TUBSDAY MORNING, JUNE 24, 1824. We are authorized to aumounce JAMES BRADFORD. Felicians, non acadidate for Congress for the Second Di

General John B. Dawson was arrived in the city and has taken lodgings at Bishop's hetel. He is in excellent health and spirits, and appears very grateful for the reception he has met with from all classes of his fellow citizens on the ocasion of his late tour throughout the state.

incessant vain on Saturday last. It is said that in consequence of the postponement of the White secuting, no supplies were voted for their support, and that they were thus suspended. Rumor says, if relief does not quickly come they will all die a violent death.

We begin to feel approbensive that the Louisiana will be defunct before the July election. Considering the emment se v ces et has rendered unwittingly to the Dawson cause, we regret this exceedingly. Suppose some of our friends raise a subscription to keep it a-going till after the election, under the express condition that it does not come over to our side. The money could not be better laid out that is if we want in unanimous vote.

Address to the Voices of Louisians.

Louisianians, below sitisens, when we take a retrispective ginnes at the histories of ancient ripublics, their rise, progress and sitionisis, and compare these histories with our own; we desired especially of the compare these histories with our own; we desired especially, their introduction among us. That our government is established on a basis of moire solding that its principles are more equivable and consequently rious andering than there or environmentation as assessment of the wiself principles of all ages, is happly felt at home, and candidly acknowledged abread. But as humanity laborate, and though we are conscious afthe superiority of our institutions, we should guard them from every encroachment of corruption with the eye of vigitance itself and protect them, with all our energies from continual states. While the Grecian and Roman republics setting their original purity of manners, while they cripted a protect intentity and domestic peace; while they preserved a proper equality of rights and privoleges, and undignantly repellations. Address to the Volces of Louisians.

Senator Poster.—"Power is always stealing from the many into the hands of the few."

It has seldom happened, that a man of such moderate talents, and unpopular manners as Alexander Porter—has been so successful in all his designs, and so rapid in obtaining the tower and patronage of a whole State. If we looked at there consequences, without pushing our investigations into the true causes, we might be led to believe that Senator the true causes, we might suppose that his moral qualities were pure, so firm and so conspicuous, that like another Cato, by the mere force of virtue, he had income master of the people of Rome. But these traits of character, genius and high moral integrity, have never been ascribed to Alexander Porter, even by his most prejudiced friends.

If this be a truth, to which we challenge a donial, to what cause must we look as the origin of that political power, which he already grasps, and to those means which he is putting in operation for the acquisition of more. We hear tate, not a moment in assigning as we firmly believe; the true and adequate cause. He has devoted himself to a selfish and cunning policy, a policy matured in the year 1812, when as a thember of the convention assembled to form a constitution, he introduced principles which have formed the stepping stone to his present position. A policy which thus early formed he has systematically pursued, without regard to the feelings of any, unless they could be made instrumental in his political aggrandisement, a system of policy, which even as a Judge of the Supreme Court he never lost sight of, and during term time, he found it convenient to form a cabal and an interest in the Legislature, ever willing to follow at his leck. We need not say, how his influence in the Legislature, was perfected, or how maintained, but this much we will was perfected, or how maintained, but this much we will was perfected, or how maintained, but this much we will was perfected, or how maintained, but this much we will was perfected, or how maintained, ity of rights and priveteges, and indignantly repell-ficery and arrogated distinctions, they enjoyed a nagrate of affairs, were happy at home and konored arson and robbery. Rudd then made an application at the police office, and M. Place, the officer, immediatly went in search of Simpson, whom he shortly afterwards ery, (which he returned,) but denied having com-interest, deserves a passing notice: Last Sunday it was so cold that over coasts and fires were essential to comfert; he next morning it was so warm that this summer dres ad were too thick for comfort. Before night, however warm—April and May have been quite the reverse.

Claims under the French Treaty—A report from the Commissioners under the act to carry into effect the late treaty with France, has been presented to the Sonate, showing a list of the claims presented, with amount in the aggregate, principal, and interest, to the sum of $51,834, 107,15; about ion times the amount contracted by the Treaty, in fact, by refusing to appropriate the money stipulated to be paid by it, can our Government, in justice to the claimants, or with due regard to its own honor, consent hereafter to sacrified the interests of our merchants to such an enormous extended. merchants to such an enormous extent, by receiving the indemnity stipulated in the rejected Treaty?—We hope that the Commissioners, may proceed in investigating the came, in which our Government shall insist upon under without a blush adopt the name of whigs!!! Thus you see, this faction, which originally acted under the influence of England, has passed through three states of existence, and show in the fourth: and whether as tories or federalists, as actional samplings for which they appear to the sample of t trated to themselves the spoils of rictory, in the offices of ite Corporation—from the highest to the lowest—from the City Inspectors and Attorney, to the Watchmen and ket per of the Park.—Mobile Reg.

national republicant and the same malign and treasonable principle.

Whigs indeed! Yes, Lonisianians, they are whigs but Whigs indeed! Yes, Lonisianians, they are whigs but Whigs according to the acceptation of Daniel O'Connel, who says, bif you wish to call a man by every ugly name you can imagine; if you deare to pour upon him a torrent of abuse, or apply to him the most writhing invective, call him a whig, and you have per creat your philippe." Now that the resent whigs of New Orleans are ready and indeed the same characters, as the tories of the revolution, is evident from the bellowing hypotheses and deductions. It is acknowledged on all hands; that, after the acquainton of our national independence, the tories became federalists, and that Daniel Websterrs, and ever was a federalist of the deepest deep who advocated on the floor of Congress, the advantages of conferring titles of nobility, is known from the one extremity of the Union to the other; and that Henry Clay, who is a mational republican, and the coryplice of the party acts in conjunction with this celebrated federalist, cannot be dened, and that our soi-disant wings of 1834, who sustains White in the present contest, are the main supporters of these two "THE LIGHT GUARDS."

A sign of the times.—The new-company paraded on Wednesday list in their British uniform—scarletoost, &c. They were praised a few days since by one of the Bank papers, as a spirited body of Whigs who guarded the Exchange against their own party during the late lection. Their dresses are as much like those of the true Whigs as the politics of their cologisers are—both borrowed from those against whom the Whigs once levelled their muskets.—Ibid. "THE LIGHT GUARDS."

COLONEL CROCKETT.

Colonel Davy Crockett has lately been exhibiting himself about the country much to the delight of the Whigs but to his own disgrace. We are sorry to see a member of Congress inus playing the buffson, and hope for the honour and respectability of the country, he may hereafter be kept at home. We know that those who sent him to Congress can select one more capable; he may be an honest man, but he is a very foolish one.—Ibid COLONEL CROCKETT.
