II. That Sftl's Grammar adopts the plan of Complts' in omitting the whole of the original work relating to English Grammar, omitting precisely the same passages throughout, particularly at pages 16, 18, 68, 69, 71, 72, 73, 122, 124, 224, 260, 285, 297, 305, 310, cf. Sftl's book.

Complaints' evidence

It is pointed out on each of the said pages in Sftl's work there is an entire omission of all matter relating specifically to English Grammar;

that the same omissions had been previously made by the Complts'; and that in former editions of et aliae, there was considerable matter relating to English Grammar.

Defendant's evidence

Objection

The defendant offers in evidence an edition of Adam's Lat. Gram., by Dr. Pitch President of Williams College; the copy produced was of the 1st Edition, Troy, 1814.
This is preferred to it an advertisement by the Faculty of that College, which contains the following passage: "But the English part of this Grammar, which very considerably increases its size 3 times, is found by experience to be not only useless, but very inconvenient to the student and instructor. An Abridgment of this Grammar having been shown to us, in which the English part and other useless parts are omitted, we hereby recommend this cheap, abridged and more convenient edition to all students who expect to resort to this College and direct" &c. — This Advertisement is dated Dec 30, 1823; and the Sftl's rely upon it as showing that the plan of omitting English Grammar from the editions of Adam, began as far back as that date.

They also offer in evidence Nels's Abridgment of Adam's Lat. Gram., Edit. Boston 1824 — as making the same omissions —

a similar passage is shown on page 8 of Pitch's Gram. which is omitted by both Complts' & Sftl's,

and on p. 907 Pitch the following

"The English Language has one part of speech more than the Latin, namely the Article".
This is also not found in Complts' or Sftl's Books.

That Weis in his Abridgement does not omit all English Grammar, but places some of it together with other matter in notes at the bottom of the pages; as on page 3, 4. —

Summary

It would appear, from the evidence in this cause, that the Sftl's Grammar does not omit the particulars of English Grammar which are exhibited in the above reply of the Complts'; and it is not shown that any work had omitted those particulars, before the Sftl's, except the Complts'. ~~But the Complts' did not omit all the English Grammar~~ that the plan of omitting to teach a system of English Grammar in consequence with the Latin, which seems to have been the original design of

Mr. Nelson) is of an earlier date than the Compton's Grammar. It is clearly the principle upon which Dr. Pitton constructed his edition, and this feature is expressly noticed and approved by the Faculty of William's College, in their advertisement respecting to his work. It is also the principle upon which Mr. Wells constructed his "Woridg-mut" ~~or~~ ~~or~~ ~~or~~ ~~or~~ The particulars pointed out in the Belf's "Reply", are matters of illustration where the analogous existing in the English Tongue are introduced to illustrate the corresponding rules or principles in the Latin and do not seem to be introduced for the purpose of teaching English Grammar, as such. How far the concurrent omission of these particulars by the Belf's, after the Compton's, is a violation of copy-right, the Master does not report. -

III. "That the Defferris' Grammar has rules of accent 'prefixed to the original grammar, after the plan of Gould's (the. Compt's) edition' some of the rules being substantially taken from Gould's."

Compt's Evidence

Gould's Evidence

The Compt's show that the said Rules in both the Grammars are substantially the same.

The Bills suggest that the said Rules were taken by both the Compt's & Gould's from Walker's Key, and a short article published by Professor Chamberlain of Cambridge College, where they are shown that Gould admits them to be from Walker, and the System used at Cambridge, in his Lecture p. 11.

They also show that of Chamberlain's Rules Obs. 1 is not in Gould
Obs. 2 is not in the same Language
Obs. 3 is not in the same Idiomatology.

Summary.

The Rules referred to in this allegation are not the expression of principles inherent in the nature and structure of the language itself; but they are the Conventional Rules which have been fixed upon by the moderns to regulate the pronunciation of a dead language. The Rules themselves are drawn from the analogous principles of the pronunciation of English; but the resort to those analogies is a conventional idea.

I find that Gould's Rules of Accent (only two in number) are not original, and that the idea of pronouncing Latin in analogy to the received pronunciation of our own Language, is not original. The Latin Language has been so pronounced in England since the time of Henry VIII. to whose reign the Latin Grammars are traceable - and the Continental Nations have always pronounced it in analogy with their own languages; this there has been attempts by the learned to suggest what the lost pronunciation of the Romans actually was. But the common source from which the Bills. Contain both Gould & Bleawland took this plan and the substance of the rules, is Walker's Key; and it appears that in this work, the idea, or system of pronouncing Latin in analogy with the pronunciation of English ~~entirely~~ is as fully and systematically profounded as it is by Gould;

2. That the substance of the two Rules given by Gould is also given by Walker, and Prof. Chamberlain.
3. That the same Rules in substance are given by Bleawland, but not in the same words.

IV. "That the Drift's Grammar follows Gould's plan by prefacing Rules for the sound of the vowels, and copies some of the Rules literally and takes others substantially, as in the 11th page, complainant's evidence.

Dredged up evidence.

Answer.

That the said Rules are found in both Grammars.

Reply

The Comptl's contend that the Rules respecting C. & G., and C.H. are very dissimilar in Gove's Syst., Smith's Gram. and Walker's Key; but that in Gove's & Gode's they are substantially the same.

The Drifts suggest that <sup>of</sup> the said Rules obs. 4 & 5 are different in phrasology and examples; obs. 6 is not found in Gove's, and they argue that obs. 8 of Gode's is an improvement on the corresponding passage in Gove's, without any additional example; and that section 2 of Gode's has two additional examples. In regard to the Rules for the sound of C. & G. and C.H., they show that the arrangement of Gode's is new, being tabular, with words as examples which Gould has not; and that the materials are found in Walker's Key, Smith's & Gode's Grammar, and Bang's Etymology.

Summary.

The same observations made under the last preceding head, are applicable here. Whether or not they vary the principles of law applicable to the facts, I conceive not to be within my province. The result of those facts, upon the evidence, is, that the plan of giving rules for the sound of vowels is not original with the Comptl.; that the rules themselves for the sound of C. & G. and the short vowel have been in substance propounded by earlier grammarians; some in one, and by some in another form; that of the rules for the sound of vowels, found in Gould, the I. with the "observation" under it, is given in substance by Walker; but that the remainder (about 3/4 of the whole) obs. II. III. IV. V. with the three short propositions under them, called exceptions, observations, are substantially the same in Gode's as in Gould. I consider that the variations in phrasology & examples, in these last, on which the Drifts rely to rebut the charge of a literal piracy, do successfully upset that charge; but that the allegation of their being substantially the same, is sustained. It is likewise proved that Mr. Gode's has added some Rules, as above stated, and those additions are of obvious importance and utility.

V That the Drifts. Grammar has followed the plan of Gould in marking the quantity of the penultimate vowel in the Latin words throughout the work, where the quantity was not determined Complts Evidence.

Drifts. Evidence.

Answer

The Drifts show that the plan of marking the vowels is the same in both works, and eight instances are pointed out by them where Mr. Gould's work contains ~~supplementary~~ errors, in the marking of vowels, and the same errors are found in the same places in Cleaveland's book: and the Drifts rely upon this as circumstantial evidence of a direct copying on the part of the latter from the work of the former.

Reply.

That none of the authors made it a rule to mark the penultimate; and that, as an example, the Superlatives of adjectives are seldom marked by the other authors, but always by Gould & Cleaveland.

Summary. X

The earliest trace of a plan of marking the quantity of the penultimate vowel is in the Lond. Lat. Gramm. of 1737. From hence down to the most recent of the authors and editors cited by the Drifts, it is apparent that this plan has been followed by all, to a greater or less extent. Of those authors & editors, it appears that Smith makes the most frequent use of it, and I find that he marks the Superlatives of adjectives. The result of the evidence when this point may be stated thus - that <sup>it is proved</sup> that the Complts. Editor has made use of this plan to a greater extent than any previous writer, but that previous writers had used it more or less; and that the Drifts. Editor has made use of it to the same extent and on the same words, as the Complts. had done.

In regard to the eight instances of similar errors, I find that of those eight words, the same mistakes had been made in three of them in the Edmst. Edition of 1773, and in Dr. Fitch's Edition of 1814, while the other five are marked <sup>in these last editions</sup> as the Complts. say they should be marked. In Cleaveland they are marked precisely as in Gould.

The Drifts. Contend that the plan of marking the penultimate vowel is not new or peculiar to Gould, the support of which they produce Adam's Gramt. Edmst. 1773
 Fitch's Gramt. Gramt. 1814,
 Smith's Gramt. Boston 1805,

VI. That the Ffelts have introduced into their edition the same new heads in other places, particularly at pages 35, 78, 303, 305.

Complete Evidence.

Fifth Evidence.

The Ffelts contend that there is no substantial difference in the above particular between Cronel's and the Decades of Adamae.

