I KINGS III. VER. 5, TO THE END.

In Gibeon the LORD appeared to Solomon in a dream by 5 night: and God said, Ask what I shall give thee. And Solo- 6 mon said, Thou hast shewed unto thy servant David my father g Or, bounty. great ^g mercy, according as he walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee; and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, that thou hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day. And now, O 7 LORD my God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father: and I am but a little child: I know not how to go out or come in. And thy servant is in the midst of thy 8 people which thou hast chosen, a great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude. ^h Give therefore thy 9

 i Heb. hearing. may discern between good and bad: for who is able to judge this thy so great a people? And the speech pleased the LORD, 10 that Solomon had asked this thing. And God said unto him, 11 Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast not asked for thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee. And I 13 father David did walk, then I will lengthen thy days. And 15 Solomon awoke; and, behold, it was a dream. And he came to Jerusalem, and stood before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and offered up burnt offerings, and offered peace offerings, and made a feast to all his servants.

Then came there two women, that were harlots, unto the 16 king, and stood before him. And the one woman said, O my 17 lord, I and this woman dwell in one house; and I was delivered A.C. 1014.

 18 of a child with her in the house. And it came to pass the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also: and we were together; there was no stranger with us in 19 the house, save we two in the house. And this woman's child 20 died in the night; because she overlaid it. And she arose at midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine hand-maid slept, and laid it in her bosom, and laid her dead child in 21 my bosom. And when I rose in the morning to give my child suck, behold, it was dead: but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son, which I did bear.
 22 And the other woman said, Nay; but the living one is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No; but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son. Thus they spake before the 23 king. Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead: and the other saith, Nay; but 24 thy son is the dead, and my son is the living. And the king said, Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the 25 king. And the king said, Divide the living child in two, and 26 give half to the one, and half to the other. Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, for her bowels

2 CHRONICLES I. VER. 13.

13 Then Solomon came from his journey to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned over Israel.

1 KINGS II. VER. 13—38.

13 And Adonijah the son of Haggith came to Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon. And she said, Comest thou peaceably?
 14 And he said, Peaceably. He said moreover, I have somewhat 15 to say unto thee. And she said, Say on. And he said, Thou knowest that the kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign: howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's: for it was his from 16 the LORD. And now I ask one petition of thee, ^r deny me r Heb. turn not away my face.
 17 not. And she said unto him, Say on. And he said, Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the king, (for he will not say thee nay,) that he give me Abishag the Shunammite to wife. Ps. cxxxii 10.

A.C. 1014. And Bath-sheba said, Well; I will speak for thee unto the king.

Bath-sheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah. And the king rose up to meet her, and bowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother; and she sat on his right hand. Then she said, I desire one small petition unto thee; I pray thee, say me not nay. And the king said unto her, Ask on, my mother: for I will not say thee nay. And she said, Let Abishag the Shunammite be given to Adonijah thy brother to wife. And king Solomon answered and said unto his mother, And why dost thou ask Abishag the Shunammite for Adonijah? ask for him the kingdom also; for he is mine elder brother; even for him, and for Abiathar the priest, and for Joab the son of Zeruiah. Then king Solomon sware by the LORD, saying, God do so to me, and more also, if Adonijah have not spoken this word against his own life. Now therefore, as the LORD liveth, which hath established me, and set me on the throne of David my father, and who hath made me an house, as he promised, Adonijah shall be put to death this day. And king Solomon sent by the hand of Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; and he fell upon him that he died.

11. 13.

And unto Abiathar the priest said the king, Get thee to Anathoth, unto thine own fields; for thou art worthy of death: but I will not at this time put thee to death, because thou barest the ark of the Lord God before David my father, and because thou hast been afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted. So Solomon thrust out Abiathar from being priest unto the LORD; that he might fulfil the word of the LORD, which he spake concerning the house of Eli in Shiloh.

Then tidings came to Joab: for Joab had turned after Adonijah, though he turned not after Absalom. And Joab fled to the tabernacle of the LORD, and caught hold on the horns of the altar. And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD; and, behold, he is by the altar. Then Solomon sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, Go, fall upon him. And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth. And he said, Nay; but I will die here. And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me. And the king said unto him, Do as he hath said, and fall upon him, and bury him; that thou mayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from me, and from the house of my father. And the LORD shall return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon two men more righteous and better than he, and slew them with the sword, my father David not knowing thereof, to wit, Abner the son of Ner, return upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his seed for ever: but upon David, and upon his seed, and upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from 34 the LORD. So Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him: and he was buried in his own house in the wilderness.

 35 And the king put Benaiah the son of Jehoiada in his room over the host: and Zadok the priest did the king put in the room of Abiathar.
 36 And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, Build thee an house in Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not 37 forth thence any whither. For it shall be, that on the day thou goest out, and passest over the brook Kidron, thou shalt know for certain that thou shalt surely die: thy blood 38 shall be upon thine own head. And Shimei said unto the king, The saying is good: as my lord the king hath said, so will thy servant do. And Shimei dwelt in Jerusalem many

c Or, remembrancer.

So king Solomon was king over all Israel. And these were the princes which he had; Azariah the son of Zadok the priest, Elioreph and Ahiah, the sons of Shisha, scribes; Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, the recorder. And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the host: and Zadok and Abiathar were the priests: and Azariah the son of Nathan was over the officers: and Zabud the son of Nathan was principal officer, and the king's friend. And Ahishar was over the household: and Adoniram the son of Abda was over the tribute.

e Or, levy.

And Solomon had twelve officers over all Israel, which provided victuals for the king and his household: each man his month in a year made provision. And these are their names:

² By this extension of Solomon's dominions, the covenant made with Abraham (Gen. xv. 18.) was fulfilled.—Vide Hales' Anal. vol. i. p. 413, and the commentators.

³ "The matter," says Lightfoot, "of the ivth chap. 1 Kings, is not of fixed and determinate date, tied to any one year, but it runneth through the story of many years, for it sheweth the growth and continuance of Solomon's strength, establishment, and prosperity in his kingdom; and the evidencing of his wisdom; all the time till his declining to idolatry: and therefore as for the method and place of it, it might be laid any where," &c. I have accordingly inserted the brief account of his horses, &c. in the section in which his greatness is related—of his wisdom, immediately preceding the book of Proverbs—and the last verse before the visit of the queen of Sheba.

There seem to have been two embassies to the king of Tyre: one for cedar and different kinds of wood: the other for skilful workmen in brass and gold, &c.

 15 work. For he ^l cast two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece: and a line of twelve cubits did compass either of 16 them about. And he made two chapters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of the one chapter was five cubits, and the height of the other chapter was five
 17 cubits: and nets of checker work, and wreaths of chain work, for the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars: seven 18 for the one chapter, and seven for the other chapter. And he made the pillars, and two rows round about upon the one network, to cover the chapters that were upon the top, with pome-

And in the top of the base was there a round compass of ³⁵ half a cubit high: and on the top of the base the ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same. For on the plates of ³⁶ the ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved cherubims, lions, and palm trees, according to the ^s proportion of every one, and additions round about. The Dedication of the Temple.

2 CHRONICLES V.

- 1 Thus ^a all the work that Solomon made for the house of the LORD was finished: and Solomon brought in all the things that David his father had dedicated; and the silver, and the gold, and all the instruments, put he among the treasures of the house of God. A.C. 1004.
a 1 Kin. vii. 51.
- 2 ^b Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city of David, which is Zion. Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king in the feast which was in the seventh month. And all the elders of Israel came; and the Levites took up the ark. And they brought up the ark, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, these did the priests and the Levites bring up. Also king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude. And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims: for the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above. And they drew out the staves of the ark, that the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle; but they were not seen without.
- 10 And ^c there it is unto this day. There was nothing in the ark save the two tables which Moses ^d put therein at Horeb, ^e when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt. e Or, they are there, as

Immediately after Solomon's prayer, we read that the fire descended and consumed the sacrifices: which, in compliance with the usual custom, must have been first offered. The events of this third Part, then, would have taken place in the order in which they are here arranged; the ark is removed into the temple—the sacrifices are slain—the prayer is made—and the fire descends, to prove that these services were accepted by the God of Israel.

I KINGS VIII. PART OF VER. 50 TO VER. 61.

50 And give them compassion before them who carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them :

51 For they be thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest forth out of Egypt, from the midst of the furnace of iron :

52 That thine eyes may be open unto the supplication of thy servant, and unto the supplication of thy people Israel, to hearken unto them in all that they call for unto thee.

53 For thou didst separate them from among all the people of the earth, to be thine inheritance, ^q as thou spakest by the hand of Moses thy servant, when thou broughtest our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord God. ^q Ex. xix. 5.

54 And it was so, that when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the LORD, he arose from before the altar of the LORD, from kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven. And he stood, and blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice, saying,

56 Blessed be the LORD, that hath given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised : there hath not ^r failed one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant. ^r Heb. fallen.

57 The LORD our God be with us, as he was with our fathers : let him not leave us, nor forsake us :

A.C. 1004. That he may incline our hearts unto him, to walk in all his 58 ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, which he commanded our fathers.

And let these my words, wherewith I have made supplication 59 before the LORD, be nigh unto the LORD our God day and night, that he maintain the cause of his servant, and the cause of his people Israel ^s at all times, as the matter shall require :

That all the people of the earth may know that the LORD is 60 God, and that there is none else.

Let your heart therefore be perfect with the LORD our God, 61 to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

2 CHRONICLES VI. VER. 40 TO THE END.

Now, my God, let, I beseech thee, thine eyes be open, and 40 let thine ears be attent ^t unto the prayer that is made in this place.

^t Heb. to the prayer of this place.

Now ^u therefore arise, O LORD God, into thy resting place, 41 thou, and the ark of thy strength: let thy priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation, and let thy saints rejoice in goodness.

2 CHRONICLES VII. VER. 1, 2, 3, AND 8, 9, 10.

1 God having given testimony to Solomon's prayer by fire from heaven, and glory in the temple, the people worship him. 8 Solomon having kept the feast of tabernacles, and the feast of the dedication of the altar, dismisseth the people.

Now ^x when Solomon had made an end of praying, the ^y fire 1 came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of the LORD filled the house. And the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, 2 because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house. And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came 3 down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, saying, For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

Also at the same time Solomon kept the feast seven days, 8 and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, from the entering in of Hamath unto ^z the river of Egypt. And in the 9 eighth day they made ^a a solemn assembly: for they kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast seven days. And on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he 10 sent the people away into their tents, glad and merry in heart for the goodness that the LORD had shewed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

⁶ Psalm xlvii. was probably composed and sung on the occasion of bringing the ark, either into the tabernacle on Mount Zion by David, or from thence into the temple by Solomon. (Vide Dr. Wells in loc.) I have inserted it here on the supposition that ver. 5. appears to allude rather to the magnificent description in 2 Chron. v. 13.

Psalms xcvi., xcvi., xcix., c. It is quite uncertain when these Psalms were composed. They are inserted here from the apparent allusions they contain to the cloud which filled the temple; to the fire which consumed the sacrifices; and to the description in 2 Chron. v. 13.

Psalms cxxxv., cxxxvi. The first of these Psalms was supposed to have been sung by the Levites on opening the gates of the temple. The second was sung on the great festivals; one half by one half of the choir, the other by either the other half, or by the whole chorus uniting in the words, "His mercy endureth for ever." As these Psalms were used in the temple service, and the precise time of their composition is not ascertained, it may be assumed that they were adopted at the beginning of that service, and were composed about this time.

I KINGS VIII. VER. 1, TO THE MIDDLE OF VER. 50.

1 The feast of the dedication of the temple. 12 Solomon's blessing. 22 Solomon's prayer.

- 1 Then ^y Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the ^z chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, &c. that they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city of David, which is Zion. And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon at the feast in the month Ethanim, which is the seventh month. And all the elders of Israel came, and the priests took up the ark. And they brought up the ark of the LORD, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, even those did the priests and the Levites bring up. A.C. 1004. unto him, were with him before the ark, sacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude. And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, into the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims. For the cherubims spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above. And they drew out the staves, that the ^a ends of the staves were seen out in the ^b holy place before the oracle, and they were not seen without: and there they are unto this day. There was nothing in the ark ^c save the two tables of stone, which Moses put there at Horeb, ^d when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt. And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud ^e filled the house of the LORD, so that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD.

^f Then spake Solomon, The LORD said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

I have surely built thee an house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever.

And the king turned his face about, and blessed all the congregation of Israel: (and all the congregation of Israel stood;)

And he said, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand fulfilled it, saying,

Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that my name might be therein; but I chose David to be over my people Israel.

And it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

And the LORD said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart.

Nevertheless thou shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

And the LORD hath performed his word that he spake, and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

And Solomon stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven: and he said,

LORD God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart:

Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked before me.

And now, O God of Israel, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?

Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee to day:

That thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, My name shall be there: that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make toward this place.

And hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel when they shall pray toward this place: and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place: and when thou hearest, forgive.

1 KINGS IX. VER. 10—14.

A.C. 1001. And ^a it came to pass at the end of twenty years, when Solo-10 mon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house, (now Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solo-11 mon with cedar trees and fir trees, and with gold, according to all his desire,) that then king Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land of Galilee. And Hiram came out from Tyre 12 to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they ^b pleased him not. And he said, What cities are these which 13 thou hast given me, my brother? And he called them the land of ^c Cabul unto this day. And Hiram sent to the king sixscore 14 talents of gold.

^b Heb. were not right in his eyes.

2 CHRONICLES VIII. VER. 1—11.

And ^d it came to pass at the end of twenty years, wherein 1
 Solomon had built the house of the LORD, and his own house, that the cities which Hiram had restored to Solomon, Solomon 2 built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.
 And Solomon went to Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it. 3
 And he built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store cities, 4 which he built in Hamath. Also he built Beth-horon the 5 upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars; and Baalath, and all the store cities that 6 Solomon had, and all the chariot cities, and the cities of the horsemen, and ^e all that Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.

As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the 7
 Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel, but of their children, who were left 8 after them in the land, whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make to pay tribute until this day.
 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants 9 for his work; but they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen. And these 10 were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even two hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

^f 1 Kin. iii. 1. & vii. 8. & ix. 24.

And Solomon ^f brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of 11
 the city of David unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are ^g holy, whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

⁷ The Book of Canticles is inserted here on the authority of Lightfoot; who observes that it must have been composed after the building of the summer-house in the forest of Lebanon. He infers this from chap. iv. 8.—“Come with me from Lebanon, my spouse;” and chap. vii. 4. The common opinion respecting this much discussed book—that it is a mystical allegory of the union of Christ and his Church—is supported by the best and most abundant evidence. No comparison is more general, throughout the books of Scripture, than this of marriage, to express the love of God to his Church. For a full account of this beautiful dramatic poem, the various opinions which have been entertained respecting it, and the division of its contents in the form of scenes, acts, idyls, &c. vide Dr Wells in loc.; Horne's Crit. Introd. vol. ii. p. 188, &c.; and Dr. Gray.

Wisdom of Solomon.

1 KINGS IV. VER. 29, 30, 31.

a Eccus.
xlvi. 14, 15, 16.

And ^a God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceed- 29 ing much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea shore. And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of 30 all the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt. For he was wiser than all men; than Ethan the Ezra- 31 hite, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol: and his fame was in all nations round about.

1 KINGS IV. VER. 33.

And he spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Leba- 33 non even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall: he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.

1 KINGS IV. VER. 32.

And he spake three thousand proverbs: and his songs were 32 a thousand and five.

⁸ The Book of Proverbs may be divided into five parts. The first is a kind of preface, and extends to the end of the ninth chapter; it contains a series of admonitions, cautions, and encouragements to the study of wisdom.

- 8 ^g My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother : A.C. 984.

- 10 My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not.
- 11 If they say, Come with us, let us lay wait for blood, let us lurk privily for the innocent without cause :
- 12 Let us swallow them up alive as the grave ; and whole, as those that go down into the pit :
- 13 We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoil ;
- 14 Cast in thy lot among us ; let us all have one purse :
- 15 My son, walk not thou in the way with them : refrain thy foot from their path :
- 16 ⁱ For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood. i Is. lix. 7.
Rom. iii. 15.
- 17 Surely in vain the net is spread ^k in the sight of any bird. k Heb. in the eyes of every thing that hath a wing.
- 18 And they lay wait for their own blood ; they lurk privily for their own lives.
- 19 So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain ; which taketh away the life of the owners thereof.
- 20 ^{i m} Wisdom crieth without ; she uttereth her voice in the streets : l Heb. Wisdoms, that is, excellent wisdom.
- 21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse, in the openings of the gates : in the city she uttereth her words, saying,
- 22 How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity ? and the scorers delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge ? m ch. viii. 1, &c.
- 23 Turn you at my reproof : behold, I will pour out my spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you.
- 24 ⁿ Because I have called, and ye refused ; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded ; n Is. lxxv. 12.
& lxxvi. 4. Jer. vii. 13. Zech. vii. 11.
- 25 But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof :
- 26 I also will laugh at your calamity ; I will mock when your fear cometh ;
- 27 When your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind ; when distress and anguish cometh upon you.
- 28 ^o Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer ; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me : o Job xxvii. 9. Is. i. 15.

- 29 For that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the LORD :

PROVERBS IV.

1 Solomon, to persuade obedience, 3 sheweth what instruction he had of his parents, 5 to study wisdom, 14 and shun the path of the wicked. 20 He exhorteth to faith, 23 and sanctification.

my words : keep my commandments, and live.

Get wisdom, get understanding : forget it not ; neither de- 5 cline from the words of my mouth.

Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee : love her, and 6 she shall keep thee.

Wisdom is the principal thing ; therefore get wisdom : and 7 with all thy getting get understanding.

Exalt her, and she shall promote thee : she shall bring thee to 8

- 17 For they eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of violence.
- 18 But the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.
- 19 The way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble.
- 20 My son, attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings.

- 27 ^m Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil. m Deut. v. 32.

PROVERBS V.

1 Solomon exhorteth to the study of wisdom. 3 He sheweth the mischief of whoredom and riot. 15 He exhorteth to contentedness, liberality, and chastity. 22 The wicked are overtaken with their own sins.

- 1 My son, attend unto my wisdom, and bow thine ear to my understanding:
- 2 That thou mayest regard discretion, and that thy lips may keep knowledge.

 moveable, that thou canst not know them.
 Hear me now therefore, O ye children, and depart not from 7
 the words of my mouth.
 Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door 8 of her house:
 Lest thou give thine honour unto others, and thy years unto 9 the cruel:
 Lest strangers be filled with ^q thy wealth; and thy labours 10 be in the house of a stranger;
 And thou mourn at the last, when thy flesh and thy body 11 are consumed,
 And say, How have I hated instruction, and my heart des- 12
 pised reproof;
 And have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor inclined 13 mine ear to them that instructed me!

^r satisfy thee at all times; and ^s be thou ravished always with her love.
 And why wilt thou, my son, be ravished with a strange 20 woman, and embrace the bosom of a stranger?
^t For the ways of man are before the eyes of the LORD, and 21 he pondereth all his goings.

PART II^o.

PROVERBS X.

From this chapter to the five and twentieth are sundry observations of moral virtues, and their contrary vices.

- A.C. 984. The proverbs of Solomon. ^z A wise son maketh a glad 1 father: but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.
- ^a Treasures of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness 2 delivereth from death.
- ^b The LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to 3 famish: but he casteth away ^c the substance of the wicked.
- He becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand: ^d but the 4 hand of the diligent maketh rich.
- He that gathereth in summer is a wise son: but he that 5 sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame.
- ^e Blessings are upon the head of the just: but ^e violence 6 covereth the mouth of the wicked.
- ^f The memory of the just is blessed: but the name of the 7 wicked shall rot.
- The wise in heart will receive commandments: but ^g a prat- 8
 ing fool ^h shall fall.
- ⁱ He that walketh uprightly walketh surely: but he that per- 9 verteth his ways shall be known.
- ^k He that winketh with the eye causeth sorrow: but a prating 10 fool ^l shall fall.
- ^m The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life: but vio- 11
 lence covereth the mouth of the wicked.
- Hatred stirreth up strifes: but ⁿ love covereth all sins. 12
- In the lips of him that hath understanding wisdom is found: 13 but a rod is for the back of him that is void of ^o understanding.
- Wise men lay up knowledge: but the mouth of the foolish is 14 near destruction.
- ^p The rich man's wealth is his strong city: the destruction of 15 the poor is their poverty.
- The labour of the righteous tendeth to life: the fruit of the 16 wicked to sin.
- He is in the way of life that keepeth instruction: but he that 17 refuseth reproof ^q erreth.
- He that hideth hatred with lying lips, and he that uttereth a 18 slander, is a fool.
- In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin: but he that 19 refraineth his lips is wise.
- The tongue of the just is as choice silver: the heart of the 20 wicked is little worth.

^o The second part of this book contains what may, with more strictness, be called Proverbs: that is, unconnected sentences, neat, and simple, adapted to the instruction of youth. This part extends from chap. x. to chap. xxii. end of ver. 16.

- 21 The lips of the righteous feed many: but fools die for want ^r of wisdom. A.C. 984.
^r Heb. of heart.
- 22 The blessing of the LORD, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it.
- 23 ^s It is as sport to a fool to do mischief: but a man of understanding hath wisdom. s ch. xiv. 9.
- 24 The fear of the wicked, it shall come upon him: but the desire of the righteous shall be granted.
- 25 As the whirlwind passeth, so is the wicked no more: but the righteous is an everlasting foundation.
- 26 As vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke to the eyes, so is the sluggard to them that send him.
- 27 ^t The fear of the LORD ^u prolongeth days: but the years of

PART IV ¹¹.

PROVERBS XXV.

1 Observations about kings, 8 and about avoiding causes of quarrels, and sundry causes thereof.

These are also proverbs of Solomon, which the men of 1 Hezekiah king of Judah copied out.

It is the glory of God to conceal a thing : but the honour of 2 kings is to search out a matter.

t Heb. there is no searching.

The heaven for height, and the earth for depth, and the heart 3 of kings ^t is unsearchable.

Take away the dross from the silver, and there shall come 4 forth a vessel for the finer.

^u Take away the wicked from before the king, and his throne 5 shall be established in righteousness.

x Heb. Set not out thy glory.

^x Put not forth thyself in the presence of the king, and stand 6 not in the place of great men :

y Luke xiv. 8, 9, 10.

^y For better it is that it be said unto thee, Come up hither ; 7 than that thou shouldest be put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen.

Go not forth hastily to strive, lest thou know not what to do 8 in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame.

z Matt. v. 25. & xviii. 15.
a Or, discover not the secret of another.

^z Debate thy cause with thy neighbour himself ; and ^a dis- 9 cover not a secret to another :

Lest he that heareth it put thee to shame, and thine infamy 10 turn not away.

b Heb. spoken upon his wheels.

A word ^b fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of 11 silver.

As an earring of gold, and an ornament of fine gold, so is a 12 wise reprove upon an obedient ear.

c ch. xiii. 17.

^c As the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful 13 messenger to them that send him : for he refresheth the soul of his masters.

Whoso boasteth himself ^d of a false gift is like clouds and wind 14 without rain.

xxv. 24, &c.
ch. xv. 1. & xvi. 14.

^e By long forbearing is a prince persuaded, and a soft tongue 15 breaketh the bone.

¹¹ Part the fourth is supposed to have been selected from a larger collection of Proverbs by the men of Hezekiah ; that is, by the prophets whom he employed to restore the service and writings of the church ;—as Eliakim, Joah, and Shebna ; and probably Hosea, Micah, and even Isaiah. All these flourished in the reign of Hezekiah, and endeavoured to revive true religion among the Jews.

- 16 Hast thou found honey? eat so much as is sufficient for thee, A.C. 984.
lest thou be filled therewith, and vomit it.
- 17 ^f Withdraw thy foot from thy neighbour's house; lest he be weary of thee, and so hate thee. f Or, Let thy foot be seldom in thy neighbour's house.
- 18 A man that beareth false witness against his neighbour is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow.
- 19 Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint.
- 20 As he that taketh away a garment in cold weather, and as vinegar upon nitre, so is he that singeth songs to an heavy heart.
- 21 If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink:
- 22 For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the LORD shall reward thee.
- 23 ^g The north wind driveth away rain: so doth an angry countenance a backbiting tongue. g Or, The north wind bringeth forth rain: so doth a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.
- 24 ^h It is better to dwell in the corner of the housetop, than with a brawling woman and in a wide house. h ch. xix. 13. & xxi. 9. 19.
- 25 As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country.
- 26 A righteous man falling down before the wicked is as a troubled fountain, and a corrupt spring.
- 27 It is not good to eat much honey: so for men to search their own glory is not glory.
- 28 ⁱ He that hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is broken down, and without walls. i ch. xvi. 32.

PROVERBS XXVI.

- 1 Observations about fools, 13 about sluggards. 17 and about contentious busy-bodies.
- 1 As snow in summer, and as rain in harvest, so honour is not seemly for a fool.
- 2 As the bird by wandering, as the swallow by flying, so the curse causeless shall not come.

- 5 Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in ^l his own conceit. l Heb. his own eyes.

- 7 The legs of the lame ⁿ are not equal: so is a parable in the mouth of fools. n Heb. are lifted up.
- 8 ^o As he that bindeth a stone in a sling, so is he that giveth honour to a fool. o Or, As he that putteth a precious stone in a heap of stones.
- 9 As a thorn goeth up into the hand of a drunkard, so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

A.C. 984.

^p Or, A great man grieveth all, and he hireth the fool, he hireth also transgressors.

^q As a dog returneth to his vomit, so a fool ^r returneth to his 11 folly.

Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? there is more 12 hope of a fool than of him.

^s The slothful man saith, There is a lion in the way; a lion 13 is in the streets.

As the door turneth upon his hinges, so doth the slothful 14 upon his bed.

^t The slothful hideth his hand in his bosom; ^u it grieveth him 15 to bring it again to his mouth.

The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men 16 that can render a reason.

He that passeth by, and ^x meddleth with strife belonging not 17 to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears.

As a mad man who casteth ^y firebrands, arrows, and death, 18 So is the man that deceiveth his neighbour, and saith, Am 19 not I in sport?

^z Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: so where there 20 is no ^b talebearer, the strife ^c ceaseth.

^d As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire; so is a con- 21 tentious man to kindle strife.

^e The words of a talebearer are as wounds, and they go down 22 into the ^f innermost parts of the belly.

Burning lips and a wicked heart are like a potsherd covered 23 with silver dross.

He that hateth ^g dissembleth with his lips, and layeth up 24 deceit within him;

^h When he ⁱ speaketh fair, believe him not: for there are 25 seven abominations in his heart.

^k Whose hatred is covered by deceit, his wickedness shall be 26 shewed before the whole congregation.

^l Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein: and he that rolleth a 27 stone, it will return upon him.

A lying tongue hateth those that are afflicted by it; and a 28 flattering mouth worketh ruin.

PROVERBS XXVII.

1 Observations of self-love, 5 of true love, 11 of care to avoid offences, 23 and of the household care.

^m Boast not thyself of ⁿ to morrow; for thou knowest not 1 what a day may bring forth.

Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a 2 stranger, and not thine own lips.

A stone ^o is heavy, and the sand weighty; but a fool's wrath 3 is heavier than them both.

The ^mwicked flee when no man pursueth: but the righteous ¹are bold as a lion.

For the transgression of a land many are the princes thereof: ²but ⁿby a man of understanding and knowledge the state thereof shall be prolonged.

A poor man that oppresseth the poor is like a sweeping rain ³which leaveth no food.

They that forsake the law praise the wicked: but such as ⁴keep the law contend with them.

Evil men understand not judgment: but they that seek the ⁵LORD understand all things.

^sHe that by usury and ^tunjust gain increaseth his substance, ⁸he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor.

He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his ⁹prayer shall be abomination.

^uWhoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way, he ¹⁰shall fall himself into his own pit: but the upright shall have good things in possession.

^aHe that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whoso con- ¹³fesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy.

Happy is the man that feareth alway: ^bbut he that hardeneth ¹⁴his heart shall fall into mischief.

As a roaring lion, and a ranging bear; so is a wicked ruler ¹⁵over the poor people.

The prince that wanteth understanding is also a great op- ¹⁶pressor: but he that hateth covetousness shall prolong his days.

^cA man that doeth violence to the blood of any person shall ¹⁷flee to the pit; let no man stay him.

Whoso walketh uprightly shall be saved: but he that is per- ¹⁸verse in his ways shall fall at once.

^dHe that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread: but he ¹⁹that followeth after vain persons shall have poverty enough.

a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth?
what is his name, and what is his son's name, if thou canst tell?

¹² Part V. consists only of two chapters, xxx. and xxxi. In the former are included the wise observations and instructions delivered by Agur, the son of Jakeh, to his pupils, Ithiel and Ucal. The thirty-first contains the precepts delivered to Lemuel by his mother, who was supposed to have been a Jewish woman, married to a neighbouring prince, and to have been anxious to establish the mind of her son in virtuous principles, and to unite him to a wife professing the same regard for religion. Others believe the mother of Lemuel to have been Abijah, the daughter of the high priest Zechariah, and mother of king Hezekiah. Others, that she was the mother of Solomon.—Vide Horne, Gray, Lightfoot.

I KINGS XI. VER. 1—14.

- 1 But king Solomon loved ^a many strange women, ^b together with the daughter of Pharaoh, women of the Moabites, Ammonites, 2 Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites ; of the nations concerning which the LORD said unto the children of Israel, ^c Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you : for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods : Solomon 3 clave unto these in love. that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father. For Solomon went after ^d Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites. And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and ^e went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father. Then did Solomon build an high place for Chemosh, and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon. And likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burnt incense and sacrificed unto their gods.

And the LORD was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the LORD God of Israel, ^f which had appeared unto him twice, and ^g had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded. Wherefore the LORD said unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this ^h is done of thee, and thou hast not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, ⁱ I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son. Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give one tribe to thy son for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen.

I KINGS XI. VER. 23—40.

And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which fled from his lord Hadadezer king of Zobah: and he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, ^k when David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus. And he was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon, beside the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

And ^l Jeroboam the son of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman, even he lifted up his hand against the king. And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: Solomon built Millo, and ^m repaired the breaches of the city of David his father. And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon seeing the young man that he ⁿ was industrious, he made him ruler over all the ^o charge of the house of Joseph. And it came to pass at that time when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way; and he had clad himself with a new garment; and they two were alone in the field: and Ahijah caught the new 30

Howbeit I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand: but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes: but ^p I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give it unto thee, even ten tribes. And unto his son will I give one tribe, that David my servant may have a light alway before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there. And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel. And it shall be, if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as David my servant did; that I will be with thee, and build thee a sure house, as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee. And I will for this afflict the seed of David, but not for ever. Solomon sought therefore to kill Jeroboam. And Jeroboam arose, and fled into Egypt, unto Shishak king of Egypt, and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

ECCLESIASTES; OR, THE PREACHER, 1¹³.

1 The preacher sheweth that all human courses are vain: 4 because the creatures are restless in their courses, 9 they bring forth nothing new, and all old things are forgotten, 12 and because he hath found it so in the studies of wisdom.

1 The words of the Preacher, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

¹³ The book of Ecclesiastes was written by Solomon after his allegiance to God had yielded to the attractions of idolatrous women. It has been divided variously by different commentators. The more usual division is that of Dr. Wells, into two general parts. The first shewing that all things relating to this world are vain and perishing, and can afford no true or lasting happiness; the second proving that the fear of God alone is real and permanent satisfaction and wisdom. Many passages in this book have been misunderstood: it has been supposed to savour of irreligion and immorality. The passages, however, in question do not express the opinion of the king: they contain the false arguments which he puts into the mouth of the imaginary interlocutor whose opinions he opposes. The best analysis of this book, excepting, perhaps, that of Diodati, which is too long to be inserted here, is that by Mr. Des Voeux, which is given in Horne's Critical Introduction, and which I have extracted as a useful illustration of its various obscurities and difficulties.

"Mr. Des Voeux," says Mr. Horne, "reduces the whole discourse to three propositions, every one of which, when properly reflected upon, yields a strong proof of a state of future rewards and punishments.

14—17. 1st proof. Instability of riches.
Ch. vi. 18—2. 2d proof. Insufficiency of riches to make one happy.
3—6. Corollary. The fate of an abortive is preferable, upon the whole, to that of one who lives without enjoying life.
7—9. 3d proof. Men's insatiableness.
10, 11. General conclusion from the first and second proposition.
12. THE THIRD PROPOSITION:—"Men know not what is or is not truly advantageous to them; because they are either ignorant or unmindful of that which must come to pass after they are dead."
- Ch. vii. 1—8. 1st proof. Wrong estimation of things.
A digression intended (like that in ver. 1—9.) to prevent any misconstruction of the foregoing observations, and containing several advices, together with a strong commendation of him who gives them, in order to enforce the observation of the rules laid down by him.
9—12. 1st advice. Not to blame Providence.
13. 2d advice. Not to judge of Providence.
14, 15. 3d advice. To submit to Providence.
16—20. 4th advice. To avoid excess.
21, 22. 5th advice. Not to mind idle reports.

- 15 Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so ^{b Heb. happeneth to me, even to me.} it happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart, that this also is vanity.
- 16 For there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever; seeing that which now is in the days to come shall all be forgotten. And how dieth the wise man? as the fool.
- 17 Therefore I hated life; because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.
- 18 Yea, I hated all my labour which I had ^{c Heb. laboured.} taken under the sun: because ^{d Job xxix. 10.} I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me.
- 19 And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a fool? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have shewed myself wise under the sun. This is also vanity.
- 20 Therefore I went about to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun.
- 21 For there is a man whose labour is in wisdom, and in knowledge, and in equity; yet to a man that hath not laboured therein shall he ^{e Heb. give.} leave it for his portion. This also is vanity and a great evil.
- 22 ^{f ch. i. 3. & iii. 9.} For what hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun?
- 23 For all his days are ^{g Job xiv. 1.} sorrows, and his travail grief; yea, his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity.
- 24 ^{h ch. iii. 12, 13. 22 & v. 18. & viii. 15.} There is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he ^{i Or, delight his senses.} should make his soul enjoy good in his labour. This also I saw, that it was from the hand of God.
- 25 For who can eat, or who else can hasten hereunto, more than I?
- 26 For God giveth to a man that is good ^{k Heb. before him.} in his sight wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather and to heap up, that ^{l Job xxvii 17.} he may give to him that is good before God. This also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

ECCLESIASTES III.

1 By the necessary change of times, vanity is added to human travail. 11 There is an excellency in God's works. 16 But as for man, God shall judge his works there, and here he shall be like a beast.

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose 1 under the heaven :

A time ^m to be born, and a time to die ; a time to plant, and 2
a time to pluck up that which is planted ;

A time to kill, and a time to heal ; a time to break down, 3 and a time to build up ;

A time to weep, and a time to laugh ; a time to mourn, and 4 a time to dance ;

A time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones to- 5 gether ; a time to embrace, and a time ⁿ to refrain from embracing ;

A time to ^o get, and a time to lose ; a time to keep, and a 6 time to cast away ;

A time to rend, and a time to sew ; a time to keep silence, 7 and a time to speak ;

A time to love, and a time to hate ; a time of war, and a 8 time of peace.

^p What profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he 9 laboureth ?

I have seen the travail, which God hath given to the sons of 10 men to be exercised in it.

He hath made every thing beautiful in his time ; also he 11 hath set the world in their heart, so that no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end.

I know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice, 12 and to do good in his life.

And also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the 13 good of all his labour, it is the gift of God.

I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever : 14 nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it : and God doeth it, that men should fear before him.

^q That which hath been is now ; and that which is to be hath 15 already been ; and God requireth ^r that which is past.

And moreover I saw under the sun the place of judgment, 16 that wickedness was there ; and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there.

I said in mine heart, God shall judge the righteous and the 17 wicked : for there is ^s a time there for every purpose and for every work.

I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, 18 ^t that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts.

1 Vanity is increased unto men by oppression, 4 by envy, 5 by idleness, 7 by covetousness, 9 by solitariness, 13 by wilfulness.

- 1 So I returned, and considered all the ^z oppressions that are done under the sun: and behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter; and on the ^a side of their oppressors there was power; but they had no comforter. z ch. v. 8, &c.

- 8 There is one alone, and there is not a second; yea, he hath neither child nor brother: yet is there no end of all his labour; neither is his eye satisfied with riches; neither saieth he, For whom do I labour, and bereave my soul of good? This is also vanity, yea, it is a sore travail.
- 9 Two are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour.
- 10 For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up.
- 11 Again, if two lie together, then they have heat: but how can one be warm alone?
- 12 And if one prevail against him, two shall withstand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken.
- 13 Better is a poor and a wise child than an old and foolish king, ^h who will no more be admonished. h Heb. who before them: they also that come after shall not rejoice in him.

ECCLESIASTES VI.

1 The vanity of riches without use. 3 Of children, 6 and old age without riches. 9 The vanity of sight and wandering desires. 11 The conclusion of vanities.

- 1 There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men:
- 2 A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, so that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it: this is vanity, and it is an evil disease.
- 3 If a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and also that he have no burial; I say, that an untimely birth is better than he.
- 4 For he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.
- 5 Moreover he hath not seen the sun, nor known any thing: this hath more rest than the other.
- 6 Yea, though he live a thousand years twice told, yet hath he seen no good: do not all go to one place?
- 7 All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the ^y appetite y Heb. soul. is not filled.

There is no man that hath power^e over the spirit to retain⁸ the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death: and there is no^f discharge in that war; neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.

All this have I seen, and applied my heart unto every work⁹ that is done under the sun: there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another to his own hurt.

And so I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone¹⁰ from the place of the holy, and they were forgotten in the city where they had so done: this is also vanity.

Because sentence against an evil work is not executed¹¹ speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.

g Ps. xxxvii.
11. 18, 19. Though a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be¹² prolonged, yet surely I know that^g it shall be well with them that fear God, which fear before him:

But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he¹³ prolong his days, which are as a shadow; because he feareth not before God.

h Ps. lxxiii.
14. There is a vanity which is done upon the earth; that there¹⁴ be just men, unto whom it^h happeneth according to the work of the wicked; again, there be wicked men, to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous: I said that this also is vanity.

i ch. ii. 24. ⁱ Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better¹⁵ thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry: for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

When I applied mine heart to know wisdom, and to see the¹⁶ business that is done upon the earth: (for also there is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes:)

Then I beheld all the work of God, that a man cannot find¹⁷ out the work that is done under the sun: because though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it; yea farther; though a wise man think to know it, yet shall he not be able to find it.

not; as is the good, so is the sinner; and he that sweareth, as he that feareth an oath. A.C. 980

- 3 This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all: yea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead.
- 4 For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion.
- 5 For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten.
- 6 Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.
- 7 Go thy way, eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works.
- 8 Let thy garments be always white; and let thy head lack no ointment.
- 9 ^m Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest all the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: ⁿ for that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun. ^m Heb. See,

- 11 I returned, and saw under the sun, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.
- 12 For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men ^o snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them. ^o Prov. xxix.
- 13 This wisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me:
- 14 There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it:
- 15 Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.
- 16 ^p Then said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard. ^p Prov. xxi.
22. ch. vii. 19.
- 17 The words of wise men are heard in quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.

Note.—From the difficulty of arranging the events in this Period, it has been thought most advisable to divide each Part into two Portions. The first Portion contains the reign of a king of Judah; the second, the events in the kingdom of Israel, contemporary with his reign. The Books of Kings and Chronicles are harmonized throughout in this Period, and the Prophecies are arranged as they were delivered in the reigns of their respective kings, so far, at least, as can be ascertained from the testimony of various authors.

PART I.

The Reign of Rehoboam, first King of Judah, with the contemporary Events in the Kingdom of Israel. (17 Years—from 975 to 958.)

PORTION I.

Reign of Rehoboam.

§ 1. Revolt of the Ten Tribes.

1 KINGS XIV. PART OF VER. 21.

21 And Rehoboam the son of Solomon reigned in Judah. A.C. 975.
^a Rehoboam was forty and one years old when he began to reign. a 2 Chr. xii. 13.

1 KINGS XII. VER. 1—24.

1 And ^b Rehoboam went to Shechem : for all Israel were come b 2 Chr. x. 1, &c.
2 to Shechem to make him king. And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nēbat, who was yet in ^c Egypt, heard of c ch. xi. 40.
3 it, (for he was fled from the presence of king Solomon, and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt;) that they sent and called him. And Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israel came, and spake unto 4 Rehoboam, saying, Thy father made our ^d yoke grievous : now d ch. iv. 7.
therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee. And he said unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed.
6 And king Rehoboam consulted with the old men, that stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, and said, How do
7 ye advise that I may answer this people? And they spake unto him, saying, If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to 8 them, then they will be thy servants for ever. But he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and 9 which stood before him : and he said unto them, What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter?
10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto

A.C. 975. thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins. And now whereas my ¹¹ father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third ¹² day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day. And the king answered the people ^e roughly, and ¹³ forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him; and spake to ¹⁴ them after the counsel of the young men, saying, My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people; ¹⁵ for the cause was from the LORD, that he might perform his saying, which the LORD ^f spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto ¹⁶ them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents. But as for the children of ¹⁷ Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them. Then king Rehoboam sent Adoram, who was over ¹⁸ the tribute; and all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died. Therefore king Rehoboam ^g made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem. So Israel ^h rebelled against the ¹⁹ house of David unto this day. And it came to pass, when all Israel ²⁰ heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah ⁱ only.

^g Heb. strengthened himself.
^h Or, fell away.

ⁱ ch. xi. 13.

And when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled ²¹ all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon. But ^k the word of God came unto ²² Shemaiah the man of God, saying, Speak unto Rehoboam, the ²³ son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, saying, Thus ²⁴ saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; for this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

2 CHRONICLES XI. VER. 5, TO THE END.

5 And Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built cities for de- A.C. 973.

 7, 8 Tekoa, and Beth-zur, and Shoco, and Adullam, and Gath,

 11 and in Benjamin fenced cities. And he fortified the strong holds, and put captains in them, and store of victual, and of oil 12 and wine. And in every several city he put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong, having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

 Israel such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their 17 fathers. So they strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong, three years: for three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.
 18 And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David to wife, and Abihail the daughter of Eliab the 19 son of Jesse; which bare him children; Jeush, and Shamariah, 20 and Zaham. And after her he took ^c Maachah the daughter of c 1 Kin. xv. 2.
 Absalom; which bare him Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Absalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took 22 and eight sons, and threescore concubines; and begat twenty and eight sons, and threescore daughters.) And Rehoboam made Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, to be ruler among wisely, and dispersed of all his children throughout all the

For they also built them ²³ high places, and ^e images, and groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree. And they were also sodomites in ²⁴ the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

2 CHRONICLES XII. VER. 2. TO THE END.

970. ^a And it came to pass, that in the fifth year of king Rehoboam ² Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, because they had transgressed against the LORD, with twelve hundred ³ chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt; the Lubims, the Sukkiims, and the Ethiopians. And he took the ⁴ fenced cities which pertained to Judah, and came to Jerusalem.

Then came Shemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the ⁵ princes of Judah, that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also left you in the hand of Shishak. Whereupon the princes of Israel and the ⁶ king humbled themselves; and they said, The LORD is righteous. And when the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, ⁷ the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them ^b some deliverance; and my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak. Never- ⁸ theless they shall be his servants; that they may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries. So ⁹ Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all: he carried away also the ¹⁰ shields of gold which Solomon had ^c made. Instead of which king Rehoboam made shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house. And when the king entered into the house ¹¹ of the LORD, the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard chamber. And when he humbled ¹² himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether: ^d and also in Judah things went well.

So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and ¹³ reigned: for ^e Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put his name there. And his mother's name was

Events in the Kingdom of Israel, contemporary with the Reign of Rehoboam King of Judah.

1 KINGS XII. VER. 25, TO THE END.

974. Then Jeroboam built Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein; and went out from thence, and built Penuel. And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David: if this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah. ¹ Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two

To account for this extraordinary conduct, we must observe how skilfully the rebellious Jeroboam adapted his innovation to the received opinions of the people. The new worship which he was desirous of establishing was a studied imitation of the regular service at Jerusalem. Priests were consecrated, and the great festivals observed; sacrifices were offered, and the worship of Jehovah professedly continued. Some alterations were indeed made, in conformity to those erroneous notions which the Israelites had imbibed from the surrounding idolaters, and from which they were never entirely emancipated till after the Babylonish captivity.

Within the sanctuary, in the temple of Jerusalem, were the figures of the cherubim. These figures were a combination of the forms of a man, a bull, a lion, and an eagle, in one body, in which the form of the bull predominated. It is generally affirmed, therefore, that the two calves which Jeroboam set up were intended to represent these cherubim. They were either the complete figure of the cherubim, or the form of an ox or calf only, or, as is sometimes supposed, the head alone of a calf. Had Jeroboam been contented with this innovation, he would have been calves of gold, and said unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem : ^a behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. And he set the one in Beth-el, and the other put he in Dan. And this thing became a sin : for the people went to worship before the one, even unto Dan. And he made an house of high places, and made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi. And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah, and he ^b offered upon the altar. So did he in Beth-el, ^c sacrificing unto the calves that he had made : and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made. So he ^d offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised of his own heart ; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel : and he offered upon the altar, ^e and burnt incense.

1 KINGS XIII.

1 And, behold, there came a man of God out of Judah by the word of the LORD unto Beth-el : and Jeroboam stood by the 2 altar ^a to burn incense. And he cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, O altar, altar, thus saith the LORD ; Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, ^b Josiah by name ; and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be 3 burnt upon thee. And he gave a sign the same day, saying, This is the sign which the LORD hath spoken ; Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it shall be poured 4 out. And it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Beth-el, that he put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And his hand, which he put forth against him, dried 5 up, so that he could not pull it in again to him. The altar also guilty only of schism, not of idolatry. But he had no sooner set up the golden calves, than he gave them the names of the Egyptian idols ; he declared the cherubim to be the bulls Apis and Mnevis ; he pronounced them the deliverers of Israel from Egypt, and worshipped them with the same rites with which Jehovah was worshipped in the temple at Jerusalem. That this was the sin of Jeroboam, who is so repeatedly said " to have made Israel to sin," may be collected from Scripture itself. Hosea styles the idols of Jeroboam " the calves of Beth-aven." Aven was the same as the Egyptian deity Aun or On. The letters of the two words in Hebrew are the same : the apparent difference between them is made only by the Masoretic punctuation. Aven, Aun, or On, was the Sun, the same as Osiris ; the worship of the calves, therefore, must have been, substantially, the worship of the Sun.

By this insidious stratagem, we find that Jeroboam contrived to retain in his dominions a great number of the nominal worshippers of Jehovah ; and, at the same time, strengthened his government by the adherence of many thousands of those who had long been attached, particularly in the northern parts of Judea, to the idolatries of the surrounding pagans.—Vide Selden's de Diis Syr. p. 51, Amsterdam, edit. 1680 ; Pfeiffer, Diff. loc. And the king answered and said unto the man of God, 6 Intreat now the face of the LORD thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me again. And the man of God besought ^c the LORD, and the king's hand was restored him again, and became as it was before. And the king said unto 7 the man of God, Come home with me, and refresh thyself, and I will give thee a reward. And the man of God said unto the 8 king, If thou wilt give me half thine house, I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water in this place: for so was it charged me by the word of the LORD, saying, Eat 9 no bread, nor drink water, nor turn again by the same way that thou camest. So he went another way, and returned not by 10 the way that he came to Beth-el.

Now there dwelt an old prophet in Beth-el; and his sons 11 came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father. And their father said 12 unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went, which came from Judah. And he 13 said unto his sons, Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon, and went after the man of God, and 14 found him sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am. Then 15 he said unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread. And 16 he said, I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee: neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place: for ^d it was said to me by the word of the LORD, Thou shalt 17 eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest. He said unto him, I am a prophet also 18 as thou art; and an angel spake unto me by the word of the LORD, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him. So 19 he went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word 20 of the LORD came unto the prophet that brought him back: and he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, say- 21 ing, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee, but camest back, 22 and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place, of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; thy carcase shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he 23 had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the pro-

24 phet whom he had brought back. And when he was gone, a lion met him by the way, and slew him: and his carcase was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by 25 the carcase. And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcase cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcase: and they 26 came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt. And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the LORD: therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath ^e torn him, and slain him, according 27 to the word of the LORD, which he spake unto him. And he spake to his sons, saying, Saddle me the ass. And they saddled
 28 him. And he went and found his carcase cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcase: the lion had not
 29 eaten the carcase, nor ^f torn the ass. And the prophet took up the carcase of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back: and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn
 30 and to bury him. And he laid his carcase in his own grave; and they mourned over him, saying, Alas, my brother! And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried; lay my bones beside his 32 bones: for the saying which he cried by the word of the LORD against the altar in Beth-el, and against all the houses of the high places which are in the cities of Samaria, shall surely come to pass.
 33 After this thing Jeroboam returned not from his evil way, but ^g made again of the lowest of the people priests of the high places: whosoever would, he ^h consecrated him, and he became 34 one of the priests of the high places. And this thing became sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth.

Reign of Abijah, three Years—From 958 to 955.

1 Now ^a in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began 958.
 2 Abijah ² to reign over Judah. He reigned three years in Jeru- ^{a 1 Kin. xv 1, &c.}

² Abijah is called Abijam, 1 Kings xv. 1: his mother also is spoken of both as Maachah and Michah; and his grandfather, by his mother's side, is called both Absalom and Uriel. Such changes of names are not unfrequent in Scripture, and are either so used by the inspired writers, purposely to hint something to us concerning the person; or else they were occasioned by the people, who frequently appropriated names to individuals in reference to their characters, or to some qualification or action, by which they had been distinguished, and often from their family, or some person of their family from whom they had descended. Thus Maachah might have had her name changed when she was made queen, when she assumed the name of the first mother of a renowned family in that tribe from whence she descended. (1 Chron. viii. 29.) She was of Gibeah, the city of Saul; and, it is very probable, of the kindred of Saul: and therefore her father, who

And Abijah stood up upon mount Zemaraim, which is in ⁴ mount Ephraim, and said, Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel; Ought ye not to know that the LORD God of Israel ⁵ gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by a covenant of salt? Yet Jeroboam the son ⁶ of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath ^c rebelled against his lord. And there are gathered ⁷ unto him vain men, the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young and tenderhearted, and could not withstand them. And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of ⁸ the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam ^d made you for gods. ^e Have ye not cast out the priests ⁹ of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh ^f to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are no gods. But as for us, the LORD is our God, and we ¹⁰ have not forsaken him; and the priests, which minister unto the LORD, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon ¹¹ their business: ^g and they burn unto the LORD every morning and every evening burnt sacrifices and sweet incense: the ^h shewbread also set they in order upon the pure table; and the candlestick of gold with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening: for we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forsaken him. And, behold, God himself is with us for our cap- ¹² tain, and his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for ye shall not prosper.

was properly called Absalom, is called Uriel; which name is very similar, in its signification, to Ner and Eshbaal, men of the stock and family of Saul. There is therefore no inconsistency, when the same persons are called in Scripture by different names.—Lightfoot's Works, vol. i. p. 78, 79.

- 17 God delivered them into their hand. And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down 18 slain of Israel five hundred thousand chosen men. Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, because they relied upon the 19 LORD God of their fathers. And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof, and Ephraim with the 20 towns thereof. Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah: and the LORD struck him, and he died.

 5 because David did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD, and turned not aside from any thing that he commanded him all the days of his life, ^k save only in the matter of Uriah
 6 the Hittite. And there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all the days of his life. ^l Now the rest of the acts of Abijah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And there was war

³ This Part has no second Portion; because the only event, in the reign of Jeroboam, contemporary with the reign of Abijah, which is related in Scripture, was the battle which took place between the armies of their respective kingdoms; and this event is necessarily related in the history of the king of Judah.

^a Asa began his reign in the twentieth year of Jeroboam. It is evident, therefore, that the three years of Abijah were years current; for Abijah began to reign in the eighteenth year of Jeroboam. The reigns indeed of all the kings (according to the popular mode of computation in the East) are computed in current time. Thus the reign of Zedekiah is said to have been eleven years; it was in fact merely ten years, four months, and eight days. It is usual, in Scripture, to put the whole for a part, even when days only are computed. Thus our Saviour is said to have remained in the grave three days and three nights. It is well known, that he was confined in the sepulchre one whole day, and a comparatively small space of the two other days.—Vide Bp. Patrick in loc.; the tables of the kings of Judah and Israel at the end of Whiston's Chronology; and Hales's Analysis, vol. ii. p. 408.

6 And he built fenced cities in Judah: for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because the LORD had given
7 him rest. Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the LORD our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest
8 on every side. So they built and prospered. And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and fourscore thousand: all these were mighty men of valour. 944.

9 ^h And there came out against them Zerah the Ethiopian with an host of a thousand thousand, and three hundred chariots; h ch. xvi. 8.
10 and came unto Mareshah. Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of Zephathah at 11 Mareshah. And Asa cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, it is ⁱ nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we rest on thee, and in thy name we go against this multitude. i 1 Sam. xiv. 6.
O LORD, thou art our God; let not ^k man prevail against thee. k Or, mortal

12 So the LORD smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before 13 Judah; and the Ethiopians fled. And Asa and the people that were with him pursued them unto Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were ^l destroyed before the LORD, and before his host; l Heb. broken.
14 and they carried away very much spoil. And they smote all the cities round about Gerar; for the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was ex-
15 ceeding much spoil in them. They smote also the tents of cattle, and carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

2 and he went out to ^a meet Asa, and said unto him, Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; The LORD is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you;
3 but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you. Now for a long season Israel hath been without the true God, and without a
4 teaching priest, and without law. But when they in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of Israel, and sought him,
5 he was found of them. And in those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but great vexa-

 And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of Oded 8 the prophet, he took courage, and put away the ^cabominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of the cities which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and renewed the altar of the LORD, that was before the porch of the LORD.
 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the strangers 9 with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon:
 for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the LORD his God was with him. So they gathered them- 10 selves together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa. And they offered unto the LORD 11 ^d the same time, of the spoil which they had brought, seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep. And they entered 12 into a covenant to seek the LORD God of their fathers with all their heart and with all their soul; that whosoever would not 13 seek the LORD God of Israel ^e should be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or woman. And they sware unto 14 the LORD with a loud voice, and with shouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets. And all Judah rejoiced at the 15 with their whole desire; and he was found of them: and the 14 good thing toward the LORD God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam. Moreover the LORD shall raise him up a king over Israel, who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day: but what?

 15 even now. For the LORD shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water, and he shall root up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them beyond the river, because they have made their groves, provoking the 26 Israel two years. And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

 27 And Baasha the son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, conspired against him; and Baasha smote him at Gibbethon, which 953.
 belonged to the Philistines; for Nadab and all Israel laid siege 28 to Gibbethon. Even in the third year of Asa king of Judah 29 did Baasha slay him, and reigned in his stead. And it came to pass, when he reigned, that he smote all the house of Jeroboam; he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had

⁵ Nadab reigned in the second, and was killed in the third year of Asa. But Jeroboam his father reigned twenty-two years, and Asa began to reign in the twentieth year of Jeroboam. Nadab therefore was made king in his father's life, who died in the same year as his son. It is necessary to observe these points, as the chronology otherwise appears confused.

^{A.C. 953.} destroyed him, according unto ^b the saying of the LORD, which sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel of Israel to anger.

Now the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, 31 are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?

§ 3. Reign of Baasha ⁶.

I KINGS XV. VER. 32, TO THE END.

And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel 32 all their days. In the third year of Asa king of Judah began 33 Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign over all Israel in Tirzah, twenty and four years. And he did evil in the sight of the 34
 LORD, and walked in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

I KINGS XVI. VER. 1—7.

Then the word of the LORD came to Jehu the son of Ha- 1 nani against Baasha, saying, Forasmuch as I exalted thee out 2 of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel; and thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins; behold, I will take away the posterity of Baasha, and the pos- 3 fields shall the fowls of the air eat. Now the rest of the acts 5 of Baasha, and what he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel? So 6 930. Baasha slept with his fathers, and was buried in Tirzah: and Elah his son reigned in his stead. And also by the hand of 7 the prophet Jehu the son of Hanani came the word of the LORD against Baasha, and against his house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the LORD, in provoking him to anger with the work of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam; and because he killed him.

⁶ Baasha began to reign in the third year of Asa, and he reigned twenty-four years. He died therefore in the twenty-seventh year of Asa; yet we read (2 Chron. xvi. 1.) in the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Asa, Baasha came up against Asa; when he must have been dead more than eight years. Dr. Hales solves this apparent difficulty by proposing an alteration in the text: the Masorite text, he observes, corruptly reads in the thirty-fifth year. Lightfoot, however, who on all occasions shews a laudable anxiety to maintain the text in its present form, and to prevent any needless alteration, says, that the word מלכות is not to be understood of Asa's reign, but of the kingdom of Asa, as distinct from the kingdom of Israel. And if the reader will calculate, he will find that the year in which Baasha built Ramah, and invaded Judah, was the thirty-sixth year from the division of the kingdoms.—Hales's Anal. vol. ii. p. 417.—Lightfoot in loc.

1 KINGS XVI. VER. 8—14.

- 8 In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two 9 years. And his servant Zimri, captain of half his chariots, conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, drinking himself drunk in the house of Arza ^a steward of his house in Tirzah. A.C. 930.

 12 folks, nor of his friends. Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake
 13 against Baasha ^c by Jehu the prophet, for all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the LORD God

- 15 In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign seven days in Tirzah. And the people were encamped against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.
- 16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the 17 camp. And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with 18 him, and they besieged Tirzah. And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and burnt the king's house over him with 19 fire, and died, for his sins which he sinned in doing evil in the sight of the LORD, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in 20 his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin. Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel?
- 21 Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him 22 king; and half followed Omri. But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned. 925.

And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two 24 talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, ^a Samaria.

But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and did 25 worse than all that were before him. For he walked in all the 26 way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with their vanities. Now the rest of the acts of Omri 27 which he did, and his might that he shewed, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Israel? So Omri 28 slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

I KINGS XVI. VER. 29, TO THE END.

And in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah 29 began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel in Samaria twenty and two years. And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of 30 the LORD above all that were before him. And it came to pass, 31 ^a as if it had been a light thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, that he took to wife Jezebel the daughter of Ethbaal king of the Zidonians, and went and served Baal, and worshipped him. And he reared up an altar 32 for Baal in the house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria. And Ahab made a grove; and Ahab did more to provoke the 33 LORD God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

In his days did Hiel the Beth-elite build Jericho: he laid 34 the foundation thereof in Abiram his first-born, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub, ^b according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by Joshua the son of Nun ^c.

⁷ In the thirty and first year of Asa (1 Kings xvi. 23.) Omri began to reign; and he reigned twelve years: but in the thirty-eighth year of Asa we read that Omri died, and Ahab reigned. The difficulty is solved by observing that the reign of Omri is computed from the death of Zimri. Through the first six years of his reign there was civil war between Omri and Tibni; who were both made kings by the soldiers and people. The party of Omri prevailed, and he was sole king of Israel six years, beginning in the thirty-first year of Asa.

^c The idolatry and corruption of the kingdom of apostate Israel had now increased to its greatest height. At this time, in open defiance of the curse pronounced by Joshua against the rebuilders of Jericho, Hiel the Beth-elite again laid the foundation of that city, and verified the prediction of the prophet, who declared that his eldest son would be slain in laying the foundation; and his reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem. And his mother's 43 name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi. And he walked in all the ways of Asa his father; he turned not aside from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the LORD: never-44 theless the high places were not taken away; for the people offered and burnt incense yet in the high places. And Jeho-46 shaphat made peace with the king of Israel. And the remnant of the sodomites, which remained in the days of his father Asa, 47 he took out of the land. There was then no king in Edom:

 a deputy was king.

2 CHRONICLES XVII. VER. 2, TO THE END.

2 And he placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim,

 Jehoshaphat, because he walked in the first ways of his 4 father David, and sought not unto Baalim; but sought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments,
 5 and not after the doings of Israel. Therefore the LORD stab-

⁹ Psalm lxxxii. Dr. Wells is of opinion that Psalm lxxxii. was most probably composed in the reign of Hezekiah, to admonish the judges or magistrates in the highest courts. It seems, however, from its internal evidence, to be more suited to this reign; and I have, therefore, inserted it here.

Events in the kingdom of Israel contemporary with the reign of Jehoshaphat.

1 KINGS XVII.

908. And ^a Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of 1 Gilead, said unto Ahab, As the LORD God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, ^b there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word. And the word of the LORD 2 came unto him, saying, Get thee hence, and turn thee east- 3 ward, and hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan. And it shall be, that thou shalt drink of the brook; 4 and I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there. So he 5 went and did according unto the word of the LORD: for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that is before Jordan. And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, 6 and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook. And it came to pass ^c after a while, that the brook dried up, 7 because there had been no rain in the land.

And the word of the LORD came unto him, saying, Arise, 8, 9 get thee to ^d Zarephath, which belongeth to Zidon, and dwell

 10 sustain thee. So he arose and went to Zarephath. And when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman was there gathering of sticks: and he called to her, and said, Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink.
 11 And as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, 12 Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand. And she said, As the LORD thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress 13 it for me and my son, that we may eat it and die. And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and 14 after make for thee and for thy son. For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall 17 And it came to pass after these things, that the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness 18 was so sore, that there was no breath left in him. And she said unto Elijah, What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, 19 and to slay my son? And he said unto her, Give me thy son.

 And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a 20 loft, where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed. And he cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come ⁱ into him again. i Heb. into 22 And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the 23 child came into him again, and he revived. And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah said, See, thy son liveth.

 24 And the woman said to Elijah, Now by this I know that thou art a man of God, and that the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.

1 KINGS XVIII.

1 And it came to pass after many days, that the word of the 906.
 LORD came to Elijah in the third year, saying, Go, shew thy-2 self unto Ahab; and I will send rain upon the earth. And

A.C. 906. Elijah went to shew himself unto Ahab. And there was a sore famine in Samaria. And Ahab called ^a Obadiah, which was ^b the governor of his house. (Now Obadiah feared the LORD greatly: for it was so, when ^c Jezebel cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.) And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks: peradventure we may find grass to save the horses and mules alive, ^d that we lose not all the beasts. So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it: Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

a Heb. Obadiah.

d Heb. that we cut not off ourselves from the beasts.

And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him: and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said, Art thou that my lord Elijah? And he answered him, I am: go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here. And he said, What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me? As the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee; and when they said, He is not there; he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not. And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here. And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the LORD shall carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he shall slay me: but I thy servant fear the LORD from my youth. Was it not told my lord what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the LORD, how I hid an hundred men of the LORD's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water? And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here: and he shall slay me. And Elijah said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely shew myself unto him to day. So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him: and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, Art thou he that troubleth Israel? And he answered, I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the LORD, and thou hast followed Baalim. Now therefore send, and gather to me all Israel unto mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred, which eat at Jezebel's table. So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto mount Carmel. And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? if the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word. Then said Elijah unto the people, I, even I only, remain a prophet of the LORD; but Baal's pro-

Let them therefore give us two bullocks; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on wood, and put no fire under: and call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD: and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, ^fIt is well spoken. And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first; for ye are many; and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under. And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying, O Baal, ^ghear us. But there was no voice, nor any that ^hanswered.

27 And they ⁱleaped upon the altar which was made. And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry ^kaloud: for he is a god; either ^lhe is talking, or he is pursuing, or he ^mis in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked. And they cried aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lancets, till ⁿthe blood gushed out upon them. And it came to pass, when midday was past, and they prophesied until the time of the ^ooffering of the evening sacrifice, that ^p*there was* neither voice, nor any to answer, nor any ^qthat regarded. And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the LORD that was broken down. And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, saying, ^rIsrael shall be thy name: and with the stones he built an altar in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed. And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and pour it on the burnt sacrifice, and on the wood. And he said, Do it the second time. And they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time. And they did it the third time. And the water ^sran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water. And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word. Hear me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again. Then the fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench. And when all the people saw it, they horses, and chariots: and he went up and besieged Samaria, 2 and warred against it. And he sent messengers to Ahab king

A.C. 901. of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad, Thy silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and 3 thy children, even the goodliest, are mine. And the king of 4 Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, I am thine, and all that I have. And the messengers 5 came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children; yet I will send my servants unto thee to morrow about 6 this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is ^apleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand, and take it away. Then the king of Israel called all the elders of 7 the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man seeketh mischief: for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold; and ^bI denied him not. And all the elders and all the people said unto 8 him, Hearken not unto him, nor consent. Wherefore he said 9 unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do: but this thing I may not do. And the messengers departed, and brought him word again. And Ben-hadad sent 10 unto him, and said, The gods do so unto me, and more also, if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for handfuls for all the people that ^cfollow me. And the king of Israel answered 11 and said, Tell him, Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off. And it came to pass, 12 when Ben-hadad heard this ^dmessage, as he was drinking, he and the kings in the ^epavilions, that he said unto his servants, ^fSet yourselves in array. And they set themselves in array against the city.

And, behold, there ^gcame a prophet unto Ahab king of 13 Israel, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD. And Ahab 14 said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Even by the ^hyoung men of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall ⁱorder the battle? And he answered, Thou. Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the pro- 15 vinces, and they were two hundred and thirty two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being seven thousand. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he caused him to come up into the chariot. And 34 Ben-hadad said unto him, The cities, which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus, as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. So he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.

And a certain man of the sons of the prophets said unto his 35 neighbour in the word of the LORD, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man refused to smite him. Then said he unto him, 36 Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him, a lion found him, and slew him. Then he found another man, and said, Smite 37 me, I pray thee. And the man smote him, ^e so that in smiting he wounded him. So the prophet departed, and waited for the 38 king by the way, and disguised himself with ashes upon his face. § 6. Seizure of Naboth's Vineyard.

1 KINGS XXI.

899. And it came to pass after these things, that Naboth the Jez- 1 reelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezreel, hard by the palace of Ahab king of Samaria. And Ahab spake unto Naboth, say- 2 ing, Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house: and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it ^a seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money. And Naboth said to 3 Ahab, The LORD forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee. And Ahab came into his 4 house heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him: for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers. And he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.

A.C. 899.

5 But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why 6 is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread? And he said unto her, Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, 7 I will not give thee my vineyard. And Jezebel his wife said unto him, Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel?
arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: I will give 8 thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite. So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto the elders and to the nobles that were in his 9 city, dwelling with Naboth. And she wrote in the letters, saying, Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth ^b on high among the 10 people: and set two men, sons of Belial, before him, to bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king. And then carry him out, and stone him, that he may 11 die. And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which she had 12 sent unto them. They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on 13 high among the people. And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones, 14 that he died. Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but 16 dead. And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, 18 saying, Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither 19 he is gone down to possess it. And thou shalt speak unto him

And they continued three years without war between Syria 1

 And the king of Israel said unto his servants, Know ye that 3 Ramoth in Gilead is our's, and we be ^b still, and take it not out of the hand of the king of Syria? And he said unto Jeho- 4 shaphat, Wilt thou go with me to battle to Ramoth-gilead?
 And Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, ^c I am as thou art, 5 my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses. And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, Enquire, I pray thee, 6 at the word of the LORD to day. Then the king of Israel gathered the prophets together, about four hundred men, and 6 said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; for the LORD shall 7 deliver it into the hand of the king. And Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might 7 enquire of him? And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, 8
There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Imlah, by whom we may enquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so. Then the king of Israel called 9 an ^d officer, and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah.

10 And the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah sat each on his throne, having put on their robes, in a ^e void place in the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets
 11 prophesied before them. And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah made him horns of iron: and he said, Thus saith the LORD, With these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them. And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver 12 it into the king's hand. And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, 13 and speak that which is good. And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, what the LORD saith unto me, that will I speak.
 14 So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, Go, and prosper: for the 15 LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king. And the king said unto him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the 16 LORD? And he said, I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master: let them return every man to his house in 17 peace. And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil? And he said, Hear thou therefore the word of the 18 LORD: I saw the LORD sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left.
 19 And the LORD said, Who shall ^f persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this man-
 20 ner, and another said on that manner. And there came forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade 22 and prevail also: go forth, and do so. Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

 23 But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, ^g Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee? And Micaiah said, 24 Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go ^h into an inner chamber to hide thyself. And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back unto Amon the and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, ^k I will disguise 30

 And the king of Israel disguised himself, and went into the battle. But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two 31 even: and the blood ran out of the wound into the ^p midst of the chariot. And there went a proclamation throughout the 36 host about the going down of the sun, saying, Every man to his city, and every man to his own country.

 So the king died, and ^q was brought to Samaria; and they 37 buried the king in Samaria. And one washed the chariot in 38 the pool of Samaria; and the dogs licked up his blood; and they

Then Moab rebelled against Israel ^a after the death of Ahab. 1
 And Ahaziah fell down through a lattice in his upper chamber 2 and said unto them, Go, enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron whether I shall recover of this disease. But the angel 3 the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to en-turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die. And he said 7 unto them, ^c What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words? And they answered him, 8

He was an hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite. Then the 9 king sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him: and, behold, he sat on the top of an hill.
 And he spake unto him, Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down. And Elijah answered and said to the captain of 10 fifty, If I be a man of God, then let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.
 Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his 11 fifty. And he answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly. And Elijah 12 answered and said unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

 his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight. And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him: be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king. And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, is it not because there is no God in Israel to enquire of his word? therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

And the sons ¹² of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha,

¹² The mention here made of the sons, or disciples, or pupils of the Prophets, leads us to enquire what mode was adopted among the ancient Israelites to secure to them the advantages of education. When the Israelites first went down into Egypt, and the patriarchal polity flourished among them in its full vigour, every father was, of course, the instructor as well as the head of his family. During their continuance in that country, although we know but little of the manner in which they preserved among themselves the traditions of their ancestors, or maintained and declared their right to the Holy Land, we may be assured that the national faith was not suffered to decay; nor were they, at their departure from Egypt, that rude and barbarous people which they are generally represented. Moses was skilled in all the wisdom of Egypt; and the perpetual presence of the God of Israel, the wonderful miracles wrought by Moses, the death of the generation which had been in some measure contaminated by idolatry in Egypt, and the consequent instruction of the next, under the immediate superintendence of their inspired leader, prevented the possibility of ignorance, during their wandering in the wilderness. It is generally supposed, too, that there was an uninterrupted succession of prophets from the time of Moses to the death of Malachi. The first places for their instruction, appointed by the Jews after their settlement in the Holy Land, were the Levitical cities, which might be called the Universities of Judea. The Levites, too, were scattered through the country, as the standing ministry appointed by God himself, to instruct the people in general in all things which pertained to their law. It is, therefore, to be supposed that the common business of education fell as naturally into their hands at that time, as it has since done, generally speaking, to the Ecclesiastics in Christian countries.

The first notice which is taken in Scripture of the schools of the prophets, is 1 Sam. x. 10. or 1 Sam. xix. 20. The expression "they saw the prophets prophesying, and Samuel standing, as appointed over them," is interpreted by the Chaldee Paraphrast, that Samuel was the head, or president, of a school of prophetic instruction. Samuel is by many supposed to have himself first instituted these schools: but it is more probable that he found them established in the Levitical cities, and in every place where the ark was settled, and where the people went up to worship. It is more certain that, from the time of Samuel to the Babylonish captivity, they were never suffered entirely to degenerate; although they were too often influenced by the general bias of the people to idolatry. The most distinguished prophets, till the time of David, were presidents of these colleges. Elkanah, Gad, Nathan, and others, are supposed to have been to the prophets in their day, what Samuel was to the prophets at Nainoth. They are said to have selected the most promising of the young Levites, with the Nazarites of other tribes. Hence we read of so many prophets together in the time of Ahab. The chief places where they resided seem to have been Bethel, Jericho, Gilgal, and the Levitical cities in general. The people in Israel, after the revolt of the ten tribes, were accustomed to attend the prophets for moral and religious instruction; for we read, that when the woman of Shunem was about to go up to Elijah, her husband asked her,—“Wherefore wilt thou go to day? it is neither new moon, nor sabbath,” 2 Kings iv. 23. When the peculiar circumstances of the age demanded it, the prophets were gifted with miraculous power. From the time of Samuel there appears to have been an unbroken succession to the time of Malachi; of whom Elijah and Elisha were the most eminent.

Prophecies were first committed to writing by Elijah, who wrote to Jehoram, predicting his offences and punishment. The Volume of Scripture may be considered as having been under the continued superintendence of these holy men: and the prophetic office, as Bishop Stillingfleet ingeniously and justly observes, was a kind of Chancery to the law of Moses.

As God never left himself without witness to the Heathen world, in that He gave them rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons; neither did He leave the people of Israel without a constant appeal to their hearts and understandings. Moses, Joshua, the Judges, Samuel, David, Ahijah, Elijah, Elisha, and the prophets whose writings are still preserved, followed each other in close succession. In addition to these, there was the standing miracle of the perpetual accomplishment of the prophecies which referred to events near at hand; the oracular answer in the Holy of Holies; the appearance of the Shechinah; the very nature of the country respectively occupied by the twelve tribes; the residence among them of the ancient Gibeonites; the judgments inflicted both on the idolatrous princes of Israel and Judah, as well as on the surrounding nations; these, with the lessons conveyed by the recurrence of the Sabbath, and of their great festivals, when the Levites taught the meaning of the ceremonial law, and otherwise instructed the people, took away all excuse for the frequent relapses of the Israelites into idolatry. Yet, if their repeated offences, in this respect, excite astonishment, let the present condition of the Christian world be considered; which presents us with too many instances of ingratitude and infidelity. The appeals which were made to the ancient Church of God were not more powerful than those which the Christian Church now enjoys: for in those days God spake by his prophets; to us He has spoken by his Son.

- and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to day? And he answered, A.C. 896.
 6 Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace. And Elijah said unto him, Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul
 7 liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on. And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went, and stood ^a to view
 8 afar off: and they two stood by Jordan. And Elijah took his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were divided hither and thither, so that they two went over on dry ground.
 9 And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a 10 double portion of thy spirit be upon me. And he said, ^b Thou hast asked a hard thing: nevertheless, if thou see me a Heb. in sight, or, over against.
 11 when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, b Heb. Thou hast done hard in asking.
 12 it shall not be so. And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and ^c Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. c Ecclus. xviii. 9. 1 Mac. ii. 58. d ch. xiii. 14.
 12 And Elisha saw it, and he cried, ^d My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in 13 two pieces. He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the ^e bank of Jordan; e Heb. lip.
 14 and he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, Where is the LORD God of Elijah? and when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and 15 thither: and Elisha went over. And when the sons of the prophets which were ^f to view at Jericho saw him, they said, f ver. 7.
 The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him.
 16 And they said unto him, Behold now, there be with thy servants fifty ^g strong men; let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master: lest peradventure the Spirit of the LORD hath taken him up, and cast him upon ^h some mountain, or into 17 some valley. And he said, Ye shall not send. And when they urged him till he was ashamed, he said, Send. They sent therefore fifty men; and they sought three days, but found 18 him not. And when they came again to him, (for he tarried at Jericho,) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?
 19 And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my lord seeth: but 20 the water is naught, and the ground ⁱ barren. And he said, i Heb. causing to mis-carry.
 Bring me a new cruse, and put salt therein. And they brought

And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, 21 and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the LORD, I have healed these waters; there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land. So the waters were healed 22 unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake.

