Laws, or can prove the Holy Ghost so mutable, as to give one Law by Paul and other Apostles, and another by the Pope, we will believe you, and forsake the Scripture, when you can so far bewitch us, and charm us to it.

We believe that a fingle life is of very great Convenience to a Pastor, when it can be held: and that Christs Rule must be observed [Every man cannot receive this saying, but he that can, let him receive it] And whether Ministers be Marryed or not Marryed (as many now living in the next Parishes to me are not, no more then my self) it is a strange thing with us to hear of one in many Counties that was ever once guilty of fornication in his life: and if any one be but once guilty in the Ministry, he is cast out, though he should be never so penitent, as any man that readeth the Act for ejecting scandalous Ministers and Schoolmasters may see. As also you may there see, that if he were but once drunk, if he swear, curse, or be guilty of other scandalous sins, he is cast out without any more ado. And none are so carnest for the through-execution of this Law as the Ministers. If a Minister do but go into an Alebouse, except to visit the sick, or on weighty business, it is a scandalous thing among us: we do not teach as the Jesuites cited by the fansenist Montaltus, that a man may lawfully go into a Whorehouse to exhort them from Whoredom, though he hath found by experience, that when he comes among them he is overcome, and playes the

Lest the vices of your Clergy should be laid open and punished you exempt them from the fecular power, and will not have a Magistrate so much as question them for whoredom, drunkennels, or the like crimes. It is one of Pope Nicolas De. crees (as Caranza pag. 395. recites them) that [No Lay man must judge a Priest, nor examine any thing of his life. And no secular Prince ought to judge the fasts of any Bishops or Priests what sever \ And indeed that is the way to be wicked quietly, and fin without noise and infamy. But for our parts, we do not only subject our selves and all our actions to the tryal of Princes and the lowest Justice of Peace, as far as the Law gives him power, but we call out to Rulers daily to look more strictly to the Ministry, and suffer not one that is ungodly or scandalous in the Church. And if one such be known, our Godly people will all fee against him, and will not rest till they cast him out (in times when there is opportunity for it) and get a better in his stead. The whole Countrey knows the Truth of this.

If you say, as the Quakers do, that yet the most among us are ungodly; I answer, that Those among us that are known ungodly and scandalous are not owned by us, nor are members of our Church, or admitted to the Lords Supper, in those Congregations that exercise Church-discipline; but they are only as Catechumens, whom we preach to and instruct, if not cast

Your eighth General Council at Constantinople, Can. 14. decreed, that [Ministers must not fall down to Princes, nor eat at their Tables, nor debase themselves to them; but Emperors must take them as Equals] But we are so far from establishing Pride and Arrogancie by a Law, that though we hate service flattery and man pleasing, yet we think it our duty to be the servants of all, and to condescend to men of low estate, and much more to

honour our Superiors, and God in them.

The same Council decreed, Canon. 21. that [None must compose any Accusations against the Pope] No marvail then if all Popes go for Innocents. But we are lyable to the accusations of any.

And because you charge our Churches with Unholiness, and that with such an height of Impudency, as I am certain the Divel himself doth not believe you, that provokes you to it; even that there is not One Good among us, nor one that hath Charity, nor can be saved (unless by turning Papist,) I shall therefore go a little higher, and tell you that I doubt not but the Churches in England where I live, are purer far than those were in the dayes of Augustine, Hierom, &c. yea and that the Pastors of our Churches are less scandalous then they were then; what if I should compare many of them even to St. Augustine, St. Hierom, and such others, both in Doctrine and Holiness of Life? should I do so, I know you would account it arrogancy: but yet I will presume to make some comparison, and leave you to Judge impartially if you can.

As for the Heavenliness of their writings, let but some of ours be compared with them, and you will see at least that they spake by the same spirit: and for their Commentaries on Scripture, did we miss it as oft as Ambrose, Hierom and many more, we should bring our selves very low in the esteem of the Church: Even your Cajetane doth more boldly censure the Fathers Commentaries then this comes to.

And as to our lives, the Lord knows that I have no pleasure in opening any of the saults of his Saints, nor shall I mention any but what are confessed by themselves in Printed Books, and mentioned by others; and to boast of our own Purity I take to be a detestable thing, and contrary to that sense of sin that is in every Saint of God. But yet if the Lords Churches and servants are slandered and reproached as they were by the Heathens of old, the vindicating them is a duty which we owe to Christ.

Those Ministers that I Converse with are partly Marryed, and partly unmarryed. The Marryed live soberly, in Conjugal Chastity, as burning and shining lights before the people, in exemplary Holiness of Life. The unmarryed also give up themselves to the Lord, and to his service: and I verily think that of many such that converse with me, there is not one that ever desiled themselves by incontinency, and I am consident would be ready to take the most solemn Oath of it, if any Papist call them to it. And for the people of our Communion, through the mercy of God such sins are so rare, that if one in a Church be guilty once, we all lament it, and bring them to penitence, or disown them.

And were the Churches better in the third, fourth, fift, fixt, or following Ages? I doubt not. And I judge by these discoveries. 1. By the sad Histories of the Crimes of those times.

2. By the lamentable complaints of the Godly Fathers, of the Bishops, and people of their times. What dolefull complaints do Basil, Gregory Nazianz. and Greg. Nyssen, and Chrysostom, Austin, &c. make? (it were too long to recite their words.) What complaints made Gildus of the Brittish Church? What a doleful description have we of the Christian Pastors and People in his dayes, from Salvian, through his whole Book de Gubernat.?

3. I judge also by the Canons, and by the Fathers directions concerning Offendors. For example; Gregory Mag. saith of drunkards [Quod cum venia suo ingenio sunt relinquendi, ne deteriores fiant, si à tali consneundine evellantur.] And was this the Roman Sanctity even then? And was this St. Gregories Sanctity? that Drunkards must be let alone with pardon, lest if they be forced from their custome, they be made worse! Then fairfall the Ministers of England: If such advice were but given by one of us, it would seem enough to cast us out of our Ministry. We dare not let one drunkard alone in our Church communion, where Church-discipline is set up.

So Angustine saith { that Drunkenness is a mortal sin, Si sit assidua, if it be daily or usual. And that they must be dealt with gently and by fair words, and not roughly and sharply.] If one of us should make so light of Drunkenness, what should we be thought? I cite these two from Aquinas 22. q. 150. art. 1.4. ad

4m & art.2. I.

Many Canons determine that [Prieses that will not part with their Concubines, shall be suspended from officiating; till they let them go.] Whereas with us, a man deserveth to be ejected, that should should have a Concubine but one night in his life.

Gratian Distinct. 34. citeth c. 17. of a Toletane Council, saying, that he that bath not a Wise, but a Concubine in her stead, shall not be put from the Communion. His Corrector reciteth the whole Canon thus [If any Believer have a mise and a Concubine, let him not Communicate. But he that hath no Wise, and hath a Concubine in stead of a Wise, may not be put from the Communion: only let him be content with one woman, either Wise or Concubine, which he will. He that liveth otherwise, let him be cast off, till he give over, and return to penitence.]

In an English Council at Berghamsted an. 697. the seventh Canon is this [If a Priest leave his Adultery, and do not naughtily defer Baptism, nor is given to drunkenness, let him keep his Ministry, and the priviledge of his habit] Spelman, pag. 195. King Alured in the Presace to his Laws tells us, that except Treason and Desertion of their Lords, the Councils of the Clergy did lay but some pecuniary mult on other sins, Spelm. pag. 362.

All this shews that the Church then was much more corrupt then ours now in England.

Yea the best of the Fathers had such blots, that I may well make their Confessions another discovery, that our Churches are as pure and holy as theirs. I will name but sew of the chief, because I would not rake into their faults needlessly, who are pardoned, gloristed Saints in Heaven. St. Augustine whilest he seaned to the Maniches had a bastard, and confesseth himself guilty of fornication. St. Hierom that was so vehement for Virginity, and lived a Monastick life, doth yet confess that he was not a Virgin. St. Bernard that lived so Contemplative a life, in his Serm. de beata virgine post serm. S. de Assumpt. confesseth, se carere virginitate, that he lacked his virginity. And though Bellarmine (de scriptor. Ecceles. pag. 224.) do from that only reason question whether it be Bernards, yet it is in the second Tome among his undoubted writings, and this reason is a poor disproof.

Now if one of our ordinary Ministers should be but guilty of such a sin, though but once, and that before Conversion, no doubt but it would lye heavye on their Consciences; and I am sure it would leave such a blot on their names, that were never

When we tell the Papifts of their Licenfing Whore-houses at Rome, Bononia, &c. they commonly fly to the words of Austin, lib. de Ordine, saving [Aufer Meretrices de rebits humanis, coturbaveris omnia libidinibus, i. e. Take away Whores from among men, and you will disturb all things with lusts. Though this was written when Austin was but a young convert, and it feems that he after changed his mind, yet this shews that our times are far from the abominations of those; and our Pastors are far more strict then Austin then was.

4. As for the Holiness of their Church by Ceremonies, as Holy Water, Holy Oil, Relicks, Altars, and an hundred such things, I think it not worth the speaking of; all things are sanctified to us by the word and prayer. We devote our felves and all that we have to God and then to the Pure all things are Pure. We pegle & no Ordinance of God that we can know of and enjoy. He is a spirit, and seeketh such as will worship him in spirit and truth. This is the Holiness that we look after. But for numbring of Beads, and Ave Maries, and going pilgrimages, and fuch inventions of arrogant men, we place no Holinels in them, as knowing that God defireth not a Mimical or Hillrionical wor-- thip; and that none knows what will please him so well as himfelf.

CHAP. XXXV.

Detect. 26. Nother of their Deceits is, by calling us to tell them when every one of their Errors did first begin, and what Pope did bring them in ; or else they will not believe but they are from the Apostles.

To this Bishop Ofher and abundance of our writers have answered them at large. I shall therefore speak but these sew, but satisfactory words.

1. It belongs to you to prove the continuance of your Opinions or Practices, more then to us to prove the Beginning. 2. It sufficesh that we prove that there was a time when your errors were not in the Church, and that we can do from the Scriptures and the Fathers, and oft have done. 3. You know your felves of abundance of changes which you know not who Hh did first introduce. Who first administred the Lords Supper in one kind only? dare you say that this was from the beginning? Who first laid by the standing on the Lords day, and used knceling? (forbidden Can. 20. Concil. Nicen. 1. and in other General Councils.) Alvarus Pelagius de planet. Eccles. li. 2. art. 2. fol. 104. faith The Church bemaileth the fins of the people. but specially of the Clergy as greater then the sin of Sodom: For we see that faith and fustice have for saken the earth. The Holy Scripture and sacred Canons are accounted as fables --- He's now a man of no knowledge that inventeth not Novelties. You fee that then Novelties were brought in. The lame Vincentius Lirinensis complaineth of: And not only complaineth of, but giveth Direction what to do in case that [Novella aliqua contagio, non jam portinnculam tantum, sed totam Pariter Ecclesiam commaculare conetur? If any novell contagion shall endeavour to stain not only a part of the Church but the whole Church alike? And then his advise is to appeal from Novelty to Antiquity, and not to the Pope or the present Church. withall he addeth that This Direction is but for I new herefies at their first rising, before they falsifie the rules of ancient faith (that is, before they corrupt antient Writers, or can pretend to Antiquity) and before by the large spreading of the venome. they endeavour to corrupt the volumes of our ancestors. But dilated and inveterate Heresies are not to be set upon this way, because by the long tract of time, they have had a long occasion of flealing Truth: and therefore we must convince such antient herefies and schisms by no means but by the only Authority of the Scripture, if there be need, or avoid them - \ Lirinenf. сар. 4 ес.

Were there not abundance of Novelties introduced, when Augustine ad Januarium said that [They load our Religion with fervile burdens, which God in mercy would have to be free, with a very few and most manifest Sacraments of Celebration, so that the condition of the Jews was more tolerable, that were subject to Legall Sacraments, and not to the presumptions of men These words of Austin your own Joh. Gerson teciting (de vita spirit. anima. lest. 2. par. 3.) addeth of his own [Situo tempore, &c. If in thy dayes thou didst thus mourn, Oh wise Augustine, what wouldst thou have said in our time: where according to the variety, and motion of heads, there is incredible variety and dissonant multiplicity of such servile hurdens, and as thou callest them, of humane presumptions. Among which, as so many snares of souls, and entangling nets, there's scarce any manthat walks secure, and is not taken

How think you now in the Judgement of Angustine and Gerson; whether there have any Novelties been brought into the Church; and whether all your Presumptions and burdens, and (as Gerson calls them) halters for souls, have come from the Apostles, or are your own? When all is thus overcome with Novelty, do you make any question whether any thing be new?

It seems that Bernard thought that humane Traditions were too much befriended, when he thus describeth the Assemblies that he approveth, Epist. 91. [Such a Council (do I delight in) in which the Traditions of men are not obstinately defended, or superstitionsly observed; but they do diligently and humbly enquire, what is the good, and well pleasing, and perfect will of God.]

And it feems to me that General Councils by error introduced Novelties, when Later Councils were fain to undo what the former had done: For so doth blessed Angustine profess they did, saying, De Baptis. cont. Donat. lib. 2. cap. 6. [And Councils themselves that are gathered through several Regions or Provinces, do without any scruple yield to the authority of more plenary Councils that are gathered out of the whole (hristian world; and those same plenary Councils do often yield (or give place) the former to the later, when by some experiment of matters, that which was shut is opened, and that which lay hid is known Sure here are alterations made even by General Councils that correct one another.

And what should hinder the Introduction of Novelty when General Councils do so often err? Nay if such Councils be Morally and Interpretatively the whole Church, as the Papists say, then the whole Church dother in the reception of some Novelty, before they declare it by their decrees. If you say, that General Councils cannot err, nor introduce such Novelties, your Champion Bellarmine and many of your own, will give you the Lie: saith he De Concil, lib. 2. cap. 11. [Neg, potest, &c. It cannot be answered that those Conscils erved because they mere not lawfull (that is the Arrian and other Heretical General Councils, at that at Sirmium, Millanie, Arimium, Ephefus, several at Constantinople dissallowed by the Papists) For to most of them there was nothing wanting but the Popes assent. Yea the second at Ephesus was altogether like that at Basil: For both were called by the Pope; in both of them the Popes Legate was present at the beginning: from both of them the Popes Legate shortly after went away: in both of them the Pope was excommuni ated; and yet that the Council of Ephesus erred, the adversaries will not deny? Hence he conclude that [the chief Power Ecclesiassical is not in the Church, nor in the Council, the Pope be-

And what should hinder, when there is but one mans vote: against it even the Popes, but that Novelty and error may enter at any time; and when that one man is oft fo wicked and Herecical as he is. For General Councils are but a meer name and mockery. The packing of them shews it: the Paucity and non-Universality of them shews it. The Management of their affairs shews it. They do nothing fince the Papal reign, but what the Pope will (excepting the condemned Councils) They have no Bling till he Will; nor make any Decrees but what he Will: Nor are their Decrees of any further power, then he is pleased to give them. So that his Will is the sense of the General Council or universal Church. I need not turn you for this to Sleidan, or Vergerius Bishop of Trent, that tell us the Holy Choft came to that Council in a Cloak-bag from Rome: nor to Espensaus in Tit. 1. pag. 42. seeing Bellarmine speaks it out, De Concil. lib. 2, cap. II. Saying, We must know that the Pope is wont to fend Legates instructed concerning the judgement of the Apostolick feat, with this Condition, that if the Council do consent to the Judgement of the Apostolick seat, it shall be formed into a Decree; If not, the forming of the decree shall be deferred till the Pope of Rome, being advised with, shall return bis answer] And saith Bellarmine de Concil. lib. 2. cap. II. [In the Conxcil of Basil, Ses. 2. it was decreed by common consent, together with the Popes Legate, that a Council is above the Pope: which certainly is now judged erroneous] And the Council of Lateran and Florence decreed the contrary. And Pighius faith, Hierarch. Eccles. 1. 6. that Tabe Councils of Constance and Basis ment about by a new trick, and pernicious example to destroy the Ecclesiastical Hierarchy, and instead of it to bring in the Domination of a promiscuous confused popular multitude, that is to raise again Babylon it self, subjecting to themselves, or to the community of the Church, (which they falsty pretended that they Represent) the very Head and Prince of the whole Church; and kim that is the Ficar of Christ himself in this his Kingdom, and this against Order and Nature, against the clearest light of Gospel verity, against all Authority of Antiquity, and against the undoubted Faith and Judgement of the Orthodox Church it self.

Mark Papists: General Councils with the Popes Nuncio may bring in Novelties in faith, against the clearest light of the Gospel, and the full Consent of Antiquity; and yet these Council, affirmed their opinions to be de fide, and the contrary to be Heretical and Damnable, and contrary to all Antiquity. You see then that Novelties are among you in matters of faith. And the French to this day are guilty of those Novelties, and also charge their Adversaries with Innovation.

Nay what will you say, if General Councils themselves are but Novelies, though they are the soundation of the saith of one half of the Papists (as the Pope is of the other) I say not so, but judge whether your Champion Pighins say so, Hierarch. Eccles. lib. 6. cap. 1. fol. 230. where he saith that [Concilia universalia non habent Divinam, &c. General Councils have not a Divine or Supernatural Original, but meerly an humase Original, and are the Invention of Constantine a Prince. prositable indeed sometimes to find out in Controversie, which is the Orthodox and Catholick trush, though to this they are not necessary; seeing its a readyer way to advise with the Apostolick seat] How now Sirs? Is your Representative Church the soundation of your saith, a Novelty of Constantines invention; and yet are you in the old way, and must we be put to prove you to be Novelists?

Do you think those Popes did go the Old way, of whom Alvarus Pelagins speaks (de planelu Eccles. art. 15. lib.2.) that [they succeeded in authority, but not in Sanelity, intruding themselves, procuring, bargaining, &c. building Towers and Palaces in Babylon, that is, in Rome according to Hierom] Some foul innovation sure they were guilty of that is re-edified Bobylon.

So that this is my first proof that you are Novelists; from the General Accusations of others, and Confessions of your own.

2. Another proof that changes may be, and yet the time and Authors be unknown, is from the instance of other Churches that have been corrupted or subverted by Innovations, and yet the time and authors are unknown. You accuse the Churches in Habassia of many errors your selves; and you are not able to tell us when they came in, or who introduced them. The same may be said of the Georgians, Armenians, Egyptians, yea and of the Greeks and Russians. Can you tell us when, and by whom each error was introduced that corrupted the Churches mentioned in the Scripture? as Corinth, Philippi, Coloss, Thessalonica, Ephelus, Laodicaa, and the rest: you know you can give us no better an account of this, then we can of the Authors of your Corruptions, nor so good.

You know that among the Primitive Fathers, whose writings are come to our hands, many errors had the Major vote, as that of the Corporeity of Angels, (which your second General Council at Nice owned) and their Copulation with momen before the flood, the Millenary conceit, and many more which you confess to be errors. Tell us when any of these came in, if you can (unless you will believe that Papias received the last from John, and then its no error.) Who did first bring the Asian Churches to celebrate Easter at a season differing from yours? Who sist brought the Brittains to it? Nay we know not certainly who first Converted many Nations on earth, nor when they first received their Christianity: and how then should we know when

And we find that good men did bring in Novelties; and what was by them introduced as indifferent, would easily by custom grow to seem Necessary: and what they received as a doubtfull opinion, would easily grow to be esteemed a point of Faith. The Presbyters and whole Clergy of Neocasarea were offended with Basil for his Innovations, viz. for bringing in a new Psalmodie, or way of singing to God; and for his new order of Monasticks: and they told him that none of this was so in Gregories dayes; and what answereth Basil? He denyeth not the Novelty of his Psalmodie, but retorts again on them, that their Letany also was new, and not known in the time of Gregory (Thaumaturgus) yea, faith he, How know you that thefe things were not in the dayes of Gregory? For you have kept nothing unchanged to this day of all that he was used to] you see what chopping and changing was then in the Church among all forts, when such an alteration was made in less then forty years. Yet Bafil would not have unity to be laid on any of these things. but addeth, [But we pardon all these things, though God will examine all things: only let the principal things be safe Basil Epift. 63. Isidore Pelusiota lib. 1. Epift. 90. faith, that I the Apostles of the Lord studying to restrain and suppress unmeet loquacity, and sheming themselves Masters of modesty and gravity to us, did by wife Council permit women to fing in the Churches. But as all Gods documents are turned into the contrary, so this is turned to dissoluteness, and the occasion of sin. For they are not affected with deep compunction in finging Divine Hymns; but abufing the sweetness of the singing, to the ignitating and provoking of Inst, they take it for no better then stage-play songs: I therefore he adviseth that they be suffered to sing no more.

Here you see 1. That changes had happened about many Divine things. 2. That he adviseth himself the introducing of this novelty, that women he forbidden singing in the Church, because of the abuse, though he confess it a wise Apostolick Order. So that for Novelty by good men to creep into Gods wor-

Thip, is not strange.

3. Moreover the Nature of the thing may tell all the world, that neither you nor we can be accountable of the beginning of every error that creepeth into the Church: For 1. The distance of time is great. 2. Historians are not so exact: and what they tell us not, neither you, nor we can know. 3. Much History is perished. 4. Much is corrupted by your wicked forgeries, as hath been oft proved to you. 5. Mixtures of Fables have hindred the credit of much of it. 6. Nations are not individual persons, but consist of millions of individuals: And as it is not a whole Nation that is converted to the faith at once, so neither is it whole Nations that are perverted to Heresie at once, but one receiveth it first, and then more and more, till it over-spread the whole. Paul saith that such doctrine eateth like a Gangrene; and that is by degrees, beginning on one part, and proceeding.

proceeding to the rest. 7. As I said before; that which is at first received but as an Opinion and an Indifferent thing, must have time to grow into a Custom; and that Custom maketh it a Law, and makes Opinions grow up to be Articles of Faith, and Ceremonies grow to be Necessary thing: You know that this is the common way of propagating opinions in the world.

4. I have in another Book shewed you out of many of your own writers, the rise of divers of your vanities. And Offer hath told the Jesuite more: and so he hath told you of your thriving to your present height, in his Book de success. And so hath Mornay in his Mysterie of Iniquity, and Rivet in the Desense of him against Cofferellus; and Pet. Molinaus hath purposely written a Book de Novitate Papismi, Antiquitate veri Christianismi, shewing the Newness of Popery in the several parts of it. To these therefore I remit you for Answer to this Objection.

5. Can you tell us your felves, when many of your doctines or practices sprung up? When took you up your Sabbaihs fast, for which you have been condemned by a Council? You know that when the twentieth Canon of the Nicene Council was made, and when the Canons at Trull. were made, it was the Practice of the Church through the known world, to pray and perform other worship standing, and to avoid kneeling on the Lords Day. Tell us when this Canon and Tradition was first violated by you, and by whom? It was once the custom of your Church to give Infants the Eucharist; who first broke it off? It was once your practice to Communicate in both kinds: who first denyed the Cup to the Laity? At first it was only a doubtful Opinion, that Saints are to be Prayed to, and the dead prayed for, which came into mens minds about the third or fourth Century? But who first made them Articles of faith? Angustine began to doubt, whether there were not some kind of Purgatory: But who fifft made this also a point of faith? Who was it that first added the Books of the Maccabees and many others to the Canon of Scripture, contrary to the Council of Laodicea, and all the rest of the concent of Antiquity, which Dr. Reignolds, Dr. Cofin and others have produced? Who was it that first taught and practised the putting an Oath to all the Clergy of the Christian Church within your power to be true to the Pope, and to obey him as the Vicar of Christ? Who first taught men to swear, that they would not interpret Scripeure, but according to the unanimous Confent of the Fathers? Who was the first that brought in the doctrine or name of Transubstantiation? and who first made it an Article of faith? Who first made it a point of faith to believe that there are just feven Sacraments, neither fewer nor more? Did any before the Council of Trent swear men, to receive and profess without doubting, all things delivered by the Canons and Occumenical Councils, when at the same time they cast off themselves the Canons of many General Councils, and fo are generally and knowingly perjured? (as e. g. the twentieth Canon of Nice forementioned) These and abundance more you know to be Novelties with you, if wilfulnels or gross ignorance bear nor rule with you; and without great impudence you cannot deny it. Tell us now when these first came up, and satisfie your selves.

One that was afterward your Pope (Fneas Sylvius, Epist. 288. saith, that before the Council of Nice, there was little respect had to the Church of Rome: You see here the time mentioned.

Your Learned Cardinal Nicol. Cusanus, lib. de Concerd. Cathol. c. 13. &c. tells you how much your Pope hath gotten of late: and plainly tells you, that the Papacy is but of Positive right, and that Priests are equall, and that it is subjectional consent that gives the Pope and Bishops their Majority, and that the distinction of Discesses, and that a Bishop be over Presbyters, are of Positive right, and that Christ gave no more to Peter than the rest; and that if the Congregate Church should cheese the Bishop of Trent for their President and Head, he should be more properly Peters Successor then the Bishop of Rome Tell us now when the contrary doctrine first arole?

Gregory devalentia (de leg. usus Euchar. cap. 10. tells you that the Receiving the Sacrament in one kind, began not by the decree of any Bishop, but by the very inse of the Churches, and the consent of believers: and tels you, that it is unknown when that Custom first begun, or get head, but that it was General in the Lavine Church, not long before the late Council of Constance.

And may you not see in this, how other points came in ?

If Pope Zosimus had but had his will, and the Fathers of the Carthage Council had not diligently discovered, shamed, and resisted his forgery, the world had received a new Nicene Canon, and we should never have known the Original of it.

Its a considerable Instance that Officer brings, of using the Church service in a known tongue. The Latine tongue was the Vulgar tongue, when the Liturgy and Scripture was first written in it (at Rome and sar and neer it was understood by all.) The service was not changed, as to the language: but the language it self changed; and so Scripture and Liturgy came to be in an unknown tongue; And when did the Latine tongue cease to be understood by all? Tell us what year, or by whom the change was made? saith Erasmus (Decl. ad censur. Paris. tit. 12. §. 41.) [The Vulgar tongue was not taken from the people, but the people departed from it.

5. We are certain that your errors were not in the times of the Apostles, nor long after, and therefore we are sure that they are Innovations. And if I find a man in a Dropsie, or a Consumption, I would not tell him that he is well, and ought not to seek remedy, unless he can tell when he began to be ill, and what caused it.

You take us to be Heretical: and yet you cannot tell us when our errors did first arise. Will you tell us of Luther? You know the Albigenses whom you murdered by hundreds and thousands, were long before him? Do you know when they begun? Your Reinerius saith that some said, they were from Silvessers dayes, and some said since the Apostles; but no other beginning do you know.

6. But to conclude, what need we any more, then to find you owning the very doctrine and practife of Innovation ? When you maintain that you can make us new Articles of faith, and new worship, and new discipline, and that the Pope can dispense with the Scriptures, and such like, what reason have we to believe that your Church abhorreth Novelty? If you deny any of this, I prove it.

Pope Leo the tenth among other of Luthers opinions, reckoneth and opposeth this as Hereticals [It is certain that it is not in the hand of the Church or Pope, to make Articles of faith] (in.

The:

The Council of Constance that took the supremacy justly from the Pope, did unjustly take the Cup from the Laity in the Eucharist, [Licet in primitiva Ecclessa hujusmodi Sacramentum reciperetur à sidelibus sub utrag, specie, i. e. Though in the primitive Church this Sacrament was received by Believers under both kinds.]

The Council of Trent lay, Seff. 21. cap. 1, 2. that [this power was alway in the Church: that in dispensing the Sacraments, saving the substance of them, it might ordain or change things, as it should judge most expedient to the profit of the receiver.

Vasquez To. 2. Disp. 216. N. 60. saith [Though we should grant that this was a precept of the Apostles, nevertheless the Church and Pope might on just causes abrogate it: For the Power of the Apostles was no greater then the power of the Church and

Pope in bringing in Precepts.]

These I cited in another Treatise against Popery, page 365. Where also I added that of Pope Innecent [Secundum plenitudinem potestatis, &c. By the fulness of our power, me can dispense with the Law above Law] And the Gloss that oft saith [The Pope distenseth against the Apostle; against the Old Testament. The Pope dispensesh with the Gospell interpreting it | And Gregor. de valent, saying (Tom. 4. disp. 6. q. 8.) [Certainly some things in later times are more rightly constituted in the Church then they were in the beginning] And of Cardinal Peron's saying, lib. 2. Obs. 3. cap. 3. pag. 674. against King James, of the Authority of the Church to alter matters conteined in the Stripture: and his instance of the form of Sacraments being alterable; and the Lords command [Drink ye all of it] mutable and dispensable. And Tolets Its certain that all things instituted by the Apostles were not of Divine right.] Andradius (Defens. Concil. Trid. lib. 2. pag. 236. Hence it is plain that they do not err that fay the Popes of Rome may sometime dispense with Laws made by Paul and the four first Councils -] And Bzoviu [The Roman Church using Apostolical power, doth according to the Condition of times, change all things for the better] And yet will you not give us leave to take you for changers and Novelifts ?

But let us add to these witnesses, some more of your worthies, Angust. Triumph. de Ancon. q. 5. art. 1. saith [Tomake a new Creed, belongs only to the Pope, because he is the Head of the Christian faith, by whose authority all things belonging to faith are consirmed and strengthened —] Et Art. 2. [As he may make a new Creed, so he may multiply new Articles upon Articles | And (in Prefat. sum. ad Johan. 22.) he saith that [the Popes power is Infinite, because the Lordis great, and his strength great, and of his greatness there is no end } And q. 36. ad. 6. he saith that [the Pope giveth the Motion of Direction, and the sense of Knowledge into all the members of the Church; For in him we live and move and have our being — And the Will of God, and consequently the Popes Will, who is his Vicar, is the first and chief cause of all motions corporall and spiritual.] And then no doubt may change without blame.

Abbas Panormitan. in cap. C. Christus de haret. n. 2. saith, The Pope can bring in a new Article of faith And Petr. de Anchoran. in idic. The Pope can make new Articles of faith, that is, such as now ought to be believed, when before they ought not to be believed.]

Turrecremat. sum. de Eccl. lib. 2. cap. 203. saith that [the Pope is the Measure, and Rule, and Science of things to be believed.] And August. de Ancona shews us that the fudgement of Godis not bigher then the Popes, but the same, and that therefore no man may appeal from the Pope to God! (qu. 6. art. 1.) And therefore be not offended, if we suppose you to have changes.

A Confutation of a Popish Manuscript on this points

Just as I was writing this, I received another Popish M. S. sent from Wolverhampton to Sturbridge, to which I shall return an answer before I go to the next point.

Pap. M. S. An Argument for the Church.

I T will not be denyed but that the Church of Rome was once a most pure, excellent, flourishing and Mother Church; and her faith renowned in the whole world, Rom. 1.8. & 6. & 15. Whites Def. p. 555. King James speech to the Parliament. Whitaker in his Answer to Dr. Sanders. Fulk. cap. 21. Thes. 7. Reynolds in his fifth Conclusion.

This Church could not cease to be such, but she must fall either by Apostacy, Herefie, or Schism.

Apostacy is not only a renouncing of the faith of Christ; but of the name and Title of Christianity. No man will say that the Church of Rome had such a fall, or fell so.

Herefie is an adhesion or fast cleaving to some private or singular Opinion, or error infaith, contrary to the generally approved dostrine of the Church.

If the Church of Rome didever adhere to any singular or new opinion, disagreeable to the common received doctrine of the Chriftian world, I pray you satisfie me in these particulars.

I. By what General Council was she ever condemned?

2. Which of the Fathers ever writ against her?
3. By what Authority was she otherwise reproved?

For it seems to be a thing very incongruous, that so great a Church should be condemned by every private person, who hath a mind to condemn her.

Schism is a departure or division from the unity of the Church, whereby the bond and Communion held with some former Church is broken and dissolved.

If ever the Church of Rome divided her felf from any body of faithfull Christians, or broke Communion, or went forth from the Society of any Elder Church, I pray you satisfie me in these particulars.

1. Whose company did she leave?
2. From what body went she forth?

3. Where was the true Church she for sook?

For it appears not a little strange, that a Church should be accounted Schismatical, when there cannot be assigned any other Church different from her (which from age to age since Christs time bath continued visible) from whence she departed.

Thus far the Papists Manuscript.

An Answer to the foregoing Argument.

The Author of this Argument thinks as he speaks, its a case to be lamented with tears of blood, that the Church of Christ should be abused, and the souls of men deluded by men of so great ignorance. But if he know that he doth but juggle and deceive, its as lamentable that any matter of Salvation should fall into fuch hands.

This Argument I have before answered, Detell. 13. The word Church here is ambiguous, and either signifieth, 1. A particular Church, which is an Association of Christians for personal Communion in Gods worship. 2. Or divers such Associations or Churches Associated for Communion by their officers or delegates, for unity sake. 3. Or else it may signific some one Mistris Church that is the Ruler of all the relt in the world. 4. Or else it may signific the Universal (Catholick) Church it self, which containeth all the particular Churches in the world.

The Papist should not have plaid either the blind man or the Jugler by confounding these, and never telling us which he means. 1. For the first, we grant him that Rome was once an excellent sourishing Church: And so was Ephesus, Hierusalem, Philippi, Colosse and many more.

2. As to the second sence it is humane, or from Church custom, so to take the word Church, for Scripture, that I find doth not so use it: But sor the thing, we are indifferent: Though it cannot be proved that in Scripture times Rome had any more then a particular Church; yet its all one as to our cause.

3. As to the third and fourth senses, we deny, as confidently as we do that the Sun is darkness, that ever in Scipture times Rome was either a Mother to all Churches, or the Ruler and Mistris of all, or yet the Universal Church it self. Prove this, and

J will turn Papist.

But there's not a word for it in the Texts cited, but an intimation of much against it. Paul calleth Rome a Church, and commendeth its saith. True, but doth he not so by the Thessalonians, Colossians, Ephesians, Philippians, &c. and John by the Philadelphians, Pergamus, Thyatira and others, as well? And will nor this prove that Rome was but such a particular Church as one of them?

The citation of Protestants are done it seems by one that never read them, nor would have others read them; which makes him turn us to whole books to search for them, if we have nothing else to do, and to miscited places. But we know that all our Divines consess that Rome was once a true and samous particular Church, but never the Universall Church, nor the Ruler of the world, or of all other Churches, in Panis dayes. Would you durst lay your cause on this, and put it to the tryal? Why else did never Pani make one word of mention of this Power and honour, nor send other Churches to her to be Governed?

And now I pray consider to what purpose is the rest of your reasoning? What is it to me, whether Rome be turned either Apostate, Heretical, or Schismatical, any more then whether ferusalem, Ephesus, Philippi, or any other Church be so saln? If you are not saln I am glad of it; if you are I am forry for it; and so I have done with you (unless I knew how to recover you.) Would you not laugh even at the Church of ferusalem that was truly the Mother Church of the world, if they should thus reason [We are not faln away: therefore we must Rule over all the world, and no man is a Christian that doth not obey us?] This is the sport you make in the cheating of souls.

Well; but let us follow you, though our cause be not concerned in it. 1. I answer, that we accuse you not of renouncing the name of Christ. 2. We must needs fear, that according to to your own definition of Heresie, you are guilty of many

And to your Questions, I answer. 1. I pray you tell us what General Councils did ever condemn one half of the Herefies mentioned by Epiphanius, Augustine or Philastrius? Was there ever a greater rabble of Herefies then before ever a General Council was known? and were they dead and buryed before the first General Council was born? 2. Did you not smile when you wrote these delusory Questions? How can a General Council condemn you, or any great part of the Church: for instance the Greeks, &c. If you be not there its not a General Council? And will you be there to condemn your selves? you have more wit and less grace then so. And I pray, what General Council.

on them? If the Greeks themselves were not there, it was not a General Council; so considerable a part are they of the Church. And what General Council hath condemned the Abas-lines, Egyptians, &c.

3. Do you think General Councils are so stark mad or horridly impious, as to condemn so many Kingdoms with one condemnation, for Heresie? Why, they know that men must be heard, before they be condemned, and a Kingdom consisteth of many millions of souls. And it is not enough to know every mans saith, if we know the saith of the King, or Pope, or Archbishop, or Bishops: And how long shall they be examining each person in many Kingdoms?

4 But yet I can say more of your Church then of others. He that kills the Head, kils the Man: Your Usurping Head is an Essential part of your New-formed Church: But your · Head hath been condemned by Councils; therefore your Church in its effential part hath been condemned by Councils. Do you not know that all the world (as well as-the feigned Council Sinue (an.-) condemned your Pope Marcellinus for Offering to Idols? Know you not that two or three General Councils condemned Pope Honorius as a Monothelite? Yes: no doubt you know it. Know you not that the second General Council of Ephe. fus condemned and excommunicated your Pope? And that the Council of Basil called by him did the like ? If you do not, see Bellarmines parallel of them de Conciliis lib. 2. cap. 11. Do I need to tell you what the Council of Constance did? Or for what John 22. alias 23. and John 13. and other Popes were deposed. by Councils?

2. And for Fathers, do I need to tell you how many condemned Marcellinus, Liberius, Honorius and others? How oft Hilary Pietav. (infragmentis in recit. Epift. Liberii) doth cry out Anathema tibi Liberi, prevaricator: presuming to curse and excommunicate your Pope. Need I tell you what Tertullian saith against Zephernius: Yea what Alphonsus à Castro and divers of your own say against Liberius, Honorius, Anastasius, Celestine; and tell us that many Popes have been Hereticks? At least give us leave to believe Pope Adrian the sixth himself. Read Dom. Bannes in 2^m 2^a q. 1. art. 10. Where he proves a large of the line, that a Pope may be an Heretick, and largers at Figure that now after two hundred vers would prove there faile withestes, which write that Pope Honorius was condemned for an Heretick by three Popes, viz. Agatho, Leo the second, and Adrian the second.

3. But perhaps you'l fay, that though your Popes have been condemned by Councils, yet so have not your maintained doctrines. Answ. Yes, that they have too. Did not the Councils at Constantinople condemn the Doctrine of the second Nicene Council for Image-worship, and the Council at Frankford do the like? And those two at Constantinople were as much General as your Council of Trent was, and much more.

And yet that same Council at Nice did condemn the doctrine of St. Thom. Aquinas, and your Doctors commonly of worshipping the Image of Christ, and Cross, and sign of the Cross with Latria, divine worship.

And did not your General Councils at Laterane and Florence declare that the Pope is above a Council, and that they cannot depose him? &c. And yet your General Councils at Constance and Basis determine the contrary as an Article of Faith, and expressly affirm the former to be Heresie. See then your own doctrine, even in a fundamental point condemned by General Councils of your own (which side soever you take, the Popes, or the Councils.)

And did not the sixt Council of Carthage, of which St. Augustine was a principal member, not only detect Pope Zosimus forged Canon of Nice, but also openly and prevalently resist and reject your Usurpation, and resuse your Legates and Appeals to you? If you would cloak this, believe your own Pope Boniface, Epist. ad Eulalium, saying Aurelius sometime Bishop of Carthage, with his Colleagues, did begin, by the Devils instigation to wax proud against the Church of Rome in the times of our Predecissors, Bonisace and Celestine.

And if you have learnt to except against this Episse, see your Bishop Lindanus justifying it, Panopl. 1. cap. 89. Or at least believe your Champion Harding against fewels Challenge, art. 4. seet. 19. [After the whole African Church had persevered in schism the space of twenty years, and had removed themselves from the obed ence of the Apostolick seat, being seduced by Aurelius Bishop of Carthage.] Again note, that Austin was one of them.

But you'l say, that this was not a General Council: Answ. True: for when part riseth against part, it cannot be the whole that is on either side.

Moreover do you not know that the Greeks have condemned you oft? And truly their Councils have been much more General then yours at Trent was, where about forty Bishops altered the Canon of Scripture, and made Tradition equal with it. I think verily this one County would have afforded a far better

Council of a greater number.

But I'le once more name one General Council that hath condemned your very foundation; and that is the fourth General Council at Calcedon before mentioned, Att. 15. Can. 28. & Att. 16. where you may find, I. That the ancient Priviledges of the Roman Throne were given them by the Fathers (in Council) 2. That the Reason was, because Rome was the Imperial City. 3. They give Equal Priviledges to the seat of Constantinople, because it was now become New Rome. 4. That the Roman Legates would not be present at this act. 5. But the next day when they did appear, and pretended that this act was forced, the Bishops all cryed [No man was compelled: Its a just decree; we all say thus; we all approve it: Let that stand that is decreed; its all right.]

6. Here specially note that this General Council thought they needed not the Popes Approbation for the validity of their Decrees, when they pass them, and take them for valid, even contrary to the will of the Pope. Speak you that bear the least reverence to a General Council. Did this Council think that their Decrees were invalid, if the Pope approve them not? You see, if you be not wilfully blind, they did not. And who is now to be believed? Bellarmine and his party, and the present prevalent party of the Papists, that say, Councils not approved by the Pope are invalid or without authority; or the Council of Calcedon that thought otherwise?

7. Note that the Popes Legates called this [An humbling, and depressing, and wronging of the Papacy, and therefore entred their dissent: see Bellarmines Confession lib. 2. de Pontif. cap. 17. Binnius notes on this Council. Baronius an 45.1.

3. Note

8. Note also that the shifts of Bellarm. Binnins, Baronius, Becanus, Gretser, &c. are apparently salse, that say this Canon was surreptitiously brought into the Council: for Ætius, Act. 16. openly prosessed the contrary, and all the Bishops prosessed their consent to the last.

9. Note also that this is one of the four Great Councils which the Papists themselves compare to the four Gospels; and in it were fix hundred and thirty Fathers.

10. Note also that this great Council is against them, and on the Protestant side in the very soundation of all our differences, Whether the Roman Priviledges be jure divine or humano? And though it be but the Priviledges, and not the now claimed Vicarship that was in Question, yet the Conclusion is the stronger against them, because the leffer was denyed.

But their last shift is, that this Clause or Canon was not approved, and so is Null. 1. Mark then you that wrote this Manuscript, that we have General Councils against you; but we want the Popes Approbation. And in good sadness was that the meaning of your Question [What Council, that is, what Pope condemned our Church?] Can it be expected that this one man should condemn himself? or can you be no Heretick till then?

2. But let it be so this once. Did not your Pope approve of this Council, when Gregory the first did liken it with the other three to the four Gospels? and said of this [Tota devotione Complettor: integerrima approbatione custodio] I embrace it with my whole devotion; I keep it with most entire approbation] Greg. I. Regist. 1. 1. Epist. 24. cited in the Decrees, Dist. 15. c. 2. I think this is expressly a full Approbation, not without excepting any part only, but excluding all such exceptions. And the like Approbation of Gelasius in the Roman Council is cited there also in the Decrees, ibid. pag. 33.

I did also before instance the fixt General Council against you, approved by Pope Adrian in his Epistle to Tharasius in the second Nicene Council.

And indeed it is no hard matter to prove you condemned by your own Popes also. If you could but understand the plainest words in a matter that is against your opinions and wills, there needed no talk to perswade you that Pope Gregory the first condemned the Title of Universal Bishop or Patriarch, profeshing earnestly that he was the forerunner of Antichrist that would usurpir. But the plain truth is, as sad experience teacheth us, no words of Fathers, Popes or Councils, much less of Scripture. are intelligible to you, when your wills are against the matter. But we may truly fay of you, that lay all on the will of the Pope as Austins Observator, your Lodovicus Vives freely speaketh (in schol. in August. lib. 20. de sivit. Dei, cap. 26.) [Those are taken by them for Edicts and Councils, which make for them (or are on their side;) the rest they no more regard then a meeting of women in a workhouse or a mashing place.] Do you understand this language of one of your own (but too honest to have much company.)

Well; but you have a third Question [By what Authority was the otherwise reproved ?] Answ. By the Authority of that Precept, Levit. 19.17, and many the like. By the same Authority that Paul reproved Peter, Gal. 2. and withstood him to the face: by such Authority as any man may seek to quench a fire in his neighbours house, or pull a man out of the water that is drowning: or as any one Pastor may reprove another when he sinneth. By the same Authority as Ireneus rebuked Victor, and the Asian Bishops withstood him, and as Cyprian and the Council of Carthage reproved Stephen; and the rest aforecited did what they did. By as good Authority as the Church of Rome condemneth the Greek Church, doth the Greek Church and many another condemn the Church of Rome.

3. The next case is about the Roman schism. To your Questions, I answer, I. To Question whether Papists be Schismaticks, is to question whether Ethiopians be black. Do you not at this day divide from all the Christian world, save your selves? Do you not unchurch most of the Christians on earth (O. dreadful prefumption! when Christ is so tender of his interest and his servants, and is bound as it were, by so many promises to save them and not forsake them.) You ask, what Church you left ? and when was it? and whose company? Sensless Questions. By a Church if you mean the Universal Church. there is but One in all: and therefore One Universal Church cannot for sake another: but when part of it for saketh the other part, and arrogateth the title of the whole to themselves, do you doubt whether this be Schism? If you mean a particular Church: How can Spain, Italy, France, and many more Kingdoms go out of a particular Church, that contain so many hundred particular Churches in them? No more then London can go out of Panls Church. The Catholick is but One containing all true Christians on earth : and you have been guilty of a most horrid Schism, as ever the Church knew. For 1. You have fet up a Church in the Church: An Universal Church in the Universal Church: A new form destructive to the old. Your Pope as Christ-representative is now an Essential part of it, and no man is a member of it, that is not a member of the Popes body, and subject to him. So that even the Antipdes and the poor Abassians that know not whether the Pope be fish or flesh, or never heard of such a name or thing, must all be unchristened, unchurched and damned, if you be Judges. Yea and Bellarmine rells us (which indeed your Church Constitution doth infer) that all that are duly baptized, are interpretatively or implicitely baptized into the Pope.

2. And as you have devised a New Catholick Church: so you hereby cast off and disown all the Christians of the world that be not of your party: determining it as de fide, that none of them can be saved; who yet had rather venture on your Curso and Censure, then into your Herefie and Schism.

3. And hereby you fix your felves in this Schism, and put us (that unseignedly long for peace) out of all Hope of even having Peace with you; because you will hearken to it on no terms, but that all men become subjects to your usurping Representative-Christ, which we dare as soon leap into the fire as do. Do you know now where the Church or Body was that you forsook? It was all over the world where even there were any Christians.

Were it not a great Schism, think you, if a sew Anabaptists should say, We are the whole Church, and all others are Hereticks or Schismaticks? Or was it not a great Schism of the Donatists to arrogate that title to themselves, and unchurch so many others? And what Church did they for sake? Angustine tells them over and over what the Catholick Church was that they withdrew from? even all true Christians dispersed over the earth : Or that Church which begun at Hierusalem, and thence diffused it self through the world. But he never blames them for separating from the Universal Roman Head or Vicar: but from the Church of Rome, as a conspicuous combination of particular Churches. Optatus and he do blame them for withdrawing, as also from other Churches.

What if John of Constantinople in prosecution of his title of Universal Patriarch, had concluded as you, that none in the world are Christs members but his members, nor of the Church, but his subjects, had not this been a notorious schism? Tell us then what Church he had forsaken, and answer your self.

But your last Caution in a parenthesis, doth condemn your felves. What I Must that Church that's true be visible from Christs time? then as Constantinople, nor most other were never true Churches (which is false) so Rome it self was never a true Church (which is false also) Did you think that there was a Church at Rome in Christs time? Sure you are not so ignorant. By this Rule there should be no true Church, but that at ferusalem, and those in fudea.

But suppose you had said [since the Apostles time] This also had excluded most Churches on earth. But if you mean the Universal Church, we grant you easily, that it hath been visible ever fince Christs time : but not alway in one place or Country. Is not the greater part of Christians in the world, whom you schismatically unchurch, a visible company? Doubtless you know they are. Yea the Abassines and many Churches that being out of the Roman Empire, did never so much as submit to your Primacy of Order, nor had you ever any thing to do with them (more then to own them as Christians) yet now are condemned by your Arrogancy, because they will not begin in the end of the world, to enter into a new Church, which they nor their Fore-fathers had ever any dependance on. It was a shrewd answer of an old woman, that the Emperor of Habassia's Mother gave to Gonzalus Rodericus the Jesuite, pressing her to be subject to the Pope as the Vicar of Christ, or else she could not be subject to Christ [Negne ego, inquit illa, neque mei sancte Petro obedientiam negamus: in eadem nunc sumus fide, in qua fuimus ab initio : ea si recta non erat, cur per tot atates ac secula nemo repertus est, qui nos errrantes commonerent] i.e. We are in the same Belief as we were from the beginning: If it were not right, why did no man in fo many ages warn us of our error till now?] Mark here a double Argument couche against the Pope, One from Tradition, even Apostolical Tradition, (for Godignus himself saith, that no man doubts but Ethiopia received the faith from the beginning, even from the the Eunuch and St. Mathem.) The other is, that sure that Pope that cannot in fo many ages look after his flock, no not fo much as to fend one man to tell them that they erred till about one thousand five hundred years after Christ, was never intended by Christ to be the Universal Governour of the world. What! will Christ set any on an Impossible work? Or make it so necessary to people to obey one that they never so much as hear from? But what faid the Jesuite to the old woman! Why he told her [Non potnisse Romanum Pontificem, qui totius Christi Ecclesia pastor est prateritis retro annis, Doctores in Abassiam mittere, eò quod Mahumetani omnia circumdarent, nec ullum ad ipsos additum relinquerant. Nunc vero aperta jam Maritima ad Athiopiam via, id prastare quod nequivit prins] that is, The Pope of Rome who is the Pastor of the whole Church of Christ, was not able in the years past to send Doctors into Habassia, because the Mahomitans compassed all, and lest not any passage to them. But now the seas are open, he can do that which be could not before | Liter. Gonzal. Roder. in Godign. de Reb. Abass. lib. 2. cap. 18. pag. 324. A fair answer. As if Christ had set either the Pope, or the Abassines an imposfible task: and appointed a Governour that for fo many hundred years could not govern: or the people must be so many hundred years no Christians, though they believed in Christ till the Pope could fend to them? And how should these and all such Countries fend Bishops to a General Council?

As your own Canus Loc. Theol. saith of the Jesuites; so say I of your New Church [Vocati estis ad societatem fessure Christi, quasine dubio societas cum Christi Ecclesia sit, qui titulum sibi illum arrogant, hi videant, an Hareticorum more penes se Ecclesiam existere mentiantur. i. e. You are called to the society of Jesus Christ, which society being undoubtedly the Church of Christ, let them see to it, that arrogate this title to themselves, whether shey do not imitate hereticks.

But we do not hence conclude that all that have lived and dyed in your profession, have been no members of the Church, because that your Church is guilty of Herefie, and notoriously of Schism. For we know that millions that live among you consent not to your usurpations: Nay do not so much as understand your errors thereabout. And some hold them but Notionally as unessedual Opinions: And every one is not a Heretick that holdeth a point that is judged Heretical, and which is Herefie in another that holdeth it in another fort. And there are errors called Herefies by most, which are not destructive to the Effentials of Christianity, but only to some Integral part. And there is a schism that doth not unchurch men, as well as a schism that doth (of which this is no place to treat.) But ad hominem, me thinks your own writers put you hard to it, who conclude (as Bellarmine and many more do, though Alphonfus à Castro and others be against it) that Hereticks and Schismaticks are no members of the Church. And Melch. Canus (Loc. Theol. lib. 4. cap. 2. fol. 117.) faith that I that Hereticks are no parts of the Church, is the common conclusion of all Divines, not only of those that have written of late, but of them also that by their Antiquity are esteemed the most Noble; This is attested by Cyprian, Augustine, Gregory, the two Councils of Lateran and Florence: Rightly therefore did Pope Nicolas define that the Church is a colle-Etion of Catholicks. 7 If this be true, it is an Article of faith: And then Alphonfus a Cast, and all of his mind are Hereticks and lost men. And I pray you note what a case you are in. Two Approved General Councils have determined that a Heretick is no member of the Church. But multitudes of your own writers, and Pope Adrian, and many more of your Popes have judged that a Pope may be a Heretick: and consequently no member of the Church. And consequently judge whats become of your Church, when an Essential part of it is no part of the Church.