"in respect of which they produce

earlier Edition 1793

Bethel " 1814

St. York " 1818

Summary.

Of the two sections, alleged by the Cronels, two are found arranged and set down in the same way in former editions; in the other two (pages 35, 303) the coincidence consists in setting down the same heads.

"Formation of the Degrees"

and

"Proverbs"

VII. That the Ffelts have copied in many instances the division of paragraphs and discrimination of what was important, by printing the same in a distinct type, particularly at pages 67, 69, 73, 74, 78, 118, 196, 197, 298.

Complete Evidence.

Fourth Evidence.

The Ffelts contend that there is nothing new in the matter now alleged; that the like division substantially new to be found in prior editions.

They offer Edition 1793:

st. York — 1810

Bethel — 1812

Bethel — 1814.

Summary.

I do not perceive that this allegation involves anything more than a use of similar type; or rather the use of a similar mode of distinguishing what is more from what is less important to the reader. I find that the same thing had been done in the earlier editions of Adamae; and that the system itself is not peculiar to the Cronels.

The same matter existed in the original edit. Edition. —

VIII. Shall the S. & G. have adopted in many instances the transporation of matter from the text to the notes, and from one part of the work to another, particularly at pages 15, 16, 68, 76, 81, 95, 116, 328?"

Complete evidence.

Scrib's evidence.

Scrib's alleges, that the matter here said to be transported from the text to the notes, is in the prior editions of Adams, and is distinguished by a smaller type, whether in the text or notes; and that Gould has done nothing but place the original matter upon a different part of the pages, and without any advantage or improvement from that circumstance.

The statement made by the S. & G. is substantiated upon the evidence, except in relation to the note <sup>Summary.</sup> to the note on the 328th page of Cleveland which is as follows.

"Strophe or stanza includes as many lines as are necessary to show all the different kinds of verse measure in an order. It is called strophe, which in Greek literally means a turning, because at the end of it you turn back to the same kind of verse with which you began".

This note is not shown to be in any of the prior editions. All the other matter, embraced in the above <sup>referred</sup> ~~pages~~ is found in the original work - and Mr. Gould's peculiarity consists in placing it at the bottom of the pages, instead of leaving it in the text. So far as the question of this being an improvement is a question of fact, I do not perceive how it is an improvement, and nothing on that head is suggested by the Complete. So far as it is a question of law, I do not report.

In regard to the note above recited, I find that it was original with the Complete, and has been adopted by the S. & G..

IX. "That the fields have followed - Gould in giving the English of the cases and numbers of nouns declined as paradijns."

Gould's Evidence.

Fields Evidence.

The fields allege that the same thing had been done long before by various authors, and that Gould has only followed them. They cite

Willis Adams 1824

Sieg's Gram 1787

Colint Adams 1793

Thomson's Evidence 44

Summary

The result of this evidence is, that by all the above cited authors and editors except the three last, the English of the cases and numbers of nouns declined as paradijns are given, more or less; and that by some of them they are given as uniformly and to as great extent, as by Gould. They do not always use the same paradijns, which have been used by Gould, and which Bleavland uses also indeed.

X. That the fields have copied literally in part and substantiating in part remarks on gender prefixed to the declension of nouns.

Gould's Evidence.

Fields Evidence.

The fields allege that their work is not the same, in this respects, with the Gould's - that the arrangement of the remarks is different - that Gould follows Adam in placing those remarks after "Gender Rules of Declension" - that Bleavland follows Gould except in placing them before "Number" "Case" and "Declension" - that Bleavland's first paragraph on Gender is new - that the 3<sup>d</sup> & 4th are in substance in Grant, p. 6, which probably served as Gould's basis.

Summary.

The passage in question consists in both works of a statement or discussion of gender, as one of the topics involved in the science of grammar; including first a statement of the natural philosophy of gender, and then a description of grammatical gender as founded on the analogies of natural gender, and the conventional principles that have been resorted to, to complete the system, where those analogies fail. — The original work of Mr. Gilman, and subsequent editions of it in this country, contain the substance of what is given by Gould in his two first paragraphs, on the grammatical gender of Latin nouns; but he did not preface these remarks with a distinct statement of natural gender, thereby suggesting and stating the analogies on which grammatical gender is founded. Mr. Gilman's original statement begins simply "Nouns in Latin are said to be of different genders, not mainly from the distinction of sex, but chiefly from their being joined with an adjective of one termination and not ~~of another~~". This presupposes that the student is already acquainted with the fact that on the analogies of natural gender the philosophy of grammar has constructed its genders of words. But in Mr. Gould's work this fact is brought to the notice of the reader; and Mr. Cleveland has done the same thing; and so far as the former is entirely original upon this point, as far as the latter has violated his exclusive right. It appears ~~that~~ <sup>that by virtue of his author, arrangement, & combination</sup> that in Mr. Gould's very philosophical "Institutes of Latin Grammar" (London 1823,) the distinction between natural and grammatical gender is pointedly opposed, and it is shown how the grammatical gender is the Latin language involves something more than the distinction of natural gender. Mr. Gould has gone a little further than this in stating that "on this distinction of the sexes did gender originally depend"; (which statement Mr. Cleveland does not copy.) Mr. Cleveland's paragraph on the same topic embraces the substance of what is found in Grant, and in different phraseology from that used by Gould.

Here comes a paragraph stating the grammatical meaning of "common" gender and "doubtful" gender, which is in terms identically the same in Cleveland as in Gould, while the substance of it is found in Grant.

This is followed by a paragraph on the <sup>principles</sup> ~~distinction~~ between "common" and "doubtful" gender, which is in terms identically the same in Cleveland as in Gould, and the substance of which is not found elsewhere.

XL. "Shall the Bells have adopted the arrangement of the terminations of the several declensions in columns, instead of putting them in transverse lines, as they were arranged in the original work of Mr. Deane?"

Couplet's Evidence.

Facts Evidence.

The Bells allege that Gould's arrangement is not new - that it had been adopted long before by Grammarians - and they produce Tomes's Latin Gram. 1816 — and they further contend that the change of form is entirely unessential.

Summary.

In the original work of Mr. Deane, there is prefixed to each Declension of Nouns, a model of the terminations of that declension, arranged in transverse lines. The alleged infringement consists in putting these terminations in columns, after the Couplet's plan. I find there are the same tables in Tomes's Grammar, and that they are arranged in columns.

XXXI. "Shall the Bells have copied the additional termination of the vocative and ablative cases of the word "Inchises"; and have adopted from Gould the declension at length of the words "opus", "dogma", "paren", "arunco", "Dido", "calcar", "letas", and "top", in the third Declension, and given the English to the words "opus" and "paren"?"

Couplet's Evidence.

Facts Evidence.

The Bells state that these words are thus declined at length in various Grammars of an earlier date, even Providence

Reply.

The Couplet allege that but about half of the said words are declined in the works mentioned. —

That the mode of declining "Amoris" is peculiar to Gould, in which he has been followed by Storck and.

As to the word "Inchises" they say, it is declined at least as by Gould, in

Gale's Gram. (Moyes)	1793
Smith	—
Whitaker	—
Beecher	1792

Summary.

Of these words, "opus", "jewels", and "vulcan" are declined at Langton, by several of the authors cited by the Halls, and the English of the two first is given. "Dogma", "wounds", "tide", "actus" and "wox" I do not find declined at Langton in any other authors than Bowditch and Cleaveland.

In regard to the word "ambitides", ~~I do not find that it is so declined~~ ~~as far as the middle declinable is concerned by other writers~~ It has been so declined previously, — as Bowditch and Cleaveland have declined it, in Stoye's Salem Gram. 1783. It is not so declined in any of the editions prior to Adlum's prior to Gould's.

XIII "that the Golds have followed Grant in making a distinct kind of heterogeneous nouns, and heteroclitic nouns, in pages 55, 56; have adopted and copied the article heteroclitic in page 56; copied the word "beprem" under the head of "cliptola" in defective nouns."

Golds' Evidence.

Dicks' Evidence.

The Golds state, that in reference to

1. The distinct head of heterogeneous nouns, that the Language is verbatim that made use of in the prior editions; that the mechanical distribution of the types on the page is different; that the captions of the two classes of nouns are like those of Grant, but that the nouns of the two classes were used originally by Adam, as in the Edinbor edition, p. 49 - 50.

2. The distinct head of heteroclitic, that in addition to the remarks made under the former head Grant has a distinct caption of heteroclitic p. 45 also called p. 27 also the Port Royal Grammar vol. I. p. 126 -

3. The copying of their Article "heteroclytes" - it is taken from the prior editions, as the Edinbor p. 50 -

Summary.

It appears that the whole of this matter in relation to heterogeneous and heteroclytic nouns, as it is found in Grant and Cleaveland, existed in the original work of Mr. Adam - verbatim; and that the only improvement made upon it by Grant consists in placing distinct captions over the same matter. This may be best exhibited by comparison.

