Dream-Love.

There's a mate for every heart
That throbs beneath the sun,
Though some by fate are kept apart
Till life is nearly done;
Where is the loyal heart and hand
Shall make my life complete?
God bless my Love, on sea or land,
Until our paths shall meet!

My faith is sure
And will endure,
Till that glad hour shall be;
Sweet moment haste
Across the waste
And bring my love to me.

The glow of morn is in her face,
Its dew-lights in her eyes,
Amid her hair the peerless grace
That tints the morning skies;
And, oh, her feet, her little feet,
They are so lithe and small,
I dream I catch their rhythmic beat
Whene'er the rose leaves fall.

Yes, oft in dreams
With sunny gleams
Her winsome smile I see,
Sweet moment haste
Across the waste
And bring my Love to me!

LOCKED IN.

Lucy Hutton turned pale. She was locking the school room door, when, under the shade of the trees outside, she saw a man stand watching her.

She turned pale, but showed no other sign of emotion. Without turning to look again at this man, she drew her shawl about her, turned, came down the steps, and walked homeward.

Her home was but a temporary one. Lucy Hutton had come from a little farm in the country to take charge of a parish free school. She was staying at a boarding house where nearly all were strangers.

She was very pretty, with long golden hair, which she wore free upon her shoulders. Few persons had ever seen more beautiful hair.

Lucy turned pale because she had learned to be afraid of this person who was watching her. She knew his appearance well. For a time he had sat opposite to her at table, an emaciated, pallid, carefully dressed man, with long black hair, parted in the middle of a high, narrow forehead, and falling long upon his coat collar. Her first uneasiness was caused by observing that he constantly watched her out of a pair of small black eyes. His observation was so close as to be annoying. She had at length avoided it by changing her seat at the table.

He never spoke to her. She did not know his name, and none of the few persons she know were acquainted with him. Having placed herself beyond his notice at table, she congratulated herself on having escaped him, when, to her consternation and serious uneasiness, she discovered that he followed her to and from the school.

She chose to ignore this. She did not even speak of it to any one. Though a slight, golden-haired girl, Lucy Hutton was courageous, and a natural delicacy prevented her from making a fuss about the matter. But, at last, she began to be annoyed by notes, expressing this man's infatuation. He desired to make her acquaintance—to marry her.

Lucy's immediate impulse was to send his first note to her lover, Henry Grayson, and ask his assistance. Then she resisted what seemed a weakness.

"I shall avoid this strange lover of mine; he cannot do me any harm," she thought.

But she could not forget him. His eyes, his gait, the cut of his garments, became horribly familiar to her. She felt that she was constantly under his surveillance. If she walked alone, he boldly followed her at a distance. If she entered a crowd, she found him at her elbow. Once as she stood at a shop window looking at some lace, he hissed in her ear: "I love you," and slipped instantly out of sight in the evening darkness. After this she never allowed herself to be abroad after the evening's early dusk. At the man's approach she had felt him so physically powerful as to fill her with terror.

The day previous to the evening of which I write had brought a new incident. A note had been left at the school room addressed to her which read as follows:

BEAUTIFUL LUCY—I must speak to you; you must hear me. Meet me tonight at the lower end of Redmond's bridge; remember, you must come.

There was no signature, but there could be no doubt from whence it came. Lucy's cheeks flushed with indignation; but a thrill of fear went through her heart. Her pursuer's audacity seemed to have approached a crisis.

She crushed the note in her hand, for the observant eyes of her little pupils were upon her and she forced herself to go on with their lessons; but her cheek burned redly—her mind wandered in spite of herself.

Of course she did not mean to meet this man; and what would be the consequences if she did not? She began to feel desperately the need of aid in this strange matter. She wished that Henry Grayson were there; she wished most of all that she were at home.

When she locked the school-room door that night she saw, as I have said, this gaunt, black-haired man watching her under the trees. With a quick, firm step she walked down the street. At least he should not see that she was afraid of him. But she heard a step behind her; it was his. He came to her side; his detestable voice said over her shoulder: "Tonight at 8 o'clock. I forgot to tell you the time."

She never turned her head or made the slightest response, as if she had heard him. He made an effort to look into her eyes—then fell back and disappeared.

Lucy reached her room, locked the door and sat down, trembling and crying. This last encounter had been too much for her nerves. She was full of excitement and dread. Unconsciously to herself this constant pursuit had worn upon her. Her strength seemed suddenly to give way. She sat, sobbing, almost unable to stir, when there was a knock at the door.

She started at the sound as if some new summons of evil were at hand; but the person who appeared was only a young lady boarding in the house with whom Lucy had a slight acquaintance.

A note had been left at the house while Lucy was at school. It was her mother's handwriting:

Come home immediately. Your father is very ill.

Miss Burton delivered the note, but lingered, drawn to a pitying solicitude by the sight of Lucy's swollen face. As Lucy dropped the paper and sobbed more bitterly than be ore, Miss Burton gently approached her, saying, "My dear Miss Hutton, you have bad news!"

"My father is very ill—dying, perhaps! But how can I leave my school?"

"I will be your substitute while you are absent. I think I can. I have taught in a school before. And I will go with you tonight and see the rector."

This kindness reanimated Lucy's mind. In a few moments she had settled her plans and the two sought the Rev. John Archer and had the matter satisfactorily settled. Lucy was to start on the 9 o'clock train and Miss Burton was to enter the school in the morning.

Hurriedly making other arrangements Lucy bade her new friends a grateful goodby, took a fly and was driven to the station. The train was ready; she entered. It was only an hour's ride to her home.

Suddenly, while the train was rushing through thick darkness, lighted only by a cloud of sparks, Lucy remembered her obtrusive admirer.

"I have escaped him!" she thought, with a moment's delight.

Anticipating her arrival she found her father's chase cart awaiting her, the horse driven by her little brother, Will.

"How is father, Will?"

"He is very ill, Lucy."

That night was a long and hard one for the friends of the sick man. But at dawn, to the relief of all, the physicians pronounced him out of danger.

The morning sunshine found Lucy pallid and exhausted. She was greatly unnerved. They begged her to go to sleep, but she could not rest. Her eyes were heavy, her lips pale, her hands hot. She carried some spring water, cool and sparkling, to her room, wet her throbbing temples and her thick rich hair, the weight of which oppressed her aching head.

While engaged in this she heard a knock at the door. Hurriedly coiling up her bright hair, she went down. The door was open. She did not approach it, for, standing full in the sunshine, upon the threshold of her home was the tall, gaunt, detested figure that had haunted her, like a nightmare, for weeks. Covered with dust, his lank hair straggling upon his shoulders, his sallow hands extended, and his bloodshot eyes fixed upon her face, his appearance was repulsive, his presence frightful. She shrieked and ran away.

Forgetting the invalid, she had slammed the sitting-room door behind her, when she heard her name gently pronounced, and Henry Grayson caught her in his arms.

"My dear Lucy, what is the matter?"

What an inexpressible relief was his protecting embrace, and the gush of tears which followed! She told him what had happened.

Search was made, but there was no appearance of any one near the house, and gradually Lucy became assured and composed.

It was 11 o'clock, when, full of happy thoughts, Lucy Hutton went up to her chamber.

The room was large; a window was open; a gust of air rushed through and extinguished her candle. She paused; a faint thrill of her old timidity came over her. But she summoned her natural courage, and saying, "I will not go down stairs for matches; I will go to bed in the dark," she closed and also locked a closet door which yawned behind her, drew back a curtain to let in the starlight and began to undress.

Nothing unpleasant now mingled with the girl's happy thoughts, as she softly unrobed herself. She had quite forgotten the present in thinking of a delightful future, when a strange noise startled her. It seemed like something struggling against the wall. Her heart leaped into her throat.

"Pshaw! it is only a rat!" she said, the next moment.

As she lay down, she thought she heard the sound again. But after that, all was still. She lay awake, occupied with her busy thoughts for awhile, but soon fell asleep.

It was late when she awoke; the room was full of sunshine. Remembering her father's state, Lucy overcame a feeling of languor, rose and hastily dressed. While doing so, she remembered the experience of the previous evening. A sudden thought came to her.

"I must have locked the cat in the closet last night. Poor old Prue!"

She unlocked the door. The key turned with some difficulty. Flinging open the door, a stiff, dead human figure fell upon her, crushing her to the floor.

Those who heard the noise came rushing up. Lucy was in convulsions. The frightful, distorted corpse had rolled aside and lay upon its face. The room was full of the scent of chloroform.

Lucy was finally restored, but her nervous condition was deplorable. For weeks they watched over her feverish, delirious slumbers, fearing insanity, and not without reason.

The dead man was given over to the care of the town authorities, and buried by them. It was never known who he was. On learning the story, many thought him insane. Others believed him to be a lawless and unscrupulous adventurer. In his pockets had been found a pistol, a broken vial of chloroform and a sponge. It was thought that he intended to render Lucy insensible, and carry her away in the night. But he was dead, and incapable of more harm. Probably when Lucy locked the closet door, he had been crowded in, and the vial broken. He had been smothered to death.

It took years to overcome this dreadful experience; but now Lucy Grayson tells of it, without excitement, to her children.—[New York World.

Juggling Extraordinary.

Without paraphernalia of any description, devoid of dress, except a cloth around his body, a native performed tricks of legerdemain, writes a traveler from India, the recital of which would bring a shrug of unbelief from the reader and will therefore not be attempted, and yet one example must be related just to give the imagination a chance. A common wash bowl was placed in the centre of the room. Four hen eggs procured in the hotel were deposited in the bowl. The little assistant of the juggler, in the presence of spectators who could plainly see the eggs on the bottom, slowly filled the vessel with clean water. The Hindoo placed his bare hand on the rim of the bowl and the eggs disappeared from view, returning when his hand was removed. This was repeated several times but he kept the explanation of the trick to himself.

A female contortionist, 20 years of age, splendidly formed, but of rather small stature, was our next visitor. She went through a series of exercises, tying herself into so many peculiar knots that we doubted if nature had supplied her with a backbone, but were convinced when she commenced her eyelid performance. A dagger about a foot long, and as sharp as a razor, was fastened to the floor, point upward. The performer laid a small cambric needle horizontally across the fine point of the weapon, and standing before it bent backward until she moved the needle from its position with her eyelids without touching the floor with anything but her feet, unfolding a wrinkle of female eye capacity we had never dreamed of.

Before we understood the design a proof of her dexterity was given which chilled the circulating medium in our veins. A little babe of about 10 months (judging by American standard) was laid upon a cushion, and a small orange placed upon the body in the vicinity of its commissary department. The woman then took a sharp sword, shaped something like a cimeter, and with a swift downward blow cut the orange without harming the child. No one envied the little one's position, or volunteered to take its place in a similar experiment.

Barbers Won't Shave Barbers.

"Why don't you get shaved?" inquired a patron of the proprietor of a South C street tonsorial establishment, on whose face there was a week's growth of beard.

"Because I've got a lame arm from being vaccinated," was the reply.

"Why don't you get another barber to shave you, then?" said the inquisitor.

"Don't you know that one barber will never shave another? As for myself I would rather scrape a venomous snake than a barber," said the knight of the razor.

"What is there so objectionable about it?" inquired the interrogator.

"Well," replied the chin scraper, "barbers are the most bitterly severe critics in the world, especially when the subject is one of their own trade. If I were to shave another barber, and during the process should make a single false stroke, either upward or downward, contrary to the rules of professionals, or fail to leave his face as smooth as the top of old John Piper's head, the jealous artist would gab about it among professionals and shop patrons for the next five years, the burden of which would be that I was incompetent, and he would thereby create a suspicion in the public mind that I am not a master of my business. Yes, I would rather burn the whiskers off a Bengal tiger's nose with a cigarette stub than shave a barber."—[Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle.

"Rations of Iron."

Eiserne Portionen (rations of iron) is the name given by the Militar Wochenblatt to the canned provisions which the German soldier is now compelled to carry in his knapsack or haversack, not for immediate consumption, but for use at those times when his command is removed from the base of supplies or the quartermaster's department is short. It says: "These victuals of iron are, during war, to be used on the evening preceding a great battle, or better, when the army making a sudden change of front, the convoys are for a day or two retarded." Much of this canned provision is put up in America, and is said to be both better and cheaper than the German. The Seventh Corps (Westphalian) commanders have recently experimented with canned chocolate and cocoa, which, though seemingly light refection for a marching column, has, on the contrary, been found excellently adapted.—[Scientific American.

FOR FARM AND GARDEN.

Earthing Potatoes.

A correspondent of Gardening says: The majority of people have for so long been accustomed to draw earth up to the stems of their potatoes that the practice has come to be looked upon as absolutely essential; but it is not so in all cases—it depends upon the depth the sets are placed under the surface. If the top of the set is 6 inches under the ground, very little, if any, earthing is necessary; and if the sets are planted 7 inches or 8 inches deep, the crop will be better without earthing than with. The non-earthing plan is all very well where the soil is very light and deep, but in heavy ground it is not advisable to plant so deep; then earthing up to prevent tubers near the surface getting green is a necessity.

To Pick, Pack and Ship Fruits.

A Philadelphia firm gives the following directions for picking, packing and shipping peaches, plums, pears and other fruits:

Hand pick the fruit when fully developed; just when ready for the ripening process, but before this process has set in to mellow it. This right time for picking can be seen in the plumpness and coloring of the skin.

Handle gently. Discard everything soft or even mellow—everything immature, bruised, specked, or in any way faulty. Very choice delicate fruit should be wrapped like oranges, to command outside prices.

Hand pack carefully—close, snug and tight; not to mash or bruise the fruit, but to keep it in place so it cannot rattle about, settle or shift place and get disarranged and chafed in shipment.

Do not use deep baskets, larger at top than at bottom, to wedge or mash the fruit. Do not use tight built boxes to spoil more or less fruit from stagnant air. Most of the common slat vegetable crates are ruinous to fruits and delicate produce.

Use open built ventilated packages.

A Kicking Cow.

A kicking cow is managed by putting a large rope around her body, and tying up a fore foot close to the body, and then milking as gently as possible. She will struggle at first, but kindness and gentle treatment will soon soothe her down. I think, says a correspondent of the Prairie Farmer, the tenderness of the udder soon after calving is the cause of the kicking. My cows kick at their calves more than at me, because the calves are much rougher. The udder needs the rough treatment, no doubt, but the calf is the one to administer it. I keep my cows and all my stock well sheltered day and night, in rough weather, driving them to water twice a day, however. I hope soon to provide for watering at the barn. Exercise is good for them, and they generally get it; but I always put them back into their stalls when they demand it.—I keep thoroughbred Jerseys as well as half-breeds—Jersey-Holsteins and Jersey-Durhams. For the average family, the half-breeds will give better satisfaction. Why so? Because they will give more milk and butter. I neglected to say above, I give my cows no more rope than just enough to hold their heads level with the body when the rope is tied to the trough.

How to Plant Trees.

On receipt from the nursery, the trees should be carefully heeled-in. If they are to remain several days, the tops have to be shaded. If they are very dry, tops and all should go into the trench, and the covering be made quite damp. The holes should be dug at least four feet in diameter, and deep enough to admit of planting the tree a little deeper than it stood in the nursery. The filling of well pulverized soil having a liberal amount of ground bone and ashes well worked into it is placed beside the hole. Carefully examine each tree for borers, cut back one-half of last year's growth, remove all broken limbs with a sharp knife, and coat with shellac all cuts and chafed places. All broken roots should be cut smoothly with an upward slant, and after all the roots have been dipped in thin mud, the tree is placed in the hole. Spread the roots carefully, drive a strong stake beside the tree and fill in the soil, working it thoroughly under and among the roots with the hand. Give two or three firm treadings during the process of filling, which should reach the height of the nursery setting and fill the rest of the hole with a mulch of coarse hay or straw. Place a piece of woolen cloth between the tree and stake, to prevent chafing; tie firmly, and the following day give the tree a thorough watering.—[American Agriculturist.

Harrowing Corn.

There is considerable difference of opinion in regard to whether harrowing corn is profitable or not. As with nearly all other kinds of farm work circumstances must be considered in determining this question. Some will find that with their soil and the way they have prepared the ground and planted the crop, harrowing will damage the crop far more than the soil will be benefited; at the same time another farmer with a different preparation and planting will be able to derive a considerable amount of benefit, and will, of course consider it a cheap way of cultivating young corn.

One item is essential in order to derive the largest amount of benefit from harrowing, that is, the soil should be thoroughly prepared in a good condition before planting the crop. Corn that is planted on land that has not been well prepared, can be seriously injured by harrowing, while with the same soil thoroughly prepared, considerable benefit could be secured.

One advantage, if the soil will permit, is cultivation can begin much earlier by using the harrow than if we are obliged to wait until the corn has made a sufficient growth to use the cultivator. This is often quite an item. The weeds start to grow very soon, and often, if from any cause the cultivation is delayed, they will secure such a start that the labor, or work of keeping the crop clean, is considerably increased.

Weeds are destroyed much easier when small, and by using the harrow to commence the cultivation, the work of extermination can be begun much earlier.

Then again hard-beating rains and hot sun will cause a crust to form over the surface of the soil, and an early harrowing will break this up and give the plants a much better opportunity to grow.

If properly managed the harrow can be made to fine the surface of the soil very thoroughly and at the same time destroy the weeds that may have started up. The work can be done rapidly and economically. But in order to secure the best results the soil should be thoroughly prepared before planting and so far as possible the soil should be sufficiently dry to fine readily when the cultivation is given. I have harrowed corn when I am certain the work was very profitable; at other times am equally certain that the profit was very doubtful.—[Farm, Field and stockman.

Farm and Garden Notes.

Give your wast meat to your fowls.

Good fences should protect your crops.

Banking soil around trees will prevent injury from mice.

Feeding lambs pays, especially if they are small and not thriving.

Burn all cuttings or plucked leaves which are infected by insects.

Keep only as many fowls as your time will permit you to attend to well in every particular.

When fifty fowls well cared for will pay a good profit, one hundred somewhat neglected may be kept at a loss.

Very much depends upon the milking, both in regard to the yield of the milk and the quality of the butter or cheese made from it.

The formation of the cow's udder is such that the secretion of the milk is helped by good milking, while it is retarded and in time lessened by bad milking.

Feed judiciously, keep the water fountains pure, look out for vermin, avoid overcrowding, gives the fowls a chance to scratch, provide shade in summer and a dry shelter in winter.

The seeds of tropical plants, such as tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers, melons, squashes, Lima beans and the like require a heat of 55 degrees to 70 degrees to start them into healthy growth.

No plum is strictly curculio proof, says the Times-Democrat, but it is said that less than 10 per cent. of the eggs produced by the curculio will hatch out if laid in the various varieties of the Chickasaw plum.

Recent experiments throw some doubt on the old belief that succulence in food is best for cows. If given plenty of water of the right temperature, they will produce as much milk on dry meal and fodder as on that moistened.

Fence posts will last longer and be set firmer if the holes are filled with coarse broken stone or small boulders rammed tight and filled in with thin cement. The cement should be rounded up against the post to shed water, and a coat of paint or tar should be put on the post for a foot above the cement.

Some of the Ingredients of Snuff.

In the manufacture of snuff in this country the finest Virginia leaf tobacco is used, which is considerably modified by carrying the fermentation much further than in tobacco intended for smoking, and is simply ground and sifted.

"In our factory," said a New York dealer to a Mail and Express reporter, "we have about sixty mills, resembling large coffee mills. The ground tobacco falls upon an endless band of broad canvas, which conveys it to four sets of mechanical sieves. The snuff which passes through is received upon an endless traveling band, which carries it thence into a close chest. The particles which are too coarse to pass through the sieve are reground. The immense varieties of snuffs are formed by mixing together and grinding tobaccos of different growths, and by varying the nature of the same.

"For the snuff known as Nearoco, forty parts of genuine St. Omer, South American, tobacco, forty parts of Georgia and twenty parts of fermented Virginian stalks in powder are used. The whole is ground and sifted. Then two and one-half pounds of rose leaves are cut and mixed with powdered Virginian stalks, and two and one-half pounds of rosewood in fine powder, moistened with salt water, are added. It is then worked up with one pound of cream of tartar and two pounds of salt of tartar and four pounds of table salt. This snuff, which is highly scented, must be preserved in lead, and brings $4 per pound. The other brands of snuff manufactured here are Bolongaro, large-grained Paris and Scotch snuff, ranging in price from $3 to $10 per pound."

For the past ten months the railroad accidents in this country have averaged one for every five days, and two-thirds of them have been the result of carelessness.

PARADE OF REYNOLDS POST 58, G.A.R.

The early morning aspect for the parade of Post 58, G. A. R., on Wednesday was not very pleasant, and at 8.30 o'clock when the boys in blue began to throng the square near the Weymouth depot, it was thought by some that the parade would have to be given up, but at 9 o'clock the Post Commander, Col. Benj. S. Lovell, mounted on an elegant light bay horse, gave the command "Forward," and the procession moved up Commercial and Washington streets to the Village cemetery in the following order:

Mounted Marshall, Chas. G. Morrill.
Drum Major, Andrew Grant.
Martland's Band, of Brockton, 27 pieces, Mace Gay, leader.
Temple Drum Corps, 30 men, C. Will Bailey, leader.
James L. Bates Camp 36, S. of V., 42 men, William C. Earle, Captain Commander.
Captain, William C. Earle.
1st Lieut., Minot P. Garey.
2d Lieut., Charles R. Greeley.
Chaplain, Franklin H. Pratt.
1st Sergeant, William M. Marden.
Quartermaster Serg't, W. M. Reamey.
Sergeant of Guard, John F. Binney.
Color Sergeant, Emory L. Cushing.
Principal Musician, Edward N. Bates.
Corporal of Guard, James O'Donovan
Camp Guard, George T. Magee.
Picket Guard, J. Henry Moran.
Camp Council, Charles T. Bailey, James F. Otis, W. M. Marden.
Members, William P. Denbroeder, E. Chapman, George M. Davis, H. Franklin Perry, George E. Fairbanks, Harry M. Smith, John F. Fennell, Charles E. Dunbar, George R. Burrell, Frank A. Richards, John W. Carroll, Fred S. Wilder, William H. Looney, William W. Richards, Walter H. Smith, Arthur C. Burrell, Charles H. Abbott, Hubert G. Pope, Ellis B. Gay, W. A. Deere, W. H. Gurney, Leon Johnston, W. P. Abbott, C. H. Stetson, Willie E. Ames, Gustavus M. Pratt, Frank W. Rea, Arthur M. Welch, Thomas H. Pray, Leonard Mitchell, George E. Gardner, Clifton O. Sanborn, George H. Bearce, Jas. A. Denbroeder, William C. Peare, Jas. A. Wendell, John O'M. Whelan, Elmer W. Houghton, Walter H. Barnard, J. Frank Young, Edwin E. Merchant, Louis A. Howard.
Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R., 200 men, in command of Col. Benj. S. Lovell.
Co. A, Maj. F. A. Bicknell.
Co. B, Capt. C. W. L. Hayward.
Co. C, Capt. David Dunbar.
Co. D, Capt. C. S. Redmond.
Barouches containing Selectmen of Weymouth, Hon. James Humphrey and Z. L. Bicknell of War Board of Selectmen.

The procession was an unusually imposing one and the steady tramp through the mud, of the comrades and Sons of Veterans, to the prompt time of the Band and Drum Corps, made the march one of a soldierly character and interesting to the many observers. The Sons of Veterans, who on that day made their first public appearance received much praise from the old soldiers and hundreds of citizens in all parts of the town.

Arriving at the Village Cemetery, 57 soldiers graves were decorated and leaving the cemetery by Front street the procession moved to the depot, where carriages were taken to Thomas' Corner, North Weymouth, and a march then made to the Old North cemetery, where they were met by a detachment of 27 men from Co. G, 1st Reg., Independent Boston Fusiliers, in command of 2d Lieut. Bickery, the company having just arrived from South Weymouth on foot, where they had gone by mistake. Arriving at the soldiers monument, upon which are the names of 100 of Weymouth's soldiers, and which was beautifully bedecked with flags and streamers, the guard formed around it, and while the band played a dirge the graves of 39 comrades were decorated, the Fusiliers paying honor at the grave of their comrade, W. A. Woodside.

Carriages were then taken to Shaw's corner, when the march was resumed through Broad and Commercial streets to Reynolds hall. Here Alvah Raymond, Weymouth's well known and popular caterer, had, with his corps of efficient aids, spread an array of edibles sufficient to make the mouths of the hungry boys water with delight, the menu comprising cold meats, hot baked beans, hot coffee, rolls, brown bread, onions, relishes, bananas and oranges.

When all were seated Commander Lovell called upon the chaplain, Comrade Fairbanks, to invoke the Divine blessing, after which the order was "charge tables!" and it is unnecessary to add the order was promptly obeyed. After the appetite had been satisfied, cigars were passed and for 15 minutes the command remained at rest, listening to several selections by the Quaker City Trio, of the Fusiliers. At 1.15 o'clock the procession moved to the East Weymouth cemetery, the band playing a dirge at the graves of Robert B. Raymond and Henry Burrell, deceased members of the Weymouth Band, while the Post were decorating the graves of 26 comrades. Carriages were then taken for South Weymouth, stopping at Mt. Hope cemetery to decorate 19 graves, when they proceeded to near the residence of Elbridge Nash, where the line was formed and a march made to the Highland cemetery, 12 graves being decorated there. A detail from the Camp and Grand Army placed floral tributes upon the grave of Gen. Jas. L. Bates.

Leaving here the command proceeded to the green in front of the Cong'l church, where the memorial services were concluded with a dress parade, Adjutant Hastings reading the following general order:

HEADQUARTERS REYNOLDS POST NO. 58, DEPARTMENT OF MASS., G. A. R. ON THE FIELD, May 30, 1888.

General Orders No. 6.

The commanding officer desires to return thanks to the officers and members of James L. Bates Camp, No. 36, Sons of Veterans U. S. A., for their prompt and efficient service as escort during the day, and congratulates them on their soldierly appearance and bearing. With such allies, in whose veins flows the blood of war veterans, the Grand Army of the Republic will take a new lease of vigor and zeal. The Commander also wishes to thank the commanding officer of the Fusiliers and his detachment for their creditable and true soldierly appearance. Also the Commander wishes to thank the company commanders, the officers and members of the Post, for the admirable manner in which they have performed the exacting duties of the day, and in dismissing the parade he extends to each and all an expression of hearty good will.

By order of
BENJ. S. LOVELL, Post Commander.
CHAS. W. HASTINGS, Adjutant.

The column was then dismissed, and the Sons of Veterans escorted the Fusiliers to the railroad station, when after cheers had been exchanged the latter command embarked on the train for Boston.

Notes.

Early in the morning a detachment under command of Adj. Hastings decorated 10 soldiers graves at the Pond st. cemetery, and 8 graves at the Union st. cemetery. 25 graves at the Catholic cemetery were also decorated by the East Weymouth comrades, on their way to the rendezvous.

The number of soldiers and sailors graves decorated was 207.

There are 57 soldiers graves in the Village Cemetery—the largest number in any one burial place in this town.

This year was the ninth consecutive year that the Temple Drum Corps has appeared with the Post on Memorial day, and as usual they gave perfect satisfaction.

The music by Martland's Brockton Band was of the best character and aided largely in the interest of the parade. The corps made a fine appearance in their new uniforms of blue.

Mrs. B. S. Lovell and daughters, also Mrs. J. P. Lovell, accompanied the procession in a barouche, over much of the route.

Among the nice vehicles in the procession was a new and nobby hack recently added to the stock of Otis Cushing, and in charge of Mr. Harris, of his force of drivers.

The offerings of flowers were not so lavish as they have been in some years, owing to the scarcity of blossoms, and a few purchases were made of florists to ensure a full supply.

The Concert.

In the evening Reynolds hall was well filled, the attraction being an exceptionally fine concert by the Brockton Band, assisted by Miss Kittie Rankin the wonderful child cornetist, and Mr. Harry A. Bower, the talented xylophone soloist, the programme being

1, Overture, Semiramide, Band
2, Xylophone Solo, Electric Polka, Mr. Bower
3, Reverie, The Wayside Chapel, with bell accompaniment and quartette in the distance, Band
4, Cornet Solo, The Favorite, Band
5, Selection from Zampa, Band
6, Piccolo Solo, Tom Tit Polka, Mr. J. Eiffe
7, Ten Minutes with the Minstrels, depicting an old time minstrel party with Bones, Tambourine, Sand Jig, Clogs and Walk around, Band
8, Xylophone Solo, Right Bower Polka, Mr. Bower
9, Cornet Solo, Lizzie Polka, Miss Rankin
10, Plantation Echoes, Familiar Airs, Band

Public Hall.

The leasing of Clapp's hall building for business purposes deprives this village of a convenient place for public resort, and a correspondent suggests that it would be in order for the business committee of the Weymouth Improvement Association to consider the matter of erection of a commodious building at some central point, in which a large hall could be located, and he thinks that it would pay capitalists to invest in such an enterprise.

Another question of public interest is also alluded to—the enticement of new business to the village, a measure which is meeting with success in other places, especially in Abington, where the shoe manufacturer, C. E. Tucker, has been induced to remove from Avon and locate there. The facilities for business here are certainly equal to those of any other place, and the writer thinks it is time that something was done in this line of progress.

Republican Club.

A meeting of the Weymouth Republican Club was held last Tuesday evening at Engine hall. The different parts of the Ward were well represented, and considerable business was attended to. The organization of the club was completed and the officers are as follows:

President, J. H. Flint, Esq.
Vice Presidents: J. B. Rhines, Lorenzo White, C. G. Easterbrook, George E. Porter, A. W. Clapp, John J. Loud, Francis Ambler, C. A. Chessman, E. E. Richards.
Secretary, A. E. Newhall.
Treasurer, N. O. Smith.
Executive Committee: J. E. Hunt, Chairman, F. M. Drown, F. D. Bond, J. T. Pease, E. T. Jordan, D. J. Pierce, H. A. Richards, C. E. Bicknell, H. L. White, A. A. Linton, E. C. Porter, Arthur E. Pratt, Howard Poole, H. F. Perry.

By vote of the club, A. E. Newhall was elected to represent the club on the executive committee of the State League. The club will secure permanent headquarters very soon, which will be kept open until after election. The secretary reports a large increase in the membership of the club since the first meeting.

The Entertainment

Given by the Monatiquot Yacht Club at the club house last Friday evening, was largely attended, and the festivities were kept up until midnight. Clam chowder was served in the banquet hall at 6.30 o'clock, and at 7.30 the company gathered in the audience room to enjoy the pleasures of the programme of songs by Mr. Theo. P. Willey, banjo solos by Mr. Geo. L. Shaw, violin solos by Master Jamie Hunt, and piano music by Miss Rika Hunt and Mr. Lewis E. Tilden, followed by dancing to the music of Hartshorn's Orchestra, of Boston.

Capt. Garey's Report.

Following is the summary of the report of Capt. A. J. Garey, liquor officer, for the month ending May 19:—Searches in East Weymouth, 5; Weymouth, 4; South Weymouth, 1; total, 10. Warrants for keeping liquor nuisances have been served on 6, of Weymouth. Seizures from expresses, 1 at East Weymouth; 1 at South Weymouth. Convictions—Lorenzo T. Brown, fined $50 and costs; Catherine Sullivan, fined $50 and costs; Annie O'Connor, pleaded guilty, to be sentenced July 1; John Sullivan, pleaded guilty, to be sentenced June 1; Andrew Tracy, fined $75 and costs; James Keating, fined $50 and costs; James Bresnehan, held for grand jury, for liquor nuisance.

Memorial Tribute.

Among the floral decorations of the grave of comrade Frederic Thayer Bicknell, in the Village Cemetery, on Memorial day, was an elegant bouquet of lovely and costly flowers, the gift of Mrs. Charles Hunt, who has contributed a like testimony of esteem every year since his death at the close of the war. Mr. Bicknell was employed in the factory of Mr. Hunt at the time of his enlistment in the army, and was held in high esteem by the family.

Birthday Party.

A party of the young friends of Miss Angie Gutterson assembled at her parents' residence on Commercial street, last Friday evening, to observe her 15th birthday anniversary, among the visitors being the members of her class in the High school, who presented her with a plush collar and cuff box. Other presents were also made, and the evening was pleasantly passed, a collation being provided.

Closed.

Rev. S. J. Axtell closed his labors as pastor of the Baptist church in this village last Sunday. He expects to take a trip westward about the middle of June, having been invited to deliver an address on Christian Education before the members of Central University in Pella, Iowa.

Notice.

Butterine has for some time been used in various families of this place. Those who have used it have so highly recommended it that we have taken out a license for its sale, either in kegs or single pound. It is a healthy and nutritious article and has no equal for cooking purposes. We desire to show it to our customers and the trade. Please call and sample it.

3t PHILLIPS & BACON, Grocers.

Sunday Evening Service.

Next Sunday evening at the Union church, short addresses will be made by three or four interesting speakers on matters connected with the interests of the negro, the Indian and the Chinese.

Rider Haggard's Latest.

Everything written by Haggard is eagerly read. Each new story by this popular author is declared by his admirers to surpass the last. The story on which he has been at work for months will be published exclusively in the BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, commencing next Sunday, June 3.

Sold.

Mr. A. L. Hobart has sold his large passenger carriage "Pilgrim" to New Bedford parties, and conveyed it as far as Taunton Monday, over the road. In returning through West Bridgewater he found a party of sports engaged in a cock-fight in front of a private residence.

Leather Trade.

Mr. Geo. E. Fairbanks is re-dressing a large lot of leather for Shippee & Co. of Milford, and has several customers in Lynn and other places. His work is first class and gives satisfaction to every customer. A lot of glove finished stock finished by him for one of our local firms is hard to beat in quality of work.

The machinery in the mills of the Weymouth Iron Co. is to be taken out and the buildings are to be disposed of at private sale.

BRIEFS.

Mr. J. C. Hayden, formerly in the grocery trade at Cohasset, has taken a position with the new firm of White & Bates, grocers.

Mr. F. H. Tilden has been engaged this week in preparing a nice lawn at the front of the Lewis Pratt place, Front street.

The Sunday school concert at the Baptist church last Sunday evening was fully attended, and a programme of exercises arranged by Miss Emma Thayer was interestingly carried out by the children of the school.

Mr. F. A. Sulis has purchased the lot of land on Phillips street owned by Chas. W. Stevens, and has broken ground for the erection of a dwelling to be occupied by him on completion.

Some twenty of the young friends of Harold L. Axtell pleasantly remembered his twelfth birthday, by giving him a surprise party last Friday evening.

Mr. Chas. Torrey, son of Dr. Turner Torrey, formerly of Weymouth, was married at Anacostia, D. C., Monday, May 14, to Miss Annie Westwedge, of West Virginia.

Orator John Foster Gray was at Milford Memorial day, and received a boisterous greeting and $1.57 in coin. He also spoke in Holbrook Tuesday evening, and was invited to "call again when he couldn't stay so long."

"The use and abuse of Creeds, or the present theological dilemma," will be the subject of Rev. Mr. Eaton's sermon in the Universalist church next Sunday morning.

Through our columns we again announce the great value of MORGAN'S Flaxseed Cough and Lung Syrup.

Letters advertised June 1:—John Foley, James Fox, Miss Nellie Keen, Mrs. Annie Pitts, Abbie Thibault.

JAMES W. RAND, P. M.

Committees of societies, churches, etc., are invited to examine the Improved Weymouth Ice Cream at Vaughan's.

Delegations from this town were present at the Norfolk conference of Cong'l Young People's societies in Brockton Tuesday. It was voted to hold a convention next fall. A reception was held in the evening.

Dr. W. L. Roberts, dentist, has removed his office to the house on Washington street vacated by Mr. D. J. Pierce.

An adjourned special meeting of the Weymouth Historical Society will be held at the Tufts Library on Wednesday, June 6, at 7.30 o'clock p. m. A full attendance is requested.

The social dance under the auspices of the Social Club, held at Clapp's Tuesday evening, was a decided success. The music was by Stetson's Orchestra.

Benj. F. Smith has sold his absorbent cotton business at Dedham, and will soon start anew in this vicinity. It is reported that he has secured a part of the Jenkins factory at East Braintree.

Try a box of Vaughan's Improved Ice Cream.

A party in town is raising three young gray squirrels by feeding them with milk from a spoon four times a day.

The new life saving station at Point Allerton, Hull, is to be equipped with the Hunt & Son guns.

White Bronze.

Attention is called to the advertisement of White Bronze monumental structures, for which Rev. J. Baker is agent, an elegant specimen of which has been erected in the Highland cemetery. Many elaborate monuments have been erected throughout the country, to the memory of the soldier dead, and the recommendations from prominent men are strongly in favor of the durability and beauty of this material.

Removed.

Mr. D. J. Pierce has moved into the new dwelling-house which has been erected for him by contractor Cushing of Hingham on Mr. Pierce's grounds, Webb street. The site is one of the finest in the village, and the stylish structure makes a charming feature of the landscape.

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

Mr. John A. Holbrook, we regret to learn, is confined to his bed with an abscess in his throat. Mr. Holbrook has performed his services as representative with great success. Laboring men, temperance people and Republicans as well as Democrats, speak of his work with much praise. Doubtless were there another election now he would gain more support than before. It is hoped that he will have a speedy recovery.

The owners of the Bayview cottage at Fort Point are erecting a new cottage and stable, on their lot there, J. F. Vinal having the contract.

At the meeting of the Boston Association of Universalists a committee reported in favor of dropping the three parishes of Weymouth, also those of Quincy, Canton and Stoughton from the association, at their request, that they may join the Old Colony Association. The report was accepted.

The new cottage of Harry Humphrey at Fort Point, is finished and ready for occupancy.

H. C. Chubbuck is confined to the house with rheumatism.

T. E. Kinder has opened a wheelwright shop near the blacksmith's.

The pastor of the Old North church expects to preach an anniversary sermon next Sunday in connection with the 250th anniversary, at 2.30 p. m.

Stephen A. Bicknell has procured a cigar license and can be found at the North Weymouth depot on the arrival and departure of all trains.

"The use and the abuse of Creeds, or the present theological dilemma," will be the subject of Rev. Mr. Eaton's sermon in the Universalist church next Sunday afternoon.

It is reported that three teachers in the Atheny school will resign their situations at the close of the present term.

The work on the public park has progressed rapidly since the commencement of operations, but as the funds are getting low it is hoped that the enterprising people of Old Spain will be specially interested in improving and beautifying the park and contribute liberally in money that the work may go on, otherwise it will have to stop. A cordial invitation is extended to all to give as they feel able.

The North Weymouth Cemetery Sewing Circle will meet with Mrs. Chas. H. Newton next Tuesday evening, at 7.30 o'clock.

N. M.

An illustrated lecture, "Across the Continent, or Scenes from the Wonderland of America," will be given on Wednesday evening, June 6, at the chapel on Zion's Hill, by the Rev. E. S. Ufford of the Hingham Baptist church. Admission 10 cents.

There will be a special meeting in the vestry of the Methodist Episcopal church next Tuesday, to take action in relation to fixing the grounds around the church. It is expected that the land will be regraded and the front sodded, with a neat driveway in front.

A new fence has been built around the lot of land on East and Commercial streets, at the residence of W. H. Cushing. At many other points fences are rapidly becoming a thing of the past, much to the improvement of estates.

Last evening Mr. Walter M. Dizer gave his wife a surprise party by inviting a number of friends to their home to celebrate her birthday. There was dancing, supper and games, and the evening was one of social enjoyment to all.

Last Friday evening the Weymouth Band called upon another of their newly wedded number, George E. Gardner, and passed a pleasant evening. The Band was to present him with a French clock, but that article did not arrive as expected and will be sent to him on arrival.

Last Friday evening the Sunday school class of Mr. C. B. Cushing, with their ladies, paid a fraternal call upon Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Merchant, and presented Mr. Merchant, who is one of the class, with an elegant footrest. The evening was pleasantly passed in social enjoyment.

Mrs. Dr. S. L. Baldwin, of Boston, will speak at the Methodist Episcopal church next Sunday at 10.30 o'clock, on "Missionary work among the Chinese." Mrs. Baldwin spent 20 years among them, and since her return has taken a great deal of interest among that people in Boston.

Reception.

A number of the members of the Monatiquot Yacht Club tendered an informal reception last Monday evening to Miss L. Charlotte Lovell, at the Club house. Col. and Mrs. Lovell and Miss Lovell, Miss Ida Sheppard and Miss Lillian McGregor received the guests. The reception lasted an hour, when there was dancing and refreshments, Miss Lovell and Mr. Charles McGregor opening the waltz.

The Unitarian Building Committee wish to say to their many friends, who during the past two months have subscribed so liberally to the building fund, that although the collector has not been able to attend to the work of taking up subscriptions at the time agreed upon, the plans have not fallen through, and the builder and architect are still busy on specifications and design. The amounts pledged will be called for at an early date.

Rev. and Mrs. George C. King, Mr. and Mrs. Z. L. Bicknell, Mr. and Mrs. Jotham Salisbury, Joseph A. Cushing and Robert T. Bicknell, were present last Wednesday evening, at the reception given by the Boston Methodist Social Union to Bishop William Taylor of Africa, at the Meionaon, and under the head of "Order of Business" Rev. Mr. King, as a special committee, read a set of resolutions on the death of Leavitt Bates, who was one of the directors. At the next meeting, Bishop Foster will give reminiscences of his 50 years as a Methodist preacher.

The musicale given at the M. E. Church vestry last Friday evening, by the pupils of Miss M. Abbie Rogers, was attended by a large number of their parents and families. The programme contained some twenty numbers, all of which were received with much applause, especially the piano trio, "Pas Redouble," by Masters Arthur C. Newton, Harry W. Walker and Davis B. Clapp, and in fact the rendering of all the numbers reflected great credit upon Miss Rogers' ability as a teacher.

The May party which for several good reasons had been postponed from time to time, took place in the vestry of the Methodist church last Monday evening and was well attended, considering the weather. Following was the programme, which was well received:—Piano duet, Fred Bearse and Miss May Joy; May Pole march by twelve little girls dressed in white; vocal solo, W. H. Pratt; reading, Miss Lizzie Tirrell; selection, Neilson Quartette; reading, Miss Maude Locke; solo, E. Walter Arnold; piano solo, Fred Bearse; reading, Miss Susie Litchfield; duet, Misses Garey and French; reading, Miss Marion Cain; vocal solo, LaForrest Lincoln; selection, Neilson Quartette. After the entertainment ice cream and cake were for sale.

Runaways.

Thursday noon of last week two girls of 18 and 15 years, ran away from home. The girls had good homes but were wayward, and when they left town were shabbily dressed. Word was received Saturday that they were at the Arlington House, Boston, and the chief of police was telegraphed to find them. Sunday night the girls arrived in town and went to the residence of Mrs. Susan Lamer, telling her they had walked from Boston, were very tired, and wanted to sleep there until morning, when they would go home. Monday morning, about 5 o'clock, while Mrs. Lamer had gone to inform the girls parents of their arrival, they again left, this time going in the direction of Hingham. Meanwhile the parents of the girls received a letter from them, stating that they were in Scituate and tired of that kind of life, and Tuesday they returned home sadder but wiser, and it is hoped they have learned a lesson which will last during their lifetime.

Pilgrim Fathers.

Wessagusset Colony No. 111, United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, was instituted at Grand Army hall last Tuesday evening by Deputy Supreme Governor Albert A. May, of Beverly, and Deputy Supreme Sergeant-at-Arms Everett L. White, of Somerville. There were thirty-three petitioners for the charter, and after they had been duly initiated, the following officers were elected and installed for the term ending December 31st:—Governor, Arthur B. Grover; Lieut. Gov., George T. Magee; Treas., John A. Raymond; Collector, A. M. Newcomb; Sec'y, Wendall T. Diser; Chaplain, Mercy P. Gardner; Sergeant-at-Arms, Arthur V. Bowers; Deputy do., Ezra Wilder; Sentinel Inner Gate, Emma F. Raymond; do. Outer Gate, Nelson W. Gardner; Medical Examiner Dr. Joseph Chase Jr.; Organist, Robert F. Raymond; Trustees, Robert F. Raymond, Arthur B. Grover, Charles A. Redmond, William T. Rice, E. Alberta Raymond. The Order is a social, fraternal institution, combined with a carefully graded mutual assessment plan of insurance. It is confined exclusively to New England. The Order has been organized nine years and has had but one hundred and seventy-eight deaths, and sixty-seven assessments, a fraction over seven per year. For the benefit of others who may wish to join as charter members, the charter will remain open for one month. The Colony meets the first and third Wednesday nights of the month at Grand Army hall.

LOVELL'S CORNER.

There will be a memorial service at the Porter M. E. Church next Sunday at 2 p. m. The pastor, Rev Mr. Chace, who was an officer in the Army of the Potomac, will deliver an appropriate address. All members of the G. A. R., and other old soldiers, are cordially invited to be present. Seats will be reserved for them.

The concert given in the vestry last Sunday evening was largely attended. Temperance was the subject of the evening and appropriate recitations and songs were rendered by members of the Sunday school. Remarks were made by Rev. F. A. Chace and Mr. Bradford Hawes.

Rev. F. A. Chace will preach a Memorial sermon in the Porter church Sunday, June 3, at 2 p. m. The members of the G. A. R., for whom seats will be reserved, are cordially invited to be present.

A game of base ball was played here last Saturday afternoon, between the Hinghams and Lovell's Corners. It resulted in favor of the Hingham club, Score 7 to 5.

BRAINTREE NOTES.

Coal Trade.

The new wharf of Messrs. J. F. Sheppard & Sons, at Quincy Point, is completed, the depth of water in front being about 19 feet. They have also built a large addition to their coal sheds at the Point. A schr. with a cargo of 1050 tons coal has arrived and two more with 1000 tons each, are on the way to the Point.

Base Ball.

The Weymouth North High School Nine played its first game of the season at South Braintree last Tuesday afternoon against the Braintree High School Nine, and won an easy victory by the score of 30 to 5. The Weymouth boys presented the following nine:—Keefe, p.; Murphy, c.; Phillips, 1.b.; Peterson, 1b.; Ash, 3b.; Corriden, s.s.; Hunt, c.f.; Sullivan, c.f.; Tucker, r.f. The features of the game were the splendid work of the battery, Keefe striking out twelve men and allowing his opponents but seven hits, and a fine catch by Hunt.

Obituary.

Oliver Hazard Perry Niles died in Boston Sunday, May 27, aged 68 years, 11 months and 3 days. Mr. Niles had been in feeble health for more than two years, and had suffered during these years from a complication of diseases, but the immediate cause of death was heart complaint. He was born in Randolph June 21st, 1820, and came to Braintree in the year 1842, where for many years he followed the occupation of boot making. In 1864-2-3 he acted as messenger at the State House. He was a prominent member of the old Stoughton Singing Society. In the year 1865 he secured a situation as inspector at the Custom house, which office he held for nearly fifteen years. For many years he acted as Marshal at the Mechanics Fair, and was also for many years a prominent member and officer in the old Braintree Militia Company. He had been twice married, his second wife being still living, but there was no issue by the last marriage. By the first there were seven children, who with the exception of the youngest son, George P., have all passed away. In the year 1885 he removed to Boston, where he lived until his death. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon, at the Cong'l church in Braintree, and the remains were interred in the family lot in the Braintree cemetery.

L. W. Hayward's yacht Diadem, one of the "rattlers" of the Monatiquot Yacht Club fleet, took first prize in fourth class in the "Cutter Cigar" regatta at South Boston Memorial day.

William Orr of East Braintree caught one of his feet in some machinery in a factory where he was at work in that place Friday afternoon and received injuries which it is thought will necessitate amputation of the limb. He was removed to the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, for treatment.

Rev. John Crane, one of Braintree's sons, delivered an oration Memorial day in the Baptist church at Sheldonville before the G. A. R. Post of that place.

The boiler works at Quincy Point have received the machinery, but work has not yet been commenced. The principal owner of the works is the engineer of the West End Land Co., of Boston.

The Quincy Yacht Club has decided to build their house 30x45, with provision for enlargement at some future time.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

The annual supper of the Improvement Association will take place at Music hall, Tuesday evening, June 19, at 7.30 o'clock. The committee of arrangements are H. A. Thomas, E. R. Downs and A. O. Crawford. Each member is entitled to only two tickets, except at the discretion of the committee of arrangements, on account of the large membership of the association. The tickets will be twenty-five cents each, and may be procured of the following committee, who will call on each member:—L. T. Madan, G. F. Hayden, E. N. Mayberry, Alvin Hollis, W. F. Tribou, A. E. Vining, James Moore, L. B. Joy, Lysander Heald, Geo. B. Loud. The bill of fare will include strawberries and cream, ice cream and cake, hot rolls and coffee, fruit, etc. Cake and pastry will be solicited by the following committee:—Mrs. R. W. Hunt, Mrs. A. F. Bullock, Mrs. E. R. Downs, Mrs. J. A. Deane, Mrs. James Moore, Mrs. E. P. Tirrell, Mrs. L. V. Tirrell, Mrs. J. S. White, Mrs. J. H. Christie, Mrs. Wendell Shaw, Mrs. James Tirrell, Mrs. G. F. Hayden, Mrs. J. E. May, Mrs. W. H. Hocking, Mrs. J. R. Newell, Mrs. W. F. Tribou, Miss Alice Raymond. This committee will also prepare the table with the assistance of Mr. A. B. Raymond, who has been secured to provide tables, dishes, etc. Good speakers will be present from neighboring towns, and the occasion will be a large village gathering for sociability and enjoyment.

Quite a stir was created here Sunday afternoon about three o'clock, by the breaking out of fire at the house occupied by Wm. Hollis, near Otis Cushing's, and owned by Rev. Jacob Baker. Some one driving by saw fire on the roof and went in and told the family, who were eating dinner. Mr. Hollis quickly made his way to the top of the house and by pouring on a few pailfuls of water, checked the fire. Meantime an alarm had been sounded, the chemical engine, hook and ladder truck, and a large crowd were in the street, but fortunately there was no further need of water or hose. Quite a hole was made in the roof, and had it not been for the early discovery of the sparks by the gentleman driving by and the presence of mind of the occupant, the house would have been in flames and adjacent property would have been very much in danger.

Estes & Willis have stocked their grocery store with a large and first class assortment of goods and are now ready to fill orders. The store has a very inviting appearance, the members of the firm are naturally genial and accommodating, and will pick up considerable transient patronage in addition to their regular patrons.

Mr. J. M. Whitcomb is making some extensive alterations about his residence which will be a noticeable improvement to this pleasant locality. The lawn mower, carpenters and plenty of paint, are very effective agents of improvement ideas.

Mr. Russell White, a native of Holbrook, and well known to many here while in the Boston fire department, is at present chief of the fire patrol of San Francisco. While in the latter city Mr. Geo. Loud called on Mr. White at his elegant engine house, where the system was perfectly explained. Being asked how long he thought it took for horse, wagon and driver to be in readiness after the alarm struck, Mr. Loud replied "nine seconds perhaps." "Oh, that's Boston time," said Mr. White. Upon trial, just five seconds were consumed, when everything was ready for the start. Mr. White was always considered one of the most reliable firemen in the Boston service, and he has made his experience and ability count in his important position at the Golden Gate city.

The Union Quartette sang at Rockland for the second time this season, last week Thursday evening. They do work equal to many of the city quartettes.

The Bates school will be fitted up with steam heating apparatus during the coming summer, thanks to the interest shown by the member of the school board from Ward 5. Some children suffered much the past winter from the cold, and the steam will prevent much of this, and be quite as cheap in the end.

Mr. William H. Sargent received Tuesday from the patent office at Washington, the papers which secure to him all the rights of his new patent faucet filter, upon which he has been working for a year and a half. The filter is very simple and effective in its construction and we look to see it become very popular when put upon the market.

Miss Annie Deane was one of the soloists at the British American anniversary at Odd Fellows hall, Boston, the other evening.

Miss Nellie Nolan and Mr. Howard Joy were among the artists who appeared at the Catholic fair at Rockland recently.

The South High school base ball nine are making a fine reputation so far this season. Saturday they played the Franklins at East Weymouth with a score of 20 to 5 in favor of South Weymouth. Memorial day they played the Centre Abingtons at the latter's field, beating them by a score of 12 to 6. At East Weymouth, Bert Bass, the pitcher for our home team, struck out 12 men, and at Centre Abington 10.

Wednesday Night Club.

At a meeting of the Wednesday Night Club, held May 30, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, in the Providence of God, our fellow-member, George W. Bates, has been removed from among us,

Resolved, That the Wednesday Night Club hereby bear witness to his faithfulness in the discharge of the duties which devolved upon him as a good citizen and a member of this society.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy in their affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and also to the local papers for publication.

To the public:—There is no question in my mind of durability of the White Bronze Monument. Refined zinc, when cast alone and in its pure state, and well placed in contact with silver, platinum, copper, , is indestructible from the elements, outlasting best granites without the discoloration that marbles always shows after a few years' exposure. No er material is so well fitted to withstand the atmospheric changes. Judging from a scientific and mical standpoint, it is my opinion that these monuments will last thousands of years.

WEYMOUTH SUNDAY SERVICES.

By invitation of Rev. Willis D. Leland, Reynolds Post 58, G. A. R. attended Divine service in the Pilgrim church North Weymouth, last Sunday, at 2.30 p. m. About 150 comrades and guests formed in line at Thomas' corner and marched to the church, where they were favored with an eloquent and appropriate address by the pastor. The interior of the house was tastefully adorned with flags, long streamers of red and white stretching from the chandelier at the centre to the corners of the walls. Back of the pulpit which was draped with the national flags, and in front of the gallery, was a large shield in the centre of two large flags, and on a table in front of the pulpit, covered with a flag, was a bank of potted plants. The small chandeliers on the sides, back and centre were covered with a large number of small flags, making the entire ornamentation very pretty and effective.

The programme of services was as follows:

Organ voluntary by the organist, Prof. R. F. Raymond.

Invocation by the pastor.

Solo by Mr. C. H. Newton, "One flag, one country still," followed by "Blessed are the dead who in the Lord are sleeping," by a choir of twenty voices.

Scripture readings from 44th Psalm, Joshua 1: 1-9, and Psalm 93.

Singing of hymn 1104, "Prayer for Protection."

Prayer and response by organ.

