WILL WEYMOUTH WAKE UP?

Should Be "On the Job" of Preparedness With Flying Colors

There is a decided lack of interest and co-operation shown by the townspeople of Weymouth in aiding in the protection of the town during this critical period.

Other towns of smaller population, smaller number of business establishments, all around us, are making a far better showing than we. Are we to sit idly by and allow ourselves to dwindle down into the rocks of unpreparedness? Are we to wait until the very enemy is at our doors, before we take any decisive action? "An ounce of Preparedness is worth one pound of cure"; and if such is the case in preventing disease, warding off ill health, it will most certainly now be a means of keeping our town safeguarded against any possible dangers.

We have a Public Safety Committee in the town, appointed by the Selectmen. This committee is working with the aid of its sub-committee to help in protecting and guarding the important points in the town; preserving the food supply and increasing its production. Nothing definite or worth, however, can be accomplished, regardless of the amount of work done by the committee unless the aid and co-operation of the citizens of the town is secured. Money is needed to carry on this work. Had you not rather spend a few dollars now and be secure rather than to spend one thousand dollars later in building up what has been broken down, simply for the want of a few dollars as a safe-guard?

The Finance Committee of the Weymouth Committee on Public Safety have worked up a plan to secure funds. This will not put any hardships upon any one person. The plan is to proportion the donation asked according to the financial status of those who are asked to give.

Letters have been sent out by this committee and up to the present time a very small number of replies have been secured. If there is any doubt in the minds of the people as to the purposes for which the funds will be used, Mr. George L. Barnes, chairman of the Finance Committee, will be only too glad to give any information which would enlighten the subject. It can be assured however, that all the money secured will be spent solely for the purpose of protecting the town, industries, important points in the town, for food conservation and production, etc., which things are vitally essential at this time.

The Transportation committee has requested owners of motor vehicles to register their cars with this committee, in the event that these vehicles will be required to do service later on. Up to the present time, only one man in the town has registered his car and signified his willingness that the town should have the use of it in case it was needed. Let every owner of a motor vehicle report at once to J. Walter Howley, chairman of the Committee on Transportation, Evans road, North Weymouth, or at the car barn, East Weymouth.

The Home Guard committee wishes to have a company of 300 men for special protection throughout the town. Let each man who feels that he can give a part of his time to this duty, notify R. H. Whiting, chairman of the Home Guard committee, 56 Sea street, North Weymouth.

This work is not to be considered lightly but is something which should be given serious thought, as much can be done by this branch of the service in constructive work. Other towns all about us have already formed companies of men and are drilling them. What must the people of our town think when they see all this advancement going on about them and our town in the stages of "thinking the matter over." Thinking and wondering will get us no where. Action is what is wanted, and wanted quickly. Do not wait for the other fellow; be one of the 300 men to protect your own town and home.

Food production and its conservation is certainly one of the most important things before us at the present time. We all know how prices are soaring on all food stuffs. Let every house-wife begin immediately to practice economy in the kitchen and preserve all food which can be used; use judgment in buying and buy only what is necessary to sustain health and endurance; preserve all food stuffs that can be preserved. Plant all available land which can be planted. Communicate with Bowdoin B. Smith, 793 Pleasant street, East Weymouth, chairman of Committee on Food Production and Conservation. He will give you all the information desired regarding the purchase of seeds for planting; methods of planting, etc. Get busy quickly and enlist in the Agricultural Army.

Townspeople of Weymouth, wake up to your duties; you have been asleep long enough; take action this very week. Each one do his or her part in the work which is needed to be carried on in our town. Let us show the other towns that we are capable of handling the situation in an efficient way, and that when the critical point is reached, the townspeople of Weymouth will be "on the job" with flying colors.

Temple Council Visitation

In making his official visit to Temple Council, R. & S. M., Thursday night, Grand Conductor George T. Wiley of the Grand Council had among his suite Right Illustrious Wallace G. Keith, DGM, and Miah G. Kenny, PDGM; William Pierce, GS, beside many of the Cryptic Rite from Boston. Thrice Illustrious Master Almond B. Cilley of Boston Council was deputy grand master of ceremonies.

In addition to a dinner the council secured the North Universalist Men's Club Minstrels, John H. Tower director, and they provided an hour's program in the recreation room. Harold M. Allen was interlocutor, with Leonard Wiley, Cyrus Howland, Henry Clapp, Harry Knight, George Wiley and George Webber as the ends.

Thrice Illustrious Master W. Edward Guttererson received the Grand Council representative, who was escorted to the chamber by Thrice Illustrious Gardner R. P. Barker, Frederic G. Baker, and H. P. Furnald PTIM. A diploma indicating a year of service was presented to Thrice Illustrious Master Guttererson.

An interesting incident in connection with the assembly was that degrees were conferred, by request of the Boston Council on a man who had enlisted in the artillery and was called upon to join his corps at once.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN.

The Selectmen were besieged at their meeting this week with more applications for licenses to collect junk, but will adhere to their vote, not to grant any more than 14.

Another clam permit was granted, also four billiard licenses.

Four more special police were appointed.—Charles T. Bailey, William B. Nash, Frank Wyman and William H. Wall.

The Superintendent of Streets was authorized to arrange with the Clean-up Campaign Committee to collect rubbish and waste material on Wednesday morning, May 16. See "Ad" of Committee in this paper.

Raymond P. Vary and John Boyd were appointed public weighers.

Preliminary steps were taken to secure a loan of $75,000 in anticipation of taxes.

Chief of Police Pratt reported that he had been unable to secure a second-hand motorcycle and recommended that a new machine be purchased to regulate auto travel.

A hearing will be given next Monday on the location of poles on Middle and Front streets.

SAMUEL HUCKEL, JR.

The many friends of Dr. Oliver Huckel, a former pastor of Union church, sympathize with him in his grief at the death of his brother, Samuel Huckel, Jr., a successful architect of Philadelphia, Penn., who died April 18, after an illness of several months.

He was educated in the public schools and the Central High school. He then began the study of architecture. Some of his best-known buildings are the Union station at Worcester, Mass., remodelling of the Grand Central station, New York; Odd Fellows Temple, the Manufacturer's Club, the Executive Mansion, Harrisburg; Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C.; the New Monmouth Hotel, Spring Lake, N. J.; the New Monterey Hotel, Asbury Park, N. J.; the Universalist church of the Messiah, Broad street; St. Mark's Episcopal church, Norfolk, Va.; and many city and country residences.

Mr. Huckel had traveled extensively in Europe and America. He was a member of the American Institute of Architects, the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the Union League, the Art Club of Philadelphia, the Transportation Club of New York, the Architectural League, New York; United Societies Club, London; and the Cricket Club.

His wife was Emma Frances Kirk, who died some years since. He leaves a brother, the Rev. Dr. Oliver Huckel, of New York, a daughter, Mrs. Robert L. Boltz, and a son, Earle Wentworth Huckel. The funeral was held on Saturday, April 21, from his late residence, 562 Chelton street, Germantown, at 2.30, and was conducted by the Rev. John B. Harding, St. Mark's, Frankford, of which he was a member. A successful career is brought to a close. Mr. Samuel Huckel will be remembered as a cultivated and genial gentleman.

Two Days' Fair.

Avonia circle, Companions of the Forest, held a two days' fair on Wednesday and Thursday evenings in Lincoln hall.

The entertainment consisted of songs by Mrs. Anna Clemen, readings by Miss Gwendolyn Poulin, violin duets by Miss Marion Tutty and James Delorey, solo dancing by Miss Mabel Robbins, duets by Miss Alice Garrity, fancy dancing by Miss Margaret Robbins and Miss Mabel Robbins. Miss Edith Tutty was the accompanist.

The sales tables were presided over as follows: Candy, Miss Annie O'Connor, Miss Mary Garrity, Miss Margaret Kelley, Miss Helen McCarthy and Miss Elizabeth McCarthy; ice cream, Mrs. John Riley, Miss Anna Guertin and Miss Martha Garrity; domestic, Mrs. Phillip Haviland, Miss Nellie Quinn, Mrs. Lillian Tutty, Mrs. Mary DeCosta, Mrs. Jennie Guertin and Mrs. Sarah DeYoung.

On the general committee were Mrs. Phillip Haviland, Mrs. Mark Garrity, Mrs. Anna Guertin, Miss Mary Garrity, Miss Anna O'Connor, Mrs. Jennie Guertin, Mrs. John Riley, Miss Elizabeth McCarthy, Miss Lillian Guertin and Miss Helen McCarthy.

—Friday evening, at Loring hall, Hingham, the High School Athletic Association presented "The Private Secretary," a farce in three acts. The twelve-page program was printed at the Gazette office, and contained nearly 100 advertisements.

DRAFT EXPECTED IN A FEW DAYS

Weymouth Has 2,782 of Military Age, and 1,519 Between 20 and 35 Years

Town Clerk Raymond has been notified by the Secretary of State to be ready for the proclamation of President Wilson in relation to the draft bill.

The draft will be managed locally by the Board of Registrars of Voters, of which Mr. Raymond is a member ex-officio, and he has referred the document to Benjamin F. Smith, the chairman of the board. The other two members are Patrick E. Corridan and Marshall B. Sprague.

The officials have been advised to GET Ready so that there will be no delay in having the quota from this State ready for the call.

The Registrars of Voters will be the Enrolment Board for Weymouth, and they have been requested to interview the precinct election officers, and ascertain if they will serve as enrolment officers without compensation as a PATRIOTIC DUTY IN THE NATION'S PRESENT EMERGENCY.

Whenever the election officers are unwilling to serve under these conditions, the Registrars are requested to call for VOLUNTEERS WHO WILL DO THE WORK.

On the basis of one-million men wanted the Massachusetts quota will be about 37,000.

The Gazette and Transcript has ascertained from the Census Bureau that there are in Weymouth

2782 Men of Military Age
(18 to 44 years' old) and 1519 Liable to Draft

(20 to 35 years' old).

If 1,000,000 men are called to the colors, Massachusetts will be required to assemble 37,026 men.

If the call is for half a million men, the number which will be required from New England will be 36,020 and the figures for the individual States will be half of the number required for a million men.

The War Department, however, desires to raise 1,000,000 men at once in addition to those already in the National Guard and the regular army.

The department is ready to put the system into effect just as soon as the bill is finally passed by Congress and signed by President Wilson. Pending final legislative action the department is making no detailed statement as to how the million men will be assembled.

Nevertheless the department has made known that State officials will have charge of assembling the men in their individual States and that in assembling the men within the ages fixed by the bill, the State's election machinery will be utilized.

TO REMOVE CARBON

Not All Owners of Automobiles Have Correct Idea.

DUST IS DRAWN INTO MOTOR

Deposit Eventually Becomes So Deep
 It Is Incandescent, Causing Premature Explosion of Fuel—
 Kerosene Is Favored.

Each man who owns an automobile has his own ideas about carbon prevention and removal, but not all of them are by any means correct. This substance is deposited in the combustion chambers of the gasoline engine through imperfect combustion of the cylinder oil and gasoline.

Dust is drawn into the motor and adheres to the first oily surface it strikes, adding to the accumulation of the piston head. Eventually, this deposit becomes so deep that it is incandescent, causing premature ignition of the fuel. It is this latter characteristic which makes it so important to get rid of the carbon.

Some Chemical Removers.
 These substances may be scraped out with specially designed tools with most engines, which permit a pretty thorough job to be engineered without removing the cylinder-head. There are several sorts of chemical carbon removers on the market which are to be injected into the combustion chamber for the purpose of loosening the carbon and permitting it to be blown out of the exhaust.

With some types of motors it is possible to drop a small chain in the combustion chamber and let it scrape the carbon automatically as it flies about under the impulses of the piston.

Kerosene Best Remedy.
 When the engine is hot at the end of the day's run, feed about three or four ounces, say, a third of an ordinary drinking glass of kerosene through the air vent on the intake manifold, or through the air intake of the carburetor, while the engine is idling.

The kerosene should be poured in gradually and the throttle should be opened very slowly, and the engine be speeded up on the kerosene, which is thus drawn into the cylinders in larger quantities than can be vaporized and burned at once, and in a few minutes the excess kerosene is being churned up and down in the cylinders, soaking the valve seats and spark plugs.

How Can You Afford to Overlook This?

A MASTERPIECE of transportation design, built for your requirements—to give you the lowest hauling cost in the world and the most satisfactory service.

An attachment that makes a fully guaranteed one-ton truck out of any Ford, Maxwell, Dodge Bros., Chevrolet, Buick or Overland car. That gives you a permanent truck construction—as well built as the most costly truck you can buy—and yet cheaper in price than a good pair of horses.

A hauling unit that moves twice the tonnage moved by horses—that has demonstrated a ton-mile operating cost of less than 8 cents from records obtained from over 10,000 users in over 400 lines of work.

A sturdy truck construction that has reduced time lost out of service to a minimum. The first Smith Form-a-Truck has been in steady service for four years—has covered over 20,000 miles—hauling an average load of 2,050 pounds and cost but $8 for repairs.

A proved transportation service of wonderful day in and day out efficiency and earning power. That has added to the profits of every user by cutting down expense in the hauling and delivery departments and by eliminating unnecessary and wasteful equipment.

The Smith Form-a-Truck gives you a one-ton truck of 125 in. wheelbase; with either 9 or 12 ft. loading platform; with a sturdy double chain drive; solid truck type rear tires; a rear axle construction that supports 90% of the load carried—takes all the carrying work off the power plant and puts it on the truck construction.

Every type of body from the light, flare board express type to the big steel dumping bodies for contractors and the huge vans for movers is used on Smith Form-a-Truck. There is no line of business in which the new era hauling and delivery vehicle does not find a ready place.

WALTER J. BESS, East Braintree
 Residence, 6 Shaw St. Tel. Braintree 383-M.

That there is a surplus of the kerosene in the cylinders may be proved by the fact that the engine will run at good speed for several minutes after the operator has stopped pouring the oil into the intake manifold.

After running the engine for some minutes on the kerosene fuel, it should be rapidly speeded up by opening the air-vent wider and then, while the kerosene is still being poured into the manifold, the spark should be shut off.

More kerosene is drawn into the cylinders with each revolution, and none of it is burned up, and it may be left for the night to perform its function of a carbon solvent on the cylinder-head, valve seats and plugs.

PROPER USE OF HYDROMETER

Service Manager of Manufacturing Concern Gives Important Point to Watch in Testing.

The service manager of storage battery manufacturing concern gives an important hint to automobile owners in advising them about the use of their hydrometers.

"When you use your hydrometer for testing your battery," he says, "make your test and reading, if possible, without removing the hydrometer from the battery. In this way none of the liquid will be spilled and the balance of acid and water will not be disturbed in your battery. Your battery when it leaves the shop new has in it a certain proportion of battery acid to the amount of water that is in it. The water naturally evaporates and must be renewed from time to time. There is no evaporation, however, to the acid and this proportion should always be constant. When you remove your hydrometer from your battery to take a reading, you have in it both water and acid. It is very easy to lose a little of this out of the bottom of the hydrometer and thus weaken the efficiency of that particular cell. In most cases the barrel of the hydrometer is long enough for you to see the marks on the float if you stoop a little, and the slight inconvenience is well worth the trouble. Never add acid to your battery."

The Necessary Inclosure.
 "Is it necessary to inclose stamps?" asked the poet. "More necessary even than to inclose poetry," responded the experienced author.

TOURING CARS FOR CAMPERS

Special Machine, Fully Equipped With Paraphernalia, to Be Built by Company Just Formed.

A company has been formed to manufacture a special touring car, equipped with full camping paraphernalia. The cruiser is to appear as a two-passenger roadster, most of the space back of the front seat being devoted to the stowing of camping equipment. The rear compartment will carry a tent, folding bed, table, chairs, bed clothing, a stove and places for carrying food. The car will be made completely waterproof.

World Record in Treaties.

Some painstaking person has compiled a list of treaties from 1500 B. C. to 1800 A. D. In those 34 centuries the world achieved 8,000 treaties, and we are told that each of them on the average lasted a little longer than two years. It is as true now as it was 1,500 years before the Christian era that treaties are only kept when there is an honest intention among all parties of keeping them.

NEWS REVIEW OF THE PAST WEEK

First American Shot in the Great War Destroys a German U-Boat.

FIRE BY LINER MONGOLIA

Destruction of Shipping by Submarines Now Threatens England With Food Shortage—Great Britain Gets Money From Uncle Sam.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

America's first shot in the war with Germany was fired on April 19. It scored a direct hit and destroyed a German submarine. The shot was fired by the gun crew on the American liner Mongolia when a U-boat attempted to attack that vessel in the Irish sea.
The first shell smashed the periscope and after other shells were sent there was an explosion and the submarine did not rise again. Capt. Emery Hice of the Mongolia told of the incident on arrival in an English port. It is interesting to note that the gun that got the U-boat had been named Theodor Roosevelt by the gunners.

The destructive work of the submarines is causing increasing anxiety in Great Britain. The latest weekly report of the admiralty shows a much larger number of ships sunk than did any previous report, and on Wednesday Lord Davenport, the British food controller, solemnly warned the British public that severe privations menaced the nation before the next harvest was reached. This aroused the London press to gloomy comment, the burden of which was that the submarine blockade was the most serious feature of the war now and that if Great Britain was to be saved from starvation and possible defeat something must be done mighty soon to counteract it. This something, obviously, is the turning out from the shipyards of a vast and continuous stream of tonnage, but though many ships are being built, the shortage of skilled labor renders it impossible to construct anywhere near the number required. The great British navy is powerless to relieve the situation. No one over there seems able to suggest any solution of the problem except to be careful of the food supply and prepare for the worst.

The food question is serious elsewhere. It was responsible in large part for the strikes in Germany and is the chief cause of demonstrations that are alarming the Swedish government. In France meatless dinners —except Sundays and holidays—began Wednesday, and already in the United States the hotels and clubs are cutting down their menus.

Plans for larger crops and more farm labor in America were carried nearer to completion during the past week. One notable incident was the departure of 500 students of the agricultural college of the University of Illinois to help raise Canada's wheat crop. They are to be well paid and the Dominion government will give to each of them a homestead of 160 acres.
On a moment's thought such a movement as this must win approval, for a bumper crop in Canada will do the civilized world as much good as one in the United States, and the Dominion has been depleted of labor.

Great Britain Gets First Loan.

Speedy work is being done in the way of supplying the immediate needs of the allies of the United States. In the first conferences with the commissioners from England and France the government was told that the most urgent of these needs were money, ships and food. It was agreed that the first allotment of the $3,000,000,000 loan would go to Great Britain, and on Wednesday Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo handed to the British ambassador a treasury warrant for $200,000, 000. Arrangements for disposing of the immense bond issue are practically completed and France and Italy and Russia will get their share soon. Most of the money, it is understood, will be expended in the United States.

The commissioners agreed that, next to supplying money, America could give the best help by continuing to furnish food and by finding the vessels for its transport to Europe, and they were pleased with the plans for building a great fleet of wooden ships.
General Joffre, however, expressed the hope that in the near future a large contingent of American troops would be on the fighting line under the Stars and Stripes, holding that the moral effect of that would be tremendous.
All of the commissioners concurred in the statement that they were here not to attempt to dictate to our government, but to advise and assist it to the best of their ability and with their wealth of experience.

President Wilson, in a conference with Mr. Balfour, voluntarily gave assurances that the United States will fight until it achieves victory, and thereupon the head of the British mission declared that the entente allies would seek no treaty of alliance, no signature of the entente pledge not to make a separate peace with Germany.

Germans Resist Desperately.

"This is the last and deciding push, for we soon shall be able to hold out no longer" reads the diary of a German officer who was captured last Monday, and that seems to be the opinion of the German commander-in-chief, judging by the desperate opposition he is putting up against the drive of the allies in northern France. Resuming their part of the offensive at the beginning of the week, the British have made considerable progress, especially along the roads from Arras and Bapaume to Cambrai. In the sem-open fighting their heavy howitzers were of little use, but their field guns and machine guns were handled with wonderful skill and rapidly and the Germans suffered enormously. Von Hindenburg threw his reserves into the battle with a prodigality that astonished his adversaries, and the Teu-tons gave ground slowly and made repeated and fierce counter-attacks, which, however, were of little avail and left the ground covered with their slain. The German line, thanks to the astounding numbers of men Von Hindenburg has been able to bring up, is still unbroken, but it is badly battered and is being pushed back further and further toward the frontier.

The superiority of the British in the air was demonstrated on Monday in the most spectacular manner. The men of the Royal Flying corps met the air squadrons of the Germans at an altitude of 15,000 feet and put them to rout, destroying 40 of their airplanes, with the loss of but two of their own machines. The young British pilots then carried out a series of daring bombing raids.

The French devoted much of the week to destructive artillery fire in preparation for their next part in the "see-saw" that is being carried on with such skillful co-operation by Haig and Nivelle, and by Thursday their infantry was again in action.

On the Italian, Macedonian and Roumanian fronts little of moment has taken place. In Mesopotamia the British are still advancing, but the expedition from Egypt that is moving up through Palestine has found the reinforced Turkish forces holding a strongly entrenched position extending from Gaza toward Beersheba. Portugal, having decided to take a more active part in the conflict in Europe, has sent a large contingent of troops to northern France.

There has been some stirring activity recently in the neighborhood of the Straits of Dover. Two British destroyers encountered a flotilla of six German destroyers and after a furious combat put the foe to rout. The German boats were rammed and torpedeered and raked by gunfire and at least two of them were sunk. The British vessels suffered severely but were able to return to port.

Wednesday morning a German destroyer flotilla bombarded Dunkirk but was driven off by the coast batteries and the allied patrol boats. One French torpedo boat was sunk.

Russian Situation Dangerous.

The course of events in Russia is being watched with renewed anxiety.

The German and Austrian Socialist peace propagandists have taken from one of President Wilson's addresses the phrase of "a peace without victory" and are using it with some effect. The duma and the delegates representing the various classes in the councils are as firm as ever against concluding a separate peace, but they do not find the masses of unformed people easy to control. Germany is reported to have started the expected movement to cut off Petrograd from the army, a large naval and military expedition having left Libau, presumably for Pernau or Reval, and at such an inopportune time a great many Russian soldiers are deserting. These deserters are peasant soldiers who are hastening to their homes in fear that there will be a distribution of lands of which, in their absence, they will not get their share. The old agrarian trouble is coming to a head and despite the assurances of the authorities that it cannot be settled until the constituent assembly acts, the peasants are in many localities taking the matter into their own hands.

As for the threatened German offensive, the leaders of the new Russian government assert that it will be a good thing for Russia even if the enemy should occupy Petrograd, for it will unite the nation in determination to fight the war to the finish and nullify the efforts of the Teuton Socialists. The Russian Baltic fleet and army sent a wireless message to the allied fleets saying they were in complete readiness to defend free Russia.
President Wilson has selected the members of a commission that will visit Russia to pay this nation's respects to the new government, and Elliott Root has consented to be its chairman. The other members will be Edward T. Hurley, Daniel Willard and Oscar S. Straus.

Spain Warns the Kaiser.

On Tuesday Spain sent to Germany a note concerning submarine warfare, with the warning that Spanish paci-ence was nearly exhausted. The imperial government consented to a parley for the "mitigation of the difficulties which have arisen in Spain," King Alfonso has tried diligently to preserve neutrality, but it seems as if his efforts were doomed to failure.

Turkey having severed diplomatic relations with the United States, the representatives of the two nations started for home.

Reports that came from Europe during the week told of a revival of the attempts to oust Bethmann-Hollweg from power because of his support of the plans of the Socialist Scheidemann for a peace without annexation and indemnities. The pan-Germans, conservatives and liberals all are opposing the chancellor in this. But Germany's foes should not count too much on such demonstrations, any more than on the strikes there, for there is no reason to believe any of them portend the overthrow of Prussian autocracy—the one thing, probably, that can bring the war to an early conclusion.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago succeeded on Thursday in attracting some attention to himself. He issued a printed statement on the food shortage in which he attacked conscription, argued for a ban on food exports and assailed the war policies of the administration. The same day he evinced a disinclination to extend to Marshal Joffre and the French mission an invitation to visit Chicago, saying he thought some of the people "might not be wildly enthusiastic about it." Mayor Thompson is overly careful about the stability of his Teutonic political fences, for Chicago is decidedly enthusiastic over the proposed visit by the French commissioners and will give them a splendid welcome. Plans for the event are being made, the mayor being ignored.

The Wisconsin senate gave a lesson to disloyal citizens by expelling from membership Senator Frank Rugsue of Milwaukee, a Socialist, for refusal to retract alleged disloyal statements made by him on the floor of the senate.
At the hour of writing it appears certain that the government selective conscription bill will be passed by both houses of congress. Agreements were secured in both senate and house that assured a vote not later than midnight Saturday.

A social for the benefit of the ways and means committee connected with Preparedness was held at the home of Mrs. Charles Macker on Thursday afternoon.

Monday afternoon a number of the Weymouth Heights ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. James B. Jones, for the purpose of making Preparedness supplies. A small fee was collected from each one present and a candy sale was held, the proceeds being given to the Home Relief Committee to aid them in their work.

Master Donald Hunt and sister Lillian Hunt of Stoneham have been making a few days' visit with their grandmother, Mrs. Mercy Hunt.

About 250 people from North Weymouth and the Heights attended the entertainment in the Old North church last Friday evening in the interests of "American Preparedness." A splendid display of our national colors was seen throughout the church and the decorations were very artistic. The evening's program opened with a selection by the Orchestra Study Club of Wollaston, which consisted of twelve pieces. The music furnished was greatly enjoyed and received much applause. Next came a word of welcome by Rev. Edward Y. Yaeger, after which the Hon. John M. Gibbs of Walpole was introduced. A stirring address was given by Mr. Gibbs, which sent a thrill of patriotism through each one present. The remainder of the program consisted of readings by Miss Ethel Ryan of North Weymouth, violin solos by Miss Cecelia Arenberg of Wollaston, vocal solos by Gordon Cameron of Wollaston, and selections by the orchestra. At the close of the entertainment a sale of ice cream was carried on in the chapel. The evening's entertainment was a great success both financially and patriotically and much credit is due to Mrs. Walter C. Herman of Union avenue who had the affair in charge.

Several men have been dropped from the roll of Co. K, 5th Regiment, N. G. M., on account of having "dependents," but the company now has 126 men, 21 of whom are residents of Hingham. One of the attractions of Weymouth is its social life, and its Women's Clubs, which are noted for their hospitality. The editor of this department requests the cooperation of the ladies especially the officers and chairmen of committees of the Old Colony Club and the Monday Club in forwarding items each week.

Please address:
MISS BEATRICE VANDERBILT,
Care Gazette and Transcript,
Weymouth, Mass.

At the annual meeting of the Old Colony Women's Club, April 26, the following officers were elected: Miss Marion M. Tirrell, president; Mrs. Freeman Patney, Jr., and Mrs. William A. Wagner, vice-presidents; Mrs. Frederic G. Bauer, recording secretary; Miss Florence K. Howe, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Nelson J. Gay, treasurer; Mrs. Pruce H. Tirrell, Mrs. Percy L. Bicknell; Mrs. Frank E. Hanson, Mrs. W. S. Whitten and Mrs. George W. Bennett, directors; Mrs. W. Carlton Barnes and Miss Charlotte F. Crabbe, auditors; Mrs. Josiah F. Prescott, custodian. The program for the afternoon included readings by Miss Dorothy Hayes of Boston. "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung, with Mrs. William Barnard presiding at the piano. Refreshments were served, with Mrs. Joseph Kohler as hostess.

Members of the Opportunity Circle of King's Daughters were the guests of Mrs. Benjamin Frank Lane at an all-day meeting, April 26, at the Lane house, 98 Chard street, East Weymouth.

Mrs. George A. Clift, president of the Whitman Woman's Club, tendered a reception Tuesday afternoon to the club officers who have aided her in her duties the past season, and was assisted by Mrs. Harry H. Hovey and Mrs. M. P. O'Connor. Mrs. Abbie F. Jenkins spoke of plans for Red Cross work; Miss Mildred Hall reported on the surgical dressing department of the Brockton Woman's Club, and Mrs. Winthrop F. Atwood, a past president, alluded to the State Federation bazaar to be held in Boston. A luncheon was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. L. Damon Howard and Miss Mildred Hall of Brockton.

Quincy Reed of South Weymouth, has gone to California to reside.

The Choral Society held their regular rehearsal on Monday evening and all bids fair for a fine concert in Bates opera house next Monday evening, May 7. Fine soloists are engaged and the music will be as satisfactory as any concert yet given. It is hoped the hall will be filled to show that a Choral Society in Weymouth is really appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer E. Leonard of Commercial street have returned from Hotel Westminster, Boston.

The Philirgians of Braintree gave a Whist Party in Cochato hall Tuesday p. m., to pay for a flag they have lately purchased. There were about 35 tables. Favors were given and light refreshments were served.

Miss Sylva Canterbury is the guest of friends in Davenport, Iowa.

The Monday Club have begun work for next season. The first meeting of the new board for 1917-1918 was held last Friday with Mrs. Jennie Worster, the president. Many good things were talked over for the entertainments the coming season. It is hoped to have equally as good a program as was enjoyed last season, and that was voted the best ever.

The Wissahickon Campfire girls met Thursday evening at Mrs. Edmund Chandler's. Sergeant Smith of Rockland gave a lecture on "first aid."

More members for the Monday Club are on the waiting list. It is growing. All members who wish to keep their present membership must remit dues to Mrs. Doucette, the treasurer, before June 1, or their names will be dropped and those on the waiting list will be admitted.

Miss Susan B. Willard of Hingham, regent of Old Colony chapter, D. A. R., has returned from Washington.

The April meeting of Susannah Tufts chapter, D. A. R., was held in the parlors of Union church on Monday, the regent, Mrs. Voorhees, presiding. Chancellor McGown of the International College at Springfield addressed the members on the American attitude toward foreigners at this time, testifying of the loyalty of a large majority of these people to their adopted country. His plea was for more confidence instead of so much distrust. Mrs. Voorhees, Mrs. Bachelder and Mrs. Neal were chosen as a permanent committee to work along the line of Preparedness. The sum of $5 was voted for the High School orchestra. Mrs. Rhodes of Portland explained the distribution of the National Magazine, the price of which hereafter is to be $1 a year. It was voted to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" at the close of each meeting during the war. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Voorhees, Mrs. Cate, Mrs. Walsh and Mrs. Bates.

The engagement is announced of Miss Alice Teresa Griffin of Hingham and Charles Lewis McCarthy of Newton.

A pleasing incident at a special meeting of Mayflower chapter, Order of Eastern Star, on Tuesday evening, was the presentation to the chapter by Mrs. Elizabeth B. Pratt of North Weymouth of a large silk American flag. It was received and placed in position with appropriate ceremonies, Mrs. Amy Severance presiding. After the degree work there was a social and patriotic hour, and then refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob O. Sanborn of Hingham Centre have returned from Southern Pines, S. C.

Miss Betty Dent Smith, the daughter of General Manager Smith of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, and E. Hugh Hill of Moscow, Idaho, were married at Quincy on Monday evening by Rev. E. M. Paddock, rector of St. James' Episcopal church of Cambridge. After the reception and supper Mr. and Mrs. Hill left on a wedding trip to Southern California and also to the home of the groom's parents in Moscow, Ida. They will make their home at 240 Goffe street, Quincy, and will be at home after July 1.

Mrs. L. A. Morgan entertained her friends with an all-day May party at her home on Pond street Tuesday.

Miss Augustus Richards of Commercial street, and Mrs. John De Angeles of South Braintree, left last evening for an extended trip to New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bates have returned from a visit with friends in Maine.

The Cochato Club of Braintree entertained the new Neighborhood Club of Quincy at its clubhouse on Monday evening. At bottle pins the Cochato team won from their guests, Harry Patten, with 129, had the best single, and E. A. Olin, with 344, the best total.

Mrs. George A. Remick has been on a visit to relatives at Old Orchard Beach, Maine.

A whist party was held Monday afternoon by the ladies of the Cochato Club in their hall. The hostesses were Misses Marjorie and Elizabeth Kneeland. Souvenirs were awarded Mrs. Chester Tenney, Mrs. F. H. Perry, Mrs. F. S. Nichols, Mrs. H. W. Macomber, Mrs. L. O. Crocker and Mrs. J. H. Wilder.

A son was born Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Warren Thayer, Standish road. Mr. Thayer is at present at Montreal, Canada, but was formerly of Quincy.

Miss Florence B. Nash attended a Sagamore Christian Endeavor reunion on Saturday, held at the Immanuel Baptist church, Newton, and was the guest over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Chase of Newtonville.

Miss Eleanor Crehore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morton Crehore of Cohasset will be married Tuesday, June 19, at St. Stephen's church, Cohasset, to John Galt of Honolulu. The wedding will be quiet and the bride will be unattended. The best man will be a brother of the groom, Carter Galt, also of Honolulu.

Edward T. Jordan has returned from a vacation spent in Scarsdale, New York, near New York City. His son E. Stewart Jordan and wife were with him for about ten days.

The Anniversary supper of the All Souls' Church took place in the parish house April 27. Supper was served at 6.30. There was an entertainment of music and readings.

A party of ten people from Weymouth Bluffs witnessed "The Melting Pot," a patriotic demonstration presented by the gymnasium classes of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association in Posse gymnasium on Beacon street last Saturday evening. Mrs. Harold Allen of Saunders street, North Weymouth, president of the day classes, took part in the exhibition of dances and drills, and in the finale when "America" was sung by everyone, and the classes formed the letter A. Mrs. Allen was the Goddess of Liberty whom they all saluted.

Miss Scollard, the president of the Weymouth Catholic Club, was a guest of the Quincy Catholic Club April 26, at the Guest and Presidents' night. The program included addresses, music and a luncheon.

The degree team of Abigail Adams Rebekah lodge of South Weymouth exemplified the degree at the annual session of the Rebekah Assembly on Wednesday in Boston. Officers of the Grand Lodge were in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Bates, who have been stopping with their daughter, Mrs. Harry G. Studley of Wollaston, through the winter, have returned to their East Weymouth home.

The candle-pin tournament for women was concluded last Friday evening at the Clapp Memorial Association building, when Teams 4 and 2 won. Miss Howley's team won from Mrs. Severance's team 4 to 0, the totals being 656 to 606. Miss Howley led with a single of 81 and total of 149. In the other game Miss Margaret Looney's team took three points out of four from Miss Nellie Looney's team 680 to 656. Mrs. Farrar had high single 77, and Miss Margaret Looney high total 152. The tournament prize for the highest single string was taken by Miss Nellie Looney, with 104 pins. She also won highest total and the biggest average of the season, but as only one prize could be taken by a single bowler the "total" prize went to Mrs. Augustus Conathan with 177 and the "average" to Miss Margaret Looney with 74.

UNION LITERARY CIRCLE. The Union Literary Circle held its regular meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. H. C. Newman, with a goodly number of the members present. In the absence of the president, Rev. William Hyde, the secretary presided.

As this meeting had been left without a subject, and it is the custom of the circle to devote one evening in the course to musical interests, the program committee introduced the "History of the Weymouth Band" as the subject of the evening. Selected passages were read, relative to the formation and personnel of the band, as well as some of the work done during its existence, taken from the book written by William W. Raymond of East Weymouth, who was a member of the organization. During the readings many interesting facts were made known regarding the celebrity of the "Band," among others the giving of a concert while on a professional visit to the city of Philadelphia and the awarding, by musical critics, of the palm of supremacy to our Weymouth band, notwithstanding the fact that ninety other bands were assembled in Philadelphia on this occasion.

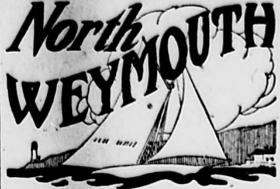

These readings were interspersed with recitations by Mrs. Trainor with musical accompaniments by Miss Dorothy Lowe of Quincy, and also by selections on the Angelus by Mrs. Newman.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Alice Cook of Summer street, Weymouth, on Tuesday evening, May 8, when "The New England Tragedies" by Longfellow will be read by members of the circle. As this is the last meeting before the annual class night, it is hoped that all members will attend if possible.

The people who travel by electric cars have yet to see all the advantages of "bone dry towns." A party coming out from Boston last Saturday night on the 11.05 had a chance to see something of what it is going to be like. The trainmen, according to law, were obliged to get rid of those who couldn't pass muster, which they did quite forcibly. There were plenty of men who got through by the skin of their teeth, as it were. When Quincy was reached four jitneys were immediately filled. The electric car when discovered was two-thirds filled with men who carried a load inside and out and three-thirds full of the worst possible air that a person could breathe. If that is to be the general effect of dry towns, then the towns should find means of transporting such traffic, instead of using the electric cars for expressing loads.

DELEGATES ELECTED.
In the Braintree-Holbrook district, Louis E. Flye of Holbrook defeated Hartley L. White of Braintree. Other Norfolk county men elected to the Constitutional Convention:—Henry M. WEYMOUTH CHORAL SOCIETY.
The music loving public will have a fine opportunity on Monday evening to hear the chorus in "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," and "Gallia." The chorus will be accompanied by an orchestra and soloists of great merit. Mrs. Laura Littlefield, who renders equally well American, French and German compositions, in a pure lyric style, will sing the solo in "Gallia," accompanied by the chorus, while Mr. George H. Boynton, who has a tenor voice marked for beauty of tone, excellence in phrasing and unusual volume, will render the charming tenor solo in "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast." It is anticipated that the public spirited citizens of the town of Weymouth who realize the value and standing of such an organization as the Weymouth Choral Society, and desire the continuance of the same, will lend their aid by liberally supporting it financially.

MRS. LOUISE A. CARPENTER.
Mrs. Louise A. Carpenter, a sister of Rev. Henry C. Alvord, and a former resident for some years in South Weymouth, died on Monday morning of pneumonia in Washington, D. C., whither she had gone as a delegate to the D. A. R. Convention from Nantucket, Conn., her home in recent years. She was in her 70th year. Four children survive her, Mary L., a graduate of the Weymouth High School; Winifred G., a teacher in the New Rochelle (N. Y.) High School; Henry T., of Detroit, Mich.; and Arthur B., of Watervliet, N. Y. The funeral and burial were on Wednesday afternoon at Bolton, Conn., her native town.

An Adjustable Lunatic

By JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

"An adjustable lunatic?"

"Yes, sir, an adjustable lunatic—you may know I don't make a business of insanity, or I wouldn't be running at large here in the streets of the city."

It was on the morning of St. Patrick's Day. I had been drifting aimlessly around the city for hours, tossed about by the restless tide of humanity that ebbed and flowed in true sea fashion at the Washington and Illinois street crossing. The few friends I had been fortunate enough to fall in with prior to the parade I had been unfortunate enough to lose in the flurry and excitement attending that event; and, brought to a sudden anchorage at the Bates house landing, I found myself at the mercy of a boundless throng that held not one familiar face. It was a literal jam at that juncture, and anxious and impatient as I was to break away, I was forced into a bondage which, though not exactly agreeable, was at least the source of an experience that will linger in my memory fresh and clear when every other feature of the day shall have faded.

I had been crowded into a position on a step of the railway that gave me a lean upon the balustrade and placed me head and shoulders above the crowd; and although I comprehended the helplessness of my position, I was, in a manner, thankful for the opportunity it afforded me to study the unsuspecting subjects just below. As my hungry eyes went foraging about from face to face they fell upon the features of an individual so singularly abstracted in appearance and so apparently oblivious to his surroundings, that I mentally congratulated him upon his enviable disposition.

He was a slender man, of thirty years, perhaps; not tall, but something over medium height; he had dark hair and eyes, with a complexion much too fair to correspond; was not richly dressed, but neatly, and in good taste. Instinctively I wondered who and what he was; and my speculative fancy went to work and made a lawyer of him—then a minister—an artist—a musician—an actor—and a dancing master. Suddenly I found my stare returned with equal fervor, and tried to look away, but something held me. He was elbowing his way to where I stood, and smiling as he came.

"I don't know you," he said, when, after an almost superhuman effort, he had gained my side, to the discomfort of a brace of mangy little bootblacks that occupied the step below. "I don't know you personally, but you look bored. I'm troubled with the same disease and want company—as the poet of the Sierras walls, 'How all alone a man may be in crowds!'"

Something in the utterance made me offer him my hand.

He grasped it warmly. "It's curious," he said, "how friends are made and where true fellowship begins. Now we've known each other all our lives and never met before. What d'ye say?"

I smiled approval at the odd assertion.

"But tell me," he continued, "what conclusion you have arrived at in your study of me; come, now, be frank—what do you make of me?"

Although I found myself considerably startled, I feigned composure and acknowledged that I had been speculating as to who and what he was, but found myself unable to define a special character.

"I thought so," he said. "No one ever reads by character—no one ever will. Why, I've had phrenologists groping around among my bumps by the hour to no purpose, and physiognomists driving themselves cross-eyed; but they never found it, and they never will. The very things of which I am capable they invariably place beyond my capacity; and, with like sagaciousness, the very things I can't do they declare me to be a master hand at. But I like to worry them; it's fun for me. Why, old Fowler himself, here the other night, thumbed my head as mellow as a May apple, and never came within a mile of it! Some characters are readable enough, I'm willing to admit. Your face, for instance, is a bulletin board to me, but you can't read mine, for I'm neither a doctor, lawyer, artist, actor, musician, nor anything else you may have in your mind. You might guess your way all through the dictionary and then not get it. It's simply an impossibility, that's all."

I laughed uneasily, for although amused at the quaint humor of his language, a nervous fluttering of the eyes and a spasmodic twitching of the corners of his mouth made me think his manner merely an affectation. But I was interested, and as his conversation seemed to invite the interrogation, I flatly asked him to indulge my curiosity and tell me what he was.

"Wait till the crowd thins, and maybe I will. In the meantime here's a cigar and here's a light—as Mr. Quill playfully remarks to Tom Scott—'Smoke away, you dog you!'"

"Well, you're a character," said I, dubiously.

"Yes," he replied, "but you can't tell what kind, and I can tell you the very trade you work at."

I smiled incredulously.

"Now don't look lofty and assume a professional air, for you're only a mechanic, and a sign painter at that."

Although he spoke with courtesy of address, there was a subtle something in his eye that drew me magnetlike and held me. I was silent.

"Want to know how I became aware of that fact?" he went on, with a quick, sharp glance at my bewildered face. "There's nothing wonderful about my knowing that; I've had my eye on you for two hours, and you stare at every signboard you pass, worse than a country jake; and once or twice I saw you stop and study carefully some fresh design, or some new style of letter. You're a stranger here in the city, too. Want to know how I can tell? Because you walk like you were actually going some place; but I notice that you never get there, for continually crossing and re-crossing streets, and back-tracking past show windows, and congratulating yourself, doubtless, upon the thorough business air of your reflection in the plate glass. Come, we can get through now; let's walk."

I followed him unhesitatingly. To say that I was simply curious would be too mild; I was fascinated, and to that degree I actually fastened on his arm, and clung there till we had quite escaped the crowd. "I like you, some way," he said, "but you're too impulsive; you let your fancy get away with your better judgment. Now, you don't know me, and I'm even pondering whether to frankly unbosom to you, or give you the slip; and I'll not leave the proposition to you to decide, for I know you'd say 'unbosom,' so I'll think about it quietly for a while yet and give you an unbiased verdict."

We walked on in silence for the distance, perhaps, of half a dozen blocks, turning and angling about till we came upon an open stairway in an old unpainted brick building, where my strange companion seemed to pause mechanically.

"Do you live here?" I asked.

"I stay here," he replied, "for I don't call it living to be fastened up in this old sepulcher. I like it well enough at night, for then I feast and fatten on the gloom and glower that infect it; but in the normal atmosphere of day my own room looks repellent, and I only visit it, as now, out of sheer desperation."

If I had at first been mystified with this curious being, I was by this time thoroughly bewildered. The more I studied him the more at a loss I was to fathom him; and as I stood staring blankly in his face, he exclaimed almost derisively: "You give it up, don't you?"

I nodded.

"Well," he continued, "that's a good sign, and I've concluded to 'unbosom'—I'm an adjustable lunatic."

"An adjustable lunatic?" I repeated, blankly. And after the remarkable proposition that ushers in the story, he continued smilingly:

"Don't be alarmed, now, for I'm glad to assure you of the fact that I'm as harmless as a baby butterfly. Nobody knows I'm crazy, nobody ever dreams of such a thing—and why? Because the faculty is adjustable, don't you see, and self-controlling. I never allow it to interfere with business matters, and only let it on at leisure intervals for the amusement it affords me in the pleasurable break it makes in the monotony of a matter-of-fact existence. I'm off duty today—in fact, I've been off duty for a week; or, to be franker still, I lost my situation ten days ago, and I've been humoring this propensity in the meanwhile; and now, if you're inclined to go up to my room with me—the windows are both raised, you see, and you can call for help should occasion require; people are constantly passing—if you feel inclined, I say, to go up with me, I'll do my best to entertain you. I like you, as I said before, and you can trust me, I assure you. Come."

If I were to attempt a description of the feelings that possessed me as I followed my strange acquaintance up the stairway, I should fall as utterly as one who would attempt to portray the experience of lying in a nine-days' trance, so I leave the reader's fancy to befriend me, and hasten on to more tangible matters.

We paused at the first landing, my companion unlocking a door on the right, and handing me the key with the remark: "You may feel safer with it. And don't be frightened," he continued, "when I open the door, for it always whines like somebody had stepped on its knob," and I laughed at the odd figure as he threw the door open and motioned me to enter.

It was a queer apartment, filled with a jumbled array of old chairs and stands; old trunks, a lounge, and a stack of odd-shaped packages. A frowzy carpet thrown over the floor like a blanket, and a candle-box spittoon with a broken lamp chimney in it. A little swinging shelf of dusty books, with a railroad map pasted just above it. A narrow table with a telegraph instrument attached, and wires like ivy vines running all about the walls; and scattered around the instrument was an endless array of zinc and copper scraps, and bits of brass, spiral springs, and queer-shaped little tools. A flute propped up one window, and near it, on another stand, were a cornet and an old guitar, a pencil sketch half finished, and a stuffed glove with a pencil in its fingers lying on it, a spiral lamp, a lump of beeswax, and a hundred other odds and ends, betokening the presence of some mechanical, musical, scientific genius.

"It's a bachelor's room," said the host, noting my inquisitive air. "It's a bachelor's room, so you'll expect no apologies. Sit down when you're through with the industrial, and turn your attention to the art department."

I followed the direction of his hand, and my eyes fell upon a painted face of such ineffable sweetness and beauty I was fairly dazed. It was not an earthly form, at least in coloring, for the features seemed to glow with beatific light. The eyes were large, dark, and dewy, thrown upward with a longing look, and filled with such intensity of tenderness one could but sigh to see them. The hair, swept negligently back, fell down the gleaming shoulders like a silken robe, and nestled in its glossy waves the ears peeped shyly out like lily blooms. The lips were parted with an utterance that one could almost hear, and weep for because the blessed voice was mute. The hands were folded on a crumpled letter and pressed close against the heart, and a curl of golden hair was coiled around the fingers.

"Is it a creation of the fancy?" I asked.

"Well, yes," he answered, with a dreamy drawl. "I call it fancy, when in a normal state; but now," he continued, in a fainter tone, "I will designate it as a portrait." And oh, so sad, so hopeless and despairing was the utterance, it seemed to well up mind him of his having told me he was not a musician.

"Only a novice," he responded. "One may twang a lute and yet not be a troubadour. By the way," he broke off abruptly, "is that expression original with me, or have I picked it up in some old book of rhyme? Oh yes! How do you like poetry?"

He sprang to his feet as he spoke, and without awaiting an answer to his query went diving about in a huge waste basket standing near the table.

"It's a thing I dislike to acknowledge," he went on, "but I don't mind telling you. The fact is, I'm a follower of Wegg and sometimes 'drop into poetry—as a friend, you understand; and if you'll lend me your ears, I'll give you a specimen of my versification."

He had drawn up a roll of paper from the debris of the basket, and unrolling it with a flourish, and a mock heroic air of inspiration, he read as follows:

"A fantasy that came to me
As wild and wantonly designed
As ever any dream might be Unraveled from a madman's mind,
A tangle-work of tissue, wrought
By cunning of the spider-brain,
And woven, in an hour of pain,
To trap the giddy flies of thought—"

He paused, and with a look of almost wild entreaty he pleaded: "You understand it, don't you?"

I nodded hesitatingly.

"Why, certainly you do. The meaning's the plainest thing in it. What's your idea of its meaning? Tell me! Why don't you tell me?"

"I read it again that I may note it carefully."

He repeated it.

"Why," said I, "it appears to me to be the introduction to a poem written

Than every whimper of regret
That sobbing utterance could form.
And patched with scraps of sound
That seemed

Torn out of tunes that demons dreamed,
And pitched to such a piercing key,
It stabbed the ear with agony;
And when at last it lulled and died,
I stood aghast and terrified,
I shuddered and I shut my eyes,
And still could see, and feel aware
Some mystic presence waited there;
And staring, with a dazed surprise,
I saw a creature so divine
That never subtle thought of mine
May reproduce to inner sight
So fair a vision of delight.

"A syllable of dew that drips
From out a lily's laughing lips
Could not be sweeter than the word
I listened to, yet never heard—
For, oh, the woman hiding there
Within the shadows of her hair,
Spoke to me in an undertone
So delicate, my soul alone
But understood it as a moan
Of some weak melody of wind
A heavenward breeze had left behind.

"A tracery of trees, grotesque
Against the sky, behind her seen,
Like shapeless shapes of arabesque
Wrought in an oriental screen;
And tall, austere and statuesque
She loomed before it—'e'en as though
The spirit hand of Angelo
Had chiseled her to life complete,
With chips of moonshine round her feet.
And I grew jealous of the dusk,
To see it softly touch her face,
As loverlike, with fond embrace,
It folded round her like a husk:

But when the glitter of her hand,
Like wasted glory, beckoned me,
My eyes grew blurred and dull and dim—

My vision failed—I could not see—
I could not stir—I could not stand,
Till, quivering in every limb,
I flung me prone, as though to swim
The tide of grass whose waves of green

Went rolling ocean-wide between My helpless shipwrecked heart and her
Who claimed me for a worshiper.

"And writhing thus in my despair,
I heard a weird, unearthly sound,
That seemed to lift me from the ground

And hold me floating in the air.
I looked, and lo! I saw her bow
Above a harp within her hands;
A crown of blossoms bound her brow,
And on her harp were twisted strands

Of silken starlight, rippling o'er
With music never heard before
By mortal ears; and, at the strain,
I felt my spirit snap its chain
And break away, and I could see
It as it turned and fled from me
To greet its mistress, where she smiled
To see the phantom dancing wild
And wizardlike before the spell
Her mystic fingers knew so well."

I sat throughout it all as though under the strange influence of an eastern drug. My fancy was so wrought upon I only saw the reader mistily, and clothed, as it were, in a bedragoned costume of the Orient. My mind seemed idle—steeped in drowse and languor, and yet peopled with a thousand shadowy fancies that came trooping from chaotic hiding places, and mingling in a revelry of such riotous extravagance it seemed a holiday of selfish thought.

I shook my head, I rubbed my eyes, arose bewildered, and sat down again; arose again and walked across the room; my strange companion following every motion with an intensity of gaze almost mesmeric.

"You fail to comprehend it?" he queried.

I shook my head.

"You can almost grasp it, can't you?"

"Yes," I answered.

"But not quite?"

"Not quite."

"Does it worry you?"

"Yes."

"Think it will cling to you, and fret you, vex you, haunt you?"

"I know it will."

"Think you'll ever fully comprehend it?"

"I can't say," I replied, thoughtfully.

"Perhaps I may in time. Will you allow me to copy it?"

"What do you want with it?"

"I want to study it," I replied.

"And you're sure you don't understand it, and it worries you, and frets you, and vexes you, and haunts you? Good! I'll read you the final clause now; that may throw a light of some kind on it," and, opening the scroll, again he read:

"What is it? Who will rightly guess
If it be aught but nothingness
That dribbles from a wayward pen
To spatter in the eyes of men?
What matter! I will call it mine,
And I will take the changeling home
And bathe its face with morning-shine,
And comb it with a golden comb
Till eery tangled tress of rhyme
Will fairer be than summer time;
And I will nurse it on my knee,
And dandle it beyond the clasp
Of hands that grip and hands that grasp,
Through life and all eternity!"

"Now what do you think of it?" he asked with a savageness that startled me.

"I am more at sea than ever," I replied.

"Well, I wish you a prosperous voyage: Here's the poem; I've another copy. 'Read and reflect,' as the railroad poster says, but don't you publish it—at least while I'm alive, for I've no thirst for literary fame—I only write for home use; but you're a good fellow, and I like you for your weak points, and I trust the confidence I repose will not be disregarded. Come!"

He had opened the door and was holding out his hand for the key.

I gave it to him and followed out mechanically. He left the door ajar and followed to the bottom of the stairs.

"And now if you'll pardon me," he said, "I'll say good-by to you here; I've some packing to do and ought to be at it."

"Why, you're not going to leave the city?" I asked.

"Well, no, not today; but the jig's up with me here, and it's only a question of time—I can't hold out much longer—as our rural friend remarks, 'Money matters is mighty scarce'; and if I don't put out shortly I'll have to 'fold my tent like the Bedouin and silently plagiarize away!'"

"If I could be of any assistance to you—" I began, but he checked me abruptly with, "Oh, no, I don't require it, I assure you; I've two dollars to your one, doubtless. Thank you just the same,—and good-by. Here's my card; it's not my name, however, but it'll answer; I'll not see you again, though you should live to be as bald as a brickyard, for, my dear young friend, I'm going away. Good-by, and may all good things overtake you!"

He gripped my hand like a vise, and turning quickly, went skipping up the stairway two steps at a time.

"Good-by!" I called to him, sorrowfully; then turned reluctantly away, examining the card he had given me, which, to my astonishment, was not his card at all, but a railroad ticket entitling the bearer to a ride from Danville, Illinois, to York, Pennsylvania; this fact I remember quite distinctly, as I read it over and over, revolving in my mind the impression that this was but another instance of his eccentricity, or perhaps a trick by which I might be victimized in some undreamed of way. But upon second thought I concluded it to be simply a mistake, and so turned back and called him to the window above and explained.

He came down and begged my pardon for the trouble he had given me, took the ticket, thanked me, and said good-by again.

"But," said I, "you haven't given me your real card in exchange."

"Oh, no matter!" he said smilingly. "Call me Smith, Jones or Robinson, it's all the same; good-by, and don't forget your old friend and well wisher, the Adjustable Lunatic." And even thus he vanished from my sight forever.

The remainder of the day and half of the night I spent in studious contemplation of the curious composition, but without arriving at any tangible conclusion. I am still engaged with my investigation. Sometimes the meaning seems almost within my mental grasp; but, balancing, adjusting, and comparing its many curious bearings, I find my judgment persistently at fault. It has puzzled and bewildered me for weeks. No line of it but canters through my brain like a fractious nightmare; no syllable but fastens on my fancy like a leech, and sucks away the life blood of my every thought. I am troubled, worried, fretted, vexed, and haunted; and I write this now in the earnest hope that wiser minds may have an opportunity of making it a subject of investigation, and because one week ago today my eyes fell upon the following special telegram to The Indianapolis Journal:

Peru, Ind., April 12.—An unknown man committed suicide in the eastward-bound train on the Wabash road, just below Waverly, at about eleven o'clock this morning. He had in his possession, besides the revolver with which he shot himself, a ticket from Danville, Illinois, to York, Pennsylvania, a gold watch, $19 in money, a small valise, and some letters and other papers which indicated his name to be George S. Clofing.

He was shot twice in the region of the heart, and his revolver showed that between the first and last shots two cartridges missed fire.

Reason Enough.

Most every town, no matter how small, has its noted character to which it points with either pride or shame. One small county seat town was the trading point of the most notorious preparator of the county. The new clerk in the main dry goods store had heard tales about the man ever since his arrival in the town. One day a modest, quiet old woman came into the store and bought a large bill of goods, paying for it and asking that the bundles be laid aside until she called for them. "What name, please?" the dapper clerk asked, with pencil poised ready to write. When she gave her name the young man caught his breath with a gulp of surprise, for he had been waiting on the wife of the man. She seemed to guess his thoughts, for the color flamed into her faded cheeks, and she said in an apologetic tone: "I married him jest after the war—when men wuz scarce." — Indianapolis News.

Why Not?

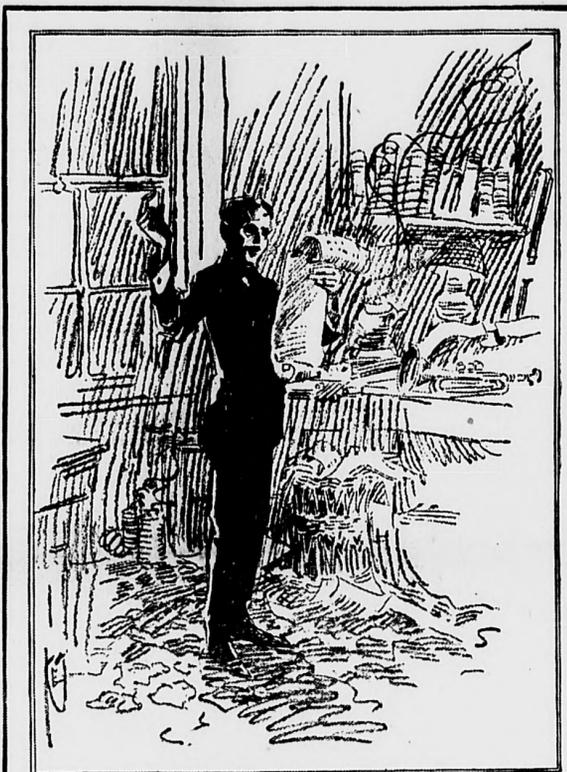

"Why, John, you told that policeman we were going only ten miles an hour, when the speedometer plainly registered thirty. Aren't you ashamed of yourself to tell such a lie?"

"How do I know I wasn't telling the truth? The speedometer might have been lying."

Denied the Statement.

"Sister is a very good child when she is asleep," said Tom, facetiously, having heard someone else say the same thing.

"I ain't dood when I'se asleep," declared sister. "I hase bad dreams and wake mamma up."

HE READ, OR RATHER RECITED, THE MONSTROSITY OF RHYME.

from the fountain of his heart like a spray of purest sorrow.

"Who painted it?" I asked.

"Who painted it?" he repeated, drowsily—"who painted it? Oh, no; I mustn't tell you that; for if I answered you with 'Raphael,' you'd say, 'Ah, no! the paint's too fresh for that, and he's been dead for ages.' Who painted it? No, no, I mustn't tell you that!"

"But are you not an artist?—I see an easel in the corner there, and here's a mahlistic lying on the mantel."

"I an artist? Why, man, what alls you? I told you not ten minutes since that I was an adjustable lunatic; and don't you see I am? You can't mislead me nor throw me off my guard. When it comes to reason or solid logic, don't you find me there? And here again, to show the clearness of my judgment, I remove the cause of our little dissension, and our friendly equality is restored—" and he turned the picture to the wall.

I could but smile at the gravity and adroitness of his language and demeanor.

"There," said he, smiling in return; "your face is brighter than the day outside; let's change the topic. Do you like music?"

"Passionately," I responded. "Will you play?"

"No; I will sing."

He took the guitar from the table, and, with a prelude wilder than the "Witches' Dance," he sang a song he called "The Dream of Death," a grievously sad song, so full of minor tones and wailing words, the burden of it still lingers in my ears:

"O gentle death, bow down and sip
The soul that lingers on my lip;
O gentle death, bow down and keep Eternal vigil o'er my sleep;
For I am weary and would rest
Forever on your loving breast."

His voice, as plaintive as a dove's, went trailing through the rondel like weariness itself; and when at last it died away in one long quaver of ecstatic melody, though I felt within my heart an echoing of grief

"Too sweetly sad to name as pain," I broke the silence following to re-

NEAT DWELLING DESCRIBED

Plant Dark Leaved Shrubbery Near Structure and Make Foundation of Dark Texture Brick for Most Pleasing Results.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD. Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

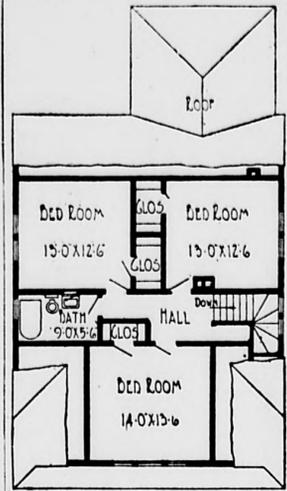

There is, of course, a direct relation between the house and its surroundings. By this we mean that either the surroundings must be laid out for the house, or, as in the case where a spot of special natural beauty is selected for the building site, the house must be designed for the surroundings. The latter case obtains in some small towns and in country estates. The former case, or a compromise between the two, exists in the larger towns and cities.