In reference to the entire article of Heteroclytes, a part of it is found in the original Adam, and the rest is taken from Graul & Smit, by Mr. Gould, and arranged into this article; the same being used by Cleveland.

In regard to the words "refren", it appears, that in addition to the examples under the head of "diptota" given by Mr. Adam, Mr. Gould gave the words "refren", which has been adopted by the Delle's editor.

Concepts

Concluded.
The author continued to treat "plexus" as declined in the Webster's edition of etymonline, and in the Etym-Comment it appears different from the same word as declined by Gould & Cleveland -

In regard to "mudens", after Crambland has adopted it as one of his jargonisms, he has carried it out - in a totally dif ferent sense now; i setting down all three of the Generals, which Gould-was not.

Since the inflections of "plus" are given by Adam Edit. 1793, p. 65

They also cite Grant - p. 28

Symmetry

The result of the evidence is, that the plan itself of giving the English abundance of the numbers and cases of ~~the~~ words declined as paradigmatic, is not original with the Temple's grammar; it had been done, more or less, by previous grammarians; and here again is, as under the V. heading of alligation, Mr. Cleveland, having used it to the same extent, in his grammar, ~~and~~ <sup>as</sup> ~~now~~ <sup>then</sup> ~~presently~~ <sup>now</sup> ~~beginning~~ <sup>of the text</sup> to collect the ~~first~~ <sup>second</sup> ~~words~~ <sup>in</sup> ~~the~~ <sup>in</sup> ~~case~~ <sup>case</sup>. ~~Now~~ <sup>now</sup> ~~it~~ <sup>it</sup> ~~is~~ <sup>is</sup> ~~Mr.~~ <sup>Mr.</sup> ~~Goold~~ <sup>Goold</sup> has applied and carried out that

XIV. That the Dfcts. have adopted & copied the change of the English translation of the imperfect and future tenses of the Latin verbs, and adopted and copied Gould's improvement in giving the entire Latin words in each of the voices, tenses, persons & numbers.

Gould's Evidence.

Dfcts. Evidence.

The Dfcts. contend that this English translation of the imperfect tense was adopted in some grammars long before Gould or Dolan, as in the

Eton Gramm. (1788) p. 22. ; that the same

The Complts. allege that the translation of the imperfect tense in the Eton Gram. is different from that in Gould and Cleanland. That the translation of the future given by Gould and followed by Cleanland is different from all the other grammars.

Mode of constructing the English future has been also long known - and that this particular form of rendering the imperfect is also given by Dolan himself, as well as the usual one of "lored".

That the entire Latin words in each of the voices &c. are given in the Eton Gram. p. 22 and others -

Summary

The imperfect tense had been rendered in the Eton Gram. as cited by the Dfcts., in the same manner as it is given by Gould & Cleanland.

In respect to the future tenses,

Mr. Gould's:

I shall love.
Thou wilt love,
He will love;
We shall love,
Ye or you will love,
They will love.

The Eton Gram.:

I shall or will love,
Thou shalt or will love,
He shall or will love;
We shall or will love,
Ye shall or will love,
They shall or will love.

This form of the future it is alleged by the Dfcts. has been long used in English Grammars, but they do not cite any works to show it.

The entire Latin words in each of the voices, tenses, persons and numbers are given in the Eton Grammar, as they are by Gould and subsequently by Cleanland.

Hickie's Gram. London 1828

The Bells reply that "Capio" as conjugated by Hickie is different from that not conjugated by Gould & Cleveland.

Summary

I find the same verb-conjugation in Hickie, and it is obvious that whatever grammarians undertake to set down and conjugate a Latin verb must give the same forms, unless there are differences of authority as to what those forms actually are. Mr. Hickie's conjugation of the verb is the same with Mr. Gould's. The only difference between them is, that the tenses which Mr. Gould calls the "Present" and "Pluperfect," etc., Hickie calls the "Present-perfect" and "Past-perfect,"<sup>etc.</sup> a difference which is apparently quite immaterial, some grammarians following one system of naming the tenses, and some another. The verb as given by Gould is adopted by Cleveland.

XVIII. "That the Golds have in page 117 of their edition copied partly literally and partly substantially Gould's rules for the formation of the various tenses of verbs, and in page 122 have adopted from Gould the word "prosum" as a paradigm under irregular verbs."
Gould's evidence.

Golds' Evidence

The Golds state that in the old editions of Adam are found examples of tenses formed in the four conjugations; that these are omitted in Gould's Grammer and in Cleanchurch, and the Rules for such formations are substituted. That under this head Cleanchurch copies from Gould in as many and as important respects as the Bills appear to have been done by Gould after Adam; that the Rules in Cleanchurch are very much enlarged or improved by him upon the Edinburgh and American editions of Adam, in the following instances:

1. Cleanchurch makes separate heads of Participles & Gerunds, with definitions, and gives examples under Gerund.

2. In the perfective voices he has altered the arrangement by making separate articles of the Indicative & Subjunctive Modes, the Imperative, Infinitives and Participle.

3. Under Indicative and Subjunctive Modes, the remarks are all different from Gould's; and Cleanchurch gives examples from 3 conjugations in 6 tenses.

"Prosum"

The words defining the "prosum" is given by Adam, Grant, B. Smith as the Golds contend.

The Golds argue that Adam sets out verus part of prosum with its irregularities; see also Grant p. 191, Smith p. 61-2.

Summary

In the original work of Mr. Adam, under the head "Formation of Verbs", the number of forming the different tenses was given by examples, by setting down the root tense, and then running off the terminations of the different tenses formed from it, etc. Gould substituted for this mode a statement of Rules for each tense; giving the general principle corresponding to each tense as it had been set down by Adam. Now in respect to the rules for the Indicative, Subjunctive, Imperative & Infinitive moods,<sup>in the active voice</sup>, I find that Mr. Bleantwood gives substantially the same, with a variation of phraseology in some slight particulars, which appears to me to be trivial. The remainder of this topic, upon the formation of the passive voice, I find to be either new matter, or such as does not appear to me to involve any invasion of Mr. Gould's original matter.

In regard to "Proseme", etc. Adam originally gave it as a paradigm of the irregular verbs, and set forth its tenses sufficiently to give the learner an idea of its construction. He did not however give them throughout, in all the mood numbers persons &c. - But this had been done by Smith, as fully as it has since been done by Gould.

XIX. "That the Edts., on page 272, have adopted & copied Gould's 50th 51st 52<sup>d</sup> & 56th Rules of Syntax, and on pages 56 & 273 have copied Gould's observations on the 50th 53<sup>d</sup> & 54th Rules of Syntax."

"Complete Evidence".

The Compts. show that 9 lines of the 2<sup>d</sup> observation under Rule 50th are copied; — 9 lines of the 2<sup>d</sup> observation under Rule 53 are also copied; — four words of the 2<sup>d</sup> observation under Rule 54 are copied;

He<sup>is</sup> -

That the arrangement of the quotations alluded to under Rule 50th is peculiar to Gould and followed precisely by Cleveland.

That the phraseology of 2<sup>d</sup> obs. under Rule 53rd is Gould's and is followed by Cleveland —

Summary

Rule 50. The phraseology of this Rule, as given by Gould, is slightly different from that in the old editions, and I consider the Gould's form the better one. — it is more intelligible to a young learner. The principle is of course the same. The observations under this Rule are the same as in the old editions, with the exception of 9 lines with which the 2<sup>d</sup> observation closes. It is suggested by the Edts. that these are made up of classical quotations, and are taken from Grant &c. & part of them are so, and the principle or statement of fact which they are introduced to illustrate, is stated in Grant. But another part of them, with a similar rule or principle, I do not find in Grant; and the conclusion to which I have arrived on this point is, that the phraseology of the Rule itself, and a small amount of original matter in this 2<sup>d</sup> observation have been adopted by the Edts.

Rule 51. Mr. Gould made a similar improvement in the phraseology of this Rule, which has been followed by Mr. Cleveland.

Rule 52. The same is true of this Rule.

Rule 53. I do not find the 2<sup>d</sup> obs. under this Rule to be so original that the using of it is an infringement, or that general. It is taken however, ~~verbatim~~ by Cleveland, and if the arrangement or combination of the matter drawn from other sources gives Gould a copyright, it would be violated.

Rule 54. The same in the old editions, throughout, seems to be a violation Rule 56. The phraseology of this Rule is slightly improved by Gould, and the same is used by Cleveland.

The Edts. state that the material copy ing nine lines under Rule 50th, are principally classical quotations, which may be found, for the most part in Grant p. 245, 246, and in the Dictionary. —

That the 2<sup>d</sup> observation under Rule 53rd is from Grant p. 250-1. 248-9;

XX. That the Dfts. have in page 303, adopted Gould's distinct head of Prosody, and at page 304 his rules for quantity, and at pages 303, 305, 313, 315, 316, have copied many of Gould's observations on those Rules."

