Young Girls.

INTERESTING CONCLUSIONS.
Mothers Agree on One Vital Subject.
(Parents who are fair parents.)
Young girls, to the thinking mind, are ever subjects of the deepest interest.
Some lead lives of luxury, while others toil for mere existence. Separation, however, at their paths in life may lie, Nature demands of them the same obedience, modesty, and often withheld what ought to be told.
Ya they are not to blame, for information on such subjects has been withheld from them, on the false interpretation of a mother's duty.
In such cases they should do as thousands of young ladies are doing every day: write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., giving as nearly as possible their symptoms, and receive her freely given advice and timely aid.
Ladies E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the young girl's most trustworthy friend. It can be obtained of any drug-gist, and speedily relieves and cures irregularities, suspension, retention, and all derangements of the womb and ovaries.
It banishes promptly all pains, headache, backache, faintness, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholia, etc. Young girls must know that self-preservation is the first law of nature.

The Howard Heaters.

Made to last a long time. Smooth and sound cast-iron. Made of the choicest iron and modeled with a view to withstand the severe strain of heat and cold. There are requirements which the HOWARD HEATER embodies and are in themselves recommendations of lasting and the long qualifications.

THE NEW $11,650 ELIOT SCHOOLHOUSE IN CANTON, MASS.

A Great Deal for the Money.—A Model Schoolhouse.—Plain, But Has Every Convenience.

At their last annual meeting the town of Canton voted to build a four-room schoolhouse on the site of the old Eliot school building, and appropriated $12,000 for that purpose. A building committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. Augustus Hemenway, James L. Draper, F. D. Dunbar, Charles Gallivan, Samuel H. Capen, W. W. Wattle, Jr., John Lawrence and William O. Chapman to select a suitable plan and construct the building. Mr. Dunbar was chosen chairman and Mr. Wattle secretary.

Weak Nerves Will Surely Break You Down.

Weak Nerves Will Surely Break You Down. Nerves are the very foundation of strength and endurance. If your nerves are weak, lose no time in getting them strong.

Don't hammer your own town. Give the best "send-off" you can to everything that's good and profitable in your city. Uphold your own city—don't tear it down and work for its injury.—Brookline Enterprise.

Take a wooden bowl, cleaned with soap and water, then half fill it with clean water of about the same temperature as the glass and put in a teaspoonful of ammonia in half a pint of water. First wash a piece of chamois cloth thoroughly with soap and water and rinse and clean. Then place it in the bowl or pan, so that the lens won't slip. Never use any other material than chamois cloth.

TWO NEW FACED FOES

NOVEL DISCUSSION OF THE L' D AND LIQUOR QUESTIONS.

Four Things That Belong to Man as Man, according to Rev. Amory H. Braden at the First Congregational Church, Most. Clair, N. J.

TEXT.—And he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

Parables formed an important part of Hebrew literature. There are almost as many in the Old Testament as in the New. They were a favorite means of eliciting an argument emphasizing a truth. As Charles Sumner, in the United States Senate, spoke of "the twin relics of barbarism, slavery and war," and as Henry Ward Beecher, in the Free Trade Hall at Manchester during the days of our civil war, thrilled and awed thousands as he presented the cause of the United States in the light of the parables of the Bible, so the parables of the Bible have been used by preachers and statesmen in every age and in every land.

When he had interested his hearers with the story, he turned on them, as Nathan turned on David, and showed them that the vineyard was the house of Judah, which because of wealth and property had forgotten its mission and become a vineyard of wild grapes. Then follows a magnificent passage extending from the fifth chapter in the ninth and tenth chapters. It is a series of "parables" in which the prophet, whose bitter refrain is, "For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still. If you will read carefully the fifth chapter, and then the ninth from verse 8 to the tenth chapter, verse 4, you will see why it is thought that these two parables belong to the same man. The same idea, the same style, the same bitter refrain, are in both passages.

Having attracted attention by his parable of the vineyard and the grapes, Isaiah became a remorseless and terrible voice. The man seemed to have no pity, while the other spoke the rebuke of the Almighty. This embodied conscience was terribly faithful. It is useless to attempt argument with a conscience. It can never be argued with. It must be heard. It utters its imperative, and you are heedless at your peril. Some things may be reasoned about. A man's conscience never. And, furthermore, conscience is always and of necessity prophetic. Whenever conscience speaks, it tells you that you are wrong. It tells you more than that. It tells you that you must turn or you will be punished. That is what makes it so terrible. Not only does it tell you that you are wrong, but it also tells you that you will be punished. It also tells you that you will be punished. It also tells you that you will be punished.