Your common shift (which Canss ibid. and others fly to) is, that He must be a judged Heretick before he is dismembred. But I. Sure that is but for manifestation to men; for before God he is the same, if men never judge him. 2. Where the case is notorious, the offendor is ipso jure cut off. 3. Then it is in the Popes Power to let whole millions of Hereticks to be still parts of the Church. And so the world shall be Christians or no Christians as he please: and why may he not let Turks and Insidels on the same grounds be parts of the Church? For he may forbare to judge them, if that will serve. 4. Then all the Christians in the world that the Pope hath not yet judged and cast out, are members of the Church: And then millions and millions are of the Church that never were subjects of the Pope. If you say, It is enough that there is a General condemnation of all that are guilty as they are: I answer, then it is enough to cut off a Pope, that there was a General condemnation against such as he.

5. But if all this fatisfie you not, yet I told you before, that two or three Councils and three Popes did all judge Pope Honorius guilty of Herefie (and confequently both Popes and General Councils have judged that a Pope may be an Heretick) therefore you have been judged Heretical in your Head, which is an essential part of your Church.

And thus I have shewed you what is the schism of the Church of Rome, which being but a part, hath attempted to cut off all the rest, and so hath made a new pretended Catholick Church: As a part of the Old Church which confisteth of all Christians united in Christ, we confess all those of you, still to be a part, that destroy not this Christianity: But as you are new gathered to a Christ-Representative, or Vicar General, we deny you to be any Church of Christ. If you be Church members or saved, it must be as Christians; but never as Papists. For a Papist may be a Christian, but not as a Papist.

And if yet you cannot see the Church that you separate from, open your eyes and look into much of Europe, and all over Asia almost where are any Christians: look into Armenia, Palestine, Egypt, Ethiopia, and many other Countries, and you shall find that you are but a smaller part of the Church. If you will not believe what I have before proved of this, hear what your own say. Anton. Marinarins in the Council of Trent complaineth [that the Church is shut up in the Corners of Europe, and yet Domestick enemies arise, that waste this portion shut up in

lib. 2. Tract. 5. c. 3.) saith [I pray you what room hath the Catholick Church now in the hab table world? scarce three elnes long in comparison of that vastness which the Satanical Church do:h

If yet you boalt that you have the same seat that formerly you had; I answer fo have the Bishops of Constantinople, Alexandria. and others whom you condemn: And we say as Gregory Nazianz. Orat. de land. Athanasii [It is a succession of Godlines that is properly to be esteemed a succession: For he that professeth the Came destrine of faith, is also partaker of the same throne; But he that embraceth the contrary belief, ought to be judged an adver-(ary though he be in the throne. This indeed hath the name of [nccession; but the other hath the Thing it self, and the Truth | And he next addeth such words as utterly break your succession in pieces : saying [For he that breaketh in by force (as abundance of Popes did.) is not to be esteemed a successor; but rather he that Suffereib force: nor be that breaketh the Lams: but be that is chofen in manner agreeable to the Laws: nor he that holdeth contrary tenets; but he that is endued with the same faith: Unless any man will call him a 'uccessor, as we say a sickness succeedeth health; or darkness succeedeth light, and a storm succeeds a calm, (or madness or distraction) [ucceedeth prudence] Thus Nazianz. pag. 3.77.

We conclude therefore with one of your own (Lyra Glos. in Math. 16.) [Becamse many Princes and chief Priests (or Popes) and other inferiors, have been found to Apostatize, the Church consistent in those persons in whom is the true knowledge and consession of Faith and Verity] And so much to this empty

CHAP. XXXVI.

Detect. 27. A Nother of their Deceits is this: To charge uswith introducing New Articles of faith or points of Religion, because we contradict the New Articles which they introduce; and then they require us to prove our doctrines which are but the Negatives of theirs.

We receive no Doctrines of faith or worship but what was delivered delivered by the Apostles to the Church: These men bring in abundance of New ones, and fay without proof, that they received them from the Apostles. And because we refuse to receive their Novelties, they call our Rejections of them [the Detrines of our Religion; | and reign us to be the Innovators. And by this device, it is in the Power of any Heretick to force the Church to take up such as these men call New points of faith. If a Papilt shall say, that besides the Lords Prayer Christ gave his Disciples another Form, or two, or three, or many; or that he gave them ren New Commandments not mentioned in the Bible, or that he oft descended after his Ascention and conversed with them, or that there are many more worlds of men befides this earth; or that Christ instituted twenty Sacraments. how should we deal with these men, but hy denying their sictions as finfull Novelty, and rejecting them as corrupt additions to the Faith? And were this any Novelty in us? And should they bid us prove in the express words of Scripture or antiquity, our Negative Propositions, [that Christ gave but one form of prayer, that he did not oft descend, that he gave no more Decalogues. Sacraments, &c. I Is it not a sufficient proof of any of these. that they are not written; and that no Tradition of them from the Aposses is proved; and that they that hold the Affirmative, and introduce the Novelty, must prove, and not we? Articles of faith are the same, and not increased, nor any new ones added: But the Papills come in with a new faith as large as all the Novelties in the Decretals and the Councils, and these innovations of theirs we reject Now our Rejections do not increase the Articles of our faith, no more then my beating a dog out of my house, or keeping out an enemy, or sweeping out the filth, doth enlarge my house, or increase my family They do not take all the Anathema and Rejections in, their own Councils, to be Canons or Articles of faith.

For example, The Pope hath made it an Article of faith, that no Scripture is to be interpreted but according to the unanimous confent of the Fathers. This were ject, and make it no Article of our faith, but an erroneous Novelty. Do we hereby make a new Article? because we reject a new one of theirs, (yea a part of the Oath of their Church made by Pope Piass after the Council of Trent) I. If this be an Article, prove it if you can. 2. If it be a Truth, and no Novelty, I pray you tell us which be Fathers, and which not? and help us to know certainly when we have all, or the unanimous Consent. then tell us whether every man is not for fworn with you that inrespects any text of Scripture before he have read all the Fathers. or any text which fix of them never expounded; or any text which they do not unanimously agree on? And yet (though it be not our necessary task) we can easily prove to you, that this is a New Article of your deviling. 1. Because else no man must expound any Scripture at all before these Fathers were born. For how could the Church before them have their unanimous consent? And 2. Because that otherwise these Fathers themselves wanted an Article of faith, unless it was an Article to them. that they must expound no Scripture but by their own Confent. 3. Because these Fathers do few of them expound all, or half or the twentieth part of the Scripture. 4. Because they took liberty to disagree among themselves, and therefore do not unanimously consent in abundance of particular texts. 5. Because they tell us that they are fallible, and bid us not take it on their truft. 6. Because the Apostles have left us no such rule or precept, but much to the contrary. 7. Your own Doctors (for all their Oath) do commonly charge the Fathers with error and misexpounding Scripture, as I shewed before, Canno and many others charge Cajetan (a Cardinal and pillar in your Church) with making it his practife to differ from the Fathers, and choosing expositions purposely for the Novelty; pro more suo, as his custom: And when he hath highly extolled Cajetan: (Loc. Theol. lib. 7. pag. 223.) he adds, that Tyet his doffrine was defiled with a Leprosie of errors, by an affection and lust of Curioficy, or confidence on his wit, expounding Scripture as he lift, happily indeed for the most part, but in some few places more acutely then happily, because he regarded not antient Tradition, and was not verst in the reading of the Fathers, and would not learn from them the Mysteries of the sealed book | And in another place he blames him, that he alway followed the Hebrew and Greek text: And many other Papilts by him and others are blamed for the same faults: Andradius, and more of the later plead for it. And yet these men are counted members of your Church, that go against an Article of your new faith and Oath.

So

So Transubstantiation is one of your New Articles in that Oath. Do we make a New one now if we reject it? Or need we be put to prove the Negative? And yet we can easily do it: And Edm. Albertinus (among many others) hath done it

Another of your Articles is, that [it belongeth to your Holy Mother the Church to judge of the true sence of Scripture] And you mean the Roman Church; and that they must judge of it for all the Christian world. Prove this to be the Antient doctrine if you can. If we reject this Novelty, are we Innovators? or need we prove the Negative? And yet we can do it, and have oft done it at large. Did Athanasius, Basil, Nazianzen, Nyssen, Augustine, Hierom, Chrysostome, Epiphanius, and the rest of the Fathers, send to Rome for the sence of the Scriptures which they expound, or did they procure the Popes Approbation before any of them published their Commentaries? You know sure that they did not.

The like may be said of all the rest of your New Articles, and Practises: We stand our ground. Some of your Novelties we reject as tristes, some as smaller errors, and some as greater: but still we keep to our antient saith, of which the Scripture is a still and sufficient Rule (as Vincentius Lirinens, ubi supra) though we are glad of all helps to understand it, we say with Tertullian de carne Christi, cap. 6. Nihil de eo constat, quia Scriptura non exhibet. — Non probant, quia non Scriptum est — His qui

CHAP. XXXVII.

Detect. 28. A Nother of their Deceits is this: They make advantage of our charitable Judgement of them, and of their uncharitable judgement of us and all other Christians, to affright and entice people to their sect. They say that we cannor be saved, nor any that are not of the Roman Church: But we say that a Papist may be saved: They say that we want abundance of the Articles of faith that are of necessity to salvation: We say that the Papists hold all that is necessary to salvation: Luter saith that the Kernel of true faith is yet in the Church of Rome; therefore say they, Let Protestants take the shell. And hence they make the simple people believe, that even according to our own Confessions, their Church and way is safer then ours.

I have answered this formerly in my [Safe Religion,] but yet shall here once more shew you the nakedness of this De-

1. The Papilts denying the faith and salvation of all other Christians, doth no whit invalidate our faith, nor shake our salvation. Our Religion doth not cease to be true, when ever a peevish adversary will deny it, or accuse it. Men are in never the more danger of damnation, because a Papilt or any other partial Sectary will tell them that they shall be damned. We believe not that the Pope hath so far the Power of the Keves of Heaven, as that he can keep out whom he please. We have a promise of salvation from Christ, and then we can bear the threatning of a Pope. When Bellarmine judgeth Pope Sixtus damned himself, its strange that he should have a power before to dispose of Heaven for others, and shut out whom he pleased. that must be shut out himself. The Novatians, Donatists, Anabaptists, or any such Sect, that held the substance of the Christian faith, might have pleaded this Argument as well as the Papifts : for they also have the courage to pass the sentence of damnation upon others, if that will ferve turn: and we have the Charity to say, that some of them may be saved.

2. If by the Papists own confession, Charity be the life of all the graces or holy qualities of the soul, and that which above all others proveth a man to be Justified, and in a state of salvation, then judge by this Argument of their own, whether our charitableness, or their uncharitableness be the better sign: and whether it be safer to joyn with the charitable or the uncharitable? yea with them that are so notoriously uncharitable, as to condemn the far greatest part of the Church of Christ, meerly

3. When we say that a Papist may be saved, it is with all these limitations. 1. We say that a Papist as a Christian may be saved, but not as a Papist. As a man that hath the Plague may Live; but not by the Plague. 2. We say that Popery is a great enemy and hinderance to mens salvation; and therefore that those among them that are faved, must be saved from Popery, and not by it. 3. We say, that therefore salvation is a rarer thing among the Papilts, then among the Reformed Catholicks: where it is most difficult, it is like to be most rare: many more of the Orthodox are like to be faved then of the Papifts. 4. And we fay, that where Popery prevaileth against Christianity, and so much mastereth the heart and life, that the Christian doctrine is not Practically received, there is no falvation to be had for such without Conversion. Thus is it that we say a Papist may be saved. And for my part, I will not be the more uncharitable to them, for fear of giving them advantage. I know Hunnius hath written a Book to prove them no Christians, and Perkins hath written another to prove, that a Pap it cannot go beyond a Reprobate: and I must needs say so too, of all those in whom Popery is predominant practically, and overcometh Christianity. But yet I doubt not, but God hath thousands among them that shall be faved: partly of the common people that are forced to forbear contradicting the Priests; and that understand not, or receive not all the mysteries of their deceit; and partly among the Fryars and Jesuites, where some of them take in the venom but speculatively; or not predominantly and practically give themselves to Mortification and an holy Life: though I have known none fuch, yet when I read the writings of Gerson, Kempis, Thaulerus, Ferus, Barbanson, Benedictus Anglus, the Life of Mounsteur de Renty, and such others (though I see in some much of error, and meer affectation, yet) I am easily perswaded to believe, that they had the spirit of God, and that there are many more such among them. But I should be forry if Holiness were not much more common among us, and freer from the mixtures of error and affectation.

4. And for our laying that they have the Kernel, and so much as is neciffary to falvation, it is true; but it is the same Kernel that we hold: and we have it undefiled and unpoyfoned, and the Papists mix it with the venom of their Errors. He that bath all things in his meat and drink that I have in mine, may yet make it worse then mine, if he will put dung or poyson in it. When you have all things necessary in a precious Antidote or other Medicine, you may foon marrall, by putting in more then all,

The plain truth is, the Papilts and Reformed Catholicks are both Christians, and Christianity is enough to save them that mar it not, but keep it practically and predominantly : even as a man that takes poylon, and he that taketh none, are both of their men: and he that takes the poylon may be faid to have all the same parts and members as the other, and yet not be so likely to live, as he that lets it alone: And I cannot fay but many that take it may recover: and if you ask me Which be they? I say, All those that timely cast it up again, or else whose strength of Nature prevaileth against it, and keepeth it from mastering the Heart or vital Powers, shall be recovered and live : but those in whom the poylon prevaileth and is predominant, shall die. So all those Papills that so receive the Errors of Popery, as either to cast them up again; or that they are not predominant to the subduing of the power of Christian Faith and Holiness, (by keeping them from being fincere, and practical, and predominant) these shall be saved, but not the rest.

Now if upon these grounds, any man shall think that Popery is the safer way, because we say, that they have all that is necessary to salvation (objectively in their Creed) and that a Papist may be saved; upon the same terms that man may be perswaded that it is safest taking poyson, because that he hath all the parts of a man that takes it, and possibly nature may prevail, and he may live. But yet I shall choose to let it alone.

5. The same Papists that say, that a Protestant cannot be saved, do yet maintain that an Infidel may be faved, or one that believeth not the very Articles of the Christian faith. You will think this strange. But I will a little infist on the proof of it, to these uses. 1. That you may see, that their censures proceed from meer design or partiality. 2. That you may see, that they make believing in the Pope to be more necessary then believing in Christ, or in the Holy Ghost. 3. That you may see, how holy their Church is that admitteth of Infidels. 4. That you may see, on how fair grounds they deny, that we may be one Catholick Church with the Fathers, Greeks, Egyptians, Abaffines, Armenians, Waldensis, &c. because of some differences; when yet they themselves can be one Church with Infidels, or fuch as deny the Articles of the Creed, or at least believe them not. 5. And that you may fee, how well their Religion hangs together. together, and also how well they are agreed among themselves, even about the effentials of Christianity it self, whether they be of Necessity to salvation or not.

I before cited the words of Albertinus the Jesuite. I shall now give you many more, and more fully, which Franf. à Sansta Clara hath gathered to my hands in his Dens, Natura, Gratia,

And I. pag. IIO. he tells us himself that [the Dollors commonly teach, that a just and probable ignorance ought to excuse: and that it is probable, when one hath a probable foundation (or ground) as a Country-man, when he believes that a thing is lawfull, drawn by the Testimony of his Parish Priest or Parents: or when a man seeing reasons that are probable on both sides, doth choose those which seem to him the more probable, which yet indeed are against the truth, to which he is otherwise well affected: in this case he erreth without fault, though he err against the truth, and To labour of the contrary ignorance \ [Hither is it to be reduced, when the Articles of Faith are not propounded in a due manner, as by frivolous reasons, or by impious men: for then to believe, were an act of imprudence, saith Aquin. 2.2. q. 1. ar. 4.

So that if the truth of Scripture be so propounded as to feem most improbable, it is no sin to disbelieve it : and if such are excused, as by a Parent or Parish Priest are seduced, and that have not a due proposal of the Truth, then it must follow, that the Heathens and Infidels are innocent, that never had Christ proposed any way to them, and by their Parents have been taught Mahometanism, or Paganism. But what if I can prove, that even the want of a due proposal is a punishment for their fin? and that they ought themselves to seek after the truth? and that it is long of their own fins that necessary

Implicate belief of Christ is sufficient to salvation.

And pag. 115. he faith that this is the way to the end debates of them that think the Article of the Trinity, of Christ, of the incarnation, &c. are necessary to salvation, though not to fustification: and answering them, he saith that [such are not formally without the Church.] You see then formally Insidels are in their Church and may be saved, in his opinion.

And pag. 116. after a blow at Vellosillus he citeth also Victoria Relect. 4 de Indis. & Richard. de Med. Villa, 3. 25. art. 3. gn. 1. and others for this opinion: And tells you what his implicite faith is [to believe as the Church believeth.]

And page 118. he answereth from Scotus the Question, whether such persons may hold the contrary error to the truth that they are ignorant of: and sath, No, (out of Scotus:) while it is preached but in some one place, till he know it to be believed as a truth by the Church, and then he must firmly adhere to it. Which the charitable Fryar spplieth to England as excusable for not believing some of their Articles. And he citeth Petigianis saying, Is a simple old moman shall hear a salse opinion from a salse Prophet, (as that the substance of the breadremains with Christs body in the Eucharist) and believe it: doth she sin because of this? No: This were too hard and cruell to affirm.

Pag. 119.he citeth Angles, and agreeth with him, I that such as have no knowledge of these things to stir them up, are not bound so much as to seek information.

And pag. 120. he cites Vega lib. 6. cap. 18. saying that as [Ignorance pure negationis about many Articles of faith, may be without fault: so there is the same reason of Ignorance ptavæ dispositionis.] Which he maintains against Gerson and Hugo. And S. Clara adds of his own [To speak my sense freely, I think that the common people committing themselves to the instru-

Etion of the Pastors, trusting their knowledge and goodness, if they be deceived, it shall be accounted Invincible Ignorance, or probable at least: So Herera: which excuseth from fault. Yea some Doctors give so much to the Instruction of Doctors, on whom the care of the flock lyeth, that if they teach hic & nunc that God would be hated, that a rude Parishoner is bound to believe them.

And so page 121. concludeth that he hopeth many of us are saved.

6. and Corduba again.

And pag. 123. [aith It seemeth to be the common Opinion of the Schools and Dostors at this day, that the Laity erring with their Teachers or Pastors, are altogether excused from all fault: year by erring thus many wases materially, they merit, for the ast of Christian Obedience, which they owe their teachers, as Valentia saith, Tom. 3. disp. 1. q. 2. pag. 5. and others, with Angles, Vasquez, &c.

Pag. 124, 125. After Cajetan, he cites Zanchez, teaching that those that are brought up among Hereticks are not bound presently to believe, and yet are not to be accounted Hereticks, till they resuse Belief sufficiently propounded to them —] And he cites Alph. à Castro, and Simanchas, Aragon, and Tannerus, and Faher for the lame.

And pag. 126. he cites Eman: Sa; affirming that even among Catholicks many are excused from the explicite knowledge of the Trinity and Incarnation, specially if there want a Teacher: Forwhat (saith he) shall we say that an infinite number of Christians, otherwise good people, perish, that scarce know any thing arighs of the Mysterie of the Trinity and Incarnation; Yea judge perversity (or falsty) of them, if you ask them? And cites Rozella and Médina of the same mind. Lastly gives also the judgement of Gr. Valentia sully, for his opinion, Analys. sid. lib. 2. cap. 3. lit. D.

In the fixteenth Probleme page 127 he puts another Question, Whether the Law of Nature and Decalogue may be unknown without fault? And saith that though Alex. Ales say, No, yet [It is the more common and received Opinion, (citing Adrian, Corduba, Herera, & alios communiter), that there may be such invincible.

And note for the understanding of all this, that this which they call an Implicite faith in Christ, is no actual faith in Christ at all. He that only believes as the Church believes, and knows not that the Church believes in Christ, in the Resurrection of Christ, &c. hath no actual belief in Christ or the Resurrection at all. Ignotis nulla sides: If I believe that one of you is true of his word, it doth not follow that I actually believe the particular propositions which I never heard. This which they call an implicite Belief, is nothing but the explicite actual belief of the Formal Object of Faith, Divine or Humane, as that God is True, or the Church True and infallible; but it is no belief at all of the particular material object.

And note that every one in the world that believeth that there is a God, must needs believe that he is no Lyar; and so hath in God an Implicite belief. Now if this will save men, without a particular belief in Christ, then Christianity is not necessary: Every Turk, and Jew, and Insidel that believethin God, may then be said to have an Implicite saith in Christ, in the Popistalanguage; because he believeth all that God revealeth to be true; But if an Implicite saith in God will not serve, how should an implicite saith in the Church serve; unless the Church, that is the Pope, be better then God.

See here, whether they make any more of the Christian saith then a meer shooing horn, to draw and keep men to their side. By a General Council and the Pope it is determined that no mancan be saved out of their Church; as headed by the Pope: Tobelieve in the Pope is of Necessity to Salvation; but to believe in Christ, in his Incarnation, Death, Resurrection, is not so. An Implicite saith in the Pope or Church, year or erring Doctors may save, and men may merit by following them in error; but an Implicite saith in God himself will not save, if we believe not in the Pope. So that if we were Insidels we might be saved, so we were of the Church of Rome, and believed in the Pope: but the Holiest Christian that believeth explicitely in God, and all the Articles of the saith, cannot be saved, if he believe not in the Pope. Do you think they believe these Doctrines themselves? or rather frame them to the building of their Kingdom?

M m' 3,

And.

And what a wonder is it that Learned Doctors fee not their own contradiction ? they suppose a man to believe in the Pope, or as the Church believeth, and yet not to believe in Christ! And is not the Church essentially a company of Christians; the spouse, and body, and school, and Kingdom of Christ? And is not the Pope essentially the pretended Vicar of Christ? How then can they believe in Christs Vicar, or Christs School, or Kingdom, or followers, before they believe in Christ himself?

And by all this you may perceive the Holiness of the Roman Church, and the nature of that Discipline or Church Government that all the world must needs submit to, or be damned. Even such as takes in Insidels and all, and layeth the Church as common to the world, for as many as will but believe in the Pope and Clergy.

You see here also another mysterie opened: that a man may have enough to Justifie him, that yet will not save him: For most of them are here said to hold that a man may be justified without an explicite saith in Christ, or that the knowledge of Christ is not necessary to his Justification, but to his salvation it is (Though the other half say, that its necessary to neither) And if a man die in a Justified State, must be condemned? when Paul saith, Rom. 8. 30. Whom he justified, them he also glorified.

You see also here what their Baptism doth, that can ex opere operato infallibly put away the sins of all these Insidels, and so the Eucharist, &c. And yet they must not be saved for all that their sins are all done away. O what a Maze is the Romish Divinity! And you see how well they are agreed about these sundamentals, when half of them think that an Astual belief in Christ is necessary to salvation, and not to instituction; and others that its necessary to both: and a great part that its necessary to neither. And you see here the benefit of having an Infallible Living judge of controversies, and expounder of Scriptures: and how admirably he hath ended all their differences.

And again I say, If formally these Unbelievers are in their Catholick Church, they shall give us leave to say that the Greeks and other Eastern and Southern Christians are in the same Ca-

tholick Church as we are, when we differ not so much.

And when they have made the Non-belief of Articles of the faith confident with falvation, they will never while they breath be able to confute him that on the same grounds affirmeth the contrary belief confident with salvation, in case of the same want of teaching and sufficient means.

And by this time I hope you see of how small moment the Popish Censures are, when they judge that a Protestant cannot be fared.

Its true that S. Clara here judgeth otherwise: but 1. Its said his Book was burnt or condemned at Rome for it. 2. He alloweth Infidels as much. 3. And he proveth himself a Heretick by it at Rome; seeing a General Council and Pope have determined the contrary, even that it is necessary to salvation to be a subject of the Pope of Rome.

CHAP. XXXVIII ..

A Nother of their Deceits, and I think the mon fuccessfull of all the rest is, Their suting their Destrines, and Government and Wor (hip to the fleshly humours of the ungodly: by which means the Greatest and the Most are alwayes like to be on their side: When on the contrary our Doctrine, Discipline and worship is all so contrary to carnal interest and conceits, that we are still like to lose the most, if not the greatest, and consequently to be a persecuted people in the world. This is their unanswerable Argument: By this means they captivate the Nations to their Tyranny. The Most are every where almost licentious, sensual, worldly and unfan diffied: Wise men and Godly men are few in comparison of the rest of the world: And it is the multifude commonly that hath the strength, and the Great ones that have the wealth. So that I confess I take it for a wonder of mercy, that they are not Lords in every Countrey, and that the Reformed Catholicks be not used every where as they be in Spain and Italy. For where they have but opportunity to shew themselves, the Principles and Practises of the Papists are such, as will be most likely to win the Rabble rout to them, and make them Masters of the multitude, and of all except a few believing Heavenly persons: (For the flock is little that must have the Kingdom.) And then, when they have got the multitude thus to follow them, and club'd the rest into prisons, or burned them in the flames, they reckon of this as one of the surest Evidences that they are the Catholick Church, because for sooth they are the greater number (in the Countries where they have advantage,) and it is but a few whom they were able to persecute or burn as Hereicks that were against them. The very

The Reasons why they have not by this Policie won the Chri-Rian world to their side, are (under God, the great Defender of the innocent) these four : 1. Because in the Eastern and Southern Churches they have not had opportunity to lay their fnares, as they have had here in the West: And also those Churches have too many corruptions and neglects at home for the gratifying of the worfer fort. 2. Because God hath been pleafed in some places so to bless the endeavours of the smaller part, as to enable them against the multitude to preserve some liberty. 3. Because God hath sometime given Wise and Godly Princes to the people, that will not be cheated with the Popular deceits. 4. And principally because that the Papal Tyranny is directly contrary to Princes Rights, so that its only those that are blinded by ignorance, or strengthened by an extraordinary league with Rome, or forced by the multitude of Popish subjects and neighbours, that put their necks into the Romish yoke. what by the Popes pretended Power in temporals, at least in ordime ad spiritualia, and what by his excommunicating Princes, and his pretended power to depose them and give their kingdoms to another, and to absolve their subjects from their oaths and fidelity, (which is an Article of their faith, agreed on by the Pope and General Council, Later. [ub. Innoc. 3. cap. 3.) and what by his exempting the Clergy from their Princes Power, and what by the pilling their Countries for money, and what by their doctrine and practifes of murdering Princes that are not of their mind, by these and many other Evidences, they have awakened many of the Princes of the earth to look about them. and consequently to befriend the Truth against these Tyrannous. Usurpers.

Usurpers. Had it not been for these helps under God, we had not been like to have a name where they can reach, nor to have had liberty to breath in the common air.

It would be a voluminous work to shew you how all the Doctrines, Government, and worship of the Papists is suted to the humor of the sensual multitude, and fitted to take with ungodly men. I shall but instance in twenty particulars (which are far from all.)

r. The Reformed Catholicks hold, that none should be taken into the Church by Baptism, unless themselves, or their Parents, if they be Infants, do make Profession of the Christian faith, and of an holy life, for the time to come, and seem to understand what they say and do, and be serious in it; which exasperate the grossy ignorant and ungodly, when we deny them this Priviledge of Believers. But the Papists admit of the ignorant, ungodly, and such as believe not explicitely in Christ, as you heard even now; and so please the people, and fill their Church.

2. The Orthodox hold, that Baptism giveth Remission of sin to none but true believers and their seed. The Papists per-swade many millions more, that all their sins are not only par-doned, but actually abolished ex opere operato, in their Baptism, which is comfortable News to such ungodly souls.

3. The Protestants say, that Original sin liveth after Baptism in some degree; though it reign not, or condemn not those that are true believers; and that Concupiscence, that is, all inordinacy of the sensual appetite, or inordinate inclination to sensual objects is a sin. The Papists tell them that when once they are baptized, there is no such thing in them as Original sin, and that Concupiscence is no sin at all.

4. The Orthodox hold, that none are to be admitted to the Eucharist and Communion of the Church therein, but those that believe actually (or profess so to do) the Articles of the faith, and understand the nature of the Sacrament, and live according to the Laws of Christ. But the Papists give it to all, and drive men to the Sacrament; so that Albasspinzus before cited, saith, he knows not whether ever any one was kept away in his age.

5. The Protestants hold, that men are not to be let alone in frandalous fin, but admonished privately, and then openly before the Church, and if yet they Repent not, and Reform not, to be cast out; and not to be absolved or re-admitted, without a Publick Confession and Penitence answerable to the sin: And this wicked people hate at the very heart, and will not endure. But the Papists have got a device to please them by Auricular secret Confession to a Priest, where if he will but confess and sin, and sin and confess again, he may have a pardon of course without any open shame or true Reformation. If we durst but imitate the Papists in this one particular, we should do much to please the people that are now exasperated for I find, that almost any of them will confess in secret that they have sinned, that will not endure the open shame.

6. The Protestants hold, that every sin deserveth death. and that every breach of the Law is fuch a fin; (though God will not inflict the Punishment on them that have a pardon) But the Papists tell us of a multitude of fins that are but venial. that is, fins that deferve pardon, and yet deserve not Hell, and are indeed no fins, but analogically so called. And they make those to be such venial sins, which Protestants account abominably gros; as some lying, some swearing in common talk, some drunkennels, some fornication, and the like, are with them but venial fins, which are properly no fins (And yet here also they are by the ears among themselves, some saying that venial sins are properly fins, and most denying it) Yea all fins that are not deliberated on, are with them but venial fins. So that if they will but sufficiently brutisie themselves by suspending the exercife of reason, and will swear, curse, murder, without deliberasion, they are then free from fin and danger. And how easie and pleasing is this to the ungodly ? Those are but Evangelical Connfails with the Papists, that are the Precepts or Laws of Christ to the Protestants.

7. The Protestants teach men, that it is their duty to seek the understanding of the holy Scripture, and to meditate in it day and night: but the Papists do forbid the Common people to read it in a language which they understand, and save them all that labour that Protestants put them on: Nothing can win the people more then cherishing them thus in sloth and ignorance.

8. The Protestants say, that a man-cannot be justified or sayed without an actual faith in Christ (or being the Infant of a believer Dedicated to Christ) and that this saith must extend to all things that are Essential to Christianity. But what the Papists say of the Justification and Salvation of Insidels, if they believe in the Pope, you heard in their own words in the last Detection. A comfortable doctrine to the unbelieving world, to whom God hath spoken no such Comfort.

We confess that those that never had the Gospel, are under the Law of nature or works, and that the penalty of this is such as God can in some cases dispense with (or else we could not be faved by Christ) and so that all Pagans are not under the Peremprory undispensable threatning of the Gospel against final Privative unbelievers: But yet, though God may pardon some of these, he bath made them no promise that he will; and therefore they can have no positive hope grounded on a promise; nor can any man say, that Gedwill save any of them, or that he will not : it being certain that they are under the condemnation of the Law, which God can dispense with, in wayes of security to his Tustice and Ends, but uncertain whether he will or not; and therefore is to be left among his unrevealed things. The true believer is under a certain promise of salvation. The unbeliever that hath had the Gospel, or might have had it and would not, is under the Gospel sentence of damnation, which is certain and irreversible, if he die in that Condition. The negative unbeliever that never had or could have the Gofpel, is under the Condemning sentence of the Law (of works or nature,) that is, bis fin Deserveth eternal death; but this sentence is not peremptory and indispensable; but yet it is such as God will not dispense with rashly, but on terms that may secure his Ends and Justice. This is the true mean between extreams in this weighty point.

9. The Protestants say, that all our best works are impersed, and the sin that adhereth to them deserves Gods wrath, according to the Law of works, though he pardon it by the Law of Grace: and that when we have done all, we are unprofitable servants, and properly Merit nothing of God for the worth of our works, or in Commutative Justice. But the Papists take those very works to Merit heaven, ex Condigno, and (for here they are by the ears again) say some of them, by the Proportion of the work, and in Commutative Justice, which the Protestants say, deserve damnation for their sinful impersections, and therefore need a pardon through the blood of Christ. Yea they take these works to be persect, and the man to be persect, and say, that by such works as these, they may Merit for others as well as for themselves. And how easie and pleasing is this to proud corrupted Nature?

10. The Protestants think, that no Faith Justifieth, but that which is accompanyed with unseigned Love and Resolution for Obedience. But the Papists make a Faith that's separated from Charity, and joyned with Attrition, to be sufficient for admission to the Sacrament, which shall be instead of Love or Contri-tion, and so shall put away all sin.

worshipped in Spirit and truth, do teach people a spirit, and will be worshipped in Spirit and truth, do teach people a spiritual way of worship, which Carnal men are undisposed to, and unacquainted with. But the Papists do accommodate them by a multitude of Ceremonies, Images, and a Pompous histrionical kind of worship, which is easie and pleasant to sless and blood. To have an Image before them, and Copes, and Ornaments, and abundance of formalities, and to drop so many Beads, and be saved for saying over so many Ave Maries, or such like words; what an easie kind of Religion is this, and how agreeable to shesh and blood? How much easier is it to say over their offices, then to Love God above all, and desire after Communion with him in the spirit, and to delight in him, and to pray in Faith, and heavenly servour?

12. Protestants tell men of Hell-fire, as the remediless punishment of those sins, which Papists say deserve but a Purgatory; and they have hopes of coming out of Purgatory; but there's none of coming out of Hell.

13. Protestants tell them of no hope of ease or pardon of sin after this life, if it be not pardoned here. But Papists tell them, that when they are in Purgatory, the Pope hath power to pardon them, and the saying of so many Masses for their souls, may ease them, or rid them out; and the Merits of other solks may deliver them.

14. Protestants tell them, that they must be holy for themselves: but Papists tell them, that they may hire another man to fay their prayers for them, which may ferve turn.

15. The Protestants do ingenuously confess, that they have no way to end all Controversies in this life, but that we have a fufficient way so far to decide them as is necessary to the peace of the foul, of the Church, and of the Commonwealth; but no way for a final absolute Decision, till the day of Judgement, The Pastors of the Church are to be Judges, so far as they are to execute: And the Magistrates are to be Judges so far as they must execute: And every Christian hath a judgement of Discerning so far as he is to execute. But the absolute final judgement is reserved to the last day; when God will fully end our controversies. But this satisfyeth not men that would have all in hand, and the sentence past before the Assizes: And therefore the Papists better fit their humour, and tell them (and they do but tell then) of an End of all their controversies at hand : of an easie cheap remedy by believing the Infallible Pope and Council; and so putting an end to all divisions and doubts

16. The Protestants would have none but seeming Professing Saints in their Churches. But the Papists Canonize a Saint as a wonder; and thut them up in Monasteries, and call a few [Religious] that are separated from other Christians, as Christians formerly were from the world: which brings the people to think that Holiness and Religion is not necessary to all but to a few Devotaries that will be better then they are commanded to be.

17. The Protestants bind men to keep their vows, and sidelity to their Governors: But the Papists tell them that the Pope hath Power to free them from their sidelity, and dispense with their oaths.

18. The Papilts teach men to fast: by eating the pleasantest meats: but the Protestants use a total abstinence while they fast,

19. The main business and administration of Protestant Paritors, is against that shell that is predominant in the unregenerate, and therefore must needs be distasteful to the multitude of the ungodly. Our preaching is to open mens sin and misery, and cause them to perceive their lost condition, and so to reveal to them a crucified Christ, and then to set them on the holy self-denying heavenly life that Christ hath prescribed them. And to speak terrour to the rebellious, and to cast the obstinate out of our communion, and to comfort none as the heirs of heaven. either in life or at death, but only the truly sanctified and renewed fouls. But for the Papilts, their Preaching in most places is but seidome: but they have a Mass in Latine: And as the old saving is, [The Mass doth not bire.] It galleth not a guilty confcience to fee a Mass, and here a many of Prayers which be understandeth not: And when they do preach, when they should they wicked men their misery, they flatter and deceive them too often by their false doctrine : They cannot humble them in the sense of their Original sin and Misery, for that they tell them was quite extinct and done away in Baptilm: And for their following fins. Absolution upon their customary confessions hath done away all the guilt at least: fo that here is no Misery for the Miserable souls to see: but like a Constables presentment at a Sessions, an Omnia bene: Unless perhaps some gross actual fin be apparent among them: and then they shall have an Oration against it, to drive them to auricular confession, and to receive the Body of Christ, and be Absolved. And so do they by Ceremonies and Sacraments ex opere operato quiet the Consciences of unsanctified men, and humour them in all their rites and customs, and at last curn them to Heaven or Purgatory with an Absolution, and Extream Unction. And how pleasing a Religion this is to the ungodly people, those Ministers can tell, that see the rage of such, against those that deny them even better Forms and Ceremonies when they desire them: to pacifie their Consciences instead of real Holiness and Obedience.

20. Lastly, how the Jesuites have fitted their whole frame of Moral doctrine and Case Divinity to humour the unconscionable. Mentaltus the fansenist will fully shew you through the whole (fore-cited) Mysterie of fessisism. Those that would escape any worldly trouble or danger, the Jesuites have a help at hand for, even their doctrine of Equivocation, and Mentall reservation (which makes the Popes Dispensation with oaths and promises needless.) What accommodations they have for him that hath a mind to Murder his adversary, to calumniate another, to take Use without Usury, to forbear restoring ill-gotten goods, to commit fornication, to rob another, and many the like, you may see in their own words cited in the said Book.

Yea what comfort they have for a man that loveth not God, so he will not hate him. Trust not my report, but read the Book;

So that we see the advantage that the Papists have to sweep away the vicious ignorant multitude, and then to boast that they are the Catholicks, and we but Schismaticks, because they are the greater part: and then they are armed also by the Multitude, to oppress us by their violence.

Now what remedy to use against this Fraud, I cannot tell, but only to deal plainly and faithfully, though it do displease, and to administer Gods Ordinances as he prescribeth, though never so distastefull to sleshand blood; and so to commit our selves to God, and trust him with his Church and cause, who is able to preserve it, and is most engaged to appear for us, when we lay all upon him, and have none to trust but himself alone. Let us not hearken in this case to flesh and blood that would advise us to remit the reins of Discipline, and to bend our Administrations to some pleasing complyance with carnal minds. We disengage God when thus we begin to shift for our selves out of his way. But withall we must acquaint those Princes that are faithfull to Christ, how much it is their duty in this case to asfift us; not by any cruelty to the Papifts (that I desire not) but only by quieting the ungodly pare of our People in a state of Catechumens, or expectants, or a Learning condition fitted to their state; and to restrain such in the mean time as would take advantage of their discontents, to seduce them by pleasing licentions docrines to their undoing.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Detect. 30. A Nother of their frauds is, by culling out all the barsh, unhansome passages, or mistakes that they meet with in any Protestant Writers, and charging all these upon the Protestant Religion, as if they were so many Articles of our Faith: or at least were the common doctrines of our Charches.

They will not give us leave to do so by them, when yet we have much more reason for it. For 1. They teach the People that they are bound to believe as their Teachers bid them: and they

reproach us for confessing that we are not in all points of Do-Arine infallible: And yet we still confess this fallibility, and say in plain terms, that we know but in part. 2. Divers of their particular Doctors that we use to cite, are such as the Pope hath Canonized for Saints: and they tell us that in Canonizing he is infallible: And therefore an Infallibly Canonized Saint must not be supposed to err in a point of faith. 3. They boast so much of Unity and Concent among themselves, that we may the better cite particular Doctors. And yet we think our selves bound to stand to their own Law in this, and to charge nothing on them as the faith of their Church but what their Church doth own: and therefore while they result to stand to particular Docstors, we will not urge them to it for its good reason that all men should be the Professors of their own belief.

But what reason is there then that we may not have the same measure from them which they expect? We profess to take no man, nor Council of men, for the Lords of our faith, but for the Helpers of our faith. They tell us, that they know not where to find our Religion. We tell them it is entirely in the written word of God, and that we know no other Infallible Rule; because we know no other Divine Revelation (supposing what in Nature is revealed.) They tell us that, All He reticks do pretend to Scripture, and therefore this cannot be the Test of our Religion? I answer, that so all cavillers, and defrauders and extortioners, may pretend to the Law of the Land, to undo poor men by quirks of wit, or tire them with vexatious suits: And yet it follows not that we must feek another Rule of Right, and take the Law for insufficient: And what if Hereticks pretend to Tradition, to General Councils and the Decretals of the Popes (as you know how frequently they do) Will you yield therefore that these are an insufficient Rule, or Test of your own Religion? Open your eyes, and judge as you would be judged.

But I will come to some of the particular Opinions which they charge us with. And because I know not a more weighty renowned Champion of their cause then Cardinal Richlein (then Bishop of Lucion:) I shall take notice of his twelve great errors which he so vehemently chargeth on the Resormed Churches, as contrary to the Scripture. And sure I shall do much to make clean our Churches, if I fully wipe off all the pretended blots of errour, that so wife a man could charge upon them. In his Defens. contra script. 4. Ministr. Charenton. cap. 2. pag. 12. &c. he begins his enumeration thus.

1. [The Scripture saith, Jam. 2. that a man is not fisse if by Faith only; but you say, that he is Justified by Faith alone, and by Faith only, which is found in no place of Scripture: and do you not then resist the Scriptures?

Anim. I. We believe both the words of Paul and James, that a man is fustified by Faith without the Decds of the Law, and laved through Faith - not of works, left any man should boast. Rom. 3, 28. Ephel. 2.8, 9, and also that a man is fullified by works. and not by Faith only. Jam. 2 Did not this Learned man know that we believe all the Bible? why then should he charge us with denying that which we retain, and publickly read in our Churches as the word of God? Did he think that we fet fo much by Lathers, or any mans writings, as by the Bible? 2. But if he can prove that we understand not these words aright, he should have evinced it better then by the use of the words [Faith alone] For our Churches by [Faith alone] do profess openly to mean no more then Paul doth by [Faith without works | And can they find fault with Paul? 3. Indeed we are not all agreed upon the fittest Notion of theinterest of Faith and works in our Justification : but our difference is more in words and notions then matter, of which see my Diput. of Justification. 4. And why do you not quarrel with your own Cardinal Contarenus de Justif. and others of your own, that joyn with us in the doctrine of Jullification.

His second Accusation is, [The Scripture saith, that we can Love God with all the heart: you say, that no man can Love God with all the heart, which is no where read in Scripture: and yet

do you not resist the Scriptures ?]

Answ. 1. Unprofitable Confusion! we distinguish between Loving Godwith all the Heart, as it signifies the fincerity and predominant degree of Love, and so every true Christian bath it: and as it signifies some extraordinary degree above this meer sincerity; and so some eminent stronger Christians have it, and as it signifies the highest Degree, which is our duty, and which exclude thall finfal imperfection: And thus we say. that no man actually doth Love God persectly in this life: nor do we think he speaks like a Christian, that dare say, Lord I Love thee so much, that I will not be beholden to thee to forgive the impersection of my Love, or to help me against any sinful impersection of it. Your own Followers whom you admire as the highest Lovers of God, do ost lament the impersections of their Love (as M. de Renty, for instance, in his Life.) But now if the question be only of the posse, and not the act, we say, that the Potentia maturalis is in all: and the Potentia Moralis, which is the Habit, is in the sanctified: but this Moral Power is not perfect it self, that is, of the highest degree, and without any sinful impersection; though yet it hath the persection of sincerity, and in some, the persection of an eminent degree. And will not this content you?

His third Accusation is, [The Scripture saith, that the Eucharist is the Body and Blood of Christ, with the adjunction of those words that significatrue Body and Blood: you say that it is not Christs Body and Blood, but only a sigure, sign, and testimony,

Answ. 1. The Scripture saith not that it is his Body and Blood substantially, or by Transubstantiation: And we say not, as you fe gn, that it is not his Body and Blood, but a figure, &c. For we say, that it is his Body and Blood Sacramentally and Repre'entatively: as he that personateth a King on some just account, is called a King; and as in actions of Investicure and Delivery; the delivering of a Key is the delivering of the House, and the delivery of a twig and turf, is the delivery of the Land; and the deliverer may fay, Take, this is my House, this is my Land, which I deliver thee. If you be among many Images in a room, you will not blame him that faith, This is Peter, and this is Paul, and this is the Virgin Mary. 2. The Scripeure often calls it Bread after the Consecration; which you condemn us for: therefore we are taught to call it fo. 3. The Scripture saith, I Cor. 10. 4. [That Rock was Christ] and he saith, [I am the door, John 10.7. I am the true Vine, John 15. I. David saith, [I am a morm and no man, Psal. 22.6.] we believe all this. But must we be therefore reproached, if we fay, that David was a man; that the Rock was Christ typically; that that he was a Vine and Door Metaphorically only? And yet these are as plain as, This is my Body, and This is my Blood.

His fourth Acculation is, [The Scripture faith, that Baptism faveth us, and that we are cleansed and regenerate by the washing of water: On the contrary you say, that Baptism doth neither save us, nor regenerate us, but is only to us a symbol of salvation, ablution, and regeneration, which is no where said in Scripture.]

Answ. A childish contest about words! we say, that two things go to our full possession of our state of Regeneration. Iustification, and Cleanfing: One is our fundamental Right, which the Promise of the Gospel gives us upon our Heart consent or Covenant with God : the other is our Solemn Investiture : in regard of the former, we are Christians, and Regenerate, and lultified before Baptilm: In regard of the later, we are made Christians, regenerate, justified, saved by Baptism. This we commonly hold, and so never denyed what you faifly say we deny. As a man is made a King by his Coronation, that yet in a fort was one before; or as Marriage makes them Husband and Wife by publick solemnization, that were fundamentally so before by Private Covenant; or as possession is given by a Key, a twig and a turf (as I said) of that which a man had right to before; so are we solemnly invested with those benefits by baptism, which we had a fundamental Title to before. Do not your own writers confess this of a man that is Baptized many years after he had Faith and Charity? Do you think Cornelius and the rest that had the Holy Ghost besore Baptism, Al. 10. had not Justification before? Do you think that Constantine the great was unpardoned, unregenerate and no Christian till he was Baptized? Or rather would you make quarrels against your own Confessions?

His fifth Accusation is [Scripture saith, that Priests do forgive sin: on the contrary you say that they do not remit them, but only testific that they are remitted, which the Scriptures no where say.]

Answ. As if Testissication could not be a Remission. We say, that whose sins the Pastors of the Church remit, they are remitted. Do you not know that these very words were used to every Presbyter in our Ordination here in England? We say 1. That Pastors do as Gods Embassadors, proclaim his General Conditional Pardon unto all. 2. That they are Gods Ministers to make a particular Application, and delivery of pardon in Baptism, on supposition that the Baptized be qualified for pardon. 3. That they are as his Ministers, to make the same Application by Declaration and Delivery in the Absolution of the Penitent; on supposition that their penitence be sincere. 4. And as Church Governours, they may on good considerations sometimes remit some humbling disgraceful acts that were imposed on the penitent for the testification of his repentance, and the satisfaction of the Church. And are not these four concessions enough? Or are you minded to pick quarrels, that your selves and others may have sewel for the rancour and uncharitableness of your minds?

But indeed we do not think that any man can primarily as the chief Agent forgive fins; but God must be the first pardoner: Nor that any man can pardon the sins of the dead, and abate or shorten the pains of the soul in a fire called Purgatory.

Here we leave you.

And verily if the Pope have power to remit but the very temporal punishment, he is a cruel wretch that will not forgive men, even good men, the torments of the Gout, and the Stone, and an hundred diseases; nay that will not remit them to himfelf, no nor the pains of death, when he is so loath to die: (But I forgot that the Pope hath no body to forgive him, because none above him) He that connot remit the punishments which we see, and seel, how shall we believe him (without any Divine Testimony) that he can remit a penalty that he never saw nor fest, nor no manelse, that can be proved.

His fixth Accusation is [Scripture saith, If a Virgin marry she sineth not : but you say that the just sin in all works : which Scrip-

Answ. 1. Do you believe in your Conscience that the Scripture meaneth that a Virgin sinneth not at all in any circumstance or desect in the manner or Concomitants of her Marriage? Then I pray tell your Nans so, that if they marry they sin not. Tell Priests so, that if they marry they sin not. Your own reason can expect no other sense in the words, but that Marriage, as such, is no sin to the Virgin. And this we grant: But yet if you think that in this or in any other work, you see God as apprehensively, and believe as strongly, and restrain every wandring:

wandring thought as exactly, and Love God as much as you are bound to do by the very Law of Nature it felf; fo that you are perfectly blameless, and need not be beholden to the blood of Christ, to the Mercy of God, to the Spirit of Grace, either for the forgivenels of these failings; or the cure of them, you shew then a proud Pharisaical spirit, unacquainted with it self and with the Gospel. Do you go on and say, Lord I thank thee that I am not as other men: and I will rather say, Lord be mercifull to me a sinner: and which shall be rather justified, Christ hath told us. The streams cannot be perfectly sinless, till the fountain be so: and [Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin? Prov. 20. 9.] [For there is not a just man upon earth, that doth good, and sinneth not, Eccl. 7. 20. Christ telleth us that the fruit will be like the Tree. the actions like the heart: and therefore an imperfect Heart will have imperfed duties. If you dare say there is no remnant of fin in your hearts, you have so much of it that hindereth you from feeingit. Humility and felf-knowledge would foon end this controversie. We say not that all our works are sins, that is, either materially forbidden, or done in wickedness, and from vicious predominant habits; But that the same works which Materially are good, are tainted with our finfull imperfections, having not in them that measure of knowledge, faith, love, &c. as we ought to have; and therefore that we must beg pardon for our imperfections, and fly to the blood and merits of Christ, through whom God will accept both our works and us, for all the impersections, which he pardoneth to us of his grace.

His seventh Accusation is [Scripture saith that there are wicked men and reprobates, that believe in Christ: But you contend that they believe not, but have only a shadow of faith: which no

Anfor. Again, a quarrel about the name of faith, unworthy serious men! We say that Reprobates do believe, and we say that they believe not, taking belief in different senses. We believe what ever the Scripture saith, even that the Devils believe and tremble: and yet as Believers and Christians are all one, we are loath to call the Devils Believers and Christians; but you may do it, if you please. As Belief signifieth a bare unessed un

all conviction or superficial Assent which you call fides informis, so we still confess that the wicked may believe. But as Belief signifieth our Receiving of Christ, and Coming to him, and being planted into him as his members, and taking him heartily as Christ, our Lord and Saviour, and so becoming Christians and Disciples: as it signifieth such a faith that hath the promise of pardon of sin, of Adoption, and of Glory, so we say that the wicked have but a shew or shadow of it. And this is the sense of the words of Calvin, P. Martyr, Beza, and Danaus, whom you cite. And do you not think so your selves? Indeed you know not what to believe in this, as I have shewed in Possscript to my Disput. of Sacraments.

His eighth Acculation is this [Scripture faith, that there are some that believe for a time, and after at another time believe not. You deny that there are any that believe for a time, and then fall from faith, and that he that once believeth doth ever lose that faith, which is not in any Scripture to be found.]

Answ. It is too light in serious matters, to play thus upon words. 1. We still maintain that there are some that believe but for a time, and afterward fall away: but we fay it is but with an uneffectual or common affent that they believe, such as you call fides informis. Your accusation therefore is false. The semen vita and faith that Calvin speaks of, in the place which you cite, is meant only of a faving faith, such as you call fides charitate formata. If any of you think that faith is called charitate formata, or justifying or faving faith, only by an extrinsecal denomination, from a concomitant, and that there is no difference in the faith it self between that of the unjustified and of the justified, you are mistaken against all reason. Your own Philosophers frequently maintain that the will (which is the feat of charity) followeth the practical dictates of the Intellect (which is the feat of Affent.) And therefore according to those Philosophers, a Practical Belief must needs be accompanyed with charity. And those that deny this, do yet maintain that a powerfull clear Affent of the Intellect will infallibly procure the determination of the Will, though every affent will not, and though it do it not Necessarily. So that on that account (and in common reason) there must needs be an intrinsick difference between that Assent which prevaileth with the will to determine determine it self, and that which cannot so prevail: And therefore your unformed and your formed faith, have some intrinsick. difference.

2. the Lutherans that are half the Protestants, do think that justifying faith may be lost. So that (be it right or wrong) you cannot charge this on them all.