Hymn 1106, "America," by audience.

Address by Rev. W. D. Leland.

Anvil chorus and benediction.

As there were doubtless many unable to be present who would have been pleased to listen to the address, we present the following abstract.

Abstract of Rev. Mr. Leland's Address.

NEH. iv. 14: Be not ye afraid of them: remember the Lord, which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons and your daughters, your wives and your houses.

These words, the speaker said, formed the command to the Jews in a national crisis. Before opportunity to doubt, came the words of their commander, Be not afraid of them: remember the Lord and fight. Inspired words!

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic, such a call came to you. This mighty nation, beneath the sturdy patriotism of its citizens, was growing up to its bright destiny from its original wilderness. In its illustrious progress it met enemies that would dash it into fragments, and there came to you this summons. Before the week after the first gun was fired had passed, you in response to the divine command were making preparations. The deep sense of duty to God, the welfare of posterity, was in your hearts and you went forth—751 of you, of whom 152 re-enlisted. These soldiers of Weymouth, members of more than 40 different regiments, were in every rebel state, served in almost every corps of the army and were present at almost every important siege and battle from Bull Run to Apomatox Court House. You were present at Vicksburg and New Orleans; you fought at South Mountain and Antietam; you were at Gettysburg, and members from this village commanded the first companies that entered Richmond. Such was your courage and bravery that you have left behind 99 immortal dead. Of these some rest in the shade of Fair Oaks and the solitude of White Oak Swamp; some fell on the fields of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Chattanooga; some are in that awful Wilderness, on the bloody field of Petersburg and Coal Harbor, or the horrible prisons of Andersonville and Salisbury.

Now to you belongs a large share of the glory of the results. Through your efforts and the efforts of those that fought with you, this land is a unit and this government the most stable on earth. Through this strength, compared with any other great country, here life is safer, justice is quicker, peace more profound, prosperity greater, religion freer and purer. Because of your efforts this is a land of freemen: not only are the manacles fallen from the slave, but from sea to sea there is liberty for all. To you and to your honored dead we owe unbounded gratitude, as well as to the mothers and fathers and wives who, enduring untold pain, consecrated you to the service, and to those whose wisdom managed the affairs you left behind and that found the sinews of war.

It is to honor you that this large company is gathered today. It is to express gratitude to you that these flowers are gathered, these peans are rung and these prayers are said; it is for your perpetual memory this day is set apart. In this village there is a sense of gratitude deep and true, for it is to be remembered that it was in this village citizens first assembled to prepare for the war; that citizens of this village initiated movements for a proper memorial, which resulted in the shaft on Burial hill. Coming as you do today, with the loss of six comrades within a year, we know that the Grand Army has met with an irreparable loss. Here and elsewhere there is mourning with you in the loss of such noble patriots and such worthy citizens. Let this love and gratitude ever be; let there ever be these processions and music and flowers and assemblies. Let each, as he loves true patriotism, praise that of the past. As each would be true to his country today, let him be earnest in his admiration and recollection of patriotism's great examples.—Let the same sentiment be in the government of the land. In the day of prosperity to break contracts made with the soldiers in days of danger, is wrong; to slight those maimed and halt and made honestly poor in their country's service, while there is immense wealth in the treasury, is contemptible. To practice parsimony to those who gave all they had to their country, is mean. Let there ever be the broadest, highest and deepest appreciation of those to whom this government owes its existence, both now and forever.

The results of the war (continued the speaker) were great, but the results of peace are also great. During the thirteen years past the population has increased 30 per cent., the wealth deposited in savings banks enlarged from $49 millions to 2152 millions, or 150 per cent. The capitalists wealth has increased 15 per cent., that of the middle and upper classes 100 per cent., and that of manual labor 200 per cent. Such a mastery of the elements has been made that life is relieved of much of the toil of 25 years ago. A full year's supply of meat and bread for an adult is moved 1000 miles at a cost of less than a day's wages. All the while there has been a promotion in each social class to a higher position, and because of this effort this nation is the richest in the world. It leads the world in manufactures, mining of precious metals, intelligence and health, in the purity and power of its religion and strength of government. These are the results of peace, in which you have had a noble part. They are noble, they are grand. Let us not despise the days of peace; let us cherish peace more than war; let us encourage the spirit of peace in every breast; let us encourage every form of legislation that will secure peace. May one of the fruits of Memorial day be a decided effort for the spirit of peace.

But now some of these successes are attacked. Grand Army of the Republic, think not that your work is done. There are battles yet to be fought; there are great battles to be won. You have fought well in the battles of the past; fight in these: fight like true, brave men; be not afraid of these enemies.

One enemy of the Republic is the attacks upon its fundamental principles. On the one hand is the Mormon, who attacks the home and national sovereignty. Among us are multitudes that have little principle; they disseminate through the press and platform ideas inimical to those of the Republic. Common property, socialistic production, grossest materialism, free love, perfect individualism, are the views of not a scattered few. The way out of these dangers is that every citizen should have a firm and true grasp of fundamental principles; let there be not the least doubt about these principles in your minds; let the bad principles have absolutely no support, utterance or sympathy from you.—Much as you have done, by this fidelity to principle now you will accomplish more.

Another enemy of the Republic is the attacks upon the general intelligence of the people. Intelligence is a priceless boon to any people; it is at the bottom of true religion, domestic happiness, national prosperity. But today there are dangers to it, and one of these is the lethargy and astounding inappreciation of young men. In our own town there is a village of some 1000 inhabitants in which while there are some of higher education, diligent search does not reveal that there is living there one man who has graduated from the High schools of Weymouth, or that there ever was there more than one that did graduate. It is no wonder that the Sup't of schools reports that Weymouth has yet to produce its great man. Young men, let me say to you that if the teachers are what they ought to be, to say nothing of the knowledge, discipline and mental improvement of the curriculum, their personal influence alone will leave such an effect upon your mind and character as to bring to you more of happiness and more of wealth than you can gain by daily wages during school days. A further danger is in the attempt to draw a certain large portion of scholars from the schools or to make the schools sectarian. To establish parochial schools is no doubt the right of any one, but whenever there is an attempt to divert the public funds to sectarian purposes, whatever sect may make the attempt, frankly but firmly say no. When you choose officers choose those worthy of the trust. Let us cherish the schools; but more than this, let us cherish education, intelligence, knowledge, for so far as you secure intelligence so far you secure the ground

She Came From the Clover.

She was brought to the city as flowers are brought—
You will find not a fairer one all the world over—
But none of the city's hard features she's caught,
You can tell by her face she was born 'mid the clover.

Her voice is as pure as the bluebird's low note
In the morns when the rigor of April abating,
And her laugh has the thrill that you hear from the throat
Of the bobolink, flying in May and the mating.

Her teeth are as white as the liquor which flows
When milkweed is wounded; her lips have the redness
Of the prickly-ash berry of scarlet which glows
Full of life, though about it be autumn's gray deadness.

And her breath is as sweet as the liverwort's scent
That is borne with delight by the wooing March zephyr,
And her eyes have the softness and pleadingness blent
In the big, melting eyes of the innocent heifer.

Her warm, fluffy hair has a touch of the gold
In the silk of the corn when it's near to the reaping;
Its mesh s the gleam of the summer enfold—
For it would not depart—in their permanent keeping.

Her thin little ears share the hue of the pink—
The wild pink that grows by the creek's shallow waters—
And her cheeks all the blush of the rose by the brink
Of the same little stream—Nature humors her daughters.

She is fair in the drawing-room. O, she is fair!
But she's strayed from her home, has the beautiful rover,
And she's brought a reflection of all that is there;
You can tell by her face she was born 'mid the clover.

All's Well That Ends Well.

Mr. Perry was an old bachelor and Miss Briggs was an old maid. He lived in the brick house on the hill, and she in the cottage opposite, and they were mortal enemies. He despised her because she kept two cats and a canary, and she loathed him for his affection for a huge mastiff and an old knock-kneed horse.

"Why on earth the man don't try to get a decent horse is more than I can imagine!" she would say, as he plodded up to the door. "I believe that he is too mean and miserly to buy one."

Miss Briggs would have hardly felt pleased had she known that Mr. Perry rode back and forward on this worn-out piece of horseflesh for the purpose of annoying her.

They never spoke, but yet the managed to keep up a perfect warfare, by disagreeable manners and rathful glances.

She sat hour after hour beneath the canary bird in the window, with her cat perched upon the sill and her knitting in her hand, throwing glances of scorn to the opposite side, where he, with cigar and newspaper, received and paid them back with interest.

His detestable dog came over and ran through her garden, destroying all he beautiful tulips and hyacinths, and she gave him a hot bath which sent him howling to his master, and when said master remonstrated, sent word that she would treat him worse next time.

Her little red cow broke through his enclosure and devoured his turnips and cabbages, and he led her home and informed Miss Briggs that a second offence would give her a comfortable pasture in the pound.

For two years they lived and fought, and no one could bring about peace between them. It was a pity, the neighbors all said, for Miss Briggs was a dear little soul, and there was not a finer man in the country than Mr. Perry.

"Julia, my love," said Mrs. Perkins one afternoon, as she entered the cozy parlor, "I am going to have a party, and I want you to come down in the afternoon to tea and remain during the evening. Every one will be there."

"Will the old bach over the way be there?"

"Mr. Perry? Oh, yes! We could not get along without him."

"Then that settles the matter. I sha'n't go."

"Now, Julia, don't be so foolish! If you remain at home he will think that you are afraid of him."

Miss Briggs thought the matter over. Well, it would look a little like that, and she would not have him think so for the world—the conceited wretch!

Mrs. Perkins went home, and it was arranged that Miss Briggs was to spend the afternoon and remain for the party.

She was a pretty little woman, and it was always a puzzle to every one why she never married. She had a round rosy face, clear brown eyes, and beautiful hair, and if she was 30 there was not a smarter woman in town.

She stood before the looking-glass in the chamber, and fastened her lace collar over the neck of her dress with a plain gold brooch, and began to think that she looked very well. There was a bright healthy flush upon her cheek, and her eyes were full of life and beauty.

She walked into Mrs. Perkins' sitting room and found her awaiting her with a smiling face. She thought that she must be in a very good humor, but said nothing, allowing the good lady to smile as long and pleasantly as she wished.

She understood it all when supper time came and Mr. Perkins entered, followed by Mr. Perry. This was a well-laid plan to make the two become friends.

Miss Briggs bit her lips and inwardly vowed that nothing should tempt her to "give that man" her hand in friendship. She hated him and always would.

He was placed directly opposite at the table, and many times forced to pass the biscuits or preserves, and Miss Briggs accepted them, although she declared to Mrs. Perkins after supper that they nearly choked her.

Before evening they were both persuaded to overlook the horse and cow difficulty and be civil, and Miss Briggs was frightened when she found herself talking to him with easy and pleasant familiarity.

The party was a success, and although the sports were generally monopolized by the younger portion, they found room for the old maid and her enemy, and several times they found themselves doing most ridiculous things in the way of paying forfeits.

At the end of the evening Miss Briggs was at the door ready to depart, when he called:

"Miss Briggs, I am going right up your way. Will you ride?"

Would she ride behind that old horse, and beside that detestable man? She was wondering whether she would or not, when Mrs. Perkins came and triumphantly led her out and packed her into the carriage.

It was as dark as pitch, and they had to let the horse go his own way and find it the best he could. He did so very well until they reached the cottage, and then he was bewildered.

Mr. Perry spoke, jerked the reins, but to no purpose. He then took out the whip. Whether his natural dislike to that article or the memory of the indignities he had suffered from the hands of the owner of the cottage overcame him, it is hard to decide, but at all events he kicked up his heels, ran a few yards and fell, overturning the buggy and its precious contents.

Miss Briggs was up in a moment, unharmed, but Mr. Perry was silent as the grave. She ran shouting through the darkness until Mr. Perry's "help" came with a lantern to her assistance.

They found the poor man half dead beneath the carriage, and while Dan was at work, Miss Briggs ran home for her own servant. After much hard labor they succeeded in extricating him from the wreck, but he was senseless, and they bore him home and sent for the doctor. Upon examination they found his leg to be broken, and thus Miss Briggs' enemy was at her mercy.

The days and weeks that followed were dreadful ones to the sufferer, but Miss Briggs never left him. Day and night she stood beside him, and her plump hands administered to every want.

He forgot the cow and his turnips. He forgot the cats and the canary. He only saw a little patient woman, with a pretty face, trim figure, and tender hands—and would you believe it—fell in love with her.

How could he help it? She had sat by him through the dreary days of pain, she had brought him her preserves, and nice invigorating cordials. She had, in all probability, saved his life.

What could he do? Nothing but fall in love.

"Miss Briggs!" he said one day when he was able to sit up.

"Well, Mr. Perry?"

"You have been very good to me, and I feel as though I owe you a great deal."

"There! now stop just where you are. You owe me nothing."

"But would you mind if I trespassed a little further on your good nature?"

"Not at all."

"Well, Miss Briggs, will you take me in charge for the rest of my life?"

"What?"

"Will you marry me? There!"

Miss Briggs blushed, and her answer came thus:

"I will marry you."

There was a wedding in the church a few weeks later, and Mrs. Perkins prepared the wedding supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry live in the brick house, and the cottage is rented to a young man and his wife, to whom Mrs. Perry bequeathed her cats and the canary.

The mastiff and the knock-kneed old horse are with their forefathers.—[Ballou's Monthly.

America's Lucky Day.

In Europe and the eastern part of the world Friday is generally regarded as an unlucky day, and those who are any way superstitious will object to commence any new enterprise or to do anything of importance on that day. Strange to say, Friday has exercised the most important and beneficial effects on America, and may be regarded as her lucky day. There are many citizens, mostly those of foreign birth, who still abhor Friday, although it is shown that the most important events connected with the discovery of the New World and the independence of the United States all happened on a Friday.

It was on Friday, the 3d of August, 1492, that Christopher Columbus set sail from the port of Palos on his voyage of discovery. On Friday, the 12th of October, of the same year, he sighted land. On Friday, the 4th of January, 1493, he set out for Spain to announce his glorious discovery. He landed in Andalusia on Friday, the 15th of March, 1493. On Friday, June 13, 1494, he discovered the continent of America. On Friday, March 5, 1497, Henry VII, King of England, sent Jean Cabot on a mission which led to the decovery of North America. On Friday, November 10, 1565, Melendez founded St. Augustine, the oldest city in the United States. On Friday, November 10, 1620, the Mayflower landed the Pilgrim Fathers at Princetown. On Friday, December 21, 1620, the immigrants reached Plymouth Rock. On Friday, Feb. 22, 1732, Washington was born. On Friday, June 17, 1775, the battle of Bunker Hill was fought. On Friday, October 8, 1778, Burgoyne surrendered at Saratoga. Arnold's treason plot was discovered on Friday, September 23, 1780. Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown on Friday, in October, 1781.—[Church Union.

Did He Resist Arrest?

A Maine sheriff, who was rather undersized, was given a writ of arrest against an Aroostook farmer. Having found the owner of the farm in the field he explained his business, when he was requested to read his writ, which commenced as usual: "You are hereby commanded without delay to take the body of," &c. "All right," says the prisoner, stretching himself back on the grass, "I'm ready." "Oh, but you don't expect me to carry you!" "Certainly, you must take my body, you know!" "Will you wait until I bring a team?" "Can't promise. I may recover from my fatigue by that time." "Well, what must I do?" "You must do your duty." And there he lay immovable until the Sheriff left, when he left also. Did he resist arrest.—[Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Why the Preacher Laughed.

"I only laughed in the pulpit once," said a young preacher. "It happened in this manner: I was preaching at a certain place one Sunday, and during the sermon I caught sight of a young dandy who had a head of fiery red hair. Immediately behind him sat a little urchin. The young scapegrace was amusing himself. He held one of his fingers out near the dandy's hair. After keeping it there for a short time he drew it in, and placing it on his knee commenced pounding it with his other fist, imitating a blacksmith hammering a red-hot nail. The whole thing was so ludicrous that I burst out laughing. I couldn't help it."—[London Tid Bits.

QUEEN KABUTU.

A Powerful and Ferocious Feminine Potentate of Africa.

A Consul's Unsuccessful Attempt to Interview Her.

I met the other day, says a London letter to the New York Times, Mr. H., her Majesty's consul at Zanzibar, on the east coast of Africa, who told me the following tale of this redoubtable person, which well nigh outrivals Mr. Rider Haggard's "She." Mr. H.'s jurisdiction extends over an area of 2,000 miles, all of which he is supposed to visit in his official capacity. Lying toward the interior of the country is a range of impregnable mountains, over which reigns supreme a rich and powerful Queen—Kabutu by name. So terrible is her reputation, and so greatly feared is she by the natives far and wide, that she is never called by her rightful appellation, but is designated as "The Woman Who Lives Over There," with a wave of the arm toward the frowning hills. This queen has two sons, who rule provinces under her to the north and south. She is particularly antagonistic to white men, regarding them not only with abhorrence but with an implacable hatred, dubbing them as monsters, wizards and dealers in magic. And so well is her warlike attitude toward them understood that no white man has ever dared to penetrate into her presence, or indeed, desired to do so since instant death is the least evil that would follow on his temerity. Mr. H., however, was determined to interview this queen of the mountains. His therefore started inland with a strong armed guard and twenty interpreters. It was a long four days' march through the jungle before he reached the outlying territory on the south, over which reigned the son of this terrible monarch. This king being of a more pacific nature and possessed of considerable curiosity, consented to receive the white wizard, and even went so far as to say he would speak a good word for him to the awful Kabutu, and, thus encouraged, the consul proceeded on his way. But after another day's journey his interpreters came to him in great perturbation and told him they had received secret warning from some friendly natives that Kabutu was preparing to greet them in her own peculiar royal style—a dungeon for Mr. H., with perpetual imprisonment to be terminated only with execution, and the slave stakes and torture for his servants and guards. On hearing those sanguinary prophecies, 32 of his men at once deserted and fled, preferring possible death in the trackless jungles to falling into the hands of "The Woman Who Lives Over There." Mr. H., thus rendered almost defenceless, and though knowing himself to be in the greatest danger, dared not show the least fear or apprehension. He prepared to push on further, and would undoubtedly have fallen a victim to Kabutu's cruelty had not a messenger arrived secretly from the friendly son, entreating him to go no further, and saying that his mother's rage and fury at the white monster's presumption knew no bounds; she was already gloating over the varied forms of torture where with to punish him. He further offered at the risk of his own crown, to have Mr. H. conducted back in safety; but the journey must be performed at night and with the greatest circumspection. Taking all things into consideration, Mr. H. decided to accept the friendly King's offer, and quietly moved off and out of the dangerous neighborhood. His way lay for miles and miles through dense jungles and morasses before the borders of civilization were reached. The ferocious Kabutu still remains unvanquished and unseen by the white man, but Mr. H., who returns to his consulate in August, intends in October to push his way into the very presence of the terrible one. In those delightful regions pounds and pence are unknown and of no value, the accepted currency being beads, handkerchiefs, and colored lines; and so particular and fussy are the native mondaines that to offer a bead of last year's shape, a handkerchief of last year's color, or a calico of last year's dye, is a dire offense and of about as much good as a bag of stones would be. The climate is charming, the verdure perpetual, and noxious insects are unknown.

A Strange Breed of Cattle.

A strange breed of wild cattle is found in the high hills skirting the Umpqua valley, Oregon, says a letter in the Boston Transcript. In the mountains, near Riddles and Rosebud, they are probably most plentiful, but they do not venture down in the valley much. They stay on the hills and get water from the living springs which rise there. For the most part they are concealed in the dense growth of oak and fir in those mountains. There is a heavy underbrush, too, so that it is a hard matter to get them. They go in bands of six or eight usually, but at night a herd of forty of fifty get together and lie down in the same yard—that is, they sleep in the same spot, which is usually a secluded place among the trees. A band of wild cattle have been known to get together on a cleared place like this every night for a couple of years. "When feeding, there are always a few bulls to act as sentinels. While the cattle graze in bands of half a dozen or so, they are, nevertheless, close to other bands, so that at an alarm from any one of the bulls, which leisurely feed on higher ground, they all run away together. The cattle are of all colors and will far than deer. It is a hard matter to get a shot at them, for the reason that their scent is so keen. They can smell a man a long distance off. The got wild sin 1853, when the old man Riddles and two or three others of the old settlers came to the valley. Their cow wandered off and could not be found. After two or three years all the pioneers had to do when they wanted beef was to rig out two or three pack animals and go up into the mountains. The cattle had to be killed on sight the same as bear or deer, for they could no more be driven down than deer could. Once killed, they were quartered, packed on the horses, and carried down. They have been hunted a good deal of late years, so that there are not as many as there used to be. A peculiarity about these cattle is that their eyes and horns are jet black. The retina, iris, and the whole apple of the eye are one mass of black. You can't distinguish any difference in any part of it. The horns, too, while being black as ink, are long and sharp. Brought to bay, the Oregon wild cattle are very wicked fighters."

Tea in Upper Burmah.

The Indian Forester publishes the diary of an expedition which recently ascended the Chindwin river in Upper Burmah. The writer describes a village called Kawye, on the river, where the people are wholly devoted to the cultivation of tea, and which may be considered as the southern limit of the tea plant in that region. Before planting the ground is cleared of all undergrowth, but high trees, even those of the densest foliage are left standing. The seedlings, which are usually raised indoors, are planted out in rows at the beginning of the rains, and the first pickings take place when the plant is three or four years old. When it grows too large it is cut down, and three or four new stems shoot out from the stool. The leaves are plucked and immediately steeped in boiling water for a short time; they are then taken out, strained, thoroughly kneaded with the hands, and pressed into bamboo baskets, when they are ready for market, and fetch locally four rupees per 100 lbs. This "pickled tea," as it is called by Europeans, (spet being the Burmese name, is floated down the river in baskets or hollow bamboos, which are carefully kept below the surface of the water to preserve the quality of their contents. Lepet is a favorite among the Burmese, who mix salt and other ingredients with it. The soil along the Chindwin is eminently suitable for tea cultivation; the plant grows wild on all the hills and attains enormous dimensions. One tree which was found neglected in a corner measured eighteen inches in girth at one foot from the ground, and was fully twenty feet high.

The African Puff Adder.

It is essentially a forest animal, its true habitat being among the fallen leaves in the deep shade of the trees by the banks of streams. Now, in such a position, at the distance of a foot or two, its appearance so exactly resembles the forest bed as to be almost indistinguishable from it. I was once just throwing myself down under a tree to rest, when stooping to clear the spot, I noticed a peculiar pattern among the leaves. I started back in horror to find a puff adder of the largest size, its thick body only visible and its fangs within a few inches of my face as I stooped. It was lying concealed among fallen leaves so like itself that but for the exceptional caution which in African travel becomes a habit I should certainly have sat down upon it, and to sit down upon a puff adder is to sit down for the last time. I think this coloration in the puff adder is more than that of warning, and that this semi-somnolent attitude is not always the mere attitude of repose. This reptile lay lengthwise concealed, all but a few inches, among the withered leaves. Now, the peculiarity of the puff adder is that he strikes backward. Lying on the ground, therefore, it commands, as it were, its whole rear, and the moment any part is touched the head doubles backward with inconceivable swiftness and the poison fangs close upon their victim. The puff adder in this way forms a sort of horrid trap set in the very path which may be altogether unperceived till it shuts with a sudden spring upon its prey.—[Good Words.

A Policeman's Lot.

"There is a strange fascination about this police business," remarked an old-time "copper" to a Louisville Times reporter. "Just to show you I will cite several instances. That man," he said, pointing to a stalwart, broad-shouldered fellow, "is a molder, who can easily make $20 a week at his trade. That one is a blacksmith, that one a machinist, this one a bricklayer, and there are three scores of others, all of whom can average $3 a day at their trades. Yet they are all content to work for the city at $2 per day. I don't know why it is, but when a man has had—say a year's experience as a policeman, he can hardly be induced to work at anything else, and if he don't become a common loafer when he is fired, he is never much account."

A Bishop's Curious Blunder.

Apropos of curious blunders, a Boston newspaper tells of one made by Bishop Eastburn at a crowded wedding, where some curious spectators at the back of the church in their anxiety to see, stood on the seats. The bishop saw them and pausing in the service said, in his most solemn tones: "Remembering the sacred character of this house, let all who are present sit upon the floor and put their feet upon the seats!"

If You Feel Tired

Weak and weary, worn out, or run down from hard work, by impoverished condition of the blood or low state of the system, you should take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The peculiar toning, purifying, and vitalizing qualities of this successful medicine are soon felt throughout the entire system, a pelting disease, and giving quick, healthy action to every organ. It tones the stomach, creates an appetite, and rouses the liver and kidneys. Thousands who have taken it with benefit, testify that Hood's Sarsaparilla "makes the weak strong."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I have taken not quite a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and must say it is one of the best medicines for giving an appetite, purifying the blood, and regulating the digestive organs, that I ever heard of. It did me a great deal of good."—MRS. N. A. STANLEY, Canastota, N. Y.

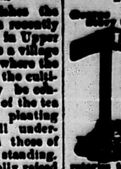
THE LAND OF EXILE.



Mr. Kennan's Work in Siberia—Interesting Articles in The Century.

The Century presents a number of articles on Siberia, and on the great Russian people, the attention to which Americans have been drawn by the exposures in the War Papers, which, by one of the ironies of fate, led to the publication of Mr. Kennan's book, "Siberia and the Exile System," the publication of which has just begun.

Mr. Kennan, who writes the articles, had spent a number of years in Siberia before The Century people started him off to explore the country in their interest, and what he expected to do was to prove that the exile system was not so terrible as it had been described. Knowing that the best views favorable to them, the Russian Government gave him every facility for a thorough examination of all the prisons and mines of Siberia. The Minister of the Interior furnished him with a circular letter which admitted him everywhere, allowing him to travel with exile parties and to make the acquaintance of hundreds of "liberals" in exile. In these papers, beginning with the May Century, Mr. Kennan will describe his journey. In the May number he crosses the Russian frontier. In June he visits the very interesting forwarding prison at Tiumen, built to accommodate 800, where, at the time of Mr. Kennan's visit, 1741 men and women were imprisoned. In rooms built to accommodate forty men, 160 were sleeping. "I breathed as little as I could while I was there," says Mr. Kennan, "but every respiration seemed to pollute my very soul, and I became faint from nausea and lack of oxygen. It was like trying to breathe in an underground hospital-drain."

Mr. Kennan's articles are torn out of the copies of The Century which enter Russia; they, as well as Mr. Kennan himself, being now on the Russian black-list. But other countries are reading what Mr. Kennan writes. The articles are being translated into Polish, and they are appearing also in the organ of the Russian liberals at Geneva. Even a Dutch newspaper published on the Island of Java is reprinting them in four-page supplements.

There are many blessings attached to poverty. And riches have their share too.

May to Bell.

Dear Bell: Will write you a short letter To say I'm wonderfully better; How much that means you ought to know, Who saw me just one month ago. Thin, nervous, fretful, white as chalk, Almost too weak to breathe or talk; Head throbbing, as if fit for breaking, A weary, ever-present aching. But now life seems a different thing: I feel as glad as bird on wing! I say, and fear no contradiction, That Pierce's Favorite Prescription Is grand! Why, I'd have died without it! Ma thinks there's no mistake about it. It's driven all my ills away: Just come and see. Yours ever, MAY.

What a Dance!

I suffered with fever, hot head and foul breath, With a stomach disordered—was sick unto death. I bore it a week—surely I was a dunce— Then I took a few "Pellets"—they cured me at once.

What a dance, indeed, to neglect such a remedy and suffer a week, when quick relief could have been found in Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets.

OUR FIELD OF SUCCESS.

NASAL, THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES. The treatment of Diseases of the Air Passages and Lungs, such as Chronic Catarrh in the Head, Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, both through correspondence and at our institutions, constitutes an important specialty. We publish three separate books on Nasal, Throat and Lung Diseases, which give much valuable information, viz: (1) A Treatise on Consumption, Laryngitis and Bronchitis; price, post-paid, ten cents. (2) A Treatise on Asthma, Catarrh or Phthisis, giving new and successful treatment; price, post-paid, ten cents. (3) A Treatise on Chronic Catarrh in the Head; price, post-paid, two cents.

DISEASES OF DIGESTION. Dyspepsia, "Liver Complaint," Obstinate Constipation, Chronic Diarrhœa, Tape-worms, and kindred affections, are among these chronic diseases in the successful treatment of which our specialists have attained great success. Our Complete Treatise on Diseases of the Digestive Organs will be sent to any address on receipt of ten cents in postage stamps.

KIDNEY DISEASES. BRIGHT'S DISEASE, DIABETES, and kindred maladies, have been very largely treated, and cures effected in thousands of cases which had been pronounced beyond hope. These diseases are readily diagnosticated, or determined, by chemical analysis of the urine, without a personal examination of patients, who can, therefore, generally be successfully treated at their homes. The study and practice of chemical analysis and microscopical examination of the urine in our consideration of cases, with reference to correct diagnosis, in which our institution long ago became famous, has naturally led to a very extensive practice in diseases of the urinary organs.

CAUTION. These diseases should be treated only by a specialist thoroughly familiar with them, and who is competent to ascertain the exact condition and stage of advancement which the disease has made (which can only be ascertained by a careful chemical and microscopical examination of the urine), for medicines which are curative in one stage or condition do positive injury in others.

Being in constant receipt of numerous inquiries for a complete work on the nature and curability of these maladies, written in a style to be easily understood, we have published a large, illustrated Treatise on these diseases, which will be sent to any address on receipt of ten cents in postage stamps.

BLADDER DISEASES. INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER, STONE IN THE BLADDER, Gravel, Enlarged Prostate Gland, Retention of Urine, and kindred affections, may be included among those in the cure of which our specialists have achieved extraordinary success. These are fully treated of in our Illustrated Pamphlet on Urinary Diseases. Sent by mail for 10 cts. in stamps.

STRICTURE. STRICTURES AND URINARY FISTULÆ.—Hundreds of cases of the worst form of stricture, many of them greatly aggravated by the careless use of instruments in the hands of inexperienced physicians and surgeons, causing false passages, urinary fistulæ, and other complications, annually consult us for relief and cure. That no case of this class is too difficult for the skill of our specialists is proved by cures reported in our illustrated treatise on these maladies, to which we refer with pride. To intrust this class of cases to physicians of small experience, is a dangerous proceeding. Many a man has been ruined for life by so doing, while thousands annually lose their lives through unskilful treatment. Send particulars of your case and ten cents in stamps for a large, illustrated Treatise containing many testimonials.

NERVOUS DISEASES. Epileptic Convulsions, or Fits, Paralysis, or Palsy, Locomotor Ataxia, St. Vitus's Dance, Insomnia, or inability to sleep, and threatened insanity, Nervous Debility, and every variety of nervous affection, are treated by our specialists for these diseases with unusual success. See numerous cases reported in our different illustrated pamphlets on nervous diseases, any one of which will be sent for ten cents in post

An Unambitious Man.

No hot ambition, wild and wan,
Deforms my life so fair,
I'd like to be a selectman,
And have folks call me "squire,"
But I'd not climb the topmost height,
The wind of Fame's wild spurt,
But yet 'twould be no more than right,
I went to General Court;
And so I'd live and die content
In modest, shy retirement.

'Tis true, I may move into town
Before my hair is grayer,
An then I hope to gain renown
And be elected mayor;
But I would not be grand and great
To make the people stare,
But were I governor of the state,
I think I would not care,
Nor let Fame's tempest-born control,
Mar my sweet quietude of soul.

I'd live the most content of men,
Far from Fame's maddening roar,
And could I go to Congress then,
I think I'd ask no more.
Of course the President must be
The man the people choose,
And should the people turn to me,
I could not well refuse.
But still ambition would not harm
My soul's serene, transcendent calm.

I wish no splendor when I die,
But all things neat and plain,
A catafalque of ebony,
A six mile funeral train;
And I would rest in peace content,
If my loved land should raise
A million-dollar monument,
To speak to future days.
Let others toil and strain for fame,
I am content without a name.
—S. W. Foss in Yankee Blade.

HOW THEY MANAGED.

"Pack up your things as soon as you please, my dear," said Mr. Chesney. "We're going to move on Saturday."

Mr. and Mrs. Chesney were a matrimonial firm—there was no question about that. Mrs. Chesney had always been a silent partner in the same.

"If ever I get married," said Elma, a bright-eyed girl of 17, "I won't be put upon as mamma is."

"Where, my dear?" said Mrs. Chesney, with a little start.

"Into the country," said the family autocrat. "I'm tired of this city business. It costs a great deal more than it comes to. I'm told that you can live at half the expense in the country."

"But," gasped his wife, "what is to become of the children's education."

"There's a very good district school in the neighborhood, not more than a mile distant," explained her husband, "and exercise will do them good."

"And what are we to do for society?"

"Pshaw!" said Chesney. "I wouldn't give a rap for people who can't be society for themselves. There'll be the housework to do, you know—nobody keeps a girl in the country—and plenty of chores about the place for Will and Spencer. I shall keep a horse if I can get one cheap, for the station is half a mile from the place, and I've bargained for a couple of cows and some pigs."

Meanwhile Mr. Chesney explained to his wife the various advantages which were to accrue from the promised move.

"It's unfortunate," said he, "that Elma and Rosie aren't boys. Such a lot of women folks are enough to swamp any family. Men, now, can always earn their bread. But we must try to make everybody useful in some way or other. It's so healthy, you know," added he. "And the rent won't be half of what we pay here."

"Are there any modern conveniences about the place?" timidly inquired Mrs. Chesney.

"There's a spring of excellent water about a hundred yards from the house," said her husband.

Mrs. Chesney grew pale.

"Have I got to walk a hundred yards for every drop of water I want?" said she.

"And a large rain water hogshead under the eaves of the house," added Mr. Chesney. "And I've already got a bargain in kerosene lamps. As for candles, I am given to understand that good housekeepers make 'em themselves in tin moulds. There's nothing like economy. Now I do beg to know, Abigail," he added, irritably, "what are you looking so lackadaisical about? Do you expect to sit still and fold your hands while I do all the work? Give me a woman for sheer natural laziness!"

The first sight of Mulleinstalk Farm was dispiriting in the extreme. Between rock and swamp there was scarcely pasture for the two lean cows that Mr. Chesney had bought at a bargain and the hollow-backed horse which stalked about the premises like some phantom Bucephalus.

The apple trees in the orchard were three-quarters dead, and leaned sorrowfully away from the east winds until their boughs touched the very ground; fences had all gone to ruin, and the front gate was tied up with a hemp string.

"Is this home?" said Elmer, with an indescribable intonation in her voice.

"We'll get things all straightened up after a while," said Mr. Chesney, bustling to drive away the pigs, which had broken out of their pen and were squealing dismally under the window.

Mrs. Chesney cried herself to sleep that night, and awakened the next morning with every bone instinct with shooting pains.

"And no wonder," said Spencer, there's a foot of water in the cellar.

"We must have it drained," said Mr. Chesney, with an uneasy look; "but here's plenty of things to do first.

And now began a reign of the strictest economy. Mrs. Chesney himself paid for everything with checks, and not an article came into the house or went out of it, without his cognizance. New dresses were frowned upon; spring bonnets were strictly interdicted; orders were issued that old carpets should be reversed, and broken dishes repaired with cement and quicklime.

"Save, save, save! That is the chief thing," he kept repeating briskly. "Women folks can't earn; they should try their best to save."

"Boys," fluttered Rosie, "I've an idea. Mary Penn, who lives on the next farm, you know, came over to see Elma and me yesterday. Papa is earning his living; we'll earn something, too."

"I should like to know how," muttered Spencer. I might hire out somewhere if it wasn't for that wretched old horse and the pigs and the wood chopping and"——

"Oh, but there is something that won't interfere with the chores, nor with school," said cheerful little Rosie. "Just listen—all I ask of you is to listen."

And the weeks grew into months, and the red leaves eddied down into little swirls from the maple trees, and "pig killing time" came, and, with the aid of a lame, one-eyed man, Mr. Chesney laid down his own stock of pork and sausages, with the sense of being triumphantly economical.

The family had left off complaining now. Apparently, they were resigned to their doom. But there were some things that Mr. Chesney could not explain at all.

A new rug brightened up the dismal hues of the parlor carpet; Rosie had a crimson merino dress, trimmed with black velvet bars; Elma's fall jacket was edged with substantial black fur; and—grand climax of extravagance—Mrs. Chesney had a new shawl in place of the old garment which had been her mother's before her.

He looked at the housekeeping books with renewed vigilance; he consulted the stubs of his check book with a glance that nothing could escape.

"I—don't—know—how—they—manage it," said he, scratching his nose with a lead pencil that he always carried. "I hate mysteries, and I mean to be at the bottom of this before I am an hour older."

"Abigail," said he, "how is this? I've given you no money. You've long left off asking for money. How have you managed to smarten yourself and the children up so? I won't be cheated by my own wife."

Elma set down the pitcher which she was wiping, and came and stood before her father with glittering eyes and cheeks stained with crimson, like a flag of battle.

"Papa," she said, "you must not speak to mamma so. Mamma would not cheat you nor anybody else. It's money we've earned ourselves."

Mr. Chesney stared at the girl with incredulous eyes.

"And if you don't believe it, come and see how," said Elmer, flinging down her towel. "Mary Penn showed us. She told us everything, and gave us the first swarm of bees. There are fourteen swarms down under the south wall. Spencer sold the honey for us. And we planted all the nice flowers that grow down in the meadow, that you said was too stoney and barren even for the sheep to pasture upon, and Will dug and hoed around them after the chores were all done, and we sent boxes and bouquets of lilies and verbenas to the city every day by Mr. Penn's wagon. And we gathered wild strawberries before the sun was up, and got cherries out of the old lane. And the money is all ours—every cent of it."

"Honey, eh!" said Mr. Chesney, staring at the row of hives, for Elma had dragged him out into the November moonlight to the scene of action. "Well, I've seen these many a time, but I always supposed they belonged to Squire Penn's folks. And flowers and wild berries! Didn't think there was so much money in 'em. Guess I'll try the business myself next year. Queer that the women folks should have got the start of me."

After that he regarded his family with more respect. The mere fact that they could earn money had elevated them immensely in his sight.

But when spring came he lost his able co-adjutor. Miss Elma incidentally announced to him one day that she was going to be married to Walter Penn the next week.

"And mamma is coming to live with us," added Elma. "She can't stand the damp house and this hard work any longer."

But Mrs. Chesney did not go to the Penn farm. Mr. Chesney hired a stout serving maid and laid drain pipes under the kitchen stoop. If his wife really understood her business so well it was worth while to keep her well and active, he considered.

"I couldn't leave papa, you know," said Mrs. Chesney to Elma. "He means well; and now that Rebecca Beckel is coming here, and the kitchen is dry, we shall get along nicely. I wouldn't go back to the city for anything now."

"Nor I either," said Elma. "And oh, mamma, I shall always love those bee hives under the hollyhocks, for it was there that Walter asked me to be his wife."

Mrs. Chesney tearfully kissed her daughter. She, too, had been happy once, and had her dreams. It was to be hoped that Walter Penn was made of different metal from George Chesney.—[Woman's Magazine.

Face to Face.

"You wouldn't think," he said, indicating a gentleman across the street, "that that ordinary, commonplace looking person has many times stared death unflinchingly in the face."

"Why, no, is he a desperate character?"

"Not very; he's an undertaker."—[New York Sun.

FOR FARM AND GARDEN.

Peanuts Culture.

The peanut requires a light, sandy soil and plenty of warm, sunny weather. It is claimed that by selection of quick growing varieties the peanut may be grown in New England or wherever Indian corn will mature, but as with sweet potatoes there would be little profit and much work. In Virginia the seed is not usually planted till all danger of frost is passed, and the farmers then like to have five months for producing the crop. It is very essential that the soil contain an abundance of lime and is light colored, so the peanuts will not be stained. Heavy clay is unfit, as it not only yields dark colored nuts, but is apt to induce mildew or rot. The plant resembles the garden pea, but the vines cling close to the ground like white clover. The fruit is borne on stems, which after blooming pierce the earth, thus maturing the fruit or seed beneath the surface of the field. When ripe the vines are loosened by ploughing each side of the rows, when the crop is lifted with forks and piled in small stacks to dry. In two or three weeks of good weather the pods will dry enough to pick from the vines.—[New York Herald.

The Best Poultry Yard.

The best poultry yard is a plantation. The fowls love the shelter and scenery of a spreading spruce or pine, and wallow in the dry soil under the branches with evident enjoyment. A turkey is a forest bird, and, although somewhat unmanageable by reason of her wild nature, will readily take to a nest made for her in a more suitable place than she herself may choose, if the nest is made of dry leaves under the shelter of a brush pile in a grove. A grove of plum and cherry trees, with a few evergreens interspersed, will make the best poultry yard; for there will be full crops of fruit and the curculio will be banished. A row of cherry trees on one side of the writer's lawn, nestled among a double row of Norway spruces on the north side, have never yet been touched by a curculio, while the shelter of the spruces seem to give an idea of concealed enemies to the greedy sparrows and the cat birds, which strip the trees in open ground where an undisturbed view may be had of approaching foes. Fruit and eggs become complimentary [illegible] Dandelion says mulch [illegible] chard grass and tall oat grass are sown together, at the rate of a bushel of seed each to the acre, they make "a tremendous crop," and may be cut twice in the season for hay or frequently for soiling purposes.

The Live Stock Indicator hopes that the practice of washing milk-ewes before shearing may be given up as a barbarism of the past. "It is simple cruelty to animals of the worst nature, without one redeeming feature or any compensation, after causing unknown loss to flockmasters."

Those who feel that breeding is of little consequence, says an exchange, should look at Southdown sheep. Originally they did not shear more than two and a half pounds of wool per head, and were not fit for the butcher until between three and five years old. Now they make good mutton when eighteen months old and furnish from eight to ten pounds of fleece.

It is best to use rock salt for animals, keeping a piece under shelter where they can lick it any time they choose. Salt given once a week in the fields is mainly wasted. It is eaten in such quantities that it acts as a purgative by irritating the stomach, and this gets the animal out of sorts. With free access to a lump of rock salt stock will lick it nearly every day, taking this necessary condiment much as men have learned to do in the quantities daily required by them when eating various kinds of food.

Where the ducks are confined they are usually fed too much, and being apparently always hungry the owner is often tempted to feed them liberally. A duck will easily fatten, and this should be guarded against when they are laying. During the day they should have no food but chopped grass or vegetable tops, but three times a week they should have meat, or animal food of some kind, such as ground fish or ground meat, which may be given in their evening meal. Mashed potatoes and grounds oats at night may be allowed.

The Mysterious Boomerang.

Some German scientists, seeking to discover the secret of the boomerang's curious flight, caused a party of Australian natives to give an exhibition of boomerang throwing at Munster. The instruments used were of two sizes, the larger being a slender crescent about two feet long, two and a quarter inches wide and a quarter of an inch thick, made of an extraordinary heavy Australian iron wood. This boomerang was jerked up into the air about one hundred yards, when it flew straight away, then turned to the left and returned in a curved line back to the thrower, whirling around constantly and whizzing unpleasantly.

One badly directed projectile fell through a spectator's hat with a cut as clean as that of a razor. A Weimar manufacturer, who has made some eleven thousand toy boomerangs, believes that the mystery of shape lies in the sharper curvature in the middle, with unequal length of the two arms, which must be made of equal weight by unequal thickness. The peculiarity of motion is due to the difference in the length of the arms which diverges the curve of rotation from the circular.—[New Orleans Picayune.

Fowls in the Peach.

Numbered with other interesting matter contained in the recent report of the Pennsylvania Horticultural association is what J. F. Smith has to say about the yellows in the peach. He asserts that there are more failures from poor cultivation than from this disease. He gives his trees good culture, careful pruning, plants on high ground and has excellent success. As soon as a tree is found to have the yellows it is removed root and branch. His orchard of 1100 trees had two or three with the yellows the second year, which were promptly dug out and two more when bearing began, and in all up to the present time thirty-five, a loss of 3 per cent. in nine years. He knows of no other cure, although many remedies have been tried by him.

This orchard bore 1800 crates when four years old, with an average somewhat less in subsequent years. The varieties are Hale, Troth, Mountain Rose, Crawford's Early, Old Mixon, Stump, Smock and Salway. Late varieties produce most profitably; three-fourths of those now planted are those of the two last named varieties. Mr. Engle, referring to the fact that premature ripening of the fruit was one of the first evidences of the disease, said that when it is reached the tree will never recover. Mr. Meech said the only cure was to dig out root and branch.

Care of the Asparagus Bed.

No matter how much care has been given to the proper planting of asparagus, it is easy to injure, if not to render worthless, the best bed by beginning to cut too early, and by cutting too late. In planting, we have advised to set strong, vigorous roots, each with many good strong buds. The future treatment of these plants should be to keep the roots strong, and to keep them so well supplied with buds that a part of them, or the shoots from them, may be cut away without injury. If we draw water from a cistern we provide means of refilling it. The asparagus root is like a cistern; we draw upon it by cutting the shoots, and we replenish it by allowing the green tops to grow and to form buds to lie dormant. When a new bed has been planted, the advice is given to not cut it until the third or even the fourth year, in order that each root may get so strong that it will stand the annual cutting. The best and most productive bed ever made may be ruined by cutting it too late in the season. For family beds, the advice is given to stop cutting when green peas come. The grower on the large scale for market judges by the character of his crops when to cease cutting. In no other garden crop do we make so permanent an investment as in asparagus; aside from the first cost, we invest three years of time and care; but if we manage properly the returns continue through an indefinite number of years and are paid each spring. No garden should be without an asparagus bed.—[American Agriculturist.

Modes of Applying Manure.

It is not an easy matter to lay down general rules with regard to the application of manures that will be wise in all cases. Opinions differ somewhat as to the economy of spreading farmyard manure upon the surfaces of fields or lawns in late autumn or early winter. Circumstances often occur here as elsewhere, however, rendering it desirable to distribute winter top-dressing should be restricted to level fields, for both rain and snow must sweep manure from frozen hillsides before its constituents have had any fair show to sink into the earth.

There are advocates, both at home and abroad, for the practice of carting out fresh manure from the barnyard on to fast in made and spreading it directly on the fields. The chief gain in such practice is doubtless the saving of labor.

The spreading of short manure upon grass in the spring, or in the autumn even, is no doubt commendable in many instances, as a means of maintaining the same. A chief objection to the system of surface-spreading, which applies especially to light beachy soils, is that the non-soluble portions of the manure, as they lie on the ground, are likely to dry out to a peat-like substance that is not specially useful to the growing crop.

However manure may be applied, it is of importance to secure its equitable distribution in the soil. In a general way, it may be said that horse droppings and manure from sheep pens should be applied by preference to cold, clayey loams, or to moist soils rich in humus. These hot manures tend to warm and enliven the land. On the other hand, the slowly fermenting cow manure is preferred for warm, light soils. On light sandy soils it will be found a good plan when using horse manure to mix it with some slow sort, as cow or swine manure.—[New York World.

Farm and Garden Notes.

Sowing foul seed may bring to need.

A chubby sow makes a poor breeder.

Butter unfit for table use is not fit for cooking purposes.

Good corn-stalks, well cured, are about equal to hay for milch cows.

Beans, shorts or oilmeal are better for feeding with silage than cornmeal, and dry clover hay is an excellent supplement.

Dry caustic lime scattered over asparagus plants in the morning when wet with dew is a remedy in extensive use for the asparagus beetle, which sometimes occasion great loss to growers.

Her Letter.

"So here I am writing at home, dear,
And you so far away,
And when you read the letter,
I wonder what you will say.
The green leaves whisper around me,
The night-lights shine above,
Just as they did that day, dear,
When you told me all your love."

"I can see her," he fondly will speak,
As he sat by the fire-lamp dim,
And read and read the letter
With heart that could never tire.
"I can see her true eyes shining
As she leans on her little hand,
And queen and dreams about me
Here in this distant land."

The bugle rang out at midnight,
The fight was lost ere morn,
He fell, with his old battalion,
Leading a hope forlorn;
While at home the sun is shining,
And the roses of June unfold,
But the maiden is quietly weeping
As she dreams her dream of old.

HUMOROUS.

The road to ruin—The side door.

High license—A balloonist's permit to navigate the air.

To make a long story short, send it to the editor of a newspaper.

The tin can does not point a moral, but it very frequently adorns a tail.

It was the lady who thought she was going to swoon who had a faint suspicion.

There is something peculiar about gravity—in the earth it attracts, while in men it repels.

"How did you leave Kansas?" "By rail—I was the only passenger, and there was only one rail."

Many men with plenty of money in their pockets find themselves "strapped" in a crowded horse car.

"Well," said an undertaker, "I'm not much of a fighter, but when it comes to boxing I can easily lay out any man."

"Papa, give me a quarter to buy some perfume," pleaded a little girl. "Not a cent," replied the gruff and cruel daddy.

A boarding house keeper announces in one of the papers that he has "a cottage to let containing eight rooms and an acre of land."

Dude (bad pay)—That stripe looks well—so does this. What would you ask for yourself if you were choosing? Tailor—"Papa, what is a revenue cutter?" Fond parent (a hard-working clerk)—"The individual who employs me, my child. He has just reduced my salary."

Smallest Screws in the World.

The smallest screws in the world are made in a watch factory. There can be no doubting that assertion on any score. They are cut from steel wire by machine, but as the chips fall down from the knife it looks as if the operative was simply cutting up the wire for fun. One thing is certain, no screws can be seen, and yet a screw is made every third operation.

The fourth jewel-wheel screw is the next thing to being invisible, and to the naked eye it looks like dust. With a glass, however, it is seen to be a small screw, with 260 threads to the inch, and with a very fine glass the threads may be seen very clearly. These little screws are 4-1000th of an inch in diameter, and the heads are double this size. It is estimated that an ordinary lady's thimble would hold 100,000 of these tiny little screws. About 1,000,000 of them are made a month, but no attempt is ever made to count them. In determining the number 100 of them are placed on a very delicate balance, and the number of the whole amount is determined by the weight of these. All of the small parts of the watch are counted in this way, probably fifty out of the 120.

After being cut the screws are hardened and put in frames, about one hundred to the frame, heads up. This is done very rapidly, but entirely by sense of touch instead of sight, so that a blind man could do it just as well as the owner of the sharpest eyes. The heads are then polished in an automatic machine, 10,000 at a time. The plate on which they are polished is covered with oil and a grinding compound, and on this the machine moves them rapidly by reversing motion, until they are fully polished.—[New York Telegram.

Her Other Face.

A Sixteenth street lady was calling on a K street lady the other day, and the small daughter of the house kept walking around her and studying her head intently. Finally the caller became so nervous she took the child in her lap. "Well, Fannie," she said, "what is it? You seem to be looking for something." "W'y—w'y," hesitated the child, "I was looking for your other face." "What do you mean? I don't understand," said the puzzled visitor. Oh, mamma said you were two-faced, but I don't see only one. You haven't got two faces, have you?"—[Washington Critic.

Buried in a Gold Mine.

A very remarkable incident occurred at the burial of James Robinson, who died at Matthews' station, North Carolina. He had been engaged in gold mining all his life, and had for a long time managed the Baltimore and North Carolina mine, in Mecklinburg county, North Carolina. He was buried in Pleasant Grove church. The gravediggers had just completed the grave when their picks uncovered a vein of rich gold ore. The old miner was literally laid at rest in a gold mine.—[Atlanta Constitution.

The Beach Line.

About April 1 a working train of the Old Colony railroad was put upon the line of the Nantasket Beach railroad, and a gang of a hundred or more men, under the direction of the veteran track master, O. F. Gerald, began the work of repairing the track, taking up the sleepers and putting down eleven thousand new ones, laying three and one-half miles of new steel rail, also refilling the many washouts along the beach and dumping a large amount of heavy stone ballast at points most exposed to the waves in severe storms. In addition to these improvements of the road bed, every bridge on the line has been overhauled under direction of engineer Morgill, and new piling put in where it was necessary, guard rails also being laid on every bridge. Twenty-seven new switches have been put in, one new turn-table built and others repaired, while every station platform on the line has been lowered and rebuilt. New stopping places have been located between Nantasket and Pemberton, at which stylish villas are being built for shelter of passengers while waiting for trains. The unsightly engine house and car house at Point Allerton are to be taken down and new ones erected at Pemberton and Old Colony House stations, thus doing away with the inconvenience of running back from the termini to house the engines and cars at night. In addition to this reconstruction and general improvement of the road for the comfort and safety of passengers, the management have also concerted plans for making the route still more attractive to the public by laying out extensive and beautiful parterres of flowers and plants at each of the principal stations, one of these at the Pemberton station being of large dimensions, on the east of the station, while on the west a handsome oval will be constructed between the driveways in front of the hotel Pemberton, the sand and stones being dug out to a good depth and the cavities filled with loam brought from Braintree. The work is in charge of Mr. Parker, the landscape gardener of the O. C. R. R., whose skill in the work of ornamentation of grounds is unsurpassed. In addition to these attractions orders have been given to clear the beach at Pemberton of the unsightly fish cars, lobster pots, and other traps of fishermen which encumber it, and give it a nice and cleanly aspect.

With all these improvements and frequent running of trains through the summer at low rates of fare, the travel to this popular and attractive seashore resort bids fair to be very large this season, and as the railroad facilities are now assured in permanence, many new cottages are being erected along the beach front and lots are booming.

Wedding.

Mr. James Bennett Jones and Miss Mabel Bacon of North Weymouth were married last Wednesday evening in the Union church by Rev. E. T. Pitts, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The pulpit front and choir rail were beautifully trimmed with green and floral designs. Prof. H. M. Dow gave an organ recital of pleasing music previous to the arrival of the bride and groom. At about 8 o'clock Charles Clapp, Fred T. Hunt, W. W. Churchill, L. H. H. Johnson and H. Stanley, ushered the bride and groom to the altar, when the ceremony was impressively performed. The bride was elegantly attired in white silk, en train, with flowing veil.

After the ceremony carriages conveyed the couple and friends to the residence of Mr. W. W. Churchill, on Crag Cliff, North Weymouth, where a reception was held and a nice collation served by a Boston caterer. Many costly and elegant presents were bestowed by the friends of the pair, who left for Boston on a bridal tour to Washington, when they will return and take up their residence here.