A Paper Read to the Weymouth Teachers by Miss Blanchard, Librarian of Tufts Library.

Teachers of Weymouth—I am glad to meet you today, and you are interested in our library and I hope to be able to make you value it more, as a help in your work.

Yours is a noble profession. I know of no other where a true, earnest man or woman can do more good, but in no profession is it of more importance to be progressive, in the right spirit, than in yours. A teacher is necessarily a leader in the community in which he lives, looked up to by parents, as well as pupils.

There are many good books in the library which I wish every teacher might read, Kimm's Chips from a teacher's workshop 312.86, and Woodard's Manual training in education 312.83, and the report of the Mass. Commissioners of Education 317.49, on the same subject, more necessary, perhaps, to be read by the school committee and the citizens.

How much easier for the teachers and vastly more beneficial to the pupils is the practice pursued by some, of keeping upon their desks interesting books, ready to loan to those who have learned their lessons.

There are books in the library suitable to use in connection with every study taught in the schools.

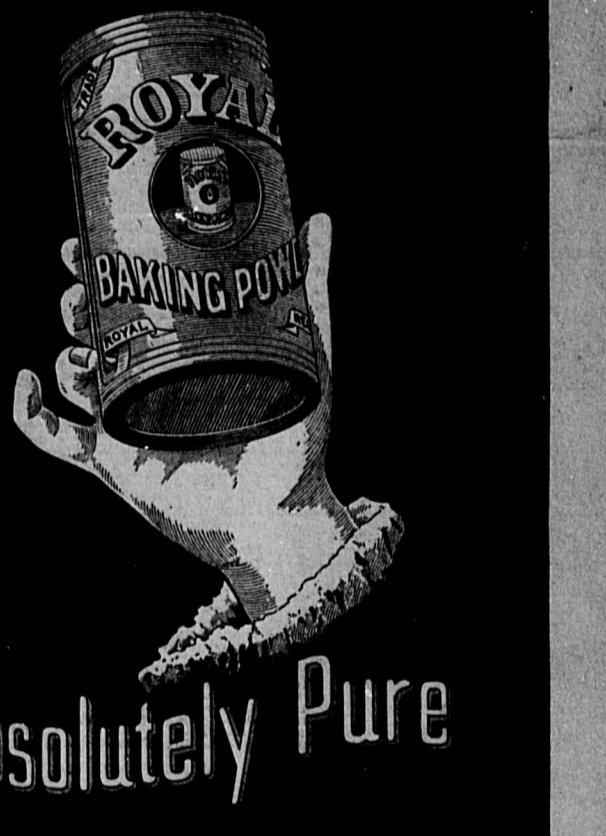

In history, besides the many histories proper, there are biographies, poems and stories that give good descriptions of the customs of the countries and will serve to fix certain periods and events in the mind.

In the 18th century: Belz and spurr, Yonge's Caged Lion, Church's Chantry priest of Barnet, Stevenson's Black Arrow and Cowper's Captain of the Watch.

In the 19th century: Diersey's Sybil and Kingsley's Alton Locke. Henry has written many historical stories for boys that illustrate English history, his Jack Archer, Young Rogers, One of the 28th and Through the fray, for the period.

