EXHIBITION NOTES.

Entries Close in a Few Days—Collection From Albert—Repairs Necessary.

The regular weekly meeting of the general management committee of the B. C. Agricultural and Mining Association will be held as usual on Wednesday evening next.

The secretary wishes it understood that only a few more days remain in which entries can be received. In connection with the entries of horses it might be noted that geldings may be entered with fillies of the same age. On the prize list where the word "fillies" appears it should read "fillies or geldings."

A communication has been received from Col. Hayes informing the promoters that he will do all he can to assist the exhibition. He leaves for Albert to-night, and will gather together a collection of minerals from all the mines in the district, which will be sent down on the next steamer.

Out at the exhibition grounds exhibitors are at work getting their stands in position, and other arrangements are being prosecuted with dispatch.

The secretary has taken the initiative, and engaged a man to remove the stumps on the road to the exhibition grounds, and to drive in the nails which have been obtruding divers lengths from the sidewalk. He grew weary waiting for the government to undertake this work.

The bridge over the ravine on the road also requires further repairing. The spaces between the tramer ties should be boarded in or someone may fall through in the night. A guard railing should also be erected on the right side of the bridge going out. The fall would not be very far, but it would be eminently disagreeable, as the contents of the slough are neither inviting nor exhilarating.

THE GRAIN CROPS.

Semi-Official Reports Regarding Conditions in European Russia.

(Associated Press.)

St. Petersburg, Sept. 20.—The Journal of Commerce and Industry to-day semi-officially reports the following regarding the grain crops of European Russia:

The winter grain is quite satisfactory in the southwest, where there was sufficient rain in the summer. In the North Caucasus region and a portion of the western provinces it is about the average. It is not quite satisfactory in the southeast, that is beyond the Volga and near the Azof sea.

It is said to be very bad in Volga valley and the provinces adjoining, Russian Poland and many districts of the Baltic provinces. In the other provinces it is about as usual with local exceptions.

The summer grain is everywhere poorer than in the winter grain. It is better in the southwest than elsewhere, the entire harvest there being above the average. It is unsatisfactory and for the most part bad in the Ural provinces and the Volga valley, but bad in the west and portions of the Baltic provinces.

Winchester, England, Sept. 20.—In the presence of a vast concourse of Anglo-Saxon delegates and officials, Lord Rosebery to-day unveiled the great statue of King Alfred. During the course of his eulogy of the Saxon King, the former Premier said: "King Alfred wrought immortals work for us and our sister nation over the sea, while in supreme moments of joy and sorrow, is irresistibly joined to us across the countries and across the sea."

THE ROYAL VISITORS ARRIVE AT OTTAWA

ENTHUSIASTIC WELCOME TO FEDERAL CAPITAL

Many Addresses Were Presented But Only One Read—The City Elaborately Decorated.

(Associated Press.)

Montreal, Sept. 20.—Montrealers again were out in thousands this morning, and lined the streets from Lord Strathcona's residence on Dorchester street to the Canadian Pacific railway station, Windsor, to bid farewell to their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York. Detachments of the Duke of Connaught's Hussars, 2nd Royal Canadian regiment, 5th Royal Scots, Highland Cadets and 65th regiments escorted the Royal party to the station.

The party left almost on schedule time (9 o'clock) for Ottawa.

Prior to boarding the train His Royal Highness personally shook hands with Lord Strathcona, Mayor Prefontaine and members of the reception committee, thanking them for the many courtesies extended to him and the Duchess.

Arrival at Ottawa, (Special to the Times.)

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—The Royal party arrived in Ottawa a few minutes before noon to-day. Their reception was most enthusiastic. They arrived over the Canada Atlantic and detained at Elgin street station, thus permitting of a long drive through the city to the parliament grounds, where the general welcome was extended.

The route was over a mile long, so thousands had an opportunity of seeing the Duke and Duchess. All trains coming to the city yesterday and this morning were packed with excursionists.

As the Royal train rolled into the station a Royal salute was fired by the Ottawa Field Battery, a short distance from the station. The Governor-General, who came from Montreal yesterday, went to the station half an hour before the arrival of the Duke. He was accompanied by an escort from the Royal Canadian Dragoons, who have been here for a week, and who will furnish the necessary escorts on ordinary occasions. As the Governor-General arrived a salute of 19 guns was fired by the field battery.

The Duke was welcomed at the station by the Governor-General, the militia headquarters staff and a small committee, representing the citizens and the city council. The Royal party boarded their own coach and, accompanied by an escort from the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, proceeded to Parliament hill.

There, on a pavilion erected for the occasion, the Royal party were welcomed by cabinet ministers and prominent citizens. A civic address of welcome was read by Mayor Morris, who was arrayed in cocked hat, silk breeches and a crimson robe for the occasion. A score of addresses were presented to the Duke, but only the Ottawa address was read.

The decorations at the parliament buildings, grounds, and city generally were very elaborate.

Over three thousand school children sang "God Save the King" when the Duke and Duchess arrived on Parliament square. The Mayor of Ottawa led the way to receive the party, followed by Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, and all the cabinet ministers, except Dr. Borden and Hon. L. J. T. The party prevented from being present on account of injuries from an accident on the steamer Frontenac at Quebec.

The Duke, in replying to the address, referred to the expressions of loyalty which it contained, touched on the visit to which the King, his father, paid to Ottawa when he laid the corner stone of the parliament buildings in 1869, of the bringing about the confederation and the general progress made by Canada since that time. The mutual toleration shown by both races had helped materially to bring about these good results. At the time in the history of the British Empire were the ties of union more closely welded together than at present.

Those who have been favored with honors will receive the same at Government House to-morrow.

An Address From Brockville.

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 20.—The town council has decided to send a deputation of six to Ottawa, and present an address from the town of Brockville to the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York.

Sir Thomas Congratulated.

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The general public has received the news of the elevation of Mr. Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., to knighthood with satisfaction. It was expected that such an honor would be conferred in connection with the visit of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York.

Sir Thomas said to-day that he did not regard the compliment as paid to himself so much as to work done. It was a delicate matter to speak about, and he really would not care to say anything further than that he was sure it was the work rather than the individual. Being reminded that it was the individual who had inspired the work and carried it out, Sir Thomas modestly declined all merit in this regard.

Sir Thomas has been the recipient of congratulations from many quarters. It was felt that he has been paid a fitting compliment as head of a great system which is, perhaps, best managed on this continent, and to efficiency of which he has contributed a remarkable energy, presence and administrative ability.

STEEL WORKERS ARE RETURNING TO WORK

ADDITIONAL PLANTS TO START UP ON MONDAY

Tin Workers Object to Resume Unless Union is Recognized—Trying to Settle the Trouble.

(Associated Press.)

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 20.—With few exceptions work was resumed at least in a measure at the combine steel mills to-day, and if the disgruntled tin workers can be conciliated by next Monday all the plants will be in full operation.

Preparations were made to-day for starting on Monday of the Newcastle plant of the National Steel Co., employing 20,000 men, as well as the Wood Sheets plant at McKeesport, employing 1,000.

Among the tin workers the feeling against returning to work, unless the union shall have been recognized, is still strong, but influence is at work which it is hoped will induce the strikers to reconsider their heated determination before any rash move shall have been made.

The Amalgamated Journal, commenting upon the New York settlement, says: "The causes that led up to this unsatisfactory settlement were the overwhelming odds that the association had to battle against, the daily press, public opinion, the advice of prominent labor leaders, and the withdrawal of credit by merchants."