And he went up from thence unto Beth-el: and as he was 23 going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and mocked him, and said unto him, Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head. And he turned back, and looked on 24 them, and cursed them in the name of the LORD. And there came forth two she bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them. And he went from thence to mount 25 Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

2 KINGS III. VER. 6, TO THE END.

895. And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the same time, and 6 numbered all Israel. And he went and sent to Jehoshaphat 7 the king of Judah, saying, The king of Moab hath rebelled against me: wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle?

^a 1 Kin. xxii. 4. And he said, I will go up: ^a I am as thou art, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses. And he said, Which 8 way shall we go up? And he answered, The way through the wilderness of Edom. So the king of Israel went, and the king 9 of Judah, and the king of Edom: and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle ^b that followed them. And the king of Israel 10 said, Alas! that the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab! But Jehosha-11 phat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD, that we may enquire of the LORD by him? And one of the king of Israel's servants answered and said, Here is Elisha the son of Shaphat, which poured water on the hands of Elijah. And 12 Jehoshaphat said, The word of the LORD is with him. So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat and the king of Edom went down to him. And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, What 13 have I to do with thee? get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel said unto him, Nay: for the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab. And Elisha 14 said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee. But 15 now bring me a minstrel. And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the hand of the LORD came upon him. And 16 he said, Thus saith the LORD, Make this valley full of ditches. For thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not see wind, neither shall 17

And she said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually. Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the 10 wall; and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither. And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there. And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him. And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldest thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, I dwell among mine own people. And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily she hath no child, and her husband is old. And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door. And he said, ^e About this ^f season, according to the time of life, thou shalt embrace a son. And she said, Nay, my lord, thou man of God, do not lie unto thine handmaid. And the woman conceived, and bare a son at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.  26 Behold, yonder is that Shunammite: run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, 27 It is well. And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught ⁱ him by the feet: but Gehazi came near to thrust ⁱ her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is ^j vexed within her: and the LORD hath hid it from me, ^j and hath not told me. Then she said, Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me? Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and take my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again: and lay my staff upon the face of the child. And the mother of the child said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave
 31 thee. And he arose, and followed her. And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was neither voice, nor ^k hearing. Wherefore he went ^k again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not ^k awaked. And when Elisha was come into the house, behold,
 33 the child was dead, and laid upon his bed. He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the ^k LORD. And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon the child;
 35 and the flesh of the child waxed warm. Then he returned, and walked in the house ^l to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven ^l times, and the child opened his eyes. And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto him, he said, Take up thy ^l son. Then she went in, and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took up her son, and went out.
 38 And Elisha came again to Gilgal: and there was a dearth 890. in the land; and the sons of the prophets were sitting before him: and he said unto his servant, Set on the great pot, and 39 seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets. And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds his lap full, and came and shred
 40 them into the pot of pottage: for they knew them not. So they poured out for the men to eat. And it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O thou man of God, there is death in the pot. And they could 41 not eat thereof. But he said, Then bring meal. And he cast it into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat. And there was no ^m harm in the pot. m Heb. evil thing.

a mighty man in valour, but he was a leper. And the Syrians 2 had gone out by companies, and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid; and she ^t waited on Naaman's wife. And she said unto her mistress, Would God my lord 3 ^u were ^v with the prophet that is in Samaria! for he would ^x re-saying, Thus and thus said the maid that is of the land of a letter unto the king of Israel. And he departed, and took ^y with him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment. And he brought the letter to the 6 king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy. And it came to pass, 7 when the king of Israel had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and said, Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy?

So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and 9 stood at the door of the house of Elisha. And Elisha sent a 10 times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be

- 14 be clean? Then went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and ^d he was clean. ^d Luke iv. 27.
- 15 And he returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came, and stood before him: and he said, Behold, now I know that there is no God in all the earth, but in Israel: now therefore, I pray thee, take a blessing of thy servant.
- 16 But he said, As the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, I will receive none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.
- 17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth? for thy servant will henceforth offer neither burnt offering nor sacrifice unto
- 18 other gods, but unto the LORD. In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, and I bow myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy servant

2 KINGS VI. VER. 1—23.

889. And the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us. Let us go, we pray thee, unto Jordan, and take thence every man a beam, and let us make us a place there, where we may dwell. And he answered, Go ye. And one said, Be content, I pray thee, and go with thy servants. And he answered, I will go. So he went with them. And when they came to Jordan, they cut down wood. But as one was felling a beam, the ⁱ ax head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, Alas, master! for it was borrowed. And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he shewed him the place. And he cut down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim. Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place ^k shall be my ^k camp. And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down. And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice. Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not shew me which of us is for the king of Israel? And one of his servants said, ^l None, my lord, O king: but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bedchamber.

And he said, Go and spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan. Therefore sent he thither horses, and chariots, and a ^m great host: and they came by night, and compassed the city about. And when the ⁿ servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do? And he answered, Fear not: for ^o they that be with us are more than they that be with them. And Elisha prayed, and said, LORD, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha. And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the LORD, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness.

And he smote them with blindness according to the word of Elisha. A.C. 889.

19 And Elisha said unto them, This is not the way, neither is this the city; ^p follow me, and I will bring you to the man ^p whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria. And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, LORD, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the LORD opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they ^p were in the midst of Samaria. And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them? And he answered, Thou shalt not smite them: wouldest thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? set bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master. 23 And he prepared great provision for them: and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So the bands of Syria came no more into the land of Israel.

Reign of Jehoram, King of Judah, 4 Years—from 889 to 885.

2 CHRONICLES XXI. VER. 5, 6, 7.

5 Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to 6 reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab: for he had the daughter of ^b Ahab to wife: and he 7 wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD. Howbeit the LORD would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he promised to give ^c light to him and to his ^d sons for ever. b ch. xxii. 2.

2 And he bred brethren the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah: all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel. 3 And their father gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, ¹³ To understand the chronology of Jehoram's reign, it is necessary to observe that three several dates are assigned to the beginning of it. The first in the seventeenth year of Jehoshaphat his father, compare 1 Kings xxii. 51. 2 Kings i. 17. 2 Kings iii. 1. The second in the fifth year of Joram the son of Ahab, 2 Kings viii. 16. which was in the two and twentieth year of Jehoshaphat: and the third at his father's death. The first time, he was made viceroy, when his father went out to fight for the recovery of Ramoth-gilead; and the second, he was again made viceroy on his father's absence in Moab with Jehoram.—Lightfoot's Prolegomena to the Harmony of the Evang., Works, vol. i. p. 387.

A.C. 889. and precious things, with fenced cities in Judah : but the kingdom gave he to ^e Jehoram ; because he was the firstborn. Now when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, ⁴ he strengthened himself, and slew all his brethren with the sword, and divers also of the princes of Israel.

2 CHRONICLES XXI. VER. 11—15.

Moreover he made high places in the mountains of Judah, ¹¹ and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit fornication, and compelled Judah thereto.

¹⁴ And there came a writing to him from Elijah the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked in the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father, nor in the ways of Asa king of Judah, but hast walked in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah ¹³ and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go a whoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also hast slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself :

¹⁴ The letter from Elijah to Jehoram has given rise to much discussion. Elijah the Tishbite was taken up to heaven in the reign of Ahab, many years before the last accession of Jehoram. Jehoram was made king three several times.—Once, before the battle of Ramoth-gilead, in which Ahab was killed : (compare 1 Kings xxii. 51. 2 Kings i. 17. 2 Kings iii 1.) ; once, upon his father's going to war against the Moabites ; and again, on his father's death. It is doubtful on which of these occasions he destroyed his brothers, and attempted to restore idolatry. If on his first or second accession, the letter might have been written by Elijah immediately preceding his assumption. But it does not appear probable, either that Jehoram would have acted in this cruel and unnatural manner, or that he would have endeavoured to establish idolatry during the lifetime of his father, who was zealous for the worship of the true God. This argument, therefore, prevents us from supposing that he deserved to receive the letter after his first or second accession ; we must therefore conclude he destroyed his brothers, and restored superstition, after his father's death.

But at this time Elijah had ascended into heaven. Three hypotheses have been framed to account for this apparent difficulty. One supposes, that for Elijah we ought to read Elisha. Another, that the Elijah here mentioned is another prophet of that name, and not Elijah the Tishbite. The third is, that immediately preceding his ascension into heaven, when Jehoram was first raised to the joint administration of the kingdom by his father Jehoshaphat, Elijah predicted the enormities of which he would be guilty, and left the writing with the sons of the prophets. When the circumstances prophesied by Elijah had actually taken place, the writing was sent to Jehoram ; the account of the punishment of his offences was laid before him ; an interval was allowed him for repentance ; and, at the end of a short time, he fell a victim to the disease foretold by Elijah.

If, then, we come to the conclusion, that this letter of Elijah to Jehoram was written by the prophet before the murder of his brothers, it may be esteemed one of the most important passages in the books of Scripture. It may be regarded as the commencement of that part of the dispensations of Providence, which was continued nearly to the close of the Canon of Scripture ; that is, it was the first written prophecy of which we read, which confined itself to the judgments about to be inflicted on an individual. It was a new mode of appeal to the princes and people of Israel and Judah. It was made at a time when the public corruption was at its height ; it was confirmed by the most wonderful miracles, and authenticated by the witnesses among whom it was deposited, who were most probably the sons of the prophets.

Lightfoot is of opinion that the letter was sent by Elijah after Jehoram's first accession to the throne. Of the three hypotheses above mentioned, the first is maintained by Dr. Hales ; the second by Dr. Wall ; the third by Pfeiffer, and Bishop Patrick on the authority of Kimchi. There is yet another, which I mention as a specimen of the sober judgment exercised in Jewish or Rabbinical criticism. The Jews believe that Elijah sent the letter to Jehoram from heaven. In one of their books, indeed, it is asserted that Elijah is still engaged in writing a history of the world.—Vide Patrick and Lightfoot in loc. ; Pfeiffer, dubia vexata, &c. p. 471.

2 KINGS VI. VER. 24, TO THE END.

And it came to pass after this, that Ben-hadad king of Syria 24 gathered all his host, and went up, and besieged Samaria. And there was a great famine in Samaria: and, behold, they 25 besieged it, until an ass's head was sold for four-score pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung for five pieces of silver. And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the 26 wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, Help, my lord, O king. And he said, ^a If the LORD do not help thee, whence 27 shall I help thee? out of the barnfloor, or out of the winepress? And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And 28 she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to day, and we will eat my son to morrow. So 29 ^b we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the ^c next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him: and she hath hid her son.

And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the 30 woman, that he rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall, and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh. Then he said, God do so and more also 31 to me, if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day. But Elisha sat in his house, and the elders sat 32 with him; and the king sent a man from before him: but ere the messenger came to him, he said to the elders, See ye how this son of a murderer hath sent to take away mine head? look, when the messenger cometh, shut the door, and hold him fast at the door: is not the sound of his master's feet behind him? And while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger 33 came down unto him: and he said, Behold, this evil is of the LORD; what should I wait for the LORD any longer?

2 KINGS VII.

Then Elisha said, Hear ye the word of the LORD; Thus 1 saith the LORD, To morrow about this time shall a measure of fine flour be sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, in the gate of Samaria. Then ^d a lord on whose hand 2 the king leaned answered the man of God, and said, Behold, if the LORD would make windows in heaven, might this thing but shalt not eat thereof.

- 3 And there were four leprous men at the entering in of the gate: and they said one to another, Why sit we here until we die? If we say, we will enter into the city, then the famine is in the city, and we shall die there: and if we sit still here, we die also. Now therefore come, and let us fall unto the host of the Syrians: if they save us alive, we shall live; and if they kill us, we shall but die. And they rose up in the twilight, to go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, behold, there was no man there. For the LORD had made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host: and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us the kings of the Hittites, and the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us.
- 7 Wherefore they arose and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life. And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and hid it; and came again, and entered into another 9 tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it. Then they said one to another, We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace: if we tarry till the morning light, ^e some mischief will come upon us: now therefore come, that e Heb. we shall find punishment.
- 10 we may go and tell the king's household. So they came and called unto the porter of the city: and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was no man there, neither voice of man, but horses tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were. And he called the porters; and they told it to the king's house within.
- 12 And the king arose in the night, and said unto his servants, I will now shew you what the Syrians have done to us. They know that we be hungry; therefore are they gone out of the camp to hide themselves in the field, saying, When they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city.
- 13 And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left ^f in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it: behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed:) and let us send and see. f Heb. in it.
- 14 They took therefore two chariot horses: and the king sent 15 after the host of the Syrians, saying, Go and see. And they went after them unto Jordan: and, lo, all the way was full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away in their 16 haste. And the messengers returned, and told the king. And the people went out, and spoiled the tents of the Syrians.

A.C. 887. So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, according to the word of the LORD.

And the king appointed the lord on whose hand he leaned to 17 have the charge of the gate: and the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died, as the man of God had said, who spake when the king came down to him. And it came to pass 18 as the man of God had spoken to the king, saying, Two measures of barley for a shekel, and a measure of fine flour for a shekel, shall be to morrow about this time in the gate of Samaria: and that lord answered the man of God, and said, Now, 19 behold, if the LORD should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof. And so it fell out unto 20 him: for the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died.

2 KINGS VIII. VER. 1—6.

885. Then spake Elisha unto the woman, ^g whose son he had 1 restored to life, saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for the LORD hath called for a famine; and it shall also come upon the land seven years. And the woman arose, and did after the saying 2 of the man of God: and she went with her household, and sojourned in the land of the Philistines seven years. And it 3 came to pass at the seven years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and she went forth to cry unto the king for her house and for her land. And the king 4 talked with Gehazi the servant of the man of God, saying, Tell me, I pray thee, all the great things that Elisha hath done. And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how he 5 had restored a dead body to life, that, behold, the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house and for her land. And Gehazi said, My lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life. And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So 6 ^h the king appointed unto her a certain ^h officer, saying, Restore all that was her's, and all the fruits of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now.

2 CHRONICLES XXII. VER. 1—7.

- 1 And the inhabitants of Jerusalem made ^a Ahaziah his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the 2 son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned. Forty and two years old ¹⁶ was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was ^b Athaliah the 3 daughter of Omri. He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab: for his mother was his counsellor to do wickedly. 4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD like the house of Ahab: for they were his counsellors after the death of his father to his destruction.
- 5 He walked also after their counsel, and went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria 6 at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram. And he returned to be healed in Jezreel because of the wounds ^c which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And ^d Azariah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because 7 he was sick. And the destruction of Ahaziah was of God by coming to Joram: for when he was come, he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, whom the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

last year of his father's life; in the second passage it is dated from his father's death.—Vide Lightfoot's Prolegomena to the Harmony of the Evangelists; Works, vol. i. p. 388.

¹⁶ In 2 Chronicles xxii. 2. we read, Ahaziah was forty-two years old when he began to reign; and in 2 Kings viii. 26. we read, he was twenty-two years old at that time. This difficulty is solved, by reading with the Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic versions, "twenty-two" instead of "forty-two" in the first passage; or by supposing, with Lightfoot, that the author of the book of Chronicles computed from the accession of the house of Omri, his mother's name being Athaliah the daughter of Omri. The original properly signifies, "Ahaziah was the son of the two and forty years," namely, of the house of Omri. A similar mode of reckoning occurs in 2 Kings xxiv. 8 compared with 2 Chronicles xxxvi. 9.—Vide Lightfoot in loc.; Hales's Anal. vol. ii. p. 428.

¹⁷ This passage refers to the death of Joram, who was slain when he went out to meet Jehu accompanied by Ahaziah, 2 Kings ix. 23. The abruptness of this division is unavoidable, as the death of Ahaziah is related by the inspired writers in intimate connexion with that of Joram; but in this Arrangement it was absolutely necessary to separate them, that the account of Ahaziah's death might be given with his life and reign.

The circumstances attending on the death of this king, as they are related in 2 Chronicles xxii. 8, 9. seem at first sight to differ materially from those mentioned in 2 Kings ix. 27, 28. In the former passage we read, that Ahaziah, after making his escape from Jezreel, was brought to Jehu in Samaria, and when they had slain him they buried him. From which it might be inferred, that Jehu had commanded that Ahaziah should be slain in Samaria. In the latter passage we, on the contrary, read, that he was mortally wounded at Gur, near Ibleam, while Jehu was following him. Notwithstanding these apparent contradictions, the two accounts, I think, may be reconciled, by observing the order of the events, as shewn in the book of Chronicles.

The chief cause of the apparent inconsistency lies in the expression (2 Chron. xxii. 9.) "they

2 KINGS VIII. VER. 26, TO THE END.

Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri king of Israel. And he walked in the way of the house of Ahab, and did evil in the sight of the LORD, as did the house of Ahab: for he was the son in law of the house of Ahab.

18, 19. But in Joram's 12th Year he began to reign alone, ch. viii. 25. h Or, grand-daughter.

i Heb. where-with the Syrians had wounded.

brought him to Jehu;" from which phrase it would appear, that Ahaziah was actually made a prisoner, and as such brought to Jehu. But the word in the original, בארו, though it signifies "brought," as our translators have rendered it, may have a wider signification, and may be thus translated, "They caused him to be seen by Jehu." Ahaziah was pointed out, or made to appear, or caused to be seen by Jehu, when he fled from Samaria; who immediately upon seeing him, issued the order to his soldiers, "smite him also in the chariot."

By interpreting the phrase in question in this manner, we solve the whole difficulty. Ahaziah, after the death of Joram, made his escape to Samaria; to which place he is followed (after Jehu had destroyed Ahab's brethren and children, as well as Ahaziah's kindred,) by Jehu and his soldiers. On their arrival at Samaria, they search for, and discover, the retreat of Ahaziah; who, on perceiving that his hiding place was known, again attempted to make his escape. In so doing, Jehu sees him, and immediately gives the order, "smite him also in the chariot," (as Joram was smitten); and they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by Ibleam, where Ahaziah was overtaken. After the soldiers of Jehu had mortally wounded him, his charioteer escaped with him to Megiddo, where he died.

On consulting the map of the tribe of Manasseh, in which these events took place, it will be found that they might all have occurred within the space of two days. Joram was killed at Jezreel, from which place Samaria was ten miles distant; from Samaria to Gur, not quite eight; from Gur to Ibleam, twelve more; and Ibleam was less than four miles from Megiddo.—Vide the map of the tribe of Ephraim, in Heming's Scripture Atlas.

And he answered, Because I know the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and wilt dash their children, and rip up their women with child. ¹⁸ This passage has been much misunderstood. The most probable meaning seems to be, "Tell the king that his disease is not mortal, and therefore he might recover from it." The prophet, however, who foresaw that Hazael would murder the king, adds in a reproachful and significant manner, "howbeit the Lord hath shewed me he shall surely die;" intimating, by these words, "The king will die; but he would have recovered, had he not been prevented by your violence and treachery."

But they were exceedingly 4 afraid, and said, Behold, two kings stood not before him: how then shall we stand? And he that was over the house, and he 5 that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes. Then he wrote a letter 6 the second time to them, saying, If ye be ^b mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to morrow this time. 2 CHRONICLES XXIV. VER. 15—26.

15 But Jehoiada waxed old, and was full of days when he died; 16 an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died. And they buried him in the city of David among the kings, because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his 17 house. Now after the death of Jehoiada came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king. Then the king heark- 18 ened unto them. And they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and wrath came 19 upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass. Yet he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and 20 they testified against them: but they would not give ear. And the Spirit of God ^b came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the 21 LORD, he hath also forsaken you. And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones at the commandment of the 22 king in the court of the house of the LORD. Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son. And when he died, he said, The LORD look upon it, and require it.

2 KINGS XI. VER. 17—20.

And Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, 17 that they should be the LORD's people; between the king also and the people. And all the people of the land went into the house of Baal, and brake it down; his 18 altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. And the priest appointed ^m officers over the house of the LORD. Reign of Amaziah, 29 Years—from 838 to 809.

838.

In the second year of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel 1 reigned ^a Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah. He was 2 twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned ^{A.C. 838.} twenty and nine years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name ³ was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, yet not like David his father: he ⁴ did according to all things as Joash his father did. Howbeit the high places were not taken away: as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places.

⁵ And it came to pass, as soon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, that he slew his servants ^b which had slain the king ^{b ch. xii. 20.}

But the children of the murderers he slew not: according unto that which is written in the book of the law of Moses, wherein the LORD commanded, saying, ^c The fathers ^{c Deut. xxiv. 16. Ezek. xviii. 20.} shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children be put to death for the fathers; but every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

2 CHRONICLES XXV. VER. 5—11.

Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the 14 slaughter of the Edomites, that he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto them. Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, 15 and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand? And it came to pass, as 16 he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear; why shouldst thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbare, and said, I know that God hath ^f determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

JOEL I.

1 Joel, declaring sundry judgments of God, exhorteth to observe them, 8 and to mourn. 14 He prescribeth a fast for complaint.

About 787. The word of the LORD that came to Joel the son of 1 Pethuel.

¹⁹ The kingdom of Judah began to decline immediately after the murder of Zacharias, son of Barachias, or Jehoiada. Then it was that the prophet and the priest of the Lord was slain in the very courts of the temple. This was the climax of their wickedness, when, in the language of Hosea, "blood touched blood," (Hosea iv. 2.); when the people strove with the priest, and the blood of the sacrificer was mingled with the blood of the sacrifice. The king and people of Judah became open idolaters, as Israel had long been, and Syria and Israel punished and oppressed them together.

At this period the providence of God began to raise up that succession of prophets, whose writings have been transmitted to, and have ever been held sacred by, the Christian Church. Joel, Amos, and Hosea, flourished together, predicting the future calamities of the Jews, the blessings of their restoration, the judgments of God upon their enemies, with other subjects of this high nature. These prophets commenced their office by predicting three judgments of the most fearful kind. The earthquake, which took place in the reigns of Uzziah and Jeroboam the Second, was foretold by Amos two years before it happened, (Amos i. 1.) Many suppose it was likewise predicted by Joel, about the same time. The second plague was that of locusts, caterpillars, and cankerworms, such as the oldest men had never seen, (Joel i. 2, 3. &c.); these came towards harvest time, in the beginning of the growth after mowing, (Amos vii. 1.); the vines were laid waste, the fig trees were barked, (Joel i. 7.) the harvest perished, and the trees withered; so that there was not corn and wine sufficient for a meat offering and a drink offering in the house of the Lord. The third plague was a miraculous drought, attended with fearful flashes of fire from heaven; the fire (Joel i. 19.) devoured all the pastures of the wilderness, and the flame burnt up all the trees of the field. Hosea also alludes to the same plague, (Hos. iv. 3.) Jonah is supposed to have been the contemporary of these prophets; but none of his prophecies are extant, except that against Nineveh.

The prophecy of Joel seems to have been the first that was delivered to the kingdom of Judah; though some have supposed that he lived in the reign of Joram; and others place him in the reign of Manasseh. He predicted, according to the best authorities, the same immediate events as Amos; and it is therefore natural to presume he lived about the same time. The book of Joel is placed here on the united authorities of its internal evidence, and the general opinion of modern commentators: viz. Lightfoot; Blair, in his Chronological Tables; Dr. Grey, in his Introduction, &c.; Vitringa, in his Typus Doctrinæ Prophetiæ, cap. iv. p. 35, &c.; Moldenhawer, Introductio in Libros canonicos Vet. et Nov. Test. p. 120, 121; of Rosenmüller, in his Scholia in Vet. Test. partis septimæ, vol. i. p. 433, 434; and of Dr. Taylor. It is inserted here too, because Joel only speaks of Egypt and Edom (iii. 19.) as the enemies of Judea, without mentioning the Assyrians or Babylonians; he likewise denounces the same judgments as Amos against the Tyrians, Sidonians, and Idumeans, who had invaded the kingdom of Judah, and taken off many of the inhabitants for slaves; and in his time, the Jews were in full possession of their religious worship, (ii. 15—17.) Vide Horne's Introduction, vol. ii. p. 264.

The great majority of commentators having thus assigned the publication of the prophecy of Joel to the reign of Uzziah, we may conclude, from internal evidence, that it was delivered at the time when that king had increased his army, and made himself formidable to the surrounding nations by the number of his engines of war, and the abundance of his arms. Confiding in his military power and greatness, "his heart was lifted up to his destruction," (2 Chron. xxvi. 16.) At this time, it is most probable, Joel predicted the entire overthrow of the kingdom of Judah by a foreign army, which he beautifully compares to that predicted flight of locusts, which about this time ravaged the country. The prophets commonly took advantage of the passing events of the day, to predict from them the future destiny of nations and empires. The occasions on which the prophecies were delivered, therefore, are generally to be found in the history of their own times.

²⁰ The question has been much controverted, whether the vision of Isaiah, in the sixth chapter, was seen on his designation to the prophetic office, or after that time? Isaiah prophesied (i. 1.) in the days of Uzziah; and afterwards we find that he saw the vision in the year that king Uzziah died. (Isa. vi. 1.) Bishop Lowth is of opinion, that the first five chapters were delivered prior to the death of Uzziah, and the sixth immediately after it; and he interprets the phrase "in the year that king Uzziah died," to signify, after his death, in the year that he died. Dr. Wells and Lightfoot agree in this opinion. Bishop Horsley and Dr. Taylor unite in supposing that the first chapter is more descriptive of the reign of Ahaz than of that of Uzziah; as in the reign of the latter the land was at rest, and the king good. It flourished likewise under the government of Jotham, who was also a good man; therefore from its internal evidence, which is certainly the best, as well as from the opinion of many commentators, the first chapter of Isaiah is placed in the reign of Ahaz, with the exception of the first verse of that chapter, which may be considered as an introduction to the whole book. Isaiah was the greatest of all the prophets, through all ages of the church, and was in all probability appointed to his great office with more than usual solemnity. Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, &c. all give some account, in the beginning of their writings, of the manner or of the circumstances under which they were respectively called to fill the prophetic office. We have every reason to suppose, therefore, that the chief prophet would likewise have been favoured with similar demonstrations of his divine appointment.—Vide Lowth's Isaiah, note in loc.; Lightfoot, vol. i. p. 98.; Horsley's Bib. Crit. vol. ii. p. 4.; Vitringa, tom. i. p. 25—29.; Gray's and Horne's Introductions; Taylor's Scheme of Divinity, ch. xxxiv.

ISAIAH IV.

In the extremity of evils, Christ's kingdom shall be a sanctuary.

And in that day seven women shall take hold of one man, 1 saying, We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel:
 only ^e let us be called by thy name, ^f to take away our reproach.

e Heb. let thy name be called upon us.

f Or, take thou away.

g Heb. beauty

h Heb. for the escaping of Israel.

i Or, to life.

In that day shall the branch of the LORD be ^g beautiful and 2 glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel.

And it shall come to pass, that he that is left in Zion, and he 3 that remaineth in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written ⁱ among the living in Jerusalem:

When the LORD shall have washed away the filth of the 4 daughters of Zion, and shall have purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof by the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of burning.

And the LORD will create upon every dwelling place of 5 mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, ^j a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night: for ^k upon all the glory shall be ^l a defence.

j Ex. xiii. 21.

k Or, above.

l Heb. a covering.

And there shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime 6 from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for a covert from storm and from rain.

^p Heb. hewed.
- 3 And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard.
- 4 What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?
- 5 And now go to; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard: I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and break down the wall thereof, and it shall be ^q trodden down: ^q Heb. for a treading.
- 6 And I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned, nor digged; but there shall come up briars and thorns: I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it.
- 7 For the vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah ^r his pleasant plant: and he looked for judgment, but behold ^s oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry ^r Heb. plant of his pleasures.

2 CHRONICLES XXVI. VER. 22, 23.

Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did Isaiah 22 the prophet, the son of Amoz, write. So Uzziah slept with 23 his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings ; for they said, He is a leper : and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

2 KINGS XIV. VER. 21, 22.

21 And all the people of Judah took ^a Azariah, which was sixteen years old, and 22 made him king instead of his father Amaziah. He built Elath, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers. A.C. 758.

2 KINGS XV. VER. 2, 3, 4.

2 Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty 3 years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem. And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father 4 Amaziah had done; save that the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.

2 KINGS XV. VER. 5, 6, 7.

5 And the LORD smote the king, so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house. And Jotham the king's son was over the house, 6 judging the people of the land. And the rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he
 7 did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? So Azariah slept with his fathers; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

1 The word of the LORD that came unto Hosea, the son of 801.
 Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, ²¹ The three first chapters of Hosea are inserted here on the joint authorities of Dr. Wells, Blair, Dr. Gray, Lightfoot, Taylor, and the introductory verse. Hosea is supposed to have been the most ancient of the minor prophets. The general scope of this prophet's predictions is supposed by all commentators to be, 1. Partly to detect, reprove, and convince the Jewish nation generally, and the Israelites in particular, of their many and heinous sins, especially of their gross idolatry: the corrupt state of the kingdom is also incidentally noticed:—2. Partly to denounce the imminent and utter rejection, final captivity, and destruction of the Israelites by the Assyrians (if the former persisted in their wicked career), notwithstanding all their vain confidence in the assistance to be afforded them by Egypt; and, 3. Partly to invite them to repentance, with promises of mercy, and evangelical predictions of the future restoration of the Israelites and Jews, and of their ultimate conversion to Christianity. Bishop Horsley, in the introduction to his translation of this book,

A.C. 801. kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel.

The beginning of the word of the LORD by Hosea. And 2 the LORD said to Hosea, Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms: for the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the LORD.

So he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim; which 3 conceived, and bare him a son.

And the LORD said unto him, Call his name Jezreel; for 4 yet a little while and I will ^aavenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel.

And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the 5 bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

And she conceived again, and bare a daughter. And God 6 said unto him, Call her name ^bLo-ruhamah: for ^cI will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; ^dbut I will utterly take them away.

b That is, Not having obtained mercy.
c Heb. I will not add any more to.
d Or, that I should altogether pardon them.

But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will 7 save them by the LORD their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen.

Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and 8 bare a son.

observes, that the prophecies ought by no means to be limited to their inferior and literal signification. Acting upon that system of interpretation laid down in his beautiful sermon on 2 Peter i. 20, 21., "no scripture is of private interpretation," or "no prophecy of scripture is of self-interpretation," he shews that the prophecies of Hosea, like all others in the volume of scripture, are not predictions of separate and independent events, but are united in a regular and entire system, all terminating in one great object, the promulgation of the Gospel, and the complete establishment of the Messiah's kingdom. Of this system, every particular prophecy makes a part, and bears a more immediate or more remote relation to that which is the great object of the whole. Acting upon the principles thus clearly laid down, the Bishop observes, 'a prejudice, which for a long time possessed the minds of Christians, against the literal sense of the prophecies relating to the future exaltation of the Jewish nation, gave occasion to a false scheme of interpretation; which, assuming it as a principle, that prophecy, under the old dispensation, looked forward to nothing beyond the abrogation of the Mosaic ritual and the dispersion of the Jews by the Romans, either wrested every thing to the history antecedent to that epoch, and, generally, as near as possible to the prophet's times (as if it were not the gift and business of a prophet to see far before him), or, by figurative interpretations, for the most part forced and unnatural, applied what could not be so wrested to the Christian Church: and rarely to the Christian Church on earth, but to the condition of the glorified saints in heaven. This method of exposition, while it prevailed generally, and it is not yet sufficiently exploded, wrapt the writings of all the prophets in tenfold obscurity, and those of Hosea more than the rest; because, what with all the prophets was the principal, with him is the single subject. It might have been expected, that when once the principle was understood to be false, a better system of interpretation would have been immediately adopted. But this has only partially taken place. Expositions of many passages upon the erroneous scheme had obtained a general currency in the world, and were supported by the authority of great names. Amongst ourselves it has long been the persuasion of our best biblical scholars and ablest divines, that the restoration of the Jews is a principal article of the prophecy, being indeed a principal branch of the great scheme of general redemption. Notwithstanding this, we have followed expositors who had a contrary prejudice, with too much deference to their authority; and, discarding their principle, have, in too many instances, sitten down content with the interpretations they have given us.'—Bishop Horsley on Hosea. The whole of this translation, the introduction, and the notes, are well worthy the study of the biblical reader.

²² Amos prophesied two years before the earthquake which devastated Judea, in the days of Uzziah; but we have no means of ascertaining the exact year in which this event took place. It is generally referred by commentators to the year when that prince usurped the sacerdotal office, by attempting to offer incense. Dr. Hales supposes it occurred in the year when Uzziah was struck with leprosy; fixing it as the twenty-fourth of his reign. Others, again, conjecture that the king was not afflicted with this disease till about seven years before his death. But the earthquake could not then have happened; as Amos prophesied during the life of Jeroboam the second, who must have been long dead at this period of Uzziah's reign. It must, therefore, have occurred either in the last year of Jeroboam the second's reign, or in the year after his death. An eminent commentator is of opinion that the prophet Amos (in viii. 9, 10.) foretels that, during their solemn festivals, the sun should be darkened by an eclipse, which in those days was accounted ominous, and should turn their joy into mourning. According to Archbishop Usher, about eleven years after Amos prophesied, (A.M. 3213.) there were two great eclipses of the sun,—one at the feast of tabernacles, the other at the time of the passover. Dr. Hales coincides with this opinion; and fixes, accordingly, the date of Amos's prediction in the year B.C. 793. The first chapters of Amos are inserted here, on the joint authorities of Archbishop Usher, Dr. Hales, Taylor, Lightfoot, and Dr. Gray. On the authority of Lightfoot, I have placed the latter part of the prophecy a few years later.

A.C. 793.

And I will smite the winter house with the summer house; ¹⁵ and the houses of ivory shall perish, and the great houses shall have an end, saith the LORD.

AMOS IV.

¹ He reproveth Israel for oppression, ⁴ for idolatry, ⁶ and for their incorrigibleness.

Hear this word, ye kine of Bashan, that are in the moun- ¹ tain of Samaria, which oppress the poor, which crush the needy, which say to their masters, Bring, and let us drink.

The LORD God hath sworn by his holiness, that, ^{lo}, the ² days shall come upon you, that he will take you away with hooks, and your posterity with fishhooks.

- 7 And also I have withholden the rain from you, when there were yet three months to the harvest: and I caused it to rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city: one piece was rained upon, and the piece whereupon it rained not withered.
- 8 So two or three cities wandered unto one city, to drink water; but they were not satisfied: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.
- 9 I have smitten you with blasting and mildew: ^m when your gardens and your vineyards and your fig trees and your olive trees increased, the palmerworm devoured them: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD. m Or, the multitude of your gardens, &c. did the palmerworm, &c.
- 10 I have sent among you the pestilence ⁿ after the manner of Egypt: your young men have I slain with the sword, ^o and have taken away your horses; and I have made the stink of your camps to come up unto your nostrils: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD. n Or, in the way. o Heb. with the captivity of your horses.
- 11 I have overthrown some of you, as God overthrew ^p Sodom and Gomorrah, and ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD. p Gen. xix. 24, 25.
- 12 Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Israel: and because I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.

which was of Gath-hepher." Bishop Lloyd fixes the date of this book nearer to the probable time of Jonah's first prophecy, than other commentators have done. Archbishop Newcome places it between 856 and 784—Taylor in the year 770, in the second year of Menahem, and about the 70th year of Jonah's age. At this time, when his reputation was established by the accomplishment of his first prophecy, it is by many supposed that Jonah was commanded to go to Nineveh. He was peculiarly qualified for the performance of this commission, from being a native of Gath-hepher, in the tribe of Zebulun; a town in the most remote part of that district. This province was that part of the district of Galilee, more particularly called Galilee of the Gentiles, on account of the great admixture of people who had forced themselves into the country, and had brought with them their various forms of worship. In the midst of these lived Jonah, who appears to have been more or less affected with the idolatry of this mixed multitude, and to have imbibed an idea, very prevalent among the Pagan nations, that particular gods presided over particular districts, or provinces. In conformity to this doctrine, he considers Jehovah as the local God of Judea, and in order to escape from his presence he "rose up to flee unto Tarshish." And for this purpose "he went down to Joppa." At the latter place was worshipped a marine deity, Derceto, Atergatis, or Cetus, θαλάσσιος ἰχθύς παμμεγέθης, a sea fish of an immense size; and Jonah, who at this time must have apostatized from the faith of the true God, would, without doubt, now commit himself to the protection of this idol, and we must conclude that "when the mariners were afraid, and cried every one unto his god," that they invoked this sea deity. What must have been their astonishment, then, on throwing Jonah overboard, to behold him swallowed up by their own god, who was thus converted into an unresisting instrument of punishment and preservation by the God of heaven, "which hath made the sea and the dry land," on whom the prophet in his distress had professed to believe! But to give a more unequivocal and general demonstration of the weakness and helplessness of this deified monster of the deep, Jonah, after having passed three days and three nights in the belly of the fish, was brought back again to Joppa (the very place he had so lately left), and in the immediate view of the temple of Derceto, and in the presence of its numerous votaries, the prophet was disgorged from the belly of their god! That Jonah was ejected at Joppa seems to be confirmed by the large bones of such an animal being there preserved. Pliny mentions these enormous bones, and informs us they were brought as a great curiosity to Rome, and they were exhibited by M. Scaurus in his Ædileship. The ribs appeared more in height than those of an Indian elephant, and the length of the bones forty feet.

The history of Jonah has been esteemed by many as merely allegorical and descriptive: but it cannot for a moment be considered in this light, when it is remembered that our Lord himself refers to it as a type of his own imprisonment in the bosom of the earth; and he alludes, likewise, to the history of Jonah as a fact, when he declares that the Ninevites repented at his preaching. Without this incontestible evidence, there is a reason and fitness throughout the whole relation, which wonderfully prove the propriety, justice, wisdom, and power of the Supreme Being, and the object and design of this miracle. No punishment could have been more analogous to the offence of the prophet, and no appeal more convincing to the idolaters, of the inferiority of their powerless god. To this miracle may be attributed, in great measure, through the mercy of God, the successful preaching of Jonah to the Ninevites.

- 5 So the people of Nineveh ^a believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to 6 the least of them. For word came unto the king of Nineveh, and he arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, 7 and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed and ^b published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his ^c nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing: let them not 8 feed, nor drink water: but let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God: yea, let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in 9 their hands. ^d Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not? d Joel ii. 14.

PORTION I.

Reign of Jotham, 16 Years—758 to 742.

2 KINGS XV. VER. 32.

758. In the second year of Pekah the son of Remaliah king of 32 Israel began ^a Jotham the son of Uzziah king of Judah to reign.

^b 2 Kin. xv. 32, &c.

Jotham ^b was twenty and five years old when he began to 1 reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok. And he did 2 that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit he entered not into the temple of the LORD. And the people did yet corruptly.

2 KINGS XV. PART OF VER. 35.

Howbeit the high places were not removed: the people sacri- 35 ficed and burned incense still in the high places.

1 Micah sheweth the wrath of God against Jacob for idolatry. 10 He exhorteth to mourning.

753. The word of the LORD that came to Micah the Moras- 1 thite in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.

II. The people of Judah and Israel being very profane and impenitent in the days of Isaiah, (in consequence of which the Assyrian captivity was then hastening upon Israel, and the Chaldean not long after fell upon Judah), the prophet Micah was raised up to second Isaiah, and to confirm his predictions against the Jews and Israelites, whom he invited to repentance, both by threatened judgments, and by promised mercies.

III. These two chapters were delivered before the destruction of Samaria, which is predicted (chap. i. 6), in the reign of Jotham. Dr. Wells differs from Taylor and Lightfoot, and places the first chapter in this reign: he refers the second to the reign of Ahaz. There does not, however, appear sufficient grounds for his conjecture. The first chapter denounces the judgments of God upon Judah and Israel; the second is an uninterrupted continuation of the address to these nations, and specifies those sins for which punishment was threatened.

IV. The book of Micah, the contemporary of Isaiah, contains a summary of the prophecies delivered by the latter concerning the Messiah and the final return of the Jews, which are thus translated and arranged by Dr. Hales:—

2 ^c Hear, all ye people; ^d hearken, O earth, and ^e all that A.C. 753.

d Deut. xxxii. 1. Is. i. 2. e Heb. the fulness thereof.

Chap. V. 2. "And art thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, little to be [esteemed]

Among the thousands of Judah ?—

From thee shall issue [THE LEADER,]
Who shall rule my people, the Israel [of God].

II. (But his issuings are from old,
From days of eternity.)

III. 3. Therefore he will give them up [for a season]
Until the time that she which shall bear
Have borne : Then shall return
The residue of thy brethren [the Jews]
Along with the outcasts of Israel.

IV. 4. And he shall stand and guide them,
In the strength of THE LORD,
In the majesty of THE NAME OF THE LORD HIS GOD.
And when they return, He shall be magnified Unto the ends of the earth,
And He shall be their PEACE."

"This prophecy," Dr. Hales remarks, "consists of four parts, 1. The human birth-place of Christ. 2. His eternal generation. 3. His temporary desertion of the Jews, until his miraculous birth of the Virgin; after which they are to return with the true Israelites. 4. His spiritual and universal dominion."

The application of the first part of this prophecy was decided at the time of OUR SAVIOUR'S birth, by the most respectable Jewish synod that ever sate, convened by Herod, to determine from prophecy the birth-place of the MESSIAH, which they agreed to be Bethlehem, upon the authority of Micah, which they cited. Their citation of the first part only is given by the evangelist Matthew, in an improved translation of the original, greatly superior to any of the ancient versions.

Matt. ii. 6. "And thou, Bethlehem, territory of Judah,
Art by no means least among the captains of Judah;
From thee shall issue THE LEADER,
Who shall guide my people, the Israel [of God]."

1. Here the evangelist has removed the ambiguity of the question proposed by the prophet, by supplying the answer in the negative. As in Nathan's prophecy, "Shalt thou build me an house?" (2 Sam. vii. 5.) the parallel passage answers in the negative, "Thou shalt not build me an house," (1 Chron. xvii. 4.)

2. He has supplied a chasm in the Masoretic text of נגיד, Nagid, an usual epithet of the MESSIAH (1 Chron. v. 2. Isa. lv. 4. Dan. ix. 25.) usually rendered ἡγούμενος, "leader," by the Septuagint, and retained here by the evangelist, as a necessary distinction of his character, as supreme commander, from "the captains of thousands," styled ἡγεμόσι, judiciously substituted for the thousands themselves in Micah, to mark the analogy more correctly.

3. He has also determined the pastoral nature of the MESSIAH'S "rule" by the verb ποιμανεῖ, "shall guide as a shepherd," afterwards intimated by Micah, ויטהר ויטהר ויטהר, as there rendered by the Septuagint. For He is "the shepherd of Israel," (Gen. xlix. 24. Psalm lxxx. 1.) "the chief shepherd," (1 Pet. v. 4.) and "the good shepherd," (John x. 14.) who appointed his apostles to "guide and pasture his sheep," (John xxi. 16.)

4. The human birth of the MESSIAH is carefully distinguished by Micah from his eternal generation, in the parenthetical clause, which strongly resembles the account of the primeval birth of Wisdom, (Prov. viii. 22—25.)

5. The blessed virgin of Isaiah's former prophecy (vii. 14.) is evidently alluded to by Micah, and also the return of the remnant of the Jews (Is. x. 20, 21.) and of the final peace of his kingdom (Isa. ix. 6, 7.)

This prophecy of Micah is perhaps the most important single prophecy in the Old Testament, and the most comprehensive, respecting the personal character of the MESSIAH, and his successive manifestation to the world. It crowns the whole chain of prophecies descriptive of the several limitations of the blessed seed of the woman to the line of Shem, to the family of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to the tribe of Judah, and to the royal house of David, here terminating in his birth at Bethlehem, "the city of David." It carefully distinguishes his human nativity from his eternal fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

Reign of Pekah.

2 KINGS XV. VER. 27, 28, 29.

758. In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah Pekah 27 the son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years. And he did that which was evil in 28 the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. In the days 29 of Pekah king of Israel came Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and took Ijon, and Abel-bethmaachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria. A.C. 758.

 old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and did not that which was right in the sight 3 of the LORD his God, like David his father. But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, yea, and made his son to pass through the fire, according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel.
 4 And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

²⁷ In this and the following verses are contained the most undoubted and clear predictions of the birth of the Messiah, and as such it is alluded to by the inspired evangelist, Matt. i. 23. There is great difficulty in apprehending how the birth of this child Emmanuel could be a sign to Ahaz, who died several hundred years before our Saviour was born. Ahaz, at the time this prophecy was given, was besieged in Jerusalem by the two kings, Rezin and Pekah, who confederated together in the hopes of taking that city, and of destroying Ahaz, and the family of David. But God, who had always, for the sake of his servant David, expressed mercy and favour for this house, sent his prophet to encourage Ahaz, and to assure him that the designs of his enemies should not stand nor come to pass, and that "within threescore and five years, Ephraim shall be broken." He adds, that if the king will not believe this prediction, he "shall not be established." To confirm his faith, Isaiah offers Ahaz any sign that will best satisfy him out of the whole compass of nature; which the king refusing, the prophet immediately addresses the house of David, and declares that God himself will give them a sign; "Behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings." It is generally supposed by commentators, that Ahaz received a sign with this prediction: and that the sign given to him, and the original and primary meaning of the prophecy was; that Isaiah should marry a young woman, then a virgin, and that within the time that she should conceive, and bring forth a child, and before that child should arrive at such an age as to be able to distinguish between good and evil, (viii. 4.) the enemies of Judah should be destroyed. Immediately after this, Isaiah takes a wife; and before Maher-shalal-hash-baz, the fruit of that marriage, could discern between evil and good, both these kings were slain; Rezin in the third year of Ahaz, and Pekah the next year after. And, according to the word of the prophet, (v. 7.) these two kings, failing in their design, were obliged to raise the siege and return home.

But this prophecy is introduced in so solemn a manner; the sign is so marked and peculiar, chosen by God himself; the name of the child so expressive, that it must have raised hopes far beyond what the present occasion suggested: and, in its higher signification, must have been supposed to describe the great Deliverer, who was to spring from the house of David. The further accomplishment of this prophecy, therefore, must have reference to the birth of the Great Immanuel. Ahaz is told, if "ye believe not, ye shall not be established," (v. 9.) that is, unless ye believe this prophecy of the destruction of Israel, ye Jews, also, as well as the people of Ephraim, shall be destroyed. Accordingly, we read that Ephraim was taken captive by Esarhaddon, for the third time, exactly sixty-five years from the beginning of the reign of Ahaz. This king carried all the remnant of the ten tribes of Israel, who had revolted from the house of David, into Babylon and Syria; and they were now brought to full and utter destruction, and never after recovered themselves. After Esarhaddon had possessed himself of the land of Israel, he sent his army into Judea; where Manasseh was vanquished, taken prisoner, and conveyed in chains to Babylon, the same year, (2 Chron. xxxiii. 11.) The near connexion of these two facts makes the prediction of the one naturally cohere with the prediction of the other; and the words are well suited to this event in the history of the people of Judah.

But the full accomplishment of this prophecy could not take place till Immanuel was born hold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and ⁿ shall call his name Immanuel. A.C. 742.

15 Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good. n Or, thou, O Virgin, shalt cut.

16 For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings.

17 The LORD shall bring upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon thy father's house, days that have not come, from the day that Ephraim departed from Judah; even the king of Assyria.

18 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the LORD shall hiss for the fly that is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria.

19 And they shall come, and shall rest all of them in the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all thorns, and upon all ^o bushes. o Or, commendable trees.

20 In the same day shall the LORD shave with a razor that is hired, namely, by them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria, the head, and the hair of the feet: and it shall also consume the beard.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that a man shall nourish a young cow, and two sheep:

22 And it shall come to pass, for the abundance of milk that they shall give that he shall eat butter: for butter and honey shall every one eat that is left ^p in the land. p Heb. in the midst of the land.

23 And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines at a thousand silverlings, it shall even be for briers and thorns.

24 With arrows and with bows shall men come thither; because all the land shall become briers and thorns.

25 And on all hills that shall be digged with the mattock, there shall not come thither the fear of briers and thorns: but it shall be for the sending forth of oxen, and for the treading of lesser cattle.

ISAIAH VIII.

1 In Maher-shalal-hash-baz, he prophesieth that Syria and Israel shall be subdued by Assyria. 5 Judah likewise for their infidelity. 9 God's judgments shall be irresistible. 11 Comfort shall be to them that fear God. 19 Great afflictions to idolaters.

1 Moreover the LORD said unto me, Take thee a great roll, when both these monarchies were brought to an end. The kingdom of Judah, which at that time extended over the dominions of both nations, was destroyed in the second year of our Lord's age, by the death of Herod the Great. Ten years after, Judea was reduced to the form of a Roman province: in the mean while, it was governed by Archelaus with the title of Ethnarch, who was a mere vassal of the emperor, and to whom he assigned only half his father's dominions.

By referring to the two next sections, it will be seen that after this sign was given, Ahaz sustained the greatest defeat ever experienced by a king of Judah; which must be considered as a punishment to the king for his mistrust of God's promises, as well as for his own and the people's idolatry. The faithful worshippers of Jehovah in the midst of this calamity would be comforted by the prediction of the prophet; which strengthened their expectation of the future Saviour, and at the same time convinced them that their kingdom should last till his birth. — Vide Lowth's notes to Isaiah, 4to. edit. p. 62; Prideaux, Connect. vol. i. p. 5; Horsley's Biblical Criticisms, vol. ii. p. 46, &c.

²⁸ This prophecy was probably delivered soon after those of the seventh and eighth chapters, in the beginning of the reign of Ahaz; and was fulfilled when Tiglath-pileser, after having slain Rezin its king in battle, took Damascus (2 Kings xvi. 9.), reduced all that country under his dominion, and put an end to the kingdom of the Syrians in Damascus; after it had lasted there for ten generations, that is, from the time of Rezin, the son of Ehadah, who first founded it, while Solomon was king of Israel. After this, Tiglath-pileser marched against Pekah, and seized all that belonged to Israel beyond Jordan, and also all the land of Galilee, and carried a great number of the Israelites captives to Assyria. This prophecy was still more fully accomplished in regard to Israel, by the conquest of the kingdom, and the captivity of the people a few years after by Shalmaneser. (2 Kings xviii. 11.)—Bishop Lowth's notes on Isaiah, 4to. edit. p. 205. Prideaux's Connection, vol. i. p. 6.

Bishop Horsley observes, "I think, with Casaubon, that the threatenings against the Jews in this chapter, though the captivity of the ten tribes might be the more immediate object, have a distant reference, however, to the final dispersion of the whole nation by the Romans, which seems particularly to be the subject of the eleventh verse."

After the mention of this ruin of the Jewish nation, the prophet goes on to declare, that, notwithstanding this visitation of God's people, the schemes of the heathen, who thought, in their destruction, to triumph over the true religion, would be disappointed: and the fourteenth verse gives the Jews hope of recovery from the calamities threatened in the eleventh.

2 CHRONICLES XXVIII. VER. 4—19.

741. He sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and 4 on the hills, and under every green tree. Wherefore the LORD 5 his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to ^a Damascus. And he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

a Heb. Dammesek.

For Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah an hundred 6 and twenty thousand in one day, which were all ^b valiant men; because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers. And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the 7 king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was ^c next to the king. And the children of 8 Israel carried away captive of their brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria. But 9 a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth up unto heaven. And now 10 ye purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for bondmen and bondwomen unto you: but are there not with you, even with you, sins against the LORD your God? Now 11 hear me therefore, and deliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: for the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you. Then certain of the heads of the 12 children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, of Ahaz king of Israel; for he made Judah naked, and trans-

²⁹ The time when Obadiah flourished is quite uncertain. Lightfoot makes him contemporary with Hosea, and imagines that, as the prophecy is solely written against Edom, the Edomites united with Shishak king of Egypt against Jerusalem (1 Kings xiv. 25.), or with the Philistines and Arabians (2 Chron. xxi. 16, 17.), or with Joash king of Israel (2 Chron. xxv. 21.): but in all these expeditions we have no account whatever that the Edomites took any part. Archbishop Newcome supposes that Obadiah prophesied before the taking of Jerusalem and the destruction of Idumæa by Nebuchadnezzar; and this opinion is generally adopted. I have, however, ventured to place the prophecy in this place, from comparing the tenor of the prediction contained in it with 2 Chron. xxviii. 17, where we expressly read, "for again the Edomites had come, and smitten Judah, and carried away captives." In this passage there is an account of injuries certainly inflicted at a time when Judah was in the greatest distress, and brought very low. It certainly alludes to some predatory incursion of the Edomites alone; apparently unconnected with the invasion of the Philistines mentioned in the following verse. And from the expression "again the Edomites had come," may be inferred, that they had often, before this attack, taken advantage of the calamities and distresses of the land of Judah. Dupin confirms this arrangement of Obadiah's prophecy.

³⁰ At this period of the history of Judah, the land was suffering under an idolatrous king, successfully invading armies, captivity, and ruin. In 2 Chron. xxviii. 6, 8, 9, we read that Pekah had slain in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, that the children of Israel had carried away captive two hundred thousand of their women, sons, and daughters, because the Lord God was wroth with Judah; that the Philistines and Edomites had alike ravaged the country, and taken many of their towns, (ver. 17, 18.) The expressions, therefore, "your country is desolate," "your cities burnt with fire," describe most forcibly the ruinous condition to which Judah was now reduced; and, in all probability, the prophet took advantage of the desolation that surrounded him to exhort the people to repentance. This chapter is an animated appeal to the Jews, both by promises and threatenings; and is well calculated to arrest their attention. It is probable, on this account, that Ezra, when he reformed the canon of Scripture, placed this chapter first in Isaiah, considering it a good introduction to the whole book. Bishop Lowth supposes that it may have been delivered towards the end of the reign of Jotham: but there is no historical proof of the correctness of his supposition. He mentions the general opinion, that the chapter describes the distress in the reign of Ahaz, and its unsuitableness to the reigns either of Uzziah, or Jotham, who were both powerful princes. And on the strength of those arguments the chapter is inserted here, as being more descriptive of the state of Judah at this time, than at any other period of the prophet's mission.

2 KINGS XVI. VER. 6—9.

- 6 At that time Rezin king of Syria recovered Elath to Syria, and drave the Jews from Elath: and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day. So Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me. And Ahaz took the silver and gold that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria. And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him: for the king of Assyria went up against ^b Damascus, and took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Rezin. b Heb. Dam-meseck.

³¹ This chapter denounces the approaching destruction of the ten tribes by Shalmaneser, without any mention of Syria, or Damascus. The fifth verse turns to the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who were to continue a kingdom after the final captivity of the Israelites. The exact time of its delivery is uncertain; it is conjectured that it was given after the destruction of Damascus, 740, and before the first captivity of the ten tribes, 721.—Lowth; Taylor; Lightfoot.

³² Tiglath-pileser, we are informed, (2 Kings xvi. 9.) hearkened unto Ahaz, and went up against Damascus, and took it; and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Rezin. It seems difficult to reconcile this account with that mentioned in this verse. They are, however, both to be reconciled by considering, that the assistance thus rendered to Ahaz by the king of Assyria was of little real service. He did not assist him in recovering the cities taken from the Philistines, nor did he lend him any forces, or enable him to recruit his strength; but rather weakened him by exhausting his treasures, v. 21. and by destroying Samaria, by which the way was opened for the more easy invasion of the country in the ensuing reign.—Bishop Patrick; Dr. A. - 1 Ahaz was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, like
- 2 David his father: for he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also
- 3 molten images for Baalim. Moreover he ^f burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel. f Or, offered sacrifice.

2 KINGS XVI. VER. 19, 20.

- 19 Now the rest of the acts of Ahaz which he did, are they not written in the book of
- 20 the chronicles of the kings of Judah? And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

PORTION II.

Events in the Kingdom of Israel, contemporary with the Reign of Ahaz King of Judah.

Reigns of Pekah and Hoshea.

2 KINGS XV. VER. 30, 31.

- 30 And Hoshea the son of Elah made a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, and smote him, and slew him, and reigned in his stead, in the twentieth year of Jotham the son of Uzziah ³⁵. And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of chronicles of the kings of Israel. 739.

2 KINGS XVII. VER. 1, 2.

- 1 In the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years. 730.
- 2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.

³⁵ Jotham is here said to have reigned twenty years, whereas it has been before asserted that he reigned only sixteen. 2 Kings xv. 33. He must, therefore, have reigned four years with his father, according to the usual custom among the kings of Israel, of associating the son with the father in the government, more effectually to secure the succession. An interregnum appears to have followed the murder of Pekah by Hoshea; as the latter is said, in the first of these passages, to have begun his reign upon Pekah's death, and in the other, not to have reigned till nine years after: by which it may be inferred that he had not secured the kingdom to himself till that interval had elapsed, in consequence of the tumults and disorders which prevailed after the death of Pekah.

2 CHRONICLES XXIX. VER. 3, TO THE END.

- 3 He in the first year of his reign, in the first month, opened A.C. 726.
4 the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them. And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them
5 together into the east street, and said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites, sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of 6 the holy place. For our fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and have forsaken him, and have turned away their faces from the habita-7 tion of the LORD, and ^f turned their backs. Also they have ^f Heb. given shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have ^{the neck.}
not burned incense nor offered burnt offerings in the holy place
8 unto the God of Israel. Wherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to ^g trouble, to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your ^g Heb. com-
9 eyes. For, lo, our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our ^{motion.} sons and our daughters and our wives are in captivity for this.
10 Now it is in mine heart to make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.
11 My sons, ^h be not now negligent: for the LORD hath ⁱ chosen ^h Or, be not

12 Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and ^{2. 6.}
Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the Kohathites: and of ^k Or, offer

13 and Eden the son of Joah: And of the sons of Elizaphan; Shimri, and Jeiel: and of the sons of Asaph; Zechariah, and 14 Mattaniah: And of the sons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: 15 and of the sons of Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and Uzziel. And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, ^l by the ^l Or, in the 16 words of the LORD, to cleanse the house of the LORD. And ^{business of} the priests went into the inner part of the house of the LORD, ^{the LORD.} to cleanse it, and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad 17 into the brook Kidron. Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in the sixteenth day of 18 the first month they made an end. Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the altar of burnt offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the shewbread table, with all the vessels thereof.
19 Moreover all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast

A. C. 726. away in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

Then Hezekiah the king rose early, and gathered the rulers ²⁰ of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD. And they ²¹ brought seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he goats, for a ^m sin offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah. And he commanded the priests the sons of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the LORD. So they ²² killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and ⁿ sprinkled it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar. And ²³ they brought ^o forth the he goats for the sin offering before the king and the congregation; and they laid their ^p hands upon them: and the priests killed them, and they made reconcilia- ²⁴ tion with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel: for the king commanded that the burnt offering and the sin offering should be made for all Israel. ^q And he set the ²⁵ Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, according to the commandment of David, and of Gad the king's seer, and Nathan the prophet: for so was the commandment ^r of the LORD ^s by his prophets. And the ²⁶ Levites stood with the instruments of David, and the priests with the trumpets. And Hezekiah commanded to offer the ²⁷ burnt offering upon the altar. And ^t when the burnt offering began, the song of the LORD began also with the trumpets, and with the ^u instruments ordained by David king of Israel. And all the congregation worshipped, and the ^x singers sang, ²⁸ and the trumpeters sounded: and all this continued until the burnt offering was finished. And when they had made an end ²⁹ of offering, the king and all that were ^y present with him bowed themselves, and worshipped. Moreover Hezekiah the king ³⁰ and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD with the words of David, and of Asaph the seer. And they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped. Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye ³¹ have ^z consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near and bring sacrifices and thank offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank offerings; and as many as were of a free heart burnt offerings. And the ³² number of the burnt offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt offering to the LORD. And the consecrated things were six hundred oxen and three ³³ thousand sheep. But the priests were too few, so that they ³⁴ could not flay all the burnt offerings: wherefore their brethren the Levites ^a did help them, till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: for the Levites were

2 CHRONICLES XXX.

1 Hezekiah proclaimeth a solemn passover on the second month for Judah and Israel.
 13 The assembly, having destroyed the altars of idolatry, keep the feast fourteen days.
 27 The priests and Levites bless the people.

1 And Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to keep the passover unto the 2 LORD God of Israel. For the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the 3 passover in the second ^b month. For they could not keep it at that time, because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves to-4 gether to Jerusalem. And the thing ^c pleased the king and all 5 the congregation. So they established a decree to make proclamations throughout all Israel, from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done it of a long 6 time in such sort as it was written. So the posts went with the letters ^d from the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you, that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.
 7 And be not ye like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, who there-8 fore gave them up to desolation, as ye see. Now ^e be ye not stiffnecked, as your fathers were, but ^f yield yourselves unto the LORD, and enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever: and serve the LORD your God, that the fierceness 9 of his wrath may turn away from you. For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is 10 ^g gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him. So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh even unto Zebulun: but they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.
 11 Nevertheless divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun 12 humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem. Also in Judah the hand of God was to give them one heart to do the com-

And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the 13 feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation. And they arose and took away the ^h altars that 14 were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron. Then they killed the 15 passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt offerings into the house of the LORD. And they stood in ⁱ their place after their manner, according to 16 the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites. For 17 there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD. For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, 18 and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one that prepareth his heart to seek 19 God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary. And the LORD 20 hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people. And the chil- 21 dren of Israel that were ^k present at Jerusalem kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness: and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with ^l loud instruments unto the LORD. And Hezekiah spake 22 ^m comfortably unto all the Levites that taught the good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace offerings, and making confession to the LORD God of their fathers. And the whole assembly took 23 counsel to keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness. For Hezekiah king of Judah ⁿ did give to 24 the congregation a thousand bullocks and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks and ten thousand sheep: and a great number of priests sanctified themselves. And all the congregation of Judah, with the 25 priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced. So there was great joy in 26 Jerusalem: for since the time of Solomon the son of David king of Israel there was not the like in Jerusalem. Then the 27 priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to ^o his holy dwelling place, even unto heaven.

8 the seventh month. And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they blessed the LORD, and his people

9 Israel. Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps. And Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty: for the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store. u Heb. brake forth.

 Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in the cities of the priests, in their ^d set office, to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the great as to the small: beside their genealogy of males, ¹⁶ from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entereth into the house of the LORD, his daily portion for their service in their charges according to their courses; both to the ¹⁷

 Levites from twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses; and to the genealogy of all their little ones, ¹⁸ their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the in holiness: also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were ¹⁹ in the fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought ²⁰ that which was good and right and truth before the LORD his God. And in every work that he began in the service of the ²¹ house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart, and prospered.

³⁷ The fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of Isaiah form one entire prophecy, and are very improperly divided into two parts. The time of its delivery, and accomplishment, which was to be three years after chap. xvi. 14. are uncertain. In all probability, it was uttered in the first year of Hezekiah, and fulfilled in his fourth, when Shalmaneser, invading Israel, is supposed to have marched through Moab, and, to secure every thing behind him, took possession of their principal strong places, Ar and Kirhares.—Notes to Isaiah, Lowth, p. 99.—Abp. Usher.

³⁸ The extent and nature of the apostacy among the people of Judah and Israel may be clearly ascertained from their conduct, when Hezekiah attempted his great reformation. At this time idolatry was so prevalent, and, consequently, the temple service so neglected, that in 2 Chron. xxix. 34. we find there were not a sufficient number of priests to perform the temple service. The temple itself had been so neglected and polluted, that even the inner part of it required to be cleansed. (2 Chron. xxix. 16.) When Hezekiah sent his messengers to invite the people of Israel to keep the passover of the Lord at Jerusalem, many laughed them to scorn, and mocked them. 2 Chron. xxx. 10. It is not to be supposed, after such a total and long alienation of the Jews from the worship of the true God, that any real reformation could suddenly take place; therefore we must conclude, that the exertions and edict of Hezekiah were only partial and temporary in their effects. Jeremiah informs us, chap. xxvi. 18. that Micah prophesied in the reign of Hezekiah: he predicted the captivity of the ten tribes (Micah i. 6.) which took place in the year 721, in the sixth year of Hezekiah; and, in the chapters here inserted, he addresses both the princes of Judah and of Israel, and declares that the fate of the former should be similar to that of the latter. He then predicts the ultimate restoration of the Jews, and the reign, the time, and the birth-place of the Messiah.

From the manner in which the prophet addresses the princes of Israel and Judah (chap. iii. 9.), it is probable that the ten tribes had not yet been carried captive; and that the predictions contained in these chapters were given soon after the decree of Hezekiah, when the first affection to the reformation had subsided, and the princes of Israel had again relapsed into the vices of which the prophet complains. These considerations have induced me to place them here, four years after the accession of Hezekiah, and more than one year before the captivity of the ten tribes.

721. Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the ¹ rivers of Ethiopia :

³⁹ The eighteenth chapter of Isaiah is generally acknowledged to be the most obscure of all his prophecies. The subject of it, the end and design of it, the people to whom it is addressed, the person who sends the messengers, and the nation to whom they are sent, are in Bishop Lowth's opinion, all obscure and doubtful. But Lowth unites with Vitrina in supposing the chapter to refer to Sennacherib, and Houbigant applies it to that king, and Tirbaka; the swift messengers representing the messengers sent by Tirbaka to the Jews, to inform them that he was upon the march against their enemy Sennacherib. Dr. Wells's paraphrase of this chapter is by no means satisfactory. Most interpreters have supposed that this prophecy referred to Egypt, and that it denounced a great woe, or judgment; consequently such interpretations have been adopted as suited this pre-conceived opinion, without any grammatical examination of the words in which it was delivered. This opinion has been generally founded upon the description of the geographical site of the countries "beyond the rivers of Ethiopia," and from this very description Bishop Horsley supposes that it cannot possibly mean Egypt, p. 127, 128. After having ably discussed the different opinions on this difficult prophecy, he concludes that it relates entirely to the restoration of the Jews, and to the ultimate destruction of Anti-christ, who will be the instrument of those judgments by which the Church will be purified, and that it contains an account of that people, who, under the hand of Providence, will be engaged in the great work of the re-establishment of the Jews in the Holy Land. The time present in prophetic vision, is not the time of delivery, but the time of accomplishment. If, therefore, the prophecy is not yet fulfilled, the application of it to Egypt must be erroneous, for that people have long since ceased to be of any consideration. While the people of the Jews have been from the very beginning, and are to this day, terrible, or awfully remarkable, (as the word נורא may be here translated,) and, on account of God's plagues, have made all other nations afraid of the like; as God had threatened. The particle ווי, rendered "woe to," in ver. 1. may be used as an exclamation of surprise, and very often it is compellative of persons at a distance, and it is so taken here by Calvin, Castalio—the great Bible—the Bishops' Bible—and the English Geneva Bible. "Shadowing of wings" may be intended to characterise some great people, and is an usual image in prophetic language for describing protection afforded by the strong to the weak. The expressions, a "nation meted out, and trodden down," are particularly descriptive of the present state of the Jews, who are, even at this day, every where trampled under foot, held in subjection, and treated with contempt and derision; and this is likely still to be their condition, till their conversion shall take place. The inundation of rivers is a frequent image, in the prophetic style, of the ravages of armies of foreign invaders, and it is here used to represent the devastation committed by the enemies of Judah.

2 That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters, saying, Go, ye swift messengers, to A.C. 721.

Ver. 3. calls on the whole world to witness a display of God's power and providence, which alludes to a renewed preaching of the Gospel in the latter ages. I will "take my rest," in ver. 4. seems to imply a long suspension of the visible interpositions of Providence in the affairs of this world, and in favour of his people, under an image of the extreme stillness of the atmosphere in summer. "The season of the harvest," and "the gathering of fruit," is the prophetic image of that period, when our Lord will send forth his angels to gather his elect from the four winds of heaven. The awful predictions against insincere and nominal members of the Church, and their separation from it by God's judgments, are illustrated by the cutting off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and the cutting down of the branches; and this is to take place before that great event. It was a prevailing opinion in the primitive ages, that Antichrist's last exploit would be to fix his seat of empire at Jerusalem, where he would ultimately perish. The pronoun translated "them," ("summer upon them," "winter upon them,") in the original is singular, and ought to be rendered "it," as the true antecedent of this pronoun is the word מִכְנֵסַי, "my dwelling place," ver. 4. which dwelling place may be understood literally of Mount Zion. "In that time," ver. 7. that is, immediately after this purgation of the Church, at the very time when the fowls of the mountains, with all the beasts of the earth, when Anti-christ with his rebel rout shall have fixed his seat between the seas, in the holy mountain—a present shall be brought; the nation described in ver. 2. shall be brought to the place of the name of the Lord of Hosts, the Mount Zion. Persuaded as I am that prophecies were generally given in reference to some great passing event, I have endeavoured to connect this with the taking of Samaria, and the captivity of the ten tribes by Shalmaneser. It seems impossible that Isaiah would have permitted this remarkable, and, to the Jews, most interesting event, to pass unnoticed. I suppose, therefore, that he broke out into this prediction of the restoration of the Jews, at the time when the people of Judah witnessed the destruction of their apostate brethren; and, perhaps, from their signal punishment, apprehended for themselves a similar fate. To the remarks above, taken from Bishop Horsley, I shall only add his translation, with notes, of this prophecy; referring the reader to the book itself.—Horsley's Biblical Criticisms, vol. ii. p. 107—178.

1 Ho! Land spreading wide the shadow of (thy) wings*, which art beyond the rivers of Cush †.

2 Accustomed to send ‡ messengers by sea,
Even in bulrush-vessels §, upon the surface of the waters,
Go, swift messengers ||,
Unto a nation ¶ dragged away and plucked,

* That is, affording aid and protection to friends and allies in remote countries.

† The land of Cush in holy writ (commonly, but by mistake, rendered Ethiopia) is properly that district of Arabia where the sons of Cush first settled. But as this race multiplied exceedingly, and spread, not only into other parts of Arabia, but eastward, round the head of the Persian Gulf, to the confines of Susiana; and westward, across the Arabian Gulf, into the region since called Abyssinia, which extended along the coast from Ptolemais to Arsinoë, and inland to the very sources of the Nile; the land of Cush is often taken more largely for a great tract of country, not only comprehending the whole of Arabia Felix, but having for its eastern boundary the branch of the Tigris, below the town of Asia, and for its western boundary the Nile. The rivers of Cush, in this place, may be either the Euphrates and the Tigris on the east, or the Nile, the Astaboras, and the Astapus, on the west. But which of these are meant, it must be left for time to shew.

‡ "Accustomed to send"—The form of the expression in the original signifies, not a single act of sending once, but the habit of sending perpetually.

§ "Sending by sea, in bulrush-vessels," is a figurative expression, descriptive of skill in navigation, and of the safety and expedition with which the inhabitants of the land called to are supposed to perform distant voyages.

|| "Go, swift messengers"—You who, by your skill in navigation and your extensive commerce and alliances, are so well qualified to be carriers of a message to people in the remotest corners, Go with God's message.

¶ "Unto a nation," &c. viz. to the dispersed Jews; a nation dragged away from its proper seat, and plucked of its wealth and power; a people wonderful, from the beginning to this very time, for the special providence which ever has attended them, and directed their fortunes; a nation still lingering in expectation of the Messiah, who so long since came, and was rejected by them, and now is coming again in glory; a nation universally trampled under foot; whose land, "rivers," armies of foreign invaders, the Assyrians, Babylonians, Syromacedonians, Romans, Saracens, and Turks, have over-run and depopulated.

† This 4th verse represents a long cessation of visible interpositions of Providence, under the image of God's sitting still; the stillness of that awful pause, under the image of that torpid state of the atmosphere in hot weather, when not a gleam of sunshine breaks for a moment through the sullen gloom; not a breath stirs; not a leaf wags; not a blade of grass is shaken; no rippling wave curls upon the sleeping surface of the waters; the black ponderous cloud covering the whole sky seems to hang fixed and motionless as an arch of stone; nature seems benumbed in all her operations. The vigilance, nevertheless, of God's silent providence is represented under the image of his keeping his eye, while he thus sits still, upon his prepared habitation. The sudden eruption of judgment threatened in the next verse, after this total cessation, just before the final call to Jew and Gentile, answers to the storms of thunder and lightning which, in the suffocating heats of the latter end of summer, succeed that perfect stillness and stagnation of the atmosphere. And as the natural thunder at such seasons is the welcome harbinger of refreshing and copious showers, so it appears the thunder of God's judgments will usher in the long desired season of the consummation of mercy. So accurate is the allusion in all its parts.

‡ “The harvest” is the constant image of that season when God shall gather his elect from the four winds of heaven, reap the field of the world, gather his wheat into his barns, and burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire. Images, which relate not to the translation of the just to heaven, and the burning of the wicked in hell, but to the placing of the faithful in a state of peace and security on earth, and to the excision of the incorrigible of the irreligious faction.

§ God in the latter ages will purify his Church with sore but wholesome judgments. Compare John xv. 1, 2.

|| It was a prevailing opinion among the early fathers, that Antichrist is to possess himself of the Holy Land, and that there he is to perish.

⁴¹ Nahum describes himself as an Elkoshite, from which expression many suppose that he was a descendant of Elkosha, while others infer that he was born at Elkosh, or Elkosha, a village in Galilee. The subject of his prophecy is the destruction of Nineveh, and the ruin of the Assyrians, for their cruel tyranny over the Israelites. The captivity of the ten tribes took place in 721, and, as there is ample authority for concluding that the prophet lived at this period, it is most probable that he made his escape, when Israel was taken captive into Judah, and there uttered his predictions against the oppressors of his country.—Archbishop Newcome—Dr. Gray—Horne.

⁴³ After the captivity of the ten tribes, the city of Tyre was besieged by Shalmaneser. The siege continued five years, at the end of which time they were delivered by the death of this king. Success made them insolent, and drew upon them this prophecy of Isaiah, which foretells the miserable overthrow the Tyrians should hereafter receive from Nebuchadnezzar. — Prideaux's Connect. vol. i. p. 27. ; see too Bishop Newton's account of the fulfilment of the prophecies against Tyre.

ISAIAH X. VER. 5, TO THE END ⁴⁴.

- 5 ^a O ^b Assyrian, the rod of mine anger, ^c and the staff in their hand is mine indignation. ^{a Or, Woe to the Assyrian. b Heb. Asshur. c Or, though.}

⁴⁴ Bishop Horsley supposes that the prophecy beginning at Isaiah x. 5. was uttered on the occasion of Sennacherib's invasion. It is equally probable that it was spoken for the purpose of encouraging Hezekiah, when Sennacherib, immediately upon his father Salmanser's death, renewed the demand for the tribute-money which had been paid to him and to Tiglath-pileser by that king and Ahaz. When Hezekiah refused to comply with this demand, the king of Assyria declared war against Judah. Bishop Horsley supposes that the prophecy extends only to the thirty-second verse of this chapter: its immediate subject, he observes, is Sennacherib's invasion of Judea; but in speaking of the miraculous deliverance of the Jews from that calamity, the prophet's views are sometimes carried forward to the greater and more general deliverance of the elect of God.

And in the end he passes from this subject of Sennacherib into an explicit prophecy of the final redemption, which is contained in the eleventh and twelfth chapters. The transition is so artificial, that the two last verses of this chapter may be considered either as the conclusion of this prophecy, or the beginning of the next.