In Roman history, besides the many smaller histories we have Dury's History of Rome and of the Roman people and the more extensive paper, Abbott's Biographies of Romulus, Caesar and Nero, Church's Two Thousand years ago, his Burning of Home and To the lion's, Miss Yonge's Biographies of Saladin and De Millie's Helena's Household, stories of the Early Christians, Bulwer's Last Days of Pompeii and Graham's Heroes which I have heard readers speak of as one of the most interesting of historical stories. Shumway's A Day in Ancient Rome, Farrar's Darkness and Dawn, or Scenes in the Days of Nero, Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome, Our Young Folks' Pictorial, Church's Pictures of Roman life and story and Roman life in the days of Cicero and Bulwer's Roman, to those who need help in teaching Civil Government I can recommend the following: Macy's First Lessons in Civil Government 316.5, Mowry's Civil Government 316.50, Pike's Civil Government in the U. S. 316.54, Giblin's Civics for Young Americans 316.57, Hart's Practical lessons of civics and government 316.53 and his Introduction to the study of federal government 316.55, Dole's American civics 316.56, Ford's American civics manual 316.56, Gooden's Comparative administrative civics 316.57, Hittcock's American civics constitution 316.58, and McMurry's People's manual 316.59. Brooks' Century book for young Americans, all about the government of the U. S. 317.87 and Alton's among the law makers 318.51 are especially interesting for the young as is also a book not exactly in place here, Cushing's History of our post office 317.85. There is also a good collection of botany for students in the high school. Jackman's Nature study for common schools 738.100, will be of great help to you in this work.

All children are interested in the birds. I have sometimes been surprised to see boys under their studying our scientific books on birds, trying to find the name of one they had lately seen. Besides

South Weymouth Items. -Seventy hens owned by Spencer March laid during the month of March 1488 eggs. It will not be necessary to get out a scale to figure on, as by this report any of the hens laid one egg. Seventy times thirty-one is 2170. But the record was a good one.

-To credit the caterpillar nuisance may be avoided as much as possible this year the road commissioners should see to it that every old cherry tree is cut. Some action was taken last year in this matter, but the work wasn't half done and many of these trees, which are the special favorite of the locust, were left standing.

-The cantata of Ruth, under the direction of Miss Ella M. Clark, will be given in the Union church, Wednesday evening, April 24th. A chorus of thirty voices combined with organ, piano and cornet will be an attractive feature.

The soloists will consist of Miss Susie K. H. Monroe, Edwin F. Clark of Boston, Miss Ella A. Clark, Mrs. James H. Ewell, Miss Maud Townsend, Charles T. Foster, Walter I. Bates and Sammie Vining. Miss Constance Vining, pianist. The cantata includes male quartets, trios, duets and solos, and although given in an old style will prove a delightful evening's entertainment. The tickets, which can be procured at Charles T. Foster's store, will be sold at 25 cents.

-Elbert Ford, in alighting from a carriage Friday stepped on a rolling stone and sprained his ankle.

-S. Walter Tirrell, who lives alone in the rooms above Thomas Barnard's stable and works at Stetson & Heald's, has had cramps so badly for the past two weeks that he has required about two bottles of Jamaica ginger a day. Monday morning he had an attack of delirium tremens and started for the woods. When found he had on a paper collar and one or two other things that are not of much use in warding off the chills. He was escorted by Officer Allen to the Almshouse from where he has now returned in a weak condition.

-There was a social and supper at the Old South church, Tuesday evening. A select entertainment was given and a large number were present.

-Erie and Lilla Smith, daughters of F. L. Smith, harness maker, have been spending the winter at the Hotel Raymond at Pasadena, California.

-It is probable that many readers of this paper felt a thrill of dismay on reading in the dailies of the burning of that magnificent structure, the Hotel Raymond. Many Weymouth people have stopped there for a while and many more have visited it and gazed with wonder and delight at the beautiful panorama that stretches away at their feet from the famous hotel. The fire which was viewed from the eminence on which that famous hotel stood.

-A number of friends gave a surprise party to Lewis Barnes, Monday night, at the home of Frank Rogers, high jump, 6 ft. 2 in.; Parker Thomas, pole vault, 6 ft. Ernest Thayer, shot put, 25 ft. 10 in.; Porter Pratt, 100 yard dash, 13.34 seconds; Frank Snow, bicyclist, 100 yard dash, 1.10 seconds. The winners of the half mile run are precarious, owing to the dismemberment of Thomas V. Nash. Other contestants have not yet been decided upon.

He was 58 years old and leaves a widow and one son. He was a soldier in the Civil war, serving in Co. K 4th Mass. Infantry, and was a member of Post 5, G. O. A. R. of Lynn, Mass.