CABINET MEETING.

President Roosevelt and Ministers Have Returned to Washington.

(Associated Press.)

Washington, Sept. 20.—The presidential train arrived at the Pennsylvania railroad station at 9:25 a.m. President Roosevelt immediately entered a carriage and was driven to the residence of Commander Cowles. All the members of the cabinet who went to Canton returned with him.

After a suspension of three days as a mark of respect for the death of President McKinley, the business of the government at Washington was resumed at 9 a.m. to-day.

At 11 o'clock all the members of the cabinet had arrived at the White House. Nearly all of them are quite sure to remain during Mr. Roosevelt's term, but it is probable that Secretary Long will retire to private life within the next few months.

(Associated Press.)

Compagne, Sept. 20.—The Czar is spending to-day in comparative repose after a couple of a very fatiguing days. He has spent the morning in his apartments without signifying what he intended to do until lunch time. Even President Loubet was kept in suspense. The latter part of the morning was devoted to an exchange of visits with various personages.

The weather brightened in the afternoon and crowds of people invaded Compagne from Paris and the neighboring towns in the hope of obtaining a glimpse of the Czar, but they were disappointed. The streets are still decorated and will be illuminated this evening.

BATHING NOW A LOST ART.

A Relic in London of the Ancient Roman Frigidarium.

That the art of bathing, like the forging of Damascus steel and the making of Tyrian purple, has been lost for many centuries is a perfectly well known fact, says a writer in the London Telegraph. Of course, there are baths and bathhouses, but such modern luxuries as Turkish baths are perhaps more patronized in this twentieth century than ever there were. But the days in which bathing was a real art, a study in the elaboration and perfecting of which more time was spent than in the beautifying of temples and the offices of religion, probably never to return. Why, a whole vocabulary came into being merely for the convenience of Latin bathers in conversation with their friends. And this, too, I imagined, had gone away forever into the past, but judge of my surprise when passing down the Strand the other morning I was asked by a friend if I intended to visit the frigidarium that day.

I confessed I had no knowledge of any such luxury, so my companion led me away to enlighten my ignorance. We went down a narrow court, known as Strand Lane, opposite the Church of St. Mary le Strand, and there, sure enough, was the genuine Roman bath—a cold water plunge bath—driving back to the days when London was a Roman camp, and Watling street was the high road to York and Newcastle.

No balneator, or keeper of the baths, met us at the door, nor inside did we see any proconsuls of centuries sporting in the waters; but nevertheless I, at any rate, felt transported back to those days of old, when London was but a name. There was the spoliatorium, or dressing-room, with its little recess, which might be used as a tonstrina, or shaving apartment; another corner which partitioned off would make a very good uncturium, or anointing chamber, and finally through the arched doorway was the vaulted frigidarium. And the place is not a museum—not a mere relic of a distant age, but a bath used constantly to-day as it was when Plautius ruled the Roman province of Britain.

The bath is supplied from a perpetual spring, which discharges at the rate of 20,000 gallons per diem, and no doubt the neighboring Holywell street owes its name to this spring.

Within the last twenty years "metropolitan improvements" have obliterated four cold baths—Peerless Pool, City Road, the old bath in Bath street, Newgate street, the Nell Gwynne Bath, in Cold Bath Fields, and the Essex Marble Baths, Strand Lane. None others have replaced them, and the above Roman bath is the only cold spring plunge-bath in London.

The Essex marble bath mentioned above joined the Roman bath and was fed from the same spring; it was built in 1588 in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by the Earl of Essex, whose house stood near the spot. The bath was demolished in 1833.

The present proprietor of the Roman bath is Mr. Henry Glave, of New Oxford street, by whose courtesy the public are admitted free on Saturday morning, between 11 and 12 o'clock, to see this most interesting of all Roman remains in England.

Readers of Dickens may remember that there is an allusion to this bath in "David Copperfield."

CURED OF CHRONIC DIARRHOEA AFTER THIRTY YEARS OF SUFFERING.

"I have suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Halloway, of French Camp, Mass. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, could not even travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and after taking several bottles I am entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer as I have." For sale by Henderson Bros., Wholesale Agents.

TRIBUTES TO THE DEAD PRESIDENT

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE IN VICTORIA THEATRE

An Immense Assemblage in Attendance—Masterly Address By Rev. Elliott S. Rowe.

Never has there been such an assemblage in the Victoria theatre as that which attended the memorial service yesterday afternoon. Long before 3 o'clock the hour set for the commencement, all the seats and nooks of vantage were occupied. Gallery, dress circle and pit were crowded, and even the lobbies and entrances held large numbers. Hundreds were turned away.

Half an hour before the service commenced American citizens formed at the United States consulate and marched in a body to the theatre. Even at this time a multitude had gathered around the entrance, eagerly striving to gain access to the place.

Mourful dramas of history have often been perpetuated on the stage of the Victoria theatre. Sombre tragedy has many times impressed those with predilection toward such profound diversions, but the gloom was only temporary, and was always dispelled by the consoling knowledge, that after all it was only a play.

But yesterday's service brought poignantly home to each individual a realization of perhaps the most sorrowful tragedy of the generation, and the loss of a great and good man. The sable drapings around the boxes, arch, orchestra and railings, the sacred strains of the organ and the air of solemnity which pervaded the whole place, were commensurate with the mournful sentiment prevailing and profoundly impressive.

Simply and genuinly marked the proceedings from commencement to conclusion. Ostentation and superficial blazon of sorrow were fittingly absent and Canadians, Britons, Americans and representatives of other nationalities were welded together in sympathetic unanimity in the bonds of one common sorrow.

In the masterly panegyric delivered by Rev. Elliott S. Rowe the crowning feature was the glowing tribute which one man paid to another whose life appeared irresistibly to his admiration and respect. It was noticeable, however, that throughout the entire afternoon no specific allusion was made to the wretch who was responsible for it all, the execrated assassin, as it was tacitly felt that even the mention of his name would mar the majestic dignity of the service.

On the stage, which was surmounted by the British and American flags, were the leading men of the city, including representatives of commerce, state and the united service. United States Consul Hon. A. E. Smith presided, and in the right hand box was Admiral Bickford and staff, and in the left, Lieut. Governor Sir Henri Joly and Lady Joly. Among those invited to seats on the platform were: R. Hall, M. P.; A. E. McPhillips, M. P.; H. D. Helmecken, M. P.; J. S. Hinchken, M. D.; H. J. Hoop, J. S. Daumier, M. P.; Hon. J. D. Prentice, M. P.; Hon. D. M. Eberts, M. P.; P. J. Mayor Hayward, Ald. Beckwith, Ald. Hall, Senator McDonald, Senator Templeman, Col. Holmes and staff, Capt. Walbran, D. G. S. Quadra, Capt. Fleet, H. M. S. Phanton, A. R. Milne, J. H. Smith, Capt. Casement, H. M. C. Amphib, Ald. Cameron, Thos. Barry, M. P.; Col. E. G. Prior, M. P.; Father Atholoff, Father Nicolay, Col. Grant, Major Wynne, W. A. Ward, G. Lowenberg, A. J. W. Bridgman, G. A. Carleton, M. Lenz, the Bishop of Columbia, Bishop O'Rourke, Rev. W. H. Barrow, Rev. R. B. Hlyth, Rev. Dr. Campbell, Rev. Montague Cohen, Hon. J. H. Turner, Noah Shakespeare and many others.

