WURLITZER Organs dominate the broadcasting field

The outstanding leadership of the famous Wurlitzer Organ among the finest theatres in America is everywhere conceded. Wurlitzer prestige now extends to all parts of the world. The same recognition of superiority accorded the Wurlitzer Theatre Organ is also conceded to the Wurlitzer Residence Reproducing Organ, the Wurlitzer Church Organ, the Wurlitzer Auditorium Organ and the Wurlitzer Broadcasting Organ—each a masterpiece in construction and tonal beauty—each type of organ distinctively designed for each individual installation.

Motion Picture Headquarters

1927 A Year of Accomplishment Unparalleled in Motion Picture History

January

— WHAT PRICE GLORY breaks box-office records at $2.00 admissions.

February

— Ground broken and construction started on new $3,000,000 improvements at Fox Studios in Hollywood and Fox Hills, California, paving the way for the $100,000,000 picture-making program in next five years.

March

— William Fox acquires the Roxy, world's largest and finest motion picture theatre, to provide worthy outlet for the new quality pictures issuing regularly from the Fox Studios.

April

— LOVES OF CARMEN, with Dolores Del Rio and Victor McLaglen, completed under direction of Raoul Walsh.

May

— 7TH HEAVEN, directed by Frank Borzage, has world premiere at Carthay Circle Theatre, Los Angeles, and establishes two new stars, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell.

June

— THE COCK-EYED WORLD, by Laurence Stallings is announced for production by Raoul Walsh to continue the amorous adventures of Sergeant Quirt and Captain Flagg.

July

— Movietone developed by Fox-Case adds incredibly realistic sound to the films, with demonstration of Lindbergh film at the Roxy.

August

— Greatest weekly gross of any motion picture theatre in the world taken in at Roxy with $144,267.30 in 7 days of WHAT PRICE GLORY.

September

— Winfield Sheehan signs exclusive contracts with Carl Mayer, author of THE LAST LAUGH and CALIGARI, and with Henri Bernstein, Europe's most distinguished dramatist, whereby both will write dramas for production at Fox Studio.

October

— THE DOLLAR PRINCESS, BLOSSOM TIME, MOTHER KNOWS BEST, HONOR-BOUND, SPEAKEASY bought for production as Fox super films.

November

— F. W. Murnau begins production of THE 4 DEVILS with Farrell Macdonald, Charles Morton, Mary Duncan, Nancy Drexel and Barry Norton.

December

— Fox Movietone Newsreel inaugurates weekly release of current events that you can hear as well as see.

— the One Great Independent

1928 A Year of Stability Insuring Continued Fox Success

January

—New Year brings new era in sight and sound divertissements with twelve Fox Movietone Entertainments ready for release and a series of condensed versions of musical comedies in Movietone production.

February

—FOUR SONS reveals John Ford playing on the heart strings of the world in the epic drama produced from the story by Miss I. A. R. Wylie.

March

—Frank Borzage does the impossible in excelling his magnificent 7th HEAVEN with the new Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell love lyric, THE STREET ANGEL.

April

—With $750,000 spent in production, MOTHER MACHREE completely justifies exhibition delay in demonstrating that it is one of the most emotionally powerful pictures of all time.

May

—Fox sales forces meet at New York convention for advance showing of greatest line-up of pictures ever produced for a year's entertainment.

June

—Smart exhibitors banish all worry for a year by contracting for 52 Fox profit pictures, including five of demonstrated road-show calibre.

July

—Movietone installations in hundreds of theatres provide the box-office pulmotors which theatres everywhere are demanding.

August

—August heat is intensified by the torrid FAZIL, with Greta Nissen stimulating both Charles Farrell and box-office receipts.

September

—General release of SUNRISE brings long-awaited Murnau production to startle and delight appreciative audiences.

October

—Broadway cabarets and the gay life are stripped of their glamor in the melodramatic sensation SPEAKEASY, from the play by Edward Knoblock.

November

—Dolores Del Rio and Charles Farrell rise to new dramatic heights in Raoul Walsh's production THE RED DANCER (of Moscow).

December

—With five tremendous specials in production, including BLOSSOM TIME, THE MUD TURTLE, MOTHER KNOWS BEST, THE DOLLAR PRINCESS, and THE COCK-EYED WORLD, supremacy of Fox Films in 1929 seems assured.
Ride along with Fox for another happy new year!

I have just seen Tiffany's portrayal of "Wild Geesse" and am losing no opportunity to express my pleasure in viewing the picture.

It is exceptionally clean cut and follows the story with a faithfulness quite unexpected. The characterizations of Belle Bennett as Amelia Gare, and Eve Sothorn as Judith, are perfect. Russell Simpson makes a thoroughly hateful Caleb, while Donald Keith is as thoroughly lovable in the role of "Sven Sandbo."

Sincerely yours,

Walter Colman

WHOLE VOL. 90, No. 1. (VOL. 32, No. 4) JANUARY 7, 1928

The Consolidated Publication

WITH this, the first issue of the New Year, the consolidated publication—EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD—makes its bow to the industry. Thus, auspiciously, at the opening of another calendar term our renewed and fortified effort to serve effectively and thoroughly the motion picture industry is launched.

The consolidation of these two leading motion picture trade papers is a thoroughly sound and logical development. The motion picture industry has definitely advanced out of its earlier status and earlier characteristics. It has become solidified and entrenched. It has achieved an adjustment of its affairs which makes for a higher degree of efficiency and a higher degree of accomplishment. It has arrived at a point where thoroughly sound and competent effort only is welcomed.

A trade publication, in order to be able to discharge the responsibilities now being placed upon it, must be stronger and more able than even the best of those which have flourished in the past.

IN order to supply the industry with a trade paper of adequate strength, influence and circulation the merger of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD was devised. Under this merger there is not merely accomplished a combination of the individual resources and effectiveness of these two publications, because out of the merging there comes a new publication of new and greater advantages and influence.

The combination of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD realizes a goal which myself and my associates have been endeavoring to reach for nearly 13 years. This goal is a publication commensurate with the requirement of being able to serve effectively and appropriately the entire motion picture industry in all of its branches and and in all of its territories. And this goal is now reached in the consolidation of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

By joining together the circulations built up by these two publications in their many years of service to the industry there is effected an aggregate circulation which vastly exceeds the most hopeful expectations of any other publisher in the history of motion picture trade journalism.

Through the merging of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD the consolidated publication has gained a circulation that literally encompasses the industry—a circulation that reaches virtually every theatre in the land and every person of importance in the industry outside of the theatre field.

The combination brings to the consolidated publication a fund of editorial experience and information, a personnel of proven ability and resources of every character that are adequate to insure that the progress of the past will be but a stepping-stone to the greater accomplishments of the future.

THE necessity for the building of fewer and stronger units to replace a greater number of lesser strength which has so markedly changed the complexion of the production, distribution and exhibition branches of the industry was bound eventually to have its influence upon the trade paper branch of the industry.

We are gratified indeed that it has been allotted to us to carry through successfully negotiations which have changed the complexion of the trade paper situation in keeping with the times. The industry demanded—and required—fewer trade papers and one at least of such calibre as to match the present standing and scope of the industry.

EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD is of such calibre. Its position in every important respect is supreme in its field and it is now enabled to serve every reader in a manner that is adequately in keeping with what should be expected from a publication in that position.

Our publication policies have had the sanction of the industry as well as the sanction of the industry's approval, so it will now only be necessary to record that there will be no deviation from those policies which enabled our former publication effort to achieve leadership in the field.

We are well-aware of the responsibility which attends the launching of a publication of the plan and scope of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD in a trade of such vital significance as the motion picture industry. And it shall be our unwavering determination to meet this responsibility four-square in every particular. The influence of the leading motion picture trade paper upon public relations, upon the public's attitude toward pictures through its contact with and effect upon newspapers and magazines, and upon legislation, is a matter of no little importance. In this vital regard, also, EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD will seek zealously to discharge its full responsibility.

We wish here to thank those persons throughout the length and breadth of the industry whose kindly felicitations concerning the merger have reached us. We wish particularly to thank Mr. Will H. Hays whose constructive suggestions and encouragement have had no small influence upon the developments which have led to the consolidation of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

And, finally, we record again our pledge that EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD will remain unwaveringly committed to the highest ideal of service to the motion picture industry in all of its branches.

—MARTIN J. QUIGLEY

Trade Hails Publication Merger As Greatest Step to Progress

Radio Corp. In Combine With F B O

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. — The Radio Corporation of America and associated companies, the General Electric Company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, have acquired a substantial interest in F B O Pictures Corporation, according to announcement today by Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O.

Negotiations were concluded by Mr. Kennedy and David Sarnoff, vicepresident of the Radio Corporation. Two representatives of the Radio Corporation of America and the General Electric Company will become directors of F B O.

This announcement is of astounding importance to the motion picture industry because the affiliation opens to motion pictures for the first time the tremendous resources and potentialities of the radio.

The arrangement will give the motion picture industry the use of all present patents and prospective developments of sound reproduction and synchronization, radio broadcasting and television of the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric Company and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

This will bring to the motion picture business the services of powerful engineering organizations of the three greatest electrical companies in the world and the directing energies and resources of their laboratories toward the perfection of every phase of apparatus and equipment and to the exploration of new fields of electrical research in conjunction with motion picture production and exhibition.

The first important development of the combination will be the presentation of a new method of sound reproduction and synchronization, which has been perfected by General Electric.

Congratulations Pour In From All Parts of World

High Tension of Exhibiting Made Consolidation of Publications Imperative, Says One Well-Wisher

The announcement made last week of the merger of the two leading business papers in the motion picture industry, "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World," created a sensation in film circles in this country and abroad.

Bringing together as it did the only two film papers which are members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, the entire industry hastened to express approval of this amalgamation which has established contact for the advertiser with the most complete buying market offered by the business press of the picture industry.

In the flood of cablegrams, telegrams and letters which have been received and are continuing to arrive as this first issue of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" is going to press, the industry's most prominent representatives speak of the merger as the most laudable and constructive ever effected by this industry's business papers.

Theatre owners, realizing the wider scope of service which the merged publication will be in a position to render, have hailed the amalgamation as the outstanding development, beneficial to the exhibition field, in the business paper branch of the film industry.

The high tension of exhibiting pictures today, said one prominent exhibitor, "makes it imperative that the trade paper field be covered in a compact manner."

Advertisers (producers and distributors, stars, directors, scenarists, cameramen and other studio technicians) see in the merger a movement of far-reaching importance and bearing directly upon the industry's rapid development toward more sound business and economical methods.

"Now," said one distributor and producer, "we can buy our advertising on a business basis as advertisers in other fields do."

The announcement of the merger, so closely had it been guarded, came as a great and welcome surprise to the industry in general, and as the outstanding news event of the closing days of 1927. The industry, though the time was ripe for this far-reaching development, did not expect it, and this served to accentuate its importance, as is attested in the scores of congratulatory messages published on the following pages.

"Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" with this issue incorporates in its pages the manifold services which have been published heretofore in the individual publications, "Exhibitors Herald" and "Moving Picture World."

Now Turn the Page

"Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" regrets that scores of congratulatory messages arrived too late for publication in this issue. Those not appearing on the following pages will be published in succeeding issues.

Editor and Publisher,
Exhibitors Herald

I hasten to congratulate you on the consummation of the merger of "Exhibitors Herald" with "Moving Picture World." I regard this achievement as a great forward step in our industry—one bound to contribute much, indeed, toward the solution of those certain heretofore difficult problems in the business of motion pictures with which you have been so familiar.

"Moving Picture World" takes us virtually to the beginning of pictures—the days of the nickelodeon and the one reel feature. What a span 21 years covers in this fast moving industry! What a contribution to education and entertainment motion pictures have become! And during all of that period of pioneering and accomplishment the "Moving Picture World" has been striving for the realization of those ideals that make work and living really worth while.

The progressive and aggressive attitude of "Exhibitors Herald" has always appealed to me. I have long appreciated its splendid position and useful service in the publicity phase of this great industry and it is the source of much gratification to know that this welding of forces, represented by these two great publications, was your accomplishment.

Under your management and direction this consolidated journal will continue to be, I am sure, a still greater influence for betterment.

With kindest personal regards and best wishes always.
Will H. Hays.

From E. W. HAMMONS

Martin J. Quigley,
Editor and Publisher,

There is no question in my mind that, in effecting the merger of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World," you have accomplished a fine service to the industry. Combining the old established prestige of "Moving Picture World" with the aggressiveness and virility of "Exhibitors Herald" should bring about the publishing of a trade magazine that will be of greatly increased service to, and influence on, the motion picture business.

The new "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World," reaching a vastly greater audience of exhibitors, has a finer opportunity and a bigger responsibility in informing, educating, leading and inspiring them. Its ability to serve the advertiser, whose pages after all carry the most important news of the business, should be correspondingly increased.

Your own splendid record of achievement in the past is the best evidence that you will be equal to this new call to service, with its new and bigger obligations and responsibilities. We wish you the most complete success with the new "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World," while congratulating you upon bringing about this merger.

E. W. Hammons.

From IRVING SAMUELS

Martin J. Quigley,
Editor and Publisher,

I am just in receipt of your announcement with reference to the consolidation of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" and I want to take this opportunity of congratulating you on what I consider a very significant move in the trade paper field.

For one with no interest in trade papers except as an advertiser and reader, I believe I have used (probably wasted) more conversation and arguments in favor of just such a consolidation than any one else in the industry. My previous training had been in the electrical field and I had seen the gradual absorption of practically every publication in that industry by the Electrical World and its publishers, the McGraw-Hill Company. In every case it was a fortunate and beneficial move for all concerned and has resulted in one outstanding publication for every branch of the industry. For instance, instead of perhaps five or 10 separate publications in the operating and business end of the industry, we now have the Electrical World which covers everything much better than it was ever covered before and has almost reached the position of the New Testament in authority.

You have made the initial step and you are to be congratulated for your foresight in doing so.

However, I hope this will be rather the beginning than the end and that other publications will come into the fold so as to present to the readers and advertisers one strong, authoritative and well-entrenched publication that can properly and fearlessly present all of the news and all of the developments of this mighty industry.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Last week was "Children's Paradise Week" at the Capitol. Each morning 100 youngsters from various settlement houses and welfare organizations were admitted free, and Thursday morning the whole house was thrown open to the Child's Welfare League, for the annual special Christmas show.

Paramount in the Land of Cheops

NEARLY 5,000 years ago the Pharaoh Cheops built the first Pyramid, and it has endured a symbol of Egyptian culture. Then the path of progress passed beyond the Nile, and to modern Civilization, Egypt is a land remote, remembered for her past. Yet her 4,000,000 people make Egypt a fair field for Western commerce, and as one result, proud Pyramids of dead Pharaohs stand not far distant from glittering palaces of the motion picture.

To the theatres of Egypt, pictures are distributed largely by camel. Above is shown a Paramount cargo leaving the Cairo film vault.

Admission Tax Bill to Be Delayed Until April 15th or Later

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The net result of the radical tax cuts made by the House of Representatives in passing the tax reduction bill will be to delay application of the increased exemption for admissions until April 15 or later, it is indicated by correspondence between Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, chairman of the Senate finance committee, and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

"On the assumption that a tax reduction bill will become law at the present session of Congress, delay will occasion no loss to the taxpayers, or inconvenience either to them or to the Government from an administrative standpoint," Secretary Mellon commented.

Emily M. Stevens, Screen and Stage Actress, Dies After Dose of Narcotic

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Emily M. Stevens, actress, was found dead in mysterious circumstances Monday in her apartment here. The report of detectives, entered at police headquarters five hours after the body had been found, declared she had died of an overdose of narcotics.

Dr. Milton J. Wilson was summoned to the apartment. He notified the medical examiner's office and detectives were assigned to investigate.

Dr. Wilson was one of several physicians and specialists who had been treating the actress for some time. For several years she had been a victim of nervous disorders. On Sunday, it was said, she had suffered a nervous attack.

Miss Stevens was 42 years old and a niece of another popular actress, Mrs. Minnie Madern Fiske. She was born in New York City.

Besides acting in a number of stage plays, including "Within the Law" and "The Unchastened Woman," she appeared in films for the World Film Products Corporation and other independent producers.

Slash in Salaries of Ontario Censors Considered, With Restriction of Authority Proposed in Legislature

ALBANY, Jan. 4.—Condemnation of motion picture censorship was sounded in emphatic language by Governor Alfred E. Smith in presenting his annual message to the 200 members of the New York State legislature at noon today.

Ideals Trodden Under Foot

The governor's message was approximately 35,000 words, probably the longest ever delivered by a governor of New York state, in addressing the legislature upon its opening day. It was his eighth, and in his own words "the last annual message," which he will present.

Relative to motion picture censorship, Governor Smith said:

"In the hectic days following the close of the war, under the false impression that we were protecting the ideals of our government, some of them were trodden under foot. In the mad rage for what was thought necessary for our protection, we attempted to throttle freedom of speech. The sanctity of the field of education was invaded, by requiring private schools to be licensed by the state in order that we might censor the doctrines taught by them.

"A censorship over moving pictures was set up and permitted an agency of the state to condemn before the fact. We were on the high road to the ruthless trampling down of the rights of minorities, forgetting that we had upon our statute books abundant laws for the punishment of those who either by act or by speech threatened the upheaval of the orderly processes of government.

"But the sound, well groomed commonsense of the rank and file of our people demanded the repeal of these statutes in 1923, and they were removed from the statute books with my hearty executive approval just as the state was entering upon the greatest era of prosperity in its history.

Demands Censor Bill Repeal

"One, however, still remains, and that is the state's censorship of moving pictures. While I am satisfied that it should be removed from the statute books, I am equally satisfied that the state should proceed with all the force and vigor it can bring to its command with the prosecution of anybody who offends against public decency or pollutes the youth by the exhibition of improper or indecent moving pictures."

Wrigley Chain Theatre Move Is Denied; Builds Two Houses as Civic Enterprises

Rumors that William Wrigley, Jr., is entering the motion picture theatre field on a large scale were denied Tuesday in Chicago by P. K. Wrigley, son of the gum manufacturer, and S. C. Stewart of the Stewart-Davis Advertising Agency, Chicago representatives of the Catalina company which handles a number of projects on Catalina Island off California.

William Wrigley, Jr., owns stock in a theatre project at Lake Geneva, Wis., in which a number of others, including Sidney Smith, the cartoonist, with summer homes at the lake resort also are interested, but it is purely a civic enterprise to give the summer colony an up-to-the-minute theatre, P. K. Wrigley said.

Likewise at Catalina Island, William Wrigley, Jr., was instrumental in giving the resort city a modern theatre but this also was a civic move, Mr. Stewart declared. He denied that Mr. Wrigley was interested in having a chain of theatres, including the Teatro del Lago, atmospheric theatre in Chicago. Mr. Stewart added, "Mr. Wrigley is not in the theatre business."

Motion picture censorship became effective in New York state during the late summer of 1921, following passage of a bill in both houses which became one of the outstanding features of that year's session. With the convening of the legislature each year that has followed, unsuccessful attempts have been made to wipe motion picture censorship from the laws of New York state.

Nationwide Bearing Now

The censorship law has been generally regarded as a Republican measure, and for that reason politics has entered largely into any attempt on the part of Governor Smith toward eliminating censorship from the Empire State.

In view of the fact that Governor Smith is today a national figure and may become the Democratic party's candidate a few months hence for presidential honor, his declaration on motion picture censorship in this city today has a nationwide bearing.

Propose Pay Cut for Ontario Censors and Restricted Duties

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—There is a strong hint that the motion picture censorship situation in the Province of Ontario will undergo considerable change during 1928.

One feature that is to be considered by the Ontario government calls for a reduction in the salaries of the Ontario censors, cutting the chairman's pay from $3,500 to $3,000, and other members from $2,500 to $1,800, it is declared in government circles at Toronto. There is also a suggestion that the actual examination of moving pictures will undergo a change in that all subjects will not be submitted to the censor board.

Exhibitors Glad Patrons' Tastes Show Variety at Portland, Ore.

Some of Best Pictures Artistically Prove Poorest Financially, Summary of Year's Business Reveals to City's Showmen

PORTLAND, ORE., Jan. 4.—If any proof were needed that it takes persons with all sorts of tastes to make up this world, it would be found in the returns of the motion picture houses, whose managers are thankful that Portlanders do not all prefer the same type of screen entertainment—else some weeks the houses would be empty—and some film actors would be lost in limbo.

A BACKWARD glance at the large first-run houses—Rivoli, Broadway, Columbia, Liberty and Blue Mouse—shows that Portlanders have had opportunity to see some of the most important pictures of the year, and that some of the supposedly best features, artistically, have been the poorest financially. Indeed, it is almost surprising to the managers when a film they consider "wonderful" has a favorable box office response.

A cross-section of the theatre taste in Portland is shown by the following returns for 1927 from the film houses whose managers have given a few hints as to what we may see in 1928: The outstanding picture at the Rivoli was "Chang," and this also proved an amazing financial success. "The Big Parade" was a "gigantic success financially" and is classed as one of the best attractions of the year. John Barrymore, as "The Beloved Rogue," did not draw, nor did Harold Lloyd's "Kid Brother," from a box office standpoint.

The Columbia theatre received the best reaction from the following pictures, which show that its patrons are diversified in their tastes: "The Way of All Flesh," "The Cat and Canary," "Flesh and the Devil," "Resurrection," and "Metropolis" and "Les Miserables" for two weeks. "Resurrection" ran three weeks in the heat of summer. For a single week's business, "Beau Geste" holds the record. Many patrons of this theatre have season tickets.

Comedy Favored at Broadway

A good box office return is received at the Broadway when the pictures feature Clara Bow, Richard Dix, Lon Chaney, John Gilbert, Richard Barthelmess or Colleen Moore. Comedy is the great favorite, and "The Callahans and Murphys" gave the largest financial return for any picture during 1927, with "Rookies" and "Two Arabian Knights" running close. Fanchon and Marco attractions, which accompany each program, have become larger in the last year. "My Best Girl" for Christmas week proved most popular.

The Liberty, after having been closed for many months, reopened in September on a new basis, with good vaudeville sharing equal place with motion pictures. Manager Rice has put in a number of innovations, including the Eight Liberty Girls, which have put the house on a better financial footing.

With "Don Juan," which was at the Blue Mouse beginning the latter part of March, was introduced the Vitaphone. "The Better 'Ole" had a five-weeks run, and "The Missing Link" ran two weeks. The Christmas offering was "Ham and Eggs at the Front," with Vitaphone and Movietone.

South African Circuit Begins Large Building Expansion Development Kinemas, Ltd., Now Has 15 Theatres; Will Have 22 by End of Year

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Kinemas, Ltd., which has begun the development of a theatre circuit and distribution in South Africa, has embarked upon a building program which will add three first run key city theatres to its circuit within the coming year. At present the company operates 15 theatres and a renting circuit; and the number will be increased to approximately 22 by the end of this year.

The largest of the new houses will be erected in Johannesburg at a cost of approximately $500,000 and a $400,000 appropriation has been made for a theatre in Pretoria. Another theatre is contemplated for Kimberley to cost $350,000. In addition to the first run theatres, four houses will be opened in the suburbs of Cape Town during April and another house will be added to the circuit in the suburbs of Pretoria.

Inspiration Gets Three-Year Franchise To Release Six Through United Artists

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.—Inspiration Pictures has been granted a three-year releasing franchise in United Artists, through an arrangement between Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, and Walter Camp, Jr., president of Inspiration.

Camp also has been voted a member of the board of directors of the Art Cinema Corporation, which is a film financing organization headed by Schenck and affiliated with the United Artists Corporation.

During the life of the franchise Inspiration plans to release at least six productions through United Artists, according to J. Boyce Smith, treasurer and general manager of Inspiration. On the West Coast Victor and Edward Halperin head the first unit to produce in conjunction with Inspiration and release through United Artists. The Halperin brothers will function along the same lines as Edwin Carewe has during the past two years, being an associate producer with Inspiration. Both Schenck and Boyce Smith expressed delight at the arrangement.

Two Openings

Two openings last week brought the dress suit out of the newspapers where it is carefully housed against the moths. The United Artists opened one of its chain of theatres down on Broadway and had all the elite of filmdom there. John Barrymore spoke through "an inverted cuspidor," as he called the microphone, and "Our Mary" dedicated the house in a manner that delighted the fans. Then Al Jolson came to town to see "The Jazz Singer" (for the 50th time) at the Criterion. We saw the picture without the Vitaphone some months ago but Al's songs certainly add immeasurably to the picture's enjoyment with that device. And Coffee Dan's place came in for a great boost and everybody went over there afterwards to pound on the tables with hammers and order ham and eggs.

Talmadge Is Shifted to Butterfield Saginaw House

ADRIAN, MICH., Jan. 4.—Kenneth Talmadge, manager of the Crosswell and Family theatres in this city since the acquisition of the two local properties by the W. S. Butterfield interests, has received a New Year's present from his employers in the form of an assignment to the management of the new Temple theatre in Saginaw.

Talmadge came here the first of October and in the short time he has directed the operation of the two houses has established a number of new business records. He will be succeeded here by Ellsworth Hamer, who will take charge Sunday.

Bandits Return to Mainstreet; Flee With $10,000 Loot

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4.—Bandits do come back. At least they did at the Mainstreet theatre, and it cost the management $10,000, which represented the receipts of Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Two bandits recently kidnapped Taylor Myers, manager, and took him to the theatre in an attempt to force him to open the safe. Myers told the bandits there was a time-lock on the safe and that it would sound an alarm if opened. "We'll come back again," responded one of the bandits.

Monday night the bandits entered the business office while the show was in progress and, while a house full of patrons were getting a thrill out of a motion picture, the bandits walked through the long lobby and out into the street with the loot.

Loss $30,000 When Flames Raze Theatre; Two Houses In Northern N. Y. Opened

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Two new theatres were opened in northern New York during the past week, and one theatre was burned to the ground.

Robbins and Lumberg, of Utica, opened the Uptown theatre in that city December 29. Several from Albany's film row were present. The house cost $200,000, has a seating capacity of 1,600, and ranks as one of the finest residential district theatres in central New York. The owners are oldtimers in the business, Nate Robbins having been at the head of a chain of houses in Watertown, Utica and Syracuse, which he disposed of to the Schine interests. Lew Fischer opened his new theatre in Cambridge last week.

The Victory theatre in Newton Falls, operated by Leonard and Cheney, was totally destroyed by fire one night. The theatre was a part of a business block which included a general store and meat market. The loss was about $30,000. The origin of the fire is not known.

Texas Exhibitors Get Set For Best Exploitation Year

Theatre Owners, Queried on Plans to Increase Receipts in 1928, Disclose Many Business-Getter Ideas

(How can box office receipts be increased in 1928? This problem of the exhibitor, and how he intends to solve it, will be the subject of a series of special articles from all parts of the country. The following, from San Antonio, is the first of the series.)

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 4.—Exhibitors of Texas have some very intensive plans for increasing business in 1928. New ideas and many interesting business-getting plans will be applied by local managers.

Night Club Planned in Theatre

One of the newest projects to be inaugurated in San Antonio, it is rumored, will be the establishment of a night club in the basement of the Aztec theatre. Manager William Epstein plans to make this innovation a real business-getter—so they say. It is not known at the present exactly what plans are going to be used on this stunt, but that it will be started is practically a certainty.

William O'Hare, manager of the Princess theatre, San Antonio, a two-a-week house, says that his exploitation ideas will be limited to trick stunts and lobby hoakum. O'Hare is noted for his many interesting lobby displays. Recently, on various pictures, he has staged such stunts as cowboy roping exhibitions, lingerie sales, a display of San Antonio's first "Rough Rider"—an old horsecar—and many other attention-getting gags.

Centers on Newspaper Ads

E. J. Bresendine, Manager of the Empire, San Antonio, plans to make the best of his small advertising budget and devote his campaigns almost exclusively to newspaper and lobby exploitation. The Empire is a three-a-week house and responds more to this type of advertising than to any other form, as has been proved by many attempts to stabilize a patronage through other means.

James Owen Cherry, manager of the Metropolitan, Houston; E. R. Foerste, of Loew's State, and Eddie Breamer, manager of Interstate's Majestic, plan to exert a maximum amount of energy toward outside advertising, using one's, six's and twenty-four's. Houston probably is billed better than any other city in Texas and these three men will see to it in 1928 that theatrical bill posting in that city will not lose any momentum.

In Dallas, Al Mason, manager of the Palace, will interest himself and the theatre staff in public events and civic affairs, in 1928. Mason is extremely popular in the City of the Hour and whenever he becomes connected with any civic occurrence it is always successful from the theatre standpoint. Mason is noted for his ability to exploit the Palace successfully, where various other managers would be afraid to go in and tread.

Foreign and Civic Elements

Bob Blair, resident manager of the Texas theatre of San Antonio, will devote the greater part of the first half of 1928 to foreign element and civic organization exploitation. Blair and the Texas staff are now engaged in a tremendous and far-reaching campaign among the various foreign elements of San Antonio, including the Spanish, German and Italian. Plans now are being made to inaugurate a weekly society night at the Texas whereby members of the social set will be photographed and their pictures run on the screen and in the Publix Review, the thirty-page house organ of the Texas theatre. Civic organizations in San Antonio have always been good in cooperating with the Texas, and Blair says he will cash in on their friendship during the coming season.

Theatre managers of the South, when asked to state their plans for the 1928 season, are very general in their replies, very few having specific campaigns worked out in detail—but they all have come to understand, during the past year, that advertising is the medium that fills box office coffers. They all agree that the coming year will see radical changes in methods of exploitation and are all set to shoot the limit.

St. Louis Jews Protest "King of Kings" Tends to Increase Race Hatred, Is Claim

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 4.—The St. Louis Council of the American Jewish Congress has issued an appeal and resolution that "The King of Kings" be withdrawn from the screen on the grounds that "it is inaccurate and tends to intensify racial hatred."

A. Rosenthal, editor of the Modern View, the leading Jewish periodical of the Central West, in a leading editorial entitled "Commercializing Jesus Christ," also assailed the picture and in part says, "the truth is that the marvelous spectacle (for such it is) is a magnificent commercial venture, in which Jesus Christ is crucified twice daily at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m. (and the Jewish people as well) for the sole and specific enrichment of producers!"

Fox Prepares 100 Million Budget For Five-Year Film Program

Twelve Special Productions Each Season Planned—Soundproof Studios Finished for Greater Use of Movietone

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—One hundred million dollars is the amount to be spent by Fox Films on a five-year production program, the home office announced last week. This sum will include cost of plays, novels, short stories, originals, talent, directorial salaries and all production expenditures in the Hollywood, Fox Hills and New York studios.

BESIDES the big productions already completed for that schedule many other pictures are about to go into work under personal supervision of Winfield Sheehan, vice president and general manager.

Completed productions which are to be shown in "legit" theatres here include "The Street Angel," "Four Sons" and "Mother Machree." F. W. Murnau's "Sunrise," now showing at the Times Square in New York, Carthay Circle in Hollywood and Capitol in Berlin, will be given general release in August or September.

Other productions of this caliber now in work are "The 4 Devils," "The Red Dancer of Moscow" and "Hangman's House." Besides these, the following have been started or finished: "Fazil," "Mother Knows Best," "Speakeasy," "White Silence," "Pigskin," "Plastered in Paris," "Lipstick," "Don't Marry" and "The Dollar Princess." For the latter it is planned to use Movietone. Special soundproof studios already have been completed.

Twelve special attractions of roadshow rating are planned for each year, one to be released each month in the five coming seasons. Preliminary plans for the 1928-29 year are practically complete. For 1929-30 the three outstanding pictures will be "The Cock-Eyed World," with Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe; "Blossom Time," which probably will be made in Movietone, and "The Mud Turtle," which Murnau will direct. Murnau now is making "The 4 Devils."

Greater use of Movietone is to be a part of the enlarged program. The synchronization device now is being employed with a weekly newsreel and with regular issues of short entertainment.

Validity of Film Tax in New South Wales Argued

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Whether the New South Wales Act imposing an import tax on motion picture films is valid has not yet been answered by the high court, states a report from Assistant Trade Commissioner Chas. F. Baldwin, Sydney.

On November 25, by a majority, it ruled that it was impossible in the present state of the pleadings to make any conclusive order, and it gave the parties leave to amend the pleadings so that the case could be argued afresh. An injunction prevents the commissioner from proceeding on the film tax assessments.

Nine F-N Films Booked In Chicago for January

Nine First National productions have been booked into four theatres in Chicago in First National Month, which began Christmas Day and closes February 4. The theatres are the Chicago, Oriental, McVickers and Roosevelt.

It is stated from the home office of First National that the branch manager who wins first place in the sales drive will receive a loving cup and a trip to New York.

U-A to Acquire 4th Interest in Circuit of Great Britain Houses

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Arrangements have been made by United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., to acquire approximately a fourth interest in The New Standard Film Co., Ltd., a British company being organized to take over a block of shares representing control of Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd. The British group will hold a controlling interest, and is composed of Lord Beaverbrook and his associates, including Lord Ashfield, Sir William Jury, Major Andrew P. Holt and William Evans.

The circuit operates a chain of some 110 theatres embracing practically all the larger cities of the United Kingdom as well as the smaller cities. The circuit is steadily increasing the number of its theatres under a building program calculated to seat, a year hence, 1,750,000 persons every week. United Artists pictures have hitherto been regularly shown in the theatres of the circuit.

Police Force Blue Law on Toronto New Year's Eve; Forget It in Other Cities

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Police authorities in Toronto were rather severe in their attitude toward theatre managers in the holding of New Year's Eve celebrations. The order was issued that all theatres and dance halls were to be closed sharp on the stroke of midnight, December 31, and this order was carried out by police constables at the amusement centers.

A different situation prevailed in Montreal and other cities of Quebec, where the midnight shows ran well into the small hours without restriction. At Hull, Quebec, the performances at the Laurier and Eden theatres did not warm up until midnight, but continued then at a lively rate for two hours.

The authorities at Ottawa, Ontario, also allowed leeway with the result that the frolics at the Regent and Imperial theatres were conducted as arranged.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 4.—Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., is understood to have closed negotiations with Famous Players Lasky Corporation for an option on the $3,000,000 Missouri theatre and office building here. Skouras Brothers Enterprises has been operating the Missouri theatre for some time under an arrangement with Paramount whereby the profits of the Missouri and Ambassador theatres are divided on an equal basis.

The move probably indicates another step of the Skouras toward the consummation of the big merger with Wesco.

McNevin Entitled to Lease on Sipe House, Court Rules

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 4.—Judge John Marshall in circuit court at Kokomo, Ind., has refused to oust H. G. McNevin, owner of the lease on the Sipe theatre there in the suit of McNevin against George Sipe for possession of the house.

Comedy-Drama In Public Favor

Midwest Patrons Want To Laugh, Survey Shows

This Class and Straight Comedy Win Twice as Many Votes as All Others, Jenkins Finds

Middlewest audiences expect their theatres to drive away the rush and worry of the day's tasks with laughter, tinged—but only slightly—with drama. That is what the exhibitors and their box offices told J. C. Jenkins, field representative of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World.

Direct from Exhibitors

Knowing that there is only one infallible guide to public preference on the picture menu, and that is the ticket window, this publication is going direct to the theatre owner to determine, for the benefit of all branches of the industry—the maker and seller of productions just as much as the man who shows them in his theatre—exactly what type of picture registers most effectively in public favor.

It is the policy of the publication in determining patronage preference, whether it be regarding the picture, the star or the director, to go to the best possible source of information. That same policy of getting the most accurate data in the most complete form accounts for the frequency with which surveys are undertaken.

It is literally a house-to-house canvass which "Jaysee" Jenkins is making. And Jenkins found, in his returns from Indiana and Ohio exhibitors, that the exhibitors in those states have learned the same thing as did Northwestern showmen. Comedy-drama comes first.

Western Follow Comedies

Interest in comedy-drama is double that in the next highest class, and that, as you might guess, is straight comedy. Westerns run a close second to straight comedy, and Westerns consistently show their heels to straight drama in the canvass.

What may be most interesting, however, is the fact that comedy-dramas and comedies together are twice as popular as all other classifications combined, and among the latter, in addition to the Westerns and straight dramas, are costume plays, historical productions, war pictures, and action plays.

Here is the way the exhibitors rank them, in order of importance as the box office—infallible guide—reflects the patrons preference:

A. V. SEPPERT, Plaza, Dyersville, Ia.—Dramas, action plays, comedy-dramas, comedies, historical, Westerns, war, and costume plays.

REES CO., Gem, Plymouth, Ind.—Comedies, comedy-dramas, Westerns, action plays, war, dramas, costume plays, and historical.

ALBERT METZGER, Fairy, Knox, Ind.—Comedy-dramas, Westerns, dramas, action plays, comedies, war, historical, and costume plays.

CLAUDE DEARDAFF, Strand, Kendallville, Ind.—Comedy-dramas, Westerns, action plays, dramas, historical, comedies, war, and costume plays.

P. L. WERNER, Clarendon, Morocco, Ind.—Westerns, action plays, comedies, war, comedy-dramas, dramas, historical, and costume plays.

H. E. HART, Court, Auburn, Ind.—Costume plays, dramas, action plays, Westerns, war, comedy-dramas, historical, and comedies.

JOHN WOYTINEK, Hippodrome, North Judson, Ind.—Comedy-dramas, action plays, dramas, comedies, Westerns, war, historical, and costume plays.

E. JENSEN, Star, Wheatfield, Ind.—Comedy-dramas, action plays, dramas, comedies, Westerns, war, historical, and costume plays.

H. E. HOAG, Momenca, Momenca, Ill.—Western, action plays, comedy-dramas, war, historical, costume plays, and comedies.

C. W. MELSTER, Rialto, Plymouth, Ind.—Comedies, action plays, comedy-dramas, Westerns, war, historical, dramas, and costume plays.

L. J. DUNNING, Strand, Warsaw, Ind.—Comedy-dramas, Westerns, comedies, war, action plays, historical, and costume plays.

GUY LAUDERMILK, Fairy, Nappanee, Ind.—Action plays, Westerns, dramas, historical, war, comedy-dramas, and comedies.

O. J. LAMBROTTE, Tivoli, Mishawaka, Ind.—Westerns, action plays, dramas, comedies, war, historical, comedy-dramas, and costume plays.

HARRY E. LENER, Bucklen, Elkhart, Ind.—Comedy-dramas, Westerns, comedies, action plays, dramas, war, historical, and costume plays.

HARRY E. LERNER, Lerner, Elkhart, Ind.—Comedies, comedy-dramas, action plays, dramas, war, historical, costume plays, and Westerns.

EZRA RHODES, Castle, South Bend, Ind.—Westerns, action plays, comedy-dramas, comedies, dramas, war, historical, and costume plays.

R. E. YOUNG, Palace, Perrysburg, Ohio.—War, comedy-dramas, Westerns, comedies, action plays, dramas, historical, and costume plays.

W. B. HITCHCOCK, JR., Star, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—Action plays, Westerns, comedy-dramas, comedies, dramas, historical, war, and costume plays.

H. C. HENRY, Valentine, Defiance, Ohio.—Comedy-dramas, action plays, and comedies.

PETER RETTIG, Mystic, Galion, Ohio.—Comedies, action plays, Westerns, comedy-dramas, war, historical, dramas, and costume plays.

JAMES A. SMITH, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—Comedy-dramas, action plays, dramas, comedies, war, historical, costume plays, and Westerns.

OTTO J. MOTRY, Lyric, Tiffin, Ohio.—Comedy-dramas, Westerns, action plays, dramas, comedies, historical, costume plays, and war.

H. L. TRACY, Temple, Willard, Ohio.—Comedy-dramas, Westerns, war, dramas, action plays, comedies, historical, and costume plays.

Balaban and Katz Do Record Holiday Business

Over 700,000 people attended the Balaban and Katz theatres during the week of December 26-January 1.

This fact goes to prove that if motion-picture theatres have something worth while to present to the public, they will profit in direct proportion to the service and entertainment they are giving.

Balaban and Katz corporation says: "We appreciate with profound gratitude Chicago's confidence and generous co-operation, and it will be our aim at all times to continue to merit this approval."

Censors Turn Films Into Guessing Game For Houston Folks

HOUSTON, Jan. 4.—Censorship in South Texas is getting to be a great problem to exhibitors especially to those in Houston, where the censors are extreme in their moralistic views. In other parts of the state, censorship is having its say, but possibly not so obnoxiously as in Houston. Theatres in Galveston, Dallas, San Antonio, and Fort Worth have less interference.

The problem has attained such proportions in Houston that an appeal to the city commission by some theatre manager is almost a weekly occurrence. George Woods, city manager and head of the board of censors, is the technical chief only, the board being controlled by Mrs. C. Eggert. The board has gone beyond suppression of films, but has reached the point where prominent men are requested to submit a copy of any speech they intend to make in Houston for approval. A recent case of such action was that where Judge Ben Lindsay came to speak. He, however, went over the heads of the board and said what he pleased. The board in a published statement declared that the members had failed to attend the speech because they believed it would be degrading to the morals of the community.

Operator Badly Burned as Fire Starts in Booth

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 4.—James Souders, operator at the Idle Hour theatre, was severely burned about the arms and face when a fire started in the projection room. The fire damaged the room and part of the interior of the theatre. Souders was taken to the city hospital. The audience left the building in an orderly manner.

$60 Taken by Robbers At Greenville, Texas

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

GREENVILLE, TEXAS, Jan. 4.—Robbers recently took $60 from a desk drawer of the Opera House here, after they were unable to open the safe.

Chicago Bandit Binds, Gags Manager; Escapes with $2,000 Holiday Receipts

A lone Chicago bandit surprised Samuel Greenburg as he was counting his holiday receipts early Tuesday morning at the Alcyon theatre in Highland Park, a suburb of Chicago, and forced him to reveal the combination of the safe. Greenburg was found five hours later, gagged and bound in the wash room of the theatre. The bandit had escaped with the $2,000 holiday receipts.

After an examination, police stated they believed the bandit had secreted himself in the theatre during the performance.

Columbia Expands Production and Sales Staff for Year

Brandt, Back from Coast, Blames "Terrific Waste in Executive Overhead and 'Conference System'" for Excessive Costs

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Columbia Pictures points to the big screen names signed for the coming year as evidence of the fact that Columbia means business with a greater production and selling season for 1928-29.

STARS signed for next season include Jack Holt (for five additional productions), Lois Wilson, Hobart Bosworth, Bert Lytell and Claire Windsor. In the directorial field the following names have been added: R. William Neill, Edwin Mortimer, George B. Seitz, Edward H. Griffith and Frank Capra. Several screen writers have been annexed for the scenario department which is headed by Elmer Harris.

Huge Stage Being Added

One result of the expanded schedule is the decision to add to the facilities at the Columbia studio in Hollywood. Work is now under way on a huge stage.

Similar expansion has been undertaken in the sales department. Roy Alexander has been appointed associate salesmanager in the Chicago territory, as recently announced, and John Ragland soon will extend his West Coast branches. Three salesmanagers from another large company are joining Columbia. Frederick Shoninger now is representing the company in all of Europe.

Hits "Conference System"

Joe Brandt, president, who has just returned with Jack Cohn from conferences with Harry Cohn at the studio, blames "terrific waste in executive overhead and the 'conference system,'" for much of the excessive costs in production.

"Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been added to payrolls in Hollywood for 'unit supervisors' and production executives," Brandt declared, "and as a result pictures are costing more and entertainment values are growing less."

"Here's an incident that came under my notice that typically illustrates my point.

"A scenario was handed to a certain director, with instructions to shoot. In the course of production one of the actors suggested a bit of business not in the script. The director approved of it, but he was blocked because of a rule that the script must be shot as written. The director thought so much of the idea, however, that he asked for permission to change the script. This necessitated a 'conference.' Before the 'unit supervisors' could be assembled and the change O.K.'d, a half a day had been lost, entailing a tremendous expense in artists and technical help, who were kept waiting for the 'conference' to end.

"Columbia has no such pernicious conference system.

"Columbia will not retrench. We will spend more money in every branch of our business the coming season to give the public the best possible form of entertainment."

23 Players, 6 Assistant Directors Given Start by F B O Last Two Seasons

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Twenty-three young players and six assistant directors have been given their start by F B O in the last two years, says the home office. Among the players cited four stars—Tom Tyler, Bob Steele, Buzz Barton and Red Grange.

Ten young women given their first leads are: Adrienne Dore, Jola Mendez, Nora Lane, Gloria Lee, Sharon Lynn, Jeanne Morgan, Gene Stratton, Ann Sheridan, Lina Basquette and Marjorie Zier. Among the men are Hugh Trevor, Gordon Elliott, Michael Patrick, Cummings, James Ford, Sam Nelson, Jesse DeVorska, Ed. Brownell, James Pierce and Thomas Wells.

Assistant directors are: Wallace Fox, Louis King, James Dugan, Lynn Shores, Phil Carle and Alfred Raboch. Robert DeLacy became a director with Tyler's promotion to stardom.

Nolan to Build $100,000 House in Canadian Capital

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—P. J. Nolan, proprietor of the Rex and Columbia neighborhood houses in Ottawa, has announced that he will start the erection of a $100,000 moving picture theatre in the high class residential section of the Canadian capital, operations to be started in the near future. The new house is to be known as the Avalon.

Joseph S. Hebrew Honored

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—Joseph S. Hebrew, division manager for Warner Brothers, will be the guest of honor at a special dinner arranged by prominent exhibitors and exchangemen. It will be held Friday in the Crystal room of the Benjamin Franklin hotel.

Chicago Chosen as Meeting Place for Contract Committee

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Chicago has been selected as the place for the first meeting of the contract committee which is to draw up a new standard exhibition contract. The date of the meeting is set for January 31.

It has been generally expected that the meetings of these committees, one committee representing the theatre owners and the other the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, would be held in New York. The selection of Chicago came as a surprise to the theatre owners of New York district, most of whom are members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce. At the Federal Trade Practice conference the T. O. C. C. refused membership on the theatre owners' contract committee in the belief that the sessions would be held in New York and the T. O. C. C. would draft recommendations.

On learning of Chicago being designated as the meeting place, Sol Raives, president of the T. O. C. C., called a meeting of the board of directors and a protest was filed with Will Hays against holding the meetings outside New York. This protest evidently made no change in Hays' plans as it was stated today at his office that the plan for the Chicago meeting would stand.

Dan Michalove Goes to Pathe; Eschmann Quits Eastern Post

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Phil Reisman, general sales manager of Pathe, yesterday announced two important changes in the personnel of his organization. These are the resignation of Eddie Eschmann as Eastern division sales manager, and the appointment of Dan Michalove as Southern division manager. Both changes are effective immediately.

Warrensburg, Mo., Yields to Bluenoses as Battle Rages in Pittsburg, Kan.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4.—Warrensburg, Mo., has fallen a victim of the blue law fanatics and that town of 8,000 will have no Sunday motion pictures in the future. About one month ago Mrs. Charles Goodnight obtained permission from the city council to operate her theatre on Sunday. Then along came the blue noses in a parade of protest, and the prosecuting attorney said he would close all shows on Sunday.

It at first was announced that exhibitors would retaliate by filing complaints against other business houses which remained open on Sunday, but this week Mrs. Goodnight, around which the exhibition phase of the fight hinges, announced that she would close her theatre, the Star, on Sundays.

At Pittsburg, Kas., however, exhibitors are continuing to obtain warrants for all whose businesses run on Sunday.

6,000 "East Side" Boys See Show

NEW YORK.—Six thousand East Side boys, members of the Boys' Club of New York, attended a special performance at the New York Hippodrome recently, where "Legionaires in Paris" played the entire week.

Writer Warns That Blue Law Bill for Washington Has Good Chance to Pass

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Warning to the people of the Capital that it is entirely possible for the Lankford District Blue Law bill to pass the present Congress, was issued last week by the Washington Daily News, a Scripps-Howard paper, in a signed article by Ralph D. Palmer, staff writer. The writer points to the fact that in the last Congress, the McLeod subcommittee favorably reported a Sunday closing bill.

Dr. Joseph A. Themper, president of the national anti-blue law society, in urging public action, has declared that the Sunday closing lobbyists are too strongly organized to be ignored. The American Equity Association has joined the fight on the bill. Congressman Lankford again refused to debate the issue in a letter to the anti-blue law society.

Showman Beats Overseating Jinx

T. O. C. C. Moves to Offer Cooperation For Booking Bill

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—At a meeting of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce held at the Hotel Astor last Thursday resolutions were passed expressing the body's intention to cooperate with exhibitors and exhibitor organizations in an effort to have passed the bill concerning the general subject of blind and block booking which has been introduced into Congress by Senator Brookhart of Iowa.

A resolution was also made assuring Senator Brookhart of the body's unqualified approval and endorsement of his bill and its full cooperation in securing its enactment.

Johnstown, N. Y. House Is Destroyed by Fire Loss Totals $200,000

JOHNSTOWN, Jan. 4.—A 1,600 seat motion picture theatre here was burned to the ground on Monday afternoon with a loss of $200,000. The theatre was operated by William Smalley, head of a chain of houses in New York state.

The fire was thought to have caught from a defective pipe in the boiler room and broke out just before the New Year's matinee which would have been attended by a record breaking crowd. The theatre was one of the most beautiful in the Mohawk valley.

Texas M. P. T. O. Meets In San Antonio This Month To Review Trade Practices

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 4.—The annual meeting of the Texas M. P. T. O. will be held in San Antonio early in January, according to a letter from W. S. Waid, manager, to Sidney Kring, publicity director of the Chamber of Commerce. This will mark the first time the organization has met in San Antonio, and it is figured that a good representation will attend, owing to the central location and many interesting points of San Antonio.

Columbia's "The Warning" Wins Blue Ribbon Award

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

DALLAS, Jan. 4.—"The Warning" Columbia's latest George B. Seitz production, has been given the Blue Ribbon award for January by the M. P. T. O. of Dallas. This is the first time that an independent production has been the winner of this award since that organization started its selection of the best film released in its territory during the preceding month.

Pictures Triumph Over Blue Laws in New Jersey

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

IRVINGTON, NEW JERSEY, Jan. 4.—After having been in affect for over a year, the city's blue laws were disregarded here recently, and the town now has Sunday motion pictures.

One Seat to Eight Persons Is Kansas City's Problem

But Business Is Good Any Place If Exhibitors Will Make It So, Says Eisner—New Theatres Test Abilities

(Is your city overseated? If so, what to do? Conditions in key centers throughout the United States and Canada are being revealed in detail in this series.)

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4.—Kansas City is over seated, but—

Therein lies a story of "ifs" and "ands." President R. R. Biechele of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri was thumbing over some statistics. The facts were that there were few instances of an "up-and-up" exhibitor who failed to make a house pay.

60,000 Seats in Kansas City

There are approximately 60,000 seats in Kansas City, which means one seat for every eight persons. That that is too many seats for a healthy business condition to exist there is no doubt, but there are exhibitors in Kansas City today who are not operating large first run houses and who are experiencing good business.

Theatres built by private capital and later taken over by producing companies probably have done more to increase the number of seats recently in Kansas City than anything else. Yet there are few instances where an exhibitor is really putting on good programs and not making money—perhaps not much, in several cases, but, nevertheless, he is making money. The winter promises to witness some interesting developments.

New Theatre Hits Others' B. O.

A condition existing at Thirty-first street and Troost avenue, a suburban business district, is a typical example of what many Kansas City resident districts have experienced recently. There were three theatres—the Isis, Apollo and Bagdad—in that section. Then came the opening of the new Rockhill theatre with its modern cooling system and stage facilities. Business at the other three theatres dropped noticeably, despite the fact that all four houses put on programs from which there was little to choose.

What Will Happen Now?

The Rockhill was new and cool, hence the crowds went there, although the Rockhill is located at Forty-seventh and Troost. What will happen this winter? Will patrons living nearer to the other three theatres go a few extra blocks when a cooling system is not needed, provided, of course, that the programs at the theatre nearer them are up to the desired standard? That is a question which many Kansas City exhibitors are waiting to have answered them by the results at the box office these winter months.

Now the new $4,000,000 Loew's Midland palace has opened downtown, seating 4,000. What will happen to the Newman and Royal, Paramount houses, and the Liberty, a United Artists house, unless they counter with something unusual in the way of programs? The Garden theatre, downtown house seating 2,000, also is expected to open, adding that many more seats to the puzzle. It looks as if those eight persons are going to be kept mighty busy in filling that one seat, in the opinion of veteran exhibitors.

Kansas City long has been recognized as a city which will well support shows of merit, but many an "average" show has died an untimely death at the box office. Neighborhood exhibitors who are offering good pictures and a program of well balanced variety—not necessarily stage attractions—have been playing to good crowds since the cold weather came. A vote taken by the patrons of the Liberty theatre recently showed that they would rather have more and better pictures at a lower admission than have stage attractions, less pictures and higher admission price, according to Samuel Carver, manager. If that is a correct barometer, it apparently is not going to be a battle of stage presentations, but a battle of booking the better pictures, exhibitors believe.

However, it cannot be denied that the Newman Public stage shows have attracted a good percentage of the attendance at that theatre. Where there has been little to choose between pictures at various theatres, the stage shows usually have pulled in the business, according to box office figures at the Newman.

The Royal, which plays long runs on only the bigger pictures, time and again has seen box office lines on the second week's showing of a picture—and even the third week. In the opinion of Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas City, business is good any place in the city if an exhibitor will make it so.

DeMille Studio Will Make 43 Pictures For Release by Pathe in Coming Year

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Forty-three productions from the Cecil B. DeMille studio will be released by Pathe next season. Eighty stories, plays and books had been selected as potential material and 43 were retained by decision of the recent West Coast conference of Elmer Pearson, John C. Flinn, Phil Reisman, De Mille, William Siström, Hector Turnbull, William De Mille and Ralph Block. Pearson, Flinn and Reisman are returning to the Coast soon to complete details.

The program will include "The Godless Girl" and two other big productions, as well as at least two of similar caliber by James Cruze, including "The Red Mark," in which Nena Quartaro, new "find," is being featured.

N. Y. Motion Picture Club Seeking Rooms in Paramount Building

President Coolidge Sees "King of Kings" in Picture House—Chaplin's "Circus" to Make World Bow Friday—Rayart Film Applauded

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—A home in the new Paramount Building is now the objective of the Motion Picture Club of New York—provided suitable arrangements can be made with Adolph Zukor. And these suitable arrangements simply mean whether or not the 17th floor of the building can be secured at a rental rate within the means of the club.

WHEN the Paramount Building was erected the seventeenth floor was designed for club purposes, and as such lends itself admirably to the needs of the Motion Picture Club. The real estate committee has canvassed the entire Times Square district and has several good sites offered. The most desirable of these is the Paramount Building location.

At a meeting of the board of directors held last week a number of permanent committees were appointed, and one special committee. This latter was named for the purpose of calling on Zukor in an endeavor to secure for the club a home in the Paramount Building.

An entertainment committee was appointed at the meeting and authorized to make plans for a big dinner to be held by the club at some date in February. This will be the first official function and is expected to stir up a lot of enthusiasm. The personnel of the committee, which augers well for the success of any entertainment, is as follows:

William Brandt, chairman; Harry Reichenbach, Emil Jensen, Lou Blumenthal, S. L. Rothafel, Sime Silverman, Sam Dembow, Jacob Loeb, Jack Alicoate, Hugo Riesenfeld, and Victor M. Shapiro.

Following are the permanent committees appointed at the meeting:

MEMBERSHIP—Felix Feist, chairman; Arthur W. Stebbins, vice chairman; Arthur G. Whyte, Earle Hammons, Paul Burger, Arthur W. Kelly, Sam Spring, Lou Metzger, Lee Ochs, David Chatkin, and Walter Moore.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS—Nathan Burkan, chairman; David Blum, and William Seligsberg.

PUBLICITY—Paul Gulick, chairman; Jerome Beatty, Victor M. Shapiro, Paul Lazarus, Howard Dietz, John Spargo, and Herbert Cruikshank.

REAL ESTATE—David Chatkin and Lee Ochs.

FINANCE—Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman; H. D. Buckley, vice chairman; David Bernstein, H. J. Yates, and J. V. Ritchey.

In the discussion regarding dues and limit of membership, the following was adopted, based upon actual cost of a club site having a rental of not more than $25,000 annually:

First 200 applications accepted.....	$100
Next 100 applications accepted.....	$150
Next 100 applications accepted.....	$200
Next 100 applications accepted.....	$250

Dues are to be $150 per year, with the first year's dues paid in advance as the clubroom doors are opened. Each succeeding year dues are to be paid semi-annually.

President Attends Screen Theatre

What is said to be the first time a President of the United States has attended a motion picture showing in a darkened theatre was the visit President and Mrs. Coolidge paid last week to the National theatre in Washington, where the "King of Kings" was being shown. Many of the biggest photoplays to tour the principal cities with their own orchestras within recent years have been shown in the East Wing of the White House.

"Casey Jones" Wins Approval

"Casey Jones," the new Rayart production presented by W. Ray Johnston and Dwight C. Leeper, was accorded a hearty reception here at an advance showing at Wurlitzer Hall last week. The photoplay has been ably produced by Trem Carr. Charles J. Hunt directed it.

Here's New One—"Telemovies"

Something different in the way of an exploitation stunt was demonstrated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in connection with a special midnight showing of "Love," starring Greta Garbo and John Gilbert, at the Embassy theatre. The stunt was heralded under the name "Telemovies," and throughout the showing of the picture a word picture of the action on the screen was broadcast.

Tale of Peril Told By Eddy on Return From Pathe Rescue

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Clyde L. Eddy, veteran explorer of the Grand Canyon, who was called West to aid in the search for the party of 13 men of the Pathe-Bray expedition making "The Bride of the Colorado," and who has returned to New York, brings a story of harrowing hardships encountered. When Mr. Eddy, who is said to be the only person to have traversed the Grand Canyon at both high and low water, found that the river unit that started from Green River, Utah, had arrived safely at Lees Ferry, he joined them and continued over 100 miles of the most dangerous part of the river assisting in directing, and riding in the lead boat with the six that shot the dangerous rapids.

Director Elmer Clifton, and the featured players, John Boles and Donald Blossom, and other members of the cast, went down the Canyon from Lees Ferry as far as Badger Creek Rapids, one of the worst in the river. So rough was the current here and so jagged and dangerous the protruding rocks, that it was necessary to "line" the boats along the shore with ropes and carry the provisions overland along the river's edge. At a point in these rapids, Frank Dodge, a guide, while wading and clinging to the bow of the boat, was swept under the craft by cross currents and luckily came up at the stern, on which he got a hand hold and saved himself.

H. B. Franklin Textbook on Theatre Management Is Published by Doran

"Motion Picture Theatre Management," written by Harold B. Franklin, president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., is the title of a comprehensive volume just off the presses of George H. Doran Company, New York. Franklin, who organized the first Public Theatre Managers' Training School, dissects the problem of operation of a theatre from curb to stage and from dome to basement. The volume will be reviewed in detail in the next issue of BETTER THEATRES.

First Suburban Theatre Is Planned for Wichita

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WICHITA, KAN., Jan. 4.—Wichita's first suburban theatre will be erected by the Hartman Building Company and will cost $150,000 and seat 1,500 persons. There will be a full stage. Construction is to be completed by spring. The George H. Siedhoff company has the contract.

J. C. Hartman will be directing manager, the company directors being: H. J. Stockman, Chanute; H. A. Hamilton, Colorado Springs; Mr. Siedhoff, J. F. Dostal, Colorado Springs; Charles F. Smyth, Wichita; and Mr. Hartman.

Joe Gerbracht Marries As Yule Gift to Himself

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

DES MOINES, Jan. 4.—Joe Gerbracht, manager of theatres at Ames, Ia., gave himself the Christmas present of a wife when he was united in marriage Christmas morning to Miss Jennie Mitchell at St. Cecilia's Catholic church at 8:35 o'clock mass.

Mrs. Gerbracht has been assistant secretary and treasurer for the Ames Theatre company for the last eighteen months. Gerbracht has been in the theatrical business in Ames for seventeen years.

Some members of Educational's Cameo Comedy Company, posing on the set for Monte Collins' special benefit—if any. Collins (at right) is a new Educational comedian, though a veteran in the craft of laugh-making. Shown with him are Lucille Hutton and Jules White, director—besides the redskins.

Principally because he is a leading exhibitor we are indeed happy to introduce C. W. Deibel of Youngstown, O., to his fellow-showmen—but also because——he won this amazing array of trophies in fifteen years of golfing. Meanwhile, he was building and operating four theatres! Still, here are the trophies—and every one his without appeal to the board of arbitration.

Louis M. Boas, whose troubles never come singly. For L. M. has about a dozen theatres in his circuit in Eastern Massachusetts. (Photo by H. E. N.)

Timeless the quarrel of those who would dance for us and those who will think for us. Then let the dancing be done by Gilda Gray! It is Gilda arguing for the pleasanter cause in this scene taken from the United Artists production, "The Devil Dancer," in which she is starred.

In such a chamber might a queen close her ears for an hour to intrigue. It is the music room of England's Anne which Universal, as pictured above, has faithfully duplicated for "The Man Who Laughs," the Hugo classic starring Conrad Veidt, with Paul Leni directing.

Josephine Boria, Italian girl who became temporarily Russian to portray Steпка in Lyof Tolstoy's "The Cossacks," M-G-M's latest starring vehicle for John Gilbert.

It's a long lane, etc. . . . Or is it the worm that turns? Nevertheless, here are Dolores Del Rio, star, and Edwin Carewe, director, turned vice versa for the nonce in a bit of by-play while making United Artists' "Ramona."

Since 1899 Harry Asher of Boston has been a New England distributor. And now his company is Universal's only franchise holder in America!

A new contract, signed, sealed and delivered, insuring more M-G-M productions from the directorial hand of Clarence Brown (left). The good wishes are Associate Producer Thalberg's.

John Gilbert (left) and George Hill, star and director, respectively, of "The Cossacks," M-G-M production, waiting, as it were, on the steppes for more Russian business to start.

Gotham's "San Francisco Nights" will bring to the screen a new star in Hobart Cavanaugh, who has had the leading role in the Los Angeles cast of "Broadway," popular stage play. The photograph shows Sam Sax, president of Gotham (left), introducing Cavanaugh (center) to R. William Neill, director.

Country boy and girl at the meadow's end—a scene from Paramount's "Doomsday," showing Florence Vidor, the star, and Gary Cooper.

" . . . in every port." Yet there's ONE for weather foul or clear. These lovers are George O'Brien and Lois Moran in Fox's "Sharp Shooters."

Then in a garden of the rich . . . love may die—a scene from First National's "Sailors' Wives" with Mary Astor and Gayne Whitman.

Ten Box Office Stars Hard in Throes of Holiday Grind

Burr-Hines Starts "Chinatown"; Fox Starts "Square Crooks" and De Mille Starts "Hold 'Em Yale"; Luther Reed Completing "Hell's Angeles"

By DOUGLAS HODGES

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 3.—Ten stars of super excellence box office material are in the throes of picture making today and have been during the festive week just passed. Production, indicatively hard pressed, has also diverted studio chiefs' minds from their annual habit of holiday merry making.

The stars referred to appear herewith in a brief summary of their activities:

Colleen Moore	"Lilac Time"	F. N.
Harold Lloyd	"Speedy"	Par.
Clara Bow	"Red Hair"	Par.
Lon Chaney	"Laugh Clown"	MGM
Norma Shearer	"Actress"	MGM
Ramon Novarro	"China Bound"	MGM
John Gilbert	"The Cossacks"	MGM
Estelle Taylor	"Lady Raffles"	Col.
Rod La Rocque	"Hold 'Em Yale"	Pathe
Dolores Del Rio	"Red Dancer"	Fox

Harry Langdon's latest comedy, "The Chaser," has been completed and will be previewed shortly. Milton Sills is finishing work on "Burning Daylight" in which Mrs. Sills, Doris Kenyon, appears opposite him.

Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill are busy in "Lady Be Good" which Richard Wallace is directing for First National.

Boyd in De Mille Opus

William Boyd is working in "The Sky Scrapper" which Howard Higgin is directing at the De Mille lot.

Sally O'Neil and Margaret Livingston are principals in the Robert Kane production, "The Mad Hour," being filmed at First National.

The De Mille studios launched one picture during the holidays, "Hold 'Em Yale," which is under the able direction of E. H. Griffith.

Fox Begins Seiler Film

Fox Film Corporation began the production of "Square Crooks," a Lou Seiler production with Dorothy Dwan and Robert Armstrong.

"China Bound," a William Nigh picture, and "Laugh Clown Laugh" were begun last week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Hines Begins "Chinatown"

First National began work on "Chinatown Charley," a Burr and Hines production at the Tec-Art lot Dec. 29. Louise Lorraine was selected for the leading role opposite Johnny. Edna May has the second feminine lead in the picture.

Luther Reed is completing the direction of "Hell's Angeles" at the Metropolitan studios. Ben Lyon and James Hall have the two big male roles in the picture and will return to their regular studios in a few days.

Gunning Loses Suit for $750 Against Ralph Ince

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4.—Ralph Ince was given judgment last week in Superior Court when he was a defendant in a suit brought by Wid Gunning and Sig Schlager on an alleged debt of $750.

Blank Opens $400,000 Riviera at Waterloo, Ia; Will Present Publix Units

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

DES MOINES, Jan. 4.—The opening of the Riviera theatre at Waterloo, Ia., the evening of December 29 added another house to the string owned by A. H. Blank and his associates. The house has a capacity of 1,900 and is part of a theatre and office building costing $400,000. The Riviera will operate on a picture and Publix show policy.

In the party attending the opening were A. H. Blank, Harry David, and Miss Dorothy Day of Des Moines, and M. E. Snyder of New York, general manager of Publix productions. Herbert Grove, for several years manager of the Des Moines theatre in Des Moines, is managing the new house.

Mrs. Mack Wins Award In Suit on Actor's Death

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Charles Emmett Mc Nerney, widow of Charles Emmett Mack, Warner Brothers featured player, was awarded $5,000 benefit award and funeral expenses and a decision was handed down that the film company was liable for the death of an actor on location during the lunch hour.

Stunt Flier Dies from Injuries as Plane Falls

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.—Al Johnson, 28, film stunt flier and pilot for Caddo Company died Friday from injuries received at Glendale when his plane struck high tension wires and crashed to the ground.

Maria Corda Leaves F.N. Lot to Free Lance

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4.—Maria Corda, star of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," last week severed her connections with First National and determined to accept offers from other motion picture companies.

Betty Back to School

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4.—Betty Bronson, immediately upon the termination of her contract with Paramount, enrolled in the Marion Morgan School for Dancing. She will resume studies that she discontinued at the time Paramount placed her under contract in 1924.

Town Honors Champion Moving Picture Goer

CHEROKEE, IA., Jan. 4.—Mrs. Wilhelmina Alf, 85, who has seen 3,000 motion pictures in as many successive nights, is to be honored at a special celebration given by the town as a tribute to her feat.

In commenting on this an editorial in the Des Moines Evening Tribune-Capital says, "a generation or two ago there were fewer pleasures for men and women of Mrs. Alf's age and situation. On that count alone the moving pictures are entitled to a great deal."

Fox Gave 7 Players Who Win Contracts First Roles

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.—Seven of the sixteen players who have been given contracts after being placed by the Central Casting Corporation, were given their first opportunities by Fox.

Marjorie Beebe of Kansas City, first had a role in "Very Confidential;" Sue Carol of Chicago, in "Slaves of Beauty;" Dione Ellis of Los Angeles, in "Cradle Snatchers;" Caryl Lincoln of Oakland, in "Wolf Fangs;" David Rollins in "High School Hero;" Gordon Elliot of Kansas City, in "Arizona Wildcat;" and Pat Cunning of Santa Clara, in "Very Confidential."

"Truth" to be 1928 Motto, Declares B. P. Schulberg

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.—"The year 1928 will be a year of truth in motion pictures. Truthful, human stories—faithfully, carefully and truthfully told. It will be a year of artistic accomplishment and it will leave the screen absolutely dominant in the entertainment field." This was the declaration of B. P. Schulberg, associate producer of Paramount, recently, in discussing industrial changes for the new year.

"The year just closing saw the end of what the trade has come to call 'gag' comedies," also stated Schulberg.

Charlie Chaplin to Make Serious Film of Napoleon

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Charlie Chaplin will start filming his conception of Napoleon Bonaparte in April, 1928, as a serious production to be written, directed and produced by himself. He is seeking a man for the role of the emperor. Part of the film will be made in France, says Carlyle Robinson, Chaplin's personal representative.

Synchronization Biggest Development, Says Warner

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—"The year 1928 will make its greatest contribution to the motion picture public in the development of the Vitaphone and the Movietone," said H. M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, recently. He sails January 14, with his brother Jack, for a two-months' trip to Europe.

Wolheim Out of "Angels"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4.—Louis Wolheim has been removed from the cast of "Hell's Angels" and has been replaced by George Cooper. It is the Caddo production to be released by United Artists.

New Picture Firm Files

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.—The Consolidated Pictures Corporation of California, a $1,000,000 San Francisco motion picture concern, has filed incorporation papers with the secretary of state at Sacramento.

Costumers to Marry Soon

UNIVERSAL CITY.—Johanna Mathieson, costume designer for Universal, will be married in the spring to Elmer N. Woolf.

THE STUDIO PREVIEW

AL JOLSON'S opening of "The Jazz Singer" with Vitaphone was one of the most successful showings of Vitaphone which have been heard on the Coast. In that many of the titles were spoken on the record the picture has made an advancement beyond anything previously attempted by Warner Brothers.

Jolson in the black face character on the screen is an excellent substitute for his black face Mammy-singing characterization of the stage. He is well supported by May MacAvoy whose good roles recently have been far too few but who takes excellent advantage of such opportunities as this.

It is a good picture with a story everyone likes.

The son of the Jewish Cantor has a flare to sing on the stage which his father duly abhors. When the child leaves home his mother alone claims him as her son and his father asks him never to return.

The son's climb to fame is taken for granted and the homecoming situation later is well stressed.

A father's grim determination, a sweetheart's unselfish interest, and a mother's love are the three main factors in the story and each receives good treatment.

In "The Crystal Cup" Dorothy Mackaill, a professed manhater for a decade, weds Rockcliffe Fellowes, shoots him and immediately becomes attached to another young man, Jack Mulhall. Love, of course is "The Crystal Cup" and in that respect the picture conforms to a well proven motion picture formula. Miss Mackaill's work is excellent.

"The City Gone Wild" is James Cruze's last effort at Paramount and is a fast moving crime drama made in nine or 10 days with Thomas Meighan as the District Attorney in the showdown. Cruze and Meighan know plenty about making pictures but Hollywood people have decided that even they need more time to make good ones.

"Sunrise" is still playing at the Carthay Circle theatre where it opened four weeks ago and is gathering momentum with each successive performance. It has been called a "marvelous picture," an "epic of the soul," an "unique achievement" and an "inspired film triumph."

It is probably all of those. I liked it and am sending my friends to see it.

Lillian Rich who did a remarkable piece of work in a picture called "The Golden Web" a year ago and suddenly disappeared is in a picture previewed at the Westlake theatre a few nights ago called "The Web of Fate." Her work is as it always was and she is at a distinct disadvantage in the picture only because of the weak story and weaker direction. Obvious trickery in pictures is uncommendable, now as ever, and dual roles come in that class of production. Miss Rich is both heroine and heavy and one role affects the other.

Explanations of the critical movements in the picture are lacking and leave the audience wondering why the villainess shot the villain. The audience wonders why the heroine doesn't have the man arrested who kills her father; wonders why she doesn't marry the man she loves in the second reel; and wonders why the same young woman should, after finding a man dead, inquisitively handle the gun with which he has obviously killed himself. The picture was made by the Peerless company and has the virtue of being comparatively short.

Exhibitor Cuts Newsreel of Marion Parker's Slayer

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 4.—Because he believed that a current news reel containing shots of William E. Hickman, kidnaper and slayer of Marian Parker in Los Angeles, placed the killer on a pedestal, Johnny Jones, manager of the Majestic theatre censored the reels before he would permit their exhibition. "I see no reason why a murderer of the type of Hickman should be glorified through the medium of the screen," Jones declared. "The Majestic theatre caters to every member of the family and there is no particular moral manifested in the showing of the instruments used by Hickman in his murder. International Newsreel furnished us with a fine screen story of the whole affair which was considerably edited, but in my estimation Hickman was given too much pomp. If the punishment of Hickman was shown as a result of the terrible crime, that would be a lesson and I would be only too glad to show it."

Showfolk Proud of Their Pets

After all a pet's a pet, if you like it that way. So we present (left) Samuel S. Torgan, who operates the Strand in Lowell, Mass., and his bull pup; (center) Charles B. Craig, manager of the Strand in Gloucester, Mass., Mrs. Craig, and their daughter; and David H. Farrell, owner of the New Onset in Onset, Mass., and his grandson, Master Charlie Farrell—who is, by the way, a nephew of Charles Farrell, the popular Fox player.

Al Jolson in Person at Opening of "Jazz Singer" at Criterion

Lone Bandit Gets $1,500 at Pantages Box Office; "Death Note" Given Cashier—Universal Discusses Closing

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 3.—Warner Brothers' second complete Vitaphone program attracted throngs of picture fans and film celebrities to the Criterion on Wednesday night. As an added attraction Al Jolson appeared in person and related a few amusing experiences he had during the filming of "The Jazz Singer" in which he is starred.

JOLSON arrived from New York the day of the opening and departed Thursday for New Orleans for a radio broadcasting engagement. He stated he will return in January to make another picture for Warner Brothers.

The combination of story and Vitaphone for "The Jazz Singer" was declared perfect by critics and fans and the vocal numbers received tremendous applause. An unusually pleasing musical score arranged by Louis Silvers accompanied the picture. Conrad Nagel acted as master of ceremonies on the opening night and introduced the following members of the cast: Eugenie Besserer, Otto Lederer, Warner Oland, Bobbie Gordon and Al Jolson.

Bandit Gets $1,500

A lone bandit held up the Pantages theatre box office last Tuesday night about 10:30 and stole $1,500 while 50 bystanders looked on. Pantages, which runs pictures and vaudeville, is located at Seventh and Hill street, one of the busiest corners of Los Angeles. The robber slipped a note scrawled on wrapping paper to Marie Lowell, reading: "Don't scream, death to you! Give me the money." The girl complied and the man scooped the money up and stepped into an automobile driven by a confederate.

Universal Pictures Corporation is so far ahead of production schedule for 1928-29, that there is a possibility of that studio closing down for a brief period about February 1, according to Carl Laemmle, president. Several conferences have been held during the past 10 days at which the feasibility of closing the studio was discussed. No definite decision has as yet been reached by the executives. According to rumors the Universal City plant would be closed for four months but Mr.

Laemmle said it would be for a much shorter time.

Monte Blue to South Seas

Monte Blue, Bena Bush and Raquel Torres headed a party of 20 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer players who departed Tuesday night for San Francisco where they sailed Friday for the South Sea Islands. Robert Flaherty and W. S. VanDyke, directors, are already on location filming the early scenes for "Southern Skies."

N. Y. Exhibitors Help Students—and Selves

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY, Jan. 4.—Exhibitors of northern New York are looking weeks ahead these days and cashing in through their foresight. Each year, at Eastertime, hundreds of boys and girls who will graduate from various high schools in New York state journey to Washington for their vacation. The exhibitors are cooperating with these students and providing the greater part of the money to meet the expense of the trips. Benefit nights are already the vogue at many of the theatres, the students assisting in selling tickets to their friends and sharing in the receipts of the evening. This extends over a period of several weeks.

The company will not return until about June 1928.

A "short circuit" in the ventilating system on stage 5 of the Paramount-Famous-Lasky lot started a blaze which sent the Hollywood fire department to the scene Tuesday.

Theatre Man Lost

Friends and relatives of William R. Hughes, who disappeared from his Santa Ana home, last October, are seeking him throughout the country. No word has been received by his wife or mother and they have appealed to the Travelers' Aid Society to assist them in the search. Hughes was district manager for George Mann Theatres, Inc., at Eureka, and left there several months ago entering the employ of West Coast Theatres, representing that concern in Santa Ana. The missing man is 34 years of age, is five feet eight and a half inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. He has dark hair and gray eyes.

Billie Dove in Korda Film

Billie Dove's next First National picture to follow "The Heart of a Follies Girl" will be "The Yellow Lily," an original by Lajos Biro, noted European dramatist. Alexander Korda will direct. Bess Meredyth is doing the adaptation.

Nancy Drexel has been selected to play one of the featured girl roles in F. W. Murnau's next Fox production "The 4 Devils." Winfield Sheehan has placed her under a long term contract. She has been in pictures a little more than a year, and has been known as Dorothy Kitchen. Her name was changed with the signing of the Fox contract.

Gotham Plans Do Not Call For Increased Production In New Season, Says Sax

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—"Definite plans for Gotham productions are not entirely complete, but our future program so far does not include a greater quantity than the dozen or so pictures we will make this year," declared Sam Sax, president of Gotham, in commenting upon the production outlook for the new season.

"It is more than possible," he continued, "that the sum total of pictures produced will not aggregate as many as in 1927, as each organization is making a sincere effort toward quality rather than quantity. The new year will see more new stars than in several seasons past, while it will also see very few stage plays reaching the screen. More pictures, however, will be based on great works of literature."

HELEN OF TROY

First National release and production featuring Maria Corda, Lewis Stone and Ricardo Cortez. Based on the John Erskine novel, adapted by Carey Wilson, with Alexander Korda directing. Photographers, Lee Garmes and Sid Hickox. At the Globe, N. Y., for three weeks commencing Dec. 9. Running time, 87 mins.

Helen	Maria Corda
Menelaus	Lewis Stone
Paris	Ricardo Cortez
Eteoneus	George Fawcett
Adraste	Alice White
Telemachus	Gordon Elliott
Ulysses	Tom O'Brien
Achilles	Bert Sprotte
Ajax	Mario Carillo

A corking . . . release that figures to particularly delight what is currently smart in picturegoers. De luxe house loge clientele should enjoy it thoroughly and others will signify hearty acceptance, but pot and pan Annie may have her doubts because there are no custard pies bombarding the walls of Troy.

At that there's nothing subtle about this original satire as screened. Situations, bits and titles are broad, and those situations, with the titles, make the picture. First National has given it a splendid production, including some trick camera work that commands admiration. . . .

The picture is nothing like the book. Robert E. Sherwood adapted "Road to Rome" on the Erskine plan and Carey Wilson, making the "Helen" film adaptation, evidently had vivid memories of the play. More so than the novel. So "Helen" on the screen is more like Sherwood than Erskine, although the latter will collect, and rightly, inasmuch as he's the instigator of the whole thing. Erskine was on the stage at the opening, before the picture, offering what was probably the best verbal introduction any New York film has ever had. It was funny and it was short. It also served to introduce Maria Corda in person.

Those who saw this girl in "Moon of Israel" are going to be surprised. The difference between the German and American idea of makeup. Miss Corda looks good here and in certain spots the camera makes her look great. For "Helen" she's "the type," and plays it nicely if a little blank at times. In future pictures this will have to be overcome. On performance no one touches Lewis Stone, even if he is still reaching for his coat lapel despite wearing armor. Few will know that Cortez is in the picture.

"Helen" is all comedy, including the score, and the big houses can do no better than to use the Edouarde orchestration. Satirizing ancient myth in general and Helen's affairs particularly, the titles are topical, while the music is mainly based on the pop dance tunes. Wheeling the giant wooden horse inside the gates of Troy is accomplished to the strains of "Horses, Horses, Horses," etc. The film kids the husband-wife complex throughout, the king, following the conquest of Troy, making a beeline for Helen's dressmaker to destroy the shop. Meanwhile he has been trying to go fishing since 9 o'clock. When it looks as if Helen is about to take another vacation with her second prince, the king is convinced he's going to get in his trip, and that finishes the picture.

No battles and no slow spots. The action is lively all the way, with Miss Corda in various stages of slight clothing. . . .

"Helen" . . . is well made, lively and funny. The smart set will dote on it, and it's broad enough not to be over the heads of the John Held, Jr., models here or abroad.

LIVE NEWS FROM COAST TO COAST

Columbus

COLUMBUS.—A. Maxson, motion picture theatre owner of Celina, Ohio, has operated his theatre both December 18 and December 25 in defiance of the practice of closing on Sundays. He was arrested upon the orders of the mayor and his case was bound over to the grand jury of Mercer county, which convenes January 5. Maxson will show that three other towns in Mercer county are open on Sundays and that this is a discrimination against Celina, which is the county seat. The other towns in the county that have Sunday pictures are Coldwater, Ft. Recovery and Rockford. . . . The Board of Trustees of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio will hold its first quarterly meeting at Columbus, January 11, when the matter of endorsing the Brookhart bill, regulating the distribution of motion picture films will be considered. This bill, pending in the National Congress, is receiving a great deal of attention, not only from exhibitors, but also from distributors and producers. The Ohio Association will give it a full consideration before taking action.

San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO.—R. H. Shannon of Chicago has been transferred to the San Antonio Paramount exchange, to replace Fred Larned, who has recently been promoted to assistant booking manager. Larned was formerly assistant ad salesman, and Shannon takes over his duties in that department. Frank Nelson is now the shipping clerk of Paramount, taking the place of Ira Johnson. Johnson has severed his connections with Paramount, and is now in Oklahoma, taking charge of the interests of his late father, who was an oil man. Charles Karr, ad salesman of the San Antonio Paramount branch, is all pepped up over the prospects of his team winning the Lasky Contest. Karr is a live-wire ad salesman, covering the entire valley and West Texas. He stands at the head of the list as a salesman of road-show accessories, and in the early Spring plans to make a personal tour of his territory in order to become better acquainted with his exhibitors and their needs.

Atlanta

ATLANTA.—Negotiations which have been under way for several days between Arthur C. Bromberg and Fred F. Creswell were ended yesterday with the official announcement that Creswell has joined Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions as district manager, with supervision over the Atlanta, Charlotte, and New Orleans exchanges. In predicting larger and stronger development of independents, Bromberg calls attention to the long list of major stars and screen favorites who have already appeared in numerous independently produced pictures, and the still longer list of those who have been placed under contract for forthcoming productions, Creswell comes under the Bromberg banner at a time when the outlook for independents is peculiarly promising. He brings to his new connection a vast accumulation of practical experience in distribution, and an intimate knowledge of the Southern territory. . . . The Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., of which Tony Sudekum is president, has purchased the three theatres in Dyersburg, Tennessee, and four other theatres in nearby Western Tennessee towns. Negotiations which had been under way for some time were concluded lately, according to an announcement given out when Sudekum returned from Dyersburg, where he, along with his brother, Harry Sudekum, treasurer of the Crescent Amusement Company, general manager Dean, and district manager J. P. Masters, conducted the finalities. The Crescent company already owned the Palace in Dyersburg. According to present plans, one of the newly purchased Dyersburg houses will be closed, while the two others will be operated, one—the Frances, which is the oldest theatre there, will continue as a road show house. The four other theatres included in the purchase are located at Ridgely, Tiptonville, Obion and Halls. All will continue operation.

Portland

PORTLAND.—Ned Depinet, general salesmanager, and S. W. Hatch, Western salesmanager for First National, will arrive here January 10. They will also cover other key cities on the Pacific Coast. . . . Manager E. M. Ludwig of the Whiteside theatre, Corvallis, is happy to advise that his house has been practically rebuilt since the recent disastrous fire, reopening January 2. . . . Clyde Blasius is now manager for the National Theatre Supply Company in Portland and adjacent territory. He was recently with the company in Salt Lake, and expects to make the "Single Contracts" famous in his new field. Roy C. Peacock, with headquarters in Seattle, will act in a supervising capacity over both the Seattle and the Portland fields. . . . John Hamrick, owner of the Blue Mouse theatre, has announced plans for a complete renovation and enlargement of the house. The work will be done between shows. . . . William G. Ripley, one of the veteran managers of Washington, and at one time a leading citizen of Aberdeen, is now operating both the Colonial and Pekin theatres at Longview, Wash. He reports a nice holiday business. . . . J. R. (Jimmy) Beale, formerly with Universal, has opened Portland headquarters for Tiffany-Stahl, and will cover Oregon and the Southern counties of Washington. . . . Al Oxtody, of San Francisco, well known along the row there, is enjoying a 10-day vacation, visiting relatives in Portland.

Albany

ALBANY.—Some time there may come a change in the officials of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union in Troy. There is that possibility, despite the fact that Harry Brooks has just been elected president of the local for the 16th year. Al Lemay has been elected financial secretary for an equal number of times. Louis Rinn was chosen as secretary at the recent election, and John Ross was named as treasurer. . . . T. C. Streibert, of New York, from the FBO home office, was in town last week for a conference with Al Guteck, local manager. . . . Sam Goldstein, of Springfield, Mass., in Albany for a day spent in booking, announced that he has just opened a new house in Chicopee. . . . Albany's Film Row heard with regret that Frank Learnan had decided to sever relation with the Farash Theatres in Schenectady. Before becoming identified with the motion picture theatre, Learnan was associated for several years with the State Treasury. . . . Employees along Film Row were remembered at Christmas by Morris Silverman, of Schenectady, with cigars and cigarettes for the men and candy for the girls. . . . Nat Levy, manager for Universal, has joined the "spat club," which includes Fenton Lawlor, Harry Seed, Al Guteck and others. Levy's sole excuse was that New York state's winters were far more severe than those of Philadelphia. . . . Miss Steinbock, formerly with the FBO exchange, has joined Pathe. Harry Gibbs, special representative for Tiffany-Stahl, was up from New York during the week for a conference with Jack Krause, local manager.

Kansas City

KANSAS CITY.—For the first time in 18 years, Bert Rogers, editor of the Olathe (Kan.) "Mirror," and father of Charles "Buddy" Rogers, screen star, took a vacation two weeks ago, leaving for Los Angeles to visit his son over the holidays and to witness the West Coast premiers of "My Best Girl" and "Wings," in which Buddy is starred. . . . Members of the stage production casts at the Orpheum and Mainstreet theatres, first run motion picture and presentation houses of Kansas City, were guests of the Orpheum Circuit Christmas Eve in the annual Christmas party held at the Hotel President. . . . Joe La Rose, who came from the Fox theatre, Philadelphia, to assume charge of the stage productions at Loew's Midland theatre, also will have charge of stage productions at Loew's State in St. Louis. . . . The three theatres of K. S. Duncan have been closed for repairing and cleaning. The theatres were closed during the holidays in order that the loss would be at a minimum. . . . The personnel of the First National branch had a Christmas party all its own. Tom Byerle, assistant manager of the exchange, donned the whiskers and played the role of Santa Claus, distributing the presents. Lew Nathanson, formerly with Warner and Universal exchanges, has returned to Kansas City. C. A. Schultz, manager of the Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., spent Christmas with his

Girl Converted to Pictures When She Sees "Ben-Hur"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PITTSBURGH.—The story drifts in that at the Beaver theatre one day last week an 18-year-old girl saw her first motion picture. No reason is assigned for her never having before seen a picture, other than that she has lived on a farm and her trips to the city were very rare. The picture was "Ben-Hur," and that young woman will be hard to please, no doubt, the next time she sees a film, after having seen this masterpiece.

THE SHORT FEATURE

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald is the Moving Picture World department, "Little Pictures with the Big Punch," which has presented news, reviews and exploitation on short features and serials.

Newsreels See Biggest Year Ahead

Great Events Promise Much For Screens

The year 1928 promises to be the greatest yet in the history of the newsreels, in news importance and in recognition at the theatres' box offices. The most interesting thing about news, as every newspaper man knows, is the unexpected. And it is to be expected that there will be plenty of the unexpected, as there was in the year that has just put on its last show.

There are certain assured developments in the new year, however, which are bound to make splendid "copy" for the newsreels. First to come to mind is the fact that this is the presidential election year, with all that means to screen news.

Then there is every reason to believe that 1928 will bring new aviation records at least paralleling the trans-Atlantic and Pacific achievements of 1927. As the newsreels also wrote history with their unmatched covering of the flights last summer and fall, so they are prepared to provide even greater service to the theatres next season.

The new year promises rapid development of presentation of picture with sound, through the Fox Movietone. The use of Movietone was an achievement of the last month of the old year. What the new year will bring in this field can only be surmised, but a rapid expansion of its use is logical.

Even Leap Lear Is "Copy"

The year 1928 brings the Olympic Games, another event of worldwide interest. There is newsreel copy even in the fact of a leap year, which is certain to be the theme of many a sprightly "item."

A new development of the waning 1927 is likely to bring far-reaching results in the twelvemonth just starting. That is the use of the newsreel between acts of stage productions. It will be recalled that Ashton Stevens, dramatic critic of the Chicago Herald-Examiner, suggested such use of newsreels to fill the awkward pauses between acts, and Martin J. Quigley gave the suggestion editorial commendation.

Applied at Fond du Lac, Wis.

Then it was discovered that the plan already had been placed in successful operation at the Garrick theatre, Fond du Lac, Wis., other short features also being interspersed between acts of the plays put on by a stock company. What will the new year bring forth in this direction?

International Newsreel will be used at each program in the new United Artists theatre in Los Angeles, which opened December 26, as the result of a contract signed by J. H. Goldberg, booking manager of West Coast Theatres, with G. E. Rosenwald, manager of Universal's Los Angeles exchange.

Another novel use of the newsreel was as a prologue to a long feature of the war. Manager Roy McAmis of the Princess theatre at Sayer, Okla., applied this experiment with results in a showing of "The Big Parade," having bought up old newsreels of actual war shots. Here, too, may be the origin of a new practice in the use of newsreels to advantage.

Flights Fully Covered

The long distance flights probably provided the greatest opportunity, and all the newsreel producers arose to the occasion. All showed their mettle and the completeness and flexibility of their organization in covering the aviators' achievements—as well as the tragedies of those who did not succeed. Educational distributed a special with Kinogram's pictorial history starting with the ill-fated attempt of Rene Fonck. And as Truman H. Talley, editor of Fox News, stated, the covering of the flights added immeasurably to the prestige of the newsreel. Incidentally, Talley was authority for the statement that 10,000,000 feet of negative were shot last year for newsreels.

Before this series of events came the Mississippi flood catastrophe, and the newsreels here played the double role of speeding to the public a pictorial history of the ravages of the waters as well as spreading President Coolidge's plea for the gathering of relief funds. So, too, in the case of the New England flood later in the year the newsreels played their part, as well as in the Tunney-Dempsey bout.

The year marked the beginning of the Paramount and M-G-M newsreels, and the appointment of Ray L. Hall as editor of Pathe News when Emanuel Cohen took charge of Paramount's new short feature department. Paramount News made its bow with pictures of the transatlantic fliers' reception at a showing of "A Night in Spain" in New York. A national welcome week ushered in the M-G-M News.

Kinograms Signs Don Thompson

Don Thompson was signed by Kinograms to build up its service in the Orient. International Newsreel claimed victory in a 200-mile air race with films from the Kentucky Derby when pilots of three other newsreels were forced down by storms.

News of the year brought out the fact that Peter D. Beckero of the City theatre at Highland Falls, N. Y., had used Pathe News consecutively for sixteen years. Educational again won the Hugo Riesenfeld Medal for the best short story feature of the year—"The Vision."

T. G. Randolph, International Newsreel cameraman, was drowned with two others when their boat was overturned by the force of a blasting operation which they were filming.

Fox News brought out a new camera car. Fox Movietone made its bow with a recording of the applause of the crowd when Charles A. Lindbergh took off for Paris.

Such is the record of 1927. Twelve months from now, to all indications, an even greater record of achievement will have been written. It is for the theatre owner to recognize the part the newsreel is playing in making his screen an up-to-the-minute pictorial newspaper.

Gottlieb Joined Air Service in War, Now Flying High with 'U'

MANNIE GOTTLIEB, now manager of Universal's St. Louis exchange, has had plenty of varied experience in the picture sales business and in the World War was an aviator. That might seem to indicate he has had many ups and downs, but we're assured it's chiefly ups.

He started out with the Eclectic Film Company of Minneapolis in 1914 and stayed with this company until it became known as Pathe. Then he joined the E. E. Fulton Company of Chicago, at that time representing Lubin Films, later identified as the V. L. S. E. He next organized what was known as the Favorite Feature Film Company, handling such successes as "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

At the outbreak of the war, Gottlieb joined and served with the Aviation Corps. He returned in 1919 and handled "Hearts of the World" for Lesser and Midwestern States.

He became a member of the sales force of First National for one year and next managed the Metro-Goldwyn office in Minneapolis. Joining the F. & R. Film Company there, he handled the Warner Brothers franchise in that city.

His connection with Universal began as a member of the sales force at Kansas City and developed into the holding down of the branch managership. Recently he was shifted to St. Louis as manager there.

Know G. L. Wood? He's 'U' Manager In El Paso Office

PRACTICALLY continuous service with one company since 1916 is the record of G. L. Wood, who holds the reins for Carl Laemmle's selling organization at El Paso.

It was in the capacity of bookkeeper and cashier that Wood joined Universal, July 17, 1916. He held down these jobs until 1918, when he resigned to accept a position as cashier of the All Star Features in Los Angeles. Ill health intervened and he returned to the El Paso exchange after three months.

Wood was office manager and booker there until 1920, when R. C. McIlheran succeeded Manager Richardson, who was transferred to New Orleans. He was salesman for McIlheran until June of 1922. McIlheran was shifted to Dallas and Wood succeeded him as manager of the El Paso branch.

Fox Movietone Has New Entertainment Series on Release

Fox Movietone Entertainments go into release this week as an innovation for theatregoers of the new year. Visible and audible presentation of world-known performers is introduced with the Movietone.

Raquel Meller, internationally known star, renders four songs in her Movietone appearance. Ben Bernie and his orchestra offer several selections. Chic Sales' comedy sketch, "They Are Coming to Get Me," is another presentation. Anatole Friedland's Ritz Revue gives "On the Beach in Atlantic City."

Gertrude Lawrence, J. Harold Murray and the Rio Rita Girls claim attention in three song and dance numbers. Winnie Lightner proffers songs, as do the Kentucky Jubilee Choir and Nina Tarasova.

Movietone Entertainments of national and international interest also include singing by the Vatican Choir. Mussolini's speech and screen appearance are also worthy of note. For future release there also will be a series of condensed screen versions of musical comedy successes.

U. S. and England Hear Newsreels Simultaneously

For perhaps the first time in history, a broadcast description of the longest newsreel in the world was heard in the United States and in Europe at the same time recently when Dori Hancock, Hollywood news radio announcer talked over WEAF which was hooked up with 2LO of London, Thursday, December 29.

BETTER PROJECTION

Projection Is Essential, and "Better Projection Pays"

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Answers Nos. 603 and 604

QUESTION No. 603—What are the dimensions of the standard aperture of the professional motion picture projector, as fixed by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers?

This question was answered correctly by so many that I cannot take up space to print all of the names. There are many more than 100 of them.

The answer is .6995 (87/128th) of an inch high by .9062 (29/32nd) of an inch wide. And that is that.

QUESTION No. 604—How wide would an object which is 1/16th of an inch wide in the film photograph be in an undistorted 18-foot-wide screen image?

Not so many on this one by a long, long shot. W. C. Budge, Brooklyn, N. Y.; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Ia.; "C. A.," Mason City, Ia., (Hello, Old Topper. Get back in the water and STAY—Ed); Thomas McNamara, Waltham, Mass.; G. L. Doe, John Doe, I'm A. Doe, and "Bill" Doe, all Chicago, Ill.; George Lawrence, Sackville, N. B.; Charles E. Curle, Chattanooga,

Question No. 621

Do you consider it good practice to have a spare intermittent movement on hand? Explain your answer.

Tenn.; A. D. Henley, Seattle, Wash.; Albert Cook, Denver, Colo.; A. T. Boylson, Halifax, N. S.; Charles C. Colby (Hello. Thought you were dead—Ed.), Santa Fe, N. M.; D. G. Henderson, Quincy, Ill., and W. J. Lathrop, Little Rock, Ark., made good on this one.

An 18-foot-wide picture is $18 \times 12 = 216$ inches wide. If an aperture of 29/32 of an inch is 216 inches wide on the screen, then an aperture or object having a width of 1/32 of an inch would of course be as wide in the screen image as 29 is contained times into 216, which is 7.448, and since the object in question is 1/16 of an inch wide, which is 2/32nd of an inch, the image of it would be equal to $7.448 \times 2 = 14.896$ inches.

The thing may be worked out by the following formula, as brother Curle points out: $1/16'' : 29/32'' :: X : 216''$, which reads: as 1/16'' is to 29/32'', so is X (desired measurement) to 216''. This, according to Curle, works out 14 26/29th of an inch. I didn't work out the decimal, but inasmuch as the equation is correctly stated, it must be the same as the result arrived at by Lawrence.

Still another method was stated by "C. A." He says: Working with information supplied on pages 245-46, Vol. 1, of The Bluebook, we proceed as follows: An 18-foot-wide picture is $18 \times 12 = 216$ inches wide. Multiply this by 32 and divide the result by 29 and we have the magnification. Multiplying this by the width of object in film photograph (7/16 or .0625 of an inch) and we have the width of the image, which is 14.89649, or approximately 15 inches as the width of the screen image of the 1/16'' wide object.

Chicago Sets Theatre-Building Record With Twelve New Deluxe Houses in Year

What is probably the greatest record ever achieved by any principal city in America is the record attained by Chicago in 1927 by contributing to the amusement world twelve new deluxe picture houses. All these theatres had their premieres last year and each one can boast of a building cost ranging from $250,000 to $1,000,000.

The houses which opened last year and now are running under a policy of either straight pictures or pictures and presentations, are Ascher's Sheridan, Schoenstadt's Piccadilly, Marks Brothers' Marbro, Cooney Brothers' Avalon, Lubliner & Trinz's Belpark, Congress and State, and the following independent houses, Teatro Del Lago, Patio, Lawndale, and Shore. December 29 United Artists also opened its first theatre in Chicago.

Not only can Chicago boast of having built more theatres in 1927 than any other city in America, but it can safely take its place at the top of the list as the city with the most beautiful and more expensive deluxe picture houses, even surpassing New York City in the total number of these.

Exhibitor Wins Second Sunday Closing Case After Losing First One

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WARSAW, IND., Jan. 4.—A jury verdict here in which Frank Parish, motion picture theatre owner at Milford, Ind., was found not guilty of violating the law by operating his picture house on Sunday is expected to have a salutary effect on the small town theatre situation in Indiana.

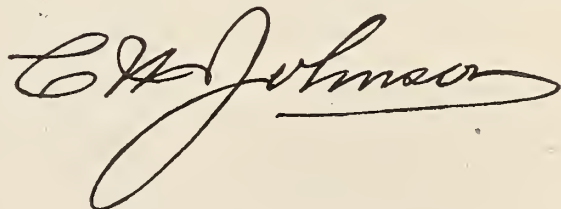

Parish was tried on a similar charge during the September term of court and was found guilty and fined $10 and costs. He continued to operate his show on Sundays and new charges were filed. He was brought to trial on one of these subsequent charges. A number of prominent Milford citizens, some of whom are active in church circles there, appeared as witnesses for the defense. They all testified that Parish has a good reputation and is considered a law abiding citizen.

PRESENTATION ACTS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald is the Moving Picture World Department, "Stage and Pit."

Big Time Takes Films Sincerely Picture House Stage Shows Are to Last Presentation Means Everything on the Bill—The Policy Not Only Refers to Bandshows, But Also for Prologues

With the New Year with us and the many problems confronting theatre managers one of the most important is the policy of stage entertainment in the picture theatres. Now that the Keith-Albee and Orpheum Circuits have merged into one enterprise, many independent Exhibitors are wondering whether or not presentation or the stageband policy will continue or whether it will revert to the former days of straight vaudeville.

According to a statement made by Mort H. Singer one of the supervising executives of the Orpheum Circuit who now operate the Diversey theatre, Chicago, and the Mainstreet, Kansas City on a stage bandshow basis, it is safe to state that the presentation policy in picture houses is here to stay, in fact it will last as long as the people at the head of it will supply the public with good entertainment, and good entertainment as a rule, means good talent.

Title Covers Everything

The bandshow policy which has been christened with the name presentation was first introduced into the motion picture theatre by Paul Ash at McVickers theatre about three years ago. Since then this form of entertainment has been generally known as the Paul Ash Policy.

In reality presentation as a name covers everything in a theatre in the form of stage or screen entertainment. To present an attraction means to offer it, and in the last three years this word has become a trademark in the picture house where stage entertainment was one of its chief attractions. As stated before in these columns presentation does not necessarily mean a Paul Ash policy with a band on the stage, it may also mean a prologue for your feature film or a scrim presentation for your organ solo. However,

Keith-Orpheum Theatres Now Run Pictures

Since the Pathe-Keith-Albee-Orpheum Merger, Vaudeville Has Become an Integral Part of the Presentation Field

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

Since the Keith-Albee Circuit and the Orpheum Circuit merger has been consummated, there has been a great deal of talk going on whether or not these two organizations would still maintain separate booking offices in their respective territories.

Inasmuch as the actual merger of these two enterprises has only gone into effect on January 1, it is rather difficult to say what steps may be taken regarding this matter.

In an interview with Mort H. Singer, an executive officer of the Orpheum Circuit, it was learned that E. F. Albee, president of the Keith-Albee Circuit, has been elected president of the new organization which is to be known hereafter as the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit. Marcus Heiman, president of the Orpheum Circuit, has been elected executive vicepresident of the new corporation.

New Corporation Formed

Because of this combine it has been necessary to exchange shares of the stock of the former corporations for shares in the newer one. Before a complete board of directors can be appointed, it will be necessary for the stockholders of both organizations to hold a meeting for the purpose of transferring stock.

When these necessary corporation transactions have taken place it will then be possible to learn the new executive board as well as other executive members who will carry on the future booking problems of the new circuit.

Although no official statement has been made as to who would head the booking office of the Chicago agency, it stands to reason that C. S. Humphrey, for many years in charge of the Keith-Albee agency of the Chicago office, will in all probabilities be put in charge of the new Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit Chicago office.

Since the inception of the Orpheum Circuit on June 30, 1887, Chicago has been the general headquarters for its executives. Whether or not the executives of the former Orpheum

The Editor of this department is happy to welcome its new readers from Moving Picture World, and wishes to state that "Presentation Acts Department" is always at the service of Exhibitors all over the world. This department under the above heading was inaugurated three years ago by Exhibitors Herald, and was a department exclusive with the Herald. It was the only Presentation department conducted by a film trade paper that devoted a comprehensive section entirely to the activities of picture house presentation. It is with further pleasure we announce to our readers that this department shall continue to serve and furnish readers of Moving Picture World with the same careful and helpful money making suggestions that it has been furnishing to the readers and followers of this department of Exhibitors Herald in the past three years. Anything pertaining to stage entertainment, the booking and staging of same, including costuming and scenery, and in fact anything of vital interest to you and your theatre that we may know; be assured that through these columns the many years of practical experience of Exhibitors Herald will be gladly passed on to you without incurring any additional expense to your weekly overhead. Since starting this department three years ago we have organized a staff of capable advisers who fully cover each and every department of theatre presentation, and all information that we may possess and that may be of interest and benefit to you and your theatre will be supplied to you upon request. Again the Editor welcomes readers of Moving Picture World into the Herald family.

corporation will remain in Chicago depends entirely upon the new plans laid out in New York by the new board of directors.

Big Change Expected

What dispensation will be made of Sam Kahl, known as the booking manager for the Junior Orpheum time and also as a Western representative for the former Orpheum Circuit, is not as yet known.

There are over 12 bookers on the fifth floor of the Orpheum Circuit and about four on the Keith-Albee, whether or not these same bookers will be retained is also a question. Up to the time of the merger, Thomas J. Carmody officiated as booking manager of the Western Vaudeville Managers Association, a subsidiary of the Orpheum Circuit, while Sam Kahl was booking manager for the Junior Orpheum Circuit.

The general booking for the Orpheum Circuit was always transacted through the New York office, with affiliation and the cooperation of the Chicago office. The New York office also carried on bookings for the Interstate Circuit under the direction of Charles Freeman.

Agency Books 500 Theatres

With the new merger of the Keith-Albee and the Orpheum Circuits interests, both owning and operating more than 150 theatres in the United States and Canada, it is now possible for artists of both stage and screen to secure more than 100 solid weeks of bookings by this new consolidation. It stands to reason that headline acts and featured artists will be taken under contract as heretofore for a period of at least three to five years to appear exclusively on these circuits with at least 20 weeks bookings in Europe through affiliated circuits.

Nearly 500 vaudeville theatres in America and Canada will hereafter be supplied with Keith-Albee-Orpheum entertainment. This means that more than 10,000 artists will be employed yearly by this circuit, ranging from a salary of $200 to $2,500 a week for headline attractions.

Another point of good interest in this new move to unite the activities of both circuits is the recent merger of the Keith-Albee vaudeville circuit with the Pathe-De Mille picture corporation which will hereafter operate as the Pathe Exchange, Inc., with John J. Murdock as its president. This affiliation assures both the Keith-Albee and Orpheum theatres of first run photoplays produced under the personal supervision of Cecil B. De Mille, and other famous producers which will hereafter distribute under the brand of Pathe.

Now that the two leading vaudeville circuits in the world have joined forces with one of the long established film companies, it now places these theatres in a class of deluxe picture houses with a presentation policy. It is safe to class them as such for nearly all of them now run motion pictures, whether feature length or short subject. It also is safe to state that nearly every theatre in the country now running film of some sort, with the exception of legitimate and musical comedy theatres, can be classified as deluxe picture houses with a presentation policy.

To substantiate this statement, one has only to investigate the Marcus Loew Circuit, the Pantages Circuit and the new consolidated Keith-Albee-Orpheum Circuit and their affiliated enterprises which represent the major stage entertainment booking organizations of the world.

Chicago Office to Continue

Whether or not the artists will hereafter be expected to deal with the separate subsidiary organizations as heretofore, is another question which is unable to be answered at this time, but it seems logical that after many years of building up a trade mark such as the Keith and the Orpheum people have, that they probably will not allow their third rate houses to exploit stage-entertainment as Keith-Albee-Orpheum vaudeville but only as to the class of their merits which may come under the heading of Junior Orpheum or Association vaudeville.

However, regardless of how many booking outlets the new firm may have the general booking transaction will probably be carried on in one office with the Chicago headquarters continuing with changes above stated.

Policy Will Last

when the stageband craze first hit Chicago, the entire middle west went stageband mad, doing what is a very serious thing to do in the show business, and that is resorting to too much of one type of entertainment, which generally tires the public.

To install a policy in your theatre is not a matter that requires only a few minutes of your time to decide, it is a matter of great importance for once you make the final step in deciding a policy and commence offering it to your audience, it then becomes standardized, and the form it is presented in can either educate your audience in liking or disliking the policy.

Feature Your Films

It is true that nowadays very few motion pictures are made that can draw a crowd at the box-office on its merits, however, it isn't very wise to just bury your films behind an expensive stagershow that will more or less convey the idea that your motion picture is a secondary item on your program and that your stage policy is the chief magnet at your box-office. Never lose sight of the fact that no matter how good a stagershow you present to your audience, it is always the feature photoplay or comedy subject that draws most of the people into your house.

This is true beyond a shadow of a doubt otherwise the tremendous amount of money involved in the production and distribution of motion pictures would have not reached the stabilized basis that they are now operating under. It seems that the public of today has become fed up on just one class of entertainment and unless they are in the mood or in a financial condition to see a whole evening's entertainment of one type, they would much rather see a diversified program which today happens to be pictures and presentation.

This new department in the amusement world carries out the ideas and entertainment value of both, in this manner, that a comedy drama or a musical comedy in addition to its principal players may now be presented in a condensed form enabling the average wage earning theatre attendant to receive about three hours of entertainment at a popular admission price to meet his pocketbook.

Acts Can Book Solid

It is now possible with the recent merger of Publix and Loew's presentation units together with the affiliation of the West Coast theatres to offer presentation artists an entire year's work, of consecutive booking which proves for itself that the new policy having started as a fad has now become recognized as a national institution which shows a neat profit on the books of every deluxe picture theatre owner. To continue with this profit making you must give your audience a little of both as they now have become accustomed to this type of entertainment.

Sincere Best Wishes!

Below we reproduce just a few of the telegrams that have poured into the office of the Editor of this department when word of the merger of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World reached the presentation field. These wires display and express the interest and whole hearted support of some of the most popular people in presentation who represent only a small part of the large family of Exhibitors Herald readers; who with this issue join forces with the readers of Moving Picture World. Through this department we wish to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation for the wonderful tributes and interest shown by the senders.

EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Having just learned of the merger of the two greatest trade papers in our industry we extend to you congratulations and the confidence that together you will give to the exhibitors the greatest trade paper during 1928 that the industry has ever seen. I wish you personal greetings for the new year and hope that in the merger it will give added breadth and scope to your department on presentations, for this particular section is of untold value to the theatre operator today.

JACK KNIGHT,
Supervisor of Theatre Management, Balaban and Katz Corp.

EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Just read with keen interest the announcement of the amalgamation of the Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World. As a reader of the Exhibitors Herald since its inception and a devoted follower of the presentation column, accept my congratulations and sincere best wishes for a continuation of your success.

H. LUSTGARTEN,
Manager, Lubliner and Trinz Harding theatre.

EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD

I know that the great service your department has rendered will now through this new merger create a leverage of still greater possibilities and I congratulate you and extend my best wishes because you deserve it by all the rules of merit.

ALBERT F. BROWN,
Featured organist, Marks Bros. Chicago theatres.

EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Let me extend my felicitations upon your consolidation with another wonderful periodical, the Moving Picture World. Together you now stand alone in your line of endeavors. Again accept my congratulations.

AL BELASCO,
Band leader for Lubliner and Trinz Senate and Harding theatres, Chicago.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I would like for you to send me more information on your "year's advertising campaign." For instance, could one take a sort of semi-monthly policy, say every other issue for approximately one-half the amount of the year's campaign? And if so, what are the terms? I would like to take up a year's campaign of advertising in the HERALD but I do not feel that I can afford the price at the present time.

It may interest you to know that the Jefferson had a midnight show New Year's Eve, with an entire change of program. I opened the show with a special set of slides called "Astronomy" featuring "My Blue Heaven." Miss Winnifred Stroud assisted in this number, singing "My Blue Heaven" in a blue spot, after which she made an exit and I continued with the number, when the audience started to sing on this number they did such a thorough job of it that I couldn't hear the organ. Next Peg Ulrey did her interpretation of Sophie Tucker singing "Someday Sweetheart," she received a big hand, as this is a return engagement for her, and she is well liked here. Happy Busch and Ethel Joy followed in a musical novelty and didn't receive quite such a good hand. The chorus followed with a good number, "Is She My Girl Friend," in which they did some mighty good stepping. After which I pulled the old gag of some one singing in the organ chamber, but this was new here and the audience liked it. Next Peg Ulrey and Bob Bonebrake sang a duet, "Highways are Happy Ways," and were well received. Happy Busch and Ethel Joy came back and were received passably well. After which Bob Bonebrake and the chorus did a number, "Blue Baby," with everyone out for the finale. The whole program was good and was well liked, it finishing exactly at twelve o'clock and was followed by a feature picture, "A Hero for a Night," and plenty of noise. Very truly yours, Jake Hammond, Solo Organist, Jefferson theatre, Huntington, Ind.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: It wish that you would run down to Joliet some afternoon and see this marvelous theatre. We could frame up a very interesting news item about same, as it is so very unusual to have such a house in such a small city. I am sure that the visit and your time spent would be amply repaid. You can get a 1 p. m. Rock Island train leaving La Salle St. Station and get to Joliet by 2:30 p. m. and return to Chicago on the 4:05 p. m. train.

If you feel that you can run down we can arrange about my stunt at that time, otherwise let me know when I can see you in your office. I usually drive in to Chicago on Tuesday and Friday mornings. We would therefore have to make an appointment. Best wishes and good luck for the New Year, Leo Terry, Organist Soloist, Rialto theatre, Joliet, Ill.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I will be in Chicago in about ten days, so please let this matter ride and when I arrive I will look you up and give you what I want. We are rushed to death down here.

With very best wishes and hoping that you are now entirely well, I am Very truly, Al Short, Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Thanks for your Christmas card; and allow me to extend you the best greetings of the season in return. Sincerely yours, Chamberlin and Himes, "Ziegfeld Follies," New York, N. Y.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Sorry I was away when you came in. Let the matter rest until the next time I get to Chicago and will work out a little advertising campaign. Very truly yours, Abe Lastfogel, William Morris Agency, New York City.

Local Choir Used On Christmas Program

Bob Blair, manager of the Texas theatre, San Antonio, decided to give his patrons an additional entertainment feature during Christmas week. He obtained permission from the largest Catholic school in San Antonio to use their boys' choir gratis four times a day for the whole week and built a special overture production around this attraction. Blair also used a local singer, violinist and harpist. The entire production was worked in connection with an overture called "Christmas Carols," directed by Ernest Hauser. The set consisted of a huge lighted cathedral window, two ten-foot candlesticks, a scrim and two curtains.

Past Nine Months

WELCOME, BOYS!

Greetings and best wishes for the New Year!—I wish to extend personal greetings and welcome to readers of Moving Picture World, who with this issue become a part of the large family of readers of Exhibitors Herald. . . . This little column written now and then (mostly then) appears in this section each week, that is, it should appear each, but sometimes I get lazy. . . . You know we all do at times. . . . Well, anyhow, the point is this: Any time you have something of news interest that you would like for me to print, shoot it along in the mail. . . . I love to open letters if they are not ones with bills in them. . . . Well, now that we have talked about the merger of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World, let us go on with the news. . . . Oh say! while on the subject of merger, let us say a word about the recent Pathe-DeMille-Keith-Albee-Orpheum—oh gee! I had to take three separate breaths to say that. . . . Both circuits will soon operate their booking office under one head. . . . They also will run Pathe films. . . . West Coast Theatres have taken over Saxe and the Finklestein & Ruben houses, and begin operating them this week. . . . With Public and Loew uniting their stage units over their circuit, presentation artists can now work more than a whole year without a break. . . . "Tink" Humphrey, the genial general manager of Keith-Albee's Chicago office, just returned from a holiday vacation. . . . The new Shore theatre that opened in Chicago last week had our friend, Cornelius Maffie, as its guest organist for the opening program. . . . Speaking of openings, on January 5 the Butterfield Circuit opens a new house in Ann Arbor, Michigan, called the Michigan. . . . Starting on January 10 the Chicago club rooms of the N. V. A. resumes "Movie Night" and "Clown Night," two special frolics for the artists and members of the theatrical profession. . . . Florence Brady, a presentation artist, is now suing her husband for divorce, so is Marion Harris, a record artist. . . . Both claim no "attention." . . . What is a husband good for if he can't "attend" to his own wife? . . . We hear that Clark & McCullough are now playing de luxe picture houses. . . . We knew it, sooner or later they fall for it. . . . Or it falls for them. . . . Nearly every picture house in Chicago had a "midnight show" on Christmas and New Year's Eve. . . . Most of them had "kid shows" for a stage program. . . . Listen, Exhibitors! Here's a good stunt. . . . On some special holiday night turn your orchestra loose in the lobby and let your audience dance for a while. . . . The Granada of Chicago did this on New Year's Eve. . . . Mark Fisher was given a great welcome reception at the Senate theatre, Chicago, last Monday. . . . He celebrated it with five shows that day. . . . Another good man has gone wrong. . . . Jimmy Savage, well known in Chicago for his organ solo writing, has gone and got himself engaged to Olive Hope. . . . She is Mort Infield's secretary. . . . Have you folks ever met Glenn Burt? . . . He's the fellow who books presentation houses on the Keith-Albee circuit out of the Chicago office. . . . While speaking of agents and brokers, let us say a word about Tommy Burchill, the good natured booker of the W. V. M. A. Coast time. . . . Well, he's a heck of a fine guy, that's all. . . . Our good friend Jesse Crawford returns to Chicago next week for a long stay at his former stand. . . . Saw Jack Benny last week at the Chicago Palace and feel that he should do a master of ceremonies in picture houses. . . . Think it over, Jack. . . . Just got a wire from Bernard Cowham, organist of the Oriental theatre in Milwaukee; it said—oh well, look up his ad in this issue and read it. . . . Ray Turner is another organist that sends telegrams, only Ray wires money with them. . . . That's cooperation for you. . . . I hope Cliff Hess reads this column this week for I made a promise that I forgot to keep. . . . Anyhow, that dog novelty is a great stunt, Cliff, and I'll tell the world about it. . . . Well, I might as well say something about Lester Santly, he's a friend also and might feel slighted. . . . That press book and music was fine. Keep your eyes on the next issue of "Better Theatres," Lester. . . . Gee, whiz! why did I start this! . . . Now I've got to mention Larry Spier's "Up and Down the Alley"—ever read it?

Presently yours,

A. Raymond Gallo

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Chicago

Week Ending January 1

The holiday show at the Chicago should be called "Infant Week." Never has this reporter seen so many infants, displaying such good talent, on any one stage in one show. The youngest was not a day older than three years, I'm afraid, and the rest ranged in ages from this baby on up, and every one of them worked like old timers. Where the Chicago got this array of wonderful infants and youngsters, I don't know. However, they had them and each was a wow.

The main presentation was called "Cinderella," and the entire show was built around this sort of pageant, with Buffano acting as master of ceremonies and his band furnishing the music. The scene where Cinderella arrives in a stately carriage drawn by four Shetland ponies and followed by a procession of court folk was impressive and beautiful. The rest of the show, with the exclusion of the Mason dancers, and Joe Mendes, the man monkey, was composed entirely of the aforementioned children, who danced, sang and did all the other stunts usually put on by grownups. Every act was well applauded by the audience.

The man monkey was good if you like such acts, in fact he was about the best trained monkey seen by this reporter, if that means anything. The Mason dancers contributed two finely executed dance routines, but after all, the credit goes to the infants. They were the whole show.

Spitalny and his pit orchestra rendered a fine symphonic arrangement of popular and operatic selections. This received a fine hand. Having seen the last afternoon show, the always looked for and appreciated organ presentation of Murtagh was missed.

St. Louis State

Week Ending December 30

Teddy Joyce made his bow as master of ceremonies for the stage shows this week. He fairly exuded boyish enthusiasm but seemed to be feeling his way, probably endeavoring to learn his audience.

He is slim, skinny in fact, and emphasized his thinness by wearing a short coat and tight fitting trousers, while he wore a funny looking little hat at times.

He is slim, lean in fact, and emphasized his and danced. His skating bit was the feature of the show.

The Twelve Criss Cross girls also did very nicely under Teddy's direction. In his "Roseland" novelty he introduced three precocious youngsters and in the finale there were two French dolls in the persons of two tiny girls.

Pittsburgh Grand

Week Ending December 31

The sole stage offering this week was Los Morenes and Company offering Spanish songs and dances. This act is ideal with a picture having a Spanish background but out of place with a feature like "Her Wild Oat" and Colleen Moore. Nicely done though.

Overture was a medley of Yuletide songs, including the always popular "Silent Night," and "Pilgrim Chorus from Tannhauser." At finish of overture screen opens with a "Happy New Year" trailer on it.

A comedy "Young Hollywood" and Paramount News was also on the bill.

Chicago Oriental

Week Ending January 1

After being away for almost two months on a vacation to Europe, Paul Ash returned to the Oriental this week to resume his leadership of Chicago's most well-known stageband. The program was a varied one and went over big.

Opening: Paul Small stepped in front of the curtains to sing "Greetings" to the music of "Ain't That a Grand and Glorious Feeling." When the curtains parted two large hands descended from above, while the ballet did a snappy dance, at the same time that a moving picture of Paul Ash was thrown on a painted likeness of himself on the backdrop.

Paul appeared then in person and in a very short talk told how glad he was to return, hoped that the talent and ideas that he was able to bring back from abroad would please everyone and after wishing all a Happy New Year announced the first band number, "The Stampede."

Ilomay Bailey then came on and sang "Dream Kisses," "My Blue Heaven" and "Love and Kiss From Your Baby to Mine." She interpreted these numbers in a novel and very beautiful manner, and of course was called for encores.

A French trio of interpretative dancers, with Mme. Gesha, was next. It took the audience a minute or two to warm up to their work. This act was one of the most finished of its kind this reporter has seen, and they left amid loud applause.

The band next played a concert arrangement of "Just a Memory." This was received with a big hand.

Markell and Faun then did a boob dance to "Gorgeous" that provided much birth for the audience. This act is one of the standard picture house offerings that always clicks. It has been reported many times before in these columns.

For the finale, Paul Small sang "Happy New Year" as the ballet appeared from a large Grandfather's clock above and at the rear of the stage, while the words "Happy New Year" were spelled out in electric lights on the steps where the girls stood.

Kansas City Midland

Week Ending December 30

Jack Sidney was programmed as "the boy of Kansas City" in this week's stage attraction at Loew's Midland, as master of ceremonies at the Midland, Sidney has become virtually a permanent part of the show.

A medley selection was arranged by Conductor Carbonara of the Midland Concert Orchestra as an overture. Arthur Hays offered an organ novelty illustrated by slides, as well as organ solos during the feature picture.

Benny Rubin was seen in vocal and dance numbers, as was Monoff and Gifford. Kriss Kringle's Kiddies, thirty-five talented youngsters, were seen in song and dances frequently throughout the program.

St. Louis Ambassador

Week Ending December 30

One of the most elaborate shows for the Christmas holidays was offered here this week.

Lowry personally sang "Beautiful," while Ginger Rogers in her little-girl way sang a couple of numbers about unlitte-girl subjects.

Irmanette, a violinist who steps a bit, was also prominent on the bill.

The overture was conducted by Dave Silverman. It was "The Toy Shop." It was accompanied by colored lantern slides about Santa Claus.

Minneapolis State

Week Ending December 31

Finkelstein and Ruben brought back its semi-annual Kiddie Revue to the State, which always is a favorite for holiday week, as the chief attraction on this week's bill.

The revue was not quite up to the standard of the Kiddie shows of the last two years, due largely to the recruiting of an almost entirely new cast of juvenile entertainers. Several of the talented youngsters who have been a feature of the revues in the past had graduated from the Kiddie class.

The show was played before a very novel set in which giant musical instruments had been built to form houses and trees while a long, sloping runway backstage resembled a huge piano keyboard.

The State band was on the stage in carnival dress, with its director Fred Heiseke serving in the double role of leader and master of ceremonies.

The show itself was built along the mature revue lines, the boy entertainers being clad in miniature tuxedos and the little girls simulating the roles of professional entertainers. Several of the youngsters were exceptionally good and bid fair to reap some of the laurels won by their predecessors.

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending December 31

The Howard's presentation this week proved to be a merry jubilee in keeping with the gay holiday season.

Al Short and his Melody Boys gave "Hello 1928," devised and staged by the band master and assisted by Virginia Semon, local dancing instructress.

Besides a cast of professional performers, chosen by Short, there were also a group of Atlanta girls trained by Miss Semon who participated.

Accent and Janesta, billed "Whirlwind Dancing Marvels," brought a good hand with their varied numbers. Bert and Eleanor Coll offered singing, dancing and instrumental skits and received audible praise.

Billy "Uke" Carpenter, musical comedian, and Kamberoff, tumbling accordionist, gathered their share of favor, also.

Especially beautiful was "The Human Fan," done by a chorus of well trained diminutive girls.

Another act of individuality was "Ladies of the Evening," a spectacular, scenic production given with special music and effects. It drew well.

Des Moines Capitol

Week Ending December 30

One week it is a surprise solo number and another week it is a soft shoe dance that Paul Spor, master of ceremonies at the Capitol, uses to wedge himself a bit closer into the regard of his audiences. The little exhibition of footwork this week was a slick method of fastening attention where it belonged and, incidentally, it added to the show.

"Dixieland," with its cargo of songs, dances and music from the stageband, was welcomed generously. A male quartet made harmonies to start the act going, and there were solos by Edith Griffith, personality girl, as a necessary foil.

Louella Lee presented novelty dances, with Morris and Rapp cutting deeply into the favor of audiences with their original dances. Then there was Henry Lamont and the Gould Dancers, including eight girls, who added to the joys of the week.

Joe Penner had the spot for really more time than anyone else on the bill. His highly original performance, comedy of a different type, if a reporter may use such a bromidic phrase, brought him numerous encores. He sang a ditty about whispers which seemed to entertain especially well, a group which evidently understood all the sides and all the rest of the lingo. A few of us failed to get all the alleged comedy.

Herbert Lee Koch at the organ was ready, as usual, with a Christmas medley to please his devoted followers.

A colored film, "Fantasy," the news pictures, and "Serenade" completed a good bill.

B. & K. gave everyone a treat in Al Kvale's Christmas fantasy, which was called "Toy Town Follies."

Opening: The entire cast and chorus excepting Al and his boys consisted of little children, none exceeding over 12 years of age. The show opened as Al, in neat appearing toy soldier costume, enters from one side as a little girl enters and looks over the snow-covered gingerbread houses, which is the street drop. The little girl sings a popular number, then Al tells her a little Christmas story.

Curtain then raises to a pretty setting of gingerbread man dolls and so forth. The orchestra boys in toy soldier costumes play a waltz as eleven little girls of Miss Abbott's Dancing School offer a cute toy doll routine.

Orchestra next plays Mark Fisher's song, "Everywhere You Go," as a little girl does a very good toe routine to a good hand. Al then announces a little East Indian doll—Little Gertie Stewart, a colored tot, the hit of the show, who sang "What'll You Do." Then did a clever jazz routine which earned her an encore of a well-done Black Bottom that won her a very fine hand.

Little Mary and George, two bowery dolls, next offer a series of good acrobatic stunts to a very fine reception. Davline, a sweet little girl, next sings "Miss Annabelle Lee" pleasingly, then offers a cute acrobatic dance routine to a fine hand. Jim, a seven-foot Siberian bear, follows with a Hula dance and then wrestles with two men who are offered five dollars each to wrestle Jim.

Little Russel Kay came next playing "Breezin' Along" on a small sax, then sang "Gorgeous" to Al and did a cute soft shoe dance that won a very fine reception.

Abbott's Dancing Dolls next offered a smart acrobatic routine.

Cloyd Griswold followed this with chorus of "Just a Memory" in front of small Christmas tree. Al and Cloyd, with faraway expressions on their faces, handle different toys and reminisce on their childhood. Al picks up a fife and plays a good solo of "Silent Night." Griswold then finishes with "Just a Memory." Both received a very good hand.

Two dolls dancing to "Hallelujah" as streamers of lights and tinsel is lowered as a beautiful lighted star is lowered for the finale.

St. Louis Missouri

Week Ending December 30

The Missouri had a regular Christmas show in keeping with the Yuletide season.

The upper stage was arranged like a brick fireplace with stockings hanging from the mantel while two huge Christmas trees formed the banks on either side.

The acts on the bill of fare ranged from singing, dancing and comedy to contortion and magic by the Luster Brothers. The climax was the appearance of Santa Claus on the stage. He distributed toys to the Missouri girls and they in turn ran from the stage to give the gifts to children in the audience.

Kansas City Mainstreet

Week Ending December 30

The Oska Boys in "Japanese Pastimes" topped the stage program at the Mainstreet this week. Walter Davidson and his Louisville Loons played their twenty-seventh week as the stage orchestra attraction, rendering popular selections as an overture.

William Colley, 5-year-old youth, proved an efficient musician with a harmonica and piano. Bobbie Randall was seen in the role of a comedian, while Saxton and Carol are two good looking girls who know how to dance the black bottom. A Chinese version of the Apache dance is done by Bertin and Leo. James Grady, tenor, is seen in pleasing vocal numbers, while Saranoff is a dialect comedian.

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending December 31

The stage show this week compares favorably with anything this house has done since it opened. Dave Harman and Band and the Penn Rockets are held over.

The curtain opens on the Rockets doing "The Doll Dance," done very well. Harman and the band next play a medley of waltzes, including "Diane," a banjo solo of "World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," and a string trio with "Sweetheart" from "Maytime," and finally a trombone solo by Dave, "My Hero." This number was well received.

Bemis and Brown followed with their two collegiate dances and the surprise finish with the girl taking off her hat proved she was a girl and not a boy got to the audience.

George Dewey Washington with two songs tied up the show and was forced to make a speech. His voice is unusual in quality and tone value and he also knows the value of "selling a song" to the audience.

The girls were on again for a chicken dance done very cute with Antoinette Fabarius, one of the eight, stepping out for a solo bit at the finish.

Breen Brothers were next with their dance as done in the show "Cocanuts" helped put them over.

The Finale was "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella," with the band first singing it, then entire company with girls in back on elevator stage. Best applause heard on finish of act here yet. During the number a scrim drop was let down bearing Happy New Year on it. Show title, "Hello 1928."

Overture as played by Don Albert and Orchestra was "Dance of the Hours" and Dick Liebert at the organ did a solo combining pop songs of 1927 and then introducing two hits for 1928.

Feature was "Love" with Gilbert and Garbo.

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Week Ending December 30

The stage band of the Wisconsin this week have appropriately called their presentation, "Bye, Bye, 1927." It opens with a drop of large newspapers carrying headlines of some of the leading events of the year 1927, including Lindbergh's flight, Dempsey-Tunney fight, and Coolidge's slogan, "I Do Not Choose to Run." From behind each of these sheets, one of the Abbott Dancers bursts forth appropriately dressed for the banner line on the news sheet. Each do a little dance and receives good applause, for it is a real clever introduction, well executed.

The orchestra then plays a selection entitled, "Bye, Bye, 1927," which is done in their usual effective manner. The orchestra number is followed by George Boyce, who shows the audience some snappy soft shoe dancing, and for which he receives big applause.

Helen Kennedy, a tall miss, sang with plenty of pep and not at all a bad voice, a number of popular songs, including "Hello Cutie" and "Dew Dewy Day." She had a fairly pleasing personality and made a good hit.

"Madame Bebbe" was the next number by the orchestra done in good style with the various members of the band singing snatches of the song.

And now the Abbott Dancers in black costumes did their stuff to the tune of the orchestra in a hot dance number known as the Dixie stomp. The girls worked nicely and drew good applause.

"Highways Are Happy Ways" was played by the orchestra and Eddie Galbrecht sang in the chorus, taking Billy Meyers' place, who is sick. The number went over big for Eddie has a fairly good voice and he also obliged with singing "Little Gray Home in the West."

And then none other than Sophie Tucker herself, who sings new songs and old favorites as only Sophie Tucker can sing them. She also aids the leader direct the band as well as singing, proving she is a versatile lady indeed. She pleased the audience nightly with such songs as "She Don't Wanna" and "Absolutely, Positively." With her ability to make enough people laugh she had the audience chuckling most of the time, and went over real big. Ted Shapiro at the piano for Tucker, proved himself no mean pianist as well.

The grand finale brought the Six Abbott Dancers to the upper stage behind large drums which were lighted up from behind showing only the girls' silhouettes to the audience. The entire number was well staged and executed and inaugurated to Milwaukee theatregoers the company's new price policy, which calls for a slight increase in prices on week-ends and holidays with a slight reduction at week-day matinees. It is also the first of a series of big stage presentations with big stars as Sophie Tucker, heading the presentations each week.

All in all, with the exception of Tucker, one might say that the presentation was not a great deal better than those offered at lower prices.

The photoplay was "The Gay Defender," with Richard Dix.

Philadelphia Fox

Week Ending December 31

The presentation acts at the Fox constitute a very well-balanced and entertaining program, though there was nothing particularly characteristic of the holiday season except two large gaily-decorated and lighted Christmas trees, one on each side of the stage.

Forbes Randolph's Kentucky Jubilee Choir, the outstanding feature of the bill, received a very enthusiastic welcome. The setting was an old log cabin, in front of which were grouped eight colored singers clad in overalls and broad-brimmed straw hats. Their first number was "My Old Kentucky Home," followed by a humorous selection, after which they sang a beautiful and haunting negro spiritual that gripped the audience. This was followed by a camp meeting song accompanied by the usual handshaking and hallelujahs characteristic of a colored revival meeting. This is a wonderfully well-blended chorus and they carry off their act with such naturalness that the audience is swept along with its realism. The applause was long and enthusiastic and the sole criticism was that it was not long enough.

Max Fisher and his orchestra played the usual jazz selections exceptionally well. The members of the orchestra, including the leader, fourteen in number, were dressed in Pierrot costumes against a circular stained glass window, flanked on each side by a tall vase against blue curtains embroidered in silver, a very effective and artistic setting. In addition to the orchestra's musical numbers, three of the boys sang various humorous songs, and one of them sang through a megaphone Irving Berlin's "Let's Start All Over Again."

Art Clifton and Ned Brent, the bouncing rubber-legs of dance, are artists in their line and kept the house in amazement and uproar with their clever antics. Never once did they descend to slapstick to put over their act.

Fred Harris and Julie Claire, in their dance from "The Love Song," gave a splendid exhibition of good teamwork.

There was a Christmas medley overture by the Fox Theatre Orchestra.

Chicago Granada

Week Ending January 1

This week's show at the Granada was called "Thunderland," featuring some very good artists whose names were not given by the announcer.

The first number on the program was "Changeless," by the orchestra.

Walter Bradbury did not make much of an attempt to please with his singing of "Among My Souvenirs," but was called for an encore.

"Fifty Years Ago" was the humorous ditty sung by a couple who came out riding an old-fashioned velocipede. They looked just like the characters on an old "tintype" and brought a big hand. A pleasing duet from "My Chocolate Soldier" was next given.

The Loomis Twins were next singing "A Night in June" and "Say It Again." The dramatic reading to "O How I Miss You Tonight" was well received.

The dancing girls did a clever ballet, aided by a male tap and eccentric dancer.

For the last number three fellows did an amusing shell game ballyhoo that brought a lot of laughs. They played "At Sundown" and "He's the Last Word" to a big hand.

The finale was short and loud, but quite effective.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending December 30

Christmas week brought with it an unusually attractive stage show entitled "High Lights," produced by John Murray Anderson. The orchestral prelude which opened the program was entitled "A Christmas Fantasy," and consisted of familiar carols sung by the Metropolitan Vocal Ensemble. The stage setting for this number was very effective. It represented a street on Christmas eve, and with the aid of the camera the effect was given of snow falling before the houses. The carolers were in picturesque costume. Two lighted Christmas trees on either side of the orchestra gave the finishing touches. Arthur Martel's weekly organ classic combined opera and jazz in a selection entitled "Denizetti vs. Donaldson."

Gene Rodemich and the Met Band as usual opened the stage show with a jazz number. Then Sherry Louise sang "Caro Nome," accompanied by the orchestra. Between her and the orchestra there was a gauze curtain beaded with rhinestones and tiny electric lights which twinkled and sparkled, making an attractive background for Sherry's song.

A clever dance was put on next by the Foster Girls as the "Living Marionettes." They were in gayly colored costumes of red, yellow and green check, and their arms and legs were attached to strings suspended from above stage, which made them look like real marionettes.

A syncopated highlight was next on the program in the person of Helen McFarland. She put pep into everything from a vocal rendering of "Is He My Boy Friend," and a snappy jazz dance, to a peppy xylophone solo.

In contrast to this vivacious bit of humanity, Douglas Burley gave us a slow motion number. He apparently had no bones in his body for he twisted himself up in such queer contortions. He made quite a hit when he leaned down and looked at the bottom of his foot with no effort at all.

"I Told Them All About You" was played by the band here, although unannounced on the program. After this came the Foster Girls again, this time in a military tap.

Lou Masse and Ambrose Dietrich then put on some acrobatic dancing. They were dressed as traffic cops, and their number was entitled "A Traffic Highlight."

A comedy highlight, and the hit of the performance was next, with Maizie Clifton and Billie de Rex as the two hard-boiled actresses. The scene was supposed to be in front of a Paris saloon, but they were so "tough" we thought they must be from down by the Winegar Woiks. Their jokes and songs got three encores.

For the finale the entire company contributed. The Foster Girls did another tap step, this time in aviation costume. Masse and Dietrich in Russian costume did some fast dance steps, and Helen McFarland came back for a few minutes with her xylophone, while Sherry Louise sang "Where Lanterns Glow."

The film was "Two Flaming Youths."

Kansas City Capitol

Week Ending December 31

"The American Girl" was the stage production presented by the Bert Smith Revue company at the Capitol this week. Tuneful songs and splendid scenery were plentiful. Vi Shaffer again was seen as the feminine lead, while Billy Van Allen played the leading male role, both appearing in frequent song and dance numbers.

"Chuck" Hoback also was seen in vocal numbers, as was Geneva Mick. The Golden Gate Four rendered several vocal numbers, while the Broadway Beauty Chorus did its share of the work.

A medley of the songs used in the show was played by the Capitolites, the theatre's permanent orchestra, as an overture.

Philadelphia Stanley

Week Ending December 31

The presentation acts at the Stanley this week were designed particularly to appeal to children, even the overture being an arrangement of "Mary's Little Lamb," compiled by Gabriel Hines, with a Fitzpatric scenic film in colors showing the origin of the immortal nursery rhyme. Sascha Jacobibnof, concertmeister, then played a beautiful violin solo, "Ave Maria," with harp accompaniment.

A holiday divertissement, "The Stanley Christmas Party," with Catherine Littlefield and a cast of twenty and the Sylvania Concert Quartette, followed. The act was in three scenes.

Scene 1. The Sleigh Ride. There was a moving background of wind-blown clouds as a horse drew an old-fashioned sleigh across the stage, while the Sylvania Concert Quartette sang "Jingle Bells."

Scene 2. The Snow Glen. Beautiful scene showing snow-laden trees and winding roads as the quartette in spot sang "Silent Night" and "Joy to the World."

Scene 3. Under the Christmas Tree. An elaborate act showing a bright fire burning in a grate and a gigantic gift-laden Christmas tree with a group of dolls and toys standing stiffly under the tree. This scene consisted of eight numbers. In the first, Emma Zuern, soprano, sang "Toyland." In the second, "The Awakening of the Toy Doll," Catherine Littlefield took the part of the doll most realistically. The next four numbers represented trick dolls, singing, dancing and acrobatic dolls and mechanical toys in action, the parts being taken by members of the Littlefield Ballet.

The wooden soldier by Joseph Ross, with his clever acrobatic stunts, brought down the house, while the twin bears and the green monkey were especially good.

Then there was a doll ballet by Catherine Littlefield and her company and in the finale all of the dolls and toys paraded stiffly around the stage. The stiff, mechanical motions of the dolls and toys made it hard to believe that they were real flesh and blood, and the dim firelight and the character of the music made the illusion of a Christmas Eve frolic of toys complete.

The Stanley staff, who staged and arranged the Christmas party, deserve great credit.

Chicago Uptown

Week Ending January 1

The program at the Uptown this week was composed almost entirely of little folks, and the audience surely did like them. Bennie Krueger and his band supplied the music.

