BASIL LANNEAU GILDERSLEEVE

PREFACE

IN the preparation of this book I have kept steadily in view the actual needs of the student who desires to understand and appreciate thoroughly what has been called "the most sublime poem in the world." Grammatical and historical, as well as archaeological and literary information has been supplied; but the historical matter has not been allowed to expand into disquisitions, the grammatical to develop into syntactical exercises. Emphasis has been laid on the fact that the play is a work of consummate art, not a mass of Greek words arranged with the express purpose of affording the student an opportunity to show his skill in performing feats in mental gymnastics. The prime duty of the editor is to interpret his author; but the task of editing such a play as the Prometheus does not consist in merely bringing to bear on the text the keenest penetration, the most elegant taste, and the soundest judgment and scholarship at the editor's command, — he should also unroll the chart of modern literature, particularly our own great English literature (to which classical scholars are now, as in De Quincey's time, too often strangers), wherever the influence of the Greek poet has been felt. Even within the last year another poem of considerable merit has been added to the long list of those written either in imitation of the creation of the Athenian poet or on the ever fascinating subject of the Fire Bringer, which Aeschylus first placed among the sublilities of art. The thought of the great Hellenic minds is still a part of the world's thinking. Aeschylus has been woven into our own literary fabrics. And not only allusions and reminiscences, but also parallels and modern instances are helpful and stimulating; they arouse the interest and widen the horizon of the student. The notes in this edition have been reduced to the smallest possible compass consistent with this plan of annotation; but all points that seemed to require elucidation have received attention.

I am under obligations to Professor Smyth for many valuable suggestions and criticisms. Thanks are also due to my colleague, Prof. E. M. Brown, who read the introduction in manuscript, and to my former colleague, Dr. Paul Baur, for assistance in selecting the illustrations.

INTRODUCTION

I. — AESCHYLUS

I. LIFE

1. So many flowers of fancy cluster round the life of Aeschylus that the solid ground of fact beneath can scarcely be discerned. Myths were woven in the late as well as in the early period of Greek history; and these fables, like dialect The myths with dialect in the choral song, were interwoven with historical truths. Two of the most grotesque stories mark the beginning and the end of the poet's career. They are no pernicious lies,

But pleasing fictions, hurting none,

if we but sunder false from true, recognizing that the fictions are merely symbolical. As Rostand says, ce n'est pas toujours la légende qui ment; it is simply an expression of the nous le voulons of the people. In a story, which reminds us of "Caedmon, a-calling angels with the cowherd's call that late brought up the cattle," we are told that Aeschylus was set to watch the grapes in his father's vineyard and fell asleep, when Dionysus appeared to him in a dream and bade him devote his life to tragic art.¹ Literary mythology usually assigned unusual deaths to men of unusual mental capacity. Dogs tore Euripides to pieces; Sophocles choked on an unripe grape. An eagle mistook the bald head of Aeschylus for a stone and dropped a tortoise he had been carrying, — to break the shell, — and the oracle was fulfilled which declared, A missile from heaven shall slay thee (οὐράνιον σε βέλος κατακτενέϊ).

2. Aeschylus was born in 525 B.C., and was, consequently, four years the senior of Pindar, whose lofty genius inevitably suggests a comparison.¹ Sophocles and Euripides, fellow-countrymen as well as fellow-craftsmen, belong to the next generation. These three form the tragic triad.

Hail the Three!

Aischulos. Sophokles, Euripides

Compete, gain prize or lose prize, godlike still.

Sophocles was from Colonus, Euripides from Salamis, Aeschylus from the district of Eleusis, one of the oldest and most prominent centers of Attic life. The influence of his religious surroundings was not small. The poet's character cannot be understood without a study of his environment. The hallowed spot of Eleusis, with all the solemnity of the mysteries, could suggest only sublime thoughts to his strong and imaginative mind. Here poetry germinated in his soul; here he became imbued with patriotic and religious sentiments.

Δήμητερ, ἢ θρέψασα τὴν ἐμὴν φρένα,
εἶναί με τῶν σῶν ἄξιον μυστηρίων is his prayer when about to engage in a contest with Euripides (Ar. Ran. 886). His father's name was Euphorion. Two youths who distinguished themselves in the Persian war, one at Salamis, the other at Marathon, are said to have been his brothers, but the connection cannot be proved.² That the poet was an Eupatrid might be inferred from his works; the aristocratic spirit breathes

² Kynegirus may have been his brother (Hdt. 6. 114); Ameinias certainly was not.

in every line. He contended with Pratinas of Phlius,¹ learned much from Phrynichus. The latter's work, though rough and imperfect, was not heedlessly done. But our poet marks a much farther advance on Phrynichus than Sophocles on Aeschylus,² who is the real founder of tragedy, the creator of dramatic art, since in him the genuine drama begins.³ He brought out his first play at the age of twenty-five, and won his first prize fifteen years later (485 B.C.).⁴ Pindar was poet and priest; Aeschylus was more — a soldier. Nor did his valor dwell in vaunting. "At Patriot and mortal battailles hadde he ben and foughten for the warrior feith," for the cause in which he believed, at Artemisium, at Salamis, and he was one of the famous Μαραθωνομάχαι.⁵ The impulse of that mighty national movement, the struggle to determine whether Greece or Persia should rule the western world, was felt by none more keenly than by Aeschylus. Unlike his serene contemporary of Thebes, the Athenian poet, who glorified the Grecian feats at arms in verse, had wielded the sword himself.⁶ In a contest for the composition of an elegy to be inscribed over the fallen heroes, he competed with Simonides, but failed to win the prize. About 476 he went to Syracuse, where Hiero, who kept a splendid court, had gathered about him the most famous poets of the world.¹ For the great occasion of the founding of Aetna Aeschylus wrote his Αἴτναι.² Later he produced the Persae, which was of peculiar interest to the Syracusans, since the battle of Himera was fought against the Carthaginians, who formed a part of the Persian empire. Shortly before the death of Hiero, Aeschylus contended with Sophocles for the tragic prize and failed. As the latter had been before the public but a few years, it is not unlikely that Aeschylus believed his failure due to politics or partisanship.³ Whether he withdrew from Athens at this time we do not know. Although he gained the prize with his Oedipodeia, and with his Septem contra Thebas, there was still a gulf between him and a large part of the public. Nevertheless, his efforts were destined to be crowned once more with success, in his last and greatest work, the Oresteia (458). We read of his trial before the Areopagus (on the charge of having divulged the Eleusinian mysteries),⁴ of his acquittal, and final withdrawal from Athens. He died at Gela, Sicily, in 456 B.C. The Athenians commemorated his achievements by a public statue.

2. CHARACTERISTICS

1. A man of muscle, — moral and intellectual as well as “the Marathonian muscle nerved of old to maul the Mede,” — we cannot think of Aeschylus otherwise than as

God's plan
And measure of a stalwart man,
Limbed like the old heroic breeds,
Who stands self-poised on manhood's solid earth.

² Cp. Pind. Pyth. 1 (Ἱέρωνι Αἴτναιφ). It may be that the name of the tragedy was Αἴτναι. The Persae was written primarily for an Athenian audience.

⁴ Dante also was denounced as an arch-heretic by the inquisitors of Florence.

A true representative of the mighty time, he is a colossus creating colossal forms. Measured even by his humility (Ruskin's test of a truly great man), Aeschylus appears gigantic. In the epitaph written by himself and inscribed on his tomb he said not a word about his dramas, but only of his valor in the Persian war.

Αἰσχύλον Εὐφορίωνος Ἀθηναῖον τόδε κεύθει μνήμα καταφθίμενον πυροφόροιο Γέλας· ἄλκῆν δ' εὐδόκιμον Μαραθῶνιον ἄλσος ἂν εἴποι καὶ βαθυχαιτήεις Μῆδος ἐπιστάμενος.¹

The sublime poet, whose Prometheus has been the study of ages, seems to have valued his achievements as a soldier more highly than his dramatic creations. In the famous dialogue in Aristophanes' Ranae he points to the martial features of his tragedies as their chief glory.² He gives "all the pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war," both in form and in subject-matter.³ Like Homer, he taught τάξεις, ἀρετάς, ὀπλίσεις ἀνδρῶν (Ran. 1036). His choral songs are battle odes, resounding with the clash of arms; their chief function, as Aristophanes says, was to educate the citizens, making them energetic, high-spirited, patriotic. The chief of the three disciples of Homer, Aeschylus was not only the delight, but also the teacher of the Athenians; his warlike odes were listened to by all the people; his characters represented the cherished ideals of the race; it was unnecessary to make pleas for "higher education."⁴ Measured by the highest standards, Aeschylus is one of the few great men of the world;

he meets Franklin's requirements for the class completely — "he wrote things worth reading and did things worth writing."

2. Aeschylus was stern of lineament and grim; and as we look upon his face we recall the features of the father of Tuscan song, that "grande âme immortellement triste," as Alfred de Musset calls him; the "high, austere Dante," as he is named by Matthew Arnold. Intensity of feeling characterized the Italian poet; elevation of thought the Greek.¹ But the words written of "the gret poet of Itaile That highte Daunt," can be applied to Aeschylus as well:

His words are parcel of mankind,
Deep in whose hearts, as on his brow,
The marks have sunk of Dante's mind, and whatever our predilections in poetry or in persons, we can say

The face and personage of a wondrous man.

3. RANK AS A POET

1. Aeschylus is a poet of the highest order. Dryden, in his unjust comparison of the poets of Greece, Italy, and England, passes over the founder of tragedy, whereas some critics put him on a pinnacle even above ὁ ποιητής, "Omiero poeta sovrano," as Dante calls the poet of poets.²

2. In one of the most unique bits of writing in the whole range of Greek literature, the fifty-second discourse of Dio Chrysostomus, appear these words, "After reading the three Philoctetes with the utmost impartiality I do not know to which I would refuse the prize." In the matter of form we must be content to learn of the ancients, — accept their judgment as final. Each poet has the defects of his virtues. What he loses in one direction he gains in another.

² Dante's order is, Homer, Vergil, Horace, Ovid, Lucan, himself. Macaulay puts both Ariosto and Lucretius above Vergil. His catalogue of the six greatest poets is Shakspeare, Homer, Dante, Aeschylus, Milton, Sophocles.

and modern critics

Search your fill ;

You get no whole and perfect poet.

What nature denied Aeschylus “en fait de bonne grâce,” as Croiset puts it, “de douceur et d’agrément, elle le lui rendit en force d’âme et puissance d’imagination.” Theoretically, Sophocles was chiefest of the three. Yet Macaulay speaks of Aeschylus as the greatest of the Athenian dramatists ; and the French historian just quoted says, le premier est le plus grand des trois. But this estimate is not altogether correct. Aeschylus was a genius of a higher type than Sophocles, but he lacked the χάρμς, the perfect harmony of substance and form, of the εἶδος and ἔλγῃ, so characteristic of Sophocles, who unites grace and nobleness, whose even-balanced soul

Business could not make dull nor passion wild ;

Who saw life steadily, and saw it whole ;

The mellow glory of the Attic stage,

Sweet singer of Colonus.

Euripides attracted most attention in the Middle Ages. But in some respects Aeschylus stood above both. As Lesage says, in Gil Blas, “The present generation accuses that which has preceded of bad taste, and its judgments are overturned by those of the next generation.”¹ While the perfect equipoise and exquisite art of Sophocles commended him particularly to the Greek, and the humanity and philosophy of Euripides appealed to the thirteenth century, the magnificence of his imagery and the sublimity of his conceptions won for Aeschylus even more numerous votaries among the learned in the modern world.¹ When we pass from the modest beginnings of tragedy, in Thespis and Phrynichus, to Aeschylus, we come to a poet who still holds his own against the world. The Athenians were born debaters, and the elevation of this inborn capacity to the higher ranges of art was the work of Aeschylus.

Die Kunst vollendet das was die Natur skizziert.

Aeschylus was practically the creator of the dramatic dialogue; he reconciled tendency with art; and he turned to advantage the very obstacles which the rudimentary state of the drama threw in his way (see Introd. II. 3). He was a genius of great resource, an artist of consummate conscience; as careful in his execution as Racine, and totally exempt from the French poet's stiffness. None of his successors ever equalled him in inventiveness;² none surpassed him in the variety and artistic arrangement of rhythms.

3. There have been many famous writers who, unwilling to remain mere sympathizing witnesses of some great struggle in which they were interested, wielded the sword as readily as the pen; but probably none of them can rank with Aeschylus, who was in this respect like Calderon.³

seems to diminish. Later generations, however, turn their eyes toward him again; Callimachus borrows expressions. Lycophron, ideas; and through the Alexandrians his works passed over to Rome, to live again in the Latin language.

4. PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION

1. The forerunners of the philosophers were poets ; the roots of philosophy are in the old myths. With Pythagoras, Xenophanes, Parmenides, and Heraclitus, a new epoch begins in Greece. Aeschylus is the last representative of the mythological age ; the old beliefs had become so firmly fixed in his mind that no external influence could disturb them ; but in him the naïveté of the primitive religion disappears ; theologian as well as artist, he seeks to reinterpret the old legends, to find in them material for a doctrine on human destiny and the government of the universe. But we must not look for a perfect logical system in his works, one which offers a solution to the problem of the existence of one supreme, absolute law, side by side with the free will of Zeus, and leaves nothing unexplained. His office was not to give deliberate expression to philosophical views, but to present in his dramas the traditions of the people. He dealt with ethics and theology, but as the effluence of his and the nation's life, not as a formulated system of philosophy. His Prometheus is not an allegory, nor a philosophical treatise, but a poem in the fullest sense of the word. True, it contains many moral sentiments ; but to a Greek the chief function of a poet was to express sharply the ethical maxims of his people ;

Interpreter of the old myths

Calderon, dont la douceur élégante et purgée d'épique est inimitable). The Spaniard's allegorical Estatuta de Prometheo was inspired by the Prometheus of "the untranslatable, unapproachable, inimitable Aeschylus." Both poets were soldiers. Both were deeply religious ; they sought their inspiration in the sacred traditions of their people. The Greeks named Aeschylus the father of tragedy ; the Spaniards called Calderon the prince of dramatists ; and the luxuriant fancy of the Oriental poet of the Occident, the music of his verse, the variety of his rhythms ("My Calderon, my nightingale," as Lowell calls him), and the scenic splendor of his productions are thoroughly Aeschylean. But here the comparison breaks down. The divergencies are great. In portrayal of character Calderon is almost Sophoclean ; in grace, pathos, tenderness, intrigue, and in the weaving of intricate plots he has few equals ; but all these cannot weigh against the elevation and moral grandeur of Aeschylus.

and the Greeks prided themselves on their moral precepts. Aeschylus was the first poet to identify tragic action itself with a moral and religious question. He brooded over the problems of life. He saw the complexity of human affairs and recognized that things do not happen from one cause alone, that there are questions which cannot be solved with mathematical accuracy. He meditated on the history of his nation and on those traditions the meaning of which was revealed to him in the conflicts in which he himself had taken part, unfolded by the remarkable victory of Hellenic liberty over Oriental despotism. There had been much religious skepticism before. Now the problems of history stood in a new light. The Persian war had brought about a reaction, aroused the political consciousness of Greece and revived the national religion. To Aeschylus the defeat of the Persians was but a confirmation of the power of the gods and of the nothingness of man (cp. Prom. 547). He saw in the past the germ of the present. Whence the check to that great army (τοὺς ὑπερόλλους ἄγαν Pers. 794) that seemed as irresistible as the billows of the sea? Haughty Xerxes had failed to recognize the limits imposed on human kind. The gods set a snare for his immoderate desires. This is the high lesson which the drama teaches and which the poet reiterates with emphasis. His creed was simple; a few dogmas, not very sharply defined, but set forth with an authority and power of expression which lend them force, constitute the sum and substance of his doctrine. In Aeschylus, as in Homer, there is not so much individual thought as sacred lore of the people. But the tenets of the Persae and Agamemnon are vastly different from the puerilities of the primitive myths, which were woven in the essentially poetic period of the human race.

2. The Zeus of Aeschylean theology is difficult to define. He is almost always represented as the supreme sovereign, not, of course, the Christian Ruler,

Zeus

Celui qui du néant a tiré la matière.

(for the idea contained in Lamartine's verse is wholly uncongenial to the Greek mind), but, most frequently, as the Omnium rerum Rector et Moderator.¹

Nowhere is he pictured so harsh and cruel as in the Prometheus. In passing from this play to the Agamemnon we find a Zeus who changes in conduct, but not in nature. There can be nothing more magnificent than the invocation of Zeus in the first chorus. Zeus teaches mortal men by suffering and so leads them to wisdom. Still different is the Zeus of the celebrated fragment,

Ζεὺς ἔστιν αἰθήρ, Ζεὺς δὲ γῆ, Ζεὺς δ' οὐρανός, Ζεὺς τοι τὰ πάντα, χῶτι τῶνδ' ὑπέρτερον.

Man's measures cannot mete the immeasurable All.

The highest god is not other than the world; yet he is superior to the world; he is the soul of the world. Aeschylus says that thought is an impenetrable abyss. In his eyes the nature of Zeus is not less mysterious: Ζεὺς, ὅστις ποτ' ἔστιν (Ag. 160).² Even Aeschylus wavered. Doubts assailed him as well as Euripides. Neither believer nor skeptic is totally exempt. Euripides has "a life of doubt diversified by faith," Aeschylus "a life of faith diversified by doubt."³

3. In Homer the will of Zeus is omnipotent: ἐγὼ περὶ τ' εἰμὶ θεῶν περὶ τ' εἰμὶ ἀνθρώπων (θ 27). The action of the Iliad and the Odyssey begins, unfolds, and ends with the will of Zeus; everything is directed and controlled by him. Fate is represented as a concurrent agency. The fall of Troy is decreed by fate, but Zeus assents to please Hera. Zeus permitted the wrath of Achilles.

Awaiting all is μοῖρ' ὀλοή, τὴν οὕτως ἀλείεται ὅς γε γένηται (ω 29), for τὴν πεπρωμένην μοίρην ἀδύνατά ἐστιν ἀποφυγεῖν καὶ θεῶ (Hdt. I.

91), τὸ μόρσιμον γὰρ τὸν τ' ἐλείθερον μένει | καὶ τὸν πρὸς
Moira ἄλλης δεσποτούμενον χερὸς (Cho. 103 f.). From this conception comes the idea of Necessity that governs all (Prom. 514).

It is Moira that takes us to our last resting-place: τὸν αἰεὶ φέρουσ' ἐν ἡμῖν | Μοῖρ' ἀτέλευτον ὕπνον (Ag. 1450). The conceptions on which Aeschylus based his ideas of Ἀνάγκη, which ordains that every violation of the law of righteousness be followed by punishment, are found in Homer. Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. The sinner thrives for a season, but the penalty is at last exacted. A νόσος φρενῶν is sent upon the guilty man, a θεοβλάβεια, which drives him to destruction.

Nemesis and Necessity

the fruit of pride is yet but green,
Not mellow: though it grows apace, it comes not

That when it haps 't may prove more terrible.

The power of Fate, in whatever guise, reigns supreme.¹ Different views prevailed with regard to the origin and the activity of the Μοῖραι, and all these are reflected in Aeschylus. According to Hesiod (Theog. 211) they were the daughters of Night. Again in Theog. 904 Zeus and Themis are their parents. In Pindar they are above, but in harmony with, the gods. Zeus cannot avert what the Fates have ordained, though great power is placed in his hands. In the Agamemnon Moira works in unison with Zeus. In the Choephoroi the two ideas merge. In the Eumenides the Moirae stand in close relation to the Erinyes. In the Persae and in the Supplices there is no hint of a separation of the power of Zeus and of the Moirae.¹ In Homer, deities, as well as heroes, execute in spite of themselves the decree of a supreme will. Greek antiquity recognized the existence of an eternal law, to which everything is subject. This law was conceived to be identical with the will of Zeus; but it was absolute, and Zeus himself was subject to its control; nor could he change it. He cannot get the secret of Prometheus by violence. Even the Titan is a symbol of the triumph of Destiny over our will. Nevertheless, man's resistance to Fate is not passive. His activity does not limit itself to resignation and self-effacement, as in the dramas of genuine fatalism. He knows that he must succumb in the unequal struggle; but he combats his fall, and exhibits a Titanic energy of will; his whole effort is to yield without weakness, to ennoble his inevitable fall by the exhibition of a certain dignity. Like de Vigny's mariner he contemns the heaven-high billows "en sachant qu'il en est écrasé."

In the Persae the same somber divinity appears as in the Prometheus. The gods of Athens and Eleusis are against proud Xerxes. Man in conflict with the powers of destiny is overthrown. But the doctrine of retribution is most clearly expounded in the Septem. In Sophocles, who lacked the speculative insight of Aeschylus, and did not delve so deeply into the problems of existence, man is his own nemesis. "L'intrigue se noue et dénoue plus près de la terre" (Egger). The gods have not abdicated; but the struggle is not so unequal for man. The development of the plot is by natural actions and human motives, notwithstanding the important rôle which Fate plays.²

4. But whether Zeus or Destiny, it is always Justice by and through which everything is done — δίκη is the rule by which the Ruler governs. This idea dominates all the works of Aeschylus: Ζεὺς ἑτερορρηπής, νέμων εἰκότως ἄδικα μὲν

Cp. Ag. 1485 f. διαὶ Διὸς παναιτίου πανεργέτα. | τί γὰρ βροτοῖς ἄνευ Διὸς τελεῖται; and the invocation of the chorus Suppl. 524 ff.: ἄνιξ ἀνάκτων μακάρων | μακάρτατε καὶ τελέων | τελειώτατον κράτος, ὄλβιε Ζεῦ ("The Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king"). So the Greek Hebrew: ὁ μακάριος καὶ μόνος δυνάστης, ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν βασιλευόντων καὶ κύριος τῶν κυριενόντων (Paul in 1 Timothy 6. 15). To the Erinyes is intrusted the moral government of the world; they are the ministers of the supreme justice of Fate, executing the eternal and unchangeable law (ὦ δίκαι ὦ θρόνοι τ' Ἐρινύων Eum. 511).¹ The Erinyes were deities primeval, anterior to the evolutions and revolutions which the bizarre Greek fancy imagined in the heavens,² evolutions known by the people, recognized by the theologians, and hence not flatly contradicted by Aeschylus. He is the interpreter of a time-honored conviction. Many a religious teacher of to-day, whether poet-prophet or preacher-prophet, is kept by his good sense, as well as by the exigencies of the language, in the beaten track. Aeschylus wished to express the idea that Justice and her laws are eternal; hence he represents the Erinyes as primordial divinities, as existing before the reign of the gods. His Zeus could not say

³ La fatalité est tout au fond presque entièrement dans l'ombre . . . la volonté des dieux, dans une demi-clarté . . . la passion humaine, au grand jour, sur le devant de la scène (CROISSET). If we still find difficulty in reconciling the facts as they appear in the dramas of Aeschylus, we may find comfort in the reflection that we are not clear in our own minds about our own traditions. "Wer ist denn das?" asks Faust. "Betrachte sie genau!" replies Mephistopheles. "Lilith ist das." "Wer?" "Adam's erste Frau" (Faust

If one makes unworthy use of good fortune, the Erinyes beat him back from success and strike him blind :

They are εὐθυδίκαιοι (Eum. 312), and it is their duty to punish every atrocious crime (186 ff.) ; but on him whose hands are pure their wrath does not fall — he lives unharmed (313). They do not enter the homes of those whose sacrifices are accepted by the gods (Sept. 699 ff.). They are older than Athene, hence much wiser (γεραιτέρα γὰρ εἶ . . . κάρτ' ἐμοῦ σοφωτέρα Eum. 847 f.). The Erinyes appear to the homicide as soon as he commits the crime (Cho. 1048), and none but him is able to see them (1061).¹ They vex the victim (Eum. 333 ff.), drive him mad, force the blood from his limbs, and hurl him to the realms of the shades, where he is surrendered to Pluto to be condemned (267 ff.). The Erinyes alone have the office τεύχειν κακά (125). Like the Gorgons, their hair is intertwined with many serpents (Cho. 1049 f.) and from their eyes trickles loathsome blood (Eum. 54, Cho. 1058).² Even their breath is blood and fire. Their countenances are horrible (Eum. 990), their raiment black and squalid. No definite number of the Erinyes is given by Aeschylus (πολλὰ μὲν ἔσμεν, 585).³

3762). Aeschylus constantly reverts to this struggle between the old and the new. In the Eumenides it is the burden of the play, the Erinyes against Apollo. In the Prometheus the will of Zeus is in conflict with an irresistible and inscrutable power. In the Agamemnon Ἐρινύς is an abstraction, or a curse-spirit. The term does not by any means stand for the same idea in the various plays. Μοῖρα has a twofold usage even in Homer.

² Cp. Prom. 799 and Dante, Inferno 9. 38 ff.

Che membra femminili aveano ed atto,
E con idre verdissime eran cinte:
Serpentelli e ceraste avean per crine.

³ Μοῖρα : Μοῖραι : : Ἐρινύς : Ἐρινύες. Where the meaning is "revenge," the singular is naturally more frequent.

5. For Aeschylus, as for Homer, Tartarus is ὑπὸ γῆς (Prom. 219). But Aeschylus marks a distinct advance on the doleful Homeric doctrine that the ψυχή is a mere wraith (εἴδωλον), which has the rank and form of the ἄνθρωπος in life, but possesses none of the faculties of the living. Aeschylus says nothing about the joys of the just in the other world — παρὰ τимиούς θεῶν . . . ἄδακρυν νέρονται αἰῶνα (Pind. O. 2. 71 ff.). He has a clear idea of retribution, but does not seem to know if any benefit Arises of religion after death, so far as positive blessings are concerned, though he speaks of the μακαρίτας ἰσοδαίμων βασιλεύς of the Persians (633). The characters of Aeschylus are for the most part somber. The Greek loved light; cheerfulness characterized his temper;¹ but Aeschylus is prone to dwell in the shadow. His habit was to work in somber colors; and while there is light in the Prometheus (the Oceanides) and the Oresteia is not all shadow, we miss, nevertheless, the sunshininess of Plato and Sophocles.² There is no trace in Aeschylus of the popular belief that the dead retain a distinct personality, no hint of the doctrine of metempsychosis of the philosophers. His religious sentiments and opinions were the product of devoutness and pure love of truth. He ascended to a height where vice falls away — far above the narrow Calderon, who was at once Vengeful, forgiving, sensuous, saintly.

6. The Greek poet believed “Das Unglück schreitet schnell” — τό τοι κακὸν ποδῶκες ἔρχεται βροτοῖς | κατ’ ἀμπλάκημα τῷ περῶντι τὴν θέμιν (Fr. 283) — misfortune follows close upon the heels of crime. tion (ὅταν σπεύδῃ τις αὐτὸς, χῶ θεὸς ξυνάπτεται, Pers. 742). Cp. Fr. 386 φιλεῖ δὲ τῷ κάμνοντι σὺσπεύδειν θεός ("the Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart"). As Lycurgus, the orator (quoting), says (92) : ὅταν γὰρ ὀργῇ δαιμόνων βλάβη τινα, | τοῦτ' αὐτὸ πρῶτον ἔξαφαιρεῖται φρενῶν | τὸν νοῦν τὸν ἐσθλόν, εἰς δὲ τὴν χεῖρω τρέπει | γνώμην, ἰν' εἰδῆ μῆδέν ὦν ἀμαρτάνει. So Fr. 153 θεὸς μὲν αἰτίαν φέει βροτοῖς, | ὅταν κακῶσαι δῶμα παμπήδην θέλη. The terrible divinity, Destiny, the religious personification of that inevitable fate which presides over the affairs of men — this is the idea which dominates the tragedies of Aeschylus. Abstract though it is, with no eye to pity, no arm to save, yet it becomes a kind of living and acting person. Hence the simplicity of the story (only a sudden blow, a momentary tableau) ; hence the terror we feel and the grandeur of the characters, their proud resistance to the foe that crushes them at a single stroke. In and through the old legends the poet brought to view the highest laws of human existence. A few of these myths were Egyptian (Io, Epaphus, Danaus), but Egyptian influence on Greek life was chiefly external, and had little to do with religion.¹

7. Aristotle, in his Poetics, is silent on the subject of Destiny ; and, from his day until the eighteenth century, tragic destiny was never thought of by dramatic poets. To be sure, we have a genuinely poetic representation of Fate in Calderon's La Vida es Sueño ; but he did not see in it the mysterious forces of a higher power. Not till the time of Schiller was the idea of a national fate evolved. Much of the suffering in the plays of Sophocles and Euripides is occasioned by the sin of the individual ; in Aeschylus there is inherited sin as well as that committed by the shortsighted individual. Schiller introduced a fatalistic motif into the tragedy of Wallenstein ; but he did not simply call back the Aeschylean Fate, he went further, and in Die Braut von Messina conceived the idea of a people degenerating more and more, and in this degeneration bearing the curse of their ancestors: "Denn noch niemand entfloh dem verhängten Geschick" (4. 5). In India the wrath of the gods is visited on him who merely omits a religious formula. In Aeschylus nemesis is the penalty of wrongdoing; there is always an inner connection between man's acts and his fortunes. Evil is self-productive, says the chorus in Agamemnon 758 ff.: τὸ δυσσεβὲς γὰρ ἔργον | μετὰ μὲν πλείονα τίκτει, | σφετέρᾳ δ' εἰκότα γέννα.

5. DRAMATURGY

1. Like Shakspeare, Aeschylus was thoroughly familiar with the stage; he paid great attention to detail; and, being an artist of the highest rank, he was excessively busy in improving the appliances of the theatre. Of the three Greek tragedians Aeschylus was the most practical. He superintended the performance, the arrangement of each part, the decoration of the stage. All the machinery requisite for his gigantic productions was carefully studied. Yet his drama reached farther than the scenic representation; the poet possessed more ideal capacity than wealth of means in the dramaturgical art. Unlike Calderon, he had no carefully laid plot, no subtle calculation of means and intricate weaving of incidents. In this respect he is like Racine. "There is in Andromaque," says Brunetière, "a simplicity of means, an exactitude and precision, that have never been surpassed. . . . Nothing in our modern literature is nearer perfection than a drama of Racine." Part of this characterization fits Sophocles rather than Aeschylus; nevertheless, Prometheus is as well-chiseled as Athalie; our poet was an artist not only of great power, but also of great conscientiousness and consummate finish.¹ He could roughhew like a Cyclops, but he could also finish like a Praxiteles. But there are no fine meshes of intrigue. It was a time of sturdy citizens — warriors — who had been trained in a strenuous school, a time unfavorable to the growth of the rank weeds of a later age — low cunning and trickery. The dramas of Aeschylus, like his characters, are drawn only in large outline, with manly straightforwardness. An act contains merely a series of scenes.

2. In selecting the costumes of his actors Aeschylus was very careful. There was no mock finery, but magnificent splendor and well-studied devices to enlarge the heroic dimensions.¹ Attention to detail
Aeschylus was, furthermore, no lilter of light lays, no petit-maître with scented curl; yet he was a musical composer and a dancing-master. He had to drill his chorus; for forty years he was obliged not only to produce, but to develop and improve. The modern critic may accept the doctrine of Plato's Ion, that it is inspiration, not art (θεῖον καὶ μὴ τεχνικόν) that makes the poet, but neither the ancient (Sophocles) nor the modern Greek (Goethe) would have subscribed to the opinion that inspiration is in itself sufficient. Pindar insists on the need of inborn faculty; nevertheless, he believes his poetry is a subtle science that obeys fixed laws.

3. In the Agamemnon the chorus approaches its ideal significance. The odes are long, but they rise to the loftiest height; and the content is as grand as the form. The end The chorus and object of the chorus is, as Schiller says (Vorrede zu der Braut von Messina), to leave the narrow sphere of the action, to enlarge on the past and the future and on the human, to sum up the great results of life, and to teach the high lessons of wisdom; and it does this with the full power of the fancy, with a bold, lyrical freedom, which moves along on the high summit of human affairs, as it were, with strides of the gods.

4. In Aeschylus for the first time do we find lyric movement, epic interest, and gnomic wisdom combined. Tragedy was born of the choral song; and the chorus exerted a powerful influence on its development.² Not only did it lend moral and poetic

² Lamentation was one of the chief elements of primitive tragedy. The farther back we go the more evident does the juxtaposition of the lyric and epic elements appear. The Oresteia is more dramatic than the Supplikes. As grandeur, but also that pomp and majesty which come from the presence of so many witnesses of the action, of the exposition and dénouement, which really constituted the action. Curiosity was not a dominating emotion. There were no surprises, no complications and sudden reversals of situation. Even in the Agamemnon (in which there is the greatest wealth of incident) there is only a postponement of the catastrophe. There is but one idea, one sentiment, one situation, and a uniform development; there is but a single scene; yet this one enchains the attention of the audience. Dialogue, narrative, reflection, follow one another monotonously.¹ Euripides criticises him for this monotonous marshaling of forces in metrical lines in the Septem (Ranae 940 ff.).

5. There is no unfolding of character in Aeschylus, as in Sophocles. Like Homer, he presents whole person-ages — they are all made before they are brought on the stage. Even the character

Of Clitemistra for hir lechery
That falsly made hir housbond for to dye is not really developed in the play, though there is more detailed work here than in the other dramas. The timidity natural to maidens, as, for example, in the Oceanides, the alternating states of hope and despair peculiar to woman, everything that is tender, delicate, or in any way characteristic of the gentler sex, the poet indicates sometimes in passing, but he does not care to dwell upon the traits, and study them in detail. The characters of Aeschylus are ethical types, drawn in large lines, majestic, terrible. There is no Euripidean sententiousness in the personages he presents. None are drawn in minute details. We get tired of the mechanical stencil-work of Euripides. Aeschylus works à la gouache, Euripides au bistre.¹ His heroes move in an ideal sphere. He groups and contrasts the statuesque forms, but transfers his psychological coloring from the characters to the chorus. He seldom appeals to our pity. There is no Imogen, no Marina, no Desdemona. None of his characters, except Cassandra, possesses the individual richness of an attractive personality. No other poet ever created such characters; conscious of their fate, they show a strength of will that lifts them far above reality.

Weil says, Aeschylus conquered for the theater the whole domain of the epopee. Even in the Choephoroi it is seen that a great lyrical piece is a parallel rather than a necessary complement of the dialogue. Not without great labor did the creator of tragedy work up to the high place where he left the art for Sophocles' beginning.

6. The plays of Aeschylus were written in trilogies, groups of three tragedies, related in subject and composed with the view of being acted in immediate succession. Very little The trilogy has been handed down to us about the trilogy, and some skeptics have gone so far as to deny its existence. The old tradition is correct. The first and third play had a single main theme. Following each trilogy was a satyr drama, as an after-piece, the whole being called a tetralogy. In the structure of his trilogies, as in the composition of his choral songs, Aeschylus required immensity. In Sophocles the chorus does not play such a prominent part, the dialogue is more perfect, the language not so rugged; and the action of the piece does not extend, like the great bas-reliefs of Aeschylus, over the whole surface. One play suffices. The material is narrowed to the compass of a single tragedy; the trilogy is kept as a mere form; the separate plays treat of different subjects, with apparently no connection between them. In Euripides the plays have nothing to do with each other, either in their inner dependence, or in their deeper meaning. In Aeschylus there is a series of tableaux of great situations, in which his Titanic figures embody the moral problem of the universe; in Sophocles is seen the resultant of heroic forces and divine law. In Aeschylus the structure of the drama is simple; the play moves openly and with slow tread toward the goal; in Sophocles the structure is complex, subtle, the meshes of intrigue fine, the plot complicated. In the former the number of characters never transcends seven; in the Supplices there are only three. Sophocles has nine in Antigone, but only five in Philoctetes. The maximum in Euripides (eleven in Phoenissae) is nearer the modern type.¹ The three persons of the verb mark the limit of the number of actors. Aeschylus had but two before Sophocles began his innovations; he introduced a third, and this remains. A fourth actor was unnecessary on the antique tragic stage.

7. The modern notion of art for art's sake would have been incomprehensible to the most artistic race the world has ever seen. The Greeks laid extraordinary stress on the ethical side.

But they were profitable to common life,
And did men honesty and wisdom teach.

“We learn the poets for their wisdom,” says Aeschylus (Ran. 1030, 1054).² It is curious that they subordinated their art.

The Greek poets store-houses of useful knowledge

Few literatures combine so much aesthetic splendor with sound moral doctrine. The Greek poets did not strive to preach; they were all the more effective preachers because they did not preach. Their minds were healthily imbued with human wisdom. Their dramatic works of art did not contain sermons. Theology cannot furnish material for a work of art. The religious purpose which many see in Greek tragedy has been discerned by subsequent analysis. To use the anatomical method and analyze with scientific accuracy is legitimate (deadening as the process is), but, as Symonds says, “the religious purpose was not in any case present to the consciousness of the poet as a necessary condition of his art as art.” The geological analysis of the Matterhorn with hammer and pick would not contribute to, but rather interfere with, the appreciation and real enjoyment of that proud Aeschylean mountain. "Analysis is not the business of the poet; his office is to portray, not to dissect" (MACAULAY). The figure of Prometheus leaves a lasting impression on the mind, as does Hamlet. The Prometheus belongs to a group of works of art so profound and powerful that they obtrude themselves upon our admiration and at the same time have a fascination that comes of the mystery that surrounds them.

¹ Shakspeare has twenty-four in Macbeth, exclusive of Hecate and the three witches.

² When Euripides asks what we should admire in a poet, Aeschylus replies: δεξιότητος καὶ νουθεσίας. ὅτι βελτίους τε ποιοῦμεν | τοὺς ἀνθρώπους (Ran. 1009 f.). Cp. Isoc. 2. 3 τῶν ποιητῶν τινες τῶν προγεγενημένων ὑποθήκας ὡς χρῆ ζῆν καταλελοίπασιν.

One shouldn't analyze the thing too nearly:
The main effect is admirable clearly.

No poetical exposition of a moral theory equals that of Aeschylus, except Milton's. But Milton sets forth his doctrine as a portion of divine revelation and vitiates it with the dross of dogmatism. Aeschylus does not attempt to reconcile the conflicting beliefs of his people; it is enough for him to worship; the gods may harmonize the various views; the poet himself beholds with only partial vision. One cannot read Paradise Lost to-day with the enthusiasm the work deserves; it involves a particular theology so vitally that few can echo the praise of Milton's old devotees. But Aeschylus does not need to dilate upon the law—he shows it implicit in the history of men and heroes.

8. In the Electra of Euripides (570) we have Aeschylus' rival's opinion of his dramaturgy. The younger poet makes merry over the means employed to bring about the recognition of Orestes and his sister. It is one of the most remarkable parodies in the whole history of the theater.

Euripides' criticism of Aeschylean
art

Again, in the Phoenissae (748 ff.) Euripides reproduces an Aeschylean situation simply to give Eteocles an opportunity to say: ἐλθὼν δ' ἐπτάπυργον εἰς πόλιν | τάξω λοχαγούς πρὸς πύλαισιν, ὡς λέγεις, | ἴσους ἴσοισι πολεμίοισιν ἀντιθείς· | νέμειν δ' ἕκαστον διατριβὴν πολλήν ἔχει, | ἐχθρῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῖς τείχεσιν καθημένων. There could be no more ingenious mockery of the immoderate extent of epic detail in that celebrated passage, which resembles a narrative in Homer rather than a scene in tragedy. But this is only a bit of satire in passing, whereas the Electra passage is a deliberate criticism of Aeschylean art.

καὶ κεραμεὺς κεραμεῖ κοτέει καὶ τέκτονι τέκτων, καὶ πτωχὸς πτωχῶ φθονεῖ καὶ αἰοιδὸς αἰοιδῶ.

Heraclitus and Xenophanes find fault with Homer; Pindar criticises Simonides; the latter censures Pittacus. Aeschylus had a predilection for silent and taciturn characters. "He made Achilles, or Niobe, sit there," says Euripides (Ran. 911 ff.), "head covered and saying never a word, while the chorus kept singing whole rows of songs . . . until at last, when the play was nearing the end, King Achilles, the Silent, deigned to speak — and such strange, pompous, high-sounding words!"¹

9. Aeschylus boasts that he never introduced into his plays a woman in love (Ran. 1043): ἀλλ' οὐ μὰ Δι' οὐ Φαίδρου ἐποίησεν πόρ-

des" that "morbifies the flesh," but in "primaeval virtue, antique faith." Euripides portrays men as they are, in all the nudity of their weakness.¹

10. The Greeks felt that art was intimately associated with life and with public morality. Euripides' influence was destructive of the good breeding of the Aeschylean period. There was a slyness, a cleverness about the works of Euripides, Aristophanes' hostility to Euripides "the argute and tricky," that made Aristophanes his uncompromising foe. Euripides employed the arts of a dazzling hypocritical eloquence; his odes contained the chatter of washer-women decked out in tinsel-words (Hel. 179 ff. and Hipp. 121 ff.). The vigorous impressive measures of the older poets gave way to the effeminate and irregular rhythms of the later melodies, which paved the way for the complete decline of music. Euripides

11. Aeschylus tells us himself (Ran. 1014 ff.) that his training school did not breed effeminate creatures, but sturdy fellows: γενναίους καὶ τετραπήχεις, καὶ μὴ διαδρασιπολίτας, | μηδ' ἀγοραίους μηδὲ κοβάλους, ὥσπερ νῦν, μηδὲ πανούργους, | ἀλλὰ πνέοντας δόρυ καὶ λόγχας καὶ λευκολόφους τρυφαλείας | καὶ πήληκας καὶ κνημίδας Aeschylean καὶ θυμούς ἐπταβοαίους, noble great fellows six feet characters high, no shirkers of duty, market-gossipers, unprincipled knaves

¹ "I paint men as they are. . . . Not as they should be. . . . Women and slaves . . . your equals, as they are" (EURIPIDES in Aristophanes' Apology).

² Cp. Ran. 1301 ff., Nub. 330, 970 ff. Aristoxenus of Tarentum was wont to cultivate in private the music of Aeschylus and Pindar, and lament over its decay. By the third century of our era the people had lost all feeling for time measurement. In Ranae 1314, Aeschylus parodies Euripides' innovations in music, particularly his repeating one syllable six times (six notes instead of one) — "quo in genere magis etiam peccare solet musica hodierna" (FRITZSCHE) — and in v. 1323 the degeneration of versification which began in Euripides. Aeschylus "was train'd by other rules than are in vogue to-day." The change came gradually. We cannot hold one man responsible. Aristophanes exaggerates; he takes Euripides as the representative of the whole movement; nevertheless, Aristotle essentially agrees with Aristophanes.

and grand rascals like the brood of to-day, but men who breathed of the spear and the lance and white-crested helmets, of casques and greaves and courage doughty as the tough-hided sevenfold shield of Ajax.

12. In Ranae 1261-1280 Euripides makes fun of Aeschylus' predilection for ephymnia, and of the loose connection in which they stand to the rest of the ode. This after-chant is merely a relic of folk song, and occurs very frequently in Aeschylus (cp. Ag. 1489-1496 and 1513-1520). In the strophe, but not always in the antistrophe, it is joined to what has just been sung. The form preponderates over the content, the musical over the logical. We have in the ephymnion an indication that the parts were not rendered by the whole chorus. All choral odes that contain ephymnia (with a single exception) consist of three strophes. The explanation is to be found in the division of the chorus into three στοῖχοι. Each στοῖχος sings the strophe and the antistrophe, and the whole chorus the refrain (cp. the repetitions in Cho. 778-792 = 808-822, and 837-846 = 870-880). In Prometheus 574-608 Io sings the strophe as well as the antistrophe. The strophe and antistrophe have only an orchestric (not a musical) signification; they form a symmetrical whole, not a responsive song. A chorikon consisting of various non-responsive parts occurs in the Agamemnon (475). Another example of defective responsion is Eumenides, 244-275. There must have been only twelve in the chorus.¹

13. In Euripides we know of twelve male, and twenty-six female choruses. The Oresteia has old men, maidens, Erinyes, the Lykourgeia Edoni, young men, Bacchantes. Three Aeschylean dramas have the anapaestic parados: Supplices, Agamemnon, Eumenides. There are no frigid Euripidean prologues, no Shaksperian introduction by a conversation of superfluous characters. We feel, at the very opening of the play, that something great or terrible is about to take place; we do not see that something in clear outline ; nevertheless, the obscurity gradually disappears, and the general conception stands out in bolder relief as the play progresses. The decisive act is never committed to pure narration, though a large proportion of the drama is narrative. The chorus is an integral part of the play ; but in the body of the drama are many scenes which critics have regarded as irrelevant and unnecessary. Richter¹ thinks that the Darius scene in the Persae might be excised. But we may be sure that the poet and practical playwright knew what he was doing when he represented the wise king, who had been successful in all his undertakings, as rising from the tomb. He idealizes the grand figure of Darius at the expense of historical fact, without making any alteration in the essential truths.² Differently from Darius and Io, Cassandra was bequeathed to Aeschylus by his predecessors. Yet even her rôle is accounted episodic. Like Shakspeare, Aeschylus knew how to excite anticipation ; he was a master of stage effect. Cassandra enters at the culminating point ; she goes to meet a death foreseen ; we shudder at her fate. Moreover, the scene forms a connecting link between the first and the last plays of the trilogy ; it bodes the inevitable vengeance, more horrible than the crime, reveals the presence of the real actors of the tragedy — the Erinyes.

a little unbaked poetry,
Such as the dabblers of our time contrive,
That has no weight nor wheel to move the mind,

it is well to refresh ourselves with Aeschylus, who dared to be himself, was untainted with ostentation and hypocrisy, and possessed a style weighty in matter and original in expression. Nothing that he writes is prompted by a desire for idle show or rhetorical display. Aeschylus hated "Drei Uebel . . . Tyrannei, Sophismen, Heuchelei." He has not the flashing wit, the preciseness, and ingenuity of Euripides, the smart passage at arms, the clever thrust and parry, nor the grace and mildness, the poise of art and symmetry of form of Sophocles,¹ but he had a self-willed audacity and a broad simplicity that was foreign to both his successors. Indeed, his works bear an impress of grandeur and simplicity that no other work of tragic art possesses. Just as Tennyson's sturdy aristocrat was "like an Aylmer in his Aylmerism," so was Aeschylus like his Prometheus in his authadism (Prom. 964). "Il y a du Prométhée dans tous ses héros" (EGGER). The reason is apparent. Aeschylus is αὐθάδης not only φρενῶν, but also λόγων.² Like Pindar he sails his own course of poetry.³ In the celebrated description of the up-leaping of beacon after beacon from Troy to Argos (Ag. 281-311) and in the Salaminian speeches (Pers. 284 ff.) energy and intensity (which the Greeks were wont to curb) are wonderfully combined with lucidity, elevation, and rapidity. His style is like a river sweeping in its might,⁴ his vocabulary bold⁵ and full of hard words, his epithets and compounds strange and sonorous.¹ His figures are superb ; but in their Dionysiac elevation they approach the lyric flight of the Oriental. Hence many see in him an Isaiah or a Job.² In both the Greek and the Hebrew poet a noble universality reigns supreme.

Resemblance

They discuss the same problem : the destiny of man. Carlyle's words on Job, with a few modifications, might be applied to Aeschylus : " such free flowing outlines ; grand in its sincerity, in its simplicity ; in its epic melody. . . . Such living likenesses were never since drawn." . . .

His lines like his invention are born free,
And both live blameless to eternity.

Even the diction of Aeschylus bears a striking resemblance to that of Job : τὸν φρονεῖν βροτοὺς ὀδώσαντα, τὸν πάθει μάθος | θέντα κυρίως ἔχειν. | στάζει δ' ἔν θ' ὕπνῳ πρὸ καρδίας | μνησιπήμων πόνος (Ag. 177), Zeus who guideth mortals to wisdom, who hath set up a law that instruction must come of suffering. Even in sleep the memory of chastening woe reopeneth the trickling wound. " In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed ; then he openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction " (Job 33. 15). In power of imagination no poets of modern times can be compared to Aeschylus except Shakspeare, Marlowe, and Milton. In the splendor of his images and powerful metaphors we recognize a truly poetic spirit, his "visions vast as those of Ezekiel, yet conveyed withal in rich and radiant Greek." Longinus praises him for the boldness of his imagination and the heroic grandeur of his conceptions. Quintilian describes his style as sublime and grandiloquent (often) to a fault. But the former adds that his works were frequently unpolished, unrefined, ill-digested, and rough; and the latter states that they were rude and wanting in order (10. 1. 66).¹ The mighty line of Aeschylus gave unrivaled dignity to his narrative. The phrases invented in the Ranae (κομποφακελορρήμονα, ἱππολόφων τε λόγων κορυθαίολα νείκη) very cleverly parody the effect of the more inflated passages.² Resonance of grandiloquent phrases is a marked characteristic of the poet's style; but the sentence is not always tumid. As Lessing says in his Laokoön, it is the privilege of the ancients never in anything to do too much or too little; and Aeschylus does not simply preach μηδὲν ἄγαν (Prom. 327); he practices it as well. In many passages the high utterance grazes the heights of Shakspeare's King John (where the passion equals the phrase and makes it seem appropriate), but in others the lines have the neatness and reserve of Chaucer's clerk.

Not a word spake he more than was nede,
And that was said in form and reverence,
And shorte and quicke and ful of high sentence.

This is notably true of the Prometheus. In general, however, he employs the wealth of his stylistic resources for a splendor of color which heightens the feeling and elevates the dignity of the thought. He is the most plastic of all the tragic poets. His sentence-structure is simple; short paratactic clauses are frequent; asyndeta are not rare (only occasional in Sophocles and Euripides), and give the sentence an archaic stamp. The masonry is Cyclopean. Longer and more carefully constructed sentences are found in the melic parts, and even in the dialogue oftener than we should expect, but they lack lightness and a clear outline. Anacolutha (not so graceful as those of Herodotus) are frequent. The obscurity and difficulty of the sentence are often increased by new and strange words, some of which he is supposed to have picked up in Sicily.¹ These glosses, however, in which Aeschylus is rich, we cannot identify as Sicilian. He does not believe, with Julius Caesar, that a writer should avoid an inauditum atque insolens verbum tamquam scopulum. Such unusual words affect an air of independence and proud reserve. They are like the poet himself; they will not conform to ordinary usage and fashion, but contemptuously affect singularity.²

2. Like Thucydides, Aeschylus has his amplitudes as well as his brevities. When profuse, he is exceedingly difficult. His obscurity is due chiefly to luxuriant metaphors, to a plethora of ideas, and to a pleonasm of imagery. Sometimes the poetic figures fairly swarm. Another frequent impediment to clearness of vision is the rapidity of transition from one thought to another. The Prometheus is simple and comparatively easy, whereas the Oresteia is full of difficulties. One must wrestle with Aeschylus; one is obliged to read long passages through, and return to the beginning to re-read them.¹ They are to be understood, not logically, but psychologically, by the αἰσθησις ἄλογος, the immediate impression for which one gives himself no account. An acute and painstaking mind is not the ne plus ultra for extorting the sense.

3. At the head of every department of Greek literature stands a representative of the class which the rhetoricians designated as the σεμνὸν γένος. This quality of σεμνότης (gravity and elevation) in the practical orator was modified by the circumstances. Antiphon was not so perfect a model of the lofty style as Pericles or Thucydides. But σεμνολογία (loftiness) is not the same as μεγαλοπρέπεια (magnificence), which is found even in Herodotus. Aeschylus' style was called πομπικὴ (stately), ἀξιοματικὴ (dignified), γλωττηματικὴ (full of unusual words), ἀπηρχαιωμένη (antiquated), and ἐξηλλαγμένη (out of the ordinary run, i.e. elevated). The rhetoricians say that the abstract noun (as against the verb) gives a certain dignity to the style. Cp. Prom. 9, where ἀμαρτίας is equivalent to the oratorical τῶν ἡμαρτημένων, 12 ἐντολή (= τὰ προστεταγμένα) and 129 (ἀμίλλαις). Another name given to σεμνότης was τὸ ἀρχαῖον, the old-fashioned style of speech and inflections — an important element. The writer who belongs to

How much Aeschylus reckoned on the ability of his audience to analyze what seem to us most difficult combinations may be gathered from such passages as διχόφρονοι πότμω (Sept. 899) πρωτοκτόνοισι προστροπαῖς Ἰξίονος (Eum. 718), ἐπασσυτεροτριβῆ τὰ χερδὸς ὀρέγματα (Cho. 426). He coined many striking compounds: δεμνιοτήρης, γυιοβαρής, λαγοδαίτης, κεναγγής, παλιπυχής, δομοσφαλής, αἰνολαμπής, νυκτηρεφής, φρενομηνής, δημορριφής.

this class can take certain liberties in the formation of new words.¹ The language was not yet such a perfect instrument as that which, under Euripides' manipulation, worked with almost perfect accuracy. Aeschylus had to improve the rhythmical composition; like Dante, he had to crystallize the language. In Sophocles it is easy to mistake the meaning; but reflection solves the problem. When the three poets fall into the vein of sententiousness, it is difficult to tell them apart. Aeschylus is often as simple as Euripides, the latter as "craggy" as Aeschylus.² Euripides did not always "substitute crutches for stilts, bad sermons for good odes." And when Aeschylus is simple, he combines majesty and power with beauty in a style that surpasses the polished perfection of Sophocles and the brisk and elegant dialogue and facile narrative of Euripides ("past dispute the verse slips oily-bathed in unctuous music"). Epic simplicity inheres in the roughhewn verses, a quality not to be found in Sophocles, despite the Homeric tone.³ In his Titanic sentence-structure he seizes a huge boulder and throws it at the head regardless of case. There is no Tacitean artifi- Compounds ciality. He employs the greatest freedom in forming compounds, which sometimes exceed the Greek limit of proportion — proicit ampullas et sesquipedalia uerba (Hor. Ars Poet. 97). Such verses as "empire-crowned seven-mountain-seated Rome" (Nero 2. 2) are a rarity in English, but not in Aeschylus. Little wonder that Ben Jonson exclaimed

Cp. also Cho. 747 ff. (ναίveté) with Ag. 184 ff., 437 ff., 686 ff. (colossal periods). No author uses the λέξις ειρομένη (nor λέξις κατεστραμμένη) exclusively.

The thunder-phrase of the Athenian, grown Up out of memories of Marathon.¹

There is a sonorousness about the verses of the first tragedian that reminds us of Latin, but it is rich and radiant Greek withal; there is no harshness. The Greeks attached great importance to the artistic side of phonetics; they treated this subject with an exactness and minuteness unknown to English. The sensuous effect of the sequence of sound in any piece of artistically written prose or poetry is of prime importance. In Greek the artistic arrangement of words with reference to sound and with reference to sense, σύνθεσις and σύνταξις, run side by side. There is not only a weight of meaning and energy in the lines οὐ καραμιστήρες μεγαλοφωνία ὀφθαλμοῦχοι, Eum. 186, φαιοχίτωνες καὶ πεπλεκτα- and νημέλαι πυκνοῖς δράκονσιν, Cho. 1049, but of sound and μεγαλοψυχία words as well.² This is literally μεγαλοφωνία, but there is also μεγαλοψυχία, the high utterance as well as the loud utterance. Coleridge grants elevation, but denies sublimity to the Greeks. Sublimity is absolute, elevation relative. The Greek could use ὑψος of a paltry object without being ludicrous. Patin

In Aeschylus the proportion of omegas to omicrons is 1 : 2 (with astonishing regularity in some plays, e.g. the Septem), whereas in Sophocles the proportion is about 3 : 5. Passages like Prometheus 901-904, where there are 21 omicrons in four verses, are as characteristic of this master of versification as the heavy, solemn lines preceding (889-893), where 41 long syllables are found in five verses (11 omegas). Cp. 88-92. For good examples of the Athenian's "thunder-phrase" see 351-372, 853-868, 992-996, 1014-1025, 1043-1053, 1080-1093. In most of these passages the consonants φ, θ, χ, ψ abound. Cp. particularly 362 and 1044-1053. The proportion in this play is φ 5 : χ 6 : θ 11.

4. Dionysius of Halicarnassus (Demosthenes 39) names, among other characteristics of the elevated style, τὸ μήτε συνδέσμοις χρῆσθαι πολλοῖς (sparseness of conjunctions) μήτ' ἄρθροις συνεχέσιν (articles not used freely);² ἀλλ' ἔστιν ὅτε καὶ τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἐλάττωσι . . . ἢ τ' Αἰσχύλου λέξεις ὀλίγου δεῖν πᾶσα . . . κὰν τοῦτοις εὐγένεια καὶ σεμνότης ἁρμονίας τὸν ἀρχαῖον φυλάττουσα πίνον (style). Aeschylus was an exemplar of the αὐστηρὰ ἁρμονία, and Dionysius ^{Opinions of} classes him with Pindar, Thucydides, Antiphon. ^{ancient critics} Dio Chrysostomus gives an admirable summary of the chief elements of Aeschylean style (52. 267): ἢ τε τοῦ Αἰσχύλου μεγαλοφροσύνη καὶ τὸ ἀρχαῖον, ἔτι δὲ τὸ αὐθαδὲς τῆς διανοίας καὶ φράσεως (high-toned spirit, archaic coloring, boldness of thought and expression) πρέποντα τοῖς παλαιοῖς ἦθεσι τῶν ἡρώων, οὐδὲν ἐπιβεβουλευμένον, οὐδὲν στωμύλον οὐδὲ ταπεινόν (reproduces perfectly the manners and customs of the old heroes,—no base cunning, no garrulity, no littleness). Longinus, however, found fault with the "fustian" of the meta-

phorical language of Aeschylus. Just as the people of one country do not understand those of another (the Englishman misunderstands the Frenchman, the Northerner misjudges the Southerner), so the people of one period are not understood by those who come after them. What constitutes σεμνότης in one age might appear to be bombast in another. Aeschylus did not suit the tastes of the Athenian ochlocracy. Euripides lived in an age when men of the world were bred, and to these Aeschylus seemed bombastic. They looked upon candor and grand sentiments as affectation, as something out of date. The culture of the "advanced age" had no sympathy with the grandiloquence of the Titanic period, with "the antique pure simplicity" and "the ingenuous golden past." To a member of the best society of Athens the choral songs of Niobe (Ran. 925) appeared to be too stiff, too magniloquent. But the old-fashioned Strepesades says: ἐγὼ γὰρ Αἰσχύλον νομίζω πρῶτον ἐν ποιηταῖς, and adds with ill-concealed contempt and indignation: σὺ δ' ἀλλὰ τούτων | λέξον τῶν νεωτέρων, ἅττ' ἐστὶ τὰ σοφὰ ταῦτα.

5. There are about twice as many examples of figures of thought (σχήματα διανοίας) in Aeschylus as figures of diction (σχήματα λέξεως), whereas the latter predominates in Sophocles in the proportion of three to two. And of the σχήματα διανοίας the metaphor is far in the lead in number. Its range, like that of the simile in Homer, is as wide as life: from war, from the chase, from the sea, the farm, the winds, torrents, flowers, and the beasts of the field. In the number of metaphors from the human body and the acts and conditions of body and mind the Prometheus exceeds all the other plays. The liberal arts are represented with nine from the Agamemnon, six from the Prometheus, and three from the Choephoroi. The useful arts contribute ten times as many, most of which are from husbandry and seafaring. The diversions of man furnish over one hundred examples. Few metaphors (about two dozen), strangely enough, are taken from war. Nature affords nearly three hundred, one third of which come from the animal world. The

and simile

bird, the dog, and the horse, respectively, furnish the greatest number of examples. Half the metaphors from the vegetable world are from seed, flower, and fruit. The Agamemnon contains the greatest number of metaphors from the elements.¹ There is a large number of figures from the art of fishing. Sometimes the metaphors are startling, e.g. Iphigenia's face is called a fair prow (Ag. 236).² Though redundant at times, Aeschylus surpassed all Greek poets, even Sophocles, in a certain Shaksperian concentration of phrase. Energetic imagery unparalleled in Greek literature is seen in the invectives and broken exclamations of Cassandra, and in the ode which describes the capture of Thebes. But most vehement of all is the denunciation of the Erinyes by Apollo in the Delphic temple (Eum. 178 ff.). The later tragedians are rich in metaphor, particularly Euripides, who never tires of remodeling old motives. But even Euripides cannot vie with Aeschylus by reason of the restraint which his style imposes. Aeschylus calls the ocean a forest. Vultures are ὀξύστομοι Ζηνὸς ἀκραγεῖς κύνες. The eagle in Prometheus 1022 is "the ravening wingèd hound of Zeus." Clytemnestra's Erinyes are μητρὸς ἔγκοτοι κύνες. The Argives from the wooden horse the poet designates as the Ἄργεῖον δάκος, ἵππου νεοσσός. The flame of the thunderbolt he names πυρὸς ἀμφήκης βόστρυχος (two-edged tress of fire), the beacon-flame on Aegiplanctus φλογὸς μέγαν πώγωνα. Mixed metaphors, owing to the rapidity of movement, are frequent in poetry, whereas they occur but rarely in prose, which is too leisurely for the sudden shift of vision. Aeschylus often employs a simile instead of the real expression; the imagination of the hearer is expected to establish the correct relation. The simile-mark is often omitted (λείπει τὸ ὡς, as the schol. remarks), e.g. Prom. 857. Sometimes the poet combines the simile with the actual expression (the latter making the former more definite) ; sometimes he brings the metaphorical expression into the domain of reality and, by a sort of irony, breaks the illusion.

6. The influence of Gorgias was world-wide ; but the Gorgianic figures were employed by the poets that preceded the great Sicilian sophist. Indeed, nearly all the figures to which Gorgias has attached his name can be found in Aeschylus. In Sophocles they are not mere ornaments : they form an integral part of his style. Another marked feature of the grand style is the coupling of similar words, the combination of synonyms (common in English law and a cause of its cumbrousness). These doublets occur in all languages ; but they were dropped by the Greeks just as soon as the language got away from the legal basis.¹ Aeschylus is our first orator (even the scholiast recognizes the oratorical excellences in the speeches of Prometheus and Oceanus), and in him such doublets are not rare : σκοποῦς καὶ κατοπτῆρας (Sept. 36), ἔνερθε καὶ κάτω χθονός (Eum. 1023). But Aristophanes and Euripides (Hipp. 380) can say ἔπος διπλοῖζω (cp. Ran. 1165) as well as Aeschylus (Eum. 1014).

7. The tendency to balance, to symmetry, in Greek is very strong ; at the end of the trimeter, as well as of choral verses (Prom. 891 ff.), Aeschylus admitted homophony of significant words. The Greeks were far more liberal in their interpretation of παρονομασία than we. Their language was not so far advanced in phonetic decay, and so did not lend itself to plays on words so readily. Not only is the same idea with a different word, and the same sound in a different sense, repeated, but to the naïveté of the archaic style belongs the repetition of the same word. The modern poet repeats consciously to produce a desired effect.

And up into the sounding hall I past ;
But nothing in the sounding hall I saw.

¹ They came back, however, the first being found in Lysias ; Demosthenes employs them three times as often as the other orators.

Another important element of style, closely connected with assonance, is alliteration, which is as old as Homer (Δ 526 χάμαι χύντο χολάδες). It was ridiculed (though used) by Shakspeare, and, while not entirely banished from the literature, is now employed with much greater care. The figure is not rare in Aeschylus. It is (together with repetition, assonance, rhyme) a form of expression which primitive people are prone to employ. Hence we need not be surprised to find examples in one who, like Aeschylus, stands so near to nature, and reflects the spontaneous voice of the people.¹

Aeschylus does not disdain apt alliteration's artful aid ; but he confines it practically to the two most effective letters : π and κ . Cp. Sept. 661 φλύοντα σὺν φοίτῳ φρενῶν, Prom. 748 ff., 894 ff., Ag. 820 προπέμπει πίονας πλούτου πνοάς, 1167 πόνοι πόνοι πόλεως ὀλομένας τὸ πᾶν, 1430 τύμμα τύμματι τεῖσαι, Suppl. 1006 πάθωμεν ὦν πολὺς πόνος | πολὺς δὲ πόντος, Cho. 89 πότερα . . . παρὰ φίλης φίλῳ φέρειν, Ag. 1553 κάππεσε, κάτθανε, καὶ καταθάψομεν.