The service was opened by prayer offered by Rev. Montague Cohen, which was as follows:

Lord God of the spirits of all flesh! To Thee, who dost direct the destinies of mortals, who dispense life and death, we come on this occasion of sad and solemn import. Thy will is perfect, for all His ways are judgment, a God of truth, in whom there is no iniquity; just and righteous is He, in whose hand is the soul of every living thing and the breath of every mortal man. The Lord kiltheth and maketh alive; He bringeth down to Sheol and bringeth up; He sendeth the souls and keepeth His faithfulnes to those who slumber in His dust. He ruleth in this world, and who is there who can say unto Him, "What dost Thou?" O Lord and King! Who sittest upon the throne of mercy and art full of compassion towards all flesh and spirit. We approach Thee in our tribulation. Our soul fainteth within us, and every eye is dimmed with tears. Cause to ascend before Thee the remembrance of William McKinley who has departed this world and has been gathered unto his people. His eye was not dim, nor was his natural force abated. In the midst of life was he cut off. We are distressed for his loss; our sorrow is too great for words and mental condolence. It is a sorrow deep, tender, and inexplicable, dwarfing for the time all our private and domestic troubles, however severe and heavy.

Yet, like all other sorrows, it brings us to God's loving will; it is the direct action of His loving will and we can neither explain it nor bear it without thankfully recognizing from whom it has come. And unless we bring our grief to Him, unless we bring our sorrow-laden hearts to His sanctuary, we shall never learn the lessons it was sent to teach. So, perhaps, after all, this is the fitting time and place to meditate together upon this irreparable loss, and in spite of emotions difficult to control and of thoughts distraught by grief, we may be somewhat comforted and consoled by the effort to think calmly, even hopefully, of our trouble, in the comforting presence of God. "The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Oh! What an immortal song of trust and love and praise. Thankfuly, oh Father in Heaven, do we take these words on our lips in this day of sorrow, and we will try to feel the glory and truth of them in our hearts. Thou, oh Lord, didst give William McKinley to the world to be a great blessing to the citizens of the mighty American Republic. Grace was poured upon his lips. He opened his mouth with wisdom, and the law of kindness was on his tongue. All his desire and the yearnings of his heart was to seek the welfare of his country in the cause of truth, meekness, righteousness, and purity of heart. Remember unto him for good the pious deeds which he performed, in that he walked before Thee with a perfect heart and an upright mind. And for all that this great man was, we have to render our thanks to Thee, for Thou didst give him to the world, and when Thou didst choose, Thou didst take him from us. So we feel consoled by the idea that Thou hast only taken him away, but that he will not be forgotten in our great grief. We must, however, be prepared for death beforehand by living always with a consciousness that nothing is really our own, that every treasure is Thy gift, oh Lord, for a purpose, and only for a time, and it is only by Thy will that we have it, and it is only by Thy will that it can ever be taken away. When the righteous die, 'tis earth that meets with loss. The jewel will ever be a jewel, but it has passed from the possession of its former owner. Well may the loser weep.

"Life is a passing shadow," say the Scriptures. The shadow of a tower or a tree; the shadow which prevails for a time; no; even as the shadow of a bird, and neither bird nor shadow remains. We mourn for those who are left, not for the one taken by Thee from earth. He has entered into eternal rest, while we are bowed down with sorrow and grief. William McKinley is taken from us, oh God, in Thy great mercy. Thou hast taken the givenly beloved sleep; Thou hast taken him away—taken him from the evil to come. Blessed be Thy great and holy name! May our sorrow lead us to think of Thee. May our sorrow cause us ever to remember our dead brother's ennobling qualities, his straightforwardness, his piety, his goodness and his godliness. We can raise up no better memorial to his great name than by following in his noble example, by doing good to all as he did good to all, by cheering on fellow-men as he did, by loving truth and virtue as he did. Help us, oh God, to do so. Aye, the whole Anglo-Saxon race to-day grieves for his loss. Within 12 months of each other the heads of two great nations were taken from the world, and they both did their great share in cementing the relations between the two countries and promoting good-will among men. We pray, oh Lord, that these relations will continue into the distant future, and that they will ever be the pioneers of freedom and tolerance. Both Americans and Britons are united to-day in the bonds of brotherhood and true friendship in mourning this great loss. From on high does William McKinley look down upon his devotees; our tears do not go unseen, our sorbs do not go unheard. We beseech Thee, oh Lord, to compensate his work and may a full reward be given him of Thee, under whose wings he has cast himself to rest. May his soul be bound up in the bond of life everlasting with the souls of all the righteous who have preceded him to their eternal rest. May he find the gates of heaven open, and angels of peace ready to receive him into the realm of bliss. Let his merits plead before Thee. May he abide under Thy shadow, and his rest be glorious in the Divine inheritance, there to dwell unto the end of time, when the dead shall live again and the deceased among My people rise up."

Source of all comfort! May Thy consolations soothe the heart of his devoted wife; may she find that comfort in Thee which she truly seeks and needs. Oh, "Flow on, beaker of life," broken-hearted and handied, as their wounds, heal also this breach. Thy healing balm into the hearts of all who mourn this irreparable loss. Hear the prayers of all assembled here in this place of meeting this day. Hear their voice; give ear unto their supplications, oh, Thou who hearest prayer. Amen.

Then followed the reading of the beautiful words of Newman's hymn "Lead Kindly Light," which was sung by the audience. Rt. Rev. Bishop Cridge read the psalm "Comfort Ye My People," and Rev. J. F. Viehert followed with the words of "Rock of Ages," the Bishop of Columbia following with the Lord's Prayer and portion of the Church of England burial service.

W. H. Barrow, clergyman, and officiating, which Rev. Elliott S. Rowe addressed the assemblage. His tribute to the dead President was a gem among the many noble efforts that have been uttered by him since his residence here. Rev. Mr. Rowe spoke as follows:

A few months ago four fatal words "The Queen is dead" sounded through the earth—the death of the Sovereign of earth's greatest Empire. And now, when the mournful notes have scarce died away, the peoples of the earth are startled into dead silence by the tidings of the death of the President of earth's greatest Republic. These two deaths are in the same family though not of the same household. The ties of kinship have never seemed so real as in these last tragic moments.

Reverendment of our ministers to reconciliation, and it may be—God grant it—that with our tears we are solving problems that would defy our diplomacy, and which in days free from sorrow might unheath the fratricidal sword. The Queen is dead, and the President is dead. To us of the Anglo-Saxon race, either by birth or political allegiance, these words carry intimation not only of national loss but also of personal bereavement. We know that the throne is never vacant; we know that the bullet that kills the President installs his successor. By our faith in the illustrious family from which our Sovereign comes, we know that the throne shall ever lack a worthy occupant; by our confidence in the wisdom of the sovereign people of the great Republic, we feel assured that all the qualifications requisite for the duties of the high office of President will always be found in their chief executive. We do not fear for our institutions. Our sorrow is not for a political cause, but for a private cause. We mourn not so much the loss of a Queen or a President as we mourn the passing of a woman and a man whose virtuous lives have commanded our admiration, and by whose kindness and love our hearts have been enslaved.

And were they not the choicest of our race? According to the superficial distinctions by which we classify society, they came of different grades; one was born to the purple, the other was the child of humble parents; but they were both of the aristocracy of Truth; they were both members of the family of Royal Humanism. One was great in that she made her Queenhood womanly, the other was great in that he made his manhood regal.

