FOR GOVERNOR,
J. B. DAWSON.
FOR MAYOR:
JOHN H. HOLLAND.

Act of the Legislature, approved 14th March 1820:

Art. 5. And be it further enacted, That the Mayor and Recorder shall be chosen from among the citizens who are heads of families, and resident within the city at the time of their election, and possess the other qualifications required by the existing laws."

Fellow citizens, if the law requires this as a condition in completing the eligibility of a candidate for the place of Mayor; judge it respect for public manners and morals, does not more imperiously exact that it should be found in a candidate for the office of Governor.

The Argus DENIES that Judge Dawson's claims are equal to those of his competitors! How perfectly ridiculous this is! Is not the Argus the [illegible] superior of Judge Dawson? Can it be considered by any thing short of a forgetfulness still more than it already has proved with, that our [illegible] over a society of the ability, industry & honorable character, etc., which it attributes to its adopted favorite? We think that it cannot, and will therefore refrain from the more than idle task of endeavoring to convince it.

We speak to the people, the HONEST people, on whom we hope to make a favorable impression of the qualifications of Judge Dawson, and not to interested and hired partizans, who dare not express their real sentiments. Moreover, the superior abilities of Mr. Prieur are now established by the incompetency of Judge Dawson, but that gentleman's talents in no how add as much as the Argus would represent them. We are aware that the Argus has spoken of "the able and able administration of the City affairs as proofs of his capacity;" but we have over and over done the same thing to show the contrary. We have believed that Mr. Prieur's administration is repugnant to a majority of the people of our city; and are willing to let the approaching municipal election be a test of the matter, should that gentleman hereafter consent to present himself for re-election. Are we not at least even with the Argus?

The Argus has we think claimed a victory rather prematurely. Let it justify itself for the unpardonable sin of having once opposed Dennis Prieur to the ridicule of the people, before it boasts of having fully established his reputation for "all that's noble, wise and honorable."

We never had the presumption to suppose for an instant that any threat of ours could frighten or drive the Argus," from the independent course it had taken. We are no bragadocios, and therefore deal not in threats. Besides, we are too well acquainted with its warlike disposition to tamper with it!

The intimation that the Argus asks no quarter is perfectly gratuitous; we never said that it did, far from it, we rather fear ourselves to be obliged to succumb if it continue to keep up its dreadful firing upon us!

The manner in which the Argus conducts itself towards us shall be always the measure by which we shall regulate our conduct towards it. We assure it that our determination is as fixed as its own, "not to bandy epithets with any writer, or notice in our paper, any insulting or disagreeable charges or language."

From all parts of the state do we receive the most flattering accounts of the popularity of our gubernatorial candidate. The people enthusiastically echo his name, and his pretensions have been in almost every parish rapturously acknowledged. No secret caballing, no hired vote-gatherers perambulating to and fro every nook and corner of the state, no purchased puffers, no bargain, no corruption is known to exist among his supporters. Every thing is conducted above board in the presence of the people. Willing to abide the verdict of his intelligent fellow citizens, Judge Dawson quietly pursues the humble duties of an impartial Judge, without commingling himself in the noisy struggle of partizan warfare. These facts maybe endeavored to be [illegible] by his angry opponents, but the people cannot fail to know the reason why. It is in vain his enemies may decry his merits, it is in vain they may dispute his abilities, it is in vain they may ridicule his pretensions, the pitiful object which prompts so unmanly a course cannot fail detection. None can believe that a man can be as popular as Judge Dawson is without some merit to recommend him. Many of the state objections urged against him were used for a similar purpose against General Jackson. It was asserted with as much presumption against that eminent individual as it now is against Judge Dawson, that he was ignorant, vain-glorious, and without any thing to recommend him to the attention of his fellow citizens. The people will be no more deceived now than they were then by such palpable lies. The democracy of the country, the true Jackson party, not those who claim fellowship with us for the purpose of binding us hand and foot and delivering us over to the enemy, will arise in their might, and secure by an unanimous majority the election of JOHN B. DAWSON, a man whose principles accord with their own, and with those of the great body of the people throughout the union.

It is stated that McClintock Young, esq. of Baltimore, has been appointed chief clerk of the treasury department—and current rumor assigns the office of navy agent for that port to col. John Thomas.