It is interesting to observe the beautiful manner in which the prophecy of our Saviour is introduced in the beginning of the eleventh chapter. At the conclusion of the tenth, the prophet had compared the enemies of God and his church, to the proud and lofty forests of Lebanon, the ruin of which is thus predicted, "He shall cut down the thickets of the forests with iron, and the high ones of stature shall be hewn down." Pursuing the metaphor, he represents, in the midst of the general storm, while the proud oaks of the forests are torn up by their roots, or lopped of their branches, the promised Deliverer, as a twig springing out of a tree cut down to the ground,— "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots." This mention of the stump of Jesse, shews that the royal house of Judah is considered as one of the trees thrown down by the hurricane, which is typical of Sennacherib's invasion, and proves the general extent of that prophetic commination.

Chapters xiii. and xiv. to ver. 28, are added to this prophecy, as well on the authority of Light-foot, as on account of their apparent connexion with it. The prophecy commences with a denunciation against Assyria, (ch. x. 5, &c.) It proceeds (ch. xi.) to describe the reign of the Messiah, and concludes with a song of praise for the anticipated blessings of that period. The prophet then, foreseeing the fate of Babylon, takes up the burden of its desolation. Isaiah, in prophetic vision, saw that Babylon would become the capital of Assyria (it being taken some few years after by Esarhad-don,) and would be the cause of that empire's aggrandizement and consequent fall; therefore, in denouncing vengeance against that city, he was in fact continuing his predictions against Assyria. Animated with this idea, he proceeds to describe the joy of the whole world upon the overthrow of the king of Babylon, when Lucifer, the son of the morning, shall fall from heaven (ch. xiv. 12.) The bold and emphatic language of chapter xiv. must be referred to the overthrow of that spiritual Babylon, Antichrist, of which pagan Babylon was but the type. The capture of Babylon referred to, took place by the Medes and Persians, under Cyrus, about a hundred and seventy-six years after the prediction. At the time of the delivery of the prophecy, the Medes were an obscure people, without any apparent means of obtaining that power necessary to bring about its accomplishment.

⁴⁵ Bishop Lowth remarks, that this chapter contains a poem superior to any thing of its kind extant in any language. For beauty of disposition, strength of colouring, greatness of sentiment, brevity, perspicuity, and force of expression, it stands among all the monuments of antiquity unrivalled. Chap. xiii. opens with the gathering together of the different nations, appointed to execute the divine wrath on Babylon ; and from ver. 11. to the end predicts the dreadful destruction of its inhabitants, and the everlasting desolation to which that great city was doomed. It is one of the most beautiful examples of variety of image, sublimity of sentiment, and diction, that can be given in the prophetic style. The deliverance of Judah from captivity, the immediate consequence of this great event, is celebrated in ver. 1, 2. chap. xiv. The ode then commences with a chorus of Jews rejoicing in the downfall of the oppressor, and the destruction of the "golden city." The whole earth shouteth for joy, and the cedars of Lebanon (or all those rulers, or kingdoms, who had been harassed or oppressed) utter a severe taunt over the fallen tyrant. The regions of the dead are then laid open, ver. 9.; and Hades is represented as rousing up the shades of the departed monarchs, to receive the king of Babylon on his entrance, and to insult him on being reduced to the same miserable state of impotence and dissolution with themselves. The Jews now resume the speech, ver. 12. and address the king of Babylon as the morning star fallen from heaven; and compare, in bitter terms of reproach, his former arrogant boasts of power, with his present low and abject condition. His body is then represented as being cast out, and lying naked on the ground, with the common slain, just after the taking of the city; and he is again reproached, with the severest taunts, for his cruel usage of the conquered, which deservedly brought upon him this ignominious treatment. To complete the whole, God is introduced, declaring the fate of Babylon, the utter extirpation of the royal family, the total dissolution of the city, the deliverance of his people, and the destruction of their enemies; confirming the irreversible decree by the awful sanction of his oath. This prophecy was delivered one hundred and eighty years before its accomplishment; and the Medes, who are expressly mentioned, chap. xiii. 7. as the principal agents in the overthrow of Babylon, were at that time an inconsiderable people, having been in a state of anarchy ever since the fall of the Assyrian empire, of which they had made a part, under Sardanapalus, and did not become a kingdom under Deioces till about the 17th of Hezekiah.—Notes on Isaiah, in loc. Lowth.

⁴⁶ These chapters are generally supposed to allude to Sennacherib's invasion. Bishop Lowth is of opinion, that they refer to the three great desolations of Judea, by Shalmaneser, Sennacherib, and the Romans.—Bishop Horsley, to the general tribulation of the latter ages, and the succeeding prosperity of the Church in the end of the world. They are placed here chiefly on the authority of Lightfoot; and seem to have been written to console the faithful people of Judea, in the desolation caused by Sennacherib's army.

And it was revealed in mine ears by the LORD of hosts, 14

⁴⁷ In this animated and beautiful chapter, the prophet represents the people of Jerusalem as running to the house tops, to gaze on an approaching army. At the time of the delivery of this prophecy, it is most probable that the host of Assyria was daily expected to appear before Jerusalem. On comparing Isaiah xxii. 9. with 2 Chron. xxxii. 5. it will be evident that the Prophet alludes in the plainest terms to the warlike preparations of Hezekiah for the defence of the city. Bishop Horsley's conjecture, however, is very probable, that these first fourteen verses refer to the siege and capture of Jerusalem in the reign of Zedekiah. In his opinion, the impentence alluded to in ver. 11 and 13, and the utter ruin denounced in ver. 14, suit not the time of Hezekiah, nor the event of Sennacherib's expedition. This prophecy may indeed be considered as referring to both these events ; one may be regarded as it were the type of the other.—Horsley's Bib. Crit. vol. ii.

Surely this iniquity shall not be purged from you till ye die, A.C. 713.
saith the Lord GOD of hosts.

^k Dan. v. 5.

⁴⁸ Part of this prophecy was to be fulfilled within a year of its delivery, see ver. 16.; and it was probably given about the same time with the others contained in this part of the book of Isaiah; that is, immediately before, or after, the fourteenth of Hezekiah, the year of Sennacherib's invasion. It is supposed the king of Assyria overran these several clans of Arabians on his first march into Judea, or perhaps on his return from the Egyptian expedition.

The operation of the Spirit of God upon the minds of his prophets may be supposed to bear some analogy to the ordinary operations of the human intellect. In the latter instance the process of recollection is effected, by one idea suggesting another; which being usual, and common, is denominated natural: in the former, future events are anticipated by what may be considered prophetic association; that is, on the occurrence of any great event, God, by his Spirit, enables the prophet to foresee a succession of future events, which will succeed the one which is immediately present before him; and this being unusual, and uncommon, can be attributed only to divine and miraculous influence. The grand subject of the prophecy in chap. xxi. is the overthrow of the Babylonian empire; the destruction of which appears to have been associated in Isaiah's mind, with the ruin which hung over, and menaced Jerusalem.

For a very curious, and, not improbably, correct interpretation of ver. 11, 12. vide Fragments of Calmet.

After the burthen of Jerusalem he recurs to the burthen of Babylon, "the desert of the sea," which he foresees would bring ruin on his native land, a more fatal ruin than that with which she was then threatened; and that Babylon, in her turn, would be destroyed by the increasing greatness of that power, which now, comparatively small, and obscure, was enrolled in the service of the enemies of Judah. He sees the men of Kir and Elam, chap. xxii. 6. (the Medes and Persians) among the soldiers of Assyria; he sees their future greatness, and the final overthrow of Babylon. He foresees these circumstances in prophetic vision, and relates them, as orderly as an uninspired writer would have done from association or recollection. At the very moment when these united forces were in array against Jerusalem, he predicts the time, when the Medes and Persians, arrived at their height of power, should in like manner be leagued against Babylon. He enters into the midst of things; and describes, in bold and animated language, the very banquet at which the princes and nobles should be seated when "all the images of her gods should be broken to the ground."

"Prepare the table, watch in the tower," are terms literally expressive of the actual security and revelling of the sovereign: Belshazzar was eating and drinking with his wives and concubines, till the Persians entered his palace, forced the goblet from his lips, and compelled his princes to "arise, and anoint the shield." Ver. 5. Compare this prophecy with its wonderful accomplishment, Daniel v.

m Heb. *by the hand of Isaiah.*n Heb. the captivity of Egypt.

⁴⁹ Ashdod was long in the possession of the Philistines, and formed one of the five governments of that people. It was originally assigned by Joshua to the tribe of Judah. This town was so strongly fortified, that Psammetichus lay before it nine and twenty years, before he effected its reduction. It was afterwards retaken, and added to Judah by Uzziah, (2 Chron. xxvi. 6.), and its conquest was secured by Hezekiah's defeat of the Philistines, (2 Kings xviii. 8.) On this king's consenting to pay tribute to Sennacherib, (2 Kings xviii. 14), the latter marched against Egypt, to punish it for its alliance with Judah; and, the better to open his way into that country, he sent Tartan, one of his generals, (2 Kings xviii. 17.) before him, to take Ashdod, or Azotus. From the capture of this place, the prophet Isaiah dates the beginning of the war, which Sennacherib carried on against the Egyptians, and foretells their captivity and ruin; which was accomplished, according to the prediction, within the space of three years, (ver. 3.)—Prideaux's Connection, p. 31.

Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and ² sorrow: and it shall be unto me as Ariel.

And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay ³ siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee.

⁵⁰ In the beginning of chap. xxix. the prophet is supposed to describe the distress and anxiety that would exist during the siege of Jerusalem by Sennacherib, and the miraculous destruction of the Assyrian army. He then proceeds to upbraid the Jews for their hypocrisy, disobedience, and stupidity, in not discerning the signs of the times; and in the two next chapters condemns the people and their king for relying on Egypt, and again predicts the calamities of that country. Bishop Horsley, however, asserts, in opposition to the most able commentators, Lowth, father and son, Lightfoot, Wells, Wogan, and Bishop Wilson, that the Jews did not at this time solicit the assistance of the Egyptians, and that there is nothing in the thirtieth chapter corresponding with the times of Hezekiah; he therefore applies it to the ruinous consequences that followed the alliance of the Jews with the Egyptians, in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. He further remarks, that this chapter ends with denunciations of judgment against the Jews, accompanied, as they always were, with promises of their conversion, and restoration to prosperity; and that it predicts the final vengeance that would be executed on the enemies of the true religion. Although many circumstances detailed in this chapter cannot be ascribed to Sennacherib's invasion, it must be remembered that the prophets often grounded their predictions on the passing events of the day; and that they were enabled by the Spirit of God to avail themselves of important occurrences to predict the fate of nations, and by looking, as it were, through the present, to foresee the future, and so to pass on from "things temporal to things spiritual." Bishop Horsley's opinion, therefore, that these chapters allude to a great contest between the church of God and the enemies of God, may be undoubtedly correct; yet it does not follow, that, because the prophet wished to direct the attention of the people to these sublimer subjects, he would not first endeavour to make an impression on them, by placing before them the circumstances of the time in which they lived; and, by so doing, gradually prepare their minds for the reception of more important and eternal truths. In conformity to the general opinion, I have supposed that this prophecy had its first and proximate completion, in the judgments executed on Sennacherib; and I have assumed, that Hezekiah applied to Egypt for help, when Sennacherib came up with a great army against the fenced cities of Judah, and took several of them, (2 Kings xviii. 13.); and have placed these chapters here, as they upbraid the Jews for their contempt of God's command, in placing their dependence upon Egypt. I have supposed that the twenty-ninth was uttered, with the other two, on Sennacherib's first attempt to attack Jerusalem, when the prophet foresaw and predicted his treachery, and destruction, with the great overthrow of his army. The Assyrian, being at this time the most powerful foe, and the terror of God's people, stands as the type of the irreligious faction leagued against the Church of Christ.—Lowth; Horsley, Bib. Crit. vol. ii. p. 271.

And I will add unto thy days fifteen 6 years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake. And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the sign that 8 the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day. And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou 9 have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered, It is a light 10 thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees. And Isaiah the pro- 11 phet cried unto the LORD: and ^h he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the ⁱ dial of Ahaz.

ISAIAH XXXII ⁵¹.

1 The blessings of Christ's kingdom. 9 Desolation is foreshewn. 15 Restoration is promised to succeed.

Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall 1 rule in judgment.

⁵¹ In the first verse of this chapter, there seems to be an evident allusion to the recent recovery of Hezekiah. "This thing was not done in a corner:" and while the minds of the people were filled with the remembrance of this astonishing miracle; while they beheld their king healed, and on the third day going up into the house of the Lord; (2 Kings xx. 5.) at this moment of exultation and gratitude, it is not improbable that Isaiah would call upon them to anticipate a period when Israel should have much greater cause for praise and rejoicing. "Behold a King shall reign in righteousness," rise again from the dead on the third day, and enter into the Holy of Holies, conquering death and sin. On this supposition I have deviated from the plan of Bishop Lowth, in his arrangement of this chapter; and, following Lightfoot, have put together, as one section, this and the three chapters ensuing. The first eight verses of this chapter describe the happy state of mankind when the Assyrian, or false religion, shall be destroyed; the seven following predict a period of wrath and tribulation preceding that happy event, in which the careless daughters of pleasure are threatened; and the five last verses repeat the assurance of the general effusion of the Holy Spirit, and the conversion of the world to the true religion. In the 33d chapter, the prophet predicts the miraculous destruction of Sennacherib's army, and still dwells upon the general subject of the final overthrow of the irreligious faction, and the prosperity of the Church. He threatens the enemies of God with division and treachery among themselves; and describes the consternation of the sinners of Zion, (ver. 14.) or hypocritical professors of the true religion, when they shall see the judgments inflicted on the avowed enemies of the church; during which time the following verses declare the security and happiness enjoyed by the servants of God; who see the Messiah glorified in the prosperity of his church; and behold from afar the promised land of immortality. (ver. 17.)—Bishop Horsley in loc.

The 34th and 35th chapters make one distinct prophecy, consisting of two parts: the first containing a denunciation of divine vengeance against the enemies of the people or church of God; the second describing the flourishing state of the church of God, consequent upon the execution of those judgments. All nations and people are called upon to hear this prophecy. All nations are interested in it. It denounces the wrath of God against the enemies of Zion: among them Edom and Bozrah are particularly specified. (ver. 5, 6.) In the preceding predictions of Isaiah, the Assyrian has been the type of the powerful head of the irreligious faction, but in this prophecy Idumea and Bozrah represent a promiscuous mass of people in the interests of infidelity and irreligion, which will remain to be extirpated after the overthrow of the Assyrian. The general devastation spread through Idumea and Bozrah by Nebuchadnezzar appears to be the event Isaiah predicted, and had primarily in view, when he uttered this prophecy. But this destruction and calamity by no means corresponds with or justifies the high-wrought and terrible description contained in this chapter. It is reasonable, therefore, to suppose that this prophecy has a further view, to events still future; and to some great revolutions to be effected in later times; antecedent to that more perfect state of the kingdom of God upon earth, and serving to introduce it, which the Holy Scriptures warrant us to expect. The xxxvth chapter declares, with most explicit clearness, the wonderful miracles wrought by our blessed Saviour, "the eyes of the blind shall be opened, the ears of the deaf unstopped, the lame man shall leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing." To this passage our Lord plainly refers, when he bids his disciples return to John the things they had heard and seen. (Matt. xi. 4, 5.) To his miracles the strictly literal interpretations of the prophet's words direct us; their allegorical meaning may relate to the future advent of Christ; when all nations shall be healed, when the blind shall receive their sight, and the lepers be cleansed; when there shall be a high way called the way of holiness, and "God shall be all in all."

From the manner in which the whole of these four chapters are connected together, by the allusions contained in them to that glorious King, who shall "reign in righteousness,"—and to the future events of the latter days,—they are inserted together in this place.—Vide Lightfoot; Bishop Lowth; Horsley in loc.

Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon it? Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand? Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand? Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers: how much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand? And his servants spake yet more against the LORD God, and against his servant Hezekiah. He wrote also letters to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand. Then they cried with a loud voice in the Jews' speech unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city. And they spake against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were the work of the hands of man. And for this cause Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven.
- 21 ^c And the LORD sent an angel, which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria. So he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels ^d slew him there with the sword. Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and guided them on every side. And many brought gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and ^e presents to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth.

Then Rab-shakeh stood and cried with a loud voice 28 in the Jews' language, and spake, saying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Assyria: Thus saith the king, Let 29 not Hezekiah deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand: neither let Hezekiah make you trust in 30 the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria. Harken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, 31 ⁱ^k Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his ^lcistern: until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a 32 land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he ^mpersuadeth you, saying, The LORD will deliver us. Hath any of the gods of the nations 33 delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

- 34 Where are the gods of Hamath, and of Arpad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Henah, and Ivah? have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand? Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of mine hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand? But the people held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not. Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah, with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

2 KINGS XIX. VER. 1—7.

- 1 And ⁿ it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD. And he sent Eliakim, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to ^o Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz. And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and ^p blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth. It may be the LORD thy God will hear all the words of Rab-shakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God; and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are ^q left. So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.
- 6 And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me. Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

2 KINGS XIX. VER. 8—19.

8 So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed
 9 from Lachish. And when he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee: he sent
 10 messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered 11 into the hand of the king of Assyria. Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered?
 12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the 13 children of Eden which were in Thelasar? Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?
 14 And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of 15 the LORD, and spread it before the LORD. And Hezekiah prayed before the LORD, and said, O LORD God of Israel, which dwellest between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made 16 heaven and earth. LORD, bow down thine ear, and hear: open, LORD, thine eyes, and see: and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God. Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have destroyed the nations and 17 their lands, and have cast their gods into the fire: for they were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone:
 18 therefore they have ^a destroyed them. Now therefore, O LORD ^a Heb. given. our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.

The miraculous cure of this king, and the destruction of the host of Sennacherib, must naturally have rivetted the attention of the Jews to the prophet. Those people who had witnessed the wonderful accomplishment of his prediction against the Assyrian army, as well as those against the surrounding nations, must have had (if any thing earthly could have given it to them) implicit faith in the eventual completion of that grand series of prophecies which were now delivered to them by Isaiah, and which constitute the most elegant, and perhaps the most sublime part of the Old Testament. They may be divided, according to the plan of Vitringa and Bishop Tomline, into sections. The chief subject is the restoration of the church. This is pursued with the greatest regularity; containing the deliverance of the Jews from captivity—the vanity and destruction of idols—the vindication of the divine power and truth—consolations and invitations to the Jews—denunciations against them for their infidelity and impiety—their rejection, and the calling of the Gentiles—the happiness of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked. But, as the subject of this very beautiful series of prophecies is chiefly of the consolatory kind, they are introduced with a promise of the restoration of the kingdom, and the return from the Babylonian captivity, through the merciful interposition of God. At the same time, this redemption from Babylon is employed as an image to shadow out a redemption of an infinitely higher and more important nature. The prophet connects these two events together, scarcely ever treating of the former without throwing in some intimations of the latter; and sometimes he is so fully possessed with the glories of the future more remote kingdom of the Messiah, that he seems to leave the immediate subject of his commission almost out of the question. This series of prophecies consists of twelve prophetic poems or discourses.

DISCOURSE 1. (ch. xl. xli.) contains a promise of comfort to the people of God, interspersed with declarations of the omnipotence and omniscience of Jehovah, and a prediction of the restoration of the Jews from the Babylonian captivity by Cyrus.

DISCOURSE 2. The advent of the Messiah, and the character and blessings of his kingdom, are foretold (xlii. 1—17.); for rejecting which the infidelity and blindness of the Jews are reproved (18—25.) A remnant of them, however, it is promised, shall be preserved, and ultimately restored to their own land (xliii. 1—13.) The taking of Babylon by Cyrus, and the restoration of the Jews, are also foretold, as also, perhaps, their return after the Roman dispersion (14—20.); and they are admonished to repent of those sins which would otherwise bring the severest judgments of God upon them (22—28.)

DISCOURSE 3. contains promises of redemption, and of the effusion of the Holy Spirit, intermingled with a beautiful and forcible exposure of the folly of idolatry (xlv. 1—20.) Thence, the prophet announces by name their future deliverer, Cyrus (21—28. xlv. 1—5.); and according to his usual manner, he makes a transition to the greater work of God in the conversion of the Gentiles to the Gospel, and the ultimate triumph of the latter over Antichrist (6—25.)

DISCOURSE 4. foretells the carrying away of the idols of Babylon (xlvi. 1—5); the folly of worshipping them is then strikingly contrasted with the attributes and perfections of Jehovah (6—13); and the destruction of Babylon is further denounced (xlvii.)

DISCOURSE 5. contains an earnest reproof of the Jews for their obstinate attachment to idolatry, which would infallibly involve them in the severest calamities (xlviii. 1—19. 21, 22.); and foretells their deliverance from the Babylonian captivity (20.)

DISCOURSE 6. introduces the Messiah in person, declaring the full extent of his commission, foretelling the unbelief and rejection of the Jews, the triumphant state of the church, and particularly of the Jews on their conversion to the Gospel (xlix.)

DISCOURSE 7. predicts the rejection of the Jews for their rejection of Jesus Christ (l. 1—3.), whose sufferings and exaltation are foretold (4—11.) Still keeping the great Deliverer in view, the prophet exhorts the faithful Jews to trust in him, and foretells their future restoration after the Babylonian captivity and the Roman dispersion, as also their conversion to Christianity (li. lii. 1—12.)

DISCOURSE 8. predicts the person, offices, humiliation, sufferings, and exaltation of Christ, the end of his death, and the blessings resulting to mankind from that event (lii. 13—15. liii.)

DISCOURSE 9. foretells the increase of the church by the conversion of the Jews and Gentiles, and its triumphant state in general (liv.)

DISCOURSE 10. describes the fulness, freeness, excellence, and everlasting nature of the blessings of the Gospel, and the conditions on which they are to be attained, without respect to persons or nations (lv. lvi. 1—8.)

DISCOURSE 11. contains a prophecy of the calamities that would befall the inhabitants of Judah, in consequence of the sins which they would commit after the death of Hezekiah, particularly their idolatry and hypocrisy; by the captivity of Manasseh and some others, and afterwards of the whole nation, first by the Babylonians, and subsequently by the Romans (lvi. 9—12. lvi.—lix. 14.)

DISCOURSE 12. chiefly predicts the general conversion of the Jews to the Gospel, the coming in of the fulness of the Gentiles, and the destruction of Antichrist; also the restoration of the Jews, and the happy state of the Christian church (lix. 15—22. lx—lxvi.) In ch. lxi. 1—9. the Messiah is introduced describing his character and office, and confirming the ample promises made in the preceding chapter. The deliverance of the church from all her enemies by the GREAT REDEEMER, and the destruction of Antichrist, and his followers, are delineated in ch. lxiii. 1—6. with unequalled pathos, energy, and sublimity. And the two last chapters in the prophecy set forth, in the clearest terms, the calling of the Gentiles, the establishment of the Christian dispensation, and the reprobation of the apostate Jews.

ISAIAH XLVI.

1 The idols of Babylon could not save themselves. 3 God saveth his people to the end.
5 Idols are not comparable to God for power, 12 or present salvation.

- 1 Bel boweth down, Nebo stoopeth, their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle: your carriages were heavy loaden; they are a burden to the weary beast.
- 2 They stoop, they bow down together; they could not deliver the burden, but ^a themselves are gone into captivity.

a Heb. their sout.

A.C. 710
to 699.

Hearken unto me, O house of Jacob, and all the remnant of 3
the house of Israel, which are borne by me from the belly, which are carried from the womb :

And even to your old age I am he ; and even to hoar hairs 4 will I carry you : I have made, and I will bear ; even I will carry, and will deliver you.

^b To whom will ye liken me, and make me equal, and com- 5 pare me, that we may be like ?

They lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the 6 balance, and hire a goldsmith : and he maketh it a god : they fall down, yea, they worship.

They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set 7 him in his place, and he standeth ; from his place shall he not remove : yea, one shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer, nor save him out of his trouble.

Remember this, and shew yourselves men : bring it again 8 to mind, O ye transgressors.

Remember the former things of old : for I am God, and there 9 is none else ; I am God, and there is none like me.

Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times 10 the things that are not yet done, saying, ^c My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure :

counsel.

Calling a ravenous bird from the east, ^d the man that executeth 11 my counsel from a far country : yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass ; I have purposed it, I will also do it.

Hearken unto me, ye stouthearted, that are far from right- 12 eousness :

I bring near my righteousness ; it shall not be far off, and 13
my salvation shall not tarry : and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory.

ISAIAH XLVII.

1 God's judgment upon Babylon and Chaldea, 6 for their unmercifulness, 7 pride, 10 and over boldness, 11 shall be irresistible.

Come down, and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, 1 sit on the ground : there is no throne, O daughter of the Chal-deans : for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.

Take the milstones, and grind meal : uncover thy locks, 2 make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the rivers.

Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be 3 seen : I will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.

As for our redeemer, the LORD of hosts is his name, the Holy 4
One of Israel.

Sit thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter 5 of the Chaldeans : for thou shalt no more be called, The lady of kingdoms.

I was wroth with my people, I have polluted mine inherit- 6 ance, and given them into thine hand: thou didst shew them no mercy; upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke. A.C. 710 to 699.

7 And thou saidst, I shall be ^a a lady for ever: so that thou didst not lay these things to thy heart, neither didst remember the latter end of it. ^a Rev. xviii.

8 Therefore hear now this, thou that art given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly, that sayest in thine heart, I am, and none else beside me; I shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children:

9 But ^f these two things shall come to thee in a moment in one day, the loss of children, and widowhood: they shall come upon thee in their perfection for the multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great abundance of thine enchantments. f ch. li. 19.

10 For thou hast trusted in thy wickedness: thou hast said, None seeth me. Thy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath ^e perverted thee; and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else beside me. g Or, caused thee to turn away.

11 Therefore shall evil come upon thee; thou shalt not know ^h from whence it riseth: and mischief shall fall upon thee; thou shalt not be able to ⁱ put it off: and desolation shall come upon thee suddenly, which thou shalt not know. h Heb. the

i Heb. expiate.

12 Stand now with thine enchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth; if so be thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

13 Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. Let now the ^k astrologers, the stargazers, ^l the monthly prognosticators, stand up, and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee. of the heavens

14 Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them, they shall not deliver ^m themselves from the power of the flame: there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before it.

15 Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, even thy merchants, from thy youth: they shall wander every one to his quarter; none shall save thee.

§ 21. Idolatry reproved.

ISAIAH XLVIII.

1 God, to convince the people of their foreknown obstinacy, revealed his prophecies. 9 He saveth them for his own sake. 12 He exhorteth them to obedience, because of his power and providence. 16 He lamenteth their backwardness. 20 He powerfully delivereth his out of Babylon.

1 Hear ye this, O house of Jacob, which are called by the name of Israel, and are come forth out of the waters of Judah, which swear by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, but not in truth, nor in righteousness.

to 699.

For they call themselves of the holy city, and stay themselves upon the God of Israel; The LORD of hosts is his name.

I have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I shewed them; I did them suddenly, and they came to pass.

^a Heb. hard.

Because I knew that thou art ^a obstinate, and thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass;

I have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I shewed it thee: lest thou shouldst say, Mine idol hath done them, and my graven image, and my molten image, hath commanded them.

Thou hast heard, see all this; and will not ye declare it? I have shewed thee new things from this time, even hidden things, and thou didst not know them.

They are created now, and not from the beginning; even before the day when thou heardest them not; lest thou shouldst say, Behold, I knew them.

Yea, thou heardest not; yea, thou knewest not; yea, from that time that thine ear was not opened: for I knew that thou wouldest deal very treacherously, and wast called a transgressor from the womb.

For my name's sake will I defer mine anger, and for my praise will I refrain for thee, that I cut thee not off.

^b Or, for silver.

Behold, I have refined thee, but not ^b with silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction.

^c ch. xlii. 8.

For mine own sake, even for mine own sake, will I do it: for how should my name be polluted? and ^c I will not give my glory unto another.

Rev. i. 17.

Hearken unto me, O Jacob and Israel, my called; I am he; I am the ^d first, I also am the last.

^e Or, the palm of my right hand hath spread out.

Mine hand also hath laid the foundation of the earth, and ^e my right hand hath spanned the heavens: when I call unto them, they stand up together.

All ye, assemble yourselves, and hear; which among them hath declared these things? The LORD hath loved him: he will do his pleasure on Babylon, and his arm shall be on the Chaldeans.

I, even I, have spoken; yea, I have called him: I have brought him, and he shall make his way prosperous.

Come ye near unto me, hear ye this; I have not spoken in secret from the beginning; from the time that it was, there am I: and now the Lord GOD, and his Spirit, hath sent me.

Thus saith the LORD, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel; I am the LORD thy God which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldst go.

O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea:

- 19 Thy seed also had been as the sand, and the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof; his name should not have been cut off nor destroyed from before me. A.C. 710 to 699.
- 20 Go ye forth of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans, with a voice of singing declare ye, tell this, utter it even to the end of the earth; say ye, The LORD hath ^fredeemed his servant Jacob. f Ex. xix. 4, 5, 6.
- 21 And they thirsted not when he led them through the deserts: he ^gcaused the waters to flow out of the rock for them: he clave the rock also, and the waters gushed out. g Ex. xvii. 6. Num. xx. 11.

- 1 Listen, O isles, unto me; and hearken, ye people, from far; The LORD hath called me from the womb; from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name.
- 2 And he hath made my mouth like a sharp sword; in the shadow of his hand hath he hid me, and made me a polished shaft; in his quiver hath he hid me;
- 3 And said unto me, Thou art my servant, O Israel, in whom I will be glorified.
- 4 Then I said, I have laboured in vain, I have spent my strength for nought, and in vain: yet surely my judgment is with the LORD, and my ^awork with my God. a Or, my reward.
- 5 And now, saith the LORD that formed me from the womb to be his servant, to bring Jacob again to him, ^bThough Israel be not gathered, yet shall I be glorious in the eyes of the LORD, and my God shall be my strength. b Or, that Israel may be gathered to him, and I may, &c.
- 6 And he said, ^cIt is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the ^dpreserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a ^elight to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth. c Or, Art thou lighter than that thou shouldest, &c. d Or, desolations, e ch. xlii. 6.
- 7 Thus saith the LORD, the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One, ^fto him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation abhorreth, to a servant of rulers, Kings shall see and arise, princes also shall worship, because of the LORD that is faithful, and the Holy One of Israel, and he shall choose thee. f Or, to him that is despised in soul.
- 8 Thus saith the LORD, ^gIn an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to ^hestablish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages; g 2 Cor. vi. 2. h Or, raise up.

Thy children shall make haste; thy destroyers and they that 17 made thee waste shall go forth of thee.

^m Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold: all these 18 gather themselves together, and come to thee. As I live, saith the LORD, thou shalt surely clothe thee with them all, as with an ornament, and bind them on thee, as a bride doeth.

For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy 19 destruction, shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants, and they that swallowed thee up shall be far away.

The children which thou shalt have, after thou hast lost the 20 other, shall say again in thine ears, The place is too strait for me: give place to me that I may dwell.

Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me 21 these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? and who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?

Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will lift up mine hand 22 to the Gentiles, and set up my standard to the people: and they shall bring thy sons in their ⁿ arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders.

¹ An exhortation, after the pattern of Abraham, to trust in Christ, ³ by reason of his comfortable promises, ⁴ of his righteous salvation, ⁷ and man's mortality. ⁹ Christ, by his sanctified arm, defendeth his from the fear of man. ¹⁷ He bewaileth the afflictions of Jerusalem, ²¹ and promiseth deliverance.

Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that ¹ seek the LORD: look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged.

Look unto Abraham your father, and unto Sarah that bare ² you: for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him.

For the LORD shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her ³ waste places; and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the LORD; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody.

Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my ⁴ nation: for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people.

ISAIAH LIV.

1 The prophet, for the comfort of the Gentiles, prophesieth the amplitude of their church, 4 their safety, 6 their certain deliverance out of affliction, 11 their fair edification, 15 and their sure preservation.

A.C. 710

to 699.

a Gal. iv. 27.

Sing, ^a O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into 1 singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child:
for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD.

Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the 2 curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes;

For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left; 3 and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles, and make the desolate cities to be inhabited.

Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou 4 confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more.

b Luke i. 32.

For thy Maker is thine husband; the ^b LORD of hosts is his 5 name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; The God of the whole earth shall he be called.

For the LORD hath called thee as a woman forsaken and 6 grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God.

For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great 7 mercies will I gather thee.

In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but 8 with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer.

c Gen. ix. 11.

For this is as the waters of ^c Noah unto me: for as I have 9 sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee.

For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; 10 but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the LORD that hath mercy on thee.

And all thy children shall be ^e taught of the LORD; and 13 great shall be the peace of thy children.

In righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far 14 from oppression; for thou shalt not fear: and from terror; for it shall not come near thee. A.C. 710

- 15 Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me: whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall for thy sake.
- 16 Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work; and I have created the waster to destroy.
- 17 No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD, and their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD.

g Or, equity.

Thus saith the LORD, Keep ye ^g judgment, and do justice: 1 for my salvation is near to come, and my righteousness to be revealed.

Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that 2 layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil.

Neither let the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself 3 to the LORD, speak, saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people: neither let the eunuch say, Behold, I am a dry tree.

For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my 4 sabbaths, and choose the things that please me, and take hold of my covenant;

Even unto them will I give in mine house and within my walls 5 a place and a name better than of sons and of daughters: I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off.

Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the 6
LORD, to serve him, and to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants, every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant;

^j Heb. Ararat.

x the tall cedars thereof, and y the choice of the fir trees thereof. ^a Hast thou not heard long ago, how I have done it ; and of ancient times, that I have formed it ? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldst be to lay waste defended cities into ruinous heaps. Therefore their inhabitants were ^b of small power, they were dismayed and confounded : they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the housetops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up. But I know thy ^c abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me. Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest. And this ^d shall be a sign unto thee, Ye shall eat this year such as growth of itself ; and the second year that which springeth of the same : and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof. And ^e the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward : for out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and ^f they that escape out of mount Zion : the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this. Therefore thus ^g saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, ^h He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with ⁱ shields, nor cast a bank against it. By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD. For I will ^j defend this city to save it for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake. Then the ^k angel of the LORD went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand : and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh. And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword ; and they escaped into the land of Armenia : and Esar-haddon his son reigned in his stead.

^l Heb. Give charge concerning thy house.

In ^k those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ^l Set thine house in order : for thou shalt die, and not live. Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, and said, Remember now, O LORD, I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept ^m sore.

^m Heb. with great weeping.

- 4, 5 Then came the word of the LORD to Isaiah, saying, Go, and say to Hezekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years. And I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: and I will defend this city. And this shall be a sign unto thee from the LORD, that the LORD will do this thing that he hath spoken; Behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the ⁿ sun dial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward. So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.

ⁿ Heb. degrees by, or, with the sun.

ISAIAH XXXVIII. VER. 21, 22.

- 21 For Isaiah had said, Let them take a lump of figs, and lay it for a plaister 22 upon the boil, and he shall recover. Hezekiah also had said, What is the sign that I shall go up to the house of the LORD?

ISAIAH XXXIX.

- 1 Merodach-baladan, sending to visit Hezekiah because of the wonder, hath notice of his treasures. 3 Isaiah, understanding thereof, foretelleth the Babylonian captivity.

1 At that time Merodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, ^o sent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he had been sick, and
2 was recovered. And Hezekiah was glad of them, and shewed them the house of his ^p precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his ^q armour, and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

^o 2 Kin. xx. 12, &c.

3 Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said,
4 They are come from a far country unto me, even from Babylon. Then said he, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, All that is in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not
5 shewed them. Then said Isaiah to Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD of 6 hosts: Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon: nothing
7 shall be left, saith the LORD. And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and ^s they shall be eunuchs in the palace
8 of the king of Babylon. Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, Good is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, For there shall be peace and truth in my days.

⁵⁵ These chapters must have been delivered before the ten tribes were taken captive, as the prophet not only denounces vengeance against them, but constantly addresses them as a nation still in existence—they must likewise have been spoken after Hoshea, king of Israel, had revolted from Assyria, and entered into treaty with So, king of Egypt, 2 Kings xvii. 4, because the prophet alludes to this circumstance in chap. vii. 11. and xii. 1. The alliance with Egypt was formed in 725. Shalmaneser immediately afterwards led his army against Samaria, which place, after a siege of three years, was taken; and Ephraim, as a nation, destroyed in 721, A.C.

Hosea, in one continued strain of invective, declaims in these chapters against the sins of Israel, exposes the spiritual whoredoms of those who worshipped the vain idols erected at Beth-el and Beth-aven, chap. viii. 5. chap. x. 5, calling on Judah to shun pollutions so offensive to Jehovah. He denounces vengeance on Ephraim for their application to Egypt, against which they had been so often warned. He foretells the punishment of Judah, and the demolition of its cities, chap. viii. 14, and their future restoration, chap. xiv. 4. 8, the calling of our Saviour out of Egypt, chap. xi. 1, the terrors of the last judgment figuratively represented in the impending destruction of Samaria, chap. x. 8. He animates the people, amidst these denunciations of wrath, to cultivate righteousness and mercy, in the expectation of the blessings of the Lord, chap. x. 12, and in the assurances of a final ransom from the powers of the grave, and of a redemption from death, to be vanquished and destroyed, chap. xiii. 14. His work may be considered as a noble exordium against those general offences which the prophets who succeeded him more particularly detailed; as well as a diffuse revelation of those judgments which were afterwards more minutely described.—Grey's Key, p. 427.—Lightfoot's Chronicle in loc.

2 KINGS XVII. VER. 5—23.

- 5 Then the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years. 723.
- 6 ^a In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes. For so it was, that the children of Israel had sinned against the LORD their God, which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods, and walked in the statutes of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel, which they had made. And the children of Israel did secretly those things 721. a ch. xviii. 10, 11. Hos. xiii. 16, foretold.

A.C. 721. that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city. And they set them up ^b images and ¹⁰ groves in every high hill, and under every green tree: and ¹¹ there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger: for ¹² they served idols, whereof the LORD had said unto them, ^c Ye shall not do this thing. Yet the LORD testified against Israel, ¹³ and against Judah, ^d by all the prophets, and by all the seers, saying, ^e Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets. Notwithstanding they would not hear, ¹⁴ but ^f hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the LORD their God. And they re-¹⁵jected his statutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he testified against them; and they followed vanity, and became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should not do like them. And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, ¹⁶ and ^g made them molten images, even two calves, and made a grove, and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal. And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through ¹⁷ the fire, and used divination and enchantments, and sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger. Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and ¹⁸ removed them out of his sight: there was none left but the tribe of Judah only. Also Judah kept not the commandments ¹⁹ of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made. And the LORD rejected all the seed of ²⁰ Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight. For he rent ²¹ Israel from the house of David; and they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin. For the children ²² of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them; until the LORD removed Israel out ²³ of his sight, as he had said by all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.

 6 two courts of the house of the LORD. And he made his son pass through the fire, and observed times, and used enchantments, and dealt with familiar spirits and wizards: he wrought much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to 7 anger. And he set a graven image of the grove that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, ^e In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I e 1 Kln. viii. 29. & ix. 3. ch. xxxiii. 27.

 out of the land which I gave their fathers; only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded to do more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

§ 2. Isaiah's Prophecy of the Captivity of Shebna.

ISAIAH XXII. VER. 15, TO THE END.

Thus saith the Lord GOD of hosts, Go, get thee unto 15 this treasurer, even unto Shebna, which is over the house, and say ⁵⁶,

⁵⁶ On the death of Hezekiah, idolatry was re-established in Judah (2 Kings xxi.) His son Manasseh, who succeeded him, being now only twelve years of age, its revival must be imputed rather to those who held the offices of government, than to the king himself. The first part of this chapter of Isaiah foretells the invasion of Jerusalem by the Assyrians under Sennacherib, or by the Chaldeans under Nebuchadnezzar. The latter part of it predicts the destruction of Shebna, and seems to have so little reference to the former, that, from its internal evidence, I have been induced to separate it, and to give it this place. Vitringa and Bishop Lowth are of opinion, that the Shebna here mentioned is not the same as Shebna the scribe, spoken of in the history of Hezekiah's reign. As we only read of one person of eminence of the name of Shebna in the account of the events of this king's life, there does not appear sufficient grounds for the adoption of this supposition. In ver. 15. we find that Shebna the scribe was now over the house; it is most probable, therefore, from the sequel, that he was the cause of Eliakim's having been dismissed from that station. Eliakim was actually treasurer at the time of Sennacherib's invasion, and, from the prophet's description, (ver. 21.) he must have been a servant of the true God, and as such employed by Hezekiah: we have therefore reason to conjecture he lost his situation as treasurer since the accession of Manasseh. Shebna, in succeeding to this office, in all probability was the chief promoter of the re-establishment of idolatry: his great pride and vanity are displayed in his anxiety to have his sepulchre on high, in a lofty vault, that it might be more conspicuous; a custom prevalent in the East among persons of exalted rank. While he was rioting in all the excess of luxury, devoting himself to false gods, and making "a habitation in a rock," I have supposed that Isaiah predicts his downfall. It is not possible to imagine that this prophet could have been a silent spectator of the present revival of idolatry; and it is by many conjectured that the severe and forcible language in which he denounces the ruin of Shebna, was the principal cause of the cruel death soon after inflicted on him. Shebna was taken captive with Manasseh to Babylon, and when the Lord brought that king again to Jerusalem, and "he took away the strange gods, and commanded Judah to serve the Lord God of Israel," (2 Chron. xxxiii. 15, 16.) he recalled Eliakim, and literally fulfilled the prediction of the prophet, by making him again the treasurer of his household; "I will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle," (ver. 21.)

Eliakim is supposed to have been of the pontifical family, and to have been high priest at the time of Manasseh; and the same who is mentioned by the name of Joakim or Eliakim, as high priest in the history of Judith. Eliakim and Joakim have both the same signification in the Hebrew tongue, and are used promiscuously. It is likewise conjectured, that Eliakim was the Hilkiah mentioned as high priest in the reign of Josiah. I have inserted this as the last of Isaiah's prophecies, considering it as the probable cause of his death. There was a very ancient and general tradition among the Jews, that this prophet was sawn asunder during the reign of Manasseh, (2 Kings xxi. 16.) and that his death is alluded to in Hebrews xi. 37. In Urvamoth, fol. 49. 2. it is thus written: "Manasseh slew Isaiah; for he commanded that he should be slain

2 CHRONICLES XXXIII. VER. 11—20.

- 11 Wherefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the host ^a of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among the thorns, and bound him with ^b fetters, and carried him to Babylon. And when he was in affliction, he besought the LORD his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, and prayed unto him: and he was intreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the LORD he ^c was God. 24 And the king of Assyria brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from ^a Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel: and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt 25 in the cities thereof. And so it was at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they feared not the LORD: therefore the LORD sent lions among them, which slew some of them.
 26 Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land: therefore he hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them, because they know not the manner of the God of the 27 land. Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the priests whom ye brought from thence; and let them go and dwell there, and let him teach them the man-
 28 ner of the God of the land. Then one of the priests whom they had carried away from Samaria came and dwelt in Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the LORD. Howbeit every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made,
 30 every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt. And the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth, and the men of Cuth made 31 Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Ashima, and the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the gods of 32 Sepharvaim. So they feared the LORD, and made unto themselves of the lowest of them priests of the high places, which 33 sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places. ^b They feared the LORD, and served their own gods, after the manner
 34 of the nations ^c whom they carried away from thence. Unto this day they do after the former manners: they fear not the LORD, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, ^d whom he named Israel; with whom the LORD had made a covenant, and charged them, saying, ^e Ye shall not fear other gods, nor bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them: but the LORD, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power and a stretched out arm, him shall ye fear, and him shall ye

§ 2. Designation of Jeremiah to the Prophetic Office.

JEREMIAH I ⁵⁷.

The time, 3 and the calling of Jeremiah. 11 His prophetic visions of an almond rod and a seething pot. 15 His heavy message against Judah. 17 God encourageth him with his promise of assistance.

1 The words of Jeremiah the son of Hilkiah, of the priests that were in Anathoth in the land of Benjamin: to whom the 629.

⁵⁷ The place and date of the first chapter of Jeremiah is assigned in verse 2. The efforts of Josiah to reform the nation of the Jews were promoted to the utmost by this prophet; who was mercifully commanded to exhort, and to make a final appeal, both to the people and to their princes, before they were carried into captivity. Chapters ii. and iii. to ver. 6. are supposed, by Dr. Blayney, to be one continued prophecy, delivered soon after the prophet commenced the duties of his office. It is a powerful address, full of eloquence; endeavouring to convince the Jews of God's continued regard; and expostulating with them for their idolatry and sin; and exhorting them to return to God.

The prophet Jeremiah was of the sacerdotal race, being (as he himself records) one of the priests that dwelt at Anathoth (i. l.) in the land of Benjamin, a city appropriated out of that tribe to the use of the priests, the sons of Aaron (Josh. xxi. 18), and situate about three Roman miles north of Jerusalem. Jeremiah appears to have been very young when he was called to the exercise of the prophetic office, from which he modestly endeavoured to excuse himself, by pleading his youth and incapacity: but being overruled by the divine authority, he set himself to discharge the duties of his function with unremitting diligence and fidelity, during a course of at least forty-two years, reckoned from the thirteenth year of Josiah's reign. In the course of his ministry he met with great difficulties and opposition from his countrymen, of all degrees, whose persecution and ill usage sometimes wrought so far upon his mind, as to draw from him expressions, in the bitterness of his soul, which many have thought difficult to reconcile with his religious principles; but which, when duly weighed, may be found to demand our pity rather than censure. He was, in truth, a man of unblemished piety and conscientious integrity; a warm lover of his country, whose miseries he pathetically deplores; and so affectionately attached to his countrymen, notwithstanding their injurious treatment of him, that he chose rather to abide with them, and undergo all hardships in their company, than separately to enjoy a state of ease and plenty, which the favour of the king of Babylon would have secured to him. At length, after the destruction of Jerusalem, having followed the remnant of the Jews into Egypt, whither they had resolved to retire, though contrary to his advice, upon the murder of Gedaliah, whom the Chaldeans had left governor in Judea, he there continued warmly to remonstrate against their idolatrous practices, foretelling the consequences that would inevitably follow. But his freedom and zeal are said to have cost him his life; for there is a tradition, that the Jews at Tahpanhes were so offended at his faithful remonstrances, that they stoned him to death; which account of the manner of his decease, though not absolutely certain, is at least very likely to be true, considering the temper and disposition of the parties concerned. Their wickedness, however, did not long pass without its punishment; for in a few years after, they were miserably destroyed by the Babylonian armies which invaded Egypt, according to the prophet's prediction (xliv. 27, 28.) * Some Jewish writers, however, affirm that he returned to Judea, while others say that he went to Babylon, and died there; and a third class are of opinion that he died in Egypt, far advanced in years, and broken by the calamities which had happened both to himself and his country. This prophet's writings are all in Hebrew, except the eleventh verse of the tenth chapter, which is in Chaldee.

The idolatrous apostacy and other criminal enormities of the people of Judah, and the severe judgments which God was preparing to inflict upon them, though not without a distant prospect of future restoration and deliverance, form the principal subjects of the prophecies of Jeremiah; except the forty-fifth chapter, which relates personally to Baruch, and the six following chapters, which respect the fortunes of some particular heathen nations.

The arrangement of the prophecies of Jeremiah has been attended with more difficulties than those of any other prophet. Their order differs in the Septuagint and in the Hebrew. It is evident, from various passages of the book itself, that there were four distinct collections of the prophecies. The first was that mentioned in chap. xxxvi. 2, and made by divine command in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim. In this collection were contained all the predictions which he had delivered and published to that time, as well against other nations as against the Jews: the prophecies against the Gentiles are, in our Bibles, placed by themselves at the end of the book, as being in some measure unconnected with those denounced against the Jews; but, in the present copies of the Septuagint, they follow immediately after the thirteenth verse of the twenty-fifth chapter †. This first collection comprised chapters i—xx. xxv. xxvi. xxxv. xxxvi. xlv—li. inclusive.

The second collection is that mentioned in chap. xxx. 2, and contained chapters xxvii—xxxii. inclusive: it was made in the reign of Zedekiah, and, as may be inferred from xxviii. 1, after the fourth year of the reign of Zedekiah.

The third collection was made soon after the destruction of Jerusalem, as is plainly indicated by the prophet himself, in the general preface to his book, where he says that the word of Jehovah came to him "in the days of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign; and came in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, until the completion of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the son of Josiah king of Judah, until the carrying away of Jerusalem into captivity in the fifth month," (i. 1—3.) Consequently, this third collection included chapters xxi—xxiv. xxxii—xxxiv. and xxxvii—xxxix.

The fourth collection, containing chapters xl—xlv. inclusive, presents us with an account of Jeremiah himself, and of the other Jews who were left in Judea by the command of Nebuchadnezzar. The fifty-second chapter was probably added by Ezra ‡, as a preface to the book of Lamentations. It is chiefly taken out of the latter part of the second book of Kings, with additions, which Ezra might supply out of the inspired records, and forms a very useful appendage to the prophecies of Jeremiah, as it illustrates their fulfilment in the destruction of the kingdom, city, and temple, which are the subject of the Lamentations.—Horne's Crit. Introduct. vol. ii. p. 273, &c.

On examining the internal evidence for the respective dates and occasions, when these prophecies were probably delivered; and taking into consideration the several arguments of Lightfoot and Taylor, together with those of Prideaux, who has assigned a place to many of these predictions; it has been thought advisable to depart, in several instances, from Dr. Blayney's system, which has been generally adhered to in the arrangement of this book. That the reader who is interested in these inquiries may understand at one view the various arrangements given by these divines of the prophecies of Jeremiah, I have drawn up, in the following table, a summary of the order in which the chapters of Jeremiah should be read, according to their respective opinions.

† Carpzov has written an elaborate disquisition on the variations between the Hebrew and the Septuagint, in the order of Jeremiah's prophecies, and has given a table illustrating those variations. See his Introduct. ad Libros Biblicos Vet. Test. pars. iii. c. iii. § 4. p. 144—152.

‡ Carpzov ascribes it to Baruch, or some other inspired man. Introduct. part iii. p. 152.

- also in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the carrying away of Jerusalem 4 captive in the fifth month. Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
- 5 Before I ^a formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I ^b sanctified thee, and I ^c ordained thee a prophet unto the nations.
- 6 Then said I, Ah, ^d Lord GOD! behold, I cannot speak: for I am a child.
- 7 But the LORD said unto me, Say not, I am a child: for thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak.
- 8 ^e Be not afraid of their faces: for ^f I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the LORD.
- 9 Then the LORD put forth his hand, and ^g touched my mouth. And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have ^h put my words in thy mouth.
- 10 See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to ⁱ root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant.
- 11 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Jeremiah, what seest thou? And I said, I see a rod of an almond tree.
- 12 Then said the LORD unto me, Thou hast well seen: for I will hasten my word to perform it.
- 13 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying, What seest thou? And I said, I see a seething pot; and the face thereof is ^k toward the north.
- 14 Then the LORD said unto me, Out of the ^l north an evil ^m shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land.
- 15 For, lo, I will ⁿ call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the LORD; and they shall come, and they shall set every one his throne at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah.
- 16 And I will utter my judgments against them touching all their wickedness, who have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, and worshipped the works of their own hands.
- 17 Thou therefore gird up thy loins, and arise, and speak unto them all that I command thee: be not dismayed at their faces, lest I ^o confound thee before them.
- 18 For, behold, I have made thee this day ^p a defenced city, and an iron pillar, and brasen walls against the whole land, against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof, against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land.
- 19 And they shall fight against thee; but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee, saith the LORD, to deliver thee.

The reasons which have induced me to assign to these several prophecies their respective places and dates are given in the notes; without entering into the contending opinions of the different authorities. The Biblical student, by referring to the arguments of these writers, will have the satisfaction of forming his own judgment; and will make such an arrangement as he may consider the most judicious.

2 CHRONICLES XXXIV. VER. 8—32.

624. Now in the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged ⁸ the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God. § 4. Zephaniah exhorts the People to Repentance about the time of Josiah's Reformation.

ZEPHANIAH I.

God's severe judgment against Judah for divers sins.

The word of the LORD which came unto Zephaniah the son 1 of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah, in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah ⁵⁸.

⁵⁸ We learn from Zephaniah i. 1. that he began to prophesy in the reign of Josiah. As he begins his predictions against the "remnant of Baal, and the name of the Chemarims ;" against them that worshipped the host of heaven, and swore by Malcham, or Baal ; he probably addressed those idolatrous priests who were not yet extirpated by the religious zeal of Josiah ; compare Zeph. i. 4, 5—9. with 2 Kings xxiii. 5, 6—12. He foretold also the destruction of Nineveh ; and from these considerations he may be supposed to have prophesied before the last reformation made by Josiah : and, as he preceded Jeremiah, that he entered on his office towards the commencement of the reign of that monarch. These two prophets resemble each other so much in the parts where they treat of the idolatries and wickedness of the Jews, that it has been supposed that Zephaniah was the abbreviator of Jeremiah, or that Jeremiah was the pupil of the former : Zephaniah apparently prophesied before Jeremiah, and the latter seems to speak of those abuses as partially removed, which the former describes as existing in the most flagitious extent. (Compare Zeph. i. 4, 5, 9. with Jerem. ii. 5. 20. 32.) The word Chemarim is translated idolatrous priests (2 Kings xxiii. 5.) They were called Chemarim because clothed in black garments, which was the customary dress of these priests. Zephaniah in these books appears to have aided Josiah in his attempt to bring the people back to the worship of the true God. The first chapter denounces vengeance against Judah, and those who observed the rites of idolaters, or violently invaded the property of others (ver. 9.), and declares that the great day of trouble, distress, and desolation was at hand (ver. 15). In the second chapter the prophet predicts woe to the Cherethites, the Moabites, Ammonites, and Ethiopians; and describes the desolation of Nineveh in terms singularly expressive. The Cherethites were the Philistines who bordered on the Mediterranean, called Cherethims. These prophecies were chiefly accomplished by the conquests of Nebuchadnezzar. In the third chapter the prophet returns to Jerusalem, and inveighs against her pollutions and oppressions, which should be punished in God's general vengeance; and concludes, as usual, with predictions of a remnant, who shall trust in the Lord; and with promises of the general restoration of the Jews.—Lightfoot; Gray's Key in loc.

Gather yourselves together, yea, gather together, O nation 1 ⁿ not desired;

Before the decree bring forth, before the day pass as the chaff, 2 before the fierce anger of the LORD come upon you, before the day of the LORD's anger come upon you.

Seek ye the LORD, all ye meek of the earth, which have 3 wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the LORD's anger.

For Gaza shall be forsaken, and Ashkelon a desolation: they 4 shall drive out Ashdod at the noon day, and Ekron shall be rooted up.

Woe unto the inhabitants of the sea coasts, the nation of the 5 Cherethites! the word of the LORD is against you; O Canaan, the land of the Philistines, I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant.

And the sea coast shall be dwellings and cottages for shep- 6 herds, and folds for flocks.

And the coast shall be for the remnant of the house of Judah; 7 they shall feed thereupon: in the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening: ^o for the LORD their God shall visit them, and turn away their captivity.

were made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven: and he burned them without Jerusalem in the fields of Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto Beth-el. And he ⁵ ^a put down the ^b idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burned incense unto Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the ^c planets, and to all the host of heaven. And he brought out the ^d grove from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, unto the brook Kidron, and burned it at the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon the graves of the children of the people. And he brake down the houses of the sodomites, that were by the house of the LORD, where the women wove ^e hangings for the grove. And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burned incense, from Geba to Beer-sheba, and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city. Nevertheless the priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem, but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren. And he defiled Topheth, which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom, that no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech. And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the sun, at the entering in of the house of the LORD, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the ^f chamberlain, which was in the suburbs, and burned the chariots of the sun with fire. And the altars that were on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which ^g Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the LORD, did the king beat down, and ^h brake them down from thence, and cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron. And the high places that were before Jerusalem, which were on the right hand of ⁱ the mount of corruption, which ^k Solomon the king of Israel had builded for Ashtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians, and for Chemosh the abomination of the Moabites, and for Milcom the abomination of the children of Ammon, did the king defile. And he brake in pieces the ^l images, and cut down the groves, and filled their places with the bones of men.

Moreover the altar that was at Beth-el, and the high places which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burned the high place, and stamped it small to powder, and burned the grove. And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent, and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burned them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the ^m word of the LORD which the man of God proclaimed, who proclaimed these words.

And all 19 the houses also of the high places that were in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el. And he ^o slew 20 all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burned men's bones upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

And he set the priests in their charges, and 2 encouraged them to the service of the house of the LORD, and 3 said unto the Levites that taught all Israel, which were holy unto the LORD, Put the holy ark in the house which Solomon the son of David king of Israel did build; it shall not be a burden upon your shoulders: serve now the LORD your God, and his people Israel, and prepare yourselves by the ^c houses of 4 your fathers, after your courses, according to the ^d writing of David king of Israel, and according to the ^e writing of Solomon his son. And Josiah ^h gave to the people, of 7 the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks: these were of the king's substance. And 8 his princes ⁱ gave willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: Hilkiah and Zechariah and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen.  19 inhabitants of Jerusalem. In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

⁵⁹ Here begins an entire and distinct prophecy, which is continued to the end of the sixth chapter. The first part contains a complaint against Judah, for having exceeded the guilt of her sister Israel; whom God had already cast off for her idolatrous apostacy. The second is an exhortation to the people of Judah and Jerusalem to prevent, by repentance, the divine judgments. The Babylonian invasion is clearly and fully foretold, with all its attendant miseries; and the shameless adulteries of the people are represented as the cause of this national ruin.—Dr. Blayney.

- 2 O LORD, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear! even cry out unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save!
- 3 Why dost thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold

⁶⁰ As the prophet Habakkuk makes no mention of the Assyrians, and speaks of the Chaldean invasion as near at hand, chap. i. 5. ii. 3. iii. 2. he probably lived after the destruction of the Assyrian army in the fall of Nineveh. Habakkuk, therefore, was nearly contemporary with, and predicted the same events as, Jeremiah. Many suppose that Jeremiah and Habakkuk remained amidst the sad scenes of their desolate and deserted land, rather than follow their countrymen into captivity. In the first chapter the prophet expostulates with God on account of the wickedness and violence of the Jews—and the Almighty is then represented as declaring he would work an incredible work in their days, ver. 5; and that he would raise up the Chaldeans, who should march through the breadth of the land, and possess their dwelling places, ver. 6; and describes their victories, fierceness, and rapidity; foreshowing the punishment and pride of the victors, their false confidence in their gods, and in ver. 11. the change and insanity of Nebuchadnezzar—he ends by pleading the cause of his countrymen, as more righteous than those God had established for their correction, ver. 13. In chap. ii. is revealed to him in the vision, that the general expectation of those who lived by faith should surely come; though it must tarry the “appointed time.” He then foretells the destruction of Babylon, which had “spoiled many nations;” and of those evil kings who gathered unto themselves all people, who should then find that their gods of wood, and of stone, had “no breath at all in the midst of them,” ver. 19, and “that the Lord only is to be feared in his holy temple.” The Talmudists apply this prophecy, ver. 3, 4. to the advent of the Messiah. The temporal deliverance of the Jews from their captivity, predicted in this chapter, may be considered as a type of their spiritual deliverance and restoration. Habakkuk concludes his prophecies with a beautiful prayer or hymn; which the ancient fathers considered as allusive to the Messiah: it finishes with a declaration of the prophet’s entire confidence in God, which no change of circumstances could affect. It is supposed from the last verse, and from the word Selah being mentioned three times, that this prayer was set to music, and performed in the service of the temple. Habakkuk is cited as an inspired person by the evangelical writers. Compare Habak. ii. 4. with Heb. x. 37, 38. Rom. i. 17. Gal. iii. 11; and Acts xiii. 41. with Hab. i. 5.—Gray’s Key in loc.; Wells; Patrick.

them for their idolatry. 21 He rejecteth the sacrifices of the disobedient. 29 He exhorteth to mourn for their abominations in Tophet, 32 and the judgments for the same.*

1 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Stand in the gate of the LORD's house, and proclaim there

⁶¹ These four chapters are inserted in this place on the authority of Dr. Blayney; who supposes them to have been delivered soon after the predictions in the previous chapters. Besides the prophets who were commissioned to announce the approaching calamities of the Jews, there were others who flattered the people by opposite predictions. They taught them to look upon such threats as groundless. God, they said, would have too much regard for his own honour to permit the temple to be defiled, and the seat of his holiness given to strangers. Jeremiah is commanded to shew the fallacy of these assertions; which he does by pointing to the fate of Israel.

From ver. 1 to 16. God justifies the severity of his proceedings by a representation of the people's impiety and idolatry: and God assures the Jews that he would do unto Jerusalem what he had done unto Shiloh; and that he would cast the people of Judah out of his sight; as he had already done those of Israel, for their wickedness: and ends with a declaration that their sacrifices were unacceptable while they continued deaf to the calls of God's messengers. From a ch. xviii. 18. & xxvi. 13. Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, ^a Amend ³ your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place.

Trust ye not in lying words, saying, The temple of the ⁴ LORD, The temple of the LORD, The temple of the LORD, are these.

For if ye throughly amend your ways and your doings; if ⁵ ye throughly execute judgment between a man and his neighbour;

If ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, ⁶ and shed not innocent blood in this place, neither walk after other gods to your hurt:

Then will I cause you to dwell in this place, in the land that ⁷ I gave to your fathers, for ever and ever.

Behold, ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit. ⁸

ver. 29. to chap. viii. 3. a heavy sentence is denounced both against the dead and the living. From ver. 4. to 13. the incorrigibility of the people is reproved, and they are threatened with grievous calamities. In the three following verses the prophet addresses his countrymen in his own person; as one of the people that dwelt in open towns; and advises those in the like situation to retire with him into some fortified cities, during the time of danger and distress. In ver. 17. God declares he will bring foes against them that should be irresistible. The prophet then bewails that no remedy can be found to close up the wounds of his country, and pathetically weeps over the number of her slain. In chap. ix. Jeremiah continues to give vent to his lamentations at the foresight of the calamities which the Chaldeans would inflict upon the Jews. Ver. 23, 24. forbid settling value on any personal endowment; for God delights in those only who understand and know him. The 10th chapter begins with an earnest appeal to the people to dissuade them from the practice of heathen idolatry: Jerusalem, at ver. 16, is introduced lamenting the completion of her ruin, and supplicating God's mercy.—Dr. Blayney.

⁶² The prophecy in these two chapters may be assigned to the end of the reign of Josiah; on occasion of the people neglecting the obligations of the divine covenant, which in the eighteenth year of that prince they had solemnly engaged to perform. The prophet is therefore sent to recall them to their duty. From 1 to 17 he rebukes them severely for their disobedience, and denounces evil against Judah and Jerusalem for their apostacy: and, being informed by divine revelation of the conspiracy against his life by the men of Anathoth, he prays against them, and is authorized to foretell their utter destruction, 18 to the end. Emboldened at the success of his prayers, he expostulates with God, ch. xii. 1—6, on the success of the wicked, and receives for answer, that God had discarded his heritage, and given it into the hands of her enemies. From 14 to 17, God promises the future restoration and conversion of his people, with threats against their heathen oppressors; assuring those that would believe in Him, the true God, that they should be received into his church, while the unbelieving would utterly perish.—Dr. Blayney.

 of their Captivity, and the Destruction of Jerusalem.*

JEREMIAH XIII.

1 In the type of a linen girdle, hidden at Euphrates, God prefigureth the destruction of his people. 12 Under the parable of the bottles filled with wine he foretelleth their sheweth their abominations are the cause thereof.

1 Thus saith the LORD unto me, Go and get thee a linen 609.
 girdle, and put it upon thy loins, and put it not in water.

⁶³ These chapters are all referred to the commencement of the reign of Jehoiakim, by Dr. Blayney and Lightfoot. Chapter xiii. foretells the utter destruction that was to fall on the whole

A.C. 609. So I got a girdle according to the word of the LORD, and 2 put it on my loins.

And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, 3 saying,

Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, 4 and arise, go to Euphrates, and hide it there in a hole of the rock.

So I went, and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD com- 5 manded me.

And it came to pass after many days, that the LORD said 6 unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide there.

Then I went to Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle 7 from the place where I had hid it: and, behold, the girdle was marred, it was profitable for nothing.

Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 8

Thus saith the LORD, After this manner will I mar the pride 9 of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem.

^a Or, stubbornness.

This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which walk 10 in the ^aimagination of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing.

For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I 11 caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that they might be unto me for a people, and for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory:
but they would not hear.

Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word; Thus saith 12
the LORD God of Israel, Every bottle shall be filled with wine:

Jewish nation, under two symbols, a linen girdle left to rot, and the breaking of bottles filled with wine, xiii. 1—14. An exhortation to humiliation and repentance is subjoined, ver. 15—21; and their incorrigible wickedness and profligacy are assigned as the cause of all the evils that awaited them, 22—27. The particular mention of the downfall of the king and queen in the 18th verse, Dr. Blayney thinks, will justify the opinion which ascribes this prophecy to the commencement of the reign of Jehoiakim, whose fate, with that of his queen, is, in like manner, noticed together in chap. xxii. 18.

Chap. xiv. predicts a severe famine, to punish the Jews for their sins, but which does not bring them to repentance, xiv. 1—22; and announces God's peremptory decree to destroy Judah, unless they should speedily repent, xv. 1—9. The prophet, complaining that he is become an object of hatred by reason of his office, receives a promise of divine protection, 10—21.

In the xvth chapter, 1—13. is predicted the utter ruin of the Jews, in the type of the prophet being forbidden to marry and to feast; and, immediately afterwards, he announces their future restoration, 14, 15, as well as the conversion of the Gentiles, 16—21; accompanied with a severe reproof of the Jews for their too great reliance on human aid, xvii. 1—18. From 19—27, contains a prophecy concerning the strict observance of the sabbath-day, which Jeremiah was commanded to proclaim aloud in all the gates of Jerusalem, as a matter that concerned the conduct of each individual, and the general happiness of the whole nation.

Chap. xviii. 1—10. shews, under the type of a potter, God's absolute authority over nations and kingdoms, to alter and regulate their condition at his own pleasure. The prophet is then directed to exhort the Jews to avert their impending dangers by repentance and reformation, and, on their refusal, to predict their destruction, 11—17. The Jews conspiring against him, Jeremiah implores judgment against them, 18—23. Under the type of breaking a potter's vessel, is foretold the desolation of the Jews for their sins, xix.—Vide Horne's Critical Introduction.

The latter part of the chapter is inserted, for a similar reason, in the reign of Jehoiachin; as it predicts the decease of that monarch. This chapter commences with an address to the king, his servants, and people, recommending an inviolable adherence to right and justice, as the only means of establishing the throne of David, and of preventing the ruin both of prince and people. The captivity of Shallum is declared irreversible, (ver. 10—12.) and from 13 to 19 Jehoiakim is severely reprov'd for his tyranny and oppression, and his miserable death is foretold. "Weep not for ⁶⁵ As this chapter is dated (ver. 1.) in the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim, it has been therefore supposed by commentators to precede the 25th, which contains the prophecy of the captivity given in the fourth year of that king. In it (ver. 1—6.) Jeremiah is directed to foretell the destruction of the temple and city of Jerusalem, without a speedy repentance and reformation ; on which account he is apprehended, and accused before the council.

Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

10 When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat

Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniyah, and his brethren, and 4 all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites; and I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, the keeper of the ³ door: 5 and I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, Drink ye wine. 6 But they said, We will drink no wine: for Jonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no 7 wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever: neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; that ye may live many days 8 in the land where ye be strangers. a Heb. threshold, or, vessel.

⁶⁷ The Rechabites, who were always accustomed to live in tents in the open country, apprehensive of their safety, retired into Jerusalem on Nebuchadnezzar's approach to Palestine, after his defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish. On their coming to Jerusalem, Jeremiah is sent to them; and, for a trial of their obedience, offers them wine to drink, (ver. 1—11.) In the following verses the Jews, by comparison, are upbraided with their disobedience, and menaced with vengeance. The 18th and 19th verses promise a blessing on the Rechabites. This chapter is inserted here from the evidence of ver. 11; as Nebuchadnezzar does not appear to have come in person to Jerusalem again till after the death of Jehoiakim, and in all probability he was joined at this time by the Syrians, whom he subdued after his conquest of Carchemish. The Rechabites, as may be collected from ver. 7, were not of the children of Israel. From 1 Chron. ii. 55. they appear to have been Kenites, a people originally settled in the land of Midian, and most probably the descendants of Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, Jud. i. 16. Jonadab, the son of Rechab, is supposed to have been the same as mentioned in 2 Kings x. 15. a man of eminence, and a righteous man; otherwise Jehu would not have shewn him so much attention, and taken him with him to witness his zeal for the honour of the true God.—Dr. Blayney.

A.C. 606. in: neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed: but we 10 have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us. But it came to 11 pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying, 12 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Go and tell 13 the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD. The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded 14 his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me. I have sent also unto you all 15 my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, ^b Return ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers: but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me. Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have 16 performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me: therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel; 17 Behold, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them: because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

^b ch. xviii. 11. & xxv. 5, 6.

And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus 18 saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath commanded you: therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God 19 of Israel; ^c Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand before me for ever.

He most distinctly foretells their subjugation, together with that of the neighbouring nations, to the king of Babylon, for seventy years, and the fall of the Babylonish empire at that period, (ver. 8—14.) It may be that the house of Judah will hear all the ⁶⁹ By divine appointment, Jeremiah causes Baruch to write all his former prophecies in a roll, and to read them to the people, to give them an opportunity, before they were taken into Babylon, of "presenting their supplications before the Lord," as his anger was greatly kindled against them. The expression, "shut up," ver. 5. Dr. Blayney supposes to signify, from the context following, that Jeremiah was under some confinement, or restraint, which precluded him from going to the house of Jehovah: he might have been obliged, after the charge brought against him, chap. xxvi. to have given some security that he would not enter the temple, or prophesy in it for a certain time, without being absolutely in prison; as we read ver. 19. (the year following) he was then at liberty. Archbishop Usher, and Dean Prideaux, both think the roll was read twice; once in the 4th, and again in the fifth year of Jehoiakim, ver. 8—10. and on their authority this chapter is divided. The great fast of the expiation, on which it is supposed Baruch read the roll, in the 4th year, was annually kept by the Jews on the 10th day of the month Tizri, which answers to our September; immediately before Nebuchadnezzar laid siege to Jerusalem.

Dr. Blayney is of a contrary opinion, and supposes the roll to have been read only once; for his arguments on this subject, see Blayney's Notes on Jeremiah in loc. Josephus mentions the roll as being read once in the 9th month of the 5th year of Jehoiakim.

Then Jeremiah called Baruch the son of Neriah: and Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book. And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up; I cannot go into the house of the LORD: therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon the fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities. It may be ^b they will present their supplication before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: for great is the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people. And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.

⁷¹ The year of the captivity must be dated from A.C. 606, the fourth year of Jehoiakim; for the decree of Cyrus was issued at the end of the seventy years, in the year 536. Some difficulty has arisen from an apparent difference between Daniel and Jeremiah. The latter, chap. xxv. ver. 1. dates the commencement of the captivity in the fourth of Jehoiakim; the former is supposed to date it in the third. On examining, however, the passage in Daniel, (Dan. i. ver. 1.) it will be remarked, that it only relates that Nebuchadnezzar came up to Jerusalem and besieged it. No date being assigned, ver. 2. to the captivity of the king, and the removal of his treasures; we may infer, according to Jeremiah, that the captivity actually took place in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and that Daniel begins his computation from the time that Nebuchadnezzar was sent by his father from Babylon on this expedition; which was in the latter end of the third year of Jehoiakim. After that, two months, at least, must have been spent in his march to the borders of Syria. There, in about the beginning of the fourth year of Jehoiakim, he fought the Egyptians, and, having overthrown them, besieged Carchemish, and took it. After this he reduced all the provinces of Syria, and Phenicia; in which having employed the greatest part of the year, in the beginning of October he laid siege to Jerusalem, and took it about a month after. This event is supposed to have taken place on the 18th of the month called Cisleu, which answers to our November; and this day has ever since been set apart by the Jews as an annual fast, in commemoration of this great calamity. On Jehoiakim stumbling himself, and submitting to become tributary, he is restored to his kingdom; and Nebuchadnezzar, hearing of his father's death, hurries across the desert to take possession of his empire; leaving his captives, in the care of his generals, to follow after. Before he removed from Jerusalem, he gave particular orders to Ashpenaz, the master of his eunuchs, to choose children of the royal family and nobility of the land, ver. 4. to take with him to Babylon, "to stand in the king's palace, and to whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans;" thereby exactly fulfilling the word of the Lord, spoken by Isaiah to Hezekiah king of Judah, above an hundred years before this event. JEREMIAH XXXVI. VER. 9, TO THE END.

9 And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of A.C. 605.
Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed A.C. 605.

The revelation first given to Adam was preserved during the deluge by Noah, the only individual, except his own family, that remained uncorrupt in the old world, and it was by him committed to the new. Idolatry, however, again sprang up soon after the Deluge; and, to prevent another total corruption, the language of mankind was confounded, and the world was divided into several distinct societies; yet so general was the idolatry that had contaminated the several colonies which had emigrated from Shinar, that, within four hundred years after the flood, the knowledge and worship of the one true God was once more in danger of being entirely lost. To prevent this fearful evil, instead of destroying again all flesh, the divine Wisdom revealed himself to Abraham; beginning with him to form a peculiar people, by whom the knowledge of the true God should be preserved and transmitted to all future nations. In pursuance of this gracious design, God commanded him to separate from his idolatrous kindred, and to go into a distant land; and, after this trial of his faith and obedience, the Almighty took him under his especial care; appeared to him, conversed with him, encouraged him by promises and blessings; and imparted to him new laws and religious ceremonies. Isaac and Jacob were made heirs of the same blessings: and when this family were grown numerous enough to be a people, the Almighty himself became their King. "With a mighty hand, and a stretched-out arm," he delivered them from Egyptian bondage; and, after a series of most wonderful miracles, to confirm their faith, and to destroy their idolatrous enemies—a passage is opened for them through the Red Sea—pillars of cloud and fire alternately direct their march; and the Almighty establishes his covenant with them on Mount Sinai, promising them every blessing, on condition that they observed his laws and statutes, and refrained from idolatry. At length they were put in possession of the land promised to their forefathers, Gen. xv. 18.; and, to furnish them with a most convincing proof of the imbecility of idol-gods, and of the great sin of idolatry, they were commissioned to destroy all the nations of Canaan who trusted in them. Still the Israelites, on every opportunity, shewed that they were not entirely alienated from the false worship of the neighbouring nations; and, for a long course of years, they were exercised with a variety of dispensations: when they were obedient to the laws and service of God, they were triumphant and prosperous; when they forsook him, they were in distress and bondage. Often as the people apostatized, idolatry never received support from the head of the nation till the time of Solomon, who was the first ruler that erected an idolatrous altar, and who bowed down before a graven image. With this act, idolatry may be considered as usurping the established dominion of the true religion, and to reign in her stead. The nation soon after divided: the ten tribes wholly revolted from the God of their fathers, and formed themselves into a distinct people. They resisted all the appeals of their prophets, the miracles of Elijah and Elisha, the judgments of God, the continued fulfilment of various predictions, and every other evidence of the truth of their Scriptures, and were at last taken captive at three several invasions by the kings of Assyria; by Tiglath-Pileser, in the reign of Ahaz; by Shalmaneser, in that of Hezekiah; and by Esar-haddon, in the reign of Manasseh.

