THE NATIONAL ERA.

WASHINGTON, NOVEMBER 8, 1849.

EDUCATION.—No. 2.

We remarked, in a former number, that man's social and moral progress had never been in the same ratio with his intellectual advancement; and we are led to inquire earnestly into the cause of this wrong.

We cannot charge the blame upon the Creator, for God has provided all his works perfect; the fault is in man. The Government of the earth has never been so perfect as man's nature, as a progressive, moral being.

Monarchical Governments are of this character, for they are founded upon the liberty of the press; keep the millions in ignorance; trammel them with a national religion which begets intolerance and its long train of evils; and grind them to dust with the most oppressive taxation.

In a Republic form of Government, there are no galling distinctions of rank; that degrade one man in the estimation of another; but the poor is on an equality with the rich.

Republican principles contain the germ of universal freedom, and are destined to overturn, until they become entirely revolutionized, and the whole globe be converted into a vast Republic.

Freedom is the ascertaining good of Nations, starting from the spirit of years; and when this shall be realized, then will all civil and political rights be secured.

When the people shall be free from the African slave be free from that every effort for man will then have learned that every effort contains the element of its own destruction; and that the community in which it exists; that the sequence follows as uniformly in moral as in physical law.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.

BRUSSELS, October 31, 1849.

The Editor of the National Era:

The day shows you that I have left the capital of Prussia for that of Belgium. The journey here was a delightful one, the weather being cool and bracing, and the country a well-improved agricultural one.

The scenery between Cologne and Brussels is often beautiful. The fact of the country being a level, and the mountains and valleys. The railroad passes through the manufacturing cities of Verrier and the city of Mechlin, remarkable for the similarity of its old and modern architecture.

Brussels is a favorite resort, not only of the English nobility and gentry, but of strangers from all parts of Europe. The facilities of education and the cheapness of the cost of living are more than in most of the European capitals.

The Palace of the King is a large building of very plain architecture, but still to be beautiful. The interior is a fine specimen of the style of the present day.

The Park of the King is a square containing the remains of the old city walls. It is a fine specimen of the style of the present day.