Opening: The Morgan Dancers did a "Rabbit Dance," and while the band played "Silent Night" the "House of Mother Goose" was presented. The backdrop was illustrated with all the childhood story book characters, and a big pie covered the band, who played "Bye Bye, Blackbird." Then eight little tots who were dressed as fairy tale characters sang a group of the nursery rhymes. At this point Krueger arrived, and when the children all gathered around him, he said, "They think I'm Father Goose."

The Morgan Dancers then did a "Rabbit Dance" and the band followed with "Just a Memory," with a vocal chorus by Jackie Heller and a saxophone solo by Krueger that was excellent.

"Two Little Blackberries" did a pleasing skit; a revue performed to "Annabelle Lee," and a bouncing clown sang "No Wonder I'm Happy."

Baby Jane was next playing a saxophone solo, "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," and then sang "Why Are You Jealous of Me?" A flapperette and two soldiers sang "Under the Moon" and did acrobatic dancing.

Roberts and Clark presented a very novel act. The man was dressed in a bulldog outfit that was just about as realistic as it could be without being the real thing. His howling and antics caused many laughs.

Some Irish "triplets" and some Dutch "twins" came out and added to the color and completeness of the show.

Tommy Wonder, who was reported in last week's Oriental report, again scored with his clever dancing.

For the finale, the Morgan Dancers held torches spelling out the words "Merry Xmas" and screams of tinsel descended while the band played "Jingle Bells."

Brooklyn Strand

Week Ending December 30

In celebration of Christmas Week managing director Edward L. Hyman presented an especial stage incident called "A Christmas Fantasy," which fully upheld the reputation of this house for offering presentations of timely interest. In addition, there was another stage number which offered stage band and featured artists.

The feature photoplay was the comedy-drama, "French Dressing," which ran 1 hour and 10 minutes.

The theatre front, lobby and interior were decorated with garlands of holly, etc., for Christmas and two large Christmas trees flanked the production stage. These trees were fully decorated and were used during the "Christmas Fantasy." This presentation, "in one" with a newsboy tenor coming out in front of the fabric draw curtains singing "Rags." A steel-blue spot from the dome covered the boy. At the conclusion he did a little pantomime of a newsboy trying to keep warm in the cold as the curtains slowly opened, disclosing a tableau in full stage behind a scrim of angels, these being the members of the ballet.

Newsboy slowly made his exit as a soprano off stage sang "Holy Night" while the girls went through some specially prepared business. Four light blue spots from either side on the set and violet floods from the dome on scrim.

At the conclusion of this the James A. Fitzpatrick technicolor film, "Mary's Little Lamb," was thrown on the screen while the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra played the specially scored music. After this

Organs Use 18,000,000 Pounds of Wind Daily

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 4.—More than 18,000,000 pounds of air are blown within the pipe organs of the United States every day to provide music in the nation's churches, theatres and auditoriums, according to figures compiled by ventilating engineers who are conducting a survey to show the important part that electrically controlled air plays in every phase of American life. Driven by powerful blower type fans, veritable gales of wind pressure are created within the pipe organs to produce the resonant musical notes from inanimate metal. In the modern pipe organ, the fans are specially constructed with special motor, mounted as a unit on an absorbent foundation and provided with a flexible air pipe connection so that not the slightest machine or air noise will magnify or travel through the quietness of a church or similar building.

the screen was raised, disclosing a nursery set, in the center of which was a huge bed. Members of the ballet, 12 in number, were dressed in kiddie pajamas and went through a dance, after which they all piled into bed.

Lights were dimmed as Santa Claus with pack on his back made his entrance singing Victor Herbert's "Toyland." The children awakened, discovered Santa and rushed to him, each getting toys and dolls. This followed a novelty dance in which kiddie cars played a prominent part. Santa Claus then made his exit as the children returned to bed. This "Christmas Fantasy" required 20 minutes in full.

After the Topical Review, Ted Fiorito, the composer, appeared in full stage with his Victor Recording Orchestra of 12 musicians and went through a well balanced program. The routine, taking 20 minutes, was as follows: the band opened with "Charmaine." Four amber spots and 4 blue spots covered the set; bridges 1 and 2 amber floods, with dome also amber.

Carlena Diamond, the dancing harpist, was the second number. She was covered by white spot from dome; bridges off. The drummer then came forward to sing a comedy song; the dome covered him with an amber spot; bridges 1 and 2 also amber.

Ted Fiorito, on the piano, played his best known compositions. Two blue side spots on band and white spot on Fiorito. "Mellenberg Blues" was the next band offering, after which Caffery and Miller, acrobatic dancers, did their stuff; all lights white. The number closed with "Miss Anna Belle Lee."

After a series of names this house comes back to the stageband policy with added acts presenting a well balanced bill for its return to the most popular picture house policy today.

Dave Harman and his band opens the presentation playing "Pale Moon," using a special arrangement. The Penn Rockets, eight girls well trained, next do a number. Charles Gregory, who was planted in the band, steps out to do his musical specialty of playing a rubber glove, balloon, rubber tire and a saw. Next came the Capital Quartet, who pleased with three numbers. Lloyd and Brice stopped the show with their acrobatic act, well spattered with laughs.

Dave, assisted by the band, sung "That's a Good Girl" and the Penn Rockets on again for another dance. Murray and Alan, with two comedy numbers, "Liars" and "10,000 Years Ago," came along and tied up the proceedings.

The finale had everybody on the stage with the girls in the rear of the stage on the elevator, which came up with a lot of set pieces, all having thousands of mirrors on them, making a beautiful sight.

An overture by Don Albert and the Penn Symphony Orchestra entitled "The Spirit of Christmas" had the Capitol Quartet and Virginia Futrelle singing "Holy Night" and "Adeste Fideles" and scenic effects. The feature, "Body and Soul," with an "Our Gang" comedy wound up the bill.

Chicago Diversey

Week Ending December 31

The "Toy Shop" was the title of this week's stage show at the Diversey.

The music by the Musical Funsters, who were led by Joe Kayser, was exceptionally pleasing.

The opening music was a medley of childhood songs that was very well liked. After a revue by the dancing girls, Za Bell Thall did a toe dance to some inappropriate music.

Fauntleroy and Van played "How Can I Call You Friend After I've Called You Sweetheart" on brooms, and then "The Old Grey Mare" on bellows. Their clogs, trick hick songs and "recitations" drew a big hand.

Jazzlip Richardson was next with acrobatic and eccentric dancing to "Sing Me a Baby Song" and "Just Like a Butterfly." He went over big.

The boys in the orchestra then dished up some hot and harmonious jazz, and the show closed with the revue by the dancing girls.

Larry Spier

ORGAN SOLOS

Milton Charles (Chicago Oriental) entitled his solo this week "Sing Out the Old, Sing in the New," and the following songs were played, "Dream Kisses," "Is She My Girl Friend?," "Just a Memory," "Auld Lang Syne," "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," "Crazy Words," "Ain't She Sweet?," "At Sundown," "Sing Me a Baby Song," and "My Blue Heaven." This is one of the many novel stunts that Charles is noted for originating.

Julia Dawn (Houston Kirby) used as a special Christmas overture a production prepared by Manager Floyd Smith. The orchestra played the opening bars of "Holy Night" and the work curtain opened revealing Julia Dawn, the Kirby's golden voiced organist in front of a gray drop, attached to which was a shadow box representing a huge cross. On each side of the cross was a large Christmas wreath, centered by a burning candle. Miss Dawn sang, in her clear soprano, "Holy Night." At close of chorus the curtains came down with orchestra completing number with a fan flare of joyous melody. Wade Crosby, art director for Publix Theatres in Houston, designed the set.

Edmund Fitch (Chicago Sheridan) played the week ending December 11, "Sextette from Lucia," and "Vo-do-de-o-do," "Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffman," "She Don't Wanna," "Are You Happy?" "Is She My Girl Friend?" and "Memory Blues," in the usual Fitch symphonic style that was well received.

Muth (San Antonio, Texas) offers "The Organ Speaks" this week, with a special introductory trailer which explains that the organ is capable of imitating the most intricate instruments, bands, symphonies, etc. He then goes into the slides, showing the origination of the organ from the cathedral instrument, and then playing to represent jazz bands, martial bands, symphonies, and various instruments. The number went over great, and Muth got one of the best hands all week that he has received in a long while.

Henri A. Keats (Chicago Uptown). The first slide read "At Your Service" and those following told of his being at McVickers theatre, and asking all those in the audience to help him uphold his reputation by singing. He used the music of "It All Depends on You" for this and then played "Are You Happy?," "Did You Mean It When You Said I Love You?," "A Night in June." One of the slides read "Singing denotes happiness, lets start the New Year right." After playing "My Blue Heaven" as his last number he was applauded until he gave as an encore "Just Once Again."

Edward K. House (Chicago Granada) played "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" while the opening slide said "Happy New Year." Then House announced that although everyone was looking forward to the new year, he believed the audience would like to sing some of the old year's songs, and the following were selected: "Memories," "Down by the Old Mill Stream," "East Side, West Side," "My Irish Rose," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," and "Auld Lang Syne." He then played two or three new songs that were well received.

THE WALTZ OF LOVE—(Ted Browne Music Co.)—A pretty waltz number by Ted Koehler and Joe Verges. A story of love in a ballroom.

ROSALIE—(Harms, Inc.)—Sigmund Romberg and George Gershwin, two of the greatest, collaborated and the result couldn't help but be 100 per cent in the Ziegfeld production of the same name, featuring Marilyn Miller and Jack Donahue.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR, MARY?—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—A song with an original lilt that is both infectious and melodious. I heard Mark Fisher sing it for the first time at a Christmas benefit at the Oriental theatre and it sounded great. Walter Donaldson wrote it—enuff said.

JAPANSY—(Harms, Inc.)—Al Bryan, who wrote the lyric, as usual has an unusual play on words. This number is of the melodious type, handled in an Oriental manner and arranged as a waltz.

AMONG MY SOUVENIRS—(De Sylva, Brown & Henderson)—This is a repeater but will again say that this looks like one of the biggest hits of 1928. Both the lyric and melody are perfect. Words by Edgar Leslie, music by Horatio Nicholls.

MY MELANCHOLY BABY—(Joe Morris Music Co.)—A melancholy fox trot ballad with a tinge of blue. Another come-back song. This one also was a big hit several years ago but has a great opportunity of duplicating this feat as it is a great song. Words by Geo. A. Norton, music by Ernie Burnett.

VOICE OF THE SOUTHLAND—(Austin, Bloom & Koehler, Inc.)—A new Dixie song by a new firm which is headed by Gene Austin, The Victor Record Star. Austin has the ability, single handed, to start the song. Co-writers, Marty Bloom and Ted Koehler.

WHY DO YOU TELL ME YOU LOVE ME—(Ted Browne Music Co.)—Written by Gene Austin who has quite a name in the record world. This should give it quite a start. A fox trot melody with a nice story in the lyric.

THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS—(Irving Berlin, Inc.)—The theme song of the picture of the same name. It ought to be good as it is by the writers of the famous "Among My Souvenirs," by Edgar Leslie and Horatio Nicholls.

P. S.—Have you made your New Year's resolutions?

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

WELCOME—AND LISTEN!

By T. O. SERVICE

WELCOME—all you interesting and, I trust, interested new readers—and listen:—You are just in time to hear the regular monthly explanation of the fundamental and quite important differences distinguishing the "Service Talks" which appear in this space from the so-called "box office reviews" which have appeared and continue to appear, for some more or less obscure reason, in the trade journals published under other than this banner. If I ramble somewhat, even becoming autobiographical, please be patient. It's a big subject. And if I do not make myself wholly clear, please do not hesitate to write in and demand additional statistics. Or, if you prefer, wait four weeks until the next regular monthly thesis on the subject. The explanation for January follows:

The "Service Talk" is, in simple, one man's opinion of a motion picture. The "box office review" is, of course, one man's opinion of a picture also. Here the similarity ceases. As to wit:

Whereas the man writing a "box office review" pretends to be gifted with some sort of second sight which enables him to tell his readers, in advance of exhibition, the amount of money the picture will or will not draw to the theatres in which it may be exhibited, the man writing a "Service Talk" pretends to be nothing more than a human being with a fairly representative knowledge of current product and with no second sight of any sort. The writer of a "Service Talk," therefore, does not make random guesses about box office attraction power, money-making qualities or entertainment reactions. The reason is—and here the autobiography begins—this:

For better than nine years this paper did maintain, I blush to admit, that its reviewers, carefully selected and well paid eye-and-type-writer men, could guess the earning power of an untried picture by looking at it. During those nine years, however, this paper also conducted a "What the Picture Did for Me" department, wherein exhibitors wrote actual box office reports of actual exhibitions, and a comparison of actual exhibition records with reviewers' predictions, previously published, told its own very plain story. That story is, simply, that it can't be done. To make doubly sure, to remove the possibility that unfortunate selection of reviewers had been made, the files of contemporary publications were searched and similar comparisons made. This clinched the conclusion that no mere human being can look at a new picture upon the screen and successfully predict its earning capacity. Incidentally, and it is curious that no one thought of this before, it became evident that any human being who could make successful predictions would be no less than an imbecile to write mere reviews when he could so easily amass untold wealth by running a theatre.

When these investigations were completed, and these are but a few of the checks and cross-checks applied to the "box office review," the institution was booted bodily out of the paper and the present plain and unpretentious department of personal opinions substituted. The "Service Talk," it now is quite generally admitted, provides adequate answer to the traditional trade inquiry, "How'd you like the picture" and of course that's all anybody ever wanted to know anyway. It has other advantages:

It is more plainly a personal opinion, hence less likely to mislead exhibitors into buying pictures by guess.

It is less involved in structure, hence easier to read.

It is less pretentious—in fact not pretentious at all—hence easy to forget when it does not jibe with reader opinion and to remember when it does.

It is what it seems to be, nothing more nor less, without mystery or fake whiskers, and I hope you grow to like the department whether you agree with each and every "Service Talk" or not.

(P. S.—And perhaps this is a good place to quote a letter from James Hare, County Theatre, Bangor, N. Wales, who states, among other paragraphs praiseful of this book, "I have found Service Talks particularly helpful." May the same good fortune attend each and every one of you.)

"LOVES OF CARMEN"

YOU who have been in the business since it was young, or relatively so, no doubt remember the year when Fox and Famous burned up studio overhead and overtime in getting out their respective and hotly competitive versions of "Carmen." You recall that Bara did it for Fox, Farrar for Famous, and that the trade was swept for a time with the never satisfactorily settled argument that one (or the other) was better than the other (whichever it was). If I recall correctly, I cast my vote for the Farrar version, which may have been due to an assumption that, having sung the thing, she should know more about its enactment than the songless Bara. However—

It was several years later, I forget just how many, that First National imported the Negri version of "Carmen," made abroad, and exhibited it in this country under title of "Gypsy Blood." An interesting sidelight on this, if confessions are as interesting as the success of confessional magazines seems to indicate, consists of the fact that I saw this picture in a projection room (on one of my last visits to such places, for cause) and pronounced it a whale. It turned out, as you know, to be a snail. Anyway—

The medal which should go to the producer doing the best job of "Carmen" for the screen now may be wrapped up and forwarded to William Fox, whose "Loves of Carmen" is an expanded and ornamented but extremely engaging version of the old, old story. I think this Fox version of the picture should go down in history as "the camera Carmen," for liberties taken with the script have been in all cases productive of immense camera benefits. The finished product is a brighter, snappier, more interesting "Carmen" than I would have believed could be contrived at this late date.

This Carmen is portrayed by Dolores Del Rio, and at this point I wish to suggest that Pola Negri, Geraldine Farrar and Theda Bara look at this specimen if they would know what was wrong with their efforts in the piece. This girl acts, without acting, snaps without cracking and hits without stinging. She is my idea of the right actress in the right place, and may Fox find many more roles as good for her as this one. I'll guarantee to report each of them faithfully, though their observation take me to the darkest wilds of South Chicago.

The other big factor in this version of the picture, visibly, is Victor McLaglen. His Esemillo is the first I've seen that looked like the fellow might kill a bull if he had a mind to do so. McLaglen, the picture makes one feel, would not be at all disturbed by a herd of bulls on a lone prairie. And for his handling of the amorous duties imposed by the story he deserves what Tex Guinan calls a big hand.

Atop of which, and extremely important, the direction of one Raoul Walsh (who may have directed the Bara version for all I know) stands up prominently among the assets. He has had his flops, some of them memorable, but this picture makes up for all of them so far as I'm concerned.

Look at "The Loves of Carmen" if you like to look at good pictures.

"THE DOVE"

I WENT to the new United Artists theatre four days after the opening, purposely delaying my visit to escape first night congestion and to permit the program to "set," and I feel I should have waited at least another week. I'm sure I should have waited until "The Dove" had flown, and surely another week would have witnessed that phenomenon. And phenomenon is the right word, for if "The Dove" can fly there is nothing distinctive about Lindbergh. As, of course, there is.

"The Dove" was a stage play. It was a vehicle for Holbrook Blinn. It ran pretty well in the major metropoli and Blinn was the show. Made into a picture, for Norma Talmadge, with Noah Beery attempting the Blinn role with captional inflections intended to reproduce the orality of the stage play, it may or may not make a million dollars (which is, as stated, none of my concern) but it certainly isn't a snappy evening for such as I. Indeed, I stayed to the finish out of no more fascinating motive than an abiding sense of fair play and an appended, if thin, hope that something might yet transpire to make it all worth while. Nothing did.

The story, if indeed it be a story, concerns a dance hall gal in a place that looks like Spain and "the best damn caballero" in those parts, the word meaning gentleman, according to caption, and the individual being the reverse thereof. Miss Talmadge is the girl, Mr. Beery the man, Miss Talmadge's new leading man (whose name I never remember) is the boy friend and there are other people, plenty of them, in the cast. Told in State Street language, which puts it more briefly and at least as pleasantly, "the guy don't make the grade and the dame cops." Endless scenes get this intriguing information across, amid endless sets and innumerable close-ups of Beery's teeth, tongue, palate, larynx—in fact I looked away from the screen several times lest the disclosures become even more personal. The only thing in the picture less pleasant than these lens explorations of Mr. Beery's esophageal regions are the scenes showing his American friend, whose name I missed, ridding himself of spirituous liquors by the most expedient method. And all these things in a Norma Talmadge picture, in a nice new theatre, on a nice Winter's evening at 75 cents the copy to the excellent accompaniment of Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld's orchestra.

I think, although it's entirely beside the point, that the picture might have been made eyeable by the presence of Mr. Blinn, whose Spaniards are DeLuxe, but I am quite sure there wasn't a picture in "The Dove" to begin with and so there was little or no chance of getting one out of it. Sorry, too, for Miss Talmadge, whose pictures now, by the book, should be at their best.

"THE GORILLA"

DESPITE every effort to the contrary, I came in upon the middle reelage of "The Gorilla" and of course that was my hard luck. It wasn't spooky, after that, and so of course the comedy wasn't a scream either. But, I am very sure, that was my misfortune. The luckier people who got in before the thing started seemed to be having the time of their lives, screaming one moment with laughter and the next with fear. From this testimony:

It seemed that Charles Murray's humor was at its peak as the dumb detective, that the mystery surrounding the identity of the murderer was quite successfully maintained, and that the whole elicited about the required amount of audible reaction from the assembled witnesses. Isn't that all you ask of a spook comedy? If it is, and it must be, "The Gorilla" has it.

"THE VALLEY OF THE GIANTS"

THEY, who should know, tell me that Milton Sills was Professor of Psychology at the University of Chicago for four years before taking to the easier psychology—and money—of the films. If this be true, and his pictures make me doubt it, I should like to know why Mr. Sills does not apply himself to his no doubt treasured text books before attacking his next picture—or letting his next picture attack him, if that's the case. Or, if by any chance Mr. Sills has already consulted such text books, I should like to know their titles so that I can inform Mayor Thompson of his oversight in not having these dreadful tomes burned at the lake front. For—and now I get to my story—Mr. Sills has not had an adult picture in so long that I'm beginning to doubt the existence of Santa Claus.

This one, "The Valley of the Giants," starts out beautifully. It begins with magnificent scenes showing the California Redwoods fore, aft and alongside. The trees play their roles splendidly, as does the camera man, but aside from that the picture is quite a terrible bore. The story enacted in this scene—and maybe this is the trouble—could as well be laid in a Carolina pine camp, a Tennessee plantation, a Montana ranch or the vaguely defined and much maligned Northwoods. It just isn't big. In fact, it might be written thus: The hero had a couple of scraps with the villain and won the second one. (A Dempseyite would add that he got a 14 count in the first session, but that would be a dirty dig.)

In all sincerity, I am very much in favor of Milton Sills' continuance in pictures and as a star of the first rank. He's a great fellow, a wholly masculine type, a good battler and, apparently, a square shooter. All he needs, it seems, is a story to work in, for mere camera fodder doesn't look like much alongside his burly frame. And I know that stories good enough for an actor like this are rare. This explains my wish, above, that Mr. Sills would look at his text books and cook up a yarn for himself which would engage the attention of citizens older than six years. If he finds none of them there, and if they come not to hand from other sources, let me suggest that he refrain from appearing in pictures until time brings to his desk, as inevitably it must, a yarn worthy of his efforts.

"The Valley of the Giants" is the old scrap about the lumber lands, done again and not so well.

"SPOTLIGHT"

ESTHER RALSTON is back in her element again, and good again, in "Spotlight." That makes it a good picture. It is light, likeable and pictorially attractive, as Miss Ralston's pictures should be. If the story has marks of familiarity, it has distinguishing marks as well, these mainly in the form of clever camera slants, neat captions, directorial niceties and a general suavity which gives a big lift to the proceedings.

Miss Ralston, in this case, comes into the picture a dumb blonde, is made a Russian brunette and an actress for publicity pictures, finds love in the camouflaged section of her role and emerges—as you shall see if you see the picture. In the enactment of the unvital, unpretentious and eminently charming little anecdote the star and her several aides get over a lot of good stuff. It's a good picture.

I like Miss Ralston, as veteran readers of these columns will attest, for several reasons, not the least of them being more prominently displayed in previous vehicles than in this one. That I like her as well in this, when her golden tresses are doused beneath a nightblack wig and the sheathing is rather complete throughout, must be a tribute to the lady's acting ability. I had not suspected, I may as well confess, that this latter was among her possessions. Glad to note it.

Yes, "The Spotlight," or maybe it's just "Spotlight," is an excellent little picture, not a tremendous thing nor an unforgettable one, just one of those nice little evening's entertainments that the theatre never yet has had enough of at a given time. More—more of the same.

IT was my misfortune, if you look at it that way, to read Edgar Saltus' "The Imperial Orgy" the evening before I went to the Roosevelt to see "Love," which is Hollywood jargon for "Anna Karenina." Accordingly, I disbelieved the blather about the "honor" and such of the Russian court and I doubted various other aspects of the yarn—but the fact that it impressed me as a pretty good picture in spite of these things seems to be in its favor. Yes, it must have been good, for when I can watch Greta Garbo grieve for reel upon reel because her stupid husband believes she shouldn't come home from her sweeties to fondle the boy-child, there is no explanation save that of virtue—I am referring to the picture. Yes, I'm sure it's a good picture, although I don't know why.

Maybe it's the glitter of the uniforms that I liked, or maybe the Gilbert of this kind of picture is a pretty distinctive figure, or maybe there was curiosity to see what they had done to the story after they decided—and if they decided—it wasn't quite suitable for the picture houses as written. Anyway—

I did sit through "Love," although it was very late and although I'd have gone elsewhere had I not seen all the other pictures in convenient radius, and I did note there were many people at the Roosevelt to see the thing on a night when not many people are expected to be at the Roosevelt for any reason, and maybe that's enough reason for thinking that "Love" is a pretty good picture. I think I'll just pass it along to you with these observations.

"TOODLES"

"TOODLES"—or maybe it's "Toddles"—is the first of the short Paramount pictures I've seen, perhaps because the Chicago theatres use so many "presentations" that they seldom have program time for more than one screen attraction, and I believe the unit making these things has a chance to do some excellent stuff. The youngster is younger than most of the juvenile cinematics, and smart as well as "cute." Further, this comedy, at least, is done without captions, which fact is not foolishly exploited. I have hopes for the project. I should like to request, however, that other incidents on a level with the ancient drunken-duck stuff in this one be shelved as (1) too old for use and (2) badly out of key with the juvenile idea of comedy.

"BRIDGES"

"BRIDGES AROUND THE WORLD" is the title of an extremely interesting scenic used on the opening program of the United Artists theatre in Chicago. The thing has a good central idea which is well followed throughout. Too, the local projectors of the thing have hooked on a civic interest touch by finishing with views of the chief bridge in these parts, a touch worth remembering and one which brought applause.

OUR GANG

OUR GANG are something like their old selves in the comedy I saw last week, the title of which was lost in the folds of the screen drape. It is the one in which the hypnotist makes the children believe they are various animals. The action is snappy and there is something, at least enough, in the basic idea. More luck to the kiddies.

NEWS REVIEWS

I HAVE seen several of the newsreel "annual reviews" and have seen none that are bad. The best, I believe, is the Pathe edition seen at a downtown theatre the other night, which repeated local news events almost exclusively and finished with Lindbergh. Showmanship here—and what a rare quality in newspictures or elsewhere. But need we wait a full year for these flashbacks? Why not an item in each newsreel, headed "One Year Ago Today" as the newspapers use items originally published "Ten Years Ago Today," etc., and who'll be first to introduce this feature? I make no charge whatever for the suggestion and I lay the idea before all and sundry newsreel editors simultaneously with the typing of the following period:

THE THEATRE

Incorporated in this department of practical showmanship of Exhibitors Herald are the Moving Picture World departments, "Selling the Picture to the Public," which was established September 23, 1911, by Epes Winthrop Sargent, and "Better Business Builders."

"The Theatre" Begins the M. B. I. Club

My Best Idea Club Will Be Permanent Part of "Theatre"

With the first issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD, "The Theatre begins a new feature for all theatremen, and here-with inaugurates the M. B. I. club.

The membership will be composed of any and all theatremen interested in theatre exploitation and showmanship. The club is created for the purpose of giving exhibitors a new theatre service and to furnish them with exploitation ideas that have proven to be successful.

The initials stand for "My Best Idea." Your "My Best Idea" is the one of which you are most proud. Among all the good exploitations that you have put across during your years as a theatremen there is one exploitation that stands out above all the rest. It was a knockout and you are proud of it. It's the one you like to relate to fellow exhibitors when you get together for a chat or a round of poker.

Your "My Best Idea" is just the exploitation that "The Theatre" wants to hear about, and to give you an incentive to send in your "My Best Idea," the club is being organized.

The rules for membership are simple. Every exhibitor who sends in his "My Best Idea" is made a member of the M. B. I. club.

As soon as you send in your "My Best Idea" and it appears in this department, you will receive a notice that you have been made a member, and you will also receive an attractive certificate of membership upon which is contained your "My Best Idea" just as it appeared in "The Theatre." The Certificate will make a fine appearance hanging on the wall of your private office, and it will preserve in print forever your "My Best Idea." After you have become a member, you won't have to tell other exhibitors about your "My Best Idea." You can show it to them. Now just a bit more about your "My Best Idea." It makes no difference what it is. It may have been an advertising campaign, or it may have been just one ad. It probably was some little stunt to develop good will for your theatre. It may be as old as the hills, or you may have put it over yesterday. But if you regard it as your "My Best Idea," write a short letter to "The Theatre" explaining what it is, and be sure to include your picture.

"The Theatre" believes the M. B. I. club is going to be a great feature of this department. Remember that your "My Best Idea" may help some other exhibitor to boost his own business, and the "My Best Idea" of another exhibitor may help you to knock your old house record sky high.

It makes no difference how big or how little your "My Best Idea" is. An exhibitor running the smallest theatre in the country has just as much chance of becoming a member as the biggest exhibitor in the world, so send in your "My Best Idea" at once, and let "The Theatre" know what you think of the M. B. I. club.

Redheads Get Passes

During the showing of the "Parisian Redheads," a woman's band composed entirely of girls with red hair, the Lyric theatre invited all redheads to be guests of the house. Co-operating with a local newspaper, the natural titian-headed women merely had to clip a coupon out of the newspaper and take it to the theatre, where, if the color of the hair was correct, they were admitted.

Potatoes for Admission

The neighborhood theatres of Indianapolis recently participated in an apple and potato matinee under the auspices of the Indorsers of Photoplays. The matinees were given especially for children and the admission instead of money, was by foodstuffs, which in turn was distributed to the needy poor of the city.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theater, Brooklyn

Our New Year program was designed to give young 1928 a big boost on his way to popularity and prosperity. This, not merely as a spur for the inaugural week, but as conclusive proof that a still "bigger and better" policy is being put into practice, to remain the whole 52 weeks. In the past we have won the confidence of our patrons not by occasional spurts but by giving more and more and better and better from week to week and month to month.

This performance had as the feature photoplay the widely discussed United Artists production, "Sorrell and Son," a somewhat longer feature picture than is the usual thing here. This caused the shortening of the rest of the show, thus our entire attention was centered in the production of one big stage presentation which served to introduce a personality we have been advertising and exploiting for weeks.

Art Kahn, who hails from Chicago and is new to the East, was advertised far and wide for the past three weeks as "That Rollicking, Rhythmic Master of Ceremonies," "The Ed Wynn of Music," "The Personality Playboy of Modern Music," "That Frolicsome, Friendly Fellow," etc. We also advertised the fact that he would appear with his stage band of "Twenty Talented, Tireless Musicians" and with favorite artists. It was our aim to make this inaugural appearance of Art Kahn in a big act a real epic of showmanship and after the first performance on Saturday, December 31, we knew he had got "over" in great shape.

The entire length of this program was two hours and one minute, of which time "Sorrell and Son" required one hour and 36 minutes. This left 25 minutes for Kahn and his entertaining accomplices, and on the upper show there was time to inject a two-reel comedy to run 20 minutes.

"The All Night Club" was the programmed title of Kahn's first-week act. It opened with a film leader introducing Kahn and the various entertainers. The silver draw curtains were then closed over the production stage, "In One," and a specially made film from the booth projected the exterior of a night club upon the curtains, with the words, "The All Night Club," flashing on and off the marquee. This film ran continuously as pedestrians made their way into the club, each having a "gag" to pull just before entering. In this way it was possible to work up Kahn's name before he appeared.

With a black-out on the final gag the curtains opened disclosing the interior of the club, with the 20 piece orchestra seated. Kahn wielded the baton and the band struck into "Blue Baby," the special arrangement giving various brass and string instruments a chance to get hot. Then Kahn introduced a number of performers, played some hot stuff on the piano and led his band through several popular pieces.

Three ads which show how theatres in the Iowa territory are using two-for-one admissions to boost patronage. The local newspapers co-operate in the venture and give fine publicity. On the whole, these three ads are excellent. White space has been used to good advantage. The Tivoli ad could afford to have the name of the picture in larger type, particularly so because the illustration depends upon the name.

Iowa Exhibitors Tieup with Papers on Two for One Plan

Capitalizing on what they know of human nature, a group of Iowa motion picture house managers, have successfully put over the entertainment coupon idea by giving the people "something for nothing." At least that is the reaction to the scheme of admitting one person holding a coupon when accompanied by another person holding a paid adult ticket.

E. A. Schoneberger of the Tivoli, South Omaha; Kenneth Thompson of the King at Albia, Harry Mitchnik of the Lincoln in Chariton have proved the wisdom of such procedure in their towns. J. P. Martin of the Strand and Willard at Creston and P. D. Alleman of the Strand and Rialto at Clinton with probably others not listed are seriously considering the expediency of trying out the plan.

Tieups with papers is the favored plan although the theatre often does a solo in advertising the strategy. The Omaha Sun helps Schoneberger; the Monroe County News helps the Albia house and the Leader backs Mitchnik at Chariton. In such cases the theatre uses its regular ad space for advance films and depends on the paper to advertise the coupon picture.

When the paper acts as host, the pictures usually get plenty of notice and the houses draw well. One theory is that the coupon idea when used by the community, helps create the theatre habit. The lobby displays on advance bookings as well as trailer lure are vital factors in advertising the coming films. The manager figures that the patrons had better be at the movie seeing the advance notices than at home with no thought of the film world in mind.

Papers in the smaller towns almost always have a corner devoted to news of the film world. This is supplied by publicity departments with which the theatres are allied or by the managers unless some outside service comes in to supply this gratis.

Good will for the paper makes the plan popular in many towns, but the underlying thought is that of getting something for nothing. When that something proves to be worth while, the favorable attitude toward the theatre grows by leaps and bounds.

Newsboys Entertained at U's "Shield of Honor"

Through the courtesy of William Raynor, manager of the Lafayette theatre, Buffalo, 3,000 newsies clapped and cheered a special Saturday morning showing of "The Shield of Honor."

The Buffalo release of Universal's production featured the dedication of the picture to Chief of Police James W. Higgins and his force. Higgins' picture was published in the Times, and the interest of the whole city awakened. This is just an example of what this form of exploitation will mean; there are 477 other police chiefs throughout the United States who will share this honor.

Theatres, Store Tieup

The Pagent, Lafayette, Maplewood, Grand-Florissant, Woodland, Powhattan, and New Michigan theatres of St. Louis and Mapwood, Mo., and the Lyric theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., have tied in with a popularity contest being conducted by a number of merchants.

It is promised that 20 girls will be taken on a free trip to Florida and Havana, Cuba. The merchants have contributed the $7,500 needed to defray all the expenses of the trip for the girls. Standings of the contestants are shown nightly at the theatres. It is believed this arrangement has attracted some business to the show houses. The contest is in the nature of a "Patronize Your Neighborhood Dealers" drive.

'Lonely P.A.' Breaks Theatre Record with "Love" Radio Stunt

Down in Memphis, Tennessee, at Loew's State theatre, there's a "lonely press agent" by the name of J. H. Burnett who breaks the monotony (?) of his existence by reading this department, and now and then he gets inspiration from it. When the theatre played "Love," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture starring John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, he put over a novel radio exploitation that broke the house record. But read what he did in his own words:

"There's a lonely press agent way down in Memphis, Tennessee, that's been reading in the HERALD consistently. He has obtained some mighty good ideas, too, by this aforementioned indulgence. He's been reading a lot about what Manager Bob Blair, down at the Texas theatre, San Antonio, has been doing.

"It's been great stuff and since a thing like that is somewhat contagious, it has prompted this lonely press agent to give the world what he believes to be an original exploitation idea on 'Love,' the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production with John Gilbert and Greta Garbo.

"During the week of December 19, Leona Lamar, heralded psychic, opened an engagement at Loew's State. The idea of a radio program was put over whereby Miss Lamar during her half hour on the air was to broadcast a thought message to the listeners. They were asked to write down the first 10 words that came into their minds during the minute's silence and mail them to a local paper, The Memphis Evening Appeal. The word, according to Miss Lamar's radio announcement, was to be one that meant a whole lot to everyone. The next day the paper announced that 'Love' was the 'key' word and Wednesday they broadcast it over the big station. We opened 'Love' Monday, December 26, to the largest crowd ever to visit the theatre.

"How's that, Mr. Blair?"

When the Princess theatre, San Antonio, Tex., ran "Annie Laurie," the M-G-M picture starring Lillian Gish, the name was changed to "Ladies from Hell." Ushers were dressed in the kilts similar to the ones worn by the soldiers in the picture. The costumes and bare knees attracted a great deal of attention, and helped the picture to do better than average business.

One Ad Pays Cost of 75,000 Programs for Eleven Houses

The eleven Milwaukee Theatre Circuit houses under the direction of N. J. Blumberg, put Carl Laemmle's Joy Week, Dec. 25 to 31, over in great shape. D. J. Goldman, manager of the Downer theatre, arranged with a well known Milwaukee shoe man to have his advertisement appear on 75,000 calendars distributed at the various theatres.

These calendars, printed on heavy cardboard and measuring about 8x9 inches, were distributed at each of the 11 houses, the name of the theatre and manager as well appearing on the calendar at the respective theatres at which they were distributed. The upper section of the sheet carried the shoe man's advertisement, while below this was the greeting of the theatre and manager as well as a picture of Carl Laemmle. Below this was the entire program of the theatre for that week.

The cost of printing these 75,000 calendars for the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit was nil. The advertisement on the top paid for that. The only thing that the theatres had to do was to distribute them, which they were glad to do since they carried their week's program on the calendar. This Milwaukee shoe man has advertised before in connection with the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, and has found it to be very profitable. A tieup with a theatre in connection with this type of advertising is usually a very good medium for a merchant.

Document Pulls Patrons

J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's theatre, Ottawa, Can., caused a holiday scare among his friends by sending out formidable-looking summons by mail to a long list of patrons to attend the special midnight performance on Friday, December 30, to celebrate the closing of the year. The document was drawn up with many legal terms, a red seal and court style.

The first impression, on opening the envelope, was truly shocking. Then came the laugh. The theatre was filled to the doors for the cabaret gala.

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

ALIAS THE LONE WOLF: Columbia mystery, with Bert Lytell, Lois Wilson, William V. Mong, Ned Sparks, James Mason, Paulette Duval, Ann Brody, and Alphonz Ethier. Directed by Edward H. Griffith. Released August 23. Length 5,831.

TYPE AND THEME: This Lone Wolf, then, is after all a U. S. secret service agent. As in the first Lone Wolf tale by Joseph Louis Vance (in which L. W. was kind enough to abjure the secret service), the action is largely on shipboard. Eve has jewels which she wants to smuggle into the United States to obtain money to help her brother. A gang and the Lone Wolf play each other for the bangles, with the latter, however, working in the interests of Miss Eve. Finally in New York the gang seems triumphant, but L. W. turns up as Mr. Secret Service, and arrests and sentences them.

BARE KNEES: Gotham comedy-drama, with Billy Durey, Larry Gook, Jane Longworth, Paul Gladden, John Longworth, and others. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Released February 1. Length 6,000.

TYPE AND THEME: This one has considerable action, therefore much detail. But briefly the story is this: Billie (a girl, be assured) visits her married sister in a small town and scandalizes the natives with her cigarettes and bare knees. Her only kindred spirit is a young man, Larry. It seems the sister is having an "affair," and Billie learns of the contemplated elopement. The husband, as district attorney, raids the notorious resort which is the rendezvous, finding to his surprise his wife, but also Billie. Then the place catches on fire. Larry rescues Billie, the husband promises to be more attentive to his wife, and all's well.

TYPE AND THEME: Paramount's sequel to "Beau Geste" and a picture of love and war in North Africa. Beaujolais (Cooper) is Beau Sabreur, "beautiful swordsman," a title earned from his uncle when he subdues Beegue, a traitor to France. The uncle is anxious to make an empire of the African tribes and sends his nephew to the Arabs to study their ways. There he learns of an uprising being fostered by Beegue. He hurries to Zagaga, where he meets Mary, an American journalist, and in ensuing battles he rescues her from the rebels. The Arabs are destroyed and in a dugout Beaujolais kills Beegue in a duel. There also Mary and he confess their love.

COME TO MY HOUSE: Fox drama, with Olive Borden, Antonio Moreno, Ben Bard, Cornelius Keefe, Doris Lloyd, and Richard Maitland. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Released December 25. Length 4,300.

TYPE AND THEME: This is an adaptation of a Liberty Magazine story by Arthur Somers Roche. Olive Borden is Joan, a beautiful, wealthy girl who takes great pride in her social ability to do anything she chooses. Renee wants her to marry her brother, Murtagh. One night at a party she meets Bennings, who, smitten by her, says, "Come to my house tonight." Shortly afterward she promises to marry Murtagh, but that night she can not sleep, and finally goes to Bennings's house. She is seen leaving by Fraylor, who attempts blackmail. Joan tells Bennings, who kills Fraylor. At the trial Bennings refuses to expose Joan, but she tells the truth, achieving his acquittal. Then she realizes that it is Bennings she loves.

EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE: Fox drama, with George O'Brien, Virginia Valli, J. Farrell Macdonald, Dore Davidson, Sonia Nodalsky, June Gollyer, John Miltern, and others. Directed by Allan Dwan. Released October 9. Length 8,154.

TYPE AND THEME: Something of an epic, though not quite. It tells the story of a lad born the son of a wealthy New Yorker and a servant in his home. When he is sixteen, shipwreck in the East River casts him on the shore of Manhattan, and from now on the story of New York City is sketched as Van Horn fights his way up the East Side, to Fifth Avenue, forming friends of distinction, going to Columbia University to study engineering, winning the love of fair women, but cherishing only that of Becka Lipvitch, whom he learned to love in his East Side days.

FINNEGAN'S BALL: First Division comedy-drama, with Charley McHugh, Aggie Herring, Blanche Mehaffey, Mack Swain, Gullen Landis, Westcott J. Clarke, Kewpie Morgan, and Danny Finnegan. Directed by James P. Hogan. Released September 15. Length 6,750.

TYPE AND THEME: It's Irish, even to the director, and was adapted from the trouping stage play of the same title. The Finnegans in Ireland join the Flannigans in America, and once more Molly and Jimmy are united. Fights follow the reunion, however, and then when Finnegan becomes heir to an estate, his family snubs the Flannigans. But the Finnegans prove the wrong heirs, whereupon the Flannigans forgive them, while Molly and Jimmy seal the peace treaty by naming the date of their wedding.

GET YOUR MAN: Paramount comedy-drama, with Clara Bow, Charles Rogers, Josef Swickard, Josephine Dunn, Harvey Clarke, and Frances Raymond. Directed by Dorothy Arzner. Released December 10. Length 5,889.

TYPE AND THEME: Nancy (Miss Bow) is less discreet than determined to get her man. In Paris she meets Robert, a young Frenchman, who had been engaged (in a prologue) when a child. Meeting again in a war-works museum, Nancy and Robert are locked in for the night. The next morning they are in love, but Robert tells of the impending wedding. Contriving a fake accident near Robert's home, Nancy soon thereafter has won the love of Robert's prospective father-in-law, who, at her request, breaks the engagement. Robert, however, is estranged by her conduct with Simone's papa. But she gets him into her room and into her arms just as Simone, her papa and Robert's papa enter. They demand the marriage of Nancy and Robert to save the family name. So Nancy gets her man—but how!

Fawcett, Emily Fitzroy, Brandon Hurst, and Philippe De Lacy. Directed by Edmund Goulding. Released January 2. Length 7,365.

TYPE AND THEME: Adapted from Lyof Tolstoy's celebrated novel, "Anna Karenina," this is the story of a woman's two loves, one for her child, the other for a man not her husband, and being faithfully Russian, it ends unhappily. Anna, wife of the cabinet minister, Karenin, is taken to an inn by Captain Vronsky, who encounters her sleigh wrecked in the snow. She repulses him that night but later becomes his mistress. Her only other love is that for her child. Karenin discovers her duplicity when an accident to Vronsky commands her anxiety and he forbids her his home and their child. Then Anna learns that Vronsky, because of her, is to be discharged from his regiment. But his discharge is rescinded, Anna having promised the Grand Duke—herself.

PEAKS OF DESTINY: Paramount-UFA drama, with Louis Trenker, Leni Riefenstahl, Erents Petersen, and Frieda Richard. Directed by Arnold Fanck. Released January 28. Length

TYPE AND THEME: Made in Germany, this one tells the story of the love of two men for one woman high in the Alps. Vigo and Diotima love each other, but Diotima is mildly intrigued by the youthful friend of Vigo. When she is enthusiastically congratulating him for his success in a skiing contest, Vigo sees and is made envious. He asks his friend to climb a dangerous peak, but when the friend's life depends on his strength, he suffers to save him. Through Diotima they are rescued—and Vigo is assured of her undying love.

POLLY OF THE MOVIES: First Division comedy-drama, with Gertrude Short, Jason Robards, Mary Foy, Corliss Palmer, Stuart Holmes, Jack Richardson, and Rose Dione. Directed by Scott Pembroke. Released November 1. Length 6,900.

TYPE AND THEME: Polly (Miss Short) has dreams of being a great actress. She's only a maid in a rooming house, but a beauty contest seems to be her big chance. To insure success, she sends in a picture of another girl who really is beautiful, but the subterfuge is discovered. However, the contest man does take her to Hollywood, followed by Angus, who loves her. Angus puts up the money enabling two fake producers to make a drama. It turns out to be a comedy—and how! Polly is hurt, but a real producer follows Angus to the hospital and buys the picture. Angus and Polly leave for Hohokus, rich and happy.

QUALITY STREET: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer (Cosmopolitan) comedy-drama, with Marion Davies, Conrad Nagel, Helen Jerome Eddy, Flora Finch, Margaret Seddon, Marcell Corday, and Kate Price. Directed by Sydney Franklin. Released January 28. Length 7,627.

TYPE AND THEME: The noted James M. Barrie wrote this as a stage comedy, which was produced by Charles Frohman in 1901. Thus it comes of good family and perhaps receives new blood from the popular Marion Davies. But in 1928 the story is not new. As pretty Phoebe (in England), Miss Davies is in love with Dr. Valentine Brown, from whom the expected proposal does not come, for the doctor enlists for the Napoleonic wars. When he returns, Phoebe has turned spinster and he withholds his proposal once more. Angry, Phoebe dolls up and represents herself as her niece. Captain Brown is quickly captured.

RUSH HOUR, THE: Pathe light comedy with Marie Prevost, Harrison Ford, Seena Owen, David Butler and Ward Crane. Directed by E. Mason Hopper. Length 5880. Released December 12.

TYPE AND THEME: Margie Dolan is a steamship ticket clerk who longs to travel. She has a sweetheart and proposes a Niagara Falls trip for a honeymoon, but he is shocked at such extravagance. She delivers a ticket aboard ship and stows away. She is employed by a couple as a "companion" but they plan to use her in their nefarious scheme of robbing the millionaire Finch. Margie leads a hectic life and becomes sadly and excitingly implicated in their plan, which leads to a duel between her and her mistress. Dan, her sweetheart, arrives in time and consents to that trip to the Falls.

STAGE KISSES: Columbia drama, with Kenneth Harlan, Helene Chadwick, John Patrick, Phillips Smalley, Ethel Wales, and Frances Raymond. Directed by Albert Kelly. Released November 2. Length 5,435.

TYPE AND THEME: How spunk and charm may make a stage girl acceptable to her husband's snobbish family. Donald is disowned when he marries Fay, and they must struggle against poverty. Fay, wishing to get another dancing contract, seeks help from her former partner and sweetheart, Keith. Keith loves her and one night while Donald is at his club, he breaks into her boudoir, just as Donald comes home. To demonstrate her innocence, Fay places Donald's uncle in a position corresponding to hers, concealing herself in his house and compromising him before his wife. The device works. She and Donald, who also adduces a confession from Keith, are taken into the family circle.

STRANDED: Sterling drama, with Shirley Mason, William Collier, Jr., John Miljan, Florence Turner, Gale Henry, Shannon Day, Lucy Beaumont, Rose Gore. Directed by Phil Rosen. Released August 15. Length

TYPE AND THEME: Auita Loos wrote this one, which tells the story of a girl "crazy to get into the movies." Her hard-working mother gives her the money to take her to Hollywood, where her only good luck is to meet a hardy old trouper, Lucille. Joining other picture-nad girls on a party, she meets Payne, a wealthy profligate. When she does get a chance to act, she fails miserably. Then a letter comes telling her that money is needed for an operation on her mother. This is Payne's chance and he takes it. But Lucille had sent for Sally's sweetheart, who arrives in time to put on a finish fight with Payne and carry Sally back to the old home town.

TELL IT TO SWEENEY: Paramount full-length comedy, with Ghester Conklin, George Bancroft, Jack Luden, Doris Hill, Franklin Bond and William H. Tooker. Directed by Gregory La Cava. Released September 24. Length 6,006.

TYPE AND THEME: Though there's a yarn, this one's to laugh at because of Bancroft and Conklin and the "gag-man." The co-stars are engineers and friendly enemies. Conklin has a daughter loved by the son of the railroad president, but Bancroft likes her too, and from this follows comedy built around a contest of strength between the son and the engineer. The contest never occurs, but the elopement of girl and president's son does, resulting in a wild, slap-stick and futile chase with an irate father down the tracks to the county seat, where Bancroft realizes that he never could have won the gal anyway.

PRESS SHEETS

ADVENTURER, THE (M-G-M): Try a correct contest for a "still" that shows Dorothy Sebastian and Tim McCoy together, giving free tickets to those who guess nearest what they are saying. The locale of the film is in South America, therefore obtain tieups with merchants on Spanish shawls, earrings, combs, laces, dresses, jewelry, etc. If possible get a radio tieup for the picture, telling what other productions Tim McCoy has appeared in, and giving a synopsis of the story of "The Adventurer." Run a story contest on "What is the most exciting moment in 'The Adventurer'?" or an identification contest, to see who knows the most M-G-M stars, and what pictures they have played in. A tango would make an appropriate presentation feature to be used before each performance.

ADVENTURE MAD (Paramount): A window contest and a lobby stunt, although they seem to have no direct relation to the film, are suggested for exploiting this production. The window contest is described this way; display a large clock in one of the town's leading show windows a few days before the film is to be run, with copy informing the public that the clock will be started at a certain time, and that prizes will be given to those who estimate nearest the time that it will stop. Make it understood that a person is not obliged to buy anything in order to give an estimate. For the lobby stunt, obtain a small safe and announce that the person who can discover the combination and can open the safe without using violence will be given the prizes that are within it.

FEARLESS RIDER, THE (Universal): Place the stills from this film in the window of some sporting goods store and announce a contest to see who can write a synopsis of the story from the material given in these photographs. The prizes need not be at all expensive, and there is sure to be interest aroused. For the newspapers try to have a layout made of some of the famous fearless riders of United States history, such as Roosevelt, Buffalo Bill, Sherman and Annie Oakley, with a story on "The Most Fearless Rider in U. S. History."

HERO FOR THE NIGHT, A (Universal): As aviation is the key-note of this farce comedy, which is built around a non-stop flight from the United States to Russia, use all effort to tieup with the local aviation field, or with any aviators that are in your locality in pulling off some kind of a race or contest. Perhaps you could get them to distribute heralds by dropping them from their planes. If your town hasn't any airport, show the need for one, and launch a drive for the building of such a community asset. About two weeks in advance of your play date get the newspapers to break the announcement of a contest for "A Search for the Hero of the Night in Blankville." Readers will be invited to send in accounts of various night-time adventures. Be sure to get in humorous ones such as the story about the fellow who has to walk the floor with the baby all night; and the man who tried to get into the wrong house and was nabbed as a burglar, etc.

IF I WERE SINGLE (Warner): Your tieup line for jewelers, florists, candy shops, lingerie stores, etc., can read, "Don't let your wife whisper to herself 'If I Were Single!' like May Avoy does at the..... theatre in the Warner Bros. picture 'If I Were Single.'" Run a hundred word essay contest on "How to Hold Your Husband," or if you want to touch a lighter vein give a prize for the best daily matrimonial joke. Install a radio amplifier in your lobby with a microphone attached inside the theatre to carry the laughs from the audience to the sidewalk. This is a good suggestion and the results should be in exact proportion to the actual worth of the film.

LET 'ER GO GALLEGHER (Pathe): This is from the story written by the famous Richard Harding Davis, and is about a newspaper office boy who solves a baffling mystery. Try to interest the boys from the press and if possible get an office boy to review the picture. Have an artist draw the figure of a man's hand, one finger of which is missing, and use this copy to describe it, "This missing finger was responsible for bringing a murderer to justice in 'Let 'er Go Gallegher' which will be shown at the..... theatre.....(dates)." Offer free tickets to all boys whose names are Gallegher, and tieup with the book stores and the library on the works of Richard Harding Davis.

LITTLE BUCKAROO, THE (FBO): The ideas expressed in this press sheet for the betterment of motion picture entertainment, should be interpreted by exhibitors as being the real goods. Exploitation suggestions are: print a typed letter from Buzz Barton, who is the boy star in this film, addressed to your patrons. The copy for this letter reads well, and if your audiences are satisfied with this production they should certainly come back for more. A letter from the manager of the theatre is also printed to be used as a house letter, and a small card, to be handed to adult patrons, which reads "As a father or mother do you think the Buzz Barton pictures are the type which should be shown to boys? Yes..... No....." For the lobby or front of the theatre get an old dilapidated trunk, bind it with rope and place this copy over it on a large card, "What's in this? Only the bandits know! See Buzz Barton in The Little Buckaroo, now playing here, for the solution."

RIDING RENEGADE, THE (F. B. O.): If there are any Indians in your town invite some of them to a particular performance and then have a reporter interview them on what they thought of the show, etc. Perhaps if you found some Red Men who had never seen a motion picture before, you could get a good story from them. Very catchy teasers with these titles are printed, "REWARD"—"DISOWNED"

"—ESCAPED"—"CAPTURED," and the last ad reads, "Jailed by his own father. Accused as a bandit because.....," etc. How about giving your patrons a small identification card suitable to put into a wallet with this copy, "My name is..... my address is..... In case of accident notify....." On the other side you could have attractively printed copy describing your house, the type of pictures you show, and your policies.

SECRET HOUR, THE (Paramount): The title suggests a tieup with jewelry stores or any place selling clocks, using such copy as this: "No Secret Hour here. Pola Negri will tell you all about it next week at the.....theatre." Other copy can read, "Why keep good things secret? We don't, neither does Pola Negri in The Secret Hour, playing at the.....theatre next week." The story is a tale of the orange groves and a tieup with a fruit dealer would be rather novel. Cut out the outline of a clock with the hands pointing to twelve, work the title on the face, and place this in a conspicuous place, playing it up in as many ways as possible.

SERENADE (Paramount): Do any of your hotels or restaurants employ an orchestra? If so, each evening in the week preceding the showing of the picture, have a violinist "serenade" some good looking girl customer. Have this done subtly so that every one will turn around and wonder what's going on. At the end of the piece, a card should be displayed with the copy, "You have just witnessed a scene from Adolphe Menjou's Paramount picture 'Serenade.' Why not see the real thing? It will be at the..... theatre next week. Don't miss it." Have the organist or musical director play all the well-known serenades during the time the film is being shown. Stage an "Old Fiddlers Contest" and offer prizes for the best interpretation of the serenade you select. Perhaps the confectionery and drug stores will vary their soda fountain menu by selling a special "Serenade" sundae.

SWIFT SHADOW, THE (FBO): For stores selling Glover's Dog Remedies use this copy, "Give them all they deserve. Your dog deserves the best of care and attention. Ranger, one of the world's great dogs is given all of Glover's Renowned Remedies. See this glorious dog in 'The Swift Shadow,' now playing at the.....theatre." In the story the dog is forced to choose between two masters. Get patrons to write opinion of whether Ranger decided on the right one. Have selected the best, or the champion police dog of the city, and borrow it during the run of the picture. Place the dog in an advantageous position in the lobby or in front of the house, with this copy, "The town's champion police dog..... (Name and owner.) Compare him with the mighty canine star, Ranger, in 'The Swift Shadow,' now playing here."

BEAU SABREUR (Paramount): This is the sequel to Beau Geste, which won the Photoplay Medal for being the best picture of the year. Beau Sabreur was written by the same author, and produced by the same company. Tieup with the book stores, and tell the town about this picture. Decorate the lobby with swords, water bags, Arab attire and tents, and run a special "Beau" night when all patrons who come together in couples, that is, a boy and a girl, or man and woman, will be admitted at a reduced rate. Run teasers, and give the story as much advertising as you can afford. It pays. For the larger houses this film suggests some wonderful stage presentations.

HER SUMMER HERO (FBO): Sponsor a swimming contest, and be sure to run a herald telling of the famous swimming stars that are appearing in this production. If possible run a "handsomest man contest," and get the interest of all the students, the story is the type that should appeal to them. If there are any local swimming heroes get them in on this by running their pictures in the paper, printing detailed stories of their rescues, history, etc., and by having them appear at each performance. All police and firemen heroes can be admitted free, and their names printed in the papers. A display of their medals in the best store window in town or in front of your theatre, will attract everyone's attention.

CASEY JONES (Rayart): A lobby ballyhoo might be used in this way; Obtain the phonograph record of the song, "Casey Jones," and run this on a machine where passers-by can hear it. A musical setting and a reproduction of the song sheet is printed in this press book. Tieup with all toy stores handling toy engines, getting them, if possible, to have a window display showing a train running around a track with the proper stills from the picture placed in the center. Tieup with music stores, with radio broadcasting stations, railroad associations or unions, etc. If possible try to get your posters on street cars and railroad trains. Don't overlook railroad benefit funds, if yours is a railroad town, and you find such methods profitable.

LETTERS From Readers

A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity adds forcefulness to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

From Across the Sea

LUDLOW, ENGLAND.—TO THE EDITOR: Herewith cheque which is one year's subscription to EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Soon after I received your paper first, I began to keep a card index file of exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did for Me." As an exhibitor played a picture which I had shown, I compared his verdict with mine by a simple system of signs. When I had a fairly big number of exhibitors, I began to look up new pictures with the aid of the file, which showed me how far an exhibitor was to be relied upon. There are a few—Wm. Tragsdorf is one—whose patrons' verdicts are so exactly similar to my own that I could rely simply and solely on them.

I began showing "Herald Chosen" pictures in September, and I can only say that it is the finest method in the world of choosing pictures where you cannot see them personally.

I must also praise "The Box Office Ticker." Experience has proved that pictures below 50 per cent are mostly poor. I would advise all small town exhibitors in America and England to take and study EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD and to keep a card index file.

I seem to know the "old brigade" who report regularly personally now, and much enjoy J. C.'s "Colyum." J. C.'s travels are making me familiar with the geography of the U. S. I suggest he write a book entitled, "Painless Study of the Geography of the U. S. A.," written by J. C. Jenkins, edited by Phil Rand, with poetry by Adeline Further. I don't know who'll draw the maps.

Over in England, production is going ahead like a rocket in both quality and quantity. In 1926 we made 26 films. For the year October, 1928, there will probably be over 100 British films available. That will mean small town theatres will be able to show 40 to 50 per cent British, as our percentage of hits is far greater than Hollywood's—our producers can't afford a failure. I have seen them working at the British International studios on "A Little Bit of Fluff" (Syd Chaplin and Betty Balfour, our most popular star) which Metro will distribute in America; "The Farmer's Wife," directed by Alfred Hitchcock, who gets £13,000 a year, and who is one of the world's best directors. He made "The Ring" recently, a boxing picture which succeeds where others have failed—to appeal to women. Albert Parker saw it here a few days ago and said that if made in America it would have been the hit of the season. Another American said it was "a British movie that America would have to take." There are two other films in production at B. I., "Moulin Rouge," directed by Dupont, and "Toni." The only trouble with B. I., who sell through their own agency, is that they have completely lost their heads and are asking ridiculous prices. Other British firms are afflicted with the same disease. The Trading Scheme would bring them to their senses.

Most renters are up in arms against this huge cooperative buying scheme, which might involve 1,000 theatres. These gentlemen foresee that it will forcibly cure them of their gluttonous plans to bring the American situation to England. Yours truly.—R. R. TEMPLE, Picture House, Ludlow, England.

Praises "Service Talks"

BANGOR, N. WALES.—TO THE EDITOR: I have the greatest pleasure in renewing my subscription to EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD, which has been of the greatest assistance to me during the past 12 months. I read every line of it and it then goes the round of my staff.

I have found "Service Talks" particularly helpful, and to a considerable extent "What the Picture Did for Me" proves a useful guide. With regard to this latter feature, I am afraid in one or two cases the writers are somewhat biased in their reports but on the whole they are a very fair census of the general opinion regarding picture values.

With best wishes for continued success in '28.—JAMES HARE, County theatre, Bangor, N. Wales.

"By Gad, We Need It"

SALFORD, MANCHESTER, ENGLAND.—TO THE EDITOR: Enclosed find two-year subscriptions and congratulations for the way you run your show. It is a good help to we poor stiffs of exhibitors, and by gad we need it and your report column is priceless, for I rather do enjoy our brother exhibitors' remarks on features, and renters in particular. All best wishes, old son.—BILL JOHNSON, Boro Cinema, Salford, Manchester, England.

Stanley Company's Earnings for 1927 Exceed $4 Share

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Earnings of the Stanley Company of America for 1927 were in excess of the dividend requirements of $4 a share by a considerable margin, it was announced by D. Rossheim, treasurer, to directors at their recent regular monthly meeting.

During the past year the number of theatres under the control of the Stanley Company has increased three-fold and the benefits of the absorption of several circuits are now evident.

Loew's Midland Forces Royal, First Film Palace In Kansas City, to Close

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4.—The Royal theatre, built 14 years ago by Frank L. Newman, the first motion picture house of the larger type in Kansas City and now one of three houses under lease to Loew interests, closed its doors January 1. The disposition of the property has not been determined yet, M. B. Shanberg, managing director for Loew's theatres in Kansas City, said.

From a house of large audiences the Royal fell to a theatre which was host to mere handful of people, following the opening of the new $4,000,000 Loew's Midland.

Pictures to Teach History Soon, Educator Declares

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Motion pictures within a few years will be used almost entirely in studying history in American schools and colleges, according to Charles R. Allen, educational consultant of the Federal Board of Vocational Education, who recently visited the studios.

"Studios are filled with technical experts," said Allen, "who are specialists in their particular field. These men could easily turn their talent to the making of historical pictures with the assistance, of course, of men who are qualified to teach history."

COLLEEN MOORE

TO MY EXHIBITOR FRIENDS:

From the bottom of my heart I thank you.

Last year, when your votes won for me the signal honor of leading The Exhibitors Herald Poll for box office drawing power, I was over-joyed.

When the Exhibitors Herald informed me of my great good fortune in winning the same honor this year, I was so happy that I cried with joy.

You men are the quiet hard-workers who make the whole motion picture industry possible, and I want you to know that I appreciate all that you are doing in putting over my pictures.

This is the happiest week of my life and I only hope that the coming year will bring you all as much happiness as you have conferred upon me.

Cordially yours,

Colleen Moore

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Verdicts on Films in Language of Exhibitor

Incorporated in this original exhibitors report department of Exhibitors Herald, which was established October 14, 1916, is the Moving Picture World department, "Straight from the Shoulder Reports."

Columbia

ALIAS THE LONE WOLF: Special cast—90%. A real good picture. Is sure to please. Six reels.—Earl Somerville, Opera House theatre, Raymond, Minn.—General patronage.

FORGOTTEN WOMEN: Conrad Nagel—A good picture of the South Sea Isles. Is sure to please. Six reels.—Earl Somerville, Opera House theatre, Raymond, Minn.—General patronage.

F B O

THE MOJAVE KID: Bob Steele—70%. December 17. Very good Western. Will please for Saturday night. Plenty of action and suspense and the scenery is also wonderful. Fine print from Boston. Five reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

THE MOJAVE KID: Bob Steele—December 10. This is my first picture of this star, and it was good. Had a pretty good crowd. Five reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

MOON OF ISRAEL: Special cast—Very good production. Elaborate settings. Fair acting. Pleased the patrons.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

RANGER OF THE NORTH: Ranger, the Dog—95%. December 2. My patrons just went wild over this one. They told me plenty that this was one of the best dog pictures that they ever saw, and I think myself that it is very, very good. A lot of them asked me when I was going to have another one, and I told them that I had four more and the kids just shouted. Six reels.—C. Gehlsen, Community theatre, Burk, S. D.—Small town patronage.

THE TERROR OF BAR X: Bob Custer—30%. December 17. A fair action picture. Scraps and lots of them.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given picture in report).

CLANCY'S KOSHER WEDDING: George Sidney—30%. December 18. This is a good picture. Chuck full of laughs. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

THE BANDIT'S SON: Bob Steele—80%. October 29. Tom Mix better look out or this boy will get ahead of him as he sure has the action. My patrons sure smiled. When they went out a lot of them asked me if there were going to be any more of them and a lot said, more like this big boy, then we will be back. Five reels.—C. Gehlsen, Community theatre, Burk, S. D.—Small town patronage.

SOUTH SEA LOVE: Patsy Ruth Miller—85%. December 17. This is a dandy little picture and pleased my patrons. Plenty of good comments. F B O sure has the pictures for the small towns in their 1927-28 line up. Seven reels.—C. Gehlsen, Community theatre, Burk, S. D.—Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION:

Special Cast—I advise any exhibitor to book this picture. I think it is as good a picture for the money as money can buy. Fine for a special.—M. H. Haymans, Dreamland theatre, Metter, Ga.—General patronage.

THE GINGHAM GIRL: Special cast—95%. November 11. Saw some write up on this one that said just so much film, but this fellow must have been asleep when he ran it, as this one is very good. Had a lot of people that I never had before and got plenty of good comments on it. In fact, I got a lot of mouth-to-mouth advertising after the first show, so can't kick. In fact, I have not had a poor one from F B O on their 1927-28 line up. Seven reels.—C. Gehlsen, Community theatre, Burk, S. D.—Small town patronage.

CYCLONE OF THE RANGE: Tom Tyler

—A pleasing but poor picture.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

LONE HAND SAUNDERS: Fred Thomson

—This is a good Western. Play it if you use Westerns. Some real thrills but someone has bum ideas as to the registering of a 33 or 45 bullet on striking a metal disk, no consideration is taken of concussion. I believe I know now who sends Bud Fisher his ideas for Mutt and Jeff's Bullet Proof vests.—L. L. Like, Dreamland theatre, Drummond, Mont.—General patronage.

BREED OF THE SEA: Ralph Ince—80%. December 5-6. A very good picture of the sea, spiced of the like of the South Sea Islands. A story of brothers, one a pirate the other a missionary. Margaret Livingston does some dandy work in this picture. F B O seems to have some pretty good stuff this year. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

A hearty welcome to Van's Gang of Moving Picture World. It is the hope of the "Herald Family" that every member of Van's Gang finds in this department, and in the reports of members of the "Herald Family," the same sincerity of purpose, the same unbiased reports, which made "Straight from the Shoulder Reports" a department of inestimable value to the exhibitor. "What the Picture Did for Me" is conducted by the exhibitor for the exhibitor. May the members of Van's Gang remain with us for years to come. That is the New Year wish of this department.

Good crook story.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—75%. December 24. Like all the rest of this star's pictures all extra good. This is the last one of F B O's program. All good. Not one flop—some record.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE TOUGH GUY: Fred Thomson—This is, or was, a good Western, but my print was bad and for some reason it did not pull for me. Personally I like Fred Thomson and his horse.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—General patronage.

KOSHER KITTY KELLY: Viola Dana—A string of muck. More unfavorable comments on this than anything I have shown for a long time. If one producer makes something good in one line the rest try to follow suit and make a mess of it.—D. A. Rhyner, Rialto theatre, Hebron, N. D.—General patronage.

MOULDERS OF MEN: Conway Tearle—90%. November 28-29. A powerful drama of the underworld that every one should see. Although Conway Tearle is getting rather old he does this kind of a role to perfection. The work of Frank Darro should make him a star. He has Jackie Coogan beat, and I thought Jackie was a darn good actor. If you haven't played F B O get wise and play some good pictures. This is just one of the Bell Ringers. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

ARIZONA NIGHTS: Fred Thomson—The more this star makes the poorer they seem to get. Only one more and then I will be done with him. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

SLING SHOT KID: Buzz Barton—December 23-24. Good Western. Buzz is a comer. Kids are strong for him. Ran this as half of a double feature program. Used Douglas MacLean in "Let It Rain" as the other half. It's a big laugh producer. Business light. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE COWBOY COP: Tom Tyler—It's good for a Sunday show, but only about 100 feet of it is Western. Six reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

First National

THE GORILLA: Charles Murray—80%. December 13-14. Good picture. Pleased and seemed to give a title that I could work with even among those that knew nothing of the stage play. Did nice business, and for once I made money on a First National special.—C. S. McLellan, Rex theatre, Eagle Lake, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE GORILLA: Charles Murray—5%. December 23-24. For me this proved to be the biggest flop of any picture I ever played. The worst of it was that it didn't please 25 per cent of the people that did see it. I have played three First National specials and all have lost money and drew less than their regular program pictures. The title on this keeps people away. They all think it is a wild animal show. Seven reels.—H. J. Eagan, American theatre, Wautoma, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—15%. December 19. Not so good as some other football pictures we have had, and didn't click so well, either. Seven reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

THE MAKING OF O'MALLEY: Milton Sills—Good show. Pleased all who saw it. Good picture for mining town of 1,000.—L. E. Parnell, Auditorium, Piper, Ala.—General patronage.

HARD BOILED HAGGERTY: Milton Sills—16%. December 14. All our patrons seemed to like this one. School play cut attendance. Eight reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Special cast—25%. A nice little story, interesting and entertaining. Will please the women more than men patrons. Seven reels.—H. J. Eagan, American theatre, Wautoma, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SEE YOU IN JAIL: Jack Mulhall—50%. December 23. Good farce comedy. Satisfied as a program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SEE YOU IN JAIL: Jack Mulhall—December 18-19. A good little program picture. When I saw this in the Oriental in Chi. I thought it was good, and still think so. If it had kept up the pace shown in the first reel, it would have been a knockout. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

STEPPING ALONG: Johnny Hines—75%. December 24. This was good, like all the Hines comedies. For my part I think he is much better than Harold Lloyd. Hines comedy is natural and Lloyd's is merely silly. We ran this on Christmas Eve. Started the show after the Christmas trees and had a pretty good crowd. Eight reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

STEPPING ALONG: Johnny Hines—Very good if you like Hines. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—50%. December 25-26. This is a good picture. I don't call it the best of Colleen Moore's pictures but, as always, the star fine and cast good. Lots of comedy, gave satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SUBWAY SADIE: Special cast—62%. Here is a fine, modern, every-day street life New York City love story, with fine scenes beautifully produced and a dandy vein of fun running through it. Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill at their best. Clean, enjoyable. Subway smashup good. View of big liner interesting, fine ending. We put it on our best nights to pleased house. This is not a rip-roaring comedy, but a pleasing love story. You will enjoy it. Excellent fashion show in it, book it. Use the Victor record "Molly Malone" for love theme and the new organ record "Dancing Tambourine" for subway shots. P. S.—Forgot to say that Charlie Murray as the taxi driver furnishes real comedy.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE SUNSET DERBY: William Collier, Jr.—25%. December 15. A good racing story. They are all like this—just like the rest.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SYNCOPIATING SUE: Corinne Griffith—40%. A good picture, finely made, splendid scenes. Tom Moore is good. Not a jazzy picture, nor big, but pleasing. Corinne is stage struck and nearly falls for the villain, the producer, but then Tom Moore as the trap drummer wins her in the end. Should go well where Miss Griffith is liked.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

CAMILLE: Norma Talmadge—For the women folks. Wonderful acting. Will go good where high-class pictures are appreciated.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

THE LIFE OF RILEY: Special cast—December 18-19. Pleased a Sunday night crowd in fine shape. Have the projectionist hurry the fire scenes a little, or they might drag. Seven reels.—John L. Danm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

THE CRYSTAL CUP: Special cast—"Crystal Cup" does not mean anything from a box office standpoint, as the story from which it was taken is not known to any great extent, but it is a 100 per cent picture from the production angle. Story sustains pretty well. However, character by Dorothy Mackaill is over-drawn to such an extent that it becomes tiresome, but in the end you are well repaid for having sat through the picture as she (Dorothy) makes up for all lost time. Good picture and will stand boosting quite some. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Milton Sills—December 21-22. A very good Sills picture. Pleased those who were here. Blame the week before Christmas for poor business, as nothing is doing anywhere this week. Seven reels.—John L. Damn, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—A good Western story that will go over on Saturday night in any small town. Tarzan is fine with a number of new stunts.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

ROSE OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Special cast—Mary Astor was never sweeter than in this one, and Gilbert Roland did even better than in "Camille." He is versatile, and he should become a very popular star. This story of old California has been done many times for the screen, but never better than this. It should please all types of patronage. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

AMERICAN BEAUTY: Billie Dove—Played on Christmas Eve, so can't report on its drawing power. Personally thought it a very thin plot, bolstered up by Billie Dove wearing a lot of pretty clothes in some scenes and not so many in other scenes. Would only class it as a program picture. Not for family nights. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

PARADISE: Milton Sills—Very good entertainment. Eight reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

PALS FIRST: Special cast—Very good. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

LONG PANTS: Harry Langdon—If you like this star the picture will please them. Not much to it. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

ALL ABOARD: Johnny Hines—Very good if Hines goes good for you. One bath room scene should be cut off. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE SEA TIGER: Milton Sills—December 17. Here is a dandy. It has everything, action, romance and thrills. Sills is good and Mary Astor is sweet. We don't get as good prints out of St. Louis as we did from Kansas City. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

SMILE, BROTHER, SMILE: Special cast—Very good picture for any night. Lots of comedy and that is what they like here.—W. L. Crouse, Ideal theatre, Bloomer, Wis.—General patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN SONORA: Ken Maynard—This is very good. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE POOR NUT: Jack Mulhall—December 16-17. A very satisfactory offering for any type of house. Business light but no fault of picture. Book it.—Robert P. Doyle, Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

VENUS OF VENICE: Constance Talmadge—December 11-12. Good program picture. If your fans like Connie they will like this one. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE GREATER GLORY: Anna Q. Nilsson—December 13. A wonderful picture. Miss Nilsson does some good acting in this one. Didn't have much of a crowd. However, no fault of the picture. Nine reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

Fox

VERY CONFIDENTIAL: Madge Bellamy—75%. November 30. Ran this with a 45 minute revue and it made excellent entertainment. An amusing little comedy of sporting life and two poor working girls. This has some funny titles and a good auto race in it. With the aid of a good comedy it ought to get by one night. Six reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

TWO GIRLS WANTED: Janet Gaynor—Just a fair picture. Supposed to be comedy, but nothing much. Print good. Appeal 30 per cent. Drew all classes. Population 1,200.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

THE MUSIC MASTER: Alec B. Francis—Here is a beautiful picture, but I had the smallest crowd of the year. Took in $7.50 and I certainly hate to see a picture of this calibre passed up.—H. L. Bounh, Grande theatre, Port Allegany, Pa.—General patronage.

LOVES OF CARMEN: Special cast—27%. December 16. A well produced "Carmen." It's big and "hot." Failed to do the business here and pleased about 50 per cent of those who came. Nine reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

TUCSON, ARIZ., Christmas, 1927.

DEAR HERALD:

We're here. Marie and I arrived here last evening, and after a formal introduction to the family I was handed a Christmas package in the form of a telegram from my home town of Neligh advising me that our home was burned to the ground last Monday with practically all the contents. Lovely start for a "Merry Christmas."

If you have never experienced the sensation of having the accumulations of years go up in smoke, don't do it, if you must do it don't do it at Christmas time, pick some other season.

From what meager advice we have they saved the piano but I am not informed whether they saved my golf and fishing outfit or not, but then this is Christmas, so why let a little thing like that spoil the occasion, therefore—

*Let's forget those things that make us worry,
Let's forget those things that make us blue.*

—and after having relieved myself of the foregoing, let's turn our attention to something more in keeping with the occasion, with the hope that each and every one of you enjoyed a most joyous Christmas and that the New Year will bring to you must of happiness and prosperity.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fills a Want None Others Can Do—

From Ft. Worth, Tex., to Tucson, Ariz., is the longest road in the world, but it is a wonderful scenic highway. The scenery along this route is simply magnificent in the extreme. It is different somewhat from the Alps in that the scenery along this road consists entirely of cactus, mesquite, sagebrush, Mexicans and hobos. The hobos are of a most obliging nature, as any of them will ride with you and never charge you a cent. If you haul one of them he will panhandle you for his feed and lodging with that air of self sacrifice and even condescension that would almost make one sorry he couldn't offer him better accommodations.

Those going West are on their way to Los Angeles to visit a dying relative and those going East are trying to get back to Cleveland, O., before their sister passes away, for the poor girl is crying for them every day. They can put up a hardluck story that would wring tears out of a brass monkey, but I never shed a tear. That's the kind of a hard hearted wretch we are.

We hauled one old veteran tourist for 300 miles who was on his way from Miami, Fla., to Los Angeles but lost him when we went into a hotel for the night. He probably didn't like the hotel we selected. Just out of El Paso we picked up a young German boy. He reminded us so much of Eagle Eye Joe in size and looks that we just couldn't pass him up. He was on his way from Hamburg, Germany, to Los Angeles where he had an Uncle in the restaurant business.

At Dallas, Tex., his change ran out and the poor kid was up against it. He couldn't hardly speak or understand a word of English but would say "Yah" or "Nine" to about everything we said to him. We asked him if Hamburg was where the Hamburger sandwiches came from and he replied "Yah." He had just money enough to pay for his lodging the first night but was not going to get any breakfast. We asked him if he wasn't going in to breakfast and he shook his head, then we asked if he was out of money and he didn't seem to understand, then we said "Lonsom des gelt coom," and he smiled and said, "Yah," so we took him in and filled him up and then hit the road again.

We struck a piece of awfully rough road and we turned to the kid and said, "Der veigh is schlecht, dos is vischneie dos is toonsole, hautamere gasauck," and the kid laughed. We don't know whether we came close to it or missed it a mile, since it has been a long time

THE DIXIE MERCHANT: Special cast—45%. I didn't see it but comments very good. All said it was a fine Southern picture with good trotting race and extra fine cast. Jack Mulhall and Madge Bellamy are in it. Evidently one of Fox's good ones and Fox doesn't seem to have many good ones at that, outside of Mix.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

RICH BUT HONEST: Special cast—12%. December 20. The poor title kept them away but those who came were well pleased. A dandy picture with lots of comedy furnished by McNamara. Kept audience laughing. Lots of action, comedy and spice. Will appeal to the sheiks and flappers. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

ANKLES PREFERRED: Madge Bellamy—This went very good and is very entertaining. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

DESERT VALLEY: Buck Jones—December 17. Pretty good Buck picture. More comedy than Buck puts in most of his. Pleased the majority of his fans. Six reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BLUE EAGLE: George O'Brien—A splendid picture. Good direction. Should please any audience. Plenty of action.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

A CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING

ARTHUR'S COURT: Special cast—This feature is so old that some of the youngsters thought it new and we were getting it before Syracuse. It is a dandy picture and well worth running.—L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall, Marcellus, N. Y.—General patronage.

DESERT VALLEY: Buck Jones—Good.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Gotham

THE BLOCK SIGNAL: Ralph Lewis—40%. December 15. Nice little railroad story that pleased the average. Six reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

HIS MASTER'S VOICE: Special cast—This is a good dog picture and a pup in it that looks wonderful. Six reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

since we have had occasion to try it, but the kid cut loose on a line of Dutch that would have made the Kaiser sorry he went to Holland.

When he got out of the car at Tucson we handed him a couple of bucks and wished him a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year and he smiled and said, "Donkashaen," and we are not just sure whether he meant, "Thank you, sir," or, "You are easy," and it doesn't make any difference. He was stranded, and at Christmas time, in a strange country, and we wouldn't have felt much like a man if we hadn't done it. What if Marie had bit a rock and bust a hole in a perfectly good casing that you could stick Crocket Brown's Bullfoundland pup in, what if our home did burn, this is Christmas and this is the day that "Unto us a child is born, and unto us a Savior given," and a little practice of the Golden Rule is good for any of us and makes of us better men and better women.

But speaking of holes in tires. You can see more people changing tires and pumping 'em up in 10 miles of this highway than you would see on Michigan avenue in 10 years. Every garage one passes one can see a fellow standing outside with tire patches in his hand and he is disappointed if you don't drive in. It is 60 miles from Deming, N. M., to Lorville, and Marie made it in nothing flat. That is, we had a flat before we started and another after we got there.

It seems funny about these flat tires, out in this country. They are always flat on the under side, must be something about this dry air that makes it. If some guy would invent a tire that the flat part would always be on the top side his fortune would be made. After Frank O'Hara gets his system of mirrors made for seeing cars coming around the bend in the road he will probably tackle this tire problem, and he and George Bungle can make 'em if anybody can.

Everybody down here has a goat. Some have 30 or 40, and so, to be right in style, my wife bought one, a regular Nannic. She's a beautiful goat and she's a warbler, she warbles from sunup to sundown.

Nannic seems to be a little off her feed today, but that is probably because she ate three oyster cans and a roll of barbed wire for supper last night. Geneve says she hopes she doesn't get the habit of eating tar paper for she is afraid it will taint the milk. If Nannic starts warbling at sunrise tomorrow morning we are going to try her on one of Marie's punctured tires. Geneve says she always knew that Nannic had good judgment and that she proved it the other day when they ran out of tin cans, for she fed her an edition of EXHIBITORS HERALD and she seemed to relish it, especially SERVICE TALKS, but when she came to our "Colyum" she—Well, maybe its better that I don't tell you what she did.

We expected to cover Texas, Arizona and New Mexico after the holidays but after getting that Christmas package from Neligh it may necessitate a change in our plans. We may head North, but then if there is nothing left up there but ashes what's the use. There is 60 degrees difference in the climate in favor of Arizona.

We hope Jay will excuse us for making this letter shorter than usual, and we believe he will, for when one is filled up on turkey and cranberry sauce, dill pickles 'en everything and thoughts of what was once a home, he is not in the best mood to write much of interest, therefore, we again extend our best wishes to one and all for the coming New Year.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANNIE LAURIE: Lillian Gish—50%. December 19. In spite of the fact that this picture is not going so big in the first runs, the small towns should not be afraid of it. It pulled very well on a bad stormy night and it will please as I would not ask for a better picture to come into my theatre. It carries the special stamp all the way through and can be bought right. Another matter that I wish to mention is the extra fine condition of the reels Metro is putting their new product onto. It is a shame, some of the old worn out reels that we get from the other companies with a brand new film on them and it is almost an impossibility to rewind some of them without injuring the side of the print. We keep a set of reels in the booth and believe me, we have plenty of need to use them. Compliments to Metro. Others take notice. Nine reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Va.—General patronage.

AFTER MIDNIGHT: Norma Shearer—75%. December 18-19. A good picture. Drew good on Sunday but poor on Monday. Pleased everybody. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Gilbert-Adoree—Big in everything but the profits. Had a big crowd, took in big money, had big praise, did big advertising and gave Metro-Goldwyn big money.—H. L. Bouhn, Grande theatre, Port Allegany, Pa.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novarro—Is much better picture than "The Big Parade." I did more business and not as good dates. Had Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with "The Big Parade" last three days. It's the greatest and best picture I ever played in my theatre.—Adpheus Goffinet, Pastime theatre, Rittman, O.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—October 15-16-17. Better than "The Big Parade." Greatest picture ever shown on screen. Made good money on this one and gave my patrons more than expected. Every night got better. Good for the whole family. Got the ministers out this time and liked it. Twelve reels.—J. G. Fair, Elite theatre, Laurens, Ia.—General patronage.

AFTER MIDNIGHT: Norma Shearer—Very good acting with a moral.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: John Gilbert—December 14-15-16. This is a good picture but it is too long and high priced for a small town. Didn't make anything on account of having to pay so much for it. Thirteen reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Renee Adoree—Great picture. Will make small exhibitor money if he can buy it right. It certainly is big. Comedy keeps the audience in an uproar all the time. Twelve reels.—Adpheus Goffinet, Pastime theatre, Rittman, O.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: John Gilbert—September 15-16-17. Big picture. Play it. Broke all house records to date. Twelve reels.—J. G. Fair, Elite theatre, Laurens, Ia.—General patronage.

FRISCO SALLY LEVY: Sally O'Neil—December 20-21. A good picture. Very suitable for showing St. Patrick's Day or at Christmas season. Lots of comedy and pleased the few who saw it.—Robert P.

Doyle, Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

TWELVE MILES OUT: John Gilbert—December 13-14. I thought the picture fair but the judges didn't. I should have drawn the shade on office window and stayed inside. Instead I went out and took a real razzing in as graceful a manner as possible. Fair business but did not please.—Robert P. Doyle, Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

ROOKIES: Special cast—December 17. Here is a good comedy drama suitable for any theatre. It is funny from start to finish. Some said they liked it better than "The Big Parade." Karl Dane and George K. Arthur make a good comedy team. Seven reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

HEAVEN ON EARTH: Special cast—A good picture. Our patrons received this one well, though the ending was not so good. Tone okay and good for Sunday. No, for special.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—Did not do the business on this one, although the picture is a dandy. If could only tell them what was in the picture it would go over. Poor drawing title.—Ray P. Murphy, Old Trail theatre, Hebron, Ohio.—General patronage.

ROOKIES: Karl Dane—This one's a scream. Needs unique advertising to put it over.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

THE FLAMING FOREST: Special cast—Good Northwest story. Good scenery.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

SPOILERS OF THE WEST: Tim McCoy—December 16-17. This Tim McCoy might be all right if he had stories that would interest people but after the first few they haven't been worth much. Played them all last year and two this year and it's going to be quite a while before we play another one. Six reels.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

MOCKERY: Lon Chaney—Wonderful acting, but can't put Chaney across in our community. Lost money on show. Farming community.—R. W. Hempstone, Waverly Hall theatre, Poolesville, Md.—Small town patronage.

MR. WU: Lon Chaney—Most of Lon Chaney's draw, but failed to make rental on this one. It went over my patrons' heads. Ended too abruptly. Not the thing for a small town, as there is no action, just acting. Usually small towns must have action.—H. B. Gibson, Gibson theatre, Burnsville, W. Va.—General patronage.

VALLEY OF HELL: Special cast—Nothing to this one.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Marion Davies—This picture will please and draw a record attendance anywhere, but it's very light. Weather coldest in years so no business.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

THE UNKNOWN: Lon Chaney—December 9-10. Excellent. It will keep them interested every minute. Chaney a wonderful actor but no drawing power here.—Robert P. Doyle, Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

THE AUCTION BLOCK: Special cast—It's good. Eight reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

THE UNDERSTANDING HEART: Special cast—December 4-5. Very good outdoor picture, but story did not follow book very closely.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Jack Holt—December 9-10. Very good Western. The readers of the book kicked about it not following.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

THE MASKED BRIDE: Mae Murray—Good. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

LIGHTS OF OLD BROADWAY: Marion Davies—It's good. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Paramount

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—75%. December 13. Not so bad a picture, but my patrons would have rather seen Dix in a real American role. In this one he plays the part of a Spaniard and does it fine, and the story is very good, with plenty of

TO MOVING PICTURE WORLD SUBSCRIBERS

Congratulations on your entry into the great HERALD FAMILY. It's a Christmas present to you and to them, the value of which is beyond estimate. Unitedly let's move on to bigger and better things for 1928 with malice toward none and charity for all. The great HERALD FAMILY welcomes you into full fellowship and extends to you the season's greetings. The hour moves on apace. Come on; let's go.

The HERALD Man.

THE CITY GONE WILD: Thomas Meighan—25%. December 25. One of Meighan's good ones. Interesting and entertaining all the way. Meighan in the role of a fighting district attorney, which seems to just fit his style of acting. Seven reels.—H. J. Eagan, American theatre, Wautoma, Wis.—Small town patronage.

AFRAID TO LOVE: Florence Vidor—30%. December 20. This is a pretty good society picture. Has quite a bit of comedy and seemed to please those who came, but it didn't draw.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—Worth seeing. Good program picture.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—68%. December 4-5-6. Picture excellent. Drew fair due to picture being made near here. Patrons complaining of too many war pictures. This one will please due to variety of pulling power-love-war-comedy, and some part of it is due to please everyone. Not worth the price I paid.—C. S. McLellan, Rex theatre, Eagle Lake, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—December 21-22. My personal opinion is that this is a great piece of entertainment, with never a dull moment from beginning to end. Crammed with the stuff that the masses like. Laughter, tears and thrills. However, due to the fact that this was shown free here to 60,000 people and me showing it a few days before Christmas, I lost plenty of money. But the picture is "there." Ten reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—December 18-19. A wonderful production. Very cold weather kept them away.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

THE TELEPHONE GIRL: Special cast—Just another Paramount picture, better than most of them at that. Paramount has forgotten how to make small town pictures. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no.—Dwight Grist, Theatrum, Columbia Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

ROOSEVELT'S ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—I consider this a wonderful picture. And don't forget the title. If you leave off the Roosevelt you will leave off your crowd. They think it is a Tom Mix or Hoot Gibson if you don't emphasize Teddy, and he is there, so you don't mislead anyone by so advertising.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—59%. November 24-25. Seeing so many adverse criticisms on the amount of business done in small towns, I had decided this was not for me. However, I did a record business, even the second night, considering the fact that I had as opposition the first street carnival I have had in seven years. It surprised me the way my country patrons liked the picture.—C. S. McLellan, Rex theatre, Eagle Lake, Tex.—Small town patronage.

ONE WOMAN TO ANOTHER: Florence Vidor—15%. December 20. Not much to it, either in drawing power, cast or story. No good for the small town. Five reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—100%. December 13. Boy! How it rained, but boy, how they came. That's nothing, what does a rain amount to when you have a Jack Holt in a Zane Grey Western. Jack, don't let them kid you about other Western stars, you are still far the best. The best Zane Grey we ever ran. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

ROLLED STOCKINGS: Paramount Junior Stars—50%. December 14. Very good. A good clean college story with a different twist to the story. Six reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

TIME TO LOVE: Raymond Griffith—30%. December 16. Better than the other ones from this star, but no one will exert themselves to see it. Five reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

PADLOCKED: Special cast—50%. A beautifully produced picture with fine shots of cabaret dancing and ballet skits. Lois Moran very winsome. All cast fine. Story of hypocritical vice crusading father who drives his daughter to the reform school, weakens her mind, but all ends well. Story to me unpleasant, but patrons commented favorably on it. A strong dramatic picture, use your judgment; would suggest your carefully reading press sheet. A play of this nature and well produced goes well, I think, for a change. A Rex Beach book.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

FASHIONS FOR WOMEN: Special cast—60%. Put this over by advertising it as Paramount's annual Fashion Show. Used rainbow cards and tied up with fashion show window display at leading store. Used the good Rotor heralds also. In the nick of time we found that two of the 15 models were girls formerly educated in our town, so placarded the town with the news of two Salmon girls appearing in the picture. These combined with heavy newspaper items such as front page story of the fashion show, local teasers and story of the two Finley girls, gave us a good crowd. We previewed the bathtub scene and found it to be a work of art and not indecent at all. Fashion show very good but not Paramount's best. Play very interesting. Esther Ralston mighty pretty and a splendid actress. Fine cast, entire satisfaction.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—95%. December 8-9. This is one of the best pictures I have ever seen and everyone who saw it says the same. Emil Jannings plays the title role to a perfection, with good support from Phyllis Haver. Paramount can well be proud of this feature. Nine reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—December 19. Very good story and splendid acting.—M. W. Mattheck, Lark theatre, McMinnville, Ore.—Small town patronage.

SOFT CUSHIONS: Douglas MacLean—30%. December 22. Just a program picture. Played one day. Bought for two days. Special, no. Satisfaction, 50 per cent.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE KID BROTHER: Harold Lloyd—15%. December 15-16. A very good Lloyd picture, but failed to do anything big due to bad weather.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE PONY EXPRESS: Ricardo Cortez—85%. December 3. Played this to a packed house and they all seemed to enjoy it although it is ancient history. The print was good. However, the photography seemed dark in places. This picture in my estimation is about three reels too long. Betty Compson is getting a little old and has long ceased to be a drawing card. If this had been on a week night I don't think it would have gone over. Ten reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE PONY EXPRESS: Special cast—A very good Western and will stand a two days run in towns that like Westerns. Nine reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

SHE'S A SHEIK: Bebe Daniels—This is a good comedy-drama and has an interesting story. Bebe does well and handled most of the picture alone. She makes an attractive sheikess and it's good entertainment.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR: Special cast—This is one nice show. The little lady is more attractive than ever and the bold bad men make some fun of the war. I believe the cow milking episode in this is the funniest thing ever put into pictures. A competitor's motion picture salesman saw this in the seat beside me and he cried over it. Tears of laughter mixed with envy.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR: Special cast—December 19. For a high priced comedy it's about as rotten as one could desire. Barnyard humor vulgar. Low and not fit for the family. Worth about $15.—M. W. Mattheck, Lark theatre, McMinnville, Ore.—Small town patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—Gertrude Ederle doesn't steal this picture from Bebe but she is certainly an addition to the attractiveness of the picture. It is good entertainment and my crowd liked it a lot. Comedy college-life theme.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—December 11-12. They liked this one very much. Good clean comedy.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—Nice little picture, which should please most of Bebe's admirers. Not as good as "Senorita," but then very few are. Did not draw for me, but neither has anything else the past few weeks, so there you are. Good family night picture. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

SHANGHAI BOUND: Richard Dix—Ran this Christmas Day. Consider this a poor Dix picture. Very few people care to see Chinese pictures. Dix never has meant anything at my box office, but this one flopped worse than ever on a holiday booking. Heard no comments, which in my theatre means not so good. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

SENORITA: Bebe Daniels—Very good action picture, with lots of comedy of the Douglas Fairbanks' style.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

THE LAST OUTLAW: Gary Cooper—This is a good Western, and if priced at what you can buy the Art Acords and Bob Tylers and such, it is a good picture. It is nothing but a Western, however, and can't be sold on the same plane as the Paramount Zane Greys. Of course it hasn't the personal appeal that the real Western stars have, as Cooper is just breaking in. Doesn't any one in my crowd remember him by his first name yet, either.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

BARBED WIRE: Pola Negri—This is a fine picture. It has a nice lesson, well told, and is interesting from start to finish. Pola has been cast in a fitting part. As an attraction for me she is a total loss, but in this picture she is given the part of a foreigner, and being such she can play it and does get by. It's a fine picture and fits nicely into a Sunday program. It is not too heavy to be entertainment and yet it has a real lesson.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

story was cut to pieces.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

LET'S GET MARRIED: Richard Dix—Very good comedy drama. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—December 21-22. Excellent comedy drama to empty seats. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

TELL IT TO SWEENEY: George Bancroft—Very good comedy. Priced too high to make any money.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

ROUGH HOUSE ROSIE: Clara Bow—December 2-3. Very good comedy drama.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

FIREMEN SAVE MY CHILD: Special cast—December 19. Rotten. A good two reeler and that's about all. No brains in this comedy team. The hook for them.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark theatre, McMinnville, Ore.—Small town patronage.

CHILDREN OF DIVORCE: Special cast—90%. December 1-2. The best Paramount in a long time with Clara Bow and Esther Ralston doing some good work. The story, however, is not the kind for Clara Bow in our estimation. Had a very good crowd and that is something. Gary Cooper deserves honorable mention. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FASCINATING YOUTH: Charles (Buddy) Rogers—90%. December 7. Charles Rogers is the star in this picture and does some good work. Although the story is good it is weak in parts. Buddy is from Kansas and not far from here. Let's have a photo, Buddy.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

RUNNING WILD: W. C. Fields—Here is one of the worst yet, and whoever told Fields that this was entertainment was surely a blind person. Too silly even for children, and the adults held their noses on leaving the theatre. Am surprised that Paramount would even let this one be released under their name and they tell you that their product for this year is much better than they ever put out before. It's all old bull in a new way, that's all.—R. A. Shobe, Strand theatre, Monticello, Ind.—General patronage.

SON OF HIS FATHER: Special cast—Very good. Eight reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Pathe-P D C

A HARP IN HOCK: Joseph Schildkraut—41%. December 15-16. Would have pleased, I guess, if I could have gotten them here. Title means nothing to my patrons. Schildkraut seems to mean less even with such pictures to his credit and personally I like him. Producers have made few money makers for me this year.—C. S. McLellan, Rex theatre, Eagle Lake, Tex.—Small town patronage.

A TURKISH DELIGHT: Special cast—20%. December 20. A lot of good talent and work lost. Why waste it. Satisfied 20 per cent.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

GETTING GERTIE'S GARTER: Marie Prevost—35%. December 14. A very good comedy drama with something doing every minute. Drew well for Wednesday. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE DEVIL HORSE: Rex—Better than some of his previous pictures. Business fair.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

COLLEGE DAYS: Special cast—This was an entertaining picture, also a good buy. Had everything and had I seen it before I booked it I certainly would have used it for a two-day booking. Another example of judging a picture by the price you paid for it and not being able to find out how good a picture it is until you actually run it. My Saturday crowd liked this a lot.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

United Artists

THE GENERAL: Buster Keaton—75%. A dandy comedy, something different from the usual funny ones. Seven reels.—Minnie M. Schnoor, Paramount theatre, Stapleton, Neb.—General patronage.

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY: Mary Pickford—50%. Would have been good if they had shipped us a decent print. The one we got was worn out. Nine reels.—Minnie Schnoor, Paramount theatre, Stapleton, Neb.—General patronage.

A NIGHT OF LOVE: Special cast—Probably a good picture for big houses, but no drawing power here. Did less than one-third of the rental price.—H. V. Ritter, McDonald theatre, McDonald, Kan.—General patronage.

THE BAT: Lousie Fazenda—90%. A mystery picture that stands out as a real money maker. The book is well known. Seven reels.—Minnie Schnoor, Paramount theatre, Stapleton, Neb.—General patronage.

THE ONLY WAY: Martin Harvey—40%. A very good picture taken from the story, "The Tale of Two Cities," by Charles Dickens. Seven reels.—Minnie M. Schnoor, Paramount theatre, Stapleton, Neb.—General patronage.

COLLEGE: Buster Keaton—December 19. A very good comedy. About the best Keaton has made.—M. W. Mattechek, Lark theatre, McMinnville, Ore.—Small town patronage.

Universal

DENVER DUDE: Hoot Gibson—55%. One of those Western comedy affairs that seem to go well these days. Everybody laughed and enjoyed it. Hoot gets action into it at the end. Think it is a good, very good picture.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE COHENS AND KELLYS: Special cast—90%. December 12. Old but mighty good. Packed them more than I have for a long time and pleased as near 100 per cent as anything can. Beautiful print also from Boston. If any haven't played this you are passing up something, because it can be bought right and will sure go over. Eight reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

THE IRRESISTIBLE LOVER: Special cast—Nothing to this, but they'll like it just the same. Universal pictures consistently good.—Dwight Grist, Theatorium, Columbia Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

SET FREE: Art Acord—48%. Story the same old type but believe it is Art Acord's best. A good little Western.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Special cast—This is a great picture of the spooky type and should go over anywhere. Keeps the audience guessing until the very last. Our patrons liked it very much.—W. L. Crouse, Ideal theatre, Bloomer, Wis.—General patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Glenn Tryon—This is certainly one peach of a show. It is a comedy drama with attractive characters and a real plot and enough wise cracks to title a dozen pictures. It comes close to being a knock-out and can not fail to please the big majority of any audience.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Special cast—December 20-21. An average racetrack picture with a very good cast. So far as I have been able to see all the racetrack pictures are the same. However, they are good to throw at 'em once in a while for a change of diet. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

PROWLERS OF THE NIGHT: Fred Humes—December 19-20. Average factory made Western to light business. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

MICHAEL STROGOFF: Ivan Moskine—A very good picture, but one terrible flop for me. Did not take in expenses, with extra advertising. Print very poor. Price—plenty.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Balto, Md.—General patronage.

PRISONERS OF THE STORM: House Peters—December 13-14. After two days of beautiful blizzard this sureinell was a sweet title to push over on 'em. The title fitted in to the Queen's taste. Notwithstanding it is a good Curwood picture, which would have drawn better next, or last, July or August. Good program picture. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING: Special cast—Fair program picture. Poor box office returns.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE FOURTH COMMANDMENT: Special cast—This is a winner and how! Pleased everyone, no exceptions. The title drew them in and the picture tugging at their heart strings held them. The acting of Belle Bennett and Mary Carr is superb, as the "greatest screen mother's" always is. The little tot, Wendell Phillips Franklin, also comes in for his share of the laurels. Boost it big, and with fair weather you'll have results. This just can't disappoint. Admission on this picture 10-15-25c.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

OUT ALL NIGHT: Special cast—November 13-14. A clean comedy-drama of the Denny type of picture. Percentage of gross receipts has no bearing on the value of a picture in a small town. The weather and counter attractions seem to count here.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

THE STORM BREAKER: House Peters—This will satisfy your rough necks and that's all. Six reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

POKER FACES: Laura LaPlante—Did not seem to take here and I would call it slow moving. No plot. Eight reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

RANGE COURAGE: Fred Humes—Great, give us more like this one. Humes is a comer if you give him stories and supporting cast like this one. Kid is very good. Print good.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Balto, Md.—General patronage.

THE OLD SOAK: Jean Hersholt—A very good program picture that should please any type of patronage and register good at the box office. Print good.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Balto, Md.—General patronage.

LOCO LUCK: Art Acord—Art Acord's oil well crook melodrama. People seemed to enjoy it. The dog and horse were splendid. Played this with Dempsey-Tunney fight picture two nights to big houses.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE MIDNIGHT SUN: Special cast—For a Russian court life picture this was better than I expected. Story is interesting though old. The rich Russian banker and the grand duke both aim to have the American girl in the ballet for their mistress. She falls in love with a young soldier who is ordered to be shot. Exciting ending in which the grand duke proves himself a man and allows the young couple to go their way. Ballet scenes very disappointing. Lavish but little dancing. Laura La Plante not a dancer. Pat O'Malley fine. Not as big as Carl Laemmle would make you believe. Attendance? Say 'twas the week before Christmas I searched through the house and found only six women, a man, and a mouse. Hence, "The Midnight Sun" went into a complete eclipse.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

FAST WORKER: Reginald Denny—Very good. Seven reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

RAMBLING RANGER: Johnny Hines—Just fair. Six reels.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

MAN FROM THE WEST: Art Acord—December 19-20. This was a pleasing surprise. A story of a Dude Ranch with plenty of good comedy and an interesting story. Ran as half of double Western program. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

THE HEART OF MARYLAND: Dolores Costello—60%. December 18-19. This is a good picture. This old war drama has been played and played and also filmed, but this is the best cast I ever saw. The star fair, support good. Will satisfy any audience.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE LITTLE IRISH GIRL: Special cast—10%. Old play but good print. Took an awful licking, worst Saturday in years. Intense cold, basketball game, Christmas shopping. If Warner had given me the play, the advertising, comedy and express would still have lost. This is a good crook melodrama where everybody concerned is a crook save the boy. Well directed and interesting story. Dolores Costello appealing but rather wasted in this type of play.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

WHITE FLANNELS: Special cast—20%. December 17. A good show but title did not draw. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE THIRD DEGREE: Dolores Costello—50%. December 21. This is a splendid program picture. Star, cast and story good entertainment.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

DON'T TELL THE WIFE: Special cast—25%. December 14. Just a fair comedy drama. Satisfied 50 per cent.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MATINEE LADIES: May McAvoy—70%. December 11. An interesting program picture. Pleased Sunday business. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE NIGHT CRY: Special cast—55%. Rin Tin Tin in a unique different story. "The Night Cry" is made of a big condor who kills the sheep (blame put on the dog), and shots of the bird are wonderful. The condor swoops down and picks up the little girl and takes her to the crags of the mountains where Rin Tin Tin rescues the girl and falls off the peak, killing the bird. Better buy it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW: Patsy Ruth Miller—15%. December 12-13. Title misleading but proved a satisfactory entertainment. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

TRACKED BY THE POLICE: Rin Tin Tin—December 22-23. A very good dog picture. I have tried everything from soup to nuts on 'em in the past two weeks, but Rinty is the only one that apparently can pull 'em against the Xmas shopping. Here's a Merry Xmas to him and his good looking spouse, Nanette, and their whole brood of little Rinties. Six reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

State Rights

PLAY SAFE: Monty Banks—December 16-17. Slap-stick comedy in five reels. Failed to draw against cold weather. Five reels.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—General patronage.

TUNNEY-DEMPSEY FIGHT: This sure is good. Can't be beat, but I did not take in film rental and express charge.—J. W. Schmidt, Grand theatre, Breese, Ill.—General patronage.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

FELIX IN PEDIGREEDY: About up to usual standard of these cartoons. They all go over as regular diet.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

HIGH SPOTS: Al St. John—A Funny one. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MISTER CHUMP: A good single reel comedy. One reel.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton Pa.—General patronage.

NO SPARKING: A good comedy.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THEN AND NOWS: A scenic filler. Old stuff which appeared to be uninteresting.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

F B O

BACK FIRE: Three Fat Men—Fair comedy. Two reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

BEAUTY PARLOR SERIES: I have run seven of the "Beauty Parlor Series" and found every one a good clean comedy with plenty of laughs and yells in them. FBO sure has the comedies. I also had one of the Micky McGuires and it too was a dandy. Boys, do not be afraid to buy them, you can't do better. Two reels.—C. Gehlsen, Community theatre, Burk, S. D.—Small town patronage.

LAST NOSE OF SUMMERS: Al Cooke—Kit Guard—These Beauty Parlor series are pretty fair comedy. The third we have had and patrons seem to like them. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MICKEY'S PALS: Mickey Mc Guire—My first Mickey, but believe me not my last. This is along the line of the old Our Gang comedies and believe me they are great. Better than the Our Gangs today. Two reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

THE UNSOCIAL THREE: Another unfunny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

FOX

CUPID AND CLOCK: Just a comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

KANGAROO KIMONO: Pretty good comedy. Pleased most all. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

BUFFALO BILL'S LAST FIGHT: Good technicolor two reeler. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

BUFFALO BILL'S LAST FIGHT: This series of great events from Metro are going over fine with me. The technicolor is wonderful and they are entertaining as well as educational. Two reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

HEEBE JEEBES: Our Gang—Best Our Gang from Metro to date from the new series. There is none of them come up to the old standard of the Our Gangs. Two reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

METRO COMEDIES: These comedies are coming through good. There are more laughs in them than anything else we run. Two reels.—John L. Danm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

METRO ODDITIES: With the exception of a few the oddities are mighty interesting short reels. I believe the best I've ever seen. One reel.—John L. Danm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

M-G-M NEWS REEL: A real good news reel. No better on the market.—Earl Somerville, Opera House theatre, Raymond, Minn.—General patronage.

M-G-M NEWS: M-G-M News pretty fair. However, not as good as Kinograms. One reel.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

THE STING OF STINGS: Charley Chase—A very good comedy. Two reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

WHAT EVERY ICE MAN KNOWS: Max Davidson—Here is a dandy comedy. Max Davidson is certainly a good comedy star. Two reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

PATHE

ARE BRUNETTES SAFE?: Charlie Chase—Very good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CURED IN EXCITEMENT: Fair. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

JEWISH PRUDENCE: Max Davidson—Very good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE JOLLY JILTER: Ben Turpin—"Unfunny." A classic that did not get a wrinkle. Turpin didn't even use his eyes. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

LOVE'S LAGGARD: Good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

A ONE MAMA MAN: Another comedy played up. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SEVENTH LANDLORD: This is a good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SLIPPING WIVES: A comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SMITH'S FISHING TRIP: Very good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

TIRED BUSINESS MAN: Always please kids. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

WHY GIRLS SAY NO: A fair comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BUSTER'S GIRL FRIEND: Fine comedy. Tige is a wonder. Last reel pure melodrama in which Tige rolls down rocks on the villains in the cave. Something new.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGIANS: George Lewis—Second series. "The Collegians" are still holding the center of the stage as a fine series of shorts. Two reels.—John L. Danm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

KID GEORGE: Fairly good. One of the "Let George Do It" series that are nothing to rave about but will get by. Two reels.—G. B. Orne, Richmond theatre, Richmond, Vt.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BLAZING DAYS: Fred Humes—A fair imitation of a Western.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

BUSTER WHAT NEXT: One of the best comedies I have ever run, pure clean fun. Fast and furious. Dogs, dogs, dogs and cats. Holy cats, what good gags. Harold Lloyd will turn green with envy if he sees this. The little visiting girl, the fat pest, is a scream, and then there's a dandy kid boxing ring fight. House in an uproar. Book it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

DO OR DIET: Charles Puffy—Just so-so laugh-getter. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

HOP ALONG: Arthur Lake—Just a comedy, that's all. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

I TOLD YOU SO: The Gumps—Very poor, not worth running. Had many complaints on this one. Two reels.—K. R. Smith, Rialto theatre, Stromsburg, Neb.—Small town patronage.

LOVE WALLÖP: Arthur Lake—A snappy comedy Very good. One reel.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

OH TEACHER: Oswald, the Rabbit—Good cartoon, but not for my town. Just a waste of 800 feet of film for us that we had to pay for. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE PARTY MEN: Charles Puffy—Very nice one reeler, the leg show just seems to hold all the bachelors right on the screen with their eyes and don't make 'em wink until it's all over. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

RATTLING GOOD TIME: Ben Hall—Good time all the way through but a little too silly. We want good action and some real smart cracks but leave out the silliness in comedies and then you can reap the harvest. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, parents at Minneapolis. The row was a lively place for more reasons than one on Christmas. Virtually all exchanges "called in" their salesmen as it was deemed useless to have them in the territory during the holidays. All of which, of course, helped make up more "cheer" for Christmas. There may have been some things lacking, but the "cheer" was plentiful. Many exchange men sent congratulations to Bob Gary, former exploiter for Universal at Kansas City, following the announcement two weeks ago that Bob had been made managing director of all Schine theatres in Ohio. W. E. Bishop, former M-G-M exploiter, who was succeeded as publicity manager of Loew's Midland by Charles Winston, has gone to Detroit to act in a similar capacity for Loew interests.

Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS.—The most pretentious program ever undertaken by the motion picture theatres here during the Christmas holidays has just been completed, with practically every one of the Finkelstein and Ruben downtown houses presenting a benefit program for the entertainment of the poor of the city. . . . The largest program was given at the State, at which more than 3,000 children from the orphanages and settlement houses were entertained at a two-hour show, receiving 14 pails of candy, 25 crates of apples and 300 pounds of nuts. "Chang" was the picture donated by Paramount for the show, and the members of the Kiddie Revue were the special entertainers. I. H. Ruben, senior partner of the firm, personally supervised the presentation of the performance. The theatre was specially decorated for the affair, which was the largest event of its kind ever given in Minneapolis.

. . . More than 1,000 poor children were guests of the Hennepin County Tuberculosis Association and Finkelstein and Ruben at a Christmas show at the Lyric theatre, at which the price of admission was a health seal. The youngsters paraded through the loop district to the showhouse behind a "health" clown, who was the chief entertainer. . . . The Grand was turned over to the Salvation Army for its Christmas party, where a full picture program and a number of special entertainers delighted mothers and children. Following the show the Army distributed Christmas baskets to the poor. Earle Brown, Minneapolis millionaire sheriff, acted in the role of Santa Claus and was assisted by his deputies. . . . Seven hundred carriers of the Minneapolis Tribune were also entertained at a Christmas party at the Grand. . . . The Kiddie Revue was taken to the Glen Lake Sanitarium for tuberculars, so that the patients might be able to see a Christmas show. A program was also given for the disabled World War Veterans at the Asbury hospital. . . . Entertainment was furnished for families of disabled American war veterans at a big party in the Minneapolis city hall. . . . Every theatre on the Finkelstein and Ruben circuit followed the lead of the Minneapolis theatres and conducted similar Christmas programs. . . . Employees, from managers to janitors, contributed their services in order to make the shows a success.

Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS.—In order properly to celebrate the holidays, the Liberty theatre at Washington recently gave a big matinee benefit for the Salvation Army Christmas drive. The picture? "Salvation Nell," of course. The Liberty donated the theatre, the employees gave their services free of charge, and the public responded en masse. . . . Children from the Indianapolis orphan asylums, numbering about 1,500, were entertained at the Zaring theatre here recently. The party was in tribute to Dick Case, a business associate of Zaring, who was greatly interested in children. Case died two years ago. The People's Motor Coach Company and the Indianapolis Street Railway Company provided free transportation for the children. . . . Rex Snelgrove of Muncie has leased the Star theatre, from the Fitzpatrick and McElroy interests of Chicago and opened the house Christmas with the Rex Players. In addition to stock, the theatre will also continue showing motion pictures. . . . According to word received in Marion from officials of Universal, through Henry Herbel, salesdirector of the company, and a former Marion man, the new Universal theatre, strictly a motion picture house, will be opened about Sept. 1. Work on the building, which is to be located near Third and Washington streets, will start soon and be rushed to completion. Plans have been completed by Donald Graham, an Indianapolis architect, and the contract has been awarded to a local company. . . . The Palace theatre, which has been closed since July, will be reopened about Feb. 15 under the management of Loew's, Inc. Joseph R. Vogel, representative of the company is in Indianapolis arranging for the repair and redecoration of the house. The New York organization recently acquired controlling interest in the theatre from local capitalists. Vogel said the theatre will be completely refurbished. It will present feature pictures and a stage band. M-G-M specials and United Artists pictures will be the principal attractions. The band has not been selected.

St. Louis

ST. LOUIS.—The general contract for the construction of a community building to include a 1,000-seat motion picture theatre, eight stores, seventeen offices and an assembly hall, at Acme and West Florissant avenues, by the G. M. C. Corporation, has been awarded to the William H. and Nelson Cunliff Construction Company. The theatre has been leased to local theatre men and an announcement of the opening date will soon be made. The building will cost $325,000. . . . J. Dozier Stone, chief promoter of the new Missouri theatre in Columbia, has announced the awarding the general contract for the construction of the building to the Schultz Construction Company of Chillicothe. The contract price was $133,755 and provides that the structure be completed within 180 working days. . . . The Scram City theatre in Hillsboro, Ill., owned by Frank Halston, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin on December 22. The loss was estimated at $10,000 and was but partly insured. . . . Tom McKean, manager of the St. Louis FBO office, has resigned and on January 15 will assume his new duties as vicepresident and general salesmanager of the Premier Pictures Corporation, 3308 Olive street. He has purchased an interest in the independent exchange. Associated with him are Nat Steinberg, Tommy Tobin and his brother, Claude W. McKean. . . . The suit brought by Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl of St. Louis against the estate of his brother, Ricord Gradwohl, former motion picture producer, for $5,755 for medical services in his last illness, was dismissed December 21 by Justice Walsh of the New York Supreme Court. Nathan Vidaver, executor of the estate, showed that Dr. Gradwohl still owed his brother $800 on a promissory note signed in 1919. . . . Commissioner Walter N. Davis of the Missouri Supreme Court, on December 31, reversed and remanded for new trial, the case of Benjamin F. Austin, a negro, who formerly operated the Venus theatre, 4264 Finney avenue. Austin had been charged with defrauding R. F. Williams, also a negro, by giving him a chattel mortgage on a theatre organ that was already covered by another mortgage. He was convicted and sentenced to serve two years in the penitentiary, but took an appeal.

Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH.—William G. Smith, manager of the Columbia local branch, is recovering slowly from a severe attack of the grip. "Bill" spends several hours at the office a day, but he is far from being in the best of health. His many friends wish that he may soon be again enjoying his usual vim and vigor. . . . Among the visitors along Film Row early in the week were: Louis Stein, Natrona; William Gray, Monongahela; Louis Capruggi, Export; B. E. Cuper, Washington; John Newman, New Castle; Tom Rankin, Bridgeville; John Schultz, Wilson; and Nick Anas, Wellsburg. . . . Everybody at the Pathe Exchange had had a hand in trimming the giant Christmas tree that was placed in the center of the office. It was the largest tree ever trimmed by the local exchange, and it was beautiful. The Pathe folks made merry at an office party on the Friday afternoon before Christmas, much exchanging of gifts and partaking of refreshments. Frank Ray saw to it that the crowd was amused by a number of entertainers he brought down from the Elmore theatre, where he is manager. . . . The United Artists exchange also boasts of a tree. Though this one is smaller than that of Pathe, it is entirely white and is a beautiful symbol of the holiday season. . . . Howard Dennison, accessory salesman at Pathe, spent Christmas at his home in Cleveland. . . . Salesmanager W. W. Black, of Pathe's non-theatrical department, was a Pittsburgh visitor recently. . . . Selden Kiralfy, shipper for Columbia, is a clever buck and wing dancer, and billed as Jack Clifford, appeared on the stage of the Harris theatre one evening recently, taking part in a contest. Selden got a big hand from the crowd and his ambitions to become a professional are stronger than ever. . . . Herbert Greenblatt, former local Universal salesman and recently with the Theatre Ad Mat service of Uniontown, has resigned, and is visiting Pittsburgh. "Herb" expects to connect with a local film exchange in the near future. . . . Practically all of the film salesmen were in town over the holidays. As Meyer Goldstein puts it, "the boys were all stations at their offices waiting for the exhibitors to bring in their gifts personally." . . . Miss Zelda Nathanson, formerly employed in the accounting department of the local Pathe branch, has gone to New York where she has accepted a position in the auditing department of Pathe's home office. . . . David Victor, manager of the Victor theatre, McKeesport, has returned from a three-month vacation to California. Dave was accompanied by his wife, who will be remembered as Miss Sarah Broder. . . . The Pathe exchanges are nationally making a drive for play date to be set for the months of January and February. Consequently the entire local sales staff is in the field concentrating on nothing but play dates for these months.

Ottawa

OTTAWA.—The Toronto managers of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, made special presentations to head office officials of the company at holiday time, as a token of esteem, the ceremony taking place at a gathering of theatre men at the company's headquarters. C. L. Querie, manager of the Palace theatre at Toronto for the past six years, was the master of ceremonies. . . . A gift of a cut glass wine and whiskey set, with decanter, was made to Clarence Robson, Eastern division manager of the corporation. Ben Geldsaeler, supervisor of Toronto suburban theatres, was remembered with a mahogany folding card table; while Harry Sedgwick was presented with a cut glass wine set, the presentation in the latter instance being made by Mr. O'Brien in behalf of head office associates. . . . N. L. Nathanson, managing director, Sam Bloom and Sam Fine, representing the B. and F. circuit, were interested spectators. . . . Alfredo Meunier, formerly conductor of the orchestra at the Palace theatre, Calgary, Alberta, and more recently pianist at the Grand, has been appointed as conductor of the big orchestra at the Capitol theatre, Calgary, by manager John Hazza. . . . When J. B. Reisman played "The Fair Co-ed" at the Express theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, he had the Edmonton Commercial Grads, women basketball champions of the world, as special guests on the opening night. The popular young women helped to draw a big crowd. . . . In a special endeavor to get patrons into the Metropolitan theatre, Winnipeg, in good time for the two daily performances of "Ben Hur," manager Walter Davis announced the time of shows as 2:15 and 8:15 P. M., when, in reality, they began at 2:30 and 8:30 P. M. Those who arrived particularly early were invited into the attractively furnished mezzanine, where a talented pianist played selections until show time. . . . The many theatres of the Famous Players chain in Canada made a special feature of pictures of a championship ring battle that took place in Canada during the week of December 26. This was the flyweight championship set-to at Toronto, when Frenchy Belanger defeated Ernie Jarvis of England, for the world's title. The complete fight was filmed and prints rushed to all the leading cities for immediate showing. The photography was excellent.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating report received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By Whit

ABOUT the biggest piece of news down the row last Friday was the merger of "Exhibitors Herald" and "Moving Picture World," which was made public on that day. The merger created no small bit of surprise and received 100 per cent approval from everyone along the row.

Congratulations seemed to be the order of the day, and many fine compliments were paid the HERALD, and the paper which takes birth today, THE EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD. "A great move"; "a wonderful thing for the industry"; "the new paper will be far above all competition"; "just the thing the industry has been wanting," were some of the fine tributes paid the merger.

Sam Gorelick started the New Year off right by renewing his subscription to this publication last week. "I'd rather go home without my pay check than the paper," says Sam. "My wife can't live without it."

Al Perretz, who has been traveling the Illinois territory for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been transferred to the New York territory.

Sam Shurman, Milwaukee manager of M-G-M, was in town last Thursday and entertained the boys with a thrilling account of his bronco auto that won't stay hitched. It seems that Sam parked his car on the side of a hilly street in Milwaukee. Some hours later when he came back, his car was gone. It had rolled three blocks and crashed into a building excavation. Sam is now advocating hitching posts for all hilly streets.

Maurice Saulkins and Jack Rubin opened the Peerless theatre on the South Side on New Year's Eve. We wish them luck on their new venture.

B. J. Vought of the Palace theatre, Crown Point, returned recently from Nashville, Tenn.

Herb Washburn spent last week on the road in the interests of F B O.

The F B O boys are quite a bespatted bunch these days. Herb Washburn, Joe Lyon and Walter Brown are the latest to don the ankle-warmers, and even Eddie McEvoy, when last seen in these parts, was proudly flashing a pair of natty gaiters. It is unofficially reported that Walter's were made by Omar the Tent Maker.

The Kedzie theatre, Kedzie and Madison, will open on January 22, with a dramatic roadshow policy. The first show will be "Abie's Irish Rose," with the New York cast, it is reported. The house has been running pictures and vaudeville under the Kedzie Amusement Co.

Freddie Martin, at United Artists, had a lot of fine things to say for the merger of the HERALD and the WORLD. Martin at one time held down an editorial position on the WORLD in the Chicago office. When he wasn't reviewing pictures, he could usually be found at the old Essenay studios watching 'em manufacture more for him to review.

Balaban & Katz have booked the Education one-reel Carter DeHaven novelty film of impersonations of famous screen stars, and will run it in all their houses.

"Gosh, what a paper EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD will be!" declares Dave Durbin.

The letter from the two Los Angeles boys, Murray and Hodges, almost got me in bad down the row last week. Frank Ishmael was indignant because he was called the world's worst golfer and upon reading the letter immediately dispatched a wire to Hodges challenging him to golf duel. Ishmael won several trophies at the last golf tournament and offers this as sufficient proof of his prowess at batting the ball. Arrangements are now being made to have the duel shot at some half way point between Chicago and Los Angeles. Special trains will be run if necessary.

The Coston Circuit has taken over the Vendome and Pickford theatres.

What other film row in the country can boast of having three brothers on its Film Board of Trade beside Chicago? With the recent election of Lester Silverman as a member of the Board representing Si Greiver, there are now three Silverman brothers on the board. Ed Silverman was the first member and has served as president more than once, and Earl is a member representing Warner Bros.

Wynona Flaven is now director of publicity for the Schoenstadts.

According to news stories emanating from the offices of National Playhouses, "The Capitol theatre is about to inaugurate a new, startling policy of entertainment with the triumphant return of the popular Albert E. Short and his huge symphonic band the latter part of January."

After spending all last month on the road, Brichetto is once more warming his chair at the M-G-M office.

Munn Delano has also been elected as a member of the Film Board. He will represent Tiffany-Stahl Productions.

Roy Alexander says that Columbia has purchased 12 Chaplin comedies made for Mutual under the famous million dollar contract. The pictures have been booked by National Playhouses, Coston, Lynch, and Lubliner & Trinz. "Easy Street," one of the group, will be shown at the Roosevelt, beginning January 12.

I don't know what effect this frozen weather is having on Chicago box offices, but I do know that it's playing havoc with my frost bitten ears.

Popular refrain: "Give Me a Night in June."

These double holidays sure do play the devil with one's ambition.

Batting Averages

Columbia maintains its hold on first place by virtue of reports without a bad one among them, giving them an .875 rating, which is fair for that exalted position. Fox comes up for air this week and climbs into second place with an .850 average, which is far behind Columbia and not so far ahead of Tiffany-Stahl which dropped from second place last week to third but still maintaining a good average of .839. As to number of reports—look 'em over. How they did come in this week! Exhibitors must be running continuous shows with hourly changes of programs. Paramount slipped us 31 report blanks with the blank parts filled in nicely enough to give them a fourth place rating with an average of .830. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was not far behind Paramount in number of reports with a good 29 but they lagged far behind in quality and hooked seventh place, three points behind an .800 label. As to the heavy hitters, Metro continues to be "The Babe" and chalked up two homers while Paramount and Universal boosted their good totals with one apiece. Columbia entered the home-run race with a 100 per cent report, too. The line-up for this week is: Columbia (10), .875; Fox (13), .850; Tiffany-Stahl (9), .839; Paramount (31), .830; United Artists (4), .825; FBO (21), .805; M-G-M (29), .797; Universal (14), .795; Pathe (14), .789; First National (17), .776; Warner Brothers (12), .771.

DOROTHY. Really very clever, though a little unrefined.

GUS EISMAN. The Button King, who educated me.

CHESTER CONKLIN wanted my part but they made him Judge.

ANITA LOOS and JOHN EMERSON who made so much money out of me, they've retired.

I think it is perfectly wonderful that I'm to meet all you nice exhibitor gentlemen. Since Miss Anita Loos told people about me in "GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES" it seems that I am famous. I mean the book sold over a million copies and the play by Miss Loos and Mr. Emerson was such a big success, and now Paramount has put me in the moving pictures—a girl cannot really be blamed for feeling people just naturally like her. Everybody says "GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES" on the screen is sure to make a lot of money for you gentlemen. Of course art is everything, but money is nice too.

"Very smooth comedy for high life, of genteel atmosphere, great pictorial beauty, with appeal to all classes of fans. Strong cast and fetching title insure draw...Belongs to the type becoming more and more popular...One of the neatest pieces of work Kane or anybody else has sponsored. Wealth of fine material in the hands of players of superlative skill in their types...The results speak for themselves. The literary substances are excellent and the performance of the cast is impeccable in its artless flow...The picture is a revel in elegance of modern costume, of persuasive scenic settings and those other elements that go to make up a composite atmosphere. It works out into a neat surprise trick...the situation is deftly twisted for an unexpected outcome, graceful and with a smart sentimental turn of high comedy."

The Merger Acclaimed

THE publisher and the staff wish to express their very great gratitude to persons throughout the industry whose highly impressive congratulatory communications concerning the consolidation of EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD have been received. Many of these communications were published in last week's issue and others are disclosed elsewhere in this issue.

Particularly notable are the expressions from theatremen representing every type of exhibition interest in the country. It is particularly gratifying to us to know that our effort looking to the establishment and maintenance in this industry of a single publication, which through its resources and circulation, would be enabled completely to serve the publication requirements of the whole body of exhibitors, has been so enthusiastically received.

COMMUNICATIONS from theatremen pointed out the very important advantage to them of being able to obtain from a single source the full information concerning product and events in the industry which they require in the operation of their business.

Typical among the expressions received are the following:

Mr. George W. Trendle, leading theatre executive and operating head of the Kunsky interests in Detroit, said:

"We consider the merger of EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD the most constructive step the industry has had in many days . . . it will enable exhibitors to get full information from one source."

Mr. M. M. Rubens, prominent Illinois exhibitor, said:

"Congratulations on your merger which I personally consider one of the greatest economic moves of the motion picture industry. The high tension at which the exhibiting end of the motion pictures is now conducted makes it imperative that your field be covered in a compact manner."

Mr. James E. Coston, one of Chicago's most powerful figures in exhibition, said:

"We believe that this move will be a great benefit to the industry."

Mr. Fred S. Meyer of Milwaukee, who has made a nationwide name for himself as one of the most enterprising theatre executives, said:

"Those profit most who serve best' unquestionably is responsible for HERALD-WORLD merger. I have religiously followed the progress and achievements of the HERALD since its inception and rejoice in the consolidation which will not only make the HERALD foremost beyond any comparison but will also prove of greater and more indispensable value to all exhibitors everywhere."

Mr. Philip Rand, who from the small town of Salmon, Idaho, has made his voice heard throughout the world of motion pictures, said:

"The merger of the HERALD and WORLD will permanently guarantee the exhibitor his charter of movie rights; that is, the opportunity of having his opinions printed and pictures reported upon. Without these the exhibitor would be helpless. Both magazines uphold the personal equation idea between exhibitor and publisher and these letters and reports lead to correspondence between every branch of the industry and bring all in touch. This inspires confidence in the magazine. This merger is bound to succeed big and give the trade world the one big human interest and personal contact magazine."

Mr. M. E. Comerford, head of the huge Pennsylvania circuit, writes that the merger is "indicative of the wonderful progress you are making."

Mr. Kenneth S. Fitzpatrick of Fitzpatrick and McElroy said:

"With the much broader scope the merger gives you, added to the splendid organization with which you have surrounded yourself, I know you will make this larger trade paper an even greater help to the theatre owners and managers, as well as to all other branches of our industry."

OTHER communications received dwell particularly upon the advantage to the exhibitor of the combination in that a single publication of appropriate calibre means much to the theatremen in convenience and in the saving of time.

We wish in this, the second issue of the combined publications, to offer assurances to those theatremen who have expressed such confidence in us that no effort shall be spared to maintain just such a publication as will most effectively and most completely serve their interests.

Our publication effort has always been predicated on the idea that our first duty is to the reader; that the success of any publication, in this field or elsewhere, depends primarily upon the quality of its service to subscribers. The modern type of publication cannot, of course, exist without advertising; the subscription price does not pay for the amount of blank paper required to fill a year's subscription. But the value of its advertising pages is in direct ratio to the quality of the service to readers.

The confidence of the industry in the HERALD and in the WORLD is a trust which shall be carefully safeguarded. The renewed confidence in the consolidation which has been expressed by leading representatives of every branch of the industry adds to the significance of the trust. We shoulder this added responsibility in full confidence that its every requirement will be fully and effectively discharged.

It is with considerable satisfaction that we have noted that the essential reasons which have led to this consolidation have been quickly grasped by the industry generally. The record in other industries reveals similar developments. The conditions of the day require fewer and more solidly entrenched institutions.

The consolidation of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD has succeeded in accomplishing what the conditions of the day required. A single publication of sufficient calibre to serve completely and effectively the entire industry in all of its branches.

—MARTIN J. QUIGLEY.

Educational Gets Vocafilm Rights; Servicing Is Free

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Educational has acquired the rights to Vocafilm. Marketing of this simple and economical device for synchronization will begin soon through Educational exchanges.

Announcement was made this week by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, and David R. Hochreich, president, Vocafilm Corporation. Original cost of Vocafilm will be by far the lowest of any synchronization device, and the cost of upkeep practically negligible, it was stated. No charges are to be made for regular servicing, and no seat tax or added fees are involved.

Special Vocafilm "acts" and musical numbers will be released on a regular schedule, and it is likely also that a number of Educational's comedy and novelty short features soon will carry Vocafilm accompaniments. These will also be available to producers of long features and records are in preparation in connection with several current features.

Vocafilm uses standard projector and film, together with a sound record. No special technical service is required in the booth.

Early Commission Action on Paramount Intimated in Note to Congressman

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Possibilities of action on the Paramount case in the near future are intimated in a letter from the Federal Trade Commission to Congressman Clarence MacGregor of New York, in response to an inquiry as to what might be expected in the case.

The plan of the respondents for compliance with the order, MacGregor was informed, is now before the commission for consideration.

Los Angeles Chosen for Wampas Frolic and Ball

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—This city will again be the scene of the annual Wampas Frolic and Ball. This was definitely decided upon at an executive meeting of the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers held last week for the purpose of considering various offers to stage the annual frolic in other Coast cities. The big affair will be held at the Ambassador auditorium here, Saturday evening, February 25.

Cutting Prices Damages Goodwill and Box-office

Public Suspects Managers of Dropping to "Grind House" Policy When Rates Are Reduced to Meet Competition

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 10.—The present rampage of theatre price changes is a problem of concern to theatre owners in the Southwest and undoubtedly throughout the country. The question of whether helter-skelter shifts in admission rates are ruining the community standing of many really excellent houses, as a resume in Texas indicates, or whether a fixed and unalterable charge for all shows of the individual theatre would be better and more profitable is one confronting every theatre manager.

Some Managers Shortsighted?

Probably one of the most interesting and conclusive articles ever published in the South on the matter was printed recently in the Dallas Morning News, by John Rosenfield, Jr., dramatic critic. Rosenfield warns that many managers are not looking far enough into the future when they make indiscriminate changes in prices.

He cites an exhibitor telling him that the reason he changed his prices from 50 cents top to 35 cents, for straight pictures, was that the public would not pay a 50-cent price for pictures these days, when pictures and stage entertainment could be had for the same price, or a little more. The manager lowered his prices. His receipts, formerly $5,500 a week, immediately dropped to $3,500. He now does not know whether to raise his prices back to the old standard, or to continue the low price scale.

He finds that although he lowered his prices, he did not increase his patronage one bit—in fact, he has lost by the deal, because some of his patrons took the price lowering to mean the instituting of a weaker product.

His mistake is pointed out as a general one in this part of the country. Managers of picture houses become hysterical when they see the big amount of entertainment offered by combination houses, and jump to the conclusion that they will benefit by a price lowering. A general resume of such cases throughout the South shows, however, that they do not improve their status or earning capacity one iota, and do a lot toward lowering the general goodwill of their houses in the minds of the patrons.

Queen Theatre Maintains Price

The Queen theatre in Houston is a good example of the other side of the question. The Queen maintains a 50-cent top price, running two pictures each week, and has as competition three houses offering stage and screen attractions for ten cents more. But the Queen is steadily making money, while a couple of other Houston houses, caught in the price lowering maelstrom have succeeded only in "cooking their goose." Price lowering in Houston, or other Texas cities, suggests to patrons nothing but a coming "grind policy." And grind policies do not pay in Texas, at all.

Rosenfield notes that the 60-cent top is really a misnomer in combination houses, because the average top runs around 35 cents or 40 cents, owing to the many price changes during the day. The stage and screen house opens in the morning with a shoppers' matinee, at 25 cents, goes into a 35-cent price at 1 to 6, and then to its 60-cent price, so that they really maintain a price that is on the level of the picture house or even below it. The picture house with a 50-cent top, with 35-cent matinee until 6 p. m., has an average of 42½ cents, which is a bigger average price than that of the combination house. The fact of not having as many patrons as the larger houses will be offset somewhat by this percentage of price difference. But some managers, even though they have an established patronage, with a healthful profit, cannot see the light of competition, and jump to the conclusion that a lower price will put them on a proportionate earning level with the larger houses.

Chicago Operators Take Compromise

Members of the Chicago Exhibitors' Association late Tuesday won out in their stand against a 7½ per cent raise demanded by the operators, when the latter agreed to accept a 5 per cent increase offered as a compromise by the theatre owners.

Ascher Theatrical Enterprises Goes Into Hands of Receivers; Sued for $19,000

The Chicago Title and Trust company and General Abel Davis were appointed receivers Monday for the Ascher Theatrical Enterprises of Chicago. The company owns, operates and leases out 13 theatres and the Merrill building in Milwaukee.

The suit was brought against the firm by Miss R. I. Davis, whose attorneys told the court she owned $19,000 worth of stock in the corporation. According to her counsel, the company owes $3,500,000. They set forth that while the assets of the company are in excess of these liabilities the company does not possess cash to pay debts due. The firm, through its attorneys, filed an answer in which they agreed to the appointment of the receiver.

Endorsement of a Great Enterprise

This, the second issue of the consolidated publication, prints many additional expressions of congratulations on the initiative of those who made possible this outstanding progressive step in motion picture trade journalism. These expressions recognize the merger of "Exhibitors Herald" and "Moving Picture World" as the most significant event in the history of the business press of this industry, which is certain to have a salutary effect on the other branches of the trade. Mark-Strand Theatre Holds World Premiere of Chaplin's "Circus"

New York's First Nighters Roar at Charlie's New Bag of Tricks

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—When the clock struck twelve Friday night, Broadway worked itself into a fine pitch of excitement. The lobby of the Strand theatre was clogged. The street was blocked. Motors were parked three deep. Everybody stood around and gaped. It seemed the thing to do, for Charlie Chaplin's new picture, "The Circus," was having one of those things called a world premiere.

Nearly all the people who go places and do things went to the Strand to see the great comedian in his new picture. New York has been privately excited about "The Circus" ever since it was started, so many years ago it must have been about the time of the gold rush, and there was a turnout that would have warmed Chaplin's heart.

Chaplin Sends Regards

Half an hour after midnight, when the show was advertised to begin, a raucous voice on a loud-speaker announced that

"The Circus" Breaks All House Records at Strand

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus" is credited with breaking all weekend house records for the Mark-Strand where it is having its world premiere. The total receipts for the weekend, including the Friday midnight opening show, nine shows Saturday and nine Sunday, amounted to $36,735, and 43,428 people saw the picture.

Chaplin was unable to be present but sent his regards. This was a terrific disappointment to those fans who saw "The Gold Rush" open in a midnight performance at The Strand some summers ago and then had the added pleasure of chasing Mr. Chaplin and his motor up the street.

The picture was framed neatly. It was preceded only by an overture, during which everybody jabbered excitedly, and a prologue which brought into view some amazing and quite fascinating stage animals made, according to the program, by Messmore and Damon. Then "The Circus" and Charlot.

Chaplin comes into the picture virtually at the start, a hungry, jobless, baggy tramp. The mere foreshadowing of his arrival on the scene, looking things over and swinging his cane, sent his New York audience into roars of excited laughter, to say nothing of long applause.

Charlie's Glorious Comedy Seen

Some of Chaplin's most glorious comedy appears in "The Circus." His adventures with a second-rate carnival, which he finds blundering through the sticks, are shot with laughter. He tries out with Wilhelm Tell, tames a lion, helps a magician, becomes a tight-rope walker. He is Chaplin, with a new bag of ideas. Merna Kennedy has the feminine lead.

The more critical in the audience were high in praise of "The Circus," crediting it with more laughs than any of his old pictures, but adding nevertheless that there'll never be another picture like "The Pilgrim," or "A Dog's Life," or "Shoulder Arms," or for that matter any other Chaplin picture you can think of.

Chaplin Film Makes World Bow

"THE CIRCUS"
Charles Chaplin's only picture in over two years, had its world premiere at the Mark Strand theatre, new York, last Friday night. It was received as anticipated, a discriminating body of spectators confirming the United Artists star's reputation as a comedian of rare genius.
The abundance of the tragi-comic situations in circus life proved just the thing for this artist's unique technique. Chaplin is shown here in his latest interpretation, below with his feminine lead, Merna Kennedy.

Exhibitors Careful in Buying Film

Paramount Opening in Paris Begins Era of American Houses

"The opening of the 'Paramount' (a new American theatre in Paris) marks the beginning of a new era in the methodical colonization of our screens by opulent America," says a writer in the French daily newspaper, Le Temps.

"Americans, let us be just to them, do not act hypocritically. They don't try to work their way in sneakingly, by flattering our tastes or our prejudices; they firmly impose their own. They do not even consider French mentality and are satisfied to apply systematically to our compatriots the industrial and commercial methods which have proven successful in their country. They found in France a field well prepared, thanks to the increasing Americanization of our screens. Our exhibitors who are complaining of being strangled, make a mistake by shouting too loudly; they have been the quartermasters of the invader.

"But what is the use of complaining? The harm is done. Approximately 50 films are produced annually in France, clearly insufficient to supply the needs of our cinemas. If these 50 films were chefs-d'oeuvre, with the marks of genius of our race, they would constitute in spite of everything, the taste of an elite, which would, little by little, drive out the Americanization of our studios and displace American productions, even in Yankee cinemas. But it is not the case, as you know."

Alpha Fowler Shifts to Universal Atlanta Chain

ATLANTA, Jan. 10.—Alpha Fowler, one of the best known theatre executives in Atlanta, has severed his connection with Community Theatres Consolidated, in which Arthur Lucas and William K. Jenkins are the leading factors, to become general manager of Naborhood Theatres Corporation, the Atlanta subsidiary of Universal theatres, in which Oscar S. Oldknow is financially interested.

