THE UNDERGRADUATE'S FIRST DAY AT OXFORD

By C.A. Strauss

To-day the freshmen¹ come to Oxford, their *cheeks holding tongues² that would like to prophesy three years of whoopee,³ the time of their lives, and *the conquest of the world.⁴

The *apply for their rooms⁵ at the College lodge,⁶ where they last handed in their names *when up for exams.⁷

How foreboding!⁸ then! How benign⁹ and pleasant now! They are anxious to see what rooms they have for their first year. Is it on the *ground floor,¹⁰ where one's friends may conveniently¹¹ drop in¹² for a chat¹³ and a drink? Or on the top of a staircase? Waiting to receive and attend are the kindly

Also awaiting the freshman's attention are many impressive-looking communications¹⁷ from tradesmen, libraries, newsagents,¹⁸ barbers, and a myriad¹⁹ other folk who wish to "call his attention²⁰ to the particular goods²¹ or services they have to offer.

Unpacking,²² he arranges his "prints and photos,²³ while his scout offers a "second-hand gown²⁴ for sale. "The more ragged it is (disguising his freshness), the more valuable.²⁵

Dinner in hall is the first big event. There the dons²⁶ dine at high table, and except when scholars sit together, the freshmen must all keep to the lower end, where the God of Shyness has surely visited them. Some express it by a kind of defiance,²⁷ laughing and throwing bread about boister-at the same school clan together²⁸ for protection, like a tribe in new territory.

Others find a conversationalist²⁹ near by and disguise their embarrassment³⁰ by clever talk. Then there are the few who sit silent and confused,³¹ listening to the buzz³² and staring at the lights.

After coffee the freshers³³ gather in little groups to chat and smoke round the fire. Soon the college representatives³⁴ come round, suave³⁵ and flattering,³⁶ or full of beer and friendliness, to canvass³⁷ for rowing, rugger,³⁸ athletics, clubs, political or otherwise,³⁹ and debating societies. The subscription⁴⁰ is small, the reward⁴¹ great. What is he to play? Which of the French, Spanish, German, and Hindustani⁴² societies is he to join? A little of each, or avoid the lot and stick to books?

A SHEET OF NEWSPAPER

"I don't know where all this paper comes from," said mother one day as she was "tidying up" the kitchen.

"You may not believe it," said Father, "but the newspaper I am reading was made along with others, of course, from a tree."

"Really!" I exclaimed.

"Yes," he replied. "We make furniture,² as you know, from the trees that give us hard wood, but millions of soft-wood trees are grown for the paper-makers. In

A "commercial traveller"¹ visiting Sheffield², became friendly with a "clerk in his hotel,"³ and the two frequently regaled each other with jokes and riddles.⁴ One day the clerk called the traveller over and said: "Here's a good riddle for you. My father and mother had a child, but it wasn't my brother and it wasn't my sister. Who was it?"

"I don't know. Who was it?" asked the traveller.

"It was me."

The traveller was much amused, and upon his return home he tried the joke on one of his friends.

"Look here,"⁵ he said, "I heard a jolly good riddle in Yorkshire. I'll tell it to you. My mother and father had a child, and it wasn't my brother and it wasn't my sister. Who was it? Give it up."

"Yes, I give it up."

"Ha! Ha! It was the bally old⁶ hotel-clerk in Sheffield."

The small boy had to be bribed to take his twice-daily dose of cod liver oil.⁷ A penny was put in a money-box each time he took it.⁸

When the bottle⁹ was finished his father solemnly¹⁰ opened the saving-box¹¹ and counted the contents.¹²

"One-and-tenpence,"¹³ he said. "Ah, just the price of another bottle of cod liver oil."¹⁴