3. The rest which be not of their mind, do hold a brotherly communion with them; and therefore take not that point to be of so much moment as to break communion.

4. Are you not at odds among your felves about perseverance? some laying it first on mans free will, and some with Austin, ascertaining perseverance to the Elect, because Elect, and laying it on Gods free Gift : and some Jesuites and School men affirm. ing that the confirmed in Grace are not only certain to perfevere, but that they necessarily believe and are saved, and cannot mortally fin (strange doctrine for a Jesuite!) Of all this controversie of perseverance, I desire the Reader to see a few sheets called An Account of my Judgement hereabout. When I wrote those I knew not whom Alvarez meant (lib. 10. Disp. 104. pag. 419. §. I. de Anzil.) When he disputed against this fort of men: But since I find it in his Respons. ad Object. Lib. 2. cap. 9. pag. 522, &c. Where he tells us that it is the Jesuite Greg. de Valentia, Tom. 2. dist. 8. q. 3. punct. 4. §. 2. & Tom. I. d 1. q. 23. punct. 4. . 7. Ubi docet non solum esse præelectos ut salventur, sed ut necessario salventur, ac per consequens non. posse piccare Mortaliter, & Necessario perseverare in gratia ac eatenns non libere, sed necessario salvari.

And also that he meant Alexand. Ales. 3. p. g. 9. Et Almain. in 3. d. 11. g. 2. Qui asserunt confirmatos in Gratia non habere libertatem, &c. Quam sententiam Medina impugnat. 3. p. g. 27.

This is more then Protestants say, And yet will you quarrell?

His ninth Accusation is this [Scripture saith, If thou will enter into life, keep the commandments: You say that there is no need of keeping the Commandments, and that he that saith, it doth deny Christ and abolish faith, of which the Scripture speakethenot a word.]

Ansim. Still confusion playes your game, and you trive about about words. We distinguish between the keeping of that Law of Works, or Nature, which made perfect obed ence the only condition of Life: and the keeping of the Law of Moses as such, and the keeping of the Law of Moses as such, and the keeping of the Law of Christ. For the two first, we say that no man can be justified by the works of the Law. Is this a doubt among Papists, that believe Pauls Epistles? But as for the Law of Christ, as such, we must endeavour to keep it perfectly (thats necessary necessitate pracepts;) and must needs keep it sincerely (necessitate medii) if we will be saved. This ali Protestants that ever I spoke with are agreed in: And dare any Papist deny it? If we be not all (nor you neither) agreed on the sense of that text of Scripture, yet are we agreed on the doctrine, and yet you quarrel.

His tenth Accusation is [Scripture faith, that some that were illuminated and made partakers of the Holy Ghost, did fall, and crucifie again to themselves the Son of God. But you defend, that who ever is once partaker of the Holy Ghost, cannot fall from his Grace: which Scripture speaketh not.]

Answ. The same again: and a meer untruth! We still maintain that those words of Scripture are of certain truth. But we distinguish between the common and the special gists of the Spirit. The common gists may be lost: we never denyed it: The special gists that accompany salvation, some of us judge are never lost: others of us think are lest only by those that are not predestinate, as Anstin thought, and your Dominicans think. And what cause is here of your quarrell?

His eleventh Accusation is this [Scripture saith that God taketh away, and blotteth out our iniquity as a cloud: and puts our iniquities far from us, as the East is from the West, and maketh us as white as snow; You say, that he takes not away, nor blotteth out our sin, but only doth not impute it, and doth not make us white as snow, but leaveth in us the fault and uncleaness of sin:

Answ. This is half falshood, and half confusion, raked up to make a matter of quarrel with. I. Its false that we say, He doth not take away, nor blot out our sin, nor make us white as snow: Do not all Protestants in the world affirm all this? 2. There are these things here considerable. I. The Act of sin. 2. The Habit, 3. The guilt, or obligation to punishment. 4. The culpability.

pability, or reatus culpa. I. As for the AEt, how can you for shame say, that God takes it away, when it is a transient all that is gone of it self as soon as acted, and hath no existence, as Scotus and all your own take notice. 2. As to the Culpability. you will not fure for shame fay, that God fo put away, e.g. Davids Adultery, as to make it reputable as a vertue, or not a vice. 3. As to the Reatus ad panam, the full Guilt, we main. tain that it is done quite away : and if your eyes be in your head. you may fee that it is in regard of this guilt and punishment that the Scriptures mentioned by you speak (or principally speak at least) For I pray you tell us, what else can they mean. when they speak of actual fins that are past long ago, and have no existence. Learned wranglers! would you make us believe. that Grace is given to David to put away the Act of his Murder and Adultery, so that it may be quid prateritum, & non jam existens? a thing past and gone, which it is without grace? fo that when you feign us to fay, that God takes not away fin, but only not imputethit, you feign us to make synonymal terms to be of different fences. He takes them away by not imputing them.

4. But if you speak not of the sence of a particular Text. but of the Matter in difference, it can be nothing but the habit of finthat you mean, that we fay, that God takes not amay. And here you play partly the Calumniators, and partly the erroneous Pharisees. 1. You Calumniate, in seigning us to deny, that habithat sin is done away. Because our Divines say, that it is not the work of meer pardon (which we call Justification) to put it away, therefore you falfly fay, that we hold it is not put away at all: whereas we hold (without one contradicting vote that ever I read or heard) that all that are Justified, are Santtified, Converted, Regenerate, Renewed, and must live an hely life: And that all their fins are fo far destroyed, that they shall not have dominion over them : that Gross and Wilfull fin they for sake, and the least infirmities, they groan, and pray, and strive against to the last, and then obtain a persect conquest. 2. But if you mean, that no degree of habitual or dispositive sin, or absence of boly qual ties remaineth in the Justified soul, it is a Pharasaical error, yea worse then a Pharisee durst have owned. And it seems this is your meaning, by the words of Calvins which you cite.

Pp

And

And dare you say that you have no fin to resist, or purge, or pardon? Are you in Heaven already? The whole have no need of the Physician, but the sick : and have you no need of Christ to heal your foul? would you be no better then you are? O proud fouls! and strange to themselves and the purity of the Law! Hath not the Holy Ghoft pronounced him a Lyar and Self-deceiver, that faith he hath no fin, I foh. I. 8.10. In many things we offend all, Jam. 3.2. I shall but recite to you two Canons of a Council, which if you wee the Lords prayer, are fit for you to confider. Concil. Milevit. cont. Pelagianos Can. 7. [Item placuat, at quicung, dixerit in Oratione Dominica ideo dicere fanctos, Dimisse nebis Debita nostra, at non pro seipsis hoc dicant, quia non est er jam necessariaista, sed pro alis, qui sunt in suo populo peccatores, & ideo non dicere unumquemque sanctorum, Dimitte mibi debitames; sed Dimitte nobis debita nostra, ut hoc pro aliis posius quam pro se fustus petere intelligatur, Anathema sit.

Can. 8. Item placuit, ut quicunque verbaipsa Dominica Orationis, nbi dicimus, Dimitte nobis debita nostra, ista volunt à Sanctis dici, ut humiliter, non veraciter hec dicatur, Anathema sit. Quis enim ferat Orantem, & non hominibus, sed ipsi Domino mentientem, qui labiis sibi dicit dimitti velle, & Corde dicit, qua sibi di-

You see here the Council curseth all those as intolerable Lyars, that say the Lords prayer, desiring him daily to forgive or remit their sins, and yet think that they have no sins to forgive, yet or that every Saint hath not such sins. What can a Papist say to this, but by making Councils as void of sence, as they feign the holy Scriptures to be?

His twelf hand last Accusation is this [The Scripture saith, that Blessedness is the Remard, the Prize, the Penny, the wages of Labourers, and the Crown of Righteousness: you contend that its meerly the free gift of God, and not a Reward, which no Scripture

Ansiro. A meer Calumny, and perverting of Calvins words, who often saith, as we constantly do, that Eternal life is given as a Remard and Crown of Righteonsness. But we distinguish between the Ast of God in his Gospel Promise, which is a Conditional Deed of Gist of Christ and Life to all that will Accept them, and the execution of this by Judgement and Glorification. And we say that it was Antecedenter meerly of Gods free Grace that he made such a Deed of Gift (the blood of Christ being the purchassing cause,) and nothing of our works had a handin the procurement (Dare you deny this?) But that our fusitivation in Judgement, and our Glorification, which are the Execution of the Law of Grace, do make our works the Reason; not as having merited it ex proportione operis, or in Commutative Justice, but as having performed the condition of the free Gift, and so being the persons to whom it doth belong. And this is the sense of Scotus and of one half of the Papists, (for still you are together by the ears) who say that Merit of Condignity is but ex pasto by vertue of Gods Promise.

And now I leave it to the Conscience of any sober Papist, whether we be guilty in any one point that this great Cardinal chargeth us with? And whether Papists and Protestants were not in a fair way for reconciliation, if we differed not more in other things then in these?

And here again I must let them know, that Scripture only is the Rule and Test of our Faith and Religion. Their Polidor Virgil in this speaks truly of us, saying [They are called Evangelical, because they maintain that no Law is to be received in matters of Salvation, but what is delivered by Christ or his Apostles] (so sapessand putid is their scorn of the Evangelium quintum.) If therefore Luther, Calvin, or any man speak in any word amis, blame the manthat spoke it for that word; but blame not all, or any others for it, if you are men. Austin Retracted his own errors, and which of us dare Justific every word that hath fall from our mouths or pen, before God? How many hundred points do Schoolmen and Commentators charge on one another as Erroneous, among yourselves? shall all the errors of the Fathers be charged on the Catholick Church, or all your writers errors upon yours?

And that we do well to stick to the Holy Scriptures as the sufficient Rule, we are the more encouraged to think, by the concessions of our adversaries of greatest Note (as well as by the Testimony of the Scripture it self, and the concent of the ancient Doctors of the Church, and the unprovedness of of their pretended additionals.) Among others even this great Cardinal Richlien saith thus, pag. 38. [Nos autem nullame

aliam, &c.i.e. As for su mappet (or assert) no other Rule but Scripture, neither of another sort, nor totall: Yea we say that it is the Whole Rule of our Salvation: and that on a double account, both because it containeth immediately and formally the summ of our salvation; that is, all the Articles that are necessary to mans salvation, by necessity of means (N.B.) and because it mediately containeth what soever we are bound to believe, as it sends us to the Church to be instructed by her, of whose infallibility it certainly confirmeth us.]

Note here that 1. He grants us that all Articles necessary to our Salvation, as Means, are immediatly and formally in the Scripture: And then surely they may be saved that believe no more then is in the Scripture: 2. That we are to believe no Church but that which the Scripture sends us to, and to believe its infallibility no surther then the Scripture doth confirm it. And that the Scripture is our whole and only Rule. O that all Papists would stand to this! But let them not blame us now for standing to it. Had this Cardinall done no more by Policie and Power then by Disputing against the Reformation, he might eafily have been dealt with.

CHAP. XL.

Detect. 31. A Nother of their frauds is, By ranking the Protefrants among the rabble of Sects and Herefics that are in the world, and then asking ignorant souls, If you will needs be of any sect, how many are here before you? and what reason have you rather to be of the Protestants, then of any other?

Answ. Indeed this question is worth the considering by a Papist, or any sectary; but the true Catholick is quite out of the reach of it. The Church of Christ is One, and but One. This one Catholick Church containeth all the true Christians in the world. This is the Church that I am a member of, which is far wider then the Roman Church. The Church that I profess my self a member of, containeth three parts; 1. The most sound and healthfull part; and that is the Reformed Churches. 2. The most unsound in dostrine, though possest of many Learned men; and that is the Papists themselves; (not as Papists simply, but as Christians, though infected with Popery.) 3. The middle part, which is sounder then the Papists in doctrine, but less learned; and below the Protestants in both: and that is all the Greeks and other Easternand Southern Churches that are no subjects of the Pope. All these, even all true Christians, are members of the Church that I belong to, though some of them be more found, and some be leprous or lamentably polluted. To these I may add many particular lesser sects, that subvert not the foundation, as some Anabaptilts, and divers others. And will you ask me now why I will not be of another fed, as well as of the Protestants? Why, my answer is ready: A Sect divided from the body, Tabhor: I am of no Sea, It is the Unity, Universality and Antiquity of the Church that are its honourable attributes in my eyes. Protestants that unchurch all the rest of the world, and count them. selves the whole Church of Christ, do in some fort make themselves a Sect: But where is there any such? I know none such, nor I hope ever shall do: And therefore I may say that Protestants are no more a sect, then the Patients in an Hospital that are almost healed, or then the higher form of Scholars in a school, or then the Merchants or richer fort of Tradesmen in a City: And such a Sect God grant that I may be of, even one in the Church that shall be of foundest understanding, and of purest worship, and of the most carefull, holy, honest life; But still I shall acknowledge them of the lowest form, even them that learn the A.B. C. to be in the same School with me: And if they (Papists or any others) will disclaim me, that shall not unchurch me, as long as Christ disclaims me not : Nor shall it provoke me to disclaim them any further then I see Christ leading me the way. So that the Papists may see that if they will deny the Church that I am of, they must deny their own, and all the Christian world.

But how will they answer this themselves? Seriously I profes, that besides their other errors, it is one of the greatest reasons why I dare not be a Papist, because then I know I must be a Sectary. What is a Papist but as meer a sectary as any that retaineth a name in the Church? They are a company of men

that have fet up a Humane Usurping Head or Vice-christ over the Catholick Church, owning him themselves, and unchurching and condemning all the Church that will not own him. The Church that I am of is neer thrice as big as the Papists Church is. Theirs is but a piece, and a polluted piece, that would divide it felf from all the rest by condemning them.

And now I would feriously desire any Papist living to resolve the question, If he will needs be of a sect, and for sake the Universal Church, why of the Popish sect rather then another? If because it is the greatest, I answer, its less then the whole. If because it is the purest, it is one of the most impure: If for Antiquity, it is sounded (as Papal) upon Novelty. If because it is the Richest, their money perish with them that measure the Church and truth of Christ by the Riches and splendor of this world. For my part I cannot help you out of this snare.

CHAP. XLI.

Detect. 32. Nother of their juglings is, By working upon the peoples natural affections, and asking them, Where they think all their fore-fathers are that dyed in the communion of the Roman Church? Dare they think they are all damned? Intimating that its cruelty to fay their ancestors are in Hell; and if they say they be in Heaven, then there is but one way thither, and therefore you must go the way that they went.

But a weak understanding may easily deal with this kind of Sophistry, if it be not mastered by affection. For 1. What if we grant that many of our fore-sathers that dyed Papists are in Heaven? Doth it follow that we must therefore be Papists? No: because it was not by Popery that they came to Heaven, but by Christianity. What if many recover and live that ear not only Earth and Dirt, but Hemlock or Spear-wort, or other poyfons; must I therefore eat them? Or doth it soliow that there is no other way to health?

2. Our fore-fathers were all faved that were holy, justified persons, and no others. But among so many and great impediments as Popery cast in their way, we have great reason to sear that far sewer of them were saved, then are now among the Reformed Churches. And must I needs go that difficult way to Heaven, because that some of them get thither ? Must I needs travail a way that is commonly beset with thieves, because some that go that way do scape them? This is our case.

3. If this were a good way of Reasoning, then may all the Heathens, Infidels, Mahometans, use it, that have been educated in darkness. And indeed it is the Argument which the barbarous Heathens use, when the Gospel is preached to them: [What think you, say they, is become of our fathers? If they were saved without the Gospel, so may we.] The story of that Infidel Prince is common, that being ready to go to the water to be baptized, stept back, and asked, Where are all my Ancestors now? And when he was told that they were in Hell, and that the Christians go to heaven, he told them then he would be no Christian, for he would go where his Ancestors are.

4. If this be good reasoning, then we may nse it much more then you. For we would ask you, where be all our fore-sathers that are dead since the Resormation? and where be all those that dyed between the Resurrection of Christ and the appearing of Popery, or the prevailing of it in the world? And where be all that die in the Eastern and Southern Churches, that are no subjects of the Pope of Rome? Have we not as little reason to think that all these millions of men are damned, as to think so of our Popish Ancestors.

5. Why should we be more soolish for our souls then for our bodies? I would not be poor because my Ancestors were so: Nor would I have the Stone or Gout because my Ancestors had them: Nor will I say that they are no diseases, for sear of dishonouring my Ancestors that had them. And why then should I willfully lick up any Popish errors, because my Ancestors by the disadvantage of the times and of their education were cast upon them.

6. It is not our fore-fathers but God that we must follow: It is he, and not they, that is the Lord of our faith and of our fouls. It will not excuse us in judgement for disobeying God, to say that our fore-fathers led us the way; Nor will it ease us in Hell to suffer with our fore-fathers. Christ rells us, Luke 16. of a Rich man that in Hell would have had his brethren warned, lest they should follow him: But these men would have us to-

follow our fore-fathers, even in their fin against God. Whereas the Scriptures constantly make it an aggravation of a peoples sin. when they follow their fathers in it, & take not warning by their falls. The fewish Christians were redeemed from the vain converlation, received by Tradition from their fathers, 1 Pet. 1.18. Stephen cells the fews, Act. 7.51,52. [As your Fathers did, so do ye: which of the Prophets have not your Fathers perfecuted? | Christ condemneth the fews for allowing the deeds of their fathers, Luk. 11.47,48. Mat. 23.32. Nay God asketh wicked men where their fathers are. with a clean contrary meaning to this question of the Papists [Zach. I. 4, 5, 6. Turn unto me faith the Lord of Hosts, be not as your fathers unto whom the former Prophets have cryed, Turn - your fathers, where are they, and the Prophets, do they live for ever? Ezek. 20.18, 27, 30. [I faid unto their children, -- walk je not in the Statutes of your Fathers, neither observe their judgemeats, nor defile your selves with their Idols: I am the Lord your God, walk in my Statutes - 30. Say unto the house of Itrae! Thus faith the Lord God; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations? Jer.44.9. [Have ye forgotten the wickedness of your fathers - They are not humbled even to this day. The 18.0f Ezek. is almost all of this, that the son that followeth his father in his fins, shall die, and he that takes warning and avoideth his fathers fins, shall live. A hundred more such texts there are.

7. Our fore fathers might be faved that finned in the dark, and yet we be damned if we will follow them in the Light, or at least we shall be beaten with more stripes then they, if both must perish. They had not our means, or liberty: If they had seen and heard what we have done, many of them would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. Shall we fin wilfully after the knowledge of the Truth, because our fathers sinned ig-

CHAP. XLII.

Detect. 33. A Nother of their frauds is, By pretending to a Divine Institution and Natural excellency of a visible Monarchical Government of the Church. And so they would derive it from Peter, from Christ yea from Nature, and God the Author of Nature.

All their writings take this as their strength. I shall at this time tie my self to Boverius his Cheating Consultation, de Ratione vera fidei, & c. ad Carolum Principem, intended for the per-verting of our late King then in Spain.

In his Part. 1. Reg. 6. he afferteth that [besides Christ the invisible Head of the Church, there is a necessity that we acknowledge another certain visible Head subrogate to Christ, and instituted of him, without which none can be a member of Christ, or any may subsist alive.] (Yet Cardinal Richlieu will not have the Pope called Another Head.)

He begins his proof with a cheat, as gross as common, even an abuse of Cyprians words, l. I. Ep. 3. where Cyprian speaks for the necessity of obeying One in the Church, meaning a particular Church, (as the whole scope of his Epistle testifieth): And this man would make them simple believe that he speaks of the Universal Church.

His Reasons proceed thus: First (p. 128. &c.) he tells as, that [the invisible God thinks meet to Govern the world by visible men.] Answ. And who denies that Christ also governeth his Church by men?

But he conclude thence [Num alia ratione, &c. Shall we believe that Christ doth govern his Church in another way then God governeth the whole world?] Answ. Readet, doth not this man give up the cause of the Pope, and say as much against it sundamentally as a Protestant? Saith Boverins [We must not believe that Christ doth govern the Church in another way then God doth govern the world.] But (saith common sense and experience) God doth not govern the whole world by any one (or two, or ten) Universal Vice-monarch: Therefore Christ doth not Govern the Church by any one Universal Vice-monarch.

His next Reason is, [Because Christ was a visible Monarch once on earth himself. And if the Church had need of a visible Monarch then, it hath need of it still.] Answ. 1. Here the Reader may see, that it is to no less then to be Christs successor, or a Vice-christ, that the Pope pretendeth. And then the Reason, if it were of any worth, would as well prove, that there must be one on earth still that may give the Holy Ghost immediately, and make Articles of Faith de novo, and Lans for the Church (with promise of Salvation) and may appoint new Offices and orders in the whole Church, &c. And why not one also to live without sin, and to die for our sins, and rise again, and be our Saviour? And why not one to give us his own body and blood in the Sacrament?

2. Christ himself doth oppose himself to all terrestrial inhabitans, saying, One is your Master, even Christ.] And what then? Why Be not ye called Masters? But be that is greatest among you, shall be your servant. And Be not ye called Rabbi, for one is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are Brethren, Mat. 23. 8.9, 10, 11, 12. where most evidently he shews that neither Peter, or any of his own Disciples were to be called Masters, as Christ was, nor was any such to be on earth, and so no Vice christ; yea that all his Apostles being Brethren, were not to be Masters one to another; but servants: so that here is a plain bar put in against any of Peters Mastership or Healship of the Universal Church.

3. We do on these and many other Reasons, deny your consequence. It follows not that we must still have a Christ on earth, because we once had.

4. Christ hath chosen another Vicar (though invisible) as Tirtullian calls him; and that is, the Holy Ghost, whom he sent to make such supply as was necessary, by various gifts proportioned to the several states and members of the Church.

5. If Christ would have left a Vice-christ upon earth, which should have been an Essential part, even the Head of his Church; he would doubtless have plainly expressed it in Scripture, and described his Office and Power, and given him directions to exercise it, and us directions how to know which is he, and to obey him: But there is not a word of any such matter in the Scripture, (nor Antiquity) when yet it is a point (if true) of such unspeakable importance.

6. You might at well feign, that if it were then necessary to have twelve or thirteen Apostles, it is so still: and if then it was necessary to have the gift of tongues and miracles, it is so still:

which yet the Pope himself is void of.

7. It is not enough for your filly wit, to say its fit that Christ bave a Successor, therefore he bath one: but let him that claimeth so high an honour as to be the Vice-christ, produce his Commission, and prove his claim if he will be believed.

8. Christ is still the visible Head of his Church, seen in Heaven, and as much seen over all the world, except Judea and Egypt, as ever he was. When he was on earth, he was not visible at Rome, Spain, Asia, &c. He that is Emperor of the Turkish Monarchy, perhaps was never personally an hundred miles from Constantinople. The King of Spain is no visible Monarch in the west-Indies. And if all the world except Judea might be without a Present Christ, then why that may not as well as the rest, you must give him an account, if you will tie him to be here resident.

9. And yet if the Pope would usurp no more Power then Christ exercised visibly on earth, it would not be all so bad as it is or hath been. He would not then divide inheritances, nor be a temporal Prince, nor wear a Triple Crown, nor keep so glorious a Court and Retinue, nor depose Princes, nor deny them tribute, nor exempt his Prelates from it, nor from their judgement Seats, nor absolve their Subjects from their fidelity, &c. nor trouble the world as now he doth: He would not exercise the power of putting any to death: much less would he set up Inquisitions, to burn poor people for reading the Scriptures, or no being of his mind.

Pag. 133. He makes Christ the visible Pope while he was on earth, and tells us that Promulgating the Gospel, sending Apassles, instituting Sacraments, &c. were Pontificalia munera, Papal Offices. Answ. And indeed was Christ a Pope? and is the Pope a Christ? Jesus I know, and Peter and Paul I know: but this Vice christ I know not. If indeed the Vice-christ have power to do these Papal works, to promulgate a new Gospel, to send out Apostles, to institute Sacraments, &c. as Christ did, let us but know which be the Popes Sacraments, and which be Christs; which be the Popes Apostles, and which be Christs; which be the Popes Apostles, and which be Christs; and which is the Popes Gospel, and which is Christs, and we shall use them accordingly. The Law and Testimony will help us to distinguish them.

Pag. 134. He comes to prove that Christ hath a Successor; and his first proof is from Mic. 2. Let the Reader peruse it, and judge without any help of mine, what proof there is that the Pope is a Vice-chrift.

The next is in Hosea 1. which speaketh of the return of the Israelites from Captivity. Let the Reader make his best on it for the Pope, for I think it not worth my labour to consute the Papists impudent perverting such Texts as these.

By the way he tells us (as Card. Richlieu and the rest commonly do) that [its no dishonour to Christ to have a Deputy, no more then for the King of England to have a Deputy, or Viceling in Ireland.] Answ. 1. But our first question is, Whether de tacto such a thing be? Prove that Christ hath Commissioned a Vice-christ, and we will not presume to say that he hath dishonoured himself.

2. Though it should not dishonour Christ, it is such a transcendent honour to man, as we will not believe that any man hath, that proveth not his claim. It was no dishonour to the Godhead to be united to the manhood of Christ in Personal union; but if the Pope say, that the Godhead is thus united to his manhood, verily I will not believe him.

3. Though we should not have presumed to question Christ is he had done it, yet we must presume to tell the Pope that he is guilty of dishonouring Christ by his usurpation. 1. Because he sets up himself as Vice christ, without his Commission; and takes that to himself, that is, Christs Prerogative. God saith, This is my beloved Sonin whom I am well-pleased, Hear him] And the Papists say of the Pope, This is the Vice-christ, Hear him] 2. Because the Power of a King is more communicable, then the Power of Christ, it being such as is fit for one meer man as well as for another. But the Power of Christ is such as no meer man is fit for. The capacity of the Subject is Considerable as Necessary to the reception of the sorm of Power. He that is God as well as Man is fit for an Universal Monarchy, when he that is meer man is not. From whence we argue thus.

If there was never such a thing by Gods institution as a meer man to be the Christ or Universal Head of the Church, then there is no such thing to be imagined now: But there never was such a thing: Therefore there is no such

Christ

Christ that was the visible Head was God and Man: when the Pope is so, we will believe in him as his Successor.

4. It would ruine the Church to have built on fo fandy a foundation, and to have laid so much work on one that is so unable to perform it. Doubtless common reason tells us, that if God made any one man the Monarch of the whole world (especially leaving his Commission as obscure, as the Popesis, were it any) and should not give him a divine or supra-humane strength to execute it, it would be the confusion of the world. I am not well acquainted with the Power of Angels; but I hope without dishonouring them . I may suspect, that the due managing of fuch an Universal Monarchy is above their abilities: At least I am confident, it is an honour that their Modesty and Reverence of Christ will not permit them to own, as the Pope doth. If this Vice-christ be not a false Christ, he may apply that of Heb. 1. Being made so much better then Angels, as he bath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name then they: For unto which of the Angels (aid he at any time) thou are the Successor of Christ, thou art the Universal Head of the Church? Whether the Pope will be called the Vice-son of God, the Vice-saviour, and say, [Let all the Angels worship him; sit those on my right hand, &c. I leave to his modelty to confider? But I must profess here to the Reader, that though my modesty and consciousness of my weakness, hath made me so suspicious, lest I understand not the Apocalips, as to suspend my judgement, whether the Pope be the Antichrist, the Beast, &c. yet the reading of their serious immodest arguings, to prove the Pope to be the Vice-christ on Earth, doth exceedingly more increase my suspicion that he is The Antichrist. For to be Peters Succeffor, as a first Apostle, is a contemptible thing in these men eyes. This is not it that they plead for. Bellarmine (ubi supr.) expressy tells us, that the Pope succeeds not Peter as an Apostle. No, it is as a Vice-christ to the whole Church, as Boverius here professedly maintaineth. And this they make the Foundation of their Catholick Church, and the acknowledgement of it Esfential to every member of it. Which I even tremble to read and think of.

Next Boverius comes to his proofs from the New-Testament.

And those are the same that I have answered (as Bellarmines)

in'my [Safe Religion] and are an hundred times answered by our writers, and therefore the Reader may excuse me, if I put him to no long trouble about them.

The first is the old [Tues Petrus, & in hanc Petrum, & c.]

Answ. 1. He doth not say [Thou art Christ, or the Vice-christ, or my Successor, or the Universal Monarch of the Church: No such words as these. 2. It is Christ himself here that is called the Rock, and not Peter. q. d. [Thy name is Peter who confesself me, in allusion to which I tell thee, that I whom thou hast confessed am Petra, the Rock upon which I will build me a Church, which the gates of Hell shall not prevail against.] As the Apostle saith of the spiritual Rock, I Cor. 10. That Rock was Christ.]
So may I of this.

3. But if it had been spoken of Peter, it had been no more then is spoken of the other Apostles, on whom as on a Foundation the Church is said to be built, Jesus Christ himself being the head corner stone, Eph. 2. 20.

But what need we more, if we put not out our eyes, then to find in all the New Testament, that Peter was never called or taken for a Vice-christ by the Apostles, (unless Secundum quid, as every Embassador of Christ is that speaks his message in his stead, 2 Cor 5. 19, 20.) and that he never is said to exercise any Universal Government over the rest of the Apostles, nor so much as give them a Law, or Convent them before him, or fend them out, or do any more in Ruling them, then they in Ruling him, nor so much as Paul did in rebuking him to his face for difor. derly walking, &c. Gal. 2. Yea when Paul calls them carnall that fided with Peter, though but in the same over-valuing way as others did of Apollos and Paul, saying [I am of Paul, and I am of Apollo, and I am of Cephas, I Cor. 1. 12. He saith to them that said [I am of Christ] [Is Christ divided?] as shewing that he was the common Universal Head and Master of them all. But when he mentioneth meer men, he hath no fuch word: He saith not [Is Peter divided] But implying all in one he faith [Was Paul crucified for you, or were yee baptized into the name of Paul?] And [Who then is Paul, and who is Apollo? (implying also, Who is Peter) but Ministers by whom ye believed as the Lord gave to every man, I Cor. 3. 5. See I Cor. 4 6.

litudes, and faith [The Church is Christs Kingdom, an Army, . Sheepfold, a House, a Ship, or Noahs Ark; and whats a Kingdom mithout a visible King: or an Army without a Visible General: or a Flock without a visible Shepheard: or a Honse without a Housholder: or a Ship without a Pilot?] Answ. 1. The whole earth is Gods Kingdom! And can he not Govern it without a Visible Monarch? Why then did the world never hear of such a man? Yea the whole world is the Kingdom of Christ himself, though not in that special fort as his Church is: For all Power in heaven and earth is given him Mat. 28. 18, 19. and for that end he Dred, Rose and Revived that he might be Lord of the Dead and Living, Rom. 14.9. and he is made Head over ail things to the Church, Eph. 1. 22, 23. And hath this Kingdom an Univerfal Visible Monarch? Yes: the Pope is the man: Long hath he laid claim to it. Princes, you fee whose hands your Crowns and Kingdoms are in: Deceive not your felves, they are the Popes: For certainly they are all Christs; and if he be to be believed, he is the Vice-christ, and so succeedeth him in the Monarchy of the world. But then why doth not this simple Pope lay claim to the Empire of Indostan, and Tartarie, and China, and Conftantinople, as well as of these smaller Kingdoms of Europe?

2. And for the Metaphorical title of an Army, I answer, It sufficeth that it hath an Universal General in Heaven, that can command it twice as well there as the Pope can on earth, yea and is as Visible to the Antipodes, yea to me, as ever the Pope was. All the world is Gods Army: But I will not say that the Pope or any man is Generall of it (save Christ) nor will I call him, The Lord of Hofts.

3. And for the Sheepfold of Christ, he hath appointed particular Shepheards to watch for the several parts of the slock. But if one man were to look to all the sheep in the world, he would make such work as the Pope would do with the sheep of Christ. It you tell us still that Christ is out of sight, I answer, He is even at hand: he is coming: he will not be long: In the mean time it is the duty of every Pastor [to feed the flock of God that is among them _____ not as Lords over Gods Heritage (as the Vice-christ would be:) and when the chief Shepheard doth appear, meshall receive the Crown,] I Pet. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4. Peter never dreamed, poor man, that he was the chief Shepheard himself.

4. For the Metaphor of a Family, I answer, That God can Govern all the Families in the world: and when the Pope can do so, then all the world shall acknowledge him the Master of the Family. Till then we have learned that the whole Family of Heaven and Earth is named of God, and of the Redeemer-Godand-Man: but not of the Pope of Rome.

5. And for the similitude of a Ship, I answer, One man can Govern a ship of the common size; but a ship as big as all the world, I think no man but Christ can govern: And so consident am I in this opinion, that I profess I will not be in that ship as big as the world which the Pope shall undertake to Govern, if I do but know how to get out of it.

Pag. 146. He goes on to tell us, that even the bruits have their Governours, and instanceth in the Bees. Answ. I am not well acquainted with Irrational Governours or Governments: but seriously it is no Article of my faith, that one Bee can Govern all the Bees in the World: Nor one Ape all the Apes in the world. Let it suffice the Pope that every particular Church be a Bee-hive, and every Hive have its proper Governour.

Next he again tells Prince Charls [that we should not deny that to the Church which we see is necessary to all humane Societies] Answ. Was this man in his wits! Have all Societies, or any Society an Universal Humane Governour? Who is it that is the Universal Chancellor of all the Academies on Earth? Who is it that is the Ruler of all the Colledges of Physitians in the world? I know what Schoolmaster we have in our own School here; but I never heard of an Universal Schoolmaster for all the world; nor for all England: who is the Universal Governour of all the Companies of Merchants in the world? Or who is the Universal King?

In the Conclusion he gathers up all into seven reasons, Why the Church should have a Vice-christ [1. That the militant (burch might be like the triumphant, who have one Invisible Head.] In such that any meer man is Christ, or Head in Heaven, then we will grant that a meer man shall be Christ and Head on earth. 3. Earth is not yet six to be conformed to Heaven.

ven in its Government. 4. Is it not the truest conformity, that Heaven and Earth have one and the same Lord, though visible to them and not to us, yet ruling us by visible officers? 5. But if this will not serve, lets have on earth a visible Government: therefore let us have no Pope that is invisible to almost all the world; but Pastors that are visible in their particular Churches.

The second Reason is [That the militant Church differ not from it self, but as each particular Church hath one Visible Head or Pastor, so the whole should have.] Answ. I. Content, if the Pope can shew as good a Commission for the whole, and be as able to Govern the whole, and will really be present with the whole, and visible to them. 2. Is the world unlike it self, if all the world have not one King, as every particular Kingdom hath? Or one Schoolmaster, as every particular School hath?

The third Reason is [For preserving Unity.] Answ. 1. And well it is done by you? And what unity will you keep at the Antipodes? Or in the vast dominions of Heathen and Mahometan Princes, where Christians are dispersed, but you come not neer them? 2. We have a better unity already in One God, One Christ, One Spirit, One Gospel, One Baptism, One Hope, &c. 3. The Mahometans have more unity then you.

The fourth Reason is [To fulfill the doctrine of the Prophets and Christ.] Arsiv. You should have better shewed such a doctrine before you had made use of it as a reason.

The fifth Reason is [That the Christian Church may be like the femish] Answ. When the Christian universal Church is no bigger then the Jewish, that one may Govern it as well, we will hearken to you: Let the Pope undertake no larger a Circuit.

The fixth Reason is [That there may be some one Supream judge to punish Bishops, and define matters of faith, call Councils, extinguish heresies and schisms.] Answ. 1. One Christ is enough for the Catholick Church for all these uses. I find the Articles of faith as well defined by Christ, as by the Vice-christ. I have searcht the writings both of Christ and the Vice-christ, and in my poor judgement there is no comparison between them; nor hath the Pope one jot mended the Scripture. 2. And for Heresies and Schisms, Christ hath extinguisht many, but for ought I fee the Pope rather increaseth them. In good sad: nels, did God fend John the twenty second, alias the twenty third to extinguish Herefies, with all those Abominations and all that Infidelity that was charged on him by a General Council? And was John the thirteenth a Vice christ to extinguish Herefies by all that disbolical villany that he was deposed for by a Council? 3. And for calling Councils, they have learnt more wit, since Constance and Basil have let them know what Councils mean to do by them. Unless they can pack up forty or fifty (or what if it were an hundred, or two hundred) as they did at Trent, to say their lesson, as it was brought to them from Rome, and to call themselves a General Council for folks to laugh at them. Is this all that we must have a Vice-Christ for? How many General Councils did the Pope call for fix hundred years after Christ? Tell us without Lying, and let us fee why he was created.

The seventh Reason is [That the Divine Institution of Christ, and the plain Scripture about Peters Primacy may take place.]

Answ. 1. Where shall a man that hath eyes find your pretended institution? The blind may sooner find it by the half. 2. Primacy and Monarchy are not all one. And Bellarmine can tell you, that its one thing to be the first Apostle, and another thing to be the Vice-christ to the Church Universal. Peter was none such.

3. No nor was he properly any more the Bishop of Rome then of many another place. Antioch claims the inheritance by birth-right, as Peters first supposed seat, and Jerusalem before them both.

Well, Reader thou seest now how Babel is built, and what is the strongest stuff that the learned Spaniards had to assault Prince Charls with: For verily I have not bawkt their strength: And were it not for the loss of precious time to you and me, I would quickly thus shew you the vanity of abundance more of their most applauded writings.

CHAP. XLIII.

Detect. 34. A Nother of their Devices is, to take nothing as Evidence from Scripture, but the Letters

They will not endure to hear of consequences, no nor Synonimal expressions. Bellarmine himself saith (de verb. Dei, lib. 3. cap. 3.) [Convenis inter nos & adversarios, ex solo literali sensus, peti debere argumenta efficacia: nam eum sensum qui ex verbis immediate colligitur, certum est sensum est spiritus sancti.] But this may admit a fair interpretation. It was Cardinal Peronius in his Reply against King fames that is judged the deviser of this Deceit: but Gonterius and Veronius the Jesuites have persected it. I shall say but little of it, because it is already detected and refelled by Paul Ferrius 1618. and Isaaccus Chorinus 1623. and Nic. Vedelius 1628. at large. Yea Vedelius shews, cap. 6. p. 50. & c. that it was hatcht in Germany by the Lutherans for the desending of Consubstantiation, and from them borrowed by the Revolter Perron.

For our parts, the cunning Sophisters shall find us very Reafonable with them in this point: but if they be fall out with Reason it self, there's no way to please them but by turning bruits. And we will not buy their favour at those rates.

Our judgement in this point, I shall lay down distinctly, though briefly, as followeth. I. The Holy Scripture is the Doctrine, Testament and Law of Christ. And we shall add nothing to it, nor take ought from it. The use of it as a doctrine, is to inform us of the will of God in the points there written. The use of it as a Testament, is to significe to us the last will of our Lord concerning our duty and Salvation. The use of it as a Law, is to appoint us our Duty and Reward, or Punishment; and to be the Rule of our obedience, and in a fort, the Rule by which we shall be judged.

2. All Laws are made to Reasonable creatures, and suppose the use of Reason for the understanding them. To use Reason about the Law, is not to add to the Law.

3. The subject must have this use of Reason to discern the fence of the Law that he may obey it. And the judge must Rationally pass the sentence by it.

4. This is the Application of the Law to the fact and person: And though the fact and person be not in the Law, yet the Application of the Law to the sact and person is no addition to it. Otherwise to use any such thing would be to add to it.

5. As the sact is distinct from the Law, so must the sentence of the Judge be, which results from both.

6. To speak the same sence or thing in equipollent terms, is not to add to the Law in matter or sence.

7. Yet we maintain the Scripture sufficiency in suo genere, in terms and sence: So that we shall confess that equipollent words are only Holy Scripture as to sence, but not as to the terms.

·8. But there is no Law but may many wayes be broken, and no Doctrine but may be divers wayes opposed. And therefore though we yield that nothing but the express words of Godare the Scripture, for terms and sence, yet many thousand words may be against Scripture, that be not there expressly forbidden in terms.

9. The Law of Nature is Gods Law, and the Light of Nature is his Revelation. And therefore that which the Light of Nature feeth immediately in Nature, or that which it feeth from Scripture and Nature compared together, and foundly concludeth from these premises, is truly a revelation from God.

no. The Conclusion followeth the more debile of the Premises, in point of evidence or certainty to us. Where Scripture is the more debile, there the conclusion is of Scripture faith: but where the sact or Proposition from the Light of Nature is more debile, there the conclusion is of Natural Evidence: But in both, of Divine discovery. For there is no Truth and Light but from God the Father of Lights. This is our judgement herein.

Now for the Papists, you may see their folly thus; I. If nothing but the bare words of a Law may be heard in Tryals, then all Laws in the world are void and vain. For the subjects be not all named in them; nor the sact named: And what then have witnesses, and jurors, and judges to do? The Promise saith He shat believeth shall be saved: But it doth not say that Bellarmine or Veronius believeth: Doth it follow, that therefore they may make no use of it for the comforting of their souls in the hopes of Salvation: The Threatning saith, that he that believeth not is condemned: But it saith not that such or such a man believeth not: should they not therefore fear the threat-

2. By this trick they would condemn Christ himself also, as adding to the Law in judgement. He will say to them, I was hungry and ye fed me not, &c. But where said the Scripture so, that such or such a man sed not Christ? It needs not: Christ knows the sac without the Scripture. The Scripture is sufficient to its own use, to be Rule of Obedience and Judgement: but it is not sufficient to every other use which it was never made for. The Law said to Cain, Thou shalt not murder. But it said not to him, Thou hast killed thy brother, therefore thou shalt die. It was the Judges part to deliver this.

By this trick they would give a man leave to vent any Blasphemy, or do any villany, changing but the name. But they shall find that the Law intended not bare words, but by words to signific things: And if they do the things prohibited, or hold the opinions condemned, what ever names or words they cloath them with, they shall feel the punishment:

4. By this they would leave almost nothing provable by the Scripture, seeing a Papist or Heretick may put the same into other terms, and then call for the Proof of that. For example, they may ask where God commanders or instituteth any one of the Sacraments in Scripture? And when we tell them where Baptism and the Lords Supper were instituted, they may reply, that there is no mention of Sacraments; and so turn real Controversies into verbal.

5. Yea it feems by this they would make all Translations to be of littleuse. And a man might lawfully sin in English, because God forbad it only in Hebrew and Greek.

6. If this be the way of it, let us remember that they must in Reason stand to their own Rules. Let them tell us then what Scripture saith, that Peter was the Vicar of Christ, or the Head of the Catholick Church: or the Bishop of Rome, or that the Pope is his Successor, or that the Pope is the Vice-christ, or Universal Bishop. Where is there express Scripture for Rr3 any of this? Yea so much as Bellarmines Literal sense.

7. And why do not these blind and partial men see, that the same course also must be taken with their own Laws? And that all their Decretals and Canons are infufficient, according to these Rules. It's easie for any Heretick to form up his Error into other words then those condemned by Pope or Council: And if you go again to the Pope, and get him to condemn those new expressions, the men in Mexico may use them long to the detriment of the fouls of men, before the damnatory sentence be brought to them. And when it comes, they can again word their Heresie anew. The Jansenists in France shew how well the Popes decision of wordy Controversies is understood, and doth avail. But really if they will hold that no part of the Popes Laws oblige but in the literal sense, or that none offend that violate not the Letter, they will make a great alteration in their affairs. And perphaps any of their subjects may Blaspheme the Pope himself in French, Dutch, Irish, English, Slavonian, &c. because he forbids it only in Latine; For if Translations be not Gods Word, then they are not the Popes word neither. A pretty crochet for a Jesuite. It is mendacium, and not a Lje, that the Pope forbids. It is said that a Traytor or Murderer may be hang'd: but it is not faid that fuch or fuch a man shall be hang'd; or that he was a traytor or murderer.

Their common instance is, [The Scripture no where calls it self the whole word of God; nor no where tells us which be Canonical Books, &c. and get these are Articles of Faith. Answ. 1. The Scripture doth call it self the Word of God, and signifie its own sufficiency, and several Books have particular testimonies to be Canonical. 2. Though secondarily so far as Scripture affirmethits own Divinity, it be to be beleived: yet Primarily, that this is Gods Word, and that these are the Books, and that they are not corrupted, and that they are all, &c. are points of knowledge antecedent in order of nature to Divine Belief of them. There are two great Foundations antecedent to the Matter of Divine Faith. The one is Gods veracity; that God cannot lie: The other is, His Revelations; that This is Gods Word: The first is the Formal Object of Faith: The second is a Necessary Medium between the formal object and the subject; sine quo non, without which there is no possibility of Believing. The Material object called the Articles of Faith, presuppose both these, as points of Knowledge, proved to us by their proper evidence. And that this is Allthe Word of God, is a meer Consequence, from the actual Tradition of this much and no more.

To give you an undenyable illustration by instance. Let us enquire which be the Administring Laws of this Common-wealth. And we shall find that I. The Authority of the Law-givers is none of them; for that is in the Constitution, before the Administration; and it is the formale objectum of every Law, which is more noble then the Material object: 2. And the Promulgation of these Laws, is not it self a Law; but a necessary Medium, sine quo non, to the actual obligation of the Law. 3. And that there is no other Laws but these, is not a Law; but a point known by the non-promulgation of more. 4. And that all these Laws are the same that they pretend to be, and that they are not changed or deprayed since, this is not a Law neither, but a Truth to be proved by Common Reason, from the Evidences that may be brought from Records, Practise, and abundance more.

So is it in our Case, I. That God is True, and the Soveraign Rector, is first a point to be known by evidence; the one being the formal object of Faith, and the other the formal object of obedience: and easily proved by Natural Light, before we come to Scripture. 2. And that this is Gods Revelation, or Promulgation of his Lam, is a point also first to be proved by Reason, not before we see the Book or hear the Word, but out of the Book or Doctrine it self, (propria luce) together with the full Historical Evidence, and many other reasons, which in order of Nature lie before our Obligation fide diving to believe. So that this is not Primarily an Article of Faith, but somewhat higher, as being the Necessary Medium of our believing. 3. And that there is no other Law, or Faith, is not Primarily a Law or Article of Faith, but a Truth proved by the Non-Revelation or Promulgation of any other to the world. He that will prove us obliged to believe more, must prove the valid Promulgation or Revelation of more. 4. And that these Books are the same! and not corrupted, is not directly and primarily an Article of Faith, but an Historical verity to be proved as abovesaid. And yet secondarily, Scripture is a witness to all or most of these, and so they are de fide. But of this I refer the Reader for fuller satisfaction satisfaction to my Presace before my second Part of the Saints Reft.

And thus it is manifest, that it is an unreasonable demand of the Papists to call for express Scripture, for these that are not Articles of Faith in proper sence.

CHAP. XLIV.

Detect. 35. ONE of their Practical Deceits confisteth in the cheosing of such persons to dispute with, against whom they find that they have some notable advantage.

1. Commonly they deal with women and ignorant people in fecret, who they know are not able to gainfay their falfest filliest reasonings.

2. If they deal with a Minister, it is usually with one that hath some at least of these disadvantages. I. Either with some young or weak unfludyed man, that is not verst in their way of Controversie. 2. Or one that is not of so voluble and plausible a tongue as others. For they know how much the tonguing and toning of the matter doth take with the common people. 3. Or with one that hath a discontented people. that bear him some ill will, and are ready to hearken to any one that contradicteth him. 4. Or else with one that hath fixe upon some unwarrantable notions, and is like to deal with them upon terms that will not hold. And if they fee one hole in a mans way of arguings, they will turn all the brunt of the Contention upon that, as if the discovery of his peculiar Error or weakness were the Confutation of his Cause. And none give them greater advantage here, then those that run into some contrary extream. They think to be Orthodox by going as far from Popery as the furthest: About many notions in the matter of Justification, Certainty of Salvation, the nature of Faith, the use of Works, &c. they will be fure to go with the furthest. And a Jesuite will defire no better sport, then to have the baiting of one that holds any such opinion, as he knows himself easily able to disgrace. One unfound Opinion or Argument is a great difadvantage to the most learned Disputant. Most of all the insultings and success of the Papists, is from some such unsound passages that that they pick up from some Writers of our own (as I said before.) And they set all those together, and tell the world that This is the Protestant Religion. Just as if I should give the Description of a Nobleman from all the blemishes that ever I saw in any Nobleman. As if I have seen one crook-backt, another blind, another lame, another dumb, another deaf, another a whoremonger, another a drunkard, &c. I should say, that A Nobleman is a whoremonger, and drunkard, &c. that bath neither eyes, nor ears, nor limbs to bear him, &c. So deal they by Protestants; And what a Character could we give of Papilts on these terms?

But I would intreat all the Ministers of Christ to take heed of giving them any such advantage. By over-doing, and running too far into contrary extreams, you will sooner advantage them, and give them the day, then the weakest Disputants that stand on safer grounds. Inconsiderate heat, and self-conceitedness, and making a saction of Religion, is it that carryeth many into extreams: when Judgement, and Charity, and Experience, are all for Moderation, and standing on safe ground. A Davenant, a Lud. Crocius, a Camero, a Dallaus, &c. will more successfully consute an Arminian, then a Maccovius, a — so it is here. The world sees in the Answer of Knot, what an advantage Chillingworth had by his Principles; when the Jesuite having little but the reproachful slander of a Socinian name and cause to answer with, hath lost the day, and shewed the world how little can be said for Popery.

CHAP. XLV.

Detect. 36. A Nother of their Practical frauds is in seeking to Divide the Protestants among themselves, or to break them into Sects, or poyson the dustile fort with Heresies, and then to draw them to some odious practises, to cast a difgrace on the Protestant Cause.

In this and such Hellsth practises as this, they have been more successful then in all their Disputations. But whether the Cause be of Heaven or Hell that must be thus upheld, I leave to the considerate to judge.

What they have done abroad in this way, I leave others to enquire that are more fit; But we all smart by what they have done at home.

Yetthis I may well say, that if their own secular Priests are to be believed, (as Watson and many more) It is their Jesuites that have set many Nations in those stames, whose cause the world hath not observed. And I may well set down the words of a Priest of their own, John Brown, aged seventy two, in his Voluntary Confession to a Committee of Parliament, as it is in

Mr. Prins Introduct. pag. 202.

Saith he | The whole Christian world doth acknowledge the prediction which the University of Paris doth foresee in two several Decrees they made Anno 1565. When the Society of Jesuites did labour to be members of that University: Hoc genus hominum natus est ad interitum Christianæ Reipublicæ & subvertionem literarum. They were the only cause of the troubles which fell one in Muscovie, when under pretence to reduce the Latine Church. and plant themselves, and destroy the Greek Church, the poor King Demetrius and his Queen, and those that followed him from Polonia were all in one night murdered by the monstrous Usurper of the Crown, and the true progeny rooted out. They were the only cause that moved the Swedes to take Arms against their lawfull King Sigismund, and chased him to Poland: and neither he nor his successors were ever able to take possession of Sweden. For the fesuites intention was to bring in the Romish Religion, and root. out Protestants. They were the only cause that moved the Polonians to take Arms against the said Sigismund, because they had perswaded him to marry two sisters, one after the other; both of the house of Austria. They have been the sole cause of the war entered in Germany since the year one thousand six hundred and nineteen, as Pope Paulus 15. told the General of their Order, called Vicelescus, for their avarice, pretending to take all the Church lands from the Hussites in Bohemia to themselves; which bath caused the death of many thousand by sword, famine and pestilence. in Germany. They have been the canse of civil wars in France, during all which time moving the French King to take Arms against his own subjects the Protestants, where innumerable people have lost their lives, as the siege of Rochell and other places will give sufficient proof. For the fesuites intentions were to set their their society in all Cities and Towns conquered by the King, and quite to abolish the Protestants. They were the cause of the murder of the last King of France. They were the only projectors of the Gunpowder Treason, and their Penitents the actors thereof. They were the only cause (namely Father Parsons) that incensed the Pope to send so many sulminate Breves to these Kingdoms, to hinder the Oath of Allegiance and lawfull Obedience to their temporal Prince, that they might still sish in troubled waters. Their damnable doctrine to destroy and depose Kings, bath been the cause of the Civil wars, likely to befall these Kingdoms, if God in mercy do not stop it. So far the Popish Priest.