Gould's Evidence.

The Diffs. suggest that the definition of Prosody in giving Gould p. 253, the phraseology is original, and that it has been followed by Cleveland. —

Dfts' Evidence.

The Dfts. contend that the adoption of Prosody as a distinct head has been used by grammarians from the earliest times, in the grammars of various languages; and they refer to the grammars cited in their case, generally, and particularly to Grant p. 340

Axford Gramm (1753) p. 195.

Summary.

1. In regard to Prosody, as a distinct head, ~~Without looking further~~ it appears that both Grant and the Oxford Gramm treat of Prosody, under a distinct head. With respect to the definition of Prosody, the Bill does not change any infringement.

and I do not therefore suppose that I am bound to hear evidence respecting it. —

2. The rules for quantity at page 304, and the observations on those Rules at p. 303, 305, 313, 315, 316. —

In page 305 (6) the only alleged improvement given by Gould, which has been followed by Cleveland, is taken from Grant, and arranged as it stands in Gould. On page 313, the substance of Gould's improvement is from Grant, and adopted by Cleveland. On pages 315, 316, I find that Cleveland has adopted some original matter of Gould's, about  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a page, which is not shown to me to exist elsewhere.

XXI. "That the Dells. have copied substantially Gould's metrical key or explanations of the various kinds of verse in Horace, and at page 333 copied Gould's addition in the Appendix on the subject of abbreviations, punctuation, capitals, division of Roman months, tables of Roman coins, weights and measures."

Couplis. Evidence.

Dells. Evidence.

The Dells. contend that the metrical key in Gould was taken from Stooper's Prose, and that Cleveland's is from the same; that the article on the combinations of meters is from Curry's Prosebody & Stooper p. 35.

That the note under capitals is substantially from Grant, p. 3.

That the notes on Metres &c. in Gould p. 284 are in substance from Adam's Roman Antiquities, p. 218. —

That the tables of Roman months is from the same p. 219 — also from Smith p. 134.

That the tables of coins, weights & measures are given by Gould & Cleveland both on the authority of Adam's Roman Antiquities; and that Cleveland has also used Bee's Collection, not "Coins".

Summary.

The metrical key to the Odes of Horace is found in Stooper's Prosebody (Philadelphia 1819) precisely the same as in Gould and Cleveland.

So also is the article on the combinations of meters, verbalis.

In ~~the~~ regard to the matter in the Appendix Mr. Gould has added nothing on the subject of abbreviations, punctuation, and capitals, to what was in the original work of Adam, except this note; "The Capitals in this way denote the plural number, as L. T. Leyis Doctor, L. S. D. Legum Doctor". In Gould, the mode of representing a contracted plural is pointed out, in this manner; "Boss, consules, doubtless the last letter" Mr. Cleveland gives the same as Gould.

The article on the Division of Roman months, in Gould, contains nothing original; what additions were made by him are very slight, and mere substance in Smith; and the table of months is literally in Smith, etc., Cleveland is the same with Mr. Gould.

The tables of Roman weights & measures are expressly stated by Bonnel to be given on the authority of Alain's Roman Antiquities. Some additional remarks on the Roman Money, by Bonnel, seem to be exactly followed by Bleawland.

XXII. That the Defendants have taken - in most instances literally and in others substantially, making very slight alterations from the matter added in said Gould's edition to Adams's original work, on the following pages of said new Edition - &c &c.

This allegation is merely a general recapitulation of the several allegations above examined. As I have been requested by the Bowells' Counsel to report the amount of matter taken by the D'f'ls from their work, I accordingly find, that substantially the whole of what was added by Mr. Gould to the old editions of Adams (whether from one or another source, or as matter more purely of invention on his own part,) has been adopted by the D'f'ls. How far this matter was drawn from other sources and fromusions alike open to the D'f'ls & Bowells, appears under each of the foregoing heads. How far the use of such matter by the D'f'ls, in the same form or arrangement, or in the same phrasology, or in different phrasology, (which seem to be the main questions arising in this cause) affect Constitutive infringement of copy-right, & conative to belong solely to the Province of the Court.

Gould, master of the public Latin School of Boston" being a new edition of a foreign publication, which edition was prepared by said Benjamin A. Gould, who then was & still is a citizen of & resident in the said United States, & who at the time of preparing the same agreed, in writing upon sufficient consideration that said Cummings, Hilliard & Company should be the exclusive proprietors of, take out a copyright in their names for, the same, a printed copy of the title of which book, being such new edition, the said firm of Cummings, Hilliard & Co. on the 2<sup>d</sup> July 1826, being their sole exclusive proprietors of the same abt. sold entitled to a copyright of the same, deposited in the office of the Clerk of the Court of the United States for the Said District, of Massachusetts, before the said book had been published, which title was on that day recorded in the Office of the Clerk of Said District Court, & the Said Cummings, Hilliard & Company caused to be published inserted in the page immediately following the title page of said book a copy of the record of the Certificate of the Clerk of the Said District Court of the United States that the title of said book had been deposited in the office of Said Clerk on the day of said book, and within two months from the date of said Certificate, Said Cummings, Hilliard & Co caused a copy thereof to be published in a newspaper printed in Boston in Said District, for the space of four weeks, & within six months from the publication of said book caused a copy of the same to be delivered to the Secretary of State of the United States & be preserved in the office of that office and took all the measures & steps requisite by law for securing said Copyright, and said firm of Cummings, Hilliard & Co their assigns have had the legal & exclusive right of publishing said book being such new edition from the time of the date of said certificate to the present time, and by virtue of the laws of the United States in force at the time of obtaining said Certificate & publishing said book & published since its publication, the assigns of the Said Cummings, Hilliard & Co & the assigns of such assigns have the exclusive right of publishing said book for the period of fourteen years from the date of said Certificate, which period has not yet expired, & also of renewing & prolonging such Copyright for the period of fourteen years from & after the expiration of said first period of fourteen years.

And the plaintiffs further show that, by assignments in writing for sufficient consideration made by the original proprietors and intermediate assignees, by them assigned to the assigns of this defendant from time to time, whereof the Signor, assignees & proprietors called all of them, being residents in and citizens of the said United States, the plaintiffs for a valuable consideration became the sole legal proprietors in their own right, of said Copyright, on the seventh day of March in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred eighty three & ever since that time have been & now are such sole proprietors, & ever since the said seventh of March have had & now have the sole exclusive right, of printing, publishing & expediting to sale & selling copies of the improvements & additions made & originally published in said edition of said work, entitled as aforesaid, in which edition the

And the plaintiffs further show that they being the lawful proprietors of said Copyright, & in possession of the same, having many copies of said edition of said grammar with the said improvements & additions on hand & offered for sale, and always having had on hand & offered for sale at a reasonable price, a sufficient number of copies of the said grammar so improved & enlarged & being in the enjoyment of the profits of the same. — John Brattle & Russell, Lewis & Shattuck, both of Said Boston, and John J. And the plaintiffs further show that, the said Cleverland's edition of said grammar is copied, stolen & pirated from the said Gould's, & is an infringement, on the plaintiff's copyright in the following among other circumstances & particulars, viz. it adopts the same title; it adopts the plan of Gould's work in omitting the whole of the original work relating to English grammar, omitting as the plaintiffs believe, precisely, the same passages throughout par-

to the original grammar after the plan of Gould's edition, some of the rules being substantially taken from Gould's - it follows Gould's plan by prefixing rules for the sound of the vowels, & copies some of the rules literally, & takes others substantially, as in the 44th page etc. said Cleverland in his edition has followed the plan of Gould in marking the quantity of the penultimate vowel in the Latin words throughout the work, when the quantity was not determined by being placed before another vowel, a double consonant, or two single consonants. - he has introduced into his edition the same new head in divers places, particularly, at pages 55. 78. 303. 305 & copied, in many instances the division of paragraphs & discrimination of what was important, by printing the same in a distinct type, particularly, at pages 67. 69. 73. 74. 87. 118. 196. 197. 298 adopted in various instances the translation of (matter) from the text, to the notes & from one part happily in part, remarks on gender prefixed to the declension of nouns, in columns instead of putting them in transverse lines as they were arranged in the original work of Mr. Adam - has copied the additional termination of the locative & ablative cases of the word Anchises has adopted nearly from Gould's edition the declension at length of the words spes. dogma. parent. mundo. dido. calcas. alas & voy in the third declension & give the Eng. like to the words spes & parent. followed

ed & copied Gould's edition in giving the English of the adjectives declined in his said Cleverland's, edition page 68 & has in pages 74. adopted the paradigm provided & given in adjective - and adverbial. - has adopted & copied the change of the English translation of the imperfect & future tenses of the Latin verbs & also declension - Gould's orders of the principal parts of verbs preferred to each other & adopted & copied Gould's translation.

