INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE

This report has been prepared in order to make available reliable statistical data concerning Japanese educational institutions with religious affiliations. Information regarding the location, date of foundation, number of students, number of teachers, and religious affiliation is presented for 407 educational institutions ranging from kindergartens to universities. Data regarding number of students and teachers are for the fall term of the 1947-48 school year.

SOURCE

This report is based upon pamphlets issued by the Japanese Ministry of Education (Monbusho); statistical compilations made by religious bodies; statistical reports on all Japanese educational institutions, by prefecture, prepared by the Education Research Unit, CIE, SCAP; and telegrams and letters from administrative officials of individual institutions, in response to requests for information.

EVALUATION OF DATA

Approximately 80 percent of Japanese educational institutions with religious affiliations, excepting elementary schools and kindergartens, have been included in this report. A higher percentage could not be achieved because of a lack of comprehensive source material. The information listed is considered accurate and reliable. A Japanese researcher has been in constant liaison with the Monbusho, religious bodies, and individual institutions, checking the facts presented.

In the compilation of the roster, lists compiled by the Monbusho and religious bodies[1] were used to obtain the names of schools in this category, and these names were checked against those appearing in the statistical reports of all schools, by prefecture,[2] compiled in January 1947, whence most of the data were obtained. These reports list information as of 30 November 1946. In some cases the statistical reports contained entries for schools which were not included in the previous lists and in others, schools mentioned in the earlier lists did not appear in the statistical reports. In the latter instance, the current status of the schools was checked with the Monbusho before they were included in this survey.

There is a general lack of information concerning Buddhist and Shinto elementary schools and kindergartens and Christian elementary schools in the aforementioned lists, and therefore their treatment in this survey can be considered in no wise complete. This dearth may be attributed to the fact that the original compilers of the lists and surveys which were used as source material did not consider institutions of this type of sufficient importance to warrant their inclusion. However, the few concerning which information was available have been listed in this roster.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

For the purposes of this survey, "educational institutions with religious affiliations" has been interpreted to include: 1) schools controlled by religious organizations; 2) schools financed by religious organizations; 3) schools which train students to become religious leaders; 4) schools with a religious seminary attached; 5) schools whose curricula devote special attention to religious subject matter. It should be noted that having "religious affiliations" does not mean that an institution confines its enrollment to members of any religion, creed, or sect—indeed, only a very small percentage of the students of Christian schools are Christians.

In organizing Table 1, schools have been grouped under the three main headings of higher institutions, secondary institutions, and elementary institutions. Higher institutions are subdivided into universities and colleges. Secondary institutions are subdivided into boys' middle schools, girls' high schools, vocational schools, and miscellaneous schools. The category, "miscellaneous schools," comprises those institutions which do not fall into any of the ordinary categories of schools in the Japanese educational system. In some cases schools giving education almost identical to that offered in girls' high schools, boys' middle schools, etc., are classified as miscellaneous schools for failure to meet certain standards prescribed by the Ministry of Education. Elementary institutions are subdivided into elementary schools and kindergartens. As noted under "Evaluation of Data," the data for elementary institutions does not represent nearly as complete a coverage of schools as does the data for higher and secondary institutions.

The date of foundation, as used in these tables, indicates the date of the founding of the institution under its present title, and may be considerably later than the date of original establishment of the institution. The number of students enrolled is for the fall of 1947, but the actual dates for which these figures were reported varied from institution to institution. The number of teachers includes only persons actually engaged in teaching duties. However, in some cases, teachers employed on a full time basis during the day are also employed as part time teachers at night.

The breakdown for Protestant schools by sect is complicated by the fact that all Protestant churches, with the exceptions of the Episcopal Church, the Seventh Day Adventist Church, and the New Testament Church of Jesus Christ, were united into the Church of Christ in Japan (Nippon Kirisuto Kyodan) in June 1941. (The Osaka diocese of the Episcopal Church and a number of individual churches joined the Church of Christ in Japan in 1942. Most of them rejoined the Episcopal Church at the end of the war.) Subsequent to the surrender of Japan in 1945, the Salvation Army, several small branches of the Holiness Church, and a few churches of the Baptist and Presbyterian faiths withdrew from the Church of Christ in Japan and became independent denominations. Otherwise the Church of Christ in Japan remains intact. Consequently, the breakdown by sect in the case of churches other than those specified above indicates merely the traditional affiliation and not the actual present affiliation, which is the Church of Christ in Japan. Two schools were established during the war and have been listed directly under the Church of Christ in Japan as the affiliated Church.

In translating the institutional names in which the Japanese word gakuin appears there is an apparent redundancy; for example, Kanto Institute Women's College, Kanto Institute Middle School, Kanto Institute English School. This arises from the fact that the word gakuin has consistently been translated in this report as "institute" (jogakuin as "women's institute"), since it commonly designated a group of affiliated institutions. There are cases, however, in which the word gakuin is used as the name of a single institution, in which case it also might be translated correctly as "seminary" or "academy."

In the tables listing institutions by geographical location, Honshu, for purposes of convenience, arbitrarily has been divided into three areas. Southern Honshu comprises the Kinki and Chugoku Districts, including the provinces of Hiroshima, Hyogo, Mie, Nara, Okayama, Shiga, Shimane, Tottori, Wakayama, Yamaguchi, and the municipalities of Kyoto and Osaka. Central Honshu comprises the Chubu and Kanto Districts, including the provinces of Aichi, Chiba, Fukui, Gifu, Gunma, Ibaragi, Ishikawa, Kanagawa, Nagano, Niigata, Saitama, Shizuoka, Tochigi, Toyama, Yamanashi, and Tokyo Metropolis. Northern Honshu comprises the Tohoku District, including the provinces of Akita, Aomori, Fukushima, Iwate, Miyagi, and Yamagata.