The people of Judah, though frequently relapsing into idolatry, had never so entirely devoted

A.C. 605. a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem. Then read Baruch² in the book the words of Jeremiah in the 10 house of the LORD, in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the ^a^b entry of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.

themselves to it, as totally to renounce the worship of God: and they were still permitted to continue in the promised land more than one hundred years after the great captivity of the ten tribes by Sennacherib. During the whole of this period, they were constantly appealed to by judgments, prophecies, and promises, to repent of their idolatries, and to become wholly devoted to the God of their fathers. There seems to have been in the kingdom of Judah, an uninterrupted contest between the worshippers of Jehovah and those of idols: but the party of the latter so much predominated, that all the exertions of good kings, and the constant exhortations and denunciations of the prophets, were ineffectual to produce a reformation: the attachment of the Jews to the worship of the God of their fathers visibly and gradually declined, till an open and general apostasy threatened to ensue. The prophets of the Lord were insulted, imprisoned, and slain. Idolatry was openly advocated—its grossest superstitions resorted to—and the worship of Jehovah abandoned. Prosperity and adversity, prophecy and miracle, the desolations of war, the loss of power, wealth, pre-eminence, and liberty, were alike in vain inflicted, to reclaim this rebellious race. “The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint”—an universal degeneracy prevailed, and threatened in a short time to annihilate God's visible church upon earth. To wean the Jews from this universal idolatry, and to continue the knowledge of the true God in the world; not only to this single nation, but to all the future nations of the earth; God in his mercy inflicted a new judgment on his people, to the gracious effects of which we may perhaps, even to this day, consider ourselves indebted for the Hebrew Scriptures, and the very existence of the Christian Church.

After a succession of punishments, and every possible appeal to their feelings, and understandings, had been constantly and vainly made, the seventy years' captivity began. This dreadful calamity came upon them gradually; it was brought upon them for their sins, as Moses had foretold, Lev. xxvi. 30—36. and was the means decreed by divine Wisdom to effect their reformation. While their sad and desolate state naturally tended to excite in them serious reflections on their past conduct—while the recollection of their iniquities and idolatry would be still fresh in their memory, and the denunciations and predictions of their prophets were too faithfully accomplished, and too severely felt—they learnt to detest the cause of all these sufferings; to honour God, and to keep his laws. This dispensation was also calculated to spread the knowledge of God in those eastern countries where the Jewish people were stationed. Through the merciful interposition of divine Providence, some of the distinguished captives were raised to the highest posts of dignity and power in the courts both of Assyria and Persia; and the greatest monarchs, from their constancy and fidelity, openly confessed the living and true God, Dan. ii. 47, &c. iv. 34, &c.; and made decrees in favour of his worship, Esther viii. 7, and following verses, Dan. iii. 29. vi. 26. The great Cyrus was so well acquainted with the true God, that one of his first acts, after he obtained the empire of Persia, was to make a decree for the return of the Jews into their own country, and for the rebuilding of the temple, Ezra i. From all this it is evident, that the Jews in their captivity must have repented of their transgressions, and “must have known and seen that it was an evil thing and bitter, that they had forsaken the Lord their God;” for, during their appointed sojourning in strange lands, they were a burning and shining light to all the eastern countries. And thus, in this dispensation, the Almighty, in punishing his peculiar people, and in bringing about their reformation, made them the messengers of his glory and power, and the instruments of his mercy, in conveying to nations that were in “darkness and the shadow of death,” the knowledge of the one true God, the Creator and Preserver of the World.

² It has been already stated, that the roll of Jeremiah's prophecies is supposed to have been read twice. From ver. 9, and 10, of Jeremiah xxxvi. it appears that the second time it was read was on the fast day in the ninth month of the fifth year of Jehoiakim. This day of humiliation, in all probability, was appointed by the king or the Sanhedrim, in remembrance of some great calamity; as the great day of fasting and expiation annually observed by the Jews, was always held on the tenth day of the month Tisri. This fast, therefore, is generally supposed to have been instituted in commemoration of the calamity which had befallen Jerusalem on the same day of the preceding year, when Nebuchadnezzar took Jerusalem; and it is still observed by the Jews in reference to this event. This part of chapter xxxvi. is inserted here on the united authorities of Calmet, Prideaux, Lightfoot, Taylor, and Archbishop Usher.

A.C. 605.

11 When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, 12 had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD, then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber:
 and, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of 13 Hananiah, and all the princes. Then Micaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the 14 book in the ears of the people. Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come.
 So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and 15 came unto them. And they said unto him, Sit down now, and 16 read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears. Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely 17 tell the king of all these words. And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his 18 mouth? Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in 19 the book. Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.
 20 And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all 21 the words in the ears of the king. So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in 22 the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king. Now the king sat in the winterhouse in the ninth month: and there 23 was a fire on the hearth burning before him. And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on 24 the hearth. Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these 25 words. Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the 26 roll: but he would not hear them. But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son ° of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of ^{c Or, of the} Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch ^{king.}
 the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the LORD hid them.

27 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote 28 at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying, Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, 29 which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned. And thou

A.C. 605. shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast? Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king ³⁰ of Judah; He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: and his dead body shall be ^d cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost. And I will ^e punish him and his seed ³¹ and his servants for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them; but they hearkened not.

Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the ³² scribe, the son of Neriah; who wrote therein from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim the king of Judah had burned in the fire: and there were added besides ^f unto them many ^f like words.

2 KINGS XXIV. VER. 5.

Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, ⁵ are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

³ Jehoiakim rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar three years after that monarch had released him from fetters, and restored him to his kingdom. This division of the verse, though apparently very abrupt and singular, is unavoidable, from the necessity of attending to the history. Nebuchadnezzar, on this revolt, being probably prevented from going himself to Jerusalem, by being engaged in observing the motions of the Medes and Lydians, between whom, in the tenth year of Jehoiakim, he was called upon to mediate a peace, sent orders to all his lieutenants, and governors of provinces, to make war upon the weakened kingdom of Judah, and to ravage the land on every side. This brought upon Jehoiakim all the neighbouring nations which were subject to the Babylonian power. At the end of three years, during which time these different people had been constantly harassing the surrounding country, they at length united against Jerusalem. Jehoiakim, it is generally supposed, was taken prisoner in a sally which he made upon them; and being slain with a sword, according to the prediction of Jeremiah, his dead body was ignominiously cast out into the highway, without one of the gates of Jerusalem.—Prideaux's Connection, vol. i. p. 95.

2 CHRONICLES XXXVI. VER. 8.

8 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah: and ^{A.C. 599.}

 a Jehoiachin was eighteen ⁴ years old

⁴ On comparing 2 Kings xxiv. 8. with the parallel passage 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9. we observe, that in the first of these Jehoiachin is said to have been eighteen when he began to reign; and, in the other, that he was only eight years old. The difference may be reconciled, either by supposing that the custom of uniting the successor to the throne with its actual possessor, which seems to have uniformly existed in the kingdom of Judah, had been here adopted; or, as Lightfoot conjectures, that the commencement of the captivity is referred to in 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9.; and that this passage signifies, that Jehoiachin began to reign in the eighth year of the first captivity by Nebuchadnezzar. Unmoved either by the warning of Jeremiah, the calamities of his country, or the fate of his father, Jehoiachin continued to "do evil in the sight of the Lord." His conduct provoked a bitter declaration of God's wrath against him, by the mouth of the prophet Jeremiah, and it was as bitterly executed upon him. After Jehoiakim's death, Jerusalem was still besieged by the governors of the provinces, and the other officers of Nebuchadnezzar; and, at the end of three months, this king himself, having settled the affairs of Asia Minor, advanced with the royal army, and laid siege in person to that city. Jehoiachin, finding it was not possible to defend Jerusalem, surrendered it, with himself, his mother, his princes, and his servants, to Nebuchadnezzar. He was immediately put into chains, and carried prisoner to Babylon, where he continued until Nebuchadnezzar's death, shut up in prison, for at least thirty-seven years.

The latter part of this prophecy (Jer. xxii. 29.), is thus translated by Dr. Hales :

Oh earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord.
 Thus saith the Lord, Write this man childless,
 A man who shall not prosper in his days :
 For none of his seed shall prosper,
 Sitting upon the throne of David,
 And reigning any more over Judah.

When Jehoiachin was deposed by Nebuchadnezzar, Zedekiah was made king; and none of Jehoiachin's family ever came to the throne. For allowing that Sheshbazzar (who was appointed governor of Judea under the title of Zerubbabel, at the return from the captivity in the first year of Cyrus, Ezra i. 8.), was the lineal descendant of Jeconiah, 1 Chron. iii. 17, 18, 19. Matt. i. 12.; yet he was merely a provincial governor, Haggai i. 1.; a mere vassal of the king of Persia, in whom the sovereignty rested, and therefore he could not be considered as sitting on the throne of David, and ruling in Judah. Not any of the kings that reigned afterwards in Judah were even of the family of David, till Christ himself came; not of the seed of Jehoiachin, but descended from the same ancestor by a collateral line. The prophet emphatically and solemnly calls upon the earth, to witness the dissolution of the temporal kingdom of the house of David, and predicts, in a beautiful metaphor before used by Isaiah, the spiritual kingdom that should succeed it (compare Jer. xxiii. 5. with Isaiah xi. 1.); and thus, at the very moment when the failure of Solomon's house is denounced, God in his mercy declares he will raise from the root of Jesse an everlasting kingdom, a righteous Branch, to live and to flourish for ever. The twenty-third chapter begins with denunciations of woe against all those evil shepherds who scattered, instead of attending to the flock. Zedekiah is generally supposed to be alluded to as one of the evil pastors, ver. 1, 2. From ver. 3—9, the people are consoled with gracious promises of future blessings, of their return from captivity, and of

A.C. 599. when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months. And his mother's name was Nehushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem. And he did that which was evil 9 in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done.

JEREMIAH XXII. VER. 24, TO THE END.

As I live, saith the LORD, though Coniah the son of Jehoia- 24 kim king of Judah were the signet upon my right hand, yet would I pluck thee thence ;

And I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life, 25 and into the hand of them whose face thou fearest, even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans.

And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee, 26 into another country, where ye were not born ; and there shall ye die.

^b Heb. lift up their mind. But to the land whereunto they ^b desire to return, thither 27 shall they not return.

Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol ? is he a vessel 28 wherein is no pleasure ? wherefore are they cast out, he and his seed, and are cast into a land which they know not ?

O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the LORD. 29

the glorious establishment of Messiah's kingdom. Jeremiah then, with a broken heart, seems to revert again to the ruin that awaited the house of David, and, in proclaiming its decay, denounces the just judgments of God on those false prophets who had predicted its duration, who had deceived the nation to its ruin ; and whose bad examples, and evil doctrines, had so largely contributed to the corruption of the visible church. He exhorts the people not to trust in them, and threatens with severe punishment all those who, in defiance of this command, still continue to give ear to their deceitful dreams, and calls the word of the Lord spoken by his true prophets "a burden," which signifies a calamitous prophecy, always portending evil. See 1 Kings xxii. 8, where Ahaz makes the same objection to Micaiah. The judgment threatened in the two last verses of this chapter is still fulfilling, and the Jews will remain "an everlasting reproach," and a "perpetual shame," till they shall be finally restored to the city of their fathers.—Lightfoot ; Blayney ; Hales.

JEREMIAH LII. VER. 1, 2, 3.

Zedekiah was ^a one and twenty years old when he ^b began to ¹ reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD, ² according to all that Jehoiakim had done. For through the ³ anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

JEREMIAH XXIV ⁶.

¹ Under the type of good and bad figs, ⁴ he foresheweth the restoration of them that were in captivity, ⁸ and the desolation of Zedekiah and the rest.

The LORD shewed me, and, behold, two baskets of figs were ¹ set before the temple of the LORD, after that Nebuchadrezzar ^c king of Babylon had carried away captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths, from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon. One basket had very good figs, even like the figs ² that are first ripe: and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, ^d they were so bad. Then said the ³ LORD unto me, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

⁶ The date and place of this chapter are assigned in ver. 1. The prophecy it contains must have been delivered at the very beginning of Zedekiah's reign, as Jehoiachin's captivity is mentioned as having lately taken place. Under the type of good and bad figs, God represents to Jeremiah the different manner in which he would deal with his people. To those Jews that were taken into Babylon he promises restoration and peace; while Zedekiah and his subjects are threatened with an utter dispersion, and the total desolation of their land. The captivity of the former would be "for their good," and the means of their preservation; the liberty and security of the latter, "by filling up the measure of their iniquities," would tend to their final destruction.—Blayney; Prideaux; Lightfoot.

8 And as the evil ^b figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; ^{A.C. 599.} surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king ^{h ch. xxix.} of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that ^{17.} remain in this land, and them that dwell in the land of Egypt:

§ 5. Prediction of the Duration of the Captivity.

JEREMIAH XXIX. VER. 1—14 ^{7.}

1 Now these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem unto the residue of the elders which were carried away captives, and to the priests, and to the prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried 597.
 2 away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon; (after that ^a Jeconiah ^{a 2 Kin. xxiv. 12, &c.} the king, and the queen, and the ^b eunuchs, the princes of Judah ^{b Or, chamberlains.} and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were de-
 3 parted from Jerusalem;) by the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of 4 Babylon) saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, unto all that are carried away captives, whom I have 5 caused to be carried away from Jerusalem unto Babylon; build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the 6 fruit of them; take ye wives, and beget sons and daughters;

⁷ Dr. Blayney observes, (notes on Jeremiah in loc. p. 179.) "There is no person that can read this chapter with attention without being sensible of an embarrassment and incoherence in particular parts of it, which leaves a suspicion of some capital defect either in the text, or its arrangement. Happily the LXX are found to step in here to our relief, by evidencing a transposition of ver. 15, which they have placed, where undoubtedly it ought to stand, immediately before ver. 21. This emendation I have adopted, as by it a due order and connection is restored, both in the place from whence the verse is removed, and in that to which it is transferred. A sufficient proof of its authenticity." In addition to which it may be observed, that the false prophets alluded to in ver. 15, are mentioned by name in ver. 21.

The letter of Jeremiah, sent to Babylon by the messengers of king Zedekiah, was written to exhort the captive Jews to accommodate themselves to their present circumstances—to provide for themselves in the country whither they were carried, as settled inhabitants of the same, and to conduct themselves in every respect as such; praying for the peace of the city. He assures them their captivity would last seventy years, and it was in vain to expect any deliverance till the time that God had appointed. He informs them of what would happen to their brethren left behind at Jerusalem, who, so far from being able to effect their deliverance, would be visited by "the sword, the famine, and pestilence." He denounces God's curse on those false prophets who had deceived the people with hopes and promises of a speedy restoration. Nebuchadnezzar, on finding that the Jews were prevented from settling in the places assigned to them by the vain predictions of their false teachers, ordered Zedekiah and Ahab (who are supposed to have been the two elders that conspired against Susannah,) to be seized, and roasted to death. This letter being read to the Jewish captives, many of those who believed in the promises of their pretended prophets, and who were unwilling to submit to their appointed chastisement, requested Shemaiah the Nehelamite, to write by the same messengers to Zephaniah, the second priest of the temple, complaining of the conduct of Jeremiah, and requesting that he might be reproved for the same. A severe judgment is, in consequence, pronounced upon Shemaiah.

A.C. 597. and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; that ye may be increased there, and not diminished. And seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, ^c deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed. For they prophesy ^d falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the LORD.

For thus saith the LORD, That after ^e seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place. For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an ^f expected end. Then shall ye ^g call upon me, and ye shall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. And ye shall seek me, and I will find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart. And I will be found of you, saith the LORD: and I will turn away your captivity, and I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, and will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, ^k to be a curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, among all the nations whither I have driven them: because they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which ^l I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

restoration of the people from their captivity was clearly foretold. The temporal deliverance of the Jews from Babylon is always regarded as a type of their spiritual and glorious redemption; and both these events are frequently connected together in the prophetic writings; the accomplishment of the former affording the Jews the strongest possible evidence, that the latter, how remote soever its period, would in like manner be effected at the appointed time, by the interposition of Divine Providence. These chapters predict not only the restoration of the captivity of Babylon, but the restoration of the captivity of Israel also; those ten tribes that were carried away by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria: and the whole tenor of the prophecy gives us reason to expect a complete and universal deliverance; when God will manifest himself, as formerly, the God and Patron of all the families of Israel, and not of a few only. This great redemption remains to be accomplished in the reign of the Messiah, when there can be no doubt, that this prophecy of the final spiritual establishment of the Jews, will be as faithfully fulfilled as that which predicted their temporal return to the holy city.

The 30th chapter opens with a description of the distress and consternation that should fall upon all nations preparatory to the deliverance of Jacob. Israel (from ver. 10. to 18.) is promised restoration, after a severe chastisement for the multitude of its offences. This is followed by an enumeration of the blessings and privileges the Jews would enjoy on their admission to God's favour; and ver. 23 and 24 declare, that the anger of Jehovah should not subside, till all his enemies are destroyed; and then, and not till then, an entire reconciliation should take place between the Lord, and all the families of Israel, (see xxxi. 1.) The second part of this prophecy, beginning at ver. 2, is marked by a sudden transition to a more distant period of time, and represented in a vision, (ver. 26.) God announces therein the renewal of his ancient love for Israel, and promises them speedy restoration and happiness. He promises to conduct them to Zion, and to "turn their mourning into joy," that "they shall not sorrow any more at all."

Ramah was a city of Benjamin, near which, Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, was buried. Rachel is represented (ver. 15 to 18.) as just risen from her grave, refusing to be comforted for her children, who are all either slain, or gone into exile. The Evangelist applies this prophecy to Herod's massacre of the infants at Bethlehem, (Matt. ii. 17, 18.); but this cruel destruction could not have been the primary signification of the prophecy, as the sequel consoles Rachel with the promise, that her children were not lost for ever, that they should still reward her care, and "come again from the land of the enemy." Ephraim is afterwards described as "bemoaning himself" for his past disobedience; and, on his penitence, God receives him once more as his darling child, and promises to "have mercy upon him." The "virgin of Israel" is exhorted (ver. 21, 22.) to hasten her return; and, for her encouragement, she is told, that God would work a miracle in her favour, and would enable her, though apparently so weak, to overcome and prevail against all her powerful enemies. The vision closes with an allusion to the circumstances that attended the first introduction of the Jews to the land of Canaan, when each family had a separate portion assigned them for their own cultivation and subsistence; and each individual, in consequence, became a husbandman, and feeder of flocks. God promises his people, they shall again dwell in the "mountain of holiness," and cultivate it according to their ancient institutions, redeemed from every want and infirmity. After Jeremiah awakes from his vision, or dream, God assures him, that he would be more anxious to restore Israel and Judah, than he had ever been to destroy them. The meaning of the proverbial expression, "the fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge," seems to have been founded on what is often declared in Scripture, that "God visiteth the sins of the fathers upon the children." It is here promised, that no man hereafter should suffer for the sins of another; but that "every one shall die for his own iniquity," only. God declares he will make with Israel and Judah a better covenant than he did with their forefathers; that they shall continue his people as long as the sun and moon endure; and that Jerusalem shall be again built with enlarged boundaries, not to be "plucked up nor thrown down any more for ever."—Blayney in loc.

JEREMIAH XXVII⁹.

- 1 In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, 595.
- 2 saying, Thus^a saith the LORD to me; Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck, and send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto
- 4 Zedekiah king of Judah; and command them^b to say unto their masters, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel;
- 5 Thus shall ye^c say unto your masters; I have made the earth,

^a Or, both the LORD said.

^b Or, concerning their masters, saying.

⁹ By some error of the transcribers, the word Jehoiakim has been inserted in the first verse of chapter xxvii. which is placed here on the authority of Dr. Blayney. Lightfoot would insert it the fourth of Jehoiakim, on the supposition that Jeremiah spoke prophetically both of Zedekiah's reign, and of the surrounding kings who sent messengers to him to make a league against Egypt. It is so difficult to reconcile the common reading with what follows, that Mr. Lowth acknowledges that the least forced way of solving the difficulty, is, to say that Jehoiakim crept into the text instead of Zedekiah, by the negligence of the scribes. We accordingly find זְדַקְיָהוּ (Zedekiah) in one MS. of good repute and antiquity; in the margin of another, and most probably it was so in the text of a third, where the ν was evidently ν at first, and the remainder of the word is upon an erasure. The Syriac and the Oxford MS. of the Arabic version also read Zedekiah.

It is evident, Dr. Blayney further observes, (Notes on Jeremiah in loc. p. 201.) that the prophecies contained both in this chapter and that which follows, belong to the fourth year of Zedekiah's reign. About this time ambassadors came to Zedekiah from the kings of Edom, Moab, and other neighbouring nations, to solicit him, as it should seem, to join with them in a confederacy against the king of Babylon. On this occasion Jeremiah is ordered to put bands and yokes about his neck, and to send them afterwards to the before mentioned kings, declaring the sovereignty of Nebuchadnezzar, and his successors, to be of divine appointment, and promising peace and protection to such as submitted quietly, but menacing evil in case of resistance, (ver. 1—11.) A like admonition is given to Zedekiah, advising him not to expose himself and his people to certain ruin, by listening to the suggestions of false prophets, and revolting from the service of the king of Babylon, (ver. 12—15.) The priests and all the people are also warned not to give credit to the false prophets, who taught them to expect a speedy restoration of the vessels which had been carried to Babylon, together with Jeconiah. Instead of which it is foretold, that the remaining vessels in the house of God, and in the king's house at Jerusalem, should be carried after the other, and should not return till the appointed period of Judah's captivity was at an end, (ver. 16, to the end.) In chap. xxviii. ver. 1. the precise date of the preceding prophecy, which gave rise to the transaction now related, is determined. Hananiah was one of those false prophets who deceived the Jews with the hope that the yoke of the king of Babylon would be broken "within two full years," and the captives restored. Jeremiah consents (ver. 5—9.) to acknowledge Hananiah to be a prophet of the Lord, should his prediction be accomplished: in confirmation of which the latter takes the yoke from Jeremiah's neck, and breaks it, (ver. 10.) Jeremiah is then commanded to declare that the yokes of wood, that Hananiah had broken, should be made, unto these nations, yokes of iron; and further, to convince the people that he was not a true prophet, but that he "taught rebellion against the Lord," his death, within the year, is predicted, and takes place two months afterwards.

 which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation will I punish, saith the LORD, with the

 Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon: for they prophesy a 10 should drive you out, and ye should perish. But the nations 11 that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, those will I let remain still in their own land, saith the LORD; and they shall till it, and dwell therein.

I spake also to Zedekiah king of Judah according to all these 12 words, saying, Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and his people, and live. Why will ye 13 die, thou and thy people, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the LORD hath spoken against the nation that will not serve the king of Babylon? Therefore hearken not 14 unto you. For I have not sent them, saith the LORD, yet they 15 prophesy ^g a lie in my name; that I might drive you out, and that ye might perish, ye, and the prophets that prophesy unto

 Thus saith the LORD; Hearken not to the words of your prophets that prophesy unto you, saying, Behold, the vessels of the LORD's house shall now shortly be brought again from Babylon: for they prophesy a lie unto you. Hearken not unto 17 them; serve the king of Babylon, and live: wherefore should this city be laid waste? But if they be prophets, and if the 18 word of the LORD be with them, let them now make intercession to the LORD of hosts, that the vessels which are left in the house of the LORD, and in the house of the king of Judah, and at Jerusalem, go not to Babylon.

JEREMIAH XXVIII.

- 1 And it came to pass the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, and in the fifth month, that Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet, which was of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and of all the people, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon. Within ¹ two full years will I bring again into this place all the vessels of the LORD's house, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon: and I will bring again to this place Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the ^m captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD: for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.
- 5 Then the prophet Jeremiah said unto the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood in the house of the LORD, even the prophet Jeremiah said, Amen: the LORD do so: the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon into this place. Nevertheless hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people; the prophets that have been before me and before thee of old prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence. The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.
- 10 Then Hananiah the prophet took the ⁿ yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, and brake it. And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years. And the prophet Jeremiah went his way.
- 12 Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Go and tell Hananiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast broken the

For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; I have 14 put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him: and I have given him the beasts of the field also.

Then said the prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, 15 Hear now, Hananiah; The LORD hath not sent thee; but thou makest this people to trust in a lie. Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: 16 this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught ^o rebellion against the LORD. So Hananiah the prophet died the same 17 year in the seventh month.

¹⁰ Chapters xlviii. and xlix. are placed in this Section on account of their apparent connexion with the two preceding chapters. It is not improbable, that (immediately after the death of Hananiah, whose warmest adherents must now be convinced of the deception he had practised on them, and the fallacy of his predictions) Jeremiah directed the king and the people to his own prophecies, in the hope they would now be persuaded by them to yield to the yoke of the king of Babylon. He wished them to save themselves from the fatal desolations which would attend those nations that were leagued against that monarch, in direct opposition to the commands of God, who had "given all these lands into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar." Many passages and expressions will be found in this chapter similar to those of Isaiah xv. and xvi. in a prophecy against Moab. (Compare also Isaiah xxiv. 17, 18. with ver. 43, 44. of this chapter.) These prophecies concerning the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, and other neighbouring nations, are supposed to have been fulfilled about the time of the siege of Tyre. Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Amos, and Zephaniah, prophesied in succession against these people. The only date that the chapters bear is contained in ver. 34, and it seems probable, therefore, that the prediction against Elam was uttered soon after those in the former part of the chapter, but not added to them till the time of Ezra.

Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces.

For out of the north there cometh up a nation against her, 3 which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the children 4 of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the LORD their ¹¹ We learn from chapter li. 59. that Zedekiah went to Babylon attended by Seraiah, and probably for the purpose of paying the tribute which Nebuchadnezzar had imposed on him. The prophet embraced the opportunity of sending various predictions to his brethren of the captivity. Ezekiel had not yet received his commission to execute the prophetic office, and it belonged therefore to Jeremiah to watch over their spiritual welfare.

These chapters contain a most animated and distinct prophecy of the fall of Babylon, intermixed and contrasted with predictions concerning the return of Israel and Judah to Zion; who were not, like their predecessors, to be destroyed, but on their repentance and conversion to be pardoned and restored. This prophecy was delivered in the fourth year of the reign of Zedekiah, (ch. li. 59;) and Jeremiah desired after it had been read at Babylon, it should be sunk, to rise no more, in the river Euphrates; thereby intimating the perpetual destruction of that proud city. More than two thousand years have passed since Cyrus took possession of Babylon, from which time it began to decay, and has now, for a long period, been "a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby." (ch. li. 43.) So literally has this prediction been accomplished!

JEREMIAH XXXIV. VER. 1—10.

- 1 The word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, ^d when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and all his army, and all the kingdoms of the earth ^e of his dominion, and all the people, fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities thereof, ^d 2 Kin. xxv. 1, &c. ch. lii. 4.
- 2 saying, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire: and ^f thou shalt not escape ^e Heb. the dominion of his hand.
- 3 out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; and thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and ^g he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and ^f ch. xxxii. 4.
- 4 thou shalt go to Babylon. Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword: but thou shalt die in peace: and with the burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, so shall they burn odours for thee; and they will lament thee, saying, Ah, lord! for I have pronounced the word, ^g Heb. his mouth shall speak to thy mouth.
- 5 saith the LORD. Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem, when the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and against Azekah: for these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah ¹³.
- 6 This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD,

¹² In the arrangement of the circumstances which took place at Jerusalem between the approach of the Chaldean army and the eventual capture of the city, I have been principally guided by the accurate and learned Prideaux. The contents of Jer. xxxiv. ver. 1. sufficiently shew that this verse may be rightly placed first, as introductory to the whole account. As Jeremiah was put into prison the first time, chap. xxxvii. 4. while the Chaldeans were besieging the city, that is, at the beginning of the tenth year, and before the army of Pharaoh Hophra came from Egypt, it is evident that this part of the chapter precedes in historical order both the account of his imprisonment, and the delivery of the prophecy, (Jer. xxxiv. 1—6.) which is supposed to have occasioned his confinement. Blayney and other commentators differ from Prideaux; and think the prediction contained in the twenty-first chapter was the cause of the prophet's punishment. Both these chapters announce the burning of the city, and the captivity of Zedekiah: but in Jer. xxxiv. 1. we read the prediction was delivered on the commencement of the siege, by immediate inspiration, without any application from the king; while Nebuchadnezzar was still engaged in fighting against the cities of Judah, and had perhaps just reached Jerusalem. The latter prediction, (chap. xxi.) on the contrary, was spoken in reply to the message from the king, sent by Pashur and Zephaniah, after his imprisonment: and in it Jeremiah recapitulates his first prediction, with some additional denunciations; upon which he is more strictly confined in the dungeon of Malchaiah.

¹³ After the Jews had discovered that all their cities were taken but Lachish and Azekah, terrified at these losses, and apprehensive of the siege then ready to be laid to Jerusalem, they made a shew of returning to God, and of observing his laws, (see ver. 9.) They enter into a solemn covenant with God, and immediately issue a proclamation "that every man should let his manservant and every man his maidservant, being an Hebrew, or an Hebrewess, go free," Deut. xv. 12. This covenant, however, was broken as soon as the Jews considered themselves relieved from danger, by the Chaldean army retiring from Jerusalem.

A.C. 590. after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the them ; That every man should let his manservant, and every man his maidservant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free ; that none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother. Now when all the princes, and all the people, ¹⁰ which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his manservant, and every one his maidservant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed, and let them go.

 of Nebuchadrezzar. For then the king of Babylon's army be- 2 sieged Jerusalem : and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.
 For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Where- 3 escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak

¹⁴ The place and date of these chapters are assigned in chap. xxxii. ver. 2. By purchasing the field at Anathoth, on the prospect of not being able, under the present circumstances of the city, to take possession of the land, Jeremiah confirmed to the people his own firm belief in the truth of all the predictions which he had been commanded of God to utter to his brethren. This purchase pre-figured, that although Judah and Jerusalem should be laid waste, and the inhabitants led into captivity, yet a day would come when there should be a general restoration, the land flourish again, possessions bought and sold, as in former times, and the lands enjoyed by their rightful owners, ver. 36. to the end. In the xxxiii^d chapter God reveals his gracious purpose of healing the wounds of Jerusalem. He foretells that the land, whose desolation they now deplore, shall be filled again with the voice of them "that shall bring the sacrifice of praise," and "shall be an habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down." He promises them a kingdom in which a branch of the house of David shall rule in righteousness ; and declares his covenant with David, and the priesthood of the sons of Levi, to be as lasting as the covenant of day and night ; and, to remove the reproach cast on Israel and Judah, God renews his protestations of infallibly restoring the seed of Jacob, and of appointing the seed of David to rule over them for ever.

From the Babylonish captivity to the coming of Christ, David was without a successor of his family sitting upon the throne of Judah or Israel. And from the destruction of Jerusalem to the present time, the Jews have had neither a king nor a regular priesthood. It is evident, therefore, the time is not yet arrived for the actual accomplishment of this prophecy ; it remains to be fulfilled in those days when Israel and Judah shall be restored under Christ, THEIR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Admitting this, and that all the families of Israel shall again be re-established in their own possessions, what improbability is there, that the two families of David, and Levi, may actually revert also to the ancient privileges, subject only to the supreme authority of the Messiah, and continue to enjoy them, as is here expressly declared, in uninterrupted succession, to the end of the world ?—Blayney, notes on Jeremiah, p. 222.—Prideaux's Connection.

- 5 and he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith the LORD: though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper. A.C. 589.
- 6 And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying, behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth: for the ^cright of redemption is thine to buy it. So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD. And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and weighed him the money, even ^dseventeen shekels of silver. And I ^esubscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances. So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open: and I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.
- 13, 14 And I charged Baruch before them, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days. For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.
- 16 Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the LORD, saying, Ah, Lord GOD! behold, thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing ^ftoo hard for thee: thou shewest ^glovingkindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them: the Great, the Mighty God, the LORD of hosts, is his name, great in counsel, and mighty in ^hwork: for thine ⁱeyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men: to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings: which hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men; and hast made thee a name, as at this day; and ^khast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with great terror; and hast given them this land, which thou didst swear to their § 14. The Destruction of the Philistines and the Egyptians foretold.

JEREMIAH XLVII.

The destruction of the Philistines.

1 The word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Philistines, before that Pharaoh smote ^a Gaza ¹⁵. a Heb. Azzah.

¹⁵ As no history, either sacred or profane, has mentioned the capture of Gaza by the king of Egypt, there is no means of ascertaining the precise date of the delivery of this prophecy. Lightfoot has placed it in the ninth year of Zedekiah; on the supposition that Gaza was taken by Pharaoh's army soon after this time. In the fourth verse the Philistines are called the remnant of the country of Caphtor. This expression perhaps will serve as a clue to the right understanding of the history. On consulting the map of Palestine, we find that Gaza was a city of the tribe of Judah, and that it was near the sea coast. The circumstances related concerning it in the Old Testament prove the great importance attached to it, both by the Israelites and the surrounding nations. It was given to Judah, in the division of the country by Joshua; and it was one of the five principalities of the Philistines towards the southern extremity of Canaan. It was frequently taken and retaken by the Philistines and Hebrews; and, after having been lost by Ahaz, it was finally conquered by Hezekiah, (2 Kings xviii. 8.)

These contests for the possession of Gaza are supposed, by Calmet, to have been occasioned by its favourable situation for commerce. The revolutions of preceding ages, however, furnish us with more powerful reasons for these contentions.

In Gen. x. 13, 14. we read Misraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim, and Pathrusim, and Casluhim, (out of whom came Philistim) and Caphtorim. And in Deut. ii. 20—23. Moses, in commanding the Israelites not to interfere with the possessions of the Ammonites, leaves his immediate subject, and gives a short history of the conquest of the Zamzummins by the Ammonites, in a prior age. This conquest leads him to allude to the defeat of the Horim by the Edomites, and in ver. 23. to the overthrow of the Avims by the Caphtorim; his words are, "the Avims which dwelt in Hazerim, even unto Azzah, the Caphtorims, which came out of Caphtor, destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead." Azzah is the same as Gaza: the y, which commences the Hebrew name, being by the Septuagint pronounced as a G.

From comparing these expressions, it evidently appears that the Philistim, who may be considered the same as the Egyptians, invaded Palestine, (to which they gave their name) by the south-west: and leaving the country of the Caphtorim, took possession of the sea coast as far as Gaza; before the Israelites entered the Holy Land on the eastern side over the river Jordan. Bishop Cumberland, in his Dissertation on Deut. ii. 23, has plainly shewn that Caphtor was the same as Pelusium; and on referring to the map, it will be seen that the Pelusiac mouth of the Nile is the nearest branch of that river to the country thus invaded. By keeping possession of Gaza, or of Ashkelon, on one side, and Pelusium on the other, the Egyptians and Philistines maintained under their dominion the whole of this part of the sea coast; a territory eminently valuable to them. Besides which, it was the conquest of their ancestors, and a sure protection to their own territory: it was a certain source of revenue, and afforded an easy admission into the country of the Israelites, whenever the distresses of the Jews, or their own ambition, prompted them to make an invasion. The Egyptians and the Philistines therefore, who were the remnant of the country of Caphtor, seeing at this juncture the distress of Judea, most probably attempted to regain possession from the Jews, or Assyrians, of the sea coast, from Pelusium to Ashkelon. Egypt and Assyria were the two powerful nations who were contending for empire: the impoverished and crumbling dominion of Judea was divided between them at their pleasure. The king of Assyria invaded it from the east and north, had taken all its fortified towns, except Jerusalem, Lachish, and Azekah, which two last places were not far distant from Gaza. I have supposed, therefore, that on Nebuchadnezzar's rapid success in Palestine, the king of Egypt, in union with the Philistines, was making an attempt to recover possession of the much desired territory from Pelusium to Ashkelon. In his progress through the country "he smote Gaza," and this conquest, with the proximity of the Egyptian army to those divisions of Nebuchadnezzar's army which were besieging Lachish and Azekah, occasioned the raising of the siege of Jerusalem by the larger part of the Chaldean army: on seeing which, the Egyptians retreated to their own country, and left Zedekiah and the Jews to their fate.

Dr. Blayney suggests the idea, that Gaza might have been taken by the Egyptians, on their retiring before the army of Nebuchadnezzar: but it is not probable that an army, which was hastily retreating to its own territory for safety, would stop before a strongly fortified town, besiege, and capture it. Others have supposed that it was taken by Pharaoh Necho, on his return from the battle of Megiddo, where Josiah was killed, and when all the country submitted to his victorious arms. But we have no authority, either for supposing that the whole country submitted to Pharaoh, or that Jeremiah should predict the destruction of the Philistines, on the capture of that town, more than on the capture of any other. On considering the various authorities, it seems most probable, that the capture of Gaza must either have been the cause of Nebuchadnezzar's raising the siege of Jerusalem; or, that it was taken about the time when Lachish and Azekah were besieged by the Chaldean army.—Vide Bishop Cumberland's Origines Gentium, Tract 2nd; Faber's *Pag. ¹⁷ And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans ¹¹ was ^a broken up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land ¹² of Benjamin, ^b to separate himself thence in the midst of the people. And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain ¹³ of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans. Then said ¹⁴ Jeremiah, It is ^c false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes. Wherefore the princes were wroth with ¹⁵ Jeremiah, and smote him, and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe: for they had made that the prison.

When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon, and into the ¹⁶ ^d cabins, and Jeremiah had remained there many days; then ¹⁷ Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. Moreover ¹⁸ Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison? Where are now your prophets ¹⁹ which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land? Therefore hear ²⁰ now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: ^e let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there. Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit ²¹ Jeremiah into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

¹⁸ For the reasons why the twenty-first chapter is inserted here, see a preceding note on chap. xxxiv. 1—8. In a loathsome dungeon, the prophet still retains his unshaken fidelity and constancy, and repeats his former predictions with unwavering firmness; he exhorts the royal house to execute judgment and justice. The king and people, even to the last, are offered terms of mercy and acceptance, on obedience and submission to the divine will; “Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death,” ver. 8, 9. § 18. Jeremiah committed to the Dungeon of Malchiah.

JEREMIAH XXXVIII ¹⁹.

1 Jeremiah, by a false suggestion, is put into the dungeon of Malchiah. 7 Ebed-melech, by suit, getteth him some enlargement. 14 Upon secret conference he counselleth the king by yielding to save his life. 24 By the king's instructions he concealeth the conference from the princes.

Then Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son ¹ of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur the son of Malchiah, heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto ² all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD, ^aHe that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live. Thus saith ³ the LORD, This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it. Therefore the ⁴ princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, let this man be put to death: for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the ⁵ ^bwelfare of this people, but the hurt. Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you. Then took they Jeremiah, and ⁶ cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son ^cof Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

Now when Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, one of the eunuchs ⁷ which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon; the king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin; Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and ⁸ spake to the king, saying, My lord the king, these men have ⁹ done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and ^dhe is like to die for hunger in the place where he is: for there is no more bread

d Heb. he will die.

¹⁹ That this chapter ought to be inserted here, is evident from ver. 28; "Jeremiah abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken." The place of chap. xxxix. 15, 16, 17, 18, is assigned by comparing ver. 15. with the last verse of the preceding chapter, and by the events alluded to in that chapter.

10 in the city. Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the ^{A.C. 588.} Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men ^{e Heb. in} with thee, ^{thine hand.} and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before 11 he die. So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence 12 old cast clouts and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah. And Ebed-melech the Ethio-
 13 pian said unto Jeremiah, Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine armholes under the cords. And Jere-
 14 miah did so. So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

15 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the ^{f Or, princ-} third entry that is in the house of the ^{pal.} LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, I will ask thee a 16 thing; hide nothing from me. Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken
 17 unto me? So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, As the LORD liveth, that made us this soul, I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of 18 these men that seek thy life. Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; If thou wilt assuredly go forth unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be 19 burned with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house: but if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and thou shalt not escape out of 20 their hand. And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock me. But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. Obey, I beseech thee, the voice of the LORD, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well 21 unto thee, and thy soul shall live. But if thou refuse to go forth, this is the word that the LORD hath shewed me: and, behold, all the women that are left in the king of Judah's house shall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes, and those women shall say, ^{g Heb. Men} Thy friends have set thee on, and have ^{of thy peace.} prevailed against thee: thy feet are sunk in the mire, and they 22 are turned away back. So they shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans: and thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon: and ^{h Heb. thou} thou shalt cause this city to be burned ^{shall burn,} with fire. ^{&c.}

23 Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of 24 these words, and thou shalt not die. But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say

A.C. 588. unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; also what the king said unto thee: then thou shalt say unto 26 them, I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there. Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and 27 he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. So ⁱ they left off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived. So Jeremiah abode in the court of 28 the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

i Heb. they were silent from him.

JEREMIAH XXXIX. VER. 15, TO THE END.

Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, while he 15 was shut up in the court of the prison, saying, Go and speak to 16 Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good: and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee. But I will deliver thee in 17 that day, saith the LORD: and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid. For I will 18 surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee: because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

JEREMIAH LII. VER. 5, 6.

So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king 5 Zedekiah. And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the 6 month, the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.

JEREMIAH LII. VER. 7—11.

Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, 7 and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about:) and they went by the way of the plain. But the army of the Chaldeans pur- 8 sued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered from him. Then they 9 took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Psalm xciv.—This Psalm is enumerated by Dr. Gray, from Calmet, among those which were written during some of the captivities and distresses of the church. Its precise date is not known. It is not improbable that it was written on the destruction of the city and temple. On comparing the fifth verse with the fourteenth, it appears that it was written to console the church of God in its distress; and that distress was apparently a total ruin of the church, which God, however, would not cast off; neither would he forsake his inheritance.

¶ A Song or Psalm ^t of Asaph.

Keep not thou silence, O God: hold not thy peace, and be 1 not still, O God.

- 2 For, lo, thine enemies make a tumult: and they that hate thee have lifted up the head. A.C. 588.
- 3 They have taken crafty counsel against thy people, and consulted against thy hidden ones.
- 4 They have said, Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation; that the name of Israel may be no more in remembrance.
- 5 For they have consulted together with one ^u consent: they are confederate against thee: u Heb. heart.
- 6 The tabernacles of Edom, and the Ishmaelites; of Moab, and the Hagarenes;
- 7 Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek; the Philistines with the inhabitants of Tyre;
- 8 Assur also is joined with them: ^x they have holpen the children of Lot. Selah. x Heb. they have been an arm to the children of Lot.
- 9 Do unto them as unto the ^y Midianites; as to ^z Sisera, as to Jabin, at the brook of Kison:
- 10 Which perished at En-dor: they became as dung for the earth. y Judg. vii. 22.
z Judg. iv. 15. 24.
- 11 Make their nobles like ^a Oreb, and like Zeeb: yea, all their princes as ^b Zebah, and as Zalmunna:
- 12 Who said, Let us take to ourselves the houses of God in possession. a Judg. vii. 25.
b Judg. viii. 12. 21.
- 13 O my God, make them like a wheel; as the stubble before the wind.
- 14 As the fire burneth a wood, and as the flame setteth the mountains on fire;
- 15 So persecute them with thy tempest, and make them afraid with thy storm.
- 16 Fill their faces with shame; that they may seek thy name, O LORD.
- 17 Let them be confounded and troubled for ever; yea, let them be put to shame, and perish:
- 18 That men may know that thou, whose name alone is JEHOVAH, art the most high over all the earth.

PSALM XCIV.

1 The prophet, calling for justice, complaineth of tyranny and impiety. 8 He teacheth God's providence. 12 He sheweth the blessedness of affliction. 16 God is the defender of the afflicted.

- 1 O LORD ^c God, to whom vengeance belongeth; O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, ^d shew thyself. c Heb. God of revenges.
d Heb. shine forth.
- 2 Lift up thyself, thou judge of the earth: render a reward to the proud.
- 3 LORD, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?
- 4 How long shall they utter and speak hard things? and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?

A.C. 588. They break in pieces thy people, O LORD, and afflict thine 5 vanity.

Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O LORD, and 12
teachest him out of thy law;

That thou mayest give him rest from the days of adversity, 13 until the pit be digged for the wicked.

For the LORD will not cast off his people, neither will he 14 forsake his inheritance.

But judgment shall return unto righteousness: and all the 15 be after it.

Who will rise up for me against the evildoers? or who will 16 stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?

ⁱ Or, quickly. Unless the LORD had been my help, my soul had ⁱ almost 17 dwelt in silence.

When I said, My foot slippeth; thy mercy, O LORD, held 18 me up.

In the multitude of my thoughts within me thy comforts 19 delight my soul.

Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which 20 frameth mischief by a law?

They gather themselves together against the soul of the 21

But the LORD is my defence; and my God is the rock of 22 my refuge.

And he shall bring upon them their own iniquity, and shall 23 cut them off in their own wickedness; yea, the LORD our God shall cut them off.

2 KINGS XXIV. VER. 17, TO THE END.

^l 1. Jer. lii 1. old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did 19 that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. For through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, 20 until he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

JEREMIAH LII. VER. 4.

- 4 And it came to pass in the ^mninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about.

JEREMIAH XXXIX. VER. 2 & 4—9.

- 2 And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.
- 4 And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls : and he went out the way of the plain. But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho : and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath, where he ⁿgave judgment upon him. Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes : also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.
- 7 Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him ^owith chains, to carry him to Babylon.
- 8 And the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem. Then Nebuzar-adan the ^pq captain of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

2 KINGS XXV. VER. 3—21.

- 3 And on the ninth day of the ^rfourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land.
- 4 And the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden : (now the Chaldees were against the city round about :) and the king went the way toward the plain.

So they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah ; and they ^sgave judgment upon him. And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and ^tput out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.
- 8 And in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzar-adan, ^ucaptain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem : and he burnt the house of the LORD, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire. And all the army of the Chaldecians, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about.
- 11 Now the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the ^xfugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carry away. But the captain of the guard left of the poor of the land to be vinedressers and husbandmen. And ^ythe pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the Lord, did the Chaldecians break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon. And the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away. And the fire-pans, and the bowls, and such things as were of gold, in gold, and of silver, in silver, the captain of the guard took away. The two pillars, ^zone sea, and the bases which Solomon had made for the house of the LORD ; the brass of all these vessels was without weight. ^aThe height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapter upon it was brass : and the height of the chapter three cubits ; and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapter round about, all of brass : and like unto these had the second pillar with wreathen work.
- 18 And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the ^bdoor : and out of the city he took an ^cofficer that was set over the men of war, and five men of them that ^dwere in the king's presence, which were found in the city, and the ^eprincipal scribe of the host,

²¹ That Jeremiah was the author of the Elegies or Lamentations which bear his name, is evident, not only from a very ancient and almost uninterrupted tradition, but also from the argument and style of the book, which correspond exactly with those of his prophecies.

Josephus, Jerome, Junius, Archbishop Usher, and other eminent writers, are of opinion that the Lamentations of Jeremiah were the same which are mentioned in 2 Chron. xxxv. 25. as being composed by the prophet on the death of the pious king Josiah, and which are there said to have been perpetuated by "an ordinance in Israel." But whatever may have become of those Lamentations, it is evident that these cannot possibly be the same; for their whole tenor plainly shews that they were not composed till after the subversion of the kingdom of Judah. The calamities, which Jeremiah had foretold in his prophecies, are here deplored as having actually taken place, viz. the impositions of the false prophets who had seduced the people by their lying declarations, the destruction of the holy city and temple, the overthrow of the state, and the extermination of the people. But though it be allowed that the Lamentations were primarily intended as a pathetic description of present calamities, yet it has with great probability been conjectured, that, while Jeremiah mourns the desolation of Judah and Jerusalem, he may be considered as prophetically painting the still greater miseries they were to suffer at some future time; and this seems plainly indicated by his referring to the time when the punishment of their iniquity shall be accomplished, and they shall no more be carried into captivity, (iv. 22). *

II. This book, which in our Bibles is divided into five chapters, consists of five distinct elegies; viz.

ELEGY 1. The prophet begins with lamenting the sad reverse of fortune which his country had experienced, confessing at the same time that all her miseries were the just consequences of the national wickedness and rebellion against God. In the midst of his discourse, Jerusalem herself is personified, and introduced to continue the complaint, and humbly to solicit the divine compassion. Jahn is of opinion, that, in this elegy, Jeremiah deplores the deportation of king Jehoiachin, and ten thousand of the principal Jews, to Babylon. Compare 2 Kings xxiv. 8—17. and 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9, 10.

ELEGY 2. Jeremiah pourtrays the dire effects of the divine anger in the subversion of the civil and religious constitution of the Jews, and in that extreme misery in which every class of individuals was involved. He represents the wretchedness of his country as unparalleled; and charges the false prophets with having betrayed her into ruin by their false and flattering suggestions. In this forlorn and desolate condition,—the astonishment and by-word of all who see her,—Jerusalem is directed earnestly to implore the removal of those heavy judgments, which God, in the height of his displeasure, had inflicted upon her. Jahn thinks, that this elegy was composed on the storming of Jerusalem by the Babylonian army.

ELEGY 3. The prophet, by describing his own severe afflictions, and shewing his trust in the inexhaustible mercies of God, encourages his people to be patient and resigned under the divine chastisements, and to trust in the never-failing mercy of Jehovah. He asserts the divine supremacy in the dispensations of good and evil, and shews the unreasonableness of murmuring under them. He recommends self-examination and repentance; and, from their past experience of former deliverances from God, he encourages them to look for pardon for their sins, and retribution to their enemies.

ELEGY 4. exhibits a striking contrast, in various affecting instances, between the present deplorable and wretched condition of his country, and her former state of prosperity; and ascribes g Job vii. 3.

- 3 Judah is gone into captivity because of affliction, and ^hbecause of great servitude: she dwelleth among the heathen, she findeth no rest: all her persecutors overtook her between the straits. h Heb. for the greatness of servitude.
- 4 The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate: her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.
- 5 Her adversaries ⁱare the chief, her enemies prosper; for the LORD hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions: her ^kchildren are gone into captivity before the enemy. i Deut. xxviii.

the unhappy change chiefly to the profligacy of its priests and prophets. The national calamities are deeply and tenderly lamented, especially the captivity of their sovereign Zedekiah. This elegy concludes with predicting the judgments that were impending over the Edomites, who had insulted the Jews in their distress.

LEGG 5. is an epilogue or conclusion to the preceding chapters or elegies. In the Syriac, Arabic, and Vulgate versions, this chapter is entitled THE PRAYER OF JEREMIAH; but no such title appears in the Hebrew copies, or in the Septuagint version. It is rather, as Dr. Blayney has remarked, a memorial, representing, in the name of the whole body of Jewish exiles, the numerous calamities under which they groaned; and humbly supplicating God to commiserate their wretchedness, and to restore them to his favour, and to their ancient prosperity.

III. The Lamentations are evidently written in metre, and contain a number of plaintive effusions composed after the manner of funeral dirges. Bishop Lowth is of opinion, that they were originally written by the prophet, as they arose in his mind, in a long course of separate stanzas, and that they were subsequently collected into one poem. Each elegy consists of twenty-two periods, according to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet; although it is in the four first chapters only that the several periods begin (after the manner of an acrostic) with the different letters following each other in alphabetical order. By this contrivance, the metre is more precisely marked and ascertained, particularly in the third chapter, where each period contains three verses, all having the same initial letter. The two first chapters, in like manner, consist of triplets, excepting only the seventh period of the first and the nineteenth of the second, each of which has a supernumerary line. The fourth chapter resembles the three former in metre, but the periods are only couplets; and in the fifth chapter the periods are couplets, though of a considerably shorter measure.

Although there is no artificial or methodical arrangement of the subject in these incomparable elegies, yet they are totally free from wild incoherency or abrupt transition. Never, perhaps, was there a greater variety of beautiful, tender, and pathetic images, all expressive of the deepest distress and sorrow, more happily chosen and applied, than in the lamentations of this prophet; nor can we too much admire the full and graceful flow of that pathetic eloquence, in which the author pours forth the effusions of a patriot heart, and piously weeps over the ruin of his venerable country*.—Vide Horne's Critical Introduction, from which this note is extracted.

- 5 The LORD was as an enemy: he hath swallowed up Israel, he hath swallowed up all her palaces: he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.
- 6 And he hath violently ^d taken away his ^e tabernacle, as if it were of a garden: he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: the LORD hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised in the indignation of his anger the king and the priest. d Ps. lxxx.
12. & lxxxix.
40. Is. v. 5.
e Or, hedge.
- 7 The LORD hath cast off his altar, he hath abhorred his sanctuary, he hath ^f given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; they have made a noise in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast. f Heb. shut up.
- 8 The LORD hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion: he hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from ^g destroying: therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament; they languished together. g Heb. swallowing up.

A. C. 588.

Her gates are sunk into the ground: he hath destroyed and broken her bars: her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: the law is no more; her ^h prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

h Ps. lxxiv. 9.

The elders of the daughter of Zion sit upon the ground, and keep silence: they have cast up dust upon their heads; they have girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.

i Or, faint.

Mine eyes do fail with tears, my bowels are troubled, my liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because the children and the sucklings ⁱ swoon in the streets of the city.

They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.

What thing shall I take to witness for thee? what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? for thy breach is great like the sea: who can heal thee?

j Jer. ii. 8. & v. 31. & xiv. 14. & xxxiii. 16.

Thy ^j prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee: and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for thee false burdens and causes of banishment.

k Heb. by the way.

All that pass ^k by clap their hands at thee; they hiss and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city that men call ^l The perfection of beauty, The joy of the whole earth?

l Ps. xlviii. 2.

All thine enemies have opened their mouth against thee: they hiss and gnash the teeth: they say, We have swallowed her up: certainly this is the day that we looked for; we have found, we have seen it.

m Lev. xxvi. 16. & c. Deut. xxviii. 15, & c.

The LORD hath done that which he had ^m devised; he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old: he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied: and he hath caused thine enemy to rejoice over thee, he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.

n Jer. xiv. 17. ch. i. 16.

Their heart cried unto the LORD, O wall of the daughter of Zion, ⁿ let tears run down like a river day and night: give thyself no rest; let not the apple of thine eye cease.

Arise, cry out in the night: in the beginning of the watches pour out thine heart like water before the face of the LORD: lift up thy hands toward him for the life of thy young children, that faint for hunger in the top of every street.

o Or, swaddled with their hands.

Behold, O LORD, and consider to whom thou hast done this. Shall the women eat their fruit, and children ^o of a span long? shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the LORD?

- 21 The young and the old lie on the ground in the streets : my virgins and my young men are fallen by the sword ; thou hast slain them in the day of thine anger ; thou hast killed, and not pitied. A.C. 588.
- 22 Thou hast called as in a solemn day my terrors round about, so that in the day of the LORD's anger none escaped nor remained : those that I have swaddled and brought up hath mine enemy consumed.

LAMENTATIONS III.

- 1 The faithful bewail their calamities. 22 By the mercies of God they nourish their hope. 37 They acknowledge God's justice. 55 They pray for deliverance, 64 and vengeance on their enemies.
- 1 I am the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.

PART II.

Events at Babylon, between the Commencement of the Captivity and the Destruction of the temple.

§ 1. Condition of Daniel and his Companions at Babylon.

DANIEL I. VER. 8, TO THE END.

606. But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile 8 himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself. Now God had 9 brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs. And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Dan-10 iel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces ^a worse liking than the children which are of your ^b sort? then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king. Then said Daniel to 11 ^c Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, prove thy servants, I beseech 12 thee, ten days; and let them give us ^d pulse ^e to eat, and water to drink. Then let our countenances be looked upon before 13 thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat: and as thou seest, deal with thy servants. So he consented to them in this matter, and proved 14 them ten days. And at the end of ten days their countenances 15 appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat. Thus Melzar took away 16 the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink;
 and gave them pulse.

As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and 17 skill in all learning and wisdom: and ^f Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams. Now at the end of the days 18 that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.
 And the king communed with them; and among them all was 19 found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king. And in all matters of ^g wisdom and understanding, that the king enquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm. And Daniel continued even 21 unto the first year of king Cyrus.

EZEKIEL I.

1 The time of Ezekiel's prophecy at Chebar. 4 His vision of four cherubims, 15 of the four wheels, 26 and of the glory of God.

1 Now it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the ^a captives by A.C. 595, a Heb. captivity.

²² We have now come to the prophecies of Ezekiel, which were addressed to the captives at Babylon, before and after the captivity of Zedekiah, and the destruction of the temple. They must therefore have been delivered at the same time, and against the same crimes, against which Jeremiah was denouncing the judgments of God at Jerusalem. Both prophets predicted the same events—promised to the faithful the same consolations, and threatened the disobedient and idolatrous against their countrymen with the same punishments. Both prophets united in denunciations against the false prophets, and in anticipations of the ultimate restoration of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity. The communication between Babylon and Jerusalem, though very limited on account of their great distance, and the inconveniences of travelling, remained still open; and must have afforded the Jews occasional opportunities of learning the fate of their captive brethren. It must have informed them of the predictions of Ezekiel in Chaldea, and of the striking similarity and connexion which existed between them, and those they had received from their own inspired teacher. The distance that separated these two prophets must have precluded all idea of connivance, and rendered it impossible for any communication to have taken place between them. The believing part of the Jews therefore, both at Jerusalem and Babylon, must in the course of some months have been made acquainted with the separate prophecies of these two inspired persons; and within a few years they actually witnessed the fulfilment of them, in the desolation of Judah, and the captivity of their brethren. Such were the irresistible appeals that God made to the Jews, to convince them that his Providence still watched over them, and directed all things for the welfare of his visible church.

Thus in the fourth year of Zedekiah, Jeremiah (Jerem. xxvii. ver. 19 to the end,) declared to the people at Jerusalem, at a time when there was no war between the king of Judah and the king of Babylon, that Nebuchadnezzar should carry to Babylon the brazen pillars, and the residue of the vessels of the temple, which he had previously spared in the capture of the city, when Jehoiachin had been taken: and he further adds, that they should not be melted down nor destroyed, but preserved at Babylon till their captivity terminated. At the time this prediction was delivered, there appeared no probability of its accomplishment: and the prophecy must have been well known to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

In this year Seraiah went to Babylon, (Jer. li. 59.) and Jeremiah commissioned him to take the prophecy he had lately written against Babylon: to read it there, and then to cast it into the Euphrates. Of the precise time of the year in which Seraiah went we are not informed in the very brief narrative of Scripture; but as the distance was great, it is not probable they could be less than some months in their journey. If they arrived at Babylon about the end of the fourth, or the beginning of the fifth year of Zedekiah, which was the same as the fifth of Jehoiachin's captivity, they would receive in that city a confirmation and explanation of the predictions of Jeremiah, by a prophecy of Ezekiel delivered to the captives before their arrival; when it was evidently impossible that any communication could have taken place between the two prophets. Jeremiah predicted that the vessels of the temple should be taken; Ezekiel (chap. iv.) predicted the manner in which this prophecy should be accomplished, by the siege and capture of Jerusalem.

In additional confirmation of the supposition that Ezekiel could not have known of this prophecy of Jeremiah when he delivered his own prediction of the last capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, it must be remembered that Ezekiel was among the captives by the river Chebar, and not at Babylon; whither we may naturally suppose the embassy would have immediately proceeded.

In Jeremiah xxxvii. 17. we read that Jeremiah prophesied to Zedekiah himself that he should be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon. Prior to the date of this prediction, Ezekiel had foretold to the captives in Chaldea the same thing, (chap. xii. 13.) Yet we have no proof that the former had ever heard of the prediction of the latter.

The most undeniable and conclusive proof, however, of this singular and simultaneous coincidence between the two prophets, is to be found in their predictions against Egypt for its treachery and iniquities. Ezekiel, immediately before Zedekiah was made prisoner, uttered in Chaldea that celebrated prediction contained in chap. xxx. ver. 20, to the end; in which he assures the people that the king of Egypt should be subdued by the king of Babylon. In chap. xxxi. the same prediction is repeated, and it was delivered only one month before Jerusalem was taken. Compare with these

A.C. 595. the river of Chebar, that the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God ²³. In the fifth day of the month, which was the 2 fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity, the word of the LORD 3 came expressly unto ^b Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi, in land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and the hand of the LORD was there upon him.

^b Heb. Jehzekel.

²⁴ And I looked, and, behold, a whirlwind came out of the 4

two chapters of Ezekiel Jer. xliiii. ver. 8, to the end, chap. xlvi. 13, to the end. On the captivity of Zedekiah, Jeremiah was taken by Nebuzaradan, who treated him with much respect, and permitted him to return to his own home, under the government of Gedaliah. Soon after, however, Gedaliah having been murdered by Ishmael, and the chief of the remaining Jews escaping into Egypt for fear of the Chaldeans, Jeremiah was compelled to go with them, and it was on his arrival in this country, that he uttered the prophecies against Egypt.

Ezekiel, whose name imports 'the strength of God,' was the son of Buzi, of the sacerdotal race, and one of the captives carried by Nebuchadnezzar to Babylon, with Jehoiachin king of Judah: it does not appear that he had prophesied before he came into Mesopotamia. The principal scene of his predictions was some place on the river Chebar, which flows into the Euphrates, about two hundred miles to the north of Babylon, where the prophet resided; though he was, occasionally, conveyed in vision to Jerusalem. He commenced his prophetic ministry in the thirtieth year of his age, according to general accounts: or rather, as Calmet thinks, in the thirtieth year after the covenant was renewed with God in the reign of Josiah, which answers to the fifth year of Ezekiel's and Jehoiachin's captivity. (Ezek. i. 1. xl. 1) the æra whence he dates his predictions; and he continued to prophesy about twenty or twenty-one years. The events of his life, after his call to the prophetic office, are interwoven with the detail which he has himself given of his predictions: but the manner of its termination is no where ascertained.

In the following arrangement of Ezekiel, Archbishop Newcome's disposition of the several prophecies, and divisions of the chapters, are observed. The prophet being extremely careful throughout in dating each prophecy, the place is usually assigned by internal evidence; and there is little or no difficulty in arranging each prophetic discourse in its historical and chronological order. For the sake of clearness in apprehending the history of this period, I have inserted the events which took place in Babylon, in a separate Part from those which occurred at the same time in Judea.—Vide Gray's Key; Horne; Calmet; the Commentators Introduction to Ezekiel; Archb. Newcome.

²³ Chronologers and commentators have been much divided as to the thirtieth year, mentioned in ver. 1. of this chapter. Usher, Prideaux, Lowth, and Lightfoot, reckon the thirty years here spoken of, as well as the forty days or years, (chap. iv. ver. 6.) from the covenant made by Josiah in the eighteenth year of his reign. According to which computation, this thirtieth year will be 595, B. C. Others suppose it to be the thirtieth year of Ezekiel's age. The divine instructions were first revealed to him in a glorious vision, "the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord," attended by his cherubims symbolically portrayed. "The word of the Lord came expressly" unto him, and he received his communication by a voice, which was followed by a forcible influence of the Spirit, and by awful directions for his conduct. (chap. i. ii. iii. to ver. 22.)

Many of these directions were figurative and communicated in vision, and were given by way of metaphorical instruction; for when Ezekiel is commanded to "eat the roll of prophecy," we understand that he is enjoined only to receive, and thoroughly to digest its contents; and when he professes to have complied with the command, we perceive that he speaks only of a transaction in vision. With respect to some other relations of this nature contained in Ezekiel's book, whether we suppose them to be descriptive of real or imaginary events, they are very reconcilable with the divine intention in the employment of the prophet. On a supposition that they were real, we may reasonably suppose a miraculous assistance to have been afforded him when necessary; and if we consider them as imaginary, they might be represented equally as emblematical forewarnings revealed to the prophet.—Gray's Key, p. 396.

²⁴ Few subjects have occasioned so much discussion as the cherubim, which are so repeatedly spoken of in the Old Testament. The first time we read of the cherubim is in Genesis—"God placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubim and a flaming sword." It is generally supposed that the words translated a flaming sword, signify more properly a bright flame of waving fire. That this appearance was permanent at the gate of Paradise, and that it was the same glory of the Lord, or the Shechinah, which afterward appeared to Moses. Under the Levitical economy, the cherubic symbols and the burning flame were united, both in the tabernacle, and in the temple. The cherubim appear to have been considered as emblems of the visible church, and the burning flame as the north, a great cloud, and a fire ^e infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the colour of ^{A.C. 595.} 5 amber, out of the midst of the fire. Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures. And this ^{c Heb. catching itself.} 6 was their appearance; they had the likeness of a man. And 7 every one had four faces, and every one had four wings. And their feet were ^{d Heb. a straight foot.} ^a straight feet; the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot: and they sparkled like the colour of 8 burnished brass. And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and 9 their wings. Their wings were joined one to another; they turned not when they went; they went every one straight for- 10 ward. As for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man, and the face of a lion, on the right side: and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; they four also 11 had the face of an eagle. Thus were their faces: and their wings were ^{e Or. divided above.} ^e stretched upward; two wings of every one were 12 joined one to another, and two covered their bodies. And they went every one straight forward: whither the spirit was to go, 13 they went; and they turned not when they went. As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was 14 bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning. And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces. 16 The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the colour of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle 17 of a wheel. When they went, they went upon their four sides: 18 and they turned not when they went. As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their ^{f Or. strakes.} ^f rings were 19 full of eyes round about them four. And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted symbol of the divine presence. The time had now arrived when the visible church was to be removed from the Holy Land, and established among the faithful worshippers of Jehovah, who were taken captives to Babylon. This removal is denoted in the vision by the appearance of the cherubim, of the glory of the Lord, and of the angel Jehovah, or the form of the man, the head and protector of the visible church, to the prophet Ezekiel. He receives his commission as prophet from the angel Jehovah, speaking out of the midst of a burning flame. Ezekiel recognised in the appearance of a man, speaking from between the cherubim, and from the midst of the flame, the same mysterious and Divine Being who was well known to have formerly appeared to the patriarchs, to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Moses. He fell upon his face, as St. Paul and St. John afterwards did, when the same Almighty Being manifested himself, on the road to Damascus, and in the Island of Patmos. Ezekiel fell down before him, as all mankind will fall, when the same angel Jehovah, of the Patriarchal and Levitical church, the Messiah of the Christian church, shall descend to judgment; when he shall again appear, not as a friendless, insulted, and crucified man, but in the glory of his god-head, which he had with the Father before the world was. (John xvii. 5.)

A. C. 595. up. Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither 20 was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over g Or, of life. against them: for the spirit ^g of the living creature was in the wheels. When those went, these went; and when those stood, 21 h Or, of life. these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit ^h of the living creature was in the wheels. And the likeness of the fir- 22 mament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above.
 And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one 23 toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies. And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, 24 like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host: when they stood, they let down their wings. And there was a voice from the 25 firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.

And above the firmament that was over their heads was the 26 likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone:
 and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it. And I saw as the colour 27 of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about. As the ap- 28 pearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

EZEKIEL III. VER. 1—21.

1 Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, eat that thou findest; 2 eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel. So I 3 opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat that roll. And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I ^o eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness. o Rev. x. 9.

4 And he said unto me, Son of man, go, get thee unto the 5 house of Israel, and speak with my words unto them. For thou art not sent to a people ^p of a strange speech and of an 6 hard language, but to the house of Israel; not to many people ^q of a strange speech and of an hard language, whose words thou canst not understand. ^r Surely, had I sent thee to them, 7 they would have hearkened unto thee. But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me: for all the house of Israel are ^s impudent and hard-hearted. Behold, I have made thy face strong against their 8 faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads. As an adamant harder than flint have I made thy forehead: ^t fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a 10 rebellious house. Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto thee receive in thine heart, 11 and hear with thine ears. And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, Thus saith the Lord God; whether they 12 will hear, or whether they will forbear. Then the spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing, saying, 13 Blessed be the glory of the Lord from his place. I heard also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that ^u touched one another, and the noise of the wheels over against them, 14 and a noise of a great rushing. So the spirit lifted me up, and took me away, and I went ^v in bitterness, in the ^x heat of my spirit; but the hand of the Lord was strong upon me. p Heb. deep of lip, and heavy of tongue; and so ver. 6.

²⁵ Bishop Warburton has some curious observations on the emblematical mode of teaching by the use of types, an instance of which we read in this chapter. Language, he observes, as appears from the nature of the thing, from the records of history, and from the remains of the most ancient languages yet remaining, was at first extremely rude, narrow, and equivocal; so that men would be siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount ^{A.C. 595.} against it; set the camp also against it, and set ^c battering rams against it round about. Moreover take thou unto thee ^d an iron pan, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. This shall be a sign to the house of Israel. Lie thou also upon thy left side, and lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it thou shalt bear their iniquity. For I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, three hundred and ninety days: ^e so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel. And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days: I have appointed thee ^f each day for a year. Therefore thou shalt set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and thine arm shall be uncovered, and thou shalt prophesy against it. And, behold, I will lay bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee ^g from one side to another, till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

9 Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and ^h fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof, according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon thy side, three hundred and ninety days shalt thou eat thereof. And thy meat which thou shalt eat shall be by weight, twenty shekels a day: from time to time shalt thou eat it. perpetually at a loss, on any new conception, or uncommon accident, to explain themselves intelligibly to one another. The art of enlarging language by a scientific analogy being a late invention: this would necessarily set them upon supplying the deficiencies of speech by apt and significant signs. Accordingly in the first ages of the world, mutual converse was upheld by a mixed discourse of words and ACTIONS. Hence came the Eastern phrase of the voice of the sign (Exod. iv. 3.); and use and custom, as in most other affairs of life, improving what had arisen out of necessity, into ornament, this practice subsisted long after the necessity was over; especially among the Eastern people, whose natural temperament inclined them to a mode of conversation, which so well exercised their vivacity, by motion; and so much gratified it, by a perpetual representation of material images. Of this we have innumerable instances in Holy Scripture; as, where the false prophet pushed with horns of iron, to denote the entire overthrow of the Syrians—where Jeremiah, by God's direction, hides the linen girdle in a hole of the rock near Euphrates—where he breaks a potter's vessel in sight of the people—puts on bonds, and yokes, and casts a book into the Euphrates—where Ezekiel, by the same appointment, delineates the siege of Jerusalem on a tile—weighs the hair of his beard in balances—carries out his household stuff—and joins together the two sticks for Judah and Israel. By these actions the prophets instructed the people in the will of God, and conversed with them in signs: but where God teaches the prophet, and, in compliance with the custom of that time, condescends to the same mode of instruction, then the significative action is generally changed into a vision, either natural, or extraordinary: as where the prophet is bid to regard the rod of the almond tree—the seething pot—the work on the potter's wheel—the baskets of good and bad figs—and the prophet Ezekiel the ideal scene of the resurrection of dry bones. The significative action was, though generally, not always changed into a vision. For as sometimes, where the instruction was for the people, the significative action was, perhaps, in vision; so sometimes, again, though the information was only for the prophet, God would set him upon a real expressive action, whose obvious meaning conveyed the intelligence proposed or sought. See the whole passage—Divine Legation, vol. 3. b. 4. § 4. p. 105, &c. 4th edit.

EZEKIEL VIII ²⁶.

1 Ezekiel, in a vision of God at Jerusalem, 5 is shewed the image of jealousy, 7 the chambers of imagery, 13 the mourners for Tammuz, 15 the worshippers towards the sun. 18 God's wrath for their idolatry.

594. And it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, 1 in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the

²⁶ It has been already observed (note 1. in Period 7.), that there were always two parties among the Jews,—the party of the idolaters, and that of the worshippers of Jehovah; which two parties were in perpetual opposition to each other, and obtained the ascendancy, as either was protected or depressed by the sovereign of the nation. The eighth chapter of Ezekiel contains a representation, in a vision with which the prophet was favoured, of the total apostacy of the heads of the Jewish nation from the religion of their forefathers. They had gradually become more and more corrupted, after the establishment of idolatry by Solomon; and the period of their long-threatened punishment was rapidly approaching. By the time the sins of this wretched people were ripe for the punishment of their approaching captivity, they had polluted themselves with all kinds of Egyptian abominations. In this vision of Ezekiel, their three chief idolatries are graphically described. The image of jealousy, is supposed to have been either an image of Baal, which had been erected by Manasseh; and though destroyed by his successor, Josiah, had been again restored; or an image of Adonis. The first of their principal idolatries, Bishop Warburton supposes to have been the Egyptian superstitions. The tenth verse, “I went in, and saw, and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of Israel pourtrayed upon the wall round about,” he interprets, as descriptive of that peculiar imagery, some of which is still seen in the Isiac or Bembine table. Mr. Faber supposes them to have been the monstrous forms of those idols, which the Israelites had borrowed from the astronomical mythology of the surrounding nations. Possibly they were images of the same nature as those which our enterprising countrymen have recently discovered in the Egyptian temples. Bishop Warburton further conjectures, that the passage (in chap. viii. ver. 6—13.) contains a very lively and circumstantial account of the celebrated mysteries of Isis and Osiris. The most solemn celebration of these mysteries was attended by none but princes, rulers, and the wisest of the people. The “seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel,” (ver. 11.) were the Sanhedrim; the appointed and consecrated preservers of the law, and the teachers of the people. Even these had all apostatized; and were devoting themselves to those corrupt superstitions, in which only the most distinguished adherents to this prevailing idolatry were initiated, and to which it was considered an honour to be admitted.

The second principal idolatry seen by Ezekiel, as practised among the Jews, was the Phœnician. He looks toward the gate of the Lord's house, which was towards the north (ver. 14.); that is, in his vision he looks towards Phœnicia, and sees, even at the gate of the temple, “women weeping for Tammuz,” or Adonis. This idolatry, according to the Phœnician custom, was practised in the open day; and the apostacy among the Jews was represented as so general, that the women indulged in the superstition of Phœnicia, even in the presence of the temple of Jehovah.

The third principal idolatry by which the people had now debased themselves, was the Persian, (ver. 16.) “Behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs towards the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east.” In this representation, the very interior of the temple of Jehovah is polluted. The space between the temple and the altar, where the Jewish priests invoked the mercy of Jehovah for the people, was profaned, (Joel ii. 17.) The five and twenty men, mentioned ver. 16. were probably the twelve priests, and the twelve Levites of the weekly service, with the high priest at their head. It was the custom of the Jews to turn their faces towards the temple, when they worshipped, (Dan. vi. 10.) But, in this vision, Ezekiel sees that even the priests turn their backs upon the temple of Jehovah; thereby contemptuously expressing their disregard of the God of their fathers, and their preference for the ancient idolatries of Chaldea. He sees the legislature, the women, and the priesthood, alike corrupt and given to idolatry; and he is compelled to acknowledge the undoubted justice of those severe judgments, which God was now about to inflict on them; and which are represented in such strong language in the concluding verses of the ninth chapter:—“Mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: but I will recompense their way upon their head.”—Faber's Pag. Idol. vol. i. p. 208; Warburton's Divine Legation, vol. i. b. 4. § 6. p. 17—23.

- 12 up. Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, ^c The LORD ^{c ch. ix. 9.} seeth us not; the LORD hath forsaken the earth.