You see here, if their own pens are to be credited, those very Actions of the Swedes, Germans, French, which they cast as a reproach in the sace of the Protestant; (as you may see in a Book called The Image of the two Churches) were indeed their own, and to be laid at their own doors. I omit abundance of better proof, because I will give them the words of none but them-

How far they were the causes of the old broils in Scotland, Know, and Spotsmood, and all their later Histories will tell you.

How busie they were in England in Queen Elizabeths dayes, the Popes Bulls, and the many Treacheries committed fignifie. Even in King fames his dayes, who wrote against them, they so far prevailed, as to cause him to swear to those Articles for Toleration of Popery, in order to the Spanish Match, which you may read in Prins Introduct. pag. 44, 45. Yeaso far as to prevail with King fames before the Lords of his Council to fay, that [His Mother suffered Martyrdom in this Realm for the profession of the Catholick Religion; a Religion which had been publikely professed for many ages in this Realm, confirmed by many great and excellent Emperours, and famous in all Ecclesiastical Histories; by an infinite number of Martyrs, who had sealed it with their blood: that the Catholicks well knew that there was in him a grand affection to the Catholick Religion in so much that they believed at Rome that he did but dissemble his Religion to obtain the Crown of England: That now he had maturely confidered the penury and calamities of the Roman Catholicks, who were in the number of his faithfull subjects, and was resolved to relieve them; and therefore did from thenceforth take all his Roman Catholick subjects into his protection, permitting them the liberty and entire exercise of their Religion, and liberty to celebrate the Mass with other Divine offices of their Religion without any inquisition, process or molestation from that day forwards. And so he goes on restoring them to their estates, commanding all Officers to hold their hands, and for what cause so ever it be, not to attempt to grieve or molest the said Catholicks neither in publick or private in the liberty of the excercise of their Religion, upon pain of being reputed guilty of high Treason, &c.] Prinubi supplements of Mercur. Gal. To. 9. p. 485.

So far prevailed they with Prince Charls our late King, as to cause him to write that Letter to the Pope which you may read Mercur. Franc. To. 9. An. 1623. p. 509, $10. and in Prins Introduct. p. 38 which I have no mind to recite: and also they prevailed with him to swear to the Spanish conditions, and also that he would [permit at all times, that any should freely propose to him the Arguments of the Catholick Religion, mithout giving any impediment: and that he would never directly or indirectly permit any to speak to the Insanta against the

What a hand the Papists had in the late Innovations, and wars in England, and Scotland, and Ircland, is too evident. How they designed the reducing of England to the Pope in the Spanish, and after in the French match, and how in prosecution of it, they had their Nuntio's here at London, and erected their houses of Jesuites, Capuchins, and Nuns; how far they instigated the Court and Prelates to silence, and suspend, and banish Godly Ministers, and to ensnare them by the bowing to Altars, by the Book for dancing on the Lords dayes, and many such things; how far they urged them on against the Scots, I had rather you would read in Mr. Prins Works of Darkness brought to Light, and Canterburies Tryall, and his Romes Master piece, and his Royall Favorite, then hear it from me: And if any reader be disasted to the reciter of it, let them at least peruse impartially the Evidences produced by him.

It was one of their own Religion, who in remorfe of Conscience opened the Plot in which they were engaged, to Andreas ab Habernsield, Physician to the Queen of Bohemia, who told it Sr. Wil. Bos mell, the Kings Agent at Hague; which was to subvert

the Protestant Religion, and set up Popery, and reconcile us to Rome; and to that end to attempt the perverting of the King, and to engage us in a war with Scotland, and if the King would not be perverted, then to poyfon him.

The Sesuites (of whom four forts were planted in London, 2 and had built them a Colledge, having Cardinal Barbarino for their Protector) crept into all Societies, and acted all parts, (fave the peace-makers,) and being a forefeeing Generation, they looke further before them then the short witted men whom they over-reacht. When they had by the Countenance of the Queen got so considerable a strength at the Court, and so much interest in the Prelates, and influence on all Ecclesiastical affairs, they fet afoot the foresaid innovations in worship, against the Lords Day, &c. and the foresaid persecutions of faithfull, yea and conformable Ministers; and still they went Dilemmatically to work, thinking to make fure which way ever things went, to effects their ends. They fee that either their first attempt would prevail without opposition or not: If it do, then the Calvinifts, and Puritan, and Protestant Preachers will be removed, and the places filled with Arminians, and masked Papists, and ignorant men, unable to resist them, and dustile worldlings, that will alway be on the stronger side, and their ends will be easily attained. But if there be any Opposition, Murmuring, Discontents, either it will provoke the Discontented to open Defence and Resistance, or not: If not, their Discontents will hart none but themselves. If it do then either they will be crusht in the beginning, or able to bring it to a war. If the first; then we shall have the Day, and this to boot, that they will lie under the Odium of Rebeltion, and be trod the lower, and be the less able ever to rife: and we shall be able with ease to drive on the change to a bigher degree, in Opposition to so odious a party. But if they be able to mike a war of it, either they will be conquered, or conquer, or The last is most unlikely, because fealousies and make Peace. Engagements will presently be multiplyed, so that an apparent necessity will seem to lie on each party not to trust the other: And the flames are easier to be kept in, then kindled: And if so unlikes ly a thing should come to pass, yet it must needs be to our advantage... For me will openly all appear for the King, and so in England and Ireland me shall be considerable: He will remember that he was S1. 3 helps:

helpt by us, and look on the Protestants and Puritans as Rebels, and take his next advantage against them, or at least be at a greater distance from them then before: For such a war will never out of , his mind, nor will be think himself safe till be bath disabled them from doing the like again. But if one part conquer it will be the King, or the Puritans (for so the Protestants must now be caled) If the King prevail, then will the Puritans be totally trod down, and we by whose help the victory was got, shall certainly be incomparably better then we are, if not have presently allow will. For our fidelity will be predicated: the Rebells will be odious: So that their very names will be a scorn, and there will be no great resistance of us (For saith Mr. Middleton in his Letter to the A. B. of Canterb. in Prins Introduct. p. 142, 143. The Jesuite 'at Florence, lately returned from England, who pretends to have made a strict discovery of the state of England as it stands for Religion) saith, that the Puritans are shrewd fellows, but those which are counted good Protestants are sair conditioned honest men, and think they may be saved in any Religion.) But if the Puritans get the day (which is a most unlikely thing) yet shall me make great advantage of it; For 1. They will be unsettled and all in pieces, and not know how to settle the Government: And saith the Jesuites Letter, found in the A. B. of Cant. Study in Prins Introduct. pag. 89, 90. [Our foundation must be Mutation: this will cause a Relaxation; which serves as so many violent diseases, as the Stone, Gout, &c. to the speedy destruction, &c. 7. 2. We shall necessitate the Puritan Protestants to keep the King as a Prisoner, or else to put him to death; If they keep him as a Prisoner, his diligence, and friends, and their own divisions, will either work his deliverance, and give him the day again by our help, or at least will keep the State in a continual unsettledness, and will be an Odium on them. If they cut him off (which we will rather promote, left they should make use of his extremities to any advantage) then 1. We shall procure the Odium of King-killing to fall upon them, which they are wont to cast upon us and so shall be able to disburden our selves. 2. And we shall have them all to pieces in distractions. For 3. Either they will then set up a new King, or the Parliament will keep the power, changing the Government into a Democracy. The first cannot be done without great concussions, and new wars; and we Ball shall have opportunity to have a hand in all. And if it be done, it may be much to our advantage. The second will apparently by factions and distractions give us footing for continual attempts. But to make all sure, we will secretly have our party among the Puritans also, that we may be sure to maintain our Interest which may ever the world go The event with common reason and many full discoveries shew, that this was the frame of the Papilts plot.

And what power and interest they had in the Kings Armies and Counsels in the wars, is a thing that needs no further discovery. But had they any Interest in the Councils and Forces of the Parliament? Answ. It will be expected that he that afferteth any thing in matters of this moment, should prove it by more then moral evidence of greatest probabilities: and therefore I shall be sparing in my Affertions: But yet I shall say in general that though the business would be troublesome, chargeable and tedious, to call together the Witnesses that are necessary, yet Witnesses and Evidences may behad, to prove that the Papists have had more to do in our affairs, then most men areaware of. without any positive Assertions; therefore I desire them that can see a cause in its effects, but to follow these streams till they find the Fountain. 1. Whence came those motions against the Ministry and Churches into our Councils? Whence was it that so many men of note did call the friends of the Ministry [Priest ridden fellows] and the Ministers [fack Presbyters] to teach the Nation to bring them into fcorn? I well know that all this came from Hell. But whether by the way of Rome. I leave to your inquiry. Yea, whence was it that motions have been made to pull down all the Ministry at once? Was this by Protestants?

2. Whence came the doctrine contended for by Sir H.V. and others, against the Power of the Magistrate in matters of Religion, and for Universal Liberty in Religion? I know the Papists are not for such liberty in Spain, or any where, where they can hinder it: but with all I know, that it is one of their fundamentals, that such matters belong only to the Pope and Prelates, and Magistrates must but be their Executioners; and I know that its truly the Magistrates Power for which the usurping Pope contendeth: and I know that the Papists are most Zealous for Liberty of Conscience in England, though deadly enemies to it elsewhere.

3. And:

3. And whence came the Hiders Body of Divinity, that hath infected so many high and low? How come so many called Seekers to seem to be at a loss; whether there be any Scripture, Church, or Ministry? or which be they?

4. How came we contrived into a war with Scotland and Holland, when we could keep Peace with Spain? with them, or us, or both, there was some forry cause.

5. How came our Armies so corrupted with principles of impiety, Licentiousnels and Anarchy, that so many turned Levellers (to say nothing of all the rest), and rose up against their Commanders, and were sain to be subdued by sorce; and some of them short to death, and many cashiered? &c.

6. How came it to pass that Papists have been discovered in our Armies, and in the several parties in the Land?

7. And where are the swarms of the English Jesuites and Fryars, that are known to have emptyed themselves upon us from their Colledges beyond Sea?

8. How came it to pass, that the Petitions of the Protestant Presbyters of London, and of other Protestants for the Life of the King, could not be heard? but that the Levelling party carryed on their work, till they had set the forreign and domestick Papists on reproaching the Protestants as King-killers? and had (though very falsely) turned the odium of that horrid kind of crime upon the innocent Protestants, which the Papists are known to be most deeply guilty of: And now in all Nations they make the ignorant people believe, that the death of that King was the work of the Protestants or Presbyterians, and the blot of their Religion.

9. Whence came it to pass, that Levelling went on with continued success till the House of Lords, with the Regal Office was taken down, and an engagement put (on all those ducile souls that would take it) to be [True to the Common-wealth, as established without a King or House of Lords? 7 to Whence came it that the Weekly News Books contained the Letters of the Agents of the Agitators from France, telling us how good men the Jesuites were, and how agreeable to them in their principles for a Democracy, (which they vainly call a Republick, as if there were no Common-wealth, but a Democracy) and telling us what exceeding meet materials for such a Common-

Common-wealth the Jesuites would be. The Agencies of particular men with Jesuites I shall purposely omit.

11. Whence came it that all the maddest dividing parties had their liberty; and the reproach and envy was most against the united Ministry? and if the Lord Protector had not stept in, they had been likely to be taken down.

12. And whence came it that Sexby, and others, that have been Souldiers in our Armies, have confederated with Spain to murder the Lord Protector? And whence came their Jesuitical Treasonable Pamphlets (such as Killing no Murder) provoking men to take away his life?

Much more may be proposed tending to a discovery, how far the Papists have crept in among us, and had to do in our affairs. But I think God hath yet much more in season to discover. Truth is the daughter of time.

As concerning the death of the King, I shall not meddle at this time with the Cause, nor meddle with the Reasons brought for it or against it. But, suppose as bad of it as you can, the Providence of God hath so contrived it, that nothing but ignorance or blind malice can lay it upon the Protestants, Episcopal, or Presbyterian, that strove so much against it, and suffered so much for it as they have done. When many on the other side, charged the Scots, and the imprisoned Ministers of London, with those that were put to death, for going too far on the other side, in manifesting their distastes: Of which I take not on me to be judge, but mention it only as Evidence that clears them from the deed.

And to vindicate the Protestants openly before all the world, and to all posterity, from that Fact, it is most publikely known, I. That both Houses of Parliament in their Protestations engaged themselves and the Nations, to be true to the King. 2. That they openly professed to mannage their war for King and Parliament: Not against his Person or Authority, but against Delinquents that were fled from Justice, and against evill Counsellors. 3. That the two Nations of England and Scotland did in the midst of the wars swear in the Solemn League and Covenant to he true to the King. 4. That the Committees, Commanders, Ministers and people through the Land, prosessed openly to go only on these terms, as managing but a defensive war against the Kirgs miscarriages, but an Offensive against Delinquent subjects. 5. In that it was known that the Army was quite altered (not only by a new modelling, but) by an inteltine Jesuitical corrupting of multitudes of the Souldiers, before this Odious fact could be done. 6. And it was known, that the corrupted part of the Army, though the fewer, did so excell the rest in industry and activity, that thereby they hindered their opposition. 7. And it is known that the Tesuited part (that afterward so many of them turn'd Levellers) did draw into them the Anabaptifts, Libertines, and other Sects, upon a conjunction of Interests, and by many fly pretenses, especially tying all together by the predicated Liberty for all Religions. 8. And yet after all this, the world knows they were fain before they could accomplish it, to Master the City of London, to Master the Parliament, to imprison and cast out the Members, and to retain but a few that were partly of their mind, and partly seduced or over-awed by them, to joyn with them in the work. 9. It is known that before they were put out, and imprisoned by the Army, the Commons voted the Kings Concessions in the Treaty to be so far satisfactory, as that they would have proceeded on them towards a full Agreement. See Mr. Prins large Speech in the House to that end. And if they had not suddenly been secluded and imprisoned, they had agreed with the King. 10. And it is well known to all that dwell in England, that before and fince the doing of it, the thing is disowned, distasted and detested by the main Body of the English Nation, Nobility, Gentlemen, Ministers and people: Yea, to my knowledge multitudes that are now. firm and loval to the present Power, supposing it to be set over us by God, (and therefore would abhor the like practifes against them) do yet detest that fact that intervened and made way to it. So that experience may fatisfie all men, that Protestants, even those called Paritans, were the Enemies, and not the AEters of it. 11. And it is well known how the Protestant Ministers that had engaged in the war for King and Parliament, were fo great Adversaries to the putting of the King to death, that they opposed it, and disswaded from it, and thereby drew the Odium of the Corrupted part of the Army upon them; and that the London Ministers unanimously concurred in an Address co

the Lord Fairfax to prevent it, and printed their abhorrence of it, and published it to the world: And that many of them were imprisoned, and Mr. Love beheaded, and many others put to death, or other sufferings, for being against these designs, and endeavouring to oppose the progress of them. 12. And lastly, it is known, that the Kingdom of Scotland disowned it from first to last, and so far proceeded in opposition to it, and in adhesion to the ancient line, as cost them the miseries of a grievous war, and a conquest of their Kingdom. I speak but of the matter of fact that is known to the world. So that it is against all humane Reason and Equity, that when we have all sworn to the contrary, and endeavoured it, and the Parliament men of one Kingdom are fecluded, and Imprisoned for it, and the other Kingdom conquered for it, and the Protestants still generally disown it, that yet it should be charged on the Protestants, or their Religion, that they put to death their King. This is most unreasonable injustice; especially from those men that were the causers of it.

I do therefore leave it here to posterity (having been my felf a member of the Army four years, or thereabouts) that it was utterly against the mind and thoughts of Protestants, and those that they called Puritans, to put the King to death; the twelve Evidences fore-mentioned are undenvable Arguments that it was the work of Papists, Libertines, Vanists, and Anabaptifts, and that the Protestants deeply suffered by opposing it; as the face of Scotland and England sadly testifie to this day. And yet (though we have such open Evidence that this cannot be charged on our Religion or us), I must needs adde, that every wife man fees that the Case it self much differs from the Papilts. If the Body of a Common-wealth, or those that have part in the Legislative Power, and so in the Supremacy, should unwillingly be engaged in a war with the Prince, and after many years blood and desolations, judicially take away his life as guilty of all this blood, and not to be trusted any more with Government, and all this they do, not as private men, but as the remaining Soveraign Power, and fay they do it according to the Laws; undoubtedly this case doth very much differ from the Powder-plot, or Papilts murdering of Kings, and teaching that its lawful for a private hand to do it, if he be but an Heretick, or be but deposed, year or excommunicated by the Pope. A war and a treacherous murder are not all one: Nor is a part of the Soveraign Power all one with a private hand, or forreign Prelate, pretending to a Dominion over the lives and states of Princes, and over the Kingdoms of the world, and that the Vice-chrift, and Vice-God on earth.

It is a grievous case that the Senate or Body of a Nation should think themselves necessitated to defend themselves, and the Church and State against their Prince, or any that act by his commands. It will strongly tempt them to think that the end is to be preferred before the Means; and that it ceaseth to be a Means which is against and destructive to the End: and that it is effentiall to a Governing Power to be for the common good: and therefore that it is no Authority which is used against it: It will tempt them also to think that God never gave power to any against himself or above his Laws, or against the Ends of Government. And a Senate or the Body of a Nation will be apt to think themselves fit to discern when the publick safety is dangerously affaulted; and will hardly be brought to trust any One to be the final Judge of their Necessity, as thinking such a publike Necessity proves it self, and needs no judge but sence and reason to discern it. And if they also think that the sundamental Constitution of the Government doth make the Senate the highest Judge of the safety or danger of the Republick, and fo that the Law is on their fide, and that it is Treason against the Common-wealth (and as Politicians say, against the Majestas Realis) to rife against them; the temptation then is much the stronger. And where the Legislative power, and highest Judiciall power is by the Constitution of the Government divided between the Prince and Senate, and so the Soveraignty divided . many will be ready to think with Groting de jure Belli, lib. 1. 6. 13.p 91. that the Prince invading the Senates right, may justly be resisted, and may lose his right : Quod locum (faith Grotius) habere censeo, etiamsi dictum sit, belli potestatem penes Regem fore: Id enim de bello externo intelligendum est: cum alioqui quisquis Imperii summi jus partem habeat, non possit, non jus habere, eam partem tuendi. Quod ubi fit , potest Rex etiam suam Imperii partem belli jure amittere.] And indeed when a war is once begun, the difficulty of re-uniting is exceeding great: If a Prince engage either hired strangers, or fugitives, or homebred delinquents, or others, to rife up against the Senate or people, either its lawfull to Defend themselves by Arms; or not, If not (especially if they have a share in the Soveraignty) then is his power absolute and unlimited, and neither Laws nor any thing below are any fecurity against his will to the common safety (The contrary whereto our late King declared in his notable Answer to the nineteen Propositions.) But if their Defence be lawfull, then if their Souldiers must know before hand, that if they do purchase a victory by their blood, when they have all done they must be all Governed by him whom they have conquered, and lye at his Mercy, they would hardly ever have an Army to defend them: For who will do the utmost that is. possible to exasperate him that he knows must rule him when all is done? I speak not this by way of Justification, or any way deciding such cases as these, but leaving that (as a controversie that I am not here to decide) to the judgement of others. I only shew the world again that there's a great deal of difference between such a war and conquest of a Prince by the Senate and Body of the people, and their allowing Popes to depose them and alienate their Dominions, and private men to rebell, and to murder them, if the Pope consent or excommunicate them. Whether they were in the right or wrong, I am not the judge, but furely it was the judgement of the Parliament, that upon the Division, the power was in them to defend themselves and the Commonwealth, and suppressall subjects that were in Arms against them; and that those that did resist them, did resist the higher powers, set over them by God, and therefore were guilty of the damnation of refisters: And this they assured the people was the Truth. And the forecited concessions of the King, (against the nineteen Propositions) acknowledging their part in the Legislative power and defence of the people, (which is known to be the highest part of Soveraignty,) did much incline many to believe the Parliament: Especially knowing that they had so long exercised the said Legislative power, and that we were all governed by Laws of their making. So that those that did obey the Parliament, did verily think that they obeyed the highest power that upon the division was left in the Common-wealth; and that they had the Laws on their side, and Tt3 did adhere to the Common good, which is the end of Government.

And as they have thus caused our wars, and miseries, and scandals, so have they continued to multiply sees among us of all forts; so that there is scarce a seet but is a spawn of the Jesuites and Fryars; and scarce an honest party but they creep in among them to work their ends. And here I shall briefly mention some of the parties with whom they have infinuated to work their ends, and then some of the sees that they have bred or animated.

I. As for the old English Bishops and conformable Ministers, who were of the saith and doctrine publikely here professed, I confess I find but little evidence that ever the Papists had much to do with them, save only to instigate them against the Puritans, and draw some of them to a complyance with such as did out-go them. Yet in their times Bishop Goodman of Glocester was suspected to be a Papist, and so professed himself by his last Testament at his death, since the wars.

2. As for the Presbyterians, I do not fee any reason to think that ever the Papists had any interest in them of any men, there being none that they more hate then these two sorts (the old sound Episcopal men, and the Presbyterians) But yet both in France and Scotland they have cunningly wrought upon them ab extra, alarming them into disturbances by the wild-sire which they bave cast in.

3. As for the new Episcopal party that followed Grotine (Arminius in doctrine) and the Greek Church, and were for a reconciliation with Rome, on those terms (which doubtless Rome would never have yielded to) the interest that the Papists had among them, and influence that they had on them or their proceedings, is evident from what is said before; and much from the copious Proofs produced by Mr. Prin in his forementioned Book (Canterburies Tryal, with the Introduct.) The Jesuites Letter cited by Prin, ib. pag. 89. saith [Now me have planted that Soveraign drugg Arminianism, which we hope will purge the Protestants from their herese, and it flourisheth and bears fruit in due season.] The Articles exhibited in Parliament against many of the Bishops will tell you by their works who were the instigators of them. Of themselves I know of none but Goodman that hath professed himself a stat Papist; and I shall not think it my duty to suspect any one man of holding an Opinion which he professeth not himself, unless the evidence be very strong to move suspection. But that many Papists were at work with them in that pretended Reconcilement, Francis. à S. Clara and divers others put us past doubt. And that Papists crept into places in the Church under the garb of conformable Arminians, is too well known. It is no wonder therefore that Dr. Baily, Dr. Gosse, Dr. Vane, Hugh Paul de Cressy, and many more of them did opnely revolt when the game seemed to be spoiled that was plaid underboord. It had been far less hurt to us I think if all the rest had been as open.

As for the King himself that was their Head, if any conjecture that he was a flat Papist, as I have heard many rashly say, I think there is much evidence to confute them. I. That very Letter to the Pope (forementioned) on which the suspicion is most grounded, if you mark it exactly, doth intimate no more then a defire of a union and Reconciliation, with some additions that may bear a tolerable sence. 2. His own Profession of the Prote. stant Religion is sufficient evidence. 3. His Disputation with the Marquels of Worcester cleareth it. 4. His speech at death, and Papers since published clear it more. So that I think we may be confident that he was no nearer to Rome then was the reconcilable part of the Greeks: and that he desired no more then Bishop Brombal, and other of his Bishops offer them, to have the Church governed by Patriarcks, and the Pope to be Principium Unitatis, &c. If any would know what Party Grotins was of. I defire them carefully to perule but these places in his writings (which I have cited elsewhere) Discuss. Apolog. Rivet. pag. 255. & pag. 7. & vot. pro Pace, pag. 1, 2, 3. And of hisfriends in England among the Bishops in Paris and all France, in Germany and Poland. See Discus. Apol. Rives. pag. 16 and my Discovery of Grotius Religion.

Yea for my own part I am perswaded, that the Papists were as much asraid of King Charls and the Grotian design, as of any thing that of long time hath been hatcht against them. They are not all of a mind at home. The French and moderate party no doubt applauded the design, and liked such writings as S. Clara's, and would gladly have married

England

England and France in Religion. But others (the Italian , Spanish Jesuited party) might easily foresee what danger was in brewing for them. Had France, England, Sweden, Denmark, and the German Lutherans agreed together, to bear down the Calvinists as unreconcilable on one side (as Grotins intimates it necessary) and the Italians and their adherents that fer up the Pope above a Council, on the other side, it would have made the Pope afraid, as no doubt he was. For though he was glad that we would draw neerer him, and make him the Head in any fort, yet he knew not how to stop fo great an inundation as was like upon the union to over-flow him. And hence was the malice of the Jesuites against the life of the King (and withall that he was fain into fuch hands where he was like to do them little service.) Secret. Windebanks Letter recited by Prin, ubi sup. rells us that it was the fesuites that were the death of Father Leander, and so were the Enemies of Francis. S. Clara and his Book. (which caused it to incur a Roman Censure) So that with one part of them that is the best way, which the other is more afraid of then of Protestants. We see it by the Jansenian contest. We see it in that Cassander, Erasmus, Vives, &c. are excellent Catholicks with some of them, and Heretical and vile with the rest.

4. The perfecuted Nonconformists of the Protestant party, though they were most adverse to the Papilts, yet had some of the Popish brood at last crept in among them, not only to spie out their minds and wayes, but to head the party, and fow among them the feeds of further discontent and error, and to make them a Nursery for various seas. For every where by their good wils the Jesuites will have some. If you ask me for my proof of this, I shall at this time give you but these two. 1. The fruits that fprung up from among them, and the manner of Production, (of which more anon.) 2. The words of the Jesuites Letter recited by Mr. Prin, Introd. pag. 90. [I cannot choose but laugh to see how some of our own coat have re-incountred themselves: you would scarce know them if you saw them; and it is admirable how in Speech and gesture they act the Puritans: The Cambridge Schollars to their mofull experience shall see, we can act the Puritans a little better then they have done the fesuites: they have abused our facred Patron St. Ignatius in jest, but we will make them smart

for it in earnest. I hope you will excuse my merry digression, for I confess to you I am at this time transported with joy, to see how happily all instruments and means, as well great as lesser co-operate to our purposes.] Yet cannot I hear of any considerable insection among this party that way before Sir Henry Vane's dayes.

5. How far they crept into all Societies under the name of Independants, is opened by so many already in Print, that I shall add no more of it.

6. And its a thing notorious, that they have crept in among the Anabaptists, and somented that Sect. The story of the Scottish Missionary that pretended himself a Jew, and gave the Anabaptists the glory of his Conversion, and Rebaptizing at Hexham, and was discovered at Newcastle, is published and commonly known: (whether he be yet in Prison, or releast, I know not.) And too many more have more cleanly plaid their game. And though many of the more sober Anabaptists would not be so useful to the Papists as they expected, yet multitudes of them too far answered their expectations.

If you ask now what the Papists get by all this, I answer. you see in the Instance but of this one sect, and the products of 1. By this means our Councils, Armies, Churches have been divided, or much broken. 2. By this trick they have engaged the minds and tongues of many (and their hands if they had power) against the Ministry, which is the enemy that standeth in their way. 3. They have thus weakned us by the loss of our former adherents. 4. They have found a Nursery or Seminary for their own Opinions, which one half of the Anabaptists too greedily receive. 5. By this they have prepared them for more and worse. 6. By this means they get an Interest in our Armies, or weakned our own. 7. By this they have got Agents ready for mischievous designs (as hath been lately too manifest.) 8. By this they have cast a reproach upon our Profession, as if we had no unity or consistence, but were vertiginous for want of the Roman pillar to rest upon. 9. By this they have loofned and disaffected the common people, to see so many minds and waies, and hear fo much contending, and have looft them from their former stedfastness, and made them ready for a new impression. 10. Yea by this means they have the opportunity of Predicating their own pretended unity, and hereby have drawn many to their Church of late. All this have they got at this one game. What then have they got by all the rest?

I shall next tell you of some of those Heresies or parties among us, that are the Papists own Spawn or progeny; Either they laid the Egg, or hatched it, or both.

And I. It is most certain that Libertinism or Freedom for all Religions, was spawned by the Jesuites, who hate it in Spain and Italy, but love it in England. I have met with the masked Papists my self that have been very zealous and busic to promote this Liberty of Conscience (as they deceitfully called it.) For by this means they may have Liberty for themselves, and Liberty to break us in pieces by sects, and also Liberty under the Vizor of a Sectary of any tolerated fort, to oppose the Ministry and doctrine of truth.

2. But the principal design that the Papists have upon our Religion, at this day, is managed under a fort of Juglers, who all are confederate in the same grand principles, and are busie at the same work, and are agreed to carry it on in the dark, and with wonderfull secrecy do conceal the principal part of their opinions; but yet they use not all one vizor, but take on them several shapes and names, and some of them industriously avoid The principal of these Hiders are these following. I. The Vani, whose game was first plaid openly in America in New England, where God gave in his Testimony against them from Heaven upon their two Prophetesses, Mrs. Hutchinson, and Mrs. Dyer: The later brought forth a Monster with the parts of Bird, Beast, Fish and Man, which you may see described in Mr. Welds Narrative, with the discovery, the concomitants and Consequents. The former brought forth many (neer 30.) monstrous births at once, and was after flain by the Indians. This providence should at least have awakened England to such a Godly Jealousie, as to have better tryed the doctrines which God thus seemed to cast out, before they had so greedily entertained them, as in part of Lincolnshire, Cambridgeshire, and many other parts they have done. At least it should have wakened the Parliament to a wife and Godly Tealoufie of the Counfels and defigns of him that was in New England, the Master of the game, and to have carefully searcht how much of his doctrine and design were from heaven, and how much of them he brought with him from Italy, or at least was begotten by the Progenitor of Moosters. Such extraordinary providences are not to be despised. They had a great Operation in New England among those wise and godly men that saw them, or were reer them, and knew the wayes of them that God thus testified against. That which healed them should have warned us. But God had a judgement for us, and therefore we were less in blindness, to overlook that Judgement that should have warned us. They are now dispersed in Court, City, and Country, and what God will suffer them, and the Papists by them surther to do, time will discover.

2. The next fort of Hiders, are the Paracesians, Weigelians, and Behmenists, who go the same way in the main with the former, and are indeed the same party, but think meet to take another name, and setch their vizor from Jacob Behmen: of their life of Community, and Chastity, and Visible converse (as they profess) with Angels, you may see somewhat in the Narrative of Dr. Pordiage of himself, together with Mr. Fowlers of him. The most clean and moderate piece of their doctrine that hath been lately published, is Mr. Bromleyes way to the Sabbath of Rest; or Treatise of Regeneration.

3 Another fort of the Hiders are those called Seekers, among whom I have reason to believe the Papists have not the least of their strength in England at this day. They practife the lesson that Boverius in Apparat. ad Consultat. taught Prince Charls long ago [Primum est, ut quoniam vera Religio tibi inquirenda est, antequam ad eam investigandam accedas, omnem prius Religionem apud te suspectam habeas: lubeatg; tamdin à Protestantium fide ac Religione animum ac voluntatem suspendere, quamdin in veri inquisitione versaris ---] We must suspect all Religion it feems, and be first of no Religion, if we will become Papists. A fair begining! We must then be unchristned, and suspect Christ and Scripture, that we may be espoused to the Pope. this is the Papills work by the Seekers, to take us off from all, or from our former Religion, and blocout all the old impressions, thie we may be capable of new. And if they can accomplish this, they have us at a fair advantage. For he that is not a Uu 2 stark stark Atheist or Infidel, but believes that he hath a foul to save or lofe, must needs know the Necessity of seeking his Salvation in some Religion or other: and therefore take him off from this, and you must needs bring him to some other: And he that could prevail to take him off his old Religion, is likeliest to have so much interest in him as may also prevail to bring him to another. And the Papill thinks that on the pretence of Unity. Antiquity and Universality (of which indeed they have but a delusory shew) they can put as fair for him that is once indifferent as any other can.

Of these Seekers there are these Sub-divisions, or Sects. The first and most moderate do only profess themselves to be Seekers for the true Church and Ministry; holding that such a Church and Ministry there is, but they are at a loss to know which is it. A likely thing it is indeed, that men that take themselves for extraordinary wife, should think there is existent such a Church and Ministry as they predicate, and yet have no conjecture which it is. As if they should believe that there is such a creature as the Moon, but be not able to know it from the Stars.

The second fort of Seekers are to seek whether there be any Organized Political Church, or any Ministry, or any Ordinances proper to a Church at all, or not. Not denying them, but Doubting and Seeking; that so when they have found them at Rome, they may prove but Finders, and not gross changlings: And withall they yield that private men may Declare the Word, and pray together, and read the Scripture. The most rational and modest that hath wrote for this way, is the Author of A fober Word to a Serious People A likely thing indeed it is, that fo rational a man should heartily believe, that Christ hath planted fo excellent a Ministry, and Church, and Ordinances as himself describeth, and to those flanding necessary uses which he mentioneth, even instead of Christ, to take men into the holy Covenant, and yet that all should be left but for an Age or two, and that ever fince there is no fuch thing, or at least, no certainty of it. The Stile shews us that this Author is no such dotard as to think as he speaks.

3. Another fort of Seekers are those that do not only Doubt of, but flatly deny any Ministry, and Political Churches, and Church-ordinances on Earth, as things that are lost in an Uniq. 4. Anoversal Apostacy.

4. Another fort of Seekers do not only doubt of, or deny these Particular Churches and Ordinances, but also they are to feek for the Universal Church it self, and the hely Scriptures: yea many of them not only Questioning them, but flatly maintaining, that we have no certainty that the Scripture is true, or that we have the same that was written by the Apollies, or that there is such a thing as a true Ministry, or State of Christianity in the World. Hence it is that some of them pour out so many reproaches against the Ministry and the Holy Scriptures. as you may find in Clem. Writer, in two ignorant Pamphless, that have scorn in the very Titles, as well as through the bulk : one called. The fus Divinum of Presbyterie; and the other Fides Divina: In which he maintaineth the cause of the Infidels. The opinion which this fort of men openly profess, is, that no particular man is bound to believe the Gospel, but those that have themselves seen Mirasles to confirm it: and therefore in the first ages when Miracles were wrought, those that saw them were bound to believe in Christ, and at the second coming of Christ, when again he shall be witnessed by Miracles, it will again become a duty to be Christians: but not to others that see no Miracles, however they may hear of them. This doctrine Clem. Writer hath professed to me with his own mouth. But I may not censure him to be so weak as to believe himself. ble that such a filly soul may be found, that shall think that Christ came into the world to set up Christianity as the true Religion for those only in an Age or two, or more, that saw Miracles; but it's unlikely that a man that hath any confiderable use of his reason should be so filly. Who will not despise Christ that thinks he came on fo low a defign? Who would not be an Infidel, that thinks ten thousand Infidels are saved for one Christian? Yea who can be himself a Christian, that thinks that he is not bound to be a Christian, because he sees not Miracles? It's most evident therefore that this is but a Juggle, and that fuch are either Infidels or Papists. Infidelity is the thing professed, and therefore that we take them for Infidels, they cannot blame us: But yet in Charity I hope (and not without cause) that some of this Profession are but Papists; though others? have found to be desperate Infidels.

A fifth fort called Seekers also there are, that own the Churc and Ministery, and Ordinances; but yet suppose themselves above them: for they think that these are but the Administrations of Christ to men in the passage to a higher state, and that such as have received the Spirit, and have the Law once written in their hearts, are under (as they call it) the second Covenant, and so are pass the lower form of Ordinances, Scripture, Ministerior

ry, and visible Churches.

And a fixth fort of Seekers there are that think the whole company of believers should now be over-grown the Scripture, Ministry and Ordinances: For they think that the Law was the Fathers Administration, and the Gospel Ministry and Sacraments are the Sons Administration, and that both these are now past, and the season of the Spirits Administration is come, which all must attend, and quit the lower forms. The David-Georgians were the chief that taught the world this lesson, their Leader taking himself to be the Holy Ghost. All these sorts of Seekers are bred or cherished by the fesuites and Fryars. And the truth is, when a man is made a Seeker, he is half made a Papist: As a Dog when he hath lost his Master will follow almost any body that will whiftle him; so when men have lost their Ministry, Church and Religion, they are easily allured to the Church of Rome: For they are a body as conspicuous to a carnal eye as any other. And who will not rather be of the Roman Church and Religion then of none?

4. Another fort of Hiders are the Quakers; an impudent Generation, and open enough in pulling down; but as secret and reserved as the rest in asserting and building up. What interests the Papists have in breeding and feeding this Sect among us, bath been partly proved from the Oaths of Witnesses, and Confessions of Fryars, and somewhat I have spoken of it in three several Papers against them. The Doctrine of this fourth sort is the same, or scarse discernable from the rest.

5. A fifth fort of Hiders, are those Enthusiass, that shun the affected bombasted language of Behmen, and such like, but yet give us much of the body of Popery, Headed by an infallible Prophetick Spirit, instead of the Pope. Such as the Authors of the Book against the Assemblies Confession, owned by Parker, but said to be written by a London Doctor: And many such Doctors I know and hear of abroad in England. They take on them to be adversaries to the Pope; but they are friends to his Doctrines, and maintain the necessity of an infallible living Judge, and send us to Prophets for this infallible judgement. And could the Papists bring men once to this, it's an easie matter to strike off the the seigned Prophetick head, by disgracing such as meer fantasticks, and to set on the ancient Papal Head, which only will agree with the Body which they have received. So much of the Libertines and the Hiders of their Religion, (of several sorts).

3. Another fort that are spawned by the Papists, are stark Heathens, Atheists, or Infidels: These carry their judgement asto the positive part as close as any of the relt, and are grown in England to a far greater number and strength then is commonly imagined. It is not only Leviathan or his Ocean that is guilty of this Apoltasie, (however they use the name of Christ) but abundance that lurk under several names. A great while I knew not what to make of this close. Generation; but now I have found out that which should make a believing tender heart to bleed: even gross Infidelity, causing them secretly to fcorn at Christ and the holy Scripture, and the life to come, as bitterly as ever Inlian did: And this is crept so high, and spred so far, that it is dreadful to those few that are acquainted with its progress. Some that have lately professed to turn Papifts (for what ends I know not) are known to be stark Infidels: And some that have long gone for leading men with them. have fatisfied us by their writings that they are Romanists of the most ancient strain; even of the Roman Religion that was ancienter then Peter and Paul. And many of the unfetled fort of Protestants, are so sar forsaken of God, as to Apostatize to the same condition. Montaleus the Jansenian takes the Tesuites for falle unworthy calumniators, for giving out that they have long had a defignat Port-Royal to overchrow the Gospel, and fet un Infidelity and meer Deilm. But I am sure they deserve much harder words of us in England, between them, for doing so much to destroy the Christianity of many, in order tothe fetting up of Popery. I do not charge it all and only on the Papills. I know the Devil bath more forts of Instruments then one: But that they have had a notable hand in this Apostasie, we have good reason to satisfie us. Not that they defire that men should be absolutely and finally Infidels: But I. they would make the world believe; that all must be Infidels that will not receive the Christian Faith upon the Roman account and terms: And in order to this they industriously seek to disgrace the Scripture, and overthrow all the grounds of the Faith of fuch as they dispute with. And so make them Infidels in order to the proof of that their affirmation. 2. And then they think that they must take them off all Religion (as Boverius afore cited) to prepare them for the Popish Religion. 3. And the malice of some of them is such, that they had rather men were Infidels then Protestants; or at least they will venture them upon Infidelicy in the way, rather than not take them off from being Protestants. And no wonder, when they allow Infidels fo much more charity then Protestants, as to their salvation, as all the Authors cited by S. Clara before do fignifie: And when Rome burneth Protestants, but giveth toleration for Tems. And thus by these Devilish devices, the Hiders in England that keep close their Religion, are discovered at last to be one part of them Infidels or Heathens, and another part of them Papifts. And no wonder if they would lately have introduced the Jews here into England, and if they have so many other designs to promote this Apostasie.

4. Another fort that Popery hath here hatch or cherished are the Socinians; a Sect with whom both Papists and Heathens do joyn hands, as the Bond of their Conjunction. Yet I know that they were not bred at first by Popery: and I know that the genuine Papist that holds fast the Articles of their Faith, must needs disown the Socinian: But however it comes to pass, I am sure there are too many of late (self-conceited men, innovaters in Philosophie) that have reduced their Theologie to their novel Philosophie, and expounded Scripture by such con-ceits as fuit with the Socinians.

I shall say nothing of the Millenaries, the Levellers, and many such like. But here in the close, I would desire any Papist that is conscious of the promoting of any of these fore-mentioned abominations, to tell us whether this be like to be the way of God? Or whether Peter or Paul did ever take such a course as this to plant the Gospel, or build up the Church? And whether it he like to be the Cause of God that must be maintained by such means ? Is not their damnation just, that say, Let us do evill that good may come thereby? Should not the means be suited to the end? Hath the glory of God any need of a lie? This course will never ingratiate your opinions with any wise considerate men. This is but working with the Devil for God: like one that doth consult with a Witch or Conjurer, to find the goods of the Church when they are stoln. Do you think God needs the Devils help? Or is it like to be help that comes from him? But the truth is, it is your bad Cause that requires these evils means: and it is your bad hearts that set you on work to use them: Though you think perhaps that you do God service by it, yet you know not what Spirit you are of. Christ owneth not such ways as these, and therefore his servants will not own them.

CHAP. XLVI.

Detect. 37. A Nother Practical fraud of the Papists is, In hiding themselves and their Religion, that they may do their work with the more advantage.

1 shall tell you briefly, 1. The way by which they do this, and 2. The advantage they get by it. And 3. Help you to detect them.

t. The principal means by which they conceal themselves is, By thrusting themselves into all Sects and Parties, and putting on the vizor of any side, as their cause requireth. It's well known that formerly we had abundance of them that went under the name of Protestants, and were commonly called by the name of Church-Papiss: But there is great reason to think that there are more such now. Some of them are Prelatists, and some of them call themselves Independents: some creep in among the Anabapsists; and some go under the cloak of Arminians, and some of Socinians, and some of Millenaries, and all the other seeks before mentioned. They animate the Vanists, the Behmenists, and other Enthusiasts, the Seekers, the Quakers, the Origenists, and all the Juglers and Hiders of the times: It is they that keep life in Libertinisms, and in Insidelity it self. Among every every one of these parties you may find them, if you have the skill of unmasking them.

2. Another way of Hiding themselves is, by having a Dispenfation to come to any of our Assemblies, or join in worship with any party, good or bad : Or elfe they will prove it lawfull without a Dispensation, where the Pope interdicteth it not. And their way is this: that all the old known Papists, especially of the poorer fort, shall be still forbidden to come to our Assemblies, lest they bring the blot of levity and temporizing on their. Religion and lest there should not be a visible party among them. to countenance their cause. But the New proselites, especially fuch as are of any power and interest in the world, and may do them more service in a masked way, and can fairly avoid the Imputation of Popery, these shall have leave to come to our Assemblies, when their cause may make advantage of it. That you may fee I feign not all this of them, (besides the proof from certain experience which we daily see) let me lay before you the Decisions of one of their principall Directors, in this work of propagating their faith; and that is, Thom. a fesu de Convers. Gentium. How far they are for favouring of Heathen's and Infidels, and Liberty of Conscience for them (for all their cruelty to Protestants) you may see him, lib. 5. Dub. 4. pag. 207. Where he tells you that the sentence commonly received in the Schools is that it is not lawfull for Christian Princes to use any force against Infidels, for fins against the Law of Nature it self: and citeth Caject. Victoria, Covarruv. Greg. de valent. And himself decides it in the middle way of Azorius, That Pagans may not be punished for despising the honour and worship of God, thoughthey may for not giving every man his own, and for theft, murder; false witness, and other sins that are against mens right Compare this with Sir H. Vane's doctrine of Liberty.

And lib. 5. part. 1. Dub. 6. pag. 220. he teacheth that [A Catholick living among Hereticks may (when the scandalizing of others forbids it not) for fear of death, go to the Temples of bereticks, and be among them in their meetings, and assemblies, because of it self it is a thing indifferent; For a man may for many causes go to the Temples of hereticks, and be among them in their assemblies, as that he may the easilyer and more effectually and commodically confute their errors, or on other just occasions, (unless accidentally it scandalize others.) Yea as Azorius saith, he may do it to obey a Prince, though he be an heretick, when he feareth the loss of his honour, maintenance or life: For in this he only obeyeth his Prince: especially if among the faithfull (that it, the Papists) he openly affirm, that he doth it only to obey his Prince, and not to profess the heretical sect: For by that open attestation he avoideth the offence and danger of Catholicks, and well decline the unjust vexation of the Prince.

And that Papists may eat flesh on dayes when their Church forbids it, to hide themselves among hereticks, he determine the in Dub. 5. p. 218, 219. So that the Papists are abundantly provided for their security, against such as would discover them when it stands not with their ends to disclose themselves.

3. Another most effectual way of Hiding themselves is, by Equivocation or mental refervations, which we use to call Lying, when they are examined about their Religion, their Orders or their actions. Lying that hurteth not another, they commonly maintain to be but a venial fin, which fay most of them, is properly no fin at all. And to equivocate or referve one half of your answer to your selves, say the Jesuites, is not Lying, nor unlawfull, in case a mans interest requireth him to do it. See the words of their own Casuists cited for this by Montaltus the fansenist. Were it a thing that needed proof, I would give you enough of it. Thom. a fefu the Carmelite, ubi Sup. Dub. 4. pag. 218. secureth them sufficiently: His Question is [Whether one that denyeth it when he is asked of a Heretick whether he be a Priest, or a Religious man, or whether beheard Divine service, do sin against the confession of faith? He answereth, No: for that is no denying himself to be a Christian, or Catholick: For it is lawfull to dissemble or hide the person of a Clergy man or a Religious man, without a lye in words, left a man be betrayed and in danger of his life; and for the same canse he may lay by his Habit, omit prayers, &c. - because (N.B.) hu mane Laws for the most part bind not the subjects conscience; when there is great hazard of life, as in this case Azorius bath well taught. Just. Mor. Tom. 1. lib. 8.c. 27. | So that by the confent of most, there is no danger to a Papist in any such case from his own confession.

Another way of Hiding their Religion and themselves, is by X x 2 false false Oaths, which we called, wilfull perjury, but the Jesuites take for a Lawfull thing, when a mentall Refervation or Equivocation supplyeth the want of verbal truth, as their words cited. by the forementioned Jansenian, testifie. And who will everwant so easie, so obvious, so cheap a Remedy against all danger of perjury, as a mental Refervation is?

Yea that the Pope can sufficiently dispense with any of their Oatl's of fidelity or Allegiance, or the like, I shall shew you under the last Detection. The Parliament, hath imposed on them and Oath of Abjuration, but do they not know how little the Clergy. and such as have their countenance will slick at that, such Nets. are too wide to catch them in. Hear the words of one of their own Priess (fo. Browns Volun: ary Confess. in Prins Introduct. p. 203.) faith he, [Its strange to see the Stratagems which they use with their penitents concerning the Oath of Allegiance! If they be poor, they tell them flatly, (when they are demanded to take the Oath) that it is damnable, and no wayes to be allowed by the Church: If they be of the richer fort, they say they may do as their. conscience will inspire them. And there be some of them that make no conscience at all, to have it taken so oft as they are demanded. What would you have more, then such discoveries by themselves?

2. But what get they by this Hiding of themselves? Answ. I. They. hereby secure themselves from danger. 2. They do the more easily. prevail for the multiplication of their fect: For worldly perfons would not so easily flock into them without some such security. from suffering. 3. They preserve those that are come over tothem from revolting, by the discouragement of suffering, especially the Rich and Honourable. 4. They angle for fouls with the less suspition, when they stand behind the bush: Papists are become fo distasted with the people by the Powder-plot, and many other of their pranks, that they may take more with them, if they come masked under another name. 5. By this means they may openly revile and oppose the Ministry, and Ordinances, and Churches, and Protestant doctrine, without disturbance by the Magistrate. A Papist in the Coat of a Quaker, an Anabap. tist, a Seeker, or the like, may rail at us and our doctrine in the open Streets, and Market place, and call us all to naughe, and teach abundance of their own Opinions, without a controul.

troul. And many a poor foul will take an Anabaptist Papist, or Seeker into their bosome, and familiarly hear them, and easily swallow down what they say, that would be afraid of them if he knew them to be Papists. 6. By this means they have easier access to a greater number then openly they could have. 7. And by this means they may infinuate into our Counfels, and know all our wayes, and how to refist us. 8. But above all, by this means they may be capable of any office and trust among us. They may be Ministers, or Justices of Peace: They may be Parliament men; and Leaders in our Councils, and have the conduct of our affairs: They may have a great influence on the rest that know them not; They may come to have power in our Armies. And if once the Masked Papills come to make our Laws, or guide our Councils and Affairs, and influence or command our Armies, you may foon know what would become of Protestants: Kings and Parliaments, Prelates and Presbyters shall all go one way, if they can accomplish it: Its easie therefore to discern that their principall Artifice lyeth in Hiding themselves (so be it still there be a visible body of their open professors.) And for my own part, I think I have good reason to fear lest the Papists are far stronger at this day in England that are unknown, then that are known: and that wear the Vizard of Seekers, Vanifes, and other Sects, then that appear bare faced : Yea I believe that our danger of the open Papists' is nothing in comparison of our danger from these Juglers. And I confels I think an ingenuous open Papist should have a great deal more gentle dealing from our Migistrates, then these Deceivers that have such stretching Consciences. For my own part I must confess I feel a great deal of charity in my heart for a conscientious plain dealing Papist; and I would never be guild ty of cruelty or rigor to them. But this jugling in the matters of God and Eternal life, my very foul abhors. I have been fee upon by these Juglers my self, and by some of the most renown. ed of them; but as foon as I perceived any of them purpofely choose the dark, and hide themselves in affected cloudy terms or methods, I was more averse from their documents, and took. them for men that were either enemies to truth, or else had not received it into honest hearts themselves. Truth is most beautifull in its nakedness; It loveth plain dealing, and abhorretin' XX3, fraud.

fraud. It takes that for its greatest friend, that layes it most naked to the view of all, and that for its enemy that purposely obscureth it. We have all such a natural inclination to truth, that he scarce deserves the name of a man, much less of a Christian, that would not embrace it if he knew it. Did I think that the Papiss had the truth, the Lord knows I would run after them, and follow them till I had learned it: If ever any of them would work on me, they must come bare faced: for I naturally abhor a Jugler in Religion, and a friend of darkness.

3. But how shall these Hiders be Detected ? Answ.1. You have cause to suspett all that use a Mask, and purposely hide their minds. To suspect them I say, to be Papists or worse: They walk not in Gods way that walk in Darkness: It is the Kingdom of Satan that is the Kingdom of Darkness, and it is he that is the Prince of Darkness, and his servants that are the sons of Darkness. Me thinks a man that intendeth Deceit, what ever his end be. should not take it ill to be suspected for a deceiver. God is so good a master that no body should be ashamed of him. Truth is so amiable, that the genuine sons of Truth are not ashamed of it. Its no true Religion that assureth not men of that which will fave them harmless, and bear them out against all the malice of earth and hell, and repair all losses that they can sustain in the defending of it. Qui non vale intelligi, debet negligi. He that would not be fully understood, shall never be my Teacher, nor be much regarded by me. And therefore the Vane and Steril language of Paracelsian Behmenists, and-Popish Juglers, doth serve with me for no other use but to raise me into suspicion of their Designs and Doctrines, and to signifie a Vaine and Steril mind. Who will not suspect that Tradesmans wares that chooseth a dark Shop, and resuleth to open his wares in the light? I know that Scripture hath its difficulties, and strong meats. But that is from our incapacity of understanding higher points, till we are prepared by the low-er: It is from the altitude of the matter, and not that God doth envy us the truth, which he pretendeth to reveal: If a Prophesie be purposely obscured, which concerneth not the world so neerly, yet so are not the Doctrines that our life or death lyeth on. But saith Clem. Writer to me, (recited in his late Book against me) [Would you not hide your mind or Religions ligion in Spain? Answ. I. No: I would not; whenever I found my felf capable of ferving God most by the discovery: which is the common case. 2. Till then, I would not put on the vizor of any thing that I knew to be falle; and make use of Politive Jugling and Diffembling to hide my Religion. 3. If Christians against Infidels, or Protestants among Papists, had thought this diffimulation lawfull, there had not been fo many thousands of them martyred or murdered as were. 4. What Opinion is it that brings men in England into any great danger at this day? Either your Opinion must be Atheistical, or at least Infidelity, if you suppose it will bring you now into any great suffering : or if it be some small matter that you fear, it feems you think not your Religion worthy to be openly owned in so small a danger. I'le never be of a Religion that is not worthy my openest confession, even to the death, when there is so much danger.