The holdings of Naborhood Theatres Corporation include the Ponce de Leon, Madison, Fairfax and Empire, the latter being erected. It will be the largest community theatre in the city, with a seating capacity of 1,000.

Mr. Fowler has been active in theatre administration for many years and is a member of the Georgia Legislature from Douglas county.

Injunction Against Title "Her Wild Oat" Refused

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Use of "Her Wild Oat" as the title of the First National picture starring Colleen Moore, was upheld by Judge Goddard of the United States District Court last Friday, when he dismissed a request for an injunction restraining First National from the use of that title made by Samuel Cummings and Public Welfare Pictures Corporation.

In denying the motion, Judge Goddard said that in his opinion the title "Her Wild Oat" in no way conflicts with that of the plaintiffs, whose picture "Some Wild Oats," released in 1920, is nominally of an educational character, designed for special audiences interested in hygienic education.

Won't Take Chances Now, Say Kansas City Leaders

Increased Discrimination in Picking Programs Shows Stabilizing of Industry, Biechele Declares

(Are exhibitors more discriminating in buying film than they were, say, two years ago? Exchange managers and theatre owners throughout the country are being interviewed in an exclusive series of articles by correspondents of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World. Following is the first of the series.)

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 10.—Exhibitors in the Kansas City territory without a doubt are exercising more caution and discrimination in buying films than was in evidence two years ago in that market.

Unwilling to Take a Chance

"Not long ago the average exhibitor was content to go into an exchange and buy a picture which looked as though it had good exploitation possibilities and drawing power," said A. M. Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas City and now identified with Capitol Enterprises in Kansas City, as well as being manager of the Gillis theatre.

"Today, however, a vast difference prevails. Most exhibitors want a picture which has proved its box office value. They are unwilling to take a chance. Of course I am referring to suburban theatres in this instance. They want pictures which have established dollar marks in the large first run houses. On the other hand, the first run exhibitor looks over a film pretty much as an expert stockman would a racehorse. He, too, is unwilling to take any chances."

Film Must Prove Worth

"What has that picture done in Kansas City?" is the first question most exhibitors in the territory usually ask me," said a veteran representative of a large exchange. "They ask me what it has done, but they usually know before I answer them. I may have some really good pictures which have not played in the larger houses of Kansas City yet, but the small town or suburban theatre owner cannot be convinced they are good until the pictures have proved their worth.

"There was a time not long ago when the average exhibitor would readily take a chance in exploiting a picture which had not had a big first run record, but conditions have changed. Competition has become too tense. No theatre can afford to take a chance even for two nights on a picture of unknown quality. At least, that is the way they look at it."

"Exhibitors have been educated to a point where there is far less overbuying than there formerly was," R. R. Biechele, president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, said. "Most theatre owners today have a pretty definite plan on their schedules and buy accordingly. They have learned what an exhibitor who overbuys must go through and they desire to avoid such situations.

"The exchanges, on the other hand, are co-operating. They do not desire to oversell a theatre owner. It means bad business for both parties concerned and is no credit to either. Theatre owners not only are showing more discrimination in the type of pictures they buy for their respective audiences, but also are looking mightily sharply to the quantity of pictures they contract for. To me it is one of the most promising indications I have observed in the industry in several years. It means that the business is becoming more stabilized—and that means everything."

$6,500 Fire Destroys Rose at Anacortes, Wash.

ANACORTES, WASH., Jan. 10.—Fire, which started beneath the stage, gutted the Rose theatre here recently, causing an estimated damage of $6,500. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

Police Kill Two Bandits After Tip by "Woman Scorned;" Others Steal $1,100

Two Chicago bandits were shot to death Sunday night, and $1,100 and jewelry stolen in Winnipeg last week, in two sensational attacks on proprietors of motion picture theatres.

E. F. Hulquist, owner of the Rosette, was the intended victim of the Chicago holdup while on his way to his suburban home with $600 in receipts from Sunday performances. A jilted sweetheart of one of the three bandits had informed the police and Detective Sergeant Barry and his men were concealed in the railroad station when two of the bandits entered to wait for Hulquist. As Hulquist was given the order "Hands up!" Barry and his aids sprang forward. With Hulquist helplessly shielding most of one bandit, Barry shot at the narrow exposed portion with a shot gun, a dozen slugs entering the bandit's heart. The other bandit started up a stairway, firing his revolver at Barry, but the detective killed him with a single shot. A third bandit, in a waiting automobile, escaped after crashing into a light post.

In Winnipeg, George F. Law, manager of Universal's Lyceum, was bound and gagged in his office during a performance by two armed men, who obtained $1,000 from the safe, $100 from Law and the latter's jewelry, escaping after pursuit by armed theatre employes. G. Foster, assistant manager, was backed against the wall when he innocently entered during the robbery.

Sternberg Wins Director's Prize; Badger Second, Stiller Third

"Underworld" Clinches $10,000 Award and Gold Medal for Maker in Competition Over Best Pictures Shown at Paramount

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—"Underworld," directed by Josef von Sternberg, is the best picture shown at the Paramount theatre in the past year, and Sternberg is richer by a check for $10,000 and a medal stamped in solid gold. The decision in the Paramount Theatre Medal of Honor Competition was made by the selecting company consisting of Jesse L. Lasky, first vicepresident of Paramount, Sidney R. Kent, general manager, and Sam Katz, president of Publix.

CLARENCE BADGER won the second prize—$5,000—for direction of Clara Bow in "It." Third prize—$2,500—went to Mauritz Stiller, who made "Hotel Imperial," starring Pola Negri. The competition for 1927 was announced first in November, 1926, by Lasky and the awards are based on quality of production, cost and directional excellence. The aim is to stimulate ability among directors of other than special productions.

"Underworld" has as its principal players George Bancroft, Evelyn Brent, Fred Kohler and Clive Brook. The picture won stardom for Bancroft. Van Sternberg is the man who created "The Salvation Hunters." He was born in Vienna. His work in "Underworld" won for him the assignment to direct Emil Jannings in "The Last Command."

"It," with Clara Bow as the star, has Antonio Moreno as the lead. Clarence Badger did his first motion picture work in 1915, with the Mack Sennett studios. He is now engaged in filming Miss Bow's next Paramount picture, "Red Hair."

"Hotel Imperial" is a World War romance.

Josef von Sternberg

Mauritz Stiller

Mauritz Stiller was famous in Europe as a director before he came to the United States for his American debut with that production.

Ned Marin Named Head Of First National Studio Unit; Leaves for Coast

Ned Marin, who for nearly a year has been assistant to Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager of First National, has left for the West Coast studios to be manager of a production unit. The promotion is due to the exceptional aptitude he has shown for meeting production problems, according to Mr. Rowland in announcing the assignment at a farewell luncheon in Mr. Marin's honor at the Hotel Roosevelt.

Marin became associated with First National Pictures more than two years ago, when he was appointed sales manager in charge of the Western division. He has spent a large part of his time at the West Coast Studios in active touch with production.

Others at the luncheon were Clifford B. Hawley, president, Ned Depinet, Samuel Spring, Tom Spry and others of his associates in the New York office, while also present were A. W. Smith, Jr., W. E. Callaway, H. W. Adams, Jerome Beatty, C. F. Chandler, William P. Mullen, Mrs. Florence Strauss, Miss Julie Pocock, H. A. Bandy, Ralph W. Brown, S. Charles Einfeld, Walter Eberhardt, J. Loeb, A. Barlow, Walter Lindlar, Charles Kemke, Charles Baily, Joe Kelly, S. Shernow, C. C. Danehy, Lynde Denig, James Cuniff, and Jules Levy.

"Patent Leather Kid" Brings Fight for Seats

TOLEDO, Jan. 10.—Patrons at the Pantheon, the first regular motion picture house to show "The Patent Leather Kid," fought to get inside the theatre and when they were inside, they fought for seats, during the running of the picture at which time the house did record business, according to announcement from John F. Kumler, manager.

10 Patrons Injured When Plaster Falls; Prompt Action Saves 2,000 From Panic

BROOKLYN, Jan. 10.—Falling plaster injured ten persons of an audience of 2,000 in the Kingsway theatre, combination house, here last Thursday evening, and a panic was averted only by the prompt action of the management in turning on the lights and by a speech by fireman Peter Reynolds, who shouted from the stage that there was no danger. The piece of plaster, about five feet in diameter, fell near the left side of the main floor. Several cried their fear that the building was collapsing.

Mrs. Sadie Staub received a fractured hip, the only severe injury. Seven of the ten were able to see the remainder of the performance after treatment by ambulance surgeons. A man was injured when in trying to run out over the top of the seats he wedged a leg between the seat and back of a chair. Firemen released him with screwdrivers.

Beaucoup Punch Wanted, He Quits ze Film; Sued

PARIS, Jan. 10.—Frank Pollack, formerly a mere star actor at the Comedie Francaise, was flattered when a big French motion picture company wanted him to act in a film. He was to appear in a prize fight scene. Frank did not know that his opponent was a former heavyweight champion. This fact was disclosed soon after he recovered from a knockout punch. Then Frank refused to continue in the picture, and now the producer is suing him. Frank says his face was ruined. The court asks for time to consider the case.

Will Issue Handbook on Foreign Arbitration Law

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—Publication is announced by the American Arbitration Association of a new international handbook on commercial arbitration by the International Chamber of Commerce, in honor of the late Anson W. Burchard, first president of the arbitration association.

The commercial arbitration procedure for each country will be described first in separate pamphlet form, in order to be readily available to business men engaged in foreign trade. The first instalment of the handbook describing "Commercial Arbitration Under Swiss Law," has just been received by the association. When the brochures for all countries are issued they will be combined and published in bound volume form as a complete manual on the commercial arbitration laws of the world. The completed volume, as well as the separate pamphlets, will be published in English, French and German.

Bill to End Censorship to Follow Smith's Plea

ALBANY, Jan. 10.—Motion picture censorship repeal will again become one of the big issues before the New York State legislature, which convened last week. A bill will be introduced at once, probably by Attorney Louis Cucillier of New York City, a member of the lower house, calling for the repeal of the censorship law July 1. The bill will be a Democratic measure, at least in the lower house, although it is understood that efforts will be made to have a Republican senator introduce the bill in the upper house, as this would insure support from both Republicans and Democrats and there would be no splitting along party lines.

Butterfield Manager Has Long Experience

ADRIAN, Mich., Jan. 10.—Ellsworth Hamer, who succeeds Kenneth Tallmadge as manager of the Butterfield theatre properties here, has been engaged in the theatre business for more than 20 years and has had considerable experience before the footlights as well as behind the manager's desk.

Higher B. O. Net Up to Producer

Must Have Better Films, Say N. Y. State Showmen

Many Will Book Only Best Pictures During Summer—Others to Pay More Attention to the Comedies

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

ALBANY, Jan. 10.—The whole solution, or at least 90 per cent of it, of ways and means that can be adopted to increase theatre receipts during 1928, lies in the hands of the producers of the pictures that will be shown, if one is to judge from remarks of exhibitors of Albany and Troy. And these exhibitors were not backward in discussing the proposition, keen and alert for any suggestions that might come through EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD or other channels that might add a dollar to their box office returns.

Are Many Tiring of Pictures?

It is a subject that stands pre-eminent today in these two cities, just as it does in every other city and village where a motion picture theatre is located. Some exhibitors in Albany and Troy are fairly frank in admitting that they have come to the opinion that a whole lot of people these days are rather tiring of pictures and do not show the same zest and enthusiasm in seeking out this form of entertainment as they did a couple of years ago.

What can I do to increase my receipts in 1928? That's the question these exhibitors would like to have answered, realizing, as they do, that overhead has gone sky high in many instances and that they have been forced to pay more and more for the pictures they are showing.

C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, and one of the foremost exhibitors in this part of New York state, declared that the answer rested almost entirely in the hands of the producers and that such answer must be in the way of pictures that provide greater entertainment than many of those that have been shown during the year just closed. And right here it must be said that C. H. Buckley is not afraid to use advertising in the newspapers and elsewhere and that he has maintained an unflinching policy of a 25-cent admission no matter how costly the picture he has played.

Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Stanley houses in Albany and Troy, a total of seven, says the past year has been a good one from a business standpoint and that he intends to keep on following the same policy, the showing of the best pictures obtainable, good music, courtesy and service for the patrons. But Hill goes a bit further for 1928 and admits that later on he may add presentation acts, even though these do cost a pretty penny, as he realizes that last year such acts drew packed houses to the Mark Strand in Albany.

Wants Diversified Bill

Joe Saperstein, manager of Harmanus Bleeker Hall in Albany, is a firm believer in a diversified bill and will search far and wide during 1928 for amateur acts, for dance fantasies and similar forms of entertainment that will be coupled with his picture programs. Harry Hellman, owner of the Paramount and Royal theatres in Albany, is planning to give more entertainment for the admission price charged. This same procedure will be followed by Jake Rosenthal, of the Rose in Troy, despite the fact that seemingly he reached the limit a week or so ago, when, in addition to his picture program, he provided no less than ten amateur acts, and not content with this, threw in three or four door prizes.

Incidentally, it would not be such a bad procedure if more theatre owners spent a bit of money and provided better ventilation for their houses.

Other exhibitors said they intend to give more thought and care to the booking of their short comedies, which go a considerable way in providing entertainment and so often of late have left the patron rather disgusted and disgruntled, because of their almost utter lack of entertainment.

Book Best Films for Summer

And now here's a thought that has come from several exhibitors. That is that during 1928 they will use the best pictures obtainable throughout the summer. It worked out excellently in 1927, bringing thousands of dollars to theatres, whose owners formerly threw up their hands in April or May and cried out that there was no earthly reason why they should spend perfectly good money for high class pictures to be shown during the summer when people were out of town, or enjoying automobiles, or inclined to remain on their own front porches. But one or two of the exhibitors in these two cities are gamblers enough to take a chance, and lo and behold the people flocked to these theatres in a way that made many other exhibitors rub their eyes in sheer wonderment and vow to do likewise in mid-1928.

Exhibitors are awaiting with interest the first production of "Paramount's glorious young lovers," the new starring team of Fay Wray and Gary Cooper. "The Legion of the Condemned," their first picture, now is being completed. Miss Wray was "discovered" by Erich von Stroheim. Cooper went to Hollywood two years ago as a commercial artist.

Contingent Laws May Make or Break Films Says French Writer

"The question of the 'contingent' continues to arouse arguments in motion picture circles," says an article in Le Temps, a Parisian newspaper.

"To produce and release a 'home production' is represented as a punishment, a penalization and a sacrifice. American films only can be used to make up profitable programs, not intellectual, but quite sufficient for the masses. There lies the whole problem and all the laws of the world cannot change it. . . .

"If the security which our producers expect from it (a contingent law) leads them to fall asleep on account of their success, mathematically certain, this law will have delivered the death blow to an industry already in agony. You can't write the history of an art with decrees and customs regulations. If our 'protectionists' don't understand it and curl up lazily behind a defensive wall which they have built up, they will never wake up."

Prologue to "King of Kings" Exonerates Jews, Announces B'nai B'rith President

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—As a result of protests about the present version of "King of Kings," Cecil B. DeMille, the producer, will add a special prologue before the picture is given any more road showings which places the entire blame for the crucifixion on Caiaphas, the high priest, "and other hirelings of the Roman empire."

This is announced by Alfred M. Cohen of Cincinnati, international president of the independent order of B'nai B'rith, the organization which led in denouncing the film as "unfair to Jews" and "an instigator of prejudice."

Forget the Clock, Says Sewnig, Exponent of 19-Hour Day

Supervisor of All Universal Theatres Operating Out of Milwaukee Ran 386-Seat House Only Seven Years Ago

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 10.—Here is a record for some of the young bloods of theatre management to aim at. Seven years ago operating a 386 seat house, and today supervisor of a chain whose combined seating capacity is 15,000, with an expected increased of 5,000 within the next three months. Louis G. Sewnig, who holds this record, is only 45 and is supervisor of all Universal theatres operating out of the Milwaukee office.

SEVEN years is a rather short time in which to have acquired such a position and so Sewnig was asked for some tips for the younger fellows in the business. Here is Sewnig's hunch: "Be on the job at all times, and don't be afraid to put in extra time. Never look at the clock. See that the work which you have set for that particular day is all cleaned up at night." Sewnig adds that his wife has been responsible to a great degree for his success, but more of this later.

Louis G. Sewnig

It was in 1920 that Sewnig operated the Crown theatre at Calumet, Mich. This was a 386 seat house, and he engaged in other business besides managing the theatre. He figured out that theatre consolidation would be the trend. So in May, 1920, Sewnig sold the Crown and came to Milwaukee as manager of the Murray, then under the direction of Silliman, who operated four other neighborhood houses in Milwaukee. This was a 740 seat house and besides managing it he handled film for the other four houses, and helped in the office at bookkeeping work.

He managed the Jackson and Juneau theatres, both operated by Silliman, and then the Riviera was turned over to him. This house had fallen down somewhat in its receipts, but the first year under Sewnig's management there was an increase of 35 per cent, and 50 per cent the second year. How was this accomplished? The manager must make his personality felt by the community, Sewnig says. It means meeting people and getting acquainted with business men and finding out what type of pictures they like.

Mrs. Sewnig Adds Personality

And here is where Mrs. Sewnig comes in. There may be many a theatre man who thinks that a woman, especially when that woman happens to be his wife, is rather an unnecessary commodity about a theatre. Sewnig does not think so. They have no children and every night when Sewnig went to the theatre, Mrs. Sewnig went along. She was especially kind to the children and they came to know here as a second mother. Parents sent their children to the theatre because they knew they were being well taken care of, and Mrs. Sewnig's warm personality added a host of friends.

Sewnig during this time did not hesitate to work 19 and 20 hours a day and he is still doing it. Today he is regarded as a father by the younger managers on the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit. He constantly is visiting their houses and giving them expert advice where needed. In September, 1926, Universal took over Silliman's chain of ten houses and Sewnig managed the Riviera until May 1, 1927, when in addition he was named assistant general manager of the circuit. On August 28, 1927, Sewnig was named supervisor of theatres and Robert L. Gross was named manager of the Riviera. Gross is a protege of Sewnig and the theatre remains one of the best paying houses on the circuit.

Says Big Houses Care for Small

When Sewnig entered the industry few people though the business would reach its present scope. In those days, a person rented an old store, took out the front, put in chairs, and perhaps ran a small balcony around the top, and he had a show-house. "And the party would have to make a deposit when he took out the front of the store," he said, "so that the owner would be sure it was replaced when he left."

Sewnig says the large theatres take care of the smaller ones.

Capacity Per Capita Held Double New York City's

Total of 87 Motion Picture Houses Can Seat 90,737, While Three Combination Houses Add 8,264 More

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—“St. Louis was making motion pictures when Hollywood was a vacant lot!” This was a favorite expression of the late Eddie Dustin, one of the pioneers of production, distribution and exhibition in the Middlewest. And while this city no longer holds a dominant position in the production of film thrillers it maintains a commanding place in the exhibition of the cinema, and today supports probably more motion picture theatre seats in proportion to population than any other large city in America—almost twice as many seats per capital as New York City.

97 Picture Theatres, 90,373 Seats

Today there are operating in St. Louis 97 motion picture houses with a total capacity of 90,373 seats, while three vaudeville houses with 8,264 seats also show feature motion pictures. In St. Louis County, in Universal City, Maplewood, Wellston, Webster, Kirkwood and Florissant there are eleven picture theatres with a total of 10,450 seats.

During the summer St. Louis supports 40 airdomes with a total of 52,527 seats, while there are three airdomes in St. Louis county with 3,500 seats.

There are at present 16 motion picture houses closed, with a total of 13,989 seats, while within recent years nine houses with 5,013 seats and 11 airdomes seating 10,843 have been closed permanently.

Exhibition here has undergone a vast transformation in the 21 years since 1906, when John Karzin opened the World's Dream theatre at 1314 Market street, the first house devoted exclusively to motion pictures. Prior to that time pictures had been shown in conjunction with penny arcades and shooting galleries, while the old Columbia at Sixth and St. Charles streets had included a reel or so of scenics.

About the time Karzin opened the World's Dream, the Dreamland theatre was started on South Broadway on the site of the present Family theatre. During the World's Fair in 1904 motion pictures were shown by the Westinghouse Electric Company. The same year, French pictures were displayed at Delmar Garden on Delmar boulevard and the Kirkwood-Ferguson street car tracks.

Bed Sheet Was Screen

The World's Fair year a man named Goldgrabber opened a penny arcade and picture house on Franklin avenue. He had 94 camp chairs, a large bed sheet for a screen, and paid Harry Miller, his operator, $25 a week for his services and the use of one of the original Edison picture projectors. Later Miller opened a penny arcade and picture show at 1528 Market street, known as Miller Brothers' Nickel Odeon. It had 120 seats and patrons were admitted through a single store door. It even had some real electric lights in front. Karzin at that time was operating a restaurant next door and when Harry Miller sought to expand via Karzin's restaurant, he sold Karzin a half interest in the theatre and arcade for $750.

Miller was a circus man and in the spring he left Karzin to run a show. John did all the work and Harry got half the profits. This led to a disagreement and the birth of St. Louis' first exclusive picture house.

World's Dream Opened in 1906

The World's Dream blazed forth Oct. 17, 1906. It had 140 folding chairs and standing room for 200 additional. Karzin rented his film in Chicago for $25 a week and occasionally paid $35 for a headliner. Today the big first run houses here pay $5,000 to $6,000 a week for some pictures.

Karzin's first operator was paid $12 a week, while his “barker” was given $15 a week. Later a piano player or a mechanical piano provided music and next the illustrated singing of cigaret tenors and ambitious sopranos was featured.

Ten Shows Finally Barred

Following closely came the tent shows. Karzin, Mike Nash, Harry Koplar, William Goldman, Joe Mogler and Fred Wehrenberg were the pioneers. Nash had opened an odeon at Sixteenth and Franklin avenue soon after the World's Dream was started. These tent shows seated up to 3,000 and were heated by large cannon coal stoves. Boards were laid in the aisles to keep the patrons' feet dry until they reached their

Kansas City Firm Acquires Half Interest in 24 Universal Houses for $1,000,000

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 10.—A $1,000,000 deal, in which the Midland Theatre and Realty company of Kansas City acquired one-half interest in 24 theatres in Missouri and Kansas from the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., was completed here last week. The Midland company is interested in the Loew's Midland theatre, Kansas City's $4,000,000 house.

The 24 theatres, five of which are in Kansas City, are to go immediately under the Midland management. According to M. B. Shanberg, managing director of Loew's Midland, the theatres will be operated from Kansas City in conjunction with the Midland's present circuit of theatres. Universal desired Midland management, which would afford local management of the theatres involved, said Shanberg.

It's a Paradise for the House Representative Who "Plays the Game" and Observes Rules of Southern Hospitality

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 10.—"A Press Representative's Paradise"—This might be the expression of anyone new to the ways of the South upon investigating the condition existing between Southern papers and theatrical advertising men—but there is a reason for everything, and the reason for the liberality of Southern papers in cooperating with theatres is easily explained.

IN three cities of Texas, with the right kind of approach, the press representative can get almost anything within reason that he asks for, and the newspaper seems to feel honored that it is being taken into confidence—but the press representative is the thing. He must observe all the rules of Southern hospitality. He must be, above all, courteous, without a trace of ego, bluster, or he will suffer the consequences. He must be sociable—willing to fraternize with the boys on the paper, and he must back up what he says with proof—or look out the next time he tries to pull a stunt!

The three cities with newspapers that are especially willing to work for the good of the theatre with "free space" are Dallas, Houston, and San Antonio. Press representatives in these cities, if they are real men, not afraid to work, and openhanded at all times, need not worry about the co-operation from the local papers—they will get it.

Specific incidents of remarkable co-operation might be cited to show that Texas is an open field for newspaper exploitation. In one instance, the San Antonio Light co-operated with the Texas theatre there in putting over the "Young America" Opportunity contest to such an extent that the popular verdict was that the publicity derived by the Texas from this national stunt was greater than that obtained by any other theatre on the entire Publix circuit.

Five Months of Exploitation

Double trucks, half page layouts, myriads of cuts and stories, and special features were run in the paper, starting three weeks in advance of the contest, until the stage show had played at the Texas, almost five months later. During the time that the company was on the road, the Light published a story each week on the incidents of interest that befell Miss San Antonio, keeping the Texas in the limelight at all times.

And at the present writing, the "Light" is co-operating with the Majestic and Texas theatres in San Antonio, in putting on a child comic characterization contest, to select the San Antonio child who can imitate best one of the "Light's" comic characters. Four weeks of big publicity stories were given the contest in advance, and the contest proper will run for two weeks, awarding the two winners four weeks on Interstate and Publix circuits in Texas.

Space is cheap in the South—the newspapers necessarily must make their rates low—and they understand that the theatres could get the same results, by agreement with each other—if they all used small spaces—hence the hearty co-operation in return for ample space buying.

The Houston Chronicle, Press and Post Dispatch stand almost on a par when it comes to working with the theatres in that city. A daily column for theatrical news is carried by each paper, and any special stunt that warrants it readily crashes a good story and cut. Bud Burmaster, publicity director for Publix in Houston, and other press agents there, find the papers ready to co-operate with them in contests, stunts, and exploitation campaigns at almost any time.

The News and Express in San Antonio, when a stunt is presented to them, go over its worthiness with the press representative, and if a real good can be derived from it by either the theatre or the paper—it goes. In Dallas, the Morning News, reputed to be the most representative morning paper in the entire South; the Times Herald and the Dallas Dispatch all cooperate to a great extent with the theatres.

Papers Don't Play Favorites

As a general rule, the papers do not play favorites with the theatres. They attempt to hand out a fair dealing to them all, and one instance in San Antonio recently shows the spirit in which the papers and the show-houses work. The Light, which, by the way, originated the comic contest mentioned in the foregoing, wanted a theatre to go in on it. The three leading theatres' press men were notified, and a meeting was held with the editor-in-chief. He explained his proposition, and put it up to the theatres to offer the way to stage the contest. The theatre that offered the best suggestions was to be awarded the right to stage it. The Texas and Majestic entered into such hearty competition that a plan was formulated whereby the contest would be held in both houses. Which shows the fairness and square dealing of the papers in San Antonio.

$200,000 Fire Destroys Theatre Building in Hamilton, O., Following an Explosion

HAMILTON, O., Jan. 10.—Fire, following a terrific explosion, completely destroyed the Jefferson theatre and the office and store building included in the block, last Wednesday, causing a loss of $200,000. The theatre, which was owned by the Jewel Photoplay Company and D. A. Loeb, will be rebuilt, according to John A. Schwalm, president of the former company. Work will be started at once, according to Mr. Schwalm. In the meantime performances will be transferred to the Regent a short distance away and owned by the Jewel company.

The Jefferson, which was named after Joseph Jefferson, the noted actor, was erected in 1903 as a community theatre. Tickets for the premier were sold at $10 each.

Negative Exports Grow To 18,815,776 Feet in October; Value $461,535

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Steadily increasing exports of positive motion pictures are shown by statistics just compiled by the department of commerce showing shipments in October of 18,815,776 feet, valued at $461,535, as compared with 18,152,033 feet, valued at $446,440, in September, and 15,407,639 feet, valued at $452,484, in October, 1926.

October shipments of negatives also showed an increase, being 737,293 feet, valued at $83,277, compared with 718,019 feet, valued at $81,427, in September, and 331,605 feet, valued at $112,607, in the preceding October. Raw stock exports for the month were 4,741,655 feet, valued at $110,510, compared with 4,552,204 feet, valued at $122,681, in September, and 3,703,296 feet, valued at $82,554, in October, 1926.

There were also exports to non-contiguous territories amounting to 1,291,893 feet, valued at $15,354, in October, against 1,798,864 feet, valued at $20,386, in September, and 974,465 feet, valued at $12,573, in October of the preceding year.

Total exports of films were: October, 1927, 25,586,617 feet, valued at $670,676; September, 1927, 25,221,120 feet, valued at $670,934; and October, 1926, 20,417,005 feet, valued at $660,218.

Lankford Bluenose Bill "Un-Christian", Declares Washington Clergyman

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—"If the Lankford blue law bill, pending before Congress, is passed, the church will become a stench in the nostrils of good people, and the citizens of Washington will turn in disgust from the pulpits," Rev. Henry M. Lawson declared in a meeting of the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws here recently.

"Must we have a condition that allows the church people, right or wrong, to dictate to the lawmakers of the nation?" asked Rev. Lawson.

Theatre Bandit Suspects Slug Guards in Jailbreak

Five Chicago bandits en route Monday from a courtroom to their cells fell upon their guards and an elevator operator in an attempt to escape. One guard was slugged with a "billy" made of tin foil and string and the others were held at the point of a toy pistol. The men were captured in the elevator after being threatened with death by several deputy sheriffs who came to the rescue of the guards. All five of the bandits had been arraigned on charges of holding up Jesse V. Hogan, manager of the Stratford theatre in Chicago last April in which the bandits obtained $4,319.

Frivolity commends this night costume of peach chiffon and lace, worn by Barbara Kent, Universal player. The negligee is double and has a border and inserts of lace.

The brutal side of Michael, suddenly disclosed, comes as a bitter surprise to Olna. Estelle Taylor and Antonio Moreno in a scene from their First National picture, "The Whip Woman."

Only a lad of five is Yurka Kuls, but already he's a skilled horseman. Yurka came from Russia with a group of Cossacks for M-G-M's "The Cossacks," John Gilbert vehicle.

Saluting Martha Sleeper as Miss February, to mark next month as the FBO Jubilee celebration in honor of Joseph P. Kennedy's second anniversary as president. From left to right: Harry Cohen, Los Angeles manager; Miss Sleeper, William Le Baron, vicepresident; and Bryant Washburn.

A curious example of what the Evolutionists call atavism—for this ape's a man. He went back to his "ancestral" ways for M-G-M's Karl Dane-George K. Arthur comedy, "Monkey Business." Director Edward Sedgwick holds his right arm, while Supervisor Harry Rapf holds the other.

Back to the days of the memorable "Miracle Man!" Betty Compson and Lon Chaney, who are together again in M-G-M's "The Big City," Chaney's new vehicle. Miss Compson has the feminine lead.

Taking a "truck shot" in the "Sahara" near Guadalupe, Cal. The camera is drawn on a runway, permitting the soldiers to be "shot" without passing out of the picture, as it were. The scene was for Universal's "The Foreign Legion," which co-stars Lewis Stone and Norman Kerry. The director is Edward Sloman, shown wearing a pith helmet.

The warm beauty of Jola Mendez is strikingly displayed in this new portrait. FBO is featuring her in "Chicago After Midnight."

Jack Holt, the urbane ranchman, has signed to make five Columbia pictures next season. His latest Columbia is "The Warning."

As easy to say as to look at is Betty Boyd, whose name urges one at once to prefix a certain adjective (see above)—and to add bathetic, for Educational features her in Mermaid Comedies.

Egad, when it comes to urging folks to murder, Director Fred Niblo is not to be laughed off! And Noah Beery, too, wants to pass the—er—stiletto. "Zounds, she hesitates!" hisses Lon Poff, while Harry Schultz's "Curses!" ascend from the rear. Will Vilma Banky do it? See "Leatherface," a coming United Artists production.

Universal star and breakfast food baron—and a handsome Arabian steed, not to mention a curiously uncomfortable-looking buggy. W. K. Kellogg is shown greeting Laura La Plante at his Pomona estate, after she had taken an old-fashioned, but brief, trip behind a member of his famous stables. Miss La Plante's "Finders Keepers" will be released next month.

Mary Brian, 105 (pounds), commending the Five Step to Anna Magruder, 395, possibly because dancing vitally concerns space as well as time. Both play in Paramount's Field-Conklin comedy, "Two Flaming Youths."

Stardom impends for Farrell MacDonald, announces Fox. His initial picture will follow the completion of "Four Devils" by F. W. Murnau.

A new camera-study of the gifted Marceline Day, M-G-M player. Her latest featured role is in Lon Chaney's "The Big City."

Answering that troublesome question, "Do screen players have brothers and sisters?" Whatever your previous conclusions, above is proof that they do. Next to Mary Astor (left) is Isabel Hope, Gloria's sister; then come the brothers Hughes, Lloyd and Earl; and then Lois Wilson's sister, Constance. All recently gathered for a scene in First National's "Sailors' Wives."

Norma Shearer, M-G-M star, poised in the doorway of her dressing room, which, being new and portable, might be called by one facetious, her latest vehicle. More seriously, her l. v. is "Pullman Partners."

Veterans and Youngsters Sharing Honors as Albany Showmen

It's Hard to Decide Exhibitor's Worth by His Age with Such Cases as "Pop" Linton and Tony Veiller, 23

AL BANY, Jan. 10.—Who makes the better exhibitor, the middleaged or old man with his years of experience in buying and showmanship, or the young man perhaps in his twenties, imbued with the enthusiasm of youth and ever alert for new ideas in showmanship.

THIS is a matter of argument. Naturally the veteran will not concede for a moment that the youngster in the game is the better man. And as for the youngster, even though he may lack the years of experience, his self-confidence and enthusiasm will not permit him to concede for an instant that he is at a disadvantage because of his years.

There are probably two outstanding figures in central New York, when one wishes to make a comparison along these lines. One of these men is that veteran, "Pop" Linton, hale and hearty despite the fact that he is probably close to 70, a man who has built himself a theatre in Utica that stands as a monument to pluck and perseverance. Linton entered the business so many years ago that he hesitates to tell just exactly when he invested his little pile in his first projection machine.

Only two or three years ago Linton built a magnificent theatre in Utica, one which he hoped would represent his life's best efforts. Eleven days later, a fire starting in a neighboring store, worked its way into the theatre and two hours later Linton's house was a mass of smoldering ruins. Tears streamed down his cheeks as he stood on the curb and watched the firemen.

He determined to rebuild. After months of toil, of interviews, and of travel, he managed to get together sufficient in the way of money with which to erect the present Olympic in Utica. Today, "Pop" Linton is the outstanding exhibitor in New York state in point of years, and as for ability along buying lines and in showmanship he has few equals, if any, in New York state.

Tony Veiller Barely 23

One of the youngest exhibitors in the state is Tony Veiller, of the Mark Ritz, in Albany. Barely 23 years of age, Mr. Veiller is handling the theatre like a veteran. Perhaps this is due in a measure to the fact that he comes from parents who have made their name in the show business.

His father is Bayard Veiller, a former newspaperman, author of "The Thirteenth Chair" and "Within the Law," who has written many of the best scenarios, and whose show, "The Trial of Mary Dugan," is today one of the outstanding hits in the legitimate field on Broadway. His mother is a well known actress and, as for Tony, he entered the show business with a newspaper training that has added much to his success.

Tony Veiller is said to be one of the cleverest buyers of pictures in central New York, and his newspaper advertisements are widely copied and contribute much to the patronage of the theatre.

Among the oldtimers, we have such successes as William Smalley, of Cooperstown, N. Y., who was at one time the proprietor of a milk factory but started in the motion picture business as far back as when he was obliged to generate his power through an attachment to an old automobile, as he toured the country. Today Smalley has a chain of fifteen houses, all located in fair sized villages, and as for showmanship, he takes off his hat to no one. The ranks of the oldtimers also include Louis Buettner, of Cohoes; Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, who has made and dropped two or three fortunes in the business but today is on easy street.

Uly S. Hill, now managing director of the Stanley houses in Albany and Troy and at one time advance man over the entire United States, is in his fifties, and holds his position because of the sound judgment that has come to him through his years of experience. When the Strand company, which later on became a part of the Stanley Company of America, opened its first theatre in Albany, it selected Hill as its manager.

It was tough going for many months. But Hill planned a deliberate campaign in his endeavors to get the best people at Albany to attend and become acquainted with the theatre and the entertainment that was being given. It was a long hard fight. For many weeks the theatre lost money. Finally the turning point came, largely through Hill's perseverance and the confidence that had been reposed in him by not only the owners of the theatre but also by the residents of the city.

Perhaps this confidence dates back to the time when Hill was connected with another house, where roadshows were featured. There was one occasion when a mother telephoned Hill asking if the show then holding the boards was all right for her children to see.

"No," replied Hill, "do not bring them."

It so happened that the treasurer of the show company was standing beside him at the moment.

"You're one h— of a manager," remarked the treasurer, visibly nettled at Hill's answer.

Public Confidence First

Hill then explained that he desired the confidence of his friends more than he did any business that might come to him through misrepresenting the show.

And so it goes. The veterans in the business, perhaps not so clever in devising their newspaper advertisements as some of the younger ones, can justly lay claim to being better exhibitors by reason of their experience. The young men unhesitatingly speak for themselves. Take your choice.

Theatre Construction To Total $161,938,000 In 1928, Survey Shows

Expenditures for theatre construction in the United States will reach a total of $161,938,000 during 1928, according to a survey just completed by the ARCHITECTURAL FORUM magazine. A complete story on the forecast with illustrations will be carried in next week's BETTER THEATRES.

10 and 15 Cent Houses in California Wait 90 Days After Downtown Showing

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10.—All 10 and 15 cent admission theatres hereabouts will have to wait 90 days after the downtown run of a picture before they can play it, according to a new ruling of the zoning committee of the M. P. T. O. of Southern California. For theatres charging a general admission of 20 cents it will be held back 30 days after the city opening. The new ruling becomes effective February 1 and new contracts are now being made on this basis.

At a meeting of the Board of Trade of the Film Exchanges, at which Ben Berenstein, president of the M. P. T. O. of Southern California, and J. H. Goldberg, booking manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., were present, resolutions recommending certain modifications in the zoning system were read and adopted last week.

All contracts will hereafter stipulate that they were taken based upon the new zoning and clearance plan of the Film Board of Trade, effective as of January 1, and applicable February 1, 1928. Each branch manager has been given copies of the resolutions.

5 Comedies and 3 Westerns Among 42 Pictures in Work

Murnau Begins on "Four Devils" for Fox Films; Tiffany-Stahl Signs Belle Bennett for Big Role in "Devil's Skipper;"

Leni Film Near Completion

By DOUGLAS HODGES

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—Of the 42 pictures in production in local studios this week five are comedies and three are Westerns.

The comedies are "Speedy," a Harold Lloyd special; "Partners in Crime," a Raymond Hatton-Paramount vehicle; "Chinatown Charley," starring Johnny Hines; "Be Yourself," starring Reginald Denny, and an untitled picture Eddie Cline is making with Louise Fazenda and Charles Murray.

Tom Tyler heads the trio of Westerns with "The Western Star" for F B O, while the others are "Valley Beyond the Law" with Leo Maloney, and "Phantom of the Turf," a Duke Worne production, with Helene Costello and Rex Lease.

Directors to start work during the next few days include Alfred E. Green, director of "Honor Bound," which stars Estelle Taylor. It will be a Fox release.

DeMille Shoots Prevost Film

Cecil B. DeMille began production yesterday on "The Godless Girl" with Marie Prevost in the leading role after DeMille had tested two or three other young women for the part.

F. W. Murnau got under way with "Four Devils" on the Fox lot. It stars Janet Gaynor and Barry Norton.

Tiffany-Stahl Signs Belle Bennett

Tiffany-Stahl began work on a picture this week and one last week. Al Raboch is director of the Dorothy Sebastian picture titled "Their Hour," which started January 3. John Adolfi is director of "The Devil's Skipper" in which appears Belle Bennett. The Tiffany company is obtaining the biggest stars in Hollywood and is believed by inhabitants of the film company to be on the "up and up" so far as prestige goes.

Wid Gunning hopes to complete "Burning Daylight" within a few days. It has been in production since December 12 and is planned as one of First National's most important releases of the year.

A number of other films that are due for the cutting room soon are "So This Is Love" (Columbia), "His Country" (Pathe), "Lady Be Good" (First National), and "The Man Who Laughs." The latter is a Universal picture which has been in the shooting since October 1.

Frank Lloyd Signs to Direct Corinne's First Film for First National

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—Frank Lloyd has been signed by First National to direct a series of pictures first of which will be "The Divine Lady" which will star Corinne Griffith in her first film under her new contract.

Miss Griffith has left United Artists to star in a series of eight pictures for First National. Her latest work is "The Garden of Eden," a half million dollar production completed last month.

Marie Prevost in Lead of De Mille's "The Godless Girl"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—Marie Prevost, star of many spicy comedies, has been assigned to a more dignified field of drama by Cecil B. DeMille, where she will star in "The Godless Girl" for Pathe. It is one of the biggest roles she has ever received and she will have the support of a very strong cast, among which is Lina Basquette.

DeMille will personally direct the picture.

"Loyalty and Optimism Needed, Not 'Knockers'," Thalberg Advises Press

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10.—"What the films need today, more than they ever did, is a spirit of loyalty," said Irving G. Thalberg, M-G-M executive, in a recent interview with Edwin Schallert of the Los Angeles Times.

"Today we are facing an attitude of skepticism. This is very dangerous. . . . It has a tendency to discourage the producer from serious effort, and leads him to resort to that type of 'hokum' which he knows from experience is sure-fire, which doesn't cost him as much, and which brings as a rule, good returns to the box office," concluded Thalberg.

Gotham Units Return to Universal City Lot

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10.—There will be no Klieg lights or traffic jams at the Hollywood road show of "Wings" at the Biltmore theatre January 15.

"There will be none of the customary ballyhoo," says A. Griffith Grey, of the Paramount road show department, "and no invitations will be given to celebrities. The top price will be $2.20."

THE STUDIO PREVIEW

INSPIRATION'S latest picture before its merger with United Artists was "Ramona" which will be released through that distributing company. It is the story from the pen of Helen Hunt Jackson and stars Dolores Del Rio, whose performance in "What Price Glory" and "Resurrection" have already endeared her to American patrons.

There is much to analyze in "Ramona" and much to love of the story. It is an example of the result of a group of expert technicians in the studio. True art is everywhere manifest, no less in the style of parchment titles than in the rhythmic revelation of the plot.

The titles are simple, yet well written and colorful. The beginning of the picture consists of 500 feet of illustrated paragraphs that acquaint us with the setting of the story. In that atmosphere appears Dolores Del Rio and Roland Drew, brother and sister, in the early days of California when Spanish dons graced the ranches where grazed thousands of cattle and sheep.

The first half of the picture is a beautiful love story of Alessandro and Ramona. The last half is a tale of suspense in which the child of Ramona dies, the bandits burn the Indian village, massacre the men, women and children and steal the cattle. The death of Alessandro brings about the climax of the thrilling story and there follows Felipe's search and finding of Ramona and her return to the home of her childhood.

It is a great story well adapted and directed for the screen. Its scenarist and title writer is Finis Fox, its director is Edwin Carewe, both of whom worked with Dolores Del Rio on "Resurrection."

If there is any criticism with the picture it is a minor suggestion as to its warmth. Most of its scenes are luxurious and spectacular. And yet Miss Del Rio's work when her child passes on is so human that the audience waits for more of just such emotion. But there is no desire of its producer to flood the picture with tears although the temptation was probably great.

"Her Wild Oat" is now into the first and second run houses and everybody concedes it is Colleen's best performance and is among the best pieces Micky Neilan ever directed.

First National held a private showing of "The Whip Woman" the other day with a second set of titles that will probably come out. If they come out and good ones are substituted I believe the picture will be improved 100 per cent. There is no doubt as to Estelle Taylor's work being excellent and there is an equal amount of assurance that the director, Joseph C. Boyle, has shot from his cuff most of the way through. His work lacks sincerity and appears to be hastily done.

D. W. Griffith Entrains for U. A. Premiere in East

Gossipers Call "Crimson Flower" Real Griffith Production Following Previews—Lupe Valez Loses Her Discoverer—May Murray Sued

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10.—D. W. Griffith leaves today for New York where he will attend the world premiere of his newest United Artists production, "The Crimson Flower." It opens at the Liberty theatre.

This picture has had three titles up to the moment of going to press. First it was called "Drums of Love," then "The Dance of Life," and now is being shipped East as "The Crimson Flower."

D. W. plans to produce a new version of "The Battle of the Sexes" which he filmed several years ago, with the much discussed companionate marriage twist to it.

It's Sam's Move Again

Gotham Productions, Inc., has moved back to its former home at Universal studios, according to an announcement made by Sam Sax, president. Gotham occupied quarters at Universal City for several years, then moved to the Fine Arts Studio on Sunset Boulevard. When Tiffany-Stahl took over Fine Arts studios Sax rented space at the Tec-Art studios but has occupied the offices but a month.

Mack Sennett studios on Glendale boulevard reopened yesterday after a three weeks' mid-winter vacation. Three companies started shooting this week on next season's product. Building operations are progressing at Studio City, North Hollywood, and Sennett expects to move into his new quarters some time in February.

Lupe Valez's troubles are over for the present at least. A settlement out of court for $50,000 was reached last week in the suit of Frank A. Woodyard against the actress, who appeared opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho." The trial was set for Wednesday, January 4. The actress sought to have her contract with Woodyard rescinded on the ground that she was under 18 years of age when she signed it. Woodyard obtained evidence, however, that she was born October 17, 1908. Woodyard, who discovered her in Mexico, entered into a contract with Miss Valez guaranteeing her $6,000 minimum a year, she to receive 75 per cent of her earnings over that amount. She is said to be receiving $2,500 a week at present.

Culminating a romance which dates back nine years, Raymond Griffith, comedian, and Bertha Mann, actress, were married Sunday. Superior Judge Hanby performed the ceremony. The couple left immediately after the wedding for a honeymoon trip. Griffith gave his age as 32 years and Miss Mann is 31 years old. The couple first met while playing in a company at the Morosco theatre here.

Another wedding which surprised Hollywood was the marriage of Iris Stuart, a Wampas star of 1927, to Bert A. McKinnon, magazine publisher of New York. They were married secretly at Las Vegas, Nev., January 2. The couple are at the Ambassador hotel. Miss Stuart was in films only six months when elected a Wampas star. Ill health prevented her appearing under a Paramount contract and she retired from pictures.

Tay Garnett, who with Garrett, Fort adapted "White Gold" and wrote "Skyscraper," William Boyd's present vehicle for Cecile B. DeMille, has signed a new contract with the Pathe-DeMille studios.

Columbia Gets Compson and Other Stars for Number of New Films

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—Columbia has just signed a number of stars and feature players for roles in new pictures to be made by the company. Betty Compson has been signed to star in a picture to be made from Izola Forrester's short story, "Love of Liane." Roland Drew and Lilyan Tashman have been signed to support Estelle Taylor in "Lady Raffles," which is now in its third week of production.

Shirley Mason and William Collier, Jr., will be co-featured in "So This Is Love," and Frank Cappa has been signed to direct. The picture is to be based on the story by Norman Springer. Gaston Glass and Armand Kaliz support Shirley Mason in "The Wife's Relations," a George B. Seitz production. It is a January release.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 9.—The complete cast for "We Americans" has just been announced by Edward Sloman, Universal director. It includes George Sidney, George Lewis, Albert Gran, Daisy Belmore, Michael Visaroff, Rosita Marstini, Eddie Phillips, Andy Devine and John Boles. The adaptation is by Al Cohn.

Rapf in East on Early "Spring" Vacation Trip

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 9.—Harry Rapf, associate producer at M-G-M, left last week for New York where he will spend three weeks on the first vacation he has taken in two years.

Harry has a good line and you'll recognize it in "The Chaser." His backfield, however, is something of the male order variety. Langdon finished the last scene on the last day of the old year and it goes to First National for distribution at once.

Harry Langdon says "golf is a Scotch game because its a gift." He chases golf balls and whatnot in "The Chaser," a First National film, released next month.

To what depths men may sink, chides Gladys McConnell, Harry Langdon's leading woman in "The Chaser." Helen Hayward, left, has a good role in the film.

"Five future Wampas stars" and Harry Langdon in a scene from "The Chaser" which First National will release.

THE SHORT FEATURE

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald is the Moving Picture World department, "Little Pictures with the Big Punch," which has presented news, reviews and exploitation on short features and serials.

Business Manager

HERBERT S. HANCOCK

BUSINESS manager of Kinograms as well as associate editor of the news-reel distributed by Educational, is now the title of Herbert S. Hancock, by virtue of his appointment by Captain George McL. Baynes, president of Kinograms Publishing Corporation.

European Exhibitors Still Slow to Realize Short Feature's Value

European theatres, with the exception of the better class German houses, have yet to learn the value of the short feature on the program, according to the motion picture section of the Department of Commerce at Washington.

Factors cited by the department are the prevalence of double feature shows and the distributors' consequently feeble attempts to popularize the short product, which brings no profit under the circumstances. Many of the short features are added gratis by the distributors to the program. Another reason is the low comedy type of short feature made overseas.

About 90 per cent of all the short films shown in Europe are of American origin, according to the bulletin.

"What I Did for Short Feature" Is New Service for Exhibitors

How Have You Put Over Your Short Product? Your Fellow Theatre Owner Wants to Know—Write This Department

A new service—"What I Did for the Short Feature"—is the latest departure to be made by this department in the interest of the exhibitor.

Two Parts to Exhibition

There are two definite parts to short feature exhibition—definite in both application and result, and the one is essential to the other. In the motion picture business as in all other businesses—except digging post holes—one gets out of it just what one puts into it, or, in other words, the receipts increase in direct proportion to the increase of energy and effort expended toward making the show a success.

In the next issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD, reports on short features from the "What the Picture Did for Me" department will be repeated in "The Short Feature" department. "What the Picture Did for Me" has proved indispensable to hundreds of exhibitors, as their letters have testified. Transferring reports on short product to this department under a heading such as "What the Short Feature Did for Me" will tie such reports logically into the department.

Must Know What Others Do

What is most important however is this. The exhibitor, in booking his short feature, wants to know how he can best sell the picture to the public. To do that he must have details from his fellow exhibitors explaining how they concentrated their efforts to put over the production.

Parallel to "What the Short Feature Did for Me" will be a column of "What I Did for the Short Feature." The one column will tell an exhibitor what the picture has done for other theatre owners at the cashier's window. The other column will tell the same exhibitor what his colleagues did to help bring in the maximum attendance for the showing of that picture. Thus a complete service will be given, combining the majority decision on the pulling value of a picture with a black-and-white description of how the picture was put over. And each exhibitor will render a two-fold service to the others.

"Filler" Idea Is Passe

There is no assistance to be obtained in this service from the exhibitor who still considers the short feature a filler. Happily, there are few of this species still extant. However, there is an opportunity to help him to see the light, for while there can be no help from him, there can be much help for him. And usually the exhibitor who applies exploitation ideas of another is the successful exhibitor.

Complete cooperation from all you exhibitors is essential to make such a service of the value it should have. All classes of short feature product are eligible for treatment in this service—the comedy, the scenic, the newsreel, the cartoon, the serial, and any other type.

Enlightening Fellow-Exhibitors

From the survey in the field being made by J. C. Jenkins, field representative of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD, all readers of this department know what the majority of exhibitors in the states visited have considered the value of the short feature to the program as far as boosting it in newspaper advertisements is concerned. To the exhibitor who has felt that the short feature in itself has not merited a considerable share of the newspaper space, there is the opportunity presented to his fellow-showman to prove the fact that the short feature is a vital factor in box office returns provided showmanship is applied.

The field is open and there is no handicap system. Address your letters to The Short Feature, EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD, 407 So. Dearborn street, Chicago.

LIVE NEWS FROM COAST TO COAST

Portland

PORTLAND.—Ray A. Grombacher, of Spokane, presented the remodeled Liberty in a gala premiere of Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," recently. . . . Washington Theatre Enterprises has signed a contract with Tiffany Productions, for all third dimension pictures, which will be shown at their new Mayflower theatre in Seattle, scheduled to be opened early in February. . . . The "Seattle," Seattle's new 4,000 seat theatre, located at Ninth Avenue and Pine street, in the new nine story theatre building, will be opened early in February. It is understood to represent a total investment of $3,000,000.

Ottawa

OTTAWA.—James R. Muir, manager of the Capitol, has been promoted to district manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp. . . . Walter P. Wilson, manager of the Capitol, at Edmonton, Alberta, has been appointed manager of the Vancouver, Capitol. . . . Montreal's municipal censor, Martin Singer, inspected almost 100,000 theatrical posters during 1927, and of this number 2,500 were condemned as unfit for public gaze. . . . The civic administration of Montreal received revenue amounting to $814,000 from the civic amusement tax in 1927, this total being an increase of $33,700 over the previous year. . . . In Toronto last year, six suburban theatres were erected at a combined cost of $271,000, exclusive of land purchases. Extensive alterations were made in ten other theatres in Toronto at a cost of $21,325, and one large house was closed. . . . Harold Bishop, assistant manager of the Calgary Capitol, is now manager of the Capitol at Edmonton. . . . Sam Binder, assistant manager of the Empress at Edmonton, has been transferred to the Capitol at Calgary.

Dayton

DAYTON.—Loew's Dayton Theatre Company has been chartered by papers filed with the secretary of state at Columbus, with a capital of 1,000 shares. . . . The Duchess Theatre Inc., with offices at 5718 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000 to acquire either by lease or purchase, and to operate or construct theatres. The incorporators are Joseph Zell, Hyman Mott and Melle Stelle.

Atlanta

ATLANTA.—F. J. Turner, of Charlotte, N. C., general manager of the recently completed reorganization of the Carolina Theatres, Inc., made the announcement Wednesday of a proposed increase of the company's capital from $300,000 to $500,000 at an early date. . . . Ground is being cleared at Lincoln for the construction of a new $100,000 theatre, the next project in the organization program of expansion. . . . Following a cordial house warming presided over by Manager C. B. Ellis on last Saturday night, F B O's Jacksonville, Fla., exchange opened new offices at 1262 West Adams street, in a building especially constructed for them.

Des Moines

DES MOINES.—A temporary injunction was issued in district court at Red Oak, against the city of Villisca, prohibiting interference by city officials with the operation of the motion picture theatre in that place on Sunday. The suit was filed by Dr. F. J. Liken, owner of the theatre. . . . The Villisca fight dates from November, when Brooks Tillworth, operator, was fined for violation of an ordinance which prevents Sunday shows. . . . After Tillworth became tired of the weekly fine, he was succeeded by Dan Bogue, who was fined five times as much, or $25 for operating the house on Sunday. Dr. Liken then retaliated by serving notice on business houses open for sales on Sunday that he would prosecute under the state blue laws. . . . Seven merchants were haled into court. A restaurant keeper was charged with selling a cigar to Dr. Liken. The jury in this case, brought in this remarkable verdict, "Defendant not guilty—smoking is essential."

Kansas City

KANSAS CITY.—For three years George Armstrong, messenger for the Shubert, had been making daily trips to a nearby bank to get change for the box office. While returning with $300 change for the theatre, two bandits held him up and robbed him of the money. . . . Kansas City's new $1,500,000 Uptown theatre, operated by Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises Corp., opened last Friday.

"Evangelism Through the Eye," with the use of both issues of International Newsreel, is the topic of special services by Rev. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church at Washington, which President Coolidge attends. He is shown receiving the first issue under his contract from Nate Sauer, Universal exchange manager.

Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH.—The Gayety theatre, burlesque house, has announced that it will close for the season, on January 14th. . . . Hyman Wheeler, booker, was held up by two armed negroes while walking in the Hill district, and had taken from him $2.00 as well as a Christmas gift from his best girl, a scarf. . . . The following day he fell and sprained his ankle. . . . The right hand and forearm of Joseph Richman, of the Keystone theatre, was badly scalded by escaping steam from the heating plant. . . . Joe won't be able to use his arm for a number of days.

Columbus

COLUMBUS.—The third round in the bout waged by motion picture exhibitors to secure legal authority to exhibit the Tunney-Dempsey fight films in Ohio, was waged in the Ohio Supreme Court, January 5, with no decision as usual. . . . In fact, the court was considerably muddled in the controversy, and it indicated that members might want to view the films in order to gain knowledge of the dispute. . . . The case came up on mandamus proceedings brought by Frank Mantell of Dayton, and the Midwestern Film Exchange of Akron, the latter represented by attorney Stuart R. Bolin. The mandamus seeks to compel John F. Clifton, Ohio film censor, to admit the films to censorship, which he has steadily refused to do.

Albany

ALBANY.—First run theatres in this city are planning to seek protection from subsequent run houses, and will carry their complaint to the Albany Film Board of Trade. . . . Jack Krause, manager for Tiffany, narrowly escaped death in an automobile accident last week. Krause's car skidded, jumped onto the tracks of an electric line, and overturned. . . . John Faust, doorman at the Mark Ritz theatre, will spend the next two years at the Albany County Jail. But it is not as bad as it sounds, for he was appointed last week as jailer by the new sheriff.

San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO.—Publix is making a big scoop in the publicity game by their recent signing of the Berkova Production Company to make a local motion picture in each of the Publix de luxe houses in the Central and South United States. . . . Sunday shows in Temple are being patronized by the majority of Temple inhabitants and business people who have made it clear that they are not in accord with paid advertisements which have been run in the local paper, denouncing the movement as a desecration of Sunday and a flaunting of the laws of God and the State.

Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE.—Eddie Kueppers has been signed as assistant advertising and publicity manager to M. P. Kelly, at Saxe's Wisconsin theatre. . . . The latest result of the bowling tournament among the film exchanges and exhibitors shows the Scenics to be in first place, the Features and Serials tied for second, the Comedies and Newsreels tied for fourth and the Cartoons in fifth place.

BETTER PROJECTION

Projection Is Essential, and "Better Projection Pays"

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Answers Nos. 603 and 604

Bluebook School Questions Nos. 622 and 623

QUESTION NO. 622—If it be found necessary to replace one member of an intermittent movement, would you or would you not replace both members—star and cam?

QUESTION NO. 623—While the replacement of intermittent movement parts should always be done either at the factory or at one of its service stations, still emergencies will arise and the projectionist should know how to replace a star or an intermittent sprocket. Describe the correct method, step by step, of removing an intermittent sprocket from the shaft and replacing it with a new one.

drop across the three rheostats is 60 volts.

"The relative conductances of the three rheostats is stated. Conductance is the inverse of resistance. The voltage drop is in direct proportion to the resistance. Therefore, the voltage drop will be in inverse proportion to the conductance.

"The conductance is given in the ratio of 20 to 30 to 60 or 2 to 3 to 6.

"Since the voltage drop is in inverse proportion it will be in the rate of 1/2 to 1/3 to 1/6 of the total drop of 60 volts.

"Drop across 20 A. rheostat is 1/2 of 60 volts, or 30 volts.

"Drop across 30 A. rheostat is 1/3 of 60 volts, or 20 volts.

"Drop across 60 A. rheostat is 1/6 of 60 volts, or 10 volts.

"Kindly note that calculation of the ohmic resistance of each unit is omitted, as well as any attempt to calculate the resistance of the arc. I have tried to work the problem on the rule that conductance is the inverse of resistance."

However, I also will set before you the reply of Brother Curle, which is essentially the same as that of the others whose names have been given. He says:

"Since the line voltage is 110 volts and the arc voltage is 50, 110—50 or 60 volts must be consumed by the rheostats. The resistance of the 20 ampere rheostat would be $60 \div 20 = 3$ ohms. The resistance of the 30 ampere rheostat would be $60 \div 30 = 2$ ohms, and the resistance of the 60 ampere rheostat is $60 \div 60 = 1$ ohm, 3 plus 2 plus 1 equals 6, the ohmic resistance of the three rheostats connected in series. If 60 volts is to be consumed by the rheostats, the voltage across their terminals must be proportional to their resistance, then the voltage across the terminals of the 20 ampere rheostat would be 3/6 of 60, or 30 volts; the terminal voltage of the 30 ampere rheostat 2/6 of 60, or 20 volts; and the terminal voltage, or the voltage across the terminals of the 60 ampere rheostat, would be 1/6 of 60, or 10 volts."

QUESTION No. 606—Is there any difference between a series multiple and a multiple series connection?

The cuts of Brothers Dudiak and Curle serve to answer this question very well indeed.

QUESTION No. 605—This question was proposed by Brother E. B. Marshall, Vancouver, B. C. It is: "What is the voltage across the terminal of each rheostat in the series connection herewith illustrated, assuming them all to be 110 volt instruments, and the amperage capacity of each, when working alone, to be as indicated?"

There was a varied assortment of replies, numbering, in all, 136. Those entitled to credit are as follows:

Chas. E. Curle, Chattanooga, Tenn., C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Ia., Frank Dudiak, Fairmont, W. Va., John Griffiths, Ansonia, Conn., T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Ala., G. L. Doe, John Doe and "Bill" Doe, Chicago, Ill., Thomas McNamara, Waltham, Mass., W. R. Gwynn, Estes Park, Col., Thos. Lithrom, Trinidad, Col., T. D. Alexander, Decatur, Ill., T. R. Roand and F. T. Bolter, both of St. Louis, Mo., John Christensen, Galveston, Tex., H. L. Baker, Johnstown, Pa., W. C. Burke, Topeka, Kan., W. J. Lathrop and Frank T. Spencer, Little Rock, Ark., A. D. Henley, Seattle, Wash., Thomas Billings, London, England, A. Hancock, Dallas, Texas, F. T. Johnson, Moline, Ill., G. Atkinson, Cleveland, O., Allan Gengenbeck, New Orleans, La., N. R. Quigley, Oklahoma City, Okla., W. Turner, Pontiac, Mich., and D. G. Henderson, Quincy, Ill.

On the whole I think I will publish the answer of Brother Gwynn, because he arrives at the result by what I believe to be the best way. He says:

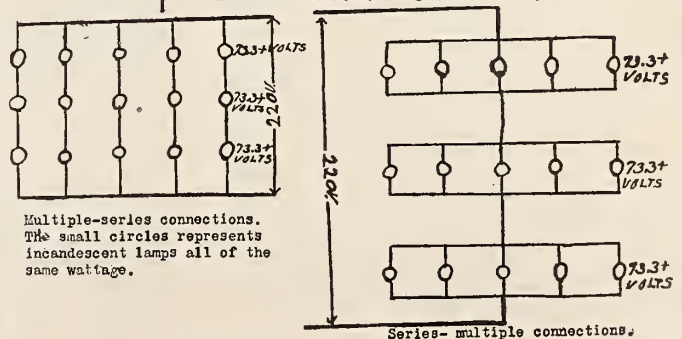

"Assume that a voltmeter actually reads 50 volts across the arc, as stated in the problem. Applying Kirchoff's Law, which states that the voltage drop across a resistance is always equal to the voltage which causes the current to flow through the resistance, the voltage drop across the arc is 50 volts. Subtracting this from the total applied pressure (110 volts), the voltage

Exhibitor Wants Blue Prints

Wildfred D. Jackson, Bala, Muskoka, Ontario, says he is an ex-soldier who helped in the late argument with Germany. He says he is a licensed motion picture projectionist, and has derived great help from the Bluebook of Projection. In fact, he says that being 120 miles from the nearest place where repairs for projectors might be made it has been invaluable to him. He then continues: "What I am now trying to do is build a small theatre of my own. It is to be hollow tile construction, about 250 seating capacity and have my own residence above it. I am wondering if some one who has built a small theatre somewhat along the same lines would not lend a helping hand by loaning me his blueprints or plans. You must see what I think of you, friend Richardson, when I believe you can pull off a stunt like that for me."

I don't think I can, Friend Jackson, for the very simple reason that few small theatres such as you propose to erect have scale plans drawn, or so I believe. You propose what is distinctly a village theatre, and usually when such a theatre is contemplated the one who proposes to build it just makes a few rough drawings, calls in the local carpenter, and without further ado the theatre is built.

However, if anyone does have such plans, won't they please lend the helping hand, as asked, and loan them to Friend Jackson. Just send them to him as per above address. "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" is always ready to do what it can to try to render assistance, but frankly in this case I've my doubts. Hope I am agreeably surprised.

Fanchon & Marco Expanding Units

Latest Music Guide Issued Gets Approval

Borodkin's Music Guide Has 150 Classifications, and 6,000 Published Compositions—Musical Directors and Experts Recommend and Endorse the New System

A complete and authentic guide to motion picture music is now available to every musical director and organist in the motion picture theatre. This new guide which was written and compiled by Maurice Borodkin, one of America's best authority on the subject, is an indexed book practical in every way and entirely devoted to the selection and musical scores for the accompaniment of motion pictures in the theatres.

This guide has taken the author nearly ten years to compile, in which he utilizes over 6,000 numbers from the catalogues of nearly every leading publisher of this country and Europe. These numbers are indexed under 150 different classifications which give different effects, depending upon the scene or atmosphere of the description. One of the important features of this catalogue is a notation on each number which describes the character of each classification which aids in the scoring of the production.

New Guide Is Complete

Mr. Borodkin has been associated with motion picture theatre music for the past fifteen years, of which eight of them he has spent as librarian of the Rialto, Rivoli, and Capitol theatres of New York, in which at that time he was associated with Erno Rapee. For the past five years, Mr. Borodkin has been chief librarian for Balaban and Katz and the Chicago Publix theatres. The system which these houses now have in the way of a complete and up-to-date music library can be credited to this man's creation and expert knowledge of the field.

This book which is issued and published by the author, under his own name, is now on the market and available to every picture theatre and attache of music. A number of the leading theatres in this country are now already using the system and find it very effective.

Chicago's Newest!

ROY DEITRICH, that golden voiced singer, who for the past few years in presentation and musical shows has created a large following for his ballads, made his debut this week as a stageband leader at the Avalon theatre, Chicago's newest and most beautiful deluxe picture house. A royal reception was given to Roy on his opening night, one that will go down in theatrical history for a new comer in the bandshow field.

Parisian Red Heads Girl Band to Record

What is probably the greatest record ever attained by a traveling band is that which is held by the "Parisian Redheads," an all-girl aggregation of musicians with each and every one of them being a red-head. The band which is led by Bobby Grice, it's female Master of Ceremonies and Claudia Peck, the musical director, is the culmination of an idea which Charles E. Green and Ace Berry, a well known showman, had for a long time. Mr. Green, who is both producer and manager of this attraction, reports that they have broken box-office records wherever the band played and is the only girl band accredited to playing two or more weeks in one theatre. Recently the band was contracted to record for the Brunswick records which is another honor that is a privilege to hold as up to date there is no other girl-band in the country that has ever recorded for any major company. One of the novel features about this attraction is the fact that in each town they appear, the theatre through a newspaper tie-up carries on a contest during the period of their engagement in which every contestant of a redhead nature is admitted free at the theatre by presenting a coupon presented by the paper sponsoring the contest.

New Company Formed with West Coast

Fanchon & Marco Will Stage Prologues and Presentations for All West Coast Theatres—Stanley Chain May Be Included Later

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

With the formation of the new Fanchon and Marco production company in Los Angeles, the West Coast will probably become one of the centers of stage presentation for motion picture houses. The new enterprise which was formed last week is a subsidiary of West Coast Theatres, Inc., with an equal amount of shares held by each one. Inasmuch as Los Angeles is really the center of all motion picture production which also has a number of long run deluxe picture houses it is logical to assume that the production of stage prologues should be carried on there.

According to plans now formulating the operation of these new productions will be extended immediately into every theatre on the West Coast chain as well as other circuits affiliated with this organization. All shows including the present Fanchon and Marco unit will have their premier at the Metropolitan theatre, Los Angeles, where Rube Wolf is still creating a huge success as a master of ceremonies. After opening at the above theatre the productions will be augmented or elaborated in some way so that they may fit into the program of the key houses operated by the West Coast circuit, before going on tour.

F. & M. May Book Stanley Chain

If the present plans mature Fanchon and Marco presentations will be shown in all Stanley houses in the East as well as other affiliated circuits. A move to effect this new arrangement is now on and in the course of another week or two the exact plans of this new organization will be made known.

Since stage presentation has become a large factor in picture houses, Fanchon and Marco have been the chief factors on the West Coast in which they have affiliated their efforts exclusively with the West Coast Theatres, Inc. Now that the motion picture producers have realized the value of stage presentations to accompany photoplays a serious move is on to stage prologues for these new motion pictures which will come up to the standard of the film productions but in no way rob the films of any box-office or entertainment value.

If this purported arrangement is effected it will mean that Fanchon and Marco will employ hundreds of artists for the period of one or two years' engagement to tour their theatres exclusively. In addition to this, they will require hundreds of girls for their ballets, and many name bands wherever a stage band policy may be installed. This change and expansion of presentations means work for every class of entertainers from opera singers to dispensers of blues.

Deal Means More Bookings

As stated before in these columns with the recent merger of Public and Loew stage units now touring over each other's theatres, and this new move of Fanchon and Marco, it will now be possible for presentation artists to work consecutively in picture houses from a period of 40 to 170 weeks without any open time. Of course this may mean that they may be expected to negotiate bookings through various offices, and work through affiliated circuits, but it is taken for granted that if a specialty act of any caliber makes good in one theatre or on one circuit, that they will be recommended for the other.

Experts Endorse System

Among the most prominent men in charge of the musical destinies of the deluxe picture theatres of America who highly endorse and recommend the use of this system are as follows: Nathaniel Finston, general musical director, Publix theatres; Louis R. Lipstone, general musical director of Balaban and Katz; H. Leopold Spitalny, musical director of Chicago theatre; Joseph Engelhardt, musical director, McVicker's theatre, and Adolph Dumont, prominent New York musical director.

In the next issue of "Better Theatres" a more complete and illustrated story of the cause and effects of this new system will be published.

Al Short Returns

Al Short, well known musical director now conducting band shows for Publix in Houston, Texas, returns to the Capitol theatre, Chicago, on January 23.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Noting that you are responsible for the song reviews in Exhibitors Herald I am going to ask you for a little information.

This theatre is just starting using the stage band idea with the band on stage and we are anxious of securing the latest hits and would therefore appreciate any information you could give me relative to the various music publishers and their addresses.

Thanking you for compliance with this request, I am—A. B. McCollum, Lorraine theatre, Hoopeston, Ill.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Just a line to let you know how I'm getting along. I am very happy in my new position, the theatre is beautiful, the organ likewise and a prince of a manager in the person of Sidney Dannerberg from New York.

The town has some very pretty spots and I think I'll like it very much.

Ralph Pollack from the Saenger in New Orleans is the band leader here, and he is one regular fellow.

Birmingham audiences have been marvelous to me so far, here's hoping it keeps up, I sure am working hard enough. Am busy night and day, the organ needs a good deal of attention and I have to spend quite a bit of time with that for a while. Drope me a line.—Joe Alexander, Organist, New Alabama theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I am now playing Loew picture houses and have just played Capitol theatre in New York. Will Morris is handling me. Can you possibly send me a copy of Dec. 10th Exhibitors Herald. I would also appreciate if you would rush me my cut and diagram of my "ad." I am having a circular made and need this. I will return same in a few days. Please send me this. Thanks for past favors, you can always reach me through Ez Keough.—Charlie Gregory, Touring Loew's Circuit.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Would you kindly submit your rate's for ads by the inch, and also if there is an additional charge for cuts, etc.—Koehler & Edith, Touring Publix Circuit.

Man Shoots at Couple in Chicago Oriental

Patrons at the Chicago Oriental theatre were thrown into a panic last week when a man opened fire on his wife and his rival in the theatre. Women shrieked and men fled when they saw the gun and heard the woman's cry. The assailant was captured by a policeman in the house.

The Stratford theatre, another Chicago house, was thrown into a similar state of excitement when a man attacked another man alleged to have broken up his home. The man, severely beaten with an iron club, was taken to a hospital and is said to be near death.

Push Canadian Film

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—Canadian International Films, Ltd., with head office at Toronto and studios at Trenton, Ont., is making rapid strides in the production of the all-Canadian picture, "Carry On Sergeant," by Captain Bruce Bairnsfather. The little town of Trenton has become quite a mecca for sightseers.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Avalon

Week Ending January 8

Roy Deitrich, a very popular presentation singer in this town, made his debut this week as stage band leader at this house. Although Roy has only been a leader a short time, he is by far more talented in this direction than Buddy Fisher whom he replaced. The opening show although not of an expensive setting was very pleasing and everything took place in a smooth manner. Clyde Hood the producer should be complimented for the many novel ideas that he injects into his shows. The opening ran as follows:

Opening: band playing behind scrim as the house ballet consisting of 15 girls did a simple routine, later all going into a vocal to the tune of "Who" using special lyrics to introduce the new leader. After which the band struck up a tune of "Blue Heaven" as the same girls made their reappearance on the decorated stairs each holding a large feathered fan and as Roy sang the last few lines of the chorus back-stage, he made his entrance through the back-drop center to a fine reception, as the girls exited on either side.

The next band number was a very clever arrangement of "Moonlit Waters" in which the boys put all they had into their instruments with several of them doing specialties. Deitrich the new leader proved from the beginning that he had good qualities as a conductor and his appearance and personality made an instant hit with this audience.

LaVare Brothers and Pingree were the first specialty artists to start out the program with the boys opening in hokum tuxedos to a few eccentric taps later going into a burlesque Apache routine with one of the boys doing the female. The girl in this instance was only used for a foil. The first part of their routine was for laugh purposes only, and the only outstanding feature was the back-bend on the chair which turned out to be a very difficult hand-balancing feature. They won a very hearty reception.

This was followed by the ballet again dancing a routine to the band's arrangement of "Just Imagine." One noticeable thing about this ballet was that they needed more coaching or lacked the interest to work in line. Probably eight girls given a better routine would have accomplished the same effect.

This was followed by another band arrangement called "Brotherly Love" which turned out to be a very good hot tune and which again proved the capabilities of these men as musicians, in which a number of specialties were intermingled.

Next Roy introduced a brother and sister act under the name of Jack and May Fay but from all indications the reporter believes that they are a standard team seen in other picture houses before now working under an assumed name. The routine rendered was mostly on the toes and we must say that in this line they are finished artists.

Roy Deitrich next stepped up to the footlights and sang "Baby Feet," in his appealing and well-rounded voice. There is one thing about Roy, his enunciation is perfect and no matter what song he may sing, he puts the character and feeling in both the lyrics and melody. His appreciation was shown by the tremendous applause and an encore which he was compelled to give.

The next artist on the bill was Lamberti, a xylophone artist who manages to mingle good musicianship with clever comedy antics. Lamberti possesses a very smart line of chatter that he disperses throughout his routine of playing which makes him almost as good a comedian as a musician. He played "Stars and Stripes," "Humoresque" and "The Prison Scene from Il Trovatore," syncoating some of the tunes which removed all doubts from the minds of those that were under the impression that he was just a comedian but not a musician. It can be easily said that Lamberti was the hit of the show for he stopped it in two different places and deserved all the applause for he is without a doubt a very clever showman. He should find a great future in this type of work.

Finale: A novel finish with the band playing an arrangement of "Lucky Day" as the house ballet posed on staircase gradually descended each carrying a large horseshoe hoisted up over their heads in arch form as a huge horseshoe appeared in the center background with the title "Hello 1928" as Roy sang the two last lines as the inscription "Good Luck to You" was illuminated on the smaller horseshoes worn by the girls.

Observation: This reporter remembers when Deitrich made his first appearance as a band leader out of town some few weeks ago and must say that with the co-operation of the new management he will in all probability turn out to be a very capable director who should make as large a following in this capacity as he has in the past with his splendid voice.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending January 6

"Musical Minatures" was the overture played by the Metropolitan grand orchestra under the direction of Arthur Geissler. It consisted of popular classics, "Then You'll Remember Me," with tenor solo; "Last Rose of Summer," soprano solo and orchestra; "Hungarian Rhapsody," piano solo; and "Liebestraume," with dancers and grand ensemble.

The Arthur Martel organ concert this time was composed of two "Favoriet Songs of Famous People," and these two included "Dancing Tambourines," and "Dance of the Toys."

Gene Rodemich and the famous stage band presented "Russian Revels," a Jack Partington production. The band boys were in picturesque Russian costumes, and likewise the actors were dressed in the colorful costumes of that country. The scene was supposed to represent a Russian folk festival.

The Berkoff Girls and the Don Vocal Four put on a song and dance to start things off. Then Stella Stepanoff and M. Vodnoy got a good laugh with their funny costumes and "dumb" dancing. The stage band then played a Russian Fantasy which had the familiar tune of "Volga Boatman" running through it, only jazzed this time.

The Ormond Sisters, a very clever and versatile trio, did a dance of the Wooden Soldiers next. Afterwards they danced some fast steps in contrast. We could hardly believe anyone who could be so stiff and wooden-soldier-like would be able to limber up so much.

The Berkoff Girls came on again, this time in a rope dance. Their feats with the jumprope, and their acrobatic stunts got a good hand. "I Love My Volga Boatman" was then played by the band. They had big grotesque masks over their instruments which looked as though they were their own faces, and made a funny appearance.

The versatile Ormond trio came back again for a vocal rendering of "My Blue Heaven," and an encore, "My Baby's in Love with Me." They were in cute farmerette costume.

The Berkoff Sisters with Frieda and Louis Berkoff did some fast acrobatic dancing for three encores, and the Don vocal quartette sang "Rose of the Volga."

Finale was a reappearance of the entire company in singing and dancing feature.

The film was "Beau Sabreur" with Garry Cooper and Evelyn Brent.

Des Moines Capitol

Syncoating with a dash of more subdued music made "Dancing Brides" at the Capitol a popular and enticing bit of entertainment. This is a John Murray Anderson production, in itself, comment enough.

Melva Moore sang "Voices of Spring" charmingly. Jules and Josie Walton did an original bridge and groom number and other eccentric duos with their cleverly trained dancing feet. Two ensemble numbers with the Lenora steppers were commendable.

Milo, the bobo, whistled, chirped and did other interesting and fascinating stunts with his mouth as the instrument. Audiences were insistent in demanding returns and more of them.

Paul Spor, master of ceremonies, gave two specialties for good measure and directed his band through several new and classy musical offerings. Herbert Lee Koch made capital of the New Year spirit by playing an organ solo, "Sing Out the Old, Sing in the New." This was most effective.

Jacques Blumber, lead the orchestra through the Irish music which accompanied, "Rose of Killarney," a film romance in color.

"Her Wild Oat" was the feature.

GALLO SAYS

Something about Everyone

Ge: it's great to know that a large family of more than 17,000... did I say family, why that's an army... and that's just what we have now as loyal readers every week... This amount grew from the recent merger of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World... Well, let's go then boys! Lend me your ears if you're ready for some scandal... The first big news is that Fanchon & Marco, have just formed a new corporation with West Coast Theatres to supply stagershow in all their houses... The next big news is that our friend, Jesse Crawford, is back at the Chicago theatre, Chicago, as guest organist... Henry B. Murtagh, just finished 60 weeks there as featured organist... Mark Fisher had a bad cold last week and was compelled to stay out of the Senate, but this week he returns to the Harding theatre, Chicago... What a welcome he will get... I bet that "Hank" Lustgarten is glad to see him back... Oh, say fellers! Did you know that Al Belasco, who rotates with Mark Fisher was married recently? No, well he was and what a girl he got... Lucky boy... Just got a letter from Joe Alexander, who is now pushing the organ pedals at the new Publix house in Birmingham... Joe says everything's fine and to say Hello to Ramon Berry... Charlie Wilkinson, well known arranger is now doing all the arranging for Publix in Chicago... We understand that David Mendoza is making a big hit over the radio with his Sunday concert from the Capitol theatre, New York... Louis Calabrese and Lenora Cori are among the featured artists that contribute to the program... Wallace & Cappo are now playing deluxe picture houses in the East... Rick & Snyder are back into cafe work after a tour of Chicago picture theatres... Nat Kalchein, formerly booker of acts for the W. V. M. A., resigned last week... It may be the result of the recent Keith-Orpheum merger... Larry Spier, well known song writer and music publisher starts on his sales tour this week... Band leaders and organists beware!... Larry has a bunch of new songs he wants to wish on you... Speaking of music publishers our good pal, Al Bielin, just returned from a trip South... Nobody knows whether it was business or pleasure... Jack Knight, supervisor of all B. & K. and L. & T. Chicago theatres is back on the job after a major operation... Isham Jones, is now leading a band at Mann's Rainbo Gardens, Chicago, where that new Spanish game called Jai-Alai, but pronounced "Hi-li" is being played... You ought to try it sometime when you're in town... While on the subject of leaders we have word that Ralph Pollack has been transferred to the new Publix in Birmingham... Ralph was formerly at Saenger's in New Orleans... Don Miguel Galvan, is still drawing big crowds at the Texas in San Antonio, as the local stage band leader... Now that Roy Deitrich has taken Buddy Fisher's place at the Avalon theatre, Chicago, as stage band leader, the "Right Club" will continue to entertain "kiddies" every Saturday with Roy officiating... Word comes from Hollywood that Cousin Ralph Gallo will soon have a leading part in large film production... Ralph has been doing a lot of dancing for Fanchon & Marco... Speaking of dancers the Chester Hale Girls will be one of the features of the new Joe Stanley show coming to town here next week... If you think they're great look up Markert's American Rockets, they sure know their steps... Novelle Bros., have resumed their third tour of picture houses for Publix... A letter from Milton Slosser states that he can't get along without our book... I'm glad of that, now I'm sure to hold my job... Reports have it that Rube Scholz, featured organist for the Mojeska of Milwaukee, will soon leave that house for another... For the benefit of those who don't know it, let me say right here that Jack Lavin, Chicago manager for Villa Moret, has gone and married Martha Young, the president's secretary... Give him credit for good taste, boys... Well, say Jack has nothing on Charlie Kaley, band leader for Marks Bros., he also went and got himself someone to support too... Looks like I'll have to grab myself somebody to love... Will some poor hard working girl send in her photo for first call... Alois Relsler has replaced Nathaniel Shillkret at the Mark Strand theatre in New York, as its musical director.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Granada Weed Ending January 8

This reporter entered the auditorium of the Granada just as the Vitaphone presentation, with Bartram and Saxon, started. We've been in a theatre when an act was given the merry hah, hah, but this is the first occasion that this writer has been present when a Vitaphone act was treated similarly. Bartram and Saxon are the two who walked off a stage recently in Chicago, thereby gaining few if any friends.

For the stagershow, Charles Kaley gave a good performance. The show opened in front of a drop representing a huge flower pot. It was attractive and good background for the bevy of dancers who were dressed in pastel colored gowns.

The act opened with a feminine soloist, followed by the entrance of the dancers through four circular holes. Following their routine dance, the drop lifted, revealing the orchestra.

First by the orchestra was an harmonious arrangement of the two selections, "Following the Sun Around" and "Rio Rita." It made a good introductory number and was appreciated by the paaees.

Joe, Evelyn & Harry, song and dance artists, amuse, although Evelyn did not win the response that was accorded Joe and Harry, who are two clever steppers. Their duet dance brought a good hand. Evelyn's solo dance failed to click.

Thelma Edwards won approval with her classical and muscle dance. She held the spot billing under Kaley for the week.

The orchestra's next was "Singapore," with the drop overhead rising. The eight dancers entered in a dimly lighted stage, dressed as coolies. These costumes then were converted into beautiful long-trained gowns merely by dropping the cape affect.

Charles Kaley sang the theme piece of the motion picture, "Seventh Heaven," which is "My Diane." This brought a big hand, showing Kaley's popularity at the North Side house.

The finale was effective with the eight dancing girls working behind a varied colored transparent drop which was moved up and down.

Milwaukee Wisconsin Week Ending January 6

"Hello, 1928" is this week's offering on the Wisconsin stage. The curtains part on a night club scene, all the boys in tuxes with the leader and the Eight Abbott Dancers seated about a banquet table. As the noise of the merry-makers subsides the dancers do their stuff after which they seat themselves in front of the table, while the band master engages in "Speech" joined at various times during the selection by members of his band.

As the Eight Abbott girls danced their way off the stage, a very versatile young miss, Auriole Craven, played on a violin "Charmaine," accompanying herself to a snatch of dance. She received a big hand and came back to sing, "Just Say O. K.," and although the audience asked for more she refused to oblige.

That popular number, "Among My Souvenirs" was then played by the band with another young man, unnamed, singing the chorus in the absence of Billy Meyers. The song was well sung and played and went over big.

Horton Spurr, a dancer of no small note, next obliged with some very clever soft shoe dancing followed by a slow motion exhibition of a golf player.

Spurr's dance was followed by a piano solo by the stageband leader, which received big applause. He gets as big an applause for his classical selections as many other players get for popular numbers.

The Eight Abbott Dancers next obliged with a clever dance in which they were all attired in full dress suits including the silk top hats. The number was well done and went over big.

Eva Mandell helped to jolly up the crowd with fun and peppy songs. She sang among her numbers, "It's a Happy Old World After All," "Nobody Loves a Fat Girl," "Ho, Ho, Hay, Hay." She went over as big as she is fat, which is saying a lot.

Two clownish dancing violinists, the Novelle Brothers, tickled the audience with their acrobatic stunts while playing the violin. They ended up their act with their well known imitation of two love birds which went over big.

The grande finale brought back the Eight Abbott Dancers in a hot dance number, while confetti was dropped from above the stage, and a galaxy of lights were lit inside the hanquet table adding much to the color of the scene.

The photoplay is Clara Bow in "Get Your Man."

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending January 6

Al Short and his Melody Boys presented "Banjo-mania," a public unit, at the Howard this week, gaining considerable recognition and approval from both critics and good audiences.

The Thompson Sisters appeared first, introduced in a clever and snappy hanjo number. Especially pretty were the stage arrangements and settings, carrying out the hanjo idea and permeated by a contagious jazz atmosphere.

Morgan and Stone, also banjo performers, came next, drawing applause with their act.

Margaret Ball proved an appreciated danseuse in a colorful aesthetic dance. Limber Legs Edward, eccentric dancer, brought so loud a hand that he stopped the show.

The Byron Sisters, billed and known as "The Sunshine Girls," were well liked songsters and offered several popular numbers.

Eddie Hill, singing comedian, went over well and brought the show to a stand still for an encore.

A chorus of eight well trained girls gave several unique formations as banjo girls.

Al Short and his Melody Boys were at their posts drawing the usual applause. George Lee Hamrick rendered "Moon Melodies" as added attraction on the organ.

"Banjo-mania" clicked and received a good hand, all told.

Chicago Sheridan

Week Ending January 8

This week's program at the Sheridan, called Revels of 1928, went over big.

The first number, "There Must Be Somebody Else," was played by the orchestra under the leadership of Verne Buck, and received a fine hand.

Douglas and Claire, in "Dances from 1630 to 1930," got over some unusual steps. They performed first, while dressed in Puritan clothes, and locked together hands and feet in stocks, to the "Blue Law Blues," and then did a hlackbottom to "Bye, Bye, Black-hird." After a fast solo by Douglas, they came on again in an oversized clown suit, that they were both able to get into at the same time. This also brought a good hand.

Libby Coren, attired in a stunning white silk winter outfit, was next singing "Here Comes My Sugar," and "O, Look at That Bahy" to Verne Buck, that tickled the audience. Buck answered her as an encore singing the same song. She then did musical comedy high kicking, and was called for another encore.

The orchestra next played a medley of 1927 songs, which included "Just Another Day," "A Shady Tree," "Annabelle Lee" and "My Blue Heaven." During these numbers Buck played at different times on the saxophone, clarinet, and violin. Buck sang "O Kay," with the orchestra, singing alternately, with him, Frank Wilson sang "My Blue Heaven," while Buck played the violin, and this went over so big they had to give three encores.

Pisano and Landauer, two big butter and egg men, came out to "The Wearing of the Green," and after slinging a little halogna that brought a hearty laugh, Landauer sang "Just a Memory" seriously, and the audience liked it very much. For an encore he "gargled" the same number. These boys were required to appear again and again, and they seemed to enjoy the fun as much as the audience did.

Against a background representing a scene in "7th Heaven," the Fox motion picture which was being presented as the feature, Sylvia Peterson, dressed as "Diane," sang the selection which was used as the theme for the film. Just before she finished the scrim was lowered, and the motion picture began. This received good applause.

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending January 7

The stage presentation was called "New Year's Follies," an appropriate title for a show this time of the year. The Penn Rockets opened with a dance stepped to the tune of "Baltimore."

Overture was "Tannhauser" with pit orchestra playing number straight. Then scrim on stage lights up and Harman and Band play dance arrangement of number with both hands together at finish, one playing it "hot" and the other symphonic. Very good stunt not a new idea, but got and deserved all the applause.

The feature, "Sorrell and Son," made the show a little longer than usual.

Dave Harman and Band in their third week did "Tiger Rag," giving all the men a chance to show their talents with Harry Peru, the drummer, getting the edge on applause.

Fred Martin in a sailor suit gave some rubber leg dancing and managed to stop the show.

Bell and Coates next with little piano do harmony songs but do not come up to the grade of teams heard here lately. Their best number was "The Song Is Ended." The main trouble with the team is poor enunciation.

Van Tyson and Van doing fast acrobatic and tap dancing followed and they also fell short of the mark of quality which is quite high here. Band next playing a medley including "Mississippi Mud," a vocal solo by Dave, and then the final with all on hoard a good finish that received good applause.

Chicago Norshore

Week Ending January 8

There is one motion picture neighborhood house in Chicago where the audience surely does have a lot of fun, and that place is the Norshore, where Al Kvale and His Jazz Collegians cavort around. This week's show was called "Hello 1928," and was just one big hit.

Two goofs, dressed in "hindu" garb, were bending over a gold-fish bowl placed on a small table, when the curtain went up. One was telling the other what the new year would bring, and when the "magician" said that there would be a return bout, (he didn't say "fight") between Tunney and Dempsey, and that Rickard was holding a school to teach referees to count, there was loud applause.

The Eight pretty Gould Girls came out on a specially constructed runway in front of the orchestra pit, and sang "We Ought to Be Happy (because we've made you happy)," and then went into a routine in front of a scrim on which was printed the calendar of 1928.

For the first number the orchestra played "What'll You Do?" with a clarinet solo by Kvale.

Pauline Gaskins came out smiling and sang "Didn't I Tell You That You'd Come Back?" to Kvale. Her dancing was hot, and she left amid loud applause.

Mario and Lazarin, two troubadours, were next with "Just a Memory," and some comedy medley of operatic arias. They were called for two encores for "When Day Is Done," which they gave very well.

The Gould Girls, in high silk hats and capes, next did a routine to a number of operatic medleys.

Jay Mack, foot and harmonica artist, did his stuff to "Is She My Girl Friend?" and was called for an encore.

"Did You Mean It?" was then played by the orchestra.

The house lights were extinguished, and when the spot finally "found" the center of the stage, there were two funny looking comedians, Burns and Kissen, whose "Dank Yous" convulsed the audience. Their first song was to the tune of "America I Love You"; then after doing a Chinese characterization, they gave their interpretation of "In a Little Spanish Town." For an encore they sang "Broken Hreated," and were called again. They pleased all right.

"Shaken the Blues Away" was the Finale played by Al Kvale and his hoys.

Omaha Riviera

Week Ending January 5

In view of the sub-zero weather prevailing, a trip with Jimmy Ellard to "Dixieland" was most opportune the first week of this year. Jimmy presented this New York Stage show by Jack Parrington at the Riviera.

Joe Penner, comedian of "Greenwich Follies," was the principal part of the show. His ludicrous grimaces and comic contortions made a big hit. Edith Griffith was back with a group of new songs and the Jubilee Four sang some effective songs amid attractive settings.

In the dancing line Charles Henry did a "Lucky Lindy" Charleston which was a little bit of everything, Luella Lee danced acrobatically and Rapp and Morris did some difficult and clever dancing.

Of the standing attractions, Jimmy Ellard sang "The Big Tin Pan Parade," a kiddie number; Frederick Schmitt and the pit orchestra put on "Auld Lang Syne," and George Johnson at the organ played old and new songs. "The Private Life of Helen or Troy" was the feature film.

These performers also participated in the New Year's Eve Show put on by Manager A. G. Stolte. They had much competition from members of the audience who broke into the program with strains of "Sweet Adaline." Despite the fact that it was the coldest New Year's Eve in 43 years, the house was filled and the party successful.

As the New Year arrived, 1928 personified broke through a big egg and stepped out upon an elevated stage. Stolte's distribution of string confetti and balloons was particularly effective.

CHICAGO

Chicago Oriental

Paul Ash calls his show this week, "Pickings from Paris," and the picking is good. The show opens with the soft strains of the "Marseilles." The curtain parts to reveal the interior of a woman's hat shop. Paul Small and two girls come on. The girls do a short dance and then Paul Small sings a short song in keeping with the stage setting. Ned Miller also comes on to sing a short song.

Then Paul Ash enters as if to buy a hat. The Oriental Girls enter to do a short routine, and receive a good hand. Ash then announces that he has brought home a new number called, "Paree." It is a snappy number with good time and arrangement. It gets a fine hand.

Paul Small and Ned Miller enter to sing, "What Are You Waiting for, Mary," and get a good applause. Then a young girl who Paul announces as Little Alice Kennedy comes on to sing and the way she does and the way the audience applauds her, it looks as if Paul has found another Peggy Bernier. She sings, "A Darn Good Man to Have Hanging Around," two comedy songs and then, "Just Look at That Baby." She stops the show and the audience beg for more.

The Oriental Girls next do an Apache dance. Each has a large rag doll which appears to be a dancing partner. The number is great and gets that kind of an applause.

Dan Hubbard is next with his banjo and songs such as "My Blue Heaven" and "I Can't Believe You're in Love With Me." His songs are good but his dancing is better and he is rewarded for both with a wonderful applause.

The "Slavish Rhapsody" as played by Ash and his band gets a thunderous applause, and the hand should be given credit for doing as well as it did with this difficult number, which was never intended for any jazz band to play.

Earl LeVere is next with his accordion playing, jokes and wisecracks. Of course he had to play "Sam" and then he plays, "Sundown" and "Side by Side," all of which is intermingled with a lot of horseplay with Ash. He goes over in great style.

Then the two Pauls render, "It All Belongs to Me," "Since Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzie" and "What Do You Say." Ash mans the piano and Small his vocal organs. The songs get a fine reception.

Then comes the finale with all the band and the dance team marching down a fine flight of stairs and the band playing, "Everywhere You Go." The finale makes quite a flash.

Pittsburgh Grand

Week Ending January 7

The overture as played by David Broudy and the Grand Symphony Orchestra is always one of the high spots of the bill if not at times the outstanding unit. This week he played selections from "Naughty Marietta" interpolating "Blue Heaven," featuring a violin solo "Mystery of Life." Elias Breeskin, violinist, is one of the best in the city and the entire combination makes the overture meritorious, and as a straight musical number at that.

After the news came Frank Loforese, basso, with a fine voice, singing two numbers, "Roses of Picardy" and the aria from "The Barber of Seville."

Next the Clarion Trumpeters, four girls who are way above the average on the cornet. The four play "Faust" to open and next do a solo of "My Wild Irish Rose," a duet of "Blue Heaven" and a trio with piano of "Mighty Lak a Rose." Both scored big. A medley of operatic airs closed the act.

Feature, Clara Bow in "Get Your Man" and comedy completed the show.

Chicago Uptown

Week Ending January 8

Frankie Masters calls his Uptown presentation this week, "Moonlit Waters." The stage setting is an exterior scene in Venice, and is quite beautiful. The first number is the Boris Petroff dancers featuring Rose Marino. The ballet is wonderfully costumed and does a fine tamberine dance in which Rose Marino gives a remarkable toe dance.

Then Masters and his band do an original number called, "So Tired." As Masters sings the song the entire hand goes to sleep with loud snores echoing across the footlights. It is a novel and amusing number well done and well received.

Helen Yorke then gives a fine rendition of "Carnival of Venice." The applause she received did not do her good singing justice. Then comes little Sammy Lewis with his toponch booh dancing. He can wiggle a mean pair of legs and rhythm is his middle name. As an encore he does a good imitation of an ice skater. He gets a fine hand for his novelty also.

This is followed with a hand number, and un-

Well, Well, Haven't We Heard All This Before?

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOUSTON, Jan. 4.—Popular motion pictures, written and directed as a thrust at the pocketbooks of 85 per cent of the population with minds of a child, are one of the greatest factors in the world today, Dr. Louis K. Anspacher, noted Jewish playwright, declared at a luncheon of the Council of Jewish Women here last week.

While he scathingly assailed the industry, he declared the cinema is an expression of art and must work its way upward. "What the mob wants in pictures, which are fast replacing the legitimate stage, are corned beef, cabbage, tripe and onions," the Doctor said.

usual and extremely pretty arrangement of "Among My Souvenirs," during which Frankie and three of the hand sing it. The number goes over in great style and should.

Then comes the Dancing Trio, two men and one girl. Their fine interpretive classic dance is novel and well staged. It is danced to "Rhapsody in Blue." The audience gives thunderous applause for this really beautiful number.

Then come the two boohs from Oklahoma, Fauntleroy and Van. They first play on a couple of broomsticks, then French harps, bellows, and one musical saw, one doing the hitting and the other the manipulation of the saw. Their old time song for an encore is just about the best yet. The act gets a wonderful hand, and the pair leave with the audience asking for more.

The finale is a beautiful spec with lots of pep and beauty. It was a corking good show.

As a feature for the pit orchestra, Uldrico Marcelli presented another one of his entertaining musical overtures this week. The selections were titled, "Songs of France," aided by a motion picture with colored process depicting the originality of the Apache in which the crippled violinist loved the Apache mate in vain. Throughout this offering a man's voice sang off-stage variations from this overture mainly featuring, "By the Light of the Moon."

New York Capitol

Week Ending January 6

David Mendoza opened the Capitol program this week directing his orchestra in Tchaikovsky's "Capriccio Italian."

The stage presentation was entitled the "Legend of the Pearl." The curtain rises on a dell of ferns through which a river is flowing. In the center is a huge pearl shell. The Capitol Ballet represents the fairies and sprites who dance in and out among the ferns.

Suddenly two mortals appear as the pearl opens and a fairy steps out. Rita and Teske Narsoroff offer a dance number assisted by the ballet.

The mortals disobeying the gods by dancing with the fairy are punished. They are struck down in a storm and lie dead at the feet of the pearl fairy who returns to her shell. The curtain falls on the fairies, spreading flowers over the mortals. The lighting deserves praise in this scene as it is most effective. The act seemed to arouse the sympathy of the entire audience.

Walt Roesner, directing The Capitols in "Pepper Pot Revue," is the next presentation. The Chester Hale Girls render a dance representing pepper pots in black and white costumes. Fain and Dunn sing several comical and serious songs which meet with great applause. Wallace and Cappel do some fancy steps to the tune of the stage orchestra. The orchestra, as its contribution, plays "She Don't Wanna" and "Dream Kisses."

As their special act the Capitol presents Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough, those two inimitable comedians from "The Ramblers" and "Music Box Revue." These funny fellows offer their ever-funny act of interviewing a reporter outside the Capital in Washington. They pull their same old gags and sing their same old songs which never fail to send the audience into convulsions. After many encores they managed to stagger off the stage.

As the closing number the Chester Hale Girls offered a ballet number assisted by the entire company.

New York Roxy

Week Ending January 6

As the opening number the Roxy Symphony Orchestra played "Orpheus," directed by Erno Rapee. The first presentation act was Marie Gambarelli in a dance number called "La Libellule," in which she represented a moonbeam and rendered a moonbeam dance.

"Twilight," a potpourri of Russian folk songs, was sung by the Russian Cathedral Choir. Far from a Cathedral they were in a hirsch forest. The voices were very good and well liked. Following the Sixteen Roxettes gave a specialty dance.

Sevillana was the next offering. A Spanish market filled with peasants, represented by the ensemble, was the background for this scene. This was assisted by the Ballet Corps which served as an introduction to Addison Fowler and Florenz Tamara, those two incomparable dancers who have just returned from an European tour. There is no one more graceful than Florenz Tamara.

The closing act was a Lyric Pageant, "Joan of Arc," in six scenes. Garda Maire as Joan of Arc and Douglas Stanbury as the Archbishop were the leading roles. This was a pageant of the life of

New York Paramount Week Ending January 6

The program opens with "The Bohemian Girl" played by the Paramount Orchestra under the direction of Irvin Talbot.

Following Mrs. Jesse Crawford played on the organ "Up in the Clouds," "Wonderful," "My Heart Stood Still," and "Varsity Drag." She never fails to please her attentive listeners.

The presentation was "Blue Plate." The curtain rises on the stage orchestra behind which is a huge blue plate. The entire presentation is offered in nothing but blue and white.

"Little Wooden Shoes," sung by Lorraine Trumler and danced by the Foster Girls, was the first number. Following this was "A Dutch Treat" by Gordon and King. This was a comical skit of dancing and singing to the tune of a saw. Tom Long and Sally Small did some dancing followed by Koehler and Edith, two very good roller skaters.

The finale, entitled "Windmill," was sung by Lorraine Trumler. The inside of the plate went up, showing a windmill in the background with the Ballet Girls climbing over it and hanging from the vanes in very perilous positions while the windmill goes around. The scene was beautifully done and pleased the entire house.

Lupe Velez Wins Suit

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10.—Lupe Velez, a featured player in "Douglas Fairbanks as the Gaucho," has agreed to pay Frank A. Woodyard $50,000. Woodyard brought suit as her "discoverer." The case was settled out of court.

Sweetest Girl Manager? Miss Helen B. Morley Is First Nominated

WE HAVE had a look into the careers of the youngest managers, have congratulated the oldest managers of a number of houses, and now we have with us in Miss Helen B. Morley of the Rialto theatre at Tacoma, Wash., a candidate for the title of sweetest woman-manager. By her winsome personality, unfaltering loyalty, and universal popularity among the younger generation, she has succeeded in materially increasing the attendance at this theatre.

Miss Helen B. Morley

Miss Morley is a graduate of the Stadium high school there, and after completing her course with high honors four years ago, she was appointed chief usherette at the Rialto, in charge of a crew of 12 girls.

Several months ago, due to the local disturbance among the musicians and various other changes, she was appointed manager of the Rialto by E. C. Jeffress, West Coast Theatres representative here. This house has a seating capacity of 1400, and the fair manager reports that business is "away better than last year."

Harris Amusement Co. Fetes 30th Anniversary

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 10.—The Harris Amusement Company has made arrangements to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the founding of the firm, by the late Senator John P. Harris, throughout the rest of the month of January. Each week will introduce de luxe programs of Keith-Albee vaudeville and feature photoplays at all their theatres.

Every theatre in the circuit is to be ornately decorated. The inevitable birthday cake, with its 30 lighted candles, will be in evidence, and the whole character of the theatre and its performances will be in celebration of the natal anniversary.

Initiation Shocking— Members Lose Heart

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 10.—The Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise, St. Louis Chapter, has temporarily passed out of the theatrical picture in St. Louis. Orders from up front were for the high chieftains to quit their initiations of willing and unwilling prospects.

The officers are the backstage men of the Ambassador theatre and the members included certain actors and other artists who have appeared at the theatre since it was opened in August, 1926. Each had survived the rigorous initiation without serious consequences. But a blonde neophyte stated in emphatic terms she regarded the whole procedure as positively shocking. It is not denied that the initiation was somewhat shocking—electrically so. Watt?

Talk about modern day salesmanship! Montgomery Ward, Chicago's big mail-order house, wanted representation on the air one hour every week over a net work of radio stations. . . . In submitting different kinds of entertainment to Montgomery Ward, the National Broadcasting Company, here in New York, relayed a direct wire to Chicago, where the committee in charge of Montgomery Ward's advertising, listened in for them to approve or dis-approve. . . . In all of these auditions, the different programs were just as if they were being sent to the country at large, while in reality, the direct wire permitted only the committee in Chicago to hear it. . . . That in my opinion, is doing things in a big way. . . . From latest reports it looks like Nathaniel Shilkret landed the job. . . . For the interest of music men, the hour will consist of popular music.

Mal Hallet, as an orchestra leader, doesn't mean very much to the average Westerner, but to any one from New England, he's the daddy of all orchestra leaders. . . . The following that Hallet has in those North Eastern states surpasses that of even White-man's. . . . For a short period every winter, Hallet has made it a practice to hit the "alley," usually playing at the Arcadia Ballroom. For some reason or other this winter will find him at the Arcadia's rival, Roseland. . . . He opens there January 16.

Can anyone estimate what Al Jolson's plug on the Dodge Brother's radio hour last week meant to a music publisher? . . . Did you know that the firm of Irving Berlin sent a piano player to New Orleans to accompany Jolson! Ponder over this for a minute; A piano player was sent almost two thousand miles to play only seven minutes on the radio. . . . Well it certainly must have been worth while, because I know twenty publishers who would have sent a whole orchestra to New Orleans, if Jolson would have sung one of their songs. . . . Berlin claims that as a result of Jolson singing "Four Walls" they have sold more than thirty thousand copies.

Never in the history of Broadway, have the night-clubs been faring so badly. . . . Outside of the Richmond Club, where George Olson and his orchestra predominate, the only other club that was doing business was the Helen Morgan Club; having since been demolished by prohibition agents the Richmond reigns supreme. . . . One of the big reasons for the night-club "flop" is the Chop Suey joints. . . . Just like the automat, they're always crowded.

The Casa Lopez has also been complaining in regard to business, and from reliable sources, I understand that Lopez is desirous of quitting the night-club racket for the easier and more refined Hotel game. . . . Therefore any first class hotel, looking for a "crack" band with a big reputation, I feel confident, can secure the services of Lopez.

It is said, that more than a quarter of a million dollars was given away by the music publishers to their employees for Christmas, bonuses, presents, etc. . . . And yet, when a publisher goes after a plug somewhere, he's always crying the blues.

For some unknown reason, "Just A Memory" faded out of the picture here in New York quicker than any hit tune I can possibly remember. Riding for a sensational song, it wasn't over six weeks that you didn't hear the song any more. . . . Perhaps this can be attributed to the tremendous radio plug the song received the first two weeks that it was out. . . . at that time, there wasn't a night, when you couldn't hear "Just A Memory" on the ether at least fifteen times. . . . It is most-likely for this reason, that the tune faded out as quickly as it did.

Gonna take a two weeks trip around the country and see some of my friends, so while I'm gone, my partner, Sam Coslow is going to "Pinch-hit" this column for me. . . . Just let me warn you, that he's a very funny fellow so don't be surprised at anything he may write.

ORGAN SOLOS

Milton Charles (Chicago Oriental) calls his slide organ presentation this week, "The Cartoon Contest" and both the slides and words are clever, they being about the favorite newspaper cartoon characters. He plays for the tonsil exercise of his audience "Under the Moon," "A Night in June," "There's a Cradle in Caroline," and "Just a Memory." The audience showed their approval of Charles' work with their singing and applause. Charles seems to be making himself quite a favorite at the Oriental.

Arthur Richter (Milwaukee, Wisconsin) offers for his selection at the organ, "Tomorrow," with the words flashed upon the screen, and the "World Is Waiting for the Sunrise." His selections as usual are well received.

Chauncey Haines (Chicago Northshore) called his number "Happy New Year" this week, and after a few slides telling about the success of Balaban and Katz in the last year, and promising to make 1928 even a bigger and better year, the following selections were sung by the audience, "My Blue Heaven," "Just Once Again," "Just Like a Butterfly That's Caught in the Rain," "Highway Are Happy Ways," and "Me and My Shadow."

Leonard M. Salvo (Chicago Highland) offered this week as a community singing stunt songs that had a happy trend. They were as follows: "Highways Are Happy Ways," "Are You Happy?" and "It's A Happy Old World After All." They were illustrated by slides and used especially for the holiday program. Since coming here Salvo has been creating a nice following for his selections.

Verne Forde (Des Moines, Des Moines) used two miniature aerals, erected on the organ and bearing the conspicuous red and green lights, respectively, represented in clever style station WHY in a clever radio organ number playing the music incident to the stunt and the audience sang. Telegrams from a mythical radio audience were flashed on the screen and served to amuse.

W. Remington Welch (Chicago Tiffin) offered "Radio Ravings" in which the raving took place as follows: "The Minuet," "The Toreador Song," "At Dawning," "Together We Two," "Marble Walls Aria from The Bohemian Girl," "Rigoletto," "Ces't Vous," "It's You," "Are You Lonesome Tonight?" closing with "Miss Annabelle Lee." This was all done in the form of community singing with special lyrics with the various arias and tunes which made the solo a novelty from the standpoint of popular and classic music.

Dick Leibert (Pittsburgh Penn) offered "The Beggar" this week as a solo, using a presentation idea with slides projected on a scrim. The slides explained about a princess being very rich who gave money to beggars providing they deserved it, then the prince came along and begged the girl to go into a chorus of "The Beggar." Scrim lights go up in back showing the prince and princess while the prince sang. An Oriental set was used with black out at finish.

Eddie Hanson (Chicago Uptown) calls his organ presentation this week, "New Year Resolutions" and the entire presentation in slides and songs is tied up with this name. He plays "Hallelujah," "This Is My Lucky Day," "Are You Really Happy" and "Give Me a Night in June." This was one of the best slide presentations seen in some time. The audience gives Eddie a good hand as the organ sinks into the pit.

Bill Bennett (Chicago Belpark) presented as a community stunt a solo called "Here's Your Chance to Broadcast," in which he used the following songs with lyric slides: "Blue Heaven," "I Told Them All About You," "Blue River," "Among My Souvenirs," "What'll You Do," "A Night in June" and for an encore "Are You Happy." Since Bennett has taken over the organ duties at this house, community singing has become quite a popular thing.

Doc Webb (Chicago Marshall Square) presented "Request Night," in which he told the audience through slides how his wife attended different theatres and was very blue from hearing so many blue songs that he decided to offer the following: "Blue River," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "There's A Long Long Trail" and suggested for a winter night, "A Night in June." This was all done in the form of community singing with comedy slides.

JUST LOVE ME (That's All)—Irving Berlin, Inc.—Three Chicago writers including the well known band leader, Charles Kaley, have turned out a very cute song.

REGIMENTAL SONG—(Waterson, Berlin & Snyder)—This song is from the new show "White Eagle," which just opened in New York. This song is plugged in the show in the same manner that "Song of the Vagabond" was done last year. By Rudolf Friml.

WHEN LOVE COMES STEALING—(Robbins Music Corp.)—This number has been revised into a popular song. The writers of this song have just given us two hits, "Charmaine" and "Diane," Erno Rapee, Lew Pollack and Walter Hirsch. This song will certainly add to the writers prestige.

KEEP SWEEPING THE COBWEBS OFF THE MOON—(J. H. Remick & Co.)—An optimistic song that lends cheer and is well written up by those well know writers, Lewis and Young and Oscar Levant.

SWEET ELAINE—(John E. Hayes, Inc.)—Twenty-five years ago these two writers, Richard H. Gerard and Harry Armstrong, wrote a song that will live forever called, "Sweet Adeline." As this is the first song since that time by these writers, it will no doubt get the attention of all lovers of popular music.

PERSIAN RUG—(Villa Moret, Inc.)—An Oriental number and one look at the title page and you know it must be about a rug. These two writers, Gus Kahn and Neil Moret, always turn out a good song and this is no exception.

MY HEART IS IN THE ROSES—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—By Alfred Bryan and Fred Fisher who were at one time the leading song writers in the business. They have turned out in this song a beautiful waltz ballad.

AS LONG AS I LIVE (I'll Love You)—(Lewis-Marks Pub. Co.)—Al Lewis, who heads this firm and is also one of the writers, knows what the public wants, so this song will no doubt get the attention of the publishers for a quick turn over. Written by Al Lewis, Howard Simon, Gerald Marks and Emerson Gill.

TOGETHER—(DeSylva-Brown & Henderson)—Another masterpiece by this battery of song writers, (who are also the publishers). It should take its place among the biggest hits.

JUST BEFORE YOU BROKE MY HEART—(F. B. Haviland Music Co.)—An old fashioned song. This publisher has been very successful in the past with this type of song. Is well written as to lyrics and melody. By Seger Ellis, Art Gillham and George Lipschulz.

JOY BELLS—(J. H. Remick & Co.)—As the title denotes, these bells later become wedding bells. As a rule, we always think of weddings in June so this song is away ahead of the time. By Cliff Friend and Jos. H. Santly.

WHILE THE OTHERS ARE DANCING (I Sit in the Corner Alone)—(Henry Waterson)—A story about a wall flower who was forgotten in the crowd. Well written as a fox trot ballad. By Irving Kahal, Francis Wheeler and Sammy Fain.

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

"THE SLAVE MART"

NOW and then—not very often—theatre billing states a fact. The Chicago theatre billing for "The Slave Mart" began with the three words—Beautiful Billie Dove. To which I, and apparently innumerable other thousands in these parts, utter a pleased Amen. If the picture, "The Slave Mart," were no more than a reason for photographing Billie Dove again and again, it would be an adequate attraction. Happily, it is much more than that.

"The Slave Mart" is a story of old New Orleans, the New Orleans of 100 years ago, the slave-smuggling, picturesque New Orleans of which Americans have been permitted to learn all too little. This is a tremendous chapter in the past of the nation, a chapter apparently uninteresting to prosaic writers of history and a chapter apparently unfamiliar to the rank and file of fictionists. It is a great locale for picture makers and I hope the use of it in this instance will be followed by the usual landslide of quasi-duplications.

Billie Dove is the belle of New Orleans as the picture opens. She would be as attractive, no doubt, as the belle of any other place, including Hollywood, but in this setting she has the grand manner in her behalf, the delicacy of attire, the contrasting highlight of alternate splendor and squalor. Above it all she seems to float rather than walk through the scenes.

By the story, Miss Dove is discovered to be an octoroon. Her legal owner, portrayed by Noah Beery, forces disclosure of this condition and offers the slave for sale upon the block. The spirited bidding is a tremendous episode, Gilbert Roland buying the woman in an abiding faith that the colored taint is a fiction, a fact established by means and methods which ought not be told anyone who plans to see the picture. Since each of you should plan to see it, I shall not tell the rest.

This Mr. Roland, by the way, hits his stride in this picture. I cared little for him in his first two starts, for no definite reason and possibly because his assignments were not all they should have been, but in this he's a forthright young fellow with a deadly sword eye and a firm wrist. If there were no danger of attaching one of those "second" tags to his career, I should say that he is the actor that the public thought Valentino was. I hasten to add that he has none of the wrong aspects which were Valentino's and that I believe this paragraph, with its danger of getting into the hands of the lay press and setting the newspaper hounds on his trail as "The New So-and-So," is a dumb crack. It is no less sincere.

The third important person in the picture is Noah Beery and I take occasion to state that he is as good in this as he was bad in "The Dove." This makes me wonder if the director of "The Dove" is responsible for all that clinical display of the gentleman's anatomy. If this be the case, I apologize to Beery for giving him the blame and shift it herewith to the director, whose name I have not at hand, reserving for the sturdy swashbuckler no more than a question as to why he permitted it.

Yes, you're right, I do consider "The Slave Mart" a splendid picture. It is, primarily, good entertainment, as every picture should be. It is, in addition, a pictorial recreation of a highly interesting and little known era of American history. Still further, and I count this of tremendous importance, it is another lens record of the beauty that is Billie Dove's, a beauty so overwhelming that I always forget to say she's a great actress, too.

"FRENCH DRESSING"

I LIKE Lois Wilson, Clive Brook and H. B. Warner about as well as any trio of players ever assembled in a single cast. And I do not dislike Lilyan Tashman, particularly in the picture at hand. It is with considerable regret, therefore, that I register other than pleasure with respect to their "French Dressing." I hasten to add that I believe a good man with a scissors could make it a mighty good picture.

"French Dressing" is one of those semi-farce domestic things that used to be called "society pictures" before producers learned to set them in Paris and trick them out with light captions. There is no better type of entertainment in picturedom than this—no better eye-fare on stage or screen—and although "French Dressing" has its limitations within its class it is still, to me, a better evening's entertainment than at least the conventional nine out of ten contemporary offerings.

The four players mentioned in the opening paragraphs are the four important people in the picture. Lois Wilson is the too domestic wife of H. B. Warner, Lilyan Tashman the too undomestic divorcee girl friend of the wife, Clive Brook the obliging Parisian gentleman who does what he can do, which is plenty, to restore to the married people a proper appreciation of each other. Sounds simple enough, and very much like dozens of other stories that are in common use, but it isn't handled that way. It is done with commendable restraint, with intriguing variations and with excellent tone. The only fault that I find with it, and a fault which seemed to stack up that way also to a good many of those present, is that the thing runs about 20 minutes longer than is good for it.

Toward the close of the picture the loose ends are gathered with care rather than grace, the sequences are protracted, the captions are not strong enough to pull them over, if indeed any captions could be, and the close arrives a bit tardily. I heartily advise the unprecedented procedure of taking the print into the cutting room and scissoring it down to sprightly length. That done, I think it would be a great picture, as great in its kind as any save the Menjou and the Vidor classics.

"THE MOJAVE KID"

BOB STEELE, latest of the seemingly inexhaustible supply of FBO Westerners, takes another step toward the goal which none of these players seems to miss in "The Mojave Kid." I wonder where, and how, this concern obtains all these cowboys.

Without looking into the matter, I have gained the idea that somewhere in that great state surrounding Hollywood FBO must maintain a training school for horsemen, riflemen, actormen, for the concern seems eminently equipped to stick in its thumb and pull out a Western star at any given moment.

Of "The Mojave Kid" there is to say no more than the conventional things that are said of every good Western and have been said of them since who remembers when. It clicks, as it is intended to click, and it entertains as Westerns entertain. It is that most staple of studio products, "a good Western."

"TUMBLING RIVER"

EXHIBITORS are saying that Mix is making better pictures this year than last, which sounds exactly like the statement they've made in this connection in all save one of the many previous years during which this perpetually youthful cowboy has been busying himself before the camera. Without seeing all of the Mix pictures of this year, or even of last, I take "Tumbling River" as proof of the general statement. For that matter, and to be wholly honest, I should accept almost any picture, that doesn't put Mix in petticoats, as that proof.

Tom Mix has, in his pictures as at his playful typewriter, that asset which is obtained by living. I refer to experience. When he rides a horse he rides it in the manner that he knows, through countless previous efforts in kind, the people who pay to see him ride a horse like to see him ride a horse. When he saves the gal, captures the villain, enacts a gag, he saves the gal, captures the villain or enacts the gag in the way that time has demonstrated to be, for him, exactly the proper way.

This is the quality to which I think experts refer when they say such things as camera-wise, knowing, aware, consummate, clever, gifted—in fact all the good words commonly used to describe actors. I think it is also the quality which sometimes goes by the name of genius, inspiration, inner vision. It is, in my unimportant estimate, the one thing that makes an actor a dependable, permanent fixture of the show business. Unfortunately, it is a thing which can be obtained only by dint of hard work, which is not so bad, and by living and acting for several years, which is not so good.

At the end of which reasoning—if indeed this be reasoning—I discover at last the reason why (1) the majority of male stars are middle-aged (2) the feminine stars of several seasons are the best and (3) the only new stars who really click are the gals with Mme. Glyn's most press-agented possession. (No extra charge; of course, for all this.)

"HOME SWEET HOME"

NO, "Home Sweet Home" is not the name of a picture, although I believe there was a picture by that title once upon a time. It is, in this instance, the caption for Chicago, which is "Home Sweet Home" to me and about as well equipped with desirable and undesirable aspects as any other home or any other place. It is of the latter that I beg leave to speak at this time.

Particularly, I beg leave to speak of the mysterious manner in which Chicago theatre-owners select the pictures which they exhibit to those several of us who must attend these theatres more or less regularly if rents are to be paid and light bills met. As one who has attended them rather more than less for the past several years, I wish to enter sundry complaints.

To begin with, I object to the apparent plan of saving up all the Spanish pictures for a year and then shooting them at us in succession. I mean this objection, of course, to apply also to the practice of doing likewise with the French farces, the Wild Westerns, with the college comics, the slapstick features, the mystery thrillers, the spectacular specials—and you can distend the list at your leisure. I use the word "apparent" in describing plan for it is inconceivable that the theatre men think all this out and do the thing purposefully. It seems inconceivable that anyone, much less the theatremen of the town that has built the greatest theatres in the world, should consider this a good policy.

The way this works out is somewhat as follows. It has become impossible to attend more than three or four theatres a week without seeing practically duplicate pictures. I consider this more than a personal calamity. To wit:

If it is possible to attend three theatres weekly without running into boredom, and that's about as much as can be done at this time, the average attendance of the individual is limited to three times weekly. (As a matter of fact it dwindles to less than that, of course.) But—and here's my story—if it were possible to attend the theatre seven times a week without being bored, the average attendance might be brought up from the present once to three or four times. And if that wouldn't mean more money, what would?

I speak, of course, of Chicago. But I think the same condition obtains wherever there are enough theatres to sustain it. I think, even, that exhibitors in the lesser cities give too little thought to this variation of successive attractions. I think, lastly, that here lies a more profitable field for thought than in any of the dozens of other places where people in the trade are accustomed to looking for profit.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

IT was with a surging emotion, if I may speak strongly, that I perused the columns of "What the Picture Did for Me" in last week's issue. Here, alongside the wholehearted reports of all the old regulars, were equally wholehearted reports from the new members of the family. The great cause of free speech had gained new supporters. The great work of "What the Picture Did for Me" had gained, overnight, a new reserve strength, a new power in the field.

The testimony of one who has beheld the influence of the original reports department at work over a substantial period of years may be interesting. I have had, by reason of my efforts along a parallel line, an extremely advantageous viewpoint from which to witness the effect of these reports upon pictures.

I have seen, for instance, pictures shrink from extreme lengths to comfortable footage. The reports of exhibitors, more plainly than anything else, told Hollywood that this change had to come.

I have seen the dirt go out of pictures. This change had been preached from the eminences of official filmdom, without avail. It has been talked of by trick writers, special writers, experts of all kinds. It was made only when the exhibitors, each and every one repeating the comment of his neighbor, convinced Hollywood that it had to be made.

I have seen Westerns come into favor, I have seen the long slapsticks dwindle in importance, I have seen nobodies brought into sudden stardom and stars reduced to immediate obscurity, all because the exhibitors agreed that these things should come to pass. Exhibitor will is law, inexorable, and it is expressed through "What the Picture Did for Me." There is no more vital influence in all picturedom, and no saner one.

"BUTTONS"

YOUNG Mr. (nec Master) Coogan is aided by Ralph Spence's captions and a trans-Atlantic liner in his efforts to make "Buttons" an intriguing picture, and the thing does get interesting along toward the end. In the early footage, however, it drags quite drearily, and it doesn't amount to a whole lot altogether. Rather too bad, too, for it looked as though Jackie were going to weather the adolescent period nicely.

In this venture Jackie's a page (the captions add "boy") aboard a liner that, you're sure before the picture's really got going, is to be wrecked at a suitable juncture. He idolizes the captain, and a pug who is aboard as trainer, and resents the captain's fiancée's intrigue with another member of the cast. Lots of comedy is mixed up with this somewhat serious central thread of the yarn, but the wreck (it's an iceberg off Southampton—where a probably sea-wise friend of mine says they don't thrive) brings everything to what old-fashioned fictionists referred to as "a pretty pass," and so to the merry closeup and all that.

Not Jackie's best picture, by several, but not his worst either. He looks quite shipshape in the buttons he wears, however, and after all, he's Jackie.

Incorporated in this department of practical showmanship of Exhibitors Herald are the Moving Picture World departments, "Selling the Picture to the Public," which was established September 23, 1911, by Epes Winthrop Sargent, and "Better Business Builders."

A. D. Baker, Lockhart, Tex., M. B. I. No. 1

Hats off to M. B. I. No. 1, A. D. Baker of the Baker theatre, Lockhart, Texas.. Baker's "My Best Idea" was the first to reach "The Theatre" after last week's announcement of the formation of the M. B. I. club. For this reason he is entitled to the honor of being M. B. I. No. 1, but "The Theatre believes that after you have read Baker's "My Best Idea" you will all agree that he deserves this distinction also from the standpoint of the excellence of his "My Best Idea." It boosted business for him. It will for you also.

The next "My Best Idea" will appear in a coming issue. Watch for M. B. I. No. 2. Will it be yours?

"My Best Idea" No. 1

By A. D. Baker

SOME months ago patrons of my theatre at Lockhart, Texas, were astonished to see a full sized skeleton hanging to one side of the screen on the stage of my theatre. A spotlight played on this gruesome exhibit. When asked what it was for I replied, "That's the great mystery." Nothing could induce me to give out more information.

A. D. Baker
M. B. I. No. 1

For several nights this skeleton hung in full view of the audience. Then one night a slide announced "Baker's Nerve Night—Your Opportunity to Show How Much Nerve You Possess."

Several nights after this slide was first exhibited, I made a talk from the stage, announcing that I had decided to see how much nerve my patrons had. "You have often heard it said that such and such a person has a lot of 'nerve'. Now we are going to see who has nerve enough to come up and open this Mystery Box." As I said mystery box, it was the cue for the curtains to part, and reveal a large black box on which had been painted a skull and crossbones.

I explained that this Mystery Box was to be opened by a patron of my theatre on a certain night. What was in it I refused to reveal, but something would be in it for the person with nerve enough to open it.

On the advertised night the house was packed. The orchestra played a funeral march, and the curtains parted, revealing the Mystery Box, skull and crossbones, and the skeleton dangling from a cord nearby. The stage was dressed in black curtains, and all in all the view presented was anything but reassuring. It was almost ghastly! Sighs and shudders could be heard from all parts of the audience.

"Who has nerve enough to pull the rope and see what is inside?"

"Let no one come forward unless he has plenty of N-E-R-V-E, and can take a joke with a smile," I announced from the stage.

When the Albee theatre, Booklyn, played the Pathe picture, "Dress Parade," starring William Boyd, a fine tieup was made with the U. S. Army, and this special display of army equipment was used near the theatre to attract passersby. (See story on page 41.)

No one came. I talked some more. Still no one came. I stressed the need for nerve and good nature, asking no one to come up unless he or she could take a joke gracefully.

Finally the audience began daring a certain young man to show his nerve. He gingerly approached the stage. When he finally reached center stage I handed him a huge revolver and said, "Here's your protection, pull the string and when the box falls open, if it is something to Eat, EAT IT, if it is something to KISS, KISS it, if it is SOMETHING TO SHOOT, WHY SHOOT IT."

He pulled the string. The box fell open. On the end of the rope or string was a note addressed to "The Nerviest Person in Town." The note said, "Please accept this $10 bill with compliments of The Baker Theatre." He was persuaded to read the note in a loud voice to the audience.

When he had finished reading the note the audience howled with delight. Everybody was tickled to death, and I had pulled in at least a week of capacity business. The stunt worked so well that I announced another "Nerve Night," promising something different in the box this time.

On the second "Nerve Night" there was a packed house and when I called for volunteers a great crowd rushed to the stage. One woman, a good natured sort of person, who didn't mind a joke, reached the stage first. I went through all the hocus pocus of warning her, handed her the revolver and told her to "Pull." On the end of the string was one old, tattered woman's stocking. The audience screamed and howled again with even more delight than on the first night. The woman took the joke gracefully, and I had packed 'em in again.

In order to keep from hurting anyone's feelings I had planted a man behind the curtains to substitute a valuable gift in place of the old stocking, in the event some prominent or dignified woman reached the stage first. But as it happened the woman who did reach the stage didn't mind the burlesque at her expense, and everything went off happily. This was one of the most talked of stunts, the cheapest and perhaps the best box office draw I ever used, and I have used many of them.

Albee Theatre Ties Up With Army for "Dress Parade" Run

Pathe's picture, "Dress Parade," starring William Boyd, offers many good exploitation angles, and fine advantage was made of them by the Albee theatre, Brooklyn, when it ran the picture recently.

Trailers, heralds, 24-sheets, 3-sheets, and 1-sheets were used as advance advertising. Cutouts, art posters and special art panels were used in the lobby. The theatre lobby and marquee were attractively decorated in bunting and flags. Advance newspaper stories and illustrations were obtained.

But the outstanding feature of the exploitation campaign was a tieup effected with the recruiting section of the Army's Second Corps Area located at Governors Island. Permission was obtained from the Transit commission, the Highway Commissioner of Brooklyn and the Interborough Rapid Transit company for the erection of a wooden platform, 40 feet long, 18 feet wide, and 50 inches high, over a subway ventilator in Albee Square. This location is in the heart of downtown Brooklyn and lies between the Albee theatre and the largest department store.

Through the commandants of Forts Totten and Hamilton, the largest searchlights the Army has, and the largest device for detecting the approach of enemy aeroplanes were obtained and these were placed on the platform mentioned above. The Army furnished two crews of soldiers to man the equipment.

Banners 40 feet long were placed on two sides of the platform, extending to the ground, and two others, 18 feet long, were placed on the other two sides. These read, "See William Boyd in 'Dress Parade' at the Albee."

The ray of the searchlight could be seen at a distance of 30 miles, and thousands of persons on their way home from business were attracted to the display. Just as daylight disappeared the crews went into action and entertained the crowds by manning the equipment and explaining the workings of the light, the listening device and the generator trucks which fed the equipment with power.

Thousands of people who passed by overhead in the elevated trains, and persons on their way to various subway stations and department stores in the vicinity were attracted to this display which proved to be an excellent medium of exploiting the picture.

Of course such an exploitation is impossible in small towns, but there are few towns that do not have some sort of military organization with which a tieup can be made on "Dress Parade." The Legion, the National Guard company and Boy Scouts are a few of the organizations that can help you put over the picture. If there is a graduate of West Point in your town get a story from him for the papers, and send him a special invitation to see the picture. You can get an advance story from him about his experience at West Point, and then another about what he thought of the picture.

When the picture played at the Palace-Orpheum theatre in Milwaukee, the attendance of General Charles King, said to be the oldest living graduate of West Point, was the highlight of the engagement. At every show the U. S. Army had two sentries stationed in front of the theatre and gave further cooperation through the posting of 50 recruiting "Dress Parade" one-sheets.

Rarely does one run across such beautiful hand lettering as in these three, two-column ads from the Brooklyn Mark-Strand theatre. Every letter in each of the ads is hand lettered and together they make a pleasing whole, and demonstrate how much more effective hand lettering is than type in such ads, but in spite of the fine lettering and layout, each ad carries too much information. Notice how the theatre name is varied in layout. Here the gray "S" proves more effective than the black one for the emphasis is thrown on the name of the picture rather than the design as is the case of the ad with the black "S."

Have You Sent in Your "My Best Idea;" M. B. I. Club Scores

Already "The Theatre's" M. B. I. club has won the approval of exhibitors. A number of letters have come in praising the new club and containing "My Best Ideas."

If you failed to see last week's announcement of the M. B. I. club, get your last week's EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD and acquaint yourself with this new feature of "The Theatre."

The M. B. I. club has been started to give exhibitors new and money-making exploitation plans. It can be successful only if you send in your "My Best Ideas," so get out your lead pencil and a piece of paper and jot down your "My Best Idea," and send it in. Just relate it like you would if you were talking to another exhibitor when you are talking over the stunts you have pulled.

Check Your Advertising

At about this time the wise theatre manager is dopping out his advertising and exploitation campaigns for the coming season. He knows that the next few months are wonderful business months. He knows that his theatre is booked with a wonderful array of attractions. And he's determined to get all the business possible out of his community. Big campaigns are about to pop, no doubt.

But first let us each do a bit of careful checking of advertising media and expenditures.

CHECK YOUR NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING. Perhaps, with a bit more care in laying out copy, or better understanding between yourself and the display compositor, you may be able to put across a better sales argument in smaller space than you are now buying.

CHECK YOUR BILL POSTING. Maybe you're not getting the class distribution you think you are. Maybe some of your locations have deteriorated in value and can be cut out without hurting business. That would make for a definite saving in purchasing accessories as well as in the cost of posting.

CHECK YOUR SCREEN ANNOUNCEMENTS. Are trailers always received on time for proper showing? If not, why not? Do you use slides on special productions and events? Do you make them up with care? And do you attach sufficient importance to them when laying out your show schedule?

CHECK YOUR LOBBY DISPLAY. Are you using the sort of posters, stills, lithos, inserts or art panels most appropriate to your theatre and patronage? Are you buying this stuff as economically as you can?

CHECK YOUR PRINTED PROGRAM. Are you getting as much as possible for ad space in programs? Have you as many advertisers as you can get? Can't you improve the program typographically? If you did, it would be a better general advertising messenger for your theatre, and would become a more attractive medium for the prospective advertiser to purchase space in.

CHECK YOUR BALLYHOO, STUNT AND THROWAWAY ADVERTISEMENTS. In each case be sure before you go ahead that the possible box office results will justify the necessary expenditure.

Contest to Determine Origin of "7th Heaven" Phrase Fills House

An exploitation stunt that reached far beyond expectations and which interested practically the entire population of Ames, Ia., was recently brought to a triumphant conclusion during the showing of "Seventh Heaven" at the Capitol theatre in that town. The stunt can easily be used by any theatre in the country with similar results.

Joe Gebracht, manager of the Capitol, launched the contest in order to interest patrons in the name of the picture and, as a natural follow, in the film itself. Results were perfectly satisfactory and capacity houses witnessed the showings.

The question put to the public was, "Where did the phrase, 'Seventh Heaven' originate and what does it mean?" A prize of $5 was offered by the management for the most comprehensive answer and the Ames Tribune, through which the contest was sponsored, gave a pair of season tickets.

The stunt involved, not only the submerged third, intellectually speaking, who were purely curious about it all, but also the high-brow element who didn't want to be weighed in the balance and found wanting should some inquisitive person appeal to their literary and story, made an instant appeal. The library was besieged. Teachers, club women and church groups vied with each other in verifying the origin of the high sounding title.

Some had a vague idea that the words were quoted from Shakespeare and other were certain that the Bible held the secret. Some accused Sherwood Anderson, and even Mohammed was brought into the discussion as a possible source. Literature of all sorts was examined for a clue.

The elusive phrase set hundreds of brainwaves in motion until there was a veritable typhoon of research enthusiasm sweeping the mid-west college town.

Several club women, in talking with Gebracht, declared that, although they had not entered the contest, they were having a pretty good time chasing the intriguing title to its lair. Literature classes argued and history classes thumbed their texts but it was students of the Bible who finally walked off with the honors.

Too many times excellent pictures with vague or apparently meaningless titles have taken heavy toll from the box office receipts in the small towns. A good deal of explanation has been necessary oftentimes to put over splendid examples of cinema art because there was nothing in the experience of the average patron which reacted to the words of the titles. Take for instance, "If Winter Comes," "Beau Geste" and "Mare Nostrum." It is safe to wager that less than 40 per cent of regular patrons were familiar with the sources of such titles. The rest of the 60 per cent had to be educated up to the titles if the runs spelled dollars.

In this case however, the management had, not only the advantage of an excellent picture with which to satisfy the appetites of the patrons after sufficiently whetting them in the unique contest, but, in addition, it had the attention of the better class of patrons whose confidence in the theatre was augmented after they had seen the noted film. And again, the church element had a hand in solving the problem set up in the contest, and any manager knows how valuable an asset that can be, especially in certain localities.

A. D. Baker, who becomes M. B. I. No. 1, opened the first moving picture theatre in Lockhart, Texas, years ago, and has operated the Baker theatre there ever since. By such good exploitations as the one printed here, which he regards as his "My Best Idea," he has kept all competition out of his town and has made his theatre a paying proposition year in and year out. The story of another of Baker's stunts was printed in the August 13, 1927, issue of the former "Exhibitors Herald."

Clergy Sees "Ben Hur"

When C. W. Miller, manager of the Hippodrome theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, played "Ben Hur," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer special, he held a special Saturday morning matinee for clergymen, officials and teachers of the public schools and newspapermen. Also sisters from a local nunnery saw the picture at this time. The matinee was a big success and one preacher delivered a sermon on the picture, declaring that the picture "is one of the best sermons ever delivered."

"I find this monthly calendar a good way to advertise," says A. G. Miller of the Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb. "I use my own copy and get 1,000 printed in two color work for $9. By putting prices under each picture my patrons know how much the show is going to cost before hand."

All this advertising costs the city of Chicago not one penny, since it is used by Pathe to tell Broadwayites that "Chicago," the Pathe special, starring Phyllis Haver and Victor Varconi, is running at the Gaity theatre. Pathe's "Chicago" is the film interpretation of the stage play by the same name that had such a successful run in New York and other cities.

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

ADVENTURER, THE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama, with Tim McCoy, Dorothy Sebastian, Charles Delaney, George Cowl, Michael Visaroff, Gayne Whitman, Alex Melesh, and Katherine Block. Directed by Viachetslav Tourjansky. Released December 10. Length 4,709.

TYPE AND THEME: An adventure story of a South American revolution. McCoy manages an American-owned mine in Costa Ora. When a revolution headed by Rafael threatens de Silva's government, McCoy rescues his daughter, Dolores, and takes her to his mine headquarters. His feigned friendliness toward the rebels deceives Dolores, and hearing that her father's life depends on her presence at the palace, she runs away. At the palace she finds Rafael in power. McCoy follows and succeeds in replacing the rebel troops with federal soldiers. As the federal troops are to begin an attack, he sees Rafael escaping with Dolores. A strenuous and perilous chase through the mountains results in Rafael's death and Dolores' rescue.

ADVENTURE MAD: Paramount-UFA drama, with Eric Barclay, Lillian Hall-Davis, Nils Asther, Nina Vanna, Albert Steinruck, Paul Graetz. Directed by Lothar Mendes. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: The cast, with the exception of Asther, is not known in this country, but Director Mendes has made two American pictures. The tale concerns a wealthy Englishman who wants adventure. A collector of clocks, he mysteriously receives one with a message telling him to listen to the number of times the cuckoo cries and he will thus be led to a buried treasure in Cairo, Egypt. He acts accordingly and after following the cuckoo cries through a number of adventures, he locates the treasure, which turns out to be alligators. He is cured of his adventure madness.

DESERT OF THE LOST, THE: Pathe Western, with Wally Wales, Peggy Montgomery, William J. Dyer, Edward Cecil, Richard Neill, Kelly Gafford, Ray Murro, George Magrill, and Charles Whitaker. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Released December 18. Length 4,933.

TYPE AND THEME: Wales is a Montana cowboy in this one, but has to leave the state because of being unable to prove that in killing a man, he did so in self-defense. He lands in Mexico, where he is befriended by Dolores, daughter of a renegade American, who is trying to marry her to a Chinese bandit because of his secret gold mine. Jim defends the girl and in escaping from a trap set for him by her father, captures the bandit gang and finds the gold mine. A man following him whom he had thought a detective proves to be a friend trying to tell him that the charges against him in Montana have been lifted.

FASHION MADNESS: Columbia drama, with Claire Windsor, Reed Howes, Laska Winter, Donald McNamee, and William E. Tooker. Directed by Louis J. Gasnier. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: In which a young man goes to a lot of trouble to make a woman out of the frivolous girl he loves. Aroused by her insinuations regarding Tanaka, daughter of his guide at his hunting lodge, he refuses to let Gloria off his yacht and takes her to the lodge. There the two women are contrasted. One day Vic returns to rescue them from a threatening forest fire, and Gloria, fearing his steps are Tanaka's, shoots through the window, wounding Vic. The women start with Vic on a sled to the settlement. Tanaka falls over a cliff, and to save Vic, cuts herself loose and falls to her death. Gloria carries on successfully, coming out of the ordeal a serious woman.

