Would Take Excessive Legal Terms from Contract

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want a simplified contract without the excessive legal terms and number of clauses.

—Louisiana.

Wants Pictures Made Before Signing Contract

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want mutual cancellation privileges.
Pictures to be made before I buy them, as unmade pictures value is intangible at best, and advance collections stifle rather than stimulate the efforts of the producer to make first class merchandise.

—Wyoming.

Asks for Equal Chance with Producer Theatres

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want something done to insure the independent exhibitor an equal chance with the chain operated theatre.

A lot of us do not wish to sell our theatres, but we are being threatened daily, that if we do not make terms the producers chains will build in our towns and take over the product we are now using.

—Michigan.

Doesn't Approve of Present Arbitration

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I am against the present set-up of arbitration, which takes away my right as an American citizen; and I believe it is time for the government to intercede in behalf of us defenseless theatre owners.
I want an opportunity to buy pictures that are available and fit to run in my theatre, and don't want to buy 30 or 40 pictures "blind" to get one or two good ones.

—Minnesota.

Would Abolish All Film Boards of Trade

I am against compulsory arbitration unreservedly.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want a contract that is equitable and fair with a clause which will allow me to cancel any objectionable picture.

The Film Boards of Trade are a damnable piece of unfairness and should be abolished in their entirety.

—Indiana.

Urges Proper Cancellation Clause in Contract

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want to be able to cancel same as any other line of business. I want pictures put in at one price all the way through from any one company.
Why should we give them a percentage on their good pictures and play the bad ones on a loss?

—Massachusetts.

Wants Chance to Protect Investment of $200,000

I am against compulsory arbitration.
I want to buy pictures on an open market.
I want at least a fighting chance to protect an investment of $200,000, now virtually ruined through inability to get any worthwhile pictures.

Believes Job Too Big for Only Three Men

This contract in my opinion is too big a thing to let three men go in and make a final decision. I think all three men are able and capable men, but I do not believe there are three men any place in the country who can go in and draft a contract that will satisfy the majority of exhibitors in the United States.

Fox Buys Wesco; Deal Gives Full Ownership of 350 Houses

F-N Will Produce on Same Program Says Rothacker

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BURBANK, CAL., Jan. 31.—Following the refusal of Winfield Sheehan, vice-president of Fox Films, to confirm the suggestion that Fox will have a hand in the control of First National, Watterson Rothacker, F-N production manager, stated that he has received no authority as to the change. He added that it would probably mean no change in the policy of the Burbank plant in any case. "We will continue to turn out pictures on the program originally outlined and they will be made at the First National-Burbank lot," he said. "That report is not one to be confirmed by the studio but by New York officials."

Several Angles to Deal in St. Louis

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 31.—The Fox-Wesco deal has great significance here. One proposition, as has been known, was the proposed management of the Saxe Circuit in Milwaukee and Wisconsin by Skouras Brothers for the account of Wesco. A second deal, so it is said, involved the Skouras first-runs in St. Louis and its allied string of houses, the St. Louis Amusement Company holdings.

One angle of the contemplated Wesco-Skouras deal, it was said, involved the taking over of the Missouri, Ambassador and Grand Central theatres on the basis of complete ownership. It is said that this was the motive for the Skouras purchase of the Missouri theatre building from Paramount.

A $4,550,000 first mortgage fee and leasehold 6½ per cent sinking fund gold bond issue for the Fox St. Louis Theatre Building was announced last week by Halsey, Stuart & Co., and other companies.

Fox Plans $8,000,000 Project in Philadelphia

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31.—Fox will erect an $8,000,000 theatre and office building at the southwest corner of 17th & Market Streets, according to Roy M. Livingstone, attorney, who stated construction will be started in the spring. The house will seat 5,000 and will be one of the largest two deluxe theatres in the city.

Fox Gets Lease on Atlanta Theatre Project

ATLANTA, Jan. 31.—Fox has obtained a 21-year lease on the Shrine Mosque to be built here at an aggregate rental of $3,000,000. The project, financed by members of Yarb Temple, will cost $2,000,000 and is to start within four weeks for completion within one year.

Speculation is rife over the money-making possibilities of the deal for Fox, as the location is ten blocks from the center of the city and it is conceded that Atlanta already is over-seated.

Battle With Stanley for Control of F-N Predicted

Fox Gets 28 Per Cent of First National by Wesco Purchase; Same as Stanley's

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Through the purchase of the control of Wesco Holding Corporation last week William Fox has become a foremost figure in the industry as a theatre-owning producer. The Wesco purchase gives Mr. Fox ownership of 250 theatres in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada and Montana, as well as the Saxe chain of fifty theatres in Wisconsin. These, with the theatres he owns in the east, Chicago, Denver, Detroit and Washington, D. C., give him absolute ownership in a nationwide chain embracing close to 350 theatres.

In addition to this, the deal gives Mr. Fox a 28 per cent ownership of First National Pictures, this stock being owned by Wesco and becoming part of the Fox purchase.

See Fight for F-N Control

The acquisition of an interest in First National by Mr. Fox presents an interesting situation, and the general belief is that it presages a fight for the control of that company between the Stanley Company and Fox.

The Stanley Company owns 28 per cent of First National, an equal amount with Fox, the remaining 44 per cent being owned by a number of franchise holders. A combination of Fox and Stanley, or either of these two with franchise holders owning 23 per cent of First National stock, would, of course, settle the question of controlling the company.

A combination of Fox and Stanley for this purpose is not believed to be on the cards and it is said that already emissaries of both companies are out among the owners of the 44 per cent, endeavoring to effect purchases of enough stock to give control.

It has been generally known for several months past that a deal was on for the purchase of Wesco by Stanley. The purchase of the Saxe chain by the Hoyt syndicate and the acquisition of control of Skouras Brothers' Missouri houses and the Finkelstein & Ruben big chain in the Northwest, was part of the plan to make the Stanley company the largest theatre owner in the country, with theatres covering the entire country. A deal between Stanley and Keith-Albee was further to magnify the strength of the Stanley company.

Keith-Albee Deal Fades

Then something happened and the Keith-Albee deal slipped away but it was believed that the deal for the Wesco properties would still be closed by Stanley. Harold Franklin, head of West Coast Theatres, and controlling through an option 20,000 shares of stock, arrived in New York several weeks ago, and it was expected that the deal with Stanley would be made at any time.

Something else slipped, so far as Stanley is concerned, and the industry was given a surprise one day last week by William Fox's announcement that he had purchased the Wesco company. The big deal was closed last Wednesday, the

Long Battle Over Fight Film Is Won By Ohio Exhibitors as U. S. Court Rules

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Jan. 31.—After an extended legal fight which was carried on in the Ohio Supreme court and the Federal court, motion picture exhibitors in Ohio have won their battle to have the Tunney-Dempsey fight films censored so that they might be shown. State Director of Education John L. Clifton, who is also head of the Ohio Department of Censorship, was ordered by the Ohio Supreme court in a decision handed down last Wednesday to view the films. This he did, and after his passing them, they were immediately exhibited in many houses. The successful fight was waged by the Midwestern Film Exchange, Inc., of Akron, and Frank Mantell of Dayton.

At the onset of the fight, Clifton, new in the office, refused to follow the precedent established by his predecessor, Vernon M. Riegel, in censoring the films, and appealed to Attorney General Turner for an opinion. Turner ruled that since the fight films were in Ohio as a result of a violation of the federal law, it would be a breach of discretion for the state censorship department to view the films. Acting upon this opinion, Clifton steadily refused to censor the films until the decision of the Federal court.

The first showing of the film was given in the Knickerbocker theater in Columbus immediately following the approval.

Fox Gets Five Chains in Big Deal

WILLIAM FOX

Outlet for Fox Product Given In 350 Self-Owned Theatres

Seating Capacity Totals 350,000 with 105,000,000 Paid Admissions
Registered Last Year—Several New Houses
Also Are Planned

By DOUGLAS HODGES

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 31.—Fox Film Corporation last week negotiated one of the greatest theatre deals in the annals of the industry, by its purchase of five chains operated by Wesco Holding Company. Two hundred and fifty houses figure in the transaction which involves approximately $100,000,000. That announcement comes directly from Winfield Sheehan, general manager of Fox Films.

The transaction is construed as giving Fox at least part control of First National Pictures. West Coast Theatres, Inc., one of the chains controlled by Wesco, several months ago joined with Stanley Company of America in obtaining control and direction of First National.

Gets 100 Per Cent Stock Ownership

Fox gets control of the following chains: Pacific Northwestern, North American, Saxe and Golden State Amusement in addition to the West Coast chain. It bought out all stockholders, thereby obtaining ownership of 100 per cent of the stock. It heretofore had owned 49 per cent of West Coast.

The deal gives Fox Films an outlet for its product in 350 of its own houses between the Atlantic and Pacific. The new chain operates houses in Wisconsin, California, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Minnesota and Iowa.

Franklin to Remain President

Harold B. Franklin, who came from the Paramount theatre division and has been president of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., will continue in that capacity, Sheehan stated.

A deal consummated last April brought West Coast into a large merger with the following as stockholders: the late Marcus Loew, head of the Loew chain; Louis B. Mayer of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount; Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists; William Fox; John Dillon of Hayden, Stone & Company; Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast; and First National Pictures.

Although Sheehan declined to discuss the standing of these parties under the new status it is obvious that the stock owned by them all has been taken up by the Fox company. It is said that Fox paid $55 a share for the stock.

The total seating of the houses in the five chains approximates 350,000 and the houses last year showed paid admissions of 105,000,000 people. Total revenue amounted to $34,650,000. In addition to these houses Fox will have a new house in Los Angeles which will be built in the downtown district late this year. It is planned to seat 5,500. Others are planned for San Francisco, Brooklyn, Detroit, St. Louis, Atlanta and Dayton, to seat a similar number.

West Coast Formed 6 Years Ago

West Coast Theatres, Inc., is a California corporation organized six years ago by Mike Gore, A. L. Gore, Sol Lesser and Adolph Ramish. It was the largest single state theatre chain in the world with almost 200 theatres in California.

Sheehan pointed out that the deal last week was consummated exactly 25 years from the time that William Fox paid $1,666.33 for his one-third interest in a makeshift 146-seat theatre in Brooklyn.

Calls It Greatest Tieup

A communication has been received from Harold B. Franklin by A. L. Gore, vice-president of West Coast, saying:

"The arrangement whereby the Fox company takes over Wesco is the strongest kind of a tieup with a group of the finest theatres throughout the country. This is the biggest step ever taken in theatrical history and insures for West Coast affiliations strength and progress, besides taking an important part in the national scheme with our organization as the keystone of what will become the greatest theatre institution anywhere."

Franklin is in New York where he will meet Sheehan early this week. The latter left the Coast for the East Saturday night on the Santa Fe Chief. He will return in three weeks.

He would give out no further announcement before going into conference with William Fox except to say that the headquarters of the new theatre company will be in Los Angeles.

contracting parties being William Fox, John Dillon of Hayden, Stone & Co., and Harold Franklin. The purchase was made for a cash consideration, but the amount, which runs away up into the millions, has not been made public.

It is said the 20,000 shares of stock held by Franklin entered largely into the negotiations—in fact made the deal by Fox possible. This stock had been set aside for Franklin when he became head of West Coast Theatres and was held by him under an option. While nothing official has been given out it is said the option on the 20,000 shares of stock netted Franklin cash to the extent of $500,000 with the closing of the deal.

According to an announcement by Mr. Fox, Franklin will remain in charge of the operation of West Coast Theatres with headquarters on the West Coast. The general offices of Wesco will be transferred at once to the offices of Fox here in New York.

Clash Over Brookhart Measure

Complete Roster of Keith-Albee's Officials Ratified

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Ratification of the officials of Keith-Albee was announced this week as follows:

President, Edward F. Albee; executive vice-president, Marcus Heiman; vice-president and general manager, John J. Murdock; vice-president, C. L. Kohl; vice-president and executive manager, E. G. Lauder, Jr.; vice-president, Reed A. Albee; vice-president, J. Henry Walters; vice-president and general counsel, Maurice Goodman; secretary, B. B. Kahane; treasurer, Myron Robinson; assistant secretary and director of publicity, Mark A. Luescher; assistant secretary, Philip M. Stern; assistant secretary, William J. Kernan; assistant treasurer, William J. Kernan.

Board of Directors—Edward F. Albee, E. G. Lauder, Jr., John J. Murdock, Walter P. Cooke, Maurice Goodman, J. Henry Walters, B. L. Heidingsfeld, Lee Shubert, Marcus Heiman, Joseph M. Finn, Herman Fehr, C. L. Kohl, Frank Tate, Mark A. Luescher, Reed A. Albee, Myron Robinson and B. B. Kahane.

Executive Committee—Edward F. Albee, John J. Murdock, E. G. Lauder, Jr., Marcus Heiman, Maurice Goodman, J. Henry Walters and B. B. Kahane. Finance Committee—Edward F. Albee, Marcus Heiman, Maurice Goodman, B. B. Kahane, Robert Lehman and J. Henry Walters. Edward V. Darling and Max Gordon, respectively, are general managers of the booking department and the production department.

Burr Features Human Chain in Hines' Film, "Chinatown Charley"

AL WOODS used to ballyhoo an act in New York called the Flying Span or something or other. It was a sensation at the time.

Charlie Burr has tried to work it into a motion picture starring Johnny Hines numerous times but for this reason and that never made the tieup until a few weeks ago. The act is in "Chinatown Charlie" and ought to prove a highlight of the production.

When the girl (Louise Lorraine) is trapped in the Chinatown den with no way of escape four performers in a New York show hear her cries from across the street. She stands on the balcony two flights up. They form a human chain by clutching one another's legs and hanging from a fire escape across the street. By their own contortions they generate an arc-like momentum enough to swing the lower end-man to the girl's balcony. With Johnny's aid she gets across the street to safety when Hines walks and balances himself on the backs of the rescuers.

There is one reason for giving the incident this much attention in these well crowded columns: the scene as I saw it filmed was dramatic and unlike the ordinary daring type of screen heroism in that it was without trickery or deceit. On another lot last week I saw a plane crash to earth—but there was no kick in it because the pilot was made of straw and sawdust. Daredevil stunts deserve their due when they are legitimate. And this one is.

The Mezzetti Brothers are the men who star in the act; old timers will remember them. Their work is brief on the screen yet they worked seven days in the studio rehearsing the act in order to get the necessary results.

New York Body OK's Bill; Californians Protest It

Pettijohn Declares 70 Per Cent of Exhibitors Oppose Measure—Sydney Cohen Invited to Address Britons

The Brookhart Bill—whether it will mean government control of the industry, and, if it does, whether that sacrifice is necessary in order to remedy certain conditions which a number of exhibitors attribute to block booking, was a subject of almost parallel importance with the uniform contract, with which it is closely linked, in the lobby discussions of exhibitors as the contract conference got under way in Chicago at the Congress hotel this week.

Exhibitors Divided in Opinion

Important developments of the past week included approval of the T. O. C. C.'s endorsement of the measure at an exhibitor rally in New York Thursday, despite a warning from C. C. Pettijohn against federal control. The Allied Amusement Industries of California went on record against the Brookhart bill, while opposing compulsory block booking. Sydney S. Cohen was invited by the General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of Great Britain to address the British exhibitors on cooperative booking on his visit to London in March.

Federal Control Angle Discussed by T. O. C. C.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Whether or not the passage of the Brookhart bill will place the film industry under government control was the chief subject of discussion at a rally held by the T. O. C. C. at the Hotel Astor last Thursday.

With one exception the speakers held that it would not, and at the close of the session, all present, by loud applauding, expressed their approval of the action of the T. O. C. C. in endorsing the bill and working for its passage. The single exception was C. C. Pettijohn, of the Hays organization, who had been invited.

Cite Brookhart Telegram

The speakers who held that the Brookhart bill did not embrace federal control presented as part of their evidence a telegram from Senator Brookhart to the T. O. C. C., asserting that this view of his bill was wrong.

"Blind booking, block booking and discrimination in favor of the theatres controlled by the producers combination are the three evils that threaten the life of the motion picture industry," said the Brookhart telegram. "My bill removes these three evils and it does nothing more.

"Those interested in the combination have quoted me as favoring government control of the motion picture industry. This claim is entirely without foundation. The government will control only the evils that threaten the industry and it does that for every industry in the United States."

The presentation of the Brookhart bill endorsement was made by Leo Brecher in a carefully prepared address, teeming with facts and figures, intended to show why this legislation would be the salvation of the independent exhibitor.

Pettijohn declared his chief reason for opposing the bill was that it carried with it federal regulation of the film industry, and that this was not needed. He declared 70 per cent of the nation's theatre owners, affiliated and unaffiliated, are opposed to the bill.

"Film rentals will be increased from 3 to 300 per cent if the Brookhart bill becomes a law, and small producers will be forced out of business.

"I haven't lost faith in our ability or integrity to solve our own problems. I have made Democratic speeches in Indiana against Will H. Hays, which got bigger applause than did mention of Senator Brookhart's name at this meeting today. We're swayed by what's behind things, and I doubt if the senator would have received much if any applause if it were not for the fact that he is the author of the bill.

"Five years ago, exhibitors asked and received a uniform contract, and later obtained equal representation in settling disputes, through the offices of the Hays organization. Thirty thousand cases have been settled in three years by arbitration, with only 27 appeals to the courts. And then you tell me we can't settle our problems."

In countering on Pettijohn, Brecker declared:

"Just as surely as you were warned that the trade commission would act unless certain conditions were remedied, so now I warn you that if the Brookhart bill is not passed you'll get something far more serious. There'll be federal control of everything from number, type and cost of productions, down to cost of admissions."

Among other speakers were Arthur Hirsch, R. F. Woodhull, Harry Suchman, Sydney S. Cohen, William Brandt, Charles L. O'Reilly and Frank J. Rembusch. A telegram was sent by the T. O. C. C. to all exhibitor organizations, advising them that the consensus of the rally was that passage of the Brookhart bill "was not only preferable but was imperative."

Brookhart Bill Opposed by California Exhibitors

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—The Allied Amusement Industries of California met last week to discuss booking contracts and adopted resolutions opposing block booking as compulsory. No opposition is directed against block booking under the optional plan, however.

The organization also went on record as opposing the Brookhart bill.

Resolutions concerning the uniform contract were forwarded to Ben Berenstein, of Los Angeles, who is representing California exhibitors at the meeting of the contract committee in Chicago.

$125,000 Damage Too High for Peter the Great

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 31.—Damages of $125,000 is too much for the death of a dog, even such a canine money earner as Peter the Great, film dog, Judge Marsh of Superior court ruled last week. A new trial of the civil case against Fred Cyriacks, who shot the dog during an argument with Peter's owners, was granted. The dog's owners, Edward Faust and Charles Dreyer, placed a value of $250,000 on his life. The $125,000 verdict against Cyriacks was returned by a jury after a trial consuming more than a week.

McGuirk Chairman; Move Follows Friction Rumor

Elevation of Treasurer to President Taken to Mean Bankers More Active in Management

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Rumors have been current for several months that all was not harmony within the ranks of the Stanley Company of America, and that John J. McGuirk would resign from the position of president. All of these rumors met with denials, and only two weeks ago McGuirk announced that he had no thought of resigning.

McGuirk Heads Directorate Now

Last Friday, at a meeting of the directors of the company, McGuirk's resignation was accepted and Irving D. Rossheim, treasurer of the company, was elected in his place. McGuirk was made chairman of the board of directors.

Rossheim has been with the Stanley Company and has been generally recognized as representing the banking interests which have been financing Stanley. His election as president is believed to mean that the banking interests have taken a more active interest in the management of the company. It is also believed that Rossheim's selection as president will do away with a lot of the friction that is said to exist within the company.

Irving D. Rossheim

This friction, if it exists, is widely believed to have been responsible for the Stanley company having "muffed" two great opportunities for enlargement. The first of these was the deal for consolidation with Keith-Albee, and the second was the losing out of the acquisition of Wesco, which was apparently all set for Stanley, and then suddenly switched to William Fox.

The new president of the company, who is 41 years old, was born in New York City. He was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and from 1908 to 1918 was a member of the faculty of the Wharton School of Finance. Later he became associated with the law firm of Wolf, Block, Schoor and Bolis-Cohen and while there was active in the organization of the present Stanley Company.

He first became identified with the Stanley organization about eight years ago as controller and later was elected assistant treasurer and then treasurer. In that capacity he instituted many reforms which unified methods and resulted in immense savings to the company in all departments.

Net Income Exceeds $5,485,000

After the meeting Friday the following financial report was given out:

"Preliminary financial report of the Stanley Company of America for 1927 as submitted by the treasurer to the board of directors shows gross receipts of $37,060,024 for the year, operating expenses of $31,574,303 and net income before depreciation and federal taxes, of $5,485,721.

"Reserves for depreciation and federal taxes amounted to $2,250,484 for the year, leaving a balance of $3,235,337 available for dividends. Dividend payments in 1927 aggregated $2,181,089, leaving a surplus of $1,054,248 for the year."

Bill Banning Shows in Washington on Sunday Has Law Body's Favor

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—There is every indication that the Lankford Sunday bill will be favorably reported to the House of Representatives in the near future, says C. E. Holmes, secretary of the Progressive Civic League, of Oak Park, Ill. Five of the seven members of the subcommittee are in favor of the measure and also a majority of the larger committee of 21 members.

The Lord's Day Alliance has 38 men in the field who are giving their entire time to work among the churches in the interest of the Lankford bill. The National Reform Association is also carrying on a vigorous campaign with 35 men.

An Illinois congressman has declared that the only hope of "defeating this Sunday bill is in creating public sentiment against this vicious legislation."

Halts Fight Film; Reels Not Sanctioned by Fine

MEMPHIS, Jan. 31.—Showing of the Dempsey-Tunney fight films at the Empire theatre Monday afternoon was halted by U. S. District Attorney Lindsay Phillips. Phillips indicated, however, that he would take no action against the Princess theatre, where the film showed. The differentiation was caused by the fact that a fine of $500 has been paid by the Princess. But the fact that one film has been brought in and a fine paid does not make subsequent importation legal, Phillips said.

Walter Nealand, associated in the showing at the Empire, said he expected to be able to run the film soon.

ALBANY, Jan. 31.—The exhibitors of New York state are collectively hundreds of thousands of dollars better off this winter because of the unusual weather conditions that have prevailed thus far. Probably less coal has been burned in the theatres of New York state this winter than during any season in recent years. One exhibitor reported last week that his coal bill was $200 under that of last year.

Uplifters Attack Use of Child Actors In Minneapolis; Thought Slap at F. & R.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 31.—An indirect slap was taken at the Kiddie Revues which have been a semi-annual attraction at the Finkelstein & Ruben theatres in the Twin Cities and which feature juvenile entertainers, by the Women's Co-operative Alliance, an organization doing welfare and social work among young women and children.

Although the Alliance members did not name any show specifically, the Kiddie Revue entertainers have been the most prominent here in the last few years, and each production has featured from 30 to 50 children.

"Child labor of the worst sort," was the way Mrs. G. F. Wilkin characterized the employment of child actors, declaring that the "thoughtless public was applauding the juvenile acts."

The state child labor law allows children over ten years old to appear on the stage with the permission of the state industrial commission. According to the report given the Alliance more than 1,000 child permits had been issued in the state in the last three years, and since July, 1927, 167 permits had been granted.

Exhibitor and Trolley Line Hand Grand Slam to Bridge Parties

Carver Refunds Round-Trip Carfare with Each Theatre Ticket Purchased—Parallels Price of Rival House

[Special from Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 31.—One Kansas City Exhibitor believes he has solved, partly at least, the problem of combating the competition of bridge parties and other events which might keep patrons in their homes at night.

The attendance at most first-run downtown theatres in Kansas City has been good at matinees, but the evening business has suffered noticeably of late. In fact, it has become a problem for most of the large theatres which are under heavy operating expense. The sheer exploitation of good pictures and even a reduction in prices has failed to stimulate the night business to any great extent. Radios in the homes and bridge parties were blamed by many of the exhibitors. Then it was that Samuel Carver, manager of the Liberty theatre, a first run downtown house, effected a tieup with the Kansas City Public Service Company, which operates all streetcar lines, through Fred G. Buffe, vice-president.

Refund Streetcar Fares

In an advertising campaign, costing several thousand dollars, the announcement was made that the Liberty theatre would refund round-trip streetcar fares with each adult ticket purchased. The streetcar company was supplied with coupons, which were delivered upon request, entitling the holder to receive a refund of his fare at the theatre. The coupons, however, must be presented at the box-office after 6 p. m.

In view of the fact that the Liberty's price of admission was 15 cents higher than a large rival theatre, the coupon plan virtually was nothing more than a reduction in price equal to the rival house, but the stunt proved "good copy" for daily newspapers and the theatre benefitted greatly from the large advertisements which the streetcar company ran in daily newspapers.

"This is a 'give-away' age," said Carver. "To merely reduce the admission prices would be accepted with passing notice and few persons a week later would actually remember that the prices at the Liberty had been reduced. The admission, in fact, has not been reduced. The price remains at 50 cents to all those who do not present coupons. The big part of any downtown theatre's patronage comes from the residential sections of a city at night.

Ideal Twosome for Tieup

"Exhibitors have got to do something to rout persons out of their homes and away from the radios and bridge parties at night. The motor car doing the theatres, as well as the streetcar company, no good. Then why do not the theatre and the streetcar company make an ideal twosome for a tieup? The plan has been under way only a few days and it is impossible yet to determine its real value, but there has been an increase in night attendance and we are receiving hundreds of coupons. I firmly believe the solution of meager night attendances in Kansas City at downtown motion picture theatres has been solved."

Rosenwald Made Coast Sales Head by Universal

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Lou B. Metzger, general sales manager for Universal, has just announced several important changes in the personnel of the sales organization. G. E. Rosenwald, manager of the Los Angeles branch for Universal, has been promoted to be district manager for the West Coast, in the position vacated by the recent death of

D. S. Mitchell. Rosenwald's post at the head of the Los Angeles exchange will be taken by George Naylor, the Universal manager in Des Moines.

Jack Osserman, at present the manager in Universal's Wichita office, will take over the Des Moines branch. The Wichita branch will be closed February 4 and its territory distributed between the Kansas City, Omaha and other adjoining branches.

St. Louis Film Board to Hold First Annual Frolic

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 31.—The St. Louis Film Board of Trade will hold its first annual Film Board Frolic at the Hotel Chase Red Room and Palm Room, Saturday evening. The reception will start at 9 o'clock and supper will be served at midnight. Performers and bands from leading theatres will entertain during the festivities and Herbert Berger will supply the dance music.

Harry Weiss of First National, is chairman of the entertainment committee, and others who serve with him on this committee are Clayton Lynch of Metro-Goldwyn, Manny Gottlieb of Universal, Jack Weil of Gotham, and Sol Hankin of Educational.

Youths Imprisoned for Film Theatre Burglary

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WINNIPEG, MAN., Jan. 31.—Three youths of Winnipeg, Manitoba, were found guilty last week by Magistrate Noble of Winnipeg of breaking into the Gaiety theatre and attempting to rob the safe during the previous week. The ring-leader, Richard Adams, 18, was given a sentence of three years in the penitentiary, while the other two, George W. Gough and Hugh Cairns, were sentenced to serve one year in jail. The owner of the Gaiety is Henry Morton.

The attempt on the Gaiety followed the hold-up at the Lyceum theatre, Winnipeg, in which armed bandits secured $1,100 from Manager George Law and his assistant and then escaped after a gun battle.

New Company Started

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

JERSEY CITY, Jan. 31.—George L. Record, Frederick A. Teese of Cliffside, and Frank H. Higgins of East Orange have incorporated as the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Inc. The objects of the company, as stated in the certificate of incorporation, range from theatre ownership to production and distribution.

Sunday Shows Endorsed

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 31.—By a vote of 1,218 to 600 the citizenry of Effingham, Ill., on January 27 routed the bluenose element which had closed theatres Sundays.

Ride the Street Car to the Theatre!

Kansas City's amusement facilities are excellent and each week the theatres offer fine attractions.

Why not make it a habit to take the family to a theatre several evenings a week? You'll all enjoy it immensely.

Make the evening doubly pleasant by using the street cars or buses, thus eliminating accident hazard and parking expense.

Service is excellent throughout the evening—and there are more seats than passengers.

The Liberty Theatre at 1104 Main Street is furnishing every street car patron who attends that theatre after 6:00 p. m. with two free street car tickets. The street car operators have been supplied with coupons which will be delivered upon request, entitling you to receive free street car tickets from the Liberty Theatre. We call this unusual offer to your attention so that you can take advantage thereof if you so desire.

$150,000 House to Go Up Where Fire Razed Theatre 38 Years Old

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

JOHNSTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 31.—William C. Smalley has about completed plans for the rebuilding of Smalley's Johnstown theatre, which was practically destroyed by fire recently. The new house will cost $150,000, Smalley states.

All that remained of the theatre, which had been a popular place of amusement for 38 years, was four walls. The origin of the blaze is unknown. Smalley lost $25,000 in personal effects.

Texas Exhibitor Leaders On Goodwill Tour of State

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 31.—W. S. Wald, Col. H. A. Cole, Sam Heffy, Senator J. J. Strickland, H. G. Stein and other officers and members of the M. P. T. O. of Texas, convened here last week to discuss problems of Southwest Texas exhibitors.

Business Manager Waid stated the meeting was more a part of a goodwill trip than for any specific business reason. He declared the organization was stressing to exhibitors the importance of the monthly Blue Ribbon Award. The delegation went next to Austin and Houston.

Ibanez, in Will, Spurns Burial in Native Spain

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

MENTONE, FRANCE, Jan. 31.—Vicente Blasco Ibanez, famous Spanish writer and author of "The Four Horsemen," who died last week, will not be buried in his native land, due to the request in his will to be buried in France rather than in Spain. He was a political enemy of the present regime. At the time of his death he was planning "The Fifth Horseman," and other stories for moving pictures.

2,000 Ask Sunday Shows; Clergy Forces City Vote

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

ALBANY, Jan. 31.—The common council in Canandaigua, N. Y., is getting itself out of a tight place when it comes to deciding the question of Sunday movies, by submitting the whole proposition to a vote of the taxpayers. There has been plenty of agitation both for and against Sunday shows in the city for several weeks. When the common council met last week, a petition with 2,024 names was presented by those in favor of Sunday shows. Then up stepped the ministers with a petition that contained 1,250 names. The aldermen decided that they couldn't oppose the ministers, nor oppose the clergy's opponents. So now it's being left to the taxpayers.

Two Exhibitors Put Ban on Admissions During Climax

Instances of Managers Guarding Public's Goodwill Are Brought to Light by Quigley Editorial

Publication of an editorial by Martin J. Quigley exposing the fallacy of playing mystery productions with a grind policy which permits patrons to enter late, thus not only giving them a jumbled performance as well as undermining their good will, has brought to light two instances of exhibitors who have been alive to the danger and have averted it.

Interest Protected at Two Theatres

No one was admitted during the last fifteen minutes of the screening of Lon Chaney's "London After Midnight" at the Miller theatre in Wichita. The Miller is operated by the Consolidated Amusement Company, of which L. M. Miller is president and Stanley Chambers managing director. The other instance is the Centre theatre at Ottawa, Don Stapleton manager. At the Centre, admission was barred during the last five minutes of "The Gorilla."

Reproduction in an adjoining column of a newspaper advertisement of the Miller theatre shows that the management explained to its patrons that "we make this ruling that you may enjoy to the fullest extent the unfolding of the mystery and the amazing climax that occurs in the final minutes of the picture."

Immediately below this explanation were given the hours at which the shows started.

Urged Not to Divulge Plot

Stapleton at the Centre in Ottawa announced the restriction against entering during the last five minutes of "The Gorilla" was determined because knowledge of the final episodes would spoil the picture for the patrons. Stapleton also requested that patrons refrain from telling their friends about the plot. The result was that there was practically no seating of patrons during the closing stages of the picture and a great deal was accomplished toward building and maintaining goodwill.

The editorial article by Martin J. Quigley was published in the January 21 issue under the caption, "Upside Down," and is reprinted herewith:

"When a picture like 'The Cat and the Canary' gets out into general distribution and becomes the bill for picture houses with a grind policy the absurdity of the policy which prevents patrons from seeing a picture from the beginning becomes plainly apparent.

"Here is an excellent picture, capably directed and capably portrayed. It contains a thoroughly interesting story and should have a broadcast appeal. But the story happens to be one which must be seen from the beginning if the patron is to realize that he is seeing a fine picture and not a meaningless jumble.

"Exhibitors continue highly indifferent toward this very vital question affecting their business. Every theatremen knows that if he is to build business, or even maintain such business as he may now be enjoying, he must give satisfaction to his patrons. When he plays such a picture as 'The Cat and the Canary' under a grind policy, with no effort whatsoever made to enable his patrons to understand and follow the picture by seeing it from the start, he is pursuing a course that cannot but lead to disastrous results.

"To come in on such a picture at the second or third reel is an experience that cannot help but discourage and disgust theatre patrons.

"We are well aware of the problem involved but simply because there is a problem there certainly is no good reason why theatremen should sit back supinely and allow the evil to continue. Exhibitors who will exert every possible effort to keep a poor picture off their screens will show such a picture as 'The Cat and the Canary,' which is a very good picture if seen from the beginning but a very poor one if not, without giving the matter a second thought.

"We entertain the theory that the industry in the ordinary course suffers far greater than is realized from this upside-down way of exhibiting pictures. But in the case of a mystery story the evil becomes so plain that no one can deny it."

PORTLAND, ORE., Jan. 31.—Another first run house will be erected by the Olympian Investment Company here, at a cost of $65,000. It will be called the Capitol, will seat 1,000, and charge 15 cents admissions. The architecture will be Spanish. W. C. Gowen has been appointed manager.

1927 Ticket Tax Drops 3 Million to $17,835,000; 4 States Paid Most of It

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Four states paid two-thirds of all the admission taxes collected in the United States in 1927, according to an analysis of the year's collections just prepared by the internal revenue bureau of the Treasury department. They are New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania and California. Total collections for 1927 are placed at $17,835,818.24, a drop of more than $3,000,000 from the total in 1926 of $20,990,775.48. The increase in exemption from 50 to 75 cents became effective March 29, 1926, and was in force through eight months of that year.

Nearly 40 per cent of the country's total admission taxes were paid in New York, where collections for 1927 amounted to $6,985,248.64. Illinois paid $2,150,153.23; Pennsylvania, $1,431,964, and California, $1,404,008.62.

WE NEVER PICK UP OUR MARBLES —And Run Home!

SIX years ago, the Association of Motion Picture Advertisers requested all of the business papers in the motion picture industry to join the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Exhibitors Herald joined immediately, and on its first audit it showed approximately one-half of the number of theatre owner subscribers credited to the then leading paper in the field—the paper, by the way, which sponsored the A. B. C. in the motion picture field.

The Herald didn't pick up its marbles and run home. It played the game. And each year, the audits reflected the healthy growth of a healthy publication.

Moving Picture World joined the A. B. C. on the same insistence. It showed a total considerably under the leader of that day but it played the game.

Of all of the papers in the field, Exhibitors Herald and the Moving Picture World were the only ones which stuck. Some didn't dare to go in. Others picked up their marbles and ran home, as soon as the figures for a particular year failed to show them at or near the top.

It is only fitting that the two papers which stuck have merged into the one great outstanding business paper in the motion picture field.

Stories Told

A smiling trio—and Mr. Gallagher. Or (to get everybody in)—the quartette that recently finished "Alex the Great" for F B O. The grinnest smile belongs to Director Dudley Murphy, in whose ambitious embrace are (left to right) Patricia Avery, Albert Conti, and Skeets Gallagher.

This is how it was: Mistress Felippa, aged three, marched into the studio to see her daddy, Joe Rock, Sterling supervisor. And they were making "Burning Up Broadway," in which Helene Costello and Robert Frazer are featured. And that's how it happened. Wasn't it nice of 'em?

Camouflage! Unto semi-concealment does Lorraine Eddy blend with elegance. In Paramount-Christie comedies, as a gold digger, she also brings a lighter vein to her concealments—though then her camouflage is plain applesauce. She is with Jimmie Adams.

After a lengthy stay in Europe, the Goddess of Liberty draws a spontaneous high-sign from Monta Bell. The M-G-M director was abroad two months on a vacation.

The clean-shaven chap is Devore. (We know its Dorothy, but why bring that up?) The other is CHARLES Lamont. (Think he looks suspicious? Here's a tip—It's not about the COAT!) Lamont directs Devore in Educational comedies.

Two scenes from United Artists' "Drums of Love," D. W. Griffith's first independent picture since 1919. The public viewed it for the first time last week at the Liberty theatre in New York, under the auspices of Morris Gest (shown at right with Griffith) and Joseph M. Schenk. The story is of the Portuguese court in the 17th Century, when the monarch removed his capital to South America. The action proceeds from an intense feud and runs the gamut of emotions, in the accepted Griffith manner. The cast includes Lionel Barrymore and Tully Marshall, with Mary Philbin (shown in the reproduction here) as the star. Griffith went to New York for the premiere, on which occasion the cameraman recorded him scrutinizing his opus in celluloid.

Another beauty prize winner to seek a film career—Myrtle Valsted, who recently went to the Universal studios for "the big chance." She was the "Miss Chicago" of 1927 in a city-wide contest last summer.

F. W. Demara, owner of the Palace theatre in Lawrence, Mass., who has been identified with the trade 21 years.

Lucien Hubbard, who produced M-G-M's musical show adaptation, "Rose Marie," featuring Joan Crawford and James Murray. It is a February release.

Princess Der Ling of China and her American husband, Thaddeus White, recently visited the First National studios during the filming of "Burning Daylight," and thus became the guests of Milton Sills, the star, and of his feminine lead, Doris Kenyon. (Don't let the whiskers fool you—it's Sills on the left.)

Among the lucky (though deserving) 13 Wampas "Baby Stars of 1927" is Sue Carol. Pathe has cast her opposite William Boyd in "Skyscraper."

It was Skinner's idea. They all would go into telephone booths and the first one to get a wrong number would have to buy the—er—hot chocolates. So each one just stalled. Bryant Washburn thought it up. He's Skinner in F B O's "Skinner's Big Idea" (another one!), of which (left to right) Tannura is the cameraman; Lynn Shores, the director; Washburn, the star; and Joe Nadel, assistant director.

Smiles produced by their plans for F B O "talking pictures"—(left to right) Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O; David Sarnoff, vice-president of R C A; and C. W. Stone of General Electric.

Also among those distinguished by the recent decision of the Wampas jury is Iris Stuart. Paramount has placed her in that producer's stock company.

"Ah, senior! You so beeg and strong and me so darned leetle! You protect me so?—huh?" Thus Lupe Valez to Rod La Rocque in Pathe's "Stand and Deliver"—proving that woman is Woman, even in broken English.

Don't be misled. Though the drinker could use a shave, the drink is NOT vodka. And Karl Dane IS afraid of gorillas. And George K. Arthur doesn't really LEAN to things like this. Finally, the beast is merely a MAN dressed up for this scene in M-G-M's "Monkey Business," which stars Dane and Arthur. Now you know the truth.

Five Editors Speak on News Reels Before a Quiet A. M. P. A.

Fait Goes to Buenos Aires for First National—"Chicago" Ending Broadway Run—Colman-Banky Film Due in February

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Jan 31.—The millennium is here. Five news reel editors, one comedian, and about a hundred press agents and advertising men consorted for two hours without a casualty. All this happened at last Thursday's session of Bruce Gallup's up and coming A. M. P. A. The news reel editors were representatives of all the news reels in the industry, and were the guests of the A. M. P. A., each being given opportunity to say anything he wanted to about his own news reel, or the news reel business generally. The comedian was Monte Banks, who stopped over on his way to Europe, to make some pictures for an English company.

TRUMAN TALLEY, editor of Fox News, predicted the time would come when exhibitors would awaken to a proper appreciation of news reels and would pay a proper price. He said:

"You have all heard about the tremendous costs of turning out news reels and how little the exhibitor pays for one of the most important features of his program today. My only answer to that is, why should he be sold news reels at such low rentals? News reels have proved themselves to be an indispensable feature on the program of every worthwhile theatre. If this man pays $5,000 for a feature picture of six reels, why should he be able to buy a reel of news for $50? I believe there will come a day when he will pay as high as $500 a week for his news feature, and he is getting it cheap at that."

Talley's talk had followed a stirring speech by Ray Hall, editor of Pathe News. Hall, who was scheduled to talk on "What does the public want in news reels?" and went on to explain what constituted news. He maintained that regardless of the tremendous costs for production, the news reel was of such inestimable value to the world in bringing nations closer together in friendship that it would be impossible to do without them.

S. H. McKeon, substituting for Emanuel Cohen of Paramount News, gave some idea of the production of news reels in the domestic field. His talk was followed by a most interesting one on "Production in the Foreign Field," by Mike Clofine of M-G-M News.

Then E. B. Hatrick of International News, gave some startling facts regarding the production of "Specials," pointing out how they were conceived for the purpose of advertising and how today due to the fact that there were so many being produced, they had lost their former importance as a great advertising feature for the main news service.

Altogether, the A. M. P. A. might well feel proud of staging such an affair, as it is the first time that all the editors of this very important branch of motion picture production have been brought together under one tent. Close to 100 members present voted it one of the most interesting affairs they had attended for a long time.

President Bruce Gallup took the opportunity to thank Dan Doherty of Fox, who thought of the idea, and to Gordon White of Educational, a member of the committee and who also served as chairman of the meeting, and to Si Seadler, the third member of the committee which was responsible for the success of the affair.

Fait Goes to Buenos Aires

William Fait, formerly manager of First National's Mexican office, sailed last week aboard the S. S. American Legion for Buenos Aires, where he will take up active supervision of First National's distributing interests there. The company's product is now being handled through Max Gluckmann and M-G-M, and Fait's activities will center around these two concerns. Succeeding Fait as manager of the Mexico City branch is Robert McFarlane, formerly assistant manager of that exchange.

Arthur Hornblow, Jr., chief production executive for Samuel Goldwyn, returned to Hollywood last week. During the past four weeks, Hornblow has acquired options on 19 scenarios, both originals and adapted works. Upon his return to the Goldwyn studio at Culver City, Goldwyn will select vehicles for the starring ventures of Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, who are now completing their co-starring picture, tentatively known as "Leatherface." It is scheduled for a Broadway premiere late in February.

The week's statistics from the Roxy theatre concerns the house hospital. Since the opening of the theatre last March to the close of the year, over 500 patients were treated. These emergency treatments include sprains, faints, epileptic seizures and cardiac cases.

In several instances, the cases were accidents brought in from the street for first aid. Almost 1,000 cases were treated among the stage hands, electricians, ushers, etc. Regular treatment is administered to members of the chorus and advice is also given to employees on proper diet and personal hygiene.

Decides to Release "Chicago"

Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces the last week of the Broadway engagement of "Chicago" at the Gaiety theatre. This De Mille production, adapted from the stage play of the same name and featuring Phyllis Haver and Victor Varconi, has been on the Gaiety screen for the last six weeks. Existing contracts necessitate the immediate national release of this picture, it is said.

Gloria Swanson's "Sadie Thompson" comes to the United Artists' Rivoli on Saturday of this week. The Pago-Pago visitor will move in the day after the departure of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," which ran for three weeks. The capital city of the United States was the scene of the world premiere of "Sadie Thompson." At the Columbia theatre in Washington, Miss Thompson's shadow was so popular that the house record, set by "The Big Parade," was shattered. Reviewers in Washington, Denver and San Francisco seem to have "re-discovered" Gloria Swanson as an emotional actress.

"13 Washington Square," a new Universal production, has been selected by S. L. Rothafel as the principal screen attraction at the Roxy theatre this week.

Monty Banks, Pathe comedian, who passed through New York last week on his way to England where he will make a series of pictures for British International, was accompanied by Tim Whalen, director, and Rex Taylor, writer.

Re-Takes

HOLLYWOOD.—Well, we turned out with Filmdom's elite to see "The Circus" the other night at Sid Grauman's rad and gold theatre, which Sid calls the Chinese. And Sid had all the trimmings for a real old-fashioned show, with sideshow tents, pink lemonade, and hot dogs. Say, did you ever try to drink pink lemonade out of a paper cup with a stiff shirt on, while 3,500 people jostled you about a windy court yard? It's great fun. Try it some time.

Inside Sid had a great show, though. I haven't been to a circus for quite some time but from what I remember of the last one, the one Sid put on last Friday night quite equaled it. He had some real "barkers" pulling the crowds in, and such a show! Trained dogs, skating bears, and Poodles Hanneford with a carload of horses and new tricks. It was a great introduction for Chaplin's picture, and everybody gave it a good hand.

Of course the big attraction of the evening was the crowd, as everybody turns out for a Grauman opening, and to top it all Chaplin made a little speech which was a masterpiece of brevity. However, his picture spoke for him. Everybody liked it.

Some Chain

These are days of big deals in the picture business. Did you see where William Fox stepped out last week and bought 250 theatres comprising several chains? He already owned a hundred houses, so he's pretty well fixed if he wants to go to a picture show of an evening.

Another Feed

Now Hollywood has its own Park Row, just like New York. It's over on the Fox lot and is lined with writers' and directors' bungalows, with fountains playing and all kinds of trees and shrubs to complete a perfect setting for the hard workers. Will Hays assisted June Collyer and other Fox stars to dedicate the new retreat, and courteous caterers served ice cream and cake to the thirsty and sweltering newspaper folk who came to hear the speeches.

Busy Girls

Those Wampas baby stars who were selected the other day are being showered with the first fruits of glory. They've received invitations to ride in airplanes, new automobiles, pose for portraits, advertise new shoes, frocks and hats. Of course the real estate men haven't overlooked a bet either, and the Wampas stars have been invited to buy lots and make personal appearances at the tracts.

Have You Written Rex?

Big news from Universal lot: Rex, King of Wild Horses, outshines many a screen star in the number of his fan letters. They are not all "mash" notes, however.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—About the most likely scheme yet put forward for the creation of a film colony in England, is just announced. British Instructional has entered into an arrangement with the promoters of the Welwyn Garden City, a few miles north of London, under which it is proposed that large studios shall be built there, complete with artists' accommodations and all that goes to make a miniature Hollywood.

H. Bruce Woolfe of British Instructional, will be in charge of the new studios, which it is definitely stated will be ready for work in July, when the first film to be shot will in all probability be "Conquest," special story written by Lieut. Col. John Buchan.

Plan $159,000 Theatre In Outlying Minneapolis

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 31.—Minneapolis' "farthest out" motion picture theatre will be built this spring by the Lagoon Enterprises, Inc., of which Joseph W. Cohen is president. Plans have been completed by Perry E. Crosier, Minneapolis architect, for a building to cost $159,000, of oriental design, and housing in addition to the theatre seating 1,500, space for several business houses and offices.

Until last year the theatre would have been located on the south city limits, although residences extended for several blocks into the country district. Annexation proceedings brought in territory for a mile south of the proposed theatre.

ALBANY, Jan. 31.—A report to the effect that a syndicate in Boston, represented by John J. Curley of that city, is planning to erect a chain of motion picture theatres in Massachusetts and New York, became current last week. J. W. Goodman, of Watertown, N. Y., announced that the syndicate had secured an option on a site in that city. It may also operate houses in Worcester, Springfield, Albany, Schenectady, Utica, Syracuse, Watertown, Canton, and Potsdam.

Brands Bluenoses Worst Tormentors of Congress

Can't Legislate Taste, Board of Review Told—Chicago Bill Makes Theatres Political Football

Censorship of motion pictures was denounced as "unconstitutional, un-American and ineffective" by Mrs. Florence R. Kahn, congresswoman from California, in an address which climaxed the fourth annual conference of the National Board of Review, according to dispatches from New York. Mrs. Kahn spoke at the thirteenth annual luncheon Saturday at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York.

Chicago Mayor Would Rule Theatres

At the same time an ordinance was presented to the city council of Chicago which would give Mayor William Hale Thompson complete control over the Chicago censor board and indirectly a whiphand over all motion picture theatres in the city.

Mrs. Kahn told the National Board of Review that members of Congress find their worst tormentors in the way of propagandists are the "blue law advocates, those in favor of Sunday closings and the federal censorship of books and magazines."

"One cannot legislate morality into people," the congresswoman declared. "Education, boycotting of the bad, encouragement of the fine in all things of life, create a standard to which producers of all kinds must conform.

"In every effort to regulate pictures we are establishing a precedent that could eventually lead to muzzling a free press or even free speech."

Similar warning against censorship was sounded by Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, lecturer and author, who declared that "the only thing the matter with the movies is the audience."

"The American public is tabloid-minded and has the tabloid soul," Mrs. Clarke said. "It wants a stimulant for its atrophied or undeveloped emotions, and it prefers to take it undiluted or unrefined."

Public or private taste cannot be improved by agitation, education or legislation, she declared.

"Producers will continue to give—as a sound business policy—what the motion picture public wants, whether it be carrots or caviar.

"As for the minority who really would like to see the enormous facilities of the motion picture industry turned to a higher purpose than that of merely entertaining the crowd, we must center our hope on the little picture theatre movement."

Mrs. Kahn had declared that if there is to be any censorship it should be under state regulation.

Health Commissioner Harris urged "more films with dramatic and human appeal," not catering to a "moron intelligence."

Dr. J. F. Montague, another speaker, said that vivisection no longer was necessary, due to medical motion pictures.

Mayor Appointee Would Head Board in Chicago

The ordinance introduced in Chicago would create a department of moving picture review as a separate branch of the municipal government. In charge would be a commissioner appointed by the mayor. The commissioner, in turn, would appoint a "reviewer in charge" and such other reviewers as the council would provide, their duties being designated by the commissioner.

Following vigorous protests against the plan by women's clubs a lively time is expected when hearings begin on the measure before the judiciary committee. The censor board under the present system is a part of the police department and all its personnel are civil service employes. Those protesting a change declare the theatres will become a political football.

Town Ain't Had No Shows for 233 Years And Seems Like It Don't Want None Now

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

MILTON, MASS., Jan. 31.—This town—it's called a village, though there are 14,000 inhabitants—was founded in 1695. That's quite awhile back. And it never has had a theatre or place of public amusement in all its lengthy history. It isn't going to have any now—that is, if the town council (board of selectmen) has anything to say about it.

The Markel Amusement Company recently completed a $75,000 motion picture theatre. It stands idle. The selectmen have decided that pictures may prove immoral and distracting to the citizens and have refused the theatre a license. Frederick A. Gaskins, deacon of the Congregational church, who is also treasurer of the Milton Savings bank, in support of the theatre has procured a rehearing. But at a public meeting called by the board, there were 26 votes in favor of allowing the theatre to open, and 30 votes to the contrary. So Gaskins' chances of success seem slim.

The clergy is opposed to the theatre, with one exception, Father Eugene B. Carney of the Catholic St. Agatha's church. He asserts neither he nor his parish has taken a stand on the issue.

Theatre Takes Over Radio Station; Broadcasts Bring in Patrons

Pastor Provides Equipment and Sunday Programs, Managing Director Does the Rest from Own Studio

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BUFFALO, Jan. 31.—Radio is bringing them into the Great Lakes theatre in Buffalo, according to Managing Director H. M. Addison, who has practically taken over a broadcasting station in his fight for recognition for the latest amusement place in that city.

THREE months ago, Addison and Rev. John Richelsen, minister of the Kenmore Presbyterian church in a suburb of Buffalo and president of the company operating Station WKEN, agreed that their needs were mutual and got together on a proposition whereby the minister provides the station and the Sunday program and the theatre man the most of the entertainment.

It is an ideal arrangement from present indications. Rev. Richelsen, at the formal opening of the studio in the Great Lakes Theatre building, made it plain that the sole object of the station was not to disseminate religious views, but to amuse and entertain.

Exhibitor Provides Studio

Addison furnished a studio in the theatre building, which is said to be one of the finest in the state. Land wires carry the

GREAT LAKES THEATRE STUDIO OF STATION WKEN, BUFFALO

The management of the Great Lakes Theatre hereby acknowledges the receipt of your comment on its program and sends you this card as a means of verification of reception. Thank you for your interest and appreciation. I hope that you will enjoy our programs broadcast every Monday and Thursday evenings from this studio and will be glad of your further comment or suggestions.

Managing Director.

entertainment from the studio to the station, which is in the outskirts of Kenmore, ten miles from the theatre.

Addison announces his own program broadcast each noon, Monday and Thursday evenings, and Monday and Thursday midnights. The programs are varied; the whole affair is made one of goodwill, and very little direct advertising enters into his announcements. Here is a typical program:

Monday evening the entertainment came mainly from the artists appearing on the week's vaudeville bill at the theatre—not from the stage, but from the studio, where each put on a specialty or two, different from that offered on the stage, as a sample of the entertainment in store when the listeners-in came to the theatre.

Vera Gordon, playing at the theatre, clowned at bit before the microphone with the announcer. Fay Gordon was there with her accompanist, Phil Phillips. She sang blue songs, and telephone calls forced her to take an encho. The Royal Balalaika Orchestra, at the theatre with Mme. Lila's dancing act, played, and one sang. A string ensemble provided an hour's program. The overture was broadcast from the theatre—a story of the current film attraction was read, and the Fox News reel described.

It's Interesting Night

On Thursday night, the big broadcasting night, 6:45 P. M. until 8 o'clock was given over to the "Children's Hour," directed by Aunt Kitty (Mrs. H. M. Addison). Sixty children participated, one from practically every public school. Their names, addresses, age and school were announced. This is making a great hit, listeners-in of younger years report, and making for a world of goodwill from the theatre goes of a few years hence. "Aunt Kitty's Cutie Cut-Up Club" is made up of young listeners-in, each of whom is initiated with a special rite the Thursday evening following his or her letter request to join.

Between 8 and 9 comes local talent. From 9 until 9:30 was "Opportunity Night," from 9:30 until 10, members of "The Blue Masquers," University of Buffalo dramatic society, put on the first playlet ever broadcast from a Buffalo station. At 10 o'clock began an hour of vocal and instrumental music by pupils of a school. After 11 the entire theatre orchestra was brought to the studio for an hour, under the direction of Ralph Schwarz. At 12, Carl Coleman, theatre organist, began a half hour recital. Coleman is also on the air daily at noon. This recital is widely advertised.

Makes for Goodwill

The whole project, according to Addison, is one of making and keeping goodwill. There is no way of checking, of course, what listeners-in come down to the theatre, plank down their four bits at the box office and walk into the theatre to see the show; but from letters coming into the studio from listeners-in, the programs have been found enjoyable.

Principal Theatres Chain Seeks Great Small City Circuit in Expansion Plan

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A great circuit of theatres in small towns that will eventually cover the entire country, is the object of a new policy of expansion decided on at a three-day session of the directors of Principal Theatres Corporation of America at Atlantic City, according to announcement last week by Sol Lesser, president of the corporation. Joseph Skirboll, until recently European representative of First National, has been appointed general manager. Plans for the immediate acquisition of six theatres have been approved, Lesser said.

Skirboll has left for Los Angeles, where he will organize his staff before starting on a trip that will take him all over the United States to conduct negotiations for additional theatres.

The board of directors has approved the issuance of 75,000 shares of stock, in addition to the 250,000 shares now outstanding, all of which has already been subscribed for by the present owners of the corporation. Besides Mr. Lesser, the directors who attended a meeting at Atlantic City included Colonel Fred Levy of Louisville, vice-president and Eastern manager; Harry Schwalbe of Philadelphia, secretary; Samuel Scattergood of Philadelphia, treasurer; Mike Rosenberg of Los Angeles; Charles Seegal of Philadelphia; and Nathan Burkan, the company's counsel.

"The Circus" Opens at Grauman's Chinese with One Ring Circus

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Friday evening marked another Grauman opening for which this showman has become justly famous. "The Circus" was the attraction and the Chinese theatre the show place. Sid Grauman had transferred the foyer of the theatre into a carnival grounds with striped awnings, booths and cages of "wild" animals and the curious crowd which always gather for these openings stood around from five o'clock in the afternoon until well past midnight. Megaphones announced each arrival and flashlights and motion picture cameras recorded their entrance.

As a prologue Grauman staged an elaborate one ring circus under a tent on the mammoth stage. Arthur Jay conducted the orchestra and opened with the overture "A trip to the side show." As acts for the old fashioned one ring circus Sid had the following: The Three Freehands; Samaroff and Sonia; Famous Cloudburst; Pepito the clown; Pallenger's bears; Ed and Jenny Rooney, and Poodles Hanneford. The prologue served to put the audience in the proper mood for Chaplin's picture. Fred Niblo acted as master of ceremonies and introduced Chaplin, Merna Kennedy, Harry Crocker, Allan Garcia and Henry Bergman, members of the cast of "The Circus."

That there are laughs aplenty in "The Circus" was demonstrated at Friday night's performance. The story of the little tramp who falls in love and wins success as a circus performer, and then leaves the circus when the little bareback rider marries the tightrope walker is humorous and pathetic.

Producer Partner Of Exhibitor, Says U's Veteran Chief

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Carl Laemmle, veteran chief of Universal, who is soon to celebrate the 22nd anniversary of his entry into the motion picture business, believes that future progress and prosperity in the industry depends upon the extent to which producers and exhibitors can view their problems and conduct their affairs more as partners than as antagonists.

"Many people, producers, distributors and exhibitors alike, seem to lose sight of the fundamental idea upon which our industry is built," said the Universal president. "This idea is that those who make pictures, those who market them and those who exhibit them are fundamentally partners. The public, not the theatre, is the ultimate consumer, and the producer and the distributor are just as much concerned with the public as the theatre man. The view-point of all concerned should be focused on the screen, rather than on each other."

American Films Selling Our Products to World, Hawley Tells Radio Fans

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—"American motion pictures are Americanizing the world—there is no doubt about that," declared Clifford B. Hawley, president of First National, in speaking over station WRNY last Wednesday night. And that formed the keynote of his speech, which was a part of the Home Science University series being conducted by this station.

"Foreign governments credit the motion picture for the remarkable increase in the sale of American goods abroad," he said. "And this is the reason for the frantic activity now being shown by foreign governments in an attempt to develop their own motion picture industry."

"In America the motion pictures are selling American goods, too. Several years ago you may have laughed at the way some producers in lavish scenes hid their telephones in fantastic covers. Now you can buy these in any department store."

Stage 10 Years Behind In Salesmanship, Says Critic

Picture Houses Give "Huge, Organized and Perfectly Served Competition," Declares Ashton Stevens

The stage must outdo itself "in order to live at all in the face of the huge, organized and perfectly served competition" of the deluxe motion picture theatre, Ashton Stevens, dramatic critic of the Chicago Herald-Examiner, declared recently in an article explaining why the Loop stage theatres "were not enjoying that measure of popularity which it was supposed would fill them to the brim after the mid-Winter holidays."

Picture Theatres Lead in Service

One reason for the ascendancy of the motion picture theatres found by Stevens was that the stage is "some ten years behind them in salesmanship and service," though he held that "the stage is still some years ahead of the movies in average intelligence."

In seeking the solution of the problem the critic went to the new United Artists theatre and the Chicago. He said he found the United Artists theatre a "brand-new picture palace of the golden sunburst school whose decorators had scorned gilt paint wherever goldleaf would serve as well."

"I need hardly say," Stevens went on, "that every comfortable seat was filled—and they are all comfortable. But this did not astonish one who had just been informed that for the seven performances given on the previous Saturday the takings had been $7,000."

"Fancy that for a house seating only 1,700 and whose prices are never higher than 75 cents, ranging down to 35 cents for the early morning show."

Going on to the Chicago theatre, the critic found that "there appeared to be at least 4,000 persons in the Chicago when I entered it about 10 p. m., and the theatre had been comfortably crowded since an hour before noon."

"I dare say," he added, "that in this one day the Chicago had housed sufficient people to pack the Selwyn or the Harris ('legit' theatres) for a week of nights and the Wednesday and Saturday matinees."

"I saw with my own eyes at the Chicago and at the United Artists enough people to have decently filled any half-dozen playhouses in the Loop."

"And with my own eyes I saw what prodigious value they receive for the small and untaxed price they pay."

Stevens went on to emphasize that these were only two of the deluxe theatres and then declared:

"They taught me as well as a dozen could have done why the stage has to be better than its photographs."

H. E. Jameyson Wins First Prize In Lloyd's "Speedy" Contest

Second Place Goes to C. Harrison of Palace, Cincinnati, and Third to Clark Munson, Virginia Theatre, Champaign, Ill.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—H. E. Jameyson, publicity representative of the Miller theatre at Wichita, is the winner of the first prize in the Harold Lloyd $1,000 contest to determine the best advertising and exploitation campaign for "Speedy." The year's contest opened December 1, 1927. The best features of the suggested campaigns will be incorporated in the pressbook.

NINETY per cent of the suggested campaigns showed considerable time and thought spent on the subject, according to the Harold Lloyd Corporation. One circuit owner is reported as having complained because the publicity representative lost interest in promoting the business of the theatres while concentrating on the contest.

The practical and inexpensive ideas were many and these of course figured most heavily in the awards.

The $1,000 in total awards was split up in 14 cash awards as follows: $200, first prize; $150, second; $100, third; $50 to each of the next best eleven campaigns. After the campaigns had been examined an extra award of $10 each was given the originators of the 20 campaigns adjudged rating honorable mention. The complete list of the winners and their awards follows:

Second, $150—C. Harrison, Palace theatre, Cincinnati.

Third, $100—Clark Munson, Virginia theatre, Champaign, Ill.

The next eleven, awarded $50 each, were:

Joe Mayer, Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio; Oscar Doob, Kunsy Theatres Corp., Detroit; H. F. Storin, Leroy theatre, Pawtucket, R. I.; M. A. Malaney, Loew's Theatres, Cleveland; Russell Moon, Paramount theatre, New York City; G. J. Meredith, Saenger Theatres, New Orleans; Harry E. Browne, New Stanford theatre, Palo Alto, Cal.; H. E. Schlichter, Liggett, Madison, Kan.; E. F. Nutter, American, Rowlesburg, W. Va.; Roy L. Smart, Rivoli, Greenville, S. C.; Verson Gray, Metropolitan, Boston.

Those winning honorable mention and $10 each were:

Henri Tussenbreek, Majestic, Hartford, Conn.; J. W. Creamer, Orpheum, Atchison, Kan.; Harold D. Barnes, Rialto, Burlington, Iowa; George F. Teckemeyer, State, E. Lansing, Mich.; Mariline K. Warner Studio Busy in Preparation for Start of Large Productions

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—All the heads of production at the Warner studio are busy in preparing for the starting of production that will begin sometime in the spring. Sets to be used by several units are now under construction and story conferences are being held on more than a dozen productions to be started by spring. One corps is occupied exclusively with the planning of Al Jolson's second starring film as yet untitled.

New York executives are said to be highly pleased with "Glorious Betsy," Dolores Costello's latest starring picture, prints of which have just reached New York. Arline De Haas has novelized

"Glorious Betsy" and "Tenderloin" and the novels will be published by Grosset and Dunlap.

WAKEENEY, Kan., Jan. 31.—C. B. Kelly, manager of the Garden theatre, was acquitted by a jury of the charge of violating the state law against Sunday labor when he operated his theatre on Sunday. Wakeeney has no ordinance against Sunday shows, so the State started the prosecution.

Law Ends Sunday Shows And Liken's Long Fight

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

VILLISCA, IA., Jan. 31.—A new ordinance, passed by the city council of Villisca, has ended, at least temporarily, the Sunday show war waged between the town fathers and Dr. F. J. Liken, owner of the motion picture theatre, for the past three months. The ordinance provides that Sunday shows are absolutely prohibited in Villisca.

After a campaign instituted by Dr. Liken, in retaliation for the attempted closing of his theatre, in which he arrested numerous prominent merchants for operating their businesses on Sunday, the council finally took action. This was not done, however, until Liken had obtained from Judge Earl Peters a permanent injunction against the city of Villisca and its officials, restraining them from interfering with the running of the house.

Believe It Or Not

Dispatches from Los Angeles say that Gloria Swanson has left Los Angeles on a trip to New York and without telling a soul of her trip. The reason for this hurried trip is said to be a business conference with Joseph Kennedy.

Joseph Schenck has arranged to release her pictures through United Artists, but there the responsibility ceases, which means there will be no financial backing from United Artists. It is said Joseph Kennedy and a group of New York bankers are furnishing the money to make the next Swanson production.

6 Go into Production; U Completes Paul Leni Film

First National Finishes Work on Billie Dove Picture; Fred Thomson Starts Shooting on "Sunset Legion" for Paramount; Nine Productions End Set Work

By DOUGLAS HODGES

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 31.—First National completed shooting on "The Heart of a Follies Girl" last week and Universal completed "The Man Who Laughs." Both are presumably big pictures and head a list of nine that were turned out during the past seven days in local studios.

Begins "Body Punch" and "Give and Take"

Universal replaced its completed opus by launching two other pictures into work, "Give and Take" and "The Body Punch." Other studios' new ones last week were few, the whole colony netting only four.

Paul Leni directed "The Man Who Laughs" with Mary Philbin in the leading feminine role. Of course Conrad Veidt is the actor in the title role. Miss Philbin is said to have done remarkable work under Leni's direction. More can be written next week on the subject subsequent to a preview showing for the press day after tomorrow.

George Sidney is one of the co-stars in "Give and Take" and the other is Jean Hersholt. Tall Bill Beaudine directing. I know little about the story but it is a comedy about a Jewish fellow, at least.

The other film begun by Universal is "The Body Punch" which stars Jack Dougherty and Virginia Browne Faire (no relation to Elinor).

To get back to the First National film just completed—Billie Dove did the star role. It's a story about New York, a beautiful girl and the Follies. They completed it in four weeks, a precedent for a Billie Dove picture.

F B O Finishes "Crooks"

Other productions soon on their way to you include "Crooks Can't Win," which was referred to in this column last week. Ralph Ince directed it but receives no screen credit. Screen credit for the picture goes to Charles Gillett who, incidentally, took no active part in the making of the picture. It is Ince's last picture for F B O.

Margaret Livingston is in the big role of a Columbia production just completed, "A Woman's Way." She is one of the few free lance featured players who are in constant demand and at the same time gets A-1 roles.

Belle Bennett in "Devil's Skipper"

Tiffany-Stahl completed two that have strong casts and more or less attractive titles. They are "Their Hour" in which John Harron and Dorothy Sebastian are featured; and "The Devil's Skipper" in which Montagu Love and Belle Bennett are the chief players.

Other of the nine aforementioned include "Golden Shackles," a state right film made by Dallas Fitzgerald and "The Black Butterfly" made by James W. Horne with Mae Busch. Duke Worne has finished "Out of the Night" with Corliss Palmer.

De Mille got one under way last week, "Walking Back," with Rupert Julian directing. Sue Carroll, the year's biggest discovery, is in the leading feminine role.

Fred Thomson went to work on "Sunset Legion," his next big Paramount release. Al Werker is listed with Lloyd Ingraham as director on the picture.

Belle Bennett also stars in "The Sporting Age," which Erle Kenton is directing for Columbia.

Le Baron Home, Orders Television Laboratories Erected at F B O Lot

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—William Le Baron arrived here two days ago with plans for the immediate establishment of a laboratory for television apparatus at the local studios. Two other laboratories are being fitted up, he said. One is at the studios of the Radio Corporation of America, New York, and one at the laboratories of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N. Y.

F-N Will Make Sequel To "The Lost World"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—A sequel to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Lost World" will be made by First National, is the announcement made by Watterson Rothacker.

The "Herald's" "Box Office Ticker" rated "Lost World" as second to "Ben Hur." "The Lost World" is also one of the films that have for three years in succession been among "the biggest money makers."

Mulhall Plays Vaudeville Magician

HOLLYWOOD—Jack Mulhall is playing a vaudeville magician, and Dorothy Mackaill his assistant in "Lady Be Good," which depicts the life of the two-a-day artists.

Selznick Becomes Schulberg Aid with Shift of Fineman

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Jesse L. Lasky's announcements at the Paramount lot last week brought Hollywood to attention and, incidentally, threw some of the studio employes into confusion. A long expected shakeup got under way.

B. P. Fineman, for the past eighteen months an executive assistant to B. P. Schulberg, leaves that position for another on the same lot February 1. He will assume supervision of a unit and "his former position will be abolished."

David O. Selznick has been signed to supervise and also to assist Schulberg. Albert Shelby Le Vino has been engaged in an executive capacity also and will write as well as supervise pictures.

E. Lloyd Sheldon, one of the editors-in-chief, will leave May 1 for Europe with a new contract calling for his services at the studio five months each year and allowing him the remainder of the year for "rest" and free lance writing.

Louis D. Lighton, B. F. Ziedman and J. G. Bachmann will continue their present duties as editors-in-chief on Schulberg's executive staff.

Wampas Start Plans for Annual Frolic; Feature Achievement Trophy Race

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Elaborate plans are being made for the annual Wampas Frolic to be held February 25. One of the features will be the 1928 Achievement Trophy donated by Don Lee. Thirteen contestants chosen from the Wampas Baby Star groups of 1925 and 1926 are entered in this unique race. They are: Mary Astor, Olive Borden, Mary Brian, Dolores Costello, Joan Crawford, Marceline Day, Dolores Del Rio, Janet Gaynor, Madeline Hurlock, Edna Marian, Sally O'Neil, Vera Reynolds, and Fay Wray. The winner of the 1928 Achievement Trophy will be determined by popular vote. This voting is being stimulated by daily radio broadcasting over KHJ in Los Angeles, and KFRC in San Francisco.

The present trophy is the fourth awarded to former Wampas starlets. Colleen Moore, Eleanor Boardman and Clara Bow are the winners of the previous cups.

In addition to announcing the winner of the trophy, the Wampas will present at their frolic the following 13 1928 candidates for future achievement trophies: Gwen Lee, Ruth Taylor, June Collyer, Dorothy Gullier, Molly O'Day, Sue Carol, Audrey Ferris, Sally Eilers, Flora Bramley, Alice Day, Lina Basquette, Ann Christy and Lupe Velez.

Fire Causes $40,000 Loss Before Firemen Save Warner Studio

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Fire starting from an unknown origin threatened the entire Warner Brothers Studio Wednesday night, January 25. Prompt and efficient action by the combined Los Angeles and Hollywood fire departments kept the blaze under control.

Within 50 feet of the flames stood the laboratory and cutting rooms housing the entire film of all the Warner productions. While hundreds looked on firemen battled valiantly in an effort to save this valuable property.

After a two hour fight the fire was curtailed after totally destroying a Chinese street set and the scene docks, used to store parts of sets. The total loss was estimated at approximately $40,000. Jack Warner is in Europe.

Paramount Files Suits Totaling Millions Against Bennett Laboratories, Inc.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Several millions of dollars in royalties are involved in a suit filed by Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation against Chester Bennett Laboratories, Inc., for alleged infringement of the patent rights on what is known as the Gaumont process for developing, toning and treating films and prints. This patent was transferred, it is said, by Gaumont to the Societe des Etablissements Gaumont in 1926 and later was transferred to the Paramount Corporation. Others are to be sued also, it is stated by Herbert A. Huebner, attorney for Paramount, for asserted violations of the patent rights involved in the present suit.

Finis Fox on New Script

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and
Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Finis Fox returned last week from Lake Arrowhead and began work on his next story for United Artists. It is "The Bear Tamer's Daughter" in which Dolores Del Rio will star. The original tale was written by Conrad Bercivici with a setting in the Carpathian mountains of Europe.

Lazarus Titles "Burning Daylight"

HOLLYWOOD—Sidney Lazarus has been assigned to write titles for "Burning Daylight," the Milton Sills' starring feature just completed for First National.

I N C O N F E R E N C E

By BOB EARLY

THESE are rumorous days in Cinemaland. One day it is reliably rumored that Louie Mayer is going to quit the concern adorned partially by his name to head Tiffany. The next day it is just as reliably reported that he is to head Columbia. Some days Irving Thalberg accompanies him; other days Harry Rapf. But generally he is alone. Then there is the perennial rumor that Sol Wurtzel has come to the end of his lengthy Fox employment. Every year Sol goes away for a vacation; and Dame Rumor springs the same old story. This time Sol is going to Europe. And when he comes back he'll most likely resume his job of telling the boys at Sunset and Western how rotten they are.

Universal rumors are so frequent nowadays that no one pays much attention to them. Uncle Carl has been "home" two months and thus far there hasn't been a change at Universal City except a rather important switch in night watchmen. No one doubts that a change was contemplated by President Laemmle because Uncle Carl came back feeling fine and normal; and all of the junkers had been very busy sowing the seeds of distrust and discord. How they keep on making good pictures at Universal City is one of the striking mysteries of a mysterious industry. Maybe it's just Laemmle luck. And then again, maybe it's because Universal's supervisors aren't taken seriously.

First National and Paramount also had their rumors. Ben Schulberg was to quit the helm of the latter's production plant and Watty Rothacker had his fill of First National after a six months' reign. But they're still on the job in their respective plants, as are General Manager Henigson at Universal and the chief executives of the various other plants.

Shut Down Not Likely

Universal keeps talking about a two months shut down owing to over-production, but those familiar with conditions at that studio seem to think that there will be no complete cessation of production activities there. The U would perhaps like to shut down for a while. Money isn't so easy as heretofore. Something like $2,000,000 is tied up in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" with little prospect of getting half that amount back and another million piasters will have been sunk in "The Man Who Laughs" before it gets to market. Nightly prayers are being said and candles burned for that one. It is now in 14 reels without an ending and Uncle Carl has to make up his mind within a week whether he wants a happy ending or an "artistic"—which means a tragic fadeout. Anyhow, those involved have their alibis prepared and the cyclone cellars built—prepared for any eventualities.

NEW "WONDER" DIRECTOR

Universal is giving another discovery a chance. His name is Paul Fejos, who sports a doctor's degree, boasts Hungarian birth and has an intriguing accent. The doctor recently made a picture on a shoe string, called "The Last Moment," which purports to show the thoughts of a drowning man. He was acclaimed by the local Fillum Menckens as a wonder. But so far his picture hasn't been disposed of.

Cleaning Up "Blondes"

The salvage corps at Paramount studio is trying to fix up "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" for foreign consumption. It is understood that our British cousins object strenuously to the sort of English nobleman portrayed by Mack Swain. He'll probably be a Swede in England, where all the English wise cracks by Dorothy will be withheld. Then our French allies wouldn't stand for "Robaire," so the comedy Frenchman will be a Yugoslav in France, or some other nationality that hasn't taken to squawking about how we belittle its citizenry on the screen.

"Pigs" Is Now "Pigs"

When the Fox company got ready to release its screen version of that charming Golden stage play "Pigs" last year, it was decided that no one would possibly be attracted into any theatre advertising it under its right name despite successful runs in

Gotham Pictures of 1928 to Cost Half Million Dollars Says Sax

Wampas Stars Guests at Annual Dinner—Six Hollywoodings Wed—Seymour, Harvard Man, Heads F B O Publicity Department

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—Sam Sax, president Gotham Productions, returned to Hollywood last week from New York with plans for a $500,000 production program. Several days were spent in conference with Carrol Sax, production manager, and Harold Shumate, production supervisor at Universal City where the Gotham Pictures are produced.

SEVEN features already are scheduled and work was commenced on the 1928 productions with the launching of "Turn Back the Hours," adapted from the stage melodrama by Edward J. Rose. Howard Bretherton, loaned from Warner Brothers, will direct, while Myrna Loy, also Warner Brothers star, will play the leading role opposite Walter Pidgeon. Sam Hardy, Ann Brody and Georgie Stone are also in the cast. Jack Jungmeyer wrote the scenario.

Mr. Sax announced that other productions on the 1928 schedule are: "The Chorus Kid" by Howard Rocky; "The Head of the Family" by George Randolph Chester; "The Man Higher Up" by Reginald Wright Kauffman; "United States Smith" by Gerald Beaumont; "Through the Breakers" by Owen Davis, and "Hell Ship Bronson" by Norton Parker, the latter to feature Mrs. Wallace Reid.

From his observations in the East Mr. Sax forecasts an unusually prosperous year for the independent producers, and states that he believes that clever stories with casts of high class players made at moderate cost, will take the place of elaborate productions costing in the hundreds of thousands.

Wampas Stars Guests of Wampas

The 1928 Wampas Baby Stars were the guests of the Wampas boys at their regular meeting Jan. 23. John Leroy Johnston, in charge of the entertainment program of the Frolic and Ball, and Sam W. B. Cohn, director of publicity for the event, were joint chairmen and requested the cooperation of the 13 baby stars to assist in selling boxes for the big event to be held at the Ambassador Auditorium, Feb. 25. Those who attended and danced with the members were: June Collyer, Sally Eilers, Ann Christy, Gwen Lee, Dorothy Gulliver, Sue Carol, Flora Bramley, Alice Day, Audrey Ferris and Lupe Velez. Music was furnished by the Hal Roach studios orchestra.

Tia Juana, Mexico, was chosen as the setting for two weddings of screen actresses last week. Madge Bellamy, Fox star, married Logan S. Metcalf, young Los Angeles broker. Ruth Stonehouse and Felix Hughes, a brother of Rupert Hughes, have returned to Hollywood after being wed in the Mexican city a week ago yesterday. Another former screen favorite to wed last week was Grace Darmond, whose new husband is R. P. Jennings, theatre magnate.

Seymour Heads F B O Publicity

James Seymour has been made head of F B O's publicity department, vice Earl Wingart, resigned. Mr. Seymour spent some time in the New York office of F B O learning the sales angles and has been studying all phases of production at the studios for the past five months.

Wedding bells will ring out Feb. 23 for Mary Astor, screen actress, and Kenneth Hawks, production supervisor on the Fox lot, according to formal announcements this week.

Big Hearted Director Gives Valet All Credit

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—F B O's picture "Crooks Can't Win," said to be an ace high picture with dramatic force and thread, went into the can today with screen credit to "Director Charles Gillett." Ralph Ince, who directed the picture, said he preferred, for reasons irrelevant to the picture itself, not to receive screen credit.

New York, Chicago, and all intermediate points. So they called it "The Midnight Kiss." The stage play has been running successfully of late in Hollywood, San Francisco and other Coast cities, and the picture has been reissued as "Pigs." Some day somebody will raise a monument to the guys who change the names of pictures with some of their reasons handed down to posterity in imperishable marble; this latter comment being inspired by the report that First National had changed the name of the Charley Murray comedy "It's All Greek to Me," because of the fear that this title might prove offensive to some prominent exhibitors who were born in Greece!

Charlot's Napoleon

He's got it all figured out, has Charlie Chaplin. He knows just how he'll play "Napoleon." He'll probably make a couple more money pictures first just to be sure that he'll have an umbrella for a rainy day. Then he'll make his version of Nap's life—if he doesn't lose his nerve meantime. Charlie has confided to friends that his choice for Josephine would be Florence Vidor, a selection that has the hearty endorsement of all Hollywood.

THE STUDIO PREVIEW

MARION DAVIES has obviously decided to go after this histrionic thing hard. She does work in "The Patsy" that proves all her previous roles worth the effort.

Peculiar too, but no one thought "The Patsy" would be worth a whoop as a motion picture production. The stage play was full of wise cracks and its business was unimportant.

YOU can thank King Vidor for his direction, and you can thank Marion Davies for trouping like nobody's business all through the picture. It was no trouble to lift enough of the lines from the play to provide titles. So although I have no idea who wrote the rest it doesn't matter.

The show is good. Funny because of acting and the timing.

When everybody in a cast performs so perfectly as they do in this one about the only conclusion is that the picture was made under the hand of a skilled director. Vidor has heretofore made it unmistakably certain that he can direct and with this one to his credit we'll swear by him. Heaven help a man though that has such a pace to keep.

Marie Dressler fitted the part so exactly that she had people clenching their fists. Jane Winton had little or no work to do and did it first rate. Orville Caldwell is a stage star who can smile all over the place and who is under suspicion in Hollywood as having a keen piece of mental apparatus.

The most impressive action in the show is that wherein Miss Davies impersonates film stars in an effort to invent within herself an attractive personality. With the discovery that her young man has a flare for stars she disguises her face and figure as Mae Murray. It is exact. She changes to the cape and hood of Lillian Gish. She goes into a Pola Negri, knife between her teeth and mouth distorted.

It is one of the best of the M-G-M's I've seen and I've seen many good ones recently. —HODGES.

THE SHORT FEATURE

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald is the Moving Picture World department, "Little Pictures with the Big Punch," which has presented news, reviews and exploitation on short features and serials.

What the Short Feature Did for Me

EDUCATIONAL

DEAD EASY: A fair comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MEET THE FOLKS: A good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MOVE ALONG: Lloyd Hamilton—This seemed to please as well as most of the comedies from this star. However, I cannot see that he is worth any more than the rest, however, they tack on an extra charge for his stuff. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

F B O

BILL GRIMM'S PROGRESS: Cooke-Guard—All these Bill Grimm comedies have pleased. Sorry I am almost through with them.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

CHARLIE BOWERS COMEDIES: Rotten, rotten, all of them that I have played.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

FIGHTING HEARTS: Alberta Vaughn—Very good series. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

THE BATTLE OF THE CENTURY: Laurel-Hardy—Plenty good. This pair are making some real laugh getters. "Putting Pants on Philip" was another dandy by the same two comedians. Two reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

SHORT TAIL: Rotten. People walked out and hollered for a comedy.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

PATHE

ALL NIGHT LONG: Harry Langdon—Good. Caused lots of mirth.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

ALONG CAME AUNTIE: Glen Tyron—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

TIFFANY

FISHERMAN'S LUCK: This one just an ordinary scenic in Technicolor. Not up to the standard of these serials. One reel.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

MEMORIES: This beautiful little subject properly cued with music to fit the picture will cause more comment and please more people than any short subject you can buy. One reel.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BUSTER BROWN COMEDIES: These are pretty good, but the dog does all the heavy work. Two reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Market in Texas Called Erratic; Long Feature Declared Too Long

All Program Pictures Will Fall Back Within Six Reels in Year, Says Booker—Novelties With Special Music Popular

[What the exhibitors are doing for short features in the South, particularly in Texas, is reviewed in the following article.]

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 31.—Short features, excluding the newsreel and cartoon, are in an enigmatic state in Texas at the present time. There is no stabilized field, and the condition of the market for this type of film product is extremely erratic, a survey of the trade, including managers and exchange men, shows.

Calls Long Features Too Long

J. W. McClintock, booker for the Southern Texas Paramount Exchange, located at San Antonio, says that his quota on the newsreel, cartoon and two reel comedy is always well over, but that novelties and scenics are not getting the play that they should. McClintock believes that the long footage on present day long features causes hesitation in booking short product, and thinks that within the next year all program pictures will fall back to six reels, with specials rarely going over eight, hence opening wider the field for short features to every exhibitor.

As the situation now stands, the manager of the deluxe house is confronted with the problem of a long feature, a 45-minute stage show or prologue, an organ number, an overture—which sometimes is played in conjunction with a scenic—a news reel, and sometimes a cartoon.

His show is considered short if he gets out under two hours and ten minutes, and any extra film which he runs on the deluxe program naturally runs up his operating costs, and lengthens the show to such an extent that it becomes monotonous to the audiences. He usually books four or five reels of short product for the off hours, at noon and dinner shows, and limits the showing of these reels to the two shows. In advertising them, he must be careful to specify the hours of exhibition, or he will lose the confidence of his deluxe show patrons.

A week's bookings of short product for Texas houses almost invariably include a two-reel comedy, a two-reel episode of a serial, a couple of novelties—and a travelogue or educational subject. Scenics are saved for overture presentations, many houses in Texas using the unusually beautiful ones without titles or subtitles, and building wonderful musical scores around them.

Scenics too often are not appreciated in the South, as the majority of an audience is too nonchalant as to the real art in direction and photography, and wants a specified form of entertainment in the short feature field. Pictures most beautifully acted and causing worlds of comment where played, fail to "hit the spot" with the masses in Texas, it seems.

E. J. Bresendine, manager of the Empire,

San Antonio, is of the opinion that short product, other than comedies, news and cartoons, will always remain in the "unessential" field until the price is lowered. He says that the average independent theatre manager cannot afford to pay the price in addition to the rental of long feature, news and cartoon.

Advertising of the short product in the South is not all that it should be, and that is an outcome of the fact that it is not yet classed by managers—generally—as box office attraction. It is true that the newsreel has jumped to the fore in the last year as a box office medium, and that lobbies, ads, mats and trailers are used in exploiting them, together with certain popular comedies, but there is no recognized space in ads for other short subjects.

Scenics with Music Popular

One manager in Texas, Bob Blair of the Texas theatre at San Antonio, believes firmly in the advertising of scenics and novelties when run in conjunction with special musical scores. This form of entertainment has proved to be very popular at the Texas, and was inaugurated at the instigation of John Friedl, district manager, as a trial. Other Publix theatres in the state are starting advertising the combined short and overture, and papers in the various towns are complimentary on the results obtained.

But, as McClintock believes, until the length of long features and stage shows is cut, the short feature will remain in an uncertain position, and will not gain the recognition among theatre patrons that it should. Here's to shorter features and more featuring of shorts!

Short Features Must Have Box Office Pull, Says Doane in Talk

Says Presentation Policy Offers Serious Problem to Short Feature Producers, But Exhibitors Will Show Comedies If They Possess Box Office Value

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

CULVER CITY, Jan. 31.—Warren Doane, general manager and vice-president of the Hal Roach studios, at a luncheon given at the studio last week, asked the cooperation of the trade papers to promote short features and bring them more prominently to the attention of the general public. He praised the astute exhibitors who advertise their two reel subjects and suggested a campaign to get all theatremen to give them due consideration and wherever possible give them equal billing with the feature picture of five or six reels.

In his speech Doane said: "It has by now been thoroughly demonstrated that no operator of theatres can be influenced by the general argument that he ought to have a two-reel comedy in his show. That argument has been used by the comedy producers, by the trade papers editorially, and by the distributors with practically negligible results, and in my opinion, properly so, because as an argument it is no argument.

Theatres Similar to All Business

"We must realize that the theatre is being operated for the same reason that any other business is operated, which is to make money for its owner rather than to make money for the producers of two-reel comedies. I am firmly of the opinion that a motion picture, no matter how short nor how long, which cannot convince exhibitors that it has ability to bring people to the box office, has no place in the first-run theatre, and its importance in subsequent runs must be very slight, indeed.

Industry Must Make Good Product

"Therefore, in my opinion, the solution of the problem is for comedy producers to furnish the industry with product that has box office drawing power. Through a number of circumstances the attention of the industry has been directed to subjects of feature length and very little attention given to short subjects, so that in the recent past the majority of short subjects produced have merited no greater prominence than they have received."

Not Worth Tinker's Dam Without Short 'Shorts', Says Pete

"A program without a good assortment of shorts isn't worth a tinker's dam, regardless of how good the feature happens to be," says Elmer F. Holmberg of the Pioneer theatre at Amasa, Mich.

Holmberg is known to everyone within spare-tire distance of Amasa as Pioneer Pete. You've heard of him before in this department as an exponent of short features. And Pioneer Pete radiates so much optimism that we can always tell when a letter from him has arrived by the fact that even the envelope is warm.

He goes on: "Any number of times I have asked our patrons the day after we showed a particularly good feature how they liked the show and invariably the compliments were flattering about the SHORT FEATURES (the capital letters are Pioneer's own). All of which goes to prove that the average fan has a gluttonous appetite for education when said education is offered to him in an interesting, easy-to-understand manner.

"I would hate to tell you what 'shorts' would do to me if I didn't use them. The only trouble now is that there are so many short features on the market that there isn't enough playdates to go around and absorb them."

Holmberg's note shows two things; unbounded faith in the value of short features to the program, and keen judgment in selection of them.

12 Christie Films Headline Contest in Publix Houses

Twelve Christie comedies are playing—or will play—in Publix theatres during the Paramount-Christie contest period, which opened January 16 and will close March 17, assuming that first-run playdates in the larger cities are made a month ahead of exhibition. And this product, Paramount says, is the cream of the Christie output for the season.

First of this product was Bobby Vernon's "Splash Yourself," released December 3. Next was a Billy Dooley burlesque on flagpole sitting, and next a horserear story of Jack Duffy, released December 24. A week later came Jimmy Adams' "Swiss Movements," then "Save the Pieces," followed by Dooley's "Water Bugs," Adams' "Holy Mackerel," "Just the Type," Vernon's "Sweeties" and Duffy's "Long Hose."

Coolidge Appears In Fox Movietone Reel of Cuba Trip

A sight and sound reproduction of the visit of President Coolidge to Havana was given New York audiences when the Fox Movietone Newsreel was included in the Weekly Magazine at the Roxy theatre.

Fox Movietone recorded the President's arrival in Cuba, the navy salutes in the harbor and the addresses at the Pan-American Conference.

Columbia Selling New Shorts in Middle West

Columbia is distributing in the Minneapolis, Omaha and Des Moines territories a program of short subjects, 48 two-reel comedies, a ten-chapter serial, and a number of single-reel novelties. These short subjects are supplementary to Screen Snapshots, which has been in existence for over eight years and is distributed nationally.

The list includes 12 two-reel Charlie Chaplin special revivals; six Winnie Winkle two-reel comedies; six Hairbreath Harry, Izzy and Lizzie, and Snub Pollard comedies; three series of eight two-reelers in Barnyard Animals, Lucky Strike, Novelty Brand, and Aubrey Group. The one-reelers are slapstick comedies bearing the brand name of Cracker-jacks.

Al Short Creates New Stage Policy

Music Men Seek Fair Treatment

More Co-operation Should Be Given to Music Publishers by Returning Free Slides

After receiving numerous complaints from music publishers and organists relative to songs slides we took it upon ourselves to conduct an investigation and after many weeks of careful work and surveying we find that the lack of co-operation by both parties is entirely responsible for the present situation on the slide question.

It is customary for a music publisher to circularize organists and musical directors immediately after the release of a new song. In this announcement they often mention that orchestrations and illustrated slides are also ready and upon request will be mailed to those intending to use that particular song.

As a rule publishers can easily furnish theatres in a key city with this accommodation free of any cost, especially if the organist or the orchestra in that particular town can popularize the song, for after all a demand must be created for any publisher's song before sales can be made in the music stores.

Publishers Undergo Big Expense

However, very few organists as well as other musicians in theatres of towns with a population under twenty-five thousand realize that it is a total loss, letting alone the expensive part that the music publisher goes through, when they furnish free sets of slides and orchestrations to them.

The sad part of this whole story is that regardless how punctual a publisher may be in supplying slides and musical scores, they are sometimes put on the shelf and never even played. It has been experienced by the various publishers that regardless of how prompt they are in handling requests for slide sets, whenever they are furnished free that that is usually the end of the set.

Probably five out of ten organists co-operate with the publishers and return each set received, after they have used it for a solo. The other five either forget to send them back or loose and even brake one or two slides which makes the set incomplete for the next one to use.

Club Idea Works Better

It has also been experienced that whenever a price was charged for the renting for these slides, that as a rule organists were more careful in the handling of slides and usually returned each set complete as they were originally supplied to them.

One of the chief reasons why music publishers now conduct orchestra clubs and also charge for the renting of slides is this very fact that experience

'Way Back When—

'Way Back When, may be the name of a new song, but it also reminds one of the days when SAM HERMAN (now well known in Chicago as a novelty contest man) was an "actor"—yep! By golly he were at that—Take a good slant at this tin-type taken about 15 years ago—To be exact it was taken on February 10, 1913, in Atlanta, Ga.—The two end-men in the picture are Mr. Warner and Mr. Morrow, managers of the theatre—Sam can be seen in the center—Time has changed a lot since then—but Sam is still "that refined character entertainer" in his new field.

Al Belasco Celebrates 500th Performance

Al Belasco, featured band leader for Lubliner and Trinz now rotating with their bandshows at the Senate and Harding theatres, Chicago, will celebrate his 500th performance at the Senate theatre next week. The production staff have surrounded Belasco with an unusual stageshow and cast of presentation artists to commemorate this occasion.

Ruth Taylor Tries Presentation

Ruth Taylor, the Wampas-Star, who was selected to play the role of "Loreli Lee" in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," made personal appearances at the Oriental theatre, Chicago, on January 30. This young star appeared on the same program with Paul Ash, who is featuring this week a local atmosphere stageshow with a cast headed by Ginger Rogers, the Darling Twins and many others.

New Type of Shows Staged at Capitol

The Entire Presentation Runs in Musical Comedy Form with Pit Orchestra and No Announcing

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

Although the show business has coined the old saying that there is nothing new under the sun it has taken Al Short to change this saying when he presented to Chicago a new wrinkle in the way of stage presentation at the Capitol theatre. Only a few weeks ago we mentioned in this department that the long looked for plots, in stage bandshows are to be given by Paul Ash at Oriental theatre, Chicago. No sooner was this statement printed when we learned by a visit to the Capitol theatre that the new creation staged by Short for his return opening at the above house was something entirely different than any other deluxe picture house ever offered here or elsewhere. When we say different we mean that the stage entertainment is presented in a different manner than the deluxe picture house offered it heretofore.

As stated in these columns before, stage bandshows are due for a great many changes. If they are to last on the present basis the only redeeming point is the injection of plots into the show, otherwise variety is necessary in order to keep the policy popular into the deluxe picture houses. By stating that stage bandshows are to undergo severe changes we do not necessarily mean that they will pass out of the picture entirely.

This is not to be expected for a number of years, if it is ever to happen, and that is a problem we are not enough versed on at this time to discuss. However, the important feature of the matter is that since this policy became a popular fad, nearly every picture house in the community has been offering a similar type of entertainment, thereby establishing a one-type attraction in that locality which after several months of sameness has lost all its flavor as a novelty.

In order for the policy to be a permanent institu-

APPRECIATION!

I want to take this means of thanking my ORGANIST FRIENDS for the kind assistance they are giving me on our present and new catalog.

Thanks, HENRY MURTAGH, for saying "I TOLD THEM ALL ABOUT YOU" is a great song and "Good Luck" Henry in the new position. I think it's just "Capitol."

Thanks, JIM THOMAS for putting on "The Dog" and featuring "KEEP SWEEPING THE COBWEBS OFF THE MOON."

Thanks, JOE JORDAN for your nice work, "AUF WIEDERSEHN" (We'll meet again).

Thanks, FRED KINSLEY for promising to feature "SING SONG SYCAMORE TREE."

Thanks, MARSH McCURDY for coming to "Broadway" where you are now "one of us."

Thanks, BERNARD COWHAM for saying you will make "YOU'VE GOTTA BE GOOD TO ME" a HIT in Milwaukee.

AND

Thanks MR. & MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD for the "Romance" you put in "BLUE RIVER." It is a "masterpiece."

Thanks to all of my other ORGANIST FRIENDS — In time you'll hear from me personally through this column.

Chicago Oriental Seeks New Talent

Balaban and Katz have inaugurated a professional try-out night which takes place at their Oriental theatre, Chicago, every Tuesday after the last performance, in which the sole purpose is for the discovery of talent. The try-out is in no form for amateurs, nor is it conducted with any embarrassing tricks.

The entire affair is under the personal supervision of Paul Ash, with Sam Herman acting as the official scout, who discovers artists during the week and arranges the hearings before the production and booking executives of Balaban and Katz. The affair is conducted like any regular performance, with all the facilities, stage lighting and equipment and the audience consists only of those concerned in the booking problems of the firm.

The first series of these auditions took place last week in which Paul Ash stated he discovered some very good talent and Max Turner in charge of the William Morris office, in Chicago, claimed that new faces will now be able to be shown in all Balaban and Katz houses.

tion that shall always hold interest as a novelty, it must be separated and classed into a section of its own and the only way that it can retain this standing is for the theatres close by any other house doing a similar policy should give their audience something entirely different than the sort of entertainment offered by their competitors.

Too Many Bandshows

In Chicago the bandshow situation has reached the point where no matter which way you turn you are bound to see a similar class of entertainment and unless something unusual, or someone of reknown is appearing at these neighborhood houses no particular choice can be exercised in the selection of an evening's pleasure.

This of course has endangered a number of the deluxe picture houses because too much of this same type of entertainment is driving people away from their theatres into some other sort of recreation that may not be as expensive and yet as interesting.

Ascher Brothers had a similar idea about a year ago when they opened their new Sheridan theatre in Chicago with condensed versions of musical successes and a symphony orchestra in the pit.

Short Adds New Wrinkle

However, Al Short has gone them one better by surrounding himself with a bunch of clever musicians in the pit that cannot only play symphony music but also the popular trend and the entire musical accompaniment for the stage presentation is played from the pit.

The stage portion takes place in the form of a musical show, beautiful in costumes and lavish in drapery, with no particular announcing as to "who's who and what's what." No one in particular is featured or starred in the presentation, but the show as a whole runs off in great style, smooth and perfect and just as entertaining as any other form ever attempted. On another page of this department has proven that a free service does not always receive the best co-operation.

If the theatres as well as these individuals who wire for sets and slides or anything in the music line from publishers would only take a more reasonable attitude towards the situation there would be less trouble in securing the proper material at the proper time and a better feeling would exist between organists and publishers.

Just take in consideration that there are thousands of dollars spent each year by the publishers in printing orchestrations, score sheets and other special material such as slides which in addition to popularizing the song really helps put the individual player over professionally whether it be on his own merits or the song. A helpful hint to bear in mind is the simple thought that to co-operate with the music publishers means they will co-operate with you.

we publish in detail a report of the stage presentation.

Whether or not this form will continue to be offered by the operators of this theatre is not known at this time. However, it is our belief that if they do so, it will be a great thing for picture houses, for after all this sort of entertainment is the only real genuine deluxe picture house presentation that allows the photoplay to have a prominent spot on the bill and after all motion picture theatres should never lose sight of the fact that their film plays as big a part in their theatre as the stage portion and orchestra does.

May Replace Old Form

Al Short just returned from Atlanta, Ga., where he spent more than 6 months creating shows for Publix as well as directing their orchestra and in addition to being one of the most popular musical directors in the country is noted as a musician and production adviser that is very capable in handling the future destinies of this theatre as he did originally two years ago when he opened the theatre for Cooney Brothers.

Now that Paul Ash is going to start bandshows with a story and inasmuch as Fanchon and Marco have always staged their units with an idea, it is reasonable to assume that the new and novel way that Al Short has introduced the present form of presentation to Chicago, that it will be only a matter of a short time when this sort of entertainment will replace the old form of cut and dried bandshows.

What More Could an Ex-Saxophonist Ask For?

ARTHUR RICHTER
SOLO ORGANIST
WISCONSIN theatre, MILWAUKEE

Hello folks! Lend me your ears for I have plenty of news for you. . . . First of all don't forget that February 12 is Lincoln's birthday. . . . on the 14th everybody's birthday. . . . and you can get bye easy with just a Valentine. . . . And last, but not the least Washington's birthday on the 22nd. . . . Let's all pay honor to the daddy of our country by paying up our old bills. . . . Don't get hurt in the rush, fellows! . . . Well, here goes the big news—Jesse Crawford is back at the Paramount, Milton Charles is now at the Chicago, and Henri A. Keates is back at the Oriental theatre, also of Chicago. . . . While we are on the subject of organists, let us say a word about Henry B. Murtagh, he's now soloing at the Capitol theatre, New York. . . . I'll bet Broadway is glad to have him back. . . . It should. . . . While speaking of New York I just received word from Lew White, chief organist at the Roxy, that he has opened a school for organists. . . . Word also comes from Fritz and Jean Hubert that they will appear at the Paramount in two weeks. . . . I understand that Stuart Barrie, organist at the Ambassador theatre, St. Louis, has had his hands and feet insured for $150,000. . . . that is a matter of "ten little fingers and ten little toes". . . . By the way, more scandal seems to be flowing in from organists, so while our pencil still has a point and the writer has the mood still, let us go on with the news. . . . Tom Terry has perfected a miniature organ console that can be attached to any size organ. . . . The Orpheum Circuit is putting in new organs into their theatre. . . . Recently they gave Hazel Hirsch of the State-Lake, Chicago, and Wolfram Schaeffer, of the Grand Opera House, St. Louis, new concert organs. . . . Holy Smokes! looks like I should have given this column the title of "Organists." . . . Leo Terry of the Rialto, Joliet, called in to say hello—and so have Dr. G. W. Ronfort, Ted Campbell, Cornelius Maffie and other pedal pushers. . . . Those who visited our beautiful city last week were Bernard Cowham, Arthur Richter, Jack Martin and F. Donald Miller. . . . This week two popular band leaders in Chicago are celebrating their 500th performance at their respective theatres—they are Al Belasco and Charles Kaley. . . . While talking about band leaders let's give Joie Lichter a break Joie is now doing stage bandshows at the Central Park theatre, Chicago. . . . Ray Teal has taken Al Short's place at the Howard theatre in Atlanta. . . . Al is now back at the Capitol, Chicago. . . . Word comes from New York that Joseph Whalen, general manager for Al Piantadosi, the song-writer, general fisher, will pay Chicago and towns west a visit shortly. . . . Lou Kosloff is featuring Ruth Etting's new song called "When You're With Somebody Else"—Tom Wilson sang it last week at the Paramount, New York. . . . The North Center theatre, formerly a Chicago Lubliner and Trinz house, reopened this week under new management. . . . Dorothy Aldrich and girls are furnishing the band music. . . . While speaking of theatres, the Regal, a new L. & T. house opens next Saturday in Chicago—it's a deluxe house for colored folks. Fess Williams will lead the band. . . . L. A. Major is the featured organist at the new Chelton theatre, that recently opened in Chicago. . . . Martin Pffuge has been made chief organist of the new National theatre in Milwaukee. . . . Alvin Evans, formerly of Texas, is presiding at the organ in the new Gensia theatre of Waukegan. . . . Florence Bergfors is the capable assistant of Bill Bennett, featured organist at the Belpark theatre, Chicago. . . . If you want to meet anyone from the organ field when in Chicago, drop in to see Ransley, the slide man—there I met more organists than I thought were working. Harry Linder of Leo Feist was there last week ordering new slides for one of his new solos. . . . Billy Mills, formerly with Mark Fisher as band arranger, is now in a similar capacity with Al Short. . . . K. K. Hanson is the new secretary at the Oriental theatre, Chicago—he's the guy the publishers have to see first before they can see Paul Ash. . . . Arthur Nealey, for several months with Brook Johns in St. Louis, has been made master of ceremonies.

STAGE SHOWS

San Francisco Warfield Week Ending January 27

The Warfield stage show this week was without name, with one of the principal features the dancing numbers of Gae Foster's Sweet Sixteen Girls. Gae Foster is the new stage directress at the Warfield and aide to Fanchon and Marco.

The act opened with a street scene depicting the block in which the theatre is located, with ten girls and leader offering a novelty song and dance in fancy colored costumes. Then the curtain went up disclosing the orchestra dressed in black and white striped coats, black trousers and black caps.

Rube Wolf, leader and master of ceremonies, said he wished to display the versatility of his boys and offered Tobani's "Echoes of the Metropolitan," an operatic phantasy in which he played a trumpet solo.

Mickey, the singing newsboy, now a caddie at Lincoln Park, sang "Did You Really Mean It Dear?" and made good. He was followed by Maxine Doyle, singing "Let's Kiss and Make Up," and who had some pleasing comedy business with a member of the orchestra and with Rube.

Two Fashion Plate Entertainers, McCreedy and Jeffries, a small man and a large woman, added more comedy, with music and patter.

Twelve girls offered an interesting study in black and white, one side of their costumes being black and the other white. Novel effects were produced when they turned in dance and drill. The Cheer Leaders, a college quartette, offered Irving Berlin's "The Song Is Ended," which was well received.

The shimmering red back curtain went up on an Egyptian Temple scene and the collegiate youths and girls dressed as Greek youths went through pretty steps and poses, while a young lady sang "Just a Song at Twilight," with harp accompaniment. The act came to an end with the orchestra and Rube Wolf playing "The Song Is Ended."

Des Moines Capitol

Week Ending January 27

Elaborate stage settings, snappy music and plenty of pep in the way of the cast, made "Moonlit Waters," a Publix offering, more than welcome at the Capitol during the week. Venice, with its romantic charm, was enlisted when the scenery was produced and the atmosphere of southern Italy gave a distinct glamour to the show.

Paul Spor, master of ceremonies, with the orchestra, presented popular numbers as tasty bait for what came after. The dancers were arrayed in colorful costumes and did fancy stepping to fascinating melodies.

Rosa Murphy, fast stepping little toe dancer, deserved the big hand she drew at every performance. Mario and Lazarin, strolling troubadors, added much with their songs. They presented a popular comedy potpourri of grand opera numbers that brought them back repeatedly for more.

The Janson Sisters, novelty dancers and the Dean Brothers, with their clever acrobatic dancing and the tap stepping, made splendid entertainment. Plenty of fun of a different type was presented by the two rural Reubens, Fauntleroy and Van, who made music of a sort on broom sticks, saws and sundry other tools and implements. They produced rare enjoyment and were recalled frequently.

Herbert Koch played a medley of well-known songs on the organ and gave the audiences all the chances they wanted to sing. And how that boy can make them warble!

"The Divine Woman" was the feature and there was the usual Paramount News reel.

Chicago Norshore

Week Ending January 28

This weeks stage show led by Al Kvale and his Collegians was called "Varieties of 1928" and had a versatile cast of players.