The measure of a man's capacity is fixed by the altitude to which he may be exalted without growing smaller to the sight; just as the bulk of an object fixes the highest point at which it may be visible, so do the mental and moral qualities of a man fix the eminence to which he may be elevated without suffering eclipse. A man counts for most in that position for which his equipment is best adapted. Some men are out of sight because of station; for lowly, some men become invisible because of station; for high, some men are greater than themselves, and by which they are overshadowed. The supreme, the final test of the man's character, is applied by promotion, and happy is he if he grows to meet the increasing demands of his progression, and like the extended office of President, that more exalted office of President, to which office since 1896 there has been added responsibilities which in themselves would be sufficient to tax the ability of the most competent man, in that office, which when he is installed, required of its incumbent to have the oversight of domestic affairs, to have the responsibility of an Empire having interests in every incident in the world's life, in that office he met its increasing demands; and the universal testimony is that he never was more master larger in the world's eye than he was upon the day on which he was elected.

One has said: "Blessed the man who last twang of whose bowstring is as sharp as any that went before, sending its arrow as surely to its mark." This benediction surely was William McKinley's. He never rose to higher sentiments, he never expressed himself with greater force than he did in that speech which he delivered the day before his assassination. It was a plea and prayer for peace and fraternity, a prayer for progress. The surroundings were inspiring. In his presence piled up about him were the embodiments of three continents of the strenuous life of a young and vigorous nation. These spoke to him in eloquent terms of the past, his trials and his triumphs, they spoke to him of the rugged pioneers who heaved the first clearing in the forests, explored the river, found paths over the mountains, the narrow, the steep, the rugged, the bones of the earth. In them he saw the reappearing of the thought, the toil, and the sacrifice of the generations which had preceded him and had made the trails which since had grown to be the highways of a nation's life. And they spoke to him, not in the atmosphere of expectancy, the atmosphere which issues from a vast, vigorous and aspiring life. He stood there, although he did not know it, at the parting of the ways. The path embodied before him in those impressive trophies of man's victory over the elements of the earth, the path of the intense life which was manifested in that great gathering. And this testimony as to the past, and this prophecy as to the future, mingled together, and made upon his soul a demand, one of the most imperative of his life, a demand for progress, and for the performance of the duties required of those convictions; rather than of his stubbornness of opinion or his pride of dogma. He was the religion that gloried and beatitudes the home life; the religion that held him true amid the temptations of public life; the religion that kept him during those twenty-five years in the gaze of the public, so that though he was the object of criticism, the almost unceasing criticism, he was the man of his country, yet after all the shafts that have been hurled at him, and all the abuse that has been heaped upon him, the world to-day believes that he passes out from among men without a stain.

If there were to be pictures of him to be preserved, what could be more fitting?

TRIED TWICE And Proved the Proposition

"I wish to give my experience with coffee for the benefit of other people. I used coffee for several years and was a veritable sufferer from dyspepsia. The doctor told me not to use coffee or tea and put me on a light diet, and I felt better. Then I commenced to drink coffee again and had the same trouble come on. One day I told a friend about it, who said if I would stop drinking coffee and use Postum I would feel better, and advised me to use Postum Food Coffee in its place. I tried the Postum but did not like it, so I told him about it and he said I didn't cook it right, that is, didn't hold it enough, and that I should use cream instead of milk, and to make sure I would use it, he sent a package to the house. I would have no more coffee in the house. Now I don't know what it is to have dyspepsia and I can eat anything. I also give Postum to my two children and they are the healthiest children you could find anywhere. The youngest is a boy 15 months for seven months, three times a day. He weighs 20 pounds, and I know that Postum is what keeps both of them so healthy. I think all people who have dyspepsia get it from coffee drinking. Yours truly, Mrs. Jno. Stinger, 29 S. Florida Ave., Atlantic City, N. J.

gets his inspiration only from his ancestor or from his contemporaries. He must have the prophet's vision, he must have the Godly man's faith, he must have the martyr's courage, and he must have the strong man's power to initiate and to carry through to successful conclusions.

I believe that history will rank William McKinley as amongst the great leaders of men; leaders whose goal was the enlargement and betterment of human life; leaders in whom self was regarded only as it might possibly be a force to exert an influence for good upon the nation; men of high ideals and unselfish motives, of clean methods. McKinley was among such men. He with Washington and Lincoln, were perhaps the three most conspicuous Presidents of the United States, conspicuous by their inherent qualities, and made conspicuous by the affecting influences of their lives. They served their nation at epochal times. The first attended it in its tender and weak infancy, the second, Lincoln, delivered it in its youth from the grasp of a blood-thirsty social evil, and McKinley, at the maturity of its strength led it out to the responsibilities and duties of such maturity.

It is a sad commentary upon the gratitude of humanity that two of these men fell by the hand of the assassin, just at the zenith of their power and usefulness, and when it seemed as if they least could be spared from the duties of their office. We must not, we cannot, explore the mysteries of Providence. But it will not be wrong for us if we hear in the report of the photo-study in Buffalo, the Anglo-Saxon races have too much ignored, but which must be taken account of. We cannot afford to breed wolves if we would protect our flocks. We cannot acknowledge the gospel of murder as among permissible social theories. And we cannot without guilt ever standing room to the forces of destruction, forces aimed at law and our institutions, forces menacing human life, whatever may be their embodiment, or who may be the victims of their energy.

We cannot read the secrets of the Almighty; we cannot know the end from the beginning; but we do know that human hate and all the forces of human life must at the last subscribe the Divine purpose. And may we not perhaps see in this, to us, untoward Providence—may we not see the evidence of the Father's gracious hand, that He has not withheld his tender mercy from this illustrious victim, as if he were too precious to be obliterated by retirement to private life, too precious to be submitted to the slow decay of time and the eclipse of the darkening shadow of death, to be forgotten, and so, in the noontide hour under the bright sunlight of noonday, in the vigor of his manhood; he is photographed and the picture framed with the martyr's halo by the assassin's hand will hang forever in the mid-heaven of the National consciousness, an inspiration and a warning.

William McKinley, as must follow from what has been said, was a religious man. He lived under the power of the life to come. You cannot account for him by a reference simply to the utilitarian aims of expediency in human life; you cannot go beyond the realm of earth's theories and ideals; you must enter into the spiritual realm; you must enter into that department where men are moved by influences invisible, where men are striving for ideals that do not move the mass of men. His life, shall I say, was a life of the spirit. He was the religion that gloried and beatitudes the home life; the religion that held him true amid the temptations of public life; the religion that kept him during those twenty-five years in the gaze of the public, so that though he was the object of criticism, the almost unceasing criticism, he was the man of his country, yet after all the shafts that have been hurled at him, and all the abuse that has been heaped upon him, the world to-day believes that he passes out from among men without a stain.

THE CONSULTANT'S VOICE WAS AT TIMES SADLY IMPAIRED BY EMOTION AS HE ADDRESSED THE AUDIENCE AS FOLLOWS: Lieutenant-Governor Sir Henri Joly, Admiral Bickford, Premier Dunsmuir, Mayor Hayward and the people of Victoria.

A sadly pleasant duty devolves upon me, to express our heartfelt appreciation and the deepest thanks for the services in which you have expressed yourselves at the death of our beloved President.

I thank you, Governor, for the kindly words which you authorized in the telegram which he lay on his sick bed and he flickered along for nearly a week for your words of sympathy and encouragement. I thank you from my heart. And I thank you, Admiral, representative of Great Britain's forces on the seas, for your kindly, heartfelt sympathy, expressed when the matter had done its work and our great man was no more.