in giving the entire Latin words in each of the voices moods, tenses, persons & numbers, & his entire English Translation of the Latin, in the form design'd of the 2nd, 3rd & 4th conjugations both voiced & all the moods, tenses Numbers & persons in the 9th page of the following edition of said book Cleveland's, edition; & has adopted Gould's ~~entire~~<sup>particular</sup> paradigm of a verb (sapio) in in the third conjugation in page 108 of said Cleveland's edition - & has in page 107 of his edition copied Shattuck literally, partly substantially, Gould's rules for the formation of the various tensed of verbs, & in page 174 has adopted from Gould the word prosum, as a paradigm under irregular verbs, & in page 272 had adopted, & copied, Gould's 50th 51st 52nd & 58th rules of Syntax, & on said last mentioned page 174 in page 175 has copied Gould's observations on the 50, 53, 1, 54th rules of Syntax & in page 300 adopted Gould's distinct head of Prolepsy, & rule 3 for Transliteration - and in pages 303, 305, 313, 315, 316 has copied many of Gould's observations on those subjects.
has copied substantially Gould's metrical key or classification of the various kinds of words in Horace, & has at page 333 copied Gould's addition in the appendix on the subject of punctuation, Capitols, Associations, division of Roman months, tables of Roman coins, weights, & measures, so that in the said new edition, besides the adoption of the plan of said Gould's edition in omitting the part of the original work relating to English Grammar, & in marking the quantity of the ante penultimate syllable in Latin words throughout, & making of the transpositions from the text, to the notes, or from one place to another in the text, otherwise imitating & following the same, is already set forth the editor of the said book Cleveland's edition so extracted by said Riddell & Shattuck & Co had taken in most instances literally & in others substantially, making very slight alterations, from the matter added in said Gould's edition to Adam's original work, on the following pages of said new edition sold by said Riddell & Shattuck etc, viz, judged 11, 12, 17, 18, 22, 30, 32, 33, 34, 38, 49, 70, 72, 75, 92, 95, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107

315, 316, 321, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333 & in the appendix to the same to the amount of thirty pages or more, being a very large proportion of the additions, alterations & improvements made by the said Gould in his edition of said work belonging to the plain tiffs as aforesaid.

And the pleffs further show that in consequence of the before hands having so exposed & sold the said Cleveland's edition the sales of the plain tiffs have been hindred & rendered less in number than they would have been had the said Riddell & Shattuck & Co not so exposed & sold said said pirated edition - All which acts & doings of the said Riddell & Shattuck & Co are contrary to equity & good conscience & tend to the manifest wrong & injury of the tiffs in the premises in consideration whereof, and forasmuch, as the plaintiffs are precluded in the premises at and by the rules of the Common law & cannot have adequate relief, save in a court of equity

Rufall & Shattuck

} In chancery

The defendants reserving to themselves & each of them all benefit of exception which can or may be taken to the said Bill of the Complaintants, for answer thereto, or to so much & such parts thereof as these defendants are advised are material or necessary for them or either of them to make answer unto, severally answering, say:

That they deny all intention of infringing upon, and have not as they believe, infringed upon the copy right of another work entitled "Adam's Latin Grammar" with former improvements & the following addition, "Rules for the right pronunciation of the Latin language" a metrical key to the Odes of Horace, a list of Latin Authors arranged according to the different ages of Roman Literature; Tables showing the value of the various coins, weights & measures used among the Romans - by Benjamin St. Gould, master of the Public Latin School Boston."

And these defendants maintain, that

To the Honorable Justice of the Circuit Court of the United States of America, Holden at Boston written and for the district of Massachusetts.

Your ministrations the Subscribers, the Editors of a work entitled "Latin Grammar with numerous additions and improvements, designed to meet the wants of young Students, to follow the editions of the Latin Classics, by C. D.
Clement Hill late Professor of the Latin Language and Literature in the University of the City of New York" respectfully but respectfully affirm that he has introduced no passage upon which has not a right upon the copy right of another work entitled "A New Latin Grammar with some improvements, and the following addition over the rest, grammar of the Latin Language, according to the order of Horace, &c. &c." in the annual according to the different ages of Patient, a table showing the rule of the various cases, which sometimes called the "Tedium," by Benj:
in' Gould master of the Latin School Boston."
it will soon be clearly seen that the whole management of the Latin Grammar of Doctor Alexander Adams, of Edinburgh first published in 1772, is viewed by all publishers and editors in the light of a classic; and that with just as much propriety might any one claim to have a copy right of Horace as a copy right of Adams Latin Grammar unless it be improved by many and great additions, to which additions only can any publisher claim an exclusive right that since it was first introduced into the United States that since that work was first introduced into the United States a vast number of editions have been published in different parts of the country; each editor improving upon his predecessor; in Boston, Amherst (Massachusetts) in Troy and Albany and New York, ~~New York~~ in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and in Baltimore Maryland - And these Defendants now submit; ~~that~~ ~~the~~ ~~fact~~ ~~is~~ ~~that~~ ~~the~~ ~~title~~ ~~is~~ ~~the~~ ~~same~~ ~~in~~ ~~the~~ ~~two~~ ~~editions~~

~~that~~ ~~the~~ ~~edition~~ ~~of~~ ~~Edwards~~ ~~Grammar~~ ~~published~~ ~~by~~ ~~Hellier~~ ~~and~~ ~~Gray~~ ~~and~~ ~~Company~~ ~~of~~ ~~Boston~~ ~~with~~ ~~few~~ ~~additions~~,
~~and~~ ~~those~~ ~~not~~ ~~original~~, ~~have~~ ~~been~~ ~~made~~ ~~to~~ ~~the~~ ~~old~~ ~~edition~~ ~~of~~ ~~1093~~ - ~~but~~ ~~that~~ ~~in~~ ~~the~~ ~~edition~~ ~~published~~
~~by~~ ~~William~~ ~~Marshall~~ ~~and~~ ~~Company~~ ~~of~~ ~~Philadelphia~~, ~~which~~ ~~is~~ ~~the~~ ~~subject~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~present~~ ~~suit~~,
~~great~~ ~~additions~~ ~~and~~ ~~improvements~~ ~~have~~ ~~been~~ ~~introduced~~. ~~These~~ ~~Defendants~~ ~~do~~ ~~not~~ ~~say~~, ~~that~~ ~~it~~ ~~is~~ ~~true~~,
~~as~~ ~~set~~ ~~forth~~ ~~in~~ ~~the~~ ~~complaint~~, ~~that~~ ~~in~~ ~~some~~ ~~instances~~ ~~the~~ ~~Philadelphia~~ ~~Grammar~~ ~~and~~ ~~the~~ ~~Boston~~ ~~Grammar~~ ~~coincide~~ ~~in~~ ~~some~~ ~~improvements~~ ~~made~~
~~in~~ ~~the~~ ~~latter~~ ~~upon~~ ~~the~~ ~~Edinburgh~~ ~~edition~~. ~~But~~ ~~this~~ ~~has~~ ~~arisen~~, ~~not~~ ~~because~~ ~~the~~ ~~same~~ ~~were~~ ~~copied~~
~~from~~ ~~the~~ ~~Boston~~ ~~edition~~, ~~but~~ ~~because~~ ~~the~~ ~~editors~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~two~~ ~~editions~~ ~~took~~ ~~their~~ ~~improvements~~
~~from~~ ~~the~~ ~~same~~ ~~Sources~~; ~~the~~ ~~former~~, ~~however~~, ~~without~~ ~~acknowledgement~~; ~~while~~ ~~the~~ ~~latter~~ ~~stated~~ ~~in~~ ~~the~~ ~~preface~~ ~~of~~ ~~his~~ ~~edition~~ ~~the~~ ~~Sources~~ ~~whence~~ ~~he~~ ~~derived~~
~~his~~ ~~new~~ ~~matter~~ ~~introduced~~. ~~But~~ ~~to~~ ~~come~~ ~~to~~ ~~such~~ ~~an~~ ~~issue~~ ~~in~~ ~~proof~~ ~~of~~ ~~this~~, ~~the~~ ~~Defendants~~
~~submit~~ ~~the~~ ~~following~~ ~~facts~~:

1. The ~~Philadelphia~~ ~~edition~~ does not adopt the same title as asserted ~~as may be seen by comparing the two side by side; it will be seen at a glance~~ ~~that~~ ~~the~~ ~~title~~ ~~pages~~ ~~are~~ ~~entirely~~ ~~different~~; ~~To see~~ ~~the~~

the title page of the 3<sup>d</sup> Philadelphia edition purports, ~~the rule~~ ~~precedent~~ that it is Adam's Grammar, & it shall, first at my edition of Horace's Book receive full ~~hand~~ ~~hand~~. The House of Horace.

