After Dinner

Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much the higher consideration. Capital has its rights, which are as worthy of protection as any other rights. Nor is it denied that there is, and probable always will be, a relation between labor and capital, producing mutual benefits.

—Abraham Lincoln.

Our people are fast approaching the point where it can be said that seven-eighths of them are trying to find out how to live at the expense of the other eighth.

I have found that when one is embarrassed, usually the shortest way to get through with it is to quit talking or thinking about it, and go at something else.

Abraham Lincoln

Born in Hardin County, Kentucky, February 12, 1809.

Died at Washington, D. C., April 15, 1865.

He was descended from a quaker family of English origin, residing in the middle of the eighteenth century, in Berkshire County, Pennsylvania. His grandfather emigrated from Virginia to Kentucky about 1780.

His father, Thomas Lincoln, settled with his family in Indiana in 1816, and in Illinois in 1830. His mother was Nancy Hanks.

He left his father's house soon after settling in Illinois, and after following many occupations, he was admitted to the bar in 1836, and began the practice of law at Springfield in 1837.

He served first as Captain, and afterward as a private in the Black Hawk War, in 1832.

Was a member of the Illinois State Legislature, 1834-42. A member of Congress from Illinois, 1847-49.

In 1858, as Republican candidate for United States Senator, he held a series of joint discussions throughout Illinois, in which he took a pronounced stand against the institution of slavery. These debates attracted the attention of the country, and in 1860 he was nominated as a candidate for President by the Republican party.

He received 180 electoral votes, and was inaugurated March 4, 1861. He was the sixteenth President. His election was the signal for the secession of the Slave States of the South and for the reorganization of the Confederate States. Hostilities began with an attack by the Secessionists of South Carolina on the Federal troops at Fort Sumter, April 12, 1861. On the 15th a call was issued by him for 75,000 volunteers.

He proclaimed a blockade of the southern ports, April 19, 1861.

On September 22, 1862, issued a proclamation emancipating all slaves in States which should be in rebellion on January 1, 1863.

He was re-elected President by the Republican party in 1864, receiving 212 electoral votes. He began his second term of office March 4, 1865.

He entered Richmond with the Federal army, April 4, 1865.

He was occupied with plans for the reconstruction of the South when he was shot by John Wilkes Booth, at Ford's Theatre, Washington, April 14, 1865, and died on the following day at 7:22 A. M.