Perhaps it is not the case in this country so much as it is in some of the European countries, but the fact is true, nevertheless, that for the lover of beauty both natural and architectural, the small town which has been situated where nature has furnished plenty of trees, a pleasing topography and clear-watered streams—such a town offers the best possible site for the building of a home. The point is this: It is cheaper and usually more satisfactory to let nature furnish the attractive surroundings and model the home into the background, than to build the background for the home.

Not that those who have studied in the subject of scenic architecture loneliness. Therein lies the greatest advantage of the beautiful small town. Habits do not have to be changed, friendships may be formed and the normal conditions of life exist. The man who owns an isolated summer home seldom goes there with his family alone—he crowds the house full of friends (or if he doesn't his wife does). And what is the reason? Simply that "I" is not used when the real pleasures of life are being discussed; the correct pronoun is "We."

What of the case in which nature has not contributed and the means are not available to supply the deficit artificially? The case is not hopeless! By proper architectural treatment a house may be placed on a 50-foot lot which is by no means devoid of beauty. True, it is largely up to the house itself, since little can be expected of the surroundings. The architect, in this case, can hardly hope to obtain pleasing results if the size of the house required is large. When a structure of moderate size is called for, his skill will enable him to so design it that it will appear smaller than it really is.

The attractiveness of a house which will yield well to a decorative treatment such as that shown in the accompanying view cannot be questioned. The white lower portion, in contrast are not able to produce pleasing surroundings for the house, for they have proved their ability to do so. Because it is impossible for some lovers of beauty to go where nature has provided it, the work of the landscape architect is very important. The small town blessed with natural beauty is, then, not so much to be considered as the only possible site for the building of a beautiful home as it is to be considered as a spot which offers advanwith the upper dark portion, is very pleasing and always gives the impression of brightness that goes with well-kept premises. The upper part of the walls is finished with shingles, while the lower walls are faced with beveled siding. The porch is built into the house and fitted in a manner which gives an air of privacy. A set of screens may be used on this porch during the summer time, these to be taken out during the winter and glass sash inserted in their place. The porch will then act as a blanket to protect the front of the house from winter winds.

The small vestibule in which the staircase is built has a cased opening into the living room. The fireplace in this room is tucked cozily into a corner and a little seat is built against the wall on one side of it. A cased opening leads back to the dining room, which is built into the corner of the house—the ideal situation for this room. A first-floor bedroom, which would make an excellent den if not needed for other purposes, is entered from the dining room.

The kitchen with its connecting pantry is well arranged to meet the demands of the critical housewife. A work table is built beneath the pantry window and the cupboards are handily located on either side. The refrigerator may be placed in the pantry, and an opening is provided so that it is fed from the landing at the top of the short flight of steps leading from the grade entrance.

Three very large bedrooms are provided on the second floor. Each has a generous closet fitted with shelves at both ends. The bath is centrally located off the hall at the head of the stairs.

The view also shows a neat and inexpensive two-car garage built on the rear lot line. The garage is painted white to conform with the lower part of the house with which it is in line.

A house finished as this one is, requires the use of dark-leaved shrubbery near the building. The reason is that the upper dark walls need to be balanced by a mass of dark color near the ground. The effect is carried along by building the foundation walls above grade of some dark-colored material such as may be found among the many patterns of modern rough-texture face brick.

tages hard to obtain in imitation of nature, unless a large sum of money is available for the purpose.

The question might be asked, "Why not go to the country where nature's work has not been marred by the inroads of 'civilization'?" A logical question, and in some cases the affirmative answer is unquestionably the right one. The man who comes from the city, however, or even the town, has been brought up in close touch with the people around him. His habits have been formed in the influence of society. Put him and his family away from the rest of the community and the result is

NOTICE TO SICK WOMEN

Positive Proof That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Bridgeton, N. J. — "I cannot speak too highly of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for inflammation and other weaknesses. I was very irregular and would have terrible pains so that I could hardly take a step. Sometimes I would be so miserable that I could not sweep a room. I doctored part of the time but felt no change. I later took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt a change for the better. I took it until I was in good healthy condition. I recommend the Pinkham remedies to all women as I have used them with such good results." — Mrs. MILFORD T. CUMMINGS, 322 Harmony St., Penn's Grove, N. J.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence of the excellence of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy for the distressing ills of women such as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, backache, painful periods, nervousness and kindred ailments.

SLACKERS IN THE ALPHABET

Six Letters Do Half the Work of the Entire Twenty-Six, is Report of Investigators.

One of the most relentless hunts for slackers that has been conducted anywhere is reported by the education division of the Russell Sage foundation. Experts of this division have been studying the comparative industry of the letters of the alphabet, and have unearthed all sorts of shirking. "There should be a law against cruelty to the alphabet," complains Dr. Leonard P. Ayres, one of the investigators, "six letters do half the work."

"Study of some thousands of typewritten letters revealed the identity of the lazy letters. A typewriter company has been considering a rearrangement of its keyboard and wanted to place the really industrious letters where they would be easily accessible.

The six letters upon whose shoulders is slumped the labor of the other twenty are "a," "e," "h," "n," "o," and "t." These do half the work of the whole alphabet. "E" and "t" lead the six, doing a fourth of the alphabet's work and having presumably little time for rest or recreation. Letters like "q," "x" and "y" loaf practically all the time.

The present intention is to reward the industry of the ubiquitous six by giving them a place of high honor in the middle of the revised typewriter keyboard. "T," "h" and "n" are there already but "e" is rather remote, and "a" and "o" are out on the edge of things, barely within the scope of the typist's groping little finger.—Spokane Spokesman Review.

Spirituelle. "Your daughter's beauty is spirituelle." "Think so?" "There is something wistful about her expression." "She gets that way just before meal time. We got corned beef and cabbage today. She likes that."

The quiet wedding may be the calm before the storm.

HOME TOWN HELPS

NEARLY ALL LOVE A GARDEN

No Other Pastime, Unless It Be That of Angling, Has a Stronger Grip Upon its Devotees.

"There be delights," says an ancient writer, "that will fetch the day about from sun to sun and rock the tedious year as in a delightful dream." Thus, and very much after this manner, the charming old prose-poet, amiably garden made, continues, page after page, to describe the "1000 delights" to be found in the "flowery orchard" of his century—describes them with an abandon of happiness that suggests the rapture of St. Bernard when hymning the "New Jerusalem."

In fact, barring the equally ancient and alluring pastime of going a-fishing, no hobby has a stronger grip on its devotees than gardening, observes Frances Duncan in Scribner's. At four o'clock of a summer morning Celia Thaxter could be found at work in her radiant little island plot, a sister in spirit to old Chaucer when on his knees in the grass at dawn to watch a daisy open. And these were not exceptional, not extraordinary cases of devotion; they were merely typical exponents of the true gardener's passion.

Nor is this tense enthusiasm fleeting. Not in the least. It is no more transient than the bibliomaniac's passion, no more evanescent than the collector's zeal, which only death can quench. It is no sudden, youthful fervor; indeed, it is rarely found in youth at the storm and stress period, while it may be observed to be strongest in those for whom the days of wild enthusiasm are over. The bachelor clergyman or the quietest of spinsters, for whom other passion is nonexistent, will yet lavish on their gardens enough devotion to have won the heart of the most obdurate of persons, enough tenderness to have sufficed for the mothering of a dozen little ones. A garden is the world of the recluse, the passion of the lone man or woman, the diversion of statesmen, the recreation of poets and artists of all ages.

NEW METHODS BRING SAVING

Application of Business Principles by Town Manager Finds Favor in Massachusetts Community.

George F. Willett of Norwood, Mass., gave a talk on the business manager form of government for towns and cities at a meeting of the Boston Art club recently. He showed how the scientific and efficient business principles of a well-managed and conducted corporation can be applied to the administration of public affairs and public expenditures. This system in Norwood, he said, has resulted in a more democratic form of government and brought about a substantial saving in the expenditures of the town. The average citizen gets a better knowledge of affairs under that system, he said.

Norwood has an unpaid commission of five men. They determine the policies of the town, and paid experts under the leadership of a professional town manager carry them out after the citizens have passed upon them. It is not leadership under one man or a despotic form of government, but the intelligent response of American democracy to its responsibilities.

In the crisis this country is now facing the speaker said that the business men are rushing forward to offer their services to help the government carry on a war as efficiently as possible. If the business men would only display the same interest in the ordinary affairs of state, he declared, millions of dollars would be saved yearly by the application of their business knowledge to the affairs of towns, cities and states.

Help to Save the Trees.

The plea of the city forester for the aid of citizens in protecting our street trees from insect attacks should be heeded. A little individual effort on the part of householders would be of great assistance. It would cost but little in time or trouble to remove the conspicuous egg-masses of the tussock moth, one of the worst of our tree foes here which later hatch into voracious caterpillars, or to wrap the trunks with sticky fly-paper before the middle of May. The slight labor would be amply repaid in benefit to the trees and the riddance of fuzzy caterpillars crawling over porches and piazza furniture. Why not help a little, personally, instead of expecting the city to do it all? —Detroit Free Press.

The Rambler Roses.

One of the loved roses of summer is the Rambler rose, which rambles about, scattering its joyous self among hundreds of people in addition to those who grow it. Clambering over houses, both of rich and poor, it gladdens the eye of the tourist, and in great armloads it wanders from its home vine to the rose-loving, but not rose-possessing, to the sick, to the weary, to the tired business folk, to whom it brings a bit of relaxation. The rambling rose of June, which rambles all over to the joy of everyone—here's to the insect-less health of the Rambler rose, whether Dorothy Perkins, Pillar or whatever brand.

Accidental Pudding. Stopping a friend in a department store recently, a Glenwood avenue woman enthusiastically said: "I am so glad to meet you, because I have been wanting to ask you for a recipe." "If I have any recipe you like," the friend answered, "you surely shall have it." "It is the recipe for that pudding you served the last time I had dinner at your house." "Last week?" "Oh huh! What do you call it?" "Well, I think I should call that 'accidental pudding.'" "What an odd name!" "But it fits the dish exactly." "How do you make it?" "By accident." "Really?" "Yes. You see it was like this: I had baked a fine raisin pie and was taking it from the oven when I dropped it on the table where it lit right on the edge. I didn't want to waste it altogether, so I just scrambled it up a little more, put it in sauce dishes, and put some whipped cream on it. I am so glad you liked it." —Youngstown Telegram.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria. The Other Goose. The small girl stood outside the munition works at closing time. Presently she espied one of her father's workmates and approached him. "Please, Mr. Jones, mother says will you give this label to father when you see him? He's won a goose at the raffle at the Rake and Raspberry." "Right you are, missie! But he won't want a label; he's going to fetch it from the Rake and Raspberry and carry it home tonight." "Yes, I know. That's why mother's sent this addressed label. It ain't for the goose; it's to put on father!"

FRECKLES. New is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots. There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription ointment—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these honey spots. Simply get an ounce of ointment—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength ointment, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles. Don't Forget the Title. "What's your name, little lady?" CHURCH NOTES

ALL churches of Weymouth should be represented in this department, and every pastor is invited to send announcement directly to the "Gazette, Weymouth, Mass.," as EARLY each week as possible. Self addressed envelopes will be furnished upon request.

THIRD UNIVERSALIST CHURCH. The Y. P. C. U. held a May party Saturday evening in the vestry. Games were played, vocal solos by Miss Ina Leinonen, and readings by Miss Greta Garfield made up the evening's program. Sandwiches, cookies, candy and punch were served and May baskets were sold.

Sunday afternoon the pastor, Dr. C. C. Earle, will deliver a patriotic sermon at 2.30, which service the Men's Club are especially invited to attend. Following the service there will be a flag-raising under the auspices of the Y. P. C. U.

The Ladies' Circle met on Wednesday afternoon, with bean supper at 6 o'clock, served by Mrs. C. E. Stiles, Mrs. H. B. Stiles and Mrs. John Taylor.

PILGRIM CHURCH. Mrs. Geo. Beane, Mrs. Gardner Alden, Mrs. A. J. Sidelinger and Mrs. William Tyler were delegates on Tuesday to the semi-annual meeting of the Norfolk Association of Congregational churches held in South Braintree.

Next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock there will be a union service of the Pilgrim church and the First Church of Weymouth, Weymouth Heights, in the Pilgrim church. Frank F. Davidson of the Union Mission Rescue Society of Boston will deliver the address and Miss Marston, cornetist and song leader, will lead the singing.

OLD NORTH FIRST CHURCH. Communion will be observed at the morning service. The church will extend the right hand of fellowship and publicly welcome the men and women who have recently been voted into the body of our church-membership, and who have taken upon themselves the responsibilities and privileges of association with a local church. The persons to be received are Alan C. Emery, Mrs. Elsie C. Emery, Edward Emery, Charles Barrows, Mrs. May Barrows, Henry E. Hubbard and Mrs. Edith G. Hubbard.

The church has received a cordial invitation to attend a service to be held at the Pilgrim church, North Weymouth, Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The daily activities of the Boston Union Rescue Mission and the results achieved will be told by Frank F. Davidson. The soloist will be Miss Linda Marston.

"When the neighbors come together in a circle of prayer and happy fellowship" is the way the Thursday evening meeting was described. Here is a meeting where there is social life but more than that, here you will find a genuine expression of our life hid with God in Jesus Christ, and with it, the inspiration to Christian living and the larger hope. Thursday, May 10, at 7.30 P. M. in the chapel. Subject: "Jesus the True Vine," John 15, 1-13. Leader, Miss Louise E. Humphrey.

The Men's Bible Class has something for every man in the community. Alan C. Emery will lead Sunday. Twenty-two men have been present. Why not come in and help make it go before you are drafted. John B. Merrill and Parker T. Pearson will assist the leader at 12 o'clock in the good fellowship room. An excellent opportunity to learn the Bible in a free social way without fuss or formality. Come in and be seated.

Both the Y. P. S. C. E. and the Junior C. E. Society will hold consecration meetings Sunday. Young people's meeting at 6.30 o'clock. Subject: "Love." Leader, Mrs. Alice W. Merrill. At the Junior meeting Sunday afternoon at 3.45 the leader will be Miss Grace Stevenson, and the subject to be discussed is "Seeking After God."

SECOND UNIVERSALIST CHURCH. The pastor, Rev. Fred A. Line, will preach Sunday morning at 10.30 on the subject, "The Irreligious Life." Good music by vested choir, under the direction of Miss Deane.

Sunday school 12 o'clock, superintendent, Mrs. Gordon Willis. Young Men's class in charge of Fred Phillips.

Y. P. C. U. meeting 5.30; subject, "True Recreation and Harmful Amusements." Leader, Miss Herberta Stockwell. Plans are being made for the annual Y. P. C. U. banquet.

UNION CHURCH. Morning worship and sermon by the pastor, Sunday morning at 10.30; subject, "The church organized for service." The church school will meet at 12 o'clock; men's class in the gym. Christian Endeavor meeting at 6 o'clock. Mrs. O. A. Price will be the leader.

The big chorus choir will rehearse Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, for the Mothers' Day service.

FIRST METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

J. Homer Stutz, minister. Holy communion will be observed Sunday at 10.30. An opportunity will be given for any who hold letters to be received into fellowship with us.

Sunday school will follow at 12.15. All men of the parish are cordially invited to remain for the session of the Men's Adult Bible class which meets in the auditorium. Plans are now under way to organize this most important part of our work. Keep your eye upon developments. A men's rally will be held in the very near future.

Epworth League at 6.30; topic, "Boy Dreamers as World Builders;" leader, Franklin Pratt.

At 7.30 in the auditorium the minister begins a series of Sunday evening sermons under the general title "Obscure men of the Bible." The sub-topics are as follows: May 6, "Satan;" May 13, "Caleb;" May 20, "Barzillai;" May 27, "Mephiboseth;" June 3, "Ebed-Melech." Orchestra and special music each night. The public is invited. Prayer meeting Tuesday 7.30 P. M.

OLD SOUTH CHURCH.

Morning service next Sunday at 10.30 with sermon by the pastor and reception of new members. Sunday school at 12; men's class led by Deacon A. O. Crawford. Communion service at 2. Christian Endeavor combined service at 6.30. "Love," consecration meeting, Sarah Rix leader. Thursday, 7.45, prayer meeting. All welcome.

First Church of Christ, Scientist

Alpha Hall, corner Hancock street and Cottage avenue, Quincy. Morning service and Sunday school at 10.45. Subject: "Everlasting Punishment." Golden Text: Proverbs 11: 31. "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished; but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered." Wednesday at 7.45 P. M. a testimony and experience meeting. Reading room open from 11 A. M. to 5 P. M. week days, holidays excepted at 1246 Hancock street.

UNION CHURCH, WEYMOUTH AND EAST BRAINTREE.

Morning worship Sunday at 10.30. The minister will preach on "Following the Leader." Sunday school will meet at 12 o'clock. Communion will be at 4 o'clock. The regular mid-week service will be Thursday evening at 7.30.

THE WHITE CHURCH.

Sunday services at the "White Church" will include regular and special features of interest. At 10.30 morning worship and communion. Under our recently adopted plan, the celebration of the Lord's Supper is the beautiful, central interest of this service. As such, it becomes the more impressive and helpful to our church people, while we also observe an increasing attendance of those who have not entered into church fellowship.

The Church Bible School convenes at noon. The Brotherhood Bible class will have for the subject of discussion: "Applied Christianity, and the pardon of convicts."

The Christian Endeavor Society will meet at 4 P. M. (Juniors) and 6 P. M. (Seniors).

The people's evening service, at 7 o'clock in the auditorium offers a popular Sunday night program. A stereopticon prelude will present a group of the most notable and picturesque scenes which greet the eye of the world-traveler. It will be a brief and pointed address upon the topic: Christianity or an Adequate Substitute.

The entire service will require little more than an hour, and it will bring a soul-uptift to those who attend. A cordial welcome is extended to all. Wednesday evening May 9, Rev. Edwin W. Bishop, D. D. of Brockton will deliver his brilliant illustrated lecture: "Three weeks on a Camel." It is a vivid account of his journey across the desert to Mt. Sinai. If you know the man this announcement is enough. If you do not know him this is your opportunity.

The Friendship class are managing the lecture. Its proceeds are to be devoted to our church Sunday evening fund. "Help the class to help the church."

TRINITY CHURCH.

"The unrevealed thought of Jesus" will be the subject of Rev. William Hyde's sermon at Trinity Episcopal church Sunday morning.

MISSION OF THE HOLY NATIVITY.

Sunday, May 6, Sunday School at 9.45. Morning service and celebration of holy communion at 10.30. Service of baptism at 12 o'clock. Rev. William W. Love, pastor.

Next Tuesday evening, May 8, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leach will entertain the Lovell's Corner Improvement Association at their home.

Alonzo Pratt is driving a new Buick roadster.

Tuesday evening the Epworth League held their monthly business meeting, after which games and refreshments were enjoyed.

Ralph Martin of Somerville is the guest of relatives.

Julian Rea is at home from the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst, for the summer.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held in the church vestry Wednesday evening.

Master Fred Johnson of Quincy has been visiting relatives here the past week.

There will be a business meeting of the Sunday school board held after the prayer meeting this evening.

Mrs. James Smith spent Wednesday with friends at West Bridgewater.

Miss Gladys Tirrell, who has been visiting relatives at Stoughton for a number of weeks, has returned to her home.

Harold Belcher has accepted a position at the store of William Newcomb, South Weymouth.

Good pay for women. See Ad in another column.

Patriotic citizens of Braintree are doing home guard duty without recompense, thereby saving the town $300 a week. Drills are held twice a week.

One or more days will be set aside for registration which is expected to begin NOT LATER THAN MAY 15. Each man within the age limits specified, whether single, married or with dependents, WILL BE EXPECTED TO REGISTER. ANY MAN FAILING TO REGISTER WILL LAY HIMSELF LIABLE TO A HEAVY PENALTY.

Secretary of State Langtry and Adjutant General Sweetser probably will oversee the registration and drafting of the men in Massachusetts. The War Department will send cards to the State House in Boston, and officials there will distribute the cards to all cities in the state in much the same way that ballots are distributed at election times. Each city and town in the State will be required to present its quota in proportion to its population to make up the body of 37,026 men that the Bay State must raise.

The drafting will begin after all of the men in each city and town have signed their registration cards. Secretary of War Baker favors adopting THE JURY WHEEL SYSTEM IN SELECTING THE MEN, who, as soon as selected and passed by the medical examiners, will be ordered to concentration camps in various parts of the State.

When Nancy Dances

Nancy's mother has just finished making her a dance frock which she is to wear at the final party of her dancing class. It is filmy and crisp enough to make a gauze-winged butterfly envious—if butterflies could harbor envy—and it is exactly suited to the graceful and slender little maid and her gently frolicsome dancing. Long will Nancy remember the glory of this frock and the painstaking work and planning that make it such a success.

The frock is made of swiss-organza flouncing, very sheer, very white and very wide. The edge of the flouncing is scalloped, and each scallop frames a wreath of dainty embroidery, made of small leaves and a single blossom. Above this edge there are small, widely scattered dots and above them a narrow border of little embroidered blossoms and leaves. The scalloped edge appears only on the skirt, for the discriminating taste of Nancy's mother teaches her that much decoration is out of place in the dress of little children.

The skirt is laid in shallow, even plaits at the top and joined to a plain "baby" waist in which the embroidered border, appears just above the waistline. The sleeves are merely short, pointed flounces, edged with fine val lace whipped on to a rolled hem. A little cape hanging in points from the shoulders and at the front and back, veils the embroidery in the bodice and is edged with val lace. The Dutch neck is cut square and finished with a fine, narrow edging of lace also.

The sash, which suits so well the daintiness of the dress, and the Hoyant bow, which holds Nancy's hair, are of wide, soft satin ribbon in light sea green. Just why this particular color and shade are so convincing as the best possible choice for a gossamer dress, is not to be fathomed—but they are.

Two petticoats, joined to a single body to make them hang even, are worn under the frock and they are made of organza edged with val lace. No matter what splendor may make little hearts sing at the party, nothing can shine down the beauty of Nancy's dress.

Vogue for Beads.

The vogue for beads has invaded the sweater world. Belts and sashes of beads are used to encircle the waists of the comfortable sports coats.

Lace Crochet in Night Gowns

However much we admire and wonder at the marvelous ingenuity that adapts machinery to lace making, and however pretty machine-made lace may be, they can never hold the same place in the regard of women that hand-made laces hold. This is the reason that everyone is so industriously crocheting and knitting and making tatting in these busy days. Even business women, on elevated trains or cars, going to and from offices, often prefer lace-making to reading, and probably have about as much definite knowledge of current events as those who devote themselves everyday to newspapers. At all events they have something to show for their time.

Hand-made laces are more durable than those made by machines—as a rule—and they make the most acceptable of gifts to woman friends. Just now yokes for gowns, or corset covers, or combinations, appear to have seized the attention of those who know how to crochet. The time spent on them is well invested for they will wear almost a lifetime if made of strong, mercerized cotton thread. Even those of finer threads are strong.

The photograph shown here fails to do justice to the handsome nightdress made of white japonica silk, joined to a yoke and sleeves of crochet lace. The yoke is not an unusual pattern, so that anyone familiar with the work will know how to make one like it. A beading and scalloped edge, made in the crochet, finishes the neck and sleeves. Narrow, light blue satin ribbon is run through the beading and knotted loops of the ribbon form the pretty rosettes that set off the sleeves and yoke. A little edge, in the same shade of blue as the ribbon is crocheted to the scallops.

A yoke of this kind is likely to out-wear any of the sheer materials used for the skirt of the gown, but skirts are easy to replace.

Sleeves Appearing for Evening.

A noticeable feature of the dresses seen in a tour of an evening in New York was the sleeves, some of which were quite long and no gown noticed was sleeveless. An occasional non-decollete dress was noted. One elaborate one of fine black lace had the upper part of the corsage covering the neck and shoulders with one thickness of black chiffon, with sleeves also of the chiffon. The cloak accompanying this was of white satin trimmed from the bottom to about the waistline with bands of black satin of graduated widths, the last being about an inch deep.

Using Bandanna Cottons.

The introduction of the Southern bandanna cottons has been one of the results of Americans looking to their own country for ideas to incorporate into French designs. A leading milliner of New York got in the Southern resorts the inspiration to introduce the brilliant cottons of that country into fashionable apparel. Nothing would more delight the Southern mills than a widespread use of the materials which they make in such beautiful designs and such remarkably good weaving.

An All-Day Crepe Costume.

A frock of crepe de chine with a coat to match, both covered with a stitchery done in a striking design, will serve for the street and for any indoor affair before seven o'clock.

SAVORY DISHES FROM ITALY.

Our simple manner of cooking macaroni, one of the commonest of Italian dishes, is not a simple dish when prepared by them.

Macaroni a la Ristori.—Wipe a pound of lean beef, add a fourth of a pound of raw ham cut in dice, and a large onion sliced, wash and remove the stems from a pound of tomatoes cut in small pieces; place all together in a large saucepan with two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, a sprig of parsley and a bay leaf; simmer gently for two hours, then add one pint of boiling water and continue to cook until the sauce becomes reduced and thickened into a mass in which the different ingredients are well blended. Cook the macaroni until tender, drain and place a layer in a serving dish, sprinkle generously with Parmesan cheese and cover with the meat sauce. Repeat until the dish is filled. Cover closely and let stand in the oven for five minutes until well blended.

Chicken Livers With Mushrooms.—Cook the livers (six of them) with the same number of coarsely chopped mushrooms in a cupful of stock for a half hour; cool and drain. Prepare a batter with two tablespoonfuls of flour, a little milk, and salt and pepper to taste, and one beaten egg. Add the livers and mushrooms and drop by spoonfuls in a little hot fat in a frying pan. Cook until a golden brown on each side and drain thoroughly before serving.

Chestnut Creams.—Boil, shell and skin a pound of large chestnuts. Pass them through a sieve, add the juice of two oranges, sugar to taste, and add a half pint of heavy cream, whipped. Serve in sherbet cups garnished with whole chestnuts and a cherry or a small cube of jelly of bright color.

Cooked chestnuts and orange rind cooked in a sirup, using only the yellow of the rind, then served with bits of fresh orange and mayonnaise on water cress or head lettuce makes a most delightful salad, which we can appreciate on this side of the water.

It's no in books, it's no in lear
To make men truly blest;
If happiness has not her seat
And center in the breast,
We may be wise or rich or great,
But never can be blest.
—Burns.

CHICKEN FOR TWO.

In a family of two, poultry is not as often used as desired because it is too much meat to be cooked at once. In some markets a half a chicken may be purchased but even when this is not possible a fowl may be spread over several days without becoming monotonous. For one meal the drumsticks may be cooked, these from a six to eight pound fowl will furnish sufficient meat to satisfy any appetite. After stewing them in a little boiling water to keep in all the juices and flavors; brown them in a little butter and serve with drawn butter sauce and baked potatoes. The wings and neck may be stewed and prepared in the form of a small chicken pie with the giblets made into a rich sauce to serve with it. Now the breast may be cooked, served in a white sauce as cream chicken or thinly sliced and used for sandwich filling or combined with celery and apple with boiled dressing making a most delicious salad. The second joints may be cooked and browned as were the drumsticks or they may be cooked to make a fine broth, removing the bones and add vegetables and cook in a casserole, adding rice or macaroni.

Chicken Jelly.—Take one chicken breast, a pint of stock in which the chicken was cooked, and a package of gelatin. Dissolve the gelatin, add onion juice, celery salt or various seasonings, add the breast and mix all together. Pour in a mold and when hardened serve as a salad with dressing.

After all the chicken has been consumed but the bones, they too, may be stewed after cracking them. Cover them with cold water, add a slice of onion and cook until all the flavor has been extracted. Strain, add a little cooked rice or barley, one or two beaten eggs, and some hot milk or thin cream with plenty of seasonings and you have a most delicious cream of chicken soup.

The thrifty housewife in these days, scalds the feet and skins them when they are cooked in the broth after all are well trimmed. They contain quite a little gelatin and add to the flavor of the soup.

For an invalid's meal a bit of broiled chicken breast served on toast is a most dainty meal. It may be broiled on a bit of buttered letter paper, wrapped firmly, and pinned together, thus saving all the fine flavor. The small fillets are more tender than the larger ones and two may be served if one does not seem sufficient.

SEASONABLE SALADS.

Mix cream cheese with finely chopped peanuts and a little cream, mold in small balls and dust until red, with paprika, place three on lettuce leaves and garnish with slices of radish or have them cut in the form of tulips. Serve with any salad dressing desired.

Cauliflower Salad.—Trim the stalk and outside leaves of a fresh cauliflower and soak in salted water for 30 minutes. Then wash carefully and cook in salted water until tender. Remove from the fire and when cold carefully remove the center and fill the space with cooked peas drained and seasoned. Pour French dressing over all, garnish with lettuce leaves and serve cold.

Lemon Jelly and Cabbage Salad.—Take a package of lemon jelly, add two cupfuls of chopped or shredded cabbage, a little shredded onion, two green peppers and one red one, mix well and mold. Serve with mayonnaise on lettuce.

Apple Salad.—Arrange sliced pineapple on lettuce leaves and in the center put a few shrimps, around this put a circle of chopped apple and celery and garnish with mayonnaise made pink with paprika.

Tomato and Cucumber Salad.—While these vegetables are still expensive, two or three tomatoes with one cucumber will serve several people if carefully cut. A firm, ripe tomato, if small, may be cut in halves, thus serving two, or, if large, cut in slices for three or four. Arrange these pieces of tomato on head lettuce and heap on each slice a spoonful of finely minced cucumber mixed with finely minced southern onion, then serve with either French or mayonnaise dressing.

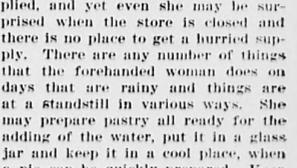

A few dates and raisins added to Waldorf salad makes a change and is liked. Take twice as much apples as celery and a few nuts with a handful of dates and raisins, mix well and serve with French dressing on lettuce or in nests of water cress which is especially good at this season.

Poinsettia Salad.—Small, bright, red tomatoes may be cut in sections like a flower, either six or eight petals, and the center filled with a yellow dressing, served on lettuce or water cress, it makes a most attractive salad.

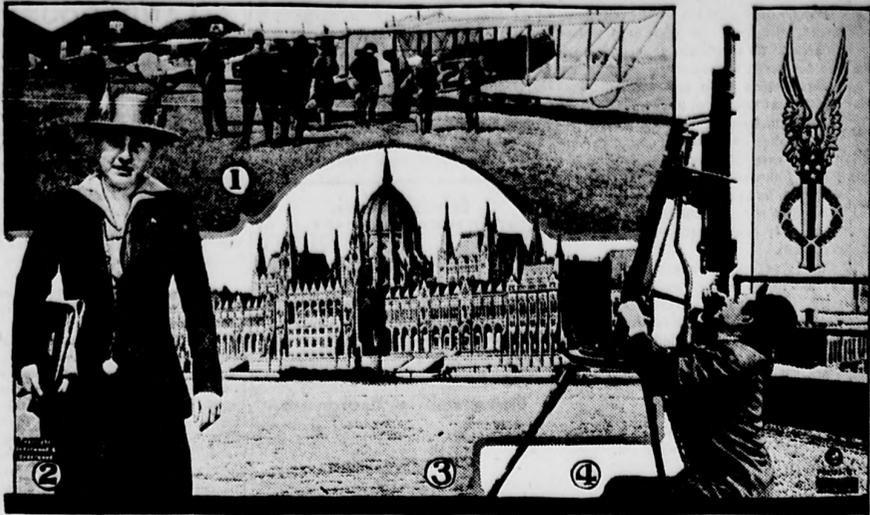

There is not a creature from England's klag
To the peasant that delves the soil,
That knows half the pleasures the seasons bring,
If he have not his share of toil.

WHEN FRIENDS DROP IN TO TEA.

The housewife who keeps a few things on her emergency shelf for the unexpected is never a flurried, hurried and anxious hostess. If she is a woman who lives in a small town, next door to a grocery, it is not so vital that she keep supplied, and yet even she may be surprised when the store is closed and there is no place to get a hurried supply. There are any number of things that the forehanded woman does on days that are rainy and things are at a standstill in various ways. She may prepare pastry all ready for the adding of the water, put it in a glass jar and keep it in a cool place, when a pie can be quickly prepared. Keep on this emergency shelf a jar of bread crumbs, some finely flavored cheese, grated, several cans of soup, a box of sardines, and salted codfish, as well as cans of salmon and tuna fish, a bottle of olives, a box of salted crackers, a few fruit cookies and gingersnaps, a can of cream, jars of bacon and dried beef and other dainties which may appeal to the taste. These will all keep, except perhaps the crumbs and cheese. A can of boiled salad dressing is always a help in time of need; homemade pickles, catsup, preserves and jellies are always in order, with a few nuts ready to use, the dishes one may prepare will be many, and the care is all over when the shelf is well supplied. It should be a rule never to use one of these things without replacing it at the earliest opportunity. Another fine arrangement for the hostess who is apt to be disturbed at a sudden onslaught of company, is to have a carefully prepared menu (or three or four) with all the necessary recipes for preparing the dishes carefully written out on the sheet and hung where a glance will tell how to go about the preparation. Your meal may be partly prepared when the guests arrive, but with a glance at your menu lists you will be able to supplement or add something to your meal which will make it more suitable.

The Masterpiece.

Times were bad in the humble home of the unappreciated futurist painter. But there was one last hope. An exhibition of the latest eccentric art was to be held at one of the big galleries, and entries were invited.

Our impoverished genius decided that he would submit his "Isle of Dogs on a Foggy Day," and ordered the carrier to call for it. Arriving home, he was informed by his wife that the carrier had called and collected the picture; but just then a package in the corner caught his eye.

"Arabella! There's my 'Isle of Dogs!' It hasn't gone! What package did you give the man?" "Oh, I gave him that one in the corner of your studio! I thought that was the one!" He flung his arms dramatically upward.

"Then we're ruined! All hope of winning a prize has gone! That thing was an old bit of canvas that I let the baby dab on!"

But lo, next morning came a wire: "Your untitled canvas submitted for futurist exhibition has been awarded the first prize. We propose to entitle it, 'Jellied Eels in Torment.'"

Rumor Has It

That Officer Hoffes and Fireman Dexheimer are thinking of writing a book on that Gazette-Washington trip. Go to it!

That most everybody who attended and (most everybody did) the lecture at Bates Opera House on Sunday night, were thoroughly enlightened on the real meaning of the war. Enthusiasm ran high especially in the young folks, as Peter MacQueen who is a great favorite with all, delivered his lecture in an interesting and forcible manner that at times brought outbreaks of patriotism, and again shudder-stillness. The feelings of a packed house swayed through jollity, seriousness and horrors. The High School orchestra and Mrs. Franklin P. Whitten were well received and applauded. The collection was very gratifying to the D. A. R.'s through whose efforts the public were given an opportunity of learning from one who has been on the battlefields, what and why this war is. The proceeds are to be used for preparedness work.

That the pony expresses did one big business on Monday. Enough came in the last day to last a day or so.

That a man is wanted to do some work at Webb Park and cannot be found. Everybody has a job.

That one by one young men are leaving town and enlisting in some branch of Uncle Sam's fighting machine. Hats off to those who take the step voluntarily. It is time for all to say "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death."

That many who took the trip 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea at Bates Opera House on Wednesday night, continued the trip in their sleep. Who wants a job on a sub-marine?

That last Sunday more than one horse lost his seventh day rest, and more than one man gave up his extra two hours' sleep, in order to till the soil, and carry out his part of the Nation's preparedness program. May your crops be bountiful.

That some of the Braintree "boys" had their first experience at real guard duty Sunday night. Some looked fit in the morning and some did not. Well boys, you will soon be hardened.

That if everything goes much higher, the Martians will be able to reach out and help themselves. Some things are up out of sight now.

That a few more wise men learn of the Gazette each week and profit thereby. Watch the Ads grow. There is a reason WHY.

That some of Edwin's "body guards" took a rest last Sunday, but promise to be on hand next Sunday. Why not swear them in, and let them do guard duty on the bridge? They seem to be struck on the place and they might as well be useful as ornamental.

That some of Uncle Sam's letter boxes are getting rather unsightly and should be replaced. You do not mind the looks of the one on the railroad station so much after looking at the station.

That the price of $6.00 for hacks and autos is all right, but what good is the price if you have to die to buy at such a reasonable figure. Why not give us a chance while we can use them?

That the Gazette Business Directory is fast filling up. A good thing! Get aboard and ride with us up Prosperity Avenue. Everybody is looking to see who is who and what he has to sell.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

For the week of May 7 at B. F. Keith's Theatre one of the most extraordinary attractions of the season is offered in Adele Ritchie, the singing comedienne, who has not appeared on the stage since her marriage to Guy Bates Post, the star of "The Masquerader," some time ago. Miss Ritchie appeared recently at the Actor's Fund Benefit, for one performance only, and scored such a hit that she was prevailed to return to the vaudeville stage for positively one week only. This engagement will be played at B. F. Keith's Theatre in Boston. Miss Ritchie will wear some wonderful Paris gowns, and her act is expected to prove one of the bright spots in the performance.

Tremont Theatre, Boston.

Next Monday the Cohan and Harris Comedians will begin the ninth week of the engagement in Boston at the Tremont Theatre of "A Tailor-Made Man." Not in years has there appeared a play that evoked such profound enthusiasm and praise as has been bestowed upon this veritable gem of comedy construction; and seldom has the press of Boston agreed with such unanimity upon the excellence of the players as they have done in their laudations of the histrionic artistry of the Cohan & Harris comedians who give life and vitality to this humorously absorbing play now.
"A Tailor-Made Man" is from the pen of Harry James Smith and an example of a genuine American comedy that appeals with a surety characteristic demands of an energetic American mind. It is a big red blooded exposition of what a man of wits can do in a country that is receptive to the value of grit and perspicacity.

Cornelius Tirrell.

Had Cornelius Tirrell lived until, January 18, 1919, he would have been a centenarian. He was born January 18, 1819, and for nearly 40 years he lived in the same house on Pond street South Weymouth. At the age of 9 years he began to learn the trade of a shoemaker in his father's shop and two years later he made his first case of children's shoes. Mr. Tirrell followed his trade until 25 years ago when he began to manufacture heels in his own shop, continuing until his retirement from active service about eight years ago.

Mr. Tirrell was a staunch Democrat and cast his first vote for James K. Polk, and at every Presidential election since that time, voted for the Democratic candidate for President of the United States. He had held many town offices.
Mr. Tirrell was twice married, his second wife, who now survives him, being Mrs. Mary M. Walker, to whom he was wedded February 23, 1878. He leaves two children, Mrs. Howard W. Spear, and C. W. Tirrell.

Mr. Tirrell's grandfather fought in the French and Indian wars. His grandfather served in the Revolutionary War and his father was at the battle of Bunker Hill. Mr. Tirrell volunteered for the Civil War, but was refused on account of his age.

Funeral services were held in the Old South Congregational church at South Weymouth Sunday afternoon.

Leary—Vitale

Mabelle Florence Vitale, daughter of Charles P. Vitale, of 1040 Main street, and Charles H. Leary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leary of 150 Park avenue, were united in marriage at St. Francis Xavier church by Rev. Dennis P. Crimmins, April 18. Lewis Boelenght, nephew of the bride, was the best man. Miss Mildred Leary, sister of the groom, was the bridesmaid. The bride wore a black and white traveling suit. The bridesmaid wore a gown of pearl gray. The groom's gift to the best man was a set of gold cuff links. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a cameo pendant. The young couple left on a wedding trip to Garden City and New York in a motor car. On their return they will reside on Pleasant street.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Douglas Fairbanks, one of the highest salaried stars in motion pictures, and in many respects the most engaging personality in motion pictures, will appear for the first time in Boston, exclusively at the Boston Theatre, in his newest five part comedy drama, "In Again, Out Again," the week of May 7. Mr. Fairbanks today stands in the very front rank of film stars. "In Again, Out Again" is a play specially adapted to Mr. Fairbanks' style, and it is full of laughs and heart interest from start to finish.

STABBED IN THE BACK.

HOW MANY WEYMOUTH READERS HAVE HAD THOSE SUDDEN TWINGES.
Have you ever had a "crick" in the back?
Does your back ache with a dull, heavy, draggy throb?
Is it hard to straighten up after stooping?
Hard to arise from a chair or turn in bed?
Is the urine dark colored? Passages irregular?
When your kidneys need attention, use a tested kidney remedy.
Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has proved its merit.
Convincing testimony in the following statement:
J. W. Snow, gardener, 73 Chard street, East Weymouth, says: "I strained my back lifting two years ago and it affected my kidneys. My back ached and was lame and sore in the morning. When I straightened quickly, a stitch took me in my back. I had to get up often at night to pass the kidney secretions and they were highly colored and burned. I had headaches and dizzy spells. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and used them. Two boxes of Doan's entirely cured me and I haven't had any kidney trouble since."
Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that cured Mr. Snow. Foster-Milburn Co. Props. Buffalo, N. Y. 18-19

South Shore Musical Club.
A reception and musicale in honor of John Orth and Mrs. Emily Selinger was given at the home of Mrs. Robert Hoffman of East Weymouth to the active members of the South Shore Morning Musicales on Thursday evening, April 26. In the receiving line were the officers of the club, president Mrs. Grace Mayhew Putnam, vice-president Mrs. Josephine Avery, treasurer Miss Mary Dyer, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Sarah B. Bicknell, the guests of honor and the hostess.

The musicale was inaugurated with the ensemble number America, the accompaniment being played by Robert S. Hoffman, Jr., violin; Mary Frances Hoffman, piano, and Emma Clapp, organ.

Piano solos were rendered by Emma Clapp Evans. Songs were artistically given by a trio composed of Adelaide M. Whitten, Emma Shuflet Moore and A. Gertrude Worcester. Mrs. Susan Avery, accompanied by Miss Emma Clapp sang and Roscoe R. Ricker of Quincy gave violin solos accompanied by Miss A. M. Evans. There were also piano solos by Mary Frances Hoffman and a group of songs by Mrs. Charles E. Holdgate who was accompanied by Miss Marion F. Arnold.

Music and poetry with illustrations was the subject chosen by Mr. Orth and Miss Selinger with the former at the piano. The Star Spangled Banner an ensemble number concluded a most interesting program which was greatly enjoyed.

The house decorations were pleasingly attractive, lilies, carnations and roses with an abundance of the national colors in evidence presented a beautiful appearance. The centes piece by Mrs. Harry M. Stetson was especially worthy of mention and from the ceiling was suspended the dove of peace bearing the Stars and Stripes.

Refreshments were served, the pourers being Mrs. Grace Mayhew Putnam, Mrs. S. Josephine Avery, Miss Emily Solinger and Mrs. Helen Allen Hunt. The ushers were Miss Emma Clapp and Mrs. Adelaide Whittenden. The function concluded the season's program of The South Shore Morning Musicales.

To Farm in Weymouth
Twenty-four men from the Boston Customhouse, in charge of Hon. Joseph A. Maynard, surveyor of the port of Boston, and William C. Earle, weigher and gauger of the port, bearing picks, hoes and shovels, marched from the Weymouth Heights station Saturday afternoon to the top of King Oak Hill, the highest point of land in the town, and there with a tractor plow, began the cultivation of eight acres of land.

The men will raise potatoes, corn, beans and other vegetables for "patriotic purposes." Every holiday, Saturday afternoon and Sunday, when the law allows, and on every other possible occasion, men will be at work on the farm until the crop is gathered in the Fall.

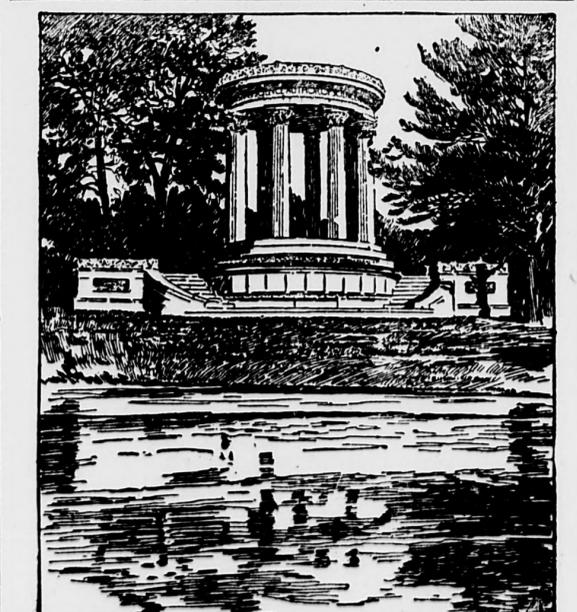

Besides Surveyor Maynard and Weigher Earle the tillers of the soil included Captain Azra L. Phelps, Sec. Joseph J. Curran, Thomas H. Welch, George F. Doherty, John J. Strong, Patrick P. Cotter, William J. Downey, Arthur Long, John P. Bartlett, G. M. Homans, M. F. Donovan, E. M. Bickmore, J. F. Cutler, J. J. Devlin, Jeremiah Sullivan, J. Frank Elmore, John McPartland, William Bolton, John Wilson, Edward Ashe, Earnest E. Mitchel and G. E. Griffin.

The plot of land is rented from the Putnam estate and is within ten minutes walk of the Weymouth Heights railroad station. To pay for dressing, seeds, rent of ground and other initial expenses, each "farmer" contributes $25, being confident that the investment is a first-class one.

At sundown in compliance with the farmers' code, the men quit and took the train for home.

Unique Memorial Completed

Mary Baker Eddy Memorial, Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge, Mass.

The beautiful memorial to Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, has been turned over to The Christian Science Board of Directors by Elbert S. Barlow of New York City who held the contract for its construction.

The memorial, which is at Mt. Auburn cemetery, Cambridge, Mass., has required over a year and a half to complete. The fund for its construction, amounting to over $150,000, was first announced by the directors in June, 1911, and was some time ago fully subscribed. These contributions have been made as expressions of sentiment by Christian Scientists throughout the world.

The site on which the memorial is located is not only one of great natural beauty, but on account of its grade has rendered possible a more architecturally than would be possible on a perfect level lot. The plot, which is approximately 80 feet square, slopes gradually from the level of the roadway to the lake with a drop of about ten feet. The memorial consists of a circular open colonnade of eight columns, resting upon a stylobate of three steps, surrounded on the front by a circular platform slightly above the natural grade, from which platform a double flight of steps leads to a lower platform at the lake's edge. The scheme has no prototype and is merely a screen of columns open to the sky, inclosing a flower-grown circle.

The material used for the memorial is Bethel white granite, the inscription in the frieze and upon the top of the pylons being of white bronze set deep into the stone work. The detail, which on account of the size of the reproduction is only indicated, is entirely floral in form and free in treatment, the wild rose and the morning-glory being used as the main motives. It is interesting architecturally to note that while it is extremely free in treatment and not at all conventional, it is generally very classic in feeling. The extreme width of the memorial is about fifty feet, and the colonnade is eighteen feet in diameter. The columns themselves are fifteen feet in height and are similar in general character to those in the Clepsydra of Andronicus of Cyrrhus. The large pylons were exhibited at the American Institute of Architecture in New York a short time ago and experts pronounced them the finest pieces of carved granite ever executed.

The architect is Egerton Swartwout of New York City who designed the new George Washington memorial the new Missouri state capitol and the new Federal building in Denver.

PRUDENCE OF THE PARSONAGE by ETHEL HUESTON

ILLUSTRATED BY W. C. TANNER (Copyright, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.)

It did look horrible, from above as well as below. But Jerry, when he felt the first light twinge as Connie lifted the rope, foresaw what was coming and was ready for it. As he went down, he grabbed a firm hold on the branch on which he had stood, then he dropped to the next, and held again. On the lowest limb he really clung for fifteen seconds, and took in his bearings. Connie had dropped the rope when the twins screamed, so he had nothing more to fear from her. He saw Prudence, white, with wild eyes, both arms stretched out toward him.

"O. K., Prue," he called, and then he dropped. He landed on his feet, a little jolted, but none the worse for his fall. He ran at once to Prudence. "I'm all right," he cried, really alarmed by the white horror in her face. "Prudence! Prudence!" Then her arms dropped, and with a brave but feeble smile, she swayed a little. Jerry took her in his arms. "Sweetheart!" he whispered. "Little sweetheart! Do—do you love me so much, dearest?"

Prudence raised her hands to his face, and looked intensely into his eyes, all the sweet loving soul of her shining in her own. And Jerry kissed her.

The twins scrambled down from the maple, speechless and cold with terror, and saw Prudence and Jerry! Then they saw Connie, staring at them with interest and amusement.

"I think we'd better go to bed, all three of us," declared Lark sturdily. And they set off heroically around the house. But at the corner Carol turned.

"Take my advice and go into the woodshed," she called, "for all the Aveyers are looking out of their windows." Prudence did not hear, but he drew her swiftly to the darkest corner of the side porch—and history repeated itself once more!

At twelve, Jerry went upstairs to bed, his lips tingling with the fervent tenderness of her parting kiss. He stood at his window, looking soberly into the moonlit parsonage yard. "She is an angel, a pure, sweet, unselfish little angel," he whispered, and his voice was broken, and his eyes were wet, "and she is going to be my wife! Oh, God, teach me how to be good to her, and help me make her as happy as she deserves."

At two o'clock, thinking again the soft shy words she had whispered to him, he dropped lightly asleep and dreamed of her. With the first pale streaks of daylight stealing into his room he awoke. It was after four o'clock. A little later—just a few minutes later—he heard a light tap on his door. It came again, and he bounded out of bed.

"Prudence! Is anything wrong?" "Hush, Jerry, not so loud!" And what a strange and weary voice. "Come downstairs, will you? I want to tell you something. I'll wait at the foot of the stairs. Be quiet—do not wake father and the girls. Will you be down soon?"

"In two minutes!" And in two minutes he was down, agonizingly anxious, knowing that something was wrong. Prudence was waiting for him, and as he reached the bottom step she clutched his hands desperately.

"Jerry," she whispered. "I—forgive me—I honestly— Oh, I didn't think what I was saying last night. You were so dear, and I was so happy, and for a while I really believed we could belong to each other. But I can't, you know. I've promised papa and the girls a dozen times that I would never marry. Don't you see how it is? I must take it back."

Jerry smiled a little, it must be admitted. This was so like his conscientious little Prudence! "Dearest," he said gently. "You love me. Your father would never allow you to sacrifice yourself like that. The girls would not hear of it. They want you to be happy. And you can't be happy without me, can you?"

Suddenly she crushed close to him. "Oh, Jerry," she sobbed, "I will never be happy again, I know. But—it is right for me to stay here and be the mother in the parsonage. It is wicked of me to want you more than all of them. Don't you see it is? They haven't any mother. They haven't anyone but me. Of course, they would not allow it, but they will not know anything about it. I must do it myself. And father especially must never know. I want you to go away this morning before breakfast and—never come again."

She clung to him as she said this, but her voice did not falter. "And you must not write to me any more. For, oh, Jerry, if I see you again I can never let you go, I know it. Will you do this for me?"

"You are nervous and excited," he said tenderly. "Let's wait until after breakfast. Then we'll talk it all over with your father, and it shall be as he says. Won't that be better?" "Oh, no. For father will say what-such horrible wrong. "Good-by, sweet-heart. Remember, I will be waiting. Whenever you send, I will come." He stepped outside, and closed the door. Prudence stood motionless, her hands clenched, until she could no longer hear his footsteps. Then she dropped on the floor, and lay there, face downward, until she heard Fairy moving in her room upstairs. Then she went into the kitchen and built the fire for breakfast.

CHAPTER XII. She Comes to Grief.

Fairy was one of those buoyant, warm-blooded girls to whom sleep is indeed the great restorer. Now she stood in the kitchen door, tall, cheeks glowing, eyes sparkling, and smiled at her sister's solemn back.

"You are the little mousey, Prue," she said, in her full rich voice. "I didn't hear you come to bed last night, and I didn't hear you getting out this morning. Why, what is the matter?" For Prudence had turned her face toward her sister, and it was so white and so unnatural that Fairy was shocked.

"Prudence! You are sick! Go to bed and let me get breakfast. Here, get out of this, and I will—" "There's nothing the matter with me. I had a headache, and did not sleep, but I am all right now. Are the girls up yet?"

Fairy eyed her suspiciously. "Jerry is out unusually early, too, isn't he? His door is open." "Jerry has gone, Fairy." Prudence's back was presented to view once more, and Prudence was stirring the oatmeal with vicious energy. "He left early this morning—I suppose he is half-way to Des Moines by now."

"Oh!" Fairy's voice was noncommittal. "When is he coming back?" "He isn't coming back. Please hurry, Fairy, and call the others. The oatmeal is ready." Fairy went soberly up the stairs, ostensibly to call her sisters.

"Girls," she began, carefully closing the door of their room behind her. "Jerry has gone, and isn't coming back any more. And for goodness' sake, don't keep asking questions about it. Just eat your breakfast as usual, and have a little tact."

"A lovers' quarrel," suggested Lark, her eyes glittered greedily. "Nothing of the sort. And don't keep staring at Prue, either. And do not keep talking about Jerry all the time. You mind me, or I will tell papa."

"That's funny," said Carol thoughtfully. "We saw them kissing each other like mad in the back yard last night—and this morning he has gone to return no more. They are crazy." "Kissing! In the back yard! What are you talking about?"

Carol explained, and Fairy looked still more thoughtful and perturbed. She opened the door, and called out to them in a loud and breezy voice: "Hurry, girls, for breakfast is ready, and there's no time to waste in a parsonage on Sunday morning." Then she added in a whisper, "And don't you mention Jerry, and don't ask Prudence what makes her so pale, or you'll catch it!"

Then she went to her father's door. "Breakfast is ready, papa," she called clearly. She turned the knob softly, and peeped in. "May I come in a minute?" Standing close beside him, she told him all she knew of what had happened.

"Prudence is ghastly, father, just ghastly. And she can't talk about it yet, so be careful what you say, will you?" And it was due to Fairy's kindly admonitions that the parsonage family took the departure of Jerry so calmly.

That was the beginning of Prudence's bitter winter, when the brightest sunshine was cheerless and dreary, and when even the laughter of her sisters smote harshly upon her ears. She tried to be as always, but in her eyes the wounded look lingered, and her face grew so pale and thin that her father and Fairy, anxiously watching, were filled with grave concern. She remained almost constantly in the parsonage, reading very little, sitting most of her leisure time staring out the windows.

Fairy had tried to win her confidence, and had failed. "You are a darling, Fairy, but I really do not want to talk about it. Oh, no, indeed, it is all my own fault. I told him to go, and not come again. No, you are wrong, Fairy, I do not regret it. I do not want him to come any more."

Mr. Starr, too, had tried, "Prudence," he said gently, "you know very often men do things that to women seem wrong and wicked. And maybe they are! But men and women are different by nature, my dear, and we must remember that. I have satisfied myself that Jerry is good, and clean, and manly. I do not think you should let any foolishness of his in the past come between you now."

(TO BE CONTINUED.) Rare Branches. The thing next in beauty to a tree in full leaf is a tree bare; its every exquisiteness of shape revealed, and its hold on the sky seeming so unspeakably assured; and, more than the beautiful of shape and the outlining on the sky, is the grace of prophecy and promise which every slender twig bears and reveals in its tiny gray buds.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

"Baby Talk" Rebuked. "Jack, look at the nice bow-wow," said a mother to her three-year-old son, out for a walk. Jack looked as directed, then up at his mother, and said solemnly, "I call that a dog."

YANKEES FEAR LEFT-HANDED PITCHERS

TAFT AS BASEBALL FAN

Years ago while the Red Sox were playing in Washington the players were taken to the White House and introduced to (then) President Taft.

As Eddie Cicotte, who was then a Boston pitcher, was introduced, the president said: "Show me how you throw that knuckle ball, Mr. Cicotte."

Eddie illustrated as well as he could. Pitcher Ray Collins was next in line. Cicotte overheard what was said.

"Can you tell me why your left shoulder is lower than your right, Mr. Collins?" queried the president.

"Guess it's because I'm a southpaw," replied the pitcher. "Ah, that must be it."

The above is written just to show that even the president of a great republic can be a regular fan and read up on the various phases of the game.

The pennant is not the only incentive in the 1917 race, John J. McGraw wants his Giants to beat the figures of the Cubs of 1906, writes Len Wooster in the Brooklyn Times.

METHOD TO REWARD PLAYERS

Cornell University Permits Winners of Baseball and Football Games to Wear Prizes.

Cornell university has adopted a new method of rewarding football and baseball players for winning games, which has been endorsed by the athletic council of the Ithaca Institution.

Gold baseballs may be worn similarly as a reward for the winning of six out of nine baseball games from Princeton, Yale, Michigan and Pennsylvania, provided the six victories include two over Pennsylvania.

RECRUIT IS BRILLIANT

Fans and Players Admire Good Qualities of Hornsby.

Manager Huggins Wouldn't Trade Roger for Benny Kauff—Fields Like Finished Veteran and is Mighty Hard Hitter.

Roger ("Pop") Hornsby, the Cardinals' young infielder, is the most brilliant young recruit of the past several seasons, according to the opinion of players and fans around the National League circuit.

"Hornsby is going to be one of the real stars of the game. I have seen many brilliant young boys, and in my opinion Lee Magee was one of the leaders. What I like about Hornsby is his confidence. Say, he can hit any pitcher in the league. Tell Roger to do a thing once and he never forgets. On the sacks he's always trying to do the unexpected."

And Huggins went on to add that he hasn't been touting the youngster—simply because he picked him up. "I'm not stingy," says Hug. "When I see a good lad I say so, but I haven't seen one who comes anywhere near to this Texas youngster."

Hornsby seems able to shine anywhere at all and is being called the George Sisler of the Cards. He has played all around the infield from third to first and with his hitting would go great in the outfield. Quite a few seem to think that he would do his best if kept regularly on first, but he has shown so much class at third and short that Huggins still works him there.

The fast and clever work of Milt Risberg, the Pacific Coast infielder, is the sensation of the White Sox.

Pitcher Cliff Harkle of Toronto has notified the club of his retirement from baseball for the season.

Pitcher Collamore, who formerly played in Cleveland, is manager of the Rail-Lights team of Toledo.

Hans Wagner's instructions to young hitters are very simple. All you have to do is to hit the ball.

Chick Gandil may fool the multitude and prove to be just the man the White Sox have been looking for.

The absence of knotholes in concrete fences is a big problem that the future greats are trying to solve.

If ball players go to war for Uncle Sam they'll be in the federal service, but they won't get Fed league salaries.

A ball player who whiffs in a pinch may get your goat, but did you ever back three bullets against a straight flush?

Little Bobby Roth is displaying a brand of baseball in right field for the Indians that is pleasing to Manager Lee Fohl.

Only difference between semi-professionals and some amateurs is that the latter forget to put "semi" in front of their title.

The work of young Baird, the Louisiana state recruit of the Giants, is attracting quite a lot of comment of a favorable nature.

At the rate McGraw is paid, we figure that he will get something like 50 cents a word for cussing the umpires. Why be a journalist?

Speaking of conservatism, we observe that the baseball guides still refer to it as baseball, in spite of the high cost of white paper.

GAME FISHING BY DIXIE CARROLL

Author of LAKE and STREAM GAME FISHING

HOME LIFE OF THE BASS.

My Dear Buck:

You ask for a little info on the habits and home life of the black bass and when and where to find him. The bass, both large and small-mouthed, is a roamer, a lively, active hunter for the best place to gorge himself on the choice minnows, crawfish and helgamate, with a dessert from the surface of the water of moths, flies and frogs.

East Wind Not So Bad.

Weather conditions have been blamed since the time of Noah for an empty stringer or creel. Rainy days, pleasant days, all kinds of winds and especially an east wind have been cursed as the cause of "fisherman's luck." Remember this, the bass keeps on filling the feed-bag just the same, and an east wind is better than no wind at all.

Bass Have Keen Sight.

While playing the game, don't for a minute forget that a bass has eyes, and he sure knows how to use them. Once he lumps you, your bait or lures are not for him, he has moved to other quarters. Don't stand in the boat and open up with a personally conducted sightseeing tour before you cast. He also hears, and often you will think that he is exceptionally keen in both of these senses.

A Pledge.