Gaining.

Rev. L. H. Frary, formerly of this place, is now pastor of the Cong'l church in Pomona, Cala., and of the membership of the church sixteen were formerly connected with the church in Burlington, Vt., from which Mr. Frary received a call while he was located here. The Pomona Progress speaks of his pastorate there as follows: "The attendance at the Congregational church is increasing. On the past two Sunday mornings the attendance has been so large that many have turned away from the church doors, being unable to get seats within. Rev. Mr. Frary is making many friends among our townspeople."

Graduated.

Mr. Charles I. Porter, son of George E. Porter, Esq., of this place, was one of the graduates from the Medical School of Boston University, the graduation exercises occurring at Tremont Temple, last Wednesday, before a large assembly, Gov. Ames, Hon. Elijah A. Morse, and other notables, being present. Mr. Porter's theme was "Bright's Disease."

Miss Mary C. Humphrey, daughter of Hon. James Humphrey, also graduated in the school of Philosophy, her theme being "Harriet Martineau as Philosopher, Philanthropist and Reformer."

Great Auction Sale.

The Weymouth Iron Co. advertise in our columns this week the auction sale of their houses on Iron Hill, with stables, and other property, and investors who wish to secure choice estates should not fail to attend the sale, as such an opportunity to secure desirable residences is seldom offered in town. The sale takes place the 16th inst., on the premises, Joseph Totman being the auctioneer.

The Park.

There will be a horse trot and base ball match under the direction of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society, on Saturday, June 16, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the park, South Weymouth. There will be two races for a purse of $50.00 each, and the ball game will be between the Lovell's Corner nine and the Hinghams, for a purse of $50.00. Coaches will run from all parts of the town for the accommodation of those who wish to attend.

Reception.

At the reception given last Monday evening by the senior class of the College of Liberal Arts of Boston University, among those present as guests were Mrs. Henry Loud, Miss Florence Fay, Mr. E. G. Cutter, Miss Julia Talbot, Mr. Walter G. Forsaith, and Mrs. James Humphrey and daughter, of this town, beside several of the pupils from this place.

Yacht Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Monatiquot Yacht Club Tuesday evening, the committee on entertainment reported and the report was accepted.

A lengthy discussion occurred on a motion made that the club house shall be used only for club purposes, the discussion being of a lively character, and participated in by a large number of the members.

New Fountain.

The work of preparation for the erection of a drinking fountain in Garfield square has been commenced, and we learn that the structure will be one of new design and very handsome appearance. The curbstones for a circle of greensward 45 feet in circumference, are on the ground, and the present well will be covered with heavy stones and serve as a receptacle for the passage of the waste water from the fountain. The improvement will be a fine addition to the attractions of the locality.

Ill.

Mr. Isaac Phillips, of Quincy Point, father of Mr. Arthur Phillips, of the firm of Ford & Phillips, East Weymouth, is confined to his house with an attack of the shingles. Mr. Phillips is over 80 years of age, and has never before required the services of a physician for himself.

Base Ball.

The Weymouth Club play the South Braintrees at the latter place Saturday, at 3 p. m. A. L. Hobart's coach will leave Washington square at 2 o'clock. The Weymouths defeated the Braintrees in the last game, and a hot time is anticipated.

S. of V. Notes.

Captain W. C. Earle and First Sergeant W. M. Marden represented James L. Bates camp at the meeting at Springfield Tuesday and Wednesday. For the present regular meetings will be held only on the first and third Fridays of each month. At the last meeting the Camp voted to have a drill the second Thursday of each month, at Reynolds hall.

C. L. S. C.

The Monatiquot Chautauqua ns met on Tuesday evening, May 29, with Mrs. J. W. Armington. Eighteen members were present and an interesting programme from the Literature ..d the Chautauquan, interspersed with songs by Miss Edith L. Easterbrook, accompanied by Miss Nellie Pray, was enjoyed by those present. The Circle will hold its last regular meeting for the season with Miss Anna H. Tower on Tuesday evening, June 12. The quotations are to be from Carlyle and Burns, but the rest of the programme is to be a miscellaneous one prepared by a committee.

Filling Up.

The double house on Hunt street, opposite J. W. Hart & Co's factory, which has been vacant for several months, is now occupied on the east side. The increasing demand for tenements is an encouragement to capitalists to invest in building enterprises on the many good sites which exist in this place.

Children's Sunday.

The anniversary of the Sunday school of the Union church occurs next Sunday morning, at 10.30, and an address will be made by Rev. C. J. Ryder, of Boston. In the evening the pastor will deliver a lecture to young men.

Letters advertised June 8, '88: Miss Susie E. Blanchard, Miss Susie P. Blanchard, Mrs. Alice R. Brunks, Mrs. Lucy Clark, Mrs. John Connaughton, Franklin Edgerly, Mrs. Anna Fehr, "Midwife", Helen M. Stone, Messrs. Thomas JAMES W. RAND, P. M.

Base Ball.

The High School nine went to Quincy last Saturday intending to play the Quincy High School nine, but found that it had disbanded, and so they played a picked nine composed of Quincy Point fellows. The members of the picked nine were very large and strong and the boys had to play a hard up-hill game against them. It was a very interesting and exciting game, and the High School boys gave up the "ghost" only after a hard-fought battle of 11 innings. The picked nine presented Federhen, a Harvard twirler, who was very effective, and the High School battery did very commendable work against such giants. The full score arrived too late for publication, but we give the score by innings:

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11
Quincy Points,	3	2	0	2	5	1	0	0	0	0	4—17
Weymouth H.S.	0	0	0	4	4	0	0	5	0	0	2—15

The fine weather of this week has been accompanied with a degree of heat which would do credit to July, the temperature ranging from 85 to 95 in the shade.

BRAINTREE NOTES.

Mr. Samuel Bowditch, of East Braintree, who was taken to Taunton Asylum a few weeks ago, died there Monday last. The funeral occurred Wednesday last at the house, Rev. Mr. Pitts officiating.

Miss Rachel A. Faxon, who for many years was Preceptress of the Monatiquot Female Seminary, and teacher in public schools, died at her home in East Braintree yesterday morning, of heart disease.

A Mexican horse attached to a dog cart owned by Dr. Jones, of Braintree, became frightened when near T. South's blacksmith shop last Saturday, and ran down through the square, where he ran into another team, badly smashing the dog cart.

Protect the Birds.

The directors of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, at their meeting April 1st, deemed it very advisable to take further action in relation to protecting birds and their nests, and voted to appropriate $200 for that purpose, to be offered in ten prizes of $10 each, and twenty of $5 each, for evidence by which parties can be convicted for violating the laws of Massachusetts by killing any insect-eating bird or taking eggs from its nest. They request that all communications on the subject be sent to Captain Charles A. Currier, chief prosecuting agent, 19 Milk street, Boston, who will forward the complaint to their agent located in the town or vicinity where the act is committed. The society most respectfully ask all good citizens to aid them in enforcing the laws for the protection of our insect-eating birds and their nests by giving publicity to this notice and otherwise. The notices sent out to their agents are signed by George T. Angell, president of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and of the Parent American Band of Mercy.

Rev. Dr. T. Dewitt Talmage of Brooklyn says, we want more birds; millions of them multiplied by other millions, that shall sing in every treetop and flutter out of every grove and nest under the eaves of every house. We are leaving the orchards and gardens and the harvest fields of America to an exposure that is awful beyond calculation. So the Agricultural department at Washington tell us, so the legislative committees tell us, so our own common sense tells us.

BRIEFS.

The popular remedy is MORGAN'S Flaxseed Cough and Lung Syrup.

By mistake of the secretary, the name of Arthur L. Hobart was omitted from the executive committee of the Weymouth Republican Club last week.

Messrs. M. C. Nash and Richard Lloyd Hunt have taken possession of their cottages at Weymouth Neck, they being the first of the arrivals of dwellers there this season.

Hunt & Co. have received a lot of superior quality Castile soap, made from genuine olive oil, and free from any adulteration. It is first class soap and what every family needs.

The Centre House at Nantasket is now open for the season, and parties desiring the best of shore dinners will find Mrs. Sprague and Mr. Loring still on hand to cater to their wants in the best manner.

Last Saturday afternoon, the team of the Great Atlantic Tea Co., of Boston, was badly wrecked by capsizing in Loud's lane, the driver attempting to turn the wagon in the narrow way. The top of the wagon was taken off and the load of goods scattered.

The repairs on the lower part of the Baptist church have been completed by Mr. Joshua Binney, new sills having been put in place of the old ones, which were much decayed, and portions of the flooring renewed.

Mr. John F. Bates has given up his position in the factory of Geo. H. Bicknell & Co., and will stop at S. Nantasket for the summer, having opened a cobbling shop at the head of the beach.

The owner of the lady's wrap picked up by Mr. C. E. Bicknell on Quincy avenue, and which was advertised last week, came to his house Sunday for the garment, which had been lost from a wagon conveying a party.

An unknown vandal cut two long gashes in the corner board of the new building on Washington square, occupied by F. H. Morgan, druggist, one night this week.

A young daughter of Patrick Bentley was bitten in the forehead by a dog last Monday. The animal has been shot.

Town water is being put into the office of Dr. Bullock.

The Weymouth Band gave entire satisfaction to Post 88, of Quincy, Memorial day, the music furnished for the parade being of an especially pleasing character.

A detail of comrades of Paul Revere Post 88, of Quincy, visited the North Weymouth Cemetery Memorial day, and decorated graves of soldiers of Quincy buried there.

Maj. John W. Hart has been in St. Louis the past week as a delegate to the National Democratic Convention, which renominated President Cleveland for another term, Judge Thurman of Ohio, being nominated for the Vice Presidency.

Mr. John Ford has bought one of the popular Clipper mowers and a Standard horse rake, and those who want their grass cut promptly should give him a call.

Rev. Mr. Lavers, of P. E. Island, will preach in the Baptist church Sunday next, at 2.30 p. m.

The front part of the room over Phillips & Bacon's market is being fitted up for a barber's shop, to be occupied by Mr. W. F. Turner, who will remove from his old stand in Clapp's building.

An iron marker has been placed at the grave of comrade Jeremiah Buckley, in Randolph, by Post 88, of Weymouth, of which he was a member.

The Weymouth Iron Company have, by order of the Court of Insolvency, declared a sixth dividend of thirty cents on each dollar, making a total of eighty per cent.

A number went to Norwell Wednesday to attend the inauguration of the new town. The Amerigan Band furnished music and the fireworks in the evening were from the laboratory of E. S. Hunt.

Mr. C. H. Hackett and family, formerly of Boston, sailed on steamer Elbe from New York for Europe on Saturday.

In the district court, at Quincy, Humphrey Coakley was fined $2 and costs, and Eliza Coakley, his wife, $3 and costs, for disturbing the peace at Weymouth. Five Randolph drunks paid the usual fine.

The Band of Earnest Workers connected with the Universalist Sunday school will hold a social in Lincoln hall this evening, supper being served at 6.30, the banquet of the Hingham Business Association last Wednesday evening, and participated in the speaking.

Orator John Foster Gray is open for engagements for a July 4th oration.

John F. Fogarty of Suncook, N. H., is visiting his parents here.

Charles S. Williams' house is having an addition built on.

On Memorial day "Jack," a dog owned by W. B. Hollis, dug from a hole in the ground and killed a snake 5 1-2 feet long.

James Stevens, of Lawrence, has taken a tenement in the block of Mr. W. H. Clapp on Walnut avenue.

Reuben Burrell, foreman of the fitting room at J. W. Hart & Co's, has accepted a similar and more lucrative position at South Braintree.

Bert Orcutt is clerking in the store of White & Bates.

Mr. Pacini, fruit vender, has hired the house vacated by E. B Whalen.

Three persons on Summer street have transplanted about 50,000 tomato plants this season.

A. Prince Nash has moved his stable to the rear of his lot preparatory to making other improvements about his residence.

Jacob Richards and Mr. Martell are having their houses tastefully painted.

Asa K. Binney has sold his four-year old colt to James Belcher of South Weymouth.

It is said that since the temperance crusade has opened and Officer Garey made the raids, that liquor is carried about in the pockets of illicit dealers, and that there is more drinking than ever. We think, however, that this last statement is a doubtful one.

The Bay State Hammock Co. have more orders on hand than they can fill for some time to come.

265th Anniversary.

The 265th anniversary of the Old North church was pleasantly celebrated on the evening of May 31st. It was the night for the annual church meeting, and invitations were confined exclusively to church members. Between sixty and seventy were present and after an hour of social enjoyment supper was served by the ladies. At the close of a bountiful repast the pastor, Rev. F. H. Palmer, called the meeting to order and made an address, reviewing briefly the history of the past, and emphasizing the importance of the influence of the church in the community. Roll call was next in order, and the clerk of the church, Mr. Wm. E. Humphrey, read letters from several absent members. Other letters were read by the pastor, from friends at a distance, all joining in expressions of love and loyalty to the ancient church of their childhood. Reports from different departments of the church work showed a healthful progress along all lines, an increase of membership, growing benevolent contributions, and a marked spirit of harmony and consecration. Twenty have been added to the church in the two and one-half years of the present pastorate. Officers were elected for another year, and the meeting closed with singing, prayer and benediction.

LOVELL'S CORNER.

Last Sunday afternoon Rev. S. F. Chace delivered an interesting Memorial sermon, about thirty members of the G. A. R. being present. The church was prettily decorated with flags, cut flowers and potted plants, and presented an attractive appearance.

A bicyclist from North Abington, while riding through this village last Sunday, unfortunately capsized. He received no serious injuries, but the machine was slightly damaged and he was unable to proceed on his journey.

Mrs. Samuel Turner, of North Abington, is visiting at Mr. Chas. Hawes'.

Ladies find Healey's Vegetable Tonic Pills and Cordial invaluable for chronic weaknesses and severe pains. Send stamp to W. E. & W. P. Thayer, 231 Savin Hill Ave., Boston, for "Nature's Methods for the Self Cure of Diseases of Women. 8-11

Robert T. Bicknell and wife left Thursday for Arazina, Cal., for a two month's pleasure trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Locke are enjoying a two weeks sojourn in New Hampshire.

The Unitarian society have received the plans for their new church, the contract for which will be given out next week.

By the will of the late Leavitt Bates, which was probated Wednesday, he left $600 in trust for the benefit of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Wessagusset Colony, Pilgrim Fathers initiated four new members last Wednesday evening, and have several more to initiate at their next meeting.

Crescent Lodge, I. O. O. F., will work the second degree next Thursday evening, and all members are requested to be present.

There will be gospel meetings in Reform Club hall every Wednesday evening until further notice, with different leaders at each meeting.

Mrs. Lizzie F. Graves, assistant at the post office, has been confined to the house during the past week with a protracted cold.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held with Mrs. Z. L. Bicknell, next Tuesday afternoon. A full attendance is desired.

Letters remain in the East Weymouth post office for Mrs. Churchill, Mrs. Gilligin, Thomas Curran, Brien Ahearn, John O'Neil, E. E. Dunton, H. F. Fish. Z. L. BICKNELL, P. M.

D. M. Easton and Wm. J. G. Beveridge were present at the complimentary banquet tendered to Henry S. Bustin, ex-treasurer of the Hyde Park Savings Bank, at Hyde Park, last Wednesday evening.

Next Sunday at the Methodist Episcopal church, the presiding elder, Rev. D. A. Jordan, will preach in the morning. There will be an exhibition by the children's class in the afternoon and in the evening the Rev. Wm. Burt, of Milan, Italy, will speak on "Italy."

Last Wednesday a horse attached to a new butcher wagon of L. S. Thompson, became frightened by the breaking of the whiffletree and ran down Shawmut avenue, where he struck the corner of a house, overturning the wagon, which completely ruined it.

Next Sunday evening at the Cong'l church, a Children's Day service, "The Child in the Temple," will be given by the members of the Sunday school. There will be vocal selections by Mrs. J. Frank Drew, a mixed and a male quartette with Prof. C. P. Raymond as organist. All are invited.

The road scraper has been doing good work on Broad street, cleaning out the gutters. All the drains have been taken up and relaid and a paved gutter is being built across the road from Baker's corner to John P. Burrell's place, which will take the water from Madison street.

Wednesday evening a horse attached to a buggy owned by John E. Farrell, which was left standing near Merchant's ice cream saloon, became frightened and ran up Pleasant street, where the team was overturned, smashing it and scattering the various parts along the street.

At a special meeting held last Tuesday evening, in relation to fixing the Church, it was decided to put a curbstone along the edge of the sidewalk, and on the inside edge a stone wall a foot high, when the grounds will be filled in so as to make a level with the top of the wall. A driveway will also be made, with two entrances.

Last Monday Wm. McGinness met with an accident which it was feared might result fatally. He was standing on a wheel of a wagon in the woods, loading trash wood, when he slipped and fell, striking a ruptured part of his body on the wheel, which opened it to twice its former size. He was carried home and Wednesday was taken to the hospital.

The Ladies Social Circle connected with the Unitarian society, will hold a strawberry festival and apron sale at Masonic hall, next Wednesday afternoon and evening. In the evening there will be a short entertainment and social dance until 12 o'clock. This will doubtless be the last sociable of the season, and the usual good time may be expected by those who attend.

Last winter there were a number of small breaks in different parts of East Weymouth, but not a great amount of property was stolen. Officer Pearse has had suspicions as to who the parties were, but did not succeed in obtaining the necessary evidence until last week Friday, when he arrested George W. McDonald, a lad about 15 years old, who is the leader of a gang of four about the same age. His case came before the district court Saturday and was continued until Thursday, when he was sent to the Westboro Reform School during his minority.

A petition is being circulated for signatures to be presented to the selectmen, asking that the private way extending from Putnam to Middle street known as Chard street, be accepted and maintained by them as a town road. The land on either side of this street is fast being built upon, being one of the most desirable locations in the village, and if the selectmen accept it, as it is hoped they will, many more new houses will soon be erected. It is but a few years ago that the land through here was barren, but now it is dotted with a number of houses, three being built last fall.

Band Concert.

The music loving public will no doubt be sorry to learn that it is very doubtful if there will be any open air band concerts this summer. The concerts given last year cost the band about $50 and they depend largely upon their annual Fast night concert to replenish their treasury, but unfortunately this year the weather was very bad, and their annual was not a financial success, so that they have not the funds nor can they well afford to give these concerts. The storekeepers in the square are the ones who would reap the most benefit from these concerts, and it is hoped that someone will start a paper and see if funds enough can be raised to pay the band what these concerts cost them.

Fire Alarm.

The subject of a system of fire alarm for East Weymouth which has been the talk for some time among the members of Hose Co. No. 2, has resulted in their voting to establish a system, if enough money can be raised. The cost will not be over $125, $50 of which the company agree to pay, and a paper is being circulated among the citizens for the purpose of raising the remainder of the amount. As the system may not be fully understood, we will say that it consists of magneto bells, one of which will be placed in each member's house and at the engine house. The village will be divided into districts, with a call for each, and a crank magnet will also be placed in each district, from which an alarm can be given. For illustration we will call the corner of Middle and Lake streets station five. A fire is discovered near there and instead of rushing a mile to the engine house, the alarm can be given by the nearest bell and in a moment every member of the company knows that there is a fire in progress at station five, the result being that the department will arrive at the fire in one-half the time and may perhaps save a large amount of property. It is hoped that the property owners in this ward will look favorably upon this plan and give the needed financial aid,

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

The census of 1885 just published says among the cities and towns of Massachusetts, Weymouth ranks 31 in population and 141 in agriculture. The total values of her agricultural products is $[illegible]. This is $1500 more than that of Quincy but $10,000 less than that of Milton, or $54,000 less than that of Dedham. All are of Norfolk county.

The Busy Bees held their last meeting for the season Monday evening, with Mrs. A. J. Sidelinger. This has been a very successful year with this society. Through their regular meetings and special efforts they have sent a handsome gift to Japan. Their successful fair has secured them a large portion of another contemplated gift. Their occasional suppers have been anticipated events.

Wednesday afternoon and evening the ladies sewing circle closed its meetings for the season with a strawberry festival. Their work for the winter has made an impression long to be remembered. Their meetings have been very successful in promoting sociability and good fellowship. Beside this, this society has well fitted out the family of a clergyman in Wisconsin and given the major part of the funds required for the repairs to the grounds about Pilgrim church.

Next Sunday being Children's Sunday, the pastor of the Old North church will address the young people of the congregation at 2.30 p. m.

Base Ball.

The Volunteers played a game of ball with the Quincys at North Weymouth Saturday, and defeated them in a score of 12 to 7. Score by innings—

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Volunteers,	0	0	4	2	2	2	2	0	0—12
Quincys,	2	0	0	0	3	2	0	0	0— 7

The batting of L. W. Bates and Granville were the features of the game. Bates struck out 12 men, whom Saville held in fine style.

Deputy Supreme Governor Albert A. May is in this village in the interests of the United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, a colony of which will be instituted here by him sometime this month. Mr. May is the same gentleman who instituted a colony at East Weymouth last month. A.

Wedding.

The residence of Mr. J. W. Bartlett was the scene of a brilliant event last Tuesday evening, his youngest daughter, Carrie G., being united in marriage to Edward Wyman, of Lynn, by Rev. Mr. Eaton. The couple were recipients of a large number of useful and valuable presents from their many relatives and friends. They will reside at Lynn.

Arrived

Mr. Seth Arthur Pratt, U. S. Consul at Zanzibar, with his wife, arrived home Wednesday from that port, their passage having been made in a sailing vessel around the Cape of Good Hope, to Boston, the voyage occupying several months. They are in good health, Mr. Pratt having gained largely in weight during his five years sojourn in Africa.

Mrs. Matilda Battles has reopened her ice cream parlors for the season. Just call and try one of her delicious creams.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Dyer were very pleasantly surprised Wednesday evening, it being the 46th anniversary of their married life. The surprise was made by their children and grand-children, and the venerable couple were the happy recipients of an elegant French clock. An excellent collation was served, ice cream being a specialty.

A. T. Cushing is having his house and shop decorated with new paint.

The fruit store in Harmonial hall building has closed up. The rooms on the first floor are well adapted for tin and stove business, and now is the time for someone to start such a business here, as it is a splendid location.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

Now is the time that your pet dog or cat needs a new summer collar, of which you can find a large assortment at C. H. Tinkham's Jewelry Store.

That nice cool glass of soda with fruit syrup at Colby & Page's is refreshing on a hot summer's day.

We have never before known a time when it could be said that it was impossible for a lady to walk the streets of our village of an evening without fear of insult or molestation. But recent occurrences show that the complexion of things has changed and women are wary how they go about after dusk alone or without proper protection. Two little girls were grossly insulted on different evenings lately, shortly after eight o'clock, and the parents are justly indignant. The wife of one of our well known citizens was also stopped and insulted a few evenings since. Then too, there are places, notably, about the fruit store in Columbian square and the steps of the Odd Fellows building, which have been used as lounging places for a large number of ill mannered men and boys, much to the annoyance of passers by. It is well to state that a large share of the trouble is due to recent importations and not to the natives. The face wall about the residence of Mr. H. B. Reed, has often been occupied by parties whose language was loud and anything but edifying. There is no objection to these people sitting here and behaving themselves, but they have often made themselves too obnoxious. There are places in the public squares where crowds can remain unmolested so long as they conduct themselves in an orderly manner. Complaints have been made to the authorities, particularly the selectman of the fifth ward, and that official, Mr. J. C. Howe, has assured such that, so long as he is in office the supremacy of law and order shall be recognized. He has taken hold of the matter in a vigorous and commendable way and he will have the support of every good citizen at his back. Two night policemen are on duty and orders have been given to enforce the law at all hazards. A crowd in Independence square undertook to defy officer Conant last Saturday evening but they were soon given to understand that they must move on or be locked up. It is unfortunate that this state of affairs exists, but there is no excuse for disorderly conduct on the public streets, and especially infamous are the cases cited concerning insults to women, who ought to be able to go through the streets without fear of molestation, and we are fortunate in having a selectman who appreciates this fact as strongly as anybody.

The residence of Mrs. Christopher Blanchard on Main street was the scene of a wedding Tuesday evening, when her daughter, Miss Abbie S. Blanchard was united in marriage to Mr. Herbert Stebbins, of Boston. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock, by Rev. G. L. Perrin, of the Shawmut Avenue Universalist church, Boston. The space above where the bridal couple stood was filled in with ivy and roses, and a large floral bell was suspended from the centre of the arch. The bride wore a rich white silk dress, en train, trimmed with apple blossoms. The bridesmaids were Misses Susie and Florence C. Blanchard, sisters of the bride, and Miss Nellie Killam of West Norwell. Harry Stebbins, brother of the groom, was best man. The guests were largely from the circle of relatives and immediate friends. The presents were numerous and beautiful. Dooling of Boston was the caterer. A special train left for Boston after the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins will be absent on a short wedding trip and will have their permanent residence in Boston. They will be "at home" at Main street, South Weymouth, after July 1.

Reed avenue, which connects Union with Central street, is rapidly being filled up with cottages, which shows that there is not much risk in opening up these side avenues in the centre of the village for building purposes. Bates avenue would soon have a row of houses on either side if the way was open for such a condition of things.

A large number of $25 subscriptions have been secured for the electric light project during the week and the committee are more than ever confident of its success.

Mr. F. W. Loud has purchased a first class hack and new harnesses during the week, which is now a necessary adjunct to his livery business. This sort of a conveyance has a growing demand in the village.

The regular monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Improvement Association will be held at the W. C. T. U. rooms this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Arrangements are being perfected as fast as possible for the Improvement Association supper which occurs in Music hall Tuesday evening, June 19. A number of new business and improvement associations will be represented and the list of invited guests includes Hon. Henry B. Pierce and Harvey H. Pratt Esq., of Abington; Rev. F. A. Warfield, of Brockton; Judge Kelley of Rockland; Rev. H. Price Collier, Edmund Hersey, Postmaster Geo. Cushing and Fred H. Miller, of Hingham; Mr. Gilman C. Fisher, Sup't of Schools, and John S. Fogg Esq., of our own village with their ladies. A number of these gentlemen have already accepted and it is expected that the exercises will be so varied as to prevent monotony and insure success.

Next Sunday will be Children's day at both of the Congregational churches and owing to the unusual attractions of flowers, sermon and song, the congregations will be swelled accordingly.

Mrs. Orrin Bates has gone to Iowa to join her husband, who has recently taken up his residence there in connection with a lucrative business situation.

Mr. Will Perry goes to Wellesley for the next four months, where he will have charge of a large and fashionable livery and boarding stable.

The graduating exercises of the South High school takes place Thursday evening, June 28, at the Union Congregational church. There are four girls and two boys in the graduating class.

Miss Marion Matson is here on a visit after a two years' absence in Milwaukee, Wis.

John S. Fogg, Esq. has returned from a three weeks' business trip in the west.

Mr. N. B. Thayer, following his temporary retirement from business, left last week for a brief visit to Southern California.

The American Band filled a very acceptable engagement with the Rockland Grand Army Post on Memorial Day.

Read the following Certificates of Recommendation.

Certificate of Prof. S. P. Sharples, Assayer of Metals for the State of Mass.

I consider the White Bronze Monuments practically indestructible. They will not blacken or become dingy with age; moss will not adhere or grow upon their surface as upon marble, and the color will remain unchangeable while the monuments endure.

To whom it may concern:—This certifies that I have seen the statue of Pompeanus, which was cast from zinc and erected in the city of Lucca, Italy, (according to the records) over three hundred years ago, and has stood constant exposure to the elements since. No sign of corrosion or change of color has taken place and to all appearance it is as beautiful as when first erected. A. CORTEPASSI.

To the public:—There is no question in my mind of the durability of the White Bronze Monument. Refined zinc, when cast alone and in its pure state, and not placed in contact with silver, platinum, copper, etc., is indestructible from the elements, outlasting the best granites without the discoloration that may be always shows after a few years' exposure. No other material is so well fitted to withstand the atmosphere changes. Judging from a scientific and chemical standpoint, it is my opinion that these monuments will last thousands of years.

HEADQUARTERS REYNOLDS POST No. 58, DEPARTMENT OF MASS., G. A. R. East Weymouth, June 4, 1888.

General Orders No. 7.

On behalf of Post 58 the commander makes grateful acknowledgment for the acts of kindness, and substantial aid, on the part of our townspeople, in assisting to carry out the Memorial day services.

We heartily thank the town of Weymouth for the appropriation of $300 to help defray the heavy expense incident to the occasion.

To the Rev. W. D. Leland for his courteous invitation to attend a memorial service at his church on the Sunday preceding May 30, we return cordial thanks. The discourse was replete with patriotic sentiments, and the eloquent pastor, while vividly portraying the surpassing greatness of our beloved Republic, pointed out some of the evils and dangers that menace our free institutions.

To the Rev. Mr. Moors, for his instructive and appropriate discourse at Masonic hall on the evening of Sunday, the 27th, and to Rev. F. A. Chace for his stirring and noble address at the Porter M. E. church at Lovell's Corner, on the afternoon of Sunday, June 3d, we desire to express our sense of indebtedness.

To our friends all over the town for their generous donations of flowers, wreaths, etc., we return sincere thanks.

To the obliging proprietors of the WEYMOUTH GAZETTE and Weymouth Sentinel, we are under great obligations for the liberal space in their columns devoted to matters of interest to the Post.

We desire to express our compliments to the Messrs. Raymond, father and son, for the efficient management of the collation at the hall.

In a field order of May 30, the commander briefly thanked the officers and members of James L. Bates Camp 36, Sons of Veterans, for escort duty performed by the corps. It is just and fitting that special mention should be made of the proficiency in drill and soldierly bearing of these young men. With only a few opportunities for military practice, and being their first street parade they certainly deserved the compliments given them in all parts of the town. That the Camp may become one of the institutions of Weymouth is the hearty desire of Post 58.

A notable accession to the ranks of the procession was the presence of Co. G, (Boston Fusileers) 1st Reg't M. V. M. As on previous occasions, their well formed ranks and steady marching was an attractive feature of the occasion. The Fusileers will always receive a hearty welcome from the Post.

Comrade Charles G. Morrell, as mounted orderly, is complimented for his well performed duties.

To the officers and members of the Post, the commander again tenders his most appreciative thanks for prompt attention to orders, and soldierly conduct through the day. We are mindful of the superb music furnished by Martland's Brockton Band. The marching soldier always feels a thrill when the music in front is strong and square, and the Band under its Gay leader gave complete satisfaction to the boys in line, as well as to the people on the sidewalks. The concert in the evening was both a financial and artistic success. It is doubtful if there was ever a more brilliant and pleasing entertainment given in Reynolds Hall.

The Post Adjutant is hereby directed to furnish a copy of this order for publication in the newspapers of the town.

By command of
BENJ. S. LOVELL,
Post Commander.
CHAS. W. HASTINGS, Adjutant.

Notice.

Butterine has for some time been used in various families of this place. Those who have used it have so highly recommended it that we have taken out a license for its sale, either in kegs or single pound. It is a healthy and nutritious article and has no equal for cooking purposes. We desire to show it to our customers and the trade. Please call and sample it.

3t PHILLIPS & BACON, Grocers.

To-Night and To-Morrow Night,

And each day and night during this week you can get at F. H. Morgan's, druggist, Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, acknowledged to be the most successful ever sold for the cure of Coughs, Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough Asthma and Consumption. Get a bottle to-day and keep it always in the house, so you can check your cold at once. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Sample bottles free.

Don't Despair.

If you are weak and weary from some so-called chronic disease, don't give up. Sulphur Bitters has given hope to many invalids, where hitherto there was nothing but despair. It will build up and renew your whole system.—Editor Weekly American.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam, for Coughs and Colds, does it, is indeed wonderful He authorizes F. H. Morgan, druggist, to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The Large Bottles are 50c and $1.00. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

Sunday Evening Lecture.

The recent lecture in the course to young people at the Union church, was delivered Sunday evening, May 27, by Rev. Mr. Pitts, his subject being "Amusements."

The Christan church, he said, has had many perplexing questions to solve and not the least of these has been the "amusement" question. The general attitude of the church used to be that of antagonism. In the early history of the church this antagonism was intensified by the exceeding frivolity and wickedness of the world. Debaucheries of every kind prevailed among all classes, and no law was recognized but license, no restraint hindered except society. When Christianity came in contact with this state of things there was a natural repulsion. A line of battle was drawn and for centuries a fierce conflict was carried on, but Christianity triumphed. It is little wonder that then the other extreme prevailed, and christians became ascetic, monkish. At the time of the reformation, among the Puritans much the same spirit prevailed. They carried their spirit of separation to the extreme; they denounced not only frivolous amusements and wicked sports, but nearly all innocent pastimes and pleasures. This puritanical sentiment came across the water and was felt here as vigorously as it ever was in the old country.

A reaction which might have been expected came. The extremeness of this sentiment was always against nature, reason and the Bible. The question is, however, not yet settled. Where do we stand? Where ought we to stand? What shall we discountenance? What shall we encourage? Before answering these and kindred questions it will be well to take notice of several facts. Human nature demands amusements, recreations, pastimes, or whatever they may be called. A little girl once said, "I think God must love fun." "Why?" was asked. "Because he has made the little lambs, and the kittens and the monkeys." I think the little girl was not so far astray. I think God made us capable of producing and enjoying fun. Fun is to human nature what juice is to an apple or orange. The men of the late Greeley expedition, while shut away from society in the secluded regions of the North were obliged to resort to games and recreations of various kinds in order to live. This shows what we all must have. "God has made sunny spots in the heart, why should we exclude the light from them?"

Another fact is that popular amusements are very common. The world is amusement crazy almost. Every show is liberally patronized, from Barnum's 'Greatest on Earth' down to the hand organ man. A large town or city would as soon think of being without church and cemetery as to be without its opera house and rink. The latter are usually as well patronized as the former, sometimes better. I have known churches to run down and go to seed, and graveyards to be so neglected or abused that six feet of earth by the roadside would be preferable for a resting place, while the opera house and rink would show no lack of vigor and culture.

When we consider the outlay in money for amusements, we are still more powerfully impressed as to the strength and extent of this factor among us.—Another fact of moment is that the majority of christians look upon amusements differently from what they used to. In general they take a more sensible view of the amusement question than in the days when religion wore a straight jacket and a solemn face.

What is the inference to be drawn from these various facts? That amusements have come, and come to stay, and that we must make way for them. We must also infer, I think, that amusements are a power among us; that they have an educative force. Morals are dependent, not only upon laws, but upon lighter codes.

In view of the facts and inferences I have noted, what ought we, as members of Christ's church, or as young men and women of moral character and influence to do? What attitude ought we to take? I will endeavor to give a few general principles which I consider affect the whole question.

1st, we should recognize the fact that amusements are with us. It will not do for us to frown upon all amusements as our fathers did. 2d, we ought to make up our minds that there should be a line of division between amusements somewhere. There are amusements which are proper and healthful, there are others which, if not improper and immoral, are not far removed. 3d, I would mark the distinction in this way. Give to amusements a due proportion of time. A good rule to determine that is to make them not an end, but a means. Use recreations and pleasures as a rest for the body and a relief for the mind. One should so order his amusements that they will not be an injury to his health. There are those that turn night into day, cheat themselves of needed rest and sleep, dress in fashionable exposure, feed upon sins and spices, pursue an everlasting round of gayeties and dissipations, winding up at last with a broken down constitution or a shroud and coffin. One should not spend too much money in amusements. There are people who systematically drop at least one tenth of their income, not into the Lord's treasury, but into that of every "catch penny" entertainment going. One should not devote to amusements that which properly belongs to business or the active duties of life. One's amusements should not be of a kind to arouse or excite vicious appetites and unholy passions. We should avoid those amusements that naturally bring to us evil associates, and select those that naturally bring to us good companions. Our amusements should be morally and spiritually helpful. Our amusements should not interfere with our loyalty to the church. Finally, we should inquire of God's word as to our pleasures and settle them by that, if possible. "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise." Eph. V: 15.

Agents' Talk

Costs $30.00 extra each year, in South Eastern Massachusetts, for instruments inferior in tone and poorly constructed, that grow poorer by use. You who buy such (for example) help to cheat your neighbors, as you have been cheated.

The agent who tells you so plausibly that you believe him, quoted such instruments as the Sterling, Christie, Pease, Peek & Son, New England, Smith American, and others of the same grade, and says these are fine, good, or first-class, is either ignorant or a deceiver.

Why do dealers who sell the above, and grades like the Vose, Guild, Emerson, and others, claim still higher and higher grades, if these are so fine and excellent?

Ask dealers in Providence, Worcester, Portland (Me.), and other cities, as to quality and relative standing, and you will quickly learn that all I have claimed is true.

You cannot afford to be deceived.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1888

GREATLY ENLARGED.

Much the Biggest of all the New York Weeklies,

Greater Variety of Contents, New Presses, New Type and New Appliances.

At the Head of the Republican Press.

The New York Weekly Tribune will be enlarged on or before the 1st of January, 1888, by the addition of from four to eight more pages of actual reading matter—an increase of size of great expense to the Tribune, but without expense to the subscriber.
A complete outfit of the new folding and inserting presses will be put into the Tribune's press-room in November and December; and the extra sheet will be folded into its place in the mail-room before it comes from the press. The enlarged Tribune will be the biggest and best of all the New York weeklies, and the new machinery will print it in an enlarged form, at the rate of seventy-two thousand copies per hour.
New Features and a great Variety of Contents will be added to THE TRIBUNE during the coming year. Readers will be given nearly a half more for their money than ever before.
Pensions for the old volunteers, especially Service Pensions, are being vigorously agitated in THE TRIBUNE; much space is given in every issue to this subject. Better Protection to Farmers under the tariff; the salvation of the country from the curse of intemperance; and the rescue of the national government from the hands of the rebel brigadiers; these, and all the other live issues of the day are receiving aggressive, earnest and loyal treatment in THE TRIBUNE.
THE TRIBUNE does not attempt to supersede the local State and county press. But, in the great Presidential conflict now at hand, every thinking Republican, old soldier, farmer and temperance man, should have his local paper and THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.
SUBSCRIPTION RATES—WEEKLY, $1a year; extra copy with every five. SEMI-WEEKLY, $2 a year; extra copy with every five. DAILY, $8.50 per year. SUNDAY TRIBUNE, $1.50. New subscribers receive the paper until Jan. 1, 1889. Remit always by draft, check, express or postal money order or registered letter.
PREMIUMS—(1.) THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE'S History of the United States and Pocket Atlas of the World, 16mo., 294 pages, 50 maps, 50 colored diagrams; price, 40 cents; to subscribers, 20 cents; prettiest premium of the year—a fascinating running account of the history of the country, with a great variety of statistics and general information. (2.) Presidential Pocket Knife; subscribers' names and picture of his choice for President on the handle; send for descriptive circular; price at retail, $1.75; but given with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE one year for the same money, $1.75; two other styles, for less money. (3) Popular Picture Gallery—6 fine large pictures, including the new officers of the G. A. R., Mr. Blaine, Senators Evarts and Hiscock, "Return of the Mayflower," "Christ Before Pilate," and "Children Writing to Santa Claus;" send for circular. (4.) Waltham Watch; expansion balance movement, stem winder, stem set, seven jewels, nickel case, thoroughly reliable and an excellent watch; with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE, 1 year, for $7.50. (5.) TRIBUNE'S "Book of Open Air Sports." (6.) Webster's "Unabridged Dictionary." (7.) Wood's "Household Medicine." These premiums cannot be described in full here. Send for circular.
THE TRIBUNE, New York.

A BEAR FIGHT.

A Thrilling Adventure of Two Hunters in Montana.

A Brave Woman Rescues Them from a Savage Grizzly.

Bears are still quite numerous among the mountains of the Upper Missouri River in the vicinity of Gallatin, Montana, and frequent encounters occur between them and the old settlers, who are determined to rid the country of the obnoxious brutes. One of the most desperate and savage fights with one of these animals took place recently, near the main range of the Rockies, the details of which were given to a Cincinnati Enquirer correspondent by an old pioneer, who had just arrived from that vicinity.
Wild Charlie, a half-breed, and a companion by the name of Howard Johnson were out fishing on the banks of the river, and had been quite successful, having caught a large string of very fine trout. While preparing to return to their homes, not very far distant, a loud noise from the bushes behind them attracted their attention. Turning around a thrilling spectacle met their astonished gaze. It was that of a huge grizzly emerging from the brush to the open ground and determined on giving the two men battle. The bear had the advantage of position, as the two men were on a narrow projecting strip of low land, with the deep and rapid stream in front and their guns at some distance away. Seeing that the bear was likely to corner them, they drew their knives and rushed toward him, hoping to frighten the grizzly until they could get possession of their shooting weapons and defend themselves. This action only made the bear pause for a moment, when on he came with a savage charge, accompanied by terrific growls that indicated a more wicked determination.
Rising to his feet he gave "Wild Charlie" a frightful blow, that sent that individual clean over the bank and into the river, and he was placed entirely at a disadvantage to participate any further in the affray. Johnson succeeded in passing the bear and rushing to the the spot where the guns were lying, but he had barely time to make one shot at the enraged brute before it had turned and was close upon him.
Then began a desperate struggle, the bear endeavoring to grasp Johnson in its paws and the latter dodging and knifing his animal antagonist.
At this critical moment a savage bulldog belonging to one of the men arrived on the ground and made straight for the bear.
Hardly had the dog reached the bear before the latter, with one terrific swipe of its great massive paw, struck the unfortunate canine a blow that crushed him into a shapeless mass and sent his lifeless remains flying through space, rods distant. The dog, however, had served to divert the bear's attention long enough for Johnson to again secure his gun, and bringing the weapon into position, he gave the animal another shot.
The second shot, though it staggered the animal, yet only enraged him the more, and it again rushed at the hunter with the most horrible fury. The gun was knocked from the hunter's hands in a twinkling, and the flesh torn from his right arm so that it hung in shreds. A moment later the bear caught the man and threw him to the ground, and was over his prostrate form in an instant, and about inflicting a horrible wound, when a new rescuer appeared on the scene.
Fortunately, Johnson's home was not far distant, and his wife, who is one of the bravest of western women, and an excellent huntress, had heard the shout, and suspected that some harm might have befallen her husband. So she took the spare gun in the cabin and followed the bulldog toward the spot from which the noise proceeded, and at the very instant that she emerged from the bushes to the open ground, she saw the bear dash her husband to the earth. Drawing the gun quickly to her shoulder she took aim and fired, giving the grizzly a hard shot, but failing to kill him. Leaving the man, the bear turned his attention to the woman, and rushed at her fiercely. Standing her ground bravely and reloading her Winchester rifle with the dexterity of the most experienced Nimrod, she was ready for the animal when he was only a few feet distant, and by a plump shot killed him instantly, the animal falling directly before her. On going to the assistance of her husband he was found to be quite seriously mangled, but will recover.
Wild Charlie, who had been knocked into the river at the beginning of the encounter, floated to an island and was rescued, having but few injuries.
The bear proved a whopper, weighing about one thousand pounds, and was one of the largest ever killed along the Missouri.
The heroic bravery of the woman alone prevented the bear from being victor in the contest, and the saving of the life of her husband has caused the latter to regard his wife as a great heroine.

Longevity Aided by Salt.

In a recent work by Professor Burggraeve of Ghent the prominent theory maintained is that salt is the great regulating agent of life, and on the proper use of which human longevity largely depends, it being at any rate a great preventive of certain maladies—if the blood is too rich salt will render it less charged, or if it is poor salt will reconstitute it and restore it to the necessary elements. Among the interesting facts cited by Professor Burggraeve in elaborating his subject is that about the end of the last century a terrible epidemic, bearing some analogy to scurvy, broke out in Saxony, making such rapid progress among the poorer classes that the government ordered an inquiry into its nature and course. The result was the establishment of a singular fact, viz: that miners although reduced to the same misery as other workmen, remained, with their families, completely exempt from the malady; the diet of the miners differed from the others only in one point, viz., that being employed by the state they were supplied with salt gratuitously, the deduction being that the absence of salt in the diet of the other workmen was the cause of the malady. Salt was then prescribed as a curative measure and the epidemic disappeared as if by enchantment.—

A queer flower which grows in Yucatan is the manito (little hand) of the guarumo. It is the exact shape of the human hand, with four fingers, thumb, nails and knuckles all complete.

LADIES' DEPARTMENT.

A Rare Young Beauty.

A famous Canadian beauty, who boasts that she has never applied a particle of any cosmetic to her face, yet can keep her freshness and brilliancy during a tiresome Washington season, has given to the Philadelphia Times as the secret of her good complexion the fact that her bathing is regular, methodical and judicious; that she never washes her face during the day, but cares for it thoroughly at the stated times. On returning from a walk or drive she wipes every particle of dust from her face with a soft chamois leather, and takes particular pains not to sit too near a fire or in a draft after exercise.

Chewing Gum and Whiskers.

It has been discovered by scientists that the habit of chewing gum by ladies causes a beard to grow on the chin. The constant working of the under jaw is said to in some manner stimulate the roots of the almost invisible hairs on the beautiful female chin, and in time a profuse set of chin whiskers make their appearance. A Boston lady was the first to discover that the whisker which had appeared on her chin was caused by chewing gum, and she told a doctor, who began experimenting. He selected several young ladies who were just beginning to chew gum and watched them, and recorded the progress of the hair growing. Girls in the same family who did not chew gum were not troubled in the same manner, so it was clear that chewing gum was the cause.—[St. Louis Sayings.

A Famous Beauty's Vanity.

Elizabeth Gunning married the first Duke of Hamilton, and, after his death, the Duke of Argyll. She was the wife of two and the mother of four dukes. The other sister, Maria, died at the early age of 26 from the too lavish use of poisonous cosmetics. Her husband in vain tried to prevail upon her to give them up, and upon one occasion when she descended to dinner, in the presence of an aristocratic company, with her face thickly plastered with the obnoxious stuff, chased her all about the room, caught her and vigorously scoured her face with her handkerchief. When this beauty lay dying she was in the habit of watching the fading of her beauty with the aid of a hand-glass. When finally she could no longer close her eyes to the truth that disease had robbed her of what she prized most, she refused to be seen any more, and, lying among rose-colored curtains, stretched out a shrivelling arm through the aperture to receive the nourishment or medicine offered her.—[Commercial Advertiser.

Worth Their Weight in Gold.

The New York Mail and Express gives the following list of women "who are worth their weight in gold:"
Mrs. John Mintura is worth $2,000,000.
Mrs. Kate Terry is worth nearly $5,000,000.
Mrs. Thomas A. Scott counts her wealth at $5,000,000.
Mrs. John Jacob Astor is worth about $8,000,000.
Mrs. Edwin Stevens, of New York, has $15,000,000.
Mrs. Hettie Green, of New York, is worth about $40,000,000.
Mrs. Robert Geolet, worth $3,000,000, owes her fortune to hard ware.
Mrs. Jayne, the widow of the patent medicine man, is worth $3,000,000.
Mrs. Marshal O. Roberts is the eight-millionaire widow of a mining king.
Mrs. Martin Bates was left $1,500,000 which her husband made in dry goods.
Mrs. Joseph Harrison, the widow of the man who built the first railroad in Russia, has $4,000,000.
Mrs. Jane Brown received from her husband's estate about $4,000,000, which was accumulated in banking.
Mrs. Joseph M. Ayer, who gets her money from patent medicine, is estimated to be worth $4,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Women's Clubs in London.

They have two women's clubs in London. The best known is the Alexandra—so named for the Princess of Wales, who is the perpetual president, though she hardly ever goes there. It is the only one that receives the honor of mention in the authorized "List of London Clubs," printed for the use and information of the fashionable world, which mentions that "the Alexandra is strictly for ladies of position only," meaning that only those are eligible whose rank and social status are beyond question. The "committee" is composed of women of the highest rank—a duchess, two marchionesses and three countesses—who draw the lines very closely indeed. They will admit no woman as a member or a visitor who could not be eligible to invitation to the Queen's drawing-rooms or the Court balls. It has a lunch-room where an excellent dinner can be had under the name of luncheon, and rooms where toilets can be made for the evening by country members come to town for some especial function, and bedrooms where they can remain all night. No man, it matters not what his rank may be, can be admitted, even as a visitor. As illustrative of the perfection of discipline in this respect, it is related with great glee that once, when the Prince of Wales called for the Princess Alexandra, he had to wait in the porter's room, like any one else, till his royal wife got her hat on and gossiped with the others present, till she was ready to come down.—[Frank Leslie's.

How to Put on Gloves.

A great deal depends on the first putting on of gloves, says the Dry Goods Chronicle. Have the hands perfectly clean, dry and cool, and never put on new gloves while the hands are warm or damp. When a person is troubled with moist hands it is well to powder them before trying on the gloves; but in most cases, if the hands are dry and cool, this is not needed. First, work on the fingers, keeping the thumb outside of the glove and the wrist of the glove turned back. When the fingers are in smoothly put in the thumb and work the glove on very carefully, then placing the elbow on the knee, work on the hand. When this is done, smooth down the wrist and button the second button first, then the third, and so on to the end. Then smooth down the whole glove and fasten the first button. Fastening the first button last when putting on a glove for the first time makes a good deal of difference in the fit although it may seem but a very little thing. It does not strain the part of the glove that is the easiest to the strain at first, and prevent the enlarging of the buttonhole, either of which is sure to take place if you begin at the first button to fasten the glove.
When removing gloves never begin at the tips of the fingers to pull them off, but turn back the wrist and pull off carefully, which will, of course, necessitate their being wrong side out. Turn them right side out, turn the thumb in, smooth them lengthwise in as near as possible the shape they would be if on the hands, and place away with a strip of white canton flannel between if the gloves are light, but if dark-colored the flannel may be omitted. Never roll gloves into each other in a wad, for they will never look so well after. There is always some moisture in them from the hands; consequently, when rolled up this moisture has no chance of drying, and must work into the gloves, making them hard and stiff and of very little use after, as far as looks or fit are concerned.

Fashion Notes.

Tinsel trimmings are the only elaborate decorations seen on any costumes for summer wear.
Filmy laces play a part in this season's costumes so important as to give them their character.
Daisy buttons exactly simulating the small English natural flowers are seen upon many imported gowns.
To have the gold-green wings of big Brazilian beetle made into bracelets, is the latest fad of young women.
Green in all shades, from apple to olive, is a favorite hue for the trimming of black straw or Neapolitan hats.
The white muslin lace trimmed sunshade makes a charming accompaniment to a dainty summer costume.
Striped and cross-barred crape and sewing-silk grenadines are the preferred material for summer morning gowns.
Striped beaded grenadines are in very pretty designs and make a rich and elegant tablier trimming for black costumes.
Lustrous silk grenadines, with ribbon-like taffeta stripes, with a hair line of white at the edge, are often chosen for half mourning.
The latest London fad is to wear about the neck a lace scarf so long that the ends barely miss being trodden on when the wearer walks.
Black toilets still lead all others, and for evening, gold-embroidered black silk, combined with gold-colored moire, is the acme of perfection.
Pale Indian silks or Bengalines are made up over skirts of dark velvet; while light wool over surah is another favorite afternoon combination.
The narrow but full Directoire sash will be worn on the gowns for summer wear. On young ladies' Swiss muslins it is a particularly graceful finish.
Shoulder capes of cord passementerie are very stylish and new this season, and are in black or in colors. The fancy finish is in pendant drops or balls.
Sailor shapes, so youthful and becoming, are the hats which still will be worn on all occasions where a serviceable head covering is desired.
Italian braids, otherwise Leghorns, are in many varieties of graceful shapes and still promise to be the garden hats most popular the coming season.

Dr. Talmage's Busy Life.

"I deliver, on an average, five addresses every week in the year," said the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage a few evenings since. "Each of these must be an original production, for the reason that the newspaper men follow me up so closely. On account of this espionage I cannot make use of an original idea more than once. Still I do not feel a material strain from this work. The reason why I indulge in so much metaphor and simile is that I naturally think in figures of speech—in fact, they crowd upon me so fast that I am obliged to interpret them to myself before uttering the thought I wish to express. This intellectual labor never causes me to lose a wink of sleep. My sermons are dictated to a stenographer some ten days in advance of their delivery, and are always on their way to my readers before my Tabernacle audience hears them.
"Not long since I paid a visit to the Mercantile Library in New York. In looking over the files of newspapers I saw a four column article about a wonderful cane which I possessed. The writer went on to say he saw me one pleasant evening sitting in Union square twirling a cane in my hand. Now, the fact is that I never was in Union square in my life, and never have I carried a cane. But I must compliment the author on the ingenious tale which he wove from his imagination about the imaginary cane.
"The fact is that a man who occupies my position and who talks as often in public cannot help giving hints to a close observer of his inner life. These facts are seized upon by bright newspaper men and woven into very entertaining stories. But I do not object to the use of my name in connection with this kind of fiction. It is usually harmless and always pleasing."—[New York Sun.

Professional Beggars.

It is pretty well known that a great many apparent cases of distress are fictitious, and at least four-fifths of the street beggars are impostors, but it is to be hoped that very few benevolent people are so highly deceived as the lady who recently investigated the wants of some pensioners on her bounty.
"Where is the blind man?" she asked of a little girl she met at the door of the tenement house.
"He's readin' the paper, mum."
"Ah! where is the deaf man?"
"He's talkin' politics with the dumb man."
"And what has become of the paralytic?"
"He's abed, mum."
"That's strange! He ought to be running a race," said the lady, sarcastically. "He is the only honest beggar in the house. Why is he in bed?"
"Because he's dead."—[Golden Days.

Gobelins Tapestry.

The most remarkable artistic production of the Gobelins Tapestry Manufactory of France, during the reigns of Charles X. and Louis Philippe, was the reproduction of the "Life of Marie de Medici," the originals of which, painted by Rubens, are in the Museum of the Louvre. This hanging, which decorated the palace of St. Cloud, was fortunately preserved when Paris was besieged in 1879. Since that time the looms of the Gobelins manufactory have been almost entirely employed in reproductions of the great Italian masters.—

The Rattlesnake's Bite.

