Citizens of New Orleans! Your enterprises which have Citizens of New Orleans! Your enterprises which have been cowned with success: and plenty which has rewarded your industry, has supplied you with the means of being generous. An opportunity now presents itself to you for benevolent and godike action. The meansy which you will this day contribute for the sufficient in Charleston, will diffuse comfort where there is now want, and happiness where there is now misery,—it will lift up the father of the poor family from that depth of despair into which the late calamity has plunged them,—it will help the orphan, and make the widow's heart to leep for joy. The Navy Commissioners have issued proposals for the delivery of white oak keelpieces and other timber for eight seventy fours, eight frigates and ten sloops of war, by the first of August, 1836, as the naval stations of Portsmouth, New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk. This is an addition of nearly one thi d to our present naval force. We observe in the list of the European navies that several States have a large proportion of steam vessels, particularly the English and French. Would not steam ships be greatly the most efficient force for the defence of our coast with its large bays and rivers?

In the Chamber of Peers there will not be more than and rivers?

The Boston Commercial Gazette, making a comparison of our naval resources with those of other nations, estimates that we have at present in the merchant service about 70,000 seamen.—[Balt. American.

Address to the Citizens of New Orleans.

Fellow-Citizens:—The voice of one of our enter communities in distress has reached our ears. Charleston has been reduced to asker; and headreds of poor families have been suddenly cast upon the world without a kome, and without the measure of subsistence. Industry in want laments the loss of her hard earnings; and helpless innoceance appeals to the chartable for pity and for succer.

Fellow-citizens:—Let us shew that this lamentation is not unheaded, and this appeal not made in vain. Let us shew that we have hearts that can deeply sympathies, and hands that can deeply sympathies, and hands that can promptly relieve; that the citizens of New Orleans who a few years ago contributed so generously in sid of the poor Greeks—those suffering strangers in a foreign land—will now on an occasion upon which their sensibilities must be far more affected, deal out the full measure of their liberality to relieve affected, deal out the full measure of their liberality to relieve.
