NEBRASKA QUESTION.

DELIVERED IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, FEBRUARY 10 AND 11, 1854.

The Secure having under consideration the ! bill to establish Territoriol Governments for Nebraska and Kenson, Mr. SMITH rose and said :

Mr. Parsrokhr: I rise to address the Senate on the subject now under consideration with unusual hesitation and reluctance. I have not been in the habit of obtrading myself on the notice of the Senate; and if I depart on the present occasion from the feserve which I have prescribed to myself, and ordinarily observed, it will be owing to my sense of the magnitude of the evils which must result from this measure, if it is to receive the sauction of the two Houses of Congress, and become the law of the land.

It is now "imost fifteen years since I became a meinber of Congress, and I have been almost incessantly present in the one body or the other, with the exception of the 28th Congress, during which 1 was at home engaged in the dischitted of the dulies of my profession. iviquire of the Senato whether it is necessary or expedient for zn now to organize two additional torritories, when we have already no less than five, viz, Minnesota, Oregon, New Mexico, Utah, and Washington I desire honorable isbandors to point to any period in the history of this country when we had so large a number on kend is at present; and yet it is proposed to did two mpre. How we came at the had secsion to suffer the bill 40, organize the Territory O Washington to pass without objection, is incomprehensible to me; for, in my judgment, it was totally unnecessary.

My honorable friend, the chairman of the Committee on Territorics, (M. DougLas, Istarted at this session with a proposition to establish one territory, which would give ussix. I do not know how long that idea lasted: I believe, however, only about one week-when the thought suddenly occurred to the chairman that it would be expedient to divide this one into two territories. And now it seems we are to have seven territoriesin fact a complete litter of territories-to be supported and maintained out of the Treasury of the United States. Sir, I bag leave to enter my carnest protest against this policy. I verily believe that nothing could induce even Southern Senators to vote for this extravagant proposition, were not the negro element mixed up with it. Where, sir, is all this to end? Encouraged by what has already transpired, a convention has been called, as I am informed, in Oregon to form another territory there.

I admit that the vast expanse within our limits ought to be opened for settlement from time to time as it is needed, but the policy has been already pushed as far as existing exigencies re-quire. I say, in the first place, to create pew. territories-to carry them up to the unprecedented number of seven-is contrary to the interest of the present organized States, particu-larly the land States. What, Mr. President, is their present condition ! Are they occupied ! Are the public lands in them exhausted ? Are there not in Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, and Arkanas, vast bodics of public lands untouched! Are there not large quantities in Illinois, a considerable quantity in Judiana, and some in Ohio, to say nothing of the States on the Lower Mississippi and the the Gull of Mexicol I venture to assert that at least one-balf of the lands in these States remain unoccupied. There is a vast quantity of public land within their limits, besides a quantity little less in the hands of speculators,

I cay, in the second place, that it is contrary, to the interest of the organized Jeruitories to seation, the policy of Unis bill. There is, sin, the Tarritory of Minuscok open for settlement, comprising within its limits an expanse large from in by make three Sites like Ponesylvania. Lice there are the Territories of Oregon and Washington, each splitled for two, if not more State. The Territory of Upia, is good for one Frate. least, the States and Territories now organized! The objection of injury to the one and the other would seem to me insurmountable. If there be a stern necessity--political or otherwise-for this mesure; if it be desirable to smash the Missouri compromise to relieve the present Administration from the embarrassments in which it has involved itself by taking the abolitionists and freesoilers of the North to its beson, avory your policy openly, and the motives of that policy, and then we shall know where we are!

But, sir, I am anticipating. It is said that these Territories should be organized, because by that means the transit of persons and property across the continent would be facilitated. In answer to that I have to say, that this could be done by establishing military posts along the hne at trivial expense. But there is a much more effectual means of accomplishing that object, which I will propound for the consideration of honorable members, and that is a Pacific railroad, for which I contended most strenuously at the last session. I wish such a road properly located, and I believe a central location the best, but I may be disposed to concede that point, and go for a southern route, if you will agree to leave us undisturbed on the slavery question. We have made several compromises with you clready, gentlemen of the South, which you fly from, or at least manifest a disposition to do so. Will you stand up to the new compromise!

But, after all, sir, this business of creating Territories is no trivial affair, so far as the tresency is concerned. During the last four years we have appropriated no less than $873,332 F4 for our Territories. Of this smount, $682,161 37 has been actually expended-leaving a balance of nearly, $200,000 unexpended, but which is in course of being expended, and will soon be exhausted; for I have noticed that the Territories never fail to get every dollar of their appropriations. The large cum of $373,832 52 was appropriated when we had, in fact, only two Territorial governments for the whole four years, two for three years, and one for only about six months. If the five governments had been in full blast during the whole period, the aggregate appropriations could not have been less than $1,000,000 or $1,200,000. Every Territory requires an outfit-which is ordinarily $50,000. viz: $25,000 for public buildings, $20,000 for a penitentiary, and $5,000 for a library-se that. if this bill becomes a law, there is to be paid at once out of the treasury $100,000 for the objects indicated. The annual cost of the executive, judicial, and legislative departments is about (1990); and this will make, for seven Territories, the very considerable aggregate of $210,000 per annum.

<sup>1</sup> And this, sin, is not one-half of the storyother large expanses will be inervised. Much will be required is extend our post office and how that the Territories and new Sintes do not know that the Territories and new Sintes do not refund, to the Post Office Department the acpenses required within their respective jurisdictions for the transportation of the reals.

In the post place, I have to say that we shall have to incur all the expenses of extending our land system throughout this vast extent of coun-The lands have to be surveyed or run out try. into townships and sections, and brought into the market for sale; this will probably require several hundred thousand dollars per annum. We shall have, also, to extinguish the Indian titles : first, such as are possessory ; and, secondly, absolute-or where they have acquired the fee by treaty, or where the lands have been patented in conformity thereto. We had in the bill, as it stood originally, an inkling of what we are to expect from this policy. One section appropriated one hundred thousand dollars, and another two hundred thousand dollars, for enabling the President to commence negotiations to extinguish these titles. These clauses, however, have been striken out-I know not for what reason, unless it be by way of preparation for a very rapid progress of the bill through the House of Representatives, on account of the vast merits of the negro clause. But the honorable chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs had the frankness to announce that these appropriations were not to be abandoned-that they would be put into some other bill. No doubt they will be, and I fear that the aggregate first proposed will be doubled at least, even at the present session, My honorable and most excellent friend from Massachusetts, (Mr. EvERETT,) who pronounced such an admirable discourse in this chamber yesterday, addressed a very earnest hope to this body, that ample provision might be made for the poor Indians. When these governments are formed, with all their paraphernalia, our people will rush into the Territories, and it would become a matter of necessity to extinguish the Indian title. What sum will be required for this purpose no man can tell. I should not be surprised if it should amount finally to $50,000-000 or even $100,000,000. It must be recollected that we are to deal with the titles of halfcivilized-I will not call them savage-tribes, where they own the fee, and are the proprietors of the soil, which will prove a much more serious matter than the acquisition of possessory right, as in ordinary cases.

It is certain, also, that the adoption of this measure will involve an increase of our army expenditures. The administration is now calling for a large addition to the army, and I have a strong impression resting on my mind that it is really needed, and shall ever for it, unless there be some good reason assigned to the contrary. But if you adopt this measure, a further augmentation will be required sooner or laterat least one regiment of mounted troops for each Territory. Collision with the Indians will be inevitable. Wars will be of frequent cecurrence, and the expenditures under this lacd will extend over a long period-periaps a quarter of a century.

century. I will mention here a ranther which Senators may think of trivial importance, and that is the expense of delegates to Congress from our Territeries. These are much greater than I had any idea of until I looked into the facts. For the last Congress they were as follows:

Minnerola. 1st ression-mileage, $1,580; per diem, $4,030 00 21 sessionmilesge, 81,690; 0 2.594 00 $704 5,064 00 Oregan 1st sersion mileage, $5,950; per diem, $2,210 -8 100 00 2d sessionleage, $5,900; per 8704 6.664 00 14.824'00 Utah list session mileage, $2,577 G0; per 4.777 60 diero. $2,200 2d seerios -- mileage, $2,577 60; · per dien:, $:04 3,231 60 ÷., 8,053 20 New Mexico Ist session-mileage, $2,095 89; per diem, $2,200 -4,295 80 $2,152 80 ; 2.856 80 diem, 8701 7,153,60 35,699 89 To this aggregate is to be added at the present Congress an amount for the Territory of Washington equal to that of Cregon, viz. And, then, should this bill piss, we shall have a further reddition of at least $6,000 per Congress 14.824 00 for each Teriftory, equal to 12,000 00 $63.523 80

Nothing ould more fully illustrate the inequality and soluses of the mileage system than these details, but there is no hope of a correction at the hands of Congress. Let us, then, combine this with other financial elements adverted to, and give them, in the aggregate, their proper weight.

I insist in the next place, that this measure is perfectly impracticable. It can demonstrate that it is impossible to exceed to it non-formity with in provisions and terms. You may do something in the nature of excention, but I say its would be a direct and papahle violation of the law. I refer particularly to these provisions for the excretise of the decitive franchise and for bolding office. I will not detain the Senato by reading the parts of the bill to which I allude, but I can state then briefly: It provides that a person to be equable of voling, or eligible to office, must be twenty-one years of age, a white male citizen of the United States—or an allen, also white, who has declared under oath his intention to become a citizen, and who is an inhabitant of the Territory—or, as it is express ch a nother part of the bill, to thus thave therein "his permanent dominele, residence."

Sir, I think I can demonstrate, as a legal proposition, that, there are, and can be, under, your present laws, no inhabitants there. There may be individuals who are bodily within the limits of those Territories; where they are, if any, I do not know. A member of the House of Representatives from Missouri, (Mr. Hart,)said, at the last ession, that there were, in tho whole country now proposed to be cognized under the names of Nebraka and in a short of the House free hondred individuals; individuals individuals; individuals individuals; individuals; individuals individuals; individuals individuals; individua

Committee on Territories, thought there were into a country where by law no person has a about twelve, hundred. I do not care which right to be for a single hour, except by license number is assumed to be correct-it being borne in mind that it is now proposed to divide this country into two Territories. We do not know where these five hundred or twelve hundred persons are. We do not know how many are in the proposed Nebraske, or how many in Kan-Perhaps most or all are in Nebraska, and 888. this would leave few or none for Kansas. However this may be, I will now endeavor to show the Senate that they cannot be called inhabitants for the purposes indicated in the bill.

The Intercourse Act of 1634 has many provisions which bear on this subject. By the first section of that act, all, the country comprised within the limits of the proposed Territories is deelared "to be the Indian country." By the second section it is provided "that no person shall be permitted to trade with any of the Indians in the Indian country, without a license therefor from the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, or Indian Agent, or Sub-Agent; which license shall be issued for a term not exceeding three years;" reveable whenever, in the opin-ion of the Superintendent, the party has "trans-gressed" any of the laws or regulations provided for the government of trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, or that it would be improper for him to remain in the Indian country. By the third section, a power of revocation and exclusion is vested in the President of the United States. By the fifth section, licenses to trade are restricted to citizens of the United States; and aliens, though they have declared under oath their intention to become citizens, are wholly excluded By the sixth section, aliens of every class are heavily fined if they enter the "Indian country without a passport." By the tenth section, "the Superintendent of Indian Affairs and Indian agents and sub-agents" are authorized "to remove from the Indian country all persons found therein contrary to law, and the President of the United States is authorized to direct the military force to be employed in such removal." By the twenty-third section, regulations are prescribed for the application of such force, but the details are not material.

