3 MILESTONES IN THE PAST 12 MONTHS

Our biggest challenge is to keep the international community together through new challenges and activities. It is not easy because the community is small and dispersed, plus the activity is not very social. The investment of the bigger Wikimedia community in our technical department is close to zero, and that creates an additional burden to volunteers who end up burning out.

I would like to see awareness of our project in the decision-making process, including technical developments and investments in community-building. Also a stronger partnership development with organizations with a similar goal like Internet Archive or Project Gutenberg.