HERO FOR A NIGHT, A: Universal comedy-drama, with Glenn Tryon, Patsy Ruth Miller, Lloyd Whitlock, Burr McIntosh, Bob Milash, Ruth Dwyer, and Bobby. Directed by William J. Craft. Released December 12. Length, 5,711.

TYPE AND THEME: This one's almost slapstick, so the drama part of the classification is only formal. Hiram, resident of an Eastern summer resort, builds a plane and takes a correspondence course in flying, in order to enter an air race in Europe. Sloan, head of a shaving cream company, his daughter Mary, and Sloan's secretary and nurse arrive. The latter two are after Sloan's money. Hiram falls for Mary but receives no encouragement. He, however, is undaunted and forces himself into Sloan's party for a French aviator. Then Mary learns of the intrigue against her father. She tells Hiram and they get Sloan into the plane and start for New York. They end up in Russia, which is a great aid to the happiness of everybody.

LAND OF THE LAWLESS: Pathe Western, with Jack Padjan, Tom Santschi, Joseph W. Rickson, Charles Clary, Vivian Winston, Frank Clark, Duke R. Lee, and Otto Fries. Directed by Thomas Buckingham. Released December 25. Length 4,131.

TYPE AND THEME: Padjan's first Western as a star, made under the direction of Thomas Buckingham, former Tom Mix director. Padjan wins a job with Kelter, gang leader, by a cut of the cards and soon thereafter falls in love with Polly, whom Kelter also loves. Nettled by Padjan's interference, Kelter has him made captive, then starts terrorizing Polly's household. Padjan escapes and rescues Polly for himself.

LITTLE BUCKAROO, THE: FBO Western, with Buzz Barton, Melbourn Morante, Kenneth McDonald, Peggy Shaw, Al Ferguson, Walter Maley, Robert Burns, Florence D. Lee, and James Welch. Directed by Louis King. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Barton, the hard-riding juvenile, aids in the capture of bandits in this one. As Red Hepner, he and his friend Toby find Crawford, a prospector, dead in the desert, with a note asking the finders to care for his daughter, who is in school in the East. Going to an inn to meet their friend Pemberton, they save Ann Crawford on the way during a stage holdup. Pemberton marries the girl to save her from ruffians. Then Red and Toby ride the stage coach to confirm their suspicions that the owner is responsible for the robberies. After perilous procedure they capture the gang and bring them to town just as Pemberton is about to be lynched as the bandit leader. The captives name the stage owner as the culprit, whereupon Ann holds Pemberton to his marriage contract.

ON YOUR TOES: Universal comedy-drama, with Reginald Denny, Barbara Worth, Hayden Stevenson, Frank Hagney, Mary Carr, Gertrude Howard, and George West. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Released November 27. Length 5,918.

TYPE AND THEME: Denny has the type of role he likes in this one, being, at least eventually, a fighter. And there's a ring battle for a finish thrill. Sullivan, fight manager, is insulted by the champion and vows to get a man to defeat him. Going with his daughter, Mary, to the home of former champion Evans, he finds Evans' son a sissy. But Mary falls for him and Young Evans goes to New York with them and opens a dancing school. Mary gets him to be a taxi driver, and getting into a fight with a pugilist, Evans knocks him out. He turns fighter and ultimately makes everyone happy by licking the champion.

SALLY IN OUR ALLEY: Columbia drama, with Shirley Mason, Richard Arlen, Alec B. Francis, Paul Panzer, William H. Strauss, Kathlyn Williams, Florence Turner, and Harry Crocker. Directed by Walter Lang. Released September 3. Length 5,892.

TYPE AND THEME: A poor girl goes to live with her rich aunt—and a title made famous by the song. Sally is the daughter of a woman who had been cut off by her parents for marrying a poor man. They live in a New York tenement, taking in washing. One day Sally returns home to find her mother dead. But her mother had written to a rich sister, who takes Sally to her home. Sally's lover, Jimmie, is told to stay away, which increases Sally's hate for the snobbish rich. Leaving her aunt, she learns that Jimmie is sailing for China and rushes to the pier, arriving just as the boat pulls out. Jimmie, however, had decided to stay near Sally, stepping from concealment to take Sally in his arms.

SERENADE: Paramount drama, with Adolphe Menjou, Kathryn Carver, Lawrence Grant, Lina Basquette, Martha Franklin. Directed by Harry D'Abbadie D'Arrast. Released December 24. Length 5,209.

TYPE AND THEME: Their dying love is reanimated by the sound of his love song, which she had inspired. Rossi, Viennese musician, has not composed a single hit until he meets Gretchen. With her as inspiration, he soon becomes famous and they marry. Then he tires of her, being enamoured of a ballerina at the opera where he conducts. Gretchen is heartbroken and leaves him, throwing Rossi into a fit of remorse, for he realizes that he still loves her. Tracing her to a room in a cafe one night, he implores her to return to him, but she is adamant. The sound of the song she inspired, however, wins her assent.

THAT'S MY DADDY: Universal comedy-drama, with Reginald Denny, Barbara Kent, Lillian Rich, Tom O'Brien, Armand Kaliz, Jane La Verne, Mathilde Brundage and others. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: A typical Denny vehicle, exploiting the "regular guy" that is liked so well in our country. He is supposed to marry a society girl, whom he doesn't care for at all. But a motorcycle cop leads him to better things by believing his alibi that he was rushing to his daughter in a hospital. There Jimmy makes good his bluff by taking home an orphan girl, who just before the scheduled wedding, cries "Daddy" to him, thereby shooing off his fiancée. Jimmy celebrates his loss by marrying the little girl's nurse.

WIZARD, THE: Fox mystery-drama, with Edmund Lowe, Leila Hyams, Gustav von Seyffertitz, E. H. Galvert, Norman Trevor, Barry Norton, Oscar Smith, Perle Marshall, Richard Frazier, George Kotsenaros and Maude Turner Gordon. Directed by Richard Slosson. Released December 11. Length 5,629.

TYPE AND THEME: Adapted from Gaston Leroux's "Baloo," this one develops sinister proceedings with the aid of an actor in ape's clothing. A scientist, Coriolis, had suffered the death of his son in the electric chair, and to avenge him upon the judge and former district attorney, has trained an ape to work his will. At a birthday party given by Judge Webster for his daughter, Anne, to which his friends, the attorney and the scientist are invited, the mysterious business commences. A newspaper reporter, Gordon, after both judge and attorney have strangely disappeared, goes to Anne's room and discovers the ape. He kills the beast, and for that or some other reason, reaches a sentimental understanding with Anne.

Your Classified Ad Will Do the Work!

Exhibitors Herald has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organists all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 5c per word. See this week's classified page. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.

PRESS SHEETS

CALL OF THE HEART, THE (Universal: In parts of the country where dogs are used for pulling sleds in the winter, a mush race might be a novel way of exploiting this picture. If there is no snow, have the dogs pull coaster wagons. A good topic for a newspaper essay contest would be "Why the dog is man's best friend," calling attention to Balto, the Alaskan dog that won international fame a few years ago by leading the team that transported antitoxin serum. In many towns there are dogs that everyone knows of because of some special characteristic or deed of service. Sponsor a contest and award prizes for the best essays on local dog heroes. It should not be difficult to arouse interest in such a proposition.

COHENS AND KELLYS IN PARIS, THE (Universal): Free passes might be given away to those whose names are Cohen or Kelly. Print these in your daily advertisements with the announcement that if the parties so named will present the ad at the box office they will be admitted free. A stage presentation could be used in the form of an Apache dance. Newspaper contests on the following topics could be run: "Why I Would Like to Live in Paris," "What I Did When I Visited Paris with the A. E. F." or "The History of the Eiffel Tower." Teasers and throwaways with these titles may be printed: "A Wife and an Artist's Model," "Paris Secrets," "C'est La Vie," "When in Paris," etc. You might address a letter to "Mr. Kelly or Mr. Cohen," and if the post office catches on and delivers the envelope to you, the story should get a break in the papers.

FASHION MADNESS (Columbia): The always interesting fashion show, exhibit, review, or whatever you want to call it, should be used with a picture like this whenever possible. Merchants will be glad to co-operate on this, and it is sure to help the fashion shops and also the box office. Arrange with a fashion shop for a series of window displays on the methods used to obtain the material used in making women's clothes. A stage setting for the picture can represent a huge fashion hook from which couples dressed in different period styles, can emerge and do a dance that is characteristic of the time.

FOURFUSHER, THE (Universal): This title suggests some good ideas for newspaper contests. The following are examples: "The Greatest Fourfusher I Ever Knew," "Why It Doesn't Pay to Be a Fourfusher," and "The Time I Was a Fourfusher." Copy for throwaways can read "Only a fourfusher will fail to get a kick out of 'The Fourfusher.' That's why you are requested to attend the theatre, (dates)," "Don't be a fourfusher. Come to the theatre, (dates) and find out why," "It's a shame the way fourfushers get away with murder. The fourfusher at the theatre lands a girl, a bank roll and a Rolls-Royce." "An ounce of fourfushing may be worth a ton of hard work. If you don't believe this see 'The Fourfusher' at the theatre You'll be surprised!"

HAM AND EGGS AT THE FRONT (Warner Bros.): A new suggestion in this press sheet is this: Supply the largest laundry in town with laundry shirt cardboards, with your advertisement printed on them; or, get their permission to have the copy printed on the cardboard used regularly by them. Put a stretcher near the box office with this notice placed over it, "Placed here for the convenience of our patrons who laugh themselves sick at 'Ham and Eggs at the Front.'" Perhaps some restaurant would be glad to co-operate with you in exploiting this picture with the idea of "ham and eggs." A colored jazz band would make a good stage act. The local Armour Company office may donate a "ham what am" to patrons holding lucky numbers.

LEIONNAIRES IN PARIS (FBO): Get American Legion tieups on this "dough" boy of comedies. Actual shots of the American Legion Convention in Paris are used in the picture. Have a special Legion Night, and if you wish, work it as a benefit show. Try to pull off a special Parisian dance act before each performance, and if possible get a Legion man to act as master of ceremonies, having him tell of some of his experiences during his second trip to France. Tieup with a newspaper and a shoe store, running a contest to find out who has the highest feet in town, and then have the shoe store donate a pair of shoes to the winner. If practical, get the town band to play at the evening performances; and whatever you do don't spoil the show by not having the proper type of music for it.

NO PLACE TO GO (First National): "Has Modern, Jazz-Mad Youth 'No Place to Go'?" and "Why the theatre is the BEST place to go anytime," are two ideas for newspaper contests. The following copy might be used in teasers, or in your regular ads: "Where you ain't, 'Romance is something which happens where you ain't,' Artemus Ward once opined, and it is this theme which is demonstrated in a very delightful fashion in 'No Place to Go,' a First National comedy-drama starring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, that is now playing at the theatre." Tieup with sporting goods stores selling golf outfits, clubs, etc., prepare the following "See what happens to a golfer when he is marooned on a cannibal island with nothing to do but practice golf strokes."

OUTCAST SOULS (Sterling): Tieup with the Salvation Army, or with any aid society, in admitting free all those sanctioned by the society as being too poor to get entertainment. Run this fact in all your ads and in as many other ways as possible. Teasers can read, "Is Old Age Coming on? Don't Be an Outcast Soul. Wouldn't you enjoy seeing the show by that name?" "Do Children Forget?" etc. Tieup with the shoe repairers with the copy, "If you have any 'Outcast Soles' we will repair them better than anyone else." For tieups with other merchants use the copy, "Are Your Parents 'Outcast Souls?' Perhaps you are not thoughtful enough of them. Buy them a (article)..... and then take them to see OUTCAST SOULS which is now playing at the theatre." Get some of the youngsters who have "scooters" to hang signs advertising the film on their backs. This would be inexpensive and would attract attention in a different manner.

RAWHIDE KID, THE (Universal): "Because there's a laugh sequence of a Jewish peddler drawing a gun and forcing the cowboys to buy his entire stock of clothing, pans, toilet articles, etc., in this picture, perhaps a local women's club would welcome the opportunity to hold a rummage sale in your lobby," says the press sheet. Or, arrange a special "Hoot Gibson Day"; or give away gilded horse shoes to the first one hundred boys in line, at a certain performance that has been advertised. Get the bank to display a cowboy hat full of pennies, announcing a guessing contest, the one guessing nearest the correct number of pennies, to be given so much to start an account with. Sponsor a horse race; or a contest to see who can make the most words from the letters in Hoot Gibson's name.

RED RIDERS OF CANADA (FBO): Put the famous slogan of the Northwest Mounted of Canada to work for you, for example: An amusing newspaper contest that should guarantee attention is an essay competition for men or women on "How Did Your Wife, 'Get Her Man'?" Tack cards can read: "Red Lips, Red Blood, Red Coats. See Patsy Ruth Miller in 'The Red Riders of Canada' now playing at the theatre." A window tieup for a railroad company can carry this copy: "Tour the Canadian Northwest. 'You'll want to, after seeing the magnificent scenery in 'Red Riders of Canada.'" A very appropriate and instructive feature story can be run in the local papers previous to the showing of the picture. This can be a short history of the Royal Northwest Mounted or some true stories of their ability and daring.

SAILORS' WIVES (First National): The best copy presented for advertising this film is the following: "SUSPECT YOU WERE GOING BLIND IN A MONTH? Suppose you were a wealthy girl,—member of the smart set—beautiful—clever. Suppose you were suddenly told that you had only one month left before your eyes were forever to be darkened by total blindness? WHAT WOULD YOU DO? Would you calmly resign yourself to your fate and watch the days slip through your fingers until you passed into eternal night—OR would you uproot yourself from everything that bound you to your old life, fling discretion to the winds and try to cram into your last hours a lifetime of frenzied gaiety? This is the powerful theme of SAILORS' WIVES, a First National picture, with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, that is now playing at the theatre."

SAN FRANCISCO NIGHTS (Gotham): This press sheet has the following to say about exploitation: "Exploitation does not necessarily mean 'stunt' advertising. Sometimes in a particular community such methods have a reverse action. They keep the people away. It is up to the individual showman to know his patronage and how best to appeal to them in such a way that they will respond. Advance stories tied up with the proper amount of advertising, plus the adequate use of posters, photographs, heralds, etc., will often turn the trick of a box office sell out as well as some sensational stunt that merely brings a smile but that does not sell any tickets." A suggestion for a newspaper contest is the question, "How did a certain section of San Francisco get the title of 'Barbary Coast'?" This is the locale for the picture.

SIREN, THE (Columbia): Place over the marquee some rocks and the figure of a mermaid painted on canvas or compo-board with this inscription, "The sirens of old lured sailors to destruction on the rocks. See how the modern siren works, at this theatre " A mock trial might be staged before each performance, by debating clubs or high school students. Print "The Siren" on regular playing cards and distribute them with the announcement that the person bringing in five of them will be admitted free, and the person holding the highest hand will be given a prize.

WAGON SHOW (First National): Here is a little stunt that is worth a try. Put a peanut in an envelope marked in large letters "ONE PEANUT," and also inclose a small slip reading: "One peanut doesn't make a circus! If you want to see a real circus, come to the now and see 'The Wagon Show,' starring Ken Maynard." Tieup with an automobile sales agency and use this copy: "After you've seen 'The Wagon Show' come in and see our Auto Show at 15 Main St.," etc. For those who dress their ushers in different costumes according to the type of picture, domino or clown suits can be used. A lot of clever fake stuff for the lobby can be worked up as a "wild animal" exhibit.

Have you seen one of these before? It is a 12" x 18" "flash" used by Paramount to herald pictures that are in production. On the other side of the sheet the rest of the cast is described.

Incorporated in this department of Moving Picture World is the Exhibitors Herald department, "Available Attractions."

The key to abbreviations used in denoting the type of picture:

- C—Comedy
- D—Drama
- R—Romance
- F—Farce
- M—Melodrama
- W—Western
- My—Mystery

Where the picture is a comedy-drama, comedy melodrama, etc., there is a combination of these abbreviations. Stars denote reissues.

The dates prior to January 7 published under the "Review" column are those of the issues of Moving Picture World in which the pictures were reviewed. The January 7 and subsequent dates are those of the issues of EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD in which "Service Talks" have been published on pictures.

The dates prior to January 7 published under the "New Pictures" column are those of the issues of EXHIBITORS HERALD in which "New Pictures" information was printed. The January 7 and subsequent dates are those of the issues of EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD in which this information will be printed.

Suggests Big Theme for Film

AMASA, MICH.—To THE EDITOR: New Year's greeting to the staff. It's been quite a spell since I have contributed anything to the HERALD, which I am pleased to note has now been combined with the WORLD. Mr. Quigley is to be complimented on this merger and the trade as well.

Business has been quiet for the past year and so I have not been so busy that I couldn't sit back and review the march of the industry, reading much in the trade papers on the lines as well as between.

In my humble opinion (with apologies to William Randolph Hearst) the industry has produced no outstanding picture since "The Birth of a Nation," with the single exception of "The Ten Commandments," which has had that something in human appeal as either of these. Just why this is true, at least to me, I haven't been able to figure out unless it is because the producers have been too busy with mass production on a lot of program subjects, some of which were labelled specials and ballyhooed as $2 toppers on Broadway.

What follows herewith is something that has been on my chest for some time and I am passing it on for what it is worth. Perchance it may give someone in the industry something that should prove to be the outstanding achievement of the industry for all time.

Produce a picture using the second coming of Christ as the theme. Scriptural references will show that the world (and by this is meant the planet Earth) is now traveling in that general direction with a wide-open throttle. If such a theme is correctly handled it will make a big, lasting smash as a picture with a tremendous human appeal and at the same time serve as a good influence upon our fellow creatures who are or are becoming careless or neglectful of the fact that the Kingdom of Christ will not always be in the offing.

Just when this will occur, of course, no one can tell. Nevertheless, the Scriptures will reveal with just ordinary perusal that many of the prophecies therein recorded are ripe for fulfillment.

The industry needs a picture of this type. No less does the world need it.

Who would I pick to produce it? After careful consideration I would select Cecil B. DeMille. D. W. Griffith would be my second choice. This is no reflection on D. W.'s ability nor my opinion of his ability.

Such an undertaking would be beset with problems but these would fade into insignificance when compared with the tremendous success that would attend the production of this supreme cinema achievement.

I know that some of my fellow exhibitors will smile and say, "Pete's got religion." Not any more than before and I'm a darn long way from being a saint. I'm only an ornery sinner like the rest of you, but the Scriptures are open to anyone who chooses to read and if you think I'm off my trolley just take and blow the dust off the old family Bible and "Search ye the Scriptures." Then after you have studied the Works you will probably develop some ideas of how this job should be put across.

The whole matter lends itself to endless possibilities and by the same token it may be rendered worthless unless caution is used with strict Scriptural interpretations. There lies the secret of the success or failure of such a picture.

I am anxious to see your first issue of the combined HERALD AND WORLD. It has been my pleasure to read both of these papers for some time. The HERALD, however, has been my old standby and for that reason I am glad that the combination will be under the leadership of Mr. Quigley.

With kind regards and best wishes for the New Year.—PIONEER PETE, Pioneer Theatre, Amasa, Mich.

Now You've Started, Keep Up

MENARD, TEX.—To THE EDITOR: Happy New Year, HERALD, and congratulations on the new and combined HERALD-WORLD that will serve us this year and many more to come.

Haven't reported or written for a long time. Been just too darn busy. Notice where J. C. Jenkins is at last heading for Texas, hope he doesn't pass us up even if we never have written any poetry to the paper. Maybe his car will be named Colleen after he reads the current surveys just published.

Wonder how many of the boys used the situation of Christmas and New Year's falling on Sundays to try out their towns on the Sunday question? We did here. First time I ever ran Sunday shows. Most favorable comment in general. Most people wanted to know why we didn't keep it up.

Seems to me pictures as a whole have kept on a higher entertainment level than ever before. Maybe I'm just too optimistic, but really there are fewer poor ones than usual, even though I read plenty of howls in the department from time to time. Nineteen twenty-eight will doubtless bring about as many changes as the past year, Metro's advertising continues to be the worst and First National's the best on the market, rentals will try to reach higher levels, everybody will make bigger and yet bigger and better film. We poor chaps will make less and less, or do we?

Very best wishes to everybody in the office of THE trade paper.—HENRY REEVE, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.

St. Louis Setting Seat Record

seats, and after that the worry of the management ceased. The projection machines were placed on a wooden platform near the entrance and no effort was made to fire-proof the operator's booth. Later the building department banned the tents and forced the erection of brick and concrete houses.

St. Louis also pioneered in motion picture production. O. T. Crawford, who had opened a film exchange here in 1907, conceived the idea of making pictures for exhibition in his own theatres. Eddie Dustin was his righthand man. Crawford built such houses as the Novelty, Union, Kings, Bremen and Shenandoah.

Skouras Brothers Start in 1914

Skouras Brothers Enterprises, which operates more motion picture theatres in St. Louis than any other organization, was started in 1914, but not under that name. In that year Spyros and Charles Skouras purchased a half interest in the Olympia at 1420 Market street. The theatre was incorporated for $20,000. Today Skouras Brothers Enterprises is interested directly or indirectly in 38 theatres in St. Louis and St. Louis county, with 52,974 seats and in 19 airdomes seating 31,878. Six of their theatres are closed at present.

While in 1906 it cost but $75 a week to operate, the present day first-run palaces such as Skouras' Ambassador and Missouri, Loew's State and the St. Louis theatre have weekly expenses of upwards of $20,000 and on the year must take in more than $1,000,000 each before they can figure on any profit.

Still Have Hope for Government Help in Far East Film Trade

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Authorization for employment by the department of commerce of a motion picture trade commissioner for the Far East has been refused by the House appropriations committee, and no fund for that work appears specifically in the department's appropriation bill. However, the funds for the department are increased under the general heading of "promoting commerce," and if a specific item is not put into the bill on the floor of the House and Senate, it may still be possible, it is thought, for the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce to undertake this work.

Besought by a large number of business representatives to make provision for various trade investigations, the committee declared that much of this work should be conducted by trade organizations.

The need for a film trade representative in the Far East was laid before the committee by Burt New, Washington representative of the Hays organization, and Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

It was pointed out by Dr. Klein that among the problems facing the trade in the Far East are a 25 per cent gross production tax under consideration in New South Wales and the Australian provision that 2,000 British films must be shown at each place. In India a committee is working on film legislation that will restrict business, and Japan and the Dutch East Indies are likewise engaged in efforts to a curtailment of American films, said Dr. Klein.

THE MOJAVE KID: Bob Steele—10%. December 30. Dandy picture. Steele will be a good one soon if they give him good stuff to work in. Five reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE MOJAVE KID: Bob Steele—This is a very good Western. Drew good and seemed to satisfy. Steele is very promising, if the rest of his pictures are as good as this one. Six reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

TERROR OF BAR X: Bob Custer—70%. Fair Western. Not much action until the last, but seems to hold interest. Five reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

CYCLONE OF THE RANGE: Tom Tyler—A very good Tyler picture but didn't seem to draw as good as some others. Played two nights to very small houses and lost money.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

CYCLONE OF THE RANGE: Tom Tyler—25%. December 9-10. Another good Tyler picture with little Frankie Darrow doing his part in a commendable way. Played two nights to very small houses and didn't make expenses. Five reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

FLAMING FURY: Ranger—36%. December 23-24. I believe that this is the best Ranger picture that we have played. The dog was kept busy doing something all through the picture and that is what my patrons like. Played two nights to small houses, due to Christmas entertainments, and made just a little above expenses. Five reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

SPLITTING THE BREEZE: Tom Tyler—40%. Very good but the kids sure missed little Frankie. Five reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—45%. November 25-26. Another good Thomson picture and pleased nearly everyone who saw it. Played two nights to fair houses and made some money. Six reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE SONORA KID: Special cast—Very good outdoor picture.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—18%. December 23-24. Good show. Just like all his other pictures, plenty of action, and Silver sure is the lead of the cast. Well, Fred, one more from F B O and then the price goes up on the Paramounts and maybe you'll not make as good a hit as you did

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given in report).

before. Good luck, Fred. Six reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—Another good one from Thomson and went over good. Played two nights to fair houses and came out some to the good. Have one more to play and then, I suppose, it's good-bye to Fred and Silver.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

MOULDERS OF MEN: Special cast—50%. December 28. This is a wonderful picture. More of a special than most so-called specials. Story great. Conway Tearle good. Frankie Darrow wonderful. Rex Lease and Margaret Morris fine. I played the picture as a program picture one day. If you haven't played it buy it and play it three days. It will give 100 per cent satisfaction to people that want real entertainment, clean and interesting.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA OR BUST: George O'Hara—30%. December 20. A fine little picture and went over in fine shape to a small house. Had vaudeville with this one and didn't get enough out of it to pay expenses. Five reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—Gene Stratton Porter's name drew what few we got, but was stormed out the second night. It did not please as well as her other works. Seven reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—We have a job in this business in trying to please them all, and this picture does not begin to complete the job. The folks who made this picture tried hard enough but the story they had to work with does not measure up to present day demands. Love scenes are too slushy and the younger set will titter right out loud at the stuff, while on the other hand the older patrons will tell you it is a good picture. So there you have it. The one likes it and the other does not. It does not have near the drawing power that other books of this writer have. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

SHANGHAI: Special cast—December 30. Small town exhibitors be on your guard. This is a story of Frisco's Barbary Coast; of booze, wild women and sea rats. The moral tone is very bad. It certainly gives the reformers a good chance to yell for censorship. A few more like this, and they'll get it. Seven reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

DON MIKE: Fred Thomson—Something different from the average Thomson, and seemed to please a little better. Did not draw as good as usual. Five reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

First National

ROSE OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Gilbert Roland-Mary Astor—50%. January 1-2. This is a good picture. Stars and cast fine. Story history, making a satisfactory entertainment to our audience. Gave satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore—10%. January 1. Fifteen below zero when I played this so I lost money. However, it is a typical Moore picture and will please her fans. Some patrons say that her pictures are all alike, starts as a poor girl of the streets and climbs to the top too often. Seven reels.—H. J. Eagan, American theatre, Wautoma, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NO PLACE TO GO: Mary Astor-Lloyd Hughes—15%. December 31. A pretty fair program picture.

Reports indented and printed in bold face are those contributed by members of Van's Gang, who reported to "Straight from the Shoulder Reports" in Moving Picture World prior to the merger.

A good cast of actors and you expect a little more than you get in this one. Seven reels.—H. J. Eagan, American theatre, Wautoma, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—Had a fair crowd the first night. Second night terrible. Sort of far fetched, but, of course, the old football game is won in the last minutes so the kids said it was okay.—H. L. Brown, Grande theatre, Port Allegany, Pa.—General patronage.

NO PLACE TO GO: Mary Astor-Lloyd Hughes. I have had the pleasure to see Mary Astor in many photoplays, but she never proved herself as capable as in "Rose of the Golden West" and her last one, "No Place to Go." This little picture is not credited by many as being anything worthwhile, but my patrons liked it better than anything I have had to offer in quite a spell, so you may know if my patrons liked it yours will like it also. Book it for a long run. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Murray-Conklin—52%. December 8. Still very cold. Picture is very entertaining. Conklin forgot to shut off the light in the barber shop part of the time when he was not using it, after the director had closeup of him doing so. The Scotch economy brought a hearty laugh, however.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

BROADWAY NIGHTS: Lois Wilson—A very good program picture that pleased fairly well to the few that came out to see it. However, made a little above expenses.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

BROADWAY NIGHTS: Lois Wilson—30%. December 2-3. A fine little program picture and, I think, pleased most everyone. Played two nights to small houses but came out a little to the good. Seven reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—44%. December 15. Second of Maynard's pictures, and as good as the first, but rain kept our folks away.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN SONORA: Ken Maynard—25%. November 18-19. A very good Western and seemed to please the few that came out. The Maynard pictures are good but don't draw here as they should for some reason. Six reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN SONORA: Ken Maynard—A dandy Western picture that pleased the majority of my patrons. Played two nights to very small houses and didn't make expenses. Maynard doesn't draw here like he should, for some reason.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE SEA TIGER: Milton Sills—37%. December 16-17. A good picture of the Sill's type and pleased nearly everyone who saw it. Played two nights to fair houses and came out a little to the good. Six reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE LOST WORLD: Special cast—64%. November 24. Sure thrilled them all right. Wonderful picture. Carnival opposition.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

BABE COMES HOME: Babe Ruth—December 27-28. This is a dandy little program picture and whether your patrons are baseball fans or not, it will please. There is not much baseball in it. As a matter of fact it is mostly comedy. This is a heluva time of the year to run a baseball picture, but stuck it in now as a lot of the Fair Haired Boys were home from Colliteh. Miss Nilson and Louise Fazenda are in the cast, and Babe can act like an old trouper. Six reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE LIVE WIRE: Johnny Hines—Good comedy drama.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

CONVOY: Special cast—December 26. Very good war story and will go over unless your patrons do not like war pictures. Did good business here for two days. Reports from patrons very favorable.—Wm. L. Crouse, Ideal theatre, Bloomer, Wis.—General patronage.

THE TENDER HOUR: Special cast—December 25. Good picture with big scenes and plenty of thrills. Would not call it a special, but better than the average program.—Wm. L. Crouse, Ideal theatre, Bloomer, Wis.—General patronage.

KIKI: Norma Talmadge—Did not make as good as some of her pictures. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE TEXAS STEER: Will Rogers—December 28-29. You are bound to be disappointed when you see this picture as it doesn't come up to what you expect, but if you get behind it, it's there at the B. O. Be sure you mention titles by Will Rogers. Eight reels.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

MEMORY LANE: Special cast—A poor box office bet. Good picture.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE STRONG MAN: Harry Langdon—November 22. Not much of a drawing card here.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

PASSION: Negri-Jannings—A French costume picture. Story during time of Louis the XIV. Will not please but it will draw providing it is exploited right. A reissue. Picture should be run on an off night.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

Fox

PAID TO LOVE: Virginia Valli-George O'Brien—69%. December 26. One of the best pictures I've ever had the pleasure of showing, plenty of pep and, Oh Boy! that Valli, she's there—looks better every day. Step on this and make some dough.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—75%. Mix product better this year, if you can judge by this one. Six reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE COUNTRY BEYOND: Olive Borden—Good picture, wonderful scenery. It has everything one would want to make a good film.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

PAJAMAS: Olive Borden—46%. Quite spicy but no one seemed to object. All said they liked it. Six reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE BRONCO TWISTER: Tom Mix—40%. Good Western. Mix doesn't draw for me like some exhibitors report he does for them. Don't know why as this is good town for Westerns. Five reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

NO MAN'S GOLD: Tom Mix—96%. December 23. Print was bad, but picture was the best Mix I've ever seen.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

DESERT VALLEY: Buck Jones—82%. December 17. Another good one from Buck. This boy should watch his step or he'll go the way Fred Thomson is going. Paramount can kill 'em as fast as they are made.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE RETURN OF PETER GRIMM: Alec B. Francis—Very good picture.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL HERO: Sally Phipps—This came as rather of a surprise. It is one of the cleanest and best comedies that we have had the pleasure of running for some time. It is minus the mushy love scenes, and the famous clinch at the end. Step on it, it will please. Seven reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Tom Mix—My first one of Mix. This drew fair, and seemed to please. Makes a good Saturday program. Six reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE MUSIC MASTER: Alec B. Francis—An exceptionally good picture. Tie up with music stores when you run this one. Print good.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

IS ZAT SO?: George O'Brien—Very good cast and seemed to pull many laughs out of patrons. Makes a good regular program picture, that and nothing more. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—This is a real picture for its kind. It is plenty hot in places, and will probably draw a little criticism, but it's worth stepping on. You will have to sell it to the public, as you will all Fox pictures. Eleven reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THREE BAD MEN: Special cast—A special. Many liked it as well as "The Covered Wagon." Did not draw at 10-35 cents. Will please if you can get them in.—H. V. Ritter, McDonald theatre, McDonald, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THREE BAD MEN: Special cast—Very good.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

SPRING FEVER: William Haines—15%. December 28. This pleased a great deal more than I expected it would. Not having many golf players here I didn't expect any favorable comments but it seemed to please quite generally. Seven reels.—H. J. Eagan, American theatre, Wautoma, Wis.—Small town patronage.

ROOKIES: Dane-Arthur—Good comedy drama.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—38%. A cracker-jack. Basket ball game makes this one rather good. Six reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—Mills closed down from lack of orders, no market for hay, cabbage $4 per ton. Patrons say "no gotta da mon." What few we had to see Marion seemed pleased. It certainly went over big with the kids. Students home from Syracuse university said it differed a good deal from college life in that college. It ought to go over well in any community that boasts a good high school.—L. E. Parson, Parson's Hall, Marcellus, N. Y.—General patronage.

SLIDE, KELLY, SLIDE: William Haines—43%. December 1. Pleased those who came, but rain kept them away. A good picture.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

FRISCO SALLY LEVY: Sally O'Neil—This was a very good picture. Drew a big house. I really think we pulled more laughs out of this than the "Callahans." Personally, I am better satisfied with it. This more than pleased. Tone and print good. No as special.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

AFTER MIDNIGHT: Norma Shearer—40%. Not so good as former Shearer pictures, but not punk by any means. Pleased all who saw it. Seven reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—Good outdoor picture.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES: William Haines—25%. December 8. This sure is good but didn't bring them out.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—McCoy is very popular here. Picture well received here. As good as any we have played of him. Good tone, yes for Sunday, no for special.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—38%. December 16. This proved to be a good picture of the costume action type. It's an historical picture. No good for Western fans.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenfield, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Lionel Barrymore—Napoleon—December 10. A very good picture. Spooks and everything. One kid yelled in one exciting place which sure added to it. I don't see why they didn't advertise the dog as he was the whole show and people would have come to see him. Seven reels.—Virginia Pollard, Auditorium theatre, Nehawka, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE RED MILL: Marion Davies—A dandy comedy, well handled by Miss Davies. Sub-titles are very clever. Don't pass this one up. It's very entertaining.—Ray P. Murphy, Old Trail, Hebron, O.—General patronage.

THE GARDEN OF ALLAH: Alice Terry—November 26-27. Had more comments on this than on any other, but did not have very good crowd. Considered this a good picture, although it didn't have a happy ending. Seven reels.—Virginia Pollard, Auditorium theatre, Nehawka, Neb.—Small town patronage.

A LITTLE JOURNEY: Special cast—To all exhibitors: You will find in this picture an unlimited amount of fun which I think will please any audience.—M. H. Haymans, Dreamland theatre, Metter, Ga.—General patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Marlon Davies—December 17. Rather good. Disappointed some for some reason or other. Marlon played the part all right, but I guess it was the plot that killed it. Seven reels.—Virginia Pollard, Auditorium theatre, Nehawka, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE DEMI-BRIDE: Norma Shearer—Good picture but not a feature. Moral tone good, suitable for Sunday. Audience appeal fair.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE ADVENTURER: Tim McCoy—December 3. A good Westerner. Tim McCoy is all right only some think him too old to play this kind of a part. Dorothy Sebastian was certainly pretty and wish she was still with M-G-M. Five reels.—Virginia Pollard, Auditorium theatre, Nehawka, Neb.—Small town patronage.

MR. WU: Lon Chaney—Not a small town picture. Too draggy. Would not have played it if I had a chance to see it beforehand.—Ray P. Murphy, Old Trail theatre, Hebron, O.—General patronage.

THE FRONTIERSMAN: Tim McCoy—December 17. A really good picture. The real story of the United States. Good appeal, good scenes and very interesting.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

THE UNKNOWN: Lon Chaney—All Lon Chaney's go over well here.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

Paramount

TWO FLAMING YOUTHS: Chester Conklin—W. C. Fields—60%. Very good comedy. Fields extra good and, of course, Chester is there with his part, so made a fair show. Six reels.—W. U. Shelnett, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

SENORITA: Bebe Daniels—40%. December 29. A fine entertaining program picture. Star great. Pep and lots of it.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

FIREMAN SAVE MY CHILD: Beery-Hatton—A picture with plenty of laughs. Pleased the patrons.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

SENORITA: Bebe Daniels.—Look out, Doug, this little lady has it on you when it comes to using the sword. Thrill after thrill in this one.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

WE'RE ALL GAMBLERS: Thomas Meighan—40%. Personally thought this good, but Tom seems to have lost his pull here lately. Can't make any cash with him now. Seven reels.—W. U. Shelnett, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

ONE WOMAN TO ANOTHER: Florence Vidor—Good program picture.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—60%. December 22. Very good. Bebe Daniels comedy seems to please. Seven reels.—W. U. Shelnett, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

Introducing "J. C."

To those readers of Moving Picture World who have not been readers of Exhibitors Herald, the editor of "What the Picture Did for Me" wishes to take this opportunity of introducing our rambling columnist, J. C. Jenkins, whose weekly comments on pictures, conditions and personalities are read with absorbing interest by exhibitors throughout this and foreign countries. "J. C." is a byword among readers of the Herald. Now we'll let "J. C." do the talking. You'll like him, and swear by him.

TUCSON, ARIZ., January 1, 1928.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

If you will notice you'll see that we made it "1928" the first time. Betcha you didn't do that.

Our family took us down to Nogales last Thursday. Nogales is where all the boys go quite frequently from Tucson to renew their youth. On this side of the line you can't and on the other side you can. We went over on the other side.

We had dinner in the Cavern Cafe, which is a large room blasted out of solid rock, and it is said that at one time it was used as a prison. Betcha it held 'em, too. Geneve ordered fried oysters and some other things, Ruth ordered just plain roast beef, and our wife and Dana and yours forever ordered cabrilla. We didn't know what cabrilla was, but it sounded good, so we ordered it. We supposed that cabrilla was some kind of a pepper dish, but it isn't. We asked the Mex that waited on us if cabrilla was grown there in Mexico, and he looked at us like he thought we were going to start another revolution, then he said something that sounded like "comastat mannana kinsavvy vamous de casa hombre buena dias," and we looked at him and said, "Now look here, Pedro, you call us that again and we'll call out the border patrol." We learned later that cabrilla is a fish that has its habitat about 150 miles off the coast of California or South Dakota, we didn't learn which; anyhow, it was good and we ate so much of it that we've been sickern a hound pup ever since and our wife has doped us with Epsom salts, Fen-amint, Codliver oil, smartweed tea, shoe polish, and she now threatens to try us on horseshoe nails and railroad spikes. These Mexican dishes are too much for us followers of the Stars and Stripes and Will Rogers, and we were prone to shout, "God bless our United States of America, she's some country," until our wife busted in and told us to lay off of that Mexican beer and stick to Volstead. The next time we go to Mexico we are going to leave our wife at home. There is a chance down there to have a regular time. Wish Bill and Jay had been with us. If Tiajuana is anything like the other side of Nogales it is no wonder that Hollywood spends most of her time down there.

Tucson has a population of something like 40,000 when they are all up, but they are never all up. About 30,000 of 'em are in bed most of the time, and it is said that this climate will cure everything from ingrowing toenails to a chronic desire to elope with the hired girl. Our wife wants us to locate here.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We drove out the other evening to call on Harold Bell Wright, for we knew Harold would be disappointed when he learned we were in town and didn't call on him, but we were confronted with a sign at the entrance to his estate printed in very plain United States advising us to keep out. We did; we surmised that Harold was taking a bath and didn't want to be disturbed. There is one thing peculiar about these people down here, when they are taking a bath they don't care to have visitors.

We recall taking a bath in "the old swimmin' hole" some years back, which swimming hole was right beside the public highway, and our father invited us out to the woodshed and we haven't taken a bath since.

It is no wonder that Harold writes such lovely stories. His estate butts right up against the Rincon mountains, whose peaks are covered with snow and whose valleys are carpeted with perpetual green, and if this won't start the "muse a ramblin'" then nothing will.

From the standpoint of beauty we can't hand Arizona very much, but when one sits out on the front porch in his shirt sleeves and reads in the daily papers of the blizzards sweeping down from Medicine Hat and Neillsville, Wis., he is wont to drive over to Nogales and get all het up and shout, "Hurrah for Arizona."

We don't know whether it is the altitude and dry climate of Arizona or our close proximity to Mexico that makes us have a continual headache, but we've had it ever since we hit this state. Geneve, in diagnosing our case, says we have located the pain in the wrong

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—November 29. Like extremely well.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

TIME TO LOVE: Special cast—Goofy, but good. Title somewhat of a drawback for the action fans, but was very entertaining.—Dwight Grist, Theatatorium, Columbia Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

A SOCIAL CELEBRITY: Adolphe Menjou—59%. December 12. Another barber picture, but it pleased our crowd all right.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

THAT'S MY BABY: Douglas MacLean—57%. November 28. Didn't see this one. Carnival opposition.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—This is a very good picture representing the time of the war in Cuba. A little long but was worth running. Played two nights to bad weather. Good tone, print. Yes for special and Sunday.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

SO'S YOUR OLD MAN: W. C. Fields—67%. November 21. Fair comedy, but story is not to be taken seriously. Keep the roving princess at home.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

THE PALM BEACH GIRL: Bebe Daniels—30%. December 18. Dandy picture from Bebe and if they would make them all like this and sell them right we would appreciate to do business with Paramount but one out of every 10 is good and nine are the bunk. That is the way I feel and my patronage shows it part of our anatomy, that an empty gourd isn't susceptible to pain. Doggone it, we wish she would 'tend to her own business; anyhow, our head feels like everybody had moved out and had pulled up the pump, and if you can read this column and still retain your sanity you will be admitted to full membership in the Hollywood colony without further examination. Out there they accept anything. Doug and Murray are still there.

*When Freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robes of night
And set a cactus there.*

And we sat down on that durn cactus and didn't see it, and our wife has hunted the house over for the tweezers and can't find 'em, and if that won't make a man vote the democratic ticket then Al Smith won't stand any more show than a rabbit.

Did you ever eat any enchiladas? Well, take our advice and don't do it. Our family inveigled us into trying one the other evening and we have been loco ever since. An enchilada is what started the Chicago fire. It will start a fire anywhere. It is made out of a lot of stuff right out of the oven and wrapped up in something that reminds one of a horse blanket, and you are supposed to eat it, blanket and all. We took one mouthful and then yelled for the fire department as soon as we could catch our breath, which was 30 minutes later. Geneve and Ruth lapped theirs up like it was custard pie, but we'll have a grudge against Mexico the balance of our life. If President Calles would send an enchilada over to John Bull he'd order the fleet to sail the next morning at sunrise. The girls and our wife tried to persuade us to try some tortilla and frijoles, but we accused them of wanting to cash in on our insurance policy. The moral to this is, when you go to Mexico take your grub with you.

Tomorrow morning we are going to head North for Nebraska, and when we get to Neligh and find that the fire department didn't save our golf clubs and fishing outfit we are going to petition the city council for their removal. We've bought tickets for their annual ball for the last 30 years and feel that we are entitled to some little consideration. Betcha those boys did their best just the same.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fills a Want None Others Do—

Looking back over 1927 we can see where we made a helluva lot mistakes. We have been making this same survey for the last 40 years and note the increasing number of mudholes we have fallen into as the years have come and gone. We have made New Year's resolutions that would make Thomas O. Service and Eagle Eye Joe ashamed of themselves, none of which held good until the Chink delivered our next batch of laundry.

New Year's resolutions are all right for weak-minded people, but we refuse to be catalogued with that class any further. We remember making a solemn resolve on January 1, 1868, to wash our neck and ears every morning before breakfast, and we haven't thought of it again from that day to this. We recall that when we were in the adolescent stage we made a resolve not to "coon" any of Jim Hallack's watermelons, and in three days from that time the melon rinds along our back fence were two feet deep. This resolution stuff is all the bologna. If Crocket Brown, and Tragsdorf, and "Fishy" Phil, and the Rabbi, and that bullhead fisher at Wayne, and Estee and Longaker and a lot more of the boys would stop making resolutions and would put forth some tangible reason for asking clemency of the court we'd have hopes for their ultimate reformation, but would have doubts about it nevertheless.

Down here when you see something coming down the road that looks like a clothespin on a grasshopper, don't think you are in Kansas; it's only a Mexican on a burro. A burro, in case you don't know, is an extended edition of a South Dakota jackrabbit with a variable speed pulley, only it always runs on low speed. If you are going to visit your mother-in-law on the 14th, you will want to start on the 9th, in order to get there before the baby cuts its third tooth.

The burro has been the means of breaking up many a Mexican revolution; the enemy starved to death before the army got there. We are going to buy one for company for our wife's goat. Geneve says she is getting tired of acting as nurse and playmate for that goat and threatens to throw up the job. She never could stick to anything very long anyway.

Should the next issue of the HERALD-WORLD show improvement by the absence of this "Colyum," don't get too hilarious and start a celebration, it will only be temporary; we will probably be bucking blizzards and snow drifts somewhere in Kansas and Nebraska trying to get back to the ruins of the old wigwam.

J. C. JENKINS,
The HERALD-WORLD Man.

THE QUARTERBACK: Richard Dix—58%. December 5. A very good picture. Wouldn't want a better one. Unusually cold weather for the South kept many away.—H. B. Grice, Aiken Mills theatre, Bath, S. C.—Small town patronage.

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR: Beery-Hatton—December 25. Got over in fair shape. Most too silly but when the bull came down the road it got a big yell. Seven reels.—E. H. Randall, Liberty theatre, Condon, Ore.—Small town patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—Good outdoor sport picture. Fair story. Comedy situations good.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—December 28-29. Another excellent production to plenty of empty seats. I cannot understand why this year's Paramount specials fail to draw at the box office. They have all been good, but I can gross more business with Esther Rakston or Bebe Daniels or a Zane Grey than any of their big ones. Wish someone would analyze this situation for me. Ten reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

EVENING CLOTHES: Adolphe Menjou—Complete flop at the box office. Lost money. The star fails to please here.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

ONE WOMAN TO ANOTHER: Florence Vidor—December 28. Good little program picture with just enough comedy to get it over. Five reels.—E. H. Randall, Liberty theatre, Condon, Ore.—Small town patronage.

THE LAST OUTLAW: Gary Cooper—Liked very much.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

CHANG: Special cast—Pictures of this type are very rare and should prove a record breaker if given the proper publicity as lobby display, window cards and heralds.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

ROUGH HOUSE ROSIE: Clara Bow—November 15. Very good. Has the punch and the pep that goes a long way with our patrons. Good for any night in the week except Sunday.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—A very good picture that pleased our people. The picture deals with the ejection of a settler on a land grant. Some years ago many such evictions occurred on a Spanish land grant which is located about nine miles from Tombstone. A coincidence occurred when the picture was shown here. In the audience was a man well past 60 years of age, who about 20 years ago was evicted from this Spanish land grant; and the subject held much interest for him. But the big thing was that this was the first time in his life that he had ever seen a moving picture and to see one that dealt with the subject that had cost him a valuable ranch years before got his goat. Six reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

BARBED WIRE: Pola Negri—Played this on Thanksgiving and had a pretty good house, the first in a long time. Good picture and second to please the majority.—H. L. Bounh, Grande theatre, Port Allegany, Pa.—General patronage.

KNOCKOUT RILEY: Richard Dix—December 13. It's a knockout here. Went over well.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

KNOCKOUT RILEY: Richard Dix—Here is a picture, no matter if it has Richard Dix in it, that will draw. The title does not appeal. It's a fairly good picture and if you can "bait 'em" and get them in they will probably enjoy it. But what good is a good picture with a bad title? Just as much as a good title for a darn bad picture, you fool them either way, but it is more satisfaction to fool 'em with a bad title. Seven reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—December 26-27. One of the finest pictures I have ever seen to very poor business. Nine reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

SERVICE FOR LADIES: Adolphe Menjou—Very poor box office attraction. Menjou fails to draw here.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

METROPOLIS: Special cast—December 1. Like all other foreign made pictures will not draw or please. If you have it bought better leave it in the can. Seven reels.—E. H. Randall, Liberty theatre, Condon, Ore.—Small town patronage.

too. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

LET IT RAIN: Douglas MacLean—20%. December 26. Good little picture. Plenty of fun. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

LET IT RAIN: Douglas MacLean—Very good comedy.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—Dandy picture but didn't draw the size of your cap. In fact, nothing draws them in as most of the people are out of work here and don't know when they will have any.—H. L. Bounh, Grande theatre, Port Allegany, Pa.—General patronage.

SENORITA: Bebe Daniels—Regular Doug Fairbanks type of picture and pleased everyone. Bebe is getting quite a following in my town and deservedly so, as she puts everything she's got in it.—H. L. Bounh, Grande theatre, Port Allegany, Pa.—General patronage.

BLONDE OR BRUNETTE: Adolphe Menjou—15%. December 25. Just a big lemon, that's all. If it's a Paramount picture it's the worst in Kimball. That's the way my books show and this one has them all topped off. It's the worst we have had yet from Paramount. Have read a few good reports on this and I booked it on the best night of the week and just hurt my business. We did not see anything that's interesting in this one so that's the way it stands. Six reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SOFT CUSHIONS: Douglas MacLean—Favorably received, good comedy.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

IT: Clara Bow—The kind that makes the patrons happy after working in the industrial plant all day.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

THE KID BROTHER: Harold Lloyd—I did not like this as well as some of Lloyd's and as it has been played all around me sometime ago, did not do well with it.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

TEN MODERN COMMANDMENTS: Esther Ralston—November 18. Likable. Used on Friday and Saturday.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

TEN MODERN COMMANDMENTS: Esther Ralston—A dandy good comedy drama to good business. They thought it great and said so. Seven reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE COVERED WAGON: Special cast—December 15. Reissue. Very good and well received.—A. J. Wallace, Pacific Community Association theatre, Columbia, S. C.—General patronage.

Pathe-P D C

DON DESPERADO: Leo Maloney—59%. Average Western. Seemed to please Saturday crowd. No comments.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

SATAN TOWN: Harry Carey—Very good story. Fine acting.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Rudolph Schildkraut—70%. December 24. I believe this the most true to life picture I ever have presented to my people. Would certainly recommend this picture to small towns and would advise letting the rural class know about it. A few more pictures like this one would mean a lot to the small town exhibitor. Eight reels.—W. L. Campbell, Alert theatre, Steuben, Wis.—General patronage.

ALASKAN ADVENTURES: Special cast—Here's a real picture built for school tieups. The finest kind of a production. You can't go wrong on it. Print was A-1.—Dwight Grist, Theatorium, Columbia Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Special cast—Used Christmas. Some said good, other said terrible. Acting good. Too sad. Just an old fashioned picture for old fashioned people. Entirely different than the general run of pictures. Made me money so why kick.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

PEOPLE VS. NANCY PRESTON: Special cast—A picture that failed to draw. Not the type of story that pleases here.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

FLAME OF THE YUKON: Special cast—20%. December 17. Just about the same as most of the Yukon pictures. A little drink, then a fight, another drink and another fight. Plenty of action, but just an ordinary program picture. Eight reels.—W. L. Campbell, Alert theatre, Steuben, Wis.—General patronage.

STEEL PREFERRED: William Boyd—December 13. First class entertainment. Has everything in it to make a good picture for any town. Some of the scenes impossible. Plenty of good comedy in it.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

Tiffany

LIGHTNING: Lightning—100%. November 24. Without any extra advertising than an ordinary program picture, "Lightning" pulled in the largest crowd ever in my theatre to a picture show. Not a big picture but Oh Boy! how it does pull, and satisfied. This is the first Tiffany picture and certainly was pleased. Book it and boost it. Eight reels.—W. L. Campbell, Alert theatre, Steuben, Wis.—General patronage.

TIRED BUSINESS MAN: Raymond Hitchcock—A laugh special, chuckfull of chuckles. Raymond Hitchcock has yet to appear in a picture in which he failed to give a finished performance and many laughs. Many had seen him on the legitimate stage and came to see him in this picture. Ran this on a night the receipts of which were given to charity and had a nice crowd.—Ben Eskin, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

Truart

THREE IN EXILE: Art Acord—This is a good picture but lacks action and pep. Don't advertise Art Acord when you run this to avoid disappointments. Print new.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

United Artists

ONE EXCITING NIGHT: Special cast—10%. December 31. Eleven reels of wasted film. Altogether too long, and very old. Eleven reels.—W. L. Campbell, Alert theatre, Steuben, Wis.—General patronage.

WILD JUSTICE: Special cast—This wasn't such a bad picture after all. Patrons received it very well, although there was nothing new in it. The print was the nearest thing to a piece of junk I've ever handled. Some of the subtitles were badly streaked on one side detracting from the enjoyment, and the light penetration was nothing to brag about. A good print would have made a better presentation. Tone fair, special no.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

Universal

A HERO FOR A NIGHT: Special cast—40%. December 30-31. Must back up Mr. Laemmle's statement about Glenn Tryon being comedy find. Boys, grab him, he's fine. And I think we will make some jack with him if business conditions ever get better. This picture is one of Universal's many good ones. Six reels.—R. D. Young, Rex theatre, Montezuma, Ind.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND THE CANARY: Laura LaPlante—Another box office winner plus the best in entertainment. Played it on a rainy day and night and did fairly well considering the weather. Promise plenty of mystery and thrills when you advertise this and they'll surely get everything and then some. Pleas'd all classes from the sixes to the sixties. Let's have some more like this (but a big cut in the price). Laura LaPlante has been coming along by leaps and bounds and with this picture she has finally arrived. Admission on this picture 10-15-25 cents.—Ben Eskin, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

BEWARE OF WIDOWS: Laura La Plante—10%. December 14. Fair program entertainment and where they like Laura real well, should do good business. Six reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

HERO ON HORSEBACK: Hoot Gibson—13%. December 16-17. Best Hoot Gibson we have played for a long time. Good picture for theatres that want Westerns. Oh boy! how good this was and no business. Must be Christmas season and the money is spent for gifts. Six reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SHIELD OF HONOR: Special cast—This isn't the big special that Universal tells you it is, although it is a fair picture. Print not so good, a bit foggy in places. Universal's Complete Service plan is a boon to the small exhibitor.—Dwight Grist, Theatorium, Columbia Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

SENSATION SEEKERS: Huntly Gordon—9%. December 21. Very nice program that did not register at all. Six reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND THE CANARY: Laura La Plante—December 18. Fair mystery drama, slightly better than the program type. Showed to less than average Sunday business. Not a special, nor is it worth special price. Eight reels.—E. H. Randall, Liberty theatre, Condon, Ore.—Small town patronage.

A MAN'S PAST: Special cast—Very good drama. Appeal okay. Print fine. Drew all classes here.—Dwight Grist, Theatorium, Columbia Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

THE WRONG MR. WRIGHT: Jean Hersholt—December 29-30. This is only fair. Good in spots, but seems to drag too much, probably due to its length. If they made some of these alleged Jewels in five reels instead of seven or eight reels, the pictures would all be improved, and a lot of postage and express would be saved. The first night gave the picture and the house to the Legion Boys and ran the two reels of the Legionaires last trip to Paris. These pictures were taken by Pathe and are nice and clear. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE STOLEN RANCH: Fred Humes—December 20. An ordinary Western with a fair amount of appeal. Just barely an average picture, with fair appeal for those who like Westerns.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERY CLUB: Special cast—December 24. Acting was good, but the picture is absolutely spoiled by the lack of any clearly defined plot. As it is, it has no appeal at all.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

SILK STOCKINGS: Laura LaPlante—December 25. A fair farce that pleased the majority. Nothing to rave over but had fair business so can't kick. Seven reels.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, O.—General patronage.

THE COHENS AND KELLYS: Special cast—December 26-27. A very good comedy drama. I ran it two nights and broke my house record, but film was in awful poor condition. I had to patch for four hours before I could use it. Eight reels.—F. A. Reiss, Grand theatre, Orrin, N. D.—General patronage.

Warner Bros.

THE BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS: Monte Blue—50%. December 27. This is an extra good program picture. The star always good. Story and cast fine.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

ONE ROUND HOGAN: Monte Blue—A very good boxing picture with James J. Jeffries. Book it and boost it. Your patrons will be pleased. Print brand new. Drew all classes.—L. W. Bagwell, Jr., Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

THE BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS: Monte Blue December 24. A pretty good program picture. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE FIRST AUTO: Barney Oldfield—The biggest flop I've ever had from Warner Brothers. The price was extremely high and the picture was extremely rotten. Absolutely nothing to it. Don't advertise it as a special, as the price would indicate it to be, because it will disappoint the majority. I hope Warner Brothers don't put out any more like this.—Ben Eskin, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

MATINEE LADIES: May McAvoy—50%. December 30. This is a splendid program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

WHAT HAPPENED TO FATHER: Warner Oland—The whole picture belongs to Warner Oland through his wonderful acting. The story of an absent-minded scientist who became rejuvenated on Broadway with the help of oodles of pretty chorus girls. Advertise it big, for everyone will certainly enjoy it. Admission 10-15 cents.—Ben Eskin, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

IRISH HEARTS: May McAvoy—Just a program picture. Not much to it. Seven reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

LADY WINDEMERE'S FAN: Irene Rich—December 25-26. This is one of the finest pictures I have run for a long time. As a rule one director's work is just about like another's so far as I am concerned, but Lubitsch's deft touches can certainly be noticed throughout this picture. Will please all your better class patrons. Eight reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—General patronage.

PRIVATE IZZY MURPHY: Special cast—A fair picture. Poor box office attraction. Moral tone good, suitable for Sunday, audience appeal fair.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

IRISH HEARTS: Dolores Costello—Very poor box office attraction.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

ACROSS THE PACIFIC: Monte Blue—Good picture. Plenty of action. Fine story.—Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite theatre, Placerville, Cal.—General patronage.

SIMPLE SIS: Louise Fazenda—Just a picture that will pass for a program. Seven reels.—Dewey L. Kisor, Sterling theatre, Fairmont, Neb.—Small town patronage.

State Rights

THE PASSION PLAY: Special cast—25%. November 30. A fine picture and every exhibitor should run it. Played one night to a small house and on account of heavy competition didn't get much out of it. Six reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

CALL OF THE KLONDIKE: Special cast—A very good picture, have seen better. Some liked it and some did not like it. About 50-50.—M. H. Haymans, Dreamland theatre, Metter, Ga.—General patronage.

DESERT GREED: Yakima Canutt—Average Western. Star goes very well with me. Should prove a good bet where they want Western and action pictures. Print good.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

FALL OF THE ALAMO: Cullen Landis—The historical title will draw with extensive advertising. Fine for a tieup with schools. A picture crammed full of cowboys and "Injuns." The burning of the Alamo and Cullen Landis' acting at this point will stir your pulses. Admission 10-15 cents.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

ISABEL: Special cast—I think this picture has as good appeal as I ever saw. It will make any exhibitor money at this time of the year.—M. H. Haymans, Dreamland theatre, Metter, Ga.—General patronage.

THE PASSION PLAY: Special cast—A good picture and should have had a good patronage but couldn't get them in. Played one night to a small house and made just a little above expenses.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE WHITE MAN: Kenneth Harlan—This is not just a fair program picture, but a good one. Kenneth Harlan always a good actor, is better than usual in this one. He is very well supported by Alice Joyce and Walter Long, one of the best character men in the business. Admission 10-15 cents.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

Serials

PERILS OF THE JUNGLE: (Artclass) Eugenia Gilbert—There's a serial that sure gets the kids and quite a few older people. Business held up well through the 10 weeks. Ten episodes.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

KING OF THE JUNGLE: (Rayart) Special cast—A very good beginning. Chapter 1 of this serial looks as if it will be a good boost for a sick box office.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

THE RETURN OF THE RIDDLE RIDER: (Universal) William Desmond—On Chapter 6 and still pleasing. Desmond is well liked here. Prints always good.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

WHISPERING SMITH RIDES: (Universal) Wallace McDonald—No. 9. Fair serial. Not holding up as good as the other serials I have run from Universal. Two reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

BEAUTY A LA MUD: Jimmie Adams—A beauty shop comedy. Good. Two reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

BREAK AWAY: Jimmie Adams—Rather good comedy. Many good laughs. Two reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

DUMB BELLS: Billy Dooley—A good funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

JELLY FISH: Franklyn Pangborn—Fair comedy. Nothing extra. A few laughs. Two reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

You Analysts, Get Busy!

E. M. Biddle of Paoli, Ind., presents a problem to the reporters to this department.

Mr. Biddle has found that, despite the merits of special attractions, productions which should pack 'em in, they do not draw at the box office. On the other hand, program pictures are making the money for him.

Mr. Biddle asks: "Why?" He would like to have comment from other reporters to this department. In requesting an analysis, Mr. Biddle neglects to say whether or not he raises his admission on specials, which might have some bearing upon the box office condition which he reports.

LISTEN LENA: Al St. John—A snappy comedy. Al is hard to beat and this one is good. Two reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

F B O

A KICK IN THE DARK: Al Cook-Kit Guard—This was the last of the "Wisecrackers" and it was a dandy. Thanks, boys. Off for the Beauty Parlor series. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

HARRY FULL BACK: Three Fat Men—This is the first comedy I've had that I could hear the audience laugh above the grind of the projector but this one got them in the funny spot. Play it. Two reels.—L. L. Like, Dreamland theatre, Drummond, Mont.—Rural patronage.

STOMACH TROUBLES: Krazie Kat—Just like all others, not so good. One reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE UNSOCIAL THREE: Personally I thought this a very poor comedy, but I heard a few laughs, so I suppose it pleased a few. Two reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

WANDERERS OF THE WAISTLINE: Three Fat Men—Good comedy of the Western type with the Fattys. Plenty of fun. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

YOUR NEXT: Three Fat Men—Couldn't be worse. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

PARAMOUNT

MOONEY MARINER: Billy Dooley—Very good. Gets the laughs as nearly all Paramount comedies do for me. Two reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

NEWS: No. 40. Very good news. Get a good deal of local happenings. My patrons seem to enjoy it very much.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

ROW, SAILOR, ROW: Billy Dooley—Extra good two reels of laughs.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

PATHE

SMALL TOWN PRINCESS: A real funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

HOBOKEN TO HOLLYWOOD: This one was a real scream.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

PATHE COMEDIES: The best all around comedies for small towns. Prints and paper fine.—Dwight Grist, Theatorium, Columbia Falls, Mont.—General patronage.

SMITH'S NEW HOME: A laugh in every foot.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

UKULELE SHEIKS: Glenn Tryon—Good comedy. When better comedies are made Hal Roach will make them.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

WISE GUYS PREFER BRUNETTES: Only fair for a two reeler.—C. G. Brothers, Grand theatre, Grand River, Ia.—General patronage.

SMITH'S PETS: A comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SODA WATER COWBOY: Wally Wales—83%. A little different from most Westerns, and class it as a good Western. Five reels.—T. W. Cannon, Majestic theatre, Greenville, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

UNIVERSAL

A CLOSE CALL: Andy Gump—Good Gump comedy. Several good hearty laughs. Two reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

DOUBLE TROUBLE: Fred Gillman—A good short Western that went over fine with those who like this type of picture. Two reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

BACKWARD GEORGE: "Let George Do It" series. Good comedy. Fair print.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

HIS DAY OF DAYS: Neely Edwards—Just a fair filler. Neely doesn't mean a thing on the screen. One reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

LOOK OUT BUSTER: Buster Brown—Not much without Tige. The comedy very slow. Two reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

OLGA'S BOATMAN: Charles Puffy—Just a fair filler. One reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SLEEPY TIME GALL: Arthur Lake—Not much to this comedy. Just one thousand feet of film wasted. One reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SNOOKUMS ASLEEP: Snookum—Not much comedy. Snookum comedies seem to be getting old with my patrons. Two reels.—W. U. Shelnut, City theatre, LaFayette, Ala.—General patronage.

SON OF ANANIAS: George K. Arthur—Once this was substituted to me and played and now they have booked it in again. Having no record of bookings we did not know until the scenes started to show up. We knew right away we had played it. Well, we will get rebate anyhow. It is a good one reeler. One reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

TALE OF A SHIRT: Neely Edwards—These Bluebird comedies used to be pretty good in its first beginning but they are slipping very fast. Won't be worth running pretty soon. One reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

TRAIL OF TRICKERY: Edmund Cobb—A good two reel Western in a story of the Northwest Mounted Police. Gave very good satisfaction. Two reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

UNDER THE BED: Charles Puffy—Rotten, is the only comment. One reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

ANIMAL CATCHERS: A very poor imitation of Roach "Our Gang" comedies. Suitable for a backwoods show where they don't know any better. Print good.—Stephen G. Brenner, New Eagle theatre, Baltimore, Md.—General patronage.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating report received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

"I have no idea what the outcome of the latest Union demands will be," says Jack Miller. "The exhibitors have offered the operators' union a two and half per cent increase in wages, but that has been refused." Several meetings have already been held between the exhibitors and operators, but nothing has been done in the way of agreement. Another meeting is to be held Monday afternoon, but this goes to press before the results will be known.

Marie Pearson has just returned from a trip to Denver where she has been demonstrating the Orchestraphone to Colorado exhibitors. On her way home she spent the holidays with friends in Kansas City.

The Chicago Universal exchange has challenged the New York exchange to a race during Universal's Twenty-second Anniversary drive, lasting from January 22 to May 5. Last year the New York exchange challenged Chicago and won. Herbel says that his boys are enthusiastic over the race and that they are all set for victory. The national winner of the drive gets a Cadillac car.

Joe Lyon is recuperating from a bad shock received last week. An exhibitor made a special trip to the FBO exchange to thank him for selling him a certain series of short subjects. The exhibitor was John Remijos who operates the Gaelic theatre.

I surely did pop into Cecil Maberry's office last week at the wrong time. Milton Stern, who sells insurance, was there, and now I've booked some of Milton's product on a life time contract. The only way I can cancel the booking is to die. Milt sure knows his rates, and why shouldn't he. He had 15 years of good experience in the film business before he took up insurance.

"Can't Turn Churches To Theatres," She Says

"Churches are using large signs and motion picture ads to draw people into their doors," said Ruth Caldwell, assistant dean of women at the University of Illinois, in a talk before the Church Workers of Colleges and Universities of the United States, meeting in Chicago recently at the Edgewater Beach hotel. "This sort of thing merely draws the marginal fringe of students. We can't turn our churches into theatres," concluded Miss Caldwell.

woman who knows what she wants when she wants it. Last week Tess Heraty decided she wanted a new fur coat. Thirty minutes later she had bought one. Now, doggonit, I believe that's a record. And the coat she bought is a knockout. Tess says it's a Baronduki, whatever that is.

This being leap year, all the newspapers over the country have been printing lists of available and desirable bachelors in their towns. Checking over the boys along the row, I find there is a whole gob of bachelors running loose. Whether or not bachelors in the film business are considered desirable, I'm not in a position to say, but any young lady will be furnished with an imposing list if she writes this department, free of charge.

Roy Deitrich's first week at the Avalon as band leader met with the approval of the Avalon patrons. He succeeded Buddy Fischer on the first of the year.

Armin Hand is now band leader at the new Shore theatre on the South Side, and his brother, Arthur, is serving in a like capacity at the Piccadilly. Both are well known in Chicago.

Five shows a day were necessary to afford all the Mark Fisher fans an opportunity to see him last week on his return to the Senate.

A sales conference of the Midwest exchanges of Fox Films was held at the Stevens hotel last Friday. Managers from Minneapolis, Omaha, Des Moines, Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago were present. Men from the home office were Peck Gomersoll, Edward Grainger, McAvoy and Daley.

According to officials at the United Artists theatre, "the picture palace for picture patrons," has been well received during its first weeks. The program changes Friday to Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho."

It is understood that last week's warm weather had a beneficial effect on the box offices of Chicago theatres.

NO film fires

in any Fox Theatres

Mr. Fox, one of the founders of, as well as one of the leaders in the motion picture industry, has long been noted for his penetrating foresight. When the Sentry Safety Control was brought to his attention, he quickly decided to utilize now what some day everyone will have. His decision was made as soon as he was convinced that the device provided 100% safety from film fires for his patrons and employes.

William Fox has agreed to install SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL [the positive fire-preventer] in each of the FOX CIRCUIT THEATRES; also in all his laboratories and studios.

Such an endorsement of SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL by such a man tells its own story.

intimate box-office glimpses of PARAMOUNT'S "GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES"

THE LOSER! So hot waxed the competition to play Lorelei that Chester Conklin entered the race.

THE BOOK THAT STARTED IT. Over a million copies sold to date. Translated into every language, including the Scandinavian.

HERE'S LORELEI. The world's most popular blonde. Gold digging heroine of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes". In real life, Ruth Taylor, chosen to play the role after a world-wide inspection of beautiful blondes.

GUS EISMAN. The Button King who "educated" Lorelei. Played by Ford Sterling.

MEN, BEWARE! Lorelei and Dorothy stalking males on the deck of an ocean liner.

MR. SPOFFORD. The millionaire reformer hooked by Lorelei. On the screen Holmes Herbert.

MALCOLM ST. CLAIR. Director of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" with Anita Loos and Ruth Taylor.

"GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES"

A Paramount Picture

From the famous story by Anita Loos and the play by Anita Loos and John Emerson. Hector Turnbull Production, directed by Malcolm St. Clair.

"NOBODY WILL WANT TO MARRY ME!" sobs Lorelei. And another sucker bites the dust.

DIMPLED DYNAMITE. The gimme girls of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes". Warm lips but hearts of ice.

"NICE BUT UNREFINED". So says Lorelei of her girl friend Dorothy (Alice White), brunette in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes".

OLD BUT OH, MY! An eighteen year old mind in a sixty year old chassis—Mrs. Spoffard (Trixie Friganza).

"I WANT TO GO TO PARIS". Mr. Eisman, her "educator," says "No". So she goes to Paris—and how!

of Interest to YOU

TONE—The quality of tone of the music and sound effects is as near perfect as the highest development of the best modern methods of recording and amplification can make it. In music, the tones are rich, full and true. In effects, the utmost realism is achieved.

SYNCHRONIZATION—Pictures and sound are perfectly synchronized and protected against the slightest deviation from perfect harmony.

SIMPLICITY—Vocafilm is so simple that no technical help or extra help of any kind is required for its operation. Any motion picture operator can handle it easily with one day's instruction and operation.

COST—The cost is surprisingly low, by far the lowest of any pictures-and-sound device on the market. No service fees, seat tax or extra fees of any kind are charged. Upkeep cost is negligible.

TERMS—The terms of payment are within the reach of practically every theatre, the smallest as well as the largest.

Announcement about FILM

VOCAFILM will soon be available to every theatre through the Educational Exchanges in the United States and Canada.

The introduction of VOCAFILM to the American exhibitor marks the beginning of a new era in theatre music and entertainment in sound generally. This simple device for the synchronization of motion pictures and sound achieves a beauty of tone and a perfection of synchronization that are a revelation. Its ease and simplicity of operation and economy in original cost and maintenance make it practical for any house, anywhere. Thus there is brought to the smallest town the highest type of "acts" and of musical entertainment synchronized with pictures that is possible to the greatest theatre on New York's Broadway.

Announcement will be made soon of the details of Educational's release schedule of VOCAFILM "acts" and pictures synchronized with music through VOCAFILM.

Ask your Educational Exchange for information as to the cost of VOCAFILM to your theatre. You will be amazed at the low initial cost, the easy terms of payment, and the practically negligible cost of maintenance.

BOWERS COMEDIES

"There It Is"

What
THE FILM DAILY
Says:

"THERE IT IS"
Bowers Comedies—Educational Novelty Wow

Type of Production
Two - Reel Comedy

At last a genuine novelty in the short comedy field. This is the first of the Charley Bowers comedies on the Educational schedule, and it's a pip. Bowers himself is a Scotch detective in kilties trying to solve the mystery of the Fuzz-Faced Phantom which is the "It" of the title. All the fun takes place in a sanitarium. The "It" does all kinds of novel stunts. It can fly, walk, whiz, jump circles, vanish, or what have you. It's one of those things you have to see to appreciate, for words fail to give an adequate picture of this novelty, and the laughable situations it devolops. All these novelty stunts are tied up with a bunch of laughs in a good story. H. L. Muller as the director has a ten knockout to start the new year with.

What MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Says:

Charley Bowers' first comedy for Educational is a corker for ingenuity and unexpected surprises. Charley's active brain has worked overtime thinking up all the many little things that relate to the "It" which plays so important a part in the comedy. . . . This Bowers comedy is as different from the average slapstick affair as an apple is from a pineapple. It is a different sort of comedy and one which is enhanced in effectiveness by means of Bowers' process of fooling you with camera tricks.

What MOTION PICTURES TODAY
Says:

The first of a new series, this Charley Bowers novelty comedy is a droll and vastly amusing one. . . . For downright insanity, whimsically, charmingly and surprisingly contrived, this release is in a class by itself. Solemn reviewers went so far as to laugh aloud at it.

And, Boy!

It's

There!

Seldom, if ever, has a new comedy series been offered that has met with such a prompt and enthusiastic welcome from the critics

You've just got to step out and get these.

The marvelous reception of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy again proves the unquestioned superiority of Hal Roach comedies.

Extraordinary

in its importance to exhibitors throughout the country is this 22nd Anniversary Celebration because it brings to the Trade the greatest individual block of box office pictures at the most important season of the year.

In this 22nd Anniversary Celebration we present the biggest single group of money makers ever offered by any one company, in any one season, in the entire history of the motion picture business.

We've tipped the balance scales over backwards to give you the break.

Heretofore there have been drives—drives for this and drives for that—but never before have you ever heard of a drive put on for YOU the Exhibitor—a drive that benefits the exhibitor first.

To prove this 22nd Anniversary Celebration is for you—here, on the next page, is a partial list of the product available to you during this Celebration.

We could talk for hours, but all arguments fall flat along-side of this remarkable line-up of pictures, which tops by miles, anything this entire industry has ever seen in one period in the high spot of the season.

There is no substitute for Circulation!

YANKEE enterprise has accomplished a great deal in the past hundred years. There are substitutes for almost everything—false teeth, silk hair, wooden legs, metal skulls, wax noses, synthetic gin, paper leather, etc., ad infinitum. . . .

But a hundred years in the publishing industry has failed to discover a substitute for BONA FIDE, PAID CIRCULATION. The only one on the market today is the first one ever used. CONVERSATION is the polite term for it, but more accurate terms for it are—“hooey”, “bunk”, “baloney” and “applesauce”.

Any business concern that refuses to make a statement to Dunn or Bradstreet has a reason.

And any publication that declines to make a statement to the Audit Bureau of Circulations also has a reason.

IT is hardly good business to have auditors check up on carbon paper, lead pencils, paper clips, and every other supply purchased to be sure of getting full count, and then fail to insist upon something besides CONVERSATION from publications soliciting advertising.

Again—The Alarmists

EVERY trade has its alarmists and the motion picture trade is not without its full share of those persons who delight to sound a note of approaching calamity.

Right now motion picture trade alarmists are speaking loudly and vacantly about the injury which they say will be done to the show business through the introduction of motion pictures via the radio. The fact that all the leading scientists agree that the day is at least far distant when motion pictures can be practicably transferred by radio does not slacken the ardor of the alarmists.

When radio itself became practical this same type of person became obsessed with the fear that with the widening popularity of radio entertainment the theatre would drop into an insignificant position in the amusement world. But it may now be seen that radio, despite its vast development, has not undermined the position of the theatre in the amusement world but, instead, has created a niche of its own. Radio has not hurt the theatre and will not hurt the theatre, for the very plain reason that it is not a competitor of theatrical entertainment.

Regardless of when and how a development may come which will make possible and practicable the transmission of motion pictures by radio—and enable the public to see motion pictures in their own homes—the theatre will never be compelled to yield its premier position in the amusement world.

Private viewing of pictures can never supplant the natural human desire of mankind to assemble in numbers for a common enjoyment of entertainment. The psychology of crowds is an all-important factor in the enjoyment of entertainment and just so long as humanity lasts there will be public places in which men and women may gather for the purpose of being entertained.

The radio, because it is an attraction for the public, has had an effect upon theatrical amusements. Anything that serves the leisure moments of the public has a certain effect upon the theatrical business. Particularly at certain seasons of the year the automobile keeps vast numbers of the public away from theatres. However, the automobile is affording easy and convenient transportation to theatres is again a definite stimulant to theatre business.

It is the same with the radio. While this form of domestic entertainment makes a certain demand upon the time of the public it also affords a valuable publicity medium for the motion picture industry. It broadens the mental horizon of the public and helps in qualifying them for a better appreciation of meritorious theatrical entertainment.

The position of the motion picture theatre is supreme in the theatrical world. If the motion picture theatre is able to maintain reasonable progress in offering better and still better entertainment at low cost its position will remain supreme.

No harm will come to the motion picture theatre from without. Its only danger is from within—from careless, indifferent and unintelligent management.

Upside Down

WHEN a picture like "The Cat and the Canary" gets out into general distribution and becomes the bill for picture houses with a grind policy the absurdity of the policy which prevents patrons from seeing a picture from the beginning becomes plainly apparent.

Here is an excellent picture, capably directed and capably portrayed. It contains a thoroughly interesting story and should have a broadcast appeal. But the story happens to be one which must be seen from the beginning if the patron is to realize that he is seeing a fine picture and not a meaningless jumble.

Exhibitors continue highly indifferent toward this very vital question affecting their business. Every theatreman knows that if he is to build business, or even maintain such business as he may now be enjoying, he must give satisfaction to his patrons. When he plays such a picture as "The Cat and the Canary" under a grind policy, with no effort whatsoever made to enable his patrons to understand and follow the picture by seeing it from the start, he is pursuing a course that cannot but lead to disastrous results.

To come in on such a picture at the second or third reel is an experience that cannot help but discourage and disgust theatre patrons.

We are well aware of the problem involved but simply because there is a problem there certainly is no good reason why theatremen should sit back supinely and allow the evil to continue. Exhibitors who will exert every possible effort to keep a poor picture off their screens will show such a picture as "The Cat and the Canary," which is a very good picture if seen from the beginning but a very poor one if not, without giving the matter a second thought.

We entertain the theory that the industry in the ordinary course suffers far greater than is realized from this upside-down way of exhibiting pictures. But in the case of a mystery story the evil becomes so plain that no one can deny it.

"Better Theatres"

WE wish to commend to the attention of subscribers to MOVING PICTURE WORLD the publication, "Better Theatres," which appears as Section II of this issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

"Better Theatres" is the publication of acknowledged leadership in the extremely important interests of construction, decoration, equipment and operation of theatres. In fact, it is the one publication which devotes appropriate and authoritative attention to these interests. "Better Theatres" covers the entire field with which it is concerned and within its pages are found advertisements of practically every item of equipment used in theatres.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD subscribers will be pleased to note that Mr. F. H. Richardson, the leading authority on projection and allied matters, will continue in "Better Theatres" the department he made famous in the WORLD.

Lou Kramer Dead; Handled Publicity For Many Concerns

Lou Kramer, publicity representative known from Coast to Coast and particularly in Chicago, died Monday in Los Angeles, according to word received from the Coast. His death followed shortly after that of his father recently in Chicago.

Lou Kramer

At the time of his death, Kramer was president of West Coast Amusement News and was preparing to publish a fan magazine.

He was with the organization of the late Thomas Ince, and later toured the country for Mrs. Wallace Reid productions. He was also at one time with F.B.O. He handled local publicity for Universal and was also at Universal's home office for a time. He had charge of publicity for the Lubliner & Trinz theatre circuit in Chicago before going to the Coast.

Ohio M. P. T. O. Appoints Committee for Work on Uniform Contract Meet

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 17.—The Ohio M. P. T. O. last week appointed a committee of three exhibitors to work with other exhibitor organizations in connection with the uniform contract committee meeting which starts in Chicago January 31. Martin G. Smith, chairman, Toledo; John A. Schwalm, Hamilton, and Sam E. Lind, Zanesville, were the men appointed on the committee.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Jan. 17.—The new Orpheum theatre at Eldorado was damaged today by fire of suspected incendiary origin. The Harrisburg fire department helped fight the flames.

Sunday Shows Issue at Special Nevada, Ia., Vote

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

DES MOINES, Jan. 17.—The question of Sunday shows which seems to be worrying the minds of numerous religious bodies in the state of Iowa, will be decided in Nevada when citizens of that town put the matter to a vote at a special election January 20.

A group of four hundred voters recently signed a petition asking for an election on the question of repealing the present ordinance forbidding Sunday shows.

Mr. Theatre Owner! If you were to start over today as an exhibitor what changes would you make in your theatre and in its operation? That question was put to several representative exhibitors by EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD and the replies have brought out a number of interesting bits of advice to colleagues in the exhibition field, some of their observations being open to debate.

Get Best Location

Outstanding among the suggestions are these: Be sure you have the best location; Learn your prospective patrons' wishes and fulfill them; Operate only as many nights as you are confident of getting good attendance; Do not book pictures of more than eight reels; Don't buy in blocks unless you control more than one theatre; Don't try to start with only one machine; Hire an experienced operator; Increase your newspaper advertising.

Following are several representative letters in full:

C. L. TIVENAN, American Legion theatre, Nevada, Ohio:

"If I were to start over today as an exhibitor I would never attempt to start with one machine no matter how small the place. I would also have watched the salesman and not let him sting me on some of the pictures. I would also hire an experienced operator or do it myself. I would do a little more advertising."

FRANK W. BALDWIN, Town Hall, Pittsburg, N. H.:

"If I were to start over today as an exhibitor I would probably do just about the same as I am now doing, providing I started in at the same place I am now running pictures, as I have in the past few years made all the changes which I believe I can make for the benefit of my business at this place.

First Get Best Location

"However, I will mention that I have been an exhibitor in several different towns in the past twenty years, but at the present time in my home town only, the town of Pittsburg, N. H., the most northerly town in the state.

"To make up a little story of my experience in the picture business, or I mean to say to speak from the experience I have received during these years, I will go on and state:

"If I were to start in as an exhibitor in some town at the present time, I would first be sure I had the best location. Second, I would ascertain as soon as possible the class of pictures the majority of my prospective patrons would like best. Thirdly, I would start in running the number of nights each week which I felt sure I would be able to get a good attendance on (I mean a paying crowd) and in the meantime I would see at all times that my theatre was kept nice and clean and well ventilated and well heated at all times.

"I would also have the proper amount of advertising 'see that it was put up in nice shape at the best locations' for every show.

"After I had tried matters out for a few weeks, providing my business was increasing and I decided the town would stand another night each week I would add on an extra night, but this I would not do unless I was positive that I would get a good paying business for this extra night, as it is much more profitable to run two nights per week and make something each night than to run three nights and split up the business too much.

Favors Special Nights

"As often as I could do so without interfering too much with the regular nights I would put on a big special picture, something I was sure would go over big, and I would advertise this special big. I mean by that I would use a twenty-four sheet, window cards, heralds, etc., which would mean twice as much advertising as I would use for my regular shows, as in this way my patrons would understand I had something bigger and better for the specials, and I would get advanced prices for these specials.

"I would not care to book my feature pictures with more than eight reels if I could help it, as I would wish to run a news reel and a good two-reel comedy with each feature picture, and eleven reels makes as much show as anyone cares to see; usually seven, eight or nine reels is plenty enough to suit any patron, especially if you have a show with plenty of action.

"I would be sure at all times to not run shows often enough to cut down the attendance so but what I would have what one would call a good crowd, as all patrons enjoy the pictures much more with a full house and any show will go over much better and bigger when there is a large attendance."

J. C. McCARTHY, Belle and Regent, Belleville, Can.:

"If I were to start over today as an exhibitor I would first subscribe for P. Harrison's Reports. Would not buy groups of pictures unless I controlled more than one theatre in a town.

"Would subscribe for HERALD and WORLD."

Takes Look at Band; Gives It Benefit Shows

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—There will be new instruments and new music for the village band in Warrensburgh, N. Y., because of a two-night benefit that was staged last week by Jerry LaRock, at his Fairyland theatre. The band will reciprocate next summer by giving free concerts.

It's Still Biggest Trade Paper Event

"Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" has settled into its forward stride, but the many well wishes being received attest the fact that the merger continues to be regarded as still the greatest single event in the annals of journalism in the motion picture field. Of particular interest in this the third issue of the merged publication is the fact that the variety of branches represented in these congratulatory expressions points to recognition of the event as marking an advancement of vital significance to all. Subsequent issues will contain additional messages received.

From H. M. ADDISON

Martin J. Quigley,
Editor and Publisher,

It would be my pleasure to have you accept congratulations on the merger of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World." While I am sorry to hear of the passing of the "World," I am certain the combined publications will be of great importance to theatre managers and operators. The "Moving Picture World" has long been a great stand-by of mine. Some of my very best friends have been connected therewith, and the many courtesies shown me by the "World" and its associates have been and are appreciated. However, I feel sure that the same pleasant relationship which has existed in the past will continue to exist between the new combination and myself. Mergers make greatness. I have perused your issue of January 7 from cover to cover. There are many new features which are indeed interesting. Your makeup is great. The merger naturally gives you a broader scope. The associates with whom you have surrounded yourself will no doubt fill all the requirements of the trade.

I have just received the announcement of what I know to be the very best amalgamation this industry has yet achieved. I want to congratulate you:

First, because "Exhibitors Herald" has always stood for that which was fair and just and has never lowered its colors for any individual or group of individuals.

Second, because you are to hold the editorial reins which will guide the destinies of both magazines.

Third, because of the utmost faith the exhibitors have in your ability and judgment.

Fourth, because Mr. Chalmers has recognized in you the above powers as well as knowing full well that any other affiliation could not work out equitably as regards all concerned.

Fifth, because it assures the producer, exhibitor and equipment organizations a publication which now dominates the field.

May this new enterprise continue to merit the confidence inspired by "Exhibitors Herald," from its very first issue until finis is written on the last page of the last issue—which will happen long after we have become a mere shadow of memory.

Woodhull Warns Against Stampeding into Action

Favors Support of Brookhart Measure If Danger Through Federal Regulation Is Obviated

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Introduction in the House of Representatives last week of the anti-block booking bill introduced in the Senate December 13 by Senator Brookhart of Iowa brought directly before that body the question of the legality of blocks, with which the Federal Trade Commission has been struggling for a number of years. The bill was introduced by Representative Cannon of Missouri.

Proponents and opponents of the Brookhart anti-block booking bill are lining up for a war to the hilt when the measure introduced by the Iowa senator comes up in hearings before the Senate committee.

Woodhull Warns Against Stampede

R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., warned against being stampeded into action on either side, and added that the bill should be supported "if we can obviate any danger to our business which may come through federal regulation."

Other outstanding developments of the week were as follows:

The T. O. C. C. in New York called a meeting for January 26 to plan to help pass the measure.

The board of trustees of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio pledged support of the bill.

A trailer and a block one-sheet endorsing the measure to be used in theatres affiliated with the Cleveland Exhibitors Association.

Woodhull in his statement said Secretary M. J. O'Toole had discussed the bill with Brookhart and that the latter had expressed belief that the danger of political control of the industry could be obviated.

T. O. C. C. Calls Independents

Independents not members of the T. O. C. C. are being urged to attend the meeting of that organization at the Astor Hotel. The slogan of the call is "The War Is On." The T. O. C. C. some time ago endorsed the bill which, the organization says in spreading its campaign to New Jersey, New York state and Connecticut, will "save our investments and get us a square deal."

Some divergent views were expressed at the Columbus meeting of the trustees of the state organization but a resolution pledging the support of the Ohio boy finally was adopted.

Trailer Appeal to Patrons

A trailer to be used in Cleveland theatres reads:

"Senator Smith W. Brookhart has introduced an Anti-Film-Trust Bill in the United States Senate.

"The passage of this bill will permit this and all other Independently Owned Theatres to choose from a greater list, the kind of pictures best suited for our audiences.

"Under existing conditions we are compelled to buy the entire block of pictures and are forced to show some pictures that are not adaptable to our clientele.

"We appeal to our patrons to kindly write to your Senator and Representative and ask them to support the Brookhart Anti-Film-Trust Block Booking Bill.

"The Management."

The block one-sheet is reproduced elsewhere on this page.

Bomb Wrecks Rear of Palace Hippodrome, Seattle; Theatre Has Non-Union Policy

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SEATTLE, Jan. 17.—A bomb wrecked the rear of the Palace Hippodrome theatre, here, after midnight last Friday. Windows were shattered in buildings for blocks in every direction from the theatre. It is believed that a black powder bomb was used and planted in the rear of the building. The theatre, one of the Sterling theatres chain, operated under a non-union policy and had been annoyed numerous times during the last year by stench bombs.

British Film Inferior, but American Fordized, Say English Authors

Patriotism Carried to Insanity by Exhibitors in Britain, Declares Edgar Wallace—Gilbert Frankau Hits Conference System

"BRITISH films have not held a candle to the films which have come to us from America and from other countries."—"American films have fallen into a rut, have become stereotyped, Fordized." These two verdicts by world-known authors (the first by Edgar Wallace, the second by Gilbert Frankau) are interesting excerpts from articles in the special New Year edition of the Film Renter, copies of which have just been received from London.

ERNEST W. FREDMAN, editor and publisher, introducing the issue with the advice that capital for production must come from Central Europe, the Dominions and America, adds that "better and more ambitious pictures are being embarked upon."

"God knows it is not my job to boost American films," says Edgar Wallace, "but, not being a congenital idiot or hopelessly insincere, I cannot pretend that the films we have produced in this country would be regarded as worthy even if they had been turned out by Lithuania or some other spot of microscopic industrial importance, or that they are in any way comparable with the pictures which Hollywood has sent us.

"So far, even the worst American films have had more exhibition than some of those English films which have been acclaimed as the best."

"The only thing mysterious about a scenario," he says, "is the choice of the people who write them. Good camera work, good direction and good story are the three essentials for successful exhibition. When people stand up in the House of Commons and spout about the disloyalty and the greed of the renters and exhibitors, I marvel at their nerve.

Carry Patriotism Too Far

"Exhibitors have carried patriotism to a point of insanity. Because a film has been British, and because they felt they were doing the right thing by their country, they have again and again put pictures into their programs which have been an insult to the intelligence of their audiences."

Wallace has a cheery optimism, nevertheless, predicting that "in the next few years we are going to see a demand for British pictures, not because they are British but because they are pictures."

Frankau charges that the stereotyped nature of the American production is evidenced by "the sex stuff, which is the same in every film, whether it is 'Ben Hur' or an ordinary picture." The author blames this condition to the conference system, so that the picture is "made to appeal to a mass psychology, and as a result it is slick and has 'pep,' but it is very stereotyped."

"When we make British pictures in real earnest," says Frankau, "and in a larger quantity, we must make them to represent our national life. I do not believe in the international picture, and I think it is wrong to assume that American pictures are international. American pictures are American pictures."

Would Express British Spirit

"It will be by expressing the British spirit in our pictures that we shall sell our pictures throughout the British Empire, and in the United States," the writer advises, adding that he has refused to allow one of his novels to be filmed in America, one reason being that he does not want his characters distorted, as has happened before.

Maurice McElvey, with a number of British successes, says that he "did not need a Quota Bill," adding that "my experience has proved that whenever a good British film was made, exhibitors showed it."

Publix Makes Changes in Personnel in Southeast

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ATLANTA, Jan. 17.—As a result of a general promotion plan inaugurated by Publix Theatre Corporation, important changes in personnel became effective last week. Jesse L. Clark becomes district manager for Florida. Charles S. Morrison becomes city manager in Jacksonville. Walter Lloyd has been named assistant to Clark and James Stelling has been placed in charge of Daytona Beach. Newton L. Treece is now manager at Gainesville, Fla., where a new theatre is being built.

Mexico Likes "Chang"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 17.—"Chang," the Paramount picture, has struck the fancy of people here. Police were called upon to restrain the crowds which stormed the Olympia, Paramount's premiere theatre in the city, the entire seating capacity of the theatre selling out the first hour, it is said, and at the same time the picture was being shown in a first-run circuit of 12 theatres throughout the city.

Holding Firm to Take Over Realty of Skouras and Missouri Theatre

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 17.—A holding company to be known as the St. Louis Properties Corporation has been formed to take over the real estate interests of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., including the Ambassador theatre and office buildings and the Grand Central Theatre building. The new concern will also acquire the Missouri theatre and office building now held by the Famous Players Missouri Corporation, controlled by Paramount.

The Skouras Brothers Enterprises will receive $500,000 in cash and $1,000,000 in debenture bonds for its equity in the theatres, and in addition will own a one-third interest in the St. Louis Properties Corporation.

New Keith and Skouras Theatres for St. Louis?

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 17.—There are persistent rumors that the Keith-Albee-Orpheum-Pathé combination will erect a 5,000 or 6,000-seat theatre in downtown St. Louis.

Curbstone gossip also has it that the Skouras interests have under consideration the erection of a large theatre and hotel.

In the meantime the construction of the William Fox theatre at Grand and Washington boulevard has been temporarily retarded by a strike of structural steel workers.

Finis Fox to London

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

Will Rebuild Theatre

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The Grand theatre at Johnstown, N. Y., which was burned to the ground two weeks ago, will be rebuilt, according to Frank A. Empsall, of Watertown, one of the owners.

Censors Cut Only Truth of Vice, Educator Says

PORTLAND, ORE., Jan. 17.—"Usually any play gets by which prettifies vice, or merely indulges in coquetry with sin, and as long as it is amusing and comforting, nobody protests much. But let an author treat of vice, sin, or the tragedies incident to the life of the senses, seriously and realistically, and the vice crusaders pounce on him."

So declared S. Stephenson Smith, professor of English at the University of Oregon, in his address here on "Censorship—a Safeguard or a Danger?" The speaker contended that ideas, like men, should have a chance to be born free and equal. "To try to interfere with the natural sifting," Smith said, "is to cramp genius, to discourage art, and to do far more damage than good. Censorship is rather more a boomerang than a means of defense; it recoils on the censor and is not a weapon that can be accurately aimed."

Paper Consolidation Called Salient Event

(Printed in Paramount Studio News)

By far the most important event in the field of motion picture trade press activities in the closing days of 1927 was the merging of the EXHIBITORS HERALD and Moving Picture World two of the outstanding publications devoted to the film industry.

The Moving Picture World, which made its bow in 1907, was the first actual motion picture trade paper in America, and in 1911 acquired "Film Index," the first paper devoted to the films. THE EXHIBITORS HERALD came into being in 1915, under the leadership of Martin J. Quigley and has progressed steadily as a power in its field ever since.

Mr. Quigley will continue as editor and publisher of the consolidated publication to be known as THE EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Mr. Quigley is an able leader, a fearless spokesman and a determined champion of what he conceives to be the right as he has proved many times.

Paramount wishes him unceasing progress and success in the enlarged duties he has assumed.

17 Managers Are Out in West Coast House Cleaning, Says Rumor

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—Seventeen managers have lost their jobs as a result of a house cleaning in Southern California theatres of the West Coast Chain brought about by H. H. Franklin, it is being rumored here. A number of the young assistant managers from the Northern houses were given the berths after the old managers were given their notice, it is said.

Film Offices Flooded as Sprinkler Pipes Burst

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 17.—Several tenants in the film building at 1030 Forbes street suffered much damage to equipment last Wednesday morning, when the automatic water sprinkler on the second floor ceiling burst and showered the rooms.

Loss of $1,000 was suffered by W. B. Jones, who manufactures commercial films and is local representative for Pathe News. Film exchanges suffering damage were Film Distributing Company, Independent Photoplay Company, and the A. & S. Steinberg office.

Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, came to Chicago from New York to be present Saturday night at the celebration in honor of the 75th birthday anniversary of his mother-in-law, Mrs. E. Kaufman.

Operate on Sabbath Only; Lease Exhibitors' Houses Attendance Will Be Limited to Membership—Emporia Move Expected to Bring Election

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 17.—"Church versus Church" is the main bout on the program of the Sunday closing battle this week at Emporia, Kan., the result of which probably will be accepted as a precedent in other cities throughout the state, insofar as the Sunday labor law is concerned.

Club Will Show Sundays Only

The Sunday closing fight, which has been in newspaper headlines for three weeks, no longer is a case of exhibitors versus ministers. With William Allen White, nationally known writer, as chairman of the committee which will select the films, the men's club of the St. Andrews Episcopal church in Emporia has organized what is to be known as the Emporia Screen Club.

The club will show Sunday pictures only, leasing theatres from exhibitors, and the attendance will be by membership. Membership may be obtained by anyone who desires to belong.

Plan Ruled Legal

The billiard halls of many Kansas towns for years have thwarted blue laws advocates through the membership plan, which has been ruled legal in Kansas, so when Emporia ministers decided to close up all motion picture theatres on Sunday the exhibitors found a ready friend in the Episcopal club. The profits of the shows will be used in improvement in church work.

Following the announcement of the plan, a wail which echoed around the state of Kansas came from the bluenoses, who saw themselves outwitted at their own game and saw a rival church reaping benefits from the folly of other churches.

Such a condition, of course, is not expected by exhibitors to be permanent but it undoubtedly will last long enough to show the citizens of Kansas the ridiculous side of the stand taken by radical ministers who fear the opposition of Sunday shows. All of which eventually will lead to an election on Sunday shows, it is believed.

Frederick W. Lewis, president of the College of Emporia, branded the club plan as an attempt to evade the law and denounced the movement.

Bank Cashier Heads Club

W. R. Coulson, president of the screen club and cashier of one of Emporia's largest banks, replied that the members of the club viewed the move as an honorable means of obtaining funds through the presentation of high class feature pictures on Sunday afternoons to "a limited number of good friends." Listed among those supporting the club plan are some of the most widely known Kansans.

The move is considered a signal victory for the exhibitors of Emporia, a town of about 20,000 population, who now are enjoying a hearty laugh at the ministers who led the fight against them and who probably will repent of their folly ere the battle ends.

Arch Selwyn Plans Chain of Theatres in 12 British Cities

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

LONDON, Jan. 17.—It has been announced by Arch Selwyn that he has summated plans in association with George B. McClellan and Amery Parkes whereby he will erect motion picture theatres in 12 key cities in Great Britain, and one in Paris.

The new corporation, directed by Selwyn, has already purchased theatres in 12 British cities. These are now being used as music halls and, according to plans, will be torn down to make way for the new theatres to be constructed. The cities chosen are Leeds, Liverpool, Newcastle, Brighton, Southampton, Dublin, Glasgow, Manchester, Golders Green, Dover and Blackpool. Selwyn, in association with Charles B. Cochran, also plans to build in London what will be one of the largest theatres in the world, it is said.

Sensational Merger Unites 2 German Circuits, One First National's Emelka

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Consolidation of the nationally important motion picture theatre chains of Phoebus and Emelka, the latter controlled by First National, has been effected, giving the combined circuit over 50 first-run houses in all key cities with a total seating capacity of over 50,000. The new chain is second in size only to the UFA circuit.

Besides the Capitol, most prominent picture house in Berlin, Phoebus operates the Phoebus Palast and Marmorhaus in the capital and leading theatres in Dresden, Munich, Dusseldorf, Hamburg, Kiel, and Nuremberg. Announcement of the merger proved a sensation in the German film industry.

Charles Chaplin's new United Artists production, "The Circus," will have its German premiere in a few weeks at the Capitol.

Livewire Texas Exhibitors Build B. O. by Helping Communities

Successful Houses Have Outstanding Citizens As Owners or Managers—Must Be Good Mixers and Purveyors of Goodwill

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 17.—Fellowship and goodwill are prime requisites to success in any line of business, but especially in the motion picture field. The exhibitor, if he is to obtain any degree of success must be a good mixer, a livewire and a purveyor of goodwill, in Texas, at least. No matter what the class of his house may be—"grind," picture or de luxe, he must be one who is respected in his community, admired by fellow citizens and looked to for authority when community problems arise. In other words, he must be a good citizen.

TEXAS, as a whole, can be considered lucky in its choice of theatre managers. In Dallas, Ft. Worth, Houston, Galveston, San Antonio and Waco there are managers who have proved themselves real assets to their communities, who are alive to every opportunity to be of service to the public, who delight in having a hand in things.

J. P. Harrison, for many years manager of the Hippodrome in Waco, is respected by every citizen of that city as one of the leaders in its affairs. He is always on his toes ready to grasp the slightest possibility of putting his theatre deeper into the good graces of Waco citizens. He is noted for his matinees for orphans, Christmas tree parties, free school matinees, his help to the Community Chest and for many other activities whereby the only tangible return to the theatre is goodwill. Harrison has put the Hippodrome on a paying basis not excelled by any other theatre in the state, no matter how large or small. He has a proved percentage of profits steadily throughout the year that is far greater than that of any of the larger houses.

William Horowitz, Jr., owner of the Horowitz theatres in Houston, is another livewire Texas manager. He interests himself in all civic activities in Houston and capitalizes on every community event through various hook-ups. Horowitz is noted for his ability to diagnose the effect a new project is going to have upon his houses; hence he is enabled to offset any negative influences which might arise. Horowitz is also enthusiastic in taking a part in charitable affairs and staging benefits. Now he has climaxed his long career as a community figure by organizing the first major athletic club in Houston, sponsoring all popular sports, and his popularity is shown by the large number of memberships in his new organization.

Hoblitzelle a Community Man

Karl Hoblitzelle, owner of Interstate Theatres in Texas, instructs his various managers to go into community projects and charitable affairs with a zest. Nothing pleases Hoblitzelle so much as to see his theatre operators engage in an undertaking with the city or county such as christening of boats, opening of bridges and roads. The results are that the Majestic theatres are standing in good with city officials wherever they are located. Raymond Wille, manager of the San Antonio Majestic, and Eddie Breamer of Houston are probably two of the most alive and energetic managers on the Interstate Circuit when it comes to building goodwill.

Bob Blair, manager of the Texas, San Antonio, is a stickler for fellowship and community respect. Blair interests himself and the theatre in club affairs in San Antonio, stages all the major benefit shows in that city and donates use of the theatre to any charitable organization or school for the presentation of plays and programs. His most recent goodwill builder was among the Spanish-speaking people of San Antonio, when he staged a midnight matinee benefit show for them, all the proceeds going to their Christmas Tree Fund for poor Spanish children.

Raymond B. Jones Another

Raymond B. Jones, manager of the new Worth theatre in Ft. Worth, has a personality that puts him into community limelight immediately upon his entering any project. He has worked in such great ventures as the Old Trail Drivers Convention in Texas and the promotion of Community Chests in various Texas cities. He is a great mixer and has put many losing houses on a paying basis.

Other examples too numerous to mention might be cited throughout the state, among them J. R. Collins, Publix theatre manager in Galveston, a leading figure in social and civic affairs of the city.

Trackless Train of M-G-M Ends Tour of South America

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's trackless train and famous ballyhoo is finishing its South American tour by voyaging through Chile after having spent the late summer, fall and winter in Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina. Arduous roads were encountered during the entire South American tour, and at one time it became necessary to change the motor.

The trackless train has already toured the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Europe, and if arrangements can be made it is planned to send the train on tours through Australia, Japan, and possibly even through China and India. If this is done the M-G-M train will have made a world tour in the interests of the company and the American film industry in general.

Bind Porter, Take $2,000 From Theatre Safe; Film News of the Southwest

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 17.—Two bandits induced the porter of the Bison theatre, Shawnee, Okla., to open the door, then bound him and took $2,000 from the safe. The Austin at Nacogdoches, Tex., was robbed recently, but the amount taken was not learned.

Ross Dorbandt will build a theatre at Jaskonville, Tex. Fire started in the Crazy theatre, Mineral Wells, Tex., but was put out with little damage done. The Liberty at Hugo, Okla., has been destroyed by fire. The Pastime, Tuscola, Tex., has been bought by the H & H circuit, and the Lyric, Texico, Tex., by the Civic Theatres Company. The Star, Denison, Tex., has reopened after remodeling. Tracy Flanagan is the new manager of the Martin, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.

Ham's Majestic, Ringling, Okla., has been sold, and Ham's Capitol opened.

Re-Takes

HOLLYWOOD,—Well, it looks like a prosperous new year for the railroads and the steamboat companies. Everybody you talk to hereabouts is arranging a trip to Europe.

But then there's nothing that broadens one (and flattens one) like a Continental tour. The big butter-and-egg man goes abroad to "study the situation" and consult the cows and chickens; the automobile manufacturer goes over there to avoid getting hit by his own machines, and the picture producers go abroad to look at films and come back and enjoy their own.

Sweet Atmosphere!

And speaking of foreign countries, I see Germany is going to make sugar out of air. Kansas ought to get hold of a few of those scientists and make some use of its cyclones.

Want the Money

And did you note that the Vitaphone artists are up in arms and are going to ask pay for three shows a day wherever the films are playing deluxe houses.

Who's to Judge?

They've started something in Chicago. The other night they threw a man out of a movie theatre because he laughed at a subtitle that was not intended to be funny. It's going to be hard on those with a sense of humor. They'll have to gag themselves whenever they attend the theatre for fear of landing on the sidewalk.

Man Dies After Injury in War Scene Explosion

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

TRUCKEE, CAL., Jan. 17.—While filming a "Russian battle" scene for "The Red Dancer of Moscow" at this mountain winter resort, Daniel Silverwood, aged 30, of Reno, Nev., received injuries from which he died at a Reno hospital. The accident occurred during the filming of a Cossack battle. Silverwood got too close to a dynamite explosion during the fighting. Charles Farrell and Dolores del Rio are playing the leads in the Fox picture.

Exhibitors Blame Sales System As Bar to Care in Buying Films Fewer Screenings Than Ever, Say Exchange Men

Lesson in How NOT To Write Publicity

An example of how NOT to write publicity is evidenced in a piece of copy presumably written by National Industries News Service, Inc., of Washington, D. C., in calling attention to "the growing consumption of glycerine."

The motion picture industry happens to be the unfortunate subject of this bit of so-called information, containing such supposedly humorous assertions as this: "In the midst of stark tragedies the glycerine producer smiles joyfully up from the pit at the despairing heroine and counts each tear."

The industry is scarcely likely to take kindly to such far-fetched efforts to dignify a myth formerly confined to humorous papers.

How Discriminate When Purchasing Pictures Not Yet Made, Asks Albany Theatre Owner

[By Special Correspondent to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World.]

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Exhibitors of Albany, Troy and in fact all northern New York are not as discriminating these days in the buying of their pictures as they were two years ago. This fact is admitted by exhibitors as well as exchange managers. Of course there are exceptions, but they are in the minority. Exchange managers are frank in admitting that there is less screening going on these days at the exchanges, for the exhibitors, than at any time in the past.

Blame Distribution System

Exhibitors claim that under the system now followed, in the selling of pictures, it is absolutely impossible for them to show greater care in the selection of their pictures. One exhibitor in Albany, when asked if he was selecting his pictures with greater care than in the past, laughed at the inquiry, and then asked how such could be possible, when a salesman would appear and ask if the exhibitor desired a "Chaney No. 1" or a "Chaney No. 2," when these pictures weren't even made. Of course when it comes to some special picture that has not been sold in a group, it is customary for the exchanges to get in touch with the first run houses and offer to screen it for the exhibitor.

The Schine Brothers, of Gloversville, who have a chain of more than 100 theatres in New York state and recently branched out into Ohio, are said by exchange managers to be rather careful buyers, frequently asking for the screening of a picture. Father Blais, a Catholic priest, who operates a theatre at Schroon Lake, N. Y., is also rather particular as to what he books, and, as a general thing, asks to have a picture screened before he signs any contract.

Depend on Salesmen

The exhibitors of Albany, at least, are now depending a great deal on the word of the exchange manager and the film salesman, as to the merits of pictures they are buying. This fact has brought about a change in the old-time selling methods. There is now a better type manager and salesman along Albany's Film Row, men whose word can be banked on, men who know from the experience of others that it does not pay to lie to the exhibitor in connection with the picture they are selling. Such lies in the past have cost more than one exchange business from theatres and more than one film salesman has lost his job because he had stretched the truth in an effort to have the exhibitor sign on the dotted line.

Both Call Plan Unsatisfactory

Exhibitors readily admit that if pictures were available for their inspection, they would be very glad to sit through a screening and judge as to the merits of a picture and its drawing power when shown. But if pictures are contracted for in midsummer, or as was the case in this section a few months ago, in the early fall, and if these pictures have not yet been made, the exhibitors are asking how in the world they can be expected to use greater discrimination and care in their buying.

The whole thing rests to a considerable extent on the integrity of the producing company, the work and drawing power of a star in the cast, as indicative of what can be expected in the pictures to come, and the straightforward business dealings of the exchange manager and the film salesman, with the exhibitor. The whole thing is not satisfactory, according to the admission of both sides.

Berwilla Seeks $18,000 in Rent from Thomas Firm

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Damages amounting to $18,000 are being sought by the Berwilla Film Corporation from Richard Thomas Productions, Inc., for alleged back rent for the film studio at 5821 Santa Monica Blvd. The Berwilla maintains that Richard Thomas rented the property for a period of three years for $45,800 payable at the rate of $300 per week, but states Thomas failed to live up to the lease. The studio was rented in 1925, but Thomas has paid no rent since last November, the complaint states. Several small companies are now working at the plant, but Thomas has moved from the property.

300,000 Shares of Consolidated Film Are Put on Market

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Offerings were made last week of 300,000 shares of $2 cumulative participating preferred stock of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., by Hornblower & Weeks, Cassatt & Co., Dominick & Dominick and Paul H. Davis & Co.

The stock was priced at $26.50 per share and two shares of common stock were offered with every 10 shares of preferred. The participating preferred is entitled to $2 fixed cumulative dividends and will participate share for share with the common in all dividends in any year after the common stock shall have received $2 per share.

Publix Takes Over Loew's Melba Theatre in Dallas

DALLAS, Jan. 17.—Publix has taken over Loew's Melba here and plans to operate it under a picture and prologue policy. Loew has operated the house for about three years, having taken it over when it discontinued a straight picture policy, shortly after its opening. Publix holds the lease on the building. James Owen (Skipper) Cherry, formerly manager of the Metropolitan in Houston, is to be the manager, with the house falling under the head of C. B. Stiff's department, as a class B Publix house. Maurice Lawrence, district director of music for Publix, will have charge of musical scores for prologues.

Lone Bandit Holds Up Cashier of Orpheum, Chicago; Gets $150; First Attempt Fails

A lone bandit last Thursday night stepped up to the box office window of the Orpheum theatre, Chicago, and demanded Mrs. Nelle Cooper, the cashier, to hand over the receipts. She handed him $150 and the bandit disappeared among the crowd waiting to buy tickets. The bandit had concealed his weapon by covering it with a handkerchief, and only the barrel showed when he threatened the cashier.

The theatre was entered and an unsuccessful attempt made to rob the safe only a week before. According to newspaper reports the theatre was again ransacked Sunday night, but this was denied by Max Slott, the manager.

Radio Is Asset to Modern Pictures Declares Emanuel Cohen

Exhibitors' Worry That Patron Would Divide Time Between Theatre and Receiving Set Proves Unfounded, Engineers Are Told

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Radio, instead of detracting business from the motion picture theatre, has proved of great value in furthering the cause of the motion picture, Emanuel Cohen, editor of Paramount News and director of the Paramount short feature department, told the Institute of Engineers last week at a luncheon in the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn.

"WHEN radio first became recognized as a new medium of entertainment a great howl was raised by exhibitors throughout the country because they believed that the motion picture patron would divide his attention between the theatre and the radio receiving set," stated Cohen. "But the facts have disproved the idea, as instead of decrease in the number of people patronizing the picture theatre, there has been a marked increase during the past four years, the period in which the radio has attained its present status as a medium of advertising, publicity and entertainment dissemination.

Points to Radio Tieups

"That the motion picture industry no longer fears the encroachment of radio on the theatre's revenue is attested by the fact that many of the larger picture companies at present are utilizing the radio as a means of popularizing their stars and pictures. For example, Miss Ruth Taylor, who portrays the role of Lorelei Lee in the Paramount picturization of 'Gentlemen Prefer Blonds,' is at present making a tour of the broadcasting studios in 16 of the principal cities of the United States, in conjunction with her personal appearance at the theatres.

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer a year ago inaugurated a radio movie club which holds its meetings via the ether every Monday evening. First National Pictures for a long period broadcast a description of the plots of its pictures over WJZ. I could name many other radio-movie tieups, such as that now in progress by which Pathe is popularizing its rooster trade mark, but time prohibits. I point out these instances to prove the very definite connection between radio and motion pictures and the manner in which they aid each other to the common good.

"The radio, like the motion picture, is a very young industry. It will be many years before its full potentialities are realized. Already it is used as a newspaper supplementary advertising force. Radio is used by many of the great commercial institutions to broadcast general descriptions of various products, and recommendations are added by the radio announcers to the audience to refer to the newspapers for more specific details on the product just generally mentioned on the air.

Says Radio Furthers Films

"Thus it can be readily seen that the radio, instead of hurting newspaper or show business revenue, will prove of vast aid in furthering the projects of both."

Following his talk, Cohen conducted the radio engineers through the Paramount News Laboratory. The engineers witnessed a newsreel going through the laboratory, starting with the receipt of the negative, the developing process, how it is dried, cut and titled; its projection in the laboratory for examination and how it is printed.

Educational May Produce Vocafilm Feature Music; Will Seek Special Talent

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Vocafilm orchestral accompaniment to several feature pictures is being planned by Educational, which recently took over the latest "talking picture" device. Educational also looks forward to the development of a host of new performers with special appeal for Vocafilm audiences, according to E. W. Hammons, president of Educational.

A number of acts have been completed by the Vocafilm studio and it is possible these may be included in the program. New presentations will be produced with famous stars of the stage and popular radio performers.

Vitaphone Put in Wesco, Publix, U Theatres; New Acts Offer Film Players

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—West Coast, Publix and Universal have installed Vitaphone in a number of their theatres the past week, making over 200 houses now having Warner Brothers' device. New presentations are in the making, with a number of well-known screen players starred.

Clyde Cook has completed one, a one-act play, "Lucky in Love," in which he is supported by his wife, Alice Knowlton. The others to be presented are Bessie Love, Hobart Bosworth, Irene Rich, May McAvoy, Conrad Nagel, John Miljan, Mitchell Lewis, and even Rin-Tin-Tin, all to appear in short dramatic sketches.

Latest Bookings Reported

"Wild Geese," Tiffany-Stahl, Interstate's Fort Worth, Houston, Dallas, and San Antonio Majestic theatres; Wesco's Crystal, Jewel, Iris, Royal, Granada and Bard's Adam theatres, Los Angeles; and Loring, Riverside, Cal.

"A Texas Steer," First National, Cameo, New York City.

"The Patent Leather Kid," First National, Auditorium, Winston-Salem, N. C.

"The Private Life of Helen of Troy," First National, Cameo, New York City; Roosevelt, Chicago; and 30 other houses.

Preview Showings of "Ramona" Aid in Cutting of Picture

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—In carrying out Edwin Carewe's policy of holding previews of the pictures in average American towns before the picture is released, the Inspiration and Carewe picture, "Ramona," has been given test showings in three towns. Patrons seeing the picture were given post card questionnaires to fill out and mail to the producers. Their answers have proven helpful in making changes in the picture and also form an interesting sidelight on what the public wants.

The following is a true statement of answers received from the three out-of-town showings of "Ramona": Cards received through the mail, 351; excellent comments made, 339; fair comments made, 7; poor comments made, 5; no changes necessary, 211; liked lack of sex element in the film, 327.

The producers also asked in question form what, in the opinion of the patron, were the high-lights of the picture. The reports follow: Love episodes, 103; Indian raid and massacres, 99; death of Ramona's baby, 99; death of Alessandro, 104; Ramona's farewell with Felipe, 123; recovery of Ramona's memory at conclusion, 181.

Under the question of "any additional comments," the studio received many excellent comments.

"San Francisco Nights" On Broadway Jan. 30

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—"San Francisco Nights," Gotham productions, starts the new year by breaking all first run records for this company. Although this production, which stars Percy Marmont, has only been available since January 1, key city first run bookings and early play dates have been received from every section of the country. These contracts were additional bookings, taken since the picture was first shown and are outside business written earlier in the season.

"San Francisco Nights" will have its New York premiere January 30, at B. S. Moss Broadway.

Educator Lauds Films As a Religious Force

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

IOWA CITY, Jan. 17.—Dr. Herbert L. Martin, of the department of philosophy of the University of Iowa, declares the motion picture "bulks large as an institution in our current social life," in an article in "Religious Education," a journal dealing with numerous subjects relating to its title. "For multitudes of persons," says Dr. Martin, "the motion picture functions as a stabilizer of life, a mediator between the severer actualities of experience and the more filmy figures and fictions of our dreams." Release of the imagination through the fictional life of the screen is seen by him as a valuable religious asset. An adventurous spirit marks normal childhood, youth and live adults. For the theologian this inherent spirit of adventure is the psychological basis for faith, the writer asserts.

Stories Told

Every woman's ambition—a silver tray, breakfast laden, placed before her on a silk coverlet. Let the psychologists explain. Here is only the phenomenon, ingratiatingly presented by Thelma Todd, who appears thus in a scene of United Artists' "Hell's Angels," a Caddo production starring Ben Lyon.

Renee Adoree as she appears in the leading feminine role opposite John Gilbert (they're almost become a regular team!) in M-G-M's "The Cossacks," dramatic spectacle of Czarist Russia directed by George Hill.

E. de B. Newman, First National executive who has left for Berlin where he will supervise production at the F-N German studio, which recently was placed on a greater production basis. Newman will assist Ray Rockett.

Leading light in a new interpretation of the jazz age which Tiffany-Stahl is making. "The Tragedy of Youth" is the title, and it covers a wealth of material. Patsy Ruth Miller and Buster Collier (right) have the leads, while George Archambaud is directing.

Beauty! Such utter grace, to ignore the lines of the animal itself, quickens one's aesthetic sense as few things can. The dog is M-G-M's Flash. Flash is soon to be seen in "Under the Black Eagle," starring Ralph Forbes and Marceline Day, with W. S. Van Dyke directing.

West Point, the U. S. Military Academy and locale of M-G-M's "West Point" as seen from the Hudson. Director Edward Sedgwick made many sequences there, and to the right is——a scene showing the real cadets in company formation, lending authentic atmosphere. Williams Haines and Joan Crawford, who have the leads, appear in another scene to the left, below.

Muscularity is a characteristic less taken for granted than others in Marian Nixon. A talented actress? Oui, monsieur. Pretty? You betcha! But Marian's genuinely athletic besides, as witness above. Her latest Universal picture is "The Thoroughbred," a title suiting her to a T—both of 'em.

Like all great causes, love may win ultimate victory through defeat. And accordingly, despite her scorn above, Larry Semon does capture lovely Marie Astaire in "Dummies," one of the Educational-Semon comedies in which Larry co-stars with brevity as the soul of wit.

Girl pfd. Even if you take no stock in the Paramount theory, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," Ruth Taylor, its blonde, merits a gamble.

Aerialist in a circus is Doris Hill in Paramount's revival of "Tillie's Punctured Romance." It's her first role since renewing her contract.

Tim McCoy, delineator of the dauntless for M-G-M, snapped as he gleamed a friend awaiting him on his arrival in New York for a vacation—one which the release chart calls well-earned.

The screen gained the most prize-winning redhead in California when, recently, Educational signed Ruby McCoy. Statistically speaking, she is 5 feet, 3 inches tall, weighs 107 pounds—and (sh-sh!) is not yet 20.

American gallantry—even abroad! In a Paris cafe, a brutal apache knocks down his sweetheart, whereupon Farrell MacDonald (left) and George Sidney leap on the dirty rat. It forms a stirring scene in Universal's daring exposure of Parisian life, "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris."

Lucky Lloyd at Educational's hangar ready to hop off (never mind where!). Notice how all silly apparatus was discarded, Hamilton being one aviator who keeps his "feet on the ground." Seeing him off are (left to right) Norman Taurog, Len Milt, and Frank Martin.

Film, Stage and Concert Combine in Theatre Opening Feb. 12

Greenwich Village House Will Operate on Subscription Basis With Program Changing Each Fortnight

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—What will probably be one of the most unusual theatres in the country, offering an entertainment policy that will be equally revolutionary, will make its bow to the New York public with the opening on February 12 of the Greenwich Village theatre, Sheridan Square near 14th Street, New York City.

IN this theatre, having a seating capacity of 375, a plan for combining the arts—motion pictures, drama and concert music—will serve as the fare of an evening's entertainment. The Greenwich Village theatre will be operated on a subscription basis with a change of program every two weeks. N. Brewster Morse and Douglas Wood are sponsors of the project, details of which were announced by Wood at a luncheon to the press and art and literary critics at the Ritz Carlton hotel last week.

Pictures of unusual and appropriate interest will be chosen for the film end of the program. Following this will be a one-act drama. The musical part of the program will bring to the theatre outstanding personalities in the dance and concert world.

The Greenwich Village theatre is being extensively remodeled to give to it the correct atmosphere for the presentation of the unusual offerings planned. A feature of the house will be an art gallery where the works of old and modern masters will be shown.

W. Franke Harling, composer of "Deep River" and "A Light from St. Agnes," will direct the musical activities of the theatre. Morse will select the films while the one-act plays will be chosen by Wood. The art exhibits, which will change with the programs will be under the direction of Mrs. Marie Sterner.

Subscription prices for the new venture are announced as follows: Evenings: Loges, seating six, for four entertainments, $110. One orchestra or balcony seat for four entertainments, $8.80. Matinee prices, $82.50 and $6.60.

A. M. P. A. Star and Radio Session

Last week's session of the A. M. P. A. was billed as a radio affair pure and simple, but the presence of three popular motion picture stars busted up the works, and the radio end of the meeting was only a one to three shot, with the long end winning hands down.

Norman Pierce, WMCA radio announcer, was first introduced by President Bruce Gallup. Pierce made a very interesting address, calling attention to the great help the radio can be to motion pictures, and vice versa. All this was agreed to by the advertisers and publicity men, especially the latter, many of whom have taken advantage of the radio facilities for boosting their clients.

Irene Rich, who is an especial favorite of the A. M. P. A. members and generally voted one of the finest women in pictures, was the second guest introduced by President Gallup. Miss Rich received a great hand without anyone springing Tex Guinan's favorite admonition. Miss Rich said that after looking over the assembled members of the A. M. P. A. and a lot of newspaper guests, she readily understood why it was that she always received such good press notices in the East. The answer probably is that Miss Irene Rich is Miss Irene Rich.

Nita Naldi and Victor Varconi were the other two picture celebrities who made the A. M. P. A. outfit forget all about radio. Each made a neat speech and appeared glad they were there. President Bruce Gallup, versatile as always, interpreted Varconi's remarks from the neatest Czecho-Slovakian into the neatest English, as the latter is spoken at 729.

Hollywood Cold to Thaw

This motion picture industry which does so many things wrong, especially the producing end of it, didn't make the mistake of falling for Harry Thaw, his money and his two "baby stars."

For the past month or more Thaw and his "baby stars" have been in Hollywood trying to "bust in" on the picture business. With all his money Thaw could not negotiate a release or get anyone sufficiently interested to make pictures with his "stars" even though the Thaw bank roll was a tempting bait. At least Thaw thought it would be a tempting bait.

After weeks of effort Thaw and his "baby stars" are returning to New York, and now picture making by him in the East is threatened.

The industry is to be congratulated. Pictures made with the Thaw money and with the Thaw mind dominating would not likely be much of a credit to the industry. There are plenty of places for men of the Thaw type to exercise their peculiar talents, but the film business has no place for them.

"Circus" Still Snaps Records

Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus" is still breaking records on Broadway, which is a habit any new Chaplin picture seems to carry with it. Whether or not "The Circus" is the popular comedian's best effort is a subject that can always provoke an argument.

Be all that as it may, the doors of the Strand are being opened at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and there is an extra midnight show at 11:30 p. m. and at these as well as the regular shows crowds are being turned away. Whether "The Circus" is his best or not, it is a Chaplin and that seems to be all that is necessary.

Laemmle Picks Five "U" Pictures as Box Office Winners for New Year

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Above other Universal pictures there are five that stand out as exceptional box office pictures for the current season, according to Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

These five pictures are "The Cat and the Canary," "Les Miserables," "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," "We Americans," and "Finders Keepers." The first two have already been released and have proven good box office pictures, having broken house records in many theatres. "I wish I could make just five such pictures as the foregoing every year and then rest on my oars," says Laemmle.

Calls Stage Acts Benefit To Entire Picture Trade

Public Has Recorded Its Judgment by Crowding to Presentation Theatres, Says "New Orleans Item"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—Presentation acts as an integral part of entertainment by motion picture theatres are championed in an extended editorial article in a recent issue of the New Orleans Item.

Calls Acts Beneficial to Pictures

The editorial writer sums up the situation with the conclusion that "we cannot comprehend how anything that broadens picture audiences while linking the pictures in any new way—direct or indirect—with tested established and lasting cultural values, can affect the picture industry, as a whole, in any but a beneficial way."

After referring to the differing views expressed within the trade press as "a movie commotion," the writer goes on:

"The box office is the final arbiter. Nobody can doubt that the operators of the great houses would confine their entertainments to pictures alone, if pictures alone returned them the largest profits. Everybody knows that they have made the experiment. Nobody suspects that the results of experience are ignored by them in the policy they actually follow. For everybody knows that they would not rook themselves out of larger profits on pictures if a liberal infusion of good music and vaudeville yielded them smaller returns than pictures alone.

It's Question of Demand

"If they find that the combination programs return them receipts enough to make a profit on the swollen expenses of the greater houses, this means that audiences prefer these broader programs to the narrower ones that the camera can supply alone. If that is what the public wants, that is what the managers ought to supply—especially where the process adds something to the cultural values, as well as to the entertainment values, of these houses.

"We are quite sure that a great many go to the Saenger theatre in this city, for instance, as much for the excellent music they usually find there, or for the stage features or for both, as for the picture. The city has many houses where the picture can be seen unsullied by other forms of attraction.

"Lots of theatre-goers patronize them, too. But so long as thousands continue to flock appreciatively to the combination houses, their flocking is the answer to the main question now raised—so far as public interest is concerned. We disregard the trade interests involved.

"The position of the picture-makers is intelligible. They naturally present the 'selling talk' of their craft.

"It is equally natural for the public, outside of this craft, and not immediately concerned with it, to sense the other aspects of the subject. The public has recorded its judgment—without ever knowing that the matter was disputed within the industry itself—by crowding to the combination houses as well as to the theatres where pictures alone are shown.

Commends Public's Judgment

"Nor is this public judgment wrong. In most large cities, but for the excellent facilities supplied by the great combination houses, it is impossible to hear the best music well rendered except by endowment from private purses. Even this has not been attempted, or has been found impracticable, except in half a dozen of the richest communities.

"A large element in the picture industry once thought that more salacity—simply 'sex stuff'—was 'good business' because it crowded their houses. The enlightened elements in the industry knew that was not true in the long run. The others have found and are finding, that this is the case. For salacity produces satiety, keeps respectable people away from the temple when it runs out and gives way to decency, and raises a crop of indirect vexations to plague the whole industry.

"Here we have a radically different situation. If the public wants good music and good stage features, the theatre owners who can supply them render good service in doing so."

Mathewson Leaves Fox For Pathe News Staff

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ATLANTA, Jan. 17.—Tracy Mathewson, one of the best known news reel photographers in the country, has resigned his connection with Fox and joined Pathe. A. B. Chereton has been sent to Atlanta by the Fox news organization to succeed him in this territory.

Salt Lake City First

Theatre on Wheels Shows Pictures of Exposition

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BALTIMORE, Jan. 17.—A complete theatre on wheels is being used by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to show to its employes pictures of the company's recent 100th anniversary exposition held at Baltimore. A standard railroad coach was fitted up as a theatre and a baggage car was transformed into a generating and heating plant for the theatre car. Music is supplied by the use of a phonograph and amplifiers. The two cars are being routed over the B. & O. lines for showings to the employes who were unable to attend the exposition.

Eschmann Signs Up With Columbia As General Salesmanager

Arrangement Is Said to Assure New Executive of Participating Share in Business—Macgowan Now General Manager

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—E. A. Eschmann has joined Columbia as general salesmanager in complete charge of all matters concerning distribution and sales. Announcement of the acquisition of Eschmann, who is one of the most widely known executives in the sales field, was made this week by Joe Brandt, president of Columbia.

ESCHMANN, it is understood, affiliates with Columbia under an arrangement that virtually assures him of a participating share in the business. C. H. Macgowan, who has been concentrating on the sales end, has been made general manager of Columbia.

Columbia's new salesmanager has had the experience of holding executive offices with a number of the large companies. He was general manager of distribution for First National and Pathe. He was also at one time connected with United Artists as assistant to Hiram Abrams. When the consolidation of Pathé and P. D. C. was effected, Eschmann was made Eastern distribution manager.

With Eschmann in charge of distribution and with extensive production plans now under way for the coming season, the company can be looked to for some rapid strides forward in the near future. Eschmann is an executive who knows the needs of the exhibitor through long and close contact. His arrangement with Columbia is predicated upon giving theatre owners the greatest possible value and continuing the policies that have enabled Columbia to grow so soundly and rapidly.

The addition of Eschmann is an important link in the formidable executive machine which Brandt is assembling in his organization.

Brandt Asks Producers To Reduce Film Quantity

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—"What are you going to do about protecting the billions invested in motion picture theatres?" Joe Brandt, president of Columbia, asks in "an open letter of vital interest to every producer in the country."

Attacking over-production, Brandt declares, "Prominent theatre managers have told me that they are compelled to turn down good box-office pictures that would please their patrons and show a profit to the stockholders, because under the present system their hands are tied. They are forced to run poor pictures made by producers who are more interested in quantity than in quality. The net result to these theatre owners is loss of prestige, patronage and profits."

"Why should millions of dollars continue to be wasted every year in the making of so many pictures? By concentrating on fewer pictures the quality could be vastly improved. What is more important, theatre owners would willingly pay more money for fewer but good pictures."

"U's" Production Hits Top Speed; 32 Long Features in Work

Twelve Short Product Units Busy at Universal City and in Stern Brothers Studio—Laemmle Calls Personnel Greatest Ever

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

UNIVERSAL CITY, Jan. 17.—Thirty-two long features for Universal are in work and twelve short product units are busy here and at the Stern Brothers studio as the Carl Laemmle organization starts the new year hitting on all six cylinders. The personnel in all the production branches is the greatest ever under the Universal banner, Laemmle says, and he's on the ground.

SEVEN of the 32 long features are in the camera stage. Outstanding in this group is "The Man Who Laughs," with Paul Leni directing Conrad Veidt and Mary Philbin. George Melford is directing Lewis Stone, Malcolm McGregor and Marceline Day in "Freedom of the Press." William Wyler is making "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" with Bessie Love and Tom Moore. "We Americans" features George Sidney, direction being by Edward Sloman. "Home James" is Laura LaPlante's latest, with William Beaudine directing. "Fallen Angels" is by Arthur Somers Roche, and "Hoofbeats of Vengeance" is a Rex-Jack Perrin feature.

Seven long pictures on which camera work has been completed are "A Trick of Hearts," with Hoot Gibson; "Meet the Prince," Glenn Hunter; "The Foreign Legion," Norman Kerry; "Finders Keepers," Laura LaPlante; "Hot Heels," Gleen Tryon; "Thoroughbred," Marian Nixon and Richard Walling, and "Honeymoon Flats," George Lewis and Dorothy Gulliver.

The following now are being prepared for early shooting: "Be Yourself," with William A. Seiter directing Reginald Denny; "The Sin Ye Do," Ernest Laemmle directing; "Phyllis of the Follies," also an Ernest Laemmle production; "The Worm Turns," Fred Newmeyer directing; "Give and Take," from the Aaron Hoffman stage play, with Beaudine directing and George Sidney and Jean Hersholt probably the principals; "Three Rainy Nights," Wesley Ruggles directing Laura LaPlante; and "The Michigan Kid," Irvin Willat directing.

On the following the scripts now are being written:

"The Braggart," Sloman to direct Hersholt; "The Last Warning," continuity by Al Cohn; "The Charlatan," George Melford, starring Veidt under the supervision of Carl Laemmle, Jr.; "Cupid at Vassar," Laura LaPlante being directed by Ruggles; "Cream of the Earth," with Melville Brown director and Charles Rogers and Marian Nixon as principals; "The Broadway Romance," Norman Kerry starring under Melville Brown's direction; "Show Boat," Harry Pollard directing from Edna Ferber's novel; "The Olympic Champion," Ruggles directing George Lewis, and finally a Denny script by Al Cohn.

Coast Film Mills Launch Five; January Sets Abnormal Pace

42 Pictures in Production; Universal and Paramount Start Big Features; Crime Propaganda Films the Rage; Harry Cohn Begins "Paris Nights" with Margaret Livingston

By DOUGLAS HODGES

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—Hollywood took a notion last week that its studios were almost up to the hilt with production and consequently launched only five pictures on as many lots.

Thirty-seven pictures were already in production which is a normal record for any time of the year and an abnormal record for this time in January.

Two Expensive Features Planned

The two most costly of these five are "Phyllis of the Follies," a Universal Jewel featuring Marion Nixon and Charles Rogers; and "Something Always Happens," a Paramount picture featuring Esther Ralston. Ernst Laemmle is directing the Universal film while Frank Tuttle is directing the other.

Columbia began production on "Paris Nights" a few days ago. In it are Margaret Livingston, Warner Baxter and Armand Kaliz.

FBO has started work on "Crooks Can't Win," starring Ralph Lewis and Thelma Hill. Charles Gillett is the director.

Chadwick's latest is the Larry Semon opus that Hampton Del Ruth started last week called, "The Simple Sap," obviously a cinema spring song.

Crime Films in Vogue

The crime wave (if there was one) has possibly suggested a theme to Hollywood authors of late. It is more likely that Ben Hecht's success at the Paramount lot has proved mental telepathic. It was at Paramount's lot that Ben wrote "Underworld," the crime script which was finished a few hours before Ben was. "Underworld" came out of the mill a spectacle to behold and Hecht now claims his niche. He got offers. Other writers decided to try his idea and so we have such pictures in the making as "Square Crooks" which Lou Seiler is directing for Fox; and "Crooks Can't Win," which Gillett is directing for FBO.

The satanic titles of others may be misleading but here they are: "The Devil's Skipper," Tiffany-Stahl; "Fallen Angels," Universal; "Hell's Angels," Caddo-U. A.; "Honor Bound," (convict story) Fox Films; "The Four Devils," Fox Films; and "The Godless Girl," Pathe.

Overcoming the devil and thwarting crime is apparently the theme that runs through five to 20 pictures in the making and no censor can shoot holes in that program.

Europeans Are Active

While soliloquizing let's enumerate the foreign influences in current production. They are quite tangible influences and are as numerous as the directors, born in Europe, who are on American payrolls and making American styled pictures.

Lubitsch is making "The Patriot," at Paramount where Lothar Mendez is working on a picture as yet unnamed. Michael Curtiz has just completed "Tenderloin" for Warner Bros. John Adolphi is making "The Devil's Skipper" at Tiffany-Stahl.

Edward Laemmle and Paul Leni are at Universal.

Several Changes Made In West Coast Staffs

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Several changes in the personnel of West Coast Theatres were made last week. Martie Sammons replaces Lou Golden at the Boulevard theatre; Tom MacDonald was made manager of the Wilshire, replacing B. H. Moscovitz; Al Fournet replaces Frank Brown at the Hollywood; George Christoffers succeeds T. McDonald at the Strand, Pasadena.

Scenarists Bring Two Suits for Alleged Graft of Agency

Laura Jannsens and Adele Vore Say Funds From Scripts Never Materialized—Lupe Velez Gets $260,000 Contract—Pangborn Re-signed

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Maxine Allen, also known as Maxine Alton, photoplay broker, must answer several suits brought against her by two well known scenario writers, Laura Jannsens and Adele Vore, who also writes under the name of Adele Buffington.

Both writers charge that Miss Allen misrepresented to them amounts she received from motion picture producers for their scenarios and that Miss Allen kept the difference.

EACH asks an accounting or $10,000 damages in lieu of it. It is alleged Miss Allen received $2,000 from Universal Pictures Corporation for the story, "Three Rainy Nights" although giving the plaintiff only $300 on the statement that Universal paid only $600. She also sold "Heart of a Princess" to First National, it is said, for $2,000 and stated she received but $200, and paying the plaintiff but $100. Miss Vore is asking for an accounting on 32 photoplays and Miss Jannsens asks for 19, which Miss Allen handled.

Charles T. Horan, motion picture scenarist and director, died suddenly Wednesday at his home in Ridgewood Place. Death was caused by a heart attack. He is survived by a wife and a sister. Horan was a Harvard graduate and was well known in Hollywood film circles. At the time of his death he was preparing a screen play for James Cruze. He directed several Monty Banks comedies for Pathe.

At the last meeting of the Wampas it was proposed to roadshow the 1928 Wampas Frolic. An invitation has been received by the publicists to bring the entertainment and a group of Wampas stars to San Francisco following the Los Angeles premiere, Saturday, February 25.

Lupe Velez Gets $260,000 Contract

Under Lupe Velez's new contract with United Artists she is to receive $1,000 a week for the next five years. Because she was only 18 years of age her contract had to be approved by Superior Judge Sproul. She settled her suit with her former manager, Frank Woodyard, for $20,000.

Erle Hampton, who has been connected with the Fox publicity staff for three years on the Coast, has resigned to enter the free lance field. Hampton has been with the Fox company for five years, having left the New York Herald to join the organization. He was formerly on the New York Tribune, the Philadelphia North American and Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

Lee Duncan Case Dismissed

When Robert B. Thurston, actor, failed to appear before Superior Judge Stephen Long to prosecute his suit for $15,000 against Lee Duncan, owner of several police dogs, the case was dismissed. Thurston claimed he was badly bitten and suffered from nervous shock and painful lacerations when he engaged in a screen fight with two police dogs in a Warner Brothers picture. Duncan alleged Thurston overplayed his role, assailed the canines with such fury that they turned on him in self defense.

Dorothy Farnum, prominent scenarist, who has just returned to Hollywood from a four months tour of Europe, states that the English studio heads are not particularly pleased with the percentage of British films being shown in America in comparison with the influx of films from the United States. British producers admit English films are not quite as good as the American-made product but lay the blame principally to the fact that the studios of the United States have drawn away much of England's best actorial talent.

Pangborn Gets New Contract

Cecil B. DeMille has tendered Franklin Pangborn a new contract and he will continue to appear in Pathe-DeMille pictures for some time to come. Pangborn has tentatively agreed to make a short tour in vaudeville over the Orpheum circuit, which is to be in the nature of an exploitation project to advertise his recent pictures.