Now, I insist that these provisions amount to an utter exclusion of inhabitants from the country in any and every legal sense; and that I am not alone in this opinion, appears from what was said by one of the members above alluded to, (Mr. Harr.) in the House of Representatives, at the last session, as follows: "The gentleman from North Carolina, (Mr. CLINGMAN,) in the first | and in immediate contract with the Indian tribes. place, objects to this Territory, because there are any five or six hundred people settled there. Why is it that there are not more people there? Sin jub because your laws will not lot a white man settle there.". And forther: "As soon as a white man is into the Territory, with nit a license from the Indian Department, there is a company of dragoons to run him out of the Territory.

I have a great respect for, and confidence in, on the public lands, he shall be treated as a tres-the learning and ability of the chairman of the passer, and it is made the duty of the proper Committee on Territories, and I should like to | officer of the Government to turn him out, and,

And the second second

(Mr. RICHARDSON,) the chairman of the House have him explain how he can get inhabitants for a short period, and that too revocable.

Well, sir, in the year 1817, I studied law in companionship with my honorable friend from Delaware, (Mr. CLATTON,) in good old Connecticut, and I then learned that, in order to constitute an inhabitant, a man must have a settled, per-manent residence. There must be no animo revertendi-no intention to go back to his old abode. Can it be said that licensed traders are in this predicament-that is to say, without the animo revertendi-when the law rigidly limits their presence in the Territory to three years, subject to be turned out at any time, at the pleasure of the President, or either of the other officers named in the act. A licensed trader an inhabitant! There are other things in the bill which look very mysterious; but certainly it is a very great mystery how the honorable chairman expects to turn a licensed trader into an inhabitant. As for the people who go there without license, the honorable Mr. HALL tells us that the moment they make their appearance a. company of dragoons stood ready, sword in hand, armed to the teeth, to chase them out of the Sir, a man was once asked where he country. Sir, a man was once asked win lived? He replied, "all along shore." You might as well undertake to convert this personage into an inhabitant, as to call the few people such who have been roaming over that country contrary to law. My honorable friend from Illinois is so anxious to put through the negro clause of this bill, that he has worked himself up to the extravagant proposition, that these people may be legally called inhabitants. They are to be baptised into the name of inhabitants, in violation of our most familiar ideas, and all just notions on the subject are to be turned upside down.

Perhaps it will be said that there is some portion of these Territories to which the Indian titl-bas been extinguished; and the houerable chairman may insist that, so far as that portion is concerned, it has got some inhabitants any how; and we may go up hill and down dale, and search out all the nooks and corners of the country, and may perchance find som ' ... ly whom we can in a proper sense call an inhabitant, but 1 very strongly suspect-I have a mind to use the word "guess," for I have an indisputable title to it as a native of New England-that the five hundred people mentioned by Mr. HALL, and the twelve hundred conjectured by Mr. RICHARDSON, will be found on the Indian lands,

But if it be otherwise, or, in other words, if the population, such as it is, can be assigned to the other part of the Territories, then the honorable chairman, before he can call them inhabitants will have to trample under foot another act of Congress. Yes, sir, another act. I refer, sir, to the act of 1807, by which it is expressly provided, that if any person or persons shall intrude on the public lands, he shall be treated as a tresman wishes it.

Mr. SMITH. No, sir. I have nothing to do with the matter. I surrender the whole negro question to the Schator; he has jurisdiction of it, and I believe of nothing else.

Nor can the honorable Senator (Mr. DOUGLAS) get along with the law of 1841, which authorizes pre-emption rights.' By the act referred to it is provided that whenever the Indian title to the ublic lands has been extinguished, and the same have been surveyed, it shall be lawful for a citizen, or an alien who has deelared under oath an intention to become a citizen, to enter upon a quarter section of such lands, settle thereon, and thus acquire the right of pre-emption on cortain specified terms. Now these lands have not been surveyed, and the difficulty is equally insurmountable in both parts of these Territories, that is to say, where the Indian title has been axinguished and where it has not. I am very sorry that there should be so many obstaeles to the progress of the Senator, for I have a sincere respect for him, nay, admiration, on account of his remarkable fecundity in the line of Territories. We have every session the parturition of a Ternitory, occasionally two at a time as now. I am sorry that the travail thross should be so terrific. I do not believe that even the Casarian operation will save the patient. As, however, the honorable Senator is a devotee of progress, he must give birth to a Territory occasionally. I will proffer him a little bit of advice if he will permit me by way of preparation for "lying in." In the first place, he should have the Indian title extinguished to a good breadth of country; and if he has any respect for the faith of treaties, such country should be located far away from those Indian Territories which we have guarantied and bound ourselves by the most solemn obligations to secure to that unfortunate race forever.

In the next place, the Senator ought to ask for an appropriation to have lands surveyed: and after this has been done, and the country, marked off into townships, soctions, and quarter sections, the settlers can go there and build their log-cabins-when my friend will have people in the country whom he can properly call inhabit anis, and then he may go it blind in this business of manufacturing Territories, for sught I care. Repues there are no includitunts there, and can be none; and, therefore, there can be neither voters nor office-holders, in conformity with the provisions of this bill.

It is a remarkable fact that the Senator (Mr.

I think, also of the Provident to suppley a mili- Dorsa's) doe, not in this bill provide for the tary force if necessary. Here we have the dra- suspension or repeal either of the act of 1804 or goors again; chasing down the investment of that of '1804. This hole here, those acts in full his honorable Senator from Illinois (I do not) fare; so that not only the Governor, but the le-his honorable. country, a slave, whether male, or feinale the that the holy ourses, and it duy organized. Sonator did not say; perhaps he had better in- Could thay deliberate in peacel Why, sir, in guira, the point is a flight of oratory of some Mr. DOUGLAS. I will inquire, if the gentle patrict on (sar) the negro question-of which, an wishes it. risdiction-the dragoons might appear, and then we should have an universal stampede of Governor, countellors, and representatives! I can see them, even now, streaming across the country, the dragoons in full chase, with the honorable Senator (who would naturally be at hand to take care of his offspring) following, booted, and spurred, close at their heels, and trying to arrest so untimely a procedure by reading the riot act.

Besides, what is to be the state of things if we invite our people to rush in before the lands are surveyed? Will it not produce confusion, utter confusion! Suppose on the surveys being made, it turns out that two or more settlers are on the same quarter section, which of them is to have it! To open the country to settlement in advance of the public surveys, is to the last dogree absurd. Nay, you do not open it, you only ask our people to violate existing laws, and you make yourselves accessories before the fact to every species of enormity.

But there are other parts of the machinery which will be found nearly as stubborn, if not quita. The Governor of each Territory is to lay off the same into council and representative districts, and every coursellor and representativa must be an inhabitant of the district. I would like to witness the precess of laying off this country for the purposes indicated. How is it to be dono! Where are the villages! Where are the inhabitants so grouped as that they could conveniently be comprised within a district! For aught I can see, in the exuberance of this policy, the Governor would have to manage some what in this wise: Log-oalsin No. 1, situated near the top of branch so and so, shall be distriet No. 1; and log-cabin No. 2; situated fifty miles northeast of No. 1, shall be district No. 2, and so on, to the end of the chapter .. Perhaps the Governor would be reduced to such straits that he would have to constitute any half dozen log-cabins in the same vieinage, each into a district by itself, and then each occupant would be sure to get into either the conneil or the legie. lative assembly. I think that if the districts, as they must necessarily be constituted, were laid down on paper, it would cast this proceeding into contempt, and render it all a farce from be-ginning to end. But, Mr. President, I now come to a question.

which I deem of much higher importance than any to which I have hitherto adverted. It is a question; which, in my juirerat, deeply concorns the Bonor of this Republic and the characfer of this indion for integrity and good faith. I say this if your pass this bill you hitsto a policy which will result in the outrageous breach of numerous retained with you have made with the lidian tribes now having a resting place west of the organized States Way, it is a present violation of those treaties. It will bring upon them irremediable calamities, and will within a few years consign them to utter annihilation. I am very much indebted to a gen-tionan recently a member of the House of Representatives, (Mr. Howard, of Texas,) for a digest of these treaties. I have it here in the Congressional Globe of last session. It will greatly facilitate and 'expedite the examination of the subject to use this digest, rather than to refer to the treaties themselves." Before I proceed to speak particularly of these treaties. I wish to recur to the act of 1630, "to provide for an exchange of lands with the Indians residing in any of the States or Territories, and for their re-moval west of the Mississippi." By the third section of the set it is provided that in making the exchanges, "it shall and may be lawful for the President estemnly to assure the tribe or nation with which the exchange is made, that the United States will forever secure and guaranty to them and their heirs and successors, the country to exchanged with them, and if they prefer it the United States will cause a patent or grant to be made and exe-cuted to them for the same." This is certainly very strong language. The President is authorized not only to give an assurance, but one of the most formal and solemn character-not only that they should be permitted to occupy their new homes in peace, but that the same should descend to their children and their childrens' children forever; and, moreover, that they might have the option of an absolute title secured by a patent under the eign manual of the President, and bearing the broad seal of our Repub-Considering that we were about to deal lic. with poor, benighted, friendless Indians, such an enactment imposes on us all the obligations of the most solomn treaties; and we have no moral right either to set then aside or to ovade in the slightest degree their force. Such was your legislation, based on the policy of removing the Indians from the east side of the Mississippi west of the organized States. It was your policy to take them from their homes-from the graves of their fathers, their wives, and children, across the "Father of Waters" into a land they knew not: and to induce them to yield all that men deem sacred, we said to them you shall have here an abiding place ; here you shall no longer be disturbed by the lawless, nor pursued with importunities to yield your new abode. Well, sir, the treatics were made; the promises were all given and the Indians were inucedd to remove—though with much difficuty. Even a military force had to be employed to some extent, if I do not mistake the history of the country. I will not speak of the hardships of that journey, nor of those greater hardships which they must have encountered when they found themselves in the far West without a wellings, and to relieve the hill of bad faith, he enatches them with inadequate subsistence. This measure had, in fact, little reference to the true interest of these anhappy people, whitever suggestions to that diffect may be found in the public documents; but inuch, more to the advancement of the State's from which they were removed, in population and would have a service of the high-which appeal to Heiven, and which the high-est considerations of duty require us to execute. and fulfill. What, Mr. President, are these treaties? I find that they divide themselves into three different classes: First, treaties which stipulate in express terms that the lands ceded shall not be included within any State or Territory without the consent of the Indians. Secondly, treaties which contain the same stipulation, without any qualification whatever, that is to say, the words "wishout their consent" are left out, so that the stipulation is absolute; and in the third class there is nothing said in express terms about their being included in any State or Territory; but language is used of an equivalent character. The language in overy instance, imports that these lands were to be their permanent home and final abiding place. I ask honorable Scinitors to tell me, when it is said to an Indian tribe that they shall have a certain tract of country as a permanent home, what is meant by it? Do you not intend that they shall understand it as importing a guaranty that they shall have it as an abiding place forever? Indeed I consider the language of those treaties which contain only general words as importing the same thing as the more precise stipulations of the first two classes of treaties, particularly as their general words connect thomselves with the third section of the act of 1880.

But, Mr. President, my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Territories, insists that he has delivered the bill from the objections which I now urge. '. In the first place it is admitted that the lines propounded sweep within such Territory the Indian lands thereto appertaining; or, in other words, the exterior lines of Nebraska embrace a portion of these Indian grants, and the exterior lines of Kansas the residue, so that they are all included either in the one or the other. This, it is admitted, would be a clear and palpable violation of the treaties. In order to obviate this difficulty my honorable friend has inserted in so much of the bill as relates to Nebraska the following proviso : . .