2<sup>d</sup> The same edition does, as is alleged, omit
~~the stock~~ ~~with~~ the English part of Adam's Grammar;
but not to follow the edition of Gould's, for that same thing had before been done by others; among whom was the Reverend Ebenezer Fitch D.D., President of Williams College, in his fourth edition published at Troy in 1814; which work, now out of print, the ~~subscriber~~ had constantly by him in preparing his edition, and constantly referred to in preparing the said Philadelphia edition -

3<sup>d</sup> These Defendants admit, that to the few editions are ~~not true~~ that the subscriber has professed, rules for Latin Pronunciation as in the Boston edition of Gould's;
but it is not true that he copied any part of them <sup>were copied</sup> from Gould; ~~but they were taken~~ <sup>from</sup> chiefly from Walker's Key, and from a small treatise printed by the late Professor Chamberlain of Dartmouth College for the use of his classes; ~~the truth is~~ both have gone to the same main source, Walker's Key; but the <sup>editors of the said</sup> Philadelphia edition made ~~is~~ <sup>it</sup> though a much better arrangement.

4. These Defendants do not deny, that the said last mentioned edito ~~not true~~ that the subscriber has marked "the quantity of the penultimate vowel in the Latin words throughout his work, when the quantity was not ascertained by being placed before another vowel, a double consonant or two

two single consonants, ~~but without great merit~~ ~~or originality~~, there is in this he is at a loss to decide. In most instances it had been done before, in the Edinburgh Edition and in Dr. J. Hatch's of 1814; and these Defendants deny that there is any originality or ground of claim to a copy right therfor.

These Defendants admit, that there are, in
5. ~~it is true, that the subscriber has done~~
~~the said Philadelphia edition in some instances~~
~~the like division of head similar to those in~~

Gould's Edition; but they deny that these divisions
-- have any claim to originality or exclusive right.

6. These Defendants admit, that the editor of the ~~same~~ ~~last~~ ~~mentioned~~ edition has declined, as any type might do the Latin nouns, given as paradigms, with the English;
and this, because they could not be declined rightly but in one way. But this is done in the New-York edition of Adams and in prior works.

These Defendants contend & maintain, that 7. as ~~to~~ ~~goes~~ on p. 17 the first part of the remarks are entirely new, in the latter part, as they aver, Gould has taken his views on the subject from the Edinburgh edition of Adams and from Gould's Latin Grammar p. 6.

They admit, that ~~in~~ ~~the~~ ~~Editor~~
8. ~~he~~ has arranged the terminations after several delections in columns, and in doing so has followed others; among which is the New York Edition edited by Robert Patterson.

They admit, that ~~he~~
9. ~~he~~ has taken the word "Archies" as declined in Smith's N. Hampshire Latin Grammar page thirty five.

- They admit, that he
 10. ~~he~~ has declined, as Gould has done, the word "opus" &c., as had before been done by others; but this is to trifling to make it ~~useful~~ for which cause, as well as for its unimportant character, this cannot be considered as entitled to a copy-right.
11. They deny, that in said Philadelphia edition of the ~~Dependents~~, the article on Horowitz, page forty five, was copied from the work of Gould; if this was done, it was probably from Smith, page forty five and Smith page thirty three - from which said Gould probably also derived the same.
13. They do not deny, that the English is given of certain Latin adjectives, as alleged, on page 68, of ~~the~~ ~~that is~~ meaning in the following giving the English of said Philadelphia edition; but they deny, that the same adjectives on page 68, he is at a loss to conceive if the subject of a copy right - 14. They admit, that The adjective modus ~~is~~ is declined, after other grammarians, and plus on page 72 ~~is~~ is declined entire; as others had done ~~instead of leaving it~~ ~~the~~ ~~and~~ long before the publication of said Gould's Grammar.
15. They aver, that
 The trifling alterations mentioned in the words are from the New York edition of 1831.
- They deny, that
 16. The rules for the formation of the tenses are taken from Gould, but from the ~~Latin~~ ~~first~~ ~~Latin~~ First Latin in Latin ~~is~~ ~~printed~~ published by Charles D. C. Cleveland, the ~~we~~ ~~and~~ editor of said Philadelphia edition - & are improved in said edition - 17. They aver, that
 The verb Prosum, as a paradigm, is from Gould only.
 So far as Gould's is from Smith's N. Y. Grammatical Latin Grammar.

Grammars of 1800 page 61.

They assert & maintain, that the drafting alterations of Gould's Rules 50, 51, 52, and 56 have no claim to originality, being substantially to be found in preceding works.

They deny ~~W~~as high handed to say, that the first part in the Prosody which are in Gould's book not in the Edinburgh edition ~~the & therefore~~ distinction from Gould; but ~~it is not~~ they are from the same source - from which Gould took his, Grant Latin Grammar and Casar's Latin Prosody, as may be seen by a reference to those books. - For the two and a half lines on page 256 of Gould's See Grant Grammer page 361 -

For the	5 lines on page	25 th	See Grant Gram. p. 363, 364, 365, &c 6.

" "	4	263	" " 389
" "	1 st	266, 269	" " 356, 357 & 355.

And finally ~~the above~~ as to all other charges of infringement of copy right <sup>they</sup> deny, that any of the alleged improvements of Gould's Grammar have any claim to originality, but may be found substantially in preceding works, ~~and are not entitled to the~~ ~~protection of a copy right by law.~~

And, for the purpose of showing the material differences ~~there~~ between the last draft of ~~the~~ ~~Philadelphia~~ ~~Grammer~~ between the two works in question in this case, ~~by~~ ~~any~~ ~~means~~ ~~let~~ ~~it~~ ~~be~~ ~~known~~, ~~that~~ ~~it~~ ~~is~~ ~~not~~
~~that~~ ~~I~~ ~~feel~~ ~~it~~ ~~ought~~ ~~to~~ ~~ask~~ ~~Cope~~ ~~to~~ ~~submit~~ ~~to~~ ~~the~~ ~~con-~~ ~~sideration~~ ~~of~~ ~~the~~ ~~Court~~ ~~here~~, ~~the~~ ~~following~~ ~~distinguishing characteristics of the said Philadelphia edition~~

as published by the said Cleveland, the editor thereof - viz.

1. The said Editor has, in the Rule for the pronunciation of Latin by the Introductory Remarks, and by observations first and with on page eleven, observations fifteen and sixteen on page twelve; and by greatly enlarging from Walker's observations three, eight, nine and ten, on the same pages.
- 2<sup>d</sup> He has added to the first paragraph on Genders page 17, which is new, & is not to be found in any other edition of the grammar.
- 3<sup>d</sup> He has thrown out the long lists of regular nouns found in all other editions of Adams' and in their place has substituted lists of irregular nouns.
- 4th To the list of nouns that are Masculine, found in Gould on page 18, and in his edition page 19, he has added the following words to it; Bos, Coubors, Etul, Hodas, Invenis, Pato, Parous, Praesul, Satelles and Verna.
- 5th He has added on pages 19 & 20 three entire new lists of nouns, that present some peculiarities.
- 6th He has made an entirely new division of numbers and cases, as will be seen on pages 20 and 21, and has on page 21 introduced entire new matter, consisting of twenty-five lines on the powers & significations of the Second cases.
7. To the exceptions of nouns of the first Declension, that form the dative and ablative plural in albus, he has added explanatory and limiting observations; and to the

to the General Rules of Declension on page 22<sup>d</sup>
he has added these new rules.

8. He has added exception 5th on page 26 to nouns of the second declension.

9. On page 27 he has declined Dens in full.

10. On page 45 he has added exception in the vocative singular; and on page 47 exception 3<sup>d</sup> in the dative plural.

11. On pages 48, 49, 50 and 51, four consecutive pages, he has given a list of nouns of the third declension, that present some peculiarity in the formation of the ablative singular, and nominative and genitive plural.

12. On page 54 he has added two observations under nouns of the 5th declension giving a number of classical citations.

13. On page 55 he has given a synopsis of the Five Declensions.

14. The lists of Suffixive nouns on pages 58 and 59, he has greatly improved, and enlarged by the following words - Nomen, Fungi, Praesto, Satis, protus,

Eyspes

Br̄ḡs, Despicare, Indicative, Imp̄p̄n, Decūplicare, Silicium, Procōrēre ~~Hanc~~, Auḡrit, Postulat̄, Inscrii, Obstant̄, Tab̄n, Has, Hefas, Alq̄s, Obey, Salis, Nemo, Zecalis, Quant̄s, Quotat̄.

15. To the fourth list of nouns on page 60 he has added three; to the fifth on page 61 he has added twenty-nine; to the seventh list on page 61 he has added eleven; to the eighth list on page 61 and 62 he has added four; to the ninth list on page 62 he has added four; to the tenth list on page 62 and 63 he has added four.
16. The eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth lists of irregular nouns on pages 63, 64 and 65, are entirely new, and contain two hundred and eleven new nouns.
17. The remarks on proper names on page 60, containing twenty two lines, are entirely new.
18. The 14 exceptions of ablatives in the formation of the Ablative Singular, on page 72, are much enlarged from the Erlinsberg edition of Adam.
19. The three paragraphs on page 70 on the cardinal and Postpositive numbers are also new.
20. The formation of the degrees of Comparison on page 78 he has arranged differently, and the third improved.
21. The list of adjectives that want the superlative on page page 81, is greatly enlarged.