Stars Make Generous Offer

At the last meeting of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Relief Fund of America, Inc., a plan was started to render aid to the needy of the film world which is far reaching. A list of stars and producers have agreed to set aside certain sums in their wills to be devoted to the Fund. It is estimated more than $25,000,000 will be derived in this manner. The list is headed by Joseph M. Schenck, Mary Pickford, D. W. Griffith, Dolores Del Rio, Douglas Fairbanks, Cecil B. DeMille, Mack Sennett, Norma Talmadge, John Barrymore, Hal Roach, Corinne Griffith, Edwin Carewe, John W. Considine, Jr., M. C. Levee, Samuel Goldwyn and Gloria Swanson.

Wampas Selects 13 "Baby Stars" Likely to Get 1928 Leads

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Selection of 13 Wampas baby stars who are considered by the publicists' organization as the most likely candidates for stardom in 1928, were made known yesterday. They are:

Sue Carol, who played in "Slaves of Beauty," Fox, and who has been in pictures only a very short time; Ann Christy, who is Harold Lloyd's leading woman in "Speedy;" June Collyer, also a Fox actress, who appears in Jack Ford's "Four Sons" and "Hangman's House;" Alice Day Universal player; Sally Eilers, promising star of the Sennett studios and formerly on the stage; Audrey Ferris, Warner Brothers contract player; Dorothy Gulliver, well known star of Universal's "Collegians;" Gwen Lee, likewise well known and under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Molly O'Day under First National contract; Ruth Taylor, star of Paramount's "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes;" Lupe Velez, a leading feminine player in "Douglas Fairbanks as the Gaucho;" Flora Bramley, Buster Keaton's find; and Lina Basquette.

Sennett's Feature to Be Released Soon; Bevan's Unit Starts New Comedy

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—The Billy Bevan company got under way at the Sennett studio this week with Vernon Dent and Dot Farley supporting. Other companies who started shooting after the three week shutdown were the "Smith Family" and the Daphne Pollard unit.

Mack Sennett announced "The Goodbye Kiss" will soon be ready for release. This picture will be released in 10 or 12 reels and has been made independent of the Pathe program. The film features his newest "discovery," Sally Eilers. Matty Kemp, Johnny Burke, Alma Bennett, Carmelita Geraghty, Lionel Belmore and Wheeler Oakman are in the cast.

Pola Must Keep Those Jewels; Settles Legal Tangle Out of Court

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Suit brought against Pola Negri by a German jewelry concern to recover $16,005 has been settled out of court. Miss Negri bought jewels while abroad and when she arrived in America she was assessed $57,000 by custom officials. She decided to return the jewels to the company, but they refused to accept them and demanded that she pay for them. Terms of the settlement were not made public.

"Michigan Kid" Begun by Willat for Universal

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 17.—Production began yesterday on "The Michigan Kid" for Universal, with Irvin Willat wielding the megaphone. Willat has spent considerable time preparing the story and it is believed the company will make of it a big production.

Conrad Nagel and Renee Adoree have been borrowed from MGM to play leading roles in the film, which is from the Alaskan story by Rex Beach.

THE STUDIO PREVIEW

"The Latest from Paris"

"THE Latest from Paris," previewed last week, stars Norma Shearer and is one of the best pictures turned out of that studio in many months. It is good for all kinds of reasons not the least of which is the direction. Sam Wood long ago proved his ability as a skillful story teller and again repeats himself in this.

It's A. P. Younger's story, and after all, a Younger story is its own recommendation.

From the time that the picture begins with George Sidney as the big Ready-to-Wear Manufacturer, until it ends with him "fixing" things for Norma Shearer, the audience laughs and cries at intervals. Miss Shearer's job is to sell cloaks to small town merchants and Ralph Forbes is her competition. Norma not only wins all the customers in the territory but also wins the salesman.

There's a lot of snow and Christmas spirit in the film and the romantic scene that usually gets a setting of moonlight and roses gets a setting here of sleighbells and snowballs.

The picture is rich with gags and although various credits on the title plate fail to mention Al Boasberg there's no doubt in my mind that he is the author of most of them. Further proof of this (Broadway will get a laugh) is the fact that Al appears in several scenes of the picture. He's not as good an actor as he is a gag man but anyhow the cutter left him in, feeling, I suppose, that if First National can make a picture with Will Rogers, M-G-M can make one with Mr. Boasberg.

Bert Roach gets a few opportunities in the comedy to do himself credit and I have said heretofore that Mr. Roach is one of the screen's best potential comedy stars. It is true though that the picture is filled with comedians and as a matter of fact Roach was not needed with George Sidney in the cast for the important comedy movement.

George has a number of moments when he leaves the audience puzzled between a laugh and a sob. His comedy is superb and his pathos is gripping.

The titles are by Joe Farnham and are quite suitable to the story.

Miss Shearer tries hard in her performance and easily stands out as the leading feminine player of the cast. Her aforementioned competition for the hand of Mr. Forbes would have been somewhat more convincing if the "other" girl had been more attractive. I can see no reason for depriving Shearer casts of beautiful girls inasmuch as Hollywood is overrun with pulchritude. It may be that the homely ones are better troupers but that hardly makes sense.

All in all it's a great piece of work and is 100 per cent in entertainment values.

HODGES.

"Tenderloin"

AN interesting crook drama is offered in "Tenderloin," which stars Dolores Costello. Michael Curtiz, the director, has invoked many features such as lap dissolves, timely fade-outs, and angles which are prevalent in leading foreign pictures.

The story deals with gangsters who believe they have been double-crossed by a young girl who innocently comes into possession of a satchel apparently full of bank notes. The suspicion against her becomes stronger when the contents of the bag reveals poker chips and worthless paper.

Chuck determines to find out what has become of the money. This involves taking her to the country and Chuck finds that he has fallen in love, and decides to go straight. The gang is tipped off regarding his actions, which they hasten to investigate. The final scenes show the girl exonerated, the gang being taken away by the police, with her following the patrol, and frantically calling to Chuck that she will wait for him.

Dolores Costello gives a good performance as the innocent girl who is subjected to third degrees, and the questions of the irate gangsters.

Conrad Nagel adds another achievement to his long list of successes as Chuck, the suave gentleman of the gang.

Mitchell Lewis, Georgie Stone, Dan Wolheim, Pat Hartigan, and Fred Kelsey are seen in support.

Warner Brothers attempted another rain sequence and flood as the "menace," which was poorly executed. Many of these shots were received with laughter by the audience.

A good story, ably acted, directed and well titled and photographed makes "Tenderloin" excellent entertainment.

Head Hunters of Jungle Filmed for Two Fox Varieties Releases

Adventures of an expedition into the trackless jungles of South America, motion pictures of the Jivero Indians shrinking the heads of their victims by pouring in hot sand, to prevent the enemies' devils from escaping to plague the slayers, and an escape via 2,000 miles of water by canoe and steamer—all these are depicted in two single-reel pictures to be released by Fox Varieties on the regular schedule, January 22 and February 5.

Expedition Backed by William Fox

The pictures, which show intimate glimpses of the life of savage tribes, descendants of the Incas, were made by an expedition backed by William Fox and headed by Dr. Herbert S. Dickey, a fellow of the Royal Geographic Society and a major in the American Army during the World war.

Originally it was intended to make a long feature out of the pictures, but the decision to limit long features to only dramatic productions placed them on the Fox Varieties program.

Dr. Dickey, who already had lived in tropical South America for 22 years, was accompanied by his wife and three cameramen, Charles F. Lehmann, Harry W. Smith and Tom Hogan, equipped with specially constructed Bell and Howell and Akeley motion picture and still cameras. The party went from New York by way of the Panama Canal to the port of Guayaquil, Ecuador, on the west coast of South America, then by train to Rio Bamba, in the Andes.

Carried on Natives' Shoulders

From Rio Bamba the explorers rode on mules up the steep and difficult trail to the Continental Divide. Due to torrential tropic rains, they literally slipped and slid down the precipitous eastern slope of the Andes. Pack mules were abandoned for human carriers. The difficulties of advancing through the tangled, matted jungle increased. A trail had to be hacked out, and the Indian carriers rebelled at entering the mysterious stronghold of the head-hunting Jiveros.

Troubles were complicated by the threat of starvation as supplies began to run low. Lehmann volunteered to make the dangerous trip back for supplies. His guides threatened mutiny, but he forced them to keep on. One night Lehmann was bitten on the neck by a tarantula. He stemmed the poison temporarily by having the Indians dig holes in his neck and pour in permanganate. He forged ahead, dropping unconscious as he reached his destination.

Lehmann was unable to return at once, but he sent back supplies and joined the party later. Luckily, Dr. Dickey was able to establish friendly relations with the Jiveros, and the expedition camped in the communal hut. This gave the party an excellent opportunity to obtain pictures of the habits of the head-hunters. The tribe had just completed a successful war with a neighboring tribe and was shrinking the head of a victim by pouring hot sand into it. The chief carefully preserved the original features.

With a new war developing, the party decided that discretion was the better part of valor. Escape to the seacoast lay through more miles of whispering tropical forest full of vague dangers. Another deluge brought further difficulties. Finally a navigable branch of the Amazon was reached, but the Atlantic was still 2,000 miles away. The adventurers bargained with the natives for canoes, which carried them down to the Amazon. There they embarked on a river steamer to Para, Brazil.

Ash Bandshows To Have Plots

Local Bands Build Name By Touring

Cafe and Hotel Orchestras Can Win Fame Through Picture House
Bookings

Since stage bandshows have become a popular entertainment, many name bands have neglected to see the value of capitalizing on their local popularity and picture house reputation by not making a tour of picture theatres. It is true that nearly every deluxe picture house today has some form of stage presentation whether in stageband form or otherwise. However, there are any number of theatres who do not attempt to install a permanent band but who will be only too glad to book a good traveling attraction occasionally, especially one that has won a wide reputation and has some good exploitation angles.

There are very few band leaders who can head their own organizations as masters of ceremonies and also act in the capacities of personality leaders. In spite of the fact that there are a great number of these personality bands permanently installed in picture houses, it is only a matter of time when the community in which they appear will tire of them.

This rule is a fact with a very few exceptions like Paul Ash, Mark Fisher and a few other individuals who have their own mannerisms. Therefore it is a very wise move and a suggestion on our part that any band now capable of doing specialties should devote their efforts in becoming a national institution instead of a community organization. With a national reputation you can always find bookings regardless of the town and its audiences.

Fail to Capitalize Popularity

Many good cafe and hotel bands now appearing in these jobs are also neglecting to capitalize on their popularity by not accepting theatre engagements. Many of them do accept theatre work occasionally but not as often as they should. A good combination of men who can play and do specialties can get a great start as a traveling band by first appearing in a picture theatre in the territory that they are known in as

Just Tickling the Keys

Can ART KAHN rattle the ivories? No not much—this popular band leader and composer is one of the best pianists ever to hail from the Windy City—He got his start a few years ago with Lubliner & Trinz, when the bandshow idea struck town—Since then he has won a name in the recording field also—Now Art is making a big hit as master of ceremonies and leader of Edward L. Hyman's stage bandshows at the Mark Strand theatre, Brooklyn, New York.

From One Paul to Another

It is interesting to note that since presentation in the form of stage bandshows have become a popular entertainment in the deluxe picture theatres, how responsible Paul Ash, the originator of this policy, is for the success of many other men. Walt Roesner, formerly trumpeter and assistant conductor for Ash, is now master of ceremonies and stage band leader at the Capitol Theatre, New York. Don Wilkins, formerly a banjo player with Ash, is now also master of ceremonies for Fanchon and Marco. The following men now with Paul Whiteman were at one time, also a part of the Paul Ash orchestra, which made its first big success at the Granada theatre, San Francisco several years ago. The men are as follows: Wilbur Hall, Chester Hazelette, and Rupert Corizer, now all of them are men of importance in the Whiteman aggregation.

New Type of Stageshow on Boards Soon

Condensed Operettas Will Alternate with Present Shows at Oriental Starting Feb. 13

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

Another one of our prediction comes true. Since presentation in the form of stage entertainment in picture houses has been one of the important factors in the last three years, this trade paper is more or less responsible for instigating this type of entertainment in more than 2,000 motion picture theatres in this country. Through these columns we also made it possible for exhibitors and production managers to keep their hands on the pulse of the picture-house-going-public by reading the constructive reports and activities in the presentation field conducted by this department. Not so very long ago we remarked through these columns that if presentation is to last the present form of stage bandshows must undergo many changes. This last prediction seems to have come true as all our other ones have.

Just a few days ago the Editor of this department learned that Paul Ash, the originator of the stage bandshow policy would inaugurate a new policy at the Oriental theatre, Chicago, which is to be the only one of its kind offered in a deluxe picture house. The new policy is based on operatic successes of an elaborate nature such as "The Mikado," "Pinafore," "Chimes of Normandy," and so forth. These productions will be staged with the same setting and costuming but modernized and all the tunes done in syncopation time.

Present Policy Needs Change

The entire production will not run over one hour and each unit will be cast with artists to fill each role as required by the original script as to character and ability of the part.

In other words every other week or so, the Oriental will offer to its public a bandshow with a plot running through its entire presentation, something that has been lacking from the average run of stage bandshows heretofore.

Inasmuch as the stage bandshow policy has taken hold in nearly every form of deluxe picture house in Chicago, it is a wise move as well as a clever stunt for the Oriental to offer this new type of entertainment which really is a novelty.

The present run of stage bandshows are getting monotonous by offering the same type of entertainment week in and week out which always consists of band numbers and specialty acts who sing or dance. Outside of a few changes of wardrobe in addition to a novel setting now and then they are a repetition of songs, steps and band numbers which are losing their drawing power value at the box office.

Watch Your Box Office

We have always taken the stand that in order for stage bandshows to be a permanent thing in the picture houses they must do something different every week to keep the same class of people coming into their theatre regularly. Outside of the few outstanding features like local favorites as Mark Fisher, Benny Krueger, and many other popular leaders, the management have no other form of box-office attraction and unless some radical changes are made very soon the box office shall suffer.

Since Paul Ash returned from Europe he has brought back some clever ideas and new music which he intends to instill into his shows from week to week. The new plot idea will not run consecutively but will alternate with the regular bandshows until the proper response is received from the audience to enable the management to learn whether or not this new type of policy is desired.

New Idea Should Succeed

Louis McDermott, the stage producer who is partly responsible for the success of the Oriental and Paul Ash's fame in Chicago, will still continue to produce these new shows in association with Paul Ash.

The first production will be offered on the week of February 13, commencing the policy with "The Mikado." This production has been tried and proven a success in San Francisco some few years ago by Ash and McDermott who at that time were doing bandshow presentations at the Granada theatre. There is no reason why this new class of picture house entertainment should not be a success and eventually replace the present form of bandshows by injecting plots in them.

Bands Should Travel

a hotel or cafe band. After creating a following locally they can then gradually develop their popularity nationally, thereby gaining not only prestige and reputation as a national institution but also increasing their drawing power at the theatres as well as their earning capacity.

Big Bands Always Travel

In addition to Paul Whiteman, Waring's Pennsylvanians, Ted Lewis, Ben Bernie, Vincent Lopez, Dan Russo and many other name bands, the Parisian Redheads, composed of all girls, have taken advantage of this situation by not restricting their efforts and appearances in one locality. Each and every one of the above bands are touring constantly and have appeared two or more weeks in each theatre, in which they created a greater success upon their return engagement than when the attractions first made their debut.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor I recently had the pleasure of spending a very enjoyable evening with your Mr. J. C. Jenkins, and incidently I received some very valuable information from him.

Perhaps he informed you that we remodeled the Court theatre of this city and we have arranged for our grand opening on January 17. Will you kindly advise all music publishers of this fact, that they may furnish our organist with song slides as well as tax free music.

I appreciate this assistance very much.—H. E. Hart, Court theatre, Auburn, Ind.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: For my solos this week I am doing a slide presentation entitled "Ernest R. Ball—In Appreciation" included in which are his most familiar compositions such as "Boy of Mine," "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," "Mother Machree," etc., finishing with the last composition he wrote before he died—"Watching the World Go By."

With the picture "What Price Glory" I am using "Charmaine," the love theme of the picture, with a singer and two violins.

I was not a little surprised and pleased to read of the merger of the Motion Picture World with your paper and I know it will be a huge success.—Ramon Berry, Alamo theatre, Chicago, Ill.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Just finished my days work a few minutes ago and as my organ solo for this week is put over in a rather unusual manner thought I would write and tell you about it.

I am using the regular Harms slide presentation called "Our Memories" which features "Just A Memory." It opens with the usual title slide and then goes into some special lyrics which are played to the melody of "Just A Cottage Small By A Waterfall" (a verse and a chorus). I play a bit of "Memories" and then we have a special slide to the effect that "the music continues to a "Howard Peterson" organ record" and we start a big electric phonograph on the stage and I blend into the record of "Just A Cottage Small" which I recorded for Columbia a little over a year ago when I was at WJJD at Mooseheart. The slides are changed as the record plays on and after the v & c I blend in with the record, the machine is shut off and I continue with my solo. It went over remarkably well so, of course, I feel happy about it.

About your magazine. I enjoy it very much indeed, most of all your department as I know a great many of the boys in Chicago, and items about friends are always interesting.

Wishing you and "your department" the most successful year in every manner, I remain with best wishes and kindest regards—Howard L. Peterson, Featured organist, Missouri theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Just a line to let you know I'm going into the Piccadilly starting Sunday the 15. I would appreciate your reviewing my solo.—Cornelius Maffie, Organist, Chicago, Ill.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Harding

Week Ending January 15

"Welcome Home" was Mark Fisher's homecoming show this week in which a fine staging featured the popular band leader and the Gould Dancers. Mark has been away from this theatre seven weeks and the reception accorded him proved that he is the idol of this community. The stage presentation ran as follows:

Opening: In full stage setting with novel costumes and scenery with the band playing an arrangement of "Soli Mio" as Mark Fisher sang the song in Italian off-stage. Upon the last line Mark made his entrance in tuxedo winning a huge reception. Immediately after this number Mark went into "Are You Happy?" singing special lyrics for the benefit of his return to his audience. The innovation given Mark for his singing at this show almost lifted the roof off of the theatre.

This was followed by the Gould Dancers in a routine quite novel from the standpoint of costumes. The girls wore white fuzzy hair wigs and ornamental bodice of gold, presumably metal conclaves which jingled throughout their dancing. Dave Gould, the ballet master of these girls, is always finding something novel and unique to present and this is one of his recent creations.

Rose and Caroll, two girls, appeared next in a harmony singing routine in which they used "My Blue Heaven" and "Just Once Again." The young ladies work as a sister team with the old pillow idea sitting on the floor close to the footlights and although they have fairly good voices and looks they are nothing extraordinary for picture houses. They managed to receive an encore at this show.

Jay Mack, a tan-faced entertainer, followed next, first with a mouth organ and then with a series of eccentric negro steps made popular down South by the darkies. The novelty of harmonica playing and similar dancing is about worn out. This chap worked as good as he was able to and was rewarded with an encore at this performance. Nowadays it is hard to say what is good or bad in a picture house, for taste and opinions vary. Personally, this reporter is about fed up on this type of entertainment and entertainers. However, the public response to this man's effort was good, therefore he must be good, for those who like him at least.

The band next played an arrangement of "Did You Mean It," one of the feature songs of the show called "Night in Spain." During this number, Charlie Buckwalter, the pianist, offered a vocal solo, in which he received a fine hand.

Russell and Marconi, two men, followed next with violin and accordion music in a selection of popular songs intermingled with comedy by-plays. These chaps have a good routine and seemed to know how to sell it. If the long haired chap would shed his locks the act as a whole would make a better appearance from the standpoint of showmanship. They won an encore at this show.

The next scene was a very novel staging showing a reproduction of a beach in Hawaii with the moon shining on the silvery waters as the Gould Dancers, all attired in native costumes sat on the beach which in this case was a level platform above band as the band played a Hawaiian tune while the girls sang softly.

Later during this number the girls descended the staircase from each end of the stage and all took a sitting position in front of footlights while they picked their steel hawaiian guitars to the same tune. It was quite a clever stunt to convey to this audience that a ballet can also do other things if necessary. The finish was a regular hula dance routine to an arrangement of "Waik-ka-kii."

Tommy Wonder followed this with his regular routine of sensational dancing which again stopped the show. Tommy has been reported many times before in these columns and never fails to draw a tremendous reception for his efforts no matter in what spot he appears.

Mark Fisher next stepped up to the footlights as the overhead lights dimmed with a red spot centered on him as he went into a vocal solo of Al Jolson's new song, "Four Walls." Mark has always been considered a great singer with a dramatic punch but you have never heard "Four Walls" sung until you hear Mark sing it. It seems that since he's been away from this theatre he has gained more polish and knack of distributing his splendid voice in every corner of the auditorium and as we predicted once before a great future is in store for this fellow in high-class musical shows or operas.

On account of his tremendous reception he was compelled to sing his own composition of "Everywhere You Go" for an encore in which the Gould Dancers assisted with a routine as everybody assembled on the stage with Mark still singing the song as the final curtain rung down.

New York Capitol

Week Ending January 13

The Capitol theatre opened their program this week with "The Student Prince" played by the Capitol Grand Orchestra conducted by Eugene Ormandy. Sylvia Miller and William Robyn sang the chorus to this song which seemed to please the audience.

"Topsy Turvy" was the stage presentation. The curtain rises on "The Capitoliens" in front of a scene of topsy turvy houses painted in bright colors.

As the first number the Chester Hale Girls appear in very striking green and white Russian costumes and render a dance featuring their great green and white capes which they swing around the stage. "The Capitoliens" then played "Just a Memory" with a vocal refrain by one of the orchestra.

Ballet Caprice was the next number which was the favorite of the entire presentation. Six clowns dressed in ragged white clothes with white-washed faces imitated a ballet corps, a specialty dancer, and several numbers of their own. Their imitation was ridiculously funny and they were recalled again and again by their enthusiastic audience.

Fain and Dunn appeared and sang a few specialty numbers. These popular fellows were held over from last week by special request. The Chester Hale Girls rendered a dance dressed as horses with real imitation hoofs inside of hobby horses. This was very cleverly done.

The orchestra played and sang the new song, "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie," which was funny enough to make even the most serious of the audience hold his sides with laughter.

George Givot, the American school boy appeared in a pair of 40 inch pants and sang some comical songs, but no one not even he, seemed to know what it was all about.

As the closing number the Chester Hale Girls did some lively steps while the topsy turvy houses in the back of the stage turned around displaying girls in little green and white costumes inside of them.

Philadelphia Stanley

Week Ending January 7

The program at the Stanley this week was a musical one of mediocre quality.

The Stanley Symphony Orchestra presented an overture of operatic gems, including Barcarolle and Anvil Chorus, with some realistic touches in the latter.

The Ponce Sisters, Ethel and Dorothea, and their vocal harmonies were well received. They sang "Blue Heaven," "Among My Souvenirs," "We're Kissing the Blues Goodbye" and "We Told Them All About You" and their animated delivery put the songs across.

Arnold Johnson and his orchestra do well but in these days when an orchestra has to be almost a whole vaudeville show to attract attention, and when so many better orchestras have been featured on the Stanley programs we cannot enthuse about this one. One number that was clever, however, was "A Quiet Evening at Home with the Radio." The back of the stage was in darkness, Johnson at the front of the stage adjusted the dial of the radio and the members of the orchestra imitated the various sounds and forms of entertainment that one might get on the radio, including static, bed time stories, negro prayer meetings and jazz. They sang "At Dawning," "The Song Is Ended," "I'm Coming, Virginia," and "Blue Heaven."

Paul Ash took his audience "Way Back When" movies were 10 cents and father used to ride on a bicycle. The above is the title of the stage show this week in which Louis McDermott reproduced the entire front part of an old time movie auditorium with balcony seats and pit orchestra and etc. Although the show was not heavily laden with talent the comedy situations and continuity made the show one of the best entertainments ever offered at this theatre. The presentation ran as follows:

Opening: with slides on the screen requesting the audience to please take their hats off and keep their feet out of the aisle and so forth which reminded one of the old days when the operator would flash the slide "One Minute Please" whenever his machine went on the blink.

During the series of these comedy slides candy peddlers ran up and down the aisle as a few hundred feet of the old film "The Great Train Robbery" started to unravel. During this screening the only musical accompaniment was from a piano, typical of the old days and as the scenes appeared patrons sitting in the box seats discussed the plot to one another in loud voices.

This was very funny and got many laughs and as the picture ended another slide announced that Professor Ash and his Hungarian orchestra would present an overture. After this Paul Ash and his men took their places in the orchestra pit on the stage and then went into a hand arrangement of "William Tell." During this arrangement many comedy situations arose from the lighting effects and the manner in which Ash conducted the band. Throughout the overture a waiter would cross the stage with a huge glass of beer in his hand.

At the end of this number the orchestra men sat back in their seats as Harry Hume, the waiter in overgrown dress suit, appeared on the miniature stage singing "Under the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," with illustrated slides. It is needless to say how funny this was compared to the modern way of song exploitation.

The next specialty act on the bill was Johns and Mabley, in a series of smart chatter dressed in typical old fashion style.

Emerson and Baldwin, two men, presented a versatile offering of hokum magic stunts and some real juggling feats at the end of their routine. One of these men possesses a very clever line of comedy talking and a keen sense of humor, which proved a great asset to the act.

Eva Mandell was next announced as the "child wonder," and the child wonder turned out to be nearly a 400 pound girl. She opened with her usual song, "Nobody Loves a Fat Girl," later going into one of her own compositions "How Do I Know You Still Love Me?" first as a ballad and then in syn-copated time, in which she offered her conception of a cabaret singer singing the same song. Her reception was as big as her size. As an encore she offered "Some of These Days" as a tribute to Sophie Tucker whom she tried to imitate in her style of singing.

Burns and Kissen, opened on the miniature stage as "Casey and O'Brien," but later came down to work in front of hand with Ash. This time the hoys offered a special routine on "In a Little Spanish Town" and "It All Depends on You," in addition to their regular standard offering. The type of work that these men do seems to just please a picture house audience and we firmly believe that if there were more Burns and Kissens in presentations that the much predicted story bandshows would become a realization.

During this scene the band struck up an arrangement of a fast tune as the entire cast assembled on stage for the finale.

This must have been visiting week in Chicago. . . . Those who were guests of our "fair city". . . . And it is, in spite of the fact that they all call it the "Windy City" were. . . . Frank Cambria, of Public New York production office, formerly a Chicagoan. . . . Charles Krull, managing director of the Stanley-Fabian theatres. . . . Joe Leo, brother-in-law of William Fox, now in charge of Ascher's theatres. . . . Ben Bornstein, president of the music publishing firm of Ager, Yellen & Bornstein. . . . And many others that lack of space prevents our using their names. . . . Listen fellers! Did you hear the new Paul Ash plan of running stage bandshows? Better turn back to page 51 of this issue and read our lead story on it. . . . Paul has decided to stage condensed form operettas like "The Mikado" to alternate with the regular shows every other week or so. . . . While on the subject of bandshows let us say right here that the Keith-Albee-Orpheum people are installing this policy in one of their theatres in Syracuse this week. . . . Four more are expected to follow suit on February 20. . . . Nat Kalcheim, formerly of the booking department of the Junior Orpheum, is now associated with the Chicago William Morris representatives. . . . For the benefit of those who do not know these gentlemen I will give them their names in full. . . . Max Turner, manager of the office, Phil Tyrrell and Sam Bramson, associates, and now Nat Kalcheim and Harry Santley. . . . We hear that George Givot is running wild on Broadway. . . . Watch out, George, or someone will cop your balloon pants. . . . Sophie Tucker is making her first New York appearance this week as a picture house artist. . . . She's in a special Jack Partington hand unit at the Paramount. . . . Speaking of the Paramount, our friend Lou Kosloff, its personality band leader is confined to his bed for a few days from a recent stroke of palsey. . . . Al Mitchell is pinch-hitting for him. . . . Cyril Gutheorl, featured organist of the Penn theatre in Pittsburgh, has opened a school for pupils desiring to become organists. . . . A local favorite always finds this a good side line. . . . Mark Fisher received a beautiful basket of flowers together with a personally signed tribute from the Business Men's Association of Logan Square, Chicago, when he returned to their neighborhood theatre. . . . We understand that Armin Hand is now leading the Piccadilly theatre orchestra of Chicago. . . . His brother, Arthur, is doing the same for the new Shore theatre, where George Vlach is the featured organist. . . . Ted Leary has just renewed a two years contract with the National Playhouses, as master of ceremonies for their Stratford theatre, Chicago. . . . Oh say, we nearly forgot to tell you that Cornelius Maffie, formerly at the Admiral, is now guest organist at the Chicago Piccadilly. . . . That is he was to be according to this morning's report. . . . Fred Kinsley, the only featured organist in New York is still presenting solos at Keith's Hippodrome in spite of the unraisable organ. . . . Do you know that Howard L. Peterson, formerly staff organist of WJJD of Mooseheart and a Columbia recording artist, is now the feature organist at Public's Missouri theatre in St. Joseph? . . . Markell & Faun just opened their Southern tour of Public. . . . Their inseparable friends, Heller & Riley are in Chicago and may soon open a tour of Fanchon & Marco. . . . Walter Hirsch, a local songster is now in charge of the organ solos at Villa Morets' Chicago office. . . . Lindsey Stevens, formerly of that department is now touring for the firm. . . . Just got a nice letter from Johnny Fink, of the Larry Conley music company. . . . It says that he needs the "Herald-World" awful bad. . . . Those who wonder where the title "The Unholy Three" originated from will learn that Rocco Voeco, Al Beilin and Harry Hume are really the ones referred to. . . . All of these gentlemen, if we may use such a refined term, happen to manage branch offices for music publishers as side lines. . . . Harms have moved their Chicago office from the Capitol Building to the Woods. . . . Chick Castle and Dave Silverstein are still in charge. . . . Roy Mack has also moved into the Woods theatre building. . . . Jack Perry was on as special added attraction at Marks Bros. theatre last week. . . . Koehler & Edith, the sensational roller skaters are now touring Puhlix circuit in a band unit.

"Hello 1928" was the stage bandshow offered here this week featuring Al Belasco and his novelty syncopators. In addition to the Gould dancers, Billy Snyder, Pauline Gaskins, and Ned Norworth headed the cast. This same show appeared at the Norshore last week and was reported then in these columns. Briefly we give an outline of the proceedings here.

Opening: In front of scrim with the Gould Dancers doing a special routine as the scrim curtain bearing a huge calendar rose to the band's tune of "Are You Happy?"

At this point Al Belasco entered and introduced Pauline Gaskins, who sang "What'll You Do," using Al as a foil and then went into a series of musical comedy steps which won her an encore and a large reception. This young lady has been reported many times before and as stated then her personality and talents seem to just fit this type of show.

Marion and Lazar, two men, followed next in troubadour costumes singing "Just a Memory" and a medley of Operatic tunes with modern lyrics. These boys have splendid voices and harmonize fine. At this show they stopped the performance completely. They were compelled to take several encores.

They were immediately followed by the Gould Dancers in a novel routine danced to an operatic arrangement. The steps were nothing unusual but the routine as a whole appeared as a novelty from the costuming and musical arrangements.

Billy Snyder, was next announced who opened with "Ray-Ray-Rainy" and later went into a dramatic recitation of "The Kid." This chap has a fine personality and a clever line of material that should be appropriate for high-class picture houses. As a master of ceremonies he should do well and some outfit should grab him. His routine was highly received at this show.

A band arrangement of "I've Told Them All About You" was offered next by Al Belasco and his boys in hot style. During this number, Al offered some of his cute mannerisms and clever eccentric steps while directing the arrangement. This particular style of conducting has been imitated by one or more leaders in town who "would be originators," however, Al is imitable in any of his steps, and as a clever entertainer stands in a class all by himself.

Ned Norworth, the nut comedian, was next in a series of comedy antics, wise chatter, and a lot of other silly things that kept this audience in a continuous roar of laughter. It seems that the more goofy, comics can be nowadays, the bigger a success they can accomplish in picture houses. This fellow stopped the show cold.

The Gould Dancers were next in a routine to the band's arrangement of "Shake the Blues Away" as the background illuminated with stars, while a huge star descended bearing the numerals 1928 as a final curtain started to lower.

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Week Ending January 13

"All Aboard" is this week's offering here. The title being taken from the fact that Schooler is going to New York for a two weeks' vacation.

Billy Meyers opens the performance singing before the curtain, "Countin' the Days." As the curtains part showing a novel setting of luggage and letters and photos, and the orchestra dressed in baggage-men's uniforms with red caps, the Abbott Dancers, all eight of them, coming out of a trunk on either side of the stage strut their stuff. As they finish Schooler makes his appearance carrying a parrot cage and bags, and joins the girls in singing the chorus to "Countin' the Days."

The Three Sunshine Boys give the audience some clever popular song numbers, with one of the trio accompanying on the piano. Among the selections sung by the boys were "Where Is My Meyer," "I Scream—You Scream—We All Scream for Ice Cream," "I Love to Catch Brass Rings on a Merry-Go-Round," "It's Rain, Rain, Rainin'," and "Take a Look at Kentucky." The boys' voices blended nicely and they received good applause.

The next selection by the band, "Tomorrow," giving Glen Welty's version of the number was very well done. Billy Meyers first sang the selection through accompanied by the orchestra, and then the Abbott Dancers in very attractive costumes did a bit of toe dancing to the melody, and the number concluded with the Treble Cleff Quartette, made up of four ladies, singing the number from the upper stage attired in beautiful costumes.

Song and dance drew good applause as rendered by the Darling Twins, who first sang "Are You Happy," followed by a bit of snappy dancing. For their encore they did a clever bit of soft shoe dancing.

In the next number we find Billy Meyers and Schooler, the latter playing the piano as well as joining Meyers in the song, "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie." This selection went over big and was followed by Billy singing, "Charmaine," accompanied by Dave. The two boys got a big hand for their selections.

Now we have Nat Nazarro, Jr., who is taking Schooler's place during his absence. Nat, who has acted as master of ceremonies at theatres along the coast, is quite a versatile fellow, and introduces his number by playing the cello, following this by singing, "Will You Remember Me," and closing his act with a clever bit of dancing. Dave then turns the baton over to Nat, and the orchestra plays as the Abbott Dancers in red bellboy costumes and carrying suitcases step a fast number. The lights are then dimmed and the girls take up their suitcases which are lighted and spell, "By, By, Dave." Dave sings a farewell song, and the girls imitating a train shuffle off stage with Schooler between them.

The curtains are dropped to part again upon the "Schooler Special," showing him upon the rear platform of the speeding train augmented by scenic views from the motion picture machine, waving good bye to the audience. The number was perhaps the best since the new policy went into effect and went over big. E. J. Weisfeldt deserves credit for the staging of the presentation which was good.

Chicago Diversey

Week Ending January 14

Joe Kayser and his Musical Funsters opened his "Joytime" stageshow with the boys playing and singing, "Marvelous," "All Wrong."

A team of three men and a girl, next offer some very good comic, tango and adagio dancing. The comedians received the more generous applause.

Flavio Plasencia, a popular baritone from a local Radio station next sang "La Paloma," in his native Spanish. He then did, "All for You" and "In a Little Spanish Town," in English. He earned two encores of "Among My Souvenirs" and "Irish Eyes Are Smiling."

Helen Kennedy, follows by singing "A Darn Good Man" and "Nothings Gonna Stop Me Now." She also earned two encores of "Look at that Baby," which she sang to Kayser.

The orchestra next played "Bungalow of Dreams."

While the pianist sang a chorus, the back curtain rises to a pretty setting of a bungalow during this arrangement. This received a very good hand.

The Morgan Girls next offer some very good acrobatic dancing, to a fine hand.

Jack Waldron, next offered comedy songs, and chatter. His eccentric and Jewish black bottom received a good hand.

Joe Kayser next sang "What Will You Do" in a pleasing manner. The entire company came on at the end of second chorus for the finale.

Brooklyn Strand

Week Ending January 13

Art Kahn pepped right into his second week as the feature stage attraction at the Brooklyn Mark Strand in a new Edward L. Hyman production, "Jazz a la Carte," in which he was assisted by the twenty-piece stage band and nine specialty artists. This extended engagement of Kahn as a "personality" draw looks like the real goods, as the Chicago importation plays a snappy piano and delivers his "master of ceremonies" gags with a punch.

With "Jazz a la Carte" there was an overture presentation, bringing the musical end of the show up to forty-five minutes, as the big act required thirty-six minutes. The feature photoplay, Billie Dove in "The Love Mart," took one hour and sixteen minutes, and the Topical Review was given eleven minutes, thus making a complete performance of two hours and twelve minutes.

The Famed Mark Strand Orchestra, under the batons of Willy Stahl and Sascha Kindler, started off the deluxe shows with Thomas' "Raymond," nine minutes long.

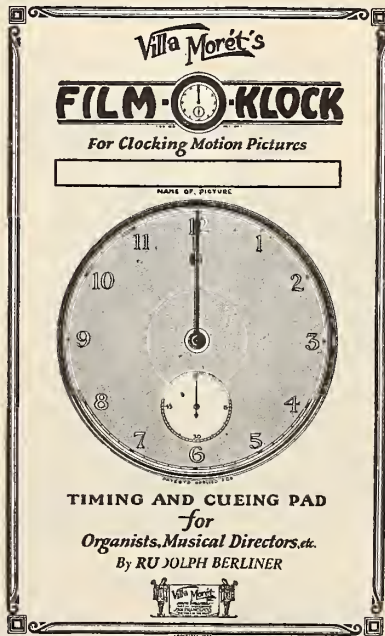

Following the Topical Review, which was followed by a short scenic to permit men from the orchestra pit to go to the production stage, "Jazz a la Carte" got under way with an introductory leader announcing the name of the presentation, playing up Kahn's name and the names of the specialty artists. The curtains then opened showing the band seated full stage and backed up by French curtains in front of which were hung black velvet streamers. The orchestra opened with "Did You Mean It," with vocal chorus by three of the musicians.

Kahn then brought out George and Jimmie Trainor, tap dancers, who did a fast routine to big applause. Next Eldora Stanford, soprano, was introduced, and sang "Among My Souvenirs." Kahn then had the piano rolled out and obliged with "Dawn of Tomorrow" and "Flapperette," and had hard work in quieting the audience, which kept asking for more.

The Four Biltmore Boys were next brought out, their novelty songs going very big and proving to be the big spot of the whole presentation.

A special arrangement of "My Blue Heaven" by the orchestra followed, with a "hot" finish. The draw curtains were closed and reopened and then Kahn introduced Georgie Raft, the whirlwind dancer, who worked up a big finish by bringing on the little colored boy, Snowball, who helped Raft with the black bottom.

Chicago Uptown

Week Ending January 15

Herman and Seamon, Dolores and Eddy, Irmanette, and Jerome Mann were the big hits in Bennie Krueger's exceptional stage show, "Listen In," at the Uptown this week.

The show started with "I Left My Sugar Standing in the Rain," by the orchestra, with a vocal refrain very well given by Jackie Heller, and a saxophone solo by Krueger.

After this the Ada Kaufman Girls went into a keen routine to the "Doll Dance"; and then Jerome Mann sang "Is She My Girl Friend?", and gave some impressions of Ted Lewis singing "Just Around the Corner" and of Eddie Leonard. He was neat with his feet, and for an encore gave "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady," which brought a big hand.

Carlos and Inez, fancy ballroom and toe dancers, were fair.

"Did You Mean It When You Said 'I Love You'?" was the next number by the orchestra, in which Heller sang the chorus, and a saxophone quartette was featured.

Dolores and Eddy, "bowery dancers," followed with clever novelty cut ups, that brought laughs and a big hand. Dolores sang "He's My Beau," and when called for an encore, made a very cute "thank you" speech.

The next girl on the program certainly had educated feet and hands. Her name was Irmanette, and after playing "Czardas" on the violin, she did a Charleston and black bottom to a number from George White's Scandals. She took three curtain calls, but did not give an encore.

Herman and Seamon, just goof acrobats, came on without saying a word, and in one minute the audience was howling, until by the time they finished their act the audience was just about as exhausted from laughing, as they were from their strenuous work. "You know, some acrobats get tired, but we don't, oh, no, we're just about dead!" one of the team said after he could get his breath when it was all over. They were the biggest hit on the program, and deserved to be.

After a hot routine by the Kaufman Girls to the Varsity Drag all acts came on the stage for the Finale, in which they joined in to "You Don't Like It, Not Much!"

Observation: A fast, good-looking, and well-trained ballet goes a long way in making stage presentations successful. The Ada Kaufman Girls seem to meet this description.

New York Roxy

Week Ending January 13

The Roxy overture, "Sicilian Vespers," played by the Roxy Symphony Orchestra, led by Erno Rapee, was followed this week by "Bacchanale," the opening presentation number.

The curtain rises on Bacchante, portrayed by Maria Gambarelli, holding a large golden goblet under an immense bunch of grapes. She drinks the supposed wine, and after rendering the dance of Bacchante, she falls into a spell. The inner curtain then rises on the court of Bacchus.

The Sixteen Roxyettes and the Roxy Ballet Corps do some special dances, as well as Nicholas Daks and George Kedden as fawns. Alex Toura as Bacchus then rescues Bacchante from her spell, and they do some very pretty dancing, assisted by the entire dancing ensemble.

Berlin's "The Song is Ended," is the next number. Harold Van Duzee dressed as a travelling singer seated on a little bench, sings Berlin's song while above him behind a transparent curtain, two dancers—Addison Fowler and Florenz Tamara—are seen leaving the ballroom, sitting in a trellis in the garden and having a few short hours before the song is ended and they waltz away again. Fowler and Tamara lend their usual grace and beauty to this tender scene.

Friml's "The Song of the Vagabonds" from "The Vagabond King" is most realistically portrayed and sung by Douglas Stanbury and the ensemble, representing the irate French mob as they stood below the steps of the castle where their Beloved Rogue was being tortured. Behind the mob is a black velvet curtain which brings out the vividness of this fanatical gathering.

The last presentation was "A Palm Beach Frolic." The curtain rises on a pavilion at Palm Beach. At the table were seated the ensemble dressed to represent the usual Palm Beach gathering. Hovering around them are waiters. As the curtain goes up the ensemble is singing "By the Sea." Bernard and Rich, two very gifted dancers, then delight the audience with incredible dance steps.

The Four Aristocrats, accompanying themselves on musical instruments, then sing a song to the effect that one can do anything under the sun under the moon.

"When Love Comes Stealing," composed by those masters, Erno Rapee and Lew Pollock was sung by the ensemble while Addison Fowler and Florenz Tamara, those two graceful figures of European fame went through some Spanish steps. Suddenly the waiters, who are in reality the Russian Cathedral Choir, rushed to the front of the stage and sang Serenade Espagne.

Irving Shelton then rendered a Danse eccentric, followed by the Steward Sisters singing "South Wind," with a few dance steps. The Sixteen Roxyettes did a specialty number followed by Leonard Harper's Steppers, eight young colored fellows in The Caddie's Trot which was certainly a novelty for the audience.

For the closing number the dancing ensemble appeared in beautiful and certainly original bathing costumes, and exhibited them in a few novel dance numbers.

St. Louis Missouri

Week Ending January 13

The stage show carried the very intriguing title of "In Dutch" and wooden shoes, wind mills and quaint Dutch settings were the prevailing vogue of the stage decorations.

In "In Dutch" they attempted more or less successfully to bring forth all of the color and gaiety of "The Red Mill." Four new acts were imported for the occasion while Arthur Nealy had a new song hit, "Tell It to the Red, Red Rose."

The band leader personally offered a Dutch musical comedy number in which he was supported by several of the Missouri Girls.

Leonid Leonardi selected as his orchestral overture, "Mignon." The musicians were aided by Milton Slosser at the organ.

"In Dutch" enabled Freddy and Eddy to sing some pleasing numbers, while Billy Rhodes danced and did a split across the backs of two chairs. Julia Garity filled the auditorium with her pleasing voice. Her bluey-blue harmonies were catching.

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending January 14

As his farewell presentation, Al Short arranged an exceptionally good program for the Howard this week, offering "Gypsyland," colorful and entertaining.

The curtain went up on a picturesque atmospheric outdoor scene around a gypsy camp. Miriam Lax and August Werner gave songs which were well liked. This was followed by a gypsy dance, the chorus of eight girls, The Eight Lenora Dancers, claimed to have been trained by Mme. Lenora herself. Their costumes for the several numbers they gave were very pretty.

Chaz Chase, comedian, gave his trick "eating" stunt in which he apparently consumes two boxes of matches, his shirt front and all else conveniently within reach, receiving a good hand.

Parker and Lee, gypsy tap dancers, drew well. Ron Portman and Morton Sherdahl, singers, likewise, were liked.

The honors, however, go to George Lyons, harpist, who each time was hailed back for the second encore.

Al Short and his Melody Boys rendered four favorite selections, accompanied on the organ by George Lee Hamrick.

Mr. Short during the program gave a short message of thanks for his royal hospitality while in Atlanta and his appreciation of the manner in which the patrons of the Howard have received his presentations. He leaves Sunday for Chicago where he will become band master for the Capitol theatre. Much regret has been expressed for his leaving and critics have been generous in expressions of his popularity and work while in Atlanta.

Chicago Chicago

Week Ending January 15

The presentation at the Chicago this week included the Spitalny overture and the stagershow with Jules Buffano as master of ceremonies. Spitalny's overture was unusually good, and during which Bruno Steindl, pianist, a tenor singing, "Song of Songs," Margaret Matias, soprano, a violinist and a ballet dancer doing a swan dance were featured. Each of these featured artists were unusually fine and their efforts received fine applause.

Buffano's presentation is called, "Steppin' High," and features Louise and Andrew Carr, brother and sister. This young pair know all the steps in the tap dancers' catalogue and a number of their own besides. They can dance! Their tap dance to "The Stars and Stripes" gets a fine hand. The audience begs for more but instead the father and mother come out to give a tap dance of the kind they did 25 years ago in Chicago, and it is hard to see how they could have been much better than when they had their youth. Mother and dad know their taps. The act ends with the four dancing for all they're worth. The applause is great.

This fine number is followed by Ross and Gilbert who give a new conception of blue singing. The way they sing "The St. Louis Blues" is indescribable but more than good. They make a big hit with the cash customers, and follow with "Lay Me Down to Sleep in Caroline." The act is ended with a radium effect on their clothing that is a knockout.

This is followed with a band number, "Dream Kisses," featuring a cornet and vocal solo. This proves an unusually good number.

Then comes Lew Fink, who does a good comedy acrobatic dance. The audience applauds a number of times during his act when Lew introduces some new ideas in this sort of dancing. He makes a good hit with his audience.

The last act is a Japanese troupe of hand balancers, tumblers, jugglers and whatnot. The act is well costumed and staged. These Kikutas Japs are as good or better than any similar act this reporter has ever seen. They end the show with a colorful and whirlwind finale.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending January 13

The feature attraction at the "Met" this week was the personal appearance of Fannie Ward, "the most remarkable looking woman of her age in our age." If we had not read that Miss Ward is sixty years of age, we should have thought her just another attractive and clever young actress, for so sensational is her juvenility in face, spirit, physical attractions, and her clever wit. This remarkable looking woman came here direct from London to entertain us with selections of songs and stories.

The stage presentation was Frank Cambria's "Treasure Ships," an attractive and richly staged production. The rising curtain disclosed the stage rigged up as a Spanish pirate ship, and all the actors, even Gene, leader of the famous stage band, were in colorful costume of that nation.

The first on the stage was the captain of the pirate ship. He sang a song introductory to the rest of the scene. The Maids from Mexico in the persons of the Felicia Sorel Girls were next in a snappy dance of Mexico.

Then came Carlo and Norma, the Argentine Gauchos, in some solo foot work. Norma's graceful dancing and her beautiful Spanish shawl made a pretty picture.

A bass solo by the pirate captain, Walter Smith, came here, and was entitled "Song of the Buccaneer," a rollicking sea song. Then Mary Fabian sang a soprano solo, "Serenade Granada," "Hasta Manna."

Val and Ernie Stanton were a big hit with their comedy stunt and were called back for three encores. They could sing, dance, imitate anything from a Jews Harp to a rooster, play the uke, spring jokes—and how! Incidentally their Spanish costumes were quite stunning, and this is not a joke.

Charles Bennington's Harmonica Boys were a good number. Their red, yellow and black costumes were striking to say the least, and Charles as the orchestra leader was a howl. Charles Bennington in a wooden legged dance entitled "Long John Silver," accompanied by the boys, all with one wooden leg, was something "different" and clever. Then the Sorel Girls danced a tap step with the boys that went off well. "Together We Two" was played by Gene Rodemich and the band.

For the finale the girls were dressed in gorgeous costumes and headdress which made a colorful picture against the ship's background. The whole performance was beautiful and well-acted.

Chicago Norshore

Week Ending January 14

Al Kvale and Harry Gourfain who devised the stageband show this week deserve credit for their interpretation and following of the plot of "Captain Kiddo," which was followed in every way.

The opening band number, played by the orchestra behind a scrim curtain, was "Over the Bounding Main." At the finish the curtain rose disclosing a pirate ship with the Gould Dancers posed around the piratical orchestra, who play "Over the Billowy Main."

A Pirate (Willard Andelin), on the upper bridge sings the number in a pleasing bass voice. "Capt. Kiddo (Al Kvale) then enters and orders the girls to dance a routine.

Cloyd Griswold, the well liked baritone of the orchestra, then sings a fine chorus of "Rain," after which Kvale, playing the saxophone, interpolates "April Showers" and "Just Like A Butterfly," with the orchestra finishing with "Rain." This was very well received.

The Maybelle Sisters, then offer an acrobatic routine that wins them an encore. "Sweeping the Cobwebs off the Moon" was next sung by Clem Dacy to two girls who later do a high-kicking routine.

Two Pirates, the Luster Bros., next offer some fine contortion work. Three slightly inebriated pirates, (Dacy, Post and Andelin) then sing those old favorites, "Sweet Adeline," "Good-night, Ladies" and "Merrily We Roll Along," to a very fine hand. On both sides of the ship, the cover of a huge treasure chest opens and four girls jump out of each chest and do a fine routine.

Hines and Leonard, two young ladies, next sing popular tunes and play a piano, to a fair hand.

West, Lake and Hane, three boys next have the audience roaring at their comic singing and dancing. One of the boys impersonates a woman and when he sung an operatic comic version the house became hysterical. The other two boys did some very good dancing.

The eight Gould Dancers, in beautiful pirate costumes, followed by the entire ensemble sang "Song of the Vagabond" for the finale.

New York Paramount

Week Ending January 13

As the opening number the Paramount Orchestra played, "The Beautiful Blue Danube," "The Voice of Spring," and the well-known Polka all of that famous composer, Johann Strauss. These lovely selections of the waltz king were sung by Gladys St. John and Rhys Morgan.

Mrs. Jesse Crawford with her usual splendid ability played "The Song is Ended," "I Told Them All About You," "Head Over Heels in Love" and "Mary, What Are You Waiting For?" on the organ.

The Paramount presented this week "Havana." The curtain rises on a scene portraying the patio and garden of a Havana home.

"Down in Old Havana Town" was the first number danced by the Boris Petroff Girls with the Paramount Stage Orchestra accompanying. Al Mitchell, the guest director of the Paramount stage orchestra conducted them in "Oh, Ya, Ya," a very catching melody.

Wally Jackson, a young college student spending the Winter in Havana, appeared in some clever dance steps and showed how he originated the black bottom while killing black ants during a plague.

The orchestra then played, "Dream Kisses," with a vocal interpretation by Coster and Hewlett, who, with beautifully blended voices, do justice to Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" from which this song is taken.

The "Paul Whiteman of Havana" next appeared in the person of Wally Jackson, a funny thin little comedian in a big red coat with gold epaulets which would not stay on his shoulders. His gyrations in attempting to direct the orchestra were ludicrous in the extreme.

George Dewey Washington, a real negro from the South, made his first appearance in New York City singing "On the Road to Mandalay," "Let a Smile by Your Umbrella," and "Blue Heaven." His voice was of unusually fine timbre.

"The Serenaders" portrayed by the Petroff Girls appeared with huge guitars as a background for Dorothy Berke and Mario Naldi in "Lolita." This couple fascinated the audience by the grace and intricate movement of their interpretation of the tango.

The finale, "Under Your Skies of Blue" was sung by Hewlett as she was lowered from the top of the stage, representing a framed portrait of a famous Spanish lady. This was assisted by the entire ensemble.

St. Louis Ambassador

Week Ending January 13

"Publix Follies" was the vehicle for Ed Lowry's talents this week.

The cast of "Publix Follies" was a big one, including Roy Cropper, New York star of "The Student Prince," the Lime Trio, eccentric comedians; the Four Runaways, comedy steppers; Sylvia and Clemence, dancers; the Three Kemmys, and twelve artists models.

MILTON SLOSSER

Solo Organist

Fifth Year at the

MISSOURI THEATRE, ST. LOUIS

(By Sam Coslow, pinch-hitting for Larry Spier.)

Well, here goes: I've written songs, patter, recitations, musical comedy skits, Jewish parodies, and sweet sentiments for greeting cards, but this is the first time I've ever written a Column. But life is short, and I'd like to try everything at least once—the truth of the matter is that Larry Spier, my business partner in the enterprising young music publishing firm of Spier and Coslow, has left on a short business trip and as somebody has to be here to report the latest news from Tin-Pan-Alley, I'm elected. If I don't stop the show, remember, I'm a songwriter on week-days.

Did you ever stop to think of some of the queer things that have placed certain people in the Hall of Fame? Well, a young man well known to all Broadwayites will go down in history as the originator of all those funny sounds like, "Doo doodle doo," "Vo-de-o-do" or what have you. His name is Arthur Johnston, and he is noted for being the man who puts all of Irving Berlin's melodies on paper—in fact Berlin never goes anywhere without having Arthur along, as he may think of something at any moment and if Arthur isn't there with a piece of manuscript paper, the world might lose another masterpiece. Anyhow, what I started out to say was that Arthur suddenly blossomed forth one day with a harmony arrangement of "Sittin' in a Corner," in which every line ended with "that's all I do—doodle-o-o-do" if you get what I mean. That was the germ that started it all. From then on, every sister act, harmony team, etc. on the stage commenced putting, "Doodles," "Vo-de-o's," "How-de-ows" and various noises and sounds of all descriptions between the lines of their ditties. The rest is history. But I started out to write snappy news items, not short stories. . .

Broadway's leading songwriters were introduced to the general public for the first time last Thursday night on the Maxwell Coffee Hour, over the National Broadcasting Chain. Over twenty million people heard Walter Donaldson, Ray Henderson, Buddy De Sylva, Lew Brown, Benny Davis, Cliff Friend and others personally sing and play their latest compositions, under the sponsorship of Nat Shilkret of Victor record fame. In this way, Tin Pan Alley extended that night from coast to coast. Some of the new songs introduced were corkers, and will annoy you a-plenty in months to come, especially Walter Donaldson's new one "There Must Be a Silver Lining," which by the way I helped him write—I held the pencil.

A new addition to the jazz orchestra on the Great White Thoroughfare—Arnold Johnson, who has been missing from Broadway for several years, returns with his band, this time at the new Park Central Hotel, replacing the Cass Hagan outfit.

Joseph Gilbert, representing London's Tin-Pan-Alley, is in town with a flock of new English popular song hits. He is also looking for some American hits to take back to England, as he represents most of the popular music houses in England. This is his fourth crossing in a year. On his last crossing he brought back "Among My Souvenirs."

There are mysterious whisperings among music men of another "Prisoner Song" beginning to spread out in the sticks. It is called "Lonesome Road." Heard anything about it?

Well, with the playing of "Smiles," I will sign off, trusting my listeners have enjoyed another delightful hour of melodies old and new, and in closing my friends, I wish to state that to all those who write in care of this station, please tell me how you enjoyed the program. I will send absolutely free, an autographed photo of my Aunt Cordelia, of Swishing Falls, Wisconsin, playing the Brazilian Banjo-sax. Good night, all.

—SAM COSLOW.

ORGAN SOLOS

Jesse Crawford (Chicago Chicago) made a triumphal return to the Chicago this week, after having been featured organist at the Paramount in New York for the last year. There are few organists that can get the effects out of an organ that Crawford can. His rolls are tremendously thrilling, his echoing bells are beautiful, and who can play a ballad with more feeling! When he plays a song, he gives it all the dramatic effects of a perfect short story. There is the increasing intensity of dramatic effect, then the climax, and then the denouement. Crawford first plays "The Sunrise," which he calls "An Excellent Bit of Philosophy for the New Year." Then he plays bits from his recent records, "When Day Is Done," "After We Kiss," "My Blue Heaven," "Russian Butterfly" and the finale to the overture to "Martha." The audience gave him a wonderful reception.

Jim Thomas (Newark Branford) offered a very clever novelty stunt this week in the way of a scrim presentation featuring a trained dog. This novelty is enacted entirely by the dog by playing a specially constructed piano and bells. Towards the finish he did a Good-night Stunt by kneeling near his bed in prayer and then retired, and as he did, he pulled the covers up over him. The stunt was conceived by Cliff Hess and is one of the best novelties yet to appear in a picture house as an organ presentation. Many popular tunes were softly played during this action.

Milton Charles (Chicago Oriental) presented an original stunt called "Deciding A Question," in which the chief question was whether or not, heaven could also be found on earth. The popular tunes played were "Way Down South in Heaven," "Is She My Girl Friend," "Dream Kisses," "An Old Guitar and An Old Refrain" and "Did You Mean It?" Charles played a great deal of organ during these selections which appeared to this reporter as a new sign that the theatre is trying to educate the audience in appreciating good musicianship and less lung exercising. If we must say so ourselves, since Charles has taken over the organ duties here there has been less cutting up during the organ solos than when Henri Keates, his predecessor had charge of these duties.

Arthur Richter (Milwaukee, Wisconsin) presented for his number at the organ, "Romantic Rivers," which included with words upon the screen songs about the Danube, Shannon, Wabash, Mississippi, Swanee, Volga, and concluding with the popular number, "Blue River."

Preston Sellers (Chicago Senate) did a community stunt this week under the title of "Free Service" which took in the following tunes: "Dream Kisses," "Among My Souvenirs" and "Is She My Girl Friend." During the playing of the Souvenir song, he used the bell chime effect which lent beauty and coloring to the playing. In addition to the clever gag slides a number of other tunes were interpolated in the form of a medley. The entire stunt received a very good reception.

George Valch (Chicago Shore) selected for his solo this week "Salute a Pesth" a classic by Kawalski. This house just opened a few weeks ago on the South Shore of town and seems to like the better class of music more than the ordinary community stunt. Arthur Hand the musical director conducted the overture of "The Only Girl," by Victor Herbert.

Edward K. House (Chicago Granada) After playing a short introduction to "Goodbye Forever" and "I'll Think of You," House told the audience that a rich uncle of his had died in Switzerland, and that he was going to Paris to spend the money he had been left heir to. He meant this as a joke, but the audience took it seriously, so he was required to tell them that he was only kidding. He also sang "I'll Think of You," "A Shady Tree" and "An Old Guitar and an Old Refrain," as solos, and with the audience.

Ed Meikel (Chicago Harding) used a community stunt this week of popular songs to the title "Welcome Mark," as a tribute to Mark Fisher the leader of this house who returned after an absence of seven weeks. He opened with "Hail Hail The Gang's All Here" gradually going into the tune of "Everywhere You Go" and "What'll You Do." For a finish Meikel requested his members to give Mark the usual club cheer in which no voice was spared.

Francis Kromar (Chicago Diversey) used Irving Berlin's new classic, "The Song Is Ended" as the theme for his solo this week. The slides were flashed to the tune of "Narcissus" and "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" and ended up with two choruses of "Just Another Day."

Buckley Answers Question of "What I Did For Short Feature"

Owner of Leland and Clinton Square at Albany and Manager Vic Sayles Play Up Short Product in Programs and Advertisements

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Of the 400 or more motion picture theatres served by exchanges of this city, none pays greater attention to the short feature than the Leland and Clinton Square theatres of Albany. Perhaps that is the reason why the Leland is admittedly the best paying house in Albany, and the reason why the Clinton Square theatre, which came under the Buckley banner a couple of years ago, is now also in the moneymaking class.

Plays Them Up in Newspapers

While more than one theatre still continues to look on the short feature as nothing more than a filler, Buckley and his manager, Alec Sayles, have discovered it pays to take a great deal of care in booking their short features and to play them up in the newspapers, the program and in every possible way.

"Did you ever stop and consider," said Buckley, "that when the man or woman pays his admission at the wicket, he or she is looking for two hours of entertainment, and not for the single hour of the long feature. I am emphatic in saying that I do not follow the practice of taking a feature that has been booked and running it, and then proceeding to fill up the remainder of the program with anything that comes handy in the way of a short subject.

"I consider my short subjects as of almost as much importance as the main picture, and furthermore, I want to say right here that I demand that my short subjects be on a par, as far as possible, with the entertainment afforded by the feature itself."

Buckley said he was booking Pathe Review, M-G-M Oddities, Fox Varieties, Hodge Podge from Educational, and the Tiffany Color Pictures.

Buckley comes pretty near answering the query of "What I Am Doing for the Short Feature." After questioning patrons as to their wishes Buckley started out by seeing to it that there is a place always for such subjects on his program, and by taking the best possible care in learning just what the subjects may be before he books them.

Buckley is not afraid to advertise his short features, and as a result his house is always packed. Of course it sometimes happens that his feature is not quite up to par, but on such occasions it is noticeable that he balances his program with the use of particularly attractive and entertaining short subjects.

The use of the short feature and the proper exploitation of it is becoming more general in this territory. It is not uncommon to see an "Our Gang" comedy, for example, featured in the electric lights of a marquee in Albany, while in Utica, that veteran, "Pop" Linton, through years of experience, never fails to give all possible credit to his short feature and to see that it is given a prominent place in his newspaper and other advertising.

Publix Starts Manager's Contest For Ads and Exploitation

Thousand Dollars Will Be Distributed in Prizes Through Paramount Campaign with Christie

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—Publix is starting a contest for managers this week to develop the best methods of tying up the Paramount-Christie comedies with general newspaper advertising of the entire program. This contest evidences how the large circuits are emphasizing the short product.

ED OLMSTEAD of Publix is in charge of the contest, which began yesterday and closes March 17. The campaign, with a large prize list for the successful contestants, was arranged by the advertising department of Paramount and the Christie Film Company.

Sam Katz Among Judges

Judges will be Sam Katz, president of Publix; Sam Dembow, Jr., vice-president; D. J. Chatkin, of the Publix booking department; A. M. Botsford, director of Publix advertising and publicity; Ed Olmsted, and Pat Dowling, publicity and sales director for the Christie Company.

"Many theatres have overlooked the fact that comedies, properly advertised in connection with the bill, can sell not only many extra tickets on their own strength, but aid in showing that the theatres are presenting a well rounded bill of entertainment on both the screen and stage," Katz declared. "Our effort will be to assist in pointing out the very advantageous policy of selling the whole show."

"This contest should be of decided advantage in encouraging theatre managers to give a little more thought to the comedy end of their program from the advertising standpoint," Dembow said. "It will be readily seen that there are many ways in which a worthwhile short comedy attraction can be worked into the general advertising without necessarily adding one cent to the daily expenditure for display.

Will Award $1,000 in Prizes

"In my opinion every manager should sell properly every unit of entertainment which he is presenting, the feature picture, the surrounding stage show where there is one, the comedy, the music and the news-reel events. Each part of a modern theatre's program has its own particular fans who should be catered to, and in addition there is the class of patrons who want a lot of show. By properly advertising all of these elements, that class of picture patron can be appealed to with the maximum success."

The sum of $1,000 will be distributed in prizes for the best newspaper ads and the best exploitation stunts.

The Publix manager originating the best newspaper ad will receive the first prize of $400; second, $150; third, $75; and fourth, $50. There will be three prizes of $25 each for the next most representative advertising efforts.

The manager who originates the best exploitation stunt will receive a cash award of $150; the second, $50; and the third and fourth, $25 each.

In case of a tie in any of these campaigns, a similar prize will be awarded.

Pollock's Quick Action Saves Naval Secrets in International Reel

Quick work on the part of Leo Pollock, news editor of the International Newsreel, it is said, recently prevented thousands of theatres from showing close-up views of the secret mechanism of the U. S. Navy's new $45,000,000 aeroplane carrier, the U. S. S. Saratoga.

Pollock, who was an officer in the U. S. army during the World War, realized, as he viewed the scenes in the International Newsreel projection room that some of the views of the new warship showed the navy's new aero launching mechanism in great detail. He also realized that such views would be received with great interest in foreign circles. By instruction to all theatres which had received prints of the newsreel, Pollock ordered the close-up scenes deleted.

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

FIRST NATIONAL'S ERROR

SEVERAL readers inform me that I erred in calling Billie Dove's new picture "The Slave Mart," in last week's comment, whereas the title of the picture is "The Love Mart." I should like to apologize in the traditional manner of persons who write about pictures, but I do not feel that way about it. I feel the error to be First National's, not mine, for anyone who looks at the picture can see with half an eye that the correct title of it is, as I wrote it, "The Slave Mart." And with less than that fraction of an optic he (or she) can see that it's a wow.

"THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS"

IT'S so long since I read Harold Bell Wright's book, if indeed, I ever read it, that I do not know how closely the new picturization follows the printed page. I do know, however, that it tells about the same story as the stage play of the same name, which I remember rather more clearly. And I am likewise sure that it is a pretty good picture, a picture of the sort that should be more numerous.

The people who portray Mr. Wright's anachronistic characters are well selected for that business. Alec B. Francis is an excellent shepherd, Molly O'Day is delightful as the girl, and the others are good, too. The locale is nicely accomplished and the action of the thing runs along smoothly and naturally. The fight is a bloody affair, perhaps a little less fetching than a more evenly balanced brawl would have been, but the story needs this punch. I object to nothing in the picture save the colloquial captions, an effort to convey the period and an effort which, at least so far as I'm concerned, defeats its own purpose. I gladly appoint myself a committee of one to agitate a movement for the elimination of colloquial, dialect and otherwise distorted captioned phraseology once and for all. (Do I hear a second?)

It is beside the point to remark that Chicago censors took it on themselves to whitewash a few unimportant corners of the story that probably not more than 50,000,000 American citizens of all ages have read in the undoctored original. Censors are like that.

"TWO FLAMING YOUTHS"

W. C. FIELDS gets his long sought chance to do his act (that is, his juggling act) in "Two Flaming Youths." Mr. Fields plays one of the burning babies, Chester Conklin the other, and from these scorching brands a good deal of heat is generated. It turns into laughter, or at least it did at the exhibition I witnessed, and what more is to be expected of a picture with a name like that? Nothing, of course.

By T. O. SERVICE

Mr. Fields comes into the picture as an itinerant circus manager down on his luck. Mr. Conklin is the town bull (Ye Olde slang for sheriff) and Cissie Fitzgerald is a former burlesquer now directing the destinies of the Mansion House. There's a three, even a four, sided love affair, all revolving around a much sought fifteen hundred dollars, and there's a carnival, several chases and innumerable nifties in the working out of the affair.

I may be a bit isolated in my tastes (indeed, such has been a rather widespread accusation on previous occasions of this sort) but I am in total agreement with the idea, shared by people who make pictures like this, that the proper target for the comic picture is the middle-aged citizenry. I think, if you care to go into the past, that you'll find most of the successful comedies have been those which interested the adults. This is that sort of a comedy, not the best in the world and not the worst, a comedy out of which a self-respecting man or woman of more than thirty years of age can get a giggle. I'm for more of them.

"GATEWAY OF THE MOON"

HAD I seen enough pictures during the past week to fill a page decently, I should say nothing at all about "The Gateway of the Moon." I'm sure Dolores Del Rio is sorry she acted in it, I'm sure I'm sorry I saw it, and I've more than half an idea that the Fox people are sorry they made it. On this latter point, of course, I may be in error, for it is possible that the thing will have its uses in the far fields. I see no use for it in downtown Chicago, which is as far as I have investigated the matter.

This yarn, for it is by no means a story, is the one about the more or less white young lady with the wild manners whose guardian is a bad boy, save in his pure love for her, and whose heroic young man wears the straw benny and the briar pipe common to white folks in the jungle. Yes, it's one of those jungle things, the African jungle to be as exact as the caption, and there are the dangers that lurk in the underbrush, the natives that drink too much and work too little, the plot that is aimed at the noble young man and the means by which the sterling young woman (same one) rescues him and averts the dire things (whatever they are) threatening all through the picture. It is, in short, something like "Kongo," "Rain," "White Cargo" and all those things, except that it isn't like any of them and isn't like much else either.

I'm sorry, as I mentioned before, that I have seen the thing. I was by way of getting all steamed up over Miss Del Rio, whose performances in "What Price Glory" and "Loves of Carmen" are among the performances I think I shall always remember. Yet I do not blame her for "The Gateway of the Moon." I don't think anybody could have done more with it than she, if as much, for there wasn't anything to work with in the beginning.

As I say, I should not say a word about the picture had I enough else to talk about for the required amount of space.

THE THEATRE

Incorporated in this department of practical showmanship of Exhibitors Herald are the Moving Picture World departments, "Selling the Picture to the Public," which was established September 23, 1911, by Epes Winthrop Sargent, and "Better Business Builders."

Louis E. Ramm, Jamestown, N. Y., Wins Distinction as M. B. I. No. 2

The honor of becoming M. B. I. Number 2 in "The Theatre's" "My Best Idea" club goes to Louis E. Ramm of the Wintergarden theatre, Jamestown, N. Y. Ramm's "My Best Idea" arrived right on the heel of A. D. Baker's "My Best Idea," who became M. B. I. Number 1. If you are not acquainted with this newest and biggest feature of "The Theatre" read the last two copies of this department and then send in your "My Best Idea."

"My Best Idea" No. 2

By Louis E. Ramm

I AM enclosing clippings of one of my numerous best ideas, one that I really believe helped at the box office.

Louis E. Ramm
M. B. I. No. 2

When we played the Pathe picture, "Dress Parade," at our Wintergarden theatre, we invited all members of the American Legion and their lady friends to a gratis showing of the picture.

I then hit upon the plan to ask them to have their drum corps parade to the theatre along with the rest of the Legion boys so as to advertise the picture at the same time, and also had them come to the stage and render a concert.

I have also put over a good tieup with jewelry stores on Gilda Gray's picture, "The Devil Dancer," using a flash card announcing that Gilda Gray wears a Bulova watch, and in turn all the jewelers dressed up special windows with only Bulova wrist watches.

Also had special throwaway cards on this picture which were handed out at the various dances a few days previous to the showing of "The Devil Dancer."

I am also enclosing a card used on Warner Bros.' "The Fortune Hunter," and napkins used around Christmas week and placed in all ice cream parlors, sandwich shops, and also had menus printed and placed in all restaurants.

"Gorilla" Auto Stickers

When the Aztec theatre, San Antonio, Texas, played First National's "The Gorilla," 5,300 automobile stickers were put out on automobiles in the city. The stickers read "Where the Hell is Mulligan?" Cuts made from these stickers were run in the newspapers in advance of the opening. The teaser campaign proved a good stimulant at the box office.

Order A Wardrobe for "My Best Girl"

If Mary Pickford sent you a request to order her some wearing apparel from the shops here in Jamestown, you would know what sizes she would like to get her? Everybody has a mind's eye image of Mary Pickford, but how many people could undertake accurately to outfit her? As Maggie the shop girl, the fiancee of a millionaire, 5-and-10 cent store proprietor's son in her new picture, "My Best Girl," which comes to the Wintergarden Theater next week, Mary challenges you to submit an order list that will have the correct sizes for Maggie's trousseau from your memory of her appearance on the screen in the past, ESTIMATE (not guess) a descriptive list upon the blank schedule below. For the most nearly accurate estimates, the following rewards will be made: First 20 correct replies will be the guests of Miss Pickford to see her latest greatest picture. Contest closes Saturday noon.

 Color of Eyes Blue
 Color of Hair Light Brown
 My Name is Mrs. James Higgins
 My Address 140. Cook. av. S. City

This contest was staged by M. B. I. No. 2, Louis Ramm, Wintergarden theatre, Jamestown, N. Y., when he ran Mary Pickford's picture, "My Best Girl." The 20 people guessing most accurately the measurements of Mary were given passes to the picture. Another contest on the picture was held through a tieup with a local paper.

Texas Theatre Uses Shock Campaign for "Beau Sabreur" Run

When the Texas theatre, San Antonio, played Paramount's "Beau Sabreur" the management and publicity department decided that a shock campaign would go a long way in putting the picture over right. A special billing program was outlined and carried through and an unusual newspaper ad and story campaign was formulated. Some of the stunts that Bob Blair, manager, pulled were tried and true and some were new. For one thing a special traffic violation card, resembling in make-up and wording the card used by San Antonio police officials, was put out, summoning every car owner parking on the main street to see "Beau Sabreur." Blair also made up a triangular card for spare tires and had his ushers put them in the various parking stations at night. Five hundred of these were put out and traveling billing of "Beau Sabreur" proved to be one of the best selling points of the picture. Ten sets of the new 14 by 17 lobby reproductions were used in gold frames in downtown windows together with 100 squee-gee stills in frames. One hundred stock window cards were used and 200 cards distributed to adjacent towns within a radius of 150 miles through a hookup with a local bus company.

Community Advertising

Charlie Querrie, manager of the Palace theatre, a fine suburban house of Toronto, Ontario, put across some effective neighborhood advertising in a district newspaper by announcing recently that practically all of the employes of the theatre were residents of the immediate locality. These included the operator, cashier, doorman, orchestra leader, assistant manager, head usher, fireman, cleaner and others, whom he listed by name.

When the Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, played First National's picture, "Helen of Troy," this traveling miniature 24-sheet (at left) was sent all over the city for an entire week, four days before the picture opened and during the first three days of the run. The float was seen by 85,000 people at the Southern California-Washington championship football game. Such a float will open the eyes of the public in anybody's town.

Series of Articles on Advertising Will Run in "Theatre"

(This is the first of a series of articles on advertising which will run each week in "The Theatre." These articles originally appeared in "Showmanship News," the house organ published by Finkelstein and Ruben Theatrical Enterprises. Watch for article number 2 next week.)

Number One

Right at the outset of this discussion we are going to recognize advertising as one of the most powerful forces in business progress of today. The very foundations of Showmanship are cemented by advertising. Showmanship, to coin a short definition, is intensified salesmanship. This salesmanship is accomplished largely through advertising. Advertising has a distinct advantage over the salesman. It works while the salesman sleeps.

Advertising has universal appeal, and so it reaches all classes of people. This mass influence makes advertising all-powerful.

Showmanship advertising is a thing apart from ordinary commercial advertising. Again, motion picture advertising has its own principles and aspects. The rules that govern commercial advertising do not always apply to film advertising. For instance, people have been taught to expect force in our advertising. They react favorably to ballyhoo because they have been taught by showmanship to do so.

Forceful advertising is essential to showmanship. This force may take any one or all of a number of forms. The mediums used to exert advertising force are newspapers, billboards, trailers, lobbies, fronts, car cards, direct mail, heralds and novelties.

In the preparation of forceful advertising, strive for truth in all copy. There may have been a time when the public could be fooled by advertising, but not now. However, that is not the governing impulse which must lead us to truthfulness at all times. We don't want to fool anybody. We don't want to mislead our patrons any more than we would want anyone to mislead us. See that the principles of ethics and good taste have a prominent place in all of your advertising deliberations.

Remember always that our advertising copy is written to inform our patrons. To carry properly the advertising message to our patrons we must study each picture separately. Each production presents an advertising problem. The name of the star, the name of the production, the theme or lack of any of these major selling points must influence our decision. Only careful study based on experience, and not haphazard guess work, will lead you to a true solution of your advertising problem.

Wolfberg Makes Exploitation of Old the "Adploitation" of Today

A new word has come into existence around the St. Louis territory and it is descriptive of a change in picture exploitation being brought about by Harris P. Wolfberg, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at St. Louis.

The new word is "adploitation." Where Wolfberg's influence is felt, the strident call of ballyhoo has died down to a whisper. Exploitation of yesterday is adploitation of today.

Harris P. Wolfberg

Where once grew the blatant ballyhoo now sprouts forth a more effective service, a closer-knit friendship between exhibitors and exchange personnel and an aid that reflects its efficacy at the box office.

The ballhoo that boomed gloriously but grew dim when noses were counted in the theatre is kicking its last, and a more dignified service that slowly but surely makes its effect felt around the dollar line is to be reckoned with, and Wolfberg's exhibitors are hailing its advent.

Publicizing a picture formerly meant a loud, noisy campaign that drew attention to the subject at hand. The reaction of the public was secondary. The tactics now practiced have been toned down considerably. The public reaction is given first consideration and if deemed favorable, the maneuver is set in motion.

For instance, when "The Big Parade" and

"Ben Hur" played in the St. Louis district, a campaign was started. Not only was the exhibitor furnished with the necessary material to stir up interest in his town but a mail campaign out of the St. Louis office was started. In the case of "Ben Hur" the ministers were appealed to. The American Legion posts were solicited for their support in the instance of "The Big Parade." Floats were sent out to stimulate interest in the picture, and all this without the cost of a cent to the exhibitor.

Wolfberg's experiment with exploitation is being closely watched. He has proved that you can cloak a campaign in dignity and make it do the work. Exhibitors concur heartily in his theory and even in the mining towns a certain restraint is being practiced.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen

Manager Pete Egan of the Capitol theatre, Regina, Sask., used a good stunt to boost a recent show in the distribution of a typical hand bill which advertised the supposed loss of a lady's hand bag.

The throwaway gave a list of articles in the mythical hand bag, the list including a diamond ring, five $10 bills, a gold wrist watch, pearl necklace and two tickets to the Capitol theatre.

The announcement was made that the finder could keep the contents of the bag if the two tickets were returned to the fictitious owner.

Parade of Collegiate Flivvers in Contest Helps "Fair Co-ed"

Collegiate flivvers parading downtown streets in competition for cash prizes furnished not only a great deal of amusement to the citizens of Dallas, Texas, but were also instrumental in getting a great deal of exceptional publicity for Marion Davies' Cosmopolitan starring vehicle, "The Fair Co-ed," which played at the Melba theatre. Ernest Emmerling, manager of the Melba, assisted by an M-G-M exploiteer, ran the flivver parade, as well as many other stunts in connection with the showing of the Davies production.

One week in advance of the playdate announcement was made during the chapel exercises of the Southern Methodist University regarding the date of "The Fair Co-ed" and "The Fair Co-ed" Collegiate Flivver Parade.

The announcement of this parade was also carried in a 2-col. 4-inch display ad in the dailies and in the college daily. The rules were that anyone could enter their flivver just as long as they had "The Fair Co-ed" prominently lettered on the car or on a card attached to same. It was also announced that Marion Davies would give her personal check for the three prizes.

Special Student Night Boosts "The Drop Kick"

The Capitol theater, Victoria, B. C., got off to a fine start with First National's Richard Barthelmess picture, "The Drop Kick," by giving a college night at the first evening's performance.

About 200 students of Victoria college turned out and made things lively through giving their college yells and songs from the stage under the leadership of their yell leader.

College nights at the Capitol attract big audiences, are covered in detail by the newspapers and give the picture the finest kind of word-of-mouth advertising.

One of the best house organs that comes to our desk is the "Falls Theatre News," published by the Falls theatre, Cuyahoga Falls, O. It has the size and makeup of a seven column, 8 page newspaper and is issued monthly. Although the mass of the editorial matter is about motion pictures, a good deal of local news is carried. It contains a number of good features, one of the best being, "The Critical X-Ray," which gives an unbiased review of the pictures to be shown at the Falls. More merchant advertising is carried in the paper than will be found in many newspapers this size. A large number of film illustrations and stories about pictures and film folk is carried. The above reproduction shows the front pages of two issues.

Tieup Valentine Day and Leap Year for Picture Exploitation

In Leap Year, theatremen are offered an innumerable number of opportunities for exploitations, extended campaigns and merchant tieups. Your opportunities are limited only by your own initiative. The flappers' opportunity year is ready-made for fine theatre exploitation.

Practically every newspaper in the country has already cashed in on the year with feature stories of all sorts. The year is being bally-hoed every day. Have you thrown your hat in the ring with some special exploitation for your theatre?

There are so many corking good ideas for such exploitations, it's hard to begin naming, but the most obvious is to give passes to all bachelors at a special Leap Year performance, or to admit every bachelor free when accompanied by a feminine escort. This can be called "Bachelors Night."

There are many current pictures that fit ideally into any Leap Year promotion. Clara Bow's picture, "Get Your Man," is ready made for the occasion, as are "The Fair Co-ed," "She's a Sheik," "Very Confidential," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and plenty of others. Look over the pictures you have booked and decide which among them will be the best for your Leap Year exploitation.

The year offers many splendid tieups with merchants. A good stunt would be to get the merchants in town to offer presents to any couple marrying on the stage of your theatre, with the provision that the girl proposed to the man. This can be worked with a number of merchants or it can be handled with one merchant, a furniture merchant perhaps.

Valentine day, February 14, and Leap Year offer a fine combination exploitation. A good stunt would be to send out programs in the form of valentines, or invitations made up like Valentines. Send the invitations to women, and make them good for two admissions when the woman is accompanied by a male companion.

Playfully Speaking

The Jacksonville Journal introduces a new theatre page feature this week called "Playfully Speaking." One of the novelties is the idea of giving notices to second runs, something apparently new in newspaper practice. Heretofore, only road shows and vaudeville have drawn staff criticisms from the papers.

If this lobby display didn't drag 'em in to see First National's picture, "The Gorilla," we miss our bet. It was used at the Imperial theatre, Asheville, N. C. This picture offers unusually good angles for displays and exploitations.

PITTSBURGH.—The past week end was spent on business in New York by Johnny Harris, of the Harris Amusement Company, . . . The circulation department of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette has a new member in Selden Kiralfy, for some time past shipper at the Columbia exchange, who resigned that position last week. Fred Fry is now acting in Mr. Kiralfy's former capacity. . . . Taking a vacation period before again entering in the film business via any of the many offers that have been tendered him, Carlos Moore spent the recent holidays with the "old folks" in St. Cloud, Minn. Moore was formerly manager of the local United Artists exchange, from which position he recently resigned. . . . Among the exhibitors to visit Film Row early in the week were A. P. Way, DuBois; Samuel Haimovitz and Bart Dattola, New Kensington; William Lipsie, Blairsville; C. B. Pascoe, Somerset; Paul Dattola, Springdale; Mr. Huit, Tarentum; Mrs. Myra Boyd, Blawnox; and Mr. Fitzgerald, Hillcoke.

Atlanta

ATLANTA.—Willard C. Patterson, Southern division manager of Universal theatres, left Atlanta Tuesday night for his regular inspection tour of the company's Florida circuit and will remain over in Orlando for the opening of the new Baby Grand theatre at Winter Park on Friday evening. . . . Dan Michalove, newly appointed general representative for Pathe in the Southern states who reached Atlanta to assume the duties of the new post on January 1st, is now making a tour of Pathe's exchanges in the South.

Columbus

COLUMBUS.—The Tuscarawas County Grand Jury, meeting January 12, ignored the five cases brought against George Chrest and Roscoe Speidell for alleged violation of the Sunday blue laws for opening their motion picture theatres at Dover, Ohio. Sentiment in Dover regarding the operation of moving picture theatres on Sunday has been divided. George Chrest has been arrested on each occasion that he opened and appeared before the local magistrate and paid the fine of $10 and costs. This did not stop Sunday theatres and so the cases were taken to the grand jury. . . . The McKinley Theatre company of Canton has been incorporated with a capital of 100 shares of no par value stock to acquire either by purchase or lease theatres and operate them with motion picture and vaudeville exhibitions. The incorporators of the new company are Max Young, Harry Boksenbon and Charles S. Weintraub.

Albany

ALBANY.—W. W. Farley, owner of several theatres in Schenectady, left by automobile this week, with his wife and two children, for Florida, where he will spend several weeks. . . . George Roberts is now managing a theatre in New York City. . . . Moe Mark, vice-president of the Stanley Corporation of America, was on the sick list last week. . . . Julius Berinstein, owner of the Colonial and other theatres in Albany, is spending a week or so in New York City. . . . George Tetrault is now handling the Grand in Watervliet. . . . Guy Graves, of Schenectady, is once more a familiar figure along Albany's Film Row, as he books for the Farley houses. . . . The Rialto in Albany, operated by Lous Cappa, was badly flooded with water last week. . . . Len Garvey, of Clinton and New Hartford, was in town during the week. . . . Herbert Greenblatt of Pittsburgh, has been added to the sales force, at the FBO exchange. Frank Breymaier, who has been handling the Wedgeway in Schenectady, has become manager of the two Silverman houses in that city. . . . Harry Rose is now booking for the Rose theatres in Troy.

Portland

PORTLAND.—Northwestern Film Corporation, Inc., has been incorporated at Seattle with a capital of $95,000, by D. C. Millward and G. W. Millward. . . . All motion pictures portraying events of the William Edward Hickman murder case or any other "vicious crimes" will be prohibited in British Columbia theatres, it has been announced by the British Columbia Board of Censors at Vancouver. . . . Rabbi Henry J. Berkowitz, leader of Temple Beth Israel at Portland, has criticized "The King of Kings" and says the picture should never have been made. . . . The Columbia theatre at Portland has set the pace here for night previews for its patrons, and each Monday night after the regular picture patrons are treated to an advance showing. . . . The Oregon Council of National Motion Picture league announces the following list of indorsed pictures: "The Gaucho," "Closed Gates," "The College Hero," "Judgment of the Mills," "Primitive Love," "Student Prince" and "Inklings."

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

BARE KNEES: Gotham comedy-drama, with Virginia Lee Corbin, Donald Keith, Jane Winton, Johnnie Walker, Forrest Stanley, and Maude Fulton. Directed by Erle C. Kenton. Released February 1. Length 6,000. (Repeated from a previous issue for corrections in cast.)

TYPE AND THEME: An up-to-the-moment story of a girl whose bare knees and cigarette smoking scandalizes the small Southern town to which she goes to visit her married sister. She finds one kindred spirit in Larry. Discovering that her sister, neglected by her husband, district attorney, is having an "affair," Billie schemes to prevent a real scandal. An elopement being contemplated, she goes to the rendezvous at a notorious houseboat cafe and is there with the clandestine pair when the husband arrives, leading a raid. Billie introduces the man as her friend . . . then there's a fire. Jumping into the river, Billie is saved by Larry, and with her promise to marry him and the reconciliation of husband and wife, bare knees have a great inning.

BRANDED SOMBRERO, THE: Fox Western, with Buck Jones, Leila Hyams, Jack Baston, Leo Kelly, Francis Ford, Josephine Borio, and Stanton Heck. Directed by . . . Released January 8. Length 4,612 ft.

TYPE AND THEME: The deathbed confession of John Hallett casts gloom over the Hallett household, for it is learned that his old and battered sombrero, covered with numerous brands, represents a diary of the cattle taken from his neighbors. The ranch is sold to pay off his debts, but Lane, the younger son, forgets his promise and gambles his share away. This throws the bulk of the responsibility upon Buck. As each rancher is paid off, Buck draws a line through the brand. Finally there is but one brand left, and Buck is reluctant to negotiate with the owner, Connie Marsh, whom Buck loves deeply. Buck endeavors to protect Lane from the villainous hotel owner, Maggett, who is using him in his nefarious undertakings. Accused of being a member of Maggett's gang, Buck brings about the downfall of Maggett, then returns to his old home with his bride, Connie.

CHICAGO AFTER MIDNIGHT: FBO melodrama, with Ralph Ince, Jola Mendez, Lorraine Rivero, James Mason, Carl Axzelle, Helen Jerome Eddy, Ole M. Ness, Rob Seiter, and Frank Mills. Directed by Ralph Ince. Released March 4. Length . . .

TYPE AND THEME: More reverse ballyhoo for the metropolis of the West. This picture is one of FBO's major efforts and is to be featured in the February Kennedy drive. Added to that is Ralph Ince, both as star and director. The story concerns Jim Boyd, who, released after 15 years of imprisonment, trails the man who sent him there to Chicago where he is an underworld boss, and kills him, shifting the blame on Waring, an orchestra leader. Waring's sweetheart, Mona, tricks Boyd into saying Waring is innocent and Boyd turns her over to a dive keeper. Then he learns she is his daughter. . . and sacrifices his life for her happiness.

DIVINE WOMAN, THE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama, with Greta Garbo, Lars Hanson, Lowell Sherman, Dorothy Cumming, John Mack Brown, Cesare Gravina, Paulette Duval, and Jean de Briac. Directed by Victor Seastrom. Released January 14. Length 7,300.

TYPE AND THEME: Legrande takes the peasant girl, Marianne, to his Paris theatre. He makes love to her, and Marianne, fleeing him, meets Lucien, a soldier, with whom she becomes on good terms. Lucien steals a dress for her and having also deserted the army, he is put in prison for five years. Marianne, returning to Legrande, is made a star because of her beauty. Years pass, and Lucien suddenly appears at the theatre. Marianne collapses and discharged, faces poverty. But Lucien finds her and they leave for South America, happy in their love.

DOOMSDAY: Paramount drama, with Florence Vidor, Gary Cooper, Lawrence Grant, Charles A. Stevenson, and others. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Released February 18. Length . . .

TYPE AND THEME: An adaptation of the popular book by the English novelist, Warwick Deeping, who wrote "Sorrrell and Son." The story is laid in England and presents Mary Viner with the problem of whether to marry for love or money. Arnold, whom she loves, has only Doomsday farm. Fream, who is rich, is old. She marries Fream to end her days of work, but after a year as his wife, she returns home, has her marriage annulled, goes to work for Arnold—and finally wins back his love.

FANGS OF THE WILD: FBO melodrama, with Ranger, Dorothy Kitchen, Sam Nelson, Tom Lingham, and Sid Crossley. Directed by Jerome Strong. Released . . . Length 4,578.

TYPE AND THEME: For folks who like canine geniuses. Blossom Williams, who lives with her drunkard step-father in the Kentucky hills, has only Ranger to protect her from rough Rufe Anderson, who loves her. Anderson has a superstitious fear of the dog and trapping him, throws him into the river. Larry, young engineer seeking to buy Blossom's property for his father's coal company, rescues Ranger, and both battle Rufe. Victors, they hunt up Blossom, and Ranger is very glad when both land and Blossom are acquired by Larry.

HER SUMMER HERO: FBO comedy-drama, with Hugh Trevor, Harold Goodwin, Duane Thompson, James Pierce, Cleve Moore, and Sally Blane. Directed by James Dugan. Released . . . Length 5,146.

TYPE AND THEME: This one's about our so-called younger generation. It is also collegiate—that is, Ken and Al are college friends. Then in the summer, Ken is life-guard at a beach where Al and his sister Joan are entertaining friends. Ken, who is star of his college's swimming team, saves Joan from drowning, without knowing that she's Al's sister. Of course she likes him. That's why she's peeved when she sees Chris in Ken's sweater being pretty chummy with Grace, for she thinks Chris is Ken. So she promises Herb she will marry him if he wins the swimming race, which he doesn't, inasmuch as Ken wins it. But explanations fix things so that Joan can marry the winner after all.

LOVE AND LEARN: Paramount comedy-drama, with Esther Ralston, Lane Chandler, Hedda Hopper, Claude King, Jack J. Clark, John Trent, Hal Craig, Helene Lynch, Katherine Parrish, Martha Franklin, Jerry Mandy, Dorothea Wolbert, Johnnie Morris, and Guy Oliver. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Released January 14. Length . . .

TYPE AND THEME: Here is Esther Ralston's first starring picture, starting her out in the approximate manner of Clara Bow. As Nancy, she seeks to prevent her parents from getting a divorce by making them concentrate their attention upon her. Her first escapade lands her in jail, but the judge likes her and to warn him of a plot to prevent his re-election, she breaks jail and goes to his hotel. He's out, so she gets a room. It happens to be the room the judge takes after hearing of the plot. They discover their intimate proximity about the time Nancy's parents enter in search of her. Of course she and the judge want to marry anyway. And her father's hay fever makes mama's care necessary, so the divorce is off.

PHANTOM OF THE RANGE: FBO Western, with Tom Tyler, Charles McHugh, Duane Thompson, Frankie Darro, James Pierce, Marjorie Zier, and Beans. Directed by James Dugan. Released . . . Length 4,781.

TYPE AND THEME: A new twist (if possible) to the usual Western theme. As Duke Carlton, Tyler is the leading man in a stock company tramping the West which becomes stranded when the manager deserts. Duke takes a job on a farm, and though hating the work, he stays on to protect his boss and Patsy from the machinations of Corbin, rascally realtor. He stays not in vain, for exposing Corbin and putting over a deal for the land with a generous syndicate, he wins Patsy's love.

RED RIDERS OF CANADA: FBO melodrama, with Patsy Ruth Miller, Charles Byer, Harry Woods, Rex Lease, and Barney Furey. Directed by Robert DeLacy. Released . . . Length 6,419.

TYPE AND THEME: A story of the beautiful Canadian forests and, of course, the Mounted Police. Pierre is made a captive when his father is killed by De Busart, fur pirate. Later Sergeant Scott captures De Busart, but Pierre's sister, Joan, releases him on his promise to save her brother. De Busart takes her to his cabin, where his treacherous intent comes to light. But Joan had marked the trail for Scott, who arrives at the cabin in the well known nick of time and saving her, tells her effectively of his love for her.

SHE'S A SHEIK: Paramount comedy-drama, with Bebe Daniels, Richard Arlen, William Powell, Josephine Dunn, James Bradbury, Jr., Billy Franey, Paul McAllister, and Al Fremont. Directed by Clarence Badger. Released November 12. Length 6,015.

TYPE AND THEME: How sheikesses make love, or fun in North Africa! Kada loves Zaida, daughter of Sheik Yusif, but she doesn't love him. Kada swears to get her somehow. Zaida meets Joe and Jerry, two Americans trying to convert the natives into motion picture fans, when Kada would chastise them for knocking him down. Zaida subdues him with a rapier. Yusif, fearing Kada, had gone to the Foreign Legion garrison, and there Zaida goes, meeting Captain Colton. She falls in love, but he does not, so she has her slaves take him prisoner. A command of soldiers soon follow and are to shoot him for desertion. Then Kada's forces attack, but Joe and Jerry protect a film showing soldiers arriving and they flee. Zaida and Colton embrace.

SIREN, THE: Columbia drama, with Tom Moore, Dorothy Revier, Norman Trevor, Jed Prouty, and Otto Hoffman. Directed by Byron Haskin. Released . . . Length . . .

TYPE AND THEME: In this tale a girl, falsely described as a siren and accused of murder, nearly pays the death penalty, a confession in the nick of time saving her. Her friend, Norwood, is exposed as a cheat, and in an encounter with Allen, who has fallen in love with her, the house is set on fire. Norwood is badly burned and his accomplice accuses her of murder, while Norwood goes about in disguise. Facing death, the accomplice tells the truth—and love heals all wounds.

WEST POINT: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama, with William Haines, Joan Crawford, Neil Neely, William Bakewell, Ralph Emerson, Leon Kellar, and Major R. G. Moses, U. S. A. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Released . . . Length 8,134.

TYPE AND THEME: The tale of an arrogant young gridiron gladiator who learns the error of his ways. His name is Wayne and he starts his smart aleck career at West Point by pretending to Betty to be blind, thus winning her attention. His wise-cracking soon makes him unpopular with the cadets. He thinks he is the whole football team, and just before the Army-Navy game in Chicago he dissipates and is suspended. But he apologizes and is sent to the game, arriving as the score is 3 to 0 against the Army. Sent into the game, he breaks an arm, but carries on and wins the battle for West Point. Back at the academy, strolling down the famous Flirtation Lane, Betty promises to be his wife.

Your Classified Ad Will Do the Work!

Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organizers all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and also in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 10c per word. See this week's classified page. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.

PRESS SHEETS

A Service WITHIN A Service

Herewith is presented a new service in the Press Sheets Department of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World." Abundant testimony from the field points to the benefits exhibitors are deriving from this department in presenting the highlights of advertising and exploitation ideas culled from the press sheets issued by the companies on their latest releases.

Now a new service is founded. From time to time this department will devote the page to a résumé of the outstanding suggestions printed, or the highlights among the highlights, and all classified according to the type of picture for which intended. These will serve as an index of leading ideas, applicable to other pictures than those for which the thoughts originally were offered.

The department also will welcome letters from exhibitors showing how these suggestions or others, were applied to increase box office receipts.

COMEDY

BLONDES BY CHOICE (Gotham): Tie up with a beauty parlor and in the window on a revolving table place a wax head, on one side of which the coiffure is blonde and on the other side brunette, with signs on the proper side reading, "She WAS a brunette" and "But she chooses to be a blonde. See Claire Windsor in 'Blondes by Choice.'"

COHENS AND KELLYS IN PARIS, THE (Universal): Free passes might be given to those whose names are Cohen or Kelly. Print the announcement in the daily ad, adding that if the persons with either of those names brings the ad to the box office they will be admitted free.

FIGURES DON'T LIE (Paramount): Pick out a local athletic team which is winning most of its games, obtain percentage figures and post them in the lobby with the sign, ".....games out of..... for our (name of athletic team). Figures don't lie, and neither do we when we call Esther Ralston's picture, 'Figures Don't Lie', her best comedy."

HAM AND EGGS AT THE FRONT (Warner): Put a stretcher near the box office with this notice over it: "Placed here for the convenience of our patrons who laugh themselves sick at 'Ham and Eggs at the Front.'"

HOME MADE (First National): Obtain from Fitzer Brothers of New York a phonograph record made by Johnny Hines (who plays five roles in the comedy) in which he tells about the picture. The records are in the series of "Fitzer's Star Talks."

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR (Paramount): Stage contest among children with awards for those building model planes which fly the farthest.

TWO FLAMING YOUTHS (Paramount): Drug store window display cards can say "Want to retain your pep and energy? Try these, or go to the..... theatre and see TWO FLAMING YOUTHS."

COMEDY-DRAMA

COLLEGE HERO, THE (Columbia). Have organizations of the local high school conduct their initiations on the stage of your theatre, dressing them up in outlandish collegiate attire.

GET YOUR MAN (Paramount): Get cards in shop windows saying, for example, "Get your man with.....dresses and make him take you to see Clara Bow in 'Get Your Man' at the..... theatre."

HONEYMOON HATE (Paramount): Get a local travel bureau to have its advertisements read, "Prospective newlyweds! No such thing as HONEYMOON HATE when we arrange your trip. Get in touch with us immediately."

IF I WERE SINGLE (Warner): Install a radio amplifier in the lobby with a microphone attached inside the theatre to carry the laughs from the audience to the outside.

LOVE MART, THE (First National): Arrange with a women's page editor to compare in a series of articles the old marriage methods with the present day methods.

MAN CRAZY (First National): Newspaper teasers can read, "Are modern girls Man Crazy?" "Is your daughter Man Crazy?" etc., and for the last day just preceding the showing of the film the copy could read, "Everybody will be Man Crazy tomorrow when she sees Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill, etc."

NO PLACE TO GO (First National): For tieups with sporting goods stores selling golf outfits, prepare the following card: "See what happens to a golfer when he is marooned on a cannibal island with nothing to do but practice golf."

POLLY OF THE MOVIES (First Division): Begin at both ends of the block in which your theatre is located and stencil on the pavement a woman's footprints, leading into your lobby. At both starting points have lettered, "Follow me, 'Polly of the Movies.'" Be sure you are violating no ordinance.

SAILORS' WIVES (First National): The best copy presented for advertising this film is the following: "Suppose you were going blind in a month. Suppose you were a wealthy girl, member of the smart set, beautiful, clever. What would you do? Wouldn't you want to cram into your last hours of sight a lifetime of frenzied gaiety? This is the powerful theme of 'Sailors' Wives,' a First National picture, with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, that is now playing at the.....theatre."

DRAMA

CALL OF THE HEART, THE (Universal): In parts of the country where dogs are used for pulling sleds in winter, a mush race might be a novel exploiting stunt for this one.

CAT AND THE CANARY (Universal mystery drama): Borrow a police, fire or regular auto siren, muffle it, plant it in some out-of-the-way place in your lobby, and have the cashier (by electrical control) sound it.

DEAD MAN'S CURVE (F B O): Use redhot throwaways on which are printed the town's traffic regulations, by tieup with the police department.

GOLDEN CLOWN, THE (Pathe): If feasible have ushers in clown costumes, and tieup with banks, using the copy, "Don't be a 'Golden Clown' and throw your money away. We can show you how to make money by saving it."

GORILLA, THE (First National mystery drama): Obtain a live ape or gorilla for the lobby, or a realistic impersonation of one, and make its presence known in as many ways as possible.

LET 'ER GO, GALLEGHER (Pathe): Have an artist draw the figure of man's hand, one finger of which is missing, and use this copy to describe it: "This missing finger was responsible for bringing a murderer to justice in 'Let 'er Go Gallegher' which will be shown at the.....theatre.....(dates)."

MAIN EVENT, THE (Pathe): Have a contest to determine the best heavyweight boxer in your town and then have the winner and the best known boxer in your territory appear on the stage during the showing of the picture.

ONCE AND FOREVER (Tiffany): Have newspapers run a contest for A. E. F. men or women on "My Most Romantic Adventure While Overseas" or something of that nature.

PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY, THE (F. N.): Have stones with a few Greek letters chiseled on them, with explanatory cards reading, "This is how they sent love letters in the old days. For those who cannot understand French, they were written in Greek. For those who cannot understand Greek, you can get the inside dope on the inside of this theatre."

SECRET HOUR, THE (Paramount): Cut out the outline of a clock with the hands pointing to twelve, work the title on the face and place this in a conspicuous place, playing it up in as many ways as possible.

STAGE KISSES (Columbia): Consult the city librarian and get pictures of the different ways of kissing in other times and other countries and show them in your lobby.

WOMAN ON TRIAL, THE (Paramount): Tie up with shoe shops with the slogan, "We are introducing our new style of shoes in this city. A pair will be sent to any WOMAN ON TRIAL. See Pola Negri in the Paramount picture, 'The Woman on Trial,' now playing at the....."

MELODRAMA

ADVENTURE MAD (Paramount): Clocks play big part in this one. Display a large clock in one of the leading show windows a few days before the run of the picture with card saying that the clock will be started at a certain time and give prizes to those estimating the best what that time is, and also to those guessing the closest to when it will stop.

ADVENTURER, THE (MGM): Try a "correct" contest for a still showing Dorothy Sebastian and Tim McCoy together. Have contestants guess what they are saying, and give free tickets to the nearest guesses.

AFLAME IN THE SKY (F B O): Get an airplane pilot to go up and bombard the town with heralds, such as "Help, see the thrilling climax to this cry of anguish in 'Aflame in the Sky,' at....."

AIR PATROL, THE (Universal): The Inquiring Reporter who asks five questions a day is a popular newspaper feature. Get a reporter to ask, "In view of the rapid increase in airplanes, when and why will it be necessary to establish an AIR PATROL?" An explanatory note by the editor saying that the question was suggested by the film showing at the.....theatre will get the tieup.

ALIAS THE LONE WOLF (Columbia): Get from the police and place in the lobby the paraphernalia used in apprehending criminals, such as handcuffs, pistols and tear bombs.

GIRL FROM CHICAGO, THE (Warner Brothers): Tie up with confectioners to put out a "Molly Coddle" sundae, from the name of the song, "Molly the Girl from Chi," which should be featured in the music stores and in displays in the confectionery stores.

SPOILERS OF THE WEST (M-G-M): Chief Big Tree, who plays in the film, posed for the radiator cap of the Pontiac automobile. Tie up with local Pontiac dealer, since one of the "stills" shows him in the same pose.

TIGRESS, THE (Columbia): Decorate your lobby to resemble a gypsy camp and have a group of dancers dressed as gypsies give as a prologue a number of gypsy songs and dances.

WESTERN

GALLOPING FURY (Universal): Have a drawing contest to determine who can make the best likeness of Hoot Gibson, or stage a "Western Lingo" contest to see who knows the most Western slang or ranch language.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating report received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

A Reply to Mr. Biddle

COLUMBIA CITY, IND.—TO THE EDITOR: I note that you request some attention to Mr. Biddle's failure to put the better pictures that demand more price over. Mr. Biddle, I believe, is suffering in the same state that I am, Indiana, and his experience is identical with mine exactly. There is no bounce to this business as there used to be. A noted star, a company that has the reputation for occasionally outstanding productions, and they all seem to gross about the same.

Business is down in Indiana. That I know, but my experience has been that there is in a great many instances just the same amount of business from a good so-called program picture as there is from some of the much advertised specials.

Personally, I don't think that the road showing of a big picture helps very much in the smaller towns, and I would not step beyond my price for them. There are exceptions to this rule, of course. "Ben Hur" would benefit by its roadshowing, because it resembles to some extent "The Ten Commandments." It will draw people who you never see in your house because of its early Christian era theme.

But names of stars do not mean as much as they did some four or five years ago and if the picture shown has the element of entertainment it will do very close to the much advertised specials.

Understand that there's a few outstanding productions that will gross more money, but a great many of them will not, and the exchanges cannot understand it. But all of the big specials are prologued with more entertainment than you expect to dress up the showing, and in the key city runs that largely accounts for the phenomenal successes, but in a small town, that is out, and the picture must do the business and the sauce of the stagemat that goes with it is responsible for the large grosses. Always there are exceptions to what I have said, but by and large the average gross taken into a small town house is not very often enhanced to stand the larger cost of the specials.—A. E. HANCOCK, Columbia City theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

Holds Standard Price Best

KINGSTON, W. VA.—TO THE EDITOR: In your issue of December 10 I note letter from C. E. Holt, of the Legion theatre, Elmwood, Wis., inquiring if it is the best policy for a theatre to establish one standard price for all shows.

I believe it would be best for the small theatre exhibitor to establish standard prices irrespective of the picture shown. I have found it confusing to my patrons to have two prices. An instance of this came to my attention last night. I have been accustomed to running specials on Friday nights, but due to the fact that the high school had a Lyceum program booked for Saturday night I decided to keep the theatre dark on Saturday and run the regular Saturday night show on Friday. The result of it was, even though all my advertising carried my usual admission price, the house was about $15 lighter than I anticipated. The picture "Casey at the Bat," even on my weakest night, should have packed them in.

Charging special prices for pictures that are intended to be specials, which aren't specials in the majority of cases, sometimes loses a patron for weeks at a time. If they pay a special price to see a lemon they figure the exhibitor put one over on them, and the exhibitor soon hears about it as well as feeling it in the box office receipts on succeeding shows. I always try to make it a point to give my patrons a special at the regular admission if I figure the last special did not come up to the anticipated. And I had to do this on more than one occasion this year, and I usually run but one so-called special a month.

If we were to believe the trade journal advertisements on some of the producers' pictures one would think that they had stopped making programs and had nothing else but specials to offer. And the result of it is the exhibitor is getting to be more "from Missouri" every day, and the small town patron is already that way.—J. A. ROWNA, Moonlight theatre, Kingston, W. Va.

We'll Look Into It

PEORIA, ILL.—TO THE EDITOR: I want to congratulate you upon the business foresight as displayed in your recent consolidation.

In your first consolidated issue, however, I missed your service previously provided by the MOVING PICTURE WORLD which covered stage settings for productions, organ solos, etc. It was a very helpful service.

Wishing you every success, beg to remain—H. STICKELMAIER, Great States theatres, Inc., Chicago, Ill.

The Passing of 1927

SALMON, IDAHO—TO THE EDITOR: Twisted tomcats! Here we were all set in December, 1927, for a nice quiet passing out of old Father Time when darned if the old cuss didn't rear up like a Texas steer and go cavorting all over the range, upsetting all local traditions by hurling in on us North Pole blasts, pawing up all the snow on the great plains and kicking it back into Idaho, completely ruining our box office; then turning east tossing up Chicago on its horns, causing the staid old HERALD to go grapevining off with the WORLD in a locked embrace. Not content with this, the hoary old fellow cut up something scandalous, causing fires to break forth in exhibitors homes, bombs to explode in theatres, sending Will Rogers to Mexico, scaring O'Hara into making his own news reels, Jenkins out into the desert, throwing Bill Weaver into a new editorial chair, sending Robert L. Anderson into a complete state of coma, Eagle Eye Joe to writing love sonnets on the report blanks,

Krause's Injuries in Wreck Prove Serious

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY.—Jack Krause, local manager for Tiffany Productions, was much more seriously injured in the recent automobile accident than was first known. Krause was able to appear at his office for short periods once or twice last week. Suffering from a fractured hip, he is obliged to use crutches. Eight stitches were taken in his upper lip, while the cheek bone was also fractured. After skidding from the road the car plunged into a telegraph pole and then hurtled onto railroad tracks. The car was so badly damaged that Krause received exactly $50 for what was left of it.

Davy Crockett rushing to tom toms and war paint and sending yours truly into a raging fever.

Gosh—that old fool of a 1927 had a dying kick of a Montana bootlegger's white mule and if baby 1928 starts in doing any didoes like his dad or the news breaks that T. O. Service and Pola Negri are twins, I'm going to apply for the job of night watchman at the morgue where a cool slab will be all ready for your nervous wreck.—PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

P. S.—If you've got any pre-war stuff, just shoot me two fingers worth, but if it was made in volatile 1927, give it to Big Bill Thompson of Chicago. His present stock of fireworks seems to be running down.—P. R.

All in Favor Say "Aye"

VILLISCA, IA.—TO THE EDITOR: Did I hear some old gentleman by the initials J. C., call me by a fictitious name? Doggone your old hide, when Phil, Eagle Eye, Fred, Micky, Bert, Old Grasshopper and the rest of us boys get you up there, we'll feed you on carp. Tough luck, J. C. Listen, boys, what 'er we going to do? J. C. is gettin' too old to sleep out. They's a powerful lot of sandburs in that section and we ought to arrange some way to put up a coyote proof shack to live in until the fishin' trip. Think it over.—DR. F. M. CHILDS, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.

Registers a Complaint

NAPPANEE, IND.—TO THE EDITOR: Played "Foreign Devils" December 23-24 and thought it as rotten a picture as I ever played, but didn't make any complaint and thought I wouldn't, until last night when I played "The Thirteenth Hour," which I am compelled to play again tonight, for I have no way of getting another picture or I sure would do it. I think it is terrible to show to children and I am really ashamed to face them when they come out. Nothing but a silly, spooky, mystery picture, not really fit for anyone to see. This is my first of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's pictures and if all of the program pictures in this block are like these two, I sure will be glad when the contract expires. Metro can make good pictures, for I think there is no better than "Ben Hur," "The Big Parade," "Tell It to the Marines," "The Fire Brigade" and "The Scarlet Letter."

I can't understand why a company like Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer would put such stuff on the market as "Foreign Devils" and "The Thirteenth Hour" when they make such pictures as mentioned above and get the price they do for them and plenty of compliments.—GUY LOUDERMILK, Fairy theatre, Nappanee, Ind.

PLEASURE BEFORE BUSINESS: Virginia Brown Faire—Fair program picture. Seven reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

F B O

THE BOY RIDER: Buzz Barton—80% November 18. Very good Western and new star made a hit. Good story and supporting cast. Five reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

JAKE THE PLUMBER: Jesse De Vorska—50% December 25. A good comedy, but it is no special. Seven reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

JAKE THE PLUMBER: Special east—Fair comedy. Everybody seemed to enjoy it. Opposition playing "Texas Steer" same date. Patrons who saw both said "Jake the Plumber" was the best. Seven reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—80%. December 27-28. A good picture, but just a little short of the appeal that the other Gene Stratton Porter stories have had. Mr. Meehan did not give us a feminine lead that was exactly convincing. Photography and direction good. Seven reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

THE GINGHAM GIRL: Special cast—54%. December 25. A nice little comedy drama. Pleased generally. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MOON OF ISRAEL: Special Cast—This is a good religious picture. A very spectacular show. Eight reels.—A. H. Mathias, Dillsboro theatre, Dillsboro, Ind.—General patronage.

THE BOY RIDER: Buzz Barton—Didn't make expenses but no fault of the picture. Was a good show but just simply didn't draw. Don't know why. Five reels.—A. H. Mathias, Dillsboro theatre, Dillsboro, Ind.—General patronage.

THE MAGIC GARDEN: Margaret Morris—The third of the Gene Stratton Porter writings made into beautiful picture which took well with my audience. Did more business second night than the first showing. People went out and talked about it.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

SPLITTING THE BREEZE: Tom Tyler—Splendid Western that will suit any small town audience. This number was full of action as well as comedy and the fact that Frankie Darro was not in it did not affect its entertainment value in the least. The fist fight between Tyler and Harry Woods in the last reel made them gasp for breath. These two boys put up one of the most realistic fights ever seen on the silver sheet.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

RANGER OF THE NORTH: Ranger—80%. November 4. Good picture. Hugh Trevor as leading man was good. He is new and will bare watching. Will go anywhere other pictures of this type have run. Five reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

RANGER OF THE NORTH: Ranger—January 6-7. Here is a real dog picture. The story, photography and wonderful outdoor shots were 100 percent perfect. Drew nice business. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

WHEN A DOG LOVES: Ranger—Good little program picture with some splendid acting and not too much dog, as is the fault with most canine pictures. Some good heart interest with a sprinkling of comedy made the picture go over nicely to a fair crowd.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

MOULDERS OF MEN: Conway Tearle—This is a good show. If you haven't shown this, book it and boost it. It has a mighty good lesson in it. Seven reels.—A. H. Mathias, Dillsboro theatre, Dillsboro, Ind.—General patronage.

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Special cast—80%. December 1-2. This is third of the new F B O product and was best. Seitz does well with direction and Von Eltz and Lee Shumway get the acting honors. Great melodrama. Other features were "Judgment of the Hills" which was as good as any picture can be with such a lurid and commonplace story. Frankie Darro made it what it was. The other, "The Coward," a moderately interesting story with hokum as keynote in the climax, to spoil it all. Patrons laughed outright at the impossible rescue stunt at the end of the picture. Seven reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

TARAZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION: Special cast—32%. January 7. Well liked and brought out the best crowd in several weeks. Excellent photography helped put it over. Six reels.—O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgeway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

MOON OF ISRAEL: Special cast—December 25. A big production that held the interest and pleased most patrons. Eight reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

GALLOPING THUNDER: Bob Custer—Personally we thought this fierce, but no kick from our patrons. Any kind of a Western takes here.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

BRED IN OLD KENTUCKY: Viola Dana—Good old race track stuff, crooked jockeys, and all that, but it pleased our patrons and that is all that we ask.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

MOULDERS OF MEN: Frankie Darro—Frankie puts out some nice acting in this one but the honors should go to Rex Lease who gives a remarkable characterization of the victim of circumstantial evidence. He doesn't act his part, he actually lives it. Others in the cast gave good support and made this a very worthwhile picture which can be classed as out of the ordinary. Good paper.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

KEEPER OF THE BEES: Special Cast—This sure is a good show. Ran this a little late. Give us more like this. One of the best crowds for a long time. Seven reels.—A. H. Mathias, Dillsboro theatre, Dillsboro, Ind.—General patronage.

NON STOP FLIGHT: Special cast—Sure was a good show. Drew a good house. Six reels in bad condition.—A. H. Mathias, Dillsboro theatre, Dillsboro, Ind.—General patronage.

BRED IN OLD KENTUCKY: Viola Dana—A good race horse show. Six reels in bad condition out of Cincinnati.—A. H. Mathias, Dillsboro theatre, Dillsboro, Ind.—General patronage.

Reports indented and printed in bold face are those contributed by members of Van's Gang, who reported to "Straight from the Shoulder Reports" in Moving Picture World prior to the merger.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—A good action picture with Fred and Silver King furnishing the usual thrills. The cross country race is a hair raiser. However, Thomson's pictures don't pull like they used to. Six reels.—J. B. Carter, Electric theatre, Browning, Mo.—General patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—I think this contains the least action of both Fred and Silver King of any of his productions. Looks to me as though they tried to kill Fred because he was leaving. For the benefit of other exhibitors at the close of this there are about 200 feet of trailer introducing Bob Custer.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

CLANCY'S KOSHER WEDDING: George Sidney—January 1. A rather clever picture. Gave very good satisfaction. Would consider it a little better than an average program picture. Seven reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

MOULDERS OF MEN: Conway Tearle—One patron seemed greatly interested in this picture and we'd credit it as a good program picture. Seven reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

JUDGMENT OF THE HILLS: Special cast—January 7. Drew fairly good but the story not so well liked. A story of the backwoods of Kentucky during the late war. If Galdwell had returned sober, believe the ending would have been much better liked. Seven reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HANDS ACROSS THE BORDER: Fred Thomson—Better than the average Western. Our patrons were well pleased. Even we thought this fine, and we do not care for Westerns, but they are what our patrons like.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

DON MIKE: Fred Thomson—Just a few reels more of that kind of stuff. Six reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

First National

FRENCH DRESSING: Lois Wilson—50%. January 2. This is not a bad show. It will please the ladies. Seven reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

THE VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Milton Sills—60%. January 4. This is a real outdoor story, and above the average show. It pleased for me, and do not be afraid to boost it. Seven reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

AN AFFAIR OF THE FOLLIES: Special cast—An excellent production which lost me plenty of money, caused no doubt, by the season of the year when people stay home and get ready for holidays. Am sorry more people did not see it. It's wonderful.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

THE SILENT LOVER: Milton Sills—November 9.—A very good type of screen entertainment. Ending, however, was rather abrupt and very much went to spoil the beauty of the show. Seven reels.—M. Mulihha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—Absolutely the best that Hines ever made. If this strip of film does not make any audience burst into hurricanes of laughter, it is time to stop showing pictures and go to peddlin' shoestrings. Fun all the way and it will back up everything that the press book says. (That means it's one comedy out of a thousand). Get this, fellows, and make your town happy.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

ORCHIDS AND ERMINE: Colleen Moore—This picture lived up to the high standard set by this star and consequently the audience was pleased and also the box office smiled. I consider this star a real asset to any theatre.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE: Ben Lyon—16%. December 22. Fairly good college story. Bad weather and Xmas week hurt attendance. Seven reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Dorothy Mackaill—50%. December 27. A dandy little show and was well liked. Seven reels.—W. T. Biggs, Adair theatre, Adair, Ia.—General patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Special cast—Good. General satisfaction. Haven't had a poor one from F. N. for two years.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—21%. December 23. A Western picture of the better class. Pleased the fans. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

ALL ABOARD: Johnny Hines—77%. December 17. Was disappointed in this one. Six reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—26%. December 26. A good comedy with some beautiful Technicolor scenes. Pleased about 50 percent. There is a vulgar scene in this picture that has no bearing on the story and should be eliminated. It is the one showing a street sweeper and the title pertaining to it. The roughnecks get a great kick out of it but it embarrasses the rest and makes 'em mad. Seven reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Special cast—Clever comedy drama and as usual drew a good crowd on a mighty cold stormy night.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

THE LOVE MART: Special cast—Fine acting and direction, and a very good picture of slaving days in the South.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

THE SEA TIGER: Milton Sills—Good rough and tumble melodrama. Seemed to please our patrons.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE TEXAS STEER: Will Rogers—January 1-2. Something wrong somewhere. Not what it should be as a draw, even in this Texas town. Thank goodness I had a hunch and didn't raise the price, even though it was New Year's. Just a rather good program picture. The ladies don't seem to care for Will. Tried to make use of the much publicized Kellogg tieup but couldn't even get a reply from them. Don't pay too much for this if you haven't bought it yet. Eight reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard—A very good picture, and pleased majority but where Lone Wolf sends a note by carrier pigeon that is written in a pretty good hand—well, it looks pretty far fetched for an Indian to be able to write that kind of a note in 1868. Seven reels.—Business minus with blizzard and 20 below temperature.—W. H. Goodroad, Strand theatre, Warren, Minn.—General patronage.

THE STOLEN BRIDE: Billie Dove—December 21-22. Registered well and was enjoyed. Miss Dove very lovely. Hughes turns in usual good performance. Eight reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

BABE COMES HOME: Babe Ruth—Don't know why this was neglected. We thought it a fine picture. Babe was a fine comedian, and was ably seconded by Louise Fazenda who is always good. We got a good reaction at the box office.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

SENIOR DAREDEVIL: Ken Maynard—January 1. This is an extra good Western which more than pleased all of my Sunday patrons. Ken Maynard is some rider.—Lyceum theatre, Manchester, Mo.—General patronage.

CONVOY: Special cast—December 26-27. Very good war picture and our patrons praised it highly. Most war pictures have flopped here, but this one did not.—W. L. Crouse, Ideal theatre, Bloomer, Wis.—General patronage.

SUBWAY SADIE: Dorothy Mackaill—This is a little old, but you don't have to hide under the seats when the patrons come out, and furthermore, Dorothy Mackaill can have our hat, coat and shoes any time.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE POOR NUT: Special cast—Very good comedy drama.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—Pulled a fair crowd on a bad night. Everyone seemed to enjoy it and I think it will do business most anywhere. Lots of good comedy to keep them laughing. Seven reels.—J. B. Carter, Electric theatre, Browning, Mo.—General patronage.

THE UNKNOWN CAVALIER: Ken Maynard—This guy makes Fred Thomson look like he needs a new outfit. We have yet to see a bum Ken Maynard picture. They please us because they please the box office.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

SUNSET DERBY: Mary Astor—December 31. A clean little racing story. A little different than the rest. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

ORCHIDS AND ERMINE: Colleen Moore—We had a big night on this due to drawing we held, but we feel that Colleen Moore should be given part of the credit because she is always good.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

ORCHIDS AND ERMINE: Colleen Moore—Consider this as good as any by this star. She always draws us some extra business.—W. L. Crouse, Ideal theatre, Bloomer, Wis.—General patronage.

Fox

SILVER VALLEY: Tom Mix—90%. December 29. One star who is lucky enough to have an ever present variety of stunts and appeal to his pictures, and for that reason he is just as popular with me as he was four years ago. The airplane scenes are always sure to hit with my patrons who like up-to-date ideas in Westerns as well as pictures. Six reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

SILVER VALLEY: Tom Mix—13%. December 30. Very good Western. Bad weather and heavy snow cut attendance. Five reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

HEART OF SALOME: Alma Rubens—Would have been a very nice program but the love making of Alma Rubens and Walter Pidgeon was altogether too mushy; therefore, disgusting to many of the audience. Plot was an interesting one. Well done.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

THE GAY RETREAT: Sammy Cohen—100% December 18-19. Of all the screams this takes the cake. These boys are there when it comes to comedy. The house just roared and business was better the second night than the first. If you don't play this there is something wrong with your town. Give us more like it. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Delores Del Rio—60%. December 28-29. Although this is a marvelous production and has been well advertised, it is not the special that Fox claims it is, nor is it as big as "The Big Parade," M-G-M's production. We did not do the business that we expected to do with the production, but think it was the bad weather, not the fault of the picture. Delores Del Rio is a little weak in the part of the French girl, but she does very well at that considering that she is new at the business. The comedy team certainly deserves mentioning as does Edmund Lowe. If you haven't played it you should do so for the reputation of your house, but don't expect a "Big Parade" because you won't get it. Twelve reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—Excellent production. Did big business in face of bad weather. Some parade.—J. C. Keller, Liberty theatre, Eunice, La.—General patronage.

CHAIN LIGHTING: Buck Jones—27%. December 23. Very good Western. Pleased the fans. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

COLLEEN: Special cast—45%. January 2-3. I didn't see this myself but those who did said it was good. Just a little Irish comedy with racing as the main theme. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

COLLEEN: Special cast—With "Mistake," the famed race horse, Madge Bellamy, J. Farrell Mac-

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given picture in report).

When a picture has received percentage ratings in 10 reports it is entered in THE BOX OFFICE TICKER with its current gross average indicating relative attraction values of pictures listed therein.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER appears on page 68.

Donald, Sammy Cohen and a cast that kept the smallest Friday and Saturday night house in years. Continuous from smiles to whoops, with a real thrill, spill, hurdle-horse race as the grand final. A dandy comedy drama. Boost this one. Ten and 25.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

LOVE MAKES 'EM WILD: Special cast—A dandy comedy drama from Fox film. Condition not so good.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—Tom and Tony saved the week end. Action, fun and scenery pleased a good Friday and Saturday business. Boost it.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

OUTLAWS OF RED RIVER: Tom Mix—This is the typical Mix action and comedy Western. Didn't do anything big on it, but made a little money. Business is slow now due to weather, roads, and so forth and so on. A good Mix Western. Six reels.—J. B. Carter, Electric theatre, Browning, Mo.—General patronage.

OUTLAWS OF RED RIVER: Tom Mix—Played this January 23-24. Too near Xmas, but it's sure full of Mix action, pep and fun. Boost it.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

OUTLAWS OF RED RIVER: Tom Mix—The best picture of it's kind. Tom Mix as star.—Earl N. Conway, Electric theatre, St. Francis, Kan.—General patronage.

THE CRADLE SNATCHERS: Special cast—A whooper. Get a press sheet and hop to it.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

THE CRADLE SNATCHERS: Louise Fazenda—This comedy is a riot. Some people may take offense at it, but my crowd ate it up. I didn't know what was going to happen before it was over. It's different and has a real kick. Seven reels.—J. B. Carter, Electric theatre, Browning, Mo.—General patronage.

PUBLICITY MADNESS: Lois Moran—December 23. Just a picture, not good, not bad. O. K. for one day. Six reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ROOKIES: Dane-Arthur—75%. January 6-7. Up-rosarious farce comedy of rookies at a citizens military training camp. Should satisfy any crowd, any time and any place. Seven reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minnesota, Minn.—Small town patronage.

ROOKIES: Karl Dane—Best in months. Let's have more like it. Boys, buy it.—Earl M. Bennett, Liberty theatre, Delavan, Ill.—General patronage.

ROOKIES: Dane-Arthur—The funniest yet. Some team work here. Played to the smallest Thanksgiving crowd we have ever played to. Believe this is due to the fact that we ran the Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures the two nights before this.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

THE BUGLE CALL: Jackie Coogan—80%. December 25-26. I consider this Jackie Coogan's best picture since "Dog of Flanders." Story of boy bugler at a Western army post in the '60's. Eight reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minnesota, Minn.—Small town patronage.

THE BUGLE CALL: Jackie Coogan—January 7. Everybody here likes Jackie Coogan and this picture was a good one. Drew a good crowd, and was a most acceptable offering. Good for any theatre.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

TURN TO Educational's
ANNOUNCEMENT IN THIS ISSUE

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

Tucson, Ariz., January 5, 1928.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

You can believe it or not, just as you like, it will be all right with us, but we are writing this in our shirt sleeves and sitting on the lawn in the shade of the house and our wife and Geneve are cracking hickory nuts and Ruth is crocheting some kind of a flim flam fol-de-rol that is not intended to ward off Nebraska blizzards and you can make a guess as to what it is. No it isn't, we thought it was too, but it isn't.

The first thing we needed when we started this letter was an eraser. We hunted the table all over for it and then yelled to our wife:

"What did you do with that eraser?"

"I haven't seen your eraser."

"Yes you did, we left it right here on this table."

"Well, if you did it must be there yet, I haven't seen it."

"No, it isn't, somebody has grabbed it up."

"I cleaned that table this morning and it wasn't there, look on the sideboard, maybe I laid it up there, or maybe it is over there on that sewing table."

"No it isn't on the sideboard, it isn't on the sewing table, it isn't on the sofa nor the writing desk nor the commode nor the dresser nor in the sink nor out in the garage nor in the coal pail."

"Well, I don't know where it is, did you look in your pockets?"

That's the way it is with these women, always trying to throw the blame on someone else. We haven't found out yet who put that eraser in our pocket.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We wish to herewith record our apology to our old friend, Thomas O. Service. Thomas, in the current issue of the HERALD-WORLD seems to be somewhat hurt at our remarks relative to his criticism of "Seventh Heaven."

Thomas seemed to incline to the opinion that "Seventh Heaven" is a beanoer of a show and he can't understand why we didn't get the same slant on it also. Far be it from us to question the opinion of Thomas on matters of importance, much less the cinema product of a perfectly reliable concern, but be it remembered that the unparalleled advancement made by these glorious United States of America (God bless the American Eagle, he's no buzzard) came about through clashing of great minds. You no doubt recall that famous debate between Webster and Hayne. Lincoln and Douglas didn't agree on one very vital issue, and Lydia E. Pinkham's advance thought has challenged the medical profession the world over and her "Vegetable Compound" has thrown chills into the doctors of medicine and removed chills from the laity until her picture adorns the homes of all well regulated families throughout the civilized world and parts of Chicago.

The public will be the beneficiary by reason of this little controversy between Thomas and the writer in that it has brought to the surface the latent poetic ability of our friend that has lain dormant in and around the Service homestead for lo these many years; therefore, Know All Men By These Presents, that we do hereby acknowledge that "Seventh Heaven" is a right smart picture that ought to satisfy and please Paw and Maw and the kids, Ole and Tillie and the Deacon, and we trust that this public acknowledgment and admission of error will be satisfactory to our old college chum, and that it will bridge the yawning chasm that threatened to separate two brilliant intellects, whose life ambition is, and has been, to guide the wandering footsteps of an incredulous public "Across the plains of Paran" and over the quick-sands of doubt and into a full knowledge of what a darn good picture ought to look like. How's that Thomas, satisfactory?

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Next Monday morning Marie and I are going to head out of 80 above into 20 below and we don't know a bootlegger along the route. We've got to go back to where the old wigwam used to be and rake over the ashes and see if we can find any trace of our golf and fishing outfit. We will need both at that gathering of the faithful at Alexandria, Minn., next summer. Anybody got any to loan?

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We notice in the current issue of the HERALD-WORLD that Ray Murray and Douglas Hodges, a coupla fellas out in Hollywood who are connected now with the HERALD-

patrons dislike this type of picture, but he makes good box office receipts through his personality.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—December 5-6. Good fun. Why don't they keep Miss Davies out of hoop skirts? She can do this stuff. Admitted all girls in high school free, no strings to it at all, and had exceptional business. John Mack Brown caused quite a bit of comment among the ladies. He should be kept at work. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

THE TAXI DANCER: Joan Crawford—December 3. A very fine picture. Very interesting.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

VALLEY OF HELL: Francis McDonald—Good Western but entirely too short. A very good picture but bum looking for Xmas Eve.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: So called all star cast—December 26. This is good ordinary picture saved by the colored folks in the cast. Where Metro gets the idea it's a special and an advanced price picture is one of those mysteries. Murray did not register at all here. Not a soul in the cast ever heard of that amounted to anything. Poor stuff pushing off this one as special. The picture is good, yes, but not one to sell at a high price. Eight reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

BECKY: Sally O'Neil—A fair picture. No kicks on this one. Will please the most of them.—Earl M. Bennett, Liberty theatre, Delavan, Ill.—General patronage.

FLESH AND THE DEVIL: Special cast—Another one of those asbestos mat affairs. Our audience divided on the merits of this picture. Paper on this picture fierce. Better make your own. This is true of many Metro pictures.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES: Lon Chaney—A great picture but too high. We saw Lon Chaney act for the first time in this picture. We always knew that Lon Chaney was a great wig and grease paint man, but now we think he is an excellent actor.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

BATTLING BUTLER: Buster Keaton—A fair comedy but seemed to please. The chief objection we have to Metro is that their salesmen think that they are on a farewell tour when they sell us, and we never see them again.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Paramount

METROPOLIS: Special cast—63%. December 26. This has been described as not a picture for a small town. From the box office standpoint this is true, but what a pity if the people in a small town who enjoy so great a picture as this could not see it. And if those cultivated people only knew how often a theatre owner puts on a picture because it will please them and though it will lose money for him, they would realize that their usual goodwill toward him is not misplaced. "Metropolis" is just one of those kind of pictures for a small town. The theatre must take its pay in prestige instead of receipts. This picture is flashed on the screen with all the force of a great climax without preparation and without notice, and the climax is well maintained. The picture of vast machinery and of mechanical power is at once solemn, impressive, sublime. But the efforts to heighten the stage effects are by methods, more or less, hocus-pocus. With steam blowing off in so many places and men working in an atmosphere of steam, it is more suggestive of a modern stove factory than an industrial plant 1,000 years from now. However, every author is entitled to more or less poetic license. In producing his stage effects he took his share but to pick out defects in this astonishing picture is like picking flaws in Shakespeare. The spectacle of the building of the Tower of Babel would be sufficient to put a picture otherwise inferior on the screen. As for the woman whom he created out of one of those machines, she no sooner danced into life than she became one of those Hip Wiggles. He had better left her where she was. As for his philosophy that industry is becoming so standardized and the workers are becoming mere automatic so that 1,000 years from now they will be mere automatic machines and slaves, the world is not headed that way. The worker he depicts is the fellaheen of Egypt in overalls. He is picturing the past and not the future. But the Pharaohs have gone. They have had their day and they will never return. The moral of the play, the lesson for Capitol and Labor cannot be too highly commended. On this particularly, I never heard

AFTER MIDNIGHT: Norma Shearer—55%. I have seen some bad reports on this but I can't see where it is so bad. It is not a special by any means but it is a good program picture and that is more than can be said for some of them. Norma Shearer good as is Gwen Lee. The latter deserves better roles. Metro-Goldwyn is about done in our town and personally I am sorry of it, even though I did not think they were fair with their new contract. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

THE FRONTIERSMAN: Tim McCoy—A very good picture of the days of the early history of the United States. Good for any theatre, good scenes, full of interest.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

TEA FOR THREE: Special cast—December 4. Very clever little comedy drama.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

MAN, WOMAN AND SIN: Special cast—Don't know how to report on this. It's pretty hot in places but seemed to please.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

ADAM AND EVIL: Special cast—This picture suited me better than any of its type played in years. Boys, they will all like it.—Earl M. Bennett, Liberty theatre, Delevan, Ill.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novarro—Played it on percentage and made a few dollars. However, would have lost money had I bought it outright. Pulls a class that hardly ever comes out and of course it pleased generally. A great picture. Twelve reels.—J. B. Carter, Electric theatre, Browning, Mo.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—October 3-4-5. Played this right at release date. You've all read about it that haven't played it. Greatest achievement of the screen to our notion. "Big Parade" not to be classed with it in any possible way, let alone putting it on same sales basis. Eleven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

THE ROAD TO ROMANCE: Ramon Novarro—December 21. Just a fair program picture. Showed to a small crowd. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

TIN HATS: Special cast—A mild innocuous comedy, but Claire Windsor good to look at. Fairly pleasing.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline theatre, Texline, Tex.—Small town patronage.

TIN HATS: Conrad Nagel—Some picture. It's okay.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

SLIDE, KELLY, SLIDE: Williams Haines—We like William Haines so well we would like to see him in something besides smart aleck roles. Our more favorable comments from an audience as they passed out than on this occasion. Paramount in selecting it used commendable judgment and deserves praise for bringing it to this country.—A. J. Gibbons, Illinois theatre, Metropolis, Ill.—General patronage.

METROPOLIS: Special cast—November 21. Just like near beer in a small American town. I'll phone you when I play another imported super special, no matter how many they stick on the contract. Somewhat interesting to look at, but so is Futuristic Art if you've had enough drinks. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

MAN POWER: Richard Dix—January 1-2. A very good, entertaining Dix picture. The photography of the night scenes done in black and white are very effective. This is the first picture for many years which I can recall that the night scenes did not look as though they had been ducked in a barrel of green paint. As a matter of fact, this picture drew and pleased just twice as many as that alleged special, "Knockout Riley." Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

BARBED WIRE: Pola Negri—50%. January 2-3. "Barbed Wire" is a masterpiece of dramatic construction. It has all the elements of the drama. The tragic, the pathetic, the serious and the comic are so well timed that the play is at no time tiresome. As for Pola Negri, to those who were acquainted with her reputation, she satisfied their expectations, and the stranger needed only his own observation to be impressed that she is a distinguished actress. This picture, perhaps, brings her in nearer sympathy with her audience than any in which I have seen her so far, but again it did not pay.—A. J. Gibbons, Illinois theatre, Metropolis, Ill.—General patronage.

THE ACE OF CADS: Adolphe Menjou—60%. Not much of a drawing card but seemed to please those who came. Although Adolphe is a little old he has lots of "It" and that is what goes now days. Play it if you have bought it, but don't expect much. Alice Joyce is a great help to the picture. The only criticism I would have is that Adolphe is too old for the part. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

THE LAST LAUGH: Emil Jannings—November 23. The acting of Jannings and photographic effects were simply marvelous but without titles, it was a flat failure. Got many complaints and lost money. Eight reels.—M. Mulliha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

THE CAT'S PAJAMAS: Betty Bronson—66%. January 4. This picture drew well and I can't see how it could. If Paramount is the best show in town they will have to put such trash as this in the ash can. It was perfectly silly all the way through, with Ricardo Cortez cast as an opera singer. That was sure a joke to my patrons. Betty Bronson is too much of a snob to make herself liked in pictures. I am glad that she is through at Paramount. Then the titles and the film were so bad that it wasn't even funny. Oh, well, why waste time. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

SO'S YOUR OLD MAN: Buddy Rogers—22%. December 20. Punk, punk, punk, is all I can say for this lemon. Oh, why, didn't Paramount shelve it before they let people waste their money. If this Fields is funny it's not in this picture. Just seven reels of nothing. So rotten that it is disgusting. Boy, Paramount, has some good old sour lemons as well as good pictures. Six reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

SO'S YOUR OLD MAN: W. C. Fields—Showed this on Family night and it went over with a bang. They all have a good time when you show a comedy like this. Let's keep them laughing. Just the right length, six reels. Most of them are too long.—J. B. Carter, Electric theatre, Browning, Mo.—General patronage.

UNDERWORLD: George Bancroft—November 16-17. Splendid picture, story, cast, production. Not a wow as a draw. Hate to see Bancroft make comedies after showing what he can do in real productions. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

HONEYMOON HATE: Florence Vidor—December 16. Very well liked. Paramount has been making some really clever entertaining program releases this year. This is one of them. Six reels.—Harry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

ONE WOMAN TO ANOTHER: Florence Vidor—December 29. Very pleasing program release. Was greatly enjoyed here. Not big, of course, but well done, as was "Honey Moon Hate." Six reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE WORLD AT HER FEET: Florence Vidor—January 7. Score another good one for Miss Vidor. They liked it immensely. Drew well also. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

DRUMS OF THE DESERT: Special cast—Another picture that pleased. It was very interesting. Seven reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE LAST OUTLAW: Gary Cooper—January 3. An excellent Western to empty seats because of severe cold. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

TELL IT TO SWEENEY: Special cast—December 19-20. Meant nothing at all here. Should not have run it two days. Just nothing at all to it. Six reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

A GENTLEMAN OF PARIS: Adolphe Menjou—December 27. Corking good clever sophisticated comedy. Extremely well done. This one and "Service for Ladies" have been excellent offerings for Menjou. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

Pathe-P D C

A HARP IN HOCK: Rudolph Schildkraut—70%. December 19-20. Could be worse, but not just what my patrons like. The whole picture is saved by the presence of Joseph Striker as the juvenile lead. There are some good love scenes and it is shameful they were so short. Seven reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

STEEL PREFERRED: William Boyd—An excellent picture even though some scenes are unreal. Plenty of comedy. Good acting. An all around good picture.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Rudolph Schildkraut—80%. January 1-2. Very good drama of a small town character that is fast disappearing. Junior Coghlan does very good as the kid. Eight reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minneota, Minn.—Small town patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Rudolph Schildkraut—73%. December 3. An excellent picture.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Rudolph Schildkraut—70%. November 23-24. Good picture, until the last reel and climax, where the hokum distorted ones conception of the picture as a whole. However, there have been so many that were worse this deserves bouquets for the acting and direction. The photography and titles are good. Eight reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

THE HEART THIEF: Joseph Schildkraut—65%. December 14-15. This is next to last of the old P. D. C. picture and am glad of it. While the story was fair, the direction and photography was good, we did not do any business on this. Producers does not advertise its pictures like they should be and they have no prestige whatever. I am not going to run them next year, 1928. Seven reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

FLYING LUCK: Monty Banks—70%. December 16-17. Very good Banks comedy. Monty Banks enlists in the aviation corps and has adventures a plenty. Six reels.—George Benson, Community theatre, Minneota, Minn.—Small town patronage.