2. The Jugling Papists may be known by this, that they are alwayes loosening people from their Religion, and leading them into a diflike of what they have been taught; that they may be receptive of their new Impressions. And therefore of any one Sect in England, there is none to be so much suspected of a spirit of Jesuitism, as the Seeker's of all forts.

3. The Jugling Papifts may be much detected by this, that they are all upon the Destructive part in their Disputes, and very little on the Affertive part. They pull down with both hands but tell you not what they will build up till they have prepared you for the discovery. They tell you what they are against. But what they are for, you cannot draw out of them. As if any wife man will leave his house or grounds till he knows where to be better: or will forsake his staff that he leaneth on, or the food that he feedeth on, till he know where to have a better provision or support. Do they think wife menwill be made irreligious? They deal by the poor people, as one that should say to passengers on Shipboard' What fools are you to venture your lives in such a ship that hath fo much encumbrance and danger, and so many flaws, and but a few inches between you and death, and is guided by such a Pilot as may betray you, or cast away your lives for ought you know? They know now that none but mad men will be perswaded by such words as these to leap into the Sea to scape these dangers; and therefore they do this but to make men willing to pass into their ship, and take them for our Plots. If you are wise therefore hold them to it, and leap not over-board, but keep where you are, till they have shewed you a safer Vessel and Pilot: which they can never do.

When I did but privately desire of Ch. Writer that he would acquaint me with that truth that he thought me ignorant of, and that we might privately and lovingly consider how far we were agreed, and where we differed, that we might debate the case, and try who was in the right, he resolutely denyed to have any debate with me, or. to open any of his judgement, but pag. 46. reproacheth this very motion, as proceeding from [my aims of a monstrous shape and ugly looks] so monstrous a thing doth it appear to these deceiving Juglers, to tell men what Religion they are of, and would have us to receive, when they will freely reproach the Religion which we profess.

4. And you may strongly conjecture at the quality of these Juglers, by their constant opposition against the Ministry. It is Ministers that are their eye-sore; the hinderers of their Kingdom: Could they but get down these, the work were done, the day were their own: And therefore their main business, whatever vizor they put on, is to bring the people into a dislike or contempt of the Ministry. If they seem Quakers, they will rail at them: If they seem Seekers, they will dispute against their calling: If they seem the gentlest Behmenists, they have their girds at them, to acquaint the world that they are misguided by them. But at first, they will not let you know which is the true Ministry, if ours be not; or which is the true Church, if ours be not. Here they leave you.

5. The Jugling Papist, what vizor soever he wears, is commonly putting in for his own opinions, of the Necessity of a Judge of Controversies, an Infallible Church, a state of perfection here, the magnifying of cur swn inherent Righteousness, without any great esteem of Justification by the forgiveness of sin: and many fuch like.

6. Papists have still an aking tooth at the Authority and sufficiency of Scripture; and therefore on one pretence or other, are still disgracing and impugning it, and leading men aside to some other Rule.

7. Papists

7. Papists have still an enmity against the Power of the Magistrate in matters of Religion: For in such matters their Vice-christ must be the only Judge. Whereas indeed, by that time the Magistrate hath judged, Who is Punishable by the Sword, and the Pastors and Particulars Churches have judged, Who is excommunicable, (which are their undoubted works) there is nothing lest for a Popeto do. Suspect them that are for a Liberty for all; or at least for all that are no worse then Papists. They that set open this door intend to creep in at it themselves at last.

8. And it is a suspicious sign when you find men enemies to the Unity, Peace and Settlement of our Churches, but would still keep us in division and distraction. And yet some of these men will lament our Divisions, and cry up Unity, but they will fecretly hinder it, or do nothing to attain it.

9. And it is somewhat suspicious to see men hang loose from all our Churches in their practise, and joyn with none, nor communicate in the Sacraments. If they know not Sacraments and Church-communion to be both our Duty, and the Means of our strength and comfort, it is doubtful whether they are Christians or Infidels. But if they know this of the Necessity and use of Sacraments, and Church-communion in general, and yet joyn not with any of our Churches herein, it's a shrewd suspicion that they have an eye upon some other Church. For sure a tender conscience would not be many years in resolving of so great and practical a point, no more then he would live many years without prayer, on pretence of being unsatisfied in the mode of Prayer.

10. And yet on the contrary fide, there are some Jugling Papists, especially in our Councils, Civil and Ecclesiastick, that play their game by over-doing, and making every thing to be Popish and Antichristian, to drive us into extreams, and into opinons in which we may easily be bassed. And it's not a little that they have won of us at this game.

CHAP. XLVII.

Detect. 38. A Nother of their Practical Frauds is, In their exceeding industry for the perverting of men of Power of Interest, that are likely to do much in helping or bindering them.

X y

Swarms

Swarms of them are busie day and night, for the seducing of Princes, and Nobles, and Rulers of all sorts, and of Commanders in the Armies. Of their diligence abroad we may know somewhat by their success on divers of the German Princes, and the late Queen of Sweden, and on many of the Nobles of France, and such others.

At home we have smarted by the fruits of their industry. What abundance of assaults were made on the late King? from his going to Spain, and the Popes Letters to him there, and to the Bishop of Conchen to take care for his seduction, and so all along to the last, I need not mention. And what Noblement or Persons of Interest in England lay not under assaults and solicitations in those days? And are all the Jesuites and Eryans dead? Or have they not still the same cause and industry assaulted? Is the Court, or Councils of the Land, or the Nobility;, Gentry or Army now free from their fraudulent solicitations? How far they have prevailed time will sullier reveal: but what they will endeavour we may easily judge. And certainly the number of Seekers and such other Sects among them, doth telling that they have not lost their labour.

If these lines shall sall into the hands of any of our Rulers or Commanders, I intreat them for the sake of their souls, and the Common wealth, to be prudent and vigilant in a matter of such consequence. I do not intend to intreat them from error unto truth without sufficient light and evidence: But that which I desire is but reasonable; 1. That you would not be too consident of your own understandings to deal with such Jug'ers in your, own strength, without affistance. They have made it their study all their days, and are purposely trained up to deceive: whereas you are much wanting in their way of study, and much unsurnished to resist, how highly soever you may think of your selves.

2. That you would read a little more the learned solid writings of our Divines against the Papists, such as Dr. Fields, Crakenthorps, Ofhers, Chillingworths, Jewels, Rivets, Chamiers, Ames, Reignolds, Whittakers, and such like, beginning with Sir Humfrey Linds Via Devia, & via Tuta, & du Plessis of the Church, and his Mysterie of Iniquity, and Dr. John White, &c.)

3. That you will not hearken to Papills secretly, nor masked, nor coming to you by indirect and Jugling ways: but open their perswasions, and call to some able studyed Divines to deal with them in your hearing, if needs you will hear them, that so you may hear one side as well as the other.

4. That you take heed what Retainers, Servants, or Familiars are about you: For some that pretend to be acquainted with these men, are much mistaken, if they be not more frequent at your elbows, and in your Bed-chambers, then many do imagine. If they cannot be of your Councils, and your neer attendants, they will rather be your Porters, or the Grooms of your Stables, then they will be kept out. We fear not any thing that they can do in an open way, in comparison of their fecret whispers and deceits, when there is no body to gainfay them. Had they the Truth, we should be glad to entertain it with them. It is not therefore Truth in their mouths that we are afraid of: But seeing the Nations and our Posterity have fo much dependance on your Integrity, we call for fo much Justice at your hands, as that you will not cast open your ears to each deceiver, especially in secret, or on unequal tearms : Let not all our peace and safety be hazarded by the self-conceitedness, or imprudence of you that are our Rulers. Seeing it is you that must give us Laws, or fet the Vulgar the pattern which they are so much addicted to imitate; We adjure you in the Name of the most High God, that you be not too forward and facile in hearkening to Seducers, and corrupting those Intellects which the whole Nation hath so great an Interest in: and that you be not henceforth as children tost to and fro, and carryed about with every wind of doctrine by the the fleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive, Eph. 4 14. But we beseech you mark them which cause Divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which you have learned, and avoid them. For they that are fuch, serve nor the Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly, and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple, Rom. 16. 17, 18. Hearken not to every one that faith. Lo here is Christ, or Lo there is Christ; here is the Catholick Church, or there is the Catholick Church: As if Christ were divided, or the Catholick Church were more then One? Or it were confined to a Sect or Party, whether Papal or any Yyz other.

other, and did not contain all Christians through the world? All parts of this Church are not equally pure, but all are Parts: Be you of the purest part, but do not therefore take that part for the whole: much less the polluted part. Have compassion on the diseased and tumisted part: but do not therefore so far doat, as to love the tumor or disease, and say that none is the Church but this. We are willing to be as Charitable to that Proud Throne of Rome, and usurping Vice-christ, as will stand with the safety of our souls and of the Church. But God sorbid that we should therefore be so blind, as to run into their Pest-house, and drink the poyson by which they are thus tumissed & intoxictaed.

Look on their Principles, and see what an aspect they have on Christ, on the Catholick Church, and upon Princes? Look back on their Practises, and see what their Principles proved in the fruits? Yea what need we go further for a warning, then to remind you of that which one would think should be deep and fresh in your minds; even what they have brought upon Kings, Queens, Lords, Prelates, and this whole Land? But this leads me to the next Detection.

CHAP. XLVIII.

Detect. 39. THE last of their Practical frauds (at home) and the most desperate is, Their Treasons against the lives of Princes, and the Peace of Nations, and their dissolving the bonds of Oaths and Covenants, and making Perjury and Rebellion to seem to be Duties and Meritorious works.

It would be a voluminous task to relate the Histories of the Papal Tresons: How the Roman Vice-christ having laid a claim to both Swords, Spiritual and Temporal, hath plaid the Traytor against the Greek Emperors, dispossessing them of the West; and against the Emporors of Germany, stirring up their own subjects, and the Christian Princes and States against them; setting his foot on the neck of one, and making another wait barefoot long at the Roman gates; and keeping many of them in wars. It was this Horrid Treason and Tyrannical usurpation over all the Christians Princes, that caused all those Treasises on that subject wrote against him, in the Desense of Princes and their Rights,

Rightt, which Mich. Goldastus bath preserves and conjoyned in divers Volumes. It was this that caused England, Denmark, Sweden, and so many other Princes, to be the readier to shake off his yoke. Kings are not Kings where the Pope is fully Pope; except only the House of Austria, whom he is forced to gratifie, as the only prop of all his tyrannie. France that hath so much stood for its Liberties, hath felt the fruits of the Roman Principles, and League; and two of their most renowned Kings successively have been basely and inhumanely butchered by them: And to this day the numerous swarm of the Popes dependant Clergy, doth not only devour, as is thought, about a third part of the Lands, but also aws and swaies the Princes. Even in Ireland before our wars, a Bishop (Bedle in his Letter to Land in Prins Introduct. pag. 102.) doth open the Power of the Clergie, and their insolencies as such, that he concludes [His Majesty is now with the greatest part of this Countrey as to their hearts and consciences, King, but at the Popes descretion And in another Letter to the said Archbishop (ibid. pag. 112.) he saith [I that know that in this Kingdom of his Majesty, the Pope hath another Kingdom far greater in number, and as I have heretofore signified to the Lords Instices, and Council (which since is justified by themselves in print) constantly guided and directed by the order of the new Congregation, de propaganda fide, lately erected at Rome -] see the rest.

Do I need to tell England of the many treacheries fince the Reformation against our Princes? Or who it was that would have deposed as well as Excommunicated Queen Elizabeth, and exposed her Kingdoms to the will of others? Or who it was that wrote against King fames his Title to the Crown? Or who were the Actors of the Hellish Powder-plot? Or who it is that hath been still blowing the fire, and casting all into disturbances for their ends? Do I need to mention their approving of the Murdering of Princes, and the pretence of power to dispense with oaths of Allegiance and fidelity, and who hath actually so ofte pretended to disoblige the subjects, and expose Princes and their Dominions to the first occupant? I know that many of the seculars in England disowned this doctrine: But I. So never did the Pope, but hath owned and practifed it.

2. By disowning it, they disown Popery it self, if they know what they do: For it is an Article of their Faith, and so Essential to their Religion, as explicitly held; and is determined by a Pope and an approved General Council, even 12. the fourth at Lateran under Innocent the third, as I before recited the words at large in the third Argument against them here.

I know some of the Papists would perswade the world that it was none but Mariana the Jesuite that wrote for King-killing: and that it was first condemned by themselves. But the Parliament of Paris tells another story of them, as it is recited by Thuanus (who was President and then present) Hist. lib. 130. ad. an. 1604. And Rivet names them Guignardus (that wrote in praise of the murder of Henry the third) and of Odo Pichenatus, Barterius suborned by Varada, &c. And Albineus the Jesuite did hear the Murderer of Henry the fourth confess before he did the fact, and put off the examiners with this answer, that God had given him that special gift to forget when once he had absolved a sinner whatsoever was confessed by him. And why was it that France did expel the Tesuites, and fet up a Pillar of Remembrance of their villanies, till Henry the fourth would needs gratifie the Pope by calling them in again, and told the Parliament, that the peril of it should be on him; and so it was; for it cost him his life. And why did the same Parliament of Paris. Novemb. 1610. condemn Bellarmines book against Barclay, as an engine of treason and rebellion? And the Theological faculty of Paris, April. 4. 1626. condemned Santarellus Book as guilty of the same villany, stirring up people to Rebellion and King-killing? And May 12. the University confirmed it : And March 13. the Parliament condemned the Book to be burnt.

And it's worth the reading which Rivet recites of the Answers of the Jesuites in Paris, when the Parliament askt them their judgement of that Book, viz. [Seeing their General had approved the Book, and judged the things that are there written to be certain, whether they were of the same mind?] They answered that [Living at Rome he could not but approve what was there approved of.] [But say the Parliament, What think you? Say the Jesuites, the clean contrary. Say the Examiners, But what would you do if you were at Rome? Say the Jesuites, That which they do that are at Rome. At which said some of the Parliament, Parliament, What! bave they one Conscience at Rome, and another at Paris? God bless us from such confessors as these.

But yet some of the Papilts will seem so honest, as to say that private men may not kill a King till he be deposed. Very true! But withall it is their currant doctrine, that if once he be excommunicate, he is then no King, yea or if he be an Heretick; and so being no King, they may kill the man, and not kill the King. This is the jugling of these seeming Loyall subjects. You may see it in their own writings; Suarez advers. Seet. Anglic. lib. 6. cap. 4. Seet. 14. Grap. 6. Seet. 22, 24. Grapius Jesuita Instit. Moral. part. 1. l. 8. c. 13. He that would see more of their mind in this, let him read the Mysterium Patrum Jesuitarum, and the Jansenians mysterie of Jesuitism, and Bishop Rob. Abbots Antilogia ad Apolog. Endamojohan: But what need we more then the Decrees of a Pope and General Council, and the practice of the Church of Rome for so many ages?

And for the Popes power to absolve them from all oaths of Allegiance and fidelity, the foresaid Pope Innocent and his approved General Council have told the world enough of their mind to put us out of doubt of it.

But (leaving abundance of forreign instances) I shall mention but one or two at home. The Papists have lately had the considence to affirm that the Powder-plot and the Spanish invasion in one thousand five hundred eighty eight were not upon a quarrell of Religion, nor owned by the Pope. King James hath taid already so much against them in these points, that I think it needless to say any more (especially also after Bishop Abbots Antilogia) but only here to produce one Testimony of their own, concerning the Spanish Invasion.

Cardinal Ossatus in his 87. Epist. ad D. de Ville-roy, tels us that Pope Clement the eighth (one of the best of all the late ones) did press for the King of France to join with Spain in the Inva-sion of England, and the Cardinal answered that the King was tied by an Oath to the Queen of England: to which the Pope replyed, that [The Oath was made to an Herctick, but he was bound in another Oath to God and the Pope] adding with all [that-Kings and other Princes do permit themselves all things (or tole-rate themselves in all things) which make for their commodity: and that the matter is gone so far, that it is not (or should not be)

imputed to them, or taken for their fault: and he alledged the laying of Franciscus Maria Duke of Urbine, that indeed every one doth blame a Noble man, or Great man that is no Soveraign, if he keep not his Covenants, (or fidelity,) and they account kim infamous; but supream Princes may without any darger of their reputation, make Covenants and break them, lye, betray, and perpetrate other such like things. This was good Pope Clement the eighth. And can we look for better from the rest? You see what Oaths and Covenants are with them.

And that the design was still carried on against the Queen upon account of Religion, and the Realm to have been invaded by the Spaniard on that account, and that the principal point of the Plot was to prepare a party within the Realm that might adhere to the invaders; all this with much more Sir Francis Walfingham (that well knew) hath testified to Monsieur Critorin his Letter, Cabal. part. 2. pag. 39.

Thuanus a Moderate Papift (and a most knowing and impartial Historian) tells you (lib. 89. p. 248, 249. ad an. 1588.) that, [the Spaniards pretended to undertake the expedition only for Religion sake, and therefore took with them Martin Alarco Vicar general of the Holy Inquisition, with abundance of Capuchins and festites: and that they had with them the Popes Bull, which they were to publish as soon as they landed, and that Cardinal Allan was appeinted as the Popes Legate to landat the same time, and with full power to see to the restoring of Religion. And that the said Bull had these expressions: that the Pope, by the Power given from Godby lawfull succession of the Catholick Church, for the defection of Henry the eighth who forcibly separated himself and his people from the communion of Christians, which was promoted by Edward the fixth and Elizabeth, who being pertinaceous and impenitent is the same Rebellion and Usurpation - therefore (the Pope) incited by the continual perswasions of many, and by the suppliant prayers of the English men themselves, (N.B.) hath dealt with diverse Princes, and specially the most potent King of Spain - to depose that moman and punish her pernicious adherents in that Kingdom - Read the rest there; for though wicked, its worth the reading. The Pope there saith, that Pope Sixtus before h m prescribed the Queen, and took from her all her Dignities, Titles, and Rights to the Kingdom of England and and Ireland, absolving her subjects from the Oath of fidelity and obedience: He chargeth all min on pain of the wrath of God, that they offord her no favour, help, or aid, but use all their strength to bring her to punishment; and that all the English join with the Spaniard as soon as he is landed: offering rewards and pardon of sins, to them that will lay hands on the Queen; and so shewing on what Conditions be gave the Kingdom to Philip of Spain. This and more you may see in Thuanus.

And yet some of our Juglers that say they are no Papists, perswade the world that Papists hold not the deposing of Princes, nor absolving their subjects from the Oaths of fidelity; and that the Spanish invasion was meerly on Civil accounts, and that they expected not any English Papists to assist them; with other fuch impudent affertions.

Even Dominicus Bannes (one of the best of them) in Thom. 22.qu. 12. art. 2. saith that [Quando adest evidens notitia, &c.i.e. When there is evident knowledge of the crime, subjects may lawfully exempt themselves from the Power of their Princes, before any declaratory sentence of a judge, so they have but strength to do it.] Adding to excuse the English Papists for being no worse, that [Hence it follows that the faithfull (Papists) of England and Saxony are to be excused, that do not free themselves from the power of their Superiors, nor make war against them: because commonly they are not strong enough to manage these wars, and great dangers hang over them.] Princes may see now how far the Papists are to be trusted: Even as far as they are sufficiently disabled.

And their August. Triumphus saith (de Potest. Eccles. qu. 46. art. 2.) [Dubium non est quin Papa possit omnes Reges, cum subest causa rationabilis deponere] i.e. [There is no doubt but the Pope may depose all Kings, when there is reasonable cause for it] Is not this a Vice christ, and a Vice-god with a witness?

Add but to this, that the Pope is Judge when the cause is Reafonable; (for no doubt but he must judge, if he must execute;) and then you have a Pope in his colours, even in his Universal Soveraignty Spiritual and Temporall.

And (as I said before from Snarez and others) when the Pope hath deposed a King, any man may kill him. I will not trouble you with Mariana's directions for poysoning him, or secretly dispatching him (de Reg. instit. lib. 1. cap. 7.) Suareze his moderate conclusion is enough (Desens. sid. Cathol. li. 6 c. 4. sett. 14.) [Post sententiam, &c. After sentence past he is altogether deprived of his Kingdom, so that he cannot by just title possess; therefore from thence forward he may be handled as a meer tyrant; and consequently any private man may kill him] O Learned Suarez! No wonder if you and your Profession be dear to Princes; and if Henry the sourch of France took down the Pillar of your insamy, and received you into his Kingdom and Heart again? No wonder if the Venetians at last have readmitted you, to procure some aid against the Turk.

I will conclude with one Testimony of a Roman Rabbi (cited by Bishop Usher, who knew his name, but would not do him the honour to name him.) It is, B.P. & gerao. Epifol. J.R. impres. an. 1609. Who hath excused the Powder-Plot from the Imputation of cruelty, [because both Seeds and Root of an evil herb must be destroyed | and doth add a derision of the simplicity of the King in imposing on them the oath of Allegiance, in these most memorable expressions, worthy to be engraven on a Marble Pillar [Sed vide in tanta affutia, quanta sit simplicitas ! &c. But fee what simplisty here is in so great craft! When he had placed all his security in that Oath, he thought he had framed such a manner of oath, with so many circumstances, which no man could any may dissolve with a safe conscience. But he could not see, that if the Pope dissolve the Oath, all its knots, whether of being faithfull to the King, or of admitting no Dispensation, are accordingly dissolved. Yea I will say a thing more admirable. You know I believe, that an unjust Oath, if it be evidently knownso be such, or openly declared such, obligeth no man. That the Kings oath is unjust, is sufficiently declared by the Pastor of the Church himself. You see now that the Obligation of it is vanished into smoak, and that the bond which so many wife men thought was. made of iron, is less then stram.

These are the words of Papists themselves. From their published writings we tell you their Religion.

I know they will here again tell us abundance of false accusations of the Protestants, such as [the Image of both (burches] heapeth up; and they will tell us of our war, and killing the King in England. But of this I have given them their aniwer

before. To which I add, I. The Protestant doctrine expressed in the Confessions of all their Churches, and in the constant stream of their writers, is for obedience to the Soveraign Powers, and against resisting them, upon any pretenses of Heresie, or

2. The wars in England were raised between a King and Parliament, that joyned together, did constitute the Highest Power; and upon the lamentable division (occasioned by the Papists,) the people were many of them uncertain which part was the Higher, and of greatest Authority: some thought the King, and others thought the Parliament, as being the Representative body of the people (in whom Polititians say is the Majestas Realis,) and the Highest Judicature, and having the chief part in Legislation, and Declaration what is just or unjust, what is Law and what is against Law: Had we all been resolved in England which side was by Law the Higher Power, here had been no war. So that here was no avowed resisting of the Higher Powers. None but a Parliament could have drawn an Army of Protestants here under their banner.

3. And withall that very Parliament (confisting of Nobles. Knights, Gentlemen and Lawyers, who all declared to the people, that by Law they were bound to obey and affist them) did yet profess to take up offensive Arms only against Delinquents, or rather, even but defensive against those men that had got an Army to secure them from Justice: And they still professed and vowed fidelity to the King, which, as I have shewed." they manifested to the last of their power, till they were imprisoned and secluded. Read Mr. Prins Speech for Agreement with the King: and read the writing of the London Ministers presented to the General, and published against the Kings death: and Read the Vindication of the seeluded members, and read the Passages of the war with Scotland, and of the Imprisonment of many London Ministers, and of the death of Mr. Love and others: and tell me whether you can do men greater wrong then to defame them for being causers of that which they difowned, though it cost them the loss of Liberty, Estate, or Life.

4. And really if you take either Vanists or Levellers (who were the chiefagents in this) for Protestants, you may as well say that Papists are Protestants. The world knows that the Prayers, the Petitions, Protestations, and other endeavours of the Protestants, even the Presbyterians, was for the preventing the death of that King, how ever many of them disliked his course, and joyned with the Parliament against his adherents. This is the very truth, which they that have been eye witnesses all along have good reason to know, whatever any Papist says to the contrary.

5. And what Protestants be they that give power to any man on earth to depose Princes, and give their Kingdoms to others; or to disoblige all their subjects, and warrant them to kill them, and dispense with oaths, and turn them all into smoak and straw.

Renounce your treacherous Principles, and we will cease to charge you with them. Let a General Council and Pope but Decree the contrary to what the forecited Pope and General Council have Decreed, or else do you all declare that you think this Pope and Councill erred, and then we will shake hands with you; for then you will either cease to be true Papists, or at least become tolerable members of humane societies. Why doth not the Pope himself at least condemn these do arines, if really he disown them? The case is too plain.

CHAP. XLIX.

Detect. 40. Their last course when all other sail, is, To turn from Fraud to Force, and open Violence, stirring up Princes to wars and bloodsbed, that they may destroy the professors of the Reformed Religion, as far as they are able, and do that by stames and sword, by halters, and hatches, which they cannot do by Argument? Hence have proceeded the bloody butcheries of the poor Waldenses and Albigenses, formerly and now again of late; and the wars in Bohemia, the League and wars, and Massacres in France, the desolating wars of Germany, the plots, invasions and wars in England: Most of the stames in Christensom of late ages have been kindled for the Pope by his Agents, that he might warm him by that fire that others are consumed by. Hence his own pretenses to the Temporal Sword.

Sword, and so many volumes written to justifie it, and so many Tragedies acted in the execution. And yet these men cry up Antiquity and Tradition. I wonder what Bishop in all the world for above three hundred years after Christ, did ever claim or exercise the temporal sword, as much as to be a Justice of Peace? nay it was their judgement that it did not belong to them. Neither the Pope nor any Bishop on earth, as such, hathany thing to do with the coercive power of the fword; nor may not inflict the smallest penalty on body or purse, but only guide men by the Word of God; and the utmost penalty they can inflict is, to excommunicate them. And they have nothing to do to destroy men, when they have excommunicated them, nor to cause the Magistrate to do it : but rather should still endezvour their Conversion. Synesius Epistol. 57. against Andronicus saith as followeth [& n modimule, &c. To join together fecular government with the Priesthood, is to the together things that are incoherent (or such as cannot be tyed together) The old times made the same men Priests and Judges: For the Egyptians and Hebrews did long make use of the Government of Priests. But af. terward, as seems to me, when Gods work began to be done in an bumane manner, God separated the two sorts of life, and one of them was made sacred, and the other appointed for Rule and Command. For some he turned to these Materiall (or common, secular) things, and some he associated with himself: The former were appointed for secular business; the later for prayer. But from both doth God require that which is honest (or Good.) why then dost thou revoke this? Why wilt thou conjoin what God hath separated? who wouldst not have is indeed to do the work of secular Rulers, but by doing it to deprave (or marr) it; then which what can be more unhappy? Dost thou need a Ruler? (or Patron) Go to him that manageth the Laws of the Commonwealth. Doft thou need God in any thing? Go to the Bishop (or Priest) of the City: not that thou shalt be sure there to have all that thou desirest, but that I will afford thee the best ustifance that I can (or will do my best in it.) So far Synesies: Which I wonder how Petavius could pals over without some distorting observation, consider. ing how low it treads the Roman Kingdom. But Baronina had the cunning as to extract even from hence some advantage to his cause, even to show the Power that Pastors have to excommunion.

cate Rulers (ad An. 411.) as Synefius with the Council did Andronicus. But 1. He went not out of his own circuit to play the Bishop in other mens Diocess. 2. Much less did he take up the Temporal Sword against him, but disclaimeth and detesteth any fuch thing. Why doth not the Pope when he hath past his Excommunications, content himself that he hath done his part: but he must excite Princes, yea force them to execute his rage, and fall upon the Lives and Dominions of such Princes as he will call Heretical? He knows how small account would be made of his brutish thunderbolts, if he had not a secular Arm to follow them: Nay why is he and many of his Cardinals and Bishops, secular Princes themselves? Why joyneth he those Functions of Magistracie and Priesthood which Synesius here tells us God hath separated, and made incoherent in one and the same person? Let the Pope usurp what Ecclesiaftical power he please, he would not so much disturb the Church by it, if he did not second it by another power. It is violence that he trusteth too. He knows if it were not for Arms and Violence, he would foon be spewed out by the Christian world. And yet many of his followers that feem more moderate, confess he hath nothing to do as Pope with any but the Spiritual Sword (which works no further then Conscience doth confent and yield.) And yet his Kingdom standeth on those legs, which the doctrine of these more moderate men do disown.

The same doctrine also Bernard taught the Pope himself. Ad Eugen. P. R. de Considerat. I. 2. Saying [Quid tibi dimiss S. Apostolus? &c. What did the holy Apostle leave thee? Such as I have saith he, that give I to thee: And what was that? One thing I am sure of; it was not gold, nor silver, when he said himself, Silver and gold have I none. If then canst claim this by any other title, so let it be; but not by Apostolical right: For he could not give thee that which he had not: such as he had, he gave, a care of the Churches, but did he give thee a domination? Hear himself [Not as Lords (or Ruling as Lords) saith he, in the Clergy (or heritage) but as examples of the slock. And less thou think that he spoke it only in humility, and not in verity, it is the voice of the Lordhimself in the Gospel: The Kings of the Gentiles rule over them, and they that have power over them, as called Benefactors, (or Bounteous) and he inferreth [Butiyou shall not be so] It is plain, that Domination is forbidden the Apostle's. Go then therefore, and usurp if thou darest, either Apostleship whilest thou Rulest as a Lord, or a Lordly Rule (or Domination) while thou art Apostolick. Plainly thou art forbidden one of the two: If theu wilt have both alike, thou losest both.] So sat Bernard. By whose verdict the Pope and his Bishops are deprived of both; by grasping at both long ago.

Nay the Pope makes himself a Temporal Prince in every Princes Dominion on earth, where he is able to do it, and takes all the Clergy out of their Government into his own. So that actually he hath dispossessed them of part of their Dominion already, by taking so considerable a part of their subjects from under their power, yea and those that have so great an influence upon all the rest: What by publick Preaching, and Churchgoverning, and secret Confessing, and dependance on them for the Sacraments, one would think it should be no hard matter for a Remish allowed numerous Clergy, to be Masters of any Kingdom where they are. And thus Princes are more then half conquered already, without a war. If any believe not that the Pope doth not thus exempt his Clergy from the fecular power, it is because he knows not their most notorious principles and practifes. Nay even in England, in King Charles his Articles for the Spanish match, the Pope had the confidence to demand this Prerogative, and therefore himself added to the fixteenth Article, which freed them from Laws about Religion, [Ecclefiaftici verò nullis legibus subjaceant, nisi suorum superiorum Ecclesiasticorum] that is [Ecclesiastick persons shall be under no Luw, but of their Superiour Ecclesiasticks (or Church. men) . Is not this plain English? See Prins Introduct. p.6. So that no Church-man must be under any Law of the Land, or Government of Secular Princes. And when they have such a strength in our own Garrisons, a forreign Enemy is easily let in. To the exciting of whom they will never be wanting, having their Agents in one garb or other at the ears of the Princes and States in Christendom, and of most of the Great and Noble persons that are deeply interessed in the Government. Yea, and with Infidel Princes sometimes, as Cyril the Patriarck of Constantinople tinople proved, to the loss of his life, for being so much against the Papilts. And the more cause have all Christian Princes and States to be vigilant against these incendiaries, 1. Because they trust to War and Violence, and build their Kingdom on it, and therefore study it day and night. 2. And becau'e they have fuch a frie of politick Jesuites all abroad continually upon the delign; whole contrivances and endeavours are day and night to bring Princes and Nations to their will, and to kindle divisions and wars among them to attain their Ends. They make a trade of this imployment. And expert prepared men, that follow a business all their days, are like enough to make something of it at last; especially while others sleep, or silently look on, and let them alone to play their game. If the Papilts can but get into the Saddle, either by deceiving the Rulers, or Commanders. or by bringing forreign force against us, they will give us leave to dispute, and write, and preach against them, and laugh at us that will stand talking only, while they are working : And when the Sword is in their hand, they will foon answer all our Arguments, with a fagot, a hatchet, or halter; Smithfield confuted the Protestants, that both the Universities could not confute. Their Inquisition is a School where they dispute more advantagiously then in Academies. Though all the Learned men in the world could not confute the poor Albigenses, Waldenses and Bohemians, yet by these Iron Arguments they had men that presently stopt the mouths of many thousands, if not hundred thousands of them: Even as the Mahometans confute the Christians. A Strappado is a knotty Argument. In how few days did they confute thirty thousand Protestants in and about Paris, till they left them not (on earth) a word to fay. In how few weeks space did the ignorant Irish thus stop the mouths of many thousand Protestants? Even in Ulster alone, as is strongly conjectured, by testimony on Oath, about an hundred and fifty thousand men were mortally silenced: Alas we now find that the poor Irish commonly know but little more of Christ, but that he is a better man of the two then Saint Patrick: And therefore how long might they have been before they could have filenced so many Protestants any other way? There's nothing like stone dead, with a Papist. They love not to tire themselves with Disputes, when the business may be sooner and more successfully dispatcht. Well.

Well, feeing this is the way that they are resolved on, and no peaceable motions will ferve for the preventing it, all men that have eare of the Church and Cause of Jesus Christ, and the happiness of their posterity, have cause to stand on watch and guard: Not to be cruel to them (leave that to themselves,) but to be secured from their cruelty. I should be abundantly more earnest then I am, to press all men to such a patience and submission in Causes of Religion, as leaves all to God alone, but that we all see how the Papists are still at the dore with the Swords in their hands, and watching for an opportunity to break in. And if in modelly we stand still and let them alone. they will give us free leave when they have the day, to call them Traytors, or perfidious, or what we please. Let loosers talk: Let them have the Rule, and then make the best you can of your Arguments. If they can once get England and other Protestant Countries, into the case of Spain and Italy, their Treachery shall not be cast in their teeth; for they will leave none alive and at liberty to do it. When we fee in good sadnessthat it is Navies, and Armies, and Stabbings of Kings. and Powder-plots, and Massacres that we have to dispute against. it's time to be able to Answer them in their own way, or we lose the day. It is not a good Cause, or wit, or learning, or honesty, that will then serveturn. I know God is al-sufficient for his Church, and in him must be our Trust : But he requireth us to expect his bleffing in the use of lawful probable means. He can give us Corn without plowing, and fowing: but we have little reason to forbear these and expect it : He can Convert men without preaching: But yet the bleffing of God doth pre-Suppose Pauls planting, and Apollo's watering. He can Rule and Defend us without Magistrates, but it is not his appointed way. And he can fave us from deceitful bloody men, without our care, and vigilancy, and relistance: but it is not his ordinary appointed course in which he would have us look to him for deliverance.

And therefore in the Name of God let Princes and Parliaments be vigilant: for they watch for the outward security of the Church and Common wealth (as Ministers do for our spiritual wel-fare) as those that must give account. And let the people take heed what Parliament or Magistrates they choose:

Ani

And let all that love the Gospel, and the prosperity of the Christian world, and of their posterity, have their eyes in their head, and take heed of that bloody hand, that hath in England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Savoy, Low-countries, Germany, Bobenia, &c. already spilt so many streams of Christian blood. If the Wise, the Learned, Moderate Lord du Plessis, was so zealous for the Lawfulness of Necessary Defence, as Grossus chargeth him, as to put it into his Testament, (whom he makes also the Author of Junius Brutus, I know not on what ground) doubtless he knew with whom he had to do, and thought that every Guisian League was not a Law of God or of the King.

Some Princes think that it is their fafest way to please the Pope and Jesuites, and so will be Papists, on the terms as some of the Indians worship the Devill, because he is so naught, that he may not hurt them. But these men were wifer, if they understood, that the malice of Infernal Spirits is not to be avoided by pleasing them, but by resisting them. They are too bad to be ever pleased by any means, but what will be your utter ruine: And they are not stronger then the Devil himself, who will flie if we refist him. If the best were not the most Powerful, what would become of the world? And if God be stronger then the Devil, he should rather be pleased then the Devil; for he is able to defend you from the Devils displeasure: and he is most able to hurt you if you be dispifers of his power: which Justice will effect more certainly on the bad, then Satans malice can do upon the good. Men think themselves wife, that shift for their safety by carnal and unlawful means: But they shall all find at least, that plain honesty is the best policy, and the favour of God the best security, and a life of faith the most prudent life; and that shifting for your selves in unbelieving ways, is the greatest folly. It is the design of the Papills by the strokes of Clements, Ravilliacks, Vanxes, and such others, to terrifie Princes, that they may not dare to relift them, but may fee that they have no hold of their lives while they are under their displeasure. But yet such as have most displeased them have scaped best. It is recorded by one, that the great King Henry of France, being perswaded to stand it out against the Jesuites, answered, [Give me security for my Life then] And what a security did he find in his unbelieving way?

A thousand pitties it is that Protestant Princes should not be united among themselves, that they might be strengthened for their joynt Defense; But that the envious man should be able so far to over-wit them, as to sow among them the seeds of war, while they sleep, or felfishly mind their own affairs and interests: And a greater pitty and shame it is, that the Ministers of the Gospel of peace should be the causes of these divisions, or should not do their best to heal them: But it is the greatest shame of all to us, that so many years experience of the calamitous effects of our Divisions, and so much industry of many worthy peaceable men, should do no more to a fuller Reconciliation then yet is done. The names, and pacifying Labors of such as Durans, Davenant, Hall, Merton, Usher. Hayne, Dr. Morin, Amyraldus, Hottonus, Conradus, Bergins, Johannes Bergins, Georgins, Calixius, Ferem: Burroughs, and many more that have laboured for peace, do live as Monuments of their honor and our dishonor, and do reflect much shame upon the faces of those Reformed Ministers and Churches that after all this are so much unreconciled; yea, that are not by the strongest motives and perswasives, so much as excited to zealous endeavours for the healing of our fad division; no nor some of them restrained from the passionate prosecution of their increase.

If yet any Papist, believing such falle Histories as [the Image of both Churches doth contain, or really finding any Protestants culpable, shall say, that we are as bad as they in wars or cruelty, and that Illiacos intra muros peccatur, & extra. I again reply, I. That true History and experience tells the world, that there is no comparison between their excessive cruelties and ours. 2. Yet it is none of my defire or intent, to defend any person or people that have been truly guilty in the least degree. 3. Our doctrine is against that which theirs doth own. 4. If either our Doctrine or practise have been amis, we desire reproof and information, and are willing to reform them. The Word of God being our only Rule, if it appear that we have in any point misunderstood it, we desire nothing more then to be rectified, and then we shall confess our former faults before the world, and promise reformation. For our Principles fix us not in Sin or Error. But the Papists are fixed in their Errors, and think there is a necessity lyeth on them never to amend. Now the Pope and a General Council hath already decreed that the Pope may depose Princes, and Absolve their subjects, and give their Lands to others; to amend this abominable error, is with them to give away all their cause, and to cease to be Papists. So that all Princes and People must necessarily despair of their amendment.

Some Proposals for a (hopeless) Peace.

This work is put upon us by our adversaries. But in the conclusion I will add a few words of that whith enticeth by its amiable aspect, and which we gladly follow, without importunity or constraint. And were our Power but answerable to our Desires, we would soon put an end to these contentions of the Church, without the hurt of any of the Dissenters: Year did there appear but any considerable Hopes of success, I should venture to be more large in Proposals to that end. But when wifer men, of greater interest can do no good, and the case appeareth as next to desperate, a sew words may suffice to satisfie my own conscience, and to please my mind with the mention of a Peace, and to help some others to right Disspositions and Desires, though we have never so little expectation of success.

And in order to what follows, I must first desire every Reader rightly to understand the meaning and design of all that I have hitherto said. It is but to be a necessary help to the Discovery of the Truth, and the consutation of the contrary errors, and the just desence of the doctrine of Christ, and of his Churches. I solemnly protest that it is none of my design or desire, I. To make any believe that the Dissernce is wider between us and the Papists then indeed it is. Nay I am satisfied that in many doctrinall points it is not so great as commonly it is taken to be by many, if not most, on both sides: as in the points of certainty

of Salvation, of Pardon, of Justification, of Works, of Faith; and in almost all the controversies about Predestination. Redemption. Free-will, the work of Grace, &c. Dominicans in sence agree with the Calvinist (as they call them) and the Jesuites with the Lutherans and Arminians: and fo in divers other points. The divers understanding of words among us, and the weakness and passions of Divines, and a base fear of the censures of a party hath occasioned may on both sides to feign the differences to be much wider then indeed they are: fo that when an Alvarez, a Bannes, a Gibienf, have spoken the same things as the Protestants do, they are presently fain to pour out abundance of unworthy flanders against the Protestants, for fear of being accounted Protestants themselves, And to thew their party how much they differ from us, they must feign us to be monsters, and to hold that which commonly we abhor: And some Protestants are too blame also in some meafure in this kind. This unchristian dealing will gripe the conscience, when once it is awakened. Let me be rather numbred with those that are ambitious to seem as Like to all the Churches of Christ, and as much to agree with them, as honestly and possibly I may, what party soever distaste that union and agreement. And let my foul abhor the defire of appearing more distant and disagreeing then we are, what censures so ever I may incur. Our students would not so ordinarily read Agninas, Scotus, Ariminensis Durandus, &c.if there were not in them abundance of precious truth which they esteem. How neer doth Dr. Holden come to us in the fundamental point of the Resolution of our faith? How neer come to the Scotists to us in sence, about the point of Merit? and Waldensis and others yet neerer? How neer comes Contarenus to us (and many more) in the point of Justification? How neer comes Cardinall Cajetan to us in the Liberty of diffenting from the Fathers in the Exposition of the Scriptures? and so doth Waldonate and many another. How neer comes Cardinal Cusanus (lib. de Concord.) to us, even in the Essential point of difference, about the Original and Title that Rome hath to its supremacy? How neer comes Gerson to us in the point of Venial and Mortal fin? perhaps as neer as we are to our felves. How neer come the Dominicans, and Jansenians to us in the points of Predestination, Grace and Free. will ? Aaa 3 will? For my own part, I scarce know a Protestant that my thoughts in these do more concur with, then they do with fansenins, (that is indeed, with Augustine himself.) There are very sew points of the Protestant doctrine, which I cannot produce some Papist or other to attest (and easily thus be even with Mr. Brerely, upon fairer terms then he deals with us.)

2. I do also protest that it is none of my desire or design, to create any unjust Censures of the final state of Papists in any Readers: nor to perswade men that they are all damned or that there are no honest godly men among them. fuch writers as Gerson, Barbanson, Ferus, and others, I am fully fatisfied that there are many among them (how many God only knows) that truly fear God, and are sanctified gracious people, with whom I hope to dwell for ever. And therefore I think it my Duty not only to forbear unjust Cenfures of them, but also to love them with that entire speciall Christian Love by which Christ would have us known to be his Disciples; and to perswade all others to do the like. Though still I am constrained to say, that in my small acquaintance with them. I find no comparison between the English Papifts and our Churches in point of Holiness. I would they were much better.

3. I do also protest that it is not my desire or design to make any innocent Papist to be accounted guilty of the faults of others which he disowns.

4. Nor is it any of my defire or defign to provoke the Magifirate to any cruelty or injustice towards them; nor to lay any penalty on them, but what is truly of necessity for the safety of himself and the Common-wealth, and a just restraint of them from perverting others, and doing mischief to the souls of men, as I shall open more at large anon.

5. Nor is it any of my desire or design to make the generality of them unjustly more odious with Rulers or People, then the measure of their corruptions do deserve: Or to hide any of their vertues, or deprive them of any honour which is their due. This much my conscience witnesseth of my intents; though I know the partial will hardly believe it, when they feel themselves smart by that Contradiction which they have made necessary for our own desence. And this I thought necessary to premise, before I lay down the following Proposals, that prejudice and passion do not turn away men eyes, or cause them to misinterpret them. For it is prejudice, partiality, and saction, that hath hitherto frustrated all such Proposals and attempts.

CHAP. LI.

Here are five several Degrees of Peace which lye before I us to be attempted between the Roman and Reformed Churches: We shall begin with the highest, and upon supposition of the failing of our Designs for that, come down to the next, and so to the Lowest.

1. The first Degree of Peace to be Intended and Desired is, That we may so far Agree, as that we may hold personal Communion in the same Assemblies, in the worship of God, and live under the same particular Pastors.

2. If that cannot be attained, the next Degree desirable is, That we may hold a Catholick Christian Communion in several Assemblies, under several Pastors, acknowledging each other the true Churches of Christ and joining in Synods when there is need, or at least, giving each other, as Christian Brethren, the right hand of Fellowship.

3. If that may not be attained, the next Degree desirable is, That we may take one another for Christians and Churches of Christ, though under such corruptions as we think we are bound to disown by denying the present exercise of Communion: as we do with particular Offendors, whom we only suspend, but not condemn.

4. If this much may not be had, but we will needs excommunicate each other absolutely, the next degree of Peace defirable is, That we may at least so far regard the common truths that we are agreed upon, and the souls of the people, as to consult on certain terms on which we may most peacably mannage our differences, with the least hatred, and violence, and disturbance of the Peace of Christendom, and with the least impediment to the generall success of those common truths that we are a'l agreed in.

3. If this may not be attained, the lowest Degree desirable is, That at least we may take each other for more solerable adver-

faries then Mahometans and Infidels are, and therefore may make a common Agreement to cease our wars and blood shed, and turn all our Arms against the great and common enemy of the Christian name.

Were it not for the Devill, and wicked minds, all these might be attained: but if men be not themselves incarnate Devils, we may expect the last. And understand that the terms of the lowest

Degrees are all implyed in the Higher.

And now for the Highest and most desirable Degree of Peace, viz. That we may meet in the same Assemblies, under the same Pastors, there is so little probability that ever it should be accomplished, and withail the various apprehensions of Christians doth make it so necessary to bear with one another in this, that I shall say but little of it, as knowing that I am like to lose my labor. Only this much concerning the terms.

If you will impose no more in point of Belief, as necessary to Salvation, but what is contained in the holy Scriptures, yea and in the three Creeds, and four first General Councils; and will leave the Pastors of the particular Churches to worship God according to the Rule of the holy Scriptures, prudentially themselves determining of meer Circumstances left to their determination; according to the general Rules, of Order, Decency and Edification, and bearing with a difference herein according to the different state of the Churches or judgement of the Pastors, this is the only probable way to bring as to this highest degree of Peace. Though accord: ing to this course, men should be left to some liberty to joyn with what particular Congregation they fee best, and so would most commonly joyn with those that are neerest to their own judgement; yet the minds of most would be so mollified by mutual forbearance, and by being satisfied in the way that is thus commonly agreed on, that they would not scruple to joyn with one another in worship in the several Assemblies.

And here I shall further add, that if these terms cannot be yielded to, yet all that will yield to the terms of the next Degree of Peace, may be admitted into our Assemblies, though we cannot joyn with them in theirs. For the Papists have much more in the manner of their worship to keep us back, then we have in ours to keep them back. For their errors lie in Excess, and they suppose ours to lie but in Defett. Now Conscience

may well yield to perform one part of a duty when it cannot perform the rest: But it can never yield to commit one actual sin, by doing what is forbidden by God. E. G. If the Papists think that we sinfully omit the Sacrament of extream unction, they may nevertheless be present at the Sacrament of Baptism. If they think we preach not all the truth that we ought, they may nevertheless hear and receive that which we do preach. But in their Assemblies we must do those positive actions which our Consciences tell us are sins against God. And therefore unless they will yield (as they will not) to the abovementioned terms, we cannot joyn in their Assemblies; but upon the terms in the next Chapter we can admit them into ours.

But if the Churches have not a necessary Liberty in this, they will never agree, but be still breaking into pieces, or persecuting one another, to force men to joyn with such Assemblies as best please them that bear the Sword. Though we readily grant that to hear and learn the principles of Religion, and submit to the state and duty of Catechumens, men may with less inconvenience be forced, and ordinarily should so be.

CHAP. LII.

The second Degree of Peace desirable, below the former, is, That if we cannot live under the same particular Passers, and joyn in the same Assemblies, yet we may hold a distant Catholick Communion in several Assemblies, without condemning or persecuting one another; and may afford the special Love of Christians to each other.

This will not be done as long as we take each other for Hereticks; and therefore the causes of those censures must be removed, partly by a neerer agreement in our Principles, and partly by a greater Moderation in our Censures of one another. And this a man would think among Christians might be obtained. The terms on which it must be had are these.

Suffer us to confine our selves in Worship and Church-government to the Word of God; and the Determination of our particular Churches or Pastors about meer Circumstantials left to their de-Bbb termination, termination, and do you confine your selves accordingly, or not extending your practise beyond the Canons of the four first General Councils, and the rest called [Canones Ecclesia Universalis] (published by Justellus, Tillius, or the Codex Dionysii Exigui) and for matters of Faith, we will all prosess to receive the Scripture, and what ever is contained in the said Councils and the three Creeds, and to insist upon no more as necessary. And on these terms we may live in Love as Brethren.

Here note, 1. That in matter of Faith we will not be bound to take more then is in the Scripture, and yet we will take all asasoresaid that is in the Creeds, because we are perswaded that there is no more then is in the Scripture. 2. We will not tie each other to profess on what Grounds we receive the Doctrine of these Creeds and Councils. If you receive it as Tradition superadded to Scripture, and if we receive it as being the same with Scripture Doctrine, or a meet Exposition of it, we will leave each other in this without examination to their liberty, as long as it is the same things that we believe. 3. In matters of is in all these Councils; but only we will promise not to go beyoud them, and take in any more, and so shall you: so that if some of us confine our selves to the Holy Scripture, and others will go further, as far as all those Canons do extend; we will: vield to live as Brethren in Christian Love, and forbear the cenfuring of one another. And herein you may well condescend to us, when in many things you have cast off the Canons of those Councils your felves; and abundance of them concern not our times or Countries, and so many of your own Writers confess that all things necessary to Salvation are in the Scriptures, and that Canons are mutable, and Churches may vary in these lesser things.

CHAP. LIII.

Ould the former terms of Peace be yielded to, it would be happy for the Churches; and I am perswaded were it not for the Italians, the French would yield to them. And some Protestants will go further, and yield to Rome; that if Papists.

will confine their Faith, and Government, and Worship but to those limits as the Greeks, Armenians, Ethiopians, &cc. do, they will readily hold this Catholick Communion with them. But then we must still remember, 1. That we will not be bound to approve of all that they do. 2. Nor shall they go about to force all others to rise up to their pitch; nor do as the English Bishops would have done, to silence and cast out all those Ministers that will not go beyond the Scriptures. You shall bear with all that will be Ruled by the Scripture, and we will bear with all that will not go beyond the said General Councils, or Coden Canonum Ecclesia universalus: Yea, and admit such to our Society and Assemblies.

But now supposing that Reme will not yield to this (though me thinks France and other Nations may do it without them) the next Degree desirable is, that | At least we may take one another for Christians and Churches that have such corruptions, as yet leave us good hopes of the salvation of multitudes, though we suppose salvation more rare and difficult where those corruptiare, then where they are not, and though we are forcularly further that Communion with such which with sound members.

And indeed the obtaining of this much Peace, requireth no more but Christian Charity conducted by a right understanding of each other. And for my part I have already this much peace with the Church of Rome, and so have many millions more of Protestants as well as I: and I think the generality of them: But Rome hath not so much Charity for us: But we shall not answer nor be condemned for other mens uncharitableness. I need not therefore propose any means for that peace which we have already attained to, or may if we will. But then let this be accompanyed by the following forbearances.

CHAP. LIV.

THE fourth Degree of Peace desirable, whether the last mentioned be attained or not, is, [That we may so far lay by our batted, wrath, and striving about the Controverted points, as to consult together of the terms on which we may manage our Bbb2 desirences differences with the least disturbance to the Peace of Christendom, and the least disadvantage to the Truths that we are agreed in, and to the peoples souls.]

Religious Reason must needs consess the Reasonableness of this proposal in the General: But all the difficulty lyeth in the particulars. If you ask me what the particular terms are on which we should agree, I answer, There are many at hand, that Reason must needs approve of; but because there is no likely hood of accepting them, I shall spare the labour of proposing them. And the rather, because we have much ado to agree on this much among our selves, or the Papists among themselves: with what hope can we move that the Agreement should be Universal? But this much I may propose, I. That a Consultation of the Agents of Christian Princes and Divines might do much to further such a thing. And till that can be had, some sew of the more Peaceable Princes and Divines should lead the way, and give the rest a good example. 2. And that an Universal Liberty of Conscience, with necessary restrictions, might be a probable way.