²⁷ The ninth chapter foretells the preservation of the pious Jews, and denounces vengeance against the idolaters, beginning at the elders and people in the temple. The vision of the coals of fire to be scattered over Jerusalem, and that of the Shechinah departing from the temple, prefigure the destruction of that city, and Jehovah forsaking the sanctuary. Ezekiel (ch. x. ver. 5.) describing the glory of the Lord leaving the temple of Jerusalem; "The sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh." Josephus, in his account of the prodigies which preceded the second capture of the temple, relates, "On the feast of Pentecost, the priests having come by night into the inner temple, to perform their required services, according to their custom; affirmed they first heard a motion, and a noise, and after that a voice as of a great multitude, which said, Let us depart hence." There appears a striking similarity of expressions and circumstances in these two passages: and, on comparing the sublime and terrible account of the final destruction of the temple by Titus, given by the Jewish historian, with the brief narrative of the first siege and capture of the city related by Jeremiah, and in the books of Chronicles and Kings; the parallel will be found so exact in a great number of instances, that the one evidently appears a type of the other. In the first siege, Moses predicts a most fearful famine. Levit. xxvi. 29, and in Deut. xxviii. 53. "Thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the Lord thy God hath given thee, in the siege and in the straitness wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee." Jeremiah (ch. xix. ver. 9.) foretells the same calamity; and we find, in Lam. iv. 10, that "the hands of the pitiful women have sodden their own children;" and in ver. 4. "They that were brought up in scarlet embrace dunghills." In both sieges the courts of the temple were defiled with the blood of the slain, (Ezek. ix. 7.) Josephus, in relating the dreadful famine that prevailed at the final destruction of the temple, says, "The city was well nigh depopulated. Their hunger was so intolerable, that they gathered and eat such things as the most filthy animals would not touch; nor did they abstain from their girdles, shoes, nor the very leather that belonged to their shields. An handful of old hay was sold for four atticks. A woman of the name of Mary, daughter of Eleazer, opulent, and nobly descended, who had fled to Jerusalem for protection, after trying every means to provoke the faction to put her to death, formed the most horrid and unnatural resolution of destroying her own infant, then at the breast. She slew her child, dressed it, and having eaten one part herself, presented the remainder of this inhuman repast to those robbers, who, for their own subsistence, were in the constant practice of depriving her of her daily support." Compare Josephus, book vii. with Lamentations, particularly chapters ii. and iv.

The eleventh chapter of Ezekiel contains a prediction of the destruction of those wicked princes and people who remained in Jerusalem, deriding the types and denunciations of the prophets, and whose counsel "filled the streets thereof with the slain." The return of the Jews from their captivity is foretold, ver. 14 to 22.

1 The vision of the coals of fire, to be scattered over the city. 8 The vision of the cherubims.

- 1 Then I looked, and, behold, in the ^t firmament that was above the head of the cherubims there appeared over them as it were a sapphire stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a 2 throne. And he spake unto the man clothed with linen, and said, Go in between the wheels, even under the cherub, and fill ^u thine hand with coals of fire from between the cherubims, and 3 scatter them over the city. And he went in in my sight. Now the cherubims stood on the right side of the house, when the 4 man went in; and the cloud filled the inner court. Then the glory of the LORD ^x went up from the cherub, and stood over the threshold of the house; and the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the LORD'S 5 glory. And the ^y sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as the voice of the Almighty God when 6 he speaketh. And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubims; then he went

And there appeared in the cherubims the form of a man's hand 8 under their wings. And when I looked, behold the four wheels 9 by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the a ch. i. 16. colour of a ^a beryl stone. And as for their appearances, they four 10 had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.
 When they went, they went upon their four sides; they turned 11 not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went. And their 12 whole ^b body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had. As for the wheels, ^c it was cried unto them 13 in my hearing, O wheel. And every one had four faces: the 14 first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle. And the cherubims were lifted up. This is 15 the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar. And 16 when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them: and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them. When they stood, 17 these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for the spirit ^d of the living creature was in them.
 Then the glory of the LORD departed from off the threshold of 18 the house, and stood over the cherubims. And the cherubims 19 lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the LORD's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.
 This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by 20
 the river of Chebar; and I knew that they were the cherubims.
 Every one had four faces apiece, and every one four wings; and 21 the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings. And the 22 likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves: they went every one straight forward.

§ 5. Various Predictions against Zedekiah—The false Prophets—Jerusalem and the Jewish Nations.

EZEKIEL XI. VER. 22, TO THE END.

A.C. 594. Then did the cherubims lift up their wings, and the wheels 22 beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above. ²⁸ And the glory of the LORD went up from the midst 23

²⁸ In the 23d verse of chap. xi. we read of the total departure of the glory of the Lord from the city of Jerusalem. In chap. x. ver. 4. we find, that "the glory of the Lord went up from the cherub, and stood over the threshold of the house; and the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the Lord's glory." In ver. 18 of the same chapter, we read, "then the glory of the Lord departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims; and the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight;" "and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the Lord's house." In ver. 23 of chap. xi. we are informed, "the glory of the Lord went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city." These various expressions denote, that God removed only by degrees from Israel: and the prophecies contained in this section are those delivered by Ezekiel, after the second Person of the Trinity had manifested to this prophet the removal of the visible church to Chaldea, in consequence of the total apostacy of the priests, the princes, the king, and the nation, who had been left in Jerusalem. After Ezekiel is brought back again by the Spirit of God into Chaldea, he predicts to them of the captivity, the fate of Zedekiah, and the Jews. It is probable that Ezekiel was enabled to see the wretched state of the Jews at Jerusalem, and to predict their ruin, that he might counteract more forcibly the impression produced by the false prophets, whom he soon after reproves; and who endeavoured to deceive the people into an expectation of a speedy return to their own country. See ver. 25, compared with chap. xiii.

The 12th chapter. ver. 1—8, under the type of Ezekiel's removing himself and his household goods, is foretold the captivity of Zedekiah, and the Jews at Jerusalem. Ver. 17—20, under the figure of eating and drinking, "with trembling and with carefulness," predicts the desolation and misery that would exist during the siege; and, from ver. 21 to the end, declares the speedy judgment that would fall upon the Jews, for their abuse of the divine forbearance.

Chapter xiii. contains a severe reproof and denunciation against the false prophets; and from ver. 17 to the end, against false prophetesses.

Chapter xiv. is a denunciation of the divine judgments against the idolatrous elders and their false prophets (1—11), and against the Jews for their obstinate impenitency (12—21); a remnant of whom, it is promised, shall be saved, (22, 23.)

Chapter xv. Under the parable of an unfruitful and unprofitable vine, is set forth the utter rejection of Jerusalem.

Chapter xvi. from 1—15, describes the mercy of God towards the church and nation of the Jews (here represented by Jerusalem) under the emblem of a person that should take an exposed infant, bring her up with great tenderness, and afterwards marry her. The Jews are then upbraided (under the figure of a woman who proves false to a tender and indulgent husband) with their monstrous ingratitude in departing from God's worship, and polluting themselves with heathen idolatries (15—34). But, notwithstanding all these provocations, God promises in the end to shew them mercy under his new and everlasting covenant (44—63). The figurative mode of describing adultery, which is of frequent occurrence in the prophets, is pursued with great force, and at considerable length, both in this and the 23d chapter.

In the 17th chapter, under the allegory of two eagles and a vine, the prophet figuratively expresses the carrying away of Jehoiakim into captivity by the king of Babylon (the first eagle), who made Zedekiah king in his stead. Zedekiah afterwards revolting from the Babylonian monarch, whose vassal he was, and making an alliance with the king of Egypt (the other eagle), God threatens him with captivity to the king from whom he had revolted (1—21). The preaching of the Gospel, and the universal kingdom of the Messiah, are foretold (22—24).

The Jews, in Ezekiel's time, having complained (xviii. 1, 2.) that God dealt hardly with them in punishing them for the sins of their forefathers, this chapter of Ezekiel vindicates the divine equity, and shews that God punishes no one eternally for the sins of any other person (3—32).

Under the parable of a lion's whelps, are foretold the cruelty and captivity of Jehoahaz, who was deposed by the king of Egypt (2 Kings xxiii. 33. and 2 Chron. xxxvi. 4.), and of Jehoiakim, who was deposed by the king of Babylon (xix. 1—9). And under the parable of a wasted vine, are set forth the desolation and captivity of the whole Jewish people (10—14).—Horne's Crit. Introd.

²⁹ We are informed by Josephus, that the prophecy (ver. 13 of this chapter) that Zedekiah should be brought to Babylon, "yet he shall not see it, though he die there;" (which was delivered about six years before the event, and was probably told to the king by some messenger from Babylon) was considered by that monarch as inconsistent with subsequent prophecies of Jeremiah (Jer. xxxii. 4. and xxxiv. 3), "thine eyes shall behold the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon." Zedekiah, on discovering this apparent inconsistency, refused to believe either. Both prophecies, however, were fulfilled. Zedekiah did see the king of

And I will scatter toward every ¹⁴ wind all that are about him to help him, and all his bands; and I will draw out the sword after them. And they shall know ¹⁵ that I am the LORD, when I shall scatter them among the nations, and disperse them in the countries. But I will leave ¹⁶ ^g a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

Moreover the word of the LORD came to me, saying, Son ^{17, 18} of man, eat thy bread with quaking, and drink thy water with trembling and with carefulness; and say unto the people of ¹⁹ the land, Thus saith the Lord GOD of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel; They shall eat their bread with carefulness, and drink their water with astonishment, that her land may be desolate from ^h all that is therein, because of the violence of all them that dwell therein. And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son ^{21, 22} of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth? Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will make ²³ this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision. For there shall be no more any ²⁴ vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel. For I am the LORD: I will speak, and the word that I shall ²⁵ speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged: for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord GOD.

Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying, Son of ^{26, 27} man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off. Therefore say unto them, Thus saith ²⁸ the Lord GOD; There shall none of my words be prolonged any more, but the word which I have spoken shall be done, saith the Lord GOD.

EZEKIEL XIV.

1 God answereth idolaters according to their own heart. 6 They are exhorted to repent, for fear of judgments, by means of seduced prophets. 12 God's irrevocable sentence of famine, 15 of noisome beasts, 17 of the sword, 19 and of pestilence. 22 A remnant shall be reserved for example of others.

Then came certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat 1 before me. And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 2 Son of man, these men have set up their idols in their heart, 3 and put the stumblingblock of their iniquity before their face: should I be enquired of at all by them? Therefore speak unto 4 them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet; I the LORD will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols; that I may take 5 the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all estranged from me through their idols.

Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord 6 God; Repent, and turn ^y yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations. For every one of 7 the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to enquire of him concerning me; I the LORD will answer him by myself: and I will set my 8 face against that man, and will make him a ^z sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; and ye shall know that I am the LORD. And if the prophet be 9 deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD ^a have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel. And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity: the 10

- 22 Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters: behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ye shall see their way and their doings: and ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have

EZEKIEL XV.

1 By the unfitness of the vine branch for any work 6 is shewed the rejection of Jerusalem.

Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; As the vine tree among 6 so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And I will set my 7

Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of 1, 2 man, cause Jerusalem to know her abominations, and say, Thus 3 saith the Lord GOD unto Jerusalem; Thy ^k birth and thy k Heb. cutting out, or, habitation. nativity is of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite. And as for thy nativity, in the 4 day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water ^l to supple thee; thou wast not salted at all, nor l Or, when I looked upon thee. swaddled at all. None eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto 5 thee, to have compassion upon thee; but thou wast cast out in the open field, to the lothing of thy person, in the day that thou wast born.

And when I passed by thee, and saw thee ^m polluted in thine 6 own blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live; yea, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live. I have 7 n Heb. made thee a million. ⁿ caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field, and thou hast o Heb. ornament of ornaments. increased and waxen great, and thou art come to ^o excellent ornaments: thy breasts are fashioned, and thine hair is grown, whereas thou wast naked and bare. Now when I passed by 8 thee, and looked upon thee, behold, thy time was the time of love; and I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness: yea, I swear unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord GOD, and thou becamest mine. Then 9 washed I thee with water; yea, I thoroughly washed away thy p Heb. bloods. blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil. I clothed thee 10 also with broidered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk. I decked thee also with ornaments, and I put bracelets 11 upon thy hands, and a chain on thy neck. And I put a jewel 12 on thy ^a forehead, and earrings in thine ears, and a beautiful 13 crown upon thine head. Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and brodered work; thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil:

 and thou wast exceeding beautiful, and thou didst prosper into 14 a kingdom. And thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty: for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord GOD.
 15 But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pourest out thy fornications 16 on every one that passed by; his it was. And of thy garments thou didst take, and deckedst thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the harlot thereupon: the like things shall not come, 17 neither shall it be so. Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee, and madest to thyself images ^r of men, and didst commit whoredom with 18 them, and tookedst thy brodered garments, and coveredst them: and thou hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.
 19 My meat also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set it before them for ^s a 20 sweet savour: and thus it was, saith the Lord GOD. Moreover thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast borne unto me, and these hast thou sacrificed unto them ^t to be 21 devoured. Is this of thy whoredoms a small matter, that thou hast slain my children, and delivered them to cause them to 22 pass through the fire for them? And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in 23 thy blood. And it came to pass after all thy wickedness, (woe, 24 woe unto thee! saith the Lord GOD;) that thou hast also built unto thee an ^u eminent place, and hast made thee an high place 25 in every street. Thou hast built thy high place at every head of the way, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy 26 whoredoms. Thou hast also committed fornication with the Egyptians thy neighbours, great of flesh; and hast increased 27 thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger. Behold, therefore I have stretched out my hand over thee, and have diminished thine ordinary food, and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, the ^x daughters of the Philistines, which are 28 ashamed of thy lewd way. Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast unsatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be 29 satisfied. Thou hast moreover multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan unto Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satis-30 fied herewith. How weak is thine heart, saith the Lord GOD, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of an imperious 31 whorish woman; ^y in that thou buildest thine eminent place in

And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary.

Wherefore, O harlot, hear the word of the LORD: Thus 35, 36 saith the Lord GOD; Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers, and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them; behold, 37 therefore I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness. And I will judge thee, ^a as 38 women that break wedlock and shed blood are judged; and I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy. And I will also 39 give thee into their hand, and they shall throw down thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places: they shall strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take ^b thy fair jewels, and leave thee naked and bare. They shall also bring up a com- 40 pany against thee, and they shall stone thee with stones, and thrust thee through with their swords. And they shall ^c burn 41 thine houses with fire, and execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women: and I will cause thee to cease from playing the harlot, and thou also shalt give no hire any more. So will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy 42 shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry. Because thou hast not remembered the days of 43 thy youth, but hast fretted me in all these things; behold, therefore I also will recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord GOD: and thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations.

Behold, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb 44 against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter. Thou art thy mother's daughter, that lotheth her husband and her 45 children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which lothed their husbands and their children: your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite. And thine elder sister is Samaria, she 46 and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand, and ^d thy younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand, is Sodom and her daughters. 47 Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations: but, ^e as if that were a very little thing, thou wast

Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy. And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me: therefore ^f I took them away as I saw good. Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins; but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done. Thou also, which hast judged thy sisters, bear thine own shame for thy sins that thou hast committed more abominable than they: they are more righteous than thou: yea, be thou confounded also, and bear thy shame, in that thou hast justified thy sisters. When I shall bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them: that thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art a comfort unto them. When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate. For thy sister Sodom was not ^g mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy ^h pride, before thy wickedness was discovered, as at the time of thy reproach of the daughters of ⁱ Syria, and all that are round about her, the daughters of the Philistines, which ^k despise thee round about. Thou hast ^l borne thy lewdness and thine abominations, saith the LORD. For thus saith the Lord GOD; I will even deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast despised the oath in breaking the covenant.

60 Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant. Then thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger: and I will give them unto thee for ^m daughters, but not by thy covenant. And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD: that thou mayest remember, and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord GOD.

EZEKIEL XVII.

1 Under the parable of two eagles and a vine, 11 is shewed God's judgment upon Jerusalem for revolting from Babylon to Egypt. 22 God promiseth to plant the cedar of the Gospel.

1, 2 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of

A.C. 594. Israel; and say, Thus saith the Lord God; A great eagle with ³ great wings, longwinged, full of feathers, which had ⁿ divers colours, came unto Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar: he cropped off the top of his young twigs, and carried ⁴ it into a land of traffick; he set it in a city of merchants. He ⁵ took also of the seed of the land, and ^o planted it in a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow tree. And it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose ⁶ branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs. There was also another great eagle with great ⁷ wings and many feathers: and, behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation. It was ⁸ planted in a good ^p soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine. Say thou, Thus saith the Lord God; Shall it prosper? ⁹ shall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? it shall wither in all the leaves of her spring, even without great power or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof. Yea, behold, being planted, shall it ¹⁰ prosper? shall it not utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in the furrows where it grew.

Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Say ¹¹, ¹² now to the rebellious house, Know ye not what these things mean? tell them, Behold, the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon; and hath taken of the ¹³ king's seed, and made a covenant with him, and hath ^q taken an oath of him: he hath also taken the mighty of the land: that the kingdom might be base, that it might not lift itself up, ¹⁴ ^r but that by keeping of his covenant it might stand. But he ¹⁵ rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses and much people. Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered? As I live, saith the Lord God, ¹⁶ surely in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die. Neither shall ¹⁷ Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons: seeing he despised the oath by breaking the ¹⁸ covenant, when, lo, he had given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape. Therefore thus saith the ¹⁹ Lord God; As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head. And I will ^s spread my net upon ²⁰ him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to have spoken it. A.C. 594.

22 Thus saith the Lord God; I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon 23 an high mountain and eminent: in the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it: and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof 24 shall they dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know

And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which 14 hath devoured her fruit, so that she hath no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule. This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.

§ 6. *Prophecies addressed to the Elders of the Jews*³⁰.

EZEKIEL XX.

1 God refuseth to be consulted by the elders of Israel. 5 He sheweth the story of their rebellions in Egypt, 10 in the wilderness, 27 and in the land. 33 He promiseth to gather them by the Gospel. 45 Under the name of a forest he sheweth the destruction of Jerusalem.

593. And it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, 1

³⁰ The place and date of this part of Ezekiel's prophecies are assigned in chap. xx. ver. 1. A deputation of the elders come to the prophet, in the seventh year of his captivity, to request him to ask counsel of God. Ezekiel, by divine command, reminds them of God's mercies, and their continued idolatry, and rebellions against him, from their departure out of Egypt, to that very day. (chap. xx. ver. 1—40.) The expression (ver. 25,) "I gave them statutes which were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live," is obscure, and has been variously interpreted. The generality of commentators have supposed that it referred to the idolatrous statutes and judgments, and the corrupt principles and practices of the heathen nations, which were so prevalent among the Jews. Bishop Warburton is of opinion that by "the statutes which were not good," was meant the ritual law, which, though burthensome and grievous, was the only means of preserving the Israelites an independent people, and of preparing them for a more perfect and lasting covenant. Towards the end of the chapter, (ver. 40—45,) promises of mercy are held out, and their return from captivity is foretold. The destruction of Jerusalem, (ver. 45, to the end,) is signified under the emblem of a forest consumed by fire. It is called the forest of the south, because it lay to the south of Chaldea; where the prophet then uttered his predictions.

In chap. xxi. ver. 1—18, under the emblem of a sharp sword, is predicted the destruction of the Jews, and (ver. 18—25,) of Jerusalem. The destruction is foretold in a forcible and splendid manner. God foreshews to his prophet, that the king of Babylon, coming with his army into Syria, and finding that the Ammonites had entered into a confederacy with Egypt, as well as Zedekiah, was in doubt against which of the two people he should first wage war. He decided, therefore, by adopting the usual custom of divining by arrows. This ceremony consisted in writing on several arrows the names of the cities they intended to assault, and then putting them all together promiscuously in a quiver; they were drawn out, as lots are drawn; and the city whose name was written on the arrow first taken from the quiver, was the city upon which they first made war. That Nebuchadnezzar had recourse to this plan of divination seems probable from the expression in ver. 21. In our translation we read, "he made his arrows bright;" but the more proper rendering, according to Archbishop Newcome should be, "he mingled his arrows." There is however another mode of divining, which is said to be still in use, to which this expression in ver. 21, will apply with equal justice. In divination, the idolatrous Arabs made use of three arrows only: on one was written, 'My Lord hath commanded me;' and another 'My Lord hath forbidden me;' and the third was blank. If the first was drawn, they looked upon it as an approbation of the enterprise in question; if the second, they made a contrary conclusion; but if the third chanced to be drawn, they mixed them, and drew over again, till a decisive answer was obtained by one of the others. Ezekiel describes this proceeding of Nebuchadnezzar by prophetic anticipation.

The subversion of the temporal kingdom of Judah leads the prophet to refer to Zedekiah, (ver. 25—28,) and to predict the total overthrow of the earthly dominion of the house of David, till the day come, when the Messiah shall visit his people. He then predicts the overthrow of the Ammonites by Nebuchadnezzar, (ver. 28, to the end;) which prophecy was fulfilled five years after Jerusalem was destroyed. Chapter xxii. contains a recital of the sins committed in Jerusalem, by all ranks of people, for which severe judgments are denounced: and chap. xxiii. represents the idolatries of Samaria and Jerusalem under the emblem of two harlots; and for their crimes, (ver. 22, to the end;) the severest judgments are threatened to both.—Warburton's Divine Legat. b. iv. c. 6; Hales' Anal. vol. ii. p. 465; Archbp. 8 But they rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me: they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt: then I said, I will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.

14 But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out.

15 Yet also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness,

A.C. 593. that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands;

Because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my 16 statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: for their heart went after their idols.

Nevertheless mine eye spared them from destroying them, 17 neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness.

But I said unto their children in the wilderness, Walk ye 18 not in the statutes of your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols:

I am the LORD your God; walk in my statutes, and keep 19 my judgments, and do them;

And hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between 20 me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

Notwithstanding the children rebelled against me: they 21 walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; they polluted my sabbaths: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.

Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand, and wrought for my 22 name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that 23 I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries;

Because they had not executed my judgments, but had 24 despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good, and 25 judgments whereby they should not live;

And I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused 26 to pass ¹ through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they might know that I am the LORD.

Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and 27 say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Yet in this your fathers have blasphemed me, in that they have ^m committed a trespass against me.

^m Heb. trespassed a trespass.

For when I had brought them into the land, for the which I 28 lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering: there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink offerings.

- 29 Then ⁿI said unto them, What is the high place whereunto ye go? And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day. A.C. 593.
n Or, I told them what the high place was, or, Bamah.
- 30 Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations?
- 31 For when ye offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day: and shall I be enquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will not be enquired of by you.
- 32 And that which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, that ye say, We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.
- 33 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you:
- 34 And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out.
- 35 And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, and there will I plead with you face to face.
- 36 Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord GOD.
- 37 And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into ^othe bond of the covenant: o Or, a delivering.
- 38 And I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me: I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and they shall not enter into the land of Israel: and ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord GOD; Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me: but pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols.
- 40 For in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me: there will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the ^pfirst-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things. p Or, chief.
- 41 I will accept you with your ^qsweet savour, when I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen. q Heb. savour of rest.
- 42 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall bring

A.C. 593. you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to your fathers.

And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall lothe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed.

And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have wrought with you for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face toward the south, and drop thy word toward the south, and prophesy against the forest of the south field;

And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the LORD; Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces from the south to the north shall be burned therein.

And all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it: it shall not be quenched.

Then said I, Ah Lord GOD! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables?

EZEKIEL XXI.

And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and drop thy word toward the holy places, and prophesy against the land of Israel,

And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I am against thee, and will draw forth my sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked.

Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath against all flesh from the south to the north:

That all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: it shall not return any more.

Sigh, therefore, thou son of man, with the breaking of thy loins; and with bitterness sigh before their eyes.

And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings; because it cometh: and every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water : behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord God. A.C. 593.

^r Heb. shall go into water.

- 8 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
 9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD ; Say, A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished :
 10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter : it is furbished that it may glitter : should we then make mirth ? it ^s contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree. ^s Or, it is the rod of my son, it despiseth every tree.
 11 And he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled : this sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of the slayer.
 12 Cry and howl, son of man : for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel : ^t terrors by reason of the sword shall be upon my people : ^u smite therefore upon thy thigh. ^t Or, they are thrust down to the sword with my people. u Jer. xxxi. 19.
 13 ^x Because it is a trial, and what if the sword contemn even the rod ? it shall be no more, saith the Lord God. ^x Or, When the trial hath been, what then ? shall they not also belong to the despising rod ? y Heb. hand to hand
 14 Thou therefore, son of man, prophesy, and smite ^y thine hands together, and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain : it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth into their privy chambers.
 15 I have set the ^z point of the sword against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied : ah ! it is made bright, it is ^a wrapped up for the slaughter. ^z Or, glittering, or, fear. a Or, sharpened.
 16 Go thee one way or other, ^b either on the right hand, or on the left, whithersoever thy face is set. ^b Heb. set thyself, take the left hand.
 17 I will also smite mine hands together, and I will cause my fury to rest : I the LORD have said it.
 18 The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,
 19 Also, thou son of man, appoint thee two ways, that the sword of the king of Babylon may come : both twain shall come forth out of one land : and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.
 20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defenced.
 21 For the king of Babylon stood at the ^c parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination : he made his ^d arrows bright, he consulted with ^e images, he looked in the liver. ^c Heb. mother of the way. d Or, knives. e Heb. teraphim.
 22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint ^f captains, to open the mouth in the slaughter, to lift up the voice with shouting, to appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort. ^f Or, battering rams, ch. iv. 2. g Heb. rams.
 23 And it shall be unto them as a false divination in their sight, ^h to them that have sworn oaths : but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken. ^h Or, for the oaths made unto them.
 24 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ; Because ye have made

A.C. 593. your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand.

And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is 25 come, when iniquity shall have an end,

Thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take 26 off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.

ⁱ Heb. Perverted, perverted, perverted, will I make it.

ⁱ I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be 27 no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

And thou, son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the 28 Lord God concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; even say thou, The sword, the sword is drawn: for the slaughter it is furnished, to consume because of the glittering:

Whiles they see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie 29 unto thee, to bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain, of the wicked, whose day is come, when their iniquity shall have an end.

^k Or, Cause it to return.

^k Shall I cause it to return into his sheath? I will judge 30 thee in the place where thou wast created, in the land of thy nativity.

And I will pour out mine indignation upon thee, I will blow 31 against thee in the fire of my wrath, and deliver thee into the hand of ^l brutish men, and skilful to destroy.

Son of man, say unto her, Thou art the land that is not 24 cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation.

There is a conspiracy of her prophets in the midst thereof, 25 like a roaring lion ravening the prey; they ⁱ have devoured

GOD.

EZEKIEL XXIII.

¹ The whoredoms of Aholah and Aholibah. 22 Aholibah is to be plagued by her lovers. 36 The prophet reproveth the adulteries of them both, 45 and sheweth their judgments.

The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, 1
Son of man, there were two women, the daughters of one 2 mother:

And they committed whoredoms in Egypt; they committed 3 whoredoms in their youth: there were their breasts pressed, and there they bruised the teats of their virginity.

And the names of them were Aholah the elder, and Aholibah 4 her sister: and they were mine, and they bare sons and daughters. Thus were their names; Samaria is ^o Aholah, and Jerusalem ^p Aholibah.

^o That is, His tent, or, tabernacle.
^p That is, My tabernacle in her.

And Aholah played the harlot when she was mine; and she 5
doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians her neighbours,

- 6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses. A.C. 593.
- 7 Thus she ^q committed her whoredoms with them, with all them that were ^r the chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted: with all their idols she defiled herself.
- 8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.
- 9 Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the ^s Assyrians, upon whom she doted. s 2 Kin. xvii. 23.
- 10 These discovered her nakedness: they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword: and she became ^t famous among women: for they had executed judgment upon her. t Heb. a name.
- 11 And when her sister Aholibah saw this, ^u she was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms ^x more than her sister in her whoredoms. u Heb. she corrupted her inordinate love more than, &c.
- 12 She doted upon the ^y Assyrians her neighbours, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men. x Heb. more than the whoredoms of her sister.
- 13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that they took both one way. y 2 Kin. xvi. 7.
- 14 And that she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men pourtrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermillion,
- 15 Girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity:
- 16 And ^z as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and sent messengers unto them into Chaldea. z Heb. at the sight of her eyes.
- 17 And the ^a Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and her mind was ^b alienated from them. a Heb. children of Babylon.
- 18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then my mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister. b Heb. loosed, or, disjoined.
- 19 Yet she multiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.
- 20 For she doted upon their paramours, whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses.
- 21 Thus thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.
- 22 Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on every side;

A.C. 593.

The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, 23 and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them: all of them desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

And they shall come against thee with chariots, waggons, and 24 wheels, and with an assembly of people, which shall set against thee buckler and shield and helmet round about: and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments.

And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall 25 deal furiously with thee: they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall take thy sons and thy daughters; and thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.

They shall also strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away 26 thy ^c fair jewels.

^c Heb. instruments of thy decking.

Thus will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and 27 thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt: so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

For thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will deliver thee 28 into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated:

And they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away 29 all thy labour, and shall leave thee naked and bare: and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

I will do these things unto thee, because thou hast gone a 30 whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I 31 give her cup into thine hand.

Thus saith the Lord God; Thou shalt drink of thy sister's 32 cup deep and large: thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the 33 cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

Thou shalt even drink it and suck it out, and thou shalt break 34 the sherds thereof, and pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because thou hast for- 35 gotten me, and cast me behind thy back, therefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

The LORD said moreover unto me; Son of man, wilt thou 36 ^d judge Aholah and Aholibah? yea, declare unto them their abominations;

38 Moreover this they have done unto me: they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and have profaned my sabbaths.

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, ^f thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

EZEKIEL XXIV ³¹.

1 Under the parable of a boiling pot, 6 is shewed the irrevocable destruction of Jerusalem. 15 By the sign of Ezekiel not mourning for the death of his wife, 19 is shewed the calamity of the Jews to be beyond all sorrow.

1 Again in the ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth 591.

³¹ The date of this prophecy (ver. 1.) shews that it was written on the banks of the Euphrates on the very same day in which Nebuchadnezzar laid siege to Jerusalem. On that day the prophet, by

A.C. 591. day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of this same 2 day: the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day.

And utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto 3 them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Set on a pot, set it on, and also pour water into it:

Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the 4 thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

^a Or, heap.

Take the choice of the flock, and ^a burn also the bones under 5 it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.

Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Woe to the bloody city, 6 to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; let no lot fall upon it.

For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the 7 top of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; I 8 have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

^b Nah. iii. 1.
^c Hab. ii. 12.

Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; ^bWoe to the bloody city! 9 I will even make the pile for fire great.

Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and spice 10 it well, and let the bones be burned.

Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of 11 it may be hot, and may burn, and that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

She hath wearied herself with lies, and her great scum went 12 not forth out of her: her scum shall be in the fire.

In thy filthiness is lewdness: because I have purged thee, 13 and thou wast not purged, thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

I the LORD have spoken it: it shall come to pass, and I will 14 do it; I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent; according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord GOD.

Also the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 15

Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of 16 thine eyes with a stroke: yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears ^c run down.

^c Heb. go.

a singular, yet appropriate figure of a boiling pot, shews to the Jews the total destruction of their city and brethren. To represent the greatness of their calamity, the prophet is suddenly bereaved of his wife, the desire of his eyes, and is commanded not to mourn for her. Thus Ezekiel becomes a sign unto the Jews at Babylon, ver. 24; thereby foreshewing them the destruction of Jerusalem and their temple, which was the desire of their eyes, and signifying that their afflictions and sorrows would exceed all expression.

- 17 ^a Forbear to cry, make no mourning for the dead, bind the tire of thine head upon thee, and put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and cover not thy ^e lips, and eat not the bread of men. A.C. 591.
e Heb. upper lip: And so ver. 22.
- 18 So I spake unto the people in the morning: and at even my wife died; and I did in the morning as I was commanded.
- 19 And the people said unto me, Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?
- 20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
- 21 Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will profane my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, the desire of your eyes, and ^f that which your soul shall fall by the sword. f Heb. the pity of your soul.
- 22 And ye shall do as I have done: ye shall not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of men.
- 23 And your tires shall be upon your heads, and your shoes upon your feet: ye shall not mourn nor weep; but ye shall pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another.
- 24 Thus Ezekiel is unto you a sign: according to all that he hath done shall ye do: and when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.
- 25 Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and ^g that whereupon they set their minds, their sons and their daughters, g Heb. the filling up of their soul.
- 26 That he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears?
- 27 In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, and thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb: and thou shalt be a sign unto them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

§ 8. Prophecy against Egypt.

EZEKIEL XXIX. VER. 1—16³².

- 1 In the tenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 539.

³² This chapter is inserted after the 24th, on the authority of the date mentioned in ver. 1. The prophecy contained in it was spoken before the capture of Jerusalem; whereas those contained in the 25th and following chapters, were delivered after that event. The probable reason of its receiving the place it now holds in our Bibles, is, that the prophecies against Egypt might be all read together. There is reason to suppose, that this prophecy was delivered immediately after Pharaoh's retreat from before Nebuchadnezzar. On this very occasion, Jeremiah uttered, at Jerusalem, similar predictions to those of Ezekiel, at Babylon. Both prophets, at the same time, in two distant countries, predicted the same events. The circumstances thus prophesied by them, respecting Egypt, were of the most improbable kind. Pharaoh Hophra, the Apries of Herodotus, boasted that his kingdom was so firmly established, that nothing could overthrow it. The greatness and magnificence of Egypt have been celebrated from the most remote antiquity: the splendid monuments still remaining, and the additional discoveries which are frequently made by the enterprising travellers of

ii. 9.

Son of man, set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, 2 and prophesy against him, and against all Egypt:

Speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am 3 against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great ^a dragon that our own days, are existing records of its former wealth and power. Its situation is favourable to commerce, it possesses every natural advantage; yet, wonderful to relate, after predicting the more immediate distresses which should fall upon Egypt, the prophet predicts, that it shall become an utter and complete desolation, (Ezek. xxix. 14, 15.) "Egypt shall be the basest of the kingdoms, neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations." And in the next chapter, ver. 12, 13. "I will make the land waste, and all that is therein; and there shall no more be a prince of the land of Egypt." Such general prophecies, Bishop Newton justly observes, like general rules, are not to be understood so strictly and absolutely, as if they could not possibly admit of any kind of limitation or exception whatever. It is sufficient if they hold good for the most part, and are confirmed by the experience of many ages, though perhaps not without the exception of a few years. The Bishop then proceeds to shew in what manner the prophecy was fulfilled, by the various conquests of Egypt, till it was reduced to its present degraded condition.

There are many who consider every attempt to discover the actual fulfilment of prophecy in the events of our own day, as a proof of an utter deficiency in that sobriety of judgment, which ought ever to characterise a commentator on Scripture. Certain it is, the utmost caution should be observed in every attempt to trace the mighty plan of that Providence which governs the world: yet I cannot but think that it will appear evident to all, (when the idea is suggested to them), that we have seen in our own day a wonderful instance of the accomplishment of this prophecy of Ezekiel. Egypt has now been, for many hundred years, the meanest and basest of kingdoms: and among the kings and princes of the earth, none have been found powerful enough to raise it from its state of degradation. Within the memory of the present generation, a project has been attempted, which, if crowned with success, might again have exalted Egypt among the nations, and afforded to infidelity an argument against the prophecies of Scripture. Nearly forty years have now elapsed (1836) since Napoleon, who at that time knew not what it was to be defeated, led a powerful army into Egypt. The experience of history has sufficiently proved, that when a large military force has gained possession of a country, it frequently raises that nation to an equality with those surrounding it; and it was ever the policy of France, during the revolutionary war, to embody among its own armies the inhabitants of the conquered countries. Had this attack upon Egypt succeeded, its people might have been made a military body: they would have had a chief, active, powerful, and enterprising, to govern them: their ancient character, contrary to the prophecies of God, might have been raised; and their renovated energies, under such a ruler, directed against the peace and happiness of Europe, or of India. But what was the event? For a long time, every bold effort had succeeded: the whole extent of Egypt, and the territories immediately adjacent to it, might be considered as conquered; till the progress of the French army, hitherto invincible, was suddenly and wonderfully checked by a small and weak fortress, protected by the sword of Britain. The triumph of the resistless army of France was ended. The ferocious legions in vain dashed themselves, as the waves of the ocean, on the small yet immovable rock. The broken remnant of the dispirited and discomfited army was abandoned by their leader; and the land of Egypt is still "the basest of kingdoms." The Scripture is fulfilled.

In all these things the man of the world discovers only the usual course of things, and smiles with derision at the discoverer of the accomplishment of prophecy, in the events of history. Yet every prophecy has been accomplished by a train of events, that appear to be the natural and unavoidable result of a connected series of consequences. The circumstances that occasioned this defeat in Egypt were so peculiar and extraordinary, that when their result is compared with this prophecy of Ezekiel, the Christian is compelled to look higher than to any human power. He cannot but see "God in the whirlwind; God directing the storm." Amidst all the changes of empires, the revolutions of states, the rise and fall of dynasties; amidst all the revolutions of this world, the Christian sees a controlling Providence guiding the violence and ambition of men to the accomplishment of his own purposes. It is possible that this country may be the great maritime people, that shall be elected to further the designs of this mighty Providence; and we may justly hope, that we are destined to fulfil many of the remaining prophecies of God: so long as this splendid destiny is allotted to us, we must continue, under the protection of this God, great and powerful. Prophecy, whether we observe it or not, is still accomplishing. The declarations and promises of Scripture are ever fulfilling; for the same Almighty Being, who is too great to be resisted, and too wise to err, has said, and both history and experience confirm the truth of the declaration, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

³³ These portions of Scripture are inserted here on the authorities of the dates given by the prophet himself, Ezek. xxx 20; and xxxi. 1. At the time when the first of these predictions was delivered, Nebuchadnezzar, having obliged the king of Egypt to retreat, had returned to the siege of Jerusalem: and when the prophecy contained in chapter xxxi. was uttered, the Jews had accelerated their ruin by depending upon Egypt. There is a peculiar propriety, therefore, in the delivery of these predictions at this period, as the attention both of the Jews and of the Chaldeans, among whom Ezekiel prophesied, must have been forcibly directed to Egypt.

- field, and his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long because of the multitude of waters, ^e when he shot forth.
- 6 All the ^f fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young, and under his shadow dwelt all great nations.
- 7 Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches: for his root was by great waters.
- 8 The cedars in the ^g garden of God could not hide him: the fir trees were not like his boughs, and the chesnut trees were not like his branches; nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty.
- 9 I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches: so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him.
- 10 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, and his heart is lifted up in his height;
- 11 I have therefore delivered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen; ^h he shall surely deal with him: I have driven him out for his wickedness.
- 12 And strangers, the terrible of the nations, have cut him off, and have left him: upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; and all the people of the earth are gone down from his shadow, and have left him.
- 13 Upon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, and all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches:
- 14 To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees ⁱ stand up in their height, all that drink water: for they are all delivered unto death, to the nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit.
- 15 Thus saith the Lord God; In the day when he went down to the grave I caused a mourning: I covered the deep for him, and I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed: and I caused Lebanon ^k to mourn for him, and all the trees of the field fainted for him.
- 16 I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit: and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth.
- 17 They also went down into hell with him unto them that be slain with the sword; and they that were his arm, that dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen.
- 18 To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth: thou shalt lie

And 24 Gedaliah sware to them, and to their men, and said unto them, Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon; and it shall be well with you. But ^b it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael 25 the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed ^c royal, came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah. ³⁴ The sacred narrative, after the capture of Daniel, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, proceeds to relate in parts of the second books of Kings and Chronicles, of Ezekiel, and of Jeremiah, the series of events which were taking place, at the same time, in three several parts of the world,—Judea, Babylon, and Egypt. The attempt to place all these contemporary events in the most intelligible order, has been attended with much difficulty. In Part I. of this Seventh Period, the history of events at Jerusalem is brought down to the burning of the Temple: in the Second Part of this Period, the circumstances which occurred in Chaldea, recorded or alluded to by Ezekiel, are likewise brought down to the burning of the Temple. The present Part contains the history of the Jews, who, after the destruction of Jerusalem, remained for some short time with Gedaliah in Judea; and then fled to Egypt, taking with them their great prophet Jeremiah.

6 and a reward, and let him go. Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.
7 Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive 8 to Babylon; then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of a Maacha-9 thite, they and their men. And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan sware unto them and to their men, saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve 10 the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you. As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, ^{e to} serve the Chaldeans, which ^{e Heb. to} will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, ^{stand before.} and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities 11 that ye have taken. Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the 12 son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan; even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.

§ 3. Conspiracy of Ishmael against Gedaliah.

JEREMIAH XL. VER. 13, TO THE END.

A.C. 588.

a Heb. to strike thee in soul?

Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of 13 the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, and said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the 14 king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah ^a to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not. Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in 15 Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto 16 Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

JEREMIAH XLII. VER. 1—10.

b Heb. in going and weeping.

c Or, near Gedaliah.
d Heb. by the hand, or, by the side of Gedaliah.

Now it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the 1 son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah. Then arose Ishmael the son of 2 Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land. Ishmael also slew all the Jews that 3 were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war. And it came 4 to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it, that there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, 5 and from Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to the house of the LORD. And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth 6 from Mizpah to meet them, ^b weeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam. And it was so, when they 7 came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him. But ten men were found among 8 them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren. Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of 9 the men, whom he had slain ^c ^d because of Gedaliah, was it which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel:

 10 slain. Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to the Ammonites.

§ 4. Johanah rescues the Captives from Ishmael, and, contrary to the Commands of God given by Jeremiah, takes refuge at Tahpanhes in Egypt.

JEREMIAH XLI. VER. 11, TO THE END.

11 But when Johanah the son of Kareah, and all the captains 587.
 of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ish-12 mael the son of Nethaniah had done, Then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, 13 and found him by the great waters that are in Gibeon. Now it came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanah the son of Kareah, and all the captains of 14 the forces that were with him, then they were glad. So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about and returned, and went unto Johanah the son of Kareah.
 15 But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanah with 16 eight men, and went to the Ammonites. Then took Johanah the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he 17 had brought again from Gibeon: and they departed, and dwelt in the habitation of Chimham, which is by Beth-lehem, to go 18 to enter into Egypt, because of the Chaldeans: for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

JEREMIAH XLII.

1 Then all the captains of the forces, and Johanah the son of Kareah, and Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people
 2 from the least even unto the greatest, came near, and said unto Jeremiah the prophet, ^a Let, we beseech thee, our supplication a Or, Let our God, even for all this remnant; (for we are left but a few of 3 many, as thine eyes do behold us:) that the LORD thy God may shew us the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that 4 we may do. Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that whatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare it unto

A.C. 587. you; I will keep nothing back from you. Then they said to 5 Jeremiah, The LORD be a true and faithful witness between us, if we do not even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us. Whether it be good, 6 or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.

And it came to pass after ten days, that the word of the LORD 7 came unto Jeremiah. Then called he Johanan the son of 8 Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which were with him, and all the people from the least even to the greatest, and said 9 unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him;
 If ye will still abide in this land, then will I build you, and 10 not pull you down, and I will plant you, and not pluck you up:
 for I repent me of the evil that I have done unto you. Be not 11 afraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid: be not afraid of him, saith the LORD; for I am with you to save you, and to deliver you from his hand. And I will shew mercies 12 unto you, that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own land.

But if ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey 13
 the voice of the LORD your God, saying, No; but we will go 14 into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread; and there we will dwell: and now therefore hear the word of the LORD, 15 ye remnant of Judah: Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; If ye wholly set your faces to enter into Egypt, and go to sojourn there; then it shall come to pass, that the sword, 16 which ye feared, shall overtake you there in the land of Egypt, and the famine, whereof ye were afraid, ^b shall follow close after you there in Egypt; and there ye shall die. ^c So shall it 17 be with all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt to sojourn there; they shall die with the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: and none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them. For thus saith the LORD 18 of hosts, the God of Israel; As mine anger and my fury hath been poured forth upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem; so shall my fury be poured forth upon you, when ye shall enter into Egypt: and ye shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach; and ye shall see this place no more.

The LORD hath said concerning you, O ye remnant of Judah; 19 Go ye not into Egypt: know certainly that I have ^d admonished you this day. For ^e ye dissembled in your hearts, when ye 20 sent me unto the LORD your God, saying, Pray for us unto the LORD our God; and according unto all that the LORD our God shall say, so declare unto us, and we will do it. And now 21

^b Heb. shall cleave after you.

^c Heb. So shall all the men be.

^d Heb. testified against you.
^e Or, ye have used deceit against your souls.

I have this day declared it to you; but ye have not obeyed the voice of the LORD your God, nor any thing for the which he hath sent me unto you. Now therefore know certainly that ye shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, in the place whither ye desire ^f to go and to sojourn.

A.C. 587.

f Or, to go to sojourn.

JEREMIAH XLIII. VER. 1—7.

1 And it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the LORD their God, for which the LORD their God had sent him to them, even 2 all these words, then spake Azariah the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the proud men, saying unto Jeremiah, Thou speakest falsely: the LORD our God hath not 3 sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there: but Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might put us to death, 4 and carry us away captives into Babylon. So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the LORD, to dwell in the land of Judah. 5 But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations, whither they had been driven, to dwell in the land of Judah; 6 even men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters, and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, 7 and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah. So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: thus came they even to ^g Tahpanhes.

JEREMIAH XLIII. VER. 8, TO THE END.

8 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,
9 Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brickkiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;
10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.
11 And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver ^a such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword.
12 And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives: and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd

He shall break also the ^b images of ^c Beth-sheimesh, that is in ¹³ the land of Egypt ; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

JEREMIAH XLVI. VER. 13, TO THE END ³⁵.

The word that the LORD spake to Jeremiah the prophet, ¹³ how Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon should come and smite the land of Egypt.

Declare ye in Egypt, and publish in Migdol, and publish in ¹⁴ Noph and in Tahpanhes: say ye, Stand fast, and prepare thee ; for the sword shall devour round about thee.

Why are thy valiant men swept away ? they stood not, be- ¹⁵ cause the LORD did drive them.

d Heb. multiplied the faller.

He ^d made many to fall, yea, one fell upon another : and ¹⁶ they said, Arise, and let us go again to our own people, and to the land of our nativity, from the oppressing sword.

They did cry there, Pharaoh king of Egypt is but a noise ; ¹⁷ he hath past the time appointed.

As I live, saith the king, whose name is the LORD of hosts, ¹⁸ Surely as Tabor is among the mountains, and as Carmel by the sea, so shall he come.

e Heb. make thee instruments of captivity.

O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt, ^e furnish thyself to go ¹⁹ into captivity : for Noph shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant.

Egypt is like a very fair heifer, but destruction cometh ; it ²⁰ cometh out of the north.

f Heb. bullocks of the stall.

Also her hired men are in the midst of her like ^f fatted bul- ²¹ locks ; for they also are turned back, and are fled away together : they did not stand, because the day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation.

³⁵ The several passages from Jeremiah which are inserted in this third chapter, are placed here on the authority of their internal evidence. This passage (Jer. xlv. 13, to the end,) is added to the preceding from comparing Jer. xlv. 14. with Jer. xliii. 7. The prophet was forcibly brought by his rebellious countrymen to Tahpanhes in Egypt.

Egypt having been the ally of Judea, many of the Jews, long before Johanan took refuge there, had escaped to this country from the king of Babylon. Jeremiah, after predicting the conquest and captivity of the Egyptians by Nebuchadnezzar, addresses himself to the Jews, who were with him, and calls upon them to furnish themselves for a similar fate. The prophecy concludes with promises of mercy and restoration to those Jews who were already captives in Babylon.

The expressions in ver. 28, "I will make a full end of all the nations," yet "I will not make a full end of thee," seem to refer to a period when the Jews were not only captives, but so miserably reduced, that there was every reason to apprehend their extinction as a nation: and as they appear to have been, at this time, at the height of their affliction and distress, it is probable this powerful consolation was offered to them. Bishop Horne beautifully remarks on ver. 28. "Even to our day, this wonderful prophecy is fulfilled before us. The oppressors of the Jews, the mighty monarchies of Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome, are vanished, like the shadows of the evening. Nothing remains of them but their names: while this persecuted, despised, and hated people, without a friend or a protector, amidst the wreck of nations, oppressed and harassed by edicts and executioners, by murders and massacres, hath outlived the ruins of them all: and will continue till the appointed day of their conversion and their restoration come."

- 22 The voice thereof shall go like a serpent; for they shall march with an army, and come against her with axes, as hewers of wood. A.C. 587.
- 23 They shall cut down her forest, saith the LORD, though it cannot be searched; because they are more than the grasshoppers, and are innumerable.
- 24 The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; she shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north.
- 25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saith; Behold, I will punish the ^gh multitude of No, and Pharaoh, and Egypt, with their gods, and their kings; even Pharaoh, and all them that trust in him: ^g Or, nou-risher.
^h Heb. Amon.
- 26 And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of his servants: and afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old, saith the LORD.
- 27 ⁱ But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid. ⁱ Is. xli. 13.

JEREMIAH XLIV ³⁶.

- 1 The word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at Migdol, and at Tahpanhes, and at Noph, and in the country of Pathros, saying,
- 2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day they are a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein,
- 3 Because of their wickedness which they have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and ³⁶ The Jews who went into Egypt with Johanan, and had taken Jeremiah with them, gave themselves up in that country to idolatry. The prophet for the last time denounces the judgments of God against them. As we hear no more of Jeremiah, it is most likely that he died soon after the delivery of this prophecy in Egypt, being now much advanced in age, and having prophesied forty-one years from the thirteenth of Josiah. Some have asserted that he was put to death by Pharaoh-Hophra. Others, among whom are Tertullian, Jerome, and Epiphanius, assert that he was stoned to death by the Jews for preaching against their idolatry: and they suppose that Heb. xi. 37. "they were stoned," refers to the death of Jeremiah.—Prideaux, vol. i. p. 722; Hales, vol. ii. p. 492.

A.C. 587. to serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

Howbeit I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate.

But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods.

Wherefore my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; Wherefore commit ye this great evil against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, ^a out of Judah, to leave you none to remain;

^a Heb. out of the midst of Judah.

In that ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

^b Heb. wickednesses, or, punishments, &c.

Have ye forgotten the ^b wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

They are not ^c humbled even unto this day, neither have they feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you and before your fathers.

Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, ^d I will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

^d Amos ix. 4.

And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine: and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they ^e have a desire to return to dwell there: for none shall return but such as shall escape.

Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

- 16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name A.C. 587.
of the LORD, we will not hearken unto thee.
- 17 But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the ^fqueen of heaven, ^fOr, frame of heaven. and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, ^gch. vii. 18. and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil.
- 18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.
- 19 ^h And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink offerings unto her, without our ⁱmen? h ch. vii. 18.
i Or, husbands.
- 20 Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,
- 21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?
- 22 So that the LORD could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.
- 23 Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.
- 24 Moreover, Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the LORD, all Judah that are in the land of Egypt:
- 25 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying; Ye and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.
- 26 Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, I have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord God liveth.
- 27 Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and not for good:

A.C. 587. and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose words shall stand, ^k mine or their's.

^k Heb. from me, or them.

And this shall be a sign unto you, saith the LORD, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil :

Thus saith the LORD ; Behold, I will give Pharaoh-hopra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life ; as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life.

§ 7. Brief Recapitulation of the Captivities of the Jews by Nebuchadrezzar.

JEREMIAH LII. VER. 28, 29, 30.

In the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar he carried away captive from Jerusalem eight hundred thirty and two ^l persons :

In the three and twentieth year of Nebuchadrezzar, Nebuzardan the captain of the guard carried away captive of the Jews seven hundred forty and five persons : all the persons were four thousand and six hundred.

of thirteen years. In chap. xxviii. from ver. 20 to 24, the destruction of Sidon, the mother city of Tyre, is denounced, and the chapter ends with promises to the house of Israel of deliverance from all their enemies, and a happy restoration to their own land. The overthrow of Tyre is likewise foretold by Isaiah, chap. xxiii. and by Jeremiah, chap. xlvii. The united testimonies of modern travellers concur in proving the literal accomplishment of this prophecy, (chap. xxvi. 14.) that Tyre should "be a place to spread nets upon," and be "built no more:" and, according to Maundrell, its present inhabitants are only a few wretches harbouring themselves in the vaults, and subsisting themselves chiefly upon fishing, who seem intended by Divine Providence to be a visible argument how God has fulfilled his word concerning Tyre. The power and opulence of Tyre, in the prosperous age of its commerce, must have attracted general attention. In these chapters Ezekiel gives a most particular account of the nature and variety of its commercial transactions, which conveys a most magnificent idea of the extensive power of that state. It is supposed that these prophecies appertain both to Old and New Tyre, some expressions being applicable only to the former, and others only to the latter. New Tyre was destroyed by Alexander the Great 260 years after the time of Ezekiel. For a further account of the fulfilment of these prophecies, vide Newton on the Prophecies, vol. i. p. 190—212; D'Oyly and Mant in loc.; Archbp. Newcome; Josephus, Ant. ¹ God's vengeance, for their insolence against the Jews, upon the Ammonites; 8 upon Moab and Seir; 12 upon Edom, 15 and upon the Philistines.

The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, 1
 Son of man, ¹set thy face against the Ammonites, and prophesy against them; 2

And say unto the Ammonites, Hear the word of the Lord ³ GOD; Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary, when it was profaned; and against the land of Israel, when it was desolate; and against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity;

^m Heb. children.

Behold, therefore I will deliver thee to the ^mmen of the east ⁴ for a possession, and they shall set their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee: they shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk.

And I will make Rabbah a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching place for flocks: and ye shall know that I am the LORD. 5

And I will execute judgments upon Moab; and they shall 11 know that I am the LORD.

Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because that Edom hath dealt 12 against the house of Judah ^x by taking vengeance; and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them; A.C. 587.

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it; and I will make it desolate from Teman; and ^y they of Dedan shall fall by the sword. x Heb. by revenging re-

Dedan.

14 And I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel: and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger and according to my fury; and they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord GOD.

15 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because the Philistines have dealt by revenge, and have taken vengeance with a despiteful heart, to destroy it ^z for the old hatred; z Or, with perpetual hatred.

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will stretch out mine hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the Cherethims, and destroy the remnant of the ^a sea coasts. a Or, haven

The Destruction of Tyre.

EZEKIEL XXVI.

1 Tyrus, for insulting against Jerusalem, is threatened. 7 The power of Nebuchadrezzar against her. 15 The mourning and astonishment of the sea at her fall.

1 And it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, Aha, she is broken that was the gates of the people: she is turned unto me: I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste:

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up.

4 And they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock.

5 It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD: and it shall become a spoil to the nations.

6 And her daughters which are in the field shall be slain by the sword; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

7 For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, a king of kings, from the north, with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people.

8 He shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field: and

A.C. 587. he shall make a fort against thee, and ° cast a mount against thee, and lift up the buckler against thee.

c Or, pour out the engine of shot.

And he shall set engines of war against thy walls, and with 9 his axes he shall break down thy towers.

By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall 10 cover thee: thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, ^d as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach.

d Heb. according to the enterings of a city broken up.

With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy 11 streets: he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground.

And they shall make a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey 12 of thy merchandise: and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy ^e thy pleasant houses: and they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water.

e Heb. houses of thy desire.

f Is. xxiv. 8. Jer. vii. 34. & xvi. 9.

And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease; and the 13 sound of thy harps shall be no more heard.

And I will make thee like the top of a rock: thou shalt be 14 a place to spread nets upon; thou shalt be built no more: for I the LORD have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

Thus saith the Lord God to Tyrus; Shall not the isles shake 15 at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee?

Then all the princes of the sea shall come down from their 16 thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their broided garments: they shall clothe themselves with ^g trembling; they shall sit upon the ground, and shall tremble at every moment, and be astonished at thee.

g Heb. tremblings.

And they shall take up a ^h lamentation for thee, and say to 17 thee, How art thou destroyed, that wast inhabited ⁱ of seafaring men, the renowned city, which wast strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it!

h Rev. xviii. 9.

i Heb. of the sea.

Now shall the isles tremble in the day of thy fall; yea, the 18 isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure.

For thus saith the Lord God; When I shall make thee a 19 desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall bring up the deep upon thee, and great waters shall cover thee;

When I shall bring thee down with them that descend into 20 the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in places desolate of old, with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and I shall set glory in the land of the living;

I will make thee ^k a terror, and thou shalt be no more: though 21 thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again, saith the Lord God.

EZEKIEL XXVII.

1 The rich supply of Tyrus. 26 The great and unrecoverable fall thereof.

- 1 The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, A.C. 587.
- 2 Now, thou son of man, take up a lamentation for Tyrus;
- 3 And say unto Tyrus, O thou that art situate at the entry of the sea, which art a merchant of the people for many isles, Thus saith the Lord God; O Tyrus, thou hast said, I am^l of perfect beauty. ^l Heb. perfect of beauty.
- 4 Thy borders are in the ^m midst of the seas, thy builders have perfected thy beauty. ^m Heb. heart.
- 5 They have ⁿ made all thy ship boards of fir trees of Senir: they have taken cedars from Lebanon to make masts for thee. ⁿ Heb. buil.
- 6 Of the oaks of Bashan have they made thine oars; ^o ^p the company of the Ashurites have made thy benches of ivory, brought out of the isles of Chittim. ^o Or, they have made thy hatches of ivory well trodden.
- 7 Fine linen with brodered work from Egypt was that which thou spreadest forth to be thy sail; ^q blue and purple from the isles of Elishah was that which covered thee. ^p Heb. the daughter.
^q Or, purple and scarlet.
- 8 The inhabitants of Zidon and Arvad were thy mariners: thy wise men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots.
- 9 The ancients of Gebal and the wise men thereof were in thee thy ^r ^s calkers: all the ships of the sea with their mariners were in thee to occupy thy merchandise. ^r Or, stoppers of chinks.
- 10 They of Persia and of Lud and of Phut were in thine army, thy men of war: they hanged the shield and helmet in thee; they set forth thy comeliness.
- 11 The men of Arvad with thine army were upon thy walls round about, and the Gammadims were in thy towers: they hanged their shields upon thy walls round about; they have made thy beauty perfect.
- 12 Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs.
- 13 Javan, Tubal, and Meshech, they were thy merchants: they traded the persons of men and vessels of brass in thy ^t market. ^t Or, merchandise.
- 14 They of the house of Togamah traded in thy fairs with horses and horsemen and mules.
- 15 The men of Dedan were thy merchants; many isles were the merchandise of thine hand: they brought thee for a present horns of ivory and ebony.
- 16 Syria was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of ^u the wares of thy making: they occupied in thy fairs with emeralds, purple, and brodered work, and fine linen, and coral, and ^x agate. ^u Heb. thy works.
^x Heb. chry-soprase.
- 17 Judah, and the land of Israel, they were thy merchants: they

A.C. 587. traded in thy market wheat of Minnith, and Pannag, and honey, y Or, rosin. and oil, and y balm.

Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares of 18 thy making, for the multitude of all riches; in the wine of Helbon, and white wool.

z Or, Meuzal. Dan also and Javan z going to, and fro occupied in thy 19 fairs: bright iron, cassia, and calamus, were in thy market.

a Heb. clothes of freedom.
 b Heb. they were the merchants of thy hand.
 Dedan was thy merchant in a precious clothes for chariots. 20
 Arabia, and all the princes of Kedar, b they occupied with 21 thee in lambs, and rams, and goats: in these were they thy merchants.

The merchants of Sheba and Raamah, they were thy mer- 22 chants: they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices, and with all precious stones and gold.

Haran, and Canneh, and Eden, the merchants of Sheba, 23
 Ashur, and Chilmad, were thy merchants.

c Or, excellent things.
 d Heb. foldings.
 These were thy merchants in c all sorts of things, in blue d clothes, 24 and brodered work, and in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar, among thy merchandise.

The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market: and 25 thou wast replenished, and made very glorious in the midst of the seas.

Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters: the east 26 wind hath broken thee in the e midst of the seas.

f Rev. xviii. 9, &c.
 g Or, even with all.
 h Heb. heart.
 Thy f riches, and thy fairs, thy merchandise, thy mariners, 27 and thy pilots, thy calkers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise, and all thy men of war, that are in thee, g and in all thy company which is in the midst of thee, shall fall into the h midst of the seas in the day of thy ruin.

i Or, waves. The i suburbs shall shake at the sound of the cry of thy 28 pilots.

And all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of 29 the sea, shall come down from their ships, they shall stand upon the land;

And shall cause their voice to be heard against thee, and shall 30 cry bitterly, and shall cast up dust upon their heads, they shall wallow themselves in the ashes.

And they shall make themselves utterly bald for thee, and 31 gird them with sackcloth, and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing.

And in their wailing they shall take up a lamentation for thee, 32 and lament over thee, saying, What city is like Tyrus, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea?

When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many 33 people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches and of thy merchandise.

In the time when thou shalt be broken by the seas in the 34 depths of the waters thy merchandise and all thy company in the midst of thee shall fall. A.C. 587.

35 All the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished at thee, and their kings shall be sore afraid, they shall be troubled in their countenance.

36 The merchants among the people shall hiss at thee ; thou shalt be ^k a terror, and ^l never shalt be any more. ·

EZEKIEL XXVIII.

1 God's judgment upon the prince of Tyrus for his sacrilegious pride. 11 A lamentation of his great glory corrupted by sin. 20 The judgment of Zidon. 24 The restoration of Israel.

1 The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord GOD ; Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a god, I sit in the seat of God, in the ^m midst of the ⁿ seas ; ⁿ yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart as the heart of God : m Heb. heart.
n Is. xxxi. 3.

3 Behold, thou art wiser than Daniel ; there is no secret that they can hide from thee :

4 With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures :

5 ^o By thy great wisdom and by thy traffick hast thou increased thy riches, and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches : o Heb. By the greatness of thy wisdom.

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD ; Because thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God ;

7 Behold, therefore I will bring strangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations : and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness.

8 They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.

9 Wilt thou yet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God ? but thou shalt be a man, and no God, in the hand of him that ^p slayeth thee. p Or, wounded.

10 Thou shalt die the deaths of the uncircumcised by the hand of strangers : for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

11 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Son of man, take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord GOD ; Thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.

13 Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God : every precious stone was thy covering, the ^q sardius, topaz, and the diamond, the ^r beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the ^s emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold : the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created. q Or, ruby.
r Or, chrysolite.
s Or, chryso-prase.

14 Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth ; and I have set

A.C. 587. thee so: thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire.

Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day that thou wast 15 created, till iniquity was found in thee.

By the multitude of thy merchandise they have filled the 16 midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned: therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God: and I will destroy thee, O covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire.

Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast 17 corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness: I will cast thee to the ground, I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee.

Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries by the multitude of thine 18 iniquities, by the iniquity of thy traffick; therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee.

All they that know thee among the people shall be astonish- 19 ed at thee: thou shalt be ^t a terror, and never shalt thou be any more.

Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 20

Son of man, set thy face against Zidon, and prophesy against 21 it,

And say, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against 22 thee, O Zidon; and I will be glorified in the midst of thee: and they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall have executed judgments in her, and shall be sanctified in her.

For I will send into her pestilence, and blood into her streets; 23 and the wounded shall be judged in the midst of her by the sword upon her on every side; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

And there shall be no more a pricking brier unto the house 24 of Israel, nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them, that despised them; and they shall know that I am the Lord God.

Thus saith the Lord God; When I shall have gathered the 25 house of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered, and shall be sanctified in them in the sight of the heathen, then shall they dwell in their land that I have given to my servant Jacob.

And they shall dwell ^u safely therein, and shall build houses, 26 and plant vineyards; yea, they shall dwell with confidence, when I have executed judgments upon all those that ^x despise them round about them; and they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

^u Or, with confidence.

^x Or, spoil.

§ 2. Prophecy against Egypt.

EZEKIEL XXXII. VER. 1—16.

- 1 And it came to pass in the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying³⁸, A.C. 587.
- 2 Son of man, take up a lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say unto him, Thou art like a young lion of the nations, and thou art as a ^a whale in the seas: and thou camest forth with thy rivers, and troubledst the waters with thy feet, and fouledst their rivers. a Or, dragon.
- 3 Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will therefore ^b spread out my net over thee with a company of many people; and they shall bring thee up in my net. b ch. xii. 13. & xvii. 20.
- 4 Then will I leave thee upon the land, I will cast thee forth upon the open field, and will cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee.
- 5 And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height.
- 6 I will also water with thy blood ^c the land wherein thou swimmest, even to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee. c Or, the land of thy swimming.
- 7 And when I shall ^d put thee out, ^e I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light. d Or, extinguish.
e Is. xiii. 10. Joel ii. 31. & iii. 15. Matt. xxiv. 29.
- 8 All the ^f bright lights of heaven will I make ^g dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord GOD. f Heb. lights of the light in heaven.
g Heb. them dark.
- 9 I will also ^h vex the hearts of many people, when I shall bring thy destruction among the nations, into the countries which thou hast not known. h Heb. provoke to anger, or, grief.
- 10 Yea, I will make many people amazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, when I shall brandish my sword before them; and they shall tremble at every moment, every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall.
- 11 For thus saith the Lord GOD; The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee.
- 12 By the swords of the mighty will I cause thy multitude to fall, the terrible of the nations, all of them: and they shall spoil the pomp of Egypt, and all the multitude thereof shall be destroyed.

³⁸ The predictions in these two sections were delivered at different times after the capture of Jerusalem; compare ver. 1, with 17. By "the waters," in ver. 2, are signified the neighbouring kingdoms, whose peace was disturbed by the Egyptian monarch; compare ver. 7, 8, with chap. xxxi. 15. God's judgments upon particular countries being earnest of a general judgment; they are described in such terms, as if the whole frame of nature were dissolved. The desolation spoken of in ver. 13, was to last forty years, see chap. xxix. 11; when their neighbours would enjoy such quietness as a river does that is never ruffled, ver. 14.

A.C. 587.

I will destroy also all the beasts thereof from beside the great 13 waters; neither shall the foot of man trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beasts trouble them.

Then will I make their waters deep, and cause their rivers to 14 run like oil, saith the Lord GOD.

ⁱ Heb. desolate from the fulness thereof.

When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the coun- 15 try shall be ⁱ destitute of that whereof it was full, when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, then shall they know that I am the LORD.

This is the lamentation wherewith they shall lament her: 16 the daughters of the nations shall lament her: they shall lament for her, even for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord GOD.

§ 3. Prophecy against Egypt.

EZEKIEL XXXII. VER. 17, TO THE END.

It came to pass also in the twelfth year, in the fifteenth day 17 of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying³⁹,

Son of man, wail for the multitude of Egypt, and cast them 18 down, even her, and the daughters of the famous nations, unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit.

Whom dost thou pass in beauty? go down, and be thou laid 19 with the uncircumcised.

^a Or, the sword is laid.

They shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the 20 sword: ^a she is delivered to the sword: draw her and all her multitudes.

The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the 21 midst of hell with them that help him: they are gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword.

Asshur is there and all her company: his graves are about 22 him: all of them slain, fallen by the sword:

Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and her company 23 is round about her grave: all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused ^b terror in the land of the living.

^b Or, dismaying.

There is Elam and all her multitude round about her grave, 24 all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which are gone down un-

³⁹ The imagery of the latter part of this chapter, from verse 17, is sublime and terrible. Bishop Lowth remarks that Ezekiel has here described the same scene, with all the same circumstances, as Isaiah in chap. xiv. "Hell," in verse 21, signifies the state of the dead; where the deceased tyrants are represented as coming to meet the king of Egypt with his auxiliaries (see chap. xxx. 8.) upon their arrival at the same place. The Assyrians, both king and people, whose destruction is represented, chap. xxxi.; the Persians, conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xlix. 34. The Scythians, and the people called Tibareni, and Moschi, (the sons of Japheth, Gen. x. 2, situated towards Mount Caucasus, and the Euxine Sea); the Edomites, "Her kings and all her princes," whose destruction is foretold by Ezekiel, chap. xxv. 12; "The princes of the north," the Tyrians and their allies, chap. xxvi. 16; joined with the Zidonians their neighbours, are all represented as assembled in this invisible state, and laid in the midst of the uncircumcised; "all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused terror in the land of the living."

circumcised into the nether parts of the earth, which caused their terror in the land of the living; yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit. A.C. 587.

25 They have set her a bed in the midst of the slain with all her multitude: her graves are round about him: all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword: though their terror was caused in the land of the living, yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit: he is put in the midst of them that be slain.

26 There is Meshech, Tubal, and all her multitude: her graves are round about him: all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword, though they caused their terror in the land of the living.

27 And they shall not lie with the mighty that are fallen of the uncircumcised, which are gone down to hell ^c with their weapons of war: and they have laid their swords under their heads, but their iniquities shall be upon their bones, though they were the terror of the mighty in the land of the living. c Heb. with weapons of their war.

28 Yea, thou shalt be broken in the midst of the uncircumcised, and shalt lie with them that are slain with the sword.

29 There is Edom, her kings, and all her princes, which with their might are ^d laid by them that were slain by the sword: they shall lie with the uncircumcised, and with them that go down to the pit. d Heb. given, or, put.

30 There be the princes of the north, all of them, and all the Zidonians, which are gone down with the slain; with their terror they are ashamed of their might; and they lie uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword, and bear their shame with them that go down to the pit.

31 Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted over all his multitude, even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword, saith the Lord God.

32 For I have caused my terror in the land of the living: and he shall be laid in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that are slain with the sword, even Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord God.

⁴⁰ This part of chap. xxxiii. is inserted here, as it is placed in the sacred text immediately after the thirty-second; and I see no reason to alter its arrangement. Archbishop Newcome observes, "that Ezekiel certainly uttered the prediction contained in this chapter (ver. 1—21.) before Jerusalem was taken; but how long is uncertain." The learned prelate, however, has not given his reason for this opinion: and from examining the contents of the prophecy, we may conclude, that the prophet might as justly be called a watchman to the people after, as before the captivity: and the reasoning is as perfectly applicable (perhaps more applicable), to the Jewish church in Babylon, as if they had remained in their own country.

 eth. blood shall be upon his own head.

He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning ; 5 his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul.

But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the 6 trumpet, and the people be not warned ; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity ; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

c ch. iii. 17, So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto 7 &c. the house of Israel ; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely 8 die ; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity ; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn 9 from it ; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity ; but thou hast delivered thy soul.

 then live ?

 him in the day of his transgression : as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness ; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth.

When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live ; 13 if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousness shall not be remembered ; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it.

- 3 Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock.
- 4 The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with ^b force and with cruelty have ye ruled them. ^b 1 Pet. v. 3.

- 6 My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them.
- 7 Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

⁴¹ In chapter xxxiv. God reproves the conduct of the governors of the Jewish people, ver. 1—11; and promises, under the symbol of a shepherd, to provide for them himself. He promises to restore them to their own land under the Messiah, under whose reign their happiness is beautifully described. Chapter xxxv. repeats the prophet's former denunciations against the Edomites (see chap. xxv. 12.) as a just punishment for their insults to the Jews during their calamities. The thirty-sixth chapter announces the general restoration of the Jews, and their consequent happiness. The same subject is illustrated in chapter xxxvii. 1—15, under the vision of a resurrection of dry bones; which many commentators have considered as remotely alluding to the general resurrection: under the union of two sticks, (ver. 16, to the end) is foretold the union of Israel and Judah into one state and church under the Messiah.—Horne's Crit. Introduct.

A.C. 587.

As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock;

Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD; 9

Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out.

d Heb. according to the seeking.

^d As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day.

And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country.

I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD.

I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with judgment.

e Heb. small cattle of lambs and kids.
f Heb. great he goats.

And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I judge between ^e cattle and cattle, between the rams and the ^f he goats.

Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet?

And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.

Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD unto them; Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.

Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad;

- 22 Therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle. A.C. 587.

- 25 And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.
- 26 And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing.
- 27 And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, when I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them.
- 28 And they shall no more be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beast of the land devour them; but they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid.

The judgment of mount Seir for their hatred of Israel.

 thou hast used out of thy hatred against them; and I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee.

And thou shalt know that I am the LORD, and that I have 12 heard all thy blasphemies which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel, saying, They are laid desolate, they are given us ^t to consume.

Thus with your mouth ye have ^u boasted against me, and 13

 I will make thee desolate.

As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel, 15 because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee: thou shalt be desolate, O mount Seir, and all Idumea, even all of it; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

- 8 But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are at hand to come.
- 9 For, behold, I am for you, and I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown:

- 12 Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth bereave them of men.

- 16 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
- 17 Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their own way, and by their doings: their way was before me as the uncleanness of a removed woman.
- 18 Wherefore I poured my fury upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it:

- 1 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
2 Son of man, set thy face against ^a Gog, the land of Magog, a Rev. xx. 8.

⁴² The numerous interpretations which have been given by various writers *, in our own days, to the several prophecies of the Old Testament, which allude to the latter times, and the fanciful manner in which the events of modern wars, changes, revolutions, and treaties, have been supposed to bear on these prophecies, have tended in a great degree to prejudice the generality of readers from attending to the hierophants who propose to conduct them through the recesses of the Temple. Although so many speculative theories have been given to the world, still the study of prophecy is increasing, and almost every writer adds something to our stock of knowledge on this subject. The greater part of the prophecies of God have reference to events which are yet to take place, as well as to those which are already past. If any part of the ancient prophecies allude more plainly than others to the latter days, it is this of Ezekiel concerning Gog and Magog. It has undoubtedly not yet received its completion. Bishop Newton and Joseph Mede are of opinion, that the Gog and Magog of Ezekiel, are different from the Gog and Magog of the Apocalypse,—that the former signify the Turks, whose expedition against the Holy Land will take place at the beginning of the Millennium. This opinion is strenuously opposed by Mr. Faber, who supposes, with Archbishop Newcome and Mr. Lowman, that the Gog and Magog of Ezekiel are the same as those of the Apocalypse : Mr. Faber divides these chapters in the following manner. “1. The restoration of Judah, partly in a converted, and partly in an unconverted state ; and the contemporary war between the two parties, supported by their several allies, the maritime nation and Antichrist. 2. The destruction of Antichrist and his Roman colleagues, under the general mystic name of Edom, and the Lord's vindication of himself for restoring so stubborn a race as that of the Jews. 3. The national resurrection of Judah and Israel, to which the overgrown power of Antichrist was the only impediment, and their everlasting union under the mystic David their prince. 4. The commencement of the Millennium season of blessedness and tranquillity. 5. The destruction of Gog and Magog.”

I cannot venture to express an opinion on this subject. The prophecy certainly refers to those great events which are repeatedly alluded to in other predictions of Holy Writ, as about to take place at the end of the world. In this and similar passages, it may be said, “coming events cast their shadows before :” yet we cannot penetrate into the clouds and thick darkness that encircle the future. We are both exhorted and encouraged to study the word of prophecy ; not with the view of indulging curiosity, but of enforcing humility : to strengthen our faith, by enabling us so plainly to see the hand of Providence, in the past and present, that we may believe the promises which relate to the future. As the present dispensation of the kingdom of the Messiah was predicted in general and indefinite terms to the ancient Jews, so is the millennial period of the world predicted to us. As the Jew was called on to believe in those ages of the church, so is the Christian required to believe at present. As the former prophecies have been fulfilled, so will the latter be accomplished.—Vide Faber's View of the Prophecies relative to the Conversion, Restoration, Union, and future Glory of the Houses of Judah and Israel, vol. ii. prophecy xxv. ; Newton on the Prophecies, Dissert. xxv. ; Mede's Works, book iv. epist. 54 ; and Faber on the Prophecies relative to the Period of 1260 Years, vol. i. chap. vi.