8. The figura etymologica is an element of style, which is national in Greek, exceedingly common in Italian, but foreign to both German and English.² Aeschylus does not avoid the use of the figure.

σχῆμα ἐτυμολογικόν

9. Crasis and synizesis between words were common in the speech of daily life, and, consequently, foreign to the elevated style of the lyric chorus in the drama, where ¹ Middle English is full of it, while Old English poetry is constructed with great care on the principle of alliteration.

In sowre swettenesse my syth I sende,
With sevene synnys sadde be-set. — Castell of Perseverance 247 f.
A place full of plenty to my plesing at ply. — Fall of Lucifer 1.
Howndes and hogges, in hegges and helles. — Salutation, 1191.

The use in Aeschylus is more like that of Chaucer, where it is not overdone. In the Old English plays almost every letter of the alphabet is employed.

² Blass says that Isocrates does not employ the figure; but he is in error: the stately orator simply uses it less than his contemporaries.

Not so Euripides, for at each attempt to move our hearts,

He uses the mere phrase of daily life.

Aeschylus has only five examples. In one the tone is really narrative (Ag. 255), in the others the text is corrupt. There are two examples of aphaeresis with ἐπί (Sept. 698, Cho. 161). More frequent is crasis with καί, and with the article in anapaests.¹

10. The great number of reminiscences from Homer and the plasticity of his picturesque descriptions show how much Aeschylus was influenced by the epic style.² He believed that a religious frame of mind was more easily induced by antique earnestness. The scraps from Homer's banquet, as Aeschylus characterized his tragedies (τεμάχη τῶν Ὀμήρου μεγάλων δειπνῶν), included form as well as substance.³ The Trojan cycle was nearest the hearts of the Greeks, and stood out as none other in the whole range of mythical story. Nine of the themes in the extant plays of Euripides and two of Sophocles are selected from the Trojan legends. Only one of the subjects of the extant Aeschylean dramas is Homeric. All the tragic poets are steeped in Homer, but Aeschylus bears the Homeric impress most distinctly. There are many close parallels between the Aeschylean and the Homeric story of the house of Agamemnon. Aeschylus follows epic tradition (as Sophocles does not) in his account of the burial of Oedipus. Among the many Homeric forms in Aeschylus are: ἔταρος, ἀεικής, αἰετός, πολιήτης, ροῦσος, οὐλόμενος, πτόλις, Ἄιδος, ἄμμι, ἔμμε, ἔθεν, σφίν, ἀμός, τεός, κείνος, θήν, ῥά, τώς, τίπτε, μάσσων, διδοῖ, βάσκε, ἠδέ, ὑπαί. Contraction follows the Attic laws, except εἰσοιχεῦσιν, πωλεύμεναι (Prom. 122, 645). The article is frequently used for the demonstrative and for the relative. There are two examples of epic forms of πολυς. Epic words and forms Iterative forms occur but rarely.¹ The Ionic ending -ατο occurs only in the optative. Many forms are found that are un-Attic, or unusual: ἔδόκησα, ἔνισπε, ἔκερσα, ὄρτο, σύμεναι, συθείς, πιθήσας. An epic touch is given to the messenger's narrative in the Persae by the omission of the augment. As a rule the Attic writers do not omit the augment in dialogue; it occurs only where there is an epic flavor, in longer passages, in narrative which permits the epic freedom. The augment may have been omitted here purposely, to help out the suggestion of Ionia. Many of the Ionic words and forms in the Persae are not found elsewhere. We of modern times are apt to overlook this shifting play of language. In the portrayal of the character of his messengers Aeschylus seems to have followed an older tradition. The epic prefixes ἀρι- and ἔρι- (never in Sophocles and Euripides) are employed once each (Pers. 948, Ag. 1461). Apocope and syncope occur as in Homer. Long (epic) vowels are retained, and metrical lengthenings corresponding to the Homeric model are introduced (ἀπαράμυθος, ἀθάνατος, ἰσόνειρος). These epic forms are not due (exclusively) to the demands of metrical composition. They belonged, for the most part, to the thesaurus of the lyric, are survivals from the elegiac, iambic, and melic poets. Epic-Ionic forms occur in the trimeter (μουνῶπα, αἰίδω, ἰθύνω, δήριος), but Ionisms are found more frequently in melic passages. Some epic forms, used by Sophocles and Euripides, do not appear in the extant works of their predecessor (ἦμος, πολλός). The Homeric forms ἐνί, εἰν, and εἰνί do not occur, whereas they appear in Euripides. A few Doric verbal forms are found (Suppl. 39 σφετεριξάμενοι).

² Croiset puts it too strongly when he says: "Le style épique était trop égal pour lui, et son ampleur . . . ne pouvait convenir au drame."

II. The Greek rhetorician laid great stress on the choice of words as an element of style. Each word has its own tint of association. With all his borrowings Aeschylus is, as Pater says every great writer must be, "faithful to the coloring of his own spirit, and in the

Poetic

of the Greeks

strictest sense original." With the possible exception of English, Greek is the only classic literature that really possesses a poetic language as distinguished from a prose language; and it is only true of English with certain reservations. Latin had but a very small poetic vocabulary. French is equally poor. No other language has the wealth of poetic form possessed by the Greek. The diction of Lucretius is poetic, but only in the figures of speech and in the unusual arrangement of words. Vergil's language is poetic, because he occasionally uses archaic words, and puts his variety in the regimen, effects his divergencies from the prose idiom by using a peculiarly subtle and delicate case register, by making the nonconformity of the syntax to the prose norm compensate for the dearth of poetic words. Even Tacitus gets away from the ordinary humdrum Roman mode of expression by using a syntax which is purely arbitrary. Dryden's poetry is prosaic. Wordsworth rebelled against the use of poetic words, which were not, after all, highly poetic. English prose style is different from English verse style; but the vocabulary is common to both to an extent inadmissible to a Greek before the time of Euripides. Naturally the greatest number of epic words occurs in the Supplices, since a large proportion of the play is melic; but they are by no means confined to the earlier tragedies. The Prometheus is highly colored with Homeric diction. In syntax, too, Aeschylus betrays the influence of Homer. He uses the so-called terminal accusative. He retains the Homeric $\epsilon\acute{\iota}$ with the subjunctive as the original norm (a survival, not a reminiscence), has the largest percentage of $\epsilon\acute{\iota}$'s with the fut. indicative. $\omega\varsigma$ in the sense of $\omega\sigma\tau\epsilon$ is found in Aeschylus and Sophocles, but only once in Euripides. In the final sentence a new period opens with Aeschylus. The optative without $\alpha\acute{\nu}$ occurs occasionally (Prom. 292). The articular infinitive is used very freely. Often the nominative, or the accusative, is employed where the verb requires another case, e.g. Eum. 100. The construction ad synesin is not rare (Prom. 808). Aeschylus differs from Sophocles most in the longer periods, where he desires to avoid ambiguity or constructional difficulty, or where the current is checked by emotion, by breaking off abruptly and beginning a new period. Anaphora is frequent, particularly in the Prometheus. Cases of words placed between the preposition and substantive (generally particles) are rarer in Aeschylus than in Sophocles and Euripides. Prepositions are never at a distance from the substantives they govern; in later tragedy the preposition is frequently remote from its noun. Aeschylus, unlike Sophocles, never permits the article to come at the end of the verse. Dependent conjunctions are rarely placed at the end, except in the Prometheus. In this play there is no exception to the rule that the anastrophe preposition is put at the end of the verse. Attributive adjectives are less frequently placed in an abnormal position in Aeschylus than in his successors. The nominative of the participle is often put at the head of the sentence and then apparently forgotten — some thought of great weight intrudes and leaves it without regimen. The precative infinitive (a survival) is frequent. The locative is not rare. The dative with ἐν occurs frequently, where εἰς with the accusative would be the normal construction. The poetic dative appears twice (Cho. 365, Pers. 613). The epic ἐπί with the dative occurs five times. Cumulation of appositions is common. In general, the syntax of Aeschylus is simple and usually true to the recognized norm, but sometimes anomalous, deviating from ordinary usage, when the feeling requires greater freedom.

“Le style est l’homme même” (stylus virum arguit) can be applied to Aeschylus with as much literal truth as to any other literary artist. He was as Aristophanes said a poet should be: χρὴ γὰρ ποιητὴν ἄνδρα πρὸς τὰ δράματα, | ἃ δεῖ ποιεῖν, πρὸς ταῦτα τοὺς τρόπους ἔχειν (Thesm. 149).

7. RHYTHMS AND METERS

1. While metricians are not agreed as to the significance of certain meters, they are united in declaring that the rhythms of Aeschylus are finished and full of power and expression. Majesty and energy preponderate over grace and charm. In the dialogue the simplest laws of versification are observed. The trimeter is adapted to an elevated delivery, the cumulation of long syllables heightening the solemn tone. The clearness of symmetry is remarkable. The burdens of the choruses, the repetition of key-words, are observed at once by the reader. The strophe is an artistic structure, built like the Parthenon with a view to architectural effects, not simply that the single verse may be beautiful, but that it may bear a distinct and proper relation to the totality of the rhythmical composition and contribute to the beauty of the whole. Aeschylus is the great master of verse-building. The measure keeps pace with the action, rising to a frantic height at the crisis, where the movement continues wild until that is past, when it sinks again to the calm level of the beginning. The change of rhythm corresponds to the change of tone as it can only in the hands of a master.

2. The great dialogue measure of tragedy and comedy is the iambic trimeter. There is no meter equal to the iambic for such resonant elastic periods as we find in certain parts of the Agamemnon and Persae. Aeschylus wrote many trimeters without a caesura. In these the movement is sinuous, the verse tied tight; there is no danger of a break. The Roman trimeter is entirely different in character. In some of his verse-structures Euripides is much harder to sympathize with than Aeschylus; but in his trimeters he completes the task to which Aeschylus had addressed himself; he keeps each verse separate and distinct so far as possible. Sophocles, on the other hand, pursues another course: he effaces the dividing line between the individual verses so completely that the two are made one even by the process of welding by elision.

3. Brooding trochees were often used by Aeschylus for grave thought, a measure suited to the use of a poet who was constantly meditating on God's being and moral law. The trochaic tetrameter, the oldest dialogue form, finds its maximum in Aeschylus and its minimum in Sophocles, being revived again by Euripides.¹ It was found to be too vehement for the ordinary dialogue, and was reserved for special crises. It is a passionate rhythm, and survives only in rapid passages. It was originally a lively dance measure. Hence, as Aristotle testifies, its large use in the oldest tragedy. There is one trochaic scene in the Persae. But the calmer dialogue crowded the more rapid measure out. Sophocles employs it only at the end of Oedipus Tyrannus, Aeschylus himself in the later period only at the conclusion of the Agamemnon. So the κατὰ δάκτυλον εἶδος, common in Aeschylus, appears only sporadically in later tragedy.

4. One of the most important Aeschylean meters is the anapaestic dimeter. The dialect is Attic, whereas in the choral ode there is an assimilation — a Doric chord runs through the lyric strain. Aeschylus handles this measure in a marvelous manner. The opening of the Persae and the first chorus of the Agamemnon are wonderful anapaestic structures. The chief function of the anapaest is transitional — it lets us down from the heights without permitting us to alight on the ground, or serves as an intermediator between the trimeter and the melic, leading up to the songs and forming a bridge between the stasimon and the dialogue, even when it marks the entrance of a new character.

5. Trochees, iambi, and logaoedics appear among melic anapaests.² Tripodies, dipodies, and catalectic monometers are found, and the paroemiatic occurs at the beginning of a system. Abnormal caesuras, freedom of hiatus and syllaba anceps, succession of many dactyls, and verses in which the contractions indicate sorrow, mark the presence of melic anapaests.

There are very few traces of responsion in post-choral and episodal anapaests. The melic anapaest expresses instability, grief, excitement, and even melancholy. The march anapaests (Dorian mode) were not sung outright; the anapaests sung to recurring melodies are in the Lydian and Ionian modes: they form the prelude to the catastrophe and are employed for the resolution into a final calm, for the purpose of lulling to rest after the storm, whereas a preponderance of the musical element would not bring the relief that should succeed the storm of grief. Aeschylus never uses the anapaest for ordinary dialogue. Doricisms are chiefly proper names and unusual words. A change from the trimeter to the anapaest heralds the approach of an important action; but melic anapaests are never used to introduce a new character. No tragic poet except Aeschylus employs anapaests as preludes to stasima. Closing anapaests have greater prominence in him than in Sophocles and Euripides. The Prometheus (128 ff.) presents an innovation on the old form of the parodos, in which the anapaest is directly associated with melic measures. Henceforward it becomes something more than a mere distinguishing mark between two divisions of tragedy. The tone is not so grave as in the parodos. The strophic songs are excited (128-135, 144-151, 159-166, 178-185); the interjected systems are calm. In commatic passages the anapaest is used by the more self-contained character, by

The Titan, the defiant.

The self-centered, self-reliant, by the cold-blooded Clytemnestra, by the judicial Athene. With the possible exception of Prometheus 167-178 and 186-192 the anapaestic antepirrhema corresponds to the epirrhema. There is only one pure "dactylic" line in the severe anapaests of Aeschylus (Ag. 1553).

6. Lengthening of a vowel before $\tau\rho$ was studiously avoided by Aeschylus; but in the Persae there are two notable exceptions (217, 763). The greater or less frequency of resolved syllables in different poets determines nothing as to chronology, but it is interesting to note that Aeschylus has 2003 resolutions (4000 verses), Sophocles 446 (7500 verses), Euripides 729 (17,825 verses).

8. WORKS

1. Of the seventy tragedies attributed to Aeschylus by his biographer (ninety according to Suidas) only seven have come down to us.¹ The dates of some are doubtful. The Supplikes (very corrupt) is unquestionably the earliest.² This is proved by the language, structure, and versification. The poet's last work was the Oresteia (458 B.C.), consisting of the Dates of extant works Agamemnon, Choephoroi, Eumenides. The Persae (mainly a description of the great Salaminian sea-fight), was brought out seven years after the battle (472 B.C.), the Septem, one of the most successful plays, in 468 B.C. The date of the Prometheus is not known; it belongs to the same group as the Supplikes and Persae, but is later than both.

2. Why so few of the works of the ancients, and why these instead of others have come down to us, are questions difficult to answer. Occasionally the survival is due to the fact that only the first part of the manuscript has survived, Reasons for the loss of the literary productions of antiquity but this is conspicuously not true of Pindar. Sometimes it is the best of the author that escapes the ravages of time. Again, that which cannot be reproduced seems to live. The preserved speeches of Isaeus are κληρικοί. His excellence in that field contributed to the loss of others. Antiphon excels in the φονικοί λόγοι; Isocrates in epideictic oratory. As

Voltaire says, one does not take much baggage with one to posterity. This process of elimination which began two thousand years ago is still going on. Too many books mean a great burden. The Alexandrian library contained 700,000 volumes. Petrarch felt that the library to which the younger Gordianus fell heir was sufficient for many wits, but capable of smothering one. But we could well afford to exchange some of our printed paper for lost tragedies of Aeschylus.

3. It is a curious fact that Attic tragedy from the very first revolved about the legends of Thebes and Argos. The scene of the extant dramas the Supplices is in the agora of Argos, as that of the Septem is before Thebes. All the extant plays that deal with the Greek mythical period turn directly or indirectly on Argive legend.¹ The narrow interest of the myth, the excessive development of the lyric parts, the small space devoted to the dialogue, in the early tragedies, show how the discordant elements were still struggling for the mastery. In the later plays the lyric elements became more and more absorbed. The Supplices is a cantata rather than a tragedy. The lyric form was well adapted to the early "stage," which was little more than a circle and a dressing room. The same may be said of the Persae. It is the middle play of the trilogy, but the action is complete in itself. The play divides itself into three acts, each of which is a small drama. There is no preservation of unity. The scene is at the tomb of Darius, but there is an unobserved change, as often in comedy. The Persae is different from all extant plays both in form and in content. It bears the Oresteian impress, but the poet has not yet attained perfection in his art. Von Wilamowitz thinks that the drama was brought out by itself, and not at a Dionysiac festival (Hermes 33, 1897). The Septem, not only a martial, but also a military play, was very popular. One third of it is taken up with a description of the combatants. The structure is highly symmetrical. The Proteus (not extant) formed the afterpiece to the Oresteia. This trilogy is supposed to have on the face of it a political purpose. If this be the sole purpose, it is very cleverly concealed till the end of the play. The tendency now is rather away from this minute interpretation of tragic poetry as containing allusions to contemporary events. The Oresteia is a tableau in which different stages of the same great action pass before the eyes and in which the poet unfolds the long consequence of a sin, as Schiller does in Der Fluch der Bösen That. The Choephoroi is very corrupt. The Eumenides is in better condition and is more popular. The Agamemnon is, in many respects, the greatest tragedy in existence — “eines der schönsten Stücke, die je aus einem Dichterkopfe gegangen sind” (Schiller, Letter to Lotte, December 4, 1788). It contains one of the most famous passages in all Greek literature (280 ff.). The characters seem to be real personages; they haunt the memory; they are not mere puppets of the poet's brain.

II. — THE PROMETHEUS

I. SIGNIFICANCE

I. "Rien de plus extraordinaire que cette tragédie," says Weil. "Die andern Dichtungen sind einzelne Tragödien, diese die Tragödie selbst," declares Schlegel. "Das tiefstinnigste ^{Interpretation} Werk des Aeschylus und vielleicht der griechischen Poesie," is the verdict of Droysen. Few poets have been so much written about, and none so grossly misunderstood, as Aeschylus: and of all his works the Prometheus has been most read, least understood.¹ The simplest of the seven, the most unartificial, the easiest of comprehension, so far as the language is concerned, with choral odes of smaller compass and of greater transparency, it presents greater difficulties than any other play of Aeschylus. On almost every page of his introduction Schömann speaks of the Prometheus as being "verkannt," or "missverstanden."² If

² Long before Schömann, Blümner said (1814): "Wie sehr des Dichters Zweck bei dieser Tragödie verkannt worden, zeigen die Aeusserungen mehr als eines Kunstrichters. So sagt Brumoy: Je serai tenté de croire que le sujet qui nous paroît monstrueux . . . est une allégorie sur les rois, et peut-être sur Nerxes ou Darius." An old Hellenic tradition relates that Prometheus was a Scythian king. Theophrastus thought he was a wise man who first taught philosophy to men. An attempt has been made in modern times to identify the Titan with Noah's ark (Dublin Magazine, vol. lxxv). Sir Isaac Newton thought Prometheus may have been a nephew of Sesostris left on the Caucasus with an army to protect the newly acquired Scythian possessions (968 B.C.). Le Clerc was of the opinion that the Titan was identical with Magog. Bryant's theory was that Prometheus was Noah.

Aeschylus could have had foreknowledge of the editor of the last century, he might have exclaimed

I see well thou wott'st not what I mean,
And understandest amiss.

Down to the time of Welcker at least the poet's meaning was misapprehended.¹ The trouble arose from a failure to recognize the position which the play occupied in reference to the other plays which were brought out with it as companion pieces. The Prometheus cannot be understood unless it is seen in its proper relation to the larger whole, the complex trilogy, a subject that will be discussed later (p. 92).

2. But the relation of the Desmotēs to the other two dramas is not the only subject that has provoked discussion, — fault has been found with the play itself. Macaulay says that by the principles of dramatic writing we shall instantly condemn, but if we forget the characters and think only of the poetry, we shall admit that it has never been surpassed

¹ H. Düntzer, in N. Jahrb. f. Philol. for 1891, in support of Welcker's order of the plays, places the scene of the Purphoros in Lemnus, the Kάβειροι, servants of Hephaestus, forming the chorus. Some have considered Prometheus as the prototype of the Saviour of the Christians. See Lasaulx, Prometheus. Der Mythos und seine Bedeutung. Würzburg, 1843. Weil mentions a savant, "très savant, et qui est plus, des plus sensés," who compares Prometheus to the fallen archangel, while a Père de l'Église compares the rock of the fettered Titan to the Cross, and sees in the god who is suffering for humanity a figure of Christ. "On peut se demander, en effet," he continues, "si notre point de vue est le point de vue d'Eschyle, si l'impression que reçoivent la plupart des lecteurs modernes est conforme aux intentions du vieux poète." I think we may safely answer the French scholar's question in the negative. We are apt to lose sight of an important factor in considering the theology of a Greek poet-prophet: reverence for old traditions. Aeschylus did not hold himself responsible for the utterances of Prometheus. Schömann foists the Christian traditions upon the creator of the Prometheus and considers the Titan the prototype of the devil (p. 53): "just as the fallen archangel is called by the Christians Diabolus, because he alienated man from God, so darf auch Prometheus mit Recht als ein solcher Diabolus bezeichnet werden." So Töpelmann (1829), and Bellman, De Aesch. ternione (1839).

in energy and magnificence. The Prometheus is not only "a magnificent poem," as it is often styled, but (to quote Chapman's phrase on Fletcher's Pastoral) "a poem and a play too."¹

While the play has been universally admired in England, Germany, and Spain, it was long in making its way into the favor of the French.² The Prometheus was evidently not the kind of a drama to appeal to the Gallic nature. "Cela ne peut pas même s'appeler une tragédie," says La Harpe. But the chief reason for its failure in France was the influence of Voltaire. The works of the Greek dramatists were for him only "des pièces barbares." To understand Aeschylus one must "se faire l'esprit antique et très antique."³ The Voltaire school

Tregedie is to seyn a certeyn storie,
As olde bookes maken us memorie,
Of him that stood in greet prosperitee,
And is y-fallen out of heigh degree
Into miserie, and endith wretchedly;
And they ben versified comunly
Of six feet, which men clepe exametron.

² Goethe speaks of the Prometheus in Dichtung und Wahrheit (Book 15). In 1773 he attempted to dramatize the myth. In the following year he wrote the poem called Prometheus, and later a Hymn to Prometheus. "Die Fabel ward in mir lebendig," he says in his autobiography. . . . "Der Satan Miltons . . . bleibt immer in dem Nachtheil der Subalternität . . . Prometheus hingegen im Vortheil, der zum Trotz höherer Wesen, zu schaffen und zu bilden vermag." Goethe recognized in the character of Prometheus the very quality that Racine (first preface to Andromaque) says a hero should have: "une vertu capable de faiblesse, et qu'ils tombent dans le malheur par quelque faute qui les fasse plaindre sans les faire détester." This virtue Satan lacks. The myth has been universally recognized as one of the most profound that has come down to us from antiquity; it contains a wealth of meaning that no other legend possesses, and, consequently, lends itself readily to the various and continued treatment of poets in divers lands and divers ages. Both Calderon and Shelley (whose "intellect was ablaze with heavenly thoughts") were attracted by the mythological figure of Prometheus.

³ Schömann's laborious work is vitiated by his failure to do this.

imported into Aeschylus its own misconceptions, and then measured the poet by its own rules of art. Dacier called the Prometheus a "monstre dramatique." Marmontel says, "Je crois qu'Eschyle était une manière de fou." Even the Italian disciple of the French, Metastasio, considers the Prometheus the strangest piece of buffoonery imaginable. Yet the most artistic people in the world, whose culture exceeded ours (the ordinary Athenian could enjoy Aeschylus at the first hearing), gave the first prize to the play which contained "des choses qui n'étaient pas moins contre la nature que contre l'art," and Aristotle cited it as an example of the kind in which Aeschylus excelled. But the criticisms of the play as a "production bizarre, irrégulière, monstrueuse" were soon taken not so seriously by the French, and the poet began to be studied with that sympathy which is necessary for the understanding and appreciation of any great work of art. The Prometheus should not be classed with the Oedipus, the Hippolytus, et id genus omne; it must not be compared with modern dramas — it can be classed only by itself. Of later tragedy many examples have survived; but of the period of development the Prometheus is one of the very few specimens preserved. The word "drama" hardly seems applicable, as there is no action; the hero is fixed and the drama immobilized with him. It is a never-changing tableau; but gradation of portraiture takes the place of dramatic progression. Like a picture thrown on canvas, the figures, dim at first, become clearer and clearer as the play progresses, as the light is focused, until at last the whole group stands out in bold and clear outline. The other figures serve to bring out the chief character in stronger relief.

3. We must not look at the Prometheus from our modern viewpoint. We must imagine ourselves in the Greek theater, must visualize the scene, get into a Greek frame of mind, understand and feel as a Greek. The old Miracle The Greek attitude Plays (unlike the Greek though they be) will help us to an understanding of the Prometheus even better than a modern tragedy, since they contained (as was believed by the audience) a history of the human race. There was nothing in the world that had greater interest for the individual; for five hundred years they held sway over Christian Europe. The sacrifice of Isaac was just as real to the audience in York as the pinioning of Prometheus to the audience in Athens. One of the most important elements of a Greek tragedy of this period was the marvelous, since the drama had its origin in immemorial religious observances, was consecrated to the worship of the gods, and was never entirely divorced from religion. The myths of polytheism furnished the poet his material. He did not, like the modern play-writer, create his characters out of airy nothingness to fit certain actors. It was not caprice on his part that he dramatized the adventures of the legendary gods — he had no choice, for his religion gave them to him; he was not responsible for them; they were, like the theology of the Mystery Plays, part and parcel of the common creed. Prometheus came from a remote past. Aeschylus was the conscious artist that gave the figure final and immortal form, that set the character forever among the sublimities of art, by means of what Coleridge calls the “shaping spirit of imagination.”¹ There was no Voltaire to point out the absurdity or the improbability of the story. The poet’s object was to move an audience of artists and worshipers like himself. It is easy enough for us, imbued with modern ideas, to ridicule a play of this kind.² Indeed, the prince of satirists long ago made merry over the play; but he confined himself to the story, found fault with the legend merely as an article of belief. The poet escapes censure — Lucian was an artist himself.

4. The Prometheus is the most universally interesting of Aeschylus’ extant dramas. Though it was composed for Athens (as shown by the Purphoros), there is little in it exclusively Greek or

² The underlying idea which constitutes the essence and merit of the creative writers and teachers we often leave to chance, allow the student to come by it the best he can. The art with which Aeschylus treated his subject is vastly more important than the religious teaching we might get from the myth.

Athenian ; there are few allusions to historical events or national institutions. The text is sound, the language smooth, the plan simple — only one situation, but, in spite of the difficulties, under aspects ever new. The variety of detail serves only to mark more strongly the impress of unity. The Prometheus is a poem which for sublimity, dignity, and imposing regularity has never been surpassed. The imaginative power of Aeschylus had a range and vehemence almost foreign to Greek taste, yet he holds the mighty forces of earth and air in resolute control. He is thoroughly Greek, in spite of the Oriental wealth of imagery.¹ Every part of the play contributes to the beauty of the simple and regular order. There have been many historical and allegorical interpretations which are supposed to add interest to the tragedy ; the poet has drawn an admirable picture of despotism and of liberty ; the people may, as they sat gazing at the sublime spectacle, have even thought of the oppression of the Pisistratidae, which had not yet faded from their memory, and of the courage of the citizens who freed Athens from her yoke.² Prometheus may be, in a sense, an image of the human race (A. W. VON SCHLEGEL). But whatever the interpretation of the play, this remains indisputable : the Prometheus is the perfect type of the primitive tragedy, which Aristotle characterized as ἀπλῆ.

5. But this simple drama does not merely excite our pity and our admiration, does not simply impress us by the pomp of the scene which it unrolls before our eyes — it includes among its numerous noteworthy characteristics one that no other tragedy possesses: it transports us to the heart of a certain marvelous and fantastic sphere. There is something attractive in the very obscurity in which the subject is enveloped. It takes us back not merely to antiquity, nor yet to the heroic age, but far beyond to that primitive period in which the cosmogonies present a confused but attractive picture; the action is removed above and beyond the sphere of humanity, and the subject is the mystery of heaven's relation to man. The protecting god that seeks to elevate man, the god that gives the light of understanding, which makes civilization possible, as well as the fire he has filched for man's benefit — this is the deity that Aeschylus dares make the chief character of his drama. Divinities alone speak and act, but the human interest is there.¹ Our compassion is evoked by the spectacle of a god suffering for humanity. The dramatis personae are all of the same class; they act as deities; they live and move in visible presence; their communications are marvelous; the information which they impart to one another from the extremities of the universe is transmitted as swift as thought; soon after Prometheus has been fastened to the crag all nature is troubled. From the beginning to the end of the play the illusion is not broken. We are kept back by the poet's art in a region entirely fabulous, completely fantastic. The tragic poet presents visibly scenes with superhuman actors, such as Homer had offered to the imagination alone.

The atmosphere of the play

¹ As Emerson says, the Greek heroes are always in repose; the most difficult achievements are made with a serene composure of manner.

² How far the drama is a source of history is a question on which scholars differ. At the beginning of the last century there was a determined effort to read history out of the dramatic poets. This is largely reading history into them. There are, of course, some allusions which none can mistake. In Euripides there are many references to contemporary relations.

2. THE STORY

1. There is no formal introduction, but to an Athenian audience the first scene explained itself. They knew beforehand what we have to learn, that it was "Of fate . . . and the chained Titan's woeful doom," of Prometheus, who "The unforgiven fire . . . filched for us from heaven," dragged by Power and Force

¹ Macaulay thought Prometheus was hardly superhuman enough, whereas Satan in Milton is a creature from another sphere, requiring no support from anything external. Aeschylus did not err in making his hero of human texture. The criticism that Prometheus "hath too much of human passion in him" is beside the mark.

To the steep rock, whose rugged brows are bent Upon the swelling main, manacled to the mount by Hephaestus, and left to the solitude of his own thoughts. They learn, as the play proceeds, that he is visited by the sympathizing Oceanides, Oceanus, Io, and finally by Hermes (with a message from Zeus), and that he is throughout Sorely tried and sorely tempted,

From no agonies exempted,
In the penance of his trial,
And the discipline of pain.

The subject of the drama is the revolt of Prometheus, and the scenery is in perfect harmony —

The crags closed round with black and jagged arms,
The shattered mountain overhung the sea.

2. According to Hesiod, Prometheus was the son of the Titan Iapetos by Asia. Aeschylus represents him as the son of the goddess Themis, whom he identifies with Gê. The Attic poet handled the myth freely, selecting for artistic purposes only such features as suited his drama. Epimetheus is not mentioned. In the war between Zeus and the Titans, Prometheus had at first sided with his own folk, but learning from his mother that the victor would win by craft and not by brute force (213), he espoused the cause of Zeus. Reënforced by his artful ally, the king of heaven hurled the Titans into the lowest depths of Tartarus (219). Zeus then determined to destroy the race of men. Whether his reasons were similar to those given in the Biblical account of the destruction of mankind, we do not know.¹ Hesiod simply says: κακὰ δ' ὄσσετο θυμῶ | θνητοῖς ἀνθρώ-

¹ R. Schneider (Der Prometheus des Aeschylus, Duisburg, 1889) thinks Zeus did not wish to destroy mankind, but to deprive them of their rights and privileges of government. The expression of Prometheus (ἀιστώσας γένος 232) controverts this view. Even granting that this may be a hyperbolic expression of the wrathful Prometheus, Zeus manifestly wished to replace the old by a new race corresponding to the new perfect and wise government of the universe.

ποισι, τὰ καὶ τελέεσθαι ἔμελλε. In Lucian's Prometheus there is an insinuation that the Titan had wrought great mischief to the gods by the creation of man — they feared dethronement by the creatures of the fire-god. At all events, Zeus desired to create a new race after his own design, adapted to the new order of things. Human kind, a creation of that crude Titan world, wretched, weak, and stupid, was naturally not satisfactory to the new sovereign. But Prometheus,

Pierced with our human miseries, comes forward as the champion of the old race
Whose naked natures live in all the spight
Of wreakful heaven.

He steals fire and teaches the arts to insensate creatures. But Zeus will brook no infringement of the laws of the new régime; he must needs punish the recalcitrant, and, accordingly, seeks to invent some pain

That may vex his body and his soul.

3. KRATOS AND BIA

1. According to Hesiod, Kratos and Bia are the children of Pallas and Styx. The latter took her sons and helped the new king of Olympus in his war against the Titans, after which they became his constant attendants. But this is not the only reason why Aeschylus introduces these satellites of Zeus in a play in which only two actors are required. Bia is not needed to help bind Prometheus; Kratos would suffice for leading him in. But two were necessary to drag him to the rock. Aeschylus adopted this method of getting the dummy which represents the Titan to the position it was to occupy.¹ During the dialogue between Hephaestus and Kratos, Prometheus utters never a word. This alone is calculated to have a powerful effect on the audience.²

² "From the moment of the first dawning of his character upon their minds, its effect is electrifying . . . he disdains as much to answer the . . .

But the artist's chief concern was to get rid of the impression of stiffness which the motionless form was sure to make. Prometheus is bound hand and foot. There is another brief pause after 87. Hephaestus makes his exit at 81, while Kratos remains, and declaims 82-87. This is for the purpose of giving Hephaestus time to reach his place behind the dummy to appear in his new rôle. No change of costume is necessary; and the actor has abundant time, especially if a pause is made also after 81 and 84, during which Kratos contemplates the work with satisfaction. Nevertheless, it is perfectly natural that the reluctant Hephaestus, after he has completed his unpleasant task, quietly goes his way, while the menial who takes a malicious joy in the pain of the sufferer gives free rein once more to his scoffs.¹ compassion of Vulcan, as to murmur beneath the brutal cruelty of Strength" (Mrs. BROWNING).

¹ Hartung assumes that the poet was compelled to express the substantial idea of βίη κρατεῖν by a hendiadys. Of great importance for establishing the date of the play is the decision of the question whether two or three actors were necessary. Editors generally accept one theory or the other without bringing forward new arguments or clearing up with valid proofs the doubts that have been raised. That the actor was concealed behind a dummy was first suggested by Welcker. If this theory is correct, there would be no use for

The waxen mask,
Which set the grand, still front of Themis' son
Upon the puckered visage of a player.

In 67-69 the bolt must seem to be actually driven through the prisoner's breast. Hermann says that no man could endure the physical pain of being bound in one position through the play, to say nothing of his ability to speak the lines. To meet this objection Schömann says that the arms and legs have the freest movement. He thinks Prometheus could not have been brought in as a dummy in a way calculated to deceive the spectators; that the words with which Kratos begins could hardly apply to such a proceeding; that the stiffness of the lay-figure would have been unbearable; and that the liberation in the next play presupposes an actor for Prometheus in this. But in the Iuomenos the circumstances were different. Both representation and scenery may have been changed. Bellman, Richter, Sikes and Willson, and a few others are opposed to the lay-figure theory.

4. HEPHAESTUS

1. Kratos and Bia appear but an instant, but this suffices to mark their character. The same may be said of the divine smith (Hephaestus in the south, Völundr or Wieland in the north), a good and honest god beneath his rude exterior, who never appears in the poets except as a butt of many a flinty gibe. The Homeric gods laugh loudly at him διὰ δώματα ποιπνύοντα. When he was born Hera hurled him into the sea because he was deformed. In Olympus he is a proletarian among the gods. He is the skilled workman; his forge was the first plastic studio. In the Theogony of Hesiod Aglaïé, the youngest of the Graces, is his wedded wife. In the Iliad Χάρψ is his sister. In the Odyssey Aphrodite herself is his spouse. He is lame because the human smith was lame. In a primitive community the lame man was left at home to forge weapons for those who could fight. In the Prometheus he exhibits the same characteristics as the Hephaestus of Homeric legend.

5. PROMETHEUS

1. With the possible exception of Clytemnestra, none of the characters of Aeschylus make such a lasting impression on the mind as Prometheus.¹ His character unfolds, expands, from scene to scene. The victim acquires a sort of superiority over the tyrant. The oppressor will stand in need of the oppressed (169). He has in his possession a secret, which must be guarded most carefully (523) lest Zeus discover it, and thereby learn the means to prevent his dethronement. The curiosity of the audience is aroused and kept alive during the whole course of the drama. But there are many other reasons for the great interest which attaches to the play, an interest which increases as the centuries pass. Besides the marvelous, the poetic, the artistic, and the spectacular elements, there are the religious and the patriotic — Prometheus was an Attic god.

For the modern world a new element of interest has entered, an element found in no other drama. Unquestionably the extraordinary vogue of the tragedy in modern times is due in some measure to its supposed Christian analogy — it is read so widely because it presents the sublime picture of a god offering himself in sacrifice for man. The Church Fathers were so struck with the resemblance to the crucifixion that they did not hesitate to regard the punishment of Prometheus as a sort of confused presentiment of the vicarious atonement,¹ and many a servant of the Most High since has felt that Aeschylus was a poet of such soul-subduing melody

As Bethlehem-shepherds heard when Christ was born.

But Christians and non-Christians alike have admired him for his self-sacrifice, his friendship for mankind, his indomitable courage ; and this admiration is not a whit lessened by his acknowledgment of susceptibility to the torture of his enemy, notwithstanding the fact that he vaunts his ability to peer into the future and involves himself in contradictions. Indeed, we are sometimes tempted to believe that he is overestimating himself, and we do not feel inclined to credit (unreservedly at least) the certainty of his vision, or believe in his declaration that he alone helped Zeus to victory, that he alone established the new government. An ill-defined horror must have crept over the Greek spectator at the boastful boldness of the criminal who had been guilty of offending against the prerogatives of the gods (9, 67, 82), and the conviction must have forced itself upon his mind that the defiant spirit must be broken.

2. The nearest parallel to Prometheus in modern literature is Satan in Paradise Lost. The latter's resemblance to the Greek

Lucifer (apart from the external circumstance of his revolt) is in his impatience of control (cp. 1009 f.), his ferocity, his un-
 Traits of character conquerable pride.¹ Prometheus has not the third and fourth species of humility: "gladly to assent to good conseil; gladly to stonde to thaward of his sovereyns." Nor has he "contricioun of hert and confessioun of mouth." At the end of the torture both Shelley's and Aeschylus' Prometheus are "firm, not proud."²

Job also learns the lesson of submission, in strong contrast with the stubborn, heartless pride of Byron's Manfred.³ But in the first play of the Greek trilogy the chief character has given reins and licence

 To a tempestuous will, as wild as winter.

He is

Wrathful, perverse, self-will'd, and full of anger.

These traits would tend to preclude rather than evoke our sympathies. We cannot call it virtue that proceeds from vicious fury. Nevertheless, even if he were not suffering for mankind, we should be insensibly drawn to him, just as we are attracted to Satan, who also appeared in the rôle of hero (a hero before Milton represented him as such), by reason of the fortitude he displays in the unequal contest with a higher power, for the defiant attitude he maintains to the last.

Shelley's poem is, in many respects, fantastic. His Prometheus represents man always baffled in his desires, and "Jupiter, that Shelley's evil from which man needs salvation, whatever that Prometheus evil be." This is man's "misconception of the God." Such a conception would have been to Aeschylus blasphemous. There was no struggle between realism and idealism in antiquity.

² It doth repent me: words are quick and vain;

Grief for awhile is blind, and so was mine. — SHELLEY, P. U. 303 f.

³ Cp. Samson's scorn and stubborn hatred of Dagon.

Shelley was an out-and-out subjective idealist. Prometheus is not the "Urmensch." We read into the poem our own subjective opinions. We have been taught so long that the Titan is man struggling against the deity that it has become a prepossession — "praeiudicatis interpretatorum deberi opinionibus aut eorundem nimiae cuidam sagacitati, plus quam poeta saperet ipse sapientium" (SEELMAN). Shelley tells us himself that his Prometheus is not an imitation of the Greek tragedy, but an independent creation.¹

¹ In Shelley, Prometheus is already bound. Spirits of the mountain and of the air come to see him. His suffering is symbolized in the Furies; his torment is mankind's agonies of mind. Thetis marries Zeus, and Demogorgon, the result of the union, dethrones his father. The personification of nature is not so anthropomorphic as in Aeschylus. Mercury's pity is all for Prometheus. Goethe gave his version of the myth an artistic turn. Prometheus is the creative artist who will not be bound by past laws of art; he defies Zeus, not because the latter has punished him, but because he chooses to be his own master. Goethe emphasizes Prometheus' yearning to impart knowledge. Lowell's poem is entirely subjective.

Therefore, great heart, bear up! Thou art but type
Of what all lofty spirits endure that fain
Would win men back to strength and peace through love.

The setting, though a monologue, is Aeschylean. The Titan's thoughts are his only company, and they follow nearly the same line of reasoning as Shelley's. Longfellow sees in the myth a symbol of poetic inspiration. Like Goethe, he emphasizes the creative aspect of the myth. In Byron's Lucifer a Titanic independence and lordly endurance of fate are prominent, but in his envy of power and longing to reign we miss the warmth of Shelley's Prometheus, the beneficence of Goethe's, the kindly feeling toward man exhibited by the Prometheus of Aeschylus. In Milton the God of Israel is partial to those who serve him. He appears in Byron only dramatically, and even so is not always the same in character. In the Greek drama there is no consciousness that such tyranny as Zeus displays is not in keeping with the character of an omnipotent ruler. Shelley develops the democratic ideal. In Goethe the democratic spirit revolts against the guidance of the older conservative tendencies.

Plotinus and Coleridge discovered in the Prometheus the germ of an elaborate system of transcendentalism. In Campanella, Bacon, Jean Paul, and Fichte the Titan enlightens man against the will of the powers that be; in Heine and Giordano Bruno he is a symbol of oppressed humanity.

Prometheus chained by Jupiter is man that has imagined his God to be "even such an one as himself," and applies to him what Rossetti calls "the science of theometry." The English poet "shrank from a catastrophe so feeble as that of reconciling the champion with the oppressor of mankind." No such difficulty presented itself to the Greek mind.¹ The Athenian audience felt that Solon's words were wise: σκοπέειν χρὴ παντὸς χρήματος τὴν τελευτὴν κῆ ἀποβήσεται (Hdt. 1. 32). They knew that the end of Prometheus Desmotes was not the end of the play. They saw the whole circle; modern critics only an arc. When the angel said to Abraham, in the Miracle Play on Corpus Christi day,

Isaak, þi sone, þat is the dere,
Whom þou loues ouer alle thyng,
To þe lande of Vyssyn wende in feere,
And there of hym þou make offering, the audience did not feel that He who gave the command was a cruel tyrant. It is not the invention of Aeschylus we are dealing with, but an actual myth. The dramatist makes use of such materials as are suited to the development of tragic conflicts. Shelley was right in his feeling — the ending of the drama is aesthetically offensive; there is a harsh dissonance, since neither Zeus nor Prometheus can be justly called victor; the conflict between the sovereignty of Zeus and the free will of Prometheus proves a fiasco — the knot is cut, not loosened.

Shelley's creation may prove an imperishable poem, but it has little in common with the Greek Prometheus. It is not a drama, but merely a development of a transitional situation. We know nothing about the fate of the hero. Shelley saw a vision, and that vision is the Prometheus Unbound.

The birthright of their being: knowledge, power,
The skill which wields the elements, the thought
Which pierces this dim universe like light, Self-empire, and the majesty of love:
For thirst of which they fainted. — 2. 4. 39 ff.

¹ The fact is we have no means of deciding exactly what the catastrophe was.

The English poet's Prometheus is the human Soul ; the Athenian's, a Greek god. In Cain the attitude of the Shelleyesque Prometheus is more openly assumed, but the character is more Aeschylean, in that Byron does not represent his hero as entirely deserving our sympathy. His love of life and of knowledge is only for himself. Byron looked upon Cain as a hero of the Promethean type. The poet himself states that he was indebted to the Greek tragedy for his conception of Manfred. The nearest parallel ancient literature affords is Job, in whom Byron's and Shelley's angry questions are answered : What means this constant baffling of man's best efforts?

3. The Zeus of the Promethean trilogy was not essentially different from the Zeus of the other Aeschylean tragedies. No poet of antiquity is richer in expressions of piety toward the gods his people worship. A godfearing man, Aeschylus could not have represented Zeus as an humble suppliant before Prometheus. In the Luomenos he remains the sovereign lord. The punishment he inflicts is severe, but not undeserved. We have only an ex parte statement of the act which entailed this punishment. Not a few of the touches which seem to point to a tyrannical spirit on the part of Zeus are merely motives of a dramaturgical nature to evoke the sympathy of the audience. We get a glimpse of a different Zeus in the delineation of Oceanus. True, he emphasizes the fact that there is a νέος τύραννος ἐν θεοῖς (310), from whom one may expect a rigorous rule ; but he will yield to entreaties (338, 377). The same stern ruler finally becomes reconciled with Cronus and with the Titans. Once it was his μοῖρα to overthrow his father ; now it is his μοῖρα to rule forever. Traces of the old myths about Zeus's animalism are found in Aeschylus, but with the worst elements almost entirely obliterated. The only maiden mentioned that Διὸς θάλπει κέαρ ἔρωτι is Io. Apollo calls Zeus Ὀλυμπίων πατήρ (Eu. m. 618).

Representation of Zeus

Athene's wisdom is his gift (850). He uses the thunderbolt, not arbitrarily, but with judgment and discretion. He is the guide and teacher of mankind, who accomplish nothing contrary to his will. He is the arbiter of battles (Sept. 162), the judge and castigating of the overweening and proud.¹ Zeus in the Prometheus is the god that was, the keeper and the enforcer of the uncreated laws of the universe which had existed before him. The exigencies of the drama demanded that he should be represented as ignorant of his fate; consequently, as the νέος τύραννος, in spite of the contradiction which it involves, in spite of the contrast with the world-ruler of the other tragedies. Aeschylus could easily believe that the greater spirituality of Zeus did not replace the reign of brute force without a struggle (Ag. 170-193). Sophocles conceives an ordered universe controlled by Zeus. But the creed of Aeschylus is δράσαντι παθεῖν (Cho. 312) and πάθει μάθος (Ag. 177), which applied to Zeus himself as well as to man. Zeus is not a rapacious usurper, as Prometheus represents him. The Titan himself shows us incidentally that the reign of brute force was destined to give way to the reign of intelligence (213). Prometheus is "in the great right of an excessive wrong," but that he errs, even the well-disposed Hephaestus acknowledges. The transgressor is a Titan, and his punishment is in harmony with the Titanic times. We are apt to forget that the power of the Greek gods was political. The conception of absolute gods, eternal, perfect, and unchangeable, was uncongenial to the Greek mind. Zeus was the outgrowth of a ruder order. So, also, was there a gradual development in the moral κόσμος. The old nature-forces were superseded by the spiritual. "Let us sing of the births of the gods who will see the light in the age to come. The gods that exist are born of those that exist no longer" (Rig-Veda). When a priest pours the Soma on the altar of Agni, he combines the gods past, present, and future in the same homage, the ancestral gods and the children of ether, those that are falling into decay, and those that are being born into the celestial life. Aeschylus, differently from Euripides, portrayed the god as he saw him, never doubting that a beneficent deity ruled in heaven now, a god who was not so good long ago, perhaps, one who proved a harsh ruler when he was young. So the Erinyes in the Oresteia change to the Eumenides. The poet constantly emphasizes the fact that time was still young (35, 96, 148, 310, 389, 402, 439, 942, 955, 960). Nowhere in Aeschylus except in the Prometheus does Zeus appear dependent on Μοῖρα. Μοῖρα is above him, in that he cannot escape his Μοῖρα; is not above him in that his μοῖρα is, after he has once become sovereign, to rule forever. Hence the Zeus of the Prometheus is different from the Zeus of the Oresteia only in his external relations. Prometheus himself at last recognizes that the empire belongs to Zeus, as being the most worthy of it.

¹ Schömann says the first impression one receives in reading the Prometheus is wholly unfavorable to Zeus, but that this is not to be explained on the assumption that a play for the stage is to be wholly separated from religion (G. Hermann), nor that the tragedy is a polemic against the Hesiodic myth (Welcker), nor yet that the poet wished to undermine the state religion (Schlegel and others). There is scarcely a hint in the extant drama to justify Schömann's own (Christian) view. The justice and wisdom of Zeus are never mentioned — always his inexorableness, his severity, his anger. The Indians of North America, as well as the old Teutons and the old Hellenes, attached no discredit to the acceptance of goods in satisfaction for murder of kinsmen. Their moral ideas were different from ours — it is a matter of culture, not of nationality. So in heaven. The old myths represented Zeus at the time of his quarrel with Prometheus as a product of the barbarous Titanic age. In the Septem he is no longer a tyrant who punishes arbitrarily, opposes the good, and hates the human race. Schömann was the first to call attention to the dramatic guilt of Prometheus, and emphasized the justice of his punishment. In 1860 Welcker accepted Schömann's view in part. Many of the Titan's utterances are exaggerations. Not only do his frequent allusions to his love for mankind augment our sympathy, but Io, the Chorus, and Oceanus serve the same purpose. Welcker emphasized many points which Schömann had failed to notice, particularly the importance of the circumstance that in this play Themis is the mother of Prometheus. Nitzsch sees in Prometheus a personification of the soul of man. Such was Faust; but Prometheus was a god, not a Faust; he has traits that are non-human; otherwise the play becomes an allegory, and allegory is the antithesis of poetry.

Greek conception of the gods

4. The redemption of man was not to be extorted from heaven. All the characters of the drama recognize the cruelty of Zeus ; they speak of his subverting the old order, and substituting his own ill-regulated and capricious will. The vilification of Zeus must be viewed dramatically ; it was appropriate to the situation ; its purpose was to enhance the pathos of the suffering. The poet wished us to feel that the ruler was stern. Summum ius summa saepe iniuria est.

5. The prolonged and continuous portraiture of the inflexible character of Prometheus would be monotonous, if the poet had not introduced two scenes which lend variety and contribute to the effect of the ensemble, not only by reason of the relations which the characters bear to Prometheus, but also by increasing our pity and our admiration for the sufferer.

6. THE OCEANIDES

1. And every nymph of stream and spreading tree,
 And every shepherdess of Ocean's flocks,
 And Ocean with the brine on his grey locks,
 All came. — SHELLEY, The Witch of Atlas.

Nothing could be sweeter than their words, their songs, their sentiments. A better chorus could not have been chosen to set off the masculine figure of the ungovernable Titan. Weak women, they cannot understand how one can dare resist the will of the all-powerful Zeus — “with tear-swollen eyes and sorrowful souls” they come,

Character

Composed of pity and compassion.
 Of melting charity, and of moving ruth.¹

A travers le brouillard et l'air frais du matin
 Il voyait s'approcher, onduleuses et belles,

Nowhere else in Aeschylus is there to be found a character or a chorus possessing that sweetness and trembling emotion which bring tears to the eyes. Even here grace preponderates rather than feeling. In this play, too, more than in any other, the chorus serves to express the views and feelings which the poet at every moment of the action wishes to excite. Aristotle says that the chorus should not take part in the action, but should incline to the hero. The Oceanides are not so partisan, however, as to be decidedly against Zeus. In their hearts are two equally strong feelings. The chorus had to consist of deities (mortals were out of the question), but such as stand in awe of Zeus, and, at the same time, friends to man and to Prometheus. Aeschylus has succeeded in interesting us in the collective chorus—the whole group is as a single individual.¹

7. OCEANUS

1. The characters of Oceanus, of Io, and of Hermes are even more strongly marked than that of Hephaestus. The old god of the sea makes his appearance on a winged horse.² As with the play itself, so with the attitude of the second visitor; the critics differ,

Everich after his owen opinioun,

as to whether Oceanus proffers his assistance with an ulterior

Les nymphes de la mer, et le soleil lointain
Mettait des rires d'or en leurs claires prunelles;
Sur les vagues chantait leur parler argentin,
Et l'âme du Titan s'adoucissait par elles.

— JEAN LAHOR, Les Océanides.

motive, or simply as a stanch friend of Prometheus. Weil and Patin think he was glad to get away after appearing in the rôle of a good friend and kinsman without compromising himself. Schömann says he was ready to do and dare for his friend.¹ Oceanus may be egoistic, and even egotistic (338), but he is not timid (prudence is timidity in Prometheus' eyes), nor are the offers he makes so generously to the captive a "mensonge," as a French critic calls them. He believes that his kinsman by timely submission may be forgiven. He remonstrates with his friend, bids him "throw away hate's celestialty," and preaches absolute self-subjection, petition for pardon, the amende honorable. This advice is premature. Pent-up resentment used its privilege. Prometheus is still defiant, and looks upon the would-be intercessor as a glozing weakling. Hence the good counsel of Oceanus does not have the effect anticipated. Prometheus (like Satan) does not soften, but "hardening in his strength, glories." He receives his kinsman with deference, but tires of his long harangues — τὸ γὰρ ἄκαιρον πανταχοῦ λυπηρόν.

2. Some have thought that Oceanus was the confidant and accomplice of Prometheus in his revolt against Zeus; but this is impossible, since such a conception would accord neither with his rôle nor with his character. The moralist, as well as the cautious conservative counselor, is betrayed by the apophthegmatical character of the advice.²

² Aeschylus plainly distinguishes between the god and the river. In representing Prometheus as the son-in-law of Oceanus, he follows Acusilaus. Asia is the Titan's spouse according to Herodotus (and Shelley). Oceanus never appears in Homer as a personal god among the other gods. He is one of the primitive deities, inseparable from their natural element, which epic poetry prefers to leave in the shadow. Cp. Ὑ 7 οὔτε τις οὖν ποταμῶν ἀπέην, νόσφ' Ὀκεανοῖο. Even the scholiast marvels at the poet's boldness in dragging him from his retreat. The ancient idols, those that preceded the new gods, sank into oblivion. A long silence reigns; Homer forgets them; Pindar passes them by; Sophocles barely mentions them; Aeschylus alone esteems the abolished gods. Indeed, he seems to prefer them, being nearer the old

3. From the homely scene of Oceanus advising his friend Aeschylus soars aloft to a height of poetry as beautiful as it is magnificent. The chorus sings of the universal mourning for the Titan ;

Es geht ein allgemeines Weinen,
So weit die stillen Sterne scheinen,
Durch alle Adern der Natur.¹

Prometheus then enumerates the benefits he has conferred on mankind. Another ode on the power of Zeus, the feebleness of ephemeral man, and the ὀλοὰς τύχας (554) of Prometheus, which brings vividly to the mind of the chorus the happy days of yore, when they chanted the bridal song, as their sister was conducted to his home, and there enters that virgin whom, transformed,

The torturing sting drove wandering o'er the world.

8. IO

1. The warmer blooded a nation, the more highly endowed it is with dramatic talent. Such a faculty is more natural to those who live in a southern clime. The Italian does not suppress his emotions. He is nearer nature ; he has " du drame dans le coup d'œil " (LAMARTINE). This dramatic power we find everywhere among children. Now the Greeks were children and were southerners. Their bank of imagination was practically inexhaustible — they felt the same agony, the same ecstasy, that children feel, and they had the same plenitude of belief. There was no need of representing Io as completely transformed to a heifer.² A nature-forces. Old Ocean, submerged by Poseidon, shows his primal face once more above the waves.

Representation The only mark of Io's metamorphosis was the horns (588, 674, 695). We are thus allowed to feel at times that she imagines herself to be what she is not. When Prometheus foretells her fate, he does not say that her "shape shall be re-metamorphosed," but that she shall recover her reason (873). The gadfly is spoken of in such a way as to make it possible to interpret her words at times as the metaphorical expression of frenzy. At the same time, the poet, with true artistic instinct, engages our attention by presenting a more tragical object for our consideration, the wraith of Argus.

2. Poetry which deals with the beings of another world should be at once mysterious and picturesque.¹ This is eminently true of the Prometheus from the beginning to the end. Dante is picturesque, but devoid of mystery. Milton's spirits do not have Atmosphere of mystery horns and tails like those of Tasso and Klopstock. Both their characters and their forms have a dim resemblance to those of men, but gigantic, mysterious. Aeschylus borrows Io from the fantastic realms of myth, alters her form in the smallest degree so as not to impose on us too great an effort of credulity, and brings her into the world of reality. Like the Marble Faun "she is not supernatural, but just on the verge of nature, and yet within it." In admirable verses the poet depicts the perturbation of her mind, her fatigue, her despondency and despair, the tender sympathy and emotion she manifests at the sight of the pinioned Prometheus; portrays her surprise when he calls her by name, her burst of grief when he tells her of the regions unexplored she must traverse before she finds repose at last on the banks of the Nile. It is just this kind of sorrow and suffering that the lyrical genius of Aeschylus succeeds in expressing best: transports of grief mingled with terror, the ravings of a maniac, and the wild despair of one possessed. "Aucun autre que lui," says Croiset, "n'aurait pu écrire la scène des hallucinations de Cassandre."¹

3. The introduction of Io into the drama may seem arbitrary, but the effect is unquestionable: two victims of Zeus, one the object of his hate, the other of his love. The hidden ^{Object of the} nexus is finally revealed when the announcement is ^{Io episode} made by the prophetic god that from Io, after thirteen generations, shall spring the hero from whom he himself expects deliverance. Richter thinks such episodic scenes positive faults.² They do disconcert us at first; but their very frequency in Aeschylus indicates that they conform to the Aeschylean method of composition. They have a raison d'être. The Io episode is not simply an expedient to prolong the play. Prometheus spoke only indefinitely about the secret on which he set his hope (169). He refused to reveal it to the chorus (522). But when Io enters, he remembers that she will soon find respite and consoles himself with the thought "If it be not now, yet it will come," and resolves to wait the retributive hour, "when all his wariest guards shall not exempt him," when he himself shall be released and obtain satisfaction.

² Richter's idea is not new. Tyrwhitt considered the scenes of Io and Oceanus as belonging to the μῦθοι ἐπεισοδιώδεις (Arist. Poet. 9), which neither necessity nor probability connects with the chief action.

The language and sentiments of Prometheus are not the same throughout the play. A change is wrought in the Titan's character, a change which some condemn as an inconsistency and others praise as true to nature. We see the same Prometheus pass suddenly from plaint to confidence, from discouragement to defiance. The aeons which he contemplated but a moment ago with terror seem to him now but a pulse beat. The days of the new empire are numbered. The proud attitude which Prometheus now assumes prepares for and leads up to the dénouement. The play ends more dramatically than it began; it moves at last, and simply because Prometheus provokes new rigors. He had rejected the offer of Oceanus to bring about a reconciliation as premature and palpably impossible, and if Io had not appeared, the drama would have come to a standstill, Prometheus σκοπέλοις ἐν ἄκροις προσπορπατός and the Oceanides δακρύνουσι. By the appearance of Io Prometheus is reminded of the impending second love affair of Zeus. As soon as Io departs, the chorus moralizes on the dire results of unequal matches, immediately after which the Titan exclaims ἦ μὴν ἔτι Ζεὺς . . . ἐξαρτύεται γάμον γαμῆν. He declared (265) that he had long ago made up his mind to suffer, was prepared to endure anything. But that he should abide by all the heroic resolutions he has formed we do not expect; the scenes in which the chorus condoles with him and in which he declares he did not expect such torment have not prepared us for his later attitude, when he puts on the dauntless spirit of resolution and is ready to threaten the threatener (966, 992, 1001, 1040). The steadfastness with which he asserts his will in the face of disaster makes an impression of unusual grandeur. In revealing to this second victim of Zeus her future, he seems to see before him his own liberator — Io “in some child of late posterity.” Full of that image the ages count for naught. Moreover, the episode is not only an essential member of the whole organism; Io is one of those peculiarly Aeschylean characters which, dramatically considered, play a more important part than a mere secondary rôle, claiming as they do the sympathy and undivided attention of the audience, and by monopolizing, so to speak, the action, afford a moment's relief to the high tension of their minds, which have been fixed without pause on the chief character.¹

9. GEOGRAPHY

1. The purpose of the long description of Io's wanderings is not to extend the play, nor to serve as an intermezzo to divert the attention of the audience from the suffering of Prometheus, nor yet, as Schömann thinks, to assist the mind in following Io to the extreme limits of the world. As in the case of the seven leaders in the Septem, the description is given in the epic spirit, and the purpose is partly to gratify the curiosity of the audience, but particularly to lend vividness to the narrative. This detail of geography, which is variously interpreted, seems to the modern reader somewhat tedious and unsuitable for a work of dramatic art. But we must not forget that Aeschylus lived in a century when the narratives of Hecataeus, of Xanthus, and of Hellanicus were eagerly read, when Herodotus was traveling extensively and gathering the materials for his great prose drama (not a small part of which was geographical), when the knowledge of a world still young, unknown, mysterious, with undetermined boundaries, and peopled with strange beings, had a peculiar and poetical attraction for the inexperienced Greeks, who sought eagerly to know more of the geographical digression

This wyde world, which that men seye is round.

Stories of unexplored regions had the same fascination for them as for our ancestors a few centuries ago.

¹ The two Aeschylean accounts of the wanderings of Io do not agree, except that Io left Argos and was finally delivered in Egypt. But Aeschylus could treat only a small part of her journey in the Prometheus. In the Supplices she crosses the Thracian Bosphorus. The Persian account was still different (ἐσβαλομένους δὲ ἐς τὴν νέα σῆχσθαι ἀποπλώοντας ἐπ' Αἰγύπτου. οὕτω μὲν Ἴοῦν ἐς Αἴγυπτον ἀπικέσθαι λέγουσι Πέρσαι. — Hdt. I. 2). Aeschylus does not mention Io's mother (Μελία). According to the common tradition it was Zeus who transformed Io.

The Athenians were, in the growth of their empire, δυσέροτες τῶν ἀπόντων. This alone might account for the geographical digressions in Aeschylus. That he should make mistakes, in the imperfect state of geographical knowledge at that time, is not strange. We know more about the Philippines now than in the last century; nevertheless, the geographical ideas of most of us, so far as our Oriental possessions are concerned, are decidedly vague. Io's wanderings cannot be reconciled with actual geography. Aeschylus had not been there. But his statements are not more erroneous, nor more absurd, than those made by modern authors. The Duke of Newcastle, in Smollett's Humphrey Clinker, speaks of "thirty thousand French marching from Acadia to Cape Breton," and Marlowe says, "And so in troops all march'd to Tenedos" (Dido, 2. 6). Shakspeare gives a seacoast to Bohemia. One of Dekker's verses reads, "This path leads to Cyprus." Aeschylus was a poet, not a geographer. Imagination, not intellect, was the desideratum. And we can believe that his audience turned aside from the real play for a moment not without pleasure to follow Io into a region beyond the bounds of human knowledge, into a region peopled by monsters. A sort of demoniacal contortion disfigures the features of the world and impresses on it a physiognomy infernal. The Greek audience was fascinated by the tragic περίπλους of Io, as Desdemona was fascinated by Othello's description of the Cannibals that do each other eat,

The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders.

θαυμασταὶ γὰρ τῶν ἀπόντων, τὸ δὲ θαυμαστὸν ἡδύ· σημεῖον δέ, πάντες γὰρ προστιθέντες ἀπαγγέλλουσιν ὡς χαριζόμενοι (Arist. Poet. 24. 17). The Greeks were circumscribed in a luminous horizon, and the regions beyond were only darkness and phantasmagoria and monstrosities (792-806). The undiscovered world was not only an Africa, but also an Asia and Europa portentosa.

2. Aeschylus recounts but a part of Io's wanderings. He divides the story into three parts, introduced, separated, and concluded by dialogues in which the drama, momentarily effaced, reappears. These parts are similar to the narrative portions of the great messenger scene in the Persae.

10. HERMES

The office of attending and guarding men and conducting their souls to Hades (πομπαῖος Eum. 90) is given to Hermes by Zeus. He presides at contests (ἐναγώνιος Fr. 387), and is μέγιστος πρόξενος (Suppl. 920). But he is preëminently the messenger of Zeus (Ζηνὶ πιστὸν ἄγγελον Prom. 969). In our play he comes with a command that Prometheus yield up the secret under penalty of being swallowed up in the yawning chasm of the earth, to reappear after aeons have elapsed, only to have his vitals fed on by an eagle the livelong day. The dialogue between the Titan and the "lackey" of the gods is superb. Hermes endeavors to prevail on the stubborn prisoner to obey and be saved, but Prometheus bids the king of kings do his worst, Hermes soars aloft, and the fettered god sinks, crag and all, into the engulfing chasm, mid tempest and earthquake.