The statement of 30,000 or 40,000 reptiles are kept in one room at the Smithsonian sends chills down the backs of nervous people. So many snakes, lizards, and toads let loose on the smooth lawns of the park would cause some excitement. However, only five of all these reptiles have any life in them. Those five are five rattlers, who are kept in a deep box with a wire top, and a vigorous poking and punching with a stick starts the music in their tails. When the five are sounding their rattles together, they fill the box with nerve-shocking sounds. The other 39,995, or 40,000 minus five (as the exact number may be), are securely corked in glass jars in alcohol and arranged on shelves like cans of preserves. The curator of reptiles, who is experimenting in search of an antidote for the poison of a reptile's bite, told a Star reporter that it was not true that they had yet discovered anything that they knew certainly to be an antidote. Far from having satisfactorily concluded their experiments, they consider that they have practically just begun. They have tried every alleged antidote that has been suggested with the least probability of success, and the only thing they have found that has succeeded in any degree is fluid extract Jaborandi, which is made from the South American plant Pilocarpus pennatifolius. The active principle of this is Pilocarpine. This has proved to be an antidote in the case of rabbits subjected to the rattlesnake poison. Where the snake poison has been injected into the rabbit, followed at once or within a short time by an injection of this drug, the animal has recovered. But it has been found to possess no efficacy as an antidote in the case of a chicken poisoned by the venom of the rattler. A full application of the drug has never yet resulted in saving the chicken's life. They intend to try it on turkeys and pigs.
The story that one of the assistants had been bitten by a rattler and that the "antidote" had been applied with success the curator pronounces utterly false. He says that no one has been bitten by the reptiles; that as a fact they are in such a sluggish state it is difficult to get them to strike at anything. The only information he has of jaborandi having been used successfully to counteract the effects of a snake bite comes from a physican of France, who administered internally a draught of tea made from the plant to a girl who was bitten by a viper, and she recovered from the poison.—[Washington Star.

Peppermint Culture.

Most of the peppermint oil produced in this country comes from Wayne and adjoining counties of N. Y. State. There are about three thousand acres devoted to the cultivation of the peppermint plant in the region named, and the annual product is not far from fifty thousand pounds of oil. The plants are set out in the spring and given very thorough and clean cultivation. The harvest begins in August. After the mint is mown it is allowed to wilt from eight to ten hours in the sun, then raked up and placed in cocks, where it must not be left for more than a day or two, else it will heat and spoil, but should go to the still while fresh and but slightly withered. The stills consist of wooden tubs strongly hooped, and into these the stems and leaves are packed by treading with the feet. When the tubs are filled the covers, made steam-tight, are put on and fastened with clamps. A steam-pipe connects the lower part of the tub with a steam-boiler. Another pipe connects the top of the tub with the condensing-worm. When the steam is introduced from the boiler it permeates the contents of the tub and escapes through the pipe connecting with the worm, and at a pressure of about forty pounds the oil is volatilized and mixed with the steam, then carried through the pipe to the worm, where it is condensed and the mixed water and oil discharged into a receiver. The oil being lighter than the water it rises to the top and is readily removed. The cost of the apparatus required for distilling the peppermint oil will depend very much upon its capacity, and may cost from five hundred up to many thousands of dollars.—[American Agriculturist.

Removing Surplus Flesh.

One of the handsomest men in town, a prominent officer of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, told a reporter of a remedy for reducing flesh, which, he says, is really wonderful. It is the same that Bismarck, the German chancellor, has subjected himself to, and from which his avoirdupois was decreased some sixty pounds. The first thing one must do upon rising in the morning, my friend says, is to drink a goblet ful of cool, not cold water. In a quarter of an hour repeat it, and just before breakfast drink the third glass.
When you first try this you will feel as if a whole watermelon has been disposed of, but after a morning or two this "swelled" feeling will have disappeared. Continue this water cause for several weeks and your surplus flesh will be gone, and the fear of bursting vest-buttons over. I am sure it is a great remedy, and recommend it to my friends who are afflicted with obesity. The effect that this stomach bath has had upon my informant is surprising. He is twenty pounds lighter than two months ago.—[Chattanooga Times.

She Answered Him.

A lady confessing to being past thirty, who is clever and fond of amateur theatricals and compliments alike, was speaking after the performance to a blunt but popular man of society.
"You acted admirably," he said.
"Thanks," she said, "but I do not look the part, for she should be young and handsome."
"Quite the contrary," replied the gentleman, "the effect was perfect from the end of the room—distance supplied the youth and beauty."
"Ah," exclaimed the lady, turning upon her heel, "in that case suppose you keep at a distance hereafter."
She saw that he did so.—[Toledo Blade.

He Does.

"What sort of fruit do you call this here?" said a seedy-looking individual, pointing to some peach-colored oblong fruit on Tom Swan's stand.
"Mangoes," said the lad in attendance.
"Man goes! so he does, sonny, so he does!" and pocketing a choice specimen the old sport ambled off with his prize, leaving the dazed lad to look in vain for the equivalent.—[Detroit Free Press.

A NEW ENGLAND SENSATION.

Scenes at a Wedding in New Haven Described.

From Haven Register.

We publish the following account of personal experience, not because it is in any way rare, perhaps, but because it illustrates the many thousands of similar experiences which are known to many people in every section of the country.
Our New Haven fellow citizen is a well known gentleman and we congratulate him on his good fortune.
December 22d, 1888, Mr. Coleman made the following statement: "In November, 1873, I was feeling quite badly. I had for a long time been feeling very dull, with no energy, and in a cold or cloudy day I would feel as if my underclothing was damp. My back was bothering me very much. Sometimes it would ache daytimes, and sometimes at night while in bed, but hardly ever both day and night. My memory was poor. It was hard work for me to do anything. I had always been an active man. A physician told me that I had bright's disease of the kidneys, and that I was in a pretty bad shape.

The Same Forever.

The Cross stands firm; no blast of time,
No hurricane of earth's rude clime,
Can shake its heavenly steadfastness,
Or lessen its high power to bless.
I look and live!

The tidings from that tree of love
Are still God's message from above,
Telling, each hour, of cleansing blood,
And pointing to the upward road.
I hear and live!

Still does the Christ His face reveal,
His well of living joy unseal,
Still telling of His love and light,
His meekness, majesty and might.
I come and live!

Still waves life's tree its glorious wealth,
Laden with everlasting health;
With fruit and leaf Divinely fair,
And immortality still there.
I eat and live!

Still from the rock the waters burst
To quench the weary spirit's thirst;
Who drinketh once will drink again,
Who drinketh shall not drink in vain.
I drink and live!

THE CHANGED HEART.

"But how can I help being neglected and miserable, Ned? You scarcely look at me when Miss Lovel is near, and she is your preferred partner in all things now. You walk with her, you sing with her, you drive with her, you dance with her, and it makes me very wretched!"

"Now, Mollie, if you're going to be jealous!"

"I'm not jealous, Ned. If I thought you didn't care most for me; if I fancied you cared at all for any one else, I don't think I'd remonstrate with you at all. I would just take off this," touching the diamond on her hand, "and hand it back to you. I'm not jealous, but you are not very kind to me, Ned."

"My little pet, you do not see things as I see them. One owes something to society, especially when one is at the seaside. If you would only remember that I love you too well to find fault with anything you can do, and if you would become a little more of a society character yourself, I should be perfectly happy. Why, you scarcely take the least attention from any one but me, and so many are willing to offer attentions to you. Now, dear, kiss me once; I must be off; I am to drive on the beach with Miss Lovel; not jealous, my pet?"

"Not jealous, Ned, no;" and she turned from him, but without giving the kiss he had asked for.

"She is jealous, though!" the young fellow thought, smiling as he watched the pretty, straight figure going away from the nook in which he had found her, out to the stretch of sand, against which the waves were rolling, receding, leaving now a mass of seaweed on it, now returning and bearing it away—a very coquette of an ocean, now kind and now cold, and always fair in the sunlight.

Ned Tremaine hurried over the beach, whistling as he went, and he presently caught up with his affianced, who, in her pretty dress of cream and black, with the wide sun hat ushed a little back on her blonde head, was looking very beautiful and animated—and smiling in the face of Lee Stone, the most incorrigible male flirt at the beach.

"Where now, Tremaine?" the latter called out, as with a nod he pursued his way.

"For a drive on the beach; will see you later," and Ned had gone by, resuming his whistle.

Mr. Stone smiled a little and spoke a few words to Mollie. She colored slightly, followed the tall form of her lover a moment with her eyes, then gave a gracious answer, and half an hour later, when Ned and Miss Lovel met the pretty light carriage on the beach in which Lee Stone took his daily drive, they received a pleasant nod from pretty Mollie, who was his companion, and who looked as though she was thoroughly enjoying his society.

"She certainly lost no time in following my suggestions," Ned told himself half in surprise, "and she had evidently found the society of Stone anything but boring."

"What a handsome couple they make," Miss Lovel said, with a certain gleam in her steady, gray eye. Ned colored suddenly, but didn't quite know why.

"Perhaps you didn't know that Miss Annes is my promised wife," he said, a trifle coldly.

"Oh, but so many engagements are broken in a summer at the seaside; one never minds that very much," the languid belle said indifferently.

That night there was a hop at the hotel, and Ned had made up his mind while dressing to be a little more attentive to Mollie; but to his surprise he didn't find Mollie Annes shrinking under her mother's wing as had been her custom. A number of old friends had arrived while they were at dinner, and they were about her, and while she gave him (Ned) a smile from the distance he found it quite difficult to get near her. Then a slight tap on his arm informed him that Miss Lovel was asking him why he was so preoccupied, and, as Mollie and Stone went circling by, joining the waltzers, he followed them with Miss Lovel.

"A rather pronounced flirtation," Lee laughed, later, when he and Mollie stood on the hotel terrace, watching the moonlight on the sea and strand, and one solitary couple pacing slowly along beside the waters. Both knew who they were, for a few minutes before they had seen Ned Tremaine place that pale pink scarf about the shoulders of Miss Laura Lovel as he led her across the terrace, too much engrossed in his task, it would seem, to notice Mollie or her companion.

"Oh, everybody flirts more or less at a seaside hotel; one has nothing else to do, you know," Mollie answered Lee with a little ripple of laughter, and he looked on the pretty face to which the moonlight was so tender, his voice sinking almost to a whisper as he spoke to her.

"It is a cowardly pastime for a man," he said softly, "and for a woman it is a cruel one."

Again she laughed, while arranging the bracelet on her arm; a touch of mockery was in the rippling voice.

"And you—is it pleasant to know that you are cruel and cowardly!" she questioned. "One is tempted to become personal when such remarks come from one who is said to count his conquests with cruel pride, and to whom the world gives no higher aim than to fascinate—and remain careless. Am I too plain? Forgive me."

"I forgive you freely—as I would forgive you all things, Miss Anuess: but neither you nor the world fully understands me. I may seem a trifler; but were the woman I love to love me in return no smile would be to so sweet as hers, no presence half so dear."

Mollie had been watching the couple on the sands going slowly back and forth, back and forth in the moonlight; now she lifted her sweet young face and looked at him with a sort of wondering pity.

"Do we all wrong you, then?" she asked, gently. "Have you failed in your wooing? Can you not win where you love?"

His face flushed a little at her words, and she, watching it, was struck by its strength and beauty. How did it chance that she had never noticed it before?

"I am not left the chance to woo or win her," he said, slowly; "she is another's promised wife."

"Ah," she said, pityingly; and she gave him her hand in a sweet, womanly sympathy, never for an instant connecting his words with herself. He lifted the small hand reverently to his lips, and drawing it through his arm turned towards the beach. As he did so he found himself facing Ned Tremaine and Laura Lovel, who were coming in from the moonlight, and he noticed that the young man's face was quite white, while there was a half scornful smile on the lips of the fair belle of the seaside. But the two couples passed each other in silence, the one going down to the stretch of the glittering sand, the other going in to the dancers.

A week later, and Mollie had just come in from a long hour, peaceful and calm, spent with Lee in a quiet nook among the rocks that overhung the ocean. He had been reading to her there some of the sweetest poems given to the world by genius. Her heart had thrilled as he read, and new, strange feelings had stirred it. When he closed the book he had looked up and found her eyes filled with tears. And now in her own room she was asking herself how it was that what she had commenced but for the purpose of annoying Ned had in one brief week slain all her old resentment against Miss Lovel and made her thoughts turn constantly, not to Ned Tremaine, who was her affianced husband, but to Lee Stone, who was termed the greatest flirt at the beach. What was changing in her life? When she now met Ned and Laura it did not pain her as it used. Was it because a handsomer face, a stronger and a nobler face than Ned's was constantly near, ready to turn to her with devotion, ready to light if she smiled?

A servant broke her ponderings by bringing her two messages — one a boquet of white flowers with a few feathery sprays of fern among their whiteness and one crimson rose gleaming red from their centre, and in it was a note from Lee asking her to go for a drive with him by moonlight; the other was a few angry lines from Ned, asking if she remembered that she was betrothed to him while she allowed every gossip at the hotel to chatter of her flirtation with Lee Stone.

"I have been patient, waiting an opportunity of speaking to you," he wrote, "but you will not give me one, so I write to ask you if you wish our engagement broken; to all it would seem so."

She trembled a little as she read, and her sweet face changed color; but she went to her desk, drew from it every letter he had ever sent her, formed them and his ring in a package, and wrote him the following note:

It was I who first taught patience while my existence was forgotten for one who was what you bade me become—"a society character." Why should I fancy that you wish an interview with me of late? It is not so long since you could not spare a moment for me from Miss Lovel. Do I wish our engagement broken? Perhaps we both wish it. Ned: at least let us break it, since I so displease you. I send you your letters and ring.

Then, although a choking sensation was in her throat, she penned a brief note to Lee:

"I shall be pleased to go with you," that was all; and in the starlight—the moon rose late—she went with him out over the beach and far along the country.

Was it strange that he noticed she no longer wore Ned's ring? Was it strange that he told her of his love, and that she listened silently, believingly, with a strange flutter at her heart? Was it strange that when they drove back, lingering beside the sobbing ocean, another ring should deck her finger and another bond should lie upon her life? Well, two others walked upon the strand, two whom the gossips called lovers; and yet when it was told that Mollie Annes was to place her happiness in the keeping of the "flirt of the beach," one man who heard it turned as white as death and shrank from the sight of the beautiful woman beside him, although men called her fair, and many said she had won him from his faith; yet Mollie was too happy to regret, although she sometimes remembers.—[Toledo Blade.

Put Problems to the Ancients.

Among the problems with which it pleased the ancients to perplex themselves was one which bears in an instructive manner on the doctrine of limits. It may be thus stated: The swift footed Achilles started in pursuit of a tortoise which was 10,000 yards from him, Achilles running 100 times faster than the tortoise. Now, when Achilles had traversed the 10,000 yards, the tortoise had traveled 100 yards; when Achilles had traveled these 100 yards the tortoise had traveled one yard; when Achilles had traversed this yard the tortoise was still 100th part of a yard in advance; when Achilles had traversed this 100th part of a yard the tortoise was the 10,000th part of a yard in advance, and so on forever—the tortoise being at each stage in advance of Achilles by one hundredth part of the distance Achilles had traversed in the preceding stage. The tortoise then remains always in advance of Achilles by some distance however minute; and therefore Achilles can never overtake the tortoise. But we know that Achilles traveling faster than the tortoise will overtake it. Therefore, Achilles will and will not overtake the tortoise; which is absurd. The ancients were strangely fond of problems of this sort. Thus there was the famous problem about the ass between two exactly equal bundles of hay, at exactly equal distance. "This ass," says the sophist, "will attempt to eat neither bundle; for, by whatever line of reasoning it could be shown that he would turn first to one bundle, by a line of reason precisely similar it may be shown that he would turn first to the other. But he cannot turn first to both. Therefore, he will turn to neither." Another of these problems was thus worded: "Epimenides, the Cretan, says that the Cretans are liars. Now Epimenides is himself a Cretan, therefore Epimenides is a liar. Therefore the Cretans are not liars. Therefore Epimenides is not a liar. Therefore the Cretans are liars. Therefore Epimenides is a liar. Therefore," etc., ad infinitum. Others stated the problem in a more simple form, thus: "When a man says I lie, does he lie or does he not lie? If he lies he speaks the truth, if he speaks the truth he lies."—[Commercial Advertiser.

A Queer Mode of Catching Fish.

A lazy but unlawful method of obtaining fish from the ponds was once quite common. This was stupefying or drugging the fish by means of some narcotic plants. The favorite growth for this purpose was the devil's shoe-string, a small plant with extremely long, tough, and slender roots. This queer plant, with its uncanny name, was much used by the Indians as a medicine, and is said to be the basis for several blood purifiers with long and alliterative names. A plentiful supply of the plant being obtained the individual finds a log which projects well out into the water, and getting astride of it dips it in and alternately beats it with a stick or paddle. After every good beating it is shaken about in the water and the supply replenished, and this continued until the pond is thoroughly impregnated with the singular properties of the weed. The fish soon commence rising to the surface and gasping as if for breath. A few faint struggles follow and then the fish lie helpless and inert upon the surface only to be gathered in and serve as a meal. It is said that the meat is not at all affected by the treatment the fish have undergone, but it is with considerable squeamishness and trepidation that a person for the first time dines upon poisoned or narcotized fish.—[Atlanta Constitution.

From Left to Right.

Dr. Delaunay, a French scientist, asserts that centrifugal movements of the hands—that is, from left to right—are characteristic of intelligence and higher development; centripetal, or the reverse, are indicative of incomplete evolution. He suggests this as a scientific test in employing servants and others. To ascertain the qualities of an applicant cook give her a place to clean or a sauce to make, and watch how she moves her hand in either act. If she moves it from left to right, or in the direction of the hands of a watch, you may trust her; if in the other way, she is certain to be stupid and incapable. The intelligence of people may also be gauged by asking them to make a circle on paper with a pencil, and noting in which direction the hand is moved. The good students in a mathematical class draw circles from left to right. "Down East" a similar test of "faculty" has existed from the earliest day. No Yankee farmer would hire a "hand," or "storekeeper" employ a clerk who should whittle to him instead of from him.

The Tuft of White Hair.

The Duke of Simonetta, an Italian nobleman, who is making a name as a musical composer, is the descendant of a long line of dukes who have a strange peculiarity. They have jet-black hair, and just above the forehead a white tuft. This they had for a long series of years, until the father of the present duke was born some 60 years ago. He had a thick, curly head of brown hair, without a particle of white, and with him it was supposed there was an end of the special mark. But his son is a tall, handsome man, with a head of black hair, and he has exactly the same white tuft.—[Times-Democrat.

FOR FARM AND GARDEN.

Transplanting Trees.

A writer in the London Garden offers some good remarks in favor of more care in transplanting trees than many persons give them, the substance of which is as follows: First, the ground should be well-broken up; secondly, the hole for receiving the tree should be partly filled with fine mellow soil on which the roots are to be spread and pressed, which is much better than placing them on a hard bottom. Every root should be carefully extended in all directions, and the soil then filled in—over the bottom roots first, and over the upper ones afterwards. If ample roots have been secured when the tree was taken up, no staking is required, but when the external bracing is necessary, it is to be done with three galvanized wires fixed to a collar at a convenient height, and the other ends to stumps driven into the ground at a proper distance from the tree. Wire appears better than stakes, and is cheaper in the end. Tar cord may be used instead of wire.

Bedding Places of Pigs in Pastures.

It is common for sows with their young to resort to a certain place to sleep, even in the pasture. It is good practice to watch these bedding places, and every two weeks or so scatter a double handful of sulphur over the bed. This will not only keep the pigs from getting lousy, but mangy as well, and keep their skins and systems in good condition; for a portion of it will be absorbed by the skin, and it acts as an alterative upon the system. Around the lots and pens carbolic acid should be used with no sparing hand, and no money that the breeder spends will return so good an interest. It not only disinfects from foul odors and noxious gases, but its free use will prevent cholera and other diseases—if not directly imported by bringing infected animals on the place. It clears and purifies the ground and floors, and the air as well.—[American Agriculturist.

Poultry Notes.

One of the best products of the farm in an ordinary way is eggs, and the market is always open for all offerings.

Roup is produced by a bad cold, neglected. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Don't neglect a cold, as it is much more easily cured than roup.

Geese may be picked every six weeks in warm weather, but they must be well fed with a mess of meat once a day. When they are picked often they do not lay, as the growth of new feathers weakens and debilitates them.

An excellent egg-producing food is one part cornmeal, two parts bran, two parts ground oats, one part ground meat, and one part middlings, to which may be added a small proportion of bone meal and salt; scald it and feed early in the morning.

Meal fed to poultry should always be mixed with boiling water, which partially cooks the food. A common error is to make the food too wet and soft in which state it becomes injurious to the fowls, compelling them to take more water than their nature requires.

The farmer who keeps a flock of twenty-five or thirty hens, with the usual accompaniment of a hundred or more lively chickens, and allows them to share his domain in common with himself, his other stock and farm utensils, finds perplexity and most abominable company at every turn. The hen at large, in her multiplied form, is worse than an army of locusts, and her following as offensive as a pestilence.

Care and Handling of Milk.

A Scottish authority, Mr. J. A. Stephenson, in a lecture lately delivered upon butter-making and marketing, has this to say about milking and the record of milk:

In addition to having suitable food and pure water, dairy cows should be provided with properly ventilated houses, constructed in such a way as to resist the heat of summer and coldness of winter, and to ensure a circulation of fresh air without drafts. Uniformity of temperature is very largely conducive to a regular milk yield, and if its quantity is dependent upon the kind and amount of food consumed, its quality is affected by the kind of air inhaled. So far as concerns the purity and flavor of milk and butter, there need be no hesitation in asserting that the expense and study devoted to a proper system of feeding is largely thrown away in the case of cows kept in an ill-ventilated building and breathing a vitiated atmosphere, charged with carbonic acid gas and ammonia—the products of decomposition. A due proportion of oxygen in the air breathed is essential to the purity not only of the blood of the animal, but also of the milk, which is a secretion from it.

The milking should be done in a gentle, thorough and cleanly manner. Milk or "strippings" left in the udder through careless or incomplete milking, are either re-absorbed into the system, tending to the fattening of the cow and her spoliation as a milker, or become sources of irritation and disease. Were any conclusive investigation practicable, it would probably appear that diseases of the udder have very largely resulted from this cause alone. In order to have proper cleanliness, a pail of water should be provided, in which the milkers may frequently rinse their hands.

As an item of good management and economy, the weighing the produce of cows at every milking is very strongly to be recommended, which, with the appliances now to be had for the purpose, can be done with the minimum of time and trouble, and with the following advantages: (1) It provides an effectual check on the work of the milkers, which, in consideration of what has just been said about the consequences of inefficient milking, is a matter of vital importance, especially in the larger dairies, when hired milkers are employed. (2) It furnishes a reliable indication as to the general health of the cows, the milk yield of which is affected by the slightest ailment. (3) A most valuable result obtained by the regular weighing of the milk, is the exact estimate it enables one to form of the comparative values of individual cows in the herd, not only in regard to milk yield, but when a proper test is regularly applied, of butter production also, a matter of the utmost importance in selection, which is at the very foundation of the dairy farmer's success, the use of inferior cows resembling the working with imperfect machinery, at a sacrifice both of labor and produce. (4) The daily milk yield of thecow, supplemented with particulars of the butter contents of the milk in ounces per gallon (a natural system having been perfected by means of which the necessary testing can be done in an accurate, inexpensive and expeditious manner), these together provide the details for a record of much value, not only for the determination of the merits of individual cows, but also furnish the basis for a system of proportional feeding advocated by Sir J. B. Lawes, and the details of which have since been worked out for practical use.

Washing Sheep Before Shearing.

Galen Wilson says in the New York Tribune: "Much has been published in regard to the barbarity of the usual mode of washing sheep before shearing. They are timid animals and particularly fearful of getting into water. It is very difficult to drive a flock across a stream, and when one does succeed in doing so, they invariably jump it. They have an innate dread of wetting even their feet. It is not so with other farm animals. Then when sheep come to be plunged in by the washers and retained five or ten minutes, what must be their feelings? It must be a shock to the system, and shocks are always bad. This heroic treatment is downright cruelty. Washing removes only the loose dirt from the wool, and it is doubtful if that embraces two per cent. of the whole weight of fleece, yet buyers deduct from 20 to 30 per cent. from unwashed wool. Washed or unwashed it has to be scoured before manufacturing, and hence why wash it at all? Farmers do it simply to save such an outrageous deduction on the price. Three years ago a friend with a flock of sixty sheep did not wash, and said he should not again; but when he sold his wool he was compelled to submit to a discount of 20 per cent., amounting to about $25, and now he has returned to the old process. At a woolbuyers' store I have seen unwashed fleeces thrown into the general lot and it is doubtful if manufacturers make much difference if any. In the absence of desired information as to the true inwardness of this woolwashing business, it must be concluded that somebody is taking advantage of the woolgrowers who fail to present washed fleeces. As soon as they can get full price for unwashed wool minus the weight of dirt washing takes out, just so soon will they be glad to relinquish the unnatural process. It would be well to test one or two fleeces this season by washing after shearing and then one could know just what shrinkage there is.

Children in Algiers.

The boys, when running about, wear nothing but a long white chemise and dark blue vest, but of all bewitching creatures in the world the little girls can scarcely be surpassed, says F. A. Bridgeman, in writing about Algiers in Harper's Magazine. They are everywhere, and must strike a stranger, certainly an artist, as a prominent feature of interest. Some are going to the baker's, carrying unbaked loaves piled on a plank on the head; others with little brass-bound buckets brimming with milk; singly, in crowds, always fascinating; not only pretty, but arrayed in an infinite variety of costumes, they dart from shadow into sunlight, and disappear in a twinkling round a corner or through a doorway. They wear, first, a white chemise with gauze sleeves, over it a gandoura, or chemise without sleeves, and reaching nearly to the ankles, usually of printed calico, glaring in color, and with spots, stripes, birds, branches, and leaves; this gandoura is sometimes of rich brocade or light silk. Over the first they often wear a second gandoura of tulle with a design in it, ordinarily nothing more nor less than common white curtain stuff. All the materials hang limp and flutter when they run; round the waist a broad ceinture, and over the shoulders a little bodice. On the head a conical cap, always of crimson velvet, more or less ornamented with gold thread; children and unmarried girls wear them with a strap under the chin; married women tie them on with a colored handkerchief besides the strap. Their hair is fringed square, just over the eyebrows, and plaited down the back. The operation of dyeing it dark brownish wine-color requires several days, during which time they appear certainly at a disadvantage. Henna is made into a mushy paste and plastered all over the head, as much as the hair, being tied up all over, can hold in place—and even more, for it runs down the neck, the cheeks, and into the ears. The process gives somewhat the appearance of a head modeled in wax with the hair studied in masses. The palms of the hands, fingers, and the feet and toes, are also stained.

Busy.

Mr. Stephen Cain, of East Weymouth, is drove with business in his line of masonry work, having had from 20 to 30 men employed this season. He has completed the work on the new Cafe building at Nantasket, and is to whiten all the rooms in the Rockland House and Hotel Nantasket. He has also done the mason work on three new shore houses at Strawberry Hill, Nantasket, for Shepard, Norwell & Co., and three at Hull, and has several new and stylish houses in Hingham contracted for. At Bradley's phosphate works he is building a new acid house, about 150x60, which will occupy several months, and will attend to the work on six new double tenement houses which that company will erect on their lands this season, for occupancy by their workmen.

For Chicago.

The Mass. delegation to the Republican National Convention at Chicago left Boston yesterday over the Albany line, and attached to the train was a special Pullman car chartered by Col. B. S. Lovell and 20 other G. A. R. veterans, for their exclusive use. The route is over the Boston and Albany, N. Y. Central, Lake Shore and Michigan Central. It is rumored that the Congressional slate for the Second district will be made up during the stay in Chicago, and that Hon. Elijah A. Morse's friends will make a lively effort in his behalf as a candidate for Congressional honors.

Fishing Trip.

Col. B. S. Lovell, Mr. E. T. Allen, of San Francisco, and Messrs. A. B. Grover and Station Master Bates, of East Weymouth, embarked at Cohasset last Saturday morning, in a yacht under command of the renowned yachtsman, Capt. Aubrey Crocker, for a fishing trip to Minot's ledge, where they passed the forenoon in piscatory pleasures, capturing a fair number of cod, etc. Col. Lovell must have been "high line" in the fishing, as it is said his three companions were vigorously engaged in hearing bait during the trip. Capt. Crocker set the gents ashore at the beach, where they were joined by Mrs. Lovell and daughter, Mrs. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. John P. Lovell, and the party partook of a shore dinner at the Hotel Standish.

Opening.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the Boston and Weymouth clothing store, (former stand of Mr. H. Read.) A new and select stock of goods has been put in, and the proprietor will be ready for business tomorrow. Call and examine the stock.

Children's Sunday.

The anniversary exercises of the Union Sunday school of Weymouth and Braintree were held in the church last Sunday morning, and an interesting address was made by Rev. C. J. Ryder, who has been engaged in missionary work in the west and southwest, and gave much valuable information concerning the educational and religious destitution which prevails in many parts of those sections, instancing a district in Tennessee 700 miles square, situated in the mountain region, which was without churches or schools, 90,000 women there being unable to read or write, and where a great amount of philanthropic work is needed, the white people being in a most degraded condition. He alluded to the hostility to missionary work which prevails in some localities of those parts of our country, of which an example was seen in the recent murder of a missionary by the opponents of his work. The schools among the Indians were spoken of, it being represented that many applicants for these privileges had been turned away owing to the crowded condition of the schools, the Indians showing an interest in education which contrasts strongly with the indifference of the degraded white people in other sections.

The exercises of the morning included organ voluntary, singing of select pieces by choir and school, report of the Sup't, address by the pastor, prayer and benediction.

A collection was taken for the American Missionary Association, the contribution amounting to $95.

The statistics for the year are—officers 5, teachers 17, scholars 175. Average attendance 115 3-4; united with the church, 6; contributions, $138.65.

The officers are Pastor, Rev. E. T. Pitts; Sup't, Chas. T. Crane; Ass't do., Wallace Macgregor; Treasurer, Miss Theresa M. Jenkins; Librarians, Frank W. Crane, John L. Delano.

Church Action.

It was announced in our columns early in March, that Rev. S. J. Axtell, pastor of the Baptist church of Weymouth, had tendered his resignation, to take effect June 1st, and though the church by vote largely in his favor, declined to accept the resignation, he has deemed it advisable to sunder the connection, to the regret not only of the members of the society who were in favor of his remaining here, but also of many residents with whom he had been pleasantly associated in literary and temperance work and other objects conducive to the public welfare. At a meeting of the church officers held last Monday evening, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Rev. S. J. Axtell, who has filled the office of pastor of this church nearly six years past, having became satisfied in his own mind, that the time in the providence of God had come when he could hope to be more successful in another field of labor, tendered to this church on the first sabbath in March last, his resignation of the office of pastor, to take effect June 1st, and whereas, Mr. Axtell has recently informed the standing committee of this church that he still held to his purpose to resign his office of pastor of this church, (although the church had by a two-thirds vote requested him to withdraw his resignation;) and whereas, he has during all this period striven, in a quiet and peaceful spirit to build up the interests of this church, always endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace in the church, and thus having, in general, endeared himself to the hearts of the members of this church; therefore

Resolved, that while we hereby tender to him our acceptance of his resignation, that we also tender to him our hearty good wishes and prayers for his future prosperity in the field of labor into which God in his loving care may lead him; and that the benediction of peace, which in his farewell sermon he was pleased to bespeak for us, may also attend him in his future labors in the vineyard of the Lord.

Resolved, that to his wife, our beloved sister Axtell, and their children, we extend also our prayerful desire, that God would smile continually upon their future life path, giving always true prosperity.

Resolved, That the above be placed upon the records of the church, and the clerk be requested to furnish Bro. Axtell a copy of the same.

Floral Tributes.

The body of Miss Nellie S. Hill, niece of Mr. Chas. Lund, of East Braintree, was brought from Dorchester last week and interred in the Village Cemetery. The grave was profusely covered with floral mementoes by the sorrowing friends, at the head and foot being two floral columns formed of roses, pinks, lilies and carnations, each column being surmounted with a white dove. On the mound were three beautiful pillows inscribed "Rest," "Aunty," "Sister," also wreaths, cross and bouquets—the designs being 16 in number, and of great beauty.

At Home.

Mr. George A. Armington returned home from Cleveland, Ohio, last Monday, to spend his vacation here. He has officiated as instructor of Mechanical Engineering in the Case School of Applied Science in that city, also having charge of that department, and has been re-elected to the position, with an advanced salary. The school was founded in 1876 by Leonard Case, of Cleveland, who donated valuable lands to endow and establish a scientific school there, from which the institution derives a large income. An elegant building is now being erected for the school, to replace the one which was destroyed by fire about a year ago.

School Discipline.

The discipline of the scholars under the charge of Mr. J. W. Armington, principal of the Hunt school is excellent. It has been for a long time the custom of the children to form in line and at a signal to enter the building, and those who happen along there a few moments before the sessions begin will see the scholars orderly march from the yard to their school rooms. The scholars themselves appear to be very earnest in making so creditable an appearance.

Musical.

Mr. E. Walter Arnold, of North Weymouth, who has recently disposed of his grocery business there, has accepted a proposition from the Denman Thompson Company to engage with that troupe as a vocalist, at a liberal salary. The company will make their entertainment tour in the fall, for which rehearsals of their new piece, "Two Sisters", are now in progress.

Cheerful Givers.

The Cheerful Givers Mission Band of the Baptist Sunday school had a social gathering in the vestry last Wednesday afternoon, with exercises by the children, comprising "The Mission Stars," singing and recitations, under direction of the president of the Band, Miss Lucy Crane. The ladies of the Sewing Circle assisted in the preparation of a quilt to be forwarded to one of the mission stations and a supper was served for the company.

Annual Rehearsal.

The pupils of Miss S. M. Blanchard, the popular music teacher of Weymouth gave much pleasure to a large assembly of their friends at the lecture-room of the Union church last Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, when the annual rehearsal of her scholars took place. Miss Blanchard is a thorough and conscientious teacher, and as might have been expected, the efforts of her pupils in a lengthy programme showed much proficiency and advancement in their studies. The platform was finely decorated with large bouquets of flowers.

An open air Gospel service will be held in Washington square next Sunday at 4 o'clock p. m., with preaching by Rev. E. T. Pitts.

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

On Sunday, June 3d, the pastor of the Old North, Rev. F. H. Palmer, preached a discourse appropriate to the 265th anniversary of the church and society, taking for his text Job viii: 8, "For enquire, I pray thee, of the former age and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers." After some fitting remarks by way of introduction he proceeded to show how much the community and the whole country owe to religion,—such religion as that represented by the almost three centuries of church life in this ancient society. The great constructive idea in the minds of our forefathers when they came to this inhospitable coast was a religious idea. Out of this grew (1) our Educational System. The foundation of the religion of our fathers was the Bible. In order that the whole community might become intelligently acquainted with the Bible, and that an educated ministry might expound it, schools were established and attendance upon them made compulsory. Here is the germ of our common school system. (2) Our Political Institutions may be traced to the same source. Our fathers' religious conceptions of the common brotherhood of men, and their absolute equality before God, gave the seed-thought of our free institutions and our 19th century liberty. (3) The same religious idea gave also a remarkably pure and healthful social life in the communities where the influence of the church and the ministry was most powerfully felt, and constituted one of the strongest possible deterrents from sin and crime. In conclusion the preacher illustrated his points from the life of this particular church, reviewing some of the interesting facts in its history and exhorting his hearers to go into the future with new zeal and determination to be worthy of their honorable past. In the course of the sermon he spoke of the fact that the church had been weakened from time to time by the withdrawal of members to form other churches in different parts of the town; but he said that this was her glory that she was an honorable mother living in a green old age, surrounded by prosperous children, and rejoicing in their successes as much as in her own. A large congregation listened to the discourse.

The land belonging to the public park, fronting on Sea street, has been laid out in walks, lawns and flower beds, in a beautiful and artistic style. The designer, E. S. Beals, Esq., has showed remarkable skill and good taste in what he has done, and the Improvement Association will not need the service of a landscape gardener while we can have it done by the president just as well. Mr. Haggerty, acting under the orders of Mr. Beals, has graded the lots and sodded the borders in a workmanlike manner, reflecting much credit to him for his ability to do nice work. The ladies are raising money to purchase flowers for the flower beds and by having the town water the park will be made attractive all the season.

The North Weymouth Morning Star Quartette, composed of the well known talent, H. A. Newton, Maj. F. A. Bicknell, David Benson and B. F. Thomas Esq., went to Boston Monday on their annual outing, and on their return home stopped at John A. Holbrook, Esq's and gave him a grand serenade. Mr. Holbrook opened wide his doors and after thanking them heartily for their delightful singing invited the Morning Stars to partake of the best the house afforded, but as it was nearing daylight and the "stars" would soon grow dim, they thanked the host for his kind invitation and retired to their several homes, having enjoyed a pleasant time.

A young farmer of Hingham, returning home from Boston last Friday night with a load of swill, created quite a stir as he was driving through this village. When near Torrey's corner he ran his team into two telegraph poles and broke his harness. Officer Kidder appearing on the scene, procured the assistance of David Ford to take the young farmer and his team home.

Miss Lizzie Jackson, with twenty-two other ladies and gentlemen, were conveyed in an elegant barge to this place, spending the day at Veader's Cafe, and enjoying a pleasant time.

Mr. C. H. Clubbuck of Curtis street, has had his house richly adorned this week with paint in parti-colors, by H. F. Kennerson, and it is said to be one of the prettiest houses in Old Spain.

Parties are moving into the cottages at Fort Point, our beautiful summer resort.

Business is brisk at Cleverly's Cafe, Fort Point.

An item published in the Gazette two weeks ago stating that the authorities were intending to put a police force at Fort Point Sundays, to stop all violations of the Sunday laws, was no item of mine, and such a statement was uncalled for. A more respectable, law-abiding people cannot be found on the Atlantic coast than those who reside at Fort Point during the summer season, most of them being highly respected citizens of our own town. This will also apply to Rose Cliff. N. M.

S. Arthur Pratt, United States Consul at Zanzibar, returned to North Weymouth from Washington Saturday, where he had been called to make his report to the Government.

Holden & Sladen, successors to E. Walter Arnold, took possession of the store this week. These gentlemen have experience in the business and come highly recommended. They will be pleased to receive a call from all customers and hope by fair dealing to obtain a share of public patronage.

James B. Potter and family arrived at their summer residence on the Otis Nash place this week.

The Bay View House, at the end of Sea street, has opened for the summer.

The new barn of Rev. F. H. Palmer is nearly completed.

Changes.

T. E. Kinder has moved into the house occupied by E. T. Williams, on Pearl street, Mr. Williams moving into the part of the house occupied by Mr. H. Collyer on Newton street. Mr. Collyer moving into the other side.

Mr. Augustus Ellis and family, also his father and mother, arrived at their summer residence, the Evans place, last Tuesday.

The Y. P. S. C. E. have purchased a new organ for use at their meetings, and wish to thank all those who contributed towards it.

Pilgrim Fathers.

A new Colony of Pilgrim Fathers will be instituted by Deputy Supreme Governor Albert A. May, in Knights of Labor hall, North Weymouth, next Tuesday evening. Dr. Wm. A. Drake has been appointed medical examiner, and all who desire to join as charter members will do well to see him at once. A cordial invitation is extended to the members of the Colony at East Weymouth to be present.

Opening.

The rebuilding of the Cafe at Hotel Nantasket has been completed, and as a fitting inauguration of the summer pleasures at this shore resort the proprietors, Messrs. Russell & Sturgis, extended invitations to a large number of their friends and representatives of the press to partake of a nice shore banquet yesterday afternoon, when the succulent clam and other ocean delicacies were objects of attention to a houseful of diners.

War Lecture.

Rev. E. S. Ufford, of Hingham, gives his illustrated war lecture this evening in the lecture room of the Union church. The lecture is said to be very interesting, especially to the "boys in blue." The admission is 20 cents for adults, 10 cents for children.

Temperance.

Sunday evening next a union temperance meeting will be held at the Baptist church, when an address will be made by Hon. B. B. Johnson, of Waltham. The Philharmonic Quartette will furnish selections of music for the occasion.

Historical Society.

There will be a meeting of the Weymouth Historical Society at Tufts Library, on Wednesday evening, June 20, at 7.30 o'clock.

The Mail Car Tragedy.

A letter from the Provinces, which came over the Bangor route, addressed to Mr. Mills, was received at the Weymouth postoffice Tuesday, the letter being smeared with blood—a memento of the murder of the mail clerk, Jerry Sinclair by his fellow clerk Sellons.

EAST WEYMOUTH.

Crescent Lodge worked the second degree before a large audience, last evening.

The watering cart was out doing good service on Broad street Tuesday morning.

Contractor Evans with a gang of men has been at work paving the gutter across Madison street this week.

James L. Bates Camp, S. of V., will have a drill at Reynolds hall, next Thursday evening.

Wessagusset Colony of Pilgrim Father have seven candidates for initiation next Wednesday evening.

Sherry Bros., wool scourers, are talking of leasing the middle mill of the Weymouth Iron Co. for their business.

R. B. Smith, who has been an invalid for some time past, went to Cottage City Wednesday, for his health, and will stay there several weeks.

We are pleased to note that Mrs. Lizzie F. Graves, clerk at the postoffice, who has been sick for the past two weeks, is improving.

Officers Garey and Gardner paid a visit last Friday to Thomas Murphy, and brought away 1 1-2 gallons of whiskey with them.

Up to the first of June about 400,000 herring had been taken from the river, which is the largest number that has been taken for twenty-five years.

Mechanics Temple of Honor will hold a strawberry and ice cream festival at T. of H. hall next Friday evening. Ladies are requested to bring pastry.

Fred Lewis, for a number of years employed by Strong & Carroll, has resigned his position there and accepted one with Humphrey Bros., grocers, at Hingham.

The Harlequin Lawn Tennis Club will hold a special meeting next Wednesday evening at the court of Miss M. Abbie Rogers, to make preparations for a tournament to be held Wednesday, July 4.

The Ladies Social Circle connected with the M. E. Church, will meet in the vestry of the church next Wednesday afternoon, and at 6 o'clock will give a strawberry supper.

The Lay Preachers' Association Praying Band, of Boston, will hold a song and gospel service at Reform Club hall next Wednesday evening, at 7.45 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

James L. Bates Camp, S. of V., received invitations from Co. G, 1st Regiment, Independent Boston Fusileers, "Senators," to visit them at the encampment of the First Brigade at South Framingham, this week.

The firm who came to East Weymouth last Wednesday to examine with a view of purchasing the upper and wharf mills, have decided not to purchase, and the furnaces are being taken out.

At the meeting of the general executive board of the Knights of Labor, held at Rochester, N. Y., last Friday, Charles J. McMorrow was elected one of the delegates to the general assembly.

Rev. D. A. Jordan, presiding elder delivered an interesting sermon upon the "Resurrection of life and body," last Sunday morning, and in the evening Rev. William Burt, superintendent of Methodist missions in Italy, gave an interesting and able address on Italy, and his work among the Italians.

Parties are contemplating cutting a new road through from Middle street, starting between the property occupied by Josiah Vinal and Mrs. E. E. Farmer, to run diagonally through property of the Bates heirs and connect with Chard street near the residence of D. P. Tilden. This would bring a number of desirable house lots into the market, for which there will be a ready sale.

Birthday Surprise Party.

Master Bertie Turpel reached his 9th birthday Monday, June 11, and was surprised by a party of his friends and schoolmates who presented him with a nice gold ring. After games and tricks were played there was a bountiful collation including ice cream. After spending the evening in a pleasant way the company departed for their homes.

On Sunday evening last Rev. E. S. Ufford, of Hingham, gave an interesting temperance discourse in Reform Club hall, his subject being "Is the young man safe?" Rev. Mr. Thacher of Brockton, was also present and made a very telling address.

On Monday evening the sisters of the Reform Club were tendered a surprise in the shape of cake, ice cream and strawberries by the brother members, which was accepted by them with very good grace. The evening was pleasantly passed in short speechmaking. Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond were present and favored the company with several songs, and a general good time was enjoyed by all present.

The Temperance Loyal Legion, Co. H, Mrs. Henry B. Raymond leader, will give an entertainment in the vestry of the M. E. church on Monday evening next, June 18. The company has been organized three years and this is their first entertainment with an admission fee, and it is hoped the public will be liberal in their patronage. Admission 10 cents.

Many have fears of danger from lighting if the new fire alarm is put in, (which no doubt will be inside of a month.) This is a mistaken idea, for your house is much better protected by having an electric wire attached to it, with a good ground, as electricity will never leave a good conductor for a poor one, wire being a much better conductor than wood.

At the annual meeting of the W. C. T. U., held last Tuesday with Mrs. Z. L. Bicknell, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:—President Mrs. Henry B. Raymond; 1st vice do., Mrs. Nelson Gardiner; 2d vice do., Mrs. James Matheson; 3d vice do., Mrs. J. Wesley Tirrell; 4th vice do., Mrs. Jas. Lovell; secretary, Mrs. Z. L. Bicknell; treasurer, Mrs. R. V. Merchant; chaplain, Mrs. Elizabeth Carlton; committee on work, Mrs. R. V. Merchant, Mrs. Francis Hutchinson, Mrs. Joseph Bagley.

Family Gathering.

Mrs. Henry M. Libby and Mrs. W. P. Barleigh, of New Hampshire, sister and niece of Mr. Kinsman Chamberlain, have been visiting him for the past two weeks. They came in season to help celebrate his 77th birthday, which occurred on the 13th, taking him entirely by surprise, and what is a rare occurrence, it was also the 60th birthday of his sister, Mrs. Libby. His children were all present besides other relatives, and the day was passed in a very pleasant, though quiet manner, it being the Sabbath. Mr. Chamberlain has been in feeble health for sometime past, but it is hoped that this event will tend to cheer him up and give him a new lease of life.

Strawberry Festival.

The strawberry festival and sale of aprons and fancy articles, held at Masonic hall last Wednesday evening, by the ladies connected with the Unitarian church, proved to be one of the most enjoyable occasions that they have thus far held. There were tables upon which was a large variety of aprons, from a doll's to a woman's size, which sold rapidly, at good prices. The confectionery table was also well patronized in the banquet hall. The corps of waiters were kept busy serving fine strawberries, all ripe, one plate for a quarter. At eight o'clock there was an entertainment of half an hour's duration, the following being the program: Duet, "On the Moonlight Stream," Mrs. Whiting and Mrs. Orr; reading, "The total accident and what became of it," Miss Ida Litchfield; clapper solo, Master Stevie Pratt; recitation, "The Dying Newsboy," Miss Mildred Hyland; solo, "Ye Pretty Birds," Miss Lillian Crane; reading, "Friar Philip," Miss Mildred Hyland; solo, "Song that reached my heart," and encore "White Sails," Mrs. Whiting.

Remarks were made by D. M. Easton, after which the floor was cleared and a social hop enjoyed until midnight. The fair, though a small one, was a financial success, and netted the ladies over $50. We understand a committee are making arrangements to hold a picnic soon at some farm house in Scituate, full particulars of which will be given later.

Children's day will be observed at the M. E. church on Sunday, June 17. The church will be trimmed with flowers as usual. Sermon in the morning to the children by the pastor, at 10.30; Sunday school following; concert by the children at 3.30. The infant class will present an exercise entitled "Suffer the little ones to come unto me and forbid them not." Also, a Scripture responsive service entitled "The Fruitful Vineyard," with singing by the choir.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

The annual supper of the Improvement Association, at Music hall next Tuesday evening, will be one of the conspicuous events of the week. The committee of ladies will meet in the afternoon and make the tables look as inviting as possible, and twenty lads and misses will pour the coffee and attend to the calls of the members, in connection with the supper. It is intended to have the company sit down promptly at 7.30 o'clock, in order to finish the after-supper exercises at a seasonable hour. The brief speeches will be varied with singing by competent artists, and a gathering of two hundred or more villagers about the social board cannot fail of itself being profitable and enjoyable.

Rev. William H. Bolster of the Union church exchanges with Rev. F. A. Warfield of Brockton next Sunday morning. At the close of the service a collection will be taken for the benefit of the Swedish Congregational church recently established at Brockton.

Canton Nemasket No. 40, Patriarchs Militant, of Brockton will visit Wildey lodge next Monday evening. As this will be a very interesting occasion, it is expected that the attendance of members for that evening will be largely increased.

At the monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Improvement Association, Friday evening, an interesting report was submitted by the special committee appointed to look after the electric light interest. They had canvassed for enough to secure nearly $1300 for the ten lights contemplated, and an endeavor will be made to raise the full amount of $1650. This will insure the erection of the plant and the running expenses for one year.

Children's Sunday was observed here with everything of its customary success last Sunday at the Congregational churches, and the floral decorations, if anything, were superior in variety and arrangement to those of years past. The attendance was large. At the Second church the space about the altar was lined with ferns and leaves, strikingly dotted with bright blossoms and floral pieces, the effect being very fine. Rev. Mr. Alvord gave the story of the "Children's Crusade" in the 13th century, and in the evening came the regular concert, under the direction of Henry Jessamine. At the Union church where the large platform and altar railing gave room for a generous floral offering, the picture presented by the leaves and flowers was elegant, and in the evening, as may be imagined, the most effective and beautiful that has ever been provided. The blending of colors was excellent and specially noticeable. Rev. Mr. Bolster directed his attention to the children in his morning sermon, and at 7 o'clock an unusually fine concert, arranged by Mrs. Louis A. Cook, fitly closed the services of the day. At this church six infants received the rite of baptism. We give the concert program at each of the churches.

Second Cong'l Church.

Organ voluntary; anthem; prayer; devotional exercise; greeting, Ella Merritt; singing, Children; recitation, Florence Loud; Children's Prayer, dialogue; Our Treasures, Lillian Blanchard; singing, Victory Shepherd and Mabel Gardner; Conscience, Sadie Derby; Little Ones; solo, Miss Lydia Torrey; reading, Alice Tirrell; Wonderful Children's Days, dialogue; recitation, Lina M. Loud; recitation, Grace Tirrell; singing, Children; recitation, R. Tower; recitation, V. Booth; remarks, Pastor; hymn 557; benediction.

Union Cong'l Church.

Singing, Choir; prayer; singing, "O! be glad ye children;" recitation, Sidney Cook; recitation, Mary L. Vining; exercise, Infant class; solo, Not a sparrow falleth, Miss Ella Clark; recitation, Dorothy Wetherbee; exercise, Primary teacher's class; song, Lou Reed; recitation, Allie May; Union Quartette; recitation May Reed; exercise, Boys class; recitation, Katie Belle Reed; Motion song, little girls; recitation, Lora Hunt; solo, "Cast thy bread upon the waters," Miss Helen Derby; recitation, Grace Hunt; duet, May and Lou Reed; original valedictory, Fred Bolster; singing of Coronation; benediction.

By invitation, the members of the Second Cong'l parish enjoyed a pleasant social entertainment at the residence of Mr. Wm. Dyer Tuesday evening. The rooms were filled with large numbers of old and young, drawn thither by the thoughts of generous hospitality in the past at such gatherings. No one was disappointed. Every moment was full of enjoyment, and host and hostess did their best to cater to the wants of everybody. Ice cream and refreshments were supplied generously, while singing and other features of a social nature, helped make the evening delightful and interesting.

Mr. A. A. Hadley, who has been the popular organist at the Union church for the past year, and who goes South in a few weeks to accept an important musical position, will give an organ concert at the Union church Saturday evening at 7.45 o'clock, assisted by Miss Ella Clark, contralto, of this village, and the following Boston talent:—Mr. C. W. Turner tenor, Mr. B. Brown tenor, Mr. C. D. Miller violin, Mr. E. M. Vazquez flute. An interesting programme of classical and popular music is sure to be presented in view of this list of eminent artists, and Mr. Hadley will provide some choice organ selections, the character of which can be judged by all of his efforts in this direction. The admission will be only twenty-five cents and the audience should be large.

A white robin may be seen almost every morning early in the vicinity of Highland cemetery. This is his fourth annual visit to this region, and the rare species makes his appearance all the more noticeable.

Since the road scraper laid the foundation for a good grass plot in the middle of Bicknell street just between Bank and Highland cemetery, the grass and weeds have taken root in fine shape and the prospect is good for a heavy crop. The locality is a little conspicuous, however, for such an experiment.

Mr. Fred W. Clark sang at Abington, Monday evening, with his usual success.

Clark & Foster will remove their clothing business to a store in the new Fogg building as soon as it is completed, and Mr. Fogg intends to devote the entire room of the building where they now are to manufacturing purposes. This is good news. Now let the boom materialize. Business is what we want more than anything else just now to complete the attractions of our village.

Postmaster Charles Loud has bought the factory on Main street belonging to Mr. William Shaw. He will have it moved to Independence square about July 4, the old house, which, by the way, is nearly 150 years old, will be torn down, and the building first referred to will be remodelled and fitted up with stores below and dwelling apartments above, while the widening at the corner will be accomplished. Thus the improvements go steadily on.

Russell White, formerly of Holbrook, who is at the head of the fire patrol in the city of San Francisco, has the best record of any man in the country so far as time is concerned in getting ready to start for a fire. He has five horses and as many men, and three seconds after the gong strikes everything is ready for the start.

John Vining and John Hunt of this village have passed a successful examination for the Institute of Technology, and will enter that institution at the beginning of the fall term.

The South High school nine played the North High at Weymouth, Saturday, defeating the latter by a score of 12 to 9. They play the Centre Abingtons at South Weymouth tomorrow.

The names of the graduates of the South High school are: Herbert Austin Bass, Grace Gertrude Hunt, Ella Maria Reynolds, Clara Augusta Holbrook, Louis Bradford Vining, Arria Gertrude Stewart.

Next Sunday will be observed as Floral or Children's Sunday at the Universalist church.

HENRY.

The South Weymouth Band furnished music for Post 74, of Rockland, Memorial day, giving a nice concert on the church green while the details were decorating graves in the outlying cemeteries.

County Tax

In the apportionment of county taxes for Norfolk county, Weymouth pays the fourth largest tax, $8820.60. Brookline pays $20,267.34; Milton $8033.10; Quincy $5526.50, these being the three which exceed this town in the taxation.

16-CENT PANT STRETCHER,

Is positively the BEST invention ever known for taking Wrinkles out of Pantaloons, and shaping the bottoms of the same to fit nicely over the shoe.

