STILL LATER FROM EUROPE.

By the fast sailing ship SAARAR & CAROLINE, which as rived last evening from Havre, whouce she sailed on the 15th uit, we have been (by the politeness of the editor of the Bulletin,) put in possession of a Havre paper of the 14th. The political affairs of Europe, are of a more pacific nature. The French army has evacuated the Bel-

Panis, Jan. 19. The F. ench calinet, the same day on which the returning soldiers from the siege of Antwerp, re-crossed the frontiers that is to say, yesterday, notified the other cabinets of the evacuation of Belgium. The note addressed to the Prus sian cabinet, claimed, in virtue of previous agreements, the immediate dislodgment of the army of observation assem bled on the Rhine and the Mense. The opening of the British Parliament announced for t

20th January, is postponed to the 4th February. LONDON, January 6. The base, the haughty, and the malignant, were all cockswhoop at the news from America, and chuckled at the prospect of a division between the provinces of the largest and most thriving commonwealth on each. Already phrases, sentences and discourses on the stability of republic ses, sentences and discourses on the stability of republican institutions, were on the anvil in great forwardness and preparation. The President's speech may possibly, like the fail of Antwerp, change the tenor and check the pride of these masterly performed in the chords of adulation and servility. The temperate and judicious language of kien. Jackson seems the forerunner of conclustion and concession. The tariff will, in all probability be relinquished, or softened down sufficiently to reconcile the interests of the Southern States. It is perhaps early in the day to abticapate the result, but the puspect is very different from that pate the result, but the prospect is very different from that which the disturbed vision of the enemies of fordom contemplated. We shall see—and perhaps the world, including our good friends the Dutch, will be able to judge—when they somewhat mitigate the vexation, which we feel in announcing, as we do to-day, for the hundredth time, the muit failed beyond Charleston.

An affray arose lately at Barnwell, Nouth Carolina, between some of the union and nullification party, in which dirk, and sword cames were used, and one or two of the nason men dangerously wounded. It was apprehended that the excitement would have produced a fight between the hostile parties; but the interposition of influential gentlemen, prevented the deplorable consequences of a general Leigh, communicating the intelligence, that the interven-tion of Virginia would be submitted to the convention. This justifies our previsions, and accounts for tribune Hamilton's proclamation.

What! - Shivering in the relad! We invite the attention of our readers to this article from the herald of nullification. There is a lamely dissembled backsliding in the spirit of the language. We are glad that the "imposing attitude" of Virginia, has given the millifiers a decent opportunity of fencing themselves behind her interference:

"The events of a few days will determine whether con-sistently with self-respect and her interest and liberties, our state can pause in accordance with the solicitation of a sister sovereignty; but if she does, it will be no triumph to the federalists and monarchists, who have conspired against her. It will be in deference to Virginia—it will be lowing to an equal, not to the inferior agents of the confederacy to an equal, not to the interior agents of the confederacy—it will be rendering homage to ber own six recignty—in recognizing that of Virginia; and will shew that the mere signifying of a wish, done in a friendly spirit, on the part of one of the sovereign parties to the compact—has potency with the soul of Carolina—though no federal threatenings could away her one fot from her firm resolve—though the president armed to the teeth by a subservient congress, assuming the God, and affecting to nod her into submission, would be an object of freemen not of awe, but of secars and be an object to freemen not of awe, but of scorn and

"Who wants to buy chivalry!" sting out a chap, at the top of his voice, as he merrily rolled through the stroot a few nights since. "Chivalry," roared hi, "Carolina is diversity with chivalry!" Stick but a cockade in a hoge catcher's hat, and he is insteadly transformed into a most chivalrous kright. Harrah for chivalry! and the d—I take old Hiskory, quoth he, usuif the cchoes of his chivalrous chivalrous were hushed in the distance. This chivalrous to the marky folds of night such a bawitching meiody, as prevents our guardiach tion smoothing at their posts.