11. DATE

I. Like the Platonic Phaedrus and Protagoras, the Prometheus has been going up and down the scale of the author's works: some consider it one of his earliest tragedies, others put it at the end of the list. Steusloff says the play is not by Aeschylus. He bases his belief on the meters, the ethos of the odes, the Diversity of opinion simple language, the position of the chorus (a mere sympathizing witness, Euripidean fashion), the attitude toward Zeus. If we had historical evidence that the play belongs to some given period of the poet's activity, there would soon be theories enough to account for the discrepancies; but, as it is, rebus nox abstulit atra colorem, and concord can never join minds so divided. The question has been, as Tristram Shandy would say, "weighed, poised, and perpended — argued upon — canvassed through — entered into, and examined on all sides" — and the point is still in litigation among the learned. All kinds of tests have been applied: thought, diction, stage machinery, structure, distribution of parts, number of actors, digressions, and description of natural phenomena. Some of these are extremely hazardous, requiring, as they do, too great delicacy of treatment; none are capable of mathematical proof. As in most real problems of philology there is evidence on both sides.

2. Some scholars put Prometheus even later than the Oresteia; O. Müller thinks it is one of the last works of the Aeschylean genius. Schömann (and Wecklein formerly) represent the other extreme, asserting that the play was written soon after the eruption of Aetna (479-478 B.C.).

Exceptional character of the play

The former base their arguments chiefly on the choruses. The ratio of choral parts to dialogue is about 1:7, whereas in the Oresteia it is 1:3, and in the Persae and Supplices only 1:2. The lyrical parts are different from the other Aeschylean odes; but the critics who assign the play to a date near the Oresteia on these grounds, do so (like Molière's docteur) sans observer rationem loci, temporis et personae. The Prometheus does not lend itself so readily to the ordinary choral performance. In no part of the play would a song of great length be natural (cp. 436 ff.); whereas the Supplices was written in the transition period (probably before 490 B.C.), when the drama had hardly evolved from the dithyramb; and the first ode of the Agamemnon is long for artistic reasons. Besides, it is very difficult to estimate the amount of lyric and dialogue in any drama. The Prometheus is the only play of its kind that has come down to us; it eludes the usual tests of language and verse structure. Both in technique and in distribution the odes differ from those in the other dramas. Rossbach emphasizes the resemblance to Sophocles and Euripides in the choice of rhythms; but the only induction he makes from this circumstance is that the Prometheus cannot belong to the older works of the poet. Like the Supplices and the Persae, the Prometheus lacks a formal introduction; it belongs to the same group as these oldest extant plays, but is later than both, though not so late as Mahaffy and Croiset believe (after the Septem). The trochaic tetrameter is used in the Persae, but never in the Prometheus. The trimeters are carefully written. There are more anapaests in the first foot than in the other plays. The dactyl occurs only once (but in a proper name, 730). The tribrach in the first foot is always in one word, usually trisyllabic (666). In the fifth foot it occurs but once (52). Resolution appears most frequently in the third foot (often due to proper names or to the unusual subject-matter). The only tribrach in the second foot is made by a proper name (715). Dactylo-epitritic verse (526, 887) is found nowhere else in Aeschylus. Hence many believe there was a revision of the play after the poet's death. Many other reasons for this view have been adduced, but none convincing.¹ In fact, the play, as we have it, does not suit the later stage; it was admirably adapted to the old stage, just as the Oresteia was to the new.² The Prometheus was written, then, after the Sicilian journey (476 B.C.) and before the stage reform, almost certainly between 472 and 469, certainly between the Persae and the Septem. That it belongs to the period of development of the tragic art can be deduced from its quasi-episodic character. The epic and the lyric elements were still struggling for the mastery. The artist has not succeeded in welding together the three parts of the

Conclusion

² J. Oberdick (Jenaer Literaturzeitung, 1876) places the revision in 425 B.C., citing the word σοφιστής (944). But this word (which is merely an extension of σοφός) had not yet lost its primitive signification. It is a fluctuating term, first acquiring the false connotation of the overconscious professional teacher of applied ethics, and later becoming absolutely identical with ρήτωρ. C. B. Gulick (Harvard Studies, X, p. 113) believes the play was remodeled in 415 B.C. Quintilian says: "correctas eius fabulas in certamen deferre posterioribus poetis Athenienses permiserunt." But the Prometheus is not necessarily among the number. The verse is Aeschylean; there are no tripping Euripidean tribrachs to make the pace brisker. The structure of the verse would have been changed if the play had suffered from interpolations.

Persae, the two parts of the Septem. Tristichs abound in the Septem, as quatrains in the Prometheus. The absence of caesura is characteristic of the earlier plays. There are no Euripidean couplets (H. F. 138 f.) in the Prometheus. This conventional mannerism is found in Sophocles and Aristophanes, but only rarely in Aeschylus.¹

12. SCENIC REPRESENTATION

1. The introduction of Prometheus and Hermes, of the Oceanides and their sire, and the engulfment of chorus, scaur, and Titan, with whirlwind, thunder and lightning, earthquakes and mighty billows tossed heaven-high, might seem to presuppose theatrical appliances which were not at the disposal of the poet in the embryonic stage of tragedy. The Attic Shakspeare took for granted what the Chorus in the beginning of King Henry the Fifth says :

Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts.
Play with your fancies, and in them behold.

Nevertheless, while not possessed of the machinery of the Hellenistic age, which was so remarkable that it could make transformations that would beggar the most gigantic efforts of modern times, Aeschylus was able to assist the imagination of his audience. If such a scene as that described by Holinshed as acted at Christ Church, Oxford, was possible in 1583, there seems to be no good reason for believing that the practical playwright of the fifth century could not have accomplished a similar feat.¹ No fixed proskenion could have fulfilled the requirements of the Prometheus. If such were possible, doubtless it would have represented a cliff, to which the prisoner would have been chained, as modern painters imagine him. The sympathizing visitors of the desolate Prometheus are the deities of the deep. If the poet could have so represented them, the audience would have seen Oceanus and his daughters swimming in their own element toward the crag.² The chorus appears in a chariot. Oceanus enters on some denizen of the deep. Schömann thinks the venerable sire drove, rather than rode, that he might not be too grotesque a figure even for a Greek audience. But the ancient artists often represent the sea deities as riding on dolphins and hippocamps. The chorus must share the fate of Prometheus. Such was the threat of Hermes, such the declared willingness of the Oceanides. This was the easiest way to get the chorus from the stage without marring the effect of the last scene. Surrounding the captive, they come closer and closer, as the threatened punishment approaches, until at last The finale the upper floor of the main platform sinks into the depths. The earth outside the ancient orchestra at Athens was five or six feet lower than the orchestra level. The Prometheus is sui generis in more ways than one. Probably never before had there been extensive construction to aid the representation. On the narrow platform of the later stage there would be no room for the craggy mountain side, much less for the immense trap door through which chorus and actor disappear. Over that part where the stairway was built later, the rocky eminence on which Prometheus lay was probably constructed. The actor entered the figure by the passage beneath the platform, through which came also the chorus to ascend their chariot. There was no dancing. The Prometheus was played in the air. From v. 128 to v. 283 the chorus remains in the car. The difficulty of working such a machine has been exaggerated. It was a flying machine only in appearance. The chorus is near Prometheus when it enters. It does not descend into an orchestra (separate and apart from the scene of the action), as some have conjectured from verse 282. There is no artificial barrier between Prometheus and his sympathizers at any time during the play. Of the earlier dramas the Prometheus is the only one that requires a special structure. The decoration, the imposing costumes, the unusual manner of entrance of the actors and their position afterwards, make the Prometheus one of the best illustrations of the bold creative power of the poet's fancy.

13. THE TRILOGY

1. The three plays forming the Promethean trilogy were, according to the Medicean manuscript: Δεσμώτης, Πυρφόρος, Λυόμενος. Whether the Purphoros came first or last has been a Controversy as to order subject of great controversy. Some have maintained that it had nothing to do with the Prometheia. That the three plays formed a trilogy, with the Fire Bearer last, is almost certain.¹ The dummy that represented the lacerated Titan could not be released before the audience. Prometheus had to be brought on the "stage" again, not disfigured, but transfigured. Internal evidence alone shows that the Luomenos followed the Desmotes; and the scholiast on 511 says: ἐν γὰρ τῷ ἑξῆς δράματι λύεται. Some have thought that Πυρκαεύς, which appears in the catalogue of names of Aeschylean plays, refers to the Purphoros, but it is in all probability a title given to the satyr drama Prometheus by the Alexandrian grammarians to distinguish it from the plays of the trilogy.¹ The little known of the contents of the Purphoros seems to indicate that the play was a tragedy. Down to 1869 scholars believed that it stood first in the trilogy, and that the name signified Fire Bringer (from the forge of Hephaestus in Lemnus). Schömann (and Droysen) thought that certain passages in the Desmotes presuppose a foregoing play, but later Schömann observed (rightly) that neither the chorus nor the audience requires more information than is given in the Desmotes.² The detailed narration of events in the Desmotes precludes the possibility of the existence of a preceding drama—it takes the very heart out of such a play. That the Purphoros did not come before the Desmotes is further attested by the fact that the scholiast (v. 94) reports Prometheus in the former play as having been bound thirty thousand years (ἐν γὰρ τῷ πυρφόρῳ τρεῖς μυριάδας φησὶ δεδέσθαι αὐτόν).³ The Purphoros is the last play of the trilogy, and treats of the fire divinity, the Πυρφόρος θεὸς Τιτὰν Προμηθεύς of Sophocles (O. C. 55),¹ after his reconciliation with Zeus and restoration to his place and prerogatives among the gods in his character of the Bearer of Fire to his Athenian worshippers, not in his capacity of Fire Stealer (κλέπτης). The worship of the god, as of the hero in Sophocles' Ajax, was of greater moment to the Greek audience than it is to us. The play doubtless closed with the induction of the god into his new honors, and the institution of the Προμήθεια, the chief feature of which was the torch race,² just as the Eumenides are inducted into their new office of Athenian deities at the close of the Oresteia.

² Hemsterhuys, Welcker, Klausen, K. O. Müller, Nitzsch, Preller, E. A. J. Ahrens, Vischer, G. Günther, and Hermann believe in the trilogy theory. Hiller, Bergk, Dindorf, and others impugn it. Kausche says: "Confirmatur haec sententia (that Πυρφόρος is but another designation of the Πυρκαεύς) eo quod unum tantummodo nomen in indice invenitur et quod numerus tam monstruosus (30,000) aptior videtur esse fabulae satyricae."

2. The changes Aeschylus introduced into the myth are to the advantage of Prometheus. He intended that we should side with him as against Zeus. He represented him in the Desmotes as a great god, admirable in wisdom and strength of purpose, possessing titles and prerogatives, the peer of the lord by whom he is ignominiously treated. We do not see the revolt of a vassal against his master. The purpose of this is to enhance the dramatic effect. The poet modified the spirit, while he preserved the letter of the Pindaric myth (Isthm. 7) of the rivalry of Zeus and Poseidon for the hand of Thetis, whereas in the Hesiodic tradition, which offered no support for a dramatic development of the Prometheus myth, he changes the text. He finds what he wants in the curse which Cronus uttered against his son in the old legend. Hence he brings Themis into the closest relation with Prometheus that he may be justified in ascribing to him a knowledge of the important secret that, if Zeus marries Thetis, he shall have a son by whom he in turn will be dethroned. In 209 ff. he alludes to the cult in Athens of Γῆ Θέμις. Since the Titans are sons of Γῆ, Aeschylus conceives that he may make the Titan Prometheus son of Gê-Themis, or of Themis. He says nothing about Iapetus, the father of Prometheus, because this myth was not in consonance with the Themis myth, which was more important for his purpose.

3. Prometheus Luomenos was famous in antiquity. The longest passage from it that has come down to us is Cicero's translation of twenty-eight verses. Instead of the young Oceanides the Titanum suboles are around him. They have come from the Indian Ocean and the λίμνη of the sun, across the Phasis, to comfort and to admonish him to yield. They have been released from Tartarus and are now reconciled with Zeus. The πτηνὸς κύων is glutting his maw on the captive's liver, which grows again after an interval of one day. When the horrible repast commences, Prometheus makes loud complaint of his torment and longs for death to terminate his suffering. The drama opens on the day of the reappearance of the eagle. But the descendant of Io enters first. Heracles, too, is traversing the earth, not goaded by frenzy, as his ancestress was, but overcoming bitter foes and leaving everywhere monuments of his exploits. Prometheus reveals to him the labors he must perform and gives him directions as to his journey, before he goes

Io traversed the Orient ; Heracles must explore the Occident. The poet thus completes the περίπλους of the world and entertains his public again with the fabulous geography which fascinated the people of that time even more than the descriptions of Darkest Africa attract us to-day. Among other marvels the prophetic god relates how Heracles, surrounded by the warlike Ligurians, the last arrow in his quiver gone, is aided by Zeus with a shower of stones, which the hero uses as missiles. A beating of wings is heard and the eagle appears. Heracles bends his bow and invokes the aid of Apollo. The arrow speeds on its way and the eagle falls. The Titan thanks his deliverer: ἐχθροῦ πατρός μοι τοῦτο φίλτατον τέκνον (Fr. 201). But the terrible secret that menaces the reign of Zeus must be divulged; and Prometheus must not expect a μόχθου τέρμι until a god voluntarily becomes his substitute and goes down to sunless Hades. A treaty is concluded. Prometheus reveals the secret, and the centaur Chiron, struck by a poisoned arrow of Heracles, gives up his prerogative of immortality and descends to the world where death reigns.¹ Whether Zeus appeared in the play cannot be determined. It is not worth while to puzzle ourselves as to how the reconciliation came about. A poet is to be interpreted only on the assumptions which he makes himself. The whole affair was plain for any one to see. Mutual concessions must have been made. The name Gê is given in the index personarum of the Desmotēs. Since she has no rôle in this tragedy, it is not unlikely that she appeared in the Luomenos. When the reconciled god is finally liberated he returns to his place among the gods in Olympus. He continues to wear bonds, but bonds symbolical of his captivity. As a memento of his sin and suffering he binds his brows with an osier-wreath (λύγος, agnus castus).² Zeus, too, has changed. The wrath of both has had time to defervesce. The shackles have already fallen from the other Titans; the conflicts of olden days are forgotten. The curse of Cronus is atoned. Zeus's principles of government are no longer the same. The power which he overthrew he was compelled to hold in check and dominate by force. He could not afford to be gentle. Every attempt at resistance had to be repressed. The Greek gods were born, grew, struggled, had their adventures, their history. Implacable Power and Force executed the sovereign's will at first. Now he can be lenient. The gods of the old régime are pardoned; they in turn forget old differences; an era of peace is ushered in; and Zeus becomes the good and wise ruler whom Aeschylus worships. A reign that has begun may end. But in the eyes of Aeschylus that possibility will not be realized. The two myths of Prometheus and Metis serve to reconcile the two notions of Zeus, contradictory though coexistent, — Zeus is a god who has not always reigned, and at the same time he is king of kings and lord of lords.

4. Herder attempted to present in poetic and dramatic form what seemed to him a solution of the Promethean riddle, though he recognizes that Aeschylus "auch dem Dichter, und sei er der grösste, unnachahmlich ist." The German poet makes Prometheus the creator of man. By fire he understands not only the arts, but also all the endowments of the mind.¹ Even Heracles is to him a Promethean man. Zeus plays a wretched rôle. Themis is not for, but against, him. "Gewalt und Macht," she says, "ist nicht Gerechtigkeit." Prometheus' filching fire is an honorable kind of thievery.²

14. THE SCENE

The scene of the extant play is designated in the first two verses (cp. 712, 729). Welcker thought that dramatic reasons require the location to be the same in both plays. Kausche is of the opinion that the Caucasus is the scene of both dramas.³ Prometheus comes to the light again (1053) bound to the same rock (Fr. 193). Schütz

³ The schol. on 1 says: "you must know that Prometheus is not bound, as the common tradition has it, on the Caucasus." The second scholium, how-

(in 1782) was the first to state distinctly that the scene of the Luomenos was different from that of the Desmotes, though Stanley had declared that the Caucasus was not the scene of the extant drama. Schütz was soon followed by Bothe, Porson, Heyne, Hermann, and (later) by Foss and Wecklein.¹ Welcker rejected the theory as incompatible with his view that the three plays formed a trilogy. That there was a subterranean journey and transfer to the summit of the Caucasus in the second play was first asserted by Schneider (1834). This was accepted by Schömann, Woolsey, Paley, Weil, L. Schmidt, Bergk, Bernhardt, Foss, and Wecklein. Allen (A. J. P. 13. 51 ff.) combats this theory, maintaining that the Caucasus was the scene of neither play, and that the traditional error is due to a free translation, or mistranslation, by Cicero of the general word πέτρας by saxa Caucasi. But one of the fragments (191) which speaks of the μέγαν τέρμονα of Europe and Asia seems to point to the Caucasus. The scene of the second play had to be farther south than the first; otherwise Heracles could not be introduced, whereas Io could easily, in her peregrinations after leaving the Ionic Gulf (837 f.), have extended her journey to the northern parts of the Aeschylean Scythia. Hesiod mentions no locality. The Caucasus (which is the scene of Lucian's dialogue) is first distinctly named in the Alexandrian age. Apollonius Rhodius represents the Argonauts, when they are drawing near to Colchis, as seeing the eagle and hearing the groans of the Titan. Eratosthenes, Strabo, Plutarch, Pausanias, Quintus Smyrnaeus, Eustathius, Vergil, Propertius, Ovid, Hyginus, Seneca, and Martial all speak of Prometheus on the Caucasus. There were two "prisons of Prometheus" shown to travelers, one in the Colchian, the other in the Indian Caucasus. The peak was named Strobilos, and could be seen from the Colchian seacoast. Pompey visited the place expressly to see where Prometheus had been chained.

ever, reads "εἰς τὸν Καύκασον." The tragic poets are wont to characterize the scene in the very beginning.

III. — THE MYTH

1. THE FIRE GOD

Of the thousand Rig-Veda hymns five hundred invoke Agni (Ignis), a common surname of whom is Pramati,¹ 'Forethought,' "the friend of man, the immortal among mortals, who is brought down from heaven to human kind."² Fire is the starting point of civilization — it humanizes man; without it there would be no art, no industry, no domestic hearth. It is of inestimable value, hence considered divine; and the earth fire came from the heaven fire. But how was it first obtained? To primitive man the genesis of fire was a miracle. In volcanic countries he would naturally think of it as subterranean. Almost all nations have a tradition that fire was first stolen, either from the gods direct or from some other nation on whom the gods had conferred the blessing. Cicero speaks of Lemnus as the place from which Prometheus had filched the fire — from the forge of Hephaestus in the volcano Mosychlus (furtum Lemnium).

2. THE FIRE STEALER

1. Myths of the Fire Stealer are found in New Zealand, Australia, Andaman Islands, Mangaia, North America, Greece, France, India, and they bear a close resemblance to one another. An animal among the savages, a human being among barbarous races, he becomes a hero, or god, among civilized nations. According to the legend of the Murri of Gipps Land, he was a man, but The legend universal became a bird. In Australian story the bird gets singed. A similar tale is told in Normandy and in the Isle of Man. Whether bird or beast, the pilferer is always swift. In one place the stealer is the crow; in another it is the hawk that filches the fire from the selfish owner, the bandicoot. According to another legend it was stolen from one Kondole by name, and placed in the grass tree, whence it can be extracted by rubbing. The blacks of Lake Condah tell how a man threw up a spear, to which was attached a string, climbed up and brought down fire from the sun. The Ahts of Vancouver say that Quawteaht forgot to give fire (which burned only in the house of the cuttlefish) to the animals he had created; but the deer stole it away in the joint of his hind leg. The Fire Stealer story is the most popular of all among the aborigines of the Northwest. Yehl is the Prometheus of the Thlinkets; transformed to a bird he carried in his beak a brand, from which the fire dropped on stones and sticks. Among many Indian tribes the hero is a coyote, among others a deer; the latter established a relay, and in the race the squirrel's tail was scorched, while the frog lost his appendage completely, though he succeeded in spitting out the fire on wood before it did further damage. The Cahrocs say the deer bore it away in the hollow, not of the fennel stalk, but of his leg bone. The lightning is often personified among primitive tribes. The Cherokees, as well as the Zulus, know a "thunder bird." The Cherokees say the earth was cold before the Thunders sent their lightnings and put fire in a hollow sycamore on an island. The opossum and the buzzard tried to get it, but the former lost the hair from his tail, the latter had his feathers scorched around his neck. The raven burnt his feathers black, the owl nearly ruined his eyes, the snake was almost incinerated; but the little water spider spun a thread and wove it into a trusti bowl which she fastened on her back, and succeeded in bringing to the mainland a coal of fire. The Creeks have a legend that the Great Spirit gave fire to a hostile tribe from whom a rabbit stole it, burning himself in the adventure on the forehead, and the missionary who unwittingly kills a young rabbit before the fire mark disappears runs the risk of suffering bodily harm.

² The accounts vary. He is (1) either brought back, after having disappeared from earth, and given to the Bhrgus (or to Manu, the first man), or (2) from a cave among the Bhrgus, or (3) by the Bhrgus (lightning, bhrag = φλεγ = fulg-or).

2. The Icelandic hero Grettir swims across a stream and steals fire from the enemy. The gods in most of the myths are opposed to the introduction of the arts and the diffusion of knowledge among men. The Teutonic heroes and the Keltic culture hero, Geryddion, bring the arts from the lower world.

3. THE GREEK LEGEND

1. The story goes back to the oldest period of Greek mythology. In Plato's Protagoras Prometheus created the human race; in Aeschylus he did not fashion man from clay, but gave ^{The Hesiodic} him everything that constitutes civilization. ^{myth} The Athenian, like the Theban poet, must have believed that man was of the same origin as the gods. The condition of men in the primitive period Hesiod conceives to have been a happy one. Being of the same stock, though of unequal endowments, there was social intercourse. Aeschylus does not treat of this association of gods and men, of their separation after the accession of Zeus and of the sacrifice of Prometheus. Zeus is the representative of the gods. Prometheus, the representative of men, is ambitious to be more shrewd than the son of Cronus. He devises a means of robbing the gods of their due share of the sacrifice. He lays on one side the meat and the vitals of the victim wrapped in fat, on the other the bones, covered temptingly with sleek fat, and bids Zeus choose, in the foolish hope that the god will allow himself to be deceived by appearances. Zeus selects the worst portion with the express purpose of punishing the son of Iapetus for his artifice, letting the act come to fulfillment, that there may be no evasion. Prometheus brings down dire punishment on his own head, and great troubles on mankind. Zeus sends Pandora, the creation of Hephaestus' skillful hand, and mortals cannot resist her charms.

More lovely than Pandora, whom the gods Endowed with all their gifts.¹

Aeschylus' conception is higher than that of Hesiod. He does not trouble himself with the question whether men have wronged the gods. He insists on the benefit of the fire gift, and shows how all human culture originated in the spark brought by Prometheus. Primitive man was a creature neighboring on the brute, plunged in a heavy stupor. He had eyes, yet saw not, was lightless, lived like the ant in subterranean caverns. But in his beast nature there is a possibility of higher development. So Prometheus taught him every art and every science (454-505). The spark of fire kindled the spark of spirit.

2. Among the Greeks fire is sometimes considered a gift of beneficent divinities, as Hephaestus or Athene. More frequently, however, the gods jealously guard the spark; it is their γέρας (82), and men enjoy the prerogative only as a consequence of theft. Prometheus was the Pilferer. In Athens he was considered the original fire god. The Athenians honored him, as such, in their art as well as at their festivals. In all the variations of the myth his rôle is the Fire Bringer. On this point Aeschylus is necessarily in accord with the Hesiodic legend. From the cult of Prometheus the torch race was introduced into the festivals of the other fire deities. Indeed, all we know about the Hephaesteia is that a λαμπαδηδρομία was connected with it. According to one tradition, Athene lighted the torch for Prometheus at the chariot wheel of Helios (adhibita facula ad rotam solis, Servius on Verg. Ecl. 6. 42).¹ Prometheus could not make man immortal, but he turns his thoughts away from death (248), gives blind hopes a lodgment in his breast. In taking the part of human kind against the master of the world, he is not actuated by sentiments of self-love and paltry rivalry (as in Hesiod). His single motive is compassion. He knew the power of the god whose designs he was opposing (101). These few traits, added by Aeschylus, ennoble the Hesiodic conception, without altering the primitive notion. But Prometheus is more than a defender of man,—he is a god, older than Zeus, in some respects his equal, if not his superior. When the gods and Titans engage in war he alone knows that victory does not depend on brute force. When his kinsmen will not hearken to his counsel, he becomes an ally of Zeus and helps him to establish his empire. Prometheus alone can save Zeus from being dethroned (913 ff.), can save him from the danger which menaces his realm. Prometheus knows from what union the redoubtable son will be born, but he is determined to keep the secret locked up in his own breast (523) until he is restored to freedom. The lot of the prisoner is in the hands of Zeus, but the duration of his reign depends on the revelation of the captive god.

¹ The accounts of the myth before Aeschylus are meager. It occurs in two Hesiodic poems (not entirely in agreement), where two local traditions have been manifestly associated. From Chaos came Uranus and Gaia. Their children are the Titans. The youngest of these, Cronus, overthrows his father. He, in turn, is overthrown by Zeus, and hurled into Tartarus. The brother of Cronus had four sons, Atlas, Menoetius, Prometheus, and Epimetheus. In Mecone (the later Sicily) gods and men concluded a treaty. References to an early blessed state of man in a golden age are frequent in ancient literature, e.g. Moschion (quoted in Stob. Ecl. Phys. 1. 3. 38):

ἦν γὰρ ποτ' αἰὼν κέλνός, ἦν ὀπηνίκα θηρσί διαίτας εἶχον ἐμφερεῖς βροτοὶ ὄρειγενῆ σπηλαῖα καὶ δυσηλίου φάραγγας ἐνναλοντες · οὐδέπω γὰρ ἦν οὔτε στεγήρης οἶκος, οὔτε λάινος εὐρεία πύργους ὠχυρωμένη πόλις.

3. It is one thing to expound the origin and the various changes of the myth, and another thing to show what Prometheus was Parentage of to Aeschylus. In the Theogony Prometheus is the Prometheus son of the nymph Clymene. In Aeschylus the father's name does not appear; but in the beginning of the play Hephaestus addresses the hero as Θέμιδος αἰπυμῆτα παῖ (18). Themis is the personification of the eternal laws of the universe. In the first verse of the Eumenides she is called the daughter of Gê. In the Theogony Zeus is victorious over the Titans, thanks to the counsel of Gê. Aeschylus wished to respect the Hesiodic tradition up to a certain point; hence he makes Gê the mother of Prometheus. The conceptions are abstract. So the mysterious power of Destiny is represented sometimes by three (516), sometimes by one person, Moira par excellence. But the cult of his native land justified Aeschylus in identifying Themis with Gê. The excavations at the theater of Dionysus have laid bare a seat of honor intended for the priestess of Gê-Themis. In the Eumenides Aeschylus represents Themis as succeeding to the presidency of the oracle; here he conforms to the traditions of Delphi. The revelation of the secret of the fatal marriage was attributed in ancient myth to Themis. Here again we see that the poet wished to conform to the tradition, from which he had departed, and so in our play represents Prometheus as the son of Themis.

4. THE GENERATION OF FIRE ¹

1. The most primitive method of obtaining fire, by rubbing two sticks together, was early superseded by the twirling motion of a stick (πυρραῖον) resting upon a board or other piece of wood — a practice in vogue in India to-day for kindling the sacrificial fire. The ends of a twisted string were fastened to the ends of a stick shaped like a bow, which was then moved to and fro. For the board, ivy was considered best; for the stick, laurel or wild vine. The first mention of the spark struck from stone is Sophocles, Philoctetes 295. Flint and pyrites were the best. Iron was unusual (Lucretius 6. 112 first). The spark was caught in sulphur, fungi, leaves, or shavings. The reed (νάρθηξ, ferula) was used for preserving live coals (cp. Prom. 109).

5. THE NAME

Prometheus means Foresight, Forethought (or Forethinker). Earth, sky, sun, wind, rain, lightning, all seem to primitive man to be endowed with life (since motion and action are the chief marks of life) ; hence, also, with will and intention ; and are, consequently, persons. If these beings surround him, he cannot live in their midst with impunity ; he must establish a modus vivendi ; he finds himself in a certain society, and must govern himself accordingly. Whatever the ultimate origin of "Prometheus," in the Greek consciousness, at least, there was no connection with pramanthas,¹ the Indian name for the twirling-stick. Prometheus is an Attic god despite the fact that most of the Greek deities are neither autochthonous nor Asiatic, but a resultant of the two forces. Etymology has been racked to explain the origin of the Greek deities, but it is not at all trustworthy. Proper names will not accommodate themselves to stern phonetic laws. If imported, they undergo such changes as to be unrecognizable in the new tongue. Aphrodite was an Oriental goddess ; hence Socrates' etymology (in Plato's Cratylus) could not be correct. The Greeks, like the Hindus, could not separate the name from the thing ; there was, it seemed, a necessary connection between them, or, as Plato puts it, ὄνομα διδασκαλικόν τί ἐστιν ὄργανον (Crat. 388 B), and proper names suffered little change. Prometheus meant Forethinker to the Greeks from the earliest times. We underestimate the enormous stretch of old tradition. Hieratic poetry served to keep the names and the genealogy of the gods alive. In the Theogony of Hesiod we see an attempt to concentrate that tradition. The priests were the repositories of genealogical lore, and, vast as this was, the tradition was often accurate.

6. THE ATTIC GOD

1. The cult of Prometheus is preëminently Attic. Whether the myth of Prometheus is of Indo-Germanic origin or not, the cult is un-Aryan. A relationship in language does not presuppose a similar connection in religious ideas. Hindus and Greeks created their gods after their own image; but the Hellenic religion was never forged in the bonds of theology. For this reason the poet will help us to understand the Greek religion better than the priest.

2. Prometheus is not mentioned by Homer. It was from the Hesiodic tradition that the Athenians derived their belief. What-
nian belief ever may be said about the small number of personal allusions in this preëminently Athenian drama, the reference to the Attic claim to the invaluable gifts to the human race, as against the claim of the other Greek states, in verse 506 of our play, is unmistakable. The Argives assigned the gift of fire to Phoroneus. The Athenian poet represents Prometheus as the giver of fire, as the first house-builder and astronomer, as the first to teach men the use of numbers and letters, as the domesticator of the horse and the inventor of ships, and as the first to interpret dreams and to utilize metals in the arts.—Aeschylus is probably the only ancient writer who ascribes house-building to Prometheus. In Argos it was the son of Inachus and Melia (Son of Ash) that built the ἄστυ Φορωνικόν. Pliny tells us that Cecrops was the first to build a city, Euryalus and Hyperbius the first house-builders.—In Argolis astronomy was ascribed to Palamedes, or to his father Nauplius. Numbers and counting, as well as letters, were generally thought to be the invention of Palamedes.—Erichthonius is more frequently referred to in antiquity as the domesticator of the horse. — Nauplius was the inventor of ships according to Apollonius. In Argive mythology Athena helped Danaus to build the first penteconter. — The Athenians of the fifth century evidently did not regard Prometheus as the fashioner of men, though this was the creed of the Phocians; indeed, the spot where he made them from clay was still pointed out in the time of Pausanias. Such a faith could not easily find a lodgment on Attic soil, since it was not in consonance with the belief in autochthony. — In the Argive-Theban cycle of myths the interpretation of dreams is attributed to Amphiaraus. — According to Pliny, Erichthonius was the inventor of money, whereas Hyginus says that he introduced the use of silver, which had been discovered by Indus. Others mention Lynceus, Cadmus, and Aeacus.

7. THE TORCH RACE

It is deserted now, but once it bore
 Thy name, Prometheus; there the emulous youths Bore to thy honour thro' the divine gloom
 The lamp that was thine emblem: even as those Who bear the untransmitted torch of hope
 Into the grave, across the night of life,
 As thou hast borne it most triumphantly
 To this far goal of time.

— SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound, 3. 3. 167 ff.

I. Torch races were held regularly at five different festivals: Prometheia, Hephaisteia, Panathenaia, Bendideia, Paneia. The first three were very important, and were intimately associated. The gymnasiarchs spent enormous sums of money on them. The cult of the Thracian goddess Bendis was new in the time of Socrates. The festival in honor of Pan was also a more recent institution. Harpocration, and the scholiast on Ranae 131, speak only of the first three. The scholiast on Oedipus Coloneus 55 says: καὶ ἔστιν αὐτοῦ παλαιὸν ἴδρυμα καὶ βωμὸς ἐν τῷ τεμένει τῆς θεοῦ. δαίκνυται δὲ καὶ βάσις ἀρχαία κατὰ τὴν εἴσοδον, ἐν ἣ τού τε Προμηθέως ἔστι τύπος καὶ τοῦ Ἡφαίστου. πεποιήται δὲ ὁ μὲν Προμηθεὺς πρῶτος καὶ πρεσβύτερος ἐν δεξιᾷ σκῆπτρον ἔχων. ὁ δὲ Ἡφαιστος νέος καὶ δεύτερος.¹ There were torch races on horseback as well as on foot.

Of the latter there were two kinds, relay and continuous. The participants were young men, generally naked. Sometimes they wore osier wreaths, symbolical, probably, of the chains which Prometheus wore. The festival was held on dark nights, if possible. The torches were lighted at the altar of Prometheus, in the Academy just south of Colonus, from which the race started. The course lay through the outer Ceramicus to the Dipylon.² From one of the two fragments of the Prometheus Purkaeus it appears that pitch torches must have been used sometimes. From vase paintings, on the other hand, and from coins, it is evident that wax torches were commoner.

They were placed in a candlestick having a shield just below the socket (usually) and a handle like that of a dirk. The signal to start was given from the top of a tower. If the torch of the first runner was extinguished, the second received the prize; if the latter did not keep his torch burning to the end of the course, the third won; if all the torches went out, nobody was victorious.

τοιοῖδε τοί μοι λαμπαδηφόρων νόμοι, ἄλλος παρ' ἄλλον διαδοχαῖς πληρούμενοι.
νικᾷ δ' ὁ πρῶτος καὶ τελευταῖος δραμών.

Such are the rules prescribed the flambeau bearers:

The torch to his successor passing on,

He beats that's first and also last in running.

If the race was a relay, the line which succeeded in carrying the torch through the course unextinguished first, won the prize. No other Athenian festival was celebrated so frequently. In the Corpus Inscriptionum Atticarum appear the names of thirteen victors.

² The altar of Eros in the Academy was the starting place of the other torch races. From the cult of the fire gods it was introduced into the festivals of the light gods.

8. THE MYTH OF IO

1. The story of Io has no connection with the story of Prometheus. Aeschylus was, so far as we know, the first to associate them, the first to direct the course of the victim of Zeus's love ἄβροτον εἰς ἐρημίαν, where the victim of his hate was suffering. When the poet wrote the Supplices he did not seem to suspect the connection. In that play Io crosses the Thracian Bosphorus and traverses Asia Minor and Syria to reach Egypt (the direct course). In the Prometheus she crosses the Cimmerian Bosphorus. The countries she visits are at the ends of the world. The poet was obliged to change the route, even extend it immoderately to meet the requirements of the play. Prometheus could not come to her; she had to come to the mountain to which the Titan was bound. The purpose of the innovation in the story was to bring Prometheus and the ancestress of his liberator face to face.

In the Supplices and Prometheus

9. THE LEGENDS AS VIEWED BY THE POET

1. The ancient poet fashioned the material of the myth to suit his design. We must accept the picture as the fantasy of the poet has given it to us, without trying to reconstruct a harmonious whole from the fragments that have come down to us, those in one play being apparently contradictory to the version of the same story in another. If we endeavor to reason them out, we shall do what all other philosophers, ancient and modern, have done, — fail to recognize that poetry (particularly in its oldest and most powerful form, the myth) gives a complete picture of the moods and views of a certain time and culture, and hence is optimistic and pessimistic at the same time. Both Job and Prometheus intermingle expressions of trust in the future with despairing cries — the latter, when their thoughts revert to the present.¹ Philosophical abstraction will not solve the riddles of a drama like the Prometheus. We cannot reduce every tragedy to a fundamental idea. The fabula docet is not older than the fabula. We must not make the mistake of hunting for some dead formula, and thus fail to see in the action the main point, to apprehend the activity of the poet in the dramatization of the myth. Aeschylus took up the Prometheus and the Io myths into himself, and gave them a new birth from his soul, from his "dichterischen Kopf," as Schiller would say, not the isolated story of the pilfering of fire, but the real content, the pith and marrow of the whole legend. In its rebirth the story inherits Aeschylean traits; what Aeschylus retained of the old myth was entirely conventional.²

² Cp. Racine, Second Preface to Andromaque: "il ne faut point s'amuser à chicaner les poètes pour quelques changements qu'ils ont pu faire dans la fable; mais il faut s'attacher à considérer l'excellent usage qu'ils ont fait de ces changements, et la manière ingénieuse dont ils sont su accommoder la fable à leur sujet." One of the best examples of the freedom with which the poet feels he may handle the myth is the Supplices of Euripides. The seven mothers are in the chorus; yet the audience knows that some of them cannot be in Eleusis. There are seven corpses; but neither Polynices nor Amphiaras was brought back from Thebes.

The Death of Aeschylus

V.—THE ILLUSTRATIONS

1. Frontispiece. Capitoline Bust of Aeschylus, from a photograph.
2. Page 115. The Death of Aeschylus. A paste in the Stosch cabinet, representing symbolically an apotheosis of the poet. See Baumeister, Denkmäler des klassischen Altertums, 1, p. 34; Winckelmann, Monumenta Inedita, 1, p. 167; Göttling, De morte fabulosa Aeschyli, Jena, 1854. The tortoise (the lyre) rises on the pinions of the eagle toward heaven, while the poet revels in the gift of Dionysus. It was from the striking resemblance of this head that Melchiorri recognized the large bust in the Capitoline Museum as that of Aeschylus. The high forehead and the contracted brow indicate deep meditation and a firm will.
3. Verse 1. Hephaestus. Bust in the Vatican. See Brunn, Annali del Istituto Archeologico, 1863, p. 425. The god who binds Prometheus is the prototype of all smiths, the κλυτοτέχνης of Homer, who skillfully fashions metal — ἰδύησιν πραπίδεσσιν (a phrase used of Hephaestus alone). The traits which Homer gives him (πολύφρων Θ 297, πολύμητις Φ 355) are seen in our picture, in contradistinction to the numerous representations which reflect the coarse features of the βάνανσος. The dominating trait is a tranquil sober-mindedness. There is a certain dignity about the expression and in the arrangement of the hair (falling in small locks under the high hat), which reminds one of Zeus, and lends to the deity a majesty which is found only in this, the best of all known representations of the divine smith.
4. Verse 88. Prometheus Bound. An Argive bronze relief found in Olympia; it antedates the play by at least one hundred years. In our picture, which is after Milchhöfer (Anfänge der Kunst in Griechenland, p. 185), the bonds do not appear. See Gardner, Handbook of Greek Archaeology, p. 63, fig. 2 (after Olympia IV, pl. 39, fig. 699 a), where the fetters are represented.
5. Verse 88. Hephaestus with Attributes. A bronze statuette in Berlin. See Hirt, Bilderbuch 6. 2; Roscher, Lexicon der Griechischen und Römischen Mythologie, p. 2044. This figure shows almost as noble a countenance as the preceding. The treatment of the hair is also equally fine. The features and the expression of intelligence are particularly noteworthy. The statuette forms a group with the similar figures in Vienna and in London (v. Sacken, Antike Bronzen des k. k. Münz-Kabinetts, Taf. 19, 3).

6. Verse 436. Heracles and Atlas. An Attic lekythos from Eretria (Athens, Centr. Mus., Invent. 1006). See Journal of Hellenic Studies, 12 (1892), pl. 3. Heracles is supporting with his hands and left shoulder (cp. Prom. 350, 429) a firmament studded with stars and a crescent moon. Cp. Hes. Theog. 517: "Ἄτλας δ' οὐρανὸν εὐρὺν ἔχει . . . πρόπαρ Ἑσπερίδων . . . κεφαλῇ τε καὶ ἀκαμάτησι χέρεσσι (for the adventure in the garden of the Hesperides see Pherecydes, Fr. 33). The lion's skin (under which is a chiton falling in heavy folds) is confined by a girdle and fits tightly to the body. The tail of this skin is tucked up under a belt; the lowest extremity of a sword is visible. Holding the apples of Hesperides in his outstretched hands, and striding toward Heracles, is Atlas, a tall muscular figure with a flowing beard and long hair tied up with a purple fillet. The left hand is drawn as a right (not an unusual mistake, apparently, among Greek artists; cp. Lyssa in a painting on a mixing bowl in the British Museum, Catalogue 4, pp. 136 ff., F 279). In the empty space between Heracles and Atlas are the bow, quiver, and club (ῥίψας τόξον ἔραζε, πολύρραπτόν τε φαρέτρην, Theocr. 25, 265). The rest of the space is ornamented with dots and lines imitating inscriptions. Differently from the representation on an amphora in the British Museum (Catalogue 864, J. H. S. 4, pl. 30), where Heracles, perfectly nude, and provided with a cushion to receive the heavy load upon his shoulder, is assisted by a Hesperide in bearing his burden, here the full weight of the heavens is supported by Heracles unaided. The tense muscles and hard set feet plainly indicate that the burden is not light. The stooping posture suggests weariness and, at the same time, gives scope for curving lines. The figure of Atlas, in spite of the exaggeration of calf and buttock, is drawn with vigor, and presupposes an exceptional knowledge of anatomical detail. The picture represents an episode in that great journey which Heracles takes to the Occident (the counterpart of Io's to the Orient), foretold by Prometheus at the time of his deliverance, and described in the Prometheus Luomenos. See Introd. 2, 13, 3.

7. Verse 561. Hermes, Io, and Argus. A wall painting found in the house of Germanicus on the Palatine. See Helbig, Untersuchungen, 140 ff., Woltmann, Geschichte der Malerei, 1, 56, Monumenti del Instituto Archeologico, 11. 22. On a rock in front of a pillar, which supports the statue of a goddess (Hera), sits the wretched Io. On the right, armed with sword and spear, stands Argus, his right arm resting on the rock and his gaze fixed on the hapless maiden committed to his care. He is totally unaware of the danger which threatens him. On the left is Hermes partly hidden by the rock. He seems to be twirling his caduceus unconcernedly in his fingers; but the direction of his gaze and the expression on his face indicate how carefully he is surveying the situation.

8. Verse 609. Hermes slaying Argus. A vase painting in the Museo Nazionale, Naples. Date about the same as our play. See Engelmann, Jahrbuch des kaiserlichen deutschen archaologischen Instituts, 18 (1904), p. 37 ff., Tafel 2. Three views of the vase (which is 0.27 m. high) are shown in the cut. The inscriptions are $\text{HEPME}\Sigma \text{APA}\text{O}\Sigma$ (with early Attic gamma). Striding toward the prostrate Argus is Hermes with sword drawn in his right hand, his left being extended toward his victim, who, although endeavoring to avoid the blow, holds up his right hand toward his assailant, while he supports himself on his left. Both are bearded. A score of eyes are visible on the body of Argus. Io has the form of a heifer, and is walking peacefully away from the scene.
9. Verse 687. The Death of Argus. A painting on a red-figured hydria of the "severe" Attic style. Formerly in the collection of Signor Pascale at Santa Maria di Capua; acquired by Dr. J. C. Hoppin in 1898. The vase is in perfect condition, the glaze and decoration being exceptionally fine. See Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, 12 (1901), p. 335. In the center stands Argus, with a club in his right hand and a leopard's skin over his left arm. A short sword is suspended from a belt which passes round his left shoulder and under his left arm. He has a fur pilos on his head; and he wears high boots with horizontal stripes. Distributed over his body are twelve eyes (one under his left boot is not visible in the drawing). With his left hand he is making a fearful gesture toward the rear, while he casts a look of terror in the same direction. Hermes, clad in a chlamys fastened at the neck by a button, is advancing toward the watchful herdsman, at the same time drawing his sword. A Doric column stands between the assailant and his victim. Behind the god is an altar, while at the extreme right of the group stands Hera, clad in chiton, himation, and saccos, and wearing bracelets and earrings. Both hands are raised in an attitude of astonishment. On the other side of Argus is a heifer galloping away to the left. Four small bushes are seen in the field below. Facing Io is a priestess in chiton and himation, holding a temple key in her right hand and a scepter in her left. She wears a necklace, earrings, and bracelets. Behind the priestess, on the extreme left, is Zeus, leaning on a staff and clad in a himation. He is resting his right hand on his hip, the left being raised in astonishment. The earliest known picture of Io was on the Amyclean throne (Pausan. 3. 18. 9), where she is represented as a heifer in the presence of Hera. According to all old plastic representations of the myth, Argus met his death by the sword of Hermes, not by a sickle nor by a stone. In the Prometheus Io says merely, "A sudden doom he looked not for cut him off from living" (6So f.). In the Hoppin hydria two new features are added to the scenes portrayed in the three older vase paintings: a priestess and a temple (represented by the column and altar). The bushes point to the grove mentioned by Apollodorus as the scene of the slaughter. This was in the Argolic plain, the sacred temenos of the Argive Heraeum: —

 Ἴω γενέσθαι τῆδ' ἐν Ἀργείᾳ χθονί.

This is the only painting in which Argus is given a sword and boots. The leopard skin is his customary attribute. The heifer is more satisfactorily treated here than in the other vase paintings. Only one horn and one hind leg are visible; but the spirited dash of the breeze-stung animal is clearly represented.

11. Verse 1026. Heracles rescues Prometheus. A painting on a reddish yellow clay vase in the Karlsruhe collection brought from La Tolfa (Civita Vecchia) in 1888. See Jahrbuch des archäologischen Instituts, 4 (1889), pl. 5, 6, fig. 1. In the center is Prometheus, naked, wearing a long beard (upper lip shaven) and long hair, in reclining posture. The right arm is raised; his left (on which he is partly supporting his weight) is on the ground. From his back projects the end of an arrow.

On the right an eagle, with outspread wings, is rushing toward the captive — καὶ οἱ ἐπ' αἰετὸν ὤρσε τανύπτερον (Hes. Theog. 523). On the left Heracles is seen approaching in great haste. He is clad in a short tunic and a lion's skin; his open quiver, which is full of arrows, is hanging by his left side. He has already shot two arrows at the vulture, and is about to discharge a third. Behind Heracles stands Athene (not visible in the picture), holding a spear in her left hand, while she extends the right as if to protect the bowman. The part to the right of the eagle is in a very fragmentary condition. The lower parts of two more figures are discernible in the painting, one of which is seated, the other taking long strides; the former represents Zeus, the latter Hermes. The inscriptions are meaningless.

12. Page 315. The Liberation of Prometheus by Heracles. See O. Jahn, Die Wandgemälde des Columbariums in der Villa Pamfili (Abhandlungen der kaiserlichen bayerischen Akademie der Wissenschaften) 8, 2 (Tafel 1, 3). On the left stands Prometheus, naked, with outstretched arms bound to a wall of rock, and bearing his weight on his extended right leg, while his left, with bent knee, is supported on a ledge. At his right side stands an eagle, tearing his breast. In general, the posture of the prisoner is the same as in many other similar representations of the captive Titan, with the single exception that in the others the right knee, which serves as a resting place for the vulture, is bent, and the left leg extended. Heracles, who is hidden from the prisoner by a tree, supports himself on his right knee, which is resting on a rocky elevation. The moment which the artist has chosen to represent is that immediately preceding the discharge of the arrow. The bow is bent; Heracles' eyes are fixed on the eagle; his quiver, filled with arrows, is suspended on the left side by a strap, extending round the right shoulder; the traditional lion's skin is wanting. The execution of this figure is not so good as the conception. Behind Heracles stands Athene. On her head is a helmet; in her left hand a shield adorned with the Gorgon's head. She wears a long chiton and a mantle. With her right hand she points toward the mark at which Heracles is to aim.

Προμηθέως ἐν Σκυθίᾳ δεδεμένου διὰ τὸ κεκλοφέναι τὸ πῦρ πυνθάνεται Ἴω πλανωμένη ὅτι κατ' Αἴγυπτον γενομένη ἐκ τῆς ἐπαφήσεως τοῦ Διὸς τέξεται τὸν Ἑπαφον. Ἐρμῆς δὲ παράγεται ἀπειλῶν αὐτῷ κεραινωθήσεσθαι, ἐὰν μὴ εἴπῃ τὰ μέλλοντα ἔσεσθαι τῷ Δίῃ. προέλεγε γὰρ ὁ Προμηθεὺς ὡς ἐξωσθήσεται ὁ Ζεὺς τῆς ἀρχῆς ὑπὸ τινος οἰκείου υἱοῦ. τέλος δὲ βροντῆς γενομένης ἀφανῆς ὁ Προμηθεὺς γίνεται.

Κεῖται δὲ ἡ μυθοποιία ἐν παρεκβάσει παρὰ Σοφοκλεῖ ἐν Κολχίσι, παρὰ δὲ Εὐριπίδῃ ὅλως οὐ κεῖται. ἡ μὲν σκηνὴ τοῦ δράματος ὑπόκειται ἐν Σκυθίᾳ ἐπὶ τὸ Καυκάσιον ὄρος· ὁ δὲ χορὸς συνέστηκεν ἐξ Ὀκεανίδων νυμφῶν. τὸ δὲ κεφάλαιον αὐτοῦ ἐστὶ Προμηθέως δέσις.

Ἰστέον δὲ ὅτι οὐ κατὰ τὸν κοινὸν λόγον ἐν Καυκάσῳ φησὶ δεδέσθαι τὸν Προμηθέα, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τοῖς Εὐρωπαϊοῖς μέρεσι τοῦ Ὀκεανοῦ, ὡς ἀπὸ τῶν πρὸς τὴν Ἴω λεγομένων ἔξεστι συμβαλεῖν.

ΑΛΛΩΞ

Προμηθέως ἐκ Διὸς κεκλοφότης τὸ πῦρ καὶ δεδωκότος ἀνθρώποις, δι' οὗ τέχνας πάσας ἀνθρωποὶ εὗροντο, ὀργισθεὶς ὁ Ζεὺς παραδίδωσιν αὐτὸν Κράτει καὶ Βίᾳ, τοῖς αὐτοῦ ὑπηρέταις, καὶ Ἠφαίστῳ, ὡς ἂν ἀγαγόντες πρὸς τὸ Καυκάσιον ὄρος δεσμοῖς σιδηροῖς αὐτὸν ἐκεῖ προσηλώσαιεν. οὗ γενομένου παραγίνονται πάντα αἱ Ὀκεαναῖαι νύμφαι πρὸς παραμυθίαν αὐτοῦ καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ Ὀκεανός, ὃς δὴ καὶ λέγει τῷ Προμηθεῖ, ἵνα ἀπελθὼν πρὸς τὸν Δία δεήσῃσι καὶ λιταῖς πείσῃ αὐτὸν ἐκλύσαι τοῦ δεσμοῦ Προμηθέα. καὶ Προμηθεὺς οὐκ ἐᾷ, τὸ τοῦ Διὸς εἰδὼς ἄκαμπτον καὶ θρασύ. καὶ ἀναχωρήσαντος τοῦ Ὀκεανοῦ παραγίνεται Ἴω πλανωμένη, ἡ τοῦ Ἰνάχου, καὶ μανθάνει παρ' αὐτοῦ ἅ τε πέπονθε καὶ ἅ πείσεται, καὶ ὅτι τις τῶν αὐτῆς ἀπογόνων λύσει αὐτόν, ὃς ἦν ὁ Διὸς Ἡρακλῆς, καὶ ὅτι ἐκ τῆς ἐπαφήσεως τοῦ Διὸς τέξει τὸν Ἐπιφον. θρασυστομοῦντι δὲ Προμηθεῖ κατὰ Διὸς ὡς ἐκπεσεῖται τῆς ἀρχῆς ὑφ' οὗ τέξεται παιδὸς καὶ ἄλλα βλάβσφημα λέγοντι παραγίνεται Ἐρμῆς, Διὸς πέμψαντος. ἀπειλῶν αὐτῷ κεραυνόν, εἰ μὴ τὰ μέλλοντα συμβήσεσθαι τῷ Διὶ εἴπη· καὶ μὴ βουλόμενον βροντῇ καταρραγεῖσα αὐτὸν ἀφανίζει.

ΚΡΑΤΟΣ

Χθονὸς μὲν εἰς τηλουρόν ἤκομεν πέδον,
 Σκύθην ἐς οἶμον, ἄβροτον εἰς ἐρημίαν.

1. The scene is "Far o'er Scythia's pathless plains, | Ne'er by foot of mortal trod." Enter, from the left, Kratos and Bia dragging Prometheus, and Hephaestus with his tools.

1-127. The prologue. First scene, 1-87; second scene, 88-127. The entrance of the chorus is announced in 115-127. In Pers., Suppl. the chorus enters the stage, in Eum. it is already on the stage, at the opening.

1. μὲν: the arrival) (δέ, the pinioning. — τηλουρόν: remote. "at the great limit of the world." Cp. 418. — πέδον: with χθονός, earth-ground = γῆν. Cp. 734.

2. Prometheus is taken to a "dreary plain, forlorn and wild, the seat of desolation," to be bound in adamantine bands. — Σκύθην: adj. — ἐς: the prep. between modifier and subst. is not remarkable in Latin prose; hence, one is liable to overlook the significance of the position in Greek. Aeschylus is fond of this poetic order (δ, ις, ββ, ιιγ, ιαδ, etc.).

Ἡφαιστε, σοὶ δὲ χρὴ μέλειν ἐπιστολὰς

 Attic inscriptions before 380 B.C. ἔς, afterwards εἰς; but ἔς held Eric till 100 B.C. Thucydides says uses ἔς. Aeschylus often repeats the preposition in such appositional phrases, but more freq. omits. — εἶπον: tract, fem., but orig. masc. Cp. Tr. 239
 ἀπλῆ γὰρ οἶμος εἰς Ἄιδου φέροι;
 where the primary meaning appears (tract). — A tribrach in the 3d foot occurs freq. in this play. — ἄβροτον: peopleless, not “a peopled desert.” nor a “populous solitude” (Byron), but “the wide, gray, lampless, deep, unpeopled world” (Shelley, Centi, 5. 4. 59), “the wide desert where no life is found.” Cp. Eur. Bauch. 875 βροτῶν ἐρημίαις, Sophl. Phil. 1 f.
 ἀκτὴ μὲν ἦδε . . . βροτῶς ἀστυπιος οἶδ’ οἰκομένη. — The appositional phrase specifies the character of the Scythian tract. Cp. 270, Ac. Ach. 704 τῇ Σαυθῶν ἐρημίᾳ.

3. “And now | What rests but that the mortal sentence pass |
 On his transgression” (Milton, P.L. 10. 48 ff.). — Ἡφαιστε. the omission of δ, except in poetry and in later Greek, is as remarkable as the use of the corresponding interjection in Latin.

and betokens brusqueness. In Demosthenes’ speech against Leptires, where the tone is ex genere quietiore, the omission is unceremonious, in the De Corona, slighting (Αἰσχίνη). Cp. 144, 635. In quiet discourse the voc.
 is not, as a rule, placed at the head of the sentence. CS. 20, 21. — σοὶ δὲ χρὴ κτέ.: “on thee devolves the execution of the high commands.” — μέλειν: as in Eur. Hiph. 60, but usually impers.
 with the gen. — ἐπιστολὰς: man- dates (= ἐπιτολὰς, 12), subj. of μέλειν. ἐπί is the commonest prep. in cpds. in Aesch. The article is really explicit, since ἄς σοι πατὴρ ἐφέιτο (imposed) = τὰς ἐπιτολὰς πατρός (Siphil.
 1012). So sometimes in prose.
 The rel. was to the Greek the article “subordinate,” ὑποτακτικόν) (the def. article, προτακτικόν, “proördinate.”)

4. ἄς: in later Greek the cpd.
 gains on the simple form; in the classic period ἄςτις is never used without color. — πατὴρ: the article is implicit (poet.). — τόνδε: deictic; hence dramatic. — πέτραις:
 (masses of) rock.

5. “Far beneath the earth and ocean spread, | Round him are ἀδαμαντίνων δεσμῶν ἐν ἀρρήκτοις πέδαις.

 τὸ σὸν γὰρ ἄνθος, παντέχνου πυρὸς σέλας, θνητοῖσι κλέψας ὤπασεν · τοιᾶσδέ τοι ἁμαρτίας σφε δεῖ θεοῖς δοῦναι δίκην, icy rocks, and loudly blow | Contending tempests on his naked head" (Byron, Childe Harold, 3.

 45). — τόν: the first article in the play, in spite of the numerous sub-stantives. — λεωργόν: = prose παν-οὔργον, from λέως, completely (in the sense of ἅπαν) + -οργός.
 Cp. Archil. 79 σὺ δ' ἔργ' ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων ὄρας λεωργὰ καὶ θεμιστά. — ὀχμάσαι: fasten (with an ὄχμα = ἔχμα, halter, band). Cp. the opening of Lucian's Prometheus: τουτοὶ Τυτᾶνα προσηλώσθαι.

6. An anapaest occurs only in the first foot of the trimeter in Aesch. (exc. Sept. 569 — a proper name), and always in one word.
 Cp. 353, 796, 805, 849. Absence of caesura is freq. — ἀδαμαντίνων:
steel. Hesiod calls it πολίός (gray) and χλωρός (green). Cp. Pind.
Fr. 88 ἐξ ἀδάμαντος ἢ σιδάρον.
 The Spanish poet uses jasper,
 "Sobre cimientos de piedra . . . montes de jasper" (Calderon, La Vida es Sueño, 1. 3). — δεσμῶν: generic (πέδαις, specific).

7. ἄνθος: bloom; hence em- bellishment, not Kipling's "red flower." Cp. Democr. Fr. 205 γήραος δὲ σωφροσύνη ἄνθος. — παντέχνου: cp. 110 f., 254, and Schiller, Das Lied von der Glocke, 157 ff. "Wohlthätig ist des Feuers

 Macht, | Wenn sie der Mensch
 bezähmt, bewacht, | Und was er
 bildet, was er schafft, | Das dankt er dieser Himmelskraft." — πυρὸς σέλας: circumlocution for πῦρ, the gen. being possessive (like Τυδέως βίη, Sept. 571). Cp. T 375 ὄτ' ἂν ἐκ πόντοιο σέλας ναύτησι φανήη | καιομένοιοι πυρός, Hes. Theog. 566 πυρὸς τηλέσκοπον αὐγὴν, Pind. P.
 3. 39 σέλας Ἀφαιίστου.

8. θνητοῖσι: prose ἀνθρώποις.
 — ὤπασεν: prose ἔδωκεν. Cp. 83, 946. — τοιᾶσδε: like ὅδε, dramatic;
 more freq. in Hdt. than in Thuc., who uses τοιοῦτος more (oratio instead of sermo). — τοί: ja.

9. ἁμαρτίας: gen. of crime. — σφέ: prose αὐτόν, freq. in tragedy; in Homer always plural. — The
 dat. after δεῖ with inf. is more usual. Cp. 3 and 16, but 730 σε
 χρή. — δοῦναι δίκην: be punished, pass. of δίκην λαβεῖν (legal language). In this phrase, δίκην retains its old signification; elsewhere in Att. prose (exc. personified and in stereotyped phrases) = lawsuit.

10. ὡς ἂν: more circumstantial, more cautious than simple ὡς. Cp. 654, 706, A.J.P. 4. 422. Aeschylus has twice as many examples of ὡς as ὡς ἂν. Aristophanes has only two examples of ὡς, fifteen of ὡς ἂν. GMT. 325, 326.

11. στέργειν: submit to. Cp. Eur. Hērph. 461 εἰ μὴ τοῦσδε γε στέρξεις νόμους. — φιλανθρώπου: juxtaposed with στέργειν—change from loving men to loving (accepting the sway of) Zeus. Prometheus says, in the Aves of Aristophanes (1545), αἰί ποτ' ἀνθρώποις γὰρ εὖνους εἴμ' ἐγώ.

12. Κράτος Βία τε: Introd. II. 3. 1. Cp. Hes. Theog. 385 Κράτος ἠδὲ Βίην ἀριδείκετα γείνατο (i.e. Στύξ) τέκνα. In prose τε may connect words, but not sentences. — σφῶν: dat. (gen. σφῶν, not in Aesch.).

13. 'Your part of the task is finished and there is nothing to detain you.' Hephaestus has not yet fulfilled the commission of Zeus, and his feeling for Prometheus, a συγγενῆς θεός, is ἐμποδῶν. — ἔχει τέλος: = τετέλεσται. So ἔχει κῦρος = κεκύρωται (Soph. O.C. 1779). — δῆ: demonstrative, almost voilà.

14. "To thee unwillingly, most unwillingly I come, | By the great Father's will driven down, | To execute a doom of new revenge" (Mercury to Prometheus in Shelley's drama). — ἄτολμός εἰμι: have not the heart. Cp. τόλμησον (999) incline your heart. — συγγενῆ: cognatus, kinsman (39. 289). not "of the same trade," as the schol. explains, for, as Hippias says (Plato. Protag. 337 D), τὸ ὁμοιον τῷ ὁμοίῳ φύσει συγγενές ἐστιν. The line is

15. φάραγγι: chasm. — δυσχει

μέρω: wintry. Cp. Shelley, P.U. 1. 20 f. "Nailed to this wall of eagle-baffling mountain, | Black, wintry, dead," 1. 41 "While from their loud abysses howling throng | The genii of the storm, urging the rage | Of whirlwind, and afflict one with keen hail," Beaum. & Fl., Wife for a Month, 4. 4 "Where nought inhabits | But night and cold, and nipping frosts, and winds | That cut the stubborn rocks and make them shiver."

16. 'Yet I must needs my spirit steel to perform the task' (τόλμαν σχεθεῖν = τολμῆσαι). Cp. Milton, Samson Ag. 1665 f. "Not willingly, but tangled in the fold of dire necessity," P.L. 10. 131 f. "but strict necessity | Subdues me and calamitous constraint." — ἀνάγκη: necessity (absolute), necesse est, "mosten of necessité"; δέ opus est (commoner in prose); χρή usus est (commoner in poetry). — τῶνδε: for the plur. cp. Soph. Ant. 468 τοῖσδε οὐκ ἀλγύνομαι. — σχεθεῖν: = σχέιν, Ep. σχεθέειν. Cp. διωκαθεῖν, ἀμνναθεῖν.

17. εὐφριάζειν: easy-heed, i.e. dally with, disregard.

18. A dactyl in the 3d foot is common, but the first syllable is always the final of a polysyllabic word (exc. 1009, 1027, where the monosyllables coalesce with the preceding). — ὀρθοβούλου: not otiose. Themis counsels ὀρθῶς, but her son is rash. — Θέμιδος: √θε, set. So in Homer θέμις = doom. Themis was the first wife of Zeus acc. to Pindar, the second acc. to Hesiod; Delphic tradition placed her abode at Delphi. — αἰπυμῆτα: lofty-minded, "Affecting thoughts coequal with the clouds" (Marlowe, 1 Tamb. 1. 2); hence unlike his mother. — "Mira vis huius allocutionis, quae paucissimis, sed aptissimis verbis simul et iustam esse Promethei causam honorifica compellatione declarat et lenissima cum reprehensione laudat animi magnitudinem" (Hermann). — παῖ: one of the few monosyllabic words of the 3d declen. that have a voc. — Verse-endings of this kind are not avoided, as in Latin (8, 23, 27, 43, 63, 73, 80, 90, etc.), though they abound in Lucretius.

19. ἄκοντά σ' ἄκων: I loth thee loth. Such combinations are freq. in the dramatists: ὀρῶν ὀρῶντα (Eur. Bacch. 470), σωφρονῶν οὐ

20 ^{and first} προσπασσαλεύσω τῷδ' ἀπανθρώπῳ πάγῳ, σώφροσιν (504). — δυσλύτοις χαλκείμασι: with brazen bonds not light to loose, a variant for the irrefragable fetters of 6. Cp. 155.