Pantaloons should always be suspended as shown in cut when not in use. Even those in daily wear should be thus suspended through the night.

HOW TO APPLY THE STRETCHER.

Take the front bottom part of the pants in the left hand, taking the pointed end of the stretcher in the right hand, insert the wood part up the back of the leg about three-quarters of an inch, then spring the pin point into the front about half an inch from the edge. Pantaloons that are badly wrinkled or bagged at the knee should be dampened. A good way to do this is to hang them out by the stretcher in the evening, or on a damp day.

Children's Day at East Weymouth.

Children's day was observed at the Cong'l church by a sermon in the morning, by the pastor, from the text, Prov. 30: 26—"The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks," which suggested the thought of man's weakness and dependence individually and of his security and strength when building upon the Rock, Christ Jesus. The singing by the choir was also in keeping with the subject of the sermon. In the evening a large audience attended the concert given by the Sunday school. Singing by the school, conducted by T. H. Emerson and accompanied by A. M. Raymond, organist, was a prominent feature of the service. The children presented a very attractive appearance and sang their selections in a manner that reflected much credit upon the chorister. The singing by Mrs. J. F. Drew and Mrs. Emerson was especially fine, and the song by little Berta Raymond was a very pleasing part of the service. The superintendent wishes to express his appreciation of the valuable assistance rendered by Miss Susie Pratt and other members of the Y. P. S. C. E., who provided an abundance of flowers and decorated the church, and this committee wishes to acknowledge their indebtedness to Mr. M. F. Baker, who loaned a large number of potted plants for the occasion. Recitations were given by the following members of the primary department in charge of Mrs. M. E. Hawes:—Jesse Blanchard, Robert Raymond, Percy Shaw, Fannie Staples, Elsie Noyes, Flossie Earle, Otis Blanchard, Myron Bailey, Evelyn Denbroeder, Flossie Young, Annie Burrell, Ethel Fisher, Bessie Randall, Helen Dunbar, Mylon Osgood, Ella May Raymond, Garfield Burrell, Anna Bates, Ralph Randall and Carrie Shackford. There were also recitations by the following members of the school:—Emma Raymond, Lena Shaw, Lottie Randall, Daisy Pratt, Cora Maud Burrell, Berta Raymond, Edith Sloane and Mildred Hyland.

Change of Town Name.

The residents of South Scituate had a gala day Wednesday week, observing with interesting exercises the change of the name of the town to "Norwell," its former name having existed since 1849, when it was set off from Scituate. The new name is given in honor of Mr. Henry Norwell, a well known resident, and who is of the old Boston dry goods firm of Shepard, Norwell & Co. The programme included a banquet, addresses by Gov. Ames and other prominent men, exercises by the scholars of the public schools, music by the South Weymouth band, and fireworks and a grand ball in the evening. The new name is so like to that of "Norwood," in this county, that letters may at times possibly reach the wrong place.

BRAINTREE NOTES.

At a town meeting held last evening to see if the town would adopt a new system of heating the town hall and public library and appropriate money for the same, Judge French was moderator. James T. Stevens, chairman of the committee appointed last March to consider this subject, made his report, and the town appropriated $2500 for the purpose. The same committee was appointed to expend the money and carry the work into effect, and were instructed not to close bids until the first of July.

Obituary.

Miss Rachel Ann Faxon, whose death at her residence at East Braintree, on Thursday of last week, was announced in our last issue, was a native of Braintree and daughter of Elijah and Betsey Webb Faxon. She was a graduate of the Charlestown Female Seminary, where she was fitted for a teacher's profession, and for several years she taught in public schools of this and other towns, and also in Indiana for a time, when she returned home and founded the Monatiquot Institute, for instruction of young ladies in the higher branches of English, the languages, and music. After several years of labor in this position, she visited California, Europe and the Holy Land, for relaxation from these duties, and also served for a year as a teacher among the Indians, under the auspices of the American Missionary Society. On her return she took a few pupils until her health entirely failed. She was through life an active worker in the Union church, with which she was connected, striving to reproduce the teachings of the Master, and her life furnished a bright example of noble purpose and christian zeal.

Temperance Legislation.

The summing up of the legislation in the recent session of the Massachusetts legislation, for promotion of temperance interests, is a resolution for submission of a prohibitory amendment to the people; bills passed making the minimum fee for license $1000, and for beer license $250; restricting the number of saloons to one for every 1,000 of the population, forbidding the issuing of a license for any dwelling house or place having interior communication with the dwelling or family of a tenement; prohibiting the sale of liquor on Thanksgiving day, Christmas day and Decoration day, and all election days, and declaring that all beverages containing one per cent. of alcohol are intoxicating within the meaning of the Massachusetts Law.

Personal.

Business at the well known furniture rooms of Walbridge Bros. is lively with Weymouth orders from the friends of Mr. George A. Miles, who continues his connection with that house and will be pleased to show customers the extensive line of goods in stock, which they are now advertising at "15 per cent. discount." Give him a call at 23 Washington street.

Would You Believe

The Proprietor of Kemp's Balsam gives thousands of bottles away yearly? This mode of advertising would prove ruinous if the Balsam was not a perfect cure for Coughs and all Throat and Lung troubles. 3t PHILLIPS & BACON, Grocers.

Business Men for Congress.

We take pleasure in copying the article below from the commercial paper of New England, "The New England Grocer."

There will be a vacancy in the Second Congressional District, by the retirement of Gov. Long, to be filled this fall. Hon. Elijah A. Morse, of Canton, is prominently mentioned as a candidate.

Mr. Morse is a business man and was a soldier. Aside from party considerations, upon which this paper does not take sides, we think it would be a grand thing for the country if more of the business men and the readers of our paper occupied positions of public trust.

There are too many lawyers and professional men in Congress.

If we had more business men like Mr. Morse we would have some much needed legislation. The country needs a bankrupt law. The coinage of the cheap dollar should be stopped. The Interstate Commerce law should be wiped out or radically amended. The city of Boston needs modern ordnance and coast defences to protect us from a third class European man-of-war. For all these measures the business men of the country have been petitioning for the last ten years without success. The politicians and professional men in Congress fritter away session after session in useless political wrangles, which end in nothing. Give us more business men in Congress.

Base Ball.

The North High School nine played its third game of the season on the Webb street grounds last Saturday afternoon against the South High school nine. It was a close and exciting game resulting in favor of the visitors in a score of 12 to 9. Bass, the South High pitcher, was very effective and his home run over the left field wall was a beauty. These two nines are very evenly matched, and it is hoped that another game may be arranged soon. Following is the score;—

Busy.

Mr. Stephen Cain, of East Weymouth, is drove with business in his line of masonry work, having had from 20 to 30 men employed this season. He has completed the work on the new Cafe building at Nantasket, and is to whiten all the rooms in the Rockland House and Hotel Nantasket. He has also done the mason work on three new shore houses at Strawberry Hill, Nantasket, for Shepard, Norwell & Co., and three at Hull, and has several new and stylish houses in Hingham contracted for. At Bradley's phosphate works he is building a new acid house, about 150x60, which will occupy several months, and will attend to the work on six new double tenement houses which that company will erect on their lands this season, for occupancy by their workmen.

For Chicago.

The Mass. delegation to the Republican National Convention at Chicago left Boston yesterday over the Albany line, and attached to the train was a special Pullman car chartered by Col. B. S. Lovell and 20 other G. A. R. veterans, for their exclusive use. The route is over the Boston and Albany, N. Y. Central, Lake Shore and Michigan Central. It is rumored that the Congressional slate for the Second district will be made up during the stay in Chicago, and that Hon. Elijah A. Morse's friends will make a lively effort in his behalf as a candidate for Congressional honors.

Fishing Trip.

Col. B. S. Lovell, Mr. E. T. Allen, of San Francisco, and Messrs. A. B. Grover and Station Master Bates, of East Weymouth, embarked at Cohasset last Saturday morning, in a yacht under command of the renowned yachtsman, Capt. Aubrey Crocker, for a fishing trip to Minot's ledge, where they passed the forenoon in piscatory pleasures, capturing a fair number of cod, etc. Col. Lovell must have been "high line" in the fishing, as it is said his three companions were vigorously engaged in heaving bait during the trip. Capt. Crocker set the gents ashore at the beach, where they were joined by Mrs. Lovell and daughter, Mrs. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. John P. Lovell, and the party partook of a shore dinner at the Hotel Standish.

A long Walk.

A man and his wife, with a boy of 10 years and a three months babe, applied for lodgings at the almshouse a few days ago, the man stating that they had walked from New Hampshire, carrying the babe all the way, and wished to stay at the house until they were sufficiently rested to continue their travel to Scituate, which was their destination.

LOVELL'S CORNER.

The June meeting of the Temperance Union was held last Thursday evening. The entertainment consisted of vocal solos by Mrs. A. B. Shaw and Miss Ada L. Pool, a piano solo by Florence E. Pratt, reading by Albenia Thurston, recitations by Mabel A. Stuart, L. Florence Holbrook and May Pool, and harmonica solos by Harry D. Tisdale. Dry Pickings, the original paper, was edited and read by Miss Florence E. Pratt.

Presiding Elder D. A. Jordan occupied the pulpit at the Porter M. E. church last Sunday afternoon. After the service the quarterly conference was held.

Children's Day will be observed here next Sunday.

Mrs. Virginia Jordan of Taunton is visiting relatives in this village.

The Brooks of Boston played a game of base ball with the Lovell's Corners at the field of the latter, last Saturday. The home team was the victor by a score of 7 to 1. We hear that members of the L. C. club are soon to appear in new uniforms.

Opening.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the Boston and Weymouth clothing store, (former stand of Mr. H. Read.) A new and select stock of goods has been put in, and the proprietor will be ready for business tomorrow. Call and examine the stock.

Children's Sunday.

The anniversary exercises of the Union Sunday school of Weymouth and Braintree were held in the church last Sunday morning, and an interesting address was made by Rev. C. J. Ryder, who has been engaged in missionary work in the west and southwest, and gave much valuable information concerning the educational and religious destitution which prevails in many parts of those sections, instancing a district in Tennessee 700 miles square, situated in the mountain region, which was without churches or schools, 90,000 women there being unable to read or write, and where a great amount of philanthropic work is needed, the white people being in a most degraded condition. He alluded to the hostility to missionary work which prevails in some localities of those parts of our country, of which an example was seen in the recent murder of a missionary by the opponents of his work. The schools among the Indians were spoken of, it being represented that many applicants for these privileges had been turned away owing to the crowded condition of the schools, the Indians showing an interest in education which contrasts strongly with the indifference of the degraded white people in other sections.

The exercises of the morning included organ voluntary, singing of select pieces by choir and school, report of the Sup't, address by the pastor, prayer and benediction.

A collection was taken for the American Missionary Association, the contribution amounting to $95.

The statistics for the year are—officers 5, teachers 17, scholars 175. Average attendance 115 3-4; united with the church, 6; contributions, $138.65.

The officers are Pastor, Rev. E. T. Pitts; Sup't, Chas. T. Crane; Ass't do., Wallace Macgregor; Treasurer, Miss Theresa M. Jenkins; Librarians, Frank W. Crane, John L. Delano.

Church Action.

It was announced in our columns early in March, that Rev. S. J. Axtell, pastor of the Baptist church of Weymouth, had tendered his resignation, to take effect June 1st, and though the church by vote largely in his favor, declined to accept the resignation, he has deemed it advisable to sunder the connection, to the regret not only of the members of the society who were in favor of his remaining here, but also of many residents with whom he had been pleasantly associated in literary and temperance work and other objects conducive to the public welfare. At a meeting of the church officers held last Monday evening, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Rev. S. J. Axtell, who has filled the office of pastor of this church nearly six years past, having became satisfied in his own mind, that the time in the providence of God had come when he could hope to be more successful in another field of labor, tendered to this church on the first sabbath in March last, his resignation of the office of pastor, to take effect June 1st; and whereas, Mr. Axtell has recently informed the standing committee of the church that he still held to his purpose to resign his office of pastor of this church, (although the church had by a two-thirds vote requested him to withdraw his resignation;) and whereas, he has during all this period striven, in a quiet and prayerful spirit to build up the interests of this church, always endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace in the church, and thus having, in general, endeared himself to the hearts of the members of this church; therefore

Resolved, that while we hereby tender to him our acceptance of his resignation, that we also tender to him our hearty good wishes and prayers for his future prosperity in the field of labor into which God in his loving care may lead him; and that the benediction of peace, which in his farewell sermon he was pleased to bespeak for us, may also attend him in his future labors in the vineyard of the Lord.

Resolved, that to his wife, our beloved sister Axtell, and their children, we extend also our prayerful desire, that God would smile continually upon their future life path, giving always true prosperity.

Resolved, That the above be placed upon the records of the church, and the clerk be requested to furnish Bro. Axtell a copy of the same.

Floral Tributes.

The body of Miss Nellie S. Hill, niece of Mr. Chas. Lund, of East Braintree, was brought from Dorchester last week and interred in the Village Cemetery. The grave was profusely covered with floral mementoes by the sorrowing friends, at the head and foot being two floral columns formed of roses, pinks, lilies and carnations, each column being surmounted with a white dove. On the mound were three beautiful pillows inscribed "Rest," "Aunty," "Sister," also wreaths, cross and bouquets—the designs being 16 in number, and of great beauty.

At Home.

Mr. George A. Armington returned home from Cleveland, Ohio, last Monday, to spend his vacation here. He has officiated as instructor of Mechanical Engineering in the Case School of Applied Science in that city, also having charge of that department, and has been re-elected to the position, with an advanced salary. The school was founded in 1876 by Leonard Case, of Cleveland, who donated valuable lands to endow and establish a scientific school there, from which the institution derives a large income. An elegant building is now being erected for the school, to replace the one which was destroyed by fire about a year ago.

School Discipline.

The discipline of the scholars under the charge of Mr. J. W. Armington, principal of the Hunt school is excellent. It has been for a long time the custom of the children to form in line and at a signal to enter the building, and those who happen along there a few moments before the sessions begin will see the scholars orderly march from the yard to their school rooms. The scholars themselves appear to be very earnest in making so creditable an appearance.

Musical.

Mr. E. Walter Arnold, of North Weymouth, who has recently disposed of his grocery business there, has accepted a proposition from the Denman Thompson Company to engage with that troupe as a vocalist, at a liberal salary. The company will make their entertainment tour in the fall, for which rehearsals of their new piece, "Two Sisters", are now in progress.

Cheerful Givers.

The Cheerful Givers Mission Band of the Baptist Sunday school had a social gathering in the vestry last Wednesday afternoon, with exercises by the children, comprising "The Mission Stars," singing and recitations, under direction of the president of the Band, Miss Lucy Crane. The ladies of the Sewing Circle assisted in the preparation of a quilt to be forwarded to one of the mission stations and a supper was served for the company.

Annual Rehearsal.

The pupils of Miss S. M. Blanchard, the popular music teacher of Weymouth gave much pleasure to a large assembly of their friends at the lecture-room of the Union church last Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, when the annual rehearsal of her scholars took place. Miss Blanchard is a thorough and conscientious teacher, and as might have been expected, the efforts of her pupils in a lengthy programme showed much proficiency and advancement in their studies. The platform was finely decorated with large bouquets of flowers.

An open air Gospel service will be held in Washington square next Sunday at 4 o'clock p. m., with preaching by Rev. E. T. Pitts.

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

On Sunday, June 3d, the pastor of the Old North, Rev. F. H. Palmer, preached a discourse appropriate to the 265th anniversary of the church and society, taking for his text Job viii: 8. "For enquire, I pray thee, of the former age and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers." After some fitting remarks by way of introduction he proceeded to show how much the community and the whole country owe to religion,—such religion as that represented by the almost three centuries of church life in this ancient society. The great constructive idea in the minds of our forefathers when they came to this inhospitable coast was a religious idea. Out of this grew (1) our Educational System. The foundation of the religion of our fathers was the Bible. In order that the whole community might become intelligently acquainted with the Bible and that an educated ministry might expound it, schools were established and attendance upon them made compulsory. Here is the germ of our common school system. (2) Our Political Institutions may be traced to the same source. Our fathers' religious conceptions of the common brotherhood of men, and their absolute equality before God, gave us the seed-thought of our free institutions and our 19th century liberty. (3) The same religious idea gave us a pure, spiritual and healthful social life in the communities where the influence of the church and the ministry was most powerfully felt, and constituted one of the strongest possible deterrents from sin and crime. In conclusion the preacher illustrated his points from the life of this particular church, reviewing some of the interesting facts in its history and exhorting his hearers to go out into the future with new zeal and determination to be worthy of their honorable past. In the course of the sermon he spoke of the fact that the church had been weakened from time to time by the withdrawal of members to form other churches in different parts of the town; but he said that this was her glory that she was an honorable mother living in a green old age, surrounded by prosperous children, and rejoicing in their successes as much as in her own. A large congregation listened to the discourse.

The land belonging to the public park, fronting on Sea street, has been laid out in walks, lawns and flower beds, in a beautiful and artistic style. Superintendent, E. S. Beals, Esq., has showed remarkable skill and good taste in what he has done, and the Improvement Association will not need the service of a landscape gardener while we can have it done by the president just as well. Mr. Haggerty, acting under directions of Mr. Beals, has graded the lots and sodded the borders in a workmanlike manner, reflecting much credit to him for his ability to do nice work. The ladies are raising money to purchase flowers for the flower beds and by having the town water the park will be made attractive all the season.

The North Weymouth Morning Star Quartette, composed of the well known talent, H. A. Newton, Maj. F. A. Bicknell, David Benson and B. F. Thomas Esq., went to Boston Monday on their annual outing, and on their return home stopped at John A. Holbrook, Esq's and gave him a grand serenade. Mr. Holbrook opened wide his doors and after thanking them heartily for their delightful singing invited the Morning Stars to partake of the best the house afforded, but as it was nearing daylight and the "stars" would soon grow dim, they thanked the host for his kind invitation and retired to their several homes, having enjoyed a pleasant time.

A young farmer of Hingham, returning home from Boston last Friday night with a load of manure, crated quite a stir as he was driving through this village. When near Torrey's corner he ran his team into two telegraph poles and broke his harness. Officer Kidder appearing on the scene, procured the assistance of David Ford to take the young farmer and his team home.

Miss Lizzie Jackson, with twenty-two other ladies and gentlemen, were conveyed in an elegant barge to this place, spending the day at Veader's Cafe, and enjoying a pleasant time.

Mr. C. H. Chubbuck of Curtis street, has had his house richly adorned this week with paint in parti-colors, by H. F. Kemerson, and it is said to be one of the prettiest houses in Old Spain.

Parties are moving into the cottages at Fort Point, our beautiful summer resort.

Business is brisk at Cleverly's Cafe, Fort Point.

An item published in the Gazette two weeks ago stating that the authorities were intending to put a police force at Fort Point Sundays, to stop all violations of the Sunday laws, was no item of mine, and such a statement was uncalled for. A more respectable, law-abiding people cannot be found on the Atlantic coast than those who reside at Fort Point during the summer season, most of them being highly respected citizens of our own town. This will also apply to Rose Cliff. N. M.

S. Arthur Pratt, United States Consul at Zanzibar, returned to North Weymouth from Washington Wednesday, where he had been to make his report to the Government.

Holden & Sladen, successors to E. Walter Arnold, took possession of the store this week. These gentlemen have experience in the business and come highly recommended. They will be pleased to receive a call from all customers and hope by fair dealing to obtain a share of public patronage.

James B. Potter and family arrived at their summer residence on the Otis Reed place this week.

The Bay View House, at the end of Sea street, has opened for the summer.

The new barn of Rev. F. H. Palmer is nearly completed.

Changes.

T. E. Kinder has moved into the house occupied by E. T. Williams, on Pearl street, Mr. Williams moving into the part of the house occupied by W. H. Collyer on Newton street, Mr. Collyer moving into the other side.

Mr. Augustus Ellis and family, also his father and mother, arrived at their summer residence, the Evans place, last Tuesday.

The Y. P. S. C. E. have purchased a new organ for use at their meetings, and wish to thank all those who contributed towards it.

Pilgrim Fathers.

A new Colony of Pilgrim Fathers will be instituted by Deputy Supreme Governor Albert A. May, in Knights of Labor hall, North Weymouth, next Tuesday evening. Dr. Wm. A. Drake has been appointed medical examiner, and all who desire to join as charter members will do well to see him at once. A cordial invitation is extended to the members of the Colony at East Weymouth to be present.

Opening.

The rebuilding of the Cafe at Hotel Nantasket has been completed, and as a fitting inauguration of the summer pleasures at this shore resort the proprietors, Messrs. Russell & Sturgis, extended invitations to a large number of their friends and representatives of the press to partake of a nice shore banquet yesterday afternoon, when the succulent clam and other ocean delicacies were objects of attention to a houseful of diners.

War Lecture.

Rev. E. S. Ufford, of Hingham, gives his illustrated war lecture this evening in the lecture room of the Union church. The lecture is said to be very interesting, especially to the "boys in blue." The admission is 20 cents for adults, 10 cents for children.

Temperance.

Sunday evening next a union temperance meeting will be held at the Baptist church, when an address will be made by Hon. B. B. Johnson, of Waltham. The Philharmonic Quartette will furnish selections of music for the occasion.

Historical Society.

There will be a meeting of the Weymouth Historical Society at Tufts Library, on Wednesday evening, June 20, at 7.30 o'clock.

The Mail Car Tragedy.

A letter from the Provinces, which came over the Bangor route, addressed to Mr. Mills, was received at the Weymouth postoffice Tuesday, the letter being smeared with blood—a memento of the murder of the mail clerk, Jerry Sinclair by his fellow clerk Sellons.

EAST WEYMOUTH.

Crescent Lodge worked the second degree before a large audience, last evening.

The watering cart was out doing good service on Broad street Tuesday morning.

Contractor Evans with a gang of men has been at work paving the gutter across Madison street this week.

James L. Bates Camp, S. of V., will have a drill at Reynolds hall, next Thursday evening.

Wessagusset Colony of Pilgrim Fathers have seven candidates for initiation next Wednesday evening.

Sherry Bros., wool scourers, are talking of leasing the middle mill of the Weymouth Iron Co. for their business.

R. B. Smith, who has been an invalid for some time past, went to Cottage City Wednesday, for his health, and will stay there several weeks.

We are pleased to note that Mrs. Lizzie P. Graves, clerk at the postoffice, who has been sick for the past two weeks, is improving.

Officers Garey and Gardner paid a visit last Friday to Thomas Murphy, and brought away 1 1-2 gallons of whiskey with them.

Up to the first of June about 400,000 herring had been taken from the river, which is the largest number that has been taken for twenty-five years.

Mechanics Temple of Honor will hold a straw berry and ice cream festival at T. of H. hall next Friday evening. Ladies are requested to bring pastry.

Fred Lewis, for a number of years employed by Strong & Carroll, has resigned his position there and accepted one with Humphrey Bros., grocers, at Hingham.

The Harlequin Lawn Tennis Club will hold a special meeting next Wednesday evening at the court of Miss M. Abbie Rogers, to make preparations for a tournament to be held Wednesday, July 4.

The Ladies Social Circle connected with the M. E. Church, will meet in the vestry of the church next Wednesday afternoon, and at 6 o'clock will give a strawberry supper.

The Lay Preachers' Association Praying Band, of Boston, will hold a song and gospel service at Reform Club hall next Wednesday evening, at 7.45 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

James L. Bates Camp, S. of V., received invitations from Co. G, 5th Regiment, Independent Boston Fusileers, and officers, to visit them at the encampment of the First Brigade at South Framingham, this week.

The firm who came to East Weymouth last Wednesday to examine with a view of purchasing the upper and wharf mills, have decided not to purchase, and the furnaces are being taken out.

At the meeting of the general executive board of the Knights of Labor, held at Rochester, N. Y., last Friday, Charles J. McMorrow was elected one of the delegates to the general assembly.

Rev. D. A. Jordan, presiding elder delivered an interesting sermon upon the "Resurrection of life and body," last Sunday morning, and in the evening Rev. William Burt, superintendent of Methodist missions in Italy, gave an interesting and able address on Italy, and his work among the Italians.

Parties are contemplating cutting a new road through from Middle street to Broad street between the property occupied by Joshua Vinal and Mrs. E. E. Farmer, to run diagonally through property of the Bates heirs and connect with Chard street near the residence of D. P. Tilden. This would bring a number of desirable house lots into the market, for which there will be a ready sale.

Birthday Surprise Party.

Master Bertie Turpel reached his 10th birthday Monday, June 11, and was surprised by a party of his friends and schoolmates who presented him with a nice gold ring. After games and tricks were played there was a bountiful collation including ice cream, after partaking of the evening in a pleasant way the company departed for their homes.

On Sunday evening last Rev. E. S. Ufford, of Hingham, gave an interesting temperance discourse in Reform Club hall, his subject being "Is the Young man safe?" Rev. Mr. Thacher of Brockton, was also present and made a very telling address.

On Monday evening the sisters of the Reform Club were tendered a surprise in the shape of cake, ice cream and strawberries by the brother members, which was accepted by them with very good grace. The evening was pleasantly passed in short speechmaking, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Raymond were present and favored the company with several songs, and a general good time was enjoyed by all present.

The Temperance Loyal Legion, Co. H, Mrs. Henry B. Raymond leader, will give an entertainment in the vestry of the M. E. church on Monday evening next, June 18. The company has been organized three years and this is their first entertainment with an admission fee, and it is hoped the public will be liberal in their patronage. Admission 10 cents.

Many have fears of danger from lightning if the new fire alarm is put in, which no doubt will be inside of a month) This is a mistaken idea, for your house is much better protected by having an electric wire attached to it with a good ground, as electricity will never leave a good conductor for a poor one, wire being a much better conductor than wood.

At the annual meeting of the W. C. T. U., held last Tuesday with Mrs. Z. L. Bicknell, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:—President Mrs. Henry B. Raymond; 1st vice do., Mrs. Nelson Gardner; 2d vice do., Mrs. James Matheson; 3d vice do., Mrs. J. Insley Tirrell; 4th vice do., Mrs. Jas. Lovell; secretary, Mrs. Z. L. Bicknell; treasurer, Mrs. R. V. Merchant; chaplain, Mrs. Elizabeth Carlton; committee on work, Mrs. R. V. Merchant, Mrs. Francis Hutchinson, Mrs. Joseph Bagley.

Family Gathering.

Mrs. Henry M. Libby and Mrs. W. P. Barleigh, of New Hampshire, sister and niece of Mr. Kinsman Chamberlain, have been visiting him for the past two weeks. They came in season to help celebrate his 77th birthday, which occurred on the 13th, taking him entirely by surprise, and what is a rare occurrence, it was also their 46th birthday of his sister, Mrs. Libby. His children were all present besides other relatives, and the day was passed in a very pleasant, though quiet manner, it being the Sabbath. Mr. Chamberlain has been in feeble health for sometime past, but it is hoped that this event will tend to cheer him up and give him a new lease of life.

Strawberry Festival.

The strawberry festival and sale of aprons and fancy articles, held at Maconde hall last Wednesday evening, by the ladies connected with the Unitarian church, proved to be one of the most enjoyable occasions that they have thus far held. There were tables upon which was a large variety of aprons, from a doll's to a woman's size, which sold rapidly, at good prices. The confectionery table was also well patronized in the banquet hall. The corps of waiters were kept busy serving fine strawberries, all ripe, one plate for a quarter. At eight o'clock there was an entertainment of half an hour's duration, the following being the program; Duet, "On the Moonlight Stream," Mrs. Whiting and Mrs. Orr; reading, "The fatal accident and what became of it," Miss Ida Litchfield; chapter solo, Master Stevie Pratt; recitation, "The Dying Newsboy," Miss Mildred Hyland; solo, "Ye Pretty Birds," Miss Lillian Crane; reading, "Friar Philip," Miss Mildred Hyland; solo, "Song that reached my heart," and encore "White Sails," Mrs. Whiting.

Remarks were made by D. M. Easton, after which the floor was cleared and a social hop enjoyed until midnight. The fair, though a small one, was a financial success, and netted the ladies over $50. We understand a committee are making arrangements to hold a picnic soon at some farm house in Scituate, full particulars of which will be given later.

Children's day will be observed at the M. E. church on Sunday, June 17. The church will be trimmed with flowers as usual. Sermon in the morning to the children by the pastor, at 10.30; Sunday school following; concert by the children at 3.30. The infant class will present an exercise entitled "Suffer the little ones to come unto me and forbid them not." Also, a Scripture responsive service entitled "The Fruitful Vineyard," with singing by the choir.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

The annual supper of the Improvement Association, at Music hall next Tuesday evening, will be one of the conspicuous events of the week. The committee of ladies will meet in the afternoon and make the tables look as inviting as possible, and twenty lads and misses will pour the coffee and attend to the calls of the members, in connection with the supper. It is intended to have the company sit down promptly at 7.30 o'clock, in order to finish the after-supper exercises at a seasonable hour. The brief speeches will be varied with singing by competent artists, and a gathering of two hundred or more villagers about the social board cannot fail of itself being profitable and enjoyable.

Rev. William H. Bolster of the Union church exchanges with Rev. F. A. Warfield of Brockton next Sunday morning. At the close of the service a collection will be taken for the benefit of the Swedish Congregational church recently established at Brockton.

Canton Nemasket No. 46, Patriarchs Militant, of Brockton will visit Wildey lodge next Monday evening. As this will be a very interesting occasion, it is expected that the attendance of members for that evening will be largely increased.

At the monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Improvement Association, Friday evening, an interesting report was submitted by the special committee appointed to look after the electric light interest. They had canvassed for enough to secure nearly $1300 for the ten lights contemplated, and an endeavor will be made to raise the full amount of $1650. This will insure the cost of the plant and the running expenses for one year.

Children's Sunday was observed here with everything of its customary success last Sunday at the Congregational churches, and the floral decorations, if anything, were superior in variety and arrangement to those of years past. The attendance was large. At the Second church the space about the altar was lined with ferns and leaves, strikingly dotted with bright blossoms and floral pieces, the effect being very fine. Rev. Mr. Alvord gave the story of the "Children's Crusade" in the 13th century, and in the evening came the regular concert, under the direction of Henry Jessamine. At the Union church where the large platform and altar railing gave room for a generous floral offering, the picture presented by the leaves and flowers was elegant, and in the opinion of many, the most effective and beautiful that has ever been provided. The blending of colors was excellent and specially noticeable. Rev. Mr. Bolster directed his attention to the children in his morning sermon, and at 7 o'clock an unusually fine concert, arranged by Mrs. Louis A. Cook, fitly closed the services of the day. At this church six infants received the rite of baptism. We give the concert program at each of the churches.

Second Cong'l Church.

Organ voluntary; anthem; prayer; devotional exercise; greeting, Ella Merritt; singing, Children; recitation, Florence Loud; Children's Prayer, dialogue; Our Treasures, Lillian Blanchard; singing, Choir; The Shepherd, Alfred Gardner; Conscience, Sadie Derby; Little Ones; solo, Miss Lydia Torrey; reading, Alice Tirrell; Wonderful Children's Days, dialogue; recitation, Lina M. Loud; recitation, Grace Tirrell; singing, Children; recitation, R. Tower; recitation, V. Booth; remarks, Pastor; hymn 557; benediction.

Union Cong'l Church.

Singing, Choir; prayer; singing, "O! be glad ye children!" recitation, Sidney Cook; recitation, Mary L. Vining; exercise, Primary class; solo, Not a sparrow falleth, Miss Ella Clark; recitation, Dennet Waterman; exercise, Mrs. Pitcher's class; song, Lou Reed; recitation, Allie May; Union Quartette; recitation May Reed; exercise, Boys class; recitation, Katie Belle Reed; Motion song, the girls; recitation, Lora Hunt; solo, "Cast thy bread upon the waters," Miss Helen Derby; recitation, Grace Hunt; duet, May and Lou Reed; original valedictory, Fred Bolster; singing of Coronation; benediction.

By invitation, the members of the Second Cong'l parish enjoyed a pleasant and social entertainment at the residence of Mr. Wm. Dyer Tuesday evening. The rooms were filled with large numbers of old and young, drawn thither by the thoughts of generous hospitality in the past at such gatherings. No one was disappointed. Every moment was full of enjoyment, and host and hostess did their best to cater to the wants of everybody. Ice cream and refreshments were supplied generously, while singing and other features of a social nature, helped make the evening delightful and interesting.

Mr. A. A. Hadley, who has been the popular organist at the Union church for the past year, and who goes south in a few weeks to accept an important musical position, will give an organ concert at the Union church Saturday evening at 7.45 o'clock, assisted by Miss Ella Clark, contralto, of this village, and the following Boston talent: Mr. C. W. Turner tenor, Mr. R. Brown tenor, Mr. C. D. Miller violin, Mr. E. M. Vazquez flute. An interesting programme of classical and popular music is sure to be presented in view of this list of eminent artists, and Mr. Hadley will provide some choice organ selections, the character of which can be judged by all of his efforts in this direction. The admission will be only twenty-five cents and the audience should be large.

A white robin may be seen almost every morning early in the vicinity of Highland cemetery. This is his fourth annual visit to this region, and the rare species makes his appearance all the more noticeable.

Since the road scraper laid the foundation for a good grass plot in the middle of the street just between the Bank and Highland cemetery, the grass and weeds have taken root in fine shape and the prospect is good for a heavy crop. The locality is a little conspicuous, however, for such an experiment.

Mr. Fred W. Clark sang at Abington, Monday evening, with his usual success.

Clark & Foster will remove their clothing business to a store in the new Fogg building as soon as it is completed, and Mr. Fogg intends to devote the entire room of the building where they now are to manufacturing purposes. This is good news. Now let the boom materialize. Business is what we want more than anything else just now to complete the attractions of our village.

Postmaster Charles Loud has bought the factory on Main street belonging to Mr. William Shaw. He will have it moved to Independence square about July 1, the old house, which, by the way, is nearly 150 years old, will be torn down, and the building first referred to will be remodelled and fitted up with stores below and dwelling apartments above, while the widening at the corner will be accomplished. Thus the improvements go steadily on.

Russell White, formerly of Holbrook, who is at the head of the fire patrol in the city of San Francisco, has the best record of any man in the country so far as time is concerned in getting ready to start for a fire. He has five horses and as many men, and three seconds after the gong strikes everything is ready for the start.

John Vining and John Hunt of this village have passed a successful examination for the Institute of Technology, and will enter that institution at the beginning of the fall term.

The South High school nine played the North High at Weymouth, Saturday, defeating the latter by a score of 12 to 0. They play the Centre Abingtons at South Weymouth tomorrow.

The names of the graduates of the South High school are: Herbert Austin Bass, Grace Gertrude Hunt, Ella Maria Reynolds, Clara Augusta Holbrook, Louis Bradford Vining, Arria Gertrude Stewart.

Next Sunday will be observed as Floral or Children's Sunday at the Universalist church.

HENRY.

The South Weymouth Band furnished music for Post 74, of Rockland, Memorial day, giving a nice concert on the church green while the details were decorating graves in the outlying cemeteries.

County Tax.

In the apportionment of county taxes for Norfolk county, Weymouth pays the fourth largest tax, $8829.63. Brookline pays $20,267.54; Milton $8683.10; Quincy $5525.39, these being the three which exceed this town in the taxation.

MONUMENTS.

Read the following Certificates ot Recommendation.

Certificate of Prof. S. P. Sharples, Assayer of Metals for the State of Mass.

I consider the White Bronze Monuments practically indestructible. They will not blacken or become dingy with age; moss will not adhere or grow upon their surface as upon marble, and the color will remain unchangeable while the monuments endure.

300 Years Without Change—Certificate of A. Cortepassal, the well known artist and sculptor of Cincinnati, Ohio, formerly of Florence, Italy.]

To whom it may concern:—This certifies that I have seen the statue of Popparona, which was cast from zinc and erected in the city of Lucca, Italy, (according to the records) over three hundred years ago, and has stood constant exposure to the elements since. No sign of corrosion or change of color has taken place and to all appearance it is as beautiful as when first erected. A. CORTEPASSI.

[Prof. Duffield, Ph. D., M. D.]

To the public:—There is no question in my mind of the durability of the White Bronze Monument. Refined zinc, when cast alone and in its pure state, and not placed in contact with silver, platinum, copper, etc., is indestructible from the elements, outlasting the best granites without the discoloration that marble always shows after a few years' exposure. No other material is so well fitted to withstand the atmospheric changes. Judging from a scientific and chemical standpoint, it is my opinion that these monuments will last thousands of years.
S. P. DUFFIELD, Ph. D., M. D.

Be justly celebrated Monuments, would respectfully MEMORIAL to their departed friends, to examine the and the cheapest. The best chemists and scientists Granite. Reference is made to the many testimonials nt on application to the Agent, who will also furnish

16-CENT PANT STRETCHER,
Is positively the BEST invention ever known for taking Wrinkles out of Pantaloons, and shaping the bottoms of the same to fit nicely over the shoe.
Pantaloons should always be suspended as shown in cut when not in use. Even those in daily wear should be thus suspended through the night.
HOW TO APPLY THE STRETCHER.
Take the front bottom part of the pants in the left hand, taking the pointed end of the stretcher in the right hand, insert the wood part up the back of the leg about three-quarters of an inch, then spring the pin point into the front about half an inch from the edge. Pantaloons that are badly wrinkled or bagged at the knee should be dampened. A good way to do this is to hang them out by the stretcher in the evening, or on a damp day.
A FULL LINE OF MEN'S & YOUTH'S SUITS,
FROM $3.00 TO $22.00.

Children's Day at East Weymouth.

Children's day was observed at the Cong'l church by a sermon in the morning, by the pastor, from the text, Prov. 20: 26—"The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks," which suggested the thought of man's weakness and dependence individually and of his security and strength when building upon the Rock, Christ Jesus. The singing by the choir was also in keeping with the subject of the sermon. In the evening a large audience attended the concert given by the Sunday school. Singing by the school, conducted by T. H. Emerson and accompanied by A. M. Raymond, organist, was a prominent feature of the service. The children presented a very attractive appearance and sang their selections in a manner that reflected much credit upon the chorister. The singing by Mrs. J. F. Drew and Mrs. Emerson was especially fine, and the song by little Berta Raymond was a very pleasing part of the service. The superintendent wishes to express his appreciation of the valuable assistance rendered by Miss Susie Pratt and other members of the Y. P. S. C. E., who provided an abundance of flowers and decorated the church, and this committee wishes to acknowledge their indebtedness to Mr. M. F. Baker, who loaned a large number of potted plants for the occasion. Recitations were given by the following members of the primary department in charge of Mrs. M. E. Hawes:—Jesse Blanchard, Robert Raymond, Percy Shaw, Fannie Staples, Elsie Noyes, Flossie Earle, Otis Blanchard, Myron Bailey, Evelyn Denbroeder, Flossie Young, Annie Burrell, Ethel Fisher, Bessie Randall, Helen Dunbar, Mylon Osgood, Ella May Raymond, Garfield Burrell, Anna Bates, Ralph Randall and Carrie Shackford. There were also recitations by the following members of the school:—Emma Raymond, Lena Shaw, Lottie Randall, Daisy Pratt, Cora Maud Burrell, Berta Raymond, Edith Sloane and Mildred Hyland.

Change of Town Name.

The residents of South Scituate had a gala day Wednesday week, observing with interesting exercises the change of the name of the town to "Norwell," its former name having existed since 1849, when it was set off from Scituate. The new name is given in honor of Mr. Henry Norwell, a well known resident, and who is of the old Boston dry goods firm of Shepard, Norwell & Co. The programme included a banquet, addresses by Gov. Ames and other prominent men, exercises by the scholars of the public schools, music by the South Weymouth band, and fireworks and a grand ball in the evening. The new name is so like to that of "Norwood," in this county, that letters may at times possibly reach the wrong place.

ON IRON HILL,
EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.,
1 large one and a half story single House, called the Bowen House.
1 one and a half story single House, called the Nichols House.
1 two story double House, No. 8, occupied by David Tucker.
1 two story double House, No. 7, called the J. R. Dyke House.
1 one and a half story single House, called the Robert House.
1 large and very commodious STABLE, lately occupied by the Weymouth Iron Co.
1 smaller, but very nicely arranged STABLE, lately occupied by Mr. B. W. Bowen.
Also, some five acres of vacant GRASS LAND on the Hill, above the buildings, from which is the finest view of Whitman's Pond anywhere to be had.
Last, but not least, the little PARK in the square, in front of all these buildings, and also the fine ASPARAGUS BED near the Bowen house, if not otherwise disposed of.
These Buildings are all situate on IRON HILL, one of the most pleasant localities in East Weymouth. They stand on high, dry ground, are surrounded by beautiful shade and ornamental trees, and the garden and grounds near the Bowen house are abundantly furnished with choicest fruit trees. Upon the premises is a well of purest water.
The houses have been occupied by the Superintendent and officials of the Company, and they are now in perfect repair and condition. These Houses, Stables and Lands must now be sold in order to close up the affairs of the Weymouth Iron Company; and no such opportunity to purchase very desirable homes will ever again be offered.

BRAINTREE NOTES.

At a town meeting held last evening to see if the town would adopt a new system of heating the town hall and public library and appropriate money for the same, Judge French was moderator. James T. Stevens, chairman of the committee appointed last March to consider this subject, made his report, and the town appropriated $2500 for the purpose. The same committee was appointed to expend the money and carry the work into effect, and were instructed not to close bids until the first of July.

Obituary.

Miss Rachel Ann Faxon, whose death at her residence at East Braintree, on Thursday of last week, was announced in our last issue, was a native of Braintree and daughter of Elijah and Betsey Webb Faxon. She was a graduate of the Charlestown Female Seminary, where she was fitted for a teacher's profession, and for several years she taught in public schools of this and other towns, and also in Indiana for a time, when she returned home and founded the Monatiquot Institute, for instruction of young ladies in the higher branches of English, the languages, and music. After several years of labor in this position, she visited California, Europe and the Holy Land, for relaxation from these duties, and also served for a year as a teacher among the Indians, under the auspices of the American Missionary Society. On her return she took a few pupils until her health entirely failed. She was through life an active worker in the Union church, with which she was connected, striving to reproduce the teachings of the Master, and her life furnished a bright example of noble purpose and christian zeal.

Temperance Legislation.

The summing up of the legislation in the recent session of the Massachusetts legislation, for promotion of temperance interests, is a resolution for submission of a prohibitory amendment to the people; bills passed making the minimum fee for license $1000, and for beer license $250; restricting the number of saloons to one for every 1,000 of the population, forbidding the issuing of a license for any dwelling house or place having interior communication with the dwelling or family of a tenement; prohibiting the sale of liquor on Thanksgiving day, Christmas day and Decoration day, and all election days, and declaring that all beverages containing one per cent. of alcohol are intoxicating within the meaning of the Massachusetts Law.

Personal.

Business at the well known furniture rooms of Walbridge Bros. is lively with Weymouth orders from the friends of Mr. George A. Miles, who continues his connection with that house and will be pleased to show customers the extensive line of goods in stock, which they are now advertising at "15 per cent. discount." Give him a call at 23 Washington street.

Would You Believe

The Proprietor of Kemp's Balsam gives thousands of bottles away yearly? This mode of advertising would prove ruinous if the Balsam was not a perfect cure for Coughs and all Throat and Lung troubles. You will see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Don't hesitate! Procure a bottle to-day to keep in your home or room for immediate or future use. Trial bottle free at F.H.Morgan's, druggist. Large size 50c and $1.00.

Randolph being a license town, parties from neighboring places where no license reigns are daily arrested for drunkenness there and taken to Quincy court.

The Excitement Not Over.

The rush at F. H. Morgan's, druggist, still continues, and daily scores of people call for a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. Kemp's Balsam, the standard family remedy, is sold on a guarantee and never fails to give entire satisfaction. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial size free.

Memorial Address.

Unable to Tell.

Yes, that was so. For years I suffered severely with scrofula; sores broke out all over my body, and I am unable to tell one half that I suffered. I was not able to obtain relief until I used Sulphur Bitters, which completely cured me.—C. B. DALE, 17 Allston street, Boston.

Business Men for Congress.

We take pleasure in copying the article below from the commercial paper of New England, "The New England Grocer."

There will be a vacancy in the Second Congressional District, by the retirement of Gov. Long, to be filled this fall. Hon. Elijah A. Morse, of Canton, is prominently mentioned as a candidate.

Mr. Morse is a business man and was a soldier. Aside from party considerations, upon which this paper does not take sides, we think it would be a grand thing for the country if more of the business men and the readers of our paper occupied positions of public trust.

There are too many lawyers and professional men in Congress.

If we had more business men like Mr. Morse we would have some much needed legislation. The country needs a bankrupt law. The coinage of the cheap dollar should be stopped. The Interstate Commerce law should be wiped out or radically amended. The city of Boston needs modern ordinances and coast defences to protect us from a third class European man-of-war. For all these measures the business men of the country have been petitioning for the last ten years without success. The politicians and professional men in Congress fritter away session after session in useless political wrangles, which end in nothing. Give us more business men in Congress.

Base Ball.

The North High School nine played its third game of the season on the Webb street grounds last Saturday afternoon against the South High school nine. It was a close and exciting game resulting in favor of the visitors in a score of 12 to 9. Bass, the South High pitcher, was very effective and his home run over the left field wall was a beauty. These two nines are very evenly matched, and it is hoped that another game may be arranged soon. Following is the score;—

Umpires—Quinn and Killoury.

In the game last Saturday afternoon between the Weymouths and Braintrees at South Braintree, the latter club was victorious in a score of 13 to 8.

A Druggist Says.

Marvin C. Brown, Druggist, Meredith Village, N. H., says: I have sold your Sulphur Bitters for years, and, contrary to most medicines, I never sold a bottle to any one who said it did not help them. They cured me of those terrible sick headaches when every other remedy failed.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1888

GREATLY ENLARGED.

Much the Biggest of all the New York Weeklies.

Greater Variety of Contents, New Presses, New Type and New Appliances.

At the Head of the Republican Press.

The New York Weekly Tribune will be enlarged on or before the 1st of January, 1888, by the addition of from four to eight more pages of actual reading matter—an increase of size of great expense to the Tribune, but without expense to the subscriber.
A complete outfit of the new folding and inserting presses will be put into the Tribune's press-room in November and December; and the extra sheet will be folded into its place in the main sheet before it comes from the press. The enlarged Tribune will be the biggest and best of all the New York weeklies, and the new machinery will print it in an enlarged form, at the rate of seventy-two thousand copies per hour.
New Features and a great Variety of Contents will be added to THE TRIBUNE during the coming year. Readers will be given nearly a half more for their money than ever before.
Pensions for the old volunteers, especially Service Pensions, are being vigorously agitated in THE TRIBUNE; much space is given in every issue to this subject. Better Protection to Farmers under the tariff; the salvation of the country from the curse of intemperance; and the reform of the national government from the hands of the rebel brigadiers; these, and all the other live issues of the day are receiving aggressive, earnest and loyal treatment in THE TRIBUNE.
THE TRIBUNE does not attempt to supersede the local State and county press. But, in the great Presidential conflict now at hand, every thinking Republican, old soldier, farmer and temperance man, should have his local paper and THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.
SUBSCRIPTION RATES—WEEKLY, $1 a year; extra copy with every five. SEMI-WEEKLY, $2 a year; extra copy with every five. DAILY, $8.50 per year. SUNDAY TRIBUNE, $1.50. New subscribers receive the paper until Jan. 1, 1889. Remit always by draft, check, express or postal money order or registered letter.
PREMIUMS.—(1.) THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE'S History of the United States and Pocket Atlas of the World; 16mo., 254 pages, 50 maps, 56 colored diagrams; price, 40 cents; to subscribers, 20 cents; prettiest premium of the year—a fascinating running account of the history of the country, with a great variety of statistics and general information. (2.) Presidential Pocket Knife; subscribers' names and picture of his choice for President on the handle; send for descriptive circular; price at retail, $1.75; but given with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE one year for the same money, $1.75; two other styles, for less money. (3) Popular Picture Gallery—6 fine large pictures, including the new officers of the G. A. R., Mr. Blaine, Senators Evarts and Hiscock, "Return of the Mayflower," "Christ Before Pilate," and "Children Writing to Santa Claus;" send for circular. (4.) Waltham Watch; expansion balance movement, stem winder, stem set, seven jewels, nickel case, thoroughly reliable and an excellent watch; with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE, 1 year, for $7.50. (5.) TRIBUNE'S "Book of Open Air Sports." (6.) Webster's "Unabridged Dictionary." (7.) Woods' "Household Medicine." These premiums cannot be described in full here. Send for circular.
THE TRIBUNE, New York.

A GREAT RIDE.

An Extraordinary Horseback Journey Across the Plains.

A Perilous Trip of 800 Miles in Less Than Six Days.

Among the deeds of early life in the west the famous ride of F. X. Aubrey from the plaza of Santa Fe to the public square of Independence, Mo., as a physical achievement stands without an equal. Indeed, it is doubtful if the history of the world can present a parallel to that great ride of 800 miles, through a country overrun with hostile Indians, a large part of the distance being through sandy deserts and leading across rivers, mountains and prairies, with only the sky for a covering and the earth as a resting place.
An old resident of this city, who used to know Aubrey very well, in conversation recently said:
"When I first met Aubrey, about 1848 he was a young man of 35, the perfect picture of health and strength. Short, rather heavy set, weighing about 160 pounds, he had an honest, open countenance and was one of the rising men of the plains. He was a French Canadian, came to St. Louis in 1840, and soon afterward engaged in business as a Santa Fe trader, making trips to Santa Fe from Independence, and spending the larger part of his time in the saddle. He was a noted horseman and spared neither man nor beast when on a journey. Everything he did was done with a rush.
"Aubrey made two rides alone from Santa Fe to Independence. The first was on a wager of $1,000 that he could cover the distance in eight days. He succeeded in reaching his destination three hours before the expiration of the time. He killed several horses in the ride, and it is said that the death of one horse on the way obliged him to walk twenty-five miles to Council Grove, carrying his saddle on his back, before he found another. He was the lion of the day at St. Louis and Independence after this ride. There were many powerful men and many good riders in those times, but not one of them dared to attempt to beat Aubrey's record. He determined to beat himself, and on a second wager he left Santa Fe in 1851, and gave the severest test of human endurance I have ever known.
"I was on my way to Santa Fe (it was 37 years ago) with a train of 25 wagons filled with merchandise, and knew nothing of his design. When we were at the Rabbit Ears, about 100 miles from the old Spanish city, we saw a man approaching in a sweeping gallop, mounted on a yellow mare and leading another. As he came nearer, mistaking us for Indians, he whirled and retreated 50 or 60 yards, then turned to take a second look. Our wagons coming round a hill proved that we were friends, and, putting spurs to his steed, he dashed past, merely nodding his head as the dust flew into our faces. It was a great surprise to me for Aubrey to treat a friend in that style, but when I reached Santa Fe I understood it. Every moment was precious. It was the supreme effort of his life. Night and day he rushed on. Six horses dropped dead as he rode them.
"His own beautiful mare, Nellie, the one he was riding as he passed our party, and one of the finest pieces of horseflesh I ever saw, quivered and fell in the agonies of death at the end of the first 150 miles. Several splendid horses had been sent ahead, and stationed at different points on the trail. No man could keep up with Aubrey. He would have sacrificed every horse in the west if necessary to the accomplishment of his design. It was not money he was after, but fame. He had made a wager that the trip would be made in six days.
"At the end of five days and thirteen hours, exhausted and fainting, he was taken from a horse that was trembling from head to foot, and covered with sweat and foam, at the southwest corner of the present square of Independence. He sank into a stupor, from which he was not aroused in forty-eight hours."—[Kansas City News.

Points by a Plumber.

"If you want a point or two about cleaning waste-pipes without sending for a plumber," said a retired member of the fraternity to a New York Telegram reporter who was complaining of the trials of house-ownership, "just listen to me.
"If I were still in the business I would not give away what I am going to tell you now, but as I'm out of it I do not see why I may not help a friend.
"One of the most frequent and trying annoyances," he continued, as he flashed his $600 diamond ring at the reporter, "is the obstruction to the free, quick outlet of the waste water of the wash-basin, the bath-tub and kitchen sink. This is caused by a gradual accumulation of small bits of refuse material, paper, rags, meat bone, or grease, which check and finally entirely stop the out-flow of waste, and then the plumber is called to remove the stoppage with his force pump. Sometimes this is accomplished, but often the pipe has to be cut, and there is great inconvenience and expense.
"Just before retiring at night pour into the clogged pipe enough liquid soda lye to fill the 'trap,' as it is called—or the bent part of the pipe just below the outlet. Be sure that no water runs into it until the next morning. During the night the lye will convert all the offal into soft soap, and the first current of water in the morning will wash it away and leave the pipe as clean as new. See? This is practical chemistry, yet few chemists would ever think it of."

What They Should Talk About.

A young man in Oshkosh, who has evidently fallen victim to the wiles of some enterprising leap year girl, writes in great perplexity, and evidently with an exhausted intellect, for a list of subjects proper for lovers to talk about. We hope the following categorical answer will meet his needs:

Lovers should talk about
The silver moon, the star that shoots,
The tuneful birds with liquid flutes,
The sparkling dew, the rippling stream;
But most of all, and best—ice cream!
—[Tid-Bits.

Ice Made Him Hot.

Brown—What's the matter, Dumley, you look hot about something?
Dumley (angrily)—Hot! I should say so. I was around at the Eagle just now and that fool Featherly dropped a chunk of ice down my back. Enough to make any man hot.—[New York Sun.

LADIES' DEPARTMENT.

Queen Victoria's Breakfast.

Here is the menu of an ordinary everyday breakfast at Balmoral during Queen Victoria's last stay there: Scotch porridge, cold rump steak pie, hot rump steak, cold gammon of bacon, boiled eggs, Scotch scones, brown bread, butter, honey, tea, coffee and a kind of cocoa specially prepared for the queen. The queen is very fond of Scotch porridge. Court etiquette requiring the guests to eat only of what the queen eats, blue and white china basins filled with porridge were first served from the sideboard to everyone as a matter of course. Her majesty dislikes so strongly the odor of game the first thing in the morning that it is never allowed to appear on the royal tables until luncheon.—[Table Talk.