22. On page 81, he has introduced a list of adjectives twenty seven in number that are irregular and unusual in their comparison.
23. The 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st observations on the pronouns on pages 87 and 88 are entirely new.
24. The remarks on the tenses of the verbs on pages 90 and 91 comprising more than a page are added to the Edinburgh Edition as are also the remarks on pastons on page 92.
25. The arrangement of the Separable and Common Verbs to follow: verbs of the fourth conjugation is new.
26. The formation of the tenses on pages 117, 118 & 119 are greatly enlarged and elucidated beyond that found in any other edition of Adam's Grammar.
27. He has rejected entirely the Verbs of Cast Adam of 1st, 2<sup>d</sup>, 3rd & 4th conjugation, to be found in Gould's edition from page 121 to 143, and instead of those twenty two pages, has substituted fifty three pages from page 123 in his edition to page 176. To any English subject It is well known, that the Supine rarely occurs in in the Latin Verb, and that there are few verbs that have all the participles of both voices.

Dr. Adam has, in his grammar conjugated all the verbs with the Supreme and in hundreds and hundreds of instances where that is not to be, found; and Gould, in his edition, by taking the Edinburgh Edition, without a single alteration or addition, has thus perpetuated the thousand and one errors of Adam; and Cleveland, ~~the~~ on the contrary, as might be expected, has abandoned Adams plan in toto, and given lists of verbs, with the parts that are to be found in the Classics with the Classical authorities. In Dr. Adams grammar be it known there is not one single reference to Classical authority, while in the edition ~~of the~~ <sup>of Philadelphia</sup> ~~published~~ there are in the first conjugation, seven hundred and seventy four; in the second conjugation four hundred and six. In the third conjugation, one thousand one hundred and forty seven, and in the fourth conjugation three hundred and forty; making in all the thousand six hundred and eighty two citations of the classics and old Grammarians, to support the parts of the verb that are introduced.

25. To the irregular and defective verbs from page 156 to page 188, the <sup>same</sup> ~~same~~ <sup>Georgicus</sup> has made many additions; supplied the parts, that are found, by three hundred and forty two classical citations; and in the remarks on the verbs, pages 193, 194, 195 (not found in our other edition of Adams' Grammar) he has introduced eighty two more citations from the Classics; making in all three thousand thousand one hundred and ten classical References, not found in any other edition of the same work.

29. To the list of redundant Verbs, pages 190, 191, & 192, he has made large additions. —

In Gould's edition the number of redundant <sup>useless</sup> Verbs is eighty three; but in the ~~last~~<sup>1846 edition</sup> two hundred and ten; making one hundred and twenty seven verbs more.

30. The Propositions ~~the beginning~~ are transferred from the Syntax to their proper place, in Ontology; but instead of allowing them but three pages and a half, he has given eight and a half pages to them. See pages 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210

31. To the "Propositions in Composition," which are treated so slightly in the Edinburgh and Gould's editions (occupying but one third part of a page) the ~~beginning~~ <sup>said to be</sup> has devoted particular attention, giving to them more than three pages; as will be seen by reference to pages 210, 211, 212 & 213.

32. The "Significations of Words" under the head of —

1. "False Significations not to be adopted" and —
2. "to facilitate" the knowledge of the true <sup>succeeding</sup>

"meaning of words" is entirely new. See pages 215, 216, 217, 218 and 219.

33. The four paragraphs on, page 221, occupying nearly thirty lines upon simple and compound sentences, are entirely new.
34. The four observations under Rule 18th occupying 16 lines are also new.
35. The observation 19, under Rule 2nd, on page 223 occupying 8 lines is also new.
36. The three observations (16, 17, 18) under Rule third occupying 17 lines are also new.
37. The observation 25 under rule 4th occupying five lines, is also new.
38. The five observations (34, 35, 36, 40 & 41) occupying 18 lines are also new.
39. The observation (51) under Rule 7th occupying 9 lines is also new.
40. The observation (58), under Rule 8th of 8 lines is also new.
41. So also the following observations are entirely new and not to be found as they ~~dependant~~<sup>dependent</sup> ~~very~~<sup>very</sup> believe, in any any other edition of Adams Grammar; vizz :

 The observation (64) under Rule 9th of 6 lines,
 the list of adjectives that are followed by a noun
 (173) under Rule 10th of 84 lines on two pages.
 The three observations (76, (81, 8182) of 29 lines
 under Rule 11th - the two observations (99) (100) of 13 lines under Rule 13th - the three observations (108, 109, 110) of 19 lines, under Rule 15th - the seven observations (121, 122) (123), (130), (131), (132) & (134) of 220 lines, under Rule 17th - the three observations (136) (137, 138) of 26 lines under Rule 18th - the observation (146) of 3 lines under Rule 19th, a part of the observation (148) of 4 lines under Rule 20th - the greater part of the observation (181) of 8 lines under Rule 21 - the observation (182) of 4 lines under Rule 22 - the observation (161) of 5 lines under Rule 23 - the two observations (183, 184) of 8 lines under Rule 27 - the two observations (187, 188) of 30 lines under Rule 28 - the two observations (220), (221)
 of 12 lines under Rule 30 - the two observations
 (223, 228) of 13 lines under the two observations (254)
 (255) of 9 lines under Rule 38 - the two observations
 (256), (257) of 18 lines under Rule 40 - the observation (277) of 4 lines under Rule (41) the Rule
 (42) and (43) of 9 lines - the five observations (342), (343), (344), (345), (346) of 65 lines under Rule 56 - the observation (377) of 9 lines under under Rule 62.

The defendants aver, that

- ✓ ~~That~~ it will be seen, that while Gould's edition has but about 30 lines more in the Syntax than are in the <sup>said Philadelphia</sup> Columbiough Edition, ~~the edition of the~~ Syntax contains about seven hundred lines more than any other ~~edit~~ one. And in addition to all this, the <sup>said Cleveland</sup> ~~Columbiough~~ has numbered every paragraph in the Syntax of his edition, to facilitate reference.

42. The appendix to Syntax (to be found in Selanus's Grammars and in Gould's without alteration) containing verbs with their meanings, the ~~Latin~~ <sup>said Cleveland</sup> has entirely rejected being ~~in its statement~~ altogether useless and out of place in a Grammar.

43. Under Figures of Syntax the ~~Columbiough~~ <sup>said Cleveland</sup> has added to his edition the observations 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406 & 407 on pages 288, 289, and 290 consisting of 88 lines.

44. Under "proverbs" the ~~Columbiough~~ <sup>he</sup> has added observations 17, 21, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 77, 80, 96 & 120

45. Besides this he has greatly enlarged the meter of Horace and the different kinds of Latin Verbs to be found on pages 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324

830 and 331. —

46 - The Defendants further ask leave to submit to the Court here, the following facts, viz: —
the following facts First that while there are not as they believe two consecutive pages of new matter in Gould's edition of Adams Grammar until within four pages of the Appendix that is to say from page 9th to page 27th there are in the <sup>said Philadelphia</sup> ~~Philadelphia~~ edition the following four consecutive new pages on nouns — pages 48, 49, 50, 51st, <sup>two</sup> in pages 63 and 64, <sup>fifty three</sup> pages in the verbs from page 12th to page 17th. <sup>two</sup> more or pages 194 & 195 eleven and a half in the prepositions, on pages 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213 <sup>four</sup> on the signification of verbs on pages 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, and <sup>four</sup> in the Syntax on pages 243, 244, 245, 246.