"That so thing is this act contained that be constructed to impair the ight of persons or property new inetaning to the leditons is all ferritory, as long as each right shall emake manufactures and the start of the start of the start indication is all starts and the start of the start include while the start indication of any state or Territory, but all such invitors to be included within the territorial links or justice to the include visit is the territorial links of the Territory of State or Territory, but all such invitory hall be excepted out of the boundaries, and constitute no part of the Territory of Neurasay, the U and Bhats to be included within the stat Territory of Neyrapa."

And then he has inserted a similar proviso in that part of the bill which relates to Kansas.

My honorable friend, the chairman, "thrusts them all into the Territorics, and then, in order "signify to the President of the United States their assent to be included within the proper Territory." How signify ? What amounts to a signifying of their assent? Will they write a letter to the President? Are they to send an Indian talk? Is a delegation to appear at the white house to smoke with the Executive the calumet of peace? There is no suggestion of a treaty. The Senate is to have nothing to do with the subject; but something is to be done which, in the judgment of the Executive, shall amount to a signifying of assent-then they are to jump right in. You sweep your boundaries around them in have then momentarily, the first instance, and have then momentarily, then put them out with a great parade of fairness, and then you set a snare for them under the head of "assent signified"-knowing that it would have precisely the same affect as if all this igglery of in and out and in again were not resorted to.

Now, Mr. President, I am a plain man, and I desire to say, in broad terms and in measured language, that this is a mockery-a complete mockery! "You keep the word of promise to the ear, but break it to the hope." Now I to the ear, but break it to the hope." Now I want to propound to my honorable friend, the chairman of the committee, one question I want to know if this is not a final act of legis-lation! Does not this bill include within the Territories all these grants in future, and all the residue of the country comprised within the exterior limits, in present? And I maintain that to include them by a final and a flagislation-though in future—is just as surved bereach of the treations as it would be to include them fin current? We do the zery thing which the the treaties as it would be to include them in present. You do the very thing which the Indians provided against by these stipula-tions. They knew that if they were included within the limits of any Territory or State, every effort would be made to get away their lands. And do you gain any thing—so far as the question of good faith is concerned—by in-cluding them in the Territories in future, and then embarking instantly in that very effort! Does it make any differement Indians Does it make any difference to the poor Indians in what order the facts occur! The purpose to include them in the Territories and to get away their lands is entertained at one and the same moment, and that is avowed on the face of the bill. I beg Senators to consider what was the object of these treaty stipulations not to be in-cluded in the limits of any State or Territory. Was it to secure to the Indians their landst Nol because the treaties declare in express terms that they shall be theirs forever. Was it to secure to them the right of self-government? Not at all: for the treaties are equally explicit on that point. What, then, was the object of it? It was to protect themselves against the all-corrupting effect of our glittering gold. They had experienced the bitter consequences of such (Mr. Dovgras) to proceed to its considera-seductions before. Indeed it is well known tion, which failed by a vote of 20 yeas to 25 that it has been the settled policy of this Government for the last quarter of a century, in- day, and the bill was taken up without a division, augurated by the late President Jackson, to when a Senator from Arkansas moved to lay it separate the Indian race wholly from our own on the table, which prevailed by a vote of 23.

out-where they are to remain until they shall people, and to place them by themselves, where they could be educated, civilized, and, if possible, christianized: where there would be no motive, either on the part of the General Government or the people of any State or Territory, for dispossessing them of their lands. All this is now to be reversed. And how long can you expect to escape the reproach of just and good men every where. Sir, I rejeice that there is one honorable member of this body-I refer to my friend from Texas (Mr. Housron)-who has long been the protector and guardian of these poor people, and who will endeaver to assert and vindicate their rights under the treaties to which I have referred. He is much more competent to do justice to the subject than I am, and I rejoios to be able to turn the case over to his faithful hands. If you commence the policy of dispossessing, you will pursue it to a consummation. Where are these unfortunate people to go! Will there not soon be a vast population in Minne-sota-an immense column of enlightened, intolligent, patriotic freemen, rushing forward from the Mississippi to the base of the Rocky Mountains, and ultimately overleaping that barrier, and occupying the Territory beyond. I ask you then, can they go North? No, er! mani-festly no! Will they go South? will you turn them down upon the State of Texas? Would it be just to that State to do so ! And how long could they exist there I is there not another mighty column advancing from the Gulf of Mexico to the North and Northwest, which is ere long to give to the State of Texas an amount of population and wealth which will render her little if any inferior to any State in the Union ? You first lay hands on all their territory east of the Missispip and now you lay hands on all their territory west of that river: or rather you initiate a policy which is to have that result, to a dead certainty. If you pass this bill you write down against the aborginal inhabitants of this country a sentence of annihilation. Are they to be dealt with fairly even in carrying out this scheme-which seems to me to be perfidious. Will it not be a speliation ? It is true indemnities will be granted-perhaps inadequate; but whether adequate or inadequate, nine-tenths of the amount will find its way into the pockets of cur own people-leaving no substantial benefit to the poor Indians.

We are to crush them down, rob them of their territory, and to leave them without an abiding place.

Ere long nothing will remain of them, but the record of their wrongs on the darkest page of our history.

It was mainly on the ground last assumed that I opposed the bill of the last session, though it left the Missouri restriction in full vigor. Having passed the House, a motion was made on the 2d of March, by the honorable Chairman nays. This motion was renewed the succeeding yens to 17 nays. On the first occasion four Northern Senators, viz: Messra, Bradbury, Davis, Firh, and Foot voted with me in the negative, and on the last, four also, viz: Messra, Broadhead, Davis, Fish, and Phelps voted with me in the negative. Messra, Broadhead and Phelps were hot present on the first occasion, and Mr. Brad-bury on the last. It thus appears that seven Northern Scientora, including myself, opposed themselves to this bill resolutely and firmly, no doubt all on the grounds now assumed, and we were supported by every Senator from the slaveholding States with the exception of the Senators from Missouri, (Mesars. Atchison and Gever,) and it is with infinite concern I see a disposition inanifested now by my friends of the slave-holding States to change front and go for this bill en masse. But right cannot be made wrong, nor wrong right, by the introduction of the negro clause. I shall not envy the position of honorable Sepators if such shall be their ultimate course. What will posterity say! What good and just men every where?

Sir, it is contrary to the true interests of the slave-holding States to filch these lands from the poor Indians, and break up their settlements. My opinion is, we should form the country covered by the grants, and perhaps some of the adjoining country, into a distinct territory --- an Indian territory, and then we should concede to them a Delegate in Congress, which if I mistake not, we have authorized them to explot by the terms of one or more of the treaties. I would then change our policy entirely. I would exclude the trader. and above all I would exclude the great curse of the Indian race, alcohol. Whatever goods or agricultural instruments they require can Le purchased by the United States through the War Department. I would pursue such a policy as to gradually wean them from the chase to the avocations of the plough, the are, and the scythe, and thus build up a prosperous if not a great community, as a perpetual monument to the justice and goodness of the American people. I would not depart from the treatics even though you now proposed for the first time to enact the exclusion of slavery north of 36º 30'. I am for standing by the faith of treaties at all hazarda. " Fiat justitia ruat coelum."

(Hero the Senate, on motion of Mr. Szwaru, adjourned; and on the succeeding day, to wit, Priday, February 11th, it resumed the consideration of the subject, when Mr. Surru proceeded as follows:)

Mr. PRESIDENT: I result the remarks which I' was addressing to the Senate yesterday, by recurring to some of the last words uttered by the great DANEL WRESTER in this chamber. They were as follows:

"By polyiet is years; my object is reconciliation. My find gentlement from every part of the country portoge is to to make the same for the Menhor South. My supporting the organization of Nebraska with definition of the country total state of the country barries and the same state of the same state Precisely in this spirit I rise, Mr. President, to oppose the clauses of this bill which proposes to abrogate the Missouri Compromise. In the same generous, liberal, and truly national spirit, with a view to the peace of the country, and to sus-tain the reconciliation so happily accomplished in 1850, I shall resist to the last this unrecessary measure. The course which I pursued at the last session, in voting, as already stated, against the bill for organizing Nebraska, when it left the exclusion of slavery north of 360, 30" untouched, is proof conclusive that my opposition now is not based on sectional motives. I feel at liberty, under such circumstances, to speak, and shall speak with entire freedom. I do not hesitate, Mr. President, to pronounce this proposition a fire brand thrown into the two houses of Copgress. It is, in my judgment, calculated to in-flame the country in a high degree, and to bring back upon us all the dangers and evils from which we have but just escaped by the efforts of our wiscet and best men. We are now to undo the great measures of peace which were adopted in 1850, and which have been cordially acquiesced in by all parties and all sections of the country. In short, we are to have strifes, bickerings, alienations, and disturbance, without the slightest prospect of benefit to either section. I hope there is enough of goodness and moderation in the body to put down this project of mischief at once, so that we may conscerate our time and our faculties to the promotion of such measures as are demanded by the welfare of a great and united people.

And here, Mr. President, I cannot help noticing the extraordinary manner in which this measure has been sprung upon Congress. Was it suggested or dreamed of before we met at this Capitol on the first Monday of December 1 Had it been adverted to in the newspapers, or at public meetings of our citizens, either North or South? Have the legislatures of the Southern States demanded it, or has there been any expression of public sentiment, either there or elsewhere, to sustain it? On the contrary, is not the universal acquiesence of the country in the bill of the last session, which left the Missouri restriction in full force, proof conclusive that the American people have been taken completely by surprise!

Why, sir, that bill was carried through the Howe by a large majority--the vote being yeas 98, mays 43. There were in the affirmative no less than twenty votes from the elavelolding States, viz: From Maryland, Evana; from Virgins, Holliday, McMullan, and Powell; from Alahama, Cobb and Smith; from Louisiana, Landry and St. Martin, From Kentucky, Gray Stone, and Ward; from Tennessee, Johnson (Anverw). Watkins, and Williams; and from Missouri, Darby, Hall, Miller, and Porter. Thus we find gentlemen from every part of the country supporting the organization of Nebraska with alavery totally excluded from its limits by the ext of 1820. I am disposed to think that there is not a man in the nation who has been more strenuous in upholding the rights, the interests, and the honor of his own section, than the present able Executive of Tennessee; and yet he deemed it but just that the Missouri restriction should be maintained, and Nebraska organized subject to that restriction unimpaired and in force. I would inquire, moreover, why the President did not advert to this subject in his annual message at the opening of the present session. If the restriction be a grievance, and its repcal be called for by the public sentiment of the South, surely he must have known it. If it be repugnant to the adjustment of 1850, and subversive of our true interests, surely the fact could not have escaped his vigilance. And vet, sir, in a moment of profound repose, and without the knowledge or suspicion, I venture to say, of five members, this magazine of explosive materials has been introduced into Congress, and we are required to deal with it as best we may. am confident the impression will exist universally, or nearly so, that there are other objects than the public good, which have prompted this ex-traordinary procedure. I fear that this is no-thing but a movement on the political checkerboard, and has more reference to party objects, and future presidential elections, than to the real welfare of the American people.