Painting Baby's Face.

A letter from Paris informs us, says the Pall Mall Gazette, that the doctors are again at war with silly mothers belonging to the fashionable circles. The latest fanaticism of is mode is to apply the horrors of face-painting to little children. In the public gardens babies of 3 years old may now be seen, whose eyebrows have been blackened or dyed by their senseless mother. Other anxious parents, distressed at the vulgarly ruddy and rustic hue of their children's cheeks, carefully powder them before sending them forth to meet the gaze and criticism of the world. Little coquettes of ten years are not permitted to go abroad until the regulation black stroke has been painted beneath their eyes. The doctors warn the mothers that when the children thus barbarously treated reach the age of 16 they will have a colorless and ruined complexion, to say nothing of the injury to health, which is an argument less likely to produce much effect.

The Insect Adornment Craze.

According to "A lady" who discourses on fashions in the London Standard, the insect craze has again broken out. "Beetles and such small game, known o fair Americans under the generic term of 'bugs' meander over gauze and tulle, perch themselves on bows of ribbon, or find a home in the heart of a full-blown rose." You may perceive "soldier ants" on Cynthia's bonnet and "extremely realistic caterpillars" among the tangles of Nemra's hair. It is a quaint and pleasing fancy full of delicacy and true poetry. The fair Americans, it is reported, sometimes permit live insects, tethered by a tiny golden chain to meander over their persons. Our damsels, less daring, have not yet reached that refinement. We must be content with harmless, though realistic caterpillars and artificial representations of the charming creatures which are known under the generic name of "bugs" in the great west.—[St. James' Gazette.

Woman on Horseback.

Did you ever observe a woman just before she is lifted into the saddle, and a few moments after the horse has struck a canter? She becomes a changed being. The roses spring to her cheeks, the light seems to leap from her eyes, her form is the inspiration of graceful action, and she becomes a beauteous picture of moving health. And this, after all, is the best view to take of horseback riding. Aside from its charms, its dash, its buoyancy of motion, its special or general beauty, it is the most healthful exercise within the province of woman. It is better than dancing, lawn tennis, croquet, rowing, archery. There are many reasons why it is better, and one of the strongest seems to be that it brings a continuous change of scene, which tends to rest the body as well as the mind. The fascinating effect which it has on the fair rider man not be estimated, provided she has a well-trained horse and indulges in moderation.—[Atlanta Constitution.

Beadwork Made Her Fortune.

The beadwork so plentifully scattered on women's wraps, cloaks and dresses today was unknown in this country as an ornament until a very few years ago, when a pretty little brunette widow, Mme. Weiner, came to New York from Vienna, and began battling for bread for herself and her two little children. Mme. Weiner had few friends but plenty of pluck and skill. Some of the bead patterns she brought with her, and others she made here, working nights by the bedside of her sleeping little ones, are perfect marvels of human ingenuity and taste. She began to succeed and fashionable Broadway shops displayed her patterns in their show windows. By and by Mme. Weiner started a factory for her beadwork. Now she supplies nearly all the leading retailers in New York. She is still young and good looking, and as she stepped up the gang-plank of a steamer yesterday, bound home to Austria for a visit with her children, she was a very different looking woman to the one who came down the same gang-plank less than a decade since.—[New York World.

Fingerless Gloves for Dinners.

Fingerless gloves were a novelty at the Vanderbilt dinner, writes Clara Bell. They were a compromise between wholly gloved hands, which are clumsy and unsuitable to eat with it, and bare hands, which seem hardly the right thing for a dressy occasion. So a number of the ladies, as though by prearrangement, wore gloves that stopped a little beyond their knuckles. These were like the mitts of our grandmothers, except that they were made of kid. Not only did they have the advantage of beauty and utility in the handling of knives, forks and spoons, but they permitted a display of jewelry. The atrocity of rings on gloved fingers is not often committed by fashionable women, who have therefore been reluctantly compelled to hide or leave off their finger jewels at all times when gloves were prescribed. The fingerless gloves, as thus introduced, were a special manufacture to order; but the dealers will, of course, hasten to meet a demand. Customers can't wait for an importation, which would take six weeks, by which time the season of spring dinners will be over. So the dealers will have to amputate the fingers of gloves already in stock, and finish the cut edges with fancy stitching. If anybody desires to go into the business of supplying kid covers for sore fingers he can now lay in a supply cheaply.

Revival of Coral Jewelry.

A lady well known in society caused considerable comment among her friends recently by appearing in public decked out in ornaments of coral. Inquiry proved that she wore them on a wager and that they were the property of her mother, cast aside years before. It was noted with some surprise that they became her admirably, despite their old-fashioned air, and the incident has given rise to a discussion in the charmed circle upon the advisability of a crusade in favor of the revival of coral. It is not so many years since it held a high place and furnished a prominent industry in France. The Empress Eugenie, when she set the fashion for the world, was extremely partial to ornaments of this sort. The Russian ladies today wear it a great deal, and among the orientals both sexes affect it. The artistic effects possible by a combination of gold and coral are great; in fact, there is almost unlimited scope for the exercise of the jeweler's taste and ability. An attache of a jewelry house, in speaking of the matter a day or two ago, said: "The almost complete absence of coral from the show windows of today is a noticeable fact, and I can not pretend to explain why it is so little worn by the present generation. I feel confident that if more coral jewelry was kept in stock it would before long become fashionable once more. My reason is that coral is becoming to nearly everybody. Its brilliancy makes the skin look whiter by contrast and with dark hair it harmonizes beautifully, while its effect is also very agreeable when in conjunction with blonde tresses. Like all fashion in gems, this has had its ups and downs; but it is always in favor in some parts of the world, proving that the taste for it is almost universal. It is now a long time since it reigned in the fashionable world here, and I would not be surprised to see it come in again."—[Philadelphia Times.

Fashion Notes.

The mutton-leg sleeve is in great favor, especially for lace dresses.
Colored camel's hair and black lace are combined in some very dressy French mantles.
Pretty bonnet pins are in the form of a spray of flowers and leaves, entwined with garnets.
White blonde lace, over white moire, is a favorite combination for summer evening toilets.
The long Directoire coat, worn over a plain skirt, is a favorite design for stylish street dresses.
Pattern gowns already braided are wonderfully cheap, and more wonderfully pretty for the price.
Satin is again in high favor, especially for dinner and evening gowns, as well as for the costumes of very young brides.
Colored beaded ornaments and metallic galloons are used to trim black lace dresses, but excess should be guarded against.
Some of the prettiest white veilings come with a silk selvage like a repped ribbon, which is arranged to serve as a garniture.
White dresses are not likely to be worn so much this summer as for several seasons past, the prevailing fancy being for colors.
Many long loops of ribbon falling from the throat and caught in at the waist are supposed to give style to cotton morning gowns.
Many of the new muslins and lawns have wide borders and the French percales have outline designs all over them with a vine border for a selvage.
Gay summer gowns are made of scarlet India silk, with black figures in long, slender leaves and trimmed with a profusion of black lace.
Elaborate directoire costumes are made of cashmere, richly embroidered with shaded silks down the front of the skirt, and on the large revers of the coat.
An example of the prevailing fancy for irregular arrangement showed one-half of the back of the skirt covered with flounces, the other half having a pointed shawl drapery.

First San Francisco Fruits.

The first fruits offered for sale in the San Francisco markets were from the pear trees of Santa Clara and San Jose missions, and from the mission grape vines of the same localities, and of Los Angeles county. These grapes packed in sawdust came up the coast by steamer, and were then reshipped to the mining camps, arriving for the most part in good condition, and were very popular. It is recorded that 1500 tons of these grapes were sent from Los Angeles county to San Francisco and the mines in 1852. As another instance in which thrift followed neglect is seen in the fact that, in 1858 Don Andres Pico, who succeeded to the possession of the orchard at San Fernando mission, did a considerable business in drying pears and other fruits, using the labor of the Indians.
At the present time vestiges of the old mission orchards still remain, the pears and olives still bearing, and in some cases the old date palms guarding the desolate scenes, or standing as reminders of the old regime, while the new life of California is surging up around them.—[Overland Monthly.

Misleading Misnomers.

"Oil of turpentine" is not an oil, neither is "oil of vitriol," nor "coal oil," nor kerosene. "Copperas" is an iron compound, and contains no copper. "Salts of lemon" have nothing to do with the fruit of the citrus limonis, but is the extremely poisonous oxalic acid. "Carbolic acid" is not an acid, but a phenol. "Cobalt" contains none of that metal, but arsenic. "Soda water" has no trace of soda, nor does "sulphuric ether" contain any sulphur. "Sugar of lead" has no sugar, "cream of tartar" has nothing of cream, nor "milk of lime" any milk. Oxygen means "the acid-maker," but hydrogen is the essential element of all acids, and many acids contain no oxygen. "German silver" contains no silver, and "black lead" no lead. "Mosaic gold" is simply a sulphide of tin. This list might readily be extended, both in chemistry and other natural sciences, and it is only fair to state that these terms all come from older writers, and are giving way to a more scientific nomenclature.—[Chicago News.

Pineapples.

The pineapple season has begun in New York. Merchants there are receiving 3800 barrels a week, and when the season is at its height, the quantity will reach 10,000 barrels a week. The barrels contain from twenty-five to thirty extra large "pines," or forty to sixty small ones. The season lasts until August, and about 5,000,000 pineapples are imported each year.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

Pride costs more than hunger, thirst and cold.
Life is a reckoning we cannot make twice over.
Impulse can do wonders, where preparation fails.
Confidence is a plant of slow growth in an aged bosom.
We may be ruined by the excessive use of good things.
A good conscience is to the soul what health is to the body.
A character can be blackened by a shrug of the shoulders.
The most manifest sign of wisdom is continued cheerfulness.
Be brief in thy discourse, for what is prolix cannot be pleasing.
Manners must adorn knowledge, and smooth its way through the world.
Let there be no wilful perversion of another's meaning; no sudden seizure of a lapsed syllable to play upon it.
Take away this measure from our dress and habits, and all is turned into such paint, and glitter, and ridiculous ornaments, as are a real shame to the wearer.

How the Egyptians Cool Water.

I need state only three facts to show the rapidity of evaporation in upper Egypt, writes Carter Harrison in the Chicago mail. Water too warm to drink is put into a porous jar and placed in the wind though in the sun; in a half hour it is as cool as good spring water, at night, exposed to a breeze, even when the breeze is rather warm, before morning it becomes almost ice-cold. The night of my arrival here I took a pouring bath, on a balcony. The wind was balmy but fresh. The rapid evaporation so chilled me that I could not stay out long enough for my bath. At the foot of the cataract we took a swim in the Nile. We wore our underclothes for bathing suits. We hung them up before our state rooms to dry. In ten minutes they were dry enough to be worn. We have all heard of the universal habit of all Africans to annoint themselves with oil, and travelers speak of it as a nasty habit. It is, however, necessary in very hot and very dry climates to prevent the cracking of the skin. An English officer told me that during the hot winds on the Upper Nile his hands and face chapped worse than they ever did in a cold climate—chapped even to bleeding badly.

Peculiarities of American Eyes.

The efforts of the war department to secure a field glass for the service of greater power than the one they now use has discovered the fact that the eyes of the average American are closer together than those of men in foreign countries. The double glass, known as the field glass, now used is weaker than that used in the armies of Europe. It is only from five to six powers—entirely too weak for the purpose. The only glass they can get of sufficient power is a single spyglass, which is defective in that it does not take in a broad enough field. This is a very serious defect in the equipment of the American army but there seems to be so immediate prospect of its correction because our eyes are so close together. Some of the colored troops may be able to use a different glass, but the white Yankee soldier cannot overcome this national peculiarity. The best military field glass in use is that with which the German army is supplied. An attempt was made to adopt them by the war department, but it was found that the eyes of the glasses were so far apart that they could not be used by Americans. The department is studying now to overcome this difficulty.—[Washington Letter.

The Language of Animals.

Mock anger seems to be rather common among birds. There is in them, when caged, some suppressed excitement or fury, especially in the spring. Every one who knows a parrot knows that a perfectly reciprocal fondness is no protection against his bite. The one I know bites his best friend deeply, and roars with laughter. The little birds use a kind of flirtation of defiance with the overwhelming power of those they know intimately. A skilled bird tamer, I believe, puts his hand into the cage, and when the bird moves, withdraws it hurriedly, as if in fear. This invites the bird to a contempt which becomes the foundation for familiarity; and the device is founded, I suppose, on that adventurous and provocative spirit in the bird which prompts the bullfinch to scold and bully the master whose favors they value. Does a puppy bark and snap in play in something like the same temper? I might mention a goldfinch I know, which, I think, never fails to distinguish its partial mistress from all others by an outburst of swearing and ruffling.—[London Spectator.

Revenge Is Sweet.

"Look here, waiter, there is a fly in this soup," said a well-dressed but disgusted-looking guest at an Austin restaurant.
The waiter looked at the fly critically, and finally said:
"I'd give $5 to know for certain if that fly is the one that has been nibbling at my nose all the morning."—[Texas Siftings.

Biliousness

Is more general at this season than any other. The bitter taste, offensive breath, coated tongue, sick headache, drowsiness, dizziness and loss of appetite make the victim miserable and disagreeable to others. Hood's Sarsaparilla combines the best anti-bilious remedies of the vegetable kingdom, in such proportion as to derive their best medicinal effects with the least disturbance to the whole system. This preparation is so well balanced in its actions upon the alimentary canal, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the bowels and the circulation of the blood that it brings about a healthy action of the entire human organism, restores the appetite and overcomes that tired feeling.

How to Restore Your Eyesight.

You can do it easily, and you will not have to deprive yourself of a single comfort, as the remedy, you will enjoy life more than ever. Does your eyesight fail? Do you have to put down your darning, sewing, reading, etc., because your eyes pain you? Do they become blurred? Do they grow low-spirited, don't rush off to the family physician for a prescription, or, on the other hand, wait until you are blind before doing anything at all; but just go to the druggist's and for twenty-five cents get a supply of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Take them as directed, and your work for it, your unpleasant symptoms will disappear as if by magic, you won't have no big doctors bill to pay, and everybody interested (except the doctor), will feel happy.

She Couldn't Understand It.

"What in the world has happened to you since the last time I saw you?" asked one lady of another when they met on the street the other day; "I can't understand it. Then you were pale, haggard and low-spirited, and I remember you said that you hardly cared whether you lived or died. To-day you look over so much younger, and it is very evident from your beaming face that your low spirits were then slight." "Yes, indeed, was the reply; and shall I tell you what drove them away? It was Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I was a martyr to functional derangement until I began taking the Prescription. Now I am as well as I ever was in my life. No woman who suffers as I did, ought to let an hour pass before procuring this wonderful remedy."

is a good thing to get, and the man who wins it by superior skill, or by an unexpected turn of Fortune's wheel, is to be congratulated. But he who escapes from the clutches of that dreaded monster, Consumption, and wins back health an happiness, is far more fortunate. The chances of winning $100 00 are small, but every consumptive may be absolutely sure of recovery, if he takes Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in time. For all scrofulous diseases (consumption is one of them), it is an unfailing remedy. All druggists.

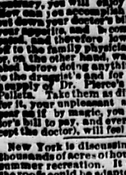
THE LATEST DISCOVERY.

A Prominent Physician Reveals Some New and Startling Secrets.



"Do you know," said Dr. Bodfish, of Boston, at the dinner table one evening recently, "what the startling point of most physical troubles is?"
"No, indeed," replied a circle of anxious enquirers, as they crowded about the doctor.
"Tea and coffee," answered the eminent physician.
There was a look of horror on the faces of his listeners. The doctor continued:
"Many and many a woman even more, drink tea and coffee constantly, and wonder why they feel dull and stupid, have headaches, a bad taste in the mouth, pains in the limbs and about the body and irregularity of the secretions. Nine cases out of ten these things are caused by too free use of tea and coffee. These drinks clog the system, weaken the tissues and destroy the most important organs. Few men or women who indulge in tea and coffee regularly have clear urine, but on the contrary, sediment, scum and brick dust, all of which, invariably mean coming disease or death."
"But what are we to do, Doctor? Shall we give up tea and coffee altogether?"
"No. I do not advise that, but regulate it. Keep the kidneys clear and active. There is nothing in the world so good for this as the well known and popular Hunt's Remedy. Any one who uses this medicine regularly can drink tea and coffee without fear, without fear. The reason is that Hunt's Remedy flushes or washes out the kidneys, and keeps them free and healthy. Any number of prominent men and women can confirm what I say, among the numb r scores of doctors and ministers, Gen Butler, Gen. Monroe and Miss Alcot."
It was plain that the warning and advice of the doctor had made a deep impression on his listeners, as it also should upon the millions of men and women who are shortening their lives by the use of these drinks.

THE BARBER'S OPINION.

"Some people think 'tis only made
For cleansing goods of heavy grade,
For washing down the walls or stairs,
The bureau, tables and the chairs;
But folks do well to change their mind;
'Tis not to things like these confined,
And not alone the kitchen maid
And laundress prize its friendly aid;
I find it just the nicest thing
For toilet use and barbering.
The slightest touches will suffice
To make a foamy lather rise,
That holds the beard till smoothly laid.
However dull may be the blade.
In short, the tale is ever new

Winds of Home.

O, winds of home, that from the westward start,
And blow across the highlands of my heart,
Do ye a message bear,
Upon your wings of air,
From her with whom my being forms a part?

O, winds of home, I know what you would say;
That she is true; and waiting the dear day
When by her side once more,
All grief and longing o'er,
Together we shall journey on life's way.

O, winds of home, your message fond I hear;
None other's words could sound so sweetly clear.
They echo in my heart;
And now, before we part,
Be this my answer, as you westward veer:

Tell her, though I have roved from her afar,
Her love has shown above me like a star:
And now its holy ray
Shall light me on my way
To her and home where all my treasures are.

When I behold the daybreak of her eyes,
Then new white dawn within my soul shall rise;
And peace and rest are mine,
True love and joy divine,
To be with her till earthly daylight dies.

O, winds of home, turn back your wings of air,
And help to swell the sails that homeward bear!
And all across the sea,
Your voice shall sing to me
Of her whose gift of loving makes life fair.
—George Birdseye, in Detroit Free Press.

A DOCTOR'S STORY.

On a fine summer day in the year 187—, I was proceeding by the southwestern railway to visit a friend and former patient, a resident of Portsmouth, England. It is not often that a medical man gets a holiday, and but for the kindness of a fellow-practitioner, in taking my practice for a fortnight, I should not have had this opportunity of enjoying the sea breeze.

The train by which I started was an early one, and, having procured my ticket, took my place in a second-class carriage, and lit my cigar, for it was a smoking carriage. On entering it I was surprised, and I think, naturally so—to find the further corner of it occupied by a lady.

"Oho!" said I, inwardly, "some American demoiselle who desires to indulge in a cigarette."

On observation, however, it appeared to me that the features of my fellow-traveler did not bear upon them that impression of cuteness which marks American nationality. She had soft brown eyes, a full, round face, and a profusion of chestnut hair. She was dressed in a plain traveling suit, bound with white braid, and wore a straw hat.

"Maybe, a German," I soliloquized "they are terrible smokers."

But again it occurred to me that possibly the young lady might be neither American nor German, but had got into the carriage without noticing that it was one reserved for the use of smokers. Under this impression I bowed slightly to her, saying:

"I fear my cigar may annoy you! Perhaps you are not aware that this is a smoking compartment?"

"Oh, yes," she answered, with a slight German accent, "yes, yes, yes, yes!"

There was something peculiar in her slow, deliberate utterance and the four-times repeated monosyllable. A dreamy look, too, in the speaker's eyes, as if her mind was preoccupied. However the train was now in motion, and I had nothing for it but to ensconce myself in my corner, look out of the window, and take a bird's eye view of the surrounding house-tops.

For a short time this was well enough; but I began at last to weary of the monotony of such an amusement. We Englishmen, as a rule, are so reserved and unsociable that we shrink into ourselves, and every fresh addition to the occupants of a railway carriage or an omnibus is received with black looks and a sort of a tacit intimation that he has no right to enter. Now, I am free to confess that, whatever my failings, want of sociability is not one of them; and I determined to try to engage my companion in a little conversation. There could be no impropriety in a man of my age (I was 38) endeavoring to beguile the tedium of a lazy journey by conversing with a fellow-traveler, a school-girl—and certainly not out of her teens. It was, therefore, with an almost paternal feeling that I addressed her.

"There are not many passengers by this train," I remarked.

"Two thousand and three," was the answer, that not a little startled my equanimity.

I looked at the speaker expecting to find a mischievous smile dancing in her eyes or lurking at the corners of her mouth. Nothing of the sort. She was perfectly serious, even stern, and her eyes had still the same dreamy, far-away look in them.

"Very absented-minded, or else in love, I thought to myself. However, I tried again.

"I think we shall have a fine day for our journey," I ventured to remark.

She turned upon me with that fierce, despairing, yet restless look that we see in a trapped rat.

"How you talk, talk, talk!" she said indignantly.

"But—"

"Are you mad?" she screamed in tone of such intensified shrillness and with such an awful, hungry look in her eye that the truth flashed upon me like an inspiration.

She was mad!

Medical man as I am, a feeling of horror overcame me when I reflected that I was shut up alone in the carriage of a train, traveling at express speed, with a lunatic. True, I was a strong man, she only a girl. But it is inconceivable what extreme strength is possessed by many of the insane. I have known a woman thus afflicted to require two, and even three powerful men to restrain her during one of her paroxysms.

However, I endeavored to keep as cool as possible, as I looked the young girl steadily in the face. She looked at me for a moment or so without quailing; then she sank back in her corner, resumed her apathetic posture, and sat gazing out of the window, with the far-away look in her eyes, as if no such person as myself was in existence.

"Poor girl!" I thought; and I began to wonder who or what she could be, and how she came to be traveling alone. Could she have escaped from an asylum. If so, how came she to be possessed of sufficient funds to procure a railway ticket?

I had some experience in "mad cases," and I knew that the most outrageous ones are those where the patient maintains an even sullenness of demeanor. The girl's case did not seem to me to be one of them. On the contrary, her sudden change of mood when I angered her seemed to indicate it to be a case of temporary aberration of mind, and consequently a curable one.

I looked at my watch. In a quarter of an hour we should be at Basingstoke. I was in the very act of returning my watch to my pocket, when my companion, with a mocking laugh—the peculiarly metallic ring of which it is quite impossible to describe—literally hurled herself upon me with overwhelming force, broke the watch from its chain, and sent it spinning through the window. In another second she was endeavoring to force herself also through the window.

Then commenced a terrible struggle, of which I even yet shudder to think. My muscles were strained to their utmost limit of tension, the perspiration poured down my face, and my arms felt as if about to be wrenched from their sockets. And all this to restrain one of the sex commonly called the "weaker" from self-destruction.

All this time the poor girl uttered no sound that could give warning to the guard or our fellow passengers of the terrible struggle for life or death that was going on within a few yards of them. As for my own voice, the extraordinary physical effort I was making to restrain the would-be suicide entirely prevented my making the slightest use of it. But just as my powers were failing me, and I felt that I could no longer prolong the struggle, the train began perceptibly to slacken speed.

"Thank Heaven! Basingstoke at last."

What followed is easy to relate. Of course, assistance was at hand, and the unfortunate young lady was removed to a place of safety. From letters which we found on her, and some articles of jewelry, which we advertised, we speedily discovered her friends. Naturally I, a medical man, would not lose sight of her till I had discovered them.

The patient proved to be a member of a German family, naturalized in England, who was subject to periodical attacks of mental aberration, but had never actually been in the asylum.

During the attacks, which invariably came on without any warning, so that it was difficult to watch her, she was seized with a restless desire to wander over the country, and, it appeared, had merely selected the Southwestern line because it happened to be the nearest to her own home.

She had been so long without an attack that her mothers and sisters had on the previous night ventured to go to an evening party leaving Lotta fast asleep in bed at home. During their absence she eluded the vigilance of the servants got up and dressed herself, walked about for some time, and took a ticket for the early Portsmouth mail—at least, that was what she imagined and told us on her recovery. Her memory, however, was very imperfect, but the poor child must certainly have walked about the streets for some time prior to the departure of the express.

It was natural that under the circumstances—I have already stated that I had had considerable experience in such cases—her friends should ask me to endeavor to effect a cure.

I undertook it and entirely succeeded. And also I undertook and succeeded in something else.

It is my wife who is looking over my shoulder as I write, and who says:

"My dear, the maddest act of all my life was when—"

But here I stop.

Feeding Cows in Finland.

To any one who could be satisfied with an unvarying diet of fish and black bread, accompanied by the best cream and butter that can be found anywhere, it would be easy to satisfy his wants in any part of the country. How the cream and butter come to be so good is a mystery to me, for assuredly the Finnish cows are the worst and most scantily fed of their kind. What other cow that respected herself would be satisfied with hay soup in which the water formed so unfair a proportion to the hay? The most meagre-looking hay, mixed with the dried branches of alder, simmers in a huge iron pot, and one sees the poor beasts dipping their noses into the unsavory broth and fishing out its sodden contents with the evident relish of hunger. It was complained to me by a resident in the country that cows could not be induced to look upon sawdust as the staple of their food. How far he had seriously made the trial I do not know, but should he ever succeed, there will be a rich prospect for Finland in dairy farming.—[Murray's Magazine.

FOR FARM AND GARDEN.

How to Hatch Ducks' Eggs.

Ducks are poor sitters and poorer mothers—in fact the Pekins are almost non-sitters. Set your ducks' eggs under hens, or in an incubator. Make the bottom of the nest of earth, and cover with hay or cut straw. After the first few days sprinkle the eggs daily with tepid water when the hen is off for food. Take the same precautions against lice as you would when sitting hens are on hens' eggs. Ducks' eggs are generally fertile and hatch well. If the sitting hens or the incubators, attend strictly to business, you may count on from 90 to 100 ducklings for every 100 eggs set and they will "hold out," when you count them after they are hatched. Ducks' eggs in an incubator require the same degree of heat as hens' eggs.—[Prairie Farmer.

Potatoes Affected with Rot.

A few years ago the rot struck potatoes here the first week in September, and nearly all the farmers dug their crops at once. The result was they had to keep picking over all winter, for many were so slightly specked with rot when dug that they were overlooked. I did not dig my potatoes until some time during the first half of October. When I did dig them nearly half were so rotten as to be seen at a glance. I put the sound ones in the cellar and did not have to pick them over. I have practised this plan successfully for years. Potatoes intended to winter should remain in the ground as long as possible without danger of freezing. Heat, I think, is what rots potatoes, and they will keep cooler in the ground than in the cellar.

When rot strikes potatoes, if they are dug at once many of the affected ones will be overlooked and put in the cellar with the good ones, causing them to rot also, but leave them in the ground until cool weather comes and all the rotten ones can be seen and avoided.—[New England Farmer.

Night Transplanting.

It is claimed by some that trees, if transplanted at night, will do better than if reset in the daytime. We know that the sun has an influence upon certain plants and flowers, but to what extent it affects trees is not definitely known.

A party who desired to ascertain whether or not there is any difference between daylight and night planting, transferred ten cherry trees while the same were in bloom, commencing at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and planting a tree every hour until 1 o'clock in the morning, and the result would indicate that the dark hours are better for the work than the light. Those transplanted during the day shed their blossoms, producing little or no fruit, while those planted in the dark maintained their condition fully.

He did the same with ten dwarf trees after the fruit was one-third grown. Those transplanted during the day shed their fruit; those transplanted during the night perfected their crop, and showed no injury from having been removed. With each of those trees he removed some earth with the roots.—[American Farmer.

Vertigo in Horses.

Horse vertigo or staggers is sometimes due to brain disorders, congestion, or the checking of circulation from compression of the jugular vein by a badly fitting collar. But the most common cause of vertigo is plethora. The favored or petted horse is overfed, and then a little violent exercise on a warm day and in the strong glare of sunshine produces vertigo, the animal throws up his head, shakes it rapidly, or rears and falls backward, as you have described. If the horse is fat his diet should be restricted, and a rather laxative food should be given for a time. Avoid tight collars, and shelter the top of the head from the direct rays of the sun by a sunshade. When taken out for a drive in hot weather place a wet sponge between the ears and make fast to the headstall or place under the band on the top of his head. Should the horse be attacked while driving, stop at the first sign of dizziness and throw a handkerchief or blanket over his eyes to shut out the light. Then if cold water is obtainable, apply it freely to the head and neck. A few minutes' rest will bring the animal around all right. But the sunshade and wet sponge should not be dispensed with during hot weather if the animal is subject to vertigo.—[New York Sun.

Some Hardy Cures.

The Secretary of the Connecticut Farmers' Association gives the following for publication, saying it comes from one of the best farmers in the state:

I have seen one in a while in the papers how to kill ticks on sheep, to kill lice on cattle, to cure the gapes in chickens, etc. To kill ticks on sheep I buy a half pound of snuff, three or four pounds, or enough to go over all the sheep at once; I put the snuff and pulverize it on the table on a newspaper, put the snuff in a glass jar; I take the jar, a large pepper box and a tablespoon, and dip the snuff from the jar into the pepper box half or two-thirds full, then I take the sheep gently, lay her on her side, open the wool and shake the snuff on the skin in places three or four inches apart and close the wool. I put more of the snuff around the neck, and in about three days, if it is done well, there won't be ticks nor nits to send a telegraph despatch. The snuff is a sure cure.

To cure the colic in sheep, I dissolve two tablespoonfuls of epsom salts in about a half pint of warm water and add one teaspoonful of essence of peppermint. I take hold of the sheep and back her to some corner in the barn, then open the sheep's mouth with my left hand, press the left thumb against her jaw, then put a small funnel in her mouth; the boy pours the salts while I hold the sheep. In about two hours the sheep will be all right; if she don't get well in two hours I repeat the dose.

To kill lice on cattle I take about a pint of kerosene and rub it all over the cow with a woolen cloth then card against the grain and with the grain. Sure cure.

To cure warts on cows I wash the teats before milking and rub on castor oil. I rub it on before milking. It won't drop into the pail like water. It limbers the teats. I had a bad case this summer, the cow's teats were covered with large warts so that they bled. I bought a gallon of castor oil, used the most of it on her all summer. The warts are all gone; the castor oil did it.

The cure gapes in chickens prevention is better than cure. The first year we came to this place, ten years ago, we brought out seventy-five chickens; they ran out doors and at the sink spout a good part of the time. That year the chickens had any quantity of gapes. Next year when we set the hens we put air slacked lime and sulphur in the nests, took the sink spout away, carried the slops and poured them under the apple tree and kept clean water before the chickens. From that year to this we haven't had a gap or a gape; as soon as the chickens came out we give them cornmeal mixed with water. Our neighbors have lots of gapes. I think dirty water is at the bottom of the trouble.

When to Cut Grass.

The practise of most good farmers is to cut grass early, as soon as it is in bloom. The quality of the hay is not only better, but by starting early there is more time for cutting, curing and securing. In summing up the results of analyses of nearly all the cultivated grasses, the analytical chemist of the Agricultural Bureau says it is apparent that in most cases the time of bloom or thereabouts is the fittest for cutting in order to obtain the most nourishment and largest relatively profitable crops, and for the following reasons:

The amount of water has diminished and the shrinkage will, therefore, be less. The weight of the crop will be largest in proportion to the nutritive value of its constituents. The amount of nitrogen not present as albuminoids, will be at its lowest point; fibre will not be excessive as to prevent digestion, and the nutritive ratio will be more advantageous. If cut earlier the shrinkage is larger, altho' the fibre is less and the albumen a little larger. The palatability may be increased, but the total nutriments to the acre will not be so large and the nutritive ratio will be more abnormal. The disadvantages of late cutting are evident in the increase of fibre, destroying the digestibility of the nutriments and the falling off of the albumen by conversion into amides. This is not made up by the largest crop cut.

To our hay-making readers, says the New York Independent, we would also commend this bit of timely and sensible advice from the New England Homestead: Cut the hay early when the crop is very light, plow, harrow well, broadcast on what manure you can scrape up (or any good fertilizer will pay) and plant to fodder corn or millet. Both crops will be off in season for fall seeding, when the manure made through the summer will come into good use. This is the best way to treat fields that are nearly ruined by the drouth of former seasons, unless you have manure and time enough to grow a hoed crop.

Farm and Garden Notes.

Blackberries do best in a moist, shady location, no matter how dirty from weeds.

A retentive soil is best for strawberries. It should be well drained and kept in a porous condition, if necessary by subsoiling.

An excellent method of protecting the iron of farm tools from rust is to paint them with white lead and tallow. This will not dry and may be easily washed off with a little spirits of turpentine.

The garden should be near the house and free from shade. The secret of success in gardening, according to a New Hampshire man, as in courtship, lies in small attentions, frequently and steadily bestowed.

When the farmer shall begin to estimate the value of sheep from the standpoints of meat fertility, and general advantage to the farm, he will not allow the market price of wool to determine whether or not he will raise them.

To have abundant bloom, roses require close pruning, rich fertilizing with decayed cow-pen manure, and some powdered charcoal; a mulch of black soil from the woods or cow-pen manure, and the flowers must not be permitted to expand and fade on the bush, but cut in the bud.

Diagnosed by Telephone.

Great are the wonders of the telephone. A physician reports to Gaillard's Medical Journal that he was saved a two-mile ride through a driving storm the other night by having the patient, a child, brought to the instrument, and held there until it coughed. He diagnosed false croup, prescribed two grains of turpeth mineral, and turned in for an undisturbed sleep during the remainder of the night. He found the patient in the morning doing nicely—under the care of another doctor.

That Night.

You and I, and that night, with its perfume and glory!—
The scent of the locusts—the light of the moon;
And the violins weaving the waltzers a story,
Enmeshing their feet in the weft of the tune,
Till their shadows unbroken
Reeled round on the curtain,
While under the trellis we drank in the June.

Soaked through with the midnight the cedars were sleeping,
Their shadowy tresses outlined in the bright
Crystal, moon-smitten mists, where the fountain's heart, leaping
Forever,
Forever, forever burst, full with delight;
And its lisp on my spirit
Fell faint as that near it
Whose love like a lily bloomed out in the night.

Oh, your glove was an odorous sachet of blisses!
The breath of your fan was a breeze of Cathay!
And the rose at your throat was a nest of spilled kisses!
And the music—in fancy, I hear it today,
As I sit here, confessing
Our secret, and blessing
My rival who found us, and waltzed you away.

An Imprisoned Congregation.

Some years ago the pastor of a church in a rural district of Missouri shepherded a flock some members of which were in the habit of leaving the house while he was yet in the middle of a discourse. This was an eyesore to the visiting incumbent, and when one day a reverend brother volunteered to preach for him he felt called upon to speak of the annoyance.

"Oh, I'll stop that," was the reply. "I'll warrant you that no one leaves until I'm done." Accordingly, when he arose to speak he introduced his sermon with the following:

"My friends, before I begin my sermon I wish to make a few not irreverant remarks. You all know that a vessel when full is full, and that to continue to pour into it is folly. Some vessels are capable of holding a great deal, while others, again, are easily filled. So it is with men's heads, and it is possible that some of yours may become full before I'm through. If so, I want you to feel at perfect liberty to leave."

The sermon lasted an hour and a quarter, but not a mortal stirred!

"Do you know," said a young man afterwards, "I had a team of restless young horses outside, but I wouldn't have gone out to look after them for $100!"—[Detroit Free Press.

Pleasant for the Fremonts.

General Fremont, wife and daughter, recently visited San Jose, Cal., and received a great reception. As the general entered the hall the band played "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," the stage was handsomely decorated with flowers and evergeens, and a banner bore the words, "Welcome, Pathfinder." While the speaking was in progress a soft and silent shower of rose leaves fell upon the group, and not until the exercises were completed did it cease. Repeatedly Mrs. Fremont shook off the leaves, but they fell fast and thick, covering her head and shoulders and forming a pile in her lap. When the shower ceased rose leaves covered the stage floor a foot in depth.

Sports of the Park.

Several hundred people interested in horse trotting and base ball gathered at the Fair grounds last Saturday afternoon, to witness the sports. The first in order was trotting in the 2.50 class, for a purse of $30 divided. There were four entries and some fine trotting took place, the track being in good condition. A great deal of interest was especially manifested in the contest between Black Thorn and Rockland Chief, six heats being necessary to decide. It finally being won by Black Thorn, who took first money, Rockland Chief second, and Lucy Wilks third. Dan pulled out after the fourth heat.

The next race was the 2.40 class for a purse of $50, divided, there being three entries. This also was an interesting race, first money being taken by Whizz, second by Echo. Ariel pulled out in the third heat. Horsemen present said they were as good races as one usually sees. Everything passed off smoothly and the purses were promptly paid at the end of the races, which was after 7 o'clock. Messrs. Cushman, of Weymouth, Townsend of Quincy, and Hilton of Boston, were the judges.

At 3 o'clock there was a game of base ball between the Lovell's Corners and Hinghams, for a purse of $50, $30 to the winner and $20 to the other. This was one of the best games ever played upon the park, being hotly contested. The clubs have played two games together this season, each winning a game, which made this game the more interesting, for each club was determined to play for all they were worth and the result shows that they did do so, for the Lovell's Corners came very near being shut out, up to the last inning they not having a run to their credit; but they bracked up and by hard work secured two runs, which gave them the game. The score, Fatal Accident.

One of the most shocking accidents that has taken place in East Weymouth occurred last Tuesday evening, when two of our well known citizens lost their lives, one being killed instantly and the other dying shortly after. Nathan T. Joy and William Wallace Bates were in a team driving home from the beach, when they were struck by the 10 o'clock inward train from the beach at Reed's crossing, killing Mr. Joy instantly and injuring Mr. Bates so badly that he died after he reached the Boston hospital, to which he was taken on the train. From appearances it would seem that they must have been nearly across the track when struck, for the horse escaped with a slight bruise. The carriage with its occupants was carried some 50 feet between the fence on the side towards Hingham and the cars, which tore the team into small pieces. The train was stopped and willing hands were ready to do all they could for the unfortunate men. Mr. Joy was found to be lifeless, but Mr. Bates was conscious and told who he was. He was taken to the depot and placed upon the cars to be taken to the hospital, but died soon after.

Mr. Joy was born in Weymouth 65 years ago, and was a son of Caleb and Mary Joy. December 6, 1846, he married Christina J., daughter of David and Mercy Pratt, the fruits of this union being four sons and two daughters. He has for a number of years been engaged in the horse and carriage sale business, on Middle street. He was a member of Crescent lodge of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Bates was born in East Weymouth July 20, 1835, and was a son of Jacob and Nabby L. Bates. He received his education in the public schools of Weymouth, and when a young man entered the employ of M. C. Dizer, where he has been employed ever since, being the only man at the time of his death who was with Mr. Dizer when he commenced business, December 4, 1861. He was united in marriage to Anna G., daughter of Francis H. and Savrina Cowing, who now survives him.

The funeral of Mr. Joy takes place today, at 2.30 o'clock, from his late residence on Middle street, Rev. Geo. C. King officiating, after which the remains will be escorted to the North Weymouth cemetery by Crescent lodge for interment, services being conducted according to their ritual.

Mr. Bates' funeral will take place Saturday at 2.30 o'clock, from his late residence on Middle street, Rev. Merrill Blanchard officiating. The remains will be escorted to the East Weymouth cemetery by the stitchers and cutters of M. C. Dizer & Co's factory. This is the most shocking event that has ever occurred in our midst and has prostrated both families as well as saddened the public, who have naught but feelings of sympathy to express towards the families of these two gentlemen.

Reminiscence.

In a walk through the Village Cemetery a friend called attention to the headstone marking the grave of Asa B. Wales, Jr., son of the former landlord of Wales' Hotel, who was killed by a runaway accident June 23, 1860, of which our informant was an eye witness. Young Wales was driving a spirited horse through the square just as another team had run away, the first one being a box wagon team, which collided with a tree in the square, and one of the occupants of the wagon, B. Frank Worster, was thrown over the horses' heads, but was not hurt to any extent. Wales' horse also started into a run, and when near Hobart's mill the young man was thrown out, receiving a blow on the head which resulted in his death two hours afterward.

Weddings.

Mr. Edward W. Hunt and Miss Augusta C. Thayer were married Wednesday evening, June 20, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chapin Thayer, by Rev. E. T. Pitts. After the marriage a reception was held at their new home on Front street. The friends of the pair presented them with a large number of elegant and valuable gifts.

Mr. Wallace H. Bicknell of Weymouth, was married Wednesday evening last to Miss Edith P. Simmons, daughter of Mr Charles Simmons, of East Weymouth, by Rev. Merrill Blanchard. The ushers were Charles F. Garey, Bertram Nash, George E. Bicknell and John Bicknell. The pair were the recipients of a large array of handsome presents. They will commence housekeeping in the house formerly owned by Jacob Loud, on Front Street.

At Brockton, June 14th, Mr. Frank G. Hunt, of this town, and Miss Mercy B., daughter of the late Charles W. Dimmick, of Braintree, were married by Rev. Mr. Warfield. The pair left for New York on a bridal tour, and upon their return will reside on Summer street.

Mr John F. Fogarty, of Weymouth, was married to Miss Annie F. Donahue of So. Weymouth last Tuesday evening, by Rev. Fr. Murphy, at the parsonage. A reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents in the South village, and the pair were presented by their friends with many useful and valuable gifts, the parents of the groom giving a range and furnishings and parlor mirror; Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Griffin, lounge; mother of the bride, one hundred dollars in gold; sisters of the bride, Hetty, dining set, Rose, ten dollars in gold, Maggie, ten dollars in gold; Mrs. Kenzig, chamber set; Mr. and Mrs Michael Cahill, half dozen silver teaspoons; Julia Walsh, silver sugar shell; gentlemen friends of groom, lounge and easy chair; lady friends of the bride, two handsome Turkish rugs; variety of silver ware and other articles, from friends. The couple left here yesterday for Suncook, N. H., where they will commence housekeeping, and they take with them the wishes of many friends for their future happiness and prosperity.

Temperance Meeting.

The lecture on the subject of temperance by Hon. B. B. Johnson, of Waltham, given in the Baptist church last Sunday evening, was well attended. The lecturer was introduced by Rev. Mr. Pitts, who also officiated in the opening exercises of prayer and Scripture reading. The Philemon Quartette of East Weymouth, followed the organ recital by Mr. Lewis E. Tilden with the selection, "Hear, O Father, hear our prayer," and also gave a temperance selection, with contralto solo by Mrs. Drew, and Mr. C. Will Bailey gave a bass solo responsive to the prayer.

Mr. Johnson's remarks were mainly a resume of the progress of temperance work from the days of its inception by Dr. Rush to the present time, in which he paid fitting tribute to the earnest labors of Rev. Edwin Thompson, who has recently passed away. The whole battle, he said, had been fought within the period of these two lives, and at the outset of the work the popular illusion was that liquor drinking conduced to happiness, the practice being general even among the clergy and their flocks, many references being made by him in this connection to prominent ministers and others. Through the efforts of the advocates of this reform all this had been changed, and able ministers in all denominations were now waging a vigorous warfare against the traffic.

Chronological details of the formation of the various temperance organizations engaged in the work were given, among them the Mass. T. A. Soc'y, American Temperance Union, Father Matthew T. A. Soc'y, Good Templars, Temple of Honor, Reform Club, etc., and among the impediments to the advancement of principles of temperance was which these organizations had met were the position of newspapers, the apathy of voters. But the results of these labors to crush the power of the saloon were seen especially in the prohibitory states of Kansas and Iowa, where the tide of prosperity in increase of business and population had never before been equalled. Medical men and educators, he said, are attacking the traffic, and in the practice of medicine it has been proved by experiments in London hospitals that a larger number of patients were cured without the use of liquors than with them.

The lecturer alluded to the hostility of liquor dealers to the advocates of temperance, which had at times culminated in murder and in slanderous attacks on their characters, and in closing asked the question "What is this to you?" enforcing the query with the incident of the sad accident on the Hudson River railroad some years ago in which a newly wedded pair, Mr. and Mrs. Valentine, perished, the accident being due to the recklessness of a party of lobbyists returning from Albany, and undertaking to run the train. The young bridegroom had but a few weeks before addressed a temperance gathering, and an employe of his father had said to him "Now is this to you? you don't drink, nor do any of yours," to which Valentine replied, "I thank God that this is true, but I know not how soon this evil may affect me or mine."

Burial of Mother and Babe.

A sad scene was witnessed in the Village Cemetery last Sunday afternoon, when a large number of the relatives and friends of the late Mrs. Fanny (Dugy) Jones accompanied the remains of the mother and her infant child to their last resting place. A little over a year ago she was married to Dr H. A. Jones, dentist at Braintree, and her early death at the age of 23 years and 9 months is peculiarly afflictive to the bereaved husband and friends. Mrs. Jones was a graduate of the Bridgewater Normal school, and had been a teacher in public schools of Braintree and Scituate. She was secretary of the Woman's Relief Corps of the Braintree Post and was active and useful in many benevolent plans. The funeral services were held at the First church, Braintree.

Children's Sunday

At the Baptist Church was made a very enjoyable occasion with appropriate exercises by the children of the Sabbath school, last Sunday afternoon. An exercise on "The Bible" was given by the infant class in charge of Mrs. S. W. Gutterson, and other classes furnished a variety of recitations, interspersed with singing by the school and choir. The platform was appropriately decorated with ferns and flowers.

Open Air Meeting.

The open air meeting in Washington square last Sunday afternoon was well attended, about 250 residents, mostly young men, attending. Rev. Mr. Pitts made remarks suited to the occasion, and singing from "Gospel Hymns" added to the interest of the meeting. Another meeting will be held next Sunday at 4 p. m., and singers who may be present are requested to bring copies of "Gospel Hymns."

Mrs. Deborah Stoddard, who is now at the residence of N. B. Peare, observed her 83d birthday last Sunday. She is a remarkably smart lady for her age, and is able to read the Herald every day for three hours at a time without the aid of glasses. Taking into consideration the fineness of the type, this is something remarkable.

Fishing Excursion.

Last Thursday evening, Messrs. J. A. Roarty, N. W. Bates, Allie Clapp, M. J. Avellar, David Joy, Minot Pool, Edw. N. Bates, C. E. Cushing, Wendell Pratt, Geo. M. Keen and Caleb and George Josselyn, of Foxboro, left East Weymouth in the Ocean Queen at midnight with G. S. Simmons as driver, for Scituate harbor. Arriving there they chartered the schooner Helen M. Wood with Capt. Will Bates, leaving the harbor at 3 o'clock Friday morning, and captured between 600 and 700 pound of cod. During the trip two prizes were made up, one of 60 cents for the first fish caught and $1.20 for the largest fish caught. Caleb Josselyn made the first catch and Edw. N. Bates the last and the largest, which weighed 9 pounds, 1 oz. There were many amusing incidents during the trip, Nate Woods being very successful in catching sculpins, also shooting a lobster buoy on the way home. During quite a severe storm which the party experienced C. E. Cushing was conspicuous by his absence, he being in the hold sick. Dr. Bates officiated as cook, and prepared some fine lemonade. The party arrived home at East Weymouth Friday night at 10 o'clock, bringing with them two barrels of fish, which it is said were excellent.

Messrs. W. T. Dizer, C. G. Gibson, Spencer Crowe, E. Wilder, Geo. Hunt, Harry Lovell, Bert Cushing, Will Outt, W. E. Dizer, Geo. R. Burrell, G. E. Gardner and Capt. Lyons and son, made a fishing trip in the same yacht on Saturday last, capturing about 600 lbs. of cod, one of 14 1-2 pounds being taken by Gibson. The NEWS reporter returns thanks for the present of a nice large fish.

Children's Day

Was observed at the M. E. church last Sunday. The altar of the church was decorated with flowers, and in the centre was a fountain, the basin of which was trimmed with flowers, above the altar being the motto, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," and beneath the same was an arch inscribed, "Forbid them not." The floral decorations consisted of several crosses, anchors, wreaths, vases of flowers, bouquets and potted plants, and much credit is due the committee when we consider the scarcity of flowers this season.

The singing was under the direction of the choir, and was fine, as usual. On the whole we may say it was a grand success, as it usually is on Children's day. Following is the programme:—Voluntary; opening hymn, "Children's Day," Choir; prayer by pastor; singing, "Sabbath Home," Choir; Mrs. Cushing's exercise; "Transplanted," Emma Bates; singing, "Heavenly Home," Choir; Emblematic concert exercise; "For All," Julie Sylvester; "A Glad some Song," Lottie Wilder; song, "Children's day has come again," Choir; "On the shore of Tennessee," Alice Thompson; "Daisy's Mistake," Minnie Pfefferkorn; "Come to Him, Children" Sadie Ford; song, "With joy we hail the children's day," Choir; "Roses," Jennie Reed; "Life's Stairway," Bertha Litchfield; "The Pansy," Bessie House; "The Sunday School Garden," Marion Cain; song, "Sing a song for summer time," Choir; "Why some roses are red," Flossy Hobart; "Voices in the twilight," Nellie Hayden; pastor's address; Collection address, Pastor Tuer; acrostic entitled "Lend a Hand;" song, "Onward, Christian Soldier," Choir.

The Loyal Legion, under the direction of Mrs. Henry B. Raymond, gave a fine entertainment in the vestry of the M. E. church on Monday evening last, and netted quite a sum for the benefit of the members. Some fine solos and duetts were given on the piano by Misses Hattie Thayer, Addie Raymond, Ada and Sadie White, and excellent recitations by Bertha Litchfield and Jennie Reed. Minnie Pfefferkorn and Edith Burrell sang solos in a pleasing manner; Stevie Pratt gave a solo on the bones, with piano accompaniment by Ada White, which received a hearty encore. Eddie and Willie Donovan, in their tasty costume, gave a club swinging exercise to the evident delight of the audience. A dialogue, "Aunt Ray's cat," was well given by Sadie Ford, Fannie Burrell, Nancie Burrell, Nellie Hayden, Marion Lovell, Clara Gardner, Harry Vogel, Walter Gardner, Freddie Burrell and Stevie Pratt. Mr. Henry B. Raymond gave a vocal selection, and in response to an encore Mr. and Mrs. Raymond sang a duett. A pretty little broom song was finely sung by Florence Young, Helen Dunbar, Cora Burrell, Nellie Cushing, Jennie Burrell, Carrie Sweeting, Addie Raymond and Jennie Blanchard. The last number was the operetta "Dragon Flies Day," which was a fine feature of the evening. The parts were sustained by Ida Mitchell, Marion Lovell, Fannie Burrell, Ellis Turpel, Bertie Boodroe, Eva Litchfield, Sadie White, Alice Thompson, Minnie Pfefferkorn, Ida Turpel, Jennie Burrell, Jennie Blanchard, Annie Reed, Marion Cain, Dana Smith, Nellie R. Hayden, Bertha Litchfield, Sadie Ford, Julia Sylvester, Walter Gardner, Nattie Sweeting, Harry Vogel, Robbie Burbanks, Cora Burrell, Nellie Cushing Stevie Pratt, Bertie Turpel. The whole entertainment was a grand success, and was heartily applauded throughout.

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

There is much complaint in this village in relation to the town water being so yellow, and several families do not use it in consequence. Perhaps if the hydrants were opened and the muddy water run off more frequently it might be an improvement.

W. T. Shaw is having his barn newly shingled.

Henry Kennerson has decorated David Bates' house, at the corner of Bridge and River streets, with paint and brush, and the place is looking finely.

George Manuel is having his domicile adorned with various colors of paint, Henry Kenerson doing the job.

The W. O. Collyer Hose Company was out last Saturday night, about 7 o'clock, trying the hose and played a good stream. The company were out again Monday night and took their hose to the residence of E. S. Beals, Esq., and played into his sewer, which is several hundred feet in length, washing it out good. They then played a stream over his high buildings, of solid water.

Rev. Edw. N. Dyer left home on Monday to visit his brother in Springfield, one of his sons going with him. They intend to stop there from two to three weeks. A letter from him informed his family and friends that he arrived in Springfield all right.

A party of young ladies with their gentlemen, about twenty couple from Quincy, held a picnic last Monday in Deacon's woods, Old Spain.

Charles Prouty has bought a good sized yacht, and he thinks it will take some of the flyers to beat him.

George H. Manuel is having his house beautified by a coat of paint.

The selectmen have been doing some good work on Sea street, having built a sidewalk from Bridge street to the water, and have also widened the street.

Messrs. C. H. Newton, Edwin Clapp, and a gentleman from Quincy were in the wilds of Maine last week, trout fishing. In addition to the good catches of fish which they brought home with them, they also returned with a large number of scars, the result of being bitten by black flies.

Mr. Edward Benson is to occupy the house recently made vacant by Mr. Carroll Beal. Mr. A. E. Jackson is to occupy the new house on Curtis street.

George H. Pratt will offer at auction on Friday, the 29th, at 4 o'clock p. m., that part of his manufacturing shop on North street, all the stitching machines and everything remaining in the shop which he used while manufacturing.

N. M.

Last Sunday was observed as Children's Day in the Pilgrim church, with appropriate exercises. In the evening there was a Sunday school concert and the church was very prettily adorned with flowers. Back of the desk was a very large cross covered with blossoms and foliage, and bearing in large letters the words "Children's Day." The exercises consisted of recitations and singing, very pleasingly rendered. Next Sunday Rev. L. B. Voorhees, of Salem, is to preach in the Pilgrim church.

Mrs. Wm. Brown and daughters, of Jamaica Plain, and Miss Kathleen Brown, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are stopping with Mrs. C. Briggs for two weeks.

To the Memory of T. Pump, Esq.—An old inhabitant of North Weymouth who departed this life years ago in hope of re-incarnation as a Granite Fountain. The obsequies, though long delayed, will be held at North Weymouth on July 4, 1888, at "evening's calm and dewy hour," on which occasion an eloquent discourse will be delivered by Rev. Mr. Drinkwater, who will preach from the very appropriate text, "Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters," together with divers instructive remarks relative to "broken cisterns" which being incapable of retaining or dispensing the aqueous fluid, have consequently outlived their usefulness. The music on this occasion will be furnished from the works of the celebrated composer, P. Handel, (Pump Handle) a contemporary of the deceased T. Pump. The selectmen of the town of Weymouth are invited to attend, thereby giving official dignity to the exercises by their presence. The officiating undertaker's name to the above is for the present witheld for important and weighty reasons.

