زميندار zamīn-dār, a landlord, a landholder (in reality a revenue farmer, or what, in Ireland, is called a middleman). As the term zamīn-dār differs widely in its signification from our ideas of a landlord, it may be proper to add, on the authority of Gladwin, that under the Mughal government the term was applied to a person who held a tract of land immediately of government, on condition of paying the rent of it. He was first in rank among the landholders. If a zamīndār was unable to pay up the amount of his engagements with government at the end of the year, such a part of his zamīndārī was sold as would discharge the balance. If he was dispossessed of the management of his zamīndārī, he was nevertheless exclusively responsible for all debts incurred by him during his possession, unless a mortgage was given on the zamīndārī, or the money borrowed applied to the payment of the revenue. Zamīndārs, by the nature of their tenures, had no longer a right to their lands than whilst they paid their revenues; and in case of failure, the sale of their land was a more just and useful recompense to government than subjecting them to corporeal punishment. Should they, however, at any time have been prevented fulfilling their engagements by unavoidable accidents rather than by their own mismanagement, equity would point out what indulgence they might be entitled to on that account. p.

ص called sād i muhmala or sādi ghair man-kūta, the fourteenth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the seventeenth Persian, and the twentieth Hindūstānī. Strictly speaking, this letter is purely Arabian or Semitic, but in a few Persian words it has, in modern times, been substituted for the original sin, to distinguish such words from others of a different signification, as sad originally sad, one hundred, and shast originally shast, sixty (to prevent their being confounded with sad, a wall, and shast, an aim): it has no corresponding letter in the Sanskrit alphabet, and in Persia and India its pronunciation is hardly distinguishable from that of sin; but among the Arabs its sound is stronger than that of the latter, and with a mixture of w. In reckoning by abjad its value is ninety. It is used as an abbreviation for safar, the name of the second month in the Arabian kalendar. لال بھکڑ لال بھکڑ lāl bujhakkar, an intelligent person; one who comprehends quickly, or who readily divines what has happened or is to happen from certain symptoms. As a proper name or epithet it is generally used ironically for a wiseacre, an ignorant fool who pretends to more sense than his neighbours: as in the following answer given by a person of this description, when consulted respecting the marks of an elephant's feet in mire, by people who had never seen such an animal: yin to būjhe Lāl-Bujhakkar aur na būjhe ho,e; pāyan ehakki bāndhkar mat harnā kūdā ho,e, "Surely Lāl-Bujhakkar and none else can understand this: may not an antelope with a millstone tied to his feet have bounded here?" This gentleman is evidently of the same family with the Wise Men of Gotham. Some twenty or thirty years ago there was a very popular little book current in Scotland, attributed to the pen of the celebrated Adam Smith, entitled "The History of Wise Willie and Witty Eppy." Wise Willie is undoubtedly the full brother of Lāl-Bujhakkar, for once upon a time the folk of Fife brought him a horseshoe which they had picked up, and he sagely assured them that it was the new moon, only it puzzled him sorely to account for its having fallen in Fife, as he had seen it the night before far to the south-west over a very remote part of the country. h.s.

न

न nūn, the twenty-fifth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the twenty-ninth of the Persian, and the thirty-second Hindūstāni: it is one of the dental letters, and has the sound of the English n, with the following exceptions: the letter nūn has a very soft nasal sound in plural terminations in ān, en, īn, and on, and in the terminations in ūn and en of the aorist and imperative of verbs; it has also this nasal sound in the middle of some words, as mūh, the face, haṅsnā, to smile, &c., for which no rule can be laid down: in this dictionary the nasal sound of n is always indicated by ñ: when nūn precedes be or pe it has the sound of m, as mimbar, a pulpit (for minbar), sampat, prosperity, for sapat, (as is the case in Greek and Latin). In reckoning by abjad, the letter nūn stands for 50; in almanacks it expresses the conjunct aspect of the stars; finally, the letter nūn with the short a (as na) prefixed to verbs renders the sense negative, as bolā, he spoke, na-bolā, he did not speak.

و nāw, the twenty-sixth letter of the Arabic alphabet, the thirtieth Persian, and the thirty-third Hindūstānī. At the beginning of a word or syllable it generally corresponds in sound to our w. In reckoning by abjad it stands for six. In ephemerides it represents Friday and the sign Libra. Wāw not beginning a word or syllable contributes to form the long vocal sounds o, ū, and au, fully explained in my Persian and Hindūstānī Grammars.

व va or va, the corresponding letter in the Devanāgarī alphabet. In words purely Sanskrit it has the sound of our v. Again, the Sanskrit v is freand Bengālī; hence a Hindi word not found under this letter should be looked for under b.

A DICTIONARY, ENGLISH AND HINDUSTANI.

A

A or AN, the indefinite article, is expressed in Hindustani sometimes by the numeral, "ek," one, or the indefinite pronoun, "ko, i," a certain one, as "ek mard," or "ko, i mard," a man, or a certain man. A, before verbal nouns, in such phrases as a-visiting, a-hunting, is expressed by the postposition "ko," as "wuh mulkāt ko gayā," he is gone a-visiting, "shikār ko gayā," he is gone a-hunting; and frequently the "ko" is omitted after the Hindustani infinitive, which last, however, remains in the inflected state, as "wuh pairne gayā," he is gone a-swimming. The meaning of a in the sense of by or per, as by the yard, per month, &c., is expressed variously; thus, five rupees a-yard, "fi gaz pānch rupae," or "sare gaz pānch rupae," or "gaz bhār pānch rupae," you shall receive a rupee a day, "tum ko roz roz ek rupiya milegā." If the prefixed z denote in or on, it will be expressed by "meñ," or "par," as "jahāz par," on board ship, or aboard.