A.C. 587. ^b the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him, ^b Or, prince of the chief.

And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:

c ch. xxxix. 2.

And ^c I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords:

^d Or, Phut.

Persia, Ethiopia, and ^d Libya with them; all of them with shield and helmet:

Gomer, and all his bands; the house of Togarmah of the north quarters, and all his bands: and many people with thee.

Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them.

After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them.

Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee.

Thus saith the Lord GOD; It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt ^e think an evil thought:

^e Or, conceive a mischievous purpose.

And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell ^f safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates,

^g Heb. To spoil the spoil, and prey the prey.

^g To take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the ^h midst of the land.

Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?

Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord GOD; In that day when my people of Israel dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army:

And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a 16

cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes. A.C. 587.

- 17 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time ⁱ by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them? ⁱ Heb. by the hands.
- 18 And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, that my fury shall come up in my face.
- 19 For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel;
- 20 So that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the ^j steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground. ^j Or, lowers, or, stairs.
- 21 And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord GOD: every man's sword shall be against his brother.
- 22 And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.
- 23 Thus will I magnify myself, and ^k sanctify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the LORD. ^k ch. xxxvi. 29. & xxxvii. 28.

1 God's judgment upon Gog. 8 Israel's victory. 11 Gog's burial in Hamon-gog. 17 The feast of the fowls. 23 Israel, having been plagued for their sins, shall be gathered again with eternal favour.

- 1 Therefore, thou son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:
- 2 And I will turn thee back, and ^l leave but the sixth part of thee, and will cause thee to come up from ^m the north parts, and will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel: ^l Or, strike thee with six plagues; or, draw thee back with an hook of six teeth, as ch. xxxviii. 4.
- 3 And I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand, and will cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand. ^m Heb. the sides of the north.
- 4 Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel, thou, and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee: I will give thee unto the ravenous birds of every ⁿ sort, and to the beasts of the field ^o to be devoured. ⁿ Heb. wing.
^o Heb. to devour.
- 5 Thou shalt fall upon ^p the open field: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD. ^p Heb. the face of the field.

A.C. 587. And I will send a fire on Magog, and among them that dwell ^q carelessly in the isles: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

^q Or, confidently.

So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel; and I will not let them pollute my holy name any more: and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, the Holy One in Israel.

Behold, it is come, and it is done, saith the Lord God; this is the day whereof I have spoken.

^r Or, javelins.

^s Or, make a fire of them.

And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth, and shall set on fire and burn the weapons, both the shields and the bucklers, the bows and the arrows, and the ^r hand-staves, and the spears, and they shall ^s burn them with fire seven years:

So that they shall take no wood out of the field, neither cut down any out of the forests; for they shall burn the weapons with fire: and they shall spoil those that spoiled them, and rob those that robbed them, saith the Lord God.

^t Or, mouths.

^u That is, The multitude of Gog.

And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea: and it shall stop the ^t noses of the passengers: and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude: and they shall call it The valley of ^u Hamon-gog.

And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the land.

Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them; and it shall be to them a renown the day that I shall be glorified, saith the Lord God.

^x Heb. men of continuance.

And they shall sever out ^x men of continual employment, passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, to cleanse it: after the end of seven months shall they search.

^y Heb. build.

And the passengers that pass through the land, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he ^y set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamon-gog.

^z That is, The multitude.

And also the name of the city shall be ^z Hamonah. Thus shall they cleanse the land.

^a Heb. to the fowl of every wing.

^b Or, slaughter.

And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God; Speak unto every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my ^b sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh, and drink blood.

^c Heb. great goats.

Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of ^c goats, of bullocks, all of them fatlings of Bashan.

And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you.

Thus ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, with mighty men, and with all men of war, saith the Lord A.C. 587.

God.

- 21 And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them.
- 22 So the house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God from that day and forward.
- 23 And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore hid I my face from them, and gave them into the hand of their enemies: so fell they all by the sword.
- 24 According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions have I done unto them, and hid my face from them.
- 25 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name;
- 26 After that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid.
- 27 When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and ^d am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; d ch. xxxvi. 23.
- 28 Then shall they know that I am the LORD their God, ^e which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there. e Heb. by my causing of them, &c.
- 29 Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have ^f poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God. f Joel ii. 28. Acts ii. 17.

Ezekiel's Vision of the second Temple ⁴³.

EZEKIEL XL.

1 The time, manner, and end of the vision. 6 The description of the east gate, 20 of the north gate, 24 of the south gate, 32 of the east gate, 35 and of the north gate. 39 Eight tables. 44 The chambers. 48 The porch of the house.

- 1 In the five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month, in the four- 574.

⁴³ This vision of the second temple was presented to Ezekiel towards the conclusion of his mission. In his preceding prophecies he predicted the return of the Jews to their own land,—the punishment upon their enemies,—the great contest which should take place in the latter days,—and the eventual overthrow of the power of Gog and Magog. From this subject he is naturally led to describe the peaceable and flourishing state of the Church in the latter days, typified by the rebuilding of the temple, on the return of the people after the decree of Cyrus. This rebuilding is circumstantially described; but expressions are used respecting the glory of the divine presence, which is represented as filling the house, which could not refer to that temple. The new temple described by Ezekiel is larger than all Jerusalem, and the new Jerusalem larger than all the land of Canaan; these prophetic dimensions, therefore, demonstrate that these things cannot be understood literally, but spiritually. The expression, ch. xliii. 5, “the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever,” cannot allude to the glory which, in the person of Christ, only temporarily visited the second temple. It evidently seems to prefigure the eventual restoration and ultimate glory of the Jewish nation, when they the hand of the LORD was upon me, and brought me thither. ²

 In the visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel, ² and set me upon a very high mountain, ^a by which was as the frame of a city on the south. And he brought me thither, and, ³ behold, there was a man, whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed; and he stood in the gate. And the man said unto me, ⁴ Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall shew thee; for to the intent that I might shew them unto thee art thou brought hither: declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel. And ⁵ behold a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring reed of six cubits long by the cubit ing, one reed; and the height, one reed.

Then came he unto the gate ^b which looketh toward the ⁶ of the gate, which was one reed broad; and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad. And every little cham- ⁷ ber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits; and the threshold of the gate measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed. Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the posts thereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate was inward.

 And the little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this ¹⁰ also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side: and the little chambers were six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that side. He ¹³ measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber to the roof of another: the breadth was five and twenty cubits, door

 And the little chambers thereof were three on this side and three went up unto it by seven steps; and the arches thereof were before 23 them. And the gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, and toward the east; and he measured from gate to gate an hundred cubits.

 24 After that he brought me toward the south, and behold a gate toward the south: and he measured the posts thereof and 25 the arches thereof according to these measures. And there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about, like those windows: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and 26 twenty cubits. And there were seven steps to go up to it, and the arches thereof were before them: and it had palm trees, one on this side, and another on that side, upon the posts there-27 of. And there was a gate in the inner court toward the south:
 and he measured from gate to gate toward the south an hundred 28 cubits. And he brought me to the inner court by the south gate: and he measured the south gate according to these 29 measures; and the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to these measures: and there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about:

 utter court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof: and the going up to it had eight steps.
 32 And he brought me into the inner court toward the east:
 33 and he measured the gate according to these measures. And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, were according to these measures: and there were windows therein and in the arches thereof round about: it was 34 fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad. And the arches thereof were toward the outer court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had eight steps.
 35 And he brought me to the north gate, and measured it

A.C. 574. according to these measures; the little chambers thereof, the 36 posts thereof, and the arches thereof, and the windows to it round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits. And the posts thereof were toward the utter 37 court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had eight steps. And 38 the chambers and the entries thereof were by the posts of the gates, where they washed the burnt offering.

1 Or, at the step.

And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this side, 39 and two tables on that side, to slay thereon the burnt offering and the sin offering and the trespass offering. And at the side 40 without, ¹ as one goeth up to the entry of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables. Four tables were on this side, and 41 four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew their sacrifices. And the four tables were 42 of hewn stone for the burnt offering, of a cubit and an half long, and a cubit and an half broad, and one cubit high: whereupon also they laid the instruments wherewith they slew the burnt offering and the sacrifice. And within were ^m hooks, an 43 hand broad, fastened round about: and upon the tables was the flesh of the offering.

m Or, end-irons, or, the two hearth-stones.

And without the inner gate were the chambers of the singers 44 in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the south: one at the side of the east gate having the prospect toward the north. And he said 45 unto me, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests, the keepers of the ⁿ charge of the house. And 46 the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, the keepers of the charge of the altar: these are the sons of Zadok among the sons of Levi, which come near to the LORD to minister unto him. So he measured the court, an 47 hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, foursquare; and the altar that was before the house.

n Or, ward, or, ordinance: And so ver. 46.

And he brought me to the porch of the house, and measured 48 each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side. The length of the 49 porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits: and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it: and there were pillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

EZEKIEL XLI.

The measures, parts, chambers, and ornaments of the temple.

Afterward he brought me to the temple, and measured the 1 posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle. And 2

the breadth of the ° door was ten cubits ; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side : and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits :
 3 and the breadth, twenty cubits. Then went he inward, and measured the post of the door, two cubits ; and the door, six
 4 cubits ; and the breadth of the door, seven cubits. So he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits ; and the breadth, twenty cubits, before the temple : and he said unto me, This
 5 is the most holy place. After he measured the wall of the house, six cubits ; and the breadth of every side chamber, four 6 cubits, round about the house on every side. And the side chambers were three, ^p one over another, and ^q thirty in order ; and they entered into the wall which was of the house for the side chambers round about, that they might ^r have hold, but 7 they had not hold in the wall of the house. And ^s there was an enlarging, and a winding about still upward to the side chambers : for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house : therefore the breadth of the house was still upward, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the
 8 highest by the midst. I saw also the height of the house round about : the foundations of the side chambers were a full reed of 9 six great cubits. The thickness of the wall, which was for the side chamber without, was five cubits : and that which was left 10 was the place of the side chambers that were within. And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits round
 11 about the house on every side. And the doors of the side chambers were toward the place that was left, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south : and the breadth
 12 of the place that was left was five cubits round about. Now the building that was before the separate place at the end toward the west was seventy cubits broad ; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof
 13 ninety cubits. So he measured the house, an hundred cubits long ; and the separate place, and the building, with the walls
 14 thereof, an hundred cubits long ; also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place toward the east, an hundred cubits. And he measured the length of the building over 15 against the separate place which was behind it, and the ^t galleries thereof on the one side and on the other side, an hundred cubits, with the inner temple, and the porches of the court ;
 16 the door posts, and the narrow windows, and the galleries round about on their three stories, over against the door, ^u cieled with wood round about, ^x and from the ground up to the windows, and the windows were covered ; to that above the door, even unto the inner house, and without, and by all the wall
 17 round about within and without, by ^y measure. And it was made with cherubims and palm trees, so that a palm tree was between a cherub and a cherub ; and every cherub had two

1 The chambers for the priests. 13 The use thereof. 19 The measures of the outward court.

Then he brought me forth into the utter court, the way 1 toward the north: and he brought me into the chamber that was over against the separate place, and which was before the building toward the north. Before the length of an hundred 2 cubits was the north door, and the breadth was fifty cubits.
 Over against the twenty cubits which were for the inner court, 3 and over against the pavement which was for the utter court, was gallery against gallery in three stories. And before the 4 chambers was a walk of ten cubits breadth inward, a way of one cubit; and their door toward the north. Now the upper 5 chambers were shorter: for the galleries ^a were higher than these, ^b than the lower, and than the middlemost of the building. For they were in three stories, but had not pillars as the 6 pillars of the courts: therefore the building was straitened more than the lowest and the middlemost from the ground.
 And the wall that was without over against the chambers, 7 toward the utter court on the forepart of the chambers, the length thereof was fifty cubits. For the length of the cham- 8 bers that were in the utter court was fifty cubits: and, lo, before the temple were an hundred cubits. And ^c from under these 9 chambers was ^d the entry on the east side, ^e as one goeth into them from the utter court. The chambers were in the thick- 10 separate place, and over against the building. And the way 11 before them was like the appearance of the chambers which 12 and according to their doors. And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the south was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them.

- 13 Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, they be holy chambers, where the priests that approach unto the LORD shall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay the most holy things, and the meat offering, and the sin offering, and the tres-14 pass offering; for the place is, holy. When the priests enter therein, then shall they not go out of the holy place into the utter court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; and shall put on other gar-15 ments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people. Now when he had made an end of measuring the

- 1 Thus saith the Lord GOD; The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days; but on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon it shall be opened. And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priest shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate: then he shall go forth; but the gate shall not be shut until the evening. Likewise the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the LORD in the sabbaths and in the new moons. And the burnt offering that the prince shall offer unto the LORD in the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish. And the meat offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat offering for the lambs ^x as he shall be able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah. x Heb. the gift of his hand.
- 6 And in the day of the new moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six lambs, and a ram: they shall be without blemish. And he shall prepare a meat offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah.
- 8 And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof.
- 9 But when the people of the land shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it. And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth. And in the feasts and in the solemnities the meat offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah. Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt offering or peace offerings voluntarily unto the LORD, one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, as he did on the sabbath day: then he shall go forth; and after his going forth one shall shut the gate. Thus saith the Lord God; If the prince give a gift unto ¹⁶ any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance. But if he give a gift ¹⁷ of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them. Then he brought me forth into the utter court, and caused me ²¹ to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, ^a in every corner of the court there was a court. § 8. Last Prediction against Egypt.

EZEKIEL XXIX. VER. 17, TO THE END.

572. And it came to pass in the seven and twentieth year, in the 17 first month, in the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying “, Son of man, Nebuchadrezzar king of 18

“ The date of this prophecy proves that it was the last given by Ezekiel. In all probability it was placed in the sacred Canon where it there stands, that all the prophecies against Egypt might come together. In the second year after the destruction of Jerusalem, Nebuchadrezzar laid siege to Tyre. The siege was long and laborious. It lasted thirteen years. The heads of the soldiers were “made bald” by disease and by toil: their shoulders were “peeled” by carrying earth to raise mounts and fortifications against it: yet Nebuchadrezzar had (Ezek. xxix. 18,) “no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it.” For as soon as the inhabitants found the works for carrying on the siege were perfected, and the foundations of the walls were shaken by the battering rams, whatsoever precious things in gold, silver, clothes, and various kinds of furniture, the nobility had, they put them on board their ships, and carried them to the islands: so that, when the city was taken, Nebuchadrezzar found “no wages,” either for himself or his army. To compensate for this disappointment, the plunder of Egypt is promised; “her multitude, her spoil, and her prey,” (ver. 19.) Accordingly, in the spring of the year, after the Tyrian war was finished, Nebuchadrezzar invaded Egypt, and quickly overran the whole extent of the country from Migdol, or Magdulus, its northern extremity, near the Red Sea, to Syene, the southern, bordering on Ethiopia, or Abyssinia, which part of the country he also reduced with the other auxiliaries of the Egyptians. In the course of this war, that “cruel lord and fierce king,” so wasted and depopulated the land with fire and sword, that it lay desolate for forty years, (Ezek. xxix. 11.) He defeated Hophra, or Apries, and forced him to become his vassal, (Jer. xlvi. 25, 26;) soon after which this king was slain by his own subjects, (Herod. ii. § 162—169,) fulfilling Jeremiah’s prophecy, xlv. 30, and Ezekiel’s xxxii. 32. From this period commenced the fulfilment of that prophecy which declared that Egypt should be the basest of kingdoms, and there should no more reign over it an independent native prince; it was ever after successively subject to the Babylonians, Persians, Macedonians, Romans, Saracens, Mamelukes, and it is at the present day a province of the Ottoman empire.—Newton on the Prophecies.

The rise and fall of empires, the destruction of cities and countries, is the work of God’s almighty providence. Egypt, though so finely situated for commerce,—once at the height of grandeur, and in the possession of every natural and intellectual superiority,—has never recovered itself, and never can. God makes use of kings and princes as instruments of his will, (ch. xxix. ver. 20,) and the human ambition, the violence and worldly power of man, are all overruled to the accomplishment of his prophecies, and the fulfilment of his decrees. “My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure.”

Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it: therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall take her multitude, and ^a take her spoil, and take her prey; and it shall be the wages for his army. I have given him the land of Egypt ^b for his labour wherewith he served against it, because they wrought for me, saith the Lord GOD. In that day will I cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth ⁴⁵, and I will give thee the opening of the mouth in the midst of them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

⁴⁶ With this prediction against Egypt, the prophecies of Ezekiel, according to the present Arrangement, are concluded. Ezekiel was at this time in captivity at Babylon, and is supposed by Selden to have conversed in that country with Pythagoras. The dispersion of the Jews, in their several captivities, conferred many benefits on mankind; among which may be mentioned, its effects on the progress of philosophy and literature in Greece. As this is a subject which has not frequently been discussed, I have considered it, in the following note, as another proof of the wonderful superintendence of an allwise Providence over the affairs of men.

The communication between Egypt and Judea was uniform and constant. Even in the wilderness, the people murmured to return to that country; and, after the establishment of the Jews in the Holy Land, although prohibited by the Mosaic law, we find an intercourse still prevailed between the two nations. Solomon, the wisest of their kings, married the daughter of Pharaoh, and in future reigns Egyptians were admitted into Judea to contribute to its defence. In the time of Pharaoh Necho, however, we find that Josiah king of Israel "went out against" the king of Egypt, (2 Chron. xxxv. 20. and xxxvi. 4.), and that his son Jehoahaz, with other Jews, were taken with him prisoner into Egypt. The circumstances of his captivity were depicted on the walls of the chief temples in Egypt, as has been singularly discovered by the enterprising and ingenious traveller Belzoni. In war, the Jews were carried captive into this country; in peace they courted its alliance; and in time of danger fled to it for refuge. After the destruction of Jerusalem, the Jews compelled Jeremiah to accompany them into Egypt, where they shared the fate of the natives, during the terrible destruction of that country by the army of Nebuchadnezzar, in 572.

From this intimate alliance between the two nations, it is evident that all those strangers who might have sojourned in Egypt, either for the purposes of commerce, or the acquisition of knowledge, must have been made acquainted with the Jews, whose history was so closely interwoven with that of the Egyptians. In the same manner, all those who travelled into Babylon during this period of the ruin of Egypt, and the captivity of the Jews, would there meet also the Jewish nation; whose peculiar history must have excited interest, and whose laws, customs, opinions, and writings, must have been generally known.

The Greeks from the earliest periods appear to have held constant communication with Egypt.

Many of the Grecian tribes were of Egyptian origin. The Egyptians were celebrated for their wisdom: and it is 'generally acknowledged (Warburton's Divine Legation, vol. ii. p. 105.) by the Greeks themselves, that all their learning and wisdom came from Egypt; and the Greeks are unanimous in this assertion. The first who went out of Greece to learn Egyptian wisdom, were the legislators; or such as, projecting to reduce the scattered tribes, which then overran Greece, into civil society, travelled thither to learn the art of lawgiving from a nation the most celebrated for that knowledge. Of these were Orpheus, Rhadamanthus, Minos, Lycaon, Triptolemus, and others. The next who went to Egypt for instruction, (though the intercourse of the lawgivers with Egypt was not interrupted, but continued down to the times of Draco, Lycurgus, and Solon), were the naturalists, who through their whole course bore the name of Sophists. For now Greece being advanced from a savage and barbarous state to one of civil polity, the inhabitants, in consequence of the cultivation of the arts of life, began to refine and speculate. The last sort of people who went to Egypt for instruction, were the philosophers, properly so called; a character exactly compounded of the two preceding, the lawgiver and the naturalist. For when now, after various struggles and revolutions, the Grecian states had asserted or regained their liberties, morals, public and private, would become the subject most in fashion.' Thus far Bishop Warburton; and Gale, Stillingfleet, Cudworth, and others, have amply shewn that there was a constant communication between Greece and Egypt. Knowledge of every kind was derived by the former from the latter, and all that was known in Egypt was gradually transferred to Greece.

In this state of things it is natural to conclude that the Greeks must have been intimately acquainted with the history and polity of the Jewish people. We shall now, therefore, consider the effects of this knowledge on the literature and character of the Greeks.

From the period of the dispersion of the Jews among the Egyptians and the Babylonians, we find that the Greeks began to have more exalted and refined ideas of a Deity; and that they applied themselves more particularly to that philosophy and literature, which contributed so eminently to raise them to the highest intellectual rank among ancient or modern nations.

All the sects and schools of philosophy, in ancient Greece, originated from the Ionic and the Italic sects. The Ionic sect was founded by Thales, the Italic by Pythagoras. Thales was born about the year 640; and he is remarkable, as being the first Grecian who taught a regular system of philosophy, and left a succession of disciples to establish and maintain it. He travelled into Egypt while he was a young man, and resided there several years. If he went into that country when at the age of twenty, or twenty-five, and resided there ten or more years, (and this period was not beyond that which was usually passed by the students of the Egyptian learning), he would have been in Egypt when Jehoahaz, king of Judah, was brought there as a prisoner by Pharaoh Necho. The attention of the curious Greek must naturally have been attracted by the various captive strangers thus introduced into Egypt; and while he improved himself in those sciences in which the Egyptians excelled, it is highly probable (and a high degree of probability is all that can be obtained, in the attempt to ascertain the events of these remote periods) that, from conversing with these Jewish captives, he acquired some of those great and truly philosophical notions, which he afterwards taught at his native Miletus, and in Greece.

The chief of these opinions were, that the world was not eternal, but was made by God the Spirit out of water; an opinion which seems to be derived from the Mosaic and Christian doctrine, "The Spirit of God moved on the face of the waters." That the world, being God's workmanship, was exceedingly good or perfect. That the universe was filled with invisible spirits, who inspect the actions of men. Thales was the first of the Greeks who made any philosophic inquiries into the nature and perfections of God; for though, as Gale remarks, Orpheus, Linus, Homer, and Hesiod, had some traditions of God, their value was obscured by a mixture with pagan fables. Thales, however, delivered his knowledge concerning God in a more plain and simple manner. He first maintained among the Greeks that God was the most ancient of beings; that his Providence governs the world; and explained to them the wonderful phenomena of nature. These excel-

A.C. 570. troubled, and his sleep brake from him. Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the lent opinions and information appear to have been till now unknown to the Greeks; and are evidently derived from purer sources than from invented traditions or speculative pagan philosophy. From the Jews alone, therefore, with whom Thales became acquainted in Egypt, could he have received those ideas of God and his providence which shine as a meteor through the dark mist of the ignorance and blindness of that superstitious age.

Thales was succeeded by Anaximander, Anaximenes, and Anaxagoras, the friend and tutor of Pericles; by Diogenes Apolloniates, and by Archelaus, the instructor of Socrates. The various sects, which are referred to the Ionic school, are the Socratic, founded by Socrates, among whose disciples and followers are Xenophon, Plato, Euclid, and Alcibiades. The Cyrenaic sect, founded by Aristippus. The Megaric, established by Euclid of Megara. The Eretriac, or Eliac school, instituted by Phædo of Elis. The Academic sect, founded by Plato, whose school, after his death, was divided into the old, middle, and new academies. The Peripatetic, founded by Aristotle. The Cynic, by Antisthenes. The Stoic, by Zeno. These sects continued till the time of Christ; and when St. Paul visited Athens, he found the Greeks still engaged in disputes and inquiries into the mysteries and difficulties of philosophy. Although the purest and most refined speculations of the best and most celebrated of these philosophers fall far short of the principles and morality inculcated by the Christian dispensation, they still served to advance the progress of Christianity; or, rather, they tended to diminish the superstitious reverence paid to the pagan deities. The commonest of the people became at last sensible that their philosophers only adhered to the religious ceremonies of the established superstition, from mere compliance with popular custom; and all the reflecting part of the community were divided, in a state of doubt and uncertainty: Socrates, in particular, declared that a teacher from heaven was necessary to impart instruction to mankind.

Moral philosophy may be considered as a light to the dark and ignorant age in which it flourished: but, when compared with Christianity, it is little less than the very darkness it so partially illuminated. Philosophy, at the height of its splendour, displayed only the corruption, the folly, and the degradation of the human mind when deprived of revelation. It was like a taper in a charnel house at midnight, which disperses the darkness of the tomb, and shews to the sickening spectator how melancholy is the sight of humanity, when bereaved of life and spirit.

Though the accounts of Pythagoras are mingled with fable, there is abundant authority to induce us to believe that this philosopher conversed likewise with the Jews of the dispersion at Tyre in Phœnicia; and probably at Mount Carmel; where, it is said, his walk was long shewn. It is certain that he was in Egypt; and many suppose that he was taken prisoner into that country, either by Nebuchadnezzar, or by Cambyes. From Egypt he either went, or was taken, to Babylon; where again he must have acquired an intimate knowledge of the Jews; and in this latter place he is said to have had for an instructor Zabratas, or Nazaratus; whom the learned Selden supposes to have been Ezekiel; and Prideaux, Zoroaster. The exact period of the birth of Pythagoras is not certainly known. The accounts of his life, now extant, are uncertain and contradictory: that which appears most probable and satisfactory, informs us, that at the age of eighteen he consulted Thales at Miletus, who recommended him to visit Egypt.

From Miletus he proceeded to Tyre (the place of his nativity, though educated at Samos); from thence he travelled to Egypt, with letters to Amasis from Polycrates, tyrant of Samos. He quitted Egypt for Babylon; where he continued twelve years, and conversed with Zabratas or Nazaratus: he is then supposed to have returned to his own country, and to have been at that time about fifty-six years of age.

The birth of Pythagoras is referred by the learned Dr. Bentley to the year B.C. 605; by Bishop Lloyd to B.C. 583; by Dodwell to B.C. 569; by Le Clerc to a period not earlier than the first, nor later than the last of these. If then we take the medium date, which would be 587, or that of Bishop Lloyd's, at 583, it will assist us to account, in a great degree, for those changes of Pythagoras from one country to another.

If he was born in 583, and returned home in the fifty-sixth year of his age, after remaining twelve years at Babylon, twenty-two in Egypt, and consulting Thales at Miletus, in the eighteenth year of his age, the several dates of these events may be thus arranged:

man, and that those who acquiesced in the doctrines of Pythagoras, and received the better part of his system, must have been wiser and purer than their more ignorant or prejudiced countrymen.

That the Greeks, therefore, were indebted to their intercourse with the Jews for the origin of their philosophy, is highly probable: it is, therefore, no less probable that their literature may be partly traced to the same source. From the temperance Pythagoras uniformly practised, it is probable that his life was extended to a late period. He is supposed to have perished in consequence of a political disturbance in the seventieth Olympiad, about the year 503. If this tradition be correct, he must at this time have entered his eighty-third or eighty-fourth year.

Æschylus, the founder of the Greek Drama in its present form, would have been at that time about twenty-five years of age; and though we are not acquainted with the particulars of his early life, we may naturally conclude that one so eminent would have carefully instructed himself in all the philosophy and learning of his age. A Pythagorean in principle, many of his sentiments are the same as those taught in the golden verses of Pythagoras. We may justly conclude, therefore, that this great tragedian was either personally acquainted with, and a disciple of the Samian, or that he was well versed in the system promulgated by that philosopher. Like many of his countrymen, he gave offence to the people, by deviating from received opinions. In the mythology of Æschylus, Dr. Gray observes, there is frequent reference to principles originating in revelation. In the passage cited by Eusebius, he describes the supreme God as a being who is carefully to be distinguished from mortals, having nothing like the body of man. At one time he declares, that God shines forth in unapproachable fire; at another, he invests him in the elements, appearing in the wind, thunder, and lightning! He represents the ocean, the rocks, and the fountains, as ministering to the Supreme Being: the hills, and the earth, the depths of the sea, and the summits of the mountains, as trembling at his presence. The piercing eye of God he describes as overlooking all things, for the glory of the highest God is powerful. His celebrated scene in the Persæ, in which the shade of Darius is summoned by Atossa, is very similar to the account of the appearance of Samuel to Saul, as related in the narrative of the witch of Endor. Many of the Christian fathers have asserted, that the character of "Prometheus" could not have been drawn, unless the author of that drama had been acquainted with the Sacred writings, or with at least many of the prophetic books. The subject deserves to be considered at greater length than this note admits. Yet I cannot but observe, that the Dramas of Æschylus exhibit the most decisive evidence of his acquaintance with the Sacred writings; and it is probable that they were partly made known to him by his tutor and contemporary, Pythagoras. Similarity of description only, with identity of expression, would not prove this point; these, it is true, might be mere coincidences; but where the same personifications are used, we may justly conclude that the resemblance is not accidental. In Jeremiah xlvii. 6. we meet with this bold personification—"O thou sword of the Lord, how long will it be ere thou be quiet? put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still. How can it be quiet, seeing the Lord hath given it a charge against Ashkelon."—The same metaphor is adopted by Æschylus,

Ἐένος δὲ κλήρους ἐπινομᾶ Χάλυβος, Σκυθῶν ἀποικος, κτεάνων χρηματοδαίτας
πικρὸς, ὠμόφρων σιδάρος,
χθόνα νάειν διαπήλας,
ὀπόσαν ἂν καὶ φθιμένους κατέχειν,
τῶν μεγάλων πεδίων ἀμοίρους.

Ἐπτ' ἐπὶ Θηβας.—Pors. Edit. line 727.

And, as if the idea was a favourite one with the poet, it is twice again repeated in the same drama. In Ezekiel xvii. 20. we read, Thus saith the Lord God, "I will spread my net over him, and he shall be taken in my snare;" and the same expression is used in other passages of Scripture, to describe a state of inextricable difficulty, of distress, or ruin. The same metaphor is applied by Æschylus to describe the ruin of Troy—

Ὡ Ζεῦ βασιλεῦ, καὶ νῦξ φιλία, μεγάλων κόσμων κτεάτεια, ἦτ' ἐπὶ Τροίας πύργους ἔβαλες στεγανδὸν δίκτυον.—Agamemnon, line 356, Pors. Edit.

In Ezekiel xxvi. 3.—"I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up." Æschylus has adopted the same idea, βοῶ γὰρ κύμα χερσαίων στρατοῦ.

Ἐπρ' ἐπι Θηβ.—Line 64.

And many other parallel passages might be found. The tragedians who followed Æschylus, although perhaps inferior to him in sublimity, maintained an exalted nobleness of moral sentiment. A higher tone seems to have been given to the public mind in Greece, which cannot entirely be attributed to their political institutions, or to the incessant agitation and restlessness of mind induced by their party dissensions. We must refer this intellectual elevation to a more intellectual source: to the spirit of their philosophy, morality, and poetry, which was partially derived from the purer fountains of the Hebrew Scriptures. And the peculiar object of Providence, in thus communicating to the Greeks, through the dispersion and captivity of the Jews, some knowledge of a purer creed, was shewn in subsequent ages, when that language was selected to impart the knowledge of the Scriptures to the world. The universality of the Greek language may be attributed to the general interest excited by the Greek Drama; the splendid compositions of the poets; and the more exalted speculations of their philosophers. The Pagan nations did not, it is true, eat of the fruit of the tree of life; yet they were blessed with some few of its leaves; and the very "leaves of that tree are for the healing of the nations."—Vide Stillingfleet's Origines Sacræ, b. i. ch. 3; Athenian Letters, vol. i. p. 92; Plato, Alcibiad. § 12, 13; Gale's Court of the Gentiles, book ii. ch. 3—10; Warburton's Divine Legat. b. iii. s. 2; *Encyclop. 47 In Daniel i. 5, 6, we read that Daniel, with some other Jewish captives, was placed under the care of the master of the eunuchs, to be instructed for the space of three years in the language and sciences of Chaldea. At the end of that time they were to be admitted to the presence of the king, to stand and serve before him. In Daniel ii. 1. it is said, in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, the king dreamed the dream which Daniel interpreted; and as the time appointed for Daniel's improvement had expired (Dan. i. 18), it may be asked why this chapter was not inserted in the same place as the first chapter. Prideaux has dated it in the year 603, on the authority of the literal interpretation of the words "in the second year of his reign." It must, however, be recollected that the inspired writers date from different æras; instances of which have been given in these notes: and Daniel, writing this part of his history in Chaldee, for the use of the Chaldeans, most probably followed the computation prevalent among them; and refers, not to the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, as dated from his accession to the throne, but from the second year of his universal monarchy; after Egypt, and all the surrounding nations, who, with the Jews, had leagued against him, had been subdued. Lightfoot and Hales both agree in making the events related in this chapter succeed Nebuchadnezzar's conquests: and when it is remembered that, in the second year of Nebuchadnezzar (dated from his accession to the throne of Babylon), Daniel was still under the care of Melzar; that a short time after Jehoiakim rebelled, depending in all probability upon the league formed against the king of Babylon by the surrounding nations; it cannot be conceived that a prior date can be correct. In addition to these arguments, it must be considered, that when Daniel left the prince of the eunuchs he must have been very young, and still a stranger in the land: is it therefore probable that Nebuchadnezzar would make him at this time ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governors over all its wise men (chap. ii. ver. 48), and advance his three friends to such high offices in the state? When, too, in addition to these things, it is stated that Daniel, at the time of the king's dream, was living in his own house (chap. ii. ver. 17), and that he was numbered among the wise men who were decreed by the king to be slain (ver. 13), he could not have been under the care of Melzar, in the palace of the king; for, in the latter case, while he was pursuing his studies under the immediate protection of Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel would not have been ranked among the wise men of Babylon. These considerations have induced me to insert here this chapter of Daniel, and to compute the second year of Nebuchadnezzar mentioned in it, from the universal dominion he obtained by his conquests.

¹⁴ Then Daniel ^f answered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch ¹⁴

¹⁴ The Jewish church, at the time of the wonderful interposition of Providence in enabling Daniel to discover and to interpret the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, when all the magicians, the astrologers, the sorcerers, and Chaldeans of Babylon were not able to do so, was in the depth of its distress. Its enemies were on every side victorious. The gods of gold, of silver, of wood, and of stone, appeared to be more powerful than Jehovah.

The prophet Ezekiel had ceased to address the people. Jeremiah in all probability no longer existed. Jerusalem was destroyed; the temple burnt; the visible church almost annihilated; when the attention of the world was fixed, and the church of God comforted, by the miraculous powers of Daniel. Through the providence of God this favoured captive became the adviser and the friend of kings, the head of governments and provinces, and the chief means of fulfilling the prophecies of His Scriptures, by accomplishing the deliverance of the Jews.

The next chapter gives us an account of the dedication of a golden image by Nebuchadnezzar. This image is supposed to have been erected in commemoration of his conquests: it is, therefore, probable that it was commanded to be made on his triumphal return to his capital. Elated with victory, the conqueror of the world, with every ambitious project accomplished, at last his mind gradually fixes itself on futurity. The visions which came into the king's head on his bed, as to "what should come to pass hereafter," were most probably the result of meditations on his present grandeur and unrivalled power, the monument intended to transmit his fame and glories to posterity would naturally at such a moment have presented itself to his mind.

The idea therefore has suggested itself to me (and I cannot consider it as improbable) that the Almighty in his mercy selected the same figure that Nebuchadnezzar had designed to perpetuate his name and possessions, to reveal to him the instability of his empire, and the vanity of all human grandeur.

The worshipper of idols had a prophetic dream (as Bishop Newton observes from St. Jerome, that the servant of God interpreting it, God might be glorified; and the captives, and those who served God in captivity, might receive great consolation. Nebuchadnezzar, with a mind thus lost in futurity, dreams about an image composed of different metals (1—13); the interpretation of this dream is communicated to Daniel (14—23), who reveals it to the monarch (24—35), and interprets it of the four great monarchies. The head of gold represented the Babylonian empire (32); the breast and arms, which were of silver, represented the Medo-Persian empire (32—39); the brazen belly and thighs represented the Macedo-Grecian empire (32—39); the legs and feet,

- the ^g captain of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay 15 the wise men of Babylon: he answered and said to Arioch the king's ^h captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king?
 16 Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel. Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, 17 and that he would shew the king the interpretation. Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to 18 Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions: that they would desire mercies ⁱ of the God of heaven concerning this secret; ^k that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.
- 19 Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision.
 20 Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven. Daniel answered and said, ^l Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for 21 wisdom and might are his: and he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know 22 understanding: he revealeth the deep and secret things: he knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with 23 him. I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.
- 24 Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him; Destroy not the wise men of Babylon:
 bring me in before the king, and I will shew unto the king the 25 interpretation. Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said thus unto him, ^m I have found a man of the ⁿ captives of Judah, that will make known unto the king the 26 interpretation. The king answered and said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof?
 27 Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, shew unto the king; 28 but there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and ^o maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon

The stone "cut out of the mountain without hands, which brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold" (34, 35), represented the kingdom of the Messiah, which was "to fill the whole earth," become universal, and stand for ever (44, 45). Thou, O king, ^r sawest, and behold a great image. This great 31 image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold, 32 his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his ^s thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay. Thou 33,34 sawest till that a stone was cut out ^t without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the 35 silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

This is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof 36 before the king. Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the 37 God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. And wheresoever the children of 38 men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold. And after 39 thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth. And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as 40 iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise. And 41 whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay. And as the toes of the feet 42 were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly ^u broken. And whereas thou sawest 43 iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave ^x one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay. And in ^y the days of these 44 kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, ^z which shall never be destroyed: and the ^a kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. § 10. Nebuchadnezzar, on the Completion of his Conquests, sets up the Golden Image.

DANIEL III ⁴⁹.

1 Nebuchadnezzar the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits :
 he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.
 2 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebu-3 chadnezzar the king had set up. Then the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up ; and they stood before the image 4 that Nebuchadnezzar had set up. Then an herald cried ^a aloud,
 To you ^b it is commanded, O people, nations, and languages, down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the d Chald. sym-6 king hath set up : and whoso falleth not down and worshippeth phony.

⁴⁹ This chapter describes the dedication of that golden image, most probably ordered by Nebuchadnezzar on his triumphal return to his capital, after his conquests. The conduct of Nebuchadnezzar, on this occasion, proves that the miraculous interpretation of his dream, given by Daniel, made no lasting impression on the king's mind. The consecration of this idol to Bel, or Belus (ver. 14. Dan. iv. 8), shews that he no longer acknowledged the superiority of the God of Daniel (chap. ii. 47.) But this arrogant idolater, by the wonderful deliverance of his three captive servants, and the miraculous appearance of the Son of God, is again compelled to confess the superior power of the most high God, and to declare "there is no other God can deliver after this sort." The believing Jews, on beholding the Divine form which appeared in the midst of the fire, would recognise the same Almighty Being which had guided their fathers through the wilderness, and had so frequently manifested himself as the guardian God of the visible Church. And the wonderful preservation of these three faithful Hebrews must have signified to all the Jews that the same power would likewise be exerted to support them in all their trials, and to deliver them at the appointed time from the furnace of affliction, and finally restore them to the land and the worship of their fathers. By this most extraordinary miracle, the knowledge of the true God, his power, and superiority, were made known by the decree of Nebuchadnezzar through his extensive and universal empire; and every "people, nation, and language" were called upon to worship the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

A.C. 570. shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. Therefore at that time, when all the people heard the 7 sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of musick, all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, and 8 accused the Jews. They spake and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, O king, live for ever. Thou, O king, hast made a 9 decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, shall fall down and worship the golden image: and 11 whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. There are certain 12 Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men, O king, ^e have not regarded thee: they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

^e Chald. have set no regard upon thee.

Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to 13 bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Then they brought these men before the king. Nebuchadnezzar spake and said 14 unto them, Is it ^f true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up? Now if ye be ready that at what time ye hear 15 the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made; well: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands? Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said 16 to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, our God whom we serve is 17 able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known 18 unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

Then was Nebuchadnezzar ^g full of fury, and the form of his 19 visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated. And he commanded the ^h most mighty men that were in his 20 army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace. Then these men were 21 bound in their ⁱ coats, their hosen, and their ^k hats, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace. Therefore because the king's ^l commandment was ur- 22 gent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the ^m flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

23 And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell 24 down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace. Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his ⁿ counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered 25 and said unto the king, True, O king. He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and ^o they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

26 Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the ^p mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came 27 forth of the midst of the fire. And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, upon whose bodies the fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, 28 nor the smell of fire had passed on them. Then Nebuchadnenezzar spake, and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor saying, O Belteshazzar, ^c master of the magicians, because I 9 know that the spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret troubleth thee, tell me the visions of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof. Thus were the visions of 10 mine head in my bed; ^d I saw, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great. The tree grew, 11 and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth: the leaves 12 thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all: the beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it. I saw in the visions of my head upon my bed, 13 and, behold, a watcher and an holy one came down from heaven; he cried ^e aloud, and said thus, Hew down the tree, and 14 cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit:

 let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches: nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the 15 earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth: let his 16 heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven times pass over him. This matter is 17 by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones: to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men.
 This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar have seen. Now thou, O 18 Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation thereof, forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation: but thou art able; for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee.

Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonished 19 for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies. The tree that thou sawest, which 20 grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth; whose leaves were fair, 21 and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation: it is thou, O king, that 22 art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth. And whereas the king saw a watcher and an holy one 23 the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven 24 times pass over him: this is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the most High, which is come upon my 25 lord the king: that they shall ^fdrive thee from men, and thy ^fdwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, 26 and giveth it to whomsoever he will. And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots; thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that 27 the heavens do rule. Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by shewing mercy to the poor; if it may § 12. Madness and Recovery of Nebuchadnezzar.

DANIEL IV. VER. 28, TO THE END.

28, 29 All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar ⁵⁰. At the end of twelve months he walked ^ain the palace of the kingdom ^{a Or, upon.} 30 of Babylon. The king spake, and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the 31 might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty? While 32 The kingdom is departed from thee. And they shall drive the field: they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he ⁵⁰ The signal judgment inflicted upon Nebuchadnezzar, related in this chapter, with its attendant circumstances, must have impressed all the nations of the East with the conviction that Jehovah was the one true God; that kings and princes were only the instruments of his will in the government of the world. After having been raised by the most brilliant and unexampled successes to the very height of human power and ambition, this king was suddenly removed from all his possessions, "was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws." The madness of this great monarch is generally supposed to have consisted in his fancying himself a beast, and living like one; and that during this bereavement of reason, he was too untameable and unmanageable to be controlled by man. His intellect returned after seven years, and he again resumed the government of his kingdom (ver. 36.) The evidence of the prediction, the fall, and the restoration of Nebuchadnezzar, is perhaps the most undeniable of any thing that rests upon mere human testimony. The king himself, upon his recovery, published a proclamation in every part of his vast empire, giving an account of all that had befallen him, and praising and honouring the King of Heaven. The evidence of the whole fact stands upon this public record of the Babylonian empire, preserved, word for word, in this chapter, which must therefore be considered, not as Daniel's, but as Nebuchadnezzar's writing.—Bishop Horsley.

 at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes blessed the most High, and I praised and honoured him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is ^b an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation: and all the 35 him, ^c What doest thou? At the same time my reason returned 36 unto me; and for the glory of my kingdom, mine honour and brightness returned unto me; and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me; and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was added unto me. Now I Nebuchadnezzar 37

And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin 27 king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the year that he began to reign did lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison; and he spake ^c kindly to him, 28 and set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon; and changed his prison garments: and he did eat bread continually before him all 29 king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life.

c Heb. good things with him.

⁵¹ Evil-merodach, the son of Nebuchadnezzar, succeeded his father, in the thirty-seventh year of the captivity of Jehoiachin. No transaction of his reign is recorded in Scripture but the release of Jehoiachin, "whom he treated kindly and hospitably, setting him above all the other captive kings which were in Babylon." Jerome notices a Jewish tradition, that Evil-merodach, during his father's distraction, behaved so ill in provoking a war with the Medes, that, on his recovery, Nebuchadnezzar threw him into prison, where he contracted an intimacy with Jehoiachin.

DANIEL VII.

1 Daniel's vision of four beasts. 9 Of God's kingdom. 15 The interpretation thereof.

1 In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel ^a had ^{A.C. 541.}
 a dream and visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the ^{a Chald. saw.} 2 dream, and told the sum of the ^b matters. Daniel spake and ^{b Or, words.}
 said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds 3 of the heaven strove upon the great sea. And four great beasts 4 came up from the sea, diverse one from another. The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings: I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, ^c and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart ^{c Or, where-} in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus ^{up one domi-} 6 unto it, Arise, devour much flesh. After this I beheld, and ^{nion.} lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads: and dominion 7 was given to it. After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten 8 horns. I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things.

 9 I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, 10 and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: ^e thousand thousands ministered unto ^{e Rev. v. 11.} him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him:
 11 ^f the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld ^{f Rev. xx. 4.} then because of the voice of the great words which the horn ^{12.}
 spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body 12 destroyed, and given to the burning flame. As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet ^{g Chald. a} 13 ^g their lives were prolonged for a season and time. I saw in ^{prolonging in}

⁵² The vision of the four beasts in this chapter represents the same four great monarchies of the world prefigured in Nebuchadnezzar's dream (ch. ii.) by a large statue composed of various metals. Nebuchadnezzar saw his kingdom flourishing. Daniel now beholds it on the eve of destruction, with its wings plucked, and "lifted up from the earth" (ver. 4). The ten horns of this beast, signified by the ten toes of the image (ii. 41, 42), denote ten kingdoms or principalities; which have been variously interpreted by different writers, the result of whose researches on this subject are given by Horne, in his Critical Introduction, according to the following table.

15 I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my ⁱ body, i Chald. sheath.
 16 and the visions of my head troubled me. I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this.

So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the 17 things. These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, 18 which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the ^k most k Chald. high ones, that is, things, or, places.
 High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, 19 even for ever and ever. Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse ^l from all the others, exceeding l Chald. from all those.
 dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet; 20 and of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose 21 look was more stout than his fellows. I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;
 22 until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints
 23 possessed the kingdom. Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread 24 it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall 25 subdue three kings. And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.
 26 But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his 27 dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end. And the ^m kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom m Luke i. 33.

Besides these ten horns or kingdoms, there was to spring up another "little horn," which is generally supposed to denote the papal power; a power which fully answers the character of the "little horn;" setting up himself above all laws, divine and human, arrogating to himself godlike attributes, and titles of holiness, of infallibility, wearing "out the saints of the most High," by massacres and inquisitions, and destroying all those who refuse to comply with his ordinances, innovations, and decrees. The papal power, being an ecclesiastical and spiritual, as well as a civil and temporal authority, is called "diverse from the first," and it is said, that "he shall subdue three kings" (ver. 28 and 8). Out of the ten horns or kingdoms, those of the Heruli, the Ostrogoths, and the Lombards, were successively "plucked up," and annexed to the papacy by the "little horn," through which means the Pope became a temporal prince. All the kingdoms above described will be succeeded by the "everlasting dominion" of the Messiah (ver. 9—15 and 27).

¶ A Song of Degrees.

Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O LORD. 1

LORD, hear my voice: let thine ears be attentive to the voice 2 of my supplications.

⁶³ The Psalms contained in this section are supposed by Calmet, Horne, Gray, and others, to have been written during the Babylonish captivity. They are inserted thus late in the Period, because the exact time of their date is quite uncertain, and it is most probable that the persecution and distress of the Jews were greatest during the reign of Belshazzar, who did not know Daniel. The character of this king, as given by Xenophon and by Isaiah (xiv. 29.), corroborates this supposition. The lxxxviiith Psalm, on the authority of Lightfoot, was inserted in the first Part of Period III.; and as he has used the same arguments with respect to the lxxxixth as to the lxxxviiith, it may excite surprise that the two Psalms are not placed together. On referring to the contents of Psalm lxxxix. it will be seen that the name of David occurs more than once. This circumstance compelled me to conclude that it was written either in, or after, the time of the Psalmist: the supposition of Lightfoot, that the name of David was inserted prophetically, during the distress in Egypt before the Exodus, appeared to require confirmation.—Vide Lightfoot's Chronicle, p. 23. The reader will observe that there is a misprint in the passage of Lightfoot here referred to. Psalm lxxxix. is printed by mistake for Psalm lxxxix. It is plain that the latter is meant, for the name of David does not occur in Psalm lxxxix.

- 5 Wherefore should I fear in the days of evil, when the iniquity of my heels shall compass me about?
- 6 They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches;
- 7 None of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him:
- 8 (For the redemption of their soul is precious, and it ceaseth for ever:)
- 9 That he should still live for ever, and not see corruption.
- 10 For he seeth that wise men die, likewise the fool and the brutish person perish, and leave their wealth to others.
- 11 Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling places ^q to all generations; they call their lands after their own names. ^q Heb. to generation and generation.
- 12 Nevertheless man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.

A.C. 539.

r Heb. delight in their mouth.

This their way is their folly : yet their posterity ^r approve 13 their sayings. Selah.

s Or, strength.
t Or, the grave being an habitation to every one of them.

Like sheep they are laid in the grave ; death shall feed on 14 them ; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning ; and their ^a beauty shall consume ^t in the grave from their dwelling.

u Heb. from the hand of the grave.

But God will redeem my soul ^u from the power of ^x the grave : 15 for he shall receive me. Selah.

x Or, hell.
y Job xxvii. 19.

Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when the glory 16 of his house is increased ;

^y For when he dieth he shall carry nothing away : his glory 17 shall not descend after him.

z Heb. in his life.

Though ^z while he lived he blessed his soul : and men will 18 praise thee, when thou doest well to thyself.

a Heb. The soul shall go.

^a He shall go to the generation of his fathers : they shall 19 never see light.

Man that is in honour, and understandeth not, is like the 20 beasts that perish.

PSALM LIII.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man. 4 He convinceth the wicked by the light of their own conscience. 6 He glorieth in the salvation of God.

¶ To the chief Musician upon Mahalath, Maschil, A Psalm of David.

b Ps. x. 4. & xiv. 1. &c.
c Rom. iii. 10.

The ^b fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. Corrupt 1 are they, and have done abominable iniquity : ^c there is none that doeth good.

God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, 2 to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God.

Every one of them is gone back : they are altogether become 3 filthy ; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge ? who eat up my 4 people as they eat bread : they have not called upon God.

d Heb. they feared a fear.

There ^d were they in great fear, where no fear was : for God 5 hath scattered the bones of him that encampeth against thee : thou hast put them to shame, because God hath despised them.

e Heb. Who will give salvations, &c.

^e Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion ! When 6 God bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM L.

1 The majesty of God in the church. 5 His order to gather saints. 7 The pleasure of God is not in ceremonies, 14 but in sincerity of obedience.

f Or, for Asaph.

¶ A Psalm ^f of Asaph.

The mighty God, even the LORD, hath spoken, and called 1 the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof.

Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. 2

Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence : a fire shall 3 devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. A.C. 539.

- 4 He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people.
- 5 Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.
- 6 And the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for God is judge himself. Selah.
- 7 Hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God.
- 8 I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices or thy burnt offerings, to have been continually before me.
- 9 I will take no bullock out of thy house, nor he goats out of thy folds.
- 10 For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills.
- 11 I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beasts of the field are ^g mine.
- 12 If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: ^h for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof. g Heb. with me.

Ps. xxiv. 1.
1 Cor. x. 26.
- 13 Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats?
- 14 Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the most high: 28.
- 15 And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.
- 16 But unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth?
- 17 ⁱ Seeing thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee. i Rom. ii. 21, 22.
- 18 When thou sawest a thief, then thou consentedst with him, and ^k hast been partaker with adulterers.
- 19 ^l Thou givest thy mouth to evil, and thy tongue frameth deceit. k Heb. thy portion was with adulterers.
l Heb. Thou sendest.
- 20 Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son.
- 21 These things hast thou done, and I kept silence; thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself: but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes.
- 22 Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver.
- 23 Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me: and to him ^m that ordereth his conversation aright will I shew the salvation of God. m Heb. that disposeth his way.

PSALM X.

1 David complaineth to God of the outrage of the wicked. 12 He prayeth for remedy.
16 He professeth his confidence.

A.C. 539.

Why standest thou afar off, O LORD? why hidest thou thyself¹ in times of trouble?

n Heb. In the pride of the wicked he doth persecute.

ⁿ The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor: ^o let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.

o Ps. vii. 16. & ix. 15, 16. Prov. v. 22.

p Heb. souls.

For the wicked boasteth of his ^p heart's desire, and ^q blesseth the covetous, whom the LORD abhorreth.

q Or, the covetous blesseth himself, he abhorreth the LORD.

The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God: ^r God is not in all his ^s thoughts.

r Or, all his thoughts are, There is no God.

His ways are always grievous; thy judgments are far above out of his sight: as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them.

s Ps. xiv. 1. & liii. 1.

t Heb. unto generation and generation.

He hath said in his heart, I shall ^t never be in adversity.

u Rom. iii. 14. x Heb. deceits.

^u His mouth is full of cursing and ^x deceit and fraud: under his tongue is mischief and ^y vanity.

y Or, iniquity.

z Heb. hide themselves.

He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages: in the secret places doth he murder the innocent: his eyes^z are privily set against the poor.

a Heb. in the secret places.

b Heb. He breaketh himself.

He lieth in wait ^a secretly as a lion in his den: he lieth in wait to catch the poor: he doth catch the poor, when he draweth him into his net.

c Or, into his strong parts.

^b He croucheth, and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall ^c by his strong ones.

d Ps. xciv. 7.

He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten: ^d he hideth his face; he will never see it.

e Or, afflicted.

Arise, O LORD; O God, lift up thine hand: forget not the ^e humble.

Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God? he hath said in his heart, Thou wilt not require it.

f Heb. cleaveth.

Thou hast seen it; for thou beholdest mischief and spite, to requite it with thy hand: the poor ^f committeth himself unto thee; thou art the helper of the fatherless.

Break thou the arm of the wicked and the evil man: seek out his wickedness till thou find none.

g Ps. xxix. 10. cxlv. 13. & cxlvi. 10.

Jer. x. 10. Lam. v. 19.

^g The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out of his land.

h Or, establish.

LORD, thou hast heard the desire of the humble: thou wilt ^h prepare their heart, thou wilt cause thine ear to hear:

i Or, terrify.

To judge the fatherless and the oppressed, that the man of the earth may no more ⁱ oppress.

PSALM XIII.

1 David complaineth of delay in help. 3 He prayeth for preventing grace. 5 He boasteth of divine mercy.

¶ To the ^k chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

- 1 How long wilt thou forget me, O LORD? for ever? how long wilt thou hide thy face from me? A.C. 539.
k Or, overseer.
- 2 How long shall I take counsel in my soul, having sorrow in my heart daily? how long shall mine enemy be exalted over me?
- 3 Consider and hear me, O LORD my God: lighten mine eyes, lest I sleep the sleep of death;
- 4 Lest mine enemy say, I have prevailed against him; and those that trouble me rejoice when I am moved.
- 5 But I have trusted in thy mercy; my heart shall rejoice in thy salvation.
- 6 I will sing unto the LORD, because he hath dealt bountifully with me.

PSALM XIV.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man. 4 He convinceth the wicked by the light of their conscience. 7 He glorieth in the salvation of God.

¶ To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

- 1 The ^l fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. They are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good. l Ps. x. 4, & liiii. 1, &c.
- 2 The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God.
- 3 ^m They are all gone aside, they are all together become ⁿ filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one. m Rom. iii. 10, 11, 12.

x Ps. xxii. 5.
& xxxi. 1. &
xxxiv. 8. Is.
xxviii. 16.
Rom. x. 11.

O my God, I ^x trust in thee: let me not be ashamed, let not 2 mine enemies triumph over me.

Yea, let none that wait on thee be ashamed: let them be 3 ashamed which transgress without cause.

y Ps. xxvii.
11. & lxxxvi.
11. & cxix.

^y Shew me thy ways, O LORD; teach me thy paths. 4

Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God 5 of my salvation; on thee do I wait all the day.

z Ps. ciii. 17.
& cvi. 1. & cvii. 1. Jer.
xxxiii. 11.
a Heb. thy bowels.

Remember, O LORD, ^z ^a thy tender mercies and thy loving 6 kindnesses; for they have been ever of old.

Remember not the sins of my youth, nor my transgressions: 7 according to thy mercy remember thou me for thy goodness' sake, O LORD.

Good and upright is the LORD: therefore will he teach sinners 8 in the way.

The meek will he guide in judgment: and the meek will he 9 teach his way.

All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth unto such as 10 keep his covenant and his testimonies.

For thy name's sake, O LORD, pardon mine iniquity; for it 11 is great.

What man is he that feareth the LORD? him shall he teach 12 in the way that he shall choose.

His soul ^b shall dwell at ease; and his seed shall inherit the 13 earth.

b Heb. shall lodge in goodness.

^c The secret of the LORD is with them that fear him; ^d and he 14 will shew them his covenant.

c Prov. v. 32.
d Or, and his covenant to make them know it.

Mine eyes are ever toward the LORD: for he shall ^e pluck 15 my feet out of the net.

e Heb. bring forth.

Turn thee unto me, and have mercy upon me; for I am 16 desolate and afflicted.

The troubles of my heart are enlarged: O bring thou me 17 out of my distresses.

Look upon mine affliction and my pain; and forgive all my 18 sins.

- 19 Consider mine enemies; for they are many; and they hate me with ^f cruel hatred. A.C. 539.
- 20 O keep my soul, and deliver me: let me not be ashamed; for I put my trust in thee. f Heb. hatred of violence.
- 21 Let integrity and uprightness preserve me; for I wait on thee.
- 22 Redeem Israel, O God, out of all his troubles.

PSALM XXVI.

David resorteth unto God in confidence of his integrity.¶ A Psalm of David.

- 1 Judge me, O LORD; for I have walked in mine integrity: I have trusted also in the LORD; therefore I shall not slide.
- 2 ^g Examine me, O LORD, and prove me; try my reins and my heart. g Ps. vii. 9.
- 3 For thy lovingkindness is before mine eyes: and I have walked in thy truth.
- 4 ^h I have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers. h Ps. i. 1.
- 5 I have hated the congregation of evil doers; and will not sit with the wicked.
- 6 I will wash mine hands in innocency: so will I compass thine altar, O LORD:
- 7 That I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works.
- 8 LORD, I have loved the habitation of thy house, and the place ⁱ where thine honour dwelleth.
- 9 ^k Gather not my soul with sinners, nor my life with ^l bloody men. i Heb. of the tabernacle of thy honour.
k Or, Take not away.
- 10 In whose hand is mischief, and their right hand is ^m full of bribes. l Heb. men of blood.
m Heb. filled with.
- 11 But as for me, I will walk in mine integrity: redeem me, and be merciful unto me.
- 12 My foot standeth in an even place: in the congregations will I bless the LORD.

PSALM XXVII.

1 David sustaineth his faith by the power of God, 4 by his love to the service of God, 9 by prayer.

¶ A Psalm of David.

- 1 The LORD is ⁿ my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? ^o the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid? n Mic. vii. 8.
o Ps. cxviii. 14.
- 2 When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, ^p came upon me to eat up my flesh, they stumbled and fell. p Heb. approached against me.
- 3 ^q Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear: though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident. q Ps. iii. 6.

A.C. 539. One thing have I desired of the LORD, that will I seek after; 4 that I may dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life, to behold ^r the beauty of the LORD, and to enquire in his temple.

r Or, the delight.

For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion: 5 in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me upon a rock.

s Heb. of shouting.

And now shall mine head be lifted up above mine enemies 6 round about me: therefore will I offer in his tabernacle sacrifices ^s of joy; I will sing, yea, I will sing praises unto the LORD.

Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voice: have mercy also 7 upon me, and answer me.

t Or, My heart said unto thee, Let my face seek thy face, &c.

^t When thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto 8 thee, Thy face, LORD, will I seek.

Hide not thy face far from me; put not thy servant away in 9 anger: thou hast been my help; leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation.

When my father and my mother forsake me, then the LORD 10 ^u will take me up.

u Heb. will gather me.
x Ps. xxv. 4. & lxxxvi. 11. & cxix.

^x Teach me thy way, O LORD, and lead me in ^y a plain path, 11 because of ^z mine enemies.

y Heb. a way of plainness.
z Heb. those which observe me.

Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies: for false 12 witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty.

I had fainted, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the 13
LORD in the land of the living.

a Ps. xxxi. 24. Is xxv. 9. Hab. ii. 3.

^a Wait on the LORD: be of good courage, and he shall 14 strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the LORD.

PSALM XXXVI.

1 The grievous estate of the wicked. 5 The excellency of God's mercy. 10 David prayeth for favour to God's children.

¶ To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David the servant of the LORD.

The transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, that 1 there is no fear of God before his eyes.

b Heb. to find his iniquity to hate.

For he flattereth himself in his own eyes, ^b until his iniquity 2 be found to be hateful.

The words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit: he hath left 3 off to be wise, and to do good.

c Or, vanity.

He deviseth ^c mischief upon his bed; he setteth himself in a 4 way that is not good; he abhorreth not evil.

d Ps. lvii. 10. & cviii. 4.

^d Thy mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens; and thy faithful- 5 ness reacheth unto the clouds.

e Heb. the mountains of God.

Thy righteousness is like ^e the great mountains; thy judg- 6 ments are a great deep: O LORD, thou preservest man and beast.

f Heb. precious.

How ^f excellent is thy lovingkindness, O God! therefore 7 the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings. A.C. 539.

- 8 They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures. ^g Heb. water-ed.
- 9 For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light.
- 10 O^h continue thy lovingkindness unto them that know thee; and thy righteousness to the upright in heart. ^h Heb. draw out at length.
- 11 Let not the foot of pride come against me, and let not the hand of the wicked remove me.
- 12 There are the workers of iniquity fallen: they are cast down, and shall not be able to rise.

PSALM LXXXIX.

1 The psalmist praiseth God for his covenant, 5 for his wonderful power, 15 for the care of his church, 19 for his favour to the kingdom of David. 38 Then complaining of contrary events, 46 he exhorteth, prayeth, and blesseth God.

¶ ⁱ Maschil of Ethan the Ezrahite.

- 1 I will sing of the mercies of the LORD for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness^k to all generations. ⁱ Or, A Psalm for Ethan the Ezrahite, to give instruction.
- 2 For I have said, Mercy shall be built up for ever: thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens. ^k Heb. to generation and generation: So ver. 4.
- 3 I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have^l sworn unto David my servant, 1 2 Sam. vii. 11, &c.
- 4 Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah.
- 5 And the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O LORD: thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints.
- 6 For who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the LORD?
- 7 God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints, and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him.
- 8 O LORD God of hosts, who is a strong LORD like unto thee? or to thy faithfulness round about thee?
- 9 Thou rulest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.
- 10 Thou hast broken^m Rahab in pieces, as one that is slain; thou hast scattered thine enemiesⁿ with thy strong arm. ^m Or, Egypt.
- 11^o The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them. ⁿ Heb. with the arm of thy strength. ^o Gen. i. 1. Ps. xxiv. 1. & l. 12.
- 12 The north and the south thou hast created them: Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name.
- 13 Thou hast^p a mighty arm: strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand. ^p Heb. an arm with might.
- 14 Justice and judgment are the^q habitation of thy throne: mercy and truth shall go before thy face. ^q Or, establishment.

A.C. 539.

Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they 15 shall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance.

In thy name shall they rejoice all the day: and in thy 16 righteousness shall they be exalted.

For thou art the glory of their strength: and in thy favour 17 our horn shall be exalted.

r Or, our shield is of the LORD, and our king is of the Holy One of Israel, Ps. xlvii. 9.

For ^r the LORD is our defence; and the Holy One of Israel 18 is our king.

Then thou spakest in vision to thy holy one, and saidst, I 19 have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people.

s 1 Sam. xvi. 12.

^s I have found David my servant; with my holy oil have I 20 anointed him:

With whom my hand shall be established: mine arm also 21 shall strengthen him.

The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wicked- 22 ness afflict him.

And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague 23 them that hate him.

But my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him: and 24 in my name shall his horn be exalted.

I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the 25 rivers.

He shall cry unto me, Thou art my father, my God, and 26 the rock of my salvation.

Also I will make him my firstborn, higher than the kings of 27 the earth.

My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my 28 covenant shall stand fast with him.

His seed also will I make to endure for ever, and his throne 29 as the days of heaven.

If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judg- 30 ments;

t Heb. profane my statutes.

If they ^t break my statutes, and keep not my command- 31 ments;

Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their 32 iniquity with stripes.

u Heb. I will not make void from him. v Heb. to lie.

Nevertheless my lovingkindness ^u will I not utterly take 33 from him, nor suffer my faithfulness ^v to fail.

My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is 34 gone out of my lips.

x Heb. if I lie.

Once have I sworn by my holiness ^x that I will not lie unto 35 David.

y 2 Sam. vii. 16. Luke i. 33. John xii. 34.

^y His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun 36 before me.

It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful 37 witness in heaven. Selah.

- 38 But thou hast cast off and abhorred, thou hast been wroth with thine anointed. A.C. 539.
- 39 Thou hast made void the covenant of thy servant: thou hast profaned his crown by casting it to the ground.
- 40 Thou hast broken down all his hedges; thou hast brought his strong holds to ruin.
- 41 All that pass by the way spoil him: he is a reproach to his neighbours.
- 42 Thou hast set up the right hand of his adversaries; thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice.
- 43 Thou hast also turned the edge of his sword, and hast not made him to stand in the battle.
- 44 Thou hast made his ^z glory to cease, and cast his throne down to the ground. ^z Heb. brightness.
- 45 The days of his youth hast thou shortened: thou hast covered him with shame. Selah.
- 46 How long, LORD? wilt thou hide thyself for ever? shall thy wrath burn like fire?
- 47 Remember how short my time is: wherefore hast thou made all men in vain?
- 48 What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave? Selah.
- 49 LORD, where are thy former lovingkindnesses, which thou ^a swarest unto David in thy truth? ^a 2 Sam. vii. 15.
- 50 Remember, LORD, the reproach of thy servants; how I do bear in my bosom the reproach of all the mighty people;
- 51 Wherewith thine enemies have reproached, O LORD; wherewith they have reproached the footsteps of thine anointed.
- 52 Blessed be the LORD for evermore. Amen, and Amen.

PSALM XCII.

1 The prophet exhorteth to praise God, 4 for his great works, 6 for his judgments on the wicked, 10 and for his goodness to the godly.

¶ A Psalm or Song for the sabbath day.

- 1 It is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most high:
- 2 To shew forth thy lovingkindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness ^b every night, ^b Heb. in the nights.
- 3 Upon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psaltery; ^c upon the harp with ^d a solemn sound. ^c Or, upon the solemn sound with the harp.
- 4 For thou, LORD, hast made me glad through thy work: I will triumph in the works of thy hands. ^d Heb. Higgaion, Ps. ix. 16.
- 5 O LORD, how great are thy works! and thy thoughts are very deep.
- 6 A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool understand this.
- 7 When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the

A.C. 539. workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed for ever:

But thou, LORD, art most high for evermore. 8

⁵⁵ The fifth chapter of Daniel is inserted here as in its proper historical place: but who the Belshazzar of Daniel was, and the time of his death, has given rise to much conjecture, and both are uncertain. This uncertainty arises from the difficulty of ascertaining the succession of the kings of Babylon between the death of Nebuchadnezzar and the accession of Cyrus to the Babylonian empire, after the death of Darius. The extreme confusion which prevails among the historians of this period may be seen from the following table.

		The duration of these reigns is given variously by commentators.

After examining the several hypotheses here inserted, I cannot but think that the system proposed by Lightfoot is the most consistent, and the most conformable with Scripture.

Three facts seem to be implied in the book of Daniel: first, that Belshazzar was of the family of Nebuchadnezzar; for he is repeatedly called his son, and Nebuchadnezzar is said to be his father (see Dan. v. 18); and in 2 Chron. xxxvi. 20, it is said, that the captive Jews should continue the servants of Nebuchadnezzar and "his sons, until the reign of the kingdom of Persia." Again, Jeremiah (xxvii. 7.) prophesies that all the nations of the east shall serve this king, and "his son, and his son's son, until the very time of his land come." Secondly, Belshazzar reigned only three years. We find that Daniel saw the vision related in chapter viii. ver. 1, 2. at the palace of Shushan, in the province of Elam. Now Shushan, in the reign of Belshazzar, was not a city of Babylon, but of Persia; neither was Elam a province of Babylon: Elam was another name for Persia, of which Shushan was the capital; and this country had been engaged in perpetual wars with Babylon for the space of twenty years before its overthrow. We have no reason, therefore, for supposing that Daniel was ever absent from the city of Babylon, a place where he was held in much honour,

A.C. 539. he tasted the wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver a Or, grand- vessels which his ^a father Nebuchadnezzar had ^b taken out of father: as Jer. xxvii. 7. 2 Sam. ix. 7. 2 Chr. xv. 16. ver. 11. 13. b Chald. brought forth.

till he was removed either by Cyrus or Darius. Lightfoot therefore interprets the first and second verses of this chapter to signify, "In the third year of Belshazzar, after the fall of that monarch, Daniel was taken by the king of Persia to his own capital, where he saw this vision." The expression in ver. 2, "I rose up, and did the king's business," refers to the business which was entrusted to his care by Cyrus or Darius king of Persia, and not by Belshazzar the king of Babylon. Thirdly, that Belshazzar was the last of the Babylonish kings. Immediately after the death of Belshazzar, his kingdom was divided, and given to the Medes and Persians (Dan. v. 28. 30, 31.) Scripture assures us that Nebuchadnezzar should have "sons, and son's sons," to succeed him on the throne of Babylon; and it confines itself to three generations, father, son, and grandson, to whom the Jews should continue captives for the space of seventy years: now if we suppose that Belshazzar was not of the seed of Nebuchadnezzar, and that his kingdom was possessed by the Medes and Persians before the expiration of the appointed seventy years, these prophecies must have failed of their accomplishment. God likewise threatens to punish the king of Babylon and the land of the Chaldeans, by bringing "many nations and great kings" against them (Jer. xxv. 12. 14. and l. 18); but this prophecy again could not have been fulfilled, if, at the end of the seventy years, the family of Nebuchadnezzar was extinct, and no longer filled the throne of Babylon. The evils denounced against the kings of Babylon were caused, not only by their iniquities, but for cruelties inflicted on the Jews by the family of Nebuchadnezzar. Isaiah foretells (chap. xxi.) the capture of the city at a feast, the "night of pleasure turned into fear;" and in Isaiah xlv. God promises to dry up the rivers, and to break in pieces the gates of brass, before his anointed servant Cyrus, who was to build Jerusalem, and lay the foundations of the temple; Isaiah xlv. 1, 2. It cannot be thought probable, then, that the Almighty would inflict on any other family the evils which Nebuchadnezzar's conduct had brought upon his own; and consequently whoever was the reigning monarch when Cyrus gained admittance into the city, must have been a son, or a descendant of Nebuchadnezzar.

I have, therefore, according to Lightfoot, supposed that Evil Merodach, who succeeded his father Nebuchadnezzar, reigned twenty-three years; and that at his death Belshazzar his son came to the throne, who was slain in the third year of his reign. Herodotus represents the last king of Babylon as being the son of the great queen Nitocris; in which case she must have been the wife of Evil-Merodach; for by this king only could she have been the mother of a son that was son's son to Nebuchadnezzar.

Profane writers give a variety of names to the last king that reigned in Babylon: he is called by Berossus, Nabonnedus; by Megasthenes, Nabonnedochus; by Herodotus, Labynetus; and by Josephus, Naboandelus, whom, he says, is the same as Belshazzar: but these authors are on many occasions so contradictory and inconsistent, that when they at all interfere with Scripture, their evidence must lose its authority. They agree in the important fact, that Babylon was taken during a festival; and both Herodotus and Xenophon relate the draining of the river by Cyrus; by which stratagem he gained admission for his troops.

The causes of the contradictory accounts related in the ancient writers may, in some degree, be ascertained from the hints they give us of the state of the kingdom of Babylon after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, or perhaps during his distraction. Evil-merodach, or foolish Merodach, his successor, was, as his name implies, a weak prince; and, taking advantage of this circumstance, several of the princes mentioned by these different authorities may have opposed him, and successively exercised the regal power, while he only nominally retained it. And to these usurpers, in all probability, may be attributed the various accounts handed down to us of the Babylonish succession during this period. The injured nobleman, in the Cyropædia, repeatedly praises the father of that king of Babylon whom Cyrus was proceeding against; whom the latter calls the Assyrian. And from the description given by Isaiah (xiv. 29.) of the three kings of Babylon, when he describes Nebuchadnezzar as a serpent, Evil-merodach as a cockatrice, and Belshazzar as a fiery flying serpent, that is, worse than his cruel predecessors, it is not improbable that Belshazzar was the king who was guilty of the acts complained of by the friends of Cyrus, and likewise of those cruelties recorded by Xenophon.

Sir Walter Raleigh, in his history of the World, proposes an opinion, that the manuscript of Berossus must have been altered by the carelessness of a scribe; and that it originally assigned twenty-three years to the reign of Evil-merodach. In the short account of the reign of Evil-merodach given in Scripture, we are only informed that he released Jehoiakin from prison, and "that he eat bread continually before him all the days of his life;" 2 Kings xxv. 29, 30. From this expression we can only infer that Jehoiakin lived many years after he was restored to liberty, and that during his life time Evil-merodach was still king.

Then Daniel answered and said before the king, Let thy ^t gifts be to thyself, and give thy ^r rewards to another ; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation. O thou king, the most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour : and for the majesty that he gave him, all people, 19 nations, and languages, trembled and feared before him : whom he would he slew ; and whom he would he kept alive ; and whom he would he set up ; and whom he would he put down. § 17. *Daniel's Vision of the Ram and He Goat.*DANIEL VIII ⁸⁶.

1 Daniel's vision of the ram and he goat. 13 The two thousand three hundred days of sacrifice. 15 Gabriel comforteth Daniel, and interpreteth the vision.

1 In the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which
 2 appeared unto me at the first. And I saw in a vision; and it came to pass, when I saw, that I was at Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam; and I saw in a vision,
 3 and I was by the river of Ulai. Then I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and, behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns: and the two horns were high; but one was higher than ^a the other, and the higher came up last. A.C. 539.
 4 I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; but he did according to his
 5 will, and became great. And as I was considering, behold, an he goat came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and
 6 touched not the ground: and the goat had ^c a notable horn between his eyes. And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him
 7 in the fury of his power. And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his two horns: and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, a Heb. the second.

b Or, none touched him in the earth.
 c Heb. a horn of sight.

⁸⁶ From the fourth verse of the second chapter, to this chapter, Daniel has made use of the Chaldee language, because his prophecies and writings related to the Chaldeans. His remaining prophecies are written in Hebrew, because they treat of events subsequent to the times of that nation, and principally regard the Church and people of God. The second empire in the former vision (the Medo-Persian) is the first in this: and what was there compared to a bear, is here pre-figured by a ram. This ram having two horns, according to the explication of the angel Gabriel, ver. 20, was the empire of the Medes and Persians. The propriety of the emblem appears from hence, that the kings of Persia wore a ram's head of gold and precious stones, instead of a diadem, and a ram was the armorial ensign of that empire. The he goat is the Macedonian empire. The first king of the Macedonians, 200 years before Daniel, called his capital city Ægææ, or Ægæ, a goat being their ensign. "The rough goat," ver. 21, represents the Greeks or Macedonians under Alexander: vv. 6 and 7 describe the Grecians overthrowing the Persian empire. The final and principal engagement in which Alexander overcame the Persians was at the river Granicus, in Phrygia, "standing before the river," ver. 6. The four "notable" horns that sprang up in the room of the first great horn are the same as the four heads of the leopard in the former vision, and denote the four kingdoms of Greece, Thrace, Syria, and Ægypt; which were thus divided "toward the four winds of heaven" by Cassander, Lysimachus, Seleucus, and Ptolemy, about fifteen years after the death of Alexander and the murder of his descendants. The "little horn," which is described as rising among the four horns of the Grecian empire, ver. 9, is supposed by the generality of commentators to signify the Roman temporal power. It was this power that magnified itself against "the prince of the host," "stood up against the Prince of Princes," ver. 25, crucified the Messiah, the Lord of life, took away the "daily sacrifice," destroyed the temple of the Jews, (ver. 11.) and made a desolation of the holy city. But as "the stone," in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, was "cut out of the mountain without hands," that is, not by human, but supernatural means, so likewise shall this kingdom "be broken without hands." Compare chap. ii. 34, and chap. vii. 11 and 26. All which passages seem to imply that the dominion of the Romans shall be finally destroyed with some extraordinary manifestation of the Divine power.—Bishop Newton.