FROM THE DWELLER "WHERE THE WOODBINE TWINETH."

Children's Sunday will be observed in the Universalist church next Sunday. Usual service in the afternoon. Floral concert in the evening.

Excursion.

A very pleasant gathering was held at "Bowditch Villa," on Rose Cliff, North Weymouth, Wednesday, the 13th. The party numbered ten, with ages ranging from fifteen to ninety-three years, and coming from the extremes of New Orleans and northern New Hampshire.—A fine chowder was served and with the addition of cold tongue, Saratoga chips, and a variety of puddings, cake and fruit, was rounded out with a magnificent cup of "after-dinner-coffee" which was pronounced by all incomparable.

After pleasant rambles on the beach, and a very enjoyable social chat, the company re-entered Mr. A. L. Hobart's nice barge, and with his careful handling of the ribbons over the backs of the beautiful black span, all were safely deposited at their homes after wishing for many happy returns of the day, and giving the charming hostess, Mrs. A. Bowditch, a surety that the party had been a complete success. The day was a perfect June day, and the ocean views from the villa were unparalleled. Rose Cliff, Bowditch Villa, "Long may they wave".

Complimentary Concert.

A very pleasing and interesting musical entertainment was given in Loring hall, Hingham, last Friday evening, by the Hingham Choral Society, for the benefit of Miss Helene C. Burness, a former resident of South Weymouth, who is to sail the last of this month for Germany, where she will remain for three years for the purpose of perfecting a musical education. The selections rendered by Miss Edmands, Miss Evans, Miss Kelley, Miss Burness, were given in fine manner, each number on the programme being warmly encored, including the selections by the banjo quartette of Boston. A large audience was present on this occasion.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

The seventh annual supper of the South Weymouth Improvement Association was held at Music hall Tuesday evening, with its usual success. This gathering, representing as large a portion of the community, has grown in favor from year to year, until it is now one of the social fixtures of the village, and the leading one in many ways. Two hundred and twenty-five men and women, young and old, sat about the tables on Tuesday evening, and the president, Henry A. Thomas, presided. The arrangement of the tables was in charge of Mr. A. B. Raymond and the committee of ladies, who were successful in providing a large measure of attractiveness for the occasion. The neat china ware of Caterer Raymond was overshadowed by the generous dishes of fruit and cake, while bouquets of bright flowers were plenty, an inviting picture, thanks to the kind efforts of the ladies. Shortly before eight o'clock the company was rapped to order, while Rev. W. H. Bolster invoked the Divine blessing, and then there was a rattling of dishes, a moving of chairs, and a passing to and fro of the good things, which included strawberries, ice cream, hot rolls, coffee, cake and assorted fruits. A number of young men and misses

16-CENT PANT STRETCHER,

Is positively the BEST invention ever known for taking Wrinkles out of Pantaloons, and shaping the bottoms of the same to fit nicely over the shoe.

Pantaloons should always be suspended as shown in cut when not in use. Even those in daily wear should be thus suspended through the night.

HOW TO APPLY THE STRETCHER.

Take the front bottom part of the pants in the left hand, taking the pointed end of the stretcher in the right hand, insert the wood part up the back of the leg about three-quarters of an inch, then spring the pin point into the front about half an inch from the edge. Pantaloons that are badly wrinkled or bagged at the knee should be dampened. A good way to do this is to hang them out by the stretcher in the evening, or on a damp day.

Lecture to Young Men.

Rev. E. T. Pitts delivered a lecture to young men at the Union church Sunday week, his theme being "Let no man despise thy youth," from I. Timothy, iv: 12. We give the following abstract of the lecture:—

Paul, the writer of the epistle, an old minister, is greatly interested in the young minister, and knows that Timothy is starting out under one disadvantage, his youth. The thought in Paul's mind is, "Young man, as you are, conduct yourself as a man and you will be respected as such; you will be successful in your ministry; men will not despise you for your youth if you show that you possess manly qualities." As Paul, so every man ought to take an interest in young men. Youth is a period of freshness and increasing strength; within it is held the germ of unknown possibilities; yet youth is often synonymous with flashiness, wastefulness, wickedness. It is a startling fact that most of the drunkards are young men, and that the average age of the criminal class is not much over 20 years. Is it necessary that our youth should be of such kind? If not, are we to blame if we despise their youth? When a young man, of God given powers, who was designed by his Maker for high and noble ends, deliberately prostrates those powers to ignoble uses and deliberates his talents and energies to the pursuit of a career of selfishness and sinfulness, who shall say aught if he is despised?

Alluding to the outpouring of young men in defence of the country against the rebellion, he said we can conceive how men can peril their fortunes and their lives in defence of country, or home, or religion; but how they can do it in the defence of institutions that are essentially evil and bring evil only, passes comprehension. Go out with me in the evening on the streets of any town or city, and you will discover that many of the people you meet are young men in whose attitude or countenance or language plainly appear the marks of dissipation, of living simply for the desire of gratification, which is the lowest of all motives. When young men get into such conditions is it strange that their youth is despised?

There are other things in which young men should be careful that their youth is not despised. Time and opportunities are given them, and to misplace or fail to improve them is to be culpable. Time is one of heaven's best gifts to men. "Time is money," but men waste it as prodigally as they do money. It is not strange that young men will lounge around as if they had a never failing bank account of it on hand. Instead of cultivating their manners or improving their minds, many young men are found engaged in the occupation of loafing about the streets or lolling in saloons. Young men, laziness is a crime in the moral sense, and of all contemptible characters the lazy young man is the most so. What opportunities many young men let slip. To every man there are voices calling in clarion tones, "Come up higher," there is plenty of room at the top for work, for growth, for the development of a splendid manhood and unbounded influence.

Passing from this presentation of reasons why youth is sometimes despised, the lecturer said that God never intended that youth should be thus looked upon. On the contrary He has so richly endowed it that it ought everywhere to command respect. Consider its capacity. For everything that comes into the world there is a sphere and a work. Show me a young man who says there is no place for him in the world, and I will show you one who is either mentally or morally ruined. "Give us young men!" is the great cry. Young blood is wanted to give color and life to old blood; young hands, strong and skillful, to take the place of hands palsied with age; young brains and hearts for courage and enthusiasm in conducting affairs; young men who fear God and keep His commandments are wanted, and there are positions for them to fill. As an encouragement, notice what young men have accomplished. Lafayette was hardly 19 years of age when he left brilliant prospects in France to aid in the struggle for American independence; at 23 Isaac Newton had made the discovery of the law of gravitation; Burns had achieved success as a poet at 15, Dryden at 17, Byron at 21, and Tom Moore at 23. Some of the greatest Americans have won fame in early manhood, as Washington and Hamilton and Bryant, and a large number of the finest positions are now being successfully filled by young men. 1,000,000 positions on our railroads are occupied chiefly by young men; there are 100,000 young men engaged in commercial travelling; there are 60,000 brainy young men in our colleges. There is everything to encourage young men in the unequalled opportunities and unbounded possibilities to seize upon and improve.

In conclusion, the lecturer said, as there is a beginning to life, so there will be an end. Old age, if life is prolonged, will be sure to come. If you have been sharp and unkind and untrue, friends will have deserted you; if you have been dissipated, your health and property and character will have gone. The only truly unselfish life is the life of the christian. Let the mind of Christ be in you, let His spirit possess you, and your life shall be like a pure fountain forever, and perpetual gladness shall spring up all around.

The Late Leavitt Bates.

At a meeting of the Boston Methodist Social Social Union, held Wednesday evening, May 30, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted, and a copy of the same ordered sent to the family of our deceased brother, and requested to be published in Zion's Herald:—

WHEREAS, it has seemed good to Divine Providence to remove from our midst our esteemed friend and co-laborer, Leavitt Bates, of East Weymouth, Mass., a member of this Social Union, and also a member of our executive committee; therefore,

Resolved, 1. While we cannot understand the ways of Providence, we yet bow in Christian resignation to this stroke, knowing that He who doeth this is "too wise to err, to good to be unkind."

2. We recognize the superior ability of our brother, as shown in his many and successful undertakings; his zeal for the interests of the Social Union; his loyalty to the temporal and spiritual work of the Methodist Episcopal church; his devotion to the Master who founded the church and baptized it with His blood and inspired it with His example—a devotion which for the last quarter of a century has been with our brother a flame unquenchable, and which has enabled him to make many sacrifices; his love for all the great works of Christian philanthropy which the church has undertaken as the leadings of Providence have been open to her; never forgetting in all his zeal, and in all the multiplicity of the cares which were his portion, that it was his duty, first of all, if he would make a success of his labors, to draw inspiration and strength daily from the Great Head of the church.

We rejoice in the last honor that the church conferred upon him in selecting him as a delegate to represent the interests of one of our New England Conferences at the present General Conference; and we know that had he been privileged to continue his seat there, he would have won a large place in the love and esteem of the members of that body of representative Methodists with whom he was temporarily associated. Knowing his worth we coveted the hour of his return to us, wearing modestly, as was his custom, this, the greatest honor that can come to a layman in our beloved Methodism; but God had higher honor for him, and called him home.

3. We tender to our deceased brother's family our profoundest sympathy in this the hour of their greatest bereavement. They have been privileged to have with them a noble soul who planned and executed great things for them. And we fervidly commend them to the compassion of that Father whose "mercy endureth forever."

Office of Central Norfolk Democrat,
WALPOLE, MASS., June 13, '88.

Editor of WEYMOUTH GAZETTE:—Dear Sir, the statement in a Weymouth democratic paper that an article you copied from my paper last week was furnished me by an advertising agent and paid for by Councillor Morse is incorrect as far as this paper is concerned. I wrote the article myself, printed it in my paper, and neither Mr. Morse or any of his friends saw it or knew of it till it appeared. Walpole is in Mr. Morse's Councillor District but is not in the Second Congressional district; the Republicans of Walpole wish it was. Respectfully,

J. D. EMMONDS, Editor.

Time Table Changes.

The changes in time table of trains for the summer on the Old Colony railroad, go into effect next Monday, and the beach route to Nantasket and Penaberton will be liberally provided for, additional trains over the South Shore line being put on. The usual extra summer trains to Woods Holl for Vineyard and Nantucket travel will commence at the same time.

Card of Thanks.

If the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam should publish a card of thanks, containing expressions of gratitude which come to him daily from those who have been cured of severe throat and lung troubles, by the use of Kemp's Balsam, it would fill a fair sized book. How much better to invite all to call on F. H. Morgan, druggist, and get a free sample bottle that you may test for yourself its power. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00.

LOVELL'S CORNER.

Children's Day was observed here last Sunday. The church was tastily decorated with flowers. Rev. S. F. Chase preached an interesting sermon in the afternoon, and in the evening an appropriate concert was given by the members of the Sunday school, under the direction of the superintendent, Mr. Bradford Hawes. The programme consisted of songs, responsive exercises, recitations and readings, and was one of the best we have heard for some time.

The exhibition exercises of the Pratt grammar school will be held Friday afternoon, June 29, at 3.30. Following are the names of the graduating class: Rosella T. Daley, Annie R. Dyer, Florence E. Pratt, Susie M. Shaw, John L. Maynard.

Mr. Cornelius A. Pratt has gone to the White mountains for the summer.

Saturday afternoon the South Highs defeated the Centre Abingtons in a well-played game of ball at Lovell's Corner. Score, 10 to 6.

Ice cream was for sale in the vestry Wednesday evening.

A. O. H.

Division No. 6, A. O. H., have elected the following officers for the ensuing term: President, J. F. Dwyer; vice-president, J. J. Downs; recording secretary, J. B. Whalen; financial secretary, W. F. The installation services will occur Friday July 6.

Division 6 and the Y. M. L. A. of Abington will hold a union picnic at the park, South Weymouth, Tuesday, July 3.

Lawn Party.

The Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial Society give a lawn party on their grounds tomorrow afternoon and evening. At 3 o'clock there will be a game of base ball between the Rockland Grays and Lovell's Corners for a purse of $50. In the evening the park will be brilliantly lighted and decorated with chinese lanterns. A band concert will be given by the American Band from 7.30 to 8.30, and from 8.30 to 10 there will be dancing, music Orcutt's Orchestra of 8 pieces.

A Family Gathering.

Have you a father? Have you a mother? Have you a son or daughter, sister or a brother who has not yet taken Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the guaranteed remedy for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Croup and all Throat and Lung troubles? THE TRIBUNE FOR 1888
GREATLY ENLARGED.
Much the Biggest of all the New York Weeklies.
Greater Variety of Contents, New Presses, New Type and New Appliances.
At the Head of the Republican Press.

The New York Weekly Tribune will be enlarged on or before the 1st of January, 1888, by the addition of from four to eight more pages of actual reading matter—an increase of size of great expense to the Tribune, but without expense to the subscriber.

A complete outfit of the new folding and inserting presses will be put into the Tribune's press room in November and December, and the extra sheet will be folded into its place in the main sheet before it comes from the press. The enlarged Tribune will be the biggest and best of all the New York weeklies, and the new machinery will print it in an enlarged form, at the rate of seventy-two thousand copies per hour.

New Features and a great Variety of Contents will be added to THE TRIBUNE during the coming year. Readers will be given nearly a half more for their money than ever before.

Pensions for the old volunteers, especially Service Pensions, are being vigorously agitated in THE TRIBUNE; much space is given in every issue to this subject. Better Protection to Farmers under the tariff; the salvation of the country from the curse of intemperance; and the rescue of the national government from the hands of the rebel brigadiers; these, and all the other live issues of the day are receiving aggressive, earnest and loyal treatment in THE TRIBUNE.

THE TRIBUNE does not attempt to supersede the local, State and county press. But, in the great Presidential conflict now at hand, every thinking Republican, old soldier, farmer and temperance man, should have his local paper and THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES—WEEKLY, $1 a year; extra copy with every five. SEMI-WEEKLY, $2 a year; extra copy with every five. DAILY, $8.50 per year. SUNDAY TRIBUNE, $1.50. New subscribers receive the paper until Jan. 1, 1889. Remit always by draft, check, express or postal money order or registered letter.

PREMIUMS.—(1.) THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE'S History of the United States and Pocket Atlas of the World, 16mo., 254 pages, 50 maps, 50 colored diagrams; price, 40 cents; to subscribers, 25 cents; postage prepaid. (2.) A year—a fascinating running account of the history of the country, with a great variety of statistics and general information. (2.) Presidential Pocket Knife; subscriber's names and picture of his choice for President on the handle; send for descriptive circular; price at retail, $1.75; but given with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE one year for the same money, $1.75; two other styles, for less money. (3) Popular Picture Gallery—6 fine large pictures, including the new officers of the U. S. A., Mr. Blaine, Senators Evarts and Hiscock, "Return of the Mayflower," "Christ Before Pilate," and "Children Writing to Santa Claus;" send for circular. (4.) Waltham Watch; expansion balance movement, stem winder, stem set, seven jewels, nickel case, thoroughly reliable and an excellent watch; with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE, 1 year, for $7.50. (5.) THE TRIBUNE'S "Book of Open Air Sports." (6.) Webster's "Unabridged Dictionary." (7.) Wood's "Household Medicine." These premiums cannot be described in full here. Send for circular.

ARMY CHIEFS.

How Our Highest Military Titles Have Been Created.

Soldiers Whom Congress Has Delighted to Honor.

Congress, by an act, approved May 28, 1798, passed a law empowering the president to raise a provisional army of 10,000 men. This act grew out of the apprehension of war with France then existing. This act authorizing the raising of the army also empowered the president, by and with the consent of the senate, to appoint a commander of the army, who, being commissioned as lieutenant-general, may be authorized to command the armies. General Washington was appointed lieutenant-general, but there was no call for his services on the field, as the war was averted. The next legislation was an act of congress approved March 3, 1799, which provided "that a commander of the army shall be appointed and commissioned by the style of general of the armies of the United States," and it further provided that the "present office and title of lieutenant-general shall thereafter be abolished."

The records do not show that any person was appointed to this position of general. Alexander Hamilton, as major-general, commanded the army. For a long time it was denied that Hamilton was the ranking commander, but a recent order found in the files of the War Department, signed by him as major-general commanding, is accepted as settling that controversy. But the act of March, 1799, abolished the office of lieutenant-general, which, when created in the fear of war, was given to Washington.

In the Thirty-third Congress a joint resolution was passed and approved February 15, 1855, temporarily reviving the grade of lieutenant-general, in order that when, in the judgment of the President and of the Senate, it "may be deemed proper to recognize the services of a major-general in the late war with Mexico," &c., it might be done. This was the sole benefit of General Winfield Scott, and the resolution provided that "when said grade of lieutenant-general shall have been once filled and become vacant this joint resolution shall thereafter cease and be of no effect." Hence when General Scott died the grade died with him.

The next legislation was an act of Congress, approved February 29, 1864, reviving the grade of lieutenant-general. It authorized the president, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to select from officers not below the grade of major-general the most distinguished for courage, skill and ability, "who being commissioned, may be authorized, under the direction and during the pleasure of the president, to command the armies of the United States." This was for the benefit of General Grant, who was appointed to the position; but an act of Congress approved July 25, 1866, revived the grade of general, which seems to have been repealed by indirection in former acts, making the lieutenant-general commander of the armies. This act was phrased like that reviving the rank of general, except in specifying the grade restored, directing that an officer be selected for his "courage, skill and ability," and that he should command, by direction of and during the pleasure of the president. General Grant was promoted to the rank of general, and General Sherman to that of lieutenant-general. It was subsequently provided (section 1094 of the Revised Statutes) "That when a vacancy occurs in the office of general or lieutenant-general such office shall cease, and all enactments creating or regulating such offices shall respectively be held to be repealed."

General Sherman and Sheridan were promoted to general and lieutenant-general respectively when General Grant became president by succession. At that time there was no legislation to put upon the succession. General Grant's first nominations were of Sherman and Sheridan, the former to be general and the latter to be lieutenant-general, vice Sherman. The act providing that these offices becoming vacant they should cease (quoted above) was not passed until 1876, seven years after the promotions of Sherman and Sheridan. Hence, as the law now stands, the grade of general dies with Sherman and that of lieutenant-general with Sheridan. It is also to be remembered that General Scott held the office of lieutenant-general by brevet only, so that from Washington to Grant the office was not filled as of full rank.

The nomination of Washington to be lieutenant-general and commander-in-chief of all the armies was sent to the Senate by President Adams on July 2, 1798, and was unanimously confirmed the next day. Upon receiving notification of the appointment General Washington wrote a long letter from Mount Vernon, in which he said he would accept the appointment with the reservation that he should not be called to the field until the army was organized and ready for him to take command. As that period was not reached he was not called into active service. By some it is believed that the act of March, 1799, abolishing the grade of lieutenant-general and creating that of general was intended as a compliment to Washington, he being deemed the commander-in-chief. If so he did not accept it, for the office remained vacant until subsequently abolished.—[Washington Star.

LADIES' DEPARTMENT.

Fourteen Miles to Eighteen Waltzes.

Edward Scott, in his "Dancing and Dancers," makes the following estimate of the distance actually waltzed over in an evening by the belle of the ballroom: "Do you, 'my fair and fragile reader,' think you would go six times round a moderate sized ballroom, say, making a circuit of eighty yards during a waltz? Yes; at last, even allowing for rest. That, then, is 480 yards, if you went in a line. But you are turning nearly all the time, say, on an average, once in each yard of onward progress, and the circumference of a circle is rather more than three times its diameter, which will bring each waltz to over three-quarters of a mile, or at least fourteen miles, for the eighteen waltzes."—[America.

A Feminine Musical Fad.

The latest "fad" among young women who play the piano is to accompany themselves with an imitation of the cornet produced by a peculiar buzzing sound through the lips. The art is difficult to acquire, but when it is once achieved the effect is quite entertaining. I was present at a performance which sounded like a small band. Indeed, a person standing outside the parlor door would have supposed there were several instruments all going at once. An ear for imitation is necessary in the performer to begin with. Then by dint of constant practice, with the lips compressed as if for whistling, but with the aperture wide and elliptical instead of round, the accomplishment is gradually acquired. A quick, lively tune is best suited to make the imitation of the cornet successful. Meantime the banjo is more popular than ever as a musical instrument with young women who are not content with their efforts at the piano.—[Brooklyn Citizen.

Clad in Ancient Winding Sheets.

It seems curious that a fresh and all-alive young creature should be clad in cloth copied exactly from the wrappings of the Egyptian dead. This fabric is a novelty of the season and will be used extensively for summer gowns, being light, cool and new in color. I don't suppose that this reproduction of mummy habiliments will make it rest at all heavily on the fair forms of our girls, although I have seen one case in which the wearer certainly realized the source of the material. She had fashioned it into a house robe to exactly resemble the original Egyptian garment, with its curious trappings and bands. It was an idea worthy of the spectral Bernhar lt although it originated with a merry enough Fifth avenue maiden. As the result was a shapely sort of costume such as plenty of women are ready to adopt, I shall not be surprised if when touched up by the skilful fingers of the modern costumer, the spectacle of apparently vivified mummies in our streets becomes general.—[New York Sun.

They Made Co-operation Pay.

As pretty a bit of co-operation as ever deserved to succeed is succeeding very creditably just now. The co-operators are three girls and three sewing machines. The girls are shirt makers, and they were thrown out of place in a strike. Things looked black for them till more girls, luckier than they, gave a typical example of that unselfish fellowship which seems never wanting among the poor. The three workless and penniless shirt makers were provided with sewing machines, and proceeded to make honest shirts on their own account. It paid. It offered a shining illustration of the remedy which many tenement workers, if they only chose to take it, have in their hands. The shirt makers got along at first in a tiny room; then they demanded a shop, and now they are going to call for a factory. The three girls are now a company with a long name. They call themselves the Solidarity Co-operative Shirt company, and some of the retail stores are going to sell their brand. The girls have a boom. They have exhibited business sense and their sagacity has its reward. Here is trade evolution and in feminine hands.—[New York Mail and Express.

Beauty Sleep for Complexion.

No greater mar is there to the complexion than wrinkles on the brow, especially the horizontal lines just across the forehead or the two perpendicular ones which come between the eyebrows. Even crows'-feet are less detrimental to fairness of expression, but nine women out of 10 after 20 years of age contract these lines of disfigurement, generally from a habit of frowning through imperfect sight or raising the brows.

They are not necessarily signs of age, but they produce the same effect and destroy the charm of the most youthful countenance.

No surer preventive of wrinkles or a worn-looking skin can be obtained than sleep at the proper times or at odd moments, but of course this does not apply to the sleep obtained by artificial means, says Lucie C. Lillie in the Philadelphia Times. Healthful and natural slumber is of all remedies for a skin prematurely old the very best, and the society belle who has the good of her complexion at heart will contrive a regular rest daily—if possible at a stated hour.

One of the most famous beauties of the day—the wife of a well-known artist, and whose social life is not altogether one of inclination, since there are actual duties involved in it—told me that she made it a rule to sleep daily after her afternoon exercise from 6 to 7, arising refreshed and ready for the duties of the evening, while she was very certain that the delicate texture of her skin had been preserved by this means. Certain it is that at forty years of age this woman has the peculiar bloom of a girl of twenty.

"Beauty sleep" is so called because among the women of the Orient the practice of early sleep at night was cultivated, and in Paris there are few belles who do not take a siesta before attending a ball.

Fashion is Stationary.

If you must seal your letter, get white wax and a Germandic. Mrs. Cleveland has adopted the white ivory wax, and all the colors have been abandoned. It may be comforting to some of the overworked woman who aim to keep pace with the modes to know that seals are far from universal. Very many ladies whose names are synonyms for good taste and correct forms are content to glue the envelopes containing cards, notes, and invitations.

Extremes seem to be the fashion in note paper. One style is a thick cut-edged square, and the other is a thin, almost transparent, tissue paper, with envelopes to match. Both are in white.

A Noiseless Clock.

According to the Jeweller and Metalworker, a curiously considerate invention has been produced by a Frenchman in the shape of a noiseless clock, for use more especially in sick rooms. In place of the usual pendulum, the hands are set in motion by the unrolling of a chain, the end of which is fastened to a buoy floating in a tank of liquid. The fluid escapes at uniform rate, and can be utilized to feed a lampwick, thus giving the apparatus the double character of clock and lamp. When the lamp is lighted the necessary diminution of liquid takes place by combustion, at other times by a carefully regulated dropping. The idea is a good one, and will commend itself to all who are blessed with "nerves," for use in other than the sick rooms for which the clock is primarily designed.

HONEST FURNITURE.

Made in Cambridgeport, Mass., and Sold at the Most Artistic Store in Boston.

There is probably no article of manufacture in which there is so much sham work as in furniture. The many ingenious devices for dressing and filling woods in order to imitate the best and to cover up defects, make it an easy matter for the purchaser to be deceived. The race of competition between some manufacturers to eclipse each other in low-priced goods leads to all sorts of "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" in order to sell them. To some degree the general public has itself to blame for such a state of things. Those who can best afford to have the best are constantly lured by treacherous inducements to buy low-priced goods under the assurance that they are well made. People who have thus learned by experience that well made articles of furniture cannot be built for nothing, as well as all others desiring substantial and reliable furniture, will appreciate the fact that there are some firms in existence which can be relied upon to meet the wants of the public in this respect. There is none better qualified to do so, and none which has a better reputation for so doing than the well-known firm of Keeler & Co. This firm, too, is one quite prominently identified with Cambridge interests and Cambridge people, the gentlemen composing it, Messrs. Cornelius P. and George A. Keeler, father and son, having been for a long time residents here and having, also, their factory in our midst. Their experience in the furniture trade and furniture manufacturing has been of sufficient extent in point of years and of such worthy connections as to assure the public at once that there is little they do not know about first-class furniture. For eleven years they were with the famous Geldowsky, a Cambridge man also, whose furnitures was a standard of excellence and reliability while he was in the business. They are the direct successors of Mr. Geldowsky, and even retain now many of his old employes. On the old Geldowsky premises at East Cambridge was their original factory, but since the disposal of that property the factory has been located on Main street, adjoining the Prospect House. The outlet for the factory is the elegant and convenient store at the junction of Washington and Elm streets, Boston, which was built expressly for them. The firm occupies at this location ten rooms, some of which extend through to and face on Hanover street, and covering in all 50,000 feet of surface. Besides this it takes two large storehouses elsewhere to hold the cheaper grade of Western work. By cheaper grade—last we might imply that we had reference to the class of sham goods above decried—let us explain that we mean, never theless, well made and substantial work. The firm's principal trade is in the best grades of furniture made from special designs by their own designers, or to order from designs of others. Two designers are employed—Mr. Small, the chief, and Mr. Tomlinson, an English architect and designer, who has recently been engaged. The latter gentleman was employed especially to introduce English designs, which the firm now makes a specialty of, and which are very popular on account of their simplicity. The upholstery work is carried on at the Washington street store, in which occupation some twenty-five hands are employed. Mr. Thisfelt, an experienced upholsterer and man of most excellent taste, is in charge of this department. A special branch of the firm's business is its drapery and shade work, which is in charge of Mr. Plummer, formerly of R. H. White & Co.

The salesmen employed are almost without exception those who have had a life experience and who have in the past been connected with such firms as A. H. Davenport, Doe & Bunnewell and the Paine Furniture company.

Some Recent Contracts.

While the firm's main trade, as has been said, is in the best class of order-made and specially designed furniture, it is intended to keep a line of goods for the masses. As showing a wide appreciation of their best work, orders have been shipped to Australia, England, California and South America. Among recent orders are those from Senator Edmunds of Vermont, Hon. Leopold Morse and Colonel Swift of Georgia. In mantel work, the firm is doing an increasing business, among the recent orders being one very fine one of San Domingo mahogany for Colonel Swift. For the latter a side-table was also made from a piece of mahogany which has been in possession of the family for many years.

Interview With the Factory Superintendent.

The Cambridgeport factory, where all this specially designed and order work is turned out, is a four-story building with basement, 40 feet front and 100 feet deep. Thirty-five hands are here employed, under the superintendence of Mr. E. Flint, Jr., who has worked upon fine furniture from designs furnished by some of the best designers in the country, for a great many years. Mr. Flint kindly bestowed his attention upon a Tribune reporter a little while, one day this week, in showing him around the well ordered factory, and in giving a few ideas about the business. He says that furniture is being finished light in color at present, showing the natural grain of the wood. In so doing particular care must be taken in selecting woods which are free from flaw or blemish. Mahogany and quartered oak are the favorite woods, the former for chamber and oak for dining room. Black walnut is getting so scarce that it is hard to find good stock. In speaking of dining-room furniture, he said the pillar leg tables were fast going out of style, five legged tables taking their place. Mr. Flint took pains to show a device of his for an easy working slide on an extension table. Its operation is free from all binding and catching so common to dining-room tables. It is also a most durable invention. While looking over the factory, some fine specimens of carved work were noticed. Mr. Flint said he had at the factory some fine wood-carvers, and that carved furniture was very popular. A design for a memorial Masonic altar, which the firm is getting out for Charles H. Wilder of Newton, Iowa, was very attractive. It is to be made of San Domingo Mahogany, light in finish, with carved capitals and Masonic emblems. It is to be built from original designs from the firm's designers.

The Maori King.

A lady correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, writing from Cambridge, New Zealand, gives the following interesting account of a visit to the Maori King Tawhaio, who visited England a short time ago: "It is a ride of about ten miles from Cambridge to the Maori settlement. The houses are all built of rushes, and have no windows at all, so that from the distance they look like so many little haystacks. On entering the village a whole herd of mongrels ran toward us, barking and jumping up at the horses. The men, women and children sat in groups on the ground, the women plaiting plates of various sizes, which serve for one meal only. The men had been catching eels, and were busy with cooking them. They had made a fire in a long, narrow inclosure, against the side of which the eels had been placed wrapped up in leaves. The king came to meet us, but he did not know a word of English. Fortunately one of our party knew the Maori language and was able to translate. I thought the king would look quite wild and wear nothing but the traditional blanket, but he did nothing of the kind, and looked exactly like a tame rough, terribly shabby, in a torn shirt, and trousers and waistcoat of broadcloth, probably the remains of the suits he wore when he was in England. He also wore a 'tarrikin' hat, with three sacred feathers stuck in it, a strange mixture of civilization and savagery. When we went into his hut to see his wife he brought a coat, which belonged to his European attire, out of a box and put it on, which made him look like a tatooed undertaker. Presently he showed us a handsome album filled with English beauties, which had been given to him. The Maoris invited us to dine with them; but, though the eels smelt very savory and everything was very clean, we had not the courage to partake of the feast, and therefore declined and rode away, much pleased with having seen one of the swells of a recent London season in his own home in the wilds of New Zealand."

A Walking Electric Battery.

Bennettsville, Ind., holds within its confines a remarkable freak. The wonder is Henry Luegeman. Three years ago, during a storm, he was engaged in gathering tanbark, when the tree from which he was taking it was struck by lightning. Luegeman received a severe shock. It transformed him into a genuine electric man. Any one who takes hands with Luegeman now receives a severe shock. By passing the blade of a knife between his thumb and finger during the progress of a storm he charges the metal so strongly that heavy weights can be lifted. When flies alight on him they drop dead, and when he is in a dark room sparks flash from his flesh and his eyes shine like incandescent lights. Whenever a storm approaches Luegeman becomes highly charged with electricity and it is dangerous to touch him. He claims to feel no inconvenience, except that he will go near no moving locomotive for fear of being drawn against it and killed.—[Pittsburg Gazette.

Thought He Was Helpless.

The Waterville Mail tells a good story of Mr. L. O. Berry of Cromett's mills, who lost an arm several years ago. While boarding at a Richmond (Me.) hotel a stranger who had lost an arm entered and seated himself opposite Mr. Berry and asked the waiter to cut up his food for him, pointing to his empty sleeve by way of explanation of the request. The waiter, with a twinkle in her eye asked Mr. Berry to do it. As that gentleman sat at the table his arms appeared all right and when he did the required task with one hand the stranger took it as an insult, and demanded an apology. As Mr. Berry in reply, held up his own empty sleeve, the stranger burst into tears with the remark: "I've been helpless seven years, but I'm helpless no longer."—[Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

A Prominent Merchant in Trouble.

Old money bags mopes in his office all day,
An empty and cross as a bear;
The clerks know enough to keep out of his way,
Lest the merchant should grumble and swear.
Even Tabby, the cat, is in fear of a cuff,
Or a kick, if she ventures too near;
They all know the master is apt to be rough,
And his freaks unexpected and queer.

What makes the old fellow so surly and grim,
And behave so confoundedly mean?
There's certainly something the matter with him.
Is it stomach, or liver, or spleen?
We've guessed it—his liver is sluggish and bad,
His blood is disordered and foul,
It's enough to make any one hopelessly mad,
And greet his best friend with a growl.
The world-wide remedy, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, will correct a disordered liver and purify the blood, tone your system and build up your flesh and strength.

The Makers of a Well Known Churn write:

"We have been often asked by dairymen: 'What is the very best soap to use to properly cleanse dairy utensils?' We have invariably replied, the 'Ivory,' but as for giving specific directions for washing dairy utensils, it is really summed up in making them thoroughly clean. Boiling water must be used, and that, in connection with IVORY SOAP, will thoroughly cleanse and deodorize the wood, leaving it clean and sweet for further use. Any dairy utensils half cleaned will spoil the delicate aroma of 'gilt edge butter,' which may be perfect in other respects."

Me and She.

"If I were a king," he said,
"And you were just a lowly beggar maid,
With my strong hand I'd lift you to my side
And crown you queen; and in the great king's bride
Man would not know,
Or would forget, the beggar maid."

"If I were queen," she said,
"And you, a careless, wandering minstrel, strayed
To my fair court, I'd set you on the throne;
And being there, the greatest king e'er known,
I would kneel down
And serve you as your maid."

A HUNTER'S PLIGHT.

Twenty years ago, before the disappearance of the buffalo, and before the power of the fighting tribes of Indians was broken, a white man could get almost any sort of adventure west of Omaha at a very early hour in the morning. The Blue Mountain country of Oregon, in which rise two of the branches of the Columbia river, was once a hunter's paradise, and here it was the cinnamon and the grizzly bears grew the largest and were always aching for a row with some one. The first white men in there after pelts chanced so many perils that it was almost a miracle if any of them got out alive. The Indians were numerous and watchful, bears and panthers as thick as mice in a farm house, and an adventure of some sort was sure to occur daily.

I had been in a bit of cove or valley on the eastern side of the mountains for ten or twelve days before I got anything like a scare. It was within forty miles of the south line of Washington Territory, and the country for a hundred miles around me was in the same savage state as when Columbus discovered the continent. The Indians were further east, on the Snake river, or further west, on the Columbia and its branches, and only detached parties were to be feared. While this was a great burden off my mind, the bears and panthers were so numerous that I was in a state of constant alarm through the day, and dared not shut both eyes to sleep at night. I had a pack and a riding mule, and on the first night of my arrival, while I had a bright fire burning, and the animals were tethered within a stone's throw, a panther sprang upon old Bob, my riding mule, and clawed him in a terrible way before I could get near enough to settle him with a bullet. Three or four bears prowled around my camp all night, and the screams of a panther kept my eyes open until daybreak. However, after I had thinned out the colony by a dozen or fifteen, the varmints began to give me a rest.

On the 10th or 11th day of my stay I left camp at an early hour in the morning loaded for bear. I followed the valley up for a half a mile, and then turned into a ravine which was the bed of a creek during the melting of the snows. It ascended very gradually, and I had been following it for half an hour, when it took a sharp bend to the right. At this point there was a hole in the right-hand cliff, and as I halted to look at it I wondered if it was not the home of some savage beast. I had moved on about 500 feet, when a grizzly, which had been lying down among the broken rocks, suddenly rose before me. I was looking for his kind, but his appearance was so sudden, and he showed fight so quickly that my heart was beating altogether too fast as I pulled up for a shot. It had to be a snap shot, for not more than 30 feet separated us. Mine was a single-barrelled rifle, and I also had a knife and revolver. The bullet struck bruin in the left shoulder, and he spun around a dozen times like a top. I was reloading when he got ready to form a closer acquaintance. He had worked up the ravine and I had worked down, and we were now 100 feet apart. I knew I could not finish loading before he reached me, and there was no other way but to run for it and hope that he was too seriously wounded to overtake me.

In those days I could run like a horse, and I was accustomed to all sorts of ground, but I hadn't made ten jumps on this occasion before my foot slipped on a stone and I went down with a crash. Old grizzly was within twenty feet of me when I got up, and I pitched my rifle into his face as I took a new start. The roar he uttered lifted me a foot high, and I made a dozen extraordinary leaps, but it wasn't a minute before I realized that he was holding his ground, if not gaining a little. No man can guess how far a wounded and enraged beast will pursue him. I believe I could have kept clear of this bear down to the mouth of the ravine, but if he pursued me far enough he would be certain to overtake me. I made up my mind as I ran that I would try the hole in the cliff. It was large enough for me to enter, and might be large enough for the bear, but once inside I could turn and use my revolver. Old grizzly was hardly more than a rod behind me when I plumbed into the hole and scrambled ahead on hands and knees. After going in about ten feet the hole turned to the left and narrowed considerably, and seven or eight feet further on I came to the end. As I did so my hand encountered something soft and furry, and there was a hiss and a spit that told me that a kitten panther was present. I felt all around me in the black darkness, but the kitten was the only living object. He was a little fellow, not more than four or six weeks old, but ready to bite and scratch if my fingers touched him.

The grizzly did not follow at once into the cave. It was five minutes before I heard him working his way in, and by this time I had recovered by breath and nerve. I was certain he could not reach me within six feet, and was rather glad to hear him wheezing and snorting as he pulled himself along. By and by I saw his eyes shine. He could come no further. His claws dug at the rocks and his roars of rage deafened me, but I was safe. It was now my turn, and I gave him two shots from the revolver which caused him to redouble his roars of rage. For about ten minutes I felt very queer over the situation, but all of a sudden it struck me that I had gained nothing by the change. In place of being a fugitive I was a prisoner. The bear showed no disposition to retreat, and I now became aware of the fact that the cave had a rank smell and that the body of the bear prevented the fresh air from entering. I felt that I must drive him out, and I did a very foolish thing. I edged nearer to him and put four bullets into his head, and after a long-drawn moan he closed his eyes and died. I congratulated myself for a moment, but then it dawned upon me that I had choked up the passage to liberty with the carcass of a bear weighing at least 600 pounds. I thought I might be able to push it before me, but when I made the attempt I could not stir it an inch. I had done an idiotic thing, and there was no way to repair the error.

I was wondering how I should get out of it, when I heard the scream of another animal at the entrance of the cave, and in a moment more realized that the mother of the cub panther had arrived. It was well for me that the body of the bear blocked the entrance. The panther went wild with fury when her kitten began to call. She bit and clawed at the bear, and by a great effort pulled it back a few inches. Had not the space been so contracted she could probably have drawn it out, but she did not have a fair show to use her strength. Her eyes looked at me over the body of the bear, and if one ever saw fury it was in those orbs. I gave her a couple of shots, hoping to drive her off. I think I wounded her in the head, for she set up a terrible screaming and ran out, but in two or three minutes she was back again with more fury than ever. I now pushed her kitten forward, hoping she would be appeased at its restoration. It climbed over the bear and reached her, and she took it in her mouth and backed out. I was a pleased man over this result, for the cave was as hot as an oven, smelled powerfully stout of panthers, and the powder smoke almost stifled me. Being a bit rattled had brought on an intense thirst, and I felt that I had got to do something pretty soon or suffocate. Pretty soon I crept forward, and began pushing at the big carcass, but had not been engaged over two or three minutes when the panther returned. She had carried her kitten to a place of safety, and was now bent on revenge. She realized that the carcass must be got out of the way before she could come at me, and had I not seized the grizzly by the ear and hung on she would have pulled the body out of the cave. She hung to it for half an hour before she quit the job, and then she retired in a way which left no doubt that she would watch at the entrance.

When the panther had gone I struck a match and looked at my watch. It was nearly noon, and I was really suffering for water. There was a damp spot on the rocks over my head, and I licked it with my tongue and in that way got some relief, but I would have traded my whole outfit for one glass of cool water. I felt that I was in a bad box, and as is generally the case in such instances, I thought of every way out of it but the easiest one. I reloaded my revolver and planned to wait until the panther would leave the neighborhood, but about 2 o'clock I suspected, from the movements in the tunnel, that the one I had encountered had hunted up her mate and brought him to the front. Such soon proved to be the fact, but as only one could enter the place at a time, it was no advantage to them. They took turns tugging at the carcass of the bear and the new comer would have dragged it out in short order but for my interference. There was a space of about six inches between the body and the roof of the tunnel, and, though the fumes of the powder almost choked me, I shoved my revolver along until close to the panther and then put two bullets into him; he let go his hold and backed out, and the way he did rave up and down that ravine made my hear stand. I had wounded both and neither of them ventured into the place again. For about an hour I heard them growling and snarling outside, and every click of their claws on the rocks was plainly audible but by and by they gave it up as a bad job and went away.

It was now close on to 3 o'clock, and I went at the carcass with the determination to push it before me. It was too late; the limbs had stiffened like sticks, and the feet caught at every inequality and resisted my efforts. There I was, a man of 30, a giant in strength, a born hunter and Indian fighter, penned up like a rat and just as helpless. It came to me, even with all that meat before me, that I was doomed to die of hunger, and it was only as the sun had almost been lost sight of outside that common sense returned to my aid. The way to rid myself of that carcass was to cut it up. It ought to have occurred to me at the very outset, but the race and close pursuit had upset me. I had a stout hunting knife, and I had just begun work on the bear when I heard the voices of Indians outside. I also heard them inside, for one of the fellows crept into the tunnel a few feet, and shouted in his own language to his friends outside:

"It smells very strong of bear in here, but the beast doesn't seem to be at home."

He backed out after flinging several missiles at the rear of the cave, and from the voices and movements I was satisfied it was a hunting party numbering eighteen persons. They sat down right there for the night and built a camp fire, which reflected right into the mouth of the tunnel, and kept their chatter a-going until nearly midnight. They had three or four dogs with them, and the miserable curs took turns at sticking their heads into the opening and trying to raise an alarm. One of the Indians encouraged his dogs to enter and the animal came almost to the dead bear, and raised such a fuss that had the red men been the least suspicious they would have investigated. I did not get a wink of sleep that long night, and was a thankful man to hear the Indians move off in the morning about sunrise. They had no sooner departed than I fell to work upon the bear, and in the course of half an hour had cut him up so that I could squeeze out. As the Indians had gone down the ravine from the mountain, I expected they would discover my camp and lie in ambush for me. There was also a likelihood that the wild beasts had killed both mules during the night.

Luck was with me, however. The Indians crossed the valley too high up to discover my camp, and I found the mules safe and sound. That afternoon, as I was looking after some traps set on a creek about a mile from camp, I found a panther dead in a thicket. He was an enormous fellow and had two bullet wounds, and it did not need much cogitating to convince me that he was the male of the pair which sought to get at me in the cave. One of the bullets had gone square into his head, and almost any other animal would have died at once, but he had not only survived it for two or three hours, but had traveled a long five miles from the cave.—[New York Sun.

The Manufacture of Ribbons.

It is known that the manufacture of ribbons was fairly established in St. Etienne, France, in the eleventh century, and that the place remains to this day the centre of industry. During the attacks of the Huguenots in that country, many of the St. Etienne operatives went to Basle, Switzerland, and established the industry there, where it became second only to Etienne. The third most important centre was Coventry, England, but Crefeld and Vienna are also large producing centres. Today there are manufactured in the United States quite as many ribbons as are made in St. Etienne. The products of Switzerland consist mainly of plain styles; that of France largely of fine and fancy millinery goods; that of Crefeld mainly of black silk and black velvet ribbons, the latter a specialty; that of England largely of plain goods, while the United States tries everything with much success, though dependent chiefly upon Europe for the lead in styles.

It is a curious fact that for 500 years ribbons were worn mostly by men rather than by women, especially during the long period of effeminacy in the male attire. In the fifteenth to the seventeenth centuries their use in England was restricted to the royalty and gentry by statute. In the time of Charles II. and James II. the whole attire was covered with ribbons. A fop in those days was described as "wearing more than would stock half a dozen shops of twenty country peddlers." It is another curious fact that in the manufacture of ribbons the self-acting loom was in use 100 years before Cartwright's invention, and that in more recent times little new has been added in that branch of the silk industry.—[London Times.

Sardines.

When it reaches its full growth, the true sardine is a little smaller than the herring; at this stage it is fat, oily, and of a mediocre taste. It weighs between a quarter and a third of a pound. This fish, which on the coast of Cornwall is known as the pilchard, and in Brittany as the "winter sardine," appears toward the close of the cold season and vanishes by June. It is then more than two years old. This sardine is salted, but never preserved in oil. It is the so-called summer sardine which is fried in boiling oil, packed in tin boxes, and shipped all over the world. This is the same fish as the pilchard or winter sardine, only it is a year younger. It arrives off the Breton coast in vast shoals during June, and thenceforward until November it is taken in nets, the bait used being the salted roe of the codfish or a minute species of shrimp procured in the neighborhood. Whither it goes and where it passes the cold season is unknown, but it is believed to be a deep-water fish, which only in the months mentioned comes to the surface. This is certain, however, that it is met with only near that section of the Atlantic coast of Europe which extends from Cornwall to Portugal.—[New York Sun.

Looking for Something Choice.

"Eany good butterf" inquired an old lady of the grocer.

"There's never any flies on our butter, madam."

Then the old lady, whose knowledge of English is very limited, said:

"Well, if flies won't eat it, 'taint good 'nough for me," and she went across the way where only the choice brands are sold.—[New York Sun.

Not What It Used to Be.

Woman (to tramp): "You must find life very easy."

Tramp: "Easy! Why madam, the amount of brain work that I am forced to do to obtain food, and to partially clothe myself, would kill a weaker man. Competition, madam, has wrecked the profession."—[Epoch.

FOR FARM AND GARDEN.

Breeding Off Horns.

Some people have an idea that it takes a long time to breed off horns. The fact is if you should keep a thoroughbred polled bull with a herd of forty horned cows, the chances are you would have more than thirty horn-less calves, with heads about as smooth as the thorough-breeds. If a calf is dropped with horns, its being sired by a polled bull will not diminish the the size of the horns. I can tell as soon as a calf is dropped whether it will have horns or not, and I do not raise any with horns. I do not believe in dehorning when it is so easy to breed them off. In my herd of fifty I have thirty-seven hornless ones. I am breeding them for the milk business, and have raised the most of them myself. I like them very much, and will have ten or twelve heifers between two and three years of age come in with a few months.—[New England Farmer.

Curing Hay.

Grass cut after the dew is off and drawn in during the heat of the day, is the best, when practicable. The Eureka mower leaves the grass in a most admirable condition to dry evenly, as its semi-erect condition allows the sun to penetrate the mass. To obviate the over-drying of the surface while the under side remains moist, the hay tedder has replaced the tedious hand process. When the surface of the grass has dried partially, the tedder will shake it up loose and partly invert it, leaving it in a condition to be quickly and readily dried. When hay yields over one ton to the acre, the tedder is needed in proportion as it exceeds that amount. The time required to properly dry hay will depend upon whether it is stirred, and upon its degree of maturity. [Prairie Farmer.

Flowers that Will Grow in the Shade.

But few plants will develop their flowers in the shade and none will do it so well as if it were lighted up by sunshine a part of the day. In reply to numerous queries as to which flowers will thrive in the shade the editor of the Horticultural Times replies as follows:

"Fuchsias, pansies, forget-me-nots, violets, lobelias, lilies of the valley, hollyhocks, phloxes and other herbaceous plants whose native habitat is a shady wood will do best, but even these languish if denied all direct sunlight. The best effect in such situations is produced by ornamental leaved plants, the beauty of which is not dependent upon their flowers. Among these may be ranked the gold and silver variegated-leaved geraniums, achyranthes, alternantheras, begonias, caladiums, centaureas, coleuses, etc., which, if planted so as to bring the various shades in contrast, produce a pleasing effect, which continues during the entire summer months, and is not surpassed by any display of flowers. The cultivators of flowers in rooms should understand the necessity of sunlight to plants that are to flower, and endeavor to get these as close as possible to a window having an eastern or southern aspect. The higher the temperature the more plants suffer from want of light. Many plants might remain semi-dormant in a temperature of forty degrees—in a cellar, for example—away from direct light, for months, without material injury; while if the cellar contained a furnace keeping a temperature of seventy degrees they would all die. Such would particularly be the case with plants of a half-hardy nature, such as monthly roses, carnations, fuchsias, geraniums, &c.

Extracted Honey.

When a machine was invented for throwing the pure liquid honey from the cells where it had been placed and sealed up by bees apiarians supposed that their business would become very profitable. The comb from which the honey was taken could be returned to the hive, filled and emptied several times during the season of flowers. As a result of this arrangement bees would be required to devote but a small proportion of their time and talent to securing wax and constructing cells in which to store honey. Having made comb enough to fill a hive they could settle down to the business of securing honey and not have their occupation interfered with. Bee-keepers stated what was true, that extracted honey was worth much more to the consumer than honey in comb. No one wanted to eat beeswax, and there was no propriety in placing it on the table. It was costly to buy and was generally thrown away by most families. The transportation of comb honey was expensive and much of it was lost. Extracted honey could be put in wood, earthen, metal, or glass packages and transported without danger of loss and at a very small cost.

For a time extracted honey sold well and bee-keepers who used the machine for taking it from the comb prospered.

The effect of this prosperity was to induce many to engage in the production of honey. Soon there were reports that much of the so-called extracted honey was adulterated with liquid glucose, glycerine and flavoring extracts. Some newspaper writers declared that many specimens were entirely artificial. Lies never diminish in size by "going the rounds of the papers," but they are more likely to be believed. Repeated often enough a lie will be likely to take and keep its place among the things that everyone believes. It is certain that most persons became prejudiced against extracted honey very soon after it was placed on the market, and prejudices can not be destroyed by facts or reasoning. Though extracted honey should be worth more pound for pound than honey sold with the comb and much more than honey sold with the comb and wood and glass box, it soon sold for much less, and this circumstance helped some people to believe that it was not genuine.

It is likely that sentiment has much to do in making people prefer honey in the shape it is placed in the hive by the "little busy bee." The bible writers likened everything excellent "to honey in the honey comb." All the sweet poets from Virgil to Whittier have sung its praises. The persons who see a nice piece of comb honey on the table begin to think of the passages in the bible about it and to associate it with the most industrious of insects and the loveliest of the flowers. There is a charm about it that is not associated with any other article of food. For some reason visions of blossoming orchards, clover fields, and flower gardens do not rise before one who sees a dish of extracted honey on the table.—[Chicago Times.

Farm and Garden Notes.

Dehorning still excites interest and discussion.

The average farmer makes too lavish use of arsenical poisons of killing insects.

Peas and brush beans may be sown continuously from the early Spring sowing every three weeks until midsummer.

A mixture of resin and lard is recommended for applying on the trunks of trees to repel the borer.

Appearance has much to do with the sale of manure. It is a popular fallacy that muck, being black, must therefore be very rich.

All the leguminous plants that have been tried make good ensilage, but they are so highly nitrogenous, as to make too rich a food to use alone in any quantity.

To prevent cramps in young chickens keep them on a dry, clean floor in a roomy coop, and spread clean sand or sawdust on the floor when necessary. Give the chickens a drop of tincture of camphor in the food for every five; bread crumbs will be a convenient food for the purpose.

Easy and profuse perspiration is an indication of weak digestion and malnutrition. Give the horse a quart of raw linseed oil with one ounce of turpentine and feed bran mashes with dram doses of sulphate of iron daily. Give no new oats and be careful not to use musty hay.

The conceit is often knocked out of the dairyman who considers himself a first-rate judge of a cow, when he begins to weigh her milk and churn it into butter. It is very rare that the true inwardness of a cow can be ascertained, and her real dairy value known, until these tests are applied. Weigh the milk, and keep the record. Appearances are deceptive.

A bright and effective bit of backyard flower gardening may be produced by filling a barrel with earth and manure to within a few inches of the top, and planting petunias. Only a little care in supplying sufficient water is necessary, and when the plants are grown they will not only fill the barrel but fall over its sides, and as the flowers bloom in profusion it makes a very pretty show through the entire summer.

The kind of sheep to keep depends on the soil and pasturage. The Southdown is the best breed to cross with native ewes that are made to forage a great portion of the time. Merinos do better in large flocks than do the heavy mutton sheep. Heavy breeds can not range as easily as the small sheep, and therefore require more attention. Using the improved breeds for crossing means that a larger allowance of food must be given if success is expected.

The best tonic and preventive of poultry diseases is as follows: To one gallon of pure water add from fifteen to twenty drops of tincture of iron and two or three drops of aconite. Stir and mix well before putting into the drinking-vessels. If used all the year round this will produce a healthy flock of birds. The iron strengthens the blood, while the aconite prevents and allays feverishness. Care must be taken not to get too much aconite into this mixture.

Blinders should certainly be used when a horse has weak eyes and is working in the bright hot sun. It would be well to put a screen of dark green cloth across the face from one blinder to the other, to keep the eyes in the shade. For weak, inflamed eye give every day one ounce of hyposulphite of soda, and every evening bathe the eyes with the solution of four grains of sulphate of zinc in one table-spoonful of rain water.

The Uses of Castor Oil.

The average boy has an idea that castor oil was got up for the torture of all kids who have careful mothers to protect them from the fell destroyer. He is mistaken, like a majority of grown people who only regard castor oil as a medicine. Only a very small proportion of it is consumed in that manner. Gas or oil forms one of the best lubricators, and is used for greasing wagons and other purposes where the price does not prohibit it. Then it is burned as an illuminator, not only by the Hebrews for their Sabbath lamp, but elsewhere. In India, where large quantities of the seed are raised, the oil is added to the native condiments to flavor them. It is also made into an illuminating gas in India. In this country castor oil is used to dress morocco leather. California, Kansas, Iowa and Illinois are the principal sections of this country where the seed is raised, and the castor oil presses at Belleville, Ind., are among the most extensive in the world."—[Globe-Democrat.

Lawn Party.