-Work has been started on the extension to South Weymouth. The ground is opened from Lincoln square to Hunt street and sleepers and rails laid. The builder, Mr. Chapman, says that there will be no trouble in getting the entire line around to East Weymouth, constructed by July 1st, and we certainly hope that holding will prevent the present construction of the people's hopes and plans.

appal must be in the interests of good reading. In these days when the teacher of the High School, must as one has said, "be a whole village faculty" and the same may be said in a lesser degree of the lower grades, you may think that out of school hours the children can be left to their parents. This is not altogether so, but why cannot some of the best books be read in school? It is not better for a bright pupil who has learned to read, than to read some book you select, than to have his idle brain and hands ready for any mischief that may be found. Why is so much money spent for the schools in our country? What is the whole aim of the school? Simply education and culture? Some of the greatest villains are educated and appeared cultured. Aaron Burr was a most cultured man. Mrs. Louisa Hopkins is an object of school education. It is not among the whole object of our great school system? Does not a man without education fall as a useless citizen of our country? Sumner said: "The true grandeur of nations lies in those qualities which constitute the true greatness of the individual."

THE POET'S GIFT.

The poet looks with unclouded eyes Upon the everlasting skies. He reads the book of nature and brook And reads the pages of a book.

His ear catches earth's melody, The zephyr and the wind's sweet song, He feels the pulse of life's reality, And all his thoughts are in a throng.

All living things to him are dear, And God is ever very near. To find on earth a part of heaven. —Henry Cuyler.

A FEUD.

"I'll tell you, Frank, it's got to the point where something must be done," said Mrs. Burnett, and she spoke as if she were talking to a small knuckled that was moving toward the sugar bowl. Morton, aged 10, jerked his hand out of the way and laughed at his mother, who pursed up her lips to conceal a smile.

"That boy and some more of his crowd put it on about the top of the fence and then threw at them to knock them over. About every other stone went over the top of the fence and hit the boys. If one of them had struck anybody, he wouldn't have known what hurt him."

over into our yard, teased Willie and makes faces at him."

"Next time I see him pick on Willie I'll give him another licking," suggested Larry.

When Mrs. Burnett put out her washing, she knew that she was being watched by her son and counted the number of pailfuls she carried to the back door and called out, "Come, Alice, dear, and practice your music lesson."

One day, when Mrs. Deakin came home from a funeral in a covered carriage, there was consternation in the Burnett family, and accounts were not fairly balanced until she spoke of the funeral.

UP HILL.

Does the road wind up hill all the way? Yes, to the very end. Will the day's journey take the whole long day? From noon to night, my friend.

But is there for the slight resting place, A roof for when the slow, dark hours begin? May not the darkness take us from your feet? You cannot miss that sign.

Shall I meet other wayfarers at night, Those who have turned back? There will be none, for you are not a part of the world. You are a part of the world.

Allen & Ginter, Richmond, Va.

THE YOUNG SEIGNEUR

His chief occupation in the daytime was to stand on the bench by the small barred window and watch the pigeons on the roof and in the eaves of the hospital opposite. For five years he had done this, and it was the one thing in his life during that time which had a charm for him. Every change of weather and season was registered there as plainly as if he could see the sun and moon in the sky. In the summer the alates seemed to have a great fire breath upon them, for a quivering hot air rose up from them, and the pigeons never alighted on the roof when the sun was shining in the evening. Just over the peak of the roof could be seen the topmost branch of an oak, too slight to bear the weight of the pigeons, but the eaves under the projecting roof were dark and cool, and there his eyes rested when he tired of the hard blue sky and the glare of the roof. He could also see the top of the hospital windows, barred up and down, but never anything within, for the windows were ever dusty, and all was dark beyond. But now and then he heard a faint creak coming through one open window in the summer time, and he listened to them grow fainter and fainter, till they sank to a low moaning and then ceased altogether.

In winter the roof was covered for months by a blanket of snow, which looked like a shawl of impacted wool, white and restful, and the hospital windows were spread with frost. But the pigeons were not so much affected by the cold as the man on the roof. In winter the roof was covered for months by a blanket of snow, which looked like a shawl of impacted wool, white and restful, and the hospital windows were spread with frost. But the pigeons were not so much affected by the cold as the man on the roof. In winter the roof was covered for months by a blanket of snow, which looked like a shawl of impacted wool, white and restful, and the hospital windows were spread with frost. But the pigeons were not so much affected by the cold as the man on the roof.