20. ἀπανθρώπῳ: "He was out cast of mannes compaignye." — πάγῳ: = ὄχθῳ. Hesych. defines πάγοι as αἱ ἐξοχαὶ τῶν πετρῶν καὶ τῶν ὀρῶν. Cp. Apoll. Rhod. 2. 1250 ff. Καυκασίων ὀρέων . . . τόθι γυῖα περὶ στυφελοῖσι πάγοισιν | ἰλόμοενος (firm-fastened) χαλκῆσιν ἀλυκτοπέδησι Προμηθεὺς | αἰετὸν ἥπιτι φέρβε.

21 ff. "Give him no liberty, | But let his bands be doubled, his ease lessen'd, | Nothing his heart desires, but vex and torture him! | Let him not sleep; nothing that's dear to Nature | Let him enjoy" (Beaum. & Fl. Island Princess, 2. 1). — ἵνα: local (five times, but final only twice). — του: with φωνὴν as well as μορφὴν (the so-called ἀπὸ κοινοῦ constr., foreign to prose, but common in poet. diction). Cp. Ag. 532 Πάρις γὰρ οὔτε συντελής πόλις ("nor Paris nor the accomplice-city"), 589 ἄλωσιν Ἴλιου τ' ἀνάστασιν, Soph. Ant. 257 οὔτε θηρὸς οὔτε του κυνῶν. In modern European languages the constr. is rarely found, though common in Old German and Old French. Cp. Lucret. 6. 1036 omnibus est rebus circumdatus appositusque (rebus abl. with circumdatus, dat. with adpositus). — βροτῶν: prose ἀνθρώπων.

22. ὄψει: governs φωνὴν as well as μορφὴν (zeugma). Cp. Sept. 103 κτύπον δέδορκα, Cowley. The Prophet, "Words that weep and tears that speak," Hamlet, 3. 2 "I will speak daggers," Beaum. & Fl. Elder Brother, 4. 4 "That severe face, that spake chains and shackles," Cupid's Revenge, 5. 3 "More sorrows than we have eyes to utter," Hor. Sat. 2. 8. 78 uideres stridere secreta diuisos aure susurros, Plaut. Aul. 2. 1. 30 lapides loqueris. The shift is not so difficult as in English, for to the Greek the eye is the prime sense of perception, and he prefers to transfer the idea to the sphere of sight from the realm or the more sluggish sense (αἴσθησις ἀντὶ αἰσθήσεως). Cp. Pers. 395 σάλπιγξ αὐτῇ ἐπέφλεγεν, Soph. O.T. 473 ἔλαμψε φάμα, Verg. Aen. 6. 165 Martemque incendere cantu, Cic. De Senec. 9. 28 canorum illud in uoce splendet. — σταθευτός: broiled (στατός — εὔω), only here in tragedy (σταθεύειν = κατ' ὀλίγον ὀπτᾶν).

χρoιᾶς ἀμείψεις ἄνθος· ἀσμένω δέ σοι
ἡ ποικιλείμων νύξ ἀποκρύψει φάος,

— ἡλίου φοίβη φλογί: by the sun's bright flame; "Burning sun and freezing storm | Wither his unsheltered form." Cp. Frankeleyne's Tale, 1247 "Phebus . . . Shoon as the burned gold with stremes brighte," Don Juan, 2. 102 "By night chilled, by day scorched," Dekker, Old Fortunatus, 4. 1 "Between my sorrow and the scalding sun I faint."

23 ff. So Shelley's portrayal (I. 44 ff.): "And yet to me welcome is day and night, | Whether one breaks the hoar frost of the morn, | Or starry, dim, and slow, the other climbs | The leaden-colored east." — Though the sufferer must "sustain the searching heat and freezing cold," and "feel by turns the bitter change | Of fierce extremes," any change is welcome, for μεταβολή πάντων γλυκύ. Dante's sufferers (Inferno, 3. 87) had a worse fate, "Nelle tenebre eterne in caldo e in cielo." As Lucian says, τοῖσι μὲν εὖ πράττουσιν ἅπας ὁ βίος βραχύς ἐστι· τοῖς δὲ κακῶς, μία νύξ ἄπλετός ἐστι χρόνος. Cp. Deuteronomy, 28. 67 "In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning!", Tennyson, St. Simeon "thrice ten years, | Thrice multiplied by superhuman pangs . . . | Rain, wind, frost, heat, hail, damp, and sleet, and snow." — χρoιᾶς: = later χρoάς. Cp. ποία, πόα, ροία, ῥοα, στοία, στoα, ποιεῖν, ποεῖν, γέραια (Eur. Hērē. 170). — ἀμείψεις: poet. and Ion. = Att. prose ἀλλάξεις, which was long in dethroning the old word (Xen., Plato, once in Dem.). — ἄνθος: color. Cp. Solon, Fr. 27. 5 χρoιῆς ἄνθος ἀμειβομένης. Sophocles of the hair, λευκανθές κάρα (O.T. 742). — ἀσμένω: on this familiar Greek idiom see GMT. 900. — σοί: dat. of interest.

24. ποικιλείμων: spangle-robed, "The golden stars from heaven's embroidered stole," "those married lights, which . . . look forth and fold the wandering globe | In liquid sleep and splendor, as a robe" (Shelley, Epipsychidion, 355). The Greeks often referred to the ἀστέρων ποικίλματα (Eur. Hel. 1096), the ἐν οὐρανῷ ποικίλματα (Plato, Rep. 529 C), as the ornaments of "the azure robe of night." Cp. Orphic Argonaut. 1026 ἀστροχίτων. They speak of the μελάμπεπλος νύξ (Eur. Ion 1150), and of the λευκόπεπλον ἡμέρην (Hipponax Fr. 32). Cp. Byron, Heaven and Earth "No

azure more shall robe the firmament | Nor spangled stars," Tennyson, Hesperides "The mantling night . . . | Purple fringed with even and dawn," Alfred de Musset, Rappelle-toi "la nuit pensive . . . sous son voile argenté." — ἀποκρύψει: second syllable long by the ictus, in spite of mute and liquid. Attic (in contrast with Epic) usually shortens before a mute and liquid.

25. πάχνην: pruinam, "on the frosty Caucasus" (Rich. II. I. 3). Prometheus must bear both "fall of rime and scorching heat of sun." Cp. 31. — σκεδᾶ: dissipabit. Cp. Lamartine, Le Lac "L'aurore va dissiper la nuit."

26 f. No cessation of agony, for the deliverer is still unborn. — ἀχθηδῶν: burden of woe. — κακοῦ: easily substantivized in any language, but, as a rule, Greek poetry is not so free as prose in the use of the adj. as a subst. GS. 36.

27. οὐ πέφυκέ πω: is UNBORN yet — emphasizing the fact that he can be released by no living soul ("for I know that my avenger liveth," says Job); had he said οὐπω πέφυκε (is NOT YET born), he might have had Heracles in mind. Cp. 511.

28. 'Such returns thy love for men has gained.' — ἐπήρου: rare in Att. prose; the 2d aor. is the only form used by the tragedians; mostly with gen., but here the acc. of inner object. Cp. Ag. 502 φρενῶν καρποῖτο τὴν ἀμαρτίαν. reap the fruit of the mind's mistake. — τρόπου: gen. of price.

29. θεὸς θεῶν: cp. ε 97 θεὰ θεόν. Cic. Verr. 4. 112, 150 deam deae. 123 deus deorum. — γάρ: has the third place in the line to juxtapose θεὸς θεῶν. Cp. Soph. Ai. 522 χάρις χάριν γὰρ ἔστιν ἢ τίκτονσ' αἰέ. — Gods are arrayed on one side, as having a common interest, against mortals. — συνέχει τὸ κοινόν (Ar. Eth. Nic. 14). The gen. θεῶν limits χόλον; there is a revival of the image with τιμᾶς. — ὑποπτήσων: cowering under, i.e. fearing (here anger. 174 threats, 960 gods). — χόλον: prose ὀργήν. Cp. Suppl. 478 ἀνάγκη Ζηνὸς αἰδεῖσθαι κότον, Verg. Aen. 1. 9 tantaene animis caelestibus irae?

30. τιμὰς: prerogatives = γέρα (107, 229). — πέρα δίκης: = παρὰ τὸ δίκαιον (beyond their due).

31. ἀνθ' ὧν: in poenam quorum (facinorum). — ἀντί: = pro, hence in return for. — ἀτερπῆ: Homeric, though borrowed by Eur. and Thuc.; acc. of inner object (a joyless watch wilt thou keep—like a sentinel at his post). Cp. 143. — φρουρήσεις πέτραν: like the Germ. das Bett hüten.

32. ἄυπνος: “Three thousand years of sleep-unsheltered hours” (Shelley, P.U. 1. 12), “devote to sleepless agony | This undeclining head . . . | I should dream I could even sleep with grief, | If slumber were denied not” (Id.). — κάμπτων γόνυ: knee bending, i.e. sitting; always so in classical Greek, never as in Hamlet. “crook the pregnant hinges of the knee” (3. 2). nor Byron’s “Our knees be bent | Before the implacable omnipotent,” but simply rest, as Catull. 64. 303 flexerunt sedibus artus. Cp. 396, H 118, T 72, Eur. Hec. 1150 ἴζω δὲ κλίνης ἐν μέσῳ κάμψας γόνυ.

By the asyndeton stress is laid on each phase of the condemned Titan’s condition.

33. ὀδυρμούς: prose ὀλοφυρμούς. — γόους: prose οἰμωγὰς, θρήνη. — ἀνωφελεῖς: unavailing.

34. δυσπαραίτητοι: vix exorabiles, not “inexorable,” for the gods can be turned by prayer and sacrifice (στρεπτοὶ δέ τε καὶ θεοὶ αὐτοί), Justice alone being inexorable (μόνη ἐστὶν ἀπαραίτητος ἀνθρώποις Δίκη). It was left for a modern to say: “Ueber uns waltet ein unbeugsames Fatum” (Schiller). 40. σύμφημι : I grant ye. — ἀνηκουστῆιν : Ep. = ἀπειθεῖν. 41. οἶόν τε : not is it allowable? as Allen-Weckl. render (which would be ἕξεστι), but is one in a position? (power originating from the circumstances).

41. δειμαίνεις : prose δέδοικας. Kratos is speaking, as Prodicus would, of δεινὸν ὡς κακὸν ὄν (Plato, Protag. 341 B), whereas Hephaestus had used the word in a different sense. So Ajax in Soph. Ai. 649 δεινὸς ὄρκος.

42. Aye, ever merciless thou in brutal boldness steeped. — The schol. pedantically wonders why Kratos is addressed in the masculine. — νηλῆς σὺ : omission of the copula is very old. Pred. and subj.

being juxtaposed, the substantive verb becomes unnecessary, — commonest in 3d pers. indic. (extremely rare in subjv.), in 1st and 2d persons usually when pron. and adj. are put side by side (47, 59, 178, 373, 987). — θράσους : reckless audacity (also, like θάρσος, true courage, which appears only in a good sense in Aesch.). The verbs (θαρρεῖν, θαρσεῖν) always connote courage.

43. ἄκος οὐδέν : boots naught. — θρηνέισθαι : = θρηνεῖν. Aesch. often uses the (older) poet. mid. form for the act, e.g. σπείδεσθαι (Eum. 360, Ag. 147), στένεσθαι (Pers. 62), ἐξαυδάσθαι (Cho. 151). Cp. Soph. Ai. 852 ἀλλ' οὐδὲν ἔργον ταῦτα θρηνεῖσθαι μάτην. — δέ : not rare at the end of a trimeter.

45. "This cursed craft" (Chaucer), "Tis a knavish piece of work" (Hamlet 3. 2), "Alas! I pity thee, and hate myself" (Mercury to Prometheus. Shelley, P.U. 1. 356). — μισηθεῖσα: (for which I have) conceived a hatred. — χειρωναξία: handicraft. "craft of mannes hond" (Chaucer), from ἄναξ and χεῖρ (Meisterschaft in einem Handwerke).

46. νίν: = αὐτήν (48); used in tragedy also for αὐτόν, αὐτό, αὐτούς, αὐτάς, αὐτά (55). Cp. Ag. 676 (νίν), 769 (αὐτόν), Eum.

49. The only office free from care is the presidency of Olympus. All are slaves but one — Zeus is Tsar. Prometheus asserts his free will against the monopolist of freedom. So Calderon's "Magico Prodigioso" against a supposed omnipotence of evil. — ἅπαντα: same as σύμπαντα. — ἐπαχθῆ: burdensome. — πλὴν: often with inf. in Aesch. 55. ἀμφί: the least common prep. in cpds. in Aesch., = prose περί (with βαλών. Cp. 52.). — χερσὶν: wrists. — ἐγκρατεῖ σθένει: “dynamic dat.” (inner power).

56. ραίστηρι: instrumental (external means); in prose σφύρα. Cp. Σ 476 f. γέντο δὲ χειρὶ | ραίστηρι (grasped a hammer). — σθένει often in Aesch., = ῥώμη (105, 362, 428), rare in prose, exc. in the inscriptions of alliance in the stereotyped phrase παντὶ σθενί. So “main” in “might and main.” — θεῖνε πασσάλευε: asyndeton — the generic word followed by the specific: smite, drive the bolt, — Kratos and Bia hold the Titan’s limbs while Hephaestus clamps him to the rock.

57. ματᾶ: Epic = διατρίβει, as in Sept. 37 μὴ ματᾶν ὀδῶ (the only examples in tragedy, exc. Eum. 142).

58. ἄρασσε: prose τύπτε. — σφίγγε: bind him tight. The modern Greek says σφίγγεται ἡ καρδιά μου. — μηδαμῆ χάλα: = σφίγγε πανταχῆ = μηδὲν χάλα.

61. πόρπασον: (from πόρπη, fibula) = πασσάλευσον (56). — ἀσφαλῶς: securely = δυσεκλύτως. — ἵνα: only here and Sept. 215 in a final sense (never so in inscriptions).

62. ἦ γὰρ σοφία τοῦ κόσμου τοῦτου μωρία παρὰ τῷ θεῷ ἐστίν (1 Cor. 3. 19). — σοφιστῆς ὧν: though astute. Here, as in 944, the word has not the later meaning of “specious dialectician.” In the period of the Attic Renaissance the sophist and the rhetorician were identical. — νωθέστερος: duller.

Epic and Ionic, only here in Aesch., originally = βραδύς, tardus (cp. Eur. H. F. 819 νωθῆς κῶλον), but later applied to the mind (iners. segnis). So Eng. slow. The νωθῆς is not like Tristram's preceptor, “acute, argute, inventive, quick in resolving doubts and speculative questions”; the σοφιστῆς possesses all these qualities. — Διὸς νωθέστερος has nothing to do with ὧν either logically or grammatically; σοφιστῆς keeps company with the participle, separate and apart from the rest of the sentence, and so appropriates it (cp. 308). The position determines the ownership. We hear an ὧν, and our mind is cheated — so are Διὸς νωθέστερος and μάθη. Examples of similar phenomena are numerous.

72. Irritation at the unseemly haste and imperiousness of Kratos is indicated both by the asyndeton and by the word ἐγκέλευε (cpds. in ἐν denoting insistence): “I will (since I must) — why this everlasting exhortation?” — δρᾶν: only three times in Homer (ο 317, 324, 333), never in the Hymns, nor Pindar, never in Herod., but not rare in Aesch. (more freq. in Eur.

and Soph.). Aristotle's statement that it is Dor. for πράττειν is not altogether true. — [μηδὲν ἄγαν: the Greek rule of action, often in Aesch. (327, Sept. 35, 246, Fr. 155).]

worked under other influences), though a few etymologies occur in Homer (a 62, τ 407). The Greeks saw in the name the destiny or character of the person,—hence the tragic interest (Io, Apollo, Polynices, Aias, Dolon, Ion, Thoas, Polus, Draco). They did not believe, with Faust, that “Name ist Schall und Rauch.” Cp. Ag. 681 ff. τίς ποτ' ὀνόμαζεν ᾧδ' ἐς τὸ πᾶν ἐτητύμως . . . τὰν δορίγαμβρον ἀμφινεικῆ θ' Ἑλέαν; ἐπεὶ πρεπόντως | Ἑλέανω, Ἑλανδρος, ἑλέπτολις κτέ., Eur. Bacch. 367 Περθεὺς ἐσομένης συμφορᾶς ἐπώνυμος. This tracing of the character in the name is freq. in Hebrew (Gen. 27. 36).

86. αὐτὸν . . . σέ: more emphatic than σεαυτόν. — δεῖ: the only example in Aesch. where the construction is acc. and gen. (freq. in Eur.). Dat. of person and gen. of thing is common and natural in prose.

cation | Turned to ocean and the sun" (Mrs. Browning, Wine of Cyprus). "I ask the Earth, have not the mountains felt? | I ask yon Heaven, the all-beholding Sun, | Has it not seen? The Sea, in storm or calm, | Have its deaf waves not heard my agony?" (Shelley, P.U. 1. 25 ff.). "Hear me, O Earth, hear me, O Hills, | O Caves, O Mountain-brooks!" (Tennyson, Oenone). All the pain pent up in the soul of Prometheus finds vent. Silent despite the compassion of Hephaestus and the taunts of Kratos, the Titan now, in his loneliness, addresses the inanimate objects of nature, summons them to witness the intolerable indignity to which he has been subjected. His mental agony swallows up the physical. It is not mere chance that two thirds of the syllables are long and that most of these contain long vowels — they portray of themselves what is expressed in the verses quoted from Shelley. — The Greeks and Romans rarely invoked the air and winds. — Cp. Γ 277 ἡέλιός θ' ὅς πάντ' ἐφορᾷς καὶ πάντ' ἐπακούεις, | καὶ ποταμοὶ

88. The nominatives denote gravity and respect. Cp. 545, Soph. Ai. 525, 585. GS. 12. — δῖος: bright (√di in Skt. = Lat. dies, diubar, Dionis). — ταχύπτεροι: more vivid than ταχείαι. Cp. Suppl. 734 νῆες ὡς ὠκύπτεροι. In classic Greek the poetic word (ὠκύς) is used in composition as often as the prose ταχύς. The figure is common in modern poets: "While the wanton zephyr sings | And in the vale perfumes his wings" (Dyer, Grongar Hill), "The eastern wind upon its wings the mighty voice would bear" (Southey, Brough Bells), "Zephyrus | On his dewy wings carries perfumes" (Beaum. & Fl. Sea-Voyage 2. 1), "Ach. um deine feuchten Schwingen, West" (Goethe). — πνοαί: Ep. πνοαί. Att. πνεύματα. Cp. 1047, 1086.

90. ἀνήριθμον γέλασμα: for

γελ. ἀνηρίθμων. The words are knit closely together. Hypallage is found also in Germ. and Eng., but is more natural in a highly inflected language. Cp. Eur. H.F. 450 γραΐας ὄσσων πηγᾶς, Suppl. 50 ῥυσὰ σαρκῶν πολιῶν καταδρύμματα, furrows on my wrinkled cheeks, Phoen. 1351 λευκοπήχεις κτύπους χερσῶν. Cp. "white wine merchant," "old furniture dealer," and the New England "hulled corn dealer."—In this oft-quoted phrase, Aeschylus refers "to the many-twinkling smile of ocean," to "the gleam (γέλασμα) | Of antediluvian ocean's stream," not, as De Quincey thought, to the sound of the wild sea waves. Poets seldom hear a note of joy in old Ocean, as Catullus 64. 273 (resonant plangore cachinni), and Scott's Lord of the Isles ("the waves laughed"); rather "The sad caressing murmur of the wave, | That breaks in tender music on the shore," or "The tremor of the circling wave, | That now with restless moans and sighs, | Sounds like the dirge-song of the dead. | Dim-breaking round a grave." The allusion here is to "the sparkling glee, | When waves and sunshine meet," "when the Sun upon the ocean smiles." Cp.

Lucret. 2. 559 subdola cum ridet placidi pellacia ponti, T 362 γέλασσε δὲ πᾶσα περὶ χθῶν | χαλκοῦ ὑπὸ στεροπῆς, Hymn to Demeter 14 γαῖά τε πᾶσ' ἐγέλασσε καὶ ἄλμυρὸν οἶδμα θαλάσσης. The verb γελᾶν is used even of the sense of smell; ὄσμῃ προσγελαῖ (Eum. 254).—παμμῆτορ τε γῆ: "Mütterlich Land, O Erde" (Klopstock, Mess. 1. 105), ὦ οὐρανέ, πατέρα μου, κ' ἡ γῆς, μάνα (mother) γλυκιά μου (Mod. Greek song from Cephalonia), γαῖαν αὐτήν, ἣ τὰ πάντα τίκτεται (Cho. 127). Cp. Hom. Hymn 31 γαῖαν παμμήτηραν. Solon 36 μήτηρ μεγίστη . . . Γῆ μέλαινα, Pausan. 10. 12 10 Γᾶ καρποὺς ἀνίει διὸ κλήζετε ματέρα γαῖαν, Eur. Fr. 195 ἅπαντα τίκτει χθῶν.

91. πανόπτην κύκλον ἡλίου: "the sun's bright circle" (Milton), "the all-seeing sun hath hid his peeping eyes" (Beaum. & Fl. Faith. Friends 1. 3). Cp. Pers. 504 λαμπρὸς ἡλίου κύκλος, Fr. 202 πανόπτας ἥλιος, Cho. 985 ὁ πάντ' ἐποπτεύων ἥλιος, On. Met. 14. 375 "qui peruidet omnia | solem." Longfellow, Eginhard "the sun who took | The empire of the world with sovereign look," Chapman. All Fools 1. 1 "The sun, the world's great eye." K. John 3. 1

“The glorious sun . . . with splendour of his precious eye.” Spenser calls the sun “the great eye of heaven” (F.Q. 3. 4); in the Edda it is “fagravhel” (fulgent wheel). — The nom. changes to voc. and then to acc. Cp. Soph. O.C. 1471, O.T. 204.

92. ἴδεσθε: prose ἴδετε. — μέ: prolepsis; a characteristic of high composition and one of the strongest marks of tragic poetry. — πρὸς θεῶν: poet. = ὑπὸ θεῶν. Cp. 1042.

93-100. The real plaint (hence anapaestic); 88-92 the apostrophe, 101 ff. sober reflection, the transition being immediate. “The note sounded in 92 echoes through the entire system. So 120-127 follows the trimeters 118-119 without break, though the five verses 115-119 differ from 88-92 in that the former are partly melic, but ἴδεσθε in 92 is recalled by ὀράτε in 119” (Smyth).

93. δέρχθητε: prose θεάσασθε. — αἰκίαισιν: contumeliis (= μόχθοις, 541, where the same participle is used). Cp. 148 (λύμυις). The punishment is severe, but the indignity is worse; οὐ γὰρ ἡ πληγὴ παρέστησε τὴν ὀργήν, ἀλλ' ἡ ἀτιμία (Dem. 21. 72). not the blow, but the disgrace aroused my anger.

94. “Ten thousand years together . . . | Upon a barren mountain, and still winter | In storm perpetual” (Winter's Tale 3. 2). “To spend uncounted years of pain, | Again, again, and yet again” (Clough, Perché Pensa?). Prometheus is beginning to feel that “the protractive trials of great Jove” are not light. — διακναιόμενος: *cruciatu*s. — τὸν μυριετῆ χρόνον: this countless time (before me) — with a wail of anguish. The article is deictic, and is a survival of the old demonstrative force. Cp. Hdt. 5. 9 ἐν τῷ μακρῷ χρόνῳ, Ar. Ran. 160 τὸν πλείω χρόνον, Soph. Ai. 342 τὸν εἰς αἰὲ χρόνον (this hateful eternity), 646 ὁ μακρὸς κἀναρίθμητος χρόνος, 713 ὁ μέγας χρόνος.

95. ἀθλεύσω: luctabor (absolute, like πονήσω), Ep. and Ion., only here in trag. (= ἀθλήσω).

96. ταγὸς: poet., Sicilian. Thessalian = ἄρχων, βασιλεύς. — μακάρων: = prose εὐδαιμόνων = θεῶν. — ἐξηῦρε: invented. Cp. 460, 469. — ἐπί: with dat. denoting hostility, as in Homer. Cp. 921. 1043, 1089.

97. δεσμὸν: abstract (so 141, but plur. in 52). — ἀεικῆ: cp. 113, 525.

98 ff. Cp. Soph. Ai. 866 πόνος πόνῳ πόνον φέρει, 1112 πόνου πολλοῦ πλέψ. Our interest in Prometheus is greater because he feels as a homo and bears up as a vir. “Non sentire mala sua non est hominis et non ferre non est viri” (Seneca, de Consol. 17. 2).

99. πῆμα: really proleptic, the idea being repeated in μόχθων (= Hom. μόνον = πόνου). Cp. 182. — στενάχω: lengthened form of στένω (Ep. = στενάζω, οὐ μώζω).

100. χρῆ: it is fated. — τέρματα: = terminum; τέλος = finem. — ἐπιτεῖλαι: rise (like a star) = ἀνατεῖλαι, hence appear. Cp. Hom. Hymn 3. 371 ἠελίοιο νέον ἐπιτελλομένοιο.

101. καίτοι τί φημι: Prometheus chides himself for his momentary weakness. — προυξέπισταμαι: for Themis was his mother (209, 874). Cp. 699. Cpds. (esp. verbs) in πρό before a vowel with which the prep. does not coalesce, are generally avoided in tragedy. Both προεξ- and ἐκπρο- occur. The Greeks could form cpds. as easily as the Germans, and much more gracefully. In Eng. such a cumulation of adverbs can appear only as postpositions: “unbroke in upon by such salutations” (Sterne, Sentimental Journey). Aesch. has 32 examples of verbal cpds. with two prepositions, but this is the only instance with three.

102. σκεθρῶς: minutely = prose ἀκριβῶς. — ποταίνιον: unexpected, proleptic and predicative. Cp. 935.

103 ff. “What is done, can not be now amended” (Rich. III. 4. 4), durum: sed leuius fit patientia, | quidquid corrigere est nefas (Hor. Od. 1. 24. 19), ῥᾶον δὲ νόσον μετὰ θ' ἠσυχίας | καὶ γενναίου λήματος οἴσεις (Eur. Hipp. 205 f.), “I seem to suffer nothing heart or limb, | But can endure it all most patiently” (Tennyson. Enid), “no remedye | It is for to

106. "Give sorrow words; the grief that does not speak, | Whispers the o'erfraught heart, and makes it break" (Macbeth 4. 3). Prometheus, like Psammenitus (Hdt. 3. 14) has grief too deep for utterance, for Curae leves loquuntur, ingentes stupent (Seneca Phaedra 615), "Grief that is expressed in words | Is slight and easy" (Field, Amends 3. 2), yet even this "expressive silence" becomes oppressive; hence he would seek some relief in recounting his woes, were it not for the pain of speaking. Cp. 197. Prometheus has "The suffocating sense of woe | Which speaks but in its loneliness" (Byron, Prometheus). — τύχας: plur. usually in a bad sense.

107. θνητοῖς: contravenes Porson's rule that the syllable before a final cretic must be short or a monosyllabic word. The pause after ἐστί makes it unobjectionable. Cp. 821.

108. πορῶν: = παρασχών. — ἀνάγκαις: cp. αἰκίαισιν (93). — ἐνέζευγμαι: a common metaphor in Aeschylus. Cp. 578, 1009. — Cp. Soph. Ai. 123 ἄτη συγκατέζευκται, Eur. Or. 1330 ἀνάγκης εἰς ζυγὸν καθέσταμεν, Hipp. 1389 οἷαις συμφοραῖς συνεζύγης, Milton, P.L. 10. 1045 "and his just yoke | Laid on our necks."

109. ναρθηκοπλήρωτον: filling (i.e. stored in) the νάρθηξ, a tall plant with a hollow pithy stalk (habent fungosam intus medullam), "the fennel, with its yellow flowers" (Longfellow). When dried it catches the spark very readily. It is used as tinder by the peasants of Southern Italy and by the Greeks, who call it κιλάμι. The stalk is five feet high and three inches thick and is covered with a hard bark. — δέ: introducing paratactically a new sentence, which is logically subordinate and explanatory. — θηρῶμαι: histor. pres. (Aryan, though not in Homer). θηρεύω is the form preferred in prose.

110. πηγὴν: the pith served as a lunt. Moreover, it was the source of all fire on earth. Cp. the Germ. "das Feuer quillt." — κλοπαίαν: filched. "You can scarce combine two ideas . . . without an hypallage" — "What's that?" cried my uncle Toby." "The cart before the horse;" ("filched source of fire" for "source of filched fire"). For similar transference of epithets

cp. 116, 129. — διδάσκαλος τέχνης: cp. Plato, Protag. 321 C κλέπτει Ἥφαιστου καὶ Ἀθηνᾶς τὴν ἔντεχον σοφίαν σὺν πυρί, Xen. Mem. 4. 3. 7 συνεργὸν δὲ πρὸς πᾶσαν τέχνην, Milton "O sacred, wise, and wisdom-giving plant, | Mother of science" (the tree of knowledge). Both the fruit and the fire were interdicted.

111. πέφηνε: has proven (rare in prose). — πόρος: resource. Cp. 477.

112. Cp. 564. 620. — ἀμπλακημάτων: prose ἀμαρτημάτων. So in 564 ἀμπλακίας = ἀμαρτίας. — ποιὰς τίνω: pay the forfeit; prose δίκην διδομι (τιμωροῦμαι).

113. ὑπαιθρίοις δεσμοῖσι: i.e. chained in the open air, exposed to view so that his enemies could gloat over him (157). instead of ὑπὸ γῆν (152). Prometheus continually refers to the indignity done him (97, 168, 177. 195, 256, 438, 525, 989). — προυσελούμενος: prose ὑβριζόμενος (only here, 438, and Ar. Ran. 730). Cp. Ar. Rhet. 2. 2. 5 ἔστι γὰρ ὕβρις τὸ βλάπτειν καὶ λυπεῖν ἐφ' οἷς αἰσχύνῃ ἐστὶ τῷ πάσχοντι.

114-127. The sufferer, hearing a rush of wings, utters an exclamation of surprise. The rhythms fluctuate with his emotions, — from bacchic, cretic, and fluttering dochmiac to the colloquial iambic, from palpitating excitement to sober reflection, — which directs attention to his own suffering (note the assonance and alliteration — form in the consonant, color in the vowel, intensified by the diphthong), so that he changes again to the lamenting anapaest, which serves at the same time to herald the approach of the chorus, and keeps time with the wing strokes (126) of the chariot.

115. ἀχώ: Dor. for ἦχώ. — ὀδμά: Dor. for ὀδμή (the older form of ὄσμη). So the dying Hippolytus perceives the presence of Artemis by a certain divine fragrance, θεῖον ὀδμῆς πνεῦμα (1391). Cp. Verg. Aen. 1. 403 ambrosiaeque comae diuinum uertice odorem | spirauere. — προσέπτα: was wafted; Dor. for προσέπτῃ (Att. prose -έπτετο), here with acc., but with dat. 555, 644. — ἀφ'εγγής: invisible, i.e. the object from which the sound and the fragrance proceed (τίς = τίνος); "From a pinion unseen | Of a god, or a mortal, or nature between" (Mrs. Browning).

116. "What age, what sex, or what profession, | Divine or human?" (Beaum. & Fl. Knight of Malta 1. 1). — θεόσυτος: the resolution is in keeping with the character of the verse; a sedate trimeter would be out of place. The tribrach is usually a single word in the first foot in Aesch. Cp. 643 (where the σ is doubled to form an iambus). — κεκραμένη: mixed, i.e. neither θεῖος nor βρότειος. Cp. 902. "Middle divinities" appear in the Edda.

117. The cretic, dochmius, and bacchic tetrameter (115) admirably portray the Titan's emotions at this moment, when he suddenly becomes conscious that some living creature is approaching. — ἵκετο: prose ἀφίκετο (supply the subj. from the preceding verse). — τερμόνιον ἐπὶ πάγον: terminal ad scopulum, to the crag at the end (of the world). Cp. 1. The adj. (from τέρμων) is ἄπαξ εἰρημένον.

πόνων ἐμῶν θεωρός, ἢ τί δὴ θέλων ;
 ὀράτε δεσμώτην με δύσποτμον θεόν, 120 τὸν Διὸς ἐχθρόν, τὸν πᾶσι θεοῖς δι' ἀπεχθείας ἐλθόνθ' ὅπόσοι τὴν Διὸς αὐλήν εἰσοιχνεῦσιν,

118. To witness my suffering, or with what motive, I wonder? Cp. Milton, Samson Ag. 110 ff. "I hear | The tread of many feet steering this way; | Perhaps my enemies, who come to stare | At my affliction, and perhaps to insult, . . . to afflict me more," Beaum. & Fl. Double Marriage 4. 2 "If in your breast there be a worthy pity, | That brings you for my comfort, you do nobly; | But if you come to triumph in your conquest, | Or tread on my calamities —." Prometheus is "neither self-possess'd | Nor startled, but between this mood and that" (Tennyson). — θέλων: of this form there is only one example in Attic inscriptions.

119. ὀράτε: indic., not imv. (as the editors and translators take it), merely apprising the visitors of the facts: "Whoever you are and whatever your object be, ye see in me a god ill-starred in bonds." Cp. 69, 612. Prometheus is not indignantly summoning the newcomer to gaze upon the victim of Zeus. Cadit ira metu. Fear and anger cannot coëxist. As Aristotle says (Rhet. 2. 3. 10), ἀδύνατον γὰρ ἄμα φοβεῖσθαι καὶ ὀργίζεσθαι, and (2. 5. 2) καὶ τὰ σημεῖα τῶν τοιούτων φοβερὰ· ἐγγὺς γὰρ φαίνεται τὸ φοβερὸν. Cp. 127. Commentators and translators ignore the article before ἐχθρόν. From the time Prometheus utters ἄ ἄ (interjections of terror, says the schol.) till he exclaims πᾶν μοι φοβερὸν τὸ προσέρπον there is no defiance in his spirit—he is panic-stricken. See Trans. Am. Phil. Assoc. 32. 64.

120. ἐχθρόν: enemy in feeling) (πολέμιον, a declared foe. "I am mark'd out | The object of their hate" (Beaum. & Fl. Prophetess 4. 2); the gen. Διὸς shows that the adj. is substantivized, while the dat. θεοῖς indicates that δι' ἀπεχθείας ἐλθόντα = adj. ἐχθρόν. So in 864, 972 ἐχθροῦς is proved a noun by the possessive ἐμοῦς.

121. ὅπόσοι: universal rel. = quotquot.

122. αὐλήν: cp. Eur. Hērō. 67 αὐλάν. | Ζηνὸς πολύχρυσον οἶκον. — εἰσοιχνεῦσιν: Ionicism = εἰσέρχονται. Cp. 645, Eur. Hērō. 167

124. φεῦ φεῦ: astonishment here, not grief. — κινάθισμα: rustling movement. The ἄχώ and ὀδμά had announced the approach of something; the rustling of wings indicates somewhat the nature of the visitor. Cp. Milton, P.L. 1. 768 "Brush with the hiss of rustling wings."

125 f. "And the air under-sings | The light stroke of the wings" (Mrs. Browning). Cp. Ag. 892 λεπταῖς κώνωπος ῥιπαῖσι (buzzing of a mosquito), Eur. Fr. 597 ταῖς ὠκυπλάνοις πτερύγων ῥιπαῖς, Verg. Aen. 12. 876 alarum uerbera.

127. φοβερὸν: act. (seldom pass.). Cp. Soph. Ai. 227 οἴμοι φοβοῦμαι τὸ προσέρπον.

128-192. The parodos (com-matic, four systems spoken by Prometheus without responsion). The chorus, daughters of Oceanus and Tethys, enter in a winged car, from which they sing. They hear the last words of Prometheus; hence their tender words of reassurance. The meter is Ionic, expressive of their sympathetic sorrow. In the second strophe the more pliant logaoc-dics are used, in consonance with the spirit of the θρήνος.

128. ἄδε: = ἡμετέρα. — τάξις: company = στάσις (only here of a non-military troop) = dispositio (rhetor. as well as military). Cp. Germ., French, and Eng. disposition.

129. In swift rivalry of wings (a speed contest in which wings, not feet, are employed). Cp. λαις: often = certaminibus. The abstract in the plur. becomes concrete, exc. in Homer and his imitators. Sometimes the plur. is used for euphonic reasons and, in later Greek, to avoid hiatus, as ταῖς ἀληθείαις.

130. πατρώας: = τοῦ πατρός. Cp. Cho. 43 πατρώους δῖους.

131. μόγισ: Ep. = post-Homer. μόλις (preferred by the tragedians) = prose χαλεπῶς. — παρειπούσα: winning over; Ep. (= πεῖθουσα); the first syllable is long in the Iliad (exc. A 555), but short in Aesch.

132. κραιπνοφόροι: swift-borne = prose ταχεῖαι. — ἔπεμψαν: brought, escorted (no idea of detachment, as in ἀποστέλλειν).

133. διῆξεν: = εἰσέδν. but in Eur. I.A. 426 spread abroad. "A stunning clang of massive bolts redoubling | Beneath the deep" (Shelley, Laon and Cythna 7. 11).

134. The Greeks felt that it was better for the women folk οἴκοι εἶναι, ἐπεὶ βλαβερὸν τὸ θύρη-

φιν (Hes. O.D. 365); hence it would take something unusual to "fright them from their hallowed haunt." The maiden of the deep was constrained by tender pity to come, "her modesty | Durst never venture else" (Beaum. & Fl. Pilgrim 3. 3); she had "A maiden's manners and a maiden's heart" (Love's Cure 5. 3). Cp. Eur. Phoen. 89 f. ἐπεὶ σε μήτηρ παρθενῶνας ἐκλιπεῖν | μεθῆκε . . . ἐπίσχεσ, ὡς ἂν προυξερευνήσω στίβον, | μή τις πολιτῶν ἐν τρίβῳ φαντάζεται. — ἐκ: not used with tmesis in Homer, but as an adv. pure and simple. In the later poets the separation from the verb is intentional and picturesque. — θεμερῶπιν αἰδῶ: "downcast modesty" (Thomson). She had "goodly Shamefastness | Ne ever durst her eyes from ground upreare" (Spenser, F.Q. 4. 10); "For steadfast still her eyes did fixed rest | Ne roved at random after gazers' guyse" (Id.), "Schamefast sche was in maydenes schamfastnesse" (Chaucer). Cp. Emped. 23 Ἀρμονίη θεμερῶπις. — αἰδῶς ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς κείται

(Suidas), the eye is the seat of modesty (hence θεμερῶπιν αἰδῶ = sedate and modest mien); αἰδῶς ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖσι γίγνεται (Eur. Fr. 458; cp. Ar. Vesp. 447). So Ar. Rhet. 2. 6. 18 ἡ παροιμία, τὸ ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς εἶναι αἰδῶ. Cp. Theogn. 85 f. ἐπὶ γλώσση τε καὶ ὀφθαλμοῖσιν ἔπρεστιν αἰδῶς, 83 οὐδένα θησανρὸν πιασὶν . . . ἀμείνω αἰδοῦς. — αἰδῶ: αἰδῶς is verecundia, Scheu, a finer feeling than aischynē (military honor, rudor, Scham, Schande) = φόβος ἐπὶ προσδοκίᾳ ἀδοξίας.

135. σύθην: Ep. = prose ὄρμησα. — ἀπέδιλος: = ἀσάνδαλος (Bion 1. 21), παραντῖκα ἀνυπόδητος μηδὲ τὰς τρίχας ἀναπλεξαμένη (Polyaen. Strateg. 8. 498), "Her blue-veined feet unsandalled were" (Coleridge, Christabel), discincta tunica . . . ac pede nudo (Hor. Serm. 1. 2. 132), nudato curre pede (Tibull. 1. 3. 91). — ὄχῳ: in a car (loc. and instrum.). — πτερωτῶ: prose form of poet. πτερόεντι.

137. ἔκγονα: = παῖδες (139). Hesiod names forty-one, and adds τρὶς γὰρ χιλιαὶ εἰσι τανύσφυροι

τοῦ περὶ πᾶσάν θ' εἰλισσομένου χθόν' ἀκοιμήτῳ ρεύματι παῖδες

Ὀκεανῖναι. Cp. On. Fast. 5. 81 duxerat Oceanus quondam Titanida Tethyn | qui terram liquidis qua patet ambit aquis.

138. "My streams will flow | Round many-peopled continents" (Shelley, P.U. 3. 104), κύκλον ἀκαμάτου καλλιρροῦ Ὀκεανοῦ, ὃς γαῖαν δίνησι περιτρέχει ἀμφιελίξας (Orph. Fr. 44). — τέ: connects Τηθύος with πατρός. — εἰλισσομένου: coiling, Ion. = ἐλισσομένου (Att. and Ep.). Cp. 1085.

139. ἀκοιμήτῳ ρεύματι: with sleepless current (dat. of manner). Cp. Ξ 243, where Ὕπνος speaks, ἄλλον μὲν κεν ἔγωγε θεῶν ἀειγενετῶν | ρεῖα κατευνήσαιμι (even Oceanus, but not Zeus), Plato, Theaet. 180 D ὡς ἡ γένεσις τῶν ἄλλων πάντων Ὀκεανός τε καὶ Τηθύς ρεύματα τυγχάνει καὶ οὐδὲν ἔστηκε.

141. The rhetoricians would call this address σχετλιασμός (conquestio est oratio auditorum misericordiam captans, Cic. Inu. 1. 55. 106), or δείνωσις (indignatio est oratio per quam conficitur ut in aliquem hominem magnum odium aut in rem grauis offensio concitetur, 1. 53. 100). Cp. Macrobius, Saturn. 4. 6 necesse est initium abruptum habeat, quoniam satis indignanti leniter incipere non conuenit. — δέρχθητ'. ἐσίδεσθε: repetition of any kind, even of the same idea by a synonym, as here, expresses passion. — δεσμῶ: dat. of means.

142. προσπορπατός: pinioned. Cp. 61. — φάραγγος: ravine (between two κορυφαί). Cp. Alkman 60. 1 ὀρέων κορυφαί τε καὶ φάραγγες, Luc. Prom. 1 ὑπὲρ τῆς φάραγγος ἀνεσταυρώσθω.

143. ὀχῆσω: = φρουρήσω, not ὑπομενῶ (Wecklein), nor sustinebo, for it is not οἰζύν (η 211), nor μόρον (λ 618), nor ἄτην (φ 302), but φρουράν. So Eng. hold watch. Cp. 31, 419. So Prometheus in the Luomenos (castrum hoc . . . incolo). Mrs. Browning's translation (in spite of the numerous critics who take an opposite view) is correct, "keep an uncoveted watch."

144-159. 'I see, Prometheus, and a mist of tears o'erveils my eyes, to behold thy form in ignominious chains, shrivelling here on the rock. A new pilot is at the helm in Olympus — Zeus under laws that are new holdeth absolute sway; the might of eld is banished — 't is vanished to absolute nothing.' Ovid says: neque enim caelestia tingi | ora decet lacrimis (Met. 2. 38), but Vergil speaks of Venus oculos suffusa nitentes (Aen. 1. 227).

144 f. "Her heart 'gan melt in great compassion, | And drizzling tears did shed for pure affection" (Spenser, Faerie Queene 3. 6). The nymphs respond to Prometheus' plaint "mit thränendem Blick und menschlichem Mitleid" (Klopstock, Mess. 3. 370). Cp. Sept. 228 ὑπερθ' ὀμμάτων | κρημναμενᾶν νεφελᾶν (clouds low'ring o'er the eyes), Soph. Ant. 528 νεφέλη δ' ὀφρύων ὑπερ, Eur. Hipp. 173 στυγνὸν δ' ὀφρύων νέφος αὐξάνεται, Hor. Epist. 1. 18. 94 deme supercilio nubem; "drop out both mine eyes in drizzling tears" (Marlowe, Dido 4), "those eyes in tears . . . in mists of silver dew" (Shelley, P.U. 2. 29), "rain out the heavy mist of tears" (Tennyson), "like a cloud which had outwept its rain" (Adonais 10). — λεύσσω: Ep. = ὄρω. — Προμηθεῦ: ὦ is omitted by the chorus (278, 285, 319, 397, 543), as by Hermes (951). See on 3. — δνοφερά: prose σκοτεινή.

145. ὀμίχλα: Dor. for Ion. and Att. ὀμίχλη = nebula; νέφος = nubes; ὑετός = pluvia. — προσῆξε: denotes the suddenness of the approach of the rain-cloud (a burst of tears).

146. δέμας: prose σῶμα. In Homer δέμας of the living, σῶμα of the dead (corpse); not so the tragedians. — εἰσιδοῦσαν: the acc. because the current of thought is disturbed by the numerous intervening words; μέ is felt to be the obj. affected, and the language permits the attachment of a modifier to that (understood) object. Such variations depend on distance and interruptions. The Greek was not wont to insult his audience by casting doubts on its intelligence. Cp.

 πέπαλται δ' αὐτέ μοι . . . κλύουσαν (Cho. 410).

147. προσαναινόμενον: compounds with πρὸς are momentary (made for the nonce), largely with the dat. in literal sense; and are very common in Aeschylus. Hence this verse = πέτραις πρὸς αναινόμενον. Cp.
 269, Soph. Phil. 954 ἀνανοῦμαι τῷδ' ἐν αὐλίῳ.

147. λύμαις: indignities (dat.
 of manner).

148. οἰακονόμοι: helm-directors = κυβερνήται, i.e. Zeus (general terms here, but in 150 particular).
 Cp. 515, Sept. 2. 62 κεδνὸς οἰακο-στρόφος.

150. νεοχμοῖς: new (in authority). The mind of the chorus naturally reverts at once to the cause of the indignities.—νόμοις:
laws (in force); θεσμοί the established laws of the universe, the eternal laws unwritten of the gods (Soph. Ant. 454). — ἀθέτως: = ἀθέσμως (answerable to none).

Cp. 186, 324. — κρατύνει: = κρατέῖ.
 For the sentiment here cp. "Sole reigning holds the tyranny of heaven" (P.L. 1. 124), "the king his wilful edicts makes, | In which none's tongue is powerful save the king's" (Heywood, Rape of Lucrece, 2. 1), "Who made our laws to bind us, not himself" (Milton).

151. The ancien régime is no more forever (οὐκέτι περσονομῶνται . . . βασιλεία γὰρ διόλωλεν ἰσχύς, Pers. 585 ff.). — πελώρια: an Epic word (freq. in Hom. and Hes., but obsolete in Aristotle's time), purposely chosen by the poet as being peculiarly applicable to the reign of the Titans
 — the plur. and neut. to indicate everything connected with the old government. "Le vieux monde se meurt . . . | Et le prestige ancien des races souveraines | Comme un soleil mourant dans l'ombre s'est plongé" (Theu- riet, Les Paysans). — αἰστοῖ: an- nihilates (only here and 232; rare in Homer).

152. γὰρ: the original force (γέ—ἀρ, surely then) is preserved in wishes, with or without εἰ. Cp. Eur. Hipp. 640 μὴ γὰρ ἔν γ' ἐμοῖς δόμοις | εἴη, Cycl. 261 κακῶς γὰρ ἐξόλοιο, Or. 1147 μὴ γὰρ οὖν ζώην ἔτι. — ὑπὸ γῆν: so Eum. 175 ὑπὸ τε γᾶν φυγῶν, but dat.-loc. 373. Sept. 543, Eum. 1036. — νέρθεν θ' Ἄιδου: an emphatic appendage to ὑπὸ γῆν (way, further, 'neath Hades itself).

153. νεκροδέγμονος: host of the dead would be an excellent translation but for the ambiguity — the Eng. phrase might mean “that innumerable caravan.” The idea is πατρὶς Ἄιδης. | ξινὸς χῶρος ἄπισι, πένησί τε καὶ βασιλεῦσιν (Phocylides). Prometheus desires to go “zur Todtenschaar hinab | In Pluto's unterirdisch-schwarzes Haus” (Herder), down to the “citizens of Hades' capitol” (Beddoes). The Greek word for inn is καταγῶγιον or πανδοκεῖον. The chorus in the Septem (860) speaks of the χέρσον of the nether world as πάνδοκον, and in Suppl. 156 τὸν

γαίον (= τὸν καταχθόνιον Ἄιδην) as τὸν πολυξενώτατον Ζῆνα (Pluto). Likewise in the Homer. Hymn 5. 9. 17, 430 πολυδέκτης, πολυδέγμων are applied to Hades — “Each shall take | His chamber in the silent halls of death” (Bryant). — ἀπέραντον: impenetrable. Cp. 1078. Theogn. 89 πύλας Ἄιδαιο περιῆσαι.

154. Τάρταρον: where the other Titans had been hurled — as far below Hades as the latter is below the earth (θ 13), but in Eum. 72 = Hades. (4)

155. δεσμοῖς: dat. with πελάσας. — πελάσας: causative, as in Homer (γ 291, ο 482).

156. Prometheus does not “shrink from the mention of mankind” (Wecklein), does not substitute μήτε τις ἄλλος for βροτοί, — the words are added to θεοί merely for fullness of expression and emphasis (no one, whoever lie he, θεόςυτος ἢ βρότειος ἢ κεκραμένη). When the chorus replies, only gods are mentioned.

158. Cp. 159. ἐπίχαρτα: acc. of inner object (my sufferings a source of delight to my foes). HA. 716 b, G. 1054, B. 333. The ἐπιχαρτοκακία, or Schadenfreude, of one's foes seems to have been as much dreaded in antiquity as the calamity itself. As Aristotle says (Rhet. 1. 6. 20), ὁ οἱ ἐχθροὶ βούλονται ἢ

160. ᾧδε: = οὔτῳ.

161. "Feling his similitude in peynes smerte" (Squieres Tale, 10794). All in their sympathy must feel the same pangs (συνασχαλῆ, condolet, simul maeret), just as Hedwig, in Wilhelm Tell, sees the father aiming the arrow

161. συνασχαλᾷ: the usual tragic form is ἀσχάλλει.

162. Three resolutions — never in Aesch. save in lyric trimeter. — τεοῖσι: Ep. and Pind. for σοῖς (only in lyric passages). — δίχα: praeter, prose χωρίς. — γέ: versteht sich. — ἐπικότως: prose ὀργῆ, μετ' ὀργῆς. Zeus avoids the three errors disastrous to empire: οἶκτω καὶ ἡδονῇ λόγων καὶ ἐπιεικείῃ (Thuc. 3. 40. 2), pity, placability, and clemency.

163. θέμενος ἄγναμπτον: having made inflexible. Cp. Tyrtæus, Fr. 11. 15 ἐχθρὰν μὲν ψυχὴν θέμενος.

164. δάμναται: Ep. = Att. κρατέῃ; act. here, pass. in the Iliad

and Suppl. 904. — Οὐρανίαν γένναν: = γένος Οὐράνου (House of Uranus). Cp. 205, 590.

165. πρὶν: has the regimen of εἰς when it may be translated until. With the opt. πρὶν ἂν is rare and doubtful. In Homer ἄν (κέ) is never used with πρὶν. GMT. 642. A.J.P. 2. 465 ff. — κορέση κέαρ: = πληροῖ τὸν θυμόν (Plato, Rep. 465 A).

166. παλάμα τινὶ: by some stroke (μηχανῆ, coup de main). Cp. Soph. Phil. 1206 ῥέξις παλάμων. — δυσάλωτον: vix capiendum. — ἔλη: in the Homeric sense of capture. — ἀρχάν: denotes where the power is lodged (= δυναστείαν).

167 ff. "I may do something yet, when times are ripe, | To tell this raw, unthankful king" (Beaum. & Fl. False One 3. 1), "I wait, | Enduring thus the retributive hour" (Shelley, P.U. 1.

405). Cp. 907 ff. — ἦ μὴν: strong asseveration, rare in comedy, esp. with pres. indic. — ἔτι: olim, einst (in spite of the fact that my present state would not warrant such an assumption). — καίπερ: to indicate beyond peradventure that the participle is concessive.

168. ἐν: for the sake of vividness, as in 6, 562. — γυιοπέδαις: limb-fetters = δεσμοῖς τῶν μελῶν. — αἰκιζομένου: = ὑβριζομένου, pass., but act. in 195, 227, 256. Cp. εἰργασμένος (242), ἔωνημένος. The mid. and pass. were originally one. Only the aor. pass. was developed. The fut. pass. never became imbedded in the language. Some verbs serve as a pass. for the mid. as well as for the act. (μεταπέμπομαι, βιάζομαι). Cp. the use of πίπτω, φεύγω (as passives).

169. χρείαν ἔξει: = δεῖσεται. — σήσει: (rare in the orators) is used only one fourth as often as ἔξει. — μακάρων πρύτανις: ironically, to mark his lofty station) (the low estate of Prometheus “shrunk to this little measure.” The impending dethronement of the suzerain is in the Titan's mind.

170. τὸ νέον βούλευμα: consilium novum, referring to the contemplated marriage of Zeus. Introd. II. 8. 3. — ἀβ' ὄτου: as a result of which = ὑπό, ἔξ.

171. σκῆπτρον: retained object with ἀποσυλᾶται. HA. 724 a, G. 1069, Gl. 534 b. — ἀποσυλᾶται: the pres. for fut. is limited to prophecies. Cp. 513, 525, 948. — τιμάς: value = money = office.

172. Diaeresis is not always found in the anapaestic dimeter before Euripides. Even here (the only case in the play) the ictus marks clearly the component parts of the cpd. Cp. 188, 294. — οὔτε . . . τέ: the change in structure is accompanied by a change in the form of the conjunctive negatives and a change in the feeling of the speaker, who begins calmly with οὔτε (the thought of the “sweet-lipped charm of persuasion” does not rouse his wrath), but the thought of cringing to threats awakens his dormant resistance and obstinacy — a simple οὔτε will not do justice to his feelings. — μελιγλώσσοις: cp. Bacchyl. 1. 97 μελιγλώσσου ἀηδόνας, 13. (B)

 pathy | Do I feel at every word.'
 — ἐρέθισε : agitated ; dramatic aor. ; here a real past (shot through my heart). GMT. 60, HA. 842. The temporal augment is not omitted as often as the syllabic. Cp. Pers.
 915 (ὄφελε). The tribrach in the 3d foot (three syllables in one word) can occur only in the lyric trimeter. — διάτορος : piercing. — φόβος : physical (transient) ; δέος, moral (permanent) ; hence ἄδεια, but τὸ μὴ φοβείσθαι — if one desires to make the nice distinctions of Prodicus — (ἐδόκει Πρωταγόρα μὲν καὶ Ἰππία δέος τε καὶ φόβος εἶναι τοῦτο, Προδικῶ δὲ δέος, φόβος δ' οὐ), but many, with Socrates, would reject τὴν Προδικῶν διαί-ρεσιν τῶν ὀνομάτων. Timor is usually, but not always, φόβος.

183. δέδια : I am all atremble (emotional perf., GS. 230), rarer in sing. than plur. (= δέδοικα).
 The short plur. forms are used most by prose writers, after the analogy of ἔστηκα, ἔσταμεν. but δεδιέναι occurs first in Menander.

184. 'Asking myself the question, where in the world canst thou find a haven from this heaving main of troubles.' — χρῆ : see on 100. — τέρμα κέλσαντα : for the nautical figure cp. "Like a weather-beaten vessel, holds | Gladly the port, though shrouds and tackle torn" (P.L. 2. 1043), and "Here

(only fut. and aor.) = prose ὀκελλειν (cp. δύρεσθαι, ὀδύρεσθαι), but ἔξοκέλλειν (Suppl. 438) of a ship tempest-tossed. Cp. Ag. 666 (run aground on a rocky shore). — ἀκίχητα: inaccessible (by prayer), in- exorable (P 75). Note the chiasm.

185. "Let men cry to have law and justice done, | And tell their grievs to heaven that hears them not" (Nero 2. 2). — ἦθεα: mores.
— κέαρ: prose καρδίαν. — ἀπαράμυθον: not to be talked over (deaf to entreaties). So ἀθάνατον always shows ā- in the Attic poets.

186-192. There are not so many verses in this as in the preceding system (67-177), whereas 152-159 correspond to 137-144.
But if we add the chorus verses (193-196), the symmetry is preserved.

186 f. "L'État . . . c'est moi."

Cp. Suppl. 370 σύ τοι πόλις.
Justice is not κοινόν — Zeus has it in his own keeping. Cp. 150, 403, Eur. Suppl. 430 οὐκ εἰσὶν
νόμοι | κοινοὶ, κρατεῖ δ' εἰς τὸν νόμον κεκτημένος, Plato, Theaet.
172 E δεσπότην καθήμενον ἐν χειρὶ τὴν δίκην ἔχοντα. — τὸ δίκαιον:
equity (to an Athenian); δικαιο-σύνη, justice. — ἔμπας: trochaic (rare). — οἶω: Ep. = οἴομαι (οἶμαι 758), οἶω at the end of hexam. necessarily. In οἶω lurks Prometheus' ἐπιχειρεκακία.

188 f. μαλακογνώμων: meek = ἀγνώμων, "a man of no bowels," referring to τραχὺς (186) — "his hard heart will be softened." Cp.
Lys. 12. 79 δεῖ συγγνώμην καὶ ἔλεον μὴ εἶναι ἐν ταῖς ὑμετέροις γνώμῃς. — ταύτη: the mysterious something which Prometheus refuses to disclose (169 ff.). — ραῖσθῆ: Ep. (ραίειν = ἀράσσειν = prose βία τύπτειν).

190. ἀτέραμνον: unyielding.
Cp. Ψ 167 κῆρ ἀτέραμνον. — στορέσας : like the waves after a storm. Cp. γ 158 ἐστόρεσαν δὲ θεὸς μεγακῆτεα πόντον, Eur. Heracl. 702 λῆμα μὲν οὐπω στόρνυσι χρόνος.

191. Poetic pleonasm. Cp. Homer. Hymn (Hermes) 3. 524 κατένευσεν ἐπ' ἄρθμῳ καὶ φιλότητι. — ἄρθμόν : alliance. Cp. H 302 ἐν φιλότητι διέτμαγεν ἄρθμήσαντε.

192. σπεύδων σπεύδοντι : juxtaposition, as in 218.

193-396. The first episode. Four verses are spoken by the chorus in each reply (exc. 698 f.). The human interest increases as the nymphs question the Titan about those wretched creatures whose cause he had espoused in opposition to the will of Zeus. — πάντα : emphatic position — “the whole story, so much interest have I in thy sorrow.” Prometheus is just as eager to unburden his soul, for “Companionship in woe doth woe assuage.” —

ἐκκάλυφον : unfold. — γέγωνε : a favorite (Ep.) word = εἰπέ.

194 f. = ποίου Ζεὺς αἰτιασάμενός σε = σὺ λαβὼν (ἔχων) ποῖαν αἰτίαν ; “What is the cause, if it be for to telle, | That ye be in that furyal pyne of helle?” (Squires Tale 447 f.). — σὲ Ζεὺς : Aesch. is particularly fond of the juxtaposition of subj. and object. Cp. 255, 990. — ἐπί : on = ob, propter. — αἰτιάματι : rare in prose (= αἰτία), easily associated in mind with ποίω (370, 406), “Because the impression of the last we speak | Doth always longest and most constantly | Possess the entertainment of remembrance,” as does the first (be it verse or oration).

196. Cp. 763. — εἴ τι μή : so Pers. 158. Suppl. 1016. No profit will come of the narration, but the chorus wants to know — κέρδος μὲν οὐδὲν εἰδέναί. πόθος δέ τις | τὰ τῶν φίλων φίλοισιν αἰσθέσθαι κακά (Eur. Hel. 763).

οἱ μὲν θέλοντες ἐκβαλεῖν ἔδρας Κρόνον, ὡς Ζεὺς ἀνάσσοι δῆθεν, οἱ δὲ τοῦμπαλι

197 f. The bare recital is painful (to say nothing of the suffering), yet "Silence is pain." — ἀλγεινὰ . . . ἄλγος: anaphora. Cp. 238. — καί: even. — λέγειν: tell the tale (λόγος). So λέξω (445, 609), ἔλεξα (Pers. 295).

199. "Here's the scroll, | The continent, and summary of my misfortunes" (Merch. of Ven. 3. 2). The narrative divides itself into two parts. The first two verses form a proem. A second distich (226 f.) unites the two. Prometheus first contrasts his present state with that to which he brought Zeus by his assistance, and then responds to the question of the Oceanides with reference to the cause of his punishment.

200. στάσις ἐν ἀλλήλοισιν: seditio inter eos. Cp. 1087, Soph. Ant. 259 λόγοι δ' ἐν ἀλλήλοισιν ἐρρόθουν. — ὠροθύνετο: Ep. = διεγείρετο, suscitabatur (only here in tragedy).

201. οἱ μὲν θέλοντες: so-called nominativus pendens. The preceding verse means οἱ δαίμονες ἐστασίαζον. Cp. 146, 569. Such shifting and lightning-change are neither unusual nor unnatural to the mobile Greek — from δαίμονες to στάσις and back again to δαίμονες. Cp. Eur. Bacch. 1131 f. ἦν δὲ πᾶς ὁμοῦ βοή, | ὁ μὲν στενάζων . . . αἱ δ' ἠλάλαζον. Plato, Apol. 21 C διαλεγόμενος αὐτῷ ἔδοξέ μοι (commoner than the strictly grammatical construction). The genuine pendent nominative (as Eur. Hērph. 23 προκόψασ' οὐ πόνου πολλοῦ με δεῖ) is not common — passages are forced under the rule which do not belong there. It is used chiefly with the participle and in prose with impersonals. — ἔδρας: whence-gen. (without a prep.), commoner in poetry than in prose.

202. ἀνάσσοι: Ep. and Pind. for ἄρχοι (203). Euripides differs from the other dramatic poets in the use of the subjv. after a past tense. — δῆθεν: scilicet — no irony, σπεύδοντες, ὡς Ζεὺς μήποτ' ἄρξειεν θεῶν, ᾤοντ' ἀμοχθὶ πρὸς βίαν τε δεσπόσειν.

 ἐμοὶ δὲ μήτηρ οὐχ ἅπαξ μόνον Θέμις

as in 986. — τοῦμπάλιν: = τὸ ἐναντίον, obj. of σπεύδοντες.

203. ὡς . . . μήποτε: earliest example of a complementary final with μή. GMT. 353. — Κρόνος ἄρξειεν = Ζεὺς μήποτ' ἄρξειεν (the thought uppermost in the Titan's mind). The ingressive signification of the aor. is found in the opt. as well as in the indic. GS. 240.

204. ἐνταῦθα: temporal. — λῶστα: rare in prose = βελτιστα. — πιθεῖν: two objects. HA. 725, G. 1051, Gl. 535, B. 340.

205. τέ . . . καί: characteristic of leisurely prose. See on 178. — Χθονός: for Γαίης, only here and Eum. 6. Cp. Hes. Theog. 644 Γαίης τε καὶ Οὐρανοῦ ἀγλαὰ τέκνα.

206 ff. 'But disdaining subtle machinations they thought by sheer brute force at once to gain the mastery.' Cp. Hor. Od. 3 4. 65 uis consilii expers mole ruit sua. — ἠδυνήθην: for ἐδυνήθην, after the analogy of ἠθελον (ἠβουλόμην. ἠμελλον). — αἰμύλας: = πυκνάς, ποικίλεις, συνετάς. — ᾤοντο:

were under the impression (νομίζω, I take it, assume; ἐνθυμοῦμαι, take a fact into consideration, bear in mind; ἠγοῦμαι, duco). — ἀμοχθί: without a protracted struggle (which would necessitate μόχθους — Shakspeare's "toil with works of war"). — πρὸς βίαν: only in this play (cp. 212), but πρὸς τὸ βίαιον Ag. 130.

209. Θέμις: Statute, Satzung, Law, hence Predestination and Prophecy. Her temple at Thebes adjoined that of Zeus. Pindar calls her Σώτειρα Διὸς ξενίου πάρεδρος (O. 8. 21).