Let us now as with one voice and one heart and in a faith that makes faithful, renew our loyalty to those ideals of government for which our fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Revive in us and in the people of our land a high sense of patriotism; strengthen every noble purpose; keep us by thy help from sloth and indifference and from all corruption of civil government.

NOT A SUCCESS.

Consolidation of the street railways about Boston has been a failure. President Sullivan of the Bay State street railway now admits there must be a six-cent fare on all the routes, or public ownership of the street railways. Yet there are many who believe that the old individual street railway companies, if continued without consolidation would have been a success financially, and that they would give their patrons better service than at present. Now cars are not run any more frequently than they were years ago when the lines were first opened, and in some cases there has been a curtailment. Yet the patronage has increased greatly. True expenses have also increased, but there are other reasons why street railways, and railroads generally, have not been successful.

HOME GARDENING

The Custom House officials of Boston have shown good judgment in securing a farm at Weymouth upon which to raise food products the coming summer. Few towns with good farms are as accessible to Boston as Weymouth, for at Weymouth Heights and North Weymouth, and at East Weymouth and South Weymouth, there are hundreds of acres which should be cultivated. These people who come from out of town to farm, may soon become regular residents. Weymouth is unusually active in home gardening this year, and the plow is turning over many sods where there has been little cultivation in recent years. The coming of the Custom House men will stimulate other citizens. All that is needed is summer weather.

ENFORCE THE LAW.

There are those in Weymouth who cannot see any progress toward temperance; they say that nothing can be accomplished until the manufacture of intoxicating liquors is prohibited; that some of our druggists are selling liquor openly. But since Monday the last day of April, it has been illegal for any expressman to transport liquors into or in the town of Weymouth. Naturally on Saturday and Monday the lovers of the ardent "stocked up," and as yet no shortage has been experienced. But it will come soon, and it is probable that some "expressmen" will go out of business. It will be up to the Chief of Police and the constables of Weymouth to watch the expressmen and see that they live up to the new edict. The law should be enforced, and if druggists are selling illegally they should be summoned into court.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

Something new is expected in the 16-page Gazette and Transcript each issue, and this week it is a "Weekly News Review" from an American patriotic viewpoint, to be found on page three, which will become a regular weekly feature. It is accompanied by a group picture. In the Metropolitan dailies, which print so many columns of war news, one finds it difficult to get the real facts of the World's war, or to obtain a clear understanding of the progress being made either by the Allies or the Teutons. The editorial writer of the Gazette and Transcript makes a very intelligent and interesting review which we are sure our readers will appreciate. You may read of the food shortage which threatens Great Britain, of the large loans being made by the United States, of Germany's desperate resistance, of the Russian situation, of the awakening in Spain, and the conscription bill in the United States Congress. Please tell your neighbors about the new features in the Gazette.

TAX RETURNS

Perhaps the taxpayers, who have never made returns, do not realize the importance of Assessors notice this year, but it would be a wise move on their part to get busy before next week as the time limit expires May 15.

PROUD DAY FOR THE BOYS

Weymouth was represented at the "Pious Pilgrimage" to Mount Vernon on Sunday by Edwin Hoffes and Russell Dexheimer, the Gazette prize winners, when Minister Balfour of Great Britain and Minister Viviani of France paid tribute at the Washington tomb to the founder of the United States. It was a proud day for the boys.

SUNSHINE WANTED

We were in hopes May had something better to offer in the line of weather, but May day was cool and rainy. Warm sunshine is very much desired.

CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN

Little remains to be said after one reads the advertisement in detail for the Clean-Up Campaign in Weymouth which will be inaugurated next Monday and continue until May 16 when town teams will make collections. Concerted action like this will accomplish wonders in making Weymouth a healthier and more attractive town in which to live.

RIGHT UP-TO-THE-MINUTE

The Publishers' Auxiliary of April 14, which goes into the office of nearly every weekly newspaper in the country, comments as follows on the new Gazette and Transcript:

Frank Fisher Prescott, editor and proprietor of the Weymouth (Mass.) Gazette and Transcript, is justly proud of his paper in its enlarged form. The issue of March 30 consisted of 18 pages and contained more than 700 inches of advertising. Editor Prescott announced in this issue that the Gazette and Transcript will comprise not less than 16 pages weekly and that all the new departments and special features that have been added to the makeup will be continued indefinitely. The Gazette and Transcript in its enlarged form is right up-to-the-minute in every respect; it is, indeed, both newspaper and high-class magazine, as the editor states in his two-column announcement regarding the enlargement. In addition to all the local news of the Weymouths and surrounding towns, there are a large number of intensely interesting features.

Considered as a whole, the Gazette and Transcript is a well-balanced weekly paper, away above the average. The makeup of the pages shows that considerable thought has been given the task, the result being all that an experienced newspaper publisher who studies the demands of his constituency could desire.

150 NOW ENROLLED IN HOME GUARD

New Chairman Elected At Meeting of Public Safety Committee This Week

Weymouth now has 150 men enrolled as a Home Guard, ready to drill next Tuesday evening and expects to have 250 soon.

This week at the meeting of the Committee on Public Safety at G. A. R. hall attended by 50 members, R. H. Whiting resigned as chairman of the Home Guard Committee, and William Holbrook was elected, who immediately got busy. A meeting of the Home Guard committee has been called for next Thursday evening at the Odd Fellows Opera House at East Weymouth.

J. W. Linnahan resigned as chairman of the Publicity committee and Parker T. Pearson was elected.

The Finance Committee reported that it had arranged for an extensive system for raising funds.

During the past week there has been a good response from owners of automobiles, and 42 have now enrolled their cars for protective use.

The Food Supply committee reported that they had distributed 558 bushels of potatoes, and would soon have 150 bushels more.

President Butterfield of Amherst Agricultural College has been secured to give a talk at Fogg's Opera House next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Kemp of the High school has offered his services for the summer in superintending the care of home gardens.

Building Trust Is Proposed

George W. Downing, for the special committee of the Weymouth Board of Trade, presented at the meeting of the board on Wednesday evening a plan for assisting those who desire to build houses in Weymouth, a plan which at any other time than the present war crisis would have been readily adopted. Yet it is the war crisis that offers Weymouth the opportunity. It called for the organization of a trust which would become incorporated and not only aid, but secure new people for Weymouth.

Comments on the plan were made by M. Sheehy, Lewis C. Hunt, H. A. Day, E. T. Jordan, President Hoffman, Secretary Bates, Treasurer Dunbar, W. E. Thayer, M. E. Hawes and others.

Mr. Downing agreed with others that now was not a favorable time to put the plan into operation and the report was laid on the table.

President Hoffman and W. E. Thayer were appointed as a committee to interview the town committee on the Conservation of Food, and proffer such assistance as the Board of Trade could offer.

Four Runs Scored in the Ninth

Seventy Men From Weymouth Possible Under the First Call

The Selectmen at their meeting on Monday appointed the Board of Registrars—Messrs. B. F. Smith, P. E. Corridan, M. P. Sprague and John A. Raymond—as a "REGISTRATION BOARD" in compliance with a notice from Gov. McCall, to act in the registration of men ELIGIBLE TO MILITARY SERVICE, and of drafting such number of the same as may be called for from time to time. The board is "asked to serve without pay as a patriotic duty."

The communication of the Governor, under date of May 5, was along the lines published in the Gazette and Transcript of May 4. A single day for enrolment throughout the country, from 10 to 15 days after President Wilson issues the Proclamation.

Mr. Smith was designated as chairman of the board, and Mr. Raymond as clerk and recording officer, to whom supplies will be sent.

The Governor has appointed Charles F. Gettemy, the Director of the Bureau of Statistics, as Director of Military Enrolment in Massachusetts.

THE FIRST DUTY of the Weymouth board is to procure the services of men who will serve at the election booths, and the regular election officers are expected to serve.

As the bill passes Congress today it will probably provide for a draft for the ages 21 to 30 inclusive, ten years.

One of the difficulties in reaching an agreement was over the tribunals which shall pass on exemptions from the selective draft. The provisions accepted gives right of appeal from a first tribunal to a second. No military men are to be on either, and they are to be distinct from the courts of the United States or the States.

The men who go to their precinct voting places on the day appointed for registration WILL BE REQUIRED TO ANSWER THESE QUESTIONS:

Home address

Trade or occupation

Date of birth

Place of birth

Condition of Citizenship

A Washington dispatch says: Many States plan to make registration day for the new army conscription the OCCASION FOR FETES AND PATRIOTIC DEMONSTRATIONS. According to reports reaching the War Department Thursday.

"The spirit of PATRIOTISM seems to have entered into the arrangements for the occasion which have been made by many of the State officials," says a War Department statement issued.

"In one State, for instance, the occasion in large part is to take on the nature of a patriotic demonstration, a sort of NATIONAL FETE DAY. In many parts of the State there will be barbecues and like affairs to draw the people, so that those upon whom the duty of registration devolves will know that they have the SUPPORT OF THEIR FELLOWS OF ALL OCCUPATIONS, AND OF ALL AGES.

"A report from another State is to the effect that it hopes to clear up its registration duties in such short order that it may lay claim to being FIRST IN A RACE PROMPTED BY PATRIOTIC DUTY. The men who must register, in accordance with the requirements of the law, will find registration easy.

"Several of the States have relieved the Government entirely of expense connected with the work of securing complete registration; in fact HELPFULLNESS SEEMS TO BE COMMON IN THE COUNTRY."

No person liable to military service will be permitted to escape therefrom by furnishing a substitute or the payment of money, and the payment of bounties for recruits is prohibited. Certain persons however will be exempted.

Chairman Smith of the Registration board figures 70 Weymouth men will be drafted on the first call.

W. R. C. Charter Member Night

Tuesday evening was charter member night with Reynolds Women's Relief Corps, which was organized 24 years ago, Jan. 31, 1893.

The charter members present included Mrs. Ida L. Keene, Mrs. Margaret Culley, Mrs. Eliza Ferris, Mrs. Lizzie Burr, Mrs. Lucy Burrell, Mrs. Maria J. Richards, Mrs. Annie Vogel, Mrs. Lucy Huff, Mrs. Mary Hawes, Mrs. Abbie Pratt, Mrs. Mary Flint, Mrs. Deborah Hayden, Mrs. Sara Curtis, Mrs. Marie Greeley, Mrs. Susan Rich, Mrs. Anna Lovell, Mrs. Lizzie Moulton and Mrs. Emma Miller, and to each was presented a United States flag.

A banquet was served in G. A. R. hall by Mrs. Jennie Callahan, Mrs. Alice Bennett, Mrs. Mary Dunbar, Mrs. Emeline Vining, Mrs. Cressie Vining, Mrs. Marian Thayer and Mrs. Ida Shaw.

A program directed by Mrs. Jennie Callahan, consisting of songs and readings by Charles A. McClellan and Mrs. Josephine with Mrs. Mary Flint as the feature.

An afternoon session, with Mrs. Callahan, president, in the chair, were entertained from Quincy, and Hingham; also Post W. R. C.; Mrs. Cora Townsend, president of the Plymouth County W. R. C.; Mrs. Marjorie Callahan, president of the Braintree W. R. C., and Mrs. Melissa Sprague, past president of Hingham W. R. C.

Weymouth at Plattsburg Camp

About half of the more than 4000 men recommended by the various enrolling officers for service at Plattsburg camp were eliminated by the selection completed Tuesday by Lieut. Col. Paul A. Wolf, commander of the camp.

Only 2089 men were picked from these lists, the rest of the quota being made up from the National Guard and the Reserve Officers Training Corps. About 465 New England National Guard soldiers will take the training.

In the list selected are the following from Weymouth:

E. W. BATES
S. H. WENTWORTH
RAYMOND B. COOPER
STANLEY HEALD
W. W. REED

These New England youths selected for officers' training at Plattsburg, are preparing today for the journey which will start them toward the battlefields of Europe and command of United States troops.

Only a few of the shoulder strap candidates, however, will leave Boston before tonight, when the first special train, with Pullman sleeping car accommodations for 1000 men, will leave the South Station over the Boston and Albany at 7 o'clock. A similar train Sunday night will bear the others.

Postal cards from Plattsburg reached the men who survived the final cut in the list of applicants Tuesday afternoon. The cards brought brief instructions as to the time at which the men are to start.

Three Tax Collectors Are Sued

Tax Collector Winslow M. Tirrell, was placed in an unfavorable position on Wednesday by the report that he had been sued by State officials, but it appears to be a fact that for the year 1913 there was due and uncollected in Weymouth $1,069.99. Since that date, with two exceptions, all the bills have been collected and paid over to the Town Treasurer. The two exceptions have been in the hands of the Town Counsel, and suits are now pending for their collection.

A Dedham dispatch of Tuesday reads as follows:—Former tax collectors of Randolph, Avon and Weymouth, are charged with failure to turn over to the town taxes which they received in their term of office, in suits brought by Attorney General Harry C. Attwill and filed in the Norfolk Superior Court here today. In the State there are about 50 Tax Collectors in a similar position as Mr. Tirrell. No one claims that money which has been collected has been misappropriated. But the taxes have not been collected.

Richards, Mrs. Annie Vogel, Mrs. Lucy Huff, Mrs. Mary Hawes, Mrs. Abbie Pratt, Mrs. Mary Flint, Mrs. Deborah Hayden, Mrs. Sarah Curtis, Mrs. Marie Greeley, Mrs. Susan Rich, Mrs. Anna Lovell, Mrs. Lizzie Moulton and Mrs. Emma Miller, and to each was presented a United States flag.

A banquet was served in G. A. R. hall by Mrs. Jennie Callahan, Mrs. Alice Bennett, Mrs. Mary Dunbar, Mrs. Emeline Vining, Mrs. Cressie Vining, Mrs. Marian Thayer and Mrs. Ida Shaw.

A program directed by Mrs. Jennie Callahan, consisting of songs and readings by Charles A. McClellan, with Mrs. Mary Flint as the feature. A pie walk in which all had part. An afternoon session, with Mrs. Callahan, president, in the chair, were entertained from Quincy, Hingham and Hingham; also Post W. R. C.; Mrs. Cora Townsend, president of the Plymouth County W. R. C.; Mrs. Marjorie Callahan, president of the Braintree W. R. C.; and Mrs. Melissa Sprague, past president of Hingham W. R. C.

Weymouth at Plattsburg Camp

About half of the more than 4000 men recommended by the various enrolling officers for service at Plattsburg camp were eliminated by the selection completed Tuesday by Lieut. Col. Paul A. Wolf, commander of the camp.

Only 2089 men were picked from these lists, the rest of the quota being made up from the National Guard and the Reserve Officers Training Corps. About 465 New England National Guard soldiers will take the training.

In the list selected are the following from Weymouth:

E. W. BATES
S. H. WENTWORTH
RAYMOND B. COOPER
STANLEY HEALD
W. W. REED

These New England youths selected for officers' training at Plattsburg, are preparing today for the journey which will start them toward the battlefields of Europe and command of United States troops.

Only a few of the shoulder strap candidates, however, will leave Boston before tonight, when the first special train, with Pullman sleeping car accommodations for 1000 men, will leave the South Station over the Boston and Albany at 7 o'clock. A similar train Sunday night will bear the others.

Postal cards from Plattsburg reached the men who survived the final cut in the list of applicants Tuesday afternoon. The cards brought brief instructions as to the time at which the men are to start.

Three Tax Collectors Are Sued

Tax Collector Winslow M. Tirrell, was placed in an unfavorable position on Wednesday by the report that he had been sued by State officials, but it appears to be a fact that for the year 1913 there was due and uncollected in Weymouth $1,069.99. Since that date, with two exceptions, all the bills have been collected and paid over to the Town Treasurer. The two exceptions have been in the hands of the Town Counsel, and suits are now pending for their collection.

A Dedham dispatch of Tuesday reads as follows:—Former tax collectors of Randolph, Avon and Weymouth, are charged with failure to turn over to the town taxes which they received in their term of office, in suits brought by Attorney General Harry C. Attwill and filed in the Norfolk Superior Court here today. In the State there are about 50 Tax Collectors in a similar position as Mr. Tirrell. No one claims that money which has been collected has been misappropriated. But the taxes have not been collected.

PRECISE AND COMPACT AUTO LANGUAGE

One of the objects of the standardization work now being carried on by the Society of Automobile Engineers is the establishment within the motor-car field of a precise and compact language.

There are many advantages in having uniform names of car parts. The automobile user finds it much easier to make replacements. The manufacturer benefits for the same reasons. The entire industry will welcome any list of names that will remedy the present condition, in which makers use different terminologies.

A striking exception to popular usage is the name "engine," which is recommended rather than "motor," to avoid confusion with electric motors used for starting the engine installed on the automobile. Definitions have been included for axles, brakes and bodies for which usage varies. The name and description of bodies as adopted by the society are:

Roadster—An open car seating two Convertible coupe—A roadster provided with a detachable coupe top.

Clover leaf—An open car seating three or four. The rear seat is close to the divided front seat and entrance is only through doors in front of the front seat.

Touring car—An open car seating four or more with direct entrance to tonneau.

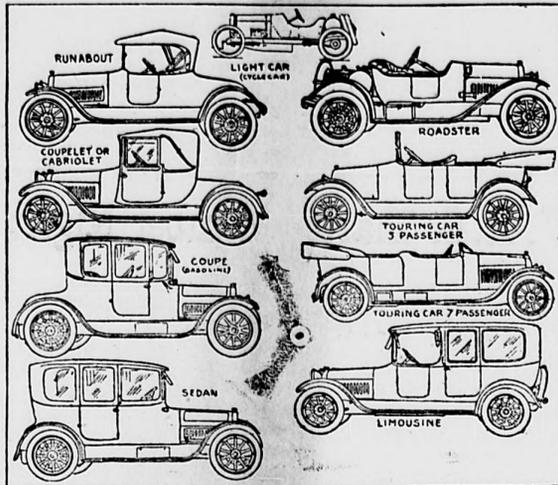

Salon touring car—A touring car with passage between front seats, with or without separate entrance to front seats.

Sedan—A closed car seating four or more all in one compartment.

Convertible sedan—A salon touring car provided with a detachable sedan top.

Open sedan—A sedan so constructed that the sides can be removed or stowed so as to use the space entirely clear from the glass front to the back.

Limousine—A closed car seating three to five inside, with driver's seat or three. It may have additional seats on running boards or on rear deck.

Couplet—Seats two or three. It has a folding top and full height doors with disappearing panels of glass.

Coupe—An inside-operated, enclosed car seating two or three. A fourth seat facing backward is sometimes added.

outside, but all covered with a roof.

Open limousine—A touring car with permanent standing top and disappearing or removable glass sides.

Berline—A limousine having the driver's seat entirely enclosed.

Brougham—A limousine with no roof over the driver's seat.

Landaulet—A closed car with folding top, seats for three or more inside and the driver's seat outside.

RIGHT CARE OF CAR

AVERAGE FARMER DOES NOT HAVE SAME TROUBLE AS CITY MAN.

However, He is Likely to Have Trouble at Times—Eight Splendid Rules Given for Proper Management of Automobile.

The average farmer does not have one-half the trouble running a car that falls to the lot of the city man. He is constantly handling machinery, and knows the value of good care in its use. But he, too, is at times likely to have trouble, and it is a good plan to group the possible troubles into a small space. This has been well done in the following eight rules for the care of the automobile:

"First—See that the gasoline tank contains a sufficient quantity of gasoline; that there is plenty of oil in the crank case; that the radiator is filled with water and that the tires are properly inflated.

"Second—Lift hood and screw down grease cups; inspect the cooler connections and the wiring to the magneto, coil and spark plugs; oil the valve stems and push rods; inspect oil pump and fittings.

"Third—Screw down grease cups on front springs and front axle; see that the nuts on the spring bolts are tight; give grease cup on steering gear housing a turn.

"Fourth—Remove floor boards and oil the gear-shifting mechanism; also the clutch and brake mechanism.

"Fifth—Screw down grease cups on the rear springs and see that the spring bolt nuts are tight. Inspect the differential housing for loose nuts or bolts; examine the brakes and screw down grease cups over brake shaft.

"Sixth—Fill lamps if necessary; inspect the body bolts and fender bolts; fill all grease cups with good grade of medium weight grease; keep the wheel rims free from mud and sharp edges; clean the body and fenders.

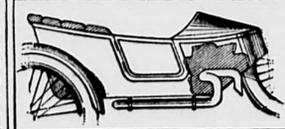

"Seventh—Occasionally jack up car under frame; pry the spring leaves apart with a heavy screwdriver and lubricate between leaves with graphite mixed in oil; keep transmission case and differential case two-thirds filled with a good grade, medium gravity grease.

"Eighth—Occasionally drain oil from crank case and then flush out crank case by pouring gasoline or kerosene through breather tubes. Every ten days or so put two or three tablespoonfuls of kerosene in each cylinder to cut carbon and let stand over night. If over a foreign or unfamiliar noise develops, satisfy yourself as to what it is; negligence of this may result disastrously."

MAKE EXHAUST PIPE USEFUL

Motorcycle Sidecar Can Be Made Comfortable in Cold Weather by Use of Small Tubing.

The motorcycle sidecar can be made quite comfortable in winter if the exhaust is extended and a coil placed in the front of the car, writes Fritz M. Meyer in Popular Science Monthly. It requires only a piece of pipe or tubing that can be easily bent into the shape desired. The size will depend on the exhaust opening. A pipe should be secured with an inside diameter the same as the outside diameter of the exhaust. It is then run to the front of the car where it enters. On the inside it forms a coil, the end running through the bottom to the outside.

HOMEMADE POLISH FOR AUTO

Excellent Surface Can Be Secured by Using Mixture of Boiled Linseed Oil and Turpentine.

For furniture or automobile bodies an excellent polish can be made by thinning down boiled linseed oil with turpentine. This should be applied sparingly to the clean surface with a cloth and should be rubbed briskly with a soft cloth or cotton waste. It is best not to use body polish on a car until the gloss has become dull.

Another polish recommended by automobile experts is made from 1 gallon of turpentine, 3 1/2 ounces of citronella oil, 1 pint of paraffin oil or light cylinder oil and 1 1/2 ounces of oil of cedar. When the finish on a car has become very dull the appearance can be greatly improved by rubbing with a mixture of cylinder oil and kerosene.

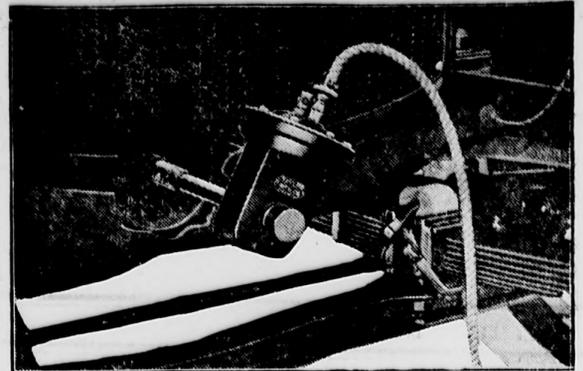

Watch Rim Bolts.

On account of the heavy strain to which bolts of demountable rims are subjected, it is advisable to make frequent inspections and see that all nuts are kept tight. If the threads of any bolts are worn, put in new bolts, as many unnecessary accidents occur through this neglect.

A Slow Charge.

At any time that a single cell of a storage battery is sulphated, or if the gravity of the solution is very much below that of the other cells, it should be cut out and given a slow charge individually until it is brought to the same condition as the others.

INVENTION OF CRANK-SHAFT TIRE PUMP

CRANK SHAFT TIRE PUMP.

The invention of a crank shaft tire pump on which patents have been recently issued makes the adaptation of a motor-driven tire pump comparatively simple. By driving the pump from the end of the crank shaft the whole power of the motor is behind it and there is no danger to the timing, universals and water pump packing, along the secondary shafts. Automobile engineers have never favored driving pumps by gears from these side shafts, as the intermittent pounding of gears makes trouble sooner or later. The crank shaft pump is carried in the road case and kept clean from road dust and grease.

To operate, insert the shaft of the pump in the crank hole below the radiator so that the clutch on the pump shaft engages the cranking pin on the end of the motor shaft. The pump body is then instantly clamped to the cross member of the chassis. The hose is then connected to the tire and motor started. This type of pump does away with the machine shop expense of installing geared pumps, and does not complicate the mechanism of the motor.

These pumps are not adapted to every make of car as some of them are arranged with crank clutches with spring throwouts.

CHANGE OF LUBRICATING OIL

Friction is Greatly Increased in Engine When Carbon and Gum Are Present in Lubricant.

Not enough attention is given by drivers of automobiles to the changing of the lubricating oil in the crank case, says Prof. H. L. Thomson of the Department of Farm Engineering at Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college. Fresh oil is poured in the crank case from time to time, but no thought is given to what happens to this oil.

The oil breaks down into gum and carbon as it wears out, neither of which will lubricate. Pouring fresh oil into this mixture simply dilutes it. There is also water, which will separate from oil into the bottom of the crank case, as well as dirt and material which will have a tendency to clog up the strainer of the oil pump.

Once in every 2,000 miles the crank case should be drained of oil and the oil strainer cleaned. A gallon of kerosene is put in and the engine run for about a minute and the kerosene drained off. It is surprising how black and dirty this kerosene will be, and what dirt it will bring out with it.

Then when fresh oil is put in the crank case the engine has a clean oil. Under such treatment the bearings will stand up for a long time without taking up. The wear on the whole internal mechanism of the motor will be much less. In addition to this, the driver will save many dollars in fuel bills. Friction is greatly increased on the side of the engine when carbon and gum are present in the lubricant, and it will take more power to run an engine, and the engine will have less power to drive the car. Changing the oil as often as this is apparently an expensive procedure, but really is the cheapest insurance for long life that the engine can have.

NEWS REVIEW OF THE PAST WEEK

America in War to the Finish, and Allies Rely on Her for the Victory.

U-BOAT MENACE IS GROWING

Conflict Will Be Long and Not Easily Won—British and French Commissions Urge Early Dispatch of United States Troops to Europe.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.
America is in the war against Germany to the finish, according to the verbal pledge given by the British and French commissioners by President Wilson and according to the spirit of determination shown by the government and the people. And it is high time, for the entente allies virtually admit their hopes of victory are now founded on the assistance to be given by the United States.

This dependence upon America has been brought about mainly by two circumstances—the increasing success of Germany's U-boat campaign and the disorganized state of affairs in Russia.

Cabinet members and others in high place were at especial pains during last week to impress upon the American people the fact that the war is not to be won easily or soon. "We might as well wake up to the fact that the situation is serious," said Secretary Lansing. "If we don't fight the war on the other side," said Secretary Lane, "we shall have to fight it on this side of the Atlantic." Secretary Daniels declared the administration is concentrating its energies on the problem of defeating the German submarine campaign, "the gravest menace of this conflict." "It is good to learn, also from Secretary Daniels, that Thomas A. Edison is at work with 75 assistants on electrical and mechanical devices to aid in the capture and destruction of undersea craft.

Most of the German U-boats, it appears, are built at Kiel and sent out from that port through Swedish waters. Great Britain is now trying to persuade Sweden to permit her to use these waters for the purpose of blocking the exit of the submarines.

Two, three, even five years more of warfare is freely predicted by government officials, and they are going ahead with their preparations on that basis. It may well be that the United States will have to draft, train and put in the field a greater army than any that has been raised by any other country. Every resource of the nation must be brought into action and every individual will be called on to help so far as in him lies.

At the present writing the outlook is rather gloomy, but it is inconceivable that, once aroused to the great task before it, America can fail to win the ultimate victory.

Busy in War Councils.
The British and French war commissioners have been exceedingly busy in Washington helping to plan the part America is to have in the war. It seems to be agreed that Uncle Sam shall have virtual control of the food supplies for the allied countries. In addition to this we are expected to furnish much of the necessary shipping, and a start in that line was made during the week when the senate passed a resolution empowering the president to seize at once the interned German and Austrian boats. Several of these big vessels were promptly turned over to the allies.

As had been predicted, the British and French commissioners, especially the latter, made as plain as possible, without actually advising it, their belief that an American army should be sent to Europe without delay, both for the moral effect and because more men really are needed on the fighting line. It is admitted that intensive training can be best obtained back of the lines, and it is wholly probable that the first troops will go over very soon and will be followed at frequent intervals by other detachments. The Stars and Stripes is likely to be flying before long in both France and Russia.

Toward the end of the week the French commission took time for a visit to Chicago and other cities. Marshal Joffre and his colleagues were welcomed everywhere with an acclaim that testified eloquently to the love and admiration the American people have for the French. In the course of their trip the visitors went to Springfield, Ill., and placed wreaths on the tomb of Lincoln, as they already had done on the tomb of Washington at Mt. Vernon.

England is Alarmed.

Finally awakened to the deadly menace in the activities of the German submarines, the people of Great Britain are clamoring, in the press and in parliament, for a change in the admiralty personnel of methods that shall give some promise of relieving the situation. The terror of hunger and of possible defeat in the war is on them, and they are calling bitterly for more action by their great navy. "Where are our own submarines and why do they not do something?" is the demand. The policy of the admiralty in concealing the full truth about the success of the U-boat campaign is attacked on all sides. It is admitted that the Germans are sinking vessels faster than the allies can build them, and though the United States is counted on to supply a great number of bottoms, that aid, it is feared, may come too late.

To guess at what took place in Germany and Austria during May Day week would be futile, for the Swiss and Dutch frontiers were closed and the censorship of the news was absolute. It was stated officially that the May Day celebrations were peaceful in both the empires.

The German reichstag resumed its session Wednesday and Dr. Johannes Kaempf, president of the chamber, made a bitter attack on President Wilson, accusing him of seeking to divide the German people. Doctor von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor, had intended to make a speech on international relations and was expected to announce Germany's peace terms, but postponed the address "to a more fitting occasion." Spokesmen for the entente allies already had declared no suggestions of peace terms from Germany would be considered at this time.

Austria is in sad state and the news that has filtered out from that country during the week indicates that the entire nation, from the emperor down, demands an early end of the war, on any terms obtainable. But Charles may not be able to wriggle out from the iron grasp of the kaiser.

What About Russia?

Still a big black interrogation point must be placed after Russia. The rest of the world really knows little of what is going on there, but it is evident that if the kaiser were not kept so busy on the western front, he might break through the Russian lines below Riga with comparative ease. New rules for the Russian army have been promulgated, and how under them any effectiveness and cohesion in the army can be maintained it is impossible to conceive. The officers seem to have been deprived of all powers of discipline and nearly everything is put in the control of committees of the soldiers. The "common people" are at the helm over there, and it will be only by God's mercy if they do not drive their new republic onto the rocks of disaster because of their inexperience and their exorbitant demands. The peace party in Russia still denies vehemently that it has any idea of advocating a separate peace, and there is encouragement in the fact that the soldiers who deserted and went home are fast returning to the ranks.

On May 1 the Russian provisional government sent to its representatives in the allied countries a note giving assurance that the change in government could give no pretext for any slackening on the part of Russia in the common struggle of all the entente allies, and that on the contrary, the nation was even more determined to bring the war to a decisive victory.

One of the first things America will do to help Russia is to send a commission of four experts to reorganize the transportation facilities of the new republic. One member of this body will be John F. Stevens, who was chief engineer of the Panama canal commission before General Goethals.

There was no great change in the fighting line in France during the week. The French and British both made some gains and consolidated the positions they had already won, and the fierce artillery duels continued, day and night. But the Germans brought up more and more of their reserves and contested every inch of ground. It seems probable that they will continue to give way slowly in order to save their men, and St. Quentin may be evacuated before long. The bloodiest fighting of the week took place at Arleux and Oppy, east of Arras, where the British were attacking.

The British began another drive on Thursday, attacking on a 12-mile front, both north and south of the Scarpe river. Despite desperate resistance by the Germans they took a number of important strategic positions, including the town of Fresnoy. The Germans are constructing a new emergency line of trenches from Quant, north to Drocourt, and trying to hold the British back until it is completed.

In Mesopotamia the Turks were defeated by General Maude's troops on both banks of the Shatt-el-Adham and driven back into the Jebel Hamrin hills. From Constantinople came the surprising news that the city of Mush, in Turkish Armenia, had been evacuated by the Russians and occupied by the Turks. Petrograd has not confirmed this announcement.

Recruiting Speeds Up.

Recruiting for the regular army was satisfactory last week, and the navy department announced on Tuesday that the enlisted personnel was $7,082, or 82 more than the maximum strength of the navy under existing law. The passage of the army bill with the selective draft feature, the prospect that American troops would soon be sent to France and Colonel Roosevelt's rousing address in Chicago all contributed to help the recruiting campaign.

A great strike of union bakers in Chicago alarmed the big city by the lake and incidentally attracted the attention of the federal authorities because most of the strikers are of German birth or parentage, and might be taken into custody as alien enemies. There were intimations also that the government might take over the operation of some of the large bakeries because the naval training station at Great Lakes is dependent on the city for its bread supply. Fortunately for all concerned, the strike was ended Friday through the efforts of United States District Attorney Clyne.

In New York two Germans were arrested with a picric acid bomb in their possession and confessed to a plot to blow up a "big Wall street institution" and commit other outrages to affect the stock market for speculative purposes.

Capt. Franz von Rintelen was put on trial in New York as the agent through whom Germany is alleged to have expended more than $500,000 in an effort to abrogate foreign policies of this nation and to corrupt American labor.

Another German, Baron Alhard von dem Busche-Muench, said to be a cousin of Count von Bernstorff, was arrested in San Francisco as an enemy alien.

The United States government on Thursday took two important steps in the effort to reduce the high cost of foodstuffs. The first was the announcement that the United States and Canada had agreed to co-operate in regulating the price of wheat in all North America. This is to be done in such a way that increased production will be stimulated and the price to the consumer steadied by the guaranteeing of a minimum price to the producer and the prevention of speculation by middlemen.

The second step was the introduction of a bill in the house giving the president the widest possible powers in dealing with foodstuffs, clothing, fuel and other necessities of life.

Guatemala has joined the enemies of Germany by severing diplomatic relations and the Chilean minister to Germany has demanded his passports. Brazil's early entry into the war is forecast by the resignation of Dr. Lauro Mueller, the Brazilian foreign minister, who has been attacked as being unduly friendly to Germany.

One of the attractions of Weymouth is its social life, and its Women's Clubs, which are noted for their hospitality.

Please address: MISS BEATRICE VANDERBILT, Care Gazette and Transcript, Weymouth, Mass.

The South Shore Morning Musical Club held a meeting of its officers Thursday morning with Mrs. Putnam the president, and the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Grace Mayhew Putnam; vice-president, Mrs. Josephine Avery; recording secretary, Mrs. Adelaide Whitten; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Sarah Bicknell; treasurer, Mrs. Emma S. Moore; historian and custodian, Mrs. Jennie B. Worster.

Quincy Reed, a former and well known resident of South Weymouth, announces his marriage to Miss Hattie S. Wiswell, the only daughter of Nelson Wiswell of Santa Rosa, California.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Wheaton of Commercial street were the happy recipients of a nine-pound baby boy last Friday.

The Catholic Woman's Club of Braintree gave a musical in K. of C. hall on Wednesday evening, the annual guest night of the club.

The Rockland Women's Club has applied to the Rockland Public Safety Committee for three acres of land for cultivation. So great is the demand for land in Rockland that there is said to be a scarcity.

Mrs. Herbert Goodspeed of Commercial street, East Braintree, has returned from Washington, D. C.

It is said that the Old Colony Women's Club has voted to give $25 to the Fogg Library; $25 to the district nurse association; $25 to the South Weymouth branch of the Society of American Preparedness; and $10 to be used at the discretion of Miss Brassil in the work of the school gardens.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shaw of Los Angeles, Cal., are visiting Mr. Shaw's father, Gilman Shaw, of South Weymouth.

One of the interesting features of W. C. T. U. Membership Week was the reception in Boston on Tuesday afternoon in honor of the 64th birthday of Mrs. Katharine Lente Stevenson, for 20 years president of the union. In the receiving line were Mrs. W. E. Birdsall, Mrs. William Ross and Mrs. E. Lawane Savary.

Mrs. Nina Towne of New York City has been the recent guest of Mrs. Carleton Barnes at South Weymouth.

The new president of the Quincy Women's Club is Mabel S. Badger of West Quincy, who assumed her duties for a two-year term on Tuesday. She has been the regent of Unity circle of Kings Daughters, of Quincy, the largest circle in the state, and also an officer of Bethany Union of Bethany Congregational church; always a hard worker and popular with her associates.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Frederick A. Sulis entertained her Bible class of the First Baptist church at her home, 35 Phillips street. Some of her former scholars were present, three of whom were her first scholars in the primary department 23 years ago. Twenty members participated in a social evening; games and music were enjoyed. The crowning feature of the evening was a flag game. A large American flag was placed across the draperies with the field of blue left starless. A star was given each one present to pin in the field. As Miss Olive Moore of Kensington road was blindfolded and attempted to pin a star in the field, the draperies were pulled aside, and she was ushered into a room. When she removed the bandage her eyes beheld a bridal shower arranged for her by the members present. Many beautiful gifts were contributed, and all enjoyed the verses that accompanied each gift. Ice cream and cake were served by the hostess. The reunion was a very pleasant one for the class. Miss Moore is to be married the last of the month.

It is said that the Old Colony Women's Club has a membership of 300, with a good sized waiting list.

The engagement is announced of Miss Irene M. Dewey, daughter of Peter Dewey of Quincy Point, and Mervin E. Wright, of 49 Pearl street, North Weymouth. Mr. Wright is a registered nurse employed at the Fore River hospital. He saw service with the ambulance corps at the border and is an adjutant in the Fore River Rifle Company. Miss Dewey shares the popularity of Mr. Wright among Quincy Point young people.

Congratulations are in order. Weymouth had a little sun this week.

The wearing of the Stars and Stripes on the hosiery of a number of Washington women has aroused the indignation of a local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, whose members have invoked the law to prevent the use of the American flag to adorn fair ankles. The law stipulates that everybody is forbidden "to manufacture, sell, expose for sale or to public view or use for any purpose merchandise on which shall be printed, painted, attached or otherwise placed a representation of the flag.

Miss Mary Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Roberts, will be Rockland's first war bride. Miss Roberts will be married to Clifford Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Martin of North Abington, the evening of May 14. Mr. Martin is a member of Company K, 5th regiment, of Hingham, and expects to be called to the colors any day.

Mrs. Walter E. Carter of Winchendon announces the engagement of her daughter Ruth H. to Marshall T. Tirrell of East Weymouth, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow M. Tirrell.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. Sprague, who have a summer home at Scituate, observed their 40th wedding anniversary on Sunday at "The Deep-Tangled Wildwood."

The volunteer clerical corps of the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness, which includes many women stenographers and typists throughout the State, were offered this week by the president, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, to Gov. McCall for work compiling the selective draft lists. Mrs. I. Tucker Burr was named by Mrs. Wendell chairman of a mobilization committee and by tomorrow she expects to put into Chief Gettemy's hands the complete list of the women who will volunteer. In Brockton several women have sent their names to the board of registration.

Mrs. Florence Beals Streckewald of Milwaukee, Wis., who is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. L. Newton in Winthrop, was the guest of relatives in town the first of the week. Her year and a half old son, Paul, accompanied her.

Letters from Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Clapp of Commercial street, East Braintree, announce their arrival in Colorado.

Mrs. Caroline T. Belcher of Randolph street, South Weymouth, entertains relatives today on her 83rd birthday anniversary. Congratulations were received from all over the country.

Good pay for women. See Ad in another column.

YOUNG MAN WANTED To learn printers trade. Apply at Gazette Office.

The banquet of the bowling teams is reported in another column. The Grammar School base ball league is going along nicely although the weather is against fast playing.

It has been taken up with the different factories in regards to organizing a "Factory Twilight base ball league." They all said that they were interested and would take up the subject with some of the men and get things going. So it is planned to call a meeting of the factories that are interested next week and begin organizing such a league. Games to be played on the Clapp field week day evenings after working hours.

There will be a base ball game on the Clapp field Saturday morning at 9.30 between two Midget teams. Games are being scheduled for the Clapp Juniors and Midgets. If you have a team why not put us on your schedule? A junior handicap athletic meet is to be held for the boys of the Association on Tuesday, May 15. It will start at 4.15 and all the boys who are going to compete must have their entries in not later than Saturday this week. A silver medal for the boy making the most points. Three ribbons for each event. Every boy has a chance to win. Enter now.

If you are going to attend the Junior banquet that comes off Thursday, May 17, you must have your ticket by Tuesday, May 15. B. McDonald is chairman of committee.

Tuesday evening, May 8, the Ladies' Gymnasium class held their closing exhibition. Each member was allowed to bring one guest and those who were fortunate enough to receive an invitation considered themselves lucky. The exhibition consisted of the regular class work. After the exhibition they went into the hall where refreshments were served and then all enjoyed dancing. Many remarks were heard on all sides and this lady's statement expresses the sentiments of all: "If I had known that such good times were going on I sure would have been a member of the class. Next season I will be on hand." They were not only good times, but they were beneficial as well. Then the instructor, Miss Nellie Anderson of Boston, is most charming and experienced. All the ladies thought a great deal of her, and now they are all looking forward to next fall when the class will open. H. H. Buxton made a short speech and invited all to join the class in the fall and to invite their friends. It is his desire that Miss Anderson will take up this work again. Also a class from 6.30 to 7.30 for the ladies who are engaged during the day, then at 8.00 o'clock all meet in the hall for instruction in social dancing.

If you are interested in being connected with an organization where you are able to do things, and things are being accomplished, now is your opportunity. Join now before it is too late. For the summer there is tennis, base ball, use of the Camp on Slate Island, a cool club house with everything that is needed and where things will be doing all summer. Then the baths are worth all your membership will cost you if you only use them during the summer.

Sued for $18,000. Mrs. Blanche B. Drinkwater of 327 Elm street Braintree, is made the defendant in seven suits filed in the Norfolk superior court at Dedham, in which $18,000 damages are sought. The suits are the result of an accident which occurred September 4, 1916, on Orange street Abington, when the Drinkwater automobile collided with an automobile owned by the Henshaw Motor Car Company of Boston, in which were two women, a girl and a man as passengers.

Dancing and moving pictures every Tuesday evening at the Bates Opera House, Weymouth Landing. For Saturday, May 12, Mary Pickford in "Hulda from Holland."

An address will be given next Tuesday evening May 15, at Fogg's Opera house, South Weymouth, at 8 o'clock, by President Kenneth L. Butterfield, of Amherst Agricultural College.

The North Weymouth Cemetery Circle met on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. E. F. Beals. Plans for raising the necessary funds for the benefit of the cemetery were discussed. The usual method has been to have a bazaar in the fall, but on account of the present high prices of materials it was thought best to give up the plan of other years, and it was voted to choose a committee to solicit from all those interested in this cemetery and procure if possible money of equal value to what the people would naturally contribute to a fair. The next meeting of the circle will be held on Sept. 11, when this committee will make its report and turn in the money.

The Sparklers of North Weymouth were entertained Saturday, April 28, at the home of Mrs. Alton Jones of Brockton.

Trade at Home

At Zekesbury

by JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBY PERRELL COMPANY

The little town, as I recall it, was of just enough dignity and dearth of the same to be an ordinary county seat in Indiana—the grand old Hoosier state, as it was used to be being howlingly referred to by the forensic stump orator from the old stand in the courthouse yard—a political campaign being the wildest delight that Zekesbury might ever hope to call its own.

Through years the fitful happenings of the town and its vicinity went on the same—the same! Annually about one circus ventured in, and vanished, and was gone, even as a passing trumpet-blast; the usual rainy season swelled the "crick," the drifting choking all "the covered bridge," and backing water till the old road looked amphibious; and crowds of curious town-folk struggled down to look upon the watery wonder, and lean awestruck above it, and spit in it, and turn nuttily home again.

The usual formula of incidents peculiar to an uneventful town and its vicinity: The countryman from "Jes-sap's Crossing," with the corn-stalk coffin-measure, loped into town, his steaming little gray-and-red-flecked "roadster" gurgitating, as it were, with that mysterious utterance that ever has commanded and ever must evoke the wonder and bewilderment of every boy; the smallpox rumor became prevalent betimes, and the subtle aroma of the asafetida bag permeated the graded schools "from turret to foundation stone"; the still recurring expose of the poorhouse management; the farm hand with the scythe across his shoulder, struck dead by lightning; the long-drawn quarrel between the rival editors culminating in one of them assaulting the other with a "sidestick," and the other kicking the one down-stairs and thenceward ad libitum; the tramp, suppositiously stealing a ride, found dead on the railroad; the grand jury returning a sensational indictment against a bartender non est; the temperance outbreak; the "revival," the church festival; the "Free Lectures on Phrenology, and Marvels of Mesmerism," at the town hall.

It was during the time of the last-mentioned sensation, and directly through this scientific investigation, that I came upon two of the town's most remarkable characters. And however meager my outline of them may prove, my material for the sketch is most accurate in every detail, and no deviation from the cold facts of the case shall influence any line of my report.

For some years prior to this odd experience I had been connected with a daily paper at the state capital; and latterly a prolonged session of the legislature, where I specially reported, having told threateningly upon my health, I took both the advantage of a brief vacation, and then the invitation of a young bachelor senator, to get out of the city for a while and bask my respiratory organs in the revivifying rural air of Zekesbury—the home of my new friend.

"I'll pay you to get out here," he said cordially, meeting me at the little station, "and I'm glad you've come, for you'll find no end of odd characters to amuse you." And under the very pleasant sponsorship of my senatorial friend, I was placed at once on genial terms with half the citizens of the little town—from the shirt-sleeved nabob of the county office to the droll wag of the favorite loafing place—the rules and by-laws of which resort, by the way, being rudely charcoaled on the wall above the cutter's bench, and somewhat artistically culminating in an original dialect legend which ran thus:

"Fr instance, now, when some folks gits

To relyin' on their wits,
Ten to one they git too smart
And spile it all, right at the start!
Feller wants to jest go slow
And do his thinkin' first, you know,
'F I can't think up somepin' good,
'F set still and chaw my food!"

And it was at this inviting rendezvous, two or three evenings following my arrival, that the general crowd, acting upon the random proposition of one of the boys, rose as a man and wended its hilarious way to the town hall.

"Phrenology," said the little, old, bald-headed lecturer and mesmerist, thumping the egg-shaped head of a young man I remembered to have met that afternoon in some law office; "phrenology," repeated the professor—"phrenology," the term phrenology—is derived from two Greek words signifying mind and discourse; hence we find embodied in phrenology proper, the science of intellectual measurement, together with the capacity of intelligent communication of the varying mental forces and their inflexibilities, etc., etc.

The study, then, of phrenology is, to simplify it wholly—is, I say, the general contemplation of the workings of the mind as made manifest through the certain corresponding depressions and protuberances of the human skull when, of course, in a healthy state of action and development, as we find the conditions exemplified in the subject before us."

Here the "subject" vaguely smiled.

"You recognize that mug, don't you?" whispered my friend. "It's that curious young ass, you know, Hedrick—in Cummings' office—trying to study law and literature at the same time, and tampering with 'The Monster That Annually,' don't you know?—where we found the two young students scuffling round the office, and smelling of peppermint?—Hedrick, you know, and Sweeney, Sweeney, the slim chap, with the pallid face, and frog-eyes, and clammy hands! You remember I told you 'there was a pair of 'em?' Well, they're up to something here tonight. Hedrick, there on the stage in front; and Sweeney—don't you see?—with the gang on the rear seats."

"Phrenology—again," continued the lecturer, "is, we may say, a species of mental geography, as it were; which—by the study of the skull—leads also to a study of the brain within, even as geology naturally follows the initial contemplation of the earth's surface. The brain, thurfur, or intellectual report, as we may say, natively exerts a molding influence on the skull contour; thurfur is the expert in phrenology most readily enabled to accurately locate the multitudinous intellectual forces, and most exactly estimate, as well, the sequent character of each subject submitted to his scrutiny. As, in the example before us—a young man, doubtless well known in your midst, though, I may say, an entire stranger to myself—I venture to disclose some characteristic trends and tendencies, as indicated by this phrenological depression and development of the skull proper, as later we will show, through the mesmeric condition, the accuracy of our mental diagnosis."

Throughout the latter part of this speech my friend nudged me spasmodically, whispering something which was jostled out of intelligent utterance by some inward spasm of laughter.

"In this head," said the professor, straddling his malleable fingers across the young man's bumpy brow—"In this head we find ideality large—abnormally large, in fact; thurbur indicating—taken in conjunction with a like development of the perceptive qualities—language following, as well, in the prominent eye—thurbur indicating, I say, our subject as especially endowed with a love for the beautiful—the sublime—the elevating—the refined and delicate—the lofty and superb—in nature, and in all the sublimated attributes of the human heart and beatific soul. In fact, we find this young man possessed of such natural gifts as would befit him for the exalted career of the sculptor, the actor, the artist, or the poet—any ideal calling; in fact, any calling but a practical, matter-of-fact vocation; though in poetry he would seem to best succeed." "Well," said my friend seriously, "he's feeling for the boy!" Then laughingly: "Hedrick has written some rhymes for the country papers, and Sweeney once introduced him at an Old Settlers' meeting as 'the best poet in Center Township,' and never cracked a smile! Always after each other that way, but the best of friends in the world. Sweeney's strong suit is elocution. He has a native ability that way by no means ordinary, but even that gift he abuses and distorts simply to produce grotesque, and oftentimes, ridiculous effects. For instance, nothing more delights him than to 'loathfully' consent to answer a request at the Mite society, some evening, for an appropriate selection; and then, with an elaborate introduction of the same, and an exalted tribute to the refined genius of the author, proceed with a most gruesome rendition of 'Alozgo the Brave and the Fair Imogene,' in a way to coagulate the blood and curl the hair of his fair listeners with abject terror. Pale as a corpse, you know, and with that cadaverous face, lit with those malignant-looking eyes, his slender figure, and his long, thin legs and arms and hands, and his whole diabolical talent and adroitness brought into play—why, I want to say to you, it's enough to scare 'em to death! Never a smile from him, though, till he and Hedrick are safe out into the night again—then, of course, they hug each other and howl over it like Modocs! But pardon; I'm interrupting the lecture. Listen."

"A lack of continuity, however," continued the professor, "and an undue love of approbation, would measurably, at least, tend to retard the young man's progress toward the consummation of any loftier ambition, I fear; yet as we have intimated, if the subject were appropriately educated to the need's demand, he could doubtless produce a high order of both prose and poetry—especially the latter—though he could very illly bear being laughed at for his pains."

"He's dead wrong there," said my friend; "Hedrick enjoys being laughed at; he's used to it—gets fat on it!" "Is fond of his friends," continued the professor, "and the heartier they are the better; might even be convulsively inclined—if so tempted—but prudent—in a degree," loiteringly concluded the speaker, as though unable to find the exact bump with which to bolster up the last named attribute.

"My head was leant
Where, with it, blent
A maiden's, o'er her instrument;
While all the night,
From vale to height,
Was filled with echoes of delight.
"And all our dreams
Were lit with gleams
Of that lost land of reedy streams,
Along whose brim
Forever swim
Pan's lilies, laughing up at him."
And still the inspired singer held rapt sway.

"It is wonderful!" I whispered, under my breath.
"Of course it is!" answered my friend. "But listen; there is more!"
"But yesterday! . . .
O blooms of May,
And summer roses—where away?
O stars above;
And lips of love,
And all the honeyed sweets thereof!—
"O lad and lass,
And orchard pass,
And briared lane, and daisied grass!
O gleam and gloom,
And woodland bloom,
And breezy breaths of all perfume!—
"No more for me
Or mine shall be Thy raptures—save in memory—
No more—no more—
Till through the door
Of glory gleam the days of yore."
This was the evident conclusion of the remarkable utterance, and the professor was impetuously fluttering his hands about the subject's upward-staring eyes, stroking his temples, and scrapping his fingers in his face.

The subject blushed vividly—my friend's right eyelid dropped, and there was a noticeable, though elusive sensation throughout the audience.
"But!" said the professor explosively, "selecting a direct opposite subject, in conjunction with the study of the one before us (turning to the group at the rear of the stage and beckoning), we may find a newer interest in the practical comparison of these subjects side by side." And the professor pushed a very pale young man into position.
"Sweeney!" whispered my friend delightedly; "now look out!"
"In this subject," said the professor, "we find the practical business head. Square—though small—a trifle light at the base, in fact; but well balanced at the important points at least; thoughtful—eyes wide-awake—crafty—quick—restless—a polly eye, though not denoting language—unless, perhaps, mere business forms and direct statements."
"Fooled again!" whispered my friend; "and I'm afraid the old man will fall to nest out the fact also that Sweeney is the cold-bloodedest gayer on the face of the earth, and with more diabolical resources than a prosecuting attorney; the professor ought to know this, too, by this time—for these same two chaps have been visiting the old man in his room at the hotel—that's what I was trying to tell you a while ago. The old chap thinks he's 'playing' the boys, in my idea; but it's the other way, or I lose my guess."

"Now, under the mesmeric influence—if the two subjects will consent to its administration," said the professor, after some further tedious preamble, "we may at once determine the fact of my assertions, as will be proved by their action while in this peculiar state." Here some apparent remonstrance was met from both subjects, though amicably overcome by the professor first manipulating the stolid brow and pallid front of the imperishable Sweeney—after which the same mysterious ordeal was loathfully submitted to by Hedrick—though a noticeably longer time was consumed in securing his final loss of self-control. At last, however, this curious phenomenon, was presented, and there before us stood the two swaying figures, the heads dropped back, the lifted hands, with thumb and finger-tips pressed lightly together, the eyelids languid and half closed, and the features, in appearance, wan and humid.

"Now, sir!" said the professor, leading the limp Sweeney forward, and addressing him in a quick, sharp tone of voice. "Now, sir, you are a great contractor—own large factories and with untold business interests. Just look out there! (Pointing out across the expectant audience) look there, and see the countless minions toiling servilely at your dread mandates. And yet—ha! ha! See! see! They recognize the avaricious greed that would thus grind them in the very dust; they see, alas! they see themselves, half-clothed, half-fed, that you may glut your coffers. Half-starved, they listen to the wall of wife and babe, and with eyes upraised in prayer, they see you rolling in in gilded coach, and swathed in silk attire. But—ha! again! Look—look! they are rising in revolt against you! Speak to them before too late! Appeal to them—quell them with the promise of the just advance of wages they demand!"

The limp figure of Sweeney took on something of a stately and majestic air. With a graceful and commanding gesture of the hand, he advanced a step or two; then, after a pause of some seconds' duration, in which the lifted face grew pale, as it seemed, and the eyes a denser black, he said:
"But yesterday
I looked away

O'er happy lands, where sunshine lay
In golden biots,
Inlaid with spots
Of shade and wild forget-me-nots."
The voice was low, but clear, and even musical. The professor started at the strange utterance, looked extremely confused, and as the bolsterous crowd cried "Hear, hear!" he motioned the subject to continue, with some gasping comment interjected, which, if audible, would have run thus: "My God! It's an inspirational poem!"
"My head was fair
With flaxen hair—"
resumed the subject.
"Yoop-ee!" yelled an irreverent auditor.
"Silence! silence!" commanded the excited professor in a hoarse whisper; then, turning enthusiastically to the subject: "Go on, young man! Go on! Thy head was fair with flaxen hair—"
"My head was fair
With flaxen hair,
And fragrant breezes, faint and rare,
And warm with drought
From vnt the south,
Blew all my curls across my mouth."
The speaker's voice, exquisitely modulated, yet resonant as the twang of a harp, now seemed of itself to draw and hold each listener; while a certain extravagance of gesticulation—a fantastic movement of both form and feature—seemed very near akin to fascination. And so flowed on the curious utterance:
"And, cool and sweet,
My naked feet Found dewy pathways through the wheat;
And out again
Where, down the lane,
The dust was dimpled with the rain."
In the pause following there was a breathless, almost painful silence. The poem went on:
"But yesterday
I heard the lay
Of summer birds, when I, as they
With breast and wing,
All quivering
With life and love, could only sing.

an idiotic way, "how did the old thing work?" And it was in the consequent hilarity and loud and long applause, perhaps, that the professor, relieved from the explanation of this rather astounding phenomenon of the idealistic workings of a purely practical brain—or, as my impious friend scoffed the incongruity later, in a particularly withering allusion, as the "blank-blanked fallacy, don't you know, of staying the hunger of a howling mob by feeding 'em on spring poetry!"
The tumult of the audience did not cease even with the retirement of Sweeney, and cries of "Hedrick! Hedrick!" only subsided with the professor's high-keyed announcement that the subject was even then endeavoring to make himself heard, but could not until utter quiet was restored, adding the further appeal that the young man had already been a long time under the mesmeric spell, and ought not to be so detained for an unnecessary period. "See," he concluded, with an assuring wave of the hand toward the subject, "see, he is about to address you. Now, quiet—utter quiet, if you please!"
"Great heavens!" exclaimed my friend stifflingly; "just look at the boy! Get on to the position for a poet! Even Sweeney had fled from the sight of him!"
"And truly, too, it was a grotesque pose the young man had assumed; not wholly ridiculous, either, since the dwarfed position he had settled into seemed more a genuine physical condition than an affected one. The head back-tilted, and sunk between the shoulders, looked abnormally large, while the features of the face appeared peculiarly childlike—especially the eyes—wakeful and wide apart, and very bright, yet very mild and very artless; and the drawn and cramped outline of the legs and feet, and of the arms and hands, even to the shrunken, slender-looking fingers, all combined to convey most strikingly to the pained senses the fragile frame and piny figure of some pitiable afflicted child, unconscious altogether of the pathos of its own deformity."
"Now, mark the cuss, Horatio!" gasped my friend.

At first the speaker's voice came very low, and somewhat piping, too, and broken—an eery sort of voice it was, of brittle and erratic timbre undulant inflection. Yet it was beautiful. It had the ring of childhood in it, though the ring was not pure golden, and at times fell echoesless. The spirit of its utterance was always clear and pure and crisp and cheery as the twitter of a bird, and yet forever ran an undercurrent through it like a low-pleading prayer. Half garulously, and like a shallow brook might brawl across a shelvy bottom, the rhythmic little chattering thus began:
"I'm thist a little crippled boy, an' never goin' to grow
An' git a great big man at all!—'cause aunty told me so . . .
When I was thist a baby on't I falled out of the bed
An' got 'the curv'ture of the spine'—
'at's what the doctor said,
I never had no mother nen—fer my pa runned away
An' dassn't come back here no more—'cause he was drunk one day
An' stobbed a man in thist-ere town, an' couldn't pay his fine!
An' nen my ma she died—an' I got 'curv'ture of the spine'!"

A few titterings from the younger people in the audience marked the opening stanza, while a certain restlessness, a changing to more attentive positions seemed the general tendency. The old professor in the meanwhile had sunk into one of the empty chairs. The speaker went on with more gaiety:
"I'm nine years old! An' you can't guess how much I weigh, I bet!—
Last birthday I weighed thirty-three—
An' I weigh thirty yet!
I'm awful little fer my size—I'm purt' nigh littler 'an
Some babies is!—an' neighbors all calls me 'The Little Man'!"
An' Doc one time he laughed an' said: 'I spect, first think you know, You'll have a little spike-tailed coat an' travel with a show!'
An' nen I laughed—till I looked round an' Aunty was a-cryin'— Sometimes she acts like that, 'cause I got 'curv'ture of the spine'!"

Just in front of me a great broad-shouldered countryman, with a rainy smell in his cumbersome overcoat, cleared his throat vehemently, looked startled at the sound, and again settled forward, his weedy chin resting on the knuckles of his hands as they tightly clutched the seat before him. And it was like being taken into a childish confidence as the quaint speech continued:
"I set—while Aunty's washin'—on my little long-leg stool,
An' watch the little boys an' girls a-skippin' by to school;
An' I peek on the winder, an' holler out an' say:
'Who wants to fight the Little Man 'at dares you all today?'
An' nen the boys climbs on the fence, an' little girls peeks through,
An' they all says: 'Cause you're so big you think we're 'feared o' you!'
An' nen they yell, an' shake their fists at me, like I shake mine—They're thist in fun, you know, 'cause I got 'curv'ture of the spine'!"
"Well," whispered my friend, with rather odd irreverence, I thought, "of course you see through the scheme of the fellows by this time, don't you?"
"I see nothing," said I, most earnestly, "but a poor little wisp of a child that makes me love him so I dare not think of his dying soon, as he surely must: There; listen!" And the plaintive gait of the homely poem ran on:

"At evening, when the iron's done,
an' an' aunty's fixed the fire,
An' filled an' lit the lamp, an' trimmed the wick an' turned it higher,
An' fetched the wood all in fer night,
an' locked the kitchen door,
An' stuffed the ole crack where the wind blows in up through the floor—
She sets the kettle on the coals, an' biles an' makes the tea,
An' fries the liver an' the mush, an' cooks a egg fer me;
An' sometimes—when I cough so hard her elderly wine
Don't go so bad fer little boys with 'curv'ture of the spine'!"
"Look!" whispered my friend, touching me with his elbow. "Look at the professor!"
"Look at everybody!" said I. And the artless little voice went on again half quaveringly:
"But aunty's all so childlike on my account, you see,
I'm most afeared she'll be took down— an' 'at's what bothers me:—
'Cause of my good ole aunty ever would git sick an' die,
I don't know what she'd do in heaven— till I come, by an' by:—
Fer she's so ust to all my ways, an' ever'thing, you know,
An' no one there like me, to nurse an' worry over so!—
'Cause all the little children there's so straight an' strong an' fine, They's nary angel 'bout the place with 'curv'ture of the spine'!"