I thank you, Mr. Premier, for the kind and touching phrases in which you voiced the sentiments of the people of British Columbia at that tragic event. I thank you, Mr. Mayor, for the words in which you expressed to our government in Washington the sentiments of the people of Victoria.

I thank you, Rev. Mr. Rowe, for your eloquent tribute to one numbered in the chief of the benefactors on every hand of the love, friendliness and sympathy you feel for us in this great calamity. As I have gone around this city and seen the half-masted flags, and the emblems of mourning on every hand, I have felt that I did not live in a strange country but among friends, in a land where blood is thicker than water, and where the great Anglo-Saxon heart beats in unison with our Republic in this our calamity.

I loved President William McKinley. For 20 years he has been my political leader, as he has been my model statesman. I have watched him at his home, I have seen him in the church, I have met him in the White House, I have observed him in the Capitol, and in every place he has proved himself worthy of the occasion—a noble, genuine, princely man. He was a man who linked to himself by bands of steel, with a love surpassing the love of woman, the mightiest men of our land. You have read in these later days, as you have read in the White House, of great, able, read in years gone by, of great, able, men, moneyed men, men of intellect, men of force, who have rendered obedience to William McKinley. And yet he had appointed in the political field who said he was not a man of force because he was a man of love. But I tell you, my friends, "the bravest are (Continued on page 6.)" what could be more characteristic, than the picture of the incident of that last address made at the Buffalo exposition. A crowd, fired by his eloquence, repeated brought him to his feet, he bowed his acknowledgements to the multitude, but he smiled his heartfelt pleasure into the eyes of his wife, who sat beside him. And when at last the crowd ceased, he elated at the reception he had had, sat and held his wife's hand and smiled out the pleasure of his great, simple, generous heart.

He is gone. The multitudes of the Republic to the South of us are gathered in solemn array. In the city of his life, by the simple church near his home, his body is being committed to the dust. We to-day of the Anglo-Saxon race, whether we are citizens of his republic or not, are citizens of his humanity. He is a product of our times, and of the culture of our homes. May God multiply the number of such, and may He in His mercy bring to the consolation of that widowed heart the memory of that glorious life, and the assurance to which he has gone, in that country to which he has gone. Involuntarily the immense assemblage broke into applause upon the conclusion of this great tribute, but it was immediately stilled by the speaker, who read a stanza of "Nearer My God to Thee," the singing of which was followed by an address by Hon. A. E. Smith.

The consul's voice was at times sadly impaired by emotion as he addressed the audience as follows: Lieutenant-Governor Sir Henri Joly, Admiral Bickford, Premier Dunsmuir, Mayor Hayward and the people of Victoria.

THE FACTS OF THE CASE.

The Colonist says this morning: "The Times has a lot of alleged political news, which is highly misleading. It endeavors to create the impression that Mr. Martin was closeted with Mr. Dunsmuir all the morning and hence that the latter was late in arriving at the Government Buildings. This is not true. It states in so many words that the cabinet met yesterday afternoon and discussed the political situation; which was absolutely incorrect. The fact of the matter is that there is absolutely nothing new to report in regard to the political situation and the Times has only been indulging in a little 'yellowness' of a mild type." We are sorry to say the above is evidence that the exigencies of the case have reduced our esteemed and for a long time respectable contemporary to a most execrable mood. Mr. Martin came over from the mainland on Wednesday night and had a long interview with the Premier yesterday morning. There was nothing wrong in that that we know of, and we do not know why it should be denied. The public would neither be scandalized nor surprised by knowledge of such a fact. The member for Vancouver has probably as deep an interest in the situation which he is responsible for as the Premier himself. He had undertaken to deliver a specified number of votes to the leader of the government if the latter followed his advice, and it was "up to him," as they say on the street, to explain why there had been such an inglorious end to a scheme which looked so beautiful on paper. Mr. Martin has been on most intimate political terms with Mr. Dunsmuir. That is a fact that is well known. What is to be gained by denying it? It may be claimed that merely private business engaged the attention of the gentlemen, but sceptics will stick to the opinion that the existing political situation was alluded to incidentally. It is also a fact that the cabinet met yesterday, or at least as many members of the cabinet as were in the city. Of course the position of the government was not mentioned at all. The result of the New Westminster election, with its possible effects upon the political fortunes of the members of the cabinet, was never once alluded to. The prospect was so cheerful that Mr. Helmcken was merely sent for to add additional hilarity to the proceedings with his jolly countenance and genial conversation. But the senior member for Victoria was sent for, while it may be a literal fact that Mr. Dunsmuir is not negotiating with Mr. Helmcken. He did consult with him, however, and Mr. Helmcken could have had a portfolio if he had desired one. If he had accepted the bribe which was dangled so temptingly before him, but not specifically offered in order that politicians of the type of the Colonist may be able to dance all around the truth, he could not have saved the government. Popular as he is in the city and the House, Harry could not have delivered a certain number of votes on demand. The breach between the government and its late supporters is too great for that. The rift between the government and the people is quite as great. Competent observers are agreed that a Ministerialist could not be elected in Victoria to succeed Mr. Turner. The defection was turned into a stampede by the verdict of the electors of New Westminster.

Still the Colonist is right when it says there is nothing new to report in regard to the political situation. There would have been something new to report if the first attempt of the ministers to patch up had been successful.

CAUSES OF SUSPICION.

Surely it is not necessary that the Colonist should be continually lauding the patriotism of Mr. Dunsmuir and referring to the immensity of the interests he has in British Columbia. The people are willing to take all these things for granted, but at the same time it is not impossible that their views may differ from those of the Premier as to what measures are necessary to secure the highest possible welfare of the greatest possible number of people. Some of them are not even prepared to concede that the richest of the considerable number of rich men in British Columbia have a greater interest in the present and the future of the province than the comparatively poor man who has determined to live and die here.

It may be perfectly true that neither consciously nor unconsciously have the Premier and those who followed his lead formulated a policy designed to perpetuate monopoly in British Columbia. Unfortunately for them, the events of the last session of the Legislature could not but drive observing men to an entirely different conclusion. If the feeling of the country had not been so unmistakable a charter to build a railway would have been refused the Crow's Nest Southern Railway Company, which asked for assistance in neither lands nor money, but simply to be allowed to come in and develop the resources of the country—resources which must necessarily have lain dormant until such a line was built. This company is now spending millions of dollars in construction work in the province, and will contribute hundreds of thousands of dollars a year in taxes and royalties to the provincial treasury after its work is completed. No reason for opposition to this scheme that any man of common sense will accept for a moment was advanced. The old patriotic cry with which the people have been blinded once or twice was feebly raised and a pretence was made of protecting the interests of British Columbia smelters, which were never for a moment in danger, in order to enable the supporters of monopoly to drop gently from the untenable position in which they had placed themselves. The suspicion aroused by the treatment accorded a scheme in which the people of the Coast cities were not directly interested was deepened by the terms sought to be imposed on any company asking for assistance for a line from the Coast to Kootenay. The restrictions placed upon the government's policy may be entirely wrong; but the actions of certain members of the cabinet and of the legislature were, to say the least, suspicious. It may be true that some of those who charged the government with entering into a combination were not entirely disinterested. If the motives of the administration and of the House were pure the allegations of mercenary would have little effect. The influence of their utterances would not be dead. But the feeling that sinister motives prevailed has taken possession of the people and they will not be satisfied until a radical change has been made in the government. Those who expected better abilities from Mr. Dunsmuir and urged that he should be given a chance to prove his mettle are now loudest in their demands for a change. If proof of the above be desired either a by-election or a dissolution of the House will furnish it. The storm necessary to purify the political atmosphere cannot long be delayed. The schemers who would perpetuate the turmoil and unrest which has been the lot of the province for the last two years in order to advance their personal ends and political ambitions should all be "turned down." Our business interests and industrial welfare demand it.