I cannot avoid, Mr. President, taking some notice here of the singular mutations which this measure has undergone. It has been presented to us in all manner of shapes and forms. In the first place, we have subplitted to us a report from the Committee on Territories, in which, after looking at the subject in all its bearings, they very wisely and properly conclude, that they could not recommend the repeal of the 8th ecction of the Missouri act, and they report a bill which certainly does not repeal it in express terms, but concludes with the following section :

"SEC. 21. And be it further enacted. That, in order 10 "SEC. 21. And so if further enacted, That, in order to avoid all miscontraction, it is hereby idealed to be the true intent and meaning of this act, so far as the question of slavery is concerned, to carry into practical operation the following propositions and "principles established by the compromite measures of IESA, to wit:

"First, that all questions pertaining to slavery in the Terri-teries, and in the new States to be formed therefrom, are to be left to the decision of the people residing therein, th ough be let to the fact into of the people relating interns, to court "Brond, that 'Bl cases involving title to slaves' and 'questions of personal freedom,' are referred to the adjudica, tion of the local thubnas, with the right of appeals to the Eu-perne Court of the United States. "Third, that the provisions of the Constitution and laws of the United States, in respect to fugitives from service, are to be carried into fuithful execution in all "the organized Terri-tories" the same as in the States."

I consider this section as one of the most extraordinary samples of legislation which has ever been presented to the civilized world. It opens with intimating that the bill is susceptible of some "misconstruction," but how, or where, is not indicated. The question here arises, that if there be doubtful clauses in the bills, why not amond them at once. Why resort to such a It busite de conductations will be accounted, will be accounted in the solid framework of the definition of the solid framework of the so striction. But, nevertheless, he informs us that his object is "to carry into practical operation." certain "propositions and principles." Well, then, sir, why not write them down at once But this, it seems, would not answer some inserutible purpose of the chairman, and therefore he adds as one of his propositions or principles, "that all questions pertaining to slavery in the Territories and in the new States to be formed therefrom, are to be left to the people residing therein, through their appropriate representa-tives." Now, sir, what does this mean? Does it repeal the restriction of 1820? Was it intended to repeal it f If so, why not use the ordinary words of repeal ! I venture to assert that never has Congress, or the American people bea puzzled so much as they were by this Delphic oracle. In one quarter of the Union it was unoracle. In one quarter of the Union is was un-derstood to mean one taining and in the epposite quarter a different thing. I, myself, concluded that is would take a jury of nucceen Fhiladd-phia lawyars to fit is meaning. I am presty well astisfied that the real object was to dis-credit the Sits section shift for the real doubt. I think I can find a citle to the real purpose of that part of the bill now before us, in the language, addressed by the honorable chairman (Mr. Douglas) to the Senate, on opening this debate, as follows:

"I know these are some new, White and Democrate, who, not willing to expediate the Ralimore instructions of their own parts, would be willing to vote for this principle, provided they rould do in such equivocal terms that they could deny that it means what it, was intraded to mean in critical loading its. Ad on one with to deal an any equivocal language."

We all know the honorable chairman is distinguished for his frankness; he uses no equivecal, language-not hel. His object was truly philanthropic-it was to accommodate certain tender footed "Whigs and Democrats" who might be "willing to vote for this principle"... that is to say the overthrow of the Missouri compromise..."provided" they could do so in such equivocal terms that they could deny that it means what it is intended to mean in certain. Ah! hal "equivocal torms!" Great localities. statesmanship, this!

I think the bill was before us in this form for from Kentucky, (Mr. Drxes,)-and I call under great obligation to him for the service he has rendered us-introduced a proposition to abrogate the 6th section of the act of 1820 at ence. This seems to have involved my frend, the chairman for the Territories, in pretty serious difficulty,' and he all at once concluded to come up to the scratch; therefore he reports a new bill, dividing the one Territory which he proposed originally into two, and inserting instead of the 21st section of the hill first reported the following provision:

"Upon the other point, that perturbing to the question of here the expanding of the second second second by the Composition leads of the second second second by the Composition leads of 1950 to one goild, and intended to make each and every provision, or the bill second with those principles. These measures established and a rest upon the grass principles of self government, that the people should be there is detended the question or their domarks instructions for themselves, subject only to such imitations and restrictions as are imposed by the Constitution of the United States, in-stead of having them determined by an arbitrary or geographical line.

That is to say, the committee, by the 21st section of the bill as first reported, really intonded to set aside the Missouri restriction; for it has been all the while insisted that the 8th section of the act of 1820 is in principle and substance incompatible with the measures of 1850. The honorable chairman seems to have forgotten that he had declared in his report, in express terms, that the committee could not recommend the report do not jump together very well; or, in other words, he is like one of Shakspeare's characters, "the latter end" of whose discourse "forgot the beginning." But it seems that the 8th section "was superseded by the legislation of 1850." Whoever before heard of a solemn act of Congress being superseded by principles; and, if superseded, where the necessity of adverting to the subject at all.

This curious performance seems to have perplexed honorable Senators nearly as much as the original demonstration. The honorable chairman at length found out that it would hardly do; and, therefore, as he says, he consulted the friends of the measure, or, in other words, he held a council of war; and the result of their united meditations is a substitute, which I will now examine.

In course of a practice, Mr. President, which extended over some fifteen or twenty years, I became somewhat familiar with the construing of statutes, and knew how their different parts were designated. We, who are lawyers, have all heard of the preamble of a statute; the enacting clause; the exception, or qualification, and the proviso; but I never before heard of the exordium and the peroration of a statute or bill.

Here we have the exordium of the proposed amendment.

"Which" (that is to say, the 8th section of the act of 1820) "being inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress, with alvery in the States and Territories, as recog-aired by the legislation of 1850, commonly called the Compro-mise measure."

Here the enacting clause.

"Is hereby declared inoperative and void."

Here the peroration.

"It being the true intent and meaning of this not not to le-giales slaver into any Teritory or State, nor to exclude it bearform; but to leave the people thereof periody free to form and regulate their domentic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States."

My honorable friend from Massachusetts (Mr. EVERTT) seemed to be greatly perplexed with this singular affair, and asked with great propriety why you do not simply say that the 8th

Whereupon the honorable chairman delivers | section "be and the same is hereby repealed ?" No doubt it would have been done so, were it not for the political elements to which I have adverted. Probably the honorable chairman (Mr. DOUGLAS) had in his cyc tender-footed Whigs and Democrate, for whom he seems to have a profound solicitude. This looks to me very much like advoit or cunning legislation. I suspest it was apprchended that it would not quite do to break down the Missouri Compromise at ouce, or by the ordinary simple plain enactment. The idea must be held out that if the 8th section was not absolutely overthrown by the legislation of 1850, it was in some mysterious way undermined, or so weaken d, that it is proper now to blow it into the air. It was about half demolished then, and there is a call on us now to give it the coup de grace.

What is meant by the expression "inconsistent with the principle of nou-intervention # Do you mean to assert that the legislation of 1850 is so incompatible with or repuguant to that of 1820, as to annul the latter? We all know that incompatibility Letween acts may be such as that both cannot possibly stand, and that in such case the latter will so operate as to repeal the former. Will any one assume the responsibility of affiming that incompability has annulled the act of 1820. If so, where is the necessity of your interposition; and, if not, why eannot the measures stand together? Can more be said than that the legislation of 1850 is unlike that of 1820-as it undoubtedly is? Is it uncommon to put into acts of legislation, touching kindred subjects, different, or unlike pro-visions? Must all Territorial legislation be east in the same mould? May you not have one set of provisions for one Territory and a different set for another? Nay: is not this often indispensable? You therefore arrive at the conclusion (which you were determined to reach anyhow) that the 8th section shall be "inoperative and void"---without any reason. It is your sovereign will and pleasure. Further, are not the words "inoperative and void" perfectly explicit? What oceasion is there to declare their "true intent and meaning." Or, in other words, why have you introduced the percration, and why a procedure so extraordinary ?

Sir, this is legislation with excuses, or apologies.

You knew that a direct repeal, and in the ordinary form would give a great shock to public sontement in this country, and therefore the subject must be befogged, and be made to assume a plausible aspect.

Can it be possible that honorable and upright gentlemen, from the South, are about to approve such indirection and artifice? We know that legislation like the act of 1820 has ever been to them a stumbling block and an offence, and they may be now willing to get rid of the 8th section; but it seems to me that it would better befit their character for frankness to have the abrogation accomplished in the ordinary way, and in simple plain terms.

Mr President, in my judgment, the extraordinary proceedings here depicted are proof conciusive that the incompatibility which has been eet up, is all a pretence—is an afterblought. The incessant mutations which the proposed legislation has undergone, within a brief neriod, show that you have no fixed ideas on the subject, and the adroitness of the verbigge which you throw around the only operative clause prove an apprehension that the measure may after all turn out quite hazardous. Indeed, the whole proceedings have a very bad aspect; and, anless we are willing that the people of this country should believe that the Scated, directly with unided States has ceased to be the caralted, directly, we should reject, with indignation, a measure imbued with such singular, not to say unworthy elements.

And here, sir, I must be permitted to notice the many incongruous notes which "the organ" published in this city, has sounded forth on this subject. When the honorable chairman asserted in his report, in substance, that he and his associates could not recommend an abrogation of the 8th section, and when, shortly after the honorable Senator from Massachusetts, (Mr. SUMNE,) proposed an express re-enactment of that section, and the honorable Senator from Kentucky, (Mr. Dixos,) a repeal, these gentle-men were held up to the country as representing extreme opinions, and as being actuated by factious or at least partisan motives. The former was pronounced a mischivous anti-slavery a itator, and the latter and equally mischivous pro-slavery agitator, while the honorable chairman was all that could be moderate, just, and statesmanlike. He (it was insisted) was pursuing an intermediate course, and we were all asked to rally around him and save the country from another convulsion. But soon thereafter he took a leap South and assumed the position of annulment, and then "the organ" lept after him, and indeed sticks to him as closely as his own shadow. It seems to mo that the paper alluded to must be "the organ" of the honorable chairman rather than of the Administration. It is clearly contrary to the interests of the latter to involve Congress and the country in another controversey on the subject of slavery.

But, Mr. President, I do no intend to rest the case on considerations such as these. I propose to examine the subject in all its bearings, and by a full and precise induction of facts and considerations to show beyond doubt or cavil there is nothing in the legislation of 1850 incompatible with that of 1820, and that it was the intention: of Congress and the expectation of the country both should stand together, as well they may. And here I would observe that the honorable elairman, in his opening speech, commited himself to an issue of a very grave character, to which I mean to hold him on the present oceasin. He says:

"That a close examination of those acts clearly establishes the fact that it was the intent, as well as the legal effect of the Compromise Measures of 1850, to supersede the Missouri Compromise, and all geographical and Territorial lines

Here is, first, a direct and positive allegation of a fact that it was "the intent" of the measures of 1850 to supercede the Missouri Compromise, and secondly, an opinion declared that such is their "legal effect."

I deny, utterly, the fact, and I controvert, with equal positiveness, the soundness of the opinion. I will not stop to inquire why the honorable chairman is dabling with the subject at all, if his allegations are true, but I choose to meet the issue at once, and fast forced.

What, Mr. President, were the measures of 1850 They were, (1) to shoit California; (2) to adjust the disputed housinery with Texas; (3) to adjust the disputed housinery with Texas; (4) to adjust the diave trace is the Distict of Columbia; (4) to amend our laws for the return of fugitives from halor, so as to make them more effective; and finally, to provide Territorial goveraments for Urah and New Mexico. It is not checking and the disputed of the second second pretended that any of these measures, other than those last indicated, have the slightest bearing on this subject. We will inquire then, whether there is any incomparability between the sets organizing Utah and New Mexico, and legislation for Nebraska and Kansas, leaving the 8th section of the act of 1820 in force.