When the officer put his hands upon him, he shook them off. When they did it again, he would have fought them to the death had it not been for his friend, tall Medallion, who had a strong hand on his arm and said, "Steady, Converse, steady!" and he had yielded to the firm, friendly pressure. Medallion had left no stone unturned to clear him at the trial, had himself played detective unceasingly, but the hard facts remained there, and on a chain of circumstantial evidence Louis Converse, the young seigneur, was sent to prison for ten years for manslaughter. That was the compromise offered by Louis himself had said only that he didn't remember, but he could not believe he had committed the crime. Bolder? He shrugged his shoulders at that. He insisted that his lawyer should not reply to the insinuating and foolish suggestion.

But the evidence had shown that Vigot had all the winnings when the other gamblers had lost. The party left the table, and this very money had been found in Louis' pocket. There was only Louis' word that they had played cards again. Anger? Possibly. Louis could not remember, though he knew they had quarreled. The judge himself, charging the jury, said that he never before saw a man so frank and outwardly honest, but warned them that they must not lose sight of the crime itself, the taking of a human life, whereby a woman was made a widow and a child fatherless.

And so with the few remarks the judge sentenced the young seigneur, shaken and pale, left the courtroom hurriedly, for Louis Converse's father had been his friend from boyhood.

Louis took his sentence calmly, looking the judge squarely in the eyes, and when the judge stopped he bowed to him, turned to the jury and said: "Gentlemen, you have ruined my life. You don't know, and I don't know, who killed the man. You have guessed, and I take the penalty. Suppose I'm innocent. How will you feel when the truth comes out? You've known me more or less these 20 years, and you've said with no more knowledge than I've got that I did this miserable thing. I don't know but that one of you did it, but you are safe, and I take my ten years."

He turned from them, and as he did so he saw a woman looking at him from a corner of the courtroom with a strange, wild expression. At the moment he saw no more than an excited, bewildered face, but afterward this face came and went before him, flashing in and out of dark places in a mocking sort of way. As he went from the courtroom another woman made her way to him in spite of the guards. It was the little chemist's wife, who years before had been his father's housekeeper, who had been present when he first opened his eyes on the world.

"My poor boy! My poor boy!" she said, clasping his mangled hands. He kissed her on the cheek, without a word, and hurried on into his prison, and the good Father Fabra. Letters, too, he refused to accept and read. He had no time to spare, and he was not to be bothered with the outer world, but lived his hard, lonely life by himself, silent, brooding, studious, for now books were to him a pleasure. And he wrote, too, but never to any soul outside the prison. This life had nothing to do with the world from which he came, and he meant that it should not.

IRRIGATION IN THE EAST.

A Simple Means of Irrigation Described. Experiments have been made in the West, and the result is that irrigation is a simple and easy method of increasing the yield of crops. The most of irrigated fields on many small farms is felt by the owner every year, and where there is no regular system of irrigation, the farmer is left to attempt irrigation. But where ponds or streams of water are located on the place the water can be led to the fields by means of pipes and distributed over the land to suit the needs of the crops. A pipe, or even a wooden water trough, can be constructed so that the water would flow in a series of ditches or receiving ponds.

On fields that are nearly level the greatest difficulty will be experienced in getting the water to run equally throughout the field. One way to do this is to construct ditches on either side of the field and bank them up a foot higher than the field. At right angles from these ditches parallel rows for the vegetables should be made. The water should then be run into the banked up ditches until it overflows. At every row the water will run down and secure force enough to carry it at least to the middle of the garden.

Concerning "stonemal," which is advertised as a fertilizer, American Agriculturalists say: "This stonemal is a finely ground limestone, and we do not believe it would be worth carting, much less paying a fancy price for it. Wise beekeepers will not be caught without the necessary hives, sections, court foundation, etc. It does not pay to import honey from the States, and they are compelled to telegraph for goods. Yellow Danvers and Red Westersfield are standard market brands.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

Having used Ayer's Hair Vigor for years, I find that it keeps my hair so healthy and glossy as to excite the admiration of my friends. My hair is now as thick and black as when I was a young man, and I attribute the improvement to the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. It restores the growth of the hair and restores gray hair to its original color. I cannot see how this preparation could be improved.—Mrs. F. E. BAKER, Galveston, Texas.