PROGRESS IN THE WEST.

The St. Paul Pioneer-Press frankly admits that the growth of the Canadian West has been greater than corresponding portions of its own country, and rejoices greatly thereat. It thinks our process of increasing and multiplying will become more active as time progresses, and that a great community tributary to the Minnesota commercial metropolis will be the final result. Our contemporary says Manitoba and British Columbia, favored by better topography and soil than the rest of the Dominion, have progressed even faster than Montana and North Dakota, the figures being as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Year (1861-1901) and Population (British Columbia, Manitoba, Montana, North Dakota). Total population for 1901 is 314,878.

BACK FROM ESSINGTON.

W. A. Pratt tells of Trip to That Point—Excitement Over Proposed Railway.

W. A. Pratt has arrived down from Port Essington and the surrounding district, where he has been visiting the different mining propositions and obtaining a general idea of the value of the country from the standpoint of a mining man. He was very favorably impressed. Although his visit only covered a week's time, yet he visited the Yema, I. X. L., Tolon, Golden Crown, and Golden Eagle. All of these properties he reports more or less developed. They are on the same belt of ore. The rock, he says, runs very well in copper and gold. Each of the mines had a tunnel sunk, and in other ways preliminary work was commenced. No ore had, however, been found from any of the properties.

This, he said, could be accounted for with no difficulty. The country was almost inaccessible for private persons. Mr. Pratt did not visit Mr. Singlehurst's mine, but, according to what he had heard, however, Mr. Singlehurst was making favorable progress. The country will, in a very short time now, be closed, and Mr. Singlehurst was about to give up work for the year.

The contemplated building of a railway from Kitimat to Hazelton is hailed with delight by all residents of that district. It will open up extensive coal fields and will facilitate the shipment of ore from properties all along the Skeena. Mr. Pratt says that although the country is not extensively rich one no one could be said to invest in any property there unless the railway was built. The distance of the proposed line is about 110 miles. At the present time there is about 30 or so engineers looking over the ground, and last no more militates against development than does that of the States immediately south of the Great Lakes and those bordering on the ocean. The changing conditions in agriculture are responsible for the comparatively small increase. The same conditions exist in the rural districts of all the Eastern States. Improved means of communication have resulted in more or less centralization. The manufacturing and commercial centres in Canada are growing quite as fast relatively as similar portions of the United States. It is also a mistake to suppose that the great Canadian West will be tributary commercially to the cities of Minnesota. Our neighbors decided some years ago to freeze out Canada and cripple her in business. They have not succeeded. We aim at building up great cities on our own side of the line, and we will succeed.

If the effort to reach an understanding with the east-out wing of the government party had been successful there would assuredly have been another flop in the Legislature. What position would the men of "principle" have taken in such an event? The leader of the opposition would have been reinstated in his job. Would his supporters have followed meekly in his wake?

reports say that favorable progress is being made. THE SAANICH SHOW. Several Features of the Event to Be Held a Week From Saturday.

"The thirty-fourth annual fall exhibition of the Saanich Agricultural Society will be held on Saturday, the 28th inst. Live stock will be judged in the morning, and in the afternoon, commencing at 2:30 o'clock, a lengthy programme of sports will be provided. Horse racing, including Indian events, log chopping and sewing contests, and bicycle races are among the features arranged for the afternoon. Trains will leave the V. & S. station at 7 a. m., 10:30 a. m. and 2 p. m.; and returning will leave Saanich at 8:30 a. m., 11:20 a. m., 4 p. m., and 11:30 p. m.

Crops throughout the Saanich district have been very heavy this year, and for this reason it is thought the number of exhibits will be large. Dairying, too, has been an important factor of the agricultural industry this year, and the stock display at the show can therefore be expected to be even better than heretofore.

SPENCER'S Royal Worcester Corsets. The Royal Worcester Straight Front Bias Gored Corset produces THE CORRECT FIGURE. Unlike the ordinary corset in which the seams run practically in a perpendicular direction, the bias-gored corset is so made that the different sections are joined by bias seams, which are carried from a point under the arms, tragically down and towards the front of corset. A perfectly constructed straight-front corset, full bias-gored, should not press the figure from the waist-line up. It ensures perfect freedom from any pressure over the diaphragm, thus allowing the development of muscles, which, in the wearing of many old-style, curve-front corsets, have been wholly destroyed or remain undeveloped. Wearing the Royal Worcester bias-gored corset will not only improve the figure, but will greatly contribute to bodily comfort and health. Stocked in various lengths, white, gray and black, $1.75, $2.50, $3.50 and $4.50 a pair.

New Flannelette Underwear. Bunting For Decorations. Men's Clothing. Many men spend too large a portion of the income on clothes, and they do it in one or two ways. They either buy cheap, read-made garments, and need twice as many clothes a year as they ought to have, or they go to high-priced custom tailors, whose charges are so exorbitant that it practically prohibits a change of clothing, one suit being all they can afford. You can easily avoid either of these evils by trying one of our custom-tailored, ready-to-wear suits. We'll guarantee to fit your form, please your taste and satisfy you in every way, at one-half the price you would have to pay your tailor. "A RUNAWAY GIRL"

A bumper house witnessed the presentation of "A Runaway Girl" in the Victoria Theatre last night, and judging by the liberal applause bestowed, the play met with the approbation of the throng which filled the building beyond all setting speedily. "A Runaway Girl" is a most comedy unseen here before. Its stage settings and the costumes worn are very effective and attractive. The music is of a unusual character, and the choruses were generally given with enthusiasm and artistic finish; but while this is the case the company can hardly claim any proportionate credit for individual effort, so far as vocal capabilities lie. Music and comedy, however, well arranged, and at no time does the company trespass on the most modest sensibilities of any in the house.

The star of the aggregation of course proved to be Arthur Dunn, a favorite on the stage, who was very ably and cleverly assisted in his comic role by Miss Clara Belle Jerome. Others of the company also appeared to good advantage and added materially in the mirth of the entertainment. The play has been given a big run in many of the large cosmopolitan cities, and if the pleasure of the house manifested last night can be taken as a criterion it certainly could stand reproduction here. Unfortunately it was only looked for one night.

This morning in the police court the case of the four boys charged with the theft of a quantity of copper bearings from the steamer Mist was heard by Lind closed doors. COMPLETE PROGRAMME OF THE FESTIVITIES

Booths Representing All Great Nations of World to Be in Evidence—Programmes Each Evening.

Preparations commenced this morning at the market hall for the holding of the Grand Kirmess, which will be opened on Friday evening, September 27th, by Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere. The carpenters are now at work erecting the numerous stalls and structure work for the decoration of the hall.

The Kirmess promises to be a grand success. The ladies of the Metropolitan Methodist church commenced their work many months ago, long before even the Victoria exhibition dates were set, and ever since they have labored with a zeal and earnestness that certainly deserves success. Social concerts were given and the proceeds devoted to sending away to England, Ireland, Scotland, Germany and other countries for costumes to be used on the occasion.