I would observe, in the first place, that there is nothing in either of the acts first mentioned, on the subject of slavery, except the following clause, "And provided further, that when admitted as a State, the said territory, or any por-tion of the same, shall be received into the Union with or without slavery, as their constitution may prescribe at the time of their admission." We do not propose that you should re-enact, in express terms, the restrictions of 1820, but are willing to vote for a bill, so far as this objection is concerned, in precise conformity with the provisions of that which passed the House at the last session, or in other words, for a bill which says nothing of slavery one way or the other. The only difference between such bill and the Utah and New Mexico acts would consist in the fact that the clause above recited appears in the former and would not appear in the latter. Be it remembered that the 8th section of the act of 1820 provides no rule for the admission of States into the Union which might be formed out of the territory lying north of 36° 30', but simply provides that, from such territory "slavery and involuntary servitude, otherwise than in punishment of crimes, whereof the parties shall have been duly convicted, shall be and is hereby for-ever prohibited." Notwithstanding the word "forever" is used, I apprehend that the 8th seetion applies only to the country during its Terri-torial existence, and should a State present itself for admission, with a constitution tolerating slavery, we could receive it into the great na-tional family without violating that section. How then, can the clause which I have recited from the Utah and New Mexico acts, be considcred incompatible with legislation for Nebraska and Kausas, which is silent on the subject of slavery, or which, in other words, leaves those Territorics subject to the restrictions of 1020. is difficult to see how a State which applies for admission can be excluded though her constitution tolerates slavery, and though she be formed out of territory made free by the act of 1820.

Any State now free, can co amend its constitution as to introduce slavery if it pleases, and it is obvious that the people of the States, whether already in or about to come in, must decide this troublesome question for themselves. What then, does the clause in the acts organizing governments for Utah and New Mexico amount to after all! Fortunately we are not without some light upon this subject. Mr. WEBSTER voted in favor of that clause when proposed as an amendment by a late Senator from Louisiana, (Mr. Sours,) but he observed, "I do not see much practical utility in this amendment." And further, the honorable chairman himself, in his speech at Chicago, (October 23, 1850,) took even stronger ground-"the bills," said he, "establishing Ter-ritorial governments for Utah and New Mexico are silent upon the subject of slavery, except the provision that, when they should be admitted into the Union as States, each should decide the question of slavery for itself. This latter provision was not incorporated in my original bills, for the reason that I conserved it to involve a principle so clearly deducible from the Constitution that it was unnecessary to embody it in the form of legal enactment. But when it was offered as an amendment to the billa, I cheerfally voted for it, lest its rejection should be deemed a denial of the principle asserted in it." So that Mr. WEBSTER could see "very little of practical utility" in the clause, and the honorable chairman no utility whatever. The legislation of 1850 was then, in effect, silent on the subject of slavery. Why can you not be silent now, and how can any one assert that it was the intent as well as the legal effect of the Compromises of 1850 to supercede the Missouri Compromise ? You organise Territorial governments for certain countries and you do not deem it expe-dient to prohibit the introduction of slavery. What has that to do with countries many hundred miles off, where the circumstances may be, and are in fact, entirely different !

In the next place I would observe that the system of measures adopted in 1850, were intended to comprise all the known subjects of controversy between the different sections of the Union, so as to put an end to the slavery question forever: they were to be a finality : they were intended to redress all existing grievancen-and the Missouri restriction was a griev-ance in 1850 if it be so now. That measures comprehending every cause of dissension or difficulty were really intended, appears from what Mr. CLAY said in his opening speech, delivered in the Senate on the 5th of February, as follows: "When I came to consider this subject, there were two or three general purposes which seemed to me most desirable, if possible, to accomplish. The one was to settle all the controverted questions arising out of the subject of slavery; and it seemed to me to be doing very little if we settle one question and left other disturbing questions anadjusted. It seemed to me but doing but little if we stopped but one leak in the ship of state and is to her less sequilies of of dramatic the ship of a dramatic for a single state and is the rest sequilies of a dramatic the ship of the connected with the institution of slavery, and out of which controverted questions have sprung, to to the if it were possible or practicable to ac-connectate and adjust the whole of them." He requently addressed the Senate on the importance-nay, the necessity of comprehensive and final measures of reconciliation.

He often specified all the known causes of irritation; and on one oceasion he spoke of them as "five gaping wounds"-meaning only the matters already alluded to. In no instance did he speak of the Missouri restriction as a wound or cause of irritation, nor did he dream of setting it aside. In no instance did any other member suggest or propose the overthrow of that restriction. Nothing is to be found in the reports submitted to the Senate or House to that effect. Nothing in the speeches of honora-ble members. Nothing in the resolutions or acts of State Legistures, and nothing in the suggestions of the press-either North or South. We were to have a final adjustment; the harmony of the country was to be restored; and every possible oceasion for the reintroduction of these iritating topies into Congress was to be removed. All this was attempted, and was supposed to have been accomplished. The country rejoiced accordingly, and the authors of this happy consummation were regarded by an immense majority of the American people as public benefac-tors. The universality of the adjustment was recognised by President FILLMORE in his annual Message, (2d session of the S1st Congress,) in these words : "The series of measures to which I have alluded are regarded by me as a settlement, in substance and principle-a final settlement of the dangerous and exciting subjects which they embrace." I venture to assert, also, that the honorable chairman (Mr. Dousi, as) himself took exactly the same view of the subjectfor he observed, in a speech delivered in this chamber, on the 23d December, 1850: "I wish to state that I have determined never to make another speech on the slavery question. And I will now add the hope that the necessity for it. will never exist. I am heartily tired of the con-troversy." And then he added, "1 will therefore say to the friends of those measures let us eease agitating; stop the debate, and drop the subject. If we do this, the Compromise will be recognised as a final settlement. If we do not, we have gained bat little by its adoption." And yet, according to the views now presented by the Senator, there was no final settlementthere remained undisposed of the question of the abrogation of the Missouri restriction, which was calculated, more than any other cause, to inflame the country, and set it by the cars. He knew that Territorics must sooner or later by formed out of the country-or some part of itnorth of the parallel of 36° 30'. Could he have imagined that on the formation of such Territories the abrogation could be introduced without raising another storm. And then, what a singular method the Senator has of dropping the subject, and of carrying out his

In the next place, Mr. President, I take the ground that the Compromise Measures of 1850 were formed and carried through Congress on the basis of mutual concessions, and with a view not to give either section any considerable ad-vantage over the other. This I can prove by recurring to the speech of Mr. CLAT, already fuoted, in which he cays: "It appeared to me, then, that if, any arrangement, any entisfactory adjustment could be made, of the controverted questions between the two classes of States, that adjustment, that arrangement could only be successful and effectual, by exacting from both parties some concession-not of principle-not of principle at all, but of feeling, of opinion, in relation to the matters of controversy between them. I believe that the resolutions which I have prepared fulfill that object. I believe that you will find upon that eareful, rational, and sttentive examination of them which I think they deserve, that by them heither party makes any concessions of principle at all, though the concessions of forbcaranee are ample." I would observe here, that the measures ultimately adopted were based on the resolutions of Mr. CLAY; and, indeed, there is an exact coincidence between them. It was supposed that the principle of inutuality of concession had been fully carried out; and on this idea the people acquiesced, and on this only.

The same view of the subject was taken by Mr. WEBSTER in his speech delivered in this chambér, July 17, 1850. I quote as follows: "Well, sir, the next inquiry is, what do Massachusetts and the North, the anti-slavery States, lose by this adjustment? I put the question to every gentleman here, and to every man in the country. They lose the application of what is called the Wilmot Proviso, to these Territories, and that is all. There is nothing else that I suppose the whole North are not willing to do or willing to have done. They wish to get California into the Union and to quiet New Mexico; they wish to terminate the dispute about the Texas boundary, cost what it may. They make no sacrifice in all these. What they energice is this: the application of the Wilnot provise to the Territories of New Mexico and Utah, and that is all." Here is the same idea of mutuality: the South would concede the admission of California into the Union, and the North governments for New Mexico and Utah without the Wilmot proviso. They would saerifice the application of the Proviso to these Territories. Mr. Webster did not dream that they were at the same time sacrificing the restriction of 1820, or in other words, that we were admitting slavery into the countries which we acquired from France, lying north of 36 deg. 20 min. I am truly happy to call to my aid, under this head of remark, the honorable chairman himself, referring again to his Chicago speech, which is, I admit, characterized with pose to do so, the proposition with which I set out, ability. He undertook, on that occasion, to defend the mutuality and the equality of the con- I that is, that the whole territory within the cessions made on the one side and the other, and the justice and propriety of the adjustment. After expatiating on the various topics embraced in the Compromise, he makes the following broad deelaration, "neither party has grined or lost any thing, so far as the question of elavery is concerned." Texas has gained ten millions of dollars, and the United States has naved in blood and treasure, the expensive of a civil war." The honorable Senator did not intimate to his con-stituents that he had been undermining or tearing down the restriction of 1820. The statement of such fact would have created a profound sensation at Chicago, and indeed throughout the whole northern' country. I will not do the Senator the injustice to suppose that he entertained any such idea at the time, for that would be to hold him up to the nation as the most disingenuous of men. If he chooses now to hold himself up in that light, it is an affair of his own, not mine. The repeal of the 8th section would have completely unsettled the balance of concession which Mr. CLAY 80 carefully adjusted as between the two sections. The South would have obtained a great victory over the North, nay, an absolute conquest! It would be a meekery to call the measures of 1850 a compromise on this hypothesis.

Besides all this, I can prove, from the lanmage held by the leading members of Congress during the pendency of this controversy, that nothing could have been further from their thoughts than the repeal of the 8th section of the Missouri act. I shall begin with referring to the speeches of Mr. WEBSTER. In his celebrated 7th of March speech, I find the following passage: "And I now say, sir, as the proposition on which I stand this day-and upon the truth and firmness of which I intend to act until it is overthrown-that there is not at this moment within the United States, or any Territory of the United States, a single foot of land, the character of which, in regard to its being free territory or slave territory, is not fixed by some law, and come irrepealable law, beyond the power of the action of the Government." . This opinion, so strongly expressed, was based on the idea that the character of the territory northwest of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, was fixed as free territory by the ordnance of 1787, that the territory west of the Mississippi and north of 36 deg. 30 min. was also fixed as free by the restriction of 1820. That the territory comprised within the State of Texas was fixed as slave territory by the terms and conditions of her admission into the Union. That the territory embraced by the limits of California was fixed as free territory by the provisions of the Constitution: and the Territories of Utah and New Mexico were fixed as free territory by irresistable laws of nature. To some of these topics he barely alluded, and on others he commented at length, and then concluded as follows: "Now. Mr. President, I have established, as far as I proand with which I intend to stand or fall, and former United States, or in the newly acquired Mexican provinces, has a 'ixed and settled character, now fixed and settled by law, which cannot be repealed; in the case of Texas without a violation of public faith, and by no human power in regard to California and New Mexico. That, therefore, under one or the other of these laws, every foot of land in the States or the Territories has clearly received a fixed and decided character."

And then, again, he remarks, in his speech of the 3d of June, as follows: "On the 7th of March, sir, I declared my opinion to be that there is not a square rod of territory belonging to the United States, the character of which for slavery or no slavery is not already fixed by some irrepealable law. I remain of that opinion." And then, after some observations not material to be quoted, he adds: "I have heard no argument calculated in the slightest degree to alter that opinion; the committee, I believe, with one accord concurred in it' How could Mr. WEARTER use such broad language if he had supposed that Congress were, by the Compromise Measures of that year, laying the founda-tion for the overthrow of the restriction of 1820. A quotation from a subsequent part of this speech of the 3d of June, will prove conclusive-ly what his views were: "And let it be remembered," he says, "that I am now speaking of New Mexico and Utah, and other territories acquired from Mexico, and nothing elec. I confine myself to these; and as to them, I say, that I see no oceasion to make a provision against slavery now, or to reserve to ourselves the right of making such provision hereafter. All this rests on the most thorough conviction that, under the laws of nature, there never can be slavery in these Territories. This is the foundation of all." Mr. WEBSTER obviously thought that the Missouri restriction was a "fixed fact;" and as the celebrated Committee of Thirteen upanimously concurred with him in the opinion, the position which I assume is impregnable. It is idle to pretend that Congress intended by the measures of 1850 to set aside the Compromise of 1820.