The Bulletin, whose professed neutrality we have all along regarded as nothing but sham, has at length entirely thrown off its mask and come out boldly and openly for the Argus, slashing and cutting away at the president in a most unmerciful manner. Among its ravings, for it talks quite incoherently upon the matter, it asserts that the secretary of the treasury is a CHECK upon the president!!! How profoundly senseless this is! It might as well assert that a person was employed in a check upon his employer!

The Bulletin in a fit of desperation, after announcing the important fact that its writer was the first to announce gen. Jackson as a candidate for the presidency, declares that it is done with president making. All we can say is "Alas poor Yorick!"

TEN DOLLARS REWARD will be paid on demand to the first paper, among Mr. Prieur's three organs, the Argus, the Mercantile Advertiser and the Louisiana Advertiser, that will give us positive information as to the fact whether Mr. Prieur will be a candidate for mayor as well as for governor at the approaching election!

ABDICATION OF FERDINAND VII!

By the packet-ship Virginia we received a file of the Havana Noticioso to the 1st Oct. It contains no political news but a commercial friend has favored us with the following extract of a letter, which we hasten to lay before our readers:

HAVANA, Oct. 1, 1833.

"By a vessel from Barcelona, we learn that the King has abdicated in favor of his daughter, appointing a Regency composed of the Queen, the infant Don Francisco, and General Cristina. There had been a few disturbances in Catalonia, but which were repressed by the people themselves, they having killed the leader of the rebels. The rest of the Peninsula is perfectly tranquil, and there is every appearance of the Change.

"We expect here the new governor, Mr. Hortigas, an officer of artillery, formerly at Mexico. We also expect the new Intendant, but have not earned his name."

EIGHT DAYS LATER FROM ENGLAND.

Our mail collector arrived in town, over land, by express, this morning, with London and Liverpool dates of the 24th August, brought by the British ship Victoria, captain Morrell, which sailed from Liverpool on the 25th of that month. She had not been telegraphed when this paper went to press.

The following are all the important items:

ABANDONMENT OF THE SIEGE OF OPORTO BY THE MIGUELITES.

His majesty's cutter, Sparrow, lieutenant Riley, has arrived at Falmouth, having left Lisbon on the 5th, and Oporto on the 12th inst. The accounts brought by her confirm the news of the abandonment of the siege of Oporto by the Miguelite troops; they furnish also some additional particulars which will be found in the following letter:

"Bourmont, it appears, raised the siege of Oporto on the 9th, and the last of his army crossed the Douro, at Ariates, with his whole army, determined, it is said, by forced marches, to effect a junction with Cadaval, who with a body of 4,000 men, occupied Torres Vedros. The forts at the mouth of the Douro were abandoned by the Miguelites, and that river was open to the entrance of shipping. Col. Bacon, with 300 lancers, occupied Matozinhos. General Moelos still held his position at Santerem, the government of Lisbon not having been able to bring him terms. Constant communications were kept up between Cadaval and him. The duke de Terceira was still at Lisbon organizing troops, and until he had raised a body sufficiently strong and effective, would not move to the north. The fleet under Napier, was at anchor in the Tagus. The damages suffered by the ships in the late action were repaired, and it was expected that in a day or two they would be all ready for sea. An attack upon Figueira had been determined on, but the sudden movement of Bourmont towards Lisbon would, in all probability, induce the constitutionalists to concentrate their forces, and consequently give up all attempts upon Figueira for the present. Don Pedro was doing every thing to make himself popular at Lisbon. He mixed continually with the people, and encouraged pastimes and rejoicingly in every direction.

From a second edition of Thursday's Courier.

The following letter, forwarded from Falmouth by express, has been communicated to us this afternoon:

FALMOUTH, Aug. 21—9 o'clock, a. m.

His majesty's ship Pantaloon, lieut. Dacres, has just arrived with accounts from Lisbon to the 13th, and 14th from Oporto. Large bodies of troops in favor of Miguel were in the immediate vicinity of Lisbon. Eight days before Bourmont moved off with the main body of the army from Oporto he had dispatched a division under general Clonet, who is now in strong force at Santarem, having full 16,000 men with him. Santarem occupied Torres Vedras, with considerable force, and it is stated by lieut. Dacres that the whole number of Miguel's forces, now within fifty miles of Lisbon, amounted to 35,000 men. Admiral Parker was making preparations for the defence of British property and subjects, and the general impression was, that nothing could keep Bourmont out of Lisbon. The opening of the Douro is contradicted. Fifty-one vessels were off Oporto bar, not being able to get in.