The Woman's Auxiliary and Daughters of 'Eity will participate in the celebrations, and one half of the net proceeds will be devoted towards the furnishings and fittings for the thorough equipment of the children's ward when completed. The Kirmess will be under the distinguished patronage of His Honor the Lieut. Governor and Lady Joly de Lotbiniere, His Worship the Mayor, Admiral Bickford, C. B., commander-in-chief of the North Pacific station, and Mrs. Bickford, Lieut. Col. Grant, R. E., commanding troops at Work Point barracks, and Mrs. Grant, Hon. James Janssaur and Mrs. Dunsuir, Hon. Alaghun E. Smith, United States consul, and Mrs. Smith. It will be open on Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, September 27th, 28th and 30th, and October 1st. Tea will be served each evening, except Friday, from 6 to 8 o'clock.

The programme which has just been issued is of a very elaborate character. On the front page is a splendid cut of the Jubilee hospital, which is very appropriate, as part of the proceeds are to be devoted to that institution. On the third page is a picture of the Metropolitan Methodist church. An explanation of the word Kirmess is also given. Kirmess is in other words a church fair, and derives its name from the old word Kirmess, meaning church ale, referring to that part of the brew given as a tithe to the churches. The word was later used to signify a "gift," and was so applied to any festive, bazaar or entertainment, which gave pleasure to the populace. Still later it was used to designate a sacred festival which expressed by song and dance the joy of the German villagers at the completion of a church edifice.

The following is the management committee of the Kirmess Society of the Metropolitan Methodist church, who have the festival in hand: Mrs. Elliott Rowe, president; Mrs. J. W. Williams, 1st vice-president; Mrs. Geo. Powell, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. Berridge, secretary; Mrs. McCulloch, treasurer.

On Friday evening the special features of the musical programme will be solos by Miss Loewen, Miss Lombard and Messrs. Kent and Goward. On Saturday evening a concert will be given by the Fifth Regiment band; and on Monday evening a programme of bayonet exercises, physical drill, etc., by a squad of men from Work Point barracks.

Booths representing the greater number of civilized nations will be included. Each will be in charge of a party of ladies dressed to represent people of the stall to which they belong.

The English booth will be found to be a very cosy spot where a cup of good tea and the comfort of an easy chair may be had for ten cents. Callers at this booth will be reminded that "Christmas is coming," for here puddings and mince meat, together with relief from making them may be purchased at trifling cost.

In the Canadian booth articles indicative of the products of British Columbia and Canada will be on sale, also sporting outfits.

In the French booth there will be for

There will be a practice on the six-inch guns at Macaulay Point to-morrow afternoon.

A meeting of the committee appointed by the Independent Political Labor party to select names of candidates for the forthcoming bye-election will be held at Six William Wallace hall on Saturday next at 7.30.

The favorite route from this city to Nanaimo is now by the Victoria & Sidney railway and steamer Troquois. Train leaves every Monday and Thursday at 7 a. m. Single fare $1.50. Return, good for ten days, $2.50.

Morley's Hosiery for ladies and children at The White House.

The funeral of the late J. C. Jameson will take place on Sunday from the parlors of W. J. Hanna, Douglas street, at 2.30 p. m. Religious services suitable to the occasion will be conducted at the parlors and grave.

The residence of Mrs. Anderson, No. 29 Biedene Walk, was the scene of a fire about 7.30 o'clock last evening, caused by the upsetting of a lamp in the bedroom. A quantity of clothing was burned, but little other damage was done. Mrs. Anderson fainted, but soon recovered.

There was a big crowd at the E. & N. station this morning, notwithstanding the showery weather, bound for Nanaimo and up the line points. Among them were a great number of dog breeders and fanciers, bound for the annual show, to which some of the best dogs in the city were sent. His Honor the Lieut. Governor, accompanied by Lady Joly and Miss Boswell and his private secretary, Robert Powell, also went up this morning. His Honor will open the Nanaimo fair this afternoon.

The submarine company of Royal Engineers completed their annual course of musketry on the Clover Point rifle range to-day. The course consisted of firing seven rounds kneeling and the same number of rounds standing, at 200 yards; seven rounds prone, and seven rounds sitting, at 500 yards; seven rounds prone at 600 yards and 800 yards; seven rounds independent fire at 400 yards in 45 seconds, and seven rounds at 200 yards at target exposed for three minutes. The target was supposed to represent the head and shoulders of a man.

Last evening the provincial police were notified that a recalcitrant passenger of the ship Alexander Black was making things lively on board and forcibly resisting all efforts to put him under restraint. Provincial Constable Cox went out to the outer wharf where the ship is lying and took charge of the man, who was harmless enough then. His name is Gifford Constable, and he is an Englishman of good family and education. He took the sea voyage for his health, and it is understood his mind is somewhat unbalanced. He left this morning for home, preferring the more expeditious train route to a repetition of his Horn circling trip out.

The death occurred at the Jubilee hospital last night of Edward Braden, second son of ex-M.P.P. John Braden. Deceased died from the effects of an operation which he had undergone for some internal trouble. Until yesterday he was progressing favorably, but suffering a relapse last night he succumbed. He was 29 years of age, and the news of his death plunged in sorrow his family and many friends. The funeral has not as yet been arranged. Deceased was a native of Olympia, Wn., and took an active part in athletics, for a long time being a member of the Victoria Athletic Club. The remains are at W. J. Hanna's parlors, and will be removed to-morrow to the residence.

It is being erected in the church under the direction of Mr. Longfield.

Yesterday a few ladies of the First Presbyterian church met at the Old Ladies' Home to celebrate the ninety-sixth anniversary of the birthday of Mrs. Campbell, who is a native of Argyll, Scotland. Her father was a sergeant in the 42nd Highlanders, and had fought many battles for his King and country. She was born in Gibraltar, the impregnable British fortress on the Mediterranean sea. She has seen five sovereigns on the throne of Great Britain—George III., George IV., William IV., Victoria, and Edward VII. She is in good health, hale and hearty. Many presents were made to her yesterday, and pleasant congratulations were extended to her. The supper table, which was decorated in her honor, had 96 wax candles burning on it. Her pastor, Rev. Dr. Campbell, and also Bishop Perrin, called on her. Her thankfulness to God for His goodness, and to her friends for their kindness was great and sincere.

the tenderest; and as truly as he was a tender man, so he was one of the bravest men that ever lived.

I remember some years ago, after he was elected President, a friend of mine was at the White House, and he said to Mrs. McKinley, showing her a picture of Napoleon and a portrait of her husband: "Mr. McKinley is very much like Napoleon"; when she said: "Yes, there is a much resemblance, but Mr. McKinley is a much better man." Yes, "because" man has victories not less renowned than those of war, and in all the triumphs of McKinley, from the time he was the striking son of the foreman of a little furnace at Niles, Ohio, until he reached the White House—the pinnacle of human ambition—there were no widows to mourn an act that he did, William McKinley did not make his pathway from obscurity to renown through the blood of thousands of his fellow men, amid the tears of widows and orphans, or through devastated countries. No; his were the paths of peace.

When he finally achieved the topmost round of success, our country had passed through a season of depression and of distress. I had seen thousands in that great city of Chicago gathered at the free soup-houses for something to eat, and at the stations for a place to lie at night. But when McKinley became President, as with the stroke of a magic wand, as with the stroke of a wand wielded by a master hand, our great nation sprung to her feet, our factories were opened, and prosperity abounded. And from that time to this we have gone on to prosperity, not only commercially, but in every other way.