The old professor's face was in his handkerchief; and so was my friend's in his; and so was mine in mine, as even now my pen drops and I reach for it again.
I half regret joining the mad party that had gathered an hour later in the old law office where these two graceless characters held almost nightly revel, the instigators and conniving hosts of a reputed banquet whose menu's range confined itself to herrings, or "blind robins," dried beef, and cheese, with crackers, gingerbread, and sometimes pie; the whole washed down with anything but "—Wines that heaven knows when
Had sucked the fire of some forgotten sun,
And kept it through a hundred years of gloom
Still glowing in a heart of ruby."
But the affair was memorable. The old professor was himself lured into it and loudest in his praise of Hedrick's realistic art; and I yet recall him at the orgie's height, excitedly repulsing the continued slurs and insinuations of the clammy-handed Sweeney, who, still contending against the old man's fulsome praise of his more fortunate rival, at last openly declared that Hedrick was not a poet, not a genius, and in no way worthy to be classed in the same breath with himself—"the gifted but unfortunate Sweeney, sir—the unacknowledged author, sir 'y gad, sir— of the two poems that held you spell-bound tonight!"

WHY PAY CUSTOMS DUTIES?
One Way by Which They Can Be Evaded, at Least Along the Rio Grande River.
There are ways of evading duty down on the Rio Grande impossible to the port of New York. The Mexican found a way. He was a merchant just on the other side of the Mexican border. He had two vases which had caught the fancy of an American customer, but they were dear, and with the duty added—not to be thought of. The customer told the Mexican so. The Mexican fell five dollars. But the price was still too dear. The Mexican fell again. But still there was the duty staring the customer in the face. Then, suddenly, without explaining how, the Mexican guaranteed that the vases should be delivered, free of duty, on the other side of the Rio Grande—next morning at breakfast time.
"And," the Mexican added, in a characteristic manner, "I will be there to collect."
At breakfast next morning, as the customer was eating leisurely, the Mexican appeared.
"Where are the vases?" the customer inquired.
"In the next room, senior," replied the Mexican, smiling blandly.
"And the duty?"
"There is no duty, senior."
"How in thunder did you manage it?" asked the American, amazed.
"I paid a greaser a dollar, senior. With the vases strapped to his back, he swam the Rio Grande. See, senior"—hurrying to bring in a vase from the next room, and touching it gently with his fingers—"they are whole—perfect."

Signal of Distress.
His waistcoat was wonderful.
His tie was tremendous.
His socks were positively superhuman.
In order to display which his trousers were tucked up to a ludicrous height.
An urchin plucked him by the sleeve.
"Lost someb, guv'nor?" queried the youth sympathetically.
The swell swelled with indignation. "Of course not, fellow!" he responded contemptuously, proceeding on his way.
"Cat or dog dead, guv'nor?" queried the youngster, following.
"Bai Jove!" snapped the "nob," distinctly annoyed. "Why do you ask such stupid questions?"
"Why, guv'nor," called the urchin, "eos I see yer got yer trousers at 'arimast'."

"PHRENOLOGY," SAID THE LITTLE, OLD, BALD-HEADED LECTURER AND MESMERIST.

HOW TO FIGURE OUT BUILDING EXPENSES

Expert Advises Against Big Debt Running Over Long Period of Years.

TAKE QUALITY BEFORE SIZE

House Described Here Will Satisfy Most Discriminative if Plans Are Followed Carefully in All Details.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

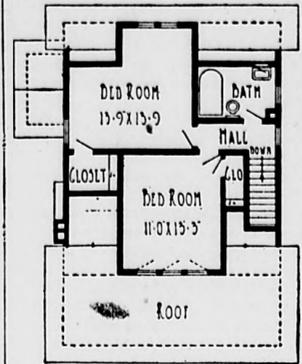

There is little satisfaction gained by the man who goes into the building of a home blindly. In most cases such a man oversteps himself, gets hopelessly in debt and condemns the home-building idea because of his own folly. Most people obtain such pleasure out of owning their own home that they are willing to make some sacrifice to obtain it. However, if this sacrifice takes the proportions of a burden which must be carried for too long a time, its oppression will overshadow the pleasure which should be obtained from the home.

This does not mean that a man is wrong in going into debt to obtain a home. It means that he think well and figure carefully before taking action. If he can easily clear up all indebtedness in three or perhaps five years, he is justified in going into the matter of a home with his architect and builder.

His first step in the analysis of the problem should be carefully to figure his probable resources over the period which he is willing to give to paying for his home. The man who has formed the habit of recording his current expenses accurately is very much better able to handle the problem than the man who has only his memory to help him. Suppose the prospective home builder decides that he is willing to build if he can clear himself in five years. He should look over his expense account for the preceding five years and determine as closely as possible what his yearly expense has been for food, clothing, pleasure, sickness and all other such items, exclusive of rent.

If his expenses have shown an increase over the five-year period, it is

A rough balance may here be established. There is a certain amount which may be spent in the construction of the house so that the expenses before the house is built will be equal to those after the house is built. Ordinarily, when this condition exists the total cost of construction must be paid from a sum in the hands of the owner at the time of building. In case it is necessary to borrow a portion of the money, the expenses over the five-year period will include the amount borrowed, plus interest up to the time of payment. Of course, if the house is paid for out of a sum which has been earning interest, this interest will cease coming in. The interest amounts will probably balance one another, since in one case an amount ceases to come in, which is practically equal, for a like principal, to the amount which must be paid out, in the other case. The difference in the two cases, then, comes down to a matter of the principal alone: If the house-construction cost is paid all or in part with borrowed money, the expenses over the five-year period will be greater by the amount borrowed than they would be if the money was all in hand at the time of building.

Having determined as nearly as possible the amount which is to be invested in the house, the final expenses should be estimated. These will include probable taxes and sewer assessments and principal with interest on any money borrowed. This amount should be added to the original amount computed.

Regarding the house itself, there are two principal things which should be remembered: The first is that quality materials and quality workmanship should be given preference over size of structure and fast construction. The second is that there is always a certain amount of expense connected with the erection of a house which does not show up in the estimate, an amount up to, say, 5 per cent of the estimated cost of the house. Having followed out all of the calculations accurately, the prospective home builder may reasonably expect to obtain the fullest measure of satisfaction out of his investment in a home.

The accompanying illustrations present a type of house which is at the same time attractive and substantial. It is not very often that the combination of stone masonry and stucco is used in house construction, and it is a peculiar fact, for the appearance of a structure built in this way is altogether pleasing and satisfactory.

The massiveness of the masonry work fits well into the design and the stucco carries along the general idea to the smallest detail. Stone is used in building the porch walls and the chimney. The porch columns are built of wood with stucco finish. The floor of the porch and the steps are made of concrete. The large roof surface is relieved with small dormers. Rafters at gable ends are supported with wooden brackets.

In the room arrangement, notice the large living room. This room occupies the entire forward half of the first floor. An open stair is built along one end of the room with a landing at the bottom which is two steps above the level of the living room floor. At the other end of the room is a large fireplace with a bookcase on each side. The small closet directly opposite the front door will be handy for wraps.

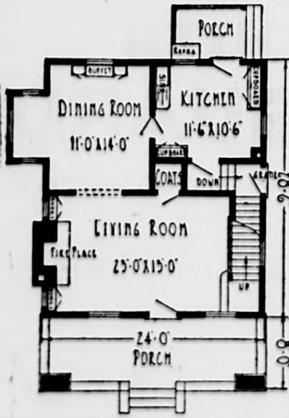

The dining room layout includes a three-window bay, which makes this room well-lighted and pleasant. A buffet is built under the window in the rear wall. Notice the handy arrangement of the kitchen. The two cupboards will be found very convenient. The second floor contains two generous-sized bedrooms.

Homelike Five-Room Stucco House.

probable that he should estimate a like increase over the next period of five years. This data should be worked over carefully so that an accurate estimate of probable expenses lumped together over the five-year period will result.

The next step consists in estimating the income which may be relied upon over the five-year period. This amount should not include any doubtful resources, and it should not include interest on money which is needed in the building operations, unless it is possible to borrow a like amount at a lower rate than the income rate. The next item is the money on hand or available in sums due the prospective home builder. This item will determine largely the kind and size of house to be considered.

BROKEN DOWN IN HEALTH

Woman Tells How $5 Worth of Pinkham's Compound Made Her Well.

Lima, Ohio.—"I was all broken down in health from a displacement. One of my lady friends came to see me and she advised me to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I began taking your remedies and took $5.00 worth and in two months was a well woman after three doctors said I never would stand up straight again. I was a midwife for seven years and I recommended the Vegetable Compound to every woman to take before birth and afterwards, and they all got along so nicely that it surely is a godsend to suffering women. If women wish to write to me I will be delighted to answer them."—Mrs. JENNIE MOYER, 342 E. North St., Lima, Ohio.

Women who suffer from displacements, weakness, irregularities, nervousness, backache, or bearing-down pains, need the tonic properties of the roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Told Truth for 146 Years.

On Lincoln's birthday, an aged man was brought into the jail at Butte, Mont., for drunkenness. When he proved that he had voted and fought for Lincoln, Jailer Lavell sent him home in a taxicab. Word of this got around town, and on Washington's birthday a "drunk" announced that he had voted for Washington.

"You must be a pretty old man," the jailer said.

"Past eighty," ventured the drunk.

"You'll have to come again," declared the jailer.

"I didn't say how much past eighty," cautiously replied the alleged drunkard.

"What's Washington famous for?" asked Lavell, as he continued his work of writing the man's name down on the blotter.

"He never told a lie," promptly answered the old fellow.

"And I suppose you are following his example?"

"You bet your life," said the drunkard.

"Bring this fellow to jail and we'll charge him with lying," instructed the jailer to one of his assistants.—Butte Post.

HOME TOWN HELPS

AGAINST THE WOODEN FENCE

New York Society Seeks to Substitute Wire for Boards Around Yards of Tenement Houses.

Wooden fences, such as mark off yards in the rear of most tenement houses, have been condemned by the tenement house committee of the Charity Organization Society of New York. "Long dreary rows of hideous board fences, which invite fire and the accumulation of rubbish," must go and in their place be substituted by open wire fences, the committee declares.

"Every owner of an apartment or tenement house, every builder and architect will be called upon in this campaign. It is the purpose to wage a crusade for several months, investigators being convinced that the open wire fence will do much to provide more attractive and sanitary rear yards through the city.

"A constant fire danger, an excellent hiding place for thieves, an encouragement to the accumulation of rubbish, quickly weatherworn and transformed into an eyesore, the board fence makes tenement yards worse than useless.

"Children find them unattractive to play in; they are no incentives for planting grass and flowers; they detract from the tenant's supply of light and air, and are in every way undesirable.

"With the change to metal fences tenement yards will become attractive playgrounds for children, will encourage competition among tenants in keeping the premises clean, and in addition will allow the light and air to circulate freely.

"The use of metal fences in tenement yards should do more to solve the problem of providing play space for children than any movement that has been undertaken in years."

STREET THAT NEEDS NO CURB

New Pavement Has Inverted Crown So That Water Drains Through the Middle of the Thoroughfare.

The streets of a new residence district in Cedar Rapids, Ia., have been improved recently with an inverted-crown concrete paving. That is, the center of the street is a trifle lower than the sides, so that the water drains down through the middle of the thoroughfare. This makes curbs unnecessary.

Inverted-Crown Pavement.

sary and is said to have proven very satisfactory. In case a pavement that is laid without curb has the usual curved crown the water will eventually wash away the earth under the edges. This concrete was laid 5 inches thick and 18 feet wide, with expansion joints inserted every 30 feet.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Misuse of Vines.

The mission of the vine is not to smother and obscure the beauty of architecture, but to embellish it lightly, with a delicate, almost fragile touch; to relieve the harsh monotonous lines too often present. Vines lose their beauty as they lose all chance of contrast with architecture over which they clamber. Buildings and other man-made things are unchanging; vines are constantly changing. The beauty of contrast is greatest while the first-present is still dominant. When the building or other object is half covered with vines the charm and beauty of contrast is on the wane. There is, in addition, an air of desolation and neglect about any object entirely or even nearly covered with vines. It suggests abandonment by man to the gradual annihilation by the forces of nature, the contemplation of which is unpleasant. It is the duty of man to subdue nature ere this coarse overgrowth becomes too pronounced. Preserve the "delicate, clinging mantle of the vine."

Growing Street Trees.

Trees grown for street or highway planting, especially the deciduous species and varieties, should be grown for two or three years in the nursery and transplanted once each year, root-pruned and top-pruned at each moving. This treatment will induce a vigorous and well-distributed root system of a great number of feeding fibers in a small area. The side shoots on the stem should be removed to a height of six or seven feet, carefully trimming the trunk so scars will heal over smooth. The earlier these are removed the quicker will the recovery be and the smoother the tree trunk. Trees so treated will at three years of age be ten to fifteen feet high with a diameter of at least two inches at the base. Trees so grown will quickly adjust themselves to new positions and after the first year prove quite resourceful if left to themselves, without special care if in favorable locations.

Is Your Back Stiff, Lame and Achy?

Do Weak Kidneys Keep You Sick, Tired and All Worn Out?

IF YOU have a constant, dull ache, or sharp pains whenever you bend or twist your back, and the kidney secretions seem disordered, too, don't waste time plastering or rubbing the bad back. It's likely that the cause is kidney weakness, and delay in treating the kidneys may invite uric acid poisoning, gravel, dropsy or fatal Bright's disease.

Personal Reports of Real Cases

CONFINED TO BED.

Henry Duncan, 3 Nashua St., Manchester, N. H., says: "For over fifteen years I had kidney complaint and steadily got worse until little hope was held out for my recovery. The pains in my back were awful and during one spell I was helpless. The kidney secretions pained until I was almost frantic and gradually my system became weakened until I thought I was done for. During one spell, the doctor had to give me morphine. I was confined to bed and doctors said I had but a short time to live. At that critical time, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and they saved my life. I am now a well man."

CURE HAS LASTED.

Mrs. H. A. Lyon, 5 St. William St., South Boston, Mass., says: "My feet and ankles were so swollen as the result of kidney trouble that I had to wear large size slippers. My back ached terribly across my kidneys and nights found me restless and unable to sleep. I had awful headaches and weak spells and my kidneys didn't act right at all. When a friend recommended Doan's Kidney Pills, I tried them and soon noticed improvement. My back got stronger and I felt better in every way. A few boxes cured me and for years the cure has lasted. I can't recommend Doan's Kidney Pills too highly."

FIRST CHURCH NOTES.

Everyone is invited to attend the morning service at 10:30 A. M. Rev. Edgar Davidson of Boston will occupy the pulpit. Special music will be rendered by the girls' chorus.

THE WHITE CHURCH.

Sunday service at the "White Church" will seek to reflect the spirit of Mother's Day. At 10:30 morning worship and service; pastor's topic, "In honor of Mother."

Church Bible class at noon. Brotherhood Bible class will discuss "Applied Christianity and Modern Family Life."

Endeavor Societies will meet at 4 P. M. Juniors; and 6 P. M., Seniors.

The "people's evening service" at 7 o'clock, in the church auditorium, will bring the pastor's special message to the women. There is an appeal in the Christian Gospel to womanhood which is unique in its emphasis. The evening message will seek to set forth this fact. Weymouth women are especially urged to attend. While the address is in force addressed to women, it is in no way exclusive. Men and women may freely attend, and all are most cordially invited.

Let the Church of Christ aid you in hallowing the name and memory of mother on "Mother's Day."

WARD THREE BRANCH.

A meeting of the Weymouth Landing Branch of the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness was held at the headquarters of the society Tuesday evening. The reports of the committees showed that an unusual amount of work has been accomplished.

Richard Weston's crew of the Coast Patrol has already been supplied with sweaters, socks, wristers and scarfs, which the boys heartily appreciated.

A new committee known as the French Relief Committee was formed. Mrs. Charles Gale, the chairman, is to be assisted by Mrs. Winfield Orr, Mrs. Theodore Emerson, Mrs. F. H. Wescott, Mrs. Franklin Whitten and Mrs. Jacoby. The members of this committee are to work especially for the destitute people of France.

The society wishes to include all the women of Ward Three as members, and it cordially and urgently invites the women who have not yet joined to visit headquarters during the day or to attend the Tuesday evening meetings.

BOSTON TRAINS

All inward trains from East Weymouth on the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. stop at Weymouth Heights (4m. later), Weymouth (8m. later), East Braintree and Braintree.

All trains from Boston also stop at Braintree, East Braintree, Weymouth (8 minutes earlier) and Weymouth Heights (4 minutes earlier).

Table with 4 columns: Direction, Time, Station, and Notes. Rows include E. Weymouth to Boston and Boston to E. Weymouth for various times of day.

*When "E.M." appears in the line, train runs via West Quincy and East Milton stopping at both stations. When "Q" appears, the train runs via Quincy and stops at Quincy station. When "Exp" appears, the train runs through Quincy but does not stop at that station. Subject to change without notice.

Recout of Vote.

The Registrars of Voters, upon petition of John McCarty made a recount of the Weymouth vote for delegates from the 14th Congressional district on Wednesday evening. Gains were made as follows: Ezra W. Clark, 3; Asa P. French, 2; Louis F. K. Langeller, 2; John McCarty, 2; David P. Rice, 2. The candidates lost votes as follows: Edward P. Boynton, 2; George L. Barnes, 1, and Leo M. Harlow, 1.

Names Wanted.

The Gazette and Transcript would like the names of all Weymouth young men as they enlist for the European war, or for the Home Guards. Please give branch of the service, and if possible the post office address. We would also like the names of Weymouth women who have volunteered as nurses, and for other service.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a special meeting of Division No. 6, A. O. H., Wednesday, April 18, 1917, the following resolutions were accepted and adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His supreme wisdom to remove from our midst our beloved friend and brother WILLIAM W. LANE who passed away Tuesday, April 17, 1917;

RESOLVED, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we sincerely mourn the loss of one who was a good and faithful member of our order;

RESOLVED, That we extend to the family of our late brother, our sincere sympathy in this, their time of sorrow, and ask them to bear with Christian fortitude the great loss with which they have been afflicted and to try and take consolation from the fact that he was prepared to meet his God. May his soul rest in peace.

RESOLVED, That a copy of the resolutions, suitably engrossed, be sent to the family of our late brother and, as a mark of respect, they shall be printed in the Weymouth Gazette and spread upon our records.

Respectfully submitted, PHILIP F. HAVILAND, DANIEL A. DONOVAN.

Banquet of Bowling Teams

The bowling men and ladies banquet was held Wednesday night and a glorious time was enjoyed. After supper, Col. W. W. Castle spoke on Citizenship and then the prizes were given out. The Braves of the Men's league took first honors and Team No. 2 the Ladies'. Each received shields. The captain of the Braves was L. M. Petze. Ladies' team, Miss Margaret L. Looney. In the ladies' tournament Miss Nellie C. Looney was high single with 104, Mrs. P. A. Conathan, high total two strings, 177, and Miss Margaret L. Looney, high average, 74.

In the men's tournament, C. A. Sjostedt, high single, 127, J. J. McCarthy, high three string, 331, and Arthur Cunningham, high average, 196. Bates & Humphrey served a very good spread, and the supply was bountiful. The menu included: Cold roast turkey, mashed potatoes, chicken salad, escalloped oysters, fritters with wine sauce, mixed creams, frozen pudding, sherbet, fancy cakes, coffee and rolls. Secretary Buxton presided, and introduced the speaker. Col. Castle said he could not speak on athletics or bowling, and the past wars had been covered thoroughly. He found, however, that he knew more about the European situation than most any man in Weymouth, having been a representative of this country, before the war, in Great Britain, Belgium, Germany, France, Austria and Russia. Everywhere he saw then great preparations for war, and on his return so reported to the United States government. He advised American people above all things to keep cool. Generally they were too hysterical. "God help Roosevelt if his division ever gets to Europe." It will take many months to train an American army to cope with the life-trained armies of Europe. The speaker abhorred war, and guessed if any one present really wanted to see what it really was. He believed in compulsory training of young men. The first lesson would be obedience and discipline. Women should drop many of their foolish fads. He admitted that they were "the main-spring of a war's life," but they should not organize cavalry, or go to France to nurse. There is no great demand for so much knitting, as the soldiers do not want to be loaded down. Our citizenship stands for something—the rights of each one, and interest in the other fellow, not for glory as in Europe.

Among those present were: Col. William W. Castle, Harrison H. Buxton, Mrs. Buxton, Miss Margaret Toomey, Burton E. Durgin, Miss E. J. McIlwath, Frederick V. Nolan, Evelyn Mullen of Mattapan, Margaret Desmond, Alice F. Howley, John McCarthy, Bessie Griffin, Grace M. Ratcliffe, Helen L. Griffin, Dr. G. H. McGrath, Mrs. G. H. McGrath, Nellie C. Looney, A. Jonas Perkins School Association.

Tuesday evening the annual meeting of the Jonas Perkins School Association was held in the Abraham Lincoln school hall. A program by the children included piano solos by Miss Charlotte Haynes; chorus singing, school pupils; readings, Miss Mary Pearson; Japanese dances, girls of grade 2; flag drill, 14 girls. The committee was headed by President Arthur Haynes. At the business meeting the following officers were elected: John Vining, president; Mrs. B. F. Putnam, first vice-president; Mrs. Joseph Hamlin, second vice-president; Mrs. Thomas Baldwin, third vice-president; Lawson B. Twitchell, treasurer; Miss Maud Creswell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. R. Mosher, recording secretary; F. B. Taylor, Miss Elizabeth Pray and Mrs. E. E. Alexander, executive committee, three years; Mrs. George Walker and Mrs. Fred Tarbox, two years; Henry N. Longley, Arthur Haynes and Mrs. Edgar Bulls, one year.

PARK THEATRE, BOSTON.

Manager Thomas D. Soriero of the Park Theatre for next week is presenting to the public two more special attractions which were intended to be shown in Boston at higher prices. The patrons of the Park Theatre are seeing these productions at the usual Park Theatre popular prices as we have no intention of raising our prices for any production no matter how big they are. Our patrons will always see the latest and biggest productions made each week at this theatre. A treat is in store for the patrons in the newest Wm. A. Brady World production which head the program known as "Yankee Pluck" starring beautiful winsome star Miss Ethel Clayton. It is a story which shows how a woman's Yankee pluck wins out against a wily Jap and when the latter endeavors to secure valuable plans of an army aeroplane invented by a young army officer. It is a patriotic and timely entertainment in 5 powerful acts full of thrills and smashing climax.

New Courage.

Editor Gazette and Transcript: It will give us all new courage to read the tribute to President Wilson which has come from the powerful pen of George Harvey.

In the May number of the North American Review, Mr. Harvey concludes a paragraph in his "Call to Arms" by saying: "Study the results of the President's course, strange though at times it has seemed, with heed to Mr. Lowell's penitential conception of a magistrate worthy to be chief in a commonwealth of freemen, and accord both honor and praise to the man who was not only chosen and re-chosen by the people, but, to our mind, was clearly predestined by God to meet intelligently, masterfully and Heaven grant in the end successfully the greatest emergency in the history of the world."

GRAND CONCERT OF CHORAL SOCIETY

Large Chorus, Good Orchestra and Two Very Popular Soloists

The fifth season of the Weymouth Choral Society went out in a blaze of glory on Monday evening, when the tenth concert of the society was presented at Bates Opera House. The chorus of 50 voices was encouraged by a full house which was hearty in its approval of each number on the program, and they had confidence in their conductor, James W. Calderwood, who is the director of music in our public schools. The society was very fortunate in securing as the soloists, Mrs. Laura Comstock Littlefield, soprano, and George H. Boynton, tenor, also the Tempo Orchestral Club under the management of J. H. Tower, which includes: Miss Josephine Durrell, violin; Miss Hazel Clark, violin; Mrs. Anna Golden, viola; Miss Marion Moorhouse, cello; Hugo Boernig, bass; Harold W. Raymond, flute; Kenneth Torrey, clarinet; Samuel Crosby, Jr., trombone; J. H. Tower and H. M. Stetson, trumpets. Mrs. W. A. Hodges was the accompanist.

The program was as follows:

Hiawatha's Wedding Feast, S. Coleridge-Taylor. Mr. Boynton, chorus and orchestra.

Songs for Soprano
Mary of Allandale
Day is Gone
Lullaby
Spring

Hook Lang
Scott
Hentchell

Mrs. Littlefield

b. A Book of Verses from "In a Persian Garden", Lehmann.

Mrs. Littlefield, Mr. Boynton

Intermission of five minutes.

Motet, "Gallia", Gounod. Mrs. Littlefield, chorus and orchestra.

Both the cantatas were exceptionally well rendered. The selections of Mrs. Littlefield were all delightful and for an encore she gave a Negro song "Deep River," a truly camp meeting number. Mr. Boynton's selection also called forth an encore, as did the duet of Mrs. Littlefield and Mr. Boynton.

A fitting climax was the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner". It was not on the printed program, but all were invited to join in the singing, and they did it heartily.

In the chorus were:

Up to Us to Welcome Them

Editor Gazette & Transcript:

I wonder if we fully grasp what the immediate future has in store for us. Within the next few months, thousands—yes thousands of workmen are coming into this immediate vicinity, and it is distinctly up to us to welcome them and find them homes.

This prospective influx of workmen is due to the intense activity at the Fore River yard. Everyone knows that the yard will shortly be working at its fullest capacity; new orders aggregating millions of dollars have been entrusted to it, the new battle cruiser alone to cost over $19,000,000. The immediate development of Hayward's Creek on the part of the State portends tremendous activities—why, citizens, we're going to be swamped unless we indulge in a little Preparedness of our own.

Bear in mind that this is to be no mushroom growth. The orders in hand now will tax the utmost capacity of the yard for the next four years, and this means at least four thousand additional workmen will be needed. The destruction of shipping throughout the entire world means inevitably that for the next ten or fifteen years every shipyard will have all the construction work it can undertake. A canvass shows that there are only about 100 houses and tenements suitable, that are now vacant. Surely this is the time to build—not only in Quincy, but also in Weymouth and Braintree too.

I am glad to see that Mayor Whitton of Quincy has taken hold with his usual energy and all real estate men operating within five miles of the Fore River yard should back him to the limit. Now is the time for enterprise. It is our golden opportunity!

Yours faithfully,
JOHN BUCHANAN.

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

The Way of Coiffures

The style of coiffure that is most widely popular is shown in one of its several developments in the accompanying picture. It is a modification of the "Bobby" style which Mrs. Vernon Castle is said to have originated, and whether she created it or not, it has been at least well demonstrated and advertised by this famous dancer.

The "Bobby" coiffure is less becoming when it is dressed with the hair drawn back, leaving the forehead entirely uncovered, than in the development of it shown in the picture. Here the hair is loosely waved and brought forward, so that it partly covers the brow. At the sides it is pinned with small, invisible pins, so that it will lie on the cheek and cover the ears.

Where the forehead is left uncovered, mere prettiness is sacrificed to something a little better. This arrangement is more severe but immensely refining in its effect on young, round faces. It is not a coiffure for faces that are not youthful, but a trace of it is found in those styles which have been brought out for matrons. In all of them the hair is waved, and neatness above all else the effect to be desired, but for older women the hair is high. Few hair ornaments are worn in these more elaborate coiffures, but very short, soft curls catch the eye—and please it—in nearly every one of them.

In coiffures that follow the style pictured, the average woman has enough hair to make a success of it without any acquired locks. This may be one of the reasons why the style is so popular. Nearly all the hair is massed at the sides and about the forehead, while the ends are tucked under and concealed in the most inconspicuous way possible. The aim is to suggest the bobbed hair cut worn by little children. The very latest arrival shows this style with the forehead bare except for a single little curled lock pasted flat to it, with bandoline, at the center. This instantly brings to mind that "there was a little girl who had a little curl," etc., and perhaps it was intended to do just this.

Return of the Lace Jabot

After a rather long period of retirement the lace jabot has returned from the realm of forgotten finery. It made a quiet and almost unheralded entry a few weeks ago and immediately achieved a decisive hit with thousands of devotees of uncovered throats. Today it is the darling of fashion. The "stock" jabot with high, stock collar and falling flounce or cascade of net-top lace, has reached the pinnacle of success and brought all of its kindred into the limelight.

Not having worn jabots for so long, we appreciate just how enchanting they are, but are hardly prepared for the extravagantly high prices that are asked for even the simpler styles. From two to five dollars is demanded for well-made jabots of fine net or good net-top laces. The cheaper nets and laces appear to lose their sheerness and to thicken up with washing. When this happens their charm is gone.

It is not the price of lace but the price of labor that places jabots in the class of expensive luxuries. Women who sew for themselves can cut the cost in half by making their neckwear at home. A wide net flouncing bought in the length required for one jabot, will make two. Those of plain net are prettily finished with hemstitched hems, pleat edges or with tatting or very narrow, fine crochet lace.

Crepe georgette and all-over laces, finished with hemstitching, make successful jabots and narrow tucks provide as pretty decoration as any for them. A good example of a lace jabot is shown in the picture and its construction is very simple. A straight piece of the lace edge forms the stock, with turn-over at the top, and the flounce is laid in plaits and sewed to it. A narrow lace finishes the lower edge of the stock and the ends of the flounce. There are any number of ways for arranging the fullness of the jabot and attaching it to the stock.

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS.

A safe fire kindler is this, prepared by the saving one of the household. All bits of trimmings, threads ravelings are wound into a small ball, put into a bag behind the stove, then when a kindler is wanted, a ball is moistened with kerosene from a bottle and applied to the wood in the stove, when lighted by a match, it burns long enough to start the wood to burning. This same bottle of kerosene moistens a cloth to keep the porcelain sink white and stainless. One may make her own baking powder, having it pure and at less cost. Mix a pound of pure cream of tartar, six ounces of tartaric acid and a pint of flour together and sift at least five or six times. Place in tin cans and keep tightly covered; use as any other baking powder.

If suede shoes become shiny, rub with a fine piece of emery paper. When shoes squeak run linseed oil into the sole. Sandpaper also removes the shine from clothing.

Mix flour with lye and fill the mouse holes. The most courageous mouse will not reopen such a hole.

An emergency funnel may be made by rolling into a cone shape a piece of writing paper.

A new kind of toast. Slice a loaf of bread through to the lower crust, leaving that intact. Place the loaf in the oven until thoroughly heated and slightly crisp around the edges. Serve the loaf whole and very hot; each may then be served with a hot slice. It may be buttered before going into the oven if desired.

A handy pie crimper is made by using a large screw along the edge of the pie.

An upholstered chair may be cleaned nicely after a thorough dusting in the open air. Rub it with a good big pan of hot bran, brush well and the chair will be clean.

Let a tough steak lie in olive oil and vinegar, turning it once during the softening process. An hour will serve to soften the fibers of the meat, making it very much more palatable. Use equal parts of oil and vinegar.

To clean spots on silk without leaving a ring, use a paste of magnesia and gasoline. Rub dry and air well before using the garment.

Photographs which have become soiled by dust and dry specks may be cleaned with a cloth dampened in alcohol.

Duty is a power which rises with us in the morning and goes to rest with us at night. It is the shadow that cleaves to us, go where we will, and which leaves us only when we leave the light of life.—W. E. Gladstone.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

Among the following may be found some dish which will appeal to the taste of a few members of the family.

Savory Chicken Fricassee.—Cut up a four-pound chicken, put the legs, wings, neck and giblets in the bottom of a stewpan; chop together a fourth of a cupful of ham, three medium-sized onions, one pimento, and sprinkle this over the layer of chicken, season with salt and pepper and place the remainder of the chicken on this, cover with boiling water, cover tightly and simmer for one hour. The gravy should be thickened with flour, it may be blended with a little of the broth, using a tablespoonful of flour to a cupful of broth.

Crumpets.—Dissolve a half of a compressed-yeast cake in a little warm milk, add more, making three cupfuls of milk, add a half teaspoonful of salt, and stir in four cupfuls of flour, let stand overnight, and in the morning add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and a fourth of a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a tablespoonful of hot water. Beat thoroughly, put into well-buttered muffin rings, filling them half full; let rise a half-hour and bake in a quick oven.

Chili Con Carne.—Grind a pound of round steak, then brown it in two teaspoonfuls of beef drippings. Cover with boiling water, cook until tender, season with salt and a tablespoonful of chili powder, add a can of kidney beans, two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, a quart of tomatoes and simmer until the tomato pulp is entirely absorbed. Serve hot with rice.

Baked Ham With Apples.—Have a slice of ham cut an inch thick, wipe, trim off most of the fat, and rub in as much of 1½ cupfuls of brown sugar as it will take up. Lay in a pan and cover with ten cloves. Pare and cut six tart apples in quarters and lay them around the ham. Sprinkle the remaining sugar over the apples and add a half cupful of water carefully, not to dislodge the sugar. Cover and bake 45 minutes, or until the ham is tender.

Still water greenest meadows; and the bird That flutters least is longest on the wing. —Cowper.

HOUSEKEEPERS' HINTS.

We have all had trouble keeping vinegar cruets bright and shining, but here is an easy method. Put about a quarter of a teaspoonful of concentrated lye into the cruet and fill with soap suds. Let it stand, shaking it occasionally, for a half day, when all the brown sediment will be removed and the glass will be bright and shining.

To clean white enamel woodwork with little labor, use warm water to which has been added a few tablespoonfuls of whitening, a cheap substance which can be bought at any drug store. Wipe and rub dry with a dry cloth.

Ozone cleans engravings and bleaches paper perfectly without injuring the fiber. It can also be used for removing mildew and other stains from engravings and pictures that have been soiled by hanging against a damp wall. The ozone may be generated by putting a piece of phosphorus in the bottom of a vessel partly covered with water. Put the picture over the dish so that the fumes will do the bleaching.

Gilt frames which have become discolored may be brightened if they are thoroughly cleaned. With a small brush remove all dust, then brush with the white of egg beaten with a pinch of salt and soda. After a few minutes wash this off with soft water and dry with a flannel cloth.

A bulky curtain rod, if small enough to slip a thimble over, will slip through the lace without a protest. If a larger pole is used, wrap the end with a piece of cloth tied firmly over the end.

There are a few people who still are unaware that a drawer that sticks may be disciplined with a piece of soap rubbed on its edges.

Ways of lightening the labor of window washing: A teaspoonful of glycerin and a little ammonia to a gallon of water is said to make windows sparkle like crystal. Another: Add a tablespoonful of vinegar to a quart of water. Wash with a soft cloth and wipe dry with a lintless dry one.

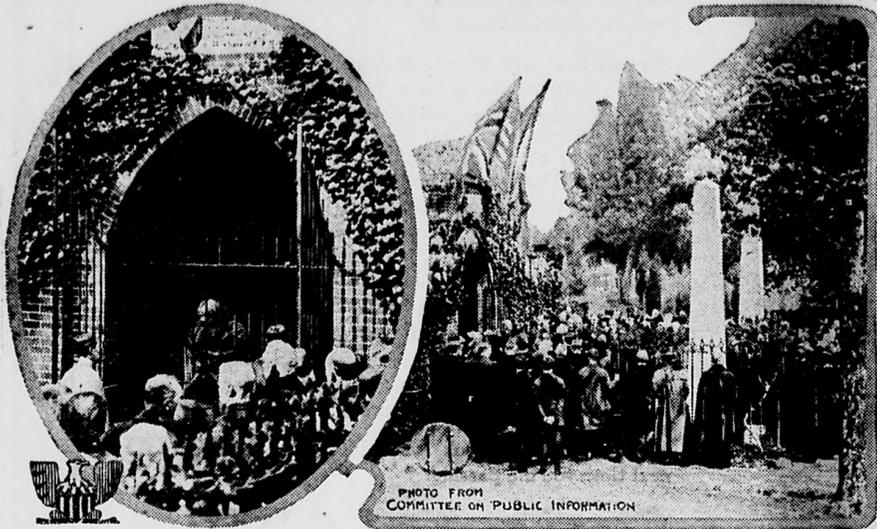

Matting may be shellaced thus preserving it and also staining it any color to match the room furnishings.

J. J. Dowling

Dear Sir:--

I am sorry that the rigid physical requirements make it impossible for you to serve your country in the Navy in time of war. There is good reason for such rigid requirements, so you should not worry about not passing.

I feel that since you have been patriotic enough to volunteer, you should have something to show for it, so that no one will have the right to call you a "Slacker." Therefore, with this letter is a button for your coat. Wear it. It is an honor to have the right to.

If, as a result of wearing this button, and showing this letter, you influence some other man to come forward, you may, in that way, help your country, possibly as much as if you had actually "done your bit" in the Navy.

Now, just a word of caution. It would be highly dishonorable for you to permit any one else to wear this button. It would give him a chance to pretend to do what you have actually done. If you do not care to wear it, and treasure it, put it in an envelope and mail it to any Navy Recruiting Officer. But the right thing to do is to wear it and be proud of it. And if any one ever questions your patriotism, show him this letter. It shows that you have honestly tried to do your duty by your country.

Respectfully,
J. H. Taylor
 U.S. Navy, Recruiting Officer.

In order that those who volunteer for enlistment and are rejected may not be subjected to the charge of being "slackers," the recruiting service is giving them letters and buttons like those illustrated.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPHS OF RUSSIAN REVOLUTION

These first photographs of the revolution in Russia to be received in this country show: (1) A regiment marching along the Nevsky Prospekt on its way to the duma to surrender; (2) a barricade in one of the principal streets of Petrograd, defended by field pieces, from one of which the red flag is flying; (3) students and soldiers firing across the Molka canal at the police.

Shrimp Industry.

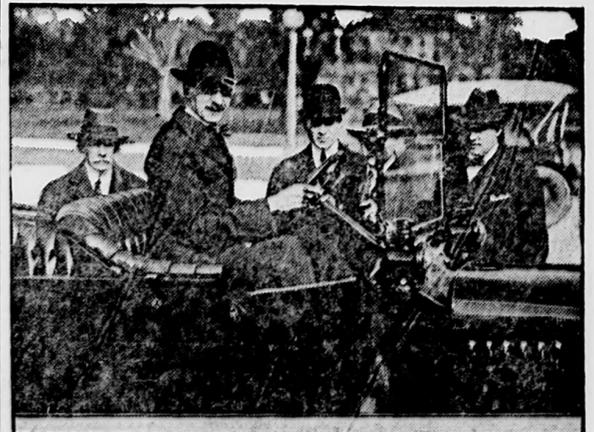

The shrimp of the Gulf and South Atlantic coasts supports one of the most important of the minor fisheries, and it has been reported by the commissioner of fisheries within the past two or three years that in certain regions the supply showed indications of depletion. As a basis for possible measures of conservation a study of the natural history of the species was begun in 1911.

FLAGS OF THE SUFFRAGE COUNTRIES

Mrs. Currie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage association, supplemented her arguments before the senate woman suffrage committee by a display of flags of 22 nations which have granted, by means of their central governments, woman's suffrage, wholly or in part.

Rumor Has It

That the common question is, "Where is the Weymouth Home Guard?" WHOM IS IT?

That business is very quiet with express companies in several towns. Yes, we hear some are going out of business. Not the towns—the expresses.

That there is much talk as, "Wait until next Spring, we will fix them" and "Weymouth will sure go license next year," and "you can bet there will be some new town officers next year," and "We have awakened and see things different now," and several others we will speak of later.

That in one city, nearby, a minister invited the women to bring their knitting and knit for the soldiers during his sermon. Why not in Weymouth?

That several houses in town have changed owners lately and several others are for sale. Somebody going out and others coming into town all the time. Advertise your property and wants in the Gazette and you will reach the man who wants to buy or wants to sell.

That several more of our young men enlisted last week, but who is enlisting for home duty? We would like to publish the names.

That a Boston paper recently gave Weymouth credit for having two fire companies respond to a Quincy fire. Good advertising, but we cannot find the companies who responded. Our fire companies are ready and willing at all times to respond to any call for help either in town or out.

That a man has applied for work at Webb Park and will soon have this favorite spot in shape for the "field days" that are being planned. Also the volunteers, who have been working on the new flag staff for the past two months, and the other volunteers who have offered to help "set her up" would like to see sunshine and good weather long enough to complete the work. Also, a much larger flag will be needed than the one now doing service, and it is a good time for our patriotic citizens to furnish one and raise it with a bang-up patriotic event. We need it to help arouse the sleeping enthusiasm which should be "on the job."

That Broad street is being put into good condition for the summer traffic. Next we suppose the tracks will be raised to a proper level.

That many of the Braintree Home Guard have enlisted or intend to enlist in the State service. The "boys" seem to enjoy their nights on duty, and those shining badges—oh, you guards!

That the High School base ball team are travelling their usual fast pace. Never mind, boys, if you do loose a game now and then, you have the "goods."

That the sidewalk on the east side of Washington street would look better if properly repaired where the old trees were cut down. The new trees are O.K., and everybody should help to protect them from injury.

That there is a chance for a Weymouth boy to attend Annapolis. What do you say boys, who has the qualifications and the nerve to go after the appointment?

That we would like to publish the names of our High school boys who enlist for service in food production on Massachusetts farms. A good chance to get hardened and do your mite for your country.

That the Boston Board of Health will change rules, to promote poultry raising. In some towns rules must have been changed to allow pig raising. Well pig is good.

That everybody is doing his or her share to make our town clean and healthier. These ashes piled up in your back yard can be used to good advantage at Webb Park. Webb Park is your park why not help to make it as you want it to be. When you pay the man who carts off your ashes just tell him to dump them in "left field" in Webb Park. He knows where that is, and he knows that every little bit helps.

That a citizen suggests changing the sign in Washington square advertising "Weymouth a Live Town" to "Weymouth a Dry Town." Some say it is to live; some say it is not dry. If it is not dry, who is to blame if it is not dry, who is to blame? Don't all speak at once.

That Weymouth is just what YOU, MR. READER, make it. Are you doing your part?

That the person or persons who stole the seats from Great Hill Park will, no doubt, soon rob stores, homes and people.

Stealing is stealing, and to steal from yourself what belongs in part to you, is about the meanest kind of stealing that can be done. Put them back and square yourself with yourself.

That the Queens of May had a tough cold job dancing around the May pole, also the kiddles' tears shed because they could not hang their May baskets helped to swell the streams. Yes is is a tough old Spring.

—That our Government is putting out seven millions of dollars in addition to the ordinary cost of running the Government.

That all the money in circulation in the United States on April 1, was $4,702,130,941 (per capita $45.34), which shows how far short is all the money in circulation to pay for the new bonds.

That part of the seven billions of dollars is to be loaned to the Allies, but that loan will undoubtedly take the form of credit against which they may draw, and will be spent for supplies in this country.

That it is obviously impossible to put seven billions of dollars in circulation without creating big business.

That the above facts were taken from a letter sent to the merchants of our country by one of its largest business organizations.

That the above facts should be as interesting to Weymouth men as they are to men outside of Weymouth, and should be cause for much thought and planning.

That the live town is to derive much benefit from this vast sum being put in circulation.

That we already are listening to the cry for houses and rents.

That real estate men are asking about everybody they meet if they know of a house to let or for sale.

That we have cried for years—"boom Weymouth," but the cry has not boomed her nor has it started the machinery to prepare for the boom that is now at hand.

That opportunity is knocking and we cannot let her in, for we have not found the key with which to unlock the door.

That the key that could be used just now is made of real estate trusts, houses to sell, houses to rent, land for sale, and a good quantity of each.

That if any man or woman has the parts to put this key in shape to unlock the door, now is the time to get together, match up the parts, co-operate, and let opportunity in. Welcome her by advertising in the Gazette your offerings that she may select and settle down—here.

HOOD EXTRA PLY TIRES
HOOD TIRE CO. INC. WASHINGTON, D. C.

This is the sign of a Hood Dealer

ANNOUNCING the agency for the finest tire that is made. Acceptance of this agency is a mark of additional service to you. It is in keeping with my earnest desire to assist you in every possible way by carrying in stock the most reputable and well-known accessories.

All standard tires are much alike in quality. But the Hood Tire is so superior in every way that it stands out alone, in a class by itself.

Hood Tires make no attempt to "compete" with other tires. They are built differently, much stronger, more plies of fabrics, a better fabric, more and better rubber, more careful and exacting methods of construction and inspection. It should be a better tire. True, Hood Tires cost a little more, but what goes into Hood Tires and what you get out of them is worth the difference, tenfold. A wear, mileage, life, safety, durability that you never imagined possible. And this is the kind of quality that makes for real dollars and cents economy in tire buying.

Come in and let us look over a Hood Tire together next time you are passing.

Will Not Build Constitution

"Sae, wha cares?" The Globe prints the following comments of a Scotchman on Fore River being awarded the Lexington instead of the Constitution:

"Well, I see that those blank web-foot candy makers have gone and put one over on us," glumly remarked a rivetter down at the Fore River ship-building yard today. He didn't say blank though.

"Wy; wots'up?" said his mate. He's a cockney.

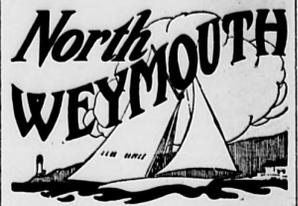

"It's this way," he continued. "These guys got peeved because the old man put the flagship, the Constitution, the big battle cruiser, across, an' they hollered. An' what did Washington do but say to the poor simps to go ahead if that's the way they felt about it and take the old Constitution. They're letting the old man build the Lexington instead."

"Ain't that a blank of a note? Bless their tender little hearts. P'raps they're figgerin' on them lydy yeomen to give 'em a 'and,'" replied his friend.

The rivetter spoke the truth. The battle cruiser Constitution, the construction of which was originally awarded to Pres. Joseph W. Powell, the youthful "old man" of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, has been intrusted to a Government Navy Yard, because the Constitution is to be the flagship, and the Navy Yards think that one of their number is entitled to the honor of building her.

The Lexington, which is to be built at Fore River, is exactly the same as the Constitution with the single exception that the Constitution will have special quarters to accommodate the Admiral in command of the fleet, together with his staff.

"After a', it mak's nae difference," according to a philosophical Scot, even although Vice-President and General Manager H. Gerrish Smith had incorporated in his official notice to the yard such an interesting sketch of the history of the Constitution. "The Lexington will be jist as bonny a fechter, sae wha cares?"

—The Athens school pupils have been working hard for some time past on an entertainment and putting in much time and effort in selling the tickets for it. The fruits of their labors were a large attendance on Monday evening, the Pilgrim church vestry being full to its doors, and the carrying out of a good program by the scholars. They gave full measure, and it is to be hoped the net proceeds will be satisfactory. The program included: Song, The Wind, Grades 1 and 2. Recitation, Three little kittens, Grade 1. Song, The Song of the Rain, Grade 2. Recitation, Bird Talks, Grade 3. Drama, Medical Advice, Grade 5. Song, The Nephews of Uncle Sam, Freeman Marr and Nellie Sheehan. Song and Drill, Grade 8. Trio, Duo Marshall, by piano and two violins. Quartette, Smile, Smile, Smile, Emily Evans, Hannah Sheehan, Donald Clark and Kenneth Gould. Song, Rainy Day Fairie, Grade 6. Intermission during which the orchestra rendered two marches, The Pan Guards Parade and Marching Through Georgia. Comedy, "The Death of Bad Grammar." Solo, Lights of my Home Town, Nellie Sheehan. Recitation, A garden of verse, Grades 3 and 4. Drill, "The Little Patriots," Grade 4. The school orchestra is composed of the following members: Grace Stevenson and Jeanette Perrow, pianists; Nellie Sheehan, triangle; Harrison Sylvia, 1st violin; James Delorey, 2d violin; Truman Marr, traps; Allan Perrow, drum. The accompanist for the evening was Miss Loretta Cope. Candy and ice cream were sold.

Majestic Theatre
"The Crisis" following closely the romance of Civil War days in St. Louis, by Winston Churchill, will be presented in elaborate style at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, Mass., commencing Monday, May 14th with two performances daily at 2.15 and 8.15. Mr. Churchill's novel, published more than a decade ago, has become recognized as an American classic. It is written in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, unusual with stories dealing with the conflict of the sections. The scene is laid in St. Louis where North and South met, where members of the same families were divided in their allegiance to the respective flags and where both causes were hotly debated with all the facts immediately at hand. There is a special musical score based on romantic and patriotic melodies of the Civil War period, combined with strains from the classics. Each of the prominent characters of the play is accompanied at every appearance on the screen by a theme designed to fit with that particular personality.

—Mrs. Alexis Torrey has been ill at her home on Lovell street.

—The Ways and Means committee of the North Weymouth Branch for Preparedness will hold a whist party in Engine hall on the evening of May 16.

—The Universalist Men's Club turned out en masse at church Sunday afternoon. The pastor, Dr. C. C. Earle, preached a stirring address on war and patriotism. The young girls choir did their part with patriotic anthems and hymns. Following the service, the Star Spangled Banner was sung in the church yard while a new flag was raised. Miss Theo Keith led the singing with the cornet. Everything was successful but the weather which was anything but inspiring.

—Blake Purdy and family of Boston were at their cottage on Weybosset street from Friday until Sunday.

—Secretaries of the various yacht clubs are asked by Commander R. D. Hasbrouck, U. S. N., captain of the port of Boston, to issue certificates to all members that desire to put their boats into commission for use this summer. Commander Hasbrouck makes it plain that if anyone is to go yachting this summer, he will have to be armed with a permit from his office and this permit will have to be applied for through the secretary of the club that the yachtsman is a member of. Yachtsmen who are not members of any organized yacht club must apply direct.

Boston Theatre.
Virginia Pearson, the most beautiful actress on the screen, in the superb six part William Fox production, "A Royal Romance," and George Walsh, in the five-part William Fox comedy drama deluxe, entitled "The Book Agent," will head the big double feature bill offered at the Boston Theatre the week of May 14. "A Royal Romance" introduces the queenly beauty, Virginia Pearson, in a splendid role; that of a young and beautiful noblewoman, whose romance in the court makes a fascinating love story, full of adventure and thrills. George Walsh, who is the only rival Douglas Fairbanks has on the screen, as an exponent of red-blooded young Americanism, plays the part of a budding young book-agent of more "pep" than finesse, who brings the methods of the football field and boxing ring into the book-selling, with amusing results.

Second Week of the Pops.
The regular season of Pop concerts in Symphony hall had a brilliant opening Monday night. This year the season is a week longer than it has been in the past for it extends over a period of ten weeks and does not end until Saturday evening, July 14. Never has there been a larger orchestra and never has the orchestra played with more enthusiasm. Andre Masquarre who for the opening weeks at least is the conductor was received with great warmth by the audiences throughout the whole week. The public likes the programmes and the way he plays them. The concerts will be given every night except Sundays.

STABBED IN THE BACK.
HOW MANY WEYMOUTH READERS HAVE HAD THOSE SUDDEN TWINGES.
Have you ever had a "crick" in the back?
Does your back ache with a dull, heavy, draggy throbbing?
Is it hard to straighten up after stooping?
Hard to arise from a chair or turn in bed?
Is the urine dark colored? Passages irregular?
When your kidneys need attention, use a tested kidney remedy.
Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has proved its merit.
Containing less money in the following statement:
J. W. Snow, residence, 73 Chand street, East Weymouth, says: "I strained my back lifting two years ago and it affected my old eyes. My back ached and was lame and sore to the touching. When I started taking Doan's, a stitch took me in my back. I had to get up often at night to pass the kidney secretions and they were highly colored and burned. I had headaches and dizzy spells. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and used them. Two boxes of Doan's entirely cured me and I have had no kidney trouble since."
Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that cured Mr. Snow. Foster-McIlburn Co. Props. Buffalo, N. Y. 18-19

of the PARSONAGE By ETHEL HUESTON

(Bobbs-Merrill, Copyright, 1916)

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

"You are mistaken, father. Jerry is all right, and always was, I am sure. It is nothing like that. I told him to go, and not to come again. That is all."
"But if he should come back now—"
"It would be just the same. Don't worry about it, father. It's all right."
"Prudence," he said, more tenderly, "we have been the closest of friends and companions, you and I, from the very beginning. Always you have come to me with your troubles and worries. Have I ever failed you? Why, then, do you go back on me now, when you really need me?"
Prudence patted his shoulder affectionately, but her eyes did not meet his. "I do not really need you now, father. It is all settled, and I am quite satisfied. Things are all right with me just as they are."
Then he took a serious step, without her knowledge. He went to Des Moines, and had a visit with Jerry. He found him thinner, his face sterner, his eyes darker. When the office boy announced "Mr. Starr," Jerry ran quickly out to greet him.
"Is she all right?" he cried eagerly, almost before he was within hailing distance.
Mr. Starr did not mince matters. "Jerry," he said abruptly, "did you and Prudence have a quarrel? She declines to tell me anything about it, and after the conversations you and I have had, I think I have a right to know what has happened."
"Does she miss me? Does she seem sorry that I am away? Does—"
His voice was so boyish and so eager there was no mistaking his attitude toward Prudence.
"Look here, Jerry, I want to know. Why are you staying away?"
"No."
"Then I cannot. She made me promise not to tell you a word. But it is not my fault, Mr. Starr. I can tell you that. It is nothing I have done or said. She sent me away because she thinks it was right for her to do so, and—"You know Prudence! It is wrong, I know. I knew it all the time. But I couldn't make her see it. And she made me promise not to tell."
In the end Mr. Starr went back to the parsonage no wiser than he left, save that he now knew that Jerry was really not to blame, and that he held himself ready to return to her on a moment's notice.
The Ladies of the Methodist church were puzzled and exasperated. They went to the parsonage, determined to "find out what's what." But when they sat with Prudence, and looked at the frail, pathetic little figure, with the mournful eyes—they could only sigh with her and go their ways.
The twins continued to play in the great maple, even when the leaves were fallen. "It's a dandy place, I tell you, Prudence," cried Carol. "Jerry didn't have time to put up the rope before Connie pulled him down, but we've fixed it ourselves, and it is simply grand. You can go up and swing any time you like—unless your joints are too stiff! It's a very serious matter getting up there—for stiff joints, of course, I mean. Lark and I get up easy enough."
For a moment Prudence sat silent with quivering lips. Then she burst out with unusual passion, "Don't you ever dare climb that tree again as long as you live, twins! Mind what I say!"
Lark looked thoughtfully out of the window, and Carol swallowed hard. It was she who said gently, "Why, of course, Prue—just as you say."
On the day before Christmas an insured package was delivered at the parsonage for Prudence. A letter was with it, and she read that first.
"My dearest little sweetheart: I chose this gift for you long before I had the right to do it. I was keeping it until the proper moment. But the moment came, and went again. Still I want you to have the gift. Please wear it, for my sake, for I shall be happy knowing it is where it ought to be, even though I myself am banished. I love you, Prudence. Whenever you send for me, I am ready to come. Entirely and always yours, Jerry."
With trembling fingers she opened the little package. It contained a ring, with a brilliant diamond flashing myriad colors before her eyes. And Prudence kissed it passionately, many times.
Two hours later, she went quietly downstairs to where the rest of the family were decorating a Christmas tree. She showed the ring to them gravely.
"Jerry sent it to me," she said. "Do you think it is all right for me to wear it, father?"
A thrill of hopeful expectancy ran through the little group.
"Yes, indeed," declared her father. "How beautiful it is! Is Jerry coming to spend Christmas with us?"
"Why, no, father—he is not coming at all any more. I thought you understood that."
An awkward silence, and Carol came brightly to the rescue. "It certainly is a beauty! I thought it was very kind of Professor Duckie to send Lark and me a five-pound box of chocolates, but of course this is ever so much nicer. Jerry's a bird, I say."

"A bird!" mocked Fairy. "Such language."
Lark came to her twin's defense. "Yes, a bird—that's just what he is." Carol smiled. "We saw him use his wings when Connie yanked him out of the big maple, didn't we, Lark?" Then, "Did you send him anything, Prue?" Prudence hesitated, and answered without the slightest accession of color. "Yes, Carol. I had my picture taken when I was in Burlington, and sent it to him."
"Your picture! Oh, Prudence! Where are they? Aren't you going to give us one?"
"No, Carol. I had only one made—for Jerry. There aren't any more."
"Well," sighed Lark resignedly. "It's a pretty idea for my book, anyhow."
From that day on Prudence always wore the sparkling ring—and the women of the Methodist church nearly had mental paralysis marveling over a man who gave a diamond ring and never came a-wooing! And a girl who accepted and wore his offering, with nothing to say for the man! And it was the consensus of opinion in Mount Mark that modern lovers were mostly crazy, anyhow.
And springtime came again.
Now the twins were always original, in their amusements. They never followed blindly after the dictates of custom. And when other girls played "catch" with dainty rubber balls, the twins took unto themselves a big and heavy croquet ball—found in the Avery woodshed. To be sure, it stung and and serenity. Sorrow may remain, but anguish is stilled.

Mount Mark considered this a unique parsonage family. Their liveliness, their gaiety, their love of fun, seemed a little inappropos in the setting of a Methodist parsonage.
"They ain't sanctimonious enough by half," declared old Harvey Reel, the bus driver, "but, by Jings! I tell you they are dandies!"
But as a matter of fact, every one of the family, from Connie up, had a characteristic parsonage heart. When they were worried, or frightened, or grieved, they prayed. Fairy passing up the stairs with hot water for the doctors, whispered to her father as he turned in to his own room, "Keep on praying, father. I can't stop now, because they need me. But I'm praying every minute between errands!" And Mr. Starr, kneeling beside his bed, did pray—and the stony despair in his eyes died out, and he came from the little room quiet, and confident, and calm.
Connie, seeking a secluded corner to "pray for Prudence," had passed the door of the dungeon, and paused. A fitting place! So she turned in at once, and in the farthest and darkest corner, she knelt on the hard floor and prayed, and sobbed herself to sleep.
Lark remained loyally with Carol until consciousness returned to her. As soon as she was able to walk, the two went silently to the barn, and climbed into the much-loved haymow. There they lay flat on the hay, faces downward, each with an arm across the other's shoulder, praying fervently. After a time they rose and crept into the house where they waited patiently until Fairy came down on one of her numerous errands.
"Is she better?" they whispered. And Fairy answered gently, "I think she is a little better." Then the twins, in no way deceived, went back to the haymow again.
Fairy prepared a hasty supper, and arranged it on the kitchen table. She drank a cup of hot coffee, and went in search of her father. "Go and eat, dadsie," she urged. But he shook his head.
"I am not hungry, but send the girls to the table at once."
On their next trip into the house, Fairy stopped the twins. "Get Connie and eat your supper. It's just a cold lunch, and is already on the kitchen table. You must help yourselves—I can't come now."
The twins did not speak, and Fairy went hurriedly up the stairs once more.
"I do not think I can eat," said Carol. "We'd better take away about half of this food, and hide it. Then she will think we have already eaten."
This novel plan was acted upon with promptitude and the twins went back to the haymow. When it grew dark they slipped into the kitchen and huddled together on the woodbox beside the stove. And down to them presently came Fairy, smiling, her eyes tear-brightened.
"She is better!" cried Carol, springing to her feet.
"Yes," said Fairy, dropping on her knees and burying her face in Lark's lap, as she still sat on the woodbox. "She's better. She is better." Lark patted the heaving shoulders in a motherly way, and when Fairy lifted her face again it was all serene, though her lashes were wet.
"She is conscious," said Fairy, still on her knees, but with her head thrown back, and smiling. "She regained consciousness a little while ago. There is really nothing serious the matter. It was a hard knock, but it missed the temple. When she became conscious, she looked up at father and smiled. Father looked perfectly awful, twins, so pale, and his lips were trembling. And Prudence said, 'Now, father, on your word of honor, did you knock me down with that ball on purpose?' She spoke very low and weak, but—just like Prudence! Father couldn't say a word; he just nodded, and gulped. She has a little fever, and the doctors say we may need to work with her part of the night. Father said to ask if you would go to bed now, so you can get up early in the morning and help us. I am to stay with Prudence tonight, but you may have to take turns in the morning. And you'll have to get breakfast, too. So father thinks you would better go to bed. Will you do that, twinies?"

bruised their hands. What matter? At any rate, they continued endangering their lives and beauties by reckless pitching of the ungainly plaything.
One Friday evening after school they were amusing themselves on the parsonage lawn with this huge ball. When their father turned in, they ran up to him with a sporting proposition. "Bet you a nickel, papa," cried Carol, "that you can't throw this ball as far as the schoolhouse woodshed—By the way, will you lend me a nickel, papa?"
He took the ball and weighed it lightly in his hand. "I'm an anti-betting society," he declared, laughing, "but I very strongly believe it will carry to the schoolhouse woodshed. If it does not, I'll give you five cents' worth of candy tomorrow. And if it does, you shall put an extra nickel in the collection next Sunday."
Then he drew back his arm and carefully sighted across the lawn. "I'll send it right between the corner of the house and that little cedar," he said, and then, bending low, it whizzed from his hand.
Lark screamed, and Carol sank fainting to the ground. For an instant Mr. Starr himself stood swaying. Then he rushed across the lawn. For Prudence had opened the front door and stepped quickly out on the walk by the corner of the house. The heavy ball struck her on the forehead and she fell heavily, without a moan.
CHAPTER XIII.
Fate Takes Charge.
For hours Prudence lay unconscious, with two doctors in close attendance. Fairy, alert but calm, was at hand to give them service.
It is a significant thing that in bitter anguish and grief, Christians find comfort and peace in prayer. Outsiders, as well as Christians, pray in times of danger and mental stress, pray, and pray, and pray again, and continue still in the agony and passion of grief and fear. And yet they pray. But Christians pray, and find confidence and serenity. Sorrow may remain, but anguish is stilled.