A.C. 539. and stamped upon him : and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand. Therefore the he goat waxed very great : and when he was strong, the great horn was broken ; and for it came up ^d four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven. And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the ^e pleasant land. And it waxed great, ^f even ^f to the host of heaven ; and it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them. Yea, he magnified himself even ^g to the prince of the host, and ^h by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. And ⁱ an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground ; and it practised, and prospered.

Then I heard one saint speaking, and another saint said unto ^k ^l that certain saint which spake, How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression ^m of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot ? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred ⁿ days ; then shall the sanctuary be ^o cleansed.

And it came to pass, when I, even I Daniel, had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning, then, behold, there stood before me as the appearance of a man. And I heard a man's voice before me as the appearance of Ulai, which called, and said, ^p Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision. So he came near where I stood : and when he came, I was afraid, and fell upon my face : but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man : for at the time of the end shall be the vision. Now as he was speaking with me, I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground : but he touched me, and ^q set me upright. And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation : for at the time appointed the end shall be. The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia. And the rough goat is the king of Grecia : and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king. Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power. And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors ^r are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power : and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the ^s holy people. And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand ; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by ^t peace shall destroy many : he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes ; but he shall be ^u broken without hand. ³⁷ In this chapter Daniel, understanding from books (which are supposed to have been the prophecies of Jeremiah, chapters xxv. 13. xxix. 1), that the appointed captivity of seventy years was now drawing towards its conclusion, intercedes with God, by prayer and supplication, for his brethren. In verse 17 we clearly find a plurality in the Godhead signified : Daniel asks for blessings on the sanctuary and the people "for the Lord's sake." And in acceptance of his petitions, while he was yet praying, the angel Gabriel appears, and communicates to the prophet a most wonderful revelation ; assuring him at the same time of the restoration and rebuilding of Jerusalem. The captivity was to last seventy years : at its close, the future state of the Jews and the holy city, for the space of another seventy weeks, is revealed to Daniel, comprising the period "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, till Messiah be cut off." The commencement of the whole period of seventy weeks, or 490 years, being reckoned from the seventh year of Artaxerxes (Ezra vii. 11) ; when the wall of their city was built, and its inhabitants restored to its ancient laws, falls upon the 457th year before the Christian era. To 457 years before the birth of Christ, add 26 years after the birth of Christ, which 26 is the number that 483 years, or 69 weeks, exceed 457 years, and we are brought to the beginning of John the Baptist's preaching of the advent of the Messiah : adding seven years, or one week, to the former, we come to the 33d year of our Lord, which was the year of Jesus Christ's death. In other words, compute 490 years, the whole seventy weeks, from the seventh of Artaxerxes ; by subtracting 457 years (the space of time between that year and the beginning of the Christian era), from 490, there remains 33, the year of our Lord's death.—Prideaux.

In this most wonderful prediction the sufferings and atonement of Christ are, perhaps, more explicitly and clearly revealed than in any other prophecy of the Old Testament. Seventy weeks are "determined upon" for the continuance of the Mosaic worship : at the end of this time the prophet declares the "Most Holy" will make reconciliation for iniquity, and bring in everlasting righteousness. The Messiah shall be "cut off, but not for himself" (1 Pet. iii. 18) ; that "He shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease ;" "by His one oblation of Himself" on the cross, the sacrifice and burnt offerings of the law were to be annulled ; and, finally, that the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary. This prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple was literally fulfilled, with a long train of dreadful calamities, attended with awful indications of divine vengeance, when the Romans under Titus utterly destroyed this condemned city and its miserable inhabitants.

Bishop Watson remarks, "to read these prophecies of Daniel with attention, intelligence, and an unbiassed mind, is sufficient to convert an unbeliever from Deism to Christianity." They were delivered several hundred years before the birth of Christ ; they extend through many ages ; and have ever been considered as the foundation of all modern history ; revealing the successive rise and fall of the four great monarchies of the world ; the establishment of Messiah's kingdom upon earth ; his death and sufferings ; and passing from earth to heaven, they terminate only in eternity.

⁵⁸ This Psalm seems, by the thirteenth verse, to have been composed about the time that God promised a restoration to his people from their captivity in Babylon; namely, after a period of seventy years. It may be appropriately placed, therefore, in the same section with the prayer of Daniel on the same occasion.—Mudge.

§ 19. Daniel is cast into the Den of Lions.

DANIEL VI ⁵⁹.

1 Daniel is made chief of the presidents. 4 They conspiring against him obtain an idolatrous decree. 10 Daniel, accused of the breach thereof, is cast into the lions' den. 18 Daniel is saved. 24 His adversaries devoured, 25 and God magnified by a decree.

1 It pleased Darius to set over the kingdom an hundred and twenty princes, which should be over the whole kingdom; and over these three presidents; of whom Daniel was first: that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage. Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes, because an excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

4 Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him. Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God. Then these presidents and princes ^a assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, King Darius, live for ever. All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the a Or, came tumultuously.

⁵⁹ That the wonderful events recorded in the sixth chapter of Daniel took place about this time, and that the chapter itself ought therefore to be inserted in this part of the arrangement, appears certain, if we consider that Darius reigned only two years: and vv. 1, 2. seem to allude to the division of his empire immediately on his elevation. It is not improbable that Daniel, who in the first year of Darius (Dan. ix. 2, 3.) had calculated the date of the captivity and the promised deliverance of his people, still continued to offer up his prayers to God for their speedy restoration. He perceived no prospect of their immediate return, and became more noticed among the satraps of the court of Persia by his unusual dedication of himself to the service of the God of his fathers. They attempted his ruin by the means here related. The miraculous preservation of Daniel, and the consequent influence he thereby obtained over the mind of Darius, was, in all probability, one of the additional causes which led to the decree of Cyrus on the death of Darius.

The captivity of Judah glorified God even from its commencement, by accomplishing the predictions of the prophets; and during its continuance, God, in his mercy, employed various means to convince the Gentiles of his universal providence and his resistless power. He raised up Daniel by prophetic spirit; he rescued the three illustrious friends of Daniel; he punished the proud impiety of Nebuchadnezzar by a seven years' insanity and degradation; and at the moment when his majesty was insulted by the impious profanation of the vessels of his temple, a miraculous hand-writing on the wall condemned the idolatrous king, denounced his impending fate, and the downfall of his empire. And, last of all, these wonderful interpositions were crowned by the deliverance of Daniel from the lions' den. These were not obscure or doubtful transactions, but attested by the authentic decrees of the most distinguished monarchs, and proclaimed through their wide extended dominions; particularly in the instances of Nebuchadnezzar (Dan. iv. 1. 37; iii. 29); and of Darius (Dan. vi. 25.) And the great Cyrus was so fully persuaded, by these important events, of the truth of the Divine Providence, whose Spirit had so clearly pointed out even the particulars of his own successes, that he became the active assistant in the restoration of the Jews to their own country, and added another public testimony to the glory and power of the God of Israel.—Dr. Graves.

Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber ^g toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees ^f three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime. Then these men assembled, and found Daniel ^h praying and making supplication before his God. Then they ⁱ came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any God or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. Then answered ^j they and said before the king, That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day. Then the king, when he heard these words, ^k was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and he laboured till the going down of the sun to deliver him. Then these men assembled unto the king, and ^l said unto the king, Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree or statute which the king establisheth may be changed. Then the king commanded, ^m and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee. And a stone was ⁿ brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night ^o fasting: neither were ^p instruments of musick brought before him: and his sleep went from him. Then the king arose very ^q early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions. And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice ^r unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions? Then ^s said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever. My God ^t hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was

 Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever

⁶⁰ After the death of Darius the Median, Cyrus returned to Babylon, and took on him the whole government of the empire; over which he reigned as sole monarch seven years. The seventy years' captivity, prophesied by Jeremiah, had now just expired, computing it from the fourth of Jehoiakim; and on the same month on which it began, Cyrus, in the first year of his reign, granted a public decree for the rebuilding of the Temple and the return of the Jews into their own land.—See Prideaux, vol. i. p. 183, and Ezra i. 1.

There can be no doubt but that Daniel obtained from Cyrus this decree in favour of the Jews. The fame of Daniel had extended itself all over the East; and his recent interpretation of the wonderful hand-writing on the wall must have materially increased his reputation. As soon, therefore, as Cyrus had taken possession of Babylon, he sent for Daniel, and consulted with him as to the best measures for the settlement of the government; and on this occasion he gave so much satisfaction, that Cyrus soon after made him his minister of state over all the provinces of the Babylonian empire. When Cyrus returned from his Syrian expedition to Babylon, he found that Daniel was held in the highest favour and esteem by his uncle Darius the Median; and that his fame was very much increased by his miraculous preservation in the lions' den. There is every reason, therefore, to suppose that the prophet availed himself of this moment of popularity, and used all his influence and authority to bring about the restoration of his people. Josephus informs us that Cyrus was acquainted with the prophecies of Isaiah; and that he was so evident from the decree itself: "He hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem" (v. 2). It is only natural, therefore, to conclude that Daniel, who was so much interested in their accomplishment, and who had such constant access to the king, should lay before him those predictions (Isaiah xlv. 28 and xlv. 1.) which called him by name, and foretold his high destiny, so many years before he was born. Seventy years were now nearly elapsed since the Jews were first carried out of Judea by Nebuchadnezzar, to people and strengthen Babylon; and now, at their close, under the Persian government, the weakening and dispeopling of that same city might be a strong reason for their being sent back again to their own country. No wise prince would ever desire that any part of his dominions should remain unpeopled: who, then, could be more proper again to plant the desolated country of Judea than its former inhabitants? But, whatever secondary causes operated on the mind of Cyrus, God's over-ruling power, which stirreth up the hearts of princes according to his will, brought it to pass, that in the first year of Cyrus's monarchy over the east, he issued his royal decree for the rebuilding of the Temple and the return of the Jews into their own country; thereby fulfilling the prophecy of Jeremiah, xxv. 11, "and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years."—Prideaux's Connection, p. 185, &c.

¹ The book of Ezra derives its name from its author, who was a descendant of Seraiah the high priest, slain by Nebuchadnezzar when he burnt the city and temple of Jerusalem. It is written in Chaldee from the eighth verse of the fourth chapter to the twenty-seventh verse of the seventh chapter : as this part of the work contains letters and public decrees given in that language, Ezra, as a faithful historian, records them in the very words which were originally used : more particularly, perhaps, as the Jews, from their long continuance in Babylon, were more accustomed to the Chaldee than even to the Hebrew tongue. It is probable, likewise, at this time the Chaldee paraphrases began to be used, for it appears, Nehem. viii. 2, 3, 8, that some could not understand the law : which may signify they had forgotten the Hebrew language during their captivity. It is evident that the author of the book of Ezra was personally present at the transactions mentioned in it, the narrative being in the first person. It also bears upon the face of it every character of natural simplicity, and contains more particulars of time, persons, and places, than could have been introduced by any other individual. That the last four chapters of this book were written by Ezra himself there can be no doubt, as he particularly describes himself in the beginning of the seventh chapter, and likewise frequently introduces himself in the subsequent chapters. The Jews, indeed, ascribe the whole of this book to Ezra, and their opinion is adopted by most Christian commentators. But as the writer of the first six chapters appears, from chap. v. 4. to have been at Jerusalem in the reign of Darius Hystaspes, and it appears from the beginning of the seventh chapter that Ezra did not go thither until the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus, (a distance of sixty years)—some persons have ascribed the first six chapters to a more ancient author. This, however, does not necessarily follow : and we apprehend it will appear that these chapters were written by Ezra, as well as the four last ; for possibly Ezra, after having accompanied Zerubbabel in the first return of the captivity, might have been again sent up to Babylon to counteract the representations of those who opposed, at the Persian court, the rebuilding of the city and the temple ; and the account of his departure, given in the seventh chapter, perhaps refers only to his going up with that commission, and power which he received from Artaxerxes. But whether Ezra were, or were not, at Jerusalem at the time when this answer was made to Tatnai, (chap. iv. 5.) “ We said unto them,” he may well be conceived, if not actually present at the time, either as copying a public record of the transaction, or as relating the speech of his countryman on that occasion. The same method of narration is observable throughout this book ; in the latter part of it (chap. vii. 12—26.) the royal decree is inserted entire, in the Chaldee dialect ; so, likewise, in the first part, we find the edict of Cyrus, the epistle of the Samaritans, and the reply, together with part of the fourth chapter, are also given in Chaldee. And it is not likely that a short historical compendium, like the book of Ezra, should be the work of more than one author : nor ought we to assign it to several authors, unless we had either express declaration or internal evidence that they were concerned in it ; all these evidences are wanting in the book of Ezra.

This book is a continuation of the Jewish history, from the time at which the Chronicles conclude : it begins with a repetition of the two verses which terminate the book of Chronicles. The first six chapters relate the return of the Jews under Zerubbabel, after their appointed period of captivity ; their re-establishment in Judea ; and the rebuilding and dedication of the temple in Jerusalem. The last four chapters give an account of the appointment of Ezra to the government of Judea by Artaxerxes Longimanus ; his return to his own country from Babylon ; the disobedient

Now ^e these are the children of the province that went up out of the captivity, of those which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jerusalem and Judah, every one unto his city; which came with Zerubbabel: Jeshua, Neheence of the Jews; and the reformation he effected among them. The book of Ezra harmonizes most strictly with the prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah, which it materially elucidates, (compare Ezra v. with Hagg. i. 12. and Zech. iv. 4.) It evinces the paternal care of Jehovah over his chosen people, whose history it relates from the time of the edict issued by Cyrus, to the twentieth year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, a period of about seventy-nine years. Ezra is reported by some traditionary accounts to have died in the 120th year of his age, and to have been buried at Jerusalem; though others say that he died in Persia, and was buried on the banks of the river Samura, where his tomb is shewn.—Gray and Horne in loc.

² The several events related in this eighth period, are chiefly arranged in the order assigned to them by Prideaux, and sanctioned by the high authorities of Bishop Tomline, Dr. Hales, Dr. Adam Clarke, &c. &c.

Every circumstance which took place at this interesting moment, when the captives were about to return to their own land, seems intended to prove to the Jews the peculiar Providence which had watched over their nation. The conquests of Cyrus had brought about an universal peace; so that no interruption was apprehended by the exiles on their return to Judea. The decree itself, of Cyrus, was obtained in consequence of the high reputation of Daniel, and the perusal of the prophecies of Isaiah, in which he was mentioned by name. The reputation of Daniel had been raised to its present eminence by a series of astonishing events; which impressed the Heathen nation with awe, and seemed to eradicate from the breasts of the Jews the least remaining tendency to idolatry. And now on the publication of the decree of Cyrus, another prediction of their prophet Jeremiah was fulfilled, Jer. xxvii. 21, 22; "the vessels that remain in the house of the Lord shall be carried to Babylon, and there shall they be till the day that I visit them, saith the Lord; then will I bring them up, and restore them to this place." The Jews, in this instance, must have been clearly convinced that nothing but Divine inspiration could have foreseen an event so improbable, as the preservation of the golden vessels of the temple from the rapacity and impious sacrilege of the various idolatrous monarchs into whose hands they must have successively fallen; and at last, after the expiration of seventy years, be voluntarily restored to their rightful possessors.

³ Some degree of surprise may perhaps be excited, that not more of the Jews returned to their own land. The circumstance, however, may be easily accounted for, when we consider the motives which are generally most powerful in their influence over the human mind. The Jews who were taken captive to Babylon, had been commanded by their prophet Jeremiah to seek the peace of the land where they were about to sojourn; to build houses, and to plant vineyards. They were received at an early period of their captivity into the peculiar favour of the kings of Babylon, in consequence of the miraculous interposition of a supreme Providence in favour of Daniel; it is not therefore to be wondered at, that so many of the Jews preferred the luxury and ease of Babylon, to the labours, the difficulties, and hardships, to which they would be exposed, by returning to their now desolate country. The higher ranks preferred the splendour and luxuries of the court of Persia: the lower classes, the quiet enjoyment of their homes, &c. Few were found with sufficient attachment for their religious principles, or zeal for the restoration of their ecclesiastical and civil polity, and their reunion as an independent nation, as to induce them to exchange the attractions of maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven : and there were among them two hundred singing 66 men and singing women. Their horses were seven hundred 67 thirty and six ; their mules, two hundred forty and five ; their camels, four hundred thirty and five ; their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house of the LORD which is at Jerusalem, offered freely for the 69 house of God to set it up in his place : they gave after their ability unto the ⁿ treasure of the work threescore and one ^{n 1 Chr.}

EZRA III. VER. 1—7.

1 And when the seventh month was come, and the children

Babylon, for the dangers and trials incident, even under the most favourable circumstances, to their re-establishment in Judea.

Among the comparatively few who took advantage of the decree of Cyrus, must be enumerated not only the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, but several likewise of the other tribes, who were carried away by Tiglath Pileser, Salmanezar, and Esarhaddon ; who still retained the true worship of God in a strange land, and did not go into the idolatrous usages a.d. impieties of the heathens among whom they were dispersed, but joined themselves to the Jews, when, by a like captivity, they were brought into the same parts ; and some, after all the Assyrian captivities, were still left in the land. For we find some of them still there in the time of Josiah (2 Chron. xxxiv. 9. and xxxv. 18.), and they suffered the Babylonish captivity, as well as the Jews, till at length they were wholly carried away in the last of them by Nebuzaradan, in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar, (Jer. lii. 30.) And many of them had long before left their tribes for their religion (2 Chron. xi. 16. xv. 9. and xxxi. 6.) and, incorporating themselves with their brethren of Judah and Benjamin, dwelt in their cities, and there fell into the same calamity with them in their captivity under the Babylonians. And of all these a great number availed themselves of this decree to return and dwell in their own cities ; for both Cyrus' decree, as well as that of Artaxerxes, extended to all the house of Israel. The decree of Artaxerxes (Ezra vii. 13.) is, by name, to all the people of Israel, and that of Cyrus (Ezra i. 3.) is to all the people of the God of Israel, that is, as appears by the text, to all those that worshipped God at Jerusalem ; which must be understood of the people of Israel, as well as of Judah ; for that temple was built for both, and both had an equal right to worship God there. And therefore Ezra, when he returned, in the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus, sent a copy of the king's decree, whereby that favour was granted him through all Media, where the ten tribes were in captivity, as well as through all Chaldea and Assyria, where the Jews were in captivity ; which plainly implies, that both of them were included in that decree, and that being a renewal of the decree of Cyrus, both must be understood of the same extent. And we are told in scripture, that, after the captivity (1 Chron. ix. 3.), some of the children of Ephraim and Manasseh dwelt in Jerusalem, as well as those of Judah and Benjamin. And it appears from several places in the New Testament (Luke ii. 36. James i. 1. Acts xxvi. 7.), that some of all the tribes were still in being among the Jews, even to the time of their last dispersion on the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, though then all were comprehended under the name of Jews, which, after the Babylonish captivity, became the general name of the whole nation, as that of Israelites was before. And this being premised, it solves the difficulty which ariseth from the difference that is between the general number, and the particulars of those that returned upon Cyrus' decree. For the general number, both in Ezra and Nehemiah, is said to be 42,360 ; but the particulars, as reckoned up in their several families in Ezra, amount only to 29,818, and in Nehemiah to 31,031. The meaning of which is, they are only the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, that are reckoned by their families in both these places ; the rest being of the other tribes of Israel, are numbered only in the gross sum ; and this is that which makes the gross sum so much exceed the particulars in both the computations.—Frideaux's Connection, vol. i. anno 556.

of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem. Then stood up ° Jeshua 2 the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and p Zerubabel the son of q Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings thereon, as it is r written in the law of Moses the man of God. And 3 they set the altar upon his bases 4; for fear was upon them because of the people of those countries: and they offered burnt offerings thereon unto the LORD, even s burnt offerings morning and evening. They kept also the feast of 4 tabernacles, t as it is written, and u offered the daily burnt offerings by number, according to the custom, x as the duty of every day required; and afterward offered the continual burnt offer- 5 ing, both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that willingly offered a freewill offering unto the LORD. From the first day 6 of the seventh month began they to offer burnt offerings unto the LORD. But y the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid. They gave money also unto the masons, and 7 to the z carpenters; and meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon 4, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon to the sea of a Joppa, according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

O b give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy 1 endureth for ever.

4 The undoubted piety of the Jews who returned to their own country, was shewn in their anxiety to restore the altar of God for burnt offering. This altar stood in the middle of the inner court of the temple of Solomon, exactly before the porch leading into the holy place; and on this were made the daily offerings of the morning and evening service, and all other offerings, ordinary and extraordinary, which were offered up to God by fire. It had been beaten down and destroyed by the Babylonians at the burning of the temple; and now the first exertions of the Jews were directed to the rebuilding of it in the same place in which it had originally stood, and there they daily offered sacrifices, before any other part of the temple was raised.—Prideaux's Connection, vol. i. p. 197.

5 We may observe here, that the Tyrians were the wealthy, commercial, maritime nation, which contributed more than any other people to the building of the first temple by Solomon. They were principally concerned also in assisting the rebuilding of the second temple under Ezra, (chap. iii. 7.) Is it fanciful to suppose that this nation was but a type of that more powerful, wealthy, commercial, and maritime nation, which in the latter days shall contribute to the rebuilding of the spiritual, and perhaps actual temple, at the final restoration of the Jews, before the second advent of the common Head of the Church? Many coincidences of this nature have suggested themselves in proceeding through this Arrangement; but they have been carefully withheld, from the apprehension that I might be indulging in a spirit of speculation, instead of that sobriety of judgment which should characterise every attempt to elucidate the Holy Scriptures.

6 Psalm cvii. is enumerated by Calmet, Horne, and Gray, among those which were probably written, as well after other deliverances, as upon the release from the Babylonish captivity, and at the building and dedication of the second temple. It is inserted here on the united authority of these laborious and distinguished writers, as well as on its internal evidence, arising from its applicability to the circumstances of the Jewish church at this period. On the same authorities,

- 1 Now when the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that ^a Heb. the ^{transporta-}

^o The sacred authors commonly give the name of Samaritans only to those stranger people the Cuthites, whom the kings of Assyria sent from beyond the Euphrates to people the kingdom of Samaria, when they carried captive the Israelites, who were its former inhabitants, (2 Kings xvii. 23, 24.) We may therefore fix the first establishment of the Samaritans in Judea, when Shalmaneser conquered that part of the country. When Esarhaddon was informed that this people were infested by lions, he imputed it to their ignorance of the "god of the land," (2 Kings xvii. 26—34.) He therefore sent unto them one of the Jewish priests to teach them the worship and the rites of the God of Israel ; and from this time they worshipped Jehovah, in conjunction with their own idol deities. The Samaritans, hearing that the Jews had begun to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem, expressed a great desire to be allowed to unite with them in this work ; but the Jews, doubting their sincerity, and considering them as idolaters, made answer to them,—that they, not being of the seed of Israel, had nothing to do to build a temple to their God, and that they would, according to the decree of Cyrus, build by themselves a temple to the Lord God of Israel. At which the Samaritans being much incensed, they did all they could to hinder the work ; and although they could not alter Cyrus' decree, yet they prevailed, by bribes and underhand dealings with his ministers, and other officers concerned herein, to put obstructions to the execution of it ; so that for several years the building went but very slowly on ; which the Jews resenting, according as it deserved, this became the beginning of that bitter rancour which hath ever since existed between them and the Samaritans ; which, being improved by other causes, grew at length to that height, that nothing became more odious to a Jew than a Samaritan ; of which we have several instances in the Gospels ; and so it still continues. For, even to this day, a Cuthean, (that is, a Samaritan) in their language, is the most odious name among them, and that which, in the height of their anger, rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

 Then the people of the land weakened the hands of the people 4 of Judah, and troubled them in building, and hired counsellors 5 against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia.

PSALM CXXIX ¹⁰.

1 An exhortation to praise God for saving Israel in their great afflictions. 5 The haters of the church are cursed.

¶ A Song of degrees.

^b Or, Much. Many ^b a time have they afflicted me from my youth, may 1
 Israel now say:

by way of infamy and reproach, they bestow on those they most hate and abominate. And by this they commonly call us Christians, when they would express the bitterest of their hatred against us.

Hence the Jews, in expressing their utmost aversion to our Saviour, said unto him, "Thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil;" as if to be a Samaritan and have a devil were things of equal reproach. This rancour, from various circumstances, was carried to such an excess, that the Jews published a curse and an anathema against them, the bitterest that ever was denounced against any people: for thereby they forbade all manner of communication with them, declared all the fruits and products of their land, and every thing else of theirs, which was either eaten or drunk among them, to be as swine's flesh, and prohibited all of their nation ever to taste thereof, and also excluded all of that people from being ever received as proselytes to their religion. And, in the last place, proceeded so far, as even to the barring of them for ever from having any portion in the resurrection of the dead to eternal life; as if this also were in their power. For many ages past, the conduct of the Jews towards the Samaritans hath been according to the tenor of this anathema; they constantly refusing all manner of converse or communication with them: and so it was even in our Saviour's time; for why else should the woman of Samaria ask our Saviour, "How is it that thou being a Jew askest drink of me, who am a woman of Samaria?" but that it was even then forbidden among the Jews either to eat or drink any thing of that which was the Samaritans': and the words immediately following are to this purpose; for they tell us that "the Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans."

The learned Dean Graves has beautifully pointed out the manner in which the opposition of the Samaritans was over-ruled to the general good of the church of God. The intermixture of the Samaritans, who were not entirely weaned from the surrounding idolatry, might, had the Jews acquiesced in their wishes, once more have involved them in that sin. The very opposition of this people served to make the Jews more vigilant in preserving, and the Samaritans in emulating, the purity of the Mosaic law. They became hostile, and therefore unsuspected, guardians of the purity of the sacred text, particularly the Pentateuch: and while many of the Jews expected only a temporal Messiah, some of the Samaritans, from the Pentateuch alone, seem to have attained a juster notion of his real character. See also on this subject, Bishop Horsley's admirable Sermon on the words—"The woman was a Greek, a Syrophenician by nation."—Prideaux, Connect. vol. i. p. 227, anno 535; Calmet, art. Samaritan; Graves on the Pentateuch.

DANIEL X¹¹.

1 Daniel having humbled himself seeth a vision. 10 Being troubled with fear he is comforted by the angel.

- 1 In the third year of Cyrus king of Persia a thing was revealed unto Daniel, whose name was called Belteshazzar; solution of the Jews at the time when the Samaritans obstructed the rebuilding of the city and temple.—Dimock.

¹¹ In consequence of the stratagems used by the Samaritans to defeat the object of the decree of Cyrus, the building of the temple had now ceased. Daniel gave himself up to mourning three weeks together; he then sees the vision, an account of which is contained in these three last chapters of his book. In this vision he is informed of various particulars concerning the Persian, Grecian, and Roman empires, and the kingdom of the Messiah, (chap. x.) states the occasion of the vision, and describes the glorious personage who appeared to the prophet.

The prediction then foretells the fate of the Persian empire (xi. 2.) whose fourth king, Xerxes, was attacked, and his empire destroyed, by Alexander (3); the partition of his vast dominions into four kingdoms (4); and the wars between the kingdoms of Egypt (which lay to the south of Judea) and of Syria (which lay to the north of the Holy land,) are then related, together with the conquest of Macedon by the Romans (5—36). The prophecy then declares the tyranny of the papal Antichrist, which was to spring up under the Roman empire (36—39), and the invasions of the Saracens (from the south) and of the Turks (from the north) in the time of the end, or latter days of the Roman monarchy (40—45). This prophetic vision concludes with foretelling the general resurrection (xii. 1—4), and with announcing the time when all these great events were to have their final consummation, when the Jews were to be restored, Antichrist destroyed, the fulness of the Gentiles brought in, and the millenium, or reign of saints, was to begin (5—13). But the exact period, until PROVIDENCE shall open more of the seals, cannot be fully ascertained.

Upon the whole, we may observe with Bishop Newton, what an amazing prophecy is this, comprehending so many various events, and extending through so many successive ages, from the first establishment of the Persian empire, upwards of 530 years before Christ, to the general resurrection! What a proof of a Divine Providence, and of a Divine Revelation! for who could thus declare the things that shall be, with their times and seasons, but HE only who hath them in his power; whose dominion is over all, and whose kingdom endureth from generation to generation!

Of all the old prophets, Daniel is the most distinct in the order of time, and easiest to be understood; and on this account, Sir Isaac Newton observes, in those events which concern the last times, he must be the interpreter of the rest. All his predictions relate to each other, as if they were several parts of one general prophecy. The first is the easiest to be understood, and every succeeding prophecy adds something to the former. Though his style is not so lofty and figurative as that of the other prophets, it is more suitable to his subject, being clear and concise; his narratives and descriptions are simple and natural; and, in short, he writes more like an historian than a prophet.

Of the genuineness and authenticity of the book of Daniel we have every possible evidence, both external and internal.

¹² Much discussion has at various time been entered into respecting the meaning of the word Michael, which occurs in this last vision of Daniel. Many learned men are of opinion that Michael is but a name for Christ, or the angel of the covenant, the angel Jehovah.

Lightfoot is of this opinion. In his fifth of November Sermon, preached at Ely, of which Church he was a Prebendary, in 1661; he is discussing the passage in Daniel x. 21. "there is none that holdeth with me but Michael your Prince. Who is the Prince of the Church but Christ," &c. &c. &c.—Vide Lightfoot's works, vol. ii. p. 114.

The learned Joseph Mede is of the opposite opinion. Sed quis, inquires, est iste Michael? Non opinor Christus ipse, sed, &c. &c. &c. Mede's Works, p. 495, line 1.

Bishop Horsley, in his Sermon on the Watchers, supposes that Michael is merely a name given to Christ; and, after much ingenious discussion, he thus proceeds; 'From all this it is evident that Michael is a name for our Lord himself, in his particular character of the champion of his faithful people against the violence of the apostate faction, and the wiles of the devil. In this point I have a host of the learned on my side; and it will be further evident from what is yet to come.'—Horsley's Sermons, vol. ii. p. 376.

Bishop Warburton has given his vote on the opposite side: in a very singular remark contained in the thirty-fourth of his letters, p. 92.

Mr. Faber, too, agrees with Lightfoot and Horsley in their opinion that Michael was Christ. See the arguments on this point, admirably discussed in the fifth Exercitation of the learned Witsius. With the most commendable impartiality he has examined both sides of this question, and I think the reader will be inclined to adopt his conclusion, that Michael the Archangel is the Saviour of the Christian Church.—Vide Witsius Miscel. 1 In the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month, c Heb by the hand of Haggai.
 in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD ^cby

¹³ A new dynasty of kings may, in one sense, be said to have commenced with Darius Hystaspes, who in the second year of his reign published the decree for the resuming the building of the temple, which had been discontinued since the third year of Cyrus. From the publication of this decree may be reckoned the thorough restoration of the Jewish state. The dynasty of Cyrus, Cambyses, and Smerdis, being at an end, the edict which prohibited the building of the temple was considered obsolete; yet the Jews neglected to resume the work. On account of this negligence God smote the land with barrenness, so that both the vintage and harvest failed them. But in the second year of Darius, the prophet Haggai being commanded to inform the Jews of the cause of this judgment upon them, in obedience to his exhortations, they proceed with the work. This took place in the second year of Darius, the sixth month, in the first day of the month, vide Haggai, i. 1, compared with Ezra v. 1. The arrangement of the several passages of the prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah, contained in this section, is made on the authority of the various dates assigned by the prophets themselves. Compare Haggai i. 1, with Ezra v. 1.—Haggai i. 12, with Ezra v. 2.—Haggai ii. 1, Zech. i. 1.—Haggai ii. 10, and Zechariah i. 7.

With respect to Haggai, there is nothing transmitted to us on which we can depend, but that he was the first prophet commissioned to make known the divine will to the Jews after their return from captivity. The general opinion, founded on the assertion of the Pseudo-Epiphanius, is, that he was born at Babylon, and was one of the Jews who returned with Zerubbabel, in consequence of the edict of Cyrus. The same author affirms that he was buried at Jerusalem among the priests, whence some have conjectured that he was of the family of Aaron. The times of his predictions, however, are so distinctly marked by himself, that we have as much certainty on this point as we have with respect to any of the prophets.

The Jews, who were released from captivity in the first year of the reign of Cyrus (Ezra i. 1, et seq.), having returned to Jerusalem and commenced the rebuilding of the temple (Ezra ii. 1—4,) were interrupted in their undertakings by the neighbouring satraps, who contrived to prejudice the Persian monarch against them (Ezra iv. 1, with 24,) until the second year of Darius. Discouraged by these impediments, the people ceased, for fourteen years, to prosecute the erection of the second temple, as if the time were not yet come, and applied themselves to the building of their own houses; for which they are reproved by Haggai, chap. i. 1—12.

Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of 12
 Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the LORD their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the LORD. Then spake Haggai the 13 LORD's messenger in the LORD's message unto the people, saying, I am with you, saith the LORD. And the LORD 14 stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and did work in the house of the LORD of hosts, their God. In the four and twentieth day of the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king. A.C. 520.

HAGGAI II. VER. 1—9.

- 1 In the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of the LORD ^k by the prophet Haggai, ^{k Heb. by the hand of.} saying, Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying,
- 3 Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory? and how do ye see it now? is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?
- 4 Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the LORD; and be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the LORD, and work: for I am with you, saith the LORD of hosts:
- 5 According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not.
- 6 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; ¹ Yet once, it is a little ^{1 Heb. xii. 26.} while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land;
- 7 And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the LORD of hosts.
- 8 The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of hosts.
- 9 The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the LORD of hosts: and in this place will I give peace, saith the LORD of hosts ¹⁴.

¹⁴ In consequence of the exhortations of the prophet, the Jews applied themselves diligently to the rebuilding of the temple; and to encourage them to go on vigorously in their undertaking, in the four and twentieth day of the sixth month (compare Haggai i. 1, with Ezra v. 15,) another message from God assures them of his presence and blessing. And further to stimulate their exertions, Haggai a month after (chap. ii. 1.) promises them that the glory of the latter house, when built, should be greater than the glory of the former house; which was accordingly accomplished, when Christ our Lord came to this his temple, and honoured it with his presence. In all other respects this latter temple, the same prophet tells us, at its first building, was as nothing in comparison of the former.

The Jews reckon up five several marks of divine favour which distinguished the first temple, and were wanting in the second. The ark of the covenant, and the mercy-seat which was upon it; the Shechinah, or the divine presence; the Urim and Thummim; the holy fire upon the altar; and the spirit of prophecy. Now the absence of these several things was abundantly supplied by the presence of that Divine Personage, of whom each of them was in some measure typical. Christ may be called the ark, as he was the material representative of the Deity, in which was deposited the perfect law of God. Like the cedar of which the ark was composed, Christ was incorruptible; and the golden crown of divinity and glory was upon him, as it was upon the ark. Angels attended him in his humiliation, and desired to penetrate the mystery of his incarnation, as the cherubim bent over the mercy-seat. From him, as from the ark, the oracle was given to man. As God met with man between the cherubims before the mercy-seat, so is Christ the meeting place between God and man. Christ was the Shechinah, for he dwelt or tabernacled among men, the true glory of the Shechinah. The Urim and Thummim were not required when the Messiah was on earth, he only has given those clear oracular answers, which shall ever instruct the world; the others were but typical of that union of light and perfection, which met in him alone. Never but in him were united perfect knowledge and perfect holiness. He is the great high priest who hath spoken with the mouth of God. The holy fire was not necessary; it was but typical of that eternal flame of devotion, purity, and love, which God requires, and Christ exemplified. The spirit of prophecy was not wanted, for on him rested the Spirit without measure. He was the prophet like unto Moses, in bringing in a new dispensation: though greater than Moses, for he was perfect in himself, and grace and truth are better than the law. Christ united in himself all these ornaments of the first temple, and he excelled them all, inasmuch as the substance is superior to the shadow. These things, it is true, made the first temple glorious; but the glory of the second temple was indeed greater than that of the first; when Christ, uniting all the realities of which the first temple was but typical, presented himself in the second temple to the admiring and wondering crowd, as the true Messiah, the expected Hope, and Saviour of Israel.

¹⁵ All that we know of the prophet Zechariah is, that he was one of the captives who returned to Jerusalem on the decree of Cyrus, a contemporary with Haggai, that he began to prophesy two months after him, and that he was commissioned as well as Haggai to encourage the Jews in the building of their temple. He prophesied about two years: his last revelation having been delivered in the fourth day of the ninth month of the fourth year of Darius Hystaspes, (ch. vii. 1.) Zechariah therefore probably lived to witness the completion of the temple, which was finished six years after.

Zechariah is quoted as an inspired writer (Matt. xxi. 4, 5.), and the minute accomplishment of his own prophecies bears a signal testimony to the truth of that Divine Spirit by which he was inspired.

The prophecy of Zechariah consists of two parts, the first of which concerns the events which were then taking place, viz. the restoration of the temple, interspersing predictions relative to the advent of the Messiah. The second part comprises prophecies relative to more remote events, particularly the coming of Jesus Christ, and the war of the Romans against the Jews.

In this portion of the first chapter he exhorts the Jews to repentance, and to go on with the building of the temple.—Gray and Horne in loc.

¹⁶ On the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, the Jews, after they had been employed from

'second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai A.C. 520.
 11 the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying, If one bear holy 12 flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall 13 it be holy? And the priests answered and said, No. Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean. Then answered Haggai, and 14 said, So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; and that which 15 they offer there is unclean. And now, I pray you, consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon 16 a stone in the temple of the LORD: since those days were, when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the pressfat for to draw out fifty 17 vessels out of the press, there were but twenty. ^{r Amos iv. 9.} I smote you

 18 of your hands; yet ye turned not to me, saith the LORD. Contieth day of the ninth month, even from the day that the founda-19 tion of the LORD's temple was laid, consider it. Is the seed yet in the barn? yea, as yet the vine, and the fig tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive tree, hath not brought forth: from this day will I bless you.

 20 And again the word of the LORD came unto Haggai in the 21 four and twentieth day of the month, saying, Speak to Zerub-babel, governor of Judah, saying, I will shake the heavens and 22 the earth; and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the 23 sword of his brother. In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the LORD, and will make thee as a signet: for I have chosen thee, saith the LORD of hosts.

ZECARIAH I. VER. 7, TO THE END ¹⁷.

7 Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word

the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month (Haggai i. 1—9. and 15.) in preparing materials for the temple, proceeded again with the building of it; whereupon the prophet Haggai promised them from God a deliverance from that barrenness of their land with which it had been smitten, and plentiful increase of all its fruits for the future. He also delivered unto Zerubbabel a message from God, of mercy and favour to him.—Prideaux's Connection, vol. i. p. 257.

¹⁷ In this prophecy of Zechariah it is predicted that Darius should permit the building of the temple (chap. i. 7—18.), and that the Samaritans should be compelled to suspend their opposition to the building (18—21). Further, to encourage the Jews in their work, the prophet foretells the prosperity of Jerusalem (ii. 1—5.), and admonishes the Jews to depart from Babylon before her destruction (6—9), promising them the divine presence (10—13). These promises, though partly fulfilled by the prosperity of the Jews under the Maccabees, remain to be still more fully accomplished after the restoration of the Jews, and their conversion to the Gospel.

The adversaries of the Jews having endeavoured to interrupt their work (Ezra v.), in order to encourage them, the restoration of the temple and its service is foretold under the vision of Joshua the high priest, arrayed in new sacerdotal attire (iii. 1—7.); whence, by an easy transition, the prophet proceeds to set forth the glory of Christ as the chief corner-stone of his church (8—10).

Under the vision of the golden candlestick and two olive trees, is typically represented the success of Zerubbabel and Joshua in rebuilding the temple, and restoring its service.

Under the vision of a flying roll, the divine judgments are denounced against robbery and perjury (v. 1—4.); and the Jews are threatened with a second captivity, if they continue in sin (5—11).

Under the vision of the four chariots, drawn by several sorts of horses, are represented the successions of the Babylonian, Persian, Macedo-Greek, and Roman empires (vi. 1—8): and by the two crowns placed upon the head of Joshua, are set forth, primarily, the re-establishment of the civil and religious polity of the Jews, under Zerubbabel and Joshua; and secondarily, the high-priesthood, and kingdom of Christ, emphatically termed here "the Branch."—Horne's Crit. - 5 For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her.
- 6 Ho, ho, come forth, and flee from the land of the north, saith the LORD: for I have spread you abroad as the four winds of the heaven, saith the LORD.
- 7 Deliver thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.
- 8 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; After the glory hath he sent me unto the nations which spoiled you: for he that ^x toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye.
- 9 For, behold, I will shake mine hand upon them, and they shall be a spoil to their servants: and ye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me.
- 10 ^y Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion: for, lo, I come, and I ^z will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the LORD.
- 11 And many nations shall be joined to the LORD in that day, and shall be my people: and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto thee.
- 12 And the LORD shall inherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again.

¹⁹ The seventh and eighth chapters of the Prophecy of Zechariah were delivered to some Jews who had been sent to Jerusalem from their brethren at Babylon, to enquire of the priests and prophets whether it was still necessary to observe the fasts that had been instituted on account of the destruction of Jerusalem, and which had been observed during the captivity (vii. 1—4.)—the prophet is commanded to take this occasion of enforcing upon them the weightier matters of the law, viz. judgment and mercy, lest the same calamities should befall them which had been inflicted upon their fathers for their neglect of those duties (4—14.) In the event of their obedience, God promises the continuance of his favour (viii. 1—8); they are encouraged to go on with the building, (9—17.) and are permitted to discontinue the observance of the fasts which they had kept during the captivity (18—23.)—Horne's Crit. And the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered ¹⁴

²⁰ In the sixth year of Darius, according to the Jewish account, and on the 3d day of the 12th month, called the month of Adar (which answered to part of the third and part of the fourth month of the Babylonish year, and consequently was in the 7th year of Darius, according to the Babylonish account,) the building of the temple at Jerusalem was finished, and the dedication of it was celebrated by the priests and Levites, and all the rest of the congregation of Israel, with great joy and solemnity. And, among other sacrifices then offered, there was a sin offering for all Israel of twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel; which fully proves that on the return of Judah and Benjamin from the Babylonish captivity, some also of each of the other tribes of Israel came with them out of Assyria, Babylon, and Media, whither they had been before carried, through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they builded, and finished it, according to the ^a commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes king 15 of Persia. And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

16 And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of ^b the children of the captivity, kept the dedication of this house of God with joy, and offered at the dedication of this house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a sin offering for all Israel, twelve
 18 he goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem; ^{c d} as it
 19 is written in the book of Moses. And the children of the captivity kept the passover upon the fourteenth day of the first 20 month. For the priests and the Levites were purified together, all of them were pure, and killed the passover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for 21 themselves. And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to 22 seek the LORD God of Israel, did eat, and kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy: for the LORD had made them joyful, and turned the heart of the king of Assyria unto them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

and, joining with them in the rebuilding of the temple (to which they had originally an equal right,) partook also with them in the solemnity of this dedication; otherwise there is no reason why any such offering should have been then made in their behalf. But the most of them that returned being of the tribe of Judah, that tribe swallowed up the names of all the rest; for from this time the whole people of Israel, of what tribe soever they were, began to be called Jews; and by that name they have all of them been ever since known all the world over.

They are inserted also both by Dr. Gray and Mr. Horne, with the cxlixth and clth, among those which were written on some great deliverance of the Church. The two latter Psalms are so evidently written on the same model as those which precede them, that they may be justly referred to the same period, and to the same occasion. Psalm cxlviii. is assigned by the same authorities to some season of joy, and its contents appear applicable to this period. The chronology of Psalm lxxxii. is uncertain ; it is supposed to have been composed for the feast of trumpets. I have inserted it here ; from comparing its contents with the account of the circumstances attendant on the dedication of ²² The contents of this and the following section are placed here on the authority of Dr. Hales, who observes, 'The whole passage (Ezra iv. 6—23.) is an historical anticipation, introduced parenthetically into the account of the former opposition of the Samaritans to rebuilding the temple, from the time of Cyrus to Darius Hystaspes; describing their subsequent oppositions to rebuilding Jerusalem and its walls, in the ensuing reign of Xerxes and Artaxerxes. It comes in between ver. 5, and 24, of this chapter; of which the latter verse takes up the subject of the former again, and the fifth chapter proceeds immediately to the account of rebuilding the temple on the exhortation of the prophets Haggai and Zechariah, by Zerubbabel and Jeshua, &c.

'The merit of distinguishing these different oppositions is due to Howe, in his ingenious strictures on Richardson's Dissertations on the Literature of Eastern Nations. See his critical observations on books, vol. ii. p. 82, &c.'—Vide Hale's Anal. vol. ii. note, p. 524.

²³ There has been much difference of opinion with regard to the Ahasuerus of Scripture. It is certain that the Jews were accustomed to distinguish foreign persons by different names from those given to them in profane history: and indeed every nation is known to have fallen into this custom, in conformity to the genius and pronunciation of its own language. Scaliger contends, that Ahasuerus was the same with Xerxes; because, from a fancied similarity of names only, he supposes that his queen Amestris must have been the Esther of Holy Writ. Archbishop Usher is of opinion, that Darius Hystaspes was the king Ahasuerus that married Esther; and that Atossa was Vashti, and Artystone, Esther. Some, upon grounds equally conjectural, have maintained that Ahasuerus was Cyaxares; while others again have imagined that he was Cambyzes. But all these contending opinions are at variance with the accounts handed down to us by profane historians. Prideaux therefore supposes, and with the greatest probability, that Ahasuerus was Artaxerxes Longimanus: in support of which argument he observes; 'The ancientest and best evidences that can be had of this matter, are from the Greek version of the sacred text, called the Septuagint, the apocryphal additions to the book of Esther, and Josephus; and all these agree for Artaxerxes Longimanus. For Josephus positively tells us it was he; and the Septuagint, through the whole book of Esther, wherever the Hebrew text hath Ahasuerus, translate Artaxerxes; and the apocryphal additions to that book every where call the husband of Esther, Artaxerxes, who could be none other than Artaxerxes Longimanus; for there are several circumstances related of him, both in the canonical and apocryphal Esther, which can by no means be applicable to the other Artaxerxes, called Mnemon. And Severus Sulpitius, and many other writers, as well of the ancients as the moderns, come also into this opinion. And the extraordinary favour and kindness which Artaxerxes Longimanus shewed the Jews beyond all the other kings that reigned in Persia, first in sending Ezra, and after, Nehemiah, for the repairing of the broken affairs of that people in Judah and Jerusalem, and the restoring of them again to their ancient prosperity, is what can scarce be accounted for on any other reason, but that they had in his bosom such a powerful advocate as Esther to solicit for them."—Prideaux's Connect. p. 361; Dr. Gray.

²⁴ The book of Esther, which derives its name from the person whose history it chiefly relates, is by the Jews termed Megilloth Esther, or the volume of Esther. It has ever been held in the highest estimation by the Jews, who place it on the same level with the law of Moses; and they believe, that whatever destruction may attend the other sacred writings, the Pentateuch and the book of Esther will always be preserved by a special providence.

Concerning the author of this book, the opinions of biblical critics are so greatly divided, that it is difficult to determine by whom it was written. Some ascribe it to the joint labours of the great synagogue, who, from the time of Ezra to Simon the Just, superintended the edition and canon of Scripture. Philo the Jew assigns it to Joachin, the son of Joshua the high priest, who returned with Zerubbabel; others think it was composed by Mordecai; and others, again, attribute it to Esther and Mordecai jointly. The two latter conjectures are grounded on the following declaration in Esther ix. 20, 23, "And Mordecai wrote these things, and sent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus; and the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them." But the context of the passage clearly shows that these words do not relate to the book itself, but to the circular letters which Mordecai distributed in the Persian provinces. Augustine, and some of the Fathers, suppose that it was written by Ezra; and this opinion appears more probable than any that has been offered to us.

But although we have no sufficient evidence to ascertain precisely who was its real author; there is no doubt but that the book itself contains a genuine and faithful account of what actually took place; not only from its admission into the canon of Scripture, but also from the institution of the feast of Purim; which, from its first establishment, has been regularly observed as an annual solemnity, on the fourteenth and fifteenth of the month Adar, in commemoration of the great deliverance which Esther by her interest had procured for the Jews; and which is even now celebrated among them with many peculiar ceremonies, and with rejoicings even to intoxication. This festival was called Purim, or the feast of lots (Pur, in the Persian language, signifying a lot), from the events mentioned in chap. iii. 7. ix. 24. It has been remarked, that the name of God is not mentioned throughout this book; but his superintending providence is so evidently displayed in every transaction recorded in it, that its authenticity on this account cannot be questioned.—Dr. Gray's Key in loc.; Horne's Crit. Introd. in loc.

After these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was 1 appeased, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done, and what was decreed against her. Then said the king's servants 2 that ministered unto him, Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king: and let the king appoint officers in all the 3 provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, ^r unto the custody of ^s Hege the king's chamberlain,

 Esther was brought also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women. And the maiden pleased him, 9 and she obtained kindness of him; and he speedily gave her her things for purification, with ^z such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house: and ^a he preferred her and her maids unto the

In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: she came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that she were called by name.
- 15 Now when the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, who had taken her for his daughter, was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed.

§ 4. Commission of Ezra ²⁵.

EZRA VII.

- 1 Ezra goeth up to Jerusalem. 11 The gracious commission of Artaxerxes to Ezra.
27 Ezra blesseth God for his favour.

- 1 Now after these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, Ezra the son of Seraiah, the son of Azariah, the son of 458.

²⁵ Ezra probably received his first commission through the interest of Esther; as a short time after it was obtained, she was made queen (compare Esther ii. 16. with vii. 8.)

From Ezra's entering upon the work of reforming the Jewish church, the celebrated prophecy of the seventy weeks, which is delivered to us in the ninth chapter of Daniel, concerning the coming of the Messiah, is to be computed. The words of the prophecy, in our English translation, are as follow.

Ver. 24. "Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most Holy:" ver. 25. "Know, therefore, and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times:" ver. 26. "And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself; and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined:" ver. 27. "And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured out upon the desolate."

And it being of great moment, for the conviction of Jews and other infidels who reject the faith of Christ, to have this prophecy well cleared, and made out, in order hereto it is to be observed,

I. That this prophecy doth relate primarily and especially to the Jews. For it expresseth the time that was determined upon the people of Daniel, that is, the Jews, and upon the holy city, that is, Jerusalem, the whole of which was seventy weeks; after the expiration of which fore-ordained time, an end being put to the Mosaic economy, the Jews should be no longer God's peculiar people, and the worship which he had established at Jerusalem being abolished, that city should be no longer a city holy unto him.

Among the Jews there were sabbatical days, whereby their days were divided into weeks of days; and there were likewise sabbatical years (Levit. xxv. 8.), whereby their years were divided

 he was a ready scribe in the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given: and the king granted him all his request, according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him.
 And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the 7 priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims, unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king. And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, 8 which was in the seventh year of the king. For upon the first 9 day of the first month ^a began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him. For Ezra had 10 into weeks of years; and this last sort of weeks is that which is here mentioned; so that every one of the weeks of this prophecy contains seven years, and the seventy weeks here appointed, denote a period of 490 years. At the end of which time, this prophecy was accomplished in the great work of our salvation, by the death and resurrection of Christ our Lord, who made, by one oblation of Himself, an end of sin, reconciliation for our iniquity, and brought in the law of everlasting righteousness.

Then the Jewish church, and the Jewish worship at Jerusalem, were wholly abolished, the kingdom of the Messiah began; and the Christian church and the Christian worship established, and, instead of Jerusalem, every place through the whole earth, where God should be worshipped in spirit and in truth, was made holy unto him. The end of these weeks being thus fixed at the death of Christ, by which great sacrifice all visions and prophecies were sealed up and fulfilled (Dan. ix. 24.), it necessarily determines us to fix the beginning of these weeks 490 years before that event. And as most learned men agree that "Messiah was cut off" in the year of the Julian period 4746, and in the Jewish month Nisan, if we reckon 490 years backward, this will lead us up to the month Nisan, in the year of the Julian period 4256, which was the very year and month in which Ezra had his commission from Artaxerxes Longimanus, king of Persia, for his return to Jerusalem, there to restore the church and state of the Jews; for that year of the Julian period, according to Ptolemy's canon, was the seventh year of that king's reign (Ezra vii. 7.), in which the Scriptures tell us his commission was granted. The beginning, therefore, of the seventy weeks, or 490 years of this prophecy, was in the month Nisan of the Jewish year, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, king of Persia, and in the 4256th year of the Julian period, when Ezra had his commission; and the end of them fell in the very same month of Nisan, in the 4746th year of the Julian period, in which very year and very month Christ our Lord suffered for us; and thereby completed the whole work of our salvation, there being just seventy weeks of years, or 490 years, from the one to the other.

It is evident, then, from the prophecy itself, that these weeks must have their beginning from the date of the commission granted to Ezra, because their commencement must be determined by the death of Christ. It is expressly stated (Dan. ix. 25.) that they should begin "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem:" which words, therefore, must be understood figuratively, as they refer to the ecclesiastical, as well as to the political state of the Jews, and to the future re-establishment of both, according to the law of Moses; which great work was completely brought about by Ezra, who effected a thorough reformation in church and state. For if these words "to restore and to build Jerusalem," are to be taken in their literal signification, they must relate to the decree of Cyrus, of whom it was predicted, that he "should say to Jerusalem, Be thou built, and to the temple, Thy foundations shall be laid," and the commencement of the seventy weeks must be computed from his edict. But they cannot begin at this time, because they would then have expired long before even the coming of the Messiah; and as we are certain, from the prophecy itself, that the seventy weeks must begin from one of the edicts granted by the kings of Persia in favour of the Jews; it is evident that they can only have their commencement from this decree of Artaxerxes, given in the seventh year of his reign: and that the words "to restore and to build Jerusalem" must be taken in their figurative signification. See the arguments at length, in Prideaux's Connection, part i. book v. p. 377—408.

1 The companions of Ezra who returned from Babylon. 15 He sendeth to Iddo for ministers for the temple. 21 He keepeth a fast. 24 He committeth the treasures to the custody of the priests. 31 From Ahava they come to Jerusalem. 33 The treasure is weighed in the temple. 36 The commission is delivered.

These are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the 1 genealogy of them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king. Of the sons of Shechaniah, of the sons of Pharosh; 3 Zechariah: and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males an hundred and fifty. Of the sons of Pahath-moab; 4 Elihoenai the son of Zeremiah, and with him two hundred males. Of the sons of Shechaniah; the son of Jahaziel, and 5 with him three hundred males. Of the sons also of Adin; Ebed 6 the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty males. And of the sons of 7 Elam; Jeshaiah the son of Athaliah, and with him seventy males. And of the sons of Shephatiah; Zebadiah the son of Michael, and 8 with him fourscore males. Of the sons of Joab; Obadiah the son 9 of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males. And of 10 the sons of Shelomith; the son of Josiphiah, and with him an hundred and threescore males. And of the sons of Bebai; 11 Zechariah the son of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males. And of the sons of Azgad; Johanan ⁱ the son of Hak- 12 katan, and with him an hundred and ten males. And of the 13 last sons of Adonikam, whose names are these, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with them threescore males.  by the good hand of our God upon us they brought us a man of 19 and Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiah, of the sons of Merari, the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our sub-22 stance. For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way:
 because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but his power 23 and his wrath is against all them that forsake him. So we fasted and besought our God for this: and he was intreated of us.

24 Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Shere-25 biah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them, and weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had 26 offered: I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of 27 gold an hundred talents; also twenty basons of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of ^o fine copper, ^p precious as gold.
 28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the LORD; the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a freewill offering 29 unto the LORD God of your fathers. Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in 30 the chambers of the house of the LORD. So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God.

31 Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the 32 enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 Now on the fourth day was the silver and the gold and the vessels weighed in the house of our God by the hand of Mere-moth the son of Uriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was Jozabad the son of

Now when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. For they have taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons : so that the holy seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands : yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass. And when I heard this thing, I rent my garment and my mantle, and plucked off the hair of my head and of my beard, and sat down astonished. Then were assembled unto me every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgressions of those that had been carried away ; and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice.

- 5 And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my ^a heaviness; and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God, and said,
- 6 O my God, I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our ^b trespass is grown up unto the heavens.
- 7 Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day.
- 8 And now for a ^c little space grace hath been shewed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us ^d a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage.
- 9 For we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and ^e to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.
- 10 And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments,
- 11 Which thou hast commanded ^f by thy servants the prophets, saying, The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it ^g from one end to another with their uncleanness.
- 12 Now therefore ^h give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever: that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever.
- 13 And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God ⁱ hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this;
- 14 Should we again break thy commandments, and join affinity with the people of these abominations? wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?
- 15 O LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous: for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee in our trespasses: for we cannot stand before thee because of this.

Now when Ezra had prayed, and when he had confessed, 1 weeping and casting himself down before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men and women and children: for the people ^k wept very sore. And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons 2 of Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing. Now therefore let us make a covenant with our God 3 ^l to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that tremble at the commandment of our God; and let it be done according to the law. Concluding Prophecies of Zechariah.

ZECHARIAH IX ²⁶.

1 God defendeth his church. 9 Zion is exhorted to rejoice for the coming of Christ, and his peaceable kingdom. 12 God's promises of victory and defence.

The burden of the word of the LORD in the land of Hadrach, 1 and Damascus shall be the rest thereof: when the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the LORD.

²⁶ There is less certainty with respect to the probable date and place of these latter chapters of Zechariah, than of any other chapters in the Old Testament. An expression quoted by St. Matthew, (chap. xxvii. 9, 10.) from Zechariah, is attributed by that Evangelist to Jeremiah. The learned Joseph Mede, Dr. Hammond, Bishop Kidder, and some others, assign these chapters to this latter prophet. In support of this opinion, the former uses the following arguments, Mede's Works, p. 786—833.

1. "If the contents of the prophecy be weighed, they would in all likelihood be of an elder date than the time of Zechariah, namely, before the captivity: for the subjects of them were scarce in being after that time.

2. "The chapter out of which St. Matthew quotes may seem to have somewhat much unsuitable with Zechariah's time; as, a prophecy of the destruction of the temple, then, when he was to encourage them to build it: and how does the sixth verse of that chapter suit with his time?

3. "No Scripture saith they are Zechariah's, but there is Scripture which saith they are Jeremiah's.

4. "Their being united to the other prophecies of Zechariah no more prove them to be his, than the adjoining of Agur's proverbs to Solomon's, proves they are therefore Solomon's; or that all the Psalms are David's, because joined in one volume with David's Psalms."

5. Several verbal criticisms on the words used by St. Matthew, when compared with those used by Zechariah; which prove only that the Evangelist quoted according to the sense, and not the precise phrases of the prophet. (Compare Matt. xxvii. 9, 10. with Zech. xi. 12, 13. Archbp. Newcome's translation.)

6. The above are selected from observations on several other passages of Scripture, in Epistle xxxi. In Epistle lxi. he resumes the subject.

"The titles at the heads of the pages (in the Hebrew Bibles or manuscripts) matter not. The Jews wrote in rolls, or volumes, and the title was but once. If aught were added to that roll, of similitudinem argumenti, or for any other reason, it had a new title, as that of Agur, or perhaps sometimes none, but was ἀνώνυμον.

7. "That which I fancy or conceive is, that those prophecies against Damascus and the Philistines, (chap. ix.) would better befit Jeremiah's time, of their destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, than (if of Zechariah's time) by Alexander. See the prophecy against Damascus, (Jer. xlix. 23.) against the Philistines, (chap. xlvii. 2. and Ezek. xxv. 15.) For where do we find Damascus destroyed from Zechariah's to our Saviour's time? For to come under the hands of new masters, or to suffer some direption, or pillaging, doth not seem to satisfy the intent of the prophecy. And for the Philistines, though it be true that Alexander destroyed Gaza, yet it appears not that any such desolation befel Ashkelon, whereby it should not be inhabited: nor should they seem in Zechariah's time to have so well recovered their destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, as to be a subject for a new prophecy to that purpose."

8. "Tyre had but lately been destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar. The prophecy against this city, therefore, would be more suitable to the times of Jeremiah."

9. "That which moves me more than all the rest is in chap. xi. (whence that in the Gospel is quoted) which contains a prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem, and a description of the wickedness of its inhabitants, for which God would give them to the sword, and have no more pity upon them. It is expounded of the destruction by Titus; but methinks such a prophecy was not seasonable for Zechariah's time, (when the city in great part lay in ruins, and the temple had not yet recovered herself,) nor agreeable to the scope of Zechariah's commission, who, together with his colleague Haggai, was sent to encourage the people lately returned from the captivity to build the temple, and instaurate their commonwealth. Was this a fit time to foretell the destruction of both, while xxviii. 3, &c.

they were yet but building? and by Zechariah too, who was to encourage them? Would not this better befit the desolation by Nebuchadnezzar?

10. "Jeremiah's prophecies are digested in no order, but only as it seems they came to light in the scribes' hands, &c.: and why may not some be found till the return from the captivity, and be approved by Zechariah, and be added to his volume, according to the time of their finding, and approbation by him: and after that, some other prophecies of his?"

The argument for assigning the prophecy to the time of Jeremiah, derived from the text of St. Matthew, is of the greatest weight. Yet it must be observed, that the word Ἱερεμίου, does not appear to have been the original reading of St. Matthew. It might either have been a marginal annotation, which afterwards crept into the text; or if the name of the prophet Zechariah had been written by St. Matthew, and was preserved in the manuscripts in an abbreviated form, that abbreviation may have been mistaken. The Syriac and Persic versions omit the name. Augustine de cons. Ev. 3. 7. (quoted by Archbp. Newcome) says, "Primo novit non omnes codices evangeliorum habere, quod per Hieremiam, dictum sit, sed tantummodo 'per prophetam.'" Griesbach prefixes to the word Ἱερεμίου his mark, that it should properly be omitted. Lightfoot (Harmony of the N. T.) observes, that in the old Bibles, Jeremiah was placed next after the book of Kings and stood first in the volume of the prophets. So that when Matthew quotes a text of Zechariah, under the name of Jeremiah, he does but cite a text out of the volume of the prophets under his name that stood first in that volume. In confirmation of this hypothesis, he refers to Matt. xvi. 14. observing, that in the saying Jeremiah, or one of the prophets, there is the same reason why Jeremiah is mentioned by name; because his name stood first in the volume of the prophets, and so occurred first to the mind, when any of the people spoke familiarly of the prophets.

We learn from Zechariah ii. 4, that, at the commencement of his prophesying, in the second year of Darius, he was a very young man. The same word being used in Jeremiah i. 6, and is rendered in the authorized translation "a child." He would not be, therefore, more than eighty years old when Ezra went up from Babylon to Jerusalem. And as we have already seen that the Spirit of God was frequently poured upon his servants on the occurrence of any important occasion, it is not unreasonable to suppose, as there is no date assigned to these chapters, and as they have been attributed to Zechariah both by Ezra and the great Sanhedrim, that they were uttered by him during the government of Ezra. The evident difference of style observable in these latter chapters of Zechariah, when compared with those that precede them, and the great resemblance the former bear to the style of Jeremiah, may be accounted for on the supposition, that his first prophecies were delivered when he was quite a young man, "a child;" and that his last were given probably after a particular attention and study of the prophecies of Jeremiah, by which his own expressions were strengthened, and his language improved.

This theory perhaps may be considered as the best solution of the difficulty: it is, however, rejected by Whitby, who seems to incline to the opinion of the learned Joseph Mede. Though it may appear presumptuous to submit to the world an opposite opinion to that which has been defended by one so eminent, yet I feel that it would be still more so to adopt so considerable an alteration, without still more powerful and convincing evidence. It will be only necessary, therefore, to state those arguments which seem to oppose the hypothesis maintained by Mr. Mede.

The first merely states the proposition to be proved.

2. It cannot be proved that Zechariah wrote this chapter at the exact time when he was encouraging the people to build the temple. The sixth verse may justly be interpreted as a prophecy of the destruction of the temple by Titus.

3. That these chapters have uniformly, without one exception, in one version or MS. been given to Zechariah, is more ample proof that they were written by that prophet, than the disputed insertion of the word "Jeremiah" in Matt. xxvii. 10.

4. Agur's name is prefixed to his proverbs: other names than David's are prefixed to various Psalms. By the same analogy we are fairly warranted in concluding, that if these chapters had been written by Jeremiah, his name likewise would have been prefixed to them either by Zechariah, by Ezra, or by the great Sanhedrim.

5. Has been already answered in a former part of the note.

6. As there is no new title given to these latter chapters, we may justly conclude they were a continuation of the former prophecies of Zechariah.

7. Damascus was betrayed into the hands of Parmenio, one of Alexander's generals, though without bloodshed, and it ceased to be a place of importance. This was sufficient to fulfil the prophecy. It is not asserted that Damascus should be pillaged, neither is it necessary to suppose that its pillage or its violent capture were essential to the accomplishment of the prediction. (Zech. ix. 1.)

The Philistines, after the destruction of Gaza, never recovered their former glory; and Ashkelon shared the fate of the rest of the country. The words, "it shall not be inhabited," are figurative: and express only extensive desolation, and total political ruin. Thus Ezekiel (chap. xxix. ver. 11.) predicts that Egypt should not be inhabited forty years. If this expression be literally interpreted, the prophecy has never been fulfilled: but as it signifies only desolation and ruin, it was accomplished in the forty years of calamity which succeeded the invasion of Nebuchadnezzar.

8. Tyre was taken by Nebuchadnezzar in the year 573. If this prophecy was delivered, as we suppose, in the year 457, an interval of 116 years is allowed for the revival of the Tyrian splendour: a space of time amply sufficient to enable a commercial power to recover all its splendour; particularly when that power in its first overthrow saved all its richest effects, and enjoyed likewise, through the whole of this long time, an uninterrupted peace. The prophecy, however, seems to refer to the capture of New Tyre, by Alexander, who built the causeway, and "smote her power in the sea." (ver. 4.)

9. That the prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus should be delivered at this time, was rather to have been expected. The only power in the world that could have assaulted Jerusalem, and inflicted such disasters upon it, was Persia; but Persia was now a friendly power, and the people would not of course apply the prophecy of Zechariah to Persia. They would refer it to another period; and thus the prediction would answer a twofold purpose. It would be a pledge to the Jews that their city should so far recover as to be again powerful and splendid; and it was a warning to them, and to their children, that the new city should share the fate of the first, if they again rebelled against the God who had brought them back to their native country. The argument of Mede is founded on the supposition that Zechariah, if he wrote these chapters, must necessarily have written them in the first years of his delegation to the prophetic office: but this hypothesis is by no means necessary.

10. Though the prophecies of Jeremiah are undoubtedly "digested in no order," yet they were most probably collected together by the priests of the temple. They were known to Daniel, for he learned from them that the seventy years of their captivity had expired. They were of course known to Ezra, who would not, when he edited the Scriptures, have referred to one prophet the labours of another.

It would be easy still further to extend the argument in favour of the hypothesis that Zechariah was the author of the prophecies in question, from a comparison of the internal evidence, with the period that followed the commission of Ezra, to the time of Christ. From ver. 1—9, in chap. ix. the prophet gives a general outline of the conquests of Damascus, Tyre, and Sidon, effected by Alexander, and the overthrow of the Philistines, the ancient enemies of the church of God, (ver. 9, 10.) He foresees the entrance of the true king of Jerusalem into the city "lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt, the foal of an ass;" (see Mark xi. 7. Matt. xxi. 5. and John xii. 15.) the walls of which the people about him had now begun to rebuild: and (ver. 13) foretells the victories of the Maccabees over the troops of Antiochus, who was of Grecian descent, and further deliverances and successes are promised to those that are converted and believe. The theory here adopted is in some measure warranted by Lightfoot, (p. 145) who supposes that Zechariah continued to prophesy during the intermediate years between the reformation by Ezra, and the commission of Nehemiah.

²⁸ This prediction was literally fulfilled in the person of Christ. The chapter predicts the rejection of the Jews for their rejection of Christ. Lebanon (ver. 1.) is supposed to mean the temple with its cedar buildings, the doors of which, according to Josephus, opened of their own accord before its destruction.

§ 8. Plot of Haman, and its Defeat.

ESTHER III.

1 Haman, advanced by the king, and despised by Mordecai, seeketh revenge upon all the Jews. 7 He casteth lots. 8 He obtaineth by calumny a decree of the king to put the Jews to death.

453. After these things did king Ahasuerus promote Haman the ¹ son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him. And all the ² king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed, and revered Haman: for the king had so commanded concerning him. But Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence. Then the ³ king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgressest thou the king's commandment? Now it ⁴ came to pass, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for he had told them that he was a Jew. And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, ⁵ nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath. And ⁶ he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had shewed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

In the first month, that is, the month Nisan, in the twelfth ⁷ year of king Ahasuerus, they cast Pur, that is, the lot, before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.

And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain ⁸ people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not ^a for the king's profit to suffer them. If it please the king, ⁹ let it be written ^b that they may be destroyed: and I will ^c pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries. And the king took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto ¹⁰ Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' ^d enemy. And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given ¹¹ to thee, the people also, to do with them as it seemeth good to thee. Then were the king's ^e scribes called on the thirteenth ¹² day of the first month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province, according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's 13 ring. And the letters were sent by posts into all the king's provinces³³, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the 14 month Adar, and to take the spoil of them for a prey. The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province was published unto all people, that they should be 15 ready against that day. The post went out, being hastened by the king's commandment, and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman sat down to drink; but the city Shushan was perplexed.

ESTHER IV.

1 The great mourning of Mordecai and the Jews. 4 Esther, understanding it, sendeth to Mordecai, who sheweth the cause, and adviseth her to undertake the suit. 10 She excusing herself is threatened by Mordecai. 15 She appointing a fast undertaketh the suit.

1 When Mordecai perceived all that was done, Mordecai rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and a bitter cry; 2 and came even before the king's gate: for none might enter 3 into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth. And in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and ^f many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 So Esther's maids and her ^g chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth 5 from him: but he received it not. Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, ^h whom he had appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to 6 Mordecai, to know what it was, and why it was. So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which was 7 before the king's gate. And Mordecai told him of all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of the money that Haman

³³ The extent of the danger to which the Jews were exposed by the malice of Haman may be better understood from considering that the plot was laid against the whole nation, who were all to be found at this time within the boundaries of the Persian empire. Judea itself was only one of the provinces of Persia. In the subsequent persecutions of the Jews, on being harassed by one monarch or government, they were always able to take refuge in the territories of another: but at this period of their history it was impossible for them to escape from the universal power of the Persians (compare chap. iii. 13, 14; vii. 9); if the design of Haman, therefore, had not been frustrated by the overruling providence of God, no human means could have saved the visible Church from destruction.

A.C. 453. had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them. Also he gave him the copy of the writing of 8 the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to shew it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and to charge her that she should go in unto the king, to make supplication unto him, and to make request before him for her people. And 9 Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him command-10 ment unto Mordecai; All the king's servants, and the people of 11 the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, there is one law of his to put him to death, except such to whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days. And they told to Mordecai Esther's 12 words. Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, Think 13 not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews. For if thou altogether holdest thy 14 peace at this time, then shall there ⁱ enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?

ⁱ Heb. re-pi-ration.

Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer, Go, 15, 16 ^k gather together all the Jews that are ^k present in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and if ^l I perish, I perish. So Mordecai ^l went his way, and did ac-17 cording to all that Esther had commanded him.

^l Esther, adventuring on the king's favour, obtaineth the grace of the golden sceptre, and inviteth the king and Haman to a banquet. 6 She, being encouraged by the king in her suit, inviteth them to another banquet the next day. 9 Haman, proud of his advancement, repineth at the contempt of Mordecai. 14 By the counsel of Zeresh he buildeth for him a pair of gallows.

Now it came to pass on the third day, that Esther put on her 1 royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house. And it was so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing 2 in the court, that she obtained favour in his sight: and the king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre. Then said the king unto her, What wilt thou, queen 3 Esther? and what is thy request? it shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom. And Esther answered, If it seem 4 good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him. Then the king 5 said, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared. A.C. 453.

6 And the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

7 Then answered Esther, and said, My petition and my request is; If I have found favour in the sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and ^m to perform my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do to morrow as the king hath said. ^m Heb. to do.

9 Then went Haman forth that day joyful and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that he stood not up, nor moved for him, he was full of indignation against Mordecai. Nevertheless Haman refrained himself: and when he came home, he sent and ⁿ called for his friends, ⁿ Heb. caused to come. and Zeresh his wife. And Haman told them of the glory of his riches, and the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king. Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and to morrow am I invited unto her also with the king. Yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

14 Then said Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto him, Let a ^o gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to morrow speak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleased Haman; and he caused the gallows to be made. ^o Heb. tree.

ESTHER IX.

¹ The Jews (the rulers, for fear of Mordecai, helping them) slay their enemies, with the ten sons of Haman. ¹² Ahasuerus, at the request of Esther, granteth another day of slaughter, and Haman's sons to be hanged. ²⁰ The two days of Purim are made festival.

452. Now in the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar, on the 1 thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them, (though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them;) the Jews gathered themselves together in their cities throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as sought their hurt: and no man could withstand them; for the fear of them fell upon all people. And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers of the king, helped the Jews; because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them. For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai waxed greater and greater. Thus the Jews smote all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did what they would unto those that hated them. And in Shushan the palace the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men. And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha, and Poratha, and Adalgia, and Aridatha, and Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha, the ten sons of Haman the son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews, slew they; but on the spoil laid they not their hand. On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace was brought before the king.

And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? now what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: or what is thy request further? and it shall be done. Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to morrow also according unto this day's decree, and let Haman's ten sons be hanged upon the gallows. And the king commanded it so to be done: and the decree was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons. For the Jews that were in Shushan gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan; but on the prey they laid not their hand. But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces gathered themselves together, and stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand, but they laid not their hands on the prey, on the thirteenth day of the month Adar; and on the fourteenth day of the same rested they, and made it a day of feasting and gladness. But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness. Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwalled towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day of gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

And Mordecai wrote these things, and sent letters unto all 20
 the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far, to stablish this among them, that they should 21 keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly, as the days wherein the Jews 22 rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day: that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor. And 23 the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them; because Haman the son of Hammeda- 24 tha, the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast Pur, that is, the lot, to ^y consume them, and to destroy them; but ^z when Esther 25 came before the king, he commanded by letters that his wicked device, which he devised against the Jews, should return upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows. Wherefore they called these days Purim after the 26 name of ^a Pur. Therefore all the words of this letter, and of that which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them, the Jews ordained, and took upon them, 27 and upon their seed, and upon all such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not ^b fail, that they would keep these two days according to their writing, and according to their appointed time every year; and that these days should be re- 28 membered and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that these days of Purim should not ^c fail from among the Jews, nor the memorial of them ^d perish from their seed. Then Esther the queen, the daugh- 29 ter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with ^e all authority, to confirm this second letter of Purim. And he sent the letters 30 unto all the Jews, to the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, with words of peace and truth, to confirm these days of Purim in their times appointed, accord- 31
 ing as Mordecai the Jew and Esther the queen had enjoined them, and as they had decreed ^f for themselves and for their seed, the matters of the fastings and their cry. And the de- 32 cree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim; and it was written in the book.