Happy, happy people we must be, possessing more chivalry than all the rest of the world. Even a chap who never pays his debts, keeps his word, or earns his dinner, is now puissant in chivalry. He is magnificent in chivalry, as he stroaks his knightly whiskers, and with an ineffable air of severeign contempt, looks askance at the vulgar, hardworking man, who pays his debts and his taxes. Flurrath for chivalry, thought I, as I fell into a confortable snooze, which this rearing sprig of sovereignly had disturbed see from. Visions of chivalry, tournaments, &c. flitted scross my brain all night. I snagined our very turkey busered shad become transcendantly chivalrous, and were parading the streets with their squires, banners, bannersts, and mon-at-arms; and that every nation of the earth had seen forth their heralds, and their pursuivants, amouucing that there was more chivalry in Wassamasaw alone, thun in all the rest of the universe. I continued to dream, until such a transition came over the spirit of my visions, that I awoke with the dreadful and most mortifying conviction, that the whole world now believes that too many of our good people have more cry than wool, and but little more genuine chivalry, than they have at CAPE COD.

But we may add, that of interchants with hereafter from the counting house to some literary pursuits, either in disguest at the business, or from a want of success. But distinguish in this matter. There probably are persons who had in youth either mistaken the bent of their preparatory clerkship with credit, because the yeaf a superior was on them, or hereafter for one of the learned professions. They passed through their apprenticeship and their preparatory clerkship with credit, because the eye of a superior was on them, or hereafter for one of the learned professions. They passed they had as sumed for another; but when left to themselves they feel a deficiency in forming plans, their inclinations bad them another way, and they occupy for a short time for the position of a merchant with the relish of a rean of literature. Success in business can scarcely be expected by such a person. The causes of injury from heaty specular. rature. Success in business can scarcely be expected by such a person. The causes of injury from hasty speculation may frequently be traced to a want of that acquaintages with the relative foreign powers, which can scarcely he expected from one not brought up to mental exercise.—
The surmisc of a war between two foreign powers will often lead to sudden rise in particular articles, and hundreds who scarcely know the geographical positions of the counten lead to sudden rise in particular articles, and hundreds who scucely know the geographical positions of the countries, will rush into the speculation, when perhaps a more intimate knowledge of foreign affairs would present some points that would give almost positive assurance that such nations could not, at least for many years, be at war. This we shall be teld, is politics—and on what are mercantile speculations founded, but on the ductuations of foreign and almost te switter. These and at this internation the province. speculations founded, but on the illustrations of foreign and domestic politics? Does not at this moment, the position of Holland and Relgium effect insurance? And is not the value of a Charleston (S. C.) debt touched by the doctrine of nullification? What would the European speculator in Ifnited States Bank he without a knowledge of American politics? Would he not find, purhaps to his ruin, that the success or defeat of a particular candidate touched his bank stock as mearly as would a great fite or a sovere storm his investment in insurance stock.

We shall be told, probably, that a study of the classics would scarcely lead to an understanding of these matters. We reply that the slergyman does not preach, the lawyer focs not pleud, and the physician does not prescribe, in likeck and Hebrow; but gentlemen of those professions find ireck and Hebrew; but gentlemen of those professions fine Arck and Henrew; but gentlemen of those professions that their habits of study and observation insivellously strongthened by the mental description which early studios impart.

But the legislature of our country is in so many respects commorcial in its relations, that it is found necessary or politic to place in both branches commercial men. Massalitic to place in both branches commercial men. Mass: chusetts rarely loses sight of the advantages arising fro such a representation, and we presume that the mercantil-interest shy where would desire that their representative interest shy where would desire that their representative should in most particulars, hold rank with those of any oth-or class; and this would be most likely, if his compared nowledge had been increased by the facilities of primary

The acquisition of wealth in commercial enterprises, w contend, is facilitated by liberal education, and surely its use is greatly enhanced thereby. Luckily it does not re-quire any great skill to spend a fortune, though some is cer-tainly required to use it; and the merchant who retires with a competence, finds his a e is much blessed by literature and liberal attainments, as is that of the councillor of divine. This is more a subject for a lecture, or rather a course of lectures, than for an editorial article; but it may cause some one to enquire whether the premises are correct—and whatever tonds to elevate the character or enlarge the pleasures of so a respectable and important a class of citizens as the merchants, must be considered as emmently descring particular attention.—U. Glory. The high handed measures determined upon by therefore and popular governments do not possess, in the tree and popular governments do not possess, in the preservation, or, if they like the word better, a conservative principle, which the oppeasors and dislocators of Europe were not able to infuse into any of the members which composed their celebrated but perishable patchwork of 1814 and 1815. We may at least pretty confident, that when their dispate between the Eastern and Southern provinces of the United States terminate in a final separation or renewed urion and connection, it will not involve either monarch whom the Netherlands admitted, has exposed the disjointed members of his short-lived kinedom.—Globe.