GIRL IN THE PULLMAN: Marie Prevost—Fast moving comedy of the slap stick variety that certainly kept the audience in an uproar from start to finish. The whole family will like this one. Six reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

GIRL IN THE PULLMAN: Special cast—Gave satisfaction and proved to be very good entertainment.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

DRESS PARADE: Special cast—Very fine picture with actual scenes of West Point.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric theatre, Hartington, Neb.—General patronage.

DRESS PARADE: William Boyd—This is a very good picture and perfectly clean morally. You can step on this one and raise your admission price, and your patrons will say good. I ran it December 18-19.—W. H. Goodroad, Strand theatre, Warren, Minn.—General patronage.

ANGEL OF BROADWAY: Leatrice Joy—December 31. Leatrice Joy plays the part of a Salvation lassie in disguise and does her part very well. Somehow, it lacks heart appeal. Did not go over with us very well on account of the star's deceiving part. Seven reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

JIM THE CONQUEROR: William Boyd—It seemed to please our people. No kicks. Six reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE WISE WIFE: Phyllis Haver—January 8. This one pleased our audience very much. A good clean picture and drew better than the average. It is not a special but will stand a little extra boost-in. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE FIGHTING EAGLE: Rod LaRocque—This was a costume picture of Napoleon's time and I was afraid of it, but it seemed to please. It has action and held the interest both young and old to very end. Nine reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

PALS IN PARADISE: Vera Reynolds—Excellent picture, pleasing all classes.—J. C. Keller, Liberty theatre, Eunice, La.—General patronage.

BACHELOR'S BABY: Special cast—This went over satisfactory. Six reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE FRESHMAN: Harold Lloyd—Just like good liquor, even though it was better.—J. C. Keller, Liberty theatre, Eunice, La.—General patronage.

ANNOUNCEMENT IN THIS ISSUE

WORLD in sending Christmas greetings to a bunch of friends back in Pork Center, Ill., closed their greetings in this fashion: "It's a great life for a trade paper man and he lives with the ease of King Midas." Yeah, they probably do, and they should have gone on and said: "The life of King Solomon also." Gosh, what a picnic old Sol could have were he living in Hollywood in this day of current events. Will Rogers wouldn't be in it.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

As we walk out of the front door of our wife's hacienda and face the majestic Rincon mountains 15 miles away, and feel the soft, Southern zephyrs toying with the fervid cheek of beauty, we are wont to exclaim in that favorite Hollywood expression, "Give us alimony or take back your child." Under the benign influence of this balmy, Southern clime our inconsequential nature is prone to list to the siren's call and hie ourself away to the realms of connubial felicity so dear to the heart of a Hollywood Sheik. There, we'll bet plenty of money that Joe Mayer, of the Palace theatre, at Hamilton, O., can't come within gun-shot of that.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We've got to stop right here and get out of the house, for our wife is going around the premises with a fly-swatter in her hand and a murderous look on her face that betokens death and destruction to every fly within the confines of Arizona that dares to trespass the sacred precincts of this hacienda, and the swish of the swatter keep rhythmic time to "Dixie" as whistled by Ruth out in the kitchen and the contralto notes from Geneve singing from the back parlor:

*It's a long, long way to old Nebraska,
It's a long, long way to go,
It's a long, long way to old Nebraska
To her blizzards and her snow,
So it's good by to Arizona
We like your climate fine,
It's a long, long way to travel back here
But we're coming back sometime.*

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

It is with a feeling of joy and satisfaction that we note in the current issue of the HERALD the merging of MOVING PICTURE WORLD with EXHIBITORS HERALD. The bringing together of these two great factors in the advancement of the motion picture industry should be a cause for rejoicing throughout the entire motion picture field.

The uniting of these two great journals marks the first and foremost step in the advancement of the picture industry for 1928, and under this guiding influence we confidently expect to see the Motion Picture Industry attain that higher plane of efficiency and service for which it has striven for many years.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

This Colyum isn't supposed to be political, neither for nor against, but if Al Smith wants the support of Arizona he should send a man down here right away and fix this gap in our front lawn fence, for our wife's goat goes in and out ad lib, and sometimes oftener than that. There's a great chance to do some real missionary work down here.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

As a charter member of the HERALD ONLY club, and a lifelong contributor to "What the Picture Did For Me" department, we wish to welcome Van's gang of "Straight from the Shoulder Reports" into full fellowship and will ask "Fishy" Phil, the Rabbi, Creal, Stettmund, Este, Crocket, Tragsdorf and the rest of you pikers to move along and let Van's gang up to the trough. We wish to assure Van's gang that the "What the Picture Did For Me" boys are all right (some of the time) and outside of snoring in their sleep, they will not be bad playmates. 1928 looks like a big year from now on. Come on, there's the 7 o'clock whistle.

J. C. JENKINS,
The HERALD-WORLD Man.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Rayart

CRUISE OF THE HELLION: Donald Keith—Edna Murphy, Tom Santschi, Frank Ford help Keith to make this a very interesting tale of the sea with plenty of melodramatic action. Suspense is good and the picture holds the interest from fade-in to fade-out. Good paper, too. One traveling man told us this was better than "The Blood Ship."—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—General patronage.

Tiffany

LIGHTNING: Lightning—one of the finest and very, very interesting and keeps you guessing.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

WOMEN'S WARE: Special cast—Hard to sell to small town fans, but if you can get them in will please. Six reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—General patronage.

United Artists

POLLYANNA: Mary Pickford—January 3. A real old picture but we had never played it and our patrons all like Mary Pickford in child parts. This is a good one and pleased our people.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

DON Q: Douglas Fairbanks—A truly remarkable production which took well with everyone. People stopped on way out to mention how good it was. Some came back second night to see it over again.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

Universal

PAINTED PONIES: Hoot Gibson—71%. December 10. They all enjoyed this picture.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

PAINTED PONIES: Hoot Gibson—January 4. This is an extra good Gibson picture with lots of laughs, thrills and action. Everybody likes Hoot Gibson here. Six reels.—Lyceum theatre, Manchester, Mo.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Laura LaPlante—75%. November 8-9-10. Not another "Phantom of the Opera" by a long ways, but a satisfying audience picture. Some of the chills and thrills failed to get over on account of too much comedy in many of the scenes. All of the characters were well portrayed. Eight reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Laura LaPlante—October 31. Played Hallowe'en, right where it belongs and it went over like a house a fire. Good all the way and the best of its type yet made, in our opinion. Eight reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Laura LaPlante—Another box office knockout. Played midnight show on this Xmas week with advance ticket sale, 50 cents. Results surprising.—J. C. Keller, Liberty theatre, Eunice, La.—General patronage.

ALIAS THE DEACON: Jean Hersholt—65%. December 31. A very good picture. Had a good crowd on one of the worst nights of the year. Seven reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

MICHAEL STROGOFF: Ivan Moskine—70%. November 27-28. This is for highly discriminating audiences and not for the small town and neighborhood houses. This needs excessive publicity and presentation. Foreign productions fail me every time. Nine reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salisbury, Md.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERY CLUB: Special cast—Good stars and good acting, but the whole plot is so obscure that I consider the picture very poor.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Ind.—General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Reginald Denny—A very good comedy with good acting, good situations and good subtitles. A picture that will go in any theatre.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Ind.—General patronage.

THE STOLEN RANCH: Fred Humes—Just an average Western that will go where the people like Westerns. Not much to it.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Reginald Denny—December 30. Better than some of the Denny pictures. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Reginald Denny—Another good one from Denny. Did not like the lady partner he had playing this with him.—Earl M. Bennett, Liberty theatre, Delavan, Ill.—General patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Special cast—The best comedy drama we ever played, I reckon. Thanks, Uncle Carl.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

CHEATING CHEATERS: Special cast—December 9. Good program crook comedy drama. Well set, well done. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

THE LOVE THRILL: Laura LaPlante—January 3-4. A very good La Plante picture, with Bryant Washburn and Tom Moore. Seems to me Washburn is a better actor now when he is in support of La Plante than he was several years ago when they tried to make us believe he was a star. I cannot remember running a La Plante picture which was not good entertainment. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE LOVE THRILL: Laura LaPlante—A good picture, good title.—Earl M. Bennett, Liberty theatre, Delavan, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LOVE THRILL: Laura LaPlante—Laura took her bath. Some kid piped up, "Hop out, let's see you dive." Gosh!—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

A HERO ON HORSEBACK: Hoot Gibson—Sure pulled me the best Friday and Saturday night business for months, and pleased.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

THE BUCKAROO KID: Hoot Gibson—December 31. Not a real Western. Just a good comedy with Western coloring. Gibson always goes over well with my people. Good for any house.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

SILK STOCKINGS: Laura LaPlante—Here is one I can recommend. Clean as a hound's tooth with plenty of laughs. My patrons sure enjoyed it. Ten and 25.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

SILK STOCKINGS: Laura LaPlante—January 3. A much better picture than the title would imply. It is a good clean picture and may be used any day in the week. It offers plenty of comedy and will please most any audience. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

A CHEERFUL FRAUD: Reginald Denny—Listen, Phil, you told 'em! I okay your reports. This one would make a grass widow blush.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

A CHEERFUL FRAUD: Reginald Denny—December 28. A very good Denny picture. One that pleased all of our Wednesday patrons.—Lyceum theatre, Manchester, Mo.—General patronage.

THE SILENT RIDER: Hoot Gibson—January 20. A dandy Western. Gibson is well liked here.

No business because of sub-zero weather. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

BACK TO GOD'S COUNTRY: Renee Adoree—December 3. Here's a good Curwood story, well told and beautifully photographed. Miss Adoree fine as usual. Good outdoor film. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

THE PRAIRIE KING: Hoot Gibson—Ten below zero and a keen northwest wind knocked the business, but don't be afraid, the picture is O. K. It will please the Hoot fans.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

PRISONERS OF THE STORM: House Peters—January 2. Scenery good, acting good, and a picture that pleased my patrons. Many good comments. Good for any average audience.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

HEY HEY COWBOY: Hoot Gibson—January 5-6. A pleasing Hoot picture. Slim Summerville supplies most of the comedy and he is always good. Hoot should keep him in his lineup. Six reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SPANGLES: Marion Nixon—December 2. We consider this quite the poorest picture we've played in many moons. Looked as if it might have been made five years ago, and the acting was of the Biograph period. Sorry, because we read Nellie Revell every week in Variety and were anxious to see her brain child in the flickers. Six reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—General patronage.

Warner Bros.

DON JUAN: Special cast—A great picture, an awful flop at the box office.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

State Rights

ARE YOU FIT TO MARRY: Special cast—December 21. A far-fetched story based on heredity. Drew mostly male patrons and pleased only a few.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

THREE KEYS: Special cast—November 30. An average picture. Very little of entertainment, prints and accessories in good shape but didn't earn although advertised more than necessary. Seven reels.—M. Mulliha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

THE RAT: Ivar Navello—November 26. If England begins to deliver pictures of this type, it will soon be able to compete with America. Our patrons liked this picture and we got satisfactory business. Eight reels.—M. Mulliha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

CRUISE OF THE HELLION: Special cast—85%—November 22. A very good picture. Pleased fine. A good cast and everything that is to be found in the better productions. Much more for the money than some of the supposed-to-be specials. Six reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salishury, Md.—General patronage.

LENA RIVERS: Special cast—A very, very fine picture and it pleased.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

TUNNEY-DEMPSEY FIGHT:—The clearest and best fight picture we have ever shown. Drew fine.—A. C. Betts, Powers theatre, Red Creek, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Serials

PATHE

THE MASKED MENACE: Special cast—This is as good as the ordinary run of serials, but they are all pretty common. Why don't someone make a serial once that's off the beaten path? The old gags are all worn out, yet they still leave someone hanging by their toes at the end of each chapter. Ten episodes.—J. B. Carter, Electric theatre, Browning, Mo.—General patronage.

SCOTTY OF THE SCOUTS: Have played the 5th chapter and going fairly good. Story of the Boy Scouts. Two reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Richardson Holds New Orleans Job; Maurin Aids Him

ASK W. M. Richardson, manager of Universal's New Orleans exchange, and V. A. Martin, assistant manager, why that Southern office is prospering and they'll both tell you the big answer is the splendid cooperation given them by the home office. But the rest of the boys will say that Richardson and Maurin have had a lot to do with it themselves.

W. M. Richardson

Richardson entered the employ of the Consolidated Film & Supply Co., Atlanta, July 4, 1910, as shipping clerk, having previously been with the Southern Express Co. He was made booker in 1913.

He accepted a position with Mutual Film as assistant manager, but went back to Consolidated July 4, 1914, as salesman. He was transferred to El Paso as manager, Nov. 11, 1914, remained until April 17, 1920, and then was transferred to New Orleans as manager.

Maurin started in June, 1916, with Metro as shipping clerk, advanced as booker, left and entered the World War, joined Paramount in April, 1918, as assistant manager, and in 1923 entered Universal as booker.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

CLIMBING INTO CLOUDLAND: Hodge Podge scenic, a good filler.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

DUCK OUT: Bobby Vernon—Good comedy and contains plenty of laughs. Two reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

FELIX TRUMPS THE ACE: Fairly good cartoon comedy.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

THE FIGHTING DUDE: Lupino Lane—Good comedy, but in very bad condition. Two reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

HALF PRINT HERO: Pretty good. I run Educational comedies better than 90 per cent of the time, and the reason for this is because I find them better than any other. Their Kinograms can't be beat.—W. H. Goodroad, Strand theatre, Warren, Minn.—General patronage.

F B O

BEAUTY PARLOR SERIES: On the 11th chapter and going good. Will please most patrons. Two reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

BOYS WILL BE GIRLS: Good comedy. Drew numerous laughs and pleased. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MICKEY'S PALS: Mickey McGuire—Considered a rather good kid comedy. Two reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WANDERERS OF THE WAISTLINE: Three Fat Boys—A good action Western comedy. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

FOX

CAPT. KID'S KITTENS: Good juvenile comedy. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

FOUR FACES WEST: A pleasing comedy. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER COMEDIES: They are better than anything Roach has ever made, or at least the first six are. Chase and Our Gang are best. Stan Laurel is a hit. Two reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salishury, Md.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BUSTER'S SHOW OFF: Buster Brown—In line with most Buster Brown comedies, good. Two reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Redgranite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE COLLEGIANS: George Lewis—Second series. They are great and as good as the first series. Sorry to see them run out. Please everyone, young and old. Cast is great. Two reels.—Helen Ulman, Opera House, Salishury, Md.—General patronage.

DAZZLING CO-EDS: Excellent, as are all Collegians. Two reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

FIGHTING FINISH: Same as all "Collegians," excellent, and draws us new customers. Two reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

NEWLYWEDS QUARANTINED: This series does not take extra well here. Two reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By Whit

ALTHOUGH the late affair between the operators and exhibitors has been settled, there are still some details to be worked out and a meeting to accomplish this will have been held by the time this is read. The agreement reached calls for a five per cent increase this year over last year's wages and an additional five per cent during 1929 over the new 1928 wage scale.

Under this two year contract, the lowest paid operators will receive around $65 a week this year and the highest paid will draw down a sum averaging around $115 per week.

During the meetings between the exhibitors and operators held to reach an agreement, the exhibitors were represented by Jack Miller, chairman; John Balaban, Emil Stern, Mort Singer, B. J. Cooney, Jack Cotter, Henry Schoenstadt, James Coston, Louis Marks, Frank Schaefer, Joe Pastor and Aaron Saperstein. The union was represented by Tom Reynolds, president; Tom Maloy, business agent; Hal Johnstone, secretary and the executive board.

As a part of Paramount's Lasky booking drive, the week of February 5 has been set aside as H. A. Ross Anniversary Week, for division number two, which is Ross' division. Ross is celebrating his tenth anniversary in the service of Paramount, and the special week is staged as an especial honor to him for his ten years of service under the Paramount banner. Plans for the drive were set in motion and Ross knew nothing of it until all plans were worked out. The Paramount boys in the division are set for a real drive in honor of Ross.

William Brumberg has been succeeded by Robert Funk as country sales manager at the Universal exchange. Brumberg is now in charge of country sales for Columbia in the Chicago territory.

With Henri Ellman and Roy Alexander at the head of the Columbia exchange and with the organization they are building, Columbia is taking on a new meaning in this territory.

Paul Busch is now working the country territory for Universal. He began work Monday.

Lee Marcus, general sales manager for FBO, was in town last week, and according to him, FBO will soon score a picture for use with the new talking equipment acquired as a result of the new connection with the Radio Corporation of America, Westinghouse and General Electric.

We missed Joe Lyon, Len Ullrich, Sam Gorelick, and Walter Brown on our weekly pilgrimage to FBO last week. All three of them are out in the country and alleged to be hard at work.

Harvey Day of the home office of Educational was in town last week.

Jack Miller and his wife and son left Sunday night for a fine vacation trip to Cuba and the Isthmus of Panama. They will be in Havana during the Pan American exposition, and Florida and other points have been listed on their itinerary.

And others are lucky enough to rate vacation trips. Frank Schaefer and his wife left this week for a six weeks' visit to California, and Fred Gilford left Wednesday of last week for Havana where he will take in the sights at the Pan American exposition.

May McAvoy was in town last week and made a personal appearance at the Garrick where "The Jazz Singer," is running. She is the feminine lead in the picture.

The national convention of the National Theatre Supply Company at the Stevens Hotel began last Wednesday. The first week is devoted to salesmen and the second to managers of the organization.

* * *

With people going on all sorts of wonderful vacation trips, we have been thinking how nice it would be to take one ourselves, but why should anyone want to leave old Chi when the weather man is handing out such wonderful weather? Department stores are complaining that the bottom has dropped out of the sale of red flannels.

W. H. Rudolph arrived from New York Thursday to take charge of the United Artists theatre here. He will also be connected with the company's theatre in Detroit.

The fame of the Wurlitzer Organ as a musical attraction in the leading motion picture theatres of America has spread to the far corners of the civilized world. As a result the famous Wurlitzer Organ has been installed in many progressive theatres in foreign countries. The list of Wurlitzer installations throughout the country during the past year is evidence of Wurlitzer supremacy. Wurlitzer Organs are world famous—they possess exclusive features which give the organist an instrument of marvelous flexibility and instant responsiveness to the slightest touch.

Lakeside

Quiet Electric VENTILATOR

*Draws Capacity Houses
Even During the Hot Summer Months*

Good Ventilation Makes Good Business—It Pays to Keep Your Patrons Cool and Comfortable

You can fill your empty seats—increase your box office receipts—and draw crowds of steady patrons by equipping your theatre with a Lakeside Quiet Electric Ventilator. Its low price—easy installation—simplicity and low cost of operation make it a profitable investment that pays big dividends in increased receipts.

The Lakeside is equipped with a specially designed Four-Way Air Deflector and sends a powerful current of draftless, deflected air to every corner of the theatre that forces out the stale, devitalized air and completely changes all the air in the theatre every few minutes, so that it is always flooded with fresh, pure, healthful, outdoor air. This cooling current of fresh outside air—powerful but absolutely draftless—will please your audiences and bring their steady patronage.

The Lakeside comes ready for installation. It requires no tearing down of walls or ripping up of floors. It is so compact that it fits into a very small space. It can be disassembled to move through small door openings, and installed satisfactorily in many places where it is impossible to install any other type of ventilating system. Lakeside Ventilators are easy to operate—and trouble free.

The Lakeside costs much less than many of the complicated cooling and ventilating systems on the market, yet is remarkably efficient and is guaranteed to give satisfactory results. It is very inexpensive to operate and must "make good" in actual service because it is backed by a reliable guarantee. Lakeside Ventilators are made in different sizes to meet every requirement.

Write Today for Catalog—Read What Users Say and let us give you complete information with suggestions of an installation for your theatre. Don't delay. Write now and investigate before the summer rush season comes. Tell us the width, length, height, seating capacity of your theatre [also whether it has a balcony or not] and our service department will submit suggestions and quotation without obligation on your part. Do it NOW—before you forget.

EVENHEETERS NOT RADIATORS

There is just one CORRECT Method of heating your organ chamber

EVENHEETERS!!

The WRONG or Radiator Method.

The Right or EVENHEETER Method.

THERE is a distinct difference between Evenheater organ chamber heating and radiator heating. The radiator at its best is unfit for heating so large an area as an organ chamber for it depends primarily on radiant heat and slow natural radiation. As a result it heats only in areas; around the radiator the air is hot, too hot for surrounding organ parts which are materially affected by such direct heat. Around the reeds and pipes where the heat is essential it does not strike, for circulation is so slow that the air cools before it reaches there.

Back among the chimes and reeds where the heat is particularly essential the warm air does not circulate and at the chambers ceiling there is apt to be a layer of warm air which serves no purpose because it does not circulate and consequently is wasted heating energy.

Evenheeters, on the other hand, have been built to meet the requirements of organ chamber heating; and they are the only type heater that have. Here there is no overheating of adjacent organ parts; Evenheater construction prevents this. The air shoots out the top of the heater and CIRCULATES through the chamber. Here the pipes and reeds are kept at the same temperature, 70° at all times. Here there is no "cold area" nor any layer of heated air for the constant forced circulation of warm air from the Evenheater maintains the same even temperature throughout the organ chamber.

Why install a radiator organ heater that cannot meet the proper requirements when Evenheeters can be furnished to heat your organ chamber correctly?

Write us of your organ heating problems. Let us tell you more of Evenheeters. We will gladly furnish any information you desire.

AIR WASHING

Now a Part of the SUPREME Cooling System

A WONDERFUL new feature of the Supreme System—washed air. Now any theater can have the summer-time attraction that only the biggest theaters have been able to afford—namely, positive cooling by washed air!

The Supreme Cooling System, noted for dependability, used in hundreds of theaters, now washes as well as cools the air. The effect is amazing! The cost is amazingly small! There's nothing else like it. It is destined to revolutionize theater cooling.

“Washed Air” Means Bigger Profits For You — —

You know that people will patronize a cool theater in summer. You know that washed air will keep your theater cool. The Supreme Cooling and Air-Washing System provides washed air at a price any theater can afford. Put in a Supreme System and you make sure of a successful summer. Send the coupon for complete information and prices.

SUPREME

HEATER AND VENTILATING CORP. St. Louis, Mo.

Here's the New Feature

The Supreme Turbo Air-washing unit, electrically operated. It creates a misty water-spray through which the air must pass before entering the blower. It's astonishing how this spray cools and freshens the air.

Here's a phantom view of the Supreme all-steel Cooling Blower, showing the multiblade steel wheel which forces air into your theater at such a rate that all the air is changed 30 to 60 times an hour.

No Vibration—No Noise

The wheel is so precisely balanced and its shaft and bearings are so true that there is no vibration or noise. The Supreme System is always a comfort, never an annoyance to the audience.

Horton Variable Speed Pulley

At a slight extra cost, the Supreme Cooling Blower can be furnished with the Horton Variable Speed Pulley, time-tried for 25 years, and famed for reliability. This pulley can also be equipped with cables for remote control.

Complete in Itself — Can be installed with cooling systems now in use.

If you have a cooling system, you can easily add air-washing by means of this unit.

THE COLONIAL CHOOSES
A POPULAR CHAIR!

FOR this handsome Hartford house, chair OC 421, a popular Heywood-Wakefield design, was selected. This luxurious theatre seat has a full upholstered back and a deep, comfortable spring seat. The aisle light standard was finished in black and high-lighted with gold. The orchestra and balcony chairs were upholstered in blue and the loge chairs in red mohair.

Throughout the country Heywood-Wakefield chairs are more and more in demand by independent and chain exhibitors. Publix Theatres Corporation recently purchased over 40,000 Heywood-Wakefield chairs. The Orpheum circuit has ordered or already installed our seats in ten new houses. These are but two examples of theatre exhibitors' confidence in Heywood-Wakefield theatre seats.

$296,000,000 for New Theatres

Expenditures in theatre construction during 1928 should reach the enormous figure of $296,000,000.

This great volume of business will be distributed among the leading manufacturers and distributors of products essential to the building and operation of the modern theatre of today.

The total of $296,000,000 is based on two premises: The annual forecast of the "Architectural Forum," and the theatre projects which will develop during the 12 months and which are not included in the "Forum's" survey.

The huge total forecast last year by the "Forum" was surpassed by subsequent developments, and with certain theatre projects for 1928 not yet announced, but in the making, it is conservative to place the total at $296,000,000. This year will be big for the industry.

This year will be big for the industry.

Huge Building Program Is Forecast for United States

By C. STANLEY TAYLOR

Editor's Note

This seventh annual survey and forecast of "Architectural Forum" deals exhaustively with the field of building construction. While the survey deals only in a general way with theatre construction, as it does with other building operations, the entire forecast is of significance to the motion picture business, for it is a well-founded indication of prosperity for 1928. This is an encouraging outlook for the box offices of the nation.

the confidence of the public is shaken, building activity will be materially influenced. The volume of building construction, and particularly the volume of contemplated construction as expressed by plan filing, is not a barometer of business conditions, as it is so often called. It is a mirror of business conditions, and it does not primarily affect prosperity in one way or another, but is in itself an effect of our general business situation. In prosperous times we built in huge volumes to meet not only the various necessary normal needs for new space, but to fulfill the requirements of increased standards of commercial and domestic housing which are in keeping with the ability to pay for greater comfort and utility.

With these thoughts in mind, is it not reasonable to believe that there may be a basic explanation for the evident paradox of contrary opinions as to building activity? Perhaps we have not been passing through a real "boom"—perhaps the continued building activity which, as an examination of the accompanying chart, "The Building Situation at a Glance," will show has been carrying on in increasing volume since 1922, is primarily based on greatly increased building requirements coupled with prosperous conditions which have provided the means for this great investment.

After all, the population of this country during the past 10 years has increased by many millions for which shelter of all kinds must be provided. The tremendous volume of existing construction which has been added each year must of necessity require constantly greater building activity to take care of obsolescence and replacements. The fire losses grow greater each year in spite of efforts to curb them, but may be noted that they do not grow larger in proportion to the total number of buildings. They grow larger because the total area of risks has been tremendously increased. Naturally, replacements to meet fire losses must grow larger as the requirements become greater.

We have also to consider seriously the greatly increased standards of living. The average family requires better shelter with a greater degree of attractiveness, comfort and utility. Similarly in business buildings

THE building records of the year just passed indicate that construction activity has continued at a pace almost equal to that of the record-breaking year, 1926. Including engineering projects and construction in the rural districts, it is evident that the total annual building volume of this country during 1927 has been well over seven billion dollars.

In January of 1927, The Architectural Forum issued a forecast that building activity for the year would be 10 or 12 per cent less than in 1926. Events have proven this forecast to have been more than safely conservative, because the actual building construction, not including public works and utilities, was evidently only about 6 per cent less than in 1926. The difference between forecast and fact was therefore on the safe side and this fact is pointed out in view of the peculiar difficulties of establishing our forecast for the year 1928, which is here presented.

In attempting to establish this forecast of building activity for the year 1928, we face an unusual and paradoxical condition. On one hand we hear many casually or even thoughtfully expressed opinions indicating that there will be less building activity in 1928 than in several past years. On the other hand, The Forum's survey, on which this forecast is based, has been carried out in exactly the same manner used for the last seven years. Here we have actual evidence of work on architect's boards or seriously contemplated for the year 1928—a volume of work which is testified to by 1,793 individual confidential reports from architects.

These figures indicate that building will continue in 1928 at least in the same volume if not reaching even greater totals than 1927.

The forecast figures presented in the accompanying tabulation have been developed by applying a series of weighting factors to the allocated totals of direct reports received from architects. This calculating operation has been carried out in exactly the same manner used each year in establishing The Forum forecast. In view of the fact that there has been no deviation in this system and that it has produced successful results for six consecutive years, it would seem obvious that no drastic change in its operation could be expected this year unless some unusual series of business conditions developed suddenly to change the entire economic balance of the country.

If we seek further to analyze this apparently paradoxical situation (wherein many are predicting a sharp falling off of building in the year 1928, although most forecasts are to the contrary), we seem to discover controlling factors of an unusual nature, which, after all, may offer a simple explanation.

It is to be noted that those who are making casual predictions anticipating a considerable decrease in the building volume are located in large centers where there is perhaps an over-built situation which would color opinions. Probably, too, the idea of decreased activity in the building field is a natural reaction of the human mind which refuses to believe that good conditions can last so long. This conjecture is substantiated by the fact that most of those who are pessimistic about building activity are also pessimistic about national prosperity. Of course, if general business conditions become adversely affected and of all kinds, builders must meet a demand which has grown amazingly in respect to the factors of quality and efficiency.

We predict, therefore, that the building activity of the year 1928 will approximately equal that of 1927 and that over the next few years there will be no general collapse of the situation, but rather a gradual return to a new normal much higher than that established in any previous decade.

Of course, there will be changes in the totals of various types of building which go to make up this volume of building. An examination of the tabulations published above will serve to give some idea of the 1928 requirements for new construction as compared with those of a year ago. This expression is in both instances the result of similar methods used by the Architectural Forum for obtaining such information. Consequently, the percentages given should constitute a fairly accurate gauge of national requirements for various types of buildings and those of the geographical divisions presented in the tabulation.

The National percentages indicated for 1928 show greater activity in the construction of automotive buildings, residential buildings of all kinds, public buildings and welfare buildings. There is evidently to be a decrease in the amount of bank building, club and fraternal buildings, community buildings, churches and office buildings. Hotels and apartment hotels are evidently to develop approximately the same volume. School building will be approximately the same, while the demand for theatres shows a slight falling off.

Examining comparative conditions of demand for new buildings in the different geographical sections of the country as presented in these tabulations, we find the more striking changes to include a developed demand for automotive buildings in the Northeastern states, with a considerable increase in the North Atlantic and Southwestern states. We find the requirements for bank buildings falling off everywhere except in the Southwestern states. The figures for apartment buildings indicate a sharp drop in requirements in the North-

Apartment hotels show a sharp falling off in the North Atlantic states, but double the requirements of last year in the Middle states. While the demand for apartment buildings has fallen off sharply in the Northeastern states, the requirements for individual dwellings of all types have increased materially, particularly for dwellings under $20,000.

In the hotel field the Northeastern and North Atlantic states indicate an increased demand in spite of the great activity which has taken place in this section of the country. There is an increased demand in the Northwestern states for new hotels, but a sharp falling off in the Western states. The total indicates exactly the same percentages for 1928 as shown in 1927, which is somewhat unexpected, as the hotel industry has not been looking forward to as much building activity in 1928 as in 1927. Of course, it may be that economic conditions in the hotel field will prevent the carrying out of a number of projected operations, but on the other hand, there will unquestionably be the greatest volume of remodeling ever known to this particular industry.

Other interesting comparisons will be found in studying the figures shown for the various types of buildings. For instance, the Southeastern states indicate a greatly increased demand for school buildings, while in the Northeastern and Middle states there has evidently been a falling off of requirements for educational structures.

It is predicted that building activity during the year 1928 will carry along in a much stronger manner than has been generally anticipated and that any decrease in volume which might be the result of lessened activities on the part of speculative builders will in turn be offset by a number of large investment and institutional projects which have been held in abeyance during 1926 and 1927.

On page 55 there will be found a list of theatre projects for 1928.

What It Means

UNDoubtedly you have read thoroughly the building prospectus for 1928, which is published on foregoing pages. If you have only perused it you should turn back and read it again so that you may grasp the significance of its contents.

To the entire motion picture business this prospectus is encouraging. It is a note of optimism, not only to the manufacturer and distributor of theatre equipment, to the builder and to others who are interested in new projects, but also to the exhibitor.

Expenditures of billions of dollars during 1928 for new buildings and for the remodeling of old means that hundreds of thousands of men and women will be kept employed who might otherwise face months of darkened shops. This means prosperity for these people, and through their prosperity business in general flourishes.

The motion picture industry, in order that it may prosper, needs the support of the public, and this public must prosper.

Efficient Management

UNDER that title, Schine Enterprises of New York, publishes an admonition which is worthy of republication in these columns for it presents concisely the "Ten Commandments" of theatre operation and administration. To employers we would say: Clip this and present a copy of it to each of your employes. The Schine "Ten Commandments" follow:

1. MARQUEE—See that your marquee is fully lighted and properly decorated at all times. At no time permit a dead lamp on your marquee.
2. LOBBY—See that the lobby is clean and presentable at all times, for your lobby is one of the most noticeable parts of the theatre and is like a window to a store.
3. SEATS—At all times seats should be kept in repair, because a broken seat may cause commotion and unnecessary disturbance and always leaves with the patron an unfavorable impression of the theatre.

4. PROJECTION—Watch your projection very closely. Be careful that the proper focus is there and particularly watch for dark corners on the picture. See that the lenses are clean. If you cannot get good projection advise this office immediately, and if necessary we shall install new equipment.

5. VENTILATION—Be careful of your ventilating system. From October 1st until April 1st keep steady heat, but watch it carefully and also watch stuffiness. Nothing is so annoying as to sit in a theatre in a stuffy atmosphere. Neither should there be a draught or a too cool atmosphere. Watch that.
6. MANAGER'S PLACE—Remember that the Manager's place is not in the office, but on the main floor of the theatre when the show is on. Managers should not have to spend more than two hours a day in the office, and those two hours should be in the morning. The patron is always impressed by the presence of the manager on the floor, and it is your duty to your theatre to create a favorable impression on your patrons.
7. ADVERTISING—Plan all advertising matter and publicity very carefully and work with some definite objective in mind. Use as little space as you can. Remember, "sell" your words, because you have to put a "Big Kick" in newspaper advertising, and words cost money.
8. MUSIC—Check your music. Keep piano and organ in tune and see that all music conforms to the picture.
9. THEATRE ATTACHES—Be particularly careful about the appearance of attaches of your theatre—ushers, porters, etc., and see that not only are they neat and clean at all times, but polite as well.
10. CASHIER—The cashier must at all times be exact and polite, but should not overdo it. Cashier's door at all times must be kept closed tight.

There is a world of common sense in the foregoing. Capitalize on it.

Thumbs Down on Costly Litigation

¶ Familiarity with the outcome of recent court decisions is one way of minimizing your chances of financial loss from legal involvements. Know your contracts, leases, etc., to eliminate controversies.

¶ In this second of a series of articles, Attorney Parker deals with court decisions on questions of vital importance to the building owner, the exhibitor and other factors having to do with theatre operation.

Knowledge of Law Reduces Controversies Among Theatre Owners

By LEO T. PARKER
Attorney, Cincinnati, Ohio

THE proprietors of theatres are confronted daily with the chances of expensive litigations and adverse verdicts involving many kinds of controversies, such as contracts, leases, and injuries to employes, patrons, and other persons.

One dependable way of minimizing your chances of financial loss from this source is to become familiar with the outcome of the most recent higher court decisions involving persons in your field. By this method you will be able to eliminate many causes of litigations.

Several important opinions of special interest to theatre owners have been handed down by the higher court during the past few weeks, a digest of which I have prepared with the object in view of imparting valuable information in simplified form, and with numerous court citations which should prove especially valuable for future reference.

Simplify Your Lease Contracts

Every person who rents a building for the purpose of conducting a theatre, signs a lease contract. Moreover, the legal construction of a lease often results in many thousands of dollars in profit or loss.

The outcome of the recent case of Dallas Opera House Association vs. Dallas Enterprises, 288 S. W. 656, is important to theatre owners for the reason that the higher court had occasion to interpret the legal meaning of a clause commonly inserted in theatre lease contracts as follows:

"Said lessee (theatre owner) shall, in case of fire, give immediate notice to the lessor (building owner), who, out of the proceeds of the insurance provided or paid for as aforesaid by the lessee (theatre owner) shall cause the damage to be repaired forthwith, provided the lessor shall deem such proceeds sufficient for such repair. If the lessor (building owner) shall deem such proceeds insufficient for such repair, the lessor (building owner) shall notify the lessee (theatre owner) in writing to that effect, and thereupon the lessee shall have the right within 15 days from the receipt of such notice, but not thereafter, to deliver to the lessor (building owner) a contract in writing whereby the lessee (theatre owner) shall undertake to repair such damage properly, and to complete the same free from lien, liability, or expense of any kind to the lessor, and to indemnify the lessor against any lien, liability, or expense, for the proceeds of such insurance which shall be paid to lessee, provided, however, the lessee shall at the same time or within five days thereafter, and not afterwards, furnish to the lessor bond, or other security, satisfactory to the lessor, for the complete fulfillment of said contract; otherwise, this lease shall terminate.

The rent shall not abate, in whole or in part, in case of fire, unless and until the lease is terminated as aforesaid."

In other words, it was agreed between the theatre proprietor and the owner of the building that in the event the building was destroyed by fire the latter had the privilege of reconstructing the building if the proceeds from the insurance was sufficient to cover the cost. And if the amount of the insurance money was not sufficient to pay the total expense of the reconstruction of the building, the theatre operator was privileged to make the necessary repairs and take in full payment the money from the insurance.

To guarantee fulfillment of the terms of the lease, contract, the theatre owner deposited in a bank $20,000 in Liberty bonds.

The lease contract covered what was once known as the Dallas Opera House, and more recently known as the Capitol theatre. It began June 1, 1921, and was for a term of five years, ending May 31, 1926, and provided for monthly rent of $2,250, or an aggregate rent during the five years of $135,000 besides taxes and premium on as much as $50,000 of fire insurance, which the theatre owner was also to pay. The building was insured for $77,500 at the time of the fire. The occurrence of a fire on December 27, 1921, completely destroyed the building on the leased property. The theatre owner notified the building owner of the fire on the following day. The owner of the building proceeded to obtain bids from contractors of the expense of reconstructing the building, and had some difficulty in collecting the insurance. In the meantime, on January 1, the theatre owner paid the monthly rental of $2,250, and taxes of $3,000. When February 1 rent became due the theatre owner, not having received response from the building owner, refused to pay the rent on the contention that the owner of the building had breached the contract by failing to give information whether the insurance money was sufficient to reconstruct the building. Then the theatre owner instituted legal proceedings to obtain possession of the $20,000 in Liberty bonds, on the grounds that the building owner had breached the lease contract. The owner of the building contended that he should receive the $20,000 because of the theatre owner's failure to pay the rent on February 1, since the former was doing everything within his power to obtain information from contractors of the reconstruction cost.

After having interpreted the contract, the court concluded that the following was the important issue to be submitted to the jury:

"Was February 1, 1922, a reasonable time for the owner of the building to elect whether or not he would repair the damage occurring by fire on December 27, 1921?"

The court held the theatre owner entitled to recover the $20,000 and that the owner of the building was not liable in damages, because from December 27 to February 1, was deemed a reasonable period for the theatre owner to determine that he would not reconstruct the building without cost to the theatre owner. This court said:

"The contract only obligated appellant (building owner) to repair out of the insurance, if it deemed the insurance sufficient. The estimated cost of repairing, furnished by contractors, was $84,543.96. The total insurance on the premises was only $77,500. It may be true that in some instances the question of what is a reasonable time for the performance of an act becomes one of law and for the court to determine; but we are clear

Simplex Among Installations at Liberty in Ohio

[Editor's Note: Caldwell H. Brown, general manager of the Brown Theatrical Company of Zanesville, O., sends the following valuable information relative to the modern installations in the company's new Liberty theatre. This information arrived too late for inclusion in the last issue of "Better Theatres."]

"For your further information beg to advise that we are using an ordinary system of ventilation in this house giving us a complete change of air every four minutes and that we have not installed a refrigerating system. I am a little afraid of the merits of the latter system, as I understand that many exhibitors have complaints from their women patrons during the summer months. We have made arrangements for a refrigerating system and are going to wait until the hot months before making up our minds definitely. Our booth is equipped with Simplex machines, two spotlights, one flood light, and one stereopticon. We also have a complete Vitaphone installation. The electrical equipment is operated by two large Westinghouse converters and is very complete in every detail. Our stage is equipped with the latest methods of stage lighting and we are using 200 watt lamps in borders and foots. It also has a complete equipment of bunch lights, spotlights, and other electrical equipment. The counter-weight system is used entirely and the pin-rail is on the floor."

Making Ushering Painless to Patron

Francis M. Falge diagnoses theatre lighting for manufacturers, managers and salesmen who have been in attendance at the national convention of

National Theatre Supply Company

Each Lamp
Has Definite Place,
Says Falge

LET your theatre lights draw the crowds and then usher them painlessly to their seats, Francis M. Falge of the engineering department of the National Lamp Works, told salesmen of the National Theatre Supply Company Thursday, at their national convention in Chicago. Falge, for all his apparent youth, "knows his lamps" and it would have profited any exhibitor to have heard his comments on proper and improper lighting.

Starting with the marquee, Falge figuratively took the salesmen right up to the stage, explaining how each kind of lamp and fixture has its definite place, and in conclusion he drew up a résumé of his address by means of slides.

Blue tinted lamps are best under the marquee, the speaker advised, as they give the impression of coolness. At the same time there should be intensity of light, and the marquee should be painted white, preferably a shiny white, so that it will pick up the light and reflect it.

It is also much better, he counseled, to use a number of small lamps rather than a few large ones, because the light from the latter leaves a dull effect when it hits the sidewalk.

"There should be a gradual reduction of intensity from marquee to auditorium in order to avoid a jolt to the eyes of the patron," he said. "This intensity should be slightly reduced when you go into the foyer. The rest rooms should give the effect of restfulness by the type of light used. In the auditorium the intensity should be lower but there of course should be enough light to permit the patrons to see their seats. As a matter of fact, even during the showing of the picture, light of small intensity is not objectionable unless it hits the screen, and the farther you are from the screen the higher the intensity that can be used."

Going into the lobby from the outside a fixture system is considered advisable, particularly candle fixtures spray coated. Crystal fixtures, he said, usually are better if natural white light is used.

From the foyer on in it's best to have shaded light, the salesmen were told. In the rest rooms desk lamps were advocated because of the restfulness they inspire. The speaker emphasized two details where, he said, the theatre owner often fails to produce the best that the theatre merits. There should be at EDUCATING of equipment salesmen in all phases that will enable them to handle every angle of promoting better theatres was stressed in addresses and demonstrations at the first annual sales meeting of branch managers and salesmen of the National Theatre Supply Company, which opened in Chicago January 11 and was continued until Thursday, January 19. The Stevens hotel was convention headquarters but the first two days' sessions were conducted at the Eighth Street theatre.

The convention was divided into two parts, the first half for salesmen, the second for branch managers, who swung into action Monday. Saturday, January 14, was Company Day for the salesmen, while the branch managers were to have their Company Day Thursday, January 19.

Demonstration of the Orchestraphone was one of the outstanding features of the opening day, following an introductory address by H. A. R. Dutton, president of National Theatre Supply. T. R. Cloud and Dr. F. R. Moulton spoke on the Orchestraphone.

Among the speakers in the first half of the convention were the following:

John Hertner, Hertner Electric Company, Cleveland; L. M. Woolman, Forest Electric Company, Newark; Albert Kindlemann, International Projector Corporation, New York; former Senator J. R. Clancy of J. R. Clancy, Inc., Syracuse; Irving Samuels, Automatic Ticket Devices Company, Allentown, Pa.; E. J. Vallen, Vallen Electric Company, Akron; Francis M. Falge and W. C. Brown, engineers, of the National Lamp Works, Nela Park, Cleveland; Alfred Kilgen of Geo. Kilgen & Son, Inc., St. Louis, and Max Hess, superintendent; I. L. Nixon, Bausch & Lomb, Rochester; F. G. Diffin, president of the Longsign Corporation, Dayton, and a number of other manufacturers.

Thursday, January 12, was devoted to stage and lighting and brought out some interesting facts to the trade at large. Irving Samuels declared that curtain control had more than quadrupled in four years. E. J. Vallen told the delegates: "You're not salesmen; you're engineers." Vallen also urged that the salesmen work with the architects whenever possible so as to save the exhibitor the cost of remodeling for installations. M. J. Mulroy of the Midland Lamp Division of least two lights for mirrors, one on each side. Paintings, too, should be well lighted, he said, adding that "it is obviously wrong for the theatre owner to spend a lot of money on beautiful paintings and then not make the trifling investment necessary in order to make it possible for patrons to see them."

There is too much tendency toward glare in the auditorium, Falge declared, and there is where glare is the most harmful, both to the patron and to the picture. Very bright wall brackets hurt the eyes, he warned. Wall brackets should not be used basically to light the theatres; instead, they should be heavily shaded and even enclosed. Diffused lighting should be used in them, he added. In general, lamps in the auditorium should be coated.

Faulty lighting of the music stands in the pit is another source of glare, Falge continued. There should be diffused light, coming from several sources.

In cove lighting there should be three circuits, red, blue and amber, or something akin to the latter in color.

In connection with cove lighting, Falge brought out the same fact which was emphasized by other speakers of the session. Even more important than the kind of lamp used in the cove style is the necessity for proper designing in order to avoid spottiness. The theatre owner and his architect must have expert advice, to which the lamp salesman can contribute, in laying out the theatre in order to give the best lighting at the lowest cost. For example, it is wasteful, the speaker said, to dim the fixtures in the auditorium. More economical is the use of a second system of lesser wattage, when less light is desired.

BETTER PROJECTION

By F. H. RICHARDSON

New Wagon But the Same Old Horse

Well, men, how do you like the new wagon? Looks pretty spiffy what? Same old horse, though, and feeling just as cocky as ever. Too bad the change didn't wait until February, because then our department would have rounded out a full 18 years in the Moving Picture World.

However, I guess we did pretty well and anyhow I'll be able to reach a whole lot more readers whom I hope to be able to afford at least some help.

Remember this, though! In the MOVING PICTURE WORLD this was YOUR department. I was merely its editor. In the HERALD-WORLD this still is YOUR department. I still am merely its editor. I ask for the department the same loyalty you have shown it through all the years, and cordially welcome to its columns all the new readers.

As to Adjustable Tension

Frank Dudiak, Fairmont, W. Va., says he doesn't understand why all projectors don't have an adjustable tension at the aperture.

The reason is simple. Some manufacturers believe a greater amount of damage is done by careless or incompetent projectionists using an adjustable tension to steady an unsteady screen image by causing it to hold the slack out of a wrongly adjusted or badly worn intermittent movement, than is caused by the leaving off of the adjustable feature entirely.

That was Mister Edwin Porter's belief, and he and I have "gone to the mat" on the subject many times. There is a certain amount of justice in such a view, however, but just the same I don't believe in trying to remedy one fault with another, and most emphatically, since the projector manufacturer cannot possibly know to what maximum speed of projection any projector will be subjected, the tension must be set at the factory, so it be unadjustable, for the highest projection speed that is used anywhere.

That is the reason, friend Dudiak, and that is the argument. Personally, I believe in a thoroughly accessible aperture tension, and too much cannot be said in condemnation of careless or slovenly projectionists who abuse it, and in abusing it outrage the films.

Wants Speed Controllers

A correspondent in Kansas, who operates the Gem theatre, or I suppose he does as he signs himself L. J. Gerard, operator, Gem theatre, wants to know where he can get an Elbert, a Preddy, or any other good type of speed controller suitable for use on a Powers 6-B projector.

I have sent this friend Mister Preddy's address, but I am not sure he or any one else now makes speed controllers for projectors. All professional projectors have had controllers as a regular part of their standard equipment for so long a time that there is, in the very nature of things, little if any call for them.

The Gem got the controller idea from the

In explanation to our new readers, the "Bluebook School" is primarily designed to enable owners of the Bluebook of Projection (Richardson's Handbook) to use the books more intelligently, though those who do not own them should also receive great benefit. The questions are printed and the best answer appears a few weeks later. Any reader of the WORLD-HERALD is welcome to submit answers to the questions.

And now we are off for what I hope and believe will be a long, long ride in this new conveyance. Maybe you'll all have to get out and push on some of the steep hills (nuts too hard for the editor to crack without your help) but even so it'll be a lot of fun.

All aboard-r-r-rd! All set! We're off!

We Welcome Him

It is needless to introduce Mr. Richardson to readers of "Better Theatres." However, the editor of this section of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" wishes to take this opportunity of welcoming the former World staff writer to the staff of "Better Theatres."

Handbook, and it must have a very old one, for as far as I can remember I've not included them in the books for nearly 10 years. The Gem will do well to get a new Bluebook and new projectors. The money spent will be well expended, believe you me.

A New Theatre in Taunton

Our old friend, Francis H. Moore, who answered Bluebook School questions for a long while under the nom de plume, "Dinty Moore," informs us that the new Park theatre, Taunton, Mass., opened its doors November 23, with projection conditions as follows: Projection distance 129 feet, with a picture 17 feet 2 inches by 12 feet 11 inches, using a Dalite screen. There are three Simplex projectors equipped with Peerless reflector lamps in which Brother Moore is using 12mm positive and 8mm negative electrodes. The lens is a "Ross," 7.25 E. F. Moore is using 20 amperes from a 1-30-60 ampere Transverter. There is a 1-F 3 Brinkert effect projector and a 1-C 14 Brinkert spot-flood lamp. Effect projector uses 30 amperes and the spot-flood 50, from a 6-120 ampere Transverter.

The projection room is 35 feet deep by 20 wide by 14 high. Projection is in charge of Francis H. Moore. Robert F. Potter, chief electrician. Installation by the National Theatre Supply Company of Boston. The new theatre seats 1,700 and has full stage equipment for road attractions.

Good luck to the Park theatre and its projection staff. I am sure Brother Moore will handle the excellent equipment efficiently, and will be a real friend to the box office by putting the productions before its clientele at its highest possible value in amusement and dramatic interest.

I would suggest that he do some very careful experimenting in reducing carbon diameters and amperage. As a general proposition it is pretty certain that nearly all projectionists using reflector type lamps are using too high amperage with too large carbons. One high grade man I know is getting excellent results with 12 amperes and a 9mm and 6.4mm carbon combination. Reduced amperage means reduced heat, which of course is in every way good, provided the screen illumination does not suffer.

Public Recognition for Projectionist

The following is clipped from the Boston Post, one of the great dailies of that city. May I direct your attention to the fact that this is exactly and precisely the thing I have been preaching and teaching for years past and is couched in almost exactly the words I have used before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and in this department many times. Such public recognition means far more than is at present realized by the industry. Once the projectionist finds his work is being publicly recognized, you will find many of the projection faults which now mar production presentations in many theatres will disappear. Men will perform a certain routine duty for a wage, but for public recognition and possibly a bit of personal commendation occasionally, they will not only still perform the paid-for duty, but will add to it very real effort to excel. That is just plain human nature. It works that way from the digger of ditches clear up to the president.

The Post says:

PRaising THE PROJECTIONIST

By Bebe Daniels

After all, a corking or even stupendous performance by an actor has little chance to please the public if it is thrown on the screen in broken, distorted, blurred pieces. The mechanic at the machine can make the artist, or break him.

Correspondence for F. H. Richardson, editor of this department, should be addressed to South Lyme, Conn., Box 100.

I believe we have not in the past given these men the attention they deserve. The importance of their work has not been sufficiently recognized, and I am of the opinion that this fact is responsible, at least in large degree, for the failure to place productions on the screens of all theatres in such manner that they will have a full 100 per cent of their amusement and dramatic value. I say this because I know that few men will strive very hard to attain high-grade excellence unless the importance of excellence in their work is publicly recognized.

Filmite Excellent

Almost before the ink was dry on the Moving Picture World containing the Filmite advertisements, two inquiries reached me asking whether or no it was all right. Others came in a bit later. I have had it given a practical test by three projectionists upon whose judgment I can rely, and all the reports have been good.

Tom McDermott, projectionist, Rio theatre, Broadway, makes the following written report: "Dear Richardson: I have tested Filmite and think you will be perfectly safe in recommending it. It dries very rapidly, making necessary the resaturation of the cloth every 500 feet or so, but on the whole the results are good, and as perfect as may be hoped for by one not possessed of elaborate film renovating machinery."

When I called at the Rio for the report Brother McDermott was off duty. The man on duty, an able projectionist whose name I unfortunately am unable to recall just now, said: "The film now being projected was covered with dirt and oil. We used Filmite on

Thanks— and Then Some

It would be almost an impossibility to personally answer all the Christmas card greetings my mail has contained, but I want you all to know that I appreciate them more than words can express, because I know each one carries with it kindly wishes and your friendship.

There have been other "remembrances," and of course I feel keenly your kindness in sending them, but really, boys, I'd rather you did not. A card is nice and costs little. I'd really rather have that than something more costly, though I'll say the apple I've a face full of right now, from the box from a projectionist friend in Columbus, O., is darned good.

Well, anyhow I feel real pepped up that such an astonishing number of you have remembered the "Old Man," and I want you to know your thoughtfulness is deeply appreciated. May the year to come bring to you all your very fondest wish and much of that greatest of all human blessings, happiness.

it and you can see the result for yourself. It removed all the oil and dirt, and that without any tendency to curl the film or affect it in any injurious way. You will be quite safe in recommending it to the boys."

That was, in effect, what they all said, and on the strength of it I do recommend that you give Filmite a thorough tryout. Managers of theatres using old, dirty film will undoubtedly find its relatively small cost brought back to the box office many times over by the improved screen results.

Try to Catch It by Sprinting

Hey, chaps, did you ever have the idea that 50 feet of added projection distance makes a lot of difference in the amount of light necessary, picture size and other things remaining the same? Did ya, huh? Well, just listen to this.

Men of astronomical science tell us that light from the stars, and not nearly the most distant ones visible from this astronomical marble we call the earth, travels 200 light years through space to reach our earth.

Now a "light year" is the distance equal to the distance light will travel in one year and it ambles along, as you know, at a mere 186,000 miles per second, which figures out, if I've made no mistake, as seven trillion, 325 billion and 696 millions (7,235,696,000,000) of miles, which is more distance that you really need to walk before breakfast in order to work up an appetite, don't y' think?

But wait a minute. In order to get the low down on this "200 light year" journey, we must multiply that by 200, which gives us a total of one quadrillion, 465 trillions, 139 billions and 200 millions (1,465,139,200,000,000) miles. And they say the darned thing ain't very tired even after all that and if it did not strike the earth or something else, would proceed right along on its way for a septillion or maybe even a decillion (1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000) additional miles further. And you get yourself all het up about 50 feet additional. Don't make poor ole me laugh.

By the way, however, I'll bet you didn't even know there was any such number, but there is. If y' don't think so look in your Webster unabridged. The highest number I know of is a quattodecillion, which would add six more ciphers to the above string.

Why Buy Unknown Equipment

Edmund M. Burke, projectionist, Fort Plain, N. Y., has two reflector arc lamps made in Columbus, O., which he says have given satisfaction. Wants me to get in touch with the maker, examine the lamps and tell him what I think of them. He says: "I am an owner of the Bluebook of Projection, from which I receive great help. I study it. I want to say right here that we projectionists of the U.S.A.—that is to say the great majority of the professional men in our craft—are mighty proud of you, and we all stand by you for better projection, first, last and always."

That's the right spirit. "Better Projection Pays," the slogan inaugurated by my good friend P. A. McGuire is true as truth, and I'm glad when some one writes as brother Burke does. Our (yours and mine) big job is to "sell" the fact that it pays to the exhibitor. I have always felt that the worth while men of the profession are with me in the fight for improvement, but it is nice to be told so once in a while.

As to the lamp, I don't find the manufacturer listed in any of the directories of lamp makers. Anyhow, it is extremely unlikely that he would not have made himself known to us if he really felt that he had a lamp superior to those we have repeatedly told you about. In my opinion theatre managers make a serious error when they buy unknown equipment. Thousands have done so in the past, only to find that in a short while the manufacture of the thing they bought was discontinued, and they could not even get repair parts. They were "stuck" in every sense of the word. We tell you only of high grade, reliable equipment, which we have every reason to suppose will "stay put," and give you continuously good service. Stick to the tried, established manufacturers and their

From New Hampshire

From New Hampshire comes this query: "Am using a 70 V, 50 ampere motor generator set which gives me, by test, 50 to 55 amperes at the arc. Also have a 75 ampere A. C. line, connecting to either projector lamp. The question is is it best to 'steal' the current from one arc to the other at change-over, or start the idle arc with A. C. and change to D. C. at change-over, which may be done by throwing the D. P. D. T. switch? Either way I must build up the arc again."

Stealing the arc is unreliable. It is almost impossible to do it without an evidence of the act on the screen. Starting the arc on A. C. is almost equally bad, though if you could use say 90 amperes you would get a very good crater, and the change-over would be pretty good. However, 90 amperes D. C. at the arc would be noisy and objectionable in several ways. What you need is reflector arcs. It would pay your employer to install them. True your motor generator set then would be too large and would not work at high efficiency, but the general screen results would, I think, be measurably better and instead of 50 amperes you should not use more than 15. With 15 amperes you can get a consistently better result on the screen than with 50 using a straight arc at 50 amperes, provided you carefully match your carbon size to the current flow.

The only other remedy is an M G set of greater capacity. Sorry, but that's the situation. The saving in electric energy would in time be sufficient to repay the cost of the reflector arcs, so your employer would do well to give their installation very serious consideration. However, you won't save so much if you do as so many others do and crowd on 25 to 30 amperes to get a result which a more capable, careful man can duplicate with 15 or even less.

Bluebooks Help

Billy Van, Minneapolis, Minn., orders a Bluebook and remarks: "Have enjoyed your books and articles since 1912. Owe my success as a projectionist in large measure to your books. Am much interested in effects in connection with the various subjects placed on the screen. Couldn't you describe some of the effects in the department, for example, how Roxie puts over a picture?"

That is my greatest pleasure with regard to my books—that they have helped many men. Believe it or not, that fact by far transcends the relatively small amount of money I have made through them. The money has not and never will nearly pay for the literally enormous amount of labor incident to their building up.

As to the manner in which Roxie puts over a show, I don't think it belongs in this department because in the Roxie one must view the tout ensemble—the thing as a whole—and aside from the projection it is pretty nearly perfect.

Recently I visited the Roxie, paying my way in that I might view the show from the theatre patron angle, with right to criticize that which I had bought and paid for. The show was a wonder, as a whole, but there were projection faults, due, I think, to lenses, at least in part.

Roxie is a wonderful man. He has done much for the motion picture in pointing the way to presentations of marvelous beauty. No living man is, however, big enough to have full grasp of all the details of so intricate a business as Roxie has been and is attending to, including as it does, much time given to radio. It just plain can't be done.

Information Desired

I receive a great many requests for information concerning problems projectionists encounter when working with reflector arcs and complete data still is not available. This I blame myself for, because I have not asked for it and there is no practical method of securing it except through careful measurements by a large number of men who have different working conditions.

Here is what I want and if you supply it it will enable me to give aid to a great many men; also its publication will supply you with valuable data. (A) Kind of equipment—Powerlite, Peerless, etc. (B) Diameter of reflector. (C) Distance floor of crater to center of reflector. (D) Diameter of spot at cooling plate. (E) Working distance of projection lens—exact distance film to first surface of lens. Distance center of mirror to projector aperture. (F) Diameter of light beam where it enters lens. (G) Diameter of light beam as it emerges from lens and at one, two, three and six inches from front of lens. (H) Projection distance and width of picture upon the screen.

IMPORTANT: This data, to be really useful must come from men having different working conditions, therefore from many men; also the measurements must be exact. In order to enable me to make a complete checkup and give you the real dope, there should be several hundred reports, so don't think it is not worth while for you to answer. Very possibly yours is the very one I will need to make the thing complete.

Probably Roxie can come as nearly doing it as any living man, but even he cannot accomplish so titan a task fully and in projection matters he has evidently depended too fully upon those who have not thoroughly understood the problems involved.

Mark you well, this is not a harsh criticism, or any criticism at all, but only the pointing out of an error, and we are all liable to errors. Neither kings, queens nor master minds are free from error and we forgive those Roxie has made for the sake of the wonderful man himself. We regret their marring effect, though, and wish they had been avoided, as they might have been had Roxie had less to attend to or better advice.

I am sure my friend Roxie will accept this in the kindly way it is intended and would suggest to our managing editor the possible advisability of devoting one page say every other week to a description of Roxie's method, in complete detail, with different productions.

As to Reel Tension

A Kansas projectionist has made certain changes in his upper magazine tension—tension to hold the upper reel in retard—because, as he puts it, "This is one of a theatre chain and they expect a fellow to cut down expenses."

"Cutting down expenses" is all very well, but just the same, any theatre chain or otherwise, should be both willing and able to supply whatever is necessary, and not require the patching up of their projectors with makeshifts. It is a literal fact that in a very large majority of theatres a decided loss is incurred by this "cutting down expenses" in the projection room. By that I mean that were more money expended in the projection room there would be more and often very much more satisfactory results at friend box office, and I don't mean maybe, either! I am of the opinion that "cheese paring" in projection room expenses is costing theatre box office in this country and Canada, taken as a whole, at the very least 10 times the amount of the "saving" thus effected, and I'm not at all certain that it is not very much higher than that.

This brother, who unquestionably has meant well and only done what was (wrongly) expected of him, says that while 1,000 foot reels work all right, the 2,000 ones jerk heavily toward the end of the reel. He wants to know just what the upper reel tension should be, measured in ounces.

I don't know! It must be greater for high than for low speed projection. The reason your large diameter reel jerks, while the 10 incher don't, is that the large one, has greater momentum, and toward the end of the reel revolves at high speed. Use sufficient tension, regardless of how much is required, to hold the reel in retard at all times and under all conditions, but no more. That is the only reliable rule. If the reel at any time "runs ahead" leaving the slack film, then the tension is not sufficient. Experiment until you have just enough tension to avoid slack film in the upper magazine, and no more.

The brother also says that when Mazda is installed the manufacturer recommends filing the gate to admit more light. Wants to know about it.

I don't know just what has been recommended in this line, but it most certainly does not mean to file aperture plate opening. Probably means file the cooling plate, which would really operate to admit more light where the condenser is close to the film. I would neither condemn nor recommend this, but if it is done the filing should only be sufficient to bring the cooling plate opening large enough that it will clear a thread stretched from edge of free opening of condenser to aperture at their respective top, bottom and sides. If this really is necessary, however, it should be taken care of by the projector manufacturer providing a special cooling plate for use with Mazda.

Foolishness DeLuxe

From a Georgia projectionist comes a letter setting forth the fact that himself and his assistant projectionist have resigned from their positions because a new management posted certain instructions for "Operators" and, without advance notice, made a 10 per cent reduction in salary of the projectionists. The "instructions" posted read:

Operators

No. 1—Daily inspection to be made of all ventilation and cooling equipment—this to include oiling.

No. 2—All lights to be inspected daily, and it is the duty of the operator to make replacements of lights as necessary.

No. 3—Equipment in projection room equipment must be maintained in A-1 condition and repairs made promptly.

No. 4—Optical system of projectors must be cleaned daily.

No. 5—It is the duty of the operator to see that all windows are closed and the ventilation system in operation fifteen minutes before starting the show.

No. 6—Operators must report to general office for special instructions at 10 o'clock each morning.

No. 7—These are positive instructions and must be strictly observed."

In this connection it might be well to observe that these "Operators" go off duty at 11 p. m. I do not know whether or no there is any off hours between or not. Presumably not.

This manager does well to dub his men "Operators," because he could not expect to get projectionists under such conditions. He might just exactly as well, and with just as much show of reason, right and justice expect the "operators" of or in his theatre to do the janitor work, post bills and keep the furnace, if any, going in winter.

What in the name of Heaven has a motion picture projectionist to do with the ventilation system, attending to auditorium light replacements, or opening or closing windows? Even machine operators might well be expected to balk at that. Only instruction Nos. 3 and 4 rightly affect the projectionist or "operator," except that No. 6 would be proper, were the hour what it should be. As to that I don't know. It would depend upon the time the show runs. Certainly no man can in decency be expected to report at the office or in the projection room at ten A. M. and work through until 11 p. m. or even to report at 10 a. m. and work until say 5 and then start again at six-thirty or even seven and work until 11. Such hours are, in this day and age, entirely unreasonable.

I venture the assertion that this manager will find, in the end, that he has made a serious error in attempting to force such conditions, and to reduce wages when the requirement is better, more high grade work. Reduced wages to projectionists is a step backward, because it makes for retrogression in ambition and ability, and the opposite is what is needed.

Why the Syncrovertor is a Better Method of Rectification

The Liberty Syncrovertor is a synchronous rectifier. It represents a new and more efficient means of converting alternating current to direct current, simply and economically.

The no-load requirements of the Syncrovertor are very low, less than 100 watts, as the only power required is to turn the commutator, the actual rectification being done at the commutator, not within the motor.

The watt input is 25% less for equal amperage at the lamp than on any motor generator. This means a saving of at least 25% in power costs.

The Syncrovertor is a single phase multiple machine. Where alternating current has been used by a theatre and the booth is wired for single phase, as is in most cases, the Syncrovertor can be installed without any change in wiring—a big saving in installation.

The Syncrovertor enables the projector to give a steady light on the screen and is designed to automatically furnish the additional current required by second arc, so that there is no flicker on changeover.

The transformer of the Syncrovertor, with the motor element idle, acts as a compensarc and will furnish current to the lamps. This feature dispenses with the necessity of the customary extra emergency unit.

in the view that under the acts and circumstances just related in this case the question of what was reasonable time within which appellant (building owner) was to determine whether it would repair the building was a question for the jury to pass upon. The rule is well established that ordinarily, what is a reasonable time within which an act should be done, like negligence, is a question for the jury."

Therefore, it is quite apparent that this expensive and long-drawn-out litigation may have been avoided and the theatre owner would have saved the $5,500 paid for rent and taxes during unoccupancy of the building if the lease contract had specified, for example, the following: "In the event the theatre building is damaged or destroyed by fire, or other elements, the lessor (building owner) agrees to notify the lessee (theatre owner) within fourteen (14) days from the occurrence of said fire, or other elements, whether said lessor (building owner) agrees to reconstruct said building without cost to the lessee (theatre owner). But it is further understood that if said lessor (building owner) will not reconstruct said building, then the lessee (theatre owner) may do so, using the insurance money for the purpose, and further the lessee (theatre owner) is not obligated to pay rent for said building during any period said building is damaged or destroyed to the extent that said lessee (theatre owner) is unable to use said building for the purpose of this lease, namely: to conduct a theatre."

Owners Must Keep Exterior of Premises Safe

In the recent case of Klepper vs. Seymour House Corporation of Ogdensburg, 158 N. E. 29, the owner of a building was held liable in $20,000 damages because he failed to provide means to prevent ice and snow from sliding from the roof of his building onto the street.

On January 15, 1923, a young woman 29 years of age, while walking with her two children on the sidewalk of State street, a public highway, in front of a building known as the Seymour House, a mass of ice and snow, weighing about 150 pounds, fell upon her from the roof inflicting serious and permanent injuries.

State street is one of the principal streets and highways in the city in which the accident occurred. The Seymour House has been there for many years in substantially the same condition as it was on the day of the accident. During the trial, the owner of the building contended that he was not liable, because the building had stood under the same condition for a long period and no person had been previously injured.

However, the court held the owner liable, and said:

"The owner was under the duty to maintain its building so that snow and ice would not accumulate upon the roof and fall off upon passers-by to their injury. . . . He has no right so to construct his building that it will inevitably, at certain seasons of the year, and with more or less frequency, subject his neighbor to that kind of inconvenience; and no other proof of negligence on his part is needed. . . . He must at his peril keep the ice or the snow that collect upon his roof, within his own limits; and is responsible for all damages, if the shape of his roof is such as to throw them upon his neighbor's land, in the same manner as he would be if he threw them there himself. It was negligence to maintain a building so near the street and so constructed that, in the ordinary course of things, snow or ice was liable to fall from the roof upon travelers on the adjoining highway."

Also, it was contended that the person who occupied the building was responsible, because the lease contained a clause that the renter was to maintain the interior of the premises in repair.

The court, however, held the renter not responsible, and quoted:

"The building was occupied by separate tenants, one of whom had some special facilities for getting upon the roof, but it does not appear that the place where the snow and ice accumulated was under the control of the tenants, or that they had anything to do with the outside of the roof. . . . The landlords were not excluded from going upon the roof, and so altering its construction that at all seasons of the year it should not produce any inconvenience or danger to travelers on the highway below."

On the other hand, it has been held that a theatre proprietor is liable in damages for injuries effected through failure to maintain the exterior of a leased building in safe condition, if the contract lease between the owner of the building and the theatre proprietor specifies that the latter agrees to keep the exterior of the building in good repair.

Therefore, theatre owners may reduce their chances of financial losses from this source by being sure that the landlord is obligated by the lease contract to maintain the exterior of the building in good repair and in safe condition.

The Use of Electric Signs

Another common source of litigation is where the lessee of property erects an electric sign on the leased building in violation of the common restrictive lease clause in which the lessor agrees to "not make structural alterations or additions to the property without written consent of the landlord."

This phase of the law was considered by the Supreme Court of New York, in the recent case of Lyon vs. Bethlehem Engineering Corporation, 223 N. Y. S. 506. The facts of the case are that the proprietor of Roxy's theatre obtained permission from the lessee of a nearby building to erect an electric advertising sign upon the roof of the building. This building was leased for purposes other than for the operation of a theatre.

The owners of the building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Fifty-first street, New York, sued to prevent the erection of a sign on the basis that the erection of the sign violated the provisions of the lease of the building which restricted the use of the building to restaurants, stores, storerooms, offices, showrooms, and salesrooms, and also prohibited structural alterations or additions to the property without the written consent of the landlord.

It is important to observe that the court in refusing to grant an order compelling the removal of the sign, in part, said:

"Defendants urge that the terms of the lease are at least ambiguous, and therefore are to be construed most favorably to the lessee, and in this connection they point to the fact that the use of the roofs of buildings in the theatrical section of the city for the maintenance of electric signs is not only common but practically universal. . . . The balance of the slight detriment, if any, to plaintiffs (building owner), which the operation of this sign during this period would cause against the greater harm likely to be worked the defendants, who have apparently erected the sign at a considerable cost, in the belief that they were within their legal rights, impels me to refuse the demand for temporary injunctive relief."

Moreover, the law is well established that the proprietor of a theatre is privileged to erect any kind of an advertising sign, not

Ad Mat Style Sheets Issued by Ad Mat Service

Making the Ad Writer's Job a Pleasure

A New Plan Which Simplifies the Preparation of Copy for Newspapers and Other Advertising Mediums

EVEN the best printer cannot always give you the border display that you believe most effective.

Border styles are constantly changing, and but few printers make it a policy to keep the so-called "trick" borders in stock.

A solution of this problem is announced by Theatre Ad Mat Service, Inc., of Uniontown, Pa., which is offering to exhibitors a comprehensive mat service, suitable for all sizes of ads and other layouts and for any picture which may be in the stage of promotion.

In producing his service, Ken Woodward, who is prominently known in advertising and exploitation circles, has devised a stock mat that is unusual and eye-catching.

Evidence of the growth of the popularity of the ad mat service, said Mr. Woodward, is the number of large circuits which have recently contracted for the service. Included in the prominent chains which have subscribed for the service are:

Poli Theatres, Hostettler Amusement Company, Great States Theatres, Wilmer & Vincent Theatres, Comerford Theatres, Harris Theatres, George Cohan, Fischer Paramount Theatres, Rembusch Theatres, Midwest Theatres, Inc., Earle Hall Payne, Mark-Strand Theatres, Elm Amusement Company, Kunsky House, World Realty Company, Walter Reade

F. N. Harris' new Amuse theatre at Hart, Mich., which is a model village theatre of the Middle West.

Theatres, Theatrical Utilities Corporation, Schine Enterprises, Variety Amusement, Inc., National Theatre Corporation, L. K. Brin, and several hundred individual exhibitors throughout the country.

Theatre Ad Mat Service, which maintains its general offices and studio at Uniontown, Pa., is the originator of the plan of supplying monthly to theatres a large variety of suitable borders, illustrations and slugs in a wide variety of sizes. All illustrations are furnished in mat form and give to the progressive theatre owner one of the constructive ideas in theatre promotion.

The February issue of the service is now out and contains nearly 200 advertising ads and novelty designs.

Staff of Theatre Managers School Announced in East

THREE men, widely known in theatre circles, were named this week as staff instructors of Moving Picture Theatre Managers Institute, 135 West 44th street, New York, which will train men and women in theatre management and operation. The first term of the Institute opened on January 16.

D. M. Baltimore has been selected as director of the Institute and will also act as instructor in theatre technic. He has had years of practical experience as theatre manager and owner, and has been active in the theatrical field since 1908. He was also vocational instructor at Delaware State College.

Mark Weisberg has been selected as instructor of theatre management and service. Mr. Weisberg comes to the Institute with an enviable record, backed with many years of practical experience in the theatre field. He was for several years connected with New England Theatres, Inc., also Olympic Theatres, Inc., both subsidiaries of the Publix chain. He also was managing director of the Oxford theatre, Bronx, N. Y., which position he resigned to become affiliated with the Institute.

As instructor of advertising, publicity and exploitation, J. Raymond LeStrange has been selected. Mr. LaStrange has been a prominent theatre and publicity and exploitation manager for several years. He is particularly well versed in publicity and exploitation, having had many years experience in all phases such as theatres, roadshows, acts and producers. He was also publicity director of Cosmopolitan Productions and has managed among others the Forest Hills theatre and Colonial theatre, a Bronx vaudeville house, and the Century theatre, New Britain, Conn.

More recently he was publicity manager of the American and Canadian Theatre Circuit.

In training its students the Institute will use, where possible, visual education. Motion pictures, slides, illustrations, drawings and sketches will be the medium used. The graphic method of representation will be resorted to wherever the subject will permit. In this matter the student is enabled to grasp subjects more readily.

The Institute occupies an entire floor especially designed for training men for the theatre. The classroom which is a miniature theatre, has all the refinements of a modern theatre. It is equipped with all of the latest equipment and mechanism as would be found in the theatre of today. It is in this main classroom where the student will do most of his practice in advertising, publicity, exploitation, service and administration.

Another interesting innovation will be the stage where the student studies and practices stage presentations. This stage is arranged with two proscenium openings, one facing the main classroom and the other, the laboratory. This enables students who specialize in stagecraft to use the stage without interfering with students studying management, in the main classroom.

The stage itself is arranged for the study and practice of stage setting, technics and curtain combinations. For the study of lighting effects the electrical connections are so arranged that any desired combination may be secured. This flexibility is desired as the students will go into research for new and original lighting effects. Under the guidance and instruction of the faculty the students will develop stage, holiday and special presentations and prologues.

MUSIC IN THE THEATRE

Hindsight and Foresight

By DICK MAXWELL

IF all of us had one-hundredth as much foresight as we have hindsight, there would be many, many more millions of dollars rolling into the tax collector's office each year, and that would mean that hundreds, yes thousands, more of us would have a nice fat income and would be "sitting pretty."

We all can, and must, make our own opportunities, although, every now and then, opportunity knocks at our doors only to be turned away due to our lack of foresight. I may have turned opportunity away for the same reason many times, just how many times I shall probably never know. However, there is one time that I do know about, and, I am being reminded of it daily.

About seven years ago, Miss Lee and myself were hired at the Allen theatre in Cleveland, O., to pose in tabloids. The tabloids soon gave way to the prologue, and the prologue in turn gave way to the presentation, and in a short time I worked my way to the position of dancing master for the theatre.

During our stay, which was 64 consecutive weeks, Miss Lee and myself arranged and staged prologues (sometimes running only five minutes) and presentations (some of which ran as long as an hour and a half) and using as many as 50 people. No band was used on the stage but we had about 30 pieces in the pit. Neither did we have a master of ceremonies; however, everything was programmed. We also had our own scenic artist and costumer, and it was very seldom that any scenery or costumes were brought in from outside sources.

The first 45 or 50 weeks, the talent used was all local, but we packed them in the biggest part of the time, and the Allen seats around 3,000. The last few months that the Allen Theatre Corporation of Canada had possession of the theatre, outside talent and names were booked in, such as, Louise Fazenda, Lew Cody, Bryant Washburn, Eva Tanguay, Joe Frisco, and many others. This however, did not lighten the work of producing as we still kept most of the home talent, several of whom have become successful professionals.

In 1922 the Loew interests took over the theatre and it was closed for a few weeks. At that time Miss Lee and myself, never realizing that the presentation in picture theatres would ever develop into its present stage, and figuring that vaudeville would be much easier as we would not have to be rehearsing at all hours of the night, we left the presentation field. We have regretted that move many times since.

I advise those that are in the presentation game now to stick with it, as presentation with pictures is here to stay. Not necessarily in its present form of stageband policy, but in some form or another. The many million dollar picture palaces there are now, with those that are being built all the time, could never exist with only pictures and a symphonic orchestra, but must give their patrons a variety of entertainment in order to keep their theatres out of the red.

Just as we are an illustration of hindsight, Fanchon and Marco are an illustration of foresight. They stuck to the game from its early stages, and are now producing presentations for more theatres than any other organization.

Many persons claim credit for originating the presentation in picture theatres; however, I believe that S. Barret McCormick, now connected with Pathe, and who was manager of the Allen theatre during the time it was owned and operated by the Allen Theatre Corporation, was the pioneer producer of this class of entertainment. Before coming to the Allen, Mr. McCormick staged presentations at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, and, previous to that, he staged them in several theatres in California.

Sentry Device Goes Into All Fox Houses

A CONTRACT has been entered into between Sentry Safety Control Corporation and William Fox whereby all Fox theatres, laboratories and studios with projection rooms will be equipped with the fire-safety device manufactured by Sentry.

Officials of the manufacturing concern consider it the most important contract they have consummated thus far.

Joseph E. Cohen, chairman of the board of directors of Sentry, said yesterday:

"This contract with Mr. Fox is important, not only in a business sense, though of course that is a consideration, too. We measure its importance chiefly, however, on account of the recognition it brings us. There has been at no time any question of the merits of the device. We have been oversold for a period of four months and have found it extremely difficult to bring up our manufacturing facilities to keep pace with orders. Mr. Fox's purchase of Sentry protection stamps indelibly on the product the approval of the motion picture industry's foremost group.

"One thing in the negotiations that interested us very much was Mr. Fox's attitude as a buyer. He displayed practically no interest in the very real economic value of the Sentry Safety Control; by that I mean the savings in insurance costs which the installation of the device is certain to bring. The one determining point which interested and influenced him was the factor of safety. Once he was satisfied that the Sentry Safety Control actually was a 100 per cent automatic safeguard from fire while film is in use, there was no further question. What he wanted to do was to insure his patrons and employes from fire in the real, the actual sense; not merely a money sense. Convinced our device does exactly that, he was not interested in its money saving features.

"We feel that in the Sentry Safety Control we have a device that represents the greatest technical advancement in motion picture science for at least the last two decades. It represents the achievement of what theatre men have always wanted; freedom from the worry and menace of fire."

The main office of Sentry Safety Control Corporation is in Philadelphia. A New York office is maintained at 1560 Broadway. Distribution is through National Theatre Supply Company.

Duties of Different Proprietors of Amusement Places

Every theatre, or other place of amusement, is controlled in different degrees by the owner of the property, the lessee of the premises, and the operators of various concessions.

It is important to know that the degree of care of each of these interested parties is dependent upon his assumed obligations.

For instance, it is well established that a theatre or amusement park proprietor is bound to exercise an ordinary degree of care to maintain the premises reasonably safe for patrons. Otherwise, he is liable in damages although an injury is effected by instrumentalities which are not dangerous to his knowledge.

On the other hand, the liability of the owner of the premises, on which the amusement is conducted, is quite different from that of the lessee, or operator. For these reasons the decision of the higher court in the recent case of Frear vs. Manchester Traction, Light & Power Co., 139 Atl. 86, is unusually important because all phases of the law relating to the duties and liabilities of the owners of theatre buildings and amusement parts, principle lessees, and sub-lessees were thoroughly considered.

The facts of the case are that the Manchester Traction, Light & Power Company leased an amusement park to a person who in turn leased concessions to various individuals. One of the concessions consisted of the exclusive rights of a man named Williams to operate a Ferris wheel. During one of the regular trips, the wheel collapsed, seriously injuring a woman passenger, who instituted legal proceedings for damages against the traction company, the lessor of the park, and Williams.

In order that the readers may readily understand the effects of the decision in this case, it is well to understand that the liability of the following parties are equal: the traction company and the lessor of a theatre building; the lessee of the park and a lessee of a theatre building; and Williams and any person who leases from a theatre operator concession checkroom privileges, or the rights to sell candy, soft drinks, cards, and the like.

Injury on which this suit was filed resulted from the breaking of the axle of the Ferris wheel. There was evidence that the axle was of insufficient size, and that, in addition to this defect in the original construction, the supports at one bearing were not sufficiently secured, and that as a result there was improper motion of the bearing, thereby putting still further excessive strain upon the axle. The court held that these two defects, or either of them, if found to exist, would warrant a finding of negligence on the part of any one responsible for the reasonable safety of the wheel.

Therefore, the important question presented the court was whether the traction company, the lessee of the park, or Williams, was responsible for the injury.

There was undisputed proof the axle was of the size used by the manufacturer of the structure, who apparently built a considerable number of Ferris wheels. Also, the wheel had been successfully operated for some years.

From this Williams argued that he was free from any fault as to the size of the axle, because it was a "standard make."

However, in explaining the duty of Williams the court said:

"It is said that in these respects Williams learned as much about it as the average man would have learned, and is therefore free

DISSOLVING STEREOPTICON ATTACHMENT

IT is now over SIX MONTHS since the manufacturers of Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps introduced for the first time a reflector arc lamp dissolving stereopticon. During that period over seven hundred (700) theatres have availed themselves of the advantages they made possible and the savings they afford.

In the Peerless Dissolving Stereopticon Attachment you have an automatically fed arc lamp and an instantaneous change from a motion picture projection to a Dissolver without extra wiring or generator equipment.

Dissolving stereopticon views and pleasing lighting effects are now possible without the installation of separate equipment.

The PEERLESS Dissolving Stereopticon Attachment opens a wide field of projection possibilities for the theatre now using PEERLESS Reflector Arc Lamps as well as those contemplating the purchase of new equipment.

Remember please—there are more PEERLESS Reflector Arc Lamps in use than the combined total of all other makes put together. A Kilgen Organ in your Theatre gives a realism, a vigor, a thrill to your productions which carries the drawing power of your house far and wide. More than a mere Pipe Organ—since it is wholly designed for theatrical work, it strengthens and enhances every emotional effect which your screen portrays.

Shrewd exhibitors know this. Yet many a one, desiring to take fullest advantage of profit-adding Pipe Organ possibilities, is frankly puzzled to know just what qualities to look for, and what organ it is best to buy.

All the questions which arise in this connection are intelligently and fully discussed in our treatise on modern Theatre Organs—a book written from your standpoint. It will be sent free on request. from fault. It may be conceded that a person with no expert knowledge of the sufficiency of steel to withstand strain would not appreciate the danger. But that does not dispose of this issue. The question is whether the man of Williams' lack of scientific knowledge ought not to have appreciated his ignorance, and have taken steps to obtain the expert advice necessary to enable him to act intelligently upon the matter he had to decide. He was about to enter upon an undertaking involving highly dangerous situations to the patrons of his venture. It was essential that the precautions he took should measure up to such a situation. . . . Would not the average man, entering upon an undertaking involving such hazards to many other persons, make investigation, and inquire of those skilled in the science of steel construction? It would be manifest to him that he had no sufficient knowledge to pass upon the question, and that it was one for expert engineers. It cannot be said as a matter of law that in such an undertaking he would rely upon the maker, or assume that use for a few years was a sufficient guaranty for continued safety."

Therefore, it is quite apparent that a concessioner is bound to exercise prudence to know that the appliances under his control are safe and unlikely to effect injury to patrons of the theatre or amusement park.

The next question considered by the court was the proper method of determining whether or not the lessor, or owner of the park, was responsible for the injury.

The counsel for the injured woman contended that the traction company was liable, because it failed to exercise care to know that the Ferris wheel was unsafe, and further that it displayed advertisements on its cars inviting the public to go to the park for amusement.

However, the court held the traction company not liable, and explained this phase of the law, in the following language:

"The issue of liability of the street railway involves the question whether there is any evidence of a relation existing between the railway and the plaintiff (injured patron) and the extent of the duty arising from such relation. The railway was the lessee of the park as a whole, and advertised it as a place of public resort. . . . Surrender of control of the premises to Williams did not free the railway from responsibility. . . . The doctrine of nonliability for the negligence of an independent contractor, or a lessee, does not control the rights and duties of these parties. A duty was imposed, not because the railway was liable generally for faulty construction or negligent operation, but because its acts made it a sponsor for the enterprise. . . . There is no evidence to sustain a verdict against the traction company. Aside from the facts that it was the sole owner of the stock of the street railway, and leased the park to the railway, and the concession to Williams, it does not appear to have had any connection with the transactions involved here."

The court instructed the jury regarding the legal duty of the person who leased the park from the traction company, as follows:

"If the accident resulted from 'a flaw in the axle for which the defendants were in no way responsible, of which they had no knowledge and which they could not by the exercise of reasonable care and diligence have discovered, and if this was the sole cause of the accident, you may be justified in finding that none of the defendants were liable.'"

Therefore, it is quite apparent that the owner of a theatre building, or amusement park, is liable in damages for failure to exercise ordinary care and prudence to protect patrons against injury, if he takes an

Theatre Ads and News in Milwaukee

"SINCE the theatres pay more for their advertising than other business houses, they are entitled to a fairly decent 'break' in the news columns, and they are getting it," reports a Better Theatres correspondent in the accompanying article on theatrical news and advertising in Milwaukee. The Wisconsin News has been particularly co-operative with the theatres in special exploitation stunts, which, of course, are circulation builders also. The reproductions below give a graphic account of the Milwaukee situation.

Why "My Best Girl" Likes to Read the Wisconsin News

Wisconsin likes to read the Wisconsin News. Not only does it give her the latest news of the day in an interesting manner, but it includes many features desired especially by women.

These comprise the articles and the latest in fashion news. Fashion plays a large part in the life of the woman and she is always interested in the latest in fashion news.

My Best Girl reads only the News. The paper that she reads chooses. Its features are the best and its news is the most reliable.

Another comparison of Sunday advertising and news space, these pages being from the Sentinel, the only morning paper. Like the News, the Sentinel is considered by Milwaukee showmen as particularly willing to co-operate with them. The generous amount of theatrical features and news shown above indicates the attitude of this paper. On one other day, Friday, advertising often rivals that of Sunday in all papers, since most of the large downtown houses change bills Saturday.

The Sentinel stimulates advertising on dull Monday by giving a fairly complete review of the downtown shows and other motion picture reports, which are run contiguous to the paid space.

What the Wisconsin News Did:

CONDUCTED a limerick contest for the exploitation of "My Best Girl" at the Garden—Ran names picked from the directory through the want ad columns, the owners finding them to receive free tickets to the theatre in the tieup—Aided the Alhambra in exploiting Buster Keaton in "The General" by printing each day a "still" of Keaton in a previous picture, those identifying the film from which the "still" was taken to receive free tickets—Staged a walking race at Marquette University stadium when Harry Langdon in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" played a local theatre. The Sentinel is another paper that stands behind its theatre advertisers. The 'Better Theatres' correspondent says:

Milwaukee Newspapers Cooperate With Their Theatre Advertisers

THE majority of theatre men in Milwaukee say that the local papers are giving them a square deal in handling their advertising and as a result in most instances theatre advertising in Milwaukee newspapers has increased. Of course since the theatres pay more for their advertising than other business houses, they are entitled to a fairly decent "break" in the news columns, and they are getting it.

It might be said that this increase has followed naturally with the increase of theatres in the city, but there are many theatres in Milwaukee which have been in business for many years and which have increased their advertising space. Theatre advertising space has increased and the newspapers have in turn increased their news space for the theatres.

In most instances the downtown houses carry the largest ads, are the most consistent advertisers, and of course get the most news space. Friday night ads are always the heaviest of the week, with the exception of those on Sunday, because all downtown movie theatres with the exception of the Garden, change their programs on Saturday. For instance the Alhambra on Friday nights will run an ad three columns deep and six inches long, with approximately the same space on Sundays, but will take only a two-inch column on the other week days.

Saxe Increases Space Run Ads en Bloc

With the addition of three theatres within the past four or five months and the inauguration of a stage band policy at the Wisconsin, Saxe of course has increased advertising space. It was only within the past few months that this chain ran its 14 theatres in Milwaukee in one advertisement. Prior to this each theatre was advertised separately. On Sundays Saxe runs approximately 15 inches, three columns deep. This advertisement carries the shows of all the Saxe houses in the city, the downtown houses, which includes the Wisconsin, Merrill, Strand, Miller and Princess taking the greater space, the neighborhood houses smaller.

Something comparatively new which Saxe is carrying on in advertising and which has been meeting with success, is the placing of advertising on other than the amusement page, stressing the admission prices of the new neighborhood deluxe houses. These theatres include the Tower, Oriental, Uptown, Modjeska and Garfield, at which the admission prices have been reduced to 30 cents for evenings from Monday to Friday inclusive.

Because of the Saxe chain and the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, there are really only two other downtown picture theatres, with the exception of the Orpheum and Majestic, both of which play vaudeville besides the photoplays and advertise separately. The Alhambra is a member of the Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, but as the circuit's other theatres are neighborhood houses, the Alhambra advertises separately. The other house is the Garden. The latter, since it is under new management and has Vitaphone, does a great deal more advertising than before.

Advertise Daily in Journal Get News Space Accordingly

There are 32 neighborhood houses each of which take a half an inch of space every day in the Milwaukee Journal, and they always have a section of the amusement page to themselves, arranged in alphabetical order. The 11 Milwaukee Theatre Circuit houses run the same amount of advertising every night arranged alphabetically in the Journal. But not in the Wisconsin News. And because the News does not carry the advertisements of these 43 houses it does not get as much amusement advertising as the Journal. A theatre which usually carries an inch in both the News and Journal is the Milwaukee theatre, a neighborhood house. In all there are about 60 neighborhood houses in Milwaukee, about 45 of which advertise in one or more of the three leading dailies in the city.

In respect to news space, the Journal gives approximately half a page on Sunday to the pictures at the leading downtown theatres and the deluxe Saxe neighborhood houses, as well as at the Milwaukee theatre. The Sunday Sentinel and Telegram, on the other hand, turns over about a full page of theatre notes and pictures, giving the bill for the week at the Saxe neighborhood houses and the Milwaukee theatre. The Sunday Sentinel and Telegram, besides running more theatre news in type, also runs more pictures. On Monday morning the Milwaukee Sentinel, a morning daily, turns over almost two columns, giving fairly complete reviews of the downtown shows and mentioning the uptown shows under the heading, "Movie Dial."

Theatre men from some other cities say that the Milwaukee papers are more willing to co-operate with the theatres than the papers in their sections of the country. The Wisconsin News and Milwaukee Sentinel are especially active in that regard. An example of this is a recent tie-up between the Wisconsin News and the Garden theatre, wherein the News and four prominent merchants conducted a limerick contest in connection with the showing of "My Best Girl" at the Garden. Each of the four ads on a page of the News carried four lines of a limerick featuring the words, "My Best Girl," and to the readers supplying the best last line free tickets to the Garden were given. The Garden carried an advertisement directly in the center of this page, above an announcement of the contest.

News in Several Tieups Openings Get Good Space

The Wisconsin News has been in a number of other tieups, for instance that of running through the want ads the names of people picked at random from the directory and tying up the name of the theatre with them, so that those who find their names can obtain passes. At another time the News tied up with the Alhambra for the showing of "The General," starring Buster Keaton. In this instance it ran each day a "still" of Keaton in some picture in which he had already appeared at local theatres, and those who could identify the picture from which the "still" was taken, were awarded passes to the Alhambra.

At another time, when Harry Langdon made his appearance at a local house in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," the News staged a walking race at Marquette University stadium and offered cash prizes to the winner. Still another time, when the Wisconsin theatre played "Spring Fever," starring William Haines, the Saxe circuit staged a golf tournament at the Lynx course with Milwaukee newspaper sports writers in charge. The local papers are always willing to give space on the opening of a new theatre and to co-operate in issuing special sections on it, as in the case of the opening of the new Garfield recently, when the Milwaukee Journal issued a special section, with Saxe, of course, running considerable advertising in the section.

According to most Milwaukee theatre men, the Wisconsin News and the Sentinel seem to be the most willing to co-operate in exploitation of this kind. The Alhambra, for instance, gained favorable publicity recently in connection with the Peter Rabbit juvenile organization, when several of its musicians sang over the News radio for the organization. The Milwaukee Theatre Circuit in like manner received good publicity when it staged a special free matinee at all houses for the members of the Peter Rabbit club.

Merchants Aid Exploitation With Window Displays

Another factor which has contributed much toward publicity for the theatres, is the merchants. In many instances, they have arranged interesting window displays for pictures which lend themselves well to that type of exploitation.

All in all, the Milwaukee papers co-operate with the motion picture theatres, and consequently the advertising in most instances has increased.

active part in operating the theatre or park, or offers special inducements to persons to patronize the place of amusement being conducted on his property.

The proprietor of a place of amusement is liable for injuries sustained by patrons as a result of his failure to use prudence in inspecting or having inspected at regular periods various parts of the premises to know that the carpets, floors, walks, steps, chairs, and all other devices, are reasonably safe.

A concessioner is liable if an injury is effected as a result of his negligence in providing unsafe appliances, or in doing any act that an ordinarily careful and prudent man experienced in the business would not do.

In a very recent case a higher court explained the degree of negligence for which a theatre owner is liable for injuries effected. This court said:

"The doing of some act which a cautious and prudent man would not do, or the failure to do some act which a cautious and prudent man would not neglect. In other words, negligence is the failure to observe for the protection or safety of the interests of another person that degree of care, precaution, and vigilance which the circumstances justly demand and which a man of ordinary prudence and caution would exercise under the same circumstances."

We Are Checking, Mr. Crichton

CHAPLEAU, ONT., CANADA.—TO THE EDITOR: I am writing you to see if you can give me any information to eliminate a little trouble that we are having with the Mazda Projection lamps that we are now using in place of carbons.

I have installed the lamps strictly according to the instructions issued by the makers of the equipment, who are the General Electric Company and have already written them, but they don't seem to be able to help us at all.

Now our trouble is this: The size of the spotlight that we get on the aperture plate is just about twice as large as necessary and I thought that if we could get this light smaller that it would increase the light on the screen. At present we get a good light on the screen but through the light on the aperture being so large there must be quite a lot of light wasted. Not only that but the heat on the plate is so intense that it takes the temperature out of the tension springs and thereby causes an unsteady picture on the screen and we experience further trouble in that if we run very slow or if anything happens to cause the slightest stoppage of the film in passing the aperture, then the heat is so intense that it causes the film to take fire. Often when I am running the machines slow I can watch the smoke coming out of the aperture plate hole. Whether it is the film that is smoking or the oil on the film burning I don't know, but I certainly don't like to see it, as it always looks dangerous to me.

I hope that you can give me some information that will eliminate the above troubles, as otherwise I find that the Mazda lamp gives very satisfactory results and are a great saving in the light account.—V. CRICHTON, Regent theatre, Chapleau, Ont., Canada.

The Evil of Over-Speeding

PLEASANTON, NEB.—To THE EDITOR: I read recently in the HERALD an article on over-speeding moving picture machines, an evil that is practiced where there must be two complete shows or in making room for some added stagemore. The article cited several reasons why over-speeding was an evil, such as more danger from fire, etc., which I believe were all correct; but it failed to state, if I remember correctly, the results of the evil on the screen.

I have recently gone to two different large towns to view some special picture and every picture was spoiled by "over-speeding" and the patrons had to pay their money for a jumpy, flickering jumble of scenes with a flash now and then of what was supposed to be a subtitle!

I went to a neighboring city where I went to view that master production, "Ben Hur," and paid a stiff price to see it, too, the same as the rest of the crowded theatre, and the film was sped through the projectors at so high rate of speed that I doubt if I read over three or four complete subtitles of the entire production. Some of the scenes were not much more than a fluttering flash. Such a masterful, beautiful production was "Ben Hur" to fall victim to that outrage "over-speeding." It ought to be possible for the producer and director of "Ben Hur" to sue the theatre manager that allows such an outrage that really detracts 50 per cent of the production's merit. Some might say that the film was old and cut, that caused the short scenes and titles, but to one who has been projectionist and manager, he knows better; nor would such a thing be likely to happen every time one viewed a picture, nor would an exchange be apt to ship a film in such condition to a first run theatre.

The exhibitor whose business is falling off might ask himself if he's presenting his programs in the manner that he would want them presented were he a patron elsewhere.

I have seen some good pictures in a neighboring town that I might mention for the benefit of brother exhibitors who might have them under contract.

"Is Zat So?" Fox, an extra good boxing picture.

"The Joy Girl," Fox, a very good picture that has entertainment plus a good story.

"The Main Event," Pathe-PDC, a very, very good picture with extra fine acting. It's also a fight picture but very different than most of them. Don't be afraid to tell 'em about it.—H. C. MAULER, Liberty theatre, Pleasanton, Neb.

LENS TALKS
No. 2

Sharpness of Image

Good definition in the screen image requires first, a good lens and second, that the operator keep the lens adjusted for focus. Either is useless without the other.

The best lens is the one which, under otherwise equal conditions, produces the sharpest boundary lines and the highest degree of contrast between black and white areas on the screen.

The degree of excellence attained in these respects depends equally upon the skill of the designer of the lens and of the workmen who make it. The designer must eliminate certain defects in lens performance generally known as aberrations, concerning which more will follow in this space next month.

After the designer has determined upon a satisfactory construction, the glass maker must deliver glass of the required optical properties, free from color, striae, etc. The lens makers must grind to exact curvature and polish slowly and painstakingly, using materials and methods learned only by long experience to be best adapted to the production of that most delicate of manufactured products—a perfectly polished optical surface.

BAUSCH & LOMB OPTICAL COMPANY
652 St. Paul Street ROCHESTER, N. Y.

New Corporation Offers Complete Building Service

MIDWEST Engineering & Construction Corporation, an Ohio corporation with offices at 209 South Third street, Columbus, O., announces that it is now prepared to design, build and equip theatres complete.

This organization has as its officers, both engineers and architects. The management is composed of a group of men who are experts in their fields and experienced in theatre designing, constructing, decorating and equipping.

This corporation is headed by Colonel Gustav Hirsch, who has a national reputation as a consulting engineer. He has been engaged in engineering and contracting work since leaving college in 1897.

The secretary-treasurer, E. F. Ferguson, is an electrical engineer. His experience covers all the branches of the electrical field from engineering to contracting work.

The general manager, Fred Jacobs, is also supervising architect. He has had many years experience in architectural work, doing public building work almost exclusively. For the last several years he has specialized in theatre work, having designed theatres in many sections of the United States.

A unified service plan has been built up in order to get the best results out of the separate units involved in the complex problem of building a theatre, starting from the preliminary design to the complete equipping and opening. Under this service the architects, artists, engineers, builders and supply men work in the closest harmony and cooperation under the guiding hand of an engineer.

The service of this organization includes the planning of the project by helping the prospective builder plan his theatre on the ground. All of the preliminary plans are prepared. The service of artists are available to make beautiful water colored perspectives of the proposed exterior and interiors. The ornamental plaster work is designed by a staff of expert decorators who have designed and supervised the installation of this work in some of the largest theatres in the United States. Specifications are prepared covering every branch of the work. Experienced engineers plan the electrical work and lighting effects.

After the complete specifications are prepared the contracting department handles the entire building project. When the building is ready the decorators install the ornamental work and skilled painters add the beauty that makes the theatre restful and with comfort. Draperies, rugs and seats, all harmonizing with the architectural scheme, as well as a carefully selected organ, are installed.

The stage proper is equipped with curtains, valances, rigging, scenery, switchboard, lifts and all other equipment. The booth and projection equipment are then installed.

The marquees and announcement signs, and the main sign are furnished, together with the ticket booth, ticket and change machines.

Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson operating his home television receiver. Picture appears in aperture at top.

The television transmitter in operation in the research laboratory of the General Electric Company.

Radio Motion Pictures Demonstrated by General Electric

Device, however, is now only in the experimental stage

RADIO television partially leapt the barrier between the laboratory and the home in the first demonstration of television broadcasting, arranged by the Radio Corporation of America and the General Electric Company. At three different points in Schenectady, including the home of E. W. Allen, vice-president of the General Electric Company, groups of engineers, scientists and newspaper men standing before the first "home television sets" ever to be demonstrated, saw the moving images and heard the voices of a man and a woman transmitted from the research laboratories of the General Electric Company several miles away.

So lifelike were the lights and shadows reproduced from the research studios that the curl of smoke from a cigarette and the flash of an eye were transmitted by radio just as a picture unfolds on a screen.

The first home television set is of very simple construction, not unlike the familiar phonograph cabinet in size and exterior appearance. It was developed by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the Radio Corporation of America and the General Electric Company and his assistants in the laboratory here.

In this instance the transmission of the moving object was made on 37.8 meters wavelength while the voice was simultaneously sent through the air on 379.5 meters, the normal wavelength of WGY. The receiver which Dr. Alexanderson used differs from the ordinary short wave receiver in that it converts the electro-magnetic wave into light instead of sound and the light becomes an image corresponding in movement to the action of artist at the transmitting end.

"While this is an historical event comparable to the early experiments in sound broadcasting, the greatest significance of the present demonstration," declared David Sarnoff, vice-president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, "is in the fact that the radio art has bridged the gap between the laboratory and the home. Television has been demonstrated both in this country and abroad prior to this event, but it did not seem possible within so short a time to so simplify the elaborate and costly apparatus for television reception, that the first step might be taken towards the development of television receivers for the home.

"With all that has been accomplished there are still many experimental stages to be travelled before a practical television service can be established. The first step contemplated is the placing of laboratory models of the present television receiver at central and strategically located points so that with the aid of technically trained observers, future experiments may be continued not only in the reception of sound but in the simultaneous transmission both of sight and sound.

"Sound broadcasting has now developed to an art and industry of world wide scope and significance. The television receiver as at present developed will supplement and not replace the modern radio receiving set in the home. Broadcasting television, it seems clear, will develop along parallel lines with broadcasting of sound so that eventually not only sound but also sight through radio broadcasting will be available to every home," Mr. Sarnoff concluded.

The elements of the television home receiver are a light source, the scanning device and the synchronizing system. The signal, or electro-magnetic wave from the television transmitter, is received in equipment designed to receive modulations as high as 40,000 cycles. The amplifier is substantially the same as the amplifier of the home loud speaker. The receiving system differs from a modern loud speaker system in that a neon gas filled lamp is substituted for the loud speaker. The amplified current is delivered to this lamp known as the Moore lamp which responds to the intensities of the current and gives fluctuations of the light intensity just as a diaphragm of the loud speaker reproduces pulsations of the air waves.

The scanning disc is 24 inches in diameter with 48 small holes, each hole 35 mils in diameter and arranged in a spiral so that each of the 48 holes will pass each other and trace successive lines of the picture, completing or literally painting a picture in one revolution.

In other words, if the disc were revolved very slowly a ray of light through successive holes would trace over the entire object. The disc is revolved by a standard motor, similar to those used in household devices such as the washing machine or vacuum cleaner. The revolutions occur at a speed of 18 per second, slightly faster than film passes through a motion picture camera. An observer, looking at this revolving disc as the light from the Moore lamp shines through these small holes, would see the image being sent by radio but this picture would be but 1½ inches square.

Magnifying lenses enlarge the picture twice so that it is 3 inches square in the aperture in the front of the receiver cabinet.

Synchronization of the scanning disc of the receiver with the scanning disc of the transmitter is obtained by manually operated control, a push button held in the hand. By means of this button, of the bell ringing type, the picture may be held in the field of vision with a little practice, as naturally after a time as driving an automobile or steering a bicycle.

The reproduced picture or object has a pink color, which is characteristic of the neon gas used in the lamp. D. McFarlan Moore, inventor of the lamp and an engineer at the Edison Lamp works of the General Electric Company, found in early work that this gas was most efficient and most sensitive for reproducing a light which will go on and off in a millionth part of a second.

The transmission system is of the type using a disc with spiral holes, a duplicate of the disc in the receiving machine. A spot of light is projected on the object through the moving disc and the reflection of this light is intercepted by photo electric cells, which converts the light to electric waves, ready for the short wave transmitter.

Colored Consoles of Marr & Colton Organs Win Praise

During the past year the Marr & Colton Company of Warsaw, N. Y., manufacturers of pipe organs for theatres and churches, developed a new type of finish for their organ consoles. Exhibitors who have installed Marr & Colton organs finished in these various new colors are lavish in their praise for this new innovation.

Finishing consoles in colors makes it possible to have the organ console harmonize with the interior appointments, so there is no jar or clashing of color schemes. One very popular finish is the white and gold. Consoles finished in this combination of colors are very attractive and show up beautifully when colored spot lights are flashed on the console while the organist plays.

Another popular color scheme is the Chinese red and gold. Marr & Colton Company have many other color combinations, some of which are the Burmese blue, antique mahogany, palmetto green, abbot gray, oriental gold, bolero cream, driftwood smoke, etc.

Two Theatres Install Marr & Colton Organs

Funk and Lancaster have recently installed a three-manual Marr and Colton organ in their new Great Lakes theatre, Detroit, Mich. The console is finished in Chinese Red, a strikingly attractive color that harmonizes with the interior decorations.

Robbins Brothers have installed a Marr and Colton organ in their Echo theatre, Detroit. This console is finished in mahogany.

United Artists Gives Chicago New Theatre

Not a Remodeled House

New United Artists theatre rises within four walls of former legitimate playhouse

SOME months ago there stood in the heart of Chicago's Rialto, at Randolph and Dearborn streets, one of Chicago's most popular legitimate theatres, the Apollo.

Today on this spot stands the new United Artists theatre which promises to be one of the city's most popular motion picture theatres.

Making a "picture palace for picture patrons" out of a legitimate theatre offered many problems, but they were remarkably solved in this instance. The theatre is not a remodeled theatre. It is a new house; only the four walls of the old house being used. Everything in the interior was torn down and taken out, and a new interior from the basement up was constructed. C. Robert Crane was the architect.

The seating capacity remains practically the same, 1,750 seats, although the new theatre is much more roomy. The entire backstage part of the old house was torn out and the new house has only a six-foot stage. The mezzanine floor of the old theatre rested on large pillars that formed a colonnade in the lobby. In the new theatre, the foyer has been enlarged and the mezzanine floor is suspended in an unique method.

Entering the theatre, one passes directly into the foyer or lobby, its side walls colonnaded with pilasters of Belgian antique marble and the ceiling in Italian bas-relief, all decorated in the Italian Renaissance period.

This lobby runs the width of the theatre. At the opposite end from the entrance doors are stairways leading to the general lounge in the basement and others leading to the smoking loge, the balcony and the smaller lounge off the balcony.

Entering the main auditorium, which seats 980, one is struck with the unusual colors. The ceiling is treated in gold leaf, high-lighted with French lacquer. The side walls were given the treatment of imitation stone in travertin color, while the ornaments are in gold leaf, high-lighted with French lacquer in a fine blending of green, gold, silver and flaming red.

The Chicago theatre is the second of the chain of new houses which United Artists is building, or intends to build, for the showing of first runs on the company's product. Pictures of the Los Angeles theatre were published last month.

The baldochin, or arch over the proscenium, offers an unique example of the decorator's art, beautifully laced in Indian figure work with three-color flood lights spraying rainbows of colors through its grills. The organ screens, also in lace, Indian design, were given like treatment with the addition of travertin stone effect. On either side wall two colorful mural paintings lend further interest to the interior.

The grand lounge is decorated in travertin stone. The ceiling has been given an unusual treatment; plaster beams are so tinted in old walnut shades that a realistic imitation of fine old walnut is achieved. The general theme here is also Italian Renaissance. Both lounges are beautifully appointed with fine pieces of furniture, pieces of art in marble and fine oil paintings. The decorations were executed by the W. P. Nelson Company of Chicago.

The theatre boasts the largest vertical electric sign in the city. It is 120 feet high and at its widest point measures 19 feet. Nine thousand nine hundred globes do their share to attract Chicago citizens. This sign was built by the Commonwealth Sign Company, and all illuminated directional and admission signs in the box office and interior were manufactured and installed by Price Brothers.

The orchestra pit, which is of the elevator type, and all orchestra equipment is of the Gallagher make. Canopies and all sheet metal work in the theatre were built and installed by the Ashland Sheet Metal & Furnace Works of Chicago. The interior tile decorations and brass stripped terrazzo floors of the theatre were the work of John Caretti & Company. Most of the hardware was furnished by the Illinois Hardware Company. Refrigeration and ventilation equipment was installed by the Wendt & Crone Company.

There is about the United Artists theatre a charm and personal atmosphere not always found in the larger picture palaces. Although the theatre has been done in the same grand manner of other Chicago theatres, its smaller size contributes to this feeling of warmth and color. Every inch of space has been utilized and one does not have to wander through a maze of corridors, foyers and ante-rooms to find his way about. An unusual feature is the smokers' loge, seating only 190 people. This loge is proving extremely popular, it is said. The balcony has a seating capacity of 580.

The theatre was opened December 26 with Norma Talmadge's picture, "The Dove." The second picture to be seen is "The Gaucho," the Douglas Fairbanks picture, which is to be followed with "The Circus." The motto of the theatre tells the policy—"a picture palace for picture patrons," there being no stagershow or prologues.

Management and Administration in Franklin Analysis

IMPORTANT to the exhibitor as an agency for improving his phase of the industry, and to the public as a textbook on the operation, organization, and structure of a modern motion picture theatre, is "Motion Picture Theatre Management," by Harold B. Franklin.

"Motion Picture Theatre Management," published by George H. Doran Company, is a detailed analysis and exposition on the operation of motion picture theatres, based on the life-time experiences of the author as a theatre man. It contains 35 chapters, and covers management and operation, plant and structure, personnel, finance, and auxiliary and contributive elements, such as advertising, music, legal advice, etc.

In the preface and introduction Mr. Franklin says, "A theatre is a personality, and the heart of the theatre owner's creed is a likeness for the profession."

Under management and organization he writes, "The Manager should make it his business to know the important people in his community. He should go out of his way to meet them personally and to greet them by name."

In the part devoted to plant and structure, a description of just how to go about deciding on the location, construction, and equipment of a theatre is given. The employing, organization, function and supervision of the entire personnel is emphasized and discussed at length; and chapters on finance showing the necessity for having a fixed budget, explain methods of accounting control, purchasing and inventories, and insurance.

Perhaps the most interesting chapters of the book are those devoted to advertising, show windows, color and lighting, music, stage presentations, refrigeration, and law as applied in the theatre. Institutional advertising, and the need for cooperation between the theatre and the press is stressed. "Next to the feature photoplay," says Mr. Franklin, "music has reached a position of greatest importance in the operation of high-grade motion picture theatres, and is a prime factor in building a program."

Modern refrigeration has ushered in a new and better method in ventilation generally, as well as air conditioning in theatres, and within a few years every motion picture theatre of importance will be equipped with one or another cooling device, is the prediction made in a chapter on refrigeration systems.

Of interest to many theatre owners is the statement that a theatre should have a lawyer, not necessarily retained, perhaps, but looking upon the house as a client. The lawyer will tend to put his best at the service of the theatre, and will be able to help the manager in the prevention of lawsuits.

A complete chapter is devoted to a description of the Paramount theatre; and to those who look into the future, Mr. Franklin's forecast, in the last chapter, is indeed fascinating. "What will be with us in 10--20--50 years?" he asks. Comment is made upon the synchronization of sound with the film, and upon the success and future possibilities of color photography. The increased determination of producers, directors, and actors to make better motion pictures is commended. The invention of television is noted, and this is said in reference to visual education, "Moving pictures will push education forward more rapidly than any other agency. . . . The text books of tomorrow will be supplemented by the cinema."

The ONE SWITCH Simplest System

With all the complication of modern theatre lighting the simplicity of the Major System control is something at which to be marvelled.

By all-master control the myriad circuit and color switches are grouped into one switch which is the only one operated for scene changes.

Milwaukee Spends Seven Million in Year for Houses

THE year just closed has been an active one in Milwaukee as far as theatre construction is concerned, and according to a recent survey 16 theatres have been planned, are under way or were completed in 1927 in Milwaukee. These 16 theatres involve a total valuation of nearly $7,000,000 and an aggregate seating capacity of 18,200.

The trend has been toward the construction of large neighborhood houses in various sections of the city, rather than downtown houses. In fact during the year but one theatre was started downtown and this is part of the Empire building on West Water and Wisconsin avenue and will house the Majestic theatre, a Junior Orpheum circuit house. This theatre will have a seating capacity of 3,000 and the building is being erected at a cost of $1,500,000.

Three of the theatres opened during 1927 were deluxe neighborhood houses operated by the Saxe interests and now controlled by Midwesco Theatre, Inc. These three houses, the Uptown, Oriental and Garfield represent an investment of approximately $2,750,000 with a total seating capacity of about 6,200. The only new house opened by Universal was the Venetian theatre erected at an approximate cost of $225,000 with a seating capacity of 1,500. Peacock & Frank, architects which designed the Venetian have also prepared plans for another Universal house, the Arabian, to be erected on the north side at a cost of $250,000 with a seating capacity of 1,500.

Other theatre projects in 1927 included the Egyptian theatre, a $500,000 house seating 1,800, the Zenith theatre, costing $500,000 with a seating capacity of 1,500, the Layton theatre, a 1,400 seat house, costing $500,000, and the Colonial theatre which was remodeled at a cost of about $500,000. Plans were also drawn up by Architects Backes & Uthus for a 1,500 seat theatre to be erected on the triangle bounded by Fond du Lac and Meinecke avenues and Twenty-second street at a cost of $500,000. In addition to these houses, smaller projects throughout the city have been completed, both in the erection of new buildings and remodeling of old. Other theatre projects involving the expenditures of from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 have been proposed during 1927, but have not yet materialized.

Theatres which opened in the state during December besides the Egyptian in Milwaukee were the Roosevelt theatre at Kenosha and the Gateway theatre in the same city. The Roosevelt was erected at a cost of $450,000 and has been leased by the United Theatre company, which also operate the Lincoln, Vogue and Butterfly theatres in the same city. The house has a seating capacity of 1,000 and is managed by L. A. Turner.

The Gateway theatre was started by Saxs and is now operated by the Midwesco Theatres, Inc. It has a seating capacity of about 1,800 and is equipped with a $50,000 organ as well as a $50,000 refrigerating plant. It is under the management of James L. Morrissey, who has conducted the Saxe theatre in Kenosha for the last few years. At Kaukauna, Wis., Wilbur Kempen, who formerly operated the Rex theatre at Berlin, Wis., purchased the Bijou theatre and after having it thoroughly renovated staged a reopening under the name of the Rex. Mr. Kempen had the interior of the house as well as the exterior entirely repainted and redecorated and it is modern throughout.

Spahr Sees 1928 as Biggest Year for Motiograph

By O. F. SPAHR*

BEING neither crystal-gazers, fortune-tellers or clairvoyants, yet, we presume to predict that 1928 will be the biggest year in Motiograph history. This prophecy is based on our past experience and our unflinching confidence in our projector.

Ever since we entered the field as pioneer manufacturers of motion picture machines (over a quarter-century ago), we have adhered strictly to our policy of progressive achievement with the consequent result that our Motiograph DeLuxe Projector stands out as one of the most modern motion picture projectors on the market today.

Turning back the pages of history to 25 years ago, we find that the first projector made, weighed about 16 lbs. and consisted of hardly more than an efficient magic lantern. Compare that with the standard professional projector of today (the Motiograph DeLuxe weighs approximately 600 lbs.) and one is amazed to note the development in this type of machinery in so short a time. This marvelous progress may be accounted for, in a large measure, to the demands of the age. We are passing through an era, in all fields, of the keenest competition that this country has ever known. In our particular field, it is taxing to the utmost, the mechanical and inventive ingenuity of our best trained minds to keep pace with the demands of the present day theatres and to anticipate to a considerable degree their problems and needs. Our Company is fortunate in having on its staff, engineers who have specialized in projector-building for years, and who have been constantly alert to the existing conditions with their attendant requirements.

During 1927 and previous years, the Motiograph enjoyed good sales through its well merited popularity, and 1928 promises to exceed all former years.

Many improvements were brought out on our Motiograph DeLuxe during 1927, which have been thoroughly tried out and not only have they added greatly to the efficiency of the equipment but they have aided admirably in enhancing it to the trade. The most important improvement is embodied in our Double-Bearing Ball-Bearing Intermittent Movement, which was introduced early in 1927. This is an exclusive Motiograph feature, it being the only Double-Bearing Ball-Bearing Intermittent Movement on the market today. Its great value lies in the fact that not only is it responsible for the projector operating more smoothly, but it has increased the life span of this vital unit some three or four times over that of the ordinary single bearing intermittent movements in general use in other projectors offered to the trade today. This unit has been further improved in that its bearings are now made of a special bronze, which reduces the possibility of the movement freezing, to practically nothing. Being thoroughly convinced of the value of hardened parts, we are continuing to harden the Motiograph star, sprocket, etc. which go into the Motiograph movement, because our experience has proven that this adds to the life of the movement.

A new type of lens barrel was introduced in the early part of 1927. This is so arranged and built so as to hold the lens rigid and positive. Vibration will not loosen the lens from its hold in this type of lens barrel, and when once set, it remains stationary.

EXPERTLY developed colortones, meeting the needs of any projection lamp, are built into every Silversheet surface. Their secret is in the scientific mixing and application of the bronzes. Their advantages need merely to be seen to be appreciated . . . and Silversheet alone has them.

Now you can have perfect screen results with any of the commonly used types of projection lamps. Silversheet's Colortone surface so adapts the light that a clear, sharp, deep and brilliant picture is seen by every patron in your house. Genuine Silversheets are made only by the American Silversheet Company, St. Louis and distributed through the National Theatre Supply Company.

BESIDES showing the picture with uniform brilliancy to every part of the theatre, the Silversheet Specification Surface allows an AVERAGE CURRENT SAVING OF 30% over cloth screens, which will many times pay back the initial cost of your Silversheet, while giving far better results.

1927 is our quick and handy tilting device, which enables the operator to raise or lower the picture on the screen, with ease. This attachment was developed to meet the requirements of houses that find it necessary to use two screens, it becoming necessary during the performance to super-impose the picture from one screen to the other. This can be done in simple fashion on the Motiograph projector by turning the hand wheel on the side of the projector which is most convenient for the projectionist.

The year 1927 also saw the development of the new method of framing (on the Motiograph) by hand wheel instead of the lever. The hand wheel method is more convenient than the lever type; it is conducive to smoother operation, eliminating the jerky motion heretofore experienced, with the old method of framing. With the hand wheel, the trouble of framing the picture past the mark on the screen is also eliminated.

Equipped with these improvements (all of which have been thoroughly tried out), and embodying the highest quality of material, workmanship and mechanical perfection obtainable, the Motiograph DeLuxe represents the highest type of professional projector on the market today.

Knowing what goes into the Motiograph DeLuxe, the organization back of the projector, the record made by the machine and the consequent growing demand for it, tends to confirm our confidence in our statement that 1928 will hold much greater business for the Motiograph than any previous year. Furthermore, on account of increased production, we have been able to hold down our costs so that it will not be necessary for us to increase the price of our projector as anticipated by many buyers.

Some time ago, it looked as if the PICTURE were doomed to become a side issue in the motion picture theatres on account of the SPECIALTY ACTS becoming more and more elaborate. However, developments in recent months show that the PICTURE is now being featured in that the specialty acts in most instances are built up around the picture, creating more atmosphere for it.

With the picture predominating in the motion picture theatre, the demand is created for better and more modern equipment, so that the best possible projection may be offered the theatre patrons.

We are pleased to be able to announce that the Motiograph DeLuxe with its many modern improvements will give the theatre owner the greatest obtainable projector efficiency and will well enable him to meet the increasingly difficult projector problems. 1928 is destined to be a banner year for the motion picture industry throughout its many fields, and we, accordingly, can foresee nothing but a big year for the Motiograph DeLuxe.

Zenith Added to Milwaukee's Fine Theatres

Spain is the source of the architectural design of the new Zenith, 1,500 seat house costing half a million dollars just erected by the Northwest Amusement Corporation. It is a neighborhood house and will present deluxe shows.

Besides a Kilgen organ, the Zenith is equipped with Orchestrhone, a new invention playing symphonic accompaniment to pictures brought out by National Theatre Supply Company. Architects were La Croix & Memmler.

Represents 20th Century Conception of Egyptian Art

THE $500,000 Egyptian theatre, an atmospheric house, opened recently on Milwaukee's North Side. The architects of the theatre, Peacock & Frank, based the artistic splendor of the house on ancient Egyptian art from which they were able to evolve the architectural style and colorful decorative scheme embodied in this twentieth century conception of an Egyptian courtyard scene as represented in the interior of the auditorium.

Carved figures set in pedestals against the walls of the theatre represent colossi of Osiris, and are reproduced from those found in the Temple of Luxor of Egypt near 1516 B. C. These figures are the largest ever produced in Milwaukee, standing about 18 feet from base of pedestal to top of head-dress. They are illuminated by concealed spotlights.

The interior of the theatre is unique in its construction and decorative scheme. A new feature in construction never before attempted in a local house is an overhanging sub-ceiling through openings of which the ceiling itself can be seen, giving the effect of a star-studded sky. The beautiful symbols of victory embodied in the scarab and wing designs which surmount the edges of the sub-ceiling are works of art in color and design.

The color scheme used in the decoration of the auditorium in the theatre is said to be the most lavish combination ever attempted in a motion picture house in Milwaukee or any other city in the state. The dominating note of the entire theatre is a red, blue and gold combination. The main foyer is 90x16 feet and is carpeted throughout in a deep red to harmonize with the color scheme of the walls and ceiling. It is furnished with specially designed replicas of early Egyptian pieces, including a love-bench, lounges, chairs, benches and mirrors. At either end of the mezzanine foyer are the men's and women's rest rooms and smoking lounges comfortably furnished.

The fireproof projection booth is fitted with the most modern of equipment, including two of the latest type Motiograph De Luxe projectors, equipped with the latest developed arc reflector lamps. This type of machine prevents flickering and is automatically controlled, the carbon being fed constantly in an even manner. Besides the projectors the booth contains a dissolving stereopticon and the necessary spotlights and flood lamps to enable the projectionist to properly light all stage presentations.

Several thousand dollars were spent in the installation of one of the most modern washed-air ventilating systems. Over 3,000,000 cubic feet of air per hour is delivered into the building washed and conditioned and free from all oxygen-destroying impurities by this system. Two Pacific Steel Fire-box Smokeless Boilers perform the duty of heating the theatre.

The lighting fixtures have been made to fit with the motif of the theatre. The characteristic snake design has been used in the wall brackets in a red, green and gold color combination, and every fixture in the house was specially designed and made in Milwaukee by the Charles Polacheck and Brothers Company. The stage is modernly equipped in every respect and is so arranged as to accommodate vaudeville and entire roadshow companies. All stage equipment and scenery was especially made at Los Angeles by one of the largest studios devoted to the making of big sets used

New Tebbetts Theatre Is Replica of Temple of India

TRULY a "temple of India" has been given not only to the people of Portland but to the whole Pacific Northwest, in the opening here of Tebbetts Oriental playhouse, located in the 12-story monumental Weatherly building, the first of a number of East Side skyscrapers.

When you enter this beautiful playhouse you can veritably breathe the Oriental incense, for greeting you on both sides of the spacious lobby are two huge statues of the great Hindu leader, Buddha, seated in a prominent niche and place of honor. Upon the walls hang several gorgeous tapestries upon the panels of which are told the history of this mighty Hindu God. Nearing the ceiling are life sized sacred elephants at various intervals, so impressive that one is almost inclined to pay them homage, as did the ancient worshippers.

Upon the beautifully colored frieze are many figures so highly symbolical of East Indian life, such as the dancing girl, whose presence in the old temples was absolute; the swine and the dog, representing competition in life, and the monster seven headed hydra, or serpent, symbolical of the seven cycles of creation.

All these are enhanced by the most pleasing and harmonizing coloring, the utmost in modern decorative art, being in fact, substantially a replica of the same color scheme as wrought by the builders of the early centuries in the Orient.

Scattered about the lobby and the lounge room are dozens of almost priceless curios, selected by W. E. Tebbetts on his recent world tour, from the art centers of the world—Paris, Berlin, Vienna, New York and East Indian cities. In a convenient nook, in the lobby are two handsome walnut frames, 14 feet high and 9 feet wide, upon which are hand carved animals of the jungle, such as lions, tigers and elephants. The frames incase heavy French mirrors and these together with the frames cost $2,000 each. At the sides of the in production studios. All drapes are of velvet, plush and silk.

The auditorium of the theatre is illuminated almost exclusively by indirect and concealed lighting. Thousands of light bulbs ingeniously hidden away enhance the note of mystic Egypt. The seating arrangement is such that every one of the 1856 seats will have a perfect view of the stage and screen. There is plenty of leg room between the rows and in providing the seats special attention was paid to making the design conform to the architectural motif of the interior. The wood parts are made of ebony and the upholstery is red and black striped leather cushions, while the iron standards are cast with Egyptian figure decorations and are also red and black.

The policy of the house calls for the showing of only the highest type of photoplays besides selected comedies, novelties, cartoons, late news, and world events as well as stage features and presentations.

Earl Rice, formerly owner of a chain of four theatres in Milwaukee is managing director of the house, which is owned by the Egyptian Realty Company, with Mr. Rice, Nathan Cohen and Joseph Rothstein as the largest stockholders.

The organ is presided over by Harley Cross, formerly at the Downer theatre, while further music is furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Ed. De Bona.

There is no Substitute for Circulation

If a paper has real, bona fide circulation, it becomes a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and furnishes its clients with definite facts and figures showing just exactly what they pay for when they buy advertising space.

If it cannot stand the test of an audit, it furnishes CONVERSATION to its advertisers instead of audit statements.

"Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" has the largest theatre owner circulation in the history of motion picture publications. It reaches more theatre owners than all of the other national motion picture trade papers combined.

mirrors are imported East Indian vases about four feet in height, which are exquisitely embellished with Oriental life symbols.

Numerous davenport, also hand carved, beautifully upholstered with a basic color of yellow satin and handsome embroidered figures upon them are to be found in the lobby and lounge, as well as many nicknacks that add a further mystical charm to the interior.

The policy of the theatre, as laid down by Mr. Tebbetts, will be first run pictures by the best producers, showing for a week at a time, the finest symphony music, splendid stage attractions and prices that are family prices 25 cents in the afternoon, 35 cents for the evening performances, and 10 cents for children, which means that parents can attend Tebbetts Oriental theatre for the price of one admission at the usual first run houses.

The music will be under the direction of Joseph Srodka, the talented young symphony orchestra director, who recently resigned as first viola in the Portland Symphony Orchestra to accept the position with the Oriental.

Mr. Srodka came to this country three years ago direct from the famous UFA Palace at Berlin, where he had charge of the music scores for their pictures.

At the age of 14 Mr. Srodka was titled the "wonder boy violinist," and later became head of a 50 piece symphony orchestra at Riga.

At the console of the organ will be Glen Shelley, considered one of the best teachers of the organ in the Northwest.

Clarence Conant, who is known throughout the Pacific Coast as an expert projectionist and lighting expert, will have charge of the large projection room. Most of the special lighting and color effects used on the theatre stages on the Coast are of his making. Five of the seven motion picture machines in the Oriental were designed and constructed by Mr. Conant, and he has recently invented some novel effects and appliances that he will use in this new house.

Mr. Tebbetts will assume the management of the theatre and will have as his assistant Carl McFadden. The head cashier will be Edna Bowman, who was formerly at the Hollywood, and who also has a host of friends both in and out of theatrical circles. The complete staff will entail more than 60 people, two-thirds of whom have been former employes of Mr. Tebbetts, who has engendered among them a splendid spirit of cooperation.

From a standpoint of equipment the Oriental will be the last word, including the finest screen, organ, chairs, carpets and draperies. The picture screen is a duplicate of the one used at the Roxy in New York.

The seating capacity of the Oriental is 2,750, and the chairs are a replica of those used in the beautiful Oriental theatre in Chicago.

A Wurlitzer organ has been installed. This is one of the largest organs on the Coast, has three manuals and 14 sets of pipes, and is placed on a rising platform.

For the benefit of the children a "circus" has been provided, including a merry-go-round, slides, and sand pit, and having perfect ventilation. The playground is 60 feet x 20.

Thomas & Mercier were the architects of this wonderful playhouse and they are responsible for the wonderful Hindu symbols that adorn this unique theatre. Robertson, Hay & Wallace, contractors, made a record in carrying out the intricate details of the playhouse.

Live News from Coast to Coast

San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO.—Contracts have been awarded for the construction of the Marina theatre at Chestnut and Steiner streets, on the site of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition of 1915. The owners are E. B. Baron, formerly local manager of Publix, and Carol A. Nathan, for eight years manager of the Universal exchange here. . . . Louis R. Lurie, who has extensive theatre and realty interests in San Francisco, will leave shortly for New York to join Mrs. Lurie. They will sail for Europe February 18 for an extended stay. . . . The Royal theatre, Polk and California streets, will be reopened shortly after having been closed six months for remodeling. The changes, planned by Timothy L. Pflueger, include a larger balcony, a loge section, addition of more seats making the capacity 1,500, a mezzanine, and a new front. The owners are George Nasser, William Nasser, R. A. McNeil, M. A. Naify, and E. H. Emmick. . . . The San Francisco Orpheum, one of the first theatres anywhere to offer vaudeville, has changed its policy and is now presenting feature photoplays in conjunction with vaudeville, with two shows daily. A Wurlitzer organ has been installed. . . . Ackerman & Harris, in association with George Oppen, have purchased three theatres of the Samuel H. Levin chain, these being the Colisum, the Alexandria and the New Balboa, all in the Park-Presidio district. Acquisition of these swells the Ackerman & Harris chain in Greater San Francisco to 14. . . . Work on the new El Capital theatre of Ackerman & Harris at Nineteenth and Mission streets is progressing rapidly and this house will be opened in April. It will have a seating capacity of 3,100. This organization will shortly start work on a 1,500 seat house in the Crocker-Amazon tract. R. P. Davis will design the structure and R. A. Hanson will be architectural engineer. . . . The Geary Theatre & Realty Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $200,000, by Homer Curran, Herman Wobber and S. J. Theisen. . . . The new theatre of L. L. Cory, Fresno, Cal., has been leased to T. & D. Jr. Enterprises, San Francisco, and will be opened in February. . . . The moving picture house of James Lono, Middletown, Cal., has been closed indefinitely. . . . Robert Hazel, for four years in charge of the Tulare theatre, Tulare, Cal., and before then in the film exchange business in San Francisco, has resigned his position and will return to San Francisco. He has been succeeded at the Tulare by J. Fred Miller, formerly of the Visalia theatre, Visalia, Cal., who in turn has been succeeded by Louis C. Barboni. . . . The National theatre Syndicate is considering remodeling the Tokay theatre, Lodi, Cal., and opening it at an early date.

Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS—Frank J. Rembusch of Shelbyville, Ind., was elected president of the Screen Club of Indiana at the regular meeting of the organization last week in this city. Rembusch is head of the theatrical enterprise company bearing his name, operating motion picture theatres throughout the state. William Willman, manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer distributing exchange, was elected vice-president. A. C. Zaring, owner of Zaring's Egyptian theatre, and E. C. Dressendorfer, manager of the local Educational Films exchange, were re-elected to the offices of treasurer and secretary, respectively. William Esch, manager of the Universal exchange here, is the retiring president. . . . Edward "Jay" Miller has begun his duties as house manager of the LaPorte theatre, LaPorte, Ind., succeeding J. Goldberg, who will continue as booking agent for the theatre. Miller comes from Cleveland, O., where he had been in charge of the Manheim productions. For the present the policy of the house will be continued, with vaudeville on Saturdays and Sundays and only feature pictures the remainder of the week. Incidentally, Miller took a novel method of becoming acquainted with patrons of the house. For the first week he stationed himself in the lobby and greeted the patrons as they came in. . . . Harold E. Burrows, attending a motion picture show in this city, recognized in a newsreel Bennett J. Doty, with whom he served in the army during the world war. Burrows had read newspaper accounts of Doty's troubles as a deserter from the French foreign legion, but did not connect that Doty with the one he knew until he saw the newsreel. . . . Judge Bash of probate court in Indianapolis has ordered the Fletcher Savings & Trust Company, co-trustee of the estate of the late William E. English, hotel and theatre owner, to sign a 99 year lease with the Market-Circle Realty Company for the east half of the Hotel English building, containing part of the hotel and the theatre.

Motion Pictures of Transverter Tell Exhibitor Story of Its Making

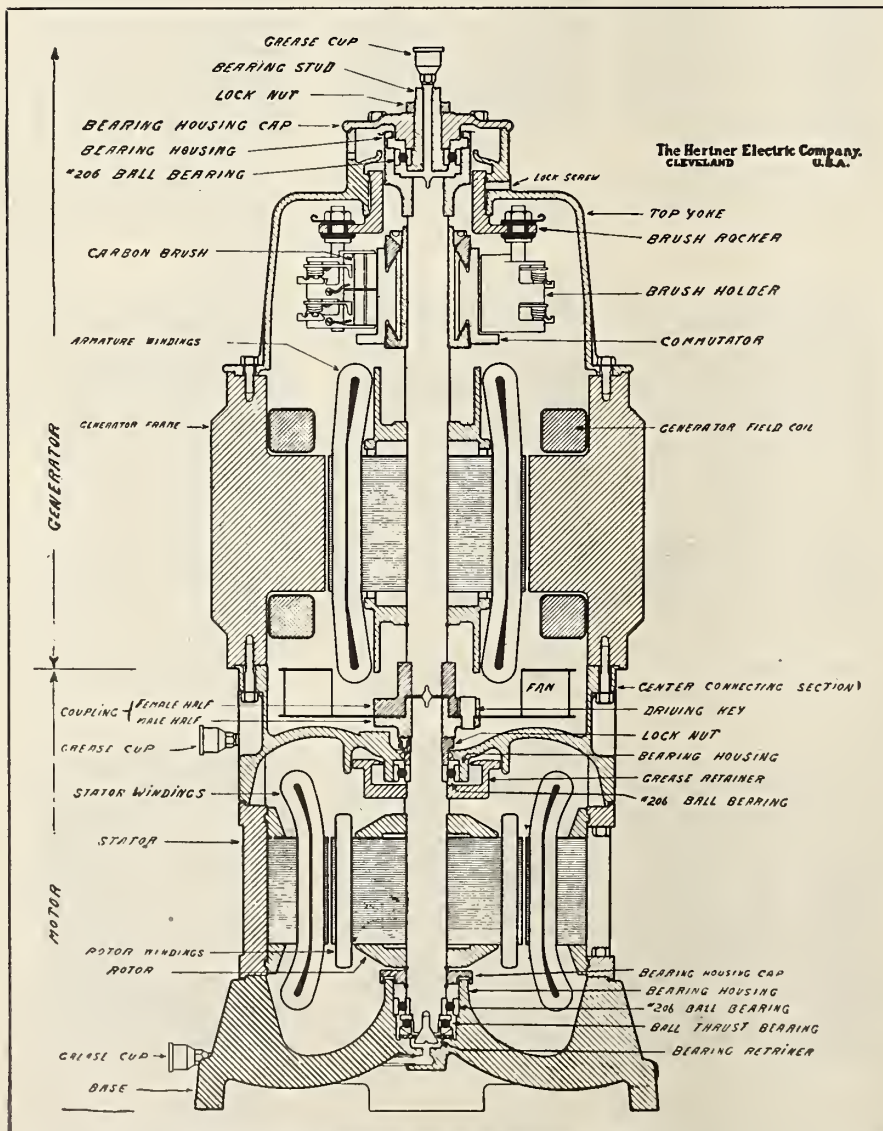

Parts of a three-bearing Transverter

NOW comes the producer of motion pictures of equipment. In two interesting reels the Hertner Electric Company of Cleveland, Ohio, gives the theatre owner a graphic description of the manufacture of the Hertner Transverter.

The two-reel production which was shown at the National Theatre Supply Company convention, has a twofold purpose. To the exhibitor it gives a definite idea of the evolution of the product he is purchasing, from the crude iron stage to the completed motor generator equipment used in supplying projection lamps with direct current.

The illustrations shown on this page are found in the film version of the product's manufacture.

Marks Bros.' Marbro, Chicago—is equipped with C-H Dimmers

Another huge investment

protected by C-H Dimmers

BEAUTIFUL architecture and impressive interior decorations represent a tremendous investment in modern theaters. Yet their effectiveness is incomplete without lighting effects to bring out all their hidden beauty—the beauty that pulls the crowds.

Knowing this, Marks Bros. protected their investment by installing C-H Simplicity Dimmers.

Past experience had proved to Marks Bros. that C-H Dimmers provide fading of light rivaling the smoothness of nightfall, regardless of varying loads—that C-H Dimmers would meet all needs, present and future—that C-H electrical perfection insures against burn-outs, or other interruptions of service.

Your investment, too, can be protected, made more profitable. C-H Dimmers are easily installed whether your house is already completed or still in the plan stage. Consult your architect or electrician and write for the booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater".

Rear view of the C-H Dimmers which bring out all the interior beauty of Marks Bros.' new Marbro Theater, Chicago. Switchboard by Major Equipment Co. Levy & Klein, Architects.

them all!