The show opened in a simple but neat scene with a large golden sunset over the bridge set.

Al and his boys play "Yankee Doodle Dandy" to which the Gould Dancers in cute red white and blue costumes sang and danced to the tunc of "Over There," ala George M. Cohan.

Walter Donaldson's latest "My Ohio Home" was next played by the band, with second chorus played by Al on his clarinet while Andy Goes, the new banjoist sang it.

Broughton and Bensingor of the Gould Ballet next offered a smart specialty that won a good hand.

Al then starts to make an announcement when a man enters and interrupts with a comedy speech. Paul Small then enters to a fine reception and sings "Rain" and Al Jolson's "Back in Your Own Backyard," which earned two encores and also sang "Kiss and Make Up."

John and Mabley followed in "Dances of Thirty Years Ago." The bridge curtain rose to a little country depot with two old timers looking at the time table—then they enter the stage and sing and dance old tunes and dances.

The orchestra next played a fine arrangement of "Among My Souvenirs" which Al Kvale, Paul Small and Andy Goes do a trio in novel style. The band syncopated the second chorus and was compelled to repeat from the trio.

Prosper and Maret from "Artists and Models" offer some of the best acrobatic work ever offered in a picture house.

Andy Goes then sang "Blame It On the Waltz" as the boys do their stuff. They played so well that they won an encore and a big hand.

Bill Adams next offers comedy singing and dancing later introducing his cousin Milly a novice on the stage. They get many laughs and a fine reception.

Three Gould Girls were next doing the "Charleston." Three more followed and did the "Black Bottom" and then two more gave the latest "Sugarfoot Stomp." The entire eight do a jazz routine as large whirling jeweled ball is lowered as Haines at organ and band play a hot tune for the finale.

Chicago Metropolitan

Week Ending January 29

Jimmy Bell, leader and master of ceremonies for Jones Metropolitan Orchestra here opened the stage portion of the show with an overture, in the pit, of "Diane" played by request with Billy Franklyn offering a vocal chorus. Howard Elmore and his Shadow next offered a buck and wing routine in which both he and the little fellow offered some specialty steps that were highly received.

The Finale was joined in by the two dancers with Billy Franklyn, George Thigpen and Billy Page forming a trio, sang a harmony arrangement of "Is She My Girl Friend" to the band's offering of same.

Kenneth Anderson the featured organist here in addition to his photonlay accompaniment, joined in at the finish with strains on the organ of the same tune.

Indianapolis Indiana

Week Ending January 27

Mae Murray this week is drawing huge crowds and has demonstrated that she is virtually the entire show, else why the unusual demand for ducats? This appearance is not of the "personal appearance" variety of the average film star. She is cast in the stellar role of the Publix "Merry Widow Revue," and justifies her presence by the fine execution of two dance numbers.

With her partner, Harry Losee, she dances first the Merry Widow waltz, a dance which had an important place in one of her most successful pictures. Following this, at the finale of the revue, is another dance, a swift, spirited number performed to music with a halting jerky rhythm. The time spent in pictures seems to have caused the star to lose none of her dancing technique.

The Merry Widow Revue is the most beautifully mounted Publix show yet seen here. The scenic effects and lighting are gorgeous. The costuming is elegant.

Joseph Griffin, tenor and Virginia Johnson, soprano, are heard in a number of enjoyable selections, and Born and Lawrence contribute the comedy element with grotesque dances and characterizations.

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending January 27

Ray Teal brought the West to the Howard this week in an enjoyable Publix unit, "Way Out West," which drew good hands. Western settings, including the cowboy suits, a drop curtain suggesting Indian activities and a general cowboy land atmosphere put over the motif in fine order.

Jack Powell, trap drummer, was well liked and received two encores.

Holly Hall, an attractive young blues singer, proved to be the hit of the show. She had previously appeared at the Howard a few months ago and was loudly acclaimed.

Lang and Voelk, harmonizers, went over with flying colors, as did also Mooney and Churchill, dancers, Hilda Ramon gave several Indian selections, being especially favored in the finale entitled "Moon Deer."

A chorus of eight girls, The Howard Girls, put on some good numbers, first as cowboys and later in the Indian outfit. They were well trained.

NOTE: A. RAYMOND GALLO, Presentation Editor of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD says: "That Al Short's return has given Chicago a new presentation wrinkle, and to the Capitol theatre, the biggest crowd that that house ever held."

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Just finished a tour of Loew picture houses, please call attention of Gallo to this. Regards.—Billy Randall, New York City.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Please send some one to see us when we play the Paramount theatre here in N. Y. C., which will be in three weeks. We were booked in there last week with the "Havana" Unit, but I broke my ankle in New Haven opening day in second show and am on the sick list, so when we reach the Paramount theatre we will be very glad to straighten this matter.

Will you send us a copy of your magazine with our ad in it. Kindest regards.—Fritz & Jean Hubert, Touring Publix Circuit.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I have just been talking with Mr. Beescroft, your New York business manager, and he is sending you a story I gave him on the White Institute of Organ. Thinking you may be interested I am also sending you a catalogue which will provide you with additional information. Lew White has a great school here and has spared neither expense nor pains to make it so, and nearly as I can see it is going to be a great boon to organists and exhibitors alike. Any comment which you may be able to make regarding it, both Mr. White and myself will greatly appreciate. Very truly yours.—Hubbell Robinson, Jr., White Institute of Organ, New York City.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Wish to report the following for your Organ Solos column:

I used as an organ specialty preceding the film "Two Arabian Knights" the special version called "The Tale of One Arabian Night," which introduces the new song hit, "The Beggar" and also weaves in Friml's "Allah's Holiday" and "That Night in Araby." The solo was a straight one and the atmosphere of the music fitted in nicely with the film showing. Yours sincerely—Clark Feirs, West Side theatre, Scranton, Pa.

Lew White Opens Organ School

Word was received this week that Lew White, chief organist of the Roxy theatre, New York, has organized and founded the White Institute of Organ. This new development is a solution to the problem that has long confronted exhibitors and organists all over the country. By the establishing of this institute, exhibitors will now be able to secure organists who specialize in keeping up the high standard of motion picture music.

The new project is surrounded by a staff of instructors who are experts of the highest caliber, and will carry on the important work with Lew White personally supervising the activities.

One of the main reasons for the establishing of this enterprise is to show students of the organ the value and the form to properly manipulate the organ in dramatizing motion picture music of any type. In addition to serving the field as a school of training in the proper method of organ playing, the institute will also serve as a placement and service bureau for the motion picture theatre manager seeking organists.

The new studio is located at 1680 Broadway, New York, and is equipped with an up-to-date music library and three Kimball orchestral unit organs, with one of them being an exact duplicate of the one in the Roxy theatre broadcasting studio, which by means of a direct hook-up on the national broadcasting wire, Mr. White will be able to broadcast his regular program direct from his own studio.

Kaley Stages Billy Goats Show

Charles Kaley, popular band leader rotating at Marks Brothers Granada and Marbro theatres, Chicago, is featuring a stagershow this week called "Topsy Turvy," in which he gives a special presentation called "Horsefeathers" in honor of Barney Google's Billy Goats and Nanny Goats Chapter. Since this comic strip has been appearing in the Herald and Examiner, Chicago, there has been considerable theatrical exploitation given this cartoon and the two important slogans, "Horsefeathers" and "Okmnx" have become household words.

Dr. Ronfort, Organist, Is Real M. D.

Dr. G. W. Ronfort, formerly solo organist at the North Center theatre, Chicago, is now the featured organist at the Oak Park, a Lubliner and Trinz theatre, also of Chicago.

Dr. Ronfort, who previous to becoming an organist, was one of the most noted surgeons in this country, is a graduate from Heidelberg. He has been in this country for more than 25 years and has practiced surgery for 20 years in both New York and Chicago.

In an interview, recently held with Dr. Ronfort, it was learned that it was his parents' wish that he become a physician, but that his main desire was always to study music. He has studied under such masters as Carl Muck, Richard Straus, Saint Saens, and many other famous teachers.

At one time Dr. Ronfort was the Imperial Conductor at the Court of Russia, in which he directed the Kiam Kiam Symphony in Munich, and was also the official organist at St. Peters in Rome.

To our knowledge Dr. Ronfort is about the only famous physician to hold such a position in a deluxe picture theatre in America, which is a very rare occurrence.

Ray Teal Replaces Al Short in Atlanta

ATLANTA, GA.—Unheralded and unsung Ray Teal stepped into the limelight at the Howard theatre last week as the new band master and won an ovation challenging that accorded his popular predecessor, Al Short.

Besides being a graceful master of ceremonies, Mr. Teal is an entertainer of individual style and a skilled exponent of the saxophone and clarinet.

Mr. Teal was graduated from the University of California with the class of 1924. He hails from San Francisco, where he was associated with Fanchon and Marco. Immediately prior to coming to Atlanta he inaugurated the new band show idea at the Mosque theatre in Richmond, Va., and owing to the brilliant success of that achievement he won a large and enthusiastic following.

Kvale Also Celebrates 500th Performance

Heller and Riley, one of the most successful presentation acts who have toured Publix and Balaban and Katz theatres several times, again make their appearance in Chicago this week as the featured artists in Al Kvale's 500th performance celebration at the Northshore theatre, Chicago. This stagershow is in honor of Kvale as permanent band leader at this house.

Chicago Capitol

Week Ending January 29

This week the Cooney Brothers celebrate the return of Al Short with a stage presentation called "Hello AL." The entire stage offering is conducted in a new way entirely different than the usual run of stage shows. In addition to the overture the entire musical accompaniment is offered from the pit. A brief outline of what took place follows below:

Opening with house lights full on as Al Short steps on the stage to make a short announcement conveying the idea to the audience that he is very glad to be back and that they can expect a new form of entertainment.

After a tremendous reception Al stepped down into the pit and led his symphony orchestra into a medley arrangement which included a delightful piece from Tachowski intermingled with a popular song called "I Love You" and closing with "Tannhauser." During the rendering of "I Love You" Al did one of his nifty cornet solos which is one of the outstanding features of this director's ability.

It is needless to say that the audience were given a rare treat when the orchestra struck up strains of an overture played by capable musicians and preceded by one of the best musical conductor's of the twentieth century.

A novel feature of this overture was the support given by two men playing trumpets stationed on the stage one on each end during the finale in which Anita de Mars presided at the organ also joining in for the final cord.

The next novelty on this program was a newsreel flash showing Al Short coming into town and the reception accorded by the various community leaders and so forth.

The stage portion opened with a house ballet consisting of twelve girls who danced and sang to the tune of "That's Why I am Happy" done in typical musical comedy style.

The first specialty act to start off the show were Pepino and Cartha a boy and girl who offered eccentric steps. Grayce Mitchell next followed with a vocal selection from light opera dressed in spanish costume. As an encore she also sang "Bluebird Land" one of the most popular songs ever written of which Al Short is the author. A second chorus of this had to be repeated from the balcony which gave the offering a novel effect as the house ballet again appeared in blue gowns as they danced a toe routine.

During this number a beautiful tabloid scene was exposed in the background in which several girls were posed in a woodland fantasy. Another clever idea of which no doubt Al Short is the creator.

Pepino and Cartha again appeared this time doing a ballroom exhibition dance which went over very nicely and also allowed enough time for changing of set.

Dolly Kissner a cute young blonde girl next stepped up to Al Short in the pit to do one of those personality tricks in which as a rule the leader is the foil. The idea was a very good one but sad to relate the young lady has neither the talent nor the voice to hold a single spot and due to Short's clever showmanship the routine received it's fair amount of applause.

Later on she stepped back on the stage to do a specialty strut in front of a huge living scene composed of twenty girls each setting on a row of stairs in pyramid form with the entire background being black which set off the novel hand and feet routine the girls did.

All of the above scenes smacked of originality and beauty which only musical comedy and Ziegfeld has attempted to stage.

The next fellow to show his wares was Chaz Chase.

This clever chap has been reported many times before in these columns and again was a laughing hit on this bill. One point of suggestion is that Chase spends a lot of time to prepare his punch finish and this could be shortened without much loss of effort.

The final scene was an elaborate and huge setting that carried a stair case idea with a large harp like lyre on the top platform in the center of setting from which the girls took their place down each step to decorate the scene as Al Short made his appearance from the same spot and gradually came down to the level stage while the orchestra in the pit played "Bluebird Land" as he offered a solo of same on his cornet.

This was participated by voices and the entire orchestra in full force as the organ also joined in with the two end trumpeters during the last curtain.

San Francisco Granada

Week Ending January 27

"Crinoline Days" was the stage offering at the Granada to formally introduce Owen Sweeten as leader of the Synco-Symphonists. The new leader was introduced in front of the curtain by a member of his orchestra and made a short talk, declaring he was in a difficult position in following the popular Frank Jenks.

The curtain arose showing a lone figure of a girl in a huge crinoline dress which almost filled the stage and which reached into the flies. Seven Crinoline Beauties came out from the sides singing "Crinoline Days" to music from a concealed orchestra. At the close of the song the huge crinoline dress raised out of sight, bringing into view the orchestra and rounded bridge at the rear on which seven girls were posed.

Six girls offered a fancy dance and Duffin and Draper, adagio dancers, offered a novel number, partly to the music of "The Song Is Ended."

Jan Rubini, violinist, came in slowly from the side, playing "The Song Is Ended," and followed this by a classical solo. The orchestra then offered selections from "Il Trovatore," featuring the Anvil Chorus with sparks flying from the anvils.

Owen Sweeten played a cornet solo as a part of this offering and received a big hand.

Miss Maxine presented an acrobatic dance and the orchestra then offered a jazz number, "Miss Annabell Lee," in which about half its members came out in front to play. A quartette of four members of the orchestra, including Sweeten, sang "Highways Are Happy Ways." H. Waner was announced and sang off-stage in a deep voice, proving to be a Miss Waner when she appeared. She sang "Let's Kiss and Make Up" and had a lot of fun with a member of the orchestra.

Shirley and Laywon danced the "Varsity Drag" with six girls as an animated background and Jimmy Ray, soft shoe dancer, offered his conception of the dance, bringing down the house and necessitating two encores.

The act came to an end with posing on the bridge, dancing before the footlights and alternate playing of "Crinoline Days" and the "Varsity Drag," the audience showing by its applause which types of music and show it prefers.

Ed Lowry and his organization put on "Rainbows" in which he introduced the new song hits, "Waiting for the Rainbow" and "Cobblestones."

Those who had prominent parts in the revue included Myrtle Gordon, Freddie and Eddy, Affie Martin; Paul Mall, Lyndon and Farnum and Gene Geddes.

The Publix stage show at the Chicago this week was called "Marchin' On," and there is fun, sparkle and beauty marching right through the whole affair. The show opens with a full stage view of the band. Buffano enters and leads his band through a rhythmic arrangement of "Rhapsody in Blue," and although it was played in an altogether different way from Whiteman's way, it easily scored.

The next was a new idea in presentation, at least to this reporter. It was a musical comedy sketch wherein Walter Craig and Lila Mann do the dancing, singing and comedy with the chorus girls doing a short routine between the act of the pair. It was a clever idea and well put over by the two, and the little skit went over big with the audience. Presentations can use more of similar ideas to advantage.

Then comes the Lomas Troupe with their funny horse, which is none other than two of the troupe totally surrounded by a costume that more nearly resembles a horse than anything else. This act is a riot. The audience laughed to tears at the capers of the horse. The act has been seen by this reporter many, many times and it grows funnier each time.

Chief Eagle Feather, a real American Indian, and the only tap dancer on the stage today, comes out next in a beautiful white buckskin costume and feather war bonnet and does as nifty a tap dance as one can see any place. He is the student of George Primrose, and from the way he dances, Primrose taught him everything in the business. He makes three bows and then is forced to make a curtain talk.

Rudy Weidoeft, the saxophonist, follows and plays only two numbers on his sax. He can make his instrument do everything but talk. Yes, sir, Rudy knows his notes and valves. He could have gone on a lot longer but there just wasn't any more.

Craig and Mann do a short dance before the curtain while scenes are shifted.

Then comes the big Spec finale, and it's all that. The band enters marching down a huge stairway with the chorus girls, also in military uniform on the stair also. The band plays "Marching On."

Chief Eagle Feather comes on to do another wonderful tap dance; the chorus does a good tap routine, and then the Lomas Troupe enter on stilts. This is the big climax. The first of the troupe of life size. The next a little larger, and the last to come out towers almost to the flies. Their costumes and masks are strikingly impressive. It's a great finale for the good show.

Cincinnati Albee

Harry Wilsey and his band of musicians, which have been featured at this house since it opened, the day before Christmas, continue to attract the crowds. The musicians have been very thoroughly trained, and continue to receive their instructions under personal direction of Wilsey, and the act will in all probability be continued indefinitely. Sam and Myron Hearst proved themselves to be unusually clever singers of the younger set, and pleased the audiences mightily.

Carrie and Eddy did some dance novelties interspersed with some catchy song numbers, all of which was quite above the ordinary, in an act labeled "A Petit Revue."

George and Dick Rath did an acrobatic turn which included some new tricks and many of the old ones.

Emil Jannings in "The Last Command" was the film feature.

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Week Ending January 27

"Around the Clock" is this week's presentation on the Wisconsin stage featuring the orchestra directed by Nat Nazarro, Jr. Above the orchestra is a large clock arranged to give the appearance of an antique China timepiece. The Abbot Dancers in French costumes surmount the clock and remain motionless as Billy Meyers sings, "In Spring a Young Man's Fancy Turns to Love." At the conclusion of the song the dancers step down from the upper stage and dance the minuet.

The George Sisters, accompanying themselves on the uke, sing "Gee but I'm Glad I'm Home Again," and follow with another popular number as well as a bit of dancing. The girls are fairly good and are well received.

A juggling act, unlike anything yet seen on the Wisconsin stage, is presented by Joe Cody and Brothers. The two boys juggle anything from tennis balls to clubs and include some nonsense with their offering. They receive a fair amount of applause for their offering.

"I Can't Believe That You're in Love With Me," Glenn Welty's arrangement of this popular number, is next played by the band with Billy Meyers singing the chorus. This is followed by "Diane" with Nat playing the number on the cello and Meyers singing the song.

The Abbott Dancers next oblige with a novelty dance which goes over big. The girls are dressed in striped trunks with blue caps and each carries a rope. Near the end of the number the lights are flashed out and the rolled socks and gloves which the girls wear are prominently displayed in the dark as are the ropes which show up as red in the darkened theatre. This number received good applause and was well done.

Tommy Wonder showed the audience a bit of "hot" dancing to the tune of "St. Louis Blues." Tommy is only a little fellow but he received big applause for his offering. He encoored with a fast bit of dancing with a dummy to the song, "Ain't She Sweet" and followed this with a waltz with the same blond dummy. The little fellow has plenty of pep and was well received.

Frohman and Gary, two singers, offer for their number "I Told Them All About You," "You Can Tell Her Anything Under the Sun, When You Get Her Under the Moon," and "Just Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella." The boys had plenty of pep, and received much applause, coming back to engage in a bit of nonsense with the orchestra leader.

When Nat made his appearance he brought an alarm clock with him and told the audience that E. J. Weisfeldt had set the alarm for when the presentation was to end, and that when the alarm rang that marked the end of the presentation. So Nat did a bit of dancing, and before he had finished, the alarm rang, marking the end of the presentation. This type of ending was novel and well received.

The liveliest and fastest presentation yet offered here by Fanchon and Marco is their "Collegiate Idea," in which Armand and Perez are featured, with John and Harriet Griffith, Dorothy Lec, the Three Girl Friends, and a large number of others.

The act opens with the playing of "Collegiate" with four college boys and Dorothy Lee singing the number, joined later by four coeds, and another campus sheik (in the person of Alberti). Following their routine of singing, these campus cutups present some of the latest dance steps to be seen at leading colleges throughout the country.

Then the Three Girl Friends, who come direct from the University of Southern California, present some harmony singing, and John and Harriet Griffith offer something entirely new in the way of an adagio.

Alberti, director of the orchestra, presents a solo number arranged very beautifully, after which comes the smash of the bill, Armand and Perez. These two artists perform some amazing feats, all with a nonchalance that will set any audience gasping.

Dorothy Lee does a song and dance turn while an innovation is presented in the adagio ensemble, consisting of Hoff and Hunt, Bob and Helen Deforest, and John and Harriet Griffith.

A song was also rendered very artistically during this presentation by Mr. Cope, of this city, who has recently returned here from California.

Alberti and his band presented a group of popular numbers with one exceptionally noteworthy number arranged with the aid of Alexander Schreiner at the organ.

This week Roy Dietrich and his band offered a show called "On the Bowery." The stage setting and costumes were in keeping with the presentation. It ran as follows:

Opening in a street set to represent an alley on the bowery, with the band playing an arrangement of "East Side West Side," as Roy Dietrich made his entrance from the right wing in white sweater and slouched hat and started to sing "Don't Wake Me Up Let Me Dream" as he sat on a small stool.

The band struck up a hot arrangement as the street setting parted exposing the band behind wall as Rubber Legs Hewlitt, stepped out to do an eccentric routine. This chap did everything but sweep the floor with his legs.

Another band arrangement followed this time a special one of "Among My Souvenirs" intermingled with many brass specialties and novelties by the boys. Roy's conduction during this number proved that the new leader has some fine qualities as a director and his particular style of weaving the baton managed to derive all the music that these boys were able to secure out of their instruments.

Cogart and Motto, two men appeared next in a conglomeration of what they thought was singing and dancing. To step the routine they even tried to pull some smart chatter, which took away all the real appreciation that this audience might have shown them had they been contented with their share of applause.

After several minutes of this sort of thing the band finally struck up an arrangement of "Down By the Winegar Works" in which the house ballet offered a comedy take off. The idea was clever but somehow the girls did not put themselves into the character.

The Texas Readheads, consisting of boy and girl who by the way did a short eccentric routine at the opening of the show came on again this time in a specialty which showed much improvement in their steps and one that won them a fine reception.

This was followed by another band arrangement called "Is She My Girl Friend" with a comedy version by the band boys in which three of them offered a comedy take off. The idea was novel but somehow the boys got cold feet at the last minute and did not put themselves into the part.

Maurice and Vincent two men in a hokum acrobatic routine followed next. Although the audience screamed at their antics, the offering is an infringement on many others offered by standard teams. It seems more than fifteen minutes of valuable time is wasted during the run of their act by a lot of foolish pranks.

The finale was very effective when a scrim drop came down to allow for the change of back drop which represented a golden ship with the house ballet poised in tabloid form as Roy Dietrich in a similar position as the opening sang "I Am Waiting for Ships that Never Come In." Gradually going into a soft harmony as the strains of the same song came forth from the band.

Omaha Riviera

Week Ending January 26

"Best show they have had so far" was the verdict of one group of theatregoers after seeing the stage-show, "Shadowland," at the Riviera. For striking effect in black and white, darkness and light, the show undoubtedly was the best presented since the opening of the house.

The 16 Foster Dancing Girls was the feature of the presentation. The aerial dance, with the 16 girls in rings and trapezes was particularly effective. Equally startling was the "flying piano" floating through the air above the orchestra with Pauline Alpert at the keys. Jimmy Ellard, stage master, offered the attractions in a pleasing manner.

Other acts on the program were Stella Powers in a semi-classical number; Roy Rogers playing drunk in dancing and tumbling; and Collins and Hart in a comedy number.

Frederick Schmitt and an augmented pit orchestra played the first of a series of classical overtures, the "1812 Overture." The feature film was Gloria Swanson in "Sadie Thompson."

New York Paramount

Week Ending January 27

After the prelude by the Paramount Orchestra the Paramount theatre presented Sigmund Krumgold at the organ, who played "The Song Is Ended," "I Fell Head Over Heels in Love," and "It's Bologney."

The presentation was "Milady's Fans." The curtain rises on a background of fans of various kinds in front of which is the Paramount Stage Orchestra, with Lou Kosloff directing.

The Ada Kaufman Girls as lace fans rendered a ballet followed by Bernice and Emily as feather fans. These two girls presented dancing and acrobatics of the most difficult and unbelievable nature. They seemed to be made without joints. Their success was assured by the hearty applause.

Rae Eleanor Ball the well-known violinist, then played "Serenade" assisted by the orchestra. After this number Miss Ball directed the orchestra in a catching little number.

Dorothy Neville sang "The Last Rose of Summer" which was very much liked, followed by Ojeda and Imbert as Spanish fans. They rendered two Spanish folk dances.

The Ada Kaufman Girls then perform a dance as Italian fans followed by Harry Burns a rather funny comedian assisted by Tony De Luca. These characters represent foreigners in a series of amusing scenes.

Bernice and Emily appear again as jazz fans with the same success as marked their earlier performance.

The Finale "Milady's Fan" was sung by Dorothy Neville assisted by the entire ensemble as a large fan in the background dropped, displaying an inner fan with one of the Ada Kaufman Girls in each of its radials.

Chicago Central Park

Week Ending January 28

This theatre recently renewed its presentation policy with Joie Lichter and his gang on the stage. Joie as the leader and master of ceremonies started the show with a band arrangement of "March Slav" gradually going into the "Bugle Call Rag." This was a very hot arrangement with the boys dressed in Russian Castumes that gave the offering the necessary atmosphere.

The first artist on the bill was Little Miss Irene who did some difficult Russian steps to the band's tune of "March of the Mannequin."

This was followed by another band arrangement of "When Day Is Done" with the three violins playing a soft solo. The next one was Joe Goldstein who offered a neat buck dance.

Tom Faxon followed with a vocal rendering of "Shady Tree" and "My Blue Heaven." This chap is a local favorite on the radio and was very well received.

Joe Lichter next offered a specialty in the way of a violin solo playing the "Russian Lullay" with a black-out effect showing all the boys in the band wearing bolshevik beards. When it comes to playing the fiddle Joie knows his strings and the reception offered him also proved that he is very popular at this house.

The next band arrangement was intermingled with novelties in a medley of "Katinka," "Alley-Op" and "Sonia" in which Frank Petre and Joie Lichter did a Russian comedy step which secured many laughs.

For the finale, the band struck up a hot arrangement of "St. Louis Blues" by request in which Little Irene offered an acrobatic routine in which the entire cast joined in at the last curtain.

Kansas City Mainstreet

Week Ending January 27

Freddie Stritt was seen in a return engagement as master of ceremonies at the Mainstreet this week. Stritt was a popular favorite in a long run at the Mainstreet last fall.

Walter Davison and His Louisville Loons played their thirty-first week as the stage orchestral attraction, rendering popular selections as the overture, then being featured in a musical novelty, titled "Barnyard Frolics."

George Shreck and Company offered a novelty act, titled, "The Bum Brummel," while "Red" Norvo and his "Flaming Youths" were seen in dance and vocal numbers. The Haines Sisters had a varied selection of songs to offer, their number being titled, "Songs."

Chicago Oriental

Week Ending January 29

Paul Ash and his Merry Mad Gang in "Midnite Rambles" took one into the liveliest Parisian cafes and showed its audience entertainment deluxe. About eight couples were doing ballroom dancing when the curtain arose on a very colorful scene with balloons for the outstanding decoration and shortly after this Paul came forward and the fun began.

The orchestra then played the song "There's One Little Girl Who Loves Me, and One Little Girl Who Don't," and this catchy number was certainly well played.

Pauline Gaskins, a most petite brunette, and a repeat performer on the Oriental bill, sang this song "What'll You Say." When she started in to sing, one wondered what she was about to do. But when she started in to dance the problem was solved, for she is an extraordinary dancer with a dancing personality. Her applause was tremendous.

Boyce Coombs, a performer whom this reporter saw perform only once about ten years ago has stood out in recollection all these years as a most rare artist. He is still doing about the same things and doing them well. His lack of memory song, titled I believe, "That's Right" is one of those numbers that it takes real ability to get across the footlights. He always has a clever and new joke, which I am sure no one can tell just like Boyce Coombs, and his sneezing stunt is up to perfection.

"My Ohio Town" was then played by the orchestra and a young man whose name is unknown to this reporter joined in vocal accompaniment.

Sammy Lewis and Patty Moore, who were held over from last week, surprised all the folk by being even better entertainment than they were the week previous. This seems almost impossible but it is true. Their dancing number on the stairs, in the old stage vernacular, held up the show. Sammy and Patty helped put over the Abbott Dancers' Police Dance number when they came running on the stage, yelling police, police, and saying they wanted to get a seat this time, for the last time they had to stand.

Lime Brothers with their Golliwog immediately upon coming on the stage awakened the interest of the audience and left it breathless upon the completion of this act. I do not believe the Oriental audience had ever seen anything quite like it.

Julia Garrity, also a stayover from last week, was suffering from a cold which affected her singing quite a bit. She entertained with "Why Should I Cry About You," "You Never Meant What You Said, You Were Telling Lies to Me" and "Gee, but I'm Lonesome Tonight" and as Paul said what she lacked in voice at the moment, she put over with peppy Julia Garrity dance steps.

The finale was just like any other cafe scene—goodbye—with each and every artist participating, and music, music, music.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending January 27

A Jack Parkington production, "Havana," was staged this week with Gene Rodemich and the Band Boys assisting. The setting was that of a Spanish courtyard, and the costumes were all on the Spanish type.

The Boris Petroff Girls and the Stage Band, assisted by Hadji and his guitar opened the program with "Down in Old Havana Town" accompanied by dancing and vocal chorus. Then the band played "Oh Ya Ya" with specialty jazz features.

A bit of old Havana was shown next in the Flamingo dance, with the girls in yellow and black Spanish costumes and carrying castanets. The Petroff Girls have been here before, and we sure do welcome their fine teamwork and steps.

Wally Jackson, a la the young college student spending the winter in Havana, breezed in next doing some comedy dance numbers for a couple of encores.

Next was a take-off on Paul Whiteman in the person of "Paul Whiteman of Havana," only he not only conducted the Band Boys, but danced some tap steps at the same time.

George Dewey Washington, colored baritone, sang "On the Road to Mandalay" and "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella," and gave as one of his three encores "My Blue Heaven." The audience sure did appreciate his fine baritone.

The Petroff Girls again here as the "Serenaders," and Dorothy Berke and Mario Naldi dancing an original Cuban tango entitled "Lolita." A snappy and graceful number.

Finale—"Under Your Skies of Blue" sung by a girl lowered on a platform from above stage, and accompanied by the dancing girls in beautiful Spanish shawls. Lights out for a time to show how the shawls looked with radium effect. A huge shawl was opened up in back for the back drop that made an effective closing setting.

New York Capitol

Week Ending January 27

The Capitol performance opened with "La Gioconda" played by the Capitol Grand Orchestra. This was sung in the rich, beautiful voice of Caesar Nesi. This was followed by a scene in a dell of imps and then an inner scene of fairies portrayed by the Capitol Ballet Corps.

"Dream Garden" was the presentation this week. The curtain rises on a garden of wistaria and other purple flowers in front of which is the orchestra in old-fashioned dress and powdered wigs. The Chester Hale Girls are doing a minuet in back of a thin curtain as well as in front of the orchestra.

Lloyd and Brice, two acrobats, then tumbled around the stage to the vast amusement of their audience. Billy Taylor assisted by Walt Roesner, the leader of The Capitoliens, then sang a high-hat song and did a very clever clog. Fain and Dunn sang "The Sweet Bye and Bye" and "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella."

John Maxwell, announced as the prima donna of Europe, appeared singing soprano, dressed in a dress reaching "her" slippers. She was facing the side of the stage, and suddenly she turned around to the other side displaying the costume of a man singing tenor. This dual person was very cleverly done with only the aid of makeup. Maxwell's own voice is very rich and beautiful.

The Ballet Corps then appeared in a dance assisted by the entire ensemble as the Chester Hale Girls were lowered from the top of the stage in circles of light. This concluded the stage show.

Chicago Sheridan

Week Ending January 29

"Jazzy Steps and Jazzy Tunes," was verne Buck's stagershow this week and it surely lived up to its title.

The show opened with the curtain rising about two feet displaying twelve shapely limbs doing a leg routine to the tune of "Is She My Girl Friend."

Curtain later rises disclosing the six Abbott Dancers with Verne Buck and his orchestra in a beautiful garden scene. Buck is in neat full evening dress.

An arrangement by Luck Hiatt, the band trombonist, of "Sweeping Cobwebs Off The Moon" was next offered. This was a clever arrangement and well played by the boys.

The Hanley Sisters, two young ladies with a selection of blues offered "Whose that Knocking at My Door" and the "Varsity Drag" which won them an encore.

Verne Buck and Frank Wilson next stopped the show when they sang "Dream Kisses." The duo has become a regular fad here now.

"Ted" Gordon a tricky violinist next plays "Mighty Lak A Rose," "Among My Souvenirs," etc. His comedy stopped the show.

Another clever arrangement by Luck Hiatt of "My Ohio Home" was next played by the boys with Buck playing a solo on his violin. This was very well received.

Two girls from the Abbott school, the Stanley Twins next received a good hand for their singing and acrobatic dancing to the tune of "Blue Heaven."

Myron Pearl and his Company again appeared this time doing an eccentric routine that received a fine reception.

Ned Norworth the nut comedian was next. He offered the same routine that was reported here before.

The Abbott Dancers then enter carrying chairs and offer a prologue to the film "Silk Legs" depicting a scene of the picture by sitting and offering a leg routine with just their limbs showing. This fades and the title of the picture is flashed on the screen for the finale. A novel closing in keeping with the motion picture.

TORONTO: The very first thing that I discovered up here in Canada, is that "taxicab drivers are the same the world over." Rushing through traffic looking neither to the left or right, and caring little for the poor pedestrian, or the other fellow's car, he certainly is a brother to the ones we have in the United States. . . . Even up here I bear rumors of goings on in New York that are even a surprise to me. One in particular about a certain member of a very large publishing house, that intends very shortly to take over the entire firm by himself. . . . As soon as I am sure about this you can rest assured I'll spill you the whole story. . . . When I was in Buffalo, I met a young chap who, in my estimation, is a creative genius. His showmanship is supreme, his ability as a musician is superb, his friends are many, his boss loves him, as do all the employees at this theatre, he is an inspiration to all that surround him, his Napoleonic methods at rehearsals are respected, for his fellow workers are aware that he knows and, last but not least, he is only twenty-six years old. For your information—I allude to Alex Hyde playing at Shea's Buffalo theatre, in his 48th consecutive week. . . . For some reason or other I somehow kinda felt, that when I crossed the American border, I would find things different 'cause I would be in a foreign land but, to my surprise, the soil was the same, the trees, the houses, stores, people, etc. Outside of the Canadian money (which I hate to take in change for one of my good American ten-dollar bills) I would never know the difference. . . . There is one thing, however, which struck me as rather odd, and different, and that is before the show starts in any theatre, the orchestra plays "God Save the King," while the audience pay their respects. . . . A little of that in the good old U. S. A. wouldn't do any harm. . . . A lot of people could stand being reminded every now and then of their country. . . . Everybody wears spats here in Canada, so I went and did likewise, as they really are very warm and comfortable. I hope they won't think I'm putting on the "ritz" when I get back to the States. . . . The big mogul for dance orchestras is Luigi Romanelli, who plays at the King Edward Hotel, the Tivoli theatre, and a score of other jobs that he handles. . . . His library of music is the most complete of any dance orchestra leader I have ever seen. . . . For theatre presentation work, Jack Arthur at the Upton theatre walks away with the pudding. . . . He controls the presentations of at least 25 theatres throughout Canada, besides conducting his own shows at the Upton theatre here in Toronto. . . . I haven't given up hope, I'm still trying to "finagle" those two bottles of Johnny Walker back home with me. . . . If I succeed I'll certainly be sure to pass my method on to those of you who desire to know. . . . There's a music store up here, the likes of which I have never seen before. It's large and spacious, has fourteen employees, and sells thousands of copies of only mediocre songs. Imagine what they have sold of "Blue Heaven." . . . Just for fun I'm going to find out, hold the wire a minute. . . . Close to fourteen thousand copies. . . . The Song Shop is located at 127 Yonge Street, Toronto, and owned by one of the nicest fellows I've ever met, Harry Golby. . . . The most popular dish that Canadians eat is called "Fish and Chips." . . . Like our hot-dogs. This delicacy is the all around Dominion palate warmer. . . . Any kind of fish, with—what we call potato chips—slopped around in vinegar constitutes this dish. . . . Well, next week you'll find me back along the "alley" among the elite of tin pan alley and there should be a lot of good and interesting news for me to tell you all about,—until then, "Cheerio and top 'ole."

If some of you fellows who haven't been to New York in a long time, could come back and see the "alley" today, you'd never recognize it. . . . With Shootin' Galleries, "Git Your Photos Taken," Automatic soft drink places, side shows, Ballyhooing in front of theatres, and what-nots, you'd think you were in the heart of Coney Island. . . . For the sake of the country, I only hope they spare Fifth Avenue from the likes.

ORGAN SOLOS

Mrs. Jesse Crawford (New York Paramount) used the following songs for her solo replacing her famous husband for a few weeks. "What are You Waiting for, Mary," "I Told Them All About You," "The Song's Ended," and "I Fell Head Over Heels In Love." The last number was a tremendous hit as Tom Wilson sang one chorus at the end. It is needless to say that this young lady is very popular at this house, as the reception accorded her at each performance easily proves that.

Arthur Richter (Wisconsin, Milwaukee) offers for his number at the organ, "Berlinania" consisting of "Four Walls," "The Song Is Ended" and "Together We Two," by Irving Berlin with the words flashed upon the screen.

Hazel Hirsch (Chicago State-Lake) dedicated her new Wurlitzer with a medley arrangement of "The Ballet Sylva" which introduced a portion of "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Dancing Tamborines." The solo was a straight classic played from the level pit with no spot on organ and displayed the beautiful smooth tunes of the new instrument. Miss Hirsch was also responsible for the arrangement of the medley.

Cornelius Maffie (Chicago Piccadilly) offered a straight solo this week using "A Shady Tree" to introduce "Under the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" and finished with "The Russet of Spring." The stunt was done with illustrated slides and a man singing from the organ chamber which gave the human voice effect. This organist who is playing an engagement as a guest organist is one of the youngest and most popular recording artists in town.

Howard L. Peterson (Missouri St. Joseph) offered a presentation called "Our Memories" featuring the songs "Just A Memory" with lyrics slides later going into "Just A Cottage Small." After a verse and chorus of this the music continued in the form of an electric phonograph playing Peterson's own recording of the number in which he blends by harmonizing on the organ. This effect is very unique and seemed to make quite a hit.

Milton Charles (Chicago Oriental) "New Words, Old Songs" was an exceptionally well planned organ program, for it gave the audience a chance to hear the songs they like with fresh words. "Broken Hearted" made up its boarder and boardbill story, "Everywhere You Go" took the auto for its up-to-date story, especially referring to parking. And the old and well liked Mother song had H-E-N-R-Y substituted and called our new Ford the Sea Gull of the U. S. A. Talking of Henrys, a happy announcement was made in a musical way that Henri A. Keates would be back at the Oriental the following week and that Milton Charles was stepping over to the Chicago. This was without a doubt the most complete and entertaining organ number and to try to tell you all about it would just about take the rest of this reporter's lifetime.

Don Isham (Chicago Embassy) The flying organist offered an original organ solo this week in which he used "Beautiful," "Among My Souvenirs," "Everywhere You Go" and "Kiss and Makeup." Isham used comedy slides and offered this in the form of community singing. His selections are always received well and this was no exception as he was forced to play a popular number for his audience to sing during the comedy film.

Ramon Berry (Chicago Alamo) used a slide presentation called "Ernest R. Ball—In Appreciation" in which he presented to his audience many of the familiar compositions of this late writer. Among the selections were "Boy of Mine," "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," "Mother Machree" and ended up with the last composition that Ball wrote before he passed away called "Watching the World Go By." "Charmaine" the theme song of the picture "What Price Glory" was used throughout the photoplay by Berry assisted in the presentation by a singer and two violinists.

Jesse Crawford (Chicago Chicago) gives his farewell to the Chicago this week, playing "Among My Souvenirs," "Blue Chimes," "Just a Memory" (as a waltz and as Paul Whiteman would play it), "Whisper Sweet and Low," and last Crawford bids his audience goodbye with slides and music. When Crawford plays, the audience is still as a mouse. He can hold them breathless, as long as he plays, but when he stops they thunder their applause. It's just too bad that Chicago can't keep him.

LITTLE LOG CABIN OF DREAMS—(Harms, Inc.)—By James F. Hanley and Eddie Dowling. This firm concentrates on one song every six months and so far they have never been wrong. This one should develop into a lasting hit.

POOR LIZZIE (What'll Become Of You Now?)—(Irving Berlin, Inc.)—Mr. Ford has been trying to get away from his Tin Lizzie and is now manufacturing an up-to-date car, but the writers won't let him be and keep digging up his past. Poor Henry.

TODAY IS TODAY (Tomorrow's Tomorrow)—(E. B. Marks Music Co.)—A natural saying—why borrow trouble. After all most of our troubles never happen. An optimistic song well written and one of the writers, Paul Ash, should have no trouble starting same. The others are Bernie Grossman and Sam Kaufman.

AND THEN YOU CAME ALONG—(Waterson-Berlin & Snyder)—This is about a sweetheart who found his blue bird. Everything was all wrong until she came along. He might repent at leisure but now everything is jake. Well written as a fox trot. Words by Ev. E. Lyn and Hazel Mooney, music by Sammy Fain.

LA ROSITA—(Sam Fox Pub. Co.)—The theme song of Douglas Fairbanks' latest picture "The Gaucho," which has settled down for a run at the United Artists theatre. We enjoyed this melody almost as much as the picture which is saying plenty. Written by Allan Stuart and Paul Dupont.

KIKI—(Harold Rossiter Music Co.)—No relation to the play of the same name. A story of a little French girl and the waltz melody is very pretty. Words and music by George A. Little, Paul Hosang and Art Sizemore.

MOMENTS WITH YOU—(Ager, Yellen & Bornstein)—Nat Shilkret, the well known Victor Record leader, should have no trouble starting this song on the radio as he is one of the biggest attractions on the chain stations. The lyrics by Jack Yellen are up to his usual standard.

WHEN YOU'RE WITH SOMEBODY ELSE—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—Ruth Etting, a local favorite who has climbed to the top and is now one of Flo Ziegfeld's stars, is one of the writers of this song. Should be able to give it a great send off as she has done with many songs in the past.

WHO'S BLUE NOW—(J. H. Remick & Co.)—This song tells of a fickle sweetheart. Instead of hurting the one who loved her it reverted on her and it's his turn to laugh now. These writers have mainly devoted their time to production numbers but we are glad they wrote this popular song, Irving Caesar and Joseph Meyer.

THE HEART OF KENTUCKY—(Shapiro-Bornstein & Co.)—Everything has been written about Kentucky and now that we have touched the heart maybe the writer will go to another state. Never-the-less a very good Dixie song. The melody writer will be remembered as having written one of the world's biggest hits, "Beautiful Ohio." Words by Howard Johnson, music by Robert A. King.

FLAPPERETTE—(Jack Mills, Inc.)—A piano solo that is quite popular and now has a lyric for those who want to sing same.

See you all next week.

Sid Bernman.

THE THEATRE

Incorporated in this department of practical showmanship of Exhibitors Herald are the Moving Picture World departments, "Selling the Picture to the Public," which was established September 23, 1911, by Epes Winthrop Sargent, and "Better Business Builders."

Nationality Drives Pay Big Dividends

The Texas theatre, San Antonio, Texas, recently began a drive to increase patronage that "The Theatre" regards as an exceptionally fine example of theatre showmanship. Great skill was needed to put the campaign over and that skill was abundantly applied. No gain in patronage was made at a sacrifice of patronage in another quarter, and receipts have already jumped enormously. "The Theatre" believes the story, printed here, on the patronage drive of the Texas to be one pertinent to every theatremans.

Receipts Rise $1500 When "Texas" Caters to Racial Elements

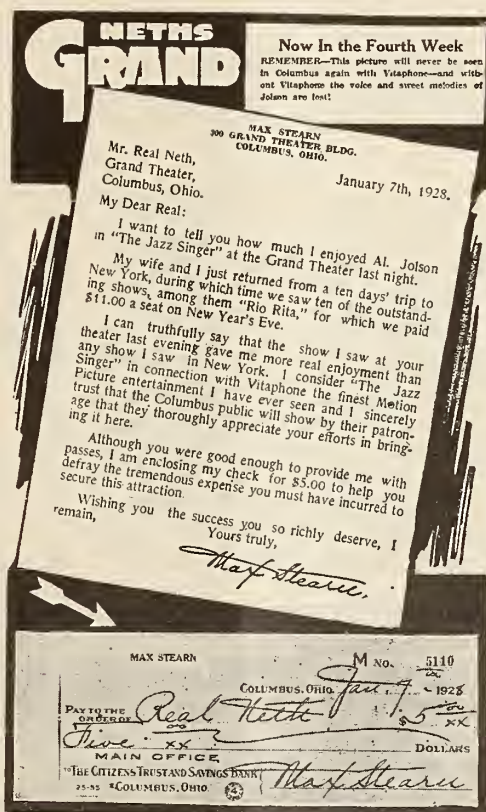

NOT being afflicted with that unusual disease known as "box office satiety," the Texas theatre in San Antonio is at the present time engaged in gathering all the loose shekels in the surrounding country. A systematic campaign is being carried on by the theatre to establish the patronage of all the different nationalities, and also that of various sections of the city that have heretofore been lacking in patronage.

A campaign has just been completed in the Spanish district of San Antonio. There are 110,000 Spanish speaking people in San Antonio, and about 60,000 of these are of a class that are theatre goers. The management of the Texas decided that the pesos and centavos were as good money as quarters and halves, and started a systematic campaign in the Little Mexico district. Window cards, tack cards, circulars, a truck with gigantic A board, ads in the Spanish paper, and other mediums were used to interest this element in the various Spanish angles of the Texas program, which included spot acts, overtures, organ solos, and the new band leader, who is Spanish by birth.

The campaign was so well handled that the results parallel anything similar ever done in this section of the country in box office results. The receipts of the Texas have leaped up $1,500 per week over the old average, and the Spanish speakers are regular attendants.

The wind-up of the campaign was a Spanish midnight matinee, with the entire proceeds going to a Christmas tree fund through La Prensa, the Spanish paper. The house was packed—and the goodwill of San Antonio's Spanish people is a certified thing at the Texas now.

The next element which the Texas will go after is the German portion of the population. When Texas—the state—was settled in the early nineteenth century, a large portion of the pioneers were Germans, who settled in the South and now, San Antonio has a large percentage of the descendants of these people. There are something like 20,000 of them, and the Texas is planning a campaign on the order of the Spanish one—except that it will be less Jean La Roe, publicity director of J. Real Neth Theatres in Columbus, O., used this ad when Neth's Grand theatre was playing "The Jazz Singer," the Warner Bros. special. Since the letter was bona fide and unsolicited and the writer a prominent man in the city, the ad proved very effective. This sort of advertising is good, if used sparingly.

"circusy," and will carry a greater personal appeal.

Music will be the nucleus of the drawing appeal, and special overture productions will be staged, using a Tyrolian Band composed of members of a prominent German lodge. These men play the old German zithers, and appear in the picturesque costumes of the Swiss Tyrolians. When the German campaign is completed, the Italians, French, and

Passes to Tall Men to "Valley of Giants"

Anybody in Des Moines six and a half feet tall had a chance to see First National's Milton Sills picture "The Valley of the Giants" free. It was an exploitation feature which Jess Day, manager of the Des Moines theatre in the Iowa town of that name put into effect.

He had cards printed with the following wording: "How tall are you? If you are six feet six inches tall there is a free ticket for you at the Des Moines theatre to see Milton Sills in 'The Valley of the Giants,' starting Saturday." The cards were passed out on the streets.

Day reports that the stunt cost but a few passes as there were few men in Des Moines six and a half feet tall, but it attracted much attention to the picture which is what was intended.

every representative nationality in San Antonio will be campaigned.

At the time of these campaigns of nationalities, the Texas is not forgetting the bone of the operation—the English speakers. A special exploitation campaign is now being carried on to establish every Monday night at the Texas as "Society Night," with special added attractions, such as organ recitals, concerts, etc., for the society people of San Antonio. The Junior League, San Antonio debutantes, and various women's clubs are working with the Texas on this stunt.

It will be put over in grand style, movies of the social dogs being taken as they get out of their cars and enter the theatre, and snaps of them appearing in the Public Review, the house organ of the Texas. The governor of the state will be present at the first of these nights. Exhibitions of famous paintings will be shown on the mezzanine, and complete follow-up campaigns will be used until the event has become as thoroughly established as the weekly "Hi School Nites" are now at the Texas." On Friday, designated as "Hi School Nite," the various high schools turn out almost in a body. Each different week, some act from one of the schools is featured on the "Hi School Nite" program, together with school songs, yells, etc.

These two marquee displays were used by the Liggett theatre, Madison, Kan., during showings of "What Price Glory," the Fox war special, and "Don Juan," the Warner picture starring John Barrymore. Such decorations mean a great deal to the small-town theatre, where every person in town sees them. Your lobby and theatre front are powerful advertising mediums. Are you using them.

Four Good Exploitations Make Harry F. Storin, M. B. I. No. 4

Harry F. Storin of the Leroy theatre, Pawtucket, Rhode Island, this week becomes M. B. I. Number 4. Storin is bubbling over with "My Best Idea" and sends in four because he doesn't know which one is best. They are all so good, we couldn't choose either, so we leave that up to you. Read Storin's "My Best Ideas" and take your choice.

"My Best Idea" No. 3

By Harry F. Storin

I WISH someone else would select one of my various stunts or ideas as a basis for membership in the "M. B. I. Club." In trying to select the best, I found it practically impossible to get one out of what I thought were four good ones and label it best.

There was STUNT Number One—"Masters of Men," which was the occasion for a most unique one. I rigged up a small raft, erected a sail thereon, painted in the names of the attraction and theatre, let it sail down the river until it was about at the edge of the main falls, located below the bridge in the center of the city, then tied it off. There it was anchored for some time and was the attraction for hundreds.

There was STUNT Number Two. I established a radio unit known as "The Leroy Links." This was as much a hobby as a business builder. We went on the air twice weekly, a dinner concert at six on Wednesday, and a late unit program at 10:40 Friday nights. Ten minutes on the latter program and five on the other were devoted to "movie gossip" talks.

There was STUNT Number Three. In the window of the Public Utilities Corporation, ideally located, the company devoted the whole window to various forms of window lighting, changing the merchandise every week and incorporating some firm's name across the face of a large shadow box. In as much as we were pioneers in the use of light for effective display, I submitted the idea to one of the executives and he had one of his subordinates go over the matter with me. I got the window.

The next thing was to do something with it. I had a sign painted making a reproduction of the Leroy from the front row of seats to the screen. There was the orchestra rail, organist at console, proscenium arch, exact miniature of our stage set and sheet. The screen was black and lettered in white, "Presenting the Leroy" a Perfect Production. The backs of the front row of seats were shown in silhouette, with occupants, and on the back was painted "2700 seats." On the right of the shadow box was a list of coming attractions and on the left the architect's detailed drawing of the theatre dome, a wonder plan, giving an idea of what was necessary in planning the theatre.

In front of the seats and on the floor of the window were white doilies, on each of which rested a prism from a chandelier, a brick, a piece of rolled steel, a miniature switchboard, a small lamp, etc., with an appropriate card back of each such as "Two Million Brick," "700 tons of steel," "25,000 lamps," etc.

A True Educational Exhibit

Various other little details made this a most attractive window. It created great comment and always had a large group studying it. I think this should be classified as an "Industrial or Educational Exhibit."

There was STUNT Number Four. This one I got a tremendous thrill from and think it deserves "the cake." On August 8, 1925, the steamer "Mackinac" blew up in Newport harbor. Nearly all the excursionists were from this city. Approximately 60 people were killed. Emergency relief was given by many local men and a campaign for the raising of funds was started. A day or two after the explosion I suggested to the committee in charge that I would stage a benefit on Sunday night.

The other managers co-operated and we called it "The Theatre Managers' Monster Benefit Show." I placed tickets in all their box offices, sold them on the streets, had ushers, artists, policemen, firemen, in fact everybody selling. I named the various boxes after clubs, political leaders, etc., and auctioned them off during the brief period of campaign. For one we received as high as $500. We had two broadcasting stations continually announcing it. Two days before the show every ticket was sold. I succeeded in getting two Broadway stars to come over, a tremendous array of local and regular vaudeville talent. Everything from advertising to artists I got gratis.

Stations Broadcast Show

We broadcast the entire show through Providence and Boston stations, asked for donations from the radio audience, sold flowers I had promoted from the local florists to the audience, asked people to give more than the dollar admission if they could afford it, and grossed for the one night's entertainment over

"The Theatre" Offers New Service to Exhibitors

Are you getting the right sort of ads for the money you are paying out each week for newspaper advertising? Perhaps your local papers are hampered with too few type faces so that you cannot get the effects in your ads you would like.

This is often the case in small towns where the newspaper type supply is limited. However, if the available type is used properly an attractive ad can be created with most any kind of type. This is evident from the many excellent ads that come to this desk which are created only with one or two type faces. Often one runs across ads produced in small town shops that are far the superior in attractiveness, beauty and readability to the ads run in metropolitan papers where every type face is available.

In order to be of further help to exhibitors, and especially the small town exhibitor this time, "The Theatre" offers a new service. If you will tell us your advertising problems we will offer suggestions of ways in which you can improve your ads.

"The Theatre" would also be pleased to receive samples of your ads.

Good "Gay Defender" Bally hoo Costs But $2

Harry W. Crull, managing director of the Branford theatre, Newark, N. J., put over a publicity stunt on Richard Dix's picture "The Gay Defender" which attracted considerable attention at little expense.

Through the co-operation of a local Nash automobile agency a beautiful new Nash car was placed at the disposal of the Branford theatre with a driver. The car was rigged up in a colorful manner, with signs and pennants. Thousands admired the display throughout the city. The house artist painted the signs. The only expense attached to the whole stunt was $2.00 for hire of a costume for the driver such as Dix wears in the picture.

Los Angeles Ads Are Good Puzzles

Plan Your Campaign; Choose the Feature; Feature It In All Ads

(This is the third of a series of articles on advertising. They originally appeared in "Showmanship News," the Finkelstein and Ruben house organ.)

Number Three

WITH three major ways of getting public attention at hand, and many minor ones, the laying out of advertising campaigns is a simple matter. The type of picture you are to sell and the advertising material prepared on it will decide the general tone of your campaign.

An exceptionally good 24-sheet may make a better appeal to the people of your city than newspaper copy. Perhaps the nature of the picture determines that pictorial copy will pull better than type.

On the other hand posters may fail entirely to convey the advertising message you wish to launch so you place the bulk of your campaign in the newspapers. Certain types of productions recommend themselves from the start for advertising development in newspaper display space.

When it comes to the screen there never has been a picture made that could not be advertised advantageously with trailers. There you have action and movement, a form of appeal that is wholly lacking in poster and newspaper copy.

ONCE YOU HAVE DECIDED ON THE GENERAL OUTLINES OF YOUR ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN STICK TO ITS ESSENTIAL FEATURE IN ALL OF YOUR COPY. If you play up the star's name on the billboards, do the same in the newspapers, on your screen and in your lobby.

Having considered fully the possibilities of newspapers, bill boards and trailers in getting your message to the public, turn your thoughts to the supplementary advertising features at your command. These are programs, heralds, window cards, novelties, cards, street ballyhoos, contests and special showings.

Don't ever underestimate the value of your lobby. It is your show window. The inside of your theatre will be judged by the appearance of your lobby.

Remember that a few outstanding pieces of copy, whether pictorial or type, are more easily scanned than many. On the other hand you may have pictures at times which can only be sold by multiplicity of copy in your lobby.

Determination of the amount of lobby copy, as well as all other copy, and its styles, is based on showmanship. If you have showmanship your money is well spent. If you haven't got that phantom ability then your employer is losing money on you.

Be careful in selecting posters. Be doubly careful in wording your newspaper ad. And be three times as careful in writing your trailer copy. Once you put a trailer on your screen it is a part of your theatre.

If you tire your patrons with meaningless words the fault is yours. If you make a misstatement you are guilty. There is no falling back on "the paper had already gone to press" or "the poster man didn't follow directions." You put that trailer on the screen yourself. It is up to you to make sure it is perfect before you run it.

Trailer copy should be even more snappy and short than the newspaper message. Patrons will see a lot of things on your screen during a show. Don't try to crowd their memories. The safe rule is to always give the patron the best of it. Good showmanship requires that you do.

Lots of Ink and Plenty of Angles Feature Film Capital's Advertising

The reproduction above is a good example of Los Angeles moving picture advertising and is taken from the Sunday, January 22 issue of the Los Angeles Examiner. What is your general impression of the page? "The Theatre's" thought is that if Los Angeles people really read such ads, they must have a strong liking for puzzles.

The group of ads as a whole repel rather than attract the eye, and it is doubtful if any ad on the page seen by itself would cause any casual reader to read it. This means that no one except one actually looking for theatrical information is likely to read the ads. Such advertising is highly inefficient, for good ads should catch the attention of not only the interested reader but also the casual and disinterested reader.

Look at the ad of West Coast Theatres. Would any one torture his eyes by reading through this maze of type and criss-cross lines unless he was actually looking for information? And to find information it is necessary to search for it. Any good printer could have set up a more attractive, attention-getting ad than this one.

One chief difficulty with the ads on this page is to tell where one begins and the other leaves off. For instance the casual reader will probably be fooled into believing that the West Coast Theatres ad and the West Coast District Theatres ad are one and the same. The same holds true with those of the Carthay Circle and Pantages theatres.

Look at the ad of the Orpheum. Would anyone actually want to read this one? And it is practically impossible to read the two vertical lines of type on either side at a glance, and if you do happen to make them out, what of it? The phrases, "a multi-feature bill," and "super vaudeville," mean nothing in this day and age of superlatives.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

One hour and 52 minutes was the running time of the show which had Mackaill-Mulhall in "Man Crazy" as the flicker attraction. Being some eight minutes shorter than the average program here, the turn-over was ideal, especially with four presentations being offered with the feature picture. "Man Crazy" itself was just one minute short of an hour in length, leaving 53 minutes for a novelty overture, a novelty ballet, the Topical Review and a knock-out stageband presentation.

Edward L. Hyman

Art Kahn's reserve store gags showed no signs of running short, though this was his fourth week as master of ceremonies, pianist and stageband leader. The presentation devised for him, the band and the featured artists this week was "Jazzing the Blues Away," and took up 31 minutes just preceding the showing of the feature picture. It was in full-stage, with a new band seating arrangement and with silver cloth borders faced with red backed up by blue plush cyc used as drop.

At opening the band struck into "Head Over Heels," the special arrangement giving a chance to the slip-horn for a chorus and also to vocal tenor who doubled on saxophone. Kahn then introduced Billie Tichenor, a young specialty dancer of engaging personality, feminine persuasion, who caught on quite handily and warmed up the house for Theo Alban, a dinner-suited tenor who sang "Song of the Wanderer," with strong finish accompanied by the band. The feminine touch was again introduced by the Serova Dancers, eight in number, who did a line number a la Tiller while the band played "Up in the Clouds" and "Dream Kisses."

Two comics, Johnson and Hewett, eccentric dancers with acrobatic inclinations, kept up the good work and got a big reception, after which the band went into a special arrangement of "The Best Things in Life," with trombone chorus and a vocal chorus by Theo Alban. Art Kahn then had the piano rolled out and proved that he knew what "Rhapsody in Blues" was all about. He encored with "Diane" and left everybody happy. The big finale was "Are You Happy" with an effect close, in which the dancing girls pushed out bowers of roses which spelled out the name of the song when all the lights were turned off.

The novelty overture was "The Drum," being a fantasy which introduced that instrument in music of the American Indian, African, funeral, birth, Spirit of 1776, Chinese, Jazz and Sousa March coincidental with moving pictures on the screen fitting the music. Willy Stahl, conductor, aided in the construction of this overture, which ran seven minutes.

The novelty ballet, three minutes long, was "In Holland," with eight Dutch girls and boys doing their wooden shoe stepping in front of a set-piece representing cottages in the land of the windmills. This cutout was backed up by a neutral back drop which was lighted by box lamps of blue, giving a nice contrast to the white and amber lights of the houses. The Topical Review ran twelve minutes.

Publix School for Managers to Open For Class of 25

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Publix theatres announces that it will start this spring another session of its managers training school. This school, which was organized in August, 1925, has since graduated three classes whose members are now engaged in theatre operation in practically every section of the country.

The fourth class which will assemble this spring will be limited to 25 men. The majority of these will be men now in the employ of Publix, whose record and whose ability merit for them the opportunity of this special training at the expense of the corporation. A special attempt will be made to select for this coming session members of Publix orchestras. It is felt that such men, with musical training and background, and a sense of showmanship developed by contact with theatres, can be effectively trained for managerial work in the Publix type of operation. Harry Marx, director of theatre management, announces that John F. Barry, who organized and directed the managers school since its inception, will again be its director.

Gotham Signs Sam Hardy

HOLLYWOOD.—Sam Hardy, First National player, has signed with Gotham to play the part of a tough in a forthcoming production.

I forgot to include the item of ticket number one. I had it glued on a large white card, had all the artists autograph the card, framed it and auctioned it off in the audience. It brought $50.

The whole campaign was crowded into the brief space of a few days. It was a great achievement. Everything broke in my favor and the co-operation of everyone I asked was greatly responsible for the marvelous success. There you are, now "roll your own."

F. N. Elects 5 New Member to K. O. Club

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—First National's K. O. club has five new members as a result of their sales achievements during the fourth quarter of 1927. They are Gerald Hardy, San Francisco; R. J. Heft, Kansas City; Newton, Levi, San Francisco; Albert Shmitken, Cincinnati and Vete Stewart, San Francisco.

Good Exploitations at Aztec Put Over "Patent Leather Kid"

William Epstein, manager of the Aztec theatre, San Antonio, where the First National war special, "The Patent Leather Kid," is having an extended run, aroused an unusual amount of advance interest in the film through some clever exploitation stunts.

For one thing a little brown envelope, printed front and back in red and carrying a line drawing of Richard Barthelmess as a pugilist, was distributed throughout the town. The title of the picture was given in English, with the rest of the wording in Spanish. The envelope contained a white powder (probably flour) and recipients were advised to take the powder before going to the Aztec to see "The Patent Leather Kid" to avoid becoming hysterical from laughter at the comedy in the film.

A special card was printed for distribution among guests at the various San Antonio hotels introducing them to the city, to the Aztec theatre and to "The Patent Leather Kid." A half-tone of Molly O'Day's head, and another of Richard Barthelmess were printed in an upper and a lower corner of the card.

A herald was used for store, office, theatre and house to house distribution. In addition to a picture of Barthelmess in his fighting togs, the herald reprinted Jack Dempsey's telegram to the film star praising the realism in the ring battle in the picture.

A tank was obtained from the army authorities and was bannered and used on the streets and in front of the theatre. It proved an effective ballyhoo.

The front of the theatre was decorated with cutouts from the posters. Some of these were mounted in the panels on either side of the entrance while others showing various scenes in the film were placed above the entrance doors. Under the latter the title was carried in large white letters on a dark colored cloth banner.

Los Angeles Newspaper Ads Are Good Puzzles

More thought should be given in preparing the ads to how they will look on the page. In a page of theatre advertising such as this not one ad stands out as a unit. They all merge into one disconcerting mass. A better effect would be gained if more white space was allowed on the four sides of the ads. Also a great deal more white space could be effectively used within the ads. The ads of the Orange Grove, Carthay Circle and the United Artists theatres attract more attention than any of the others, due somewhat to position, but more to some degree of white space.

Too many ad writers are engaged in "following the leader." When one man uses gobs of black ink and crazy makeups, the rest, too often, try to go him one better. This tendency can be seen in the theatre advertising pages of scores of city newspapers. There are other means of putting out the fire than by fighting fire with fire. Try using white space and simple makeup now and then instead of attempting to outdo the other fellow at using black ink and weird makeup.

Fire Destroys Theatre

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HULL, QUEBEC, Jan. 31.—Fire completely destroyed the Parc Royal here with a loss of $30,000. Charles Brodeur, president, declared the building could not be replaced for $75,000.

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

"THE LAST COMMAND"

By T. O. SERVICE

THE second American-made Jannings picture is almost as good as the first. Perhaps, to many, it will seem better. It is, at any rate, as good as a motion picture needs to be. I liked it well enough and the people who saw it with me liked it better. I have a hunch that my aversion to inverted narration stood between me and the story.

The story is of a Russian general, supreme in command, who went down before the revolution and came in time to a Hollywood set whereon, according to script, he was given command of a cinema army in a cinema trench. This, of course, in bearing out the title, which applies quite definitely to the picture. In the telling, however, the Hollywood end of the thing is partially unfolded at the beginning of the picture, the continuity then dipping back ten years and finally jumping down to the present for the finish. It is the ten-years-ago part of the story that stands up as genuine Jannings stuff. Recited in its proper order, it might have been strong enough to carry a phoney Hollywood finish. Cut in as it is, the force of the thing is badly scattered. It is, nevertheless, a powerful sequence and a splendid piece of work in every way. I should like to see the picture re-cut and projected in chronological sequence.

I should like to know, incidentally, why the extremely direct and simple logic applying against these distorted narrative forms is so frequently disregarded by picture makers. I understand, of course, that production facilities sometimes are served, that economies are affected and that, in isolated cases, a story which isn't much may be made to seem more by trick treatment. The story of "The Last Command," however, was not one of these, and certainly no attempt was made to economize. Perhaps the same human fallacy that impels writers to write stories about writers and artists to paint pictures of artists is to blame. More probably the distortion arises from lack of confidence in the story to be told, in which case, obviously, the thing to do is to scrap the story and get one worth telling.

I doubt that there is a more colorful and dramatic field for cultivation than the Russian aspect of the war. I recall no picture more interesting than the ten-years-ago portion of "The Last Command." It is plainly authentic, it bristles with contrast and suspense. It is perfect Jannings stuff and that is perfect entertainment. The Hollywood tag, fore and aft, is cheap, shopworn trickery of no genuine interest to anyone save, perhaps, people to whom Hollywood is real. The day Hollywood learns its proper relationship to the cinema, which is that of factory to store and nothing more, much terrible production will cease.

But I do "The Last Command" injustice by dwelling overlong on its single flaw. Perhaps I dwell thus long because the picture is so good that it could have been immeasurably better save for the cockeyed continuity. As it stands, twisted construction and all, it is a knockout of a picture and another triumph for the able Mr. Jannings.

"THE GATEWAY TO THE MOON"

MR. R. S. WENGER, Union City, Ind., writes (in "Letters from Readers") the suggestion that I look again at "The Gateway to the Moon." He makes a good case for the picture and I am happy to learn that his audience liked it, in paying numbers. I hope that all other exhibitors have a similarly profitable experience with the thing and if box office returns indicate that they have done so I shall be pleased to admit I don't know anything about pictures. In fact, to expedite matters, I'll make that admission in advance. "I don't know anything about pictures." To-wit:—

I thought "Mickey," "The Miracle Man" and "Robin Hood" were doomed failures, financially, and of course you know the success of each. Conversely, I thought "Beggars on Horseback," "Intolerance" and "Bits of Life" were sure to make barrels of money. You can see, with half an eye, that I am convinced I know nothing at all about pictures. That is, I must add in justice to myself, I know nothing at all about the money-making power of pictures. And that is why I never make predictions or guesses about the box office value of pictures I see. And that, in further justice to myself, is why I believe that my observations about pictures are of more value to the exhibitor (since they are, obviously, less dangerous) than the observations of people who think they do know box office values. I need not add, I hope, that nobody knows, in advance, whether a picture will make or lose money for its exhibitors.

To complete my reply to Mr. Wenger, whose interest I deeply appreciate, I must set down the facts that (1) a reader of this magazine has no need of box office predictions and (2) gets the only predictions that are worth a whoop in the pages of this magazine. The exhibitor reading this magazine finds, in "New Pictures," all the facts about the pictures as they are made. In "What the Picture Did for Me" he gets the first box office returns on actual box office exhibitions. With these departments to serve him in the conduct of his business he needs the booking counsel of nothing in the world save his own good common sense.

"SHARP SHOOTERS"

LOIS MORAN and George O'Brien make a great deal of entertainment out of "Sharp Shooters." They are aided by a considerable and capable cast, a good continuityist and a pretty interesting little yarn about a sailor who fell in love but didn't know it. The thing hops off in Algiers (or maybe it's Cairo, or Alexandria, or—keeping recent corrections in mind—Buenos Aires) and winds up in a place that seems to be New York. The girl is a cooch dancer in the beginning, a nickel-hopper later on and finally a "good old-fashioned wife" in the boy friend.

The sailor comedy in the picture would have served adequately for another of those war-comics, but the powers that be seem to have wisely decided that there have been enough of these. Accordingly, this thing is advanced as a drama, which of course it is, and the thrown-in comedy is the better by that arrangement.

I saw the picture at the Monroe, a theatre I have taken to visiting regularly of late and one of the best places to see pictures in downtown Chicago. There is a Movietone news reel, always good, and there are other short features. There is organ music when Movietone is not being used and there are no punk vaudeville acts to interrupt the screening. The shows run exactly two hours and one knows when to go to the theatre to be in at the start. I should like to see a dozen more such theatres start up in the city, for then I would have more pictures to write about for you each week.

"THE DIVINE WOMAN"

I'VE lived to learn the amazing fact that Greta Garbo can act! Anything is possible after this. I may live to learn that Hollywood really knows what it's about, that a Broadway run means anything to an exhibitor in South Bend, or even that the number of electric lights outside a theatre indicates the interior importance of the same. But one revelation at a time: This time, Greta Garbo.

Miss Garbo really acts in "The Divine Woman." Perhaps because she had to act if it were to amount to anything. Whatever the cause, she acts, and for that reason the picture is well worth sitting through. It is even possible, while watching the actress, to forget that she's going again through the familiar course of the second or third oldest story in the vault. And, even as the age of the yarn is noted, the actress' direct, on-the-set and nothing-up-the-sleeve performance stands up on its own feet and demands attention. I am heartily in favor of more things like this for her to do. I advise taking the classics off the shelves again and giving her Mr. Hansen to act them with and Mr. Seastrom to act them for. For these Swedish people (aren't they all?) certainly do a great job of picture making when they get going.

The story of this thing is the one about the stagestruck gal whose really truly boy friend goes to jail while she goes to stellar heights under guidance of such a managerial eye as that habitually cast by Lowell Sherman. It is the story of the boy friend who comes back from penal confinement to create a not too spectacular scene, and thereafter it gets a little close to "Camille" but veers off finally to nice, happy domesticity with everything except the knitted shoes for a finish. Yes, that's the yarn, older than the chase in slapstick, but it's dolled up with Seastrom's direction and Garbo's acting until age doesn't matter.

I believe this is the sort of thing for Miss Garbo. I have never been able to steam up about her vampires. I have always felt, in viewing her Gilbertian vehicles, that it just wouldn't happen. Now I'm quite sure of it, for the actress is built for solo numbers. She gives a knockout characterization in "The Divine Woman" and I herewith make request that she be kept in this medium, preferably with Mr. Seastrom alongside.

"HELEN OF TROY"

WELL, girls and boys, it all goes to show that a butcher shouldn't attempt to sell Rembrants and a Hollywood sense of humor is all right in its own backyard. John Erskine's "Private Life of Helen of Troy" has practically nothing at all to do with the picture of like title but the picture is better than it would be if the link were a perfect one. What I mean to say is that Mr. Erskine's satire just couldn't have been conveyed by celluloid but the underlying idea was a great gag for the Hollywoodsmen and how they went for it. The picture is no less than a whale and it may be more.

The myth about this Helen person, as you known, was a bit of choice reading when man remembereth not to the contrary. It seems there were reasons why Helen permitted herself to be draggd off to Troy, but nobody knew just what they were. The battle news covering the ten-year conflict came through pretty straight, but some of the causes of the war were a bit muggy. Perhaps all wars are like that. Anyway, Erskine recently brought forth a set of pretty good reasons, which made interesting reading, and now Hollywood has brought out several that Erskine overlooked. And if these don't make an interesting picture there simply ain't no sich animule.

The people employed to give kick to the film version are real folks. There's Lewis Stone, again the complacent husband and this time in a kimona, and there's George Fawcett, humorously busy this time and let's keep him that way. And there's Maria Corda, whose business it is to look like a gal who could keep armies busy and who, as you can see with less than half an eye, knows her business. And there's such a bunch of sets as I haven't laid eye upon since "Intolerance" and such a row of gags as I haven't lamped since the Chicago theatres replaced Sennett comedies with jazz bands.

Give these Hollywoodsmen a job like this to do, a nice venerable old myth to kid, and the assignment can be foregotten about. The boys and girls get their heads together and out-wise-crack each other until the net result of their industry goes upon the screen a perfect scream. Sometimes I think production of nothing but slapstick should be permitted West of the Hudson. At other times I know it.

Anyway, the gags in this are good, the basic idea is better, the performance is splendid and the picture is a hawl. If Erskine doesn't like it, what matter? Who's Erskine anyway? Sure—a teacher that writes books. What picture did he ever make? But this is a picture—and what a picture. In its behalf I break out my plush-bound suggestion (applied to exactly six pictures every year) that every exhibitor in the business, whether or not he figures on buying the picture, look at the thing in order to keep himself informed about pictures. It's the last and best word in the sorely neglected department of high-hat slapstick. I should like to see (and I believe the traffic would stand) at least one of these each week.

ROGERS ON THE RHINE

I WISH to suggest that anyone who hasn't seen the Rhine River reel of the Will Rogers series do so at the first opportunity. Some of the reels in the Will Rogers series have limped pretty badly, but this one simply refused to be ruined by cutting. I doubt if there's a more interesting scenic on the market.

TO MARSHALL NEILAN

I SHOULD like to suggest to Marshall Neilan, if I may use this space to save myself the trouble of looking up his address, that the pictures have come a long way (or is it the people?) since "Bits of Life" hit the dust and perhaps these young folks one stumbles over in our better and better theatres nowadays are bright enough to get the idea. I fell victim to this hunch the other night while watching "Her Wild Oat," in which the Neilanisms were not lost upon my neighbors to the right nor those to the left. Fundamentally, of course, the "Bits of Life" idea was always perfect.

I have the further idea, now that I'm on the subject, that a good many of the slightly lopsided pictures we're getting are nothing more nor less than the "bits of life" needed for the short-story-magazine production. The guts (pardon, ladies) of "The Last Command" would be an excellent three reels, "French Dressing" would have made a good two reels, "The Valley of the Giants" could have been cut to provide a short sixth reel and "Two Flaming Youths" had about enough stuff in it to make a fairly funny finish. Variety, tone, class, clash and comedy, all in one good picture worth more than the four constituent members, in slightly more than an hour.

I don't want to go more deeply into the matter, but we're making so many long pictures out of short ones that it does seem a good idea to make a few short ones into long ones (which is quite different, if you get the inflection) and I'll lead the cheering for any effort in that direction.

Will Compile News Reel History of Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 31.—Robert LaPiner, assistant to Theodore Hays, public relations director with Finkelstein & Ruben, has been appointed film publicity commissioner of Minneapolis by Mayor George E. Leach, to compile a complete pictorial history of the city. All news reels taken of events in Minneapolis will be placed in sealed containers and made a part of the historical records of the city. LaPiner also will attempt to assemble as many films as are extant of previous news events since the advent of motion pictures, in order that the history may be complete. LaPiner served with Mayor Leach overseas and is a prominent member of the Disabled American Veterans organization, as well of the American Legion.

Morros is accompanied by Maurice Lawrence, who is the Texas district musical director. . . . An unique method of presenting the announcement of the following week's bill was used by the Texas. The regular announcement frame was run in the middle of the news reel, with a break, followed by an opening of the curtains, revealing a huge loud speaker, through which came a voice announcing interesting points of the picture. After the announcement it was stated that scenes would be shown from the picture, and the screen was again lowered and the discontinued trailer again went on the screen. This stunt caused lots of talk.

Canada

OTTAWA.—Quebec exhibitors are facing a three-headed attack. The Roman Catholic archbishop at Montreal has pronounced against Sunday performances. Premier L. A. Taschereau says the government will act against several exhibitors to test the Lord's Day Act. Hon. Jacob Nicol, Provincial treasurer, has given notice of a bill which would bar children under 16 from attending any theatre under any circumstances. . . . Manager J. M. Robertson of the Dominion theatre at Victoria, B. C., is making use of odd pieces of old film to test audiences' memory of scenes from old pictures. . . . Three bandits in Brantford, Ont., who scrawled the name "The Unholy Three" on scraps of paper left at the scene of their depredations, were arrested and two sentenced to two years in prison.

Pacific Northwest

Talbert*, assistant manager for Universal, holds down the key position for a few days in the absence of Manager Jackson. . . . Louie Amacher of M-G-M was away on a short visit to San Francisco, the guest of George A. Hickey, district manager, according to Miss Hasbrock of the same congenial business family. . . . E. T. Collins shortly will open a new house at Arlington, Ore., seating 250. . . . The Seltzer brothers, "Leo and Oscar," soon will be operating both the Alameda and the Nob Hill.

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

CLEAN-UP MAN, THE: Universal Western, with Ted Wells, Peggy O'Day, Henry Hebert, George H. Reed, and Tom Carter. Directed by Ray Taylor. Released February 12. Length 4,232.

TYPE AND THEME: Banning, honest rancher, has the misfortune to have caves on his land offering concealment to thieves. The government sends a woman detective, Jane Brooks, to hunt down the culprits. Banning, of course, is accused. But he proves his innocence in a series of exciting episodes, which also culminate in his winning the feminine sleuth.

COWBOY CAVALIER, THE: Pathe Western, with Buddy Roosevelt, Olive Hasbrouck, Charles K. French, Fanny Midgley, Robert Walker, Bob Clark, and William Ryno. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Released January 29. Length 5,426.

TYPE AND THEME: As Mary is playing "A Perfect Day" on the phonograph, her uncle, whom she had just come to visit, is murdered. The shock deprives her of her memory. Weston, deputy sheriff, takes her to his mother's home where, upon hearing the above tune over the radio, her memory is momentarily restored. With the evidence she is thus able to give, Weston fastens the guilt upon her cousin, Ralph, and perhaps also because of other virtues, he wins the fully recovered Mary's love.

CRASHING THROUGH: Pathe Western, with Jack Padjan, William Eugene, Sally Rand, Buster Gardner, Thomas Santschi, and Duke R. Lee. Directed by Tom Buckingham. Released Length

TYPE AND THEME: Jim, who with his sister, owns a ranch, loses his share in a gambling game to Bart Ramy. Rita importunes her brother to hire Belden, who had rescued her from a runaway, to work on the ranch. Bart mistrusts Belden and gets him accused of cattle rustling. He also involves Jim in a stage coach robbery, in which Jim is killed, Bart getting away with the loot. But dying, Jim had confessed to Rita, who is thus enabled to get Belden released by a posse, which thereupon hunts down Bart.

FRECKLES: F B O romance-drama, with John Fox, Jr., Gene Stratton, Hobart Bosworth, Eulalie Jensen, Billy Scott, and Lafe McKee. Directed by J. Leo Meehan. Released March 21. Length 6,181.

TYPE AND THEME: One of the best-liked novels of the most widely read woman novelist in the world in all time, Gene Stratton-Porter, was the original for this one, and has her daughter in the cast. Practically the entire nation must have read the story, yet it may be well to repeat the theme of it here: Freckles escapes from an orphan asylum, and though one hand is missing, he gets a job as a guard in a lumber camp in Limberlost Forest. He meets The Angel and with her and The Bird Woman, he has adventures with wolves and thieves. As the thieves are captured, a tree falls on him and he is able to recover only when, at the hospital, The Angel shows that she returns his love.

FOUR-FLUSHERS, THE: Universal farce-comedy with George Lewis, Marian Nixon, Eddie Phillips, Churchill Ross, Jimmy Aye, Burr McIntosh, Otto Hoffman, Wilfred North, Hayden Stevenson, and Patricia Carron. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Released January 8. Length 6,193.

TYPE AND THEME: Andy, a shoe clerk, has invented an arch support which he hopes will make him rich. One day he meets June. When later his employer's son betattles him in front of her, he resigns. An uncle puts a fortune in trust for him at a bank. Andy is surprised to find that he can borrow $10,000. The first thing he does with his new ear is to crash into his uncle's machine. Uncle cancels the trust, but the bank can't recall the loan for 99 days. Andy starts a shoe store and markets his arch support. With June's help he sells the invention. They decide to enjoy the promised wealth together.

LAW OF THE RANGE, THE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Western, with Tim McCoy, Joan Crawford, Rex Lease, Bodil Rosing, and Tenen Holtz. Directed by William Nigh. Released Length 5,395.

TYPE AND THEME: Brother love is put to the test in this one. But Death works the solution. Two brothers, Jim and Bill, each have a Texas "lone star" tattooed on the chest when boys. Shortly afterward Bill is kidnapped by Indians. Twenty years later, following the hold-up of a stage coach, Jim, now a ranger, is accused of robbery. Betty Dallas makes the charge, and Jim, to acquit himself, hunts "the Solitaire Kid," suspecting him to be the true culprit. He wounds the "Kid" and is shocked to find on him the lone star. Then death takes Bill out of his hands.

MARRY THE GIRL: Sterling drama, with Barbara Bedford, Robert Ellis, Florence Turner, Al Roscoe, Paul Weigel, Freddie Fredericks, and DeWitt Jennings. Directed by Philip Rosen. Released March 1. Length

TYPE AND THEME: The title sounds prankish. The story (which seems very much like one worth telling) is serious. Martin Wayland has a son, Harry, whom he falsely accuses of forgery on evidence submitted by the true forger, Cliff, son of Wayland's housekeeper, Mrs. Lawson. Harry leaves and is reported lost in the war. Meanwhile, Cliff and his mother seek to acquire the old man's fortune, and to this end, dupe Elinor, a widow with a small son, to aid them by posing as Harry's wife, presenting Sonny as his child. Elinor, with her loveliness, and Sonny, with his antics, really bring joy into the old man's life. Suddenly Harry appears and learning of the situation, swears the butler to secrecy and follows Elinor. He overhears Cliff's proposal of marriage to Elinor, understands, and ultimately thrashing Cliff into confessing, induces Elinor to become his wife in fact.

NIGHT FLYER, THE: Pathe melodrama, with William Boyd, Jobyna Ralston, Philo McCullough, Ann Schaeffer, DeWitt Jennings, John Milerta, and Robert Dudley. Directed by Walter Lang. Released Length

TYPE AND THEME: Old "99" takes the mail when the Express is derailed and making the run in record time, wins the contract. Jimmy is to be engineer of the battered locomotive if he proves his worth and on that prospect he bases his love for Kate's love. But Kate favors Bat, who is the best engineer on the road and the one to run the train which is to make the speed test demanded of the government before awarding the mail contract. Having been got drunk by cowboys the night of Kate's birthday party, Jimmy is disqualified with both Kate and the road. Then the Express pulls in with the fireman drunk. Jimmy is put aboard. Bat drives the train wildly. It leaves the rails. On a track alongside stands old "99." Unhart, Jimmy has the mail transferred and jumping into the cab, takes the mail to the end of the line in record time. Kate and a promotion are his reward.

PINTO KID, THE: F B O Western, with Buzz Barton, Frank Rice, James Welsh, Gloria Lee, Milburne Moranti, Hugh Trevor, William Patton and Walter Shumway. Directed by Louis King. Released April 29. Length

TYPE AND THEME: Red and Hank rescue Janet from a quicksand bed and are rewarded by employment on her father's ranch. Janet, they learn, loves Dan, son of her father's sworn enemy. They also learn that an Eastern group seeks to buy the land of both Janet's father and Dan's. To force the sale, the foreman and men are engaged to kidnap Janet and Dan. Red and Hank rescue them, the feud is ended, and Red and Hank sally forth presumably to new adventures.

SHARP SHOOTERS: Fox comedy-drama, with George O'Brien, Lois Moran, Noah Young, Tom Dugan, William Demarest, Gwen Lee, and Joseph Swickard. Directed by J. G. Blystone. Released January 15. Length

TYPE AND THEME: The way of a gob with a woman. Or of this gob, anyway. He meets her in Morocco, in a dive, where even to him she seems out of place. Defending her from a ruffian, he appropriates her himself, while his buddies, Tom and Jerry, look on dubiously. She is just another girl to George, but to Lorette, he is everything. His careless "See you in New York," when leaving the port, has an unexpected sequel in his finding her in a dance hall in that city. She had been rescued by Murdock, bootlegger, after escaping from the ship when her passport was missing. Tom and Jerry hate to see George breaking her heart, so they get the whole shipful of gobs to force him to marry Lorette. They take a flat, but George is sullen. Then one day he finds Lorette gone. She is back at Murdock's. George notes his reaction. It means he loves her. Does he get her out of Murdock's hands? Why, the gobs just clean up the place.

SKY HIGH SAUNDERS: Universal melodrama, with Al Wilson, Elsie Tarran, Bud Osborne, Frank Rice, Frank Tomick, Billy Jones, and Art Goebel. Directed by Bruce Mitchell. Released November 8. Length 4,393.

TYPE AND THEME: Thrillers must have their climactic chases and fights. Here they are—but in the air! What precedes is, relatively, too tame to tell. However—Sky High Saunders seeks his twin brother, Michael, and thus comes into contact with Delatour, who heads a gang of smugglers committing their felonies by airplane. Delatour loves Helen, but she loves Michael. One day he forces Delatour's plane down . . . then finds it is Michael's. Michael dies in his arms. Sky High now poses as Michael and learning that a big "job" is contemplated, goes to the gang's rendezvous. Then the climax—a race through the air, with Helen captive in Delatour's plane and Sky High in pursuit—bombs cast to earth—a fight on the wing of a plane. The thrills end with Helen and Sky High in each other's arms.

WALLFLOWERS: F B O drama, with Hugh Trevor, Mabel Julienne Scott, Jean Arthur, Charles Stevenson, Lola Todd, Mrs. Temple Pigott, Crauford Kent, and Reginald Simpson. Directed by J. Leo Meehan. Released February 16. Length

TYPE AND THEME: It would seem that Temple Bailey, the author of this tale, is to be exploited more than the cast. This, in theme, is her story: The wallflowers are sisters, Doady and Sandra of Windytop, Va. Doady wants to be rich, but Sandra will be happy with only happiness, if she can find it. They go to Washington in the height of the social season, where Sandra falls in love with Rufus, and he with her. But if he marries Sandra, his father's fortune will go to his step-mother, whom he hates. Meanwhile, Doady has fallen in love with Gale, poor but proud. She decides to wed Gale about the time that Rufus decides he can't get along without Sandra. And the two girls decide that they have won the essentials to their happiness. F

UNDER THE TONTO RIM: Paramount Western, with Richard Arlen, Alfred Allen, Mary Brian, Jack Luden, Harry T. Morey, William Franey, Harry Todd, and Bruce Gordon, and Jack Byron. Directed by Herman Raymaker. Released February 4. Length 5,424.

TYPE AND THEME: The Tonto Rim is a steep mountain range in Arizona. In 1880 the discovery of gold makes Tonto Basin seethe with activity. Denmeade and his son, Ed, lay out a claim, and it is while having it recorded that Ed meets Lucy, sister of Bud, government agent. Denmeade gambles with Bud and Sprall, and winning, is killed by Sprall. But Sprall convinces Bud that it was the latter's shot that killed Denmeade and forces Bud to renege the claim to him. Ed had heard his father say that "the man who shuffles with one hand killed me," and though Bud confesses the crime, Ed knows Sprall is the murderer. Sprall gets a gang of claim jumpers, Ed organizes Vigilantes, and in the war that follows Bud kills Sprall but is himself killed. Bud and Lucy are affianced.

Your Classified Ad Will Do the Work!

Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organists all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and also in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 10c per word. See this week's classified page. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.

Incorporated in this department of Moving Picture World is the Exhibitors Herald department, "Available Attractions."

The key to abbreviations used in denoting the type of picture:

A Couple o' Smiles

Which came first—the smile of Nathan Yamins (left) or his theatres, is irrelevant. The point is, he now has both, owning the Rialto, Capital, Bijou, Park Strand, Empire, and Academy at Fall River, Mass. The other smile (contagious, isn't it?) belongs to Myron Shellman of the Uptown, Providence, R. I. (Herald-World photos.)

Three Suits Close Star Theatre, Lafayette, Ind.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 31.—One of the theatres of Lafayette, Ind., the Star, has closed its doors, suspending operations after three suits were filed in Circuit Court here against the theatre by Granville H. Hull, Grace H. Royse and Edith H. Luten, owners of the building. One suit is against Joseph Hemerling, manager, asking damages for his failure to vacate the building December 1, as ordered by the plaintiffs. Another is against Fred Thieme, as surety for Hemerling, asking judgment for rent, and a third suit is against Hemerling to recover on a note for $500.

Will Display Film Trade in World Exposition at The Hague This Spring

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

THE HAGUE, Jan. 31.—An international exhibition announced for the purpose of giving a comprehensive review of cinematography in all its phases, will be held under the auspices of the national film association of Holland, at the famous exhibition hall, Groote Koninklijke Bazar, here from April 14 to May 15.

The exhibits will be divided into eight classes, dramatic, cultural, historic, technical, accessory, cinematographic, advertising, and amusement. The executive committee declares that the exposition will be only for the purpose of demonstrating the various departments of the film industry and that as much of the receipts as possible will be turned over to the Dutch Red Cross.

Salt Lake City Gets New Suburban Theatre

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 31.—When the Tower theatre opened last week, a new and attractive house was added to the city's group of suburban theatres. The theatre is complete in every way and was built by Earl D. Smith, manager of the local branch of the National Theatre Supply company, at a cost of $40,000.

Lauder and Burkan Are Made Board Directors

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

New Picture Company Formed in Switzerland

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—A new motion picture company has been registered in Berne, Switzerland, and Berlin, Germany, reports Commercial Attache Charles E. Lyon, Berne, to the Department of Commerce. This is said to be another attempt to establish a Swiss film industry, he advises.

Fete John Stahl's Birthday

HOLLYWOOD—A surprise birthday party was given to John M. Stahl, of Tiffany-Stahl. A birthday cake was prepared holding 38 candles. The party was held in one of the large offices of the Tiffany-Stahl studios.

PRESS SHEETS

BABY MINE (M-G-M comedy): If you have room and proper assistance announce that you will take care of all babies over a specified age, while their mothers attend the show. Put a sign in front of the show announcing, "Park your baby here while you see 'Baby Mine.'" . . . From the back files of local newspapers or from a hospital or city records, secure the names of babies born a month or more previous to your showing of "Baby Mine." Announce on a slide or in the lobby that certain lucky names will be selected from their numbers and will be announced on the screen, these entitling the mothers to see "Baby Mine" free. . . . Have a contest and select the prettiest baby, offering a prize for the same. . . . Arrange with your milk dealer to have your ad of "Baby Mine" printed on the cap of the bottle.

CHICAGO AFTER MIDNIGHT (FBO melodrama): Posters are suggested as follows: "Is Chicago the modern Babylonia? Do its shrill, discordant noises, the mighty conflicts of its gat-swinging gangsters, the thundering challenges of its blue-coated guardians, the twinkling toes of midnight goddesses of love, represent the downfall of a mighty civilization, or the rebirth of a new? See 'Chicago After Midnight at the theatre (date).'" Offer a prize for the best essay on "Chicago," also give free tickets for the best essay on "Chicago's Downfall," or, "What Is the Matter With Chicago?"

CLEAN-UP MAN, THE (Universal melodrama): Arrange for newspaper to send a staff cameraman about the city a week in advance of the playdate, to take photographs of different crowds of people. Then draw a ring about a certain group of people in the photo. All residents of the town who find themselves within the ringed portion of these crowd photos, published daily in the newspaper, will be entitled to a free ticket to see "The Clean-Up Man." Specify in your announcements that residents who find themselves in the photos must bring a copy of the paper to the newspaper office in order to get their free pass. Arrange for the cameraman to take a great many of his photos around the vicinity of your theatre, including occasional shots of the crowds as they pass out from the performances.

FANGS OF THE WILD (FBO melodrama): Give a dog contest offering prizes for the dogs looking most like Ranger. Also give a prize for the best looking dog and the funniest looking dog. People can be the judges by their applause. Trick dogs can also be taken into consideration. Have a boy and a dog parade the town with a sign as follows, "Man's Truest Friend—see him at the theatre (Date).'" Give a prize for the best essay on "Why is a dog your best friend?" or "What do people mean by saying 'He leads a dogs life'?" Arrange with the newspapers to print the picture of the dog and owner. Posters can be made with the following, "Why is a dog your best friend? see at the theatre (Date)."

FRECKLES (FBO drama): Have signs posted around town with the following: "Is America still the land of opportunity for the employe of honesty, loyalty and grin? See 'Freckles' at the theatre (Date).'" Also have these posters placed in factories. A "Freckle Contest" for boys with the help of a newspaper is a suggestion. On a special night at the theatre have all the freckled youngsters appear. From these choose about ten with the most freckles and present them on the stage. Have the audience decide the winners by its applause. Present a prize to the winner and arrange for him to have his picture in the local paper. The others can be given passes for other performances.

GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES (Paramount comedy): Tie-up with your local newspaper to announce that your theatre is going to run a baby contest. Set an age limit at two years and allowing only blonde babies to enter the contest. Let your patrons be the judges by their applause. Arrange with a newspaper to print the picture of the winner. Money can be given for the prizes or merchants can give dollars in clothing. Also you might arrange with the bank to give the winner a savings account with five or ten dollars as the first deposit. . . . You can give a similar contest for the older girls and offer prizes as rewards for the best-looking. Poster suggestions are as follows: "Do gentlemen prefer blondes? See at the theatre (Date)," or, "Why do gentlemen prefer blondes? See at the theatre (Date)."

NIGHT FLYER, THE (Pathe melodrama): Rig up an automobile to resemble a locomotive, such as was in use in the early nineties, and label it "The Night Flyer." Drive slowly through your streets and have the driver ring the bell at regular intervals. After the parade, station the auto in front of your theatre. Arrange your lobby to resemble a station waiting room, with benches on the side on which couples of varying ages and more or less queerly attired might be seated. . . . Have posters printed with, "Stop and Look! 'The Night Flyer' is coming! to the theatre (Dates).'" . . . Have your tickets printed like railroad tickets, with the following, "Good for one trip to the theatre to see 'The Night Flyer' when presented with cents." Free tickets can be given for the best essay on "How to Reduce Railroad Accidents to a Minimum."

PINTO KID, THE (FBO Western): A suggestion for a knot tying contest with the assistance of your town's scout leader is as follows: Offer a prize for the best diamond hitch knot, which is the one used in "The Pinto Kid." A prize may be given to the best dressed cowboy or to the best lassoer. Get a display in a hardware store. Tie the knot with various kinds of rope handled by the firm. The effect could be heightened by including a worn slingshot, riding equipment and other cowboy regalia in the display, along with a few stills of "The Pinto Kid."

Hire a freckle face boy to parade the town with a sign with the following: "See the freckled fury of the saddle in 'The Pinto Kid,' to be shown at the theatre (Date).'" A freckle contest can be given and let the audience be the judge by its applause.

PIONEER SCOUT, THE (Paramount Western): Obtain a white horse, one which resembles Silver King, and clothe a rider after the manner of a scout in the frontier days. Attach a small sign on the rider's back or on the horse saying, "See Fred Thomson at the theatre in 'The Pioneer Scout.'" . . . Offer a prize for the person dressed best like the pioneer. . . . Have posters printed with, "See how a pioneer lives at the theatre (Date)."

RED RIDERS OF CANADA (FBO Melodrama): Hire a couple of mounted policemen to ride through the town attired as Royal Mounted Police in red coats and black trousers with yellow stripes as per the regulation uniform of this organization. The horse can be blanketed with banners reading, "Red Riders of Canada will be at the theatre (Date).'" "Red Lips—Red Blood—Red Coats!" The slogan of the Royal Mounted Police of Canada is, "They Always Get Their Man." Offer a prize to the woman who writes the best letter telling how she got her man.

SHARP SHOOTERS (Fox Comedy-Drama): Newspaper ads may offer prizes in a contest for the correct decoding of messages sent by the navy. Suggest contest as follows: "There will be four messages sent from this theatre on (Day) before the showing of 'Sharp Shooters.'" The hours of these messages will be The first ten persons decoding the messages will receive prizes." To get an additional news story give an eleventh prize to some man who has a string of medals. Of course his photograph would help. Simple messages of the U. S. Navy should be used. . . . If you have a navy band in your town invite it to play at the showing of the picture. If you have a boys' organization arrange for it to have a special drill in front of the theatre or on the stage. Free admission can be given for the service.

WALLFLOWERS (FBO Drama): Tie up with your local newspaper or announce on your screen that you are going to run a "Pet Cat Contest" while "Wallflowers" is being shown. In this particular picture a cat takes a part. The contest can be limited to cats belonging to children under 12 years of age, or you can make it open to any cat in town. Free passes to other performances can be given to the lucky owners of the winning cats. Have the owners of the cats with their pets on the stage and let some prominent person pick the winners. . . . Tie up with ballrooms to stage a contest for the best looking girl who attends each dance and have them appear at your theatre during the showing of the picture. Arrange with newspapers to take photos of the best and publish them.

I'm So Thrilled!

When my friend, Mr. Eisman, who is educating me, said I might come to (name of town), I was thrilled! I think seeing new towns and faces is so stimulating. I mean a girl meets such nice gentlemen, for instance, who are kind to her. I met so many in London and Paris, as you know if you have read about me in the book "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." But American gentlemen are nicest. Now I am in the moving pictures and I'm coming to (name of town)!

FIRST DAY

Dorothy's Coming Too!

"If you're going to (name of town)", my girl friend, Dorothy, said, "I'm going to protect you." For a brunette, Dorothy has quite good ideas. She is a little unrefined at times, but I know you will like her.

RIALTO Starts Tomorrow

THIRD DAY

I Want To Meet All You Nice People!

(Name of town) is grand. Dorothy and I have made some perfectly wonderful acquaintances. We want to get to know you all intimately. We will be at the (name of theatre) all next week. Please come!

"GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES"

RIALTO Opens Today!

FOURTH DAY

LET LORELEI TEASE 'EM IN HER OWN WORDS. Four days of newspaper ads for Paramount's "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," which was released last Saturday. A fictitious autobiography, the novel by Anita Loos, of which the picture is an adaptation, owed its amazing success not only to the flapper-heroine's frank observations, but to her naive manner of expressing them as well. The copy above adopts this unique style faithfully, and inasmuch as the author unexpectedly aroused the curiosity, and soon the laughter, of this great nation with Lorelei's quaint phrases, ads built on the same pattern should have a similar appeal. The halftones of the star, Ruth Taylor, are of newsprint screen and are available at all Paramount exchanges. Each of the models shown above was prepared for a space two columns wide, by five inches.

LOOK TEMPTING? WELL, THESE PICTURES ARE A LITTLE EXPLOITATION FOR ALEXANDRIA, MINN., where H. J. Longaker of the State theatre, promises "a big golf tournament, a big fish fry, boating, driving, and refreshments," to all of the Herald-World exhibitor family who will convene under his auspices for pleasure and problem-swapping next summer. Look at that lake! Feel yourself getting interested? Now view those—er—well, H. J. raves about the bullheads up there, so maybe these are what he means. Anyway, he says he caught this herd in an hour (Central Standard Time). And now are you slipping a little? Then gaze upon the golf course. Imagine yourself driving a long one, while Crockett and Tragsdorf, for example, are trying to get out of the rough! Got the image? All right, now drop H. J. a line, via the Herald-World if you like, and tell him you are strong for a big round-up at his place next summer.

LETTERS From Readers

See "T. O. Service"

UNION CITY, IND.—TO THE EDITOR: Here I am sticking in again. If it were not to save someone from getting the wrong impression of "The Gateway of the Moon" I would not have sent this. I played it January 15-16 and had one of the best, or largest attendance for some time. "Service Talks" seems to think it is punk. The print I had was of the South American jungle instead of the African.

And anyone that can sit through a picture and see Dolores Del Rio and not enjoy it must have been up the night before. I will venture a prediction that when reports come in that most of them report a draw of average business and please the average theatregoer, as a program picture.

Also, I predict that "The Valley of Giants" will prove good. I agree that "Seventh Heaven" is one of the best pictures ever made. "Loves of Carmen" good, but did not play to as many people as "The Gateway of the Moon."

I enjoy reading "Service Talks" very much but I want him to go and see "The Gateway of the Moon" again, as I have been informed that he is a good natured, human fellow. I hope he will review it again as an entertainment picture instead of from a critical standpoint.—R. S. WENGER, Miami theatre, Union City, Ind.

One Domestic Film to 20 Alien, Decree in Hungary

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A new Hungarian film decree, according to the department of commerce, provides that enterprises importing 20 films annually averaging 1,500 meters each are obliged to produce or cause the production in Hungary of one film of similar size for each 20 foreign films, or to pay a special tax of 20 pengoes per meter for foreign films censored, in addition to the existing taxes.

The obligation for film production may eventually be extended to enterprises importing less than 20 films annually, it is reported in Vienna.

Bruce Anderson Ran Theatre at 17

You "youngest exhibitors," move over and make room for a candidate for the title "magna cum laude," if that happens to mean anything. Anyway, Bruce Anderson, who operates Anderson's Victory theatre at Carthage, Texas, mounts the platform with a real record. We'll let him tell about it himself:

"After looking over the writeups you have been giving a number of old veteran showmen who are laying claim to the 'youngest exhibitor' role, I think it's time for you to make way for at least one 'young' exhibitor.

"At 17 I was owner, manager, exploitation expert, operator, musician and janitor of the old Texan theatre in Carthage (in the capacity of musician I had to work a couple of hours every morning on an old Wurlitzer organ to make it play for the afternoon show). That was back in 1919. Now, at 26, I have been in the game for nine years.

"Kindly mail me the celluloid carbon-saver at your earliest convenience."

What do you say, exhibitors? Does Anderson win the tessellated teething-ring?

Fire Destroys Theatre

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 31.—Fire destroyed the picture show at Dowell, Ill., on January 10. The show was closed. It formerly was operated by Joe Ogilini of Dowell. Fire apparatus from Duquoin, Elkhville and Carbondale, Ill., kept the fire from spreading.

Tried for Killings, Bill Forgets Films

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

MT. STERLING, KY., Jan. 31.—Represented by an attorney, Kaiser Bill, accused of sheep killing, will make the final fight for his life here in the Montgomery Circuit court. While preparations for the trial are being made, film and vaudeville contracts are lying unnoticed in Kaiser Bill's home. A news reel will record the court proceedings. Bill is a German police dog.

$375,000 Called for in 2 Ohio Theatre Projects

COLUMBUS, Jan. 31.—The J. Real Neth Amusement Company, successor to the James Theatre Enterprises of Columbus, will soon take bids on a $200,000 theatre building to be erected at the corner of West Broad street and Ogden avenue, on a site secured by William M. James before he relinquished control in the chain. Architect C. Howard Crane of Detroit, and Harry C. Holbrook of Columbus are associated in the project. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,320. Bids on the construction, which will cost in excess of $200,000, will be invited soon.

The Midland Theatres Company, of Newark, O., will soon start the erection of a new motion picture theatre. The cost is estimated at $175,000 and will have 1,600 seating capacity. G. E. Hayward is secretary of the theatre company.

Stanley Company Will Erect $600,000 House

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 31.—A $600,000 picture theatre will be built in East Liberty by the Stanley Company of America. The Pen Center Corporation, holding company for the Stanley company, has leased an important business location in East Liberty for the erection of a modern business block.

Anthony Jim of Pittsburgh has added four more houses to his growing string of amusement places. The cornerstone of Mike Mark's million dollar Colonel Drake theatre was laid last week in Oil City with appropriate ceremonies.

Incorporated in this original exhibitors report department of Exhibitors Herald, which was established October 14, 1916, is the Moving Picture World department, "Straight from the Shoulder Reports."

F B O

BREED OF COURAGE: Ranger—23%. January 13. A good dog picture. Seemed to please generally. Five reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

BREED OF THE SEA: Special cast—Another good one for F B O. I class this one as extra good. It has a fine story and good acting also good power aided by the writer, Peter B. Kyne.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

BREED OF THE SEA: Special cast—November 30. Good. Sea scenes wonderful. Stars do good work. Seven reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

THE COWARD: Warner Baxter—16%. January 9. There is one impossible scene in this picture. Outside of that it is good and pleased those who came. Six reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

SPLITTING THE BREEZE: Tom Tyler—25%. January 14. A good action program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

LEGIONNAIRES IN PARIS: Special cast—A comedy augmented by the legion convention and might go over if you could get enough legion men out to see the thing. I tried to put it over by doing a large advertising campaign to the masses and got an awful jolt. If you can work with the American Legion you should be able to put this over. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

ARIZONA NIGHTS: Fred Thomson—January 14. This is the last of the Thomson pictures released by F B O. We have played them all, and in looking over our records we find that this star has made for us a nice little sum of money, also that we have pleased our patrons by showing his pictures. We are just as proud of this as we are of the financial part. Fred Thomson's popularity here has increased since the very first of his pictures we screened. A few of our patrons were in the writer's office recently and said they had heard that this star had changed companies, and that we would probably not use him after this picture. We told them that it was all up to Paramount whether we would use him or not. If they want to make us pay more than we are now paying we will have to let him go by.—J. S. Landry, Columbia theatre, Morganza, Ia.—Small town patronage.