210. Γαῖα: identified with Themis (hence the explanation following), as in 1091, but in Eum. 2. Hesiod, and generally, regarded as her daughter. So Aeschylus represented Artemis as the daughter of Demeter: ἐποίησε γὰρ Ἄρτεμιν εἶναι θυγατέρα Δήμητρος (Hdt. 2. 156). In the Orphic hymn the goddess is called Γῆ μήτηρ πάντων. Δημήτηρ πολυδότειρα. In Arcadia Demeter

- 210 καὶ Γαῖα, πολλῶν ὀνομάτων μορφή μία, τὸ μέλλον ἧ κραινοῖτο προυτεθеспίκει, ὡς οὐ κατ' ἰσχὺν οὐδὲ πρὸς τὸ καρτερόν χρεΐη, δόλω δὲ τοὺς ὑπερσχόντας κρατεῖν.
τοιαῦτ' ἔμοῦ λόγοισιν ἐξηγουμένου
- 215 οὐκ ἠξίωσαν οὐδὲ προσβλέψαι τὸ πᾶν.

was also named Themis (Paus. 8. 25. 4). An Att. inscr. speaks of Ἱερίας Γῆς Θέμιδος. Cp. Fr. 41, 193. In Suppl. 892 Γᾶ is called the mother of Zeus, in connection with whom she was worshipped at Dodona (Paus. 10. 12. 10).

210. πολλῶν ὀνομάτων: cp. Soph. Fr. 678 Κύπρις οὐ Κύπρις μόνον | ἀλλ' ἔστι πολλῶν ὀνομάτων ἐπώνυμος. The so-called gen. of quality is rarely without a limiting adj. Cp. 900.

211. τὸ μέλλον: the future (subst.). Cp. Dem. 20. 160 ff. (both μέλλον and λοιπόν). — ἧ: = ὄτῳ τρόπῳ. — κραινοῖτο: should come to pass, Ep., Ion. = γίγνοιτο, oracular pres. in indirect discourse. Cp. 171, 848. — προυτεθеспίκει: had foretold, pluperfect as in English, rare in many writers (as Aesch.). It was possible to dispense with the plpf., which was too cumbrous for the Greek — the aor. sufficed. According to the testimony of inscriptions the syllabic augment of the plpf. was never omitted in the classic period.

212. ὡς οὐ κτέ.: particular, exexegetic of ἧ κραινοῖτο (general). — κατ' ἰσχύν: specifies the kind of potentia (τὸ καρτερόν) = in respect (= by means) of brute strength (robore). — πρὸς τὸ καρτερόν: per vim. In Soph. Phil. 594 both words πρὸς ἰσχύος κράτος. κράτος (528) = potestatem: βία = vis; δύναμις = facultas. Cp. Ag. 130 πρὸς τὸ βίαιον. The prep. πρὸς in such phrases is due to the influence of the (suppressed) participle ὄν.

213. χρεΐη: = χρή + εἶη (subst. and verb fused). — δόλω . . . ὑπερσχόντας: not = τοὺς δὲ δόλω ὑπερσχόντας (Wecklein), but 'those whom time will have shown to be victors (τοὺς ὑπερσχόντας — aor. thrown into the fut.) must (χρεΐη) be victors by craft' — τὸ νικᾶν ἔστι πᾶν εὐβουλίᾳ (Eur. Phoen. 721).

215. Did not deign é en to look Prometheus-ward. — τὸ πᾶν: at all. Mrs. Browning misses the point, "They would not deign to contemplate the truth | On all sides round."

216. κράτιστα: the neut. plur. of adjectives is not common in prose (never in the orators). Cp. Ar. Eq. 30 κράτιστα τοίνυν τῶν παρόντων ἐστὶ νῶν, Ran. 277 προῖέναι βέλτιστα νῶν, but Eq. 83 βέλτιστον ἡμῖν αἶμα ταύρειον πιεῖν. GS. 37. — τῶν παρεστώτων: i.e. τῶν παρόντων = ἅ μοι παρέστη. optimum e praesentibus (= ἐν τῇ τότε περιστάσει). Cp. Ag. 1053 τὰ λῶστα τῶν παρεστώτων.

217. ἐφαίνεται εἶναι: appeared to be (ἐφαίνεται ὄν = manifestly was). — προσλαβόντι μητέρα: take my mother (and side with Zeus).

218. ἐκόντα: acc. to avoid confusion with ἐκόντι. — Ζηνί: trag. form (not Ζανί) even in melic passages. — συμπαραστατεῖν: take position by (παρά) Zeus to aid him (σύν).

219 f. 'Thanks to my counsel, old Cronus lies entombed in the deep, dark Tartarean gulf.' Cp. Hes. Theog. 729 f. Τιτῆνες ὑπὸ ζόφῳ ἠρόροντι | κεκρύφαται. Ov. Met. 1. 113 f. postquam Saturno tenebrosa in Tartaro misso, | sub

Iove mundus erat, Chaucer, Monkes Tale, 15488 f. "From heigh degré yit fel he for his synne | Doun into helle, wher he yet is inne." — βουλαῖς: causal dat. = διὰ τὰς ἐμὰς βουλὰς, whereas the instrum. = διὰ . . . βουλῶν. — μελαμβαθῆς κευθμῶν: deep, dark, cavernous gloom. Cp. 1029, 1050.

220. καλύπτει: rare in prose, exc. in cpds. — παλαιγενῆ: cp. 873. A less common form is παλαιογενής.

221. αὐτοῖσι συμμαχοῖσι: allies and all. HA. 774 a, G. 1191, Gl. 525 a, B. 475 N. 2. — τοιάδε: with a gesture (τοιᾶντα in 214) to contrast with ταῖσδε (223). — ἐξ: Ion. = ὑπό (emphasizing the source). In Att. there is not the same responsibility as with ὑπό (ἐξ the corporation, the faculty; ὑπό the individual, the professor). Latin selected ab. Eng. by, Greek ὑπό (from under). ἐξ, πρὸς, παρά (personal relations). Isaeus is fond of ἐξ. In late Greek ἀπό is used more and more, and the difference is finally effaced.

222. ὁ τῶν θεῶν τύραννος: a permissible order, exc. with participles and personal pronouns.

ὠφελημένος: perf. to denote maintenance of result. Cp. Plato, Protag. 314 B βεβλαμμένον ἢ ὠφελημένον.

223. Cp. μετὰ τὴν δόσιν τάχιστα γηράσκει χάρις (Menander). — κακαῖσι: first for emphasis. — ταῖσδε: 'as you see' (the recompense deserved is not received; the requital is κακή). — ἐξημεΐψατο: = ἀντημεΐψατο.

224 f. "To know nor love, nor friend, nor law, to be Omnipotent but friendless, is to reign" (Shelley). — πῶς: nescio quomodo.

225. νόσημα: not so common as νόσος (1069), particularly in the fig. sense, but hardly to be distinguished from it in meaning (= any adverse state). Cp. αἰτία (226), αἰτίαμα (194).

226. δ' οὖν: dismissing one theme and taking up another. Cp. 935. — αἰτίαν καθ' ἣντινα: = ὁ τι αἰτιασάμενος.

228. ὅπως: temporal = ὡς, freq. in Ion. (ὅκως).

229. Cp. 484, Hes. Theog. 230 εὖ δὲ ἕκαστα | ἀθανάτοις διέταξεν ὁμῶς καὶ ἐπέφραδε τιμᾶς, 835 ὁ δὲ τοῖσιν ἐν διεδάσατο τιμᾶς. — καθέζετο: prose ἐκαθέζετο.

230. διεστοιχίζετο: ordinabat. "Ordinò general ministra e duce" (Inferno 7. 78). Cp. Ar. Rhet. 1. 2. 22 τὰ στοιχεῖα καὶ τὰς προτάσεις (elements and premisses), Isoc. 2. 16 ταῦτα γὰρ στοιχεῖα πρῶτα καὶ μέγιστα χρηστῆς πολιτείας ἐστίν. — The impf. here as the tense of vision (the action is watched). The best example to illustrate the principle is Eur. Bacch. 737 ff. Change of tense in Greek is as easy as change of subject. Cp. Soph. Ai. 31, Ant. 406 and 426-428 ὄρῃ . . . ἐξώμωξεν . . . ἤρῃτο . . . φέρει.

231 ff. "Whilst my beloved race is trampled down" (Shelley, P.U. 1. 386).

232. ἔσχεν: took (one of the few verbs whose 2d aor. has an ingress. signification). — αἰστώσας: = ἀφανίσους. Cp. 151, 668.

233. φιλῦσαι: create (only in Plato in prose).

234. τοῖσιν: (βουλευμασιν), Ep. pronominal — in Att. poetry most freq. after καί, δέ, γάρ. Cp. 237.

235. ἐτόλμησα: ingress. aor. Cp. 203. — ἐξελυσάμην: I secured the release of. This causative force (laisser, lassen) the mid. does not possess exclusively, but shares it with the act. Cp. κ 286 κικῶν ἐκλύσομαι ἠδὲ σαώσω. — Note the asyndeton, the second clause specific, explanatory of the first (general). Cp. 267.

236. τὸ μὴ . . . μολεῖν: a common use of the articular inf. in tragedy. — The whole tendency of the articular inf. is toward the objectionable. In Eur. Hērō. 191

the hatefulness of τὸ ζῆν, here of τὸ τεθνάναι. — μὴ: verbs of hindering take a variety of constructions (GMT. 807, 811). For the redundant μὴ cp. nicht after verhindern, verhüten (still used in the spoken language), whereas in Eng. the neg. survives only with warn. This neg. in hypotaxis is a survival of parataxis. — διαρραισθέντας: utterly crushed = διαφθαρέντας. Cp. 189. — Ἴαιδου: acc. in 1029 (with adj.). — The Phaeacian myth is the earliest Greek representation of the abode of the dead.

237 ff. "Behold, thou hast instructed many, and thou hast strengthened the weak hands . . . But now it is come upon thee" (Job 4. 3). — τῷ: Ep. = τούτῳ (διὰ τοῦτο) = ἐκ τῶνδε (cum res ita sint), very rare in Att. writers. — τοί: ja (you see). — τοιαῖσδε: so τοιοῦτος (Ag. 1075, 1360). — πημοναῖσι: = πῆμασι (freq. in trag.), dat. of instrument. Cp. 276, 306. — κάμπτομαι: flector. Cp. 306, 513.

238. To bear painful, pitiful to see (chiasm). The infinitives are datives.

239. ἐν οἴκτῳ προθέμενος: setting down in pity ('s account), πρό being local (not temporal, as Weckl. explains), hence = οἰκτείρας (cp. Soph. El. 1334). Cp. Ag. 32 τὰ δεσποτῶν γὰρ εὖ πεσόντα θήσομαι, and the phrase ἐν ἀδικήματι θέσθαι. The figure is from throwing dice. Still more erroneous is the interpretation of Bothe, Blomfield, and others (praeferre, sc. Iovi et diis).

240. νηλεῶς: Ep. = prose ἀνοικτίστως.

241. ἐρρύθμισμαι: have been disciplined (like the words forced into their places in verse). Prometheus feels "mensuraque iuris vis erat" (Lucan, Pharsal. 1. 175). — Ζηνὶ δυσκλεῆς θέα: = τῷ Διὶ ἄδοξον θέαμα.

242. "They had been stones whom that could not have moved" (Nero 3. 2), "He, whose heart's of adamant or flint, | My tears nor plaints could mollify a whit" (Marlowe. Dido 2), "Unless your unrelenting flinty hearts | Suppress all pity in your stony breasts" (Jew of Malta 1), "From brassy bosoms and rough hearts of flint" (Merch. of Ven. 4. 1), "Si ton cœur . . . n'est de bronze ou de fer" (Molière, L'Étourdi 3. 8), σιδηρόφρων θυμός (Sept. 52), ἦσθα πέτρος ἢ σίδαρος (Eur. Med. 1279), νόον σιδάρου (Mosch. 4. 44), σιδήρειον ἦτορ (Ω 205. 521).

243. ὅστις: individualistic (mostly with expressions of praise and blame: often in the tragic poets). — συνασχαλᾷ: "the power to feel with others." See on 161.

244. μόχθοις: not in Homer (who uses μόγος), here merely a variant for πόνοις, πήμασι, πημοναῖς. Cp. Xen. Ages. 5. 3 (μοχθῆ-

246. καὶ μὴν: et sane. — ἔλεινός: poet. Att. for ἔλεινός; for the omission of εἰμί see on 42. — εἰσορᾶν: see on 238. Cp. "ful pitous to byholde" (Chaucer).

247. Du gingst doch etwa nicht weiter denn dies. — μή: interrog. particle expecting a neg. answer — first in Aesch., only six times in the tragic poets. See Studies in Honour of B. L. Gildersleeve, p. 427. — πού τι: to tone down the statement. — τῶνδε: τῶν εἰρη-μένων. — περαιτέρω: only here in Aesch. Cp. ἀνωτέρω (312).

248. "Yet in this life | Lie hid more thousand deaths: yet death we fear" (Meas. for Meas. 3. 1). Cp. 250. "So we mistake the future's face | Eyed through Hope's deluding glass" (Dyer, Grongar Hill), "Du, mit dem weichen Sinn, | Vom Himmel ausersiehen | Zur Menschentrösterin. | Du bist es, die den Kranken | Die Todesqualen stillt; | Mit wonnigen Gedanken | Von Zukunft ihn erfüllt" (Bürger, An die Hoffnung); "Tels sont l'œuvre et le sort de nos illusions: | Elles tombent toujours, et la jeune Espérance | Leur dit toujours: 'Mes sœurs, si nous recommandions!'" (Sully Prudhomme, Les Danaïdes). — τυφλός: 'that are never fulfilled,' 'not real.' Cp. 'blind alley.' Led on by hope man blindly pursues his course; fixing his eyes on the goal of his labor, he forgets death. "In sorgenfreiem Leben | Nie entbehren, stets erstreben," says Hoffnung in Faust (2. 824), — ἐὰν μὴ ἔλπηται, ἀνέλπιστον οὐκ ἐξευρήσει (Heraclitus). Cp. Shelley, P.U. 2. 4. 49 ff. "For on the race of man . . . ghastly death unseen before, | Fell . . . Prometheus saw, and waked the legioned hopes." Aesch. diverges from Hesiod (O.D. 94 ff.).

252. μέντοι: nevertheless (a still greater boon). — σφίν: = αὐτοῖς (never σφί in tragedy). Cp. 457.

253. Cp. 30. — καί: marks the interest and insistence of the questioner, whose mind is surcharged with queries. Cp. 257. — φλογωπόν: flame-flashing (flame-visag'd). Epithets in -ωπός are especially freq. in Euripides.

254. Yes, and many arts therefrom they'll learn. A cultivated feeling for the language is necessary to perceive the color of the utterance in the stichomythy in tragedy. Simple as the conversation is here, all the English versions are totally inadequate. Position and particles are ignored. Cp. 258, 379, 746, 768. — ἀφ' οὗ: ex cuius usu.

255. τοιοῖσδε: apparently distant from αἰτιάμασιν, but a verse is like an incomplete circle. See on 194. The nom. and acc. can be held in the mind longer than the dat.; not so the gen. So in Latin the gen. is always put near its belongings.

256. Prometheus interrupts, and the stichomythy is preserved.

More freq. the artifice is concealed by a question. — κακῶν: gen. of separation, as Ar. Av. 383 τῆς ὀργῆς χαλᾶν.

257. ἔστιν: accented whenever the original and dormant meaning is awakened by emphasis (neg. or otherwise). — προκείμενον: an afterthought, the predicating idea reasserting itself. If they had been juxtaposed, as Pers. 371 (ἦν προκείμενον), the verbal element in the participle would have vanished, being neutralized by ἔστιν. προκείμενον becoming a mere adjective. The perf. part. is often associated with other adjectives. Periphrases with the aor. part. are rare, but with the perf. frequent. Cp. 755.

259. δόξει δὲ πῶς: the position marks the high tension of the speaker's mind. The chorus takes up the Titan's "seem" — "Seem! But how?"

260. ἡμαρτες: didst err.

261. καθ' ἡδονήν: = πρὸς ἡδονήν. Cp. 212. — ἄλγος: maeror; πίεθος = luctus; ὀδύνη = cruciatulus (the sharp momentary pain). After ἄλγος supply εἰ λέγοιμι.

265. "Nothing of all these evils hath befallen me | But justly: I myself have brought them on, | Sole author I, sole cause! . . . | This well I knew" (Milton, Samson Ag. 374 ff.). — ταῦθ' ἅπαντα: more emphatic than ταῦτα πάντα ('all, all I knew'). 'It was not an act of imprudence; I did what I did advisedly, fully cognizant of all the consequences' (viz., that I would be punished). See on 268. — ἠπιστάμην: I had the knowledge (ἐπιστήμη), which the chorus had hinted he had not (260). 'You may call it a ἀμάρτημι (266) to help others and have no regard for one's own safety — and from your point of view I grant it.'

266. ἐκὼν ἐκὼν: ἀναδίπλωσις (repetition) expresses passion, and means more in Greek than in Latin, more in Latin than in Italian. Cp. 274, 688, 887, 894, 999. — οὐκ ἀρνήσομαι: = φήσω (ὁμολογήσω), non mentiar (Hor. Sat. 2. 6. 32).

267. ἀρήγων: prose βοθηῶν = ὠφελῶν. — ἠύρόμην: gained, brought on myself. Cp. Soph. Ai. 1023 ταῦτα πάντα σοῦ θανόντος ἠύρόμην, Isae. 8. 35 (οἰκίαν) δισχιλίας εὐρίσκουσιν (of rental), 11. 49 χωρίον . . . ὃ πλέον οὐκ ἂν εὔροι τριάκοντα μνῶν.

268. Prometheus contrasts the magnitude of his punishment with the light penalty anticipated. — οὐ μὴν τι: nevertheless, not by any means (μὴν a repellent particle; it meets an objection). — ὤόμην: = ordinary prose ὄμην (Lys. 31. 1); impf. of resistance to pressure (I never dreamed). GS. 216. — τοίαισι: prose τοιαύταις. — μέ κατισχναεῖσθαι: that I should waste away. The subj. of the inf. is sometimes expressed for contrast or emphasis. Cp. Soph. El. 471 δοκῶ με πείραν τήνδε τολμήσειν, Plato, Rep. 400 B οἶμαι δέ με ἀκηκοένας.

270. "Round about all is mute | As the snow fields on the mountain peaks" (Tennyson). Cp. 2. — τυχόντα: so Eng. "you have happened of an untoward son-in-law" (Heywood).

271. δύρεσθε: trag. = ὀδύρεσθε. — ἄχη: prose λύπας (dolores) = συμφοράς = τύχας (272).

272. πέδοι βᾶσαι: = ἐκ τοῦ ἄρματος ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν καταβᾶσαι (to listen to the narrative and be prepared to sing the στάσιμον). — τὰς προσερπούσας τύχας: = τὰς ἐπιούσας συμφοράς. Cp. 637.

273. διὰ τέλους: not forever (διὰ παντός), the usual meaning, but penitus, ad finem usque omnino, emphasizing τὸ πᾶν. Cp. Eum. 64. διὰ παντός in this sense is rare in Att. (283). For the resolution cp. 2. 76.

274. "Sorrow shared with affectionate friends is relieved of half its poignancy" (Kalidasa, Çakuntala 3), "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends: for the hand of God hath touched me" (Job 19. 21). — συμπονήσατε: condolete. Cp. σνγκάμνειν (414, 1059), συνασχαλᾶ (243).

275. νῦν: (αὔριον, when they themselves may not be free from woe. Aristotle defines ἔλεος as λύπη τις ἐπὶ φαινομένῳ κακῷ ὃ κἂν αὐτὸς προσδοκήσειεν ἂν παθεῖν ἢ τῶν αὐτοῦ τινα (Rhet. 2. 8. 2). — μογοῦντι: Ep. = πονοῦντι. — ταῦτά: adv. = τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον = ὁμοίως (eodem modo), hence impartially. — πλανωμένη: roaming.

Heute an dieser Pforte pocht es, Morgen an jener." — πρὸς ἄλλοτ' ἄλλον: more expressive than if not interwoven. — προσιζάνει: alights upon (metaphor from a bird of prey).

277. οὐκ ἀκούσαις: not unwilling (litotes), natural to the Greek. but imported into English from the study of the classics. — ἐπεθώυξας: dramatic aor., here a real past. See on 73. Cp. 393.

279. καί: and (in accordance with that desire). — κραιπνόσυτον: poet. adj. = ταχέως φερόμενον (λαβρόσυτος 601).

280. "Inhabit as birds wing

281. πόρον: (high-)way, ἐν ᾧ τὴν πορείαν ποιοῦνται τὰ ὄρνευ (schol.). Cp. Eur. I.T. 253 ἀξέου πόρον (of the sea). — ὀκριοέσση: rough. The highway of the birds was ὁμαλός. but the χθών. where Prometheus was bound. was τραχύς.

282. πελῶ: Att. fut. of πελάζω.

283. Prometheus is interrupted by the arrival of an unexpected visitor. The framework of the drama is thus made more elastic and the audience kept in suspense.

284. Enter Oceanus from the right, mounted on a winged steed.

The chorus has the same attitude toward Zeus as Prometheus, but declares that his resistance to Zeus is foolish, not reproachfully, but entreatingly, that he may be-think himself of some means to obtain respite of his suffering. Oceanus, on the other hand, mis-judging the haughty character of Prometheus, demands complete and humble submission to the will of the sovereign. Nowhere is there a hint of the relationship existing between Oceanus and the chorus. — δολιχῆς: Ep. = μακρᾶς. Cp. δ 393 δολιχὸν ὄδον. — τέρμα κελεύθου: poet. = τέλος ὁδοῦ, so-called terminal acc. with ἦκω (not the obj. of διμειψάμενος). Cp. 717. 724. 729. Prom. Luom. Fr. 7.

285. διαμειψάμενος πρὸς σέ: having traversed (sc. τὴν κέλευθον) to thee. Cp. Sept. 334 διαμειψαίω ὄδον, Eur. Fr. 123 διὰ μέσου γὰρ αἰθέρος | τέμνων κέλευθον.

286. "The hors that hadde wynges for to fle," but not Pegasus, nor a griffin. Sea deities are represented in older Greek art as riding on sea horses. — πτερυγικῆ:

formed like the Homeric ποδόκη (= ὠκύπτερον).

287. Directing by my will without (= and not with) a bridle bit. The steed is endowed with reason and does not require a guiding rein. So the golden handmaids of Hephaestus (Σ 419), Achilles' steed Xanthus (Γ 407), the horse Falada endowed with speech in Grimm's Märchen, the ships of the Phaeacians (θ 560).

288. συναλγῶ: "thy sorrow aches in me." The variety of expressions for sympathy is noteworthy (161, 243, 274, 303, 414, 1059). — ἴσθι: an excellent touch; the insistence upon his sympathy casts just a shadow of doubt on his sincerity in contrast with the unaffected pity of the nymphs.

289. Multum ualet communio sanguinis (Cic. Pro Roscio Amer. 22. 63). — τὸ συγγενὲς: since he is the son of Uranus and Gaea. The villagers of Loukka in Zaccynthus sing a song to-day, which runs: Καλὸ ποῦ εἶναι, τὸ σύγνεο ν' ἦναι συμμαζωμένο | Καὶ σὲ καλὸ καὶ σὲ κακὸ ν' ἦναι συντροφεμένο, 'Kinship is an excellent bond of

290. ἔσαναγκάζει: constrains. The cpd. is unusual. — χωρίς: apart from, whereas ἄνευ = sine. But the best authors sometimes neglect the distinction. — τέ . . . τέ: never in Att. inscr., but occasionally in the orators, especially Lys. and Isoc., to connect sentences (never words).

291. μοῖραν: part (of consideration) due, honor. Cp. Eur. Suḗphl. 241 νέμοντες τῷ φθόνῳ πλέον μέρος, Soph. Tr. 1238 νέμειν ἐμοὶ φθίνοντι μοῖραν, Plato, Crat. 398 B μεγάλην μοῖραν καὶ τιμὴν ἔχει.

292. νείμαιμι: without ἄν simply because οὐκ ἔστιν ὄτω = οὐκ ἔστιν ὅπως τινι = πῶς ἄν = οὐκ ἄν. Except in a few fixed phrases the pure opt. is not used for opt. with ἄν in Attic. All the so-called examples are of the same type (exc.

those in direct questions). It is prob. a relic, and was handed down as a formula, οὐκ ἔστιν ὄτω satisfying ἄν's claim. In 291 there is an -αν just before the opt., which cheats the ear and the regimen. So the Eng. possessive ("innocence' white soul"), GMT. 241, GS. 450.

293. τάδε: proleptic. — ἔτυμα: real, Ion. for ὀρθά. Cp. ἔτυμολογία, ὀρθοπέπια. ἀληθές = candid; τὸ ὄν = that which really is.

294. χαριτογλωσσείν: gloze) (tell simple sooth, i.e. ἔτυμα — in deed as well as in word to be a friend: μή μοι ἀνὴρ εἶη γλώσση φίλος, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἔργῳ (Theogn. 973). Cp. Cho. 266 γλώσσης χάριν δὲ πάντ' ἀπαγγελέει. Eur. Or. 1514 γλώσση χαρίζει. See on 180. — ἐνι μοι: = ἐνεστί μοι = ἐν τῇ φύσει ἐνεστί μοι. Cp. Eur. Bacch. 316 ἐν τῇ φύσει | τὸ σωφρονεῖν ἐνεστιν εἰς τὰ πάντ' αἰί.

295. σήμαινε: show in detail (pres.), but σήμηνον (564), show (aor.), insisting on the accomplishment of the action.

307. ὄρῳ, Προμηθεῦ: so the chorus (144). — γέ: emphasizing the fact that νουθετήσεις and παραινέσεις lay nearest his heart. The good old man of the sea is now about to admonish one who ordinarily needs advice least; the recommendations of the well-meaning friend are calculated to incite the stiff-necked Titan to further resistance. 309. "Those who know | Themselves, who wisely take | Their way through life, and bow | To what they cannot break" (Matthew Arnold, Empedocles). — γίγνωσκε σαυτὸν: learn to know thyself (endeavor): γνώθι σεαυτὸν, come to a knowledge of thyself (attainment). Cp. 327, 334, GS.

303. — Praecepto monitus, saepe te considera (Phaedr. 3. 8. 1), "Examinez-vous bien, et vous verrez qu'il y aura toujours de votre faute" (Lesage, Gil Blas), "Full wys is he that can him-selven knowe (Moukes Tale 3329). — The Greeks (and the French) recognize a certain bluntness about the imv. The pres. is not so abrupt, so urgent, as the aorist. — This proverb (as μηδὲν ἄγαν 318, 327, comp. 507. 543) the Greek applied to all the phases of life. Like θιητὰ φρονεῖν, καιρὸν ὄρα, etc., they arose and flourished on Ionic soil, and in the modern world have evoked a prodigious philosophic literature. "E caelo descendit γνῶθι σεαυτόν," says Juvenal (Sat. 4. 11. 27). Socrates based all knowledge on an obedience to this commandment. — "Once read thy own breast right. . . . Man gets no other light. . . . Sink in thyself! There ask what ails thee" (Arnold, Emped.). In the Charmides of Plato, Critias maintains that τὸ γινγνώσκειν ἑαυτόν is the same as σωφροσύνη. — μεθ-άρμοσαι τρόπους: "Amend your ways and your doings" (Jer. 7. 3). "Self is sin-obstinate, if self amend not" (Old Eng. Play).

311. τεθηγμένους: whetted ("speak daggers"). Cp. Soph. Ai. 584 γλῶσσά σου τεθηγμένη, Sept. 715 τεθηγμένον τοί μ' οὐκ ἀπαμβλυνεῖς λόγῳ, Eur. Or. 1625 λῆμ' ἔχων τεθηγμένον, Hipp. 689 ὀργῇ συντεθηγμένος φρένας, Psalms 64. 3 "Whet their tongue like a sword. . . shoot their arrows, even bitter words." The Greeks were freer than we in the use of γλῶσσα (χάλκευε γλῶσσαν Pind. P. 1. 86), but Holofernes speaks of a "tongue filed" (L.L.L. 5. 1).

312. ρίψεις: hurlest forth, like a thunderbolt (1043). Cp. 932, Eur. Alc. 679 νεανίας λόγους

(of which there are almost three times as many cases in Aesch. as of the subjv.; in Soph. and Eur. they are more evenly balanced). GMT. 447. — τάχα: haply. Aristotle says (Rhet. 2. 13. 1) that old men have met with so many failures that they are not sure of anything: οἴονται, ἴσασιν δ' οὐδέν, καὶ ἀμφισβητοῦντες προστιθέουσιν αἰεὶ τὸ "ἴσως" καὶ "τάχα," καὶ πάντα λέγουσιν οὕτω, παγίως (positively) οὐδέν. — καὶ μακρὰν κτέ.: though seated high above. — Oceanus warns his friend that Zeus may "give him a punishment fit for his mischief," that "with reiterated crimes he might | Heap on himself damnation." — μακρὰν: adverbial. — ἀνωτέρω: only here in Aeschylus.

313. "I dare not speak lest Heaven's fell King | Should hear" (Shelley, P.U. 1. 140). — θακῶν: prose καθεζόμενος. — κλύοι: with ἄν as durative fut., the indic. being ambiguous (both durative and aoristic), τάχα toning down the

319. A freq. sentiment in the Greek poets. Cp. Pind. O. 1. 85 ἀκέρδεια λέλογχεν θαμινὰ κακαγόρος. — ἐπίχειρα : pay (for the laborer, χειροτέχνης). Cp. Plato, Rep. 608 C τά γε μέγιστα ἐπίχειρα ἀρετῆς, Ar. Vesp. 581 ταύτης ἐπίχειρα.

320. σὺ : εἶ is dispensed with. See on 42. — ταπεινός : humilis, extremely rare in this sense, usually = grovelling, low. — εἴκεις κακοῖς : cp. Soph. Ant. 472 εἴκειν δ' οὐκ ἐπίσταται κακοῖς (to evils dire-she knoweth not to yield). To the Greek there was nothing admirable in the action of a man who refused to bend under the weight of disaster; but the unyieldingness of a woman situated as Antigone marked the heroic.

Hērō. 874 ἄλλο πρὸς κακῷ κακόν. — δέ: fourth word in the verse because the preceding words are closely linked together. Cp. 381.

323 ff. πρὸς κέντρα κῶλον ἔκτενεῖς: paraphrase of a homely and oft-quoted proverb from Aeschylus to Paul. Cp. Ag. 1624 πρὸς κέντρα μὴ λάκτιζε, Pind. P. 2. 173 ποτὶ κέντρον λακτιζέμεν ὀλισθηρὸς . . . οἶμος, "To kick at the goad | But lengthens the road," Acts 9. 5 and 26. 14, Ter. Phorm. 1. 2. 28 ad-uorsum stimulum calces, Ammian. Marcell. 18. 19 ne contra acumina calcitraret, Dante, Inferno 9. 94 f. "Perchè ricalcitrare a quella voglia." The fut. ἔκτενεῖς is used as a familiar (not harsh) inv., as the Countess says to the Clown in All's Well (1. 3), "You'll be gone, Sir Knave, and do as I command you."

324. ὑπεύθυνος: like the office-holders in Athens. None may ask of Zeus an accounting of his stewardship.

325. εἶμι: fut. of ἔρχομαι in

326. ἐάν: the inscriptional form; ἦν the Thucydidean form (to avoid common phraseology?); ἄν late (but see Lys. 22). — ἐκλῦσαι: with δύνωμαι. Cp. Plato, Legg. 638 E πειρώμενος ἂν ἄρα δύνωμαι.

327. Make an effort to hold thy peace and bridle thy all too unruly tongue (= γλώσσης μάλιστα πανταχοῦ κράτει), “Mäßige deinen Zorn: es fallen die Funken des Zornes erst auf Dich” (Herder), φρονεῖν δὲ θνητὸν ὄντ' οὐ χρὴ μέγα (Eur. Fr. 77). — λαβροστόμει: cp. Soph. Ai. 1147 τὸ σὸν λάβρον στόμα. 328. ἀκριβῶς: = ἄκρως, with περισσο- = a double superlative (περισσόφρων = λίαν συνετός) — remonstrance, not irony.

329. “Where the tongue wags, ruin never lags” (Mrs. Browning). Not quite so harsh is πληγὰς αἰὲ προστρίβεται τοῖς οἰκέταις (Ar.

Eq. 5). Cp. Soph. Ant. 127 Ζεὺς γὰρ μεγάλης γλώσσης κόμπους | ὑπερεχθαίρει (Zeus abominates the boasts of a great tongue). Sen. Thyestes 613 quem dies vidit veniens superbum, | hunc dies vidit fugiens iacentem. — ματαία: = λαβροστόμω. — προστρίβεται: empiric present.

330. Observe the symmetry in the number of verses (in 320–339). — ζηλῶ σε: I congratulate thy fortune (= μακαρίζω σε, sc. ‘that thou art not held guilty as well as I’). Cp. Eur. Med. 60. — ὀθούνεκα: trag. for ὅτι. — ἐκτὸς αἰτίας: cp. Soph. Ant. 445 ἔξω βαρείας αἰτίας. — κυρεῖς: tu te trouves = εἶ, τυγχάνεις ὦν, though occasionally in Ion. prose = τυγχάνειν (nancisci); as a copula practically confined to tragedy.

332. ἔασον: let be, have done. Cp. Φ 221 ἄγε δὴ, καὶ ἔασον. — μηδέ: instead of καὶ μὴ (ἔασον neg. in character). — μελησάτω: cp. 1002 f. The 3d pers. of the aor. imv. in prohibitions is found in all departments of literature, but rarely the 2d in any domain (none in the orators).

333. Note the alliteration — the π of caution. Oceanus is warned to be more ware. — πάντως . . . οὐ: more emphatic than οὐδαμῶς. Cp. 1053, Eur. Hipp. 1062. — νιν: = αὐτόν. See on 46. — εὐπιθήης: cp. 34.

334. πάπταινε: circumspice, Ep., rare in trag., freq. in Pindar. Cp. 1034. — πημανθῆς: = βλαβῆς. — ὀδῶ: mission = ἐὰν ἔλθης. Cp. 951, Sept. 37 μὴ ματᾶν ὀδῶ.

335. πολλῶ: rare in this sense in some authors (Aeschines prefers πολύ). — τοὺς πέλας: not "die Nächsten," "les prochains," but "autrui," those who have any relations whatsoever with us, not belonging to the group οἰκεῖοι, ἐπιτήδαιοι, φίλοι, ἀναγκαῖοι. — πέλας is archaic and poet. for πλησίον. — φρενοῦν: instruct. — ἔφυσ: = οἶος εἶ.

336. ἔργῳ κοῦ λόγῳ: a common and natural contrast in a state where the ἥπτων λόγος became the κρείττων under the skillful manipulation of the σοφισταί. Cp. 1080. — τεκμαίρομαι: draw conclusions from premises (τεκμήρια).

337. 'I go, and prithee stay me not.'

338. αὐχῶ: I vaunt, i.e. feel confident, — repeated to enforce the entreaty in 337. — δωρειάν: the older form, but δωρεάν prevails at the end of the fifth century.

349. ἔστηκε: virtual pres. — κίον' οὐρανοῦ: cp. Pind. P. 1. 35 κίων δ' οὐρανία συνέχει (Aetna), Hdt. 4. 184 ἔστί δὲ (Atlas) στεινὸν καὶ κυκλοτερέσ πάντη, ὑψηλὸν δὲ οὕτω δὴ τι λέγεται ὡσ τὰσ κορυφὰσ αὐτοῦ οὐχ οἶά τε εἶναι ιδέσθαι . . . τοῦτον κίονα τοῦ οὐρανοῦ λέγουσι οἱ ἐπιχώριοι εἶναι, Verg. Aen. 4. 248 ff. Atlantis cinctum adsidue cui nubibus atris | piniferum caput et uento pulsatur et imbri, | nix umeros infusa tegit.

350. ἐρείδων: propping. Pausanias uses ἀνέχων, showing that the conception of propping pillars that keep the earth and sky apart (a 53) had been transformed into the idea that the Titan himself was the κίων. Aeschylus follows Homer, not Hesiod. For the various interpretations of the Homeric passage see Roscher, Lex. der griech. u. röm. Myth. 1. 704. Being πελώρια the giants were compared to tops of mountains: τὴν δὲ γυναικα εὔρον ὄσσην τ' ὄρεοσ κορυφῆν (κ 113). Polyphemus is like ρίψ ὑληέντι ὑψηλῶν ὀρέων. — οὐκ εὐάγκαλον: not easily borne (litotes).

351 ff. A reflex of Pindar's description (P. 1. 30). Cp. Hes. Theog. 820 ἐπεὶ Τιτῆνασ ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ ἐξέλασε Ζεὺσ, | ὀπλότατον τέκε παῖδα Τυφωέα Γαῖα πελώρη | . . . ἐκ δὲ οἱ ὤμων ἦν ἑκατὸν κεφαλαὶ ὄφιοσ, δεινοῖο δράκοντοσ. — γηγενῆ: τὸν ἐκ τῆσ γῆσ γεννηθέντα Τιτᾶνα. — τέ: first syl. of a tribrach (usually, however, the last, or a monosyllabic particle closely connected with the preceding word). — Κιλικίων κτέ.: τόν ποτε | Κιλικίον θρέψεν πολυώνυμον ἄντρον· νῦν γε μὰν | ταί θ' ὑπὲρ Κύμασ ἀλιερκέεσ ὄχθαι | Σικελία τ' αὐτοῦ πιέζει στέρνα λαχνάεντα (Pind. P. 1. 17). 352. ῥῆκτιρα: I took compassion on (aor.), ordinary prose ἠλέησα, which does not occur in Aesch.; but cp. ἐλεινός (246): οἰκτίρειν has to do with emotion, ἐλεεῖν with action, hence Almosen, alms, eleemosynary. — δάιον: destructive (orig. burning); Ep. and Dor. for πολέμιος (prose and inscriptional).

353. ἑκατογκάρανον: "hundred" is a round number, convenient for the designation of a πλήθος. Briareus has a hundred hands, the viper of Aeacus a hundred heads (Ar. Ran. 473). Cp. Hes. Theog. 150 τῶν ἑκατὸν μὲν χεῖρες ἀπ' ὤμων αἰσσοῖντο | ἄπλαστοι, κεφαλαὶ δὲ ἐκάστῳ πεντήκοντα. In Çakuntala (Act 6) Matali tells Dushyanti there is a race of giants, the descendants of Kalanemi (a Daitya with a hundred arms and heads), whom the gods find difficulty in subduing. — πρὸς βίαν: amain = βία (380).

354. Τυφῶνα: Smoke (of the volcano), then a dust-storm: "The red-hot breath of the most lone Simoom | Which dwells but in the desert, and sweeps o'er | The barren sands" (Byron, Manfred 3. 1). τυφὸς signifies τὴν ἀνάδοσιν τὴν ἐκ τῆς γῆς, and is the δαίμων τῶν ἀτμῶν (typhoid) καὶ τοῦ ὑπογείου καὶ εἰς σεισμοὺς καὶ ἠφαιστείους ἐκρήξεις ἐκδηλουμένου πυρός (Ety. Mag. p. 772. 50). — θοῦρον: furious. Homeric epithet of Ares, esp. applicable to a τυφῶς. — δέ: the continuation of the description by participles and adjectives would have been too cumbrous.

356. And from his eyes the lurid lightning's flash flamed forth. — “and every eye | Glared lightning, and shot forth pernicious fire” (Milton, P.L. 6. 848). — ἤστραπτε: trans. See on 168. — γοργωπὸν: cp. 253. 667, Sept. 537 (γοργὸν ὄμμα). Athena was γοργῶπις. Odysseus is afraid of seeing a γοργεῖη κεφαλὴ in Hades.

357. ὡς . . . ἐκπέρσων: deter- mined to destroy (O.O.); prose διαφθερῶν. — τυραννίδα: “the tyranny of heaven” (Milton, P.L. 1. 124). — βία: (take) by storm, — intensely personal (cp. Κράτος καὶ Βία), whereas ἀνάγκη is impers. Both signify overpowering might.

358. Cp. 667. — αὐτῷ: dat. of interest. — ἄγρυπνον: unsleeping (epithet transferred to the thing). Zeus was ever watchful. — καὶ κεν ὄγε (Typho) θνητοῖσι καὶ ἀθανάτοισι ἀναξεν, | εἰ μὴ ἀρ' ὄξυ νόησε πατῆρ ἀνδρῶν τε θεῶν τε (Hes. Theog. 837 f.); cp. πληξε: literal (in 133 metaph. as well); the pass. (ἐξεπλάγη) has only the transferred sense.

361. φρένας: midriff, praecordia (the source of the ὑψηγόνων κομπασμάτων). So heart in Chaucer ("than herte may bythink," "the intellect . . . | That dwelled in his herte, sik and sore"). Cp. "stomach": "How tender-stomach'd you are" (Beaum. & Fl.), "Thy inward heart's contrition | Doth move my stomach in wonderful condition" (Old Eng. Play). The ancients called the diaphragm φρένες (διάφραγμα is a late word). Cp. 881. See on 34.—τυπεῖς: prose πληγείς.

362. Was to cinder scathed and thunder-blasted of his strength. "Was scorched to ashes by a sudden flash | Of the offended god's terrific eye" (Kalidasa, Çakuntala 3). "Vedeva Briareo, fitto dal tèlo | Celestial. giacer dall' altra parte, | Grave alla terra per lo mortal gelo" (Dante, Purgatorio 12. 28 ff.).—ἐφεισάλωθη: was burnt to ashes (φέψαλος = σπινθήρ = charcoal spark).—σθένος: acc. retained object (robur tonitru expulsum et confectum est). G. 1239, HA. 724 a, B. 340, 1, Gl. 534 b.

364. στενωποῦ: narrow.—πλησίον: hard by (only here). See on 335.

365. ἱπούμενος: down-crushed, a rare word = πιεζόμενος, ἀποθλιβόμενος. Cp. Ar. Eq. 924 ἱπούμενος ταῖς εἰσφοραῖς (oppressed by taxes). Pind. O. 4. 10 Αἴτναν ἔχεις | Ἴπον ἀνεμέοσαν ἑκατογκεφάλα Τυφῶνος. Typho feels the force of Hephaestus' blows on the anvil.

expirare caminis, 8. 418 ff. subter specus et Cyclopum exesa caminis | antra Aetnaea tonant ualidique incudibus ictus | auditi referunt gemitus striduntque cauernis. — ἦμενος: Ep. for καθήμενος, καθεζόμενος. — μυδροκτυπεῖ: hammers molten ore. Cp. Eur. H.F. 992 μυδροκτύπον μίμημα. Thucydides speaks of three eruptions of Aetna (3. 116), the last of which occurred in 425. A fourth is mentioned by Diodorus as taking place in 395. In Theog. 860 Hesiod refers to the earliest known. — “The shattered side | Of thundering Aetna, whose combustible | And fuelled entrails thence conceiving fire | . . . aid the winds” (Milton, P.L. 1. 232 ff.). Cp. Lycurg. 95 τῆς Αἴτνης ῥύακος πυρὸς . . . τοῦτον δὲ ῥεῖν φασιν ἐπὶ τὴν ἄλλην χῶραν. The Greek is utilitarian — he thinks of the damage done; a modern poet thinks of the sublimity of the spectacle: “The volcano’s fierce eruptive crest. | Whose splendor from the black abyss is flung, | While the scorched mountain, from whose burning breast | A temporary torturing flame is wrung, | Shines for a night of terror, then repels | Its fire back to the hell from whence it sprung, | The hell which in its entrails ever dwells” (Byron, Prophecy of Dante, Canto 3), “A vast flood of bowlders, liquefied | Metals, and molten sand | Hissing adown the mountain’s grassy flanks” (Leopardi, La Ginestra). But cp. Nero 3. 3 “The fire increaseth and will not be stayed, | But like a stream that, tumbling from a hill, | O’erwhelms the fields, o’erwhelms the hopeful toil | O’ the husbandman.” So Pindar differs from the other Greek poets. Vv. 367–388 rest on Pindar, P. 1. 30–50. The remainder has its source in Hesiod.

368. πυρός: gen. of material (with the prep. in Suppl. 953 ἐκ κριθῶν μέθῃ). — δάπτοντες: devouring, prose κατεσθίοντες. Cp. Cho. 281 ἀγρίαις γνάθοις λειχῆνας (skin-eruptions) ἐξέσθοντας, Eum. 1041 πυριδάπτῳ λαμπάδι, Eur. Med. 1187 παμφάγον πυρός, 1189 ἔδαπτον σάρκα, La Ginestra “The dread seething mass . . . | That pours adown the sandy back | . . . the prowling flood inexorable.” Herodotus tells us that the Egyptians conceived fire to be a wild beast, πάντα δὲ αὐτὸ κατεσθίειν τάπερ ἄν λάβῃ (3. 16). Cp. Verg. Georg. 3. 566 artus sacer ignis edebat.

Cp. 394.

370. Such seething wrath will Typho boiling up spout forth. Cp. Lycophr. 689 τυφῶνος ἀγρίου δέμας φλογμῶ ζέουσα. Typho is called χθόνιος δαίμων, Sept. 522, and is hated by gods and men. Cp. Eur. Bacch. 8 τυφόμενα Διὸς πυρὸς ἔτι ζῶσαν φλόγα, smouldering with the still living flame of fire divine. — The molten rock often covers many square miles. In Idaho there is an immense lava plain, whose scanty soil now supports sage brush. In the Western Ghats the lava has spread over an area greater than that of the Middle States and New England. The lava from Hekla and Mauna Loa flows like molasses. Vesuvius and Pêlée represent the explosive. So the volcanoes of Mexico and of the Andes.

371. With streams of hot, appalling, surging soughs of fire. A multiplication of adjectives is characteristic of poetry (esp. Aesch.), but common in Eng.

prose. Cp. Pers. 316 ζαπληθῆ δάσκιον γενειάδα (thick, bushy, red beard), Suppl. 794 λίσσους αἰγίλιψ ἀπρόσδεικτος οἰόφρων κρεμᾶς | γυπᾶς πέτρα, Bacchyl. 5. 97 καλυκοστεφάνου | σεμνᾶς χόλον Ἄρτεμιδος λευκωλένου. — ἀπλάτου: unapproachable = οὐ πλάτου (Eum. 53). Cp. Pind. P. 12. 15 ἀπλάτοις ὀφίων κεφαλαῖς. — βέλεσι: picturesque for ρεύμασι.

372. καίπερ: see on 167. — ἠνθρακωμένος: charred, incinerated.

373. The poet reverts to the subject of the mission to Zeus. — οὐκ ἄπειρος: litotes. Oceanus is old, has seen much, has kept the same office for three administrations. The insinuation made by Prometheus is that he has been a time-server, a self-saver (374). — ἐμοῦ διδασκάλου: a retort to the counsellor's exhortation (322).

374. χρήξεις: prose δέου (indigis), hence the gen. (pers. as well as rei). Cp. Soph. O.T. 597 οἱ σέθεν χρήζοντες, 932 ὅτου χρήζων. — σεαυτὸν σῶζε: double en-

377. τοῦτο: directing attention more sharply to the statement about to be made. Even νομίζειν can take ὅτι so. — γιγνώσκεις: = οἶσθα (as often).

378. Words are a distempered temper's balm. "Proverb-book bound up in folio, | Have ye no other sense to answer me | But every word a proverb? No other English?" (Two Angry Women of Abingdon 2. 1). Cp. Pers. 750 νόσος φρενῶν, Eur. Fr. 962 ἄλλ' ἐπ' ἄλλῃ φάρμακον κείται νόσῳ · λυπουμένῳ μὲν μῦθος εὐμενῆς φίλων, Isoc. 7. 39 τῶν μὲν περὶ τὸ σῶμα νοσημάτων πολλαὶ θεραπείαι καὶ παντοδαπαὶ τοῖς ἰατροῖς εὔρηνται, ταῖς δὲ ψυχαῖς ταῖς νοσοῦσαις . . . οὐδέν ἐστιν ἄλλο φάρμακον πλὴν λόγος, Menand. 23 λύπης ἰατρός ἐστιν ἀνθρώποις λόγος, 84 οἶκ ἐστιν ὀργῆς, ὡς ἔοικεν. φάρμακον | ἄλλ' ἢ λόγος σπουδαῖος ἀνθρώπου φίλου, Milton, Samson Ag. 184 ff. "Salve to thy sores; apt words have power to suage | The tumours of a fretful mind, | And are as balm to fester'd wounds." Aeschylus, like Plato, often refers to the physician and his τέχνη (475. 499. 878). — ὀργῆς: omission of the article with abstracts is often due to a desire to compress. A more archaic and solemn tone is given to the utterance. Oceanus is speaking ἀρχαῖα (317).

379. ἐν καιρῷ: at the proper time. — μαλθάσση: soften. Cp. Menand. 31 ἀνδρὸς πονηροῦ σπλάγχνον (heart) οὐ μαλάσσεται (= μαλθάσσεται).

380. σφριγῶντα: turgescent, intumescent ("puff'd with such proud tumours," Chapman, Bussy 2. 1). Cp. Cic. Tusc. 3. 76 erat in tumore animus. — θυμὸν: has a wider range in Homer than afterward. The meaning temper survives in cpds. Cp. Eng. temper (see note on verse 80). — ἰσχυαίνῃ: squeeze dry (reducing the ulcer), hence allay. Cp. 381. ἐν: repetition of the prep. is a matter of style (often in Eur.) — here natural by reason of the distance of ἐνούσαν. — δέ: see on 321.

382. "Teach me, and I will hold my tongue; and give me to understand wherein I have erred" (Job 6. 24). Oceanus, believing it to be his duty to bring about a reconciliation at all hazards, does not rest content with a "non nostrum inter uos tantas componere lites" (Verg. Ecl. 3. 108).

383. Trouble superfluous and silly simple-mindedness. Prometheus thinks that his well-meaning friend "darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge" (Job 38. 2), believes ἀρχὴν δὲ θηρᾶν οὐ πρόπει τὰμήχανα (Soph. Ant. 92) and ὅστις δὲ πράσσει πολλὰ μὴ πράσσειν χρεῶν | μῶρος (Eur.

Cp. Thuc. 3. 83 τὸ εὐηθες, οὐ τὸ γενναῖον πλείστον μετέχει καταγελοισθὲν ἠφανίσθη. Prometheus' mood, as shown by his brief reply, is observed by Oceanus, who responds almost as curtly, and the dialogue passes over into stichomythy.

384. “But suffre me my mischef to biwayle. | For thy proverbes may me nought avayle” (Tro. & Criseyde 1. 755 f.). — νόσῳ: dat. of respect. for it is not a νόσος after all (hence not cogn. acc.). So Soph. Tr. 544 νοσοῦντι . . . τῆδε τῆ νόσῳ. — νοσεῖν: has a wide sweep in Greek.

385. A maxim: best to be thought unwise when (really) wise (than not to be wise). Emphasis on the first and last words. κέρδιστον here practically = ἄριστον. Cp. *Soph. Browning, Paracelsus “as birds their trackless way.” — ψαίρει: flaps, as a horse would stamp the ground with his hoofs, impatient to be off. “Raudit,” in Verg. Aen. 5. 216 (usually quoted as an equiv.), is different. Cp. Il. 756 aethera uerberat alis, and contrast 1. 301 remigio alarum, Lucret. 6. 743 remigi pennarum.

396. σταθμοῖς ἐν οἰκείοισι: in his stable at home. This order (noun before and adj. after the prep.) is rarer than the reverse. σταθμοῖς is ὅπου οἱ ἵπποι ἴστανται. Cp. Eur. Hec. 1080 πᾶ στω, πᾶ κάμψω; — ἄσμενος ἄν κάμψειεν γόνυ: would fain bend knee (hence ἐν).

397-435. The first stasimon. Both the rhythm (Ionic) and the first word give the keynote to the song; “and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the Lord had brought upon him” (Job 42. 11). “I wol bywaile in maner of tragedye | The harm of hem that stood in heigh degré. | And fallen so ther is no remedye, | To bring hem out of her aduersitée” (Chaucer, Moukes Tale 15459 ff.). The unceasing moaning and mourning of man and nature are emphasized by the sextuple repetition of στένω. With the enumeration of all the races of the world in this ode compare the registry of the nations of Asia in the opening of the Persae.

397-405. ‘I moan thy fate, thy bitter fate, Prometheus; from my eyes fall the tears—adown my cheek the flood of waters run. O monstrous it is! Zeus, holding sway as a despot, in the face of the gods that have fallen arrogantly flaunts his scepter.’

397. στένω: gemo; ὀδύρομαι (642) lamentor; ὀλορίζω ululo. — οὐλομένας: hapless (only here and Eur. Phoen. 1529), Ep. for ὀλομένας (perditae) = prose ὀλεθρίας. — ὀλόμενος: ὀλοιο :: ὀνήμενος: ὄναιο. Cp. 554. — τύχας: gen. of cause.

411. ἔποικον νέμονται: = οἶκον ἔχουσι ἐπι = ἐποικοῦσι. Cp. 415, 419. — ἀγνᾶς: often in the poets, esp. of rivers (434); here of a country enveloped in mystery. — ἔδος: prose οἶκον. The gen. is appositive, the construction Homeric (Δ 406 Θήβης ἔδος, ν 344 Ἰθάκης ἔδος). The tragedians use βάθρον in similar fashion.

412. μεγαλοστόνοισι: meriting great στόνοι.

414. συγκάμνουσι: see on 274. Cp. Eur. Alc. 614 ἦκω κακοῖσι σοῖς συγκάμων.

415-419. 'And the daughters of the Colchian land, intrepid in battle, and all the Scythian hordes that habit the uttermost parts of the earth by the distant shore of Maeotis.' "The men of Colchis at thy suffering grieve; | The shaggy dwellers in the Scythian rocks, | The Mosch condemned to perpetual snows | That never wept at kindred's burials, | Suffers with thee and feels his heart to soften" (Nero 3. 3).

415 ff. The recurrence of the final οι produces the effect of a rhyming lyric and reminds one

Cp. 723, Soph. Li. 365 τὸν ἐν δαίοις ἄτρεστον μάχαις. — μάχας: gen. depending on an a priv. adj. Cp. Soph. O. T. 885 Δίκας ἀφόβητος, Tr. 23 ἀταρβῆς τῆς θέας.

417. Σκύθης: adj. (as in 2). — ὄμιλος: Ion., Ep., Thuc. = ὄχλος, πλῆθος. — οἱ: constructio ad sensum. Cp. 421, 805, 808.

418 ff. ἔσχατον: uttermost, extremum; τελευταῖον = ultimum; ὑστατον = postremum. Cp. 666. τόπον: locum; χώρα (407) = regio; γῆς (417) = terrae. — Μαιῶτιν λίμναν: Sea of Azov.

420-424. * And all of Aria's martial glory, all that hold the high and beetling tower of Caucasus, warriors fierce that thundering down rush to th' encounter with brazen lances crashing.'

420. Flower of Aria in arms. Cp. Ag. 197 ἄνθος Αργείων. See App.

421. ὑψίκρημνον: high-beetling. — πόλισμα: prose πόλις. — νέμουσιν: = οἰκοῦσιν. Cp. 412 νέμονται. Eum. 1019 Παλλάδος πόλιν νέμοντες.

423 f. ὄξυπρώροισι: sharp-pointed (i.e. pointed), the last part of the cpd. is not redundant (as τηλέπλανοι 577). The advanced line of spears is like a squadron ready for the ἐμβολή (ramming). — βρέμων ἐν αἰχμαῖς resounding in the crash of spears. The prep. is used for vividness. Cp. Eur. Phoen. 113 πολλοὶ μὲν ἵπποις, μυρίοις δ' ὄπλοις βρέμων.

425-430. 'One other alone have I seen in like thralldom, a Titan, in fetters adamantine ignominiously bound, Atlas, the mighty, the strong, on his shoulders supporting the high vault of heaven and 'neath its burden groaning.' — As in Eur. Med. 1282 (μίαν . . . μίαν τῶν πάρος) a single past example is cited and dwelt upon in the last strophe. In the Luomenos Prometheus advises Heracles to send Atlas for the apples of the Hesperides, not to go himself. See App.

425. δῆ: often with μόνον as with a superlative. Cp. 216.

426. δαμέντα: prose καταστραφέντα.

427. εἰσιδόμαν: trebly poetic (dialect, voice, omission of augment). The only middle cpd. of this verb retained in prose is προῖδέσθαι.

428 ff. Atlantis duri, caeli qui uertice fulcit (Aen. 4. 247), maximus Atlas . . . aetherios humero qui sustinet axis (8. 136). "And bar the hevене upon his necke longe" (Monkes Tale 15596).

"Those starry towers | That earth-born Atlas, groaning, underprops" (Marlowe, Dido 1). — The Pleiades weep for him (Fr. 298). The penalty was inflicted probably for taking part in the rebellion against Zeus. — See App.

430. οὐράνιον: = τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. Analogously πόντιος (433), ποτάμια (Sept. 392). — πόλον: the schol. on Ar. Av. 179 says that differently from the moderns the ancients considered the pole not a point and end of an axis, but the whole vault of heaven. — ὑποστενάζει: supporting on (his shoulders) groans.

431-435. 'The surge of the sea moans and suffers with him, the depths of the waters moan; Hades below in the gloomy abyss of the earth doth groan, and the streams of clear sparkling water murmur and sigh for his anguish in a pathos of woe.' "The respiration of the sea, | The soft caresses of the air, | All things in nature seemed to be | But ministers of her despair" (Longfellow, Vittoria Colonna). So in Çakuntala (Act

Mrs. Browning's Lament for Adonis (Bion): "All the mountains above, and the oak-lands below, | Murmur, ah, ah, Adonis! the streams overflow | Aphrodite's deep wail: river-fountains in pity | Weep soft in the hills: and the flowers as they blow, | Redden outward with sorrow," and Tourneur, Atheist's Tragedy 1. 2: "The lovely face of Heaven was masqued with sorrow, | The sighing winds did move the breast of earth. | The heavy clouds hung down their mourning heads, | And wept sad showers": Longfellow, Masque of Pandora "The swollen rivulet sobs with secret pain . . . and all the air is heavy | With an unspoken sorrow."

431. Cp. Sept. 64 βοᾶ γὰρ κῆμα, Ξ 394 θαλάσσης κῆμα βοαῖ. Byron, Heaven and Earth 1. 3 "The voice of ocean's gloomy swell." — βοᾶ: clamat; καλῶ (91) uoco; κέκραγας (743) uociferaris. — συμπίτων: in sympathy, like συνασχαλῆ (161), συγκάμνουσι (414). — βυθός: deep σιγᾶν με· συννοία δὲ δάπτομαι κέαρ, answereth deep, receiving the mournful cry of the πόντιος κλύδων and passing it on to the μυχὸς γᾶς.

434. "Earth trembled from her entrails, as again | In pangs; and Nature gave a second groan" (Milton, P.L. 9. 1000 f.). — κελαινός: Ep. = prose μέλας. Black victims were sacrificed to the powers of the underworld: an ewe to Gê and to Teiresias; a bull to Achilles and to the Greeks that fell at Plataea; rams to heroes and to Typho. — "Αἶδος: Pluto (possess. gen. with μυχός). — ὑποβρέμει: rumbles below. Cp. 424. — μυχὸς γᾶς: earth-recess (Erdenwinkel des Hades), ἀνγλίων μυχῶν "Αἶδου (Eur. H.F. 607). Cp. 236, 1029.

435. στένουσιν ἄλγος: = στένουσι αὐτὸν τοῦ ἄλγους (not στένουσι ἄλγεινὸν στόνον, στένουσιν ἄλγοῦσαι, as Weckl. takes it). Cp. 397, 409, 425 (ἐν πόνοις). It was the Titan that had the ἄλγος (τί δ' ἄλγος ἴσχοντ' ἐν κακοῖς με λαμβάνεις; Soph. O.T. 1031). Cp. 26, 66, 99, and particularly 238. For the recurrence of the "groan" verb cp. Sept. 900 στόνος, στένουσι πύργοι, στένει πίδαον, Shelley's "Misery" (P.U. 109 ff.), "Eternity" (in Adonais).

436-525. The second episode. Prometheus enumerates the benefits he has conferred on mankind. That the benefactor should suffer such torment increases his indignation against Zeus (438) and augments the sympathy of the spectator for the sufferer. — δικανικοὶ λόγοι in Aeschylus are very rare; but in this episode, in Ag. 281 ff. and Cho. 972 ff. there are traces of the growth of the dialogue from the long speeches of a single actor.

436. Impute it not to pride, not to obduracy. — μή τοι: do not, I beg. Cp. 625. — χλιδῆ: through disdain. — δοκεῖτε: pers. (Ion.) for the impers. (Att.). — αὐθαδία: wilfulness (poet. for αὐθάδεια).

437. "Anger and wrathful fury stop my speech" (Marlowe, Edward II.). — σιωπᾶν = silere, though the distinction is not always observed. παραιῶ σοι σιωπᾶν, says Dionysus to Aeschylus (Ar. Ran. 1133). Schmidt's strictures (in his Synonymik) on Döderlein are unwarranted. Cp. Eur. Hipp. 40, 336, 686, 911, Fr. 127, Suppl. 298. — συννοία: Plato (415 B) defines by διάνοια μετὰ λύπης ἄνευ λόγου ὄρων ἑμαυτὸν ὧδε προυσελούμενον.

440. Cp. 219. 222. — παντελῶς: they owe it all to me. — διώρισεν: defined, i.e. conferred.

441 f. εἰδυίασιν . . . λέγοιμι: would be telling you something you already know (a common Homeric formula). — καὶ γάρ: and well I may for.

443. "The mind of human kind, | Which was late so dusk and obscene and blind" (Shelley, P.U. 4. 93 ff.). The past, not the present state of mankind, is described. Hence the emendations δωρήματα, εὐρήματα, πράγματα and ἔργματα for πῆματα, of which ὡς . . . πρὶν is epeexegetic, are gratuitous. The contrast of the two states magnifies the gifts of Prometheus. — νηπίους: infantes, hence foolish; τὸ πρὶν: = πρότερον (the art. is necessary in prose, but not in poetry).

444. "The Godlike crime was to be kind, | To render with thy precepts less | The sum of human wretchedness, | And strengthen man with his own Mind" (Byron, Prometheus). To man Prometheus "gave that capability and godlike reason" (Hamlet 4. 4), "gaf him witte" (Monkes Tale 15663). — ἔννοους: factitive pred. — ἔθηκα: Ep. and Ion. for ἐποίησα (redidi). Cp. 848. — φρενῶν ἐπηβόλους: φρονίμους, compos mentis. The schol. says the adj. = ἐπιτενκτικούς (Old Eng. "happening of"). Cp. Ag. 380 εὖ πραπίδων λαχόντα. *Soph.  (hence not ἐρῶ). — μέμψιν ἔχων:
in disparagement (= μεμφόμε-νος). — Cp. Thuc. 2. 41 κατάμεμψιν ἔχει. μομφή is the commoner form with ἔχειν.

446. *But setting forth the good that prompted my gift). — ὦν:

 subj. genitive (rei pro pers. here).

447 ff. "E la lor cieca vita è tanto bassa" (Inferno 3. 47), "O purblind race of miserable men" (Tennyson). — These verses, admired by many thinkers and Euripidean in their rhythmical beauty, sketch the beginnings of human society. They have formed an inexhaustible mine for, and been imitated by, many poets, from Euripides (Suppl. 201), Critias, Moschion, and Lucretius to Schiller and Shelley. Prometheus does not say that men are now "as they were from the beginning — blind" (Byron, Heaven and Earth 1. 3), but that once upon a time it could see not" (Psalms 115. 5). Cp.

 "Hear ye, indeed, but understand not, and see ye, indeed, but perceive not" (Isaiah 6. 9), O miseras hominum mentes! O pec-tora caeca! | qualibus in tenebris uitae (Lucret. 2. 14), βλέποντες οὐ βλέπουσιν καὶ ἀκούοντες οὐκ ἀκούουσιν οὐδὲ συνίσουσιν (Matt. 13. 13).

447. πρῶτα: Ep. = πρῶτον.
 — μέν: the corresponding δέ is in 454. — ἔβλεπον: in Aeschylus βλ makes position (exc. in βλαστά-νειν and derivatives).

448. κλύοντες: Ep. — ἤκουον:
 Att. — ὄνειράτων: nom. ὄνιρ (as acc. often used adverbially), with μορφαῖσι = εἰδώλοισι.