¶ Giant star of the new era in pictures! Emil Jannings. "Variety" and "The Way of All Flesh" have rocketed him into the front rank of stars in America. ¶ Ready made audiences everywhere for his second and greatest American production—

"THE LAST COMMAND." Produced by the man who made "Underworld." ¶ Jannings as the Czar's favorite, brutal, arrogant military commander. Swept down by the torrent of revolution and his mad infatuation for the beautiful woman who came to kill him. Outcast, all gone, all but his mighty, burning spirit. Then—one of the most amazing climaxes in screen history! ¶ The world will acclaim "THE LAST COMMAND" a masterpiece!

Whetting the Appetite of Consistency is as important in advertising support as it is in entertainment quality. For years Educational's advertising to your patrons has been just as steady and unfailing as the merit of its Short Features—and they have dominated the field without question.

Educational's advertising in the "fan" magazines is building star followings for your box-office.

James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay Magazine and the best known of all "fan" magazine editors, was asked to give his impressions of several of Educational's comedy stars for the "fan" readers. Here are his impressions of Lupino Lane and Charley Bowers, which are appearing in current issues of these magazines.

The "fan" who reads this advertising is a ready made customer for you. Tell him through your own local advertising when you play these comedy favorites.

An Impression of LUPINO LANE

by JAMES R. QUIRK

EDITOR OF PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE

LLOYD HAMILTON
Your Old Fun-Making Friend, in Hamilton Comedies

Chaplin's forte is pathos. Langdon's metier is infantile appeal. Lloyd's trick is the conquest of an inferior complex. Lupino Lane's is broad, clean burlesque.

"BIG BOY"
Greatest and Funniest of Child Comedians, in "Big Boy" Juvenile Comedies

I always suspect that he is going to jump on a horse and ride off in four directions. If Doug fights four swordsmen, Lupino takes on a dozen. If Mix jumps his horse over a freight car, Lane puts his nag over a barn. Nothing is impossible to him. Yet he is as futile as Don Quixote.

LARRY SEMON
Daredevil Clown Comedy Star, in Larry Semon Comedies

Most men are born clowns and don't know it. Lupino Lane can outboast the ginger ale that advertises six months' preparation for its perfection. It took 227 years to make him a comedian.

FELIX THE CAT
Rolling Cartoons, by Pat Sullivan

His pantomimic ancestry is long as a transcontinental railroad ticket. His Lupino grandfathers were Pierrot-ing on the London stage in 1700. His Lane grandmothers were the Desdemonas of their day. He himself is one of the original theatrical mergers. He was supposed to get a fortune from his grandmother for twisting his names so that the first should be last and the last should be first. But the old lady broke his heart by leaving him nothing but a good recipe for tumbling without breaking his neck.

CHARLEY BOWERS
The "Wizard," Putting Mysterious Fun Tricks into Bowers Comedies

As British as bad cooking, the Lane-Lupinos survived when the newest chip from the family numskull announced his departure to America. They never understood the lack of concentration that kept him from being the hit of the "Follies," but then they had never seen a glorified American Chorus Girl. All even went well when the boy entered the movies. When he returned and told them his movie salary his grandfather did a back flop in his grave.

JOHNNY ARTHUR
Fairest Supreme, Featured in Tuadeo Comedies

His comedies are released by Educational, but don't let that fool you. He gags and he spins, and Solomon in all his wisdom never thought up such stomach-laughs as his.

An Impression of CHARLEY BOWERS

by JAMES R. QUIRK

EDITOR OF PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE

HIGHBROW critics talk in ornate polysyllables about the ingenuity and art of the German film makers. If they condescended to witness the nonsensical genius of a Charley Bowers comedy they could drool dictionaries.

In the world's most individualistic industry, he is Aladdin and the camera is his lamp. He is a Jack of all trades and a master of one. He can act. He can direct. He can write. He can conceive the most glorious idiosyncrasy. He is a MASTER of camera wizardry.

Every short feature bearing his name proves the camera is a monumental liar. He makes hard boiled eggs hatch little Fords, turns time upside down and releases the blessing of laughter. Once in a comedy he drove a herd of elephants and donkeys into the Capitol at Washington. The learned Solons got so excited they demanded an investigation. They had been deceived by trick photography. Charley and the elephants had never been near the District of Coolidge.

I suspect Charley of a conspiracy against the school system. He is a living proof of the bliss of booklessness. All the education he ever received consisted of six months in kindergarten. Then he was kidnapped by a circus. And look at him now. In one of his recent comedies I witnessed a former Biograph director playing an extra bit.

His life has been almost as goofy as his genius. His mother was a French countess, his father an Irish doctor, and Charley was born in Iowa. After that anything was possible.

It happened. At five a tramp circus performer taught him to walk rope. At six the circus kidnapped him. He didn't get home for two years and the shock killed his father.

Before he was nine Charley was supporting his mother. He walked rope, mowed lawns, ran elevators, printed menus, broke broncos, jockeyed horses, packed pork, sketched cartoons, toured vaudeville, directed plays, designed scenery, produced advertising, wrote history, animated one hundred reels of cartoons, worked out the Bowers process, invented a camera and—grew up.

Naturally the impossible is a joke to him. His whole life has been impossible and as a practical joker he is a near-millionaire. Give this little lad a great big look.

Educational is the world's greatest producer and distributor of Short Features—exclusively. The name Educational Pictures means the best in comedies, novelties and news reels.

There is no substitute for Circulation!

PAID circulation is difficult to obtain because readers must approve of a publication before they will subscribe for it. After subscriptions have been obtained they can only be held by giving readers full value for their money. Glib conversation may momentarily influence advertisers but readers are influenced only by value.

When a publisher has paid circulation the natural and logical course is to join the Audit Bureau of Circulations and then be enabled to supply advertising clients with actual proof of circulation representations.

The membership dues in the Audit Bureau of Circulations are nominal. Even for a circulation as large as that of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" the cost is only $2.40 per week. For business papers with circulations less than 10,000 and more than 5,000 the cost is only $1.60 per week, and for those with circulations less than 5,000 the cost is only $1.00 per week.

If a publisher has circulation that can stand the test, then at these insignificant rates he can supply advertisers with that tremendously valuable knowledge which enables them to know what they are getting for their money.

As far as records are concerned, the Audit Bureau of Circulations only requires such records as any sensible and conscientious publisher will want for his own information; information which, in fact, he must have if he is to be able intelligently to analyze the buying power of his subscription lists for advertisers.

Conversation may be interesting; but facts are conclusive.

DEFINITE production plans for the next five years are so far advanced that almost half of next season's product is already finished. Box-office demonstrations of the value of outstanding Fox specials will convince the most skeptical film buyers, during the next five months, that no theatre can afford to be without Fox Films.

Did your opposition play "7th Heaven" and "What Price Glory"? Or were you as smart as Fred A. Miller of the Carthay Circle Theatre, Los Angeles?

He did such tremendous business with these Fox pictures that—with the product of every studio to choose from—he has contracted with Fox to play:

"Four Sons" the maelstrom of emotion produced by John Ford from the story of Miss I. A. R. Wylie.

"Street Angel" Frank Borzage's love lyric in which Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell actually rise beyond their heavenly heights in "7th Heaven."

"The Red Dancer [of Moscow]" Raoul Walsh's production featuring Charles Farrell and Dolores Del Rio.

"The 4 Devils" F. W. Murnau's magic bringing to the screen the glamor of circus life, enacted by Janet Gaynor, Farrell Macdonald, Charles Morton, Mary Duncan, and Nancy Drexel.

All of these pictures come to you for general release in next season's product, and, in addition;

"Mother Machree" the most sought-after picture of the last three years, directed by John Ford.

"Fazil" hotter than Sahara, snappy as its title, beautiful as a dream.

"Sunrise" inspiration of more superlatives than reviewers ever unleashed on any one picture, with a box-office record outlined in detail on the next three pages. For Profit's sake read every word of it!

ERICANS

UNIVERSAL'S AMAZING 4

On My 22d Anniversary

(No. 568.—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle
President of the Universal Pictures Corporation.)

I HAVE SOLD A TREMENDOUS NUMBER OF CONTRACTS ON FOUR OF the biggest pictures of the year—or rather I have given them away.

I'LL ADMIT FRANKLY THAT I DID NOT DO THIS OUT OF THE goodness of my heart. The plain truth is that I did not know how powerful these pictures would be. They were sold before I found out.

THAT'S A BAD THING FOR ME, BUT GREAT FOR YOU—IF YOU HAVE already signed them up. Here they are!

“WE AMERICANS,” SUPERVISED BY CARL LAEMMLE, JR., AND directed by Edward Sloman, has turned out to be far greater in every respect than “His People” which was made by the same director. It should have been sold all by itself and exploited like a million dollar negative.

“THE COHENS AND KELLYS IN PARIS,” FEATURING GEORGE SIDNEY and J. Farrel MacDonald, with Vera Gordon, Kate Price and Gertrude Astor—great scot, what a cast!—and directed by William Beaudine. This is going to pack the houses of the world.

“THE CAT AND THE CANARY,” STARRING LAURA LA PLANTE AND directed by Paul Leni—a picture which has been raved about by critics to such an extent that the adjectives are completely worn out.

NOW, AS I HAVE SAID, A VAST NUMBER OF CONTRACTS ON these pictures were signed before anyone, including myself, knew that we had the four best pieces of moving picture property in many a season.

IF YOU'VE SIGNED, YOU'RE A LUCKY MAN. IF YOU SIGNED EARLY because you know by experience that you always get something more than your money's worth from Universal, you're a smart man.

ANY ONE OF THESE FOUR PICTURES IS WORTHY OF A SEPARATE selling campaign, but with the large amount of product Universal is producing it is impossible for us to know in advance how much better our pictures are than the selling price would indicate. That's your good fortune.

MAKE THE MOST OF IT.

Clean Bill For "Sadie"

WHEN the motion picture, "Sadie Thompson," was announced it appeared that a tense and difficult situation would be created within the trade. The picture is based on the stage play, "Rain," which was a sensational success, due largely to its sensationalism, and on this account was banned from the screen by the Hays Organization.

The story was considered one of great commercial possibilities as a motion picture and several producers looked covetously upon it. One producer had the story under option but abandoned the plan of making it when the disposition of the Hays Office was made known.

Later the picture under the title, "Sadie Thompson," was started by Gloria Swanson in association with Mr. Joseph M. Schenck. When this word reached New York a storm of protest was stirred up. At one time a tentative agreement was arrived at under which the responsible heads of the leading theatre circuits agreed that if, in fact, "Sadie Thompson" was an adaptation of the story "Rain" they would refuse to show it in any of their theatres.

Meanwhile, however, the Authors' League of America and associated groups of authors were in communication with the Hays Organization registering protests against what they considered to be amounting to a censorship of their works. This led eventually to a signing of a memorandum in New York City on December 15 between the Hays Organization and the Authors' League of America, representing other groups of authors also.

This memorandum is intended to be a working agreement between motion picture producers and authors covering the selection or rejection of stories for motion picture purposes. Under the terms of this memorandum nothing stands in the way of the production and exhibition of "Sadie Thompson." In fact, Section V of the formula adopted expressly provides justification for the picture as made by Miss Swanson and Mr. Schenck.

The section referred to reads as follows:

"After a story has been rejected the author may provide a new story, with the unsuitable material removed and with a new title (written notice of which shall be given to the association by the author) and which title does not in any way suggest the old title, but using such dramatic incidents and interest as may be used and making certain the elimination of unsuitable material. Then the author may submit such new story to producing companies for picturization, as in the original instance, with the distinct understanding that it shall not be publicized nor advertised in any way that will connect the new story with the old and that it shall not be presented in any way that would mislead theatregoers."

The chief objection to "Rain" was based on the character given to one of its central figures, a clergyman. This figure has been completely eliminated and in its place there has been substituted a figure which will not give offense to religious groups. The old title has, of course, been dropped and the picture is called "Sadie Thompson," which is the name of the leading feminine character and is, incidentally, the title of the short story upon which the play, "Rain," was based.

Therefore, by formal approval of the Hays Office, objections against "Sadie Thompson" are eliminated because the producer has complied with the provisions called for in the adaptation of a story which in its original form was considered unsuited to the screen.

Hence, the incident of "Sadie Thompson," which for a time seemed to be brewing a critical situation in the trade, is ended.

We feel that Mr. Hays and his associates have arrived at a sane and reasonable understanding with the authors' associations on this and other questions involved. The complete agreement which has been worked out provides against many unpleasant and harmful developments that in the past have come out of authors' complaints about having stories rejected. The new formula recognizes the property rights of authors and provides means for enabling them to safeguard values in their stories which are entitled to be safeguarded. It provides a means for getting every good story upon the screen if such story is susceptible to any deletions necessary to enable it to conform to screen standards.

Altogether, another item of material progress has been effected by the Hays Organization.

The Conference

THE forthcoming conference in Chicago on rental contract provisions and allied questions, scheduled to open on January 31, is now the subject of many conflicting opinions and expressions in many quarters of the trade. The question of what the conference can or will provide in the way of effective accomplishment is decidedly an unsettled one. Because of past experiences many exhibitors regard the conference with deep-rooted suspicion, while others are only indifferent. There is, of course, another group which are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the meeting in the confident expectation that something important, constructive and helpful will be arrived at.

However, it must be realized that intricate and complex trade problems are simply not susceptible to immediate and forthwith solution. Advantages that have been enjoyed by one side or the other are not dispensed with readily and when conditions require concessions these, too, are not readily acted upon.

The conference assembles at a time which from many viewpoints may be said to be critical. All parties concerned realize that there are matters of vast importance to be acted upon and all realize that the new conditions which exist in the trade must be provided for.

In our opinion there is every reason to expect many sound and constructive accomplishments to be made during the conference. Every conference of this character is a milestone in the progress of the business. Any such meeting may seem at the moment not to have accomplished very much but it is only through such conferences that progress is made, that issues are clarified and adjustments made.

Simple, Fair Contract, Is Hope Leaders Place in Chicago Meet

First Day Open Forum On Contract Suggestions

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—R. F. Woodhull and Robert H. Cochrane, chairmen, respectively, of the unaffiliated and distributor groups at the Federal Trade Practice conference, have proposed that the first day of the Chicago meeting (January 31) be set aside for the contract committee to hear suggestions and that on February 1 the committee go into executive session. Thus the first day of the meeting will be an open forum.

All who wish to be heard by the committee are asked to attend the first meeting starting at noon, while written suggestions should be addressed to the committee, care of Robert H. Cochrane, 730 Fifth avenue, New York, or to R. F. Woodhull, at 745 Seventh avenue, New York.

This Is No Time to Quarrel In Public, Warns Richards Must Reach Solution or Final Say Will Be Up to Seventh Arbitrator Named by Taft, Says Seider

A simple and equitable contract, beneficial to the great majority in the industry, is the consensus of the hopes expressed by exhibitor leaders in reply to telegrams sent them by EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD, requesting that they express what they hope will be accomplished by the contract committee conference in Chicago next Tuesday following a preliminary meeting of exhibitors on Monday.

Grave Responsibility Cited

There is a grave responsibility upon the conference to reach a solution, otherwise the final say will be placed in the hands of a seventh arbitrator appointed by William Howard Taft, says Joseph M. Seider. E. V. Richards, Jr., declares that "the men devoting their time to this kind of work deserve the support and consideration of all well-meaning distributors and exhibitors, as this is not the time to quarrel in public."

Following are the opinions expressed by exhibitor leaders:

JOSEPH M. SEIDER.—The contract committee meeting this month is equivalent to the arbitration of the entire contract. Failure of the distributors and exhibitors to agree places the final say in the hands of a seventh arbitrator appointed by Chief Justice William Howard Taft of the United States Supreme Court. The public's interest in the deliberation is keen, as there are some provisions in the present contract in which it has concern.

Because of the broad powers vested on the unaffiliated exhibitors committee by virtue of the resolution of the Federal Trade Conference that created the committee, its membership has a grave responsibility which is in no way lessened by the action of the unaffiliated exhibitors group in instructing its committee not to take final action until it has submitted by mail the final draft of the entire instrument to the full body of unaffiliated exhibitors as constituted at the Federal Trade Conference.

The Chicago contract committee conferences hold out to me the hope that they will be successful in:

- (1) Eliminating the inequities contained in the present contract and bringing about an instrument that would not be lacking in mutuality;
- (2) Effecting an iron-clad provision that will prevent distributors from adding to or deleting clauses whether they nullify or not, from the standard form finally adopted;
- (3) A legal and fair system of arbitration;
- (4) The elimination of the so-called credit committees;
- (5) The elimination of block and blind booking;
- (6) The suppression of sharp practices;

(7) A clear and definite description in the contract of the product sold and purchased and a provision compelling the delivery at the agreed time of the specific productions sold to the exhibitor, and the display of an honesty of purpose and sincere effort by all the branches of the industry that will bring about a better understanding and an evidence from the producers and distributors of a willingness to sympathetically cooperate for the benefit of the industry in its entirety and not only for themselves.

E. V. RICHARDS, JR.—The most casual review of past conferences of a similar nature is convincing enough of the good that can be accomplished for the majority of exhibitors. Considering at the same time the impossibility of any national action pleasing all parties, I am thoroughly convinced that the great majority will be benefited by this conference.

The men devoting their time to this kind of work deserve the support and consideration of all well-meaning distributors and exhibitors as this is not the time to quarrel in public.

We must bear in mind that evolutionary methods with reasonable experiences furnish the only common ground that buyer and seller ever progressed upon in all commercial history and all other methods have proven destructive.

SYDNEY S. COHEN.—I forwarded communications concerning Contract Conference sent to me by exhibitor organizations and exhibitor leaders in different parts of the country to Nathan Yamins of Fall River, Mass., an unaffiliated theatre owner member of the contract committee and a lawyer.

I hope the conference will bring about better understanding and result in more equity.

Government Okays Merger of Orpheum, Keith-Albee Circuits

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The long-discussed merger of Keith-Albee and Orpheum interests would not adversely affect the motion picture industry, it has been found by the Department of Justice, and that organization will not oppose consummation of the deal, it was declared last week by Colonel William J. Donovan, assistant to the Attorney General, in charge of antitrust activities.

The department, Colonel Donovan explained, made a thorough study of the deal and found that the film houses had already invaded the vaudeville field with their presentation acts and that by using pictures the vaudeville houses would be doing nothing new. He also conferred with motion picture representatives who expressed no fears as to the result of the merger on the film industry.

As a matter of fact, it is indicated here, the move into films is about the only thing that can keep the vaudeville industry, as such, alive, the film houses with presentation acts having heavily cut into the business.

Fight Film Importation Brings Missouri Charge

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 24.—The Federal grand jury for the Eastern District of Missouri, in a report submitted to United States District Judge Faris, included an indictment voted against Williams Sievers, at one time manager of the New Grand Central theatre here, charging him with illegally bringing into Missouri motion pictures of the recent Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago.

Musician Dies in Pit as Orchestra Plays Zohmer's "Despair;" Audience Is Unaware

Intent upon the screen production and its orchestral accompaniment, the audience at the United Artists theatre, Chicago, Sunday night was unaware that a member of the orchestra had dropped his instrument when stricken by death.

The overture had been completed and the orchestra pit lowered for commencement of the picture. The orchestra was playing Zohmer's "Despair," when the French horn player, Richard Zohm, 61, sank to the floor. His fellow musicians completed the composition while theatre attendants quietly carried him back stage.

Watchmen Slay Theatre Bandit

Fox Specials to Be Given Box Office Test

An advanced stage of production has been reached by Fox Film Corporation, which, in a significant message to exhibitors, announces that definite production plans have been made for the next five years.

For next season, according to this message, Fox now has completed seven specials, each of which will be given box office tests previous to general release.

These specials are: "Four Sons," "Street Angel," "The Red Dancer," "The 4 Devils," "Mother Machree," "Fazil" and "Sunrise."

Fred Miller of the Carthay Circle Theatre, Los Angeles, whose receipts on "Sunrise" in the first five weeks totaled $10,689.63 better than his receipts on "What Price Glory," has booked the first four of the seven specials for the Carthay Circle.

Two Holdups Outwitted By Manager and Doorman

Cashier at Oakland Robbed Twice in Week—Incendiary Blamed for Blaze at New Orpheum, Eldorado, Ill.

What ample protection against banditry means to the motion picture theatre was brought out forcefully Sunday night when a robber was slain by one of two special watchmen after he had attempted to hold up the cashier of the People's theatre, Chicago.

Two bandits' efforts to rob the Bagdad theatre at Portland, Ore., last week likewise were frustrated by the quick thinking of the doorman and manager. At Oakland, Cal., the cashier of the T. & D. theatre was robbed twice within a week, while at Eldorado, Ill., a "fire bug" is blamed for an $8,000 fire loss at the New Orpheum.

The slaying at the People's theatre followed pursuit of the bandit who, feigning intoxication, had waited for what he considered the auspicious moment and then stepped up to the cashier's cage. Miss Lucile Bernard and Miss May Schaack were counting the $2,000 receipts. Miss Schaack screamed and Miss Bernard dodged below the seat.

Bandit Dragged Back to Lobby

The watchmen fired and the bandit ran into an alley. A shot brought him down and he was dragged into the theatre lobby, where he died. The show did not stop. A number of patrons ran out into the lobby, but they were not permitted to stay. In the pockets of the robber were found 16 cents and a gas bill with the name W. Graham.

Manager and Doorman Foil Bandits at Bagdad

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 24.—Art Hile, manager, and Leroy Edwards, doorman of the Bagdad theatre, frustrated the attempts of two holdup men to steal the day's $350 receipts.

The robbers timed their entrance when the day's receipts were being taken from the box office to the main office on the mezzanine floor. As the robbers entered from the men's rest room they encountered Edwards. They drew pistols and commanded him to "throw them up." He complied, at the same time backing up to the door of the office to block passage. Hile, in response to Edwards' knock, opened the door, but, seeing the two holdup men, quickly shut it again, threw the money back of the desk, crawled down a roof and made his way to the ground, hoping to trap the robbers. They escaped in an auto. Incidentally, Edwards lost his billfold and $10.

Robbed Twice in Week

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 24.—Twice within a week Miss Erva Elyn Shephard, cashier at the T. & D. theatre has been the victim of a robber. While going home with Miss Maxine Nash she was robbed of $8. The second loss occurred at the theatre, when a dapper young man stepped up to the ticket window and asked if she would give him $10 in currency for a $10 roll of quarters. She complied, and when the roll was opened it proved to be a piece of pipe with a quarter at each end.

Incendiary Is Blamed

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ELDORADO, Ill., Jan. 24.—An incendiary is blamed for a fire at the New Orpheum theatre which destroyed scenery, stage and fixtures with a loss estimated at $8,000. The front of the theatre also was damaged, but the projectors were untouched. Allis McMurtrie was arrested. The entire lower floor was soaked with gasoline, in the belief of Steve Farrar and O. L. Turner, Harrisburg stockholders.

The Casino, belonging to the same company, was destroyed by fire last April 6.

Giannini, Noted Banker, Gives 1927 Income to California University

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24.—A. P. Giannini, noted banker and prominent in the motion picture industry, has made a gift of his 1927 income of $1,500,000, to the University of California.

This sum represents the banker's income as president of the Bancitaly Corporation, of which the Bank of Italy is the major enterprise.

Paramount Makes $8,050,000 in 1927; Shows Large Gain

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation estimates its net profits after depreciation and taxes for the year 1927, including its undistributed share of earnings of Balaban & Katz, a 65% owned subsidiary, at $8,050,000, as against $5,600,000, in 1926, an increase of 44%.

The results of 1927 operations are 41% higher than 1925, its previous record year, when the profits were $5,718,000. The 1927 net profit, after allowing for preferred dividends, is equal to $12.83 per share on 579,327 shares of common stock, the average issued and outstanding during the year, as compared with the 1926 profits which were equal to $10.82 per share on 459,020 shares of common stock, the average issued and outstanding during the year 1926.

The profits for the fourth quarter are estimated at $2,400,000, as against $1,960,000, in the corresponding quarter of 1926. The profits of the fourth quarter of $2,400,000 equal, after preferred dividends, the sum of $3.82 per share on 588,690 shares of common stock, the average number of outstanding during the fourth quarter of 1927 as against $3.14 per share earned in the fourth quarter of 1926 on 574,590 shares of common stock issued and outstanding during that period.

Wilmette's Only Theatre Forced to Close Doors

The only moving picture theatre in Wilmette, a suburb of Chicago, closed its doors for good Sunday night. A rival theatre in a nearby village, which is open to the public on Sundays, is said to have been drawing the heaviest patronage.

German Government Loses Heavily in Film Venture to Promote Industry

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—Costly investment of German government capital in moving picture ventures, now recognized as failures, was revealed last week when Chancellor Marx had to go before the Reichstag and explain just how and where several million marks were expended.

He said he had discovered the hopelessness of the enterprise only after huge amounts of the ministry's emergency fund had been devoted to financing the "Phoebus" film concern, now merged with "Emelka" in an effort to create a second large German film group. It is reported the total loss may reach at least 6,000,000 marks.

What Do You Think of The Brookhart Bill?

EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD wishes to invite every exhibitor, after carefully considering the effect of the Brookhart Bill upon his own business and the industry at large, to write to us his views and opinions.

The Brookhart Bill, introduced in the United States Senate by Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, is intended to outlaw block booking and to provide legislation in connection with other trade practices in the industry. Full details concerning the measure have been provided in previous issues of this publication. If this information is not now at hand, inquiry to this office will supply it.

Exhibitors are invited to disclose their views on the Bill fully and frankly. Each communication should carry the name of the exhibitor, his theatre and town. Unless specifically authorized to do so the names of exhibitors corresponding with us on this subject will in no case be disclosed. Please address—

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY,
Editor, Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World.

Trade Paper Advertising Reviewed by Gallup at A.M.P.A. Meeting

Ratio of Value of Ad Pages to Manufacturer Depends on Ability of Individual to Use It Properly, Says President

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The members of the A. M. P. A. were given a lot to think about at last Thursday's session. President Bruce Gallup, who is generally recognized as one of the shrewdest students of advertising in the film business, gave them the food for thought.

THE meeting was a closed one, only members being permitted to attend, and the advance billing of the session, as being devoted to the subject of trade paper advertising, brought out one of the largest attendances in the recent history of the A. M. P. A.

Subject to Be Brought Up Soon

President Gallup read a carefully prepared address on trade paper advertising, which was listened to with great interest, and after some discussion it was agreed that the subject should be brought up again at an early meeting.

After stating his belief that the A. M. P. A. meetings should be open forums for problems of general interest, Gallup said:

"The motion picture business is exactly like other industries in this respect at least: we have manufacturers who have something to sell to a retailer. To assist salesmen to move their product faster they utilize the trade journals for the advertising of their wares.

"Years ago, those who were publishing trade journals in the field found that in order to get business upon a steady basis it would be necessary to donate a certain amount of free publicity space for the paid advertising they received.

"In time, as competition grew keener, it was found necessary to give more free space in order to increase their advertising revenue.

"Costing Publisher $40 a Page"

"Then it dawned upon publishers that advertising was not being bought on the selling merits of their advertising pages, but that the advertising money was being used for the purpose of buying publicity. This free space giving was costing the publisher at that time in the neighborhood of $40 per page and it had grown to such proportions that the overhead costs were alarmingly big.

"The advertising man had not as yet come to recognize the most important need for a better knowledge of real merchandising methods and for a closer study of his markets, a keener knowledge of what constituted good space-buying and what did not.

"The trade journal then began to cut down slowly on the free space giving. Upon the manufacturer's side there began to creep a realization that merchandising knowledge was the coming need and that it must take the place of that much misused word, 'showmanship.'

"Papers of Vital Importance"

"With this also came a feeling of distrust as to the value of trade paper advertising. This distrust is unwarranted and came only because of a lack of understanding of the tremendous value of the trade journal. Such a distrust sprang, not from the fact that the papers were not good, but because few had a clear understanding of the values that were there and how to use them in order to obtain the advantages of such values.

"Make no mistake upon this point: trade papers are of vital importance to any industry. But the ratio of value of their advertising pages to the manufacturer depends entirely upon the ability of the individual placing such advertising to analyze it correctly and use it correctly.

"If the trade journal, as well as its individuals, do not progress, the fault lies in the lack of ability of its executives to keep in touch with conditions and adopt new plans to meet these conditions.

"The trade journals, finding themselves in a position created by those who had the authority to buy advertising, but bought publicity space instead, decided it was time to study their own organizations better and also to know the field in which they were functioning.

"More than ever before it was plainly shown that advertising must now be sold on the basis of the return value of their publications as advertising mediums—not on the 'give' idea of their publicity columns.

"More than ever before the advertising man finds himself thinking less of the number of pages of trade paper publicity he has obtained and more of how he can get as much results from a $500 expenditure as he did formerly from a $1,000 one."

President Gallup emphasized the fact that competition had sharpened, with chain bookings, more discriminate buying by exhibitors, and a larger output of better pictures, so that showmanship is coming into the theatre and "to sell that theatre has become merchandising."

M-G-M will Stage International Sales Meet, February 15

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Exhibitors, executives and film workers from practically every corner of the world will meet in New York February 15, when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stages its international sales congress to be known as the First National Film Sales Congress, it is said.

During the congress the following film men will deliver addresses: Arthur Loew, Nicholas M. Schenck, Will Hays, Morton A. Spring, Henry F. Krecke, Felix F. Feist, Paul F. Burger, J. Robert Rubin, Fred Quimby, William Orr, David Blum, Howard Dietz, Major Edward Bowes, and Edward A. Schiller.

A number of theatre parties, visits to film laboratories and the estate of the late Marcus Loew as guest of Arthur Loew and Mrs. Marcus Loew are planned for the delegates.

$100,000 Loss, 2 Hurt in Fires Near Boston

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BOSTON, Jan. 24.—Two theatres suffered heavy damage and a third minor damage, in fires last week. The Auditorium in Lynn was damaged to the extent of $50,000. Plans have already been started for a remodelled and enlarged building to take its place. The New Bedford at New Bedford suffered $50,000 damages and two persons were slightly injured.

Fire in the Day Square, Somerville, was confined to the boiler room with small damage. All three fires broke out when no patrons were in the buildings.

Australian Film Commission Fails to Find Evidence of American Combine in Market

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—After several months of considering exhaustive testimony, the Australian Film Commission has admitted its inability to discover an American film combine in the Australian market. During the investigation, 288 witnesses were heard, only one of which asserted definitely his knowledge of the existence of such an organization, according to information received by the M. P. P. D. A. The sole witness testifying to a combine was unable to substantiate his charges with actual evidence.

Brookhart Bill Means U. S. Rule No Good without Federal Control, States Senator

New York Upstate Exhibitors and Missourians Endorse Bill—Cohen and Rembusch Issue Questionnaires

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Brookhart bill against block booking provides for Government control of the motion picture industry and to eliminate this feature would be to remove its strength.

Brookhart Says It's Control Bill

Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, sponsor of the measure, which now has been introduced in both houses, is himself authority for that statement, made in conferences with R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A.; A. Julian Brylawski, chairman of the National Board of Directors, and others.

Accompanied by Federal Trade Commissioner Abram S. Myers and A. Julian Brylawski, Woodhull spent considerable time with Senator Brookhart discussing the effect upon the bill of any changes in the contract which might be agreed upon at the forthcoming Chicago meeting. It did not appear, according to information available here following the meeting, that Senator Brookhart could see anything in the Chicago conference which might eliminate the necessity for his measure. He did agree, however, that hearings should not be held until after the meeting.

It is not likely that hearings will start before February 10, the Interstate Commerce Committee in charge of the measure being tied up with other legislation until that date, and the film industry, visitors to the senator were assured, will be given an ample opportunity to present their views.

Sydney S. Cohen also has been in conference with the senator on the bill.

N. Y. Exhibitors Endorse Bill

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—Exhibitors within hailing distance of this city are in favor of the Brookhart anti-block booking bill. These exhibitors say that they are sick and tired of being forced to accept blocks of pictures which may contain only two or three which they wish and which are outstanding pictures, and being obliged to take, play and pay for several others in order to get the few they wish. C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany, is emphatically opposed to block booking.

Exhibitors in New York state, however, are badly handicapped these days in the fact that the New York State M. P. T. O., which had its headquarters until two years ago in Albany, is no longer functioning.

Missourians Favor Measure

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 24.—The M. P. T. O. of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois has joined the ranks of the independent theatre owners' organizations that have officially endorsed the Brookhart bill. The organization is headed by Fred Wehrenberg.

At a recent meeting the organization passed a resolution urging all independent exhibitors vigorously and actively to support the measure.

Sydney Cohen Asks Opinions

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Sydney S. Cohen, as president of the "Board of Trade and Commerce of the Motion Picture Industry of the United States of America," has sent out a questionnaire to exhibitors asking their opinions on the Brookhart bill. The question asked in the circular is:

"In your opinion, will the enactment of these provisions be of benefit to the independent producer, the unaffiliated—the independent—exhibitor, and the public?"

Ohioans Get Questionnaire

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 24.—Members of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio are asked in a circular sent out by P. J. Wood, business manager, to ask their local newspapers to support the Brookhart bill editorially and to write their congressmen to assist in passage of the measure.

Rambusch Favors Proposal

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SHELBYVILLE, IND., Jan. 24.—Unaffiliated exhibitors are advised by Frank J. Rembusch, in a circular, that "if the Brookhart bill is to pass, you must go to Washington, or wire or see your congressman or senator and do it hard and fast at once." Rembusch adds that "we had such a bill passed by the House (Indiana) and if the Hays group had not delayed it, it would have been a law now and the trust and compulsory arbitration gone."

New England Theatres Operating Company Incorporates with Capital of $25,000,000

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BOSTON, Jan. 24.—Incorporation has just been completed of the New England Operating Corporation, with an authorized capital of $25,000,000, for the purpose of expanding the present properties of the New England Theatres Operating company, and as an operating company.

Samuel Pinanski, who is vice-president of the older company, becomes president of the new corporation, and Jacob Lourie, president of the older company, is now treasurer of the new corporation. Two millions of the stock of the new company is now being issued to those stockholders who have gone into the new organization from the old. The older company has owned and operated 16 theatres, and a large sum of money is soon to be expended in modernizing them, and a general expansion is planned.

Additional Congratulations on Merger

F B O Pushes Plans for Development of Film-Sound Devices

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Plans for the rapid development of film-sound tieups are being completed between F B O and the Radio Corporation of America. William Le Baron, vice-president of F B O, has been in New York for the last three weeks in conference with Joseph Kennedy, president of F B O, David Sarnoff, vice-president of the Radio Corporation of America, and C. W. Stone of General Electric.

Three laboratories containing complete apparatus have already been equipped. One of these is to be shipped intact to the F B O studios in Hollywood. A number of portable equipments have been completed for use in connection with the sound recording of exteriors.

Year in Jail for Hurling Stench Bombs Is Asked

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 24.—A bill was introduced in the Kentucky house last week to curb stench bomb throwing. Representative Harry Cochran of the thirty-third district, was author of the bill, which provides a penalty of not less than $100 nor more than $500, or a year in jail, or both.

Executives will Hold Spotlight at Board of Review Meeting

Fourth Annual Conference Will Emphasize Value of Motion Picture as Creative, Educational and Entertaining

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Wellknown speakers within and outside the industry will emphasize the value of the motion picture as a creative form of expression, a means of education and entertainment at the fourth annual conference of the National Board of Review Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

EXECUTIVES from the various fields of motion pictures are on the program for the conference, which reflects an increasing interest in them and in the board's policy of encouraging the highest type of production, increasing support of the motion picture and developing the product. Twenty-five states will be represented by delegates.

Long List of Speakers

Speakers include: Dr. John Herman Randall, director of the World Unity Foundation; Richard W. Saunders, Paramount; Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, author and lecturer; Frederick Wynne-Jones, of U. F. A.; Dr. Joseph J. Weber, Eastman Kodak Co.; Mrs. Florence Strauss, scenario editor, First National; Dr. Horace M. Kallen, of the New School for Social Research; Ned E. Depinet, First National Pictures; James O. Spearing, Paul Gulick, Universal; Professor Leroy E. Bowman, National Community Center Association; Dr. J. F. Montague, Bellevue Hospital, and Leo Brecher, Plaza theatre.

The Board of Review's "forty best pictures of 1927," selected for all around excellence in most cases, but some for particular merit of acting, plot or setting, follows:

"The Boy Rider," "The Cat and the Canary," "Chang," "Flesh and the Devil," "The Forbidden Woman," "The Gaucho," "The King of Kings," "Les Miserables," "London After Midnight," "Love," "The Love of Sunya," "The Loves of Carmen," "Madame Wants No Children," "The Magic Flame," "Man, Woman and Sin," "Manon Lescaut," "Metropolis," "The Moon of Israel," "The Music Master," "No Man's Law," "The Patent Leather Kid," "The Potters," "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," "Quality Street," "Resurrection," "The Rough Riders," "Service for Ladies," "Seventh Heaven," "Soft Cushions," "Stark Love," "Sunrise," "Two Arabian Knights," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Underworld," "The Way of All Flesh," "White Gold," "Wild Geese," "Wings," "The Woman on Trial," "The Yankee Clipper."

Listed as outstanding foreign pictures are: "Carmen," "Chronicles of the Gray House," "Crime and Punishment," "The Power of Darkness," "The Street."

The list is alphabetical and the order does not indicate preference.

Release Five Exhibitors From Blue Law Charges; Texas House Tests Law

Five exhibitors were released from charges of operating Sunday shows, in cases heard last week, while in Wharton, Tex., the Queen theatre has begun operation from noon until six o'clock on Sunday as a test in a statewide campaign to challenge the blue laws.

Three exhibitors in Memphis arrested on a charge of violating the Sunday closing law, had their cases dismissed in Police court by Judge Fitzhugh, with a warning, however, that any attempt to regulate attendance by sale of tickets or taking up a collection, would be treated as a violation of the Sunday ordinance. The managers released are Bennie Ridblatt of the Gem, D. Schwab, Lincoln, and C. G. Lawing, Ace.

In Ironton, O., Joseph and Robert Stern, owners of the Marlow, indicted by the Lawrence County grand jury for operating on Sunday, were dismissed by Judge Jones in Common Pleas court. Judge Jones ordered Robert Stern to be dismissed, as no evidence was adduced showed that he was connected with the operation of the theatre. Joseph Stern was placed on trial and the case proceeded, when his attorney moved for dismissal on the ground that the indictment was not returned within 20 days after the alleged offense.

Producers Ask Use of Radio in East to West Communication

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Applications from the motion picture industry for licenses to operate short-wave radio services between Eastern offices and Western studios, now pending before the Federal Radio commission, should be granted in the interests of efficiency, the commission was told last week by George Cochrane of Universal Film company, during the course of a series of hearings on the short-wave situation.

Cochrane painted the situation for the benefit of the commission, pointing out that close contact between studios and home offices is needed in order that questions of policy can be decided promptly. The short-wave service also would have a definite value when companies are on location in out-of-the-way points, he said, explaining that occasions have arisen where lives could have been saved had intimate contact with the outside world been available.

Universal and other producers spend from $70,000 to $100,000 a year in telephone and telegraph tolls, Cochrane said.

Louis P. Kramer Funeral Is Conducted in Chicago

Louis P. Kramer, publicist, was buried Monday at the Rosehill Cemetery, Chicago, following services at the Church of Our Saviour. Pallbearers were Charles Cohain, Harold Golinvaux, Jack Sampson, Lloyd Lewis, William Pine and Jay M. Shreck.

Lou Kramer is survived by his wife and daughter, Jane. Mrs. Kramer accompanied the body to Chicago from Los Angeles, where her husband died January 16.

Re-Takes

HOLLYWOOD.—Well the old dress suit gets an awful play this week. Three openings—three—count 'em—three. First "The Dove," then "The Last Command," and then "The Circus." And by and by we're to get our first glimpse of "Four Sons," John Ford's latest, which follows "Sunrise" at the Carthay. Life is just one opening after another for picture goers in Hollywood.

And while we're on the subject of pictures I see Fox is selling "Pickett Shorts." Some astute exhib. might turn that around and hold a carpenter's matinee.

—Excuse me a moment. Here's a fellow who wants to sell a Chow dog. No, I don't want a dog. Got all the dog I need. And besides, wouldn't give $100 for a flea bitten Chow if I had it. Now that he's disposed of, let's hop to it.

Can't Slip Out of That

See where the government is after Alexander the Great, the magician, who gets out of trunks and strong boxes, because he didn't pay his income taxes last year.

—Just a moment, please. "Who wrote 'Skinner's Big Idea?'" Why, it was Henry Irving Dodge, and Bryant Washburn played in it and FBO made it. "You're welcome."

Wonderful Climate

As I was saying, if it gets much colder here in sunny Calif. I'm going back East where they know what good warm fires are for in early morning hours.

Big News

The big news of the week in film circles according to press agents, was the fact that Laura La Plante's lisping parrot, Rollo, died last Tuesday a. m., and Mary Pickford's parrot Joe got in a terrific fight with John Barrymore's dog Sam and let out some terrible cuss words not taught him by Mary.

—Another interruption. "Yes, this is the Re-takes editor. What, $30 a case? Just in from the island of Bourbon. It can't be good at that price. Good night."

Famous Last Words

Where's my tennis racket, Meadows? P. C. Schram is in town.

Freed in Blue Law Case; Shows Were for Church

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOUISVILLE, KY., Jan. 28.—Charges of running a show on Sunday preferred against Paul Zerilla in City court last week were dismissed by Judge Fitzbaugh. Zerilla, manager of the New Grand theatre, was brought up on charges of violating the Sunday closing law during the early part of 1926.

In court Zerilla testified that he rented the house to a negro minister for $25 each Sunday. Rogers, the minister, explained that the show was run to raise funds to help build a church at West Junction.

If This Bill Passes

New York State will Be Rid of Censors

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

ALBANY, Jan. 24.—Robert Moses, secretary of state, may be called upon to take over all papers, records, etc., of the New York state censorship bureau, under the provisions of the bill that has been introduced during the past week in the legislature by Irwin Steingut, Democratic assemblyman from New York City. The bill which he has introduced would amend the state education law to the end that it would abolish the bureau in the Education department, in which is now housed the censorship commission which now consists of but one man, James Wingate, of Schenectady. The Democrats in the New York state legislature are preparing to make their big fight this year on the elimination of motion picture censorship. Governor Alfred E. Smith has let it be known that he will quickly sign any bill that can pass both houses of the legislature and which will wipe out censorship.

F. M. Brockell Gives Chicago Neighborhood New Theatre, Cheltenham

The Cheltenham was added last Friday, January 20, to Chicago's rapidly growing list of neighborhood houses. It is located at 79th street and Exchange avenue, and is the property of Cheltenham Theatre Corporation.

The new theatre, erected by Betts & Holcomb, is under the management of F. M. Brockell and Joseph Stern.

Italian is the architectural motif. Although constructed without a balcony, provision has been made for the installation of one at a later date. The organ is a three manual Marr & Colton instrument, while the seats are Heywood-Wakefield.

Pittsburgh Gets Wedge in Old Sunday Blue Law

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 24.—Pittsburgh has at last succeeded in entering a wedge in its century old blue laws. County court judges ruled Saturday that Sunday symphony concerts in the city do not violate the old laws. The decision was regarded as of state-wide importance in establishing the legality of Sunday concerts.

Will Broaden Field of Short Feature Beyond Dreams, Declares President of Educational

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—A new era in the short feature as well as the extension of synchronized entertainment to the small theatres will be brought about by Vocafilm, according to E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, which recently acquired the rights to the sound device and soon will start Vocafilm distribution through its 36 exchanges in the United States and Canada.

Called Practically "Filmproof"

Vocafilm is so simple in its perfected form as to be practically "foolproof," with original cost by far the lowest of any synchronization device on the market and practically negligible upkeep cost, says Educational, and with no charge for regular servicing and no seat tax or added fees of any kind.

"The sound record synchronized with a film is the best method yet devised for satisfactory general use," Mr. Hammons says.

"Vocafilm is going to broaden the field of production of the short feature beyond any dreams of a few years ago. Not only will theatres everywhere soon be able to present one and two-reel comedy and novelty subjects with the finest sound accompaniments, but entirely new types of short feature production especially for use with Vocafilm will have an almost unlimited field to work in.

"It is planned in the near future to have some of our Educational Comedies orchestrated and synchronized with special effects. This will give the theatre an opportunity to really give its short features the accompaniments they deserve. Those theatres not having Vocafilm, of course, will be able to use the same comedies without Vocafilm.

May Present Operas

"Educational has also been considering the advisability of presenting operas and operettas in condensed form. It is our plan to bring the opera to those theatres using Vocafilm at an extremely low figure by using to a large extent those artists either already being featured by Educational or immediately available to our company.

"In selecting operas, of course, we would choose only those best known to the public and most readily adapted to condensed form. One of our first choices probably would be 'The Mikado,' the Gilbert and Sullivan opera in which Lupino Lane, one of our outstanding comedy stars, played the role of Ko Ko when it was at the Forty-Fourth Street theatre, New York City."

"Many theatres have overlooked suitable musical and sound accompaniment for their short features, giving all the best music to the longer feature productions," Mr. Hammons said. "Other show houses have neglected the right sort of accompaniment for their short films simply because they could not afford it.

"With Vocafilm available at such an extremely low cost we hope to change all this. Comedies are often best adapted to musical accompaniment, and in many instances comedy productions are more readily synchronized than longer feature pictures.

"Take a comedy like 'Fandango,' a forthcoming two-reel picture in which Lupino Lane is starred. In addition to the orchestration to go with the continued action of the picture, it would be possible to give such special sound effects as the clinking of the castanets and stomping of the feet on the floor when Lane does an Argentine dance with the cabaret beauty. The burlesque of a bull fight might be reproduced with typical sounds of the bull ring. When the villain cracks his whip, the audience also would hear the sound of a whip cracking when the actual action appears on the screen."

Standard Machine Used

Vocafilm embraces the use of the standard motion picture projection machine and of standard motion picture film, together with a sound record, the mechanism controlling the sound record being attached to the projection machine with a simple device, both being so adjusted mechanically that the picture is shown and the sound reproduced in perfect synchronization. The sound is then passed through amplifiers and to a loud speaker in front of the screen. The entire apparatus, says Educational, can be installed quickly and easily without alteration to house or projection booth. One day of instruction and operation is said to be enough to enable any motion picture operator to handle it with ease. No special technical service or extra service of any kind is required in the booth and the installation may be made without disturbance to one moment of playing time.

The record is "played" and the actual sound conveyed to amplifiers by means of wires. Other wires lead to the stage where the loud speaker is set. The disc on which the record revolves is connected in a small space with the projection machine, thereby maintaining perfect synchronization. Any film break or break in the record can be instantly detected by the operator, and synchronism re-established readily by means of the calibration of both the record disc and the film.

The perfect tonal quality of the Vocafilm amplification in another big feature empha-

He Laughed and Now the World Laughs with Him

A Chicago man, who laughed at the wrong time in a picture theatre, was ejected from the house. Now he's suing the theatre, and the press and public are laughing and sympathizing with him.

An editorial comment in the Kansas City Star says, "Our opinion is that it takes a good deal of courage to laugh or cry at the 'wrong place' in the theatre and that there is a good deal of suppressed emotion simply for lack of such courage," and the Louisville Herald-Post adds, "Whenever subtitles develop inappropriate emotional responses, instead of firing the audience, it might be a good idea to fire the writer."

200 Mark Passed in Membership of N. Y. Motion Picture Club

National Reviewers to Illustrate Little Theatre Movement—"Drums of Love" Has Premiere—Chaplin Picture Breaks Record

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Someone slipped one over on President Al Lichtman during his recent trip to the West Coast and boosted the membership of the Motion Picture Club of New York over the 200 mark. The matter of turning the first milestone in the career of the new club is the cause of happiness among those interested in the formation of the club.

AND here is a little advance dope on club affairs which likely will be given out during the week by President Lichtman. The quarters in the Paramount building, which so many of the members were boosting as the home of the club, will not be obtained. High hopes were entertained that the floor in the Paramount Building which had been prepared for the Paramount Club might be rented for the Motion Picture Club. The committee seeking quarters, after a more thorough examination, found the Paramount floor neither large enough nor arranged for the purpose.

Also, the committee decided, the carrying charges on this site were not nearly so favorable as the propositions quoted in connection with three hotels and several office buildings, which are anxious to provide the location of the club.

Among the most convenient and favorable of these locations are propositions from the Astor hotel, the Lincoln hotel and the Park Central hotel. In addition to these, there are four office buildings in the Times Square district which are ready to make the necessary changes. It is anticipated that within another week these proposals will be in such shape as to permit the real estate committee to recommend a definite proposal to the board of directors.

It is expected also that within the week announcement will be made of the first official entertainment. The entertainment committee, under the chairmanship of William Brandt, has been planning a big surprise for this dinner. All of the ordinary and garden variety of entertainments and dinners have been discarded by the committee.

Will Demonstrate "Art" Film

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, which is acting as host to Better Film delegates from over twenty-five states during the period of its Fourth Annual Conference at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel on Thursday and Friday of this week, is planning a novel entertainment in a model Little Photoplay Theatre program.

For this purpose the board is taking over the Fifth Avenue Playhouse for the evening of Thursday.

"Your New York and Mine" this week at the Roxy is a short subject of both day and night views of New York taken from the air, achieving such vividness as to give the spectator the sensation of actually riding in a monoplane.

David Wark Griffith, pioneer film director and producer, arrived in New York last Thursday, accompanied by Garrit J. Lloyd, scenarist. The producer brought with him a print of "Drums of Love," his newly completed picture, and the first he has made independently since 1919. The chief purpose of the producer's visit is to attend the premiere at the Liberty theatre this evening, under the sponsorship of Morris Gest, in association with Joseph M. Schenck.

The Film Salesman, a publication printed by and in the interests of Motion Picture

Salesmen, Inc., comes to bat with the following, which is self-explanatory:

Dear Friend:

It is difficult for me to say whether it is an honor or pleasure or crime to inform you that Film Salesman is one year old today. The periodical, or magazine, or journal, or paper—whatever you want to call it—has earned for itself a peculiar reputation. But whatever you may think of it, it has accomplished one thing, and that is to let the film industry know that they still have salesmen, and that they are very much alive and necessary.

Now in order to celebrate the fact that Film Salesman is a year old I want to get out a real big issue. The organization that sponsors the publication would like to pay the cost, but they've handed out all their "jack" in benefits. So, in order to give Film Salesman a wonderful sendoff for the second year, I need advertisements, anything from 25c up to $25. A $35 ad will buy the publication, so we don't want any of those.

Therefore, good friends, let me hear from you. Remember, the more ads the more reading matter for our Anniversary Number—and, oh! what reading matter.

Yours till the bacon gets crisp, I am,

Chaplin Film Sets Record

Moe Mark, vice-president and general manager of the Stanley-Mark-Strand Theatre Corporation, has announced that the gross receipts for the first week of Charlie Chaplin's new comedy, "The Circus," at the Mark-Strand theatre, New York were $81,206. This figure makes a world record for attendance at a theatre of the type and seating capacity of the Mark-Strand. And it is all the more impressive when it is considered that the Mark-Strand, after fourteen years of sensational, record-breaking pictures, hangs up a new record.

The previous high record for attendance at the Mark-Strand also was made by a Chaplin picture. This was the "Gold Rush."

For the first time since the inception of its new policy last October, the Capitol theatre departed from its rule of not holding a film over for a second week's showing. The film which remains is "The Divine Woman," in which Greta Garbo proves that she is a star of considerable drawing power.

Queen Theatre, Houston, Cuts Admission Charges

E. N. Collins, owner of the Star theatre at Humble, Texas, calls attention to the fact that since publication, in the January 14 issue of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World," of an article showing how changing of prices had damaged the box office in theatres in Texas, the Queen theatre at Houston, which had been one of those maintaining standard admissions, has reduced its prices to 5 and 10 or 10 and 35, according to the time of day. Mr. Collins' letter is printed in this issue in "Letters from Readers," on page 63.

Fair and Simple Contract Is Hope of Exhibitor Heads

table contract and arbitration proceedings. In one of my series of articles, "The Exhibitor's Place in the Sun," published in EXHIBITORS HERALD in November, 1924, I then suggested that the rules of arbitration should be set by both sides and I now reiterate the same.

If the contract conference is productive of mutually satisfactory results it will permit the undivided effort and attention of the entire industry—producer, distributor, exhibitor and trade press—to be concentrated upon the constructive problem of making millions of new patrons for our theatres and for the motion picture. Unless major matters are alleviated and unless channels of trade and commerce are kept open, it will make very little difference to most unaffiliated theatre owners whether the contract is uniform or otherwise.

NATHAN YAMINS—I sincerely hope the conference of the contract committee in Chicago will bring about a new contract that will be simpler in its terms and mutually equitable, that it will provide for some phase of voluntary arbitration and the changing of the Film Board of Trade into a quasi-court rather than continuing it as a collection agency.

* * *

J. J. HARWOOD—Our committees have prepared several suggestions to place before the contract committee, but they prefer they do not become public at this time. I expect to be in Chicago personally during conference.

H. M. RICHEY—After looking over the many suggestions that have come in from almost every part of the country I believe that the hope of exhibitors familiar with the contract situation is that the new contract will abolish compulsory arbitration, will be shortened, simplified and freed from so many legal clauses, the product of too many lawyers. There is much dissatisfaction with the proposition of having six interested parties determining judgments. The feeling against compulsory arbitration is high and there is much dissatisfaction over clauses 9, 10, 17, 18 and 20. It, while being entirely legal and fair, will also be mutual, which the present contract is not.

R. F. WOODHULL—If exhibitors and distributors approach the new contract conference in Chicago with a genuinely sincere desire to face this problem squarely and find a solution of our trade differences, I am sure the deliberations will meet the ultimate of success which will mean increased happiness throughout the entire industry. Exhibitors and distributors must enter these negotiations filled with the spirit of give and take. If this is done the conference will be a complete success.

FRED WEHRENBURG—I am sure the men on the contract committee will give the exhibitors a fair and equitable contract. That is all we can hope for. The producers have an opportunity to show the Federal Trade Commission that they are willing to play fair by giving the exhibitors a contract that will be acceptable to the unaffiliated exhibitors.

R. R. BIECHELE, KANSAS CITY—We hope to be able to agree on a contract satisfactory to all concerned.

Oo-wa! oo-wa! oo—No, that sounds too much like a jazz cornet. Besides, levity should not attend the coronation of Elmer Pearson, first vice-president of Pathe, as honorary chief of the Navajos. Above Mr. Pearson is shown after being thoroughly crowned (no levity!) by Chief Sanginetso (left) and his lieutenant.

Expensive but attractive—the dress, we mean—although—But let's keep our minds on the dress that Mary Philbin, Universal star, is wearing. It's of black taffeta and net, with a close-fitting bodice and a skirt of three taffeta ruffles on a net base. Two pink velvet flowers are added.

Breaking bread — let's continue! — with the barons from Broadway. That, at least alliteratively, describes the experience of B. P. Schulberg, Paramount associate producer, when, a luncheon at the Paramount studios, as shown above, brought together (left to right) Richard A. Rowland, vice-president of First National; President Clifford B. Hawley of F-N; Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, besides Mr. Schulberg.

So long absent from the screen, Estelle Taylor has been returning post haste recently. A week or so ago her latest starring picture, Columbia's "Lady Raffles," was completed

Only an "extra" was Ruth Hurst when Astronomer Carl Laemmle discerned in her a definite sparkle. Now she has completed for Universal an important role in "Home James."

An orgy of romance and chocolate creams — and why not? Surely, a little digression from the s. and n. path is about due Lina Basquette. For what a year THIS one is to be! Pathe has given her a featured role in "The Godless Girl," which Cecil B. DeMille is directing PERSONALLY (with Marie Prevost starring). And the other day she was chosen a Wampus "Baby Star"—and everyone knows what THAT means. Hence, the orgy—and as heretofore queried, why not?

"Paramount's Stars of Tomorrow"—that is what Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president in charge of production, prophetically calls these eleven players. "They will be given every opportunity this year to achieve even greater success than was theirs last year," adds Mr. Lasky, which, coming from Mr. Lasky, is some suffix. As a matter of fact (and not of prophecy), these eleven are already credited with considerable success. For example—but let's take them as they come above: James Hall has appeared in support of a number of Paramount's feminine stars; Nancy Carroll is now working in "Abie's Irish Rose;" Richard Arlen, of course, won downright fame in "Wings;" and Mary Brian has been a well-known featured player for a couple of years. Lane Chandler has had important roles in a number of 1927-28 pictures, as has Louise Brooks, while Jack Luden is on the point of winning Western fame. As for Ruth Taylor, she is about to be America's most celebrated blonde, for she is the one gentleman will prefer in a picturization of the Anita Loos novel and play. Charles Rogers, already an established leading man, won his chevrons, like Arlen, in "Wings." Which brings us to Paramount's first "team"—Fay Wray and Gary Cooper, who have started a career as "the glorious young lovers" in "The Legion of the Condemned." Taken together, they are "new blood" for the screen, and past performances commend to them a jolly good welcome.

Fred Stewart slaves on a South Sea island that he may send money back to Charlotte Guest in New York for her to save till their wedding. Charlotte uses the money to further her stage career. Learning the truth, he tricks her into coming to Lamu Vita. There only love has power, and it rules for their happiness. Of such is F B O's "South Sea Love," from which the scenes above are taken. Patsy Ruth Miller is shown as Charlotte, and Fred Shumway as Stewart. Ralph Ince directed.

Changes in Pathe's Sales Forces Given Out by Phil Reisman

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Phil Reisman, general sales manager of Pathe, announces several changes in the sales organization.

Stanley C. Jacques, who has been district manager of District No. 4, has been made divisional sales manager for the Central West, with headquarters in the New York office. Robert Mochrie, who has been branch manager at Pittsburgh, succeeds Jacques. His headquarters will be in Cincinnati. B. M. Moran is the new branch manager at Pittsburgh, and George Collins becomes short subject sales manager there.

Fred Aiken, short subject division sales manager in the Central West, who has had his headquarters in Chicago, has been transferred to the New York office, but continues in the same capacity. Ralph Morrow, district manager for Atlanta, has resigned. He is succeeded by Dan Michalove.

E. C. Leeves resumes his former position as branch manager at Dallas and J. L. McKinney becomes short subject sales manager there.

C. U. Martin has resigned as branch manager at New Haven and the office will be in charge of District Manager L. J. Hacking until Martin's successor is appointed.

Julius Stern Goes to Coast to Launch Films For Season of 1928-29

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Julius Stern, president of the Stern Film Corporation, has arrived here to launch the greatest production season in the history of the firm. Accompanied with him from New York was Sigmund Newfield, production manager, who had gone to the East for conferences on the new season's product.

The present line of Stern comedies, including series of "Let George Do It," "Mike and Ike" comedies, "Keeping Up with the Joneses" comedies, the "Buster Brown" comedies and "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, and according to Stern, a greater amount of money and effort will be expended on these products this season.

Bessie Love Feminine Lead in Columbia Film

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Bessie Love has been selected for the leading feminine role of Columbia's "Broadway Daddies," listed as one of the company's outstanding productions for the new year.

Among her latest appearances have been "King on Main Street," "Lovey Mary," "Going Crooked," "Lost World," "A Harp in Hock" and "Dress Parade."

Columbia has spread to Mexico City with the opening of offices by Columbia Pictures de Mexico. Here are (l to r) Senator Jose J. Reynoso, president; Matthias Radin, Columbia executive; Augusto Genin, treasurer of Columbia Pictures de Mexico, and J. M. Ruiz, Esparza.

Export of Films for November Has Decrease

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A total of 21,004,590 feet of motion picture film, with a value of $662,844, was exported from the United States during the month of November, according to figures just compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic

This was a decrease from the preceding month, when 23,586,617 feet valued at $670,676 were shipped. November shipments by classes included 16,361,979 feet of positives valued at $422,759, against 18,815,776 feet valued at $461,535 in October; 727,021 feet of negatives valued at $141,559 against 737,293 feet valued at $83,277; 2,337,737 feet of raw stock valued at $73,111 against 4,741,655 feet valued at $110,510; and 1,577,853 feet of film to non-contiguous territories valued at $25,415 against 1,291,893 feet valued at $15,354.

Purchase of Theatre at 17 Cites Seff for Title of "Youngest Exhibitor"

Cecil R. Seff became owner of a motion picture theatre, bought with money entirely earned by himself, when he was 17 years old. That nominates him to the Herald-World club of "youngest exhibitors" as sure as—well, as it is put in Chicago, as sure as shootin'.

Seff is now only 23 and owns and operates two theatres in Iowa. He has just completed one of the finest small town houses in the state at Holstein. Seff's State theatre is modern in every respect and attractively designed as well. But Seff spends most of his time in the immediate direction of his New Radio theatre at Correctionville. This theatre he is planning to enlarge, making the seating capacity 500 and installing a large stage. During most of the six short years that he has been an exhibitor he has owned more than one house, and occasionally three.

Well, there must be some advice tucked away in his story somewhere. Perhaps it is, "Start young, plug away, and you'll get there." But then, after all, maybe a lot depends on whether you're a fellow like Seff or not. Can anyone else equal his record?

Gest Gives Premiere of Griffith's Latest Film "Drums of Love"

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—D. W. Griffith's "Drums of Love" was given its premiere tonight at the Liberty theatre by Morris Gest in association with Joseph M. Schenck. This is the "Film Master's" first independent film production since 1919 and marks the beginning of his work under his new contract with Joseph M. Schenck and Art Cinema corporation. It is also the first Morris Gest presentation of a motion picture since the "Miracle Man" decided to devote one half of each season to the cinema as a member of United Artists.

"Drums of Love" is based on the historical incident of Francesca di Rimini, and was adapted by Gerrit J. Lloyd. The time of the story is the seventeenth century when the King of Portugal with his court moved to South America temporarily. The action is filled with tense feudal hate, love, sacrifice, and forgiveness, painted on a vast background of medieval pageantry by the master brush of D. W. Griffith.

Discovered by Erich von Stroheim, and now rediscovered by Griffith, Mary Philbin is the star of the picture. Others in the cast include Lionel Barrymore, Tully Marshall, Don Alvarado and William Austin.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Louis Blattner has an idea. But the puritans of the district don't think he has. That's the point at which it becomes a story, although the idea is a story in itself.

Louis Blattner sold out his theatre interests in Manchester, acquired an option on the book, "Jew Suss," by Dr. Feuchtwanger of Germany, and set out to make a motion picture colony at Elstree, where British International has studios. He got the railway company to change the name of Elstree station to Hollywood, England. But the "straightlaced" of the community demurred. Who will win out is still a question, but they do say that Blattner is a showman!

First of Incandescent Meetings Held; Shots Made by John Arnold

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Members of the American Society of Cinematographers together with Fred Beetsen, representative of the Motion Picture Producers Association met at Warner Brothers Studios last week, where they made tests of a set lighted entirely with incandescent lamps. At the same time tests were also made with the regulation arc lamps now in vogue at all studios. In all these the various makes of films and both panchromatic and straight stock were used.

John Arnold, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cameraman, made the shots in both instances. Mr. Arnold was responsible for the photography of "Wind," Lillian Gish picture in which he used incandescent lamps exclusively. It is the belief of the cameraman that these lamps will replace the arcs that have been in use in the studios for past years.

Up to now little incandescent lighting has been used. George Barnes, cameraman of the Banky-Colman pictures, has used them some times on his close-ups and long shots but has always bolstered his light with the arcs.

According to Dan Clark, president of A. S. C., and Victor Milner, Lasky cameraman, meetings will be held to test and improve the progress of this type of lighting, which if developed will prove a great saving to producers.

Peter Mole has been manufacturing various types of incandescent lamps almost entirely and lamps for the test shots were furnished by the Mole-Richardson Company.

"Hangman's House" Begun by Ford; Maynard Starts Work

Al Rogell Directs "Palomino"—Freelance Players in Market for Contracts at Reduced Salaries—Irvin Willat and Tom Mix Begin on Big Productions

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 23.—Jack Ford began actual shooting on "Hangman's House" during the past week at the Fox lot after having spent as much as six weeks working over the scenario from the Don Byrne novel of world wide note.

Big Budget but No Big Names

Ford is prepared to make a highly finished film production from the story and it is believed Fox Films is planning an unusually heavy budget for him. The cast boasts no big names, a characteristic of many Ford pictures, but boasts people whose ability is without question. June Collyer, a year ago unknown, was pronounced a find after her work in "Four Sons" last summer and was chosen by him at once for this cast.

Larry Kent, Earl Foxe and William Farnum are well known and bring up the balance of the principal part of the cast.

Marian Douglas in Maynard Film

Ken Maynard stars in "Polomino," an Al Rogell production for First National. The girl in the cast is Marian Douglas. Al is making a bigger picture than usual in this and hopes to bring Maynard's name to higher planes than even heretofore realized. Charles Rogers is producing the picture.

Mix Begins "Painted Post"

Tom Mix began work on another big Western last week, titled "The Painted Post." Opposite Tom appears Natalie Kingston. Gene Ford is directing

Willat Begins Universal Film

Irvin Willat has finally begun work on his picture at Universal after a series of unfortunate incidents not easily avoided. It is called "The Michigan Kid" and is the story which he has been preparing several weeks. For the leading roles he has borrowed the Warner-MGM player, Conrad Nagel, and also Renee Adoree.

Very few other pictures of any note were started last week, but on the other hand very few pictures, big or little, were completed. The result is that production is apparently normal so far as labor is concerned.

Players Want Contracts

Production—to the regard of the player—is subnormal. Very few calls are going to the free lance player from the big line companies. The bulk of the calls for free lance talent is for work at Poverty Row studios or for work amounting to a brief stay at others. The conclusion drawn from that situation is that producers hope to save added amounts usually necessary in obtaining free lance service. Free lance players are in the market for long term contracts. They are offering their services at a lower figure than they were six months ago. Few are being signed.

F B O began work on a 23 day picture, "Stocks and Blondes," a Gold Bond which Dudley Murphy is directing with Jacqueline Logan and Gertrude Astor in the big roles. Skeets Gallagher and Albert Conti are in supporting parts.

Sally O'Neil in "Saturday Night"

Sally O'Neil is starred in a picture Tiffany-Stahl is making called "Saturday Night." Ralph Graves has a supporting role while George Archainbaud is directing.

Another new film in its first week of production at F B O is "Sally of the Scandals," a Master Showman special in which Bessie Love and Alan Forrest are featured. Lynn Shores is directing.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Francis Agnew will adapt a May Edginton story for Fox. Miss Agnew recently did "The Joy Girl."

1 in 6,000 Extra Girls Averages 5 Days a Week

Only one girl in the 6,000 extra girls in Hollywood averages five days' work a week, according to figures compiled by the Central Casting agency in Hollywood and published in the February Photoplay.

Her earnings have been slightly more than $40 a week, the average daily pay for extra women being $8.32. Eight in the 6,000 have averaged four days a week; 21 have averaged three days. The other 5,970 have worked two, one or no days, says the report, but still each arriving train brings new girls to Hollywood.

"Wings" Opens Run at Biltmore, Large Audience Pleased

"Circus" to Open at Chinese Theatre—Scenarist Sues Fox to Restrain Use of Title, "Sunrise," at Carthay—Warner Brothers to Sign Hobart Bosworth

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—"Wings" the big Paramount spectacle sailed gracefully into the Biltmore theatre, Sunday night, Jan. 15 and captivated a large and enthusiastic audience with its sure-fire thrills, sweeping battle scenes and pleasing love story.

The opening was without the usual display of sunlight arcs, roped off streets and flashlight cameramen. Many aviators attended the opening performance.

THE picture was presented without stage presentation, but a special musical setting for the engagement was arranged by John S. Zamecnik, with a large orchestra under the direction of Luigi De Francesco. The large audience was thrilled and applauded almost continuously during the war scenes, which were very well directed. The enlarged screen enhanced the air scenes and acoustics back stage added immeasurably to the reality of the battles above the clouds and the crashing of planes to earth. The picture opened several months ago in New York and has played other key cities of the country, but this was Los Angeles' first glimpse of the Paramount production.

Three New Shows in Los Angeles

This is a busy week for the first-nighters. On Monday everybody had to put on his or her best bib and tucker and sally forth to the New United Artists theatre to attend the opening of "The Dove," Norma Talmadge's latest photoplay. All of the United Artists' stars attended the Western premier and hundreds of others. On Thursday the new Emil Jannings picture, "The Last Command," opens at the Million Dollar theatre, and the same evening Sid Grauman holds an "Irving Berlin Night" at the Chinese theatre, to be attended by many film celebrities. This is the final week for "The Gaucho" and the Chinese will be dark for a few days prior to the opening of Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus" on Friday night, Jan. 27.

Sennett, Christie, Universal Closing Plants Temporarily

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24.—Mack Sennett announced today that the studios will close tonight indefinitely. The shutdown is due, according to his admission, to the fact that the studio has filled its quota of short features for Pathe. It is also reported that Pathe has made no contract for any further Sennett comedies and that it is possible that the short product will no longer be distributed by that company.

According to the announcement of Henry Henigson, superintendent of Universal studios, that lot will be closed for six weeks as was previously reported in these columns. The date of closing is set for February 1. The reason for closing is the present advanced stage of production.

Sennett will not open before April 19, said the comedy producer. It is believed that by that time arrangement for his future distribution will have been determined. And at that time he plans that his new site at Studio City will be open and ready for occupancy.

The Christie studios will close for a month February 15. It is an annual closing for that lot, however, and no conjectures are being offered as to reasons or rumors.

F B O Shakeup Precedes Le Baron's Return from Visit to Eastern Office

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 24.—On the eve of William Le Baron's return to the F B O studios here last week resignation of nearly a dozen production men were accepted by the company. Among the departing members of the staff are Earl Wingart, publicity director, George Minnig, head of the properties department, and George Lavender, head of the transportation department. Wingart has accepted an offer of a local modiste shop to act as publicity and exploitation representative.

Other resignations are said to be under the company's consideration.

Tom Mix to Get $8,500 per Week in Vaude; Leaving Fox

Western Star to Go to South America to Make Own Pictures; to Take Camera and Technical Crews to Argentine in June; Fox Officials Silent

By DICK HUNT

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Upon the termination of his contract with Fox in March, Tom Mix will make a ten weeks' appearance tour over the Orpheum Circuit. Included in his 12 minute act are Tony, his famous horse, and one of the star ropers of the Mix company. Tom will also take a hand at some crack rifle shooting. He will appear in key cities and finish his tour in New York.

To Receive More Than Bernhardt

It is reported that Mix will receive a salary of $1,000 in excess of any other star act that has ever appeared on Orpheum time. Sarah Bernhardt is said to have been the highest paid artist, receiving $7,500 a week.

A quick trip across the country to straighten up his business and June 27 will find him sailing to South America to begin a two year picture contract for the Hollywood-Argentine Cinema Company, which is headed by Fred Kley, of this city, and James S. Douglas, of Buenos Aires.

To Take Crew to Argentine

Mix will take his own camera and mechanical crews to South America but will recruit all actors for his pictures there.

Various rumors have recently been broadcast from Hollywood regarding Mix's future. He was reported as signing with the Barnum and Bailey Circus, the Orpheum Circuit, and the latest that he was to retire.

Fox Officials Silent

Officials of the Fox studio, who some time ago denied that he was leaving, now have no comment to make regarding his signing with the South American company.

The actor asserted his estate in Beverly Hills will either be leased or left with a caretaker. His other California interests are not to be disturbed by the trip.

Town Filled With Idle Fame Seekers Who Find Various Means of Self Preservation and Self Destruction

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Occasionally when a James Murray or a Gilbert Roland comes to the attention of America's fans the influx of potential talent here grows by leaps and bounds and when a Sally O'Neil or a Clara Bow appears ten thousand girls get a yen for Hollywood.

The town is filled with types. It has more idle people in it than any place its size in the world. They are idle chiefly because they do not choose to work. They have felt the urge to play in pictures and with the "call" they are determined to buck the game to the last ditch. As a result of that—

A GIRL from the East last week decided to go home and having no money either to eat on or to buy a ticket located an undertaker who was shipping a body and persuaded him to let her accompany the coffin. . . .

Another girl stuffed paper under the cracks of her bedroom door and turned on the gasplate without applying the match. . . .

A young fellow I have often seen called me Christmas morning and wished me "Merry Christmas" and added that his stocking had been no emptier than his stomach. Kindly enclose check. . . .

Another became so persistent in his petitions for U. S. currency, securities not listed, I told him I would get him a job washing automobiles at a nearby garage where he could earn $25 a week. He said thanks, he would just as soon starve as to leave the motion picture set.

They want to act.

One fine young fellow, here last summer to enter the trade of title writing, turned door knobs two weeks without finding a job. He disappeared a few days and returned, explained that he had run low on funds and had spent the time in his room with a quart of cherries purchased with his last 25 cents.

Fortunately this is a land of harvest.

A young woman who has tried for two years to break into good roles finally impressed a producer last summer. He gave her an optional five year contract, instructing her he planned to make a star of her in short time. He was sincere and explained he hoped she would take good care of herself and work hard. She did not heed his advice, however, with the result that she has recently received word that her five year contract will be suspended until Bill Hart does a toe dance.

came to Hollywood 18 months ago determined to give the thing a real try. He tells me he has made an average of $30 a week for the past 12 months. He has done it by sitting near the telephone and by staying sober. He shrewdly got himself a sideline job that augments that $30 a week and feels no dependence on motion pictures.

That kind, however, is very rare in Hollywood.

Horse, Taxi Accidents Injure Adoree, Tryon

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Accidents to players held up work on two productions last week. Renee Adoree, who was working in a Universal picture, was injured while riding in a taxicab to location, when the cab struck a truck and threw her against the meter, cutting a gash above her left eye. She will be confined to her home for at least two weeks. Glenn Tryon, another Universal star, was hurt last Sunday when a horse he was riding charged another horse and Glenn's leg was crushed between the two. He also tore the ligaments of his arms, and will be laid up for several days.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 24.—Raoul Walsh and his company have returned from Truckee, Cal., where they have been shooting the exteriors of "The Red Dancer of Moscow." These scenes of the Russian revolution have been made in the snow and the players are over-joyed at finishing the picture in the steam heated stages.

Dolores Del Rio, Charles Farrell, Voris Charsay, Dorothy Reviere, Ivan Linow and Andre De Sigurola make up the cast and Charles Clarke is photographing this Fox special.

Smiling Through

By Rufus McCosh

OUT in front of the building on Hollywood Boulevard where I has my Publicity and Exploitation office, they is always a bunch of male character actors which is "between pictures." Some of them is so far "between" that a dollar bill looks as big as a Navajo blanket to 'em, but they all calls the big directors and producers by their first names, and if any picture is a flop these is the babies which can tell you why it flopped. Around the corner on Cahuenga Avenue in front of a haberdashery shop and a saddle and harness place, is the cowboys, and they don't mix with these other artists tho they is all in the same game. But when these birds work, they work, no foolin', and they seems to eat more regular anyhow. At that, I guess, they don't eat as often as the boys who still tends the cows back on the ranch.

I goes into the drug store on the corner to get me a double coke one mornin', havin' been entertainin' a couple of clients the night before. At the soda fountain is two of these cowboys, and when I gets a good look at one of 'em I nearly falls off the stool. It's Bugs Bailey, and me and him used to have one of the classiest soft shoe acts on the Orpheum circuit. If he's a cowboy I'm the Prince of Wales!

"Well, I'm a son of a gun," I says, "if it ain't you!"

He winks at me and kinda cocks his head towards the other cowboy. "I has been frequently took for someone else before," he says, "you seems to have made the same mistake," he says. "Excuse me," he says, and he turns to the other feller. "Don't let me stop you, Bill," he says, "I know you're in a hurry, but I wanta finish this here malted milk slow like."

The other bird gives him a funny look and then laughs and walks out.

"You almost spilled the beans, Benny," says Bugs, "ain't there somewhere we can go, and have a little talk?"

"Come on up to my office," I says. "Is there a reward out for you?"

It seems that Bugs was doing a single act in Kansas City when another actor on the bill who has a trained horse, kicks out and because Bugs has been friendly to him and his horse while he's sick, he leaves the horse to Bugs and Bugs gets the idea of bustin' into the movies by shippin' himself and his horse to Hollywood, and posin' as a cowboy which has a trick horse trained in the great open spaces, between times when he's chasin' horse thieves, as all cowboys does accordin' to the movies. It's a good gag at that and he gets in quicker than he could have if he had claimed to be an actor with a circus horse. Se he don't want no one to spoil his game by callin' him a "hooper."

He tells me that him and his horse "Cute Hoofs" does a few bits in pictures and has just worked in a couple of two-reel comedies which gives him a chance to put the horse through his tricks and don't require no rough ridin' which Bugs can't do. However, he's had a run in with the producer which can't see that Bugs and "Cute Hoofs" is worth important money yet and won't come across with a raise. They had had words that morning and Bugs ain't quite sure whether he quit or was fired. It all happened sudden, he says. Anyhow, he's through and all he's interested in right now is the telephone number of my bootlegger. Bugs is one of these periodical drinkers and this seems to him a good chance to get that outa the way. I tries to reason with him.

"Listen, Bugs," I says, "all you needs is a manager to talk to these here producers. You has been right lucky for a newcomer, but you see yourself what comes of it. Now I am well known in this town and they won't be able to put nothin' over on me. But if you'll go fifty-fifty with me I'll attend to the business end and get you the publicity you and "Cut Heels" needs to get the big time money here. You know me, Bugs, and you know I'll see that you get what's comin' to you."

"Yeah," he says, "after you get yours!

Where do you get that fifty-fifty stuff?"

We compromises on me agreein' to accept thirty percent which was more than I expected, and after we signs up he beats it. Says he has an engagement. I makes him promise to stay on the wagon. I have my suspicions, but this is a free country, almost, so what can I do?

Then I calls up the bird that made the two-reelers and tells him that I am handling "Cute Hoofs" and his owner's affairs and he says what the hell does he care, and hangs up on me. So I sends out a story to the papers about "Cute Hoofs" bein' offered a European contract and writes a letter to some other producers callin' their attention to the wonderful work done by "Cute Hoofs."

A couple days later I gets a call from the company Bugs had worked for. They want to know if I is still handling "Cute Hoofs" affairs. I tells them I am, and they says they is willin' to forget Bugs' fit of temperament and take him on again at the old figure, one hundred a week. I says that is not satisfactory. They says I better take the matter up with my principal, but I says they will have to advance their ideas, and they rings off. I know I can't take nothin' up with Bugs right now so I don't name no definite price. That night I calls up Bugs' hotel again but they ain't seen him.

The next mornin' the company phones again and advances to two hundred a week. I almost accepts but thinks I'd better stall a little to give Bugs time to get into shape.

"I'll have to consult Signor Bacardi," I says, "his ideas is five hundred a week," I says, "but I'll try to make him see things more reasonable," I says.

The way that guy hollered you'd of thought I was committin' murder. The mildest thing he called Bugs and me was robbers, and when I heard that I knew somethin' was up. So I just says I'll call him up in the morning and I rung off. Seems like it was my turn now.

I looks all over town for Bugs then, and loafed around his hotel until after midnight, waitin' for him to come in, tho the clerk tells me he ain't been in for five days. He don't come in that night either, and I can't get track of him nowhere.

The next mornin' I calls up the producer again and tells him I'm sorry but that five hundred is the best I can do, as Signor Bacardi is very firm.

After explainin' all over again just what he thinks of me and Signor Bacardi he comes up to four hundred and I had to hang up to keep from sayin' "All right."

Now I starts in to look for Bugs in earnest and at last one of the cowboys around the corner tells me that he seen Bacardi down in L. A. at a small hotel down on Main St. I hires a taxi and beats it down there but I find that he was requested to give up his room the night before and that he walked out sayin' he didn't need no room anyhow. I'm nearly crazy now but I can't do nothin' but wait, so I goes home.

Next mornin' the producer is on the phone again and he ain't callin' me no names today. He first asks if $500 is the best I can do, and when I says it is, he says it's too much

Tenth Year

Mack Sennett Comedies

THE STUDIO PREVIEW

IT may interest you box office specialists if we print the star's opinion of the picture rather than if we print our own opinion just for a novelty.

First National previewed "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," a comedy, at the big Westlake theatre and the cast turned out in fair shape. Jack Mulhall was there; I believe I saw Lucien Littlefield; and I know I saw a number of character actors. Dorothy Mackaill missed it and the following day she explained she had seen the picture once and didn't care to catch the preview.

SHE was surprised possibly that the audience laughed upheavily and admitted that she hoped she would not have to do Turkish Bath roles in the future. Jack, who had heard them laugh so upheavily, was everything but loquacious but "thought it was a good show."

It's none of your business but Eddie Cline, the corpulent director, agreed with the audience and offered "Ben Hur" and "The Big Parade" as other examples of good show business.

Eddie is that way.

So take your choice.

I agree with these production experts—it is inexpensively made and relies on its gags for most of its entertainment. But why always judge a picture by the bankroll that has been hurled at it? Big Boy Williams is one of the least expensive players in the cast of principals yet he garners more real laughs than any other one person in this picture or 50 others. Cline made him laughable because Cline presumes it is necessary that we keep this old public of ours in a good humor.

There are a lot of box lunches bought and sold in the story and there is a lot of running here and there before the action finally settles down in the Turkish Bath emporium where Ma is spending her three hours and $5.00 on Ladies Night. Pa's arrival with Mulhall is through the window and quite inadvertent. When Lucien Littlefield,—or Pa,—gets into one of the shower baths Eddie Cline fools you and does not turn on the water as he would have if it had been a Mack Sennett picture.

But enough has been said. As I say, Dorothy didn't like it, I did and Jack Mulhall was indifferent. So take your choice (as you would have done anyhow).

"A GIRL IN EVERY PORT" doesn't sound like a particularly striking piece of screen entertainment but oftentimes photoplay titles are very deceiving. That is the case with this Fox production. At the Carlton theatre, where it was previewed the other night, it was greeted with gales of laughter and Hollywood audiences are pretty hard boiled. There are several outstanding points to the Howard Hawks production, aside from the excellent direction. It's the best work Victor McLaglen has done since his "Capt. Flagg" in "What Price Glory." It also brings to light the hidden screen talents of Robert Armstrong, late of the stage success, "Is Zat

So?", and what a foil he makes for McLaglen. McLaglen plays "Spike" and Armstrong is "Salami" and the story revolves around the adventures of these two happy-go-lucky roisters of the sea in various cities of North and South America and Eastern and Western continents. McLaglen portrays the role of a big-hearted, hard-fisted first mate on a tramp schooner, who has sailed the seas for years and has an address book full of sweethearts. He meets opposition, however, and determines to settle scores with another sailor who has been "beating his time" in several ports. Finally the two do meet and become bosom friends until "Spike" falls in love with the chief attraction of a carnival company, "Mlle. Godiva" who plays with "Spike" until she gets all of his money. "Salami" gives him some good advice about "Mlle. Godiva," as he had known her in Hoboken under another name, but he suspects "Salami" and goes to beat him up, only to save him from a terrific fight in a cafe and they decide to forget "Mlle. Godiva." The scenes in Amsterdam, Buenos Aires, and in Panama where they mix it with the police contain delicious comedy bits. The whole picture registers entertainment and holds the attention throughout. Good camerawork by L. W. O'Connell and R. J. Bergquist adds to its value. Sidney Lanfield and Reginald Harris are credited with the comedy construction and both deserve much credit for clever ideas. The principal feminine character is played by Louise Brooks. She is beautiful to look upon and has ability besides. She is the girl "Spike" meets in Marseilles and who almost breaks the friendship of the two sailors. Natalie Kingston has the "lonesome American girl" role stranded in the South Seas at Christmas time, and Maria Casajuana is the dark-eyed maiden of Buenos Aires. Sally Rand, Gretel Yolyz, Natalie Joyce and Gladys Brockwell play girls in other ports. The titles are exceedingly clever, the work of Malcolm Stuart Boylan.

"THE PRINCE OF PEANUTS" is an original story, or rather a series of comedy gags, written by Jack Foley and William Craft. It deals with Tryon putting over a publicity campaign while masquerading as a prince of a mythical country. This country's biggest asset is their peanut crop. Due to the publicity the country sells the crop and is able to stay on the map.

Glenn Tryon's antics kept them in a gale of laughter from start to finish.

Tryon gives a clever performance and shows marked improvement over his previous attempts. Stories with pathos and logical situations will tend to make Tryon one of the leading comedians in the business.

Marian Nixon as the young newspaper woman adds beauty and charm to the picture. Her scenes while interviewing the fake prince are exceptionally well done.

The director, William Craft, had one thought in mind, getting the most number of laughs possible in seven reels. His audience last night was very appreciative and this end was accomplished perfectly.

The titles help a great deal in putting over the comedy gags and much credit is due Albert De Mond.

Use Newsreel to Build Prestige and Exploit Whole Show, Is Tip

Radio Broadcasting of Newspictures Makes for Excellent Recitations and Arouses Curiosity, Says Addison

[The following article by H. M. Addison, managing director of the Great Lakes theatre at Buffalo, N. Y., was written for the Moving Picture World and will prove of particular interest to all readers of the consolidated publication because it bears directly upon the service of "What I Did for the Short Feature," instituted last week in this department. This article deals with short features in general and the newsreel in particular.]

By H. M. ADDISON

Much has been said and written anent the value of short subjects. For years short subjects have constituted a bone of contention that has resulted in prolonged discussions that have led nowhere—except a greater variety of opinion.

Must Study Patron's Reaction

But, after all, there is only one judge whose verdict on short subjects most unbiasedly fixes their worth. And that one judge is none other than that self-same paying public whose verdict is the difference between the success and failure of your program.

True, there is no direct means of checking the definite value of short subjects via the box office—for they are a part of the whole show bought and paid for through that box office.

So we have to go direct to the patron himself. We have to study his reaction. We have to lend a careful ear to his comment while short subjects are in the process of their unfolding. We must observe his reception.

We approach him from the angle of manager whose one purpose is to satisfy his every entertainment want.

As Necessary as Long Films

And it is from this personal contact with the ultimate consumer—of all things cinematic—the moviegoer, Mr. and Mrs. Public—that we draw the conclusions we shall discuss more fully in later paragraphs.

To begin with, short subjects are as necessary to the entire motion picture program as the so-called feature offerings. One cannot do without the other. A program with merely a long picture is no program at all.

A program is made up of various units—of which short subjects are by no means minor members.

Let's take the most popular short subject of them all—the newsreel.

Newsreel Complete in Itself

Personal experience has taught me to respect this all mighty and important member of my every program. In fact, the newsreel is unit—it is a complete show in itself, for in its unwinding we behold living episodes animated with romance, with adventure, with drama, with tragedy, with suspense, with pathos—with life itself.

The value of the newsreel to the showman is without limit.

It is the very mirror of civilization—and because it is that it stands in a class by itself, the only unit on any program that maintains a high entertainment quality and consistently superior artistry week in and week out.

No company can produce 52 knockout pictures in any one year. They vary not only in

Mr. Exhibitor! What Are YOU Doing for The Short Feature?

This department's new service, "What I Did for the Short Feature," got away to a flying start last week, and already has proved its value to exhibitors. You all read what Buckley and Sayles have done at Albany and "Pop" Linton at Utica. This week we hear from Addison at Albany. Next week you'll find out about the Texas situation.

Now, let's hear from many more of you. You want to help the other fellow, just as this department does, and you want to be helped, too. Just jot down some notes on what you have done to put over any short feature in your theatre, and mail them to "The Short Feature" Department, Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World, 407 S. Dearborn st., Chicago. I thank you!—E. A. R.

entertainment values but in box office magnetism. That is because they are artificialities.

Mirrors Life Itself

But not so with the newsreel, for it constitutes the reality—life in the very making. And what more interesting drama or comedy is there in this sphere we call the universe than life itself?

That fact should serve as ample hint to the alert showman. That fact alone should serve as a stimulant for the promotion of bigger and—yes, better—business through the medium of the newsreel.

The newsreel is box office material.

Every day millions of newspapers are read by millions of people everywhere. But great as is the newspaper it is secondary to the exalted position that today is occupied by the newsreel. Why? Because the public more than ever before finds in the newsreel all those qualities that contribute so essentially to the making of a great drama or comedy.

Appealing to the eye via pictures—animated pictures—has mirrored the world's doings in such a fashion that the newsreel has become not only an important unit of every well-balanced program but an actual necessity to the man and woman who pays his way at the box office. The sensation created by the pictures of the Lindbergh transatlantic flight—not to mention hundreds of other notable episodes—stands out as concrete evidence of the box office possibilities of the newsreel.

It cost producers and distributors of the Lindbergh newsreel pictures thousands of dollars to turn them over to exhibitors for public exhibition. But those thousands of dollars brought millions of dollars to the box office of motion picture theatres.

Box Office Versus Routine

Every newsreel contains box office material—if properly exploited. But the showman must be quick to differentiate between the box office items and the routine.

Local events of natural events are adequately covered by the newsreel. Publicizing their re-enactment on your screen paves another path of gold to your box office.

These means of turning newsreels into quick cash, however, are not unknown to the showman.

But there are other ways. The newsreel is the one screen offering that appeals to everybody—the old and young folks, the home-girl and the flapper. Its appeal is universal. This cannot be said of the bigger productions. One picture may make an especially strong appeal to one class of theatregoers and not to another. That's not so with the newsreel. Its appeal is unanimously general.

Which suggest other ways of making every

Standby Society Starts In Tribute to Sheerin

Death was the only obstacle that could prevent John Sheerin, owner and manager of the Sheerin theatre in Chicago, from bettering his own record of showing Pathe News each Monday for the last 20 years. When Sheerin died a week ago the end was written to a standing order for the newsreel placed more than two decades ago. Now the theatre at 653 North Clark street soon will pass into other hands.

We are sure that Sheerin would have welcomed a challenge to other exhibitors to show a better mark than that. Consequently this department here and now starts the SHEERIN STANDBY SOCIETY, with the late Mr. Sheerin as the first charter member, this tribute being paid him for having stood by one newsreel for so many years. Anyone who can better or come close to the mark set by the late theatre owner is welcome to join the society.

can of newsreel film worth its weight in gold.

First and most important is the utilization of the newsreel as a prestige builder for your house.

This can be accomplished through a campaign of institutional exploitation, namely, the education of theatregoers—the public—to a point of actual appreciation of the newsreel.

By directing the attention of your school teachers to the educational qualities of the newsreel you can win not only their co-operation but wholehearted support as well, for their very teachings to their students are visualized in a manner that stresses those lessons in a never-to-be-forgotten fashion.

Emphasize Entertainment Value

This same angle of approach may be assumed in reaching parents. But in appealing and selling the latter the entertainment quality of the newsreel can also be emphasized, for be it remembered that the most successful stage plays and pictures are inspired by episodes—the drama and comedy—of life.

Art students, patriotic societies, civic organization and others can be approached from the angle of education as well as entertainment.

These approaches make for prestige—and the newsreel is your ace prestige-builder.

Unlimited Exploitation

Now for the box office angle—and the exploitation possibilities of the newsreel. The latter are unlimited. Let me cite just a few that come hastily to mind:

Now and then newsreels show the latest importations from Paris. Here is your cue to advertise the exhibition of the latest Parisian models. A powerful magnet for women. The sporting pictures give you food aplenty with which to sell the men and boys.

But the newsreel's exploitation possibilities are not limited merely to the old avenues of public approach. The advent of the radio has broadened these possibilities of the newsreel and I can say from personal experience that the radio broadcasting possibilities of the newsreel cannot only make for excellent recitations but a description of their news units develops a curiosity that heads straight for the box office.

This latter fact I have substantiated—for I have noted that my every radio broadcasting of Fox News—which we feature on our every program—our telephone girls are kept extremely busy answering callers who inquire as to the time the newsreel will be shown.

I have not gone into minute detail of the newsreel. I have tried to deal with its value as box-office magnetism generally.

The day of the newsreel has arrived. To me it is indispensable. It is indispensable because it is not only consistently good entertainment but a goodwill vehicle without parallel.

And with the humanization of the newsreel via the application of Movietone or other speaking devices, I say, unconditionally, that it is rushing to a height where it stands in a class by itself.

The greatest compliment that I can pay the newsreel is that it is the only product on the market today maintaining a high quality of entertainment—the brand that not only satisfies but gives the exhibitor a maximum and quick turnover.

Donovan Makes First of New Series Based on Noted Short Tales

Famous short stories are being made into two-reel dramas by Frank P. Donovan at the Tech-Art studio in Hollywood. "The Necklace," by De Maupassant, is the first completed, with a cast including Mary Alden, Jean Girard, Emil Chautard, Bill Cody, Maurice Costello and William Strauss.

Others to be made in the series are "Nobody's Luggage," "The Bet," "A Desert Passion," "A Cigarette Maker's Romance," "The Girl with the Golden Eyes," "A Piece of String," "Will o' the Mill," "God Sees Truth," "The District Doctor," "The Deserted Village," "Marie Roget," "The Cloak" and "The Queen of Spades."

Shows Come—

"Mickey" Is Glowing Example of What May Be Accomplished

By BYRON GAY

That which has gone before is only an indication of that which must follow; hence this article. When Irving Berlin wrote "You and the Song are Gone but the Melody Lingers On" the song expressed more than dribbling sentiment. This is true of everything pertaining to the amusement world. They have long since forgotten the cast of "The Merry Widow," but the "Merry Widow Waltz" still remains. Millions and millions have never seen grand opera, yet how many are there who cannot join in with the most popular melodies, such as "Madam Butterfly." Shows come and shows go, but the melody hits live forever.

Music Is Neglected

Music is the Heart, the Soul and the Liver, for every single production of any description where the human heart or human emotions are concerned, and yet how surprising it is that such brilliant men as the motion picture producers themselves have apparently neglected this issue. They seem to have the idea that a love theme to a picture is only incidental, and leave it up to an organist or an orchestra leader to use his own judgment. The producer never stops to think that the organist is often forced to play the wrong theme, because he hasn't quick access to the right one.

See What "Mickey" Did

The most glowing example of what a song can do for a producer, was years ago when Mack Sennett produced "Mickey." Mr. Sennett did not wait to finish the picture, but had the song written, completed, and published eight months in advance of the picture. He announced it on the screen and the success it achieved is history. The picture "Mickey" has long since been forgotten, but the whole world today can sing "Mickey."

Play That Thing!

Play that thing!—is a favorite remark made by the fans of AL KVALE whenever he does a neat solo on his sax—Al was just a darn good saxophonist only a few months ago in Paul Ash's band, when old lady opportunity knocked at his door—then with a touch of her magic wand and presto! Al was a band leader in his own name at the Norshore theatre, Chicago, where he now holds forth—well, all we can say is, the kid is clever and watch his notes.

Evans at the Organ

Alvin Evans, formerly featured organist of the Aztec theatre, San Antonio, is now holding the same capacity at the Gensa theatre, a new picture house that just opened in Waukegan, Ill.

ORGANISTS!

Villa Moret, Inc., have the following special illustrated slides now ready, and organists will do well to get in touch with their Chicago, New York, or San Francisco offices.

The Legend of the Everglades, introducing "CHLO-E," a weird, haunting, compelling melody from the Florida swampland. . . . It is both Indian and Negro in character, with an underlying rhythm. The slides are in keeping with the melody and lyric, and are actual photographs of the Everglades. A real song of the swamp.

A Spanish Fantasy, introducing "AN OLD GUITAR AND AN OLD REFRAIN." A truly great song, beautifully illustrated. The version by Walter Hirsch and the song by Gus Kahn and Neil Moret.

A Venetian Serenade, introducing "MOONLIT WATERS," a colorful idea with slides that portray and carry out the Venetian atmosphere.

Experiments Disclose That Units

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

A report reaches the Editor of this department that the Publix production headquarters for the middle western southern territory will be transferred from New York to Chicago. Up to a few months ago band units now touring the circuit were all sent out of the New York office. Some time ago we carried an article in this department to the effect that Presentation production should be carried on in Chicago, and according to our prediction then a temporary headquarters was soon established here with a production staff casting and staging the band units from the Chicago Theatre, Chicago.

Production May Stay in West

This arrangement went on for a number of weeks, much to the satisfaction of theatre managers on the Southern Middle Western Publix circuit. Immediately after Publix and Loew affiliated their booking offices and carried on an agreement to exchange units over each other's theatres, someone in the New York office conceived the idea that production of these units could be carried on from one office and the New York office was decided for this purpose.

After considerable experimenting with various units it has finally been determined that an Eastern idea does not always click in the West and vice versa. Therefore, our advice was again exercised by transferring the production of Western band units to Chicago, this time it may stay here.

Local Color Is Necessary

Now that Publix have additional theatres on their bandshow circuit, and Loew have merged their booking activities, it is very necessary that local color be injected into the various units that are to tour these theatres.

State-Lake, Chicago, Gets New Organ

The Orpheum Circuit is undergoing through some changes of policies for their combination houses now playing pictures and vaudeville. One of the changes was inaugurated this week by the installation and dedication of a new mammoth Wurlitzer concert organ in their State-Lake theatre, Chicago. Hazel Hirsch, for ten years in charge of the organ duties at this house will become the featured organist and will offer solos and original stunts at each performance. This new step in combination theatres is a sign that organ music will become a greater part of motion picture theatre entertainment, more so than heretofore.

ter at the McVicker's theatre, Chicago, during the time Paul Ash made his first appearance in town, is slated as one of the producers who will stage and supervise these units that will hereafter play the above territory out of the Chicago production office. Harry Gourfain and Charles Neggemeyer, now popular as producers for the Norshore, Senate and Harding theatres' bandshows, will also produce units that will tour this circuit. In all probability Petroff will be in charge and supervise the production of all bandshows, leaving Chicago for the road.

Units Open at Norshore

Hereafter all bandshows opening at the Norshore theatre, Chicago, where Al Kvale is permanently situated as the band leader, will play the Senate and Harding theatres, also of Chicago, and then take to the road, opening first at the Capitol theatre, Des Moines, and the regular route thereafter.

Kansas City goes back on the circuit with the new Loew Midland theatre. Additional houses are the new Worth, Fort Worth, the new Alabama in Birmingham, and Loew theatres in Baltimore and Washington.

It was further learned from an interview with executives of the Publix production staff that the first Chicago constructed unit will open at the Norshore theatre the week of February 20. All talent for these units will be secured in Chicago through the William Morris agency, of which Max Turner is the resident manager.

Since Nat Kalcheim, formerly with the Junior Orpheum booking department, has joined forces with the Chicago Morris agency, his services will be used in an executive position which will enable the agency to utilize the many years of practical experience and knowledge of artists and their salaries, in which capacity he shall become associate supervisor of bookings for the agency.

William Morris, Jr., is expected to be in Chicago shortly to assist the office in laying

It is invaluable to the exhibitor for the simple reason that he can work in co-operation with the music dealers for window displays and the record companies for a machine in the lobby. It will be played by the dance orchestras in the cafes and dance halls, and be broadcasted on over six hundred radio stations in the United States.

The writer has been approached on dozens of occasions to write a song for some picture. This began five years ago when he received a wire from Mary Pickford asking him if he would write a song for "Rosita." The writer was tickled to death until he learned that the opening performance was less than three weeks distant from the date of the telegram. Several times songs have come out after a picture was produced and become popular, but it must be remembered that the pictures were months and months old before the song reached its popularity. In other words, the publicity value was lost.

Songs Play Big Part

Recently the De Mille Studios, releasing through the Pathe Exchange, had a song written for Leatrice Joy's starring picture, "The Blue Danube." It was done far enough in advance so that the copies were out, the orchestrations were being circulated and it should be pretty well in the air by the time the picture is released.

Mack Sennett, who, after all, is the "daddy" of all such tie-ups, is giving almost as much of his time in helping to put the "Waltz Theme," "The Good-bye Kiss," written for his picture of the same title, as he is to the picture itself.

out a general campaign in order to secure additional theatres to book.

A. J. Balaban in Charge

Morris S. Silver, general booking manager for Balaban and Katz and their Chicago affiliated theatres, will personally supervise the booking of all talent that will hereafter appear in the Balaban and Katz or Publix theatres in the West, which are booked exclusively through the William Morris agency.

A. J. Balaban and Sam Trinz will become supervising executives of the new circuit booked out of Chicago. A point of interest to be made clear is that all units leaving Chicago will travel intact with scenery and costumes, but will play in front of a band now permanently located in these theatres along the route, with the personality leader officiating in the roll of master of ceremonies.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Being unable to bring Paul Whiteman's band to Concord, we hit upon a novel idea about which I am enclosing a reader for your paper on organ solos. It may read: Brad Braley, Capitol (Concord, N. H.) sprung something entirely new on his audience last week, by playing "Among My Souvenirs" on the organ in unison with Paul Whiteman's Concert Orchestra, while the record was being played on an Orthophonic Victrola. Its success was marked by the public's generous approval. Slides of the song were used for community singing as an encore.—J. C. Lund, Mgr. Capitol theatre, Concord, N. H.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I have not forgotten you—just holding off a few weeks until things clear down here.

Thank you for that Radio Bit—it was good of you. In the meantime am sending photo as promised and my bill will follow soon after.

Thanking you again, and trusting you are well and happy.—Ernest Hares, Organist, St. Louis, Mo.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Thanks for the letter I received a few days ago! My solos this week are "A Musical Conflict," featuring Irving Berlin's "The Song Is Ended" and "Together We Two," also a number of his other compositions with special lyrics. The "conflict" was on whether the audience cared most for ballads or fox-trots. Went over very nicely. The other solo "The College Glee Club," a community sing novelty, in which a number of college songs with special lyrics were interspersed with the current song hits. Yours truly tagged himself as very collegiate and solo went over like a million. Thanks again.—Ramon Berry, Organist, Alamo theatre, Chicago, Ill.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I wish to thank you for the wonderful criticism you gave Mr. Dieterich. We appreciate it doubly, because we know how very just you always have been in your criticism.

My husband has been so busy he hasn't had a chance to run up and talk to you. He said this morning that no matter what, he must run in to see you before this week is over. With kindest wishes and thanking you again, I am—Mrs. Roy Dieterich, Chicago, Ill.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Please run following ad in the HERALD. You may prepare same in most effective style and at lowest cost to me. Please run same about four times.

Also, can you advise where I could get in touch with the Helen DeVoll Stock Co.? Thought probably you might have their address.—H. F. Ankrum, Mgr. Gem theatre, Balaton, Minn.

Romola Remus Enters Presentation Field

United Bureau of Attractions, with offices in the Lyon & Healy building in Chicago, are representing Romola Remus, a well-known entertainer and composer. Miss Remus, who specializes in pianologues, is the author of the composition called "Romola," taken from George Eliot's book of the same name. This week she is making her debut in motion picture theatres by appearing as a special attraction for two weeks at the Oriole Terrace theatre, Detroit. This theatre is connected with a cabaret of the same name, which was directly responsible for the naming of Dan Russo and Ted Fiorito's Oriole orchestras, now nationally known.

Ransley Starts Rumors

Specht Goes for Publicity

Paul Specht, director general of all Marcus Loew stage bands and in charge of all the organizing and installation of stage bandshows in the Loew theatres, has issued a novelty press circular in which press notices and articles about Specht from the various trade publications are reproduced. The most prominent excerpt in this four-page circular is the entire reproduction of the presentation page appearing in the Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World. The exploitation of Paul Specht bands and other novel publicity is being issued from the offices of L. A. Nixon of New York City.

Joey Does a Paul Ash

Joey Lichter, orchestra leader for Balaban & Katz Central Park theatre, Chicago, is doing a stage bandshow stunt the first half of each week. The last half the band is in the pit playing regular overtures and for the photoplays. Belle Melrose, sister of the Melrose Brothers, Chicago music publishers, has replaced Edgar Amstein here as the featured organist.

Irwin Returns

Charles Irwin, well-known musical comedy artist and recently master of ceremonies for Balaban & Katz and Publix Unit, is back in Chicago in the same role at the Diversey theatre. Irwin is working in conjunction with Joe Kayser, the band leader.

Keates Back with Ash

Henri A. Keates, popular community organist of Chicago, now playing at the Uptown and Tivoli theatres as guest organist, will return to the Oriental theatre next week, where he will be stationed permanently as the featured organist. Keates came to Chicago two and a half years ago with Paul Ash at the McVickers theatre and since the opening of the Oriental he has made as large a following for his type of work as Ash has for his bandshows.

STAGE SHOWS

San Francisco Warfield

Week Ending January 20

Rube Wolf, whose versatility rivals Heinz 57 varieties, is back at the Warfield, and proved a show in himself. The stagershow he headed took 45 minutes to run off and the crowds hollered for more. Rube is a real clown and dances, sings and plays a cornet divinely or devilishly at will. In addition to his clowning he's a real musician and showed that when he opened his act with selections from "Faust," with his orchestra of 16 on the stage.

The Hollywood Beauties, in winter costume, danced in imitation of ice skating and Rube inquired that if snow makes snow balls, why moths don't make mothballs.

In honor of Irving Berlin week, Rube and His Super-Soloists played "Dawning." Four Cheer Leaders in college costume sang a medley of blues and Ruth Miles, who has doubled for many screen stars, gave a wonderful dance. The Hollywood Beauties offered a patriotic medley, and Miss Ong, Chinese singer, sang "He's Mine, All Mine." She was to have followed with a Scotch air but declared that her throat was too tight.

The stagershow closed with a sequel to "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," entitled, "I Walked Back From the Buggy Ride," a number which allowed Rube Wolf full swing for his clowning talents. You have to hand it to him, he is a real showman.

Brooklyn Strand

Week Ending January 20

Art Kahn, the current master of ceremonies, went into his third week with enough added popularity to prove that he is getting in a stride which should carry him along to unusual success at this house. The big presentation in which Kahn was the central figure was "Festival of Syncopation."

Auber's "Fra Diavolo" opened each of the deluxe performances and being played by the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra under the direction of Willy Stahl. This overture, which has not been played in some-time here, took nine minutes and was received very warmly.

The second incident introduced in a return engagement Madame Elsa Stralia, programmed as "the sensational Australian soprano." She appeared on the apron of the big stage and sang an aria from Verdi's "Ernani."

Next came a dance number by the Mark Strand Ballet Corps, in the form of a novelty, called "Southern Roses" and done in waltz time. The girls were costumed as colonial belles of a bygone day and the setting represented an exterior of a colonial mansion.

Then came the big act, "Festival of Syncopation," with Art Kahn billed as "a frolicsome, friendly fellow." The featured artists included Smith and Hedley, Charles Jolley, Elsa Stralia and the Serova Dancing Girls.

The stage was backed up by a silk fabric drop and the arrangement of the musicians was changed from that of last week. The routine was as follows: The orchestra opened with "Tiger Rose." Kahn then brought out Charles Jolley, tenor, who sang "Just That One Hour." Next the Serova Dancing Girls were introduced and did a line dance to the tune of "Dainty Miss."

Kahn then had the piano rolled out and obliged with several popular selections. Freddy Smith and Joe Hadley, "Those Somewhat Different Dancers" followed with some very comical steps. Madame Stralia then appeared for her second number in this week's program. She sang "Just A Memory."

A special arrangement of "Shaking the Blues Away" by the entire company was the "hot finish."

New York Roxy

Week Ending January 20

The Roxy Symphony Orchestra opened the program with an Intermezza from "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Finale-Concerto in E Minor played by the First Violin Section.

"Your New York and Mine" was next shown. This was a Visigraphic Picture of New York accompanied by very appropriate musical scores by Werner Jenssen.

Le Charme De La Dentelle was the first stage presentation. The curtain rises on Jeanne Mignolet dressed in beautiful white lace standing by a large lace-covered jar singing. The Ballet Corps appears in little yellow lace costumes and render a dance followed by the Sixteen Roxyettes in black lace costumes.

This ensemble serves as a background for Maria Gambarelli who appears with Nicholas Daks and George Kieddon in old fashioned costumes. They present a realistic dance of jealousy between the two men for the girl's favor. The Ballet Corps then appear again in one or two choruses and the lace curtain falls on the entire ensemble.

"The Shadow Song" from "Dinorah" was sung by Beatrice Belkin dressed as a French peasant sitting on a little stool in front of a blank curtain on which was reflected her shadow.

Addison Fowler and Florenz Tamara presented A Mexican Shawl Dance which was very beautifully rendered and showed their usual grace and ability.

The curtain next rises on a scene behind an inner lace curtain—Jeanne Mignolet and Douglas Stansbury leading the ensemble in Nocturne. The ensemble is dressed in white robes. Behind them by means of a screen is depicted an ocean just after the sun has gone down and the evening shadows are beginning to fall.

A nautical revue "Anchors Aweigh" was the next presentation. The curtain rises on the deck of a ship showing the entire company dressed in sailor and boating costumes. The ensemble sing the opening chorus followed by the Cook Sisters, Jean Ribera and Marian Rich who with "ukes" sing "We are Only Sailors' Sweethearts."

Eafini Geerse and Alexis Rothov present Burlesque Classique which consists of an imitation of two ballet dancers with a lot of falling, throwing and jumping around the stage. This kind of performance seemed to delight the audience.

"Three For Jack" then was sung by Douglas Stan- (Continued on page 45)

bury assisted by the male chorus. Next came Frank Berner in "Jack Ashore." He enters with three empty bottles stumbling across the stage and going through all kinds of twists and turns to show the effect of the liquor upon him. He is very gifted and was appreciated by the audience who recalled him several times.

The Russian Cathedral Choir then sang a number followed by three skaters—Steve Mulroy, Margarette McNece and Walter Ridge—who presented many breath-taking acts and antics on their roller skates. This was assisted by the entire ensemble for the finale.

Indianapolis Indiana

Week Ending January 21

Playing its premiere performance, "Rainbows," a new Publix revue produced by Boris Petroff, is at the theatre this week. At the close of the week the revue is to go to St. Louis and then over the regular circuit, closing in New York, where most of the Publix shows start.

This week a considerable amount of necessary changing was made, the shows the first of the week being somewhat spotted in entertainment quality, which perhaps must be expected of a premiere.

Three new songs are introduced, "Broken Hearted Bluebird," "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella," and "I Have Found My Rainbow." Jean Geddes, even with her attractive personality, is not the most wonderful of singers, but she got a good response from the audience the first two days at least. It is more than likely the three principal songs are not adapted to her. Personally, this reporter could not give any one of the three songs much.

It must be said, however, that the newness of the sets and the costumes do much to add to the attractiveness of the revue. The Petroff girls, dancers for the revue, are all that might be expected. They are easy on the eyes and know revue dancing.

Affie Martin, in an acrobatic dance, is one of the best in her line seen here for some time. And she pleases the audience. Freddie and Eddie are agile dancers also, presenting several novelties and some new and intricate steps.

Lyndon and Farnum, who burlesque an Apache dance, are all that might be asked in the entertainment line. Pall Mall, a blackface comedian, who also might have a better voice, gets over with personality and a good line of songs.

The revue, of course, needs polishing, which may be done immediately, and should end in New York the equal of the usual stage presentation.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending January 20

A tableau overture, "Bizet Melodies," was the orchestral prelude with Charlotte Allen, soprano, George Goedecke, tenor, Pol Plancon, baritone, and Frank McDonald, violin soloist, as assisting artists. The singers were in a sort of frame, and represented a living picture, so to speak. A very artistic setting, anyway. The now famous weekly Arthur Martel organ concert composed of selections from the popular song writer, Irving Berlin, featuring his latest hit, "The Song Is Ended."

On the stage Gene and the band boys presented "Blue Plate," a production of John Murray Anderson. Everything was done in blue and white, Dutch style (including Gene and the boys). A big blue plate formed the back drop.

"Two Little Wooden Shoes" was the first number sung by Lorraine Tumber, and danced by the Foster Girls. They wore unusual costumes of blue and white oil cloth, and all had wooden shoes. They did a tap dance with an added feature. The girls carried a large basket of flowers in each hand, and these baskets contained bells of different tunes. As the girls danced, they apparently worked an electric switch in the handles of the baskets, the flowers were lighted up, and the bells played a real tune. The audience certainly enjoyed this original idea.

Gordon and King gave us a "Dutch Treat" in the shape of a novelty tap step and trick dancing. Tom Long and Sally Small put on a breath-taking juggling stunt that went over big. Incidentally, the Long-ness of Tom and the Small-ness of Sally made them a funny couple, but Tom sure could sling around a mean Indian club.

As mentioned before, everything was done in blue, even the music, which was "Rhapsody in Blue," by the Met Merrymakers, featuring a piano solo by Gene, who played and directed the orchestra at the same time.

The Foster Girls presented a "Study in Blue and White." Their dancing and attractive costumes made a pretty picture. Myers and Hanford managed to get "in Dutch" in their comedy act. They sang some snappy songs and played the musical saw. And could they play—oh boy! They had to come back for three encores, and would probably still be coming for more if Gene hadn't gone on with the next number, which was the fascinating Lorraine Tumber again, singing "Among My Souvenirs."

No Dutch scene would be complete without skating, so Koehler and Edith staged a fancy roller skating act that made our hair stand on end. Their stunts showed a lot of teamwork and practice.

"Windmill" was the title of the finale. The blue plate drop was changed for a windmill, and the Foster Girls did acrobatic feats on this as its arms slowly went round and round. The rest of the company gave us a farewell treat of songs and dances. An attractively-staged and well-acted performance.

The film was "Wife Savers," with Beery and Hatton.

San Antonio Texas

Week Ending January 7

A simple but effective and beautiful overture production was put on by Manager Bob Blair of the Texas the week of January 7. It was called "Indian Fantasy," and introduced "In the Land of the Sky Blue Waters."

Special trailer on as orchestra pit ascended, with house lights coming up as trailer closed, fading down to soft lights, red floods on orchestra, Ernest Hauser conducting.

At the refrain, drapes parted, revealing scrim, with flame spot on Indian tepee and local singer. At the side of the tepee was a semi-practical pine tree, and at the base a campfire. At close of song, curtains closed, orchestra ending with mounting blare of brass.

The overture was very well received and appreciated by all lovers of music and beauty.

The picture for the week was "Beau Sabreur," together with the Publix stagershow, Don Galvan, master of ceremonies.

Kansas City Mainstreet

Week Ending January 20

"Diversions A La Mode" was the title of the stage program at the Mainstreet this week, Walter Davison and His Louisville Loons appearing for their thirtieth consecutive week as the stage orchestral attraction and rendering popular selections as the overture.

Cecile Blair and Webmar Brothers were seen in an act titled "Fast Steppers," consisting of various interpretations of different dances. Bobby Jackson had a novelty act, consisting of vocal and dance numbers, as did Donohue and Barrett.

The Knox Comedy Four's act was spiced with humorous dialogue and musical numbers.

Salt Lake Capitol

Week Ending January 7

The Salt Lake audiences were unanimous in calling "Moonlit Waters," the Fanchon and Marco Stage presentation offered at the Capitol here this week, a magnificent and colorful offering.

This presentation opens with a dance done with light rubber balls against a background of moving clouds. The huge, but light silver balls used in this dance creation gave a beautiful effect and from the time the first curtain was drawn one of the most gorgeous sets ever presented here was witnessed.

A deep blue sky, mystic moon and twinkling stars add to the effect.

Alberti, the band leader here, made his appearance by dropping, seated on a half moon. Then came specialties by the world famed "Foursome," four good-looking college youngsters who sang immensely well.

Made Iki, noted Japanese prima donna, sang several numbers, among them "Madame Butterfly."

The Dancing Millards, Sally and Ted; the Pearl Twins, and Pat and Katherine also offered songs and dances.

Alberti and his band offered a special group of numbers in keeping with the New Year spirit, while Alexander Schreiner at the Wurlitzer was in his usual good form.

This musical offering was made broadcast from station KSL during New Year's Eve and Day.

The picture offering was "The Shepherd of the Hills" which broke all holiday records at this house during the New Year's celebration.

Chicago Granada

Week Ending January 22

The show with Charles Kaley and his band this week at the Granada is called "Fine Feathers," and the show opens with a large bird cage before a velvet drop. Inside the cage are the Granada Girls and Elaine Pring, who sitting in a large ring suspended in the cage sings, "Fine Birds and Fine Feathers." The band is heard from behind the curtain.

The Granada Girls open the doors of the cage and come out to do a dance routine. A drop comes down before the cage as the girls finish their routine before the curtain. A toe dancer does a short dance with the girls.

Charles Replaces Murtagh

As we go to press we learn that Milton Charles, for six years featured organist with Balaban and Katz in Chicago, is to become solo organist of the Chicago theatre, the loop's deluxe house. Before coming to Chicago six years ago, Charles was organist for Samuel Goldwyn, who at that time operated the California theatre in Los Angeles. Previous to that, he held the same capacity with Sid Grauman for three years. It was during the time that he was with Goldwyn that Balaban and Katz made him an offer to come to Chicago. Not knowing conditions and the climate here, Charles agreed to sign a six months' contract only. A point of interest was the fact that the six months' contract turned out to be a six-year contract as Charles has been in Chicago ever since. At that time he was one of the three most popular organists, the other two were Jesse Crawford and Albert Hay Malotte.

As the girls exit the curtain rises to reveal the band sitting within another huge cage. Kaley enters to lead his band through "Beautiful," and to sing the chorus. The number gets a good hand.

Eddie Kapp enters to do a fairly good tap and eccentric dance. He puts over some good turns but he's not quite good enough to put the steps over the way he should. However, he gets a hand that no one could complain of.

This is followed with another band number, "Just Love Me," with Kaley singing the song.

Three girls, The Adams Trio, follow to do a unique act, an adagio dance, and it's better than many such dance numbers seen with a man to do the heavy work. The girls have a good act and it goes over in great style.

Oscar Lorraine follows with a lot of foolishness. He plays a violin and leads the band and pulls all sorts of burlesque. And he's funny, no kidding. The audience laughed and applauded enough to satisfy any performer.

For the opening of the finale the Janet Sisters, dressed in beautiful plumes and carrying fans made of plumes, do a good fan dance.

Then the finale begins with a fashion parade of all the Granada Girls. Some very beautiful costumes are displayed, as the band plays "Fine Birds and Fine Feathers." The set with all the girls and beautiful costumes is enough to dazzle your eyes but the wrong sort of music fails to add the punch to it.

Pittsburgh Grand

Week Ending January 21

The show started with a bang, David Broudy and the Grand Orchestra gave a beautiful rendition of "My Maryland" selections, which was a pleasure to listen to and got the biggest hand of the show and well worth it. Special mention goes to Elias Breeskin, concert master and solo violinist for his arranging and solo work.

After the news, Pathe and Paramount combined came the Four Symphonists, piano, violin, cello, and soprano soloist who ran through a gamut of numbers both classical and popular.

Then the Six Dixie Daisies, six men in blackface playing banjos, one also does a cornet solo and two do buck dances, although a poor example of this type.

Lloyd Hamilton comedy "Papa's Boy" and Sills feature "Valley of the Giants" also on the bill.

San Antonio Texas

Opening with medley of "Student Prince" airs, the current Texas theatre overture, "Student Prince Selections," presents two extremely good and adaptable voices, Mariam Floger, and Elmer MacDonald, singing "Deep in My Heart."

Ernest Hauser conducts the Texas Grand Orchestra giving the instrumental accompaniment to the featured "spot."

Bob Blair, manager of the Texas, devised a back drop of myriads of vari-colored roses on a black background, with a reproduction of the original rose arbor in the New York production of "Student Prince." The Texas has gone into a policy of presenting the overture productions each two or three weeks, in addition to the regular Publix Stageshow.

Philadelphia Fox

Week Ending January 14

The Fox Theatre Orchestra played the overture "Philharmonic Echoes," based on the "Prelude in G Minor," "Tambourine Chinois," and "At Dawning." The latter was very effectively sung by Grace Yeager in a rich contralto voice.

Will Williams and Fred Ross with solemn, foolish stare, do some amusing eccentric dancing.

The two "Black Jacks," George Le Maire and Rex Van kept the house in gales of laughter from the moment they came on the stage until the final quip. The slow drawl of Van makes their clever lines doubly funny. Their act was heartily applauded.

Eva Clark, prima donna of "Sun Kissed," sang several songs in a clear, sweet voice. She has a delightful stage personality.

The whole program was entertaining but there were no outstanding features of unusual interest.

Chicago Oriental
Week Ending January 22

"Questions of 1928" were left to the very capable personage of Jay Mills and his opening of this week's presentation show was in true musical comedy style. Pertinent questions of the day were asked by this young reporter, who had for his stage background a black curtain on which were designed gold question marks and at the tip of each question mark the Abbott Dancers took upon themselves the responsibility to answer many questions of importance. There was one question upon which they all agreed when asked who was the greatest stage band leader, and that was Paul Ash. The question mark curtain was then drawn to each side and displayed a stage in most pleasing colors of black and red.

Paul arrived and immediately introduced a Chicago society soprano—Elizabeth O'Donnell—who sang "The Song Is Ended." This young person had the sweetest of voices, but seemed a bit self-conscious upon the stage.

Zeck and Steward, comedians of rare talent, grasped the audience all the while they were on the stage.

"Lovely Little Silhouette" gave the orchestra and Jay Mills a chance to give a very beautiful and tuneful presentation number wherein the well trained Abbott Dancers assisted tremendously in the putting over of this number.

Paul Small, who again has one of the most pleasing of voices, sang "Beautiful" and then "Ain't She Sweet," finishing with "Dream Kisses." The Oriental audience never seem to get enough from this artist.

Sammy Lewis, who had been a protege of Paul Ash's in the old McVicker days, has improved his act about 100 per cent, 80 per cent of the improvement being in the form of his wife performer, Patty Moore. These two professionals are exceptionally good dancers and their associated comic chatter with Paul helped bring them thunderous applause.

Julia Garrity, a great big star with a great big voice, entered and sang "My Ohio Home" in most singular style and then put over that wonderful old number, "Some of These Days," in genuine regretful manner. Her facetious number, "I've Never Had Anyone Crazy Over Me," left no doubt in the audience's mind of her ability to put over comic songs, but somehow or other one just seemed to have a longing to hear this artist with such a good voice sing some beautiful song like "Diane."

The concluding achievement of this week's presentation show was titled "Wonderful Wedding," with Paul Small and Elizabeth O'Donnell as the singers, with the Abbott Dancers as the bridesmaids in an exquisite wedding bell scene and a Tribune beauty contest winner, Grace Sullivan, as Jay Mills' bride.

New York Paramount
Week Ending January 20

The Paramount Orchestra opened the program with "Blue Melodies" a medley of songs bearing the word blue. Mrs. Jesse Crawford then delighted the audience with "The Sunrise," "A Shady Tree" and "Among My Souvenirs" on the organ, with her usual success.

The stage presentation was "Dancing Feet." The curtains rise on the dance ensemble accompanied by the Paramount Stage Orchestra, Lou Kosloff leading. "Blue Henderson" was their opening offering.

Martha Vaughan then sang an old-fashioned melody as she was lowered from the top of the stage dressed in old-fashioned dress to match her song. She was assisted by the dance ensemble in costumes to match hers.

Richard (Limberlegs) Edwards next appeared in some dance steps in which he lived up to his name.

He met with great success and gave many encores. The Paramount Stage Orchestra then played "When You Are In Love With Somebody Else" followed by Vale and Stewart dressed as little boys with big ties and little brown suits who did some original dance steps.

Harry Rose, the Broadway jester, told some new jokes and sang some new songs, among them "Henry's Made a Lady out of Lizzie" and "If a Bricklayer Lays Bricks Why Can't a Plumber Lay Plumbs?"

The Cameo Ballet was presented by the Jazz Toe Dancer. This young dancer delighted her audience with her great dancing ability on her toes.

The Finale—on With The Dance—followed rendered by the entire ensemble.

St. Louis Ambassador
Week Ending January 20

Ed Lowry's production, "Marchin' On," was one of the best he has given since coming to St. Louis.

Lyle Mann and Walter Craig sang, danced and chattered in very pleasing style. The Lomas Family and their horse also received much applause. The orchestra drummer also came into his own with a tenor solo that grew into a duet with Lowry himself and a trio with a versatile stage hand.

Chief Eaglefeather did an Indian buck dance or two. Rudy Wiedoeft and his laughing saxophone were also prominent in the bill of fare. Smiling Ed himself sang "Among My Souvenirs" in several variations. First as it is supposed to be sung, secondly as hot time stuff and thirdly as a South St. Louis German would attempt to sing it.

The finale of the bill brought forth the orchestra in toy soldier costumes and steps and a novelty turn by the Lomas Family.

The Ambassador Rockets also stepped about in lively fashion.

Philadelphia Fox
Week Ending January 21

The Fox Orchestra with William A. Krauth conducting, played "Rhapsody in Blue," and David Pesetski, soloist, seated at a grand piano on the stage played the same melody as the lights threw a huge silhouette shadow on a background of blue.

Florence Brady and Gilbert Wells, the Dixieland Harmony Singers then appeared. Well maybe they can sing, but the stage setting seemed to this reporter to be the best part of their act. The background was black and a large circle of rhinestones with radiating lines showed up well against it. Miss Brady's costume was black with rhinestone trimmings, carrying out the same motif and giving a very pleasing effect but their singing was rather coarse and disappointing.

Sam Hearn was good and took the part of an old farmer to perfection. He came in dressed in overalls, straw hat and red handkerchief and his running fire of wit had the audience in stitches. He asked one of the members of the orchestra for his violin and after playing for a short time, cleverly imitated bagpipes, bugle and banjo on the violin.

Lieutenant Gitz-Rice and his Northwest Mounted Police made a great hit with the audience. Their voices blend well and are excellently trained and they made an effective picture in their black and red uniforms. The personality of Lieutenant Gitz Rice sweeps the crowd with him and there is a snap to their singing which may be the result of military training. The Lieutenant is a composer of no mean ability and they sang two of his compositions, "Dear Old Pal of Mine" and "Hinky Dinky Parley Voo." They also sang a French Canadian song with plenty of action and pep, to which Marie, a little French Canadian danced.

Milwaukee Wisconsin
Week Ending January 20

This week we are "Hittin' the High Spots" with the Playboys under the leadership of Nat Nazarro, Jr., late of the New York Winter Garden. The curtain opens on a lavish setting with the orchestra in bright cloaks playing "I Can't Believe That You're in Love With Me," and sung offstage by Billy Meyers.

As the selection is finished the Abbott Dancers in black and silver costumes make their appearance in a snappy dance, and as they conclude, Johnny Perkins slides a huge letter addressed to Nat Nazarro, Jr., to the middle of the stage which carries a note from Dave for Nat's success. Johnny engages in a bit of comedy with the band leader and then Andy Rice, Jr., introduces his bit with a song, but proves by his dancing that he is more adept at that type of entertaining than he is at singing. He draws a good hand.

And now Madeline Branell, a pretty blond with a pleasing personality, sings "Did You Mean It When You Said I Love You?" which she follows with some real clever dancing. She has a good voice and is light on her feet and goes over big.

"I Don't Believe You" is the selection played by the band with Nat interspersing the selection with a solo on his cello, "I Love You Truly." Billy Meyers sings the words to this accompanied by the leader, and then sings "I Don't Believe You" as the orchestra again takes up the number. The selection was well done and received a good hand.

A very clever bit of soft shoe dancing by Nat, in which he uses a cane for his more intricate steps, draws big applause from the audience. Nat has a pleasing personality and goes over big with the Milwaukee theatregoers.

A very clever dance by the Abbott Dancers is the next feature. Each of the girls in black costumes resembling an Apache carries with her a life sized doll with red wig, representing their feminine dancing partners. In unison they go through this dance, trouncing the dummies with much gusto. The number is particularly well done and is well received.

The Lime Trio are next with a clever novelty act in which one of their number allows himself to be twisted and turned into almost inconceivable positions that at times he seemed to be the actual dummy which he was imitating.

Johnny Perkins, in a red sweater, who has been acting nonsense and keeping the audience laughing all during the presentation, now comes in for his part, and intermingled with much good humor, he sings "Everywhere You Go" and "Two Ton Tessie."

As he finishes this last selection Billy Meyers comes back to sing, "Every Little Thing Is Beautiful," while the Abbott Dancers strut their stuff and the lights in the huge chandelier are lighted and strings of lights back of a lace drop are also lighted, giving the stage a very colorful effect.

The presentation was very well done and ranks on a par with last week's offering.

The photoplay is William Haines in "West Point."

Chicago Chicago

Week Ending January 22

The first annual all-star Broadway revue was not only a spectacular production, but was a novel one, too. Who ever heard of a female chorus comprised of girls having beautiful enough voices to sing an aria? This was the outstanding new entertainment idea in what they called their production of "The Song Is Ended," in which Walter Pontius sang the leading tenor role to the exceptionally well played musical composition, the twelve melody girls arriving amid an exquisite setting in regular chorus style, but swinging into such vocal numbers as "Moonlight and Roses Bring Memories of You" and various other beautiful refrains.

The dancing couple this week, Sylvia and Clemence, did splendid work and received ample applause.

The Runaway Four, Hits of the Music Box Revue, are positively the funniest outfit this reporter ever viewed. They presented each patron with dividends on their entrance fee.

Roy Cropper, of "Student Prince" fame and ever liked by Chicago audiences, sang in that fine, rich voice that is his "Among My Souvenirs" and "Love Is Ever Mine."

The new musical number which the orchestra played exceedingly well this week was "I'll Think of You," conducted by Jules Buffano.

The Three Kemys held the undivided attention of the audience when they performed the most arduous acrobatic feats ever put on any stage.

Clark and McCullough, late stars of "The Ramblers," took some of their best material from this musical play and through this new B. & K. policy the public are now going to be able to see many stars of the largest productions.

The final accomplishment in presentation this week was to that sweet tune, "A Shady Tree," with Roy Cropper singing and colorful plumes and femininity lending a decorative effect.

Observation—It has reached a point where Chicago people when they want the very best in music depend upon the Chicago theatre for this particular entertainment, for to this reporter's knowledge nowhere is there gathered an orchestra of this volume, except possibly our grand opera symphony orchestra, that is under such capable direction as H. Leopold Spitalny and drilled to such fine perfection of playing. Their rendition of "Cavalleria Rusticana," with vocal accompaniment, and violin sextet, reached supreme excellence.

Salt Lake Capitol

Week Ending January 14

The stage presentation given at the Capitol theatre this past week was titled "Peacock Idea," a Fanchon and Marco offering which fairly sparkles with color and brilliance.

Renoff and Renova, ballet dancers, were exceptionally good, having been featured from coast to coast in the country's largest theatres, with great success.

John Knox, who is known to have three voices, is one of the artists in this presentation who has been winning a generous hand throughout the circuit.

Wayne Bradford and the Sunkist Beauties present a series of most unusual dancing and singing numbers. The costumes and artistic arrangements in this act are very unique and unusually attractive.

Alberti and his band gave a delightful offering which was in perfect keeping with the spirit of the New Year as well as being in keeping with the stage presentation, including some of the favorite old songs.

Alexander Schreiner presented an outstanding novelty in "My Bungalow of Love," a number which won him much favorable criticism while he was playing recently at the Metropolitan theatre in Los Angeles.

The feature picture shown in conjunction with this act was "The Love Mart" and very good attendance was enjoyed through the entire week.

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending January 21

The Howard presentation scored high this week. Bearing the title "Tokio Blues" and filled with color and picturesque Japanese costumes and settings, the whole act went off in great style, ably assisted by Ray Teal, new bandmaster, whose local debut this week even surpassed that enjoyed by his popular predecessor, Al Short.

The first number ushered in five ballet girls, who executed a parasol dance which was thoroughly enjoyable.

Hatsu Kuma, prima donna, received a cordial reception, for her songs and her gorgeous Oriental costume drew audible admiration.

The Three Meyakos, two girls and a man, the latter acclaimed the only Japanese violinist on the American stage, drew a good hand with a dance and tabloid scene, in which several popular numbers were rendered on the violin.

Willie Solar, internationally known comedian, bedecked in a costume which the country dude would envy, drew some laughs.

The honors of the program, however, go to Anna Chang, billed "Oriental Queen of Syncopation," to which name she admirably fitted.

Ray Teal, new master of ceremonies for the Howard, succeeding Al Short, proved his versatility by a song and selections on the saxophone and clarinet, on which instruments he is a skillful exponent.

George Lee Hamrick on the organ came in with his usual good work.

St. Louis Missouri

Week Ending January 20

Brooke Johns at Palm Beach was one of the prettiest stage productions yet offered to the Missouri theatre patrons.

The headlined entertainers of the show included Joe Cody and Brother, who juggled things about; Al Eldridge, who accompanied himself on the piano as he sang one of his own efforts; Al and Gussie in a brother and sister rag doll act; Arthur Nealy, who warbled "In Kaluha" and La Vere, accordionist, who was also somewhat of a humorist.

Although there are a multitude of people in the stage show this week called "Spanish Follies" the show falls short for entertainment due to the acts.

Harman and his band opened playing "Mysterious Eyes" with the 8 Dancing Debutantes doing a chorus of Spanish steps at the finish.

Monoff and Gifford, two girls, one dressed as a boy, do harmony numbers. Their voices are weak and they lack the personality necessary to put over this type of song.

Billy Randall next played "Day Is Done" on the violin and then went into a Russian dance while playing the fiddle. The girls came back again after Randall did a cute routine of Black Bottom and jazz steps.

Dave Harman then sang a comedy Spanish number with four of the boys from the band doing a comedy hokum dance. Madhatters quartette followed doing two songs and doing nicely.

Zanou and De Lima, tango team did one dance that pleased then came the 7 Accordionists who played "Doll Dance" and "Shady Tree" last also being sung. They went over about the best of all. Finale was "Spain" with a fine scenic flash that got a hand and sent the act to a snappy finish.

Don Albert with the Penn Symphony Orchestra played a difficult overture and Dick Leibert did the best organ solo he's done as yet, both units scoring heavily.

Feature was "West Point" and news and Felix also on bill.

St. Louis State

Week Ending January 20

Teddy Joyce's "Circling Around" was a very good stage show.

It featured a special number "The Song Is Ended," played by the band which accompanied the violin playing of Joyce and dulcet harmony of a harpist.

There was also a novelty skeleton dance by the Criss-Cross Girls. The Capitol Boys, Dolly Kissner, singer and dancer, and Kimm and Ross, eccentric dancers were also prominent in the entertaining.

San Francisco Granada

Week Ending January 20

This week was in nature of a farewell to Frank Jenks, the Play Boy, who has been master of ceremonies for several months. The set was a handsome one, draped in purple, possibly in half mourning, but there was nothing sad about the entertainment.

Herbert Hoey and Doris Walker raised it above the ordinary with their singing and dancing. Another fine dancing act was offered by the Tommy Atkins Sextette, taking the place of the usual group of Fanchon and Marco Beauties. Skeeter Hartwell furnished the comedy, doing a burlesque dance with comic falls. Fanchon and Marco "Folliettes" added zest to the bill, with plenty of by-play by Frank Jenks.

Philadelphia Stanley

Week Ending January 21

Rosita and Ramon in their series of South American dances easily walked away with the honors at the Stanley this week.

Overture: The Stanley Orchestra played an odd arrangement of "Yankee Doodle," with variations, which was not particularly appealing but proved an appropriate introduction to the feature picture "Dress Parade." Sascha Jacobinoff played a violin solo that demonstrated that even "Yankee Doodle" may be beautiful when played by an artist.

Rosita and Ramon in their series of South American dances were assisted by Ernie Hulet's Orchestra under the direction of Al Makon. The act is in five parts as follows:

(a.) Rosita, a stunning brunette with sparkling black eyes, makes an effective entrance as she glides across the stage dressed in black fringed costume with lace mantilla, against a background of glittering

A Fine Tribute

One of the most thoughtful expressions of appreciation and declarations of loyalty was displayed recently by the Logan Square Business Men's Association, an organization in which several community enterprises are affiliated. This tribute was tendered to Mark Fisher by a personally signed document bearing the signature of the president of the association. This organization is located in the vicinity of the Harding theatre, Chicago, where Mark Fisher has become a community figure loved and esteemed by all. Below we reproduce the exact tribute given to Mr. Fisher:

Eight weeks ago you were honored by being selected from all of the orchestra leaders of Chicago to assume the directorate of what is perhaps Chicago's leading theatre orchestra, and we were saddened by your departure. Your task accomplished, you now resume your place in the community that calls you its own, and this enthusiastic audience of three thousand persons is here to welcome you from your successes at the palatial Oriental theatre, where you so creditably substituted for the ever popular Paul Ash, which of itself was an accomplishment of which you may well be proud.

History tells us that when kings or governments wish to decorate a Lindbergh, a Caruso or a War Hero for distinguished merit, they place upon his breast a properly inscribed medal or distinctive ribbon, emblematic of the valor or ability of wearer and of the affection of a grateful nation, but I submit, sir, that the greatest decoration which it is possible for any man to achieve is the love, the admiration, and the respect of his immediate neighbors, and the favor and regard of his fellow men.

As a public expression of this sentiment toward you, Mark Fisher, and to celebrate your triumphal return to the Harding theatre, the rare privilege has been delegated to me, as president of The Logan Square Business Men's Association, and on behalf of all affiliated Community organizations, to tender this anthology of nature's most delightful fruition and emphasize that each blossom, each petal, and each leaf, represents a distinct component part of every man, woman and child in Logan Square, and thus making this decoration of their love, their admiration and their respect unanimous.—CHARLES V. FALKENBERG.

curtains looped back to display a gorgeously embroidered Spanish shawl.

(b.) El Tango Argentino. Orchestra of eight in black and orange plays the accompaniment as Ramon and Rosita present the famous and novel "El Tango Argentino," a languorous and exotic dance of great beauty. It is the first time this dance has ever been presented in Philadelphia.

(c.) Princesita. One of the members of the orchestra whose name was not announced sang this solo in a full, rich baritone which showed excellent training.

(d.) Maxixa Bresilienne. Rosita and Ramon in red executed a brilliant, whirling dance with orchestra accompaniment punctuated with the sound of castanets.

(e.) Paso Doble. The climax of the act came in this beautiful gliding Spanish dance of intricate and graceful steps in which Ramon and Rosita whirled and revolved in a manner which seemed even more difficult than the Tango Argentino for which they are justly famed.

Their act was followed by an enthusiastic burst of applause.

There was an appropriate and interesting prologue to the feature entitled "West Point Days," in which a male ensemble of twenty voices, in cadet garb, presented five chorus numbers, including "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," "The Hours I Spend With You," "I'm Away from the World When I'm Away From You" and "It's Always Fair Weather," against a background representing West Point, ending with "My Own United States" in subdued voices as the moon comes out and a scrim curtain descends before the singers.

Omaha Riviera

Week Ending January 19

Miami and her sisters in all their beauty dazzled before the eyes of Riviera audiences last week, with Jimmy Ellard presenting Jack Partington's "Florida." Nine girls representing the cities of the southern vacationland were the chief attraction, supplemented with a carload of scenery and pretty and novel effects. The production was one of the most colorful of the season and was extremely well received by theatregoers.