SHANGHAIED: Patsy Ruth Miller—Don't play it. Too much booze, fighting and wild and wooley women in the San Francisco Honkey Tonks. If you play it be sure to invite the preachers then you will have a lot of time to go fishing because the reformers will probably close your theatre.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Special cast—Here is a melodrama with plenty of action and thrills. It is just what the title says, story is good. The women will not like it because of the shooting and killing, but the chewers and spitters will eat it

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given picture in report).

up.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Special cast—This gave the best satisfaction of any picture I have run for a long time. Everyone was well pleased and told me so. You can't make a mistake on this one. Good paper and drew best crowd for some time. Eight reels.—F. R. Meierbachtol, Elysian theatre, Elysian, Minn.—General patronage.

NOT FOR PUBLICATION: Special cast—A pretty weak story, title means nothing, leave it alone if you have not already bought it.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

SOUTH SEA LOVE: Patsy Ruth Miller—The further into releases you get with F B O product the more terrible they get, and this is worster and' worserin. Six reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE MAGIC GARDEN: Special cast—One of the nicest little pictures it was our pleasure to show in the last six months. Nothing big, but wholesome and interesting.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE MAGIC GARDEN: Special cast—January 6. Seemed to please my patrons. It does not have the usual modern touch of so many pictures, but it is the story of two children separated in childhood who later meet in the Magic Garden. The name and author are the chief things that put the picture over.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE CHEROKEE KID: Tom Tyler—January 21. An excellent Western. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Poali, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE OUTLAW DOG: Special cast—Just a fair dog picture. Some of my patrons complimented it, a few kicked about it.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THE COWARD: Special cast—Junk, nothing to it. Leave it alone.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

CLANCY'S KOSHER WEDDING: George Sidney—A Jew-Irish picture that is above program average. It will get the laughs and please them. The gags are good though one or two of them are a little old. The picture is clean.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

LADDIE: Special cast—Another from the pen of Gene Stratton Porter that registered fine for us. It is a pleasure to show this type of picture. Have only highest of praise for it.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

UNEASY PAYMENTS: Alberta Vaughn—A very good little comedy that pleased. Nothing big but kept my patrons in chuckling mood throughout.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

BREED OF COURAGE: Special cast—This went over very good with the crowd, though I thought the story was rather weak and overworked in other dog pictures.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

First National

ROSE OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Special cast—99%. December 26. Some liked it, others didn't. About 50-50 I suppose. Fine business account holiday season. Personally thought it very good. Eight reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

ROSE OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Special cast—January 15-16. Not the Super-special First National would lead you to believe but a good program picture of the early Spanish California days. This fellow Gilbert Roland and another one Don Alvero who played in 'Breakfast at Sunrise' are two Spanish Bull fighters who can go back home for all I care. Six reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

ROSE OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Mary Astor—A beautiful picture well produced. Does not please the Western fans and the other kind stay because they think it is Western. Did not draw for me.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Reports indented and printed in bold face are those contributed by members of Van's Gang, who reported to "Straight from the Shoulder Reports" in Moving Picture World prior to the merger.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—65%. December 31. Just a good program picture. Had a midnight show and had a good attendance. All young people. Had the coldest night in forty-one years. Seven reels.—Robert K. Yancy, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—50%. Very poor college picture. We ran this the same week as Tiffany's "College Days" and practically ruined business for the next week. It is a crime to waste this star on such junk. Seven reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

IT MUST BE LOVE: Colleen Moore—A most ordinary picture. Colleen Moore not appreciated in this town. Good acting but something lacking, lost money on this picture. Seven reels.—M. Mulliha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

THE VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Milton Sills—96%. December 31. A knockout from every standpoint. One of the most satisfactory pictures we have ever played. Cannot understand why T. O. Service didn't see it this way, because it has about everything one looks for in an outdoor story. Also notice Photoplay listed it as one of the six best of the month. Ehl What, T. O.? Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

HARD BOILED HAGGERTY: Milton Sills—90%. January 14. This would have been a good picture if they had left the filth out. It's the dirtiest picture we ever ran and it's so unnecessary to have them like that. Eight reels.—Robert K. Yancy, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

FRAMED: Milton Sills—20%. January 12. A good muddy story. This star always good.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

FRAMED: Milton Sills—January 1. Dark house due to weather conditions.—J. S. Landry, Columbia theatre, Morganza, La.—Small town patronage.

FRAMED: Milton Sills—Just a fair show. Acting good but theme did not appeal.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE: Ben Lyon—89%. Here is a very good comedy that will be sure to please any crowd. It is by far the best from Ben Lyon for some time. Seven reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—25%. January 13. A good program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—Good comedy. Will please.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—This is the best and about the first good picture that Hines has made since he has been with First National. It kept the house laughing most of the time, however there are two scenes that are rather smutty and entirely unnecessary. Cut them out if you have a high brow audience.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—January 16. A dandy comedy worth advertising to the limit, for it will sure please. Almost one reel of a banquet scene is in technicolor. Step on it and make some money. The title did not draw, so you will have to use plenty of advertising.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

SEE YOU IN JAIL: Jack Mulhall—45%. This is an average program picture. Cold weather kept them away. Seven reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

ORCHIDS AND ERMINE: Colleen Moore—80%. January 6-7. The picture as good as all of Colleen's are but we get the dimmest, poorest prints out of St. Louis that we ever got from any one. Every one is alike. Paramount's come out on the screen like sunlight. Had a basketball game and lodge for opposition the first night. Good crowd the second. Seven reels.—Robert K. Yancy, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

ORCHIDS AND ERMINE: Jack Mulhall—December 25-26. Jack Mulhall, you're a lucky dog to have Colleen roll those eyes of hers at you! Lucky—I'll say you're lucky. Gosh, Jack, confidentially don't you need a fellow to double for you? I can come right down, Jack, and when the orchestra is playing "Let Me Call you Sweetheart" and Colleen is—but great scott this is a report. I can just hear O'Hara saying "Of all the slush!" Well, love is an awful thing, Jenkins has found it out and named his car three times, excuse me, the play, yes, it is fine, not big, not showy, but very pleasing. Fine cast. Gwen Lee as the wise young sales lady is mighty fine. Glad to see that Colleen isn't afraid to have excellent feminine support in her plays, some actresses want only dummies so as to show up the better by contrast.—Phillip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

ORCHIDS AND ERMINE: Colleen Moore—A satisfactory production. Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THE STRONG MAN: Special cast—25%. The Strong Man developed a glass arm and the game was over before it started. Harry, as a drawing card you are a false alarm. The only thing strong about this was the price asked. Oh yes, quite a few liked it but, we are in business for profit. We have one more of yours, Harry, and then farewell for ever.—Phillip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: Alec B. Francis—32%. January 2-3. A great picture from every angle. Alec B. Francis gives one of the finest performances I have ever seen, and he should have been featured instead of Molly O'Day, who looked more like an extra than the star. Played during coldest weather of the last twelve years, therefore the small percentage rating. Bringing back later for another run. Nine reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: Alec Francis—January 5-6. A natural! Follows the book fairly good. From a box-office standpoint it's there.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY: Maria Corda—You will be amazed at the tremendous amount of money that has been spent on this production. I am not so sure but what the picture would have given more satisfaction if it had been historical instead of hysterical. I have this to say regarding Maria Corda, she does not screen well and does not begin to measure up to the job given her in this magnificent production. It is unexplainable as to why some star that could have done the job did not get to. Lewis Stone, George Fawcett are their usual best. I am sure this picture will have tremendous box office pull everywhere. Eight reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE TENDER HOUR: Billie Dove—January 26. Billie Dove is rapidly gaining favor and pleases my patrons. This picture is good and the photography is excellent. We are glad to see First National using plenty of close-ups in such a picture as this.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

SMILE, BROTHER, SMILE: Jack Mulhall—This is a dandy comedy for the small towns. Everybody pleased.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE STOLEN BRIDE: Billie Dove—A very elaborate picture with beautiful settings and a beautiful star. Business was not so good but no fault of the picture.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE SUNSET DERBY: Special cast—A pretty weak race horse story, it will get by but that is about all. The picture just seems to lack something, it runs along for about an hour and then stops. Write your own ticket.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

Irvin S. Cobb once wrote a little book entitled "Speaking of Operations" and we have had the pleasure of reading this book several times with increasing interest, but that isn't what we started out to write about. What we really had in mind was "Speaking of Advertising."

Occasionally one runs across an advertisement that compels attention and conveys an impression that there is behind it an element of brains not usually found among those who carry the hod. You note that we said "Occasionally." For fear we will be unable to make ourself clear by a recital of our impressions we will refer you to pages 3, 4 and 5 of the HERALD-WORLD of January 21, wherein you will find an advertisement of "GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES." We hope you will all turn to these pages and read this advertisement, and if you do you will note the absence of a long list of superlatives that are so common with ad writers who missed their calling, and who should be drawing $18 per in the laundry.

By reference to this advertisement you will note that there is no claim that it will "Knock 'em dead," or that it has run continuously for 60 consecutive weeks at "Roxy's" at $2.50 top; that it's the "Sensation of the 20th Century," or that "Critics proclaim it the outstanding picture of all time," etc., etc., and then some, but if by its simple and direct appeal and the inserts with intelligent sub-titles, it doesn't give you the itch (we don't mean the seven year variety we used to have when we were kids that required sulphur and lard to eradicate) but the itch to see the picture, then we will agree to vote any ticket you suggest so long as our old friend Charley Dawes heads the ticket. That's fair enough isn't it? We specify "Charley" because Charley is an ex-Nebraskan and comes out here every fall and shoots ducks in our favorite duck marsh.

We don't know what "GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES" looks like or whether it is worth a nickle or not, but if it will bear out the impression we gather of it from reading the advertising on pages 3, 4 and 5 we are going to see it if we have to run Marie 20 miles on four flats. Paramount ought to send us a nice big picture of Miss Ruth Taylor (Lorelie) for this, which they probably won't do.

Again "Speaking of Advertising" we wish to direct your attention to the cover ad of M-G-M of the same issue, wherein this caption is used, "WE CAN AFFORD TO GET GOOD AND BOILED. BUSINESS IS GREAT," and wherein two gentlemen are shown in the act of openly violating the Volstead Act. Possibly they are pouring "Tea for Two" out of the decanter, in which case they are deceiving the public, but we hardly see how they could get "GOOD AND BOILED" on a beverage of this kind, but on the other hand if they are dealing with Pork Center's favorite beverage we strenuously object to it in the absence of an invitation to "set in." Without proof to the contrary, we are not inclined to the belief that the smiles on these gentlemen's faces are induced by thoughts of Lake Michigan water tinctured with Japan Imperial. The gentleman with the decanter is evidently trying to prove that "Business is (hic) good," while his companion seems to be wondering if possibly it had not been a little too good. The thought that is engendered in our mind by this picture is, what will the exhibitors think about it. If their business has been the same as indicated by this picture then it's a cinch that they have been holding out on us when we called, and that has got to be stopped.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Ever since we returned from visiting Fishy Phil last fall, the Rabbi has been broadcasting certain happenings that were supposed to be secrets between friends, and as soon as we learned of it on our arrival home we drove over to Elgin with a full determination of relieving that community of an undesirable citizen but we found him in the booth with a couple of fellows from Omaha equipping his machines with Low Intensity Arcs and decided

An asparagus stalk growing in our wife's back yard at Tucson, Ariz. The stalk is said to be 265 years old and you can guess on the age of the distinguished looking gentleman standing beside it if you want to, but, it's none o' yourdarnbusiness. This picture was taken in the dark of the moon on the west side of the highway about half way between Christmas and New Years. Look 'er over girls and then write us when to call.—J. C. J.

but proves good entertainment. Stone is a finished actor and Miss Nilsson never fails to improve any picture in which she may be cast. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—January 8. Like all her previous pictures, one hundred (100) per cent entertainment. Our patrons did not fail to tell us this, and they were not few. The writer's wife cares very little for pictures, and very often takes a nap during the screening. However, she saw this to the end and commented on it very highly. Brothers, it is a fine little picture. You are always thinking that something will happen, which never happens. If this fails to amuse your patrons there is certainly something the matter with them and they should consult their doctor. Don't fail to play all the Colleen Moore pictures. We have never asked Miss Moore for an autographed photograph, and are wondering if she would send us one if we did. Of course, we have stills, but would appreciate an autographed photograph from her. Thanks in advance, Miss Moore.—J. S. Landry, Columbia theatre, Morganza, La.—Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—Very fine show. Pleased all who saw it.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—The best Colleen Moore to date and at that it is only a good program picture, only fair at the Box Office. Play it if you can buy it right.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

LOST AT THE FRONT: Special cast—A very mediocre picture, nothing to it, it will get by with a rough crowd though it is really a shame to put two stars as good as these fellows in such a poor picture. I believe that First National has turned out as much junk as any one company could in the past year.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Special cast—A real knockout, one of the best comedy dramas I ever run. It will do a little better than average business if you step on it. However, it is not sold to the public as some pictures are, do not pay too much for it.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

Fox

THE BLUE EAGLE: George O'Brien—40%. January 13-14. Fair picture, seemed to please. Six reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

THE BRONCO BUSTER: Special cast—25%. Shucks! Fred Hunes didn't hush no bronses, no heads, no hearts, nor nuthin', and they called the scene of the girl on an easy lope, a runaway, gosh that director Ernest Laemmle must have been once a hugologist and used to training caterpillars. No wonder folks stay at home and hug the stove.—Phillip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

PAJAMAS: Special cast—50%. Good action all satisfied.—Joseph Bender, State theatre, Eureka, S. D.—General patronage.

THE COUNTRY BEYOND: Olive Borden—Made a fine New Year's program. Beautiful scenery. Well liked by all. Tone appeal, good prints, clear.—R. E. Barnard, Home theatre, Maddock, N. D.—General patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—Nothing to rave about it will get by but the story is rather weak.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

SILVER VALLEY: Tom Mix—Here is a pretty good Western, some good comedy and it went over good, however, there is some impossible stuff in it as there seems to be in most of Mix's pictures. This time he rides a horse faster than an airplane can fly and that is going some.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

TWO GIRLS WANTED: Janet Gaynor—Some people said it was good and some of them panned it. It has no story and what little comedy is in it seems to lack pep. It is a story of two country girls in a big city. Gaynor not as good looking as in previous pictures.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

BLACK JACK: Buck Jones—Just another Jones picture. I did not think it as good as some that he has made in the past, though the story is a little different than most of the Westerns. Five reels.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

THE MUSIC MASTER: Special cast—Bought as a special, but not worth it. Slow and long drawn out, yet it pleased a few. Lost heavily on this one. Eleven reels.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL HERO: Special cast—January 11. Boyl Oh Boyl For entertainment what a picture. We used a tie-up with the high school and the picture hacked up everything. It's a natural.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

SUBWAY SADIE: Special cast—A nice little picture that did not get much business.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

STEPPING ALONG: Johnny Hines—Nothing to it, story is weak and slow moving. Leave it alone.—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

LONESOME LADIES: Lewis Stone—January 15-16. A pleasing program picture which was made better by the presence of Stone and Miss Nilsson in the cast. The story is nothing new or startling, play it now or it will be out of date.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

THE LAST TRAIL: Tom Mix—December 31. A good Western from a famous book and one that pleased the Saturday night crowd. Mix of course is one of the best drawing cards on the screen.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE LAST TRAIL: Tom Mix—December 31. Cannot report on this due to bad print. Started to stop in first reel and kept stopping throughout the entire picture. Walkouts started during the first reel and by the time it was over the house was almost empty. We had returned the admission paid to all walkouts, and at the end of the show we decided to also refund admission to those who had "stood the pain." This is the second bad print of Mix picture we have been furnished in one month. We write the exchanges, but get very little satisfaction from them. We pay more than double what we pay for our other Western stars for the Mix pictures, and they certainly should see that we do not get such rotten prints such as the two last we have used, or should say, tried to use. Well contracts with them expires in the next sixty days, and we are going to "watch our steps" when we sign up for 1928.—J. S. Landry, Columbia theatre, Morganza, La.—Small town patronage.

THE MUSIC MASTER: Special cast—Much better than I expected. Think it pleased the majority. No special. Sunday yes. Nine reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

GOOD AS GOLD: Buck Jones—January 7. What the title says: "Good as Gold." All Buck Jones pictures are good, very good.—J. S. Landry, Columbia theatre, Morganza, La.—Small town patronage.

THE FLYING HORSEMAN: Buck Jones—January 14. A good program picture for Saturday night. This is Buck's last one on last year's group, and I found all of them better than average entertainment. Six reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE MONKEY TALKS: Olive Borden—December 30. A fairly good mystery picture but not Miss Borden's best by any means.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—29%. January 5. A very good comedy drama. But we can't get the people out to a Metro picture. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SPRING FEVER: William Haines—35%. January 10-11. Very fine picture of the golf type. Pleased generally.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

SPRING FEVER: William Haines—January 11-12-13. Pleased them, made a bigger showing the last night. We have in this community ninety golf players. Seven reels.—Earl N. Conway, Electric theatre, St. Francis, Kan.—General patronage.

MOCKERY: Lon Chaney—40%. A good picture but not up to Chaney's standard.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

ANNIE LAURIE: Lillian Gish—30%. January 17-18. A very fine picture, but it failed to draw. Seemed to satisfy those who saw it. Nine reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

ANNIE LAURIE: Special cast—I surprised myself on this, did better than average business. Your regulars will stay away or pan it, but I got some people in that very seldom come. Elaborate scenery and sets too long and slow moving. Norman Kerry steals the picture.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES: Lon Chaney—48%. This is a real picture that deserves a raise in admission. Lon Chaney as the hard boiled sergeant is fine and William Haines is equally as good playing the part of the smart alec rookie. We think Chaney would be a better bet for the small towns if he were cast in this type of a picture more often. Ten reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES: Lon Chaney—Very good picture. In fact it is about the only picture we ever did show that starred Chaney and pleased the patrons also. He sure showed real ability in this.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE SCARLET LETTER: Lillian Gish—45%. This is a very good Sunday picture that will go over in fine shape. Lillian Gish does some wonderful acting as the Puritan seamstress. Nine reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

BABY MINE: Dane-Arthur—Fairly funny offering. About one half the picture "Rookies" was. The direction seemed to be at fault in the picture. They resort to some rather off-color titles in the last reel to get the required laughs. Six reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

THE DIVINE WOMAN: Greta Garbo—January 17. The women ate this up and said it was good. That's enough.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

LONDON AFTER MIDNIGHT: Lon Chaney—January 4. The best of the Lon Chaney pictures except "Tell It to the Marines."—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

THE GARDEN OF ALLAH: Special cast—January 9. Very good picture. Pleased all. Nine reels.—E. H. Randall, Liberty theatre, Condon, Ore.—General patronage.

ADAM AND EVIL: Special cast—A snappy little comedy-society drama with just enough spice to put it over, did good business and pleased all. It looked to me as though the Kansas censor board had cut it a little but it did not hurt the picture.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

ROOKIES: Special cast—December 28. This is one of the few real honest to goodness big comedies. If they don't laugh at this one they will never smile again. It will bear a boost in admission and will please all who enjoy real fun. It is better than a Harold Lloyd.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE—BEN HUR: Special cast—Nothing from me need be said in regard to those two gems as their praises have been sung so long and loud that I need not emphasize the fact that all that has been said was true.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: John Gilbert—Went over fairly well. Some liked it and others did not. It's a good show.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Gilbert-Adoree—January 18-19. Owing to bad weather, the fact that every other town in the vicinity had already shown it, and that people here can't afford to pay a fifty cent admission, this masterpiece of the cinema art drew only a fair business. Thirteen reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novarro—Big picture. Did a record business and did not hear one kick. Twelve reels.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Special cast—Pretty good picture of the horse race type of story, this did not do very good business because the stars are unknown to a great extent. Some good comedy by the nigger, though the love making and kissing of the niggers was repulsive to white people. Just a good program picture, not a special as M-G-M calls it.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: A good production of the old stage play. It is different from what has gone before but very interesting and well done. An innovation in the comedy role are two colored people who might have stepped out of an Octavus Roy Cohen story. However, Queen Bees, a supposedly derby winner is a good solid fat old farm horse. How a director would slip on a small detail like this is beyond me, and then give a closeup of a fifteen hundred pound farm mare for a derby strider. Oh boy, maybe these farm lads did not cop this discrepancy in horse-flesh.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—General patronage.

THE FIRE BRIGADE: Special cast—If this one isn't a special, then I have never showed one. I played it three days before "The Big Parade" and the few who saw both, classed it fully as good and some went farther and said it was better than "The Big Parade."—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE BUGLE CALL: Jackie Coogan—Did better than average business by a little bit though the story is rather weak and slow moving as well as being improbable though I suppose that it is the best they could do for Jackie. Claire Windsor is a real beauty in her part.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

FOREIGN DEVILS: Not so good. Picture well enough done but a Western star should stay where he is advertised, in out-door stuff and not Chinese atmosphere.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—General patronage.

to forego an anticipated pleasure in the interest of a long suffering community. He still lives. If there is anything in the way of equipment that he doesn't have it is because he has never heard of it. We supposed he'd take us down and show us his cellar hut he never mentioned it. It was different when we called on Phil.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

The other night Bradley played "PEAKS OF DESTINY," and we heard some folks say as they came out of the theatre that they liked it. This isn't surprising when we recall hearing some people say that they like boiled lobster. It all comes back to a question of taste. Our individual taste runs more definitely to mush and milk, that's why we are a very poor critic of pictures. "PEAKS OF DESTINY" has some lovely scenic shots but when we viewed the cast we regretted very much that we ever took this country away from the Red Skins. We don't recall who composed the cast and are not sufficiently interested to inquire, but from the standpoint of entertainment we would prefer to stay at home and take care of the baby when it had the cholera.

The man who wrote the title, like many other title writers, must have had a brainstorm to have embodied so much intelligence in so few words. "PEAKS OF DESTINY" (by its title) ought to pull like a porous plaster on the hired girl. It is said that title writers are born and not made, in which case we aver that the industry is loaded down with too much of the unfinished product, all of which will no doubt go to prove that we don't know a thing about it.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We were talking with Uncle Leazer Biggs yesterday about having to write this column and we told him that we didn't know what the dickens to say and he said to us, "Well, my hoy, I have always found it a good plan when I haint got nuthin' to say to keep still," and those of you who have had the nerve to follow this column thus far will no doubt agree with Uncle Leazer's theory, but then Uncle Leazer don't know Jay and that he requires so much space to be filled each week in the country's greatest magazine whether we say anything or not.

There is this, however, that is in your favor, if you are unable to glean any intelligent thoughts from this column you can always fall back on "SERVICE TALKS" and get the worth of your money out of each issue, with Gallo's weekly letter thrown in for good measure. Then, too, there is Doug and Murray's "pink tea" gossip that is always worth the money regardless of whether they have been down to "Te Wanny" or not.

You can take it from us and be assured that you are correct that it is no picnic trying to write a column with two healthy grand children trying to make more noise than a riveting machine and having wonderful success at it, while their mother is down at the Moon theatre rehearsing the music for "WHAT PRICE GLORY."

Billy has a hammer and is trying to knock the legs off the radio stand and Joline is hammering the piano and singing "Blue Heaven" while the poodle is trying to get at the Thomas cat perched on the chandelier. It's a great life if you don't get nervous prostration. We've got it.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We have before us the January 21 issue of "MOVIE AGE," a regional magazine published at Omaha, and desire to compliment the parties responsible for this nifty magazine, for the excellent manner in which it is gotten up. Miss Margaret Foley's name appears as editor and manager and that should be assurance sufficient that the paper is worth the money. We don't recall ever having had the pleasure of meeting Miss Foley but we are going to extend ourself a very cordial invitation to call on her the first time we are in Omaha. Is that all right, Margaret?

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Marjorie has just turned on the radio and there is a cross-eyed orchestra somewhere playing a selection of cross-legged jazz, and after the agony was over the announcer enlightened his audience with the information that to appreciate that kind of music one had to acquire a taste for it. Yeah, that's true also of ipicac and castor oil. The effect on us in either case is just about the same.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Last night we saw "WHAT PRICE GLORY" at the Moon theatre and we believe Bradley should be privileged to drive by the Fox studio even in a Ford. We can't make a hox office comparison of this picture because we have no hox office, but comparing it with Vitagraph's "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE," which to our mind was the best picture ever made, we would rate this picture about 97 and 3/10 per cent. We hope our version of this picture agrees with Thomas O. Service, for it always makes us swell up to know that Thomas and we agree in our opinions. The theatre that doesn't play "WHAT PRICE GLORY" stands to lose a lot of prestige as well as dough.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Unless we change our plans, next week we are going to start for the "Lone Star" state and we hope to get to Goose Creek and call on Thelma for we have a message from Phil that he wants delivered in person. Phil doesn't trust the mails but he does have confidence in us. Thanks Phil.

J. C. JENKINS,
The HERALD-WORLD Man.

FRISCO SALLY LEVY: Sally O'Neil—An unusually good program picture, one reel in technicolor. Poor appeal and worse advertising matter, but if you can get them in they will be pleased.—Guy B. Amis, Princess theatre, Lexington, Tenn.—Small town patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Marion Davies—A pleasing comedy that seemed to please the majority.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Marion Davies—Our first showing of Miss Davies and must report she took very well. A snappy little picture that pleased.—

E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE FRONTIERSMAN: Tim McCoy—Our first showing of Tim McCoy and report that he went over fine and give us a very good picture in this one. This is more than a Western, it is action-history and pleased my crowd.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

SLIDE, KELLY, SLIDE: William Haines—My patrons certainly enjoyed this one. Business fair.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

Paramount

THE PIONEER SCOUT: Fred Thomson—75%. January 21. Boys, here's Fred at his best in his first regular Western under the Paramount banner, and he hits the bulls eye again. I consider this picture much better than FBO releases, and it cost me less money. I notice some of you boys have been lamenting the fact he is now releasing through Paramount on account of supposed increase in price, but I bought them for less than I paid for the FBO releases. The wagon race in this picture is a knockout, and so is the fight between Fred and old Tom Wilson (blackface deluxe who has turned villain here) in the final reel. Played without any advertising except slide and lobby photos, and on one of coldest days this winter, drew better than average. More action than Jesse James, and will please Fred's admirers better. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE SPOTLIGHT: Esther Ralston—Esther Ralston is certainly coming fast to the front. Ten Modern Commandments" and "Figures Don't Lie" were excellent and this picture is no exception.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—General patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Clara Bow—100%. December 29. Not up to Clara's standard, but pleased just the same. Set new house record on account of holidays which means it was going some, because our house record was broken three times during the same week. Thanks, Clara, and hurry up with Red Hair. Six reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Clara Bow—65%. January 6-7. Another knockout from Clara. Many liked this as well as "It." Six reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

THE SPOTLIGHT: Esther Ralston—90%. December 30. Very poor indeed. Far below Miss Ralston's standard. Very thin story, and did not please here. Lay off the Russian stuff, Esther, and let's see you as you really are. Six reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON HATE: Florence Vidor—40%. January 1-2. A fairly good offering. Seemed to please the majority.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—98%. December 27. Very entertaining, although thought Dix miscast. Really the story is not worthy of Dix, but everybody seemed pleased, and our house record was also strained. It seems they like Richard in anything, as he has that something. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—50%. December 22-23. A very good picture. But due to the cold weather and advanced prices did not make anything on it. Have it coming for another run so may be able to do better. Every theatre should run this. Ten reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—15%. Not the picture that people expected to see, some were disappointed.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—50%. January 8-9. Good picture. Miss Ralston looks like a coming bet. However, her leading man, Richard Arlen, put out a terrible bit of over-acting. Six reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

SENIORITA: Bebe Daniels—54%. December 29. The best Bebe Daniels we have had. Action galore in this and filled with comedy. Be sure and run this one. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SENIORITA: Bebe Daniels—Extra good. More comments on it, than any picture this winter.—H. Nokes, Elite theatre, Nixa, Mo.—General patronage.

BARBED WIRE: Pola Negri—60%. January 15-16. More favorable comments of this picture than on "The Big Parade." Really a marvelous production. Eight reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

ROLLED STOCKINGS: Special cast—21%. December 15. A dandy comedy of college with a lot of young men and women and it took fine. Not enough in to pay for film but that was because of the cold weather. Six reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

CASEY AT THE BAT: Special cast—40%. January 15-16. This is a very funny picture. The star does great work and the cast fine.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

TEN MODERN COMMANDMENTS: Special cast. 32%. January 12. Small crowd out to a dandy comedy drama. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

TEN MODERN COMMANDMENTS: Esther Ralston—The folks liked it.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FIREMAN SAVE MY CHILD: Special cast—15%. A wonderful comedy, had a hard cold spell to fight.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

TIME TO LOVE: Raymond Griffith—35%. January 3. We were surprised at this one. Don't like Griffith much but this was pretty good and people said so. Had a lodge banquet and cold weather so didn't have any crowd. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancy, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

TIME TO LOVE: Raymond Griffith—Not worth while playing, just a bunch of sappy love scenes, it is supposed to be a comedy, but I could not find it. At that it is a little better than "Rubber Heels" that wonderful piece of cheese that Ed. Wynn made.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

WHIRLWIND OF YOUTH: Lois Moran—35%. January 8. A good picture. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

BLIND ALLEYS: Thomas Meighan—38%. December 25. Just fair. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

BLIND ALLEYS: Thomas Meighan—January 17. This is the best Meighan picture in a long time. Had a rainy night and wouldn't have had any crowd to speak of if we hadn't had a male quartette with it. Passed bills here and in five surrounding towns and got a good crowd in spite of rain, but they came for the quartette. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancy, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

TIP TOES: Dorothy Gish—65%. January 10. Good light entertainment. Dorothy sure can dance, and Will Rogers brought some out that never come as a usual thing. Seven reels.—Robert K. Yancy, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—10%. A wonderful picture, good in anybody's house, had heavy rain and cold to fight which accounts for small percentage.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

SPECIAL DELIVERY: Eddie Cantor—65%. December 26-27. If you judge a comedy by the number of laughs it gets this sure is a good one. I notice most of our fellow exhibitors pan it more or less. What do you want? It may be that we are easily pleased as we like the pictures that others knock. Eddie Cantor is fine. Suppose he isn't well known—what does that matter? It rained the second night and kept the people away—otherwise it would have drawn a good crowd. We'll lay this to Henry Ford's slowness in getting his cars on the market. Everybody is walking now. Waiting for the new cars and so of course when it rains they stay at home, rather than walk. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancy, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

BEAU SABREUR: Gary Cooper—January 12-13. Business way off on this picture. Personally do not believe it can be compared with "Beau Geste" from entertainment standpoint.—Russell Armentrout, K. P. theatre, Pittsfield, Ill.—General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Fred Thomson—January 16. Fair picture. Would have been better if some of Thomson's stunt stuff had been left out. Not a special. If Thomson will lay off his stunts and do straight acting he will be better off. Eight reels.—E. H. Randall, Liberty theatre, Condon, Ore.—General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Fred Thomson—January 20-21. What a travesty on the life of the famous bandit. Every one attending thought it was a burlesque and laughed accordingly. It drew good business, by the way. The Slades, James and Fords must have all been members of the old southern aristocracy, judging by their magnificent estates, and their perfectly tailored clothes. Eight reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

DRUMS OF THE DESERT: Warner Baxter—Good Western picture, drew a good crowd and pleased. Six reels.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

ROUGH HOUSE ROSIE: Clara Bow—This picture went over fine. Liked just as well as "It."—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

LET IT RAIN: Douglas MacLean—January 17-18. Doug doesn't mean very much at my box office. As all the reports in the Herald were good on this, and in order to have somebody in to laugh at it, I gave 100 passes to school children and they had many a good laugh. A good program picture which will please Doug's fans. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

LET IT RAIN: Douglas MacLean—Satisfied our Indispensable!

"I take the opportunity to tell you that I found the HERALD very useful for my bookings. I am more than pleased with your section, 'What the Picture Did for Me,' particularly the 'Box Office Record,' which you issue twice a year. This 'Box Office Record' is INDISPENSABLE for every one dealing in the motion picture line.

"MICHEL L. AMME,
"Beirut, Syria."

small crowd. Several told me "good."—H. Nokes, Elite theatre, Nixa, Mo.—General patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—Good picture that went over fine.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—A very good Western and as usual did not follow the story. Fair business.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A GENTLEMAN OF PARIS: Adolphe Menjou—January 16-17. A sophisticated comedy-drama. Unsuitable to the class of patrons in this town. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

A GENTLEMAN OF PARIS: Adolphe Menjou—January 10. Good Menjou picture played to average Tuesday and Wednesday house. Seven reels.—E. H. Randall, Liberty theatre, Condon, Ore.—General patronage.

TELL IT TO SWEENEY: Special cast—November 16. Paid too much money. Good comedy. Favorable comments. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

HOLD THAT LION: Douglas MacLean—I believe this to be the best MacLean we have showed since the "Hottentot" It sure pleased my people, and should not be passed up by any theatre.—E. C. Silverthorn, Liberty theatre, Harrisville, Mich.—General patronage.

A KISS IN A TAXI: Bebe Daniels—Good comedy. Drew just a fair business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Richard Dix—A very good program picture that failed to draw.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED: Raymond Griffith—December 4. Can't say much for this. Looks like they could find something to build comedies around besides a man's death. Seven reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

Pathe-P D C

PALS IN PARADISE: Special cast—50%. Good Western story of a gold rush in automobiles and mushroom boom with city crooks. Schildkraut and Robson as Pa and Ma Lezinsky portray excellent and funny character parts. Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowers pleasing. Comedy and action not big, but different and very pleasing throughout.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Joseph Schildkraut—Good acting, but it is rather sad and inconsistent in story.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

HORSESHOES: Monty Banks—Here is a farce-comedy that is a riot. A lot of exhibitors have passed it up but it really is worth while playing if your crowd likes to laugh. The story is not new and Banks looks like a sap but the action and gags keep moving all through the story.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

THE VOLGA BOATMAN: Special cast—Wonderful. The best picture in months. Boyd's work the best ever. Miss Fair, beautiful and talented. Would like to have another featuring these two. Eleven reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

Tiffany

LOST AT SEA: Huntly Gordon—41%. Can't say much for this. An able cast but the story rather weak. Many came thinking it was a sea story, but were sadly disappointed when they found it was a sickly love story. Might say it is another one of those mistle pictures that fail to help the exhibitor's pocketbook. Seven reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

COLLEGE DAYS: Special cast—24%. Terrible. If this is a sample of the famous "Gems of Tiffany" we will have to go elsewhere for our gems hereafter. Just another plot spoiled by necking parties that are carried to the extreme in every case. Besides giving the people the wrong impression of colleges and college life it disgusts them with movies as a whole. Eight reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

United Artists

THE GENERAL: Buster Keaton—26%. Buster Keaton with his usual frozen face expression failed to make the box office click. Largely due to the cold weather the people stayed away. Would rate the picture as pretty weak especially after looking over the contract and seeing "Special" marked under it. And the price we paid is enough to make us say goodby to U. A. Nine reels.—Brown Bros., Hipp theatre, Lewellen, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE GOLD RUSH: Special cast—The poorest picture ever produced by Charlie Chaplin, it is a shame to charge admission.—Joseph Bender, State theatre, Eureka, S. D.—General patronage.

SPARROWS: Mary Pickford—100%. October 8. While a lot of exhibitors claimed they lost money with this one, I broke house records for attendance, due mostly for the fact that I used this star in "Little Annie Rooney" two weeks previous and they simply could not resist seeing her again. Eight reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

SPARROWS: Mary Pickford—60%. A real entertaining picture for the children, also a good picture for the grown ups. Had many favorable reports.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

DON Q: Douglas Fairbanks—61%. January 14. Pleased nearly all my patrons and they all asked when his next picture would be here. Therefore it's a good indication that they still fall for this star. Eight reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

Universal

THE CHINESE PARROT: Marion Nixon—31%. January 11. Just a fair mystery picture. Does not follow the book and some were disappointed. Seven reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

THE CLAW: Special cast—An excellent type of the outdoor picture, well liked by our patrons but many comments that Norman Kerry was not suited for outdoor stories. Seven reels.—M. Mulliha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

CHEATING CHEATERS: Special cast—Not a very successful picture although few of the patrons liked the plot. However, will do as a program picture. Nothing in it. Six reels.—M. Mulliha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

SENSATION SEEKERS: Billie Dove—28%. January 15. Good picture for Sunday on which date we ran it. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

THE CLAW: Claire Windsor—36%. January 1. Good African story. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

HELD BY THE LAW: Ralph Graves—30%. December 18. A good mystery drama only there was no mystery but it held everyone's attention until the end. Six reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

HELD BY THE LAW: Marguerite De LaMotte—28%. A wonderful crook story, some said it was the best they had seen in many days.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

PAINTED PONIES: Hoot Gibson—A good Western and had many favorable comments.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

THE WRONG MR. WRIGHT: Jean Hersholt—January 17. While I did not watch this picture personally had a nice attendance due to amateurs mostly, and they all seemed to be having an enjoyable time watching the antics of Mr. Wright, so I'll have to report that it pleased. Seven reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City Mo.—General patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Special cast—An usually good comedy that got a little extra business.—Ernest Vetter, Majestic theatre, Homer, Mich.—Small town patronage.

BEWARE OF WIDOWS: Laura La Plante—It is a fairly good comedy, pretty much slapstick but it gets the laughs.—W. H. Hardman, Royal theatre, Frankfort, Kan.—Small town patronage.

BEWARE OF WIDOWS: Laura La Plante—December 25. Like all Miss La Plante's pictures, this was 100 per cent entertainment. Due to bad weather we had a very small attendance. However, this star never fails to draw. The few who saw this said it was fine. Personally, we do not think it is quite as good as "Her Big Night," but we want to tell you that it is good and should be played by all exhibitors. Washburn is good in this. The houseboat scene in this picture is wonderful, and one wonders how it can be done.—J. S. Landry, Columbia theatre, Morganza, La.—Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

THE LONE EAGLE: Special cast—30%. January 10. This is a splendid program picture. Satisfied them all.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

BITTER APPLES: Monte Blue—20%. Played on Sunday and Monday pretty bad weather did not do much. Monte was good but his leading lady is so ugly that the boys hooted at her. Give Monte a good looking girl to play with, my patrons like him.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

PLEASURE BUYERS: Irene Rich—38%. January 7. Mystery story that is good. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

WHILE LONDON SLEEPS: Rin Tin Tin—50%. December 24. Matinee and night did pretty good. Poorest Rin Tin we have had. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

IRISH HEARTS: May McAvoy—34%. December 31. Good picture. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

IRISH HEARTS: May McAvoy—30%. January 11. This is an extra good program picture. This star never made a poor one.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

TRACKED BY THE POLICE: Rin Tin Tin—70%. January 14. No bigger bet for this town than Rin Tin Tin. He always pulls a big crowd. This picture deals with the Colorado Reclamation and if advertised in the Western states now would mean a lot to them. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGE WIDOW: Dolores Costello—January 18-19. While I consider this one of the best of the unlimited number of college pictures we've been flooded, it failed to stir up any excitement in my end of town and I took a neat loss. Dolores Costello is good, but for some reason is not a box office attraction for me. Seven reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW: Patsy Ruth Miller—January 19-20. Due to a beautiful zephyr filled with icicles, not many of the girls ventured out to find out what they ought to know, in addition to what they already know. During its unwinding I was afraid they were never going to find out, but by means of a subtitle near the end of the picture their curiosity was appeased in being advised that they should get married, honor and obey the old meal ticket, and not eat crackers in bed, or something like that. Good program picture. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SLIGHTLY USED: Special cast—January 14. Had the best Saturday night's business for some weeks on this picture and they seemed to like it, very light comedy drama. Boys there's two of the cutest little flappers in this one you ever cast your optics on. Audrey Ferris is one of them, May McAvoy is not the other one. Seven reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

State Rights

THE VICTORY PARADE: January 12. War film with parade in colors. Good. Rain cut attendance and think the people are too fed up on the war stuff. Seven reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

YOUTH AND ADVENTURE: Richard Talmadge—A very nice action picture of the Wednesday class. Talmadge is a real athlete.

Had good comments appealed to all classes. Six reels.—M. Mulliha, Capitol theatre, Karachi, India.—General patronage.

Serials

CASEY AT THE COAST GUARD: George O'Hara—So much of the first two chapters was taken at night that we don't know what it's all about yet. Hope it gets better soon. Two reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

DEAD EASY: A fair comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MEET THE FOLKS: A good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MOVE ALONG: Lloyd Hamilton—This seemed to please as well as most of the comedies from this star. However, I cannot see that he is worth anymore than the rest, however, they tack on an extra charge for his stuff. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

F B O

BILL GRIMM'S PROGRESS: Cooke-Guard—All these Bill Grimm comedies have pleased. Sorry I am almost through with them.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

CHARLIE BOWERS COMEDIES: Rotten, rotten, all of them that I have played.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

FIGHTING HEARTS: Alberta Vaughn—Very good series. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

HE COULDN'T HELP IT: Charlie Bowers—Without a doubt the strongest novelty comedy on the market would make a dog laugh, a dog was what it was about. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

HELENE OF TROY N. Y.: Cooke-Guard—An amusing comedy. One of the "Beauty Parlor" series which have all been fairly good. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

A LIGHTNING SLIDER: "Fighting Hearts." Good. The umpire of the baseball game in this comedy got a lot of laughs every time he appeared on the screen. He's great. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

MICKEY'S BATTLE: Good. These Mickey McGuire comedies are excellent. Two reels.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

MICKEY'S CIRCUS: Mickey McGuire—The best comedy for some time. Better than the "Our Gang" for me. Two reels.—F. R. Meierbachtol, Elysian theatre, Elysian, Minn.—General patronage.

NOTHING DOING: A good novelty comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

OLD TIN SIDES: Alexander Carr—Was about the average of this kind of a comedy—three fat men—some like them, others walk out at the end of the feature. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

TURKISH HOWLS: Special cast—"Wisecrackers" series goes over about the same as the other series along this same order. For mine I think they are fed up on this combination. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

THE BATTLE OF THE CENTURY: Laurel-Hardy—Plenty good. This pair are making some real laugh getters. "Putting Pants Phillip" was another dandy by the same two comedians. Two reels.—J. C. Kennedy, Empress theatre, Akron, Ia.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

SHORT TAIL: Rotten. People walked out and hollered for a comedy.—A. C. January, Sunset theatre, Dallas, Tex.—General patronage.

PATHE

ALL NIGHT LONG: Harry Langdon—Good. Caused lots of mirth.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

ALONG CAME AUNTIE: Glen Tryon—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

BROKE IN CHINA: Ben Turpin—The best comedy we have played in a long time. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CRAZY LIKE A FOX: Charlie Chase—Not as good as some of his former comedies; did not seem to have the kick. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House theatre, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

HORACE GREELY, JR.: Harry Langdon—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

LAUGHING LADIES: Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

OLYMPIC GAMES: Our Gang—Another Gang comedy that the kids will go wild about and the older people will enjoy. Two reels.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

PASS THE DUMPLINGS: A fair comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

RAGGEDY ROSE: Mabel Normand—Good. Although it could have been in two reels. Three reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

A SEA DOG'S TALE: Billy Bevan—Good. Can always count on a Mack Sennett comedy. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SHOULD HUSBANDS PAY: Jimmie Finlayson—Can't say much for Stan Laurel's idea of a comedy although it has a lot of laughs. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SMITH'S VACATION: The Smith Family—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SPANKING BREEZES: Alice Day—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

WHITE WING'S BRIDE: Harry Langdon—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

WILL ROGERS' SERIES: Bought four of these. Have run two. "Hiking in Holland" and "Hiking in Dublin." They are interesting but don't think they draw an extra dime at the box office. One reel.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

TIFFANY

FISHERMAN'S LUCK: This one just an ordinary scenic in Technicolor. Not up to the standard of these serials. One reel.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

MEMORIES: This beautiful little subject properly cued with music to fit the picture will cause more comment and please more people than any short subject you can buy. One reel.—P. G. Vaughan, Sun theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BUSTER BROWN COMEDIES: These are pretty good, but the dog does all the heavy work. Two reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

MONKEY SHINES: Fairly good short comedy. One reel.—A. G. Witwer, Grand theatre, Rainier, Ore.—General patronage.

OCEAN BRUISES: A good Gump comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SNOOKUM COMEDIES: This kid is really a wonder and acts like an old trouser. Two reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating report received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By Whit

IN rambling around the row, one is impressed with the number of people talking about poor business. You hear the talk every place you go. It seems that business is better in the country territory than in the city, and that the small houses in Chicago have hit a real slump in business.

There are many reasons offered for the lack of business. Some blame it on election year, others on bad weather and a great many blame it on the theory that Chicago is over-seated. The last reason probably has more foundation than the others.

The opening of a deluxe house with several thousand seats is no longer real news in this city. The opening of a 500 seat house has ceased to be news at all, even to the industry. If you were to make a list of Chicago theatres, it would be out of date before your list could be completed. Theatres are getting as common in this city as saloons used to be. Theatres have been built and more theatres are being built that have no economic right to exist, yet still the building goes on.

"There's just as much business as there ever was, but there are too damn many theatres after that business," is the way one man on the row expressed the situation, and he probably socked the right nail on the head.

There's a lot doing in Chicago this week with this contract committee meeting going on. Many important men in the industry are here and the usual amount of talk, confusion and delay seems to be hovering around the proceedings. But all this is news of national scope so turn to the news pages for enlightenment.

If everybody along the row had a nose for news like Joe Lyon, the writing of these columns would be a snap. Joe picks up news like a vacuum cleaner picks up dirt (whoa! don't jump to the double meaning in this sentence, it's not intended) and when he returns from a week on the road, he fairly bristles with news.

Joe tells me that Roy Fletcher, who runs the Isis theatre at Roseville, Illinois, is driving next month to Hollywood, which makes my story about poor business sound like a false alarm. The Star reporter also met Edgar Churchill of Rariton and E. R. Erickson of Media who both work for Uncle Sam and run picture shows on the side. Churchill runs a mail truck in the daytime and the Opera House at night. Erickson is post master at Media and exhibitor at the Media theatre. At Earlville Joe met Editor Edgett, whose real vocation in life is subscribing to every magazine in the country and his avocation is running the Lyric theatre.

J. S. Abrose, former branch manager of Omaha for United Artists, has been appointed branch manager of the Chicago exchange and C. C. Wallace is district manager for the same territory. Herb Hayman is the new branch manager at Minneapolis.

Tom Gilliam spent the week end in Warsaw, Indiana, visiting his son, Tom, Jr.

Carl Lesserman made a flying round trip to Detroit last week to confer with Branch Manager North. The airplane should prove very popular for busy film executives. Makers of news pictures long since have found the advantage of transporting their canned news by air mail and are now among the heaviest users of Uncle Sam's flying mailmen.

And speaking of airplanes, Charles Ford of the Daily News Screen Service has just been furnished with a new airplane and his first trip was a 3,600 mile jump to the Pan American Congress at Havana and back. This week he will make another record jump to New York and back. Breakfast in Chicago, lunch in New York and dinner in Chicago is his schedule for the day. If this old world gets much faster, how will we ever find time to sit through a moving picture show?

Pat Garyn of the New York office of National Screen Service was in town last week attending a Central West Sales meeting.

Bill Sweeney showed us a post card from Jack Miller last week. It had a New Orleans post mark and the information that New Orleans was very damp and disagreeable and that the writer was glad to get away. Miller is headed for Havana, and we were always under the impression that Havana was damp, oh! terribly damp.

R. C. White, office manager at First National, was confined to his home last week due to a furuncular disturbance, and now the boys at F. N. have fitted out White's office chair with a rubber cushion.

It is being rumored about the row that one of the boys on the row has invested heavily in a rat trap company, manufacturers of an automatic rat trap. Who knows? Someday men may point to him as the rat trap king.

Every time I go down to Pathe, I spend a few minutes looking at the two small windows on either side of the front door. Those two windows are always fetching and attractive due to the genius and industry of George Pratt. Pratt changes his window displays quite often, and from their appearance, he must spend quite a bit of time and effort on them. These two little windows are darn good salesmen for Pathe, and I'm anxious to see several pictures just because I have seen displays of them in Pratt's windows.

This strikes me as a clever way of selling pictures, and I'm surprised that more of the exchanges do not go into it. There are usually some good displays of stills at Fox and one can always find something to look at in the Universal exchange, but from the appearance of some of the exchanges, they might be selling garden hose for all a stranger could tell.

Accessories are hard to sell to exhibitors, yet how often does one see a display of accessories in film exchanges. Woolworth made millions by putting every article in his stores on display where the public could not only see it but handle it. I wonder if film exchanges could not take a few hints from the five and ten cent stores.

Be that as it may, we want to congratulate George Pratt on his windows.

At 2:30 last Sunday afternoon, the doors of the North Center were once again swung open to the public, and a novelty of the new policy is the girl band, directed by Dorothy Aldrich. The girls will do specialty novel overtures from the pit during the week and will be on the stage with added vaudeville acts on Saturday and Sunday. David Rice will manage the house for the American Bond and Mortgage company.

A new theatre opens Saturday under the management of Lubliner and Trinz. The ad in last Sunday's paper announced it as one of beauty and comfort, in fact, says the ad, no more beautiful theatre can be found. However, the ad did not add that when the 3,000 seats are filled the predominant color scheme will be black. The theatre is located at South Park and 47th. Fess Williams and his 22 Jazz-Joy boys will be a feature of the stage show. The theatre no doubt will prove a focal point for residents of the district reaching from 22nd street south.

Fred Pollock has been added to the sales force of Fox and beginning Monday of last week, he will travel in Illinois. He hails from the New Haven office.

A fine, new baby boy arrived at the home of Tommy Greenwood last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Agnew returned last Saturday from a ten days' vacation trip to New Orleans.

The February Jubilee month at FBO is being put over in fine style at the Chicago exchange. Washburn says that practically 95 per cent of the theatres in this district have booked FBO product for showing during the month, and the boys haven't stopped yet.

With this automobile show in progress, we ought to have automobile news in this column next week. If the boys on the row escape the automobile salesmen, they're good. Every place we turn we see an automobile on exhibit. About the only public gathering places in town that don't have cars on exhibit are the street cars and elevateds.

A number of changes have been made at the United Artists theatre recently.

Nellie Revell, who opened the house and has been serving as director of publicity, has resigned and is now back on her beloved Broadway, and T. Landon Burks, formerly with the Monroe, has succeeded Miss Revell.

Max Cooper, who was brought to Chicago by Riesenfeld as house manager, is no longer with the organization, and W. H. Rudolph is now occupying that post.

It is understood that the Saturday midnight matinees being held at the theatre are proving quite popular.

To insure exhibitors the highest possible screen quality, Eastman Positive Film is made identifiable. The words "Eastman Kodak" are stencilled in black letters at short intervals in the transparent film margin.

Specify prints on Eastman Film—look for the identifying words in the margin—and get the film that always carries quality through to the screen.

Prevention,

The whole story of SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL is summed up in the old maxim, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

There used to be a reason for fires in projection rooms — ignorance of how to prevent them.

There is no such reason today. It is well-nigh criminally negligent to have even a momentary blaze nowadays.

And always remember, every fire, no matter how slight, contains the threat of a terrible holocaust.

The danger of film fire in a theatre equipped with SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL is zero. Responsibility for patrons' safety, as well as good business sense, dictates its use.

Gentlemen:-
The Robert Morton Unit Organs which you recently installed for us in our new deluxe houses, have proven entirely satisfactory, tonally, mechanically and otherwise.
We thought you would be glad to know this, and we take this opportunity of congratulating you on building an outstandingly successful theatre organ.

DEAR MR. MORTON:
This is the first opportunity I have had since the installation of our new magnificent pipe organ for the very great and beautiful work of our crucifixion scenes was very great indeed. The organ was a veritable revelation that I have never seen equalled. It has never been my fortune to witness that inspiration was fanned into flames by the great group of artists who were working on it in the most wonderful scene that I have ever seen. I am bound with tears in their eyes to witness the first Christmas Carol.

I am indebted to you for your very genuine and kind interest in me and I believe will go far toward making me a more successful man.

With kindest regards and appreciation,
Yours very truly,
Ceil B. DeMille

There is no substitute for Circulation!

INTERESTING to every individual in the motion picture industry is the publishing this week by the Audit Bureau of Circulations of the auditor's report on the circulations of Exhibitors Herald and of Moving Picture World for the twelve months ending December 31, 1927.

To the advertiser, it is an accounting of the stewardship of these two publications, which accepted his money for advertising space during the year of 1927. It is a confirmation of the judgment of the space buyer. It is an assurance of value for money spent in the past and a guarantee of value for money to be spent in the future.

To the reader, it is proof that advertising has been sold by these publications on merit.

To the statistician, these statements are vitally interesting. They demonstrate beyond doubt that in the merger of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World, the motion picture industry has been given complete coverage in one medium—and this at a cost far below the figure at which complete coverage is available in any other business field of comparable size.

These statements are now available and will be furnished without charge upon application. Address, Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World, 407 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

"This boy
LUPINO

"Sword Points"
 Great Burlesque

This boy Lupino Lane is certainly stepping along at a great comedy pace. Here he puts over one of the neatest laugh numbers it has been our pleasure to see for many months. He can kid anything to a frazzle, and do it to a syn-copation of chortles, gurgles and honest t'gawd laughs. The plot is clever—oh, yes, this one has a plot. Lupino outdoes himself on some great comedy gags, and it is in the bag with the laughs all counted before you book it.—Film Daily.

Educational sure has a comedy winner in this Englishman. Lupino never seems to exhaust his bag of tricks. In "Sword Points" he doesn't rely entirely on his own resources, for he has a story that is made to order for his particular brand of humor. It offers him every opportunity to do the things he is best suited for and he doesn't overlook a single bet. This rib-tickler is a "natural."—Exhibitors Daily Review.

A Lupino Lane comedy that burlesques sword play, swashbuckling and the lace and velvet dramas. It is splendidly done, is beautiful and funny by turns, and is first class, compelling entertainment.—Arthur James in Motion Pictures Today.

STEPPING along! And at what a pace! Lupino Lane's current series of satirical comedies has definitely established him as the foremost comedian in the Short Features field. In fact, no other comedy star in pictures has made such remarkable progress in the last year.

"MONTY OF THE MOUNTED," "A HALF-PINT HERO," "SOME SCOUT," "HELLO, SAILOR"—every one has been an outstanding comedy success. And now Lane has made one that tops his finest! If you're interested in the best work being done in short comedies today, you can't afford to miss

CHICAGO STANDOUT; BALABAN THRILLED!

CHICAGO, Jan. 24th — Following its sensational Hartford, Connecticut premiere, "THE NOOSE" gave a second and even more remarkable box-office performance at its opening here yesterday at the Chicago, famous Balaban and Katz house.

At the close of the first day's run Max Balaban shot the following wire to Ned Depinet, First National's sales manager:

"Richard Barthelmess in 'Noose' doing sensational business. House completely filled by noon. Public and critics acclaim this Barthelmess' greatest picture for all time. Barthelmess' great success in 'Noose,' and 'Patent Leather Kid' should establish him as one of greatest male stars in pictures!"

The Chicago opened its doors at 11 A.M. and was standing them out by 12:20!

STAR CAST supporting Richard Barthelmess in his third successive box-office sensation includes Montague Love, Alice Joyce and Lina Basquette.

WHOLE VOL. 90, No. 6 (VOL. 32, No. 9) FEBRUARY 11, 1928

The Brookhart Bill

IF the motion picture industry cannot assume an united front against attack and interference from without, then it is headed for a troublesome future which, under conceivable circumstances, might even become acute enough to render the business a dangerous if not a disastrous one.

This presents a situation which demands the thoughtful consideration of every person who has an investment of money or time in the picture business.

It is all very well to say that when things become as bad as they are represented to be in certain quarters, outside interference is a lesser evil and therefore should be welcomed. But political interference with a business is a cancerous thing and there is no one to say how far it will go once it has started.

We are not prepared to say that the Brookhart Bill, in so far as the face value of its objectives are concerned, might not accomplish a great deal of good. In fact, the measure contemplates adjustment of certain matters upon which weighty opinion in the trade insists that there must be adjustment. But even were the trade in absolute accord with the provisions of this Bill, or any other measure standing under similar auspices, we would still say that federal legislation on the internal problems of the business is not the right road to sound and lasting accomplishment.

We are now hearing a great deal of argument concerning the merits and the demerits of the Brookhart Bill. In some places the record of the Hon. Smith W. Brookhart, and his leaning toward legislative panaceas, practically forecloses deliberate and thoughtful consideration of the measure affecting the motion picture business which he has introduced in Congress. Again we find the Bill being bitterly denounced as a measure which would upset the orderly processes of the business; which would invite if not establish government control; which would over-burden the producer with sales expense to the disadvantage of himself and his customers; which would seriously embarrass producers in their present system of financing production and which would set the industry years back economically.

Again, we find the measure being enthusiastically campaigned for as a promise of salvation which would solve many of the most difficult problems of the business and would create a new and more prosperous day for many who have for years been playing the under-dog role.

We do not believe that anyone will attempt to acclaim the Brookhart Bill as an ideal piece of legislation. In keeping with practically every other piece of legislation, either proposed or enacted, it may be said to have its advantages and its disadvantages.

But were this industry to plunge so deeply into a consideration of the merits and the demerits of the Brookhart Bill as to have blanked out of its vision the great broad question involved—namely, outside interference in the internal problems of the business—then, we believe, a most hazardous mistake would be committed. And that, from all present indications, is just what is taking place in several quarters in the trade.

We are preaching no gospel of "let well enough alone." In fact, we feel that in the case of several thousand theatres, representing a huge aggregate investment, existing conditions cannot at all be fairly described as "well enough." Relief from various unsound and uneconomic practices which are now being carried on not only should be afforded but must be afforded, and it may yet prove true that the necessary relief can only be obtained by resorting to having some outside authority club certain stubborn and unyielding forces into line.

But we trust there will be no misunderstanding now—which may not be susceptible to correction later on—on just what is involved in welcoming outside interference into action relative to the internal problems of the business.

Chicago Conference

THUS far it is impossible to forecast the outcome of the contract convention now in session in Chicago. Conflicting interests are battling for individual advantage and there is no definite indication now available as to whether a conciliatory spirit will rule sufficiently to lead to final conclusions which will be reasonably acceptable to all concerned.

The outcome of this convention will, of course, have a very definite influence on the future course of the Brookhart Bill. The convention should do much to establish whether at this time the highly desirable objective of freedom from outside interference can be maintained. If a conciliatory attitude is maintained by all parties, and if all parties hold themselves willing to offer and accept concessions, the convention will be a demonstration of the further possibilities of round-the-table conference.

Regardless of the degree of satisfaction or dissatisfaction entertained by all parties concerned at the conclusion of the conference there will, of course, be presented to the exhibitors a new contract form concerning which he will have no immediate choice. If the form should prove unacceptable to the majority of exhibitors then the legislation now pending at Washington will assume new and greater significance than it now enjoys.

At the outset of the Chicago conference there appeared to be a disposition to make it a star chamber session as far as the trade press is concerned. This was not a promising start to make. The nature of the work before the various representatives naturally called for executive or closed sessions but this does not lessen the necessity that the trade press should be kept regularly and intelligently advised as to what is taking place. Failure to do this is risking the chance of a misinformed public opinion in the trade, militating against the success of the conference.

Many Big Problems Await Resumed Sessions Feb. 15

Agreements Already Reached Will Eliminate a Number of Sources of Difficulties, Says Statement

By JAY M. SHRECK

The committee appointed following the Federal Trade Practice conference in New York to write a new uniform contract adjourned Monday night until February 15 with many important matters still to be settled after seven days of continuous conference at the Congress hotel, Chicago. The sessions will be resumed at the Congress.

Many Solutions Already Reached

Agreements already reached will eliminate many sources of difficulties over the contract and both exhibitors and distributors have been advised of the other side's complaints and problems, according to an official statement issued after adjournment.

The official statement follows in full:

"After spending seven consecutive days and nights in conference at the Congress hotel in an attempt to agree upon the terms of a uniform contract under which moving pictures will be leased and rented in the United States, the National Joint Contract Committee appointed for that purpose adjourned today until February 15.

"The chairman of the exhibitors' division, Mr. R. F. Woodhull, and the chairman of the distributors' division, Mr. R. H. Cochrane, announced that while agreements have been reached which, it is hoped, will do away with many of the erstwhile sources of contractual trouble between the two branches of the motion picture industry, there are still many knotty problems to be solved. The conferences of the past week have enlightened each side as to the other side's difficulties and complaints.

"During the eight-day recess the exhibitor members of the committee will remain in session while the distributor members will return to New York.

"The committee representative of the unaffiliated exhibitors is Ben Berinstein, R. R. Biechle and H. A. Cole, who took the place of Nathan Yamins. H. M. Richey, secretary.

"Representing the affiliated exhibitors, E. A. Schiller and Fred Desburg.

"Representing the distributors, Felix F. Feist, Phil Reisman, Ned E. Depinet and Joseph I. Schnitzer, alternate. G. L. Hess, Secretary."

Exhibitors not members of the committee began leaving for their homes as early as Wednesday, February 1, the day after the committee had gone into executive session, following the early adjournment of the open forum. It had been the expressed plan of these non-member exhibitors from all parts of the country to meet forenoons and review the work of the committee of the preceding afternoon and make recommendations for the next session.

The committee chose, however, to meet in the forenoons as well, and after Woodhull had made a short talk to the waiting exhibitors on Wednesday morning the latter decided to drop their sessions.

One state leader of exhibitors remarked last week that the new terms offered by the distributors were of such a nature that the unaffiliated theatre owners would be better off with the contract as it stood before the meeting began.

Little for Seventh Arbitrator

In lobby comment during the sessions it had been freely predicted by exhibitors outside the committee that decision on practically every important clause and on at least 75 per cent of the entire contract would necessitate the services of a seventh arbitrator. This arbitrator, according to the agreement at the Federal Trade Practice conference, would be appointed by the chief justice of the United States supreme court.

One committee member stated late Saturday, however, that agreement had been reached, in principle, on practically all clauses, except block booking and arbitration.

Subsequent developments indicated, however, that a complete new contract would be written by the committee and that if the services of a seventh arbitrator should be required it would be to settle only a few points.

Speculation Varies

One report in the lobby was that the block booking problem would not come up in committee at all, that the distributors held it was a matter for the individual theatre and the exchange. That report, however, was not given much credence.

On arbitration, too, there was varied speculation as to what the committee might accomplish. While exhibitors in general at the conference agreed that arbitration had accomplished much good, the compulsory phase of the system came in for some criticism.

School Buys Theatre And That Is That

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—Here's a new one. A high school has bought a motion picture theatre. The transaction took place last week at Wells, N. Y., where the school took over the Wells theatre, owned and operated by George Babcock. The Albany Film Board of Trade received notice of the change. Just how the school plans to operate the theatre, who will do the booking, who will take the tickets, and who will look after the many minor details, isn't explained in the communication that was sent on to Albany.

Edward Peter, Former M.P.T.O.A. Treasurer Dies in Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Feb. 7.—Edward T. Peter, at one time a prominent factor in Texas exhibitor organizations and subsequently treasurer of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, died here suddenly Wednesday of heart failure. Mr. Peter was apparently in good health when he was stricken. Death followed within a few minutes. He was 64 years old.

Mr. Peter came to Birmingham a little more than a year ago from Florida where he has been engaged in real estate. Shortly after his arrival here he became interested in the possibilities of a motion picture studio which would provide facilities for major producers desiring to film stories against authentic backgrounds dealing with the coal, iron and steel industries. He formed the Alabama Motion Picture Company and had made plans for a big studio and sub-division. He was one of the organizers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of American at the inception of that national exhibitor body.

Maryland Blue Nose Law Gets Black Eye in Test Case on Sunday Shows

BALTIMORE, Feb. 7.—A test case against Maryland blue laws appeared to be victorious last week when the grand jury dismissed charges against John G. Callan, member of the legislature, for operating a moving picture show on Sunday.

Callan, who had previously made an unsuccessful fight in the legislature to amend the laws, rented a theatre, and sold programs rather than tickets to the picture show he announced for Sunday night. Callan, the doorkeeper and the operator were arrested. They asked a jury trial and the case was taken before the grand jury.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Sidney Cohen has leased the Bronx Strand theatre and the adjoining open-air theatre at 827-829 Westchester avenue for an additional 21 years over the lease which expires in 1930. The present theatre will soon be modernized and the seating capacity increased to 2,500 seats.

Heated Sessions Awaited; Exhibitors Taking Sides

Theatre Owners Join Exchangemen in Signing Albany Board Petition Opposing Measure

Hearings on the Brookhart bill to prohibit block booking are expected to start soon, according to dispatches from Washington, and leaders in the industry are looking forward to some heated sessions when opponents of the measure and its champions lock horns before the legislative committee.

Sign Petition Opposing Measure

One outstanding event of the week was that New York state theatre owners are joining with exchange managers in signing a petition protesting against the Brookhart measure as inimical to the interests of the small exhibitor.

Following are some of the statements of exhibitors from various sections to correspondents of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD:

Nate Frudenfelt, manager, Capitol theatre, Des Moines—

"The Brookhart bill is silly, as I see it. Motion picture industries are private concerns which should not, by any means, come under government control. The Brookhart bill as proposed, although I hope it will never be passed, may be a blessing in disguise at this time. It may cause enough agitation among producers so that they will attempt to work out a solution of the problem without this interference from Washington. Now if they want to investigate something, why not take the telephone and telegraph companies and the radio corporations? There would be a real job. If I fail to pay my telephone bill by a certain date, I pay the extra 25-cent fee. If I have any dispute of any kind with the company I stand a chance of having my telephone removed. Nobody seems agitated about that except the subscribers.

I believe that the motion picture producers will realize that they can't burden the exhibitor with a complete line of their wares. Just as any merchant must have variety in his merchandise, so must the exhibitor have variety to offer his buying public. The producers will straighten out the situation without government control.

*Compulsory arbitration is all right. Film men are thus their own attorneys, protecting their interests from any abuse which an exhibitor might happen to try to put over. If the exhibitors live up to their contracts they will not be bothered by the arbitration boards.

Jesse Day, manager, Des Moines theatre, Des Moines—

Away back in 1915, when I first became affiliated with the motion picture business, the block booking scheme was a very different proposition from what it is now. We booked the pictures and took the good and the poor as they came and changed pictures every day of the week. I am not now directly in touch with the booking end of the business. If I were managing a small independent theatre, however, I would certainly be concerned with the block booking system as it is alleged to operate. Compulsory arbitration, I'm sure, would not be a satisfactory procedure under such conditions.

Samuel Carver, manager, Liberty theatre, Kansas City—

If the contract committee conference in Chicago succeeds in bringing about at least a preliminary movement which actually will do away with block booking I will say that it is the greatest movement ever to occur in the motion picture industry.

There is no use in exhibitors being forced to abide by the dictations of distributors forever. Block booking is one reason why there are so many deplorable pictures being shown today. They are crammed down the throats of exhibitors, like it or not.

Imagine a producer dictating playdates to a showman, regardless of local conditions. Not even my dentist, doctor or wife dictates dates to me. Why should the producer?

Adolph Eisner, manager, New Gillis theatre, Kansas City—

I am of the firm opinion that at last there has been called a meeting which actually will be productive of a great benefit to the screen industry. At least, that is the way it looks to me.

If block booking were abolished, does it mean that individual pictures would cost the exhibitor more? It is to laugh. If the goose has its neck severed, do the eggs continue to be laid?

The exhibitor is just as important, if not more so, to the producer as the producer is

Brisbane Attacks Brookhart Measure In Appeal Against U. S. Interference

"Our lawmakers should encourage the efficiency and large scale business of American movie concerns instead of seeking to interfere with that business," Arthur Brisbane, editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers, said this week.

"The motto today in industry and commerce is, 'The bigger the better.' Let the little man work for the big man, giving faithful service for good pay, until he finds his chance to become one of the big men."

Film Exports Grow to Highest Mark Since Record of 1919

Increase of 11,367,812 Linear Feet Over 1926 Is Registered—
Every Section of World Except Canada Expands
Consumption of American Pictures

[Special from Department of Commerce]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Increase of 11,367,812 linear feet in exports of motion pictures over 1926 was registered last year, or a total of 231,995,018 feet of positive and negative film as against 220,627,206 in the preceding twelve months. The 1927 figure represents the largest exportation since the inflation year of 1919 with its 273,000,000 feet.

Gain in All Sections Except Canada

Exports of positives in 1927 amounted to 222,546,067 feet with a declared value of $5,775,730, as against 214,026,620 feet valued at $6,395,923 in 1926. Negatives totaled 9,448,951 feet valued at $1,455,519, as against 6,600,586 at $1,334,960 in 1926.

Every section of the world, except Canada, has increased its consumption of American motion pictures.

Latin America still continues to be our largest market in quantity. For the past year, 82,822,376 feet of pictures were exported to that part of the world, as against 73,592,660 in 1926. Europe continues as second largest consumer, importing 69,512,789 feet in 1927, as against 63,128,710 in 1926, but as a revenue producing market it is by far our best. Facilities in European countries to print positives from negative film account for this.

Next comes the Far East, with an increase of 3,000,000 feet over 1926. In 1927 there was exported 58,827,613 feet, as against 55,407,018 in 1926.

Canada Shows Decline

Canada shows a decline of a little over 10,000,000 feet. Canada during 1927 imported 10,920,724 feet, as against 20,985,072 in 1926. This does not, however, mean there are not as many American motion pictures being shown in Canada as in former years. It is understood that a number of American companies have established their own laboratories in Canada and are sending negatives over the border to have positives printed for use in that country.

Africa for 1927 imported 3,882,836 feet, as compared with 3,390,344 in 1926. Other countries account for the remaining 6,028,680 feet, as against the 4,123,402 imported in 1926.

With regards to individual markets, Australia still leads in quantity. During 1927, there were 27,017,656 feet shipped to the Antipodes, as against 26,188,320 feet in 1926.

Argentina, third in 1926, has moved up to second, supplanting Canada, which has dropped to fifth.

The Argentine for 1927 imported 23,730,723 feet, as against 20,922,708 in 1926.

Brazil has also bettered its position by importing 15,921,565, as against the 13,947,118 in 1926, and now is third.

The United Kingdom has advanced to our fourth market from a quantity standpoint but as a revenue producer it still continues to be our best leading market. The footage exported to the United Kingdom shows but a slight increase for 1927, with 13,806,498 feet exported as against 13,423,079 in 1926.

Canada, our fifth market, is followed by Germany, which for 1927 received 10,121,220 feet as against 7,134,739 in 1926.

Mexico, as our seventh market, maintains the same position held in 1926. For 1927 there was exported to our neighbor of the South 9,336,083 feet of American films as against the 9,274,404 feet exported in 1926. Our eighth market is the British West Indies, Bermudas included, which for the first time has entered the charmed circle of the first ten. In 1927 these islands imported 8,075,001 feet compared with 6,082,418 in 1926. Spain has advanced from our sixteenth market in 1926 to our ninth in 1927, with 7,896,226 feet, as against 4,895,917 the previous year.

Japan for 1927 continues as our tenth market, importing 7,103,883, as against 6,327,091 in 1926. France, sixth market in 1926, has dropped to eleventh, importing 6,781,717 feet as compared with 9,414,489. This decrease is probably due to the increased number of negative films sent to Europe.

Following in order named come New Zealand, British India, Chile and Cuba, each importing more than 5,000,000 feet for 1927.

Exports of sensitized not exposed motion picture film show a slight increase for the year 1927, with 49,514,121 feet valued at $1,354,236 exported as against 41,437,050 with a declared value of $1,033,207 in 1926.

Imports of sensitized films not exposed have decreased by 23,000,000 feet for the year 1927, with 278,013,054 valued at $3,709,346, as against 291,682,662 feet at $3,800,295 in 1926.

Negative film for 1927 imports shows a slight increase over 1926.

Foreign positive motion pictures also have increased in 1927, with 3,834,343 feet.

Public Feeling Grows Against Hickman on Screen, Ban in Three Cities Shows

Abolition from the screen of scenes showing William Hickman, the Los Angeles child slayer, is being demanded more and more by public sentiment, according to reports the past week. In three cities public action amounted to absolute bans.

In Okmulgee, Okla., men from the sheriff's office raided the Yale theatre and hacked a wax exploitation figure to bits, after an injunction had been obtained by the W. C. T. U., and the Parent-Teachers Association, against showing of Hickman stereopticon slides. The theatre threatens suit.

No motion pictures of Hickman may be shown in either Elma, Wash., or in Minneapolis, as a result of action by city authorities there. In Elma, just before a performance, Mayor W. E. Patrick and several councilmen requested the management of the Gem to remove all Hickman scenes from the film advertised and to remove all posters representing him. The request was complied with.

In Minneapolis Mayor George E. Leach instructed Chief of Police Frank E. Brunskill to notify all theatres that Hickman pictures "will not be tolerated."

$915,350 Grossed in "Fox Week"; Amount Sets a High Record

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Fox reports gross receipts of $915,350 for the week ending January 27. The figure, which includes foreign and domestic business, is a new high weekly record. It results from the semi-annual celebration of "Fox Week" in motion picture theatres throughout the world.

The previous high record was $829,000 for the week ending January 29, 1927.

Phelps Decker Kills Self; Blame Despair Over Unemployment

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Phelps Decker, until recently scenario editor for Universal, committed suicide last week by gas. He was 41 years old. Despondency because of unemployment is said to be the cause of his act. The body was found by his wife.

Decker assisted Elmer Clifton in the production of Pathe's "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Details for Buying Chain in N. W. Complete, Is Rumor

Purchase Would Give Fox Half of First National Stock, with Control Near

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Official announcement will be made within a few days of the purchase of the Finkelstein & Ruben chain of approximately 150 theatres by William Fox, according to present indications. Moe Finkelstein and others of the chain owners, together with their attorneys, have been in New York for several days and, it is understood, have held several conferences with the Fox officials and attorneys.

Details Worked Out, Is Report

Details of the deal have all been worked out and are awaiting the whipping of all the various angles into legal shape for signing, according to an unverified but strong rumor.

Nothing can be learned from the Fox offices, and this is not astonishing in view of Mr. Fox's experience a couple of years ago when he purchased 36 per cent of the stock of the West Coast Theatres. Negotiations for the closing of sufficient of the remaining stock to give Mr. Fox control, were apparently all settled and Sol Lesser had his pen in hand to sign, when something happened and Lesser got away without signing, Fox thereby losing control.

Now all the names will be on the dotted line before announcement is made by Mr. Fox of any theatre deal.

The purchase of Finkelstein & Ruben it is generally believed, will give Mr. Fox almost, but not quite, control of First National. With his purchase of Wesco he secured 28 per cent of the First National stock. Finkelstein & Ruben is supposed to own 22 per cent. This would give Mr. Fox 50 per cent of the stock by the two deals.

Those who know Mr. Fox are of the opinion that he has or knows where he can get a few more shares and that he will have full control.

Fox Deal with F. & R. Closed, Coast Hears

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—Fox Films last week closed a deal with Finkelstein & Ruben for purchase of its chain in the Northwest, according to unofficial report here today. The absence of Winfield Sheehan from Los Angeles makes it impossible to obtain confirmation but information of a trustworthy nature lends it authenticity.

With the transaction Fox gets 22 per cent of First National stock which is added to 28 per cent bought last week. The total of 50 per cent is believed to be practically a controlling interest due to scattered stock owned by franchise holders in East.

Clara Bow Faces Knife; May Be Weeks in Hospital

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—Specialists state that Clara Bow's pending appendicitis operation will result in her being required to remain in the hospital for several weeks. Plans for her work at the Paramount lot have been suspended until definite word has been received following the operation.

Hold Free Sunday Shows

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

AMARILLO, Tex., Feb. 7.—After operators had been arrested twice, two Amarillo, Texas, theatres Sunday were run as free shows in an attempt to discover some means of operating Sunday shows locally without violating the state blue laws. There are more than 50 cases on court docket at Amarillo awaiting trial.

Guatemala Houses Closed

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—All moving picture theatres in Guatemala have closed because of the alleged excessive special taxes imposed upon them, according to advices from the American Consul in Guatemala in a report made public by the Department of Commerce.

Flames Sweep Two Theatres But Bravery of Organist and Comedian Avert Disorder

Billy Ganz, organist at the Isis theatre, Kansas City suburban house, was headlined in the daily papers as the hero of the hour last week. As Billy was playing a solo he saw flames shooting up from back stage. He summoned the manager, quietly, who requested the audience to file out as Billy played a march. As the last patron left the theatre the burning curtain fell across the console, showering Ganz with flaming debris, but Billy picked up his music and fled. Damage to the theatre was estimated at $15,000. Only six months before he lost $200 worth of music in a theatre fire in Sedalia.

Heroism on a par with Ganz's was displayed last week when Rody Jordan, blackface comedian, told jokes and played a saxophone until smoke drove him from the stage in a fire at the Fair theatre, Amarillo, Texas, preventing disorder in the audience. The theatre was emptied in an orderly manner, but was considerably damaged.

Stroheim States Own Version of Tilt over "Wedding March"

Director Says Powers Endorsed His Plan for Two Distinct Productions, Then He Was Taken Off Editing

[The following article by Eric von Stroheim, copyrighted by the Mercury Publishing Company, is reprinted from the "Film Mercury."]

By ERICH VON STROHEIM

FIRST of all, I would like to say that most of the facts that have been printed concerning the making and editing of "The Wedding March" were either false or greatly exaggerated.

The production neither cost as much to produce, nor was it as long in the making, as has been reported. I also fail to see why I am singled out as being the industry's most extravagant director, when no less than ten other directors have spent far more time and money in the making of films than I have.

DURING the past year there have been at least two outstanding examples of highly expensive films, far exceeding in cost anything I have ever produced, which consumed lengthy periods in the making and which it is generally conceded will show losses for the producers.

And yet no one is raising a great hue and cry about the wastage on these productions, nor are the directors being held up as squanderers.

Shooting on "The Wedding March" was started on June 1, 1926, and the final scenes were shot on or about February 15, 1927—a little over eight months.

Says It Cost $1,125,000

While it has been reported that the production cost around two million dollars, the actual figures when I had completed shooting the picture were approximately $1,125,000. I have lately heard that the official figures are set down as $1,800,000. Where this other $600,000 went is one of the little mysteries which only motion picture executives can explain—but don't.

When I started editing "The Wedding March," I had exactly fifty reels of roughly assembled film with all taken scenes running full length—not one inch cut out. Counting the two negatives this made all together 100 reels, or 200,000 feet of film for two negatives.

This stands against approximately three hundred reels of film on "Wings" for one negative, or against two hundred reels on "Uncle Tom's Cabin," not to mention the huge amount of film shot on many other big productions at various studios.

Denies Too Long Editing

Another complaint offered against me is that I was taking up too much time in the editing of the film. If I had been receiving money for the time which I was spending in editing "The Wedding March" such a complaint might be understood, but I was contributing my editorial services without pay.

Aside from this, I contend that if the editing of "The Wedding March" had remained in my hands, cutting of the film would have been completed long before now.

Proposed Split into Two Films

Here are a few of the pertinent facts in regard to the editing of the picture:

After a certain amount of editing had been done on "The Wedding March" I

evolved the idea of dividing the production into two films—one to be called "The Wedding March," the other to be called "The Honeymoon." These films were to be distinct stories, each having its own beginning and ending, each complete in itself, neither one dependent upon the other as reported in the press.

On this basis I went ahead with the cutting and editing the film with two distinct stories in view. Barring a short sequence necessary in "The Honeymoon," no additional scenes would be needed. I was proceeding rapidly with the work and would have finished editing both pictures last October 15.

On October 8, however, I was suddenly taken off the film. B. P. Schulberg announced that he was turning the editing of the picture over to Joseph von Sternberg, whom, he stated, would edit the picture in two weeks' time.

Instead von Sternberg spent several weeks on the editing and then his version proved to unsatisfactory to Paramount that they took the picture away from him and turned it over to Julian Johnston for a new editing.

Mr. Johnston spent several more weeks working on the picture and it was his version that was recently shown in Anaheim and reviewed by the Film Mercury.

Paramount admits that the picture is still far from being in a finished state.

Protests Removal

I fail to see, therefore, why I was removed from the job of editing on the score of delaying release, when Paramount is still assembling the picture several months after I would have finished it. Also, I contend that when I completed cutting, Paramount would have had two good productions, instead of the one poor one now in their possession.

In the midst of this editorial mixup, P. A. Powers made a trip to New York to show the two-picture version to Mr. Lasky. M. Lasky refused even to look at it. As Mr. Powers refused to accept Julian Johnston's version, however, Mr. Lasky gave him permission to cut down the two-picture version into one of about twelve reels.

Powers then had his manager make one picture out of the original two and cut it down to the required twelve reels. When he delivered this version to the Lasky people they accepted it without looking at it, but at the preview in Anaheim they showed the Julian Johnston version.

I have no complaint against the men who attempted to re-edit the picture. But it seemed ridiculous to call in someone else to edit a picture of this type, with so much at stake, when the man who made it and who understood the real meaning of every foot of film was ready and willing to do the job for nothing.

Re-Takes

WELL, I see a bunch of determined exhibitors met in Chicago last week and passed a few resolutions. They won six points at the trade parley last year, which encouraged them some and they see no reason why they shouldn't do a little more demanding.

The only trouble with the picture business is it's so shifty. The moment you think you've got the halter on, it walks off leaving you holding the strap.

Silent No Longer

If a few more talking devices are introduced it won't be the silent drama long. I heard a two-hours' demonstration of the Movietone last Sunday night at the Fox studios and never saw so many military bands in my life. Every country except China was represented. As I sat there and saw and listened to the sweet strains of French, Hungarian and German bands it occurred to me those folks over there would get quite a thrill out of seeing and hearing their national anthems while seated in a cozy theatre.

The Movietone is well nigh perfect when it comes to reproducing sounds. I got the greatest kick out of watching those ancient and modern locomotives gliding along the rails, with their rhythmic purr, and it renewed my first ambition—to be a railroad engineer.

Sports

I see Jack Dempsey is playing ping pong these days. I thought he wouldn't give up training entirely even though he says he's going to retire.

Two Birds with One Stone

Those Duncan sisters know how to grab off space in the papers, don't they? First they both announce engagements to two young men, and after that had soaked in, they announce all bets are off.

Keeps 'Em Out

Fox studios has the world's champion gate crasher, "One-eyed" Connelly, as a gate tender now and not a soul has got inside the studio grounds without sworn credentials for two weeks.

We've Got One

Word comes from Buffalo that one must have five overcoats to be in style this year. That's tough. We're just four years behind the style then.

Famous Last Words

"I want a good seat in the center of the house."

Is that fellow fishing, Meadows, or has he lost something in Hollywood boulevard? Oh, he's hunting for his parked fliv. I see.

Two Film Companies Now Combined Under One Head

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

DENVER, Feb. 7.—The Alexander Film Company of Denver, Colorado, and the Pyramid Film Company of Dayton, Ohio, have joined forces. Their combined activities are to be operated under the name of the Alexander Film Company and managed by the officers of the same. The Alexander Industries will own the controlling stock of the new company.

RUINS OF THE PREMIER THEATRE in Fall River, Mass. This playhouse had only recently been rebuilt and was opened with elaborate exercises. As the flames which destroyed the heart of Fall River crept slowly towards this building the audience was dismissed. Half an hour later only the smoldering ruins seen in the picture remained. The two brick chimney-like piles in the center foreground mark each side of the orchestra.

Paramount's "Beau Geste" was rated the best picture of 1927 in a nation-wide poll conducted for the 1928 Film Daily Year Book, just published. This picture received 235 of the 286 votes possible, while Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Big Parade" was second with 205, and Fox's "What Price Glory," third, with 179.

The next seven productions leading in the vote were Paramount's "The Way of All Flesh," 167; M-G-M's "Ben Hur," 164; Fox's "Seventh Heaven," 162; M-G-M's "Chang," 146; Paramount's "Underworld," 97; United Artists' "Resurrection," 91; and M-G-M's "Flesh and the Devil," 77.

No recent roadshows with showings in only a few cities were to be considered.

New Theatres to Rise on Sites Of 2 Razed by Fall River Fire

Yamins Rushes Home from Contract Conference to Plan Construction—Flames Engulf Structures as Orderly Audiences Reach Zone of Safety

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

FALL RIVER, Mass., Feb. 7.—When dawn came in a cloudless zero sky Friday it revealed a mass of smoldering ruins where, the night before theatre crowds and hundreds of motor cars dodged each other on the main streets of a busy England city.

Rialto and Premier Destroyed

Two of the city's largest theatres, the Rialto and Premier, were only piles of dust. Here and there in the streets were huge piles of ice from which long lines of ice extended like the tentacles of a mythical monster. There were the pieces of fire apparatus, buried under small mountains of ice, the hose lines similarly coated.

Far down among these powerful engines on Saturday, talking with a group of men who had been on the job throughout the night, was Nathan Yamins, owner of the Rialto, who, at the news of the calamity, had rushed home from Chicago where he had been attending a meeting of the uniform contract committee. He was a member of the group representing unaffiliated exhibitors.

"I would like to have about ten feet more land at the rear," Yamins was saying. "It will give me better opportunity to lay out the stage and auditorium."

Already Planning New Houses

Nate Yamins is going to build two new theatres—two of the finest theatres in New England. As fast as men and materials can work, these modern playhouses are to go forward.

While theatre crowds gathered Thursday night, a dull red glow was seen and the shrill screech of the fire sirens was heard. People watched and then, fearful of missing the early pictures, entered the theatres. The orchestras played and laughter greeted the comedy film. Then, just before the long feature was to be shown there was a delay at the Rialto. Someone stepped to the stage. The Pocasset Mill, he said, was afire. There was a high wind and as a matter of safety the show would be discontinued temporarily. The audience would be given checks as they passed out and could use them some other night, or later that night if they desired. Lights were turned on and the audience filed out, each lingering to get his check. There was no disorder, not even haste.

As the last of the audience left the theatre, out of town apparatus came bellying into the streets nearby. More and more apparatus continued to arrive. Police and then Naval Reserves and then State Troopers and National Guardsmen mingled in the crowd, directing and urging haste in giving firemen a chance to lay hose lines.

Even before the zone of safety was reached there came a red glow in the Rialto theatre. Gradually it grew in brightness, like coals in a huge furnace. There was a great puff of flame, walls crumbled and the Rialto was no more.

On down the street crept the flames. Audi-

Exhibitor Thinks before He Buys Nowadays, Declares Manager

Old Idea of Being Interested Only in Keeping Playdates Filled Is Over Now, Says Texan

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 7.—“Of prime importance to the motion picture producer of today is the standard of excellence which he maintains as an average for the firm output,” declared H. E. Pickett, branch manager of the San Antonio Paramount exchange, in commenting on the increased discrimination being exercised by exhibitors in their buying of pictures. “It used to be, five years ago, that a film salesman could go into the small town and land at one shot an outlet for fifty or sixty mediocre pictures, because in those days an exhibitor was interested only in keeping his playdates filled and had not become the craftsman and judge of product that he is today.”

“YEARS of experience have taught him, I believe, the value of booking good films with an appeal. In the case of the independent exhibitor today, much thought is put into his bookings. As the beginning of the year he decides his policy, the number of playdates and the class of product he thinks will be the most beneficial to him, and watches carefully the announcements of new films to fill open dates. He weeds out the undesirable pictures or stars—he usually knows in his case what the patron wants and will pay for—and selects with care the bookings for open dates.”

Emphasizes Trade Advertising

Pickett, who has been with Paramount five years as salesman and branch manager, knows from actual experience that the hit and miss methods of the old type of film salesman do not go today, and says that he is sure experience with red ink has proved to be one of the biggest factors in making the showman of today the good judge of film that he is supposed to be.

Pickett is also a firm believer in steady and firm advertising in the trade journals.

“The exhibitor now follows more carefully advertising in trade journals than ever before has been the case,” he says. “The biggest pictures of the past three years have been put over by careful and systematized national advertising campaigns to exhibitors and patrons, and seldom is there a case where a nationally boosted product fails to bring in the crowds to the box-office.”

“The Film Board of Trade today also plays a great part in picture selection and discrimination,” says Pickett. “The exhibitor cannot now book a list of 25 or 30 pictures with the idea of playing only six six or eight of the best and throwing out the remainder. The board has practically done away with this practice and has brought selling from a haphazard profession to its high position in the country today. The exhibitor now knows that he cannot possibly run his business in such a manner—he has graduated from such slow time stuff.”

“The star, as a general rule, does not play the important part that he did a few years ago,” according to Pickett, “because the public has come to believe that the story is the thing, and that if the story is good the acting rarely ever fails to be so.” Pickett adds that a real star today means a lot to the box-office, but says that with a few poor stories the star's value will be killed, as has been witnessed in several cases the past few years.

Pickett mirrors the thought of practically any exchange man in the South. He knows that the exhibitor's opinion of a picture goes a long way toward determining the success of future films of the producers.

Lindy's Visit Aids F B O Air Thriller in Mexico

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Luis Lezama, who recently organized FBO Pictures of Mexico, capitalized on the recent gala visit of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh by releasing with success the F B O picture, “The Non-Stop Flight.”

When it became evident that Lindbergh's flight to Mexico City would be an outstanding event in Mexican history, Lezama made immediate arrangements to put over the F B O aviation thriller. The picture is reported to have done a record business.

“Jazz Singer” a Story of Youth, “King of Kings” Untrue, Minister Tells Jews

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 7.—“The Jazz Singer” is a picture of the entire life of youth.”

These two statements by Rev. Wafford C. Timmons, pastor of the First Congregational church, sum up his comparison of the two pictures in an address before the Temple Men's Club of Shaare Emeth Temple, here last Tuesday.

“I sat through the King of Kings,” Rev. Timmons said, “and while it is a tremendous dramatic production, there is no truth in it from beginning to end. It is true that the picture has educational advantages, but it is untrue regarding the Jews. It is most unfair to charge against a people the fault of a particular group.”

“The picture is unfair so far as Christ is concerned. Christ should be the highest embodiment of virtue and manhood. In the picture He is personified as an anemic sort of person. Then, too, there is too much emphasis on miracles in the picture. The modern Christian does not think his religion depends upon miracles.”

“I also take exception to the characterization of God as a tyrant. He really is a Father, as Jesus pictures Him.”

“The Jazz Singer,” he declared, “has been called the story of the life of Al Jolson, but it is the story of the entire life of youth, of my boy and your boy, my girl and your girl. This is an age of conflict between the new and the old, the modern and ancient. There is expressed in the picture a pulsating, palpitating life of a new generation seeking to express itself, while tradition is attempting to throttle it.”

Congratulations on the Merger Still Coming In

From ELI WHITNEY COLLINS

Martin J. Quigley,
Editor and Publisher,
*Exhibitors Herald

Maybe I'm a little late with my congratulations but I'll shoot them through just the same, for the amalgamation of the two excellent trade papers into one that I am sure will maintain the high quality of both is a real event in the industry.

No longer directly interested in the business, I am, nevertheless, much pleased with every forward step it makes, a man cannot devote the best part of his life to a business and then completely forget it.

The HERALD-WORLD still reaches my desk and is about the only contact I now have with the industry except for some fine letters occasionally from some of the great fellows with whom I was associated in the M. P. T. O. A.

I warmly congratulate your publication upon retaining you as editor. (By the way, I am now an editor myself, being the sole owner, publisher, editor, business manager, circulation manager and director general of a county newspaper called THE JOURNAL.)

The quality of the HERALD-WORLD continues high and I am sure it always will. The elimination of one publication will benefit the industry generally and I feel that you will develop yours into one of the greatest trade papers in any industry.

Congratulations again, and warmest regards.

Eli Whitney Collins.

From LESLEY MASON

Martin J. Quigley,
Editor and Publisher,

Your amalgamation of the oldest trade paper in the business with the most vigorous and enterprising, is a logical and not at all surprising step to one who has followed your career as a publisher with admiration and esteem.

You have every reason to anticipate an unparalleled success with the bigger and better publication you are now guiding, and I hope the coming years will enable you to realize not only that increased material success which you deserve, but will afford you the opportunity to raise motion picture trade journalism to a level of aggressive and constructive leadership that has not been known since the early days of the industry.

With heartiest good wishes and warm personal regards.

Stories Told
by the Camera

Columbia chieftains, noting the directorial gifts of Frank Capra, have given him choice opportunities lately. The last one was "That Certain Thing." Then, the other day, he was assigned to "Broadway Daddies," which will star Bessie Love.

Abraham Lincoln

Born: Feb. 12, 1809

Below, that date is aptly honored. (Farina, of Roach-M-G-M's "Our Gang.")

Maude Fulton, writer, vaudevillienne, and mime. Versatile? Indeed, yes! Author of "The Brat" and other plays, she was also 16 years in variety. The picture shows her as a comedienne in Gotham's "Bare Knees," which stars Virginia Lee Corbin.

You know—or don't you?—that next Tuesday is Valentine's Day. Therefore, we think this picture of Dorothy Gulliver rather appropriate. The old-fashioned motor car symbolizes this Universal player's old-fashioned heart. Still, doesn't that indicate that though cars may change, old-fashioned hearts go on forever?

And here's a 1928 contraption to deliver Colleen Moore's valentines (she has them, we suspect, in the tonneau). It being, according to the Ford Motor Company, your favorite car, you naturally like to have it pictured in your favorite magazine. Here also is First National's great favorite, for good measure.

Not that love disbelieves in signs. Being blind, it just can't read 'em—an optical deficiency long cheered by the world. Doubtless you recognize James Hall and Greta Nissen. They have the leads in the Caddo-United Artists production, "Hell's Angels." (And rumor says they're engaged, but nobody KNOWS.)

The Evolution of a Sneeze, a practical demonstration by Karl Dane, the eminent M-G-M comedian.

—Pshaw, it fizzled! . . . Well, as Oscar Wilde would say, Life is like that!

Languorous love amid the sensual beauty of a tropical island lends itself to a fine technicolor treatment in Rayart's short feature, "The Call of the Sea." Shown in the scene above is Hope Hampton, who is the featured player.

One Roach-M-G-M player taking another "for a ride," though not in the Chicago manner. Edna Marion, you see, drives a roadster in her spare time, much to Charley Chase's admiration. The picture shows what a little flattery may do.

Nobody, we suppose, likes his malted milk accompanied by this sort of thing. Still, it happens at the best regulated soda fountains. The tense episode pictured was adapted from life for "Speedy," Harold Lloyd's new Paramount comedy, in which destiny frequently makes a frappe out of his good intentions.

Ordering the meat for dinner in Chicago. It seems Phyllis Haver wanted beef kidneys, while Victor Varconi, being stronger, had a better chance to indulge his desire for lamb chops, off the end. Yet Smith & Wesson makes everyone equal! So—But see "Chicago," Pathe's interpretation of that lively metropolis.

More professional jealousy! Does Ranger care that Director Jerome Storm cut his favorite scenes from "The Law of Fear" (F B O)? Observe his appeal to the author, William Francis Dugan (seated).

Anny Ondra, of Czechoslovakia, who has been given the lead in "God's Clay," First National production which has just been put into work at the Elstree studios in London.

The problem was: Which to picture, Dorothy Dwan and Nick Grinde, leading woman and director for M-G-M's adventurer, Tim McCoy—or, the performing oompus? This is the correct solution.

What's wrong with this picture? Paul Terry of Aesop's Fables fame (left), had complimented Rudolph Schildkraut on his characterization in a scene for Pathe's "His Country." Schildkraut replied, "The credit, sir, is due my director, William K. Howard." Two insignificant prizes will be awarded the winners, perhaps.

One good laugh deserves another, and these two co-operate to that end. He does it, and he says it. Result: nation-wide guffaws. Jimmie Adams, on your left, is the doer, while Al Martin, is the sayer, by virtue of his privilege of titling Paramount-Christie comedies.

N. Y. Film Club's Hunt for Rooms Finds Three Possible Sites

Sholtz Appointed Sales Manager of Zakora Corporation—Chaplin Loses Motion to F-N Over "The Kid"—Jannings Film Breaks Record

By JOHN S. SPARGO

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The Motion Picture Club of New York is on the eve of selecting its permanent quarters. The real estate committee, over a period of some three months investigated about 30 possible sites. Choice has been narrowed to three definite proposals, according to a report made to the board of directors Friday at the Hotel Astor.

Al Lichtman, who has been out of the city for some time, presided at the meeting.

THE three proposals are representative of the three possibilities which the club has had in mind from the start, that is, a clubhouse of its own, quarters in a Longacre Square hotel, or quarters in an office building, where restaurant facilities would be available and where the club would not have to be responsible for its own kitchen. The clubhouse under consideration would do very well for a club of two to three hundred members, but the club is already of that size and its growth is so certain that the board was least impressed by this proposition. Final determination as between the other two will await a complete report from the engineers of the hotel under consideration.

With the return of Arthur Stebbins, reports from the membership committee were considered, and ten new members were elected. Plans looking toward the first dinner were also discussed.

Sholtz Heads Zakora Sales

Bernard Sholtz, former sales manager for P. D. Form Firm to Run Chain of Theatres in N. C.; N. L. Royster at Head

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 7.—Organization of the Circle Amusement Company, with N. L. Royster, former Southern theatre manager for Warner Brothers, at the head, has been completed here. The concern will buy and operate a chain of theatres in North Carolina, and also buy and sell theatre leases. The company now owns and operates the Pastime and Westmore in Concord, N. C.

Royster is secretary and treasurer of the Theatre Owners Association of North Carolina. George F. Dombhart is vice-president of the new company.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.—The option given by S. Z. Poli on the Poli circuit theatres to Morris Schoolman, which was to have expired January 31, has been extended by mutual agreement, according to statement from both offices. It is understood that a question of title to one property is the cause of the delay in actual transfer, although verification of the rumor is not obtainable from any source. It is not known how long the extension of the option is granted.

ences were leaving the Premier theatre. Here and there the wall of flame would jump across a street and another building would turn to a huge red pile and then crumble. Firemen were making heroic efforts to hold the fire back but slowly it drove the fighters before it. The Premier in front of which firemen made a valiant stand, was seen to be smoking, then became, like the Rialto, a roaring furnace for a moment and crumbled as the fire passed beyond it.

Yamins, head of the New England Exhibitors Association, has been preaching optimism about the show business for years. The fire was a blow to him but his plans for newer and better playhouses will be ready for figuring as soon as architects can draw specifications.

Brunettes More Emotional Film Love Test Shows

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—By elaborate and allegedly delicate instruments known in scientific circles as the sphygmomanometer and the pneumograph, by charts and graphs and by the simpler expedient of holding hands, Dr. William Marston, a lecturer on psychology at Columbia University, proved recently that brunettes react far more violently to amatory stimuli than blondes. Scenes from "Flesh and the Devil" were used as the "motivating force."

British Money Barons Buy Theatres to Keep Americans Out, Report

(From the London Representative of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Big news has broken upon the industry this week. It is now disclosed that a very powerful financial group is busy up and down the country buying up theatres with, it is said, the object of trying out a policy of vaudeville with pictures and vitaphone. Large halls in all the main cities and in London, working on uniform prices of admission, are to be operated, it is reported.

Sir Walter Gibbons, remembered for his staunch opposition to the Films Quota Act, is called the chief of the scheme, but the real power behind the move is said to be F. A. Szarvasy, who is a director of many companies, including the concern which controls the Daily Mail. The real object of the move is to prevent American plans for the acquisition of a big holding of English theatres, according to the report.

Already £5,000,000 has been spent by the new circuit, and buying is to continue even at fabulous prices, until the concern has hold of over 100 halls, it is said.

Well! "Trags" Helped Build the "Big Ditch!"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PANAMA, R. P., Feb. 1.—The Panama American, in its issue of January 21, says that W. E. Tragsdorf, chief of the personnel bureau of the chairmans office in construction days (during building of the canal), has cabled greetings to his friends in the zone. "Mr. Tragsdorf is in Neillsville, Wis." the paper adds, "and it was last reported that he is operating a chain of motion picture theatres in that vicinity."

(W. E. Tragsdorf is proprietor of Trag's theatre in the Wisconsin city which the paper names.)

"The Busy Girl" Leaves F. & R. for Los Angeles

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 7.—When anyone calls at the big offices of Finkelstein and Rubin, he is met and welcomed by a little auburn haired beauty by the name of Pearl Mae Sgutt. She is no small cog in the office machinery of this firm and a big asset she is to it, for every application for a position as usher, janitor or any other help around the chain of theatres passes through her hands.

She also has complete charge of all passes issued to the various theatres, keeps the personnel records, gives out information and in her odd moments takes dictation from members of the firm. And now this charming young lady, known to everyone as "the busy girl," has cast gloom around the office, for Pearl Mae is leaving for Los Angeles with her mother.

Two Film Theatre Bills Enter New York House

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—Two bills of much importance to owners of motion picture theatres in New York state were introduced in the legislature last week. The first bill, if it passes, will allow unaccompanied children between the ages of 10 and 16 to be admitted to theatres between 2 p. m. and 6 p. m., if the theatres maintain a matron at their expense.

The second bill would prohibit the selling of tickets by a theatre unless there was a seat available for each patron at the time the ticket was sold. The bill, however, carries a provision that a theatre can issue tickets limited to its standing capacity, such to be determined by local authorities.

Warner Brothers Signs Agnes Franey, Dancer

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Warner Brothers has signed Agnes Franey, dancer, now a member of the cast of "Rio Rita," to a long term contract.

Credit for the discovery of Miss Franey goes to Archie Mayo, Warner Brothers director, who was so impressed by her screening possibilities that he arranged for a camera test.

Exhibitors to Aim Exploitation at Women as Biggest B. O. Asset

Book Pictures According to Appeal to Feminine Patrons—Demand Courtesy — Build More Attractive Restrooms — Rout Annoyers—Now Plan to Rearrange Advertising

[By Special Correspondents of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—Exhibitors of Albany and Troy, N. Y., blushed last week, actually blushed as they admitted that they were doing little or nothing out of the ordinary toward attracting the patronage of the fair sex. But as they blushed they made a resolution to the effect that, from now on, they will take advantage of what several termed as one of the best hints the EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD has ever advanced. Naturally these exhibitors want to do everything possible to build up their business. They are the sort who appreciate suggestions and are ever on the alert to adopt them.

Take Woman Patronage for Granted

It's rather odd that this angle had never made any great impression in the conduct of their theatres. They have simply been taking the woman patronage as something for granted. Of course they have been booking pictures that carry an appeal to the women as well as to the men. They have demanded courtesy on the part of the box office and on the part of the ushers. It is noticeable that as theatres are built in this section, the restrooms are made more and more attractive.

Matrons in charge of these rooms, especially of the more elaborate type, endeavor to have their women patrons do their powdering in the washrooms, rather than before the mirrors of the restrooms, in order that powder will not gather in the brocades, and later rub off on the women's clothing.

Plan New Exploitation Angle

But so far as exploitation and newspaper advertising, the exhibitors of these two cities have done nothing up to this time toward attracting women patronage.

There is one thing, however, that must be said and that is that the exhibitors of the two cities have conducted a campaign that has brought results in one sense. There is no longer any annoying of women by men who seek out the motion picture theatre as a place to pick up acquaintance. Ushers have been cautioned to watch out for this type of man, and particularly the man who is seen to change his seat with the obvious purpose of locating next to an unaccompanied woman. Such men are asked to leave the theatre and their admission is refunded at the box office.

This campaign has become noised about, with the result that few, if any, women are annoyed these days at the motion picture theatres of either Albany or Troy.

Several of the theatres use flowers in their lobbies in appealing to the women. This has been particularly true of the State theatre in Schenectady, where a bowl of cut flowers is always on display.

Columbia Assigns Milne To Bessie Love Script

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—Peter Milne, recently signed to a long-term contract by Columbia Pictures, has been assigned to write the continuity for Bessie Love's first starring vehicle for Columbia, as yet untitled. It will be directed by Frank Capra.

Walter Lang's initial production since his return to the Columbia studios will be a story of the Far East, tentatively titled "Lovers in Damascus." R. Beers Loos, stage and screen writer and critic, has been signed as assistant to Elmer Harris, scenario editor.

U-A Appoints Schlaifer Manager of District 1

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—L. J. Schlaifer assumed his new post yesterday as manager for United Artists of district 1, embracing New York City, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Boston, New Haven and Portland. He was formerly general manager of Universal Theatres in the West.

Bombs Damage Two Theatres; Labor Union, Discharged Employes Blamed

Police of East St. Louis, Ill., and the sheriff of St. Clair county are investigating an explosion of dynamite that damaged the Idlewild theatre in East St. Louis shortly after midnight last Thursday.

The dynamite had been placed against a sidewall, about 20 feet of which was blown away, hurling two sections of sheet iron about 70 feet into a vacant lot. The police are inclined to attribute the blast to labor difficulties between Grover C. Thomas, proprietor of the theatre, and union organizations.

Anticipating trouble, Thomas had placed three watchmen armed with shot guns in the theatre. The guards had moved their cots from the vicinity of the explosion to another part of the building.