449. ἀλίγκιοι: Ep. (only here in trag.) = ὅμοιοι, εἰκότες, Ar.
Av. 687 ἀνέρες εἰκελόνειροι. — τὸν μακρὸν βίον: like ὁ πολὺς βίος (Eur. Hērō. 252), the art. retaining the old demonstrative force.
 The Greeks conceived time as quantity (πολύς), as a rule, not length; but sometimes even μέγας χρόνος appears (Soph. Ai.
 713). Cp. Hdt. 9. 8 σπουδὴν

450 f. “Building nor house they have none at all, | But woods, cots, and caves small. | For they use no manner of iron, | Neither in tool or other weapon” (Old Eng. Play, Four Elements). — ἔφυρον εἰκῆ: (κόσμος βίος. “Live we like brutes, our life without a plan” (M. Arnold). Cp. Eur. Suppl. 201 αἰνῶ θ’ ὅς ἡμῖν βίοτον ἐκ πεφυρμένον | καὶ θηριώδους θεῶν διασταθμήσατο (I thank that god who raised man from his wild and savage state), Stob. Ecl. Phys. 1. 1 βίον διώκησ’ ὄντα πρὶν πεφυρμένον θηρσίν θ’ ὅμοιον. Shelley represents Jupiter as failing to fulfill his pledge that man should rise from mere animalism. His misery was merely negative before; now it is positive (2. 4. 55). “Into their desert hearts fierce wants he sent, | And mad disquietudes, and shadows idle | Of unreal good which levied mutual war.” But Prometheus, like Prospero, took pity on the savage Caliban: “I pitied thee, | Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour | One thing or other: when thou . . . wouldst gabble like | A thing most brutish, I endowed thy purposes | With words that made them known” (Tempest 1. 2). He gave nepenthe, moly, amaranth, love, science, poetry, music, statuary, healing, astronomy, commerce, government. “Such alleviations of his state Prometheus gave to man” (P.U. 2. 4. 98). — οὔτε . . . οὐ: poetic and Herodotean. — πλινθυφεῖς: ἀποξ εἰρημένον = brick-built (lateribus contextos).

451 ff. Tum primum | subiere domos, domus antra fuerunt (Ov. Met. 1. 121), οὐ τὸ πάρος περ | ἀντροῖς ναιετάασκον ἐν οὔρεσιν ἤντε θῆρες. | νῦν δὲ . . . εὔκηλοι διάγουσιν ἐνὶ σφετέρουσιν δόμοισιν (Hymn to Hephaestus). — δόμους: prose οἰκίας. — προσείλους: sun-warmed (πρὸς + εἶλη). Cp. Ar. Vesp. 771 εἶλη κατ’ ὄρθρον, ἡλιάσει πρὸς ἥλιον (πρὸς + ἥλιος = exposed to the sun), Ecl. 64 ἐστῶσα πρὸς τὸν ἥλιον, Fr. 627 πρὸς εἶλην. — ἦσαν: noverant, collat. (Att.) form of ἦδεσαν. — οὐ: cp. Soph. Ant. 257 f. οὔτε θηρὸς οὔτε του κινῶν ἐλθόντος, οὐ σπάσαντος. — ξυλουργίαν: work in wood. — Masonry and wood-work (esp. roofing) are in the poet’s mind, not houses and (wood) fabrics. — Acc. to Pliny Daedalus invented ξυλουργία, and brick houses were first built in Athens by Ergylus and Hyperbios. Aeschylus attributes all to Prometheus and thus enhances the dramatic effect by increasing our compassion for the great benefactor.

452. "Le vieux sang de la bête est resté dans mon corps" (Jean Lahor, Réminiscences à Darwin), "And at thy voice her pining sons | Uplifted their prostrate brows from the polluting dust" (Shelley, P.U. 1. 160 f.). — κατώρυχες: i.e. ὑπὸ γῆς, in defossis specubus. So we have both traditional and geological evidence of the cave-man.—Sed nemora atque cauos montes siluasque colebant. — ὥστε: Ep. = prose ὥσπερ (freq. in Aesch.). — ἀήσυροι: agiles, swarming. — "Allemsig müsst ihr sein, | Ihr Wimmelschaaren" (Faust 2. 1033). Cp. Hdt. 3. 105 ταχυτήτα οὐδενὶ ἐτέρῳ ὁμοῖον (ὁ μύρμηξ). — μυχοῖς: Cp. Hdt. 3. 102 οἱ μύρμηκες ποιούμενοι οἴκησιν ὑπὸ γῆν.

454. χεΐματος τέκμαρ: poet. for χειμῶνος τεκμήριον (token of winter). Cp. Eum. 244 τάνδρὸς ἐκφανὲς τέκμαρ.

456 f. βέβαιον: trustworthy. The postponement of the adj. gives it the force of a pred.—ἄτερ γνώμης: without perspicacity, i.e. ἔφνυρον εἰκῆ πάντα (mixed everything wildly), by reason of their lack of clear-sightedness.—ἔπρασσον: this verb has first a very narrow, then a very wide, scope. Contrast perpetrate (first a wide, then a narrow, range). ποιεῖν meant originally create, then (like do) a substitute for any verb, even πράττειν. Cp. Plato, Charm. 163 B οὐ ταῦτόν καλεῖς τὸ ποιεῖν καὶ τὸ πράττειν, Ε πρᾶξιν ἢ ποιήσιν ἢ ὅπως σὺ βούλει ὀνομάζειν. — ἔστε: Ion., trag., Xen. (never in Homer). — σφιν: αὐτοῖς (454, 460), σφίσιν (481), αὐτοῖς (487).

458. ἔδειξα: dixi, i.e. docui. Cp. 482, Soph. Ai. 1195 ἔδειξεν ὄπλων | Ἐλλασι κρινὸν Ἄρη. — δυσκρίτους: with both nouns. Cp. Eur. Suppl. 22 τό τ' ἔγχος τήν τε

"All these were done, sir, by the mathematics | Without which there's no science, nor no truth" (Beaum. & Fl.). — καὶ μὴν: et vero, furthermore (introduces the third κῶλον of the speech). So 1080. — ἀριθμόν: i.e. τὴν ἀριθμητικὴν (in its widest sense). — ἔξοχον σοφισμάτων: preëminent of sciences. The adj. is a virtual superl., though ἔξοχώταται occurs in Ag. 1622.

460. The invention of the sciences is attributed to Palamedes by Sophocles (Fr. 438); also by Euripides (Fr. 578). Each wrote a play entitled Palamedes. Cp. Isoc. 3. 6 οὐ μόνον τοῦ θηριωδῶς ζῆν ἀπηλλάγημεν ἀλλὰ καὶ συνελθόντες πόλεις ᾠκίσαμεν καὶ νόμους ἐθέμεθα καὶ τέχνας εὕρομεν καὶ σχεδὸν ἅπαντα δι' ἡμῶν μεμαχανημεία λόγος ἡμῖν ἐστὶν ὁ συγκατασκευάσας. — συνθέσεις: more important in the estimation of the Greeks than in ours. Not only was a euphonic arrangement of letters (γραμμαμάτων) demanded, but also an artistic arrangement of words (ὀνομάτων) with reference to their sound, which was much more prominent in their minds than σύνταξις (arrangement with reference to sense). Introd. I. 6. 3.

461. 'By keeping a record of all things which produces and nurtures poetry.' — "Record shall tell men to the after-time" (Clough, Fall of Man 10), "Hail, Memory, Hail! in thy exhaustless mine | From age to age unnumbered treasures shine" (Rogers), rarae per eadem tempora litterae uere una custodia fidelis memoriae rerum gestarum (Livy 6. 2). — μνήμην ἀπάντων: remembrance of all, i.e. to record all past events. — μουσομήτορ' ἐργάνην: a concentrated phrase = μήτηρ τῶν Μουσῶν καὶ τὴν μουσικὴν (culture) ἀπεργαζομένη. Cp. Hes. Theog. 52 Μοῦσαι . . . τὰς ἐν Πιερίῃ τέκε Μνημοσύνη.

supposuisse rotam. Job looks upon behemoth and leviathan as untamable. — κνώδαλα: belua, “gnawing” (ravening) monsters. — “They gaped upon me . . . as a ravening and a roaring lion” (Psalms 22. 13). Cp. Suppl. 264 κνωδάλων βροτοφθόρων, Ar. Vesp. 4 οἶσθά γ' οἶον κνώδαλον φυλάττομεν. Homer uses the word once to designate any wild animal (ρ 317), otherwise only of marine monsters. In Hesiod the word has a wider range.

463. ζεύγλαισι: yoke straps (for hauling), so named in Greece to-day. — σάγμασιν: pack saddles (for carrying), clitellaria (umenta iugalia).

464. The heaviest burdens could be transferred to the backs of the beasts thus tamed. — διάδοχοι: relievers. Cp. 1027. — μοχθημάτων: trag. = laborum = prose πόνων (only here in Aesch.).

465. φιληνίους: proleptic = ὥστε φιληνίους γίγνεσθαι (as a result of the taming), being impatient of the rein before. Job dwells on the restiveness of the horse.

466. Attica had no such magnificent pasture lands as the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, but the Athenians took the same delight (ἄγαλμα) as the Lexingtonians in fine horses, a mark of wealth in both countries. Strep-siades (Ar. Nub.) cannot sleep for thinking of the debts he has contracted to gratify his son's passion for thoroughbreds. Cp. Hdt. 6. 35 Μιλτιάδης ἐὼν οἰκίης τεθριπποτρόφον, Isoc. 16. 33 ἵπποτροφῶν ἐπιχειρήσας, ὃ τῶν εὐδαιμονεστάτων ἔργον ἐστί, φαῦλος δ' οὐδεὶς ἂν ποιήσειεν.

467. Prometheus taught the “wretches born to work and weep” to “Explore the mine (502) and tempt the dangerous deep” (Goldsmith, Deserted Village 104). Cp. Shelley, P.U. 2. 4. 92 f. “He taught to rule, as life directs the limbs. | The tempest-winged chariots of the Ocean.” — θαλασσόπλαγκτα: sea-roving. — ἄλλος ἀντ' ἐμοῦ: cp. 440.

468. λινόπτερα: linen-winged.

470. σόφισμα = μηχανήμα.

471. νῦν παρούσης: temporal and local (thus increasing the pathos). — ἀπαλλαγῶ: 2d aor.
 pass. subjv.: the 1st aor. is never found in Aesch.; in Aristoph. it is rare; in Soph. and Eur. common.

472-475. Primarily to rest the actor — merely an assent to and repetition of Prometheus' thought.

— αἰκὲς πῆμα: unseemly woe (in that he helped others, but could not help himself). — ἀποσφαλεῖς φρενῶν: bereft of understanding.
 The simple verb occurs in Eum.

 never. Cr. Pers. 392 γνώμης ἀπο-οὐκ ἦν ἀλέξῃμ' οὐδέν, οὔτε βρώσιμον

480 οὐ χριστὸν οὐδὲ πιστόν, ἀλλὰ φαρμάκων

475. Find the medicine required to cure thyself. — ὁποίοις: used interchangeably with οἷοις (477). Cp. Lys. 21. 3, 4, 20, and dicam quod sentio (where we should expect dicam quid sentiam). Isocrates is more careful. — ἰάσιμος: the verbal endings in 474 mark clearly enough both the subj. and the pers. (σὺ εἶ). Hence the adj. without εἶ: correct, despite Hartung's sneer at the scholar who imagines that σαντὸν . . . ἰάσιμος is a possibility in Greek. The verse is merely a circumlocution for θεραπεῦσαι (non potes te ipsum mederi). — Antiphanes thought Prometheus' gift was not a boon even to men, ὅστις τέχνην κατέδειξε πρῶτος τῶν θεῶν, οὗτος μέγιστον εὔρεν ἀνθρώποις κακόν.

477. ἐμησάμην: devised; never found in classical prose (= ἐμηχανησάμην). See on 42.

478. "To vex mankind with evils manifold. | So that disease and pain | O'er the whole earth

may reign, | And nevermore return the Age of Gold" (Longfellow, Masque of Pandora), "And gout and stone, that break | Body toward death, and palsy, death-in-life, and wretched age — and worst disease of all" (Tennyson, Lucretius), ἄλλα δὲ μυρία κατ' ἀνθρώπους ἀλάληται, | πλείη μὲν γὰρ γαῖα κακῶν, πλείη δὲ θάλασσα (Hes. O.D. 100). — πέσοι: so-called iterative opt. (really a past gen. cond.; the opt. itself is not iterative). GMT. 462.

479 ff. There was no remedy, — drug, salve, or potion, — but for want of medicines they wasted away. The drug by which Medea rendered men invulnerable was named after Prometheus, φάρμακον, ὃ ῥά τέ φασι Προμηθίου καλέεσθαι (Apoll. Rhod. 3. 845).

480. πιστόν: drinkable, ἄπαξ εἰρημένον (= ποτόν). Cp. Eur. Hipp. 516 πότερα δὲ χριστὸν (lotion) ἢ ποτόν (potion) τὸ φάρμακον.

χρεία κατεσκέλλοντο, πρὶν γ' ἐγὼ σφισιν

 485 κᾶκρῖνα πρῶτος ἐξ ὄνειράτων ἅ χρῆ
 ὕπαρ γενέσθαι, κληδόνας τε δυσκρίτους

481. χρεία: = ἐνδεία (inopia). Cp. 169. — πρὶν γε: that is, before = until (hence indic., the only example in Aesch.). When free from the connotation of until, the inf. must be used (825). There is one example with the indic. in Soph. (O.T. 775), one in Ar. (Av. 700). — σφίσι: prose ἀντοῖς, only here in trag. in this sense.

482. Taught commixtures of mild remedies. “He told the hidden power of herbs and springs, | And disease drank and slept” (Shelley, P.U. 2. 85 f.). The discovery of medicine was also attributed to Apollo. — ἔδειξα: see on 458. — ἡπίων: rare in Att. prose (exc. Thuc.), but freq. in the poets. — ἀκεσμάτων: cures, i.e. medicines. Cp. Δ 830 ἡπια φάρμακα (soothing balms). Soph. Phil. 697 (ἡπίοισι φύλλοις). Epio (Epione) was the goddess of healing. Cp. Herondas 4. 18 ἡπίως χεῖρας (of Asclepius).

484. μαντικῆς: from medicine the poet passes to divination (closely allied at that time. Cp.

ιατρόμαντις). — ἐστοίχισα: I defined. See on 230.

485 f. So Chaunteclere to his Pertelote: “By God, men may in olde bookes rede | That dremes ben significaciouns | As wel of joye, as of tribulaciouns, | That folk endure in this lyf present” (Nonne Prestes Tale 16460). The Greeks did not believe that “Dreams are but the raised | Impressions of premeditated things | By serious apprehension left upon | Our minds” (Tourneur, Atheist's Tragedy 2. 6). They felt rather “By such ensamples olde maistow leere | That no man scholde be to recheles | Of dremes” (Nonne Prestes Tale 16609 f.). So in the Upaniṣads, an advanced product of the Hindu mind, we find belief in the reality of dream-life. The line of demarcation between the real and the visionary life in the consciousness of the ancients was very indistinct. — ἔκρῖνα: interpreted. Cp. Pindar. Fr. 108 εἰδόντεσσιν ἐν πολλοῖς ὄνειροῖς δείκνυσι . . . χαλεπῶν τε κρίσιν, δυσκρίτων ὄνει-

ράτων. The science of interpreting dreams was called ὄνειρομαντεία. — ἃ χρῆ ὕπαρ γενέσθαι: what shall happen in waking state. Cp. τ 547 οὐκ ὄναρ, ἀλλ' ὕπαρ ἐσθλόν, ὃ τοι τετελεσμένον ἔσται (which foreshadows what shall come to pass). So the Roman writer "Macrobius, that writ the avisioun | In Auffrik of the worthy Cipiou, | Affermeth dremes, and saith that thay been | Warnyng of thinges that men after seen" (Nonne Prestes Tale. loc. cit.). Cp. Plato. Rep. 520 C οὕτως ὕπαρ ἡμῖν καὶ ὑμῖν ἢ πόλις οἰκῆσεται, ἀλλ' οὐκ ὄναρ. — κληδόνας: callings, vocal auguries, ominous words, or sounds that contained "warnyng of thinges." Cp. υ 100 φήμην τίς μοι φάσθω. "In untrod woods | Shrill voices schright" (Lucan 1), "Voices calling me in dead of night" (Beaum. & Fl. Faith. Shep. 1. 1), "The superstitious search of signs | In merest accidents of earth and air" (Clough, Fall of Man 8). Cp. Ar. Av. 720 ff. φήμη γ' ὑμῖν ὄρνις ἐστίν, παρμὸν τ' ὄρνιθα καλεῖτε, ξύμβολον ὄρνιν, φωνὴν ὄρνιν, θεράποντ' ὄρνιν, ὄνον ὄρνιν.

487. ἐγνώρισα: I taught, ἐφανεροποίησα (Hesych.). — ἐνοδίους τε συμβόλους: signs from meeting on the way (the noun only here in the trag. poets). Cp. schol. Ar. Av. 721 συμβόλους ἐποιοῦν τοὺς πρώτα συναντῶντας, Anecd. Ox. 4. 241 ἐνόδιον. ὅταν ἐξηγήσῃταιί τις τὰ ἐν ὁδῷ ἀπαντῶντα λέγων ἐάν σοι ὑπαντήσῃ τοιοῦτος ἄνθρωπος ἢ τόδε βυστάζων ἢ τόδε, συμβήσεταιί σοι τόδε.

488. γαμφωνύχων: cp. π 428 αἰγυπιοὶ γαμφώνυχες (birds of augury). The adj. is not a mere epitheton ornans, but specifies οἰωνῶν as birds of prey.

489. δεξιοί: right (the lucky side for omens — from the east), then favorable (αἰσιοί) as here, and finally clever. So σκαῖός (scævus, linkisch, gauche, awkward). Not only the flight, but also the color, number, and sound of the birds were taken into account by the μάντις. — φύσιν: acc. of specification. So Eng. "soul-tainted." "heart-burned." "shoulder-shotten." "tongue-tied," "brain-sick," "heart-sore." See on 866.

492. Animosities, attachments, and consortings. — “their spirits are so married in conjunction with the participation of society that they flock together in consent, like so many wild-geese” (Fal-staff in 2 Hen. IV. 5. 1). — στέρ-divination: ιεροσκοπία, haruspici-cina (inspection of the viscera), ἡ δὲ ἐμπύρων μαντεία, ignispicium (burning the thighs of the victim in layers of fat on the altar). A iecur rugosum (shrivelled) was unfavorable, whereas λειότης able sign. Cp. Cic. De Div. 2.

 Cp. 261.

496 ff. *And the thigh bones, in fat enwrapped, and the long chine I burned and initiated mortals into the mysteries of an occult ὄστοῦν (os sacrum). — πυρώσας:

 cult of deduction* (from τεκμήρια).
 — ὤδωσα θνητούς: prose ἡγησάμην ἀνθρώποις = mortales institui ut discerent. — φλογωπὰ σήματα:

Culpa).

499. I removed the scales from eyes erstwhile filmed (thus revealing the images in the sacrificial flame), giving sight to those that had been blind. — ἐπάργεμα:
scale-covered (ἄργεμος = albugo, cataract). The scales were on (ἐπί) before (πρόσθεν), but Prometheus took them off (ἔξ).
 Blindness is predicated of the signs instead of the diviner. Cp. τυφλός (unseen, as well as un- seeing). The effect is the same whether the scale is on the object or on the eye. Cp. Hesych. s.v.
 ἐπάργεμα λέγεται τὰ ὄμματα ὅταν ing a subject. — “Within the massy entrails of the earth” (Marlowe); sed itum est in uiscera effodiuntur (Ov. Met. 1. 138 ff.).

 “Riches . . . for which men swinck and sweat incessantly, | Fro me do flow into an ample flood, | And in the hollow earth

F.Q. 2. 7. 8). Milton, speaking of Mammon, says, “by him

 gestion taught, | Ransacked the center, and with impious hands | Rifled the bowels of their mother earth” (P.L. 1. 684 ff.). — ἔνερθε δὲ χθονός: = prose ὑπὸ γῆς.

501. κεκρυμμένα: perf., denot-ing pres. condition. — ἀνθρώποισιν: dat. governed by the verbal idea in ὠφελήματα. Cp. 342, 612, Plato, Apol. 30 A τὴν ἐμὴν τῷ θεῷ ὑπερσίαν.

502. ἄργυρον χρυσόν τε: “Gold and silver,” the commonest combination; here a class (each a species of the genus to which bronze and iron belong), and hence linked by τε to form the third member of the series. Cp.
 Cic. De Div. 1. 51 aurum et argen-

503. φήσειεν ἂν: would aver; aor. (freq. in Isoc. and Dem.). whereas ἔφην is sometimes impf. Cp. φάς. φάσκων (impf.). — πάροιθεν: Ep. = πρό.

504. σάφα: prose σαφῶς (= εὖ). — φλύσαι: bubble, hence brag. Cp. "blow." So Cic. De Fin. 5. 27 solet ebullire nonnunquam.

505. Cp. Eur. Tr. 364 βραχεῖ δὲ μύθῳ πολλὰ συλλαβῶν ἐρῶ.

506. ἐκ: suppeditatae a.

507 f. ὠφέλει . . . ἀκήδει: instead of the hypotactic ὠφελῶν . . . ἀκήδει (Ep., only here in Aesch. = ἀμέλει). Cp. Plato, Charm. 173 A εἴ τις γε αὐτοῦ καὶ σμικρὸν κήδεται. — The pres. inv. expresses discontinuance of a positive course of action: the aor. subjv. total prohibition. The pres. is more urbane. — καιροῦ πέρα: see on 309. Cp. Mart.

Ep. 1. 57 illud quod medium est atque inter utrumque probamus, Hor. Epist. 1. 6. 15 insani nomen sapiens ferat aequus iniqui. | ultra quam satis est uirtutem si petat ipsam, Pind. O. 13. 47 ἐν ἐκάστῳ | μέτρον· νοῆσαι δὲ καιρὸς ἄριστος, measure in everything is meet; the best καιρός is to observe it (which Prometheus fails to do), Hes. O.D. 694 μέτρα φυλάσσεσθαι· καιρὸς δ' ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἄριστος. 510. μηδέν: instead of οὐδέν (after εὐελπισ). GMT. 685. — ἰσχύσειν: the fut. is usual after verbs of hoping, though ἐλπίζεν is followed by the pres. (Sept. 76, Cho. 187, Fr. 281); never by the aor.: ἔλπισ with fut. (Ag. 679), once with pres. (1434), once with aor. (Sept. 367). GMT. 1286, HA. 948 a.

511 f. Cp. Eur. Hipp. 41 ἀλλ' οὔτι ταύτη τόνδ' ἔρωτα χρῆ πεσεῖν, Med. 365 ἀλλ' οὔτι ταῦτα ταύτη. Prometheus admits the truth of the statement, but modifies it by declaring that his release shall be effected neither in the manner nor at the time the chorus has in mind. — μοῖρα . . . πέπρωται: cp. 518, Hdt. 1. 91 τὴν πεπρωμένην μοῖραν. — τελεσφόρος: consummating. Cp. 929.

512. κρᾶναι: poet. = διαπράττεισθαι, ἐπιτελεῖν, as always in Aesch. (not intrans., as Weckl. says, citing Cho. 1075, where the

obj. is understood). The idea in τελεσφόρος is repeated in κρᾶναι, Fate that fulfills is not destined to fulfill in this way.

513. Cp. 207, 306. — φυγγάνω: "praesens propheticum"; the earliest occurrence of this collateral form of φείγω (in Att. prose only in cpds.).

516. Μοῖραι τρίμορφοι: "The trinal sisterhood | That spun our thread of life" (Beaum. & Fl. Faith. Fr. 5. 1). Αἴσα is called a goddess in Cho. 644. The "Three Fates" occur first in Hesiod (Theog. 218). They are called τριαδελφαί in the Orac. Sibyll. The plur. form occurs in Homer only in Ω 49. — μνήμονές τ' Ἐρινύες: avenging powers that punish those who violate the eternal law of the Fates, αἱ μνημονεύουσαι τῶν παρ' ἀνθρώπων κακῶν

He has in mind the will of Fate with reference to the marriage with Thetis and the consequent dethronement ; but in his blind passion he fails to note that in the expressed will of Fate nothing is said about the possibility of avoiding this union. — ἂν ἐκφύγοι : cannot escape. Cp. 616, Dem. 21. 18 οὐτε φύγοιμ' ἂν οὐτ' ἀπαρνοῦμαι τοῦτο τοῦνομα, 191 φημι καὶ οὐκ ἂν ἀρνηθείην. — τοῦτο : i.e. the overthrow of Zeus.

"There is a secret known | To thee and to none else of living things, | Which may transfer the scepter of wide heaven. | The fear of which perplexes the Supreme" (Shelley, P.U. 371 ff.). But even the Oceanides' tender sympathy and kindly looks will not lure the secret from the Titan's breast. μέλλον τι πράττειν μὴ προείπης μηδενί . . .

"For who so maketh God his adversarie, | As for to werke enything in contrairie | Unto his wil, certes never schal he thrive" (Chanounes Yemans Tale 13404). The rhythm is in consonance with the sentiment and "affords, in the midst of the heat of tragic pathos, a moment of refreshing coolness and cheerful calm" (Westphal).

550. ἀλαδόν : Ep., confined to lyric passages in trag. = prose τυφλόν. — The Ep. phrase δειλοῖσι βροτοῖσιν shows that the pessimism so prominent in Greek literature is as old as Homer, though first emphasized by Hesiod and Theognis.

To the Greek, life and art and government were inseparably connected. Apollo and the Muses create all harmony (artistic, social, political). The subjects of Zeus obey Apollo, since the latter is never at variance with the sovereign. “Celestial spheres | Dance to Apollo’s lyre.” “From harmony this universal frame began” (Dryden). All who owe allegiance to Zeus are ruled by harmony. As Aristotle says (Met. 1. 5) τὸν ὅλον οὐρανὸν ἀρμονίαν. Cp. 230. It was Zeus ὃς ἤρμοσε καὶ διεκόσμησε τὴν ἀρχήν (cp. the Spartan ἀρμοστής). — As in Pindar, the decrees of fate are identified with the will of Zeus: his great purposes may not be transgressed — ὃ τι τοι μόρσιμόν ἐστιν, τὸ γένοιτ' ἄν (Suppl. 1047), Ζεὺς ὁ πανόπτας | οὕτω Μοῖρά τε συγκατέβα (Eum. 1045).

553-560. 'I realize the great truth, beholding thy terrible fate, Prometheus. 'Twas a far different strain that greeted my ear at the bath and the bed when thy bridal song was sung, on that happy day when thou didst wed our sister, with thy gifts didst Hesione win and bring her home as thy bride.' The thought in this antistrophe has been sung by the world's poets of every age. Francesca da Rimini begins the immortal story of her love for Paolo in one of the most beautiful verses ever written: "Nessun maggior dolore, | Che ricordarsi del tempo felice nelle | Miseria," of which Alfred de Musset says, "Dante, pourquoi dis-tu qu'il n'est pire misère | Qu'un souvenir heureux dans les jours de douleur?" "For of fortune sharp adversitee | The worst kinde of fortune is this, | A man to have been in prosperitee | And it rememberen, whan it passed is" (Chaucer, Troilus & Criseyde). "A sorrow's crown of sorrows | Is remembering happier things" (Tennyson, Locksley Hall).

554. ὀλοὰς: funestres.

555. διαμφίδιον: different (τόδ' ἐκεῖνό θ'), diametrically opposed. — προσέπτα: advolatit; Ep. = prose προσέπετεο = ἐπήλθεν (here), often of misfortune. Acc. in 115. Cp. 644.

556. The epithalamium is very ancient. It was sung before the door, or under the window, of the bridal-chamber. The chorus consisted of girls, or of young men and maidens who, as they danced, sang in respension. — λουτρὰ: sc. τὰ γαμήλια. The schol. on Eur. Phoen. 349 says: ἔθος ἦν τοῖς παλαιοῖς, ὅτε ἔγημέ τις, ἐπὶ τοῖς ἐγχωρίοις ποταμοῖς ἀπολούεσθαι.

557. ὑμεναίου: I sang the hymenaeum (which included the specific epithalamium). The single reference to the song in Homer is Σ 491.

559. ἰότατι γάμων : = ἔκατι γάμων, causa nuptiarum (for the nuptials' sake). Hesych. defines ἰότατι by αἰτία, χάριτι (= διὰ χάριτα = χάριν = ἔνεκα). Cp. O 41 δι' ἐμὴν ἰότητα = διὰ τὴν ἐμὴν αἰτίαν = τῇ ἐμῇ αἰτία (ἰότητι), as Lys. 12. 17 δι' ἦντινα (αἰτίαν). For the prepositional use of the substantive cp. Eur. I.T. 566 κακῆς γυναικὸς χάριν ἄχαριν ἀπώλετο. — ὀμοπάτριον : does not show that Aeschylus did not regard Hesione as a full sister of the Oceanides. Acusilaus says that Deucalion was the son of Prometheus and Hesione, the daughter of Oceanus. Theognis names Asia as one of the Oceanides. Acc. to Hdt. (4. 45), Asia was the spouse of Prometheus. "Thro whose overshadowing woods I wandered once | With Asia, drinking life from her loved eyes" (Shelley). — ἔδνοις : (Ep., rare in Att.) with πείθων (durative pres.). In Homer ἔδνα are the bridegroom's presents to the bride's father; in Pindar gifts from the guests to the bride. It was an Indo-Germanic custom to sell the bride. Cp. Tac. Germ.

18 dote non uxor marito, sed uxori maritus offert.

560. ἄγαγες : = ἤγαγες (duxisti domum), a durative verb; the first aor. alone is ingressive. — κοινόλεκτρον : consort.

561-886. The third episode. Enter Io, rushing wildly to the rock where Prometheus is bound. "And all is semblative a woman's part" (not "in form half-woman, half-cow," as Bevan states). Introd. II. 8. 1.

561-574. 'Where am I? What is the name of the land. of the people? Who is this I behold on the storm-beaten rock in fetters bound? What crime committed that he perisheth thus? Speak and declare what region is this I am come to. Oh! Oh! Once more I am stung! The wraith of earth-born Argus I see — aleu a da! the herdsman peering with his thousand eyes at me. O horror! See! there he comes, haunting me still with his crafty eye, — he's slain, but even in death the earth will not hold him, — from Hades arisen a shadow he glides, come to pursue me, his prey, poor miserable maiden, and hunts me weary and wilder'd and famished o'er the sands along the lone seashore.' — The anapaests here and 877 ff. are given to Io instead of the chorus because of the unusual manner of entrance and exit. This is the only place in Aeschylus where anapaests introduce a song not sung by the chorus. When anapaests serve to introduce choral songs, these are in $\frac{3}{8}$ measure. Here, after the anapaests, we have a proöde in $\frac{3}{8}$ time, but there soon follow dochmiacs, bacchii, etc. (Smyth).

561. τίνα φῶ: Io is startled at the sight of the captive.

562. χαλινοῖς ἐν πετρίνοισιν: in chains on the rock.—χειμαζόμενον: storm-beaten (often fig. e.g. 838. Eur. Hipp. 315). Cp. 15, 113, Longfellow. Masque of Pandora 3 "By all the storm-winds shaken. | By the blast of fate o'ertaken, | Hopeless, helpless, and forsaken."

563. = τίνος ἀμαρτήματος δίδως δίκην ἀπολλύμενος. Cp. 112.—ποινὰς: as a penalty for (adverbial = δίκην = ἔνεκα). Cp. 614. Soph. El. 563 f. τίνος | ποινὰς τὰ πολλὰ πνεύματ' ἔσχ' ἐν Αὐλίδι.—ὀλέκη: Epic; only twice in Sophocles.

566 ff. The iambs and dochmiacs indicate a change from distress and wonderment to fear and frenzy.—χρίει: stings (only in Aesch. in this sense). Cp. 598, 675, 880.—αὖ: intimating to the audience that it was but a renewal of a former attack.

567. εἶδωλον: spectre (obj. of εἰσορῶσα).—γηγενοῦς: cp. Suppl. 305 Ἄργον παῖδα γῆς.

Cp. Eur. Hipp. 1120. See on 201. “Argus with his hondred yēn | To be my wardercors” (Wyf of Bathe 358), “Lo, Argus, which that hadde an hondred yēn” (Marchaunnes Tale 9985), hoc quondam monstro horribilis exercuit iras | Inachiae Iuno pestem meditata iuuencae (Verg. Georg. 3. 152). Argus plays here the same rôle as the Eumenides in the Oresteia — neither are visible to the spectator.

570. δόλιον ὄμμα: the poet gives, by a stroke of the pen, a picture almost as vivid as that drawn by Poe in his Tell-tale Heart. — καθθανόντα: trag. = prose ἀποθανόντα. Cp. Suppl.

forever? Bury me deep in the sod, cast me in fire, or into the sea to be food for the monsters! Hear my entreaties, O king! My wanderings have worn me enough; I am weary — no rest can I find, no cessation from trouble and sorrow. Dost hear the cry of the heifer-horned maiden?'

574. "Grate on their scrannel pipes of wretched straw" (Milton, Lycidas). The verse recounts the specific act of the βούταν of 569. Herdsmen were wont to follow their cattle, playing the flute. — ὑπό: only here, 877. and twice in Ag., in tmesis. — κηρόπακτος: important words are never thus interposed in trimeter (exc. Ag. 1215, and possibly Sept. 1028). Cp. Eur. I.T. 1125 σὺρρίζων δ' ὁ κηροδέτας | κάλαμος. Verg. Ecl. 2. 32 Pan primus calamos cera coniungere pluris | instituit, Ov. Met. 1. 711 disparibus calamis compagine cerae inter se iunc-

575. ἀχέτας: Dor. = ἡχέτης. Cp. Hes. O.D. 582 ἡχέτα τέπιξ. Eur. El. 151 κύκνος ἀχέτας, Ar. Av. 1095 ὁ θεσπέσιος ἀχέτας. — ὑπνοδόταν: sleep giving. The harassed maiden's wandering along the beach is accompanied by a slumberous melody that invites to rest and deliverance that never come.

577. τί: acc. of inner obj. with ἀμαρτοῦσαν.

578 f. See on 108. — πημοσύναις: the third form of this word, 99, 276. Cp. B 111 Ζεὺς με μέγα Κρονίδης ἄτη ἐνέδησε βαρείη, Soph. O.C. 526 γάμων ἐνέδησεν ἄτα.

590. Ἴναχείας: of Inachus (patronymic). The river, to which the name of Inachus was given (as well as to the earliest king of Argos), is now called Bonitza. — Διός: "Jove. | Who left his blissful seats above, | Such is the power of mighty love" (Dryden, Alexander's Feast 25). — θάλπει: sets afire "The hot fire of love so brenneth" (Old Eng. Play), "That glorious fire it kindled in his hart" (Spenser, F.Q. Prot. 1. 3). "Just such another wanton Ganymede | Set Jove afire with" (Beaum. & Fl. Two Noble Kinsmen

4. 2), "Those eyes | Are Love's eternal lamps he fires all hearts with" (Bloody Bro. 5. 2), "brûlant | Amour, qui . . . | Souffles en nous les chauds désirs" (Jean Lahor). In Aeschylus Eros never "shot a shaft that burning from him went." Kypris arrogates to herself all the prerogatives of the youth who figures so prominently in Sophocles and Euripides.

591. ἔρωτι: instrumental. — δρόμους: an extension of the acc. of the inner obj. (δρόμους τρέχουσα γυμνάζεται). Cp. Eur. Hērph. 19 μείζω βροτείας προσπεσὼν ὀμιλίας.

O grant me to know what remains yet to suffer, and whether a cure, a balm, I may find for my sorrow. Unseal thy lips, if thou knowest: make it known to the wilder'd, wandering maid.'

593. "But what are you that ask of me these things!" (Marlowe, Dido 1). — ἀπύεις: Dor. form of Ep. ἠπύεις = prose φωνεῖς, ὀνομάζεις. Cp. 597.

595. ἄρα: done, will it prove, whereas οὖν = under the circumstances. ἄρα settled down in prose gradually to ergo, an illative particle merely, and later disappeared. — τάλας, τὰν ταλαίπωρον: misfortune unites them.

596. προσθροεῖς: = προσαγορεύεις.

597. θεόσυτον: cp. 116, 279, 601, Eum. 170 (αὐτόσυτος). — νόσον: pest (the breeze). See on 225. — ὠνόμασας: i.e. in 589.

600. With leaping's hungry pangs, i.e. leaping's producing the pangs of hunger (the gad-fly would not let her rest long enough to take nourishment). Cp. 573 f.

606. μῆχαρ: = μῆχος, poet. for μηχανή = remedy.

608. "Pity the state of a distressed maid" (Marlowe, Jew of Malta 1). — φράζε: tell (with all the particulars), often instruct. — τᾶ δυσπλάνῳ παρθένω: the hapless, wandering maid. Note the antistrophic verbal response.

609. λέξω: I shall set forth.

610. Not with riddles, but in simple speech. — ἐμπλέκων: inweaving.

611. οὔγειν: prose ἀνοιγνύναι.

612. There is no break in the middle of the verse, since δοτῆρ' and ὄρας are welded by the elision. In Lat. there is only a make-believe elision; but in Greek the first word clearly runs into the next. Cp. 710, Eur. Ion 1. — βροτοῖς: with δοτῆρα. The construction has its limitations, the dat. not being used as a modifier of substantives till a comparatively late period (Eum. 402 δώρημα τόκοις, Eur. Bacch. 572 βροτοῖς ὀλβοδόταν. With the abstract (δόσις τινί), the dat. never occurs in Homer, is common in Sanskrit, easy in English ("gift to the people"). See on 501.

617. λέγε: speak (out). Often in the sense "Tel on thy tale" (Chaucer). So in the courts, proceed to read, whereas λέξον. more abrupt, more urgent, is simply

625. μή τοι: see on 436. — παθεῖν: the aor. inf. w. μέλλω is rare, and never used exc. to make a point or to harmonize with the rest of the sentence (μή . . . κρύψης): only here in Aesch. The fut. (after μέλλω as a verb of thinking) occurs four times as often as the pres. (when μέλλω is a verb of willing). Aristophanes has the largest percentage of the pres., then Soph., Eur., Thuc., Aesch. — ὅπερ: strengthening with περ

627. μέλλεις: put off; invariably with the pres. inf. on the principle of resistance to pressure, which requires the tense of continuance. — μὴ οὐ: indicates insistence and mental perturbation ('Then why, O why not tell me all forthwith'). GMT. 807, 816, HA 1034 b. G. 1617. — γεγωνίσκειν: rare in standard prose = φθέγγεσθαι.

The Kentucky mountaineer says, "This is better as that" (a relic of his old Eng. speech). Cp. Paston Letters 363. 1 "I hadde never more need . . . as I have at this tyme." 631-876. Io's adventures: (1) her own narrative to gratify the wish of the chorus (640-686); (2) her future, as foretold by Prometheus—in two parts: (700-741) wanderings in Europe, (786-818) in Asia and Africa, to gratify Io, and (741-785) a digression; (3) her past (819-876), to show the distressed maiden that his vision of the future, which he has already disclosed, is clear.

632. ἱστορήσωμεν: prose πυθώμεθα. — νόσον: affliction. In 977 the word is used of madness; often of love, — “Love is but a straggling from our reason” (Shirley).

633. πολυφθόρους: deathful, i.e. fateful. Cp. Jul. Caes. 2. 2

“Towards die many times before their deaths.” φθείρειν is often used of the tempest-tossed mariners, e.g. Eur. I.T. 276 ναυτίλους ἐφθαρμένους.

634. τὰ λοιπὰ ἄθλων: the art. is necessary in prose. Cp. 684, 780, Soph. Phil. 24 τάπίλοιπα τῶν λόγων. — πάρα: personal source, hence = ὑπο; the only example with the pass. in Aesch., but διδαχθήτω = μάθε. See on 700. Cp. Cho. 171 πῶς . . . παρὰ νεωτέρας μάθω, Ag. 858 ἄλλων πάρα μαθοῦσ', and the freq. Platonic and forensic use of the verb (Lys. 13. 4 διδάξομεν καὶ ὑμεῖς μαθήσεσθε).

637. ἀποκλαῦσαι κάποδύρασθαι:
betwail and bemoan without stint (synonyms for emphasis, like the doublets in Demosthenes). For the force of the prep. see on 84.

638 f. There, where one is like to win a tear from the listener's eye, 'tis worth the while to spend the time. — μέλλοι: complementary to the infinitives, hence the opt.; a legitimate construction, since the inf. has uses similar to the opt. (which has its complements in the opt.), but unusual, owing to the encroachment of the subjv., and wherever found in the later period a mere survival.
 Cp. Soph. Ant. 1032 τὸ μανθάνειν
 δ' | ἤδιστον εὖ λέγοντος, εἰ κέρδος

 — πρὸς τῶν κλυόντων: on the part of the listeners (= παρὰ τ. κλ.).

 — ἀξίαν τριβὴν ἔχει: has a spending worth the while = ἀξίον ἐστι well spent). Cp. Eur. Fr. 563 τῶ where there is a break into two halves, are not common in Aesch.

mation, formae ruinam). "To think how I am metamorphosed" (Dekker, Old Fortunatus 4. 2).

644. σχετλία: enduring (σχεθεῖν), hence suffering. — προσέπτατο: advolat (as a visitation), sworped upon, with "the wings of the wind" (χειμῶνα) and sent by some god (θεόστυτον), hence = ἐξαίφνης ἐπήλθεν. See on 555. Cp. Eur. Alc. 420 ἄφνω κακὸν τόδε προσέπτατο.

645. The beginning of Io's narrative has a charm and grace that remind us of Sophocles and Euripides, a tender cheerfulness that relieves the wonted somber gloom of Aeschylean tragedy. Moschus was inspired by this account in Idyll 2. 1. That other maid condemned of love, Dante's Francesca, is not more melodiously plaintive: "Al tempo de' dolci sospiri, | A che e come concedette amore, | Che conoscesti i dubbiosi desiri?" (Inferno 5 118 ff.). Cp. ὦ νυκτὸς ὄψις ἐμφανῆς ἐννυπίων | ὡς κάρτα μοι σαφῶς ἐδήλωσας κακά (Pers. 518), "Assaying by his devilish art to reach | The organ of her fancy, and with them forge | Illusions as he list. phantasms, and dreams" (Milton, P.L. 4. 802 ff.). — ἔννυχοι: nocturnae. — πωλεύμεναι: haunting (prose φοιτῶσαι), Ion. form of the Ep. frequentative of πελόμεναι (= οὔσαι, hence πωλείσθαι = versari). See on 122.

646. παρθενῶνας: poet. plur. like νυμφεῖα (Soph. Tr. 920). — τοὺς ἐμούς: the commonest use of the careless position of the article in the tragedians is with the possessive. — παρηγόρουν: urged (repeatedly) and seduced. "We'll show thee Io as she was a maid | And how she was beguiled and surprised" (Taming of the Shrew, Ind. 1-2). Cp. Hdt. 5. 104 τὸν Γόργον παρηγορέετο ἀπίστασθαι ἀπὸ βασιλέος. There are seven imperfects in this narrative of Io. (Xen. leads all Greek writers in the use of imperfects of description).

647. λείοισι: smooth, hence seductive ("syllabled smooth sweetness"). Cp. π 279 μελιχίους ἐπέεσσι παραιδῶν (winning by words of sooth). — μέγα: freq. in the poets for μάλα, σφόδρα. Cp. 1004.

648. παρθενεύῃ δαρὸν: "lengthen out thy maiden hours" (Mrs. Browning). Cp. Hdt. 3. 124 ἠπέλιψε . . . πολλὸν χρόνον παρθενεύεσθαι. — δαρὸν: the form with ā is the only form used in trag.; Dor. for δηρόν = πλείω χρόνον τοῦ δέοντος. — ἔξόν σοι: practically one word, hence the metrical harshness of the fifth foot is not offensive. See on 107.

649. ἡμέρου βέλει: with the missile of desire. "Either eye are arrows drawn to wound" (Shirley, The Witty Fair One 1. 3), "Vos yeux ont fait ce coup fatal, | Et c'est de leurs regards qu'est venu tout son mal" (Molière, L'École des Femmes 2. 5). Cp. Eur. Hērē. 530 ff. οὔτε γὰρ πυρὸς οὔτ' | ἄστρον ὑπέρτερον βέλος, nor flame nor lightning burn so fiercely (as the Cyprian darts of Eros), Hor. Od. 2. 8. 14 Cupido | semper ardentē acuens sagittas.

650. πρὸς: = prose ὑπό. — τέθαλπται: is inflamed (perf. denoting the pres. resultant condition).

— συναίρεσθαι Κύπριν: unite in love with = συγγίγνεσθαι.

651 ff. μὴ ἀπολακτίσης: like Homer and Socrates, Aesch. often employs very homely and even coarse metaphors, but they are effective. — τὸ Ζηνός: see on 646. — Δέρνης: a marsh in Argolis, famous as the haunt of the Hydra slain by Heracles. For the gen. see on 412. — βαθὺν λειμῶνα: meadow land of pastures deep. Cp. Eur. Hērē. 1138 βαθεῖαν ἀνὰ χλόαν.

653. ποιμένας βουστάσεις τε: flocks and browsing grounds. "Stamping Ground," once a famous buffalo βούστασις, is the name of a small town in Kentucky. — πατρός: after the prep., with the governed subst. placed before (much rarer than the reverse): not once in the Oresteia. Cp. Eur. Or. 94 τάφον μοι πρὸς κασιγνήτης. The adj. after the preposition is commoner.

654. ὡς ἂν: see on 10. — λωφήσῃ πόθου: be lightened of de- sire, i.e. have his passion satisfied. The Greek conceived love as being produced as well as betrayed by the eye. Cp. Eur. Hipp. 525 ff. Ἔρωσ Ἔρωσ ὁ κατ' ὀμμάτων | στάζεις πόθον, εἰσάγον γλυκεῖαν | ψυχᾶ χάριν κτέ., Eros, thou that distildest desire from the eyes implanting delight in the heart, etc., Jean Lahor, Litanies de l'Amour 14 "Par la splendeur des yeux de passion chargés."

655. See on 194. Cp. 669, 964, Cho. 523 ἔκ τ' ὀνειράτων | καὶ νυκτιπλάγκτων δειμάτων πεπαλμένη. — εὐφρόνας: Ion. and poet. for νύκτας.

656. ξυνειχόμεν: tenebar, I was harassed (only in pass. in this sense in any classic writer).

657. ἔτλην: summoned up courage (Er. = prose ἐτόλμησα).

658. "To Pytho and Dodona-ward." Cp. Chaucer, Prolog. 793 "Caunterbury-ward." This constr. of ἐπί is found only here in Aesch. Cp. Supp. 311 Κάνωβον καπὶ Μέμφιν ἔκετο. but Thuc. 1. 63 ἢ ἐπὶ τῆς Ὀλύνθου ἢ ἐς τὴν Ποτίδαιαν and the common phrase ἐπ' οἴκου (home, with the idea of final rest). With the gen. this prep. is rare in the trag. poets. In Thuc. ἐπί is combined with a greater number of different verbs than any other prep. — ἐς Πυθῶ: adv. phrases tend to omit the article, even in prose. — Δωδώνης: we might still be asking, with Byron (Childe Harold 2. 53), "Oh! where, Dodona, is thine agéd grove, | Prophetic fount, and oracle divine? | What valley echoed the response of Jove?" if Carapanos had not discovered that the site was a projecting knoll near the middle of the valley of Tcharacovista. Nearly fifty inscriptions were found, mostly questions addressed to Zeus and Dione. Leake (1835) believed the site was at the southern end of Lake Janina. — πυκνοῦς: frequentes.

659. θεοπρόπους ἴαλλεν: Er. = prose θεωροῦς ἔπεμπεν. ἴαλλεν recurs in Cho. 22 (ἰαλτός), 45, 497, but is not found in Sophocles or Euripides.

660. δρῶντ' ἢ λέγοντα: a favorite form of expression from

Homer down. — πᾶσσειν φίλα :
 = Homeric ἦρα φέρειν = χαρίζε-σθαι (to pleasure).

661. ἀναγγέλλοντες : renuntian-
tes. — αἰολοστόμους : changeful speaking, i.e. capable of various interpretations. Cp. Lycophr. 3
 οὐ γὰρ ἦσυχος κόρη | ἔλυσε χρησμῶν, ὡς πρὶν αἰολοστόμα.

662. Oracles obscure and darkly syllabled. The cumulation of synonyms gives the impression that the oracles were inexplicably vague ("like a double-meaning prophesier," All's Well 4. 3), while at the same time it marks the mental perturbation of the afflicted virgin.
 Cp. Macbeth 5. 8 "That palter with us in a double sense. | That keep the word of promise to our ear | And break it to our hope."

663. ἐναργῆς βᾶξις : clear utter- ance (prose φθέγμα or φωνή = θέσφατον = ἐντολή) — reiterated and reënforced by the doublet in the next verse —) (the dark sayings of the preceding. — Ἰνάχω : dat.

 commodi (not with ἐπισκῆπτουσα). Cp. 358.

664. Unmistakable and clear enjoining and commanding.

666. ἄφετον : let out, at large (ranging at will, like the sacred animals in the temple ἄστος). Cp.
 Plato, Protag. 320 A περιόντες νέμονται ὡς περ ἄφετοι. — ἀλάσθαι :
 the more usual prose word is πλανᾶσθαι. The inf. is consecutive as often in Eur. — ἐπ' ἐσχάτοις ὄροις :
ad ultimos fines.

668. ἐξαϊστώσοι γένος : blast his race to naught. See on 151.

669. Λοξίου μαντεύμασιν : anachronistic (often in the poets, e.g.
 Eur., Hipp. 953. 1059, Shakspeare, Tro. and Cres. 2. 2).

670. δωμάτων : Hdt. and late prose = Att. prose οἰκίας.

671. ἐπηνάγκαζε: constrained (impf. ; Inachus resisted the curb).

672. χαλινός: "And I will turn thee back and put hooks into thy jaws" (Ezek. 38. 4), "there shall be a bridle in the jaws of the people" (Isaiah 30. 28), "therefore will I put . . . my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way which thou camest" (37. 29), ea frena furenti | concutit et stimulos sub pectore uertit Apollo (Verg. Aen. 6. 100 f.).

673. "Tanto il dolor le fe' la mente torta" (Inferno 30. 21). — διάστροφοι: distorted (μορφῇ) and distraught (φρένες). Io is naturally silent on the subject of the cause of her persecution; she gives only the external facts. Prometheus hinted at the truth in 592.

674. ὄξυστόμῳ μύωπι: sharp-stinging gadfly. Cp. Suppl. 307 βοηλάτην μύωπα κινητήριον· | οἷστρον καλοῦσιν αὐτόν οἱ Νείλου πέλας.

675. ἔμμανεῖ σκιρτήματι: with frantic bound (dat. of manner).

676 ff. Two imperfects of description (visualizing the scene), followed by an aor., which gives the final issue, "I was speeding away, Argos following close, when a sudden fate deprived him of his life" (the culmination of the actions of ἦσσον and ὠμάρτει). — εὐποτόν: not an epitheton ornans. In her torment Io sought water for drink and for coolness. Cp. 812. — Κερχνείας: a town and fountain on the road from Argos to Tegea, near which was the marsh of Lerna. The later name was Κερχραεάι. — ῥέος: the prose form is used in 139.

678. ἄκρατος: intemperatus, with no mildness in his temper (immitigable) = οὐ μαλθακιζόμενος. The ὀργῆ of the herdsman is unweakened (like wine before dilution). — ὠμάρτει: prose ἠκολούθει, εἶπετο. — πυκνοῖς: see on 658.

685 ξύνθαλπε μύθοις ψευδέσιν· νόσημα γὰρ αἴσχιστον εἶναί φημι συνθέτους λόγους.

679. δεδορκῶς: perceptual perf. = pres. = prose βλέπων = τηρῶν ("his wakeful eyes fixed on my steps").

680. ἀφνίδιος: from ἄφνω (= αἰφνίδιος). Cp. Thuc. 2. 61 τὸ αἰφνίδιον καὶ ἀπροσδόκητον.

681. τοῦ ζῆν: the articular inf. in trag. poetry is confined largely to familiar words and to express the hatefulness of things, which is prob. its oldest use. Cp. 865. — οἰστροπλήξ κτέ.: goaded by the heaven-sent gadfly-scourge from land to land I fly.

682. γῆν πρὸ γῆς: land in exchange for land (τόπον ἀμείβομαι), a proverbial phrase which has become a mere adv. Cp. "changing England for Australia" (Mrs. Browning, Aurora Leigh 6. 1133). — πρὸ: usually of time, occasionally of preference, but not a common preposition in prose.

684 ff. σήμαινε: a series to be enumerated, hence the pres. So ξύνθαλπε (in spite of the negative). So Telemachus to Nestor (γ 96) μηδέ τί μ' αἰδόμενος μελίσσειο μηδ' ἐλαίρων. — μηδέ ξύνθαλπε: neve permulceas (soften by warmth), hence cozen (as shown by both οἰκτίσας and συνθέτους), not inflame, as S.-W. explain. Io means that such warmth as false words might shed around her heart could not afford substantial consolation. Cp. Ar. Eq. 210 αἶ κε μὴ θαλφθῆ λόγους, Soph. At. 478 κεναιῖσιν ἐλπίσιν θερμαίνεται. — μύθοις: in prose connotes fiction (fabula), whereas λόγος (686) is the 'historic tale.' The former has a constantly varying signification (word, story, myth), since it contended with λόγος for supremacy — λόγος finally prevailed and became itself what μῦθος was in Homer. — νόσημα αἴσχιστον: cp. 1068 ff. — συνθέτους λόγους: ficta verba (dissembling words) — words "put together" artificially to disguise the truth. Cp. Ar.

687–695. ‘Oh! Forbear! Alas! what a tale of woe, surpassing the wildest belief! Never did I dream it would come to my ears, such calamity, terror, and sorrow, such wild unendurable grief with its icy horror to chill my soul. O Destiny, Destiny, I quake and I quaver as I look upon Io.’

687. ἔα ἔα: expresses astonishment, caused by the sudden recognition of the fact that the far-famed miserable maiden Io stood before them. The song was probably sung by the coryphaeus. — ἄπεχε: intrans. (= an interjection), but trans. in Ag. 1125 ἄπεχε τᾶς βοῶς τὸν ταῦρον — here merely an exclamation of horror and aversion, “Heaven avert such an affliction!”

688 f. ἠϋχουν: I boasted (to myself), thought. Cp. 338. — ξένους: strange, rare in poetry, freq. in late prose. — μολεῖσθαι: fut., only here and Soph. O.C. 1742. —

εἶς: said of things which touch the sense of hearing and the intellect (Pers. 183. Cho. 215 εἰς ὄψιν).

691 ff. The assonance and alliteration are intentional. — “Confusion, and illusion, and relation. | Elusion, and occasion, and evasion” (Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette), — the impression is that Io's is a myriad-piled woe, and this effect is still further heightened by the παρήχησις in ψύχειν ψυχάν, which not only expresses, but sounds the horror. Cp. Eur. Or. 1302 φονεύετε, καίνετε, ὄλλετε. — λύματα: = λύμας (riacula). Cp. 148. — ἀμφάκει: two-edged (an Ep. word). The goad had two points. Cp. 1044. Soph. O.T. 809 διπλοῖς κέντροισι. — ψύχειν ψυχάν: chill my heart. Cp. 695 (πέφρικα), Eum. 161 ἔτυψεν . . . κέντρον ὑπὸ φρένας . . . τὸ περίβαρον κρίος ἔχειν. The pres. is not used “because the mind of the speaker reverts to the present moment” (Allen-W.), nor for the parechesis (Weckl. 1896); nor need we insert ἄν (S.-W.). — ψύχειν is the consec. inf., the preceding neuter nouns being subjects of μολεῖσθαι, which still lingers in the mind from 689. — Cp. the Germ. “es überläuft mich kalt,” “numbs the soul with icy hand” (Gray, Eton College), “The cold wind . . . blew | Chill on my withered heart” (John Leyden). θερμὴν ἐπὶ ψυχροῖσι καρδίαν (heart hot for chill deeds, Soph. Ant. 88).

695. “Nought is there under heav'ns wide hollownesse, | That moves more cleare compassion of mind, | Then beautie brought t' unworthie wretchednesse | Through envies snares or fortunes freaks unkind” (Spenser, Faerie Queene 3. 1). “If we see a sadder sight than this. | Or hear a tale, though false, of half such horror, | We'll closely hug our bosom-grievs in transport” (Beddoes, Bride's Tragedy 3. 3). — πέφρικα: I shudder with affright (Tennyson's “bristle up with horror”). Cp. Plaut. Pseud. 4. 7. 117 mihi . . . ille . . . cor perfrige facit. Suhrbl. 345 πέφρικα λεύσσων τάσδ' ἔδρας. — πράξιν: act = πάθος (τὸ πεπραγέναι) = flight (κατάστασιν), case (“what case stand I in?” Winter's Tale

1. 2). Cp. 1 Tamb. 1. 2 "pity my distressed plight." So δρᾶν and πράττειν are freq. used for πάσχειν in tragedy. Cp. Ar. Pol. 1. 3 ὁ δὲ βίος πρᾶξις, οὐ ποιήσις ἐστίν. Here the implication is that the πρᾶξις is κακὴ (κακῶς πράττειν), the "dool and wae" of it. The chorus displays a mingled feeling of pity for Io and fear for their own fortunes, which, Aristotle says, awakens the tragic interest. Cp. 696. — Ἴους: the proper name increases the pathos.

696. πρῶ: = πρὸ καιροῦ. Cp. mature for praemature. — φόβος πλέα: cp. Eur. Med. 898 φόβου πλέα. Plato, Rep. 579 B φόβου μεστός. — τίς: qualitative ('tis her nature so to be), "subject to fears, | A woman naturally born to fears" (King John 3. 1). — πλέα alone would refer to the present occasion. Cp. Ar. Thesm 752 φιλότεκνός τις εἶ φύσει, Av. 1328 βραδύς ἐστί τις.

697. ἐπίσχεσ: ἐπίμενε, wait. Cp. epoch (ἐποχή), the point at which one halts to consider.

698. λέγ', ἐκδίδασκε: the eagerness of the chorus is marked by the asyndeton as well as by the compound (tell all).

699. A commonplace hardly in consonance with 248, 251, or with human experience. The general meaning, however, is that we are always anxious to know whether any new misfortune is destined to overtake us.

700. 'The boon ye craved before did ye lightly gain from me' (with little trouble on my part). Bevan strangely thinks that κούφος refers to the chorus. Cp. 635. τὴν πρῖν γε χρεῖαν = ὧν γε πρὶν ἐδέεσθε. — ἠνύσασθε: ye got

Cp. 988. — κούφως: = ραδίως. 'I had no reason to refuse your first request, since it cost me little labor, not telling the story myself, but merely asking Io to satisfy your curiosity.'

701 f. τῆσδε: with ἐξηγουμένης = παρὰ τῆσδε. — τὸν ἀμφ' ἑαυτῆς ἄθλον: i.e. τὰ περὶ ἑαυτήν (her story, which is an ἄθλον) = τὸν περὶ ἑαυτῆς λόγον. Cp. 705. The phrase is not a condensed form of the impossible Greek given by Weckl., S.-W., and approved by Lalin (ἀμφ' ἑαυτῆς τὸν ἑαυτῆς ἄθλον ἐξηγουμένης). — χρή: il faut.

706. θυμῶ βάλλε: "No man layeth it to heart" (Isaiah 57. 1). In Homer the middle (ἐν φρεσὶ βάλλεο). Cp. Sept. 1048 χώραν τήνδε κινδύνῳ βαλεῖν.

708. στρέψασα σαυτήν: prose μεταστραφεῖσα; the reflex. indicates that the task imposed is not an easy one. Cp. 748. Io has come from the south and must now "turn" and go south-east. — στείχε: prose πορεύου. — ἀνηρότους: the steppes of the Kalmuck Tartars, Cossacks, and other nomadic tribes. Cp. Hdt. 4. 19 οὔτε σπειρόντες οὔτε ἀροῦντες. — γύας: acc. of space traversed.

709. Σκύθας: their abodes were as indeterminate as the Comanches' in the Northwest Territory at the time of the purchase. Herodotus, who was the first to gain accurate information about the tribes north of the Black Sea, says the Scythians lived west of the Crimea. Aeschylus represents them as dwelling near the ocean.  Cp. Soph. El. 313 θυραίων οἰχνεῖν.

712. πελάζειν: jussive inf. (but ἀλιστόνοις ῥαχίαισιν: sea-resonant beach; hence, the expression means surf-beaten shores. — χρίμπτουσα: skirring, keeping close to (κ 516 shows the only example of the simple verb in Homer). Cp. Byron, Cain 3. 1

 "skirred extinguished worlds."

714. λαιᾶς: poet. for ἀριστε-

 gen. (chiefly in poetry). Cp.

 follow it up to the source in the Caucasus (720).

716. So the Chalybes of Xen. An. 4. 7. 15, as, indeed, most of the inhabitants of the Black Sea coast. — ἀνήμεροι: = οὐχ ἡμεροι = ἄγριοι (which means more than our 'wild').

717. Ὑβρίστην: only here. — supposed by the ancient commentators to be the Araxes, by more recent writers the Borysthenes. The Terek answers best to the description (721 f.), though the river is in all likelihood purely fictitious. — ποταμὸν: direct obj. of ἦξει. Cp. 723, Jul. Caes. 1. 2. Shirley, Traitor 2. 1 "Let not this arrive Sciarra's ear."

718. εὐβατος περᾶν: pleonasm (not unusual in poetry).

719. αὐτόν: of celebrity. — Καύκασον: north (not east) of the Euxine, and southeast from the bluff to which Prometheus is bound.

720. ἔνθα: a relative = οὐ (generic), κροταφῶν κτέ. being specific — not from the side, but from the very summit. — ἐκφυσᾷ μένος: pours out its fury spuming (true to its name of Violent).

721. ἀστρογείτονας: star-neighbors. Cp. "Pamir" (Roof of the World).

722. ὑπερβάλλουσαν: pres., because the action is contemporaneous with βῆναι. Io must cross the mountains southward to the Amazons in Colchis and to the sea of Azov. The ancients must have believed that Lake Maeotis extended far to the northeast.

723. Ἀμαζόνων: they are ἄνανδροι κρεοβόροι. τοξοτευχεῖς (Suῖϕl. 288) and equipped with τόξοις ἐκηβόλοις (Eum. 628). The gen. is appositive, but possessive in Pers. 452 (Ἑλλήνων στρατόν).

724 f. στυγάνορα: Aeschylean. Cp. 898 ἀστεργάνωρ, Suñhl. 1064 δυσάνωρ. Doubtless the Homeric ἀντιάνειραι (Γ 189) was interpreted by some as ἐχθραὶ τοῖς ἀνδράσιν. Aeschylus locates the Amazons north of the Black Sea, with the express purpose, apparently, of mentioning a fabulous race so interesting to the Athenians; but he reconciles this with the generally accepted view by assuming that the Azov Scythia was their earlier home and by making Prometheus declare that they would migrate later to the region about the river Thermodon. Herodotus speaks of a migration northward (4. 110). Cp. 4. 10. — ἵνα: introduces a clause which depends on a clause subordinate to another subordinate clause. Cp. 792 ff. Wonder after wonder is enumerated without a break in the sentence. The attention of the audience is riveted on the speaker as he names the places and peoples about which they have heard so much. Such details are irrelevant, but they appealed strongly to the imagination of an Athenian audience; the picture becomes more vivid. The cumulation of subordinate clauses in English and the weaving of parentheses within parentheses was brought to its height by Sir Philip Sidney, who (probably) set the example for Shakspeare.