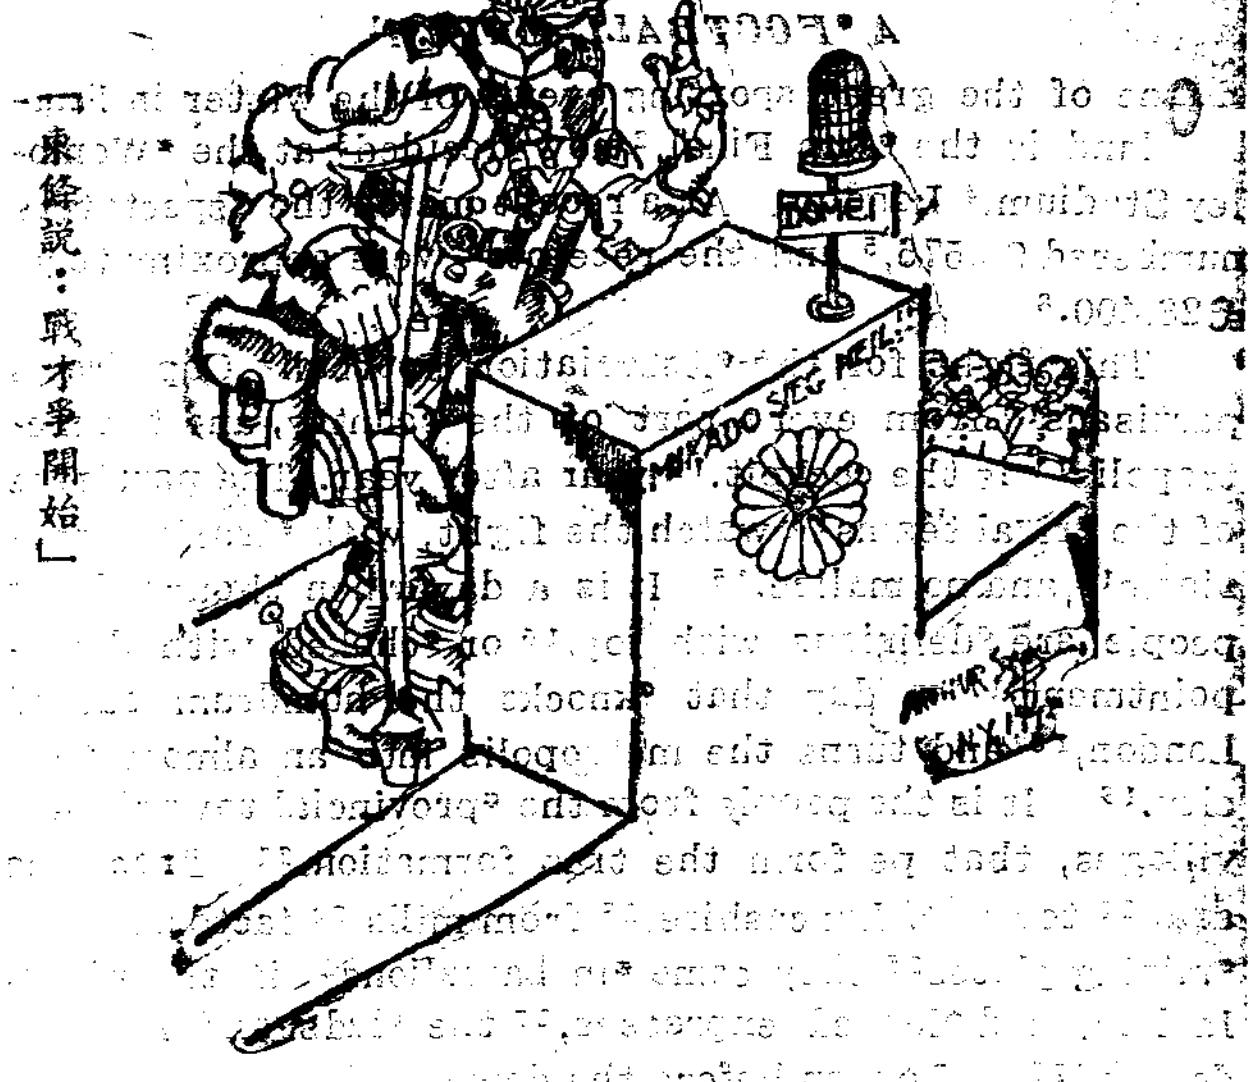

"Haven't you ever met a girl you cared for?"¹⁵

"Only recently, it was love at first sight."¹⁶

"Why don't you marry her?"¹⁷

"I took a second look."¹⁸

A FOOTBALL MATCH

One of the great sporting events of the winter in England is the *Cup Final,² now decided³ at the *Wembley Stadium,⁴ London. At a recent match the spectators numbered 92,576,⁵ and the receipts⁶ were approximately⁷ £23,400.⁸