Never Out of Date.
We are inclined to smile at the quaint costumes that our grandparents wore, and at their rather stilted, formal manners. We dispense with a great many things which were considered important a hundred years ago. But patient, plodding perseverance, sticking to a thing till you finish it, is held in as high esteem in the twentieth century as it was in the eighteenth. Industry and patience are never out of date.
Rains have delayed the grinding of the Dominican sugar crop from two to three weeks.

A Pledge.

Let us now as with one voice and one heart and in a faith that makes faithful, renew our loyalty to those ideals of government for which our fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Revive in us and in the people of our land a high sense of patriotism; strengthen every noble purpose; keep us by thy help from sloth and indifference and from all corruption of civil government.

THE REAL MAN

The concluding installment of "Prudence of the Parsonage" will be published this month. Our next serial will be "The Real Man" by Francis Lynde, which is a capital story without a dull moment. A story with pep and interest in 27 chapters, copyrighted by Chas. Scribner's Sons. Be on the lookout for the opening chapter.

JUST A REMINDER.

Clean-up week is here. There should be a grand transformation in good old Weymouth before next Thursday. Clean-up week is from May 9 to May 16 inclusive, and on the latter date the town teams will collect all rubbish that may be placed on or near the sidewalks in all parts of Weymouth. It is an opportunity to get rid of the winter's accumulation of rubbish and waste material that should not be neglected. Then that heap of old ashes in the cellar or back of the house should be moved. We should all help to beautify our home town.

THE FIRST CALL.

Not until the important announcement in the Gazette last week, that a draft for military service was expected in a few days, did the war situation come home keenly to Weymouth young men. The fact that one thousand or more are liable to draft has placed many on the anxious seat, but when the call actually comes, Weymouth will be prompt to respond. Possibly 70 may be drafted from Weymouth on the first call.

REVIEW OF WAR.

Once again let us call your attention to our review of the war for the past week on page three. The editorial writer is Edward W. Pickard. These three-column reviews will be continued every week.

"Wonderful!" was the way one man expressed it. He said he had been a reader of the Gazette for a generation, but the last issue was by far the best he had ever read.

If the men do not brace up and volunteer to serve as registration officers under the war draft, they will find their places have been readily taken by women.

MEETINGS OF THE SELECTMEN.

Action relative to a registration board for military service is reported in another column.

The Selectmen gave a hearing on petition of the Telephone company for one pole on Front street and two on Middle street, and granted same.

All the applicants, 22 in number, were granted common victuallers licenses.

The Selectmen proved and signed six more notes of $10,000 each in anticipation of the revenue of 1917, and they were sent to the Town Treasurer.

The petition of A. Rosseau was granted.

Russell B. Worster and Francis A. Bicknell volunteered their services on the Registration board.

John L. Kelley was appointed a special police.

Joseph W. Couren was given a hearing relative to a petition for a license for a dance hall at Idlewell, which the board had turned down at a previous meeting. The board adhered to its vote.

Russell B. Worster was reappointed sealer of weights and measures.

Augustus Tirrell was granted permission to move a building from Great Hill beach to the west side of North street.

Royal Belcher.

Royal Belcher, one of the best-known residents of Braintree and junior vice-commander of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer Post 87, G. A. R., died May 4 at his home on Tremont street, aged 76. During the Civil War Mr. Belcher joined Troop I, 3d Massachusetts Cavalry, in August, 1862, and remained in the service until mustered out in May, 1865. Mr. Belcher was prominent in Grand Army circles and was a past commander of Post 87. He was a shoe manufacturer by trade, but retired many years ago. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Charles Jackson of East Jaffrey, N. H. Mr. Belcher was a prominent member in the South Methodist church.

Weymouth Sphinx.

The "Weymouth Sphinx," said to be the largest rock in the State, figured in an illustrated article in a Sunday paper on rock faces carved by nature. It is located in a pasture off Essex street, probably placed there by some grand upheaval of nature, and is thought to weigh 3500 tons. Until recently it was called House Rock; but lately at a certain angle is a remarkable profile of the late Queen Victoria, as shown in photographs taken with her long veil flowing backward.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Nine big features, everyone new to Boston audiences, will comprise the all-star vaudeville bill offered at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of May 14. Elizabeth M. Murray, the famous dialect singing comedienne, last seen here with Cohan's Revue of 1917, will offer a brand-new singing act of unusual novelty and interest. Sharing the headline honors with Miss Murray will be Daisy Jean, the beautiful Belgian and lady in waiting to the Queen of Belgium, who will present an artistic singing and musical novelty. John B. Hymer, the black-face comedian, who has not appeared in Boston in years, will bring his newest and funniest comedy sketch, entitled "Tom Walker in Dixie." This is a continuation of the adventures of the old darky, Tom Walker, with many comedians to assist him.

Notice of Gasoline Hearing

The Weymouth Water Works Department having petitioned for a license to keep and store gasoline in an underground tank on the premises occupied by it in rear of the East Weymouth Savings Bank, public notice is hereby given that, in accordance with the requirements of Chapter 162, of the General Acts of 1916, a public hearing will be held on said petition at the office of the Selectmen on

MONDAY,

May 21, 1917, at 2.30 o'clock P. M.
 By order of the Selectmen of Weymouth, 18, 19 BRADFORD HAWES, Secretary.

Making a Clean-Up

THE Bay Stater is pro-cleanliness. Yes, Sir! And his influence is felt all thru New England. He ministers to the worn and needy. Saves furniture from a useless life in the store-room. Keeps house, barn, boat, wagon or anything else with an outdoor job—in the pink of condition. Nothing is too small for his attention. He has a special paint up his sleeve for every little thing.

Bay State Paints are free from everything harmful—full of everything that's helpful. They are made and mixed to withstand the wear-and-tear weather of New England.

Why content yourself with scrubbing and rubbing? A can or two of "Bay State" will make any old thing new—quickly. Send us a photograph of your house—our art department will suggest a pleasing color scheme free.

Mark this: When you buy paint, see that the label reads "Bay State"—then you're sure of a good job, and a lasting one.

The Bay Stater's book on paint is mighty interesting and instructive. Send for it.

FIRST DRILL OF HOME GUARD

Will Drill Every Evening Next Week in Different Precincts of Town

Cottage street at East Weymouth was filled with autos last evening and it was very evident that something unusual was doing at the Odd Fellows Opera House. The representative men from all parts of the town were there, it being the opening meeting of the "WEYMOUTH HOME GUARD." There were no fireworks but solid serious business.

William Holbrook, the chairman, presided and was assisted by Chief of Police Pratt and Capt. Frederick G. Bauer of South Weymouth.

Mr. Holbrook said 200 had signed, but we want 300 or more. The larger the number of members the less service would be required of each for guard duty. He told of the duties, etc., and introduced Chief of Police Pratt.

Chief Pratt said it was now costing the town $25 per day for guard duty and that $1700 to $1800 had been expended. It was proposed that members of the Home Guard should do their work without pay. He told of hours, duties, instructions, etc.

Captain Bauer went more into detail and then called for volunteers to come to the platform and give a drill. First one squad of eight, then two squads went through the movements.

It was voted to hold drills every evening as follows:

- Ward 1, Monday evenings.
- Ward 2, Tuesday evenings.
- Ward 3, Wednesday evenings.
- Ward 4, Thursday evenings.
- Ward 5, Friday evenings.

The Selectmen and Chief of Police were requested to make a detail from the Home Guard for Sunday evening; also for next week.

Later a committee meeting was held. It was nearly midnight before adjournment was reached.

It was the intention of the Gazette to have published this week, the list of those who have volunteered the services of their automobiles, but 16 pages are not enough to accommodate all the news and advertising this week. It may be necessary to put a ban on new advertising.

Because of the inability of the two branches of Congress to get together there has been a serious delay in the passage of the Draft bill, preventing President Wilson from issuing his proclamation which has been ready more than a week, but it may come today.

With the understanding that the ages will be 21 to 30 inclusive in conscription bill, Charles F. Gettemer, director of enrollment in Massachusetts, estimates that there are Weymouth 1029 men liable to service. In Braintree there are 794, Hingham 406, in Rockland 577, Quincy 3,913, in Brockton 6,015.

Weymouth 8, Winchester 2

Battling opportunely and playing an errorless game, Weymouth High defeated Winchester High at Weymouth Wednesday afternoon, 8 to 2. The score: Weymouth 0 2 1 0 0 1 0 4 — Winchester 1 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 — Batteries: Dwyer, Mauro and Gunville; Clark, McKenzie and Shaughnessy.

WEYMOUTH-ABINGTON.

Weymouth High defeated Abington High in one of the most interesting games ever played at Weymouth on Monday, 5 to 4. A flip of the coin decided a protest in the last inning when Weymouth brought in the Abington team protested the umpire's decision, but it was left to the flip of a coin to decide the victor. The score: Weymouth 1 1 0 2 0 0 0 1 — Abington 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 4 — Batteries: Weymouth, Descalzo, Paulson, Mauro and Gunville. Abington, Johnson and Kelly.

WEYMOUTH CHORAL SOCIETY.

This organization will have the annual meeting on Monday next, May 21, at 7.30 p. m., in Clapp Memorial building. The past season being successful in an educational one as well as adding a first class musical club to the other social orders of the town, which will in early autumn commence rehearsals on something worthy of notice.

Daughters of Veterans' Fair.

A very successful two days' fair was held Wednesday and Thursday evening at Dorothea L. Dix tent, D. of V., at Grand Army hall. On the first evening there were living pictures and illustrated songs, and on the latter evening the comedy, "The Secret Meeting of the Order of the Golden Goose," directed by Nellie G. Loud, with the following characters: Supreme Golden Goose, Anna Williams. Extreme Golden Goose, Jennie Morton. Right Golden Goose, Nellie Loud. Left Golden Supporter, Josie Culley. Golden Conductor, Helen Lewis. Golden Assistant, Elizabeth Draper. Golden Secretary, Clara Maynard. Golden Treasurer, Alice Miller. Golden Gatekeeper, Mildred Morgan. Golden Musician, Mabel Vogel. Mother Goose, Ida Farrington. Irving Hunt, solo dances. The program also included songs, recitations, solo dances and music.

The sale tables were in charge of Mrs. Jennie Morton, Mrs. Nellie Loud, Mrs. Mary Peare, Mrs. Maria Gardner, Mrs. Sarah McCue, Miss Mabel McCue, Mrs. Helen Lewis, Mrs. Lucy Miller, Mrs. Fannie Smith, Mrs. Carrie Fahey, Mrs. Josie Culley, Mrs. Clara Maynard, Mrs. Alice Miller, Miss Mary Brassil, Miss Ella Litchfield, Miss Alice Ferris, Mrs. Hannah Abbott, Mrs. Mabel Vogel, Mrs. Mildred Morgan, Mrs. Margaret Higgins, Mrs. Ida Farrington, Mrs. Sella Whelan and Mrs. Lillian Hollis.

WARD THREE WORK.

To the people of Weymouth, who are interested to know the amount of work being done, the branch in Ward 3 of the Social Aid Society of Preparedness have made 1 box surgical dressing, 35 pairs woolen socks, 16 pairs wristers, 27 pajamas, 38 surgical shirts, 9 sweaters, 12 convalescent gowns, 25 scarfs, 6 helmets, 30 kit bags, 30 surgical pads, 36 sponges. A good number of other garments are still unfinished. Twenty members have signed cards who are willing to do clerical work.

A committee has been appointed to work for the Allies under the name of "French Relief Aid." Headquarters are open every day from 10 to 5 o'clock, also each Tuesday evening, every alternate Tuesday evening, for committee reports. Every woman in Ward 3 is expected to help on the conservation work, one branch of which will be the art of canning vegetables and fruit.

ELLA C. RICHARDS, Publicity Committee.

FOGG LIBRARY.

The annual business meeting of the members of the Fogg Library, incorporated, was held at the library on Monday evening, May 7. The directors include the following: Mr. A. C. Heald, president; J. H. Stetson, clerk and treasurer; H. B. Reed, Gordon Willis and G. L. Barnes. The corporation is made up of the above-named directors, also W. L. Bates and C. T. Heald.

The enrollment at the present time consists of 2130 names. During the past year the attendance in the reading and reference rooms has been approximately 12,000 readers, and the books and magazines issued for home use, 17,278 volumes. Of the 8,781 volumes now in the library, 545 were added, 335 by gift. Among the donors are Mrs. C. H. Ramsay, who presented 101 volumes, and Mrs. S. S. Sumner, who gave 21 volumes. The library has also been most generously remembered by the Children's Library Society, the Old Colony Club and the Village Study Club.

The Gazette and Transcript is for sale every Friday afternoon at Hunt's periodical store, and also at grocery of Bates & Humphrey at Weymouth Centre.

The Gazette and Transcript is for sale every Friday noon by C. H. Smith, P. Casey, J. B. Whelan and at the office of publication.

Legislator Takes A Degree

State officials, members of the Massachusetts Legislature, officers of the Grand Lodge of Masons and others high in the order, arrived in East Weymouth by special car on Wednesday evening, and Orphan's Hope lodge A. F. & A. M. was proud to have them as guests. There were about 50 in the party, who were anxious to see a well-known member of the legislature take his degree. Some said he would back down, but they did not know him as well as Weymouth people do. He made one of the cleanest home runs seen in many a moon, the pitcher, the catcher nor the umpire having any terror for him.

At the head of the delegation upon arrival was ex-Senator George S.

Barnes who bore aloft a beautiful state flag. Representative Burgess H. Spinney escorted Speaker Channing Cox. Among the visitors were also Grand Master Hamilton, Deputy Grand Master C. G. Jordan and others. Representative Spinney introduced Speaker Cox who happily presented the flag. The address of the evening, however, was by the Grand Secretary, Wor. Master Torrey received the flag in behalf of the lodge, and called upon Past Master Martin E. Hawes for a more formal acceptance. The veteran was equal to the occasion. Over 200 Masons were present and it was a notable evening. Three candidates took the M. M. degree. Ice cream, cake and strawberries were served.

MARKED ROADS ARE TREAT TO MOTORISTS

UNIQUE ROAD SIGN IN BUNCOMBE COUNTY.

It is a treat to a motorist driving through a strange country to have the road marked. Many main traveled roads are now well marked in some way or another. The way in which they are marked varies greatly with the locality and the length of the road.

The unique road sign shown in the illustration was erected by the authorities of Buncombe county, on the 12-mile stretch of asphalt-macadam road between Asheville and Weaverville, which is a section of the Southern National highway from Washington to San Diego, Cal., by request of the Asheville Motor club.

Most Marked Road.
 The most talked-of marked road in the country is the Lincoln highway. This road is marked throughout the Missouri valley by having frequent telephone poles of fence posts circled with a red, white and blue band with an "L" stenciled on it. It is probably the most consistently marked long road in the country and many other roads are marked in the same manner.

Other roads are marked by painting stripes on a few poles at the corners to indicate whether the road turns or goes straight ahead. This system is also very practical and costs less than the first one described.

Local territory about many of the cities is quite well covered by signboards put out by the automobile club of the town or by an enterprising garage man, as the Omaha Automobile club has marked most of the roads around Omaha. They have not only marked the through roads, but they have marked the roads to the many small towns in the locality. Their signs are small boards bearing the name of the town the road leads to and a red arrow indicating the direction. The autoist who wants to get from one of these towns to another and does not know the territory, appreciates the value of these signs.

SCALE PIKE'S PEAK

Autoists Enjoy Popular Pastime in Rocky Mountains.

Highway on Mountain Extends Seventeen Miles From Town to Summit—Unlimited Attractions for Motorists and Campers.

Scaling Pike's Peak by auto is now a popular pastime for automobile owners who live in Colorado or tour through the state. The means of accomplishing this hitherto impossible feat is furnished by the Pike's Peak highway, which was completed to the summit on July 15, 1916. The road, which extends 17 miles from the town of Cascade to the top of one of the continent's loftiest mountains, reaches an altitude above sea level of 14,109 feet, giving it a right to its title of "The World's Highest Highway." It is 20 feet broad, with a number of turns as wide as 50 feet, and has a maximum grade of 10 per cent. At places the road winds up the sides of great ridges, at others it emerges suddenly upon high ledges commanding magnificent views of the surrounding Rockies and the great plain stretching eastward.

Pass Snow Banks.
 As the car climbs higher summer is left behind and even in July and August one passes snow banks before reaching the top. A restaurant has been built at a point on the road some 11,000 feet above sea level, where the motorist may rest and obtain food and refreshment. Watering stations are established at intervals.

Pike's Peak is in the Pike national forest, and the road was built by a private company under permit from the secretary of agriculture. A toll is charged, the amount of which had to meet the approval of the secretary before a permit was issued. It is not the policy of the government to sanction the construction of toll roads in the national forests, but since neither state nor government funds were available for this much-needed development of the Pike forest's scenic resources, an exception was made in this particular case.

Many Acres of Land.
 Besides the highway, the Pike national forests holds in its 1,323,000 acres of mountain land unlimited attractions for motorists and campers.

Roads built by the counties or by the forest service carry one through valleys bordered by snow-capped peaks, or through canyons with towering walls of many-colored rock, to shady camping places beside cool mountain streams, where the lover of nature, the fisherman, or the mountain climber may find that form of recreation which he desires most. One of the commonest sights today in the national forests in Colorado is a motor car with a tent and camping outfit strapped to the footboard. Whole families take this means of leaving behind them the heat of city or plain and the cares of everyday life.

"SAFETY FIRST" BEST MOTTO

Habit Should Be Extended From Cities and Towns to Country—More Care Must Be Used.

Motor accidents are becoming more and more frequent. This could be but expected on account of the increasing number of cars in use. Our observation, however, as to the cause of such accidents warrants the belief that fully 90 per cent are due to careless driving. One would expect that the increased number of cars in use and the increased familiarity of the public therewith would result in a greater familiarity with and observance of road rules and motor operation. There is only one conclusion to be drawn and that is because of the commonness of the motor cars, drivers and cars as well as other users of the road are becoming more and more careless.

The "safety first" habit should be extended from the cities and towns to the country. It is a good idea to have a "safety first" tag carried on every vehicle. This, so that people might observe the motto often for having it in their minds would have a tendency to reduce the chances they take. There must be more care exercised in the handling of all vehicles on the road, else there will be laws so stringent as to control the situation, and this will result in trouble as well as inconvenience.

AUTOS OWNED IN NEBRASKA

Over $70,000,000 Invested in Cars—100,534 Registered in 1916—Iowa Has 200,000 Cars.

More than $13,000,000 a year is spent in Nebraska just to run the automobiles owned in the state, while more than $70,000,000 is invested in the machines on which this money is spent, according to figures of state officials. There were 100,534 cars registered in 1916. At an average value of $700, the total value is $70,373,000. An average upkeep cost of $50 a year would amount to $5,000,700, and gasoline at 20 cents a gallon costs $8,042,720. A parade of all cars owned in Nebraska would string out for 312 miles. Iowa has 200,000 cars registered this year, against 190,000 in 1916.—Farm Implement News.

ERROR IN CLIMBING

Going Up Hills "On the High Gear" Is Bad Practice.

FOOLISH AND INJURIOUS IDEA

Veteran Wheelman Declares Every "Smart" Driver Puts Car Into Low Gear Before Motor Is Slowed Down by Heavy Load.

Add to the list of grievous errors of motoring the practice followed by many drivers of climbing all hills "on the high gear." This is one mistake of which pilots are guilty, simply because they seem to think there is some special merit in the avoidance of gear changing. On the contrary, it is a foolish idea and injurious to cars.

While all modern cars ascend almost all grades with ease on high, still there is a limit to the pulling power of the most powerful machines, and road conditions are inevitably encountered which make a change to the lower gear advisable as well as imperative.

Plan of "Smart" Driver.

One veteran wheelman, who has toured from coast to coast on several occasions, in discussing this feature of motoring recently, declared that every "smart" driver puts his car into a lower gear before its motor, with the throttle wide open, is slowed down by the heavy load to a point at which it operates. Otherwise he will injure its bearings and stress its parts unduly.

Four-cylinder low-speed motors indicate where this point is reached, he added, by running jerkily, with each individual explosion apparent to the operator, while motors with six or more cylinders give much less evidence of overloading, but still require the relief of a change to lower gear when their speeds become sufficiently reduced.

When slowed down under full throttle to their lowest operative speeds, all motors waste fuel inordinately. Incidentally, they run much more economically when permitted to speed up to a reasonable point by being thrown into lower gear.

Changing Gear.

Where the maintenance of car speed is an object the change from high to intermediate gear should be made when the speedometer has dropped to 15 miles per hour with full gas being supplied to the motor, for on the lower gear nearly double this speed can then be obtained. No exact rule as to when to change gears can be formulated to apply to all cars or conditions.

Many drivers let the speed fall to eight or ten miles an hour before changing, and at this very low speed every explosion of a four-cylinder motor racks the bearings detrimentally. With motors of more cylinders the point of changing to a lower gear may safely be lower than the above, but time and fuel are both wasted under such conditions.

Blame Bad Carburetion.

Time was when the irregular action or failure to run on the part of a motor could be attributed in nine cases out of ten to faulty ignition. Improvement in ignition apparatus has, however, made such vast strides that this situation is changed, and bad carburetion is now to blame for a much larger proportion than formerly of the improper running of engines.

Fuel of low grade and adequate heating of the fuel mixture, rather than a lack of improvements in carburetors, are responsible for this condition. Still, ignition systems of modern cars do occasionally give trouble, and those of older cars bother much more frequently.

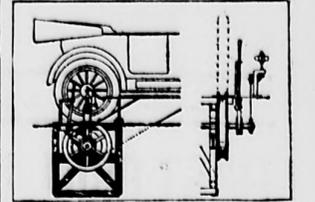

It matters little how badly a motor may miss, until it is thoroughly warmed up, or until it is known that the insulation of the spark plug ends is perfectly clean. Here the missing should not be attributed to faulty ignition, but to lack of vaporization of the gasoline, to uneven distribution of the mixture to the cylinders or to some similar cause.

GOOD JOBS FOR AUTOMOBILE

two grooved wheels and the power is taken from the axle of these wheels. The speed is kept constant by means of a centrifugal governor, connected by levers to the engine throttle.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

HINTS FOR DRIVERS

- Don't race the motor when shifting gears.
- Don't violate the unwritten rules of the road.
- Don't overwork the motor on hills—shift gears.
- Don't fail to carry necessary license numbers.
- Don't abuse the brakes. Apply them gradually.
- Don't drive through traffic with head lamps lighted.
- Don't shift into or out of reverse when car is moving.
- Don't drive fast on wet pavements—the car is liable to skid.
- Don't start on a trip without a full gasoline tank and plenty of oil.
- Don't descend extremely steep grades before shifting into one of the lower gears.
- Don't fail to keep the brakes adjusted.
- Don't use dirty water in your radiator.
- Don't turn corners too rapidly. It is hard on tires.

LENGTHEN LIFE OF AIR-BAGS

When Placed in Mold Clamp Screw, Should Be Tightened Until Exact Size Is Obtained.

The life of an air-bag can be greatly lengthened by observing the following rules:

When the tire is placed in the mold, the clamp screw should be tightened until the exact size of the tire is obtained, and then given about one-half turn. This slightly decreases the size of the cavity and relieves the strain on the air-bag, in addition to giving perfect results in the cure.

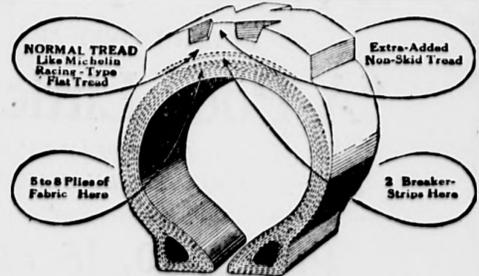

Never allow the bag to become flat, as this will cause cracks in the lining. Inject a little water into the bag each week in order to keep the inside of the bag moist.

Internal Heat of Planets.

The late Professor Lowell's discovery that Saturn does not rotate as one piece, but has "concentric layers, rotating faster within," suggests that some of the other large planets may have the same structure. As pointed out by Professor Very, the friction of layers of different velocities would generate heat, and thus retard the cooling down of the planets.—Scientific American.

MICHELIN

12 to 15% Extra Weight

WHEN you buy your next tire make this simple test. Let us weigh a Michelin Universal Tire in comparison with any other non-skid of the same size.

You will find the Michelin 12 to 15% heavier than the average, the exact percentage depending on the size of the tires used in the test.

This extra weight represents extra rubber and fabric, which means extra service.

War Revenue Measure to Raise $1,800,000,000 Introduced in the House.

MAKES ENTIRE NATION HELP
Compromise Reached on Army Conscript Bill—Nine Regiments of Engineers Going to Europe Soon—Desperate Fighting in Northern France and Macedonia.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.
The house of representatives received from the ways and means committee on Wednesday the completed war revenue bill designed to raise $1,800,000,000, which is additional to the normal revenue of $1,500,000,000. The measure is so drafted that every home, every individual, will share in the burden. Under its provisions the American people will be paying direct taxes of $33 per capita for the year 1917. The people of the British isles now pay per capita taxes of $30.

The principal features of the levy are the increases in income and profits taxes, in internal revenue rates and in customs duties, but the householder and indeed everyone is hit, for light, heat, and telephone bills, admission tickets to amusements, fire and life insurance, railway tickets, automobiles, automobile tires and tubes, soft drinks, postage rates, golf clubs and baseball bats, club dues, and a host of other everyday necessities or luxuries come under the taxation. At the last minute the committee added a paragraph placing a tax of 2 cents a pound on tea and 1 cent a pound on coffee, and an additional tax was placed on sugar.

The bill proposes a normal tax of 2 per cent on individuals having incomes between $1,000 and $3,000, if single, and $2,000 and $4,000, if married or the head of a family. An additional normal tax of 2 per cent would be added in the case of larger incomes. At $5,000 an additional surtax, graduated until at $500,000 and over it reaches 33 per cent, would be imposed.

All articles of import now on the free list will be taxed 10 per cent, and an additional 10 per cent tax is placed on all articles now on the dutiable list. The tax on excess profits is 16 per cent on profits over 8 per cent and $5,000. Heavy taxes are placed on beer, spirits, whisky and tobacco and its manufactures. The first-class mail rate goes up to 3 cents and the second-class rate is increased according to the zone system.

Army Bill Compromise.
Spurred to action by the president, the senate and house conferees compromised the differences over the army conscription bill. The amendment authorizing the Roosevelt expeditionary force of volunteers was eliminated. The age limit for the draft was set at twenty-one to thirty years inclusive. Liquor is barred from the training camps and immoral resorts from their vicinity. The pay of enlisted men is raised $10 a month to $25, and that of other grades proportionately. The machinery for draft exemption is provided.

It is estimated that under the bill more than 10,000,000 men are liable for war service. From these will be taken the first 500,000 recruits for the conscription army, the second 500,000 when the president decides to call for them, and the men necessary to bring the regular army and National Guard up to maximum war strength if volunteers do not come forward in sufficient numbers.

Reports during the week concerning the submarine warfare were conflicting and confusing. Germany claimed its campaign was still successful beyond its expectations, while Great Britain issued figures showing a considerable decrease in the number of U-boat victims. Great Britain reported the sinking of two more hospital ships by the Germans. The news also came of the torpedoing of the British steamship City of Paris in the Mediterranean early in April. The vessel carried 266 passengers and a large crew and only 23 were saved.

American inventors by the thousand are seeking means of combating the submarine, and Chairman Saunders of the naval consulting board made a statement which, though depreciated by navy officials, gave assurance that some of the devices submitted would solve the problem in the near future. The war department announced on Monday that nine regiments of engineers, made up largely of railroad men, would be sent to France as soon as possible. These men and doctors and nurses will be the first to reach the war zone.

Members of the French war commission, after their trip through the central West, were received enthusiastically in Philadelphia and New York; some of the British commissioners addressed congress, and all of them prepared to return home, confident that the arrangements made with America ensured the prosecution of the war to a victorious conclusion.

The finance committee of the French chamber of deputies, in reporting on a bill, asserted that France must have a "peace that pays;" in restoration of Alsace-Lorraine, compensation in kind for thefts and damages in the invaded region, rebuilding of the ruined towns and villages by German hands, ships to replace those sunk, and guarantees for annual payments.

It was stated authoritatively in Washington Thursday that President Wilson had informed Mr. Balfour that the United States will make war and peace in common with the allies.

Ferment in Germany.
Of the greatest interest and importance were the events of the week in Germany. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, finding himself between two fires, maintained silence concerning Germany's aims in the war. On the one hand, the peace-without-annexation socialists attacked him and the government fiercely, virtually demanding that he step down and out. On the other hand, the conservatives and Pan-Germans assailed him for apparently yielding to the other faction, and also boldly blamed his hesitant policy for the long duration of the war. Sweeping internal reforms in the empire are demanded by the radicals, and some of them—but not enough yet—venture to urge the wiping out of Prussia's baleful predominance and even the deposition of the reigning dynasty.

A logical result of these agitations was the reported attempt of an assassin to shoot the kaiser in Berlin. Had his aim been truer his bullet would have removed not alone Wilhelm, but the whole house of Hohenzollern.

Closely related to events in Germany were the developments in Russia. The provisional heads of the new republic were forced to agree to form a coalition government with the delegates of the soldiers' and workmen's councils. This quieted the disturbances for the time being, but the German socialist emissaries continued to spread their propaganda. Borgler, Danish socialist, who is in Petrograd, made known the peace terms proposed by the German socialist democratic party, the majority faction. They include recognition of the right of nations to freedom of development, the introduction of compulsory international arbitration, the restitution by Germany of all conquered territories, a plebiscite in Russian Poland, with freedom to choose between independence or annexation by Russia or Germany; the restoration of independence to Belgium, Serbia, and Roumania; the restoration to Bulgaria of the Bulgarian districts of Macedonia, and the granting to Serbia of a free port on the Adriatic.

The radical socialists of Petrograd at once declared that their party should have nothing to do with Borgler and his propositions, which they asserted were wholly pro-German.

Stand of American Socialists.
Leading American socialists gave out a statement denouncing the international socialist conference called for Stockholm early in June as "the most dangerous of all the kaiser's plots for cash in his military victories," and characterizing the American socialist delegates, Morris Hillquit and Algeron Lee, as radically pro-German.

In Greece matters moved rapidly toward a climax. The king is losing supporters daily in large numbers, and on Sunday 40,000 persons assembled in Saloniki and with great enthusiasm adopted a resolution proclaiming the deposition of King Constantine and his dynasty.

Germany is attempting to start in Italy the same campaign of disintegration she is carrying on in Russia. Baron Sonnino is the object of attack by radical journals in the southern country, as is Miluykov in Petrograd. A war mission from Italy is now on its way to America. It is headed by the prince of Udine, and Marconi is one of the members. The Italians are coming to discuss especially the problems of transporting food and munitions from America and the purchase of coal and railway rolling stock. The submarine warfare has caused a grievous shortage of coal in Italy.

The Food Problem.
Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the food committee of the Council of National Defense, strongly advocated the government measures that give the president and the department of agriculture direct control of the country's food resources. He also urged a more limited use of wheat in this country, and his talk on that topic was followed immediately by a government report showing that the winter wheat crop will be only about 366,000,000 bushels, the smallest since 1904. The acreage abandoned is the largest on record. In Great Britain the "meatless day" was abandoned because Baron Devonport, food controller, found a diminution in the consumption of breadstuffs was of more importance.

Food riots took place in many cities and towns of Sweden, and according to an official statement, the vast majority of Germans are underfed. Sweden's predicament, however, was lessened greatly on Wednesday when England agreed to release the Swedish ships laden with food and other necessities that had been detained in British harbors. In return Sweden agreed to release 900,000 tons of allied shipping that had been tied up in the gulf of Bothnia since the beginning of the war.

Desperate Struggle in France.
The desperate battle for possession of the coal fields of Lens in northern France continued unabated through the week. Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria brought up great masses of reserve troops and every available gun to check the unceasing British attack, and on Tuesday he succeeded in retaking Fresnoy village and wood. But that night and the next day the British returned to the assault and again took possession of most of the lost ground. There was heavy fighting at other points along the Drocourt-Queant line, which evidently is regarded by the Germans as of vital importance. Bad weather lessened the severity of the fighting along the French front.

The expected general offensive by the allies on the Macedonian front began after several days of intense artillery activity and according to London advices it was fairly successful. Between Lake Ochrida and Lake Dolran there was fierce fighting, the British capturing Bulgarian trenches for a stretch of two miles. In the Cerna river bend the Russians took several enemy trenches, and in the upper Moglenica river valley the Serbians, fighting to regain their own land, hit the Teutonic allies hard blows. As usual, Berlin claimed that all these attacks by the entente allies were repulsed.

An interesting development of the week was the announcement that Japan had been asked to supply ships for the transportation of American troops and supplies to Europe, and the resulting discovery that Japan itself was planning to send a large number of soldiers to the Russian front this summer.

President Wilson on Thursday created a war council of the Red Cross and Henry P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co. was placed at its head. In accepting that post Mr. Davison said all the vast facilities of the Morgan firm would stand behind the Red Cross for the duration of the war.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Weymouth people will be interested in the following report of the golden wedding anniversary of a former pastor and his esteemed wife...

Rev. and Mrs. B. F. Eaton celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage May 5. Both Mr. and Mrs. Eaton are in feeble health...

Mr. and Mrs. Eaton were married at the home of Mrs. Eaton's sister, Mrs. Paul in St. Peter, Minn., May 5, 1867.

Mr. Eaton was born in South Hampton, New Hampshire, in 1836, the son of Moses and Betsy Eaton...

Mrs. Eaton was born in 1833, in South Berwick, the oldest, and only living child, of the family of four of John and Lydia Kennard.

Mr. Eaton was settled in Dover from 1862-1866, coming here after two years of preaching in Salmon Falls.

From Dover Mr. Eaton went to do pioneer work in Dayton, Ohio, and at about the same time John Kennard moved his family to St. Peter, Minn., and there Mr. Eaton went to claim his bride.

We realize something of the primitive conditions of the West at that time, when they tell us that the plan to have the wedding on the bride's birthday, the sixth of May, had to be changed...

Mr. and Mrs. Eaton remained in Ohio about ten years; the two children, Rev. Clarence L. Eaton, pastor of the Universalist church in St. Johnsbury, Vt., who has a wife and one child, and Minnie L. Eaton, who lives in Dover with her parents...

It would make too long a story to tell of these years of their loving, self-sacrificing work together for the Universalist church, their one common thought and purpose, that of helpfulness to one and all.

One of the attractions of Weymouth is its social life, and its Women's Clubs, which are noted for their hospitality. The editor of this department requests the cooperation of the ladies especially the officers and chairmen of committees of the Old Colony Club and the Monday Club in forwarding items each week.

Please address:
MISS BEATRICE VANDERBILT,
Care Gazette and Transcript,
Weymouth, Mass.

The annual meeting of the Weymouth Catholic Club was held Monday, and officers were elected for the coming year. Following this, Miss Mary Donovan entertained with piano solos. While refreshments were being served, music was furnished by Riley's orchestra. After a social hour the meeting adjourned. The new officers are:—President, Miss Annie Scollard; Vice-Presidents, Miss Mary Sheehy and Miss Margaret Sullivan; Recording Secretary, Miss H. Anna Kennedy; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Joanna Connell; Treasurer, Mrs. William Doyle; Directors, Mrs. Lillian Sullivan, Mrs. L. H. Godin, Mrs. Charles Berry, Miss Ellen Roche and Mrs. Katherine Sweeney; Auditors, Miss Annie Coffey and Miss Margaret McEnroe; Custodian, Mrs. William Fennell.

Old Colony chapter, D. A. R. of Hingham, has elected the following officers: Regent, Miss Susan B. Willard. Vice-Regents, Mrs. W. L. Bouve, Mrs. H. V. Cushing and Miss Edith Andrew. Recording Secretary, Mrs. Oscar H. Stringer. Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. George W. Burr. Treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Lunt. Registrar, Mrs. Walter C. Shute. Historian, Mrs. Dallas Lore Sharp. Custodian, Mrs. Edward F. Wilder.

Mr. and Mrs. Max A. Bertheau of San Francisco, Calif., announce the engagement of their daughter Jeannette to George Linden Brett, Jr., of Boston and Hingham. The marriage will probably be solemnized next Fall.

The trustees of the Norfolk County King's Daughters' and Sons' Pond Home for Aged met Tuesday and decided to hold the annual donation day June 2. It is hoped that the event may net $1000. The following committees were elected: Mrs. A. B. German of Dedham and Mrs. J. A. Cushing of East Weymouth, entertainment; Mrs. S. F. Niles of Wellesley Farms, Miss A. B. Conant of Brookline and Mrs. J. C. Lane of Norwood, refreshments; the Persevering King's Daughters of Foxboro, ice cream and cake; Mrs. James Ray of Franklin, candy; the King's Daughters of Franklin, miscellaneous articles; Willing Workers' Circle of Pondville, fancy articles; Mrs. Abbie Fenno of Wollaston and Mrs. Harriet Guy of Quincy, money donations; Mrs. B. S. Lovell of East Weymouth, other donations.

Mrs. Maben Brown entertained the Friendship class at her home on Pond street Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. George B. Wheaton was delightfully surprised at her home at 624 Commercial street recently when about twenty of her friends from Marlboro, Lynn and Dorchester arrived, laden with goodies of all kinds, and prepared to have a jolly good time. At noontime an appetizing repast was served and a day of merriment was enjoyed by all. Music and dancing were features of the event, but the most interesting part of the day was the presentation of a number of gifts to Mrs. Wheaton in behalf of her many friends. The gifts presented were a very handsome purse, a student's bag and a beautiful basket of fruit. At the close of the day the friends departed for their several homes, having spent a most enjoyable day.

The Monday Club are making plans to present some entirely new features in their program the coming season.

Mrs. Parker T. Pearson held an afternoon tea and candy sale at her home on Monday afternoon in the interests of "American Preparedness." A number of ladies at the Heights attended and the affair proved to be very successful, both financially and socially.

Miss Mary E. Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Roberts of Rockland, was married to Clifford M. Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Martin of North Abington, Monday evening at the Holy Family church rectory by Rev. E. F. Fagan. They were attended by Miss Louise Roberts, a sister of the bride, and Edward Martin, best man. At the home of the bride's parents on Howard street a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Martin were assisted in receiving by the bridesmaid and best man and guests were present from North Abington, Weymouth and Rockland. Mr. Martin is a member of Co K, 5th Massachusetts Regiment, of Hingham.

Miss Marion Reed of South Weymouth has returned from Washington, D. C., having graduated from the National School of Domestic Art and Science.

Mrs. C. Will Bailey of 66 Myrtle street, East Weymouth, left town Wednesday morning for a ten days' visit at Mt. Vernon, N. Y., where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Parker L. Tirrell, formerly of this town. While there on Sunday she will observe her birthday anniversary in connection with Reginald Tirrell, a nephew, whose birthday comes on the same day.

The Monday Club are welcoming more members on their waiting list. All delinquent members who do not pay dues by June 1 will be dropped, and the members of the waiting list will be admitted to the club.

Delphi Temple, Pythian Sisters, held their regular business meeting on Monday evening. Mrs. Gertrude Newcombe read a very interesting report of the Grand Lodge held in Boston on May 2 and 3. On May 28, after a short business meeting, there will be an old-fashioned party. All members are invited to come in costume of "ye olden times." Old fashioned dances will help to make up the evening's enjoyment.

Mrs. R. I. Steele gave a neighborhood party to a small party of children at her home on Saturday afternoon. A unique program of games was indulged in and the children were entertained in a most pleasing manner. Refreshments were served.

About seventy-five couples attended a surprise party given Miss Anna Higgins at the Moose Hall Friday evening. In behalf of the guests, Miss Higgins was presented with a beautiful gold bracelet by John Ronayne. Refreshments were served at 9.30, followed by dancing and games until a late hour.

Mrs. Viola King entertained the members of her Sunday School class at her home on Brookside road Monday evening. The special guests were two members of the class, Walter Steele and David Lang, who leave town with their parents shortly the former going to Vancouver, B. C., and the latter to Collingwood, Canada. There was a program of vocal and instrumental music, games, and a lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernst of Union avenue are the proud parents of a baby boy born Tuesday afternoon.

The pupils of the Mission School, connected with the South Shore Morning Musical Club, gave a recital at the home of Miss Emma Clapp, Thursday evening. There was vocal and instrumental numbers which were finely rendered. These pupils are taught by different active members of the club and all who listened were more than satisfied with this branch of the work of this club.

The annual May supper, entertainment and social by the Guild of Trinity church at Pythian hall on Tuesday was a great success, and was largely attended. The play of "Mechanical Jane" was given in a most excellent manner by Mrs. Alice Northrop, Mrs. David Moffet and Elizabeth Hyde. It was uproariously funny and caused great laughter and was given thunders of applause. Miriam Blanchard and Grace Stevenson were enthusiastically received, and their song and minuet and their flag songs in beautiful patriotic costume were excellently sung and highly appreciated. They were accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Annie McDowal. Excellent music for the dancing was furnished by an orchestra comprised of Mr. Beltrig, Mr. Tyler, Mrs. Eva Ellis and Miss Lillian Beltrig.

Mrs. William G. Parkhurst gave a very pretty at home party at her residence, 647 Pleasant street, Friday evening, May 11. Friends from Rockland, Hingham, Quincy and Weymouth were among the invited guests. The rooms were beautifully decorated with potted plants and bunting. Suspended from the ceiling were numberless flags, artistically arranged. A dainty lunch was served. Mrs. Francis Monroe poured. Mrs. A. P. Pool assisted by Mrs. Thomas Coleraine served cakes and ices. Miss Myra Tocker was in charge of the sweets. Mrs. Parkhurst, assisted by Mrs. Frank Shaw, gave a very unique entertainment, which was enjoyed by all. It was nearing the small hours when raps were called for and as they left for home singing "Brighten the Corner," everyone pronounced Mrs. Parkhurst a very charming hostess.

Irving Morgan has leased the Shipp house on Evans road to Mrs. J. H. Schatzel.

The chairman of the Quincy organization for Preparedness was asked to provide sweaters, wristers, etc., for the crew of a boat about to leave for the North Sea. Only the day before she received the call the Quincy women had sent their supplies to Marblehead. So she endeavored to procure as many as possible from neighboring branches. The North Weymouth branch sent what they had finished, which consisted of eight sweaters, ten pairs of wristers and seven scarfs. Just recently two sets of knitted garments had been sent to the boat on which is one of our boys, "Reggie" Gillmore.

Mary Pickford in "A Poor Little Rich Girl" will be the extra attraction at Bates Opera House next Wednesday evening. Tickets at Harlows.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Saville of Winter Hill were the guests of Mrs. J. P. Holbrook on Tuesday.

Mrs. Walter Jenkins is soon to move to Attleboro, where she will make her home with Dr. George Jenkins.

Mrs. E. R. Sampson went to Fitchburg on Wednesday as a delegate from the Third Universalist church to the State Convention.

Prayer meeting this evening at 7.45.

The Misses Lillian MacHenry, Mabel McLane, Florence Pratt and Marjorie Rea attended the short hand convention held at the St. James Theatre last Saturday.

Tuesday evening, under the direction of the social committee of the Ever Progressive class, the drama, "Gone Abroad," was given by Mrs. Wilfred Hayden, Mrs. John Maynard, Mrs. Ernest Saunders and Mrs. Frank. During the evening several vocal and instrumental numbers were given. After the entertainment candy, ice cream and jelly were on sale.

Mrs. Charles Hawes has been spending the week at her home.

Wednesday evening a number of the young people of the Epworth League attended the anniversary of the East Braintree Epworth League.

Thursday evening the first quarterly conference of the Porter church was held in the vestry, District Superintendent J. F. Cooper presiding.

The Ever Progressive class will hold their monthly meeting next Wednesday evening. Supper will be served at 6.30.

BATES OPERA HOUSE.

"A poor Little Rich Girl" will disclose Mary Pickford in a picture which, although of typical Pickford charm, presents the famous girl-star in a character quite different from anything in which she has appeared heretofore. For instance, who ever heard of Mary Pickford being a regular little bob-cat when it comes to fighting? Yet this is just what proves to be the case in "Little Mary's" new film when a gang of street urchins attack her at her palatial home.

In the luxurious conservatory, with its lily pond and gigantic palms she battles with a half dozen sturdy youngsters and finally sets them to rout at the cost of much expensive furnishings as well as her own immaculate appearance. Bespattered from head to foot with mud from the erstwhile lily pond and severely scratched she stands triumphant as the remains of the gang are set to flight. The urchins used in these scenes were instructed to give real battle and in fighting them off the popular little star had her hands full in every sense of the expression—as well as her teeth and feet. After this fight Miss Pickford's activities for the day at the studio ceased right then and there and those who will witness the affair on the screen of the Bates Opera House Wednesday evening, May 23, will easily understand why this was the case.

The results of the Grammar School base ball league this week were:
May 10, Hunt, 14; Bates 1.
May 11, Athens, 3; Humphrey, 4.
The standing of the four teams to date:

Team	Won	Lost
Athens	3	0
Bates	0	3
Hunt	1	1
Humphrey	1	1

The regular schedule will be played Thursday and Friday each week.

The C. M. A. junior banquet to be held Thursday evening has been postponed for one week as the boys failed to report whether they wanted to eat turkey or not. This was never heard of before in history, a boy not wanting to eat turkey.

The C. M. A. Midgett base ball team were defeated by the Alden nine Saturday A. M. The game was fast and there was much enthusiasm. Score 6 to 3.

Saturday, May 19, the C. M. A. Midgetts will play a team from Mt. Pleasant. This should be a good game as the C. M. A. boys are going to do their best to win, and Mr. Talbot says his Midgetts will be ahead when the last man is out.

The 100 ft. flag pole for the association will be set next week and on Memorial Day it is planned to have exercises and break out the first flag. The intermediate boys who are interested in base ball should show up and get their team started for they should be playing base ball in June.

It will not be long before the hot weather will be with us. Therefore you should join the association now, so as to be able to enjoy a good shower after work or supper, or after a good game of tennis. Or on a Saturday go to the camp on Slate Island and spend Sunday. The best times are in store for you at the association. Will you come in and enjoy them?

ATHLETIC MEET.

The first handicap athletic meet ever held on the Clapp Memorial Association field was conducted Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The events were well filled and the boys all worked hard to win. Ribbons were given the first three boys who finished, and a medal was awarded the boy winning the most points. Asa Pratt won the medal, finishing second in four events which gave him 12 points. The events were as follows:
50 yds dash.—1st, N. Smith; 2nd, A. Pratt; 3rd, R. Curtin.
100 yds. dash.—1st, H. Stone; 2nd, A. Pratt; 3rd, E. Higgins.

ROMANCE AT SIWASH

By GEORGE FITCH

MARTHA and I have been quarrelling again. It is one of our chief diversions. Quarrelling with Martha is more fun than agreeing with the boss when he wants to raise my salary. When I think of what my life might have been without having her with me to waste into me every night and assault me with her entire large and well-chosen vocabulary while trying to persuade me to revise my language and squeeze the hot air out of it or to stop holding Peter Etheridge Simmons, Jr., up by one leg or to admit that I am entirely wrong in my claims concerning the weight of Queen Anne. I hold up my hands and bless Siwash college, which gave her to me.

Quarrelling with Martha is more exhilarating than shooting the chutes. And it's a perfectly harmless pastime. I've quarrelled with her for about eight years now—three of them in Siwash and five more since then, and as far as I remember we have never settled a single quarrel or quarrelled over a subject that was worth settling. I am very proud of our system. Sometimes I think we ought to patent it. No matter what I really want to quarrel with her about, or no matter what reason she has for locking up The Hague tribunal and calling out her reserves against me, we always quarrel about English history. It's a bully idea. You can put all the enthusiasm and tabasco you please into the discussion, but you never get anywhere—most especially you don't get around to what you would really like to quarrel about. That's why all of our quarrels together have never panned out a drop of brine. If I ever made Martha cry, I think I should go out to Lincoln Park and feed myself to the lions.

I suppose we choose English history to row about because it was English history which first brought us together when I was a howling young nuisance at Siwash and she was a compendium of useful information with a twinkle in her talk. I got acquainted because of English history—don't tell me a college education hasn't its advantages. And most of our quarrels end up with a discussion as to when I fell in love with her. She maintains that it took three years of steady effort on her part to land me. I claim that it was a case of love at first sight; that she won me by declining to become acquainted with me, and that long after I was her slave she tried to give me away to a fat girl who wore No. 9 shoes. She always shudders at this, and so do I. It wasn't a pleasant experience for me. Martha and I went through college practically hand in hand, and only parted long enough afterward to enable me to sandbag a Chicago bank into paying me a living salary. But there was a time—in my freshman year—when if—

Oh, well, for that matter, the whole affair is full of it's. If I had gotten as mad as I should have gotten at her indifference—if I hadn't taken up study to amuse myself that spring; if I hadn't seen that Martha's hair would be beautiful if she fluffed it up instead of tying it in a hard knot that pulled her eyebrows out of shape; and, most particularly, if I hadn't gotten a tremendous grouch in the spring of my freshman year—I never would have gotten Martha. It's fun to figure out all the if's. Think of winning a wife by getting an acute case of dark blue cellywabbles! If that wasn't a top-heavy reward for foolishness, I'll give it up.

Now, I am not going to tell it all, because, while I'm perfectly willing to discuss other people's love affairs I simply can't seem to care to take the lid off and let the world peer into ours. How I persuaded Martha to look upon me as a pleasant diversion, and how I persuaded her to come down about a thousand miles and decorate existence for me—these are secrets. But I don't mind telling you how it all started. After all, that's the important part of these college affairs. It's just like rolling a snowball down hill—start it and you don't have to worry about it. It will take care of itself. That's all I really did about falling in love with Martha. I started the affair; but I didn't mean a thing by it, either. Neither did she mean anything. In fact, she was a lot meaner than I about it.

It was the calendar that really began it all. One of the most mysterious things in college life is the way the year slips by under you and goes away before you are half through with it. This never failed to surprise and grieve me. A year is such a confoundedly long affair when you look at it in the face—particularly a college year. When you consider, along in September, that before June you have to go to chapel 200 times, read through several books written in decayed languages, and figure out a chubby volume of trigonometry problems that look like airplane wrecks when they are put on the blackboard, the year seems like a quarter-section of eternity. But suddenly, just after you've made a lot of friendships, have become a decided hit with a number of girls, are rounding into good shape in the 220 squad, and have a dozen plans for the enlightenment of the campus well under way, you wake up to find that there is about a month left before commencement, and that at the end of that month the college will explode and scatter your brand-new lifeline friends to all parts of the country.

This is the reason why so many college boys become pensive along in April and get what is technically known as an Ingrowing grouch.

Of course seniors have this disease hardest, but even freshmen are not immune. I came down with a heavy attack of it along in the middle of March. I could see everything plainly then. My foolish eyes were opened. College days were so precious that after life would be morguelike compared with them. And there were only a pitifully few college days. I had used up nearly a quarter of mine already! Used them up in frivolous ways—squandered them like a drunken sailor; spent whole hours loafing in my room and oversleeping instead of getting out and soaking in the glorious friendships so soon to be severed forever. Why, even now preparations for commencement were beginning! In a few weeks the boys would be gone. Some of them would never come back. Bangs might stay at home the next year. Allen was doubtful about returning—at least the faculty was doubtful for him. Even I might never see Siwash again. I had wasted the only year I might have in college.

For over a week I was unfathomably dejected. My kind roommate, Bingo Bailey, fussed around me and tried to get me to soak my head or take a large drink of kerosene, but I merely threw things at him and declined his suggestions.

But gradually my mental turmoil settled down into one fixed accusation. Bad as my other crimes were, there was one which surpassed them in asininity. I was feather-headed on the girl question. It was a fearful and degrading truth. I, Peter Simmons, a grown-up man of eighteen and president of his class, to say nothing of being molder of destinies—hadn't I helped mold Boggs' destiny?—was a plaything in the hands of designing females. A pretty girl could smile at him and bid him follow in a shy voice, and thereupon he neglected friends and studies and made himself that girl's slave.

It was awful. I had no stamina whatever. Swiftly I reviewed my six or seven master passions of the year. Every one of them was a pretty face. Whether the face concealed a brain or not I had never thought to wonder. A peachblow complexion, a companionable smile, a light foot in the dance—that was my conception of lovely woman. Bah!

When I thought about this for several days it began to have its effect. I became quiet and powerful within and stern lines developed about my mouth. I could see them in the glass quite plainly. I was no longer a trusting child to be sent toddling hither and yon by a woman's voice. I was a grown man with great purposes in life and I had precious little room in it for women. Acting on this impulse, I broke a date with Miss Willoughby with brutal directness, and declined my invitation to the annual party of the Kappa Kap Pajamas. I would ignore the sex entirely during the rest of my college course. Men had too much to do in college to be bothered by the woman question.

But suddenly I had a better idea. Other men had become soured and had thrown down the girl question. But I could do something more. After all, the sex was not useless. There were fine women and intelligent women—delightful companions and intellectual comrades. I would be large instead of merely indifferent. I would pick out the brightest girl in my class and win her friendship. I would show her attention and be her best friend no matter whether she was merely plain or so homely that I would thank her whenever she wore a veil.

This was a really splendid idea. It was a lot bigger than the other. As soon as I had conceived it I forgot all about my grouch. There was nothing left of it but my stern resolve. As a matter of fact, the resolve was a little weak in the back, too. For, as I convalesced, the idea of causing pain and sorrow to all those beautiful and trusting young girls became intolerable, and I hastily recalled my regrets to the Kappa Kap party.

I had suffered severely, and I was bound to give my idea a trial. I needn't carry this intellectual friendship business to extremes. But I could pick out the girl—a plain one—and at least go and call on her. That would show my firmness of mind and discriminating character. Maybe I would even take her to a party. So I began to look over my class for possible candidates for my high-minded and intelligent friendship.

I must say there were plenty of possibilities. I was surprised to discover how many young ladies in the freshman class had entirely escaped my notice. As I say, I had had a frivolous and beauty-hunting eye. But now that I had started hunting for plain worth, I was overwhelmed with candidates. I would look at two or three of them earnestly and then go away and rest for a while. There were tall, thin girls; short, stout girls; old girls with spectacles, and nondescript girls with clothes which fitted them tightly about the neck and nowhere else in particular. I began to wonder how I was going to find, among all these girls, the one who might prove to be the most sensible and entertaining. Of course I might go and call on all of them in turn, but I balked at this. It would take too much time and suffering, and besides there were two or three girls—technically speaking—in the class, any one of whom might be the logical candidate, and to tell the truth, I didn't have the nerve to take the chance.

I sat through half a dozen classes looking over the collection and sizing them up from their recitations, and I finally decided that Miss Martha Scroggs would just about do. She was a thin, freckled girl, bright but not gaudy, with severe hair tied up to be out of harm's way—a girl whom I had passed on the campus until I had gotten perfectly familiar with her hat, without ever once looking at her face. But she had a breezy way of sizing up the great has-beens in English history which pleased me. She was a girl who might be really entertaining. I decided to talk with her, to call on her, and to become her friend. It would be a just recognition of her abilities, anyway. It was a shame that so many of the really deserving and able young women should be condemned to loneliness because their faces didn't happen to embellish the college scenery. I, Peter Simmons, would not submit to this injustice and Martha Scroggs, the brightest girl in the class, should have a good time if I had any say about it.

Full of this fine resolution, I slid out of history class rapidly one day and fell in beside the young lady as she trotted off toward the library. "Believe me, Miss Scroggs," I said, lifting my hat, "you certainly handled old Henry the wife-collector without gloves today."

She turned quickly and looked at me. Then I remembered that I had never met Miss Scroggs. Of course we had been in the same class and all that, but I realized that I had never tripped over any chair earlier in the year fighting for an introduction. She Scroggs on the following day and on the day after that, but that was all. She was always surrounded by girl friends. They were the plain and unadorned members of the class, but they seemed to enjoy each other so much that I hated to burst ruthlessly in on their ranks and take Miss Scroggs away. It made me mad, however. It was Friday and now I would have to wait until Monday to become intimately acquainted with her. Somehow, seeing her hedged about by forbidding females and entirely inaccessible, made me more anxious than ever to begin the friendship, and Sunday seemed a long day.

On Monday conditions were very favorable. I cut in ahead of the body-guard going out, and followed Miss Scroggs down the stairs. She was mine. I was quite excited. "Good morning," I said pleasantly, raising my hat. I was about to fall into step with her and walk over to the library. But I didn't. She turned and spoke to me very pleasantly, but from the next planet, and suddenly I became afraid that if I walked with her I might bore her. Perhaps she didn't want to be bothered with me that day. I didn't want to make a bad impression to start with. I passed on rapidly the other way, and by the time I had walked around the college buildings I was indignant. What was the matter with me, anyway? This was the only time Petey Simmons had ever shown the white weather. What was he afraid of? He ought to be kicked.

I got a bow and a smile out of Miss Scroggs the next day, but she had her gang with her. I was rather relieved when I saw it, too. After all, this was no mere campus enterprise to be conducted hastily between classes. I would waylay her and walk home with her. To be sure, she lived in the opposite part of town, but I had lots of business out that way. I had neglected it all that year, and now it was pressing. I cruised dejectedly behind her for two evenings while she and two of her pestiferous girl friends chattered gayly homeward. Once I got a bow from her at her gate, but that was all. Business was certainly poor.

But in the third week I had a great stroke of good luck. I wandered into the library one afternoon and found looked at me, not in an unfriendly way, with a sort of curiosity—as if I had been some new kind of bug. I felt my foot face beginning to blush—I have an awful time with that face of mine—but I wasn't going to back out, and I toddled right along, waiting to take whatever she chose to hand me.

Miss Scroggs looked at me some more with a sort of perplexed air. Suddenly her face brightened. "Oh, yes, I know now!" she exclaimed. "You're the little man who hides behind Mr. Pierce, aren't you?" "Huh!" I said indignantly. Pierce was a football man and broad, and I had dodged a number of flunks by sitting very quietly behind him. But I didn't care to have the whole class notice it. I stiffened up to my full height. "Miss Scroggs," said I, "you know my name and you know you know it, and you also know I know you know it."

"Oh," she said, "I've heard you referred to as Mr. Simmons, but it's so much nicer to get information first hand and accurately." "My name is Simmons," I said, bowing low. "Petey Simmons." "I'm so glad to meet you, Mr. Simmons," said she, putting out her hand. "Good morning." Then she turned into the library and left me.