ENGLAND.

LONDON, August 23.

In the house of commons, the tea duties bill was read a third time and passed, after a discussion in which Mr. Crawford and Mr. Hume complained of the anomalies in the duties proposed to be fixed on the different kinds of teas; and Mr. Ewart urged on ministers the necessity of permitting private ships to sail for China before April, the time at present specified.

London, Aug. 22.

The Paris papers of Tuesday state that a conference took place on the preceding day, between the ambassador of the queen of Portugal and the French minister for foreign affairs, relative to the recognition by the government of France of Donna Maria, but the result of the conference is not yet given.

London, Aug. 23, 12 o'clock.

The money market generally has this morning been subjected to a considerable decline, and the heaviness continues up to the present time, consols being quoted at 8a 3-8 1-2 for the account.

FRANCE.

PARIS, August 21.

Workmen are engaged in re-establishing the line of telegraphs between Bourdeaux and Blaye which was suppressed on the departure of the Duchess de Berri. It is reported this measure has been adopted in consequence of an intention to remove to Blaye the Ex-Ministers of Charles X.—Gazette de France.

We understand that it is decided that Queen Donna Maria is to embark at Havre, where Admiral Napier, in the John VI, will come to receive her. She is to leave Paris on Monday next, and orders have been already sent to Havre to prepare lodgings for forty persons, of whom her suit will consist. Her Majesty will be accompanied by the Duchess of Braganza and the Marquis of Loule. It is also said that a French Minister Plenipotentiary will go out with the young Queen, who will be formally acknowledged by the French Government immediately upon her arrival at Lisbon. Rumours are abroad of the disgrace of the Marquis of Palmella, which, it is said, are confirmed by a courier from Spain.

The ship of war the Marengo arrived on the 9th inst at Toulon, from Navarin, with 500 soldiers, forming a part of the French troops lately occupying the Morea.

The Paris National, after some observations on the importance of an offensive and decisive alliance between Russia and Turkey, in pursuance of which the latter Power would be compelled to close its ports against any nation with which the former may go to war, argues that the only remedy for the evil is for France to form an equally close alliance with Egypt, which it strongly advises being at once done, if, indeed, it be not already too late, and if the success which Mahomet Ali has obtained without the assistance of France, do not induce him to consider her friendship as now useless to him.

The Moniteur Algerine has the following paragraph:

"News has just been received here of the, taking of the towns of Mascagran, by the troops from the division of Oran. We are not acquainted with the details of this brilliant affair, in which the Marine had a great share."

SPAIN.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The health of King Ferdinand serves as a thermometer for the policy of the cabinet of Madrid.—A late relapse restored to the Queen a portion of the influence she obtained when the King was so seriously ill, but the moment that symptoms of recovery appeared, the party opposed to her Majesty again resumed the ascendancy.—This change, under circumstances in which England and France stand in regard to Portugal, cannot fail to be of great importance. The fact, however, has only been made known by the following letter from Madrid, dated the 11th inst, inserted in the Memorial Bordelais. It bears the character of probability, and contains nothing that is in any degree surprising: "The Queen had resumed her former ascendancy over the mind of the King, in consequence of the news from Lisbon. Ferdinand had even gone so far as to send for the Duke de San Fernando, who, being at the head of the Spanish nobility, was to become President of the new Council of Ministers. The members of the new Ministry were already fixed upon; the department of the Interior was intended for the Marquis de Miraflores; that of the War for the Marquis de Las Amarilles; of the Navy for M Chaseon; of the Finances for M Encima y Piedra; and of Justice for M. Fernandez del Pino. The Count de Parsent was appointed President of Castile; the Marquis de Casallo Ambassador at Paris; and the Duke de San Lorenzo Ambassador at London. This was openly adopting a system of moderation which Ferdinand had for ever past wished to put in practice, in order to avert from his kingdom the dangerous influence of the Castles. The King had resolved on these changes, which were to be published very shortly; but the intrigues of M. Zea [illegible] seconded by the artful favorite Grijalba, thwarted these wise measures. Grijalba, whose health is [illegible] caused himself to be carried to the King's [illegible] and persuaded his Majesty that under existing circumstances, a change in the government would be dangerous to the monarchy. The King upon this representation, resolved upon following the system of Grijalba. His first act was the exile of M. Fernandez to Antequera, and that of the Duke de San Fernando, to Biscay. It is easy to perceive that M. Zea does not [illegible] principle of the direct succession of the throne [illegible] Portugal, he will content himself with [illegible] secret favor of Don Miguel; but he will [illegible] any dares to attempt any thing that may be [illegible] wishes of France and England! It is said, [illegible] Lisbon. Our funds are improving."