Where note, 1. That it is an Universal Liberty only that we move for, or at least on equal terms. It is not that the Papists may have Liberty in England, and we have none in Spain and other Countries. The Author of the Image of both Churches maketh a long and subtile perswasive for Liberty of Conscience: But where would he have it? Let them take this equal motion, and yield to it if they dare. Let the Protestants have liberty in Italy, Spain, Flanders, Portugal, Austria, Bavaria, &c. and we shall consent that the Papists have as much Liberty in England, Holland, Smeden, Denmark, &c. But it must in reason be on equal terms. Yet this advantage we know they have, that their Agents and Missionaries are incomparably more numerous then ours, by reason of the multitude of their Fryars, Jesuites, &c. and their doctrines are more fuitable to corrupted nature, and carnal interest, and the people are more engaged by worldly obligations to their ways: And yet we are so confident of the Power of Truth, that I would this Proposal were accepted. The Bible it self without any Preachers, would shrewdly shake the Kingdom of the Pope, where men have liberty to use ir.

2. The limitations of this Liberty are, 1. That one party have no more of it then the other. 2. That it extend not to allow a disturbance of Ministers and Churches in Gods Worship, nor any unpeaceable tumultuary proceedings. 3. That no Party be tolerated under this pretence, to teach any thing against the Essentials or Necessary points that we are agrred on, nor any thing that is against the peace of the Common-wealth, or lives, or dignities of the Governors thereof.

Two parties among our selves will distike this proposal.

1. Some will say, If Liberty be desirable, why may not we grant it in England, though Spain, Italy, &c. will not?

Answ. This Liberty is not Desirable for it self, but as a means to that end which is so Desirable. And therefore it is no further desirable then it tendeth to that end. And a partial Toleration of them, that tolerate not us, is so far from being such a means, as that it is the next way to destroy the end that we desire, it will but put our necks under their feet, and open our bosoms to their Swords, and so make our desired Peace impossible. No friend of the Gospel and Resormed Churches will prosecute that motion.

2. Others will say, It is unlawful to grant such a Liberty to Papists, because it is false doctrine which they will preach, and Idolatry which they mill exercise; and we must not do evill that good may come by it.

Ausw. We may do no evill, but we may omit that which at another time is a duty, in a feason when it is no duty. To punish fuch offenders is a politive duty, which at all times is not a duty, but unseasonably performed is a sin. For a Magistrate therefore to punish such offenders, when it apparently tendeth to hinder the progress of the Gospel, and overthrow the peace and safety of the Christian State, is not a Duty, but, a sin. Would any of these Objectors be against a Magistrates releasing of a Jesuite out of Prison, in exchange for a faithful Minister of the Gospel, especially of many; as priloners are commonly exchanged in war? If not, why should they be against the releasing of such a man to higher ends, even to fave mens fouls ? To give Liberty is but to Permit, or me to Hinder, or not to Punish: and therefore is but the notdoing of a work when it is unseasonable (as Sacrifice is when God requireth Mercy.) And he that may Permit, or forbear to punish, may on a just reason promise so to do. So that this is but forbearing the punishing of Papitls, when we cannot punish them without the exceeding burt of the Church, and wrong to many thousand souls. Bbb3 But

But I know I speak all this in vain, for the Pope will never consent that Protestants shall sow their seed at Rome, lest it quickly unneast him. But in the mean time let the Papists here confess if they be reasonable, that we have no reason to give Liberty to them, that will give none to us, or upon unequal terms. If they claim a special Title to it, as baving the juster cause, we desire no more then a fair tryall of that, and let them that have the juster cause take all.

3. Another particular that should here be agreed on is this, whether the sormer be consented to or not;) That on both sides where the Teachers have any Toleration or sorbearance, they may be forced by the Magistrate to teach the Ignorant people that adhere to them, the great Articles of the Christian faith (both words and sense) which we are all agreed in. Which was Bissop Ofbers motion to the Papist Priests in Ireland. For saith he, among the Papists the people are suffered to perish for want of knowledge; the vulgar superstitions of Popery not doing them half that hurt, that the ignorance of those common principles of faith doth, which all true Christians are bound to learn (Serm.at Wansted, page 33.)

4. Another necessary particular to be agreed on is, that we use not better investives against each other, nor uncharitable contendings, especially in the ears of the ignorant people that have not yet learned the common truths which we agree in: but that our Debates be managed only in such Assemblies as are capable of them, and in a sober Christian way.

5. Another is, that such Magistrates that will not grant Toleration, may yet on both sides avoid cruelties, and instit no more penalties for matters of meer Religious worship, then necessity shall require: and that herein they may agree upon some equality in the several Nations. And in this let Spain, Italy, Anstria, and the rest, for shame consent, to be as moderate as the surk, and to shut up the doors of their bloody Inquisition.

6. Let us all agree to renounce all Treachery and unfaithfulness against the Soveraign Powers, and all seditious disturbances of the Peace of Common wealths.

7. Let those afford us the common Love of men, that think us not capable of the special Love of Christians: and so let us Love our Neighbours as our selves, and study to do good, and not hurt to one another; and give over plotting to undermine one another, and destroy one anothers civil interest, and get our Neighbours under our seet. This much well practiced, would do something to the peace of the Christian world.

CHAP, LV.

HE lowest Degree, that none but incarnate Devils one would think should resist is this; that if we will needs live as enemies, yet we may remember that we have all greater enemies; and therefore let us give over our wars, and let every Nation be quietly governed by their own Laws and Soveraigns, and let us all join together against the common enemies of Christ.

We cannot but know that much of Christs interest lyeth in our hands, and that if either party were devoured by the Turk, it would be a heavy blow to the Christian cause: If God should suffer that proud enemy to come and make a third among us, to end our quarrels, we must justifie him in his judgements: and must to our perpetual shame confess that by our proud and passionate contendings, and unpeacebleness, and self-seeking, we did betray the Christian cause. O wonderfull supidity and impiety of great men, and Learned men, professing so much zeal for God, that they can no more agree, nor bear in Love and Compassion with each other, nor cease their wars, when a raging potent enemy stands over them, ready to devour them both. Let the Venetians take the honour, and we the shame: How ever their own Interest may engage them, yet materially their wars are more honourable then ours. The Pope is eager for a General Peace among his subjects, that they may be strenghthened to devour us : But it were an honester design, that would give him more comfort at last, to mediate a Peace among all Christians, that in this at least they might be one, to oppose the Turk, and rescue the Heritage of Christ which he hath oppressed.

And O what a bleffed thing it were, if the Jesuites, Fryars and Protestants could but agree, to join together for the conversion of the poor Indians. And either preach in the same, or several Countries, without seeking the destruction there of one another; yea and afford each other help: that the English, Hollanders, and others might send Preachers as well as Merchants into the Indies; and we might there contribute our endeavours to propagate the Gospel, though in our different wayes, not envying, hating and hindering each other: but remembring we all confess one Christ, though not one Vice-christ.

Conclusion.

Have cast out these Proposals meerly to acquaint the peaceable Christian, what he should desire, that the frame of his heart may be right before God: and not with any expectation that they should be so regarded as to procure what they drive at. I am not so weak, or ignorant of the inconsiderableness of the Proposer, or of the selfishness and ungodliness of the world. But yet I may lawfully take the comfort of the most uneffectual desires and endeavours that are honest.

And for those that would have us Reconciled upon the Grotian terms, or upon the French Foundation of a General Council, and would have all forced, as our Bishops attempted to come over to their way, and deny Liberty to the rest, that cannot thus close with them; and all that think that the Church must have some Visible Head or Soveraign to unite in, I shall shew them their errour in a distinct Disputation, which I am publishing next to this, as a supplement: and therein I shall give them such further Proposals for a just Reconciliation, as men that are Studious of Peace may prosecute, with hope of some success.

And because I have lately met with a Paper called [An Explanation of the Roman Catholick Belief,] &c. which pretendeth to much moderation, in divers points; I purpose next to enquire, whether it mean as it pretends, that if it do, we may give it welcome; if not, we may Detect its Fraud: For as I should much rejoice to hear of so much amendment of the Roman Belief, which I thought had been supposed by themselves to be incorrigible; So Imust consess that I am so much for plain and open dealing, that I think it my duty to help to bring their works into the Light, and try how they agree with the Truth and among themselves; that men may judge of them as they are.

CHAP. I.

Shewing the Occasion and Reasons of this Writing, especially as from the Grotians; which are Vindicated from the frivolous exceptions of Mr. Tho. Pierce.

others, but most triumphantly and copiously by David Blondell in a French Treatise in Folio de primatu in Ecclesia against Cardinal Perron, that I need not, and therefore intend not to fav much here upon that subjeat. Rut this Disputation I principally intend. 1. For the subverting of the Foundation of Popery, which is the supposition, that the Visible Catholick Church must needs be united in some Humane Visible Head. 2. To consute the Opinion of the moderate fort of French Papilts and Grotians, that take a General Council to be the Legislative Head, and the Judicial Head while they are in Being; and the Poperuling by the Laws of Councils, to be the ordinary Judicial Head. liver some persons from a dangerous Temptation, that by Grotins, or his followers here in England are drawn into a conceit that the Catholick Church is such a Body as we here deny, and think that the unity that the Scripture fo commendeth to us cannot be attained without an Universal Visible Head: which Temp. cation of theirs is much increased by observing the differences of Opinions in the world; which every good man doth lament, as we do all the fins and frailties that on earth accompany us in the state of imperfection. As I blame not those that desire persect Knowledge, or Holiness; but blame them that promise it to the Church on Earth, when it is the prerogative of Heaven; and much more should blame him that would say we shall be perfectly Wife and Holy if we will but be of this Opinion. that the Church hath an Infallible Humame Head; even fo I blame not them that desire perfect Concord (the Consequent of perfect Knowledge and Holiness;) for this is to desire Heaven: But I blame them that promise us this Heaven on Earth; and them much more that tell us we shall have it if we will but believe that a Pope or Council is the Universal Head; and so will condemn the Church on Earth, because it hath not attained that Celestial persection, which they have once fancied that it may and should attain.

Concerning Gretins his opinion, design and great endeavours to reduce the Churches to Popery, under the pretence of a Conciliation, I have lately by the Invitation of Mr. Thomas Pierce given in my Evidence (I think beyond all further question) out of his own writings, in his frequent and express affertions. And Rivet in his Dialysis and his Apologet and other writings hath sufficiently consuted him. The mistakes of many in their judging of Grotins, are caused by their supposition, that the man was the same in his first Conciliatory enterprises, and in his last, which is not true. He oft professeth his mutations himself, and how apt he was to dislike that which he had but lately thought or said: At first he thought but of Reconciling the Protestants among themselves: But afterwards his design was to Reconcile them with the Papists, and that by drawing them all to be Papists, that is, to unite in the Pope of Rome as the Universal Governour, ruling according to Canons and Decrees; and this he thought was the only way to the union of the Churches.

The Truth of this, and the Mischiefs of the Enterprise, must be apprehended by him that will understand my endeavours in this dispute, and escape the snare thats laid for their perversi-And for the Truth of it, I refer you to my foresid writing of the Grotian Religion. Since which it pleased Mr. Pierce to publish a sheet containing (not any thing that hath the least aptitude to perswade a rational man that Grotianism is not Popery, but) some Reasons why he doth not, at least, as yet perform the vindication, with a General profession how easily he can do it, and make me a Winding sheet, at least as sutable as that which I made for Popery (which when he hath confuted. I shall better know his mind and strength) This with two or three frivolous Exceptions, and many swelling words of Vanity. with certain Squibs and empty jeers, according to the manner of rhe man, is the matter of his Advertisement. Nothing could have been easier for him then to say [or almost to say, that I am very liable, in every line and that his advantages are too many, and that I am an advocate for the crimfon fins of others, and an encomiast of my own. Nothing more vain then his ostentation of the mild discharge of his Censorship, and his sensies intimation that I take the Virtues of Episcopal Divines, for glittering sins, when he never had a word from me of fuch a sence or tendency. (But Grotians will now be but Episcopal Divines, and their glittering fins, must be their Virtues.) Because I had acknowledged how civilly he dealt with me (no doubt on a supposition that I was neerer his conceits then those that he had so copiously reproached,) he takes it as an acknowledgement of his moderation, as if it were the proof of a mans moderation, that he can give a civil word to any, and a while refrain abusing one, while he is abusing, many. I am thankfull to him that spits in most mens faces, that Ccc 3 be he speaks to, that he spitteth not in mine; when I give a civil man no such thanks. When I commend a man for not belying me, reproaching me, or otherwise abusing me, as he doth others, I should suspect he would take it for a dispraise : For I use not to thank good men for doing me no mischief. His valuing the security of his own estate above Davids or Peters (that had such special Testimonies of their Holiness, and Promises from God, before theirs falls,) and his defending his Malignant fins as vertues, his venemous reproaches of Puritans and Presbyterians as Protestants frightned out of their wits, men of sedition and violence, and a bloody Generation, with abundance of the like; and then telling us that he meant no Puritans but fuch (as if one should say, the Arminians are a perfidious bloody Generation; and then fay, Its well known that he meant no Arminians but such,) these and such like passages shew the quality of the man and his Advertisement. He that durst openly and frequently charge his adversaries with slanders, and yet tell the world, that I [pretend that the difference between him and his Antagonists is meerly Verball] (because I said that Most of our contentions about those points are more about words then matter, and that such eager men as he and his Antagonist, do make themselves and others believe that we differ much more about them then me do.] Is this equipollent to [a difference meerly verball?]) this man its like dare do the same by others.

But it is the business of Grotins upon which I am to meddle with him. And first he saith that on the same Reasons as I conclude him a Papist, I must conclude him a Protestant, unless I think as hardly of the Augustine Confession as of the Council of Trent. Answ. I shall yield it, when you have proved [that a Protestant is one that holdeth to the Council of Trent, and the New Creed by Pope Pius, made long after the Augustine Confession, and that the Common Government in which all the Catholick Church must unite, is the Universal Headship of the Pope, governing according to the Canons and Decrees, and that the Augustine Confession is so to be expounded (by fair means or foul) as shall be agreeable to, or consistent with all this.] We use not to call such men as these Protestants, but Papists, but if this be your meaning when you call your self a Protestant, you should have told us sooner, if you desire to be known.

He

He faith (the proof of which we wait for) that I [mistake at once the whole drift of Grotius his excellent Discussio Apol. and that I translate not his Latine into English, or lamely, G.c. Anfw. 1. Nothing more easie, then to tell me I mistake! Are not his words plain enough, and frequent enough to open to us fo much of his mind as I have charged him with? Let the Readers of his words recited by me, be the Judges: (For him that will believe you, either to fave him the labour of reading, or against his eye fight, he is not one of them that I write for; but shall have Liberty for me to be deceived.) 2. That I translated not the words of Grotius, was purposely done, foredeeming that such men as you would have said they were mistranssared, and that they were not his own but mine: I am fure now that I give you but his own . And if you think him wronged if the English Reader know him not, by a Translation, I pray you translate the words your felf; for I suppose you will least quarrel with your own. But to pleasure you; I will Translate (as well as I can) the paffage which you choose out to defend, and a few more. Discus. Apol. pag. 255. [Those that knew Grotius, know that he alwayes wished for the restitution of Christians into One and the same body: But he sometime thought, even after he was known to the most Illustrious Vairius, that it might be begun by a Conjunction of the Protestants among themselves: Afterwards he saw that this was altogether unfeasible; because, besides that the genius of almost all the Calvinists is most alien from all peace, the Protestants are not joyned among themselves by any Common Government of the Church; which are the causes that the parties made cannot be gathered into one Body of Protestants; yea and that more and more parties are ready to rife out of them. Wherefore Grotius now absolutely judgeth, and many with him, that the Protestants canno be joined among themselves, unless at once they be joined to them that sobere to the Sea of Rome: without which there can no common Government be hoped for in the Church. Therefore he wisheth. that the divulsion which fell out, and the causes of that divulsion may be taken away. The Primacy of the Bishop of Rome according to the Canons is none of these, as Melanchton confessetb.] I think this is the English of Grotius words (be it spoken with a Salvo to the preheminence of Mr. Pierces Translating faculty.) But here he hath a quarrel, and that so momenious, as to be his his grand, if not only instance of my misdealing; and so he hath written enough against the Contagion of my Volume! A happy generation! that can make what they will true or falle by afferting it, and can give themselves the victory at their pleasure by triumphing, and by wiping their mouths, can make themselves innocent! and by faying any thing or fuch a nothing as this can prove Popery to be the Protestant Religion, and make many Worshipful Gentlemen of their mind; that were of their mind before they knew it, implicitely believing in them, and in their Church. Well: but what is my miscarriage? Why [the later part of these words, which are the chief, Mr. Baxter takes no notice of in the English account which he renders of them.] Answ. I. He supposed that you and all that he wrote this for understood Latine, though in Answer to an English Cavill, he wrote his Discourse in English. And he that Translated none of the sentence, thought it no injury, to give account in English but of part. 2. But open your eyes, and look further into his words. and see whether you wrong him not, by leaving out the rest of his account, as much as he wronged Grotius: And look into your own advertisement, and see whether you recited not Grotine his words your self without a Translation, committing the same error which you reprehend, while you do reprehend it. But saith the Episcopal Divine. (for so he will needs be called) He is deeply silent as to the causes of the breach which Grotius did wish might be taken away, and which he charged the Papists with. | Answ. I. Was I deeply silent that Grotins would have the causes taken away? What! When I recite his very words? Or was I deeply silent of the particular causes? Do you mean Here, or Throughout? If Here, to I was deeply silent of ten thousand things more, which either it concerned me not to speak, or I had not the faculty of expressing in one sentence. If you mean Throughout, you read without your eyes, or wrote either with a defective Memory or Honesty. Read again, and you shall find that I recite the causes. 3. But did I not all that my task required, by reciting the Negation of the causes [It was not faith Grotins, the Primacy of the Bishop of Rome according to the Canons? And I shewed you partly, and the Canons shew you fully, that that Primacy is the Universall Headship, which Protestants (I mean not Roman, Grotian Protestants) have ever used used to call Popery. But saith Mr. P. Grotius chargeth the Papists with it.] Answ. 1. True ! but the Protestants much more. as making many more faults by their withdrawing from Rome then they mended. 2. And he chargeth not that which we have called Popery with it, though he charge the Papilts with it. That some sins of the Papills did occasion it, he confesseth, and all the Papilts that ever I spoke with of it do confess. But I am referred for these causes charged on the Papists, to Grot. Votum pag. 7, 8. and thither I'le follow Mr. P. that I may know how much he chargeth on the Papifts himself. And there I find that the things that Grotius found faulty in the Papilts were but these two. 1. That to the true and ancient doctrine, many quirks of the Schoolmen that were better skll'din Aristotle then the Scriptures, were introduced, out of a liberty of disputing, not out of the Authority of Universal Councils. And the Opinions stablisht in the Church were less fitly explicated. 2. That Pride and Covetousness, and manners of ill example prevailed among the Prelates, &c. And really did you think that he is no Papist that is but against the Schoolmens Opinions, and the Prelates Pride, Covetousness, and Idleness? and holdeth all that they call the Decrees of General Councils? Hath not the Council at Lateran and Florence decreed that the Pope is above a General Council? and the Council at Lateran decreed that Princes are to be deposed, and their Subjects absolved from their fidelity, if they exterminate not Hereticks (such as Protestants) out of their Dominis ons? Is he no Papist that holds all that is in the Council of Trent, if he be against some School-points not determined. and against the Prelates Pride? Well Sir, I understand you better then I did: And though you thought meet (that your words might be conform to one another, and not to truth) to fay that I called you Arminian and Pelagian, I purpole (if I had done so) to call you an Arminian no more: But I beseech you cry not out of persecution till the men of your mind will give us leave to be Rectors of Churches in their Dominions, as you and others of your mind are allowed to be in these. demand not of Mr. Hickman the bread he eats, nor the money he receives, as if it were yours, till we can have license to be Ddd mainmaintained Rectors, or at least to escape the Strappado in your Church.

But I promised you some more of Grotius in English to stop. your mouth, (or open it whether you see cause:) and you shall Discus, pag. 14. [Grotius distinguisheth between the Opinions of Schoolmen which oblige no man (for, faith Melchior Canus, our School alloweth us great liberty) and therefore. could give no just cause of departing (as the Protestants did;) and between those things that are defined by Councils, even by that of Trent: The Acts of which if any man read with a mind propense to peace, he will find that they may be explained fitly and agreeably to the places of the holy Scriptures, and of the ancient Doctors, that are put in the Margin. And if besides this, by the care of Bisbops and Kings, those things be taken away which contradict that holy doctrine, and were brought in by evil manners, and not by anthority of Councils, or Old Tradition, then Grotius, and many more with him, will have that with which they may be content. This is Grotius in English. Reader, is it not plain English? Durst thou or I have been so uncharitable as to have said without his own consent, that Mr. Pierce would have defended this Religion, and that we have Rectors in England of this Religion? and that those that call themselves Episcopal Divines, and seduce unstudied partial Gentlement, are. crept into this garb, and in this do act their parts fo happily? If words do fignifie any thing, it here appears, that Grotins, his Religion is that which is contained in the Council of Trent with all the rest, and the reformation which will content him is only against undetermined School-Opinions, and ill manners that Cross, the doctrines of the Councils. I'le do the Papists so much, right as to say I never met with a man of them that would not fay as much: Especially taking in all Old Tradition with all the Councils (how much together by the ears, now matters not) as Grotius doth.

Yet more, Discuss p. 185. He prosessed that he will so interpret Scripture | God favouring him, and pious men being consulted, that he cross not the Rule delivered both by himself, and by the Council of Trent, &c.]

Pag. 239. The Augustine Confession commodiously explained, kath scarce any thing which may not be reconciled with those Opinions which are received with the Catholicks, by Anthority of Antiquity and of Synods, as may be known out of Cassander and Hossmeister. And there are among the Jesuites also that think not othermise.

Pag. 71. He tels us that the Churches that join with Rome have not only the Scriptures, but the Opinions explained in the Councils, and the Popes Decrees against Peligius, &c. [They have also received the Egregious Constitutions of Councils and Fathers, in which there is abundantly enough for the correction of vices: but all use them not as they ought. They lye for the most part hid in Papers, as a Sword in the Scabbard. And this is it that all the lovers of piety and peace would have corrected.] And gives us Borromaus for a president.

Pag. 48. [These are the things, which thanks be to God the Catholicks do not thus believe; though many that call themselves Catholicks so live as if they did believe them: but Protestants (so live) by force of their Opinions, and Catholicks by the decay of Discipline.]

Pag. 95. What was long ago the judgement of the Church of Rome, the Mistris of others, we may best know by the Epistles of the Roman Bishops to the Africans and French, to which Grotius will subscribe with a most willing mind] Rome you see is the Mistris of other Churches.

Pag 7. [They accuse the Bull of Pius Quintus, that it hath Articles besides those of the Creed. But the Synodof Dort hath more. — But those in the Bull are new, as Dr. Rivet will have it. But very many learned men think otherwise, that they are not new, if they be rightly understood: and that this appeareth by the places both of holy Scripture, and of such as have ever been of great authority in the Church, which are cited in the Margin of the Canons of Trent.

Pag. 35. [And this is it which the Synod of Trent faith, that in that Sacrament fesus Christ, true God & truly man is really & substantially conteined under the sorm of those sensible things, yet not according to the naturall manner of existing, but Sacramentally, and by that way of existing, which though we cannot express in words, yet may we by cogitation illustrated by faith be certain that to God it is possible | And the Council hath sound words to express it | that there is made a change of the whole substance of the bread into the Body, and the whole substance of Wine into the Blood, which conversion the Catholick Church culleth Transubstantiation.

Pag. 79. [When the Synod of Trent saith, that the Sacrament is to be adored with Divine worship, it intends no more but that the Son of God himself is to be adored.]

Ile add no more but that which tells you who is a Papist with the Grotians, and who is none. Pag. 15. [In that Epistle Grotius by Papists meant those that mithout any difference do approve of all the sayings and doings of Popes, for honor or lucre sake, as is usnal.]

Ibid. He tells us that by Pap Its, he meaneth not them [That, saving the right of Kings and Bishops, do give to the Pope or Bishop of Rome, that Primacy which ancient custom and Canons, and the Edists of ancient Emperors and Kings assign them. Which Primacy is not so much the Bishops, as the very Roman Churches, preserved before all other by common consent (It's well it bath so mutable a foundation)——so Liberius the Bishop being so lapsed that he was dead to the Church, the Church of Rome retained its right, and desended the cause of the Universal Church?

This and much more I had given the Reader before in Latine, but because Mr. Pierce thinks, that I wrong Grotine if you have it not in English, I have born so much respect to his words, and to the Reader, as to remove the wrong, and thus far to satisf

Having told you some of the Occasion of this writing, I shall add somewhat of the Reasons of it; but the less, because I have given you so much of them already in my foresaid Discovery of the Gretian Religion.

1. My principal Reason is that before expressed, that Popery may be pulled up by the very roots: For Italians, French, and all build on this, that the Church must have one visible Head.

2. That I might take in those parties of the Papists, that I have past by or said less to in the former Part of the Book.

3. Because I see what Influence the conceit that I dispute against hath on the minds of many well-meaning less judicious people.

4. Because

4. Because I perceive in part what influence the design of Grotius had upon England, in the changes that were the occasion of our late wars : He saith himself Discuss, pag. 16. [That the labors of Grotius for the Peace of the Church were not displeasing to many equal men, many know at Paris, and many in all France. many in Poland and Germany, and not a few in England, that are placed and lovers of peace: For as for the now-raging Brownists, and others like them: With Whom Dr. Rivet better agreeth then with the Bishops of England, who can desire to please them, that is not touched with their venom?] So that he had Episcopal Factors herein England. And whereas some tell me, that Grotins was no Papist, because he professed his high esteem of the Church of England, and say they, had Church-preferment here offered him, and thought to have accepted it. I answer I. Either it was Grotius in the first Edition, or the Church of England in the second Edition then in the Preis, that this must be spoken of, if true. 2. Was not Franciscus a Sancta Clara, (still the Queens ghostly Father) a Papist, for all he reconciled the Do-Arine of the Church of England to that of Rome? Grotius and he did plainly manage the same design. 3. Mr. Pierce assures you by his Defence, that Grotius hath still his followers in England of the party that he called the Church of England: And is it any more proof that Grelius was a Protestant for joyning with them, then that they are Papists that joyn with him? Is not his Doctrine here given you in his Englished words? Do you doubt whether the Council of Trent were Papists? This makes me remember the words of the late King to the Marquels of Worcester: when the Marbuels came into the room to an appointed conference about religion with him, & leaned on D. Bayly's arm, he told the King that he came leaning on a Doctor of his own Church: and the Kingreplyed, My Lord, I know not whether I should think the better of you for the Doctors sake, or the worse of the Doctor for your sake \ (or to this purpose) And indeed the Doctor quickly shew'd, by professing himself a Papist, what an Episcopal Divine he was: And I think we have as fair advantage to resolve us, whether to think the better of Grotius for the Church of Englands sake, or the worse of those that he called the Church of England, and that were of his mind, for Grotius lake.

In a late Treatise De Antiqua Ecclesia Brittanica libertate Diatribe, written by I. B. a Divine of the Church of England, and printed at Bruges, 1656. pag. 34, 35. Thef. 4. it is averred That since the ancient liberty of the British Church was by the consent of the whole Kingdom resumed, remaining Catholick in all other things, it may retain that Liberty without lesing its Catholicism, and without any note of Schism or Heresie | This Liberty then was the Reformation. And this he faith was maintained by Barnes, a Papist and Benedictine Monk and Priest in a M. S. entituled Catholico-Romanus Pacificus, c. 3. and that for this lober work of his the Peaceable Monk, though of unblamed life, and unspotted fame, was snatch out of the midst of Paris, and stript of his habit, and bound on a Horse-back like a Calf, and violently carryed into Flanders, and so to Rome, and so to the Inquisition, and then put among the Bedlams, where he dred; and not contented with his death, they defamed him to have dyed mad | Though Rome give Peace no better entertainment, the Learned Author thinks that France will; and therefore adds concerning the French Church, [Quacum us x16wus optanda foret etiamnum veteris redintegratio cencordia, quam constat plus mille ab hinc annis amicissime intercessisse inter Ecclesiam utramg, Gallicanam & Brittanicam, etiam tum cum Ecclesia Brittanica non communicabat cum Romana, & certe si utrag; pars absq; prejudicio, sese mutuo intelligeret, & pars extrema de rigore suo vellet remittere, ea Brittanica Ecclesia cum Gallicana concensio non foret adeo improbabilis, atq; prima fronte videtur Ecclesiam utramą; vel alterutram ignorantibus.] I add this but to shew the Judgement of those on whom the judgement of Grotius had any influence, for a Communion with the French, as if we little differed from them. Still professing that I would run with the forwardest to meet them upon tolerable terms: And that the remembrance of the moderation, wildom, charity of the Cassandrian party in France (that refisted the violence of the relt long in vain, and lamented the massacres. and were oppressed by them) is very grateful to my thoughts. and the names of many of them very honorable in my esteem. And it grieves me that Gretius called by Mr. Pierce a Protestant, should so far out go them in Popery, whom the same man confesseth to have been Papists. He goes much further then Cassander:

Cassander: Much further then Thuanus, that so plainly and truly openeth abundance of the Popish evills that Grotius patronizeth; and so long and successfully did his part to keep out of France the Authority of the Council of Trent, which was part of Grotius his Religion. And how far he went beyond that excellent man Michael Hospitalius, the Head of that party (so much commended by Beza as well as by Thuanus) and Foxius, and others, is easie to manifest.

5. And I am the more provoked also to perform this task, because I see by many more as well as Mr. P. that the design is still on foot: and that the Papists that are got so strong in England, under the mask of the Vani, the Seekers, the Insidels, the Quakers, the Behmenists, and many other Secis, have so much addition to their strength by Grotians that go under the mask of [Exiscopal Divines.] Which yet I should the less be troubled at, if France, Savoy, England, Holland, Poland, Bohemia, and all parts where they prevail, did not acquaint as by bloody, tormenting, thundering, staming evidence, how they use their power-

6. And it moveth me much also to consider the consequence of the point in hand. It is not a meer speculation, but a point fo practical, that the right decision and understanding of it, is. as much as the Peace of millions of fouls, yea of all the Churchet and Common-wealths in Christendom is worth. All that have any thing of the love of God alive within them, are somewhat fensible of the sinfulness and misery contained in the divisions and discord of Believers; and therefore they must needs be solicitous for the Cure, and lay out themselves and all they have or can do to accomplish it, if they knew the way. And the more zealous any man is for Peace, the more resolutely, will he carry on his work, and bear down all opposition that would, hinder him in that which he thinks the way of Peace. And when persons thus disposed by humanity and grace, shall be quite mistaken in the very thing they seek, even in the Nature of the Churches unity and peace, they will think themselves bound with all their-zeal and diligence, to endeavour the doing; of an evill work, and to accomplish a work neither possible: nor defirable. And it is not hard for a man of an indifferent, wit to fore-fee what uncharicableness, discomposure of minds, of Churches and Common-wealths, and abusing and endangering of souls, is like to be the fruit of such mistakes about the Churches Unity and Peace. And as the School useth to say (from Boetius and Anselm) Malum nonest nist à bono & propter bonum, so it will be like by experience to be made a proverb, that Bellum & discordia non sunt nist à pacificis & propter pacem: The greatest discords and wars will be from the Love and Endeavour of Unity and Concord, and for the obtaining of them by impossible means. These following evills may easily be foreseen.

1. If men mistake about the Nature of the visible form of the Catholick Church, and its unity, it is like to pervert their judgements in many other weighty points of Religion. For when they have received this Error as a Truth, then they will be exceedingly inclined to bend the rest of their opinions to it, and contrive them into a Consistent Form. For Truth would to Truth, as Fire would to Fire, and Water to Water. Yea all that is slexible within them shall be bended to the interest of this

2. As foon as ever any man hath received this opinion of the necessity of an Universal Visible Head, or common Government of the whole Chruch, he is either a Papist, or of an opinion equivalent in folly, tyrannie, and impiety, to Popery. For if such a Visible Head must be, there is no other that can pretend to it with Reason or Honesty any more then the Pope: Nor is it our quarrel against Rome, that their Bishop rather then another should be this usurping Head, but that they would have such a one at all! It is not who shall be the man, or power, but whether there shall be any such man or power that we dispute. This Error about the Necessity of an Universal Visible Head, is the very thing that turneth most to Popery, and this is the common argument that is mannaged by deceivers to that end, as their writings commonly declare.

3. And then when men are drawn over to be Papists for the avoiding of Schism, and the obtaining of Unity, they are unawares involved in the most desperate Schism; which I have proved that party to be guilty of: (and with it drink in the dregs of all the Roman abominations.) When men have set up a new Church-sorm, by setting up a new Head and Center of

Unity,

Unity, and then judge of all particular Churches and Members by this standard, it leadeth them unavoidably to separate from all the Churches and Christians upon earth, that conspire not,

and center not with them in their new devised Head.

4. And by this means Charity is much destroyed in mens fouls, (and he that hath least of Love, hath least of God) and the Preachers and Paftors turn all their studies into matter of Controversie, and their labors into wranglings, and all under pretence of Catholick Unity: And having not charity, they prove not only founding brass, and tinkling Cymbals in their most learned labors, but too often burning brass (like Perillus Bull,) and military Trumpets, and all this under pretenfe of Charity, when they have destroyed it. Hence is it that uncharitable censures are so common, and the Lambs of Christ so often cloathed in the skins of Wolves, by the Wolves that have by exchange put on the skin of the Lamb. Scarle a man that crosseth or displeaseth (that is, dissenteth from, or disobeyeth) the uncharitable Clergy, but he is stigmatized for an Heretick, and charged with almost as much wickedness, as their mouths are wide enough to utter, and the ears of other men to hear. What horrid things have they spoken of the poor Waldenses and Albigenses, and Bohemians? Of Luther, Oecolampadius, Calvin, and who not? Though I have had applauding flattering Letters from some of them that tryed whether I were flexible and du&ile, yet I doubt not but I shall have my share my felf before they have done with me: & I wonder I hear not of it before now. Hence among other reasons its like that Mr. Pierce became so destitute of Charity, as to disgorge his soul of so many bitter reproaches and calumnies against the Puritans and Presbyterians. whom if he know not, he finneth but as Paul did, but if he know, he terrifieth us from his principles by the fruits: that which shews the want of Charity, shews the want of saving Grace: and consequently the want of right to Glory. Hence it is that the greatest Schismaticks are the commonest accusers of their Brethren with schism, Pharisaically saying, I thank thee Lord that I am not as other men, nor as these Schismaticks. Hence also it is that so many learned well-meaning Papifts do so pervert their studies and endeavors, and abuse and lose (and worse then lose) their wits and parts to draw men to their way; compassing Sea and Eee

Land to make a Romish Proselite, especially of a Prince, or man of power, interest, or ability to serve them. What pains take they to draw Nations to their minds, and to embroil the world in contentions and confusions to attain their ends? What horrid persecutions, Massacres, and barbarous inhumane cruelties have multitudes of men of learning and good parts and natures beeningaged in, by the very Principle that I now confute, and for the promoting of their kind of Unity and Concord in wicked and impossible ways

7. Besides this, it takes men off from seeking the true Peace of the Church, while they mistakingly pursue a salse peace. The Devil, the cunning Enemy of Concord, hath not a more effectual way to take men off from the ways and means of holy Concord, then by starting them a salse game, and causing them to lay out all their labor to build a Babel, when they should be building Zion. Oh what a blessed state might the Church be in if all the Jesuites, Fryers, Prelates, Priests and others, had laid out that labor for a righteous possible Unity and Peace, in Gods appointed way, which they have vainly and impiously laid out to unite the world in a Vice-christ or Vice-god?

Fore seeing, and at present seeling many of these calamitous consequences to the Church, I think it of exceeding moment, that mens judgements should be recisived that are missed, concerning the nature of the unity of the Church: Still professing that to me they are the dearest Christians, and nearest to my heart, that are most for Unity and Concord, so it be in Christ and upon righteous possible conditions.

CHAP. II.

Having given you an account of the Occasion and Motives that produced this Disputation, I shall now briefly state the Controversie between us. And because the terms are all plain, and my sense of them explained in the fore-going part, I shall think no more here necessary, then to tell you in certain Propositions, How much we Grant, and How far we are Agreed, and then to tell you what it is that we deny, and wherein we differ.

Prop. 1. We are Agreed that Christ hath a true Catholick Church on earth, and ever hath had since first he planted it, and ever will have to the end of the world, and that the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it, or hath it ever had an Intercision for a day or an hour: and that this Church is so far Infallible, as that it never was, nor ever will be ignorant of, or erroneous against any Article of saith, or part of obedience that is of absolute Necessity to salvation (otherwise by that error it should have ceased to be the Church of Christ.)

Prop. 2. We are agreed that this Catholick Church in refpect of the Internal faith and charity of the Members, and their Communion with Christ by the quickening Spirit on his part, and holy sincere returns of devotion on theirs, may be called, Mystical, or Invisible. The thing is utterly undenyable, though some Papists in the perversness of contentious Disputations seem to deny it. And doubtless when they affert that Christ hath no Invisible Church, they must mean it simply, and not quoad hac interiora, or else they speak against all sense and Reason. No man is simply Invisible: but every man as to his soul is Invisible.

Prop. 3. We are Agreed that this Catholick Church in regard of the ontward Profession of this Inward Faith and Holiness, and in regard of the discernable numbers of persons making this Profession, hathever been visible, since first it began to be visible: And that the visibility hath never had any intercision. If some Protestanss say otherwise, it's clear that this is all that by the common judgement of Protestants is maintained, viz. That Christians, and the Catholick Church containing the Professing Christians through the world, have ever since their first planting had a visible being; but yet 1. That the Visibility was not such but that Hereticks (as the Arrians did) might make a controversie of it, whether they, or the true Christians were the Church indeed, and by their greater numbers or Power might blind men, that they should not see which was the true Church. 2. And that in the Catholick Church some parts may be much more corrupt, and others much more pure; and the Purer part be so much the lesser, and oppressed and vilified by the more corrupt, that the most part should not discern their Purity, but take them (as they did the Waldenses) for Hereticks, 3. And that two parts or more of this Catholick Church may fo fall out among themselves, as that one of them shall deny the other to be part of the Catholick Church, when yet they really for all that censure remain parts of it, as much as they: And hereupon may grow a contest between them, which of the two is the true Catholick Church, and one part may fay, It is we and not you; and the other may fay, It is we and not you; and no man shall be able to discern which of the two is the Catholick. Church, because it is neither of them, but each are a part. 4. And though the Bodies of the members are visible, and their Worshipping actions Visible, and their Profession audible, yet the faith Professed is not Visible; nor the Truth of their Profession or of their Christianity, or Church; Truth being the object of the Intellect, and not of sence. 5. And though the true members of the Church do know the true Church, and so it is apparent unto them, yet most that are not members of it, do not know it. Arrians and Mahometans know us to be men professing such and such Articles of faith: but they know not that to be the true faith, nor us to be the true Church, but judge the contrary. In this sence (contained in these Propositions) it is that Protestants deny the Church to have been alwayes Vifible, and not as the Papills commonly mistake them.

Prop. 4. We are agreed that this Catholick Church is but. One: There are not two Visible, nor two Mystical Catholick Churches: Nor are the Mysticall and Visible, two: Bellarmine might have spared all his labour that he hath bestowed in vain upon this point, to prove that the Visible and Invisible are not two Catholick Churches. The Protestants are further from that Opinion then the Papists: and it is more suitable to the Popish Interest and Cause to be of that Opinion, then to the Protestants. If it were not that they are past learning, by the advantage of their Infallibility, and especially of one man, and one so mean, condemned by them, and that it is unlawfull to be a Teacher of Error, I could tell them of a new device by the advantage of this distinction of Catholick Churches, for the modelling their mistakes into a more specious plausible form, then now it appeareth in to the rest of the Churches. But we are glad of their company in any Truth, and therefore will not disagree from them in that which makes against themselves.

One Objection I once heard a Learned Anabaptist cast in our way, viz. There may be a Visible Church of hypocrites: therefore the Mystical and Visible may be two. Answ. But the Question was of the Catholick Church, and not of a particular Church. We confess that some members of the Catholick Church are Mystical and Visible in the several respects before mentioned: and that some are Visible and not Mystical, or as Bellarmine well calls them, Dead Members, and not Living; and that the Church as Visible, is more comprehensive then the Church as Regenerate. or Invisible, and yet all but One Church, though it have more members in it in one respect then in another: And we confess that its possible for twenty or an hundred of these Dead members to constitute a particular Church by themselves (though it is not usual for Visible Churches to be without Living members :) and so there may be a particular Visible Dead Member (Analogically called a Member,) or a particular Visible Church that is thus Dead; and these be parts of the Catholick Church as Visible. But yet there is not two Catholick Churches, One Visible, and the other Invisible, one alive and the other Dead. In a Corn field there are, I. Good Corn. 2. Stricken, blafted Corn that hath a name and shew, but in deed no Corn. 3. Tares, darnell, cockle, and such weeds. It is called, A Field as it conteineth them all: It is called [a Corn field] only from the Corn. The Univocal proper parts of a Corn field, is the Corn only: The Visible and Analogical parts are also the blasted ears: The darnel and cockle are no parts, but noxious accidents. There are not two fields of Corn, one of true Corn, and the of other blasted ears: And yet the Corn field, taken largely and Analogically, bath more parties in it then true Corn: and you may perhaps have some particular sheavs that are wholly of that which is blasted: which you will call a sheaf of Corn Analogically only: but a sheaf of weeds you will not at all call a sheaf of Corn. Even so in the Catholick Church, there are sincere Christians which are true and living members; and there are Hypocrites which are Analogically members; and there are locally mixed many that by denying effential points of the Chri-Ecc 3

Prop. 5. We are also Agreed that this One Visible Catholick Church, is One Political Holy Society, as united in Jesus Christ the Head, who teacheth and ruleth it by his Ministers and other Officers, in the feveral parts, according to the necessity of each. We call it One Political Society, I. Principally because that all the Church is united in this One Soveraign, or Head, the Lord Jesus: and therefore it is called his body. have all the same holy doctrine of faith, and Law to live by. and be judged by. 3. They have all Church Officers of the same fort under Christ to teach and govern them. 4. They have all the same kind of Holy Ordinances, as Reading, Preaching, Praying, Praise, Sacraments, &c. appointed them by the Lord. 5. They are all engaged in One and the same Holy Covenant to the Lord: More might be mentioned (and shall be God willing, in a peculiar Treatife of Catholicism, or the Catholick Church) And though Christ himself be not now seen among us, yet may he truly be called a Visible Head. For 1. He sometime lived visibly on earth. 2. And is now the Visible King of all the Church, as he is in the Heavens. Though we fee him not, the Celestiall Inhabitants do. It is but little of the world that feeth the Pope, any more then they fee Christ: If one unseen to us may be a pretended Visible Head, the other may be truly so. So that the Body, Head, Laws, Worship, &c. being Visible, so is the Policy.

Prop. 6. We are agreed also, that all these Christians, and particular Churches, are obliged by Christ, even by the very Law of Nature, and the ends of their calling, and the General Laws of the Gospell, to live in as much Love, and Unity, and Peace as they can; and to hold as full and extensive communion as they can: that is, as far as their work requireth, and their Capacity will permit and enable them; those that are cohabitans and members of one Congregation, must hold local communion in that Congregation, unless Necessity prohibite. Those that through distance are uncapable of joining in the same Assemblies, should yet be conjoined, 1. In the same Lord, Faith, Baptism, Covenant, Profession. 2. In the same bond of Christian special Love. 3. In the use of the same fort of holy worthip, as to the Substance, though they differ in circumstances, as in the Word, Prayer, Praises, Sacraments, &c. 4. And in one fort of Church Officers and Government. And as far as we have to do with each other, all this should be manifested, and we should readily own one another as Brethren and

Prop. 7. To these ends it is meet that the Bishops or Pastors of the Churches should hold in way of Association, as frequent Assemblies as is needfull, for the maintaining of mutual Love and Correspondency, and right understanding of each other, and to manifest their unity, and assist each other in the work of God, that it may be the more successfully carried on by united strength against all oppositions.

Prop. 8. These Associations should so far know the members Associated, as is necessary to the holding of a Christian Communion with them, and therefore should not admit all into their Association, but such as either produce the Evidences of sound faith and Holy life, or literas communicatorias, certificates from credible members of their communion, that the persons are fit for their Communion.

Prop. 9. These Associations are principally for the Union and Communion of Churches, and therefore must apply themselves to the maintaining and promoting of Unity.

Prop. 10. Such Associations should therefore have their set times of frequent meeting in Synods, for Ordinary help of one another, besides extraordinary meetings on extraordinary occasions, which none should neglect.

Prop. 11. We agree that such Associated Pastors may have their Moderators either pro tempore, or stated as the cause requireth. And that it is no great matter whether he be called a President, Bishop, Moderator, &c. in which all should have liberty, so far as that the peace of the Church be not cast away for such names.

Prop. 12. We are also agreed that whatsoever shall be concluded in order to the Union and Communion of Churches, in any of these Synods, the particular Associated Members must observe, they being thereto obliged, by Vertue of those General precepts thet require us to do all in Unity and Concord, and with one mind and mouth to gloriste God, and to avoid divisions, &c. Except they be such things as cannot be obeyed, unless we violate violate the Law of God. Thus far the Canons, that is, Agree-

Prop. 13. We are also Agreed, that when ever the good of the Church requireth it, there may be Greater Assemblies also held, consisting of many of these conjunct, or special members delegate by the rest: And that this course should extend as far as our capacity will allow in needfull cases.

Prop. 14. Lastly we shall grant, that where Pastors cannot through distance or other Impediments, hold Synods, or any particular Churches cannot send any competent members to such Synods, yet may they, when its needfull, by messengers certifice each other of their faith, professions, practifes, and particular doubts and cases, and so hold communion, in some degree; owning each other as Brethren in one Lord, and by such intercourse of Messengers and Letters as we are capable of, assisting, and seeking assistance from each other: As Basil and the reit of the Eastern Bishops did to the Western in their distress while they had hope. And the faith of all the Churches that are neer enough for any externall communion, being thus known, their Litera Communicatoria may be valid and satisfactory, when any member passeth into other parts.

Thus far I hope we are Agreed: This much I am fure we

We hold that this Universal Church (which is one in Christ their Head, as the world is one Kingdom in God the absolute Soveraign King) is by Christ distributed into many Congregations, dispersed over the face of the Earth, and that these as feveral Corporations in one Kingdom, have all their particular Governours and Order, All forcible Government we ascribe to the Magistrate, and deny it to the Pastors of the Church. And that teaching and Guidance which is called Ecclefiastick Government, we suppose is the work of every Pastor in his flock. and the Ordering of the communion of Churches, by Canons, Agreements (and their execution in part.) is the work of And as in this Kingdom, all the Free-schools are governed by the Schoolmasters, who are all under the Prince and Laws, without any General Schoolmasters to Teach, or Oversee. and Rule the rest, (and without Synods too, though they may meet meet when their mutual Edification requires it,) and yet all the Schools in England are in Peace, because no Archscoolmassers presume to rob the Magistrate of his power: Even so we judge, that if Pastors do but Teach and Guide their severall flocks, and the Magistrate keep and use his power of forcible Government, that is, in seeing that they do their Offices saithfully, and no Archpastors presume to take the power of the Magistrates out of their hands, the Churches may have quietness and peace: so still allowing a greater Necessity of Communion, and so of Synods, among Churches then among Schools, and reserving the rod to the secular power. And we concieve, that most of the stir that Popes and Popish Prelates have made about Church Government, hath been but to rob the Magistrates of his due, and to become themselves the Church-Magistrates

But that the Church hath any Politicall Universal Head but Christ alone, either a Vice-god, or Vice-Christ, either Pope or Council; that any one is as Pope Julius faith of himself, [in the place of God, the maker of all things and Laws, I this we deny; That the whole Church on Earth, is so one Political Society, as to be under any one terrestial numericall Head, whether personal or collective, Pope, Council, or Patriarks, having power of Legislation, or judgement over the whole, and by whom each member is to be Governed, this we deny : and think it as abfurd (and much more finfull!) as to affirm that all the world must needs have one Visible Monarch under God to represent him; and that he is no subject to the God of Heaven. that acknowledgeth not this Visible Universall Monarch. We deny that the Church is such a Society: We deny that it hath fuch an Head: We deny that it hath any fuch universal Humane Laws: We deny that the parts of it are to be conjoyned by the subordinate Officers (Cardinals, Patriarks, Archbishops, or what ever) of such an usurping Soveraign. We affirm that no Christian should fancy or affert that any such Head and Order for unity is appointed by Christ; or that it is Desirable, or Rome to be the better liked of because it pleadeth for such an Order, or vainly boasseth of such of an unity; or that any should dare to contrive the promoting of it. Yea we maintain that such funcies and contrivances are the most notable means of Fff

the division, or desolation of the Chuches; And that it is the notable hinderance of the unity of all the Christian Churches, that such a false Head and Center of unity is set up, and an Impossible Impious unity pleaded for, and suriously sought by fire and sword, instead of the true desirable unity: And that the Churches will never have true unity and peace if these principles of theirs be not disgraced and disowned, and the true principles better understood.

I shall now give you some Arguments for our Assertion, and then in the End shall give you the true Grounds and Means

CHAP. III.

Our Arguments for the Negative.

Thail principally deal with them that would Head the Church with a Council, that is, would make the Church to be autonomicall, and be the Soveraign, or chief Governour of it felf, or the Church Representative of the Church reall (as they use to call them.) As to them that Head it with the Pope, I have said enough already, and others much more, especially Blondell unanswerably. Yet I shall partly take them also in my way, though I deal principally with the other.

1. There is no such Head Instituted by Christ. The Scripture pretenses for it I have before consuted, and they are so poor,

2. The Popes Soveraignty is against the Judgement of the Ancient Fathers, and practise of the Primitive Church, as I have proved in this and a former Book.

3. It is against Tradition, as brought down to us by the greatest part of the Church on earth by far, as is before proved.

4. It is against the Judgement of the sar greatest part of the present Catholick Church, as is proved.

5. It is the the meer effect of pride and tyranny: a plain de-

fign to let up one man over all the world for his greatness, and their hurt.

6. The pretense of this Soveraignty is the consequent only of Romes greatness, and the will of Emperours, that to conform the Ecclesiastical state to the civil, did give a Primacy to the Bishop of Rome within the Empire.

7. It is a meer Impossibility for one man to be the Soveraign of all the Churches in the world, and do the work of a Soveraign for them. He had need of many millions and millions of Treasure to defray the charge (which Peter had not.) While he pretends to govern all the world, he doth but leave them ungoverned, or not by him. How can he governall those Churches in the Dominions of Insidels, that will not endure his Government? There are more then all the Papists in the world now from under his Government voluntarily, that could not be governed by him if they would.

8. There are yet visible many great Churches that were planted by the Apostles, or in their dayes, and never were under Romes Soveraignty to this day, as the Etheopians, Persians, Indians, and most that were without the verge of the Roman Empire.

9. There is no use for such an Head, as I shall shew anon, of to. There is not so much Reason for it, or possibility of it, as that One man must be King or Monarch of all the world. Considering that spiritual Government requireth residency, and can less be done by Deputies then temporal: And that Princes are truly Church-Governours also in their kind and way.

I'I. It is an intolerable usurpation of the Power of all Christian Princes and Pastors, who conjunctly in their several wayes are intrusted by God with the Government of the Churches under them.