After I had thought of this incident for the rest of the day and most of the evening, I decided to be even larger than I had any idea I could be and overlook the whole thing. It was natural that Miss Scroggs should be a little confused by my unexpected friendliness. Possibly she was even suspicious. It did seem queer, undoubtedly, for me to take so sudden an interest in her. Anyway, she wasn't used to attention. I might have to persevere very gently so as not to frighten her. But she was a bright little girl and deserved notice and, confound it, she was going to get it. I had a chance to take off my hat and say "Good morning" to Miss

Miss Scroggs didn't care to be bothered with me? No, it wasn't. But she certainly was discouraging. However, Petey Simmons never was a quitter. I didn't want to quit, anyway. I would have given a lot to sit around in that college library for a couple of hours with Miss Scroggs and have her sparkle away to me the way she did to those confounded girl friends. She looked as if she could be perfectly delightful if she felt that way.

I found out what church the Scroggses frequented the next week, and decided to shift my attack. If I couldn't associate in college with Martha—I decided that I would call her by that name—I would go out and use a church in cold-blooded fashion for the purpose. I went to two church socials and found Martha at the second one. It seemed to me she was perhaps one thirty-second of a degree more cordial in her greeting—at any rate she bowed to me before I jogged her attention—and I made the most of it. I trailed around with her and behind her for half an hour, fighting my way through mobs of girl friends—I never saw a girl so cursed with girl friends—and after having gotten two distinct laughs from her by a line of talk that would have reduced one of the Browning hall beauties to helpless mirth, I came right out and asked her if I couldn't walk home with her. My knees shook when I did it.

"Why, there isn't the slightest use of that, Mr. Simmons," she said kindly. "Ralph Madison lives next door, and he'll take care of me."

Ralph Madison was a town student—a sophomore whose only prominent point was his teeth. He was a sissy and a nincompoop, and when he walked carelessly up and said, "Ready, Martha?" I could have bitten him in two. They went off together like old and well-worn friends, and I went out into the night and planned murder and arson for three hours.

Anyway, that ended it. I'd laid my pride down before Miss Scroggs, and she had wiped only walked on it, but had wiped her feet on it. I'd tried to make a friend and companion out of a girl who would probably never have another chance to mingle with a real masculine mind. And what was the result? She had laughed at me. Very well, I would give up my large-minded idea and go back and dally with the charming girls of the school. I had been a fool for neglecting them, anyway. They were, at least, kind and appreciative.

For a week or more I soused myself in society and attended the Kappa Kap party with tremendous success, not less than eight girls confessing that they could die dancing with me. But I didn't enjoy myself. Somehow society seemed as unsatisfactory as a fifth dish of ice cream. I got to hanging around the library between classes—not in the hope of talking with Martha—I wouldn't have tried that again for a farm—but because it seemed kind of homelike in there, and I liked to watch her studying with her raincoat and tam on—they became her more than I supposed would be possible. I got considerably interested in English history, too, while I was wasting time there. I had to amuse myself some way—and I did a lot of reading in the hope that some day I could get up unexpectedly and recite to young Professor Harris until he choked me off. It would be such a stunning surprise to him, coming from me. I chuckled at the thought of it. So I filled up on Macaulay until I was a walking biography of William of Orange, and one day when Professor Harris ordered me up to do my usual tight-wire balancing act between a flunk and a "passable" I sailed into the English for their attitude to Dutch Billy like a prosecuting attorney arraigning a chicken thief.

Professor Harris had only escaped from England about two generations back, and he bristled up when I tried to explain how sweet it was in the beef-bolters to invite William over with his army, and then after using them, to boot said army out of the country as a nuisance—in a perfectly polite and well-bred manner, of course—the English are always polite. So we had a little ten-minute bicker, and every time Professor Harris got a hammerlock on me I managed to fall back a generation or two and grab up some other English political crime which I had run across in the last week. So I came out of the deal without more than one shoulder on the mat, but pretty much worried—for Professor Harris was determined to avenge his precious England, and I saw where it was up to P. Simmons to keep on stoking in history at the rate of one quarto volume a day.

I hurried over to the library after class, and had just gotten Hume and Macaulay stacked up, one on each side, when I looked up and saw Miss Scroggs sitting near me and looking at me. She ducked her head with her peculiar little smile and bow. It warmed me clear to my shoes. I bowed back and went to work all cheered up. But I hadn't gotten more than a page or two worried down when someone dropped a note going by. It was from Miss Scroggs.

"Three cheers for the Dutch," it read. "Re-enforcements coming by forced marches." I smiled across to her and waved my hand around my head, meaning "Hurrah for our side" and "Soc et tuum," and other things. It made me feel mighty good, and I decided, when we ran out of Dutch complications in English history, to jump in on the French side, if necessary, and keep up the fight. After all, it was a lot of fun to joust with a professor. It was as exciting as baseball. Someone sat down by me and I closed the book. It was Miss Scroggs. She was just a plain girl, as I have carefully explained, and I can't see why I went so dotty and nervous all over just because she came over to talk to me. I suppose it was because—

At least that was the only reason I could discover. "I've come over to ask you if you've ever read Motley on William," she asked. "He's dandy."

"I'll get him now," I said promptly. I got up, but hesitated a minute. While I was gone she would go away, of course. I decided I wouldn't go away. Then I thought I'd better. Then I didn't know what to think. I looked down at Martha pleadingly. She looked up and didn't bat an eye. "I'll find the place for you when you come back," she said.

LET CLOCK RUN THE RANGE

Electric Cooking Stove That Will Lighten Work in Kitchen and Save Cost.

An electric cooking stove that is controlled by a clock with an oven, into which one can put food with the full assurance that at the time desired it will be cooked, is described by the Scientific American.

"Meals can be cooked automatically on the new electric range—that is to say, the housewife can put the food in the oven at any time of the day and set the clock for automatically turning on the current, and hence the heat, at the proper hour, at the same time setting the thermostat to maintain the proper temperature. Baking, roasting and boiling can be done in this way. When the proper temperature is reached, which requires ten minutes to half an hour, depending upon the temperature required, the current automatically cuts off, and from then on cooking proceeds as in a fireless cooker. The heavy heat insulation about the walls of the oven—two inches of rock wool—causes the ovens to retain their heat for hours. No attention is required until the hour arrives at which it was determined the meal should be ready.

"With the new electric range breakfast can be prepared in the way just mentioned the night before with the assurance that it will be ready exactly on time."

The Black Woman's Burden.

The African girl is a precocious child, born to the language of sex. If the buyer is old she will hate him. She needs make no secret of this, she may tell whom she pleases that, having "come to her eyes," she hates the man who buys her. All but her mother will laugh at the venom of the little tongue, the heavings of the little chest. And the day when her master brings the ivory, or the woman, or the last articles of barter, that day there will be a feast in her father's town, and the songs of marriage. If the little girl weeps—why, so they always do, the hearts of children are thus. And in the evening, when the sun goes down the path to its setting and she moves away in the caravan of her husband's people, you will not ask which of the children in that caravan is the little bride; you will know because she weeps.—Jenn Kenyon Mackenzie, in the Atlantic.

Life of a Gas Well.

The drilling of wells is only one of the big items of expense of a gas company. The acquisition of and carrying undeveloped territory is perhaps the largest item, and one which is not given much consideration by the consumers, who very seldom stop to think what it costs, or what obstacles the management has to overcome in order to acquire a good supply of gas each year. In some quarters the idea prevails that a gas well lasts forever, and that it is not necessary to carry much unoperated territory; but it is far from the truth. The average life of an Ohio gas well is four years and six months, which has been proven by taking the records of almost 2,000 wells and ascertaining how many have been abandoned. Some wells only last a year, others 11 or 12 years; but the average of the entire number is as noted above.—National Magazine.

Silent Prompter.

To the silent drama, the noiseless motor car, the soundless alarm clock, is added the speechless prompter. Of course, it is electrical, displaying the text of the play or opera in illuminated letters upon an endless band, running on rollers, and passing in front of electric lamps of high power. It doesn't do away with the prompter's box altogether. Sometimes more than one box is used, so that it can be more clearly seen from all parts of the stage. Part of the roller device can lie below the stage, while the lamps are placed in the box and behind the transparent band so as to show up the part of the text that is passing. The boxes are connected with each other by any suitable driving gear and the machinist operates all the outfit from the side of the stage by a crank. An electric motor can also be used for running the device.

Was Proved to Him.

Two Scottish soldiers on their way to France passed through London. It was their first experience of the "big village," and they were naturally keeping their eyes open. Their watchfulness was, however, not sharp enough to avoid a taxi in the vicinity of Victoria Station, and one of them got knocked over. As he picked himself up, none the worse for his fall, his mate growled, "Mebbe ye'll believe it's busier than Kirkintilloch noo."

CAREFULLY PLAN FARM BUILDINGS

Ramshackle Structures Don't Encourage Scientific Agriculture.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR GROUPS

Protect Implements and Stock, Save Extra Labor, Lower Fire Danger, These Are Problems That Must Be Considered.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF CHARGE on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Perhaps there is not enough attention paid to the arrangement of farm buildings with respect to one another. The subject of interior arrangement of barns has been given a great deal of consideration during recent years, and some very gratifying results have been obtained. The development of barn planning has gone hand in hand with the rapid development of farm building equipment. The aim of the entire movement has been to provide increased facilities for handling the work and at the same time improve the conditions under which live stock are housed. Of course, the result must in every case take into account the profit made by the farmer.

While developments are still to be expected in barn planning, there is also the urgent need of careful planning of the farm itself. Time saved in the buildings should not be wasted between buildings. The answer is not, however, to crowd the buildings as closely together as possible. There are tion which best meets the conditions mentioned, the next consideration is the arrangement of buildings within the group. As a general rule, the farmer likes to have his buildings so arranged that it is possible to see all of them from the house. This arrangement undoubtedly has its advantages, especially back and forth between the house and the stables, it is an advantage to locate these buildings as near the house as possible without setting up difficulties due to the transmission of disagreeable odors or difficulties in moving machines and vehicles through the farmyard. When the stables are fairly close to the house it is possible to quickly hear any disturbance among the stock.

Drainage affects the arrangement of buildings since in order to obtain satisfactory drainage each building must be placed where the soil conditions and lay of the land are best suited for the purpose. The passage of sunlight must not be obstructed. Sunlight is the best disease preventer the farmer can obtain and his buildings must be arranged and placed to take advantage of it. Another influence is the condition on which insurance rates are established. Of course, the same conditions which reduce insurance rates increase the safety of the farmer.

The buildings which are entered most frequently should be closer to the house than those which are not so frequently entered. For instance, the implement shed need not be as close to the house as the dairy, provided it is located in the direction which will be taken in drawing the implements to the field. The granary should be handy to the stables and provided with a paved driveway connected with the highway either directly or by way of the house. Perhaps the greatest amount of labor in the farm group centers around the general barn and, therefore, the smaller buildings should be placed after this more important structure has been given consideration.

Some farmers use a combination of barns to house their live stock. The object is probably to definitely separate the horses from the cows more than anything else. The illustrations show a perspective view and plan of a two-barn combination. The barns are intended to be built on the north and south line, with the open side of the

LET GARDEN MATCH HOUSE

Splendid Effects Can Be Secured If Flowers Are in Harmony With the Living and Bed Rooms.

If thought and care are given to it a small garden may be made as lovely in its way as a large one. To get the most enjoyment out of a small plot of ground try planting your garden to match your house.

Make a careful survey of each room and another of your vases, flower bowls, etc.; then with these in your mind sit down and go through the catalogue. If your guest room is pink and white any guest would feel herself welcome if she were greeted by that lovely pink bowl you got last Christmas set on the bureau and filled with long sprays of pink snapdragons.

Your own bedroom may be yellow, the living room may be old gold with touches of old blue and yellow and the dining room may be old blue and just need a touch of yellow to make it perfect. If so be sure and have a bed of cornflowers and calliopsis; the combination is wonderful. The squat brown Jug full of stiff, tawny marigolds will look well in the casement window sill and the same flowers in the low black bowl on the dining room table will be beautiful.

And you must surely have a patch of nasturtiums. They look so cool and crisp in a glass bowl on a hot day, especially if the bowl is filled with a carbonated water.

PLANS ARE MOST IMPORTANT

Home Builder Should Begin by Placing House to Leave as Much Space as Possible for Lawn and Gardens.

Begin your house with the plan! A good plan makes a good exterior. So place your house on your land that as much as possible is left for lawn and gardens, which are the out-of-doors rooms; do not put it in the middle of the lot. This is the advice of an experienced builder.

Make each of the rooms self-contained; don't throw them all together by cutting large openings in the partitions. Choose some good and simple exterior as a model for your house and follow it as closely as possible; do not choose a door from one place, a porch or a window from another, a dormer from a third and so on, and then expect to combine these into a unified whole. It can be done but only by an expert.

Wall space is very important in any room; do not cut this up too much with doors and windows.

Parts of any house should be proportioned to the whole; do not use large porches or observation windows in a little house.

Hammock Stand Worth While.

Instead of hanging the hammock from house to tree or clothes-line pole or pergola, buy a hammock stand and awning which can be moved about the yard to any location you may desire at any time; under this awning build a little platform, which will allow you to use the hammock when the ground is damp, without danger of catching cold by wetting your feet; and you may also inclose the whole affair in screening, thereby making a comfortable sleeping room for a hot night.

Around the yard plant as many shrubs and flowering plants as space will permit, and then see that the grass is kept as well watered and trimmed as is that on the front lawn. Do these things and you will not only enjoy them yourself, but some day when you want to rent or sell the house, you will find it a much easier task than would be the case if you had nothing back of the house to show except an unsightly back yard.

Harmony With Surroundings.

A house should harmonize with its surroundings in design, color and materials. A house standing out boldly on the top of a hill and visible for miles should differ essentially in appearance from one nestling in among the trees at the edge of the woods, from a house on the banks of a lake or from a villa set back from the village street. Every natural advantage from the standpoint of health, view, light and convenience should be utilized, every disadvantage neutralized. The amount of money to be expended is a factor determining the extent and manner in which the other two vital elements may be best met and mastered.

Importance of Clean Streets.

It seems to us that it is the duty of all civil engineers, and of city engineers in particular, to lose no opportunity to spread the gospel of clean streets, and therefore of better pavements. It is peculiarly their duty to lead in political movements that will result in changes of city ordinances respecting assessments for street improvements. The antiquated abutting property method of assessment is sufficient in itself to block progress, and there are many other legal obstacles of like nature. But the greatest obstacle of all is public ignorance of the cause and prevention of respiratory diseases.—Engineering and Contracting.

Twisted Sox.

"I suppose you have heard," said the fat plumber, "that stockings should be selected to match the eyes of the wearer?"

"No; I'm not up on styles," the thin carpenter confessed.

"Yep. That's the way it goes awright."

"Fashions do beat all."

"Yep."

"Imagine going into a store and asking for some blue stockings to match your wife's eyes."

"Yes, or trying to pick out a shade to match some guy with pink eyes."

"Or buying half a pair of stockings for a one-eyed man."

"Or watered silk for a man with a cataract."

"Or black and blue ones for a gink who has been in a fight."

"I can think of a situation that beats any we have suggested."

"What is it?"

"Think of going into a store and asking for a pair of twisted sox for a cross-eyed person."

"You win!"

Farmers Turn Miners.

With coal at a high price, many farmers in West Virginia with only a hole in the ground and a team of oxen have become real fuel kings. When the price of the black diamonds began to soar "wildcatter" operations were started by farmers in all parts of the state, and they have increased at an enormous rate.

In many cases where a farmer has a small surface vein of coal on his property he is able to operate his miniature mine by himself or with the aid of his sons.

In many instances, it is reported, they are digging the surface coal out with mattocks and hauling it to the railroads, where they are getting a good price for their product.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription ointment—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of ointment—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength ointment, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.

Ground Plan and Yard Layout.

several influences which effect the placing of the different buildings with respect to one another. These influences primarily determine the relative position of the buildings and secondarily determine the distance which they should be apart as well as their distance from the house.

In the first place, the position of the group of the buildings as a whole is dependent upon the location of highways, the topography of the land and method of farming the land. The buildings should be as handy to the highway as possible, since the entrance lane should be paved with some material which will prevent its becoming impassable in case of heavy rains. The longer this lane is, of course, the more it will cost to pave it.

The buildings should, however, be far enough from the highway so that dust will not be annoying. The topography of the land has its influence because of the fact that it will effect the ease with which buildings may be erected, especially as regards their foundations; it may cause a poor arrangement of buildings because of difficulties existing at positions where buildings really belong especially due to drainage and it may necessitate heavy hauls in getting the produce into the storage structure from the fields. The method of farming the land refers to the relation in position of the tilled part of the farm to the central group of buildings. The position of the group should be such that the haul from all of the producing field will sum up to a minimum, taking into account the difficulty of the haul as well as the distance. A further influence in this connection is the direction of prevailing winds. The house and its surrounding buildings should be so located that under ordinary conditions the wind will carry disagreeable odors, such as those given off by certain of the fertilizers, away from their position. Conditions effecting the position of the group will doubtless conflict in many cases, and the farmer must then determine which of the conflicting conditions should be given the preference.

Having located the group at a posishelter shed on the south. The shelter shed is inclosed on three sides and the two silos close up the front opening about 35 or 40 feet. Altogether, the two barns, sheds and inclosed barnyard occupy a space 50 by 136 feet.

One barn is arranged for horses and the other barn is for cows, the patio in the center being used as an exercising space for both. It is a fact that in use, the cows occupy this center space a good deal of the time. In fact, dairy men have discovered that cows may be cared for just as well in a shelter shed and that they are better off because of the freedom, exercise and fresh air.

When beef cattle are kept instead of dairy cows, the plan works out just as well. The cows are stood in the stable at night and left until after milking time in the morning, while beef cattle are stood in the stable just long enough to eat their silage and grain. All roughage would be fed from the racks in the shelter shed.

Both silos and all the feed alleys are connected by means of an overhead track, and a feed carrier runs everywhere, so that any kind of fodder or grain from the silos or feed rooms may be taken directly to any stall or any feed rack in the shelter shed.

One important feature is the water trough in the center of the open shelter shed, accessible to either horses or cattle. Because there is more or less dampness around the water trough, drainage must be provided to carry away the surplus.

The Usual Way.

A short time ago an eminent engineering firm in Philadelphia had occasion to send one of its promising young hopefuls to Washington. As he was sent hastily and was detained longer than he expected he found that he simply had to have a clean shirt. Buying a "classy" one, he charged it to the firm. On his return to town he said to one of his fellow workers: "See this shirt? I bought it on the firm." "You did?" said the other. "And did you put it down as 'shorts'?" "Ah, no, boy," said he, "I ate it."—Everybody's.

The Purchase of a Saxon Insures Riding Satisfaction

Saxon cars are today generally recognized as the best cars in their price classes.

Their greater value has been definitely and decisively established by their performance records in the hands of thousands of owners in all parts of the country.

The Saxon Motor Car Corporation has earned one of the biggest successes in the automobile industry. It owes its success to the policy of building good cars and building them in quantities. Its cars have won the respect of the motor buying public.

Such absolute satisfaction as is represented in the following testimonial is the big reason back of Saxon success:

"I want to say that Saxon 'Six' is an automobile that will do all the Saxon Motor Car Corporation claims it will do—and more. We have driven our car many thousand miles and can honestly say it is the easiest riding car we ever rode in."

There will be a special patriotic service at the Second Universalist church Sunday morning at 10.30. The pastor, Rev. Fred A. Line, will speak on the subject, "The Battle for Democracy." There will be special music by the vested choir under the direction of Miss Deane. A very cordial invitation is extended to every patriotic citizen in Weymouth who does not attend church elsewhere to attend this service.

At the conclusion of the morning service, at 12 o'clock, a new flag purchased with voluntary contributions by the church people, will be raised in front of the church. Bradford Hawes, a member of the Board of Selectmen, will represent the Grand Army of the Republic in unfurling the flag, and James Whitcomb Riley's poems will be given by Mr. Joy. The bugle call will be sounded by Miss Marion Howe, and after the salute to the flag by the Sunday School children, the Star Spangled Banner will be sung. Y. P. C. U. meeting at 5.30; subject, "The Higher Education—Why go to High School and College?" Leader Miss Doris Churchill.

You will be welcome at this church.

All men of the parish are invited to attend a men's rally at the church Monday evening at 7.45. Our work for men at this time will be organized. A spicy program has been outlined. Light refreshments will be served. The principal address of the evening will be delivered by J. R. D. Oldham, superintendent of public schools in East Providence, R. I., who will take for his subject, "In Trench and On Firing Line." Mr. Oldham has been for a number of years in men's work, being teacher now of a live adult class, and he will deliver an address which no man can afford to miss.

Prayer service Tuesday night at 7.30. At 8.30 the minister desires to meet all members of the board of trustees for a short but important session.

UNION CHURCH

Rev. Edward Evans, pastor of Winthrop Congregational church of Holbrook, will exchange with the pastor of Union church Sunday, May 20. Everyone is cordially invited to hear Mr. Evans. There will be good chorus singing assisted by Miss Litchfield, soloist.

The newly appointed music committee, of which Mrs. Freeman Putney, Sr., is chairman, is at work on plans to improve and enrich the musical service of worship. Much favorable comment has been made on the musical service rendered Easter and Mothers' day.

The members of the chorus are asked to meet in the vestry of the church Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The Church School meets at 12 o'clock. The Men's Class meets in the gym. All men are urged to attend Sunday as this will be the last meeting of the class until September. The class will be disbanded for the summer months.

Much interest is being manifested in the coming men's supper and social event to be given by the men next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, to their lady friends, wives and sweethearts. This will be the last men's supper for the season. It will be a May festival and ladies' night.

The Christian Endeavor will meet for their service of worship and study at 6 o'clock. Young people, come out.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

In "The Crisis" now playing at the Majestic Theatre, for a limited engagement, matinee daily at 2.15, evening at 8.15, veterans who fought on either side during the Civil War that rent this nation asunder for four tragic years, can sit together and see each cause fairly, impartially and sympathetically presented, each in all its strength and weakness.

Hitherto in plays dealing with the strife of the North and the South, there has been a prejudice more or less violent in one direction or the other. "Uncle Tom's Cabin," at the one extreme was of the North, reeking with Puritan intolerance of the plantation owner's view. "The Birth of a Nation" was of the South, though conceived and executed with a broader and more liberal spirit.

Winston Churchill, in writing "The Crisis," took a large-minded view of the events leading up to and culminating in the bloody struggle of '61-'65, and wove his observation into a story of broad sympathies and tremendous dramatic power.

The Whist and Means Committee held a whist party in Engine hall at North Weymouth Wednesday evening. First prizes were won by Miss Helen Curtis and Mrs. Fred Hilton, and consolation by Mrs. John Taylor and Miss Eleanor Gould.

A Beauty Spot.

Yesterday afternoon the editor was attracted to the greenhouses of A. A. Spear & Son at East Weymouth by the beauty of their pansy beds. In the greenhouses were thousands of geraniums, some in blossom; also calla lilies, heliotrope, and many other plants in bloom. This year the firm is also making a speciality of tomato plants, and certainly they are vigorous and hardy. But their pansies are the most beautiful ever, in great variety of colors and shadings. When told to help ourselves we hardly knew when to stop, each one seemingly more beautiful than the one just plucked. They are already rushed with Memorial Day orders.

RELOCATION OF TRACKS WANTED

Selectmen Receive Petition from Columbian Square

The Selectmen at their meeting this week received a petition from John L. Bean and twelve others for a relocation of the street railway tracks in Columbian square, and a hearing will be given to all parties interested. It is proposed to change the tracks on Columbian street to the other side of the green, that is between the green and the Fogg Opera House. They will be continued across Pleasant street into the tracks on Union street back of the trees which now connect with the Pleasant street line to the South Weymouth depot. Both from Columbian street and Union street there will be connecting lines with the Pleasant street route to East Weymouth. Possibly, if the relocation is granted, the Selectmen will decree that Columbian street between the green and the Opera House shall be a one-way street toward Pleasant street.

W. J. Bess and L. F. Bates petitioned for license to keep, store and sell gasoline at their new garage off Commercial street in Washington square, and will be given a hearing.

George E. Perry will be given a hearing on a similar petition from George E. Perry of 497 Pond street, South Weymouth.

Upon a request from Braintree, the Selectmen appointed as special police, Jeremiah T. Gallivan, John P. Shay, August Johnson and Augustus Wentworth.

Four licenses were granted as common victuallers, one to dig clams and one pool license.

The Weymouth band was granted a permit to give a concert in Jackson square on Thursday, June 14.

The license of H. Perman to collect junk having been surrendered, the Selectmen granted a license to Abraham Tolpin.

Arthur L. Blanchard volunteered to serve in connection with the enrollment for military service.

The Selectmen appointed as lock-up keepers in their respective wards: George W. Nash, Lawrence E. Schofield, Charles W. Baker and Elbert Ford.

Real Estate Sales.

The following Weymouth transfers of real estate have been recorded this week at the Norfolk registry at Dedham:

Mary D. Burns to Charlena H. Martin, Essex st.

Frank A. Kelcourse to William J. McCarthy, North street.

Elbridge B. Nash to Emma F. Sprague, Main street, Front street, Liberty square.

Edwin Phillips to Walter S. Clough, Bridge street.

Davis D. Randall et ux to Lottie A. Raymond, Randall avenue.

Frank L. Robbins to Louis A. Cook, Jr., School street.

Blanche Whiffen to Luella B. Wilson, West street.

BRAINTREE SALES.

Millard F. Dyer to Ernesto Migliorini, Pond street.

Henry S. Moody, trustee, to Matthew J. Finnerty.

—Nathaniel Blanchard, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Blanchard, has enlisted, and is now at the Officers' Training Camp at Ft. Sheridan, Ill., for the three months' preparatory drill. "Nat" was born in Weymouth.

—The annual athletic meet of the girls of Thayer Academy at Braintree will be held Saturday evening.

New Treasurer of Saving Bank

The committee of the East Weymouth Savings Bank appointed to select a new treasurer in place of John A. Raymond resigned, announce the election of Charles C. Handy of Salem, who will assume his duties on Monday next.

For seven years Mr. Handy has been one of the State bank examiners, and previous to that he had a wide experience in different banks of Salem and Boston. He is about 40 years of age, with wife and three children. They have already rented the house owned by M. P. Garey on Randall avenue directly opposite the bank. The bank and the town are to be congratulated upon the selection of Mr. Handy.

This week seven men from the office of the State bank examiners have been busy making an audit of the books, funds and other property of the East Weymouth Savings Bank, preparatory to the transfer to the new treasurer.

It was in March that Mr. Raymond resigned after faithful service of 29 years, his resignation to take effect upon the selection of his successor. The committee have had from 10 to 15 candidates for the position.

Mr. Raymond will continue as Town Clerk, a position that he has held for 37 years, but his office will be on the second floor of the Savings Bank building in the same room as the Selectmen, maintaining the same office hours as at present. For some time he will have added duties in connection with the registration of all men in Weymouth liable to military service.

Piggy More Popular Than Ever

The school children of Weymouth have adopted a new pet. At least they are going to attempt to reduce the high cost of living. Nearly 100 have joined the Pig Club financed by the Weymouth Trust Company and will care for nearly 100 pigs during the next six to nine months.

Supt. of Schools Pearson has actively encouraged the new enterprise. He contracted with a man in Randolph for 50 pigs, but the man found he could get a $1 a piece more for his pigs and sold them to somebody else.

On Monday, however, Supt. Pearson and Mr. Kemp went to Wilmington where one man has 5000 pigs and was able to secure a larger and better bred pig for $7 each, delivered in Weymouth by auto truck. They will weigh from 22 to 25 pounds each.

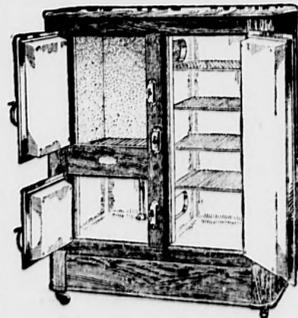

The pupils of the James Humphrey school alone will take 45 pigs, and children from other buildings will take on an average of ten. Success to the business enterprise of the school children, and thanks to Supt. Pearson.

$100 Raised By The Children

The school children of Weymouth responded enthusiastically to the fund for the French orphans, $100 being raised toward the fund that was presented to General Joffie in Boston last Saturday. The East Weymouth pupils contributed $40 to $50 and the Ward Three pupils $17.70. An average of four cents for each pupil of Weymouth. The collection reflected much credit upon the children. Miss Alice Blanchard of Tufts Public Library started the ball rolling in Weymouth on Thursday morning.

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

Glorious Ribbons in New Bags

These new shopping bags are part of the glory of the ribbon counter and not to be found among the assortments of manufactured bags which anyone may have. They are made of brocaded ribbon and brocaded chiffon, two of them in black and silver and the other in rich colors. One cannot help stopping to look at them, they are so beautiful and so full of distinction. That is just what accessories of dress should be.

It is poor economy to buy the commonplace in the small extra belongings which place the final touches upon the toilette. They lend their own character to the costume. Neckwear, girdles, bags and hats, are called for a price that will insure quality or for fine work on fine material that insures elegance.

The bag at the right of the group is made of black crepe-chiffon, embroidered in silver, over a bag of soft black satin ribbon. It is finished at the bottom with a handsome silver tassel hanging from a silver ornament. It is beautifully mounted in a silver mounting with chain handle. The bag at the center is made of a splendid brocade in silver on a heavy black satin ribbon and is finished with silver tassel and ornament. The mounting is beautifully closed and suspended by a silver chain.

The bag at the right of the picture has a hinged mounting that flattens when it is closed. It is of gilt and silver with silver chain. The heavy brocaded ribbon that forms the bag is in rich colors, in which gold threads are woven, and has a black border. The brocaded flowers are in Chinese design and a splendid silk tassel is of the same Oriental origin.

There are other bags among new things at the ribbon counter that are made without metal mountings, and they are all displayed to demonstrate how ribbons may be used for dress accessories of the richest sort.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

The little word, the little smile,
The little song you know—
These make the candle all the while
That we must keep aglow.
And we may think its trembling light
Unnoticed by all eyes—
But there is greater dark of night
When that lone candle dies.

A GROUP OF SIMPLE SALADS.

Place boards over places where the dandelions are thick and as soon as it is warm in the spring they will grow and be perfectly white, as they are growing in the dark. Such dandelions are especially tender and may be served uncooked with a little shredded onion and French dressing.

Egg Pickle and Rice Salad.—Arrange cold-boiled rice in nests of lettuce leaves and fill with the following mixture. Put hard-cooked eggs and sour pickles through a meat grinder and mix with stiff mayonnaise until it forms a thick paste. Shape and place in the nest. Any boiled dressing may be used in place of the mayonnaise if preferred. Little green onions sliced, radishes, sliced unpeeled, and a few fringes of celery, served with French dressing on hearts of lettuce makes a very good salad.

Celery Salad.—Thicken a cupful of scalding milk with a tablespoonful of cornstarch, mixed with a little cold milk. Mix together one beaten egg, one teaspoonful of salt, and two of sugar, one-half a teaspoonful of dry mustard and a dash of cayenne pepper; pour slowly into the hot milk, stirring constantly. When smooth, remove from the fire and add two tablespoonfuls each of vinegar and salad oil. Mix well, and when cold pour over celery cut in small pieces.

Surprise Salad.—Arrange sliced pineapple on lettuce leaves and in the center put a few shredded shrimps. Around this put a mixture of chopped apple and celery mixed with mayonnaise thinned with pineapple juice. Garnish with maraschino cherries and top with mayonnaise.

Wilted Lettuce.—Wash and drain two heads of lettuce. In a saucepan put one cupful of vinegar, one cupful of sweet milk and one egg well beaten. When it begins to boil pour it over the lettuce, cover and set back on the stove until the lettuce is wilted. Season with salt and pepper and butter or ham or bacon fat.

The happy state of mind so rarely possessed in which we can say, "I have enough" is the highest attainment of philosophy. Happiness consists not in possessing much, but in being content with what we possess. He who wants little always has enough.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

Hamburger steak is so much more palatable when prepared at home, using the tough portions of round steak with a little fat either of suet or fresh pork; add a third of the amount of meat of cooked oatmeal or farina or rice, mix and season well and make into small cakes. A pinch of cloves and nutmeg with a little scraped onion or onion juice improves the flavor. With a meat grinder many nice and palatable dishes may be prepared from the tougher portions of meat.

Asparagus Canapes.—Prepare strips of stale bread an inch and a half wide and four inches long; spread with butter on both sides and set into the oven until delicately browned on both sides. When cold and ready to use, spread with salad dressing and place a border of yolk of egg put through a ricer around the toast, and a row of chopped white on the outside of that. In the center lay an asparagus tip cooked, cooled and dried on a cloth. Sprinkle with finely chopped parsley.

Fresh Fish Chowder.—Cut cod, haddock, lake fish, pickerel or bass into fillets two inches long, removing the bones, and set aside in a cool place. Cover the head bones and trimmings with cold water and simmer slowly for half an hour. For three pounds of fish, try out two or three ounces of salt pork cut in cubes; in this saute an onion cut in slices, add the liquid in which the bones were cooked, boil up five minutes and strain over the fish. Have ready three cupfuls of potato cubes, parboiled in water and drained. Add these to the fish with one tablespoonful of salt and a generous dash of paprika, and let simmer until the potatoes are tender. Add three cupfuls of hot milk, a fourth of a cupful of bacon fat or salt pork fryings and serve with crackers and olives.

Crackers to Serve With Tea.—Spread small, round crackers with orange marmalade and cover with boiled frosting. Brown quickly in the oven. Jelly or other preserves may be used instead of orange marmalade.

Baked Liver.—Cut one pound of calf's liver into slices one-third of an inch thick, wash and dry thoroughly, lay it in a well buttered pan; make a forcemeat of six tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a pinch of herbs, one small onion finely chopped, salt and pepper to taste. Cover each strip of liver with this and on top place a strip of bacon. Pour round this a pint of water and bake slowly three-quarters of an hour. Dish in a ring and strain the gravy round the base.

We're weary a-walking the Highway of Life,
We're fretted and flustered with worry and strife.
Let us drop by the wayside the heavy old load,
And rest at the inn at the turn of the road—
Let us tarry a while
At the "Sign of the Smile."

SEASONABLE DISHES.

This is the season when eggs are as cheap as they will be and if we ever enjoy an omelet with a clear conscience it is now.

Savory Omelet.—Separate the yolks and white of three eggs, put the yolks in a saucepan, beat well, add a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, half a teaspoonful of chopped onion and add a pinch of powdered herbs. Whisk the whites of egg to a stiff froth, mix with the yolks, season with salt and cayenne and pour into a buttered pudding dish, sprinkle with grated cheese, and bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. Set the pan in hot water while cooking. Serve immediately.

Salmon and Cucumber Sandwiches.—Cut rounds of bread slightly larger than the slices of cucumber, spread these with butter or thick sour cream. Sprinkle each slice with a few grains of celery salt, then spread with a layer of chopped salmon, add a few drops of vinegar and a slice of cucumber, then another round of buttered bread. Garnish with crisp lettuce hearts.

Pineapple Bavarian Cream.—Take two cupfuls of pineapple juice, one cupful of sugar, half a cupful of boiling water and one and a half tablespoonfuls of powdered gelatin and two cupfuls of whipped cream. Dissolve the gelatin in boiling water, then add the sugar and pineapple juice. When cool, mix in the whipped cream. Pour into a wet mold and when turned out decorate with candied pineapple.

Dropped Scones.—Take a cupful of flour and a cupful of buttermilk, three teaspoonfuls of sugar, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of baking soda, and a quarter of a teaspoonful of tartaric acid. Mix the dry ingredients and then add the buttermilk, beating well with a spoon. Cook on a hot griddle until light brown on both sides.

What's the use of being mean,
What's the good of growling?
What's the use of being seen
All the time a-scowling?
Meanness is the sorest trait
Any man can cherish,
In its blasting air of hate
Blooms of friendship perish.

A FEW LENTIL DISHES.

Lentils are near relatives to peas and beans, belonging to the same plant family. As everybody knows the value of peas and beans as food, they will find the lentil equally satisfying. Lentils are small flat green disks about the size of a split pea. To prepare them they should be carefully looked over, washed, then soaked overnight and cooked in the same water in which they are soaked. An onion may be added for flavor or a few allspice, some dried herbs and celery seed tied in a muslin. Care should be used in cooking vegetable protein foods as in cooking animal foods, both need low temperature to keep them from becoming hardened. Use only the water needed to cook the vegetables, allowing none to waste. One cupful of dried peas, lentils or beans will usually make three cupfuls when cooked.

Vegetarian Hamburger Steak.—Mash two cupfuls of well cooked lentils with a fork, bind with two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour cooked together, one potato mashed and a tablespoonful of cooked cereal. Add salt and pepper, shape in the form of a steak and heat quickly in the oven or under gas. Serve with a buttery gravy poured around the steak. The above steak may be made into thin cakes and after broiling place on buttered rounds of toast which have been sprinkled with lemon juice. Serve with the following sauce: mash two bananas smooth, add two tablespoonfuls of milk, salt and pepper to taste, heat and pour over each steak.

Lentil Nut Balls.—Cook together a teaspoonful of minced onion, three tablespoonfuls of flour and one of fat. When brown, stir in a quarter of a cupful of stock, add to this one and a half cupfuls of broken lentils and season with herbs and a touch of mushroom catchup and tabasco. Form this paste into balls, roll in chopped nut meats and bake ten or fifteen minutes. Serve the sauce in which they were cooked.

Crackers to Serve With Tea.—Spread small, round crackers with orange marmalade and cover with boiled frosting. Brown quickly in the oven. Jelly or other preserves may be used instead of orange marmalade.

Baked Liver.—Cut one pound of calf's liver into slices one-third of an inch thick, wash and dry thoroughly, lay it in a well buttered pan; make a forcemeat of six tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a pinch of herbs, one

For Country Club and Sports Wear

The "Country Club" hat has arrived in the ranks of the sports hat with a title that impels respect and merits that deserve it. All quarters of the globe have been ransacked to provide this aristocrat in millinery for women who are devoted to outdoor life and there are wonderful weaves in straw hats from China, Japan, India, the Hawaiian islands, South America, and our own land. The shapes are much like those of sports hats which were launched for spring of which three are pictured in the group above.

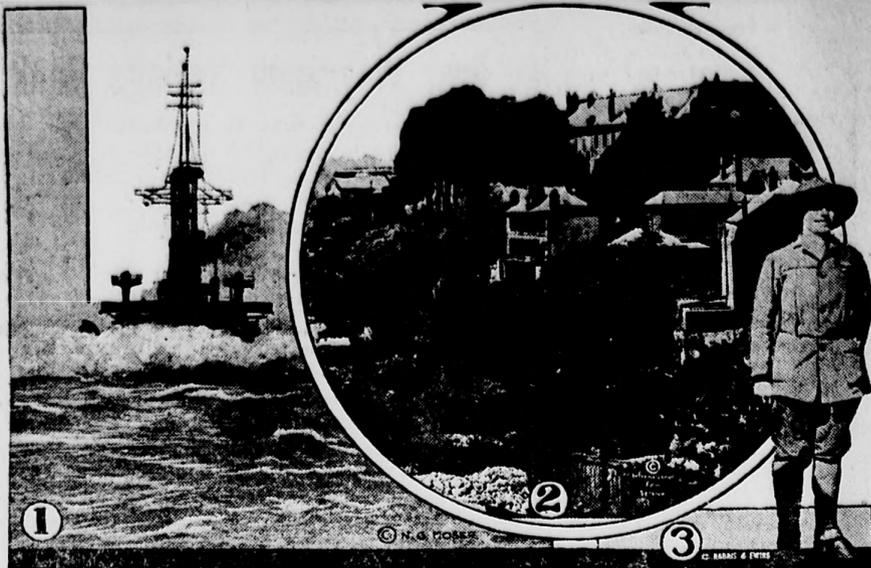

The "Country Club" hat is most simply trimmed with a band and bow of narrow ribbon, often like it in color. There is nothing tame about it in spite of this simplicity, for it has the courage of color and comes in all the more or less vivid shades which hats for sports wear have made the vogue. Besides white, there are emerald, gold, purple, rose, turquoise, apple green, chartreuse and navy in the gay procession, and two-toned hats—in certain weaves with underbrims in contrasting colors.

These last shapes for country and sports wear represent the utmost in effort of expert block makers. They are intended to meet the demands of women of critical and educated taste and must fit comfortably to begin with. Without being unusual in shape they must embody beautiful lines and so much style that they place themselves at a glance just where they belong—in the front rank of millinery excellence. Along with their severely simple hats, others, like those pictured, with a little trimming, and themselves just as presentable and welcomed for the sake of variety.

Breakfast Wear.
Following the lead in coats, and dresses the new breakfast negligees are made on the lines of a wrap fastened at the throat and the waist, flying loose thence to the skirt hem. These breakfast coats, as they are known, may be made of silk, of satin, crepe de chine or crepe georgette. They are voluminous in their lines and are to be held in charming pastel tones as well as in the vivid colors which have become associated with the art of Bakst. Generally speaking the breakfast coats have wide collars that are not unlike capes, and these are edged with lace or with self ruches. The sleeves are short and very wide at their terminals. Pockets are considered an essential feature, and as there can be no real negligees without ribbons there is either a girdle of the latter or great bows placed front and back of the waist and on the sleeves and neck.

Rumor Has It

That there are several R. E. Porters in town. Yes we noticed he got the "kick" in his letter which appeared recently in another paper, covered our town from A to Z, told some truths, hit below the belt once or twice and got the editor all work-up. Shake, brother, shake.

That the Home Guard is coming fast and will soon be ready for duty. Good for you!

That Weymouth is fast waking up to the fact that the U. S. is at war and we must prepare for what may come. Preparedness will no doubt prevent what might come if we are not alert. Being ready may be a good shock absorber.

That the Liberty Loan will find many ready subscribers in Weymouth. Government bonds are safety first. Everybody help.

That "Registration Day" should be "Patriotic Demonstration Day" in our town. Who will start the ball a rolling?

That nearly a hundred dollars was contributed by the pupils in the Weymouth schools towards the $175,000 given Marshal Joffre to be used in the caring for the fatherless children of France. A beautiful deed.

That a young man breaking in as a conductor on our street cars, on a recent busy Sunday, got his cash and transfer ropes mixed, waited at a signal box for a car that "was not", and carried a passenger to Lincoln Square on the last trip from Braintree who was told she could get a car for South Weymouth which "was not", causing her to hire an auto to get her to her destination. Had she not been told she could get a car at Lincoln Square she could have taken a train at Braintree. The poor fellow was surely "up against it" until a brother railroad man came to his rescue and helped him study up his timetable and rule book; told him how to "fix up" his mistakes; why there was no car to wait for at the signal; why there was no car so late at night to South Weymouth; and probably he told the new conductor that it looked like rather poor policy to send out a "green man" before he knew what to do and how to do it.

The "stop" signs for? The bumpy bump trip is bad enough without being obliged to flirt with death through inefficiency. Six cents a trip should bring six cents worth of service and safety. The "safety first" notices on the cars may read pretty but why not practice what is preached?

That the dealer of weights and measures, R. B. Worster, received a well earned endorsement at the hands of the Selectmen by a reappointment. He deserved a well earned endorsement once or twice before if we remember correctly.

That figures talk, especially some Gazette figures on page sixteen last week. Did you notice it?

That about everybody had a good "clean up" as the drivers of the "gather up" teams report a "good harvest."

That we would like the names of those in our town who are going with T. R. to France. There must be some for we know he has many admirers in Weymouth, or else we would not have gone Progressive two years.

That flour dropped Tuesday $1.25 a barrel. Come again.

That we did not see you in your new straw hat Tuesday the 15th.

That the "block" on Prospect street is fast being wrecked. It would be better in the scrap heap than in its unsightly condition and surely the value of surrounding property is depreciating. If it is allowed to remain in its unsightly condition see that you are assessed accordingly or demand some action.

That it is about time for woods fires. A little care by all will save the town and individuals much expense and worry.

That in many towns the boys are learning to drill. We have lots of boys who are willing and ready. Who will volunteer to drill our boys? A chance for some man to "get in" with the boys. R. E. PORTER.

Notice of Gasolene Hearing

George E. Perry having petitioned for a license to keep, store and sell gasolene on his premises at 497 Pond street, public notice is hereby given that in accordance with the requirements of chapter 162 of the General Acts of 1916, a public hearing will be held at said petition at the office of the Selectmen of Weymouth, Monday, the fourth day of June, 1917, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

Pte. Fred Wells Polley.

The Daily Times of Moncton, N. B., under date of May 7, prints the following letter, sent by the major of the company in which Frederick Wells Polley, a former resident of Weymouth, was serving at the time he was killed, showing marked courage for which his friends should be proud. He was graduated at the Weymouth High school, and at one time a member of the Norfolk club at South Weymouth:

Headquarters 50th Canadians, France, 3-14-17 To Mr. C. J. Polley, Point de Bute, N. B.

Dear Sir: Long before the receipt of this letter you will of course, have been officially notified of the death of your son, Private F. W. Polley, who was killed in action on the night of March 31st. Will you permit me to express very deep sympathy with you and your loss, and to pay tribute to the late Private Polley, whose courage and soldierly conduct at all times won for him the respect of his officers and the affectionate esteem of his comrades in the ranks.

Although holding a non-commissioned rank in England, Private Polley reverted in order to get across to France more quickly. The spirit made manifest by such conduct needs no eulogy from me.

It only remains for me to say that he lost his life in the carrying out of a minor operation against the enemy trenches on the night mentioned, being struck by the fragment of a shell and instantly killed.

During the raid and prior to his death Private Polley displayed marked courage and initiative, and had he lived he would have been one of those recommended for special recognition.

I assure you, sir, that you have every reason to be proud of your son.

A cousin of Private Polley's in the 10th Canadians, called to see me last night, and to him also I gave what particulars I had concerning your son's death.

I remain, Sir, Your obedient servant, F. Costigan, Major O. C. "A" Co.

Frederick Wells Polley, late Sergeant-Major in the Westmorland and Kent, was born on the 9th of June, 1892, at Newton Centre Mass., a son of Mr. C. J. Polley, formerly of Point de Bute, Westmorland County, N. B. His boyhood days were spent in Weymouth Mass., where he graduated from the local High School. A member of the Norfolk Club, South Weymouth. At the age of 17 he enlisted in "D" troop, Cavalry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, and after serving three years, received an honorable discharge in 1912. He came to Point de Bute, slightly over two years ago, and enlisted with the Westmorland and Kent Battalion's Sackville Company, under Major C. M. Rideout. On account of his previous military experience and outstanding ability he was selected for promotion, and was sent for further instruction to Wellington Barracks, Halifax. Upon his return to Sackville from the Royal School of Infantry, he was posted in orders as Sergeant, he accompanied his company to Valcartier where he was advanced to Company Sergeant-Major, highest N.C.O. rank, but one, in the whole regiment. He was still acting Sergt.-Major when he reached England on October 10th, 1916. Being among those desirous of doing his bit without delay, he reverted to the rank of private and was drafted into a noted Manitoba unit with which he was serving when killed in action as noted above.

Before returning to Point de Bute, Private Polley was employed with the R. J. Todd Hardware Company, of Boston, as a travelling salesman, in which capacity he had a wide circle of business acquaintances throughout New England. He was a noted athlete.

As a proof of the old saying that blood will tell, it is interesting to note that his mother, who was formerly Miss Annie M. Bond, of Jersey (Channel Islands), was a daughter of an English officer who served through the Crimean War.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.
Adele Rowland, the popular musical comedy star, last seen in Boston in "Nobody Home," and fresh from her triumphant tour in "Her Soldier Boy" during its long New York run, will share the headline honors at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of May 21, with Paul Dickey, the actor-playwright, in his latest high-speed automobile comedy, "The Lincoln Highwayman."

Theda Bara, the incomparable vampire of the screen, in her latest and greatest six-part William Fox super de luxe production, "Heart and Soul," will be shown exclusively for the first time in Boston at the Boston Theatre the week of May 21.

Manager Thomas D. Soriero is keeping up his high calibre of productions the biggest that are made for next. He has arranged to put on a thoroughly enjoyable startling production "Maternity."

Another production is the 5 act Metro wonder play "The Soul of a Magdalen" featuring Mme. Petrova and playing opposite is Mahlon Hamilton who has appeared with her in practically all of her productions.

This advertisement is one of a series designed to effect closer co-operation between the company and its subscribers. There are three parties to a telephone call—the person calling, the person called, and the operator who connects them.

Party-Line Consideration

A party line is a single circuit, shared in common by two or more subscribers. It is not reserved for a single user and should be used on the share-and-share-alike basis.

On a 4-party line, it is possible for all four stations to try to talk out on the same circuit at the same time. There is also the liability of all four stations being wanted at the same time to receive incoming calls.

Therefore, there are special considerations which the Public Service Commission and Telephone company both urge a party line user to keep in mind:

- 1. Long conversations prevent the use of the line by other subscribers; therefore party line talks should be as brief as possible.
2. Whenever another party line subscriber requests the use of the line for an emergency, courtesy should prompt the first user temporarily to give up the use of the line.
3. Whenever a party line subscriber takes the receiver from the hook and finds the line in use, the receiver should be replaced at once in a careful manner.
4. At the end of a conversation the receiver should be replaced upon the hook immediately, otherwise the other subscriber cannot signal the central office.

PRUDENCE OF THE PARSONAGE

—16—
"Will we!" And Carol added, "Will you kiss Prudence good night for us, and tell her we kept praying all the time? Prudence is such a great hand for praying, you know."

Fairy promised, and the twins crept upstairs. It was dark in their room. "Well, undress in the dark so as not to awake poor little Connie," whispered Lark. "It's nice she can sleep like that, isn't it?"

And the twins went to bed, and fell asleep after a while, never doubting that Connie, in her corner of the room, was already safe and happy in the oblivion of slumber.

But poor Connie! She had not wakened when Fairy closed the dungeon door. It was long afterward when she sat up and began rubbing her eyes. She did not know where she was. Then she remembered! She wondered if Prudence—She scrambled to her feet, and trotted over to the dungeon door. It was locked; she could not turn the knob. At first she thought of screaming and pounding on the door.

"But that will arouse Prudence, and frighten her, and maybe kill her," she thought wretchedly. "I'll just keep still until someone passes."
But no one passed for a long time, and Connie stretched her aching body and sobbed, worrying about Prudence, fearful on her own account. She had no idea of the time. She supposed it was still early. And the parsonage was deathly quiet. Maybe Prudence had died! Connie writhed in agony on the hard floor, and sobbed bitterly. Still she would not risk pounding on the dungeon door.

Upstairs, in the front room, Prudence was wrestling with fever. Higher and higher it rose, until the doctors looked very anxious. They held a brief consultation in the corner of the room. Then they beckoned to Mr. Starr.
"Has Prudence been worrying about something this winter?"
"Yes, she has."
"It is that young man, isn't it?" inquired the family doctor—a Methodist member.
"Yes."
"Can you bring him here?"
"Yes—as soon as he can get here from Des Moines."

"You'd better do it. She has worn herself down nearly to the point of prostration. We think we can break this fever without serious consequences, but get the young man as soon as possible. She cannot relax and rest until she gets relief."

So he went downstairs and over the telephone dictated a short message to Jerry: "Please come—Prudence."
When he entered the front bedroom again, Prudence was muttering unintelligible words under her breath. He kneeled down beside the bed and put his arms around her. She clung to him with sudden passion.
"Jerry! Jerry!" she cried. Her father caressed and petted her, but did not speak.
"Oh, I can't," she cried again. "I can't, Jerry, I can't!" Again her voice fell to low mumbling. "Yes, go. Go at once. I promised, you know. They haven't any mother—I promised, Jerry! Jerry!" Then, panting, she fell back on the pillows.

But Mr. Starr smiled gently to himself. So that was the answer! Oh, foolish little Prudence! Oh, sweet-hearted little martyr girl!
Hours later the fever broke and Prudence drifted into a deep sleep. Then the doctors went downstairs with Mr. Starr, talking in quiet, ordinary tones.
"Oh, she is all right now, no danger at all. She'll do fine. Let her sleep. Send Fairy to bed, too. Keep Prudence quiet a few days—that's all. She's all right."

They did not hear the timid knock at the dungeon door. But after they had gone out, Mr. Starr locked the door behind them, and started back through the hall to see if the kitchen doors were locked. He distinctly heard a soft tapping, and he smiled. "Mice!" he thought. Then he heard something else—a faintly whispered, "Father!"
With a sharp exclamation he unlocked and opened the dungeon door, and Connie fell into his arms, sobbing piteously. And he did the only wise thing to do under the circumstances. He sat down on the hall floor and cuddled the child against his breast. He talked to her soothingly until the sobs quieted, and her voice was under control.
"Now, tell father," he urged, "how did you get in the dungeon? The twins—"
"Oh, no, father, of course not; the twins wouldn't do such a thing as that. I went into the dungeon to pray that Prudence would get well. And I prayed myself to sleep. When I woke up the door was locked."
"But you precious child," he whispered, "why didn't you call out, or pound on the door?"
"I was afraid it would excite Prudence and make her worse," she answered simply. And her father's kiss was un-wontedly tender as he carried her upstairs to bed.

Prudence slept late the next morning, and when she opened her eyes her father was sitting beside her.
"All right this morning, father," she said, smiling. "Are the girls at school?"
"No, this is Saturday."
"Oh, of course. Well, bring them up, I want to see them."
Just then the distant whistle of a locomotive sounded through the open window, but she did not notice her father's sudden start. She nodded up at him again and repeated, "I want to see my girls."
Her father sent them up to her at once, and they stood at the foot of the bed with sorry faces, and smiled at her.
"Say something," whispered Carol, kicking Lark suggestively on the foot. But Lark was dumb. It was Carol who broke the silence.
"Oh, Prudence, do you suppose the doctors will let me come in and watch them bandage your head? I want to begin practicing up, so as to be ready for the next war."
Then they laughed, and the girls realized that Prudence was really alive and quite as always. They told her of Connie's sad experience, and Prudence comforted her sweetly.
"It just proves all over again," she declared, smiling, but with a sigh close following, "that you can't get along without me to look after you. Would I ever go to bed without making sure that Connie was safe and sound?"
Downstairs, meanwhile, Mr. Starr was plotting with Fairy, a willing assistant.
"He'll surely be in on this train, and you must keep him down here until I get through with Prudence. I want to tell her a few things before she sees him. Bring him in quietly, and don't let him speak loudly. I do not want her to know he is on hand for a few minutes. Explain it to the girls, will you?"

But Mr. Starr Smiled Gently to Himself.

After sending the younger girls downstairs again, he closed the door of Prudence's room, and sat down beside her.
"Prudence, I can't tell you how bitterly disappointed I am in you."
"Father!"
"Yes, I thought you loved us—the girls and me. It never occurred to me that you considered us a bunch of selfish, heartless, ungrateful animals!"
"Father!"
"Is that your idea of love? Is that—"
"Oh, father!"
"It really did hurt me, Prudence. My dear little girl, how could you send Jerry away, breaking your heart and his, and ours, too—just because you thought us such a selfish lot that we would begrudge you any happiness of your own? Don't you think our love for you is big enough to make us happy in seeing you happy? You used to say you would never marry. We did not expect you to marry, then. But we knew the time would come when marriage would seem beautiful and desirable to you. We were waiting for that time. We were hoping for that time. We were happy when you loved Jerry, because we knew he was good and kind and loving, and that he could give you all the beautiful things of life—that I can never give my children. But you thought we were too selfish to let you go, and you sent him away."
"But father! Who would raise the girls? Who would keep the parsonage? Who would look after you?"
"Aunt Grace, to be sure. We talked it over two years ago, when her husband died. Before that, she was not free to come to us. But she said then that whenever we were ready for her she would come. We both felt that since you were getting along so magnificently with the girls, it was better that way for a while. But she said that when your fitting time came, she would come to us gladly. We had it all arranged. You won't want to marry for a year or so, yet. You'll want to have some happy sweetheart days first. And you'll want to make a lot of those pretty, useless, nonsensical things other girls make when they marry. That's why I advised you to save your burglar money, so you would have it for this. We'll have Aunt Grace come right away, so you can take a little freedom to be happy, and to make your plans. And you can initiate Aunt Grace into the mysteries of parsonage housekeeping."

A bright, strange light had flashed over Prudence's face. But her eyes clouded a little as she asked, "Do you think they would rather have Aunt Grace than me?"
"Of course not. But what has that to do with it? We love you so dearly that we can only be happy when you are happy. We love you so dearly that we can be happy with you away from us, just knowing that you are happy. But you—you thought our love was such a hideous, selfish, little make-believe thing—"
"Oh, father, I didn't! You know I didn't!—But—maybe Jerry won't forgive me now?"
"Why didn't you talk it over with me, Prudence?"
"I knew you too well, father. I knew it would be useless. But—doesn't it seem wrong, father, that—a girl—that I—should love Jerry more than—you and the girls? That he should come first? Doesn't it seem—wicked?"
"No, Prudence, it is not wicked. After all, perhaps it is not a stronger and deeper love. You were willing to sacrifice him and yourself, for our sakes! But it is a different love. It is the love of woman for man, that is very different from sister love and father love. And it is right. And it is beautiful."
"I am sure Jerry will forgive me. Maybe if you will send me a paper and pencil, I can write him a note now? There's no use waiting, is there? Fairy will bring it, I am sure."
But when a few minutes later, she heard a step in the hall outside, she laid her arm across her face. Somehow she felt that the wonderful joy and love shining in her eyes should be kept hidden until Jerry was there to see. She heard the door open, and close again.
"Put them on the table, Fairy dearest, and leave me for a little while, will you? Thank you." And her face was still hidden.
The table by the bedside was swiftly drawn away, and Jerry kneeled beside her, and drew the arm from her face.
"Jerry!" she whispered, half unbelievably. Then joyously, "Oh, Jerry!" She gazed anxiously into his face. "Have you been sick? How thin you are, and so pale! Jerry Harmer, you need me to take care of you, don't you?"
But Jerry did not speak. He looked earnestly and steadily into the joyful eyes for a moment, and then he pressed his face to hers.
THE END.

LIVED UNDER SIX SOVEREIGNS

Aged Resident of New Brunswick Ascribed Long Life to His Activity and Early Retiring.

After posing for his picture on his one hundredth and fifth birthday anniversary, Levi W. Richardson, said to be the oldest man in New Brunswick, died before he had fairly started his one hundredth and sixth year. He had been ill for only about ten days.
Mr. Richardson ascribed his long life and remarkable preservation of his faculties to going to bed early and being active.
He had followed the operations of the war with the most careful attention, and his only ambition for the last year, says the Mutual Star, had been to live long enough to see Great Britain and its allies successful, for he had lived under six sovereigns and had watched with interest the expansion of the empire.
More than 80 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren survive him.

Didn't Get the Umbrella.

One of Chauncey Mitchell Depew's best stories is the story of the spotted dog which, as a boy, he bought from a local dog dealer. "The next morning it was raining," he says, "and I took the dog out into the woods, but the rain was too much for him. It washed the spots off. I trotted the dog back to the dealer."
"Look at this animal," I said. "The spots have all washed off."
"Great guns, boy!" he replied, "there was an umbrella went with that dog. Didn't you get the umbrella?"

Proof Positive.

"You can't fish here," said the farmer to an angler who was gloomily making his preparations to quit the post. "Don't you see that sign, 'No Trespassing'?"
"Oh, yes. I see the sign," replied the fisherman, "but I wasn't convinced that I couldn't fish here until I had waited nearly seven hours without getting a nibble."

PREPARE MORE LAND - GROW MORE FOOD

"Seed and Feed" the Slogan of the Year.

The papers are filled with the appeal for soldiers, sailors and farmers, and all are timely, all are necessary. The sailor is needed to man the ships that protect the shores, police the seas and clear the ocean of tormenting and meddlesome masked buccaners, to give help to the allies, to make more efficient the present fighting units that are keeping free the sealanes and ocean routes. The soldier is required to keep alive and intact the unity of the nation and the freedom of the world, to protect the lives of its citizens from incursions without and raids within, to guard the honor and preserve the dignity of the great United States, to render not only sentimental but practical assistance to those who for two and a half years on the battlefields of Flanders and the steppes of the East have been fighting for the freedom of the world against a dominant autocratic and militarist Prussianism, which were it to become successful, would mean autocracy, militarism and Prussianism, and a "get-off-the-sidewalkism" over the entire world. The allies are proud to welcome these new accessions to the fighting forces, which mean an earlier termination of the war and the dawn of an era that will be historic, one that we will all be proud that we lived in. Throughout all Canada, Great Britain, France, and all the allied countries, when the news was received that the United States had entered the war, a thrill went up and down the nation's sides, and the pulses throbbed with a new life, keenly appreciative of the practical sentiment that had brought to their sides an ally of the strength and virility of the United States.