- Second; that while there is not the slightest addition to the old Edinburgh in Gould's edition from page 119 to 164 by which the hundreds & hundreds of errors in that grammar are perpetuated, there are in the <sup>said Philadelphia</sup> ~~Philadelphia~~ edition, under the same subjects, seventy three pages of entire new matter — Third; that while the edition of Gould, in the whole Syntax is the same as the old Edinburgh to the words with the exception of about thirty lines, there are ~~the former~~ <sup>the latter</sup> but added about ~~several~~ hundred lines & the said Philadelphia <sup>said</sup> ~~edition~~

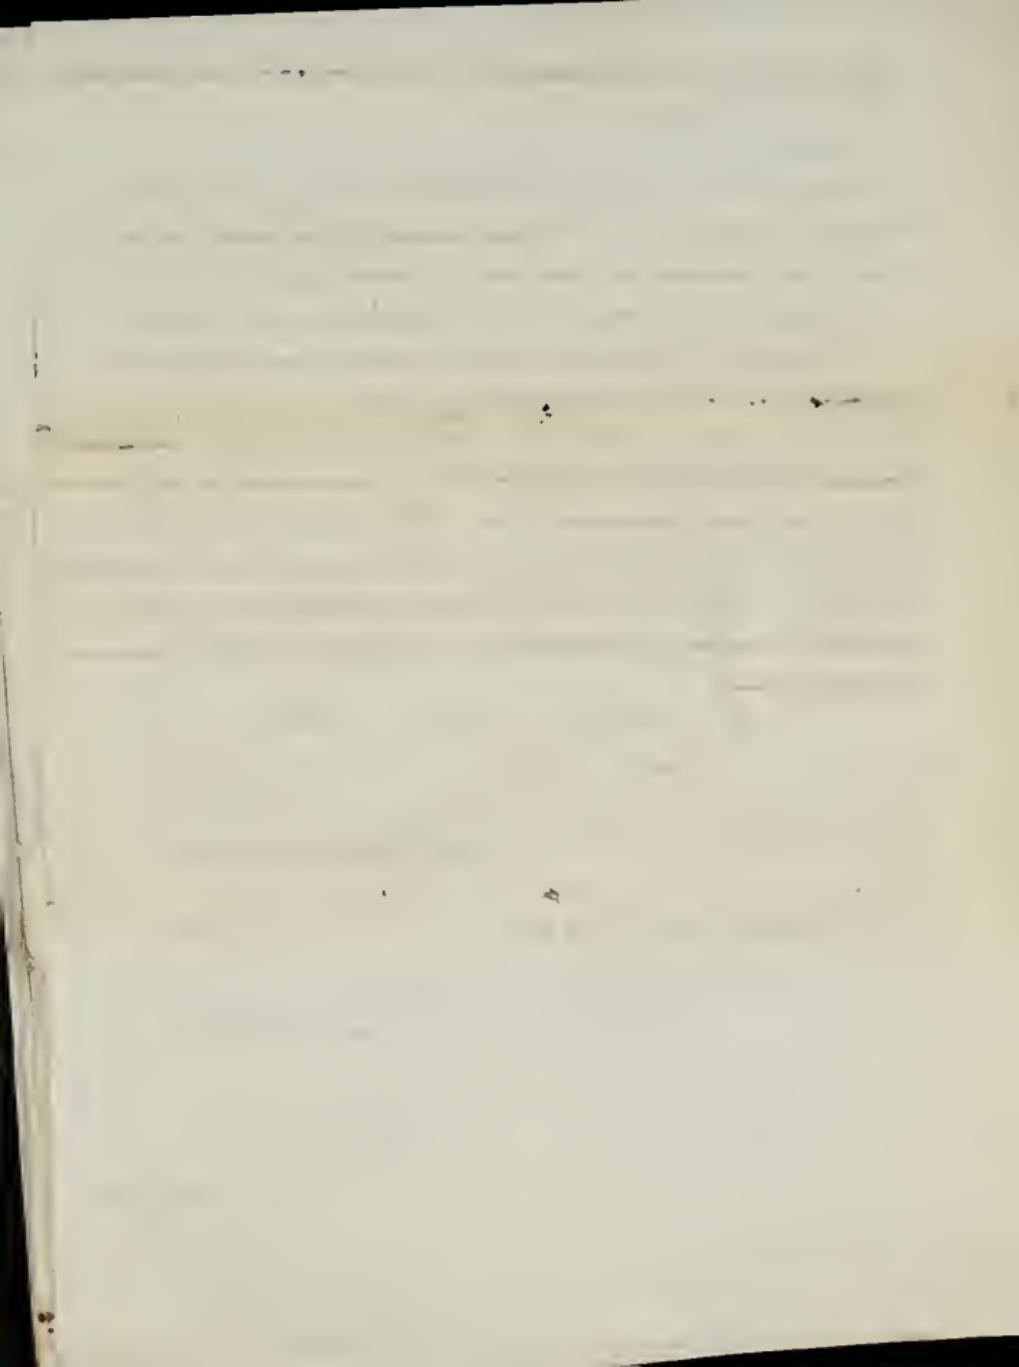

B hundred lines to the ~~in~~ in Philadelphia

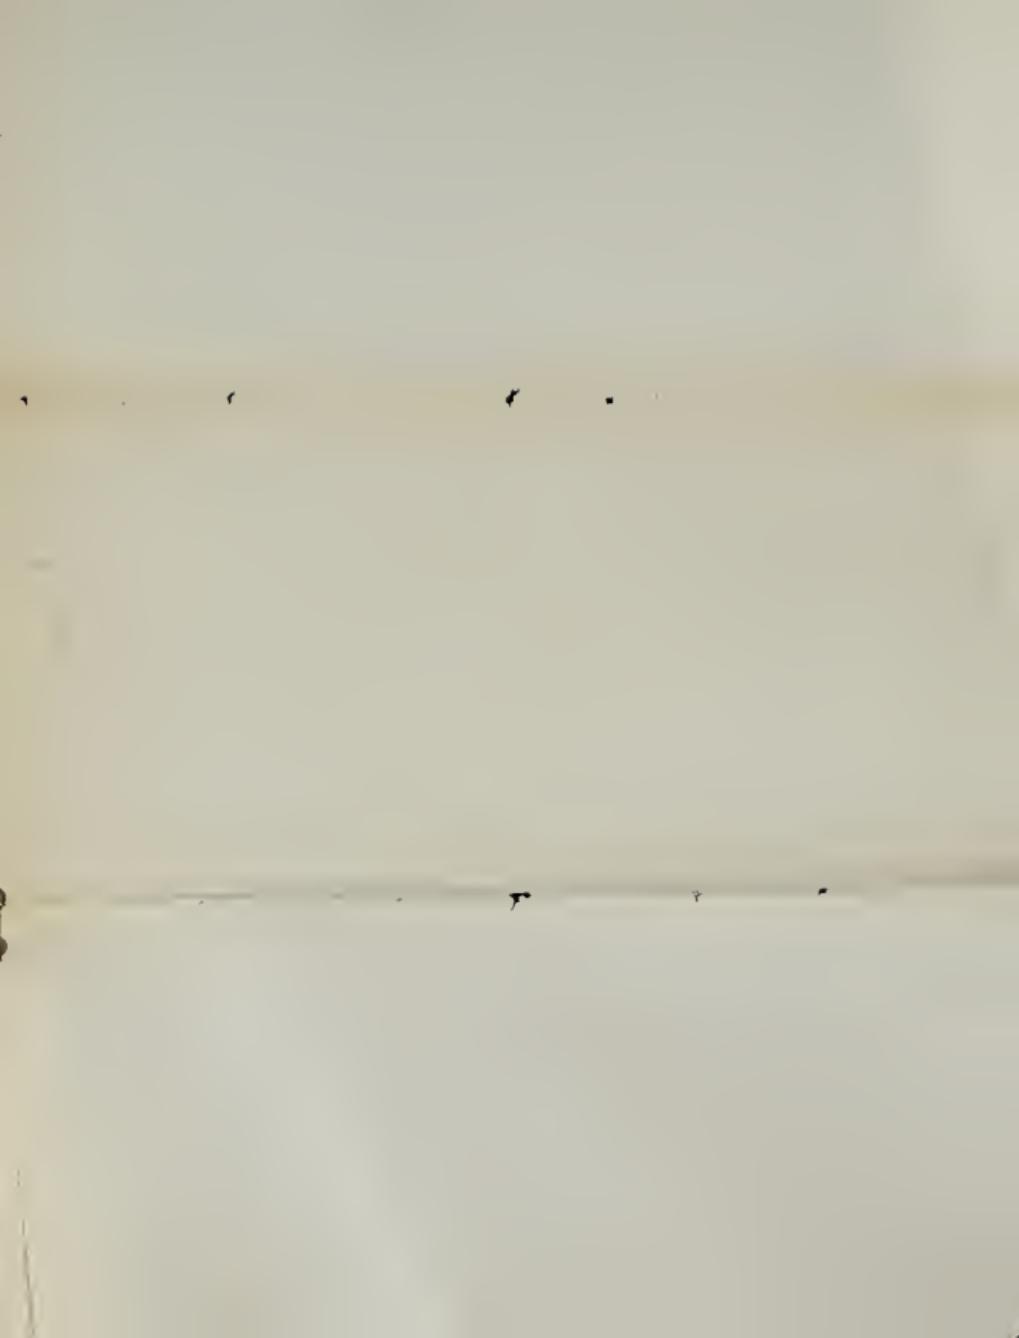

In conclusion the subscriber would only say, that he considers Adams's late Grammer in the light of a classic, and he trusts the trial will convince all who may be & follow in the United States will have the exclusive privilege of publishing editions of the classical authors that the time will come when it shall be decided that the best at the affright of any author has been published and therefore that there can be no improvement that there must be no intention made at it. If such should be the decision he inevitably intend would be the prospect of the rising generation.

All which matters & things these Defendants are ready & willing to answer, maintain or prove as this honorable Court shall direct; ~~and do hereby acknowledge~~