12. To make such a Soveraign, is to make a new Catholick Church, that Christ never made.

13. And its the most notorious schism, dividing themselves from all the Catholick Church, that are not their subjects.

14. And inhumane cruelty to damn all (as much as Heathers at least) that believe not in the Pope, be they never so holy.

15. To set up a Vice-god (as Pope fulius paraphrastically called himself) and a Vice-christ on earth over all the Church (as the Papist commonly do, maintaining that the Pope is the Vicar of Christ) is to set up an Idoll, and a name of Blasphemy, against Jesus Christ, whose prerogative it is to be the sole Universal Head; And therefore he must needs be an Antichrist, whether he be The Antichrist or not. This much to the Pope.

Dr. Hummond on Thes. The Catholick, Church of Christ is not one Visible Poli-1 Tim.3. e. tical body, as joyned to one Universal Visible Head or Sovesaith, raign, (save only Christ:) And consequently it is not the may to [And such heal the Churches divisions, to dram all into such a body, or endeaall the particular vour such an Union.

of the whole world confidered together under the supream Head, Christ Jesus, disspensing them all by himself, & ad ninistring them severally, not by any one accommus, but by the several Bishops as inseriour Heads of Unity to the several bodies so constituted by the several Apostles in their plantations; each of them having an acoronaliza several distinct Commission from Christ immediately, and subordinate to none, but the supream donor or plenipotentiary.

This I make good by these following Arguments, which reach both the Italian Papists, that would have the Pope to be the Head or Soveraign; and the French and Cassandrian, who would have a General Council to be the Head, and the Pope only to be the chief Patriarch, and the Principium Unitatis: For if I prove that the Body is not one, as Headed by any except Christ, I shall say enough against both these opinions: But yet as is said, it is principally against the later (who are for the Headship of a Council) that I shall direct my Arguments; because they are the busic Reconcilers; and because the rest are so largely consuted already on both sides.

Argument 1. That which is the true form of the Catholick Church of Christ, it retaineth de sact at this day: But it retaineth not a Political Union under a Visible Terrestrial Universal Head: therefore this is not the true form of the Catholick

Church:

Or, what the Catholick Church is quoad effentiam, that it is also quoad existentiam: But it is not such a Body quoad existentiam; therefore not quoad essentiam.

If any will grant the conclusion, quoad effentiam vel formam,

and

and say that this Policy, Head and Union are not essential to the Church, but separable accidents tending only ad melius essential will give away his cause: For the Pars Imperans and pars subdita are the two essential parts of a body Politick, or Republick; whether Civil or Ecclesiastical, as a soul and body are the parts of man: and is twant either part, the essence is destroyed; It hath lost its Political form. But I need not stand on this, because the case is past controversie, and I know not of any that make the objection, or will go on such terms: I am sure those do not that I have now to deal with. Another thing there may be that is called a Church, without this Form or Head, but not this same thing or body that now we speak of:

The Major proposition I prove thus: The Church of Christ is a true Church at this day, or retaineth its essential parts: therefore it retaineth its form. If its essentials were not in existence, the Church were extinct, or did not exist: But that the Church is not extinct or nulled; the opponents will easily grant, and the promise of Christ will easily prove; The gates of Hell shall not

The Minor I prove thus; If the Catholick Church be now Headed with one Visible Head (beside Christ,) then it is either the Pope or a General Council. But it is neither of these. That it is not the Pope, the French will grant. And I. Its proved at large by many a volume of Protestant writers; and 2. By the present visible state of the Church; The greatest part of the Church on Earth (and all those in Heaven) disown the Universall Soveraignty or Headship of the Pope; The Greeks, Abassines, Armenians, Protestants, &c.

That it is not a General Council appeareth, in that there is no fuch thing in Natural or Moral Existence. Not in Natural rall existence; For where is it? when called? how long have they fate? But this none will affirm.

Notin Moral existence; For there is no such thing pretended, nor possible. I consess the Common wealth is not dissolved at the death of the Prince; because a Successor being determined of by Law (as in hereditary Government,) there is one bath presently right to the place, though he want solemn admittance; or if elective, yet Rexnonmoritur; both because the successor hath an Intentional Moral being in the Fundamental Law; and

f 3":

the Intention of the Electors conjunctly, and they presently make an actual choice, or else the power so far as is necessary for execution, salls in the mean time into the hands of some Trustees of the Republick, while they are electing, and the soveraign is in fieri: Or if it be in some dissolvable body, whose actual Session is intermitted, yet they are still in Moral being, and ready to assemble, and the Soveraignty for so much as is of ordinary exercise, even over the Universal body, is in the mean time in the hands of some other Assembly, who therefore may be said to partake of the Soveraignty.

But none of this is so in the present case. Here is no General Council ordinarily in natural being; and therefore in the vacancy not in Moral being: There is none that pretendeth to be in Moral being: For the Council of Trent, which was the last pretended General Council, is dissolved; and the Pope would not take it well if any shall call another without him: and no time is appointed for it: The Decennial Council determined of at Constance, is an empty name: and that Decree did but serve to prove, that really General Councils are not the Supream Governors of the Church: For no one obeyeth them in that. And whether ever the Pope, or any one else will call a General Council again, we cannot tell. So that now there is none; nor we know not whether there ever will be. But further.

Argum. 2. That which is the Head, or form of the Catholick Church (or any way Necessary to its Being or Unity) hath ever been found in it, or at least within this thousand years, or at least in the primitive purer ages, or sometime at least: But a true General Council is not always in being, nor ever was within this thousand years, no nor in the purer ages, nor ever at all: therefore it is no Head of the Church, nor necessary to its unity.

The Major will not be denyed. The proof of any branch of the Minor may serve turn: much more of all. 1. That a General Council hath not been this forty years in being, all men will confess. If the Church have been Headless forty years, or wanted any thing Necessary to its Being or Unity, then was it so long no Church, or many Catholick Churches, which are known untruths.

2. If the Church have had any General Council within this shouland years, it was either that of Trent, that of Canstance, Basil.

Basil, Florence, the Laterane, &c. But none of these were such. For 1. there were no Bishops from the most of the Christian world. I have told you before how few at Trent did the most egregious parts of their work (few more then forty:) The Churches of Syria, Armenia, Ethiopia, and the most of the Christian world, were never so much as fairly invited to be there: If at Florence the Patriarch of Constantinople, and two or three Greeks more were present, what's that to all the Churches of the Greek Profession through the world? besides all others. The ancient Councils called General, contained All the Bishops that could and would come: For all were to be there. and not one Bishop chosen by two hundred, or by a Prince, instead of two hundred. But at these later Councils were neither all, nor fo much as any Delegates (though but chosen by hundreds to represent them) from most of the Churches of the world. Besides the packing and fore-resolutions of the Popes, that ruled all, and many other Arguments that nullifie thefe pretended General Councils. I say not that all of them were useless: but none of them were any more like to Oecumenical or Universal, then Italy and its few servants are like to all the Christian world.

And that the Ancient Councils were not General. I mean, the four first, or any like them, I easily prove. 1. From the Original of them, and the Mandates, and the Prefidents, and Ratifications, and Executions. It was the Roman Emperors that called them, and that fent their Mandates to the Lieutenants and other secular Officers to see to the execution, and to the Bishops to be there: It was the Roman Emperors that by themselves or their Lieutenants, were present to Rule them all according to the proportion of secular interest. It was the same Powers that Ratified them, and what they ratified went for current, and their Ratification was fought by the Bishops to that end. It was the same Power that banished them that obeyed not, and compelled men to submit to them. Now let any man of Reason tell me, what Power Constantine, Theedofins, Martian, or any Roman Emperor had to summon the Bishops that were subjects in the Dominions of all other Princes through the world? What Authority had they out of their own Dof aginim

2. Yea

2. Yea de facto, the case is known, I. That they did not fummon the Bishops of other Princes Dominions. 2. That those Bishops (at least no considerable number were there.) What Mandates or Invitations were fent to all the Churches of India, Ethiopia, Persia, or the parts of Parthia, Armenia, Ireland, Scotland &c. that were out of the Roman Power? Whoever those one or two were that Ensebins calls Bishops of Persis, Parthia, Armenia, it's a plain case, that there were no due Representatives of all or any of these Churches there, that were without the verge of the Empire. No Brittish, Irish, (that is, then Scottish) Bishops were there, nor any from abundance other Churches. And the other Councils after that at Nice. make less pretense to such a thing. So that it is most evident that General Councils then were but of the Bishops of the Empire. or the Roman world, unless a Bishop or two sometime might drop in that lived next them. And was the Church no wider then the Empire? Let Baronius himself be judge, that tells you of the Churches planted by the primitive Preachers, in India, Persia, and many other parts of the world. Let Godignus be judge, that confesseth the Ethiopians had the Gospel lince the Apostles days (and I pray in what age were they Papists?) Let Raynerins be judge, that faith the Churches of Armenia and others planted by the Apostles were not subject to the Church of Rome? Let the Antiquities of Brittain and Ireland be evidence. But the case is undenyable. All this noyle then of General Councils comes but from a supposition that the Roman world was the whole Christian world. A small mistake! We home-bred Rusticks may shortly be as well able to prove that a London Convocation was a General Council! Pighius pleading for the Pope, saith plainly, that General Councils were the devile of Constantine. And the Popes themselves do setch the most specious Evidences for their primacy from the Decrees or Edicks of Emperors, Valentipian, Gratian and others. And what power had those Emperors at the other fide of the world?

3. And then before the Nicene Council, what General Councils were there fince the Apostle days? None doubtless that the world now knows of. It's senseless enough to think that 350 Roman Bishops at the second Council of Nice, or the 150 Bishops in the third Council at Constantinople, or the 165 Bishops at the second Council at Constantinople, or the 150 Bishops at the first there, were the Universal Church of Christ? But it will be more ridiculous to say, that the new-sound Concilium Sinuessanum, imagained without proof to meet in a certain Cave, for the deposition of an Idolatrous Pope, were a General Council. Where then was the Head, the unity, the form of the Church for 300 years? Was it governed all that time, think you, by a General Council? yea or ever one day since the Apostles?

Well, but was there ever fuch a thing at all? Indeed men have a fairer pretence when the Church was contained in a family, or a City, or a narrow space, to call the meetings of the Apostles or other Christians then, by the name of a General Council, but they are hard put to it, if this beall. The great Instance insisted on is the Council, Ast. 15. But were the Bishops of all the Churches there? or summoned to appear? AEt. 14.23. they had ordained them Elders in every Church; but few of them were there, Timothy, Titus, abundance were ab. fent. It's plain, that it was to the Apostles and Church at Hierusalem as the Fountain; and best informers that they sent. Not because these were the Universal Church, but because they were of greatest knowledge and authority. If it could be proved that all the Apostles were there, it would no more prove them a General Council, then that the Deacons of one Church were ordained by a General Council, Act. 6. And Matthias and Justus put to the Lot by a General Council, Act. 1. and that Christ appeared to a General Council after his Resurrection, and gave the Sacrament of his Supper to a General Council before his death. So that it is most evident from the event, that Christ never made a General Council the Head or Governor of his Church; and that there never was such a thing the world, much less continually.

Atgum. 3. The form or unity (no nor the well-being) of the Catholick Church, dependeth not on that which is either unnecessary, unjust, or naturally or morally impossible: But a true General Council is none such: It cannot be: or if it were it would be unnecessary and unjust. Therefore it is not the Head or Soveraign Governor of the Church, on which its being, unity, (or well being) doth depend.

I have nothing here to prove but the Minor. And I. I shall prove the Impossibility. 2. The non-necessity. 3. The unjustice of a General Council: and so that no such thing is to be expected.

A true General Council consisteth of all the Pastors or Bishops of the whole world; or so many as Morally may be called All. A General Council of Delegates from all the Churches. must consist of so many proportionably chosen, as may signifie the sense and consent of all, or else it is a meer name and shadow. Both these are Morally, if not Naturally Impossible: as I prove.

I. From the distance of their habitations, some dwell in Mesopotamia, some in Armenia, some in Ethiopia, some in Mexico, the Philippines, or other parts of the East and West-Indies: fome at St. Thome's, fome dispersed through most of the Turks Dominions. Now how long must it be, before all these have tidings of a Council, and summons to appear, or send their Delegates? Who will be at the cost of sending messengers to all these? Will the Pope? Not if he be no richer then Peter was. How many hundred thousand pound will it cost before that all. can have a lawful summons? And when that is done, it will be long before they can all in their feveral Nations meet, and agree upon their Delegates, and their instructions. And when that is done, who shall bear their charges in the journey? Alas the best of the Churches Pastors have had so little gold and silver, that they are unable themselves to defray it. A few Bishops out of each of these distant Countries, will consume in their journey a great deal of money and provision. To provide them shipping by Sea, and Horses, and all other necessaries by land, for fo many thousand miles, will require no small allowance.

And then confider, that it must be voluntary contribution, that must maintain them. And most love their money so well, and know so little of the need of such journeys and Councils, that doubtless they will not be very forward to so great a con-

And it is not to be expected that Infidel Princes will give way to the transporting of so much money from their countries on the Churches occasions; which they bate.

forward; How long will they be in their journey? Shipping cannot always be had: Many of them must go by land: It cannot be expected that some of them should come in less than three, or four, if not seven years time to the Council. And will ever a General Council be held upon these terms?

2. Moreover the persons for the most part are not able to persorm such journeys. Bishops are Elders: Most of them are aged persons. The wisest are they that are fit to be trusted in so great a business by all the rest: And sew attain that maturity but the aged: Especially in the most of the Eastern & Southern Churches that want the helps of Learning which we have. And will the Churches be so barbarous as to turn out their aged saithful Pastors upon the jaws of death? Some of them are not like to live out so long time as the journey, if they were at home. They must pass through raging and tempestuous Seas, through Deserts and enemies, and many thousand miles where they must daily consists with distress. It were a fond conceit, to think that (without unusual providences) ten Bishops of a thousand should come alive to the Council, through all these labors and difficulties.

And moreover, it's known how few bodies will bear the Seas, and so great change of air: How many of our Souldiers in the Indies are dead, for one that doth survive? And can ancient Bishops, spent with studies and labors, endure all this? Most studious painful Preachers here with us are very sickly, and scarse able to endure the small incommodities of their habitations: And could they endure this?

3. Moreover abundance of the Pastors of the Churches live under Mahometans and other Infidels, that will not give them leave to travail so far into the Countries of Christian Princes on such occasions. They hate us and our Religion. They are oft at war with us, and then would hang those Bishops as Intelligen-cers that should offer to come among us.

4. And they must many of them pass through the Countries of other Princes, that are Insidels, and oft in war with the parts which they come from or go to. And it cannot be expected that in such cases they should allow them passage through their Countries. If one do, all will not: When poor Lithgow had travailed nineteen years, he was tortured, strappado'd and different gg 2 joynted, joynted, and made a cripple at Malaga in the Spanish Inquisition. And thanked God and the English Embassador that he sped so well.

- 5. Even at home in Europe, the Princes are so commonly in Wars (as are France, Spain, Venice, Swéden, Denmark, Poland, the Emperor, Brandenburgh, Holland, Portugal, England, Transylvania, &c. at this very day) that there is not the least probability that they should all or half consent to have so many of their subjects pass into their enemies Countries to reside so long. Jealousies raised by particular Interests would make it Treason.
- 6. Moreover many Princes understand that the Pope hath no power to call such Councils, nor any man else: and they know the design of the Pope to subject the world to himself. And therefore they will abhor that their subjects should travail so far at his call, that hath such designs, (or at another mans that hath no authority to call them.) This hath made the Emperor of Habassia so resolutely resist the Popes pretensions (as Godignus, Massaus, and others do declare) Few Princes will endure to have their subjects brought under a forreign Power.
- 7. And if you suppose all the Bishops come to the Council, the very number out of all the Christian world, (to make any thing like a General Council) would be so great, as would be unsit for one, or two, or ten, or twenty Council houses or Assemblies.
- 8. And they would be uncapable of conferring, through diversity of languages. Few of the Abassines, Egyptians, Syrians, Armenians, or of most of the world, understand and speak any language that would commonly be understood and used in a Council. Nor is it possible to do it by Interpreters. For so many Interpreters cannot be used to tell all that understand not, what every man saith, and to expound their minds to others. This would waste an age in a Council; so that such a Council would be a very Babel.

9. And Councils use to be so long, that it cannot be expected that after so many years journey, old men should live to see the issue, or do any great matters there. Eighteen years at Trent would consume a great many of the Bishops: How many even of the Popes own Legates dyed before that Council could be finished?

10. And if they should live to see the end, can you dream that they should live to perform the like tedious dangerous journeys and voyages to bring back the Decrees of the Councill to their Churches? Judge now whether such Councils are not Naturally Impossible.

I will add but this. No men can be compelled. And to make all the world at once agree to so difficult a task, and agree upon the time and place, must be a Miracle. One will be for it, and another against it. One for one time and place, and another for another through most of the world. We see how hardly any two Princes can agree upon times, places, and all circumstances in their Treaties.

2. Let us next enquire, of what Necessity such a Council is. If it be Necessary for Church government, it is either to make Laws, or to execute them. But for neither of these : therefore they are not Necessary:

1. Christ hath made us Laws already sufficient for salvation. And I hope he hath not constituted so loose a Society, and lest his Body to such mutations, as that they must so frequently have . new Laws. And if it must, sure it must be from their Soveraign, who hath referved the Leg flative Power to himself as his Prerogative. Legislation is the highest act of Supremacy, and chief flower in the Crown of Soveraignty. The Church is Christs subjects, and shall subjects make their own Laws? Scripture is sufficient. If this be all that we need General Councils for, to make Universal Laws to the Church, we can spare them as well as Traytors in a Common-wealth.

And for Execution of Laws, it is either Magisterial, by force of the Sword; and this they have nothing to do with, it being the Princes right. Or it is for the Excommunicating Church offenders: And to cast them out of particular Churches is the work of the Pastors of those Churches. Others cannot know the persons, and hear the cause. If all Churchcauses should come to a General Council, Millions of men

And if it be to judge who shall be cast out of the Communion of the Churches, and what Churches themselves are to Ggg3 be be excommunicated, the Synods of neighbour Pastors are to do as much of that as is to be done. Where then is the Necessity of such Councils at such rates? Augustine said that drunkenness in his time was grown so strong, that there must be a Council to suppress it. Could they do such seats as to cure Drunkenness, Whoredom, Covetousness, Pride, I would be for them.

3. If a General Council were called, it must be a most unjust Assembly. For, 1. It would be guilty of cruelty and destroying the Church of Christ, by killing so many of the Pastors as aforesaid.

2. It would be guilty of cruelty and Church destoying by the starving and defertion of the flocks at home. What will become of the poor peoples souls, when they are left to the Wolves, to Hereticks, and Deceivers, and to the temptations of their own flesh, and the world, being for ten or twenty years, or for ever deprived of their Pastors under pretense of a General Council? Basil in his seventieth Epistle tells the Western Bishops, that they of the East could not come to solicite their own cause with them. For, saith he, If any one of us (N. B.) do for the least moment leave his Church, he presently leaveth his people to deceivers. And on this ground he shews that they could not fo much as spare Bishops to be meer Messengers to them: Much less could they have spared a sofficient number to stay seven or ten years together. If any think that such Necesfities are unusuall, he knows not the world. And Councils are most usefull if ever, when necessities are greatest.

3. In Councils things are carried by Votes: and so Abassia, Armenia, Mexico, and places foremote that they can send but one or two, would be out-voted by that corner of the world where the Council is called, that can send in proportionably an hundred for one; and so under the name of a General Council, a faction might promote any hereste or carnal interest, and no Churches would be so enslaved as those that send at the dearest rates. Italy and a sew more parts, at Trent, would over-vote all the Churches of East and South, and set up what interest or opinion they please: And so if one corner of the Church can err, all may err, for all the Council: Where there is an equal interest, there should be an equal power in Councils: which will certainly be otherwise.

4. If the Pope be he that must call General Councils, we shall have none, till it will stand with his interest. And if he have not the power of calling them, no one else hath, for none pretendeth to it. And if they must be called by universal consent, three hundred years is little enough for all the world to treat of the time, place, and other circumstances, and consent.

5. And if the Pope must call them, he will easily by the very choice of the place, procure the accomplishment of his own

6. Those that think it the Popes prerogative to call a Council. do also affirm (as I before shewed in the express words of Binnius and others) that a Council hath no more power then the Pope will give them, and that when they are convened by him. and have done their work, it is all of no Validity, if he allow it not. If he approve one half, that half is valid, and his approbation will make their Decrees the Articles of our faith; when as the other half which he disapproveth shall not be worth a straw. And is it not a most foolish thing for all the world to put themselves to so much charge to defray the expenses of their Bishops, and hazzard their lives, and lose their labours at home for so many years, and hazzard the Churches by their absence. when for ought they know the Bishops of the whole Christian world do but lofe all their labour, and nothing shall be valid if they please not the Pope of Rome? And is it not most abominable justice in him thus to put all the world to trouble, and cost, and hazzard the Churches and the Pastors lives for nothing. when if the infallible spirit be only in himself, he might have done the work himself, and saved all this cost and labour.

7. By what Justice shall all the Catholick Church be obliged by the Decrees of such a General Council? Is it by Law, or Contract? If by Law, it is by Divine Law, or by Humane. If by Divine, let it be shewed that ever God made such a Government for the Catholick Church, and then take all. If by Humane Laws, it is impossible, and therefore not to be affirmed. For no Humane Soveraign hath power to make Laws for all the world. If you say is it by contract, then 1. All those Nations that thought not meet to send any Bishops to the Council, will be free. 2. And so will all those be that sent Bishops who dissented from the rest. For contract or Consent bindeth none but Contraders or Consenters. And so England is not bound by the Council of Nice, Epbesses, Calcedon, Constantinople, &c.

8. By what Justice shall any people be required to fend Dele gates, on such terms as these to Councils, or to stand to their definitions when they have done? When our faith and fouls are preciouser things then so boldly to cast upon the trust of a few Delegates fo to be chosen and employed? What Bishops other Countries will choose, we know not. And for our own, 1. In almost all Countries it is the Princes that choose, or none must be chosen but who they will, which is all one. 2- If the Bishops choose, its those that are highest with the secular power that will have the choice, who perhaps may choose such as are contrary to the judgement of most of that Church that is thought to choose them. Most Nations have a Clergy much at difference. The Remonstrants and Contramonstrants in Holland would not have chosen like members for the Synod. In the Bishops days men of one mind were chosen here in England to Convocations: The next year we had a Learned Assembly that put down the Prelacy, for which a Convocation had formed an Oath to be imposed on all Ministers but a little before. And why should the judgment of the Prelates be taken for the judgement of the Church of England, any more then the other, when for number, learning and piety (to fay the least) they had no advantage (laying aside ignorant, ungodly men, in point of number.) Till the Spanish match began to be treated on, the Bishops of England were ten, if not twenty to one Augustinians, Calvinists, or Antiarminians: Now the Arminians would be thought the Church of England, and their doctrine, agreeable to the doctrine of that Church. Would they not accordingly have differed, if they had been sent to a General Council? How bit! terly are the Articles of the Church of Ireland decryed by the Arminian Bishops since sprung up both in Ireland and England? fo that if Delegates be fent to any Council, they may speak the minds of those that fent them, (which perhaps is the King or a small prevailing party,) but not of the rest : (which perhaps may the best and most.) If feremiah of Constantinople be of a Council, he will go one way. If Cyril be of a Council, he will go another way: And his counterfeit Successor undo what he did.

9. No Church that sendeth three or sour Bishops to represent a thousand or two thousand Pastors, can be sure how those Bishops will carry it when they come thicker. For ought we know they may betray our cause, and cross their instructions: They may be perverted by the reasonings of erroneous men, or bribed by the powerfull: And to cast our faith on so slender an

fubmit to them as our Rule,) then is Posterity bound that did not consent as their Fathers did, or are they not? If not, we are free? If yea, by what bond? And then why do not the Grotians in Ireland and England obey the Antiarminian Decrees of the Churches in both? Did not the Church of England send Bishop Carlton, Bishop Hall, Bishop Davenant (asterward a Bishop) Dr. Ward. Dr. Goad, and Balcanquall Episcopal Divines to the Synod of Dort, and so England was a part of that Synod? And yet the Grotians and Arminians think not themselves bound to receive the Doctrine of that Synod, nor to forbear reproach-

11. It is unjust that any (especially most) of the Churches should be obliged by the votes of others, and oppressed by Majority, meerly because their distance, or poverty, or the age, or weakness of their Pastors disableth them to send any, or an equal number, or to defray the charge of their abode, &c. Ah if good Pope Zachary, or Archbishop Boniface had considered that the essence or unity of the Church did consist in a General Council, that must be fetched partly from the Antipodes, they would have thought better on it before they had excommunicated Virgilius, for faying that there were Antipodes, or quod alius mundus, & alii homines sunt sub terras. Dr. Heylin tels us in his Geography, Lib. 1. pag. 25. that Bede (de ratione temporum, cap. 32.) calleth it a fable that there are Antipodes, and not to be believed: and adds that Angustine, Lastantius, and some other of the Learned of those better times condemned it as a ridiculous incredible fable, whose words (saith he) I could put down at large, did I think it necessary.] And did that age dream that the Being or Unity of the Church, or the salvation of the Believers soul depended on this Article, that a General Council, partly called from the Antipodes must be the Churches

Hhh

Head or Governours? or that the Pope at least must be acknowledged and obeyed by every Christian soul that will be saved at the Antipodes? And Sir Fradcis Drake and Cavendish would not have been so famous for compassing the world, if menhad understood, that when the Gospel is spread through the earth, so many poor old Bishops must ordinarily take half such Journies or voyages to do their business. If the Decree of the Council of Constance had been executed, to have had a General Council every ten years, many would scarce have had time to go and come. But the charitable Church of Rome hath found out a Remedy, not only by the rarity of their Councils (let them decree what they will to the contrary) but also by condemning the most of the Churches, and the remotest, as Hereticks, and sending them to Hell, to save them a journey to the General Council.

12. Moreover such Councils are unjust, because of the multitude of Bishops that must there meet and cannot be heard speak. As the case standeth already, there are many more Bishops in the world then can meet, and speak, and hear in one, or two, or three Assemblies: And many thousand more may be made. If I should say that all the Rectors of particular Churches, whom they call Parish Presbyters, are Bishops, and have votes in Councils, they would easily er deny it then disprove it, or invalidate the proofs already brought: But (to proceed on their own grounds) me thinks they that make him a Bishop who hath Presbyters and Deacons under him, should admit all those Pastors of particular Churches that have Presbyters under them, as their Curates, which are many. Or if they fay that only Cities must have Bishops, yet must they on their own grounds admit a Bishop for each City: And if every City in a few Kingdoms in Europe had a Bishop in the Council, there would be no room for all the rest of the world. But how prove they that Countrey Parishes may not have Bishops? Why may not (on their own grounds) every four or fix parishes have one ? Hath God forbidit? where? and when? fure they will not fay it is of Divine institution that a Bishop have just so many Parishes and Presbyters under him, and neither more nor less. The number is confest to be lest undetermined. And what if Christian Princes, Bishops and people agree to settle Bishops in every:

every such small number of Parishes, by what Law can they exclude them from a General Council? If they say, by the Canons of former Councils; I answer 1. Those Canons are contrary to Scripture. 2. They contradict one another. 3. They themselves do not obey the Canons of many such Councils. 4. Those Councils have no power to make Laws; much less Laws that shall reach to this time and place. But they will fay Pauls command to Titus 1.3, 5. and the example Alls 14.23. is only of ordained Elders or Bishops in every City: therefore they may not or . dain them any where but in Cities. But I deny the confequence. Most ancient interpreters by Elders, Ads 14. 23. Understand meer Presbyters: And then it would as much follow that Prefbyters must be ordained no where but in Cities: What if I can prove that the Apostles never gathered a solemn Assembly of Christians for Divine Worship any where but in Cities: or that they never administred the Lords Supper any where but in Cities? will it follow that therefore we ought not to Assemble or administer the Sacrament any where but in Cities? But what if this were granted? they cannot deny but every corporation, such as most of our Burroughs and Market Towns in England are, may truly be called Cities in that Scripture sence. And if every such City had a Bishop, Even England, France, Germany, and Italy, a little spot of the world, would make Bishops enough for two or three Councils; and more then could Assemble and do the work.

Two sh fts they have against the over-greatness of the number. One is the course now taken: to have but one Bishop over many Cities, and a very large Circuit of the Countrey.

The other is, to depute one out of many from every Countrey to represent the rest; and so it shall be a Representative General Council, though not a Real. But for the first, 1. Who hath authority to make such diminutions? 2. What is those that are supposed to have that authority, shall be otherwise minded? 3. Its apparently against the word of God, and tendeth to the frustrating of the Office that true Bishops should be so rare. By their own Rule, each City should have one. And let Brerewoods Enquiries, or any such writers help you to conjecture how many that would be.

And for the other way, r. A Representative General Council is another thing, quite different from a Real. 2. What word of God have they to prove such a Representative Council? Doubtless none: And will they give us a Church form, and center of Unity, meerly of their own brains, upon supposition that it is prudential ? 3. Men are of exceeding different degrees of understanding, and of different judgements actually: fo that if e. g. England should send one, or two, or ten men to represent the rest to a General Council, its more then possible that they may give their judgements in many points fo far contrary to the minds of those that sent them, that twenty or an hundred to one at home may be against them. For we cannot fend our understandings and all our reasons with them to the Council when we fend them. And so no man can say that any such Council doth express the mind of the greater part of the Church. 4. By this rule you may reduce a General Council to a dozen men. or to the four or five Patriarks: For all the rest may choose them as their representatives. 5. But its not to be expected that all the Churches should be satisfied of the lawfulness or fitness of such substitutions and representations: And therefore they will not consent or elect men for such a power and work: And

13. Moreover such Councils are unjust, because there can be no just satisfaction given by men that live at so vasta distance. that this great number that come thither are truly Bishops: yea or Presbyters either. Its not possible under many years time; so much as to take any satisfactory account of their ordination, and abiding in that office, and the truth of their deputations or elections. And when (in their elected Representative Councils) there will be perpetual controversies between several parties (as there is in Parliaments) whether it be this man or that which is truly elected, in how many years will all these be decided, before they begin their work? So that I may well conclude, laying all these seven considerations together, the distance of places, the age and state of the Bishops, the state of the Civil Governments which they live under, their necessary labours at home, and the ruine that will befall their Churches by so much absence, the diversity of their languages, multitude of the Bishops, and the difficulty of knowing the Ordination and Qualifications of persons so remote to prove their capacity. I say all these together do plainly shew that such General

General Councils are impossible and unjust: and therefore not the standing Government or form of the Church, or the center of its Unity.

Argum. 4. As the Synodit self is impossible, needless, and unjust; so it is Impossible that they should do the work of a Head or Soveraign Power if they could Assemble: therefore they are not appointed thereunto.

The Antecedent is partly manifest by what is said from their different languages and other considerations. Moreover 1. The persons that will have appeals to them, and causes to be judged (if really they will do the work of a Soveraign Power and Judge) will be so many millions, that there will be no room for them It was one about their doors, nor any leisure in many years to hear their of the causes. If you say, It was not so in former Councils, I answer, Reasons that is because they were not truly General, or were called in of the fuch times when the Church did lie in a narrow compass, and Council of not in such remote parts of the world; and because they were P. Gelesting affembled indeed but occasionally, to advise upon and determine to prove some one particular mans case, or sew, and never took upon the invalithem to be the Soveraign power or head of the Church, or its ef dity of the fential form or Center of Unity. 2. These millions of persons papal that have so many causes, will have so far to travail, that it will ments upput them to great cost and labour to come and attend and bring on appeals all their witnesses. And if they be not sounder bodyed then from other our English Souldiers, the poor people of Mexico and other Countries, because parts of those Indies (to look no surther) will be a great part the witof them dead by the way before they can reach the General ness neces-Council, e. g. if it should be in the midst of Europe. 3. And the sary to a Council will not be competent Judges of so many causes which just decisiby distance must needs be much unknown in many weighty not go far. Circumstances, whose cognisance is necessary. 4. And lastly, fuch. Councils will fit so seldom, that the work will be undone.

Argum. 5. If Ged had intended that such a Council should have been the form of his Church, or the necessary Governour of it, he would have acquainted us with his will concerning some certain Power to summon them, or would have authorized some or other to call such a Council) But he hath not acquainted us with his will berein, nor authorized any to call such a Council: therefore it:

was not his intent that it should be the form or necessary Governour

Either this Council must meet by an Authoritative call, or by consent. If by such a call, who must call them? The Popes pretenie to this Authority is voluminously and unanswerably confuted long ago; and its well known, what ever Baronius fay, that the ancient Councils were called by the Emperors; and many fince have been called by Emperours and Cardinals. And if you fay that it belongs to the Emperour, I answer, what hath he to do to summon the subjects of the French, Spaniards, Turks, Æthiopian, &c? And by this it appears that we never had true Universal Councils: They were but General as to the Roman world, or Empire. For (who ever precided) it is certain that the Emperours called them. And what had Constantine, Martian, Theodofins, or any Roman Emperour to do, to call the sub. jects in India, Æthiopia, Persia, &c. to a Council? Nor de facto, was there any such thing done. Is it not a wonderfull thing that the Pope and all his followers should be or seem so blinded to this day, as to take the Empire for the whole earth, or the Roman world for all the Christian world! yet this is their all. you say that it must be done by the consent of Princes, then either of Christian Princes or of all. If of the Christian only you must exclude the Bishops that are under Mahometan and Heathen Princes, and then it will be no General Council; especially if it be now as it was in the time of faceb à Vitriaco the Popes Legate in the East, who saith that the Christians of the Easterly parts of Asia alone, exceeded in number the Christians both of the Greek and Latine Churches. And whether it be all Princes, or only Christian Princes that should consent, who can tell whether ever it will be? God hath not promised to lead them to such a consent: And they are unlikely of themselves, as being many and distant, and of different interests and apprehensions, and usually in wars with one another, so that if an age should be spent in treating of a General Council among them, its ten to one that the treaty will be in vain, and its next to an impossibility that all should consent, Besides: no man can shew a Commission from God to enable them, and only them to such a work.

But if you say that it must be done by the consent of the Bishops shemselves, the Impossibility (moral) is apparent, who will be found that will be at the cost and pains to agitate the business among them? No one can appoint the time and place but by consent of the rest. Who doth it belong to, to travail to the Indies, Athiopia, Agypt, Palestine, and all the rest of the world, to treate with the Bishops about the time and place of a Council? And how many lives must be have that shall do it? And when he findeth them of a hundred minds, what course shall be take, and how many more journies about the world must be make, to bring them to an agreement? But I am ashamed to bestow more words on so evident a case.

Argum. 6. The Head or Soveraign of the Church (as of every body Politick) hath the Legislative Power over the whole. The Pope or a General Council have not the Legislative Power over the whole. Therefore the Pope or General Council are not the head or Soveraigns of the Church.

The Major is of unquestionable verity in Politicks. Le-

The Minor is proved, I. Ad hominem by the confession of the The Pachief Opponents, Grotins de Imperio summar. potest. doth pur. pists conposely maintain it: and so do others: (See of this Lud. Molifess that naus new Book supposed against the Presbyterians: his Para-Council ness.) 2. It is the high Prerogative of Christ the true King cannot and Soveraign of the Church, which none must arrogate. He make new was faithfull in all his house as was Moses. Object. But men may make By-laws under Christ and his the do-Laws. Answ. True: but as those are in this case no proper Laws, strines so no man or men may make them for the Unversal Church. For which the business of those Laws is only to determine of circumstances teachs which God hith made necessary in genere, and less to the determination of men in specie: And we may well know that there was some special reason why Christ did not determine of these himself. And the reason is plain; even because that they depend in much on the several states, capacities, customs, &c. of men.

that they are to be varied accordingly in several times and places. If one standing Law would have fitted all the world, or all ages in these matters, Christ would have made it himself. For if you say he makes some Laws, and neglect others that are of the like kind, and might as well have been done by himself, you make him impersect and insufficient to his work. And if it be not sit that one Universal Law be made for the world, then a Council must not make it.

And as the sufficiency of Christs law, so the nature of the things declares it, that these matters must not be determined of by an universal Law. Should there be an universal Law to determine what day of the week, or what hour of the day every Lecture or occasional Sermon shall be on? Or what place every Congregation shall meet in? Or where the Minister shall stand to preach? Or what Chapters he should read each day? Or what Text he should preach on? or how long? Whether by an hourglass or without? in what habit of apparrel particularly (when many a poor man must wear such as he can get) yea or what gestures or possures of body to use (when that gesture in one Countrey signifieth reverence, which in another rather signifieth negled) with abundance the like.

And the same is plain from the nature of the Pastoral office. Every Bishop or Pastor is made by Christ the Ruler of the flock in such cases, and they are bound to obey him, Heb. 13. 17. And therefore a General Council must leave them their work to do which Christ hath put upon them, and not take it out of their hands: especially when being in the place, and seeing the variety of circumstances, they are more competent judges then a Ge-

The plain truth is, Christ hath lest them none of that work to do which belongeth to a Head or Soveraign, but they make work for themselves, that there may seem to be a Necessity of a power to do it. The Church needeth none of their Laws. Let us have but the Holy Scriptures, and the Law of Nature, and the civil Laws of men, and the guidance of particular Pastors pro tempere, and the fraternal Consultations and Agreements of Councils, not to make any more work, but to do this foresaid work unanimously; and the Church can bear no more; there is nothing lest for Legislators Ecclesiastical to do. We can spare their Laws, and therefore their power and work. Their business is but to make snares and burdens for us; and therefore we can live without them, and cannot believe that the selicity, or unity, or essence of the Church consisteth in them.

Argum. 7. All the inferior efficers do derive their power from the supream. All the other officers of the Catholick Church do not derive their power from the Pope or a General Council: therefore a Pope or General Council are not the supreams.

The Major is an unquestioned Maxime in Politicks. Its effential to the Sovereaign to be the fountain of power to all under him. Yea if it be but a deputed derived Soveraignty, secundum quid so called, as the Viceros of Mexico, Naples, &c. yet so far he must be the fountain of all inferiour power.

The Minor is maintained by most Christians in the world. Every Bishop or Presbyter hath his power immediately from Jesus Christ as the Efficient cause, though man must be an occasion, or causa sine quanon, or peraccidens. The Italian Bishops in the Council of Trent could not carry it against the Spaniards, that the Pope only as Head was immediately jure divino, and the rest but mediante Papa.

Moreover it is easie to prove out of Scripture that God never fet up any Soveraign power in his Church (personal or collective) to be the fountain of all other Church power, nor sendeth us to have recourse to any such for it. Nor can they prove such a

And lastly its most easie to prove de facto, that the Bishops or Presbyters now in the several Churches in the world, did not receive, and do not hold their power from any such visible Head, whether Pope or Council. Though the Popelings do, yet so do not all therest of the Christian world. Who are not therefore no Ministers or no Church of Christ, whatever these bare affirmers and pretenders may imagine: Nor are all the Ministerial actions in the world null, which are not done by a power from him. And even the Papists themselves will sew of them pretend to receive their several powers of Priesthood from a General Council. This therefore is not the Soveraign power, or head of the Church.

Argum. 8. The Head or Soveraign Pomer hath the finally decifive Judgement, and in great causes all must, or may appeal to them. them. A General Council hath not the finally decifive judgement, nor may all men in great causes appeal to them. Therefore a General Councilis not the Head or Soveraign power.

The Major is undenyable. The Minor is proved, 1. In that it is not known, nor hath the world any rule or way to know in what cases we must appeal to a General Council, and what not; and what is their proper work. 2. In that an appeal to them is an absolute evasion of the guilty, and in vain to the innocent, because of the rarity of such Councils, or rather the nullity. 3. Because the prosecuting of such an Appeal is impossible to most of the world (as is before shewed) and were it possible, it would be so tedious and laborious a course, that its ridiculous in most to mention such Appeals.

Argum. 9. The Soveraign or Head of the Church (as of every Body Politick,) hath power to deprive and denude any other of their power. The Pope or General Council hath not power to do (o: therefore they are not of the Head or Soveraigns of the Church.

The Major is a known principle in polity: He that giveth power, can take it away: And it's confessed by the Opponents in this case.

The Minor I prove, 1. Because esse it would be in the power of the Pope or Council, whether Christ shall have any Ministry and Church or not. They may at least make havock of it at pleasure. But that's false. 2. As is before said, we receive not our power from them: therefore they cannot take it from us. 3. The Holy Ghost doth make us Over-seers of the slock, Ast. 20.28. and say a Necessity on us, and denounce a woe against us, if we preach not the Gospel: and hath no where given us leave to give over his work, if the Pope or a Council shall forbid us. 4. And they can shew no Commission from Christ that giveth them such a power.

Arg. 10. If it were the form or Essence of the Church to have a humane visible Head, then our Relation to such a head would be essential to our Membership or Christianity. But the Consequence is false: therefore so is the Antecedent.

The falseness of the consequent is apparent, I. In that it cruelly and ungroundedly unchristeneth all that do not believe in such a visible Head: That is, the greatest part by far of the Christian

Christians in the world; And 2. By the ensuing argument : And the necessity of the consequence is evident of it self.

Argum. 11. If such a visible Head were essential to the Church, and so to our Christianity, then should we all be Baptized into the Pope or a General Council, as truly and necessarily as we are baptized into the Church. But we neither are nor ought to be so baptized into the Pope or a General Council; therefore they are not essential to the Church or our Christianity.

The Major (viz the Consequence) is clear, and not denyed by the Papists, who affirm that Baptism engageth the baptized to the Pope. He that is united to the body, is united to the head : he that is listed into the Army, is listed to and under the General. He that is entred into the Common-wealth, is engaged to the

But that we are not baptized to the Pope or a General Council, is proved. I. Because neither the form of Baptisin, nor any word in Scripture doth affirm such a thing. 2. No persons in Scripture times were so baptized: Men were baptized before there was a Pope at Rome, or a General Council. And afterward none were baptized to them, at least for many hundred years: otherwise then as they were entred into the particular Church of Rome, who were Inhabitants there. 3. Never any was baptized to Peter or Paul, or any of the Apostles: faith Paul, I Cor. 1. 13. was Paul crucified for you, or were ye baptized in the name of Paul? They must be baptized into the name of no vifible Head, but him that was crucified for them. 4. The Aposse fully resolveth all the doubt, I Cor. 12. describing the body into which we are baptized, ver. 13. And he entitleth it from the head, Christ, vers. 12. but acknowledgeth no other head. either co-equal with Christ, or subordinate: The highest of the other members are called by Paul but eyes and hands, and thus Apostles, Prophets, Teachers, Miracles, gifts of healing, helps, Governments, are only said to be set in the Church, as eyes and hands in the body; but not over the Church as the Head or Soveraign Power: ver. 17, 18, 19, 28, 29. fo that though he that is baptized into the Church, is baptized into an Organical body, and related to the Pastors, as to hands and eyes, yet not as to a head, nor as to a representative body neither. And me thinks neither Pope nor Council should pretend to be more then Iii2 Apostles.

Apostles, Prophets, and Teachers, and Governments. If the form of baptism had but delivered down the authority of the Pope or a Council, as it did the authority and name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Tradition would have been a tolerable Argument for them, though Scripture had been silent. But when the Baptismal Tradition it self is silent, and it is a doctrine so monstruously strange to the Primitive Church, that all the baptized are baptized to the Pope or a General Council, I know no remedy but they must both put up their pretenses.

Argum. 12. The Essence of the Church into which they were baptized, was part of the doctrine which the Catechumeni were taught, (and all at age should learn) before their baptism. The Soveraignty or Headship of Pope or Council was no part of the Doctrine which (by the Primitive Church) the Catechumeni were taught, and ought to learn, before their baptism. Therefore the Soveraignty or Headship of Pope or Council was not then taken to be of the Essence of the Church.

The Major is evident, 1. In that the Catholick Church was in the Creed: and it's effentials there briefly expressed in those terms [Holy Catholick Church, and Communion of Saints.] 2. In that Church History sully acquainteth us that it was the practice of the Catethists and other Teachers to open the Creed to them before they baptized them, and therein the Article of the Catho-lick Church, and the Communion of Saints.

The Minor is proved by an induction of all the Records of those times, which in gross may now suffice according to our present intended brevity to be mentioned. There is no one Writer of many hundred years, no not Origen, Tertullian, Irenam, or any other that purposely recite the Churches belief which the Catechumeni were taught, nor Cyril, (or John) Hierosol. or any other who open those Articles to the Catechumens, that ever once mention the Doctrine of the Headship of the Pope or Council, when they open the Article of the Catholick Church; nor yet at any other time. If they affirm that they did, let them prove it if they can.

Argum. 13. As it is high Treason in a Republick to deny the Soveraign, and to be cut off from him, is to be cut off from the Common wealth; so it would be a damning unchristening sin to deny the Headship of the Pope or General Council, if they were indeed the Head of the Church. But it is no such damning unchristening sin: Therefore they are not the Head of the Church.

The Major is plain from the Nature of Soveraignty. The Minor is certainly proved, 1. Because it is never mentioned in Scripture, nor any ancient Writer for many hundred years, as a state of Apostasie, nor as a damning sin, nor as any sin, to deny the said Headship of the Pope or Council. 2. Because else most of the Christians of the world at this day are Apostates and unchristened: Or if that seem a tolerable conclusion to the Romanists; Yet 3. Because then Christ had no Church for some hundreds of years, which I know they will not think so tolerable a conclusion; For to dream that the ancient Christians did know any Head of the Church but Christ, or were engaged in loyalty to the Pope or Council, is a disease that sew are styable to, except such as are strangers to the writings of those times, or such as read them with Roman spectacles, resolved what to find in them before hand.

Argnm. 14. All Christians are bound to study or labor to be acquainted with the Laws of the Soveraign power of the Church: All Christians are not bound to study or labor to be acquainted with the Laws of Popes and Councils: Therefore the laws of Popes and Councils are not the Laws of the Soveraign power of the Church.

The Major is proved, in that all subjects must obey the Laws of the Soveraign power: But they cannot obey them unless they know them. Therefore they are bound to endeavour to know

The Minor is proved, 1. In that they being written in Latine and Greek, which a very small part of the Christians of the world do understand, and their Teachers not sufficiently expounding them, and they being more copious and voluminous, more obscure and uncertain (of which next) then for all private Christians to understand, the people cannot learn these, having enough to do to learn Gods Word. 2. The Papists that deny theuse of the Holy Scriptures to the people in a known tongue, and deny the necessity of understanding them, will sure say the same of their Decretals and Canons, unless they mean to set them up above the Scripture, as well as equal them thereto.

Argum. 15. The Soveraign Head of the visible Church and Center of our unity, must be evident, that all the Christian world may know it: The Pope and General Council are not such. Therefore neither of them are the Head of the Visible Church.

The Minor is known by common experience. For many a year together (by Bellarmines confession) learned and wise men could not tell which was the true Pope; yea their Councils could not tell. Most of the Christian world to this day cannot discern his Commission for that power which he pretendeth to. A true General Council now no man can know, because it is a nonens. Their pretended General Councils are so ravelled in confusion, that they are not agreed among themselves which are indeed such, and which not : but many are rejected, and many suspected (of which Bellarmine giveth us a list) and those that one receiveth, another rejecteth; and the most by far are rejected by most of the Christian world. And when some would take up with the four first, and some with fix, and some with eight, the Papists deridingly ask them, whether the Church hath not as much authority now as it had then? And how shall the Christian world know whether it were a true General Council or not? Of which fee the difficulties first to be resolved, which I have recited in my Disputations against Popery.

Argum. 16. The Laws of the Soveraign Power of the Church must be certain (or else how shall we know what to obey) The Laws of Popes and General Councils are not certain: There-

The Minor is proved by experience. The Popes Decretals are many unknown, and many proved forgeries (by Blondell ubi sup. and many others) beyond all question: and none of them proved Laws to the Church. The Canons of the first Council of Nice are not agreed on among the Papists. Many others are proved forged: Many are flatly contrary to each other (as I have shewed ubi sup.) and how then shall Christians know what to obey? The ancient Canons condemned the gesture of kneeling on the Lords day (and consequently then at the Lords Supper) thereading of the Heathens Books, and many such things which are now taken for lawful: The later Councils that contradict the former, do seem to most of more questionable authority then they. And what Councils are to be received and what rejected, they are not agreed among themfelves, nor have any certain Rule to know by on which they are agreed: Nor will their Popes or Councils yet resolve them this great question. So that Christians are at a loss concerning these Laws, and know not which of them they are obliged by, and which not.

Argum. 17. If the Pope or Council be the Head of the Church, then must their Laws be preached to the people by their Teachers. But the Laws of Popes and Councils need not be preached to the people by their Teachers: Therefore, &c.

The reason of the Major is, because the Laws that they must obey in matters spiritual in order to salvation, the Ministers must preach to them. But these are pretended to be such: Therefore, &c.

As to the Minor, 1. It would be but an unhansome thing in their own hearing, for Preachers to take their Texts out of the Canons or Decretals, and preach these day after day to the people: which yet they have need to do many a year, if the obedience of them be our necessary duty. 2. Ministers are commanded to preach only the Gospel, and it is said to be sufficient or able to make us persect, and build us up to salvation. Therefore we need not preach the Canons or Decretals.

Argum. 18. While a Visible Head cannot be agreed on even by those that would have the Church united in such a Head, it is all one to them as if there were no such Head, and the union still is unattainable by them. But even among the Papists themselves a Visible Head is not, cannot be agreed on: Therefore, &c.

What good will it do to say we must center some where, and know not where, and obey some body, and know not who? The Italians and Spanish make the Pope the Insalible Head, and say a General Council without him may err, and is but the body. The French make the Council the Head, and say the Pope may err; and that the insallibility (such as they plead for) is in the Council. It is not a Head, but this Head in specie, that is, the form of the Church, if any such be: And therefore they must needs (according to their own principles) be of divers Churches, while they place the Soveraignty in several sorts and persons. Till they better

agree among themselves in their Fundamentals and Essentials of the Church, we have small encouragement to think of uniting on any of their grounds.

Argum. 19. The Soveraign Power or Headship over the Church is a thing undoubtedly revealed in the Holy Scripture: (For we cannot imagine that the Scripture should be silent in so weighty a point, without intolerable accusation of it.) The Soveraign Power or Headship of Pope or Council is not revealed in the Holy Scripture. Therefore, &c.

They have not yet produced a Text to prove either of them. Those produced by the Italians for the Popes Headship, are disclaimed by the French, as meaning no such thing; and our Writers have largely manisested their abusing of the Text. So have they done of those that are brought for the Headship of Councils. These texts are spoke to so fully by Chamier, Whitaker, Amesius, and abundance more, that I think it in vain to do it here again. That of I Tim. 3.15. that the Church is the pillar and ground of Truth, doth not speak a word of a General Council, nor a word of Headship: The whole Church united in Christ, is the Pillar and Ground, that is, the certain Receptacle and retainer of the Truth, the Law of Christ being written in their hearts.

None seems more to savour their conceeit then Ephes. 4.15, 16. which Grotius sastens on: But even that is against them, and not for them. For 1. It is Christ and only Christ that is here said to be the head, and all other parts contradistinguished, and excluded from Headship, and the Body is not said to be united in them. 2. And it is by association, and mutual communication of their several gists, that the parts are compacted together, and edifie the whole; and not by meeting in any one, and deriving from it.

Object. But were not the Apostles General Officers, and so the Church united in General officers? Answ. This is little to the Question. For 1. the Apostles had one among them to be the Soveraign or Head of the rest, but were of equal power. 2. Nor did a major part of their whole number make such a Head for the Church to unite in, nor do we read that ever a Major vote carryed it among them against a Minor; for they were all guided by the Spirit. Yet its true that they met ofter together them a General Council can. 2. The Apostles as extraordinarily

qualified, and as the Secretaries of the Spirit, have no successors: But the Apostles as ambulatory unfixed Ministers, had even then many companions: For Barnabas, Luke, Apollo, and abundance more, did then go up and down preaching, as well as the Apostles; yet had not any one of them a special charge of Governing all the Churches: nor yet all of them united in a body: For the Aposiles called not the Evangelists and other fellow workers to confult in Councils about the Government of the whole; But both they and their helpers, did feverally what they could to teach and fettle the Churches. 3. Who be they now that are the Apostles successors? If all the Bishops in the world, the case is as we lest it. If any small number of Primates or Patriarcks, how shall we know which and how many? If they be not twelve, why should one Apostle have a fuccessor, and not others? But there are no twelve only that lay claim to the succession. And if you go further, who can limit, and say who, and how many they be, and how far the number may be increased or decreased, and by whom? In Cyprians dayes he and his fellows in the Council at Carthage declare that all Bishops were equal, and none had power over other. And so thought others in those times. Nor was there then any number of Bishops that claimed to be the sole succesfors of the Apostles, to rule all the rest. And if they had, when the Church increaseth, the Rulers must increase. But this is not to the main point.