But I maintain that the universality of the adjustment of 1850 has been recognised and admitted in the proceedings of Congress until within a very short period. The action of the two Houses on the Nebraska bill of the last session is a very striking illustration of this fact. It is true that the bill then said nothing on the subject of slavery, either one way or the other. It did not repeal the Sth section of the Missouri act, and therefore left it to operate on the Ter-ritory in all its vigor. The attention of the House was particularly called to this fact by an honorable member, (Mr. Gippixes,) whose appearance on the floor was pre-eminently adapted to arouse the suspicions and awaken the vigilance of Southern members. After quoting the 8th section of the act of 1820, he remarked that "this law stands perpetually, and I did not think that this act would receive any increased validity by a re-enactment. There I leave the matter. It is very clear that the territory included Mexico and Utah, you conferred on the people in that treaty must be forever free, unless that law be repealed." And yet in face of this broad avowal, no less than twenty members from slaveholding States, as before stated, including Mr. Johnson, the present Governor of Tennessee, voted for the bill. How idle is it to pretend now that we had either repealed, or had laid the foundation for repealing, the restriction of 1820, by the Compromises of 1850.

The bill was sent to the Senate, and fell into the hands of the bonorable chairman; and he reported it back to the body with the recommendation that it should pass without amendment. He was strenuous in his efforts to bring it to the consideration of the Senate, and to secure its passage. He then addressed the Senate at length, and said that it was an act very "dear to his heart." It was dear when he was going for freedom, and it is probably more dear now when he is striking for slavery. Not a word did the Senator say about the wonderful workings of the measures of 1850 in subversion of the 8th section. He tells us that the bill underwent a thorough investigation both in the House and by his committee; and he seems then to have made no discovery of the occult elements now found to have been lurking under the verbiage of 1850, to which he would give such an extraordinary effect. Even the distinguished and honorable Senator from Missouri, (Mr. Archison,) was in the same oblivious frame of mind: for, in, addressing the Senate ou that occasion, he re-marked, "I found that there was no prospect of the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, excluding slavery from that Territory." It is certain, then, that nobody dreamed-down to so late a period as the last session-that we had, in 1850. done anything to break down, or even weaken, the Compromise of 1820.

I do not envy the position in which these facts place the honorable chairman. Did he suppose, in 1850, that we were subverting the 8th section, or laying the foundation for its subversion! If so, why did he not undeceive Mr. WEBSTER! Why did he suffer him to act with fearful responsibilities, under the delusion that the terri-tory north of 36 deg. 30 min., and this side of the Rocky mountains, was fixed, irrevocably fixed for freedom? Why did he suffer the honorable Scenator from Missouri to fall, at the last ession, into the same error! Or, rather, why did he not rise and correct it on the spot! Why not communicate with his friends in the House of Representatives, and why not lay the true state of the case before the Senate and the country? The Senator, by the position he now as-sumes, arraigns himself; he impeaches his own conduct; he furnishes conclusive evidence on the issue adverse to himself; and the verdict of impartial and upright men will be quite like. to shock his self-esteem, and to give him a place and a name on the pages of American history quite the reverse of enviable.

But, Mr. President, I deny that there is to be found any such principle or policy in the legislation of 1850, as is argrested in this amendment. I deny that, by the l'erritorial acts for New there the power to regulate, at pleasure, their do more urgent in respect to the newly acquired mestic institutions or left them free to act on Marican provinces than in ordinary cases. How this or any other subject. No such liberty of wait with New Maricel' We find there eas action has ever been conferred by this Govern-uncongenial and a bostile population, speaking meant on the people of the Ferritories. 'Origin- a foreign language, just subdied by our army ally, the whole power of legislation was con-ignorized to the trearmonth index of the section of governments and unfa-field to the trearmonth index of the section of the fided to the governor and judges of the respec-tive Territories; but latterly, the people, I admit, have been allowed to participate to some extent therein.

But let us recur to the New Mexico and Utah acts, and see how the matter stands. I say there is written down in each of those acts a declara-tion of want of confidence in the people of those countries. We have invested the President with the power of appointing, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, all the executive and judicial officers of each Territory. We have assumed that the people are not competent to elect such officers. How, then, can it be supposed that Congress intended to confide to them, exclusively, the power of deciding the momentous question of slavery or freedom.

It is true they are authorized to choose a council to consist of thirteen members, and a house of representatives to consist of twenty-six, but "the legislative power and authority" is not vested in them solely, but the governor is associated with them in the exercise thereof. The language of both acts is, "that the legislative power and authority of such Territory shall be vested in the governor and legislative assembly;" ap & sgain, "that the governor shall approve all laws passed by the legislative assem-bly before they take effect." Hence, it appears, that the people can do nothing without the assent and concurrence of the governor. Give me the appointment of the governor, and I can ex-clude slavery forever if not introduced, or per-petuate it folerated. No matter hav anxious-ly the people may desire its introduction or its exclusion --- no matter though they may be unanimous in calling for slavery or freedom, the gov-ernor, who helds his office at the will of the Executive here, can pronounce a peremptary negative, and overrule their wishes.

But this is not all, sir, another part of the acts provides that, " All the laws passed by the legislative assembly and governor, shall be sub-mitted to the Congress of the United States, and if disapproved, shall be null and of no effect." Singular liberty, this! And equally singular method of conferring on them the power "to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way." Congress says, in effect, we will not entrust to you the power to enact even a wolf or dog law-we will appoint a master over you-one who is not responsible to you, but to us; he shall revise all your doings, and may write them down a nullity if he sees fit. And in order to make all safe we reserve to ourselves the power of ultimate revision. Though you obtain even the concurrence of the governor. it shall not avail you ; in short, we do not intend you shall have any legislation for Utah and New Maxico except just such as we approve. The Senators who do their duty to society and the demands for these precautions were infinitely fairer portion of God's creation, and those who miliar with the principles of our free institutions. How indispensable, then, was it that we should have the power to hold anch a population in check, and to overrule any and all their determinations, and yet in face of the plain provisions of these acts of Congress, and of the palpable facts of the case, this amendment, in effect, asserts that we left them "perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way." Bui, Mr. President, I will bring the matter at once to an issue, which I challenge the honorable chairman of the committee, (Mr. Doveras,) to meet. You say that by the Utah bill you intended to leave the people there perfectly free to regulate their domestic institutions as they What are those domestic institumight see fit. tions or relations! They are husband and wife parent and child, guardian and ward, and mast ter and servant. Now, I desire to ask the chairman, did you intend to confer on the people of Utah the power to introduce polygamy, for that appertains to one of the domestic relations. I want the honorable chairman to stand up here and tell us whether, if the legislative assembly were to send an act here sanctioning polygamy, he would let it stand a single hour? On the contrary, would he not seize a pair of tongs and thrust it out of yonder window?

But, Mr. President, let us trace this matter a little further; let us consider what would be the modus operandi of the singular principle, annuneiated in the amendment, in reference to the polygamous relations of Utah. If they may introduce polygamy in their Territorial condition; if this is one of the relations which they are perfeetly free to establish, and if Congress cannot gain say it, then I say Utsh can knock for ad-mission into the Union, and must be received, though she be covered all over with this more leprosy. We must admit Brigham Young with his forty wives! Nay, more! Brigham might, and probably would, be elected one of the Schators from the new State: has the honorable chairman considered whether he is to bring his forty wives to the Scat of Government; and if so, I would ask in what part of the city is he to establish his harem? The committee on "Public Buildings and Public Grounds" should take his case into tender consideration, as it seems to me. Any patriot having forty wives on his hands, ought, in the matter of his harem, to have a little relief from the public coffers. And, besides, our present system of "mileage and per diem" would hardly do for such a case. I would suggest to my friend the chairman, (hir. DougLAS,) he should allow at least two dollars per day additional for each wife. Discrimination would be indispensable. I have long thought that there should be some distinction made between those do not; but however, this may be, the case of box friend Brigham would cry alond for relief, and the bonorable chairman is not the stateman he has been macked up to be unless he would be ther; and how can legislative hypocracy erbibit willing to grant it!

But, Mr. President, we will suppose Utsh ad-mitted, Brigham elected Senator, and actually, present in this city with all his retinue, and that of forms a procession, with himself at be head, of the sforesaid retinue for the Capitol. Being apmowhat fatigued, he all at once makes a dash with his twice twenty wives for an omnibus, in one corner of which is sitting my worthy friend the chairman. What would become of the Senator! Would he not be stifled! But suppose he escapes, and the oranibus draws up in front of the Capitol; the honorable Senator, who is so much distinguished for his urbanity, gould do no less than land the "domestic institutions" out, and conduct them into the Capitol. Who, then, shall rise and more that this ohamber be opened to "the ladice?" It cannot be my honorable friend from Texas, (Mr. Housson,) who ordinarily performs that gratchil office, for he is utterly opposed to this bill; but at the instance of some Senator who is in favor of the "principle" avoyed in this amendment, the doors are thrown open, and in rushes Brigham and his forty wive, who arrange themselves around the chamber. The Hon. Brighand on being sword in immediately takes the floor on "the negro question." And Ol how the eyes of "the darlings" would flash, and their cruntenspees beam with joy, as their leige lord towered away on the superlative advantages of negro servitude over good old fashioned Saxon liberty, and "the inalignable rights of man!" By the time, Mr. President, all this is over, we should begin to understand the module operandi of this monstrous system-of this unheard of proposition-to leave the people of the Territories to regulate their "domestic institutions," just as they please. Polygamy ! and Slavery ! fit associsics-united in the bonds of unholy wedlock, and producing a miscreated progeny, called in the first instance "principles," but which has finally dwin-lkd down to "the principle ef non-inter-ycation with the doncetic institutions" of the Territories, the people whereof are to be left "perfectly free to form and regulate, them in their own way,"

Let the honorable Senator stand up here and my that he is for a system which will convert the interior of this continent into a Sodam, and which will conflagrate it with brimstone, unless a rie' (co is God, who rules the destinies of men, shall order it otherwise.

But, sir, I contend that the bill itself will be nothing but jargon-nothing but a bundle of contradictions and inconsistances if this amendment prevails. There will be all sorts of discordant voices and votes therein. One clause cries out the people, represented by the council and house of representatives, may be overruled by the governor, and another that the council, house of representatives, governor and all, may be overruled by Congress, and then, comes the amendment which asserts, almost movidentiv, that we leave the people of these Territories "to regulate their domestic institutions" as they may think best. How can inconsistency go fura more, brazen front

And what is more, not ong-half of the work of upturing ancient foundations will have been done. You must immediately attack the ra-striction of garagy introduced by an immense mejority, and by many subserving an innerties mejority, and by many Southern rotes, into the Oregon bill, and you must demolish the ordin-ance of 1787; in its application to so much of Minusedra as is situated east of the Mississippi. In short, the whole structure of legislation which has been creeted with so much of toil, and which has engaged so much of the abilities of the greatest and best man of the nation, is to be swept to the ground, and all that is malignant in fanaticism. both North and South, and all that is wild, unreasonable, and pestiferous in sectional strife is to be let loose upon our national counsels and upon the country.