Thomas has contended that he could not meet the demands of the unionists and operate profitably. The theatre, a neighborhood house, was damaged to the extent of about $200.

The second attempted bombing in several weeks of the Palace Hippodrome, Seattle, last week, started an intensified police quest of the perpetrators. Slight damage was done by the last explosion. Discharged employes are suspected.

Schenck and Wanamaker Have Highest Insurance

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, last week took out additional insurance on his life for $1,000,000. Schenck now ranks as carrying more life insurance than any man in the world with the exception of Rodman Wanamaker. He is insured for $6,000,000 which is divided among several companies, with his wife Norma Talmadge and the United Artists corporation, and other interests named as beneficiaries.

Colony Faces Severe Lull in Work; 11 Specials Under Way

Anticipated Cut in Production Strikes Film Center; Rapid Completion of Many Pictures Leaves Only 36 in Actual Process; Lloyd on "Most Expensive Film"

By DOUGLAS HODGES

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—Eleven pictures of the first class are under way with such stars and directors as Colleen Moore, George Fitzmaurice, F. W. Murnau, Alfred E. Green, Emil Jannings and Ernst Lubitsch involved in their production.

Pictures of the program variety have dropped off to 25 with the plans for the near future, of course, very roseate and gratifying. One month ago there were 47 productions under way with promises from producers that there would be no lessening of production.

De Mille Directing "Godless Girl"

With regard to the expenditures of money it is probable that production remains at an even pace. Cecil B. De Mille's "The Godless Girl," in which Marie Prevost and Lina Basquette appear, is surely an expensive thing which is difficult to estimate. One hundred thousand dollars will undoubtedly have been spent on it before it is titled.

There is no measuring the money spent on "Tempest" which United Artists started last October. Barrymore is trying to get certain results which have necessitated the re-shooting of thousands of feet of film and the scrapping of enough celluloid to have made a complete picture. His most recent director is Sam Taylor, who is working valiantly to bring the picture to an economically successful ending.

"Four Devils" to Run High

F. W. Murnau's American reputation, gained by his making of "Sunrise," leads to the expectation that he will build mammoth sets and properties, not without wonderful effects, that cost high. His "Four Devils," which stars Janet Gaynor for Fox Films, will cost far over $100,000 and is likely to come nearer to a half million, according to "inside information." Murnau pleads for protection from the visiting crowds and is the only director in Hollywood who will not work with an audience.

Luther Reed, who began shooting "Hell's Angels" November 7, for Caddo Productions-United Artists, continues to work day and night in an effort to bring the big picture to an end in February. It has already incurred a cost of $300,000.

Harold Lloyd is filming the finishing touches on "Speedy," which he says is the most expensive picture he has ever made. It has involved a long location trip to New York City and many shorter trips and has been under way since July 30, 1927.

Lubitsch Film Over $150,000

Ernst Lubitsch is in the early part of "The Patriot," which stars Emil Jannings and has worked many scenes with expensive mobs. It is at all odds a picture which people on the Paramount lot say will cost $150,000 or more.

Fred Thomson, after working long and earnestly over the script and location spots for "The Sunset Legion," has finally got started on his next big one for Paramount.

Others of the big ones are "Hangman's House," with John Ford directing; "Honor Bound," with Alfred E. Green directing; "Lilac Time," starring Colleen Moore; and M-G-M's "Laugh Clown Laugh."

Warners to Begin Comedy Before Official Opening

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—Warner Brothers' opening March 1 will be preceded by two pictures made this month featuring Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook. The studio will be theoretically closed however until the first day of next month.

Niblo Moves to U. A. to Begin "La Paiva"

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—Fred Niblo moved his megaphone to the United Artists lot yesterday where he began preliminaries on the filming of "La Paiva" (Pah-Eva) which may star Lupe Valez, Douglas Fairbanks' former leading woman. Niblo completed "Leatherface" Saturday.

Finishes "Yellow Lily"

HOLLYWOOD.—Bess Meredyth, who has been preparing for the screen "The Yellow Lily," has been working 18 hours a day for the past week to finish the Lajos Biro story for a shove-up on production schedule. Miss Meredyth wrote "30" on her script Wednesday and departed Thursday for Palm Springs.

Trucking up to Truckee in California, the Fox company found the snow that made possible a long sequence in "The Red Dancer of Moscow." The sequence shooting was also made possible by the young gentlemen above. Most prominent are Raoul Walsh, astute director of this and many other dramatic film things, and the chief cameraman of the outfit, Charles G. Clarke, whose name is regularly in up to date news of the trade.

FBO Will Begin Sound-Pictures Within Month, Says LeBaron

Device to Be Installed in Melrose Avenue Lot March 1—Several Films on New Program to Have Scores

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—A complete outfit for the recording and reproduction of sound in connection with motion pictures will be installed at the FBO studios here by March 1, according to William LeBaron, vice-president. LeBaron returned from New York Wednesday where he witnessed a demonstration of the new device.

Work to Begin Immediately

The General Electric Company is sending an engineering expert from the laboratories with the apparatus and work will begin immediately with a production unit especially assigned for this at the studio. Space has been set aside for the installation of the General Electric's new patent.

EXPERIMENTS toward the practical development of the device will be made in Hollywood, according to LeBaron, and as rapidly as possible a new technique somewhere between stage and screen will be devised for the filming of talking or operatic pictures. While the tie-up with the Radio Corporation of America, and the General Electric and Westinghouse companies will not immediately affect the product of FBO, it is stated undoubtedly a number of the pictures on the new program will have musical scores on the film.

Thomas Meighan returned to the Coast last Thursday, after an extended vacation in Florida and New York. Plans for Meighan's next picture to be filmed by the Caddo Company for Paramount, are well under way and work is scheduled to start about March 1. It is to be a melodramatic tale of rum-running and maritime hijacking. Lewis Milestone is to direct.

Ramon Novarro set aside rumors that he was leaving pictures forever, by signing a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last week. He has just completed, "China Bound."

Betty Bronson, Blanche Sweet, and "Micky" Neilan left last week on a three months' trip to Europe. They will visit London, Paris, Berlin and Rome. This is Miss Bronson's first trip abroad.

George Marshall, supervisor of comedies for Fox Films, has elevated Jasper Blystone to a directorship. He will direct "Daisies Won't Yell" as his first assignment.

Harold Lloyd is shipping the first pair of horn rimmed glasses he ever wore to the first international film exhibition to be held at the Hague, Holland, April 14 to May 15. The glasses will be one of the feature exhibits which is being staged for the benefit of the Dutch Red Cross.

The writers of Hollywood are about to adopt a "code of ethics" for scenarists somewhat on the order of those enjoyed by the legal and medical professions. As an initial move the following well known screen writers met at the Roosevelt hotel last week, Charles Logue, Agnes Christine Johnstone, Bess Meredyth, Barney Glazer and John Goodrich, and agreed on a decalogue, which is now being drafted and will be presented to the Academy.

THE STUDIO PREVIEW

"The Show-Down"

"THE Show-Down" is George Bancroft's initial starring vehicle for Paramount. It is heavy fare but serves as an ideal stellar introduction for the big, likeable actor and he delivers with telling effect and conviction. The story, adapted from Houston Branch's play, is a study in psychology. It depicts the ravages of the heat of the tropics upon a small group of men working an oil well, trying to control their emotions yet distrusting each other. The picture has an all-star cast, consisting of Evelyn Brent, as Sibyl Shelton; Neil Hamilton, as Shelton; Fred Kohler, as Winters; Helene Lynch as Goldie; Arnold Kent as Pickerell, Leslie Fenton as Kilgore, and George Kuwn as Willie.

At the Westlake Theatre, Hollywood, where it was previewed last week, it held the audience in a tense grip of suspense to the last foot. Victor Schertzinger directed the opus, originally called "Honky-Tonk," and has succeeded in getting over the idea of the inborn lust of men cooped up in a dirty, hot camp, without giving offense or resorting to the profanity that usually accompanies such stage plays.

"The Show-down" is to the screen what "White Cargo" is to the stage, minus the strong dialog. It is crammed full of dramatic situations, however, and ends in a smashing climax. Evelyn Brent, playing the wife of a man who is attempting to retrieve lost fortune and social position, injects a very human and unique feminine touch and in the more dramatic moments scores heavily. Another excellent role is that played by Helene Lynch as Goldie, a cabaret dancer. A tense and convincing fight is staged by Kohler and Bancroft, one of the best this previewer has witnessed.

The story concerns a group of oil workers located far in-land, away from any amusement or diversion. Into this camp comes Shelton and his wife. He leaves her behind when he goes prospecting for oil. During his absence, Cardan, the owner of the camp, knowing the lustful nature of his companions, keeps a watchful eye upon her. The heat, and noise of the pumps, finally drives her to desperation and she asks Cardan to take her away. He refuses. Cardan gives Winters a terrific beating when he discovers the latter has broken into Mrs. Shelton's room. The husband returns and misjudges Cardan's motives. He asks for a settlement and Cardan suggests a hand of show-down poker, the winner to take the oil well and remain. Shelton draws a pair of tens. Cardan's hand contains a pair of kings but he says: "Tens win" without disclosing his hand and walks out of the shack.

A splendid play, well acted, well titled, well photographed and very well directed. Victor Milner photographed it, while John Farrow wrote the titles.

—MURRAY.

Dent and Educational Plan State Contest in Texas to Select Harmonica Champion

A statewide exploitation tieup between exhibitors and Educational is being arranged in Texas under the joint leadership of L. H. Grandjean of the Dent Theatres, Inc., at Dallas, and F. A. Tomes, Educational branch manager. Plans call for getting the cooperation of other theatres and circuits, including Robb & Rowley, Jefferson Amusement Company and Saenger at Houston.

The final contest will be in Dallas, with Governor Moody expected to award the prizes. After the contests in individual theatres, a city contest will be conducted. At the state meet a gold medal and a musical instrument will be awarded the first prize winner, silver and bronze medals for second and third. It is also planned to provide the champion with a course in a school of music.

Dent's El Paso manager says each public school there is planning to organize a harmonica band. The contest follows Educational's hookup with M. Hohner, Inc., maker of harmonicas.

Cameraman, Overcome by Gas, Is Rescued from Blazing Well

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 7.—Harry W. Diehl, Paramount staff cameraman for the Southwest territory, was rescued from the inferno surrounding a burning gasser, Rachal No. 7, at White Point, on the Neuces Bay, near Corpus Christi, Thursday, when he attempted to photograph the interior of the blazing maelstrom of gas and oil.

Professional Rescues Cameraman

Tex Thornton, professional oil well fighter, when he saw Diehl collapse on the edge of the blazing pit, rushed in with an asbestos suit, and dragged Diehl to safety.

Diehl had borrowed an asbestos suit from Thornton with the intention of taking close range pictures of the blazing well for Paramount News, but was overcome by the intense heat when he had been on the edge of the pit for only a few seconds. He did obtain some unusual shots in the few seconds that he had his machine in action.

Diehl only recently has been appointed Paramount news man for the Southwest Texas district, and the gasser was his first big assignment. He showed no ill effects the next day, the asbestos suit preventing serious burns.

New Stage Units to Carry Bands

Publix Shows To Book Into Coast Houses

Units Will Be Presented in Four Pacific Slope Theatres, Says Announcement

Definite arrangements have been completed by which the Publix shows will be presented in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles on the Pacific Coast.

The first Publix unit, "The Merry Widow Revue" will be booked for the opening of the new Publix theatre in Seattle on March 1. These Publix shows will then move in rotation to the new Publix theatre at Portland which opens March 8, and then to the Granada theatre, San Francisco and the Metropolitan, Los Angeles.

These theatres are operated by the West Coast Western Theatres Company owned by Loew, Paramount and West Coast. The theatres will be supervised by West Coast Theatres, in accordance with an arrangement concluded by Sam Katz, for Publix, Nicholas M. Schenck for Loew's, and Harold B. Franklin for West Coast Theatres.

Ralph E. Grabill, now in charge of deluxe operations for Publix, will join West Coast Theatres in a similar capacity, and will devote his efforts particularly in connection with the DeLuxe operations in which the three companies are interested.

West Coast Theatres will continue to route the Fanchon and Marco shows in the same situations, which will include the following theatres: Loew's State, Los Angeles; Loew's Warfield, San Francisco; Broadway, Portland, and Fifth Avenue, Seattle, and will also include the other cities where Fanchon and Marco shows are now being shown.

It is felt that the Publix shows will bring to the cities involved the best efforts of both producing organizations.

Jetta Goudal Sues for $42,250 Against DeMille

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 3.—Jetta Goudal, former DeMille star, has brought suit in Superior Court for $42,250 against DeMille Pictures. Miss Goudal charges breach of contract and claims the company failed to pay her salary according to her contract. The asserted breach occurred Sept. 10, 1927. Under her contract she was to receive from $750 to $1,750 per week on a rising scale.

His Reward

After rotating for six years between the Uptown and Tivoli theatres, Chicago, Balaban and Katz have rewarded MILTON CHARLES by appointing him solo organist for their Chicago theatre, the Loop's class picture house.

ORGANISTS!

Villa Moret, Inc. have the following special illustrated slides now ready, and organists will do well to get in touch with their Chicago, New York, or San Francisco offices.

The Legend of the Everglades, introducing "CHLO-E," a weird, haunting, compelling melody from the Florida swampland. . . . It is both Indian and Negro in character with an underlying rhythm. The slides are in keeping with the melody and lyric, and are actual photographs of the Everglades. A real song of the swamp.

A Spanish Fantasy, introducing "AN OLD GUITAR AND AN OLD REFRAIN." A truly great song, beautifully illustrated. The version by Walter Hirsch and the song by Gus Kahn and Neil Moret.

A Venetian Serenade, introducing "MOONLIT WATERS," a colorful idea with slides that portray and carry out the Venetian atmosphere.

Acts Will Play Universal and Other Houses

Companies to Be Routed by Chain Agency to Have 12 to 14 in the Casts

The expansion of chain theatre organizations, and the growing popularity of presentation among them, is gradually widening the scope of activity in this phase of motion picture entertainment.

The production of acts has reached a stage where it requires skilled artists and technicians if the exacting demands of the public are to be met.

Latest in the field of presentation production, booking and routing, is Chain Vaudeville Agency, which will operate under the management of William Stevens. This company, it is understood, has been organized primarily for the purpose of handling bookings for Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., but will also route acts into other houses.

Band to Accompany Acts

A new feature of the Chain Agency policy is that a stageband will accompany each presentation company. The orchestras are being recruited in New York.

An announcement of the new agency has just been issued from the offices of Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises in New York. It follows in part:

"In many instances the houses of the new vaudeville circuit will be able to do away with their house orchestras, while at the same time being assured of music by high class orchestras.

"The new policy, which will be inaugurated next week, contemplates the inclusion of a special orchestra with every presentation company or group of vaudeville acts it sends out. These traveling orchestras are being made up of well-trained, high class musicians recruited in New York. They will supply various theatres with a brand of music far better than many are now able to supply in their communities.

Says Plan Looks Favorable

"The presentation companies to be routed by the Chain Vaudeville Agency will include casts of 12 or 14 people.

"The Chain agency also announces the addition of 14 new houses to its circuit. Arrangements have been completed to book specialty acts into the Avon theatre, Utica, N. Y., the Echo theatre, Syracuse, and the Schine theatre, Watertown, N. Y., besides other houses."

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Diversey

Week Ending February 11

The stage presentation at the Diversey theatre this week was titled "Bing Bang." The show started off with a clever act. The lights on the stage grew dim and the curtain rose slowly to see the orchestra dressed in billy goat hats, talking and hollering, but no one knew what they were saying.

One fellow gave the pass word "Horsefeathers" and the rest answered OKMNX. It was announced that Barney Google, president of the organization was coming and silence reigned. Joe Kayser arrived on a mechanical horse bearing the name of "Spark Plug." He announced that the meeting of the "Billy and Nanny Goats" would be held in Chicago, and asked all to join in and sing their celebrated song, "Horsefeathers." The act was well done and the audiences liked it.

Following were the Anderson Brothers who sang the chorus of "The Birth of the Blues" and then falling into a tap dance. Both of the two colored boys gave solo dances and then concluded their performance with some tricky steps.

Lavor and Walters were next with some funny dances. They gave a fine imitation of a bar room dance, to the song "Nothing Could Be Finer Than to Be in Caroline in the Morning." After doing more of their silly motions they ended up with an acrobatic stunt getting a hand that no one could complain of.

Kayser then introduced the Ryan Sisters, who sang for their first number, "Keep the Cobwebs Off the Silvery Moon." The girls can sing and the audience proved it with their applause. They next sang another popular song which left no doubt in the minds of the people that they were singers. For their final number they sang "Sundown" accompanying themselves with a guitar.

An arrangement of the song "Did You Mean It When You Said I Love You" by one of the boys in the orchestra followed. The orchestra gave a beautiful rendition of the piece and were given a nice hand.

May and Ray, two juveniles, followed with a clever tap dance which was easy to look at. The boy, Ray, came out and did a dance to the song "Just Look at That Baby." He met with success and gave many encores. May followed with an acrobatic dance. She has a pleasing personality and is a gifted dancer. Ray appeared again in a cowboy uniform, this time doing some fine dancing through the lariat. The children concluded their act with some great rope work, doing their very best. Both are clever children and the pleased the audience with their dancing ability.

Kayser announced that the treat of the day, Burt and Lehman, were next. The two boys get your attention right away by singing, "Positively and Absolutely." Both have a fine voice and get over great. Their whole act was entertaining and contained outstanding features of unusual interest. The people cried for more but the orchestra played a popular number to keep them quite.

Finale—with a dance rendered by the entire ensemble closed a fine stagershow of much interest.

The feature picture was "The Lovelorn" starring Sally O'Neil and her sister Molly O'Day.

Chicago Oriental

Week Ending February 5

Only to those few who see beauty in the lower East Side of New York would the scenery of the presentation show at the Oriental this week appeal. Under the "L" depicted Hester street in all its reality. However, it might even have been refreshing to those viewing it after the many lavish presentation numbers in the past.

The Abbott Girls opened up the act playing "London Bridge's Falling Down" and for atmosphere were accompanied by a hand organ grinder. The orchestra was placed in a store window on their movable platform which later came forward. "East Side, West Side" was then played by the orchestra, at which time Paul Small came hurrying on the stage announcing a party in the old neighborhood on account of the fact that a celebrity who once was a dweller in that vicinity was to return and entertain them.

The celebrity, of course, is Paul Ash and together the two Pauls put over that stirring musical refrain "Back in Your Old Back Yard." Much applause necessitated Small doing other numbers and they were "Dream Kisses" and "Blundering Ben," which last number failed to create much interest. Babe Carter, a splendid dancer, then entertained the audience and received abundant applause.

The orchestra then participated both vocally and otherwise in that inelegant ditty "Ice Cream." Considerable credit should be given the slide trombonist in this orchestra for his exceptional playing and cooperation with Paul Small this week. The Darling Twins, two little girls, got a big hand especially when they did the latest dance called "Bambolina."

The Rope dancing act which the Abbott dancers then performed appeared to this reporter as the most difficult work done by these dancers up to date.

Ginger Rogers, the inimitable female presentation artist, helped splendidly to put over the finale this week in the way of a triangle love scene in which both Paul Small and Paul Ash shared.

Chicago Stratford

Week Ending February 4

The Stratford presentation started with the band playing a jazzy piece, after which Ted Leary appeared among a cheering crowd of people. Leary started off with his usually good jokes and had the people on their toes.

MaGee and Maloney were announced as two little bashful girls who just returned from Europe after a successful tour doing the kerozine dance. The two boys appeared in funny, tricky costumes and went through a silly dance.

Leary came in with a few more jokes and then introduced the Folley Sisters, saying, "be careful of the blond, she's married." The two sisters are full of pep. They sang a few popular songs and ended their act with a little dance routine.

Grace Darrow followed with a novelty piano act, giving imitations of a harp, music box, etc. She was assisted by Leary who sang "Just Another Day" and put the act over big. The stage was arranged for the next act but Ted and Grace had to come out for another number.

The orchestra next played an arrangement of a pretty song called, "Sunrise." Leary announced MaGee and Maloney again who went through some more of their silly dances.

Leary then sang a new song entitled "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie" and how he sang it. The people can't get enough of him.

The orchestra followed this with the concluding number in which the entire cast appeared on the stage for the curtain.

The stagershow changes program twice a week, Sundays and Wednesdays. This show was reported Monday.

Chicago Norshore

Week Ending February 4

This week's show marked the 500th performance of Al Kvale and his Jazz Collegians, and as such, it bore that title. As Al Kvale is one of the popular leaders in this town, it's a cinch he will be more popular at his 1,000th performance.

The stagershow opened to a scene in which four girls as sign painters are painting on a huge electric sign, the fact that this week Al will celebrate his 500th performance. Four more girls (all eight being Gould dancers) then enter and sing special lyrics for the occasion.

Curtain then rose to the band playing "Hail, the Gang's All Here" as Al enters to a fine reception. Al sings "Way Back When" with special lyrics reviewing his history in the musical world, and finishing by playing a hot chorus on clarinet. He next plays "The Doll Dance" on his saxophone as he had played it in a previous show. Al then sings "Where Is My Meyer" as boys assist. This was all well received.

Gay Nell, a young woman, next pleased with an eccentric tap dance. She was followed by Mirth Mack who sang (as Al announced it, the elevator song) "Just Rolling Along," and that old favorite "After You've Gone" in her own inimitable way, for which she received a fine hand.

During the orchestra number of "Four Walls," which Andy Goes, the banjoist, sings, Al plays "Alone" on his sax. This was well received. During the previous acts, George Riley had been interrupting but this time he entered and joked with Al. They argue over the girls of yesterday and the modern flappers, Al being for the old fashioned girl. He dons a suit of 1899 vintage and he and George sing special lyrics to "Gallagher and Shean" as six flappers of 1898 and six of 1899 enter and do routines of their day. They then sing "Kiss Me Again" as they do in 1928 and as they did in 1899. An stopped the show when he did an old fashioned waltz with one of the belles.

Zeck and Stewart, two boys in comedy attire, have the audience roaring with laughter at the funny antics, their singing, playing and dancing. They were well received and could have had an encore but didn't take it.

Tommy Wonder, a young boy, wins much applause for his fine eccentric Russian dancing and his encore of his waltz with a girl dummy. He really stopped the show but Al begged off for him. George Riley again interrupts. He and Al joke and then he sings in his pleasing voice, "Everywhere You Go," to a fine hand. The next number was a contest between the ballet dancers led by Marie Peterson and the jazz lancers led by Alta Warsawsky to the tune of "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Birth of the Blues." This was well received and for the finale a pleasing effect was given by many strings of colored lights being lowered on bridge.

Chicago Granada

Week Ending February 5

Libby and Sparrow, comedy dance team and the Barney Google "Horsefeather" number by the orchestra and ballet were the entertaining features of Charles Kaley's "Topsy Turvy" stagershow this week.

Opening to a stage setting of Topsy Turvy Town with the 12 Granada Girls in red and white yachting suits singing an introductory song and later doing a snappy routine. Orchestra then played "Here Comes Charley" as Charles Kaley enters to a nice hand. Kaley's latest composition, "Strolling in the Moonlight," was next sung by him and well played by the orchestra. Kaley's songs and singing are always pleasant to hear and a fine reception is always accorded him.

The Moran Sisters followed with a blues number and they do a good eccentric tap dance to the tune of "Hallelujah" to a fairly good hand.

Barnard and Rich, a boy and girl dance team, next offer some well done eccentric and high kicking dances to a good hand.

Kaley next announces that his is the 20 millionth and one "Billy Goat." Moving pictures of his receiving his membership card to Barney Google's Brotherhood of Billy Goats is then flashed on the screen. The screen then rises as the orchestra in regulation Billy Goat hoods plays and sings, "Horsefeather, OKMNX." The "Nannies" then enter carrying placards and sing and dance to aforementioned tune. This was all very well received.

Monte and Lyons, a singing team with one boy playing guitar, sing "Giddap Garibaldi" to a fine hand. The man that had been singing bass then sang "Kiss Me Again" in falsetto soprano voice.

Libby and Sparrow of the "Passing Show," shared honors on the bill with Kaley. They entered in golf togs, swinging golf clubs while doing an eccentric soft shoe routine finishing with a slow motion effect with a fluttering spot cast on them. The girl then offers to teach the boy ballet dancing. Instead he does a very good eccentric soft shoe dance with the girl doing a fine ballet dance. They next offer their impression of Leon Errol and Pola Negri doing a tango. This was well done and earned them an encore in which they offer their impression of a classical dance team in a prize ring. This was a lot of hokum but got many laughs. Wayne Allen assisted in this "bout" by being a second to the fighters.

The next number by the orchestra was "My Ohio Home" and in it Kaley interpolates "Sundown" and "Blue Heaven." This was well received.

The finale assembled the entire cast on the stage and a girl on the pedestal with huge butterfly wings and surrounded by the 11 other Granada girls on the bridge made a pleasing effect.

Philadelphia Carman

Week Ending February 4

A Syncopation Frolic heads the bill at the new Carman theatre this week. Murray and Allan, the Jesters of 3,000 years ago, created plenty of laughter with their chatter and melodies. Frank Salt, the man of a thousand songs and his banjo contributed a great variety of numbers. The Eight Dancing Skyrockets did some agile and expert dancing and Mills and Walker, eccentric dancers, were well received.

The Carman Grand Orchestra played "Syncopating Melodies," a group of numbers by Irving Berlin, arranged as an instrumental number as the overture.

Philadelphia Stanley

Week Ending February 4

The seventh anniversary of the opening of the Stanley theatre was marked by a program of exceptional quality, featuring the Herbert Brenon production, "Sorrell and Son," and a special birthday celebration in which Catherine Littlefield and her ballet played the principal part.

Overture: Gabriel Hines, conductor of the Stanley Orchestra, commemorated the late Victor Herbert, who during his lifetime conducted the Stanley orchestra during anniversary week, by playing an overture arranged by himself comprising favorite melodies of the famous composer. The applause was prolonged until the entire orchestra rose to acknowledge the tribute.

Due to the length of the photoplay, there was but little time for the birthday celebration. Edward Albano, baritone, in Colonial costume, introduced the act by an appropriate song instead of the usual speech. At its conclusion two girls entered from the wings and danced a charming number after which they drew aside the curtains disclosing Fania Davidson, coloratura soprano, in Colonial costume, with voluminous hoop skirts and powdered hair, standing before the traditional birthday cake back of which were seven huge candles with glittering strands of tinsel suspended before them. She sang an aria from "Mignon" and another selection in a voice of pleasing quality.

The candles were suddenly lifted revealing seven ballet dancers, the center candle being occupied by Miss Littlefield. In groups of two the dancers gave a series of interesting dances, after which Miss Littlefield descended from the cake and with her usual grace and sprightliness added zest to the dancing by the introduction of a few syncopated steps. The group of dancers joined hands and gave a typical ballet dance.

In the finale a multicolored maypole was lowered with garlands of illuminated flowers, which were grasped by the dancers in silver and rhinestones who were also joined by Edward Albano and Fania Davidson in Colonial costumes, the whole forming a glittering and colorful spectacle, which was followed by a burst of applause.

Philadelphia Fox

Again this week the Fox theatre presents a surrounding program which might be termed a miniature revue. The Fox Theatre Orchestra played "Gypsy Love," with Maurice Braun, violin soloist, with a melody and rhythm that actually keep the audience talking while it is being played.

The Delft Plate Ballet, directed by Alexander Oumansky, was a charming and artistic number. The stage was a monochromatic color scheme in blue, with a huge delft blue plate with windmill and Dutch scene at the back. Eighteen little Dutch boys and girls in blue and white costumes danced in front of the plate to catchy music that started the audience to keeping time.

Neville Fleeson, composer and author, was assisted in presenting some of his sketches by vivacious Bobby Folsom. She first impersonated a heartbroken bridesmaid who should have been the bride. Next came a portrait of Priscilla, sitting at her spinning wheel in the modest gray garb of the Puritan maid, which was sharply contrasted with the modern costume in the next sketch showing an immodest inebriated Priscilla of 1928. The sketches were cleverly written and well presented and the applause left no doubt as to the approval of the audience.

The Fourteen Parisienne Redheads have greatly improved since their last engagement in Philadelphia. Bobby Grice as mistress of ceremonies sets everybody at ease and adds plenty of spice with her perpetual motion leading. Mae Wynn in black and white costume supplied some excellent tap dancing. One of the number played the harp while another sang "Charmaine" in a sweet voice. Then all took part in explaining why they had walked home from a buggy ride which gave rise to much mirth in the audience. They ended a very good performance with a peppy "Hallelujah" from "Hit the Deck." A conventionalized flapper face at the back of the stage with plaits of red hair draped from the head to the side of the stage furnished an appropriate setting.

New York Paramount

Week Ending February 11

The Paramount Orchestra opened with "Chopin Melodies." One of the melodies was sung by Leonora Cori, and one was played on the violin by Carl Schuetze representing Chopin. This was assisted by the Paramount Vocal Ensemble. Still another melody was represented by the Dance Ensemble as butterflies.

Jesse Crawford, just home from Chicago, played on the organ "Just a Memory," waltz time and Paul Whiteman style, "Whisper Sweet and Whisper Low," and "After My Laughter Came My Tears."

Publix presented this week "Welcome Sophie!" The opening presentation was the six English Tivoli Girls in evening dress—men's—with canes, toppers and monocles. They sang a song which brought out their truly English accent and did some very clever clogging and dance steps.

followed by Bert Tucker, the son of the famous Sophie, in his first appearance in New York City. He sang two clever songs that met with great success and showed his remarkable dancing skill. As an encore number he rendered the Sugarfoot Step, a new Southern dance.

Sophie Tucker made her first appearance then in presentation work. She sang "The Salt of My Tears," "It's Bologna," "The Spanish in Your Eyes," "Tall, and Dark, and Handsome," and "I Still Love you." She made a tremendous hit and was recalled time after time. As an encore she and Bert sang a song about California.

As the closing number Sophie Tucker directed the orchestra in "What Do You Say," assisted by the Tivoli Girls, dancing just in hack of the orchestra with a background of flashing lights, and her son.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending February 2

A Paul Osgard production entitled "Dancing Feet" was staged this week, assisted by Harry Rose and a host of Footlighters. The first number on the program was rendered by the dance ensemble, a snappy bunch of pretty girls, who danced a characteristic step entitled "The Puppets." They were dressed to look like puppets.

Then Gene Rodemich and the Band Boys jazzed up a tuneful chorus of "I'm Just Strolling Along, Having My Ups and Downs." Gene always gets a fine hand so that's nuff said about him!

Vale and Stewart put across a clever combination of tap steps, alone and together, for a couple of encores. After them came the Cameo Ballet. The solo dancer was lowered to the stage on a huge cameo from which she alighted to dance a few steps, while other dancers all in white assisted her. The sweet old-fashioned costumes and the pretty setting made this a most attractive number.

Richard (Limberlegs) Edwards made one of the best hits with his loose-jointed stuff. He did a variety of crazy steps that made the audience call him hack for three encores. A great comedy number.

Ruth Kenney, former Ziegfeld star, with Gene and the boys accompanying, sang and original number, "Somebody Else." Then Myrtle Pierce stepped some fast foot work in a solo. Her black and red costume was quite striking, but appropriate to the number.

Harry Rose, "The Broadway Jester," put on a clever comedy stunt of songs, dances, jokes and takeoffs. His version of "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie," and his takeoff on the poets were especially good.

Finale—Girls came in in blue and yellow costumes and did some fancy dancing, while others danced on a platform up in back. A big sparkling wheel revolving in hack made a pretty background.

An Arthur Martel organ concert, "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella" completed the program.

Film was "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." The Lorelei of the film appeared on the stage in person Tuesday.

Indianapolis Indiana

Week Ending February 3

"Highlights," the Publix revue, is a handsomely staged production, in which comedy seems to be the specialty. This is particularly true of the team of Clifton and De Rex, two amusing girls, who are introduced as beauty contest winners in 1870.

Their act was received hilariously during the entire week. The audience also showed a distinct preference for Helen McFarland, an attractive young woman who sings, dances and plays a xylophone. Douglas Burley does an amusing "slow motion" dance, and Masse and Dietrich appear as a pair of dancing traffic cops. The leading songs are by Sherry Louise, and the Foster Girls provide the dance routines.

Charlie Davis and his orchestra present for the first time a new "blues" number, "We'll Have a New Home in the Morning," written by J. Russel Robinson, an Indianapolis musician. It is an interesting number.

Indianapolis Circle

Carlo Restive is seen in a stage presentation this week, his specialty being accordion playing and whistling and he can do both to the satisfaction of the audience. His numbers consist largely of popular songs, played or whistled with a lot of personality which makes a hit with the audience. Under the direction of Edward Resener, the Circle Orchestra is playing a medley of popular songs.

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Week Ending February 3

This week we find Dave Schooler back from his two weeks' vacation and offering "Rhapsody in Blue." The setting is that of blue grape drops while the orchestra is attired in white. Before the curtain is parted a motion picture is flashed upon the screen showing Dave leaving New York in an airplane and dropping from the plane over Milwaukee in a parachute, and as the curtains are parted the Abbott Dancers in attractive blue costumes are watching for Dave as he floats upon the stage with a parachute.

Dave then sings a song about Broadway, and as he finishes the Abbott Dancers strut the varsity rag and draw a big hand. The introduction is cleverly done and goes over big.

The Loomis Twins, celebrated recording and Vitaphone stars, next give the audience a lesson in song harmony offering "Baby Your Mother," "I Told Them All About You," and "What'll You Do." The girls have good voices and their songs are well received.

"Everywhere You Go" is played by the band with Billy Meyers singing the chorus and this number is followed by Buddy Doyle, who gives a parody on a number of famous recitations including the "Face on the Barroom Floor." He follows his line of funny chatter with singing "Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzie," and receives a good hand.

"Lovely Little Silhouette" is prettily done with the Abbott Dancers on the upper stage in a garden scene dancing to the melody by the orchestra with the lights dimmed so that just their silhouettes are apparent to the audience. Before the number is concluded, Billy Meyers, in a hazy blue light, sings the words to the song. The selection was artistically done and well received.

The La Varr Brothers, in a burlesque apache dance, received only fair applause for their efforts. They conclude their number with an acrobatic stunt which is really difficult and which meets with the audience's approval.

Boyd Center, an accomplished saxophone player, makes a big hit playing several popular selections, and answering an encore with a "hot" number on the hanjo assisted by his piano accompanist who plays the kalamazoo or some other such instrument.

The concluding number is the "Rhapsody in Blue" played by the hand under the direction of Glenn Welty with Schooler playing the piano. The presentation was well staged and well done and on a par with the best that have been offered to date.

The picture is Richard Bathelmiss in "The Noose."

Minneapolis State

Week Ending February 3

One of the biggest bills presented at the State in weeks contained a variety of entertainment. It saw the return of a State bandshow, which has been a feature of the theatre's bills on various weeks since the first of the year.

The State orchestra, in pirate dress, played in the fo'castle of a pirate ship, with two bearded robbers of the sea pacing the deck and manning the wheel throughout the performance.

Fred Heiseke doubled in the role of orchestra director and master of ceremonies. The Wise Trio presented an eccentric novelty act consisting of pole and ladder balancing, tumbling, accordion and violin numbers. It was decidedly different from any acts seen heretofore on the State stage.

John Williams and Beulah Gleanson, dance duo, gave an attractive number. Hawks and Mack, singing comedians, returned to the theatre after an absence of a year and received a good hand. Their patter, although a bit risqué in spots, goes over big with picture audiences.

The F & R Ballet, a group of comely misses, danced in and off between numbers, wearing pirate garb and doing a number of well executed steps. A novelty on the hill was an old fiddlers contest, which brought together the winners in various other theatre contests for their finals. At the closing show the old men were presented with their prize money.

Richard Dix in "The Gay Defender" was the feature picture. The first Vitaphone trailer, announcing the coming of Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," was another novelty.

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending February 4

The Howard presentation this week received good criticisms all around. "Joy Bells" was the title, although many bells were represented, among them, gold bells, watch house bells, joy bells and dumb bells.

Ray Teal handled his hanton with his usual maestro stroke, strengthening his popularity with Atlanta audiences.

The Staefano Mascagno Ballet of seven girls did some good work in their several numbers.

Representing the gold bells, the Roma Brothers brought loud hands for their fine athletic work.

Scotty Western's voice was well adapted to represent the watch tower bells and was well liked.

Douglas Wright and Company gave their version of dumb bells to the entire satisfaction of the audience. Others on the hill were Charlotte Arren and Chauncey Brown, both of whom went over fine. The whole program was a unique and interesting one. Especially attractive stage settings enhanced the atmosphere and portrayed a tempo quite fitting for the different numbers.

George Lee Hamrick was at the organ.

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending February 4

The first Publix unit to play Pittsburgh made its bow at the Loew house and scored a decisive hit, helping "The Student Prince" which was the feature to break the house record.

Instead of using the pit orchestra on the stage though, Dave Harman and His Band was held over for an eighth week to act as master of ceremonies and stage hand leader. Special opening number "How Do You Do" as done by Dave and the hand went right into the Thompson Sisters' banjo solo, who came down from the flies making a novel effect. Then right into Byron and Stone, also banjoints, after Straight hand number, special arrangement by Ferdie Grofe, of a popular number, scored. Mills and Shea, comedy acrobatics, Byron Sisters, with a special pianist, and Freddie Hill, all got away nicely with a flash finale sending the public away happy.

Overture played was "Midsummer Night's Dream" and Dick Leibert did "Day Is Done" three different ways for his solo.

Pittsburgh Grand

With a long feature picture this week, "Shepherd of the Hills," the two acts booked cut their time down to a minimum with Ann Popove, violinist, singing one number and doing a violin chorus then going into Russian dancing while playing the fiddle which terminated her short act to a nice hand.

The other act was the Rehan and Faye Revue which included six girls and a pianist besides the two dancers the act is named for. The opening bit had the six girls doing a waltz with the pianist singing. Then followed a waltz by Rehan and Faye. The pianist then soloed by singing "Muddy Waters" which got best hand on entire act. Six girls on again for a Raggedy Ann dance followed by Rehan and Faye doing a fast finish, all on stage at finale.

Overture was "Countess Maritza" selection but the absence of David Broudy was missed as director. Hodge Podge and newsreel also seen.

Denver Denver

Week Ending February 3

Lou Forbes and His Jazzical Stageband in a stage production entitled "Shadowland" assisted by a well balanced group of performers put on plenty of merry entertainment at the Denver theatre this week in connection with Ruth Taylor in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

The Denver Theatre Grand Orchestra opened the show under the direction of Joseph Klein by playing "William Tell." The piece with its crashing crescendos and varying moods was presented in high class fashion and was well received.

The Foster Dancers, 16 in number, appeared in white costumes against an ebony drop which was very effective. They presented something entirely new for these parts in their aerial ballet on trapeze and rings.

Roy Rogers, tumbler extraordinary, furnished plenty of amusement with his freakish tumbling stunts. Someday he will break his neck.

Collins and Hart also go in for some aerial thrills, pure comedy in front where you can see the wire support of the man on top but breath-taking for those in the rear until the secret is out.

Another something very new for the cash customers here was the performance of Pauline Alpert who with her piano flies all over the stage playing musical numbers. Miss Alpert makes records for Victor.

Lou Forbes and his musical crowd are on the job every minute during the entire presentation adding harmony and keeping things lively. Mr. Forbes opens playing "Me and My Shadow" while silhouetted against a white drop.

The Denver theatre presentations are already the talk of the town and filling the 3,000 seats nightly. There is no question here about Publix for sure shot entertainment.

Kansas City Midland

Pat Rooney and his family held the spotlight in the stage program at the Midland this week in a skit titled, "Bring Your Family to See Our Family." Pat, Mrs. Rooney and Pat Rooney 3rd, made up the act, which was confined almost chiefly to dancing. Pat Rooney 3rd exhibiting clever imitation of the steps made famous by his father.

The Midland Rockets, composed of dancing girls from Marie Kelley's Dancing School of Kansas City, again were frequently seen at intervals in the program. Hines and Smith had a dancing and a vocal number. Jack Sidney, as usual, filled the role as master of ceremonies, rendering his usual vocal selection which was applauded liberally throughout the week. The Midlanders, composed of members of the Midland Concert Orchestra, again were seen and heard as the stage orchestral attraction.

The regular orchestra, under Director Carbonara, rendered a medley selection as the overture. Arthur Hays, organist, offered an illustrated organ solo.

Kansas City Mainstreet

Week Ending February 3

"The Fountain of Melody" was the title of the stage presentation at the Mainstreet this week in which Walter Davison and His Louisville Loons were featured for their thirty-second consecutive week. The Loons rendered popular selections as an overture.

Ray and Harrison were seen in vocal and dance numbers, while Reed and Levere had a novelty act to offer. Jack Pepper had a dialogue number replete with humor, dance and vocal numbers. "Sugar" proved to be another novelty act which met with approval.

The Four Chocolate Dandies offered vocal and dance numbers, spiced with humorous dialogue.

Des Moines Capitol

Week Ending January 28

Probably the most unique stunt ever attempted on a motion picture theatre stage in Des Moines, or anywhere in the country, was successfully put over at the Capitol when Herbert Lee Koch, organist, played the Wurlitzer by "remote control" as a part of the bill, "Listening In."

The spotlight was directed on the organ console but Koch was not in sight. He played popular music, however, and appeared on the stage for a hand immediately after his last number. The secret of the stunt was not made public although the management promised that it would be revealed during the show a week later. A great amount of comment was generated by this performance.

Dolores and Eddy entertained with dance eccentricities. Carlos and Inez, ballroom dancers, made much of their graceful movements. The radio girls with Jerome Mann were popular. The girls with their ensemble dancing and Mann with his engaging character songs and dances.

Herman and Seaman did a comedy acrobatic, pleasing when it was not too suggestive.

Paul Spor and his band gave a laugh making rendition of, "Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzie." "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," was the feature.

San Francisco Warfield

Week Ending February 3

The stage presentation this week was billed as "Hoke" and Rube Wolf and his merry makers lived up to the name in real Barnum fashion.

The curtain announced this leader as the greatest showman since the famous Barnum and as soon as it went up Rube came running out on the stage as the Cheer Leaders, a quartette of young men, started singing "Among My Souvenirs." A huge fan in colors formed the background for the act.

Gae's Sweet Sixteen Girls, 10 in number, danced and posed to "The Dream Melody," with two of them offering a specialty. Johnnie Dove, who dances on roller skates, gave a truly wonderful performance.

Maxine Doyle, held over from last week, sang "What'll You Do?" with Rube assisting her by making funny noises and dancing. Both received a great hand and Maxine thanked the audience.

Harry Verne, a singer, offered "It's Raining Tonight" and "Without You Sweetheart," together with a character sketch written by a group of McAllister street boys. He was recalled three times but offered no encore.

Gae's Sweet Sixteen Girls and the Cheer Leaders, assisted by members of the orchestra, danced the Varsity Drag, the Cheer Leaders showing unexpected terpsichorean attainments.

The act came to a close with the offering of solo numbers by different members of the orchestra to discover what instrument the audience likes best. There were trumpet, saxophone, oboe, xylophone and harp solos, with an excruciatingly funny argument between the harpist and a jealous fellow musician. Rube Wolf ended the fun and music fest with a selection from "page eight of the green book."

San Francisco Granada

A Fanchon and Marco "Lampshade" idea illuminated the stage entertainment at the Granada this week, this feature fitting in well with winter nights and rainy weather.

Owen Sweeten headed the stage presentation as master of ceremonies and directed the Synco-Symphonists in several telling numbers, including "Rain," the overture to "William Tell," played in bizarre style, "A Shady Tree" and "Together We Two." In "A Shady Tree" he played a trumpet solo.

The Sunkist Beauties offered something new in costumes, everyone a lampshade, with designs ranging from grotesque Oriental shades to those of Colonial days, or the dainty French boudoir shades of today. The animated illuminated lamps, weaving in the graceful movements of the dance, presented a beautiful picture.

The headliners of the act, and deservedly so, were the Original Cansinos, two Castillian dancers whose art has won them international stage fame. They offered the "Dance of the Whip," the "Sombbrero Dance" and "La Jota," three wonderful numbers.

David Reese, a silver voiced tenor, was entertaining, and Lewis and Kellogg, girls doing simultaneous dancing, received a full measure of applause. Don and Dorina also offered a dance, a rather unusual one, entitled "The Dance of the Flame."

Director Owen Sweeten demonstrated that he can sing as well as lead an orchestra and joined with three of the Synco-symphonists in presenting a vocal number.

The stage offering at the Capitol theatre of this city during the past week was titled "Oil," a snappy Fanchon and Marco production of a unique and very entertaining character. Many unusual stage arrangements contribute to its effect which was exceptionally amusing and entertaining.

One feature of the setting is a large imitation of an oil well, which contributes three platforms upon which various acts are splendidly given.

Jean Boydell, a hoydenish comedienne of note, brought down the house at all performances throughout the week with her dancing and amusing imitations. Irma, Dot and Anna Lou and two clever step dancers, Walter and Russell, were also pleasantly featured.

Alberti and His Band offered some very good popular musical offerings on the stage. The late dance hit "I Scream, You Scream, We All Scream for Ice Cream" was featured and it is announced here that through this presentation all of the Victor records of this number have been sold out throughout the city. Ned Nicholson, who is handling the output of the Victor records for this musical number was on the stage in person assisted by the orchestra boys in putting this song and dance number over big.

Many beautiful girls graced the stage in artistic costumes as well by doing some unusual dancing.

The feature picture shown in connection with this presentation was Emil Jannings in "The Last Command" and the bill was commented upon as being unusually pleasing throughout, with big business being enjoyed.

Chicago Chicago

Week Ending February 5

Jules Buffano opens the stage show at the Chicago this week called "Rainbows," with a band number, "The Baltimore," in which was interpolated "The Varsity Drag" and "The Black Bottom." Buffano sings the chorus, and the number as a whole goes over well, as it deserved to do.

Jeanned Geddes comes on to sing "I'm a Broken Hearted Bluebird," for nothing more than a fair applause. The Petroff Dancers follow with a good routine, and dressed in striking costumes of blue, representing bluebirds.

Milton and Farnum follow with a clever and comic

Apache dance, unusual and unique. They get a fine hand and three calls. They are followed by Russell and Marconi, "two musical troubadours," one of whom plays the violin, the other an accordion. They play and dance and offer "The March of the Wooden Soldiers" as an encore. They were entirely too stingy with their entertainment, for they left with audience wanting much more.

The next is a band and dance number featuring Effie Morton and the Petroff Dancers. Miss Morton's contortionist dance was excellent, she almost succeeding in tying herself in knots. The costuming and stage effects were good for this number.

Pall-Mall, black face comedian, came next to sing a combination of all the popular songs of the last two years and more. It was a knockout and funny as could be. As an encore he sings "Broken Hearted." He gets a wonderful hand and deserves it. He then sings "I'm Looking for a Rainbow," during which the lightning flashes across a drop and the organ gives good imitation of a thunder storm. The singer then goes into April showers and the whole cast come out for a good finale.

Note: From indications observed by this reporter, Jules Buffano is becoming more popular every week at the Chicago. His work is clean cut, pleasing, efficient and effective.

Spitalny's orchestra number was up to its usual standard of excellence this week, it being "Pagliacci." A group of 13 singers sang from the pit, several of them being featured, and their singing was a pleasure to hear. The number received an applause that sounded like that usually heard at grand opera.

Milton Charles (Chicago Chicago) called his organ presentation this week "A Musical Contrast," and played "An Old Guitarr and an Old Refrain," "Varsity Drag," "The Song Is Ended," and the finale to the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody." The contrast in the types of music played and the manner in which Charles played them won him a good hand. Slides of the lyrics accompanied each song.

St. Louis Missouri

Brooke Johns said good-by to Arthur Nealy in the stage show of the week. The title was "Good-by, Arthur."

Nealy has left the Missouri to become master of ceremonies of the new stage show that will be featured at the Shenandoah theatre, Grand boulevard at Shenandoah avenue commencing on February 4. The Shenandoah is one of the Skouras Circuit houses, being the property of the St. Louis Amusement Company, a Skouras subsidiary.

Arthur in his final appearance sang several of the Irish airs for which he is more or less famous. Johns himself sang "The Little White House with the Little Green Blinds," The Missouri Ensemble furnishing the trimmings.

Deszo Retter, so-called Prince of Walls, or the man-who-wrestles-with-himself, provided the necessary comedy to spice up the bill.

Leonid Leonardi and the Missouri Orchestra presented as their overture a medley of "Butterfly" melodies. They were assisted by Milton Slosser at the organ.

St. Louis Ambassador

Week Ending February 3

Mae Murray, herself, none other, dancing her famous Merry Widow waltz was the big noise of the stage show during the week. It was entitled "A Merry Widow Revue" and Mae did not appear until almost the very close of the show.

There were a number of Lehar airs, some couple dancing, also some ballet work and clowning, but everyone came to see Mae, so the balance of the show was just so many teasing minutes so far as the vast majority of the cash customers were concerned.

Dave Silverman directed the orchestra in the playing of the entrancing Merry Widow airs.

Mae, clad in black, relieved only by a couple of rhinestones, danced the famous waltz. In a later appearance she wore a ruffled dress of white tulle, red slippers and a baby blue neck scarf.

Dave Silverman and his orchestra also played "Waiting for the Sunrise."

Stuart Barrie at the organ offered a novelty organ solo.

St. Louis State

Week Ending February 3

Teddy Joyce offered a Hula Hula stage show entitled "Ukulele Land" as the chief attraction for the week. It featured Rome and Dunn, plump harmonists who have been heard at Loew's State a number of times since it was opened some three years ago, and Jeanne Houston, a dancer of above the average in ability.

The Criss Cross Girls and Teddy Greene were also prominent in the entertaining.

Teddy Joyce himself danced in an alfalfa skirt and outwiggled the girls themselves. Joyce also did a number of his famous eccentric dance specialties.

A very important part of the program was missing, however, the overture by the orchestra and Kirk Frederick.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I saw you on Broadway a few weeks ago and hollered to you, but you were so busy trying to keep your spats clean that you didn't hear me. Well, old kid, how goes it? I understand that you are a big shot now. I sure was glad to hear about it.

I just got back to St. Louis and find that we don't get the Exhibitors Herald & Moving Picture World here, so I want you to put me down as a subscriber, and also be kind enough to send me at once five or six back issues. Send these to me at my expense. With kindest regards, I remain—John Fink, Larry Conley Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: For my featured organ selection for the week ending today, I used the novelty called "A Musical Conflict" which is strictly a community number, introducing Irving Berlin's popular number "The Song is Ended" and "Together We Two." The audience was asked to show their preference of the songs offered and from response, it seemed to be a tie. Community solos have been a feature at the West Side since it opened a year ago and to date, it looks good for another six months or more. With all good wishes.—Clark Fiers, Organist, West Side theatre, Scranton, Pa.

Spor Goes to Omaha

Jimmy Ellard, former master of ceremonies at the Capitol theatre in Des Moines, who was sent to the Riviera in the same capacity, will return to the Capitol on February 10. A general swing about will be made when Harry Watts, manager at the Capitol, will take charge of the Omaha house, taking with him Paul Spor, who has made such a hit with Capitol patrons in the short time he has been master of ceremonies there. Nate Frudenfelt, publicity manager for the Blank houses in Omaha, will become manager of the Capitol in Des Moines. He will have as his assistant, Lionel Wasson, now managing the Strand in Des Moines. A. G. Stolte, who is leaving the Riviera, has not announced his plans.

Coons at Metropolitan

The Metropolitan Stage Orchestra, in Houston, installed a new band director last Saturday in Lindy Coons, a "new face" in personality directors, who is talented with a beautiful, robust tenor, and is said to be of the Eddie Peabody type. Coons replaces Ted Claire, who, it is rumored, will go to Cleveland. Charles Pincus, city manager for Publix houses in Houston, announced the change, after a conference with Boris Morros, John J. Friedl, and Maurice Lawrence, Publix executives.

A Hole in 72

Don Galvan, director of the Texas (San Antonio) stageband, is developing into quite a golfer, thanks to the aroused interest in this sport by the Texas Open last week. Don recently took up golf, and the first day he went out, shot a remarkable game. When explaining his experiences to members of the band, someone asked him what he shot, Don replying that he made a 72. "But I did better on the second hole," Don facetiously remarked, with a grin.

Board Sees Hardship on Small Exhibitors

ALBANY, Feb. 7.—The Albany Film Board of Trade is arousing considerable interest these days in Central and Northern New York in a protest against the Brookhart bill. Petitions circulated by the Film Board of Trade are being signed liberally, not only by the exchange managers and film salesmen of Albany, but also by the exhibitors and theatregoers. These petitions are being sent to Washington.

The claim is made by the Albany Film Board of Trade that the bill would work a hardship on the small town exhibitor who books out of a city like Albany, in that it would not be possible for film salesmen to visit these exhibitors if they booked only one or two pictures at a time. Many of these small town exhibitors in New York state are now booking in blocks, and judging from the fact that they are signing the petitions, they do not see anything detrimental to their interests in block booking.

During the past week or two there appears to be much more interest in the outcome of the Brookhart bill than in the past. Owners of some of the first run houses in Albany, however, have refused to sign the petitions.

(Solos and Community Sings)

Well, coming back to Broadway I find things the same as they have always been. In fact the Alley always seems the same with perhaps a few changes here and there, but in general, appearances and the general spirit it's always the same.

Last week the Happiness Boys (Ernest Hare and Billy Jones) received some very nice write-ups in the Metropolitan newspapers in view of one of their puns which seemed to be quite clever and original. I repeat it herewith, for I think you will agree with me: "Mr. Jones: What business were you in before you became a singer? Mr. Hare: I was a salesman. I sold salt. Mr. Jones: That's funny. I used to be a salt-sell too. Mr. Hare: Well, well, Shake!"

A couple of weeks ago I mentioned in this column rumors that were persisting about Paul Whiteman and His Orcehstra severing his connection with the Victor Company and joining the Columbia Phonograph organization. These rumors seem to be confirmed to date more or less, and it seems quite bonafide that this is coming to pass, also that the labels instead of bearing the Columbia imprint will be called the Paul Whiteman Record Company.

Just a word about Danny Yates and His Orchestra playing at the Windsor hotel, Montreal, Can. For three years Danny was fiddle player with Vincent Lopez and His Orchestra, branching out as a maestro himself eight months ago up in Canada. He has been voted in the "Radio Digest" the most popular orchestra leader in the Dominion of Canada. Besides playing at the Windsor hotel, Yates handles the "Everyready Hour" up there and does quite a lot of social affairs. He has a good many friends in the States and I am sure that all of them will be glad to hear of his wonderful success.

Harry Richman, formerly associated with the Brunswick Recording Company, has recently become an exclusive Victor artist and his first records will appear on the market under this new banner within the next three weeks.

While I am on the subject of all this recording business, I might mention the fact that there is one orchestra leader in New York City, to date, who records for practically every mechanical company in the business. I allude to Harry Reser of Cliquot Club and Banjo fame.

Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians are starting out on their annual national tour beginning with their two weeks' engagement at the Palace theatre, New York City, on February 6. They are a considerable boom to the music business wherever they play, for they are a tremendous plub and create quite a demand for whatever tunes they feature in their act.

With Fess Williams opening at the Regal theatre in Chicago, I feel sure that the colored folks in that district will find Fess an instant favor. Besides being a marvelous musician, he has a million dollars worth of personality and seems to be on the road of replacing that favorite of a few years back, Bert Williams. He should be a tremendous draw, for not only the Regal theatre but for any "white" house in the country.

Jimmy Campbell and Reg Connelly, those two youthful and enterprising songsters, who, within a period of two and a half years, have built up in London one of the most powerful music publishing firms there, are at present over here on the look out for some good songs to take back with them.

The orchestra that is allotted more time on the air than any other in New York City is Al Lynn and His Music Masters, who are on one hour every night in the week from King's Tea Garden, the largest Chinese restaurant in Greater New York. Lynn plays from Radio Station WABC and this has helped him considerably in bringing his name to the public.

ORGAN SOLOS

John Devine (Chicago Patio) this week terminates his first year at this theatre, and in honor of this, and also the anniversary of the opening of the house, he played a special anniversary number. He called his solo "Birthday Greetings" and played Feist and Remick's most popular numbers in such a fine way as to never fail to earn him an encore, this time being no exception. Devine's popularity is increasing in leaps and bounds and the Friday night when his solo was caught the lobby and street were packed. The way the audience sang proved Johnny is one of the main attractions at this theatre.

Albert F. Brown (Chicago Granada) offers "A Modern Romance" in which he featured a scrim presentation with Leeta Hope and Fenton MacAvoy. Behind the scrim a beautiful garden scene with MacAvoy singing "Where in the World" then Leeta Hope sings "Did You Mean It?" then Fenton sang "The Girl Is You and the Boy Is Me." They finished with "Did You Mean It?" This was well received.

Henri A. Keates' (Chicago Oriental) "Back Home Again" organ number was the most outstanding and entertaining event on the program this week. If there were a doubt as to the following this organist had at this theatre it has been eradicated after witnessing the heartiest welcome with flowers and everything ever accorded any artist's return. And, how they did sing for Henri this week when given the chance after he opened his heart to them and told them how happy he was to be with them again. Such song numbers as "Hello Everybody" (not quite sure whether there is a song by this name) and "I Told Them All About You" fitted in great with his plan for greeting his old Oriental followers.

Chauncey Haines (Chicago Norshore) offers "Then and Now" in which he used comedy slides and a man in a full dress suit of 1900 who sang in an off key, "I Love You," as old time slides were shown. Haines next played "Moonlight Bay" which the audience sang real well. He then played the modern songs, "A Shady Tree," "What'll You Do?" and "Among My Souvenirs" all to which the audience sang with a will. Haines was well received.

Don Isham (Chicago Embassy) offers his own version of the following popular numbers, "I Think of You," "Song Is Ended," "Among My Souvenirs," and "Everywhere You Go." Isham is popular at the Embassy and seldom fails to earn an encore, this time it being a second chorus of "Everywhere You Go." By the way, Isham has been out there a year now and between his fine solos and his flying (perhaps you did not know it, but Isham is the only flying organist in this country, he incidentally having just returned from a flight to Washington, D. C., and return in a sister ship of Lindbergh's) he is the idol of the neighborhood. Here's luck to him!

Clark Fiers (Scranton West Side) used as a solo a stunt to precede the film called "Two Arabian Knights." His solo was called "The Tale of One Arabian Night" which introduced the new song called "The Beggar" and also brought in strains of "Allah's Holiday" and "That Night in Araby" written by Rudolph Frimi.

TIRED HANDS—(Al Piantadosi)—A mother song well written and the type of song that has great commercial value. The writer, Al Piantadosi, is known for his "Pal of My Cradle Days" and "Cross My Heart Mother I Love You."

IF I CAN'T HAVE YOU (I Want to Be Lonesome—I Want to Be Blue)—(Leo Feist)—Walter Donaldson, America's leading song writer has given us another excellent song that will add to his fame.

HORSEFEATHERS—(Forster Music Publishers)—Barney Google's cartoon has started something. With the Hearst papers expecting to have 20,000,000 members, only a small portion will have to buy copies for it to be a big song. Words and music by Charlie Newman, Abe Olman and Buddy Fields.

AND THEN YOU CAME ALONG—(Henry Waterson)—A very well written love song with an excellent fox trot tune. One of the writers, Ev. E. Lyn, will be remembered as having written "Under the Moon." Co-writers are Hazel Mooney and Sammy Fain.

NO MATTER HOW YOU SLICE IT IT'S BOLOGNE—(Irving Berlin, Inc.)—One of the writers, "Billy Rose," just paid us a visit on his way flying from coast to coast. A comedy song with lots of laughs that should at least pay for the trip. The other writer is James V. Monaco.

AUF WIDERSEHN (We'll Met Again)—(J. H. Remick & Co.)—The story of the lover who refuses to say goodbye as he expects his sweetheart to come back. Abner Greenberg, the composer, is well known in the east as a lawyer.

MY BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAIN HOME—(Triangle Music Pub. Co.)—This song is beginning to show up well through some excellent radio plugs. The publisher, "Joe Davis" himself, is a well known radio artist. Words and music by Carson J. Robison.

TELL ME YOU'RE SORRY—(Ager Yellen & Bornsteing, Inc.)—Another sorry song that invades the musical field every once in a while. These two writers are very well known and have written and excellent song of this type. Words by Benny Davis, music by Joe Burke.

GIRL OF MY DREAMS—(Jack Mills, Inc.)—A brand new waltz number that is already creating some talk and is also proving very commercial. Lyric and melody by Sunny Clapp.

WAS IT A DREAM—(Spier & Coslow)—A beautiful waltz by the writers of "Just a Memory." Just recorded on the Victor by Waring's Pennsylvanians and being featured by this well known organization Sam Coslow and Larry Spier.

WHILE WE WALTZ GOODNIGHT—(Chappell Harms, Inc.)—This standard house is plugging this as a popular song. A beautiful number that should do credit to their catalogue. Words by Jack Meskill, music by Charles Rosoff.

PLENTY OF SUNSHINE—(DeSylvia, Brown & Henderson)—It is surprising with the amount of shows these boys are writing that they still have time to feed the popular public but as usual when they do they turn out a classic. By DeSylvia, Lew Brown and Ray Henderson.

Patrons' Goodwill Pays Big Dividends

By Will Whitmore

LOUIS XVI, King of France, lost his head under a guillotine because he did not have the goodwill of his people. And many a theatremen has lost his business for the same reason. Just the other day I heard that an exhibitor in a small town, and an acquaintance of mine, had sold his theatre to his competitor. He was forced to sell. He had operated his house at a loss for the last two years. But why?

Simply because he had ceased to cultivate the goodwill of his patrons. He had come to the town a number of years ago and opened the first theatre. For years he made himself the center of community life. He took part in all community enterprises. He gave benefits for many civic clubs and other organizations. He was a keen supporter of anything connected with the up-building of his city.

As a result, his theatre's success grew by leaps and bounds, and he in turn had the support of the public. But as he grew older he gradually let his community work slip, and perhaps he became just a bit cranky. Then a young man opened a competing theatre in the town. For several years he had a tough fight. It wasn't easy for him to gain the prestige of the older exhibitor. But he was a hustler, and gradually began to usurp the place of the older exhibitor. He did the things that the older exhibitor had once done, and should have kept on doing. As the older man felt his business slipping from him, he became disgruntled and discouraged. He blamed his retrograde on the radio, the automobile and the producers, yet there was only one reason: he had lost the goodwill of his public. And now he has sold out to the "young upstart."

I have just been looking over the scrap books of two livewire exhibitors, and that's the reason for this harangue on goodwill. The exhibitors are A. J. Lukachie of the Hauber theatre, Camden, Arkansas, and R. L. Nellis, manager of the Liberty theatre, Washington, Indiana.

Looking over their scrap books, the two big impressions I get are the value they put on the goodwill of their public and the reaction of their towns to the things these men do to create goodwill.

The scrap books of both men are crammed with newspaper stories about benefit shows and many other things the men have done for their respective cities, and every story reflects the goodwill that the papers and the people hold for the men. When the local high school basketball squad at Washington needed modern equipment, Nellis held a benefit show. At Christmas time Nellis holds a special matinee for the poor in connection with the Salvation Army, and donates the entire receipts. And there are many other things that Nellis has done to cement the goodwill of his patrons.

Nellis is also successful in using the talent of his community in putting on amateur

Good Tieups Made for U. A's "Ramona"

Book stores, music stores, drug stores, stationery stores and special theatre lobbies will be made available to exhibitors playing Dolores del Rio in "Ramona," an Inspiration-Carewe production which United Artists is releasing. Tie-ups already set by Inspiration Pictures ensure direct hook-ups with current exhibitions of the picture, which is now selling.

"Jazz Singer" Has Jolson Exploitation

Brunswick phonograph dealers in every city of the United States will soon have on display specially lithographed one-sheets of Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer" which they will use in connection with sale of Brunswick Record "Mother, I Still Have You." This is the popular number written especially for Jolson and introduced by him for the first time in Warner Bros. picture in which he sings it on the Vitaphone.

nights. He has held Charleston contests, old fiddlers' contests, title contests and many others. Not only do such contests pack the theatre and bring new business, but they make people take an interest in the theatre.

A. J. Lukachie is just as successful as Nellis. When a tent show comes to town and pulls a shady trick, and puts the theatre at a disadvantage, the local paper rises up and defends the theatre editorially. When the local baseball team is face to face with the stiffest game of the season, Lukachie offers them complimentary tickets if they come through victorious. When he plays "The Country Doctor," he makes the members of the county medical society guests of the theatre. He puts over "Laugh Week," and "Take A Chance" week and many other fine exploitations, and in every case gets the support of the paper and the public.

Create the goodwill of your public, and if you are any kind of a theatremen, you will be successful. Without your community's goodwill, you'll have to go some to be a success.

Balaban & Katz, Chicago, do a right about face, and swing from black type and jazzy makeup to a dignified layout; beautiful, slender lettering and readable composition. Anyone can read their ads now without eye-strain and the new ads do much to improve the tone of the entire theatre advertising pages of Chicago newspapers. The ads show such an improvement further comment is unnecessary. Do you remember "The Theatre's" criticism of Chicago advertising in the December 24 "Exhibitors Herald"?

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

With Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus," the show was laid out to have six deluxe performances Saturday and Sunday and five during the balance of the week. Besides the feature photoplay there was an overture, a violin solo, the Mark Strand Topical Review, a technicolor short subject and an orchestral fantasy called "Dancing to the Classics." Altogether this program required one hour and 55 minutes, of which time one hour and six minutes went to "The Circus." The two remaining film subjects took up 28 minutes between them, while the three musical incidents required 21 minutes.

Edward L. Hyman

Beginning each of the deluxe shows was the overture, "Massanello," by Aufer, and played by the famed Mark Strand Orchestra, with Sascha Kindler conducting. This number requiring six minutes, was lighted as follows: amber spot on the director as he entered, going to flood as he picked up baton; bridges light blue on draw curtains and side; blue foots on production stage, steel blue stars in cove ceiling.

Immediately after the finish of the overture, the conductor stepped down from his platform as a film leader was flashed on the screen announcing that Sascha Kindler would play "One Alone" from Romberg's "The Desert Song." Picking up his violin, Kindler stepped to the apron of the large stage and did this selection in three minutes. Lights: pink spot from dome on artist, rest of stage dark.

Kindler then stepped back into the pit and conducted the Mark Strand Topical Review, which ran for 10 minutes, and after that came the other orchestral presentation, "Dancing to the Classics." The program called attention to the fact that we have all commented at various times upon the great similarity in melody of the modern dance tunes to the classics. It was the purpose, therefore, of this presentation to show how the classics would sound, first as a piano solo in their original form and then as an orchestra number arranged according to the modern manner.

Film leaders were put on the screen for each selection, included in which were Chaminade's "Scarf Dance," "Kammenoi Ostrow" and others. This presentation required 12 minutes.

The technicolor subject, running 18 minutes, was Hope Hampton in "The Call of the Sea," this subject being filmed from an old legend and which permitted Miss Hampton to disport as a sea nymph through many beautiful scenes.

"The Theatre's" takes off its hat, so to speak, and congratulates the six men above for their splendid work in the Harold Lloyd "Speedy" contest. Each of them won a prize in the contest, and the "The Theatre" is proud to say that each is a contributor to "The Theatre."

Clark Munson of the Virginia theatre, Champaign, Illinois, wins $100 as the third prize. His contributions appear often in this department. Joe Mayer of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, an old standby of "The Theatre," wins $50, as do H. F. Storin, Leroy theatre, Pawtucket Rhode Island, and G. J. Meredith, Saenger theatre, New Orleans. Storin is a member of "The Theatre's" fast growing M. B. I. club, being M. B. I. No. 4.

Bob Kelley, Texas theatre, San Antonio, and Wallace R. Allen, Penn theatre, Pittsburgh, win $10 each for honorable mention. Both contribute regularly to "The Theatre." Good work, boys. Congratulations!

Old Horse Ballyhoos

F-N's "Her Wild Oat"

Milt Arthur, manager of the Figeroa theatre, Los Angeles, has gained quite a reputation for himself as a creator of unusual stunts in exploiting pictures. When First National's Colleen Moore picture, "Her Wild oat," was the attraction at his theatre, he devised another unique ballyhoo.

There is in Hollywood an old sway-backed nag, a film "actor" who has only to appear on the screen to get a laugh. The horse has been seen in many a feature picture. Arthur arranged to use this horse as a ballyhoo "artist" for "Her Wild Oat."

Hitched to a "skeletonized" buggy, the horse was driven about the streets, and got a laugh from every passer-by. People invariably waited for the horse and buggy to pass so they could read the banner advertising "Her Wild Oat" which was tacked to the back of the seat and to the rear axle.

Louis Stern Finds "The Theatre" His Complete Library

At the risk of being just a bit immodest, "The Theatre" prints below a letter from Louis Stern, manager of the Roosevelt theatre, Newark, N. J., and right here we want to thank Louis for his fine letter. He has the right spirit of co-operation. Now go ahead and read his letter.

Editor, "THE THEATRE."

Dear Sir:

I have found your combined paper my complete reference library, and I use it almost exclusively in digging up theatre helps.

Your theatre section is so good that I feel that I am obligated to send in an occasional bit to help a good cause along. If I can think up something every now and then that might help the other fellow bring the customers in, you can depend on me to send it along.

I am sending along several copies of my house program. It isn't so pretentious, but I manage to get in a column every week that tells them something else about the theatre besides the pictures.

Sincerely,
LOUIS STERN, Mgr.,
ROOSEVELT THEATRE.

On this page is reproduced one of the programs of the Roosevelt, which Stern speaks of in his letter. The program is very attractive, with two colors. As Stern says, it is not pretentious, but simplicity often proves more effective than the pretentious. The program serves admirably to announce the attractions of two weeks and that is all a program is intended to do. By the way, Stern is a graduate of the Publix managers' school, second class.

Leap Year Stunt Draws the Ladies

When "Get Your Man" played at the Rivoli, Universal chain theatre, in East Indianapolis, the management got out several thousand small sealed envelopes bearing the following advice: "GIRLS! IT'S LEAP YEAR. LET CLARA BOW SHOW YOU HOW! RIVOLI THEATRE (play dates)." Inside each envelope was a gold wedding ring, not 24-carat, of course, but a very good imitation of the narrow wreath design so favored by modern brides.

The use of Bodoni type and simple layout makes this a very readable and effective weekly program for the Roosevelt theatre, Newark, N. J. A letter from Louis Stern, manager of the Roosevelt, appears on this page.

When the Aztec theatre, San Antonio, played First National's special, "The Patent Leather Kid," starring Richard Barthelmess, a number of good window displays like this one in the A. G. Spalding and Bros.' store stopped hundreds of passers-by.

And here is the result of the window displays and other promotions at the box office of the Aztec. The photo was taken before the theatre opened. Crowds were turned away all day. The tank and marquee sign stopped people passing the theatre.

Billboards Must Put Over Their Ideas In a Flash If They Pay

(This is the fourth of a series of articles on advertising which originally appeared in "Showmanship News," the house organ of Finkelstein and Ruben. The fifth appears next week.)

Number Four

BILLBOARD advertising becomes more and more important in showmanship as population-drawing territory increases. And so posters are a big factor in our Twin City campaigns. Relatively speaking they are just as important in the smaller key cities.

In deciding poster values we study the paper itself, whether it be a 24-sheet or an insert card. The first question we ask on looking at a poster is, "does it get our idea over in a flash?"

No matter how beautiful a poster is we throw it out if it doesn't get over our message at a glance. We are selling entertainment, not beauty cream.

Poster paper must get attention or we spend our money on something else. When the proper kind of paper comes along we spread ourselves in placing it before the people. Most of our posters are 24-sheets.

To properly display them we use both snipe and rented stands. Our rented stands are especially selected locations on street car streets, mostly near intersections. They are changed weekly. These locations give us an outdoor calendar on our attractions. They stare people in the face for 52 weeks out of the year in exactly the same location.

Some of our snipe 24-sheet locations are very satisfactory. We snipe to gain distribution at a comparatively low cost. The smaller forms of paper like ones, twos, threes, sixes, eights, and banners, are used to supplement the larger forms of billboard advertising on special campaigns. We find one-sheets most adaptable for lithographing windows. Lithographing allows us to get valuable space in important windows in the loop district.

Recent examples of special outdoor billing in the Twin Cities were campaigns on "Ben Hur," "The Cat and Canary," "Chang," Clara Bow in "Hula," "Beau Geste" and "What Price Glory." Especially good paper was provided by the producer on these pictures. Consequently we made effective use of 24-sheets.

Back when we played "The Lost World" and Rose's "Midgets" we found the billboards of greatest advantage. You can readily see that those mastadonic animals in "The Lost World" were pictures much more alluringly in colors on the billboards than in the ordinary newspa-

Idea Used for Last Eight Years Makes Hoxey Farley M. B. I. No. 5

Any idea that has produced results for the last eight years should entitle the originator to become an M. B. I., and for that reason Hoxey C. Farley hereby becomes M. B. I. Number 5. Give him a hand, boys. He hails from Montgomery, Alabama, and is city manager for Publix at the Empire, Strand and Plaza theatres. Read Farley's "My Best Idea," and then send in your own. M. B. I. Number 6 has already been chosen, and he's well known to readers of "The Theatre." His "My Best Idea" appears next week.

"My Best Idea" No. 5

By Hoxey C. Farley

IN READING over the issue of your magazine for January 7, I note your article on the beginning of the M. B. I. club and am going to give you "My Best Idea."

About eight years ago I employed 13 young ladies to go from house to house with a questionnaire, of which I am enclosing a copy. These girls would spend from 10 to 15 minutes in each house asking information on different stars that were liked best, etc., and later asking the birthdays of all the family.

After they had canvassed the city, all the names they were able to get were made out in order and a birthday card was sent them which was good for two tickets at the Empire theatre. This is still being kept up by us and quite a few other theatres have put this into use at their theatres.

This, I think, is a very good idea and creates a lot of goodwill among the patrons of the theatre.

Farley's Questionnaire

per black and white. By the same token Rose's "Midgets" made fine poster copy.

Examples of sheer forcefulness of poster copy were our campaigns on "The Unknown Soldier." Artistic design, spectacular layout and wonderful coloring made these pieces of paper outstanding. The box-office success of these two pictures was attributed largely to the excellence of the poster paper and the fine locations obtained from the outdoor advertising company.

Pictures with short titles have given us a distinct advantage in the Twin Cities, Colleen Moore in "Sally," "Chang," "Ben Hur," Norma Talmadge in "Kiki," Sally O'Neil in "Mike," Clara Bow in "It" are examples. The titles made great street car cards.

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

"BABY MINE"

"BABY MINE" is back again, a hardy perennial, this time as a mixture of college, shiropractic and baby comedy with only its excessively broad captions to mar its entertainment. Charlotte Greenwood is great at the old slapstick comedy of other years and the fracas between her and Karl Dane is a young riot, even if Mons. Dane does seem a bit adult for the student thing.

George K. Arthur does the lovesick male as George K. Arthur would, which is practically perfect, and the rest of the cast are what expert critics term "adequate." The picture is, by and large, first rate comedy.

REPLY TO MR. FULLER

I SHOULD answer the following letter by mail did I not feel that a public answer will be of some interest, at least to such exhibitors as take the trouble to read this department. The letter, from Mr. George E. Fuller, of the Playhouse, at Fairhope, Ala., follows:

"Under separate managements I have found both publications, (Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World) well worth while. The only suggestion I have to make the combined papers more attractive is to make the 'Service Talks' shorter, pithier, less wordy. Keep in mind, please, that we read trade papers for the information they contain. It is a matter of business to keep in touch with what is going on in the industry. We do not expect, nor do we desire, literary gems of thought, delicately turned phrases, nor articles which bring out the personality of the writer rather than the substance of the idea to be expressed. These make us tired."

Mr. Fuller writes a good letter, no doubt such a letter as others might write if they valued my paragraphs highly enough to feel it worth the effort, and I shall attempt a reply to fit all. I shall begin by admitting that on this particular Monday morning I agree fully with the ideas expressed, even going further and saying I believe the combined publication would be better if I wrote no part of it. I feel it is only fair, however, to explain that I may feel this way today only because the w. g. 14-months-old girl-child has had so much Whooping Cough during the past seven days that I have devoted my evenings neither to sleeping nor looking at motion pictures. No doubt I should feel very differently, otherwise.

The facts, however, are:

There is little occasion for me to describe a motion picture, to name its actors, its director, scenarist, author, etc., in this space. All such statistical information is conveyed to readers, long before I have seen the picture, by the Studio department in its Production Directory, by the New Pictures Department, by the news columns of the magazine at large and—for permanent record—by the Quick Reference Picture Chart. Certainly I can add nothing to the statistics given in these departments, and certainly I cannot compete with them in point of expediency, brevity or authenticity. Further, I can tell nothing about the box office value of a picture which is not told better in "What the Picture Did for Me" and semi-annually in the "Box Office Record." No, I think Mr. Fuller will agree that there would be little or no use in my repeating information previously published in these splendid departments.

With this phase of the matter cleared up, I suppose I should provide a reason for the existence of this page and so I shall tell you why I write it. (Why the paper prints it is, of course, not for me to say.) Anyway—

In all the near and far reaches of this gay industry, when two individuals meet, the first, second or, at most, third question is, "Didja see such-and-such a picture?" On being assured affirmatively, the next question, shot from the lip, is "Howja like it?" From there on the conversation becomes a debate, if not a battle. All of which merely indicates a commendable interest in motion pictures and a generally healthy condition of the business.

Now, then, my function, if any, is to provide in this space a collection of answers to this trade-wide question. If you have no one at hand with whom to argue about the merits of a given attraction, and if you are normal with respect to this humanizing addiction of the trade, you have but to turn to this section and read the always positive and strongly personal opinions of the oversigned. Then, by letter, by personal call at the office, or by banging the fist smartly upon your own mahogany desk, you can have the time of your life denouncing me as the world's most such-and-such, so-and-so. By this arrangement, you see, we both have a good time, for I like to write these things just as much as you like to disagree with them.

Of course there are other reasons for a department like this, some of them pretty good, but this is the main one. At least it is the main one so far as I'm concerned, and of course I wouldn't protract a discussion further than it concerns me.

WHOOPING COUGH

AS mentioned briefly above, I've been sitting up with a first-born whose first illness is Whooping Cough. As also mentioned, the child is 14 months old and, considering that this is the first illness, the doting (and possibly doty) parents again you may share (or have shared) my sudden dissatisfaction with the medical profession. When I reflect that all the millions of doctors devoting all their lives and all the millions of dollars provided by donors for research are, as yet, wholly unable to do anything important toward the allayment of Whooping Cough—when, as I say, I reflect upon this fact, I am cheered as to the prospects for worthwhile motion pictures from the Hollywood factories. If medical science has come this long way with so little definite result, the motion picture industry has plenty to crow about.

"SEVENTH HEAVEN"

I AM pleased to hurl at my friend J. C. Jenkins, whose late attempt to make peace with me in the debate about "Seventh Heaven" flopped in its tracks, and the statements of E. S. Clifford, G. M. of this paper, and Jay M. Shreck, M. E. of the same, supporting my contention. Mr. Clifford says it is the first picture he ever saw which was better than the stage play and still followed it. Mr. Shreck says it's just about the best picture he ever saw and he can't recall the name of a better one. And so, Jaysee, you see who was right? For you know, as well as I, that neither of these gentlemen would agree with me, against you, on anything less vital than Nebraska state politics, the true status of Middle Western Izaak Waltonism or "Seventh Heaven."

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

ALEX THE GREAT: FBO comedy, with Richard "Skeets" Gallagher, Albert Conti, Patricia Avery, Ruth Dwyer, and Charles Byer. Directed by Dudley Murphy. Released May 13. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Baseball is only incidental in this one, in spite of the title. Alex is called the Great by his small town admirers, probably because his name is Alex. He goes to New York, where his brother is a baseball manager. That's the baseball. But Alex, after meeting Muriel when he accidentally gets into her car, finds a job in a stable. Thus he has chances to go riding with Muriel. One day he learns that Gumble, department store owner, is in the market for a fleet of trucks. Alex gets the order, then turns it over to a dealer. Gumble turns out to be Muriel's father. Liking the young fellow's nerve, Gumble decides he is o. k. for a son-in-law.

BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN: Warner Brothers comedy-drama, with Irene Rich, Myrna Loy, Audrey Ferris, Clyde Cook, Richard Tucker, and Stuart Holmes. Directed by Archie L. Mayo. Released January 14. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Only technically is this one not straight farce. Miss Rich plays the part of Myra, secretary to Gilbert, divorce lawyer, whom Mrs. Sheldon has engaged to get her fourth divorce. Myra knows Sheldon, and when he flirts with her sister, Helene, she goes to him in the guise of a social worker to plead with him to leave Helene alone. He feigns a heart attack. She stays to revive him. Mrs. Sheldon and a comic-strip detective discover her. So events go, until finally they all are in Sheldon's apartment, where farcical goings-on take place. At the end, Mrs. Sheldon decides her husband is interesting enough to keep.

BEYOND LONDON'S LIGHTS: FBO melodrama, with Lee Shumway, Gordon Elliott, Herbert Evans, Jacqueline Logan, Florence Wix, Templar Saxe, Blanche Craig, Adrienne Dore, and Katherine Ward. Directed by Tom Terriss. Released March 18. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: She has one love affair broken up, only to find a better one. Kitty is a domestic, that is why Colin's mother opposes his marrying her. She goes to London, where John Risk, an artist, befriends her. And although Colin gives up the titled girl his mother wants him to marry, and goes to London to Kitty, she has ceased to love him. It is John she chooses now.

BREED OF THE SUNSETS: FBO Western, with Bob Steele, George Bunny, Dorothy Kitehen, Leo White, and Larry Fisher. Directed by Wallace Fox. Released April 1. Length 4,869.

TYPE AND THEME: Maybe this one's a comedy, after all. Anyway—Jim Collins, a Wyoming cowboy, lands in California in time to save Marie Alvare in a runaway. Her father rewards him with a job on his ranch. Valdez is coming from Spain to marry Marie, and Alvare wants Jim to fake a hold-up to scare him. But the foreman and his men sincerely steal Valdez valuables, whereupon Jim has to round up the thieves. Valdez thinks the hold-up is still a joke, until Alvare consents to the marriage of Jim and Marie.

CHASER, THE: First National comedy, with Harry Langdon, Gladys McConnell, Helen Hayward, William Jamison, and Charles Thurston. Directed by..... Released February 12. Length 5,800.

TYPE AND THEME: A comedy distinguished in theme from a short only by a couple of thousand feet. And for some reason the name of the director, if any, is a studio secret. Harry is married to a wife and a mother-in-law. He accidentally stabs the latter with his lodge sword. A judge sentences him to petticoats and housework. He seeks poison, drinks castor oil. Wife and m-i-l think he's dead. He's at picnic. Later his car is ditched. Rolls down hill and crashing into porch, throws him into his own kitchen. He lands in flour barrel. Looks like ghost. The two women are really glad when he proves otherwise.

CROOKS CAN'T WIN: FBO melodrama, with Ralph Lewis, Thelma Hill, Sam Nelson, Joe Brown, Eugene Strong, James Eagle, and Charles Hall. Directed by Charles Gillette. Released April 7. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: About a copper. Danny has a brother, Dick, who is a member of a silk robbery gang which has been committing many robberies. Because of him, Danny tells his sweetheart, Mary, that they can't be married until his brother, who is missing, has been found. Danny is given a beat where the thefts are going on. Dick lures him off his beat while a robbery is being staged, which results in Danny's discharge from the force. But he gets a job as a truck driver and with the help of Mary and a reporter, exposes the gang.

DAREDEVIL'S REWARD: Fox Western, with Tom Mix, Natalie Joyce, Lawford Davidson, Billy Bletcher, Harry Cording, and William Welch. Directed by Gene Forde. Released January 15. Length 4,987.

TYPE AND THEME: Peril and comedy are all mixed up in this one, as is usual with Mr. Mix. Tom, as ace of the Texas Rangers, starts out with his trick truck carrying Tony, to run down a gang of bandits. He poses as a medicine man first, and it is while extracting a coupuncher's tooth that he first sees Ena. He pulls the wrong tooth. That, of course, starts a row in the town. And leaving, he goes from adventure to adventure until the gang is found, Ena saved at least once, and love rewards the brave—just as it should.

FIGHTIN' REDHEAD, THE: FBO Western, with Buzz Barton, Duane Thompson, Milburn Morante, Bob Fleming, Edmund Cobb, and Edward Hearn. Directed by Louis King. Released July 1. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: The two generous partners, Sidewinder Steve and the kid, Red Herner, continue their generous adventures in this one. Noting that a friend, Tom, is suspected of the robbery of a bank, and that a reward is up for the capture of the bandit, Steve and Red decide to find the thief. They do and turning him over to the sheriff get the reward. But learning that their friend Tom and the sheriff's daughter can't get married because of Tom's poverty, they turn the money over to them. A coupla nice guys!

LAW OF FEAR, THE: FBO melodrama, with Ranger, Jane Reid, Sam Nelson, and Al Smith. Directed by Jerome Storm. Released April 8. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: More canine intelligence. Ranger's a wild dog in this one, and when his mate is killed, he sets out to get the bandit who committed the "murder." Believing that Ranger belongs to the bandit, Bud, the sheriff, tries to kill the dog, but Marion intercedes for him. In gratitude Ranger exposes Steve, Bud's rival for Marion's hand, as the bandit. Lucky for Bud he didn't kill Ranger, eh?

MAN IN THE ROUGH: FBO Western, with Bob Steele, Marjorie King, Tom Lingham, William Norton Bailey, and Jay Morley. Directed by Wallace Fox. Released May 20. Length 4,785.

TYPE AND THEME: Bob is a coupuncher without any money when he wins the purse of Bruce, outlaw, in a poker game. In the purse are letters showing that Bruce has been hired to kill Cale Winters, aged prospector. Cale's granddaughter, of course, thinks that Bob is Bruce. But Bob saves the mine and the old man's life, so Tess gladly changes her mind.

TURN BACK THE HOURS: Gotham melodrama, with Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Sam Hardy, George Stone, Sheldon Lewis, Josef Swickard, Ann Brody, Joyzelle Joyner, and Nanette Villon. Directed by Howard Bretherton. Released April 1. Length 6,900.

TYPE AND THEME: The story of a coward made brave through love. Lieutenant Drake, discharged from the U. S. Navy because of his cowardice, stows away on a ship and lands on an island in the Caribbean, where he is saved from death by the beautiful daughter of Colonel Torreon. Soon again his cowardice is displayed, when he refuses to protect Tiza from insults. Becoming a beach-comber, he turns brigand. It is when the band captures Tiza that his manhood awakens, and he fights desperately to save her, for he loves her.

WHIP WOMAN, THE: First National drama, with Estelle Taylor, Antonio Moreno, Lowell Sherman, Hedda Hopper, Julianne Johnston, and Loretta Young. Directed by Joseph C. Boyle. Released..... Length 5,087.

TYPE AND THEME: Quite a girl, this Sari. She is called the whip woman, because she uses her sheep-whip to keep her would-be lovers off. One day she is insulted by Michael, shell-shocked soldier who comes to the Hungarian countryside to escape a mercenary marriage arranged by his noble parents. To save him from suicide, Sari takes him to her room. They fall in love. But the noble parents turn up and telling Sari she is ruining Michael's career, get her to go to Budapest. Michael follows and finding her in a cafe, throws wine in her face. She threatens to kill him, then offers her body to the best fighter in the cafe. Michael strikes her unconscious with her own whip and subduing the other men, wins a strenuous bride.

WICKEDNESS PREFERRED: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy-drama, with Lew Cody, Aileen Pringle, Mary McAllister, Bert Roach, and George K. Arthur. Directed by Hobart Henley. Released January 28. Length 5,011.

TYPE AND THEME: Babs reads a book entitled, "My Island Life," in which the author describes himself as quite a caveman. Bill and Babs are happily married. But the author, Tony, turns up with his wife, and Babs promptly falls in love with the "caveman." But when they go for a ride on his yacht and are tossed up on an island, he proves pretty much of a drug-store cowboy. And when Bill joins them, Babs finds that she is already married to about as much of a caveman as she requires.

WIFE'S RELATIONS, THE: Columbia comedy-drama, with Shirley Mason, Gaston Glass, Ben Turpin, Arthur Rankin, Flora Finch, Lionel Belmore, Armand Kaliz, Maurice Ryan, and James Harrison. Directed by Maurice Marshall. Released January 1. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Farce—with slapstick added. Patricia, daughter of wealth, runs away to New York to escape marriage with Clifford. She meets Tom, a poor young inventor, who has a jolly little household shared by a writer, an artist, and a cross-eyed cook. Marrying Tom, she joins the group. Then Tom sees her picture in the paper and tells her he will not live on his wife's relations. At this point, an explosion in the laboratory results in the discovery of whatever Tom has been looking for. Patricia's parents are asked to come and meet her distinguished husband. They do. Clifford turns up to make a row. A chase through the rooms follows. Plaster falls. Water from a broken pipe floods the place. . . . Then Patricia convinces her mother that an annulment would cause a scandal. And all ends well.

Your Classified Ad Will Do the Work!

Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organists all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and also in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 10c per word. See this week's classified page. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.

BEWARE OF MARRIED MEN (Warner comedy-drama): Prepare envelopes with "Beware of Married Men" in staring black letters on outside and place inside, throwaways giving data about the play and asking that people in need of a good hearty laugh take this opportunity of getting it. Have these missives put under doors or in mail boxes. Arrange for a basketball game between the married men and single, offering prizes. Have the married men's team wear blue banners over their shoulders with the words, "Beware of Married Men." Have the single men carry banners with the following on them: "Beware of Married Men. Why?" Other games may be substituted. Offer a prize for the best essay on "Why should one 'Beware of Married Men'?" or "Do you 'Beware of Married Men'?"

DAREDEVIL'S REWARD (Fox Western): The front of the herald showing a masked bandit makes an outdoor placard when pasted on card board. The title is shown boldly on the herald. Copy suggested to go under illustrations—"Reward for the capture alive, of the mysterious bandit prowling about town. Don't shoot him full of holes because he is needed to appear on the screen in the picture 'Daredevil's Reward'". . . . Here is a suggested contest to run for the picture. Offer a free pass to the person solving the following: "If you save one cent the first day, two cents the second, four cents the third and keep doubling each day thereafter, how long would it take to save $5,000?" You can limit your prizes to the first ten who send in the answer. The stunt can be tied-up with a bank. The answer is 19 days.

FLYING ROMEO (First National comedy): Offer free passes to the boy or girl making the best toy airplane. Have them displayed in local merchants' windows as advertising for the picture. A parachute jumper would give publicity for the picture if he could be readily procured. You can also announce free admission to those having the name of Sidney or Murray.

JAZZ SINGER, THE (Warner drama): Offer a free ticket to the person answering the most of the following questions: (1) Where was Al Jolson born? (2) What was his name? (3) His fathers occupation? (4) What was his first part? (5) What circus experience? (6) His next venture? (7) First vaudeville team? (8) Who suggested blackface? (9) Joined what minstrel in 1911? (10) What was his first "movie?" The answers to the question are (1) St. Petersburg, Russia. (2) Asa Yoelson. (3) A Jewish cantor. (4) Child in Zangwill's "Children of the Ghetto." (5) Ballyhoo man. (6) Singing in cafes. (7) With brother and another as "Jolson, Palmer and Jolson." (8) An old negro dresser in Washington theatre. (9) Dockstaders. (10) The Jazz Singer. . . . Have two singers, one to sing jazz songs and the other classical. Have the audiences be the judge by their applause. Same can be applied to orchestra or dances. You can also offer a free ticket to the person making the most words out of "The Jazz Singer."

PATENT LEATHER KID, THE (First National melodrama): Arrange for a prize fight on your stage between boys. If there is a boy's club in your town, it will furnish the fighters. You can have two or three matches and give small prizes of some kind for their services. . . . Hire a truck and build a ring similar to the big prize fight ring. Have the truck driven through the town making frequent stops. Have a couple of boys go through the fighting movements. Also have a bell to indicate rounds, this to also attract the attention of the people. A sign can be put on the auto with the name of the picture, also where it will be shown. . . . Calling cards can be printed with the following on them: "The Patent Leather Kid" called to see you, sorry you were not home. He will be glad to see you at the _____ theatre this week (Date). . . . If you can arrange to have a large boxing glove about six feet high made and place over the head of a person and let him parade through the town, would draw the attention of the people. . . . Have large signs printed and put in various parts of the town with the following: "Straight ahead to the _____ theatre and see 'The Patent Leather Kid.'"

PHANTOM OF THE RANGE (FBO Western): Either a masked rider on horseback or a man on foot dressed as combination cowboy-actor is a suggestion for a street ballyhoo. Have printed a few hundred envelopes with the following copy on the outside: "Directions on How to Milk a Cow." Inside the envelope have a throwaway with the following copy: "If you want to be a milkman, see Tom Tyler in 'Phantom of the Range' to be shown at the _____ theatre (Date)." If you use girl ushers, you can have them dress in milkmaid dresses. Teasers can be used in a newspaper advertising stunt. Previous to date of showing the picture, the following can be used: First day, "Who is the Phantom? He is abroad in the night, spreading terror in the midst of those who least expect him. Watch and be warned"; second day, "Who is the Phantom? The mysterious horseman is still at large, but his name is known and his capture is certain. Watch!"; the day before the showing, "The Phantom is captured, see him at the _____ theatre tomorrow."

RACE FOR LIFE, A (Warner melodrama): Give numbers all week preceding the playing of picture and announce on the screen and in lobby that during the run of the picture, "A Race For Life," you will give a pup to the holder of the lucky number. Display the dog in your lobby or in a merchant's window with a sign saying that it will be given to the holder of the lucky number. . . . Have a dog contest, offering a free ticket for the dog looking most like Rinty. . . . Arrange for a group of boys that have dogs, to parade around the town with signs of the coming picture. Have the school teachers in your town to have the children write essays on "Why Should We Be Kind To Dogs?" or "Which is Man's Best Friend, the Dog or the Horse?" or "Why My Dog Is Great."

UNDER THE TONTO RIM (Paramount Western): Have banners or cards printed with the following: "Gold and overnight a flood of gamblers, outlaws, crooks and cabaret girls! 'Under The Tonto Rim' will be at the _____ theatre next week (Date)." Offer a free pass to the person making the most words out of the title, "Under The Tonto Rim."

WICKEDNESS PREFERRED: (M-G-M comedy-drama): Free passes can be given to the five best letters on "Do men prefer 'Wickedness' in Woman?" or "What do you call a wicked woman?" or "Is Wickedness Preferred?" . . . Get out a scandal mailing card printed on the back of an ordinary postal and send it to the people on your mailing list. The copy should be brief and in keeping with the theme and title of the picture. Copy is suggested as follows: "What should he do? What Would he do? Have you heard the scandal about Anthony Dare, who left his own wife for a 'back to nature' existence on a tropical isle with the wife of his best friend? If you want to know more about it, see 'Wickedness Preferred' at the _____ theatre (Date)." "Have cards with the following printed on them: "Three Reasons Why Wives Prefer Wicked Husbands: (1) Because they know that men who step out with the boys once in a while appreciate their fireside all the more; (2) because men who play cards at the club and drink make more generous and amenable husbands; (3) because a husband who is a 'good sport' is sure to include his wife in his good times. For others good reasons see 'Wickedness Preferred' at the _____ theatre (Date)."

Wants More Good Westerns

SPRINGFIELD, MINN.—TO THE EDITOR: Congratulations on the late merger. A little late in expressing myself, but better late than never.

Just picked up a Variety dated January 18. In large headlines were the following words: "Westerns Dying in the United States." There also was an article in either the HERALD or WORLD last fall similar to this, about Paramount quitting Westerns.

Now just what are the small town exhibitors going to do for Westerns? There are plenty of Westerns, but the so-called machine turned out Westerns don't click. We have to have Westerns of good standard with a real story and a good actor. Our week's program in a small town is not complete without a good Western. If we fail to put on a good one our business drops off 50 per cent regardless of how good the picture may be that we play in place of it. And I believe that there are many exhibitors that find conditions the same as I have.

A late publication has just stated that "Westerns are dying in the United States." I do not believe that Westerns are dying, but I do believe that in a few years good Westerns are going to be pretty scarce. We have enjoyed some good Westerns in the last two years, and the companies that have made them deserve credit for it. But with Tom Mix leaving the screen and Fox cutting their production cost down to $25,000 and other companies cutting out Westerns entirely, and in case the companies do not quit Westerns and just cut cost down, what will be the result? Are we going to get good Westerns or the old so-called machine made Westerns?

A town can use about 30 or 45 good Westerns a year, and it's hard to find that many that will click.

Here's hoping the companies give a lot of thought toward making Westerns before they decide to discontinue.—B. P. PARSONS, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.

Picture in "Bad Taste"

SALMON, IDAHO.—TO THE EDITOR: I have reported in another column on "Ladies at Play," a First National production, but the more I think of the terribly bad taste in ever producing this picture by one of our first class companies the more I marvel at the mind of our director and producer. Here two reputable New England spinsters are made intoxicated, led to men's bedrooms and made to roll over the floor with their erstwhile blackmailer, who is endeavoring to compromise these ladies! What is coming over our producers anyway? How can such things be?

Is it any wonder our best citizens seldom, if ever, attend the movies any more? Do you really believe plays should be made for those of low tastes? I do not so believe. I have ever noticed that while a certain class enjoy smut and broad scenes, this same class also enjoys real fine high class pictures of box office appeal. I do not mean highbrow or sophisticated dramas. The same class of intelligence which laughed uproariously at "Ladies at Play" also laughed at Harold Lloyd and Richard Dix with no less gusto besides which the better minded people also laughed at Lloyd and Dix, but were deeply insulted in viewing "Ladies at Play." No! The clean play appeals to all; the coarse to a part only. Why not, then, make all plays decent? If my logic is wrong, please tell me so.

I cannot for the life of me see why producers do not try to make plays clean and respectable. If anyone else knows the reason, won't he kindly state it?—PHILIP RAND, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

Betty Bronson Takes Sister on Trip Abroad

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 7.—Sometimes it's lucky to be the sister of a motion-picture star. Eleanor Bronson thinks so today, as her famous sister, Betty Bronson, decided on a two hour's notice to take Eleanor with her on a trip to Europe. Miss Bronson had planned to take her mother, but Eleanor had never been abroad and mother had been. So at the last moment plans were changed, and Eleanor and Betty will travel together. They will spend six weeks touring France.

Chadwick

APRIL FOOL: Alexander Carr—Good picture.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

Columbia

OBEY THE LAW: Bert Lytell—70%. January 20-21. Good program picture for small town. There were other stars than Lytell. Didn't end up right, but that makes the difference. Something different.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

SWEET ROSIE O'GRADY: Shirley Mason—January 3-4. Nice little picture, clean and all right all through. Six reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

F B O

BULL DOG PLUCK: Bob Custer—40%. January 6-7. A real good Western and pleased my patrons. Custer is a very popular star here. Played two nights and made some of the long green. Five reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

ARIZONA NIGHTS: Fred Thomson—48%. January 20-21. Another good Thomson picture and went over good to very good houses for two nights. Believe this is our last picture of Fred's and we regret that we cannot show any more. Seven reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Special cast—35%. October 29. A good story and picture, but could not get them in on account of stormy weather. Good for small town exhibitors.—J. P. Johnson, S. of N. Hall and theatre, Ambrose, N. D.—General patronage.

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Special cast—15%. January 24. Here is one that should be played in every theatre in the U. S. A. Good entertainment from start to finish and the action of the United States Marine Corps and the air fleet just keeps you on the very edge of your seat. The best mystery melodrama I ever saw and I don't like the ones that come everyday. Step on it, boys, and play it two nights, as it will build up for you the second night. Seven reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE GREAT MAIL ROBBERY: Special cast—Gold Bond thrilling melodrama. We have lots of customers for this type.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

DON MIKE: Fred Thomson—14%. January 13-14. Thomson and Silver as good as usual, but seems as he is not drawing here any more. Best nights in the week just fair business and that is poor for Thomson. I think they want Thomson in straight Westerns with real good stories like Zane Grey's or Harold Bell Wright's; then he sure would make a hit with everybody. However this is a good picture of Mexican type. Six reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

ONE MINUTE TO PLAY: Red Grange—34%. January 13-14. Good college story, good football game. Grange screens well.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

LEGIONNAIRES IN PARIS: Special cast—Used extra advertising to put it over and it sure flopped, patrons said rotten.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

THE SLINGSHOT KID: Buzz Barton—The first of this star. Strange, but we haven't even missed Fred Thomson from our lineup, as F B O is supply-

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given picture in report).

ing good Western stars in his place. Tyler, Steele, Barton. Five reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

THE SLINGSHOT KID: Buzz Barton—My crowd had not forgotten "The Boy Rider" and came back in greater numbers to see this one. It is very good. Good attendance. Five reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE RED RIDERS OF CANADA: Patsy Ruth Miller—A very good show of the Canadian mounted.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

THE FLYING U RANCH: Tom Tyler—January 18-19. Nothing like the book, and too tame for Western fans. Six reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—Small town patronage.

THE GINGHAM GIRL: Special cast—January 15. Tied up with local merchants on gingham dress sale which helped to pull them in, and the picture sent them out smiling. Seven reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—Small town patronage.

A REGULAR SCOUT: Fred Thomson—Got a lot of good comments from patrons on this. I am sorry Fred Thomson left F B O.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

THE TERROR OF BAR X: Bob Custer—December 22-23. Just a Western. Nothing to brag about. Five reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

JAKE THE PLUMBER: Special cast—January 27-28. Ran this and Douglas MacLean in "Soft Cushions" on double feature nights. Both pictures are just fair, and they failed to draw a normal Saturday crowd. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

JUDGMENT OF THE HILLS: Frankie Darro—Most comments have been adverse on this. While apparently it would have proven more satisfactory for the hero to have returned from war sober, it has a good plot, and is interesting throughout. Seven reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

RANGER OF THE NORTH: Ranger (the dog)—January 6-7. Now, fellows, I've seen a lot of dog pictures and paid lots of jack for them, but this is the best dog picture I ever run. Bar none, it's a real honest-to-goodness picture with everything in it to make money. Step on it.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

THE SONORA KID: Tom Tyler—Not up to Tyler's standard, which isn't any too high anyway. Absence of Frankie Darro hurt the picture; will just get by. Five reels.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—January 15. While not the best portrayal of Gene Stratton Porter's books, it drew well and seemed to please majority. Eight reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—Small town patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—Bought right, and made good for it. Pleased and drew.—George A. Smith, Palace theatre, Merkel, Tex.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—The picture is good, but not up to the standard of other Gene Porter Stratton stories, especially "The Magic Garden." F B O is too high on this picture. Anyway, bill it good, because the lovers of her books will like it, though it is mediocre. It is very tender throughout, tenderness is the one word that covers it completely. The author's name will draw them.—Ben Eskin, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—December 26. Was very disappointed in this picture. No favorable comments.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—This, as all Porter's pictures do, draws a different clientele than the regular, and the regulars stay at home, so the results are not so good. My private opinion is that if F B O could induce the family to stay out of the business of directing and adapting they would have a good deal better pictures at the box office, and that means, too, for the regular movie goers. The picture is too slow, far too slow, there is too much posing and nothing happening. Beauty of woodland scenery is there, but not a flash of humor to relieve the story. They could still have stayed by the story, lighten it up and made a better production from every angle. Looks to me a poor job of directing to make it what Porter's pictures should be. As wide as this author has been read in Indiana, the picture should have done double the business, but they must have remembered the "Keeper of the Bees" on it run and laid on the name.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA OR BUST: George O'Hara—January 10-11. Just a fair show. Some of it was so improbable that it got foolish. But if you could swallow that, it will get by. Five reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

RACING ROMEO: Special cast—A wonderful cast and a most clever picture. Grange's name is a drawing card, and he knows how to act. This boy has also got a screen personality. Hiers is always good and Trixie Friganza is a scream, especially in her wild ride with Grange driving like mad to be on time for his wedding. Besides an abundance of comedy, the racing scenes are the longest of any of its kind. It shows the race from beginning to end, just like watching a real road race. There are throbbing motors, taut nerves, and awful suspense. More like this would be fine.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

THE BOY RIDER: Buzz Barton—December 21. A real good Western that will sure please the kids, also grownups. My attendance was poor, but no fault of the picture, but had weather the week before Christmas. Five reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

HOMESTRUCK: Viola Dana—December 27-28. This is a good little picture, well acted and worth showing. Six reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE MAGIC GARDEN: Special cast—December 19-20. Good picture, but not as good as some of the other Porter's. Very beautifully produced. Seven reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

First National

THE WAGON SHOW: Ken Maynard—75%. January 13. A dandy Western. A little different than the usual type and one that will be enjoyed by any audience. Seven reels.—R. H. Ries, Calhan theatre, Calhan, Colo.—General patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore—92%. January 26-27. The most delightful entertainment we have given our patrons in many days. Colleen, you certainly know your public and how to please it. Had more good comments on this picture than any other picture we have played this year. Three cheers for Colleen Moore, the screen's greatest personality, and the exhibitors' staunchest producer friend. Seven reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore—A nicely produced and interesting picture, played on Sunday, everyone pleased. Seven reels.—Twin Falls Amusement Co., Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—General patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore—A lemon. Terrible. Not even a good program picture. My patrons knocked this one and on the second day, no business.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

LONESOME LADIES: Lewis Stone—20%. December 30-31. A very good program picture and pleased the few who came out. Played two nights to small houses and didn't make expenses. Six reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

LONESOME LADIES: Anna Q. Nilsson—5%. January 17. Fair program, but oh how lonesome we were, no one to see it. Well, I guess "An Affair of the Follies" was better title, and as Lewis played again in "Lonesome Ladies," they thought it would be about the same class of show and stayed away. Hope the directors will get their heads working for better titles. Good picture wasted with the title it has. Six reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

AN AFFAIR OF THE FOLLIES: Lewis Stone—40%. January 15. Very good program picture and it seemed to please mostly all, as there were no walkouts and the audience was mostly of better class of people that do not come regular. Well, Lewis Stone always gives them just good action and some sort of a way to take something home with them. Billie Dove wonderful in her part; just the kind that hits here. Seven reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

AN AFFAIR OF THE FOLLIES: Billie Dove—December 15-16. A very, very pleasing picture and Billie Dove is beautiful and will make a wonderful hit everywhere. Seven reels. Good attendance.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

MISS NOBODY: Special cast—January 15. Here is a picture that you can boost. Step on it, all my patrons were well pleased. Seven reels.—David Straszer, Lyceum theatre, Manchester, Mo.—General patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—80%. January 24. Cracking good comedy with two vulgar scenes which had no bearing whatever on the story. Can't see why the director thought this stuff would add to the fun. Advise you to cut it if you have a high class patronage. The scene where the track cleaner is shown and the title preceding, also the drunk in the technicolor scenes, and the incident that takes pertaining to the wooden horse, are the ones I advise you to cut. Seven reels.—E. F.

Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—75%. January 21. This is a great entertainment. Action, lots of it. Star fine. Please them all.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—January 20. Pleased the Western fans. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—This seemed to please a good Friday and Saturday crowd. Drew the best Saturday night business we have had in several weeks. Ken's riding good.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

SMILE, BROTHER, SMILE: Special cast—25%. January 20. A good satisfactory program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SMILE, BROTHER, SMILE: Special cast—Dandy little show. Pleased everybody. You can make no mistake in playing this one. Good for Sunday.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Nehr.—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—23%. January 15-16. Entertaining comedy, but it couldn't huck the weather.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—December 29-30. The young people all liked it. Some of the older people did not, but a very good comedy and will please the majority. Seven reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—Here is a peppy little thing, full of laughs from start to finish. A fair story, but mighty good entertainment. Drew some extra business for us and pleased. Colleen always good for a few extra dimes with us. Eight reels.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

WINDS OF CHANCE: Anna Q. Nilsson—January 22. We showed this to a full house and got many comments on it as being a very fine picture. The acting is good and scenery beautiful. Ten reels.—David Straszer, Lyceum theatre, Manchester, Mo.—General patronage.

DANCE MAGIC: Pauline Starke—50%. January 13-14. An extra good program picture and went over fine. Had the largest Saturday night crowd in several weeks. Made some money, which we appreciate very much. Seven reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE SEA TIGER: Milton Sills—26%. January 20-21. Dandy good show and they sure can't put nothing over Milton's punch. Oh, boy, how he can fight! Joe Bonoma was big, but Milton sure took the pep out of him. Good Saturday picture. Six reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE LADY IN ERMINE: Corinne Griffith—25%. January 24-25. Business on this terrible, had lots of walkouts; I have never made any money on First National pictures.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

THE DUCHESS OF BUFFALO: Constance Talmadge—25%. Just did enough business to pay for film and paper. Picture just fair; I think I have signed my last First National contract.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LIFE OF RILEY: Special cast—A good one for Saturday in small towns. Will get the laughs all right and pleases. Good all the way through.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

BREAKFAST AT SUNRISE: Constance Talmadge—January 25-26. Very good program picture, but not a big special, but pleased about 75%. Fair business. Seven reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

BREAKFAST AT SUNRISE: Constance Talmadge—Brother, you ought to be shot at sunrise if you play this baby. It might be funny and entertaining to the frogs across the pond, but for a typical American audience it's a crime to shove this kind of a picture down their throats and make them like it. I agree with Mr. — of Kansas City, that this picture ought to get the leather medal for the punkest picture of 1927. My God! Constance, make one picture a year instead of two and put some pep in it. You can act, and have the looks; all you need is a good story. Let somebody outside the family circle do the picking.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Nehr.—General patronage.

LOVE MART: Billie Dove—A good show; patrons here would rather see Dove in shows like "The Stolen Bride" and "The American Beauty."—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

THE GORILLA: Charles Murray—If you have seen the stage play you will be greatly disappointed. While interesting and can undoubtedly please, the possibilities were overlooked and a wonderful story was ruined. Would like to see some one produce this play and follow the stage play; the picture should draw everywhere; plenty comedy, mystery and thrills. Eight reels.—Twin Falls Amus. Co., Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE NOOSE: Richard Barthelmess—Had this been in six reels instead of eight it would be called a good one, but the length killed it. The last part was draggy.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

FRENCH DRESSING: Special cast—Very good indeed. Pleased all who came to see it.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

SAILOR'S WIVES: Special cast—A dandy picture. Will please them all.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

AMERICAN BEAUTY: Billie Dove—January 11. A very pleasing picture, but as yet she has no drawing card with me. Seven reels.—Leslie Hahles, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE TEXAS STEER: Will Rogers—January 9-10. Dandy picture, but didn't draw. Yes, it pleased all who saw it, but I lost money on it. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE TEXAS STEER: Will Rogers—January 16-17. Good picture for the men, but ladies don't care much for it. Had bad weather and did not do much with it. Eight reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—Here is one that has been compared with "The Quarterback"; some would say as a football game, not so good; as a story, better. "A mighty fine picture" was what several said to us as they went out. It's good. Seven reels.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Special cast—January 4-5. This one pleased as well as any picture we have played in a long time. Extra good and drew extra business second night better than first. It's good.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

LADIES AT PLAY: Special cast—If you enjoy watching a man roll over on top of a woman on the floor in order to compromise her, then order this up, but if you feel as I do, you won't run it. This should be titled, "Rough and Rowdy." This is the kind of a picture that drives good people away from the theatres. Mr. Rowland should not have allowed this to pass, and Will Hays is asleep, as usual. Fifty per cent of your audience will howl in laughter, 50 per cent will feel insulted.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.

BROADWAY NIGHTS: Lois Wilson—January 22-23. A good enough picture of its kind and one which would have quite an appeal to the hams up in the Roarin' Forties, but one which is a little too involved for the thickets. Miss Wilson and Sam Hardy good in their parts. Even as dumb as I am, I think I could have improved the entertainment value of this picture. Instead of showing more of the beautiful costumes in the last reel, they were cut to a mere few feet. That is what people want to see when they come to see a picture with such a title. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE TENDER HOUR: Billie Dove—Billie Dove is now a better box office attraction than Colleen Moore, who held this place for quite a while. Billie is going to be one of the best drawing cards on the screen, as all her pictures please. They liked this one and told me so.—A. Mitchell, Dixie theatre, Russellville, Ky.—General patronage.

8-9. A very pleasing little horse race picture that is different, and it will please on family night. It is clean, has heart interest, and comedy. Good attendance. Six reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THREE HOURS: Corinne Griffith—January 25. Very good entertainment.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

DON JUAN'S THREE NIGHTS: Special cast—December 15. Not much to this picture.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

Fox

TWO GIRLS WANTED: Janet Gaynor—22%. January 22-23. Entertaining comedy. This young Gaynor person is the most charming youngster we've seen in a long time.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—65%. January 18. The best Mix yet. Rain, had a fair crowd anyway. Five reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—39%. December 23-24. Good old Tom! Not another star on earth (or in heaven) could have kept me out of the red on Christmas Eve. This story is just so-so, but that doesn't matter, it's Mix.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—We haven't received a bad Mix this season. Regret Fox losing this star, he never fails to fill your house. Six reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—January 20-21. Good Mix picture to poor business due to basket ball, dance, parties and bad weather. The picture well pleased all Mix fans. Beautiful scenery, and the girl is a humdinger. Okay, Tom, we'll have a better break next time.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

CHAIN LIGHTNING: Buck Jones—44%. January 6-7. I haven't played this boy in a long time, but they had not forgotten him, and turned out well to see him. This is a good Western.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

A HIGH SCHOOL HERO: Special cast—January 8. A very good small town picture. Pleased them and was a credit to my house. Six reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE GAY RETREAT: Special cast—January 7. This is a knockout. One of the best war comedies I have played and we have played plenty of them. It went over extra good and if any other company had this it would be a special sure. Don't forget to play this one. Six reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SILVER VALLEY: Tom Mix—January 27-28. Another good Mix picture. Didn't do much on it due to cold weather, no fault of picture. Five reels.—B. R. Parson, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—A marvelous production; great praise is due the director, the players, and the authors. A little rough perhaps but sincere and rings true. We have yet to find a patron who does not agree that it is far ahead of the "Big Parade." Excellent musical score came with the show. We advertised big, put in a good orchestra and played it road show style. One show matinee and one at night. Attendance was good in spite of bad weather. Twelve reels.—Twin Falls Amusement Co., Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—General patronage.

COLLEEN: Madge Bellamy—An unheralded, excellent attraction. We accepted without protest several substituted pictures on the 1926-27 contract from Fox, and aren't regretful as those substituted have been above the standard. Six reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

COLLEEN: Madge Bellamy—Fox sent this one in place of "Summer Bachelors" and it didn't draw but with J. Farrell MacDonald's comedy it is okay.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

COLLEEN: Madge Bellamy—January 13. A very good comedy drama, enjoyed by all. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

CRADLE SNATCHERS: Louise Fazenda—January 22. This picture broke all records for 1928, and set a good mark for others to reach. Packed them in afternoon and night although a little raw in spots, it furnished good entertainment, and pleased generally. Good pulling title.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

CRADLE SNATCHERS: Special cast—Say, fellows, here is just the kind of a picture we like. Some of the goodies said "its shocking" but they all liked it. Give us more like this, Bill.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

ENROUTE TO TEXAS, January 30, 1928.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

The expected has happened. We have been looking for it for a long time, knowing it would come sooner or later. We are sorry it didn't come sooner and rejoice that it didn't come later. We refer to the announcement in the current issue of the HERALD-WORLD of the appointment of Eagle Eye Joe to the position of associate editor of the "What The Picture Did For Me" department.

We knew that as soon as Joe discarded cherry pie and put the kibosh on redheaded girls he'd climb the ladder of fame faster than a monkey could go up a coconut tree, and he has done it. This is another stride in the march of progress to be credited to the HERALD-WORLD for 1928, and we hasten to congratulate Joe for taking our advice to spend his time in the editorial sanctum sanctorum rather than with the girl at the mangel machine. As Judge John McAmley once said in Opie Reid's "Emmet Bonlore" when he was running for justice of the peace, "You can't keep a good man down," and this is true of Joe, and we presume from this on Mr. Quigley will have to send in his card and state the nature of his business before he will be admitted to the editorial rooms of "What the Picture Did for Me" department. There is this bit of advice we would like to give Joe, since he is young and somewhat inexperienced, and that is to not get tangled up with Gallo in controversy over "Band Presentation Acts," for if you do you will look like something the cat "drug" in when he gets through with you.

We will ask the boys of "What the Picture Did for Me" and "VAN'S GANG" to please rise and salute our new associate editor, the Honorable Joseph C. Fisher, otherwise known as Eagle Eye Joe.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We are trying to write this with a radio just behind us broadcasting a program from PYX at Ypsilanti, Mich., or some other foreign country, and it is like trying to teach the alphabet to a deaf and dumb kid in a boiler factory; it can't be done.

The announcer has just informed us that the next selection will be the first movement from "The Shepherd's Dream" in six flats (which reminds us of Marie crossing New Mexico), and he says that the orchestra is under the direction of the world famous Antonio Macaroni Spaghetti (or something like that), then he gives us the lowdown on what to expect. First there is the herd of sheep grazing contentedly on the mountain side and the Shepherd playing a poco piu lento con sentimento on his lute (whatever that is), then we will hear the oreoles and cow blackbirds warbling in the distant elder brush, then the rumble of the thunder in the distance and then comes the breaking of the storm and the final dying out of same. The sun will break through the clouds, we will hear the gentle patter of the raindrops, the cow blackbirds will get busy again and everything will be lovely in Pork Center with the bootleggers back on the job. Then Spaghetti waved his wand and someone rolled some buckshot across the head of the bass drum to denote thunder and then everybody hit something and blowed something else to represent the breaking of the storm and finally we heard the tinkle of the bell on the bellwether as he leads the flock back to the pasture after everything had gotten back to normal and Spaghetti had worked up a sweat, and this ended the first movement.

Then the announcer started in to give us a description of the second movement, and right there is where we got in. We got up and said, "Now look here, Reggie, you have given us one movement today and that's aplenty, and there isn't going to be any more movements. We are trying to write something of interest to the readers of the world's greatest magazine and if you are going to persist in holding the stage we are going to turn this job over to Andy Gump or Will Rogers and then you can go ahead and make all the noise you want to."

We got up and looked around for an ax and couldn't find one and then we went and turned the damn thing off. Radios are all right for well balanced people, but they certainly make it hard on us weakminded folks when we are trying to concentrate our minds on something besides jazz. Uncle 'Leazer Biggs says, "The only difference between radio jazz and a jackass brayin' is that one hain't no more musical than tothern." Uncle 'Leazer has two jacks and three jennies and Aunt Polly has a radio, so he ought to know what he's talking about.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We were much pleased to note in the current issue of the HERALD-WORLD that H. J. Longaker of Alexandria, Minn., is going ahead with the arrangements for that Exhibitor IZ ZAT SO: Special cast—January 14. Very good. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

THE SECRET STUDIO: Olive Borden—January 17. A good drama for its kind. Olive Borden sure has it. A drama of Artists and Artists' models.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

ARIZONA WILDCAT: Tom Mix—January 14. Pleased and drew fairly well considering the very cold spell we had. Five reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Ca.—Small town patronage.

MADAME WANTS NO CHILDREN: Special cast—January 24. Did not get a dozen people in to see this picture on account of title. Picture very ordinary.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THE HEART OF SALOME: Alma Rubens—Joe Briggs couldn't stick. "Doc," says he "That picture reminds me of the winter I had to live on mush and milk and I feel squamish." Exit Joe. Grand finale. Exit Seria and Marthy Hightop. "Oh Keld, wasn't that a keen one, oh Keld?"—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

SINGED: Blanche Sweet—The first of the new

Fox pictures, patrons satisfied and this is a good program picture. Six reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

HILLS OF PERIL: Buck Jones—January 7-8. Good Western. Nothing new in it, but it should get by any place that Westerns are liked. Five reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE FAMILY UPSTAIRS: Special cast—This is a good clever comedy. Our patrons like J. Farrell MacDonald and in this he is the whole show.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

RICH BUT HONEST: Special cast—December 31—January 1. Very good comedy drama along the usual lines. Six reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THREE BAD MEN: Special cast—Played this one two nights and a lot of our patrons came both nights. Bad weather kept it from drawing good.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

THE GREAT K. AND A. TRAIN ROBBERY: Tom Mix—January 27-28. Good in my estimation. Just as good if not better than "No Man's Gold."

Convention to be held in Alexandria some time the coming summer. His suggestion that we arrange for some producing company to have a cameraman there to make a picture of this gathering is a good one, and we would suggest also that they send a director along to direct the picture, and we are confident that every exhibitor in the country would fight to book a picture of this kind.

Who knows what talent might be uncovered by photographing this bunch. There would no doubt be a lot of Lon Chaney's, Milton Sills, Ben Turpins, Reginald Dennys and a few Bull Montanas. Crocket Brown's Bullfoundland pup would make Rin Tin Tin look like a Skyoodle and we would be willing to play the love scenes provided, of course, we were privileged to make our own selections and we would guarantee to make the women all jealous and "The Perfect Lover" look like a two spot.

We can see wonderful possibilities for a picture of this kind, and if the producers don't grab this opportunity to cash in they will have themselves to blame for it.

Just think of sitting in the audience and watching Thomas O. Service and "Fishy" Phill trying to make the seventh hole in fourteen, and Grasshopper Sprague and Tragsdorf and Micky Larson searching Tom Foster's grip for a corkscrew, and that bullhead fisher of Wayne trying to land a perfectly healthy "pumpkin seed" all by himself while the Rabbi softly murmurs:

*She led me to think that I was her baby
When she laid her soft cheek on me head,
And said I might kiss her some other time, maybe,
Provided her husband was dead.*

*Then I turned around quickly and said to this lady
It's meself that is makin' this vow,
Could I lay me hands on a good hickory shillalah
He'd be a gone sucker right now.*

We are glad that Brother Longaker has started this thing going as it should be and we hope that all those who are planning a vacation this coming summer will conclude that Alexandria is the place to spend it and will write H. J. a letter and have their names entered and that he will compile the list for publication in the HERALD-WORLD so the committee will be fully advised.

Since Eagle Eye Joe has become associate editor of the "What the Picture Did for Me" department, we will expect him to take this matter up and discuss it editorially.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We are somewhere between Neligh, Neb., and the "Cherokee Strip" headed for the Lone Star state with a view of calling on those Long Horns down there and we are offering to bet that they will show us a regular time.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Why do they do it? Tonight we saw Paramount's picture "Under the Tonto Rim," supposed to be a picturization of the story by Zane Gray. We presumed that there would be something at least about the picture that would be in some measure suggestive of the story, but it was about as near like the story as "Three Buckets of Blood" is like "Pilgrims Progress." We are wondering if Paramount bought the picture rights to the whole story or just the title. If they bought the whole story it was certainly a waste of money, for the title was all they used. If a man bought a corn sheller and they shipped him an incubator we wonder what he would think about it. They seem to be able to get away with it in pictures and we are wondering what Zane Gray would think about Paramount's version of "Under the Tonto Rim," but, of course, as Uncle 'Leazer would say, "That's none of our doggone business," but when we order porterhouse steak we don't want 'em to ring in sowlbelly on us and try to make us like it, all of which leads us to the conclusion that, since it is 1 a. m., it is time to hit the hay.

J. C. JENKINS,
The HERALD-WORLD Man.

Print good, photography good.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

THE LAST TRAIL: Tom Mix—December 24-25. Very good Western but not up to Mix standard. Six reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

WHISPERING WIRES: Special cast—Mystery play with enough comedy to balance.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

CANYON OF LIGHT: Tom Mix—Good Western except maybe a little too much knocking down buildings.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

THE BLUE EAGLE: George O'Brien—Too much he-man stuff in this to be a good picture. Seems like about every so often this boy has to strip down to almost nude to show his wonderful muscles. People are getting tired of this and it's disgusting. If you are not particular this will get by on a one night date showing. No good for a house that appreciates good pictures.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

THIRTY BELOW ZERO: Buck Jones—January 13-14. Good picture, full of action. Five reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

MONTE CRISTO: John Gilbert—Exceptional production equal in every way to the story, plot, settings and action. Many favorable comments. Eight reels.—Twin Falls Amusement Co., Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—General patronage.

Gotham

THE SATIN WOMAN: Mrs. Wallace Reed—40%. January 22. Good show but too draggy and not the best she made, seems as Mrs. Reed is slipping a notch in every picture she made. She's got to get up before sunrise before she beats her first one she made, "The Human Wreckage." So do not promise them too much if they like Mrs. Reed they will come to see her, but only on account of Wally Reed her husband. That is what I think. Seven reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BUTTONS: Jackie Coogan—80%. A very good picture that will please your patrons. Jackie and Lars Hanson at their best. Business was very good with it. The kids will eat it up. Seven reels.—Andy Anderson, Dayton theatre, Dayton, Ohio.—General patronage.

BUTTONS: Jackie Coogan—Good comments. Good business. Lots of kids out.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

MAN WOMAN AND SIN: John Gilbert—50%. January 5-6. Fairly good picture. Some said fine, others said poor.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

MAN WOMAN AND SIN: John Gilbert—January 9-10. Not good small town stuff, no use trying to put this stuff over on country people. Seven reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE ROAD TO ROMANCE: Ramon Novarro—40%. January 20. Just an average program picture the kind that are hard for a small exhibitor to put over. Seven reels.—R. H. Ries, Calhan theatre, Calhan, Colo.—General patronage.

THE ROAD TO ROMANCE: Ramon Novarro—January 21. Just a fair picture. Good action, and exciting episode, but the picture is lacking in something. In my opinion it is not so directed as to make a good connected picture. The acting of Ramon Novarro is over done. Not a big picture by any means, but it has some good scenes. Seven reels.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—50%. January 22-23. Not much to this picture, and business on this was very poor.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—December 31. A real good Western far above the average. Good attendance. Six reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novarro—100%. January 25-26. The best of all pictures. Played to this percentage and made money. Twelve reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—Broke the record in box office receipts, comments to the good and helped the prestige of the show.—George A. Smith, Palace theatre, Merkel, Tex.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—A better drawing card than "The Big Parade." Pleased everyone. If an exhibitor can't get the business on this one he might as well close his house. Twelve reels.—F. E. Fanning, Crystal theatre, Watseka, Ill.—General patronage.

THE UNKNOWN: Lon Chaney—75%. January 19-20. A good picture, but did not do the business that "Mr. Wu" did.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

THE UNKNOWN: Lon Chaney—January 20-21. Pretty good Chaney picture. His pictures are no drawing card for me. Print good, photography fair. Six reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Marion Davies—75%. December 29-30. Played to very good business first night. Second night not so good. Picture good, but not quite what my patrons expected.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES: Special cast—80%. One corking fine play. Some pronounced it "Wonderful" all enjoyed it. Funny, interesting, exciting, absorbing. We tied up with American Legion. The war boys sold reserved seat tickets. We split 50-50 with them after deducting expenses. Both did well. Played them up big. We had a 100 per cent school matinee. Lon Chaney and William Haines both perfect in their roles. It is a Marine picture. Story laid in San Diego and Philippines. Be sure and run it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE FIRE BRIGADE: May McAvoy—40%. January 1-2. Good fire picture but too long. Print bad, too. Nine reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

WEST POINT: William Haines—One of the very best of the season. Haines is great. Book it by all means. Ten reels.—Andy Anderson, Dayton theatre, Dayton, Ohio.—General patronage.

WEST POINT: Haines-Crawford—Extra good show. Typical Haines comedy and football game. Favorable comments.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

LONDON AFTER MIDNIGHT: Lon Chaney—This picture holds my box office record and how. Isn't that enough? That's what we are in the business for. M-G-M has the pictures, boys, that lead the industry. Seven reels.—Andy Anderson, Dayton theatre, Dayton, Ohio.—General patronage.

LAW OF THE RANGE: Special cast—Like all McCoy Westerns, good.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic & Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

LOVE: Special cast—Played this one during the most severe blizzard since 1898 and cleaned up. This combination of stars is positively the greatest box office magnet ever known. Boys, this Greta Garbo is some woman, sure wish I knew her better. She is the greatest star ever discovered. Eight reels.—Andy Anderson, Dayton theatre, Dayton, Ohio.—General patronage.

LOVELORN: Sally O'Neil—Good picture. Favorable comments.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

LOVELORN: Sally O'Neil—A fair show, will not do much business at the B. O.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic & Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

TEA FOR THREE: Special cast—Not just what we want and not as good as "Adam and Evil" but far from being a poor show.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Lionel Barrymore—January 15-16. Saw several adverse reports on this picture, but I found it a good mystery play. In fact, some school teachers said better than "The Bat." Can truthfully say that majority were highly pleased. Drew very good business with medicine show for opposition, teasers in locals helped. Six reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Special cast—A fair mystery picture that is entirely too dark to follow the picture. Why they do it is more than I can tell, but we have had a number of them lately that in the night scenes all H— can't get the light through to the screen in the night scenes. Pictures are no good if you can't tell what's happening. Maybe it's art, I don't know but I do know that we were pulling 80 Amps on a big G. E. generator and we could not get light enough to follow the sequences in some parts.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—General patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—January 5-6. If you have not used this picture, do so by all means. It is as pleasing a comedy drama of college life as can be found and clean too. My patrons are still telling me how much they enjoyed it. Good attendance. Seven reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Special cast—January 21. A very good feature. The darkies in this one were sure a kick. Seven reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Reported once on this but wish to say read "Service Talks" on this one. It does not boost it hardly as much as it deserves. Book it and advertise it right.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

BECKY: Sally O'Neil—Better show than we expected after reading "Service Talks" on it.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

SPOILERS OF THE WEST: Tim McCoy—Good Indian type Western.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

BODY AND SOUL: John Barrymore—January 2-3. Not a good small town picture. Not what we want at all. Six reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

THE BUGLE CALL: Jackie Coogan—Program picture only, suitable for Saturday. Kids liked it fine and a few grownups. No box office value.—A. G. Miller, Lyric theatre, Atkinson, Neb.—General patronage.

WICKEDNESS PREFERRED: Special cast—A good comedy drama, it will please them.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic & Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

TWELVE MILES OUT: John Gilbert—January 13. Very good.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

TWELVE MILES OUT: John Gilbert—They liked this one better than most of Gilbert's pictures. Ernest Torrence helped to make it worth while.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

ANNIE LAURIE: Lillian Gish—January 11. Wonderful picture and good rating but didn't draw as a special. Nine reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

ROOKIES: Special cast—January 12. Very, very good picture.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Special cast—January 18-19-20-21. This is a great war picture all right, but it barely made expenses here. Played it four nights, and could have got them all in one night. Many favorable comments. Gilbert is adequate, but Karl Dane and Renee Adoree are the real stars of the picture. Thirteen reels.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Special cast—January 16-17. It must have been a big picture, as I booked it for two successive nights without realizing how fast the time passed. I forgot time when looking at this feature. Acting of Renee Adoree the best I have ever seen her do. It is a big picture, but not the biggest ever made in my opinion. Appeal one hundred per cent. Thirteen reels.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

THE SCARLET LETTER: Special cast—Very good for the kind, tone O. K. and good print, readers of the book said the picture followed the book extra close, this is not my kind of picture to make a heavy draw, so lost money.—E. D. Hosack, community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

Paramount

THE LAST OUTLAW: Special cast—75%. Good program Western, far better than Universal Blue Streaks, for instance; Gary Cooper fine; Jack Linden also good. Betty Jewel best Western type girl seen in movies in a long time. Billy Butts the boy extra good, and a fine horse. Story usual stuff, but cast makes it a good picture. Good direction and photography. Would much prefer Paramount's Westerns than lots of others on the market.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

SHANGHAI BOUND: Richard Dix—68%. January 23. Good picture. Richard Dix and Mary Brian very good team. Has enough action for the hard-boiled. Consider better than "The Gay Defender." Six reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Ronald Colman—80%. A good picture, but had to raise the price and people have not the money, so this is the cause for the percentage. Ten reels.—C. B. Burkhardt, Pastime theatre, Homer, Ill.—General patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—Very good picture, but most too heavy for my patrons to understand until they had time to figure the meaning of the picture. Well acted and a wonderful play.—E. D. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

CHANG: Special cast—35%. January 21. Jungle life in India, well done in every way. Hardly appreciated by those not having knowledge of the efforts required in its making. Played to average house at a slight loss; admission 10 and 30 cents. Eight reels. O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgeway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

CHANG: Special cast—January 16-17-18. Very good picture of its kind. Somehow it did not draw, or build up for a three-day run. I call it an outstanding picture, and one that every town should run. Buy it right and couple up with schools if possible. Good clean entertainment. Lots of comedy that is seldom found in this class of picture.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Special cast—40%. A peach of a picture that brought forth much comment from patrons. The flood scene at end remarkably fine and exciting. A real play. Richard Dix fine as usual; Mary Brian very appealing. Cast good, title and paper kills business. Why the title? As to paper, Paramount has poorest of all, the newwart cartoon stuff as posters keep people away.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

MANPOWER: Richard Dix—January 22. Very good.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

NEVADA: Special cast—95%. A fine Zane Gray, and apparently a drawing card, as many had read the book; not so woolly and wild as most of Gray's stories.—C. B. Burkhardt, Pastime theatre, Homer, Ill.—General patronage.

NEVADA: Gary Cooper—January 25. Very good Western. Print excellent. Pleased. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

SWIM GIRL SWIM: Bebe Daniels—80%. Fine show; pleased most all. Rainy nights cause few from attendance.—C. B. Burkhardt, Pastime theatre, Homer, Ill.—General patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—Good. Worth a dozen Swansons. Bebe is there, and we are for her.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

SERVICE FOR LADIES: Adolphe Menjou—60%. Pleased some, clean show, will get by.—C. B. Burkhardt, Pastime theatre, Homer, Ill.—General patronage.

SERVICE FOR LADIES: Adolphe Menjou—January 9-10. The picture is good for its kind, but its kind has never made me a dime. It's impossible for me to get Mr. Menjou out here. Maybe "Phil Rand, of Salmon, Idaho," can tell me why.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

HULA: Clara Bow—75%. January 22-23. This is a good picture. Star great. Gave general satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

HULA: Clara Bow—60%. January 11. Fine picture. My first of hers. Think she will be a good one for me.—C. B. Burkhardt, Pastime theatre, Homer, Ill.—General patronage.

MADAME POMPADOUR: Dorothy Gish—40%. January 7. Did not draw. Costume play no good.—C. B. Burkhardt, Pastime theatre, Homer, Ill.—General patronage.

STRANDED IN PARIS: Bebe Daniels—25%. Bebe Daniels is splendid in this and this is a fine picture. Business rotten partly due to Paramount's rotten line of paper.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

HOLD THAT LION: Special cast—55%. Holy cats! When is a cat not a cat? Doug MacLean and Walter Hiers think they have enlisted their services to hunt house cats which turn out to be man eating lions. Gosh! Doug did just what I'd do—beat it—but he landed a live lion all right, foiled the villain and won the girl. Fine play, laughable and exciting. Book it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

HOLD THAT LION: Douglas MacLean—Dec. 12-13. If you patrons like the comedy type of picture this one is sure to please. Do not be afraid to step on it. Seven reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

TELL IT TO SWEENEY: Special cast—60%. January 4. I do not think your percentage rating is based on right principles. Should be based on average of ten shows as the house record is not a fair proposition.—C. B. Burkhardt, Pastime theatre, Homer, Ill.—General patronage.

THE CANADIAN: Thomas Meighan—85%. October 24. One of Meighan's best. A good story of the Canadian Northwest.—J. P. Johnson, S of N Hall and theatre, Ambrose, N. D.—General patronage.

THE QUARTERBACK: Richard Dix—80%. October 17. A very good football story.—J. P. Johnson, S of N Hall & theatre, Ambrose, N. D.—General patronage.

WIFE SAVERS: Beery-Hatton—It's the best these two have done.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

WIFE SAVERS: Beery-Hatton—Better than their last two, but if it wasn't it sure meant a "squat" for this so-called tremendous box office team. Drew well the first night but second night we were zeroed out on account of the weather. However we wish Adolph and Jesse would have Wally tone down a little on "smut" both in subtitles and movements.—Joe Hewitt, Strand theatre, Robinson, Ill.—General patronage.

PIONEER SCOUT: Fred Thomson—A good Western; they are all about the same.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

LOVE AND LEARN: Esther Ralston—Gave good satisfaction. Type comedy drama.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

BEAU SABREUR: Special cast—A special that turned out to be a flop for me. Price too high and not as good as "Beau Geste."—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

BEAU SABREUR: Special cast—They killed them all but one in "Beau Geste" and had little or nothing left for a cast. The biggest joke for a special put out this season, took an awful licking at the box office.—Joe Hewitt, Strand theatre, Robinson, Ill.—General patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—January 27. Average Paramount picture. Print excellent. All Paramount prints and service A-1. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—January 25-26. Different from anything else he has done. A story of the old Spanish days in California. A fast moving story with lots of action. Dix stages a rough and tumble fight with the heavy that looks like the real thing. This picture will go well in the small towns. Seven reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

PEAKS OF DESTINY: Special cast—Good scenery and that's all.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

THE TELEPHONE GIRL: Special cast—January 14. This is a nifty program offering. It certainly did go over in nice shape. Received many favorable comments. It is a good peppy program picture and one that will hold attention all the way through.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—January 18. Here's a great picture; the acting is what makes it great. Pretty sad for real enjoyment. Nine reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—January 19-20. Did not draw here at all. A very good show but not a special. No more specials for mine. Eight reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

ONE WOMAN TO ANOTHER: Florence Vidor—I liked the picture, but it did not draw.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Fred Thomson—January 5-6. Another one of the specials from Paramount that I was stung on. They sure hooked me this year but never again at the prices they want. This is an ordinary Western picture. Eight reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SENIORITA: Bebe Daniels—Extra good picture. Bebe always good for us, and this was better than average. Plenty of action, a darned good story. Every body pleased, even the box-office.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

SENIORITA: Bebe Daniels—January 26-27. Bebe puts the pep into this one and is a very good program picture. It's nothing but a lot of hokum, but it pleases everyone. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR: Special cast—January 12-13. Another stinging. Special prices with an awful holler. No more specials for me. Just ordinary program picture. Six reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SO'S YOUR OLD MAN: W. C. Fields—January 26. Not much of a picture.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

SOFT CUSHIONS: Douglas MacLean—January 7. About the poorest thing for a picture that I ever did see. No one liked it and the only thing we were thankful for was that the night was bad and we had a small house.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

UNDERWORLD: Clive Brooks—January 11-12-13. I ran this against "The Big Parade" and held my own. It's one of the best crook stories ever made. Step on it, boys, and it will get the cash. Just one of the best of the year.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

FIREMEN, SAVE MY CHILD: Special cast—It's good, but not as good as the others.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

FIREMEN, SAVE MY CHILD: Beery-Hatton—January 17-18. A rough slap-stick comedy with no drawing power. I lost money on this one. If this is the best Beery and Hatton can do, I don't want very many of their pictures. I can't understand why Paramount tries to sell these pictures as specials. I wonder where the special part comes in at.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

A GENTLEMAN FROM PARIS: Adolphe Menjou—January 18. They stay away when you advertise this star. Did not see this one but the box office told me enough. Six reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

RUNNING WILD: W. C. Fields—January 29. Personally I like this fellow, and the picture, but I doubt if it will be a money maker.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

ROUGH HOUSE ROSIE: Clara Bow—January 4-5. Another good bet at the box office. Two days to good business. Clara is the best bet we have. Her pictures are always good.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

TEN MODERN COMMANDMENTS: Esther Ralston—A very good picture with plenty of girls. Our patrons in general are Western fans, but this picture went over O. K.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

IT: Clara Bow—Here is a knockout. Clara always has plenty of pep. My patrons strong for Clara, don't need to advertise much, just bill Clara is coming. Would think this picture would please any house.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—This was a dandy picture and my crowd liked it a lot. It did a big business for me both on Sunday and Monday and I expect admitting this will raise the price on Ralston's for next year.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

SPECIAL DELIVERY: Eddie Cantor—January 18-19. If they like comedy, feed them this one. Two nights to fair attendance and complete satisfaction. This picture put him in solid with our patrons. You won't go wrong in booking this one. Six reels.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—December 20-21. Good picture. Should take any place. Seven reels.—H. W. Batchelder, Galt theatre, Galt, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—January 20-21. A good show but was ruined by having beginning of reel four spliced onto the beginning of reel three. Some careless operator did this. Show drew good business.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

EAGLE OF THE SEA: Special cast—January 2-3. A good picture that pleased all that came out. Seven reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

METROPOLIS: Special cast—January 1. Another lemon from the best company in the business. If it was not for the very rotten pictures I have had I might make a few cents but these kind drive them away. Eight reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

CABARET: Gilda Gray—January 23-24. A good picture. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

ROLLED STOCKINGS: Special cast—January 21. Title was misleading as was the paper. It is a good clean picture of college life. Has comedy, heart interest and in fact everything to make it an ideal program offering. Seven reels.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: Jack Holt—Not the best Grey but they are always safe bets for us.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Jack Holt—December 17. A very good Western well done as are most all of Zane Grey's stories. Enough action to please everyone, also pleasing romance. Six reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

FASCINATING YOUTH: Special cast—A good clean picture and well put on. A cold weather play with plenty of thrills such as ski jumping, and sail boat racing on the ice.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

CASEY AT THE BAT: Wallace Beery—A clean comedy, but did not take with our patrons somehow.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

Pathe-P D C

THE FIGHTING EAGLE: Rod La Rocque—18%—December 15-16-17. "Just before Christmas be as good as you can be" that doesn't apply to the picture game in this man's town. This is a very good picture, but when people are saving their pennies for Christmas I can't coax them into the theatre.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

THE VOLGA BOATMAN: Special cast—100%—November 15. This is one of the best we have shown in our theatre. We had a record attendance and everyone was satisfied. Special music and singing helped to put this over for us in great shape. Eleven reels.—J. P. Johnson, S of N Hall and theatre, Ambrose, N. D.—General patronage.

THE GIRL IN THE PULLMAN: Marie Prevost—January 22. Fair comedy, some kicks. Print very bad but new. The light wouldn't go there with it. Six reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE WISE WIFE: Special cast—January 16-17-18. Very cute society drama, while it's light entertainment yet it's good, and a pleasant time was had by all. Six reels.—Clark & Edwards, Palace theatre, Ashland, Ohio.—General patronage.

DRESS PARADE: William Boyd—January 15. Not a special. No drawing power here, pleased some but not all. Seven reels.—George E. Hall, Rialto theatre, Franklin, Neb.—General patronage.

THE HEART THIEF: Joseph Schildkraut—January 18-19. A fair program picture, without much action and a weak story.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—General patronage.

FIGHTING LOVE: Jetta Goudal—Didn't see this picture myself, but many told me it was good, which is unusual on P. D. C. pictures for me. This one was played with "Schnitz Seymore Variety Show" featuring "Two Black Crows" which broke all house records in twelve years. Schnitz Seymore did it, not Fighting Love. Eight reels.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

BORN TO BATTLE: Bill Cody—January 21. Good little program picture for Saturday night having its settings among the Hill Billies rather than out in the Wide Open Spaces. Bob Custer made one by this name for FBO last year and, although it was of course a different story, it had a tendency to hurt the draw of this one. They do not remember the star of a picture while they will remember the name thereof. Of all the dizzy titles they could have selected they had to take one some other outfit had used. Poor judgment somewhere. Five reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE REJUVENATION OF AUNT MARY: Special cast—December 24. Excellent production. Seven reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

Preferred

WITH THIS RING: Special cast—30%. January 10. A good picture.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

WITH THIS RING: Special cast—Just a program picture, but rather an interesting one. Especially the scenes of the stars marooned on an uncharted island. Then there is the fight between Keith and the monstrous Portuguese, played and most realistically, by Dick Sutherland. Lou Tellegen gives a fine performance as the hypocritical son of a fine family. Print good.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

THE PLASTIC AGE: Clara Bow—22%. January 1-2. An interesting and sympathetic college story, with a peach of a football game.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

Rayart

CAPTAIN'S COURAGE: Special cast—10%. January 11-12. A good story with good action which holds you spell-bound from start to finish. A wonderful cast puts it over in very good shape, pleases and entertains. Six reels.—R. Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

RIDIN' LUCK: Tex Maynard—Nice little Western. Fat boy chum about steals the show.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

Tiffany

THE ENCHANTED ISLAND: Henry B. Walthall—75%. Jan. 26. Another good one from Tiffany. A very good South Sea picture. Wonderful settings. Six reels.—B. R. Parson, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

LIGHTNING: Special cast—80%. Boys, if any of the bigger companies had this one it would be sold to you for the limit. Here is one of the most satisfactory pictures I have had for many a day. The horse in this picture does miraculous work and the cast has been capably selected.—Christ E. Eftim, Star theatre, St. Louis, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

LIGHTNING: Lightning—This was a good picture and up to the regular standard of the Zane Greys. Pleased as well as any of these and worth what you are paying Paramount for theirs, provided you aren't paying more than they are worth.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

LIGHTNING: Lightning—Zane Grey drama. Good outdoor action picture that drew well and seemed to please. Seven reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—Small town patronage.

THE GIRL FROM GAY PAREE: Special cast—60%. An outstanding cast in this picture puts its over very nicely. Photography and settings excellent, as in the case of all Tiffany pictures. Tiffany making as good pictures as anyone and I use most of the larger companies' merchandise. Neighborhood patronage catering to all classes.—Christ E. Eftim, Star theatre, St. Louis, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

WOMEN'S WARES: Special cast—70%. Built for the box office. Business has been off so much that I decided to play this one for adults only. This is not to say that the picture is too strong in bearing out this advertising, but it is a very pleasing performance very well mounted and satisfactorily dressed. Business was very satisfactory on a two day run and picture pleased all.—Christ E. Eftim, Star theatre, St. Louis, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

STREETS OF SHANGHAI: Special cast—Romance, drama. Another good one from Tiffany. This is a wonderful picture, more of a special than most so-called specials. Enough comedy to keep them in an uproar. Six reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristo theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—Small town patronage.

THE BROKEN GATE: William Collier, Jr.—January 20. You don't have to be afraid of this one, a very nice program picture. Didn't do much business on it due to cold weather but received lots of comments on it from those that saw it. Six reels.—B. R. Parson, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

WILD GEESE: Special cast—It is practically an all star cast, and after seeing this picture, I am more convinced than ever that Tiffany has the Gems. I call it a masterpiece, and advise all exhibitors to book it, as it is one they can truly recommend.—Mrs. A. B. Woodyatt, Bio theatre, Moline, Ill.—General patronage.

WILD GEESE: Special cast—January 19-20-21. As a picture for the whole family this picture ranks very high. Every actor in this picture stands out like "A Gem of the purest water." It's near great. Seven reels.—Clark & Edwards, Palace theatre, Ashland, Ohio.—General patronage.

THE FIRST NIGHT: Special cast—Their first night was a riot of interference. There are no risque scenes, as the title might suggest, but the title is fine one to pull them in. Bill it strong, it won't disappoint the lovers of light comedy. The cause of the detective at their bedside the first night was the spurned rival masquerading as a woman and posing as Lytell's wife. All in all, a most entertaining picture.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

United Artists

RESURRECTION: Del Rio-LaRocque—A picture extraordinary. Wonderful acting. They all like this star here. Played during holiday season and didn't draw so well.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

THE GENERAL: Buster Keaton—January 10-11. Pretty good comedy but no drawing card. I am losing money on every United Artists picture for the reason that the rental is too high. United Artists pictures no good for small towns. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

A HERO FOR A NIGHT: Special cast—30%—January 19. A fine program picture. Lots of hokum, but entertaining and funny.—Bert Silver, Silver family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

A HERO FOR A NIGHT: Special cast—This is a very entertaining little picture. It is not up to the standard of "Painting the Town" but at that it is a great comedy and people will like it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

PAINTED PONIES: Hoot Gibson—25%. January 18. Good picture and this time we find Hoot Gibson beating the stars, Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson, on drawing power, why we don't know, but, oh, how they stayed away the night before to see Hoot. That's what we think, but the shows were both good and this one just pulled them in 25% against 5% on "Lonesome Ladies." Well, write your own ticket, boys, we never know how we go over. Six reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

PAINTED PONIES: Hoot Gibson—January 7. The best picture Hoot ever made and pleased 100%. Stay in there, Hoot, that is the kind of pictures we want. "Hey, Hey, Cowboy" was also good. Six reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

FANGS OF DESTINY: Dynamite—19%, January 17. Not bad, but not good enough to get them out this weather.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

BEWARE OF WIDOWS: Laura La Plante—23%. December 11-12. Just fair.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

BEWARE OF WIDOWS: Laura La Plante—January 2-3. A very clever little picture that seemed to please more than usual. Six reels.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

HER BIG NIGHT: Laura La Plante—70%. December 27-28. Fine picture, business on this good. Star is good, and has a good following here.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

HER BIG NIGHT: Laura La Plante—Good show, this star is always good. Tone okay.—E. D. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

STRAIGHT SHOOTING: Ted Wells—90%. January 18. Just a fair program picture. Quite a few were disappointed on it. Five reels.—David Straszer, Lyceum theatre, Manchester, Mo.—General patronage.

THE LOVE THRILL: Laura La Plante—80%. January 21. Lots of good comments on this one. I ran this with "Prowlers of the Night" on a Saturday, and sure made a fine program.—Irwin H. Davis, Gem theatre, Alton, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LOVE THRILL: Laura La Plante—January 15-16. Pretty good. Not much of a drawing card for me.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

HELD BY THE LAW: Special cast—80%. January 15-16. Why don't they make more like it, good, clean, entertaining picture. Holds interest until very end. Seven reels.—B. R. Parson, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

THREE MILES UP: Al Wilson—19%. January 3. Business is flopping fast here. This is a good stunt picture that in a good season would double its record here.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

GRINNING GUNS: Jack Hoxie—25%. December 27. Better than the run of Hoxies.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

BACK TO GOD'S COUNTRY: Renee Adoree—30%. January 8-9. A good picture, but it doesn't follow the story.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

BACK TO GOD'S COUNTRY: Renee Adoree—A James Oliver Curwood story, and a picture that should pack your house. We played it Saturday to S. R. O. for one hour and half of the time. Everyone pleased. Thanks, unkel Karl.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

A HERO ON HORSEBACK: Hoot Gibson—35%. December 30-31. I usually expect a licking at this season of the year, but with Hoot's help I manage to weather the storm.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

HEY, HEY, COWBOY: Hoot Gibson—35%. December 9-10. A fair Western comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

THAT'S MY DADDY: Reginald Denny—A splendid comedy, pleased 100%. Excellent Sunday show. Cannot help but please wherever shown. The little girl a wonder. Six reels.—Twin Falls Amusement Co., Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE FOURFLUSHER: Here is a knockout from start to finish.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

THE FOURFLUSHER: Special cast—The press sheet says: "Youth, Action, Love," and that's what you get and plenty more besides. It's just brim full and overflowing with youth and breezy comedy. It's the story of a boy who makes good on his own hook after his uncle withdraws his inheritance. This will appeal 90%. Print fine and advertising convincing. Universal sure has some fine pictures. Give us more like this.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Special cast—A real natural, no joking. Uncle Carl really did give a Jewel in this production. Nice mystery picture, and liked it, and they came in big numbers. I'll yes Carl to death on this one.—Joe Hewitt, Strand theatre, Robinson, Ill.—General patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Laura La Plante—January 2-3. Step on this one, it is good and will stand an increase in admission. Eight reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE CAT AND CANARY: Laura La Plante—January 22-23. Mystery, thrills and chills galore, with enough comedy and spooks to enable the kids to help you put it over. Trimmed show window with advertising, placing two compartment bird cage with cat and canary in center. Lots of good comments on this picture. Eight reels.—W. E. Dickson, Aristote theatre, Lemmon, S. D.—Small town patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Glen Tryon—Well, who the ——— would have thought it. I have played this bird in Pathe comedies that were rotten, and then to come out for uncle Carl and make a natural. It's great.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

OUT ALL NIGHT: Reginald Denny—January 11-12. Good clean comedy drama, pleased 100%. Plenty of comedy. Seven reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE BRONCO BUSTER: Fred Humes—22%. January 24. Another Western.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

LES MISERABLES: Special cast—Well, Uncle Carl went to Europe and got a real picture, and a money maker. Boys, I advise you to buy this one and step on it. Victor Hugo's name will pull them in. The last two that Carl brought back from Europe were good. "Michael Strogoff" and "Les Miserables."—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

HARD FISTS, THE SQUARE SHOOTER, THE PRAIRIE KING: Special casts—And more to come from Art, Hoot and Fred. Same old story, same old ranch house, same old cross-country race, same old bunk. The Western fans pass them up now. Come on, Carl, some real stories, some new sets or we go broke.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Reginald Denny—Good, entertaining farce comedy. Seven reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

MAN FROM THE WEST: Special cast—Here is a good, clean Western, with Art doing some fine acting. Not much gun play but plenty of pep in the entire picture to hold the crowd. This picture pleased a 100 per cent.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

UNDER WESTERN SKIES: Norman Kerry—December 10. An unusually good Western that is well done and will please ladies as much as the men. Action, romance and comedy in just the right proportion. Good attendance. Seven reels.—Eunice Richards, Richards theatre, Fayette, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING: Special cast—This is a good picture and took well for me, but do not see where it got the name.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

LAZY LIGHTNING: Art Acord—January 7-8. A fair picture, but just about the ordinary Western with tame comedy and action. The little crippled boy took his part well. An average picture for small town patronage.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

TAXI, TAXI: Special cast—December 18-19. Very good comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

THE SILENT RIDER: Hoot Gibson—Hoot has never failed to make me money, so I am for Hoot and all his pictures. This is a good one, that's all.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

THE SHIELD OF HONOR: Neal Hamilton—Nothing extra, but will please the majority.—O. C. Johnson, Atlantic and Strand theatres, Atlantic, Ia.—General patronage.

ROUGH AND READY: Jack Hoxie—January 14. This is a comedy Western. Good appeal, pleased our patrons, and was better than the average Hoxie.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

ROUGH AND READY: Jack Hoxie—January 23. A good Western. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE TRAP: Lon Chaney—Second run to big business. Boys, book it again, it will make you money.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Small town patronage.

WILD BEAUTY: Special cast—Not much. Was disappointed, because this was supposed to be a sure-fire action picture. Sort of a fairy tale story, and the titles give this impression by telling the horse's feelings and reactions.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

THE MARRIAGE CLAUSE: Special cast—Very good, small crowd, but no fault of the picture.—E. D. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

WILD HORSE STAMPEDE: Special cast—My fans are for a Western picture, but I did not see any of them going wild over this one. Very mild.—E. D. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—General patronage.

Warner Brothers

THE CAVE MAN: Special cast—55%. This has three reels of funniest scenes I ever howled myself sick at, namely, when the coal heaver is being trained by pretty Marie Prevost to enter society and the coal heaver's flirtations with those peachy society girls, one especially attractive in Phyllis Haver. The director let comedy fall down into realism at the end and spoiled general effect and left bad taste in mouth. If director had burlesqued everything to end it would rank in "Charley's Aunt" class. Too bad.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

WHEN A MAN LOVES: John Barrymore—January 23-24. Good picture of this type, but no good for me, only taken in film rental. My patrons don't like this kind of picture. Ten reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy theatre, Wagoner, Okla.—Small town patronage.

TRACKED BY THE POLICE: Rin-Tin-Tin—January 15. Started fine but after getting in the middle of the story they ran out of material and chopped it off to a sudden ending. Not so good. Six reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—Small town patronage.

TRACKED BY THE POLICE: Special cast—Personally not up to usual Rinty standard. However, business satisfactory, photography good. Film condition good. Kids whooped and old folks enjoyed it. What more do we want? 10 and 25 cents.—Dr. F.

M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

HILLS OF KENTUCKY: Rin-Tin-Tin—January 24-25. Well, boys, it is the Old Army Game. It seems that whenever you want to keep from going to the poor house you have to run Rin-Tin-Tin. This doesn't speak so well for the alleged humans, but is nevertheless a fact. What I started out to say is that it is a very good picture which will please most anyone with a spark of the homo genus in their makeup. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE COLLEGE WIDOW: Dolores Costello—January 4. A very good little feature. Pleased my people. Seven reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

HAPPY WARRIOR: Special cast—A rather different picture of the circus in earlier days. The story of a boy with natural pugilistic talent and his adventures in the circus ring. Odd would describe it as a whole. McGregor is good in his role, as is Miss Borden as a carefree, wild circus girl.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

SAILOR IZZY MURPHY: Special cast—Stay away from this one, it's a lemon.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

SAILOR IZZY MURPHY: Special cast—It is so rotten, nothing to it. Don't play it or you will regret it. Several said it was the poorest picture I ever ran and I sure agreed.—Harold H. Kortez, Sun theatre, Plainwell, Mich.—General patronage.

State Rights

MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY: Arnold Daly—45%. December 13-14. This is a very interesting (if somewhat serious and dry) historical picture, teaching a wonderful lesson of patriotism. Many favorable comments. The local Legion furnished the picture and sold tickets. Eight reels.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

MORGANSON'S FINISH: Special cast—A most interesting picture of the frozen north. Something like a Curwood story, but taken from the story by Jack London. Fine snow scenes, races on sleighs, and a good fight at the climax.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

PARISIAN LOVE: Special cast—A story of the Montmartre section of Paris, with its drunks, derelects, and of course, Apache Tangos. Just put Clara Bow's name in big letters and the people will be there. She has a tremendous following most everywhere and she deserves it, for she's a wonderful actress. The scenes in the dives of the underworld are just a bit of a real trip to Paris.—Ben Eskind, New Kentucky theatre, Madisonville, Ky.—General patronage.

PASSION PLAY: Special cast—January 24-25-26. This is a wonderful picture portraying the Life of Christ. I think it ought to be shown in every theatre. While it is not a big box office attraction, it surely brings out people that you never see in the show otherwise. I showed it to over 500 patrons and out of the 500 there were at least 300 that never were in my house before. Print good, photography fair. Seven reels.—P. G. Held, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.—Neighborhood patronage.

Serials

BLAKE OF SCOTLAND YARD: Hayden Stevenson—This is a blessed relief from Western serials. I even look at it myself occasionally, so you may imagine it's something different.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

ANGEL EYES: Big Boy—Very seldom get a poor comedy from this company. This is good. Two reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

ATTA BOY: Big Boy—A very funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CIRCUS CAPERS: Poodles Hannaford—As are all other Mermaids, knock-out slapstick comedy. When better comedies are made Educational will make them, there's no mistake about that. Two reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

DRAMA DELUXE: Lupino Lane—Best comedy we had for a long time, and Lupino sure is all there to give thrills and draw the laughs. Give us more like it.

We thank you, Mr. Lane. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

HOWDY, DUKE: Lupino Lane—This Lane guy is about the cleverest comedian on the screen today. This is an extra good comedy and certainly got the laughs. Two reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

KEEPING IN TRIM: Something different. Good comedy. Most of scenes in a gymnasium and very good.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

LISTEN, LENA: Just a good comedy which gave satisfaction. That is all we care for. Everybody was happy, even the cashier. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

SHORT SOCKS: Bobby Vernon—Bobby Vernon was short on socks but long on laughs. About 1,000 laughs to the reel. Al Christie gives us a finished, clean production all about school days when you and I were young, Maggie. Book it; it's good.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

WILD WALLOP: Billy Dooley—Good funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

F B O

ALICE CARNIVAL: Krazy Kat—Pretty good cartoon. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

GOING THE LIMIT: George O'Hara—Just another picture. Five reels.—F. E. Fanning, Crystal theatre, Watseka, Ill.—General patronage.

KRAZY KAT CARTOONS: The best cartoons we have ever played including "Aesop Fables." Not to be compared to the Krazy Cat comedies released by F B O.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

TANKS ON THE WABASH: Three Fat Men—The fat men seem to please our patrons. Two reels.—F. E. Fanning, Crystal theatre, Watseka, Ill.—General patronage.

FOX

FOX COMEDIES: We have yet to use a bad comedy from Fox. Make us fifty-two two reels a year, Mr. Fox, you know how. Two reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

THAT'S A PIPE: Good comedy.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

WILD PUPPIES: This is better than the Gangs and has a bunch of kids that put it over. Two reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

BATTLE OF THE CENTURY: Absolutely the best comedy I have ever played and I don't mean maybe. Hal Roach comedies are in a class all by themselves. Two reels.—Andy Anderson, Dayton theatre, Dayton, Ohio.—General patronage.

DOG HEAVEN: Book this one by all means. The kids at their best with a dog that is a wow. Hundreds of patrons have asked us how they can get a dog to perform in such a manner. Two reels.—Andy Anderson, Dayton theatre, Dayton, Ohio.—General patronage.

DOG HEAVEN: Our Gang—Good comedy but more dog than Gang.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

FIGHTING FATHERS: Max Davidson—Pretty good comedy but "Call of the Cuckoo" was the Davidson knockout with us.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

HATS OFF: This is a peach of a comedy about as good as they get. Two reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

HEEBIE JEBBIES: Our Gang—The best of the "Gang" comedies.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

HEEBIE JEBBIES: Gang—Best "Gang" for a long time. Not anything to write home about at that. Two reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

US: Charley Chase—Funny airplane comedy.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

DR. QUACK: Dandy comedy about headache, and we lost our head ache after seeing this one. That's as good as it was. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

FIND THE KING: Good high class comedy. Two reels.—Leslie Hables, Reel Joy theatre, King City, Cal.—General patronage.

FIND THE KING: Edward Everett Horton—Fair comedy. About as good as the other Paramount comedies, which isn't saying much. Two reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

MOONEY MARINER: Billy Dooley—Average comedy.—Colonial theatre, Moulton, Ia.—General patronage.

ROW, SAILOR, ROW: Billy Dooley—Good comedy, had them laughing all the way through. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

PATHE

CRAZY TO ACT: Good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SMITH'S CUSTOMERS: A good funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

AH, GAY VILMA: Charles Puffy—Just a fair comedy. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

ANDY GUMP: Let the folks know you have an Andy Gump comedy, they won't even ask what feature. Don't overlook these shorts.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

ANDY NOSE HIS ONIONS: Andy Gump—Not so good. Two reels.—F. E. Fanning, Crystal theatre, Watseka, Ill.—General patronage.

BRAND OF COURAGE: Featurette. A good two reel Western.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGIANS: They're short with an individual personality. Better than the first series. Book 'em and read, or let your competitor have 'em and weep. Two reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

DATES FOR TWO: Good comedy in this series. Two reels.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE DUDE COWBOY: Fred Gilman—A dandy comedy Western that went over with a bang and pleased every one. Two reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

LET GEORGE DO IT: These are extra good comedies.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

OCEAN HOPS: "Oswald Lucky Rabbit Series"—Better than Krazy Kat's and Oswald sure made the record of the air. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

THE PEACE DEPUTY: Fred Gilman—A dandy two reel Western and went over fine. Two reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

PRIDE OF PIPE ROCK: Ben Corbett—A nice short feature Western which pleased my patrons. Two reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

SAXAPHOBIA: Arthur Lake—Good little one reeler to fill in the program and sent them home happy. One reel.—Rudolph Duba, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.—General patronage.

TROLLEY TROUBLES: "Oswald, the Rabbit Series." First one I've seen. It's good. One reel.—Roy W. Adams, Pastime theatre, Mason, Mich.—General patronage.

THE WILD WEST: This is regular "Covered Wagon" with iron horses. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

YOUTH AND BEAUTY: Andy Gump—One of the best of the series. Two reels.—F. E. Fanning, Crystal theatre, Watseka, Ill.—General patronage.

MISCELLANEOUS

BEAR FACTS: Mutt & Jeff—Good Mutt and Jeff comedy. One reel.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

THE MAILMAN: Good one reel comedy.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

WHEN BONITA RODE: A fine short feature Western that pleased. Two reels.—W. C. Snyder, Cozy theatre, Lamont, Okla.—General patronage.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating report received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By Whit

AS this goes to press, the contract committee is still doing business around at the Congress, but just what that business is, no one seems to know, or at least, no one will spill anything. We spent a number of perfectly good hours at the Congress last week, and all we learned was just how tight-lipped a bunch of film men can be. What little news there is on this important meeting can be found in the first pages of this paper.

THE Brookhart Bill seems to be giving the boys down the row something to talk about, and the exchanges have petitions for the exhibits to sign. Some of them are signing and—some are not.

Jack Sampson is now connected with Gotham and is manager of the Chicago exchange.

E. L. Delaney, exploitation man for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has returned to his hotel after being in a hospital for several weeks due to a case of double pneumonia. He will be back at his desk after a week or two more of convalescing. During Delaney's absence, Charles Glichams, who works out of Indianapolis, has been working out of the Chicago office.

Bill Sweeney received a post card last week from Maurice Choynski and Max Hyman, both of whom are in Monte Carlo. They, according to the post card, were planning on breaking the bank.

Frank Ishmael was home two days last week suffering from a severe case of pharyngitis, which according to Ishmael, is an inflammation of the pharynx, an alimentary canal leading from the cavity of the mouth to the esophagus. Laugh that off, if you can. It was more than Frank could do.

And when he got back to the office somebody had moved his desk, so that now he can watch every move of each person in the exchange. "Just like a teacher watching her pupils," says he. And with the new desk, he acquired a continental telephone. Ritzy, eh!

The North Center broke all house records with "7th Heaven," during its latest opening week.

"Chicago After Midnight," an FBO picture, is the latest effort of the industry to cash in on Chicago's reputation as a crime center. The picture is showing this week at the Marbro, Granada, Avalon and Castle. It has some good night shots of the city such as the Rainbo Gardens, State Street at Randolph and a few other well known spots. The Castle is billing it as a "picture of the world's greatest underworld."

The Parkway theatre at Madison and the Kenosha at Kenosha are putting in Vitaphone equipment.

Fred Aiken, of Pathe, has been transferred to the New York office, and his secretary, S. Gilde, left last week for the Big City where she will continue her work with Aiken. Aiken is Midwest division manager for Pathe short subjects.

Lola Adams Gentry, secretary of the Los Angeles Film Board of Trade, was a Chicago visitor last week. She was accompanied by Marian McCullough, traveling secretary for the Film Boards, and the two spent several pleasant hours with Tess Heraty.

Robert C. Bruce, the producer of scenic pictures, was in town Wednesday, visiting with Dave Dubin.

Attention, Doug Hodges: Len Ullrich says he has never received that letter you promised to write him.

Charles Stevens, supervisor of exchanges for First National, was in town last Friday.

Irving Mack and his wife returned from a trip to Detroit last Monday. They spent their honeymoon in the motor city, and this trip was in celebration of their tenth wedding anniversary. And by the way, Mack is driving a brand new Hupmobile sedan. (I knew somebody would get caught by the glib talk of the boys at the auto show.)

Wabash Avenue looked almost like Boul Mich last week, with so many people going down to the show.

We went to the show, too. Yes, sir, we looked over all of 'em. This car, said we, looks great but it won't stand rough treatment, and this one should stand a lot of hard usage, but it doesn't have just quite enough style for us. After kicking tires and looking under hoods and sitting in the front seat, clutching the steering wheel, we picked out just the town car we thought would suit our needs; then we picked out a small, light car for auxiliary needs. And then we rode home on a street car. Ho Hum.

Dave Goldman is now manager of the Little theatre, LaGrange.

Mae Murray, that exponent of the dance and lingerie, was down the row last week. And this week, she is the feature attraction at the Chicago.

The Leo Saulkins dinner was a great success, according to the many boys who attended it. A number of good bouts and acts were staged. Between 250 and 300 guests paid their honor to Saulkins.

Tom North, special representative for Pathe on "Topics of the Day" and "Aesop's Fables," has traveled 6,300 miles since the second day of the year. One trip took him as far as New England and the route he has covered sounds like a Cook's tour. Tom reports that the pitcher and bowl is still in active use in many hotels of the Midwest.

Winfield Sheehan paused in the city last week on his way to New York.

Mrs. Nathan Wolf, mother of Maurice Wolf, Eastern district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, died in Houston, Texas, last week.

Nate Wolf is back from a three weeks' trip through the South where he combined business and pleasure.

The warm weather we have been having the last week or two has given the box offices a little boost, and as I write this the sun is shining for all get out, but by the time you read it, the snow may be flying.

But right now the weather is golffy as the devil, and this reminds me that some of the boys have been rushing the season and hitting the little ball out at the Crystal Lake country club. You just can't keep a film man down—when it comes to golf.

Explosive Films Endanger City Schools, Is Charge

Lives of hundreds of Chicago school children are being endangered daily through the use of explosive film in school moving picture machines, Fire Commissioner A. W. Goodrich was warned last week by T. J. Reynolds, head of the operators' union.

"I also wish to call your attention to the fact that in some instances these movies are a profiteering scheme where remuneration comes from children's pennies," he added. "I understand that the collection of money for such a purpose is prohibited by a rule of the school board."

The Regal theatre opened last Saturday to the accompaniment of a great deal of newspaper publicity and advertising. This new 3,000 seat Lubliner and Trinz theatre is situated at 47th and South Park boulevard. It's opening creates a new center of interest in Chicago's cosmopolitan neighborhoods.

The Fox exchange is displaying two huge pictures these days, one of Dolores Del Rio and the other of Victor McLaglen. The lobby photos must be eight feet and, gosh, they'll almost knock your eyes out. It's fun to drop in there and look over the pictures.

Newsreel as Agency for World Peace Is Cited in Public's Stand on Film

The newsreel as an agency for world peace is emphasized by a writer who signs himself as "E. P. G." in the Chicago Tribune. He says:

"I attended a theatre on the south side of Chicago at which a newsreel was shown portraying both the exploits of our national hero, Lindy, as he was being entertained in the small province of Guatemala and the embarking of a large number of marines for service in the country of Nicaragua in an effort to quell the uprising of Gen. Sandino.

"The thing that struck me was the round of applause that Lindy received in marked contrast with the utter stillness when the pictures of the marines were shown. To me this was a silent protest against our government's attitude in handling the Nicaraguan situation."

Columbia Delivers the Goods — — Every Time!

WILLIAM BRANDT, Brandt's Theatre Enterprises, Brooklyn, N. Y.—Entire circuit showing Columbia pictures 100 per cent. Excellent productions and box-office attractions. I commend them to every theatre-owner. Regret we haven't more theatres to sign up for Columbia pictures.

WILL H. BRENNER, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind.—Satisfactory from box-office and entertainment standpoint. Holder of a Columbia contract is sitting on top of the world.

N. L. NETZER, American Legion Theatre, Lena, Wis.—Columbia Pictures are satisfying, oh boy! Can be bought at such a fine price, one can make money.

AUBREY SWEARINGEN, Crescent Theatre, Woodville, Tex.—Best pictures of their kind on the market. Please my patrons and build up my business. What more can I say?

HOMER P. MORLEY, Princess Theatre, Buchanan, Mich.—Packed with genuine first-class entertainment. Have given wonderful satisfaction.

S. H. RICH, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—Patrons tell me how good they are, and that's enough for me.

E. A. LAKE, Keith-Albee Hippodrome Theatre, Baltimore, Md.—Each release better than the preceding one. A big variety. Consider my contract from Columbia the foundation of my bookings this year.

DICK STEADMAN, Ashland Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.—Great! Can't go wrong on Columbias.

L. WAYNE JONES, Arcadia Theatre, Vandergrift, Pa.—Entirely satisfactory.

N. JOHNSON, Scenic Theatre, Miller, S. D.—Real pictures for any audience.

G. CAREY, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark.—Better than many of the so-called specials sold by the loud-talking boys.

CHAS. F. KEAR, Opera House, Minersville, Pa.—Very highest type. Only fault is that they are not being released fast enough to meet my requirements.

CROCKETT BROWN, Grand Theatre, Nashwauk, Minn.—Recommend them to any of the boys who have not played them. You will make no mistake.

X. W. GOODELL, Pastime Theatre, Ottawa, Kan.—Will draw business in any locality.

EARL SOMERVILLE, Opera House, Raymond, Minn.—Never had a poor one from Columbia yet.

THE MOST FAMOUS BILLBOARDS IN THE COUNTRY!

There is no substitute for Circulation!

OLD timers in the field will remember when the motion picture trade papers spoke of circulations in excess of 20,000,—spoke is putting it mildly as they really shouted about it.

Motography, which in pioneer days was the leading paper in the west, printed one very indignant announcement that the claims of the eastern papers of 22,000 circulations were absurd—adding that Motography had the largest circulation in the field and its total was only 18,000.

Statisticians of these early papers ran wild. They issued surveys of their “circulation” showing remarkable coverage numerically and from the standpoint of buying ability.

It all seems laughable now. That was before the Audit Bureau of Circulations entered the field and none of the papers were compelled to submit their claims to a thorough audit conducted by an impartial organization.

It all seems laughable now—and yet, in the entire motion picture trade today there is only one business publication member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations—only one business publication which has its circulation claims checked up on—only one business publication that makes an accounting for the advertising dollars it receives. That publication is—

My Heart Stood Still!

(No. 571—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation.)

WHEN MARY ROBERTS RINEHART LIKES A PICTURE WHICH HAS been screened from one of her famous stories — well, it has to be a genuine, blown-in-the bottle, copper-riveted knockout.

SHE IS A BITTER CRITIC WHEN SHE DOESN'T LIKE ANYTHING.

I KNOW FROM EXPERIENCE!

I'VE NEVER FORGOTTEN AND I NEVER SHALL FORGET A LETTER SHE wrote to the Universal organization several years ago when she didn't like what we had done to one of her books in screening it.

GENTLEMEN, WHEN 'I TELL YOU THAT HER LETTER SIZZLED, I mean sizzled. It was passed all around among the home office staff with speed because it was too hot for any one man to hold very long.

MRS. RINEHART KNOWS HER WORDS AND HER ENGLISH. SHE CAN give words a keen and incisive meaning that they never possessed before. She can make them do ground and lofty tumbling. She can sharpen them to a razor's edge. She can make them club you into a coma. She can put you to shame with them and make you yearn for a dark, quiet hole in the ground where you can hide away and shiver in terrific privacy.

SO, I SAY, I'LL NEVER FORGET THE TIME SHE WROTE A LETTER which turned the Universal inside out and upside down. My heart stood still. My ears still burn.

AND NOW SHE HAS WRITTEN QUITE A DIFFERENT MESSAGE. I SHALL always treasure it as an antidote to the poisonous one of years ago. I'll never let you read the sizzling letter, but I want you to read the following telegram, which refers to our dandy Laura LaPlante picture, "Finders Keepers" of which Mrs. Rinehart was the author:

Carl Laemmle, President,
Universal Pictures,
Universal City, Calif.

4:30, JAN 26, 1928

Have just seen "Finders Keepers" and feel it is excellent piece of work. Fine casting and direction, Miss LaPlante gives splendid performance, has given me one of the heartiest laughs I have ever had. Feel that she develops in this picture a type of subtle comedy which will endear her to even larger audiences. Please thank her for me for her splendid work. Also my congratulations to Mr. Ruggles. Kindest regards.

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

NATURALLY, THE PICTURE IS ALL THAT MRS. RINEHART SAYS, AND so is Laura LaPlante. Naturally, you should give plenty of advertising to the fact that this LaPlante picture is from the popular pen of Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart.

THEN, JUST AS NATURALLY AS NIGHT FOLLOWS DAY, IT FOLLOWS that you'll do a corking good business.

DID YOU EVER, IN ALL YOUR LIFE, SEE ANY COMPANY IN THE BUSINESS produce such an unbroken line of amazingly good pictures as this here now Universal Company.

KINOGRAMS IN THE LEAD

For the third consecutive time, Arthur James' review of news reels for ten issues shows Kinograms far ahead of the field—with seven firsts out of ten.

MOTION PICTURES TODAY

February 4, 1928

THE NEWS REEL SCORE FOR TEN RELEASES—No. 3

The third ten weeks newsreel appraisal shows Kinograms in the lead with seven firsts out of ten (one of these being a tie with Pathe, Paramount and Fox). Kinograms also had 1 second and 2 thirds—and the distinction of always being "in the money." Fox was seven times in the money and stands second in the count for ten issues with 3 firsts, 3 seconds and 1 third. Pathe was seven times either first, place or show with 3 firsts, 2 seconds and 2 thirds.

The box score for the ten issues, beginning December 10, ends with the issue of January 14. The fourth ten weeks began with the issue of January 21st.

The keen interest in the competition among the six newsreels continues to be shown among exhibitors throughout the industry and as before, the analyses are serving as aids to managers who are anxious to serve their patrons with the best handled and most alive news material. The ten weeks are as follows:

1 Kino-grams Fox Pathe	2 Pathe Kino-grams Para-mount	3 Kino-grams, Pathe (tied) Fox M-G-M	4 Kino-grams Pathe Fox	5 Fox Para-mount Kino-grams	6 Fox, Kino-grams, Pathe Para-mount, (tied) M-G-M, Inter-national (tied)	7 Kino-grams Pathe M-G-M	8 Kino-grams Fox Pathe	9 Fox Para-mount Kino-grams	10 Kino-grams M-G-M Inter-national

Better Theatres

Appears this week as Section Two of

WORLD

As a section of Exhibitors Herald, it won general acclaim as the most interesting, constructive and widely read publication devoted to the building, equipping, decoration and operation of theatres in the industry. With the addition of F. H. Richardson, eminent authority on projection, and other writers for Moving Picture World, it becomes still a greater force.

Some of the Features This Issue

"The Motion Picture Theatre and Motion Picture Theatre Architecture" by Thomas E. Tallmadge—one of the most astounding articles from the pen of an architect ever written. You may or may not agree with him—but the entire industry will talk about him.

"Protecting the Money in Your Theatre"—Showing how it is possible for you to save on your insurance rates.

"The House that Courage and Better Theatres Built"—An interesting and informative story of how a reader of Better Theatres realized his ambition to build a modern playhouse in a small town.

"How to Make Your Organ Pay for Itself"—An editorial which may show the small town theatre owner how he can afford a pipe organ.

These are but a few of the interesting stories contained in 64 pages, profusely illustrated.

Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Mr. Shrader:

It gives me great pleasure to state that Harold Lloyd in GRANDMA'S BOY, re-issue, is making a distinct hit at the Apollo Theatre this week.

While this was expected, still it is rather remarkable in the face of the severe competition we have this week, ie; Mae Murray in person at the Indiana and SEVENTH HEAVEN at the Circle.

It is rather an exception for us to run a re-lease of any kind, no matter how good it is but those in your company who have been responsible in reviving this Lloyd classic should be complimented as they surely made no mistake.

The box-office returns compare favorably with any big feature which we have run at the Apollo.

With best wishes, I remain,

Yours very truly,

“P. T. BARNUM WAS A SCHLEMIEHL”

What did he do? He tricked the public in. He talked about cherry-colored cats, and they were nothing but—cats. When he wanted to get 'em out he used as a chaser his “This Way to the Egress” Sign. The poor saps didn't know Egress wasn't an animal but an exit. It's true you can fool some of the people some of the time — but Barnum's theory of fooling the public doesn't work in the movies — which play to most of the people most of the time.

ADVERTISING is NEWS!

ADVERTISEMENTS contain information as vital to the motion picture theatre owner as that contained in the news columns.

Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World, which prints more advertising than any other two business papers in the motion picture field, is a treasure house of information. Thousands in the motion picture field find it an invaluable aid to wise buying.

In a business field, regardless of the effort of its editorial force, the business paper, which does not print all of the important advertising, is not giving its readers the service they must have.

Readers in the motion picture industry are indeed fortunate that the greatest volume of advertising appears in the magazine which leads editorially as well.

Better Pictures

THE quality of the industry's product will always remain the question of greatest importance and greatest influence upon the course of the business.

During the past year much of the thought and efforts of the best minds in the business have been permitted to stray from the all-important question of product, and the unfortunate situation is now at hand in which it must be admitted that the average quality of picture entertainment now being offered is certainly not what it should be. It is true that the art of the cinema is not failing, but it is also true that there are fewer good pictures and more poor pictures being offered to the public. Year by year the better class of pictures have been becoming better, but out of the several hundred pictures that are offered yearly to the theatres of the country the predominant number are pictures that are grossly lacking in the essentials of good, sound entertainment for the American public.

A few good specials cannot make a profitable season for either the exhibitors or the producers.

A great many theories may be called up to explain the unsatisfactory product situation that now exists. We shall not attempt to cite any particular theory, nor any group of theories, as being responsible, but a review of some of the principal ones affords interesting material for consideration.

Apprehension has long been felt on the point of just what would be the influence of too-finely drawn administration and management upon the quality of pictures. As everyone knows the economic conditions existing during the past few years have imposed upon producers the necessity of drawing tightly the reins of management over every feature of production. If this had not been done a financial disaster would doubtlessly have taken place. But, it may now be properly questioned, have not too much business management and too much standardization been introduced at the cost of the sacrifice of the type of creative effort and enthusiasm which is essential in the making of good motion pictures?

The evolution of the picture business has virtually eliminated the independent producer. This, necessarily, has been a harmful influence upon the quality of the product. It is hardly necessary to introduce proof in support of the theory that with the channels of distribution open to the whole world a healthy stimulus to product effort is effected by means of independent production.

As a matter of fact, the standard of the motion picture of recent years is entirely due to the enterprise and initiative of individuals and organizations which entered the business as independents competing against the smug complacency of the General Film Company. The General Film Company was beaten not so much by the law, nor by the commercial competition to which it was subjected, as by its failure to improve, expand and develop its product.

This fact should remain for a long time as a loud-speaking lesson in the record of the motion picture business.

Everyone familiar with developments during the past two or three years knows that the question of quality product has been subordinated to other matters in the thoughts and activities of many of the principal figures in the industry. The desire for booking power and theatre supremacy has held sway. A strenuous contest for theatrical strength has been waged and it is a fair observation to state that in several cases while great effort was being spent on getting theatres little effort has been devoted to insuring that once the theatres have been gotten there would be something worth while to put in them.

There always have been and always will be "great questions" and "great problems" affecting the industry and occupying the thought of leaders of the business. The problem of quality product is an old one and its lack of freshness may cause it to be forgotten about while other—and really lesser—matters are occupying the limelight.

But just where this leads to should be plain to everyone. Without an adequate supply of good pictures the industry cannot exist.

And if one wants to convince himself of the necessity of action on this question of quality product, he need only inspect the average type of pictures that are falling to the lot of the exhibitor conducting a daily change policy.

THERE is, of course, the distinct commercial side of the industry. Standardization and efficiency are here not only to be welcomed but must be striven after by every possible means. But standardization and an excess of efficiency may very plainly lead to highly objectionable results as far as the distinctly creative side of motion pictures is concerned.

The featured director has practically passed out. Under the system that has been in vogue in many of the studios the director—regardless of who he may be or what he has done—is now held subject to a "supervisor" or a supervising council. This system may, as is claimed for it, prevent a director from running far afield. It may prevent stark failure and it may also insure the maintenance of at least a mediocre standard. But a mediocre standard is just what the motion picture does not want. It is better to have an occasional great failure—if this is to be the result of maintaining the freedom of individual thought and action necessary to produce great successes.

The "star system," once held to be the cause of many of the ills of the business, also has been virtually eliminated. But what improvement has been effected? The star system has practically gone and so have many of the star attractions, and the gaps left by the passing from popularity of some of the older stars have not been filled.

Although the motion picture obviously represents a business of personalities, there are many reasons for saying that personalities, who can and must contribute so much to pictures, have been so much pressed down in the mould of standardization and "efficiency" that their potential attraction value has been materially lessened.

Here, then, is the question of quality product. An answer to this question is eagerly awaited from those upon whom the industry is depending in connection with this matter of predominant importance.

Kennedy Becomes Associated With Pathe; Merger Is Denied

Civic Clubs Attack Plan for Mayor as Chicago Censor Boss

Fifty Chicago clubwomen and civic leaders protested at a hearing Monday against Mayor W. H. Thompson's plan to obtain direct control of the city's censor board.

A letter signed by 70 organizations' joint committee on motion pictures and presented by Mrs. Edward L. Murphy, chairman, charged that the ordinance would "nullify all censorship" and "simply open the way for the appointment of a person to work for the film interests." A commission of three members was proposed as an alternate plan.

Hope for Tax Reduction in This Session Dwindles When Democrats Balk

(By Washington Bureau of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—With treasury officials and Republican leaders in Congress expressing great anxiety over the revenues to be derived on last year's income and business, prospects for tax reduction at the present session are believed to be dwindling fast.

Democratic leaders have threatened to attach tariff riders to the bill when it comes up on the floor of the Senate and also to abolish affiliated returns, and assert they can make both stick. The bill is being held in the Senate finance committee until after last year's returns are filed on March 15, but it is being predicted there will be no tax reduction this year.

Evangelistic Party Works Against Sunday Shows

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

TEMPLE, TEX., Feb. 14.—Persons objecting to Sunday motion pictures are making a canvass of the city seeking signatures for a petition to be presented to the Dent Theatres Corporation of Dallas, and to County Attorney Henry Taylor. Many signatures have been secured at the meetings now being held by the Starnes-Walker evangelistic party and the canvass was carried to the business district today. One of the workers declared that the purpose was partly to arouse sentiment against the Sunday shows.

Hays Ready to Testify in Teapot Dome Inquiry

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 14.—Will H. Hays, informed that the congressional committee investigating the Teapot Dome oil lease may invite him to testify at Washington, wired Washington Saturday that he will be "very glad to do this if the committee so desires." Hays was chairman of the Republican national committee during the Harding campaign in 1920.

Arrangement Is Purely Advisory, Say Officials Declared Result of Close Friendship and Mutual Admiration Between Murdock and F B O President

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O Pictures Corporation, has become associated with Pathe Exchange, Inc., according to Blair & Company, interested bankers.

No Merger Planned, Say Officials

This does not mean a merger, however, according to officials of both companies, who declare that Pathe and F B O have not combined, nor is any absorption or consolidation contemplated.

The association of Mr. Kennedy with Pathe is explained as a purely advisory arrangement brought about as the result of close friendship and mutual admiration between the president of F B O and J. J. Murdock, head of the Pathe organization.

Mr. Kennedy will devote his attention to Pathe affairs as long as his services are needed in the situation now existing, according to Blair & Company.

Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, was due in New York from the Coast today. He is expected to return to Hollywood immediately after conferences with Pathe executives here.

an unwarranted slur upon the capital and the citizens therein.

"The Secretary of the chamber was instructed to write to you in protest and urging in particular that all reference to Washington be eliminated from the film, because scenes represented as taking place in Washington were untruthful and derogatory.

"The chamber hopes that you may be able to take steps through your office, as a result of which this film will be modified or suppressed."

N. Y. Exhibitors Fail to Back Anti-Censor Bill

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—Despite the fact that the New York State Legislature is scheduled to adjourn in less than a month, no action has yet been taken toward reporting out of committee the several bills that are of interest to the motion picture industry. The repeal of censorship still lies dormant in committee and unless there is action soon, the bill will go into the discard.

Of course much can be done within two or three days if the ball is once set rolling. Legislators say that exhibitors of New York state are showing no interest whatever in censorship repeal.

Three Are Indicted for Baltimore Sunday Show

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BALTIMORE, Feb. 14.—John G. Callan, legislator, and two others are named in six indictments returned here after trying to put on a Sunday show to test the blue laws of the state.

"Man, Woman, Sin" Slurs Capital, Hays Told By Chamber

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Asserting that "Man, Woman and Sin," which was recently shown at a local theatre, was highly immoral and casts an unwarranted slur upon the national capital, the Washington Chamber of Commerce last week wrote to Will Hays, as well as to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the producer and distributor, asking that it either be suppressed or modified. The letter to Hays said:

"Serious complaints regarding the motion picture entitled 'Man, Woman and Sin,' which has been running at the Palace theatre, have been brought to the attention of the Board of Directors of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, it being alleged that this film is not only highly immoral but that it also casts

Contract Committee Resumes Session; Early Completion of Work Is Predicted

Members of the National Joint Contract Committee were on their way to Chicago Tuesday from Detroit and New York to resume the sessions out of which is to come a new instrument for determination of contractual relations between exhibitors and distributors.

The members of the unaffiliated exhibitors' group have been deliberating since the recess taken February 6, at Detroit, the headquarters of the M. P. T. O. of Michigan, of which H. M. Richey is general manager. Richey is secretary of the group. The affiliated exhibitors who are sitting in at the meetings but without vote, and the distributor members are returning from New York.

The recess deliberations are believed to have cleared the decks for early agreement on clauses remaining to be settled. Nathan Yamins was back on the committee. Col. H. A. Cole, who had succeeded him when he was called home by the loss to his theatres in the Fall River fire, reverted to his status as alternate.

BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—There was a goodly gathering of scribes and elders at the Thursday meeting of the A. M. P. A. at the Cafe Boulevard. English was the language used on this occasion, inasmuch as S. W. Harland Edgcombe of dear old London was the featured speaker. . . . Hop Hadley, who wears no less than 16 service stripes of the infant industry, has started a window show card, press sheet, trade paper, and what have you, which he is selling to a very select and discriminating public. Hop quotes Aristotle (or was it that wellknown son of the cinema, Tommy Edison?) who said that anything can be put over with "one pint of inspiration and three quarts of perspiration." With a dash of bitters? . . . Another exodus of pen-pushers is going toward Hollywood. The latest includes Harlan Thompson, who wrote "Little Jessie James" and other musical comedy successes on Broadway; Thyra Samter Winslow, who keeps you home reading short stories; and Wells Root, one of the editors of "Time" and a busy squash racquets player from the Yale Club. Here's wishing 'em a comfortable ride back. . . . Canon Chase is still presenting the Doxology in Washington, while UFA is playing Sexology to packed houses in London. Come to think of it, the wellknown draama is presenting "The Captive" right in Baltimore. . . . Oh, shaw! Reginald Denny is heading for England to try and snare George Bernard for motion pictures. A good trick if you do it. . . . Universal is reported to have arranged with Gimbel Brothers department store to release their product on 16-millimeter films for home projection, on a coupon basis. If enough people get this home picture bug there'll be few coupons cut in anybody's office. But then, who cares about coupons? . . . M. Frederick de la Rozier of the Societe General de Films, of Paris, is stopping at the Manhattan Club. This is the producing company which made the super-picture, "Napoleon" and has now completed "The Passion of Joan of Arc." "Joan the Woman" was here before, but without passion. . . . Ray Foster reports that the first annual banquet of the International Photographers of the M. P. Industry was a huge success. It kept the Army and Navy Club busy on the tenth. . . . J. S. McHenry is the dynamic force behind the Roxy theatre program. Mac reports big business, and why not. . . . John S. Spargo is taking a much needed rest at a Florida resort, or if you must know, Palm Beach. Three hours a day in the "alligator pen" will put a coat of tan and some required embonpoint on our John. Good luck and happy days.

3 New Theatres to Cost $1,300,000 Near Philly

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—Plans are now being prepared for the erection of three motion picture theatres involving expenditures of $1,300,000 in Montgomery County in the district immediately north of Philadelphia, according to announcements made within the last few days. The largest of the three houses will be in Norristown, where the Sablosky interests which already control three theatres, will erect a $1,000,000 building, in the center of the business section. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,500. A theatre to cost $150,000 will be erected on Butler Avenue in Ambler, while in Willow Grove, Philadelphia interests will erect a $150,000 theatre building on old York Road.

Kentucky Faces 10 Per Cent Tax

Believe It Or Not—

Politicians Pick Theatres To Buy "Free" Text Books

Powerful Lobbies Let Off Tobacco and Coal Interests—
"Tasteless Castor Oil," Newspaper Warns

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

LOUISVILLE, Feb. 14.—A bill to place a 10 per cent special tax on all theatre and other amusement tickets, including motion pictures, circuses, etc., has raised its ugly head in the Kentucky legislature, and unless considerable pressure can be brought to bear, it is very likely to be enacted into law.

Would Pay for "Free" Textbooks

One plank of the platform on which Flem D. Sampson was elected governor called for free text or school books, on the alleged ground that many children did not receive a proper education, as their families were too poor to buy them books. Of course this condition is due partly to politics and someone has to pay for the books.

One measure introduced calls for a 10 per cent production tax on every yard of sand and gravel dredged from the Ohio river and streams controlled by the state. Another would place additional taxes on all insurance companies other than those chartered in Kentucky. A third would place a 10 per cent retail tax on all sales of cigars, other tobacco and tobacco products. There was also talk of a tonnage tax on coal, but the coal lobby is too powerful.

The tobacco interests have fairly well blocked prospects of a tax on them. The representative who introduced the tobacco tax bill later introduced the amusement tax measure and held it was the better measure of the two, this action coming after strong opposition had appeared to the tobacco bill. Hence it appears that amusements will have to carry at least part of the burden.

Fred H. Dolle, of the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, Louisville, and Broadway Amusement Enterprises, interests controlling more than 20 theatres in Louisville, stated that nothing had been done as yet by exhibitors collectively, in Louisville or elsewhere in the state, but that there would be some meetings shortly and the exhibitors were not asleep on the proposition. Dolle for years was active in the local association and the old state association, which has not been very active in recent years.

"Tasteless Castor Oil"

Dolle commented on an editorial article appearing in the Louisville Courier-Journal last Wednesday which stated in part:

"The movie ticket tax for free textbooks possesses all the pleasant laxative properties of tasteless castor oil. The masses would be buying their own textbooks, but delightfully disguised. Thankful to the state for providing books, they would feel free to attend the movies oftener and as they entered the price of the books would be deftly extracted at the ticket window.

"Assuredly, if the movie theatres emulated gasoline stations by publishing the price as '25 cents, plus 3-cent free textbook tax,' their patrons would be constantly reminded that there is no Santa Claus. But the movies during the war patriotically camouflaged the irritating nuisance tax by 'splitting on the nickel.' They probably again would raise the price 5 cents, compensating themselves with the extra coppers for the trouble of collecting the tax for the state."

That paper is a power in the state, and has been steadfastly opposed to free textbooks, arguing that they would cost the state a great deal more than if they were purchased by individuals.

Critics Call It a Wow, But Council Disagrees

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

DES MOINES, Feb. 14.—The Des Moines Film Council made the following report on "Leave 'Em Laughing," said by critics and unnumbered fans to be the cleanest, funniest comedy witnessed in many a day:

"The comedy film at the Des Moines theatre, called "Leave 'Em Laughing," violated grossly the standard of the council in its vulgarity and disrespect for law. The objectionable feature was entirely unnecessary to the spirit of fun in the picture."

German Protest of Cavell Film Upheld In British Foreign Secretary's Letter

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Germany's official protest to the British foreign office against the motion picture called "Dawn," based on the life of Edith Cavell, has been upheld by Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, in a letter to Herbert Wilcox, producer of the film. Wilcox had asked Sir Austen to view the picture, and the letter was in explanation of his refusal.

Besides the foreign secretary's disapproval of the production, Lady Oxford, Lord Asquith, John Galsworthy and others have voiced opinions against it. Sir Austen's letter, written by his secretary, said:

"There are films which, while recalling the heroic deeds and endurance of our own people, call forth no bitter feelings whatever, but serve only to unite all men in admiration for heroism and fortitude. But the film representation to which you invite Sir Austen appears of an entirely different character, and he must frankly say that he feels the strongest repugnance to its production."

Germany's protest referred to the scenes showing Nurse Cavell executed by a rifle squad and said that actually she collapsed and had to be shot by the officer in charge of the executioners.

THE Sextette from Lucia has nothing on the sextette from the A. H. Blank-Public group, which bade fair to drown out the music in the theatre two floors below when they broke forth in song during a preview a few days ago. "Keep your eyes on the ball," directed the caption on the musical film, as it was shown in the screen room of the Des Moines theatre. With eyes on the ball and voices on the pitch, more or less, the group warbled, with growing enthusiasm, through the 99 stanzas of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." Harry Watts led off. The other five were Harry Weinberg, Dorothy Day, Jesse Day, Lionel Wasson, and Max Friedman.

British Exports in Film Decline; Imports Double

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Film imported into the United Kingdom and retained during the first 11 months of 1927 was more than double the amount for the same period in 1926, according to reports received by the Department of Commerce. The amount for 1927 totaled 78,000,000 linear feet as against 32,000,000 for the same period in 1926.

Exports showed a decline. Exports for the first 11 months of 1927 for all classes of film amounted to 54,262,000 linear feet as compared to 55,333,000 linear feet for the same period in 1926.

Exhibitor Bank Officer Too

As if the duties of managing the Hopkins theatre at Cotter, Ark., were not enough, Clarence E. Hopkins has added the responsibilities brought by being elected secretary and cashier of the Bank of Cotter, recently organized there. He will continue to manage the theatre.

It is not always—and it may be seldom—that a theatre has a manager who knows his music. That is what makes Harold Matthew Honore, newly appointed manager of the U. C. theatre in Berkeley, Cal., as distinguished as he is. Only 22 years old, he is a graduate musician, having studied in Brussels and toured as a violinist. Shown with him above is Iris Currie, organist at the U. C. She, too, is something of a prodigy, for she is only 18 years old. Before coming under Honore's direction she was the console artist at the Granada and Imperial theatres, in San Francisco.

Exhibitors Beat Lenten Bugaboo By Booking Best Pictures

Success of Mark Strand in Albany Leads Other Theatre Owners to New Policy—Use of Amateur Acts Declines

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—Exhibitors of this section are laying plans to beat out the bugaboo which generally attaches itself to the Lenten season. Practically all first run houses, instead of dating pictures for after Lent, are sprinkling in some of the best of the season's product for the Lenten period, claiming that if the pictures are offered the people will come regardless of the season.

THE idea of showing good pictures during Lent was tried out most successfully last year at the Mark Strand in Albany, and was closely watched by other exhibitors not only in that city but also in Troy and Schenectady. There was a time when any old picture would do for the Lenten period.

There is also some discussion at present as to the advisability of closing the motion picture theatres during a month or two in the summer. Some of the exhibitors declare that if the theatres would close their doors during July and August, the appetite of the ordinary theatregoer would be whetted by the time that Labor Day arrived, and larger audiences would result during the fall season.

Of course a great deal depends on the weather during the summer. There were few really warm days last year, with the result that the majority of houses played to far better business in July and August than in many years.

Aside from the small residential theatres, the use of amateur acts in the larger motion picture houses in this section is falling off to a considerable extent. In place of the amateur acts, houses such as Harmanus-Bleecker Hall are now using three acts of professional vaudeville and double features, and doing a land office business. There are many who are predicting that amateur nights soon will become a thing of the past in Central and Northern New York.

Tully Sells Play, Book

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Paramount has purchased the screen rights to "Beggars of Life," a book, and "Outside Looking In," a play, both written by Jim Tully. The book and play parallel each other in plot so they will be combined into one picture which William Wellman will direct, and Richard Arlen and Louise Brooks have been tentatively chosen for the leading roles.

Watts Returns to Omaha as Manager of Riviera

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—After more than two years of work, Erich von Stroheim's latest picture is ready for exhibition and will be given its world premiere in a legitimate playhouse here next month.

Von Stroheim began work early in 1926 on the production, in which he plays the triple role of author, actor, director, for the first time since his "Foolish Wives," released about six years ago.

Win Gives Pathe Cage Lead as FPL Drops Fox

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Pathe took a clean-cut lead in the Movie Basketball League by defeating Consolidated, while Paramount was downing Fox. Now if Paramount defeats Pathe in the final game, and Fox trims Metro, Pathe, Paramount, and Fox will go into a three-cornered tie for the lead.

In the last double header, Pathe piled up the big total of 65 to 36 against Consolidated, and Paramount and Fox fought up until the whistle sounded for the lead, the final score being 39 to 36. A crowd of more than five hundred persons witnessed the double header. Games next Thursday evening bring the season to a close. The standing:

	W	L
Pathe	5	2
Fox	4	3
Paramount	4	3
Consolidated	4	4
Metro	1	6

Russell Holman Writes "Speedy" Novelization

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Russell Holman has just completed the novelization of "Speedy," the new Harold Lloyd comedy, and Grosset & Dunlap will publish it in attractive book form.

A national tieup is being arranged for the book and picture, arrangements being made of window displays of the book coincident with showings. Holman novelized such pictures as "The Freshman," "The Cheat," "Manhandled," "Without Warning," and "Cobra."

All World in Fox's Plan for Theatres in Greatest Cities

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Plans for launching a theatre-building program in the principal capitals of the world were announced by Clayton P. Sheehan, manager of Fox Films' foreign department, on the eve of his departure Saturday for a three months' tour of South America. He sailed aboard the Southern Cross for Rio de Janeiro, accompanied by Mrs. Sheehan.

Clayton P. Sheehan

This announcement comes just as the industry is awaiting for another Fox announcement concerning a deal for the theatres of Finklestein & Rubin in the Northwest.

"It is the settled policy of Fox Films to support independent exhibitors," Sheehan said. "Wherever Fox pictures are not getting proper representation, however, the corporation will build theatres in foreign capitals, just as it is building them in the key cities of the United States."

His tour will take him to Fox branches in Sao Paulo, and seven other key cities of Brazil, then to Montevideo, Uruguay, Buenos Aires, Rosario, Argentina, Santiago Concepcion, and Valparaiso. The expansion of Fox business in South America is indicated by the fact that when Sheehan visited Brazil in 1923, there was only one main office and one branch office.

"No Misfits with a Tryon" Wins Universal Contest

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—C. W. Crawford of the Gem theatre, Washington, was awarded first prize in Universal's Glenn Tryon contest. Crawford's winning slogan, "No Misfits With a Tryon," won him a $50 award. William A. Wenner received second prize of $15 for his slogan, "Laemmle's Laff Lad." Tryon, who played two-reel comedies for a number of years, is now working in "Lonesome."

Secretary-Treasurer of North Carolina Exhibitors Declares Theatre Owners About Equally Divided

A third bill dealing with block booking of motion pictures has been introduced in the House of Representatives, according to a dispatch from the Washington Bureau of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Congressman Hudson of Michigan last Thursday put in the so called Brookhart bill, which was introduced in the Senate some time ago by the Iowa senator. The same bill already had been introduced in the House by Congressmen Cannon of Missouri and Celler of New York.

Sees Danger in Brookhart Bill

At the same time N. L. Royster, secretary and treasurer of the Theatre Owners' Association of North Carolina, in a statement to the press, charges that he and Charles W. Picquet, president of that organization, have been falsely accused of being "against the Brookhart bill just as Hays and Pettijohn want us to be."

Royster declares he is inclined to oppose the measure because, as a congressman has told him, "there is danger in it." He adds that exhibitors with whom he has conversed are evenly divided on the bill.

Passes Lie to Accusers

Following is the open letter from Royster, who in addition to his office in the exhibitors' association is president and treasurer of the Circle Amusement Company of Charlotte, N. C.

"It has come to my attention within the past few days that in some manner reports, or rumors are being circulated to the effect that Chas. W. Picquet, and myself, president and secretary and treasurer, respectively, of the Theatre Owners' Association of N. C., are in the employ of Will Hays and Chas. Pettijohn, and that we are against the Brookhart bill, just as Hays and Pettijohn want us to be.

"Whoever states this, or even intimates this fact, is a malicious and contemptible liar, and I will give $1,000 to any charitable organization, if anyone can prove that I have ever accepted in my life, or have been offered one cent by either Will Hays or Charlie Pettijohn."

"Our organization did invite to our last annual convention in Charlotte, Pete Woodhull, Tom James, Julian Brylawski and Charlie Pettijohn, all of whom spoke on the convention floor, but if there was anything in their speeches that even invited us to stand with the producers, I could not find it, furthermore, the talk of all of these gentlemen was very inspiring and educational to me personally, and contained meat for any levelheaded exhibitor who might want to accept meat and not dry bread.

Lauds Pettijohn's Address

"In justice to Charlie Pettijohn, I want to say that I have never heard a man deliver a plainer or better speech than he did, especially regarding many evils of the producers end, which needed changing. He admitted that there were many things wrong with the producers, and we all know this, because some of them have proven a Hell of a bunch of fellows when it comes to skinning some exhibitors who let themselves be skinned, but Pettijohn did not come to our convention with any scheme, or plan for us to adopt.

"I can't see where the visit of any of these gentlemen should do us any harm, and while there might have been one or two exhibitors there who will not agree with me, still, those exhibitors would not agree with the Lord himself."

"Mr. Pete Harrison states that he has not been able to secure from us a statement as to where we stand on the Brookhart Bill, and he even intimates that we are lined up with the Hays crowd, and possibly getting something for it.

Sees Danger in Bill

"In answer to one of Mr. Harrison's letters to me, I told him that personally I was for anything that would help the cause of the exhibitor, but that I wanted to be fair to all concerned, and as I had not heard from our members, I could not give the endorsement of our state organization. Since that time, I am inclined to be against the Brookhart bill, for, as one of our congressmen states, there is danger in it. I do think that our motion picture industry is capable of managing itself, and righting all questions, without the aid of a bill through Congress.

"The Trade Practice conference has been called a failure. How can anyone call it a failure, when they haven't had time to really get down and work out things. The contract committee may perhaps give us a contract which will be worth every hour used in that conference. If this conference was not a success, perhaps it is because the independent theatre owners are not organized as they should be, and God knows they should be. Just because the labor unions are not properly organized and do not settle certain questions, is that any reason that a bill should be introduced in Congress to regulate them?

"The exhibitors I have talked to so far, are about 50-50 regarding the Brookhart bill, and just because Mr. Harrison or someone else wants our endorsement on a matter, is no reason why I should give it without the backing of our state organization."

Cooperation to Solve World Film Issues, Says French Producer

Reciprocal Working Agreements Should be Signed Before Starting Picture, Declares Frederick de la Roziere, in U. S.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Thorough understanding, on a basis of friendly cooperation, will solve all difficulties involved in international film relationships, in the opinion of Frederick de la Roziere, a power in the French film industry, and a director of the Societe Generale de Films, large French production and distribution company.

M. DE LA ROZIERE believes future difficulties can largely be avoided by the signing of working agreements between European and American producers, on a reciprocal basis, drawn up in advance of production.

Recently arrived in New York, M. de la Roziere will arrange for distribution in America of "The Passion of Joan of Arc," the first superpicture made by his company since the monumental "Napoleon" was filmed, to be distributed in the United States by M-G-M.

Several disturbing factors must be ironed out, the French producer declared. The quotas in force in Germany and England have not won complete approval. Nevertheless, France will adopt the quota, he said, despite a growing feeling of antagonism and a general opinion that it doesn't begin to solve French marketing problems.

M. de la Roziere's plan is simple. Cooperation between American and European producers and distributors will be far more promising and far more profitable to both participants, in his opinion, than a merger of the two.

A practical demonstration of his plan is available, he said, pointing to the success which has attended working agreements now in force between German and English firms, and German and French companies. Practically all of the European countries now engaged in film production on a sizeable scale, he says, have inter-company arrangements.

Through consultations between the representatives in Paris of a foreign film concern, arrangements concerning distribution are agreed upon before the picture is started, and changes deemed necessary to the success of the picture in the foreign market are made before the picture is completed. Thus it is not infrequent for a French producer, at the suggestion of the representative of the German company cooperating with his organization to film a duplicate episode or ending for a picture destined for distribution in Germany.

Agreements between the European companies have proved so successful, he said, that unless the future brings a solution eventually there may develop an European bloc, in which producers and distributors of England, France, Germany, Sweden, and other countries will present a united front as the opposition to the film producers of the United States.

"Sunrise" Does Heavy Business at Terminal Despite Short Notice

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—"Sunrise" did a heavy business of $16,649 in five days with 28,428 admissions at the Fox Terminal theatre in Newark following a rapidfire campaign.

Learning for the first time on the afternoon of January 26 that the picture was to open February 4, a trailer was run the night of January 26. The newspaper ads were started the next day and sixty 24-sheet and fifty 3-sheet boards were covered, and 40,000 heralds were distributed. All three daily papers were used, as well as one German paper and two weeklies.

A novel broadside issued for "Sunrise" carries a reprint of a two-page review in the Literary Digest, showing the increased attention accorded motion pictures in national publications.

Charge Salesmen Use Trickery in Effort to Evade the Quota Law

A. G. Granger to Form Producing Firm—Filmcraft Signs Gertrude Lawrence

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Complaints made by cinema exhibitors that certain renters representatives were trying to evade the booking clauses of the Films Act, have caused T. Elder, president of the K. R. S., and S. Rowson of Ideal, the two renters' representatives on the Films Act Advisory Committee, to issue a statement warning both renters and exhibitors against the dangers and penalties which lurk in this disregard for the law.

One of the methods by which zealous salesmen have attempted to blink at the law and secure the business, is by securing signatures to contracts without filling in the date of execution. Then a second contract form has been devised undertaking to execute the first contract on or after June 1, 1928. This, say Elder and Rowson, constitutes an obvious and deliberate attempt to evade the law.

Granger to Produce Again

A. G. Granger, who will be remembered as the managing director of Grangers Exclusives in the days of the open market, is to form a new company for the purpose of making British films, and to operate distribution also. The capital will be about £500,000, and a site has been secured near Brighton. One super and six specials a year is the company's aim, and a public issue of shares may be made.

Electrical Union Plans National Theatre Circuit

(By Washington Bureau of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Plans for a national union-operated chain of motion picture halls, sponsored by the Hollywood Electrical Workers' union, are now before officials of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers for consideration. It is contended that such a chain would appeal particularly to union members, of whom there are enough throughout the country to insure success of the plan. Funds for promotion of the scheme are understood to be available in Hollywood.

At first, it is explained, the film shows would be used as an inducement to union men to attend meetings of their organizations. If successful in that respect, regular exhibitions would be undertaken. It was emphasized here that the move does not result from any friction with producers or theatres.

Iowa Rejects Brookhart Plan

Margaret Mann, 60, Wins the Honors at 'Four Sons' Opening

By PETER VISCHER

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—When the last scene of William Fox's new picture, "Four Sons," faded from the screen at the Gaiety theatre here last night, a glaring spotlight found a white-haired little lady in the midst of the audience. She arose, bowed, accepted a bouquet of flowers, and beamed at the faces around her while Courtland Smith came forward on the empty stage and tried to explain she had accomplished something quite extraordinary.