The intense heat which prevailed last Saturday was the cause of a small attendance at the lawn party of the Weymouth A. & I. Society, but the ball game came off as announced, the Rockland Grays defeating the Lovell's Corners by a score of 6 to 5. The game was poorly played, errors being plenty on both sides. The redeeming features were the fielding, base running, and batting of Quinlan, the first base playing of Hayes and McCormick, Farrar's batting and the pitching of Hall and McQuade. The score—

Funerals of Messrs. Joy and Bates.

The funeral of the late Nathan T. Joy took place from his late residence on Middle street, last Friday, services being conducted by Rev. Geo. C. King, assisted by Rev. Dr. S. L. Gracey, formerly of East Weymouth. After services at the house the remains were escorted to the North Weymouth cemetery by Crescent lodge of Odd Fellows, H. E. Raymond marshal, and Messrs. Joseph Totman, Henry Loud, N. Goodspeed, Thomas South, of the Odd Fellows, William Humphrey, and Abraham Bates, as pall bearers. Arriving at the grave the beautiful and impressive ceremony of the Odd Fellows was performed.

The funeral of William Wallace Bates took place from his late residence on Middle street, Saturday, services being conducted by Rev. Merrill Blanchard, after which the remains were escorted to the East Weymouth cemetery by some fifty of the stitchers and cutters, shopmates of the deceased, David Dunbar acting as marshal and Messrs. Geo. H. Cuningham, John F. Cushing, C.W. Rice, F. D. Thayer, Daniel Pratt and Henry Hawes as pall bearers. Arriving at the grave a quartette composed of Miss Josie T. Connell, Mrs. Ella Cowing, C. Will Bailey and LaForrest Lincoln, who were also shopmates, rendered "Rest" in an effective manner.

Both funerals of these two gentlemen, victims of the recent sad accident, were largely attended by the many friends and neighbors of the deceased, who sent many clusters and designs of choice flowers, and their sad end has left an impression upon the minds of the citizens which time can never efface.

Labor Case.

A decision has been rendered in the case of John Williams, of Weymouth, vs. John Carroll, the plff. charging that he was the victim of a conspiracy to prevent his obtaining work in other places after the strike of the hand-sewing workmen in East Weymouth last winter. The case came up for trial in the District court in April last, and was taken under advisement by Special Justice Granville E. Pratt, who decides that he finds no evidence which shows or even tends to show any criminal, unlawful or improper combination on the part of the defendant with any man or body of men, within the definition of the quoted authorities, and therefore orders judgment for defendant. It is stated as probable that the plff. will enter an appeal from the decision to the Supreme Court.

Celebration.

The "Glorious Fourth" will be celebrated next Wednesday evening on the summit of King Oak Hill under the auspices of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union of No. Weymouth. Rev. Messrs. Bolster of South Weymouth and Pitts of Weymouth, have been invited to speak. Music will be furnished by a detachment from the Weymouth Band, and refreshments will be for sale. There will also be a fine display of fireworks. The proceeds from the sale of refreshments will be used toward the purchase of a drinking fountain at the Old North. A good time is expected and the public is cordially invited. Sould the weather be stormy the celebration will be postponed to Friday evening.

The Heat

Of last Saturday was the most severe that has been known in June for seventeen years, the temperature ranging at some points in town above 100° in the shade. The humidity of the atmosphere added to the intense heat made the day one of a most disagreeable character, a partial relief occurring at nightfall, when a thunder-storm prevailed at the north and east of this place, the temperature falling several degrees toward morning.

Regatta.

The first pennant regatta of the Monatiquot Yacht Club came off last Wednesday, a rattling breeze making it a lively contest. The Posy and the Folly were in the first class, Diadem and Wasp in second class, Hester, Maud and Dark Horse in third class. The Posy, Diadem and Hester were winners, each getting a leg for the silk pennant. L. O. Crocker's present of a handsome flag, with initial "M," was displayed on the clubhouse.

The race was sailed over the inside course, and the contest between the Posy and Folly was a close one—the former being the winner through time allowance. The summary was as follows:

Name and owner,	Length. Ft. in.	Actual time. h. m. s.	Cor. time h. m. s.
Posy, R. G. Hunt,	22 03	1 33 53	1 05 37

Nash, Catharine L. Tracy, Maude A. White. The class motto was "Through Ourselves is Triumph or Defeat."

Severe Accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tirrell were riding from South Weymouth last Monday forenoon in an open wagon, when the bolt holding one of the shafts gave way, and the wheels being cramped the wagon was partially overturned, both of the occupants being thrown out, and receiving severe injuries about the head and face, Mrs. Tirrell being insensible for a time, and Mr. Tirrell's face being covered with blood from the wounds on his forehead and face. The residents in the vicinity rallied to their assistance and they were taken to the house of Mr. Geo. E. Bicknell, near the scene of the accident, and Mrs. Tirrell was soon restored to consciousness. Dr. Hathaway was called to attend them, and they were taken home in A. L. Hobart's depot carriage. Mr. Tirrell's face was badly lacerated, and he had a cut on the forehead and bridge of the nose, requiring some stitches to be taken by the physician. Mrs. Tirrell's injury was a cut on the temple, which stunned her, and the couple had a narrow escape from a fatal termination to the accident.

Children's Sunday.

At the First Universalist church last Sunday morning, exercises arranged for the occasion of Children's Sunday were observed in pleasing manner. The pulpit was prettily and profusely decorated with flowers and plants. Rev. Mr. Eaton appropriately addressed the children, and there were baptisms of seven children and three adults. The choir furnished excellent singing, and members of the Sunday school assisted in the exercises with recitations and readings suited to the occasion.

Downer Landing.

At the popular Melville Gardens, Downer Landing, the season has commenced with a brisk patronage, no less than three excursion parties from the city spending the warm hours of last Saturday there, more than 2000 people, it is said, enjoying the various pleasures afforded at this delightful resort. Supt. Scudder spares no expense in making the appointments of the Garden agreeable to every patron, and the shore dinners provided there are faultless in preparation and liberal in supply. For a day's outing there is no more attractive resort in this vicinity.

Musicale.

The pupils of Mr. Lewis E. Tilden, piano and organ instructor, gave a very pleasing recital at the Baptist church last Wednesday evening, the programme embracing about 20 numbers, one of these being a selection for the church organ, by Miss Cora Graves. Miss Rika Hunt gave Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata on the piano with marked excellence, and the several performers showed that they had made good progress under Mr. Tilden's instruction. The platform was decorated with elegant flowers. The vocal service of Miss Helen Derby of South Weymouth was a pleasing addition to the recital, her two songs, "Dost thou know that sweet land" and "Thou art near me," being warmly encored.

Town Water.

The residents on the high grounds of Washington and Front street and other points, were greatly vexed last Saturday through a scarcity of town water, some of them not being able to obtain enough for ordinary household purposes, and one person says that about one half of the time he can't get water enough to wash a carriage. It is hoped that the water board will soon obviate this difficulty by putting in a high pressure service from South Weymouth through Front street, which will give the needed pressure for a more liberal supply to the water-takers who need this service.

Chautauquan Social.

The C. L. C's of Weymouth, East Weymouth and Lovell's Corner had a social gathering at the lecture room of the Union church last Tuesday evening, an entertainment of music, reading and speaking being participated in by members of the Circles. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served and the remainder of the evening was passed in social intercourse. The occasion was one of much pleasure to all present.

Graduation.

Mr Walter G. Forsyth, son of Dr. F. F. Forsaith, graduated as A. B. at Harvard last Tuesday, with special honors in the department of Chemistry, and Mr. George J. Richards, son of Aug. J. Richards, Esq. also graduated as A. B. A large number of their friends from this town were present at the Class day Friday last and at the exercises.

Returned.

Rev. S. J. Axtell returned from Pella, Iowa, last Saturday, where he delivered an address at the college exercises in that place. We learn that he has been tendered a call there. Pella is said to be a beautiful place, situated in a prosperous and fertile section of the state.

Base Ball.

In last Saturday's games the North Weymouths defeated the Quincy Points—score 20 to 10.

At the South Weymouth Park the Rockland Greys had a score of 5 the Lovell's Corners 4.

NORTH WEYMOUTH.

Complimentary Supper.

Thursday evening of last week a complimentary supper was given by the members of Wm. O. Collyer Hose Co. and E. S. Beals Hook and Ladder Co. to the Weymouth Board of Engineers, in the Engine hall. A notice had been given out that the hose company would try their hose from the hydrant on Athens street and play two streams at the same time, and about 7 o'clock a large gathering of men, women and children congregated in front of the engine house to witness the display. The hose carriage was run out, Charles Shaw, of Shaw's express, was on hand with a pair of fine roadsters and soon had them harnessed to the carriage, the company jumped aboard, the word was given to start and away they went around the square, from Athens to Bridge and North streets, up North to Sea street, thence to Athens and the engine house. The hose was run off before the carriage stopped, and in just three minutes from the time they left the engine house they returned, and two streams were going heavenward a hundred feet high, both from the same hydrant. The horses were then hitched to the E. S. Beals Hook and Ladder truck, and with the company on board away they flew around the same square back to Jenkins' store, next building to the engine house. The men dismounted, took a long ladder from the truck, placed it against the building, two stories high, three men went up the ladder with the hose and in 2 minutes, 45 seconds from the time they left the engine house they were playing a good stream all over the roof of the building. They repeated the same and in 2 min., 37 seconds water was pouring all over the same building, amid the cheers and huzzas of the multitude.

The engineers expressed themselves as being perfectly satisfied with this prompt and skillful performance of their duty, every movement of the firemen being like clock work. We claim that ward one has the most efficient fire company of any town in the state. The playing being over, the companies, engineers and invited guests repaired to the hall, where the tables were bountifully spread, the renowned caterer, Harry Blunt, of Boston, furnishing the supper, which was one of his best. Joseph Poulin, Esq. presided and performed his duty in a most able and pleasing manner. After being seated at the tables proper time was occupied in discussing the rich viands, and the next in order was listening to eloquent speeches. The invited guests present were E. S. Beals, Esq., David M. Kidder, John H. Ash, reporter for the Sentinel, and the GAZETTE reporter. Henry A. Nash, Esq. was invited, but was unable to be present. The chairman introduced as the first speaker Engineer Frank D. Thayer, who extolled the firemen very highly for their service and thanked the companies for the excellent supper furnished. E. S. Beals Esq. was next called up and said he came there to take comfort. He had no prepared speech and thought speeches ought to be no longer than the firemen were in going a half mile. His remarks received hearty applause. Engineer Otis Cushing was next called upon and spoke in fitting manner of the efficient fire department of Weymouth. He believed we were better organized than any other town in the state. The chairman next introduced the silver-tongued orator, Maj. F. A. Bicknell, who made a telling speech, full of anecdotes and funny stories, being applauded to the echo. He congratulated the firemen on their success and for their readiness to peril their lives for others. Mr. Bicknell was followed by other able and interesting speakers, Engineer Wm. H. Hoekins, George Miller, F. H. Torrey, H. W. Dyer, John Burr, S. B. Richmond, Capt. Barnes, Joseph B. Barker and Engineer W. O. Collyer, who spoke of the appropriations made by the town for the fire department. H. A. Newton next took the floor and spoke of the advisability of a fire alarm through the town. He was followed by chairman Poulin and Emerson Torrey, a guest from Milwaukee, who made a few remarks thanking the firemen for the cordial invitation to be present, also for the excellent supper he had so heartily enjoyed. Reporter John H. Ash of the Sentinel was introduced and responded in a very able and interesting speech, congratulating the firemen on their ability and promptness in throwing water. David M. Kidder was the next speaker and entertained the company with a rousing speech. He thought too much credit could not be given our heroic firemen, who are ever ready to peril their lives for the good of others. He spoke the sentiments of all present when he said that Ward 1 had the most active and best trained fire company in Weymouth. Brief remarks were made by several other able speakers. The occasion was one richly enjoyed by all present. The fire companies have the hearty thanks of the GAZETTE and Sentinel reporters for the opportunity to be present and join in so interesting and pleasing an occasion. The festivities closed with singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The officers of the W. O. Collyer Hose Co. are—Foreman, Joseph Poulin; John Burr, 1st assistant; Mark Keen, 2d do; J. B. Barker, clerk, treasurer Manuel, steward.

Mr. Herbert A. Miller and family, of Lynn, spent Wednesday and Thursday of the present week with their friends in Old Spain. Mr. Miller has been on the police force in Lynn for several years and ranks as one of the most efficient and reliable officers on the force.

John W. Bartlett, Esq. and wife left home Tuesday to spend a week in Holyoke and Springfield.

Rev. E. N. Dyer writes home to his family from Springfield that his health remains about the same as when he left home last week.

Arthur W. Bartlett has had his house handsomely painted by J. B. Barker.

The graduating exercises of the Athens Grammar school took place in the vestry of the Pilgrim church, last Wednesday at 7.30 p. m. The exercises were as follows.

Opening march; invocation by Rev. W. D. Leland; singing, Give thy Heart's Best Treasure, School; recitation in geography, Parts of the U. S. Compared, Second and Third Classes; reading from Longfellow, The Isles, School; The French Explorers, Gertie Thayer; The French Colonists, Elbert Prouti; The French and English Colonies Compared, Clara Graves; The Result of the French and Indian Wars, Mary Crockett; Exercise in Music, conducted by Mr. Bradford; essay, Taxes and Revenue, Arthur Newton; piano solo, Clara Newton; Salutatory of the Graduating Class, Mattie Shaw; reading, Mr. Whittle puts on Skates, Daisy Lewis, singing, God the Lord School; reading, Moses at the Fair, Sarah Chubbuck; Valedictory, The Past and Present, Eddie Sampson; address to the school by Dr. W. A. Drake; presentation of diplomas by Gilman C. Fisher, whose address to the pupils was very instructive and encouraging. He advised them to go to the High school, as it would be the greatest mistake in their lives to stop where they are. The exercises were very good and Dr. Drake addressed the pupils in most befitting manner.

The graduates were Mattie I. Shaw, Daisy R. Lewis, Sarah L. Chubbuck, Eddie K. Sampson, Leonard F. Cooley. Principal, M. B. Warner, assistant, M. Cora Wilder.

Mrs. Newell, sister of Mrs. Gilbert Hunt, who has recently been dangerously ill with erysipelas, under the skillful treatment of Dr. Esther W. Taylor, of Boston, is now convalescing. Drs. Colby and Taylor, (sisters) 658 Tremont street, Boston, are among our most eminent women physicians. They have had years of successful practice in New England and the west, and all who come under their treatment are sure to receive wise and tender medical care. N. M.

Torrey's factory will be closed all next week.

Rev. W. D. Leland has been under the weather this week with a bad cold.

A very interesting Sunday school concert was given at the Universalist chapel last Sunday evening.

Monatiquot Colony Pilgrim Fathers initiated two new members last Tuesday evening.

SOUTH WEYMOUTH.

A brilliant wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Minot Tirrell Monday evening. The contracting parties were Mr. Edward R. Hastings, of this village, and Miss Caroline B. Tirrell, daughter of the late Minot Tirrell, of Lynn. The guests included friends from Boston, New York, Providence, Lynn, Abington, and elsewhere. Rev. S. B. Stewart, pastor of the Unitarian church, Lynn, performed the marriage ceremony. Mr. Wm. H. Allen, of New York, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Lewis Hancock, of Austin, Texas., Mr. Harvey D. Page, of Boston, Mr. W. D. Lovell, of Newton, and Mr. Alfred N. Hastings, a brother of the groom. The bride wore a gown of white gros grain silk, with train, trimmed with point and duchess lace, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The wedding presents were valuable and numerous. Mr. and Mrs. Hastings will reside in South Weymouth.

The graduation exercises of the South High school took place at the Union Congregational church Thursday evening. Such an occasion is always a proud and conspicuous one in the scholar's calendar and an appreciative audience is sure to be gathered in honor of the event. Such was the case on Thursday evening when the graduates stood on the platform in the presence of a church full of friends and listeners. Promptly at 7.45 o'clock the organ and other instruments vibrated with marching music while the entire school, led by usual by Mr. Chas. B. Dizer, filed into the church. Then began the regular exercises by the members of the graduating class, aided by an excellent orchestra, under the direction of Mr. A. P. Derby. The orations and essays contained much that was excellent and interesting, too long perhaps in several instances, but all showing the culture resulting from high school training. The "class prophecy" by Miss Grace Hunt, was unique in its way and full of bright and original thought. Geo. L. Wentworth Esq., of the school board, addressed the class and presented the diplomas. We give below the program and the class hymn, by Grace G. Hunt, will be given next week.

Organ solos, Jennie L. Hocking; invocation; overture, Welcome, clarinet, cornet, violin and piano; Latin salutatory, Arria G. Stewart; oration, Electricity, Louis B. Vining; singing by the school; essay, The Queens of England, Clara A. Holbrook; waltz, Sweet Smiles, clarinet, cornet, violin and piano; oration, The Newspaper, Herbert A. Bass; vocal duet, O, Tell us, Merry Birds, Misses Tirrell and Bolster; Class prophecy, Grace G. Hunt; essay and valedictory, Kessing, Ella M. Reynolds; Class hymn, Grace G. Hunt; benediction. Class motto, "Leave No Fortresses Untaken."

The graduates were Herbert Austin Bass, Clara Augusta Holbrook, Grace Gertrude Hunt, Ella Maria Reynolds, Arria Gertrude Stewart, Louis Bradford Vining.

The "Fourth" will have its usual quiet celebration here. Aside from the fireworks and flags, to be procured at Clark & Foster's, there is little to remind one of its approach. The post office will be closed after ten o'clock and only the morning mails will be sent and received.

Wildey Lodge, No. 21, I. O. O. F., elected the following officers Monday evening:—Noble Grand, Wash. H. Thayer; Vice Grand, Frank H. Richards; secretary, William P. Tribble; treasurer, E. J. Pitcher. These officers will be installed by District Deputy Hersey, Monday evening, July 9.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dyer entertained the members of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor at their residence on Pleasant street

E MONUMENTS.
Read the following Certificates of Recommendation.

[Certificate of Prof. S. P. Sharples, Assayer & Metals for the State of Mass.]
I consider the White Bronze Monuments practically indestructible. They will not blacken or become dingy with age; moss will not adhere or grow upon their surface as upon marble, and the color will remain unchangeable while the monuments endure.
S. P. SHARPLES,
State Assayer of Metals of Mass., 114 State St., Boston.
May 14, 1875.

[300 Years Without Change—Certificate of A. Cortepassi, the well known artist and sculpor of Cincinnati, Ohio, formerly of Florence, Italy.]
To whom it may concern:—This certifies that I have seen the statue of Pepparosa, which was cast from zinc and erected in the city of Lucca, Italy, (according to the records) over three hundred years ago, and has stood constant exposure to the elements since. No sign of corrosion or change of color has taken place and to all appearance it is as beautiful as when first erected. A. CORTEPASSI.
Feb. 21, 1876. 238 W. Fifth St., Cincinnati, O.

To the public:—There is no question in my mind of the durability of the White Bronze Monument. Refined zinc, when cast alone and in its pure state, and not placed in contact with silver, platinum, copper, etc., is indestructible from the elements, or nearly so; the best granites without the discoloration that marble always shows after a few years' exposure. No other material is so well fitted to withstand the atmosphere changes. Judging from a scientific and chemical standpoint, it is my opinion that these monuments will last thousands of years.
S. P. DUFFIELD, Ph. D., M. D.

These justly celebrated Monuments, would respectfully MEMORIAL to their departed friends, to examine the Stock and the cheapest. The best chemists and scientists of granite. Reference is made to the many testimonials sent on application to the Agent, who will also furnish

16-CENT PANT STRETCHER,
Is positively the BEST invention ever known for taking Wrinkles out of Pantaloons, and shaping the bottoms of the same to fit nicely over the shoe.
Pantaloons should always be suspended as shown in cut when not in use. Even those in daily wear should be thus suspended through the night.
HOW TO APPLY THE STRETCHER.
Take the front bottom part of the pants in the left hand, taking the pointed end of the stretcher in the right hand, insert the wood part up the back of the leg about three-quarters of an inch, then spring the pin point into the front about half an inch from the edge. Pantaloons that are badly wrinkled or bagged at the knee should be dampened. A good way to do this is to hang them out by the stretcher in the evening, or on a damp day.

WEYMOUTH MATTERS.

Brilliant Wedding Occasion.

Our streets were thronged last Tuesday morning with residents of the town and other places, who had gathered to witness the nuptial ceremonies at the Catholic church which united Mr. Thomas Henry Devlin, of Boston, and Miss Mary Ellen Field, eldest daughter of Mr. John A. Field, of this place, in the bonds of matrimony, the ceremony being performed at 10 a. m. by Rev. Fr. Murphy, assisted by Rev. Fr. Eagan, of Cohasset.

As the bridegroom has a large circle of acquaintance, socially and politically, having served as alderman and member of common council of Boston, a large number of his friends came here by the trains, also by tally-ho coaches, one of these bringing a party of vocalists and others, the gents being adorned with red bandannas on their hats. In this party was the trio from Boston:—Mrs. Helen Farracy, soprano; Miss Bessie Smith, contralto; Mr. Will Dorgan, tenor, of the choir of the Church of St. Francis de Sales, Boston, who were present at the marriage ceremony and sang Owen's "Ave Maria" at the offertory.

At the hour appointed the couple arrived at the church and proceeded to the altar, the ushers being Messrs. Lynch, Stewart, Maguire and Doherty, of Boston, Mr. Patrick L. Cassidy, of South Boston, the groom's best man, and Miss Sarah F. Field, bridesmaid. The maids of honor were the Misses Mary G. McKenna and Josephine A. McKenna, of South Boston. The bride was presented at the altar by her father, and the nuptial mass was celebrated by Fr. Murphy, the choir of the church furnishing the responses.

The bride was dressed in fawn colored silk, en train, with white tulle veil covered with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was attired in fawn colored Henrietta cloth, trimmed with irridescent beads, and the maids of honor were dressed in white and carried flowers.

After the ceremony the bridal pair, with a large company of friends, proceeded to the residence of the bride's parents, on Front street, where a reception was held, tables being spread on the lawn, under a large tent, and an elegant collation served. The wedding presents were very lavish and beautiful, and of great variety.

At 2.30 o'clock the couple were conveyed to Braintree, on their way to New York, and the next morning they embarked on the steamer Adriatic for Liverpool, for a tour through England, Scotland, France, Italy and Palestine. They will be absent about three months, and on their return will reside in the city.

The Boston boys and the Weymouth boys had a game of ball on the grounds. Although the game was very close, the Bostons were ahead in the score. The umpire was Inspector of Sewers Maguire of Boston.

Among the notables from Boston present at the wedding were Hon. Patrick Maguire, Park Comm'r; Hon. John B. Martin, chairman of board of Directors of Public Institutions; Hon. John F. Callahan, of the same board; J. M. Galvan, Sup't of Mt. Hope Cemetery; John P. Branley, Ass't City Clerk; Aldermen James H. Murphy and William J. Welch; John B. Fitzgerald, Deputy Sheriff of Suffolk county; Hon. Edward A. Kennedy, Health Inspector; James J. Kilroy, of same board; John J. Reagan, inspector of buildings; M. W. Fitzsimmons, clerk in same dep't; Major John J. Maguire, of the Bridge dep't; Wm. F. Griffin, of the School dep't; Frank E. Maguillon, J. W. Calnan, C. F. Doherty, J. F. Desmond, M. F. J. Cassidy, John J. McNamara, of the Water dep't; Hon. P. F. Shevlin, I. Stack, officer F. M. Lee, of Station 6; their ladies accompanying these parties. Mr. John Cox, of San Francisco; Mr. Stephen Devlin and wife, Mr. John Devlin and wife, Mrs. Ann Devlin, mother of the groom, P. J. Cobbett and family, Mrs. Hurley and daughter, all of Boston; James E. Costello, of Charlestown; Mrs. Lapham, son and daughter, of Quincy; Walter Field and wife, of Marlboro; Mrs. Murphy and daughter, and Mr. J. Maguire, of Scituate, were also present, and among Weymouth residents were: Major John W. Hart and wife, D. M. Easton and wife, D. A. Hart and wife, Michael Hart and wife, Patrick Colerman and daughter, Cornelius Smith and wife, Albert Chase and wife, Mrs. E. Guillardet and daughter, Miss C. J. Field, Mr. Jas. Field, John H. Coffey and sister, John B. Whelan and sister, Miss Carrie Ahearn, Misses Mary and Emma Dwyer, Misses Helena and Ida Callahan, and many others.

Nominations.

The lengthy session of the National Republican Convention at Chicago resulted in the nomination, last Monday, of Gen. Benjamin Harrison, of Indiana, as the candidate for President, and Levi P. Morton, of New York, for Vice President, the vote on the final ballot for the presidential candidate being 549 for Harrison, 117 for John Sherman, 106 for Alger, 59 for Gresham, with 5 for Blaine and 4 for McKinley. The nomination was then made unanimous, delegate Horr, of Michigan, enthusiastically saying that he could see the hand of Providence in the nomination. He had hoped to place a soldier at the head of the ticket, and having done so, he said, "now let us go home and ratify it."

Gen. Harrison, who is a grandson of President Wm. Henry Harrison, was not born to fortune, but during his early manhood was a lawyer in Indianapolis struggling to gain a living for his family, but soon made his mark in an important law case, and entering into political life became prominent as an advocate of the principles of the Republican party. In 1862, when a call was made for 500,000 men to put down the rebellion, he volunteered to raise a regiment, which he accomplished in a few weeks, and was elected its colonel, the regiment four weeks after being at the front, aiding in the repulse of Kirby Smith, whose guerrillas were threatening Southern Indiana. He led the assault at Resaca in 1864, capturing the rebel lines and guns, was at Peach Tree Creek, where his bravery gained him the propotion to Brigadier General. He served through the war, and was chosen as a U. S. senator, taking his seat the day that President Garfield was inaugurated.

Levi Parsons Morton, the nominee for the vice-presidency, is widely known as a leading banker in New York, his house being largely instrumental in enabling the government to fund the debt and also in making resumption of specie payments possible. He entered into politics in 1876, by request of President Arthur, and his career as a Congressman was open and clean. As a philanthropist he is also famous, notably at the time when the frigate Constellation was offered for conveyance of food to the starving people of Ireland, Mr. Morton generously offering to furnish one-fourth of the cargo, which led to the other three-fourths being speedily pledged. He served as Minister to France under Garfield's administration.

The opinion of leading men in the Republican party, is that the ticket is exceptionally strong not only in the character of the candidates, but in the fact that it will solidify the party vote and ensure the capture of some doubtful states in the election.

Sociable.

Mechanics Temple of Honor held another of their sociable last Friday evening, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed. These sociables have helped the order greatly, some twenty members having been initiated, which is the outcome of these pleasant gatherings. The exercises opened with a few remarks by W. C. T., James O'Donovan, who spoke of the benefit that had been derived by this village alone since the town voted no license. Then came the following programme, when they adjourned to the upper hall, and after divine blessing had been invoked by Rev. Geo. C. King, strawberries, ice cream and cake were partaken of:

Piano solo, Mr. Fred Bearce.
Vocal duett, "Fly away Birdling," Misses French and Carey.
Xylophone solo, "The Favorite," Mr. Eugene L. Murphy.
Reading, "Saving" Miss Julia Sylvester.
Vocal solo, "Anchored," Miss Mabel French.
Xylophone solo, selected, Joseph W. Murphy.
Recitation, "Friar Philip," Miss Mildred Hyland.
Vocal solo, "Mother told me so," Dr. E. N. Bates.
Recitation, "Lord Ullin's Daughter," Miss Hyland.
Vocal solo, "The Bugler," Dr. Joseph Chase.
Xylophone solo, "Il Trovatore," Murphy Bros.
Address on Temperance by Rev. Geo. C. King.

Fort Point.

The season at Fort Point has been rather backward thus far this season, there being no one as yet registered at the Bowen House, but Mr. N. Bemis and wife of Framingham, are expected Monday and others who have engaged rooms will doubtless make their appearance next week.

Edward Norton, Mr. and Mrs. Weeks and daughter Sadie are at Mr. Norton's cottage for the summer.

John Blanchard and a party of ten from South Weymouth have hired the Monatiquot house for next week.

Harry Humphrey and wife are at their cottage for the summer.

M. C. Nash and family are at their cottage.

R. Lloyd Hunt and family are at their cottage on Rose Cliff.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Fay Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Morse of Worcester are to arrive at the Puritan cottage today.

Mr. A. W. Clapp's stylish cottage at Rose Cliff is about completed. The architect was Mr. Frank L. Smith, of Boston, and two or three cottages of the same design have been built at Bar Harbor.

The Delta Chapter of Gamma Phi Beta, Sorority, one of the ladies' societies of Boston University, made an excursion to Fort Point yesterday, occupying the cottage of the Misses Robbins at Rose Cliff, where a nice collation was served, Mrs. C. T. Robbins providing an excellent clam chowder. The parties were guests of two of the members, Misses Mabel Robbins and Edith L. Easterbrook.

Poor but Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor honest Irish lad, who, while skating down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A. P. Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also gave him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who had been a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1888
GREATLY ENLARGED.
Much the Biggest of all the New York Weeklies.
Greater Variety of Contents, New Presses, New Type and New Appliances.
At the Head of the Republican Press.
The New York Weekly Tribune will be enlarged on or before the 1st of January, 1888, by the addition of from four to eight more pages of actual reading matter—an increase of size of great expense to the Tribune, but without expense to the subscriber.
A complete outfit of the new folding and inserting presses will be put into the Tribune's press room in November and December; and the extra sheet will be folded into its place in the main sheet before it comes from the press. The enlarged Tribune will be the biggest and best of all the New York weeklies, and the new machinery will print it in an enlarged form, at the rate of seventy-two thousand copies per hour.
New Features and a great Variety of Contents will be added to THE TRIBUNE during the coming year. Readers will be given nearly a half more for their money than ever before.
Pensions for the old volunteers, especially Service Pensions, are being vigorously agitated in THE TRIBUNE; much space is given in every issue to this subject. Better Protection to Farmers under the tariff; the salvation of the country from the curse of intemperance; and the rescue of the national government from the hands of the rebel brigadiers; these, and all the other live issues of the day are receiving aggressive, earnest and loyal treatment in THE TRIBUNE.
THE TRIBUNE does not attempt to supersede the local State and county press. But, in the great Presidential conflict now at hand, every thinking Republican, old soldier, farmer and temperance man, should have his local paper and THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.
SUBSCRIPTION RATES—WEEKLY, $1 a year; extra copy with every five. SEMI-WEEKLY, $2 a year; extra copy with every five. DAILY, $8.50 per year. SUNDAY TRIBUNE, $1.50. New subscribers receive the paper until Jan. 1, 1889. Remit always by draft, check, express or postal money order or registered letter.
PREMIUMS—(1.) THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE'S History of the United States and Pocket Atlas of the World, 16mo., 254 pages, 50 maps, 50 colored diagrams; price, 40 cents; to subscribers, 20 cents; prettiest premium of the year—a fascinating running account of the history of the country, with a great variety of statistics and general information. (2.) Presidential Pocket Knife; subscribers' name and picture on his choice for President on the handle; send for description circular; price at retail, $1.75; but given with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE one year for the same money, $1.75; two other styles, for less money. (3) Popular Pictorial Gallery—6 fine large pictures, including the new officers of the G. A. R., Mr. Blaine, Senators Evarts and Hiscock, "Return of the Mayflower," "Christ Before Pilate," and "Children Writing to Santa Claus;" send for circular. (4.) Waltham Watch; expansion balance movement, stem winder, stem set, seven jewels, nickel case, thoroughly reliable and an excellent watch; with THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE, 1 year, for $7.50. (5.) TRIBUNE'S "Book of Open Air Sports." (6.) Webster's "Unabridged Dictionary." (7.) Wood's "Household Medicine." These premiums cannot be described in full here. Send for circular.

Board of Health.

Diphtheria, Scarlet Fever, Small Pox, Measles and Whooping Cough.

THE Board of Health hereby notify all persons interested, that on and after this date the following provisions of Chapter 36 of the General Statutes will be strictly enforced.

SEC. 47. When a householder knows that a person within his family is taken sick of...any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the...Board of Health of the town in which he dwells. If he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit a sum not exceeding $100.

SEC. 63. When a physician knows that any person whom he is called to visit is afflicted with...any disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the...Board of Health of the town, and if he refuses or neglects to give such notice, he shall forfeit for each offence a sum not less than $50, nor more than $100.

The Board considers the above sections to apply to Diphtheria, Scarlet Fever, Small Pox, Measles and Whooping Cough.

CHARCOAL BURNING.

Facts About What Was Once a Productive Industry.

Wasteful Processes By Which Forests Were Denuded.

Not many years ago the queer shaped charcoal wagons were familiar features of metropolitan streets, and the grimy, blackened individuals who drove them were viewed by children with a sort of awe akin to the apprehension of the "Boogy man." They came in over the Jersey ferries chiefly, but a few survived in the pineries of Suffolk county, L. I. Now the sight of one of them is a rare experience. The breed of them seems to have departed even from the pine barrens of New Jersey, where they formerly flourished. Indeed, charcoal burning was until recently the most productive industry of the vast sandy, stunted pine-clad tracts of Southern New Jersey. Proprietorship of such barren territory was an evidence of poverty. The small profits obtainable by turning the pine scrubs into charcoal were about all the territory afforded, and even that was about played out. It is rather good for the state than otherwise that such is the fact, for conducted as it was there it was certainly a most wasteful industry.

Carbonizing the pine forests of New Jersey began about a century and a half ago. The first to practice it was old Cornelius Board, who started an iron forge at Little Falls in 1730 and kept its furnace glowing with the charcoal into which he turned the neighboring forests. Passaic county was dotted with several forges which laid like contribution upon the pineries.

At the period iron smelting was done with charcoal, invariably, and as the iron industry grew in volume and importance heavier drafts were made on the forests for charcoal. In the heyday of iron manufacture the hills were bared of trees of second growth. The adaptation of bituminous coal to smelting superseded charcoal, but another market was found in the growing cities. Before the appliances for burning anthracite coal for household purposes were perfected many thousands of barrels of charcoal were used in the families, and the hills of the northern counties, as well as the barren, sandy knolls of southern New Jersey, were denuded twice or in some cases of the third growth. Latterly its use in the household has decreased almost to zero, but the jewelers and tinsmiths still need considerable quantities for their braziers. It is a great heat producer, but is not an economical fuel, and the rude way it is made makes it a very expensive product in more ways than one.

The rustic charcoal burner is a wasteful workman. He digs out a pit in which he stacks on end logs enough to make a pile eight feet high and ten or twelve feet in diameter. This is covered with turf if it is procurable or earth until the wood is wholly concealed. He then sets fire to it, and during its smouldering period must be watched without ceasing. All his work would go for naught if sufficient air gets inside the sods to bring the smouldering wood to a blaze. The burner must be vigilant, closing up every spot where the smoke comes through with fresh sod. A few bushels of charcoal are all he gets for several weeks of severe labor.

More scientific methods have been introduced in some large pineries by which more valuable results are obtained. The wood is carbonized in air tight retorts, in which the temperature is kept at 600 degrees or upward by means of fire underneath. A copper worm, like a whiskey still, collects the volatilized gases and fluid products of combustion and condenses them again when the worm runs through a bath of cold water. The products of this volatilization and condensation are wood naphtha, pyroligneous acid, wood creosote, some tar and charcoal. Nine cords of Georgia pine thus treated result in 168 barrels of charcoal, 14 barrels of creosote oil, 10 barrels of pyroligneous acid and a few gallons of naphtha and tar. The pyroligneous acid alone is worth enough to more than pay for the expenses of labor, and the wood creosote will leave a margin of profit after paying for the wood and fuel. The other products are clear profit. In view of these results it is not a wonder that the attacks of the old-fashioned charcoal burner on the pineries are becoming so unpopular that in a few years he will probably go into some other business in this vicinity at least.—[New York Graphic.

Value of Noise in a Restaurant.

A famous cheap restaurant or beanery on Park row perpetrates the most peculiar practices, apparently with a view to impressing customers with the idea that trade is always rushed there. The noisiness of a boiler factory always prevails there. Waiters approach the counter with arms full of cups and saucers and then fling them on the bar as if they were so many quoits. First the saucers are flung down and then the cups are tossed after them, one for each saucer. When all are thus arranged the waiter takes two handsful of teaspoons and peppers the cups and saucers with them, making a clatter not approachable by any other means. The consequence of this is that a customer said to a waiter the other day: "Business must be going to the dogs here." "Why so, sir?" asked the waiter. "Because," said the customer, "there are only six nicks in my plate, and half the edge of my cup is smooth. Better put all your crockery in a bag and drag it up and down stairs a few times or people will think you are losing trade.—[New York Sun.

A Mysterious Bottomless Pit.

Upwards of 180 tons of stone have been dumped into a six by seven feet hole in a road at Waterbury, Conn. without having any perceptible effect towards filling it. On the contrary the stone seems to have deepened the mysterious hole, and now the "corduroy" process is to be tried. As an initial move to the latter they are thrusting dead trees into the opening, which in turn are to be covered by a layer of dirt, then more trees added, followed again by dirt, by which time it is expected the surface will have been reached and a good foundation secured.

He Paid Him Off.

Young Physician (to patient)—What you need is exercise, sir. You should walk more.

Patient (reaching for his pocketbook)—How much, young man! I walked all last night with the baby.—[New York Sun.

LADIES' DEPARTMENT.

Handkerchiefs.

It was formerly considered very improper and indelicate for a French lady to exhibit her handkerchief in public. Even in more recent times women shrank from speaking of them, but the Empress Josephine changed popular opinion in this respect. She had bad teeth, and to hide them she adopted the custom of carrying a small square handkerchief bordered with costly lace, which she was constantly raising to her lips. The ladies of the court imitated this, and the handkerchief was elevated to the important position it has ever since maintained in the feminine toilet. After the Empress Josephine was divorced in 1809, she retired to her beautiful seat at Malmaison, where she and her ladies worked daily embroidered handkerchiefs, which were frequently interchanged as tokens of friendship. One of white silk embroidered in roses—the work of her own needle—she presented to the Empress of Russia.—[Good Cheer.

A Plucky Young Woman.

Every girl knows the value put upon money by school-girls, even when they become college girls, and the one who would have the courage to become in a sense the maid and seamstress of a classmate for the sake of earning money to pay her expenses deserves the honor, respect and admiration of every American girl. Nothing paltry nor mean could touch such a girl. She will make her mark and win any position for which she aims.

Some of the girls who go to Vassar, says the Youth's Companion, are as helpless as babes. They are the daughters of rich men and would not have it supposed that they ever brushed their own hair or sowed a button on their boots in their lives. They are only too glad to have some one do these things for them, and that is how the poorer girls make pocket-money. Last year a pretty, blue-eyed girl came to college and stated during the first week that her tuition and board were paid by a kind relative, but every penny for dress, car fare and the thousand and one little incidentals she must earn herself.

Soon after her arrival the following announcement appeared on her door:

"Gloves and shoes neatly mended for 10 cents each.

"Breakfast brought up for 10 cents.

"Hair brushed each night for 25 cents a week.

"Beds made up at 10 cents a week."

That little freshman made $150 the first year, and that paid all of her expenses and a good part of her tuition fees.—[New York Journal.

All About Fans.

Kan Si was the first lady who carried a fan. She lived in ages which are past and for the most part forgotten, and she was the daughter of a Chinese mandarin. Whoever saw a mandarian, even on a tea chest, without his fan? In China and Japan to this day every one has a fan; and there are fans of all sorts for everybody. The Japanese waves his fan at you when he meets you by way of greeting, and the beggar who solicits for alms has the exceedingly small coin "made on purpose" for charity presented to him on the tip of the fan. In ancient times, among Greeks and Romans, fans seem to have been enormous; they were generally made of feathers, and carried by slaves over the heads of their masters and mistresses, to protect them from the sun, or waved about before them to stir the air. Catherine de Medici carried the first foldiag fan ever seen in France; and in the time of Louis XIV, the fan was a gorgeous thing, often covered with jewels, and worth a small fortune. In England they were the fashion in the time of Henry VIII. A fan set in diamonds was once given to Queen Elizabeth upon New Year's day. The Mexican feather fans which Cortez had from Montezuma were marvels of beauty; and in Spain a large black fan is the favorite. It is said that the use of a fan is as carefully taught in that country as any other branch of education, and that by a well-known code of signals a Spanish lady can carry on a long conversation with any one, especially an admirer. The Japanese criminal of rank is politely executed by means of a fan. On being sentenced to death he is presented with a fan, which he must receive with a low bow, and, as he bows, presto! the executioner draws his sword and cuts his head off. In fact, there is a fan for every occasion in Japan.—[Dry Goods Chronicle.

Heroines of Today.

When Thomas Hardy's novel, "Far from the Madding Crowd," was published, Bathsheba was recognized as a heroine of new and fascinating quality. Bathsheba was beautiful, managed her own estate, went to market, danced her samples of grain up and down in her own white hand, and of course won the hearts of all the squires with whom she bought and sold. According to the Western papers, Bathshebas are as common as silver mines in the Territories. From timid, half-scared girls, they become cattle queens, landlords, great farmers, mighty hunters, enter politics; in fact, do whatsoever their fancy pleaseth them and without losing any of those womanly qualifications which make them attractive to the men of that country.

These general assertions come backed up by special instances. One such is a western girl who took up a homestead claim in Montana, and extended it in time to the limited 640 acres, and went to sheep raising. This prospered to such an extent that she sent east for a brother to be her overseer. Meanwhile other matters were progressing. On the next ranch was a young bachelor, also a sheep raiser. It seemed easier to these two to use one brand than two, so they joined flocks and hands, and the sheep now run in happy harmony over a farm of 1280 acres.

Then there is Miss Catherine Wilkins of Idaho, whose father gave her a colt when she was a baby. Kitty is now of age, and the start that colt gave her early in life has made her the owner of nearly a thousand head of blooded horses, besides a large herd of cattle. Miss Kitty now employs thirty-five herders and cowboys, besides keeping a general oversight of her wealth herself.

Another woman, Mrs. Ira McLane bid for a number of Montana mail contracts and got them. These contracts run through a populous but rough country, but there seems no doubt but that the plucky Mrs. McLane is going to succeed.

A Chicago saleswoman is another of the Montana heroines. Going to Bozeman as a school teacher, she eventually announced herself as a candidate for county superintendent, and was elected over her competitor, a man.

The Garfield lode, which is one of the promising mining properties at Yago, Idaho, is owned by a colored girl, Millie Ringgold, who has a reputation as a wise prospector in the mining districts. Millie is one of the pioneers—she washes, keeps hotel, and handles a pick and shovel like a man. Her successful location and purchase of mining properties, it is believed, will yet make her a mining queen.

Life in the West brings out all the sterling qualities of a woman. A woman belonging to one of the best known families in town, gay and pretty, a belle in her circle, went with her husband as post-trader to a far Western fort. Leaving the fort they became ranchers. They had a large family of children and generally no servant. She cooked, sewed, taught her children and entertained hospitably. A blizzard descending at the lambing season, she rode twelve miles by night with a cowboy to the herding ground in a buckboard, carrying blankets and bottles, and worked with the herders to save the flock. The united efforts were unavailing. Thousands of dollars' worth of cattle were destroyed that night. The family returned to this country and this brave lady is again a woman of fashion and easy hospitality.—[New York Graphic.

Fashion Notes.

Plain, tight sleeves are but seldom worn now with house gowns.

Newly imported parasols are in pagoda shape, and are arranged in three layers.

Kilt dresses for little boys, having the upper part in jacket form, are made to show contrasts.

Young ladies are preparing adjustable yokes, fichus and plastrons of braid and crochet work.

Mummy cloth, made up mummy fashion with bands of red or yellow and loopings and drapings is the latest effort.

Ecru guipure lace, with the pattern delicately outlined with gold, is used in Paris to trim white cloth, Bengaline or crepeline.

Leather and leather colored trimmings are in high favor for vests, panels, cuffs and collars upon handsome promenade toilets.

The bonnets of silver braid are supposed to be worn out of compliment to the Princess of Wales in this, the season of her silver wedding.

Petty little blouse dresses for smaller children are made of fine woolen stuff, having yokes and cuffs "smocked" with crewel wool in a contrasting color.

The waists of wash dresses and also those made of canvas, grenadine, challis, or soft silk, are drawn over cords in the form of circular yokes!

One of the newest vests is of shirred tucks, made by taking a length and a half of stuff, and after tucking with strong threads drawing them up to the proper shortness.

A new ornamentation upon a parasol handle is the owner's monogram cut from metal and enameled upon both sides and inserted within the crook of the natural wood.

Tulle, fully pleated, puffed or flounced over silk, is the favorite gown for a youthful bride, and silver and pearl passementeries are chosen for such wear in place of gold.

Forks are Quite Modern.

It is difficult to realize what a modern invention the table fork is. Queen Elizabeth never heard of one. She had, it is true, a few dainty forks, perchance with crystal handles, for eating preserved fruit at dessert. But long after her time dinner forks were unknown in England. The very earliest now to be found belong to the same nobleman whose hour-glass salt has been already spoken of, and these are not older than the middle of the reign of Charles II. The few early forks of the reign of George I. are three-pronged, and but few of our neighbors can show us four-pronged forks much before the reign of George III., from which time their fashion has remained unaltered to the present day, except for their handles, which have followed the fashions of spoons, finishing up with the familiar "fiddle-pattern" of nineteenth-century use. Before the days of forks the ewer and basin, which have now generally disappeared, were much in request after every course; whereas now the basin alone, with a little rose-water, makes its appearance at civic feasts after dinner, as a matter of fashion rather than necessity. Four out of five fine old basins have no doubt been melted up to supply the very forks whose invention rendered the washing of the fingers superfluous.—[Murray's Magazine.

Boar-Hunting in Morocco.

In one of the beats a hunter named Shebaa, a veteran past 70, had just shot a boar, when the dogs came in full cry after another, and he had just time to pour in the powder carried loose in his leather pouch, and to put the long iron ramrod down the barrel, when another tusker came to the front. Shebas fired and sent the ramrod like a skewer through the body of the boar, who charged back and knocked him over. Shebaa fell flat on his face, neither moving arm nor leg, while the boar stood over him cutting into ribbons his hooded "jelab" of wool. He shouted for help, exclaiming: "Fire! fire!" I ran up to within a few feet. "I fear to hit you," I said. "Fire!" he cried. "I would rather be shot than be killed by a 'hslol.'" I stooped low, and raising the muzzle of my gun shot the boar through the heart. The huge carcass fell upon Shebaa who, when released from the weight, got up and shook me by the hand heartily, saying: 'Praise be to God the merciful, and thanks to you, I have escaped death." I withdrew the ramrod, which had passed right through the body of the animal.—[Murray's Magazine.

Betrothed in Babyhood.

Fifteen years ago Bigley Smith, who had been for several years in Chihuahua, Mexico, returned to his home in Henry County, Ala., so the story goes, with a 12-months-old girl baby, which he asked his mother to rear and educate as he intended making her his wife when she reached womanhood. He then returned to Mexico, where he remained until a week or two ago, when he again revisited his home. He found that his mother's charge had grown up to be a beautiful young woman. She had been kept in ignorance of his relations towards her, and when he proposed marriage to her she acceded, and they were wedded.—[New York Graphic.

A Tartar Breakfast.

I went into one of the stone-built recesses, says a Tartary, where several of our Tartars were crouching round a small grass-root fire, and was considerably edified by watching them cooking and dispatching their morning repast. To begin with, a very dirty copper vessel was put on the fire and filled with some green weed like nettles, barley flour, and water. While one of the men stirred this pottage round and round with a wooden ladle another produced some raw meat—a bit of the dog I had shot. This he proceeded to tear up into small strips and throw them on the fire, every now and then popping a raw lump into his mouth and masticating it with the greatest apparent gusto. Even the bits on the fire were quickly disposed of after being merely singed. As soon as the pottage was considered ready it was ladled out into little wooden cups, like the whisky "quaighs" of the Highlands, minus the handles, which each man produced from inside the breast of his dirty woolen coat, and gulped up from them with a prodigious amount of noise. After being replenished again and again until the pot was emptied, the cups were carefully licked clean and redeposited from whence they had been taken. Another course of flesh was about to be partaken of after the manner of the first, but a regard for my own appetite for breakfast prevented my waiting to see it discussed. These hardy Tartars are quite independent of any other dishes beyond their little wooden bowls. In these they mix their suttoo (meal made from barley) with a little water and salt and make an expeditious repast of it whenever they feel hungry. Indeed, this kind of uncooked porridge seems to be their staple food.—[Blackwood's Magazine.

Married Three Sisters.

The Rev. F. A. Andrews of Jeffersonville, Ind., was recently called to a country church to preach the funeral of a Mrs. Wascom. He remained over night with Mr. Wascom, and was much surprised to learn that a wedding was to be celebrated during the evening and he would be called upon to officiate. The groom was Mr. Wascom and the bride was the sister of the recently buried wife, and the two aged respectively seventy-three and seventy-one. The only witness of the ceremony was the greatgrandson of the groom. The minister's astonishment reached its height when he was told by neighbors next day that the present is Wascom's third wife; that the three were sisters, and the second wedding as unceremonious as the first.

The old city of Rouen, in France, has a pretty sight that is worth describing to your crowd of young folk. The little men and maids are fond of looking-glasses, I know; but I doubt if they all have heard of the queer one of which I shall now tell them. Near the west door of the church of St. Ouen, in this City of Rouen, is a marble basin filled with water. It is so placed that the water acts as a mirror, and in the face of it one sees all the inside of the church. Look down into the water, and you see pillars, and the ceiling, and pictures and statuary, and nearly all the interior ornamentation of the building. The stately basin seems to take pride in holding its beautiful picture of the church. I wish you and all your hearers could see it.—[St. Nicholas.

A significant reminder of the troublous times of a hundred or two years ago is to be seen in a Sacofield, according to the Biddeford Standard. It is a triangular piece of land, with a deep ditch all around it. In the days of Indian warfare a log-house stood at each corner of this triangle, and the ditch marks the underground tunnels that connected the three and through which the occupants could flee in case of an attack, so as to allow a combination of forces against the enemy.—[Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

"A GREEN OLD AGE"

Few Men or Women Reach It, But Nearly All Might—The Remarkable Experience of an Octogenarian

"There is only one thing I dread," said the late Charles Sumner, "and that is the coming on of old age."

Mr. Sumner was a brave man and could face death unflinchingly but to watch the hairs whiten, the lines of pain and care grow deep in the face, to feel the strength and activity going and death coming on were more than he could bear. Alas! how many others feel the same today. Pains, loss of sleep, weakness, poor appetite, and feebleness, all break the spirit. Have you never heard of Mr. Nathan Chase of New Bedford, Mass? a man nearly four-score years old and hale and as hearty as in youth. And yet he was supposed to be dying of heart trouble less than two years ago. Here is what he says:

"A year ago or more I began to lose flesh and strength. I sent for my physician to know the cause. He examined me and said it was my heart; that the old machinery was wearing out, and I must be careful. Still I grew worse. Finally I got so bad I could scarcely breathe: I could not lie in bed but had to sit up all night with possibly one hour's sleep out of twenty-four. And yet to-day I am in fine condition; can go up three flights of stairs without inconvenience, and feel as well and about as young as ever in my life before. What accomplished this? Hunt's Remedy—nothing else. It has made a new man of me, and I bless God for it every day."

Such an experience should be a valuable lesson to all readers, both old and young. It shows that a long and happy life is possible. It shows that men or women need not despond. It shows that by care and the use of the right remedy, health, happiness, and long life may be secured by all.

A Horse Who Can Talk!

Everybody has heard of a "horse laugh," but who has ever seen an equine gifted with the power of speech? Such an animal would be pronounced a miracle; but so would the telegraph and the telephone have been a hundred years ago. Why, even very recently a cure for consumption would have been looked upon as ominous, but now people are beginning to realize that the disease is not incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it if taken in time. This world-renowned remedy will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy state when all other means have failed. Thousands can gratefully testify to this. All druggists.

Don't disgust everybody by hawking, blowing and spitting, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and be cured.

Two Squirrel's Foster-Mother.

William Johnson of Columbia, Conn., has a cat which deserves honorable mention. She recently produced a litter of kittens, the majority of which soon disappeared, as frequently happens in like circumstances, says the Willimantic Journal. A few days after Mr. Johnson found a red squirrel's nest in the pasture containing three young squirrels which were not big enough to leave the nest. He took them out, and bringing them to the house gave them to pussy who immediately devoured one of them. But just then a thought seemed to strike the cat—perhaps a little remorse attended it—and instead of eating the others she picked them carefully up, carried them to the nest where her remaining kitten stayed, and literally adopted the squirrels in place of her lost kittens. Since then she has nursed and cared for the squirrels as assiduously as for her own kitten, and they have grown rapidly and become quite tame.

A Twenty Years' Experience.
170 Broadway, New York, March 17, 1886.
I have been using ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS for 20 years, and found them one of the best of family medicines. Briefly summing up my expience, I say that when placed on the small of the back ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS fill the body with nervous energy, and thus cure fatigue, brain exhaustion, debility and kidney difficulties. For women and children I have found them invaluable. They never irritate the skin or cause the slightest pain, but cure sore throat, croupy coughs, colds, pains in side, back or chest, indigestion and bowel complaints. C. D. FREDERICKS.

So disease, in myriad forms, fastens its fangs upon the human race. Ladies who suffer from distressing ailments peculiar to their sex, should use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhœa, excessive flowing, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus, or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and tenderness in ovaries, accompanied with "internal heat."

Everybody has heard of a "horse laugh," but who has ever seen an equine gifted with the power of speech? Such an animal would be pronounced a miracle; but so would the telegraph and the telephone have been a hundred years ago. Why, even very recently a cure for consumption would have been looked upon as ominous, but now people are beginning to realize that the disease is not incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it if taken in time. This world-renowned remedy will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy state when all other means have failed. Thousands can gratefully testify to this. All druggists.

Don't disgust everybody by hawking, blowing and spitting, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and be cured.

A Narrow Escape.
"Yes, I had a very narrow escape," said a prominent citizen to a friend. "I was confined to my bed for a year and my friends gave me up for a consumptive's grave, until I began using Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, and here I am, sound and hearty." You will find it for sale by all druggists. Price 50c and $1. Sample Bottle Free.