This fight for the *Association Football⁹ Cup draws partisans¹⁰ from every part of the country, and the metropolis¹¹ is the cockpit,¹² year after year. The partisans of the *rival teams¹³ watch the fight, with *frank enthusiasm¹⁴ and no malice.¹⁵ It is a day when thousands of people are *delirious with joy,¹⁶ or *choked with disappointment;¹⁷ a day that *knocks the humdrum out of London,¹⁸ and turns the metropolis into an almost *gay city.¹⁹ It is the people from the *provincial towns²⁰ and villages, that perform the transformation.²¹ From the drab²² towns of Lancashire,²³ from mills,²⁴ factories, and *mining places²⁵ they come *in battalions²⁶ in the night. In long and *loaded expresses,²⁷ the *lads and lasses²⁸ descend²⁹ on London before the dawn.

A comforting spring sun shines warmly, on tier upon tier of packed and palpitating humanity.³⁰ The smoke of ten thousand pipes and cigarettes goes lazily up and up, into the balmy³¹ air.³² The arena³³ itself is not *virgin green³⁴ it is true, but green enough to show up in vivid contrast³⁵ the *starlet uniforms³⁶ of the *magnificent band of the Irish Guards.³⁷ Through the long hours of waiting the crowd sings lustily.³⁸ From "Tipperary,"³⁹ they

NEW AND VIEWS

1. *Pope Expresses Admiration For President Chiang¹.

In an audience² granted to Mr. Hsieh Shou-kang,³ Chinese Minister to the Vatican, on October 30, the Pope expressed great admiration for the leadership of President Chiang Kai-shek in China's war of resistance.⁴

President Chiang, the Pope was quoted to have said, is not only "the saviour of China" but also one of the great leaders of the world.

The supreme Pontiff also expressed gratification with the policy of the Chinese Government toward Catholics in China and the cordial relations existing between China and the Vatican.

2. Germans Know They Are Beaten⁵.

Press correspondents who greeted the first batch of British prisoners-of-war repatriated from Germany unanimously report that the most important news brought back is that the Germans know they are beaten.⁶ Scarcely less important are their stories of industrial difficulties in Germany and the daily increase in the privations which the people are suffering.

3. Germany Lags In Blood Transfusion Technique

Germany is at least a year behind Britain in blood transfusion methods, writes a reporter of the London Star after interviewing a member of the British Medical Research Council.⁷

As late as the Libyan campaign⁸ the Germans were relying on whole blood, and only quite recently did they begin to use dry blood. In the first half of 1939 that Britain first made use of dried human blood.⁹ A year later the Medical Research Council, working with the Ministry of Health's Regional Transfusion Service and the Army Blood Transfusion Service, set up drying plants.¹⁰ By 1942, 26,000 bottles of dried blood were prepared by the Council's plant alone and today the output has risen to 3,500 bottles a week.

4. British Farmers'

Success In A Tremendous Job

Three representatives of American farmers, who, as guests of the British Government, made a tour of English farming counties to get first-hand information on Britain's agricultural war effort, have issued a statement in which they declare that on their return to America they will urge U.S. farm organizations to confer with the National Farmers Union in England and Wales and with other farm organizations with the purpose of convening an international conference.¹

The three farmers say that the object of this conference would be to draw immediate attention to agricultural policy both during and after the war. They add that the farmers of Britain have done a "tremendous job in taking land in the condition it was at the beginning of the war and bringing it up to its present state of productivity."

Both Britain and America, they concluded, owed a deep debt of gratitude to British farmers and farm workers.²