Argum. 20. The Scripture doth appropriate the Universal Headship to Christ only, and deny it to all others: therefore neither Pope nor Council are the Universal Head.

Eph. 5.23. It is the peculiar Title of Christ to be Head of the Church, to whom it must be subject, I Cor. 11.3. The Apostle would have us know that the Head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man, and the Head of Christ is God. So that there is a particular Head over some parcell of the body below Christ: but to be the Universal Head of every man, is the proper Title of Christ. In I Cor. 12. the unity of the body and diversity of the members is more largely expressed then any where essentially and there when the said unity of the body had been so sully mentioned, the Apostle comes to name the Head of that Unity, Vers. 27. which is only Christ. [Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular] The Church is never called the body of the Pope, or of a Council, but the body of Christ: yea (as was even now said) in the next words the A postles. Prophets, and Teachers are enumerated to the particus. lar members, contradiftind from the Head, fo far are all, or any one of them from being the head themselves. And in Col. 2: 10, 17, 19. it is Christ only that is called the Head, and the body is faid to be of Christ, and he only is mentioned as the Center of its Unity [And not holding the Head, from which all the body by wints, and bands baving nourishment ministred and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God. 7 And Col. 1.18. And he is the Head of the body, the Church. If any fay that you cannot hence argue Negatively that therefore no one else is the Head. I answer, They may as well say, when it is affirmed that I the Lord he is God] you cannot thence conclude that Baal is not God. The Apostle plainly speaks this of Christ as his peculiar honour: And he spoke to men that knew well enough that natural bodies have but one Head, unless they be Monsters: And he would not so oftinfift on this Metaphor, intending so great a disparity in the similitude, and never discover any such intention; So in Ephes. 1. 22. He gave him to be Head over all things to the Church, which is his Body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all.

And in Ephel. 4. the Apostle purposely exhorteth us to the observation of this unity; and purposely telleth us by a large enumeration wherein it doth confist : but in all he never mentioneth the Pope or a Council: yea he plainly excludeth them, Vers. 3,4,&c. [Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bend of peace: There is one body, and one spirit, even as you are called in one hope of your calling, One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism, One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all: But unto every one of us is given Grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ - He gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the Edifying of the body of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the Faith, &c. ___] fo then you fee there is but one Lord. of the Church; therefore the Pope or Council is not Lord (inname or deed.) And Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, and Dollars, are the member contradiftinguished from this One Lord, and whose diversity is purposely mentioned, they being the matter or parcels that must have their unity in some other, but not the Church to be united in them. Here is then no mention among all these [Ones] of one earthly Head, whether Pope or Council, not of One Apostle that was the Head of the rest. If such a thing had ever come into the Apostles mind, he would sure have mentioned it on such occasions as these, and not have quite forgotten it; yea and contradict it so evidently.

I Cor. 6. 15, 17. Our bodies are the members of Christ, (not of the Pope) and he that is joined to the Lord is one spirit (not he

Gal. 3. 28. We are all one in Christ Fests (not in an earthly Head) Many and many times doth the Apostle exhort them to be of one mind, and acord, and take heed of schism, and maintain peace, and he reprove th their divisions at large: yet doth he never mention such a sin as dividing from an earthly Head, nor ever once direct them to a Pope or General Council as the Center of their unity, or the necessary means of curing divisions. Peter himself exhorteth them to be all of one mind. I Pet. 3.8. but never to be all united in him as their head. The Apostle Paul is punctual in describing the Officers of the Church, and the peoples duty to them: But he never describeth a Pope, or any earthly Head of that Church: nor ever telleth the people of their duty to such: And if such a supposed fundamental should be quite forgotten by men that believed it, and taught others that which was necessary to be believed, it were incredibly strange. That Paul writing to the Romans should never mind them of the honour of their Sea, or their duty to their supereminent Prelate, was his forgetfulness or unbelief. And furely he would never have so sharply reproved them of Corinth for contentions, in faying I am of Paul, and I of Apollo, and I of Cephas, and I of Christ, if he had thought they must have been united in Cephas; without once telling them of such a means of union and reconciliation. He saith [Is Christ divided?] as much as to fay, you must be all united in him: but he faith not [Is Cephas divided ?] but plainly makes the exalters of Cephae a party that was guilty of division, and Chap. 3. 3, 4, 5. tells them plainly that this snewed that they mere carnal. And speak-Kkk 2

ing of all others in his own person and Apollos, saith who then is Paul, or who is Apollo, but Ministers by whom ye believed? They had not then learned to answer (Why Cephas is the Head of the Church. And I Cor. 4 6. He speaks as if it were purposely to a Papist [All these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to my self and to Apollo for your sakes: that ye might learn in us not to think (of men) above that which is written: that no one of you be puffed up for one against another \ What not for Peter? no not for Peter himself. And doubtless Paul did not believe his supremacy, when he so presumed to reprove him to his face, Gal. 2. So 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17. there is mention of our being all one bread, and one body: but that's because we are all partakers of that one body of Christ, and not because we are united in the Pope or any other.

Moreover when the Disciples strove who should be greatest? Christ expressy rebuketh such thoughts, and instead of granting any of them that defire, he denyeth it to them all. Mat. 22.25, 26. Luke 22.26. The Kings of the Gentiles rule over them, and are called gracious Lords, but with you it shall not be so.] Bellarmine indeed can merrily hence gather that there must be one appointed to be the greatest, because Christ saith, He that will be Greatest, let him be the servant of all. This is to make good their charge against the Scripture, that it is a nose of Wax by their presumptuons abuse of it; as some men would prove the Apostacy of the Saints, by their own Apostatizing, when yet they prove it not, though they ruine themselves. Did not . Christ by these words reprehend their seeking of a Supremacy?

Oh but it is only Tyranny that Christ forbiddeth them. Answ. That which Christ acknowledgeth in the Kings of the Nations, without reprehension, that is it which he denyeth to his Disciples. But it is not Tyranny but Dominion which Christ thus acknowledgeth in, and alloweth to the Kings of the Nations: therefore it is not Tyranny but Dominion which he forbiddeth to his Disciples: That which Christ here speaketh of the Kings of the Nations, is fomewhat common to all Kings, and so as Kings. But Tyranny was not common to all Kings, nor to them as Kings: therefore it is not Tyranny that he speaks of. Moreover its plain that it is a Greatnels in Desire and Affectation that is the subject of Christs

Christs speech, and not an allowed supremacy, and that he forbids this Supremacy in the following words, [Let bim be the servant of all] q. d. [I allow in my Kingdom to the Preachers of the Gosphel no other Greatness or superiority above others, but what consisteth in holiness, and humility, and doing good, and so in disclaiming of Ruling Greatness.] In Luke 9. there's mention of [him that was least, &c.] It follows not thence that one was appointed to be the lowest. And if the will of Christ were known to them that one should be the Supream, and this was Peter, what need they strive any further about it; or why doth he not re-

Again I say, that I cannot see how it can stand with the wisdom or goodness of Christ the Law-giver of his Church, or the perfection of his Laws, or how it can be any way probable, that he should be wholly silent of so great a point as the Headship and Center of the Churches Unity; never giving us either the Name or Titles of such a Head, nor the seat of his Empire. nor appointing him his work, nor directing him how to do it when he hath the greatest work in the world to do (as these men suppose) and such as surpasseth the strength of man, yea of a thousand men; never giving him any advice and direction for the determining of his very many occurrent difficulties; nor once giving us any of his power nor telling us of his prerogative, nor telling us what officers he shall appoint under him, and how; nor once telling any man of his duty to obey him; never telling us any thing of the succession of this Soveraign in whom it shall reside; nor once telling us historically of the exercise of any of his power: I say that not a word of this should be mentioned by Christ or his Apostles, even when there was so great occasion, when Peter was among them, when there was striving for supremacy, when the Churches were lamentably contending about the preheminence of their teachers, and some were for one, and some for another, and some for Cephas himself; and when so many heresies arose, and hazzarded the Churches, as among the Corinthians, Galathians, and others there did: This is a thing so hard to be believed by one that believeth the wisdom and love of Christ, that I must say for my part, it surpasseth my belief. Especially (as is said) when also so much is said against the Supremacy contend-Kkk 3

ed for. All this I speak of any earthly Head, whether Pope or Council.

Object. But (say the Papists) you can allow Princes to be the Heads of the Church: why then not a Pope? Answ. We acknowledge Princes and Pastors over parts of the Church, but not over the Church Universal. Every Corporation may call the Major or Baylist a subordinate Head of that Corporation, but not of the Kingdom.

Object. There may be a Prorex, a Viceking: and why not then a Vicarious Head of the Catholick Church? Answ. I. Because a Kingdom is not so big as all the world, or all that is and may be Christian. 2. Because a King having Dominion, hath power of doing all that by others that he cannot do himself: But a Pastor being a Minister, hath no such power given him, but must do his work himself. 3. Because the work of the Ministry requires far more labour and attendance. So that it is an utter Imopsibility that any man should be able to do the work of a supream Ruler of all the Christian world, year or the hundreth part of it, as it must be done. 4. And lastly, because Christ hath made no such Prorex, or Vice-head: and none can have it without his commission.

Object. But the Civil power hath been exercised by an Emperour over more then all the Christian world: And why then may not the Ecclesiastical? Answ. 1. Its notoriously sale that ever Emperour had so extensive a Dominion. 2. The Gospel must be preached over all the world; and therefore we must consider the possible future extent of the Church, and not only the present existent state. 3. There are many millions of Christians mixt in the Dominions of Insidel Princes among other Religions, which makes the Government of them the more difficult. 4. I shewed before from the nature of the work many other difficulties, which make a difference.

Object. Monarchy is the best Government; therefore the Church must have it. Answ. The Monarchy of God is best: but among men it is according to the state of the Rulers and subject. One way is better in some cases, and another in others. 2. For one man to be Monarch of all the Christian world, is not best, when by taking a thousand times more upon him then he can do, he will ruine instead of ruling well. 3. You may as well say, An Universal Civil Monarch over all the world is best; therefore so it must be: but when will you prove that? But if I mistake not in my conjecture, it is the thing that the Jesuites have lately got into their heads, that the Pope must have the Universal Soveraignty Ecclesiastical and Civil; that so an Universal peace may be in the world.

Obj. There was but One High Priest before Christ. Answ. 1. No more there was but one Temple; Will you therefore have no more? Nor but one civil Monarch in that Church: Would you have no more? I partly believe it. 2. It was easie for one to Rule so small a Nation as Indea in comparison of all the world.

3. Prove you the Institution of your Supremacy, as we can prove the Institution of Aarons Priesthood, and the taking of it down again, and we will yield all. 4. That Priesthood was a Type of Christ the Eternal Priest, and is ended in him, as the Epistle to the Hebrews shews at large.

Object. There is a Monarchy among Angels and Devils. Answ. I. Its a hard shift when you must go to another world for your pattern: But for your Argument setcht from Hell, I will leave it with you: but for that from Heaven, I say, theres no proof of it. And if there were, till you can prove that our work and sitness for it is the same as Angels, and that the Lord hath appointed the same form here, you have said

But because this Question is largely handled by abundance of our Learned Writers, I shall say no more to it here, but conclude, that by this which is already said in brief, it is manifest, that The Catholick Church of Christ is not one Visible Political Body, as joined to any One Universal Visible Header Soveraign, besides Christ.

If any being driven from this hold, shall say, that yet there are several Patriarcks that Govern the several Provinces of the Christian world, though there be no head but Christ. I answer, I. If there be no earthly Head and Center of unity, then I have the main cause. These Patriarcks may and do at this day, unreconcilably disagree among themselves. This therefore will not serve for a unity. 2. When (as is aforesaid) you have well proved the Institution of these Patriarcks, and how many they be, and who, and the power of Princes to make new ones,

(and not to forbear it, and to pull down the old ones:) and when you have answered the foregoing Arguments, as many of them as extend to Patriarchal power also, as well as Unversal Headship, then we shall cake this further into consideration. the mean time, I supersede, as having done that which I think necessary to take off men, from inclining to Rome, and reproaching of Churches, upon the erroneous Conceit of the Nature and unity of the Catholick Church; as if it were One, as under One Earthly Visible Head.

CHAP. IV.

Opening the true Grounds on which the Churches Unity and Peace must be sought, and the means that must be used to attain so much as is here to be expected.

B UT if this be not the way of the Churches Unity, which is? and what should we desire and endeavour for the attaining it? For the distractions of the Church are so great through our divisions, that it makes us still apt to suspect that we are out of the way.

Though it be a great work to answer this question rightly, and a hundred, a thousand times greater to answer it satisfacorily (that is, to fatisfie prejudiced incapable men with a right answer,) yet I shall attempt it by casting in my thoughts; or to speak more confidently, by declaring so much as I am certain is the will of God concerning this weighty thing.

And here I shall first lay down those grounds upon which we must proceed, if we will do our duty for the union of the Church. 2. I shall tell you what must be done to reduce them

^{1.} THE first General Ground is this [Peace and Holiness must be carried on together: Yea Peace must be sought as a Means to Holiness: and therefore Holiness which is the End, must be preferred.] The wisdom that is from above, is first Pure.

Pure, then Peaceable, Gentle, easie to be intreated, &c. fam. 3. A man may be faved that cannot attain Peace with men; and therefore we are commanded to feek it as an uncertain good. Rom. 12. 18. If it be possible, as much as in you lyeth, live peacably with all men : But no man can be faved without Holiness. Heb. 12. 14. Follow Peace with all men, and Holinels, without which no man shall see God. There is a kind of Unity among Devils. For if Satan were divided against Satan, how could his Kingdom stand ? Mat. 12. There is a Peace in a state of misery and sin, which hindereth mens recovery. For when the strong man armed keeps his house, the things that he possesseth It is a state of greatest danger on earth to are in Peace: be United in evil, and to have Peace in a way of fin. And therefore it is no wonder if there be more lovers of Peace then of Holines, and more that will cry out of our Divisions then of our ungodliness, and more that cry out of so many Religions, then of irreligiousness and ungodiness. For nature may make a man in love with Unity and Pcace, but not with Holiness; for with that it is at Enmity. Hence it is that we hear fo many Worldlings, Swearers, Drunkards, Whoremongers cry up unity, and cry down so many minds and wayes: And hence it is that so many, such wicked livers do turn Papists on supposition that there is more unity with them. And so the Popish party among us are the fink into which the filth and excrements of our Churches are emptyed.

2. The second General Ground. From hence it followeth that the first closure of the members of the Church must be upon principles of Faith and Holiness: and therefore only between the Professors of Faith and Holiness. And therefore we ought not to be solicitous of obtaining a Unity with open ungodly men; For what Communion hath light with darkness? or what concord hath Christ with Belial? If men will not agree with us in the great Principles of Godliness, nor join with us in avoiding crying sins, and siving an Holy life; it is they that are the Separatists, and withdraw from our communion. If they will not come to us in Piety, we must not come to them in Impiety. And to attempt a union with them in Government and Ceremonies, when we cannot bring them to a Union with us in seeming Godliness, is as vain as to attempt an Association with the dead, and to make a marriage with a stinking Corps. It is therefore but a carnal stir that Papists, and some Reconcilers make to have a Union so General, as shall take in the most impious rabble that ought to be excommunicated, and should conjoin the living and the dead. And therefore in some cases we are all called to separate, by him that calleth us in other cases to unity: And he tels us that he came not to send peace,

3. The third General Ground. Unity and Peace are such excellent things, and so much depend upon Love and Holiness, and suppose also so much Illumination, that the perfection of them is referved for Heaven; and as it is but a small measure of Illumination, and Love and Holiness that is here attainable, in comparison of that which we shall have in heaven; so it is but a small measure of Peace and Concord: And therefore though our defires and endeavours should go as high as we can, yet our expe-Etations on earth must not fly too high. This hath been my own error. I have not sufficiently considered, that perfect. Peace, as well as perfect Holiness is the prerogative of Heaven, and that true Peace will be impersed while the Light and Vertue which is supposed to it is imperfect. And it is a blind absurd conceit of them that wonder we have not persect Unity, when yet they murmur at Piety, and think a little may ferve the turn, and any fin is tolerable thats directly against God; but not disunion.

So much for the General Grounds: The Particular Grounds are these following.

I. Ground T is the Prerogative of the Lord Jesus to be the only Head and Soveraign of the Church. And his will revealed is our Law, and in him only must we center: and not in any Vicarious Universal Head: And from him must all receive their power: and all must worship God according to his præscript. Eph. 4. 3, 4, 5. & 1. 21, 22. Mat. 28, 18, 19. Col. 1. 18, Asts 4. 12. & 3.22. & 7. 37. Mat. 3.17. I Cor. 3.5, 22. I Cor. 1. 12. Gal. 2.9, 10.

2. Gr. The Holy Scriptures with the Law of Nature, are the only Laws of Christ: unless as he may possibly by extraordinary Revelation, oblige some person to a particular duty, not contrary to that word, but lest undetermined: which yet is so rare a thing that men must not rashly presume of such a matter, 1 Tim. 1.3. Gal. 1.7,8,9. If a.8.20.1 Cor. 4.6.2 Tim. 3.17. Deut. 12.32. Mat. 15.9, 11.

3. It is the prerogative of Christ himself to be the supream, absolute and final Judge of the sence of his own Laws, and of the

And therefore it is treasonable folly to attribute any of this to man: and to cry out for an Absolute Judge of Controversies here on earth: when one saith, This is the sence of Scripture, and another saith that is the sence: saith the Papist, [But who shall be Judge?] To which I answer, How far man is Judge, I shall tell you in the next: but the Absolute Judge, and the sinal Judge is only Christ. He that made the Law is the proper Judge of the sence of his own Laws: Do you not know that Christ will come to judgement, and that all secrets must then be opened by him, and he must decide what man cannot? Man is to Judge but in tantum; ad hoc; secundum quid; limitedly; so far as he must execute; but Christ only Judgeth entirely, finally and absolutely, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4, 5. 1 Tim. 5. 24. Jam. 4. 11, 12. 1 Pet. 1. 17. & 2. 23. 1 Cor. 2. 15. Act. 23. 3. 1 Cor. 13. 9, 10, 11, 12. Mark 7. 9, 13.

4. All Councils whether General or Provincial or Classical, which confift of the Bishops or Pastors of several Churches met together, are appointed and to be used directly, but gratia Unitatis, & Communionis Christiana, and not directly gratia regiminis for the Governing of Pastors, in order to Unity and Communion, and not as a Regimental, as to the Pastors. This Proposition which is of exceeding consequence, was voluntarily afferted to me, without my own asking his opinion, by that Learned, Judicious man Arch-Bishop Ofher; a man well known to be acquainted with the Judgement and practice of the Antients, if any other whoever. His words were these, [Councils are not for Government, but for Unity; not as being in order of Government over the feveral Bishops; but that by consultation they may know their duty more clearly, and by agreement maintain Unity; and to this end they were anciently celebrated | Himself a Primate, recommended to others these moderate Principles. And this middle way of Reverend Ofher is the true healing Mean, between them that would have properly Governing Councils, and them that would have none, or think

But yet (as is before mentioned in the tenth Proposition) confequentially we are obliged to perform the Agreements of these Councils, if they be agreeable to the General Rules of the Scriptures, or if our performance be not forbidden by the Word of God; Because we are under the General obligation to do all things in as much unity, concord and peace as we can, Gal. 2. per totum. I Cor. 3.5,22. 2 Cor. 13. 11. & I Cor. 1.10. & 4.6. Mat. 20. 25. Phil. 3.16. & 4.2. Mat. 23. 8,9,10. 1 Pct. 5.3.

And I grant that Pastors are related to the Universal Church, as well as to a particular, and are to have a common care of the whole, though they have a special charge only of their particular flocks. Therefore many Pastors in a Synod are Pastors as well as disjunce, and therefore their acts are authoritative Governing Acts as to the flock. But 1. to the Pastors themselves, they are not properly Governors, no more in Synods then out.

2. And as to the flocks, they are not in a direct superiour order above their particular Pastors; but only from their concord are accidentally more to be regarded and obeyed then a single Pastor, as a Colledge of Physitians is more to be regarded then a single Physitian, not as being of higher authority, but of

are not uncapable of ordinary local Communion, whether it be a General Council (as they are commonly called, which are not such properly) or National, or Provincial, I. As they are Christians singly, have a Judgement of Discerning, what is sound Doctrine, and whom to judge Catholicks and fit for their Communion: And 2. As they are single Pastors, they have the Judgement of Direction, what Doctrine to recommend as sound to their people (limited to the Superiour Direction of God by his Word,) and whom they must hold or not hold Communion with: And this is an Authoritative Direction, which may be accompanyed with a Commanding, as an Herald or Pursevant may command in the Princes name. 3. And as they are many Pastors in Council assembled, they have a Judgement of Concord, or Power to enter solemnly into Consultations for mutual information, and then into Agreements, for the right performance of their duty, in recommending that which is sound Doctrine to their people, and receiving the true members of the Catholick Church, and rejecting such as are to be rejected.

So that the most General Councils of true Pastors cateris paribus, are to be most reverenced by the Princes and people, and in cases where they are sure it is lawful to follow their Agreements, though they be not fatisfied of the necessity of it a natura rei, they ought to follow them on the account of unity: and also in cases meerly doubtful to them in point of Doctrine. to be ballanced by their judgements rather then by the Judgement of fingle Pastors, and more then by any other humane judgement cateris paribus: which exception I add, because a smaller Assembly, yea a single Pastor or private man, speaking according to the Word of God, is to be believed and regarded more then the greatest Assembly contradicting the Word: yet we are not easily to think, without evident proof, that one man should be rather in the right then so many; seeing it is easier for one to err then so many, and the promises are more to the publick, then any fingle perions, fo far as they can be known to others: And yet an Assembly of an hundred, or twenty, or ten apparent humble, holy, Judicious men, is likelier to be in the right, and more to be regarded, then an Assembly of a thousand ignorant unlearned wicked Bishops. One clear eye may see further then ten thousand purblind ones, Att. 6.5. Att. 5.34. 1 Thef. 2.14. 1 Cor. 11.16. & 14.33. & 10.32.

6. As the properest matter for such General Assemblies to Consult and Agree upon, is General things; as, What Doctrine is sound, and what unsound in General; what persons in General sit for the Churches Communion, and what unsit, &c. so smaller Assemblies that are capable of ordinary personal Communion, and know the persons and circumstances of the cases, are sittest to consult and agree whether such or such particular persons are sit for their own Communion; yea and for their Churches Communion in difficult cases: And also may consult and agree what Doctrines and practices to recommend to their own people, as most agreeable to the Word of God: And thus sar these two sorts of Synods may be said to have a power of Judging;

Rom. 15.26,27. 2 Cor 8.19.

7. The Postors of particular Worshipping Churches, are the Authorized Guides, Rulers or Teachers of those Churches, and each Member thereof: and must first discern in their own minds. and next (if they be many over a Church.) Agree among themselves, and then teach the people, what is to be believed and practifed, and with whom in General, and in Particular to hold Communion, and whom to avoid, and may charge the people in Christs name to obey their just directions; and when they have done, must themselves execute their own part herein (as by avoiding the Rejected, and not delivering them the Symbols or Sacrament of Communion, &c.) And though they must consult with neighbor Churches for carrying on the work of God in unity, and to the best advantage of the Common cause. vet are they not under the proper Government of them, or any Assemblies (Ecclesiastical,) though obliged in all just things to Agree with them. So that Canons as Canons, I mean the Conclusions of such Assemblies, are but properly Agreements, and not Laws, though by consequence they may be said to oblige. or rather we by another Law obliged to accord and pra-Cife them, Heb. 13. 17. 1 Thef. 5. 12, 13. 1 Cor. 4. 1, 2. A&. 20, 28.

8. The work of Councils how large so ever, is not to make new Scriptures to be the Rule of our Faith and Life, nor to make new Articles or Doctrines of Faith, nor to frame God a new Worship in whole or in part; But by Consultations and Agreements to strengthen each other, and Direct the people in the faith of Christ, and the maintaining and propagating the Do-Arine of the Holy Scriptures, and doing those duties in the Worship of God, and in Righteousness and Mercy to men, which the Scriptures do impose, and in agreeing upon those Modes and Circumstances of Worship which God hath made neceffary in genere, and left to occasional humane determination in specie: Nor may they under this pretence, either contradict the just determination of the Magistrate concerning such Circumstances, or impose any ensnaring, needless Ceremonies upon the Church; but only order the service of God according to the General Directions of the Scripture, and the Light of Nature, which by the confideration of the case may help to discern the fittest order. It is therefore a strange assertion of some, that Governours have nothing to do if they may not appoint new Ordinances or Symbolical Ceremonies on the Church, and make new Laws, seeing God hath done the rest already. As if it were nothing to see to the execution of Gods Laws? Or as if this were not the fittest work for such kind of Rulers, whose Rule is only by Ministerial Guidance? Or as if the determination of Necessary Circumstances requisite ex natura rei, were not enough for them to do, beside what is written? There being no more necessary to the reducing of the Laws of God into practice: Me thinks meer servants and Embassadors should not be very forward in making Laws, if they understand their office, fam.4.12. Heb.8.10,16. Gal.3.15. Deut. 12.32. Ezek. 2.7. & 3.10,11.1 Gor.3.5. & 4.1,2.2 Cor.1.24.1 Cor. 6.12.

9. Those necessary Circumstances in Religious Worship which are of humane determination, and left undetermined by God, are unfit matter for General Councils or remote Assemblies to make standing General Laws of: For 1. the Nature of the things are such as are mutable, and unfit to be fixt, but must be frequently varied as occasions require. 2. The occurring circumstances will be the fittest guide to determine them. 3. They may be meet in one Countrey or Church, which are unmeet in another. 4. Upon such reasons God himself hath left them undetermined: Therefore he lest them not to any fixed General determination. 5. The Pastors that are in the place are the fittest Judges of those occasions that must determine them. 6. And it is the office, and in the Commission of those Pastors to be the Guides of their own actions and Congregations. 7. And Councils are not their Lords. So that all this laid together, may tell us that it is rather the work of particular Pastors or Bishops, and of neerest Associations in those cases where Concord is requisite, then of Provincial, or National, or General Councils to determine of such Circumstances. For example: The command of preaching, reading, administring the Sacraments, singing Psalms, &c. do imply that I must have some time and place to do them in : I must use some gesture, vesture, necessary utensils, but it tells not what in particular: I must read some particular Chapter, Plalm, &c. or so much of it: Now common prudence will tell me what to do in these cases my self, or else I am not fit to be a Pastor, or entrusted with so great a work as Gods publick Worship, or the care of souls. Shall a Council now make Laws that all the Ministers in the World, or in this Nation, shall preach only on such a day, and only at such an hour, and in this or that part of the Church, and only on such Texts such days, appointing them a Text for every day; or that they shall use only such words in praying and preaching as is written for them; or shall pray or preach just so long; or shall sing only fuch a Pfalm, in fuch a tune, using only fuch cloaths, and such gestures, with an hundred the like? This is to make themselves Masters of the Church, and use their power to the destruction of Ministry, Worship and Church, and not to the Edification of it. The present state of the flock, by sin; or affliction, or the like, may make such a Text fittest for me to preach on, and such a Chapter to be read, or such a Psalm to be sung, when by the Impositions of proud usurpers I am commanded to use the contrary, viz. Subjects of Joy, in a time of Humiliation, or of Humiliation in the time of Joy, &c. Many the like inconveniencies might eafily be manifest. These unnecessary Impositions are the Engines of Division, Att. 15.28. Rom. 14. throughout, Rom. 15.1,7. Phil. 3. 15, 16. Mat. 23. 4. & 11. 28. 1 Cor. 6. 12.

10. Where some Impositions by Magistrates or Agreements by Ministers in such Circumstances are thought lawful or fit, vet must not the Churches Unity or Peace be laid upon them : So that if through the weakness of Christians they could not perceive the lawfulness of them, but did think they should fin against God if they used them, it is a cruel dividing course for Magistrates here by fore penalties, or Pastors Excommunications to feek to drive them upon that which they think is the way to hell or the wrath of God, when in the Judgement of the Imposer it is a thing indifferent: The peace of the Church and of Conscience is more worth then a Ceremony, and better kept by gentle recommending such things (if fit.) and a tender rebuke or check to the weak, then by forcing all to that which they neither can nor need to use. But some fay, if all may use what way they will, what order shall we have ? I answer ; therefore make no unnecessary Laws; cast not a foot-ball of contention before them: These

These presumptuous Impositions are the fire brands of the Church. For example: we had here a Law that Ministers should read only such a peece of a Chapter called an Epistle and Gospel such a day (which yet I would not disobey:) here now arose contention about it: The same Ministers were less at liberty what Text to preach on: and this liberty made no breach in the Church. Ministers were commanded to wear a Surplice, and this raised contention: But what kind of har, or cap, or shooes, or hose to wear, they were less at liberty, and this made no contention, nor occasioned any undecency. The Lords Supper was to be taken only kneeling: and this raifed contention: But they were lest at liberty whether to kneel, or sland, or sit at Sermon, or reading, or finging Pfalms, and this bred no undecency nor division. They were enjoyned to bow at the name of Telus in the reading of the Gospel only: And this raised division. But they were left at liberty to bow or not to the Name of God. Christ, Lord, &c. and to the Name Jesus in Sermon, or the Epifile, or the same Gospel read in the whole Chapter: and this bred no division, nor discontent : Lay the Churches peace upon no new humane Impositions, if you would have it hold. Peruse Rom. 14. and the other Text last cited. 1 Cor. 6.12.

11. The Churches Peace or Unity must not be laid on any bare words of mans devising. It's not a work for Councils or Prelates to form the Christian doctrine in new methods and terms, and then to force others to subscribe or use those very terms: If the same men that resuse this, be willing to subscribe to the whole Scripture, or to a Consession in Scripture terms, you may force him to no more.

object. But Hereticks will subscribe to Scripture. Answ.1. They must wrest it then, or wrest their Consciences: And by either or both these shifts, they may also subscribe to any of your Consessions. 2. If his Heresie be latent in his mind, you know it not, nor can call him an Heretick, nor doth it hurt the Church: If it he published or preached to others, let civil Governors question him for corporal punishment, and let the Associate Passors question him to his Resormation or Rejection. You will have a better ground to reject him for delivering salse-hood in his own words, then for not subscribing to Truth in your words, when he subscribed the same Truth in Gods Words.

Mmm

There

There is no Unity to be expected, if you will so far depart from the Scripture sufficiency, as to make any more for sense or phrase, of absolute necessity to our peace. By phrase or terms, I mean either the same numerically (as in the Original) or equipollent (as in translations.) And I say not that it's necessary to the unity of the Church, that every mord in Scripture (Original or Translations) be subscribed to; (for some may doubt of the corruption of a word or Book) But that no more is necessary. If all Scripture be not of that degree of Necessity, much less humane additions, Isa 8.20. I Tim. 3.17. 2 Tim. 1.13. 1 Cor. 95.1 Tim. 6.20. All. 20.32.

12. The Churches Unity & Peace must not be laid upon all Divine Truths: as not on lesser darker points, which neither the being nor well-being of Christianity is concerned in so much as to rest upon them, Phil. 3. 15, 16. Rom. 14. 15, 17, 20. Heb. 5.11, 12, 13, 14. 1 Cor. 7.19. Gal. 5, 6. & 6.15. Col. 3. 11.

13. We ought to love and esteem as Christians and members of the Catholick Church all those that profess to believe the Essentials of Christianity, and to be sanctified by the Spirit of God, and lead a holy upright life; so they make a credible profession, not evidently contradicted by words or deeds: though these persons may differ from us in many lower points of Doctrine, Worship or Government, 1 Cor. 1.2. Eph. 6.24. Gal. 6.15, 16. Phil. 3.16. Rom. 15.1, 2. & 14.1, 2. 1 Cor. 8.9.

14. We ought so to manage the Worship of God in our particular solemn Assemblies, that no sober peaceable Christian may be repulsed or forced from our local Communion, through differences in things of indifferent nature, Heb. 8.5. Mat. 15. 9. Rom.

15. If any Churches differ from us in Ceremonies or smaller things, or if any particular Christians differ, so that they cannot in conscience hold local Communion with us in the same Assemblies for Worship (E. G. if we fit at the Lords Supper, and they dare not take it without kneeling: if we fing a version of the Psalms which they scrup'e to joyn in; If we permit none to joyn that will not conform in disputable things) in such cases, though it be first our duty to do our best to remove all offences, yet if that cannot be done, we may and ought in several Assemblies to take each other for Brethren, and of the same Catholick Church.

Church, so be it we all hold the same effentials of Faith and Godliness, and walk accordingly; and especially if we also hold those weighty superstructures, that the welfare of the Church is most concerned in.

Though here were few or no inflances of this case in the days of the Apostles, when divisions were not so great as now, yet the general rules in the fore-cited Texts do prove it.

16. Ecclesiastical Ministerial Government (by whomsoever exercised) must not degenerate into a secular coercive Government; nor may we use carnal weapons, nor meddle by force with mens bodies or estates; nor yet can we oblige the Magistrate to do it, meerly to execute our censures, or without sufficient Evidence to prove it his duty; nor can we oblige the people against the Word of God, clave errante: so that neither Bishop, nor Council hath any such power as is properly decisively Judicial obliging to execution, be the fentence right or wrong: But our people must know that though we be their Guides or Rulers, yet are we but Ministers, and that they have a higher power to regard, and must not obey us against the Lord, but in and for him. The Power of Pastors therefore is not like Magistrates, or absolute Judges (as is said before but like a Physician in his Hospital, or in an infected City among his Patients, and like a Reader of any Science to voluntary Scholars, in his School : and as an Embassador to them to whom he is sent. So that our Governing being but by the Word, and on the Conscience, is of the same nature with our Directing. 1 Pet. 5.3. Luke 22.25, 26. 3 foh. 9.10. I Cor. 4.1,2.

17. Magistrates are Governors of the Church even as a Church, and of Christians as Christians, though not Absolutely, nor in the same respects, by the same means, & to the same neerest Ends, as Pastors. Magistrates must force us to our duty, and punish us if we be wicked or negligent, even as Pastors, and cast us out of our Benefices, and deny us encouragements, if we be insufficient: so that ad hoc the Magistrate is the only Judge what is found doctrine, and what here see, what Ministers are sufficient or insufficient, culpable or not; I say, ad hoc, so far as to Judge who shall have publick Liberty and Countenance, and who shall be punished, restrained and discountenanced: Thus sar the Mastrate is Judge in Religion; (besides that Judgement of Choice Mmm 2 which every private man hath) And therefore the Princes of the Christian world should hold some correspondencies like General Councils, among themselves by their agents for carrying on the work of Christ, and much of the unity and prosperity of Christians lyeth on their hands, Isa. 49.23. Psal. 2.12. Rom. 13.1, 2, 3, 4. 1 King. 2.27, 35. & 2 King. 18.4. & 2 King. 23.8, 20. 2 Chron.

14.3,5. 70/b. 1.8. I Tim. 2.2.

18. Yet are the Pastors of the Church in their places Rulers or Guides of Princes and Magistrates: that is, we Guide them by Doctrine and Church discipline, as they Rule us by force. The Pastors are the Judges of Heresie and Vice, ad hoc thus far, so as to judge who shall be Denounced by themselves unmeet for the Churches Communion; and Judges of found Doctrine fo far as to resolve what is by themselves to be taught to the people: and Judges of that Magistrate so far, as to determine whether he be a fit subject for their Administrations and Communion. For every man is to judge when he is to a and execute (in these cases;) and therefore when the Question is. Who is to be tolerated or forcibly restrained, the Magistrate is the only Judge, and the Minister but a teacher: But the Question is, whom should I admit or not admit to my Communion, and whom should I perswade and require the Church to avoid or to receive? Here the Pastors are the Judges: And when the Question is, Whether the Pastor go according to Gods Word or not, here the people have Judicium Discretionis, and cannot be forced; though they ought to obey where they fee not sufficient reason to the contrary, Mat. 28.18,19. Heb. 13.17. 1 Thef. 5.12. 1 Cor. 4.1. Luk. 12.42,44. 1 Sam. 28.18. Dan. 9.8, 10. 70h. 20.23. 2 Chron. 36. 14, 15, 16.

And so great is that work, that as to fleshly accommodations, it layeth us under abundance more trouble, then the power and homor affordeth us relief from. All true Pastors therefore should be so far from striving for Power, & Greatness, and Rule, and extent of their Diocess as matters of advantage, that they should still look on their Power but as Power to thresh, or plough, or sow, or reap: a Power to give alms to all the poor in the Town, to visit all the sick, to cure mad men that will abuse me, &c. such a Power to labor and suffer in doing good. And thus he that will be the Greatest, but think of no other kind of greatness, but a power to become the servant of all: If men had these true apprehensions of the Episcopal office, they would be no more forward in contending for power and large Diocesses, then now they are in contending who shall Instruct most of the ignorant, or go to the poor ungodly families to further their reformation; or intrest, beseech, exhort most of the obstinate from man to man; or who should relieve the most of the poor of all the Countrey about. And if this be it they contend for, they may Rule without a Commission from the Prince: Who will hinder them, that hath any sear of God? I Cor.4.9,10,11,12,13,16. Ast. 20. 18. to the end. 2 Cor.1.24. Mark. 10.44. I Thes.2.9. Luk. 10.2.

20. No man is called by God to more work then he can posfibly do, nor should defire and undertake more. And therefore if Prelates, and Councils, and Popes would but conscionably bethink them of the work, what it is, and how to be done, & of what weight, and how strict will be the account, and then consider how they can do it, our differences would quickly be at end : For though godly men would put off no service they can do, yet when they lookt on the undertaking of these Impossibles, they would tremble to think on it. All conscionable men are sensible: of their weakness, and the weight of the work, and say who is fufficient for these things; And I dare say the strongest of them all would feel the weight of the burden of one Parish, and bereadyer to beg and seek about for help, then to contend for a a larger Diocels, unless as the meer necessity of the Church for want of laborers might call them to labor in other parts. Duty: supposeth Authority, and Authority supposethability and opportunity; even natural ability and mental qualifications, Pfal.! 131.1.2. 2 Cor. 2.16.

By this much you may see what Unity may be expected in the Church on earth. 1. A unity of internal Faith and Love, and Spirit among all real Christians. 2. A Unity of Profession, all professing the same Belief, that is of the word of God in General; and of the Creed and Essentials of Religion in particular; and asmany more of the particular truths as they can reach.

3. A Unity of Professors in local communion in the same Affemblies in Gods publick Worship, in the Word, Prayer, Praises, Sacraments, &c. Where they cohabite, or have opportunity for such communion. Mmm 3

4. Among those that are out of our reach, or being neer us. ver differing in some smaller things, where a difference is tolerable, we may yet in word, writing and deed own each other as Brethren, and combine for the promoting of the common good. and the commonly received truths and duties. So that we have in these four, the unity of the spirit in the bond of Peace : One Body: (the Catholick Church comprehending all properly called Christians) One Spirit (The fan difying Spirit of Christ:) One Hope of our calling (One Promise or Gospel, and One Heaven and End:) One Lord (even Christ the only Head of the Church) One Faith (Both objective, in Scripture, and the Creed: and subjective, specifical, which is our Reception of Scripture doctrine, and of Christ with his benefits:) One Baptism (entring all one and the same Covenant with Christ. to be his, and take him for our Lord and Saviour, renouncing the world, the flesh and devil, and fignifying this by external washing in the name of that Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.) One God and Father (Our Creator, Preserver, our End and Happiness) Ephel. 4. 3, 4, 5.

And is all this Nothing to you that seemed so much to Paul? that unless you have also an Earthly, Universal Head, and an Unity in Ceremonies (wherein all must be of your mind, and conform to you as if you were Gods) you will revise at our divisi-

Aving laid down those Grounds or Principles on which the Unity and Peace of the Church must be built, there appears not any great need of adding any more for the reducing these to practice; if these were but received, the way of practice would be obvious. But briefly I shall lay down these sew Propositions, implyed in those express before.

1. Let every man profess his belief of the Holy Scriptures in General; and in particular of all that Scripture hath express to be of Necessity to Salvation: by denouncing death to them that have it not; And let them also Profess to consent that God be their God, and Christ their Saviour, and the Holy Ghost their Sanctifier, and that they renounce the flesh, the world and Devil, resolving to live a holy life. And let this be by a credible way of Professing. And all that do thus, let us essent

ly disown this Profession.

2: Let every such Baptized Professor, owning also the Ministry, Church and Worship Ordinances, plainly required in Scripture, be a member of some particular Church, where he may worship God in the Communion of Saints.

3. Let those that make not the foresaid Christian Profession; be excluded the number of Christians, and those that own not the Fundamentals of communion, (the Church, Ministry, Word, Prayer, Praise, Sacrament of Communion) be taken as unmeet for actual communion with us, though yet we censure them not to be no Christians.

4. Let those that are obstinate and impenitent in any Errors, contrary to the said Profession and Ordinances, or in actual gross sin, or discovering an ungody heart, be rejected by the

5 Let all the Pastors Associate, and hold constant correspondency according to their neerness and opportunity, for helping and strengthening each other, and unanimous carrying on the work of Christ.

6. Let these Associations have standing Presidents, where the

7 Let no particular Pastors set up any thing in Gods publick Worship which is not Necessary, and may tend to make divisions by driving tender Consciences from his communion.

8. Let Affociations forbear making Laws to others, and imposing as Governours, and let them make Agreements for certain Duty, and not Laws that pretend to make new duties; and let them Agree on nothing unnecessary.

9. Let them study Holiness as much as Peace, and keep clean themselves and their societies as far as they can, and look at labour and suffering, and not at any other honour and power, but what is for duty; and let them look abroad and help the dark parts within their reach, and lay out themselves freely and industriously for God, and have the chief regard to the most publick good.

by none into communion till he be reconciled; and if they suffect that he is unjustly cast our, let him not be received till the Church that cast him out be heard, and the injury or his Repentance manifest.

II. Let those that cannot hold local communion, because of some smaller practical difference (as gestures, words, &c.) and yet agree in the soresaid Profession, and Fundamentals of Communion: yet own each other professedly as Brethren, and maintain Love and communion in other respects.

12. Let all differing Christians consult and agree how to hold their differences, so as may least prejudice the common truths which all receive, and as may least hinder the salvation of the

13. Let none judge or defame each other till they are heard, and see they have sufficient cause by certain proof: And then admonish them, and bring the cause to the Association, before they proceed further.

14. Let the correspondency of Pastors extend as far as there is Capacity, Opportunity, and need. We cannot correspond with the Antipodes, nor much with the Ethiopians, nor such remote parts: there is seldom opportunity, and seldom necessity of actual correspondence with forreign Nations: But yet when publick occasions require it, (the publickest cases being the weightiest) we should by Delegates or Messengers from several Associations, perform our duties in all such correspondencies, whether in Councils or otherwise.

15. If any members of our Churches travail into other parts, they should take Certificates or Communicatory Letters, that they may be admitted to the communion of the Churches where

16. The chief consultations for General Peace and effectual promoting the healing of the Churches, and the propagation of the Gospel into the unbelieving parts of the world, should be done by Christian Princes by their Agents: and though Ministers are fit to be (partly) their Agents in such consultations, yet not meerly as Pastors, but as fit men employed by their Princes. He that lives to see but this much reduced to practife, will see a better unity and peace in the Church, then ever was or will be attained by an earthly Head and Judge of the Universal Church, whether Pope or Council, or then the Agreement of the five Patriarks, and the later Primates and Metropolitans will procure. Let us be content with one Head, and one Heart;

and center there: but though the fingers and toes be more, we Take up with the Holy Scriptures as the sufcan well bear it. ficient Rule: Let the Profession of that be the mark of a believer: and all such believers betaken to be, as they are, the Catholick Church; and no faction Schismatically and presump. tuously confine it to themselves; Let this Intellectual Unity of faith, be seconded with a cordial Unity of Holy Love, to Christ and his Members: (that so our Unity may begin at the Head and Heart, and not perverfly at the fingers and toes of smaller matters, or at the hair and nails of Ceremonies and indifferent Modes:) Let this be manifested in Professions of Love, and publick ownings of the Catholick Brotherhood, and of Christians as Christians; and by publick disclaiming all selfishness, and partiality, and private Interests, and all reproachfull words and writings, and by actual communion as far as we can. Let the Worship of God be performed in such holy simplicity that none may be driven from the facred Assemblies; and let the people be suffered to go the same way to beaven as Peter and Paul did go themselves, and lead their hearers in ; Let us not be ambitious of Church Union or Communion with those that ought to be cast out of the Church, and whom we are in Scripture commanded to avoid; but let the three attributes of [Holp Catholich, and Apoltolical] be fill affixed to the Church; and be practically confidered; and those confiderations issued in T The Communion of Saints ? And then we shall have fo much Unity and Peace as may honour the Christian Religion. and strengthen us in the way to our Perfett Peace, which is not to be expedied in this dark, diseased, impersed world. This is the way, and none but this?

But is there any hope that while men are as they are, such healing Truths should be received and obeyed? Yes: by here and there a man; who shall have the Peace of their peaceable Affections and Endeavours; but not by the most either of the people or the Pastors; let the evidence of the truth be never so clear. Who can expect any great success of such Proposals, that knows the world? (till the time come when Light shall go forth with an absolute resolution to prevail.) God is one; and all that Deny themselves and center in him, must needs be One: But self is as various and numerous as Persons are. And this self is the Heart of the Natural man, and the Center of all the unfan &ified, And every felf is a grain of Sand, thats hardly made coherent with another. The Darkest mind is self conceited: and the poorest child or beggar is felf-affected; and high and low, Princes and people have felf-interests, which draw them several wayes. And in the sandified this felf is mortified but in part, and is the first living, and ftrongest, and last dying sin, in all; and giveth strength to all the rest. What hope then of Unity, while every man hath a numerically different Center, Principle, & End, and so few for sake it, and devote themselves to God the common Center, and End of the Saints? and those few so Imperfectly; permitting felf to live and do so much within them. And though the Papists have devised a way to make this fand into a rope; or cement innumerable felves together, by finding out such a Carnal Head and Center where every man may find his own Carnal Interest involved in the In. terest of that Head and his body; and so may have a carnal unity of a multitude of carnal ones to glory in ; Yet Christ is another kind of Head and Center, condemning and destroying carnal felf. and commanding all his followers upon pain of damnation to deny it, though to nature it be the dearesthing in the world. No wonder therefore if the number of his Adherents be few, and the unity of those that center in him, be less conspicuous and glorious in the world. With strong Defires therefore, but Low Expectations I propound these terms of Unity to the Church; as knowing how many thousand of the Dark and selfish will not only neglect them and reject them, but rise up against them (if they come into their hands) with no small self-conceited confidence and scorn,

But the Church is the Lords, who hath purchased it by his blood; his Interest in it is more then mine; & it is infinitely dearer to him then to me; & his wisdom is fittest to dispose of the success of our endeavours, & to determine of the season and measures of its cure: He is the Physitian, and hath undertaken the work, and in the sittest way and time will perfect it, and be the sinisher as well as the Author of our faith. The eye of the chief Shepheard is even now upon all his scattered flock, and of those that are given him to be saved, he will lose none; he is neither insufficient for them, nor careless of them; but will gather into one the Elect that are dispersed; and present them all pure, unblamable, and spotless to his Father at the last; and as much as they seem now to us, to be uncurably curably divided, we shall then see them perfectly healed and united, and made up One Glorified Body of our Head. For that bleffed Marriage day of the Lamb, and the Glory of the New Jerusalem, we therefore Pray, and Hope, and Wait, in our passage through this sinful and distracted world.

THère are three common sayings in which I am much delighted that conduce to the Illustration of what I have said.

1. Servanda in Necessariis Unitas; In non-necessariis libertas: in utrisa, charitas. Vule.

2. Contra Rationem nemo sobrius; Contra Scripturam nemo

Christianus; Contra Ecclesiam nemo pacificus. August.

Scripture is the test of Christianity, and must shew us found in the faith; though the Church may shew us Peacable.

Therefore to feek for Unity, Verity or Felicity, by the loss or destruction of Sanctity, Religion, Charity; is really to renounce, oppose and lose them.

Satisfaction to certain C A L V M N I A T O R S.

Am informed from London, and several parts of the Land, that some of my Books having lately been fold at excessive rates by the Booksellers, it is somewhat commonly reported that it is caused by my excessive gain, which fay they, is at least three or four hundred pounds a year. I thank the Lord that doth not only employ me in his service, but also vouchsafe me the honor and benefit of being evil-spoken of for doing him the best service thatil can, Mat. 5.11,12. 1 Pet. 4.13,14,15,16. Blessed Augustine was put to vindicate himself by an oath, from the infamy of a coverous delign, which was raifed by one godly woman, upon a diforderly action of other men, and to that end he wrote his 225. Epistle. I find no call to use his oath; but yet I judge it my duty to imitate him in patience, and in rescuing the slanderers from their sin, that they abuse not their souls by uncharitable furmises, nor their tongues by false reports. To which end I give them this true information: The two first Books I printed, I lest to the Booksellers Will; for all the rest, I agreed with them for the fisteenth Book, to give to some few of my friends, hearing that some others agreed for the tenth, Sometime my fifteenth Book coming not to an hundred, and sometime but to few more, when of Practical Books I needed sometime 800.to give away. Because I was scarce ric's enough to buy so many, I agreed wit's the Bookseller, (my Neighbour,) to allow 18. d. a Ream (which is not a penny a quire,) out of his own gain towards the buying of Bibles, and some of the practical Books which he printed, for the poor: Covenanting with him, that he should fell my Controversal Writings as cheap, and my Practical Writings somewhat cheaper then books are ordinarily fold. To this hour I never received for my self one penny of mony from them for any of my Writings, to the best of my remembrance: but if it fell out that my part came to more than I gave my friends, I exchanged them for other Books: My accounts and memory cell me not of salis that ever was returned for me on these accounts, which was on literary occasions: so that my many hundreds a year is come to never a penny in all, but as abovefaid, in some exchange of Books. And the price I let on my Books which I exchanged for theirs at the dearest rates, is as followeth, [Treat. of Conversion, 2.s. Treat. of Crucifying the World, 2.s. Disput. of Justificat. 2.s. 4.d. The Call to the Unconverted, 8.d. Disput. of saving Faith, s.d. Of the Grotian Religion, 6.d. Directions for sound Conversion, r.s. 8.d. Disput of Right to Sacraments, Edit. secund. 2.s. 4.d. 7 These are all my bargains and my gains. And I chose the honestest Bookfellers that I could meet with according to my small measure of wit and acquaintance; who told me, they still made good their Promises. censorious Slanderer, tell me, what thou wouldst have had me to have done more? If I had got Food and Rayment out of my own hard labors, had it been unlawful or dishonourable, when Booksellers get so many hundred pounds by one Book, that never studied nor spent their time and cost for it, as I have done? And yet dost thou reproach me that receive not a groat? But because I will not oblige my self to the same course for the future, and that thou mayst know at what rates I serve thee, let me tell thee, that in these labors early and late my body is wasted, my precious time laid out, and somewhat of my Estate, and somewhat of the labor of my friends. I cannot have twenty quire of my writing well transcribed, under fifty pounds. And who shall pay for this, or maintain me in thy service ? I have troubled a Neighbour-Minister in the tedious work of transcribing my Characters (for some books,) for which, neither he nor I had ever one penny. personal matters are unsavory to me, and I take it for a great injury that thou puttest upon me a necessity of mentioning them. But I have yielded this once to thy unrighteous importunity, that thou mayest hereafter learn what to believe and utter, and make more conscience of thy censures and rejorts. And that thou mayst have the utmost relief that I can procure thee for the time to come, I shall agree with my Booksellers, to sell all that I publish at three farthings a sheet, and to print the price of every book at the bottom of the Title page.