RUSSIA.

The Allgemeine Z[illegible]ng, contains advices from Const[illegible] which confirms the previous accou[illegible] conclusion of a treaty of alliance, offensive and defen[illegible] Russia and the Porte.

EGYPT.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 23.

The Malta Gazette of the 24th July, states that Mehemait Ali was making preparations for an expedition to Hedjaz, in consequence of some serious disturbances having broken out there.

Colonel Hamilton's visit to America.

President Jackson and his Lewis.—We found the President had retired with a headache, but in five minutes he appeared, though from the heaviness of his eye, evidently in a state of considerable pain. This, however, had no influence on his conversation, which was spirited, and full of vivacity. He informed us that he had been unwell for several days, and having the fatigues of a Levee to encounter on the following evening, he had retired early, in order to recruit for an occasion which required the presence of all his bodily powers. When this subject was dismissed, the conversation turned on native politics, the Indian question, the powers of the Supreme Court, and a recent debate in the Senate, which had excited considerable attention.

Of the opinions expressed by this distinguished person, it would be unpardonable where I to say any thing; but I heard them with deep interest, and certainly considered them to be marked by that union of boldness and sagacity, which is generally supposed to form a prominent feature of his character. General Jackson spoke like a man so thoroughly convinced to the justice of his views, that he announced them unhesitatingly and without reserve. This openness might be increased, perhaps, by the knowledge of my com[illegible] principles of the [illegible] Administration, but the [illegible] in both in his countenance and manner, that I feel convinced that nothing but the strongest motives of state policy could make him hesitate, under any circumstances, to express boldly what he felt strongly.

On the following evening I attended the levee. The apartments were already full before I arrived and the crowd extended even into the hall. Three—I am not sure that there were not four—large saloons were thrown open on the occasion, and were literally crammed with the most singular and miscellaneous assemblage I had ever seen.

The numerical majority of the company seemed of the class of tradesmen or farmers, respectable men, fresh from the plough or the counter, who, accompanied by their wives and daughters, came forth to greet their President, and enjoy the splendors of the gala. There were also generals, and commodores, and public officers of every description, and foreign ministers and members of Congress, and ladies of all ages and degrees of beauty, from the fair and laughing girl of fifteen, to the haggard dowager of seventy. There were majors in broad cloth and corduroys, redolent of gin and tobacco and majors' ladies in chintz or russet, with huge Paris ear-rings, and tawny necks, profusely decorated with beads of colored glass. There were tailors from the board, and judges from the bench; lawyers who opened their mouths at one bar, and the tapster who closed them at another;—in short, every trade, craft, calling, and profession appeared to have sent its delegates to this extraordinary convention.

For myself, I had seen too much of the United States to expect any thing very different, and certainly anticipated that the mixture would contain all the ingredients I have ventured to describe. Yet, after all, I was taken by surprise. There were present at this levee, men begrimed with all the sweat and filth accumulated in their day's—perhaps their week's—labor. There were stocky artificers, evidently fresh from the forge or the workshop; and one individual I remember—either a miller or a baker—who, wherever he passed, left marks of contrast on the garments of the company. The most prominent group, however, in the assemblage, was a party of Irish laborers, employed on some neighboring canal, who had evidently been apt scholars in the doctrine of liberty and equality, and were determined on the present occasion to assert the full privilege of "the great unwashed." Fermented these men pushing aside the more respectable portion of the company with a certain jocular audacity, which put one in mind of the humanity of Donnybrook.