My friends, my heart is full, my loved Chieftain is no more. Every honor that his country can render had been given him. He occupied the pinnacle of fame. And he wanted to live. He was like you and me, he enjoyed his life. He was a vigorous man, though he lived loyal to his God as though each day might be his last, and did his duty in his day and generation. He hoped to live it out, he desired at the end of his eight years as President of our great Republic to go back to that modest little cottage at Canton, Ohio, to which he had just added two or three rooms, and there to live out the remainder of his days in peace and quietness, like the noble citizen that he was. But it was not to be. Twice honored by election to that great office of the people of his country, he, who as a private citizen had not a single enemy in the world, whom men loved and trusted, because he was President, was killed.

Yes, "He had borne his faculties so meek, had been so dear in his great office, that his virtues all plead like angels trumpet-tongued against the deep damnation of his taking off." So does the whole world feel to-day—not only on this far-off Pacific coast, but all over the lands of the Anglo-Saxon race, eyes over the whole globe. As has been said by the eloquent speaker to-day, under his guidance the great Republic has taken its blessings beyond the ocean; they leaped across to the Orient, and down to the Antilles, they have gone down South to the islands of the seas, and they all to-day weep that the master hand is silenced, and are mourning to-day, as you and I.

I can hardly realize that I shall never more see William McKinley, never grasp his kindly hand again. Nothing is left but his shadow (portrait), the great statesman, brave soldier, noble President, grand leader, loving husband, dutiful son, Christian man, has been cut down in his prime. "We shall look upon his like again." "Hail and farewell upon his like again." "Hail and farewell upon his like again." The services closed with singing a verse each of "America" and "God Save the King," and the benediction by Rev. Dr. Campbell. The congregation left the building to the solemn strains of the "Bend March in Saul." Jesse Longfield presided at the organ.

In Methodist Church. A memorial service was held in the Metropolitan Methodist church last evening. The spacious edifice was filled and the proceedings, like those of the afternoon, were simple, dignified and impressive. The platform, pulpit and communion rail were beautifully decorated with a profusion of white flowers. There was a large choir and the choral service was appropriately excellent.

Rev. C. M. Peck, of Dunsmuir, opened with prayer, and solos were rendered by Mrs. Staneland and Rev. Wm. Hicks, the former's singing of "Some Day We'll Understand," being exceptionally fine. The choir also sang "Vital Spark of Heavenly Flame." Remarks were delivered by Rev. Elliott S. Rowe, and personal reminiscences of the late President by United States Consul A. E. Smith. J. Longfield presided at the organ.

ABOUT THE BOOMERANG. More has been written and less understood of the boomerang than of almost any other weapon. Everybody knows it to be a flat stick of wood, bent into a shape which suggests a combination of a "W" and a "U"; but, in point of fact, boomerangs are of almost every shape from semi-circular to nearly straight, and their effectiveness seems to depend not so much on their shape as upon the curves which are shown on their flat sides.

If one takes a boomerang and looks along its sharp outer edge, it is seen that this edge presents a wavy appearance—a delicately adjusted sinusity like the lines of a long screw.

maker knows instinctively just where his boomerang will go when he throws it, although he never seems to aim any two in the same way.

Some very absurd tales have been told about this weapon. One hears of men who can so throw a boomerang that it kills an enemy behind a tree, and then comes cheerfully fluttering back to his owner, who thereupon hurries it on a fresh mission of carnage.

A flock of frightened cockatoos, speeding in intricate gyrations through the air to escape the attack of natives who want a bird for dinner, are pursued at every turn by these erratic weapons, which strike them down a dozen each, and so return to the hand that casts them.

Old wives' fables these, at which Australians laugh, knowing in the nature of things their falsity. In the first place, the war-boomerang is not made for return, and is only slightly bent, so that it may go hopping and bounding along the earth like a hoop, and make capacious holes in the bodies of the adversary. These are of hard, heavy wood, and ugly things to be hit with; but the return boomerang is simply a plaything, or to be used in light hunting, and although it might give a man a painful rap, could not seriously injure him.

As for the cockatoo story, it has this much of truth, that a native boomerang hunter, if he saw a flock flying in a straight course, could so cast his weapon as to come upon them unawares at a given point in their flight, and perhaps knock one down; but his boomerang would drop, too, having no power of flight after it has struck anything.

The boomerang is sufficiently remarkable without exaggeration, and it is time that the truth should be told about this strange weapon. The method of casting it is as follows: It is held perpendicularly and taken firmly in the hand by one of its extremities, with the other pointed forward, and it is hurled with a full arm and assisted by a run and a swing of the whole body.

Slight Turn of the Wrist At the moment of discharge causes it to assume various erratic courses. Sometimes it will fly straight forward for one hundred or even two hundred yards, then rise sharply to a great height, less its force and flutter down to the feet of the thrower.

Again it will rise in the air, swoop down with immense rapidity and skim around in a great semi-circle a few inches from the ground, rise once more and return to the spot whence it started. It will also start off in a great swoop to the right, reverse it and turn to the left, skim around the thrower in a series of ever-narrowing circles, and finding their centre, fall into it like an exhausted bird.

There is something so strange about the thing as to appear almost supernatural; its movements are so unexpected and out of reason that it seems to be alive, and to take a savage delight in strange shoots and dashes, which make the "new chum" (Australian equivalent for "underfoot") dodge every time it turns lest it should knock him on the head.

Such is the boomerang—a two-formed utensil, with one shape used for business, the other for sport.

CASTORIA For Infants and Children. What rule of construction the savage architect follows, even he himself would probably be unable to say. Yet he has some definite plan in mind, no doubt, for while he chips and pecks away at the wood, he takes frequent squints along its edge, to see how his curves are progressing. No two boomerangs are just alike, but all are similar in their relations of curves along the flat side. The boomerang

ROSSLAND.

A Chinaman who had limbed too freely lay down beside the C. P. R. track just below Columbia avenue on Monday afternoon. A freight train started down the hill, and the driver, R. A. Moser, was unable to stop his engine in time to prevent an accident. The grade is heavy and the curve sharp at that point. The Chinaman's scalp was cut to the bone and another cut inflicted on his cheek. Chief Vaughan was sent for and conveyed him to the hospital, where Dr. Senior sewed up his wounds. He does not appear to be suffering seriously. The police have traced and confiscated large numbers of counterfeit coins. The counterfeiters are head-banded presentments of the United States dollar.

VANCOUVER.

The death took place on Wednesday morning of the 5-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Sparks, of this city. The death of George W. Manning occurred at 3 p. m. on Wednesday, after a lingering illness. The deceased gentleman was an old resident of Vancouver and very well known among a large circle of friends.

THE TIGER'S MUSICAL EAR.

A student of animal habits recently made some interesting experiments with music at the Zoo, says 'Tit-Bits.' A violin player approached a sleeping tiger, and at the sound of the music the tiger awoke, raised its head, without moving its body, looked for some time with fixed attention at the player. It remained for a while in a fine attitude listening to the music, and then, making a peculiar sound that in any tiger language does duty for purring, it lay down again and dozed.

The soft music was played on while the great beast lay as if lulled to sleep. The violin was then put aside for the piccolo. At the first note of the new instrument the tiger sprang to his feet, and, reared up and down the cage, shaking its head and ears, and lashing its tail from side to side. As the notes became still louder and more piercing, the tiger bounded across the cage, retraced on its hind feet and exhibited the utmost displeasure.

The piccolo was stopped, and a very soft air played upon the flute. The difference in effect was seen at once. The tiger ceased to rush about, and the leaps subsided to a gentle walk, until the animal came to the bars and, standing still and quiet once more, listened with pleasure to the music.