It results, Mr. President, from these considerations, that i ... basis of the adjustment of 1850 was not to leave the people of the Territories free to regulate their domestic institutions' as they pleased, but it was the "stati guo ante bel-hun.": We were to leave the country exactly in the condition we found it -come part of it tole-rating slavery, and some part of it excluding it. The object was to effect some arrangement that would restore harmony to our national councils and peace to the country, and therefore it was concluded that we should not insert the Wilmov Proviso in the Territorial bills of that year, but pass them silent on the subject of slavery, with the distinct understanding that we were to drop the subject entirely. That this was the great predominating idea of the adjustment, I can move from the record. It is well known that all the countries acquired from Mexico were subject to an anti-slavery restriction, as the laws of that republic remained in force notwithstanding the conquest, until set aside by competent authority. The supreme government of that country had long before the war shrogated the so-called institution of slavery, and converted all the territories within its jurisdiction into "free-soil." This important fact is distinctly referred to and recognised by Mr. CLAY in his speech of February 5th. "By law" (he says) "slavery does not, exist within the territories ceded to us by the Republic of Mexico." * * * "I can only refer to the fact of the presage of a law by the supreme government of Micxico abol-ishing it, I think, in the year 1824." * "The laws of Mexico, as they existed at the momoment of the cession of the territories to this country, remained their laws still, unless they were altered by the new sovereign power which this people and their territories came under in consequences of the treaty of ecssion to the Uni-ted States." Certain Southern Senators were, not estisfied with the mere exclusion of "the Wilmot Proviso" from the Territorial bills-they demanded an abrogation of this Mexican law, but the Senate refused to concede such abrozation.

(the present Secretary of War,) submitted an amendment to that effect, but it was rejected. veas 22, nav 83. My honorable friend from Illinois (Mr. DougLAS) scems not to have been present, and did not vote. This proves conclusively that the basis of the adjustment, or if you will have it. go, "the principle" was "the statu quo." There was an existing obstacle to the introduction of; slavery into the Territories, and Congress was askod to remove it out of the way-but the response was not not, we leave matters to stend as we find them-we wish to drop the subject. If Congress refused to remove an impediment which existed to the introduction of slavery into the Territories with which they were at the moment dealing, how can it be said that they, intended to strike down a similar impediment appertaining to other and different Torritories which were not byfore us at all, nor in the thoughts of any one. If. Mr. President, considerations such as these do not satisfy honorable Senators that the basis of the adjustment of 1850 was in truth and in part such as I now contend for, it is idle to pursue the argument further

I have thus, Mr. President, called to the notice of the Senate the essential elements of the case. which I desire to present, and it only remains for me to advert briefly to certain topics which in orable members, who favor this measure, attribute considerable importance; but which, in my judgment, are entitled to no consideration whatever. Having performed this task, I shall hasten to a conclusion as soon as may be.

In the first place, I wish to notice what was said by the honorable chairman (MR. DouoLAS) on his attempt, in 1848, to carry the parallel of 36° 30" through to the Pacific occan, in which, it seems, he failed. Herein he seems to suppose he can find an ample justification for the attempt which he is now making to break up the Compromise of 1820. Now, Mr. President, what are the facts! There was pending before Congress a bill to organize the Territory of Oregon, the whole of which was situated north of 36 deg. 30 min., the southern line being in the parallel of 42 deg. north latitude, or, in other words, 5 deg. 30 min, north of the ...... line.

The bill, if I mistake not, originated in the House, and, when under consideration in the Senate, it is true the honorable Senator submitted a proposition for an extension of that parallel through to the Pacific ocean as a division between free territory and slave territory, which amendment was adopted by the Senate. In the House, however, it was regarded as incongruous to the main object of the bill, and was rejected accordingly. I cannot see how the Senator can. from this occurrence, derive any apology-much less a justification of his course. If a division on the line of 36 deg. 30 min. was a proper basis of adjustment in 1848, it was equally so in 1850; and why did not the Senator support that basis then, as he had an ample opportunity to dot It appears from the record, that Mr. DAVIS, of Mississippi, submitted in this body, July 19, a propesition to divide on the parallel of 35 deg., which | the honorable Senator take the responsibility as was rejected by a vote of yeas 23, navs 32-the a lawyer of saying that these persons were

On the 23d of July, Mr. DAVIS, of Mississippi, | honorable Senator voted in the negative; that on the same day, Mr. Kino, (late Vice President of the United States.) submitted another proposition to divide on the parallel of 36 deg., which was rejected by a vote of year 20, may 87-the honorable Sentor voted in the negative. It also appears, that on the 6th of August, Mr. TURNEY. submitted a proposition to divide on the parallel of 86 deg. 30 min., which was also rejected by a vote of yeas 24, nave 32, and the honorable Senvote at yeas 24, noy 12, and the honorable Son-tator again victed in the negative. The Sonator, in his opening special, says that the defeat of 1848 "checked (the necessity of making a new whole subject under our control! Was in not just as easy to gatabliah that line in 1850 as it was in 1848. In his speech at Chicago, the Sepator assigns, reasons, enough why that line should not have been adopted; he insisted strenuonaly on that occasion, that the only effect of the division of California on the parallel of 36, deg. 30 min. would be to create two free States in place of one on the Pacific; and this indicated the main ground of my opposition to that parallel. I have ever thought it very bad policy. for the Atlantic States, and particularly the glorious old Thirtcen, to bring on this Government, an avalanche of States to be carved out of our Mexican acquisitions. The resort of the Senator. to such an argument as this is sufficient proof. that he himself is conscious that he has very slender ground to stand on to vindicate the policy of this measure.

But by far the most extraordinary part of the honorable Senator's speech consists in his attempt to place himself in an anti-slavery position. He went into a long induction of facts, in order to prove that the restriction of slavery. has ever been, and ever will be, unfavorable to freedom. He remarked that the Territory of Iowa was organized without any prohibitory clause, and yet (says he) it became, and now re-mains, a free State. But the honorable Senator seems to have forgotten that the 8th section of the Missouri act remained in full vigor, and was binding on the people of Iowa during their Ter-ritorial existence. It was not necessary that the 8th section should have been re-enacted or reaffirmed in the act creating that Territory. Repetition would not have given it one particle of additional force, so that the people of Iowa enjoyed the benefits and blessings of exclusion while a Territory, and, in consequence, they enjoy the fruits of that policy to this day. I very much regret that the honorable Senator should have made such strenuous efforts to discredit the ordinance of 1787, which, according to his account of the matter, tended powerfully to the introduction of slavery. He represents the people of the Northwest as engaged in incessant insurrections against its authority; that they regarded it as an act of grinding oppression, and would have slaves, and did have them, in spite of it. What foundation is there for such a pretence as this? There wars a few French settlers who held slaves de facto; will have delivered every one of them from servitude? He does not say whether there were any nets contravening the ordinance; and if so, should like his opinion on their validity. Sir, the ordinance of 1787 constitutes the main pillar of that vast and glorious fabric of society which is exhibited northwest of the Ohio, and which in point of wealth, vigor, intelligence, and universal progress, is without a parellel in this or any other country. Under its benign and over present influence, there has been built up no less than five large and prosperous States, which will be an ever-present illustration of the advantages which free communities have over those that tolerate African bondage. I can hardly think, therefore, that the honorable Senator has maintained his anti-slavery position; and the avidity with which Senators from slaveholding States come forward to sustain his proposed immolation of the Missouri restriction, is pretty indiation of the inisolation restriction, is precipied on the proof that they think there is very little in this branch of his argument. And here, Mr. President, I must take some notice of the very novel ground taken by the Senator from Kentucky, (Mr. Dixos,) that al-though as a representative of one of the slave States, he might not have submitted this proposition, yet inasmuch as it is brought before the Senate, and offered by the North, he may properly accede to the offer and vote for the abrogation. I want my friend to consider, that if he places his vote on this ground, he may find himself invoived in very considerable difficulty.

I think, with great deference and respect that the Senator ought to have some other evidence of the desire of the North than the mere opinion of any one Senator, however respectable he may he. I would ask the Senator if he is quite sure that a majority of the Committee on Territories is in favor of this measure? Two of the members have already declared their opposition; and I strongly suspect it will appear, before we get inrough, that there is a third member equally opposed, and then the bill will be a mere straggler in this Chamber, and ought to be dismissed for that reason. And I will ask another question: Suppose it turns out that a large majority from the North, even of the Senate, is opposed to this proposition, and a much larger majority of the House, where will the Senator be then? Suppose Northern members shall be induced to betray their constituents in sufficient numbers to pass the bill through the House, and suppose the moment the people get hold of them they are harled with ignominy into private life, I ask again where will the Senator be? After all, is this a statesmanlike argument, and worthy of the successor of HENRY CLAY? Is a measure like this, subverting one of the most solemn acts of this Government, which has lain at the foundation of the peace of the country for over onethird of a century, to be put through on the ipse dixit of a single Senator from the North? I am pretty well convinced that my friend will find out that the honorable chairman of the Committee on Territories is not exactly the proper exponent of Northern sentiment and North- and navy laws, and to the vast multitude of sub-slaves de jure? Would not the habeas corpus eru feeling. He will find out that the honorable chairman does not carry the whole North in his breeches pecket.

I maintain, Mr. President, that the people of the South, and their Representatives in either wing of the Capitol, should be the last to seek or favor the abrogation of the Missouri Compromise. They should not seek it for the sake of their own honor, which they cannot but desire to remain unimpeached and intact. That measure was carried through the two Houses mainly by Southern votes, and wholly by Southerp influence. Mr. CLAY, in his speech already more than once referred to, says: "My friend from Alabama in the Senate, (Mr. KING,) Mr. Pinkney, from Maryland, and a majority of the Southern Senators in this body, voted in favor of the line 36 deg 30 min.; and a majority of the Southern meribers in the other House, at the head of whom was Mr. LowNDES hinself, voted also for that line. I have no doubt that I did also, but as I was Speaker of the House, and as the journal does not show which way the Speaker votes, except in the cases of a tie, I am not able to tell with certainty how I actually did vote, but I have no earthly doubt that I voted in common with my other Southern friends for the adoption of the line 36 deg. 30 min." Here. then, was a measure adopted under the auspices of such men as KINO, PINKNEY, LOWNDES, and CLAY, for the adjustment of a great and fearful controversy between sections. You have enjoyed the full benefit of it. You secured the admission of Missouri at the time, and Arkansas since. The admission of Texas was arranged on the same basis; and now, when the time has come for a realization of the just expectations of the North, you propose to break the bargain. How can this be done without an impeachment of your honor? and how can the North, on this hypothesis, repose the sfightest confidence in you hereafter? Will not compromises and ad-justments in future be impossible? and will not sectional strife infest our public councils and pervade the whole country? I verity believe that this measure is contrary to the true interests of the South. What you want is peace. Often and often have you said let us alone-Your true leave our institutions undisturbed. position is a defensive one; but this is a measure of aggression on the North. You have commenced a war on Northern feelings, Northern sentiments, and what will be regarded as Norchern rights and interests; and you may depend upon it that war will be returned with relentless furv.