726. The mythological obscurity in regard to the regions around the Euxine is as great in Sophocles and Euripides. — τραχεῖα πόντου κτέ.: on the coast about halfway between the Bosphorus and the Thracian Apollonia. Cp. Strabo p. 319 ἔρημος αἰγιαλὸς καὶ λιθώδης, ἀλίμενος, ἀναπεπταμένος πολὺς πρὸς τοὺς βορέας, a desolate and rocky shore, harborless, open to the north (from Cape Thynias to the Bosphorus), Soph. Ant. 968 παρὰ δὲ κυανέων σπιλάδων διδύμας ἀλὸς | ἀκταὶ Βοσπόριμι ἰδ' ὁ Θρηγκῶν ἄξεινος Σαλμυδησός, Xen. An. 7. 5. 12 Σαλμυδησόν. ἔνθα τῶν εἰς τὸν πόντον πλεουσῶν νεῶν πολλὰὶ ὀκέλλουσι καὶ ἐκπίπτουσι (run aground and are shipwrecked). For the poet's geography see Introd. II. 9. — πόντου: deep (properly special, as here) = Att. prose θάλαττα (general), but πέλαγος = open sea. — The 'sea's rough gnashing Salmydessian jaw' is not near the Thermodon, but

 τῆς σῆς πορείας, Βόσπορος δ' ἐπώνυμος

Aeschylus could not pass over such an important landmark simply because it lay outside of Io's course a few hundred miles.

727. ἐχθρόξενος ναύταισι: unfriendly host to seamen, not 'a terror to strange sailors,' nor = ἐχθρὰ ξείνοις ναύταις (S.-W.), but simply inhospitable (ἄξενος) to sailors. The coast was dangerous to domestic as well as to foreign seamen. Cp. Eur. Med. 1263 f. Συμπληγάδων | πετρᾶν ἄξενωτάταν εἰσβολάν. — μητρὶά: noverca, a stock epithet for cruelty. Cp. Plato, Menex. 237 B τρεφόμενοι οὐχ ὑπὸ μητρὸς ἀλλ' ὑπὸ μητρός.

728. σ' ὀδηγήσουσι = ἡγήσουσί σοι. — μάλ' ἀσμένως: by reason of her ἀστεργάνορα παρθεῖαν (898), since they too are στυγάνορες (724).

729. The cliffs come down precipitously to the sea (in which there are no tides), leaving but a narrow passage for the traveler. — ἰσθμὸν: the Tauric Chersonese (Crimea). — λίμνης: Sea of Azov (419, 731).

730. Κιμμερικόν: cp. Hdt. 4. 11 τὴν γὰρ νῦν νέμονται Σκύθαι αὕτη λέγεται τὸ παλαιὸν εἶναι Κιμμερίων. 12 καὶ νῦν ἔστι μὲν ἐν τῇ Σκυθικῇ Κιμμέρια τεῖχεα. . . ἔστι δὲ Βόσπορος Κιμμέριος. — This verse contains the only example of a dactyl in the first foot in this play (proper name): rare in the other dramas. — θρασυσπλάγχχως: braveheartedly, "with fortitude of soul." The opposite is κακοσπλάγχχως. Cp. Sept. 223, Eur. Hērō. 424, and the Homeric θρασκευάρδιος.

731. αὐλῶνα: depression, hollow Weg., hence (when filled with water) strait (here connecting the Black Sea with the Sea of Azov): usually fem. in poetry, but masc. in prose.

732. εἰσαεὶ: prose εἰς τὸ λοιπόν, εἰς τὸ μέλλον, or τὸ λοιπόν (rare). With the neg. τοῦ λοιποῦ is preferred.

733. σῆς: = σοῦ (subjective gen.). — πορείας: objective gen. Cp. Suppl. 484 λόγος ἐμοῦ, Ag.

609 αὐτοῦ φάτις, Soph. Ant. II μῦθος φίλων, δ 317 κληροδοῖα πατρὸς. — Βόσπορος: βούσ-πόρος (Ox-ford) acc. to Aeschylus, who purposely places πορείης (and even ἐκπερᾶν) before the proper name; but the first Attic poet was not a grammarian (comparative or otherwise) any more than the first English poet, who gives us as ludicrous etymologies as Aeschylus, Euripides, and Plato. Oxford would be Βούσπορος, whereas Βόσπορος is Φωσφόρος (Light-bringing), an epithet of Hecate, who was worshiped by the Thracians. — The prevailing opinion was that Io crossed the Thracian Bosphorus. So Aeschylus in his Supplices. It is not strange that the etymology βούσ-πόρος was generally accepted. The origin of "Rotten Row" (Rue de Roi), "blackguard" (boot-blacks of the guards), "Snooks" (Seven Oaks), was soon forgotten.

734. κεκλήσεται: fut., since κέκλημαι (ich heisse) is pres. —

λιπούσα: the Bosphorus being the boundary between the two continents (Εὐρώπην Ἀσίας δίχα πόντος ἐνεμεν in an epigram from Xanthus in Lycia). Cp. 790.

735. ἄρα = ἄρ' οὐ (nonne), though much more forceful; sometimes = num (ἄρα μή three times in poetry; in prose practically confined to Plato); usually not indicative of the nature of the answer anticipated. — ὑμῖν: the Oceanides.

736. Cp. Eur. Hipp. 80 τὸ σωφρονεῖν ἐλληχεν (hus chosen) ἐς τὰ πάνθ' ὁμῶς. — ὁμῶς: Ep. ομοίως.

737. θνητῆ θεός: juxtaposed intentionally. Cp. B 821 θεὰ βροτῶ ἐδηθείσα, Verg. Aen. 7. 661 mixta deo mulier.

738. ἐπέριψεν: imposed, as a heavy burden thrown on the back.

739. Thou didst happen of a bitter suitor for thy hand. Cp. a 266 πάντες κ' ὠκύμοροι τε γενοῖατο πικρόγαμοί τε. — γάμων: the sing. in 909.

741. δόκει: see on 436. — ἐν προοιμίοις: in the account of (i.e. count as) proems — in other words, only the introductory remarks have been made; the διήγησις, or real narrative, is yet to come. — προοίμιον only here, but φροίμιον often in Aesch. — Cp. the less hyperbolic phrase in Pers. 435 μηδέπω μεσοῦν κακόν.

743. The repeated outbursts of distress (Ιω) and compassion (Hephaestus and the Chorus) serve to bring out in bold relief the steadfastness and patient endurance of Prometheus. — κέκραγας: a virtual pres. See on 680. — ἀναμυχθίζῃ: oxy mū (onomatopoetic), a suppressed cry or groan. Cp. Ar. Eq. 10. — πού: I wonder.

744. "Worse things, unheard, unseen, remain behind" (Shelley, P.U. 1. 618). — πυνθάνῃ: pres., because there is a series of κακά.

745. ἦ γάρ: can it be that?

746. ἀτηρᾶς: deadly = prose βλαβερᾶς. — δύης: = δυστυχίας. gen. of material, very freq. in Aesch. Cp. Sept. 470 ἄτης ἄβυσσον πέλαγος, Pers. 433 κακῶν δὴ πέλαγος — Hamlet's "a sea of troubles."

747. Cp. Eur. Med. 145 τί δέ μοι ζῆν ἔτι κέρδος: Browning, Ben Ezra "This is death . . . When a man's loss comes to him from his gain."

748. ἔρριψ' ἑμαυτὴν: unnatural action, hence reflex. instead of mid. GS. 151. — This aor., common in Att., occurs but once in Hdt. (9. 48) τί οὐ . . . ἐμαχεσάμεθα; — στύφλου: hard, rude (στυφελοῦ in lyr. passages), trag. = prose σκληροῦ. Cp. Pers. 303 στυφλοὺς παρ' ἀκτάς.

749 f. Cp. Fr. 244 ὦ θάνατε παιάν, μὴ μ' ἀτιμάσης μολεῖν. | μόνος γὰρ εἶ σὺ τῶν ἀνηκέστων κακῶν | ἰατρός, 353 ὡς οὐ δικαίως θάνατον ἔχθουσιν βροτοὶ | ὅσπερ μέγιστον ῥῦμα τῶν πολλῶν κακῶν. "Death is an end of every worldly sore" (Knight's Tale 2847). — "Thou art so full of misery, | Were it not better not to be?" (Tennyson, Two Voices), "And what is mine end that I should prolong my life?" (Job 6. 11), "when . . . Grief and disgrace invade us . . . our misery craves | Dark death would ope and hide us in our graves" (Chapman, Duke of Byron). — Leaping from a precipice was a common mode of taking one's life, but the usual way of committing suicide was hanging. There are five suicides in Sophocles, only one in Aeschylus

(the Danaids), — and here only threatened. — in Euripides three. Suicide by drowning is barely mentioned. Cp. Hor. Od. 3. 27. 61 sive te rupes et acuta leto | saxa delectant. — ὅπως: with the indic. See on 157. — σκήψασα: fallen (like a thunderbolt) — intrans. here. Cp. 762. πρὸς αὐτὸς αὐτοῦ: hyperbaton to bring the pronouns together (for the sake of vividness) — in early Greek to make the expression more pointed, later a mere toy in the hands of the rhetoricians of the Attic Renaissance. See Aristeides passim.

Cp. 921. Such hyperbata are not found in Euripides. — αὐτοῦ: (ἐαυτοῦ depends on style, period, author. Isocrates uses the short form, which is tragic. In the fourth century they balance each other, but in Aesch. there are only three examples of ἐαυτοῦ. All together the trisyllabic form occurs five times as often as the dissyllabic.

P. 10. 72 says: αἱ δὲ Γοργόνες κατὰ μὲν τινὰς ἐν τοῖς Ἐρυθραίοις μέρεσι καὶ τοῖς Αἰθιοπικοῖς, ἃ ἔστι πρὸς ἀνατολὴν καὶ μεσημβριάν, κατὰ δέ τινὰς ἐπὶ τῶν περάτων τῆς Λιβύης ἃ ἔστι πρὸς δύσιν. — Cisthene, like Cathay in the Middle Ages, was at the end of the world. Hence Aesch. represents it as being in the extreme east.

794. Aesch. wrote a play called Φορκίδες, in which he treated the myth of Perseus and represented the Γραῖαι as φρουροί of the Gorgons (Fr. 262). In Cho. 1049 the Gorgons are called φαιοχίτωνες (clad in black). Cp. Hes. Theog. 270 ff. Φόρκυ δ' αὖ Κητῶν Γραίας τέκε καλλιπαρήους | ἐκ γενετῆς πολιάς (hence δηναιαί = γραῖαι), τὰς δὲ Γραίας καλέουσιν . . . Γοργούσθ' αἱ ναίουσι πέρι κλυτοῦ Ὠκεανοῖο. — αἱ Φορκίδες: the only proper name with the article in the long list. In Homer the article is not used with the proper name without peculiar force. So Chaucer: "he twyes wan Jerusalem that cité," "in Grece that contré." — κόραι: prose παρθένοι.

795. τρεῖς: the traditional number, but Hesiod has only two (Pe-phredo and Elyso). — κυκνόμορφοι: cygneas figuras habentes. They are κόραι as well as κύκνοι — the whole form is not cygnea, since they are μονόδοντες. The word is not corrupt, as Wieseler thinks. Preller's interpretation (quae Κύκνω Troico similes sunt) is improbable. The Graeae, as well as their sisters, the Gorgons, are cloud-deities, the former white, the latter dark. They are swan-shaped, because the swan in Greek and in Germanic mythology is the symbol of the cloud. The play of the Greek mind in forming cloud-myths is extremely wide and complex. See Ruskin, The Queen of the Air 1. 29 f., where he calls the Gorgons and Graeae "the true clouds of thunderous and ruinous tempest." — ἐκτημέναι: possidentes (virtual pres.). This form of reduplication is Homeric and Herodotean.

796 ff. Cp. Fr. 169 ἄς οὔτε πέμφιξ (flash) ἡλίου προσδέρεται | οὔτ' ἄστερωπὸν ὄμμα Λητώας κόρης. λ 15 ἠέρι καὶ νεφέλη κεκαλυμμένοι οὐδέ ποτ' αὐτοὺς | ἠέλιος φαέθων καταδέρεται ἀκτίνεσσιν. — προσδέρεται: in Homer trans.; in Aesch. also intransitive.

ἀκτῖσιν οὐθ' ἢ νύκτερος μῆνη ποτέ.
 πελας δ' ἀδελφαὶ τῶνδε τρεῖς κατάπτεροι, δρακοντόμαλλοι Γοργόνες βροτοστυγεῖς ἄς θνητὸς οὐδεὶς εἰσιδὼν ἔξει πνοάς· τοιοῦτο μὲν σοι τοῦτο φρούριον λέγω·

797. μή-η: old word for σελήνη (T 374).

798. ἀδελφαί: Σθεινώ, Εὐ-ρυάλη, Μέδουσα ("Medusa with Gorgonian terrour guards | The ford." — Milton, P. L. 2. 611). — κατάπτεροι: winged. So the thunder and lightning — οἱ δὲ κεραυνοὶ | ἵκταρ (at once) ἄμα βροντῆ τε καὶ ἀστεροπηῆ ποτέοντο (Hes. Theog.
 690).

799. δρακοντόμαλλοι: snake- haired — Gorgona anguicomam (Stat. Theb. 1. 344). So the Erinyes (Cho. 1048). To us
 "hairy mead" (Eur. Hipp. 210) sounds odd. Wool (μαλλός), used of the hair, seems just as strange to European commentators on this passage. Cp. Eur. Bacch. 112 πλοκάμων μαλλοῖς. Hermes, the cloud-shepherd, is ἐριοφόρος (wool- bearer). Ruskin thinks that even in ἐριόυνιος, a common epithet of Hermes, the first part of the cpd. is ἔριο—. Pilatus is from a Latin word signifying specially a woolen cap. — βροτοστυγεῖς: loathed by mortals.

800. 'On whom no mortal man may look and live.' Cp. A 36

Γοργώ . . . δεινὸν δερκομένη ("Gor-gonized me . . . | With a stony British stare." — Tennyson, Maud 13. 12). — "Another Yle is there toward the Northe, in the See Ocean, where that ben fulle cruete and ful evele Wommen of Nature: and thei han precious Stones in hire Eyen; and thei ben of that kynde, that zif they beholden ony man, thei slen him anon with the beholdynge, as doth the Basilisk" (Sir John Mandeville, Voyage and Travaile, xxviii). — ἔξει πνοάς: will have, i.e. keep, his breath (which is life) = πνευσεῖται = βιώσεται. The Greeks knew what breath meant, both in exercise and in battle. So Shakspeare of Mortimer in combat with great Glendower ("Three times they breathed"), and of Hotspur, sending challenge to Prince Harry ("That none might draw short breath to-day"), and of Orlando in the wrestling match
 ("I am not yet well breathed").
 Cp. 885 (φθόνον ἔξει = φθονήσει).

801. φρούριον: usually praes- sidium, but here cautio. The poet does not refer to the Gorgons as being wardens of the land. Cp. 804.

ἄλλην δ' ἄκουσον δυσχερῆ θεωρίαν· ὄξυστόμους γὰρ Ζηνὸς ἀκραγεῖς κύνας γρῦπας φύλαξαι, τὸν τε μουνῶπα στρατὸν
 805 Ἄριμασπὸν ἵπποβάμον', οἷ χρυσόρρυτον

802. 'I'll tell thee now another dreadful sight thou'lt see.' Cp. Soph. Ant. 254 πᾶσι θυῦμα δυσχερὲς πυρῆν.

803. Even the sound of the words in this verse is awe-inspiring. — ὄξυστόμους: sharp-beaked (the same epithet is used of eagles). — ἀκραγεῖς: savage. The emblem of Agrigentum (Akragas) was the eagle. They were called the dogs of Zeus, not because they guarded the gold, but because they were the servants of Zeus. Cp. 1022. Ag. 136 πτανοῖσι κυσὶ πατρός (the eagles).

804. γρῦπας: Sir John Mandeville says: "Sum men seyn that thei hav the body upward as an eagle and benethe as a lyoune. . . . But a griffoun hath the body more gret and is more strong thanne viij lyouns and more gret and strongere than eagles, suche as we hav amonges us" (quoted by S.-W.). — There is no better commentary on this passage than Milton, P.L. 2. 943: "As when a gryphon through the wilderness | With winged course, o'er hill or moory dale. | Pursues the Arimaspian, who by stealth | Had from his wakeful custody purloined | The guarded gold." Cp. "Wir legen unsre Klauen drauf, | Sind Riegel von der besten Art. | Der grösste Schatz ist wohlverwahrt" (The Griffins in Faust 2. 1038 ff.), and Ctesias, Exc. Ind. 12 ἔστι δὲ καὶ χρυσὸς ἐν τῇ Ἰνδικῇ χώρῃ, οὐκ ἐν τοῖς ποταμοῖς εὕρισκόμενος καὶ πλυνόμενος (washed) ὥσπερ ἐν τῷ Πακτωλῷ ποταμῷ· ἀλλ' ὄρη πολλὰ καὶ μεγάλα, ἐν οἷς οἰκοῦσι γρῦπες, ὄρνευ τετράποδα, μέγεθος ὅσον λύκος· σκέλη καὶ ὄνυχες οἷά περ λέων· τὰ ἐν ἄλλῳ σώματι πτερὰ μέλανα, ἐρυθρὰ δὲ τὰ ἐν τῷ στήθει· δι' αὐτοὺς δὲ ὁ ἐν τοῖς ὄρεσι χρυσὸς πολὺς ὧν γίνεται δυσπόριστος (hard to get). Pliny calls them a "ferarum uolucrae genus" (H. N. 72); Pausanias describes them as beasts like lions with the wings and beaks of an eagle. — See Roscher s.v. Gryps.

805. Ἄριμασπόν: adj. See on 761. — Herodotus says (4. 27): οἰνομάζομεν αὐτοὺς σκιθιστὶ Ἄριμασπούς· ἄριμα γὰρ ἐν καλέουσι Σκίθῃ. σποῦ δὲ τὸν ὀφθαλμόν. Aristeas wrote an epic called Arimaspea: ἔφη δὲ Ἀριστεάς . . . ποιέων ἔπεα, ἀπικέσθαι ἐς Ἴσσηδό-οἰκοῦσιν ἀμφὶ νᾶμα Πλούτωνος πόρου· τούτοις σὺ μὴ πέλαζε. τηλουρὸν δὲ γῆν

νας . . . Ἴσσηδόνων δ' ὑπεροικέειν Ἄριμασπούς, ἄνδρας μονοφθάλμους. ὑπὲρ δὲ τούτων τοὺς χρυσοφύλακας γρῦπας (Hdt. 4. 13). Cp. Pausan. 1. 24. 6 τὸν δὲ χρυσὸν ὄν φυλάσσοουσιν οἱ γρῦπες ἀνιέναι τῆν γῆν· εἶναι δὲ Ἄριμασπούς μὲν ἄνδρας μονοφθάλμους πάντας ἐκ γενετῆς, Solin. 13 in Asiatica Scythia terrae sunt locupletes, inhabitabiles tamen; nam cum auro et gemmis affluent, grypes tenent universa, alites ferocissimae et ultra omnem rabiem saevientes, quarum immanitate obsistente ad venas divites accessus difficilis ac rarus est. "Ihr sprecht von Gold, wir hatten viel gesammelt. | In Fels und Höhlen heimlich eingerammelt; | Das Arimaspenvolk hat's ausgespürt, | Sie lachen dort, wie weit sie's weggeführt" (Faust 2. 539 ff.). The gold-digging ants of Hdt. 3 102 are the marmots of Thibet. — ἵπποβάμονα: equestrian, but Ar. Ran. 821 high-paced (of Aeschylean ῥήματα). The Centaurs are called ἵπποβάμονα στρατὸν θηρῶν (Soph. Tr. 1095). — χρυσόρρυτον: the most gold has always been thought to be in the most unknown regions (Mexico. Eldorado, Peru). So Herodotus: πρὸς δὲ ἄρκτου τῆς

Εὐρώπης πολλῶ τι πλείστος χρυσὸς φαίνεται ἑὸν (3. 116).

806. νᾶμα: stream, poet. for ποταμόν.—Πλούτωνος πόρου: here only; probably fictitious, like Ὑβρίστης (717). Cp. Dante, Inferno 6. 115 "Quivi trovammo Pluto il gran nemico" (where he is not Satan, alias Lucifer, but the guardian of the fourth circle, where the avaricious are punished: hence the infernal deity of riches). Jul. Caes. 4. 3 "Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold." Cp. Tro. and Cres. 3. 3, Ant. and Cl. 1. 5. The Greeks themselves sometimes confounded Pluto with Plutus. Cp. Plato, Crat. 403 A τὸ δὲ Πλούτωνος . . . κατὰ τὴν τοῦ Πλούτου δόσιν . . . ἐπωνομάσθη.

807. σὺ: = σύ, Ἰοῖ (definite), no emphasis,—simply reminding Io that his remarks are addressed to her personally, that ἤξεις is not the traveler's second person. These pronouns are used more than we have been taught to believe.

808-812. Rhythmical beauty as in 645 ff.—κελαινὸν φύλον: in apposition to γῆν. Cp. Caesar's per Sequanos. — πρὸς ἡλίου πηγαῖς: juxta solis fontes (πηγαῖς = ἀνα-

ναίουσι πηγαῖς, ἔνθα ποταμὸς Λιθίοψ.

τολαῖς). Cp. γ 1 'Ἡέλιος δ' ἀνόρουσε λιπὼν περικυλλέα λίμνην. The poet does not have in mind the κρήνη ἡλίου sacred to Jupiter Ammon (Hdt. 4. 181). To the Greek Aethiopia was a general term for the south as Scythia was for the north. Strabo says (33) : δοκεῖ γάρ, φησί ("Ἐφορος), τὸ τῶν Αἰθιοπίων ἔθνος παρατείνειν ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν χειμερινῶν μέχρι δυσμῶν, ἢ Σκυθία δ' ἀντικείμεται τούτῳ.

809. ποταμὸς Αἰθίοψ: a name given to the Nile above the cataract. Cp. Vitruv. 8. 2. 6 pervenit per montes ad catarrhactam ab eaque se praecipitans Nilus appellatur, Solin. 32 demumque a cataracte ultimo tutus est . . . relicto tamen hoc post se nomine quo Nigris vocatur. Aeschylus represents the Nile as rising in the southeast; Herodotus, in the southwest. Alexander thought the Indian Hydaspes was the Nile. This view gained ground again (Josephus. Julius Africanus). The Christians thought the Nile was the same as the Biblical Gihon (the second river that had its source in the Garden of Eden — "the same is it that compasseth

the whole land of Ethiopia." — Gen. 2. 13). So Procopius states that the Nile takes its rise in India and flows thence into Egypt. The schol. on Suppl. 559 says that the cause of the overflow was the melting of the snow in India. Diodorus states that Anaxagoras proved the rise to be due to the melting snow in Ethiopia. So Eur. Fr. 28 and Aesch. Fr. 304. Herodotus had a decided opinion that this was not the cause (ῥέει μὲν ἐκ Λιβύης διὰ μέσων Αἰθιοπίων, ἐκδιδοῖ δὲ ἐς Αἴγυπτοι. κὼς δῆτα ῥέει ἂν ἀπὸ χιόνος, ἀπὸ τῶν θερμοτάτων ῥέων ἐς τὰ ψυχρότερα; (2. 2 2).

811. καταβασμὸν: = καταβαθμὸν (descent), the steep slope near Phile, above Elephantine, between Nubia and Egypt. Shellul (cataract), as it is now called, the ancient Κατάδουπα (ubi Nilus ad ea quae Catadupa nominantur praecipitat ex altissimis montibus. — Cic. Somn. Scip. 18). — Βυβλίνων ὄρων: ἀπὸ τῆς γνωμῆνης παρ' αὐτοῖς βύβλου ἔπλασεν τὰ βύβλινα ὄρη (schol.).

812. σεπτὸν: sacred. Cp. Fr. 304 ἀγνωῦ νόματος. — εὐποτον ῥέος: ὕδωρ τὸ Νείλου νόσοις ἄθικτον

826. τεκμήριον: proof (positive); σημείον (842), sign (merely); παράδειγμα, proof (illustrative), hence often warning (old Eng. ensample).

827. Prometheus omits the journey from Argos to Dodona. The recital would have been too long and tedious. Moreover, if he had represented her as passing to Europe by the Thracian Bosphorus, he would have contradicted the tradition which he follows in the Supplices that she crossed here from Europe to Asia.

830. αἰπύνωτον: steep-backed, i.e. with lofty ridges on all sides. Dodona was in Mt. Tomarus. — ἀμφί: cp. 1029.

831. Θεσπρωτοῦ: Dodona was originally Thesprotian, later Molossian. Cp. Eur. Phoen. 982 Θεσπρωτὸν οὐδας . . . σεμνὰ Δωδώνης βάθρα.

832. And that incredible portent of the talking oaks. — αἱ προσηγόροι δρύες: "the talking oaks" of both poetry and religion have played a great part in the world's literature from Homer to Schiller and Tennyson. Cp. ξ 328 ἐκ δρυὸς ὑψικόμοιο Διὸς βουλήν ἐπακοῦσαι. Soph. Tr. 171 ὡς τὴν παλαιὰν φηγὸν ἀδῆσαι ποτε. 1168 πολυγλώσσον δρύνος, Luc. Amor. 31 ἢ ἐν Δωδώνῃ φηγὸς . . . ἱερὰν ἀπορρήξουσα φωνήν. Seneca. Her. Oct. 1475 quercus fatidica. — In the Iliad the Σελλοί interpret the oracle from the rustling of the leaves; later the priestesses called Πηλεΐάδες. The cult was of great antiquity, being a survival of the primitive tree worship.

833. λαμπρῶς κτέ.: in language clear and riddle-free (the obscure words of the oracles. — Cf. Eum. 797 ἐκ Διὸς γὰρ λαμπρὰ μαρτύρια.

834. ἦ: the art., as with καλεῖν, ἀποκαλεῖν, in direct address. Cp. Xen. An. 6. 6. 7 ἀνακαλοῦντες

835. τῶνδε προσσαίνει σέ τι; parenthetical: "does aught of this awake a thrill in thee?"

836. οἰστρήσασα: stung.

837. μέγαν κόλπον Ῥέας: the Ionian Sea (Adriatic), anciently called the Gulf of Rhea, and the Sea of Cronus. Cp. 840. Verg. Aen. 3. 211 Ionio in Magno, Tsetzes on Lycophr. 630 πρότερον γὰρ Κρόνιος καὶ Ῥέας κόλπος ἐλέγετο. εἶτα Ἰόνιος . . . ἀπὸ τῆς Ἰοῦς. This is up to the standard of most Greek etymologies, which rise little above that of Molière's learned doctor ("bonnet — cela vient de bonnum est") — the first vowel of Ἰώ is long, of Ἰόνιος, short.

838. Wherefrom in back-wandering course thou art driven tempest-tossed. — παλιμπλάγκτοισι: from the sea to the interior toward the Scythian Ocean. — χειμάζῃ: as in 563. Pres. tense, since it is the last part of the journey from Argos.

839. χρόνον τὸν μέλλοντα: tempus futurum (the grammatical phrase as well as the temporal).

841. In lasting record of thy course.

843. Discerneth more than to the eye appears. — δέρεται: sc. ἢ φρήν (νοῦς ὄρα καὶ νοῦς ἀκούει). Cp. Cho. 847 φρέν' ὠμματωμένην, Eum. 104 εὐδουσα γὰρ φρήν ὄμμασιν, Ag. 287 βριζούσης φρενός (the mind sleeping). Cic. Or. 48 *mentis oculis uidere. Νείλου πρὸς αὐτῷ στόματι καὶ προσχώματι· ἐνταῦθα δὴ σε Ζεὺς τίθησιν ἔμφρονα ἐπαφῶν ἀταρβεῖ χειρὶ καὶ θιγῶν μόνον.

844. ἐς κοινόν: to the question of the nymphs (785) as well as to Io.

845. Going into the same track of the words of old (the recent past, as in Ag. 587). i.e. "returning to the track of my former story" (815), or, as the orators would say, ἐκέῖσ' ἐπάνειμι ὅθεν ἐξέβην ("where my speech broke off").

846. ἔστιν πόλις: in Ep. fashion. So the Lat. poets (est locus). — Κάνωβος: founded by Mene-laus. Such anachronisms are common in the poets. As Goethe says: "den Poeten bindet keine Zeit" (Faust 2. 868), and elsewhere, "Die Ilias wie die Odyssee. die sämtlichen Tragiker, und was uns von wahrer Poesie übrig geblieben ist, lebt und athmet nur in Anachronismen." — ἐσχάτη χθονός: uttermost part of the earth.

847. The παρονομασία is not intentional. — Νείλου: called by Homer Αἴγυπτος. — προσχώματι: deposit, i.e. silted bar.

848. ἐνταῦθα δὴ: see on 814.

— σέ Ζεὺς: see on 255. — τίθησιν ἔμφρονα: restores thee to thy mind (praesens propheticum). Cp. 109. 171, 211. The details, being unnecessary, are omitted. Nothing is said about the restoration of her form; but the "uultus capit illa priores | fitque quod ante fuit" (Ov. Met. 1. 738) is implied. Nothing is said about her impregnation by the breath and touch of Zeus (Suppl. 18); but we might infer that ἐφάπτωρ χειρὶ φιτύει γόνον (Suppl. 312) from the phrase in 850. Cp. 834.

849. With but the touch and gentle pressure of the hand. — ἐπαφῶν: laying his hand on, selected purposely to explain the name Eraphus (851) = prose ψάων, ἐφαπτόμενος. Cp. Suppl. 314 Ἐπαφος ἀληθῶς ῥυσίων (= ἐφάψεων) ἐπώνυμος, 45 ἐξ ἐπιπνοίας Ζηνὸς ἔφαψιν . . . Ἐπαφόν τ' ἐγέννασεν. — θιγῶν μόνον: reënforsing the idea in ἐπαφῶν by a more familiar tragic word. Cp. Job 3. 25 "For the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me and that which I was afraid of is

853 ff. Euripides alludes to the crime of the Danaids (Hec.

 made of their punishment in the lower world before Plato, Axiochus 371 E. See Bonner. Transactions of Amer. Phil. Assoc. 31. 27 ff.
 The most complete account of Danaus and his daughters is found in the Bibliotheca ascribed to Apollodorus (2. 1). — Aeschylus had not formulated any definite ideas about the connection between Argos under Inachus and under Pelasgus. In the Supplices the king of Argos is in the second generation from Gê, in spite of the fact that the Danaids are fifth from Eraphus and seventh from

- 860 Πελασγία δὲ δέξεται θηλυκτόνω

855. συγγενῆ : almost = συγγενῆ ὄντα (causal).

856. ἐπτοημένοι φρένας: heart-frenzied with passion. The idea is not "fear" (as in Cho. 535), but "Ces bouillants mouvements, | Ces ardeurs de jeunesse et ces emportements" (Molière, L'Étourdi 4. 3). As Hesych. says: πτοῦσθαι λέγεται τὸ παρορμᾶσθαι πρὸς τὰ Ἄφροδίσια. So Amphitryo ἀφίκετο ὄνδε δόμονδε, but had no desire to look about him πρὶν ἧς ἀλόχου ἐπιβήμηναι εὐνῆς: τοῖος γὰρ κραδίην πόθος αἴνυτο (Hes. Scut. Her. 40). τῆς δὲ φρένας ἐπτοήσεν Κύπρις (Ap. Rhod. 1. 1232). ἔρωτι δ' αὐτὸς ἐπτοάθη (Eur. I.A. 587). Cp. Plato. Protag. 310 D τὴν πτοήσιν, ardor (of the excitable young Hippocrates), Phaedo 68 C τὸ περὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας μὴ ἐπτοῆσθαι. Sappho 2. 5 τό μοι μὰν καρδίαν ἐν στῆθεσιν ἐπτοάσεν ("stirs the troubled heart in my breast 'to tremble'").

857. 'Hawks swooping close on doves.' The (poetic) omission of ὡς metaphorizes the simile.

The same figure of the same incident recurs in Sufrl. 223. Cp. Lamentations 3. 52 "Mine enemies chased me sore, like a bird," X 139 ἤυτε κίρκος ὄρεσφιν . . . οἴμησε μετὰ τρήρωνα πέλειαν (swoops down upon a trembling dove). — πελειῶν: an extension of the use of the gen. of comparison.

858. The only plausible reason for the Danaids' rejection of the offer of marriage is the mores of the Egyptians, their violence and their licentiousness. There is no allusion (as Hartung, Schwerdt, Günther, Bevan, and others think) to a consanguineous marriage. Many an Athenian could have said of his wife (in the phraseology of Sir Toby Belch), "Am not I consanguineous? Am not I of her blood?"

and tenseness: Pelasia shall receive them (afford them a home), when by woman-deed of murder slain their lords lie low in death by night-waking boldness (in the watches of the night boldly put to death by those they have pursued, women though they are).

“The blood-choaked curse of him who dies in bed | By torch-light, with a dagger in his heart” (Beddoes, Alfarabi). Wecklein’s interpretation (δέξεται, sc. αὐτούς) and Bevan’s (“Pelagic earth shall cover them”) are incorrect. Soph. Tr. 803 and Eur. Hel. 58 are not parallel. — Πελασγία: Argos in the narrower, Peloponnesus in the wider, sense. Cp. Eur. Suφφl. 367 μεγάλα Πελασγία καὶ κατ’ Ἄργος. Many names, with their belongings, were brought into the Peloponnesus by the early Dorian settlers: hence Argos = Peloponnesus and Argives = Hellenes. — δαμέντων: sc. τῶν ἀνεψιῶν (a peculiarly Aeschylean gen. abs.). Cp. Ag. 1421 f. λέγω δέ σοι . . . ὡς παρεσκευασμένης . . . νικήσαντ’ ἐμοῦ | ἄρχειν. GMT. 848; HA. 972 a. — νυκτιφρουρήτῳ:

The examples cited prove nothing. In Eur. Or. 291 the noun (εἰς σφαγᾶς) is plur. and proleptic — the sword is red with blood as a result of the blow (ᾧσαι). In our passage βάψασα (submerging, dyeing) determines the meaning. Cp. σφάζειν = trucidare. See App.

 ὀνομάζειν. The Greek prefers an intr. in the act. to a trans. in the — γὰρ μήν: at all events.

872. κλεινός: substantivized (with θρασύς as limiting adj.).

875. "Tedious it were to tell and harsh to hear" (Taming of the Shrew 3. 2). — ὅπως δὲ χῶπη: in what way and manner (including all the details). The interest of the audience is roused for the second play of the trilogy.

877-886. "Aux caprices abandonné | J'errois d'un esprit forcené, | La raison cedant à la rage: | Mes sens, des desirs emportez. | Flottoient, confus, de tous costez, | Comme un vaisseau parmy l'orage" (Marthurin Régnier). Seized by a new transport, which the verses of Aeschylus depict with marvelous power, Io departs as she had come. This is the only example in Aeschylus of closing anapaests spoken by an actor in the middle of the play (one case in Soph. — Ant. 929-943). Only here and Suppl. 625 do closing anapaests consist of a single system.

877 f. Eleleu! Eleleu! That spasm again and the brain-smiting frenzy, they burn; and the dart unforged of the fire, it stabs. The sounds for lamentation in many languages resemble eleleu: ai le nu (Phoenician), lulululu (Egyptian), ululare, lele (Servian), lelo (Basque), αἴλιμος (Ag. 159). ἐλελεῦ is also used as a war-cry (Ar. Av. 364). — ὑπό: tmesis (with θάλλουσι). So the beginning of the strophe which Io sings (574). — σφάκελος: here of the disorder of the brain, in 1045 of the tumult of the elements. Cp. Eur. Hipp. 1351 κατὰ δ' ἐγκέφαλον πηδῆ σφάκελος. — μανίαι: furiae, attacks of madness (re-enforced by φρενοπλήγες). — θάλασσοι: so over Cassandra the prophetic frenzy comes οἷον τὸ πῦρ (Ag. 1256). Cp. Soph. Tr. 1082 ἔθαλψεν ἄτης σπασμός. — ἄρδις: point (of a goad).

880. ἄπυρος: the adj. corrects the subst. and brings it within the range of reality. Cp. Sept. 82 ἄναυδος ἄγγελος (the cloud of dust announcing the approach of troops), μέλος ἄλυρον (of birds), “Thou drunken, but not with wine” (Isaiah 51. 21), “rayo sin llama” (Calderon), bolt without flash (the fiery steed).

881 f. My heart with fright at my ribs doth knock. Cp. Macbeth 1. 3 “And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,” Cho. 165 ὀρχεῖται δὲ καρδία φόβῳ. But the knocking is not always from fear: “Del corazon, que por verlo | Llama al pecho,” of the heart which knocks at my bosom to see him (Calderon), “There is no woman’s sides | Can bide the beating of so strong a passion” (Twelfth Night 2. 4) — φρένα: = διάφραγμα, as in 361.

882. Mine eyeballs whirl round and round wild.

883 f. I am borne out of my course by a wild gust of madness, my tongue I cannot control. Cp. Ennius, An. 208 quo uobis, mentes, rectae quae stare solebant | antehac dementes sese flexere uiai? Ag. 1245 ἐκ δρόμου πεσὼν τρέχω· φέρουσι γὰρ νικώμενον φρένες δύσαρκτοι, Plato, Crat. 414 B ἐκτὸς δρόμου φερόμενον. The metaphor is from chariot racing — currículo decidit, i.e. a recta via declinavi. — λύσσης: rabies.

884. πνεύματι μάργῳ: Ep. sudden shift of metaphor (from chariot to ship), or, perhaps, the racing term is merely applied to “un vaisseau parmi l’orage” — heavy winds hinder the sailor from sailing a straight course. The Erinyes and Lyssa are not the same; the latter is a mere personification, the former dread deities, moral powers. In the Hercules Furens Lyssa rides in a chariot to which Hercules is harnessed. So in Hipp. 237 the nurse wishes to know what god drags back the bridle on Phaedra. — The underlying meaning of μάργος is 'unprincipled greed for sensual enjoyment.' Cp. μαργίτης (trag. μωρός, μωρία, freq. of sensuality), γαστήρ μάργη (σ 62), μαργαίνειν ἐπὶ θεοῖσι (of Diomed's wild war-thirst). — γλώσσης ἀκρατής: cp. Lucret. 3. 453 claudicat ingenium, delirat lingua, Theogn. 503 γλώσσης οὐκέτ' ἐγὼ ταμίης ἤμετέρης.

885 f. And my turbid words fall in confusion against the dark billows of frenzy. The mixture of metaphors has caused many to misunderstand these verses. θολεροὶ agrees grammatically with λόγοι, but really refers to the maiden's φρένες διάστροφοι (673, cp. φρενοπλήγες 878), to the darkened state of her soul. With her reason beclouded Io's λόγοι naturally πταίουσ' εἰκῆ — groping in the dark, as it were, they stumble. κύματα ἄτης to a Greek is scarcely more than "fits of madness," or "gusts of fury" to an American. The idea of θολός (mud) is totally foreign to the conception of κύμασιν here — the waves of delirium do not stir up turbid words, the billows of the deep do not toss up mud. Cp. Hdt. 4. 53 ῥέει τε καθυρὸς παρὰ θολεροῖσι, Soph. Ai. 206 f. Αἴας θολερῶ | κείται χειμῶνι νοσήσας, Ajax in a turbid stream of woe lies stricken, 2 Hen. VI. 3. 2 "My tongue should stumble." Cp. 926.

887–906. The peaceful meditations of the chorus form a happy contrast with the θολεροὶ λόγοι of Io. For the dactylo-epitritic rhythms see on 526.

887–893. The third stasimon. 'Wise was he, oh, wise in sooth was he, who first in his heart conceived, then delivered this truth: to wed in one's own estate is better far — to match with those in luxury reared, or exalted in pride of birth, the humble and poor should never desire.' Eustathius says (on I 399) οὐ πρῶτος Αἰσχύλος εἶπεν, ὡς τὸ κηδεύειν κτέ. . . . τουτέστιν ἄριστόν ἐστιν ἐκάστῳ τὴν αὐτῷ εὐκυῖαν λαμβάνειν καὶ μὴ τῶν ὑπερκόμπων γάμων ἐρᾶν, ἀλλὰ πρῶτος Ὅμηρος καὶ αὐτὸ ἐν τοῖς κατὰ τὸν Ἀχιλλεῦ ἐδίδαξε. Pittacus bade one, who asked him whether he should wed above his rank, observe some boys who were engaged in spinning tops and crying τὰν κατὰ σαντὸν ἔλα. Pindar says (P. 2. 64) χρῆ δὲ καθ' αὐτὸν αἰεὶ | παντὸς ὄρᾶν μέτρον | εὐναὶ δὲ παράτροποι (unlawful couplings) ἐς κακότατ' ἄθροον | ἔβαλον, and Euripides affirms that the wise avoid unequal matches (Fr. 243) κῆδος καθ' αὐτὸν τὸν σοφὸν κτᾶσθαι χρεών. Cp.

Ον. Her. 9. 32 si qua uoles apte nubere, nube pari.

888. ἐβάστασε: "hefted," then weighed — always of a burden in Homer. So "tote" = lift a dead weight (pondus, whence ponder). The original meaning occurs in 1019. In the Septuagint the noun means porter. Cp. Ar. Thesm. 438 πάσους δ' ιδέας ἐξήτασεν. | πάντα δ' ἐβάστασεν φρενί. Latin voluit, Eng. revolved, are figures from a different sphere. Cp. 890. To contract an alliance in keeping with his rank. — "How dangerous it is | For any man to prease beyond the place | To which his birth, or means of knowledge ties him" (Chapman. Revenge of Bussy 3. 1). — ὡς: = colon and quotation marks. Real hypotaxis in paratactic form (first ex. in Hdt. 2. 115) occurs in no other language — apparent examples are only imitations. This construction marks the transition from oratio recta to the younger form of oratio obliqua (here felt as an indir. statement). So Sanskrit yad (ὄ) and yathā (ὡς). — καθ' ἑαυτὸν: in one's own sphere. — ἀριστεύει: = ἄριστόν ἐστι.

891. τῶν πλούτῳ διαθρυπτομένων: "The good Greek moralist says of them: 'Is a man proud of greatness, or of riches?'" (Chapman). — γέννα: prose γένει. The Greeks recognized the dangers of riches: δάμναται δὲ (sc. πλοῦτος) βροτείαν φρένα (Pind. Fr. 85), φλεόντων δωμάτων ὑπέρφεν. . . οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ἔπαλξις πλοῦτου πρὸς κόρον ἀνδρὶ (Ag. 377 ff.), κακόν τι παίδενμ' ἦν ἄρ' εἰς εὐανδρίαν | ὁ πλοῦτος ἀνθρώποισιν αἶ τ' ἄγιν τρυφαί (Eur. Fr. 55). them doe arize ; | Strife and debate bloodshed and bitterness" (Spenser, F.Q. 2. 7. 12).

892. μεγαλνομένων: obj. gen. with γάμων. It is difficult to avoid rhyme in Greek; it is neither sought nor shunned. The purpose of rhyme is to ring out the termination of the period, to help the hearer recognize the end of equalities; but the Greek did not need such assistance.

893. ἐραστεύσαι: ἀπαξ εἰρημένον, denominative (ἐραστής εἶναι) = ἐρᾶν.

894-900. 'Never, O never, kind Fate, behold me the consort of Zeus! May never a god descend for my love! For horror I feel at the sight of Io, the maiden that loatheth her lord, crushed 'neath her burden of woe and by Hera condemned to wanderings drear.'

895. λεχέων Διός κτέ.: partner of the bed of Zeus. — πέλουσαν: Ep., but also late Ion. and Dor. = prose οὔσαν.

901. The Greeks generally avoided sibilation: ἄχαρι καὶ ἀηδὲς τὸ σ, καὶ εἰ πλεονάσειε, σφόδρα λυπεῖ (Dion. Hal. De Comp. Verb. 14). Lasus composed an asigmatic ode. Sometimes, however, the sibilant could be made very effective, as in the sneer of the herald: πρᾶσσειν σὺν πόλλ' εἴωθας ἦ τε σὴ πόλις (Eur. Suppl. 576), and Medea's hissing hate: ἔσωσά σ', ὡς ἴσασιν Ἑλλήνων ὄσοι (476). The comic poet Plato says (30) ἔσωσας ἐκ τῶν σίγμα τῶν Εὐριπίδου. Cp. 661 ff., 678 ff., Schiller, Tell 4. 3 "Das meines nächsten Schusses erstes Ziel | Dein Herz

902. κρεισσόνων: = μείζους γένους θεῶν. The nymphs are to the gods ἐξ οὐρανοῦ as the χερνίτης is to "τῶν γέννα μεγαλυνομένων." — θεῶν ἔρωσ: = θεοὶ ἐρῶντες, an extension of the Homeric construction (as μένος, σθένος, βίη Διομήδεος E 781, very freq. in the Septem).

903. ἄφυκτον ὄμμα: acc., because it expresses the content of προσδράκοι. The metaphor is from hunting. Cp. Sept. 623 ποδῶκες ὄμμα, Fr. 363 τό τοι κακὸν ποδῶκες ἔρχεται.

falle" (Monkes Tale 16011 f.). — καίπερ ἀθάδης φρενῶν: albeit stub- born of soul. — ἀθάδης = αὐτοφάδης = Asiat.-Ion. αὐτώδης — a
 com. word in the sophistic period; rare in the orators; used less and less by the comic poets, and finally vanishes. Plato employs the tragic diction: in Aristotle the word has only one meaning (an exaggerated σεμνός): in later writers merely = ἀθέκαστος ("a plain, blunt man." "one who calls a spade a spade"). — ταπεινός:
humilis; in later Greek groveling.
 — οἶον = ὅτι τοιοῦτον. — ἐξαρτύε-ται: purposeth = ἐτοιμάζεται.

909. "Barren princes breed danger in their singularity" (Heywood, Rape of Lucrece 2. 3), but Zeus's danger lies in his productivity. — γαμείν: ducere, γαμείσθαι = nubere. English is not so explicit. Cp. "But shall she marry him? No. How then?
 Shall he marry her?" (Two Gent of Ver. 2. 6).

910. θρόνων: the plur. in trag.
 when used fig., otherwise sing. or plur. Cp. 228. The pluralis maiestatis is freq. in poetry, common in Greek, but commoner in Latin. GS. 52. — αἴστον: factitive pred. (= ὥστ' αἴστον εἶναι). See on 151. Cp 233. — πατὴρ: subj.
 gen., "the curse Cronus muttered in his fall."

911 f. The alliteration, assonance, cumulation of adverbs, and repetition of θρόνων (the very seat he now enjoys) all lend bitter emphasis to the utterance.

915. ῥ τροπῷ: sc. Ζεὺς οἶός τε ἔσται ἐκτροπήν εὐρεῖν. — πρὸς ταῦτα: facing (i.e. in view of) this = therefore. So 992, 1030, 1043. — The feeling is assurance, triumph, scorn, defiance, "And a firm will — triumphant where it dares defy" (Byron, Prometheus).

916 f. Let him in calm assur- ance sit him down, fixing his faith on the deafening crash reverberating in the sky, and in his hands the fire-breathing thunder-stone high-poised. — καθήσθω: the cpd. in its original sense, to denote the monarch's feeling of security (firmly seated on his throne). Cp. 313. — πεδαρσίους: see on 269. — πιστός: act. = πεποιθώς. So Soph. O.C. 1031 ἔσθ' ὄτω σὺ πιστός. — ἐν χεροῖν: the prep. lends color, makes the expression more plastic. This local use was commoner in the early period. — πύρπνου: see on 359, 852. Cp. ἀντίπνου in 1087, but πυρπνούου in 371. — βέλος: "And he sent out arrows . . . lightning" (2 Sam. 22. 15), "Ye lightnings, the dread arrows of the clouds" (Coleridge, Mt. Blanc).

918 f. 'Sayst thou that these shall aught avail against his deep fall into the pit of ruin dishonor'd and disgrac'd? Nay, I tell thee, nay!' The point is lost in the ordinary translation of this τὸ μὴ οὐ phrase. Theoretically there is a decade of constructions after verbs of hindering, but practically not so many: θανεῖν (Eur. H.F. 317), μὴ κατθανεῖν (197), ὥστε μὴ θανεῖν (326), τὸ μὴ . . . κακουργεῖν (Thuc. 3. 1), τοῦ μὴ κατακυνθῆναι (Hdt. 1. 86). Examples with the article after verba promovendi, sumendi et faciendi are comparatively rare. — πτώματα: see on 764.

920. τοῖον: prose τοιοῦτον. No connectives are necessary when demonstratives begin a sentence, since they point back to the foregoing statement (often, as here, giving a reason). The παλαιστής is not Heracles, but the παῖδα φέρτερον πατρός (768).

921. ἐπ' αὐτὸς αὐτῷ: see on 762. — δυσμαχώτατον τέρας: a prodigy (of strength) unconquerable (and not like the overthrown Titans).

922 f. And he shall find a flame more furious far than Zeus's livid lightning, a deafening crash to drown the thunder's roar. — The repetition of the grating rasping κ produces a peculiarly frightening effect. Cp. 911. — βρον-

θαλασσίαν τε γῆς τινάκτειραν νόσον

τῆς: gen., like κερανοῦ, since ὑπερβάλλουσα = κρείσσουσα (after the analogy of ὑπερφέρειν, ὑπερέχειν, προέχειν). Cp. Plato, Gorg. 475 C ὑπερβάλλει τὸ ἀδικεῖν τοῦ ἀδικεῖσθαι. In 722 we have the accusative.

924. θαλασσίαν: with νόσον (sea scourge). See on 225. — τινάκτειραν: for the form cp. 894. — νόσον: pestem.

925. Poseidon's trident-spear shall shatter. — Zeus and Poseidon, rival suitors for the hand of Thetis, were warned by Themis πεπρωμένον ἦν φέρτερον γόνον ἂν ἄνακτα πατρὸς τεκεῖν πόντιον θεόν, ὃς κερανοῦ τε κρέσσον ἄλλο βέλος διώξει χερὶ τριῖδοντός τ' ἀμαιμακέτων (irresistible), Δί' γε μισγομένων (Pind. Isthm. 7. 60 ff.). Intro. II. 13. 3. In Suppl. 218 the trident is called σημεῖον θεοῦ. — Aeschylus omits this (irrelevant) part of the legend, though he keeps the part of the prophecy which concerns Poseidon (for rhetorical effect and because the overthrow of Zeus means the dethronement of Poseidon as well). — τρίαϊναν: the symbol of Poseidon's authority. — αἰχμή: fig., as often. Eur. uses αἰχμή, δόρυ, and ἔγχος for μάχη and πόλεμος.

926. πταίσας τῷδε: metaphor from a ship dashing on a rock.

927. The difference 'twixt sovereignty and servitude. The articles add to the bitterness. The conjunctions τὲ καί (union) seem inconsistent with δίχα (far apart); but cp. Eur. Alc. 528 χωρὶς τό τ' εἶναι καὶ τὸ μή, Soph. O.C. 808 χωρὶς τό τ' εἰπεῖν πολλὰ καὶ τὰ καίρια. τὲ καί connects dissimilars as well as similars. forms a group, whether hostile or not.

928. θήν: Ep. = δῆ (only example in Att. literature). — ἃ χρήζεις: concrete, where Eng. might use the abstract. There is no word for will in classic Greek (θέλημα is late): Prometheus responds by ἃ βούλομαι (which is not βουλή). Cp. δόγμα and ἃ σέβου, προσεύχου, θῶπτε τὸν κρατοῦντ' αἰί.

936. Who bow down to Adrasteia (i.e. avoid haughty speech) are wise. Heaven is ever jealous of man's too great εὐτυχία, and those who propitiate, who προσκυνοῦσι Nemesis, or Adrasteia, to avert the evil, are wise. The chorus desires to mitigate the effects of Prometheus' rash utterance, hopes that he will show some humility to offset the too presumptuous words he has just spoken. So the old slave seeks to avert the calamity which threatens his master in the Hippolytus (116 ff.). — Ἀδράστειαν: "Nemesis, that scourges pride and scorn" (Beaum. & Fl. False One 5. 4). Cp. Plato, Rep. 451 A προσκυνῶ δὲ Ἀδράστειαν . . . χάριν οὐ μέλλω λέγειν. Dem. 25. 37 Ἀδράστειαν μὲν ἄνθρωπος ὃν ἔγωγε προσκυνῶ, Alciphr. Ep. 1. 33 προσκυνῶ δὲ τὴν Νέμεσιν. Acc. to Aristotle the word means that-which-can-not-be-run-away-from (ἀ + διδράσκειν), hence ineluctabile fatum. — An abstract noun was conceived very largely as a proper name. The true key to earlier Greek is a constant return to personification.

937. Cringe low, crook the knee, truckle to the ruler ever — much more expressive of the mood of Prometheus than σὺ μὲν σέβου καὶ προσεύχου κτέ. (which Rutherford reads). Cp. 392. — "To fawne, to crowche, to waite" (Spenser), "To drain the heart with endless complaisance; | To warp the unfinished diction on the lip, | And twist one's mouth to counterfeit enforce; | . . . calculate and plot; be rough and smooth, | Forward and silent, deferential. cool, | With pallid hot-bed courtesies to forestall | The green and vernal spontaneity" (Clough. Dipsychus 1. 3). The chorus is ready for cozenage and craven submission, but "Unpractis'd he to fawn" (like Goldsmith's hero). Prometheus "closed the tyrant-hater he began" (Byron. Don Juan. Ded.) — "Götter, stets unbesiegt. unsclavisch, die wollen wir bleiben" (Klopstock, Mess. 2. 438). Zeus will not rule long (940): all the captive needs is patience; as Shelley puts it: "I wait, | Enduring thus. the retributive hour." — αἰί: intensi-

938. μηδέν: generic: "nothings, nothing-worth, | From that first nothing ere his birth, | To that last nothing under earth" (Tennyson) — not some particular thing which is nothing (οὐδέν), but the abstract idea of nothingness. And the words are in an atmosphere surcharged with imperatives — commands to right of them (939), commands to left of them (937), whose influence is not οὐδέν — 'fawn upon Zeus, if you will, but think not I care aught for him' — "Homage he has from all, but none from me" (Byron, Cain 2. 1).

939. δράτω: dif. from ποιείτω (935). Cp. Eng. "drastic," Soph. Ant. 768 δράτω, φρονεῖτω μείζον ἢ κατ' ἀνδρ' ἰόν.

940. ἄρξει θεοῖς: prose ἄρξει θεῶν. See on 49.

941. τρόχιν: courier, lackey (contemptuously instead of ἀγγελον): "commendable in lacquies . . . not in men of rank and quality" (Beaum. & Fl. French Lawyer 1. 1). The disdain and derision is made more prominent by the cumulation of the deictic τόν's and τοῦ's.

942. "That new-made menial of the new-crowned king" (Mrs. Browning). — τοῦ . . . τοῦ: the oratorical position with decided effect — "with some surprise and thrice as much disdain" (Enid).

943. πάντως τι καινόν: sarcastically.

944-1093. The last and best scene — complete unfolding of the energetic and indomitable character of Prometheus. Enter "Heaven's winged herald, Jove-born Mercury."

Cp. 328, Pers. 794 τοὺς ὑπερπόλλους ἄγαν, and Tennyson’s “red rose redder than itself,” “fairest fair,” “beauty passing beauty,” “sweetest Sweet,” Browning’s “black beyond Kimerian,” Marlowe’s “most-most wretched,” “worst of all worst worsts” (Ben Jonson, Silent Woman 5. 1).

945 f. Cp. 82. — πορόντα: by punveying (causal, dependent on ἔξαμαρτόντα).

947. Zeus is “chafing at his own great self defied” (Tennyson). — πατήρ: one hundred and sixty times in Aesch., but only three times with the article. — ἄνωγε: Er. Hdt. = prose κελεύει (bids thee tell what marriage thou vauntest). — κομπεῖς: only here in Aesch. = standard prose κομπάσεις, μεγαλαυχεῖς, ἀλαζονεύη. — γάμους: the plur. is commoner even in prose.

948. ἐκπίπτει: “Prophetically doth forethink thy fall” (I Henry IV, 3. 2). See on 171.

949. μέντοι: I’d have you know. — αἰνικτηρίως: cp. 610.

950. αὐθ' ἕκαστα: each themselves (not something else, but just as they are, designating each item by its proper name). Cp. Eur. Or. 1393 σαφῶς λέγ' ἡμῖν αὐθ' ἕκαστα, Phoen. 494 ταῦτ' αὐθ' ἕκαστα . . . οὐχὶ περιπλοκάς | λόγων (circumlocutions), Phryn., App. Soph. p. 7 τὸ τὰ κυριώτατα διὰ βραχέων καὶ τὰ ἀναγκαιότατα λέγειν, μὴ κύκλω βυδίζοντα καὶ περιτρέχοντα αὐθ' ἕκαστα λέγειν ἐκάλεσαν οἱ παλαιοί. — ἔκφραζε: the cpd. for greater emphasis.

951. προσβάλης: impose.

952. τοῖς τοιούτοις: such (evasions), not τοῖς μὴ πειθομένοις αὐτῷ (schol., fol. by Weil). An evasive reply would impose διπλᾶς ὁδοὺς on Hermes.

965. καθώρμισας: to the maritime Greeks scarcely more than "didst bring." Oceanus reminded him (276) that πημοναί visit man, Hermes warns him that he has brought himself to πημοναί (σαυτὸν καθώρμισας = κατέπλευσας) — his haven was the scar to which he was clamped. Cp. Luom. 3. 3 nauem ut horrisono freto | noctem pauentes timidi adnectunt nauitae. So κατακομίζεσθ.μ of vessels seeking the harbor from the high sea. Hermes reënforces the sarcasm in οἶμαι by mimicry of Prometheus' phraseology (λατρείας). — πέτρα ἢ πατρί: scar than sire. The similarity in sound makes the contrast more emphatic.

970. Not 'insult for insult,' as translators and commentators take it — τοὺς ὑβρίζοντας is subj., not obj.; οἱ γὰρ ἀντιποιῶντες οὐχ ὑβρίζουσιν ἀλλὰ τιμωροῦνται (Arist. Rhet. 2. 2.

5). The verb is used absolutely, as often, e.g. Eur. Suppl. 743 ὑβρίζ' ὑβρίζων τ' αὐθις ἀνταπώλετο. Prometheus is not in a position to ὑβρίζειν. See App.

971. Thou seemst to revel in thy present high position. — χλιδᾶν: prose τρυφᾶν (the insolent pride that cometh of great prosperity). Cp. 436, 891.

973. καὶ σὲ δέ: and thee too; καί emphasizes σέ, δέ being the connective — hence this order is necessary (= λέγω δὲ καὶ σέ); often in Aesch., only once in Soph. (Phil. 1362), very freq. in Xen. — ἐν: inter.

Andr.* 4. 1). — ὦμοι. τόδε: so in Sanskrit the quoted words are marked by iti (thus) — the Greek transposes and says "ὦμοι," that's a word Zeus has never learned. Cp. 34. 952, Verg. Aen. 6. 376 desine fata deum flecti sperare precando. But Prometheus interprets: "Zeus has not learned ὦμοι" (to know suffering, — "non ignara mali miseris succurrere disco," says Dido, Aen. 1. 630).

981. But ever-aging Time teaches everything (and will teach him). Solon says γηράσκω δ' αἰὲν πολλὰ διδασκόμενος, and the old nurse in the Hippolytus exclaims (252) πολλὰ διδάσκει μ' ὁ πολὺς βίος.

982. καὶ μὴν σύ γε κτέ.: (you may talk about Time teaching everything, but) besprew me, if he has taught you yet. — σωφρονεῖν: poise, discretion.

983. 'Granted, seeing that I am talking with thee, an underling.' The words at the extremities of the verse, and the neg. after its verb, are emphatic both in position and in fact. See on 255, 979.

See on 646.

1002-1006. A fine passage for declamation. So Othello 3. 3 ("Like to the Pontick sea," etc.). Cp. 987-996, 1043-1053. "Do all thy worst; nor death, nor Tamburlaine, | Torture, or pain, can daunt my dreadless mind" (Marlowe, 2 Tamb. 5. 1), "Still in thy patient energy, | In the endurance and repulse, | Of thy impenetrable spirit, | Which Earth and Heaven could not convulse" (Byron, Prometheus).

1003. θηλύνους: means woman-hearted (playing the woman).

1005. With womanish supine supplication of hands, i.e. raising my supine hands entreatingly like women. Cp. Verg. Aen. 3. 176 tendoque supinas ad caelum cum uoce manus, 4. 204 multa Iouem supplex manibus orasse supinis, Hor. Od. 3. 23. I caelo supinas si tuleris manus.

1006. λῦσαι: as in Eng. the inv. changes to the inf. in O.O. — τοῦ παντὸς δέω: see on 961.

1007. πολλὰ καὶ μάτην: the ordinary combination (like πολλοὶ καὶ ἀγαθοί). — πολλὰ is the acc.

of the inner obj., hence μάτην (not an adj.) is parallel. The omission of the connective in Eng. shows that we. differently from the Greeks, look upon the adj. as a numeral. Cp. Eum. 144 ἦ πολλὰ δὴ παθοῦσα καὶ μάτην ἐγώ. S.-W. strangely consider that καί is not a connective in either sentence.

1008. τέγγη: art softened. — μαλθάσση: sc. κέαρ and cp. 399.

1009 f. Like a new-harnessed colt dost champ the bit and rear and plunge, contending 'gainst the rein. Cp. Eur. Hipp. 1223 ἐνδακοῦσαι στόμια πυριγενῆ γναθμοῖς, "As a hot-proud horse highly disdains | To have his head controll'd. but breaks the reins, | Spits forth the ringled bit, and with his hoves | Checks the submissive ground" (Marlowe, Hero and L. 2). 1011. "In impotence of fancied power" (Tennyson) — no real strength, but mere outward show.

1012 f. 'Mere self-will availeth naught.' The ἀσθενὲς σοφίσμα of Prometheus is his vain refusal to reveal to Zeus the danger that threatens him. The Titan hopes to compel the suzerain to make overtures of peace; but Hermes tells him that resistance only means more rigorous punishment.

1013. αὐτῇ καθ' αὐτὴν: per se (without τὸ καλῶς φρονεῖν, or unsupported by something else). Cp. Soph. O.T. 549 εἴ τοι νομίξεις κτήμα τὴν αὐθαδίαν | εἰναί τι τοῦ νοῦ χωρίς. οὐκ ὀρθῶς φρονεῖς. — οὐδενὸς μείζον: = παντὸς ἀσθενέστερον (litotes). The emphasis is on the neg. Cp. 1011 (ἀσθενεῖ), 938. — σθένει: prose δύναιται; preserved in Att. only in a comic verse and Soph. El. 998.

1014. The ultimatum. — σκέψαι:

in poetry freq. metri gratia, but in ordinary prose usually σκόπει, σκέψασθε, especially in certain orators.

1015. κακῶν: with χειμῶν as well as τρικυμία. See on 21. Cp. Eur. II.F. 1091 κλύδωνι καὶ φρεϊῶν παράγματι. To the Greek a "sea of troubles" is scarcely more than κακῶν πλήθος, so familiar is the metaphor. — τρικυμία: third-wave (not "triple wave"), which, as the Greeks believed, was the greatest. The number three recurs freq. in Greek superstition. Cp. Plato, Rep. 472 Α τὼ δὶο κύματε ἐκφυγόντι τὸ μέγιστον καὶ χαλεπώτατον τῆς τρικυμίας ἐπάγεις. The Roman, on the other hand, ascribed the greatest force to the decima unda, to the decumanus fluctus. Cp. Ov. Trist. 1. 2. 50 posterior nono est undecimoque prior. In modern writers the third, seventh, ninth, tenth are regarded as the most powerful, e.g. Maxwell Gray, Last Sentence 2. 1 "Then the ninth wave . . . just in time to see the mighty tenth roller dash itself breast-high on the

Xen. Cyr. 2. 2. 4 ἄρταμος (butcher). — ράκος: proleptic, marking the effect of the action (the body of the gigantic Titan will appear to be merely a great rag for the eagle to ravin piecemeal). — “Avec quelque lambeau de sa peau bleue et verte, | Son coeur demi-pourri dans sa poitrine ouverte” (Gautier). — ράκος = φράκος = (late) Aeol. βράκος. — ρ is the only liquid which maintains in post-Homeric poetry both the internal doubling and the force of two consonants as an initial (Allen-Weckl.). Cp. Eur. I.T. 253 ἐπὶ ῥηγμῖσιν.