The little lady was, of course, Margaret Mann, for years an extra at Hollywood and now at the age of 60 a star.

There were some in the audience, even among those who had mothers of their own, who found "Four Sons" over-sentimental. These same people were probably bright enough, however, to recognize the huge Rolls-Royce at the door as something from the stable of Mr. Fox. They were probably quick-witted enough too, to recall that Mr. Fox once made a highly lucrative picture called "Over the Hill." It is obvious, then, that Mr. Fox has had experience in glorifying the American mother.

There were several hundred standees. From Morris Gest to a group of girls from the Bronx they apparently found it filled with the sort of things they enjoyed seeing about mother. Happy Germany, Happy America, the war, misery and bravery, reunion. Who could ask for more?

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 14.—Although "Old Ironsides," the Paramount special, was the whole show at the Missouri theatre, Skouras Brothers house, recently, the picture did a huge business it is reported. This is the first time in two years a presentation has not been used with the feature picture at the theatre.

Would Kill Small Theatre, Pettijohn Tells Exhibitors

E. P. Smith Is Elected President of Theatre Owners at Joint Meeting with Film Board

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

DES MOINES, Feb. 14.—Opposition to the Brookhart bill in its entirety by the Iowa Theatre Owners Association; complete reorganization of this association with new officers and a larger board of directors; the annual parley of the Des Moines Film Board on business ethics and business practices and the appearance of C. C. Pettijohn, chief counsel for the Film Boards of Trade in five speeches, marked the joint yearly session of the theatremen and the exchange men yesterday in Des Moines.

On Record Against Brookhart Bill

The theatre owners went on record against the Brookhart bill after a long drawn out meeting during which numerous exhibitors expressed themselves as to the wisdom of taking any formal action on a matter about which many felt they knew but little.

C. C. Pettijohn, chief counsel for the Film Boards of Trade denounced the Brookhart bill. His first talk was a general discussion on the industry. He was recalled to the floor following a general request from the exhibitors, to make a more explicit explanation of the Brookhart bill.

"For more than ten years," said Pettijohn, "10,000 exhibitors have been educating the public on the block booking question. Mrs. Brown comes to the exhibitor and complains that John Gilbert was allowed to kiss the pretty heroine behind the ear in an extremely disgusting manner and the exhibitor agrees. He tells the patron that he had to take the picture because of the block booking system which forced this terrible film upon him.

"It has come to the point where the public has turned up its nose at the industry and the results are being felt in the box office. We have washed too much linen in public. It has been said that in this day everyone has his own business and the motion pictures. The time is here when we not only can solve our own problems but we must do this.

"Are we going to let the government be run by the churches and the educational factors? Our business is the amusement business and it should remain so. One of the results of this Brookhart bill will be the purchase of films by churches and schools. The one who can bid the most will get the film. This will mean that the films shown at schools where larger crowds can be accommodated will draw the business from the theatres and then all will be lost. Amusement films in small houses will not pay if the government controls the industry in accordance with this bill.

Sees Theatres Forced Out

"This idea of prohibiting the sale of pictures in blocks of two or more means that each picture will be sold to you separately. Do you want more salesmen visiting you now than you had before? Or will the salesman evade the law by returning at intervals all day to sell his list of films?

"Suppose we sell forty pictures in a block at $20 each. You can throw away those you don't want. Will this cost any more than to pay a high price for each individual film? Higher selling costs will have to be borne by someone. You know who that will be. This will eliminate theatres paying less than $50 for films.

"The biggest joke in the bill is the clause about the privilege the small exhibitor will have to purchase the same films used by the chain theatres affiliated with producer organizations. This is just a smoke screen to obscure the progress of the industry."

Pettijohn called attention to the fact that the Brookhart bill gives the Federal Trade Commission power to enforce the bill and make rules and regulations for giving effect to its provisions. These would include the power, after full hearing, to fix the price differentials.

The remarkable thing about this section, he said, is that it makes no provision for an appeal from any decision, rule, regulation or order entered by the commission. This point, in itself, Pettijohn reminded the listeners, makes the bill unconstitutional.

"Thousands can't stay in the business under the Brookhart bill," he added.

"Once there were less than 400 theatres in the country showing vaudeville and road shows. Now there are 420,000 theatres, many showing motion pictures. This is because the entertainment appealing to the eye is the drawing card. The patrons can relax. They don't have to make any effort to hear what the comedian says or to lean out in the aisle to see what the trick dog will do next.

"Now anybody with an Italian name can get $700 a week doing bum vaudeville acts in these houses. The organist and the orchestra pull big salaries. The industry is going crazy on these extras. But it will come back to earth."

Warns of Frozen Assets

Pettijohn explained what will happen if the pictures have to be shown to the exhibitor before being sold. The main joker, he told the exhibitors, "is what to use for money." With the huge sum of $112,000,000 going into production next year he asked the theatre men where credit could be obtained on frozen assets. He predicted that if the Brookhart bill is passed only about three producing companies will live.

The speaker praised William Youngclaus, exhibitor at Perry, Iowa, designating him as the best informed exhibitor he had met in the entire country insofar as the details of the Brookhart bill were concerned.

E. P. Smith Elected President

The Iowa Theatre Owners Association was reorganized with E. P. Smith of Des Moines and Fort Dodge, as president and E. W. Eddy of Indianola secretary and treasurer. The board of directors includes Tom Arthur, Mason City; Tom Brown, Iowa City; Harry Herstein, Des Moines; Ludy Boston, Muscatine; W. N. Youngclaus, Perry; Charles Peterson, Hampton; Otto Panken, Marengo; Wesley Mansfield, Tama; H. N. Davies, Spencer; F. R. Puffer, Webster City.

German Theatre Tax Called Bar To Growth, Halting Bankers

New and Well-Equipped Houses Cited as Definite Stimulus to Trade of Other Nations and to Own Production

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—“For a country like Germany, with as large, progressive and as thoughtful a population as she has, a total of 3,000 motion picture theatres seems quite inadequate. On a pro rata basis, almost every other great nation has many more theatres: and we learn that such would actually be the case with Germany were it not for an annoying and provoking theatre tax.

“THIS tax not only aggravates the theatre owners and managers, but wreaks a more desparate harm in actually discouraging bankers and promoters from engaging in theatre building and further discourages them from financing the actual making of pictures. Thus the harm is done not only in Germany, but is a prejudicial barrier to the spread of Germany's film industry abroad.

“Insofar as the building of theatres is concerned, Germany can well take heed of some of the happenings which have taken place in the United States, Australia, Japan and many other countries. In these parts of the world the advent of a new and finely-equipped motion picture theatre has meant a tremendous stimulus to trade wherever built.

“Thousands of towns and cities have had their civic layouts completely altered by palatial motion picture theatres, for the theatre has meant new stores, new and finer roads leading to it, a new viewpoint of progress and prosperity in the minds of the townfolk, and a new vista of finer and more genuine entertainment through the medium of the theatre's screen and through its new standards of comfort and elegance.

“It must be plain to Germany, then, that a tax which is stifling such progress as this cannot be a good tax.

“It is, in the first place, being extracted from a smaller number of theatres than the nation should normally support; it is keeping those theatres small and unprogressive; and it is the prime barrier which is keeping capital from being invested in newer, larger and finer theatres. Also, these factors are themselves the barrier to the production of German motion pictures that can, and should, carry the stamp of German film genius around the world.

“The German theatre tax thus stands as such a little barrier, holding back the great waters of progress. Blast it away and Germany will have more and better theatres, an immeasurably greater interest in the production and exhibition of motion pictures by the great financial forces of the nation, a still finer sense of civic duty, and a far wider distribution of German motion pictures throughout the world.”—A. Warrensburg is a town of 6,500 population.

Re-Takes

HOLLYWOOD—Well, everybody who got his stiff shirt back from the laundry in time turned out to see John Ford's latest picture, “Four Sons,” at the Carthay Circle theatre, last Tuesday night.

It was what is known as a gala night. Hundreds of spotlights of varying hues playing on trees, searchlights sweeping the heavens, gawking crowds, shouting megaphones, bossy cops, smelly automobiles, pretty furs, funny makeups, all the things you see, hear, etc., at other openings.

Everyone agreed, however, that Ford had made a good job of transferring I. A. R. Wylie's story, “Grandma Bernle,” to the screen, and no little credit is due his cameramen, George Schneidermann and Charlie Clarke, for the wonderful photography. A gripping story of mother-love, beautifully told.

George Washington
Born: Feb. 22, 1732

Jean Darling of Roach-M-G-M's "Our Gang," personifies, above, the dauntless, young nation he fathered—a nation which, enduring to 1928, looks as youthfully into the future.

Looking film things over in Berlin—Ray Rockett, production manager of Defu-First National (left), and Friederick Zelnick, supervising director. Zelnick has just started on the second Lya Mara film, "Sweetheart."

You have observed the inscription. You have met, at least cinematographically, this Christie-Paramount comedienne. And as for "Eagle-Eye Joe"—well, a caption here is superfluous. Therefore, we'll write none.

Pat O'Brien, sculptor-actor (or vice versa, perhaps), likes to mix his careers. And so we present him making a head of Brandon Hurst as Barkilphedro in Universal's "The Man Who Laughs." O'Brien portrays an English lord in this picture, which, by the way, stars Conrad Veidt.

When film stars go avisting, a nice picture (usually) results. This nice picture is a consequence of Betty Compson's motoring over to the F B O studio while Bessie Love (center) was working in "Sally of the Scandals," and Jacqueline Logan, in "Stocks and Blondes." (Let's have more visitings, what?)

Aces, each in his (and her) own field. Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, recently on a visit to this country, is shown congratulating Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, on having been in the motion picture industry 22 years—and during almost every one of them, a leader.

Martha Sleeper, musing—and who would offer her mere pennies for her thoughts? Who, indeed, even speaks of pennies these days? And as for thoughts, silence as charming as that above may be for most of us far more persuasive. Sheer dawdling often is due this active Roach-M-G-M comedienne.

Malcolm Stuart Boylan, whose sets of titles for Fox films have reached the notable number of 50, among them, that for "What Price Glory."

Archie Mayo, Warner Brothers director, saw Agnes Franey dance in "Rio Rita" in New York, and a screen test soon followed. Result, a contract.

The 1928 crop of Wampas "Baby Stars" grouped around Ray Coffin, president of Wampas, and a trophy in their honor. From left to right are (back row) Gwen Lee, Sue Carol, Sally Eilers, June Collyer, Coffin, Audrey Ferris, Molly O'Day, Alice Day, (front row) Dorothy Gulliver, Lina Basquette, Ann Christy, Ruth Taylor, Lupe Velez, and Flora Bramley.

May theirs be no pipe dream!—Loretta Young and Herbert Brenon, her "discoverer." A sister of Sally Blane's and a cousin to Joan Crawford, Miss Young has been cast opposite Lon Chaney in M-G-M's "Laugh, Clown Laugh," which Brenon is directing.

The type of scene most popular with—well, with everybody, and that includes picture people. The episode pictured assured United Artists seven 1928-29 productions directed by Edwin Carewe (right) and starring Dolores Del Rio, who is shown turning in her signature to Joseph M. Schenck, president of U-A.

It's information about which most of us care exactly nothing. But Fay Wray had to know. So, as pictured, Lieut. E. H. Robinson explained the parachute to her in preparation for Paramount's "The Legion of the Condemned," which co-stars Miss Wray and Gary Cooper.

New faces for old, it is the law. And in accordance therewith, Barbara Leonard is announced by Tiffany-Stahl for many forthcoming portrayals.

Johnny Mack Brown, former football gladiator, who doubtless threatened his newer goal when M-G-M cast him opposite Greta Garbo in "The Divine Woman."

Three designing "The Devil's Trademark" for F B O. (Satan, Inc., as you may have observed, was one of the first to adopt a brand for his products.) Shown with the director, Leo Meehan, are Belle Bennett (left) and Marian Douglas.

Who'd have imagined it a few years ago? And now this photograph, showing Michael Curtiz, Warner Brothers director (extreme left) and Jack Warner (extreme right) explaining the microphone to Dolores Costello for the Vitaphone sequences in her starring production, "Tenderloin." Do you (or do you not) see half-concealed among them, the destiny of the motion picture?

KNOW YOUR SALES LEADERS

SIDNEY R. KENT, general manager and member of the board of directors of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, is a native of the Middle West, and, like all Middle Westerners, is proud of it. He was born in Lincoln, Neb., and at the age of 14, just after he finished grammar school, the boy got his first job stoking boilers in a greenhouse at $5 a week. From this humble beginning has grown a business career which is one of the most strikingly successful in the annals of the picture industry.

BEFORE he was 20 years old he had pushed up in Wyoming and was occupying a responsible position with the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company. He was one of an engineering company and he and five other men were the sole inhabitants of 36 miles of God-forsaken country. They built their own roads and pipelines, established camps and literally opened up the territory to civilization and business activity.

SIDNEY R. KENT

In 1912 he went to the Pacific Coast with the American Druggists' Syndicate. Shortly afterwards he returned East as a salesman for the syndicate. Three months later he was the company's assistant salesmanager, then assistant to the president, and for three and a half years he was virtually in charge of the entire business.

A friend talked to him enthusiastically of the motion picture business. He liked its prospects and cast his lot with the films with the old Vitagraph company. It was not long after that that the General Film Company was indicted under the Sherman Law and buried under judgments aggregating $25,000,000. Frank Hitchcock had the job of unraveling the tangle and he called Sidney Kent in to help him.

The job was cleaned up and Kent walked into the office of Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount, and sold his services, but not at a price. That was to be determined if and when he made good. His first work, in the distribution department, was as special representative to exchanges. Next he was appointed district manager of the territory which included the Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Des Moines offices, which position he held until May, 1919, when he was called to the home office to become general salesmanager. On Jan. 8, 1921, Mr. Zukor appointed Mr. Kent general manager of distribution and a year later he was elected to the company's board of directors. In 1926 he was named general manager of the company.

Mr. Kent knows salesmanship as few men do, from every angle. In fact, he has revolutionized the selling of motion pictures by applying common sense through the same stable methods which he has found so successful in other industries.

Bebe Daniels, James Hall Injured Filming Picture

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—A speech, no matter how good, is no novelty to members of the New York State legislature. And so last week, at a dinner given at a local hotel to Bernard Downing of New York City, Democratic leader of the Senate, instead of long drawn out speeches, a motion picture was shown of Senator Downing's trip abroad last summer with Mayor James Walker of New York. It scored the biggest kind of a hit. The menu, by the way, consisted of corned beef and cabbage.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PORTSMOUTH, O., Feb. 14.—Petitions seeking to have the question of opening motion picture theatres on Sundays put to a popular vote, are being circulated in Portsmouth and are being signed by a large number of citizens. Already more than 500 signatures to the petitions have been obtained.

The plan of the backers is to have the question placed on the ballot at the next election to determine what public sentiment is. Representatives of the Portsmouth Ministerial Association announce that they will fight the plan.

Girl Rider Crosses Nation in 120 Days to Exploit U Films

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—Vonceil Viking, the daughter of a New Mexican ranch owner, who left New York City, October 14, on horseback, for Los Angeles to exploit Universal Westerns, arrived in Los Angeles Friday after having been 120 days on the road, during which she traveled 16 states and covered almost 4,000 miles. She encountered all kinds of weather on the trip, and was beset with many obstacles, including serious illness and several accidents.

Miss Viking had officially been sent on her way by Mayor Walker, at the New York city hall, and at one minute before noon, Friday, she spurred her horse up the steps of the Los Angeles city hall, where she was greeted by Mayor George E. Cryer while cowboys, police escorts, and a huge crowd looked on.

High Tax Halts Theatre Building in Jugoslavia

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Because of the high taxes levied upon places of amusement, there was no theatre building in Jugoslavia during 1927, and probably none will be built this year, according to reports received by the Department of Commerce. It is said to be probable that more than 75 per cent of the motion picture enterprises will close this year if the tax is continued. It is estimated that about 284 American films were shown in Jugoslavia during the past year.

Cecil DeMille Heads Western Branch of Hays Association

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 14.—Cecil B. De Mille was last week elected president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Inc., the Western branch of the Hays organization. Other officers elected are Watterson Rothacker, first vice-president; Henry Henigson, second vice-president; and Fred W. Beetson, executive vice-president.

Will Hays addressed the meeting and expressed great satisfaction at the progress being made with the California activities.

Following the meeting of the association, a meeting of the board of directors of the Central Casting Corporation was held and the following officers were elected for the coming year, Fred Beetson, president; Irving Thalberg and W. R. Frazer, vice-president; and Sol Wurtzel, treasurer.

"I am very much pleased with California conditions of the industry and its progress," Mr. Hays told the producers. "Not only am I satisfied locally but nationally and internationally. There has been marked progress in connection with distribution and exhibition of motion pictures and it is very pleasing to me to congratulate the producers for their part in this remarkable advancement."

Kane Confirms Rumor He Will Leave First National

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 14.—The report that Robert T. Kane will leave First National with the completion of "Harold Teen" received credence today when Mr. Kane stated he is considering numerous other releasing offers for "Satan's Bushel" which will be started within the next six weeks. He may join Pathe. He has been making pictures for First National two years in the East. He will not return East for his next production, he said.

Kane has assigned Tom Geraghty to the adaptation of "Satan's Bushel," the Garret Garrett novel, with the possibility that Geraghty will be sent to the Kansas wheat-fields for atmosphere. Kane states that a company will go to Kansas for location.

Fox Completes Big Al Green Drama; 38 Now in Shooting

Laemmle Lot Clicking with Six Jewels Being Camera-ed—Paramount in Midst of Four Starring Vehicles; Richard Dix Starts "Easy Come Easy Go"

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 14.—Less than a week passed after the world premiere of the big Fox-John Ford picture, "Four Sons," when that studio completed shooting on another production of momentous theme and thorough application. Alfred E. Green completed "Honor Bound" this week after having shot more than 400 scenes on a budget believed to approximate $400,000.

Deals with Prison Problems

Estelle Taylor is the star of the picture and George O'Brien is the featured male player. It is a dramatic story written originally by Jack Bethea and given to the civic problem of correction.

The two big names in the cast, the well publicized prison story and the box office strength of the director readily explain the big investment made by Fox, aside from the costly scale on which the sets were built.

Fox Films has yet to finish three other big productions, also to rank along with "Glory," "Seventh Heaven," "Sunrise," "Carmen" and "Four Sons." Raoul Walsh continues shooting on "Red Dancer of Moscow," F. W. Murnau has much to do with "The Four Devils" and John Ford is again working on a big picture, "Hangman's House."

Quite a list!

In addition to these the lot is busy with the shooting of a Mix film, "The Painted Post," and a Madge Bellamy film, "The Sport Girl." The latter is from the scenario written by John Stone, reference to which is found in an adjoining column.

Universal at Full Blast

There are 32 others under way in various plants, a good number of which are at Universal. Six Jewels are under way at the Laemmle lot. Unless those six are completed in short order it will soon begin to look as if Superintendent Henigson's forecast closing would be delayed—or annulled. It is true, however, that his announcement preceded a long list of layoffs, affecting employes not absolutely needed during these late winter months.

Four are under way at the Paramount lot: "The Patriot," Ernest Lubitsch's production; "Three Sinners," the Pola Negri film; "Easy Come, Easy Go," starring Richard Dix; and "Sunset Legion," starring Fred Thomson.

Eddie Cline found a title for his opera last week. It shall be "Vamping Venus," a First National comedy.

John Ford Praised at Opening of "Four Sons" at Carthay

Mark Larkin Will Be President of Wampas—Luther Hanger Pleads Guilt to Scenario Graft Charge—Lasky in West

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 12.—Carthay Circle theatre drew another notable crowd of film celebrities last Wednesday night for the world premiere of "Four Sons," the John Ford production sponsored by William Fox which drew praise for its direction. The streets approaching the theatre were ablaze with lights of varied hue and the sidewalks were lined with staring tourists and youngsters from early in the evening until well past midnight. Dozens of immense searchlights swept the sky and fireworks from an airplane attracted thousands of autoists far and near. The Carthay Circle has been noted for its brilliant openings and this was in keeping with the others.

AMONG those seen strolling about the lobby during the intermission were:

Claire Windsor, Margaret Livingston, Phyllis Haver, Jacqueline Logan, Vera Gordon, Sally Rand, Winifred Dunn, June Collyer, Margaret Mann, Fred W. Beeton, Ernest Torrence, Frank Borzage.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ford, Sol Wurtzel, Frank Lloyd, Irving Thalberg, Norma Shearer, Ben Bard, Tom Tyler, Tyler Brooke, George Meeker, L. J. O'Connor, Lew Borzage, Ben Lyon, Herbert Moulton, Victor McLaglen, Madge Bellamy, Alice Day.

Marie Prevost, Belle Bennett, Merna Kennedy, James Hall, Ruth Roland, Bodil Rosing, Neil Hamilton, Malcolm Stuart Boyland, Charles Clark, Alan Hale.

Welford Beaton, Earle Foxe, Monta Bell, Harold B. Franklin, Tom Mix, Shirley Mason, Janet Gaynor, Mary Philbin, Olive Borden, Mary Astor, Lois Moran, Nancy

Drexel, Ned Narin, Clarence Brown, George Marshall, W. L. Anderson, Chandler Sprague, and John Gilbert.

Carli Elinor's especially arranged overture, "Songs of the Fatherland," a fantasia of well known German airs, served splendidly to introduce the picture and his musical theme was especially apt. A Jack Laughlin prologue, "Happiness," which preceded the Ford spectacle, presented Ivan Bankoff, Vina and Robert, four Tyrolean yodlers, Billy Moody, the Theodore Kosloff dancers and a half-dozen soloists. It was a colorful thing enacted before a scene in the Alps. Hobart Bosworth was master of ceremonies and introduced the different members of the cast at the conclusion of the picture. The Ford opus, which is a story of mother love, her sacrifice, the World War, and America, is touching, human story which tugs at the heart strings and will establish at least one heretofore unknown actress, Margaret Mann, in the minds of the public forever. It is undoubtedly one of Ford's finest pictures.

100 Houses to Have Movietone

Harold B. Franklin, president West Coast Theatres, Inc., announces that Vitaphone and Movietone sound reproducing devices will be installed in about 100 theatres of the West Coast Theatres chain. Western Electric Company, manufacturers of movietone and vitaphone, will install the apparatus. Six theatres in Los Angeles will be equipped, it is said. It is understood Fox Films and Warner Brothers will install the devices throughout all the theatres operated by them, or wherever their pictures are shown.

Mark Larkin acted as chairman of the last Wampas meeting and had for his headline attraction Ruth Elder. Miss Elder gave a brief account of her trans-Atlantic flight and subsequent reception in New York. Others who graced the program were Peter the Hermit, George Stahl, violinist, Mrs. Harry Reichenbach, Ben Lyon, Mrs. Lyon, Chas. Sloan and Oswald Brooks. The Wampas is meeting at the Hotel Roosevelt twice a month. Larkin was nominated for the 1928 president, with no opposition, at the business meeting.

Hanger Pleads Guilty

Luther L. Hanger, who operated under the name of "Zano DeMille," has pleaded guilty to misuse of the mails in connection with a scenario sales bureau. Hanger admitted accepting fees from $10 to $50 from hundreds of embryo authors with the understanding he would sell the scenarios to picture producers. Federal Judge Henning deferred sentence for six months.

THE STUDIO PREVIEW

"FOUR SONS"

JOHN FORD'S picture, "Four Sons," is a greater piece of work than Ford or anyone else expected it to be when it went into production. When he realized a few months ago that the woman he had cast in the role of "Grandma Bernle" was so perfectly suited to the role, he strengthened his conviction that the story was deserving of much money and effort and consequently turned out for Fox this picture full of box office heart throbs.

It's difficult to compare it with others because this picture is unlike others. By no means could it be compared with "The Birth of a Nation," because it has superior technique. It is more emotional than spiritual and therefore cannot be compared with "King of Kings."

It is the greatest film Ford has ever made, but bears reminders of simplicity with which he directed "The Iron Horse," and other earlier pictures.

He has built up four climaxes in a single story, without the suspense falling more than once and then for only an instant, when the fourth son returns safely home from the war and sends a letter to his mother, across the sea, asking her to come to America.

All four sons had fought in the war, three of them in the German army and the other in the American. The Yankee, James Hall, is the only one to survive.

The story is more concerned with Grandma Bernle than it is with either of the four sons. All the sympathy is for her throughout the picture. When the audience learns that two of her sons have been killed in action, it feels comparatively little concern, but when it finds the postmaster bringing the official letter to Grandma Bernle, intense sympathy is aroused. There is a death scene on the battle field, but the audience feels more qualms when Grandma Bernle is obliged to go without her supper.

Ford tells of the sordid things with kid glove skill, and then again gets tears for a child with a broken doll.

The part of Grandma Bernle was played by Margaret Mann. James Hall and June Collyer do the romantic roles in a way that has brought them both much credit. Hall's greatest advantage is that he is versatile. He could have played the role of either of the four sons and yet have kept all eyes upon him.

Miss Collyer has the disadvantage of being compared with Mary Astor. It's true she bears a facial resemblance. She is well equipped for many big Fox roles of the future and her Irish smile will disarm you the moment you see it on the screen.

Albert Gran has done a charming piece of work as the corpulent postman. Others in the cast are Francis Bushman, Jr., Earle Foxe and Archduke Leopold of Austria.

The photography, by George Schneiderman and Charles Clarke, is exceedingly well done. —HODGES.

"GRAFT"

"GRAFT" is the story of political graft and the effort of a newspaper to expose it. Universal made it, with Lewis Stone featured and Marcelline Day in the feminine lead.

After the children's playground has been converted into a baseball diamond as a result of graft, children resort to the streets for their games. One of them is killed. A revolt against the political boss ensues. In the confusion a bomb is thrown into the newspaper office on the eve of the election. The newspapermen carry on their work despite the flames in the editorial rooms.

Marcelline Day is well fitted for the romantic role opposite Malcolm MacGregor. Stone and Henry B. Walthall do excellent work.

Very capable direction has been done by George Melford with the story he had to work with. —GANT.

"SKYSCRAPER"

"SKYSCRAPER" is a rip-roaring comedy, with the serious business of building a steel office building as a background. It involves two husky riveters, who have a warm friendship for each other yet are rivals in work and play, rivals in love and ready to fight at the drop of a hat. Add to the above the novelty of having the action take place in a twenty-story office building under construction and you can partly guess the thrills and comedy that ensues.

Howard Higgin directed "Skyscraper" and has made of Dudley Murphy's story an entertaining film, chockful of laughs with a sprinkling of pathos for seasoning. Unique camera shots by John Boyle, add to the illusion of being high in the air and give an added punch to the thrilling scene where Wesley Barry falls to his death from a girder. It is, however, essentially a comedy with William Boyd and Alan Hale teamed up into an ideal pair. Hale makes an excellent foil for Boyd and scores with his inimitable pantomime and utter lack of understanding. The humorous bits in the amusement part brought forth roars of laughter at a Pasadena theatre where the picture was first previewed. Sue Carol, who plays opposite Boyd, furnishes the romance for the love story angle, is refreshing, sweet and talented. Alberta Vaughn, as her chum, also gets her share of applause as Hale's best gal. It is interspersed with clever titles, the work of John Kraft, while the adaptation is by Tay Garnett and Elliott Clawson. An unusual comedy in many ways, and one that will not fail to stir up a houseful of laughs wherever shown. —MURRAY.

Bobby Vernon Starts Sixth of Paramount-Christie Pictures

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 14. — "Sweeties," short feature starring Bobby Vernon, went into production at the Christie Studio in Hollywood last week for Paramount release. "Short Socks," "Crazy to Fly," "Wedding Vows," "Splash Yourself" and "Save the Pieces" are the pictures that have gone before this season, the Christies' first with Paramount.

In "Sweeties," as in all the other Bobby Vernons, the girl lead will be played by Frances Lee, former University of Minnesota coed, more recently a Wampas Baby Star, and Bobby Vernon's leading woman for three consecutive seasons, which fidelity has not been matched lately at Christies.

Two more short features to complete a total of eight will be filmed with Bobby this season. For the most part the series has been written by Frank Conklin, head of the Christie scenario staff, although "Sweeties" is by Sig Herzog, a member of the staff. Hal Conklin and Hal K. Wells, also Christie scenarists, have contributed occasional stories for Vernon as well.

BOBBY VERNON

A villain who has done considerable dirty work to Bobby in this series again gets in his licks in "Sweeties," namely Sid Smith of Hallroom Boys memory. More villainy is supplied by the large and menacing Bill Blaisdell, one of the leading lights among the supporting players on the roster at Christies. Blaisdell has been seen in an increasing number of good roles lately, with Billy Dooley as well as with Vernon.

"Sweeties" will be filmed largely at Lake Arrowhead, high in the San Bernardino range of the Sierra Nevadas and one of the most scenic spots in California. The photography is in the hands of Alexis Phillips, Alfred Jacquemin, and Monte Steadman. Arvid Gilstrom is directing.

THE SHORT FEATURE

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald is the Moving Picture World department, "Little Pictures with the Big Punch," which has presented news, reviews and exploitation on short features and serials.

He "Shoots the Works" in Tieups And Short Feature Does the Rest

The answer to "What I Did for the Short Feature" is "Plenty," if you diagnose the campaigns being put on for the Hal Roach-M-G-M comedies by Harold B. Franklin at the Metropolitan theatre in Los Angeles and West Coast Theatres' other houses.

Calls in Full Campaign

To demonstrate the appeal of short features when properly exploited and advertised, Franklin applied practically all classifications of exploitation and some perhaps not yet classified.

The list includes a hundred 24-sheet boards in Los Angeles alone, merchandise tieups, special space in newspapers, radio tack cards, window cards, marquee lights, trailer, house program, lobby cards, Hal Roach's fleet of 27 motor vehicles, and a number of other agencies to get the picture before the public.

Exploitation Repeated

The campaign, applied in exploiting "Leave 'Em Laughing," starring Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, really was a replica of the one put on for "The Battle of the Century," first of the comedy series. The success of the first campaign prompted the repetition.

Here is how the campaign lined up:

NEWSPAPERS: Using 18 additional inches in all Los Angeles dailies, appropriated: Tuesday, 3; Wednesday, 3; Thursday, 6; Friday, 3; Saturday, 3.

BILLBOARDS: 100 special 24-sheet stands cut, in good locations in Los Angeles—six colors. Sixty of these boards illuminated and forty not illuminated.

TRAILERS: 25 special trailers made for West Coast Theatres to run in advance of run. Excerpts from "The Battle of the Century."

HOUSE PROGRAMS: Generous space in all house programs of West Coast theatres, both press matter and special cuts.

LOBBY CARDS: Metropolitan prominently displaying Laurel and Hardy on 30x40 cards and enlargements in lobby.

LIGHTS: Laurel and Hardy in electric lights on both Marquees.

GAG PHOTOS: Supplied Metropolitan with many specially posed gag shots of Laurel and Hardy, as well as many 30x40 in. enlargements for windows and lobby display.

RADIO: Have an hour—the midnight frolic of KNX Saturday evening; Hardy singing, Laurel and Hardy chattering and Hal Roach Studios Orchestra supplying dance music. Plenty of plugging on the Metropolitan showing.

BUS LINE TIE-UP: Cards in 85 different stations of the Motor Transit Stages, advertising Laurel and Hardy.

GYMNASIUMS: Cards in every downtown gymnasium, tied up with the comedy.

L. A. PIE CO.: Banners on all delivery wagons of the Los Angeles Pie Co.

FIGHT CLUBS: Dodgers handed out as crowds exit from Vernon, Coliseum, Hollywood and Culver City fights—"See the Real Battle in 'The Battle of the Century,' etc."

A. G. SPALDING & BROS.: All branch stores of A. G. Spalding & Bros. carry window advertising: "Don't Take the 14th Count," etc.

ARMY-NAVY STORES: Same.

MUSIC STORES: Carrying enlargements in windows.

SODA TIEUP: Soda clerks in all Owl Drug stores wear yellow ribbons.

WHIPPET PARADE: Parade of Whippet cars in downtown section opening day, banners on cars, band, and doubles for Laurel and Hardy, etc.

SAFEGWAY STORES: 400 stores displaying cards: City fights—"See the Real Battle in 'The Battle of the Century,' etc."

HOLLYWOOD DRY: 15 30x40 in. enlargements is as many Owl Drug Store windows, showing Laurel and Hardy drinking Hollywood Dry Ginger Ale.

ROACH CARS: 27 vehicles of the Hal Roach Studios, small cars, trucks, busses, etc., bannered on both sides.

SPECIAL PIE MATINEE: Staging special matinee tying up with the Los Angeles Pie Company which furnishes 2,000 individual pies for distribution to the audience.

"The Battle of the Century" is the first of a series of comedies starring Hal Roach's new comedy team, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy.

Studio Facilities for Stern Comedies Expand

Many improvements in studio facilities have been made by the Stern Brothers in preparation for a busy period ahead. Additions have been made to the writing staff, technicians, and in new equipment, props and costumes.

The girl angle in the comedies is to be emphasized, as evidenced by the large proportion of costumes for the Stern Follies Girls in the new equipment.

Deluxe Theatre Always Uses Local Talent

Stanley Grossman of Milwaukee, Spends Only $30 on Each Stage Bandshow by Using Local People

Stanley Grossman, manager of the Juneau theatre, a Milwaukee Theatre Circuit house, is putting something across in the way of stage bandshows which is meeting with big success at his theatre. Each Thursday he has a band on the stage representing a different country with appropriate costumes, settings and music for each country represented.

To date the stage presentation has taken the audiences to Russia, Spain and Germany, and before his stunt is completed, every country in the world will have been visited. These stage presentations in addition to the regular photoplay program last from thirty to forty-five minutes, and there is no increase in the admission price. According to Mr. Grossman they have been a great success and have doubled his business for that night.

Secures Local Talent

Now some may voice an objection to the cost of something of this sort, but Mr. Grossman has taken care of that. He says that most of those on the bill are purely local talent and consequently his expenses for a show of this type do not run much above $30. The participants in the presentation rehearse for the show two nights a week and on Sunday, thus assuring a good staging of their act. With this small expense Mr. Grossman has been putting on shows every Thursday night which doubled his business, and have cost him a very small sum indeed.

Another phase of the presentation which Mr. Grossman is now working upon is the obtaining of the neighborhood high school band in connection with these presentations. This band will furnish the music in connection with these presentations at various times without costing the theatre a great deal. In fact the only cost in con-

Chicago's "IT" Man

Chicago's "IT" man, Paul Ash, famous long-haired Western jazz maestro, whose unbroken record of 7,000 continuous performances exceeds that of even New York's "Abie's Irish Rose." He and Louis McDermott, his production manager, are introducing a new form of bandshow this week called "The Mikado of Jazz." Ash is credited with having attracted approximately $7,000,000 to the box office of the Oriental and McVickers theatres of Chicago, where he has been the Master of Ceremonies at five performances daily for nearly four years, which is another box office record. His intimate, unsophisticated manner of being the friendly Master of Ceremonies, in conjunction with stageband shows, has resulted in an almost complete revolution of form in vaudeville and cinema stageshows which are now almost universally taking the idea of the "Paul Ash policy shows." Ash started his rise to fame after the World War, upon being discharged from the Marine corps as a gunnery sergeant. His wife, a former musical comedy beauty, guides his career and shoos off the flappers.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

We wish to call the attention of Exhibitors and Production Managers, that anything pertaining to the staging and equipping of bandshows or presentations of any form, can be found listed in the equipment directory and supply department of "Better Theatres," a monthly section of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World. An edition of "Better Theatres" is issued this week as the second section of this publication.

Manager, Palace Theatre,
Jamestown, New York

There is a way for the vaudeville and combination theatre to increase the gross on "off-nights"; and that way is by means of the "Afterpiece" or "Clown Night." The idea can be used successfully twice a week on a two-change-a-week policy, Monday and Friday, for example; but once a week is usually better. Any theatre exhibitor who is ignoring the "Afterpiece" is passing a good box-office bet that entails no additional cost whatsoever. The writer has personally used the "Afterpiece" for some time and with much success, and the information to follow in regard to same is the product of experience.

One Show on Off Nights

First, in theatres where the policy calls for two night performances, and where one is usually sufficient on the off-night, one show can be eliminated; and the one stage performance started late, running, perhaps, the Short subjects and feature first; and then the stage acts with the "Afterpiece" to follow immediately after the last act.

It is natural that the performers should be more willing to work with you on an arrangement of this nature. However, you will find that the majority of performers will gladly cooperate with you under any circumstances. Cooperation can be assured by having it written into the contracts.

A trailer in regard to the "Clown Night" should be kept busy on your screen at all performances. At first a certain amount of advertising will be necessary, explaining the thing as a "vaudeville fun-festival," immediately following the regular stage show, with every performer on the bill entering into it together. After the thing is established and the idea is sold, unusual advertising will be unnecessary.

Manager Should Arrange Show

To obtain satisfaction with an "Afterpiece," it will be necessary for the man-

APPRECIATION!

I want to take this means of thanking my ORGANIST FRIENDS for the kind assistance they are giving me on our present and new catalog.

Thanks, HENRY MURTAGH, for saying "I TOLD THEM ALL ABOUT YOU" is a great song and "Good Luck" Henry in the new position. I think it's just "Capitol."

Thanks, JIM THOMAS for putting on "The Dog" and featuring "KEEP SWEEPING THE COBWEBS OFF THE MOON."

Thanks, JOE JORDAN for your nice work. "AUF WIEDERSEHN" (We'll meet again).

Thanks, FRED KINSLEY for promising to feature "SING SONG SYCAMORE TREE."

Thanks, MARSH McCURDY for coming to "Broadway" where you are now "one of us."

Thanks, BERNARD COWHAM for saying you will make "YOU'VE GOTTA BE GOOD TO ME" a HIT in Milwaukee.

AND

Thanks MR. & MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD for the "Romance" you put in "BLUE RIVER." It is a "masterpiece."

Thanks to all of my other ORGANIST FRIENDS — In time you'll hear from me personally through this column.

ager to frame the thing himself; the performers cannot be expected to do it alone. In arranging these fun-frolics, it will first be necessary for you to catch your first show; select your master of ceremonies, who is to handle the announcements and who should be the most jovial person on the bill and one who can talk and ad lib.

After selecting your master of ceremonies, you can decide what the nature of the "Afterpiece" is to be; whether it be cabaret, with all performers seated around tables, and working from same as called upon, or the "full-stage-and-one" idea; the latter to be preferred.

The full-stage-and-one idea consists of a bit or specialty in one, followed by a full-stage blackout, or scene, the idea being carried through to the finale.

Everything must be new; nothing repeated from the act, or cut from the act and held over for the "Afterpiece." Where songs are used as specialties they should be placed as close to the start of the "Afterpiece" as possible, as songs have a tendency to slow the thing down, and the "Afterpiece" must build upward.

Then the full-stage scenes and blackouts. Almost any act will be able to suggest several of these. On bills where a girl-revue closes the show, it must be remembered to avoid placing members of the company to open the "Afterpiece" and to avoid placing members of the revue for specialties too close to the opening. They will have to have time to change costumes and to get their breath.

A Valuable Stunt Worth Trying

After seeing your first show and getting a line on your people, talk it over with all them immediately, to give them at least a day in which to prepare. Go over it with them; decide on specialties and blackouts; and who is to do them. Routine the thing from the opening to closing on paper and be assured that each performer understands thoroughly just what he is to do and when. Ascertain what props are necessary. Sufficient time must be allowed between full-stage scenes to make changes where necessary and this must be remembered when routining the "Afterpiece."

Occasionally you will see an opportunity to combine two acts that do only specialties for laughs; and laughter after all is the real aim of the thing.

Remember that no bill is impossible, no matter how difficulty it may look at first glance; one of the most successful "Afterpieces" in the writer's experience was with a bill that included a horse act, a chinese act, two negro dancers, a girl band and one comedy act. However, material was carefully selected and the thing was carefully routined.

The idea of the finale is to get them all on; and it is not as difficult as it will first seem. Your performers will be able to make suggestions in regard to same.

All in all, the thing is not at all difficult, and a good bet that is certainly too valuable to be passed up.

Chicago North Center Theatre Reopens

The North Center theatre of Chicago, formerly under the management of Lubliner and Trinz, re-opened last week, after being closed for several weeks. The new policy is pictures, and presentation with pictures on Saturdays and Sunday only. There will be five changes of pictures a week with Dorothy Aldrich and a girls' orchestra rendering music from the pit.

On Saturdays and Sundays the band goes on the stage and offers presentation entertainment. The American Bond and Mortgage Company, who are supervising the future destinies for this house for the new interests, have appointed David Rice as manager.

Stages Bandshows with Local Talent

nection with the use of the band is the placing of an advertisement in the high school's paper at various times.

Educate as Well as Entertain

The presentations themselves are colorful affairs and are put across in good style. The act usually opens with the national song of the country being represented and the costumes, setting and music are made to harmonize as vividly as possible with the type of costumes worn by that particular nation. In this manner the presentation serves not only as an entertaining feature but as an educational feature as well, and they are thus well balanced in every respect.

Many Famous Stars Now Playing in Picture Houses

Many stage and screen stars are making personal appearances in deluxe picture houses today. Among those who have already forsaken their former art are Bee Palmer, former Ziegfeld Follies star; Rae Sumuels, for years a headliner in vaudeville; Mae Murray, both stage and screen celebrity; and many others who are on the program to appear at future dates. All of the above are now playing picture house engagements in Chicago.

Another well-known star of the stage and screen and one of Chicago's own is the former Eugene O'Brien, who is now headlining in a playlet over the Orpheum Circuit.

Henry Murtagh Returns to New York

Henry B. Murtagh, who has come to be known among picture theatre audiences as "an organist with a sense of humor," has been engaged to preside over the gigantic console at the Capitol Theatre.

Mr. Murtagh started his musical career as a pupil of Leopold Godowsky, world famous pianist, and later was a concert pianist himself. But he was attracted to the organ before he had gone very far in his career and soon became a convert. Today he is so proficient at the latter instrument that he can turn, say, a Gregorian chant into "My Hot Lips Baby Is a Cold, Cold Mama Now" or the like. Frequently he does, just for fun, and therein lies his charm and the secret of his popularity.

Chicago Sheridan Celebrates Birthday

Verne Buck, popular band leader of Ascher Brothers Sheridan theatre, Chicago, is celebrating the first anniversary of the theatre with a lavish stageband production staged by Roy MacMullen.

The house is situated in a high-class residence section of the North Side and since its opening has been presenting first-run features and elaborate bandshows.

Edmund Fitch, featured organist of this theatre, who opened the house, will celebrate the occasion with an original organ stunt.

Al Short Quits Cooneys

Word reaches this department that Albert E. Short, widely known as a musical director, who has just finished a six months' run in Atlanta, Ga., for Public, and came back at the Capitol theatre, Chicago, two weeks ago, has resigned and accepted an offer from West Coast Theatres to become musical director-general of their houses.

It is understood that too many would-be bosses at the Capitol made it impossible for Short to receive the proper co-operation for him to put forth the proper effort that would make his stay worth-while.

Before Short returned the house was doing a stageband show policy and in all probability will return to it as soon as they find a personality leader.

Goebel Goes East

Adolph Goebel, known as one of the best concert organists in the country, has returned to the East where he is now featured at Loew's Yonkers theatre.

Goebel hails from Milwaukee, where he has been featured in picture houses and also conducted a school for organists where he taught the art and technique of synchronizing motion picture music.

Kosloff, Rodemich and Mitchell to Rotate

Gene Rodemich will conduct the Paramount Stage Orchestra next week, in the Jack Partington production, "Steps and Steppers," Lou Kosloff going to New Haven, and Al Mitchell playing in Boston. This puts into effect the rotation of personality leaders between Boston, New Haven and New York.

Rodemich formerly directed the "Rodemich Orchestra" of St. Louis, the famous Brunswick Record Recording Orchestra. Mr. Rodemich is an accomplished pianist himself and has an interesting personality. He was tremendously popular in St. Louis, and in Boston where he has been playing at the Metropolitan Theatre he has an enthusiastic following.

Leo's Brother Invents Console

Tom Terry, brother of Leo Terry, both well-known organists, has the honor of being one of the very first ones to witness the development of the pipe organ in the deluxe picture theatres.

After playing almost every make of organ in the country, Mr. Terry recently invented a miniature console which may be attached to any organ. It really is an organ, and several novelties can be obtained from it.

It has taken Terry ten months of his spare time in perfecting it and more than 55,000 feet in constructing it.

Tom, at present, presides over the organ at the Loew's State, St. Louis, Mo.

Chicago Gets De Luxe Negro House

Lubliner and Trinz for years one of the leading motion picture theatre operators in Chicago again came to the front recently as builders of de luxe houses when their new Regal theatre, located at 47th and South Parkway, opened on February 4. The new house is built on a de luxe plan to feature photographs and presentation, with Fess Williams directing the jazz band. The house is in the negro district and will most likely feature shows that cater to negroes.

Harry Hume Resumes Old Post

Harry Hume, formerly manager of the Shapiro-Bernstein Los Angeles office and recently in charge of the Chicago office, has returned to Los Angeles to resume charge of the offices there.

Billy Stoneham, professional manager of the Chicago office, resumes charge in Chicago, as he was heretofore.

It is understood that Harry Hume had quite a following in Hollywood as a comic movie actor and that accounts for his return to the West Coast.

Concert Organist Takes Wife

Frederick Smith, chief organist of the Mark Strand theatre, New York, is now a benedict. Mr. Smith was married a few days ago to Marguerite Westlake Powers. The ceremony took place in the Municipal Building of New York with the city clerk officiating.

In addition to being one of the recognized musicians of the East, Mr. Smith is a director of the Kilgen School in New York and a member of the American Guild of Organists.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Harding

Week Ending February 12

The show at the Harding this week is called "Varieties of 1928." It opens with a fine spec, the Gould Ballet posing above the band. They come down the flight of stairs to do a short routine.

Then Evelyn Hoffman does a very good Egyptian dance. She knows her contortions and gets a good applause.

This is followed with a band number, "Dream Kisses" with Mark Fisher and several members of his band singing the song.

Films Caused a Stage Partnership

Very few exhibitors know and realize that Benny and Western, now traveling as a dancing team on Publix circuit, were at one time actively connected in the production of motion pictures. Ben Benny was an assistant camera man for the old Biograph Company while Burke Western was a motion picture machine operator in Fort Wayne. About 12 years ago they met by a coincidence when Western recognized Benny from a minor role he played in "The Beast at Bay," D. W. Griffith production with Mary Pickford, directed by Edwin August. Since then they have been partners in vaudeville and recently have been one of the feature attractions in the deluxe picture houses.

Johns and Mably follow with a character act of two rubes of former days. Their songs and jokes are as old as the style of their clothing. There is nothing to recommend this act, but it went over very good in this house, so no doubt, it is what this particular neighborhood wants.

The Gould Ballet come out on the runway to do a novelty routine. They are dressed in red, white and blue costumes and at the finish of their number display parasols of the same color. The routine was very good, and won a good hand.

Then come Prosper and Maret, the real entertainment of the show. They are hand balancers par excellence. Their deliberation, poise and form is remarkable and their act has grace and skill found in few acts of this type. The act wins a fine hand, which it undoubtedly deserved.

Billie Adams next appears to sing a comic song, "Let It Rain," and to do quite a bit of foolishness. He is good and especially for this house.

Mark Fisher next sings "In My Ohio Home," for a good hand. Everybody loves Mark at this house.

The finale is composed of different sorts of dance numbers by members of the Gould Ballet, and the show ends with the entire ballet doing "The Varsity Drag."

Des Moines Capitol

Week Ending February 10

Paul Spor, master of ceremonies, said goodbye all week to sorry patrons, as he made ready to exchange places with Jimmy Ellard of the Riviera at Omaha Feb. 11. Although Jimmy Ellard was as popular a band show leader as ever stepped the boards, and had completely won the hearts of Des Moines audiences before going to Omaha, the sprightly little Spor gentleman had made himself absolutely solid with his new friends in Des Moines, also, and they were loath to have him go.

The two leaders are opposites in many ways, each with his own brand of personality plus to attract and hold the attention of the fans. Jimmy has always been more the matinee type (you ought to hear the women!) Spor has specialized on PEP and he delivered the goods in many delightful surprise packages. Fifty-fifty the fans decided, but they would rather have them both!

Spor started "Steppin' High" with a nicely balanced medley of all the favorites he had played during his stay in Des Moines. Then he gave a taste of all the smart little stunts he had put over while there, playing the drum, singing, dancing and what-not. Great stuff! Musical hits from "Good News" made another bull's eye.

Dancing is the breath of life to the Carr family. Louise and Andrew, the youngsters, gave a nifty exhibition of skill when they did some fast and fancy stepping. But they were quite overshadowed by Ma and Pa Carr who showed how the thing was done 'Way back when speed in tap dancing was speed! Few acts have drawn so well from the approval of patrons.

Hinds and Leonard, blonde and brunet, sang a group of songs rather well and Lew Fink offered eccentric stunts in the dance line. A Japanese troupe, the Kikutas, put on an unusually good acrobatic and juggling act.

Herbert Lee Koch played, "Leap Year Proposals" on the organ and played it without being within 50 feet of the console. Stunt performance.

The feature picture was "The Noose." There was a Paramount news reel.

Roy Dietrich opened the stagershow with the band playing an Irish tune and when the curtain parted the ballet danced an Irish clog. The band then played an arrangement of Irish melodies.

Dietrich then introduced Sands and Claire, collegiate steppers, in a comedy dance.

Patricia Ann Manners, late star of the Student Prince, sang "Dawn of Tomorrow" and "Mother Machree," receiving due applause.

Bernice Foley was next introduced, gave an Irish monologue, made a quick change and did an Irish jig.

The ballet was next in a novel routine, which was better than their usual offering.

Roy Dietrich next sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," "Tumble Down Shack in Athlone" and for an encore "My Wild Irish Rose." The National Playhouses seemed to have picked a winner in Dietrich for their queen house.

Sands and Claire with a return number did a novelty dance, receiving a round of applause.

The band then played "Tomorrow" with a special arrangement.

Renard and West were next, late stars of Texas Guinans Revue, in a comedy sketch which was the stellar act of this week's stagershow.

The closing number by the band was "My Wild Irish Rose," with Roy Dietrich again singing. Rather a novel arrangement with the girls of the ballet passing up the aisles to the stage, then appearing in tableau effect in the background on a clover, thus closing one of the best stagershows, this writer has seen at this theatre.

Philadelphia Carman

Week Ending February 11

The New Carman theatre has for the headliner on its program this week "The Ingenues," direct from the Ziegfeld "Follies," thanks to the illness of Eddie Cantor and the consequent cancellation of the "Follies" engagement at the Erlanger theatre.

These 22 talented girls comprised the featured act in the "Follies" and besides playing as an orchestra, offered several specialty numbers exemplifying their versatility. The interest of the act was greatly enhanced by the attractiveness of the girls and their stunning costumes and the audience showed its appreciation by prolonged and enthusiastic applause.

The Garnian Grand Orchestra played the "Light Cavalry" overture.

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Week Ending February 10

The Playboys are celebrating Billy Meyers' birthday this week, and it surely is some celebration with everybody getting their money's worth. The presentation opens with the Eight English Rockets, direct from the Allen theatre, Cleveland, who have taken the place of the Abbot Dancers now on a Publix unit. They are dressed in neat black dancing costumes and do their stuff before the curtain. They are fine appearing and work nicely and are well received.

The curtain opens on a night club scene with the orchestra in tuxes on the left side of the stage surrounded by a kaleidoscopic setting of varied colors. The performers who are to take part in the presentation are seated at the right of the stage at tables, while Dave Schooler and Billy Meyers entering the upper stage right can be seen stepping out of an automobile, and make their way down center.

Meyers first obliges with an introductory song, the words of which have been made for the occasion to the melody of "This is My Lucky Day." Schooler then accompanies Billy at the piano to "Without You Sweetheart," which is followed by the two of them singing, "Horsefeathers" with "Barney Google" and "Horses, Horses" interspersed. The two boys have plenty of pep and are big favorites with the local theatre goers with the result that they draw a big hand.

Miss Irmanette gives a beautiful interpretation of a classical number on the violin which is followed by a "hot" number during which she dances a number of intricate steps accompanying herself on the violin all the while. She is a clever Miss and goes over big.

Glenn Welty's arrangement of "A Shady Tree" is played by the band, who by the way sounds better each week. Billy Meyers, although it is his own birthday party, sings the chorus to the song.

Julia Gerrity goes over big with the audience when she sings a number of popular hits including "Dream Kisses," and "I Ain't Never Had Nobody Crazy Over Me." Miss Gerrity has a pleasing personality as well as a good voice.

Now the Eight English Rockets in yellow costumes do a bit of chorus dancing to the melody of "I Told Them All About You." The girls work very well together and have a good sense of rhythm and it is a pleasure to learn that they have been booked for eight weeks at the Wisconsin.

Rome & Dunn, two boys with very fine voices next engage in a harmony duel which includes such songs as "Mary Anne," "I Forget," and "The Song is Ended." Between the songs the boys engage in a bit of comedy and jokes which meet with the audience's approval.

Detzo Retter garners bushels of applause with some real good clever comedy stuff. He gives an impersonation of Al Jolson, the Black Bottom and engages in a one-man wrestling act besides some clever tumbling. Besides this he rattles off a good line of fun which keeps the audience howling.

The presentation ends with the Eight English Rockets dancing to the tune of "Everybody Step," and stopping long enough to allow Irmanette to oblige with "Deep In My Heart" on the violin. She then switches to "Everybody Step" and they all dance their way off to the melody played by the orchestra. The program is perhaps the best offered this year with every act a good one and not one "dud" in the bunch. Hats off to E. J. Weisfeldt, Dave Schooler, Glenn Welty and Billy Meyers as well as the rest of the "guests" who put the part across.

The picture is "Rose of the Golden West" with Gilbert Roland and Mary Astor.

Chicago Regal

Week Ending February 12

The new Regal theatre which just opened offered for their second week's presentation "Cabarabia" with Fess Williams and his 22 jazz boys serving the music. Fess Williams is well liked and he delivers his "master of ceremonies" gags with a punch.

Alex Lovejoy and partner (name was not mentioned) entered upon the stage with a magic lantern. Alex is informed that he would get anything he wished for with the lantern. He wishes for girls and the curtain opens with the orchestra and 12 Regal Girls in a beautiful display on the Arabian style. The Right Quintet sang while the Regal girls went through a dance routine.

Fess announced that they would play "Baltimore," and this orchestra sure can jazz it up. Williams sang the chorus with the orchestra helping out.

Spencer and Gee, former stars of "Shuffle Along," were next with "At Dawning" getting little or no applause at all. They sang next "Side by Side." The girls do not seem to go together and for that reason they were not a big attraction.

Alex Lovejoy and partner entered again, this time doing a "Romeo and Juliet" act. The boys are very funny and their animated delivery helps get a big applause.

Ford, Marshall and Rogers, three lively steppers were the main attraction on the program and how they went over. Rogers came out for a solo dance and what he didn't do wasn't worth looking at. Ford and Marshall followed with a song and then falling into a snappy dance. The three came out for the concluding number in which they did some fast, tricky steps getting over with ease. The crowd were wild and they came out for an encore.

Blanche Calloway was next and sang "Southland" putting lots of pep which helps her get a big hand. She followed with "Oh, What a Man," Fess helping out by being the man. Miss Calloway has a nice voice and helps it with her peppy actions.

The Right Quintette followed with a very beautiful number called "Song of Songs." The entire cast appears singing the chorus. Beautiful stage arrangements and lighting effect get a big hand from the crowd.

This concluded the performance and Fess Williams looks like a good bet.

The feature picture was "The Gorilla" starring Charley Murray and Fred Kelsey.

Omaha Riviera

Week Ending February 9

Jimmy Ellard closed his engagement as master of ceremonies at the Riviera with the stagershow "Grab Bag." The way Jimmy has won his way into the popularity of theatregoers was attested by the number of encores he was forced to respond to. He is going to the A. H. Blank-Publix house, Capitol, in Des Moines, changing places with Paul Spor, who opened at the Riviera February 10. It is planned to interchange them every few weeks.

"Grab Bag" was declared to be the most attractive stagershow of the season by enthusiastic spectators. True to its name, the presentation was a huge grab bag occupying the whole stage, out of which came charming dancers and other entertainers, and under which the stage orchestra was revealed.

Gorgeous costumes were the feature of the show. The garments were cleverly designed and costly. Richy Craig, Jr., was the peer of the entertainers. Dangling his legs over the footlights, he spun yarns without effort. He had the audience in convulsions of laughter. The Dancing Dewees, Doyle and Schirmer and Peggy English were the other numbers, all good.

The feature film was Ruth Taylor in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Chicago Oriental

Week Ending February 11

Paul Ash and his gang's stage presentation this week was entitled "Ship Ahoy." The stage under Louis McDermott's supervision was arranged like the front part of an ocean liner with large guns extending over the orchestra. It was trimmed with different colored flags of all nations. The orchestra was dressed in sailor uniforms making a beautiful picture.

The orchestra played a number of selections of the navy music style with the Abbott Girls doing some fine acrobatic dancing.

Paul Ash enters as the music stops and announces that he is glad to be back after being away for a few days. He reads a couple of telegrams, one which reads: "Dear Mr. Ash, while you were away we did record breaking business—The Randolph theatre." (The Randolph theatre is next to the Oriental.)

The orchestra followed with "Sea Breezy's" in which the banjo player gave a fine solo.

The Tumbling Clowns were next with some very clever spins. One of the Clowns did some very surprising tricks, almost tying himself up in a knot. The boys were given a big applause and really deserved it.

Paul Small, the popular singer at this show, followed with "My Ohio Home." His first number was not as good as the crowd expected. He followed with a piece which Ash announced to be beautiful called "Sunshine" this time getting a fair hand. For his concluding number he sang "I Told Them All About You" with the Stanley Sisters doing some high kicking.

The orchestra then rendered a very beautiful piece called "Among My Souvenirs," the piano player, first violin and the cornet all giving pleasing solos. The piece was well played and received the same way.

Paul introduced the Rotuno Brothers who did a tap dance which created much interest. The brothers were attractive dancers and could not help being liked. Ash announced that they would do another dance before the performance was over but, needed a rest at the present time. The crowd hearing this stopped applauding. (That was all they did.)

Ginger Rogers, the girl who Paul Ash announced that if she was liked would stay another week. This raised much enthusiasm among the crowd and started a howl. Ginger sang "What Do You Say" in which she brought in the words "if you like me I can stay and if you don't I'll go away." The way she was applauded sounded like she was there to stay. Her next number was "There Must Be Somebody Else" Paul Ash bringing in some words helped put the act over big. She was called out for an encore but only said a little piece.

Above the voices of the howling crowd Ash announced Bayes and Speck who started out with a dance. The two boys exchange some dry jokes that have the people roaring. They end up their act with a tap dance to the tune "Everywhere You Go" and what a hand they received.

The concluding number by the orchestra is "Rainy Day Pal," Paul Small entering with Ginger singing the chorus and the rest of the cast on top of the ship joining in. The ending was something different than other times. The lights were turned low and the whole orchestra was painted with "Radium" effect which made a beautiful scene.

San Francisco Warfield

Week Ending February 10

This week Rube Wolf and his Super-Soloists begin a trip around the world and select Chicago for the opening. The curtain rises on a State street scene with a bandit holding up a victim. A policeman strolls along and asks how business is. "Great," says the bandit. "That's good," says Mr. Policeman. Then out strolls a young lady who sings a song number entitled "Chicago."

Rube Wolf makes a trick entrance on a velocipede, clad in overcoat, with a travelling bag in his hand. He asks a policeman to direct him to the College Inn as he just come from California and has an engagement there. The street scene curtain goes up and reveals the interior of the College Inn, with diners at the tables and the orchestra in place. A dance is on with the chorus in full swing.

A member of the orchestra announces the arrival of a new concert master from California, rated the handsomest in the West. Rube walks in and remarks how happy he is to be in Chicago and says he is from California, the land of sunshine, where men drink and shoot straight. "Dream Kisses" is played by the band and sung by the Cheer Leaders, followed by a comic song, "Is That So?"

Rube says ballroom dancing is becoming more gymnastic all the time and that what it may be in a year or so will be shown by Jimmie Faucet, "no relation to the pump." Jimmie does some fast turns, with lively somersaults. The girls of the revue follow with a bandit number, punctuated by shooting and the stage goes dark. When the lights come on Rube crawls out from under the piano.

Armida Chirot, Mexican prima donna, is delightful in "Caro Nome" and a Mexican love song. Faro and Handel offer an acrobatic set and get so twisted that Rube assists in unraveling the feet. The chorus girls and the Cheer Leaders do the "Chicago Toddle" and Harry Vernon, known as the white faced Al Jolson, offered several character numbers, including "Golden Gate."

The act comes to a close with a number by the orchestra which Rube Wolf dubbed: "She Was Once a Sailor's Sweetheart, but now She's a Fireman's Flame." The versatile leader plays a solo part.

Boston Metropolitan

Week Ending February 9

"Steps and Steppers," a Jack Partington production, was shown this week. Gene Rodemich, master of ceremonies, and purveyor of jazz, presented first the "Manhattan Steppers," a snappy dancing crowd of fellows and girls who put across some original tap steps. Then Gene and the Band Boys played a unique arrangement of "Did You Mean It" with special cornet jazz feature.

Bert and Buddy, a couple unannounced on the program, gave an unexpected treat in the form of some acrobatic tap dancing. Hlomay Bailey, soprano, sang "Without You Sweetheart," and for an encore, "A Shady Tree." A big painted tree was lowered to the stage and furnished the drop for the next number of tap dancers by the Manhattan Steppers.

Charles Huey was scheduled to appear next but he didn't show up. Instead, Glenn and Jenkins, dancing sweepers, did some steps with broomsticks that were clever and original. Another hit of their comedy stunt was a bootblacking act made up into a tap step. A pleasant way to have your shoes blacked we should say. Glenn and Jenkins also had some good jokes. We don't wonder they got so many encores.

Irving Berlin's latest hit, "Silver Lining," was rendered by Gene and the boys, and the Manhattan Steppers did a novelty number on a flight of stairs.

Their teamwork in their tap steps is perfect, and their costumes most attractive.

An orchestral prelude by the Metropolitan Grand Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Geissler, and another famous Arthur Martel organ concert, "Opera Singers Wanted," this time for a take-off on "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie," completed the program. The film was "The Last Command," with Emil Jannings.

Chicago Belpark

Week Ending February 12

Don Tranger opens the stagershow at the Belpark with an announcement that the band will play "Sweeping the Cobwebs Off the Moon." Tranger has a pleasing personality and with the cooperation of the band wins his audience.

Helen Savage is next introduced singing two blues songs, "When Jennie Does That Low Down Dance" and "Magnolia." She was well received and sang an encore.

Andy Rice, playing banjo, singing and dancing was next and received a fair hand.

The band next played "My Ohio Home" in good style.

Don Tranger next played a saxophone solo composed of requests received during the week, among them "Saxophobia," "Sunrise" and "Desert Song."

Georgia Howard, the dancing violinist, was next, playing a few numbers among them "Charmaine." She received a good round of applause.

The Six Capitol Steppers were next, six boys doing an eccentric dance, for which they received due applause. Each of the six, either in pairs or singly, did a specialty and closed the act with all participating in a buck and wing routine.

The closing band number was "Milenberg Joys" as a finale for the entire company.

The audience responded to this type of entertainment and the way it was presented.

Kansas City Mainstreet

Week Ending February 9

Walter Davison and His Louisville Loons celebrated their 39th consecutive week at the Mainstreet this week as the stage orchestral attraction.

Heading the program was an act titled "Stepping Feet," featuring Babe Fenton, Eddie LaMont and "Eight Precious Peaches." Then there was Chaz Chase, billed as the international unique comic, which proved to be adequate billing. Perish and Pera were seen in vocal and dance selections, as were Cahill and Wills.

"Tuneful Rivers," was the overture rendered by Walter Davison and his Louisville Loons.

Lynn Cowan proves very entertaining in his "Original Songs" in which he accompanies himself on the piano. Richard Carle, assisted by two others, offers a comedy sketch entitled "The Worrier," in which he is hired at $100 a day to do the worrying for a man's wife. Many an amusing situation results and the skit goes over in good shape.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I want to thank you for the very fine write-up in last week's issue; I appreciate it fully.

During anniversary week I played three solos, namely: "Birthday Greetings" (Remick), "Our Birthday Party" (Feist), and "When I Build My Theatre" (Weil).

These were three special sets from the respective publisher embodying their own numbers, without being cut or doctored by me when played.

But while talking to your representatives I mentioned I had used a birthday set from Feist & Remick, inadvertently giving the impression I used the songs of one publisher in another publisher's set. This, however, was not so, as I used the slide sets as individual renditions.—Johnnie Devine, organist, Patio theatre, Chicago, Ill.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Want to thank you exceedingly for your friendly wire and letters. Am sorry to have kept you waiting. But really, am so busy and have so many things to do, that it is even difficult to find time to write home.

Am getting along famously and feeling great. Hope you are well and slamming it over.

Gosh, I'd like to see you, Ray. Any chances of your coming to N. Y.? If so, let me know.

Well, old boy, will write you perhaps in a few days again.

My very kindest regards and sweet thoughts, as I remain.—Art Kahn, Mark Strand theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Just finished my first show; thought I'd drop you a line.

How have you been? I wrote you after you left N. Y. I left for Boston right after you did. I thought you'd write me, but you didn't. How did you enjoy your stay in N. Y.? How is Eddie Hill? Have you heard from him lately? Where is he and what is he doing, do you know? If you see him give him my best.

Well, Ray, will sign off, hoping this finds you in best of health. Write me.—Hal Sidare, Los Angeles, Cal.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Having had so very much luck with Afterpieces, I am thinking that perhaps it is a bet worth calling to the attention of other vaudeville theatre managers, and that the attached copy might be of interest.

Want also to take this opportunity to mention that your combined magazines certainly cover the field; the Herald-World has everything—with the "everything" in italics.—Wm. L. Hendricks, manager, Palace theatre, Jamestown, N. Y.

Chicago Senate

Week Ending February 11

Elaborate stage settings, snappy music and plenty of entertainment by the cast consisting of George Riley of "Heller and Riley" and Buddy Doyle, Zeck and Stewart, Mirth Mack, Gay Nell helped Al Belasco celebrate his 500th performance.

The show opened with the twelve Gould Girls standing in front of a huge sign which reads "Al Belasco's 500th anniversary performance. The girls sing a song which contained some of the following words: "Come on let's go to the show to see Al Belasco." The complete act was well done and went over in a fine manner.

Al Belasco next appeared on the stage all by himself, making a little announcement about how glad he was to celebrate his 500th performance and wanted to thank the people for the way they received him in the past. He also announced that he had someone else with him that was celebrating their 500th performance too. It was his orchestra. The people gave a big applause and Al returned their thanks by singing "Way Back When" bringing in a few words about when he first came to the Senate theatre. He played on his Sax "The Melody Lingers On" with much beauty of tone. He concluded his little act by doing a very clever comic dance.

Belasco starts to announce but, is interrupted by George Riley who when asked who he was replied "Mrs. Riley's Son, George." They like Riley here and you can't blame them.

Miss Gay Nell followed with some clever steps and bit of a tap dance. She gave another dance to the tune "Bye Bye Blackbird." She was given a fair hand.

Buddy Doyle dressed as a black face comedian sang "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie." He followed with "Will You Remember Me," this time being liked a little more than the first. For an encore he announced he would give imitations of some of the well known Black Face comedians. He went over big and was called out again. The further he goes the more they like him. "Four Walls" was his next song giving a little sad impression in it. Oh, what a hand he gets.

The orchestra followed with "You Scream I Scream We All Scream" in which Al sings the chorus. The orchestra joins in making it a comic act, and getting over big.

Al introduced Mirth Mack who sang for her first number "Rolling Along." She has a fine voice and was liked right away. Her next number was "My Ohio Home." Her pleasing personality and good looks help in putting the piece over. She next chose Belasco for her man and sang to him "After You're Gone" in which Al goes through funny movements. They like her.

Riley again appears, this time saying he thinks the girls of 1928 are his idea of an ideal girl. Al takes side with the girls of 1899 and they come to a conclusion to let the people decide which is the "Ideal" girl. The flappers of 1928 go through a black bottom dance in which Al and his 1899 girls appear to be shocked. The flappers of 1899 dance a waltz to the song "The Merry Widow Waltz" getting a bigger hand than the 1928 girls. Al and Riley furnished all the laughs for this act and were applauded plenty.

Al announced that Zeck and Stewart were next. Zeck comes out and goes through a very funny speech in which he introduces his partner Stewart. Both do a saxophone act. Talking through them with jokes that can be understood. They're very clever, no kidding.

Belasco announces that a visitor from Dunning would be next on the program. George Riley enters with a handful of telegrams, one of them reads, "Dear Mr. Belasco, more power to you." Al inquires who it was from and George replies "Edison Co." Riley for the first time discards the silly talk and sings "Everywhere You Go" and what a voice. After making three bows he had to make a little speech in which he announced that he will be back to the theatre in four weeks with his boss "Heller." The crowd likes him and they let you know it.

The Gould Girls next do a very cute novelty dance to the tune of "Rhapsody in Blue" and get a fine hand.

The concluding number with the band playing "The Birth of the Blues" ended up the performance. The lighting effects in this scene were very novel and were fine to look at. The falling stars were noticeable.

Philadelphia Fox

Week Ending February 11

Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," with Vitaphone accompaniment, for the first time in Philadelphia at popular prices, was the main drawing card at the Fox this week and the presentation act played a minor part on the bill.

However, Allan Rogers, tenor, who seemed to sing both popular and classical music equally well, was received with appreciation.

San Francisco Granada

Week Ending February 10

Greater Stage Season was inaugurated this week at the Granada with the appearance of the San Francisco favorites, Kolb and Dill, in a two act offering "In Algeria." The scenery was very effective and the show was a riot of fun when the comedians were on the stage.

The first scene depicted the patio of the Algeria Cafe, with a bevy of native dancing girls and a shiek who sang entertainingly. Kolb and Dill, bootleggers from Chicago, made their appearance and immediately got into trouble which resulted in the usual Kolb and Dill patter. The cafe proprietor sang "Blue Heaven" and Don Carroll, as the shiek, sang "Maid of Barakeesh." The ensemble line danced to the music of "In a Persian Garden," with a thrilling solo dance by Doreen Wilde.

The second scene was in a fort in the desert with the Foreign Legion. Following a comedy drill in which Kolb and Dill participated 14 girls offered a Zouave drill that proved a marvel of precision.

This act came to a close with a battle scene and a wall scaling stunt that called for considerable training. The features of this stage act were the inimitable wrangling of Kolb and Dill, the native dancing and the military drills. The singing was not especially effective. The band was in the pit for the act and there was nothing for a master of ceremonies to do so Owen Sweeten enjoyed a vacation.

Chicago Sheridan

Week Ending February 12

Verne Buck and Roy MacMullen produced a fine show this week in "Moonlight Ramblers."

Opening: The show opened in a dimmed stage set of a pavilion with a realistic moonlit water scene. Incidentally "Moonlit Waters" was the first number the orchestra played. Frank Wilson sang a very fine solo of the number with the Abbott Dancers later singing and dancing as the orchestra syncopate the number.

The boys next offer a fine arrangement of "Mississippi Mud," a new number that the audience liked.

Bobby Joyce, a young man, got a good hand for his eccentric acrobatic dancing. Suzanne Franz, an operatic songbird with a very fine voice pleased everyone with an aria from "Romeo and Juliet" and her singing of "Roses of Picardy." She earned an encore.

Buck and Wilson offer a duet of "A Shady Tree" and stop the show were forced to encore. During this number the Abbott Dancers offered a snappy routine.

Maxine Hamilton next sang "A Night in June" and "Kiss and Make Up" in her own inimitable way. She next offered a good high kicking routine which earned her an encore of an eccentric routine that was well received.

Hutchins and Holloway, harmonica players then play "Sousa" March" and "Maggie." For their encore they played a bagpipe and drum number on their harmonicas and finish with "Blue Heaven."

The orchestra next played "Who Knows" with Buck offering a chorus on his baritone saxophone. Their applause was tremendous and forced them to encore.

West, Lake and Hane, three boys (one impersonating a lady) next offer a song and dance skit which was very well received.

In the finale each member of the cast does a bit, with the Abbott Dancers finishing.

Chicago Chicago

Week Ending February 12

Mae Murray (in person) and Esther Ralston (on the screen) were the draw at the Chicago this week—and what a draw. One could consider himself lucky if he made the lobby inside of a wait of an hour or more. The night this reporter sought, and finally made entrance, the doorman was announcing, "No main floor seats until 7:45." It was then 5:45. But no one seemed disheartened.

Now for the stagershow. Although this reporter has always been an admirer of Miss Murray as a screen personality since her picture, "On with the Dance," he was sorely disappointed in her as a stage personality. It was a wise producer who staged the entire show without bringing Miss Murray on until near the end, and then only for two dances.

Despite this criticism, however, the public wants to see Mae Murray in the flesh and blood, and after all that draw is the reason for her act.

It is unfortunate that when a name act, such as Miss Murray, is on the bill everyone else in the show becomes secondary to such an extent that their names couldn't be seen with the most powerful telescope. Maybe an astronomer might explain this celestial oddity.

For instance, there was an excellent tenor in this show, which by the way, was called "The Merry Widow Revue." There also was a soprano of good qualities. There also were 12 meritorious dancing girls, and the comedy pair, Born and Lawrence.

It seems foolish not to use every possible name for a draw. Undoubtedly name contracts, however, make this impossible.

The revue carried out in costume, tunes and scenery, the spirit of "The Merry Widow," both as a stage and as a screen attraction. Throughout the show ran refrains from this ever popular musical conception. No one will ever forget the song, the words of which read, "Here's to the land which gave me birth, here's, etc." The unidentified (this is not a police docket) tenor, accompanied by a quartet, did wonders with it.

Born and Lawrence have been reported in this department many times before, and it would only be superfluous to do it again.

H. Leopold Spitalney conducted his pit orchestra through the Fourth Hungarian Rhapsody, a lively and tuneful selection which was highly appreciated by the Chicago audience.

Philadelphia Stanley

Week Ending February 11

The Stanley theatre presented Lon Chaney in "London After Midnight" and the usual Chaney crowds were augmented by admirers of Donald Brian, who appeared on the stage in a melange of musical comedy songs, dances and comedy stories.

He was assisted by Harry Da Costa at the piano. His musical comedy numbers consisted of selections from "No, No, Nanette," "Buddies," "The Girl from Utah" and "Little Johnny Jones." He also sang "I Won't Be Happy Till I Make You Happy Too," "Regards to Broadway," "What Are We Waiting for Mary," "There Must Be A Silver Lining," and the waltz song from "The Merry Widow." He would probably have made a more favorable impression had he omitted the dancing, for in trying to dance gracefully without a partner he only succeeded in looking rather foolish. Brian cracked some amusing jokes with his assistant, Harry Da Costa, and his pleasing personality made a hit with the audience.

"Danse Macabre," a novelty presentation by the Stanley Ballet Corps was a ghostly and appropriate introduction to the feature. The house was in absolute darkness when suddenly a skeleton leaped upon the stage and was quickly followed by others that silently danced a weird and ghostly dance with the Stanley Orchestra accompanying.

The orchestra presented the overture "Pomp & Circumstance."

Pittsburgh Penn

Week Ending February 11

The second Public unit to play the house is here this week, it being "Way Out West" and presenting 100 per cent entertainment. Jack Partington staged it. Dave Harman and Band played the show, this being their ninth and last week at the house, the pit orchestra doubling on the stage as in other houses playing the stage band policy, next week.

The Eight Felicia Sorel Girls were first on the program doing a tap dance without music. Lang & Voelk followed doing two harmony numbers using special arrangements and featuring Lang's falsetto voice. The band with Dave doing the talking then did "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as done by all the bands with this unit, the number going over big. Holly Hall, blues singer, next, did just fair with two pop numbers. Jack Powell, in blackface did his famous drum specialty stopping the show.

The next part of the act was a scene called "Indian Fantasy" with the Eight Sorel Girls on for an Indian tap dance. Mooney and Churchill doing an adagio and a soprano at the finish singing a verse and chorus of "Moon Dear." Company was all on deck for finale, with a scenic flash also helping to put the finish over with a bang.

Dick Leibert played "Souvenir" and "Among My Souvenirs" as his solo, doing it straight, and Don Albert and the pit orchestra played "Merry Wives Of Windsor." Feature was "The Dove," Norma Talmadge's United Artists feature.

Roxy is building two more theatres in New York. . . . One will be situated a little further up town in the residential section and the other in Brooklyn. . . . You're no doubt aware of his theatre in Washington, D. C. So from all reports, it looks like there will soon be a chain of "Roxy" theatres. . . . Associated with him in all these theatres is the movie magnet, William Fox.

Comedy songs, come, and comedy songs go, but there's one coming that DeSylva, Brown and Henderson are publishing, that I think will be a quick and sensational hit. I'll spill you the title and see if you don't agree with me; it's called "Henry's Made A Lady Out Of Lizzie."

Gerard Chatfield, program director for the entire National Broadcasting Company's program, is in Chicago almost every Thursday. . . . This should be valuable information to music men. . . .

Benny Rubin left for the Pacific Coast to tie up with Fanchon and Marco. Benny is a very clever boy, and should be sensational out that way. He most likely will be.

What ever happened to "Dancing Tambourine"?

There's one, I'll bet Sid Berman can't even answer.

Alois Reiser has replaced Nathaniel Shilkret at the Mark Strand theatre in New York, as its musical director. . . . Jake Hammond is the featured organist at the Jefferson theatre, in Huntington, Indiana. . . .

Bernie Grossman, popular Chicago songwriter, has become general western manager for one of the oldest music publishing firms in the business, namely, E. B. Marks. . . . Grossman will contribute his many songs to the catalogue from time to time, plus his other activities. . . . Al Beilan, of Berlin's Chicago office will be brought to New York as general professional manager. . . . Vincent Lopez plays piano. . . . There IS GOOD liquor. . . . Taps and Leo Lewin kissed and made up. . . . Danny Winkler is going in the movies. . . . The Ipana Troubadors use Colgate's. . . . Roxy was a bartender. . . . Frank Kelton takes three hours to dress. . . . Bernie Pollack is a foreigner. . . . Jack Mills is interested in Walter Kane . . . and . . . Bobby Crawford was once a jockey!!!!

With all due credit to the song, "Among My Souvenirs" is the outstanding song up this way. (Bobby Crawford, please note.)

ORGAN SOLOS

Frederick Kinsley (New York Hippodrome) last week offered his own interpretation of "Chloe, the Song of the Swamp." This number which is on the type of "The Wanderer" was offered by Kinsley with illustrated slides and original lyrics. This organist also is responsible for an original number written around "The Tin Pan Parade." A man with such clever ideas as Kinsley's, should have an organ built for solo purposes that could display his ability for he is one of the best along his line in the East.

Gabe Wellner (Chicago North Center) offered an original novelty for the opening week of this house which consisted of community singing of the following songs: "Just Once Again," "Sing Me a Baby Song," "Side by Side," and "My Blue Heaven." This organist is quite popular as a community player, coming formerly from the Piccadilly, Chicago. Dorothy Aldrich and her symphony orchestra of girls presented "Ice Cream" and "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise" as an overture in the pit.

Henri A. Keates (Chicago Oriental) used a clever stunt this week called "Mental Mind Reading." His first number was "Blue Heaven" following up with "Kiss and Make Up." They sing for Henri and don't care who hears them. For his next number Henri played "Baby Your Mother." He had to look around a few times to see the fellow that sang so loud. This brought a big applause. Henri announced by the aid of slides that he would play "A Shady Tree to Welcome Me" and would be sung by one of the actors first and audiences should join in later. For an encore he played "Dream Kisses." They like Keates here and applaud him plenty.

Sammy Williams (Chicago Regal) opened up with telling the people, the louder they sing the more money he will get. He plays for the first number "Keep the Cobwebs Off the Silvery Moon" getting little noise out of the people. His next number was "So Tired" this time doing better. Following with "What'll You Do" the people were singing. He concluded with "Blue Heaven." It took a few songs to get the people to sing but, then they didn't want to stop.

Bill Bennett (Chicago Belpark Theatre) called his organ solo "Vim, Vigor and Valentines." An arrangement of special slides and words, using the tunes "Beautiful," "Everywhere You Go," "Highways," "Gee, but I'm Lonesome." These tunes were used as a community stunt. This is a marvelous community singing audience and with Mr. Bennett's pleasing personality and his organ club for the children on Saturday afternoons, it looks as though he will be a permanent fixture at this theatre.

Edward K. House (Chicago Granada), this entertaining organist offered a novelty this week which utilized a Seeburg Reproducing Organ on the stage as a prop foil. The stunt consisted of popular numbers such as "Kiss and Make Up," "An Old Guitar and an Old Refrain" and "Just a Memory." While playing "Just a Memory" House began to sing the number and after a few bars of music, the audience noticed that the organ wouldn't play any longer. The incident confused the organist but when the Seeburg started to play automatically, the audience got the idea and enjoyed the stunt. It's quite a novel idea that should prove successful anywhere.

Harold Daniels (Chicago Buckingham)—To commemorate "Love Week" which this theatre is celebrating, Daniels offered one of his own novel community stunts. He called the solo, "Love—and How!" in which he featured "Sweetheart" songs of today and days gone by. Daniels used the following popular songs which the audience all sang with a will—"What'll You Do," "I'll Think of You," "Just a Song at Twilight," "Baby Your Mother," "Is She My Girl Friend," and "Did You Mean It." During his solo, he used comedy slides and gags.

For a finish a slide of Lincoln and "Old Glory" were cast on the screen as Daniels played the National Anthem.

Daniels' entire offering was well done and received a very fine reception.

Milton Charles (Chicago Chicago) played this last week to an appreciative audience. His first was a new song, "My Ohio Home," by Gus Kahn, followed by "Among My Souvenirs" and "Dream Kisses." Charles pulls a lot of good music out of the large organ at the Chicago, and his expert use of the orchestral stops is effective.

THE VERY BEST SELLERS!

"Among My Souvenirs" (DeSylva, Brown & Henderson).

"Diane" (Sherman Clay).

"My Blue Heaven" (Leo Feist).

"The Song Is Ended" (Irving Berlin).

"Charmaine" (Sherman Clay).

GEE BUT I'M BLUE—(Harold Rossiter Music Co.)—A love song about the sweetheart who pines all day for his loved one. These well known writers have turned out a song that classes with the best of this kind. Words and music by Geo. A. Little, Fred Rose and Will J. Harris.

IN THE SWEET BYE AND BYE—(Henry Waterson)—Al Bryan, one of America's leading lyric writers who is famous for his trick titles has written this simple song in an excellent way. The melody makes a very good fox trot. Pete Wendling and Francis Wheeler should also receive honorable mention.

SUNSHINE—(Irving Berlin, Inc.)—Irving Berlin imbued with the sunshine of California where he has been resting has put his feelings into this song. It is written in a lighter vein than his usual songs but nevertheless it is a work of art.

LONE EAGLE (Lindy to Mexico)—Shapiro-Bernstein & Co.—We suppose that as long as Lindbergh keeps flying, the song writers will sing his praises. His Paris trip started a raft of songs but this particular number tells of his more recent trip. By George Piantadosi, Jack Glogau and Roy Turk.

THERE MUST BE A SILVER LINING—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—Walter Donaldson has collaborated on this song with another well known writer, Dolly Morse. When Walter writes a song it's a real one and this number will certainly add to his laurels.

THERE AIN'T NO SWEET MAN THAT'S WORTH THE SALT OF MY TEARS—(De Sylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc.)—A low down song by Fred Fisher who years ago was one of the leading popular writers. He later was one of the big publishers being responsible for that big hit "Dardanella." Now that he is back writing we feel sure he will be heard from.

THERE'S SOMEBODY NEW—(J. H. Remick & Co.)—This combination of writers, Gus Kahn and Isham Jones, at one time gave us a succession of some of the biggest hits in the country, "The One I Love Belongs to Somebody Else," "It Had to Be You," "I'll See You in My Dreams" are a few. This, their first song since that time has a very good chance of clicking.

I'M PLAYING HIDE AND GO SEEK—(E. B. Marks Music Co.)—The girl is hiding, the boy is looking, therefore the title. We hope they find each other. A good lyric with a fox trot melody by Bernie Grossman, Billy Moll and Arthur Sizemore.

DAWN—(Paul Whiteman Pub., Inc.)—Paul Whiteman's own publication. This is a very pretty ballad and with the famous maestro back of same it has an excellent chance. Lyric by Raymond Klages, melody by D. Savino.

FOREVERMORE—(Harms, Inc.)—We have been hearing Guy Lombardo and his Ace Radio Orchestra play this number and he certainly has made us like this song. It is a beautiful song of the high class type. Lyrics by Alan Lewis, music by Manfred Gotthelfe and Helen Burnett.

WHY DO I LOVE YOU—(Harms, Inc.)—Another hit from New York's biggest hit "The Show Boat." The melody is by one of America's leading production writers, Jerome Kern. Book and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein 2nd.

FROM ALL THE WORLD (I've Chosen You)—(Chappell-Harms, Inc.)—A high class song from the house that gave us "Roses of Picardy." This song is on a par with some of the best issued by this high class publisher. Words by Tom Ford, music by Lew Cobey.

There you are.

Sid Berman.

THE THEATRE

Incorporated in this department of practical showmanship of Exhibitors Herald are the Moving Picture World departments, "Selling the Picture to the Public," which was established September 23, 1911, by Epes Winthrop Sargent, and "Better Business Builders."

Beer Wagon, Puzzle Contest Boost Run of "Student Prince"

Arnold Saxe, manager of Midwesco's Merrill theatre in Milwaukee recently staged a clever stunt in connection with the exploiting of the "Student Prince." Knowing Milwaukee as the town of "The Beer That Made Milwaukee Famous," in days gone by, an old beer wagon with a team of good, old sturdy horses turned the trick in great style and came in for a great deal of attention.

The ends of the kegs on top of the wagon each were painted to represent one of the letters in the title of the picture and were so placed to spell out the title. Below was fastened the sign, "In Old Heidelberg—Now Playing Merrill Theatre," so as to give the complete information. Tacked below the driver's seat was a placard with a mug of foaming ale across which was written, "Student Prince." These mediums were visible from either side of the wagon as it proceeded up and down Wisconsin avenue, taking everybody back to the good old days and arousing within them a desire to see the picture.

Puzzles Attracts Hundreds

Besides the wagon Saxe arranged to have placed in the Plankinton Arcade building through which thousands of people pass daily especially during the winter months, a poster carrying a puzzle and asking the passerby whether he could aid Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer in solving it. The puzzle consisted of five series of numbers, namely, 513-175-391-759-937. The puzzle stated that six of these numbers must total 21 and each number could not be used more than three times. One solution was allowed to a person and the first 25 persons turning in the correct solution were awarded with tickets to the show.

The poster was put on a stand in the Plankinton Arcade which is but a half-block from the theatre, the first three days of the week before the picture was shown. It attracted so much attention, however, at the Arcade that it had to be removed and was then placed in front of the theatre the remainder of the week, where hundreds of people stopped with pencil and paper to get the number combination. That this went over big is seen by the fact that over 2,500 answers were turned in to the puzzle. The solution of the puzzle was then placed before the theatre the second week of the campaign or the first week of the show when it again came in for considerable notice.

Use Billboards and Newspapers

Besides these stunts 64 billboards carrying the message of the picture were seen around town about 10 days before the picture began. Newspaper advertising for the picture was increased several days before the picture began and during the first week of the show while the lobby of the show was decorated accordingly with posters and the like. The Shades of the past! What a sensation this old beer wagon created when it rumbled up and down the main streets of Milwaukee, as of yore. And the sensation made itself felt on the box office of the Merrill theatre when it played M-G-M's "The Student Prince." The kegs were empty but their heads carried the name of the picture. As the camera clicked the kegs rolled and upset the spelling, perhaps in protest at their emptiness.

Theatre Uses Ads on Laundry Slips

The playdate of "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" at the Rialto theatre, Tucson, Arizona, was effectively tied-up with the leading cleaning and dyeing establishment of the town. On the customer's slip for cleaning garments, the statement appeared that the Cohens and the Kellys and all other careful people have their clothes cleaned at Snow's; also that the Cohens and the Kellys and everybody else will see and enjoy "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" at the Rialto theatre on such and such dates.

Another tie-up of a similar nature which the Rialto manager made was with Perfection Bread. One slip announcing the picture was wrapped in every loaf of bread, thus reaching a vast number of families.

M-G-M publicity man aided in the advertising portion of the campaign but the stunts carried on in connection with the picture were the product of Arnold Saxe. Needless to say the campaign was a big success and the show held over for an extra week, playing to crowded houses all the while.

Despite the fact that Milwaukee was at one time a great beer town, Mr. Saxe stated that he had a hard time scaring up a good old beer wagon, and that most of the people he went to seemed to have forgotten what they looked like. After he had obtained the wagon the price he paid for it was not great and as for the puzzle at the Arcade he gave the custodian several passes to the show, and that was all the cost connected with that.

Here's a Fine School Tieup to Put Over on "Student Prince"

As a special stunt to attract various high school students to the regular showing of M-G-M's "The Student Prince," the Texas theatre, San Antonio, held a "Student's Night," at which time the "Prince of Students" was elected, by printed ballot which was given to each high schooler by the doormen as he entered the door.

A silver loving cup was awarded by a local jeweler, and a campaign covering a week in advance was run in high school papers, on bulletin boards, in local papers, and in the regular theatre advertising. Principals of all high schools announced the special night at assemblies, and a great amount of interest was displayed in the stunt.

The ballot had a place for the name of the student who was considered most popular, together with name and school of voter. The loving cup was awarded the following Friday, thus giving the theatre the benefit of an additional patronage by the students. Don Galvan, director of the stage band, handled the presentation of the cup, and other details of the contest on the stage.

This stunt is ideally made for the small town, and can be put on at very small cost. Many schools have such contests each year. If you can tie up with such a contest and offer a loving cup of some sort, it should not only boost your business on this one picture, but also develop the good will of the students.

Lobby displays when effectively produced have a stimulating effect on the box office. Above and to the right are two displays worthy of the name. The one above was used by the B. S. Moss Broadway theatre, New York to put over an all comedy bill, Snookums, the Universal infant actor, Harold Lloyd and Charley Chaplin being billed as "Komedie Kings."

The Castle, Chicago loop theatre, shows its faith in the pulling power of good lobby display by using them regularly. The one above enticed many people into the theatre to see the Pathe re-issue, "Grandma's Boy," starring Harold Lloyd. The pleasure shopper would have a hard time passing either of these two good displays pictured above.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

Charles Chaplin in "The Circus" went over in such great style that it was held over for the second week and the musical show was changed in several instances.

Whereas during the first week the entire performance ran under two hours, the second week extended two minutes past the two-hour mark. Of this time the film portion required one hour and 34 minutes, leaving 28 minutes for other presentations.

The overture selected was "Morning, Noon and Night," played by the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra, with Sacha Kindler conducting. The lights for this overture, which took eight minutes, were as follows: amber spot on the director as he entered, going to flood as he picked up baton. Bridges light blue on draw curtain and side; blue foots on production stage, steel blue stars in cove ceiling.

Upon concluding the overture Sascha Kindler stepped down from his conductor's stand and went on to the apron of the big stage for a violin solo, Schubert's "Ave Maria," requiring four minutes. Lights were as follows: pink spot from dome on artist, stage dark.

Following the Mark Strand Topical Review, which took up nine minutes, Helen Gaubis, soprano, appeared before the orchestra in two numbers, her first was "Sometimes I'm Happy" and the second was "Just a Memory." Miss Gaubis was "discovered" at an audition at this house not so long ago and while she has appeared here only on two previous occasions, she is well established and was heartily received. Her numbers required four minutes this week. A pink spot covered Miss Gaubis from the dome, blue floods from bridges, ceiling spots violet and blue.

Held over from last week was the Edward L. Hyman presentation, "Dancing to the Classics," this being, as previously described, an orchestral number showing how some of our best known classics sound when arranged in jazz time. Film leaders announcing the selections were thrown on the screen as the orchestra took up each number. The presentation took 12 minutes.

Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus" was put on exactly the same as for the first week, running one hour and six minutes and was followed by a technicolor subject, "The Call of the Sea," with Hope Hampton. This latter film ran 19 minutes and rounded out what all the patrons agreed was a well balanced show.

Contest for "Noose"

Maurice Rosenthal, manager of the Majestic theatre, Bridgeport, Connecticut, got columns of valuable publicity for his showing of First National's last Richard Barthelmess picture, "The Noose," by tying up with the Bridgeport Post on a capital punishment contest. The publishers of the Post were interested enough in the tieup to pay the six cash prizes while Mr. Rosenthal contributed 50 pairs of seats for "The Noose" for the minor prizes.

Phonograph in Lobby

When the National theatre, Louisville, ran "The Student Prince" a Panatrophe was borrowed from one of the music dealers and this was set up in the lobby of theatre and on its records of "The Student Prince" music were played during the entire run of the film. As the machine was the latest model it had plenty of volume and could be heard half a block away from the theatre.

Floyd Maxwell presents at the Broadway:

"Wife Savers"

At Sixth & Salmon in the beautiful new gas store, the real "Wife Savers" can be found, as:

- The Gasco Furnace, where Wife is as free of basement chores as Mrs. Billion at the finest hotel.
- The Ideal or Bryant Boiler and Radiators, ditto, ditto.
- The Radiantfire, which saves Wife from dust, dirt and ashes, and on mid days puts the Furnace out of business.
- The Clothes Dryer, saving Wife from having her washing hang in the rain, for sometimes it does rain here.
- The Easy Washer, which saves Wife many a tear over ruined lingerie.
- The Simplex Ironer, which saves Wife from pushing a chunk of iron over an ironing board. Kplunk, Kplink, never done, never through. The Ironer just rolls out the articles, a joy to behold.
- The Autohot Waterheater, which saves Wife from caressing a teakettle, or having to bathe the baby in cold water.

Space and Copy Are Two Vital Points in All Newspaper Ads

(This is the fifth article of a series on advertising which originally appeared in "Showmanship News," Finkelstein and Ruben house organ.)

Number Five

When we come to the subject of newspaper advertising we enter a field where Showmanship is all-important. Therefore it becomes the duty of every manager to train himself in the writing of good newspaper ads. When you plan to buy newspaper lineage, remember that you are dealing with one of the most costly forms of advertising we use. At the same time keep before you the fact that two features of newspaper lineage stand out in importance over all others—Space and Copy.

Let us discuss space first, not because it is a film's thickness more important than copy, but because it involves expenditure. A safe rule of Showmanship is to allot the bulk of your appropriation to the newspapers. The housewife cannot read a billboard in her favorite rocking chair.

Don't Shoot Your Wad

Space should be conserved at all times. The practice in Showmanship, established by years of usage, has been to divide newspaper space into a number of smaller units rather than shoot all of the money in one big ad. Starting with a small teaser and building toward a dominating layout has proved successful.

In deciding on the amount of space to be used, your total lineage is arrived at by estimating the possible return on the picture, the character of other advertising in the same newspaper and the size of other ads on the same page. The larger return you can foresee, with the range of possibility, on a production the more you can spend with good judgment.

Make your ads stand out from all others in the newspapers by preparing showmanship ads, not ordinary commercial ads. There is a vast difference. Reverse plates, used very little by other advertisers, and action cuts have a well-earned place in our ads. Pick up any paper in the country. Note the many cuts in theatre ads. Why? Because, we have personalities to sell. These features give character to your ads and identify them.

Proper Use of Borders Helps

Bold type is another distinguishing mark of theatre advertising. Don't over-emphasize Gothic type. But remember, when the newspapers have a big story they headline it with big type. After all, isn't an ad a story?

Importance of borders cannot be too strongly stressed. At times proper use of

Booming Business with Billboards

Could anyone pass these boards without reading them? The chorus is "no!" Look at the two boards at the top of the cut. Two weeks before the Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, played "Helen of Troy," the board on the right puzzled the public. The next week the title was painted in and everybody's curiosity was whetted to see the picture. And we'll bet everybody in Battle Creek, Mich., stared when they saw the two traveling boards (left center) advertising "A Texas Steer" at the Post theatre. At top center is another traveling board used by the Rialto theatre, Tonkawa, Okla., to advertise "The Cat and the Canary." It created lots of comment. Opposite is the triple board used by the Madison theatre, Detroit, for "The Jazz Singer." At the lower center is what circus men mean when they talk of plastering a building. This huge board was seen in Philadelphia. The traveling billboard (lower left) used by the Colony theatre, New York, for "On Your Toes," was a novelty even on Broadway, and everybody in Salt Lake City stretched his neck to see the Pantages flivver board (lower right) as it chugged down the street for "The Fair Co-ed."

Space and Copy Are Two Important Points in Ads

borders will set your ad away from all others. Moreover, borders can pull the eye directly to your ad. Proper usage of type and borders can be worked out with your local compositor. As in all showmanship deliberations good judgment must prevail.

Use white space wherever possible. It gives tone to your ads and makes them easier to read. White space can always be used to advantage between your type copy and the column rules to set your ad off from others on the same page.

Much to the manager's advantage is the exchange press book. Here you have ads already laid out for your use. Mats are cheap. They smack of showmanship. Selling copy is to be found in every press book. If you don't like the press book copy, train yourself to write better stuff than the producer's copy writers.

Snappy Copy Is Needed

In preparing your copy for the newspaper make it snappy. Follow the lead of the newspaper head writer. He is trained to express himself concisely. Lindbergh made himself an international figure by bucking the wind and saving his words; he's the greatest showman of the times and doesn't know it.

A page of advertising is a page. It is more than twice as valuable as a half page, and thirty times as valuable as one-eighth of a page. Why? Because its bigness gets attention. People simply looked at Barnum's herd of elephants, but when Jumbo came along they stared.

Keep your copy as far away from the bank type of advertising as possible. The banker has a cinch on you. He's whispering to people to save. You're shouting to them to spend. He should be conservative; that's the foundation of his business. The very nature of the amusement business is an eye and ear appeal. Make your ads ballyhoo your picture.

"This ain't no bull!" Joe Mayer, advertising manager of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, O., claims this is the first time this old stunt was ever pulled, and that he was the originator of it way back in 1919 when he was with Universal. Joe this week becomes M. B. I. No. 6.

Joe Mayer, M. B. I. No. 6 Claims Origin of Old Exploitation Stunt

"The Theatre" is happy to announce that Joe Mayer, advertising manager of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, becomes M. B. I. Number 6. Joe is a regular contributor to this department and has just been named a winner of the Harold Lloyd "Speedy" contest. Among other things Joe claims to be the originator of the famous "This Ain't No Bull" idea that has been "pulled" in every city and hamlet in the country, and his house organ, "The Palace Review," ranks among the best.

'My Best Idea' Number 6

By Joe Mayer

MY best idea in ten years occurred to me about a year and a half ago when I quit selling and exploiting moving pictures on the road and sold Harry Silver and Harry Turberg, owners of the Palace theatre the idea of adding me to the Palace staff as advertising manager and editor of the Palace Review.

In the past ten years, since entering the picture business, I have had a few exploitation ideas, some original, some that were adaptations of the other fellows, some fairly good, and some exceedingly bad.

Back in 1919 while with Universal in New York City, I was called upon to exploit "The Great Air Robbery," and while lying awake one night trying to think of some original stunt, I hit upon the "This is No Bull" idea. That stunt has been used many times since in all parts of the country and while in 1919 it might have been a "best idea," it seems sort of foolish to me now.

I have worked every exploitation stunt from the old post-card gag—still being used as original by some exploiters—to preparing a series of six cartoons on the most "Foolish Wives," a history from Eve to the present day. Therefore, it would be pretty hard for me to say which was really the best idea.

New Twist on Old Idea

The one, I believe, which netted the most newspaper publicity, however, was the "Priscilla Dean Tam Stunt," a new twist given to the old "mystery girl" idea. This was "pulled," seven years ago, and I am frank to admit, that I haven't seen or read about any stunt since that time, which brought a bigger volume of publicity, considering the expense. Personally, I have worked all kinds of treasure hunts, contests in which money prizes were given in the "years that followed," as the title writers have it, but this one stands out.

The stunt was worked in a number of towns—I was then exploitation manager for Universal—and in every case it was a decided success.

The plan was to tie-up with a newspaper and give away a certain number of tams each day. I first tried it in Akron, Ohio, a week before the opening of "Outside the Law," at the Allen theatre. The Sunday-Times announced that 100 tams would be given away during the following week, and gave the story first page position. They carried the story every day during the contest, and each day it hit the front page. At a certain hour each day a girl would appear at a place mentioned in the previous day's story. A description of what she would wear appeared something like the following:

"I'll be wearing a gray coat with fur collar and on my head will be a blue tam. I am going to start from Mill Street and walk down Main at 2 o'clock. I'll just be strolling along, looking in the shop windows at the pretty things.

House Organ List Postcard Checkup Helps to Sell Ads

Dick Gaston, advertising manager of the Strand and Orpreum theatres, Fort Madison, Iowa, has evolved a successful way of checking up on his house organ mailing list to weed out the bad names, and the system has proved to be his best advertising talking point in selling ads for his house organ.

The system is simple yet effective. To every name on the list a post card was mailed, the post card reading, "your failure to fill in and mail this card will be taken as your desire that we drop your name from our list," and underneath the space for name and address was printed, "if you have a friend you would appreciate movie NEWS mailed to each month, please fill in the space below."

On the other side of the card this was printed: "To you who are friends of the Fort Madison theatres: You have shown your friendship for the 'The Theatre Goer' by giving us your address. You are now on our mailing list and we want to keep you there—old friends are better than new ones every time! However, our mailing list has grown to such a huge size it becomes necessary to work it over, correct it, and bring it up to the minute. Will you help by filling out the attached card and mailing it to us? This will automatically put you on our list and you will receive 'The Theatre Goer' free of charge together with all important announcements."

When the cards were returned, all those people who failed to return cards were dropped from the mailing list.

"After the cards were returned and the new list completed," says Gaston, "I also used these cards in selling the advertising space to pay for the publication. The cards proved my best selling point for when the subscribers signed the card and returned it my circulation was as good as paid circulation."

"The Theatre Goer" is just a year old this week and we have a circulation of 3,000 all of whom have sent in requests for the paper. Enough local advertising is sold each week to pay for the cost of printing. Returns from bargain coupons in it exceed the newspaper. We have had as high as 500 coupons clipped from one issue of the paper and returned to the theatre."

"When you see me, all you have to do is to stop me and say: 'You are Outside the Law,' but you must have a copy of Monday's Evening Times. Having guessed correctly, I will say: 'Yes, I'm Outside the Law,' and give you a ticket which you take to the Times office and get a tam free."

This stunt invariably creates "woman interest." On the first day it was pulled in Akron, fully 5,000 women were on the streets looking for the "mystery girl," despite the fact that it was raining. On the second day, it was necessary to call for police protection to keep the girl from being mobbed.

I am going to work this stunt again some day when it can be tied up with a woman star. Have been thinking seriously of using it with some sort of Mary Pickford hat to use in connection with "My Best Girl" when we play that picture at the Palace. Most any newspaper will be glad to tie up as it means extra circulation, and by arranging with some merchant whereby he can put in a window, or get exclusive rights for selling the hat, he will give you a special price. In a town the size of Hamilton, giving away 25 hats would be sufficient, and the wholesale price on these should not exceed $50. In smaller towns, the number given away can be cut down to five or ten. I'll guarantee any exhibitor who uses the stunt the biggest kind of success, unless things have greatly changed.

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

"WIFE SAVERS"

THE trade, always finding out things, finds out something else as it looks upon "Wife Savers," the new Beery-Hatton thing. The picture as it stands might very well be a continuation of "Behind the Front," and the thing it makes plain is that a continuation of that picture is what should have followed it, instead of the half-dozen other things that did. In "Wife Savers" Beery and Hatton are funny again, not quite as funny as in "Behind the Front" but funnier than in anything else since.

The boys are soldiers again in this thing, for part of the way—the funniest part—and this seems to make it quite clear that they are funny as soldiers and not very funny (together) as anything else. Therefore (if I may hasten to a conclusion) the thing to do seems to be to keep the boys in uniform and turn out soldier comedies until the public yells "Enough." Too bad, of course, that the wisdom of this course could not have been known in time to obviate all those other efforts.

It's an Alpine village, this time, or so it seems, and Beery is principally concerned. Some of the gags are funny, some of the captions are funny, many of the latter also are pretty dirty, and all of the picture flows snappily along. The thing seems to be, all in all, the sort of thing a Beery-Hatton picture ought to be if it is, for some mysterious reason, necessary to keep these two good solo actors in duet.

THANKS

TO the many who have contributed ways and means of coping with an attack of Whooping Cough, many thanks. I've been unable to try all the suggestions, my progeny being but one in number, but the measures suggested by Mrs. Ernest Rovelstad of Elgin, Ill., give promise of effecting the desired relief. (Now if anyone has a suggestion for chilblains—.)