But the soldier and the sailor need to be fed, and therefore the cry for agricultural enlistment. The strength of the fighting man must be maintained. In his absence from the field there comes the necessity for provision to take his place. The appeal for farm help is well timed, opportune and important. There are vacant lands aplenty in the United States that, given a fair opportunity under competent advisement and reasonable help, will produce abundantly. Western Canada also provides an excellent field for the prosecution of work in growing wheat and other grains, and while it is not the desire of the Canadian Government to draw from the resources of the United States, believing that it is the duty of every patriotic citizen to do all he possibly can to build up the stores of depleted foods and making use of every energy at home, the wish is to lay before the public the fact that Canada has millions of acres of excellent land capable of producing wonderful crops. If for any reason the reader, having patriotism and a love of his country in his heart, and a desire to forward the cause of the allies, cannot avail himself of the opportunities afforded in the United States, Western Canada will be glad to render him any assistance it can in locating him on its vacant areas, where large crops can be grown at minimum of cost. Let us grow the grain, raise the cattle, produce the food to feed our soldiers, our sailors and provide food for our allies, no matter whether it is done to the North or to the South of the boundary line that in the object in view should not be known as a boundary. Let us keep up the spirit of patriotism, whether it be growing grain in the United States or in Canada, but Canada, fully alive to the necessity, joins in the appeal of its allies—the United States—for more food and more food.—Advertisement.

WAGNER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS IN BASEBALL

BEST PLAYER GAME HAS EVER KNOWN.

A few years ago it was thought wonderful when Cy Young started on his twenty-fourth year in baseball, but old Cy didn't finish. It also was thought Matty was going to last forever, but his pitching years were limited to 16. Now Honus Wagner of the Pittsburgh Pirates steps out on completion of 25 years in the game.

To repeat Wagner's record would be like calling attention to the fact that Christmas comes on December 25. Everybody knows it. Instead of trying to fix these figures in your head, just remember that he is the best hitter and the best infielder that the game has ever known and that will be sufficient. He led the league in hitting so often that it became a habit.

DEFINITION OF "GINK"

Hub Perdue of Gallatin, Ky., a veteran of the majors, now pitching with the Louisville club of the American association, believes he has the regular definition of a "gink." "A gink," Hub said, in his Southern drawl, "is a fellow with mud on his boots the year 'round who lives so fah back in the woods that the owls sleep with his chickens, and he uses a 'possum for a watchdog."

BASEBALL NOTES

Larry Doyle is hitting the ball regularly.

Joe Tinker is now a regular citizen of Columbus.

Bagby has cultivated a "fadeway" ball with which he does excellent execution.

Little Oscar Ducey may make Philly fans forget that Bert Nichoff was a hold-out.

Joe Jenkins is going right along about winning himself a place with the White Sox.

Yerkes seems to be always in front of the ball regardless of which side of him it is hit.

Fleider Jones is negotiating with the veteran George Davis to aid in coaching the Browns.

The Cleveland Indians and the Cincinnati Reds are being picked for dark horses in their league.

Frank Chance has a good infield in spite of the fact that Harry Wolter was grabbed by the Cubs.

Promise that the Reds will soon be playing in midseason form doesn't cheer the Cincinnati fans any.

Cuban Cueto used to be an infielder with the St. Louis Feds. As an infielder he is a fine outfielder.

Sam Rice, the young outfielder Griffith has put in the regular team, is starting off like a real veteran.

Frank Gilhooley is fulfilling the promise he gave last year of developing into a really great outfielder.

A baseball magnate doesn't understand why he should number his players. They'll be around on pay day.

Outfielder Neale of the Reds has picked up a slippery nickname. He is known to his clubmates as "Greasy."

Hoblitzell and Larry Gardner have both got their batting eye. The rest of the Red Sox haven't been so lucky.

Those Teuton airplanes that are going to blow eastern cities won't hurt the Mackmen. They'll be in the cellar.

Understand now what Jawn McGraw meant when he talked of retiring. He's just going to retire his flock of limousines.

So far fans haven't heard of anybody starting an Atlantic league this year. Must be afraid of Bill Hohenzollern's U-boats.

Clyde Milan's ambition when his baseball days are ended is to settle down on a farm of about 150 or 200 acres in Tennessee.

Barry is one of the prettiest hitters the Milwaukee club has had in several seasons. He smacks the old apple on a line and there is a lot of power behind every punch he delivers.

AN OPERATION AVERTED

Philadelphia, Pa.—"One year ago I was very sick and I suffered with pains in my side and back until I nearly went crazy. I went to different doctors and they all said I had female trouble and would not get any relief until I would be operated on. I had suffered for four years before this time, but I kept getting worse the more medicine I took. Every month since I was a young girl I had suffered with cramps in my sides and periods was never regular. I saw your advertisement in the newspaper and the picture of a woman who had been saved from an operation and this picture was impressed on my mind. The doctor had given me only two more days to make up my mind so I sent my husband to the drug store at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound, and believe me, I soon noticed a change and when I had finished the third bottle I was cured and never felt better. I grant you the privilege to publish my letter and am only too glad to let other women know of my cure." — Mrs. THOS. MCGONIGAL, 3432 Hartville Street, Phila., Pa.

LENGTH OF WIRELESS WAVE

Naturally It Is Four Times That of the Aerial, but This Does Not Always Hold Good.

In articles of wireless telegraphy such expressions as 200-meter wave-lengths, 600-meter wave-lengths, 15,000-meter wave-lengths are constantly used. In reply to a correspondent who asks how the length of the waves is measured the Scientific American gives the following simple explanation:

"The length of an electric wave is determined by a wave-meter. The natural wave-length of an aerial is four times its linear length, just as the wave-length of a note of a closed organ pipe is four times the length of the pipe, and the wave-length of the note of a tuning fork is four times the length of the box which is resonant with the note. However, other considerations make it difficult to measure the wave-length by a rule, and the wave-meter gives a more correct result than can be found by measuring the length of the wire."

Window Box Gardens. Now that potatoes are scarce every bit of available space is being used in growing them. Already the women of the nation have worked out a scheme of growing seed potatoes in window boxes, thereby adding several dollars to the family income. When the housewife prepares her potatoes for the evening meal she cuts a piece from the "rose" end of the potato off before peeling and plants it in the sitting room window box, which contains either leaf mold, coconut fiber or sand. Each piece, says one potato planter, should weigh not less than one and a half ounces, and the box should be kept in the window of a cool—but not too cool—room until the sprouts are from one-half to an inch high. Thus the housewife has a supply of seed potatoes, which are daily increasing in value.

IS VERY THINLY POPULATED

South America, With 7,276,000 Square Miles of Territory, Has Only 50,000,000 Inhabitants.

South America is thinly populated. The Spanish and Portuguese governments, which divided South America between themselves in 1494, made little effort to attract immigration of their own people and denied admission to peoples of other lands. The lands were administered as crown colonies. Large land grants were made to court favorites. There was little opportunity for individual enterprise, even if the continent had been open to enterprising men.

It was only after the Latin republics had thrown off the rule of Spain and Portugal that South America threw open her doors to the immigration of the world. But revolutions and epidemics decimated the populations, and the continuance of the great land holdings, which were just being broken up, prevented the close setting of the country, so that even now South America, with an area of 7,276,000 square miles as against North America's 3,559,599, has a population of only about 50,000,000.

Yet she has millions of acres of soil as rich as the world knows, and mines whose richness passes belief, and waterways reaching to the heart of the continent, and opportunities almost unmeasured.

Difficult Feat. "Tell Mr. Smith I want to see him at the telephone." "I told Mr. Smith, sir, and he wants to know if you have a periscope at your end."

YANKEES HAVE STRONG TEAM

Ray Schalk, Crack Backstop of White Sox, is Doing Most of Worrying Over Donovanites.

Ray Schalk, crack backstop of the White Sox and premier catcher of the American league, believes the Yankees are going to be the team that will have to be beaten for the rag in Mr. B. Johnson's circuit. Ray admits Boston is a tough proposition, but he is willing to do most of his worrying over Donovan's dynamiters.

"But," said the White Sox star, "it's a long way to October tonight and you can't ever tell what will happen."

Naturally, Schalk figures the Sox are the real class of the league. He believes the team, through its good conditioning work this spring, is fit for a good start.

SENDING PLAYERS TO FARMS

Fielder Jones Disapproves of Plan of Optioning Out Ball Tossers—Would Sell Them Outright.

Manager Fielder Jones is quoted as saying he does not entirely approve of the Rickey plan of optioning out players. "If I can't use a player I prefer to sell him outright," Jones is quoted as saying. Jones says his objections to sending players to "farms" is that often they might secure better berths if there are no strings attached, since there are many clubs that won't take a player under option.

A Pledge.

Let us now as with one voice and one heart and in a faith that makes faithful, renew our loyalty to those ideals of government for which our fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Revive in us and in the people of our land a high sense of patriotism; strengthen every noble purpose; keep us by thy help from sloth and indifference and from all corruption of civil government.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

There are too many pessimists in Weymouth for the good of the town.
They are not willing to hustle, and they attempt to discourage others.
Out of town merchants find it profitable to advertise in Weymouth, and clearly shows that Weymouth merchants are losing an opportunity.

WEYMOUTH AHEAD.

Those who think Weymouth is not doing much toward food conservation, etc., have little knowledge of the facts. Yet Weymouth has ploughed up more acres than Quincy or any of the neighboring towns, and the sale of seed potatoes has been larger. And the good work is going along merrily and successfully.

THE NEW TREASURER.

Much depends upon the banks for the building up of a town. The East Weymouth Savings bank has been among the most progressive, both by example in the erection of its handsome bank building and in the encouragement which the treasurer and board of investment has given prospective builders.

The new treasurer will be an added power along this line, and we welcome him as a bank official and a citizen of Weymouth.

GENTLEMEN WITH COURAGE.

Weymouth owes much to L. F.
Bates. Although a resident of Braintree he has done more for Washington square than any other man.
While the Bates Opera House is just across the line in Braintree we claim it as a Weymouth institution, and Mr. Bates so advertises it.
Weymouth Landing would be dead without the Bates Opera House with its many social gatherings and high-class moving pictures. Now Messrs.
Bates and Walter J. Bess have under construction a large garage which the automobile travel needs. We are glad these gentlemen had the enterprise to go ahead.

NEW HOUSES.

It is unfortunate the Board of Trade cannot see its way clear to give encouragement to a building trust just now, which could do much to meet the demand for houses and build up Weymouth. Our citizens could do much to help along these lines if they would take more shares in our Co-operative banks. At the

375 SIZE (31 X 3 3/4 INCHES) 375
BLACK SAFETY TREAD TIRES

THE balance line for the Ford car is drawn, and the sum total of its perfection struck with that new Goodrich tire, the bigger and better Ford car tire—Goodrich's "Three-Seventy-Five."

Of SUPER-SIZE and SUPER-STRENGTH it not only meets the INDIVIDUAL NEEDS of the Ford car,
—but DOUBLES its VIRTUES.

New as today, it is nevertheless already familiarly known by the knowing as—

Goodrich's
"Three-Seventy-Five"

That's its size: Three and seventy-five hundredths inches in the cross section. And it's an inch bigger too in the circumference.

Its heroic size, however, is designed to fit 30-inch rims on Ford cars.
It is made solely with the five-finger safety tread.

It costs but little more than ordinary tires at the outset; and the nattier appearance and added comfort it gives your Ford car, and its own greater dollar ECONOMY, make it the better buy in the end.

Tremont Theatre, Boston.

The supreme success of the present theatrical season in Boston is the attraction now playing at the Tremont Theatre,
"A Tailor-Made Man," played by Grant
Mitchell, and Colman & Harris' company of players. Next Monday will mark the beginning of the twelfth week of the attraction in Boston, and the entire time in which it has occupied has been a succession of crowded houses at every performance.

Three months is an abnormally long time to remain in any metropolitan city. To merit this honor a play must have attributes far out of the ordinary, and abilities to please theatregoers not only once, but many times. In the language of the theatre, it must be a good "repeat" show.
And this is what has made possible the

"A Tailor-Made Man" has a two-fold message to the playgoer. It is a source of the heartiest enjoyment through the laughter it excites, and it is insinuating as well. This combination is hard to beat when perfect, and the right assembling of the ingredients is manifested in the complete play.

IN MEMORIAM.

At a special meeting of Division No. 6, A. O. H., Thursday, May 10, 1917, the following resolutions were accepted and adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His supreme wisdom to remove from our midst our beloved friend and brother MAURICE C. DALEY

who passed away Tuesday, May 8, 1917;
RESOLVED, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we sincerely mourn the loss of one who was a good and faithful member of our order;

RESOLVED, That we extend to the family of our late brother, our sincere sympathy in this, their time of sorrow, and ask them to bear with Christian fortitude the great loss with which they have been afflicted and to try and take consolation from the fact that he was prepared to meet his God.
May his soul rest in peace.

RESOLVED, That a copy of the resolutions, suitably engrossed, be sent to the family of our late brother and, as a mark of respect, they shall be printed in the Weymouth Gazette and spread upon our records.

Respectfully submitted,
PHILIP F. HAVILAND,

BUSY DAYS FOR G. A. R. MEN

Will Visit Schools, Attend Flag Raising, Sunday and Memorial Day Services

Again the Memorial Day season with its hallowed memories is with us. The busy days of the Grand Army began today and will continue through next Wednesday. This afternoon is Memorial day in the public schools, Saturday the veterans have accepted an invitation to attend a flag raising at the Clapp Memorial field, then comes Memorial Sunday, May 27, and Memorial Day, May 30.

The details of comrades to the various schools included: High school, at 1 P. M.—L. W. Cain, David Dunbar, Waldo Turner and W. J. Dunbar.

At Athens school, at Pilgrim church—George Ruggles, Augustus Tirrell, William A. Drake and George L. Newton.

Adams school, —J. P. Ford, Jeremiah Spencer, and J. T. Ferris.

Jefferson school, —W. H. Moran, C. H. Loring, John O'Neil, Michael McGrath, and Nelson W. Gardner.

James Humphrey school and Franklin school, at High school hall at 2 P. M., —J. Q. Spear, George F. Lord and J. M. Davis.

Washington school, —Rufus Turpel, William Murphy, Morallus Lane William Mitchell, Andrew Culley, H. B. Vogell and C. H. Burrell.

Ward Three, all schools consolidated, at Bates Opera House at 1.45 P. M., —F. A. Bicknell, James Pease, W. B. Denton, Charles E. Bicknell, J. W. Rand, M. Cleary, A. H. Torrey and E. A. Eisher.

Pratt School, —Bradford Hawes, J. Q. A. Holbrook and G. S. Hunt.

Shaw school, —Christopher Tower, and George F. Joy.

The upper grades of the Bates and Howe Schools meet in Fogg's Opera House at 2 P. M.; the lower grades in their own buildings.

Bates school, —J. F. Hollis, A. H. Belcher, and J. H. Burrell.

Howe school, —F. Derby and Elbridge Nash.

Hollis school, —Newton Hollis and Patrick Slattery.

Pond school, —Andrew J. Shaw, Augustus E. Shaw, and Gilbert Shaw.

Flag Raising. The flag raising at the Clapp Memorial field will be at 3 P. M., on Saturday. Reynolds post, G. A. R. will be guests of honor, and the school children and Boy Scouts, will assist in the program which will include speakers and music.

Memorial Sunday By invitation of the pastor, Reynolds Post, will attend divine services on Sunday afternoon, May 27, at 2.30, at the Methodist church at East Weymouth.

Directly after the church service, probably about 4 o'clock, a memorial service to the sailor dead will be held as usual on the water front near the Fore River bridge at North Weymouth. This service is under the direction of the patriotic instructor of Corp 102. The Grand Army and its allied organizations have been invited, and an invitation is also extended to the general public.

W. R. C. to Visit Schools A delegation from the W. R. C. will visit the schools in each ward next Tuesday afternoon.

Memorial Day The general orders of Commander James Pease for Memorial Day are along the usual lines. The Post, the Sons of Veterans and Carters Band will assemble at Thomas Corner, North Weymouth at 8 A. M. Members of Dorothea L. Dix tent, Daughters of Veterans will present each comrade with flowers.

Automobiles have kindly been loaned by patriotic citizens and will convey the Post to the North Weymouth cemetery.

After decorating the graves, the Post will proceed to Village Cemetery, where it is expected to arrive at nine o'clock; thence to the Catholic Cemetery, arriving at 9.30; thence to Highland Cemetery arriving at ten o'clock; thence to Lakeview Cemetery, arriving at 10.30; thence to Elmwood Cemetery, arriving at eleven o'clock; thence to Mt. Hope Cemetery, arriving at 11.30; thence to Fairmount Cemetery, arriving at twelve o'clock; thence to Post hall, arriving at 12.30. The autos will then be dismissed, but the chauffeurs are invited to dine with the Post.

Dinner will be served by the W. R. C. and allied organizations in G. A. R. hall at 12.30. After dinner a band concert will be given at G. A. R. hall, to which the public are invited.

The afternoon services will be held in the Odd Fellows Opera House, in charge of Comrade Elbridge Nash, and will be open to the public. Rev. Fred A. Line will deliver the oration; Comrade Waldo Turner will read Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and Comrade Bradford Hawes read will Commander Logan's General Order for the first Memorial Day observance. Music will be furnished by the Band, and the Star Spangled Banner will be sung.

All flags should be displayed at half mast until 12 o'clock, when they will be placed at the peak—per orders received from national headquarters.

The school children will meet the comrades at the various cemeteries at the times appointed and assist the comrades in decorating the graves, and, so far as they are able, procure flowers and bring them for that purpose.

The several troops of Boy Scouts are cordially invited to meet the Post at the cemeteries in their respective parts of the town and assist in the services of decoration.

The Memorial day committee includes: Elbridge Nash, William A. Drake, Willard J. Dunbar, Charles E. Bicknell and Bradford Hawes.

One in Three It is of interest at this time to learn that Weymouth furnished about 1000 men for the Civil war, only about 2500 were legible.

The War Department estimates there were 2,778,304 enlistments, of which 543,393 were second or more enlistments, a total of 2,234,911 enlisted. Massachusetts furnished 151,785 men. Men in service January 1, 1861, present and absent, 16,367; July 1, 1861, 186,751; May 1, 1865, 1,000,516. Population of the loyal states in 1861 was 22,046,472; population of the seceding states was 9,103,333, of whom 3,521,118 were slaves. The loyal states sent 12 per cent of their population to war; deducting females, children and exempts, 1 in every 2 1-2 males.

More than 1500 vessels were captured, burned or driven ashore by the Navy during the war. The War Department reports that 86,724 men paid $300 commutation money to escape service during the war. There are buried in National Cemeteries of those who served in the Union Army, 171,018 known and 146,818 unknown dead, a total of 317,836. Total deaths during the war 359,528.

Mexican War: Number of troops, 101,282; killed, 1,049; died of wounds, 508.

Pay of soldiers, 1861 to 1865; April, 1861, $11 per month; August 6, 1861, $13 per month; May 1, 1864, $16 per month. About 12,000 men were starved and shot in 13 months, from January, 1864, to 1865 in Andersonville prison. It is estimated that over 40,000 Union soldiers died in Rebel prisons.

In 1910 there were 626,231 survivors of the war, but today only about 300,000, and it is estimated there will be only 116,072 in 1925.

Reynolds Post Reynolds Post, 58, G. A. R., was organized July 14, 1868, and at the close of that year had 102 members. In 1878 there were 216, and high water mark was reached in 1881 when there were 322. In 1883, however, it had dropped below 300, and in 1898 dropped below 200. In 1914 there were less than 100 and today only 70 members as follows:

MORE VOLUNTEERS WANTED

For Registration Officers at Different Precincts on June 5

The Weymouth Board of Registration met Wednesday evening. While there have been many volunteers for service on June 5, the board has not yet secured enough to serve. Four will be required in each precinct. Contrary to expectations the men who register will not be required to fill out the cards themselves. This will be the work of the officers who serve. The men will however affix their signatures.

The registrars will fill in on the back of each card answers to the following: Tall, medium or short. Slender, medium or stout. Color of eyes. Color of hair. State if bald.

Has man lost an arm, leg, hand, foot, both eyes, or is he otherwise disabled. Let the whistles blow. At the shoe factories and the power plants.

Let the bands play and let the bells ring on Tuesday, June 5. Make it day of consecration to service in accordance with the spirit of President Wilson's message to the country.

The National Council suggests that the day be celebrated in a serious spirit, not as an ordinary holiday, and that costly and elaborate decorations be discouraged.

Each community is asked to make its celebration a public expression of willingness to give the services of its sons to the country.

In outlining a program observing the day the council proposes that men of registration age be escorted to the booths by their families and given a distinct registration badge and that patriotic meetings be held after the registration has closed.

"From press and pulpit and in the schoolroom," says the letter, "every effort should be exerted to impress upon all citizens their duty at this vital crisis in the history of our country. Let the words ring forth, 'The world must be made safe for democracy.'"

We suggest as a Weymouth badge a white ribbon with the word "WEYMOUTH" in red, and the word "VOLUNTEER" in blue, also the year 1917.

There will be 30,000 Smith Form-a-Trucks built this year—but even this huge production will not be enough. So if you have waited for further proof of the wonderful economy—efficiency—service value of this tremendous achievement in motor transportation, don't wait another day.

Over 10,000 users—over 450 lines of work—are all the proofs you need, and there is not a single Smith Form-a-Truck owner who will not say that he has cut delivery and hauling costs from 50% to 75%.

This year you not only get this wonderful attachment at the price of a good pair of horses, but you get it adapted to any Ford, Maxwell, Buick, Dodge Bros., Chevrolet or Overland Car. So you can select the power plant you like the best—have the most confidence in.

Smith Form-a-Truck is the mule hauler of the world—the master economizer in hauling and delivery cost—the master saver in equipment investment.

Come in today for a demonstration—but don't put off your order.

MOTORTRUCKS RUN ON RAILWAY TRACKS

WHEELS ARE SPECIALLY CONSTRUCTED.

A close-up view is given in the illustration herewith of the specially constructed wheels with which the new motortrucks in use by the United States troops are equipped.

These wheels permit the motortrucks to travel along on the railroad tracks as does the ordinary coach or freight car of the standard American railroads.

CARS IN SUMMER

Its Dress, Like Man's, Should be Changed From Winter.

HEAVY LUBRICANT IS NEEDED

Radiator Should Be Thoroughly Cleaned, Motor Overhauled and Grease Cups Refilled—Polish Up Top and Upholstery.

Warm-weather driving imposes a different set of conditions on the car than those which exist in winter. In the same way as a man would not go about the streets dressed in the same attire in June as he wears in January, the car should not be expected to perform with the equipment of winter in the summer time.

The change in conditions affects every part of the car, from the radiator back to the rear axle. It affects the radiator, because, in all probability, a nonfreezing solution has been used during the winter, and after the danger of freezing weather has gone by this should all be drained out.

The cooling system should then be flushed out with a solution of washing soda and boiling water.

The way this is done is to first drain the radiator, then run through a complete filling of boiling plain water, after which this is also drained and the cooling system filled with the soda solution. About two heaping handfuls of soda to a bucket of boiling water is sufficient in the cooling system. This not only takes the scale from the radiator, but also cleans out any last traces of the solution.

Change Oil in the Motor.

In the motor the most important thing to be done is to change the oil. This is done by removing the drains at the bottom of the crank case and allowing all the oil to run out, after which the oil reservoir is flushed out in the same way that the radiator was cleaned, only in this case instead of using a soda solution, kerosene oil is employed.

While the motor is being looked over it would not be a bad thing to readjust the tappets so that the clearances are at about the thickness of an ordinary business card, and also to clean the spark plugs. The plugs can be cleaned by allowing them to soak in kerosene and then scrape the carbon with a pocket knife or some other metallic object.

The wiring of the ignition system should also be gone over, as sometimes it will be found to have been chafed at points where the insulation is in contact with the metal, in which case it is very liable to have worn off. Before the hood is again closed down the little bolts holding the various attachments on the motor should be gone over. These will be found at the flange of the carburetor around the cylinder head and on various brackets and supports, depending on the make of engine which is being looked over.

Coming back to the clutch and gearbox, the clutch member will probably not require any attention. If you have a multiple disk design of the metal-to-metal variety, it would not be a bad idea, however, to flush this out also with kerosene and remove the lubricant.

Use a Heavier Lubricant.

The consistency of lubricant in all these parts should be somewhat heavier in summer than it is in winter. The warmer weather will render the heavy lubricants less viscous in summer than they are in winter. As a general rule, for the engine, when this is in good condition and has not worn itself to any great extent, medium oil should be employed in the summer time and light oil in the winter.

There are a great many upholstery compositions on the market which are very good. These should be used to go over the leather and freshen it. If this is not done from time to time, leather upholstery will crack and the car will lose its bright new appearance. The same applies to the top, and a treatment of this will vary in accordance with the material of which it is composed.

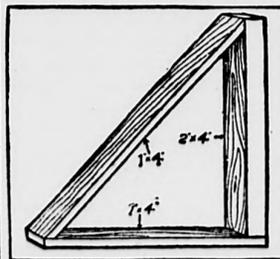

The final step is to refill every grease cup on the car and turn them up three or four turns, repack the universal joints with lubricant, oil the distributor and shaft of the ignition outfit with a few drops of good oil, and the same with the armature shaft of the generator and all other oil holes. See that the tires are inflated to their proper pressure, and the car is ready to start the touring season.

PLAN TO RAISE AUTOMOBILE

Weight Is Taken Off Tires While Car Is Standing in Shed—Use an Old Wagon Jack.

An excellent method of raising an automobile up so that the weight is off the tires while standing in a shed is given by a writer in The Farmer.

Make four supports out of 2 by 4's and inch boards, as shown in the illustration, and set them under the axles as close to the wheels as possible. The old-fashioned, home-made wagon jack is handier to use in raising the auto to slip the supports under than the regular auto jack. When the auto is wanted, all that has to be done is to push it off the supports, and no jack is necessary. The supports should be high enough to raise the tires about an inch off the floor.

Support for Car.

UNNECESSARY WEAR ON TIRES

Same Results Obtained by Gentle, Though Firm Application of Brakes in Stopping.

The sudden application of automobile brakes and the consequent sliding of the wheels cause those worn spots on the tread of the tires which result in their being discarded long before they are really worn out. If the brakes are applied firmly but gently the car will be stopped as quickly, but without the disastrous result on the rear wheels which comes from jamming on the brakes. It would also prevent the locking of the rear wheels, which causes the wheels to slide.

When the car is at a dead stop there is, of course, no wear on the tires, as there is no motion to produce external friction, the tire being in perfect contact with the road. If the car is started gently and slowly and nursed up to the proper speed the tire retains as nearly as possible the perfect contact with the road. Friction is held at a minimum and wear unnoticed.

MICHELIN

Extra Mileage You Can See and Measure

The extra thickness of the Michelin Tread—due to extra rubber and fabric—means additional mileage. Especially is this true since every ounce of rubber and fabric is the toughest that money, skill and experience can produce.

Michelins give so much mileage that they'd be economical even if high priced. But they're not high priced.

NEWS REVIEW OF THE PAST WEEK

American Destroyers Already Are Taking Part in the War on German Submarines.

FIRST TROOPS GOING SOON

President Orders Division Under Pershing Sent to France at Once—Draft Registration Set for June 5—Hollweg Refuses to Discuss Terms—Russian Crisis Over.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

The American navy is represented in the war zone, and an American warship has had a fight with a German submarine.

So much was revealed on Wednesday by the British admiral, which announced the presence in British waters of a squadron of American destroyers. It mentioned the "brush" with the submarine, but did not tell the result. Both the British and the American naval authorities maintain a policy of silence concerning the capture or destruction of U-boats.

The destroyers, which are under the general command of Rear Admiral W. S. Sims, arrived at Queenstown and were inspected by a British officer, who asked the American commander when he could be ready for business. "We can start at once," replied the American, and they did.

There is reason to believe some of these destroyers took part in the recent big raid on the German submarine base at Zeebrugge.

The American vessels and their crews were given an enthusiastic welcome at Queenstown, and Vice Admiral Beatty and Admiral Mayo exchanged congratulatory cablegrams.

Pershing to Lead First Force.
Friday evening, President Wilson issued orders for the dispatch to France of the first American expeditionary force. It will be about one division of 28,000 men, all veterans of the regular army, and will be commanded by Maj. Gen. J. J. Pershing. This force will be sent across as soon as is practicable, in response to the appeals of the British and French war missions.

The army conscription bill, having been accepted by both house and senate, was signed by the president, but he announced that for the present, at least, he would not accept the Roosevelt volunteer divisions. In a public statement he handed some bouquets to Colonel Roosevelt, but said that "the business now in hand is undramatic, practical and of scientific definiteness and precision," he was acting under expert and professional advice from both sides of the water. The president also issued a proclamation calling on all men subject to selective conscription to register on June 5.

Japan also began taking an active part in the warfare in Europe last week. A number of Japanese gunboats arrived at Marseille to aid in the fight on submarines and to convoy French merchantmen, and it was unofficially stated that a contingent of Japanese troops was landed at the same port and would fight on the west front alongside the Russian division that has been there for some time.

Building Up Our Armies.
With no illusions as to the seriousness of the task confronting it, the administration is proceeding steadily in its preparation for the part the United States is to play in the war. President Wilson has ordered the regular army brought up to full war strength, and all the machinery for raising the great selective draft army is ready. All over the country the training camps for officers were opened at the beginning of the week, and thousands of efficient young Americans are being drilled in the duties of commanding officers. The sale of "Liberty" bonds in denominations as low as $50 is in full swing. To provide for the country's own expenses as a belligerent, the appropriations committee submitted to the senate the greatest war budget in the history of the nation, the total being nearly $3,400,000,000. All the week the house debated the war revenue bill.

Aggravated by criticisms of congress for its alleged dilatoriness in the matter of war legislation, many senators on Wednesday bitterly attacked the war policies of the government. Their special targets were Secretary of War Baker, the advisory commission of the Council of National Defense, the car efficiency committee of the American Railway association, proposal of a food dictatorship and plans for fixing maximum and minimum prices. The outbursts of the senators showed they were speaking in large measure in behalf of the business concerns of their respective localities who, they asserted, had had no chance to get government contracts.

Trading in Futures Stopped.
Food supply matters in America moved rapidly toward a crisis last week. Actuated presumably by the investigations of the government into gambling in foodstuffs, and by the tremendous rise in the price of wheat, the Chicago board of trade and the grain exchanges of several other middle West cities put a stop to trading in futures. Wheat and flour prices fell promptly and decisively. The government gathered the necessary data for prosecution of the wheat gamblers, and then got after the butter and egg men. The government also came to the conclusion that the exorbitant prices of wheat and flour were due in part to the gigantic wheat buying operations of Great Britain and France, and asked them to dispose of their immense holdings of grain for future delivery. This the allies agreed to do, and they also agreed to co-operate with the United States in a pooling system to apportionate exports.

All in a position to know about the idea that there will be an insufficiency of food in this country. The problem is to regulate the distribution and the exports.

Hollweg Won't Talk of Terms.
The imperial rulers of Germany are not yet holding out an available perch upon which the dove of peace might alight. Stubbornly resisting the prodigings of both the pan-Germans and the Socialists, the chancellor, Doctor Hollweg, on Tuesday told the reichstag and the world that the time was not fitting for a statement of Germany's war aims or peace terms. The military situation of the central powers, he declared, was satisfactory, and he intimated that they were ready to grant liberal terms to Russia, if that struggling nation desired to get out of the conflict. But he asserted there was no reason to believe England and France would at present listen to any propositions from Germany, and to make any would be construed by them as an evidence of weakening. On the whole, the chancellor's speech was bold and defiant, and his position does not seem to be weakened, despite the continued attacks on him. The most startling of these attacks last week was made by Georg Ledebour, Socialist leader who warned the reichstag that events must happen in Germany as they have in Russia and that the people must soon introduce a republic in Germany. Though such sentiments are supported by many, it is likely the mass of opinion in the empire is better represented by Herr Roedicke, president of the German Farmers' union, who denounced the Socialist aims as sinister and anti-national, and as tending to a prolongation of the war since, as he declared, the entente based their hopes on German disunion.

"President Wilson," Herr Roedicke continued, "wants no peace with the Hohenzollerns, but the monarchy is too deeply rooted in German hearts for the malignity of the entente or of President Wilson to be capable of destroying it."

Developments in Russia.
After much travail the Russians managed to settle the crisis in that country by the formation of a coalition cabinet in which all elements, including the workmen, the soldiers and even the peasants, are represented. Prince Lvoff, the premier, then announced that for the first time they had a government that would combine both moral authority and material power. The peace-without-annexations-or-indemnities factions still adhere to that policy, but all seem agreed that the war must be carried on vigorously and faith kept with the country's allies. Professor Milukoff was forced to quit the cabinet and was succeeded as foreign minister by Tereshtenko, while Kerensky, who was minister of justice, became minister of war and marine. Generals Brussloff and Gurko and other commanders who had resigned, were persuaded to withdraw their resignations, and turned their energies toward stopping the disintegration of the armies.

All this sounds encouraging, and it may be Russia can be held firm to her pledges. If not, it means merely the prolongation of the war and the deferring of the certain ultimate result—the defeat of the central powers.

The United States began giving concrete aid to Russia on Wednesday, when Secretary McAdoo gave to its charge d'affaires $100,000,000 of the allied loan, with the specification that the money be spent in this country under the supervision of the treasury department. The American mission to Russia, headed by Mr. Root, was given its instructions, but it cannot reach Petrograd for about two months. Belgium got a share of the loan when Mr. McAdoo handed its representatives a credit for $45,000,000.

Italian Offensive Begun.
With the passing of winter conditions Italy began a vigorous offensive on Monday, attacking the Austrians along the entire Isonzo front. The enemy fought back stoutly, but was forced to give ground in the region of Plava, north of Goritz. In this Italy is only anticipating a grand assault which the Austrians had been preparing to make. The fighting continued throughout the week with varying fortunes, the Italians slowly pushing their way toward Trieste, their objective.

Released temporarily from the necessity of guarding strongly the eastern front, Germany brought from there to France a large number of comparatively fresh troops and threw them into the struggle against the British and French. General Haig's men are now confronting greater enemy forces than at any time in the past, but before the week ended they were in full possession of Bullecourt, the village for which the Germans fought so desperately because it protected Queant, the southern end of an important line of defenses.

On the French front the most violent fighting was about Laffaux mill, a position even more important than Bullecourt. Again and again the Germans made desperate attempts to regain this ground, but the French repulsed them with terrific losses.

Many burning villages behind the German front north and south of St. Quentin indicated an intention of the Germans to carry out a further retirement. St. Quentin itself has been burning for some time.

General Petain on Tuesday was appointed commander in chief of the French armies in France. General Nivelle was given command of a group of armies, and General Foch became chief of staff of the war ministry. Petain gained fame and high popularity by his defense of Verdun.

In Great Britain, too, there was a shake-up, a general staff for the navy being formed in response to the attacks on the admiralty. Admiral Jellicoe heads the staff.

A gratifying decrease in the number of vessels sunk by submarines, was reported by the British admiral. Whether this is due to the increasing attacks on Zeebrugge by sea and air, or to the recent destructive fire at the Wilhelmshaven wharves, or to the large number of U-boats caught in the British nets—reported to be between 80 and 100—is not known outside of Germany.

One more nation was added to the long list of the kaiser's declared enemies last week, when Honduras severed diplomatic relations with Germany. Spain remained neutral, but barely so.

Premier Lloyd George offered John Redmond immediate home rule for Ireland, excluding northwest Ulster, or a plan for an Irish convention to arrange a plan. Redmond accepted the latter suggestion.

The United States lost one of its most distinguished and honored citizens in the sudden death of Joseph H. Choate, eminent lawyer and former ambassador to Great Britain.

South Weymouth Branch.

The South Weymouth branch of the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness held its weekly meeting in the hall over the engine house on Tuesday. About sixty women were present during the day and the number of garments finished to be sent to the Red Cross headquarters in Boston testified to their industry.

This branch has turned out a large amount of work and now has on hand four dozen each of convalescent robes, pajamas and hospital shirts to be made as quickly as possible. These supplies are urgently needed, and each woman of the town should bear in mind that while she may not be able to go as a nurse or to make any great sacrifice, she may be doing her duty as acceptably by her help in preparing supplies for others to use.

Wool for knitted garments and cotton for knitted bandages will be given to those who wish it for work at home. It is earnestly desired that every woman should become a member of the society. Cards may be obtained at the hall and the membership fee is from ten cents to one dollar.

The Ways and Means committee is to hold a whist party Friday night at Odd Fellows hall for the benefit of the purchasing fund of the branch.

—The graduation exercises of the class of 1917, Weymouth High school, will be held Thursday afternoon, June 21.

LONCFORD

"He Who Hesitates Is Lost"

It is very probable, Mr. Business Man, that by July 1st, at the latest, the U. S. Government will levy a factory tax on every automobile shipped from the manufacturer. The manufacturer pays the tax before he gets his money for his product. He will therefore include in the price of his car the tax; the interest on the same; the bookkeeping and overhead expense for the time to keep this account. This with the high cost of material, means a greater increase in selling price. Be Protected. Order Now. We sell complete Longford cars, Longford chassis or your Ford equipped with Longford Auto Parts for $125. Parts guaranteed for one year.

CLUB and SOCIAL

The annual class night and closing program for the season, of the Union Literary Circle, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Crane of Quincy avenue, on Tuesday evening. The meeting was called to order by the president, Rev. William Hyde, and in response to the roll call many amusing anecdotes were given. Mrs. Eleanor Holmes gave a resume of the year's work, and several musical numbers were given on the harmonica. The special pleasure of the evening was the rendering of several groups of readings by Miss Agnes Hyde: From Shakespeare to Bobby Burns, with ghosts and wedding anniversary and new automobile experiences she entertained and won the praise and appreciation of the members and their guests. Refreshments of ice cream, cake and nuts were served and with a social hour another year of work and pleasure has been added to the history of the U. L. C. October will bring the members together in the first meeting of another year at the home of Mrs. Richard Lloyd Hunt of Front street.

The annual meeting of the Weymouth King's Daughters Union will be held in the parlors of the Congregational church, on Saturday, May 26, at 7.45.

Mrs. James H. Flint, the retiring president of the Dorchester Daughters of Maine Club, gave a delightful lunch to her retiring board of officers Monday at her home on Front street. This is a club to which only those born in Maine are eligible, and their meetings are held in the Dorchester Woman's club house in Dorchester. Covers were laid for ten, and it took the form of a patriotic lunch. The table cover and decorations were red, white and blue. These three colors in flowers filled a beautiful vase in the center of the table, with cluster of small flags on either side. After the lunch Mrs. Flint was presented with a lovely cut glass electric desk lamp by the retiring board of directors. Later a business meeting was held and the party broke up about 4.30 P. M., feeling that they had spent a very happy day.

The Breezy Hill Neighborhood Club was entertained by Mrs. S. N. Crosby, Jr., at her home 156 River street, Braintree, last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. J. Gardner Alden entertained the Thimble Club yesterday at her home on Sea street.

Rev. and Mrs. Isaac Corn of East Braintree have had as guests, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Judson, of Detroit, Mich.

A daughter was born May 9 to Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ward of West Quincy. Mrs. Ward was before her marriage Miss Blanche Bullerwell of North Weymouth.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Moses T. Dyer, Braintree, Tuesday evening, their daughter, Miss Mildred R. Dyer, was united in marriage to Lawson B. Twitchell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawson B. Twitchell of 19 Lisle street, East Braintree. Standing under an arch of roses, sweet peas and Spring flowers, they were married by Rev. Tyler E. Gale, pastor of the South Congregational church. The bride's gown was crepe de chene trimmed with hand-embroidered georgette crepe. She carried a bouquet of white roses. A reception was held from 7.45 to 10, Mr. and Mrs. Twitchell being assisted by the maid of honor and the best man. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Twitchell will be at home to friends at 259 Pond street, South Braintree, after July 1.

Miss Lizzie Cushing is in Brooklyn, N. Y., for the months of May and June.

A very pleasant gathering was held at the Pilgrim church vestry Wednesday afternoon, when each member of the Pilgrim Circle entertained a guest at an afternoon tea. A large number were present including many of the older members who usually are unable to attend. Tea, sandwiches, fancy crackers, candy and olives were served by Mrs. E. F. Beals, Mrs. W. O. Collyer, Mrs. W. E. Beane, and Mrs. John Bastey. Mrs. Charles Clark and Mrs. Job T. Ferris poured.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Cushing are spending a week or two at Oaks Bluff.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Clapp of Cambridge welcomed a young son recently. Mrs. Clapp will be remembered at South Weymouth as Miss Teresa Kohler.

The Women's Catholic Club held a whist party at the K. of C. hall Wednesday evening. There were twenty-five tables. Favors were won by Thomas White, Mrs. W. H. Murphy, John Griffin and Miss Julia Looney.

A daughter was born Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. Oscar A. Tower of Field avenue.

For the benefit of the Pond Home there will be an entertainment in G. A. R. hall on Monday afternoon, June 4, at 2.30, in charge of Mrs. Robert S. Hoffman. The South Shore Musicale Club will furnish the program. Tea will be served and candy will be for sale.

Patrick J. Fennell, one of the towns best known citizens died yesterday at his home on Broad street, aged 45. He had been ill for a long time. He had conducted a tailoring business at the hotels Lenox and Westminster, for some years. He was unmarried. The funeral will take place Monday morning from the church of the Immaculate Conception.

The Men's Class That's Different of the Union church held their final social supper Wednesday evening. The men made this event a May festival to which wives, sweethearts or other lady friends were invited. There were ninety present, forty-five men responding with their ladies. A good time was enjoyed by all. A short musical program was rendered by Miss Helen Richards and the Misses Dortha and Marion Pratt. The program was highly appreciated. Charles H. Locke, president of the class, introduced Rev. Thomas C. Richards, pastor of the Bethany church, Quincy. Mr. Richards gave a masterful address on "Being a Man." Closing remarks were made by the pastor. The class has agreed to disband until September.

The funeral of Mrs. Alla Coray, wife of Edward Coray, was held from the residence 709 West Street, Tuesday, at 2 P. M. Services at St. Francis Xavier church at 2.45 P. M., Rev. Dennis P. Crimmins, the pastor, officiating. Several members of the Tyrian Burial Society attended the services under the direction of Rachel Maloof, president. The body bearers were George Maloof, Tooby Sabbo, Elias Maloof, James Moses, John Moses and Nicholas Shaue. She leaves a husband, mother and two children, one 17 months old and one 3 days old.

Mrs. William Taylor and children left Wednesday for Greenfield, where they will visit friends.

The White Sox will have the Bridgewater club as their opponents Memorial Day at Bridgewater. A fast game is expected as Bridgewater were the State champions last year.

SURVEYS MADE AND PLANS PREPARED FOR THE LAND COURT

This advertisement is one of a series designed to effect closer co-operation between the company and its subscribers. There are three parties to a telephone call—the person calling, the person called, and the operator who connects them. The quality of service rendered is determined by the spirit in which all three work together rather than by the individual effort of any one or two of these three persons. We shall gladly send complete sets of the series to those desiring them.

Party-Line Consideration

A party line is a single circuit, shared in common by two or more subscribers. It is not reserved for a single user and should be used on the share-and-share-alike basis.

On a 4-party line, it is possible for all four stations to try to talk out on the same circuit at the same time. There is also the liability of all four stations being wanted at the same time to receive incoming calls.

Therefore, there are special considerations which the Public Service Commission and Telephone company both urge a party line user to keep in mind:

1. Long conversations prevent the use of the line by other subscribers; therefore party line talks should be as brief as possible.
2. Whenever another party line subscriber requests the use of the line for an emergency, courtesy should prompt the first user temporarily to give up the use of the line.
3. Whenever a party line subscriber takes the receiver from the hook and finds the line in use, the receiver should be replaced at once in a careful manner.
4. At the end of a conversation the receiver should be replaced upon the hook immediately, otherwise the other subscriber cannot signal the central office.

"Just Us Few"

1861 - 1917

Just us few, boys in blue,
Gathered together today,
Where comrades sleep and women weep,
Scattering flowers of May.
Just us few, boys in blue,
Old boys in blue and gray,
Thinking of days, when Sumter ablaze,
We marched to the war away.

— "Capt. Jack" Crawford

LITTLE SOLDIER KEPT PONY TO WHICH HE WAS ATTACHED

WAR'S strong appeal to boys lies in the promise of excitement that it offers. It has been said that the Civil conflict was largely a boys' war. Three in every ten soldiers on the Union side were under twenty-one years of age, and the percentage was greater in the South. Although the minimum age of enlistment was eighteen, this regulation was in many instances evaded. There is plenty of testimony to show that boys were among the best and bravest.

One of the most noteworthy was little "Gig" Van Zandt, who, at Port William, O., in the summer of 1862, volunteered to drum for a recruiting officer at a soldiers' meeting in an old schoolhouse. In August of that year he enlisted as a drummer in Company B, in the Seventy-ninth Ohio regiment, being at that time ten years, seven months and eleven days old. He drummed in the regimental band, as well as in the field, and became the pet and pride of the regiment.

There was no better soldier in Sherman's army. As a dispatch carrier he served through all the ruthless "march to the sea." An officer said to him that, being so young, he "did not possess the discretion of older heads, and consequently, when carrying a message, usually took the most direct route."

When mustered out, in 1865, he was thirteen years and six months old. Being told that he must give up his pony—an animal captured at Milledgeville, Ga., and which he had long ridden as a dispatch carrier—he was greatly distressed and went to see President Johnson about the matter. "My son," said the president, "what do you want? A brevet, I suppose?" "No, it is not that," replied the boy. "It is my dear pony. I have brought him all through the campaign and now he is to be taken away from me." "You shall keep him," said the president, and signed an order to that effect.

BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG NOT UNDER GUIDANCE OF MORTAL BRAIN

THE question of what man lost the day at Gettysburg for the Confederacy and won it for the Northern forces will probably never be settled. O. Henry probably came as near its solution as anybody ever will when in the greatest short story in English he said "if Longstreet only had."

The question, long a matter of argument, was brought to the surface of the news for a minute by the death in Pennsylvania of Gen. David M. Gregg, the last of the Union officers who bore the rank of general at the greatest battle of the war.

The Union forces were strung out from little Round Top over to Culp's hill. This latter position was to the right of the line. Beyond this, or, in fact, to the extreme right of the engagement, General Gregg was stationed in command of 10,000 cavalrymen.

The Union wagon train lay to the rear of the center of the line, which was exactly back of the famed "high-water mark." This train had been from the beginning of the engagement the objective point of the Confederates. With its capture victory for the Northern soldiers would have been doubtful. Thereupon General Stuart made an effort to get to the rear of the Union line to destroy the train. He made his charge around the right wing, when he was met by General Gregg, and, following a fierce engagement, General Stuart was forced to retire defeated.

This would make Stuart "the man who failed." But as a matter of fact no one failed in that great conflict. It was for the good of all that Lee should see defeat, that the charge of the valiant Pickett should fail, and that the high tide of the Confederacy should begin its recession on that bloodiest of days. General Gregg, no doubt, did his part, but it was the omniscience of a God who foresaw the future that guided the events at Gettysburg.

DETERMINED HE WOULD LIVE

Badly Wounded Soldier Made Wager That He Would Be Victorious Against the King of Terrors.

The Rev. Joseph H. Twichell, for nearly fifty years pastor of the Asylum Hill Congregational church in Hartford, Conn., saw three years of service in the Civil war as chaplain of the Seventy-first New York regiment. In the course of his service Mr. Twichell's experiences were many and varied; one of them, of a serio-comic nature, has been recently made public.

After a certain fight the surgeon told the chaplain that one poor fellow was quite beyond hope. The chaplain leaned over the dying soldier. "Well, my dear fellow," he began, "in a voice of deep emotion, 'you are very badly wounded, and if you have anything to say or any word that you want sent to your family, tell me now.' The poor fellow understood. 'My inside coat pocket," he breathed, painfully.

The chaplain felt a pocketbook there, and took it out. "Is that what you want?"

"Yes," was the faint reply. "Open it."

"Here is a ten-dollar bill. Is that what you want?"

"Yes."

"What shall I do with it?"

Then the soldier said, in a whisper: "Bet you ten dollars that I don't die."

And he did not.

Ideals Worth While.

America was reborn by the struggle of the Civil war, but America is reborn every day of her life by the purposes we form, the conceptions we entertain, the hopes that we cherish. We live in our visions. We live in the things that we see. We live and hope abundantly in us as we live in the things that we purpose. Let us go away from the cemeteries on Memorial day renewed in our devotion to daily duty and to those ideals which keep a nation young keep it noble, keep it rich in enterprise and achievement; make it to lead the nations of the world in those things that make for hope and for the benefit of mankind.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1327 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

There can be no denying the fact that the bungalow occupies an important place among the several types of buildings now being used for residence purposes. The number of homes which have been built after this type is a sufficient indication of its usefulness. Here we give the word, bungalow, a liberal meaning, since in its literal sense it would hardly apply to a modern American home, no matter how simple. If we take the word to mean a one-story house, modern in its design and appointments and so constructed that it will appear "close to the ground," the foregoing statement stands correct.

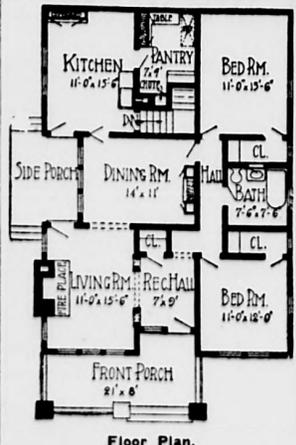

The bungalow, as we have broadly defined it, is perhaps the most widely used building type, with respect to the varying density of population, of all building types. The bungalow is found in the smallest of villages as well as in the outlying parts of the largest cities. Its appeal is universal because it is a type which may be made thoroughly expressive of a popular idea. Everyone likes the coziness which is best expressed in this style. Everyone likes the homelike atmosphere which is in the house itself even before the decorating is done. It is easy to make a home out of a bungalow.

The bungalow which is shown in the accompanying illustrations represents a novel treatment of exterior details and at the same time will serve to illustrate several desirable features in interior arrangement. This little building is 31 feet by 44 feet in size, not including the porch projection. It contains five generous sized rooms, a reception hall, pantry and bath.

The exterior of the bungalow attracts attention because of the distinctive way in which the gable roof is arranged. There are two gables projecting toward the front of the house. The perspective view shows the method of finishing the gable ends, leaving the rough timbers exposed. This will be recognized as a decidedly artistic method of handling one of the favorite features of the bungalow type. The porch is built under the main roof of the house, which has a wide enough overhang to cover it. The construction of the brick and concrete porch pillars is decidedly unusual. The attention which has been paid of all the various details such as these is plainly evident and the effect which has been brought about is altogether pleasing.

The walls are constructed of siding that is laid in alternate wide and narrow courses. Plain rough siding is used, which gives a rustic appearance to the bungalow. This siding can be stained dark, which adds still further to the rustic idea. The window casings are made in the same color and the sashes are white, which provides a pleasant contrast.

The entrance is into a reception hall that opens through cased openings into the living room and also into the back hall which connects up the bedrooms and the bath. This plan, with its reception hall and back hall, provides an arrangement that makes all the rooms readily accessible from all of the other rooms. Convenience is the object of this arrangement together with privacy between the different parts of the house.

The bedrooms are placed at the front and back corners of the house. This enables these rooms to have windows facing in two directions and insures a plentiful supply of air in the sleeping rooms. Such an arrangement makes these rooms almost as healthful for sleeping purposes as a sleeping porch and it also provides an abundance of freshening sunshine during the daytime. Each bedroom is furnished with ample closet space, which is always a good feature to incorporate in the house. These closets are especially desirable because of the windows.

The bath is placed between the two bedrooms, an ideal arrangement made possible by the back hall. It is seldom that the arrangement of this part of the house can be worked out in a more desirable manner than that which is shown here.

The living room is a bright, cheerful room, due to the arrangement of windows. There are three wide windows facing the porch and two more on the side—one on each side of the fireplace. The living room can be reached either through the reception hall or through a door opening from a side porch. It is connected to the dining room by a wide cased opening.

A double acting door leads back from the dining room to the kitchen. This room is fitted with all of the latest improvements for making convenience the dominating characteristic. Attention should be called to the pantry. A work table is placed directly under the larger of the two windows in this room. The refrigerator may be placed on one side of this table and the cupboard is built in on the other side. In a little recess in the opposite wall, the opening to the clothes chute is placed. This feature will save space usually required for soiled linen and makes it possible to do so without tedious steps up and downstairs.

There is sometimes doubt as to just how the surroundings should be arranged around a house of this kind. Of course, one of the fundamental requirements is that the house appear, true to the bungalow type, close to the ground. The lines of the roof have been specially designed so that this ap-

SOME BIRDS ARE NEGLECTED

Familiar Robin and Friendly Chickadee Almost Forgotten by the Bird-house Builders.

In the last five years we have heard and read a good deal about birdhouse building. Bluebird, wren and martin ought now to be well provided for by all bird lovers. Other birds have also been mentioned along with the box nesting idea, as the flicker and the crested fly-catcher, though these fellows undoubtedly much prefer natural holes in trees, which the woodpecker generally makes for himself and the fly-catcher selects with great care. There are exceptions, of course; flickers have been known to select holes previously excavated and even those made by man, and we have had the crested fly-catcher take up quarters in a deserted bluebird box of hollow-limb appearance that was nailed to the trunk of a tree.

Some birds, however, have been almost forgotten and one of these is our old, familiar, friendly robin, while another is less familiar, but not less friendly, the cheery chickadee.

Robins generally build their nests in vines, on densely-folaged tree limbs, often in more exposed places, sometimes on porch pillar top or roof beam. But if they are offered a rather open and roofed box set on a pole and shielded from cats they are very apt to set up housekeeping therein. The ideal robin box is merely a floor with cleats, two opposite sides and a gabled roof, two sides, therefore, being open, and this set on a pole from ten to twenty feet in air will tempt the birds most surely. Dimensions inside should be about 10 by 10 by 6 inches.

DIRTY STREETS AND GERMS

Diseases of the Respiratory Organs Are Directly Attributable to Unwashed Pavements.

Read any metropolitan paper on Sunday and note the tabulated causes of deaths during the preceding week. Diseases of the respiratory organs lead all the rest. To a city engineer the significance of this fact should be apparent. Grip, colds in general, pneumonia, tuberculosis and all the respiratory diseases have their origin in germs. These germs, for the most part, come from expectorated matter that falls upon streets, there to dry and be blown about with the dust that every gust of wind or motorcar sends upon its deadly journey, says a writer in Engineering and Contracting.

To apply water effectively in cleaning pavements, it is essential that the surface be smooth and well crowned. This condition is not perfectly fulfilled in 10 per cent of the streets in America, at a safe guess, and it is not even approximately fulfilled in 30 per cent of the streets. In brief, more than two-thirds of the streets in American cities need resurfacing if a marked reduction in respiratory diseases is to be effected. This does not mean, of course, that every city is in need of any such overhauling, but it does mean that the average city needs it, and it needs it badly.

Protecting Tree Wounds.

No covering of a tree wound will in anywise hasten the healing process or help form a callus. Its sole office is one of protection from decay, insects, etc., while the stub is gradually being covered by new growth. Dressings should be reapplied whenever the wood becomes exposed to keep out infection until entirely calloused over, for if decay or other germs, or insects once get a lodgment, even if the wound entirely heals over, the infection may work until the tree dies or becomes hollow. The callus is formed by the cambium tissue or inner bark that lies between bark and wood. The old wood itself takes no part in the healing process, but on the contrary dies and is therefore a menace to the life of the tree. So cut branches as to leave no stub and then use white lead, red lead, oil, grafting wax, creosote, tar, asphalt or any material which completely covers and excludes air and water.

Women of Middle Age

Many distressing Ailments experienced by them are Alleviated by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is Proof by Women who Know.

Lowell, Mass.—"For the last three years I have been troubled with the Change of Life and the bad feelings common at that time. I was in a very nervous condition, with headaches and pain a good deal of the time so I was unfit to do my work. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it has helped me in every way. I am not nearly so nervous, no headache or pain. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best remedy any sick woman can take."—Mrs. MARGARET QUINN, Rear 259 Worthen St., Lowell, Mass.

She Tells Her Friends to Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies.

North Haven, Conn.—"When I was 45 I had the Change of Life which is a trouble all women have. At first it didn't bother me but after a while I got bearing down pains. I called in doctors who told me to try different things but they did not cure my pains. One day my husband came home and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash?' Well, I got them and took about 10 bottles of Vegetable Compound and could feel myself regaining my health. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good. Any one coming to my house who suffers from female troubles or Change of Life, I tell them to take the Pinkham remedies. There are about 20 of us here who think the world of them."—Mrs. FLORENCE IRELLA, Box 197, North Haven, Conn.

SAXON
Strength Economy Service

You Take No Chances in Buying a Saxon

You may buy a Saxon believing it to be the best car in its class and you will get what you pay for.

You may look for longer service, better performance and lower up-keep bills from your Saxon than from any other car of like price. And you will not be disappointed.

If there was any doubt that Saxon cars are the best in their respective divisions it has long since disappeared.

And the proof of this you will find, a thousand-fold over, in the records of Saxon owners—and in the opinion of motor-car buyers in general. Saxon cars have definitely established their superiority in every phase of motor car performance.

And just as surely and decisively as they have proved themselves abler acting cars, have they proved themselves cheaper cars to keep up.

To build cars of such quality and such value clearly reflects the strength and soundness and ability of the Saxon organization.

The business of the Old Colony Laundry at Quincy is increasing by leaps and bounds. But there are reasons for it. Prompt service and satisfactory work are great assets.

The Grocers' and Provisions Dealers' Association met Tuesday evening with Bates & Humphrey at Weymouth Center. A very good supper was enjoyed and some business transacted.

Examine our goods, and learn our prices and terms, that all Joyce Bros. & Co., of Quincy, ask of the Weymouth people. A good place to get your spring clothes.

Mrs. Thomas Roberts has been entertaining William and Mildred Owens of South Weymouth for the past two weeks.

Tuesday evening a concert under the direction of Miss Dorothy Rea, for the benefit of the Epworth League, was held in the vestry. The programme consisted of readings by Mrs. Marjorie Wilson Curtis of Whitman; vocal solos by Miss Ruth Ford of Whitman; violin solos by Miss Catharine Pratt. Mrs. P. H. Lotz and Mrs. Bert Doble pianists.

Philip Bourke of Weymouth is the guest of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John White.

Alice Owens has been kept from school by an attack of chicken pox.

Mrs. Charles Q. Tirrell and baby daughter have returned to their home on Washington street.

The Ever Progressive Adult Bible class of the Porter M E Sunday School held its monthly meeting in the church vestry Wednesday evening. Supper was served at 6.30 o'clock by Mrs. Wilfred Haden, secretary of the class, consisting of rolls, salads of various kinds, chicken pies, coffee, cake and ice cream. Mrs. Irwin Hawes, Mr. Bowdwin Smith, Mr. John Maynard and Mr. Bert Maynard and Rev. J. H. Stutz were guests of the class. After all had been bountifully served the Rev. J. H. Stutz gave a very helpful talk to the class on the subject of "Concentration," after which the usual business was disposed of and all pronounced the evening's programme a grand success.

Charles Turner is ill at his home with tonsillitis.

Rev. P. H. Lotz attended the Sunday School Institute held at Providence, R. I., Thursday and Friday.

Harlow and Co. are to have a big 25 cent sale for the next ten days. Not every thing is sold at 25 cents, but you may be surprised to find some articles quoted so low. Their advertisement in this issue is big enough to be seen. It includes talc powder, face powder, cold creams, toilet soaps, candy and sodas as well as proprietary articles.

Senator Nash voted to sustain the veto of Gov. McCall of the Tercentenary Commission, which was sustained 12 to 20. He was also paired in opposition to the $50,000 bill for Eastern States Exposition at Springfield.

Times must be good in Weymouth. The Gazette and Transcript is unable to obtain any applications for boys to learn the trade. Five dollars a week will be paid, with advance soon.