1024. Rostro immanis uultur obunco | immortale iecur tundens fecundaque poenis | uiscera, rimaturque epulis, habitatque sub alto | pectore; nec fibris requies datur ulla renatis (Vergil, Aeneid 6. 597). The cumulation of epithets is intentional — both sound and sense are dreadful — the hissing sigmas, the rolling rhos, and the raucous kappas are horrisonous. — ἄκλητος δαιταλεὺς: ironical, a guest at the feast (but) uninvited. — πανήμερος: the live-

— κελαινόβρωτον : proleptic. — ἐκθοινάσεται : = κατεδεταί. “With the still-growing liver feeds the vulture” (Massinger, Virgin Mar. 3. 1).

1027 ff. Hermes speaks of a reliever of the Titan's burden by suffering in his stead as something not easily found, as something one might never expect, but the god Chiron (θεὸν Χείρωνα, Soph. Tr. 714) actually suffered a voluntary death for Prometheus' sake (the heathen counterpart of the vicarious atonement). The messenger of Zeus knows nothing of Heracles' offer of the Centaur as a substitute; he is merely naming a condition that will in all probability never be fulfilled. — διάδοχος τῶν σῶν πόνων: successor to thy toils. — θεῶν τις: much more freq. than θεός τις. — ἀναύγητον: sunless. — κνεφαῖα: = ἀναύγητα, Ep. = Att. σκοτεινά. — ἀμφί: round about, i.e. ἐν ἐκείνοις τοῖς μέρεσι.

1036. ἡμῖν μὲν: to us (whatever others may think). With the pers. pronouns, and with the verbs δοκῶ and οἶμαι, μὲν is often found without corresponding δέ, the antithesis being discernible from the context. — οὐκ ἄκαιρα: not unfit (litotes) = most fitting.

1040-1093. The catastrophe. The anapaests do not mark the growing excitement of the speakers (S.-W.), but the end of the first part of the trilogy. Introd. I. 7. 4. The symmetry of the systems is noteworthy: 14 Prometheus, 9 Hermes, 8 Chorus, 9 Hermes, 14 Prometheus. This is the only certain case of antistrophic responsion in closing anapaests (1043-1053 = 1080-1093 and 1054-1062 = 1071-1079). Vv. 1063-1070 form a mesode.

1040. εἰδότει: see on 41. — τοί: with a gesture of impatience at the reiteration (1037) of the sentiment expressed by Hermes (1034 f.): 'Why, ware of this was I before the lackey oped his mouth.'

1041 f. ὄδε: contemptuously. — πάσχειν δὲ κακῶς κτέ.: but for foe to suffer ill from foe (as I) is no disgrace — as the chorus had charged reproachfully in 1039 (αἰσχροῦν). Prometheus believes that

1043-1046. So let the forked curl of flame down on my head be hurled, and heaven and earth convulsed with thunder and quivering spasm of winds exasperate. Prometheus is “Hurling defiance toward the vault of heaven,” and “All that the Thunderer wrung from him | Was but the menace which flung back | On him the torments of the rack” (Byron). Cp. “Pinn'd by the thunder to rear | His bolt-scathed front to the stars | And, undaunted, retort | 'Gainst thick-crashing, insane, | Tyrannous tempests of bale | Arrowy lightnings of soul” (Matthew Arnold, Heine's Grave). — ἐπ' ἐμοί: Ep. usage (freq. in Aesch.). Cp. 1089.

1044. “The locks of the lightning, all bristling and whitening” (Mrs. B.). — πυρὸς ἀμφήκης βόστρυχος: a bold metaphor, but not bolder than φλογὸς μέγαν πώγωνα (Ag. 306). The missiles are always the bolts, never the lightning. To the Greeks there was only one weather god. With ὕαι Zeus is always the subject (expressed or implied). The Hindus and the Teutons had no Zeus (weather god); those that bore his name had other functions. Cp.  τί γὰρ ἐλλείπει μὴ οὐ παραπαίειν wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane, | Seems to cast water on the burning bear" (Othello 2. 1), "I have seen | The ambitious ocean rage and foam, | To be exalted with the threatening clouds" (Julius Caesar 1. 3), fluctibus erigitur caelumque aequare uidetur | pontus et inductas aspergine tangere nubes (Ovid, Met. 11. 497), non si terra mari miscebitur et mare caelo (Lucret. 3. 854). — συγχώσειε: archaic use of the opt. (a relic of the period when the subjv. and opt. were not so sharply differentiated). Cp. Z 164 τεθναίης, ὦ Προῖτ', ἢ κάκτανε. In Sanskrit the subjv. practically dies out early and the opt. usurps its functions. The two moods are nearly parallel in the oldest language.

1051. ἄρδην ῥίψειε: let him lift high and hurl (ἄρδην: αἶρειν::

σύρδην: σύρειν:: μίγδην: μύγνυται).

1052. The stern vortices of necessity. The attribute belongs to the first noun, but is applied to the second (hypallage). If Necessity is stern, the blasts are stern. For the thought cp. Eur. Hec. 1295 (στερρὰ ἀνάγκη).

1053. The only example of diaeresis in the first foot of a paroemiac, exc. Eur. Fr. 475. 550. — πάντως . . . οὐ: at all events not (more emphatic than οὐδαμῶς) — reënforced by γέ. Cp. 333.

1054. φρενοπλήκτων: = deranged. Cp. 878.

1056. 'Wherein does his wish differ from madness?' — ἐλλείπει: falls short. Cp. Lys. 31. 3 εἴ τι ἐγὼ ἐλλείπομι . . . τῆς κατηγορίας. — μὴ οὐ: after the neg. idea in ἐλλείπει. GMT. 815. Negatives are not, however, always followed by μὴ οὐ (e.g. Soph. O.T. 1387, Ant. 443, Phil. 348). — παραπαίειν: strike the wrong chord, be mad. See on 581.

1057. χαλᾶ: sc. εὐχή. — μα-νιῶν: gen. with verb of want (merely a repetition of the idea in παραπαίειν, as χαλᾶ is of ἐλλείπει).

1059. συγκάμνουσαι: cp. 414.
 The hyperbaton and the position of ταῖς and τοῦδε are noteworthy.

1060 f. For the tmesis see on 877. — μετά . . . χωρεῖτε: = with- draw, though the prep. does not mean with here, nor the verb draw.
 Cp. 309. — θοῶς: Ep. = prose τα-χέως. — ὑμῶν: = ὑμετέρας (which does not occur in Aesch.). — μὴ:
 prose ἵνα μὴ. — ἠλιθιώση: daze, smite to idiocy.

1062. ἀτέραμνον: hard. So in Eng. a hard clap. The 'thunder's bellowing' is the deafening roar.

 See on 190. Cp. 1082.

1063-1070. "He that can endure | To follow with allegiance a fallen lord, | Does conquer him that did his master conquer" (An- tony and Cleopatra 3. 2). Cp.
 Menand. 263 ἰδίας νόμιζε τῶν φίλων τὰς συμφοράς, 276 κρίνει φίλους ὁ καιρὸς ὡς χρυσὸν τὸ πῦρ, Eur. Suppl. 867 φίλος τ' ἀληθὴς
 ἦν φίλοις παροῦσί τε | καὶ μὴ παροῦσιν· ὧν ἀριθμὸς οὐ πολὺς.

1063. 'Some other topic, pray
 — try your powers of persuasion on something in which you will have some reasonable hopes of prevailing on me.' Cp. 522.

1064 f. 'For surely this speech (full of effrontery) is not to be endured.' — παρέσυρας: swept in, i.e. lugged in (ἀκαίρως). Aristophanes in Eq. 526 uses the word

πῶς με κελεύεις κακότητ' ἀσκεῖν; μετὰ τοῦδ' ὅ τι χρὴ πάσχειν ἐθέλω· τοὺς προδότας γὰρ μισεῖν ἔμαθον, κούκ ἔστι νόσος 1070 τῆσδ' ἦντιν' ἀπέπτυσα μάλλον.

of Cratinus, who "swept away trees," like a torrent, carrying everything before him. Here Hermes has swept into his discourse a word that should not be there. The nymphs feel insulted that he should attribute to them such principles. The herald of the high court has forgot his savoir faire to intimate thus blunderingly that the Oceanides could be capable of such conduct. — πλητόν: Ep. = ἀνασχετόν. — κακότητ' ἀσκεῖν: cp. Eur. Suḗphl. 872 ἄλλην χρηστότ' ἠσκηκότα (practis'd another kind of excellence).

1067. The nymphs do not believe in such advice as Photinus gives Achoreus (Beaum. & Fl. False One 1. 1): "And though 'tis noble to a sinking friend | To lend a helping hand, while there is hope | He may recover . . . when all his hopes are dead. | To drown him, set thy foot upon his head," or that "what man hath of frendes the fortune. | Mishap wil make hem enemies, I gesse. | This proverbe is ful sothe and ful comune" (Chaucer, Balthazar), but rather in that expressed in the lines, "I'll yet follow | The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason | Sits in the wind against me" (Antony and Cleopatra 3. 8). The Chorus believes "θησαυρὸς μέγας ἐστ' ἀγαθὸς φίλος" and "φίλε μου ἐν τῇ ἀνάγκῃ μου καὶ μὴ ἐν τῇ σπατάλῃ μου (prosperity)."

1068. προδότας: alluding (if to anybody) to Themistocles.

1069. νόσος: see on 225. — ἔμαθον: with the inf., but in 62 with the participle. Cp. Z 444 μάθον ἔμμεναι ἐσθλός. GMT. 915.

1070. The caesura before μάλλον is unaccompanied by the usual diaeresis after the first foot. — ἀπέπτυσα: gnomic aor. GMT. 60. The adj. is found in Eum. 191 ἀπόπτυστοι θεοῖς. Compare "I never yet was traitor to my friends | The laws of friendship I have ever held | As my religion" (Chapman, Duke of Byron 2. 1).

ΠΡΟΜΗΘΕΥΣ

1080 καὶ μὴν ἔργῳ κοῦκέτι μύθῳ

1071. μέμνησθε: four times in Aesch. with acc. rei, never acc. personae.

1078. Into the ineluctable net of disaster ("tangled in the fold of dire necessity"). — Aesch. is fond of the expression δίκτυον ἄτης. Cp. Ag. 360 δουλείας γάγγαμον ἄτης παναλώτου (slavery's sweep-net of sorrow) 1048, 1376, Ibycus, Fr. 2 ἐς ἄπειρα δίκτυα Κύπριδος; Stat. Silv. 5. 155 leti plagae. — ἀπέραντον: cp. θ 340 δεσμοὶ ἀπείρονες. — εἰς: vivid for ἐν. Cp. 228, 361, Eum. 29 ἐς θρόνους καθιζάνω. — ἄτης: forty-four times in Aesch. (thirty-three of bloodshed; the rest of destruction in a more general sense).

1079. ὑπ' ἀνοίας: = ἀνοία =

δι' ἀνοίαν. See on 170. Cp. Ag. 541 ἐνδακρύνειν ὄμμασιν χαρᾶς ὕπο.

1080. Hermes soars skyward. A storm bursts. Cp. Hes. Theog. 706 σὺν δ' ἄνεμοι ἐνοσίῳ τε κόνιν θ' ἄμα ἐσφαράγιζον, | βροντήν τε στεροπήν τε, καὶ αἰθαλόεντα κεραυνόν (wind and earthquake and dust in wild tumult, and thunder and lightning and fiery levin). "What raging of the sea! shaking of earth! | Commotion in the winds! . . . Divert and crack, rend and deracinate" (Troilus and Cressida 1. 3). "Such sheets of fire, such burst of horrid thunder, | Such groans of roaring wind and rain" (King Lear 3. 2).

1081-1088. The sublime fulfillment of the threat in 989-996:

χθὼν σεσάλευται· βρυχία δ' ἤχῳ παραμυκᾶται βροντῆς, ἔλικες δ' ἐκλάμπουσι στεροπῆς ζάπυροι, στρόμβοι δὲ κόνιν 1085 εἰλίσσουσι· σκιρτᾶ δ' ἀνέμων πνεύματα πάντων εἰς ἄλληλα στάσιν ἀντίπνου ἀποδεικνύμενα·

“Vor ihm bebte der Berg und hinter ihm sanken die Felsen zitternd herab” (Klopstock, Mess. 2. 369). “Then the earth shook and trembled; the foundations also of the hills moved and were shaken, because he was wroth” (Psalms 18. 7). — For the imitation of thunder and lightning the ancients had a thunder-mill (βροντεῖον), which consisted of bags of stones rolled down over bronze plates back of and under the stage. The κεραυνοσκοπεῖον was a high περίαικτος. Much of the storm-scene was necessarily left to the spectator's imagination: but in the production of thunder there seems to be no good reason for believing that, even in Aeschylus' time, the ingenuity of the Athenian was taxed more than that of the modern playwright.

1081. “The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven: the lightnings lightened the world: the earth trembled and shook” (Psalms 77. 18).

1082. And thunder subterranean reverberates withal, “Some subterranean | And rocking power of the internal world” (Byron). —

* βρυχία: = ὑποβρυχία (under the surface). Cp. 993 f.

1083 f. And fiery zigzag lightning-flashes gleam and whirlwinds whirl and twirl the dust. — ἔλικες: in speaking of Demosthenes' fulmina Cicero says that they would not have been so effective, had they not been numerus contorta (Or. *234). — ζάπυροι: exceedingly livid. Cp. Pers. 316 ζαπληθῆ. — κόνιν: ī also Suppl. 180. 782.

1086 f. All the winds in great contention with opposing blasts leap together. — ἀντίπνου: ī. Similar lengthenings in anapaests are found in Ar. Av. 216, 579; usually only β, γ, δ before λ, μ, ν, lengthen in thesis in dramatic poetry.

ξυντεάρακται δ' αἰθὴρ πόντω.
 τοιάδ' ἐπ' ἐμοὶ ῥιπή Διόθεν 1090 τεύχουσα φόβον στείχει φανερώς.
 ὦ μητρὸς ἐμῆς σέβας, ὦ πάντων αἰθὴρ κοινὸν φάος εἰλίσσων, ἔσορᾶς μ' ὡς ἔκδικα πάσχω.

1088. The waves are so high that they seem to unite with the clouds. — ξυντεάρακται : ξύν is demanded by the meter in only three instances in Aeschylus.

1090. τεύχουσα : Ep. and Lyr. = prose παρέχουσα. but rare in Sophocles and Euripides.

1091. μητρὸς ἐμῆς σεβας : see on 902.

1093. ἔκδικα πάσχω : = ἄδικα πάσχω = ἀδικοῦμαι, and, as Aristotle says (Rhet. 1. 13. 5). ἔστι δὴ τὸ ἀδικεῖσθαι τὸ ὑπὸ ἐκόντος τὰ

ἄδικα πάσχειν. — In the words ὡς ἔκδικα πάσχω, the final words of the first play of the trilogy, spoken as he is being hurled into the depths of Tartarus, Prometheus gives vent to all the indignation of his soul at the unjust treatment he is receiving from the king he has helped to the throne. — “When he that should reward, forgets the men | That purchased his security, 'tis virtue | To boast a merit” (Shirley, The Traitor 1. 2).

APPENDIX

A. MANUSCRIPTS

- M*: codex Mediceus (Laurentianus 32. 9) in the library of Lorenzo dei Medici. Florence, by far the oldest and best; contains all the plays of Aeschylus except parts of the Agamemnon.
- a*: codex Marcianus 468 (now in the same library as M), a fifteenth century copy of M.
- b*: codex Parisinus 2886, fifteenth century, probably a copy of M; contains all the plays except the Agamemnon and the Choephoroi.
- c*: codex Florentinus (Laurentianus 318), fourteenth century; contains all the plays except the Choephoroi and the Supplices.
- d*. codex Marcianus 616, in the library of St. Mark, Venice, probably a copy of M, thirteenth century (probably); contains the same plays as c (except a part of the Agamemnon).
- e*: codex Farnesianus, in the Museum at Naples, fourteenth century (same plays as c and d); contains the revision of Demetrius Triclinius.

The following facsimiles may be mentioned: —

1. Aeschylī quae supersunt in codice Laurentiano veterrimo quoad effici potuit et ad cognitionem necesse est visum typis descripta edidit R. Merkel. Oxonii e typographeo Clarendoniano, MDCCCLXXI.
2. L' Eschilo Laurenziano. Facsimile pubblicato sotto gli auspici del ministero dell' Istruzione pubblica, Florence, 1896.

B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

[The tragedies of Aeschylus have evoked a prodigious literature; texts, editions with notes, translations, and treatises on the poet's works aggregate several thousand; hence only a small portion of them can be mentioned here.]

I. EDITIONS

Besides those given with full titles below the following earlier editions may be named: Turnebus (Paris, 1552), Robortelli (Venice, 1552).

Canter (Antwerp, 1580), Stanley (London, 1663), Pauw (The Hague, 1745), Schütz (Halle, second edition, 1809), Blomfield (Cambridge, 1810; seventh edition, 1837), Bothe (1831), Fix (1843).

2. TRANSLATIONS

Besides the older translations of Mrs. Browning, Robert Potter (London, 1779; and with an introduction by Henry Morley, 1886), John Stuart Blackie (London, 1850), and E. H. Plumptre (London, second edition, 1873), the play has been done into English verse recently by Lewis Campbell (London, 1890), by Paul E. More (Boston, 1900), by E. R. Bevan (London, 1902), and others. Among the German translations may be mentioned Donner's (Deutsch in den Versmassen der Urschrift, Stuttgart, 1854), and Todt's (Die Tragödien des Aeschylus verdeutsch, Prag, 1891).

C. CRITICAL NOTES ON THE TEXT

[For American Journal of Philology the abbreviation A. J. P. has been used; for Transactions of the American Philological Association, ΤΑΡΑ; and for the Proceedings of the same, ΡΑΡΑ. For the names of the editors mentioned in the critical notes, consult the Bibliography.]

2. ἐς οἶμον: MSS., δύσοιμον (ἄσοιμον) Weil, ἄκυμον F. W. Schmidt, ἐς αἶαν (preceded by Σκυθῶν) Nauck. — ἄβροτον: schol. Ξ 78, schol. Ar. Ran. 814, ἄβατόν τ' M, ἄβατον recc., Weckl. (now), S.-W. The variant is probably very old. Cp. Soph. Phil. 1-2 Ἀκτῆ . . . ἄστιπτος οὐδ' οἰκουμένη (= ἄβροτος, which seems more appropriate in our passage). When Prometheus describes the place, he speaks of τοῦδ' ἀγείονος πάγου (270), and Hephaestus declares that he will fasten him τῷδ' ἀπανθρώπῳ πάγῳ. ἴν' οὔτε φωνὴν οὔτε του μορφὴν βροτῶν ὄψει (21). The Titan is pinioned σκοπέλοις ἐν ἄκροισι (143), πρὸς πέτρας ὑψηλοκρήμνοισι (5), but the κορυφαί are not ἄβατοι (Eur. Ion 86). Cp. Prom. 722. Eur. Phoen. 809 εἰς ἄβατον φῶς (quo nemo penetrare potest). Hdt. 4. 25 οὔρεα τε γὰρ ὑψηλὰ ἀποτάμνει ἄβατα καὶ οὐδεὶς σφει ὑπερβαίνει, Xen. An. 4. 1. 20 βλέψον. ἔφη, πρὸς τὰ ὄρη καὶ ἶδε ὡς ἄβατα πάντα. 5. 6. 9 ὁ Παρθένιος ἄβατος . . . ἐγὼ μὲν οὖν οὐ χαλεπὴν . . . νομίζω τὴν πόρειν ἀλλὰ παντάπασιν ἀδύνατον. Plato. Legg. 892 E εἰ διάβυτός ἐστι . . . εἰ δὲ ἄβατος, Soph. Fr. 85 ἐς τε τὰ βυτα καὶ πρὸς τὰ βυτά. True, the epithet means also a nemine adhuc visitatum (Eur. H. F. 851 ἄβατον χώρων, Fr. 740 ἀβάτους λειμώνων), or quo ingredi non licet (Bacch. 10, Phoen. 1751 σηκὸς ἄβατος); but here the idea is rather οὐκ οἰκουμένην ἐρημίαν, not ἄστιπτον γῆν. Cp. Xenophon's σταθμοὶ ἐρήμοι and πόλεις ἐρήμοι) (οἰκουμέναι — “desert, unfrequented . . . than flourishing peopled towns” (Two Gent. Verona 5. 4). 6. ἀδαμαντίνων δεσμῶν ἐν ἀρρήκτοις πέδαις: schol. Ar. Ran. 814, ἀδαμαντίναις πεδησιν ἐν ἀρρήκτοις πέτρας M, σφηνῶν ἐν ἀρ. πέδαις Lowinski. Stanley's conjecture πεδῶν is improbable, since the tragic poets avoided as much as possible the gen. plur. of the first declension. 13. ἐμπεδῶν ἔτι: M, ἐ. ἄνη Herm., ἐ. ματῶν Hart., ἐμπεδαῖ μ' ἔτι Heimsoeth, ἐμπόδισμά που Lowinski, ἦν πόνων ἔτι Zakas. 16. σχεθεῖν: Elmsley, σχέθειν M. 17. εὐωριάζειν: Porson (after glosses of Hesych. and Photius), ἐξωριάζειν M (which is explained by the schol. ἐξω ὥρας καὶ φροντίδος ποιέσθαι). Neither the verb nor the deriv. from ὥρα (ἐξωρος) occur. 20. πάγῳ: recc., τόπῳ M (not exactly congruous with προσπιισσαλεύσω). 21. ἐπηύρω: Elms., ἐπηύρω M, ἀπηύρω recc. 36. The idea is "It boots thee not to be compassionate" (Rich. II, 1. 3). 39. Cp. Ar. Vesp. 834 ὡς δεινὸν ἢ φιλοχωρία. 41. οἶόν τε; πῶς: M, ποῖόν τι; πῶς Hart. The latter's objection that disobedience to Zeus is possible is not well founded. See note. 42. αἰεί γε: rec., αἰεί τε M, αἰαῖ τί Elms., αἰεὶ σύ Hart. 43. Tournier proposes τῷδε for τόνδε (Rev. de Phil. for 1878, II. 176). 45. The meaning of χειρωναξία is made clear by τέχνη two lines below: "That of their stele, by thy craft, condatur mihi galea," says Thersytes to Mulciber in an Old Eng. Play. 49. ἐπαχθῆ: Stanley, ἐπράχθη Mss., Blomf., Dind., ἐπρώθη Abresch, ἐτάχθη Schaefer, C. G. Haupt, ἐκράνθη Reisig, ἐφράχθη Caesar, ἐπράθη Wieseler, ἐπώχθη Merkel, ἀπεχθῆ Fritzsche, πάραντα πᾶσσε Lowinski. Meissner reads ἐπράχθη θεοῖσι πλὴν τοῦ κοιρανεῖν, Weil ἐπράχθη Ζηνὶ θεοῖσι κοιρανεῖν. The trag. poets use ἀχθεινός, not ἐπαχθής, so far as we can judge from the extant plays; but the fact that the latter does not appear in the other six dramas is not sufficient to determine that it did not belong to the Aeschylean thesaurus: and the word is common enough in Plato. ἀπεχθής occurs only Soph. Ant. 50. 51. τοῖσδε: Mss., τοῖσδέ τ' Elms., Meineke, τοῖσδ' ἔτι Reisig, καὶ τοῖσδ' Blomf., τοῖσδέ γ' Hart., τοῖσδ' ἐγώ M. Schmidt, ἔγνωκα καὶ γώ Nauck, τίς δ' οὐ; Weil, καὶ τὸς Burges (who changes οὐδέν to οὐδ' ἔν), Nauck. 54. ψέλια: rec., Weckl., Dind., ψάλια M, Blomf., S.-W. The two words are often confused. 56. Pauw's change of the Mss. θείνε to θείνων and Bothe's to θείνας are unwarranted. 59. πόρον: Mss., πόρους Blomf., Dind., Dion. Hal. (Ant. Rom. 7. 36), Marcellin. (Vita Thuc. 5) schol. Ar. Eq. 759 (who says that πόρους is generally written instead of πόρον). Herm. maintains that the Mss. reading is correct. In Eq. 759 πόρον is not metrically possible. The reading in Marcellinus and Dionysius does not prove that πόρον is wrong. In 477 the sense is different. 60. δυσεκλύτως: M, δυσεκβλήτως rec., δυσεκβόλως Heimsoeth. 66. ὑπὸ στένω: Weckl., ὑποστένω M (first hand), ὑπερστένω rec., Blomf., ὑπερ στένω Bothe, S.-W., ὅσον στένω Heimsoeth. ὑπερ crept in from the next verse. 77. γε: rec., σε M, τε m'. 80. τραχυτήτα: most editors, τραχύτητα M, Blomf. The word is oxytone in the Attic of the best period. 87. τέχνης: Mss., τύχης rec., Blomf. (merely a correction for τέχνης misunderstood; the latter gives the sense required with ἐκκλισθήσῃ). 89 f. Nauck reads πηγαί τε ποταμῶν ποντίων τε κυμάτων νήριθμον ἀγκάλισμα. The poetical γέλασμα of the Mss. is given up by some critics for such frigid conjectures as γ' ἔλισμα (Pauw), κάχλασμι (Toup), ἀγέλασμα (Tyrwhitt). The meaning is clear: "un rayon de soleil qui sourit dans l'ondée." The motion of the waves which intensifies the effect of the rapid movement of the light, helps out the suggestion of laughter; but motion is not sound. The Platonic ἐγγελᾶν is different. — παμμῆτορ: recc., παμμήτορ M. 93. αἰκίαισιν: editors. αἰκίαισι M. 94. τὸν μυριετῆ: Oberdick, following the schol., conjectured τρισυριετῆ (Zeitschr. für öst. G. 22. 328). 96. ἐξηῦρ': most editors. ἐξεῦρ' M., Blomf. 99. πῆ: Turnebus, ποί M. — ποτε: Mss., πότε Weckl.

100. τέρματα τῶνδ' ἐπιτεῖλαι: M., τέρμα recc., τέρμα τοιῶνδ' Elmsl., τέρματι τῶνδ' ἐπικέλσαι Coenen (De comparationibus et metaphoris apud Atticos praesertim poetas. Utrecht. 1875). 108. Dähnhardt conjectured ὑπέξενγμαι from the glosses of the later Mss. (ὑπέκνυσα, ὑπήλθον). But ἐνξενγνῖναι is so common in this metaphorical sense that no change is required. Cp. 578, Eur. G. Haupt, S.-W. — προσελοῦμένος: Weckl. M. Schmidt, Fritzsche, πεπασσαλευμένος Robortel., C. G. Haupt, S.-W., πυσσαλεύμένος (first accent crossed out) M., πυσσαλευτός recc. (ὦν being added by Turn.), manifestly a correction of the reading in M., προσπεπαρμένος Dind. The original accent of πυσσαλεύμένος points to a displaced paroxytone. The first word of the verse requires an explanatory epithet, ὑπαιθρίοις hinting at some indignity. Cp. 454, where the rare word προσελοῦμενον became προσελοῦμενον and προσηλούμενον (cp. προσηλῶσθαι Lucian. Prom. 1. 1). 114. ᾶ ᾶ: Dind., ᾶ ᾶ ἔα ἔα Mss., S.-W. 116. θεόσντος: rec., θεόσσυτος M. — κεκραμένη: for the idea cp. Plato. Symph. 202 Εἰ πᾶν τὸ δαιμόνιον μεταξύ ἐστι θεοῦ τε καὶ θνητοῦ. Isoc. 10. 28 ἐξ ἀνδρὸς μὲν καὶ ταύρου μεμιγμένης. 117. Pauw would insert τις after τερμόνιον. Butler τόνδε. Dind. reads τίς ἵκετ' αἴας τόνδε τέρμιον (against which Heimsoeth Wiederh. p. 307). Fritzsche thinks τίς ὦν has dropped out after πάγον (for metrical reasons). C. F. Müller makes two dochmii by inserting τόνδε between ἵκετο and τερμόνιον. 119. ἐμῶν: recc., ἡμῶν M. 128. ἄδε: Herm., ἦδε Mss. — προσπαρτός: μί, Blomf., Weckl.

 μήποτε M. — Elms. writes μηδεῖς for μήτε τις, Herm. μήποτε τις μήτε θεός τις, Reisig μή τις θεός. Dindorf's reading μήτε θεῶν μήτε τις ἀνδρῶν was due to ignorance of the original text of M. 161. συνασχαλᾶ:
 Mss. have ξυν. So Weckl. L. Dindorf follows rec. in reading ξυνασχα-λει (on the ground that ἀσχαλᾶ is not Att.). Both forms are Ep. Cp.
 Eur. I.A. 920. — δίχα γε Διός: M, δίχα γ' ἐνός recc., δίχα γοῦν ἐνός Herm. 163. ἄγναμπτον: μή, ἄγναμφον M, ἄγναπτον rec. To restore respension with the antistrophe Morell inserts τὸν and Butler μάλ' before ἄγναμπτον, Arnaldus τὸν and Winckelmann ὄν after the same word. Dind. reads ἀκναφον, Herm. ἀστραφῆ, H. L. Ahrens ἀκνάμπετον (Philol. 23. 6). 167. ἔτ' ἐμοῦ: rec., ἔτ' ἀπ' ἐμοῦ M. 170. τὸ νέον: Mss.,

 "to knele, to stowpe and to play cowche quale." 176. τε: Turn., τέ μοι Mss. — τῆσδ': rec., τῆς M. 181. ἐρέθισε: Turn., ἠρέθισε Mss. Weil thinks we ought to retain the Mss. reading, not insisting on such extremely accurate respension. 182. δ': Porson, γὰρ Mss. 183. πᾶ:
 Turn., ὅπα Mss. 185. ἀπαράμυθον: rec., οὐ παράμυθον M. Cobet (Mnem. N. S. 14. 122) contends that παράμυθον is the correct reading, citing παράλογος and παράνομος. But the meaning here is not contra rationem. 186. τραχὺς καί: rec., τραχύς τε καί M. 187. ἔμπας.
 οἶω: preceded in the Mss. by Ζεὺς ἀλλ', which is omitted by Bothe.
 Heims., Weil, Weckl. Brunck would omit οἶω. Reisig adds πάλιν αὖ, Schneider μαλακῶς to οἶω. Stüremburg changes the verb to οἶψ, Herm.
 to οἶψ (assuming, with Scholefield, a lacuna).

201. ἔδρας: recc., ἔδρης M. 210. Schütz considers this verse an interpolation, or that Gaea is to be understood as the mother of Themis.
 Reisig assumes a lacuna between 209 and 210. Jacobs, Schömann, and others consider Gaea and Themis as different deities. Herm., Welck.,

Alrens, K. Keil, Weil, and others are correct in maintaining the opposite view. In Hesiod they are distinct, but in Athens Gé-Themis was one deity (Pausan. 1. 22; Corp. Inscr. Att. 3. 318 and 350). At Delphi they were closely associated. See on 209 and Introd. II. 13. 3. 213. χρείη, δόλω δὲ τοὺς: Dawes, χρή. ἡ δόλω τοὺς M. μή adds δὲ and writes χρεὶ ἡ in margin. — ὑπερσχόντες: Porson, ὑπερεχόντας M., ὑπερέξοντας Turn., πελωρίους Reisig, κρατήσοντας Wellauer, ὑπειρόχους Wunder, ὑπερτέρους Herm., προέξοντας Fritzsche. Hirschig omits the verse. See note. 217. προσλαβόντι: M. schol., Weckl., S.-W., προσλαβόντα recc., Porson, Blomf., Dind. Cp. Eur. Med. 660. 223. ποιναῖς: M., τιμαῖς recc. — ἐξημείψατο: M. ἀντημείψατο recc. and most editors. 234. τοῖσιν: Mss. Elmsley changed to τοισίδ' (ν being written in M for another letter crased). 239. Dind. considers an interpolation. Nauck reads ἐν οἴκῳ θέμενος, εἴτ' οἴκου τυχεῖν, Paley ταῦτοῦ τυχεῖν. There is no need of departing from the Mss. reading, which does not mean "sich jemand in seinem Mitleid zur Aufgabe machen" (Passow). See note. 245. ἡλγύνθην: recc., ἀλγύνθην M. 246. καὶ μὴν: Mss., καὶ μὴ Mitschenko (Rev. de Phil. 1877, p. 268), adopted by Weil. But this does not harmonize with the next verse. — φίλοις: Mss., φίλοισιν recc. — ἔλεινός: Porson, ἔλεεινός Mss. 253. πύρ: Mss., φῶς Meineke, σπέρμ' Weil. — E. Hoffmann (N. Jahrb. f. Phil. und Paed. 1885) thinks a verse is lost before 255 or after 256. In the first case it may have corresponded in sense to 38, in the second to 28. 264 f. τὸν κακῶς πράσσοντ': Stanley, τοὺς κακοὺς πράσσοντας Mss. Elms. reads εὖ δὲ ταῦθ' after πράσσοντας, Jacobs εὖ γὰρ, Bothe ἦ, Reisig αὐτὸς, Schneider ᾧδε. 268. τοῖαισὶ με: Mss., τοιαισὶδέ με Weckl. (since Aesch. does not seem to make freq. use of τοῖος, — only where the meter does not permit τοιόσδε), τοῖαισὶ γε C. G. Haupt, Fritzsche, τοιαισίδε Elms. 274. πίθεσθε: Elms., πείθεσθε Mss. Cp. 204, 333. 275. ταῦτά τοι: Herm. (ἡ περὶ τὰ αὐτὰ πλανωμένα, says the schol.), ταῦτά τοι M., πυκνά τοι. οἱ πανταχοῖ Weil, πάντα τοι Herwerden. 291. ἔστιν ὄψ: Mss., ἔστ' ἂν ὄψ Madv., ἔσθ' ὄψ ἂν Herwerden. Other emendations have been made to secure the (supposed) missing ἂν. But ἂν is not required. See note. 294. χαριτογλωσσείν: Athen. 4. 165 c. σὲ τὸ χ. M. — "My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing words" (Rich. III. 1. 2). 295. συμπράσσειν: Brunck, συμπράττειν M.

313. χόλον: Mss., Weckl., Dind. (cp. 29. 376). ᾄχλον Döderlein, S.-W., χόλον Lowinski. "Doederlinus ᾄχλον inepte conjecit, quasi hic de turba malorum sermo sit ac non potius de gravitate," says Fritzsche and conjectures ὄτλον (cp. Sept. 18). So Meineke (Philol. 15. 39), who later accepted Haupt's emendation (τὸν ἰὺν πολὺν παρόντα μόχθον). Weckl. previously adopted Lowinski's conjecture, but in his last edition has gone back to the Mss. reading, which is unquestionably defensible. See note. 314. μόχθων: M, μόχθον recc. Weil reads πικρὸν παρόντα μόχθον, L. Schmidt χόλον παρόντ' ἄμοχθον. Blomf. suggests μόχθων παρόντων. The afflictions are the outcome, or evidences, of the wrath of Zeus. Cp. 525 ff. 331. τούτων: Weckl., S.-W., πάντων Mss., Blomf., Dind., πόνων Weil. — μετασχών: Mss., Blomf., Dind., Kiehl (Aeschylea. p. 55) omits 331 f. and changes αἰτίας to αἰκίας in the preceding verse. Oceanus, a "plain, well-meaning soul," was not an accomplice of Prometheus in all his daring acts against Zeus; he was entirely too ἀπράγμων to have joined in such undertakings; he keeps away from the councils, as well as the contentions, of the gods; he enjoyed the good will of both the new and the old rulers. In 250 Prometheus states explicitly that he had no confederate in his revolt against Zeus. Both the "immense age" and the "remoteness" of Oceanus have, I think, been appreciated by commentators; if so, the "obvious sarcasm" which Bevan finds in these verses is not so obvious after all. Prometheus does not misdoubt the sincerity of his sympathizing visitor; only he cannot approve of his emprise. In 505 the reading of M is ταῦτα (instead of πάντα). The similar words πάντως and πάπταινε just below may have contributed to the change. Stadtmüller conjectured πενθῶν, E. Hoffmann (N. Jahrb. f. Phil. u. Paed. 1885), πρὶν οὐ μετασχών. 333. πείσεις: recc., πείθεις M. — εὐπιθής: recc., εὐπειθής M. 337. μηδαμῶς: M, μηδαμῶς μ' recc., Blomf., Dind. 338. The older form δωρειάν was restored by A. von Bamberg. See Meisterhans, Gr. d. Att. Inschr. p. 312. 340. κοῦδαμῆ: recc., κοῦδὲ μῆ M. 347-372. Given to Oceanus in Mss. E. Hoffmann defends this assignment in N. Jahrb. f. Phil. 1885. So Vendel-Heyl and Wieseler. Bergk assigns 347-365 to Oceanus, the remainder to Prometheus, assuming a lacuna before 382. Elmsley added 347-372. to the speech of Prometheus. The verses are Aeschylean, that is, Promethean (see Introd. I. 6. 1), not Oceanic. 347. χαί: Porson, καὶ Mss. 348. πρὸς: recc., ἐς M. There is no need of changing to the dat., as Valck., Hart., and Bergk desire, since there is a mental wave of hand, so to speak, toward the west. See note. 349. κίον': Mss., κίων Blomf., Petit (Obs. misc. 3. 2. 4).

350. ὤμοις: Mss., Weckl., S.-W., ὤμοιν Robortel., Blomf., Dind.
 353. ἑκατογκάρανον: Blomf., ἑκατογκάρηνον Pauw, ἑκατοντοκάρηνον (a over η) M. 354. πᾶσιν δ': Minckwitz, Herm., Weckl., Weil, πᾶσιν ὅς Mss., Dind., Ἐνφῶν ἄπασιν ὅστις Elms., θῆρ' ὅς πᾶσιν Burges, μόνος ὅς Butler, ὅστις (omitting πᾶσιν) Gaisford, πᾶσιν ὅς ἀνέστη Wunderlich, πᾶσιν ἀντέστη Wellauer, S.-W., πᾶσιν ὅς ἔσθη Lindau, παῖς ὅς ἀντέστη Kvičala, πᾶσιν ὅς γ' ἔσθη Szelinski, εἷς ὅς ἀντέστη Weil, θεοῖς ὅς ἀντέστη Blaydes. Many other conjectures have been made. Between πᾶσιν ὅς and ἀντέστη Naeke supposes a lacuna. Paley considers the verse spurious. 355. φόβον: M, Weckl., S.-W., φόνον recc., Blomf., Dind. 363. παράορον: Bergk, παρήορον recc., παράωρον M. 371. θερμοῖς: recc., Weckl., Dind., θερμῆς M, S.-W., δεινοῖς Pauw. — ἀπλάτου: Schütz, Weckl., Dind., ἀπλήστου Mss., S.-W., ἄπληστος Gedike. 378. ὀργῆς νοσοῦσης: Mss., Blomf., S.-W., νοσοῦσιν Reisig, ζεοῦσης Dind., φρενὸς νοσοῦσης Weil. Hermann says: "ὀργῆ νοσοῦσα non erit nimia et modum excedens ira intellegenda, sed quae non impleat modum nec possit recte censeri ira esse"; and comparing the schol. with Hesych. on σφριγᾶν he conjectured σφριγώσης, in which he was followed by Weckl., at first; but the latter has now gone back to the Mss. reading. Dind. compared Themistius 7. 98 φάρμακον δὲ ὀργῆς οἰδαινούσης τὸ μὲν αὐτίκα λόγος ἐστίν, ᾧ σὺ τημικαῦτα ἐπράννας σφαδάζονσαν καὶ ζέουσιν ἔτι. But νοσοῦσης harmonizes with ἰατροί, and it is attested by all the Mss. 381. προθυμείσθαι: M. προμηθείσθαι recc., Blomf., Dind., Paley. 386. ἐμὸν: Mss., μείζον Weil (formerly), but now ἐμὸν δοκῆσαι τὰμπλάκην ἀρκεῖ τόδε. 399. δακρυσίστακα δ': Weckl., Weil, Minckwitz, δακρυσίστακτον δ' Blomf. (Heath, Dind., S.-W. omit δ'). Herm. writes ῥαδινῶν δ' εἰβομένα. Schneider changes δακρυσίστακτον to the gen. plur. Heath writes ἔτεγγε (after recc.) and omits δέ and λειβομένα. G. Wolff suggested δακρυσιστακτὶ δ' (Rhein. Mus. 19. 464).
400. ῥαδινόν: recc., ῥαδινῶν M, Hart., Herm., Dind. 407 f. There is a lacuna after ἀρχαιοπρεπή. Heath reads κἀρχαιοπρεπή . . . στένοισα, Haupt μεγάλην καὶ μεγαλοσχήμονα. — στένοισι: M, στένοισα recc., δακρυχέει στένοισα Herm. Dind. fills up the lacuna with περθόμεναν. Weil adds τ' ἐσχατιῶν, Weckl. θ' ἐσπέριοι, Fritzsche δυρόμενοι. 419. Ἀρίας τ': Martin, Hart. (who proposes also Καρίας), Weckl., Ἀραβίας Mss., Dind., S.-W., Boissonade, Ἀβάρειες Burges, χαλυβίας Schütz, Ἀραμίως Wieseler, Σαρματᾶν Herm., Ἰβερίας A. Ludwig, Χαλκίδος Heimsoeth, Ἀερίων B. Foss. 421. ὑψίκριμνον: Bothe,

Elmsley, and most editors, ὑψίκρημνόν θ' Mss. The schol. says λείπει ὁ καί. 422. πέλας: Mss., πύλας Burges, Herm. (citing Pliny N. H. 6. 12 ab his sunt portae Caucasiae, magno errore multis Caspiae dictae, Luc. Prom. 4 ἀνεσταυρωσθαί με πλησίον τῶν Κασπίων τούτων πυλῶν ἐπὶ τοῦ Κανκάσου). νέμονται: recc., νέμονσι M. I have never believed that the last verses (431 ff.) of this admirable song referred to Atlas. They form the climax to the universal mourning for Prometheus. So Bevan recently in his translation (p. 89), and his reviewer (Class. Rev., April, 1903, p. 165), who supposes that the part of the chorus which sings the parenthesis referring to Atlas is not the same as that which sings the other parts. Ribbeck desired to transpose the last strophe and antistrophe. But the strophe really does not belong here. This is indicated by the lack of responsion, by the subject-matter (which is obtruded in such a way as to interrupt violently the smooth course of the song), and by words such as ἀκαμαντοδέτοις, λύμαις, which (plainly reminiscences of other parts of the play) are wholly out of place. 426. ἀδαμαντοδέτοις: rec., ἀκαμαντοδέτοις M., ἀκάμπτοις Weil, ἀκιμάτοις Ribbeck. 428. "Ἄτλανθ' ὄς: rec., ὡς M. — ὑπέροχον: rec., ὑπέιροχον M. The whole strophe has given trouble. Lachmann conjectured μόνον μόνον δὴ πρόσθε σου ἄλλων, Dind. θεὸν Ἄτλαν, ὄς αἰὲν ὑπέροχον σθένος κραταῖον γᾶς, Pflugk θέοθεν Ἄτλαντος αἰὲν . . . οὐράνιον πόλον ὄς νότοις ὑποστεγάζει, Hart. κρατύνων . . . φέρων νότοις, Butler κραταῖον οὐρανοῦ πόλον, Fritzsche κρατύνων γᾶς . . . ἐπιστενάξει. Schütz omits ἐν πόνοις. Burney changes to πόνοισιν, Herm. reads εἰσιδόμεν θεῶν Ἄτλαντος ὑπέροχον . . . ὄς γὰν . . . ὑποστεγάζει, Heimsoeth the same (exc. εἰδόμεν θεῶν δαμέντ'). Madv. has ἐντόνοις and adds τε to ἀδαμαντοδέτοις. Ribbeck reads εἰσιδόμεν. S.-W. omit τε after and insert ὄς before οὐράνιον. Minckwitz suggests αἴας after αἰὲν (but αἴα does not mean earth). Paley changes ὑπέροχον to ὑπερέχει, Schütz σθένος κραταῖον to χθονὸς κατερείδων. Dind. proposed ὄχων στενάξει. Halm ὄς γὰν οὐράνιον τε πόλον νότοις ὑποστεγάζει, Ludwig and Pleitner ὄς αἴαν, Meineke σθένος κρατῶν γάιον. Weil adds περίξ αἰερεται to κλύδων. 432. βυθός: recc., βαθύς M. 433. κελαινός: Herm., κελαινός δ' Mss. 435. See note. The rivers make moan for the suffering (ἄλγος) of the Titan. Cp.  in Cowper's lines: “Memory fills her ample page | With truths pour'd down from every distant age!” 463. σάγμασιν: Pauw, Weil, Weckl., S.-W., σώμασιν Mss., Blomf., Dind., σήμασιν Faber, κέντροισιν Brunck.
 465. γένοιθ: Dawes, γένωνθ' Mss. 468. ναυτίλων: recc., ναυτιλόχων

 Similar signs are noted in England and America, e.g. the burning of the right ear is an omen that one is well spoken of, that of the left an omen to the contrary. Cp. the Old Eng. Play, Jack Jugler, “I feel a vengeable burning in my left ere.” 495. Heimsoeth reads χολῆς τε ποικίλην λοβοῦ τ'. Conradt compresses 493-495 into one verse (σπλάγχμων τε χροῖαν ποικίλην τ' εὐμορφίαν). Cp. the Old Eng. Play, Iocasta, Act 3: “Faire and wellformed all in euery poynt. | The liuer cleane, the hart is not infect.” 496. καὶ μακρὰν: Mss., χᾶμ ἄκραν Reisig, σὺν τ' ἄκραν Hart., κατ' ἄκραν Blaydes.

To fill the lacuna Dind. proposed γυιοφθόροις. Fritzsche χαλκευμάτων, Minckwitz βουλαῖς θεῶν, Kiehl αὐθαδίᾳ, Stüremburg Ζητὶ στύγος, Hart. θεῶν δέμας. C. G. Haupt reads μυρίοις ἐν μόχθοις. Heimsoeth μυρίοις δέμας διακναιόμενον, Bothe μόχθοισι δέμας. 543. ἰδίᾳ γνώμα: Mss. A great number of substitutes have been proposed for the adj. Reisig conjectured αὐτογνωμόνως, Weil οἰόφρων γνώμαν, Weckl. μουνάδι γνώμα, Heimsoeth αὐτοβουλίᾳ. Fritzsche says no one will hesitate to change ἰδίᾳ to ἀντία, "quod exposcunt prima hujus chori verba v. 528 sq. Cp. Ag. 477, Eur. Suppl. 200." There seems to be no good reason for abandoning the reading of the Mss. 549 f. ἰσόνειρον: Mss., ἀντόνειρον Reisig, Weil (now). In Φ 411 both ἀντιφερίζεις and ἰσοφερίζεις occur in the Mss. In Cho. 318, M has ἰσοτίμοιρον (ἰσο written above ἀντι). Weckl. thinks the epic quantity (ī) cannot be supported by this passage. — δέδεται: proposed by Meineke (Zeitschr. f. Alterth., 1845, p. 1063). Blomf. adds ἰσχὺν before ἰσόνειρον, while Minckwitz writes ἱερόνειρον, Fritzsche ὡς ὄνειρον. Winckelmann proposes ταλαῶν before ἀλαόν, Lindau ἑάλωκ', while Burney supposed the original reading was ἀλιῶν ἀλαῶς. C. G. Haupt proposes ἀλαὸν ἀλῦαι. Minckwitz suggests φέρεται after ἀλαόν, Kiehl πέλεται. 551. οὐπως: Paley, οὐποτε Mss.. οὐπω Herm., οὐποτε γάρ τοι Bergk, οὐποτε θνατῶν τ. Δ. ἀρμονίαν ἀνδρῶν Dind. Bothe repeats οὐποτε. Halm inserts ἀγνὰν, Schömann σεμνὰν after τὰν, while Hart. conjectures γάρ or τοι, after οὐποτε. E. Hoffmann inserts ἀεὶ between τὰν and Διὸς. 556. ἐκεῖνό θ' ὄτ': Brunck, ἐκεῖν' ὅτε τότ' M, ἐκεῖνό τε ὄτ' rec., ἐκεῖνό θ' ὄ τ' Victorius, S.-W., ἐκεῖν' ὅ γε Pauw, ἐκεῖν' ὃ τότ' Schneider, ἐκεῖνά θ' ὄσ' Fritzsche. 559. ὀμοπάτριον: Mss., ὀμοπαίστριαν, or ὀμοπαίκτηριαν, Weil. Lachmann omits ἔδνοις. Hart. reads ἄγες. 560. "Ionis carmen maxima ex parte antistrophicum esse primus vidit Hermannus tum juvenis ad Aristot. De Poet. p. 143" (Fritzsche). 564. ποιναῖς: M, ποιναῖς recc., ποινή σ' Dind., ποινά σ' Steph., Blomf. The acc. plur. is correct. Cp. Soph. El. 563 τίνος | ποιναῖς τὰ πολλὰ πνεύματ' ἔσχε. In neither case has the acc. of the inner object become a preposition pure and simple. 568. ἄλευ' ᾧ δᾶ: M, ἄλευε δᾶ Arnaldus, ἀλῶ, φεῖ δᾶ Hart., ἄλευσόν με Δᾶ, τὸν . . . βούταν Burges. Dind., following Schleussner, restored ἄλευ δᾶ (Etym. Mag. 60. 8), to obtain the same metron as in the following line. as also in 592. But the remark of the schol. Ἄλεαδά πατρωνυμικῶς ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἄλεως (which recalls the famous Homeric διὰ στήτην ἐρίσαντε) seems to point to the reading of M. 570. δόλιον: M, δὴ δόλιον Lachmann. δολερὸν rec., δόλιον ἄμμ' Wieseler. No alteration is necessary. Zakas discovers in δόλιον "τὴν παντάπασιν νέαν καὶ ἀνήκουστον σημισίαν τοῦ φλογερόν." citing Eur. Hel. 1131 δόλιον ἀστέρα λάμφας. But even in this passage δόλιον has its ordinary meaning. Koechly reads φόμιον, Thomas θαλερὸν. 572. κυναγεῖ: Herm., Weckl., κυνηγετεῖ Mss., Blomf., κυναγετεῖ Brunck, Dind., S.-W. 574 κηρόπακτος: Meineke, Weckl., S.-W., κηρόπλαστος Mss., Blomf., Dind. 575. ὑπνοδόταν: Mss., ὑπνολέταν Hart. "Porsoni obelum ante vocam ἀλιστόνοις retinui, cum nihil certi habeam, quod in locum ejus substituere ausim." — ἀλλὰ γυῖ' ἀλιστόνοις : Herm., Weckl., ἀλλ' ἀλιστόνοις γύποδας Mss. (ων over as in π'), ἀλιστόνοις πόδας Turn., Dind., ἀ. γ' ὑπὸ Elms., λισσάσιν πόδα Hart., Ἀλιζώνοις Burges. 716. πρόσπλατοι : Elms., πρόσπλαστοι Mss. 717. Ὑβρίστην : Bothe, Ὑβριστήν Schütz, ὕβριστήν Mss., Ἀράξην Heimsoeth. 727. ναύταισι : Eustathius, p. 560. 19. Tzetzes on Lycophr. 1286, ναύτησι Mss. 735. Ἀσιάδ' : Mss. (accent over ι erased in M), Dind., S.-W., Ἀσιδ' Elms., Weckl. (now). 741. μηδέπω ἔν : Turn., Blomf., Dind., Weckl.,

S.-W.. μηδ' ἐπῶν Mss. — Ahrens (de crasi et aphaer. p. 24) doubts the possibility of aphaeresis here, and writes μηδέπω προοιμίαις. 749. πέδοι: Dind., πῆδω Mss. 758. ἦδοι' ἄν: Dawes, ἦδοιμ' ἄν M, ἦδοιο ἄν rec. 760. σοι μαθεῖν πάρα: Turn., μαθεῖν σοι (ν σοι in litura) M, σοι γηθεῖν Schütz. ἰανθῆναι Weil, συμμαθεῖν Fritzsche. Weckl. suggests ὄντων σοι γεγηθέναι πάρα. 770. πλὴν . . . λυθείς: M, πρὶν . . . λυθῶ rec. Pauw, Brunck, Blomf., Dind., Elms., Fritzsche, and Wieseler all have different readings. 782. τούτοις: Weckl., Weil, τούτων Mss., Blomf., Dind., S.-W. — λόγος: Elms., Dind., S.-W., λόγους Mss., λόγων Weckl., ἔπος Heimsoeth. 790. ἠπείροις: Herwerden, Weckl., ἠπείρων Mss., Blomf., Dind., S.-W. — The verb of the leading clause is wanting. Probably some verses have fallen out after 791. 793. Κισθίνης: Mss., κινήτης H. Voss (cp. Hdt. 4. 49 ὀνομαζομένους Κύνητας), Κυρήνης Völcker (Myth. Geogr.). 795. Tucker writes ἰσχνόμορφοι. Schütz says, "De canitie Stanleius interpretatur κυκνόμορφοι nec ipse reperio quod melius sit." 796. μονόδοντες: rec., μονώδοντες M.

800. ἕξει πνοάς: cp. Iocasta, Act 2, "Who of selfe wold faine have lost his breth" (= die). 801. Jebb reads τοιοῦτον οἶν σοι. But τοιοῦτο was used metri gratia by the tragic poets. See Meisterhans 122. 803. ἀκραγεῖς: Mss., ἀκλαγγεῖς Dind., ἀκραγοῦς Wieseler. The objection to the Mss. reading that dogs do not cry (κράζειν) is not a valid one. The epithet is used in the sense of ὀξύχολος, ἀκρόχολος. So Hesych., Bekk. Anecd. 369. 17. 817. ἐπανδίπλαζε: Dind., ἐπαναδίπλαζε Mss. 822. ἦνπερ: Herm., ἦντιν' Mss. 829. γῆς πέδα: Weil (cp. schol. on Sept. 304), γάπεδα Porson, δάπεδα Mss., λάπεδα Meineke. 830. Lincoln, in 1832, declared that the ruins of Dramisus were the ruins of Dodona. See Journ. of Hellenic Studies, II, 229. 831. θᾶκος: Brunck, θῶκος Mss. 837. Kiehl considers the verse an interpolation. Dind. thinks that it is a conflatus of two verses. The Mss. reading really presents no difficulty. See note. 840. κεκλήσεται: rec., κληθήσεται M. See PAPA 33 (1902), p. xl, and University of Cincinnati Bulletin, Series II, No. 15. 858. θηρεύοντες: rec., Dind., Weckl., θηρεύσοντες Blomf., S.-W. 860. δέξεται: Mss., δέρξεται Pauw, κλάγξεται Hart. Weckl. proposes δ' αἰμάξεται. See note. 861. δαμέντων: M, δαμέντα rec., δαμέντας Pauw, δαμάρτων W. Hoffmann, δαμεισῶν Ludwig. 863. For the interpretation in the notes, cp. the Old Eng. Play. Iocasta, 3. 3, "bathe this blade within my brother's breast." 872. κλεινός: rec., κλεινοῖς M. Weckl. remarks "οὐδὲν ὑπάρχει οὔσι-αστικὸν τοῦ θρασὺς καὶ κλεινός," and changes κλεινοῖς to κλεινός ἴνις, assuming that κλεινοῖς originated from κλεινος and that ἐκ τῶνδε was inserted after πόνων. But his objections to the Mss. reading are not valid. See note. 875. λόγου: M, χρόνου recc., Dind., Weil. 878. φρενοπλήγες: Cobet. Weckl., S.-W., φρενοπληγείς Mss., Weil, Dind., L. & S. 885. πταίουσ': M, schol., Bothe, Weckl. (now), S.-W.. παίουσ' recc., Blomf., Dind. 887. For the whole passage, cp. Soph. Ant. 586 ff. and the Old Eng. Play, Iocasta, 3, 2, "But Pollinice, that turned his rolling eyen | Unto his mother and his sister deare, | With hollow voyce and fumbling tounge thus spake." 895 f. Hart. omits the second μήποτε. Fritzsche reads μήποτε κάμ' ὦ, Bothe μ. μ. ὦ Μοῖραι. Blomf. proposes μ. δ' ὦ μοῖραι, με σύγκοιτον. Schneider and Morell repeat Μοῖραι. Weil reads μήποτέ τοι μ'. Herm. suggests μακραιώνες after Μοῖραι, Schömann διανταῖαι. Paley, Winckelmann, and Weckl. read πότιμι Μοῖραι, S.-W. τελεσφόροι M. 896. γαμέτα: Canter, ἐν γαμετῷ M, γαμέτα μ'. 899. ἀμαλαπτομέναν: Dind. (accepting Weil's emendation, but rejecting the preceding γ'), Weckl., γάμω διαπτομέναν M, μέγα δ. Schütz, S.-W., γαμοδιαπτομέναν Bothe, Ἰοῖ, σέ γε δ. Morell, χροά δ. Brunck, γάμον ἀπτομέναν Reisig, γάμω ἀμαλαπτομέναν Schneider and Winckelmann. The schol. says, ἅμα τῷ γάμω· λείπει γὰρ τὸ ἅμα.

900. δ' ὅτι μὲν ὀμαλὸς ὁ γάμος | ἄφοβος οὐ δέδια: M, δέ γ' ὅτε Herm., δ' ἄρ' ὅτι Minckwitz. Schömann and most editors omit οὐ δέδια. Nearly all editors have different readings. 903 f. προσδράκοι: Salvini, προσδάρκοι M, προσδέρκοι recc., schol. Theocr. 15. 94. προσδέρκοιτό με Turn., ποτιδράκοι με Enger. 910. δ': Turn., τ' Mss. 934. τοῦδ' ἔτ': Elms., τοῦ δέ γ' Mss. 938. Ὀν μηδέιν see note and cp. Gautier, A Un Jeune Tribun "Entre la fleur qui s'ouvre et le cerveau qui pense, | Entre néant et rien quelle est la différence?" 948. πρὸς ὦν: Elms., πρὸς . . . τ' M, πρὸς ὦν τ' m. recc., πρὸς ὦν γ' rec., πρὸς οὐ τ' Dind. 965. The change made by S.-W. is unnecessary. See note. — καθώρμισας: recc., καθωροσασ (ο made from ι or ω) M, κατούρισας Herm., καθώρισας S.-W. Weckl. suggests καθήρμισας. 968 f. Given to Prom. in Mss. Jacobs believes they are interpolated. Kiehl excises 970. Ribbeck 968-970. The difficulty is due to a misinterpretation of the reply of Prometheus to Hermes. See note and cp. Soph. Ai. 1081 ὅπου δ' ὑβρίζειν δρᾶν θ' ἂ βούλεται παρῆ, Eur. Suφφλ. 575 ὅσοι γ' ὑβρισταί· χρηστὰ δ' οὐ κολάζομεν, 235 ὁ δ' ὡς ὑβρίξῃ δύναμιν εἰς χεῖρας λαβών, 512, Phoen. 620 ὅδε γὰρ εἰς ὑμᾶς ὑβρίζει, to which Eteocles replies καὶ γὰρ ἀνθυβρίζομαι. Plato. Protag. 352 Ε ποιεῖν τοὺς ποιούντας. — φῦναι:

recc., φῆναι M. 974. συμφοραῖς: Mss., συμφορᾶς rec., Valck. (on Eur. Phoen. 632). Radermacher (observ. in Eur. misc., p. 12) writes ξυμφορᾶς: "si ante caesuram penthemimerem vocabulum unius syllabae ambitu inseritur, id longum esse solet, numquam tamen saepius quam brevi monosyllabo praecedente." See note on 1088. 977. μικρὰν: Brunck, μικρὰν Mss. 980. Ἵρμιοι interrogatively, considering the first exclamation (that of Prom.) as extra metrum. Elms. reads οἴμιοι, Ludwig substitutes ὄρῆς. 986. ὡς παῖδ' ὄντα με: recc., ὡς παιδία με M., ὥστε παιδία με Herm., S.-W. 987. κάτι: Valck., καὶ ἔτι M., καί τι Wakefield. 992. αἰθαλοῦσσα: Canter, αἰθάλουσα Mss. 995. γνάμψει: M., recc., γνάψει M. Weil. — φράσαι: recc., φράσειν M.

1007. καὶ μάτην ἐρεῖν: M., ἀλλ' ἐρεῖν μάτην m., κάλλ' ἐρεῖν μάτην Weckl., πολλ' ἔπη μάτην Hart. Cp. Hdt. 2. 3 ἄλλα τε μάταια πολλὰ καὶ. The scholiast here remarks: γρ. ἀλλ' ἐρεῖν μάτην. See note and compare Eur. Ion 275 ἀληθὲς, ἧ μάτην λόγος; 1008 f. Most editors follow Porson in substituting κέρ for λίταις, and transferring the latter to the next verse. The reading I have adopted is that of M. κέρ is an interpolation (379). On the position of ἐμαῖς cp. Ag. 1225 τῷ μολόντι δεσπότῃ | ἐμῷ. 1013. μείζον: Mss., μείον Stanley. So many editors. But then we should read μηδενὸς μείον, or rather μείον ἢ μηδέν, which, indeed, Nauck adopts. 1024. Kausche (Mythologumena Aeschylea, p. 203) interprets δαιταλεὺς πανήμερος as convinca sempiternus. 1025. ἐκθoinάσεται: Nauck, ἐκθoinήσεται Mss. Cp. Eur. Cycl. 377 τεθoinάται. 550 θoinάσομαι. El. 836 θoinασόμεθα. 1031. λίαν εἰρημένος: recc., λείαν εἰριμμένος M., ἐτήτυμος Hart., Headlam, ἐρρωμένος Wieseler, κυρουμένος Stadt Müller, ἐκ καρδίας εἰρημένος F. W. Schmidt. Weckl. first read εἰμαρμένος, later ὀρθονμένος, but now εἰρημένος. H. Richards (Classical Rev. Nov. 1902) proposes ὀρισμένος. See note. 1039. πιθοῦ: recc., πείθον M. Schütz excises ἄνωγε . . . πιθοῦ. Herm. and Bernhardy (Griech. Litt. 2. 2. 271^b) agree with him. But such observations of the coryphaeus in this play usually occupy four verses. 1041 f. Conradt excises πάσχειν . . . ἀεικέες. But in that case πρὸς ταῦτα (1074) would be otiose. 1049. τῶν: Weil, Weckl., τῶν τ' Mss. 1057. ἢ τοῦδ' εὐχή: Koehly (Akad. Vorträge und Reden 1. 404), Weil, Madv. (Adv. crit. 193). αὔχη Weckl. (now), ἢ τοῦδ' εὐτυχῆ M., εἰ τὰδ' εὐτυχῆ (or εὐτυχεῖ) recc., εἰ δὲ τὰδ' ἀτυχεῖ Brunck. τᾶδ' Bothe. εἰ δ' εὐ τὰδ' ἔχει Butler. εἰ μὴδ' ἀτυχῶν τι Porson. εἰ τὰδ' ἔτ' αὔχεῖ Jacobs. εἰ τῆδε τύχη τι Wellauer. εἰ τοῦδε τύχη Haupt. ἔτι δὲ ψυχῆ τι Reisig.

ἡ τοῦδε τύχη; τί Dind., εἰ τὰδ', ἐν εὐχῇ· τι Minckwitz, etc. (more than a score). εὐτυχῇ seems to be a conflat of εὐχή and τύχη (like ναυτιλόχων 484). 1058. γ' αἰ: Turn., γε MSS. 1071. ἀγὼ: Porson. ἀτ' ἐγὼ MSS. 1077. κούκ: Turn., καὶ οὐκ MSS. 1085. εἰλίσσουσι: Turn., ἐλίσσουσι MSS. So 1092. 1087. ἀντίπνουν: MSS., ἀντίπνοον Dind. (who excises ἀποδεικνύμενα). Hart. writes παραδεικνύμενα. Weil στασιαζόμενα, or διεριζόμενα. Fritzsche proposes ἀντιπνοήν τ'.