SOFT LIVING

MADGE BELLAMY—the new Madge Bellamy, whom I can never identify as the girl who used to act in Thomas H. Ince pictures—has a pleasant and entertaining little story in "Soft Living." There's a nice bit of satire in the thing, buried deeply enough so as not to ruffle the dumber onlookers, and the thing ripples smoothly from beginning to end. It's not a great picture, but it's a good one.

By T. O. SERVICE

The yarn (it's a bit familiar in treatment, though different in slant) concerns a girl who decides to marry a millionaire to get his alimony. With this basis, a trite little sermon such as can be heard on any radio of a Sunday morning might have been delivered, but it isn't like that. It's a quite intriguing narrative, with a certain indecisiveness which keeps it warm enough. (It may even have been hot in the original print, which Chicago censors whittled down a bit.)

This Bellamy girl is getting along right smartly, if you ask me, or, for that matter, whether you ask me or not. She used to be just a nice-looking youngster who'd gotten into pictures; now she's a good little actress who happens to be a nice-looking youngster. The miracle is that she seems to get younger with each release. Perhaps she'd not mind telling the other girls out there how she does it, although if I were she I wouldn't.

FALL RIVER'S FIRE

WHAT a lot of publicity the Fall River fire is getting for Fall River. I saw five different newsreel versions of it last week, all good. And I bemoaned, as a Chicagoan would, the great lack of newsreel accommodations on the occasion of the Chicago fire. What a picture that would have made!

"ACROSS THE ATLANTIC"

IT develops that we're all wrong about Lindy. It wasn't Lindbergh that flew to Paris. No, indeed. It was Monte Blue. And the ship was "The Spirit of Hugh" and Monte (as Hugh) had to steal the ship to make the flight and it was really made to head off a marriage between Monte's (Hugh's) wife and brother. Aside from the confusion of identities, however, the flight was made exactly as the newspaper said it was—as the picture called "Across the Atlantic" plainly shows.

(Any apples today?)

Seriously, I think Monte Blue's a great actor and I'm sure the Warner Brothers plant turns out some great pictures now and then—but this is just about the last word. I think the first mistake was made in deciding to make the picture, the second in deciding to make it a drammer, and the third in making it so badly. It wouldn't be good if the first two mistakes hadn't occurred, and it couldn't be good after they had.

The crow flies like this:

Blue is a great little flier in the big fuss and comes down to a bump that takes away the old memory. Ten years later they let him out of a rehabilitation hospital and he drifts to a plane factory which is about to send a flier to France by way of advertising Hugh's Dad's product, whatever it is. Blue gets his memory back in time to learn that his brother is going to marry his wife the day the plane gets to France, whereupon he steals the thing and flies right over to prevent that occurrence. Of course he does.

The thing, worked in continuity, compared to which the preceding paragraph is pure Shakespeare, is just too bad. But the big howl (the audience insisted on laughing at it all) occurs when the demon flier, droning through the fog near France, dozes in his cab behind the roaring engine, only to be awakened (saved) when a ship far below toots its whistle. (After this anything can happen.)

TO JAYSEE

I'VE been trying to remember to say to J. C. Jenkins that I forgot, when talking about "In Old Kentucky," to say that this is a picture after your own heart. I'd like to have you look at it and let me know if it isn't. If it is, I'm willing to quit arguing about "Seventh Heaven" and just call that debate another victory for me.

"GENTLEMEN PREFER BLONDES"

A NATURAL and, I believe, widely shared aversion to reading the writings of picture people prevented me from throwing the fit I surely would have thrown about Anita Loos' "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" between covers. (Unintentional, I assure you.) And so I am probably all wrong in my opinion of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" on the silver sheet. (Also unintentional.) Nevertheless, it is only my opinion and, since it is quite plainly designated as such, I need not incriminate myself further.

I think the picture's first rate. I think, in fact, it's a knockout. I got a lot of good laughs out of it, as did my neighbors to the left and right of me, and there were so many of the neighbors that I'm sure everybody must have not only enjoyed it but told their friends.

The stunt, as you know, is to give a gal her head and all the right breaks. The technique is to endow her with a deadly eye that doesn't look it and an imperceptible brain which functions perceptibly. The routine is gyp-gyp-gyp, with the biggest ones falling the hardest and the girl friend supplying the wisecracks. It's a great act, and an act which Miss Loos will do well to protect by doing a swift series of the same in both book and picture.

The publicity about the new young lady who gets the big break in the thing may or may not have good foundation, but the kid has the stuff for this thing at least. (And of course none of the ready-made stars could have got the thing past the first censor.) If I had to make books on her I'd say the role would kill her in other things (like Peter Pan all but killed Betty Bronson), but I don't have to make books. I merely raise the point in order to suggest that Miss Loos use her influence to keep the girl in Anita Loos products, even if that means dashing off a series of them.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" comes, roughly, under the head of the new manner. It imparts entertainment and quits right there. When pictures get so that is the termination of a majority of them, you'll find more pictures discussed in these pages of each issue and you'll find more money-makers in "The Box Office Ticker." (And, of course, you'll find more letters in "Letters From Readers" telling how the Ladies Aid complained to the management that "the picture does not teach a moral"—to which the exhibitor writing the letter will add, if he is a complete reporter, that all the ladies came down and so the box office returns went up.)

WHAT'S WRONG HERE?

I'VE missed the newsreels' accounts of Lindbergh's landings in the rubber capitals. (Has there been any?) And so I'm moved to wonder if somebody's got "exclusive" on this, or if the government has had the supremely good taste to keep the newsreels at a proper distance.

Don't misunderstand, please. The newsreels are a mighty force for this, that, almost any good, but it really wouldn't have been diplomatic to have gone along with Lindy. And as I write the words I more than half expect to learn that the next time I go into a theatre I will see the whole tour in detail. (Maybe I'm wrong.)

"CHICAGO AFTER MIDNIGHT"

SPECIAL NOTE: I want it plainly understood that I did not (for reasons hereinafter given) see the "Chicago After Midnight" which you will play, if you play it, and that all which follows concerns the picture that Chicago censors and Chicago neighborhood exhibitors (for reasons not existing in the picture) made of the production which Film Booking Offices issued. Therefore, please read the following (if at all) as the remarks of a citizen of Chicago after seeing a picture which he knows is

Pictures Tell How Times Have Changed

"Kaisers, emperors, sultans, are not what they were," says Arthur Brisbane, Hearst editorial writer. "Berlin hisses the former Kaiser, appearing in a moving picture. Germans have not forgotten the Kaiser's bragging, drinking officers that kicked young German recruits on slight provocation, slapped their faces, called them pigs, and crowded off the sidewalk 'common citizens' that paid for the army.

"Constantinople sees a moving picture called 'Abdul Hamid, the Red Sultan,' showing methods and crimes of the last of the sultans. It is much enjoyed by modern Turks, wearing the derby hat instead of the fez.

"The 'Red Sultan's' thirteen exiled children made a futile effort to have the film seized by a Paris court."

not going to be seen elsewhere in these United States of America.

I went to the Avalon theatre (a splendid structure) to see the picture advertised as "Chicago After Midnight." So did several thousand others. Most of the others got a good laugh out of it, but it didn't look funny to me. All I got out of it is a pain in the neck and material for half-a-dozen editorials which I would write if I were an editor.

The picture, as you know, is supposed to show the seamy side of early morning existence in this place. As nice people are not to be expected to know the difference between Chicago crime and crime in Denver, Dubuque or Albuquerque, and as nice people are expected to be the ones to be pleased with the picture, it is unimportant that the story of the thing is no more Chicagoesque than it is New Yorkish, Miamian or Podunkite. It is just as well, even, that the crime stuff is the same as used by Lincoln Carter and his contemporaries in a day when melodrama was mellow, if not more dramatic. Perhaps it was even a brilliant idea to use this medieval material, and in a story all the folks know well, as a means of getting away from censors and ducking a possible bomb (ardment) from Bill the Builder or Al Capone. The important thing, and this is only locally important, is that it didn't fool the censorial folks, who insist upon fooling themselves without the aid of experts.

This is what the Chicagoan who went to the Avalon (or any of its affiliated theatres) saw:

A nice fatherly burglar (Ralph Ince) dubs a stick-up and goes up the river, leaving the sidekick to watch out for the wife and kiddie, final instructions being that the little one never be told her father's private life and habits. The next caption has the n. f. b. getting out of jail, fifteen years later, and meeting the same old sidekick, who tells him that the guy who snatched is running a cafe in Chicago. (Here occurs the first censorial caption, telling what a great police department Chicago has, and this is the first big laugh the Chicago audience takes for itself. They howl.) Thence on to Chicago (with more of these riotous captions inserted here and there) and to the knockoff of the bad boy and the discovery that the dancing gal is the old man's kid and all the rest of it except the flag, a grievous oversight on the part of the local censor board, who might as well have tossed that in and gotten over big.

Well, that's bad enough, and funny enough, so the Chicagoans who go to see the picture feel they've had their money's worth in good, clean laughter. But the exhibitors who are showing the thing locally weren't satisfied with just that. (I should say not.) If the censors could stick in yards of propaganda for the dear old police force, why shouldn't the exhibitors stick in a few yards of self-advertising? Certainly—and so the night stuff photographed in the loop and cut into the picture to justify the title came out, and in went an equal or greater length of stuff showing the electric signs of the theatres owned by the exhibitors running the picture. In plain words, the original print had the B. & K. downtown houses in it, wherefore Cooney Brothers and Marks Brothers lifted out that footage and stuck in film showing the Cooney and Marks neighborhood houses. Thus a title which reads, promisefully enough, "Chicago—After Midnight," is followed by closeups of the signs over nice, sedate neighborhood cinemas that are turned off promptly every night at 11:00. (At this point the customers fell out of their seats.)

And if I had space enough left I'd tell you the other dozen or more funny aspects of the thing—but you can imagine the rest. You can get a good mental picture of the dear old censors putting their earnest heads together and concocting the screamingly funny captions that "protect the fair name of Chicago." You can get another striking likeness of the Brothers Cooney and Marks scissoring out the B. & K. billing and inserting their own. Perhaps, even, you can get a picture of the bullet-hardened Chicagoan who sits in delighted contemplation of the triple-plated counterfeit the whole thing amounts to in the aggregate—but I doubt if you can get an inkling of the sheer absurdity of the conglomerate mess without living in the town that is still (despite "Underworld," "The City Gone Wild" and "Chicago After Midnight") the greatest untouched picture material since Rome did a nosedive.

MIGHTY VITAPHONE

I HAVE never cheered mightily for Vitaphone. Now I do so. It is great, greater than you'll think it is until you've seen it running out of gear. I saw it that way the other night at the Orpheum. An act called "The Policeman's Quartette" was projected, with the action geared some eight or ten seconds ahead of the sound. The effect, of course, was terrible, but the effect of the second running (they stopped the thing and then shot it again with the factors synchronized) was to demonstrate to me, as perfectly co-ordinated performance never had demonstrated it, the great merit of the thing. No word describes it better than "great."

The Palace, which has been in operation in Watertown for the past 25 years, was closed last week. . . . William Smalley of Cooperstown has decided not to lease Eagle Hall in Johnstown.

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

BLUE DANUBE, THE: Pathe drama, with Leatrice Joy, Joseph Schildkraut, Nils Asther, Seena Owen, May Robson, Albert Gran, and Frank Reicher. Directed by Paul Sloane. Released March 12. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Marguerite, beauty of a village along the Danube, and Erich, son of a baron, love each other. But the baron wants Erich to marry the daughter of a rich brewer, while a hunchback, desiring Marguerite for himself, poisons her mother's mind against Erich. On the night before Erich is to go to war, he gets Ludwig to tell Marguerite to meet him in the morning and they will get married. Ludwig does not deliver the message, and also intercepts Erich's letters from the front. At the end of war Erich's father tells Marguerite that Erich wants her to release him from his vows, and Marguerite, in despair, marries the hunchback. Then Erich, returning, exposes the hunchback, who kills himself. Marguerite and Erich renew their vows.

FLYING ROMEOS: First National comedy, with George Sidney, Charlie Murray, Fritz Ridgway, Lester Bernard, Duke Martin, James Bradbury, Jr., and Belle Mitchell. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Murray and Sidney. They're in love with the same widow but friends just the same. The widow, however, likes an aviator. So they decide to be aviators. In the equilibrium test they end up in a woman's club, dressed, as it were in only red flannels! Next they find themselves in a hangar. . . . then in an airplane. And fighting for the control, they do such stunts that the owner of the field wants them to pilot his plane across the Atlantic. They accept the offer of an aviator to help them, but in mid-ocean, he turns out to be an escaped lunatic. They parachute down and land amid a school of seals. The widow accepts the aviator. But Sidney and Murray take the seals into vaudeville and make a lot of money—which is much nicer.

LADIES' NIGHT IN A TURKISH BATH: First National comedy-drama, with Dorothy Mackaill, Jack Mulhall, James Finlayson, Sylvia Ashton, Harvey Clark, Reed Howes, and Guinn Williams. Directed by Edward Cline. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Perhaps you recall the stage comedy of this title. Of course the title—but let's get on with the story: Sweeney tells Speed, a fellow structural steel worker, to look out or some woman will get him. Despite his scoffing, Speed promptly falls for Helen, who sells box lunches on the corner. Then Leroy, a physical instructor, goes out after Helen, and much to Speed's disgust, gets her to wear slapperish clothes. Speed and Helen quarrel, as on some other matter, do Helen's parents, and Speed and the father go to a spicy stag party to assuage their feelings. It happens to be the same night on which Helen and her mother go to a Turkish bath, and when the party is raided, Speed and the father find themselves in the bath. As catastrophic as this may seem, it leads directly to the resumption of good feelings all around.

LATEST FROM PARIS, THE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy-drama, with Norma Shearer, George Sidney, Ralph Forbes, Tenen Holtz, William Bakewell, Margaret Landis, and Bert Roach. Directed by Sam Wood. Released February 4. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Salesman, saleswoman, love sincere though comic, and a happy solution of numerous difficulties—of such is this Norma Shearer vehicle. Ann and Joe travel for rival firms but like each other immensely. Louise, daughter of one of Joe's customers, has set her cap for him, but Joe dodges her all right and becomes engaged to Ann. No more than affianced, they both get colds, and Ann finds Joe being cared for by Louise, a situation that results in Joe being reluctantly betrothed to his nurse. Ann's employers, however, arrive on the scene and convince Louise's parents that Joe's firm is failing and that he will soon be out of a job, thereby making Joe free to rejoin Louise.

OLD IRONSIDES: Paramount melodrama, with Esther Ralston, Wallace Beery, George Bancroft, Charles Farrell, Johnnie Walker, George Godfrey, Guy Oliver, Eddie Fetherston, Effie Ellsler, William Conklin, Fred L. Kohler, Charles Hill Mailes, Nick De Ruiz, Mitchell Lewis, Frank Jonasson, Frank Bonner, and Duke Kahanomuku. Directed by James Cruze. Released March 3. Length 7,900.

TYPE AND THEME: Mildly historical and strongly patriotic story written around the American trouble with the Tripolitan pirates and the part taken by the U. S. S. Constitution therein. The love story is between the daughter of the captain of an American merchant vessel, and a young sailor on it. The ship is captured by pirates in the Mediterranean, and the prisoners are released by the American navy. Love, comedy, cruelty, and war provide a strenuous fare for the emotions.

RACE FOR LIFE, A: Warner Brothers melodrama, with Rin-Tin-Tin, Virginia Browne Faire, Carrol Nye, Bobby Gordon, James Mason, and Pat Hartigan. Directed by Ross Lederman. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: In this one Rinty helps his young master make good and annoys a horse into winning a race. Danny starts out with his dog to make his own way in the world, and landing in a Southern town where horse racing is popular, he is befriended by the sweetheart of a stable owner. He is assigned to ride Black Raider. A rival racing man tries to ham-string the horse and later kidnaps Danny. But Rinty releases his master. Black Raider, however, does not run well in the race, a fact which Rinty notices. Thinking fast, Rinty finally decides to break his leash and frighten the horse into increasing his speed. The device works, and among those made happy thereby is, of course, Rinty.

ROSE-MARIE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama, with James Murray, Joan Crawford, House Peters, Creighton Hale, George Cooper, Polly Moran, Gibson Gowland, Lionel Belmore, William Orlamond, Harry Gribbon, and Ralph Yearsley. Directed by Lucien Hubbard. Released February 11. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: This one was adapted from the musical comedy of the same title. Rose-Marie, belle of a Canadian trading post, falls in love with Jim, who is accused of murder. On her promise to go with him when he leaves the post, he tells her that she will refuse at the last moment. She promises to let him know by singing the Indian love call. She does sing it—when her father insists on her marrying Etienne. As they go down the river to their home, there is a flood. Jim saves them. But as the flood threatens them again, Etienne lets himself drown, so that Rose-Marie may have the man she loves.

SHOWDOWN, THE: Paramount drama, with George Bancroft, Evelyn Brent, Neil Hamilton, Fred Kohler, Helene Lynch, Arnold Kent, Leslie Fenton, and George Kuwa. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Released February 25. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: The plot speaks for itself: There are Cardan, the silent; Winter, the brutal; Pickerell, the scheming; and Kilgore Shelton, the weak kid, down in Mexico—in Tampico—fighting for oil, which means, in a moment, wealth and power. Then Wilson Shelton comes, bringing his wife, Sibyl. She is one woman; there are five men. And so the story proceeds: Kilgore, her brother-in-law, makes love to her. Pickerell invades her room. Winter attacks her. Cardan saves her from all three—saves her because he loves her. . . . Then the husband goes to the hills to inspect the oil property. Sibyl, breaking down, begs Cardan to take her. But he waits. . . . The husband returns and he and Cardan cut cards to see who takes the oil property. To Cardan, the wife is included. Just at the cut, the oil well spouts its gold, returning the wife to the embraces of her husband. Cardan trudges off down the river.

SOFT LIVING: Fox comedy-drama, with Madge Bellamy, John Mack Brown, Mary Duncan, Joyce Compton, Thomas Jefferson, Henry Kolker, Olive Tell, Maine Geary, Tom Dugan, and David Wengren. Directed by James Tinling. Released February 5. Length 5,629.

TYPE AND THEME: The divorce game as it is (only too often) played. But the results are satisfactory in this case. Nancy is secretary to a successful divorce lawyer, who gets large sums for alimony from the former husbands of his clients. This makes her disgusted with marriage. But Lorna, one of the prosperous clients, overcomes this disgust by showing Nancy how she can provide for herself, too. Nancy marries a rich lumberman, but he quickly gets on to her game and decides to outwit her by forcing her to be a dutiful wife. Nancy appeals to Lorna for help, but Lorna, she finds, is interested only because she would like to marry Nancy's husband. Nancy discovers that she wants to stay married after all.

SPORTING GOODS: Paramount comedy-drama, with Richard Dix, Ford Sterling, Gertrude Olmstead, Philip Strange, Myrtle Stedman, Wade Boteler, Claude King, and Maude Turner Gordon. Directed by Malcolm St. Clair. Released February 11. Length 5,951.

TYPE AND THEME: Of the racy humorous type, in which the hero looks bad for awhile but wins the girl in the end. On his way to California to exploit his newly invented golf suit, Dix runs across a millionaire going East in his Rolls Royce. The car breaks down, the millionaire takes the train, and Dix takes the R. R. to the home of native sons. But on the way he gives a lift to Gertrude Olmstead and her mother, promptly falling in love with the former. And she, liking him, wires ahead for rooms at her expensive hotel. That puts Dix into a jam, because he, you know, is practically broke. Still, he goes through with that and a lot more and when he finally puts over the golf suit thing, he and Gertrude and everything are all o. k.

STAND AND DELIVER: Pathe melodrama, with Rod LaRocque, Lupe Velez, Warner Oland, Louis Natheaux, James Dime, A. Palasthy, Frank Lanning, Bernard Siegel, Clarence Burton, and Charles Stevens. Directed by Donald Crisp. Released March 12. Length 5,423.

TYPE AND THEME: About a fellow who is bored by peace. So he goes to Greece. There he has a fine time, joining the army, rescuing a pretty girl (Lupe Velez is very pretty) from a burning house, rescuing her again from an impulsive army officer, and what-not. In the brawl the officer is killed, quite by accident, of course, but the formerly bored young man has to flee. He and the girl find retreat in the hills, and rather than be killed, he joins a bandit clan. But pretty soon they both make their escape—and it seems (for the picture ends at that point) that she will keep him from getting bored thereafter.

Your Classified Ad Will Do the Work!

Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organists all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and also in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 10c per word. See this week's classified page. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.

PRESS SHEETS

BARE KNEES (Gotham comedy-drama): Offer an award for the best essay on "Bare Knees." Arrange with the local newspaper to print the best essay entered in the contest. You can also carry the story on your show program and continue a part of it for a length of time. If you have a cigarette maker in your town, arrange with him to pay for half of the following advertising: "All the girls roll them, but when it comes to rolling cigarettes, they choose (Name of Cigarettes)." Have the preceding ad printed on teasers and thrown around the town. You can use the same idea for hat shops. Teasers can be printed with the following: "Girls of today may have 'Bare Knees' but they do not go bare headed. They use (Name of Hat) when they go out." Also have the date of the showing on this advertisement. Other tie-ups can be made with shoe shops, with same kind of copy used.

THE BLUE DANUBE (Pathe drama): If there are several music teachers in your town whose pupils might be induced to take part in a "Blue Danube" contest, you can offer a small prize to the one playing the piece the best. Also try to arrange for a contest in the theatre and let the audience choose the winner. Also offer a free pass to the oldest and youngest couple dancing to this waltz. Have your dealers in victrolas and talking machines to play "Blue Danube" waltz records in their stores and have placards calling attention to the forthcoming presentation, "The Blue Danube," at your theatre. Place a victrola in front of your theatre and play continuously a "Blue Danube" record.

BRONCO STOMPER, THE (Pathe Western): Arrange for a bronco contest prize to be given to the best rider in town. You can also give a free pass to all children bringing a horse on which you can post a sign with the date of the showing and have them parade the town. Prizes can be awarded to the best essay on "Why do you like Westerns?" or "What part of a Western don't you like?" Arrange with your newspaper to have it carry the best essay, also the picture of the person writing it.

FLEETWING (Fox melodrama): A suggestion for a drawing contest which may be divided into three classifications—entrants younger than 14, those from 14 to 18, and those older than 18. The subject to be drawn may be a horse or a desert scene. The winter in each class is judged for quality of drawing and originality of treatment. If possible, get the newspaper to sponsor the contest. For judges, choose one from the newspaper and some prominent person in your town. The best drawing should be framed and put on display in the lobby. The best drawing can

First Studio Was in San Francisco-Bosworth

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14.—The whitewashed shed at Sunset boulevard and Vine Street in Hollywood is usually pointed out as being the first film studio on the Pacific coast, this being where Al Christie and a group of comedians started work years ago. But Hobart Bosworth is firm in his contention that the first studio was in Greater San Francisco. During a recent visit here with friends he talked about the old days and declared that he starred in the first picture, "The Roman," and that Robert Z. Leonard, the director, took the part of his son. Bosworth was playing at the time at the Alcazar theatre, while Leonard was singing with the Ferris Hartman Opera company at Idora Park. "While the first studio was in Oakland, the first picture was finished at Los Angeles," said Bosworth. "Colonel William Selig sent Francis Boggs, a director, from Chicago to film some scenes in San Francisco's Chinatown, and some in Los Angeles. I joined them in Los Angeles, where I was stage director at the old Morosco theatre Francisco, where we rented the car barn on Grove street."

be reproduced in the newspaper. For tack cards and signboards, carry the word, "Flee," as a teaser for a few days. A day or so later add the T, and a bit later add, "Win." Finally, complete the title and give details of showing.

LADY RAFFLES (Columbia drama): A novel teaser stunt consists of having tack cards or stickers printed, carrying the legend, "Beware of Lady Raffles. Try the theatre and you are sure to find 'Lady Raffles,' the most talked-of woman in town. You will meet her at the theatre (date)." Arrange with your jeweler to display a window with inexpensive pieces, have the following sign with the display: "'Lady Raffles' at the theatre is a judge of jewelry; but she would have to go a long way to beat this display." Have a safe placed in your lobby and place in it a little prize or a ticket and announce that the person opening it can have what it contains. Print various combinations and have them scattered about the town with the following: "This might open the safe at the theatre and get a valuable prize."

LATEST FROM PARIS, THE (M-G-M comedy-drama): Teasers with the following can be tossed around the town: "Due Saturday, a shipment of laughs 'The Latest from Paris,' at the theatre (date)." Another can be used with, "En route to this theatre, the fastest romance, 'The Latest from Paris,' due (date)." Run a contest for the best dressed girl in town. Give coupon tickets to each person entering your show the week preceding the showing. You can make an arrangement that each ticket can be worth 5 or 10 votes. The patrons can turn in their tickets with the name of the person have the girl's picture in the paper. Announce before the showing, by posters around the town, that you will have such a contest.

OLD IRONSIDES (Paramount melodrama): Through your newspaper run an essay contest on "Old Ironsides" and the part she played in the war. Have the paper print the best essay and distribute passes through the newspaper for the best essay printed each day. The same can be applied for the best drawing on the ship "Ironsides." In your local department stores where they have a window display of boats, arrange to have your announcement of the picture in with them. Have a contest for the best talk on "Old Ironsides" to be held at the theatre. A free pass can be given to the winner. Hire a wagon or an auto to circle the town with a boat built on it, having the date of the picture to be shown and the name of your theatre. Give a prize for the best boat made by the children under some limit of age.

ROSE-MARIE (M-G-M comedy-drama): Organize with the co-operation of local newspaper and merchants, the idea being to have an unknown girl designated simply as "Rose-Marie," to make a tour of the streets, shops, and stores of your city between specified hours. Tie up with automobile agencies and public transportation companies. Have your newspaper publish identification clues daily and to reproduce masked photos of this mysterious unknown girl, or side or back views not easily recognizable. Rules can be made that the person must have a copy of the latest paper when saying, "You are (local paper's) 'Rose-Marie.'" A free ticket can be given to the person recognizing "Rose-Marie." Tie up with your music dealer to let you have a space in his window in which you can advertise the picture with the sheet music "Rose-Marie."

SPORTING GOODS (Paramount comedy-drama): Athletic supply stores can be sold the imprint space on the heralds with copy like this, "When it comes to Sporting Goods' there is no place like (Name of Store), for purchasing whatever you desire in that line." (Both male and female apparel shops sell sport clothes, and the same tieup may be effected with them.) "We have the 'sporting goods' that you need for that golf suit, riding outfit, or tennis costume. The proper clothing for that particular sport occasion can always be had at (Name of Store)." Have a man dress in a golf suit similar to the one used in the picture and to shoulder a golf club with a banner suspended from it with your play date and the title on it, to parade the town. You can arrange for a golf tournament the day preceding the showing, and the winner can be given the prize on the stage the next day.

STAND AND DELIVER (Pathe drama): Have a few people dressed as bandits march through your principal streets, headed by one or two buglers, who also are garbed as Grecian soldiers. Have them carry a banner displaying the title of the picture and the date to be shown. Teasers like the following can be thrown around the town: "Wanted—The Greek government has offered a reward for the arrest of Roger Norman, an Englishman who recently joined the Grecian army, charged with killing his commanding officer in a dispute over a girl known as Jania. The latter alleges the officer died as the result of an accident. Bulletins regarding the matter will be read at the showing of 'Stand and Deliver' at the theatre (date)."

Looks like a backfire from the late war. Instead, "it's" John A. Bockhorst, M-G-M News cameraman, with his new contraption to keep the cold from snapping off his whiskers, when and if any.

Now "All Aboard" means "Start the Picture." Pathe's "The Night Flyer" was shown this way in New York. It's a novelty of the recreation cars of the Raymond-Whitcomb tours.

LETTERS From Readers

A forum at which the exhibitor is invited to express his opinion on matters of current interest. Brevity adds forcefulness to any statement. Unsigned letters will not be printed.

Objects to Advertisement

LENA, WIS.—TO THE EDITOR: Ever since I read, "We can afford to get good and boiled," in EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD of January 21, 1928, I boiled. I wanted to write my protest immediately, if not sooner, but thought it best to wait until I stopped boiling, if you know what I mean! But if this is a sample of the young blood M-G-M is always shouting about, why not try a little brains? I suppose they do run out of ideas, but I bet that ad writer had to sit up nights to think of that one. If they had spoken for themselves, I'd say O. K.

What do other exhibitors think of that for a clever ad? I'm no prohibitionist, either. I was born in Milwaukee—Nuf sed! But why waste a perfectly good front page on such a poor ad?

Now that I'm started, I'm going to rave on.

Firstly, I agree so heartily with "T. O." on all he said about "Seventh Heaven," that's a picture that is a picture. I saw it in Milwaukee at Christmas time and haven't gotten over it yet. Every time I turn on the radio and hear "Diane," it is 11, and I see Chico speaking to Diane or vice versa and I am thrilled. I raved on so about that picture that I got some folks from here to drive down 35 miles to Green Bay to see it, as we do not play Fox pictures.

Spaking about "Heaven," that's what it would be for an exhibitor if he could pick out all the good pictures from each company and just show those to his patrons.

Here we are in a village of 500 with good surrounding farm territory and play just two changes a week. Sometimes only playing Sundays. So it doesn't take second sight to realize that we can't play all the pictures put out by all the companies. But try and pick out just five or six pictures from any one company. It is to laugh.

If there is anyone who does read the reports we send to EXHIBITORS HERALD I'd like them to know that it is not just our personal opinion of a picture alone, but, also the feel of our audience. You notice I say "we" (Lindy hasn't a copyright on that word has he?) because our reports are written by me but are the talked over, hashed over ideas of both hubby and little me, plus audience reaction. I always sit in the audience and try honestly to feel their pulse! And folks here do tell us what they think as this is not a personal venture but run by a committee from the American Legion Post here, the buying of pictures and managing going to my better one tenth!!

A lot of jobs naturally fall to me, because I'm so darn interested, pardon, and because hubby had his own business to manage, and this must be just a hobby to him. A man could never make a living in a place this size, just owning a picture house. Do I hear any protests? The committee all give their time and do not get a cent. Don't misunderstand, they do not want any money for themselves from this venture. But the Post here isn't getting rich either, and we are very careful in buying. But as attending the movies is a habit, we are trying to give it to as many as we can here, and are getting a steadily growing patronage.

Please don't send me a bill for printing this book!! What you don't care to listen to—cut. I do think six reels is plenty, myself.—Mrs. L. L. NETZER, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.

"Let's Cut Out the Smut"

GRISWOLD, IA.—TO THE EDITOR: I am very much surprised to note so many pictures with smutty scenes in them. Can the producers and distributors tell me why this is? Do they think that the movie patron and the public want that class of entertainment?

How Have YOU Solved Chautauqua Competition?

Here is an opportunity to help another exhibitor, whose name is withheld for obvious reasons. The exhibitor writes to "Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" as follows:

"We are making an attempt (this theatre) to keep Chautauqua out of this town next year. Could you aid in the preparation of a speech to show the superiority of the theatre to chautauqua, the need of supporting a home institution first, etc., etc. Our town is paying $1,800 for one week of chautauqua that is, frankly, rotten! We are giving them the cream of all pictures in this theatre—Paramount, M-G-M, and the pick of United Artists, Universal, Pathe and others.

"We know we are in the right and we want a chance to prove it. I want to appeal to the Rotary club first. Could you give me any proof that chautauquas aren't as 'profit-sharing' as they're supposed to be or anything of that nature?"

Considerable material has been provided this exhibitor, but you can help a great deal by sending in to this department some notes on specific instances in which you have solved this problem. How about it, exhibitors?

If they do I think they are badly mistaken. Eighty-five per cent of the movie patrons don't like smut in pictures. Why force them to see such pictures, why not produce clean pictures and leave the smut out. I think the only way to kill censorship and get Sunday shows is to produce clean pictures. I hope that in the near future the smut will be left out of pictures.—P. G. HELD, Strand theatre, Griswold, Ia.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating report received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

Columbia

SALLY IN OUR ALLEY: Shirley Mason—They made "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and now comes along with another wow! That's "Sally in Our Alley," Six reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

BY WHOSE HAND: Special cast—January 30. A clever little crook story, suitable for a program picture. Comments were divided, some liked it, and some did not. Six reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

THE TIGRESS: Special cast—Quite unusual story and interesting, might say that many of my patrons stopped at the window and told how well they enjoyed the picture. Jack Holt is doing his best work in The Tigress, and Columbia is not making any mistake in tying up with Jack Holt and Dorothy Revier, while she has never been given the credit, she would have been a very capable person, and will give a good performance whenever given a chance. Balance of cast very very good. Business better than average. Six reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

F B O

THE MAGIC GARDEN: Special cast—75%. February 1. This Porter story went ever best of any we have played, for part of picture where it has juvenile actors (the best we remember seeing) it certainly clicks with family trade. We were fortunate in having a good violin with our piano and this picture almost demands it. My advice is play it, and play it big. Seven reels.—O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgeway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

JAKE THE PLUMBER: Special cast—Played this with "Return of Boston Blackie," glad I had something with it. I am sure it could not stand alone. I'll see the next one Jess makes before I play it. "Return of Boston Blackie" with Strongheart is good.—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

DEAD MAN'S CURVE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—We informed our patrons not much picture on strength of a preview we previously read in some of the trade papers, however, agreeably surprised to find 80% of the large Saturday night crowd, said fine, and full of action. It's up to the average. Six reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

THE SONORA KID: Tom Tyler—Not up to Tyler's past standards. Of course, the producer had to bring in that old stuff about the cowboy wanting to be like one of King Arthur's round table knights. This one, though, can get by because it was different in that suit of armor that was used for a disguise by various characters in the story. Advertising was fair. Five reels.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—Small town patronage.

BULLDOG PLUCK: Bob Custer—The Western whirlwind at his fighting best. Give Khattar's enough Custers and we'll play them once a week. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

BEYOND THE ROCKIES: Bob Custer—Another hummer from Bob. Drew good and a wow! Custer is a big favorite and always brings the house down. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

HAIR TRIGGER BAXTER: Bob Custer—Strike another one for Bob. Custer is a sure draw and always pleases 100%. Five reels.—George Khattar,

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given picture in report).

When a picture has received percentage ratings in 10 reports it is entered in THE BOX OFFICE TICKER with its current gross average indicating relative attraction values of pictures listed therein.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER appears on page 57.

Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—January 18. Gene Stratton Porter's stories seem to get in the ladies and please most of them, although "The Harvester" did not please as well as some of her other stories. Eight reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Natalie Kingston—Had F B O assembled a cast, this certainly would have been a wonderful picture. As it is, Gene Stratton Porter's name draws them in. This title drew much better than "The Magic Garden" or "Laddie," and almost as good as "Keeper of the Bees." Seven reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

THE COWARD: Warner Baxter—January 28. Judging from all the comments, this was a good show. Some very good outdoor shots. Print good and in general a pleasing picture that may be shown any day of the week. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

OUTLAW DOG: Ranger—Pretty good dog opera, dog doing some good work, but the ducky stole the show. He was good for many good laughs and kept the thing from flopping. Comments on the picture very good. Five reels.—Charles Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

GLENISTER OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED: Lefty Flynn—Another great picture from Lefty that was well received. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

ROSE OF THE TENEMENTS: Viola Dana—Good, the old story, what fools men are. Wonderful moral to this story, don't be afraid of it. Seven reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

NO MAN'S LAW: Bob Custer—Another bang up Western thriller, the kind our fans like and the box office proves that. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

LET'S GO GALLAGHER: Tom Tyler—Strike another good one for Tom and his unbeatable pals. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

THE MERRY CAVALIER: Richard Talmadge—Another thrill and fun show. Talmadge's one always good, this is no exception. F B O sure puts out good paper on all their features. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

A REGULAR SCOUT: Fred Thomson—January 14. Drew pretty well and pleased the kids more than the adults. Showed to satisfactory business. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE ARIZONA STREAK: Tom Tyler—Tom has another good one here. Tyler isn't a good drawing card here yet, but he'll soon be a good draw. A good and clean Western. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

First National

THE TEXAS STEER: Special cast—60%. January 20-21. Well it has its funny spots and there are one or two very funny scenes. I don't think it is to be classed as a special and it certainly isn't a box-office wow. Eight reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard—80%. January 6-7. This is not a Western but a picture dealing with Indians and the border troops. It has plenty of action and is very interesting and entertaining. Ken is a real rider and has a chance to do his stuff in this picture. Tarzan is quite a little actor and helps put this picture over. Seven reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard—Ken Maynard rings the bell. A good box office attraction.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

LOST AT THE FRONT: Special cast—65%. January 27-28. Dandy good comedy with plenty of laughs that gave satisfaction, but not particularly a special. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

LOST AT THE FRONT: Special cast—January 15. Considered a very good comedy with a number of real hearty laughs. Sold to us as a special. We paid too much for this one, and while the attendance was a little better than the average, yet net results were less. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

PRINCE OF HEADWAITERS: Lewis Stone—50%. January 27. This is an extra good picture. Star, cast and story all good.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

AN AFFAIR OF THE FOLLIES: Special cast—75%. January 21. Here is a splendid picture, good story, extra fine, fast and good comedy. It is about the best we have had in a long time and pleased everyone. Seven reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

TWINKLETOES: Colleen Moore—65%. January 9-10. Different from the general run but it pleased and they are asking for the next one. Colleen always draws me a housefull and she has never made a picture that didn't hit for me. I'd like to have a nice big picture of Colleen to hang up and admire. Eight reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE STRONG MAN: Harry Langdon—30%. January 30-31. A good feature length comedy but my patrons don't know Langdon and I had a small crowd. The few who were present seemed to enjoy his antics. Seven reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Special cast—Don't miss this one, it comes closer to being a special than anything that has been on the screen for a blue moon, and while Dorothy Mackaill is quite some society maid she is positively sweet, as a little coffee girl. Jack Mulhall and Dorothy put over some spooning that will give them all something to shoot at, the entire cast is better than average, and Edith Chapman does a characterization that is the best that has been done by anyone in a long time. Dorothy and Jack, keep fighting it out on these lines as far as I am concerned—you are the best team on the screen. Six reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Special cast—February 5-6. Here is a real honest to goodness pleasing picture. This team pleases them here and it was a satisfied audience that went home last night. Haven't heard so many good comments in many weeks. Six reels.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, Ohio.—General patronage.

FIGHTING COURAGE: Ken Maynard—January 28—The first time Ken Maynard as star shown in Saintry. He has won the patrons of this house.—Earl N. Conway, Electric theatre, St. Francis, Kan.—General patronage.

THE LIFE OF RILEY: Special cast—Fine comedy to good business.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

BREAKFAST AT SUNRISE: Constance Talmadge—Quite a pretentious offering from standpoint of dressing up such as sets, etc. But it takes more than sets to make a picture that has general appeal, and this does not have anything to appeal. It may be attractive to the so-called flapper, but I did not have enough flappers to make a good crowd. Seven reels.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.—General patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Special cast—Rather weak. Business fair, patrons disappointed.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—This subject on college life was liked very much here. You can boost it. Seven reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

ROSE OF THE GOLDEN WEST: Special cast—January 29-30. This picture failed to draw the business we expected, quite a few people liked it but it's not a money maker. Seven reels.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, Ohio.—General patronage.

HIGH HATS: Special cast—February 2. Just such pictures as this will put the small town exhibitor out of business. Very poor, and your patrons tell you so as they pass out.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—Small town patronage.

GREY VULTURE: Ken Maynard—Another crackerjack from Maynard and his marvel house Tarzan. Play it boys. Five reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

THE CRYSTAL CUP: Dorothy Mackaill—A poor attraction for a small town. Seven reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

THE CRYSTAL CUP: Dorothy Mackaill—Very light. Poor business.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE TENDER HOUR: Billie Dove—January 29. Would not consider this a special for a small town exhibitor. However, a fair picture with plenty beautiful scenes and some thrills. Played a number of pictures at one-quarter the rental that gave better satisfaction. Eight reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HARDBOILED HAGERTY: Milton Sills—Would have been a splendid program attraction had not the director put in some pretty raw stuff such as Sills' cat scene, the scene where the girl almost strips, and the scene where the cabaret dancer lifts her skirt and shows her panties. This sort of gaff is not pleasing to the better class of patrons and is somewhat unusual for First National. The picture, otherwise, was fine. Producers should remember that vulgarity drives not draws patronage.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—Small town patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—45%. January 16-17. Here is a real comedy-drama and boy! how they like to look at it. I didn't do any phenomenal business but it certainly makes you feel good to have your patrons tell you how they enjoyed the picture. The last reel is in technicolor and makes a wonderful showing to top off a funny show.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Special cast—Hines material and type of story are too much the same in each picture. He is not as strong at the box office as formerly.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

SMILE BROTHER SMILE: Special cast—Nice little show but not very strong at the box office.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

NO PLACE TO GO: Special cast—Very light entertainment. Light business.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE NOTORIOUS LADY: Lewis Stone—January 25. Considered a pretty good program picture. Story and scenery a little different than the usual run. Title does not draw. Seven reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

ORCHIDS AND ERMINE: Colleen Moore—Pleased. Colleen we want a different kind of a picture, something unusual. Seven reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

THE OVERLAND STAGE: Ken Maynard—We have played three of this star's Westerns, and odd, in face of all good reports, we are compelled to say we do not find his Westerns any greater than other ordinary Westerns. He is not to be compared to Tyler, Steele, Jones, or Mix. This is the worst of the three we have played. Six reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Special cast—Colleen supreme. Fine crowd.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

Fox

OUTLAWS OF RED RIVER: Tom Mix—55%. January 23-24. Tom and Tony did it again. Plenty of action and that is what my patrons crave when they come to see Tom and Tony. I guess it is about as good as the rest he has made and I would have done more business but ran it the first of the week. Six reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE GAY RETREAT: Special cast—67%. December 31. It's a scream and a knockout of a finish. Stand at the door after the show, you'll get a kick out of it.—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—100%. November 24. This is the picture I figure my percentage from. It is a man's picture but the ladies will like it, too. Can't say I would like any of it cut if I had to play it again.—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—December 7-8. All the good things said by other exhibitors about this picture is hereby okayed. The picture itself was one hundred per cent, but receipts were about fifty per cent which only goes to show that the percentage of gross does not in any way reflect the value of the picture. Twelve reels.—Peter Bylsma, Victory theatre, Napoleonville, La.—Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—A flop here at the box office. Played in cold stormy weather in January. A great show, nevertheless. Twelve reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

SLAVES OF BEAUTY: Special—25%. Jan. 26. A good entertaining program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

WHISPERING SAGE: Buck Jones—65%. Jan. 13-14. A good Western and as Buck has a following here it pleased them all. Five reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE WIZARD: Special cast—70%. January 7. A good mystery drama. One of Fox new product. Our patrons seemed to like this one, but the Ape in this one scared me stiff. Seven reels.—Minnie M. Schnoor, Paramount theatre, Stapleton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Special cast—December 25-26. This picture is deservedly one of the acknowledged outstanding productions of 1927, and ranks with the top-notchers. The bombastic but really good-hearted Chico was ably portrayed by Farrell, while Miss Gaynor, as the friendless waif, hungry for love and idolizing the one who first befriended her, however grudgingly done, was really marvelous for one so young. Both of these young people are destined for greater things, even providing, of course, they do not become unduly inflated with their first real taste of success. Eleven reels.—Peter Bylsma, Victory theatre, Napoleonville, La.—Small town patronage.

LOVES OF CARMEN: Special cast—January 28. This is a good picture and Miss Del Rio does some splendid acting in this, it's a little spicy but not enough to hurt. This picture did not prove to be a drawing card here. I should think it would go over in larger towns, with plenty of advertising. I would not class this as a small town picture. Nine reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

LOVES OF CARMEN: Special cast—Have seen all of the previous versions of Carmen but this tops them all. Dolores Del Rio has surely come to the front. The performance of McLaglen was excellent as usual. He doesn't act but lives his role. This picture should go over as a special anywhere.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Leubec, Me.—General patronage.

THE JOY GIRL: Olive Borden—This was rather a flashy show in spots but as a whole weak as to story. The technicolor was clever and won favorable comment. The print I secured was rather dark but in fairness to Fox will say that this is the first print of their's that was not wholly O. K.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

PAID TO LOVE: George O'Brien—Excellent entertainment, although we are accustomed to George in more active reels. Seven reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

SILK LEGS: Madge Bellamy—January 26. This picture should go allright where Miss Bellamy is liked, as it is up to her standard. A pleasing program picture, was liked here. Personally Miss Bellamy is one of my favorite actresses. Six reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

THE RETURN OF PETER GRIMM: Special cast—Very good if your patrons care for something serious. Our fans said fair and the cash said rotten. Six reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

THE MONKEY TALKS: Olive Borden—Fair program attraction that was quite novel in its theme. Not the special Bill Fox said it would be but it is interesting. Jacques Lerner as the monkey who could talk played a neat part and all the credit should go to him. Don Alvarado and Olive Borden were in the picture and that's all. Weak paper. Six reels.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—Small town patronage.

MARRIAGE: Virginia Valli—Fair program attraction that pleased the few who saw it. Advertised it as one of the best novels of H. G. Wells in pictures but not many in the country know who or what Wells is. Poor paper. No drawing power. Attendance less on second night. Direction seemed weak.

FT. WORTH, TEX., February 3, 1928.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

We are back in the "Lone Star" state and if our disposition keeps pace with our appetite we can see that we are going to have a lotta fun with these Long Horns, and if the boys all treat us as nice as De Witt Feegles of the Rex theatre did we are liable to pitch our wigwam and establish a permanent address somewhere between the Red and Rio Grande rivers until further notice. P. S.—Be sure and attach plenty of postage.

De Witt took us around town and showed us a lot of buildings that are so tall they'd make Pork Center look like Petroleum V. Nasby's "Confederate Cross Roads." This would be a good place to hold both national conventions; they could get up so high that the public couldn't smell 'em.

De Witt is an old time showman, having started in the business back in the days when Broncho Billy killed 13 in the first reel and continued to enlarge the graveyard until the end of the show. He has been prominently identified with the growth of the city, and thereby hangs a tale, the tale being that Ft. Worth owes no small part of her growth to De Witt. But things have changed; Ft. Worth has bobbed her hair and put on silk hosiery and the filling stations are giving the chain theatres a run for their money, with the odds in favor of the producers of petroleum. Let 'em fight; it's a good scrap.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Somehow we can't get away from the habit of turning to "Service Talks" every time we pick up the HERALD-WORLD. There is something about the way Tommy tells things that gives us a giggle. He's one critic in a million; the rest of 'em are nil, including the writer of this "COLYUM." (We'd like to know how they come to spell Column that way; wonder if it is intended as a joke on us.) But what we are trying to get at is, if you have been quitting the table before they brought on the dessert you have been losing out; better turn to "SERVICE TALKS" the first thing when you grab up the HERALD-WORLD and then you won't miss anything. Whenever Thomas and we agree as to the merits of a picture it gives us a better outlook on life and we drop a nickel instead of a penny on the bass drum. We have never found Thomas wrong but once, and that time we guess he was right. You remember about "SEVENTH HEAVEN"?

Following an old-time custom, when we picked up the current issue of the HERALD-WORLD we turned to "SERVICE TALKS" and noted Tommy's criticism of "THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY," and glancing across the street from our fourth story window we noted that the Palace had this picture on the screen, so we said to ourself, says we, here's where we prove up on Tommy, so we laid aside the hod and pulled ourself out of a very comfortable rocking chair and went across the street and slid 50 per cent of a perfectly good American dollar across the glass and went in with a determination of finding where Thomas had slipped a cog or two in his opinion of this picture.

T. O. never slipped a cog. His carburetor was working fine and he didn't have a flat no time nor no place, but what we couldn't nuderstand is why that old king didn't get sore instead of wanting to go fishing when that durned prince inveigled Helen into going over to Troy and spending the week end in his hacienda all by their lonesome. If it had been "Fishy" Phil or that bullhead fisher at Wayne we wouldn't have wondered at it, or even H. J. Longaker, but for a king, gosh but he was easy; we have known people just like bim and that's what made the picture so true to life and that's what keeps Reno and Hollywood on the map. We don't blame Helen for falling for that prince, that old king was too durn slow, even at our age we would have been faster than he was. We would like to see Frank O'Hara, that Rabbi at Elgin, Neb., play the part of that prince, for after he had gotten his shillalah in action there would be more sore heads in that king's army than there will be in the Democratic party after the next presidential election. Yes, Thomas O. was right, just as he always is, except that one time when he stepped on us with both feet, and then Gallo took us on and pretty nearly finished us. If we were you boys we'd play "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" and give our customers a real treat, so now that's that and you can scratch your own back.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

If the HERALD-WORLD doesn't stop publishing such pictures as Miss Lorraine Eddy, shown in the pictorial section of the current issue, we are liable to slip back 30 or 40 years and get even more foolish than we now are, and that would be terrible, and still people ask

Others in cast besides Miss Valli unknown here. We give it the benefit of the doubt by saying it is fair only. Six reels.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—Small town patronage.

HILLS OF PERIL: Buck Jones—January 27-28. A very good Western and it pleased. I have a large following for Jones and he delivers most of the time. Five reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MARRIAGE: Special cast—Rotten, the worse picture in many months, that's what our patrons said of it. Keep away from this lemon. Seven reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Napoleon—50%. January 18-19. I think that this is a very clever and entertaining mystery story with the dog-star doing some very good work. It is a pleasant surprise to get a picture like this from Metro-Goldwyn. They're not in the habit of putting out good pictures at a reasonable price. Seven reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Special cast—If I had advertised this as a dog picture I would have starved to death, but as a mystery picture I had the best week-end business this season.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

SPRING FEVER: William Haines—65%. February 1-2. This picture was certainly enjoyed by a mighty good crowd but am not so sure that this drew the business. I have been running a serial and it has a big following so guess they would have come in anyway. I am not so crazy about Metro but was one of the easy ones and got hooked 'cause I wanted the two big ones. The service I get from them is awful and will sure be a happy human when I am through with them. Seven reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: John Gilbert—75%. December 27-28-29. A wonderful picture with superb acting by Gilbert, Dane and Adoree. Drew a fairly good crowd in very cold weather. Play it by all means. Twelve reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Special cast—Very good but worth about half of "Ben Hur" prices. Too many war pictures took the edge off its drawing power.—

J. C. Jenkins—His Colyum

why "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." The answer is found in Miss Eddy's picture. Look her over, boys, she's a pippin.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

To our peanut mind about the best bit of comedy that has ever been pulled off in the business is that gathering at Pork Center to haggle over the Uniform Contract. It's the biggest piece of camouflage and horse play that we know of, and, for the sake of argument, we are willing to admit that we don't know a thing about it, but that would be our opinion whether in Bad Ax, Mich., Neillsville, Wis., Chandler, Okla. or Ft. Worth, Tex., and we don't care who knows it.

There are millions of dollars worth of merchandise sold in this country every day without the scratch of a pen and yet one would be led to believe that the Geneva Conference isn't a two spot in comparison to the importance of the Uniform Contract. If there is a sandhill lawyer in Nebraska or Kansas who hasn't the ability to draw a contract in less than 1000 words that will effectually bind both parties we hope he will be barred from practicing in any court of a justice of the peace either there or anywhere else.

If an exhibitor buys a $7.00 feature and a $2.00 comedy and has to put up the cash before he gets his hands on it, why waste so many sleepless nights over a specific kind of contract.

If the purpose of a Uniform Contract is to force the exhibitor to buy 60 pictures, 50 of which haven't even been made, and the contract is to be "negotiable" or used as "collateral," then why not get out in the open and say so. It reminds us of what a girl once said to us when we became rather enthusiastic over her rosy cheeks and ruby lips and said to us, "Well, if you want to kiss me why don't you quit talking so much and go ahead and do it." Since then we have talked less and used more speed, we find that it gets better results, all of which harks back to our former statement that we don't know a thing about it, which you no doubt have already guessed. Anyhow, we hope when the conference is over and the boys get the fresh beef off their eyes we can then settle down to a discussion of the Brookhart bill.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

Excuse us if we laugh a little at our old friend Raymond Gallo. You may or may not know that Raymond and the writer locked horns once in the editorial rooms of the HERALD-WORLD on the question of "Bandshow Presentation Acts" making the picture subordinate to the rest of the entertainment. Gallo took the negative side of the question while we tried to defend the affirmative, and when we finished there wasn't a soul in sight and even Eagle Eye Joe had taken to the brush. Just how much of the furniture remained intact we don't know, as we have never been presented with a bill. We wouldn't mention this matter only for the fact that we note in the current issue of the HERALD-WORLD that our esteemed friend is slipping a little from his former position. We quote from his letter in the current issue. "In Chicago the bandshow situation has reached a point where no matter which way you turn you are bound to see a similar class of entertainment and unless something unusual, or something of renown is appearing at these neighborhood houses no particular choice can be exercised in the selection of an evening's pleasure. This of course has endangered a number of the deluxe picture houses because too much of the same type of entertainment is driving the people away from their theatres into some other sort of recreation that may not be as expensive and yet as interesting."

Why, Raymond, dear, how could you? How could you desert a lifelong hobby in so cruel a manner? Remember it's a child of yours and how could you desert it on the cold, clammy shores of Lake Michigan without someone to act as wet nurse and warm its bottle. We are surprised at your cruelty. Just think of the poor child deserted and alone with no father to guide it and wallowing in the murk and mire of Michigan avenue, while from the distance comes the soothing strains of one of your jazz bands playing "Soapsuds Over the Fence" while you are writing articles disclaiming any relationship to the poor kid. We didn't think it was in you.

We don't know much, Raymond, never did and probably never will, but when we see a short horn bull charge through a china shop we know there is going to be some broken dishes, and we don't care how long his pedigree is, and we still maintain that when you subordinate the picture program to your jazz band music you are putting up the chains when there is nobody in the house. Think it over, son, and maybe some day you will say, "Well, I guess that old cuss was right," and then we will chip in and pay the HERALD-WORLD for that furniture.

J. C. JENKINS.
The HERALD-WORLD MAN.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—100%. January 25-26-27. A great production that will please all. This picture has more pull in the small town than "Big Parade," although personally I liked "The Big Parade" better. Should make every exhibitor some money. Thirteen reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—The world's greatest picture and the world's greatest box office attraction. Broke all records.—L. E. Palmer, Postville, theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE FIRE BRIGADE: Special cast—72%. February 4. Played this wonderful picture late, but had fairly good attendance and it pleased all 100%, as far as acting and photography is concerned. But why does Metro always drag in some profanity? As, for instance, in this picture, one title ending with "God Damn Your Soul" in big caps, could not the picture have been fully as good without this profanity to mar it? and are there not other who think as I do?—Ed. Vig, Ideal theatre, Belgrade, Minn.—Small town patronage.

THE FIRE BRIGADE: Special cast—The biggest and greatest fire melodrama ever made. A smashing success, the kind of a picture that builds prestige. Eight reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

ANNIE LAURIE: Special cast—15%. January 11-12. Oh boy! they could put me in jail for what I think about this but I had two patrons tell me that they liked it. I would advise you to show it on Sunday just for your own amusement and then ship it back.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

WEST POINT: William Haines—When next season's buying starts you are going to hear this one referred to as was "Slide Kelly Slide" and "Rookies" of last year, and deservedly so. It's some mighty sweet picture with entertainment. The kind that pleases all classes and affords good draw at the box office. I predict that this one will prove the hot-shot of Metro-Goldwyn's program pictures for this year. Nine reels.—Joe Hewitt, Strand theatre, Robinson, Ill.—General patronage.

IN OLD KENTUCKY: Special cast—A most pleasing picture of horse racing theme. Far better than many of the so called specials we have had. There are just a few war scenes, enough to bring the horse into the story then the picture returns to the plantation and track. You will make no mistake on this one if you push it to the limit. It has got the goods.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Leubec, Me.—General patronage.

BODY AND SOUL: Special cast—February 1-2. It sure hurts when they stick it in like these. Some said the picture was pretty fair but it doesn't get any money at the box office. Lay off or play it one day. Metro young blood! Ha! Ha! Bring on the monkey glands.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, Ohio.—General patronage.

THE GARDEN OF ALLAH: Special cast—Very good picture to good business. Everyone pleased in spite of sad ending. I believe the public is beginning to accept those endings for which all exhibitors should be thankful.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE BUGLE CALL: Special cast—Jackie Coogan always seems to get good business for me. This is only a fair attraction too.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

ADAM AND EVIL: Special cast—Clever little comedy. Some excellent double photography. The two principals were fine but their support weak in spots. Had many favorable comments from patrons and everybody seemed to enjoy it.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Leubec, Me.—General patronage.

TWELVE MILES OUT: John Gilbert—January 23. A dandy picture and pleased the majority. Some patrons remarked that they did not like John Gilbert in this type of story, most of the lady patrons. As a whole would consider this picture good entertainment. Eight reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

SLIDE KELLY SLIDE: William Haines—A dandy baseball picture that seemed to hit. Seven reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

THE UNKNOWN: Lon Chaney—January 16. Very good, but not one of his best, showed to small house on account he has no drawing power especially among the women.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—Small town patronage.

FRISCO SALLY LEVY: Special cast—A very good comedy-drama. A good attraction for St. Patrick's Day. Eight reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

BATTLING BUTLER: Buster Keaton—February 1. Just a fair program picture.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Paramount

HULA: Clara Bow—70%. December 12. When Clara Bow was here in "It" she made a host of good people her friends. She made a reputation. When she was here in "Hula" she made different kinds of friends, and she made notoriety. As the mercury went up in the glass of notoriety, it took a corresponding fall in reputation. The good people who were delighted with the little girl who captivated the tired young business man in "It" when she said to him, "Come and let us have some fun," as they looked at her go through the Oriental dances in "Hula" their faces fell. They saw Clara Bow at a new slant, an actress the most brilliant and the most on the screen. Clara Bow has something more than talent, she has genius. You cannot make any rules for genius, genius makes the rules. Clara Bow! Thou art the best of the hip wigglers.—A. J. Gibbons, Illinois theatre, Metropolis, Ill.—General patronage.

HULA: Clara Bow—Clara Bow always brings in the dough.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

OLD IRONSIDES: Special cast—95%. February 1-2. A very good picture with action, thrills and everything to make a big picture. Be sure and get it. We made the mistake of paying too much for it and just breaking even. The picture is not worth much more than what we paid for "Beau Geste" and "The Rough Riders." However it pleased everyone who saw it. Put it on at top prices 25 and 50c and ran a special matinee for school children at 10c. Tie up with the school when you run this and you should go over big. Eight reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

SHE'S A SHEIK: Bebe Daniels—35%. January 16-17. A very clever picture with Bebe getting her man, and how! Richard Arlen a little silly at times but finally snaps out of it. Should please generally. Six reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—40%. January 23-24. Dix is a big favorite here and pleases well. This picture has more action than his previous releases and should satisfy both classes of patronage. Six reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

UNDERWORLD: George Bancroft—75%. November 19. Play this one—use plenty of paper. A dandy story of crook life and clean as a hound's tooth. Give Bancroft more of this type.—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

UNDERWORLD: Special cast—Better than "The Way of All Flesh" at the box office. Real entertainment.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

BARBED WIRE: Pola Negri—38%. December 24. Don't go by the percentage this one shows it is a wonderful story, well acted. Clive Brook in the male lead hits like a glove.—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

CHANG: Special cast—82%. January 14. For days after playing this picture I received many favorable comments on it, it will bring people to your theatre you never had before.—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

CHANG: Special cast—A great show but a flop in this small town, why, I don't know unless the extreme cold weather kept people away.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE WORLD AT HER FEET: Florence Vidor—33%. January 31. Not a bad picture. Had about three favorable comments. Florence Vidor is good but her pictures won't draw. Paramount has a lot like that. One can't make anything on them and a part of the time we don't pay out. Six reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

THE WORLD AT HER FEET: Florence Vidor—30%. January 22. A pleasing comedy drama. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

THE WORLD AT HER FEET: Florence Vidor—A drama of two married couples this time, instead of the eternal triangle, proving a good light entertainment. Seven reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

DRUMS OF THE DESERT: Special cast—75%. January 26. Zane Grey Western always draws a good house here and this is a very good picture although the story has not been read here. The name Zane Grey is a magnet to draw the people.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

DRUMS OF THE DESERT: Warner Baxter—A very good Zane Grey, sequel to "Vanishing American." A great two day show. Six reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—98%. December 15. It is a pleasure to meet the patrons after this show. Good entertainment. Good drawing power. It won't hurt your house to play "Beau Geste."—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—75%. January 29-30. This is a very fine picture. (A real special.) Gave satisfaction to all.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—January 3-4. Very good picture, but most too heavy for my patrons to understand until they had time to figure the picture out. Well acted and a wonderful production. Ten reels.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—Small town patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—Great picture to very good business.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

QUICKSANDS: Richard Dix—50%. January 24. A good snappy action picture. It rained, snowed and turned cold which accounts for the small per cent. Five reels.—Robert K. Yancey, Bonny theatre, Mansfield, Mo.—General patronage.

GET YOUR MAN: Clara Bow—Very pleasing picture from Clara. Rogers also was excellent as well as the rest of supporting cast. The story highly improbable yet good entertainment. The box pictures seem to increase our patronage a bit with each succeeding film. Step on them for all their worth.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Leubec, Me.—General patronage.

NOW WE'RE IN THE AIR: Special cast—Pretty rough and raw in spots and drags badly at the end but business was fair. Conditions financial, are very bad in this region at this time and business is about 33½ per cent off.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

"Our Exhibitors Club" Member No. 1

Philip Rand, known to the readers of the HERALD-WORLD as "Fishy Phil," has reported to the "What the Picture Did for Me" department every week and on every picture played (365) days during the year.

Mr. Rand is now elected president of the "Exhibitors Club" which is open to all exhibitors reporting to this department on every picture played during 10 or more successive weeks. Can you equal Mr. Rand's record, or how close can you come to it? Address the "Exhibitors Club" department of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—Fair enough, not a special but a good attraction, if you can make your public know that it's not just a Western. Hit sub-zero weather and business was very bad.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

SHANGHAI BOUND: Special cast—Stories as weak and colorless as this are going to ruin Dix. Paramount don't kill Dix like you did Meighan.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

SHOOTIN' IRONS: Special cast—Jack, O. K. A nice little Western. I wish they had made the other four as Paramount program always is short on action pictures.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

OPEN RANGE: Special cast—Very good Western but cold weather hit me hard. Paramount and First National (Ken Maynard) Westerns are really the only good ones.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE CITY GONE WILD: Thomas Meighan—Was lead to believe that this film was weak but it went over far better than "Underworld." Meighan seemed more like the Tom of old. Hope he continues to pull better material.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Leubec, Me.—General patronage.

FIREMEN SAVE MY CHILD: Special cast—Very ordinary but people, lots of them came to see it so Hatton and Beery seem to draw very well.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

TIN GODS: Thomas Meighan—January 29. Fine picture. Pleased 100%. Give us more like this.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—Small town patronage.

TIN GODS: Thomas Meighan—January 29. I note that some exhibitors do not think very highly of this picture, but I do, so that puts them in the wrong, of course. Personally, I think it is the best vehicle for his talents that has been given him in many moons. And Rene Adoree, was exceptionally good. My patrons gave it nearly one hundred per cent approval, which places it in the top-notch class as a program feature. Don't let your prejudice against Paramount blind you to the real merit of one of their pictures, fellow exhibitors. I am not exactly in love with some of their methods, but a good picture is a good picture, whether you like the producer or not, whether you profit or lose. Let's be fair. Paramount, like other producers make some real lemons at times with peach rentals, but they also get out some good ones occasionally. Eight reels.—Peter Bylsma, Victory theatre, Napoleonville, La.—Small town patronage.

IT: Clara Bow—Here is a knockout, Clara always has plenty of pep. My patrons strong for Clara, don't need to advertise much, just bill coming, would think this picture would please any house.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—Small town patronage.

PARADISE FOR TWO: Special cast—A fair production. Dix always great. Betty Bronson not so good since "Peter Pan." I thought she would be a real star but she has not progressed any, in fact she has gone backwards and I see Paramount has not renewed her contract. Seven reels.—M. W. A. Opera House, Soldier, Kan.—Small town patronage.

HOTEL IMPERIAL: Pola Negri—Very good, but if you like trash Westerns of course you will not enjoy this. Why didn't Paramount give Miss Negri some real plays to screen, there are plenty of good stories for her and not a lot of morbid Russian stuff. This was really worth while, but they had killed her by previous trash and some bad production manager didn't know it. Eight reels.—M. W. A. Opera House, Soldier, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—A wow! Jack Holt always registers 100% and with a Zane Grey story makes a sure success. Six reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

CASEY AT THE BAT: Special cast—A very good picture that pleased everyone. Business was rotten but not the fault of the picture. Six reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

SOFT CUSHIONS: Douglas MacLean—A very ordinary piece of entertainment, not nearly as good as some of this star's pictures. Douglas did very well with what they gave him, but a bunch of hokum from start to finish. Worth running but that's is all. Don't promise too much. Seven reels.—Charles Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

KNOCKOUT RILEY: Richard Dix—No exhibitors can wish for a better picture than "Knockout Riley" because they don't make them any better. Six reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

KNOCKOUT RILEY: Richard Dix—Here is a wow, the prize fight in the finish might not be so much, we are not up on prize fights but the story is good from start to finish, and leads up to a fine climax and Richard does his stuff. Just a darned good picture that drew some extra patronage at advance admission. Everybody praised the picture and we can eat for another week, so that's that. Seven reels.—Charles Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

SWIM GIRL SWIM: Special cast—Bebe Daniels is rapidly coming to the front. This comedy is very good and has a box office title. Business very good.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

SENIORITA: Bebe Daniels—December 18. Many favorable comments on this comedy-drama. Bebe in a "Mark of Zorro" role. Will stand a lot of boosting. Seven reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

NEVADA: Special cast—Very good show but the public even in the small town is being wised up that Westerns aren't so good after all. Consequently these Zane Greys are not as strong at the box office as formerly.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

ROLLED STOCKINGS: Special cast—February 2-3. A fair program picture. The title has nothing to do with the picture and there is no one in it that means a dime at the box office. Just a picture. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Special cast—Jannings gives a marvelous performance. A powerful and gripping picture that if properly handled will do very good business in any house.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

MANPOWER: Richard Dix—December 25. A very good Dix production, which went over well.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

MAN POWER: Special cast—Just a good program picture. Dix should have better material than this. He makes it better than it really is.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

ROUGH HOUSE ROSIE: Clara Bow—January 29-30. A nice little program picture filled with pep, and should please the majority. Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

TEN MODERN COMMANDMENTS: Special cast—Very good comedy drama. Esther Ralston better than I thought she was. Business fair.—L. E.

Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE WOMAN ON TRIAL: Special cast—It's a good show for women. Men will not like it as it is too emotional. A very good picture but not a box office attraction.—L. E. Palmer, Postville theatre, Postville, Ia.—General patronage.

THE QUARTERBACK: Richard Dix—Here is a good clean picture on football. If your house is strong for Dix don't fail to boost it, for you cannot go wrong.—E. P. Hosack, Community theatre, Ellston, Ia.—Small town patronage.

THE KID BROTHER: Harold Lloyd—January 31 and February 1. A pretty good program picture with quite a few laughs. This bird is only about one-tenth as good at my box office as he thinks he is. As a matter of fact, on the same two nights last week I did more business with Rin Tin Tin at less than half the cost of this one, and I'll bet that when Harold finds out what I paid for this he will think I stole it. Eight reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

Pathe-P D C

DRESS PARADE: Special cast—55%. All honor to the producers of this picture. Here is a splendid drama that holds forth high ideals for America's youth. It is a powerful incentive for boys to do the right thing, to live right, act right and be loyal to Uncle Sam. We need more pictures like this. Several of the high school boys were so taken with this that they are seriously attempting to try for West Point. William Boyd gives a splendid emotional bit, when in the Hall of Flags he renounces self, for the honor of the corps. Every theatre in the land should run this. The picture needs carefully selected music.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE YANKEE CLIPPER: Special cast—32%. Very good, pleased all who came. This is my last P.D.C. picture on this contract. Film perfect. (This also includes reels. Paper above average, sorry I haven't more of them signed to run. If you haven't shown them do. Nine reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

THE VOLGA BOATMAN: Special cast—33%. Very good, pleased 100 per cent. Work of stars perfect. This is the first report I have given the percentage on and saw it, still it did no more business than an ordinary everyday run. A reason of course twenty-five below zero wasn't the boatman's fault. Photography perfect. Eleven reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER: Special cast—35%. Good, good plot. Beautiful ending which is two thirds of every picture. Many favorable comments. Nine reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

SATAN TOWN: Special cast—60%. Pretty strong meller for the kiddies but otherwise a splendid drama of the dance hall type. Apart from the very nature of a gambling joint play there is nothing to give offense. Scenes that might easily have been raw are carefully handled. Carey is good and entire cast is good, where Collins or Salvation Lassie is O.K. Carey cleans out the wickedest city on earth so do not believe reformers will roast you if you play it.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

TURKISH DELIGHT: Rudolph Schildkraut—January 31. Just another picture. Nothing much to it.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—Small town patronage.

ALMOST HUMAN: Vera Reynolds—January 22. Starts off with a regular dog show. Rather slow in getting into action but finished well and pleased a fair crowd. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR: Rudolph Schildkraut—Although very long, and slow moving in spots, proved a very nice entertainment. A good family show and something different. Eight reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

PALS IN PERIL: Buffalo Bill, Jr.—January 28. A very good program picture for Saturday night. Good story, scenery and action. Bill is always good. Five reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags theatre, Neillsville, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WHITE GOLD: Special cast—This might please all theatre owners, producers, exchange men, and high-brows, but not the box office. Well acted and good in every way, but somehow it doesn't click. Six reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

NO CONTROL: Special cast—Full of fun and excitement, drew only fair.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

Thank You

I sincerely appreciate the letters I have received from Philip Rand, A. J. Gibbons, Dr. F. M. Childs and Henry Reeve.

The rest of you men who have not written in yet, hurry up. It makes no difference what you write about, but just tell me how your show is getting along. This department is open to all letters and your suggestions will be appreciated.

—Joseph C. (Eagle Eye Joe) Fisher.

Preferred

THE PLASTIC AGE: Clara Bow—A corker, made good on this and who wouldn't. Clara Bow a big favorite and always draws a crowd. Six reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

Rayart

THE MIDNIGHT WATCH: David Torrence—37%. January 25. This was very interesting sketch, but did not register very strong at the box office. Delighted those who came in to see it. Six reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

Tiffany

NIGHT LIFE: Special cast—This picture was well liked by all. Fair business was done when considering the attractions shown at other house. John Haron and Alice Day made a very lovable hero and heroine in a picture that was acted and directed.—G. S. Wildasin, Hanover theatre, Hanover, Pa.—General patronage.

United Artists

A THIEF OF BAGDAD: Douglas Fairbanks—54%. January 27-28. I was way late in running this one, however the print was good, and the picture was up to the high standard set by this star. Who has given me extra good business on his last three productions, namely "Mark of Zorro," "Don Q," "Son of Zorro" and "Thief of Bagdad." Twelve reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

THE GENERAL: Buster Keaton—Not Keaton's best, but contains many good comedy situations. Would make a better three reel comedy. Six reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

Universal

PAINTING THE TOWN: Glenn Tryon—60%. December 18. A clean refreshing comedy that brought a steady stream of chuckles from the audience, and the rental was such, that there were a few chuckles left for the exhibitor. While some of the so-called great artists of comedy may have produced (and this darn seldom) a greater comedy, the rental has always been such that the exhibitor hadn't a smile left in his system. So all in all, I class this as really one hundred per cent, as it pleased all around and what more do you want?—Peter Bylsma, Victory theatre, Napoleonville, La.—Small town patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Special cast—55%. Very very clever and laughable comedy drama. Glenn Tryon has every comedian on the screen today backed off and down when it comes to personality. Keep on giving him good gags and a good plot and he will stand at top of comedy ladder in the public's estimation.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE ICE FLOOD: Kenneth Harlan—60%. January 24. A very good picture, lonely out-door scenery. Seven reels.—Minne M. Schnoor, Paramount theatre, Stapleton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE SILENT RIDER: Special cast—55%. Hoot hennas his hair so he can qualify as a red head in order to win the lady of his choice about which whirls a good clever drama. Otis Harlan and his lady love are a scream. Consider this A1.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE FEARLESS RIDER: Fred Humes—50%. January 28. A good action program picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE FLAMING FRONTIER: Special cast—60%. January 21. A very good Western showing Custer's last fight. Nine reels.—Minnie M. Schnoor, Paramount theatre, Stapleton, Neb.—Small town patronage.

PAINTED PONIES: Hoot Gibson—October 29. Another good one from Hoot. Lots of comedy and action. Six reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

A HERO ON HORSEBACK: Hoot Gibson—58%. January 29. A very good comedy drama and Western. Pleased them all. Hoot is a good drawing card here. Six reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

THE LONE EAGLE: Special cast—January 11. A real good show. That is what the patrons said when leaving the theatre. It is an aeroplane picture and should please all that like thrilling melodrama. Six reels.—Wm. Wiske, Community theatre, Red Granite, Wis.—Small town patronage.

STRAIGHT SHOOTIN': Ted Wells—Just another Western with nothing unusual about it in any way. The comedian, and I missed his name, was the whole show with our patrons.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

HEY, HEY, COWBOY: Hoot Gibson—Just an ordinary Western that we think below Hoot's standard. Hoot generally good, but he didn't have much chance in this one. Give him something, Uncle Carl, he can deliver. Six reels.—Charles Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

MICHAEL STROGOFF: Special cast—A melodrama that brought out big crowds, you can't afford to let "Michael Strogoff" slip by, it's sure money. Nine reels.—George Khattar, Khattar's theatre, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Can.—General patronage.

Warner Bros.

HEART OF MARYLAND: Dolores Costello—36%. January 21. A civil war melodrama that was fair. Basketball game knocked us out so that we lost money. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

A MILLION BID: Dolores Costello—40%. January 25. This is a splendid program picture, better than the average.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

HOGAN'S ALLEY: Special cast—46%. January 28. A good comedy drama that pleased them all. Received a bad print from exchange that cut titles short and was little jumpy in some parts of the action. Seven reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

THE BETTER 'OLE: Syd Chaplin—33%. January 23-24. Paid too much to start with, and the picture fell down badly. People who saw it the first time went out and talked, but that's all the good it done. Dropped way down second night. Cannot recommend it as box office pull. Nine reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

THE NIGHT CRY: Rin Tin Tin—75%. January 25-26. It is just one heluva a good picture and they will tell you about how they enjoyed it. I didn't work any overtime to sell this and I had a big crowd on both nights. Ran this with a serial and know this was responsible for some new serial customers. It is my first Rin Tin Tin for some time as he fell down on drawing power but believe the next one will be a good bet. Seven reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

WOLF'S CLOTHING: Monte Blue—December 22-23. Monte is a favorite with us, but this is a melodrama, fast moving in spots, but a very poor story. May prove a good bet for Saturday. Seven reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

THE MISSING LINK: Syd Chaplin—A real old fashioned burlesque. Does not belong to the new school of pictures. Pleased only the kids, others walked out complaining. Chaplin deserves much better material and should insist on getting it.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

State Rights

MODERN DAUGHTERS: Phyllis Haver—31%. January 26. Just ordinary. People did not express themselves and it took it from that. It was mildly entertaining. Six reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

THE PHANTOM EXPRESS: Special cast—A good show, well worth playing. Six reels.—M. W. A. Opera House, Soldier, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Serials

BLAKE OF SCOTLAND YARD (Universal): Hayden Stevenson—We are on chapter ten of this serial; it is good but did not turn out to be a big drawing card. Best business has held up on all episodes so far. Two reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

CASEY OF THE COAST GUARD (Pathe)—Have shown, one two, three, four chapters; is not making much impression. Very little action. Photography not so good. Unless it snaps out of it soon will be sorry I booked it. Two reels.—Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

FIGHTING WITH BUFFALO BILL (Universal): Special cast. Didn't hold up, but I hit back with "Return of the Riddle Rider" and it is holding up good so far. "The Silent Flyer" was I believe the best serial since "Lucile Love the Girl of Mystery" away back in the dark ages when $12.00 paid for a week's service and ten cents bought a ticket for the big show and the concert. Gosh!—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

KING OF THE JUNGLE (Rayart): Elmo Lincoln—I have played five episodes and it has drawn a very good business for me and everyone of them has pleased. I would say buy this serial and get it started some way, then set back for it will bring them back. Twenty reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE TRAIL OF A TIGER (Universal): Jack Daugherty—Chapter 1 starts with a bang. Hope it holds up as we had plenty folks to see the first. Two reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

ATTA BOY: Big Boy—One of the funniest comedies I ever played. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE FIGHTING DUDE: Lupino Lane—Did not register many laughs. If that is what it was made for. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

HOT LIGHTNING: The best comedy I have run in months. Two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SEA LEGS: Bobby Vernon—Can't say that this was a knockout in my house. I have to have them fast and snappy or the humor is lost. Two reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

F B O

BEAUTY PARLOR NO. 1: We have played each series the past several years from first "Fighting Blood" in 1923, and by heck there just isn't any better comedies. Two reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

MANY A SLIP: Charley Bowers—Most of the Bowers' comedies have pleased here, but this one failed to please all. Pleased about fifty per cent. Two reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

NOT SO BIG: This is a good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

PAINTING PAPAS: We have yet to play a bad Standard comedy. These ton of weight boys are funny. Two reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

SHOOSH: Charley Bowers—This was clever, made like the others, but think the public tires of this class of stuff after seeing a few of the others. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

YOU'RE NEXT: Three Fat Men—A very laughable comedy. Two reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

FOX

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS: Lively comedy that was chuck full of laughs in the entire two reels. The darkey was good.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.—Small town patronage.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY: A good comedy of its type, should please those who care for social comedies.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

KANGAROO DETECTIVE: A good comedy. Two reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

Let Us Have Suggestions

Before the Moving Picture World was absorbed by the Exhibitors Herald, Van (who conducted the Straight from the Shoulder department) inaugurated a new policy that promised to be a real worthwhile one. After each report he stated the number of previous reports on the same picture and classified them as GOOD or BAD. This was a real time saver, and here's hoping you will carry on Van's good work.—H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U theatre, Melville, La.

JUST A HUSBAND: Not so much but got a few laughs. Two reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SPANISH OMELETTE: A good comedy that brought the laughs. Two reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

WOLF IN CHEAP CLOTHING: A good comedy and they laughed a lot at Jerry the giant. Most of the animal comedies have been good. Two reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

WOLF IN CHEAP CLOTHING: Jerry—A darned clever little comedy. This kid and the little girl both very clever. Two reels.—Charles Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

PUTTING PANTS ON PHILIP: Pretty fair audience reaction on this one. Two reels.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, Ohio.—General patronage.

SUGAR DADDIES: Every comedy we have played from this company has had the goods. This one no exception. It had our audience roaring. Two reels.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

PARAMOUNT

DIZZY SIGHTS: Billie Dooley—Dooley comedies are always sure to please. Two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FANTASY: Another very poor novelty. Lay off. Two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FIND THE KING: Edward Horton—A pretty good comedy. Two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FRENZY: "Wonderful!" they exclaimed, on the way out. The photography and acting was excellent. Rather sad and not suitable to close with if you prefer to send them away laughing. Don't overlook these novelties, they are really worth while. Two reels.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

MONTY OF THE MOUNTED: Lupino Lane—We think this is one of the best comedies released. Lupino Lane is great as a mounted police. Mention this one in your program. Two reels.—Harvey G. Thorpe, Peoples theatre, Crosby, Minn.—General patronage.

SCARED PINK: Only fair, the second reel not so bad. Two reels.—M. W. A. Opera House, Soldier, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SPLASH YOURSELF: Neal Burns—A very good comedy as most Paramounts are. Two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

TODDLES: Some like these novelties, most don't. A good laugh at the finish, that's about all. Two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

PATHE

ASK GRANDMA: Our Gang—A fair comedy of the kids, but not as good as some of the others. Two reels.—A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pa.—General patronage.

BLONDES' REVENGE: Just fair. Pathe has the poorest comedies that I have under contract. Two reels.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood theatre, Ellinwood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN SWEETIES: Another comedy played up. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

GHOST OF FOLLY: Alice Day—Very good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

GOOSELAND: Alice Day—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

HIKING THROUGH HOLLAND: Will Rogers—Pretty good scenics but Will is just a little too deep for my outfit. Guess they don't read the sub-titles or they don't get the fun, if they do. Sure don't get me any extra business. Two reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

HON. MR. BRIGGS: A good funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

LOVE MY DOG: Our Gang—Very good Gang comedy. Played this with "The Magic Garden" and it seemed to please everybody, which is unusual these days. I have followed the Gang and will be playing M-G-M Gangs for my next ones. Two reels.—O. A. Fosse, Community theatre, Ridgeway, Ia.—Small town patronage.

MANY SCRAPPY RETURNS: Very good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SUNNYSIDE: Charlie Chaplin—Terrible picture So old fashioned, so devoid of fun. Gosh! did we really laugh ourselves sick when this was first brought out years ago and has cinema art progressed so far and fast that what was good ten years ago is dull today. I can't say myself, but I do know this picture fell absolutely flat last week here in Salmon, and hence no more Chaplin re-issues for me.—Philip Rand, Rex theatre, Salmon, Idaho.—General patronage.

THEIR SECOND HONEYMOON: Not much comedy. Two reels.—S. G. Fry, Palace theatre, Mt. Pleasant, Tex.—General patronage.

WHEN A MAN'S A PRINCE: Ben Turpin—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

A WILD ROOMER: Not so many laughs but a very unusual comedy. Glad I ran it, mistake to call it a comedy, should have been three more reels and run as special. Lester N. Leek, Club House theatre, Jackson, Wyo.—General patronage.

WISE GUYS PREFER BRUNETTES: Helene Chadwick—Good. Two reels.—Mrs. Hulda J. Green, Gem theatre, Greenriver, Utah.—General patronage.

YALE VS. HARVARD: Our Gang—A clever little comedy. The football angle as played was new and well worked up. Our Gang are always good with us. Two reels.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BUSTER'S SHOW OFF: Pleased the kiddies that's all. The older patrons do not care for this type of comedy. Two reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGIANS: George Lewis—Second series. This series is fine, it is a credit to any one's house to show these. Comments 100 per cent. Prints fine. Two reels.—Carl L. Brown, Pastime theatre, Kurthwood, La.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGIANS: We had the first series and just started the second. If the second holds the pace they will bring in the students. Offer an opportunity to tie up with school athletics.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

DUMB LUCK: Joe Murphy—A fair Gump comedy, not so good, not so bad. Two reels.—Ray W. Musselman, Princess theatre, Lincoln, Kan.—Small town patronage.

LOOKOUT BUSTER: These comedies are popular. The kids are clever but the dog (Tige) is excellent. These go over well with the kids and note they bring us the junior business.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

NEWLYWEDS BUILD: Snookums—We use these on Saturday especially for our kiddies matinee, but they please all ages. This kid can save many a weak feature. Two reels.—Ronald E. Warren, Eagle theatre, Lubec, Me.—General patronage.

THE NEWLYWEDS SURPRISE: Some artistic leader on this one and Snookums does his stuff. They sure whooped for Oswald and Snookums.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

RUNNING WILD: George Lewis—Some mighty good gags and it drew the laughs. Played it with "Man Crazy." Oh boy, I wish we could please them like that all the time. Two reels.—John L. Damm, Strand theatre, Wadsworth, Ohio.—General patronage.

OSWALD THE LUCKY RABBIT, THE MECHANICAL COW: It's sure a wow of a cartoon comedy.—Dr. F. M. Childs, Cozy theatre, Villisca, Ia.—General patronage.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By Whit

CLAYTON BOND, who is at present division manager for Warner Brothers, will within a month assume the duties of general manager of Coston Theatres, Inc. This announcement comes from James Coston, who states the offices of the company are being considerably enlarged and that the affairs of the circuit are being developed. Bond was previously connected with B & K Midwest Theatres as buyer, and prior to that was branch manager of First National, Chicago office. His successor at Warners has not yet been named.

The committee drawing up a new uniform contract goes into session at the Congress again Wednesday after a short breathing spell.

We saw "Chicago After Midnight" recently at the Castle theatre. In the picture were night shots of the Oriental, the Chicago, and the Uptown theatres. Journeying over to the Avalon theatre, we saw the picture again and, much to our surprise, these shots were missing and in their place were pictures of the Granada, Marbro and Avalon theatres. And yet one often hears the charge that theatre managements lack enterprise.

A new enterprise, capitalizing upon the alleged glamour of motion pictures, is in the budding state down the row. At 808 S. Wabash last Friday we saw a new sign tacked upon the building which read "Girls Wanted. Apply Upstairs, Movie Dancing School." Our curiosity being aroused, we brushed past the sign painter busily painting "Movie Dancing School" upon the door, and proceeded upstairs. There we found a score of painters, decorators and carpenters busily at work in overhauling the place. The proprietor was out, so our curiosity is still with us, but from the looks of things it seems as if the row is at last to become aesthetic. We shall look further into this school. Our curiosity will not be downed.

No small number of film men were witnesses to the prize fight last week at the Coliseum during which Buddy Taylor felt leather just a bit too often.

And speaking of things fistic, I always have to stop and take a look at those flashes of the Dempsey-Tunney fracas as pictured on a miniature screen in a window along the row. And the "Mister, gimme a dime for a cup of coffee" boys have found that this is an ideal spot to ply their trade.

Irving Mack, more often known as Filmack, says that since he has been advertising in this book, he has had to employ an additional artist.

Jack Cohn of Columbia spent a few days at the Chicago exchange last week.

Charlie Cassanave has organized a booking company which is now doing business under the name of Associated Theatres.

The boys at FBO are certainly hitting the ball these days. Joe Lyon and Walter Brown were out in the country together last week, as were Washburn and Ted Myers. Sam Gorelick and Len Ullrich stayed home to act as hosts to visitors.

When the New Strand theatre on Division street played "7th Heaven," the two glass windows leading into the theatre were broken, and, so we are told, several policemen were needed to handle the crowds.

Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution for Warner Bros., was in Chicago last week.

Tess Heraty received a card from Jack Miller last week, mailed from the Canal zone. By the time you read this Miller will be back in Chicago.

And another letter reached the same destination from Frank Miller, who reports that after several weeks of rest, he has now got down to the real work of playing golf, and further that the fine weather is having a great effect upon his game. Well, Frank always did shoot a mean iron.

George Hopkinson, who used to run the Hamlin theatre, is another who takes his golf seriously. He reports that he is now playing the game every day at Glenn Oaks. All this golf news is sort of rushing the season.

Tom Gilliam at First National is showing a very snappy tire cover which pictures boldly in white against a black background the First National trade mark. The company is supplying every F-N man in the country with the covers, and it's a corking good idea.

In the future, visitors at First National will tread upon carpet when they enter the sixth floor; the entire space is now being covered and the offices redecorated. The booking department has already been moved to the sixth floor.

Dan Roche was in Duluth and Oshkosh last week. In Duluth he put over "Chicago," in a 400 seat house, the showing taking $2,800 the first two days, with an admission price boosted from the customary fifteen cents to fifty.

We enjoy a chat with Cecil Maberry, first because he always has something of interest to say, and second, because we hail from Texas too. He's always either in Detroit, St. Paul, or Minneapolis. Last week he jumped from Chicago to Detroit, back to Chicago and thence to Minneapolis.

John Semendales who runs the Regent on Sheridan Road was married Sunday and left Monday on a honeymoon trip to California.

If many more film people go to California, we will have to go there, too, in order to get news for these columns. News, these days, is so scarce along the row, we wouldn't know what to do with a nice, fresh, juicy piece of news if we ran on to it.

Oscar Florine is sporting a new Nash, which he says is a town brougham! Which leads us to believe the rat trap business must be flourishing.

Dave Dubin and Max Balaban were seen Friday making a desperate dash to catch a train for Detroit where they were bound on business.

S. A. Shirley of M-G-M was home last week nursing a case of grip.

Louis R. Fleischer, who recently bought the Home and Clybourn theatres, has booked the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product 100 per cent. He is contemplating opening another house on the West side.

Silvia Harris at M-G-M must have had a birthday last week. We spied a big bouquet of flowers on her desk.

E. L. Delaney is spending a short time in Biloxi, Mississippi.

Al Short terminated his connection with National Playhouses as band leader at the Capitol Saturday night. He has accepted a position as musical director for all West Coast theatres.

Last Sunday was Lincoln's Birthday, and it is usually conceded that splitting rails had a lot to do with his becoming president. Well, we do not choose to run.

And George Washington's anniversary will be celebrated next week, and he began his career by chopping down a cherry tree. Mayor Thompson had better change his slogan to "Thow away your hammer and get an ax."

We have a suspicion that the weather man has overdrawn his February account on good weather, and that he'll go bankrupt next month, but this weather is sure great while it lasts.

ROXY uses SENTRY

Mr. Rothafel's use of SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL is more than a tribute to the efficiency of the device; it is a remarkable characterization of "Roxy" himself.

For his theatre was considered to be the last word in Safety; yet, when shown the opportunity to wholly remove the hazard of film-fires, he did not hesitate for a moment.

We call "Roxy" a great showman, but back of his genius lies his limitless consideration for his patrons, the basis of which is their Safety.

SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL makes the risk from film-fires exactly zero.

Agreement

This Agreement entered into by and between the SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL CORPORATION, a corporation organized under the Laws of the State of Delaware, herein called the Lessor, and ROXY THEATRES CORPORATION, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of New York,

Whereas the Lessor is the owner of a certain device or devices attachable to motion picture machines, which are intended to prevent fire and which machines are known and designated by the name of the "SENTRY" machines, and

Whereas the Lessee owns, operates, controls and manages certain theatres equipped with motion picture machines, and

Whereas it is the desire of the Lessee to have all its motion picture machines equipped with the SENTRY machines, and to install at its own expense, the number of SENTRY devices necessary to equip all the motion picture machines in the ROXY THEATRE

Now This Agreement Witnesseth:

1. Lessor agrees to lease to Lessee for the term of five years, and to install at its own expense, the number of SENTRY devices necessary to equip all the motion picture machines in the ROXY THEATRE
2. Lessee agrees to lease such number of SENTRY devices from Lessor for said term, and to permit the installment of the same.
3. Lessee agrees to pay for each such leased SENTRY device the rental of Two Dollars and Half ($2.50) per week, said rental to be payable semi-annually in advance.
4. Either party may terminate this lease at the expiration of the term hereby created, by giving to the other party 60 days in advance of such expiration, written notice of intention to do so, but, in default of such notice, this lease, with all conditions and covenants hereof, shall continue for an additional term, and so on from term to term.
5. Lessor agrees to maintain such leased SENTRY devices in good condition, to furnish an inspection service, and, upon due notice, to make all repairs necessary for their proper function in all of said theatres of Lessee free of charge for the term of this contract.
6. This lease shall not be assigned by either party without the written acceptance of the assignee and the written consent of Lessor; provided, however, that if Lessee sells or disposes of his interest in any theatre listed in the attached schedule, he may assign this lease (in so far as it pertains to such theatre) to the purchaser of such interest without the written consent of Lessor, and such assignment shall become effective upon the written acceptance thereof by the assignee; no assignment of this lease, however, shall relieve Lessee of liability hereunder, unless Lessor consents in writing to release Lessee from such liability.
7. This written instrument embodies the whole agreement of the parties hereto, and there are no representations except as contained herein.
8. This agreement shall be binding upon the heirs, executors and assigns of the parties hereto.

In Witness Whereof said parties hereto have hereunto set their hands and seals this 9th day of January, 1928 This contract not valid unless approved by Home Office.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company,
 Gentlemen:

I wish to advise that I recently returned from Mobile, Alabama, where I attended the opening of our new Capitol Theatre in that city.

It affords me great pleasure to advise you that I received numerous compliments with regard to the beautiful tones and effects of the new Wurlitzer organ, which we installed in this theatre.

I am certainly glad our Company desires to continue using your Wurlitzer organs as they have in the past. This is again proof to us that we are getting an organ that is pleasing and appreciated by the public as well as ourselves.

I am enclosing herewith photos of the new Capitol in Mobile.

Yours very truly,
M. H. W. H.

Every WURLITZER ORGAN is designed for each particular theatre requirement

Wurlitzer Organs are especially designed for each individual theatre installation, but every instrument embodies the same recognized quality—a distinction of tonal majesty, and an absolute flexibility of performance. There are no limitations in effects, other than in the ability of the organist to achieve them. It unites the tones of a Cathedral organ with the novelties of modern orchestras, enabling the organist to obtain effects enhancing the beauty and interest of every attraction.

WURLITZER Residence Organs, Church Organs and Auditorium Organs

The same recognition of superiority accorded the Wurlitzer Theatre Organ is also conceded to the Wurlitzer Residence Reproducing Organ—each a masterpiece in construction and tonal beauty—each type of organ distinctively designed for each installation.

MODERN ELECTRICS . . . for Today's Needs

"Big house tonight."

"Not unusual since we put up that new electric sign."

ELECTRICAL advertising has proved itself again and again as the most productive and most economical advertising for theatres. And Flexlume Electrical Displays, combining unusual brilliance with clearer readability, give advertising values much above the ordinary.

Flexlume Displays are available in a variety of forms or combinations: exposed lamp, glass letter, and neon tube; and interchangeable glass letter signs to feature current attraction. There are marquee signs that flood the approaches to your theatre with light. There are projecting signs, "spectaculars," that dominate the entire street and draw attention many blocks away. There are roof-top signs that can be seen all over the city. Let us tell you more about them and the specially trained electric-display men we have located in the chief cities. Send for the book (in colors) "Theatre Electrical Displays" and see how others are employing electrical advertising to draw crowded house day and night.

Lakeside

Quiet Electric VENTILATOR

*Draws Capacity Houses
Even During the Hot Summer Months*

Good Ventilation Makes Good Business—It Pays to Keep Your Patrons Cool and Comfortable

You can fill your empty seats—increase your box office receipts—and draw crowds of steady patrons by equipping your theatre with a Lakeside Quiet Electric Ventilator. Its low price—easy installation—simplicity and low cost of operation make it a profitable investment that pays big dividends in increased receipts.

The Lakeside is equipped with a specially designed Four-Way Air Deflector and sends a powerful current of draftless, deflected air to every corner of the theatre that forces out the stale, devitalized air and completely changes all the air in the theatre every few minutes, so that it is always flooded with fresh, pure, healthful, outdoor air. This cooling current of fresh outside air—powerful but absolutely draftless—will please your audiences and bring their steady patronage.

The Lakeside comes ready for installation. It requires no tearing down of walls or ripping up of floors. It is so compact that it fits into a very small space. It can be disassembled to move through small door openings, and installed satisfactorily in many places where it is impossible to install any other type of ventilating system. Lakeside Ventilators are easy to operate—and trouble free.

The Lakeside costs much less than many of the complicated cooling and ventilating systems on the market, yet is remarkably efficient and is guaranteed to give satisfactory results. It is very inexpensive to operate and must "make good" in actual service because it is backed by a reliable guarantee. Lakeside Ventilators are made in different sizes to meet every requirement.

Write Today for Catalog—Read What Users Say

and let us give you complete information with suggestions of an installation for your theatre. Don't delay. Write now and investigate before the summer rush season comes. Tell us the width, length, height, seating capacity of your theatre [also whether it has a balcony or not] and our service department will submit suggestions and quotation without obligation on your part. Do it NOW—before you forget.

A New Publix House made more beautiful with C-H Dimmers

Adaptable—there is a combination of C-H Simplicity Dimmers fitting present and future needs of every theater.

Compact—contacts on both sides of plate—twice the capacity in same space.

Flickerless Dimming—no play or backlash, no overlapping of contacts. 110 distinct steps.

HUNDREDS of thousands of dollars are spent to make a modern theater architecturally beautiful. Is not such an investment wasted if allowed to remain hidden by a blanket of darkness? Is it not the soft changing hues of scientific illumination that makes the investment in architectural beauty pay dividends at the box office window?

Experienced showmen, such as the Publix Chain managers, know the importance of correct lighting—and they use C-H Simplicity Dimmers because their investment in beautiful interiors must pay dividends without interruption.

Your theater, too, regardless of the seating capacity or decorative scheme, can profitably employ C-H Dimmers. They are so easily adaptable and so efficient in operation that the cost is soon forgotten—repaid in added profits.

Talk over this improvement with your architect or electrician. And in the meantime start a thorough investigation by writing for the booklet, "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater".

The Motion Picture Theatre as One Architect Views It

By THOMAS E. TALLMADGE

AN Englishman once viciously remarked that the mission of America was to vulgarize the world. One is prompted to pass the thought along with the observation that the mission of the moving picture theatre is to vulgarize America.

Here is a brand-new, clean-cut problem, to wit, the housing of great audiences whose sole purpose in being present was to see pictures in motion on a screen approximately 20 feet square. On account of the magnificent size of the picture it is no disadvantage—in fact, the reverse—to be distant from the screen, but it is a decided disadvantage to be seated where one's view of the screen is at an angle that approaches the acute. The earliest picture houses recognized this, and they were for the most part long, narrow rooms with ceilings of moderate height. As the room was normally darkened, the architectural decoration was simple.

The popularity of the pictures and the competition of rival houses soon led to the introduction of cheap music and tawdry vaudeville. When song and dance artists and music of a kind were introduced the picture theatre ceased its evolution along logical lines and reverted to the legitimate theatre or vaudeville house type with cavernous galleries and a huge stage. Now moving pictures are as scarce in one of these buildings as drugs in a drug store. Worse still, architecture was seized upon and dragged into the arena to make the Roman holiday complete, for it was discovered that architecture, if sufficiently tortured, could be made to yell as loud as the electric signs or the jazz band.

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Better Theatres" herewith presents an interesting, though severe commentary on the motion picture theatre, by Thomas E. Tallmadge, Fellow of the American Institute of Architects and prominent architect of Chicago. This commentary is republished from Mr. Tallmadge's book, "The Story of Architecture in America," which only recently has been published by W. W. Norton & Company, Inc. You may not agree with Mr. Tallmadge, in his analysis; nevertheless, you will find it interesting. Further, it is within the range of possibility that his criticisms of the motion picture theatre today will influence in no small way the motion picture theatre of tomorrow. Just to what extent his writings will influence the successful motion picture theatre of today is problematical, and it is not within our province to hazard a guess.

No more pitiful degradation of an art has ever been presented than the prostitution of architecture that goes on daily in the construction of these huge buildings. If art suffers, what of the minds of the youngsters who see about them taste and beauty abased to the lowest degree?

"Forty-six thousand feet of brilliant Spanish treatment," "indescribably beautiful," "decidedly unique," "the architectural treatment of the auditorium is beyond description with its intricacies of oriental magnificence," "the proscenium arch in which is portrayed the figure of Aphrodite rising from the sea and being viewed from either side by the Wise Men and other characters of this world-famous legend"—some legend! These and other ecstatic phrases in one of the trade periodicals describe our motion picture palaces far more correctly than I can. In one of them, imprisoned in a bedizened wall, is a piece of white marble—a fragment of the Theatre of Dionysius, which once in its setting of olives and laurel on the slope of the Acropolis reflected the violet shadows of the Pan-Athenaic procession and echoed to the golden pentameters of Sophocles.

In a recent number of "The Atlantic Monthly" Rabindranath Tagore says of undiluted democracy: "It makes a deliberate study of the laws of the dark patches in the human intellect, wherewith to help itself to create an atmosphere of delusion through hints, gestures, yells, and startling grimaces for the purpose of stupefying the public mind." Could any better description be found of the purpose behind the building of these monstrosities?

There are a good many sensible and beautiful moving picture theatres in Europe such as the Palast Theatre am Zoo, or the original little theatre on the Nollendorf-platz—both in Berlin. Why have we so few? The Eastman theatre in Rochester, New York, is a reassuring exception. Its logical plan and beautiful architecture may be unknown to the builders of our moving picture palaces.

The same indictment cannot be imposed on the legitimate theatres. Here progress has been normal, if not revolutionary. Such theatres as the Goodman theatre in Chicago by Howard Shaw in his own distinguished style, or the Apollo in Chicago, a particularly brilliant and dashing adaptation of the Greek by Holabird and Roche, or the latest of all, the Ziegfeld theatre in New York by Joseph Urban and Thomas Lamb, are more typical than exceptional.

The Latest News in the Ads

"Better Theatres" this month welcomes to its pages a group of new advertisers—H. B. Cunningham, Flexlume Corporation, Gravure Publications, W. W. Kimball Company, Matney Studios and White Institute of Organ.

We desire to call to the attention of builders, theatre owners, administration executives, technical men and all others associated with theatre operation, the product of these and all other advertisers in "Better Theatres."

Advertising is not just a printed page. It is valuable news that is timely—timely for at the moment of its publication it is certain to suggest to the theatre builder and the theatre administration executive a solution for the problems which have been confronting them in construction and in theatre operation.

The new advertisers this month present a wide range of product, as will be noted in the following survey:

H. B. Cunningham, 964 University avenue, St. Paul, Minn.

This company produces projection room shutters which are approved by the National Board of Underwriters.

Flexlume Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y.

Flexlume is the manufacturer of electrical signs and display streamers. A variety of forms and combinations are obtainable.

Gravure Publications, Box 216, Appleton, Wis.

This company has long been in the field of program publication. These programs are being printed in roto ink.

W. W. Kimball Company, 308 South Wabash avenue, Chicago.

The Kimball Company is the manufacturer of theatre organs, three of the instruments having been installed in the Lew White Organ Institute.

Matney Studios, 307 West 47th street, New York City.

The Matney studios are serving many presentation theatres throughout the country with all adjuncts for this show policy.

White Institute of Organ, 1680 Broadway, New York City.

Lew White, chief organist at the Roxy theatre, has just opened a school for training those who aspire to become artists at the organ.

We respectfully call your attention also to the news presented by the other advertisers in this issue of "Better Theatres."

Making the Organ Pay Its Way

Is there a single individual today who does not respond to organ music?

The writer doubts it.

There is no doubt but what the organ has always been a source of inspiration, even to those whose ears were not attuned to the harmonies of music.

In all of the large theatres and in many of the smaller ones, the organ today is a feature attraction, and no showman must under-estimate its value to the general entertainment which he provides and to the prestige of his house.

The organ has been a symbol of musical idealization. Perhaps no single instrument appeals to the ear so perfectly, nor does any one instrument embody so much music as the organ. The tonal qualities are unsurpassed, its versatility is virtually orchestral.

Yet, there are many theatres today which cannot advertise the organ as a part of their programs. Exhibitors have contended that the instrument was too expensive for the additional box office returns which might result.

Here is a logical suggestion, which, undoubtedly, has been experimented with by a number of exhibitors. The writer is of the opinion that, if properly carried out, this plan would help to defray the original cost of the instrument and the upkeep.

In every town, no matter how small, there are those who are musicians, or would like to be. Both types have a yearning to play the organ, even if for their own amusement.

The thought is this: Rent your organ, under the supervision of your organist, for practice periods during each day. The income from local aspirants should be sufficient to cover to a great extent the overhead incurred by the installation of the instrument.

One could even carry this idea further and use the local talent as a basis of exploitation.

"Better Theatres" would like to hear from any exhibitors who have experimented with this plan. Have you tried it? Has it proved successful? Let us know. It at least is a thought, and the returns may surprise you.

Combines Own Ideas with Those in "Better Theatres"

THE RESULT: A theatre, reasonably constructed, which is a credit to the town in which it is located

QUITE sometime ago "Better Theatres" wrote me asking that we send photos and a description of our new theatre, as I had mentioned the fact that I owe a great deal to this most important member of the HERALD family for the successful completion of the house. "Better Theatres" sections of the HERALD for the past four years were thoroughly examined and digested, and while some of the sources adapted to our little place might not feel highly complimented, nevertheless, we used ideas from all sizes of theatres all over the country and, with perhaps a few of our own, built a house that we have received many compliments on and that has become a very active part of the community life here.

I have numbered the photos 1 to 4, taking them as we approach and go through the house. In the first place while I, personally, think that an architect is almost mandatory in theatre construction no matter how small the house, conditions in my case after our disastrous fire last year made it impossible to employ one. I was the designer and builder of the house, of course, with much help from several individuals and our before mentioned, "Better Theatres."

The somewhat exhaustive outline of the theatre that I am giving you can, of course, be cut as you see fit. If I am able to help any other small town exhibitor with the description I shall be very happy. Two nearby exhibitors have complimented the house by modeling their own new theatres after it.

The building is 48 feet wide by 100 feet deep. Exterior is rough pulled stucco over an 8 inch reinforced concrete wall 20 feet high. A rough brick was used, black mortar. Two small stores give a nice monthly income. Double entrance and exist doors on each side of the box office, the ticket seller, by the way, has full screen view, a help in a small town where ticket selling is usually over before the feature picture goes on.

of the box office. I like and built a rather large Foyer entrance, large in proportion to my lobby some might say. But it is a most attractive feature. On each side of the foyer is a stairway to the balcony and on the right a ladies' room and cry room. The latter is used far more than one might suppose. A corresponding room on the left is my own office. A view of it is in photo No. 4. Both ladies' room and office have excellent screen production of the Mission San Saba, the ruins of which stand today about a mile above town. Built in 1735, it was destroyed by Indians in 1756. The theatre was named after it.