PART III.

From the Reformation, by Nehemiah, to the closing of the Canon.

§ 1. *First Commission of Nehemiah*³⁴.

NEHEMIAH I.

1 Nehemiah, understanding by Hanani the misery of Jerusalem, mourneth, fasteth, and prayeth. 5 His prayer.

1 The words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass in the month Chisleu, in the twentieth year, as I was 445.

³⁴ The commission of Ezra continued till the end of the year 446: at which time he was superseded by Nehemiah, who was high in office at the court of Persia, and was sent to Jerusalem with greater powers than were possessed by Ezra. These two great reformers, however, were not divided by any inferior jealousy; they co-operated zealously together, and completely re-established the Jewish polity, both in church and state.

The book of Nehemiah is in some versions termed the second book of Ezra or Esdras, from an opinion which anciently obtained, and was adopted by Athanasius, Epiphanius, Chrysostom, and other eminent Fathers of the church, that Ezra was the author of this book. In the modern Hebrew Bibles it has the name of Nehemiah prefixed to it, which is also retained in our English Bibles.

That Nehemiah, who was cup-bearer to Artaxerxes Longimanus, was the author of this book, there cannot be any reasonable doubt; the whole of it being written in his name, and, what is very unusual, when compared with the preceding sacred historians, in the first person. The insertion of the greater part of the register in ch. xii. 1—26 (which is thought to militate against this generally received opinion), may be accounted for by supposing it either to have been added by some subsequent author, or perhaps by the authority of the great synagogue: for it seems to be unconnected with the narrative of Nehemiah, and ascribes to him a degree of longevity which appears scarcely credible.

Nehemiah was the son of Hachaliah, and, according to some writers, was of the tribe of Levi; but, in the opinion of others, of the royal house of Judah: as the office he held in the Persian court (that of cup-bearer) was a post of great honour and influence, it is certain that he was a man of illustrious family; and of his integrity, prudence, and piety, the whole of this book presents abundant evidence. He arrived at Jerusalem thirteen years after Ezra, with the rank of governor of the province, and vested with full power and authority to encourage the rebuilding of the walls of that city, and to promote the welfare of his countrymen in every possible way.

Having governed Judea for twelve years (Neh. xiii. 6), Nehemiah returned to his royal patron (2—6), and after a short absence, he obtained permission to go back again to his country, where he is supposed to have spent the remainder of his life.

Nehemiah was probably the last governor appointed by the kings of Persia: after his time Judea was governed by the high priests under the Persian, Macedo-Grecian, Asmonean, and Roman dynasties, till the destruction of their city and temple.

It is supposed to have been chiefly owing to the influence of Esther, that Ezra and Nehemiah were permitted by Artaxerxes Longimanus to rebuild Jerusalem, and restore the ecclesiastical and civil polity of the Jews. Dr. Hales, however, is of opinion, that the conduct of Artaxerxes respecting the Jews may be accounted for upon sound political principles, and not merely from regard to the solicitations of his cup-bearer (Nehemiah), or the influence of his queen.

Four years before Nehemiah rebuilt the city, Artaxerxes suffered the celebrated defeat of his forces by Cimon, the Athenian general, which compelled him to make an inglorious peace, upon the humiliating conditions that the Persians should be excluded from the whole line of sea-coast within three days journey, and precluded from keeping a garrison in any of the maritime towns. On account of this treaty it became a matter of state necessity to conciliate the Jews, and attach them to the Persian interest by further privileges; that the Persians might have the benefit of the fortified town of Jerusalem, which was within three days journey of the sea, and at the same time opened to them a most important pass for communication between Persia and Egypt.—Vide Hales' Anal. vol. ii. p. 528.

A.C. 445. in Shushan the palace, that Hanani, one of my brethren, came, 2 he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem. And they said unto me, The remnant 3 that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also ^a is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

10.

And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat 4 down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven, and said, I beseech thee, ^b O 5 LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him and observe his commandments: let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes 6 open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned. We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and 7 have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.
 Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst 8 thy servant Moses, saying, ^c If ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations: but if ye turn unto me, and keep 9 my commandments, and do them; ^d though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there. Now these are 10 thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand. O LORD, I beseech 11 thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name: and to prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For I was the king's cupbearer.

NEHEMIAH II. VER. 1—11.

And it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth 1 year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence. Wherefore the king said 2 unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid, and said unto the king, Let the king live for 3 ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire? Then the king said unto me, 4 For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven. And I said unto the king, If it please the king, and 5 if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou would-est send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, A.C. 445.

 6 that I may build it. And the king said unto me, (the ^e queen e Heb. wife. also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me; 7 and I set him a time. Moreover I said unto the king, If it please the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah; 8 and a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the house, and for the wall of the city, and for the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.
 9 Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. Now the king had sent captains 10 of the army and horsemen with me. When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek 11 the welfare of the children of Israel. So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

§ 2. The Walls of Jerusalem Rebuilt.

NEHEMIAH II. VER. 12, TO THE END.

12 And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem; neither was there any beast with me, save the 13 beast that I rode upon. And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon well, and to the dung port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken 14 down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire. Then I went on to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool:
 but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.
 15 Then went I up in the night by the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, 16 and so returned. And the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.
 17 Then said I unto them, Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire: come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that 18 we be no more a reproach. Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good 19 work. But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the

A.C. 445. servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? will ye rebel against the king? Then answered I them, and said unto them, The God ²⁰ of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but ye have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in Jerusalem.

NEHEMIAH III.

The names and order of them that builded the wall.

Then Eliashib the high priest rose up with his brethren the 1 priests, and they builded the sheep gate; they sanctified it, and set up the doors of it; even unto the tower of Meah, they sanctified it, unto the tower of ^a Hananeel. And ^b next unto 2 him builded the men of Jericho. And next to them builded Zaccur the son of Imri. But the fish gate did the sons of 3 Hassenaah build, who also laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. And next unto them repaired Meremoth the son of Urijah, the 4 son of Koz. And next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel. And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana. And next unto them 5 the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles put not their necks to the work of their LORD. Moreover the old gate repaired 6 Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. And next unto 7 them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the throne of the governor on this side the river. Next unto him repaired 8 Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the goldsmiths. Next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of one of the apothecaries, and they ^c fortified Jerusalem unto the broad wall. And next unto 9 them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem. And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the 10 son of Harumaph, even over against his house. And next unto him repaired Hattush the son of Hashabniah. Mal- 11 chijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of Pahathmoab, repaired the ^d other piece, and the tower of the furnaces. And next unto him repaired Shallum the son of 12 Halohesh, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem, he and his daughters. The valley gate repaired Hanum, and the inhabi- 13 tants of Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the dung gate. But the dung gate repaired 14 Malchiah the son of Rechab, the ruler of part of Beth-haccerem;

NEHEMIAH IV.

1 While the enemies scoff, Nehemiah prayeth and continueth the work. 7 Understanding the wrath and secrets of the enemy, he setteth a watch. 13 He armeth the labourers, 19 and giveth military precepts.

But it came to pass, that when Sanballat heard that we 1 builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation; and mocked the Jews. And he spake before his brethren and the 2 army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble Jews? will they n Heb. leave fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make to themselves. an end in a day? will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned? Now Tobiah the Ammonite 3 was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox 3 go up, he shall even break down their stone wall. Hear, O 4 o Heb. de- our God; for we are o despised: and turn their reproach upon spite. their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity: and cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be 5 blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders. So built we the wall; and all the 6 wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.

But it came to pass, that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and 7
 the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem p were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then were they very wroth, and 8 conspired all of them together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and q to hinder it. Nevertheless we made our prayer 9 unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them. And Judah said, The strength of the bearers 10 of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall. And our adversaries said, They 11 shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease. And it 12 came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ten times, r From all places whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you.

Therefore set I s in the lower places behind the wall, and on 13 the higher places, I even set the people after their families with their swords, their spears, and their bows. And I looked, and 14 rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the LORD, which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.
 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known 15 unto us, and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work. And 16 it came to pass from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah. They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon. For the builders, every one had his sword girded ^t by his side, and so builded. And he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another. In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: our God shall fight for us. So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared. Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day. So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, ^u saving that every one put them off for washing.

NEHEMIAH V.

1 The Jews complain of their debt, mortgage, and bondage. 6 Nehemiah rebuketh the usurers, and causeth them to make a covenant of restitution. 14 He forbeareth his own allowance, and keepeth hospitality.

1 And there was a great cry of the people and of their wives against their brethren the Jews. For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live. Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth. There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards. Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.

6 And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words. Then ^x I consulted with myself, and I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them. And I said unto them, We after our ability have ^y redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then held they their peace, and found nothing the heathen our enemies? I likewise, and my brethren, and 10 my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury. Restore, I pray you, to them, even 11 this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them. Then said they, 12

 We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise.
 Also I shook my lap, and said, So God shake out every man 13 from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out and ^zemptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the LORD. And the people did according to this promise.

 unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor. But the former governors that had been before 15 me were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beside forty shekels of silver; yea, even their servants bare rule over the people: but so did not I, because of the fear of God. Yea, also I continued in the work of this 16 wall, neither bought we any land: and all my servants were gathered thither unto the work. Moreover there were at my 17 table an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beside those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.
 Now that which was prepared for me daily was one ox and six 18 choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this required not I the bread of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people. ^a Think upon me, my God, for good, ac- 19
ording to all that I have done for this people.

Now it came to pass, when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and 1 ^b Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein; (though at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates;) that Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, 2 Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief. And I 3

- sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I 4 leave it, and come down to you? Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same man-
 5 ner. Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner
 6 the fifth time with an open letter in his hand; wherein was written, It is reported among the heathen, and ^c Gashmu saith ^c Or, Gashem,

 7 buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words. And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach
 8 of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these 9 words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together. Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such 10 things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest them out of thine own heart. For they all made us afraid, saying, Their hands 11 shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands. Afterward I came 12 unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up; and he said, Let us meet 13 together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee;
 14 yea, in the night will they come to slay thee. And I said, Should such a man as I flee? and who is there, that, being as I 15 am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in.
 16 And, lo, I perceived that God had not sent him; but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and San-17 ballat had hired him. Therefore was he hired, that I should be afraid, and do so, and sin, and that they might have matter for 18 an evil report, that they might reproach me. My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat according to these their works, 19 and on the prophetess Noadiah, and the rest of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.
 20 So the wall was finished in the twenty and fifth day of the 21 month Elul, in fifty and two days. And it came to pass, that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that 22 were about us saw these things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: for they perceived that this work was wrought
 23 of our God.
 24 Moreover in those days the nobles of Judah ^d sent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them. ^d Heb. multiplied their letters passing to Tobiah.
 25 For there were many in Judah sworn unto him, because he was the son in law of Shechaniah the son of Arah; and his son 26 Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam the son of Berechiah. Also they reported his good deeds before me, and 27 uttered my ^e words to him. And Tobiah sent letters to put me ^e Or, matters.

§ 3. Dedication of the Wall of Jerusalem.

NEHEMIAH XII. VER. 27—43.

A.C. 445. ²⁷ And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps. And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both 28 out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi; also from the house of Gilgal, and out 29 of the fields of Geba and Azmaveth: for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem. And the priests and the 30 Levites purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall. Then I brought up the princes of Judah 31 upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the dung gate: and after them went Hoshaiah, and half 32 of the princes of Judah, and Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam, 33 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah, and 34, 35 *certain of the priests' sons with trumpets; namely, Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph: and his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, 36 Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the musical instruments of David the man of God, and Ezra the scribe before them. And at the fountain gate, which was over against them, 37 they went up by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water gate eastward. And the other company of them that gave 38 thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond the tower of the furnaces even unto the broad wall; and from above the gate of 39 Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep gate: and they stood still in the prison gate. So stood 40 the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me: and the priests; 41 Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets; and Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, 42 and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers ^a sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer. Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and 43 rejoiced: for God had made them rejoice with great joy: the* ³⁵ This part of the chapter is inserted here on the united authorities of Dean Prideaux and Dr. A. Clarke, who observe, that it is most probable the wall was dedicated on its completion. § 4. Nehemiah returns to Persia.

NEHEMIAH VII. VER. 1—4³⁶.

1 Now it came to pass, when the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and the porters and the singers and the Levites were appointed, that I gave my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem: for he was a faithful man, and feared God above many. And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house. Now the city was ^a large and great: but the people were few therein, and the houses were not builded. ^a Heb. broad in spaces.

§ 5. Second Commission of Nehemiah, and Reformation effected by him.

NEHEMIAH VII. VER. 5, TO THE END.

5 And my God put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein, ^a These are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city; who came with Zerubbabel, Jeshua, Nehemiah, ^b Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, Mispereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah. The number, I say, of the men of the people of Israel was this; the children of Parosh, two thousand an hundred seventy and two. The children of Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two. The children of Arah, six hundred fifty and two. The children of Pahathmoab, of the children of Jeshua and Joab, two thousand eight hundred and eighteen. The children of Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four. The children of Zattu, eight 444 to 433.

³⁶ This passage is inserted here on the authority of Prideaux, who observes, that Nehemiah, having executed the chief object of his commission, appointed Hanani and Hananiah governors of Jerusalem, and returned himself, according to a previous arrangement on his leaving Babylon, to the king in Persia. This nomination of governors, as soon as the walls were built, evidently implies that Nehemiah delegated his authority to others. The building of the wall being all that he had requested; that work effected, it was necessary that another commission should be obtained, before he could proceed to those duties which were necessary for the settling the affairs of the country. For this purpose, therefore, it is supposed that Nehemiah went to Babylon, presented himself before the king, related to him the state of Judea, and what was further necessary to its regulation and establishment; and immediately obtained permission to return again to that country. The shortness of his absence seems to be the reason why no notice is taken of it in the sacred text.—Prideaux, vol. ii. p. 527.

³⁷ By virtue of the commission he had from the king, and the powers granted him thereby, Ezra had now reformed the whole state of the Jewish church, according to the law of Moses, in which he was excellently learned, and settled it upon that foundation upon which it afterwards stood to the time of our Saviour. The two chief things which he had to do, were to restore the observance of the Jewish law, according to the ancient approved usages which had been in practice before the captivity, under the direction of the prophets; and to collect together and set forth a correct edition of the Holy Scriptures: in the performance of both which, the Jews tell us, he had the assistance of what they call the Great Synagogue, a convention consisting of 120 men, who lived under the presidency of Ezra, and assisted him in both these works. The truth of this matter seems to have been, that these 120 men were principally elders, who lived in a continued succession from the first return of the Jews, after the Babylonish captivity, to the death of Simon the Just, and laboured in their several times, in the carrying on of the two great works above mentioned, till both were fully completed in the time of the said Simon the Just (who was made high priest of the Jews in the twenty-fifth year after the death of Alexander the Great,) and Ezra had the assistance of such of them as lived in his time. But the whole conduct of the work, and the glory of accomplishing it, is, by the Jews, chiefly attributed to him, under whose presidency, they tell us, it was done. And therefore they look on him as another Moses; for the law, they say, was given by Moses; but it was revived and restored by Ezra, after it had been in a manner extinguished and lost in the Babylonish captivity. And indeed, by virtue of that ample commission which he had from king Artaxerxes, he had an opportunity of doing more than any other of his nation; and he executed all the powers entrusted to him to the utmost, for the re-settling both of the ecclesiastical and political state of the Jews, in the best posture they were then capable of; and from hence his name is in so high esteem and veneration among the Jews, that it is a common saying among their writers, that if the law had not been given by Moses, Ezra was worthy by whom it should have been given.

But the great work of Ezra was his collecting together, and setting forth a correct edition of the Holy Scriptures, which he laboured much in, and went a great way in the perfecting of it. In the time of Josiah, through the impiety of the two preceding reigns of Manasseh and Ammon, the book of the law was so destroyed and lost, that besides that copy of it which Hilkiah found in the temple, (2 Kings xxii. 8. 2 Chron. xxxiv. 14.) there was then none other to be had; for the surprise which Hilkiah is said to be in at the finding of it, and the grief which Josiah expressed at the hearing of it read, do plainly shew, that neither of them had ever seen it before. And if the king and the high priest, who were both men of eminent piety, were without this part of Holy Scripture, it can scarce be thought that any one else then had it. But so religious a prince as king Josiah could not leave this long unremedied. By his order, copies were forthwith written out from this original; and search being made for all the other parts of Holy Scripture, both in the colleges of the sons of the prophets, and all other places where they could be found, care was taken for transcripts to be made out of these also; and thenceforth copies of the whole became multiplied among the people; all those who were desirous of knowing the law of their God either writing them out themselves, or procuring others to do it for them. So that, though within a few years after the holy city and temple were destroyed, and the authentic copy of the law, which was laid up before the Lord, was burned and consumed with them; yet by this time many copies both of the law and the prophets, and all the other sacred writings, were got into private hands, who carried them with them into their captivity. That Daniel had a copy of the Holy Scriptures with him in Babylon, it is certain (Dan. ix. 11. 13.); for he quotes the law, and also makes mention of the prophecies of the prophet Jeremiah, (Dan. ix. 2.); which he could not do, had he never seen them. And in the sixth chapter of Ezra it is said, that on the finishing of the temple, in the sixth year of Darius, the priests and the Levites were settled in their respective functions, according as it is written in the law of Moses. But how could they do this according to the written law, if they had not copies of that law then among them? and this was near sixty years before Ezra came to Jerusalem. And farther, in the eighth chapter of Nehemiah, when the people called for the law of Moses to have it read to them, they did not pray Ezra to get it anew dictated unto him, but that he should bring forth the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel: which plainly shews, that the book was then well known to have been extant, and not to need such a miraculous expedient, as that of a divine revelation, for its restoration; and it would with many very much shock the faith of the whole, should it be held, that it owed its present being to such a revival; it being obvious for sceptical persons in this case to object, that he who should be said thus to revive it, then forged the whole. All that Ezra did in this matter, was to get together as many copies of the sacred writings as he could, and, out of them all, set forth a correct edition; in the performance of which, he took care of these following particulars.

I. He corrected all the errors that had crept into these copies through the negligence or mistakes of transcribers; for, by comparing them one with the other, he ascertained their true reading.

II. He collected together all the books of which the Holy Scriptures did then consist, and disposed them in their proper order, and settled the canon of Scripture for his time. These books he divided into three parts; 1st, the law; 2dly, the prophets; and 3dly, the Cetubim or Hagiographa, i. e. the holy writings; which division our Saviour himself takes notice of, Luke xxiv. 44, where he saith, "These are the words which I spake unto you while I was yet with you, that all things might be fulfilled which are written in the law, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me." For by the psalms, our Saviour means the whole third part called the Hagiographa: for that part beginning with the psalms, it was for that reason then commonly distinguished by that title, as usually with the Jews the particular books are named from the words with which they begin. Thus with these Hebrew words. And Josephus makes mention of this same division. For he saith, in his first book against Apion, "We have only two and twenty books, which are to be believed as of divine authority; of which, five are the books of Moses. From the death of Moses to the reign of Artaxerxes, the son of Xerxes king of Persia, the prophets, who were the successors of Moses, have written in thirteen books. The remaining four books contain hymns to God and documents of life for the use of men." In which division, according to him, the law contains, 1. Genesis, 2. Exodus, 3. Leviticus, 4. Numbers, 5. Deuteronomy: the writings of the prophets, 1. Joshua, 2. Judges, with Ruth, 3. Samuel, 4. Kings, 5. Isaiah, 6. Jeremiah, with his Lamentations, 7. Ezekiel, 8. Daniel, 9. the twelve minor prophets, 10. Job, 11. Ezra, 12. Nehemiah, 13. Esther; and the Hagiographa, 1. the Psalms, 2. the Proverbs, 3. Ecclesiastes, 4. the Song of Solomon; which altogether make twenty-two books. This division was made for the sake of reducing the books to the number of their alphabet, in which are twenty-two letters. But at present the Jews reckon these books to be twenty-four, and dispose of them in this order: 1st. the law, which contains, 1. Genesis, 2. Exodus, 3. Leviticus, 4. Numbers, 5. Deuteronomy; 2dly. the writings of the prophets, which they divide into the former prophets and the latter prophets; the books of the former prophets are, 6. Joshua, 7. Judges, 8. Samuel, 9. Kings; and the books of the latter prophets are, 10. Isaiah, 11. Jeremiah, 12. Ezekiel, and 13. the twelve minor prophets; 3dly. the Hagiographa, which are, 14. the Psalms, 15. the Proverbs, 16. Job, 17. the Song of Solomon, which they call the Song of Songs, 18. Ruth, 19. the Lamentations, 20. Ecclesiastes, 21. Esther, 22. Daniel, 23. Ezra, and 24. the Chronicles. Under the name of Ezra, they comprehend the book of Nehemiah; for the Hebrews and also the Greeks anciently reckoned Ezra and Nehemiah but as one book. But this order hath not been always observed among the Jews; neither is it so now in all places; for there hath been great variety as to this, not only among the Jews, but also among the Christians, as well Greeks as Latins. But no variation herein is of any moment; for in what order soever the books are placed, they are still the word of God, and no change as to this can make any change in that divine authority which is stamped upon them. But all these books were not received into the canon of the Holy Scriptures in Ezra's time: for Malachi, it is supposed, lived after him; and in Nehemiah mention is made of Jaddua as high priest, and of Darius Codomannus as king of Persia, who were at least one hundred years after his time; and in the third chapter of the first book of Chronicles the genealogy of the sons of Zerubbabel is carried down for so many generations, as must necessarily make it reach to the time of Alexander the Great; and therefore this book could not be put into the canon till after his time. It is most likely that the two books of Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther, as well as Malachi, were afterwards added in the time of Simon the Just, and that it was not till then that the Jewish canon of the Holy Scriptures was fully completed. And indeed these last books seem very much to want the exactness and skill of Ezra in their publication, they falling far short of the correctness which is in the other parts of the Hebrew Scriptures.

III. The third thing which Ezra did about the Holy Scriptures, in his edition of them, was, that he added in several places what appeared necessary for the illustrating, connecting, or completing of them; wherein he was assisted by the same Spirit by which they were at first wrote. Of this sort we may reckon the last chapter of Deuteronomy, which, giving an account of the death and burial of Moses, and of the succession of Joshua after him, it could not be written by Moses himself, who undoubtedly was the penman of all the rest of that book. It seems most probable, that it was added by Ezra at this time. And such also may we reckon the several interpolations which occur in many places of the Holy Scriptures. For that there are such interpolations is undeniable; there being many passages through the whole sacred writ which create difficulties that can never be solved without the allowing of them. As, for instance, Gen. xii. 6, it is remarked, on Abraham's coming into the land of Canaan, that the Canaanites were then in the land; which is not likely to have been said till after the time of Moses, when the Canaanites, being extirpated by Joshua, were then no more in the land. And Gen. xxii. 14, we read, "As it is said, to this day, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen." But Mount Moriah (which is the mount there spoken of) was not called the mount of the Lord till the temple was built on it many hundred years after. And this being here spoken of as a proverbial saying that obtained among the Israelites in after ages, the whole style of the text doth manifestly point at a time after Moses, when they were in possession of the land in which this mountain stood. And therefore both these particulars prove the word cited to have been an interpolation. Gen. xxxvi. 31, it is written, "And these are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom, before there reigned any king over the land of Israel." Which could not have been said till after there had been a king in Israel; and therefore they cannot be Moses' words, but must have been interpolated afterwards. Exod. xvi. 35, the words of the text are, "And the children of Israel did eat manna forty years, till they came to a land inhabited; they did eat manna till they came unto the borders of the land of Canaan." But Moses was dead before the manna ceased; and therefore these cannot be his words, but must have been inserted afterwards. Deut. ii. 12, it is said, "The Horims also dwelt in Seir beforetime; but the children of Esau succeeded them, when they had destroyed them before them and dwelt in their stead; as Israel did unto the land of his possession, which the Lord gave unto them." Which could not have been written by Moses, Israel having not till after his death entered into the land of his possession, which the Lord gave unto them. Deut. iii. 11, it is said, "Only Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of giants; behold his bedstead was a bedstead of iron; is it not in Rabbah of the children of Ammon?" The whole style and strain of which text, especially that of the last clause of it, plainly speaks it to have been written a long while after that king was slain; and therefore it could not be written by Moses, who died within five months after. In the same chapter, ver. 14, it is said, "Jair the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob, unto the coasts of Geshuri and Maachathi, and called them after his own name, Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day." The phrase, unto this day, speaks a much greater distance of time after the fact related, than those few months in which Moses survived after that conquest; and therefore what is there written must have been inserted by some other hand than that of Moses, long after his death. And in the book of Proverbs, (which was certainly king Solomon's,) in the beginning of the twenty-fifth chapter it is written, "These are the Proverbs of Solomon, which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied out." Which must certainly have been added many ages after Solomon; for Hezekiah was of the twelfth generation in descent from him. Many more instances of such interpolated passages might be given. For throughout the whole Scriptures they have been frequently cast in, by way of parenthesis, where they have appeared necessary for the explaining, connecting, or illustrating the text, or the supplying what was wanting in it. But those already mentioned are sufficient to prove the thing. Of which interpolations undoubtedly Ezra was the author, in all the books which passed his examination; and Simon the Just of all the rest which were added afterwards; for they all seemed to refer to those latter times. But these additions do not detract any thing from the divine authority of the whole, because they were all inserted by the direction of the same Holy Spirit which dictated all the rest. This as to Ezra is without dispute, he being himself one of the divine penmen of the Holy Scriptures; for he was most certainly the writer of that book in the Old Testament which bears his name; and is, upon good grounds, supposed to be author of two more, that is, of the two books of Chronicles, as perchance also he was of the book of Esther. And, if the books written by him be of divine authority, why may not every thing else be so which he hath added to any of the rest; since there is all reason for us to suppose that he was as much directed by the Holy Spirit of God in the one as he was in the other? The great importance of the work proves the thing: for as it was necessary for the church of God that this work should be done, so also was it necessary for the work, that the person called thereto should be thus assisted in the completing of it.

those that could understand ; and the ears of all the people were A.C. 444 to 433.
 4 attentive unto the book of the law. And Ezra the scribe stood upon a ^c pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose ; and beside him stood Mattathiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiyah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand ; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and
 5 Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam. And Ezra opened the book in the ^d sight of all the people ; (for he was above all the people ;) and when he opened it, all the 6 people stood up : and Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God. And all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands : and they bowed their heads, and worshipped the 7 LORD with their faces to the ground. Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiyah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law : and the people stood
 8 in their place. So they read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.
 9 And Nehemiah, which is ^e the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said e Or, the governor.

IV. Ezra changed also the old names of several places that were grown obsolete ; putting, instead of them, the new names by which they were at that time called, that the people might the better understand what was written. Thus Gen. xiv. 14, Abraham is said to have pursued the kings who carried Lot away captive as far as Dan ; whereas the name of that place was Laish, till the Danites, long after the death of Moses, possessed themselves of it, and called it Dan, after the name of Dan their father, (Joshua xix. 47. Judges xviii. 29) ; and therefore it could not be called Dan in the original copy of Moses, but that name must have been put in afterwards, instead of that of Laish, on this review. And so in several places in Genesis, and also in Numbers, we find mention made of Hebron ; whereas the name of that city was Kirjath Arba, till Caleb, having obtained the possession of it after the division of the land, called it Hebron, after the name of Hebron, one of his sons ; and therefore that name could not be in the text, till placed there long after the time of Moses, by way of exchange for that of Kirjath Arba, which, it is not to be doubted, was done at the time of this review. And many other like examples of this may be given, whereby it appears, that the study of those who governed the church of God in those times was to render the Scripture as plain and intelligible to the people as they could, and not to hide and conceal any of it from them.

V. Ezra wrote out the whole in the Chaldee character. For that having now grown wholly into use among the people after the Babylonish captivity, he changed the old Hebrew character for it, since which time the Hebrew has been retained only by the Samaritans ; among whom it is preserved even to this day.

But though Ezra's government over all Judah and Jerusalem expired with the year when Nehemiah arrived from Persia, yet his labour to serve the church of God did not here end ; for still he went on as a preacher of righteousness, and a skilful scribe of the law of God, to perfect the reformation which he had begun, both in preparing for the people correct editions of the Scriptures, and also in bringing all things in Church and State to be conformed to the rules thereof. And this he continued to do as long as he lived ; and herein he was thoroughly assisted and supported by the governor ; who, coming to Jerusalem with the same intention and the same zeal for promoting of the honour of God and the welfare of his people in Judah and Jerusalem as Ezra did, he struck in heartily with him in the work ; so that Ezra went on still to do the same things by the authority of the new governor which he before did by his own. And by their thus joining together in the same holy undertaking, and their mutual assisting each other therein, it exceedingly prospered in their hands ; till at length, notwithstanding all manner of oppositions, both from within and from without, it was brought to full perfection forty-nine years after it had been begun by Ezra. Whether Ezra lived so long or not is uncertain ; but what he did not live to do was completed by the piety and zeal of his successor, Nehemiah.—Prideaux's Connection.

unto all the people, This day is holy unto the LORD your God; mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law. Then he said unto them, Go 10 your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto our LORD: neither be ye sorry; for the joy of the LORD is your strength. So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, 11 Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved. And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to 12 send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

And on the second day were gathered together the chief of 13 the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even ^f to understand the words of the law. And they found written in the law which the LORD had com- 14 manded ^g by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in ^h booths in the feast of the seventh month: and that they should 15 publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive branches, and pine branches, and myrtle branches, and palm branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

So the people went forth, and brought them, and made them- 16 selves booths, every one upon the roof of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim. And all the congregation of them that were come 17 again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths: for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so. And there was very great gladness. Also day by day, from the first day unto 18 the last day, he read in the book of the law of God. And they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was ¹ a solemn assembly, according unto the manner.

³⁶ Psalms the first and the hundred and nineteenth are placed here as having most probably been written, about this time, by Ezra, on his completion of the Bible. Calmet, Horne, and Gray, unite in referring the first Psalm either to David or Ezra; and it is generally supposed to have been composed by the latter, as a preface to the book of Psalms, when he collected them into one volume. The contents of this Psalm are peculiarly applicable to this period of the Jewish history, when, after an elapse of so many years, the Scriptures were again restored to the Jews in a more complete form than any they had previously received.

The hundred and nineteenth Psalm is placed in this section from the internal evidence that it was written by Ezra rather than by David. It begins in the same manner as the first Psalm, and it is written on the same subject. It seems to have been drawn up principally with the view of impressing upon the minds of the Jewish youth the importance and necessity of devoting themselves to the study of the whole word of God. Every division of it expresses the excellency of the law, and resolutions to walk therein under every circumstance of life. At the time of editing the Scriptures, and of reading them to the people, it must have been a principal object with Ezra to endeavour to direct the attention of the Jews, particularly of the younger part, to the study of the law and the perpetuation of the benefits he had conferred by his labours on the nation. A manual of this kind, therefore, might have been expected from the great reformer; and as there is no particular period in the life of David on which we can fix which seems to require a similar composition, it is more probable that this Psalm was written by Ezra, rather than by the king of Israel.

It may be observed, also, that the plan upon which it is composed appears to have been of more frequent use in the latter than in the former ages of the Hebrew language. The several divisions of the hundred and nineteenth Psalm are arranged in the order of the Hebrew alphabet, and all the distichs in each division begin with the same letter, after which the whole division is named. There are but twelve of the acrostic or alphabetical poems in the Old Testament; these are Psalms xxv. xxxiv. xxxvii. cxi. cxii. cxix. cxlv. Prov. xxxi. 10—31. Lamentations i. ii. iii. iv. Of all these, only Psalm xxxiv. on the authority of the Hebrew title, and cxlv. on internal evidence, can be certainly attributed to David. If this manner of writing had been usual at that earlier period, succeeding writers, it may be presumed, would have sometimes adopted it. We find, however, no traces of it in Isaiah, Ezekiel, or any of the minor prophets, until the time of Jeremiah, whose Lamentations having been composed on this plan, seems to have first familiarized it to the people, as Psalms xxv. xxxvii. cxi. and cxii. were written after the time of that prophet; and Prov. xxxi. 10—31. having been added to that book at an uncertain period, may, perhaps, have been added by Ezra himself. Of all these alphabetical poems, three only are perfectly so,—Psalms cxi. cxii. and Lament. iii. all of which are to be referred to the latter ages of the purity of the Jewish language. It is more probable, therefore, that the hundred and nineteenth Psalm was written at a later, than at an earlier period of the Jewish Church, that is, that it was written by Ezra rather than by David; and, if written by Ezra, that it was composed about the time when, by editing the Scriptures, he wished to direct the attention of the younger people to their constant perusal and study.

The number of Psalms which are throughout more eminently and directly prophetic of the Messiah is indeed comparatively small: but the passages of particular Psalms which are predictive of him in various ways are very numerous, no part of the Old Testament being cited in the New so frequently as this book. That those Psalms which were composed by David himself were prophetic, we have David's own authority; "which," Bishop Horsley remarks, "may be allowed to overpower a host of modern expositors. For thus king David, at the close of his life, describes himself and his sacred songs: 'David the son of Jesse said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet Psalmist of Israel, said, the Spirit of Jehovah spake by me, and his word was in my tongue' (2 Sam. xxiii. 1, 2.) It was the word, therefore, of Jehovah's Spirit which was uttered by David's tongue. But, it should seem, the Spirit of Jehovah would not be wanting to enable a mere man to make complaint of his own enemies, to describe his own sufferings just as he felt them, and his own escapes just as they happened. But the Spirit of Jehovah described, by David's utterance, what was known to that Spirit only, and that Spirit only could describe. So that, if David be allowed to have had any knowledge of the true subjects of his own compositions, it was nothing in his own life, but something put into his mind by the Holy Spirit of God; and the misapplication of the Psalms to the literal David has done more mischief than the misapplication of any other parts of the Scriptures among those who profess the belief of the Christian religion."

The Psalms present every possible variety of Hebrew poetry. They may all, indeed, be termed poems of the lyric kind; that is, adapted to music, but with great variety in the style of composition. Thus some are simply odes, giving a narrative of facts, either of public history or of private life, in beautiful and figurative language. Others, again, are ethic or didactic, "delivering grave maxims of life, or the precepts of religion, in solemn, but for the most part simple strains." To this class we may refer the hundred and nineteenth, and the other alphabetical psalms, which are so called because the initial letters of each line or stanza followed the order of the alphabet. Nearly one-seventh part of the Psalms are elegiac, or pathetic compositions on mournful subjects. Some are enigmatic, delivering the doctrines of religion in enigmas, sentences contrived to strike the imagination forcibly, and yet easy to be understood; while a few may be referred to the class of idyls, or short pastoral poems. But the greater part, according to Bishop Horsley, are a sort of dramatic ode, consisting of dialogues between certain persons sustaining certain characters. "In these dialogue-psalms the persons are frequently the Psalmist himself, or the chorus of priests and Levites, or the leader of the Levitical band, opening the ode with a poem declarative of the subject, and very often closing the whole with a solemn admonition drawn from what the other persons say. The other persons are, Jehovah, sometimes as one, sometimes as another of the three persons; Christ in his incarnate state, sometimes before, sometimes after his resurrection; the human soul of Christ, as distinguished from the divine essence. Christ, in his incarnate state, is personated sometimes as a priest, sometimes as a king, sometimes as a conqueror; and, in those Psalms in which he is introduced as a conqueror, the resemblance is very remarkable between the conqueror in the book of Psalms, and the warrior on the white horse in the book of Revelation, who goes forth with a crown on his head and a bow in his hand, conquering and to conquer. And the conquest in the Psalms is followed, like the conquest in the Revelation, by the marriage of the conqueror. These are circumstances of similitude, which, to any one versed in the prophetic style, prove beyond a doubt that the mystical conqueror is the same personage in both."

In praise of the Psalms all the fathers of the church are unanimously eloquent. Athanasius styles them an epitome of the whole Scriptures; Basil, a compendium of all theology; Luther, a little Bible, and the summary of the Old Testament; and Melancthon, the most elegant writing in the whole world. How highly the Psalter was valued subsequently to the Reformation, we may easily conceive by the very numerous editions of it which were executed in the infancy of printing, and by the number of commentators who have undertaken to illustrate its sacred pages. Carpzov, who wrote a century ago, enumerates upwards of one hundred and sixty; and, of the subsequent modern expositors of this book, it would perhaps be difficult to procure a correct account. "The Psalms," as Bishop Horne, their best interpreter in our language, has remarked, with equal piety and beauty, "are an epitome of the Bible, adapted to the purposes of devotion. They treat occasionally of the creation and formation of the world; the dispensations of Providence, and the economy of grace; the transactions of the patriarchs; the exodus of the children of Israel; their journey through the wilderness, and settlement in Canaan; their law, priesthood, and ritual; the exploits of their great men, wrought through faith; their sins and captivities; their repentances and restorations; the sufferings and victories of David; the peaceful and happy reign of Solomon; the advent of Messiah, with its effects and consequences; his incarnation, birth, life, passion, death, resurrection, ascension, kingdom, and priesthood; the effusion of the Spirit; the conversion of the nations; the rejection of the Jews; the establishment, increase, and perpetuity of the Christian church; the end of the world; the general judgment; the condemnation of the wicked, and the final triumph of the righteous with their Lord and King. These are the subjects here presented to our meditations. We are instructed how to conceive of them aright, and to express the different affections, which, when so conceived of, they must excite in our minds. They are, for this purpose, adorned with the figures, and set off with all the graces of poetry; and poetry itself is designed yet farther to be recommended by the charms of music, thus consecrated to the service of God; that so delight may prepare the way for improvement, and pleasure become the handmaid of wisdom, while every turbulent passion is calmed by sacred melody, and the evil spirit is still dispossessed by the harp of the son of Jesse. This little volume, like the paradise of Eden, affords us in perfection, though in miniature, every thing that groweth elsewhere, "every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food;" and, above all, what was there lost, but is here restored—the tree of life in the midst of the garden. That which we read, as matter of speculation, in the other Scriptures, is reduced to practice when we recite it in the Psalms: in those repentance and faith are described, but in these they are acted; by a perusal of the former we learn how others served God, but, by using the latter, we serve him ourselves. "What is there necessary for a man to know," says the pious and judicious Hooker, "which the Psalms are not able to teach? They are to beginners an easy and familiar introduction, a mighty augmentation of all virtue and knowledge in such as are entered before, a strong confirmation to the most perfect among others. Heroical magnanimity, exquisite justice, grave moderation, exact wisdom, repentance unfeigned, unwearied patience, the mysteries of God, the sufferings of Christ, the terrors of wrath, the comforts of grace, the works of Providence over this world, and the promised joys of that world which is to come, all good necessarily to be either known, or done, or had, this one celestial fountain yieldeth. Let there be any grief or disease incident unto the soul of man, any wound or sickness named, for which there is not, in this treasure-house, a present comfortable remedy at all times ready to be found."

Many of the Psalms which bear the royal prophet's name were composed on occasion of remarkable circumstances in his life, his dangers, his afflictions, his deliverances. "But of those which relate to the public history of the natural Israel, there are few in which the fortunes of the mystical Israel are not adumbrated; and of those which allude to the life of David, there are none in waste for the dragons of the wilderness.

 4 Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will phet; because the title of Malach Jehovah, or angel of the Lord, was often applied to the prophets. (Compare Haggai i. 13. with Malachi iii. 1.)

The Septuagint translators have rendered Malachi his angel, instead of my angel, as the original imports; and several of the fathers have quoted Malachi under the name of the angel of the Lord. Calmet, after Jerome and some other ancient writers, thinks that Malachi was the same person as Ezra, who wrote the canonical book that passes under his name, and was governor of the Jews after their return from the captivity. As he revised the Holy Scriptures, and collected the canon of the Old Testament, and performed various other important services to the Jewish church, Ezra has been considered, both by ancient Jewish, and also by the early Christian writers, as a very extraordinary person sent from God, and therefore they thought him very appropriately denominated Malach; but for these opinions there is no foundation whatever.

It is certain that Malachi was a distinct person from Ezra, and (as Rosenmüller observes) the whole argument of his book proves that he flourished after the return from the captivity. He prophesied while Nehemiah was governor of Judea, more particularly after his second coming from the Persian court; and appears to have contributed the weight of his exhortations to the restoration of the Jewish polity, and the final reform established by that pious and excellent governor. Archbishop Newcome supposes Malachi to have flourished about the year 436 before the Christian æra; but Dr. Kennicott places him about the year 420 before Christ, which date is adopted by Dr. Hales, as sufficiently agreeing with the description of Josephus and the varying dates of chronologers.

Although the writings of this prophet are almost wholly in prose, yet they are by no means destitute of force and elegance. He reproves the wickedness of his countrymen with great vehemence; and Bishop Lowth observes that his book is written in a kind of middle style, which seems to indicate that the Hebrew poetry, from the time of the Babylonish captivity, was in a declining state, and, being past its prime and vigour, was then fast verging towards the debility of age.

But as it appears from the consent of all Jewish and Christian antiquity that the light of prophecy expired in Malachi, we suppose that the termination of his ministry coincided with the accomplishment of the first seven weeks of Daniel's prophecy, which was the period allotted for "sealing the vision and prophecy." (Dan. ix. 24.) Malachi therefore must be considered as completing the canon of the Old Testament, about 400 years before the birth of Christ, when the great designs of Providence were completed in the termination of the prophetic ministry; and when a scheme of prophecy was unfolded, which in its entire contexture was to be accommodated to, and to characterise the Messiah. Malachi certainly prophesied some time after Haggai and Zechariah; for in his time the temple was rebuilt, and the worship re-established: (chap. i. 7. 10. 12. and iii. 10.) his ministry therefore must have coincided with, or succeeded that of Nehemiah. He censures the same offences that had excited the indignation of that governor, and which he had not been able entirely to reform. (Compare Malachi ii. 11. with Nehem. xiii. 23—27. and Malachi i. 10. with Neh. xiii. 10, 11.) In the first chapter, from 1 to 6, the Jews are reminded of the special favours God had bestowed upon them; they are then reproved for not shewing due reverence to God; and the priests for their profane and mercenary conduct; their rejection is threatened, the calling of the Gentiles is announced, (ver. 11.) and the divine judgments are denounced against the priests and the people for their disregard of God in their sacrifices (12—14. and chap. ii. 10.), and likewise for their multiplied divorces and intermarriages with idolatrous nations. God being wearied with the impiety of Israel, declares (chap. iii.) that the Lord whom they sought should suddenly come to his temple, preceded by that messenger who, like an harbinger, should prepare his way; that the Lord, when he should appear, should purify the sons of Levi from their unrighteousness, and refine them as metal from the dross (1—4.), (see Isaiah i. 25.) and then "the offering of Judah," the spiritual sacrifice of the heart, should "be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old," and the Lord would quickly exterminate the corruptions and adulteries that prevailed. The prophecy concludes with an earnest exhortation to repentance, and a strict observance of the law.—Dr. Gray's Key in loc.; Horne's Crit. Introduct.

The latter part of ver. 11. Malachi i. relative to the Mincha or bread offering to be generally offered up, was considered in the primitive church as an express prophecy of the Christian sacrifice in the Eucharist, of which the circumstances are there described under the typical rites of the Jewish worship.—Vide Mede's Discourses on the Christian Sacrifice.

But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon came I unto the king, and ^cafter certain days ^dobtained I leave of the king ⁴⁰: and I came to Jerusalem, and understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God. And it grieved me sore: therefore I cast forth all the household stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber. Then I commanded, and they cleansed the chambers: and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, and the meat offering and the frankincense. b Heb. the commandment of the Levites. c Heb. at the end of days. d Or, I earnestly requested.
- 10 And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field. ⁴⁰ It is not possible to ascertain what length of time Nehemiah remained in Persia. Prideaux, to allow a sufficient time for the corruptions that took place during his absence, supposes it at least five years, and Dr. Hales twelve years. But we cannot now determine accurately how long he was absent from his own country, when he returned to it, or how long he survived his return. He at all times displayed the most disinterested zeal in the service of his country; and after having "rebuilt the street and the walls in troublous times," he had the happiness of effecting the civil and religious reformation of his people. The piety of Nehemiah is beautifully illustrated in those devout supplications he offers up to the throne of grace (ver. 14. 22. 31.); while with calm but persevering fidelity and firmness he performs his most important duties, checks every abuse, and brings again every thing in subjection to the ancient law.

2 But unto you that fear my name shall the ^b Sun of righte- ^b Luke i. 78.

⁴¹ The apparent connexion of this verse with the last two of the preceding chapter has induced me to make this division. The description contained in these verses seems to have a primary reference to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, A.D. 70, by which is prefigured the last general judgment of mankind, when the Lord will finally distinguish between the righteous and the wicked; when the mysteries of His providence will be clearly unfolded, and His ways be justified to man. The expression, "Behold the day cometh," is, in its secondary application, equally applicable both to Jews and Christians. We know how truly these predictions have been verified in their primary signification; and we therefore cannot doubt but their further accomplishment will be as literally fulfilled. But amidst all these "terrors of the Lord," the prophet is permitted to give an assurance of approaching salvation to those who trust in God. "The Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings," to give light to those that sit in the shadow of death, and to heal the transgressions of his people. What the sun is to the natural world, Christ is to the spiritual world, "In him we live, move, and have our being." He is, "the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." The promises of temporal deliverance, in ver. 2, and chap. iii. 17, 18, were wonderfully made good in the preservation of the Christians; who, trusting in the providence and promises of God, fled into the mountains, and thereby escaped the general destruction of the Jewish nation.

As the spirit of prophecy was now to cease, the Messiah having been clearly and progressively made known to the Jews by a long succession of prophets, and in prophecies more and more distinct; Malachi at last concludes his mission, by enjoining a strict observance of the law of Moses, till Elijah the messenger of the Lord should appear, to turn the hearts of the disobedient to the wisdom of the just. Thus Malachi (as Dr. Gray observes) sealed up the volume of prophecy, in a description of that personage, with an account of whom the Evangelists begin their Gospel history; who was appointed to prepare the way for the establishment of a new and a better dispensation; and he who terminated the illustrious succession of the prophets, and predicted the coming of the Baptist, received the testimony of our Saviour, who defined the period and extent of prophecy, by declaring (Matt. xi. 13) that "all the prophets prophesied until John."

^a Gen. v. 3. 9.

Adam, ^a Sheth, Enosh, Kenan, Mahalaleel, Jered, Henoch, 1, 2, 3 Methuselah, Lamech, Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. ⁴

⁴² These chapters of Chronicles are placed last in this Arrangement, as they contain many allusions to the events of the captivity, and the later events of the Jewish history. In chap. iii. the genealogy of the family of Zerobabel is carried down to the time of Alexander the Great, or even later; that is, nearly to the period when Simon the Just finally completed, as the last of the great synagogue, the canon of the Old Testament. These genealogical tables, therefore, were written after the time of Ezra, and were probably prefixed by Simon the Just to the book of Chronicles, as an appropriate introduction. The other chapters of Chronicles are inserted in their respective places in the Arrangement.

Lightfoot has endeavoured to insert in the several parts of his Chronicles, various passages from these first chapters: he has however placed them again by themselves towards the conclusion of his work, and confesses that it is almost impossible to harmonize the contents with the rest of Scripture, on account of the manner in which the incidents noticed in these tables are interwoven with the context. I have followed therefore his plan, and after many attempts to insert particular passages in the preceding Arrangement, have referred the whole first nine chapters to the time when they were not improbably prefixed to the remainder of the first book of Chronicles.

The Jews comprise the two books of Chronicles in one book, which they call Dibre Hajamim, that is, The words of Days, probably from the circumstance of their being compiled out of diaries or annals, in which were recorded the various events related in these books. In the Septuagint version they are termed Παραλειπόμενα (paraleipomena), or Things omitted; because many things which were omitted in the former part of the sacred history are here not only supplied, but some narrations also are enlarged, while others are added. The appellation of Chronicles was given to these books by Jerome, because they contain an abstract, in order of time, of the whole of the sacred history, to the time when they were written.

Concerning the author of these books nothing certain is known. Some think they are the works of different authors; but the uniformity of the style, the connexion of the facts, together with the recapitulations and reflections which are often made, prove that they are the work of one and the same person. The Jewish and Christian interpreters in general believe they were the work of Ezra, assisted by the prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi. That Ezra was the author, is, on the whole, the most probable opinion. There are words and terms, both in Chronicles and Ezra, which are similar; and prove that each was written after the captivity, and probably by the same person; as those terms were not in use previously to that time; and some are peculiar to Ezra himself. And רבירות, "rafts" or floats, 2 Chron. ii. 16; widely differing from רבירות, 1 Kings v. 9; which we there translate in the same way. Calmet considers these words as strong evidence that these books were the work of Ezra, and penned after the captivity. It is most certain that the books of Chronicles are not the original records or memorials of the transactions of the sovereigns of Israel and Judah, which are so often referred to in the historical books of the Old Testament. Those ancient registers were much more copious than the books of Chronicles, and have been long lost.

These books, therefore, can only have been compiled from others written at different times, some before, and others after the Babylonish captivity. The ancient Jews took the greatest care to register their civil, military, and ecclesiastical transactions; and the prophets appear to have been employed for this purpose, by the several kings under whose reigns they lived. Samuel, Nathan, and Gad wrote under the reign of David (1 Chron. xxix. 29). Nathan, Ahijah, and Iddo, under Solomon (2 Chron. ix. 29). Shemaiah and Iddo under Rehoboam (2 Chron. xii. 15). Isaiah recorded the transactions of Uzziah and of Hezekiah (2 Chron. xxvi. 22, and 2 Chron. xxxii. 32). Jeremiah wrote the history of Josiah and his descendants, the last kings of Judah; and many more instances might be mentioned. Besides the prophets, we find other persons likewise employed in this office, who were denominated recorders (2 Sam. viii. 16, 2 Kings xviii. 18, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 8.).

The principal object of the author of this book appears to have been to point out from the public records, still preserved, the state of the different families before the captivity; that at their return they might again possess their respective inheritances. He enters particularly into the duties, genealogies, families, and orders of the priests and Levites, that they might more easily assume their proper functions; and that the worship of God might be conducted the same as before, by the ordained and legitimate persons. These books may be considered as an epitome of all the sacred history, but more especially from the origin of the Jewish nation to their return from the first captivity. The first book traces the rise and propagation of the people of Israel from Adam, and afterwards gives a circumstantial account of the reign and transactions of David. In the second book the narrative is continued, and relates the progress and dissolution of the kingdom of Judah, to the very year of the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity: as very little notice is taken of the kings of Israel, it is not improbable that this book was chiefly extracted from the records of the kingdom of Judah. The period of time embraced in the books of Chronicles is about 3468 years: they may be commodiously divided into four parts, viz. 1. The genealogies of those persons through whom the Messiah was to descend, from Adam to the captivity, and to the time of Ezra;—2. The histories of Saul and David;—3. The history of the united kingdoms of Israel and Judah under Solomon; and, 4. The history of the kingdom of Judah after the secession of the ten tribes from Rehoboam to its utter subversion by Nebuchadnezzar.

It will be necessary to remember, that the terms "father," "son," "begat," and "begotten," which so frequently occur in these Hebrew genealogies, do not always denote an immediate son or descendant; but extend to any distant progenitor. Thus, in Gen. xix. 5, Laban is called the son of Nahor, though in fact he was only his grandson; and similar instances are often to be found in the Scriptures. The extensive genealogical tables contained in the book of Chronicles, are a signal testimony to the origin and preservation of the Jewish Church among mankind; and of the fulfilment of the divine promises to Abraham, that his seed should be multiplied as the sand upon the sea-shore (Gen. xxii. 17). They are also of very great importance, as exhibiting "the detail of the sacred line, through which the promise of the Messiah was transmitted:" so that when in the fulness of time this promised Mediator was revealed in the flesh, the church and people of God might infallibly know that this was that very promised seed of the woman, the son of Abraham, and the son of David.—Dr. Adam Clarke, in his preface to Chronicles; and Horne's Crit. Now Benjamin begat ^e Bela his firstborn, Ashbel the second, 1 and Aharah the third, Nohah the fourth, and Rapha the fifth. 2
And the sons of Bela were, ^f Addar, and Gera, and Abihud, 3 and Abishua, and Naaman, and Ahoah, and Gera, and ^g She- 4, 5 phuphan, and Hiram. And these are the sons of Ehud: these 6 are the heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Geba, and they removed them to ^h Manahath: and Naaman, and Abiah, and 7
Gera, he removed them, and begat Uzza, and Ahihud. And 8 Shaharaim begat children in the country of Moab, after he had sent them away; Hushim and Baara were his wives. And he 9 begat of Hodesh his wife, Jobab, and Zibia, and Mesha, and Malcham, and Jeuz, and Shachia, and Mirma. These were his 10 sons, heads of the fathers. And of Hushim he begat Ahitub, 11 and Elpaal. The sons of Elpaal; Eber, and Misham, and 12 Shamed, who built Ono, and Lod, with the towns thereof:
Beriah also, and Shema, who were heads of the fathers of the 13 inhabitants of Aijalon, who drove away the inhabitants of Gath: and Ahio, Shashak, and Jeremoth, and Zebadiah, 14, 15 and Arad, and Ader, and Michael, and Ispah, and Joha, the 16 sons of Beriah; and Zebadiah, and Meshullam, and Hezeki, 17 and Heber, Ishmerai also, and Jezliah, and Jobab, the sons of 18
Elpaal; and Jakim, and Zichri, and Zabdi, and Elienai, and 19, 20
Zilthai, and Eliel, and Adaiah, and Beraiah, and Shimrath, the 21 sons of ⁱ Shimhi; and Ishpan, and Heber, and Eliel, and 22, 23
Abdon, and Zichri, and Hanan, and Hananiah, and Elam, and 24
Antothijah, and Iphedeiah, and Penuel, the sons of Shashak; 25 and Shamsherai, and Shehariah, and Athaliah, and Jaresiah, 26, 27 and Elishah, and Zichri, the sons of Jeroham. These were heads 28 of the fathers, by their generations, chief men. These dwelt in Jerusalem. And at Gibeon dwelt the ^k father of Gibeon; 29 whose ^l wife's name was Maachah: and his firstborn son 30 Abdon, and Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Nadab, and Gedor, 31 and Ahio, and ^m Zacher. And Mikloth begat ⁿ Shimeah. 32
And these also dwelt with their brethren in Jerusalem, over against them.
And ^o Ner begat Kish, and Kish begat Saul, and Saul begat 33
Jonathan, and Malchi-shua, and ^p Abinadab, and ^q Esh-baal.
And the son of Jonathan was ^r Merib-baal: and Merib-baal 34 begat Micah. And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and 35 Melech, and ^s Tarea, and Ahaz. And Ahaz begat ^t Jehoadah; 36 and Jehoadah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza, and Moza begat Binea: ^u Rapha was his son, 37
Elesah his son, Azel his son: and Azel had six sons, whose 38 names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan. All these were the sons of Azel. And 39 the sons of Eshek his brother were, Ulam his firstborn, Jehush A.C. About 40 the second, and Eliphelet the third. And the sons of Ulam were mighty men of valour, archers, and had many sons, and sons' sons, an hundred and fifty. All these are of the sons of Benjamin.

1 CHRONICLES IX.

1 The original of Israel's and Judah's genealogies. 2 The Israelites, 10 the priests, 14 and the Levites, with Nethinims, which dwell in Jerusalem. 27 The charge of certain Levites. 35 The stock of Saul and Jonathan.

- 1 So all Israel were reckoned by genealogies; and, behold, they were written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah, who were carried away to Babylon for their transgression.
- 2 Now the first inhabitants that dwelt in their possessions in their cities were, the Israelites, the priests, Levites, and the
- 3 Nethinims. And in ^x Jerusalem dwelt of the children of Judah, ^x Neh. xi. 1. and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim, and Manasseh; Uthai the son of Ammihud, the son of Omri, the son of Imri, the son of Bani, of the children of
- 5 Pharez the son of Judah. And of the Shilonites; Asaiah the 6 firstborn, and his sons. And of the sons of Zerah: Jeuel, 7 and their brethren, six hundred and ninety. And of the sons of Benjamin; Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Hodaviah, 8 the son of Hasenuah, and Ibneiah the son of Jeroham, and Elah the son of Uzzi, the son of Michri, and Meshullam the 9 son of Shephathiah, the son of Reuel, the son of Ibnijah; and their brethren, according to their generations, nine hundred and fifty and six. All these men were chief of the fathers in the house of their fathers.
- 10 And of the priests; Jedaiah, and Jehoiarib, and Jachin, 11 and ^y Azariah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the ^y Neh. xi. 11, Seratah. son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth the son of Ahitub, the ruler 12 of the house of God; and Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchijah, and Maasiai the son of Adiel, the son of Jahzerah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Meshille-
- 13 mith, the son of Immer; and their brethren, heads of the house of their fathers, a thousand and seven hundred and threescore; ^z very able men for the work of the service of the house of God. ^z Heb. mighty men of valour.
- 14 And of the Levites; Shemaiah the son of Hasshub, the son of 15 Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, of the sons of Merari; and Bakbakkar, Heresh, and Galal, and Mattaniah the son of Micah, 16 the son of Zichri, the son of Asaph; and Obadiah the son of Shemaiah, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun, and Berechiah the son of Asa, the son of Elkanah, that dwelt in the vil-
- 17 lages of the Netophathites. And the porters were, Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren: 18 Shallum was the chief; who hitherto waited in the king's gate eastward: they were porters in the companies of the children 19 of Levi. And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of Ebiasaph,

A.C. About ^{300.} the son of Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the Korahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the ^a gates of the tabernacle: and their fathers, being over the host of the LORD, were keepers of the entry. And Phinehas the son ²⁰ of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past, and the LORD was with him. And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah ²¹ was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were ²² two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages, whom David and Samuel the seer ^b did ordain in their ^c set office. So they and their children ²³ had the oversight of the gates of the house of the LORD, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards. In four quarters were ²⁴ the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south. And their ²⁵ brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after seven days from time to time with them. For these Levites, the ²⁶ two four chief porters, were in their ^d set office, and were over the ^e chambers and treasuries of the house of God.

And they lodged round about the house of God, because ²⁷ the charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them. And certain of them had the ²⁸ charge of the ministering vessels, that they should ^f bring them in and out by tale. Some of them also were appointed to over-²⁹ see the vessels, and all the ^g instruments of the sanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and the oil, and the frankincense, and the spices. And some of the sons of the priests made ^h the oint-³⁰ ment of the spices. And Mattithiah, one of the Levites, who ³¹ was the firstborn of Shallum the Korahite, had the ⁱ set office over the things that were made ^k in the pans. And other ³² of their brethren, of the sons of the Kohathites, were over the ^l shew-bread, to prepare it every sabbath. And these are the ³³ singers, chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers were free: for ^m they were employed in that work day and night. These chief fathers of the Levites were chief ³⁴ throughout their generations; these dwelt at Jerusalem.

And in Gibeon dwelt the father of Gibeon, Jehiel, whose ³⁵ wife's name was ⁿ Maacah: and his first-born son Abdon, then ³⁶ Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, and Gedor, and ³⁷ Ahio, and Zechariah, and Mikloth. And Mikloth begat ³⁸ Shimeam. And they also dwelt with their brethren at Jerusa-³⁹ lem, over against their brethren. ^o And Ner begat Kish; and ³⁹ Kish begat Saul; and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchi-shua, and Abinadab, and Esh-baal. And the son of Jonathan was ⁴⁰ Merib-baal: and Merib-baal begat Micah. And the sons of ⁴¹ Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and Tahrea, ^p and Ahaz. And ⁴² Ahaz begat Jarah; and Jarah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza; and Moza begat Binea; ⁴³ and Rephaiah his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son. And ⁴⁴

Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, A.C. About 300. and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan : these were the sons of Azel.

NEHEMIAH XII⁴³. VER. 10—26.

10 And Jeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat Eliashib, 11 and Eliashib begat Joiada, and Joiada begat Jonathan, and ⁴³ This passage from Nehemiah is inserted here, because in ver. 11. Jaddua is mentioned. Jaddua was the high priest who met Alexander the Great, and whom that conqueror venerated as the servant of God, declaring that a person habited as the high priest had appeared to him in a vision, and had encouraged him to lay aside all his scruples, and advance with his army against the Persians. In verse 22, Darius, the Persian monarch whom Alexander had defeated, is spoken of as having lived some years before ; that is, he is mentioned in the same manner as we should refer to a sovereign who was familiarly known by name, and whose reign had long terminated. It may be presumed, therefore, that this passage was added by Simon the Just, who died about 291 B.C. and before his death finally completed the canon of Scripture. This Simon (Prideaux observes) had, by the uprightness of his actions, and the righteousness of his conversation, both towards God and man, merited the surname of the Just ; so also was he in all respects a very extraordinary person ; which the character given of him in the 50th chapter of Ecclesiasticus sufficiently shews. There many of his good works, for the benefit both of the church and state of the Jews, are mentioned with their due praise. But his chiefest work was the finishing of the canon of the scriptures of the Old Testament. What was done herein by Ezra hath been above related (Period viii. Part iii. sect. v. note.) The books afterwards added were the two books of Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, and Malachi. That these could not be put into the canon by Ezra is plain ; for four of those books are, upon just grounds, supposed to have been written by himself (that is, the two books of Chronicles, and the books of Ezra and Esther), and the book of Nehemiah was written after his time, and so most likely was the book of Malachi also : and therefore a later time must be assigned for their insertion into the canon ; and none is more likely than that of Simon the Just, who is said to have been the last of the men of the great synagogue. For what the Jews call the great synagogue were a number of elders amounting to 120, who, succeeding some after others, in a continued series, from the return of the Jews again into Judea, after the Babylonish captivity, to the time of Simon the Just, laboured in the restoring of the Jewish church and state in that country ; in order whereto, the Holy Scriptures being the rule they were to go by, their chief care and study was to make a true collection of those Scriptures, and publish them accurately to the people. Ezra, and the men of the great synagogue that lived in his time, completed this work as far as they could. And as to what remained farther to be done in it, where can we better place the performing of it, and the ending and finishing of the whole, than in the time of Simon the Just, who was the last of them ? And that especially, since there are some particulars in those books which seem necessarily to refer down to times as late as those of Alexander the Great, if not later. For, in the third chapter of the first book of Chronicles, we have the genealogy of the sons of Zerubbabel, carried down for so many descents after him, as may well be thought to reach the time of Alexander : and, in the book of Nehemiah, chap. xii. ver. 22, we have the days of Jaddua spoken of as of days past ; but Jaddua outlived Alexander two years. I acknowledge these passages to have been interpolated passages, both put in after the time of Ezra, and after the time of Nehemiah (who were the writers of those books), by those who completed the canon. To say they were inserted by those holy men themselves, who wrote the books, the chronology of their history will not bear : for then they must have lived down beyond those times which those passages refer us to ; but this is inconsistent with what is written of them. And to say that they were put in by any other than those who, by the direction of the Holy Spirit of God, completed the canon of the Scriptures, will be to derogate from their excellency ; and therefore we must conclude that, since Simon the Just was the last of those that were employed in this work, it was by him that the last finishing hand was put thereto, and that it was in his time, and under his presidency, and chiefly by his direction, that the canon of the holy scriptures of the Old Testament, by which we now receive them, was perfected, and finally settled in the Jewish church.

To these remarks, selected from the laborious and learned writer who has been so frequently referred to in these latter notes, few observations are necessary to be added. The wisdom of that dispensation of Providence which closed the canon of Scripture at this period will be evident, if we consider the circumstances of the Jewish church. The Jews had now been restored to their own country, and to their own ecclesiastical and civil rights more than two hundred years. Idolatry

A.C. About
300. Jonathan begat Jaddua. And in the days of Joiakim were 12 priests, the chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah; of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehohanan; 13 of Melicu, Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph; of Harim, 14, 15 Adna; of Meraioth, Helkai; of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginne- 16 thon, Meshullam; of Abijah, Zichri; of Miniamin, of Moa- 17 diah, Piltai; of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehonathan; 18 and of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi; of Sallai, 19, 20 Kallai; of Amok, Eber; of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, 21 Nethaneel.

now no longer existed, and the laws of their great legislator were so firmly established among them, and held in such high reverence, that some few years before the death of Simon the Just, rather than infringe on the holiness of the Sabbath, they permitted Ptolemy to assault and capture Jerusalem without offering any resistance. They considered themselves a holy nation, and the peculiar chosen people of God; and so great and so zealous was their attachment at this time to the ritual and ceremonial law, that they were in no danger of rejecting the one true God: the spirit, therefore, of prophecy and the power of working miracles had accomplished the object for which they were designed, and were now no longer necessary. The Jews, weaned from idolatry, and confirmed in the faith and worship of the one true God, were become the anxious and zealous guardians of his revealed religion.

After the conquests of Alexander, the Greek language gradually prevailed over the greater part of the known world, and with it a taste for literature was diffused. With the wonderful history of the Jews the surrounding nations must have been well acquainted; and as these people possessed the most valuable and authentic records, the well informed and the curious would be emulous to obtain a knowledge of them. To this spirit of inquiry and information may be perhaps attributed the demand for their Scriptures in the Greek language.

Ptolemy about this time desired to place the Jewish Scriptures in his library; and the Septuagint version is supposed to have been now made or finished at his request, or for the use of the Jews in Alexandria; the difference between this version and the Hebrew in many passages may be accounted for by supposing that only a part was translated at the request of Ptolemy, many of the books perhaps having been already done from authenticated copies for the use of the hellenizing Jews in various countries: all that we can be certain of, however, on this subject is, that they must have been collected into one volume after the time of Simon the Just, because the Septuagint version contains the whole of the canonical books, which before his time were not completed.

From the universality of the Greek language, and the dispersion of the Jews, the Septuagint probably was extensively known throughout the Pagan world; and the knowledge of the true God, who never leaves himself without a witness, was thus communicated and preserved among the Gentiles, now that miracle and prophecy had ceased among the Jews.

The dispensation of Providence which ordained the discontinuance of miracles served to fix the attention of the Jews exclusively to the study of their Scriptures as the only means now left them of becoming acquainted with the divine will; it likewise tended to excite more forcibly the attention of the people to him who, in the appointed time, united in his own person the gifts and powers of miracle and of prophecy. When Christ came into the world, his appearance was generally expected. The great anticipated a temporal king, a mighty hero, a conqueror of the Roman power. The poorer and more reflecting looked for him as the consolation of Israel: and few only understood the real nature of that spiritual dominion over the heart and conscience which he came to establish.

The time of the Messiah at length arrived. He was born in a manger, and cradled with oxen. The humble appearance—the unostentatious behaviour—the simple and pure teaching of the meek and lowly Jesus but ill accorded with the preconceived notions that had been formed of his appearance and kingdom. With these deep-rooted prejudices to overcome, nothing but the undeniable miracles of Christ could have satisfied the minds of men that he was the predicted Messiah. The long antecedent cessation of miracles made their revival more powerful and more efficacious. Our Lord therefore constantly appealed to them to confirm his mission. When John sent his disciples to inquire of him, “art thou he that should come?” Jesus answered only by giving sight to the blind, strength to the lame, and by raising the dead to life, saying, “Go and tell John what ye have seen and heard.” His miracles fully demonstrated his power and Godhead, and convinced every unprejudiced mind that the glory of the second temple had appeared, and that God had visited his people.

He dies; and is succeeded by his son Asa, who suppresses the idolatry that had been introduced into the kingdom of Judah	974	The death of Jeroboam, and succession of his son Nadab.	968
He engages Benhadad, king of Syria, to invade the territories of Baasha, king of Israel, in order to make him quit his undertaking at Ramah.	940	The death of Nadab, and succession of Baasha, who builds Ramah, to hinder the Israelites from going to Jerusalem.	966
		The death of Baasha, and succession of his son Elah.	943
		Zimri kills Elah, and usurps the kingdom of Israel; but Omri soon besieges him, and forces him to burn himself in his own palace.	942
		Omri, when seated in the throne, builds Samaria, and makes it the seat of his empire.	938
The death of Asa, and succession of his son Jehoshaphat, who expels all sorts of superstitious worship out of his dominions.	929	His death, and the succession of his son Ahab.	931
		Elijah, the prophet of the Lord, causes the false prophets of Baal to be slain, and appoints Elisha to be his successor in the prophetic office.	908
		Ahab defeats Ben-hadad, king of Syria, who laid siege to Samaria, and afterwards in a pitched battle.	897
Jehoshaphat accompanies Ahab in his expedition against Ramoth-Gilead, and is in danger of being slain.	897	He makes war against Ramoth-Gilead, and there being slain in disguise, is succeeded by his son Ahaziah.	909
He equips a fleet for Ophir, but miscarries in the voyage.	896	Ahaziah, by a fall, is dangerously wounded.	907
Elijah is this year translated in a fiery chariot.		He dies, and is succeeded by his brother Jehoram.
The death of Jehoshaphat; and his son Jehoram's succession to the crown.	904	Elisha foretels the victory of the army of the Israelites, and procures plenty of water for them.	891

KINGS OF JUDAH for 388 years.

KINGS OF ISRAEL for 264 years.

Jehoram introduces idolatry into Judah; is smitten with an incurable disease; dies; and is succeeded by his son Ahaziah. 896
 Homer about this time flourished 896
 Ahaziah accompanies Jehoram, king of Israel, to the siege of Ramoth-Gilead, and being afterwards put to death, by the order of Jehu, his kingdom is usurped by his mother Athaliah, who destroys all the royal family, except young Joash. 895
 Athaliah is put to death, and Joash, being seated on the throne, repairs the ruins of the temple. 889
 Joash orders the high priest Zechariah to be slain in the temple; wages war with Hazael, king of Syria; is forced to give him large sums of money; is murdered by his servants, and is succeeded by his son Amaziah. 849
 Amaziah declares war against Joash, king of Israel, and is defeated; he dies; (interregnum here of 11 years;) and is succeeded by his son Uzziah, otherwise called Azariah, in whose reign the prophets Isaiah and Amos arise in the kingdom of Judah. 820
 The death of Uzziah, and succession of his son Jotham, in whose reign Isaiah and Hosea the prophet prophesied. 757
 The death of Jotham, and succession of his son Ahaz, who is invaded by Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel; and at length invites to his assistance Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria, submitting to pay him tribute. 741
 Ahaz dies; and is succeeded by his son Hezekiah, who restores the true worship of God (which Ahaz had almost subverted) in Judah and Jerusalem. 725

The siege of Samaria by Ben-hadad, wherein he and his army are seized with a panic fear, and break up in confusion at night. 885
 Jehoram is wounded at Ramoth-Gilead, and after that slain by Jehu, who usurps the crown. 885
 The death of Jehu, and succession of his son Jehoahaz. 867
 The death of Jehoahaz, and succession of his son Joash. 850
 Elisha dies about this time. 832
 The death of Hazael, king of Syria, and succession of his son Ben-hadad, who wars against Joash. 832
 Joash obtains a great victory over Amaziah king of Judah. 835
 He dies, and is succeeded by his son Jeroboam II. in whose reign the prophets Jonah, Hosea, and Amos prophesied in Israel. 834
 The Olympic games were instituted this year. 793
 The death of Jeroboam II. and long interregnum of 22 years. 793
 Zechariah, the son of Jeroboam, at length obtains the kingdom, but, after a reign of six months, is killed by Shallum, who, after a reign of one month, is killed by Menahem, who dies, and is succeeded by his son Pekahiah. 770
 Pekahiah is assassinated by Pekah, who succeeds him. 760
 The city of Rome began to be built 751
 Arbaces, governor of Media (who in Scripture is called Tiglath-Pileser) and Belesis (otherwise called Nabonassar) conspire against Sardanapalus, king of Assyria, and having besieged him in Nineveh for three years, compels him at last to burn himself and all his riches in his own palace; whereupon Tiglath-Pileser is acknowledged king of Assyria, and Nabonassar lays the foundation of the Babylonish empire. 756
 Tiglath-Pileser overcomes Rezin, king of Syria, and puts him to death; then enters the land of Israel, takes many cities, and carries away a great number of captives. 738
 Hoshea, the son of Elah, puts Pekah, king of Israel, to death, and usurps the throne. 728
 Tiglath-Pileser dies, and is succeeded by Salmaneser, who invades the kingdom of Israel, and makes Hoshea tributary to him. 724
 Hoshea, king of Israel, thinking to shake off the yoke of Salmaneser, makes an alliance with So, or Sabacon, king of Egypt; whereupon Salmaneser besieges Samaria, and, after three years, takes it, and carries away the people captive, and so extinguishes the kingdom of Israel, after it had subsisted, from the separation, 264 years. 715

Salmaneser dies; and is succeeded by Sennacherib, who invades the kingdom of Judah, and takes several of its cities. 715 Hezekiah's sickness and recovery. He gives money to Sennacherib, who still continues the war 725 against him, but, at length, loses all his army by the stroke of an angel; whereupon the Medes revolt from his dominion, and at his return to Nineveh he is put to death by two of his sons, and succeeded by a third, named Esarhaddon.

Hezekiah dies; and is succeeded by his son Manasseh	696
Esarhaddon makes himself master of Babylon, and reunites the Assyrian and Babylonish empire	677
He takes Manasseh prisoner, and carries him in chains to Babylon	671
Holofernes invades Judea, and is slain by Judith	653
Manasseh, after his return from Babylon, dies; and is succeeded by his son Amon	641
Amon is murdered by his servants; and succeeded by his son Josiah	639
Josiah endeavours to reform several abuses that had been introduced, and restores the true worship of God.
At this time Jeremiah begins to prophesy	628
Josiah is slain in battle against Necho, king of Egypt, and is succeeded first by Jehoahaz, and after him by Jehoikim.	608
Nebuchadnezzar takes Jerusalem, and carries Daniel and his companions captives into Babylon	586
Daniel interprets Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the great statue	592
Jehoikim's revolt against Nebuchadnezzar	596
The birth of Cyrus, and the death of Jehoikim, whose body is thrown into the highway, without any burial; and the succession of Jeconiah, who (after a short reign) is taken and carried to Babylon, while his uncle Zedekiah is left at Jerusalem in his place.	599
Ezekiel begins to prophesy in Chaldea, and foretells the destruction of Jerusalem	590
Zedekiah confederates with the king of Egypt, and revolts against Nebuchadnezzar	588
Nebuchadnezzar besieges Jerusalem; defeats the Egyptian army; takes the city, and utterly destroys it, with the temple; puts out Zedekiah's eyes; carries him to Babylon; and sends the Jews, that were left in the country, captive beyond the Euphrates. And thus ended the kingdom of Judea, after it had subsisted, from the time of the separation, 388 years.	586
Gedaliah is made governor of the people left in Judea, and is murdered by Ishmael	586
Darius the Mede, or Cyaxares	553
Cyrus the Persian	551
Takes Babylon the first year of his reign. The same year the Jews return under Zorobabel. The first high priest Joshua, same year.