Frank N. Kittredge.
Frank A. Kittredge passed away May 17 after an illness of five years. He was 61 years of age. He leaves a wife, daughter and two sons.
Frank N. Kittredge was born in Weymouth 61 years ago. His early life was spent in Quincy and Hingham, and the past thirty years in North Weymouth, where he has been a highly respected citizen. For the past five years he has been ill, though only a part of the time has he been confined at home. His care and knowledge of growing both flowers and vegetables have been well known, and his summers during his illness have been full of usefulness. Though of a quiet disposition he made many friends as was evidenced on Sunday when funeral services were held at his late home on Shaw street at 1.30. Dr. C. C. Earle of the Universalist church officiated. There were many beautiful floral pieces. Burial was at the Hingham cemetery where the Old Colony lodge of Odd Fellows, of which he was a member, assembled and conducted their service. Mr. Kittredge leaves a wife, one daughter Louisa, and two sons, Arthur Kittredge of Melrose and Winifred Kittredge of Quincy.

Home Guard Will Begin Duty Sunday

Upon request of the Home Guard Committee, the Selectmen appointed at a special meeting last Friday a list of 204 members of the Home Guard as special police. It was the intention for details from this list to begin guard duty last Sunday, but arrangements could not be made, so that the paid officers have been serving this week. Beginning next Sunday, however, the new "specials" will do the duty without pay.

On Monday the Selectmen added eight more names. The ages average from 21 to 60 or more. Warrants were issued to each.

The Weymouth Planning Board forwarded to the Selectmen a vote adopted May 15, "That persons using vehicles at night on the public highways of the town, be requested to comply with the provisions of Chapter 30 of the Acts of 1916 relative to lights on such vehicles." The board referred the vote to the Chief of Police.

The Selectmen have been notified of hearings to be given by the Public Service Commission to the Bay State Street Railway, one May 25, on petition for six-cent fare universally, and one June 5, on petition for changes in reduced rates for commutation, workmen and school tickets.

Town Treasurer Stetson reported that he had received from George B. Rolf, executor of the estate of Joseph E. Trask, a second payment of $5,600, being two-fifths of $14,000. The first payment was $6,000.

The Superintendent of Streets was advised to treat Middle street, from Washington to Main street, with tarvia.

The Chief of Police was instructed to visit twice a month all places holding common victuallers' and pool licenses to see if they live up to the law.

Two permits were granted to dig clams, and two licenses as common victuallers.

The North Weymouth Yacht Club was granted a license for dances.

Joseph H. McEnroe and Joseph H. Sherman were appointed special police.

A hearing was given the Weymouth Water Department on petition to keep and store gasoline. Granted.

A license was given the Women's Moosehead Legion for entertainments.

Fads And Fancies Of Fashion

For the Business Girl.

Business women have become so accustomed to the blouse and skirt for daily wear that it is almost a uniform to them. But, as warm weather comes and coats may be discarded, the business girl is more than likely to indulge in a change of dress and come out in a one-piece frock. Among them are models especially suited to the big and growing army of women who go to business every day.

Whoever designed the frock shown above had in mind that it needed to be practical as well as smart. For every day wear it will be made in some of the strong new weaves in silk, or in lightweight serge or equally durable mohair. It suggests possibilities in remodeling suits and giving good materials a new lease on life by changing a suit of antiquated style into an up-to-date frock. It is made in two pieces, joined at the waist, under a soft belt of the material. The belt overlaps at the front, one side slipping through a slash in the other, and the ends fasten down with buttons.

Deep pockets at each side provide two style features of the season; the emphasis of the hips, and the use of wide rucks for decoration. The bodice might fasten along the shoulder and under-arm or up the back.

Collar and cuffs of organdie are indispensable in a frock of this kind. They provide the touch of fresh daintiness, that makes the shirtwaist so dear to the heart of women in the work-a-day world. The triple pieces of this set are made without lace or embroidery, having their edges finished with narrow hems, or with hemstitching. One only needs to look at them to sense their charm for summer wear.

The Bridesmaid's Crowning Glory

Here comes the bride, along about this time, with her maids, waiting into the milliner's to discuss the momentous question of their hats. And perhaps the milliner is all ready for her; for hats especially designed have been supplied in plenty by those who welcome each June with a new array of bridal millinery. It is easy enough to make a selection when there is opportunity to see them.

Designers one and all appear to have been captivated by the fitness of georgette crepe for making the loveliest headwear that sun, or electric lights, ever shone on. All the chances are that crepe it will be when the decision is made and everybody pleased. But there are also hats of malines, lace, hair braid and the well-loved leg-horn among candidates for favor.

In the group of three hats shown above, only hats made of crepe (including one of crepe and ribbon) appear. They are sponsored by the best designers so that there is no question as to their good style, and they speak for themselves as to their beauty. At the right a wide-brimmed sailor covered with white crepe has over the brim an overlay made of lengths of narrow ribbon featherstitched together with heavy white silk floss.

At the left another sailor shape, with soft crown tip, makes place for a row of French knots on a narrow silk ribbon about the crown. Four camellias, with white foliage, are set, at a special advantage, on the brim. Both these hats might be made in a light color.

The lovely hat at the center is in pale pink and has a wreath of small, plastic flowers across it and a bride and ties of narrow velvet ribbon in orchid pink.

Julia Bottomley

Gowned for War.

Now that it seems likely that women may be engaged in the preparedness campaign an enterprising firm has devised suits of khaki whose lines are particularly appropriate for drilling, hiking and other military incidents. A woman may have a suit consisting of coat and skirt, or she may acquire merely the camp skirt to be worn with the middie blouse. There also is a cavalry skirt to go with a smart, mannish shirtwaist. All of these garments are made with the object of service. They can be worn for a considerable time without showing soil, and then they may be laundered, if care is taken in the process. It is also possible for the woman motor driver, the Red Cross assistant and those who may aim to enter the cavalry or infantry corps to get suitable uniforms.

For Straw Hats.

To keep your new sailor, or any other straw hat having a flat crown and brim, fresh and unfaded looking up to the end of the season, brush it occasionally with ammonia water (about a teaspoonful to a cupful of water) and while still damp lay over it a dry cloth, and press with a moderate heat iron. The ammonia restores the color and the moisture and pressure will give it its original stiffness.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Beauty seen is never lost, God's colors all are fast; The glory of this sunset heaven Into my soul has passed.

MORE GOOD DISHES.

A fruit salad for company, which will serve 35 people, is the following:

Frozen Fruit Salad.—Take a can each of pineapple, white cherries, pears and peaches; cut them all the size of half a cherry, add two oranges, the juice of one lemon, a fourth of a grapefruit, a pint of mayonnaise and a pint of cream, whipped. Put the mixture into the freezer and stir until frozen; pack in quart molds and let stand an hour or more. Serve cut in slices, with lettuce hearts and French dressing made with lemon juice.

Choice Popovers.—Break three eggs into a bowl; add half a teaspoonful of salt and one cupful each of milk and sifted flour. Beat until smooth with an egg beater. Have ready a hot muffin pan; butter it well, fill the cups two-thirds full of the mixture and put into a hot oven. Bake 35 minutes, decreasing the heat after the popovers are well puffed.

Vassar's Delight.—Soak a fourth of a pound of prunes overnight and cook until tender in the same water. Remove the stones and cut the flesh in small pieces; add coconut to equal half the measure of prunes, a little coconut milk and two tablespoonfuls of orange marmalade. When boiling hot stir in three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and set the dish in hot water. Beat two tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream, add two egg yolks one after the other and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; stir and cook in the hot mixture until the egg is set. Have ready a flaky puff paste or rich plain paste, baked over small tins. Fill the shells with the prune mixture. Beat the whites of the eggs very light, add four tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and pipe the meringue above the filling; dredge with sugar and bake until firm in a moderate oven. Sprinkle with browned coconut or shredded browned almonds. Serve hot or cold.

A few green peas left from a previous meal, if washed to remove the sauce and then mixed with peas and celery, with a bit of onion and served with French dressing, will make a most satisfactory salad.

Cress With Cucumber.—Slice a peeled cucumber in thin slices and let stand in cold water for a half hour. Dry in a cloth and arrange a few slices on a bed of carefully washed cress, sprinkle with chopped chives and parsley and pour over French dressing. Serve at once as the dressing wilts the salad.

Who hath a book,
Hath but to read,
And he may be
A king indeed.

His kingdom is
The inkwell—
All this is his
Who hath a book.

EVERY DAY LUNCHEON.

When cooking eggs, to make a few serve a large number, use cold boiled rice, two or three tablespoonfuls to the egg. If the eggs are scrambled, using milk and butter. Mix all the ingredients and serve hot at once. Uncooked rice may also serve as an economy with eggs. Put two tablespoonfuls of rice in an omelet pan with two tablespoonfuls of butter, cook until the rice is brown, then add a little water and let it simmer until the rice is tender, now add the eggs, stir and cook until well cooked and serve hot after seasoning well.

Egg Soup.—To one quart of boiling stock add a grated onion, half a teaspoonful of celery seed and salt and pepper to taste. Boil five minutes, add a half cupful of boiled rice, when hot take from the fire, add the yolks of two eggs well beaten, and serve at once.

Prunes and raisins boiled together, using half of each, sweeten, save the juice, add to sage and cook until clear, then serve very cold.

Deviled Crabs.—To one can of minced crab meat or two cupfuls of freshly boiled crab meat add the yolks of two hard-cooked eggs, mashed fine, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, paprika and the juice of half a lemon, a teaspoonful of dry mustard, and a few drops of tabasco sauce. Add enough bread crumbs to make a paste. Fill crab shells with the mixture, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until brown. Ramekins may be used in place of shells.

Beef Olives.—Take slices of rare roast beef and roll each around a thin slice of bacon which has been fried until transparent. Bind with twine and boil for five minutes. Remove the string and add some bacon fat to the roast beef gravy, season with tomato catchup or Worcestershire, boil up once and pour over the olives. Serve very hot.

Marquise Pudding.—Cut squares of angel food baked in a sheet, sprinkle with chopped nuts and cover with whipped cream. Candied fruit may be added to make it more delicious.

Who hath a book,
Should thank the Lord,
Because he may
A book afford;

And in his prayer
This clause is due,
"Lord bless the men
Who write books too!"

EARLY VEGETABLES AS GREENS AND SALADS.

At least once a week when these vegetables first appear in season cook cowslip and dandelion greens. The young, tender, blanched dandelions make most delicious salad served with minced onions and French dressing.

Beet greens, spinach and Swiss chard are all most wholesome and may be converted into attractive salads after being well cooked. Watercress is one of the most appetizing of greens, if well washed in salted water to remove any insects it may be served simply with salt as a garnish for chops or with French dressing as a salad.

Grapefruit Salad.—Separate the sections of grapefruit, using care not to lose the juice, mix with nuts of any kind and serve with French dressing on lettuce leaves. The juice may be used with the oil, with a little lemon juice or vinegar to make the dressing, so that nothing is wasted.

Birmingham Salad.—Arrange head lettuce with two slices of choice pineapple, with a ball of cream cheese in the center of each slice. It is well to cut the pineapple, making it easier for eating, yet the arrangement may be the same. Use the following dressing: Heat a half cupful of the pineapple juice and the juice of half a lemon in a double boiler. Beat the yolks of four eggs, add a tablespoonful of sugar, and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, gradually beat in the hot liquid and return the whole to cook over hot water until thickened. When cold and ready to use add whipped cream to make of the consistency desired.

Spring Salad.—Make nests of shredded lettuce and arrange on these a slice of cucumber, a few slices of radish, unpeeled, a sprinkling of chopped chives or finely shredded green onion, serve with French dressing. Cress may be used in place of the lettuce.

Orange and Chestnuts with Celery.—Orange and chestnuts with celery, or orange mint and celery to serve with lamb makes a good combination for salad.

She knows a dozen languages
And that is much too many—
She talks in every one of them
And doesn't think in any.

GOOD COMPANY DISHES.

Chop all together rather coarsely two large stalks of celery, two green peppers, and one onion, fry slowly in two tablespoonfuls of butter until tender. Serve with steak.

Tuna Fish Omelet.—Prepare half a dozen eggs, beating the yolks and whites separately and adding a tablespoonful of cold water for each egg, season with a teaspoonful of salt, a fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper and three-fourths of a cupful of tuna fish minced fine. Fold the fish into the whites and proceed as in the making of a plain omelet.

Chicken and Mushroom Pie.—Butter a baking dish and put a layer of chicken meat in the bottom, cover with mushrooms which should be diced as well as the chicken, then add a few potato balls, season and add a layer of hard cooked eggs chopped, sprinkle with minced parsley and cover with a white sauce. Then after all the ingredients are used in layers, cover with small rich biscuit and bake. Use four cupfuls of diced chicken, one pint of mushrooms, one and a half pints of potatoes, six eggs, one and a half tablespoonfuls of minced parsley, a quart of thin white sauce, bake about 30 minutes. This will serve eight people.

Club Salad.—Allow two or three leaves of lettuce for each salad, one and one-half cupfuls of shredded chicken (cold, cooked), twelve slices of bacon cooked and diced, three tomatoes, mayonnaise and toast points with parsley for the garnishing. Arrange the lettuce, on each a slice or two of tomato, then the fried bacon on these and a spoonful of mayonnaise and on top the chicken, more mayonnaise and a sprig of parsley. Garnish with six tiny toast points for each salad, placing them spoke-fashion on the plates.

Pimento Cheese.—Drain a small can of pimentos from the oil, chop fine, add a tablespoonful of onion juice and a tablespoonful of minced pickles and a half-pound of grated cheese. Mix well, add salt and red pepper and serve with crackers or as a sandwich filling.

Wild Food in England.

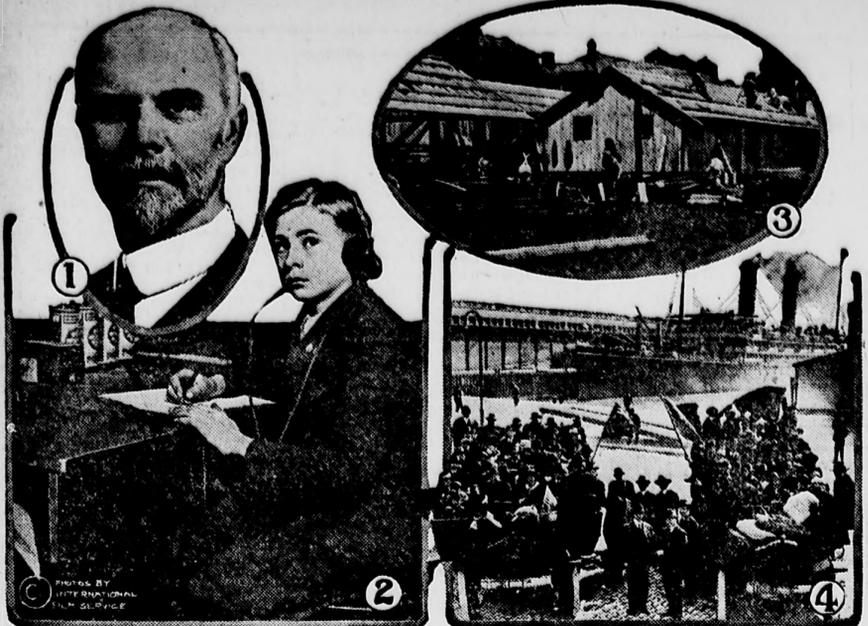

Woman food experts have started a country-wide campaign to teach British housewives what food economy means and how to use the neglected resources in England's "wild food." The women have started a campaign after the fashion of an electrifying tour in the United States. They are making speeches in theaters, public halls and from soap boxes on street corners.

The possibilities of "wild food" are declared by one expert to be so great that country people and the inhabitants of small towns can supply two-thirds of their needs for at least three-quarters of the year from the fields, woods and streams of their immediate vicinity. This expert declares that there are more than 290 kinds of food in the British isles which nature produces unassisted. They include birds and their eggs, edible frogs, fishes, some insects and insect products—such as honey of half a dozen wild bee species, more than 30 vegetables, salad plants and herbs, the same number of flowers and fruits, seven species of seaweeds and nearly 50 esculent fungi.

Ambergris.

Ambergris is a gray, waxlike substance believed to be the product of some disease in the sperm whale. It is sometimes found floating on the surface of tropical seas and is also discovered in the intestines of the sperm whale when captured. Modern scientists have found it impossible to duplicate the pungent and penetrating odor of ambergris. Fifty dollars an ounce is a price that has often been paid for this comparatively rare product of commerce.

ITALIAN WAR MISSION TO UNITED STATES

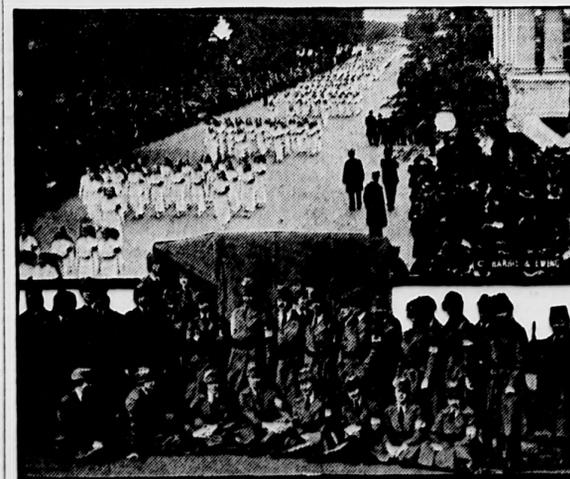

Italy's war mission to this country arrived quietly and is now busy in Washington. Those members in the illustration are, left to right: Alvise Bragadini of the transportation department; General Gugliemetti, military attache; Enrico Ariotta, minister of maritime and railway transportation of Italy and head of the commission; Commander Vannutelli, representing the navy, G. Pardo of the department of industry and commerce, and Gaetano Pietra of the agricultural department.

SENDING WORD TO THEIR COUNTRYMEN

The French along the western front have devised a clever method of keeping the French people in the territory captured by the Germans informed of the progress of the war. The French aeronautical service uses the small balloons shown in the picture for this purpose. Newspapers and pamphlets are tied to the balloons, which are practically invisible at a great height.

RED CROSS PARADE IN WASHINGTON

The new American Red Cross building in Washington dedicated the other day, and a part of the exercises was the parade of 1,000 women in Red Cross uniforms, which was reviewed by the president. This parade is shown in the upper part of the illustration. Below is a group of Washington society women who have been training as motor ambulance drivers.

Sawdust in Concrete.

Nails can be driven into concrete if sawdust has been added to the mixture. The proportions of one part of cement, two of sand, and three-quarters of sawdust will produce a concrete in which nails will hold.

The addition of sawdust appears to increase the tendency of concrete to absorb water, but the application of waterproof paint helps to eliminate this difficulty.

Concrete of these proportions is quite apt to crumble and will not stand much usage. It should be used only in floors and other places where it is to be covered with a protecting surface of boards or flooring of some sort.

To Break Up Big Ranches.

In California the farms originally were the old "Spanish land grants," usually of enormous extent. In a fashion these great holdings—validated by the American government when California came into the Union—have remained as ranches. Today the people are learning that both for taxation and production, small farms are better, and a movement to bring this about is under way.

Rumor Has It

That, a Patriotic Doctor Purchased a little pig Placed it in a pen so strong Morning came and piggy was gone. Detectives came to town that day What they did we cannot say. If piggy was found perhaps she'd squeal And tell just who was in the deal. 'Twas rather tough to spend your dough And not have a single thing to show But, cheer up doctor, no pig to feed Use the money and buy some seed. Dig up your lawn, dig it deep, Bury the seed and while you sleep, Perhaps a watch from our Home Guard Will keep an eye on your back yard,

That last Sunday was one grand day and gave many a touch of the beach fever.

That it costs less to screen sand at the pit than it does to rake the stones from the streets after spreading the sand. Stones do not make an auto's tires last any longer and they look like time laying around.

That there are still some who did not clean up their yards last week. Remember your yard may spoil the looks of your neighbors'.

That the reason there are so many pessimists in "our" town is because they never go out of town to see how other towns do things, and will not be shown by those who have. Pessimism is a disease that can be cured in some but there are many hopeless cases in Weymouth. Too bad.

That between the "don't waste" orders from Washington and our pig industry, the poor old garbage pail will go hungry.

That another wallop was handed to some body last week by our country cousin, R. E. Porter the 23d. Some say he is getting paid for it and some say he cannot help it. We say, be careful and don't start something you can't finish.

That another "Decoration Day" is about here. The last of the "boys" of '61 are rather gray, never-the-less, more than one has offered to do his bit for Uncle Sam with the boys of '17. They know what war means and they know what "Decoration Day" means. As they pass you on Wednesday take your hat off to those heroes and then think seriously of what is before us. We must win.

That we do not hear of many Weymouth men applying for those Government gold bonds. Weymouth was always there in time of need and we hope she will be up in front this time. Do your mite and do it now.

That in the daily list of enlistments we hardly ever see the name of a son of Weymouth. This is a duty that must not be put on the other fellow. Able bodied youths must fight when the country calls. Why wait to be conscripted? A few of our boys, we are glad to say, have enlisted, but rather a small percentage for such a town with a reputation won by the eager enlistment during the Civil War. Can the old fighting blood be on the wane?

That the stock of seeds is holding out well and our dealers report phenomenal sales. What are you planting?

That Chauffeur Bacon receives many compliments on the spick and span condition of Combination 3. Yes, a good man in the right place.

That our new cafe at Washington square looks rather inviting from the outside, and they say that a trial of the wares of the enterprising proprietor will convince one that the food served goes "to the spot." What do you say if we try it and encourage this man?

That Weymouth is ready for the daylight saving plan.

That any rumors we do not hear of may be interesting reading, so if you get hold of any live ones send them in. Most people are interested in rumors so pass them along and let us all in.

That Representative Spinney is putting up a great fight for the new Quincy avenue bridge.

That because our two columns of Business Directory is full we can take no more Ads. Wrong again. We have decided to devote a third column if necessary for this feature, so get in line and be one of the live ones.

Ringling Bros. Circus.

Announcement is made that for the week of Monday, June 4, Ringling Bros. circus will give afternoon and night performances at Boston, at the Huntington avenue ground.

The famous showmen are this season presenting an all new and wonderful program. The tremendous fairland spectacle, "Cinderella," will appeal to both young and old. It is easily the biggest spectacle Ringling Bros. have ever staged and its glorious "Ballet of the Fairies," with 300 dancing girls, is in itself worth going many miles to see. An entire trained animal show has been made a part of the main tent program this season. The menagerie now numbers 1099 wild animals. The elephants, including "Big Bingo," the earth's largest pachyderm, have been increased to 41 and almost 800 horses are carried. There will be 60 clowns and a big free three-mile street parade show day morning.

BOON TO CAR SALESMEN.

Salesmen for every line of automobiles have discovered a boon in the Smith Form-a-Truck. "The Smith Form-a-Truck attachment, more than any other factor, is aiding the car salesman to surmount that old obstacle—the partly used machine," states W. J. Bess, the local representative of the Smith Motor Truck Corporation. "Heretofore, when a dealer handling one line desired to sell his car to an owner of another make, he faced the problem of the disposition of the prospects' old machine. There was the necessary dickering to be done and an inevitable sacrifice in the turning in of the old car upon the new. All the difficulty is removed through the agency of the Smith Form-a-Truck.

"The salesman needs only to suggest that the prospective buyer take his machine to the nearest Smith Motor truck service station and have it converted into a commercial car. In practically all instances, the power plants in these machines are capable of developing even greater power than that of the new Ford, so that his converted vehicle will have a long and useful life as a truck and will be in as great a demand as the new truck.

"By this method the owner of the used car makes a useful article out of an almost dead loss, if he is in the transportation business, and if he is not, he has a machine which he can sell quickly and at a higher price than would be the case if he had not converted his antiquated and decrepit car into a producing asset."

Governors Proclamation.

Governor McCall, in accordance with the Presidents Proclamation, has issued a Proclamation for Massachusetts for June 5. He admonishes all male persons, resident in Massachusetts, who shall have attained their 21st birthday and who shall not have attained their 31st birthday on the fifth day of June, 1917, except as aforesaid, to appear on said day at the registration place in their respective precincts and there to register in accordance with the Proclamation of the President of May 18, 1917.

"Attention is called to the fact that Section 5 of said act of Congress provides that any person who shall wilfully fail or refuse to present himself for registration or to submit thereto, as therein provided, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year, and shall thereupon be duly registered.

"And I hereby call upon all police officers within this Commonwealth to assist to the best of their ability, the officers charged with the duty of conducting the registration and to report without delay to the proper registration boards the names of any persons known by them to have failed to register themselves when liable to do so.

"This process of registration has been established by the National Congress as a means of securing the lists out of which are to be drawn the armies of the country in a great war. I deem it of the utmost importance that the registration in the Commonwealth shall be conducted in an orderly and efficient manner in order that our registration may be made as nearly complete as possible on the day fixed by the President's Proclamation, to the end that Massachusetts may now, as always heretofore, be found in the front rank among the States in responding to the calls that are made by the Nation in its time of peril.

"I therefore urge all the people of the Commonwealth to cooperate so far as they are able and assist the officers who have in charge the preparation of the registration lists."

The Value of a Public Library.
Editor Gazette and Transcript:
Few people realize the value of a Public Library in a town. This is true especially among the young people. They look at it too often as a place where they can get light fiction to read and then grumble if the latest novel isn't in, which in nine cases out of ten is never heard of after six months or a year.
Then again they think of it as a place to go and chat with their friends, regardless of those who know the value of a library and go there to study.
To a person seeking an education the library is a necessity. Here, in our own Tuft's Library which we are very apt to think does not contain a very large collection of books, we can find many useful books on nearly any subject.
I find that if the particular book that I want is not in the library, the librarian or her assistants are very willing to try and procure it. Sometimes an equally helpful book is in the library, and as the librarian is always ready with suggestions we should be glad to receive them as she is open to suggestions from us.
We cannot expect a librarian to know about every book that was ever published, for it is more than probable that we never heard of some, until they were brought to our attention by teacher or professor.
We, people of Weymouth, should be more appreciative of our library (perhaps I should say libraries although I am not acquainted with Fogg's) for if they should be suddenly taken from us we would then realize the necessity and the good of a public library.
Then, again, we owe some thought and appreciation to the librarians who are willing to give their time and knowledge to us. Too often we hear the remark, "They are paid for it." Even so, would we, in their places do as well? I am afraid not.
OLIVE D. SYLVESTER,
Boston University, '19.

Big Figures.
Some idea may be had of the magnitude of at least one branch of our Public Service Corporations from the following figures compiled by the United States Census Bureau.
There are approximately 1,300 gas companies in the country supplying gas service to nearly 40,000,000 people in 4,600 cities and towns.
Gas companies annually require in their operations 6,000,000 tons of coal, 1,000,000 tons of coke, 750,000,000 gallons of oil at an approximate expenditure of over $65,000,000.
Out of this crude raw material the gas companies, by employing 60,000 persons, turn out and distribute annually over 200,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas used in over 1,000 different ways in the home, and for manufacturing purposes.
It takes 60,000 miles of street mains to deliver the gas to its consumers.
There are probably 3,000,000 gas ranges a/one in use in the United States, showing the almost universal use of gas for cooking purposes in our country.
Immense sums of money are spent annually by the manufacturers of gas appliances in perfecting their product and bringing it up to a high standard of efficiency. Service to the consumer is the modern slogan under which the gas companies, and in fact all other utility corporations such as the electric, street railway, telephone, and telegraph interests are endeavoring to build up their business.
Owing to the continually increasing cost in all staple commodities, foods, coal, and oil, gas is rapidly becoming the logical and most economical fuel for universal use.
Gas companies will always be found willing to give every assistance possible and the public is reminded of this fact and urged to consult more freely with its local company when in need of advice or service.
The Old Colony Gas Company serving the South Shore from Braintree to Whitman has in 5,000 meters and 4,000 gas ranges, using about 300,000 cubic feet of gas each day.
Nearly every heating process used in factory or home can be accomplished with this modern fuel.

Where Are My Children?
Three months of phenomenal business has been registered by "Where Are My Children?", that daring photo play that has been filling the Majestic Theatre in Boston, four times daily during that time; and still the interest is unabated; still the throngs fill the lobby of the theatre and there is always a line at box-office.
"Where Are My Children?" will be seen at the Bates Opera House Wednesday, May 30, three performances.
The particular heart interest in "Where Are My Children?" is the inherent love of children and the yearning of the childless for the caresses of baby hands, the prattle of childish voices.
No children are admitted.

Boston Theatre.
Two brand new features, never before seen in Boston, will be shown for the first time in Boston exclusively at the Boston Theatre the week of May 28, June Caprice, Boston's own favorite star, in her new William Fox five-part production, "A Small Town Girl," and Raoul Walsh's great drama, "The Silent Lie," with an all-star cast, will be the two principal features. "A Small Town Girl" is a delightful comedy drama with a strong touch of romance, Miss Caprice is one of the most charming and attractive juvenile stars on the picture screen, and her work in "A Small Town Girl" measures up to the high standard of her previous offerings on the William Fox program.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.
Langdon McCormick's London Coliseum sensation, "The Forest Fire," in three stupendous scenes with Sylvia Bidwell and a company of 30 people, will head the vaudeville bill offered at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of May 28. "The Forest Fire" is a thrilling drama of the great Canadian timberlands, surrounding the most realistic and awe inspiring forest fire spectacle ever seen upon the stage, the whole tremendous effect being produced entirely by electrical phenomena, and absolutely devoid of peril. The play is in three scenes and two tableaux, showing in turn the interior of the telephone station at Seven Oak, Canada; the railroad station thirty miles away across the mountains; and the burning forest, with a life-sized locomotive rushing through the forest, while great trees crash to the ground and narrowly miss the engine and occupants in their course.

THE REAL MAN

By FRANCIS LYNDE

(Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons)

The Hidden Power

Most of us never learn what great powers lie undeveloped within our mind and body. We go through life working at about fifty per cent pressure. Unless there come a crisis which calls out to duty the last ounce of bodily strength and the most acute mental energy, we go to the end of life's string knowing not how much of the Creator's gift we have neglected and let go to waste.

"The Real Man" is the story of a young fellow who had the good fortune to face a real crisis when he was twenty-five years old. It called out his entire reserve of strength and courage. For 25 years there existed a smug person, hide-bound, soft, shrewd. Then came the blow-off! The real man stepped out of that smug disguise and showed the stuff that was in him. It was great stuff, too. All of you will enjoy "The Real Man." It will entertain. It will provoke serious thought. It may lead you to examine the inside of your shell of life in search of the real man or the real woman. It may help you to discover a way to work at higher pressure than fifty per cent—and if you do, you'll know the secret that has made men famous throughout the world's history.

CHAPTER I.

Bank Cashier and Society Man.

It was ten minutes of eight when J. Montague Smith had driven his runabout to his garage and was hastening across to his suite of bachelor apartments in the Kincaid terrace. There was reason for the haste. It was his regular evening for calling upon Miss Verda Richlander, and time pressed. The provincial beautitudes had chosen a fit subject for their illustration in the young cashier of the Lawrenceville Bank and Trust. From his earliest recollections Montague Smith had lived the life of the well-behaved and the conventional. He had his niche in the Lawrenceville social structure, and another in the small-city business world, and he filled both to his own satisfaction and to the admiration of all and sundry. Ambitions, other than to take promotions in the bank as they came to him, and, eventually, to make money enough to satisfy the demands which Josiah Richlander might make upon a prospective son-in-law, had never troubled him. An extremely well-balanced young man his fellow townsmen called him, one of whom it might safely be predicted that he would go straight-forwardly on his way to reputable middle life and old age; moderate in all things, impulsive in none.

Even in the affair with Miss Richlander sound common sense and sober second thought had been made to stand in the room of superintendence. Smith did not know what it was to be violently in love; though he was a charter member of the Lawrenceville Athletic club and took a certain pride in keeping himself physically fit and up to the mark, it was not his habit to be violent in anything. Lawrenceville expected its young men and young women to marry and "settle down," and J. Montague Smith, figuring in a modest way as a leader in the Lawrenceville youngest set, was far too conservative to break with the tradition, even if he had wished to. Miss Richlander was desirable in many respects. Her father's ample fortune had not come early enough or rapidly enough to spoil her. In moments when his feeling for her achieved its nearest approach to sentiment the conservative young man perceived what a graciously resplendent figure she would make as the mistress of her own house and the hostess at her own table.

Smith snapped the switch of the electric and began to lay out his evening clothes, methodically but with a certain air of calm deliberation, inserting the buttons in the waistcoat, rousing the hose of the proper thinness, rummaging a virgin tie out of its box in the top dressing-case drawer.

It was in the search for the tie that he turned up a mute reminder of his nearest approach to any edge of the real chasm of sentiment: a small glove, somewhat soiled and use-worn, with a tiny rip in one of the fingers. It had been a full year since he had seen the glove or its owner, whom he had met only once, and that entirely by chance. The girl was a visitor from the West, the daughter of a ranchman, he had understood; and she had been stopping over with friends in a neighboring town. Smith had driven over one evening in his runabout to make a call upon the daughters of the house, and had found a lawn party in progress, with the western visitor as the guest of honor.

Acquaintance—such an acquaintance as can be achieved in a short social hour—had followed. At all points the bewitching young woman from the wilderness had proved to be a mocking critic of the commonplace conventions, and had been moved to pillory the same in the person of her momentary entertainer. Some thrills this young person from the wide horizons had stirred in him were his only excuse for stealing her glove. There remained now nothing of the clashing encounter at the lawn party save the soiled glove, a rather obscure memory of a face too piquant and attractive to be cheapened by the word "pretty;" these and a thing she had said at the moment of parting: "Yes; I am going back home very soon. I don't like your smug middle West civilization, Mr. Smith—it smothers me. I don't wonder that it breeds men who live and grow up and die without ever having a chance to find themselves."

Some day, perhaps, he would tell Verda Richlander of the sharp-tongued little Western beauty. Verda—and all sensible people—would smile at the idea that he, John Montague Smith, was of those who had not "found" themselves, or that the finding—by which he had understood the Western young woman to mean something radical and upsetting—could in any way be forced upon a man who was old enough and sane enough to know his own lengths and breadths and depths.

He was stripping off his coat to dress when he saw two letters which had evidently been thrust under the door during his absence at supper time. One of the envelopes was plain, with his name scribbled on it in pencil. The other bore a typewritten address with the card of Westfall Foundries company in its upper left-hand corner. Smith opened Carter Westfall's letter first and read it with a little twinge of shocked surprise, as one reads the story of a brave battle fought and lost.

"Dear Monty," it ran. "I have been trying to reach you by phone off and on ever since the adjournment of our stockholders' meeting at three o'clock. We, of the little inside pool, have got it where the chicken got the ax. Richlander had more proxies up his sleeve than we thought he had, and he has put the steam roller over us to a finish. He was able to vote 55 per cent of the stock straight, and you know what that means: a consolidation with the Richlander foundry trust, and the hearse and white horses for yours truly and the minority stockholders. We're dead—dead and buried.

"Of course, I stand to lose everything, but that isn't all of it. I'm horribly anxious for fear you'll be tangled up personally in some way in the matter of that last loan of $100,000 that I got from the Bank and Trust. You will remember you made the loan while Dunham was away, and I am certain you told me you had his consent to take my Foundries stock as collateral. That part of it is all right, but, as matters stand, the stock isn't worth the paper it is printed on, and—well, to tell the bald truth, I'm scared of Dunham. Brickley, the Chicago lawyer they have brought down here, tells me that your bank is behind the consolidation deal, and if that is so, there is going to be a bank loss to show up on my paper, and Dunham will carefully cover his tracks for the sake of the bank's standing.

"It is a hideous mess, and it has occurred to me that Dunham can put you in bad, if he wants to. When you made that $100,000 loan, you forgot—and I forgot for the moment—that you own ten shares of Westfall Foundries in your own name. If Dunham wants to stand from under, this might be used against you. You must get rid of that stock, Monty, and do it quick. Transfer the ten shares to me, dating the transfer back to Saturday. I still have the stock books in my hands, and I'll make the entry in the record and date it to fit. This may look a little crooked on the surface, but it's your salvation, and we can't stop to split hairs when we've just been shot full of holes.

"WESTFALL."

Smith folded the letter mechanically and thrust it into his pocket. Carter Westfall was his good friend, and the cashier had tried, unofficially, to dissuade Westfall from borrowing after he had admitted that he was going to use the money in an attempt to buy up the control of his own company's stock. Smith was thinking of the big bank loss and the hopeless ruin of Carter Westfall when he tore the second envelope across and took out the inclosed slip of scratch-paper. It was a note from the president and it was dated within the hour. Mr. Dunham was back in Lawrenceville earlier than expected, and the note had been written at the bank. It was a curt summons: the cashier was wanted, at once.

At the moment, Smith did not connect the summons with the Westfall cataclysm, or with any other outward thing. Mr. Watrous Dunham had a habit of dropping in and out unexpectedly. Also, he had the habit of sending for his cashier or any other member of the banking force at whatever hour the notion seized him. Smith went to the telephone and called up the Richlander house. The promptness with which the multimillionaire's daughter came to the phone was an intimation that his ring was not entirely unexpected.

"This is Montague," he said, when Miss Richlander's mellifluous "Main four six eight—Mr. Richlander's residence" came over the wire. Then: "What are you going to think of a man who calls you up merely to beg off?" he asked.

Miss Richlander's reply was merciful and he was permitted to go on and explain. "I'm awfully sorry, but it can't very well be helped, you know. Mr. Dunham has returned, and he wants me at the bank. I'll be up a little later on, if I can break away, and you'll let me come. . . . Thank you, ever so much. Goodby."

The Lawrenceville Bank and Trust, lately installed in its new marble-veneered quarters, was only four squares distant. As he was approaching the corner, Smith saw that there were only two lights in the bank, one in the vault corridor and another in the railed-off open space in front which held the president's desk and his own. Through the big plate-glass windows he could see Mr. Dunham. The president was apparently at work, his portly figure filling the padded swing-chair. He had one elbow on the desk, and the fingers of the uplifted hand were thrust into his thick mop of hair.

Smith had his own keys and he let himself in quietly through the door on the side street. The night-watchman's chair stood in its accustomed place in the vault corridor, but it was empty. To a suspicious person the empty chair might have had its significance; but Montague Smith was not suspicious. The obvious conclusion was that Mr. Dunham had sent the watchman forth upon some errand; and the motive needed not to be tagged as ulterior.

Without meaning to be particularly noiseless, Smith—rubber heels on tiled floor assisting—was unlatching the gate in the counter railing before his superior officer heard him and looked up. There was an irritable note in the president's greeting.

"Oh, it's you, at last, is it?" he rasped. "You have taken your own good time about coming. It's a half-hour and more since I sent that note to your room."

CHAPTER II.

Metastasis.

Smith drew out the chair from the stenographer's table and sat down. Like the cashiers of many little-city banks, he was only a salaried man, and the president rarely allowed him to forget the fact. None the less, his boy-

"I Am Not Going to Do What You Want."

ish gray eyes were reflecting just a shade of the militant antagonism in Mr. Watrous Dunham's when he said: "I was dining at the Country club with a friend, and I didn't go to my rooms until a few minutes ago."

The president sat back in the big mahogany swing-chair. His face, with the cold, protrusive eyes, the heavy lips, and the dewlap lower law, was the face of a man who shoots to kill.

"I suppose you've heard the news about Westfall?"

Smith nodded.

"Then you also know that the bank stands to lose a cold hundred thousand on that loan you made him?"

The young man in the stenographer's chair knew now very well why the night-watchman had been sent away. Smith saw the solid foundations of his small world—the only world he had ever known—crumbling to a threatened dissolution.

"You may remember that I advised against the making of that loan when Westfall first spoke of it," he said, after he had mastered the premonitory chill of panic. "It was a bad risk—for him and for us."

"I suppose you won't deny that the loan was made while I was away in New York," was the challenging rejoinder.

"It was. But you gave your sanction before you went East."

The president twisted his chair to face the objector and brought his palm down with a smack upon the desk-slide.

"No!" he stormed. "What I told you to do was to look up his collateral; and you took a snap judgment and let him have the money! Westfall is your friend, and you are a stockholder in his bankrupt company. You took a chance for your own hand and put the bank in the hole. Now I'd like to ask what you are going to do about it."

Smith looked up quickly. Somewhere inside of him the carefully erected walls of use and custom were tumbling in strange ruins and out of the debris another structure, formless as yet, but obstinately sturdy, was rising.

"I am not going to do what you want me to do, Mr. Dunham—step in and see your convenient scapegoat," he said, wondering a little in his inner recesses how he was finding the sheer brutal man-courage to say such a thing to the president of the Lawrenceville Bank and Trust. "I suppose you have reasons of your own for wishing to shift the responsibility for this particular loss to my shoulders. But whether you have or haven't, I decline to accept it."

The president tilted his chair and locked his hands over one knee.

"It isn't a question of shifting the responsibility, Montague," he said, dropping the bullying weapon to take up another. "The loan was made in my absence. You have taken the bank's money to bolster up a falling concern in which you are a stockholder. Go to any lawyer in Lawrenceville—the best one you can find—and he'll tell you exactly where you stand."

While the big clock over the vault entrance was slowly ticking off a full half-minute the young man whose future had become so suddenly and so threateningly involved neither moved nor spoke, but his silence was no measure of the turmoil of conflicting emotions and passions that were rending him.

"I may not prove quite the easy mark that your plan seems to prefigure, Mr. Dunham," he returned at length, trying to say it calmly. "Just what are you expecting me to do?"

"Now you are talking more like a grown man," was the president's crusty admission. "You are in a pretty bad boat, Montague, and that is why I sent for you tonight."

"Well?" said the younger man.

"You can see how it will be. If I can say to the directors that you have already resigned—and if you are not where they can too easily lay hands on you—they may not care to push the charge against you. There is a train west at ten o'clock. If I were in your place, I should pack a couple of suitcases and take it. That is the only safe thing for you to do. If you need any ready money—"

It was at this point that J. Montague Smith rose up out of the stenographer's chair and buttoned his coat.

"If I need any ready money," he repeated slowly, advancing a step toward the president's desk. "That is where you gave yourself away, Mr. Dunham. You authorized that loan, and did it because you were willing to use the bank's money to put Carter Westfall in the hole so deep that he could never climb out. Now, it seems, you are willing to bribe the only dangerous witness. I don't need money badly enough to sell my good name for it. I shall stay right here in Lawrenceville and fight it out with you."

The president turned abruptly to his desk and his hand sought the row of electric bell-pushes. With a finger resting upon the one marked "police," he said: "There isn't any room for argument, Montague. You can have one more minute in which to change your mind. If you stay, you'll begin your fight from the inside of the county jail."

Now there had been nothing in John Montague Smith's well-ordered quarter century of boyhood, youth, and business manhood to tell him how to cope with the crude and savage emergency which he was confronting. But in the granted minute of respite something within him, a thing as primitive and elemental as the crisis with which it was called upon to grapple, shook itself awake. He stepped quickly across the intervening space and stood under the shaded desk light within arm's reach of the man in the big swing-chair.

"You have it all cut and dried, even to the setting of the police trap, haven't you?" he gritted, hardly recognizing his own voice. "You meant to hang me first and try your own case with the directors afterward. Mr. Dunham, I know you better than you think I do; you are not only a crook—you are a yellow-livered coward, as well! You don't dare to press that button!"

While he was saying it, the president had half risen, and the hand which had been hovering over the bell-pushes shot suddenly under the piled papers in the corner of the desk. When it came out it was gripping the weapon which is never very far out of reach in a bank.

The next installment tells you how Mr. Dunham got the surprise of his crooked life. And J. Montague Smith came to know quickly the value of using all his latent power.

GAME FISHING

By DIXIE CARROLL
Author of LAKE and STREAM GAME FISHING

SPOONS AND SPINNERS.

My Dear Buck:

You wonder where the spoon gets its big drag with the fishermen; well, old top, for trolling and casting, the old reliable spoon is probably more generally used than any other kind of lure. You can check this up in your memory book, it often gets the fish when other lures fail to coax the big fins out of the wet.

Of course the spoon don't look like any natural bait, nor does it appear to the beginner as a particularly attractive feed for a hungry fish, but it does the one thing necessary in the fishing game, and that is, it attracts the fish. After you have had a spoon bent double by an over-zealous fish trying to inhale it, you will realize that it is sure some attractor.

Accidental Discovery of Spoon.

Way back in your A, B, C days, so piscatorial historians claim, an old sour-dough was washing his one spoon and plate after a repast of Johnny-cake and bacon, when by accident the spoon flopped into the water and did a salome down to the bottom. As the spoon zig-zagged down through the water he noticed the quick, sharp flashes of light reflected from the bowl of the spoon, and at the same time a lake trout getting the light flashes, made a lunge for the spoon, dulled his teeth on it and beat it. Thanks to the old "hard-panner" and his ability to assimilate an idea, we have the legion of spoon baits today. He rescued the spoon, cut off the bowl, bored a hole in each end, linked a hook in one end and a line in the other, and ate fish for supper that night.

The changes that have been made in the old original spoon in shape, size and decorations, runs up into the hundreds. They are plain, fluted, grooved, hammered, corrugated, ribbed, and whatnot, and as long as they spin around in the water as they spin around in the water they get the fish. You can get them in gold, silver, nickel, copper, brass or enamel, and if you tried out the whole kit, you'd be busy the rest of the season without a layoff for grub.

Great Stuff for Trolling.

For trolling the spoon hook will hold its own any time. Bass, pickerel, pike and muskie like to give it the once-over as it glides through the water shooting its light shafts in all directions. It can be seen for quite a distance under water and can be used either with plain hooks or with a feathered or buck-tailed treble hook. A single hook with a minnow, shiner, frog or pork rind works well with a spoon.

For bass, a No. 3 tandem Hildebrandt Slim Ell or Standard shape or a Skinner No. 3 Fluted Spoon makes a selection that will help fill the stringer, while pickerel and muskie require a larger sized spoon, say a No. 6 to 10, for a single spoon, and No. 6 for the tandem spinner.

For casting you will need a No. 3 single spoon which you can use without any other bait or with an eyed fly or natural baits. A strip of pork rind cut to the shape of a minnow and used with the No. 3 spoon makes a bait that is a sure enough "killer."

As long as you keep it moving in the water, a spoon will turn around and you have a chance at attracting the fish, but leaving it die a slow death, and merely come through the water without any action is a loss of time to you. It's the movement and the light shafts from the spoon that attract the fish, and it's up to you to keep the bait moving.

On its way to glory the little old spoon has even been copied by the trout fisherman and on a dull day a small Colorado spinner can be seen better than the fly alone. Often when the trout fails to take the fly on the surface, they will give it the "close-up" if sunk to the depth where they lie, with a spoon for a helper. Early in the season when the waters are high and roily as well as clouded with mud, the spinner is an asset to the trout fisherman.

For after-dark fishing, which is the time the big ones are generally on the still hunt for feed, the Pflueger-Tandem luminous spinner makes a good bait. This is also fine for moonlight trolling. The luminous spinner must be exposed to the sunlight before using at night, the same as the artificial plugs used for night fishing.

When all other lures fail you can generally count on getting the fish if you fall back on the spoon, either in trolling or casting, and your tackle box is not complete, old man, unless you are prepared for emergencies with a selection of single and tandem spoons and spinners in nickel, brass and copper. Just remember this, however, keep them well polished and when you use them, keep 'em moving.

FORMER ATHLETICS STILL PLAY WINNING BALL.

No wonder those old-time Mackmen were unbeatable. There's John Wesley Coombs and Eddie Plank still winning for the Dodgers and the Browns; Barry, the mainstay of the Red Sox; Collins, the star of the White Sox; Baker, the storm center of the Yanks—with no less than five ball clubs bolstered up by the talent that once grew and bloomed in Connie's ancient orchard.

USING SPITBALL AGAIN

Spitball Reformers Fail in Attempts to Cut Out Spitter.

Jimmy Callahan of Pirates Declares It Would Be Unfair to Legislate Against Moist Delivery at This Late Date.

The spitball will be hurled at the batters again this season by pitchers all over the country.

It will continue on its moist and foggy way despite the efforts of some baseball reformers to legislate it out of the pastime, for the spitter has become just as much a part of the pitcher's art as the curve.

During the hot-stove season, which came to a close with the departure for the South, the spitter came in for its annual panning. Baseball men in various parts of the country talked against it. Chief among the pansters was Percy D. Haughton of the Boston Braves, who believes the elimination of the spitter would be a long step toward increasing hitting.

Haughton put the spitter on the pan every time he got a chance, and is honest in his convictions against it. But the members of the rules committee did not even discuss the spitter in a casual way. The rules committee found practically nothing to do, for the rules as they stand today are just about as solid as they can be made.

In discussing the spitball at one of the National league sessions last winter, Jimmy Callahan of the Pirates, advanced the opinion that it would be unfair to legislate against it now. Callahan believes that the moist delivery has been in vogue too long. He pointed out that it has been in use at least ten years, and that if it had been particularly undesirable it should have been eliminated.

JACKSON AFTER COBB

With everything in his favor, Joe Jackson, Sox outfielder, is going to be hot on Ty Cobb's trail this season. Jackson has been showing up better this season than ever before, and his teammates predict the best record of his career. Besides an overpowering ambition to get along, Jackson is perfectly contented with the Chicago team, his left-field berth and playing conditions.

In Jackson, Chick Gandil and Hap Felsch, Manager Rowland believes he has the best bunch of clean-up hitters in the circuit.

MATHEWSON MAY HURL AGAIN

Cincinnati Fans Would Not Be Surprised to See Old Master in Pitcher's Box This Season.

It is whispered in Cincinnati that Christy Mathewson may be seen in the box again. Christy did some pitching during the training of the Reds and many take this to indicate that he will go into the box during the present season, at least on occasions. Last fall Matty gave it out that he would abandon pitching forever, but not long ago he admitted that he might go into the box if his staff became crippled. So it would not surprise the fans in Cincinnati to see the old master putting 'em over the plate once more.

FLEETEST NEW YORK PLAYER

Gilhooley Can Probably Outprint Any Member of Either Team for One Hundred Yards.

Gilhooley, Maisel, Magee and High are fully as fast as Robertson, Kauff, Burns and Herzog, the four fleetest Giants. Gilhooley can probably outprint any member of the bunch for 100 yards, and Fritz Maisel wouldn't be half a stride away.

Man for man, up and down the two line-ups, there wouldn't be enough difference to bring up a debate.

DIAMOND NOTES

A good start is half the battle even in a pennant fight.

It would take a burglar to break into the ranks of that Red Sox team.

Christy Mathewson says his Reds are ready but he didn't say for what.

Ray Caldwell didn't look very good his first time out against the Red Sox.

It looks as if Wilbert Robinson might have a useful young pitcher in Cadore.

Begins to look as if the Central league of Europe would be reduced to a Class D circuit.

It would not be far off to guess that the Giants and White Sox will play the world's series.

With a few more defeats the Pirates will be down to their white chips and ready to borrow.

Evidently Christy Mathewson has taught the Reds some of the tricks he learned under McGraw.

The addition of Merkle to the Cub list will make a big difference to Mitchell's fighting combination.

A Philadelphia writer says a left-hander of the Plank, Leonard or Ruth type would help the Athletics.

Cincinnati players are said to be solid for Mathewson, but the reader is left to imagine what part of 'em is solid.

Only hope that the Giants and the Tigers won't meet in the world's series. There's enough war and bloodshed already.

Fred Beebe, the veteran pitcher who was part of the Cleveland staff last season, is now a member of the Louisville club.

Larue Kirby, the Saints' ponderous outfielder, started out as a pitcher, but turned to the outfield because of his swatting ability.

Manager Callahan looks rather dejected. The start his ball team is making will not help him get another contract next year.

Speaking of improvements in the field, on the bases and at the bat, it might be well to mention Jack Leary for stellar honors.

Can't blame the fans if they don't turn out this season to the games of the tail-end clubs. The submarine peril is something awful.

Connie Mack has been a baseball player and manager since 1884, and he says there isn't much change in the game—anyway, not for him.

Medical science has made wonderful strides in the last few years, but no serum has been discovered that will cure an umpire or a southpaw pitcher.

Larry Sutton, the Reds' scout, has started looking through the minors already. He is on the hunt for a couple of first-class pitchers for Mathewson.

Percy D. Haughton.

nated before hundreds of pitchers had studied it and mastered its use. The emery ball was stored-lived in the major leagues. Action against it was quick and when it was made illegal there was no great hardship worked on the pitchers.

With the spitter it is different. Hundreds of younger pitchers who are coming up have adopted the spitter for use in the tight places. It is used by at least 40 per cent of the pitchers of the country today and it has become an institution. So the spitter will live for some time to come and may never be barred.

The fact that many baseball men do not champion the moist ball will make no difference, and, as Jimmy Callahan declares, it would be an injustice because its use has been permitted for too many years.

BASEBALL IN SOUTH AMERICA

Many Promising Players Found Among Expert Workmen Secured for Cultivation of Sugar.

The European war may be responsible for introducing baseball into South America. The centuries of South America whose soil is adapted to the cultivation of sugar are sending to Cuba for expert workmen in that branch of industry, and as a result baseball promises to be as well known in Latin-America as it is in the West Indies. The Cubans have taken to the game like a duck to water, and there are numberless teams scattered all over the island. It is not improbable that in the future the championship of America will not be settled until the northern and southern hemispheres have battled on the diamond.

The South Americans are a sport-loving people, and once the fascinating game of baseball fastens itself on them there should be a wave of enthusiasm all over that continent. As soon as the South Americans understand the sport the turnstiles at the ball fights will not be very busy.

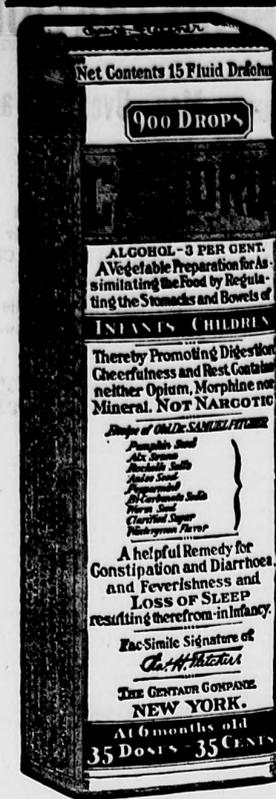

TRYING OUT 'SWEATING ROBE'

Contrivance Arranged With Lot of Electric Wires Between Layers of Wool to Get Heat.

Manager Robinson of the Dodgers is trying out a new electric "sweating robe," for reducing weight.

It is a contrivance with a lot of electric wires between layers of wool.

Connect the wires with a lamp socket, they heat up, and then Robby begins to sweat.

Raise High Priced Wheat on Fertile Canadian Soil

Canada extends to you a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help feed the world by tilling some of her fertile soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think of the money you can make with wheat around $2 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming in Western Canada is as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. There is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Write for literature as to reduced railway rates to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Max A. Bowley, 73 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.; J. E. LaForce, 1139 Elm St., Manchester, N. H.; L. N. A Pledge.

Let us now as with one voice and one heart and in a faith that makes faithful, renew our loyalty to those ideals of government for which our fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor.

Revive in us and in the people of our land a high sense of patriotism; strengthen every noble purpose; keep us by thy help from sloth and indifference and from all corruption of civil government.

Because of Memorial Day next Wednesday, advertisers are requested to forward changes of advertisements on Monday or Tuesday. News reports, also, SHOULD REACH THE OFFICE early in the week. Anything received after 9 A. M. Thursday is liable to be omitted. Really important news, however will be received early Friday morning.

CENSORSHIP NOT NECESSARY

Hiram Johnson, the Progressive senator from California, was the central figure in one of the most impressive scenes witnessed in the upper house of congress in years, when, inspired by his belief in the press and the people of the country, he delivered an address that not only held the attention of the elder members of the senate in an unusual degree, but resulted in the complete elimination from the espionage bill of the clause establishing a censorship of the press.

He met it in no uncertain manner. He did not plead for a further softening of the clause, but in the name of the nation demanded its entire elimination.

"Such a censorship," he said, "puts a premium upon false publication. It makes a crime of the truth. It would render impossible legitimate criticism by word of mouth or otherwise of those who may lead in the war and may also lead in incompetency and inefficiency."

"In speaking now upon this subject very briefly," said Johnson, "I want to make plain at the outset that I do not speak for the metropolitan press at all, and I am not concerned at all with the attitude of the newspapers of the country. They are sufficiently powerful, sufficiently rich, sufficiently influential to care for their own interests, and, no matter what laws we may pass, they doubtless, with their power and their riches and their influence, will go forward as they see fit and doubtless be true to their traditions."

"It is for the man who reads and who is entitled to read the truth; it is for the man and the woman who see their boy conscripted and taken from their arms to do a man's war work; it is for the boys who constitute the

CARDS FOR REGISTRATION

Questions That ALL Young Men Over 21 and Under 31 MUST Answer

Copies of the registration cards through which all males of the ages of 21 and 30 years inclusive will be required to register under the Conscription bill on Tuesday, June 5, have been received by Town Clerk John A. Raymond, who is clerk of the Weymouth Registration Board.

Directions for answering the questions have been made public by Charles F. Gettemy the director of the registration. There are twelve questions which must be answered.

In the first place read carefully the questions and prepare your answers in your mind so that the less possible time may be required in answering them. The twelve questions are as follows:

1. Name in full. Age in years.
This means all names spelled out in full and your age in years only.
 2. Home address.
This means where you have your permanent home, not the place where you work.
 3. Date of Birth.
Write your birthday, month, day and year.
 4. Are you, a natural born citizen, a naturalized citizen, or have you declared your intention to become a citizen? Which?
If you were born in the United States you are a natural born citizen no matter what may have been the citizenship or nationality of your parents. If born abroad you are still a citizen of the United States if your father was a citizen of the United States. You are a naturalized citizen if you have completed your naturalization; that is taken out final papers. If you have declared your intention, under oath of being a citizen you are a declarant.
 5. Where were you born?
Give name of town, state and the country.
 6. If not a citizen, of what country are you a citizen or subject?
This need only be answered by aliens and declarants.
 7. What is your present trade, occupation or office?
This means what is your job at the present time not what you have been.
 8. By whom are you employed? Where employed?
If you are working for an individual firm or corporation or association state its name. If in business or trade so state. If you are an officer of the State or Federal government say what your office is. Also give the state, town and county where employed.
 9. Have you a father, mother, wife, child under 12 years solely dependent upon you for support, specify which?
Consider this question carefully. If there is another mouth which you have to feed besides you own say so.
 10. Married or single, which? Race, specify which?
This does not mean if you were once married but whether you are married now. In answer to race say, Caucasian, Mongolian, Negro, Malayan or Indian.
 11. What military service you have had? Rank? Branch? Years? Nation or state?
No matter what country you served you must give complete information.
 12. Do you claim exemption from draft? Specify grounds.
It does not follow because you claim exemption from draft that you will be exempt. You should make your claim in a clear and concise manner, and be sure and state the grounds.
- Attention is called to the fact that the act provides that ANY PERSON WHO SHALL REFUSE OR WILFULLY FAIL to present himself for registration or to submit thereto shall be GUILTY OF A MISDEMEANOR and upon conviction shall be punished by not more than ONE YEAR IMPRISONMENT and thereupon shall be duly registered.

nation's army and are entitled to the fostering care of that nation; it is for the humble man with his sacred American right to express himself as he sees fit; it is for all of these and for the right of free speech for and on behalf of all these that I plead with you today.

"I want to make plain at the outset of what little I say that I am talking to you of the right of free speech in this nation, the right that is mine and the right that belongs to every man and to every woman to express, within the limitations of the constitution and answerable for the wrong that they may do, the opinions that are theirs and to communicate those opinions unto their neighbors.

"In this way the preservation of free speech and the preservation of a free press are of more than ordinary importance.

"It is a fact, a fact which has been admitted upon this floor again and again in the past few weeks, that this branch—the legislative branch of the United States government—has forgotten much of its initiative and has abdicated much and many of its functions. If this be so, how much more tenderly and how much more preciously should we guard the right of our people to free speech and the right of our press, within legal and legitimate limits, to publish what may be read by the people of this land!

"There is no necessity for such a law as you are about to enact. Three thousand miles away from the seat of actual conflict are the American people. There is no battle that rages on our border; there are no boundaries within our country which must be observed as they had to be observed during a particular period of the civil war.

"If it be needed in the future to sacrifice democracy for the safety of the nation we will all go as far as we ought to go, but at this particular time legitimate arguments cannot be advanced why, with the war in its present stage, we must enact the most drastic law that any nation on the face of the earth has today."

The newspapers of Massachusetts are surprised and indignant, that both Senators Lodge and Weeks who owe much to the press, should have voted in favor of censorship, but happily they were in the minority, as Senator Johnson won 39 to 38.