Al Markel and Gay Faun did comedy dancing of entertaining order. Gattison Jones and Elsie Elliott were another pair of clever dancers, specializing in waltzes. Nor was that all the dancing. There was Chester Fredricks, who was one of the highlights of "Florida."

Billie Gerber, English male impersonator, was vivacious both as a singer and as a dancer.

Jimmy Ellard himself really was one of the hits of the production, singing "The Song Is Ended, but the Melody Lingers on." He had to respond to numerous demands for encores.

While Jimmy took us to Florida, Doug Fairbanks took us to the pampas of the Argentine in "The Gaucho." He was popular as ever.

Minneapolis State

Week Ending January 20

The feature act at the State this week was built around the orchestra's overture "Shadows," which was an enlargement of the song exploitation idea that was popular in many theatres.

A beautiful stage set was used that furnished an unusual background for the unusual shadow effects produced by the dancers moving in dim light.

The F & R ballet gave several pretty dance numbers as the overture progressed, directed by Fred Heiseke.

"The Girl in the Gilded Cage" was the other feature of the bill. A singer in a brilliantly lighted, ornate cage floated over the heads of the audience as she did her song. It was a novel bill and entertaining.

"Get Your Man," with Clara Bow as the center of attractions, was the screen presentation.

Eddie Dunsteder was missed at his usual place at the organ.

Weil Writes New Song for Chicago Mayor

Milton Weil, the Chicago music publisher and close friend of Mayor Thompson, has composed a new song called "Big Bill the Builder," dedicated to Big Bill Thompson. This song was suggested by Corporation Counsel Ettleson. Erwin Barg, special material writer for Milton Weil and in charge of organ solos, is preparing a novelty stunt on this number for the motion picture theatres.

Horsefeathers!

Abe Olman, professional manager of the Foster Music company, Chicago, has just written a comedy song called "Horsefeathers." Charlie Newman and Buddie Fields collaborated with him. This song is a direct tie-up with the Barney Google cartoon series now running under the heading of "The Secret and Mysterious Order of the Brotherhood of Billy Goats and Sisterhood of Nanny Goats." Two of the most popular slogans used in these cartoons are "Horsefeathers" and "Okmnx."

UTICA, N. Y.—As you can see from the heading, I'm on the road, and of course you know it's not for my health, that I'm traveling, it's for business. . . . Here's hoping.

Coming up state the other day, the train runs along the Hudson River all the ways to Albany, and of all the beautiful pictures that remain in my mind of the trip, one predominates, and it isn't beautiful, to me it's gruesome, and morbid. . . . While passing Ossining, I caught a fleeting glimpse of Sing Sing Prison, with its tremendous walls, the guards, the iron bars and worst of all, the remembrance of the Snyder and Gray case. . . . I haven't forgotten that picture yet, and I doubt if you would either.

If you've ever been to Albany, you'll agree with me, that with one more hill, you'd think you were in the Rocky Mountains. . . . And to make things worse yet, when I arrived, it was raining, and I was forced to buy myself a pair of rubbers. . . . not that I'm an old man yet ('cause I believe rubbers were made for women and old men) but I bought them to keep myself from sliding down those hills; personally, I could have used a pair of skis.

And another thing about Albany: every fat and rotund man I saw, I thought was a politician, but that didn't affect me so very much, because I was looking for organists that use slides, and anyone knows that politicians don't use slides.

Here's something that's worth while pondering over: In Troy (thirty minutes from Albany) there are eight women to every man, due to the collar factories using so many female help. . . . Can you imagine a lot of fellows that you and I know, let loose in a town like that?

I'm heading for Canada, and outside of getting plugs, and doing business, there's one other thing on my mind, that I've been trying to figure out: How am I going to get a couple of bottles of Johnny Walker back to New York with me? I don't mind being caught and fined a few dollars, but think of me being detained!! . . . If any of you fellows can give me a good idea, I certainly expect to hear from you at the Mount Royal Hotel in Montreal. You know, I'd do as much for you.

I hear, that back in New York, the National Broadcasting Co. have put a stop to all the local orchestra leaders doing their own announcing. . . . It seems that one leader in particular, started to plug a tune that he was in on to such an extent (going so far as to naming the publisher, telling them that he would autograph every copy that was bought and sent to him, etc.) that the Radio station immediately put a ban on his announcing any further, and as a result every other bondsman was treated likewise.

I broadcasted from radio station WIBX here in Utica last night, and believe it or not, I blew out three fuses in the station. I must have a very powerful voice, or—draw your own conclusions.

I heard a pretty good gag the other night. It was entitled, "A Scotchman's Telegram." . . . It seemed this Scotchman wanted to send a telegram of congratulations to his brother over in Scotland, so he sent a straight telegram as a night message during a total eclipse.

Met two great organists here in Syracuse, Ernie Mills at the Strand theatre, and Lew Baker at the Empire theatre. Both want to be remembered in this column to their many friends.

My thanks to Lew Baker for the use of his type-writer, which has made the latter part of this column possible, 'cause if I had to do it by hand it would have never been done.

You'll hear from me next week in Canada.

Larry Spier

ORGAN SOLOS

Albert F. Brown (Chicago Granada) calls his Scrimaphone presentation this week "A Spanish Fantasy," and it fits ideally with the picture, "The Loves of Carmen." As Brown plays "An Old Guitar and an Old Refrain," a singer appears in the proscenium box, in Spanish costume, to sing the song. Then on the stage appear in subdued lights two Spanish dancers, who dance as Brown goes into "In a Little Spanish Town." A set to the right fades into view with Leta Hope in a balcony singing, and with a male singer in center stage playing a guitar and singing to the girl in the balcony. Brown closes with "An Old Guitar and an Old Refrain." The presentation is well worked out with good lighting effects. It goes over very good.

Brad Braley (Concord Capitol) sprung something entirely new on his audience last week, by playing "Among My Souvenirs" on the organ in unison with Paul Whiteman's Concert Orchestra while the record was being played on an Orthophonic Victrola. Its success was marked by the public's generous approval. Slides of the song were used for community singing as an encore.

Jesse Crawford (Chicago Chicago). They always say New York does things to people. If that is so, it must be that it made Jesse Crawford a better organist, for how that man can play. His numbers this week ran to the sentimental vein, such as "After I've Called You Sweetheart, How Can I Call You Friend," "If I Can't Have You," "The Song Is Ended," "After My Laughter, Came Tears" and "Blue River." Although these pieces were played to perfection and great satisfaction seemed existent, many of the audience sitting around this writer showed a desire for less sentimental numbers.

Leo Terry (Joliet Rialto) offered a solo called "Our Memory," in which he featured "Just a Memory." The stunt carried illustrated slides and the medley of the following tunes, "Just a Cottage Small," "Kiss in the Dark," "La Marseillaise," "Cherie" and "Memory Lane." The theme all centered on "Just a Memory," which Terry played in various styles. The audience here seems to like the solos and were real frank in showing their appreciation of the organist's effort.

Milton Charles (Chicago Oriental) knowing political conventions were uppermost in folks' thoughts at this time, kept in these paths with a Convention of Songs and brought forth much mirth when playing such tunes as "Let's Kiss and Make Up" (referring to Mayor Thompson and King George). However, "Blue Heaven" was the song unanimously elected and while the Oriental audience does not sing for this new organist like they did for their well-liked friend, Henri Keats, they seem to enjoy his playing.

Belle Melrose (Chicago Central Park) offered a request solo in which she featured "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" and the following songs as a community stunt: "Is She My Girl Friend," "Dream Kisses," "Everywhere You Go." This young lady replaces Edgar Amstein and from the reception accorded her, it seems that her type of work is being appreciated.

Bill Bennett (Chicago Belpark) used "A Leap Year Proposal" for the title of his solo as a community stunt in which the following songs were offered, "Bungalow Dreams," "The Desert Song," "Blue River," "Varsity Drag" and "Among My Souvenirs." The comedy slides showing how girls propose to boys were unusually clever and compelled the organist to play an encore of "After the Sandman."

Ramon Berry (Chicago Alamo) featured "A Musical Conflict" as a solo using Berlin's "Song Is Ended" and "Together We Two" in addition to a number of this author's compositions with special lyrics as the theme to this stunt. The conflict took place in the form of audience reaction, in which they expressed a personal desire mostly for ballads. The other portion of the stunt consisted of community singing, and was called "The College Glee Club," in which a number of college songs with special lyrics were intermingled with the various hits. The stunt as a whole received quite an ovation.

Dick Leibert (Pittsburgh Penn) is getting away from slides and this week does all his announcing from the console of the organ. He announces that he has many requests to play "Humoresque" and will play it to please all his friends. First as a violin solo, then Spanish, Irish, and as a German band, as a calliope and finally as a jazz band. Every one of the numbers clicked heavily and the opinion was that this was Dick's best solo to date.

BLUE CHIMES—(J. H. Remick & Co.)—Roy Turk and James F. Hanley have turned out a very pretty fox trot which Jesse Crawford will feature at the Chicago theatre. This popular organist will no doubt start the song. By the way, this is Crawford's last week here as he goes back to the Paramount, New York, next week.

IF I SHOULD LOSE YOU—(Sherman Clay & Co.)—This western firm that has just given us "Charmaine" and "Diane" thus have sent to us an excellent melody tune that has a chance to add to this firm's laurels. By Earl Burnett and Robert Stowell.

THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT A ROSE—(Waterson-Berlin & Snyder)—As the title denotes, roses bring memories of love. This combination of writers have turned out one of their best numbers in this song. Words by Irving Kahal and Francis Wheeler, music by Sammy Fain.

RAIN OR SHINE—(Ager, Yellen & Bornstein)—This song is the hit of the production "Rain or Shine," which has just opened up in Detroit and will no doubt play in our city before long. These popular song writers have proven that they are just as clever writing show tunes. Jack Yellen, Milton Ager and Owen Murphy.

RAMONA—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—This song is dedicated to Dolores Del Rio, star of the photoplay, "Ramona." This picture, which will soon play at the new United Artists' theatre here, will have a whole lot to do with popularizing this number. Words by L. Wolfe Gilbert, music by Mabel Wayne.

JACK IN THE BOX—(Jack Mills, Inc.)—Zev Confrey, who has given us some wonderful piano solos, among which was his famous "Kitten on the Keys," has written another piano solo which will delight the better pianist.

HUMPTY-DUMPTY—(Harms, Inc.)—One of the hits of "Just Fancy," now current at the Olympic theatre in our city.

AH! SWEET MYSTERY OF LIFE—(M. Whitmark & Sons)—Originally one of the big songs from the Operetta "Naughty Marietta," written by the late Victor Herbert, whose name will go down in history as one of the world's greatest composers. What more can one say.

AFTER MY LAUGHTER CAME TEARS—(Shapiro-Bernstein & Co.)—A light ballad of the type that is very commercial. A sob lyric to a very good fox trot melody. Words by Charles Tobias and Roy Turk, music by Roy Turk.

NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN—(Milton Weil Music Co.)—The story of a love sick youth who devotes that part of his time to his sweetheart having only time for eat, sleep and work. A terrible condition to be in, but such is love. One of the writers is Uncle Bob of radio fame. The others are Wilson Wetherbee and Bernie Grossman.

BACK IN YOUR OWN BACK YARD—(Irving Berlin, Inc.)—Al Jolson is hitting his old stride with some very good songs. This is a story of a youth who travels, looking for the bluebird when it is in his own back yard. Jolson should have no trouble giving this song a great start.

I'M MORE THAN SATISFIED—(Robbins Music Corp.)—A very good song by Ray Klages and Thomas Waller. The house of Robbins, which has been publishing the better grade compositions, sticks over a popular song once in a while and this one has an excellent chance.

Sid Berman.

Is Your Advertising Like Barnum's?

Barnum was the daddy of all theatrical advertising, but is the Barnum circus type of advertising still the right sort for modern motion picture advertising? An advertising authority says "No." He is Lloyd D. Herrold, M. B. A., Associate Professor of Advertising, Northwestern university. Below is an article by Professor Herrold, which appeared as the first of a series in "The Box Office Press Sheet," the house organ of the National Program and Printing Company. It is interesting to note that Professor Herrold's views coincide with the criticism of "The Theatre" on Chicago motion picture theatre advertising.

Barnum Released "The Big Parade"

By Lloyd D. Herrold, M. B. A.
Associate Professor of Advertising, Northwestern University

WHEN we say that Barnum released the "Big Parade," of course we don't refer to that successful film which made you profits and pleased your customers. The "big parade" we're talking about isn't a "movie." It's the present-day method of advertising "movies." The "BIG PARADE" as a film was a knockout,—a huge success in other words. The "big parade" we're talking about is a fade-out,—a failure so far as representing what ought to be done today in the light of modern scientific advertising and modern large scale moving picture production.

Did you ever, for example, compare the "movie" advertisements with the merchandise advertisements appearing in the same newspaper? If not, divorce yourself from a pair of pennies and pick up the first newspaper that you find on sale,—anywhere. Nothing else in the entire newspaper so closely corresponds to the so-called "circus" type of advertising except the cheapest of bargain store advertising.

Nothing else in the entire newspaper is so difficult to read except perhaps the "want-ad" columns. Buyers of "bargain" merchandise are accustomed to look for "circus" advertising when in the market for their necessities. Readers of "want-ads" are familiar with the set-up of the columns,—the fine print in itself is not so difficult to read because there is an absence of type contrast.

Nowhere in the modern newspaper is there to be found such eye-dazzling, eye-blinding contrast as appears in the ordinary advertisements of moving picture houses.

When Barnum felt inclined to advertise his "two white whales," the only ones of their kind in captivity, he resorted to every known superlative expression in the vocabulary or invented new ones if the vocabulary appeared inadequate for his needs. Then he shouted his message in triplets,—TWO WHITE WHALES—TWO WHITE WHALES—TWO WHITE WHALES—in the blackest, boldest, ugliest type faces he could invent or find in the printer's assortment of types.

His illustrations of his "awe-inspiring freaks of nature" were grossly exaggerated.

What would Professor Herrold say about this ad which United Artists used in Chicago papers the morning after the opening of the United Artists theatre, Chicago? Take a deep breath and sniff the sawdust in the menage tent, then lisp liltingly the ten tongue twisting alluring alliterations in the ad.

This method of advertising, as you well know, is now known as "circus" advertising. It is the kind of advertising first used by "movie" houses because there was nothing else to guide them. Barnum made a success of it. The moral was apparent. But there is a vast difference between the attitude of the movie manager and his patronage today than ap-

Good Exploitation Puts Over "Love" in Chicago

Many unique novelties were used to aid in exploiting a showing of Metro-Galdwyn-Mayer's "Love" at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, when the picture played there. Three thousand of the small burr sticker hearts of "Are you in Love" were put out on the day before the opening. Three thousand cardboard hearts with a cut of Gilbert and Garbo were tied on cars, on door-knobs and any available place. Also 1,000 large hearts with cut of Gilbert and Garbo were put on light poles, offices, windows, etc. Five thousand book-marks were made for the public libraries, all having a list of Tolstoi books, and a cut of the Gilbert-Garbo picture.

"Gorilla" Street Signs

Signs reading, "The Gorilla is here at the Tivoli," fastened to stakes so they could be stuck in the ground, proved an excellent exploitation stunt for the showing of the First National comedy-mystery special at E. R. Rogers' Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, recently.

These markers were placed at street intersections, between sidewalk and curb, along the main residential streets and around public school buildings. An imprint of a gorilla's hand on the markers served to arouse curiosity and get the signs read.

peared between Barnum and his public. Barnum admitted that his public liked to be "humbugged." Is there any moving picture manager who can truthfully say the same thing about his patronage today?

The only purpose of advertising today whether it be merchandise or attractions that are offered is to tell the public what may be had at your place of business. To tell the public your message, you presuppose that the public will and can read your message. The only function of type is to set your message in such a form that your public can read it. It is one of the cardinal principles of modern advertising that type is to be read.

Why, then, do movie houses still join the "big parade" and endeavor to out-do Barnum in grotesque type displays, in eye-defying contrasts of black and white, and in barn-storming exaggerated English? Too much display is not display. Bold contrast is bad taste. Superlative claims are never believed.

These two ads used by Morris Simms at the Brockton theatre, Brockton, Mass., show how attractive ads can be made with the proper use of white space. The "Serenade" ad was used on Wednesday, the other on Saturday. The white space gives the small type excellent display and the reader's attention is commanded. Notice how easy it is to read the vaudeville acts, especially in the "Serenade" ad. However, the play dates should be given a bit better display than here in the border.

Torgan Holds Theatre Orphan Party; Wins City's Goodwill

Three days before Christmas, Samuel Torgan, manager of the Strand theatre, Lowell, Mass., held a theatre party for the orphans of the city. The goodwill resulting from the party will be felt by Torgan at his theatre's box office for a long time to come.

The newspapers of the city played up the affair and gave the theatre a large amount of free advertising. But perhaps the finest tribute to the party was paid to Mrs. Torgan who acted as hostess for the theatre. The mayor of the city wrote Mrs. Torgan, personally thanking her for her splendid work. The mayor's letter to Mrs. Torgan, which was carried in a local newspaper, follows:

As mayor of the city, and as an interested citizen as well, I heartily endorse your splendid activities in behalf of the orphans of our city. Such action deserves commendation and I would be remiss in my duty if I failed to recognize your splendid humanitarian act.

With kindest personal and seasonal regards, I remain,

Sincerely,
THOMAS J. CORBETT,
Mayor.

A large number of merchants and citizens co-operated with the theatre and helped to make the party possible. Free transportation to and from the orphanages was given by the street railway company and many citizens donated the use of their motor cars.

From the standpoint of the orphans as well as the theatre, the party was a great success. A number of professional entertainers gave their acts during the party. An "Our Gang" comedy and several other short features were shown on the screen. The musical director of the theatre led the children in Christmas carols, and most important of all for the children, during an intermission Santa Claus appeared and gave out presents and all manner of good things to eat.

Ushers passed through the theatre, giving milk, cookies, doughnuts, candy and ice cream to every child. When the children left the theatre, Santa Claus stood at the exit door and gave each one of them a basket of candy, cakes and toys donated by merchants.

Although this party was held at Christmas time, it can be staged at any time of the year, and it is doubtful if any better promotion can be used for creating goodwill for the theatre and its manager.

Such work should be done by every theatre in the country. The resulting goodwill pays dividends far in excess of the actual cost, and, forgetting the box office, there is the personal satisfaction of having done something to increase the happiness of people, which after all, is one of the biggest thrills to be found in this old world.

"The Theatre" Wants to See Your House Organs

In order to give exhibitors more service for house organs, "The Theatre" is anxious to receive copies of your house organs each week or month. Whatever you get out in the way of heralds, throwaways, programs and house organs will be welcomed by "The Theatre." By sending them in you will be helping each other.

"See It Twice" Slogan

"See it twice" was the slogan used to exploit Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's epic, "Ben Hur," when it played for the second time in five weeks in Salt Lake City, Utah. The line of argument used in the promotion campaign by Manager Grant Pemberton of the Pantages theatre, where the Ramon Novarro starring vehicle was shown, was that "Ben Hur" should be seen twice to be fully appreciated.

Wild Geese

Cleveland Public Library

When the Allen theatre, Cleveland, played the Tiffany-Stahl production "Wild Geese," it effected this good tieup with the Cleveland Public Library. More and more theatres are coming to use this sort of tieup which is very effective. Such tieups can be made in every town that has a library.

It takes but a glance at the above pictures to see what can be done in the way of exploitation by a good theatreman. All of these stunts were put over by the Rialto theatre, Butte, Montana, when M-G-M's special, "The Big Parade," was shown. Any one of these stunts would have been good, altogether they are a "wow." It is usually the increased effort in exploitation, such as this, that brings the landslide at the box office.

Newspapers, Trailers, Billboards are Your Advertising Mediums

(This is the second of a series of articles on advertising. They originally appeared in the Finkelstein and Ruben "Showmanship News." Be sure to read Number 3 of the series next week.)

Number Two

In planning an advertising campaign we have three great advertising highways before us—newspapers, billboards and our screens. Experience tells us that daily newspapers are one of our most effective mediums. They go directly into the homes every few hours. The advertising and news that they carry combine to make them attractive to women. And the women are the persons we want to reach first with our message of entertainment.

Someone in the industry has estimated women patronage at 80 per cent of the total movie patronage. The writer would place this figure at nearer 65 per cent. Aim your advertising at the women.

Thomas Dillon, editor of the "Minneapolis Tribune," says that more women will read a silk stocking ad than the news accounts of hundreds killed in a Siamese earthquake.

Newspapers afford us a ready medium of forceful announcement to the public. In the Twin Cities they carry day in and day out one of the most important movements in our entire advertising attack—the daily calendar. This calendar is for ready reference by people seeking amusements. The brunt of our advertising onslaught in the newspapers is carried in the larger spaces.

Coming to billboards we have before us one of the oldest methods of show advertising. For years they have blazoned everything from pretty girls to sacred elephants in the face of the traveling public. They afford us a decided pictorial advantage, also that of color and size, in placing our product before box office possibilities. They are inherently a part of good showmanship. The large sizes like 24-sheets tell our story as no other medium possibly can.

Our screens afford us an advertising advantage enjoyed by no other industry. They are one of your greatest assets. Guard them as you would your life. Remember that when you talk to people from your screen you must speak a universal language, one that will appeal to all ages from eight to eighty.

Your screen has an attention power far greater than either the newspaper or the billboard. Your newspaper ad and your poster may be seen, maybe not. But your screen is right before the spectator's eyes. And we haven't seen anybody yet viewing a movie with eyes closed. However, your screen is seen by only the people in the theatre. It isn't reaching that great body of people who are not as yet movie fans.

John T. O'Rourke Is M. B. I. No. 3; Club Meets Exhibitors Approval

"The Theatre's" M. B. I. club has won exhibitor approval! Letters praising the new feature come in every day. One theatreman says, "I have read the 'My Best Ideas' with a great deal of interest." This week John T. O'Rourke, director of advertising and publicity for East Coast Theatres Company, Philadelphia, becomes M. B. I. Number 3. Who will be M. B. I. Number 4? His name and "My Best Idea" appear next week. Here is O'Rourke's corking good "My Best Idea."

"My Best Idea" No. 3

By John T. O'Rourke

AS YOU no doubt know, it was rumored by thousands of exhibitors that M-G-M's "The Fire Brigade" was a natural flop, but after reviewing the show, I could not be convinced that it did not possess the necessary hokum to pack them in.

My first step in the campaign was to secure a letter from Chief Ross B. Davis of the Philadelphia fire department, who is considered quite an authority on fire fighting in this section of the country. I next had 100 photostats of the letter made, and after securing a list of all fire chiefs in and adjoining the towns in which our theatres are located, I mailed them a letter offering their organization a share of the receipts in their respective theatres if they would go along with us in putting the picture across.

I also forwarded them a photostat copy of Chief Davis' letter. In this letter Chief Davis stressed the point of the value of the picture in fire prevention. Naturally, this was inserted at our request, we realizing that a small town fire chief is more interested in this angle than the fact that the picture was good entertainment.

Space does not permit listing details of the results in all our houses playing "The Fire Brigade," but I will give you an idea how this thing went over in one house, in our theatre in Laurel Springs, N. J.

We carried the campaign in the usual manner listed above. This is a small town of 3,000 people, and is sort of the social and business center of the seven towns surrounding it. We received answers regarding our benefit terms from seven of the nine or ten volunteer companies in Laurel Springs and adjacent towns. This meant that seven fire companies, or an approximate total of 1,100 men were out selling tickets.

We then visited the seven fire houses and placed canvas banners across the front of the station, reading, "Buy your tickets now from any member of the (name of company) to see the mighty epic of the heroes of peace, 'The Fire Brigade.'"

We also supplied the fire engines in these stations with special banners for the sides of the engines, reading somewhat the same as the above. The firemen used these engines when out canvassing their respective towns with tickets.

We played the show on the fifth and sixth of July. It has been a custom for years in this particular town to have quite a parade and celebration on the Fourth of July. The neighborhood firemen compete for prizes for their skill with the ladders, etc. After first parading through the town with their equipment. It is needless to say each piece of apparatus carried a double faced banner mentioned above. We also took shots of the parade, and this was shown on our screen the following two days in conjunction with the picture. The two following days were the hottest of the year, and I'm telling you it was certainly the most inappropriate picture that we could show, but stealing the Air Mail's pet phrase:

"No wind, nor snow, nor rain, nor night can keep them out if you put it over right."

Edward Lewis of this organization has returned from the coast. Two new United Artists salesmen are Maurice Geiger and Ben T. Ritchie.

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

STARTING TIME

A CHICAGO publication of general circulation has taken by both of its horns the dilemma confronting the theatregoer who likes to see motion pictures from the first. This theatregoer, I think, is not merely legion but unanimous. I, for one, am he, and I think you, if you're honest with yourself, are he also. If you go to a stageplay on time, if you keep your appointments with bankers and landlords, I'm sure of it. To get on:

The publication mentioned above has investigated and obtained the daily hours at which the feature picture is started in each of the principal downtown Chicago theatres. Eight theatres were covered, presumably the eight which show the best pictures. The starting hours thus ascertained were then combined in what is called a "Cinema Time-Table" and that is published for the guidance of readers who elect to arrive at the theatre in time to see their feature pictures from the first. It makes a compact little table, easily referred to, and it can be depended upon to do, with reasonable accuracy, the work for which it is designed. It is now possible for a Chicagoan, downtown, to consult his watch, look at the table and then go directly to a theatre where a feature picture is starting. (The publication also lists the names of pictures showing at the theatres represented in the table.)

All this, of course, is nice for Chicagoans. It doesn't mean anything to the other several million people who share their desire to see pictures from the beginning. And it doesn't explain—as nothing else has ever explained—why motion picture exhibitors, supposedly very bright and intelligent fellows, simply do not list starting time in their advertisement. I may live to learn why this is—rather, why it should be, for I know several reasons why it is—but I doubt it.

I think, perhaps, it is a good idea for each exhibitor who reads this item to take up the matter with his newspaper. He may as well admit, as he already has done in practice, that he isn't going to tell the people, in his ads, when to come to the theatre. He can then explain to the newspaper that, by giving readers this highly interesting information, much worthwhile service can be given the community. It will be a very dumb editor who doesn't see to it that a local time-table is launched. It will mean more prestige for the paper and more attendance for the theatre.

(Exhibitors interested in forwarding the time-table movement locally can obtain name and address of the Chicago publication mentioned above by asking the oversigned for same.)

INCIDENT

A SMARTLY groomed gentleman accompanying a smartly gowned lady come down the aisle of the smart United Artists theatre and pause to enter the row in front of your informant. The smartly uniformed usher clicks heels and announces, "No smoking, please." The smartly groomed gentleman puffs once upon a long and plainly expensive cigar, hands it to the smartly uniformed usher and remarks, "Please take this with you." The usher, bearing the stogy aloft, torch-like, marches militarily up the aisle. The lady and gentlemen seat themselves and mention not at all the valiant defense of the amenities.

TWO-A-DAY

FRANKLY, I am not in favor of two-a-day pictures. I mean, particularly, pictures exhibited in theatres designed for and customarily devoted to stage plays. There are several reasons. The theatres are not picture theatres, and pictures do not look like pictures in them. The exhibition of a picture in these surroundings is cloaked with a lot of blah ceremony which means nothing save that nobody really cares for the idea.

However, with picture exhibition the complex thing it has become in these States, there is a thing or two in favor of the two-a-day idea. Indeed, it would not be hard to propagate a movement with establishment of the two-a-day system as its goal. Perhaps I shall do so, although I doubt it.

The two-a-day plan does get the people in at starting time. It does keep people from walking in front of you just when you don't want your view obstructed. It does get the money in bigger lumps, if not in greater aggregate. If one does not object to a certain amount of blah ceremony, it makes picturegoing rather easy.

Generally, though, the two-a-day picture is blown up by its sponsors to presumptuous proportions. It falls a corresponding distance upon examination. This would not be the case, of course, if the picture were shown in a genuine motion picture theatre and if the admission were standardized.

I think perhaps it is well to note the fact that theatres exhibiting continuously now charge almost as much as those operating on the two-a-day basis. My hunch is that when the prices become equal, or almost equal, the two-a-day thing is in for a big ride. The way to prevent that, of course, is plain to anybody who ever took the trouble to attend a theatre in addition to running it.

BE HONEST

LAST week I had a refreshing conversation with a boy of 10 years who sat beside me on a long and wholly unavoidable Elevated ride from one theatre to another. The boy began talking and continued, an occasional word of response keeping him on the subject. His discourse ran something like this:

"I don't like movies any more. . . . People ain't like the movies, are they? . . . I mean, always mad and fightin'. . . . Or doin' bad things and gettin' caught and then gettin' away. . . . People ain't that way, the ones I know. . . . People I know work, and go home and listen to the radio, or go to the movies, or sit and talk. . . . People never stay home in the movies."

And so on, with an encouraging word now and then, until I got what I believe to be a child's-eye view of pictures as they are. It isn't much of a view.

It seems, according to the way this boy looked at matters, the pictures aren't doing exactly right by our little world. They're giving out the idea that nobody's normal. The wrongdoer, rightly enough, is pictured as off-center, but the detective who tracks him down, the judge who tries the case, the hero who is vindicated and the heroine who weds him in the fadeout really ought to be fairly normal creatures. Look at 10 pictures and see if, in one of them, the supposedly normal characters really are.

The thing emanates, I suppose, from the idea that all of a picture, not merely one phase of it, ought to be interesting. Perhaps there is truth in this, but there may be doubt as to what constitutes the interesting. The easy way to make a thing interesting, of course, is to distort or disfigure it. In fact, this distorting or disfiguring merely makes the thing engaging, which is a quite different matter.

I believe it is a good idea to pay some attention to such views as those expressed by my young informant. It is a pretty serious matter if we've made the pictures uninteresting to the youngsters. The old die off, and the new old may not fall so hard for a pastime they have learned in youth to despise.

I report the incident without adornment.

"THE GAUCHO"

THAT boy Doug has gone and done it again. I call him boy because none but a boy could dream the dreams that Doug dreams, and none but a boy, a very courageous and confident one, would bank on them to the extent that Doug does. I utter resounding thanks every time I see a new one of these things, thanks that there still is room in Hollywood for an untrammelled imagination and that the possessor of that imagination is possessed also of the means and authority to give it reign. Hail the boy, Doug.

Like all boys, Doug has his overenthusiasms, his too spontaneous reactions to the new and strange. Fortunately, though, these are not serious matters. They lead him, now and anon, to utter newspaper quotes with interesting but not very accurate predictions in them. Like all newspaper quotes, they pass with the day's sun and leave no trace. They may be forgotten, and they may be forgiven a boy who does such free things as "The Gaucho" with a camera.

This latest of Doug's dreams is a spectacular and headlong yarn about a South American bandit (cowboy) who lives to learn what is wrong with his philosophy. It has, even, a plot and a purpose and all of those other items that Fairbanks pictures usually do so very well without. I should have said, had I been asked, that Doug should have nothing to do with a subject of this weight. I should have held out for a lighter topic, a mere sketch of a story adorned plentifully with perches and precipices to afford momentary handholds for the greatest of all catch-as-catch-can actorbats. I should not have guessed—as Doug seems to have guessed very well—that it would take a much heavier story than this to obscure the bounding Doug. I am glad no one asked my advice before going ahead with the production.

I think it is the mental rather than the physical Fairbanks that the widely entertained world applauds. The acrobatics he indulges have been imitated with complete fidelity. In fact, in some cases the athletes aping Mr. Fairbanks' mode have surpassed the original. But nothing happened about it. No new hero was set up in the place of the old one. I think the reason is that the aping athletes saw only the physical aspect of Mr. Fairbanks' extravagance. I am very sure that no picture made in the Fairbanks mold by other than the original has had the swing, the freedom and the zip (since words of this family are few and futile) that lifts "The Gaucho" off the screen, into a realm of fancy and so on to the plane where it dwelleth alone with its kind as the apotheosis of cinematic entertainment.

If the foregoing is a bit woozily worded, be kind. I seldom explode depthbombs over pictures, for the principal reason, perhaps, that so few of them have depth. Indeed, I doubt that "The Gaucho" has, but I'm very sure it has height and that is even more pleasant. I favor more and more and more of the same dimension.

Lots of other people in the picture, of course, including a new and very fiery young woman whose name I couldn't even pronounce, not to say remember. But a Fairbanks picture is always mainly Fairbanks and in this case more so than ever. If he did not seem to have it securely in his possession I should wish that he might gain the secret of eternal youth and thus assure an endless supply of celluloid dreams to a world that needs them.

"SERENADE"

I AM told that Adolphe Menjou makes four pictures annually. I do not see, then, the reason for casting him in a story so old as this one. It may be, of course, that the aim was to prove even so venerable a yarn susceptible to rejuvenation—a proof that is given, whether or not—but it looks like plain extravagance to throw away one of four annual chances on a thing of this kind. It makes up, of course, as a splendid bit of entertainment. That, I feel, is because Menjou and those who work with him on his pictures could make entertainment out of anything.

This is the very old story about the nice little girl who marries the budding genius and then, as he buds, sits at home while he goes out to his glory and falls for some of its more attractive feminine representatives. As always, the nice little girl pretends to have found a fairly snappy admirer of her own and, again as always, the genius comes back home and everything is all right. What puzzles me about the thing is why they do it so often, when the front page of any newspaper in America, any day, contains a fresh synopsis of equal or greater appeal. Perhaps it's the old psychology to the actor who tells 'em the old jokes because they know when to laugh, but that isn't a very substantial psychology when Mr. Menjou is the actor concerned.

Taking this tattered remains of a story firmly in the left hand—by no means the right—Mr. Menjou and his director seem to have set out with the notion of making a picture in spite of it. Someone had the bright idea of using musical connotations for captions, an idea admirably capitalized, and someone had the idea of employing trick photographic slants and approaches to make the old stuff seem new. Two good ideas, these, in key with lots of other good ideas that come to light as the picture passes. They make of the tattered plot a new-looking picture; of a new plot they'd have made a masterpiece.

"Serenade," therefore, is a good picture. It disappointed me only in that I expect something better of each new Menjou vehicle. I know the libraries are full to overflowing with stories that no actor in Hollywood save Menjou can get away with in pictures. The thing that irks me is that these, as well as the front-page fiction of the daily press, are left unpictured while Menjou wastes his time making merely good pictures. Something, as King says, ought to be done about this.

WHERE'D THIS COME FROM?

I SAW, at MeVickers recently, a right smart reel in which Mr. Carter DeHaven "impersonated" several prominent film players. In each case, the player to be impersonated stepped in and did the impersonation, producing a nifty reel in every sense of the world. I gather, however, from the presence of Valentino and Arbuckle among those impersonated—by themselves, that the thing has been in existence a long, long time. Where has it been hiding out? And are there any more? And if not, why not?

MOVIETONE NEWS

THE visit to the Monroe (where they were showing "The Gateway of the Moon," discussed in these columns last week), was not without its pleasure. A reel of Movietone News was exhibited, also, and that is considerable something. I find in this reel, I think, the secret of successful sound reproduction, if such a thing there be.

The other sound reproductions I've heard, and I've heard at least enough, have flopped (to my way of thinking) in the matter of perspective. In almost none of them has the sound seemed to come from the spot where its creation was visibly recorded. The closeup, for instance, ruined the whole illusion. Not so in the case of the Movietone newsreel.

One of the most interesting scenes had to do with the testing out of a new locomotive. The thing was shown coming toward the camera, moving away from it, passing it, and then, on a track quite some distance away. In every case the sound perspective was the same as the sight perspective. This is the effect that should have been obtained in the first place and now let's keep it.

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

BABY MINE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy-drama, with Karl Dane, George K. Arthur, Charlotte Greenwood, and Louise Lorraine. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Released..... Length 5,139.

TYPE AND THEME: Comedy action for the exploitation of the united talents of Karl Dane and George K. Arthur. The plot runs thus: Jimmie and Oswald are college boys. Jimmie makes love to Helen, whose sister, Flo, is an old maid whom he wants off his hands. He compromises Oswald into an engagement. Oswald sees some flowers sent to Flo by another man and leaves, becoming a wrestler. On the eve of his biggest match Jimmie informs him that he's a father, then to make good the ruse, borrows an Italian baby. Flo confesses all and Oswald is pacified.

FINDERS KEEPERS: Universal comedy-drama, with Laura La Plante, John Harron, Edmund Breese, Arthur Rankin, Bill Gorman, Eddie Phillips, and Joe Mack. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Released February 5. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Love frolics in an army camp. Barbara, daughter of Colonel Archibald, has accepted engagement rings from half the regiment. But for Carter, a buck private, she sincerely falls. Then the regiment is ordered to France, and the lovers decide to marry secretly right away. Not to be detected, Barbara dresses as a soldier, but is caught by her father. The colonel also finds the rings and in an anonymous letter induces Barbara to meet him. She takes Carter, who scuffles with the "man" and has Barbara handcuff them together. To be released, the colonel has to permit the wedding.

GATEWAY OF THE MOON, THE: Fox melodrama, with Dolores Del Rio, Walter Pidgeon, Anders Randolf, Ed McNamara, Adolf Millar, Leslie Johnson, and Virginia LaFonde. Directed by John Griffith Wray. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: A story of savage intrigue and love in the jungles of Bolivia. There Gillespie, a brute, is chief engineer of a railroad project. Only Toni, his half-caste niece, has any love for him. Wyatt is sent by the company to investigate conditions. Gillespie has an ally, Gottman, take Mortlake, who might tell on him, deep into the jungle to die. Before his death, Mortlake writes a note to Wyatt which an Indian delivers. Infuriated, Wyatt prepares to leave for headquarters to report Gillespie. The latter induces Toni, whose love for Wyatt seems futile, to help him. But it is only in trying to help Wyatt that she helps her uncle. Wyatt is shot by Gottman, who thinks him dead. Finding Wyatt, Toni nurses him back to health and commands his vow of love.

LAST COMMAND, THE: Paramount drama, with Emil Jannings, Evelyn Brent, William Powell, Nicholas Soussanin, and Michael Visaroff. Directed by Josef von Sternberg. Released January 21. Length 8,234.

TYPE AND THEME: An uncommon story. Jannings, as former General Dolgoruchi of Russia, seeks a role in pictures in Hollywood. He is cast as a Russian general. What a jest! For, while he looks at a medal, the picture fades back many years. He protects a girl who has been insulted by his officers. She later tries to kill him for having spoken contemptuously to her comrade. Instead, she returns his love. Then, unbeknown to him, she is killed in a wreck. The Revolution has robbed him of his job. He searches everywhere for her. In Hollywood he meets her comrade, whom he had reproved. He is a director. He casts Jannings as the general. Once more at the head of charging troops, the general relieves his old self. His acting wins the director's admiration. But it is too much. The general collapses and dies.

LEOPARD LADY, THE: Pathe drama, with Jacqueline Logan, Alan Hale, Robert Armstrong, Hedwig Reicher, James Bradbury, Sr., Dick Alexander, William Burt, Sylvia Ashton, Kay Deslys, and Willie Mae Carson. Directed by Rupert Julian. Released January 23. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Apes, one notices, have been doing some of our best screen murders, recently. For this ape-murder-mystery story (from the stage play by the same title), Austria is the locale. A certain circus has a reputation of leaving tragedy in its wake, and the Vienna police ask beautiful Paula, leopard trainer, to join the troupe to find the reason why. Because her sweetheart, an actor, needs money, she accepts the deputation and after lively adventures, discovers the murderer to be the ape belonging to Hector, the lion tamer.

LET 'ER GO GALLEGHER: Pather drama, with Junior Coughlin, Harrison Ford, Elinor Fair, Wade Boteler, E. H. Calvert, and Ivan Lebedeff. Directed by Elmer Clifton. Released January 16. Length 5,888.

TYPE AND THEME: Gallegher is an alley kid whose runaway dog leads him to witness a burglary. Callahan, a reporter, is put on the case, but Callahan likes drink even better than reporting, a fact doubly sad because of his engagement to Clarissa. But Gallegher furnishes the evidence that the thief had only four fingers, and with that for a clue, he and Callahan hunt down the thief, an achievement which brings the romance out all right, too.

PERFECT GENTLEMAN, A: Pathe comedy, with Monty Banks, Henry Barrows, Ruth Dwyer, Arthur Thalasso, Jazel Howell, Agostino Borgato, Mary Foy, Ernie Wood, Sid Crossley, and Jackie Coombs. Directed by Clyde Bruckman. Released January 15. Length 5,626.

TYPE AND THEME: This is farce-comedy adapted to the special talents of the well-dressed Monty Banks. On his way to marry Helen, he is injured while repairing a blowout. Whiskey revives him and also makes him too drunk to be accepted as the bridegroom. Cooper, an unsuccessful suitor, intends sailing for South America with money stolen for some revolutionists. His idea is to have Monty sail with his ticket but not with the money. Monty inadvertently sails with both. On the same ship are Helen and her father, off, like Monty, to forget recent events. Monty continues to get into trouble but ultimately outwits the enraged revolutionists and reinstates himself as Helen's prospective husband.

SHIELD OF HONOR, THE: Universal melodrama, with Neil Hamilton, Dorothy Gulliver, Ralph Lewis, Nigel Barrie, Claire MacDowell, Fred Esmelton, Harry Northrup, Thelma Todd, David Kirby, Joe Girard, William Blakewell, and the dog Hank. Directed by Emory Johnson. Released..... Length 6,172.

TYPE AND THEME: The tale of a thief and a policeman. The police department has acquired an aviation division, of which Policeman Jack MacDowell is to be first flying officer. At the inaugural ceremonies, Jack meets Gwen O'Day, daughter of a wealthy jeweler. It transpires that O'Day is being systematically robbed, and he gets Jack to solve the mystery. When Jack's father is retired from the force, he assists Jack, and together they fasten the crime upon O'Day's business advisor. The climactic thrills ultimately place Gwen and Jack in each other's arms.

THAT CERTAIN THING: Columbia comedy-drama, with Viola Dana, Ralph Graves, Burr McIntosh, Aggie Herring, Carl Gerard, and Sydney Crossley. Directed by Frank Capra. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: A warm-hearted, comforting story of true hearts that win out against adversity, smiling, of course, right down to the happy, happy ending. Molly supports her family by working in a cigar stand, longing, meanwhile, for a rich husband. She gets him in Andy, son of a restaurant chain owner. They start out in luxury, then Andy is cut off. Undaunted, he gets a job as a day laborer to support his wife, and it is in overhearing his fellow workmen complain of his father's restaurants that he gets the idea of making a business out of the excellent lunches that Molly puts up for him. The Molly Box Lunch Company is launched, and proves so successful that Andy's father comes to buy it. He is so pleased with Molly that he tells Andy he should have married a girl like her. Then they tell him the wonderful truth.

WHAT PRICE BEAUTY? Pathe drama, with Nita Naldi, Pierre Gendron, Dolores Johnson, Virginia Pearson, Myrna Loy, Sally Winters, La Supervia, Marilyn Newkirk, Victor Potel, Spike Rankin, Templar Saxe and Leo White. Directed by Thomas Buckingham. Released January 22. Length 5,000.

TYPE AND THEME: This is a story about Mary (Miss Johnson) though Rita (Miss Naldi) is the premiere role. Perhaps because Rita is a practiced charmer, and Mary only a novice. Mary works in a beauty parlor, where she falls in love with the manager, Clay. Rita, also fancying Clay, works her magic upon him—clothes, exotic perfumes, and that sort of thing. Mary is left to dream of what might have been—herself with Rita's sophisticated lure and Clay as her gallant defender. But awaking, she finds that after all her natural beauty is best, for does it not win Clay's love?

WOMAN WISE: Fox comedy-drama, with William Russell, June Collyer, Walter Pidgeon, Theodore Kosloff, Raoul Paoli, Ernest Shields, and Duke Kahanamoku. Directed by Albert Ray. Released January 8. Length 5,050.

TYPE AND THEME: In this one the hero does not win the girl—and doesn't mind a bit. His name is Brad, Brad Wilson, and he's sojourning in Persia seeking more light affairs with women. One day he hears a woman, who is being escorted by two eunuchs, cry for help. He dashes to her relief and is joined by the American consul, Gage. The woman proves to be the pasha's new wife. Brad goes to live at the consulate, Gage being a confirmed bachelor. But an assistant comes, Joan, and she starts changing methods at the consulate. Brad is fascinated by her, but Gage is contemptuous, though it is plain he is falling for her. Then the pasha's henchmen attack the consulate and a lively fight ensues, in which the pasha is killed. Gage and Joan vow their love and Brad rides away, playing on his harmonica, "I learned about women from her. . . ."

Your Classified Ad Will Do the Work!

Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organists all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and also in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 10c per word. See this week's classified page. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.

PRESS SHEETS

BRANDED SOMBRERO, THE (Fox): A suggestion for a coupon stunt, is to give out small slips or cards carrying an ad cut and catch line copy. In one corner is imprinted a single letter taken from the title. Free admission is given to those persons who bring a complete set of cards whose letters spell out the name of the picture. You can limit the number of free admissions in the following manner: To give you a total of 5,000 cards the printer turns out 400 cards carrying each of the letters in the title, except the letter "M." Of these only 25 are printed. In that way there can be only 25 winners of free admission.

BURNING UP BROADWAY (Sterling): Get the police department to cooperate with you in a "You Can't Win" campaign, referring to crooks, or even to speeders, if your town has a lot of transient traffic. Put up signs with "You Can't Win! 'Burning Up Broadway' Tells Why. See it at the.....theatre (Date)." Hire someone to dress as a devil and to parade the town with a sign on his back saying: "Burning Up Broadway." The flaming appearance of the devil will put over the "Burning Up" allusion.

CHICAGO (Pathe): Posters and heralds can be distributed about the town, some can be placed on taxicabs or streetcars announcing that "If you want to see 'Chicago' now on view or soon to be shown at the.....theatre we will take you there, Fare....." The idea can be employed to advantage in various ways, notably throwaways announcing that "If you can't go to Chicago, see the picture at the.....Theatre. You will save time and money by doing this. Give a prize for the best essay on "Is jazz life, as seen in 'Chicago' harmful to society?" Also you may have teasers with "No law students need go to Chicago to study legal procedure in criminal courts. See 'Chicago' at the.....Theatre and save money and time. . . . Have the representatives of Chicago Business houses display stills from the picture in their windows. Another suggestion for a contest is to have the people guess the name of the cigarettes smoked by the leading actors in "Chicago" and offer a prize for the winner.

FINDERS KEEPERS (Universal): Tie up with your song dealer, getting him to put his entire window with a display of the song, "Finders Keepers." Also put a display of press sheets in the window. . . . Play the song during the showing of the picture and also throughout the previous week, announcing it by means of a slide. . . . Put on a presentation, offering a prize for the one who sings the song the best. . . . If there is a radio station in your town try to get a song pluggler and put it on the air. . . . You can also offer a slight reduction in price for all those who bring along a copy of the song, splitting the expense with the song dealer. Display the sheet music in your lobby also. . . . A suggestion is to have heralds scatter about the town announcing awards to those with certain tickets. . . . Have a box in the lobby of the show and all with winning tickets can pick their awards from the box. Put a sign on the box "Finders Keepers." Have local merchants donate prizes as advertisements.

GATEWAY OF THE MOON, THE (Fox): This stunt may work for the opening night or may continue throughout the run. Tie up with a dealer for the Moon car and have him call for the people who wish to attend the picture. Naturally the salesman will try to make a sale for his car. Signs can be carried on the car telling of taking the people to the show. A suggestion for a sign is as follows: "The Gateway of the Moon leads to pleasure and comfort at (Dealer's Name) and the.....Theatre" or, "Have You Any Troubles? Lose them at 'The Gateway of the Moon,' to be at the.....theatre (Date)."

LAST COMMAND, THE (Paramount): Scatter teasers all over the town with "The Last Command" printed on them. Also tie up with the newspaper, and announce a prize for the best essay of 100 word length on the subject "What Makes Emil Jannings a Great Actor?" or "Why Emil Jannings Is My Favorite Actor?" Offer a second prize for the best essay on "What I Believe to Be the Most Famous Last Command" . . . Send postcards to those on your mailing list. A suggestion for copy is "Emil Jannings will appear at the.....theatre in 'The Last Command' on (Date). Our command to you, if you enjoy a real picture, is to see it. Sincerely, the management."

LEOPARD LADY, THE (Pathe): Have a man, made up as a clown, parade through your streets beating a drum and followed by several children bearing banners with the name "The Leopard Lady" and dates of the showing. Place stills depicting scenes in the production in the show windows of your local merchants and tie them up with your forthcoming showings. Offer a prize for the best essay on the general topics—"The Circus—is public interest waning?" "Will photoplays like 'The Leopard Lady' keep that interest alive?" "Are animal pictures popular?"

PERFECT GENTLEMAN, A (Pathe): Every man's store and haberdashery offers tie-ups for window displays, black and white photos and cut-outs from the posters. Similar tie-ups and window displays are possible with nearly every merchant in town—cigar stores, candy stores, newsstands, florists and even bootblacks. A copy suggestion for window displays is as follows: "Every gentleman is polished! . . . See Monty Banks in 'A Perfect Gentleman.'" You can also send out cards to your patrons with a black hand on the front. On the back of the card should be "No perfect gentleman would have a hand like this—But you should see Monty Banks' idea of 'A Perfect Gentleman' to be shown at the..... Theatre (Date)."

SHIELD OF HONOR, THE (Universal): Teasers can be thrown about the town with "You Can't Win! for the wearers of 'The Shield of Honor' are always on the job." On the reverse side can be printed "You Can Win an evening of entertainment by seeing 'The Shield of Honor' at the..... Theatre (Date)." . . . Have buttons or banners made with the following: "Are you worthy of wearing 'The Shield of Honor?' If so see it at the..... Theatre (Date)." Dress your ushers and doorman as much like policemen as possible. This will create a lot of attention and will advertise the picture. . . . Also give a prize for the best essay on "Does this town need aerial policemen? If so, see how they work in 'The Shield of Honor!'"

THAT CERTAIN THING (Columbia): Have posters printed with "Have You 'That Certain Thing'?" or, "What is 'That Certain Thing?'" Find out at the.....theatre (Date)." Have signs put in various parts of the town with "Go Two Blocks East" and find "That Certain Thing" or in other places you can say, "Only.....more feet and you will see 'That Certain Thing.'" Also if there is a box lunch concern in your town you can arrange for them to insert heralds in each box with " 'That Certain Thing' is coming" printed on them.

WHAT PRICE BEAUTY (Pathe): Suggestions for teaser ad copy are: "Did you pay the price of beauty? If so how? See 'What Price Beauty' at the.....theatre (Date)." Or, "What is the secret of the French called the 'Fatal Gift?'" Nita Naldi demonstrates it in 'What Price Beauty,' which is to be shown at the.....theatre (Date)."

WOMAN WISE (Fox): The title "Woman Wise" offers a chance for co-operative newspaper advertising, taking up a single page or a double truck. A large scenic cut is sawed into segments, one part to go in each ad on the page. Readers are offered a prize for re-assembling the pieces to make the complete picture. The entrants must number each piece to indicate which ad it came from and tell the name and address of the advertiser, as well as his slogan if he has one. Get the merchants to put a window display to tie up with their advertising. Lobby displays, insert cards, and cutouts will help dress the windows. Local conditions will suggest changes. Copy like the following should top the page. . . . "What the 'Woman Wise' Buys and Where."

LEOPARD LADY, THE (Pathe): This is a story of circus life. Wherever the circus goes, a murder is committed, therefore play up the mystery angle by having the following copy printed for throwaways: "Reward—A substantial sum will be paid for the arrest and conviction of 'The little old woman' suspected for the murder of Frau Holweg. . . . For particulars see 'The Leopard Lady' at the.....theatre (date)." "Wanted—Information regarding the whereabouts of 'the little old woman,' who is suspected of murdering several persons within the last month. For description see 'The Leopard Lady,' coming to the.....theatre (date)." "Warning—A circus is coming to town and will be seen at the.....theatre (date) where you will see the 'Leopard Lady.' Be careful! An ape disguised as an old woman may approach you. If so notify the police at once."

NOOSE, THE (First National): Print bluff summons reading, "You are hereby notified to appear as a witness at the trial of the state of (insert name of your state) vs. Nickie Elkins, for the murder of Buck Gordon," and on the reverse side of this summons print a press sheet cut with some of the copy, adding "And this trial is only one of the dramatic and thrilling episodes of 'The Noose,' which will be shown at the..... theatre next..... (date)." For some unusual publicity, if you live near a prison, try to arrange with the warden to show the film to the prisoners, and have them write the answer to the question "Should Nickie Elkins Have Told the Truth?" Try to get written endorsement of the film from the police commissioner, being sure to use his letter in your ads. Get a man dressed in convict clothes (that is, black and white striped trousers and jacket) and have him patrol the front of the theatre, or the whole town, with a gun or a long handled stone hammer over his shoulder.

ONE GLORIOUS SCRAP (Universal): Organize a "Thrill Feature Club" among the school children, but be sure that you put it over in the right way or it will not be an asset to your theatre.

SUGGESTIONS FOR LOBBY CARDS

Fresh, attractive lobby displays of stills are long established as highly important "draws." The cards above, prepared by First National for "Sailors' Wives," show how stills can be displayed in unique patterns, augmenting the picture appeal with the old reliable appeal of novelty.

Incorporated in this department of Moving Picture World is the Exhibitors Herald department, "Available Attractions."

The key to abbreviations used in denoting the type of picture:

- C—Comedy
- D—Drama

New Blanks to Be Made Up Soon

AMASA, MICH.—To THE EDITOR: In studying exhibitors' reports in "What the Picture Did For Me" and checking up on these reports on the pictures, I find that there is a criticism of no little importance which is omitted chiefly because there is nothing on the report blanks which covers this angle.

I refer to the photography and by photography I mean, is the picture easy on the eyes or does it require an eyestrain to follow it on the screen? Some pictures have perfect light, fore and aft focus with sharp definition throughout the entire picture. Others have these desirable features in part and yet others not at all.

Every so often a good picture is spoiled by inferior photography; I am sure that many exhibitors have had an experience of this kind. It is exasperating after special exploitation has been resorted to in order to get out many of the people who are not regular patrons to see a real picture, and then have the picture spoiled by a poor screening.

If each report carried with it an item like this:

Photography—Good or excellent (fair) (poor), it would be of considerable benefit to the exhibitors to know that besides being a mighty good production that the audience will be able to follow it without effort due to poor photography.

It would be interesting to know how other exhibitors feel about this matter.—ELMER HOLMBERG, "Pioneer Pete," The Pioneer theatre, Amasa, Mich.

[Editor's Note: In answer to Mr. Holmberg's request, exhibitors are asked to report on any unusual features of the picture, whether requested specifically or not. New blanks will be made up shortly in which will be incorporated any new features called to our attention by exhibitors.]

And Now for the Convention

ALEXANDRIA, MINN.—To THE EDITOR: Congratulations on the combine. Though a little late in expressing myself I meant well, and read every column even to Jaysee Jenkins morning after confession.

Really it is interesting to know that J. C. is still alive after imbibing so freely, and while we all felt sorry to hear of his home burning, why should that make him try to drown his troubles in Mexico?

Well, at any rate, let's hope his insurance will reimburse his enough to allow him to come up here and build, where the fish strike Dempsey, the wonderful golf course beckons to him and the gravelled or paved roads will please "Marie" so well that he and the family will become regular voters here.

I am not laying down on the job, fellows. While Crockett Brown and the rest are hankering for the big meet here next summer, the wheels are turning slow but sure, and if we don't get the gang here for a big meet, a big golf tournament, a big fish fry, all the boating, driving and refreshments included it won't be my fault; as the old latch string hangs outside and the dozens of conventions held here every summer by the big business concerns from all over the United States should convince all the gang that there is real enjoyment to be had in connection with the business sessions while here.

I want to see Crockett, Tragsdorf, Phil, the Rabbi, Estee, Pioneer Pete, Sprague, Meyer, and the whole darn bunch get together, forget they are out for each other's hide and enjoy themselves. (It would make a good news reel.)

We should have Will Rogers as toast master, a bevy of his Hollywood friends and their friends to give us the lowdown on where all the money goes to which we pay for rentals and why, if it is not distributed evenly.

There is something rotten in Denmark and we ought to find it and if we don't get together often we never will get out of the old rut.

I'll arrange it with the local authorities so that if any of the bunch do want to fight it out they can do so without interruption.

Well, now that's off my chest. I wonder if I can suggest to J. C. that what he needs is a plane similar to the one Lindy uses, so he can get over the country in much faster time (no reflection on "Marie") so we can see him oftener. Darn his old hide, I do think he's a pretty good old scout.—H. J. LONGAKER, State Theatre, Alexandria, Minnesota.

[Editor's Notes: H. J. enclosed several photographs to give the boys an idea of convention headquarters. These will be published in the next issue.]

Thanks for Correction

HUMBLE, TEX.—To THE EDITOR: As a general rule you can depend upon what is printed in your paper but in your issue of January 14 on page 7 you state that the Queen theatre in Houston is a good example of a house that holds up admission prices, stating that they change twice weekly and charge 50c top price.

I happened to be in Houston yesterday and attended the Queen and saw a First National picture, "French Dressing," a two-reel educational comedy and a Kinograms news reel. It cost me 15 cents for admission to any seat in the house and this was about 1 p. m.

The door man handed me the enclosed dodger which bears the heading:

"YOUR QUEEN, NEW LOW PRICES NOW EFFECTIVE, BARGAIN MATINEES."

And goes on to state the prices range from five cents for children and 15 cents for adults to 10 cents for children and 35 cents for adults, depending upon what time you attend.

In the interest of fairness to exhibitors who might be misled by your article I think you should give this the publicity it deserves.

It makes it extremely difficult to get any decent prices in the suburban towns like we are when pictures play first run in Houston at five and 15 cents.—E. N. COLLINS, Star Theatre, Humble, Texas.

Offers Advertising Suggestion

COLUMBUS, O.—To THE EDITOR: The following is an advertising scheme which the writer believes would be something new and would get results. Please advise your opinion of this method of advertising.

The producer of pictures would make phonographic records in which a synopsis of the picture, together with a history of the making of the picture, would be reproduced. A well-known star, for instance, would give the synopsis and the historic data connected with the making of the picture with any outstanding features such as the length of the time to make the picture, its cost, etc. This synopsis of foreword would also include the author of the picture, the director and the producing company.

While this synopsis or foreword is being given the musical theme is being softly played throughout this discourse. It is the plan of the system that the producer make these phonographic records in large numbers, sufficient to supply each motion picture house in which the picture may be shown, the records to be for distribution at the theatre a proper

Here's Good Advice For All Exhibitors

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 24.—Exhibitor members of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware are urged in a bulletin from the association headquarters to avoid overbuying, to save all communications from exchanges, keep copies of letters to exchanges, place everything in writing; see that the series number in group buying is followed by the year; give notice within prescribed time on termination of contracts; give correct box-office statements if entering upon percentage contracts; be sure to answer a summons to appear before a Board of Arbitration; advise exchange or film board of extent of manager's authority to sign statements for owners; advise exhibitor organization of any difficulties; see that your contracts show what theatres you are to play ahead of; and be sure to complete membership in your state organization.

length of time prior to the show date. These records are to be sold by the producer to the exhibitor, the latter to distribute them to his patrons gratis.

It is also suggested that these records be made in 12 inches for making special announcements at the theater. It is not the intention of this system to have records on every picture. Only about 20 pictures a year would be suitable to make this a worthwhile proposition.

Kindly let me hear from you as to your opinion of the advertising value of the above. W. J. RUSSELL, Columbia Theatre, Columbus, O.

From Phil to Jaysee

SALMON, IDAHO.—To THE EDITOR:

"Fee, fi, fo, fum Hear the tale that Jenkins spun."

J. C., in his letter (January 14 edition), written down in that Dante's inferno—Arizona—painted desert-country, that grows only cacti, Tombstones, and a gosh-awful thirst, starts right in roasting some of us strictly decent exhibitors by accusing us of making some pious and holy New Year resolutions, only to "bust 'em" wide open the next time temptation assaileth. He further carols that he has himself risen to the upper cool levels of pure reason and makes no resolutions; in fact, his conscience is as clear as the waters of Lake Lucerne.

Pish, piffle! and Powder Puffs! The fact is that J. C. is suffering from a terrifically guilty conscience and a worse headache and longs to hear "the tinkle of the ice in the patcher a coming down the hall," and afraid that someone will "peach" on him, hits out first—but his very words entangle him. He first drinks Mexican beer, then he wanders off into the desert and like other seers, has visions, and as a result, writes the finest bit of laughable descriptive matter on the southwest that I, for one, have ever read, and in fact, produces a classic that will rank with Will Rogers' funniest. If that letter isn't itself proof that J. C. was all lit up like a Christmas tree then I'll eat a bushel of Jenkins' "enchiladas," and go up in smoke.

J. C., you old h—l raiser, a few more racing descriptive letters like that will find you in Mark Twain's class.

For Pete's sake, go on to Hollywood, stop, look and listen, then broadcast! I dare you to!—PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon Idaho.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating reported received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

A New Era

sized by Educational. By using both amplifiers a perfect grand volume is maintained. Each amplifier has several stages of volume which can be instantly regulated by the operator in the projection booth. The records used for Vocofilm can be run thirty to fifty times without materially changing the nature of the sound.

In addition to the ease with which Vocofilm can be installed and rapidly with which an operator may learn its operation, every precaution imaginable to prevent the interruption of a performance has been incorporated, the announcement says. The re-establishment of synchronism between the picture and the sound is a matter of only a moment's effort on the part of the operator and the performance goes on in perfect synchronization.

The double system of amplification guards against any danger of one amplifier going wrong, for the other amplifier continues in service without interruption of performance. It maintains a sufficient volume for a satisfactory hearing until the first amplifier can be properly adjusted. When a Vocofilm record is broken, the operator has available at least one extra duplicate record for use in continuation of performance, this record always being supplied for such a contingency. However, Vocofilm records may be run nearly fifty times without material alteration of the sound.

Gotham Films Selected For 2 Theatre Openings

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The New York offices of Lumas Film Corporation report that last week was the record breaker in every department of distribution. It was pointed out by Budd Rogers, vice-president of Lumas, that of two important new theatres opening last week, both selected a Gotham production for their premiere presentation. The New State theatre in Toledo offered "The Cheer Leader," and the new Ambassador, Cleveland, "Rose of Kildare."

New British Firm Lists Six Features, 70 Shorts in First Year's Schedule

Donald Crisp and Olive Borden Asked to Make Pictures for Young Producer

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Among the latest new companies is one to be known as British Screen Productions, which is shortly to make a public capital issue. Its first year's program will include "Mr. Moody," directed by Frank Miller; a full length travel film of the Balkans; four other full length features, and about seventy shorts. This company will take over British Screen Classics. Exhibitors are to sit on the board.

Producers Seek Public Cash

Julius Hagen, recently with W. P., whose initial film, "The Fake," was a success, has broken with his associates and is to start another concern. The company will go to the public for cash and will have a nominal capital of £250,000. A tie-up with a German firm has already been arranged.

Another British company likely to raise fresh capital by public subscription is New Era, which recently took over Stoll distribution. This company is now making "Guns of Loos," but a questionnaire in Bristol placed war films next to the bottom in a list of a dozen types of films, and everywhere the latest war stuff is flopping badly.

Crisp, Olive Borden Approached

Donald Crisp has been approached by the new Westminster Picture corporation to direct. Another American, Olive Borden, now with Fox, also received an invitation to play in British pictures.

Phonofilms at Wembley

De Forest Phonofilms, recently taken over by I. Schlesinger, head of the big South African theatre combine, is to start a studio at Wembley, near the site chosen by the Wembley Film Syndicate.

Smiling Through

but he'll pay it. Then he lays his cards on the table.

It seems the company he's releasin' through is tickled to death with "Cute Hoofs" work and has offered him a releasin' contract for a series of two reelers like he had made, at a higher price than he had been gettin', if he could guarantee them exclusive release on "Cute Heels." So while it nearly kills him to come across with that much per week, he can afford it.

It sure looks like I'm fixed for life as long as "Cute Heels" lives anyhow. Thirty per cent of $500 a week will have me sittin' pretty. But I ain't found Bugs yet.

I calls up Bugs' hotel in Hollywood and the clerk tells me Bugs just come in at four o'clock that mornin'. I gets him on the phone tho it takes about fifteen minutes to wake him up sufficient.

"I been lookin' for you all over town," I says. "How's 'Cute Heels'?"

"Damfino," he says. "I lost her to a Mexican in a poker game last night and he left for Tia Juana with her. What's chances of gettin' me a job?"

Offer $2,000,000 Bonds On Missouri in St. Louis

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 24.—S. W. Straus & Company is offering for sale in St. Louis and vicinity, $2,000,000 first mortgage serial gold bonds, fee 6 per cent, on the Missouri Building, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, which includes Missouri theatre, several stores and many offices. The bonds are dated January 15, 1928, and mature serially in three to twelve years and are being offered at par. It is stated that the mortgaged property has been appraised at $3,200,000.

Since the consummation of the realty deal involving the Missouri, Ambassador and Grand Central, Skouras stock has been watched with much interest.

Incorporated in this original exhibitors report department of Exhibitors Herald, which was established October 14, 1916, is the Moving Picture World department, "Straight from the Shoulder Reports."

Columbia

ISLE OF FORGOTTEN WOMEN: Conway Tearle—100%. January 8-9. Only fair. Title I think is what drew them in. Seven reels.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

PAYING THE PRICE: Special cast—29%. January 6-7. Good picture but old, although lost money. The patrons that did see it liked it fine. Six reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

STAGE KISSES: Special cast—A hackneyed story done by artists who act like sticks of wood, I would think a director would lose his mind if he has any working with a crowd performing like this crowd does. Decidedly poor entertainment and if you show this you will have many patrons walk out on you. Six reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE CLOWN: Johnny Walker—Another splendid picture enjoyed by our appreciative audience. Smiles and compliments assured us of the success of the program. Columbia have all been good so far. Six reels.—Oscar Reinert, Elite theatre, Humboldt, Kan.—Small town patronage.

F B O

THE MAGIC GARDEN: Margaret Morris—60%. December 26-27. The film version of Gene Stratton Porter's last novel, and it is very well done to say the least. A sweet little story with an artistic element in the foreground. Beautiful settings and good acting makes this truly worth while. It is not worth the price F B O thinks it is but it is a good little story and will get by. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

LURE OF THE NIGHT CLUB: Viola Dana—20%. January 6. Just a movie. Good star. No story.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

JUDGMENT OF THE HILLS: Special cast—60%. November 26. Good, you need not be afraid of F B O bonds this year, they are so far way above what they have done in the past. I have run about nine of them and not a sorry one in the bunch. Seven reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

JUDGMENT OF THE HILLS: Special cast—27%. January 4. Story splendid. Pleased all who came. Seven reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

FLAME OF THE ARGENTINE: Evelyn Brent—25%. January 3. A good action picture gave satisfaction as a program.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA OR BUST: George O'Hara—70%. December 17-18. Five reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—General patronage.

KOSHER KITTY KELLY: Special cast—75%. November 5-6. Seven reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—General patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—40%. November 26. Jumping Silver from the train was quite a bit too much even for our cowboy and rodeo loving fans, and we have real Western fans here too. Seven reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

LADDIE: Special cast—25%. December 27. Seven reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

THE TOUGH GUY: Fred Thomson—35%. Sep-

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given picture in report).

When a picture has received percentage ratings in 10 reports it is entered in THE BOX OFFICE TICKER with its current gross average indicating relative attraction values of pictures listed therein.

tember 24-25. Too much rain, nobody came. Six reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—Small town patronage.

TOM'S GANG: Tom Tyler—January 7. This is a jim dandy Tyler picture for Saturday. Tom has his whole gang with him in this one. Due to a break in the weather had the best Saturday crowd since the snow clogged up the roads. How the kids did enjoy it, and the adults enjoyed it even more than the kids. Have one more of Tom's on last year's contract to run, and have just bought all of his for the 1928 season. Here's hoping Tyler keeps his gang intact in every picture, as the patrons expect them. Five reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE MOJAVE KID: Bob Steele—December 27-28. A very good picture, some of the most beautiful scenes I have ever seen in a picture. Give us more like it, Bob, my patrons like your picture fine. Print good. Five reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

THE GORILLA HUNT: Ben Burbridges—January 2-3. A very good box office results and very poor comments on this picture, it was not what it was expected to be. Six reels.—M. H. Haymans, Dreamland theatre, Metter, Ga.—General patronage.

THE COWARD: Warner Baxter—January 13-14. Baxter at his best which means a good picture. Some magnificent outdoor shots in this. The photography in this year's F B O pictures is the best I have ever seen. Ran this as half of a double program night with "Mother" (another good one) as the other half. A dandy show to good business. Six reels.—E. M.

Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

JAKE THE PLUMBER: Jess De Vorska—Very good program picture. Seven reels.—H. E. Schlichter, Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan.—General patronage.

MOON OF ISRAEL: Special cast—A very nice entertaining picture on the order of "Ten Commandments." It seemed to please generally and F B O don't rob you on rentals. Six reels.—R. A. Shobe, Strand and Lyric theatres, Monticello, Ind.—General patronage.

MOON OF ISRAEL: Special cast—Not as good as "The Ten Commandments" but gave fair satisfaction. Fair business. Some very big scenes. Seven reels.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—Small town patronage.

RACING ROMEO: Red Grange—Grange is not a bad actor and his support in this was very good. Enough good comedy to make a well balanced feature. Racing scenes were especially good. Six reels.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION: Special cast—This surprised me very much with its drawing power. Had the best Monday and Tuesday at regular admissions we've had for months. All about the lovely white girl (Edna Murphy) being sacrificed to the Sun God, and of course being saved in the nick of time. However, it is well done, and gives folks a happy thrilling evening which is all they are looking for.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

KOSHER KITTY KELLY: Viola Dana—Well the people are pretty well fed up on this kind of stuff and of course this did not get in the running with the "Cohens and the Kellys." Seven reels.—Giacomina Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Alberta Vaughan—January 10-11. This is a clean little comedy drama with a lot of action in it. Drew better than I thought it would on my two poorest nights. Nice little program picture. Five reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

First National

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard—89%. November 12. I have run all Maynard's and they are all first class action Westerns. He is getting the top here for Westerns. Seven reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard—January 12-13. The first one of Ken's of this season's product and it will stack up with those he turned out last year. Plenty of action, injuns 'n everything. Ken and Tarzan pleased their fans. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—20%. January 10. Good program and Richard done well this time as for satisfaction. Not the best football picture but will satisfy majority of the movie goers. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SEE YOU IN JAIL: Jack Mulhall—12%. January 3. This show pleased the majority of my patrons which is hard to do here so it must have been good. Jack Mulhall is coming to the front every day. Don't be afraid of this one, boys. Six reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

LOST AT THE FRONT: Special cast—30%. Not so much. Too vulgar in spots, and comedy didn't even seem to hit right.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

LOST AT THE FRONT: Charley Murray—January 8-9. If laughter is any criterion I would say that this pleased better than "Behind the Front." Pleased everyone and had a good second night. One of the funniest things about this picture is that George Sidney's name appears first in all the billing. When we take into consideration some of the dizzy, poppycock, contracts the producers have to sign, it is no wonder some of them go nuts. Six reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdof, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CONVOY: Special cast—45%. A fair story that depends on the U. S. Navy films to keep the picture from being classed as poor. However the Navy films of transporting our boys to France and the battle of Jutland are worth seeing. It pulled slightly better the second night which speaks well for it here. Sight reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

CONVOY: Dorothy Mackaill—December 18-19.—Good picture. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

BABE COMES HOME: Special cast—40%. A comedy-drama of a dirty baseball uniform. Has plenty of comedy in it too. A basketball tournament interfered with receipts, but everybody liked it. Play it. Six reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

QUO VADIS: Special cast—60%. December 27-28... Almost died of heart failure the way this picture went over. Mailed every preacher a press book and a pair of tickets. They must have done the rest, also had the trailer on the exchange. This is worth trying if you have any kind of a church or school town. Ten reels.—John Cosner, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE LOVE MART: Special cast—Eight reels and it has not a dull moment, that is something to say for a picture nowadays. Adventurous Romance, and should please old and young alike. A very good production, interesting story, and splendid cast. Eight reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: Special cast—January 9. Had more favorable comments on this picture than any of the 27-28 productions. The director selected a wonderful cast and the settings and photography excellent. Francis excellent as the Shepherd. Business fair. Nine reels.—C. H. McCroskey, Allied theatre, Dermott, Ark.—Small town patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore—The truth of the matter, is that "Her Wild Oat" is the biggest box office picture we have had from any film company this year, my patrons laughed right out loud, and didn't give a rip who heard them for they had come to see the show and enjoy it, and they did, the most pleasing photoplay this season. Play it quick they will like it. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

GUN GOSPEL: Ken Maynard—January 2. A very good picture, it is the first time that he has played this house, doing a very good business. My advice is to play him up big. Six reels.—Newell E. Ware, Comique theatre, Camden, Me.—General patronage.

SMILE, BROTHER, SMILE: Special cast—Excellent little picture that keeps one smiling throughout. This team is there with the goods—personality plus. Seven reels.—H. E. Schlichter, Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan.—General patronage.

THE CRYSTAL CUP: Special cast—January 7. Not the type of picture that this pair of real stars usually appear in, but it's not a half bad picture. Women will like it more than men. Not much of a kid picture. Dorothy Mackaill does some great work. Seven reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE: Special cast—I would rate this as rotten. There is absolutely no necessity for showing some of the naked scenes, and if F. N. can't make comedy in a picture without resorting to such methods I sure won't have use for any more of their product.—W. H. Goodroad, Strand theatre, Warren, Minn.—General patronage.

THE POOR NUT: Jack Mulhall—A good average program picture but no special and not worth an advance in admission. Pictures like this are sold as specials and the production costs are zero, but nevertheless all pictures over five reels in length are specials except the eight to twelve reels and these are super-specials. So what's the use. If it was sold to you brother as a special, you are a nut. The cheer leader, and Murray helped a lot in putting the show over. Jeane Arthur very easy on the eyes and I predict a bright future for this little lady. Wouldn't mind having a photo of her for my lobby, and by the way this is the first movie star I have ever asked for a photo. Seven reels.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

Another "J. C." Joins Staff

Joseph C. Fisher, who has been given the cognomen, "Eagle Eye Joe," by J. C. Jenkins, our rambling columnist, has joined the editorial staff of "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" and will become assistant editor of "What the Picture Did for Me."

You may expect an occasional letter from Mr. Fisher, and, too, you may count on him as your confidant.

THE STOLEN BRIDE: Billie Dove—Billie seems to be kicking them over here, better than her pampered sister actor, Colleen. I will take her pictures every time if she will keep up the good work.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE MASKED WOMAN: Anna Q. Nilsson—January 3-4. Only a fair program picture that fell flat at the box office. Print good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

BREAKFAST AT SUNRISE: Constance Talmadge—"Beau Geste" was worthy of the gold medal for being the best picture in 1927, then this one should be awarded the leather medal for being the punkest one, both as to drawing power and entertainment value. Thank God this is the last one from First National. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

SOMEWHERE IN SONORA: Ken Maynard—January 1. Very good Western. Plenty of action and impossible stuff. Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

HARD BOILED HAGGERTY: Milton Sills—January 10-11. Rotten, why try to put this vulgar stuff up to your people? This picture is full of it.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

THE GORILLA: Special cast—Just fair mystery which my people did not like. Poor Sunday picture for me. Played New Year's and following day to a flop.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

KIKI: Norma Talmadge—December 25-26. Pretty good program picture. Not a special. Print good. Nine reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

TOO MUCH MONEY: Old, but better than many late ones. Clean anyway.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

THE OVERLAND STAGE: Ken Maynard—December 21. Very good Western. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—25%. November 9. It makes me mad when they won't come out to see a dandy picture like this. I feel like shutting up the theatre and let 'em drive 18 miles to a picture show. Especially when we have to pay double the amount for Colleen that we have to pay for other stars. Darn! Seven reels.—Leona Conner, Columbia theatre, Milton, Ia.—Small town patronage.

BABE COMES HOME: Babe Ruth—60%. October 19-20. A real good baseball picture but not just what they were looking for. No kicks, however. Six reels.—M. W. Hughes, Colonial theatre, Astoria, Ill.—General patronage.

THE SEA TIGER: Milton Sills—25%. October 18-19. A thrilling tale of two brothers' love. As deep as the sea, they said. It's very adventurous. The scenery and background is in and around the Canary Islands off the Northwest coast of Africa. The carnival scenes are beautifully done. Failed to do usual business, but the picture is there. Six reels.—Perry G. Walker, Amusu theatre, Statesboro, Ga.—General patronage.

Fox

OUTLAWS OF RED RIVER: Tom Mix—91%. January 11-12. Very good. Different from the ordinary Western. Six reels.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

SILVER VALLEY: Tom Mix—90%. January 7. Short but sweet is the title I can give this picture, short because it is only on five reels, sweet because we had a full house and stood them up. This is a good Western with Tom Mix looking a trifle over fifty, but pulling some good stunts in return. Personally, I think Westerns are the bunk but it seems they are necessary for Saturday nights. Five reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SILVER VALLEY: Tom Mix—90%. December 29-30. Just another good Mix. More comedy than usual. Five reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

BLACK JACK: Buck Jones—85%. December 22-23. Pulled them in although it was week before Xmas. Good Western, pleased all. Five reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

SLAVES OF BEAUTY: Special cast—13%. January 10. A fair program picture. Six reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BLUE EAGLE: George O'Brien—20%. October 15. No good, too much Navy, liked it myself but no box office.—C. L. Griffith, Courtesy theatre, Opheim, Mont.—General patronage.

WHISPERING SAGE: Buck Jones—50%. December 21-22. Way better than average Western, but did not draw. Buck Jones usually gets us a good house. Five reels.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

IS ZAT SO: George O'Brien—65%. September 3-4. Good picture, but too warm for my patrons. Six reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—Small town patronage.

IS ZAT SO: Special cast—45%. December 28-29. Seemed to please, getting hearty laughs from a small audience. Seven reels.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

IS ZAT SO: Very good picture. Really the best O'Brien has been in for a long time. Good entertainment, program? Yes.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

THE FAMILY UPSTAIRS: Special cast—50%. September 24. Very clean little picture that did well here.—C. L. Griffith, Courtesy theatre, Opheim, Mont.—General patronage.

NO MAN'S GOLD: Special cast—75%. September 30. Very fine Western that they all liked.—C. L. Griffith, Courtesy theatre, Opheim, Mont.—General patronage.

MARRIAGE: Virginia Valli—18%. December 27. A very good picture. Sorry I didn't run same on a Sunday. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HILLS OF PERIL: Buck Jones—15%. December 23-24. A good Western.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NO MAN'S GOLD: Tom Mix—December 30-31. Good picture. Print good. Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

FIG LEAVES: Special cast—79%. November 12. Perfect, wonderful fashion show that sure went over. Tie up with woman's shop and knock 'em dead.—C. L. Griffith, Courtesy theatre, Opheim, Mont.—General patronage.

THE BRONCHO TWISTER: Tom Mix—100%. October 15-16. Tom Mix brings them in. Bad night, but they came anyhow, said they wanted to see Tom behave himself. Six reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—General patronage.

MOTHER: Belle Bennett—50%. January 5. One of the best program pictures we ever played. Star, cast and story great.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SHAMROCK HANDICAP: Special cast—55%. September 17. Fair program picture will satisfy a few.—C. L. Griffith, Courtesy theatre, Opheim, Mont.—General patronage.

THREE BAD MEN: Special cast—40%. January 1-2. A fine picture, but too old to draw for us. Also had bad weather. Nine reels.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

NELIGH, NEB., January 19, 1928.

This letter is going to be short, that's a foregone conclusion right now, but therein lies its chief recommendation. We have made a survey of lots 7 and 8 of block 159, city of Neligh, Neb., according to the recorded plat thereof and we find that—

*The old home ain't what she used to be,
The walls and floors have all gone up in smoke,
Likewise the roof that one time sheltered me
And this is far from what I'd call a joke.*

So, under the circumstances, you are going to find this colyum less interesting than the average patent medicine advertisement, therefore, you are forewarned, and should you persist in reading it you do it at your own peril, for we hereby wash our hands of any responsibility.

According to Marie's speedometer it is just 1867 miles from our wife's front door at Tucson, Ariz., to Walt Bradley's garage in Neligh, Neb. Some of the road is all right and you can guess on the balance, but be sure you put it strong enough.

When we entered New Mexico Marie was purring along in natural, but she suddenly changed to one flat, and when we drove out of the state she changed the key to six flats and two sharps. The two sharps soaked us for 27 cents for gas and the six flats were all on the under side. We had nine flats in the 1867 miles and six of them were in New Mexico, and all of them on brand new tires. Those New Mexico rocks won't give an inch, not even for Marie, that shows how little they appreciate her importance.

We drove 80 miles out of our way to visit Giacomina Brothers at Tombstone. You all know these boys as regular contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me," and they have become one of the important contributors to our favorite journal. When we got there we learned that they were about five miles from the town and were foremen in a mine of some kind; therefore, we did not have the pleasure of meeting them, but did have a very pleasant visit with the wife of one of the boys. We stopped in the town and inquired of a couple of fellows if they could tell us where to find Giacomina Brothers and they didn't seem to know who we meant. Then we said we wanted to find the boys who operated the theatre. Then one of them said, "Oh, you mean 'Jackomy Brothers.'" When you pronounce it don't say "Giac-co-ma" say "Jacko-my" and the natives will understand what you mean.

Crystal theatre was closed and we were unable to get a look at it, but we judge from the lobby and outside appearance that the Crystal is an up-to-date theatre and meets all the requirements of the community. Sorry we didn't get to meet these boys, but hope to have better luck the next time, should there be any "next time."

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Can Do—

At Hamlin, Tex., we called on Miss Bessie Rawls, who operates the Mutual theatre at that place. Miss Rawls has been in the business for a number of years and likes it, this is evident at first glance when one enters the theatre, for there is that touch of elegance and refinement everywhere that denotes the finer touches of the feminine hand. Miss Rawls has been a member of the HERALD family for a long time and is strong in her belief that the HERALD fills a want none others do. (Note to the linotyper: Leave out that word "can" or we are coming back to Pork Center with a ball bat.)

P. V. Williams who operates the Peoples theatre at Munday, Tex., seems to know his parsnips when it comes to booking good pictures and putting them on the screen and the people of Munday are to be congratulated on having a man of his calibre to handle

THREE BAD MEN: Special cast—30%. December 31. Nine reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

THREE BAD MEN: Special cast—25%. January 11. This is just as good and as big as a picture need be, front line actors great in acting and make-up. Has not the smooth Westward movement the Covered Wagon had but makes up in grand scenery and background relief. Our print (out of Des Moines) was pretty "rainy" and did not give the definition we should have liked, bought right you cannot go wrong. Nine reels.—O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgeway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

MARRIED ALIVE: Special cast—12%. January 2-3. A good program offering.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—A great production but not a box office magnet by any means in the small town. It appeals to the men without exception but owing to the smut the appeal to women is nil, they do not want their children to see it and therefore it loses about 50% or more of its box office draft. Personally I think it one of the greatest of them all. Twelve reels.—H. E. Schlichter, Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan.—General patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—Pleased those who saw it, but few saw it here. Some cheap comedy that could be left out.—C. H. McCroskey, Allied theatre, Dermott, Ark.—Small town patronage.

THE HEART OF SALOME: Alma Rubens—20%. October 14. A fairly good program picture.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CANYON OF LIGHT: Special cast—80%. Good enough for any crowd.—Grafton Nutter, Royal theatre, Republic, Kan.—General patronage.

Gotham

THE RED KIMONA: Special cast—Drew well and put over its message. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

SOMEBODY'S MOTHER: Mary Carr—Good, clean and pleasing. Seven reels.—Giacoma Brothers, Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

THE BUGLE CALL: Jackie Coogan—32%. January 1. Jackie does good work on this one and is a pretty fair production. Pleased generally. Heavy snowfall cut attendance. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

THE BUGLE CALL: Jackie Coogan—Pleased the children and it got by on Saturday.—C. H. McCroskey, Allied theatre, Dermott, Ark.—Small town patronage.

THE BUGLE CALL: Jackie Coogan—Jackie is always good. This proved a good entertainment. Six reels.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—65%. January 6-7. One of the best comedies of the year with a thrilling basketball game and a pretty romance to put it over. Along with some snappy titles and good work by Marion Davies makes this a complete college story with a true to life background. When Marion Davies is so perfect in this kind of a story and goes over with a bang will somebody please rise and tell me why she insists in making picture such as "Lights of Old Broadway," "Janice Meredith" and "Quality Street." As "The Fair Co-ed" she is a wow, as "Tillie the Toiler" she deserves the best of praise and gets it, but as a Flower of the Eighteenth Century she is a flat tire in the hearts of her great American public and is spoiling her popularity if she only knew it. She is miscast. If this was all she could do it would be a good excuse and the public would except her as a Barrie heroine, but lol she comes forth as a gay college flapper and knocks us all for a row of clothes pins, and then we gasp and say, why does she do it. Play "The Fair Co-ed" and you will understand. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—Very good program picture. Seven reels.—H. E. Schlichter, Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan.—General patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—Very good entertainment. The kind of picture for Miss Davies.—C. H. McCroskey, Allied theatre, Dermott, Ark.—Small town patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—100%. January 9-10-11-12. Ten hundred forty-six people, counting the kids, saw this picture out of a ten hundred seventy-eight population. Think this tells its own story. Twelve reels.—John Cosner, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.—Small town patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novarro—Super fine, a little better than "The Big Parade" so my box office and patrons say, but I don't believe it; for me they do not make them better than "The Big Parade." Twelve reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novarro—November 28. Great picture, but bought too high and didn't make anything. Twelve reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

TWELVE MILES OUT: John Gilbert—Considered this a fine picture. Did fair business though had stiff competition this night. Most patrons satisfied and want more from Gilbert, not forgetting Ernest Torrence.—R. E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

TWELVE MILES OUT: John Gilbert—72%. December 11-12. Everyone liked this picture, but did not get average Sunday and Monday business. Personally we thought it a "Corker." Eight reels.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

THE RED MILL: Marion Davies—36%. January 1. It was a pleasure to see Marion on the screen as we did not see her for a long time and the show was good. Lots of comedy in Holland on ice and I tell you it was worth every minute to watch this through. No walkouts and plenty of laughs all over the house so it must have pleased. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE FIRE BRIGADE: Charles Ray—43%. December 18-19. We thought this was a good picture, but it sure did not draw. Guess it was too near Christmas. Ten reels.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES: Lon Chaney—82%. January 8. A little late playing this one but was surprised the way it drew and everyone seemed pleased. Ten reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES: Lon Chaney—Very satisfying as a special here. Wish all specials pleased as well. Ten reels.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

ADAM AND EVIL: Special cast—70%. January 8-9. A very good comedy drama of a martial mix-up. Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle make a great team. Drew good business. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—50%. January 7. This is a splendid entertainment.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—December 23-24. Just a fair program picture not near as good as "Spoilers of the West." Print No. 1. Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

WINNERS OF THE WILDERNESS: Tim McCoy—30%. January 6-7. This picture is historical and should please every place, where they like this kind, full of action and some wonderful love scenes by Tim McCoy and the French girl. Should be worth little raise in admission but we didn't go up so hope they got their money's worth. Would be a dandy show for February 22nd, Washington's Birthday, but we played it Friday and Saturday and had fair business. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE SCARLET LETTER: Lillian Gish—60%. November 29-30. Another good drawing card, from Nathaniel Hawthorne's book. Nothing for the kids to see but nothing to harm them, and might do the middle aged ones a world of good. Eight reels.—John Cosner, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.—Small town patronage.

MOCKERY: Lon Chaney—40%. A very good story of the life of a peasant and with the background their amusements. We couldn't stop with P. V. as long as we would have liked to, but maybe some other time we won't be in quite so big a rush.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Can Do—

N. W. Huston of the Liberty and Columbia theatres at Columbus, Kan., J. L. Drake of the Drake at Warrensburg, Mo., Frank E. Drachman of the Opera House and Rialto, at Tucson, and Nick Deamos of the Lyric at Tucson, Ariz., Burt King of the Alcove and Crystal at Stamford, Tex., and Homer Jones of the Temple at Kingfisher, Okla., were among some of the boys we were able to meet on our rush trip to and from Tucson, but were unable to visit as long as we would have liked to. These boys all reported business below normal, but all were optimistic for the future, and if energy and push will count for anything, our guess is that they will weather the storm and come out on top finally. Here's hoping.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Can Do—

We would like to take issue with our old friend, Thomas O. Service, on some of his recent criticisms of pictures, but he so completely squelched us recently in that "SEVENTH HEAVEN" controversy that we are a little gun shy on backing into another argument with him.

There is this about Thomas that we've got to admire, he is pronounced in his convictions and ready to go to the mat at any time in defense of his judgment, which, by-the-way, is usually sound and dependable, but in this case—but then that would be starting another argument with chances very much against us, so we will dismiss the subject by saying that whatever Thomas says is 100% correct, except in certain cases when he is not to be taken too seriously, for instance, "Seventh Heaven."

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Can Do—

There is no doubt but what the merging of the HERALD and WORLD is going to be of wonderful benefit to all branches of the industry, but somehow its new form is so different from the old that we can't help but hark back to the days when we didn't have to wash our ears and neck except on Sundays and holidays, but now that "VAN'S GANG" has joined the HERALD family we feel that we will have to be on our good behavior both nights and Sundays, since we will be traveling in such distinguished company. In justice to "VAN'S GANG" we feel that they should be warned against certain members of the HERALD family.

It will probably fall to our lot to sound this warning, much as we dislike to do it, but this much we would like to say, before they accept fish stories that will be written by certain members of the HERALD family as being true they should be referred to the writer of this colyum for verification. In fact we would suggest that anything along this line emanating from Wayne, Neb., Neillville, Wis., Nashwaak, Minn., Salmon, Idaho, or Elgin, Neb., be discarded without investigation, especially should they attempt to offer photographic proof, for we know of a string of studio bass that has been doing service at these various places for years. For authentic information along these lines, address this colyum, care HERALD-WORLD, 407 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Can Do—

After we have clawed over the ashes to try and find some trace of our golf outfit we will probably turn Marie's head for Texas. This will be tough on the "Lone Star" state, we will admit, but she survived Ma Ferguson's administration and she ought to be able to put up with us, at least for a few weeks.

J. C. JENKINS,
The HERALD-WORLD Man.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Can Do—

of the Russian Revolution. This is not the best Chaney nor is it a poor picture, just what we might call average. Metro has some good stars and they don't care whether you buy their stuff or not. Barbara Bedford is in the cast and does some good work. Eight reels.—W. R. Brattan, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

ROMANCE: Ramon Novarro—Not up to this star's standard, it is no good for a small town, price too high on top of a program picture. Eight reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

FOREIGN DEVILS: Tim McCoy—January 6. Audience seemed to like it even if I didn't. Some said good. Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

BUTTONS: Jackie Coogan—Not up to the Coogan standard, a little too much of a man's story. Run a kid matinee and a gang comedy for 5c. Guess we had all the kids in town. The gang comedy with the chimpanzee was the big feature.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

TEA FOR THREE: Special cast—January 12-13. Good program picture, good for any house.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Special cast—One of the best Kentucky stories we have played. The comedy is excellent. The colored couple are there all right. This will please the average audience. The race scenes well done. Seven reels.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Special cast—Very good, a muddier picture, but the best we ever saw. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Special cast—We got a very pleasant surprise in this, was not expecting anything but it was a dandy. Pleased all that saw it. Six reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

BODY AND SOUL: Norman Kerry—A pretty fair offering. Barrymore does good work. Theme not pleasant. Scenery in Alps good. Did not draw. Six reels.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—Small town patronage.

BODY AND SOUL: Aileen Pringle—November 8. Awful. Many poor comments. Weak, foreign story. Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

BECKY: Special cast—Not as big as the price asked for it. Just fair. Seven reels.—B. C. Brown, Temple theatre, Viroqua, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Special cast—Best war picture I have ever run. They ask a mighty big price but are getting right now and if you can get it right you can make the dough on the same, your patrons will come to see it. Thirteen reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Special cast—January 4-5. Good picture that pleased everyone. Made money for me, Oh Boy. Thirteen reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: John Gilbert—October 24. I was one of the first in this part of the country to buy "The Big Parade" and "Ben Hur" with promise of the first to run them. Paid Metro's price and then was last to run. Still waiting for their promise of adjustment to make up the loss. Twelve reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

FRISCO SALLY LEVY: Sally O'Neill—Nice little entertaining picture. Lots of comedy and will please. Play it. Program, no special.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

SPOILERS OF THE WEST: Tim McCoy—January 1-2. One of the best McCoy's I have played so far. Much better than "California." Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

THE TAXI DANCER: Special cast—January 4-5. Just as clever picture as any Exhibitor can run, has a good cast, and a good appeal. Just the type that appeals. Seven reels.—M. H. Haymans, Dreamland theatre, Metter, Ga.—General patronage.

Paramount

JESSE JAMES: Fred Thomson—30%. Nov. 10-11. Rotten, they wasted one of the best opportunities to make a real picture with the kick they will ever have. Thomson seems to be afraid that he was not going to cover the paper up with his this and there would be room for Jesse James' name somewhere on it. Thomson is getting worse.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Fred Thomson—This is a good Western. My crowd kicked on the advance admissions and they didn't come out to see this production as well as they do for the usual Hoot Gibson or Tom Mix, though it is a much better picture.—Chas. Lee, Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

OPEN RANGE: Gary Cooper—89%. November 17. Paramount's Zane Grey Westerns have always been above other Westerns and they are still holding out. Six reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

SENORITA: Bebe Daniels—90%. December 25. A good picture with plenty of action comedy, and heart interest.—E. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SENORITA: Bebe Daniels—November 23. Very good, pleased most everyone and they told me so. Played with Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures to large crowd. Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE CAMPUS FLIRT: Bebe Daniels—25%. December 23. Seven reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

IT: Clara Bow—40%. December 29. Seven reels. O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Jack Holt—52%. November 12. An excellent program. Six reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: Jack Holt—48%. December 10. Six reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

DIPLOMACY: Blanche Sweet—55%. Too bad, isn't it, that we have to run such pictures, but I guess it is all in the game. We had a good crowd but the picture needn't flatter itself as a home talent thing brought the people. Paramount surely has some lemons as well as good ones this year. Yes, dear exhibitor, this is one of those good old sour lemons that has laid around for a couple of years. Such is the life of an exhibitor. Seven reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

DESERT GOLD: Special cast—50%. Extra good. Seven reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

THE PONY EXPRESS: Ricardo Cortez—63%. Ran this on a Saturday night with five reels of short stuff, and to my surprise it went over. An old picture somewhat on the order of "The Covered Wagon" but not as good. Just how old is Betty Compton in this picture, she looks old enough to be in the old ladies' home and they say she is still in the ring, she would probably join United Artists if she were good enough. We won't run "The Covered Wagon" or this punk thing more than once. Ten reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MADAME POMPADOUR: Special cast—45%. November 16. A fair program picture only.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Special cast—Fine, great, nice, pleasing. Bad weather so I lost money playing this on one of your trick contracts where it is "Heads" the Exhibitors lose; "Tails" the Distributor wins.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Clara Bow—Here is a corking good picture and talk about going over, we were packed to the doors as the people were our guests this night. We were celebrating the installation of a new light and power plant just completed in the city. Every one was delighted with Clara, the story and cast—it is certainly one worth-while because there is more truth than poetry in the entire story and the action, it is a fine regular program picture and as such managers might step on it, it's not a special, there are so few specials nowadays that when you see one you know it in more ways than one. Six reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

SERENADE: Adolphe Menjou—This is a good production for the sophisticated Movie fan who likes Menjou. It is a typical Menjou picture and pleasing to those who like him.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—This is a nice picture along the same lines as Fairbanks' "Mark of Zorro." Dix is the most overpriced star I have on my 1927-28 contract. He is still an ordinary actor as far as the box office goes and making one Vanishing American is no excuse for Paramount to raise his price way out of reason. Perhaps a distributor is entitled to all he can get. Other product in our business world is sold on what it is worth and I believe the motion picture distributor will have to come to that basis. If Dix's salary is so high, why don't they fire him and let him get out and try to prove what he is worth like the rest of us have to do. I won't miss him on my contract.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

THE LAST OUTLAW: Gary Cooper—January 10. Played this on amateur night and seemed to take well with the crowd. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

—SHANGHAI BOUND: Richard Dix—January 11-12. Good entertainment. Mary Brian is developing great charm, and she gives Dix wonderful support. Whole cast is above ordinary. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

UNDERWORLD: Special cast—A very pleasing story of crook life.—R. E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

METROPOLIS: After seeing this one you can't make up your mind whether you have been entertained or bored. Mostly last. You have played pictures where you beat it to the basement when the show was out. Don't forget to go on this one. Your patrons will tell you about it. Seven reels.—R. A. Shobe, Strand and Lyric theatres, Monticello, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—It is a fine picture and really a near special as they will try to sell it to you, for it's worth the money, if you can buy it cheap enough. Janning's means nothing to a small town, that is what is the matter.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—January 8-9. The story is rather thin but what a picture it is just the same. Due entirely to the three great characterizations by Jannings and smooth direction. Everyone but the numbskulls and half wits will certainly appreciate this picture even if they do shed plenty of tears. Average business for me. Nine reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR: Special cast—Very good but this sort of comedy is finished with us. Hope to see these two back in their old type of character.—R. E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR: Beery & Hatton—I think this is the best Beery and Hatton to date. The cow scene was the best thing I ever saw. In fact, the house was in a roar most of the time. Did not make any money on it as the rental was too high, and showed in zero weather. Six reels.—R. A. Shobe, Strand and Lyric theatres, Monticello, Ind.—General patronage.

ROUGH HOUSE ROSIE: Clara Bow—December 26. Very good comedy, but not as good as "It." Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

HULA: Clara Bow—January 6-7. "Hula" now holds my house records. I do think that this is far better than any picture that Clara Bow has ever produced. I advise every exhibitor to run this picture for box office results. Six reels.—M. H. Haymans, Dreamland theatre, Metter, Ga.—General patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—This star is showing improvement plus slightly better stories. Is slowly gaining popularity with our patrons.—R. E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

STARK LOVE: Natives—Good, different, and a picture that they will like if you can get them in, but my patrons were expecting another Grass or Moana, therefore did not get many in. Six reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—January 4-5. Really believe this picture is deserving of the gold medal, from a production standpoint and for me. Was wonderful entertainment with no drawing power,

McIlheran Never Worked for Any Company But 'U'

R. M. McILHERAN, Dallas manager for Universal, has his own idea of what constitutes an achievement, and it's a good idea, too. He has never worked for any company except Universal and says that "If I have my way I never will."

On February 23, 1909, he accepted a job as song slide booking clerk with this company, which was known then as the Texas Film Exchange. He has been with the company ever since, holding every position in the exchange from the first one as song slide booking clerk to his present position as branch manager.

The name of the Texas Film Exchange was changed to the Consolidated Film & Supply Company in 1912. Again in 1922 the name was changed to the Universal Film Exchanges. In June, 1920, Mr. McIlheran was promoted from assistant manager in the Dallas office to manager of the El Paso office, where he spent two years, and then was transferred back to Dallas as manager of that office.

R. M. McIlheran

possibly due to the title. It cost me a $40.00 loss to play this picture, but it's a wonderful picture nevertheless. Ten reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Ronald Colman—Fine, wonderful picture. Liked by most everyone who saw it. One of the best we ever played at 35c. Comments good. Ten reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

HONEYMOON HATE: Florence Vidor—This was a fair picture. Nothing outstanding but bought right it will fill in a week night without complaint.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—December 20-21. A very good Western. Zane Grey always good. Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

MAN POWER: Richard Dix—January 10. An excellent picture. Closely follows the "Wallace Reid" automotive stories of a few years back. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

MAN POWER: Richard Dix—December 12. Have never played a Dix as good as "The Quarterback." Few good comments.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—Just another reason why block bookings should be eliminated. I noticed release date was moved up on this one. What a pity it was ever released. If it's a special, Lord help us on the programs. Ten reels.—C. H. McCroskey, Allied theatre, Dermott, Ark.—Small town patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—January 9-10. A most wonderful picture. Lots of action and a clean story. Pleased better than "What Price Glory" due to the rough stuff in the latter. It isn't often that I squeal on a percentage proposition. When will exhibitors wake up to the fact that they cannot play these pictures on a 50-50 percentage basis. While this was a percentage picture we had the privilege of buying it outright. Had I done this I could have made a little money although the picture did not draw. I don't see why, as it was a wonderful production. Again I say I am through with percentage pictures. If I can't buy them worth the money, I will pass them up. Ten reels.—W. R. Bratton, Stella theatre, Council Grove, Kan.—General patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—Not a special as they sell it, but an extra good action picture with plenty of comedy. It lacks a little of the smoothness and kick to make it a special. Ten reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—December 14. Comedy, thrills and a special O. K. here. Well liked at 35c. Good comments.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

WE'RE ALL GAMBLERS: Thomas Meighan—January 8-9. Pretty good program picture. Not one of Meighan's best. The ring fight was liking in this. Print good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

THE COVERED WAGON: Special cast—Well, the old wagon still kicks them. Got a bad print but at that they liked it and one fellow said as he came out, the picture was a little rotten, but what could you expert—one to last always? Ten reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

SHOOTING IRONS: Special cast—Just a five reel pistol opera. Five reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Pathe-P D C

NO CONTROL: Harrison Ford—December 21-22. Only a fair comedy play without much plot or interest.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NO CONTROL: Special cast—Another so-called good one that actually was.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

RUBBER TIRES: Special cast—35%. January 7. Not much to it but will please those who are not too exacting as it is interesting at times and plot is something new.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

RUBBER TIRES: Special cast—18%. A merry tale of a transcontinental trip. One of the cleanest, sweetest comedy-dramas we ever ran. Ran both nights, explains poor percentage.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

RUBBER TIRES: Special cast—A dandy good program picture that will get the laughs.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE WEDDING SONG: Special cast—40%. November 14. Old, but good.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE NIGHT BRIDE: Marie Prevost—20%. January 4-5. A good light comedy farce.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE FIGHTING EAGLE: Rod LaRocque—25%. November 3-4. The DeMille's of late have been falling down on their so-called specials, this was hardly a program. Eight reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE FIGHTING EAGLE: Rod LaRocque—November 18. Good picture not a special in small towns.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE LITTLE ADVENTRESS: Vera Reynolds—20%. January 11-12. A very light comedy play but will please majority. Not enough action to hold interest. Very draggy.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

LONG LOOP ON THE PECOS: Leo Maloney—60%. December 31. Good Western that will satisfy the regular Western crowd and satisfy those that hate Westerns.—C. L. Griffith, Courtesy theatre, Opheim, Mont.—General patronage.

THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY: Special cast—30%. November 7. It was no special for a small town, they did not understand it. Cecil E. DeMille put it too deep for the sticks and they failed to see the point. Twelve reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

CORPORAL KATE: Vera Reynolds—15%. December 30. A good program picture of two girls at the front.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WHITE GOLD: Jetta Goudal—20%. December 28-29. Good show but unusual ending. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WHITE GOLD: Jetta Goudal—12%. A dramatic story of a father's fanatical love for his only son that drives him to separate the son and his wife. George Nichols (whose death we noticed recently) almost carried off the honors. It is not a pleasant story, but it is strong, well acted and entirely out of the ordinary. It failed miserably here. I only found two young men who would say they liked it for a change. Six reels.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

THE WISE WIFE: Phyllis Haver—December 28. Good program picture. No drawing power. Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

ANGEL OF BROADWAY: Leatrice Joy—December 5. Poor program picture here. No comments.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Rudolph Schildkraut—January 4-5. A very good picture, pleased our patrons very much. Eight reels.—Newell E. Ware, Comique theatre, Camden, Me.—General patronage.

THE CRUISE OF THE JASPER B: Rod LaRocque—Rotten. Let it alone. Sorry we didn't refuse it and let "Pathe" do as they pleased about it. No more Rod La Rocque for me.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

ALASKAN ADVENTURES: Special cast—Everyone said good. The most interesting and beautiful scenery we ever saw filmed. The men were especially pleased. We recommend this for educational interest and scenic wonders. Six reels.—Oscar Reinert, Elite theatre, Humboldt, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE VOLGA BOATMAN: Special cast—January 7. Real picture, buy it, push it and everyone who has seen it is a booster for you. How about a picture, Miss Fair.—C. L. Griffith, Courtesy theatre, Opheim, Mont.—General patronage.

THE WRECK OF THE HESPERUS: Special cast December 20. Good picture, but not a special. Dry land sailors not interested. Few comments.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE REJUVENATION OF AUNT MARY: Special cast—Very good. Used New Year's to a satisfied audience.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

Tiffany

LODGE IN THE WILDERNESS: Special cast—Good outdoor picture, that will please your Saturday night patrons. Buy it.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

United Artists

THE WINNING OF BARBARA WORTH: Special cast—100%. Consider this the best picture run in our theatre this year. The picture was good and as everyone had read the book it helped the box office score. I have just finished reading a report on this picture from N. M. Emmons, Eagle theatre, Eagle River, Wis., and it makes me sore, he said it was absolutely the poorest thing shown in many a day. If it was, he must show some mighty fine pictures, but I'll bet he slips in a bum one once in a while that he can't help. Either he paid too much for this and is panning the picture to get even with the company, or he wrote his reports after he had had a long night out and woke up sore at the world. A report like this is unfair to the company and the other Exhibitors who use the Herald reports in our buying and look for several on a picture before we pass judgment, so if you have not run this picture look up some other reports before you turn it down. I ruined our house records and had a world of favorable comment and was not ashamed to stand in the door when the crowd left. I have not been reporting on pictures lately as I am on the old block yet and when it comes to buying 100% from any company will not until I am clear out of pictures. I think the block booking is unfair all the way through. In the middle size towns one producer would not be enough and what could you do with two different producer's entire product. They all make pictures we want to use and they all make some which will not fit your particular town. But above all let's be fair in our reports and not cuss a good picture unless it deserves it. We all want to see reports on the new pictures, so when you run one tell us how it treated you and the rest of us will be benefited accordingly.—John Cosner, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.—General patronage.

MY BEST GIRL: Mary Pickford—A box office picture from the well read story by Kathleen Norris. The best Mary has done since "Daddy Longlegs." Buddy Rogers is great in this and Lucien Littlefield almost steals the last half of the picture. Nine reels.—H. E. Schlichter, Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan.—General patronage.

THE GENERAL: Buster Keaton—January 10-11. Good picture of its kind. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

Universal

PAINTED PONIES: Hoot Gibson—25%. January 2. Very good Western. The rodeo and Slim Summerville's comedy made a hit with our fans. Interrupted electional service and very bad weather hurt business. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

RED HOT LEATHER: Jack Hoxie—33%. December 17. Very low percentage for a Hoxie in this community, cause Universal just couldn't furnish us with anything in the way of paper. Five reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

SENSATION SEEKERS: Billie Dove—70%. January 7. A good picture but I think the crowd was disappointed. They were expecting something different. Billie Dove drew us more than average Saturday night crowd.—C. P. Washman, Roxy theatre, Skellytown, Tex.—General patronage.

THE BUCKAROO KID: Hoot Gibson—75%. November 26-27. Six reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—General patronage.

THE LOVE THRILL: Laura LaPlante—10%. December 27-28. Good show. Keeps you guessing from start to finish and it finishes with a bang. Laura sure is there with the insurance policy. Six reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERY CLUB: Special cast—35%. December 3. It seems to me that this is a bit too far fetched and boring for an intelligent audience. The comments of your patrons will probably be the same as ours, 50% will say mighty poor, 50% will say great. Seven reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

THE MYSTERY CLUB: Special cast—Fair picture that drew very well.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

LAZY LIGHTNING: Art Acord—40%. November 5. Five reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

BUTTERFLIES IN THE RAIN: Laura LaPlante—35%. November 19. Not up to the LaPlante standard. Also too long. Eight reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

BUTTERFLIES IN THE RAIN: Laura LaPlante—5%. December 30-31. Dandy picture which we ran little late after its release date, but it is good and big snow storm for both nights made it a flop for us. No fault of the picture. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Special cast—15%. January 4. Just one of the real old race track stories made in a much different way than we have played yet. It should please where they like the good shows and let them know you have something different and good. Good for your best night or Sunday. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Reginald Denny—33%. January 6. An automobile racing story. Quite amusing, please generally. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

THE LONE EAGLE: Special cast—This is a drawing title and the picture satisfied the crowd that came. The one who wants sex stuff is not disappointed in this because there is nothing in the title or in the paper on the picture to lead them to think he is going to see that kind of a picture. A lot of good pictures disappoint because they try to mislead with their title, as for instance, Paramount's nice picture, "Rolled Stockings" and a lot we all have seen. Last Saturday I ran "Universal Western" and had to advertise it with a one sheet showing a clinch to the death between a loving couple and guess it was the only love scene in the entire picture. I didn't see it myself and I watched the picture.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

THE LONE EAGLE: Raymond Keane—Just a program picture. Lots of faking in the air scenes. They used army training plane of the "Jenny" type for fast pursuit and combat ships and a Frenchman would be lost among the scenes supposed to be St. Omer. Also France is shown as a terrain of towering mountain peaks below the fighting. The public is getting air-wise and faking is noticeable to them. Seven reels.—H. E. Schlichter, Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan.—General patronage.

THE LONE EAGLE: Special cast—Very good picture, with plenty of thrills ought to please anywhere.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

THE LONE EAGLE: Special cast—January 6. Don't know where the title comes in at, but the picture is a very good little hokum picture that drew pretty well and seemed to please. Especially suitable for family nights. Sure did bring the kids out. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE LONE EAGLE: Special cast—Weak in spots but as a whole has good audience appeal. Flying being popular at present should go over in any small town.—R. E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

SILK STOCKINGS: Laura LaPlante—January 8-9. Good little farce-comedy which creates considerable amusement.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

GALLOPING FURY: Hoot Gibson—This was better than most of his and pleased most of the people, it has more comedy in it than usual and less unreasonable plot such as the average Western has. It is undoubtedly above the average.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grande theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

LES MISERABLES: Special cast—Very good picture which should please anywhere. Acting of foreign cast very good. Xmas program.—E. T. Dunlap, Dunlap theatre, Hawarden, Ia.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH JUROR: Special cast—Excellent comments from majority of patrons.—R. E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

CRAZY LIGHTNING: Art Acord—January 9. Satisfactory program, Western. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

A HERO FOR A NIGHT: Glenn Tryon—A nice little picture all about a correspondence school aviator who accidentally hops the Atlantic. It is right up to now and should please almost everyone. Six reels.—H. E. Schlichter, Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan.—General patronage.

ALIAS THE DEACON: Special cast—This is an entertaining comedy drama of the reformed crook who does a lot of good with his crookedness and who is clever in his doing it so the entire crowd enjoys the show even if it is the type of story that has been done these many years. I rank it as very good entertainment.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

OUT ALL NIGHT: Reginald Denny—This was a well liked entertainment. His usual type of story and acting.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

OUT ALL NIGHT: Reginald Denny—October 15. Denny don't draw much extra business. They must be getting tired of him. Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE PRAIRIE KING: Hoot Gibson—December 16-17. Good picture, some rank sub-titles such as Bull, I don't think it is necessary to use such sub-titles. The picture will be better if they are omitted. If I were you, Mr. Gibson, I would discontinue them in the future. Ninety-nine per cent of my patrons don't like these kind of sub-titles. Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

TAKE IT FROM ME: Reginald Denny—January 6-7. Good program picture. Print good. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—General patronage.

Warner Bros.

THE BRUTE: Monte Blue—25%. December 31. Poorest Monte Blue picture we have ever played.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

BITTER APPLES: Monte Blue—20%. January 4. Satisfied about 50%.—Bert Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE BETTER OLE: Syd Chaplin—95%. December 10-11. Good, Syd does some fine acting. Nine reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—General patronage.

BUSH LEAGUER: Monte Blue—55%. December 26. A good comedy drama of baseball life.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

TRACKED BY THE POLICE: Rin Tin Tin—50%. January 8-9. One of the best dog pictures we ever played.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGE WIDOW: Special cast—Clever college comedy. We are proud to play pictures of this sort and have a pleased audience tell us how much they enjoyed every minute of the screening. Dolores Costello has the personality and William Collier a splendid second. Six reels.—Oscar Reinert, Elite theatre, Humboldt, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE HEART OF MARYLAND: Dolores Costello—Though not so new is a fine little show. If you have not played it do not overlook a good bet.—R. E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

THE FIRST AUTO: Special cast—This picture went over big and was enjoyed by all. We considered it fine and especially clean entertainment. Plenty of good wholesome comedy. Russel Simpson did good work. Give us more like it and we will not complain. Don't see how anyone can pan it. Eight reels.—Oscar Reinert, Elite theatre, Humboldt, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS: Monte Blue—The love romance of a society bud and an engineer. Mighty well done, combines society scenes and pretty clothes with plenty of action, so it comes pretty near to pleasing everyone.—A. N. Miles, Eminence theatre, Eminence, Ky.—General patronage.

THE BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS: Special cast—If you like this kind of stuff then you like this picture. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

ACROSS THE PACIFIC: Monte Blue—Far from a special. Will get by as a program if they enjoy 'em rough. Sold to us as a special. Eight reels.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

State Rights

DAME CHANCE: Robert Fraser—40%. January 8. Good chance to show your people something clean and interesting. Very, very good, and I am glad that some of the producers got enough talent to keep the shows clean and that we exhibitors don't have to hide when the crowd goes out. With shows like this we can always face our audience and expect them to come back again. Seven reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

DEMPSEY-TUNNEY FIGHT: October 23.—Every Dempsey fan said Tunney was knocked out in 7th round. The 7th round in slow motion showed it plainly. Tunney fans say slow motion showed Tunney could have got up on his feet at count of three, so that's that. Three reels.—V. E. Chamberlin, Chamberlin theatre, Elkhorn, Neb.—General patronage.

DEVIL DOGS, OLD CODE, THE SLAYER: Special cast—They are all too bad for words, last two Curwood's series wonderful material wasted. Six reels.—George Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

BRAIN STORMS: Dandy comedy which added to our program the laughs. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

IN THAT BULL: This is a funny one. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

PLUMB DUMB: Funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SOMEBODY'S FAULT: Lloyd Hamilton—Good comedy, had them going throughout the full program. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

F B O

BEAUTY PARLOR SERIES: By all means book these. They are real comedy. Two reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

FLESHY DEVILS: Three Fat Boys—These fat boys seem to get the laughs. This comedy is quite amusing. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MICKEY'S ELEVEN: Another one that will get results.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

MICKEY'S PALS: Mickey—Another Our Gang bunch, but good. Two reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

MIDNIGHT SUN: This is a good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

FOX

FOX VARIETY: Best one-reel fillers we ever used. One reel.—O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgeway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

AFRICAN ADVENTURE: Good. One reel.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

BUFFALO BILL'S LAST FIGHT: Very good two reel picture in technicolor. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

DOG HEAVEN: Our Gang—Here is one of those kind that pleases the old as well as the young. I never have had any bad reports on the "Gang Comedies." Two reels.—R. A. Shobe, Strande and Lyric theatres, Monticello, Ind.—Neighborhood patronage.

FIGHT FOR LIFE: Good. One reel.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

LION HUNT: Interesting reel. One reel.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SOARING WINGS: Interesting subject. Pleased. Two-thirds reel.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

STING OF STINGS: Charley Chase—Very good comedy. Pleased the kids especially. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

SUGAR DADDIES: Dandy comedy and the fun was all over the house. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

WHAT EVERY ICE MAN KNOWS: Special cast—This kind of comedies would build up the business and this is the first good one I got from Metro. This one was better than the others. Two reels.—Rudolf

Harry Taylor of 'U' Was Exhibitor with Father 20 Years Ago

HARRY TAYLOR is a veteran in the business and yet he doesn't look it. The Kansas City manager for Universal started out with his father twenty years ago. They were one of the two first suburban exhibiting units in that city, and were one of Carl Laemmle's first customers there, operating for a number of years.

Harry Taylor

About twelve years ago Taylor left the exhibition field and became affiliated with the Standard Film Company, an independent film exchange in Kansas City. From that position he went to Fox and then to Pathe as city salesman. After three years he became assistant manager and then manager of the branch. He held that post for about two years and resigned to go into the state-right business for himself, handling the states of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa on "The County Fair." After the playing of this picture, he associated himself with Mr. Harding and Phil Ryan in the formation of Capitol Enterprises.

Resigning from that organization he became connected with Producers Distributing Corporation and from there went to his present position as manager of the Kansas City branch of Universal.

Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

THE FANTASY: Some of my patrons asked me what I was trying to hand them. I told them I did not know. I think Paramount just slipped another joker in on us. Two reels.—R. A. Shobe, Strand and Lyric theatres, Monticello, Ind.—General patronage.

FRENCH LUCK: Fair. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

KRAZY KAT: Cartoon—Have played several and all have been good. Better than "Felix the Cat." One reel.—P. G. Naughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Just started this one and first issue, No. 43, looked all O. K. One reel.—P. G. Naughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Good news reel, bought right and well liked. One reel.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

SHORT SOCKS: Bobby Vernon—Dandy comedy. It is a pretty long time since we saw Bobby, and he sure made a good one in "Short Socks." Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

PATHE

CATALINA, HERE I COME: A good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CATALINA, HERE I COME: Fair. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

COLLEGE KIDDO: Good. R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CURED IN THE EXCITEMENT: A good funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

DUCK SOUP: A fair comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

EVE'S LOVE LETTER: Agnes Ayres—A very good comedy. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

FLUTTERING HEARTS: Charley Chase—Good. One reel.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN SWEETIES: Good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

GLORIOUS FOURTH: Our Gang—Good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HON. MR. BUGGS: Fair. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

PASS THE DUMPLINGS: Eddie Quillan—A good comedy with good cast. Eddie Quillan made them laugh from start to finish. He's getting very popular in this town; patrons ask for more Quillan pictures.—K. Vaveris, Grand theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Pa.—General patronage.

PATHE NEWS: Don't make better news than this.—P. G. Naughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON: Harry Langdon—Good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SMALL TOWN PRINCESS: Good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SMITH'S CUSTOMER: Good. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SMITH'S PETS: A fair comedy, but why, oh, why, do they have to pull the pants off of a baby to try and make someone laugh? Had another Smith comedy some time ago with the same gag in it. Two reels.—John Cosner, Sun theatre, Sargent, Neb.—Small town patronage.

TEN YEARS OLD: Our Gang—About the funniest "Our Gang" I've ever played and I've played 'em all. Two reels.—P. G. Naughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

TIRED BUSINESS MEN: Our Gang—A very good Gang comedy. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WHAT WOMEN DID FOR ME: Charley Chase—An excellent comedy which pleased more and created more talk than most features. It's very spicy, but sure makes them laugh. Two reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BUSTER COME ON: Arthur Trimble—A good comedy. Seemed to please all. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

JANE'S PREDICAMENT: Wanda Wiley—Good comedy and when Wanda plays you can always expect some speedy entertainment. Two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

KEEPING IN TRIM: Very good. This is one of the "Keeping Up with the Jones" comedies. The first we've had, and if the rest are as good will be well pleased. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

NEVER AGAIN: Andy Gump—Extra good, kept the crowd laughing. Two reels.—O. M. Rolo, High School theatre, Sun City, Kan.—Rural patronage.

A RUN FOR HIS MONEY: Arthur Lake—Dandy comedy and Arthur surely puts in plenty of excitement. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SNOOKUMS ASLEEP: Newlywed comedy—Just fair. Two reels.—K. R. Smith, Rialto theatre, Stromsburg, Neb.—Small town patronage.

SNOOKUMS' TOOTH: The bunk. This series of comedies very poor. Our patrons pan them.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

SODAS AND SHEBAS: Arthur Lake—If they make these new serials as good as the one reels they sure will have dandies. Best one reeler I had for a long time. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

TROLLEY TROUBLES: Oswald, the Rabbit—A cartoon comedy, very good.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MISCELLANEOUS

PLAY BALL: Very poor comedy. Two reels.—Andrew Rapp, Theatorium theatre, Emlenton, Pa.—General patronage.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By Whit

ALL roads will lead to Chicago next week when the contract committee goes in session here to draft a new uniform contract, and attendant upon the meeting, there will, no doubt, be plenty of fireworks. Representatives from exhibitor associations from all parts of the country will be present to offer suggestions and to keep an eye on the work of the committee.

R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., has called upon all exhibitors and exhibitor associations to send representatives so that a preliminary meeting may be held to draft suggestions for the consideration of the contract committee. Col. Cole, of the Texas M. P. T. O., and Al Steffes, president of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest, will be among the dignitaries present. Yes, sir, it looks like a gay time is in store for us.

E. L. Delaney at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer became ill last Tuesday and was taken to the Augustana hospital, where doctors diagnosed his case as double pneumonia. However, his condition is not considered alarming.

The Film Board held a dinner last Thursday evening in the Rose room of the Congress in honor of Jack Sampson and Bill Brumberg. About 25 guests were present, and many fine gifts were presented to the two guests of honor. Incident with the dinner was Floyd Brockell's remarkable demonstration of his prowess at a certain game usually played upon any convenient, clear space where the instruments used in the game will roll.

Ralph Bradford and Ross Herman returned Friday from Champaign, Decatur and Springfield, where they closed some good contracts for "The Patent Leather Kid," which will be released early in the Spring.

Mrs. Ross Herman, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is convalescing rapidly.

And still people go on vacations. The latest film man to embark on a vacation lark (apologies to Mae Tinee for that rhyme) is R. C. Seery. He and his son, Roy, Jr., are gallivanting around in Florida, Cuba and other warm climates.

The Chelten theatre, 79th and Exchange, opened last Saturday.

Len Ullrick agrees with J. C. Jenkins that "The Herald Fills a Want None Others Can Do." Len has just returned from a trip through Indiana and reports that "EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD" is his "Bible." Len and Walter Brown made their trip together and, according to them, the exhibitors in Indiana are doing a fair business.

All the boys at FBO were out last week. Sam Gorelick chose as playmate, Ed Johnson, the Hoosier Ambassador, and Joe Lyons and Ted Meyers formed the other twosome. Joe says Ted is Scotch and doesn't know it. It seems that Ted's Buick became mired in the mud and an accommodating yokel offered to extract the car for $10. "Two dollars or I leave the Buick in the mud," snapped back Ted, and "damned if the yokel didn't take it," said Joe.

John Sheerin, one of the owners of the Sheerin theatre, and one of the oldest exhibitors in the city, was buried last Monday.

A. J. McPhail, home office representative for FBO was in town last week.

The Chicago exchange of FBO has challenged the Dallas exchange to a race in the season's drive. At present the Southern exchange is ahead, but the way the Chicago boys are steaming up for the contest, it looks like Dallas will have to step on the gas.

A testimony dinner will be given Leo Saulkins, general manager for Marks Brothers, in honor of his appointment as Illinois boxing commissioner on the night of February 2, in the Gold room at the Congress. Henri Ellman is handling the arrangements for the dinner.

Cupid has been busy again. John Semendolas, of the New Regent theatre, is to be married a fortnight hence to his cashier, Miss Cummings.

And speaking of matrimonial matters, we are reminded that numbers of young ladies down the row are besieging us with inquiries concerning available bachelors along the row since we offered to furnish this information.

Captain G. M. McBain, the editor of Kinograms, was in the city last week. He is on a tour of Middlewestern exchanges.

Well, well, Cupid has scored again. William Karzas arrived in town last week after his month's trip to Greece. He made the trip in search of health and rest, and not only did he find health but a bride to boot. The new Mrs. Karzas was Angeline Demos, member of a prominent family in Athens.

Monte Banks paused a little while in Chicago Monday between trains on his way to New York, where he will embark for England with the purpose of making comedies there.

When "The King of Kings" opens at the Erlanger February 12, it will carry an introductory title, lately stuck on the picture, which removes all blame from the Jews for the crucifixion of Christ.

Student Prince opened Monday, had to turn them away. Received tremendous acclaim and record business is the forecast of the week. Congratulations to you for giving us the greatest box office attractions in history.

REGENT THEATRE,
HARRISBURG, PA.

Student Prince opened Columbia Theatre here today to capacity business. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayet is to be congratulated. It surpassed even the most imaginative hopes of all who saw it. A genuine triumph in every detail. Shearer and Novarro hit new levels in characterization perfection.

COLUMBIA THEATRE
WASHINGTON, D. C.

STUDENT PRINCE opening only exceeded by one picture in entire history of Stillman Theatre. Looks as if we will have a marvelous record breaking week. Mighty nice to have a picture like this right after a glorious engagement on "Love" STILLMAN THEATRE, CLEVELAND, O.

STUDENT PRINCE opened Saturday to a turnaway business. Sunday had to call on Police to handle crowds. Monday matinee house sold out to capacity even before show opened. Student Prince excels any picture we have ever played.

The fame of the Wurlitzer Organ as a musical attraction in the leading motion picture theatres of America has spread to the far corners of the civilized world. As a result the famous Wurlitzer Organ has been installed in many progressive theatres in foreign countries. The list of Wurlitzer installations throughout the country during the past year is evidence of Wurlitzer supremacy. Wurlitzer Organs are world famous—they possess exclusive features which give the organist an instrument of marvelous flexibility and instant responsiveness to the slightest touch.

REEL REVIEWS

By George Gerhard

AT THE COLONY

Offhand, this being the age of labels and slogans, it would seem that Laura La Plante is by way of becoming the Elsie Janis of the screen. Certainly this reviewer can think of no other movie personage who is so expert in the art of mimicry.

It doesn't seem to matter to what the young woman puts her hand; always she passes the thing off as if she were born to it. She has a complete bag of tricks, and yet when she reaches into that bag and draws one out the trick takes on all the authenticity of something really substantial.

The Fox Advance

THE spectacular history of the motion picture business does not reveal a deal of more strategic and practical importance than the transaction last week under which the Fox Film corporation obtained control of the Wesco Holding corporation.

Control of Wesco means placing under the Fox banner a vast chain of theatres on the West Coast, together with other units in the Middle West. It brings to the Fox company a substantial interest in the First National Pictures corporation, together with various other properties and interests.

But of more immediate interest to the trade at large, the transaction means the ushering of the Fox Film corporation into a position of vastly greater influence and strength throughout the entire realm of the business of motion pictures.

Because of alignments which have been built up within the motion picture industry in the United States, control of Wesco carries with it a significance which overshadows even the great property interests involved. Because of this fact Wesco has been vigorously contended after by several competing groups.

Three years ago Mr. William Fox had brought practically to fruition a deal under which he would have gained control of these Wesco properties. This deal and its outcome is widely known in the picture business as one of the most dramatic incidents in the history of the industry. Had Mr. Fox succeeded at that time in his effort there would have immediately been brought to his concern a great strategic advantage. Mr. Fox's opponents were well aware of this and while the final papers on the deal were being corrected a maneuver was engineered by which the number of shares of stock in the West Coast corporation necessary to give him control were withheld.

The outcome of this deal was a keen disappointment to Mr. Fox. It left him with an investment of several million dollars, but without the right of control which in this case had a great deal more than usual significance because of trade alignments. But, as the record shows, Mr. Fox's disappointment did not handicap his determination to reach the goal he had set out after. Although it has taken considerable time, he has succeeded in upsetting the coup which defeated him in the original transaction and he now gains control of Wesco—and at a time when the achievement appears more important even than it would have been in the first instance.

This deal is another indication of the dynamic and uncompromising spirit of enterprise and progress which animates the chief executive of the Fox Film corporation. Mr. Fox has played a lone hand since his entrance into the motion picture business. While other units have been assisted by trade alignments and cooperative deals, the Fox company has single-handedly waged its battle. In this position it has frequently found itself opposed by groups which were formidable in strength and number. Great effort has been made to limit its sphere and push it into a position of comparative insignificance. But against this opposition the company has been driven aggressively, strengthening its position in production, distribution and exhibition.

Among the spectacular advancements it made was the acquisition of control of the Roxy theatre in New York City, which placed under its banner the largest and finest theatre in the world. Again the influence of this deal outweighed the property interest involved. It gave the Fox company the most conspicuous show-window in the world for its product and made it a bigger factor in the highest circle of exhibition.

Even before these recent advances of the Fox corporation Mr. Fox had won a secure hold on a renowned reputation in the motion picture industry throughout the world. There has been no other chief executive in the industry who is as practically experienced in the three chief branches of the industry—producing, distributing and exhibiting—as Mr. Fox. He alone has successfully written, directed, produced, distributed and exhibited motion pictures.

And now Mr. Fox, through developments of the past few years and particularly the Wesco deal, has placed himself in a position in which he must be reckoned with on every important development and situation in the motion picture industry.

Unhappy Endings

THAT the development of better and finer pictures depends upon a corresponding development in the tastes of the public has always been a recognized fact. The current status of public tastes is never possible definitely to establish and the question is further confused by persons who produce freakish pictures and blame their failure upon the lack of public appreciation.

It, of course, depends upon the showman to determine as best he can what the status of the public taste may be at any time, but there is now available a wealth of evidence in proof of the fact that the appreciation of the public has advanced considerably—even beyond the standard of probably the majority of pictures now being made.

It was only a short time ago when an "unhappy ending" was an insurmountable handicap for a picture. This is no longer true; any ending, providing that it is true, logical and appropriate, does not necessarily label a picture as lacking in popular appeal.

A New Warning

AN artificial effort of the German government to promote and manage film production has turned out disastrously. According to reports which have reached this country, the German government, despite its pressing necessities in other directions, is now compelled to shoulder a loss of 6,000,000 marks as the result of its excursion into motion picture production.

As a gesture in patriotism the loss is unimportant, but when in the light of government in private business, where it does not belong, it affords a new warning on an old question.

Open Forum Halted to Permit Immediate Action on Contract Block Buying, Arbitration May Set Off Fireworks

Compulsory Arbitration Denounced

Compulsory arbitration came in for widespread disapproval in replies from exhibitors throughout the country to a questionnaire sent out by Frank J. Rembusch of Indiana. Rembusch was armed to the teeth with this ammunition at the contract committee meeting, and was prepared to fire it into the discussion at the first opportunity. Names of the exhibitors reporting are withheld as a matter of confidence.

Offers Suggestion on Block Booking

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want pictures as advertised, or right to cancel.

If block booking is insisted on, I suggest that they put different types in separate blocks and let us take the block we want.

When picture is sold on a split basis, the split figure should be at least three times the rental.

When pictures are sold with certain stars or director, or from book, and changes are made, we should have the right to cancel if we wish as it was misrepresented.

Would Provide for Additional Clauses

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I am against compulsory arbitration and block buying. When film companies and producers make all good pictures it will be o.k. to buy them in a bag, but they are coming through now one good and two poor ones.

Also a contract should be so it could have additional clauses added as each situation is different and a clause should be possible to take care of these conditions when necessary.

If we are given a poor contract and the Brookhart bill to protect us the independent exhibitor will be given a chance to live again.

—Florida.

Wants No Substitutions Without Consent

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want a non-theatrical, and free-show clause.
I want the contract to specifically state what was contracted for, and no substitution without the consent of the exhibitor. I want the contract to contain no clause giving distributor privilege of pulling any picture for road show purposes. I want a clause in contract that same will become null and void in the event of the sale of the theatre, and that exhibitor will not be held responsible for contract when he has no place to exhibit pictures.

Sees the End of Independence

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want to live and let live, but the end of independence is evident if each year we are compelled to pay more and more for pictures (many of them inferior), with our receipts on the decline. This has been my experience in

Unit Rule to Govern Unaffiliated Exhibitors Who Are Members of Uniform Contract Committee

By ERNEST A. ROVELSTAD

Expressing complete confidence in the ability and determination of the members of the unaffiliated exhibitors' group in the Contract Committee to champion their cause at the Chicago meeting Tuesday, independent exhibitors waived the privilege of airing their grievances in open forum in order that the committee might get down to work at once, and with their full co-operation.

The committee at once went into executive session for the remainder of the afternoon, and the calling of another meeting Tuesday night launched the committee upon its work with sleeves rolled up and prospects of a week of knuckling down to the job of writing a new contract.

The opening of the meeting was not without its preliminary jockeying for strategical positions. Independent exhibitors gathered at the Congress hotel Monday, and out of their session came a concentration of suggestions for contractual improvement as well as one of the outstanding early developments. These were:

Unit rule adopted, requiring unanimous vote of the unaffiliated exhibitor members of the committee upon any proposal.

All sessions of the committee held behind closed doors, the trade press barred as well as exhibitors, producers and distributors not members of the committee.

Unaffiliated exhibitors to meet each forenoon and review the committee's decisions of the preceding day's meetings and offer suggestions.

Open forum waived by unaffiliated theatre owners on motion of Al Steffes, after opening speeches by R. F. Woodhull and R. H. Cochrane, chairmen of the two voting groups.

Contract committee decided to function with Woodhull and Cochrane alternating in the chair, and neither permitted to vote.

Block booking and arbitration promised to provide fireworks in the deliberations.

Woodhull, chairman of the unaffiliated exhibitors, and Cochrane, heading the distributors on the committee, both emphasized the seriousness of the task confronting the meeting, in their talks introducing the Tuesday afternoon session.

ALL SET TO WRITE A NEW CONTRACT. (Left to right) "Pete" Woodhull, Louis Rome, Julian Brylawski, F. E. Woolcott, Ben Berenstein, Joseph Walsh, A. H. Lockwood, Nathan Yamins and Michael J. O'Toole.

"THE COMMITTEE MEETINGS WILL TELL THE STORY." R. R. Biechele (left), perennial president of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas-Missouri and a member of the unaffiliated exhibitors group, didn't say that, but it was the tenor of his uncommunicativeness as the sessions began. On his left is A. F. Baker, also of Kansas City, Kan.

"We have come I believe to perhaps the most important spot in our industry to conduct this meeting," said "Pete" Woodhull. "The proposition today is one to be settled within the industry. It does not concern reformers and other common enemies from without. I believe there is an eminent desire to straighten out the contract situation. If there are those on either side that would for a moment question the motive of the other, I'd say that the quicker he checked out of this hotel and bought a one way ticket to somewhere, the better off would be the industry."

Allude to Brookhart Bill

An allusion to the Brookhart anti-block booking bill, which from the start promised to play an important part in the deliberations, was made by the M. P. T. O. A. president when he declared that "I believe there is an opportunity here to check an interference from without that we want to avoid."

"This committee is charged with a grave responsibility and I think it is up to all of us to help others to smoothen things out," said Cochrane, in expressing his "great hopes of the outcome of this meeting."

"I hope no one will go away from this meeting secretly exulting over having put something over," he continued.

Woodhull then introduced the members of the committee present. They were:

UNAFFILIATED EXHIBITORS—R. F. Woodhull, chairman; Ben Berenstein, California; R. R. Biechele, Kansas-Missouri; and Nathan Yamins, Massachusetts. Alternates: Joseph Walsh, Connecticut, for Yamins; Col. H. A. Cole, Texas, for Berenstein; and Louis Rome, Baltimore, for Biechele. H. M. Richey, secretary.

DISTRIBUTORS AND PRODUCERS: R. H. Cochrane, Universal, chairman; Phil Reisman, Pathe; Ned Depinet, First National; and Felix Feist, M-G-M. Alternate: Joseph I. Schnitzer, F. B. O. Gabriel Hess, M. P. P. D. A., secretary.

AFFILIATED EXHIBITORS (not voting): E. A. Schiller of Loew's, Inc., and Fred Desberg, St. Louis. Harold B. Franklin was not present, nor were the alternates: E. V. Richards, Jr., Dan Michalove and Harry M. Crandall.

"If you try to write in a clause to meet every complaint you cannot succeed," C. C. Pettijohn stated in a communication read by Richey. "Your honesty, integrity and sincerity of purpose presages the success of your meeting. We now have a good contract. Possibly you can write a better one. I hope so."

Again came the reference to the Brookhart bill in the statement of Pettijohn that "we have a few men, some very active in this industry, who are seeking to obtain federal regulation. You cannot afford to permit that."

Frank J. Rembusch of Indiana, who had been chief proponent of a move for a preliminary meeting on Monday, declared that "we've reached a point where there's lots of criticism on the outside, and let's not fool ourselves. I have said consistently that we should iron out our own difficulties, but if we can't do it ourselves I believe we should have some action from the outside. This committee should remember us unaffiliated independent exhibitors, who are the underdogs."

It remained for the "stormy petrel," Al Steffes, to touch off the nearest approach to verbal fireworks. "If the producers are going to bring seven to 10 attorneys in the meetings I think we should have a right to bring in our attorneys too. I propose we bust up this open meeting and let the committee go to work."

Feist Makes Himself Clear

Feist, in taking issue with Steffes, declared: "I understand my obligation. It is to help make a fair contract, but not to report back to any exhibitors or distributors. Do I make myself clear?"

Others who participated in the discussion were Hess, Julian Brylawski of Washington, D. C.; A. H. Lockwood of Connecticut, Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis, Rome of Baltimore, Fred J. Herrington of Pittsburgh, Feist, Berenstein, Cole and Schiller.

A proposal by Rembusch that the motions passed by the Trade conference be incorporated in the minutes of this meeting followed a statement by Yamins at the Monday session that he considered it inadvisable to include all of the resolutions in the contract, for some of them were superfluous.

Exhibitors from all parts of the country were in attendance at the meeting. Besides those mentioned in the foregoing, the conferees included J. J. Harwood of Cleveland, Nathan Friedberg of Pittsburgh, Anthony P. Jim of Pittsburgh, P. J. Wood, Columbus; Henry A. Staab, Milwaukee; C. B. Trotter, Indianapolis; Ludwig Siegel, Chicago; Sidney Segal, Chicago; Glenn A. Cross, Battle Creek; J. B. Clinton, Duluth; Oliver Rowe, St. Paul; Joe Pastor, Chicago; B. L. Kamp, Paramount; Eddie Grainger, Fox; Nate Wolf, Chicago Orpheum circuit; Joe Abramson, Chicago Film Board of Trade; F. E. Woolcott, Racine, Wis.; Michael J. O'Toole, Pennsylvania; A. F. Baker, Kansas City, Kan.; Cecil Maberry, Pathe; Jack Sampson.

Compulsory Arbitration Denounced by Exhibitors this small place. It's a case of "bleed 'em" all right; and let's pray for relief through fair legislation, which seems to be our only hope for existence in a business and investment created by our energy.

—Michigan.

Objects to Agreement Barring Court Action

A dispute with one company immediately brings all the other companies into the dispute and forces the independent theatre owner to acquiesce to any demand, no matter how unfair. It is impossible to buy pictures unless you agree beforehand to not go to a regular court of justice for settling all disputes.

—Indiana.

Asks That Arbitration Be Eliminated Entirely

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want no arbitration.