I also insist that this measure is contrary bo the true interests of this Administration. With a President elected by an overwhelming majority, and with majorities in the two houses nearly as decisive, the last thing you should have done was to throw this bond-shell into Congress. Why not devote yourselves to the dispatch of the public business? Why not turn your attention to the Pacific Railroad, to a reduction or modification of the tariff, to harbor and river improvement, to an amelioration of your army what progress, Mr. Fresident, have we made party, and I think it will be equally fatal to the with the public business, and what are we likely Domocratic party. Behold the elements of diato makef What an extraordinary spectacle has been exhibited in the House of Representatives! Weeks spent in perfecting a deficiency bill, which is then crushed down and buried so deep as to be beyond the possibility of resurrection. Be it remembered, that whatever of beneficial legislation the country is to have during any presidential term, must be accomplished at the first session of the first Congress of that term; the second session is too brief for action on anything else than the appropriation bills; and the second Congress is uniformly occupied, though very improperly, with the presidential election, and by preparation for the inauguration of a new Chief Magistrate and the arrangement of his Cabinet. In order to make it certain that we are to do nothing for the country, you have involved us in this negro controversy. The Senate is to be occupied with it many weeks, and, I venture to assert, that the House will be so occupied most if not all the session. If I were the worst enemy which FRANKLIN PIEROE has on earth, (and I should be sorry to be regarded his enomy at all,) I would do the very thing which has been done by the honorable chairman of the Committee on Territories, by introducing a proposition here wholly uncalled for, and fraught with nothing but mischief.

It is with infinite concern that I witness the course Which my whig friends, honorable Senators from the South, deem it proper to pursue on this subject. They seem, almost to a man, disposed to rush forward to the support of the honorable Senator from Illinois. Two of them, one the successor of HENRY CLAY, (Mr. Dixon,) and the other, par excellance, his friend, (Mr. JONES,) have already given in their adhesion to this measure. Now, I say to those hoporable Senators, in a spirit of kindness and respect, that I regard the proposed amendment of the Missouri restriction as a measure of radicalism-extreme radicalism. And do the honorable Senators auppose that the Whig party, as a great national party, can be kept on foot on any such basisf Sir, the very moment you pass this measure you explode not only the Missouri Compromise, but the adjustn:ent of 1850, and the Baltimore Whig Platform of 1852. You blow the Whig party into ten thousand atoms. Another Whig National Convention will be impossible. Nothing can induce me to become, on the contingency named, a party to such convention. It will be idle to attempt any understanding with Southern Whige on the subject of slavery .-Did we not go at Baltimore the finality of the Compromise of 1850! Did we not agree to stand by even the Fugitive Slave law, so distaxicful to many of our people? Did we not, on occusion of a proposition by the honorable Sena-tor from Massacius etts, (Mr. SUMMER,) to repeal act, abide our promise and vote in the negtł. stree! Do you not now tell us in effect that all such covenants are binding on us in perpetuo, but not binding on you any longer than you jests, some of a public and some of a private choose to be bound? I repeat, this measure, if concern, which new solicit our attention? And carried, is and ought to be fatal to the Whig cord and repulsion now in full activity in your midst! And when all outside pressure is with-drawa, by the destruction of the Whig party, what will become of you? Will you not be scattered to the four winds of Heaven, and will not all existing organizations be broken up?

Sir, I have become heartily tired of public life, and I hope soon to find repose in seclusion in the bosom of my family. I am greatly offended at the turmoil which we have incessantly had on this miserable subject. Why, Mr. President, I have hardly been able, for years, to enter either chamber without being involved in all the effluvia (perhaps the honorable chairman would say aroma) of some negro question. Even now it fills the chamber-"it smells to Heaven." Why will you suffer demagogues to be incessantly dabbling in this subject-stirring up this offensive cess-pool, existing in the midst of the body politie. I say to you plainly, Senators from the South, unless you frown on such attempts, we shall be in hot water all the while. There will be in both quarters of the Union designing men, trying to make either party or personal capital out of this subject. It has got to be high time that we had a body of independent men in the country. If I had one hundred thousand good and true men seattered all over this vast Republic, to stand by me, I would engage to put down the whole tribe of demagogues. A handful of men, compact and united, can often turn the scale between contending factions, and subdue them to reason. I hate a Northern anti-slavery demagogue, and I hate a Southern pro-slavery demagogue. I think meanly of them all; but of all the mean reptiles which God, for some inserutable purpose, suffers to crawl and to beslime the earth, I think a Northern pro-slavery demagogue is the meanest.

But, Mr. President, if all compromises and platforms are to be blown up by the passage of this bill, and if in consequence I am drawn into a position not unlike that of the soldier at the battle of New Orleans, who, when inquired of by General Jackson, to what regiment he belonged, replied he was there fighting on his own hook, I intend to have a platform of my own, and I am happy to inform the Senate that I have found one which suits me exactly, and I wish to produce it here by way of notice to my constituents and the country.

On the 11th day of June, 1846, a Democratic State Convention was held at Concord, N. H., whereat a Committee on Resolutions was appointed, of which the eminent citizen, now P. esi dent of the United States, was chairman, who reported to the Convention a series of resolutions, from which I tak the following:

&quot;Resolved. That we restiften the septiments and opinions of the Democratic party and Democratic statement of the Nonh, centrahand from 1770 to the present day, in relation to slavery-that see deployer its reinforce and regard it as a prese mored and seciel arti, but with als convolcions deem concluse more whe that Washingtone Finalite, and their associates, and that particular, common locsory, and religious principle, slike bind us to a saored obzervance of the compact made by their when nea." "Resolved, That the solicy to be pursued in reference to slavers; nexts with the Guttes and Territories within which it starrer; next with the feature and "territories within which it estimates the start of the start of the start of the start of the start with the start of the start of the start of the start of the feature is the start of the start of the start of the start of the community, while A may endange the Union. its are not for the start of start of the start of the start of the control of starts of the start of the start of the start of the for the start of the start of the start of the start of the for the start of the start of the start of the start of the for the start of the start of the start of the start of the for the start of the start of the start of the start of the for the start of the start of

I agree, Mr. President, to every word of these resolutions. It is true, I was very much puzzled in the first instance to determine how the origin of the Democratic party of the North could be carried back to so remote a period as 1776, but when I came to read out of the Declaration of independence that, "all men are endowed with certain inalienable rights-that among these (are life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness," it became very plain. I was equally puzzled by the reference to Washingtor and Franklin, particularly to the latter, but on searching out the public documents I was enabled to solve the mystery. It appears that a memorial by Benjamin Franklin, as president of the Pennsylvania society for promoting the abolition of slavery, was presented in the Senate at the first session of the first Congress, held under the Constitution, to wit: on the 12th of Frebruary, 1790, from which I make the following extract: "that mankind are all formed by the same Almighty being, alike objects of his care and equally de-signed for the enjoyment of happiness-the christian religion teaches us to believe and the political creed of Americans fully coincides with the position." "They," the memorialists, "have observed, with particular satisfaction, that many important and salutary powers are vested in you," that is to say in Congress, " for promoting the welfare and securing the blessings of liberty to the people of the United States, and as they concieve that these blesings aught rightfully to be administered without distinction of color to all description of people, so they indulge themselves in the pleasing expectation that nothing which can be done for the relief of the unhappy objects of their care will be either emitted or delayed." I admit, Mr. President, that we are bound "to a sacred observance of the compact which unites us as a nation-we should not on the one hand seek to overthrow elavery by violating its provisions, nor on the other pervert its true intent and meaning by making it an instrument for the extension of this "great, moral, and social evil" all over this continent. Would "Washington, Franklin, and their associates," including of course Jefferson, (who once exclaimed, "I tremble for my country when I recollect God is just") have gone for any such extension !

Having thus cleared the subject of all doubt, I am prepared to give in my adhesion to every word contained in these resolutions. They refleet high honor on our worthy Chief Magistrate. I embrace them with all my heart. I am wil-ling to live and die by them-in short, to make them religiously my rule of conduct now and at all times. Let us see what they are: "Blavery rests with the States in which it exists"-true! "Blavery rests with the Territorica in which it brothren; elavery I consider rather the said ezists"--true! true!. It is only the citizens of such States and Territorios that can effectually influence or settle the policy which sticuted be pursised on this perplexing subject — exactly tracel "Angry external agitation by societing the pre-judices of the slave-holding communities, while it may endanger the Union, tends rather to su tain than destroy the bonds of the enelaved"true! every word true!

Mr. President, I have ever been opposed to this external agitation, and am so still. I admit we have no constitutional or legal right to intorfere with slavery in the States, and I think it inexpedient to interfere with it in the Territorics where it exists. And I admit, further, we have no moral right to harass and worry the people of such States and Territories by fruitless exter-nal agitation-1 condemn it utterly; but then you must permit me to say, with the Chief Ma-gistrate of the country, that we regard it as d great moral, social, and political evil, and therefore it is not a proper subject of extension. Ŧ do not like very much to speak of slavery as a "moral evil," because it seems to give offence to our friends, who suppose we mean to set up pharisaical pretensions to superior morality over the South. It is not so. I admit, there are great moral evils at the North, some of which we are trying to reform, such as drunkeness, and you may chastise us to your heart's contant on account of such evils. I must at least be permitted to think of slavery as a great social and political evil. 1 will never unite with you in considering it the summun bonum-as a thing fit to be extended. And here I adopt the words of HENRY CLAY, to be found in his speech of the 5th of February. I make them my own : "I have said I never could vote for it myself, and I repeat I never can and never will vote, and no earthly power will make me vote to spread elavery over territory where it docs not exist." Surely the President must take the same view of the subject. Surely he cannot be willing to extend over the land what he has prenounced "a great moral and social evil"-a deplorable evil. Hence the ruisors which have reached us that he is pratonizing this measure, and willight his influence to promote it, must be a foul slander !- his friends ought to resent it.

Having thus creeted my platform, and having found it sound, after an examination plank by plank, I am prepared for retirement, and I will tell you what I shall do when I am far away from these turbulent seenes. I intend to assume an independent position, and support the best man who is before the country, in. piztive of party names. I will not be deterred from giving him my support because he is called a Democraft, or even because he is a slavebolder, provided I am well tatisfied he will hunt down agitators and demagogues both North and South. Here are two Senators near me, my friend from South Caroline, (Mr. BUTLER,) and my friend from Texas, (Mr. Houston,) either of whom would do well for the country-"wer. ht ad further and fare woise."

I have no prejudicis against my wall the tune than the crime of the South. It is only when you become aggressive that I feel bound to resist you. Why should I have any prejudice! My honored futher, whose remains I followed to the grave in the full of 1839, was bimself a faiveholder, and my carliest recollections are associated with what you call an institution.

I have sometimes thought, Mr. President, that the North is in danger of being sold out, and that we are to be reduced to servitude. I can harding believe we are in much danger. It is proper however for me to give full notice that if such an unhappy fate is before us I intend to reserve to myself one liberty—that of choosing my can master, and I ary now he shall be choosing my can master, and I ary now he shall be and high-toned Southerh gentleman, and not a Northern dough face, who would sell his birthright for a mess of pottage. I have ever understood that Northern men who go South and turn slave owners, or slave drivers uniformerly prove the mest releatless and cruelof masters— Heaven delivere me from such bondage!

And finally, Mr. President, I would inquire where is all this to end! Are the vitals of the Republic to be incessantly lascerated! Is there to be no moderation, no regard to plighted faith-no sence of justice-who is hereafter to stay the raging elements of sectional strifeand few seem disposed to interpose and say to the surging elements, "peace, be still." I have often wished during the progress of this dis-cussion that HENRY CLAY were living and pree-ent to participate in it. He would have opposed to this measure a stern and uncompromising resistance. I deeply deplore his absence. If he were here this day with his erect form, animated countenance, flashing eyes, and fervid accents-he would make these arches ring with his remonstrances against the folly, nay the madness of your course. Sir! I have done, I wash my hands of all responsibility for the consequences of this measure.