Now to go into the auditorium. It is almost square, a bit different from the usual long house, but giving a very comfortable effect, all seats being comparatively close to the stage. The walls in the auditorium are the same rough plaster as the foyer but the bluish tinge is changed by tan fleckings, brushed on the walls. Makes a very odd and noticeable effect under the dim lighting when the show is on. The entire lower floor, including foyer, is covered with heavy rubber flooring, easy to walk on, warm and incidentally easy to clean. Our floor incline is three-fourths inch to the foot. Actual dimensions of the auditorium are 48 feet wide by 46 feet long, measuring from foyer rail to stage apron. There are 390 seats on the lower floor. We could put about 72 seats more but we have the seats well spaced for comfort now. The two aisles are each 4½ feet wide.

Might mention one other thing, there are double exit doors with panic fire bolts on each side of the foyer entrance and also single exit doors on each side at the stage end of the auditorium as shown in photo No. 3. These are also equipped with panic bolts. Entrance doors to each stage wing as well as steps to each side of the stage have proved very handy conveniences. Organ pit and stage wall at apron are concrete, of course.

The balcony has two stairs as previously mentioned and seats about 125 now without crowding. Space back of the rail on each side as shown in photo No. 4 is for Negroes and Mexicans. You will also note that full space is railed off in front of the booth, though equipped with swinging doors and can seat about 30 additional patrons when a straight stagemore is on.

The stage has full width opening of 30 feet,

Let Mr. Reeve Tell It

Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex., was confronted sometime back by a serious situation. His theatre had burned. Far from being disheartened, he assembled the ideas culled from "Better Theatres" of the last four years, combined these with his own, and built a new house. We are going to let Mr. Reeve, in his own words, tell you about it. Pictures of the theatre appear on pages 12 and 13.

view. The interior plaster work is not complimented by the photo. It looks as if it were whitewashed whereas it is rough dash plaster tinted a light bluish grey, French grey enamel woodwork throughout. We used Celotex ceiling throughout the building a most attractive appearance, and an almost perfect sound-board. Every act that has played the house has commented on the acoustics. The oil painting in the foyer is the only known re-

Posters You Can Make Out of Press Sheets—If You Know How

A Wellington poster. The press sheet original is circled.

An unusually striking poster made with press book and "still." Note use of white lettering.

Duke Wellington has a method of making posters all his own. He uses press sheets and often "stills." Already he has won many imitators, and how he did it is told below.

AS a result of the unique and forceful poster technique of Duke Wellington, art director of the Texas theatre, San Antonio, that show-house has become the most talked-of center of lobby display work in Texas. Wellington has a method of obtaining simplicity and striking effects in his work that is being copied over the entire state, even over the Publix circuit, and feels that if the method were universally known, it would prove an exploitation aid to many theatres.

When the Texas opened, a year ago, lobby displays were richly designed, elaborate in color, and many times original. But somehow, they did not make the impression on patrons that they possibly should have. Wellington, conferring with the manager of the theatre, and with the district manager, decided to change the aspect of the lobby from one of intricacy and garishness to simplicity and striking harmony of color.

The Texas lobby and foyer soon became a topic of conversation among film fans of San Antonio. Forcefulness and a lack of detail impressed them. And all because Wellington originated a method of poster construction that was "different." He cast aside precedent and rules and developed a method for himself.

His system is simple—so simple that any poster artist can adopt it. A great admirer of the art work in the various press books, Wellington keeps a complete file on every picture played in San Antonio. He believes that likenesses obtained from the press sheet are probably better or as good as original drawings could be. His entire method, therefore, consists of selecting a good drawing from the press sheet and putting it on his lobby cards, after being enlarged to the proper size, in striking and unusual colors.

The illustrations accompanying this article show the method as well as the result. The poster for Richard Dix in "The Gay Defender," indicates clearly how the drawing in the press sheet may be enlarged as a poster illustration and by the harmonious application of brilliant colors, made as attractive as the specially painted figures on the average one-sheet. Another fine example of this method is the poster for "The Magic Flame." For that one, no "still" was used. But Wellington finds that "stills" placed so that they harmonize with the general design, not only enhance the attractiveness of the poster, but add an appeal, borrowed from the drama of the film, that draws patrons to the box office. The one-sheet for "The Big Parade" is of the usual general design, though it does show how in some cases the drawing enlarged from the press sheet may be the whole poster—and rightly so. One favorite method of Wellington's is shown in the poster for "Now We're in the Air." In this case, the original likeness was not only enlarged and done in colors for the one-sheet, but was added to the poster, lending emphasis by the repetition and novelty by its difference in appearance from the enlargement.

Wellington has developed this simple and economical method and uses it regularly, and according to results, effectively. And he is one of the first to say that what he has done with the press sheet, can be done by other exploitation men.

An impressive device: mounting the head copied from the sheet.

The colors of this poster were orange, yellow and black, with the face deeply shadowed.

Protected Money Will Effect Great Saving in Insurance Rates

Precautionary measures will give exhibitors a discount as high as 70 per cent

THERE is one situation with which the theatre owner must always cope, and this is a situation which does not improve as the years go by.

So long as there is crime in this world there will always be burglaries and holdups, and so long as the burglar and holdup are active the theatre owner must take precautionary measures.

The amount of money robbed from the box offices annually by the two-gun men is astounding, and the total loss to all businesses through robbery has placed the insurance rate at a high level. Underwriters of this type of insurance consider it a bad risk, and as a result the rate does not recede.

Perusal of back issues of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD will disclose such individual losses as the following: $1,500, $1,500, $1,477, $1,250, $4,000, $7,000, $1,700, $5,500, $5,087, $2,150, and on and on.

Those sums, if they had not reached the grasping hands of the criminal, would have paid theatre rental, film rental, salaries, all overhead and other necessary items which must be taken care of each week.

Although burglary insurance is considered a bad risk, and the rate is high ($88), there are liberal discounts providing proper precaution is taken.

A burglar proof safe will warrant a discount of from 7 per cent to 70 per cent, depending solely upon the safe installed. Installation of alarm systems likewise will cut the rate from 7 per cent to 70 per cent, again depending on the system.

Employment of watchmen will cut the rate as much as 30 per cent, providing, of course, that central station is signalled hourly. Installation of watchmen's clocks will give a reduction of 15 per cent. Certain tear gas installations within the safes will give the theatre owner a 10 per cent reduction in the usual rate.

Your burglary insurance, depending, of course, upon the locality of your theatre, the city or town in which you operate, and other minor considerations, can cost you from $13 to $88 a thousand.

It is the precautionary measures you take which saves you the vast difference between those sums.

There are three fundamental policies for the theatre owner. The "holdup policy" protects his theatre only during the hours in which his premise is open for business. The "open stock policy" is a protection against loss of furniture and fixtures by theft, and the "safe policy" covers cash and securities during the hours in which the theatre is darkened.

Cash greater than the amount absolutely necessary for making change should never be kept unprotected in the booth.

In perusing back issues of the HERALD, 59 cases of theatre robbery have been selected at random, and the total of these thefts is $73,329. That is an average of more than twelve hundred dollars to a theatre. That is quite some little sum, especially if the theatre chances to be a smaller house.

Protection of that money is also a protection for your patrons, for burglary also may mean injury to patrons, a situation which might involve legal difficulties.

[Editor's Note: C. J. Sanders, Chicago insurance man, has very kindly supplied much of the information in this article.]

EVENHEETERS and RADIATORS

Compare Their Heating Effects

Study the two pictures above, they will show you just how Evenheaters and radiators heat your organ chamber.

In the illustration showing the radiator heating method notice how the heat circulates only around the radiator not heating organ parts that must be kept warm and dry. Notice too that back among the chimes and reeds the heated air does not strike, and it is here that warm dry air is essential for correct organ welfare.

Notice further that the only circulation of air is the natural circulation and as a result the air cools long before it reaches the organ parts that need warm dry air. Natural radiation is too slow for heating your organ chamber, for the air cools too rapidly as it slowly rises ceilingward.

Now study the picture showing the Evenheater method of organ chamber heating. The heated air rushes out of the top of the Evenheater—it is forced out—to shoot ceiling-ward, circulating around the chimes and reeds, warming the pipes and chests and keeping them at the same even temperature all the time. Then, as the air cools, it is sucked back through the Evenheater to be heated and shot ceilingward once more.

Consider, too, the cost of operation. Evenheaters, you will find, use less electrical energy to heat a given area than any other type organ chamber heater on the market.

That's the difference between Evenheater and radiator organ chamber heating. So why install a radiator organ heater that cannot meet the proper heating requirements when Evenheaters can be furnished to heat your organ chamber correctly.

Write us of your organ chamber heating problems. We will gladly furnish any information you desire.

I might add that we have been more than pleased with the results from this equipment. The heater is as near perfection as one might want.

Now to jump back up to the projection room a moment. It has not been slighted. Photo No. 4 shows it to you, 16 feet wide by 10 feet deep and 9 feet high. Fully fireproof, steel interior, and the outside plaster to harmonize with the auditorium. The walls are 5 inches thick and between the metal booth lining and the exterior plaster fully lined with asbestos. We also have running water in the booth. Two Powers latest type machines equipped with Mazda lights. Full equipment of steel rewind table and cabinets for film not in use. We also have space back of the balcony and booth, 10 feet wide and full width of the front of the building for general store room purposes and work room. This can, with but little work, be used for additional balcony space. In fact, the entire front part of the building was designed so that with comparatively little extra work and expense the present house of 500 odd seats can be made to seat 750.

I think this is enough if not too much. I make no claims for anything remarkable. I feel we have a good house for the amount of money we had to put into it. In fact, a great deal more theatre than is usually contained for much more money. The cost would surprise you. I have never had any contractor or builder make a guess at less than $15,000 for the building alone. I built for much less than that. The actual cost would hardly be a fair one to give as no local contractor could build for what we did. It took a lot of work and planning as well as a lot of personal labor to get it, but it was worthwhile.

While having nothing much now in the way of elaborate decorations it is an attractive place to look at and can be added to from time to time so that it will not become old to our patrons. By the way, I am including another photo showing the stage with front curtain up, just to give you an idea of the stage set. This particular photo is a real triumph of the photographer's art. Just how he got all those angles and futuristic slants, I don't know. The theatre is really quite straight and true, however. I wish we had some better pictures that would do justice to the walls and color effect.

Many thanks for your interest and also again, my personal thanks for "Better Theatres." I owe much to this section of the HERALD.

Shearer Joins West Division of Heywood

B. F. Shearer has been appointed Western manager of the Heywood-Wakefield public seating division. He will have charge of all public seating sales on the Coast. Before joining Heywood-Wakefield, Shearer was associated with National Theatre Supply Company.

A theatre built with chewing gum—that is, of course, with the profits from the sale of that important commodity. Some may think William Wrigley took but a short step in extending his interests from chewing gum to athletics. But that he should become owner of a motion picture theatre was less expected. This, however, is the theatre he had constructed at Avalon on his Catalina Island. It is leased by the Santa Catalina Island Company to the operator. The building is 54 feet wide and 110 feet deep, with a front of Indiana Pebtex brick and terra cotta.

Watch the Tax Collector

¶ Attorney Parker, in this issue of "Better Theatres," reviews among other important court decisions affecting the motion picture theatre one relating to a decision on taxes which saved an exhibitor $1,293 a year. Quite some little item, that; and perhaps Attorney Parker's review of the case may in turn prove valuable to you.

¶ Next month Attorney Parker will have for the readers of "Better Theatres" an article on whether or not the small theatre should incorporate. This is a subject vital to the owner of a theatre in a small town or city, or even a small theatre in a larger community. In the meantime you should read Attorney Parker's commentary on—

Laws of the Theatre and Their Effect on Individual Cases

By LEO T. PARKER
Attorney, Cincinnati, O.

IT is quite improbable that many theatre owners profit from the numerous litigations involving theatres decided each month by the higher courts. In fact few proprietors take precaution to become familiar with the present existing laws relating to theatres, until by necessity they are compelled to do so, in order to avoid payment of damages or other expenses associated with litigations.

Yet it is true that a brief survey each month of the outcome of legal controversies will readily impart to theatre owners such legal knowledge required to avoid repetition of similar litigations. Because with the proper and dependable information of recent laws and higher court cases, in many instances, it is practical for theatre owners to avoid litigations.

This object may be accomplished in various ways. For example, the custom of imparting information to employes of their legal rights and duties will go far to eliminate a common source of litigation.

Also, under certain circumstances it is practical to compromise a controversy, resulting from unavoidable occurrences, of which the theatre owner is negligent or at fault, thus saving time and expenses of carrying the case through the courts, with the inevitable result of an adverse decision. Moreover, in many instances, theatre owners may profit by instituting legal proceedings and seeking court protection.

Ejection of Disorderly Patrons

I have upon my desk a letter just received from a theatre owner in which he requests a list of higher court cases which may prove favorable to him, together with information of the legal rights of a theatre employe to eject a disorderly or drunken patron from the theatre premises.

He explains that his employe struck and broke an intoxicated patron's jaw bone, while ejecting him from the theatre, and that the patron sued to recover large damages as a result of the injury.

Also, it is interesting to observe that during the past few months, I have received two or three other inquiries involving this same point of the law. For this reason, a brief review of the leading cases, and the details of a case decided, within the past few weeks, on the subject should impart generally desired information.

First, it is important to know that under certain circumstances a theatre proprietor or his employes have the right to eject boisterous or disorderly patrons without incurring liability. As a matter of fact, in a quite recently decided case, the court said that it is the duty of a proprietor to maintain good order particularly for the reason that other patrons should be protected from insults, annoyance, and injuries by boisterous patrons.

Recently, suit was instituted against the owner of a theatre for damages for ejecting a boisterous patron. In this case, the court held that the proprietor or any of his duly authorized agents or employes may legally eject a disorderly patron without the proprietor incurring liability for damages, providing the disorderly patron first is requested to be quiet, and if he fails to be so, then the necessary force may be used to eject him. (189 N. Y. 180.)

In still another case, (125 S. W. 255) the court held that a patron who was disorderly in a theatre and refused to leave by request of the proprietor, is a trespasser and that the proprietor or his employes may use force to put him out.

The degree of force that may lawfully be employed in ejecting a disorderly patron depends upon the circumstances of the case. However, the courts have consistently held that the proprietor has a right to use only as much force as is necessary, but if the

BETTER PROJECTION

By F. H. RICHARDSON

National Theatre Supply Meeting

The editor was invited to and did journey to Chicago to address a convention or meeting of the National Theatre Supply Company salesmen and another, a few days later, of the branch managers of the same company.

Those meetings were, permit me to assure you, in the nature of an eye opener. Every salesman and every manager attended every session of their respective meetings. The roll was called and unless each man answered "here," a reason for his absence was in order. The company wanted the men right there on the job and it was well that they be there, too, because every moment of the sessions was taken up in demonstrations of or talks by experts upon the goods they sell, or upon some other subject directly allied to their business as salesmen and managers.

Never before in all the history of the motion picture industry has such an enlightened action been taken by any company connected with it.

The general design was to increase the knowledge of salesmen and branch managers concerning the goods they handle, to the end that they be able to talk with greater knowledge and better understanding to the exhibitor, the theatre manager and the projectionist concerning the goods and the need for their purchase and use in theatres.

My own talk was concerning the crying need for more up-to-date projection equipment and the keeping of projection equipment in very much better condition than it now is kept. I tried to point out exactly in what way antiquated projection equipment, and projection equipment in anything less than perfect repair is a prolific source of loss at the box office. Many were kind enough to say that I proved my point.

I am "for" such meetings. This one cost the company heavily, but at that I venture the assertion that it was well worth the money—and then some.

Detroit— Wonder City

On my way back from Chicago I stopped off in Detroit where I was scheduled to address a meeting of the projectionists and theatre managers of that city. The meeting was arranged by Local Union 199, Motion Picture Projectionists I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. The organization did the job up brown. There were nearly 300 present, 55 of whom were exhibitors or their representatives.

Local Union 199 is fortunate in having a livewire, progressive man in the office of business representative. Max Ruben in his name. He is ably backed up by President Ray Gagnon and the other officers of the executive board. As a consequence of this, Local 199 is going forward and is able to offer the exhibitor greater value in knowledge and expert work when September 1 comes each year and the annual "argument" is held. Not only that, but the men cannot help but have at least some feeling of satisfaction that they have done their part and are therefore able to approach the "wage scale" conference with clean hands. Those present at the lecture appeared to be high grade professional men. I honor Local 199 and all locals which follow her most excellent example.

Detroit is in many respects a wonder city. Automobile manufacturing plants less than four stories high by a couple of blocks wide by several blocks long, are looked upon by Detroiters as "small fry." The visitor who explores them needs a map, a compass, and at least one competent guide.

I visited several theatres, one of which was the Hollywood, a suburban theatre far surpassing anything I have ever looked at in the shape of a suburban house. It is owned and managed by Cohen Brothers, cost approximately $2,000,000, seats 4,200, and would do distinct credit to Broadway. In fact, it is much more magnificent than some we, here in New York, call pretty good houses. Its acoustics (it runs pictures and vaudeville) are the best I have ever found in any theatre.

I, whose hearing is not the best, sat at the top of the balcony, fully 150 feet from the stage and was able to hear almost every word the actors spoke. Projection is in charge of

S. M. Johnston, Harry Smith, Roger M. Kennedy and A. N. Feldstein. The projection room is spacious and almost ideal in its appointments. It has separate marble shower bath and lavatory. The equipment is most excellent. Everything was as neat and clean as a new pin. The vaudeville was on while I was there but I have no doubt but that Brothers Johnston, Smith, Kennedy and Feldstein do full justice to the magnificent room and equipment. They certainly should. I'm sure they do. My compliments to them and to the owners.

Downtown the Michigan was visited. It, too, was a very fine theatre, with an excellent, well appointed projection room. It also has a separate shower bath, lavatory and work-room. Projection was distinctly good. It was in charge of Charles Miles, Jack Edwards, G. E. Light and Frank McDonald. I visited one or two other theatres and in each found good projection and projection rooms of goodly size well ventilated and well appointed as to equipment and other things. In only one theatre did I see reason to sharply criticize. The projectionist had asked me to visit him. When I talked with the manager he was evidently quite proud of the projection, yet there was Travel Ghost, the streamers being two to four inches long! I'll not name the theatre, but the projectionist will know, for I called his attention to it.

Brother, it is a part of your business to go down front at least once a week and examine the screen with an opera glass. Pull a good glass down on it while not more than 25 or 30 feet away. If the glass discloses any streamers on black and white titles at that distance, then get busy with the rotating shutter for that almost invisible pulling of the whites across the blacks and darker shades is not only damaging the appearance and beauty of the picture to some extent, but what is far worse, is setting up tendency to eye strain.

As I said before, Detroit is a wonder city. Some of its huge manufacturing plants are almost entitled to be listed as an eighth wonder of the world. The theatres I looked at are all good. Their projection rooms and equipment are good and the men in them are high up in projection technical knowledge.

Keep your hand to the plow, men. Back your business representative up in his fight for progressiveness and advancement and while you may see no immediate benefit, except satisfaction with yourselves because you have done the right thing, the day will come when you will be mighty glad you took the course you did.

Travel Ghost and Damage

Recently while in a large theatre, seated well down front. I turned my opera glass on the picture, and saw slight travel ghost. I afterward called the projectionist's attention to the matter, only to have him answer: "I can't see any travel ghost from here (the projection room about 100 feet away) and you had to use an opera glass down front to see it. What difference does it make anyhow?"

Right there this man without realizing displayed a sad lack of knowledge of projection. He is a Broadway man, too, in one of the big Broadway theatres. He is a high grade man as projectionists go. He puts on what is called a good picture, but he has not studied his business sufficiently well to know that no matter how slight a travel ghost may be, it does very real harm and smacks friend box office right square between the eyes.

Why, do you ask? Well, I'll tell you and when I'm done I'll bet you dollars to dimes that not one of you who read this would be willing to publicly declare me to me in error. I'll wager $10 to an over-ripe tomato that not one of you would have the nerve to let your manager read this and then tell him it's "the bunk" and "Richardson's all wet."

Of what is the screen image composed? Why is it a picture at all? Think that over, gentlemen. It is a picture solely because of the shadings and graduations of light let through by reason of the varying densities of different portions of the little transparent photograph over the projector aperture. That is evenly and exactly true, is it not?

All right, then, is it not also true that anything which in any degree alters these shadings or graduations of light in any degree must, in the very nature of things also alter the appearance of the screen image as compared with the photograph over the projector aperture?

Think that proposition over and then answer me this question: When a portion of all lighter shadings are pulled up or down over the darker shadings, or any portion thereof, does not such alteration take place, and is not that precisely what occurs when there is travel ghost in any degree?

Of course you are unable to see it in the photograph itself. It usually is only visible to the eye in the form of "streamers" on black and white titles. This is for the reason that the contrast between white and black in titles is as great as it possibly can be, and there is nothing else to distract the eye from seeing the streamers. In the picture the contrasts seldom are complete, and when they are the eye is confused by the great amount of detail and does not see the streamers unless they be very bad indeed.

That is all true, but does not common sense tell you that they are there just the same, and that they occur between any and all differences in Photographic shadings, though only visible to the eye where the contrast is sharp. Just think that over, men, and ask yourself if the pulling of one shading over another must not in the very nature of things, operate to reduce the picture beauty.

But there is a far more serious effect, and that is the blurring of the lines of the pic-

Detroit Well Pleased

The letter which follows is from L. U. 199. No comment is necessary, though I believe I am privileged to extend my thanks to the men for their appreciation.

"My Dear Mr. Richardson: Allow me at this time, on behalf of Local Union No. 199 I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O., to thank you most sincerely for your very splendid lecture to the Detroit motion picture projectionists and the theatre owners of Michigan, at the Washington theatre, Wednesday, January 18, 1928.

"As you probably are aware, at the conclusion of your wonderful lecture those in attendance were unanimous in their praise of the thought behind the talk and of your successful handling of the subject.

"To say the Motion picture projectionists of Detroit were highly pleased is putting it very mildly and I trust you will believe me sincerely when I extend their most hearty thanks for your efforts. May you live long and prosper!

ture by travel ghost. This has something the same effect as the picture being more or less out of focus. It causes eye strain, and this strain is present even though the travel ghost be too slight to be readily discernible.

In considering this matter it must be carefully remembered that the theatre patron will look intently at the picture for a considerable time without removing his gaze therefrom. This constant use of the eyes may last as much as two hours without a break, and usually does, with modern six and seven reel features lasting more than an hour.

Just try reading a carbon copy which is very slightly blurred for a solid hour without a stop and see what happens to your eyes! Try it!

Granted that the carbon copy may be and probably will be somewhat harder on the eyes than a picture having its lines blurred by slight travel ghost, still using the eyes under such conditions for an hour or two without rest is pretty hard on them, and the theatre patron, not knowing anything is wrong with the screen image blames it on the movies.

Gentlemen, while we may find some excuse for the machine operator permitting slight travel ghost, we do not expect it of the motion picture projectionist. The machine operator, who pretends to be nothing else and who is employed merely as a machine operator, is not perhaps expected to understand such things, but the motion picture projectionist is expected to. It is a part of his business to understand them, and attention to such details will bring largely added revenue to the theatre box office in the long run, because if the patron finds the pictures at the Nemo theatre do not hurt his eyes, he or she will attend the Nemo more often than they otherwise would. That is not mere guess work but a statement founded on just plain common sense.

Is There Room Behind, Back and Before

E. P. Boyle, Chicago, wants information, as follows: "Am going to intrude upon you, first wishing to you a very happy and prosperous year.

"Will you advise me as to what is the leading moving picture machine of today? Also would there be room in an up-to-date booth to permit of pulling the lamphouse back from six to eight inches? What I mean is, could a concentrator of 26 to 28 inch focus be used? If it is practical to do this I could handle the concentrator, of which you know, in a new, and I believe, a practical way, which would not permit of the operator scratching the silver plating as they formerly did."

There are many different sorts of "moving picture machines," but presumably you really have in mind a motion picture projector; also I assume that in like maner "booth" may be translated into projection room and "operator" into projectionist. Correct nomenclature is of large importance in many ways. May I suggest that you, first of all, learn and use it!

There are three high grade, excellent motion picture projectors on the market, namely: the Powers, the Simplex and the Motiograph De Luxe. Far from it for me to say which is the more popular. I wish to still live, at least a short while! In actual merit as motion picture projectors they balance fairly evenly.

Yes, except in some cases where the "booth" you speak of—the little sawed-off, narrow contracted "coop"—still exists, the modern theatre projection room will permit the lamphouse being pulled back sufficiently to accommodate the focal length concentrator you name. There would be advantage from the optical viewpoint in such a focal length. I would suggest that you consult with Spahr, president and general manager of the Enterprise Optical and Manufacturing Company, 564 West Randolph Street, Chicago.

Same Old Wheeze Again

Thomas H. Diggins, Hyannis, Mass., says he has been told by a fire chief that positive film will burn under water. He asks me about it. He also wants to know whether or not a motion picture positive film will explode without being placed in an almost air tight container, having but one small hole in same, when a naked flame or an electric spark is ignited over said opening.

I don't quite understand the "without" in the last question, when coupled with the small hole and flame-spark. However, a motion picture film, positive or otherwise, is about as explosive, in a container or out of it, as your head is. Place a film in a receptacle of some size, in a loose heap so that it will burn rapidly, set it on fire and the gases generated by the conflagration will probably explode the tank, or the gases may themselves explode. This is all the "explosion of film" amounts to, and don't let them tell you otherwise. If any one tells you a film or a piece of film can itself be exploded, try and get a substantial bet out of him and then when he fails to explode the film itself—collect.

As to film burning under water, I would imagine that sometimes it might, for a few seconds. Burning film supplies its own oxygen, you know, hence cannot be smothered out. Film sometimes puffs out a bit as it burns and this might, or might not, keep the water away from the seat of fire for a second or two. I doubt it, but it might. I happen to have no film here at the moment or I'd try it out. Try it yourself.

Laboratory Fault Causes Trouble

John Richmond, Philadelphia, Pa., asks: "Will you tell me the cause of the following trouble? In a number of shows I have run lately, one or two of the reels of film would constantly and with fair rapidity go in and out of focus—that is to say the picture would."

"The whole show does not do this. Usually just one or two of the reels of film show the fault. Have tried these reels on other machines (Mean projectors I suppose, of course—Ed.) with no different results. The trouble begins after the second or third showing, and gets worse during the rest of the week.

"Looking along the length of the film one sees little humps about every eight or nine frames of the affected reels. Have tried many methods of eliminating this trouble during the past three months, but without success. The only thing that would do any good at all was to rewind the film in a 20 foot hall, with the rewinder dummy at one end and the geared part at the other. I have asked other and older projectionists. They are stumped too."

The fault lies in defective laboratory processes. I have had this matter up before the Society of Motion Pictures Engineers, where it has been discussed. The opinion there expressed was that it was primarily, as I remember it, due to defective drying of the prints, or defect in the process of drying. Just why rewinding with 20 feet between the rewinder elements should affect matters appreciably I don't know. I could make a

Very, Very Highly Important

A very great amount of needless annoyance and trouble is experienced because of the fact that projectionists and theatre managers asking for information or instruction when they have trouble with mercury arc rectifiers, motor generators, etc., do not send the information contained upon the name plate of the device.

Very often, in fact usually, it is impossible to diagnose a mercury arc or motor generator trouble unless I know the serial number of the machine. This is especially necessary when the trouble is such that the matter must be referred to the manufacturer. Without the serial number he also usually is unable to say with certainty just what is wrong, and there is delay while either he or I write to get it.

When you want information concerning trouble with a motor generator set or a mercury arc rectifier, always send all data contained upon the name plate of the machine. Failure may cause delay in receiving an answer.

guess, but it would be only a guess, so why bother. I shall forward your letter to the Eastman Company, asking its attention to the matter. You will hear from them either direct or through this department.

The Men of Tomorrow and Years to Come

Harry W. Clutter, Washington, Pa., says: "I want you to know others beside professional projectionists read your Better Projection department. Just received the Bluebook of Projection, which is the most valued present I have ever had given me. Might as well confess I am but 16 years old. I have, however, been more or less acquainted with projection since I was 10 years of age.

"I helped in the projection room of the Washington high school in Pittsburgh while there; also I have projected motion pictures in the local Y. M. C. A. and ran the spotlight in the local high school. Have always read Better Projection, and even traveled to Pittsburgh to secure an old edition of your Handbook from the Pittsburgh library.

"Don't want it thought that I am bragging, but I have been commended on my projection work, which is more than ever happened to the other 'Y' projectionist. I think that is something to be proud of. Just as soon as I become of age I intend to apply for a license as projectionist and propose to be a real projectionist if I can."

Why am I "wasting space" on a 16 year old boy, do you ask? Well, maybe friend Clutter is only 16 years old, but just the same it is of the 16-year-olds that our future supply of projectionists must come, and don't forget that you were that age once upon a time.

In this "boy's" eyes shines the light of enthusiasm. Let us hope to High Heaven that it continues to so shine, for it is of such that progress upon earth depends. Clutter is enthusiastic about motion picture projection, and it is our enthusiasts who make real progress in projection possible. The man without enthusiasm seldom rises much above the level of the crowd. The no-enthusiastic worker seldom sees any good in anything except a raise in wages, or an equal wage for less time or labor. Nothing else counts. He does evenly and exactly what he feels compelled to do in order to "hold his job." He usually curses his rotten "luck" when he sees some one advanced who also wants good wages, but who desires to do everything he possibly can to deserve them—who takes real interest in and has some real love for his work, not considering his hours "on the job" as being just that length of time in jail.

Gentlemen, I honor and respect this young man. I thank him for his letter and hope that in years to come he may realize his ambition and become a high class professional motion picture projectionist, in all that term implies.

Friend Manager, Why Crab Your Game

From a town in New York state comes a letter containing a theatre program. It is from a projectionist whose name I withhold lest his manager "land" on him for the criticism. The writer remarks: "You will note that in this program nothing is said about projection. Music comes first, and is featured in every program. Projection is never mentioned."

The projectionist then goes on to tell how he has tried consistently to put the best possible picture on the screen, often at the expense of much labor keeping the equipment in the best possible condition, making his own cue sheets and eliminating punch holes and faults from the films themselves.

I am entirely unable to understand the line of reasoning followed by exhibitors or theatre managers who boost music and other things in programs yet totally ignore projection, which may be "passable" or very good indeed, and efficiently done in the matter of electrical energy expended and wear and tear upon equipment, or the reverse, according to whether the projectionist is interested in his work and wants to give the best possible service, or is just "getting by."

Surely any exhibitor or theatre manager of today understands and will freely admit that there is a vast deal more dramatic and amusement value, and therefore a vast deal more value to the box office of a theatre if the productions be projected in the best possible manner, than there will be if they be poorly projected. And if this be true it just naturally follows that dramatic and amusement values will vary according to a considerable range of projection excellence between the poorest possible and the best possible. That is just plain one plus one makes two reasoning, is it not?

Mister theatre manager, admitting the value of good music, is it not a fact that the high grade projection of the productions you pay good money for is at least fully as important as good music? Answer me that! And if it is, then don't you know and won't you admit that when you "play up" the music before the public, in your programs etc., and never even mention the work of your projectionist, YOU ARE DELIBERATELY DISCOURAGING HIM and just plain throwing a brick at one of the most important things in your theatre! Has that never occurred to you?

When the projectionist sees that you boost the music and other things, and publish the names of your orchestra leader and musicians, but never even mention projection, while he may be unconscious of it, his mental reaction is that "IF HE (the manager) FEELS THAT WAY ABOUT IT, WHY SHOULD I MAKE ANY SPECIAL EFFORT TO EXCELLENCE AND GIVE HIM THE BEST POSSIBLE PROJECTIONS, IT'S MUSIC HE

Advance Instructions Unavailable

Edward E. Roe, projectionist, Williamstown, Mass., asks where he may secure books of instruction on Vitaphone and Movietone projection apparatus.

Such books cannot be had, Brother Roe, but Movietone puts out a weekly bulletin of which I am one of the editors. I will have it sent to you each week. You need have no fear concerning your ability to handle Movietone should your theatre put it in, because the installation engineers will give you full and complete instructions before they leave. They will not leave a new installation until the projectionists are able to handle the apparatus competently. Also I have myself joined the Movietone staff and you may write me, (Box 100, South Lyme, Conn.), for help should you have trouble.

WANTS, NOT PICTURES!" By failing to give the projectionist an even break in such things you, Mister Manager, DELIBERATELY DISCOURAGE HIM, AND LOWER THE EXCELLENCE OF ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT THINGS IN YOUR THEATRE.

Has it never occurred to you that the average man will work very, very hard to justify praise bestowed upon him, and that the cheapest and most effective possible way to secure high grade excellence in your projection is to ENCOURAGE THE PROJECTIONIST BY PUBLICLY, IN YOUR PROGRAMS AND OTHERWISE, CALLING ATTENTION TO THE EXCELLENCE OF THE PROJECTION IN YOUR THEATRE, NAMING THE PROJECTIONIST.

Believe you me, if you do that, and the man is worth the powder it would take to blow him out of your projection room, he will "break his neck" to deliver the best possible results upon your screen.

Of course you may say if you do that he, the projectionist, will get "all swelled up" and may demand more money. Well, why don't that same "argument" apply with equal force to the musician? And you don't hesitate to boost him and his work do you? But even suppose he do just that. What of it? If he delivers better results upon your screen, or delivers the same results more economically he is worth more.

Large Wires—

No Waste

S. Santorelli, projectionist, Jersey theatre, Morristown, N. J. asks: "Will you be good enough to settle the following dispute. Is it practical to use a No. 000 or a No. 0000 wire to convey current from a Hertner Transverter, Type MA 44-80 A C, motor 3 phase, 220 volts.

"What I am getting at is, by using such a very large wire for so small an amperage is there any additional waste set up."

No. There is no additional waste. The waste comes when the conductor is under size. Over size sets up no waste at all. You could send half an ampere through a copper bar two inches square just as economically as through a proper size wire for that amperage. In fact I think just a wee bit more economically, because there would be absolutely no rise in temperature at all when using the big conductor for so small a current.

I Can understand just how such a thing might puzzle you, and am glad to settle the dispute. I am publishing the matter because I'll bet real coin you are not the only one who could not answer that question with much positiveness, especially those not very old in "the game."

A Managing

Director Approves

From Samuel R. Tyler, Gull Lake, Saskatchewan, Canada, comes a letter requesting certain information concerning which is the better equipment. This has been answered by mail. He says, in the course of his letter: "Your two last volumes (The Bluebook) are gems. They give us concrete evidence that you must have placed into their preparation a vast amount of mental effort. I have every one of your editions; also the new book, just issued, on theatre advertising. Theatre men should not be without a copy of both of these works.

I am not merely handing you a bouquet when I say that your "Better Theatres" department has been of inestimable value to the entire industry. I hope some day I may have the pleasure of meeting you personally. I trust the Projection department will be with us for many years to come."

Coming from a theatre managing director (He has charge of two theatres) this is particularly gratifying. I thank Exhibitor Tyler cordially for his kind words and his good opinion of my work and my books. I have tried hard to make worthy of commendation.

One Beam of 150 Tons

Of New Stanley House

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—A single steel beam, weighing 150 tons and said to be the largest piece of structural steel ever used in American building construction has just been ordered by engineers for the new Mastbaum theatre, now under construction here for the Stanley Company of America. This giant girder, concentrating 2,000 pounds of special steel for each foot of span, will be used to support the balcony. It opens, it is said, a new field for use of steel in theatre construction.

All the framework of the building will be of structural steel. The balconies, suspended from the ceiling framework, will have their support on solid bed rock, through heavy steel columns. In all, more than 2,000 tons of structural steel will go into construction of the building.

The theatre will occupy a full acre of ground, will accommodate 5,000 persons, and will cost approximately $5,000,000. It is being built as a memorial to Jules Mastbaum, founder of the Stanley company.

There is no substitute for Circulation!

I NTERESTING to every manufacturer and distributor of products for the theatre is the publishing this week by the Audit Bureau of Circulations of the auditor's report on the circulations of Exhibitors Herald and of Moving Picture World for the twelve months ending December 31, 1927.

To the advertiser, it is an accounting of the stewardship of these two publications, which accepted his money for advertising space during the year of 1927. It is a confirmation of the judgment of the space buyer. It is an assurance of value for money spent in the past and a guarantee of value for money to be spent in the future.

To the reader, it is proof that advertising has been sold by these publications on merit.

To the statistician, these statements are vitally interesting. They demonstrate beyond doubt that in the merger of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World, the motion picture industry has been given complete coverage in one medium—and this at a cost far below the figure at which complete coverage is available in any other business field of comparable size.

Better Theatres is published every fourth week as a second section of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World and mailed in the same wrapper to all subscribers.

These statements are now available and will be furnished without charge upon application. Address, Better Theatres, 407 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Magnificent console of Page DeLuxe Unit Organ installed in W-H-T, the broadcasting studio of The Radiophone Broadcasting Corporation, in the Wrigley Building, Chicago, Ill.

Broadcasting from W-H-T

Al Carney, well known organist in W-H-T, who daily thrills a vast radio audience with his masterful playing of the Page DeLuxe Unit Organ, recently installed in Station W-H-T, Wrigley Building, Chicago—and Pat Barnes, premier W-H-T announcer, in the combination of “Al and Pat”, so enjoyable to listeners of the air—have made the W-H-T station universally popular all over the country.

Superior tonal qualities, instant responsiveness and master workmanship were the prime factors in the adoption of the Page Unit Organ by this powerful, well-known broadcasting station.

They wanted an organ suited beyond compare for the radio. Because of their size and standing, they wanted the largest organ used for direct broadcasting. They wanted the organ to be absolutely outstanding—more than an orchestral organ—a cathedral organ as well. And Page built that organ, fulfilling every wish and specification.

Four manuals, fifteen hundred pipes, a galaxy of traps and orchestral effects, all tied together by the famous Page Unit Relay System, and a beautifully carved console in rose and gold—these are the notable features of this Page masterpiece.

MUSIC IN THE THEATRE

Kornspan Creates Theatre Prestige

By IRENE JUNO

WASHINGTON, D. C., has had a few things happen, musically speaking, in the last few months, and is sitting up and taking notice. There is nothing like new ideas and young blood, and Adolphe Kornspan, fresh from a triumphal season in Philadelphia, where he conducted the Symphony Orchestra at the Fox theatre, and was also guest conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, has introduced a few ideas that are taking root.

Organists and conductors can easily introduce the same ideas in their city and will soon feel well repaid for their work.

As a beginning he got in touch with the president of the Parent-Teachers Association, and through Dr. Edwin C. Barnes, head of the public school music, they arranged to have 200 school children attend his regular rehearsal on Saturday morning. The children ranged in age from 7 to 12 years and were children who were studying music. Each Saturday they came from schools in different parts of the city in busses furnished by the P. T. A.

After they had assembled the rehearsal started and the men played for an hour. Then a recess was called while Mr. Kornspan explained instruments and numbers. Instead of the age old idea of the children practicing the scales and learning their music, the finished musician played scales for them and as each instrument was mentioned the musician stood and played, showing its range. Then Mr. Kornspan told about its place in the orchestra and a little about its origin.

This same idea carried out by an organist has unlimited possibilities. That such a big company as Fox is sponsoring it should seal it with approval, as the overhead in this house was greatly increased. Special ushers were engaged to seat the children and their teachers. Janitors were put in to clear away any paper that may have been left by the children, and the orchestra of 50 men were paid over time in order to give Mr. Kornspan plenty of time to explain and answer questions. And ask questions they did—by raising their hand the same as in school.

They were invited by Mr. Kornspan to come to his office at any time if they were really interested in music, and when this man finds a really interested child, his enthusiasm knows no limit. He finds through experience that the best way to educate children in music is in the motion picture theatre, and if you are going to feed them bad music you will get your bad returns plus the interest. But if the picture houses will play good music and will cooperate with the schools, we will have a nation of music loving people as great as any in the world.

In this work Mr. Kornspan received the cooperation of everyone, and although the Fox theatre does everything well and on a big scale the same idea could be used with less work and expense.

Mr. Kornspan made up his list of numbers for his concert and the ones he wanted to call particular attention to he would write a short article about. This was copied by his librarian, Fred Starke, and 220 copies were made and sent to the children and teachers about four days before. The teachers then read them and did preliminary explaining in school so that when the children arrived they knew what they had come to hear. Following is a copy of one of the programs sent out:

1. Ballet Music from "The Queen of Sheba"..... Goldmark
 - a. Dance of the Bayaderes.
 - b. Veil Dance (Cello Solo.)
 - c. Entrance of the Queen and Processional March. Goldmark's music to "The Queen of Sheba" is some of the most beautiful and original in the entire range of opera. It shows a richness that is well suited to gorgeous oriental effects. The present suite contains some of the most well-known excerpts from the opera—The Dance of the Bayaderes—Veil Dance, an entrancing cello solo of Act 3—and the Processional March (Act 1); the latter accompanies the arrival of Queen Sheba at the Court of King Solomon. A scene of remarkable brilliancy. Soldiers come marching up. Ladies and maidens, accompanied by female slaves, enter from all sides, the ladies strewing roses, the slaves carrying harps. The excitement and tumult increase until, as a final climax, the queen herself is borne in on a palanquin, surrounded by her personal escort.
2. a. "Songs My Mother Taught Me".....Dvorak
This song is an excellent example of national expression, as Dvorak has used with great skill Bohemian gypsy melodies in the setting of this simple verse:

*As my dear, old mother
Taught her children, singing,
Songs that from her eyelids
Tears so oft were bringing;
So, when for my children
Those old songs recalling,
Often flow the teardrops,
On my brown cheeks falling.*

What Price Organists?

A commentary on the so-called "jazz fakir"

A CRISIS is fast approaching with regards to the position of the great majority of the motion picture theatre organists in this country and out of this situation arises one all-important question.

Will the future organist be a "jazz fakir" or a versatile musician worthy of the name?

For several reasons I am inclined to think that it is only a matter of time before the former class will find themselves hopelessly in the discard and be forced, if they wish to retain their positions, to remedy the faults which, at present, are excluding them from the class of organists who may justly style themselves artists.

Up to the present the average exhibitor has been forced to take whatever men might be available in his particular section. Many of these organists are men who are devoid of artistic conscientiousness with the result that neither the exhibitors nor their audiences have received a fair deal from the musicians of this type.

Audiences, likewise, have been, heretofore, rather uncritical of the organists ability but it now appears that this situation is doomed to disappear. For this, the radio is, in no small measure, responsible for it has enabled people residing in even the most remote communities to hear the performances of the world's greatest artists in every field and in consequence has given them a standard by which to judge the work of their local musicians.

The result is obvious. The exhibitor who is employing an organist of inferior calibre will soon find his attendance dropping off in alarming fashion for his patrons will refuse to come to his theatre to see an otherwise enjoyable picture murdered by the inefficiency of an incompetent organist when at no expense whatsoever they may remain at home and listen to a world famed artist broadcasting over the radio.

There is, however, the other side of the picture which must not be ignored. It is an undeniable fact that a highclass and versatile organist is a box office attraction. But this last group of men who are good showmen, who have studied organ foundation, and can play with a true and faultless sense of color and rhythm. It is men of this sort who are able, by their own ability and personality, to fill a house and whose performances are a credit both to themselves and to the exhibitors.

In this connection it seems appropriate to consider just what part slides should occupy in the organists' repertoire. Slides have been a great aid toward enabling some organists to keep up their bluff. I am not prejudiced against slides, in fact, some of my best effects have been gained through their use. The music publishers have given the organists splendid material in this field and a good set of comedy slides or a version of a popular song asking the audience to join in always draws large applause but audiences must eventually tire of shouting their heads off to the accompaniment of the latest Broadway song hit.

The greatest draw-back to the use of slides is, however, that the organist who uses them is building his reputation and his success around the slides he is employing rather than around his own ability and personality. When a slide is flashed upon the screen the attention of the audience is attracted primarily to that slide and it is an impression of the slide and its appeal to them rather than an impression of the organist's talent and ability which they carry away from the theatre with them.

When the organist is playing a solo in the spotlight, however, the audience's entire and undivided attention is directed toward him and his success or his failure rests purely and simply upon his own ability to give them entertainment of a high order. But the power to give a performance of this type is gained only after prolonged and intensive study with men who are skilled in meeting the requirements of the modern motion picture theatre, but I feel sure that it is only a matter of time before organists the country over will realize that this advanced training is a necessity and will do everything in their power to get it.

For the reasons which I have set forth above I feel that the days of the "organ fakir" are numbered and that the demands of audience and exhibitor, alike, are going to make it imperative that the organist must educate himself to meet their standards, while those who refuse to do this will soon find themselves hopelessly outclassed and forever relegated to positions of minor importance.

The Theme Song Is Good Showmanship

MUSIC hath charms to exploit the motion picture. That, so far as is generally known, has never before been said. It is a case in which silence is golden, for the picture people and music folks have acted. And so, for quite a few productions for quite a few years, the outstanding screen production often has been complimented by some opus from our own, if inferior, successors to Beethoven et al. The compliment, be it said, has usually had more than a social significance.

Needless, of course, for this department to go to the trouble of endorsing such practices as good showmanship. Music and drama are as inseparable as the theatre and its box office. Cueing has become as important as directing. A theme song can do a lot for the acting.

An instance decidedly pertinent to the idea herein, is the song by Walter Donaldson and Howard Dietz which Feist has published as the theme song for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production, "Love." The picture is romantic to the extreme, and romance means the more intense phases of sentiment—making a theme song, with its ever recurrent, wistfully sentimental strains during the picture, just the thing to force the drama deeply into the experience of the spectator. Those strains, moreover, are remembered. They bring back the images of the picture. Therefore, is a theme song good showmanship? Emphatically it is.

Not all screen productions, of course, are adapted to this type of musical treatment. Usually the drama must concern the intensely emotional, for music is best when it seeks to reach the deeper feelings. The picture "Love" is doubtless the ideal kind of production for a thematic interpretation, which accounts, in part, at least, for the success of "That Melody of Love."

As much of the song as space permitted is reproduced on this page. Those who play on some instrument may like to try it, either before or after seeing the picture, to test for themselves what a theme song means to the impressiveness of a screen story.

How do you feel right now? The music. Things were so bright the world was in love. Night birds from their nest a dove. Sing that melody of love. There was a thrill and now it is gone. We kissed and felt the still of the dawn, Love-long to that melody of love.

Principle of Cove Lighting

Basic factors described in Major Equipment service manual.

MAJOR Equipment Company has just issued its new catalogue, which may be rightly termed a service manual. The book is a fine example of composition and printing. But more important, it contains between its covers many instructive articles for the exhibitor or builder who is planning the erection of a theatre.

An example of one of the highly important service features in the book is the presentation of the "basic factors in good cover lighting." The sketch above, reproduced from the catalogue, gives the reader an immediate conception of the principle of cover lighting.

"A good cove lighting job," reads the article, "depends as much on the contour of the dome and surface of the plaster as it does on the correct lighting equipment.

YOUR EVERYDAY PROBLEMS

Lights Out; Gives Second Performance

Well, one night the lights went out and never came up again until late at night. We waited 15 minutes for the lights and then dismissed the program. But we made a free show for all of those that were present to show them the comedy next night, because when the lights went out the show was just at the finish, and next night most of them that came in were the ones that liked comedies. Well, next time we will not let this happen if we can help it. But being dependent upon the light company we don't know what to do if the lights go out so we just have to wait for the service we get from the light company.—RUDOLPH DUBA, Royal theatre, Kimball, S. D.

Storage Batteries Overcome Emergency

When our lights went out through a burned out transformer on high line we went to a garage and borrowed 12 storage batteries connecting them in series of six and got a good light on 30 volt mazda for two hours, long enough to get the show through. In our case the lights went out just as we were opening. This gave us time to get fixed before starting time.—O. A. FOSSE, Community theatre, Ridgeway, Ia.

Seeks Decorative Scheme for House

My problems are large ones. So far my theatre is only the outer shell and entirely without any interior decorations, being merely plastered but without any ceiling except the roof dome with steel trusses in sight.

I am watching "Better Theatres" to catch a happy idea before I begin the big job, as up to date, I am unable to decide on any design.

As for little things, there are none that would be of interest to your readers.

My theatre is 36' x 70' with a balcony and a gallery extending 40' towards the front beneath which are the front lobby with a shop on each side of the lobby. The walls are 26' high supporting a roof dome in segment shape 4' higher in the center. If anything occurs to you kindly suggest the number.—A. J. GIBBONS, Illinois-Kozy-Elite theatres, Metropolis, Ill.

Localization

Wherever the railroad runs, wherever a theatre stands, there, too, National Service reaches. Through thirty-one branches, strategically located, this unique equipment and service institution reaches the most remote regions.

Its service, too, is unique, far reaching, and localized. The prospective theatre owner, in city or village, needs to provide only the walls and roof. National will furnish the rest. From screen to sidewalk every equipment detail is handled with scrupulous care for the owner's interests. National Service equipment products blend harmoniously into the job without those losses usually incident to scattered buying.

Naturally, since each local representative has behind him the vast purchasing and distributing power of National Service, economies are often made which cannot possibly be secured through a merely local organization.

The Brenkert Trio

Spotlamps, slide projectors, and effect lighting devices are now recognized as standard part of theatre equipment. The Brenkert products illustrated, are each masters of their field and are capable of adding considerably to the entertainment value of any theatre program.

F-6

Dissolving slides with but a single arc. The F-6, working on the reflector arc principle, will do this and so, quite logically, will reduce operating costs more than 50%, in addition to providing the very best slide projection yet attained. A new arc burner, automatic arc control, double achromatic lenses, and very simple adjustments are provided.

C-14

In the spotlighting field, the C-14 is head and shoulders above them all. In point of performance, economy, and ease of operation, it stands absolutely alone. Completely equipped with iris and framing shutters, double lenses, counter-balanced arc lamp and many other exclusive features.

F-3

There is little need to introduce the F-3. This machine is providing thousands of theatres with lighting effects which can be obtained in no other manner. Besides showing all kinds of moving scenic effects, it can also be used for dissolving slides and for projecting colored spots and floods. Completely counter-balanced and easily swiveled to cover any part of the stage.

The VOICE of The SILENT Drama

IN those tense moments which give the thrill of life and action to a photo-play, reality of impression depends on two senses—the message to ears as well as eyes. Let the Kilgen Wonder Organ delight your patrons with its vivid story! For with the resources of a full band, and the richness of a symphonic orchestra, it combines special devices which faithfully reproduce every imaginable sound, and truly make the silent drama live! With it, indeed, are moving pictures; since what the screen shows, the Organ tells!

from the Kilgen Organ:

- the lion's roar
- the clicking camera
- the rifle's crack
- the song of the jungle
- the thunderstorm
- the slashing rain
- the steamer's siren
- rattling chains
- the anchor's splash
- homeward bound
- the hurricane
- the calm; the rolling deep
- moonlight and music
- the busy harbor
- home, sweet home.
- these and a thousand sound-pictures—true to life
- are daily told by the great Kilgen Theatre Organ.

Theatre Fire May Result in Fire Ordinance Change for Kansas City Houses

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 14.—A city ordinance here compelling all theatres to be equipped with non-inflammable curtains and drops may result from the recent fire in the Isis theatre, which suffered $15,000 losses by fire when velvet curtains were ignited by sparks caused from friction.

Fire entirely destroyed the Columbia theatre at Junction City, Missouri, last week. The house was owned by the Glenn Dickinson circuit of theatres. A new house will be built and opened in about four months. A fire which swept all the business section of Frontenac, Kansas, last Wednesday, destroyed the Lyric theatre.

At Montreal, Quebec, the quick thinking of an operator saved a possible audience disturbance when film caught fire in the booth. The operator remained at his post and kept the booth door closed while he fought the flames.

Wrong Placement of Organ in Pit May Prove Costly

Chief engineer of George Kilgen & Sons addresses National Theatre Supply Convention on necessity of proper measurements in installation of instruments

By MAX HESS

I HAVE often felt the desire of having an opportunity to get in personal contact with you men and to talk to you along the technical lines in pipe organ building.

From correspondence and also through conversation with some of you gentlemen that I have had the pleasure of meeting, I found that I apparently have a very poor reputation, or rather the reputation of a man that is awfully hard to please when it comes down to just the small item of measurements for an organ, although I believe those that I have met have somewhat changed their mind, and I want to change it in every one of you by trying to show you how important the item of measurements really is in an organ sale.

You know the saying, that we profit by experience. Only experience sometimes is an expensive teacher, and I believe at times expense could have been eliminated had we ever had an opportunity to get together as we have now at this time, and I want to thank National Theatre Supply Company, and especially Mr. DeKruiff for giving me an opportunity to talk to you. I feel sure the results will be mutually beneficial.

First let us look at organ construction, and only from the sales point of view. While I have not had a great deal of experience in the sales end, still I imagine that when you approach a prospective buyer, this man undoubtedly has some idea of where he wants the organ placed, and I would also imagine that would be one of the first subjects that is brought up. Possibly this customer will show you a space, and you being anxious to please, which should be a salesman's attitude, it is very natural that you will assure this prospect, "Oh, yes! We can place the organ in this space very easily." I am saying this not altogether by assumption, but this very thing has happened and has proved to be one of these expensive experiences that I have referred to.

How to Telegraph to Factory for Approval

In order that you will understand this more readily, I have laid out sketches illustrating the various conditions that you are likely to meet, and with these sketches, I hope that we will be able to work out a plan that will assist you in selling.

Instead of assuring your customer that you can easily place an organ in such and such a place, unless the space is very large and you are absolutely sure that an instrument can be erected, I suggest that you wire us giving the dimensions, telling your customer that you feel certain that the space is satisfactory but that you wish to be absolutely sure and would prefer to consult with the factory. Some of you have at times wired in for such information, but being unfamiliar with terms, the telegrams were not always very plain, so allow me to suggest a standard phraseology for such telegrams. Let us say the space consists of width, depth, and height, in other words, you face an organ chamber and it is so wide, like the width of a door and you enter it and it is so deep, the depth of a room, and of a certain height.

Assuming now that you have a prospect, we will say for a UO-16X, and it is to be divided in two chambers, a telegram asking for the information according to the explanation I have made would read something like this:

"Bijou Theatre, Cincinnati, considers UO-16X divided, chamber one A. B. 10 feet 8 inches, A. C. 8 feet 2 inches, C. E. 14 feet 3 inches, E. B. 3 feet 1 inch, 14 feet high. Chamber 2 A. B. 8 feet 7 inches, A. C. 7 feet 4 inches, C. E. 9 feet 4 inches, E. B. zero, 11 feet high, space for relay under chamber one."

On receipt of a telegram of this kind we will be able to answer you almost within an hour—we can tell from these dimensions that the space would be sufficient. If there is any doubt, we would make a rough layout, and you would have an answer back

Salesmen for the National Theatre Supply Company

in from three to four hours. You will note that I mentioned in the telegram "the relay under chamber one." The space for an organ is invariably limited, and if you are in doubt whether an organ could be placed in a certain space, ascertain if additional space for the relays is available. The space may be under the stage, providing it is not too damp, or under an organ chamber, or above a chamber—the relay is the only thing that can be separated from the organ, and by doing this we will gain additional room.

Taking Pains Should Make Customer Confident

You now have the information with which to proceed with your customer, selling the size organ you have in mind deciding whether you could propose a larger organ, or whether it will be necessary to recommend a smaller style (which we will never ourselves recommend unless absolutely necessary). Looking at this procedure from a sales angle alone, I would imagine that after you have taken that much pains in the presence of your customers and have received definite information from the factory, it should have had a tendency to gain the confidence of your prospect. I am a firm believer that selling a pipe organ is no different from selling a set of books—the salesman gains the confidence of his customer, and the sale is made.

The information that we have on hand now, however, is not sufficient to really lay out an organ and draw up working plans. You, however, are on the ground and can secure this information at that time by carefully measuring the chambers, and for this purpose I have made a number of sketches showing various conditions. And, by the way, of all these sketches that I have shown you and will show you, we have made a set of small prints for your various offices, so that you will have something to go to and work by. You will find full information and instruction on these prints.

On a new theatre under construction, when the building is not far enough along to take actual measurements then, of course, we have to depend on blue prints from the architect. Whenever possible, try and get in touch with the architect and secure full print showing the organ chambers, both plan and section. Our experience is that the average architect is not very well versed in building suitable organ chambers, although architects have made great progress within the last few years. One item that is invariably missing on the architect's plans is the organ chamber floor and ceiling—if the prints do not show this, have the architect or contractor work them in for you.

Measurements for Tone Opening Very Important

Then there is another item that is oft-times misunderstood, and that is the tone opening. The average man, even an architect, is under the impression that the entire grill opening must serve as tone opening for a pipe organ, and the architect is ever afraid that the ornamental work, which is of greatest interest to him, will be interfered with. Here I mean the ornamental grills in front of the organ chamber. As I have already stated, the most effective tone openings should be from 5 to 6 feet high; from 8 to 10 feet wide, and should start about 4 feet from the floor. The organ grill or openings invariably start from the organ floor, and that is where the misunderstanding arises.

Assuming we have an organ grill 12 feet wide by 10 feet high, in back of this grill will be the tone opening, 6 feet high by 8 feet wide, then all that is necessary, is to close in the balance of the space, which does not interfere in the least with the ornamental work in front of the grill; so when that question comes up, explain this either to the owner, architect or contractor.

I might say, when irregular lines and curves occur in an organ grill, it is invariably necessary to erect a tone wall in the back of the grill. In that case there is no connection whatsoever between the tone opening of the organ and the grill. One thing should be kept in mind, and that is to have as little obstruction in front of the organ tone opening as possible, so as to admit the tone freely into the auditorium.

If you gentlemen will follow these suggestions and instructions, I am sure that we will profit by it and it will also greatly help the deliveries. You must understand that it is impossible to even assemble an instrument, and sometimes when it is an absolute special job, to start work on parts, until the question of space is fully settled.

In checking back, I find that at times it has taken from two to six weeks to get the necessary information that would enable us to proceed with the plans, and all of this time is lost to you and to us, the delivery of the organs is delayed, and the result is a dissatisfied customer—and we can't afford to have them. Every organ that you sell ought to sell you another one, and the best booster and the best advertisement is a satisfied customer that is ready to go out and help you close other business, and while I know we have a number of such men, some of whom I have had the pleasure to meet, I especially recall one instance in Brooklyn, where the manager and owner solicited Mr. Alfred Kilgen and myself, who happened to visit this theatre to bring prospective customers, that they surely would do all they could to help place Kilgen organs. That's the kind of customers we want to have, not the kind who says, "Well they are weeks behind." Time is lost by not having the necessary technical information on hand.

Let us hope that this gathering has brought us closer together and has created a better understanding, and don't ever feel that the engineering department is trying to burden you with unnecessary technicalities.

From Shingooi came Dai-Nichi Nyorai, to preside in the new Fox theatre in Detroit. Dai-Nichi will look down from above the organ grills, 60 feet above the audience. In fact, he will look down from either side of the proscenium arch. This icon of the Brahmin faith was carved by Paul Till for the C. Howard Crane firm of architects, and is an accomplishment of adroit delicacy and shrewd interpretation. The dual Dai-Nichi will not be without devotees in the Western Hindoo temple that Fox is creating.

THE FAITHFUL HAND THAT AUTOMATICALLY SWITCHES ON EMERGENCY LIGHT THE INSTANT ACCIDENTAL DARKNESS THREATENS DISASTERS

Necessarily restricted in area, this foyer yet has the charm of good taste. The treatment of ceiling has the practical effect of adding width. Here, too, the unusual stencil-work.

The Villard—a Theatre Beautiful in a Small Town

Situated in Villa Park, a small suburb of Chicago, and seating only 1,000, the Villard is yet a truly fine theatre. These pictures may indicate its distinguished beauty.

A side wall of the auditorium resplendent with further evidence that in the Villard, stencil decoration has been given a place among the fine arts.

Another view of the auditorium, showing principally the use of stencils in decorating the ceiling. Attempted by a true artist, the result of the stencil-work in the Villard is distinguished.

Novel Ideas Make Villard a "Theatre Different"

The architects, Betts & Holcomb of Chicago, conceived a number of unusual features for the Villard. One lowered the insurance rate. Others are disclosed in the pictures above.

Construction Style Cuts Insurance Rate

By JOSEPH C. FISHER

[Pictures in this issue]

SEVERAL years ago an architectural firm designed a theatre on which the insurance rates proved to be abnormally high. This led to an investigation—and the results of this investigation form the most important of the several unique features incorporated in the new Villard theatre in Villa Park, Ill.

The Villard has roof trusses and a ceiling of wood. The regulation plaster ceiling was dispensed with. Such a construction, Betts & Holcomb found, lowered the insurance rates. And more than that: it resulted in greater speed of erection, an unusual adaptability to painted decoration, and exceptional acoustic qualities.

The Villard, which seats 1,000, is truly a theatre beautiful in a small town. Villa Park is only a village, suburban to Chicago. A theatre therein must necessarily keep within moderate costs, and the Villard does. But it is comfortable and beautiful, nevertheless, showing what can be done in the town of small population.

Among the several points of distinction in the Villard is the location of the organ. Instead of placing the instrument in the pit or near it, the architects placed the console in a small balcony to one side of the proscenium arch. This eliminated the necessity of installing an elevator-mounting in order to give the organist proper conspicuity during solos. This novel location, moreover, permits the musical attraction offered by an organ to exert its full force.

Another distinctive feature of the Villard—and one which may easily prove extremely important to those contemplating the erection or remodeling of a theatre—is the wall decorations. Villa Park, of course, could not support an investment necessary to adorn the interior with expensive hangings, friezes, and so on. On the other hand, this community, suburban to a great city, required beauteous appointments. This problem was met, as those others were met, by dispensing with the old and creating the new. It was decided to decorate the theatre with stencil-painting, not with the usual sign painters stencils, but with stencils created by an artist.

Alphonso Ianelli, the sculptor, was engaged, and appraising his canvas, so to speak, he made designs specifically for every part of the theatre, achieving, of course, the distinguished artistry that his talent assured.

The stencil decorations, harmoniously colored, geometrically fascinating, give the effect of expensive glazed inlays. On close observation, naturally, this illusion disappears. But as the theatre is entered and the performance watched, the impression is one of resplendently beautiful surroundings, which is, perhaps, all that the average patron commonly experiences in any theatre.

The lighting in the Villard is a combination of the direct and indirect types. The main house lighting is obtained from large polished selves fixtures on pilaster mountings along the side walls. These fixtures are so studded that no glare reaches the audience. Instead, the light is thrown back upon the wall surfaces, bringing out the colors of the decoration very clearly. In addition, the entire cornice of the auditorium is of pierced plaster, forming a niche in which are concealed colored lights on a dimmer system.

The heating and ventilation is by means of an air blast system, temperature-controlled. The stage is of good size and is provided with five sets of lines and automatic curtain control.

Supreme Company Adds Air-Washing to Cooling System

The Supreme Heater & Ventilating Corporation of St. Louis, maker of theatre cooling and heating systems, announces two improvements on the Supreme cooling system for 1928.

First, an all steel housing for its cooling blower, replacing the wood-and-metal housing formerly used.

Second, is the addition of air-washing to the cooling system.

Air-washing in the Supreme system is provided by means of the Supreme Electric Turbo Air-Washing Unit. This unit creates a positive, foggy, water-spray through which the air must pass before entering the cooling blower.

V. Hugoniot, president of the company, states that the addition of this unit has resulted in greatly increased cooling and freshening of the air.

b. Hungarian Dance No. 5.....Brahms
Brahms' Hungarian Dances were originally written for violin. Although he does not give us a clue as to whether the dances are original or taken from Hungarian melodies, it is certain they possess all the national characteristics of the Czardas, the alternating slow Lasso and the rapid Friska being excellently employed.

3. Bell Song from "Lakme" (Miss Muriel La France, Coloratura Soprano).....Delibes

This famous aria occurs in Act II of Delibes opera "Lakme," the scene of which is laid in India. It derives its name because of the composer's use of bells to characterize the appearance of Lakme, in the attire of a dancing girl. Only Delibes could have written this graceful and semi-oriental melody, in which the flavor of the East qualifies in a charming manner a brilliant display piece for the soprano voice. Note particularly the refrain where voice, woodwind and bells blend with many charming touches.

4. PanamericanaHerbert

This number was originally composed by Victor Herbert for the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, N. Y., and is a musical illustration of the same idea that inspired that project. The Pan-American idea appears in the work in the "Indian" character of the first, the "Down South" character of the second, and the "South American" (Spanish) character of the third part.

5. First Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt

This composition is an orchestral arrangement of No. 14 of the original 15 Hungarian Rhapsodies for piano by Franz Liszt. They are really tone pictures of Gypsy life. There are effects like those of the gypsy instruments such as cembalon, etc. The sawing and scraping of the fiddles, the rapid evolutions of the dancers, the passion, the coquetry, the joyous cries of those who look on, are all in these rhapsodies.

The dance being, as is often the custom with the gypsies, in a slow mournful proud strain—a moody extemporization, free in rhythm, gradually changing in spirit from grave to gay. After passages ornamental with those flourishes which are characteristic of the gypsies, the pace quickens and the dance proper begins.

To The Children and Students of Washington, D. C.:

It is my earnest desire to be of any help to you in your studies of music. In selecting the programs for these Sunday Concerts it is my aim to choose numbers you may be familiar with. Please try to pay particular attention during the rehearsals and learn to distinguish the tonal colors of the various instruments of a modern symphony orchestra. By reading these program notes you will benefit materially. Take them with you and save them for the future.

A. S. KORNSPAN.

Incidentally it is not beyond me to speak of the commercial value of such an idea. Naturally the children are interested in the programs and talk about them at home, and the parents being of a curious nature are sure to think of the Fox theatre when they want to go to the picture show. They have a high regard for Mr. Kornspan, though they know him only by the children's talk, but they feel he is helping John or Mary so they go to the Fox to see him and hear his music. Mr. Kornspan is perfecting plans for next season and this innovation with which he stirred musical Washington may extend over the entire chain of theatres from Coast to Coast.

The concerts for which these rehearsals were held are given on Sunday from 2 to 3, and although the Fox is the biggest house in Washington and seats 4,000, it is impossible to get a seat after 2 p. m. These concerts are on the air and the announcer has to cover his ears and talk into the mike over the applause.

The way this genius handles his numbers, dressing the old favorites in new garb, can best be illustrated by his clever work with that familiar number "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" by Liszt. Instead of a straight overture with lights and solos he used a reproducing piano on the stage with cadenzas and incidental passages by Paderewski. The curtains opened only enough to show the piano and the lights were thrown on it. It was a good idea to have the piano keys in action, and many remarks were made about it. It would have been an unimportant item to some directors, but it was a finishing touch that Mr. Kornspan did not overlook. The way the violins were brought in with the piano was little short of marvelous and the entire handling of the overture was an exhibition of skill and creative genius. Mr. Kornspan took three bows on its initial showing and left them still applauding. He followed with his own arrangement of "When Day Is Done," which would have to be heard to be appreciated.

This idea could be used by organists to good returns and would be different than playing the whole number through.

Eleven Companies Merge in Forming Ice Machine Firm

Announcement has just been made that York Ice Machinery Corporation of York, Pa., which will manufacture, market and service refrigerating machinery, has become operative through a merger of the following companies:

York Manufacturing Company, York, Pa.; The Arctic Ice Machine Company, Canton, O.; Bay State Construction and Supply Company, Boston, Mass.; Central Construction and Supply Company, Philadelphia, Pa.; Greenwood Construction and Supply Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Shipley Construction and Supply Company, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Southern Construction and Supply Company, Atlanta, Ga.; York-Ohio Ice Machine Company, Cleveland, O.; York Oil and Chemical Company, York, Pa.; York Milk Machinery Company, York, Pa.; York Products Corporation, St. Louis, Mo.

Officers of the new concern are: Thomas Shipley, President; H. D. Pownall, Vice-President; W. S. Shipley, Vice-President and General Manager (Eastern Division), V. H. Becker, Jr., Vice-President and General Manager (Western Division), S. J. Shipley, Vice-President and Treasurer, E. A. Kleinschmidt, Secretary and General Assistant Treasurer, S. E. Lauer, Assistant to the President, W. L. Glatfelter, P. H. Glatfelter, F. W. Pilsbry, V. K. Keeseey, W. W. Hepburn.

In a statement regarding the merger, the operating company says:

"This merger included not only the physical assets of the subscribing companies, but also the men who are responsible for the formation of the new corporation.

"Hence, this new corporation will not only have the advantage of the factory facilities, financial backing, research findings and field service of the old organizations, but will also have the advantage of the cumulative experience and business ability of the men whose thorough and intimate knowledge of the industry made possible the individual success of the merged companies."

Special Wood Is Used in Organ for Havana

Music for patrons of the new Encanto theatre in Havana, Cuba, will be supplied by a Kilgen organ, according to Eugene R. Kilgen, secretary of George Kilgen & Sons, Inc. Because of the difference in climate in Havana and St. Louis, home of The Kilgen factory, the organ was constructed of specially prepared woods.

Six other theatres in as many states have received Kilgen two-manual organs during the past 30 days. The theatres and cities in which they are located are: Towson, Towson, Md.; Ohio, Youngstown, O.; La Paloma, Encinitas, Cal.; Dreamland, New Haven, Conn.; Paramount, Mt. Airy, N. The Principle of Cove Lighting

The dome should be elliptical in cross section but acoustal and structural conditions will not always permit this curve. In general it may be said that whatever the shape of the cove it is well to curve up away from the lighting trough rapidly for at least three feet and then gradually curve to the center. No portion of a plaster dome may be flat if even distribution of light is desired. Plaster should be rough dull finish—never glazed.

Note in the section above that the reflectors should be directed toward the center of the ceiling in order to get the best possible effect. The use of Major individual reflector cove lighting trough with diffusing lenses insures the best possible distribution because the reflectors project a beam towards the center of the dome, while the diffusing cover glass spreads the secondary beam and smoothly illuminates the dome close to the trough. The diffusing cover glass not only gives perfect distribution in front of the face of the reflector, but also spreads the correct amount of light slightly in back of the reflector face so as to insure good lighting down to some point below the sight line.

"Colors must repeat at least every 24 in. in order to insure perfect distribution. There are some exceptions to this rule, but in most cases it should be adhered to. However, we suggest putting your cove lighting problems up to our engineers, because each individual cove requires study and special treatment for real results. Hand holes should be provided on 18 in. centers for relamping."

Minusa Offering New Steel Frame for Its Screens

An all steel frame for motion picture screens, built of special rolled steel and braced at the corners with tubular braces, has been perfected by Minusa Cine Screen Company.

In announcing the new frame, Minusa officials state:

"With the general change in the entertainment program of most theatres, especially the larger ones, it is necessary to have the installation of the screen one in which it can be easily flown. No lag screws, or bolts, protrude from the rear of this new frame, thereby eliminating the fouling against other scenery when the screen is being raised or lowered, and making it adapted for flying. It is extremely light in weight, yet exceptionally rigid, compact in construction and very easily assembled.

"The frame itself is built of special rolled steel, braced at each corner with tubular braces. A steel strip, one inch wide, clamps the screen securely to the frame, this strip being bolted with short brass bolts and nuts. The use of brass bolts and nuts not only makes tacking unnecessary but eliminates any rust or corrosion. The frame is reinforced in the rear by a steel band, through which is placed a row of brass wing tension screws for tightening up the screen in the frame. By the use of the wing tension screws the screen can be tightened and any wrinkles removed by merely making a few turns by hand.

"Standardized extensions of various lengths are attachable to each side of the frame for the use of drapes, maskings or scenery. Extensions of various lengths may also be attached at the bottom of the frame in order to regulate the distance the screen is to rest above the stage floor.

"The assembling of this new steel frame is so simple, and it is so compact in construction, that two ordinary mechanics, without experience, can fully assemble it in about one hour's time."

Instantaneous Control with the Utmost Ease

THE controls are shown at the rear of the spotlight in the illustration above. No. 1 controls the Curtain Shutter; No. 2 operates the Iris Shutter; No. 3 are the levers for control of the color frames; separate lever for each color frame; each lever keyed to correspond with the color it controls; No. 4 focuses the arc in respect to the lens; No. 5 adjusts the arc length; No. 6 the handle for directing the light beam; No. 7 the wing lock that holds the hood securely in position.

KLIEGL leads again with new ideas in spotlight design — centralizing all controls conveniently at the rear of the hood—providing for speedy and easy operation—with the fine balance and flexibility that has always been characteristic of Kliegl spotlights.

Laws of The Theatre

patron is unnecessarily beaten or injured, the proprietor is liable for damages and possibly criminally prosecuted. (93 Pa. St. 234.)

On the other hand, if the patron resists ejection, after refusing to leave by request, he may be seriously injured while the theatre owner or his employes honestly endeavor to eject him, or in self defense, without liability on the part of the theatre owner. (45 N. Y. S. 947.)

Also, in a recent case (60 So. 385) a theatre proprietor was held not liable for ejecting a patron who was mistakenly believed by the former to be intoxicated, while in fact he was sober.

Therefore, it is quite apparent that any disorderly patron may be forcibly ejected from a theatre, without liability on the part of the theatre owner, if such disorderly person refuses to leave after being requested to do so. The same rule is applicable to patrons who disobey the theatre rules and regulations, or who perform any act not generally conceded to be an act ordinarily expected of theatre patrons.

However, a theatre proprietor is liable in damages for any injury sustained by a patron as a result of any undue force or act, particularly if the injury was effected by the owner, or any employe while acting within the scope of the employment.

For instance, in the case Hinson v Morris, 298 S. W. 254, decided during the past few weeks, it was disclosed that an employe, who was authorized to maintain order on the premises, became engaged in an argument with a patron and clubbed him without provocation. The injured person sued the proprietor for $5,000 damages, as a result of the injuries sustained. The proprietor sought to avoid liability on the grounds that the employe acted without the scope of employment and that he had acted against instructions of his employer in injuring the patron under the circumstances.

However, the court held the proprietor liable, and explained the law in the following language:

"In the argument much stress is laid upon the suggestion, if the master (proprietor) exercises due care in the selection of competent and careful servants, that for their gross or willful neglect, even in the discharge of their duties in his business, he is not liable. . . . The doctrine seems to us to be unsound, if not pernicious. It would imply that, with respect to all of the grossly neglectful acts or intentional acts of the servant in the supposed furtherance of his master's business, the law clothed the master with immunity, if the act was right, because it was right, and, if it was wrong, it clothed him with like immunity because it was wrong. He would thus get the benefit of all his servant's acts done for him, whether right or wrong, and escape the burden of all intentional or grossly neglectful acts done for him which were wrong. . . . Mental anguish and physical pain arising from bodily injuries are proper elements of damages, and where such bodily injuries are proved, and defendant's (proprietor's) liability therefor is established, physical pain and mental anguish can be considered as elements of damages."

In the majority of states, where no law exists regarding the legal duties of a theatre owner toward the holder of a ticket of admission, the proprietor is under no obligations to permit a patron to enter or remain in the show, irrespective whether he is disorderly. In other words, at any time the owner is privileged to return to the patron the price of admission and use force

LENS TALKS
No. 3

ABERRATIONS

The sharpest image is formed by that lens which, under otherwise equal conditions is best corrected. There are six major aberrations with which the lens designer has to contend, as follows:

Chromatic aberration is responsible for color fringes at the boundary line between black and white areas and affects the whole extent of the screen image.

Spherical aberration causes fuzzy boundary lines and reduces contrast between black and white. It should be looked for only in the center of the picture since a similar effect in the margin may be due to other causes.

A difference in the focus setting of the lens for sharpness at the center and in the margin of the picture indicates that the lens has curvature of field.

A difference between the focus setting of the lens required for best definition of vertical and horizontal lines in the margin is the result of astigmatism in the lens.

One sided fuzziness of vertical lines at the side of the picture indicates coma.

Curvature in the margin of the picture of lines which should be straight, (such as the cornice of a building) is due to distortion.

The next installment will say something about testing the lens for its quality.

in ejecting him if he refuses to leave in an orderly manner. (12 N. Y. S. 680) (117 N. Y. S. 979.)

Not only is a theatre proprietor legally entitled to eject a disorderly patron, under all circumstances, where he refuses to leave upon request, but he may be ejected completely from the theatre premises including the lot. However, the owner always is liable if the ejection acts are continued after the patron is completely off the theatre premises.

Conflicting Tax Laws

In many instances theatre proprietors are paying excessive taxes under one law, while unbeknown to them another law exists under which the rate of taxes may be considerably decreased.

For example, in King V State, 140 S. E. 513, the proprietor of a vaudeville show was taxed under paragraph 45 of a high rate tax law which provided, as follows:

"Upon all concerts, shows, and exhibitions charging an admission, not otherwise herein taxed, in or near cities of less than 5,000 inhabitants, $25; in or near cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants and not more than 20,000 inhabitants, $50; for each day."

However, he discovered that another law existed which read, as follows:

"Upon each and every electric show or exhibition of moving pictures, or illustrated songs, except where given for educational purposes, and upon each place where vaudeville performances are given, whether with or without electric show or moving pictures, for each place of business in or near cities from 5,000 to 10,000 inhabitants, $7 per month," etc.

The owner of the theatre contended that the latter law was applicable to his vaudeville show, irrespective whether he displayed motion pictures. The lower court held that he must pay taxes under the high rate tax law but the higher court reversed the decision, saying:

"The section of the act (paragraph 45) under which the state insists the license should be paid makes no reference whatever to vaudeville shows, but on the contrary it excludes vaudeville shows, since it taxes only shows and exhibitions 'not otherwise herein taxed.' . . . Furthermore, if vaudeville shows were taxed under paragraph 45, as insisted by the state, the tax for a town the size that Cordele is shown to be, would be, in addition to the license imposed by the city, $1,300 per month, or $15,600 per year, which might be construed as being prohibitive for a show such as the evidence shows this one to be; and statutes must be given a reasonable intent and the constitutionality thereof upheld whenever possible."

Thus, it is quite apparent that this theatre proprietor saves approximately $1,293 each month by conducting the show under the low rate tax law.

Illuminate Dark Steps

The law is well established that a theatre patron is entitled to recover damages for injuries sustained as a result of negligence on the part of a theatre owner or his employes. Therefore, the details of the recent case of Gibbons V Balaban & Katz Corporation, 242 Ill. App. 524, is important, because through knowledge of this litigation, its cause and final outcome, other theatre owners may avoid similar litigations and liability for damages.

The facts of the case are that a woman patron purchased tickets and entered the Tivoli theatre during the first exhibition that evening of the feature picture. They were guided to seats in the balcony, alongside one of the middle aisles, by an usher who carried a flashlight. During the second exhibition, they decided to leave, and rising from their seats while the theatre was in its usual darkened condition when pictures were being shown upon the screen, stepped into the aisle and walked a few steps to a stairway. While slowly descending the stairs and "feeling" her way along, she slipped or stumbled and fell to the foot of the stairs, breaking her left leg. She was taken to a hospital and treated, and did not resume her accustomed work for about four months.

She incurred a physician's bill of $350, which the evidence showed was a reasonable charge for the services, and expended $870.50 for nurses, hospital bills, etc.

The injured patron sued the theatre owner for damages, and during the trial testified as follows:

"I started down the stairs, and there wasn't any light. I couldn't see, so I felt my way the best I could. . . . When I got a few steps down something caught my heel, and I fell. . . . I had gone down three or four steps of the stairs. . . . I slipped with my right foot and in slipping I went clear down one step, and then my heel caught and threw me down, and I fell forward."

Other evidence was introduced which tended to prove that she could not see, because the theatre steps were not properly illuminated.

This higher court held the theatre owner liable for $1,500 damages, and explained the law, as follows:

"We think, that under the facts disclosed, it was defendant's (owner's) duty to its patrons to sufficiently light the aisle and stairway during the exhibition of a picture. It appears that during exhibitions they entered or left the theatre at will by way of said aisle and stairway and by other aisles, etc. The owner of a place of entertainment is charged with an affirmative positive obligation to know that the premises are safe for the public use, and to furnish adequate appliances for the prevention of injuries which might be anticipated from the nature of the performance. . . . He is required to use care and diligence to put and keep the premises and appliances in a reasonably safe condition for persons attending; and if he fails to perform his duty in this respect so that the premises or appliances are in fact unsafe, he may be held liable for personal injuries thereby."

Sentry About Grants English Sales Rights

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—English rights to the merchandising of the Sentry Safety Control, fire preventive device manufactured by the Sentry Safety Control Corporation, Philadelphia, and distributed in this country by the National Theatre Supply Company, were practically granted last week, when Joseph E. Cohen, head of Sentry, talked to London from Philadelphia by long distance telephone.

It is probable that Cohen, accompanied by Senator Max Aaron, attorney for Sentry, will go to England shortly to complete the deal.

3 Branches Result of Expansion of Fulton Theatre Supply Firm

Expansion plans of the E. E. Fulton Company, Chicago, distributors of theatrical supplies, which have been under way for many months, have been put into execution with the establishment in Milwaukee and New York of branch offices and the announcement that by the first of March, another branch in San Francisco will be opened.

Another announcement by the company declares that a new projector will be placed in production from specifications of a German firm which some time ago ceased manufacturing the machine because of financial difficulties. The projector will be available to the general market in about two months, it is said, with the first one to be installed in the Orpheum theatre now under construction in Milwaukee.

The Fulton Company is one of the oldest in the field, and now, in addition to the products it manufactures, those of other firms will be distributed.

F & R to Build Five Minneapolis Houses, Starting in Spring

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 14.—Five new show houses in Minneapolis are listed on Finkelstein and Ruben's building program for the summer months in Minneapolis. According to I. H. Ruben, senior member of the firm who has been spending most of his time of late on the construction plans of the corporation, work on all the theatres is expected to start early in the spring.

Minneapolis' first atmospheric house, built along the lines of the Dodge-Chateau at Rochester, Minn., pictures of which were printed in BETTER THEATRES a few weeks ago, will be erected on Lake street at Stevens Avenue. This is on Minneapolis' "farthest out" business street, which is bordered on both sides by a large residence section. The theatre will be of the French chateau design and very similar in construction to the Rochester theatre. It will seat approximately 2,000 and will cost $750,000.

The Calhoun Terrace, also on Lake Street, and near Hennepin Avenue, a popular corner on which Finkelstein and Ruben now operate the Lagoon theatre, will be transformed into an atmospheric picture house. The building was erected for theatrical purposes but was later transformed into a dance hall. Approximately $300,000 will be spent in remodeling it.

Negotiations are pending for work on three other theatres, Ruben said, but he declined to give their locations, due to the fact that all ground leases had not been signed up. It is known that the company plans to remodel one of its smaller houses on Lake Street, which will mean practically a rebuilding. This house is located in the east section of the street in a rapidly growing territory and for some time has been unable to present the type of shows demanded.

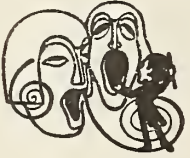

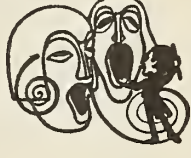

Ruben has indicated that practically all the houses will be in the south section of Minneapolis, which is seeing the greatest residential growth. Residents have opposed the idea of a theatre in their small business section, but it is understood that these objections have waned considerably of late, so that when the company gets ready to put up its house it will find little opposition.

Lew White Opens Organ School

Lew White, chief organist of the Roxy theatre, New York, and exclusive Brunswick artist, announces the opening of the White Institute of Organ at 1680 Broadway. Mr. White, in association with Dezso D'Antalfy and a large staff of assistants, will train students of the organ "to meet the requirements of the motion picture theatre, to create true orchestral color and to interpret Debussy, Herbert and popular music in a distinctive, modern style."

The Kimball Company of Chicago has installed three of its organs, one three-manual and two two-manual, in the White conservatory.

Model Alhambra
After the Famous Spanish Theatre

[Pictures on page 25]

A STRIKING example of art in architecture as applied to motion picture theatres, is the new Alhambra, which recently opened to the public in Sacramento, Cal. Probably nowhere else in the world is there anything quite like this playhouse, built by George W. Peltier, prominent banker and civic worker of California's capital city, and his associates, organized as the Granada Company.

Erected in one of the city's most exclusive residential sections, and embodying all the latest features and conveniences of modern theatrical design, it is modeled after the famous Alhambra in Granada, Spain, immortalized in prose by Washington Irving. Outside, the beautiful Moorish architecture has been utilized, while inside are blended both Spanish and Italian motifs. It is a class A building, constructed of reinforced steel and concrete, and is completely fireproof.

The approach 50 feet deep to the main entrance, is through high walled gardens, where water falls over bright colored tile and where pools in the shape of Maltese crosses, marble benches, and shrubs, foliage and flowers, combine in a brilliant symphony of color, typically Moorish, and reminiscent of the gardens in the original Alhambra. Hand-made tile in Moorish design, in yellows, blues and reds, line and back the fountains and outline walls eight feet in thickness. Here also are located a half-dozen plaques, on which have been inscribed selections from the world's immortal literature.

Inside the motif changes sharply to Spanish and Italian. The treatment is in rich blues, greens, and gold, in the hangings and on the stuccoed walls and the square-coffered ceiling. Mural paintings also adorn the interior. Staircases in delicately wrought iron lead from each end of the foyer. A view of the gardens is afforded from the first landing, while a great Moorish art glass window veils the eyes at the second. There are statuary and paintings and rich soft rugs to add luxury to the luxury that the architects provided.

From the balcony huge timbers, beautifully carved, incline to the prescenum arch. Elegant tapestries adorn the walls, their textures giving the impression that lights of varied hues are constantly playing upon them. A huge gold curtain hides the stage, and on this is a painting of Granada, with the Alhambra the dominant structure.

The stage is 100 feet in width and 30 feet deep. The gridiron for handling the scenery is 60 feet above the stage level and is equipped with ballbearing roller apparatus and a counter-weight system.

AND MANY OTHERS USING "AMERICA'S FINEST ORGAN"

Some Marr and Colton Installations During 1927

On this page is a partial roll call of theatres that feature the Marr and Colton organ. Motion picture audiences have been trained to expect, and finally to want, Marr and Colton organ music. Nothing takes its place. Nothing else will do.

The evidence spread on this page gives a clue to the correct solution. You are invited to ask any of the above exhibitors their opinion of the Marr and Colton organ. It is in their theatre—their opinion will be from experience.

Let us make a careful analysis of your musical problem. Your inquiry entails no obligation on your part. Mail coupon for catalog.

"Runs like a top" SMOOTHNESS

Mr. O. F. Spahr,
Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

November 19, 1927

Dear Sir:

It is now six months since the Proctors 86th St. Theatre opened, and the 3 Motiographs DeLuxe which were installed, are running like tops, they are great and I have yet, in all my years as projectionist, to see a projection machine with as many important improvements as that which the Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. has embodied in their latest effort.

It is a wonderful machine, particularly, might I mention, the new type double bearing intermittent movement, the coolness of the aperture plate immediately after running film at 125 amps. and the simplicity in getting at different parts for quick repair.

My Partner, Joe Kleinman and I are enthusiastic about it, and we have quite a number of interested exhibitors and projectionists who visit our booth to see the machines, and I assure you, it is a pleasure for us to point out the various new improvements of your machine.

Very truly yours,

By Ed. Greene

A profoundly moving picture of family life in Germany during the war, giving a sympathetic insight into the effect upon the humble people of rural Bavaria of the great struggle. As an artistic creation the production is magnificent in the amazing effectiveness of its fine realism and in its utter simplicity. In its favor are some of the finest and most touching passages of high sentiment ever shown on the screen, and the dramatic elevation of Mrs. Mann to picture eminence, which bids to exceed in public interest the sudden stardom of Mary Carr. The abundant excellence of the creation itself and the fascinating circumstances of Mrs. Mann's triumph are enormously valuable assets, and will probably suffice to give the Fox people another "Hit" of the year.

Any obstacle that might have been anticipated from the risk of selling a sympathetic treatment of the German side of the war has been minimized by developing the picture on the story and by its happy ending, with the mother happily joined with her surviving son, by now a prosperous merchant in New York. The same thing works out in the tone of the story. While some of the sombre war-time episodes—the news of the death of three sons coming upon the grieving mother at home—are compensated by the lighter, sentimental sequences at the end, the picture leaving a cheerful effect.

The film is an achievement in artless realism. There isn't a moment when it does not live, and the whole production is utterly guiltless of theatrical device. Simple people, kindly and happy, are suddenly engaged in the conflict, and tragedy comes upon the gentle villagers, among whom stalk the hated military martinet. It is the arrogant military class that plays the villain. The people are the pitiful puppets.

The story itself does not bear telling, so simple and unadorned is the commonplace history of a widow and her four sons. Joseph goes to America before the war, marries, and has his own little delicatessen shop, and a baby is born. Then the war comes. The other three brothers go to the front and one by one are killed. There is no "war stuff," the war tragedy is enacted in the homely cottage of the lone mother. Joseph goes overseas in the A. E. F., leaving his wife to handle the shop. The story leaves him while the mother back in Bavaria is slowly broken as the war machine takes her three remaining boys—Franz, the handsome, Johannes, the strong, and, finally, Andreas, the beautiful.

Armistice Day finds her destitute of life and joy, while Joseph returns from France to America to find that his business had grown to a rich chain of stores.

His first move is to send for mother. From sombre tragedy the picture here takes on a tender and livelier quality. Mother has to go to school to learn her letters for American immigration purposes. Upon the Ellis Island examination she goes to pieces and is detained. But quite innocently she wanders out of the detention pen, reaches the city and meanders around under the care of kindly cops, who at length bring her safe to haven in Joseph's very modern apartment, where the frantic Joseph, returning from his search, finds her cuddling the baby before the fire.

Mrs. Mann's playing of the big role is a miracle of unaffected naturalness. Her Frau Bernie lives from the moment the film starts to the finish. She looks the part and she plays it with utter absence of effort or consciousness as a stately and white crowned old mother might go about her household tasks. And if this isn't art so much the worse for the trained and inspired acting profession.

Something of the same effortless simplicity has been communicated to the whole cast. The picture is rich in fascinating characters, such as the pompous but kindly old German letter carrier (Albert Gran) whose agonizing task it is to deliver the casualty notices to Frau Bernie; the Burgomeister of the village (August Toileire), and the Innkeeper (Hughie Mack), besides a host of others.

The picture will be the making of James Hall, hitherto just a young leading man. As Joseph he creates a splendid portrait with a wide range of clean cut playing. Earle Foxe makes a graphic study of the cold-blooded military officer type. One of the high lights is his suicide at the explicit invitation of his rebellious regiment upon Armistice day, dressing himself in all his decorations for it.

In a pictorial sense the production is a revel in beauty and significant detail, with camera shots that are arresting. Such are the views of departing soldiers seen marching through the gay village streets from the vantage point of the church belfry; the panorama of the farming countryside swathed in morning mists; the church steeple with the tolling bells reflected in the still mill pond and a myriad of such color shots. Happy character bits likewise go to the building up of eloquent atmosphere and bit by bit the illusion of reality in place and people is created and never lost through nearly two hours.

Movietone is again employed with excellent discretion. It supplies an appropriate score and interpolates a few sound effects. When the young villagers are bringing in the hay, snatches of their song are brought out; again in the only battlefield sequence a faint voice is heard through the mists crying "mutterchen," and for other passages (where the stricken mother dreams her brood are again gathered about the supper board) a male chorus sings faintly as though at a great distance, or as though a choir were singing in a far off organ loft in church. The treatment follows closely upon that employed in "Sunrise," avoiding emphasis that might clash with the illusion.

There can be no question of the work's merit. There is only one bare chance for it to fall short of enormous popularity, the possibility that the screen public will shy off from a serious war picture at this time, when the subject has been pretty well exploited. That's quite remote, very remote, for a picture of this class and strength. Rush.

PICTURES IN ALL; ONLY 2 BEFORE

Opening "Street Angel" at Globe March 5—"Mother Machree" Following Into Another Un-named Theatre—"Four Sons" at the Gaity and "Sunrise" at Times Square

OTHER BIG FILMS

William Fox shortly will be operating four of the legit group of Broadway theatres at a $2.20 top scale for Fox's special pictures. His third will be the Globe, with Fox's special picture production, "The Street Angel," supplanting the Dillingham "She's My Baby" (Beatrice Lillie) show there March 5.

The fourth Broadway house has not as yet been named, although secured by Fox. It will play the Fox special "Mother Machree" and shortly follow the Globe's film period.

Fox's other two Broadway legit houses now playing its $2 pictures are the Gaity, where "Four Sons" opened Monday, and the Times Square, with "Sunrise" still running there.

It's the first time a single picture concern has operated four Broadway legit theatres simultaneously. Previously, the record was two.

While there is no definite information on the selection of the fourth Fox house, it is believed to be the Central. At present Universal's "Uncle Tom" is there. It is due to leave in about a month. The Central is a Shubert house.

Among the other special Fox pictures that will duly appear on Broadway is "Mother Knows Best," the Edna Ferber story that is the tale of a well-known femme star and her guilding relative who has always thought she has known best for her daughter's on and off welfare.

Other Fox specials lined up as big pictures are "Red Dancer of Moscow," "Four Devils" and "Dollar Princess."

"HEAVEN'S" LOOP REPEAT
Chicago, Feb. 14.
The Monroe, Fox's Loop house, is playing "Seventh Heaven" this week, the first repeat booking the house has ever had.
"Heaven" played the house late last year for five weeks, the picture since doing so well in the neighborhoods it was figured worthwhile to bring it into the Loop again.

"Sunrise" Breaks House Record at Newark, 75c
Newark, N. J., Feb. 14.
Fox's "Sunrise" at Fox's Terminal broke the house record for a week without a holiday.
Terminal's top is 75c, with mats at 50c, and legs 99c. It was the first time "Sunrise" had played under $1.05 top, and is now at the legit scale.
"Sunrise" started off to smashing reception here in the 1,700-seater. Its reception here was most agreeable to the Fox people, who do not intend the regular picture houses until September next.

KEN MAYNARD

-because every Maynard booker becomes a Maynard Booster!

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—This star is in this picture. For me he is in Edward Smith, Cozy Theatre, Conway, N. H.

THE OVERLAND STAGE: Ken Maynard—A really Western for any audience. He is a real rider as a real horse. Six reels.—Leon C. Bolduc, Theatre, Conway, N. H.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—As good as any Western he has made and that is saying a lot. Maynard is a rider, he gets the wonderful helpmate in Tarzan, and he Ray W. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—This is my best drawing card and pleases in this picture. Consider him the best there is and for me he is in Cozy Theatre, Minneapolis, Kan.

THE OVERLAND STAGE: Ken Maynard—Here is one of the best Western stars we have seen in a long time in one of his best pictures. We have shown three of his best and our patrons are getting worked up about this handsome star. He sure can ride and his pictures are a little different than the average shoot 'em up Western. We find them to be real good. Even the ladies like to look at Ken. Seven reels.—Crosby & Schwierske, Rex Theatre, Colby, Wis.

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard—The first of Ken's of this season's product and it will tack up with those he turned out last year. Plenty of action, injuns, 'everything'. Ken and Tarzan pleased their fans.—Seven reels.—Wm. E. Tragsdorf, Trags Theatre, Neillsville, Wis.

THE UNKNOWN CAVALIER: Ken Maynard—We have yet to see a bum Ken Maynard picture. They please us because they please the box office.—Halliburton & Burns, Texline Theatre, Texline, Tex.

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard—This is an extra good Western which more than pleased all of my Sunday patrons. Ken Maynard is some rider.—Lyceum Theatre, Manchester, Mo.—General Manager.

THE RED RAIDERS: Ken Maynard. Play more business than any previous Maynard. Do afraid to step on any of the Maynards as they and bring results. Seven reels.—Edward Smith Theatre, Minneapolis, Kan.

SOMEWHERE IN SONORA: Ken Maynard—This is a good picture. The Western fans like Maynard. W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan.

THE LAND BEYOND THE LAW: Ken Maynard—Like all the others, 'logic' entertainment on the screen. J. S. Landry, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

GUN GOSPEL: Ken Maynard—A very good picture, it is the first time that he has played this house, doing a very good business. My advice is to play him up big. Six reels.—Newell E. Ware, Comique Theatre, Camden, Me.

LAND BEYOND THE LAW: Ken Maynard—A very good picture, in fact, all Ken Maynard pictures are good and so are the people that see them. Seven reels.—A. H. Yeomans, Rose Theatre, Dublin, Ga.

THE DEVIL'S SADDLE: Ken Maynard—This boy knows the West and his pictures show it. I never saw a poor one. Seven reels.—Leo J. Burkhart, Hippodrome Theatre, Crestline, O.

SENOR DAREDEVIL: Ken Maynard—A wool and a yard wide. Special cast—All Westerns. This is in Zane Grey's class. Scenery fine, fine cast, good story though hero has everything pretty much his own way. One peach of a horse in Tarzan. Ken Maynard a dandy rider and actor. Ken Maynard stand, Rex Theatre, Salmon, Idaho. Book it.—Philip

THE LAND BEYOND THE LAW: Ken Maynard—this is a very fine picture. This star commences where the rest leave off as a rider.—Bert Silver, Silver Family Theatre, Greenville, Mich.

THE OVERLAND STAGE: Ken Maynard—This star is in this picture. For me he is in Edward Smith, Cozy Theatre, Conway, N. H.

Buying and Quality

RECENTLY on this page we referred to what appears to us to be a lapse in the standard of a considerable volume of the motion picture entertainment now being offered to the public. Since the publication of our comment several communications have been received from theatre men who not only agree with the point we sought to make but insist that we have materially understated the case.

Our correspondents and numerous other exhibitors with whom we have discussed the problem seem to consider the question of quality in motion pictures to be entirely a matter of responsibility with the producer. We do not agree with this viewpoint and have innumerable times in the past pointed out that the exhibitor, in his buying habits and practices, exerts a vast influence, not only upon the trend in production but upon the quality of the product.

It seems trite indeed to point out that the principal branches of this industry are inevitably linked together and unless they work together on the broad and paramount questions affecting the industry progress cannot be made—and even failure cannot be avoided.

Information issuing from all competent sources now makes plain that a considerable portion of the film published during the past year has not only failed to show advancement but has actually been below the standards which have been observed for several years previously. This situation becomes all the more alarming when it is realized that technical progress in the making of pictures has continued and the many advantages that necessarily come as the result of experience have been available.

As we recently pointed out, we feel that various conditions have crept into the production situation which have had an adverse effect, but the unfavorable product situation that exists in many quarters may be said to be due as largely to conditions which have come about outside the studios as to those which have existed within.

The policies of many of the leading theatres are a direct discouragement to the making of better and finer pictures. The unreasonable emphasis that is being placed upon presentation is one of the worst influences. Everyone connected with production cannot help but have his enthusiasm dampened when he sees the programs and announcements of theatres placing motion pictures in a position that appears to make them fillers for a group of variety acts of dubious merit in themselves, and certainly of questionable value when used in a motion picture theatre.

In the advertisements of many of the leading theatres the feature picture is subordinated to these other types of entertainment. This certainly causes the public to regard the films as being of subordinate importance; and meanwhile it exerts a direct influence of discouragement upon producers, directors, writers, players and others identified with production.

The economic situation behind all of this may not be quite so apparent but it is, of course, one of the chief factors, if not the chief factor.

Rental receipts to distributors were materially less in the past year than in the previous year. Almost every distributing company in the industry has suffered a loss in revenue and in some instances the loss has reached a figure that is causing genuine alarm. Apparently exhibitors who were enabled to do so have driven pretty sharp bargains. The large circuits have obtained bargains by being in a position virtually to dictate what would be paid in rentals.

But whether these bargains will prove "bargains" in the long run remains to be seen. Film that is weak in attraction value is not a bargain at any price. The surest way to kill the theatre business is to buy pictures so cheaply as to compel producers to cheapen their product.

Theatre men are again invited to reflect upon the effect of their buying habits and theatre policies upon the quality of the product.

Labor in Films

ACCORDING to a published rumor the American Federation of Labor is contemplating a wholesale excursion into the motion picture business. The report says that some 1,500 labor halls throughout the country are to offer regular programs of motion picture entertainment and that later the labor authorities may even go so far as to produce pictures for exhibition in their halls and elsewhere.

It appears that some nimble-witted person has been imposing upon the labor authorities. The plan as reported is visionary and impracticable. It would lead the labor bodies away from their more immediate and more important concerns and would plunge them into a highly competitive business where their presence would be hazardous if not disastrous and, meanwhile, many of their chief interests would suffer.

In the first place, the distributing companies could not tolerate the plan of converting 1,500 labor halls into quasi theatres. The investments of exhibitors would have to be taken into consideration and product could not be diverted from its regular channels to supply attractions to these halls. Secondly, the business of affording theatrical entertainment to the public is a technical profession which requires experience and peculiar fitness. Such could not be expected to be found in the labor organizations.

The absurdity of the whole plan, as a feasible proposition, is reflected in that part of it which has to do with the production of motion pictures. The idea will never carry that far, of course, but the fact of it being mentioned is sufficient to indicate that the labor authorities have been giving an attentive ear to a proposition that immediately should have been given the open door.

EXHIBITORS generally will be interested in knowing that at Pinehurst, N. C., at which point these lines are being written, The Carolina theatre obtains an admission price of from 30 cents to $1.50 for a feature, comedy and news reel. This would seem to be an easy solution of most of the exhibitors' problems—where it will work!

New Uniform Contract Written; Will Become Effective in May

Six Rules Used As Pattern for New Contract

Following are the six rules agreed upon by the Federal Trade Practice Conference last fall and followed as a basis in the writing of the new uniform contract in Chicago:

1. The sales method known as block booking shall not be used for the accomplishment of any illegal purposes.
2. No distributor will require as a condition of permitting an exhibitor to lease its pictures that such exhibitor shall also lease pictures of another distributor.
3. If any exhibitor shall claim within a reasonable time prior to the date fixed for the exhibition of any picture included in any block leased by him that such picture will be offensive to the clientele of his theatre because of racial or religious subject matter, such claim shall be arbitrated by the board of arbitration of the proper zone, and, if sustained, such exhibitor shall be relieved of obligation to take any pay for such picture.
4. If any exhibitor who has purchased an entire block of pictures offered by any distributor so elects within a reasonable time prior to the date fixed for exhibition of any picture included in such block, such exhibitor may refuse to take such picture by paying one-half the allocated price therefor, provided that the pictures so rejected out of any block shall not exceed ten per cent of the number in such block, and, if a rejected picture is resold by the distributor, one-half the net price received on such resale shall be credited against the exhibitor's obligation in respect of such picture up to the amount of such obligation.
5. Reissues will not be included in any block with new pictures.
6. News reels and short subjects will not be included in any block with features and the lease of news reels or short subject blocks shall not be required as a condition of being permitted to lease feature blocks or vice versa.

It was agreed also at that time that "the matters dealt with by paragraphs 3 and 4 shall be covered by appropriate provisions to be included in the new uniform contract."

Gratified at Settling of Issues, Says Committee

Complete Agreement Reached on All Points, Including Arbitration, Declares Official Statement

By JAY M. SHRECK

A new Uniform Contract has been written.

This new instrument will become effective in May when marketing of next season's product begins.

The task of revising the present contract was completed late Monday, February 20, by the joint committee of exhibitors and distributors which has been in session at the Congress Hotel, Chicago. Actual deliberations extended over a period of three weeks, with the committee working both day and night.

No seventh arbiter, it appears now, will have to be appointed by Chief Justice William Howard Taft of the Supreme Court, an official announcement by the committee stating that "a complete agreement was reached on all points, including the rules of arbitration."

Early in the conference it had been the opinion of all factors that several clauses in the new contract would have to go to an intermediary for final draft.

The new contract does not touch upon block booking, this being a feature of distribution considered apart from the contract itself, and purely a sales plan.

Called Advanced Step

While opinions were not expressed very freely by the conferees following the concluding session, the general sentiment seemed to be that an advanced step had been taken toward clearing up the contractual difficulties of exhibitors and distributors.

One member of the unaffiliated exhibitors' group, asked if the new contract contained all the changes sought by them, replied.

"Of course not. No contract ever does. But I do consider the contract a pretty thoroughly satisfactory one."

Others refused to be quoted, declaring that they preferred to stand on the official statement of the committee.

Meet Again in June

Another meeting of the joint committee will be held in June, when definite plans relative to the functioning of arbitration will be drafted.

The new contract, with explanations interpolated, will be published in pamphlet form "at an early date" and broadcast to the entire industry. Until that time, the contents of the revised instrument will not be known.

The official statement of the joint committee, concurred in by R. H. Cochrane, Felix Feist, Ned Depinet and Gabriel Hess for the distributors, and Ben Berenstein, H. M. Richey, Col. H. A. Cole, R. R. Biechele and Nathan Yamins for the unaffiliated exhibitors, reads:

"The national contract committee of the motion picture industry, which has been working out the details of a new contract under which practically all of the motion pictures shown in the United States will be leased by theatre owners, concluded its three week session last night (Monday, February 20) at midnight.

"Gratified" by Results

"The committee, which is composed of motion picture exhibitors and distributors, was gratified because certain difficulties which seemed at times insurmountable were finally overcome. A complete agreement was reached on all points, including the rules of arbitration. The only matter which had to be put over to the next meeting of the committee, which is scheduled for June, was a new problem relating to a plan of devising ways and means of enabling state exhibitor organizations from which are drawn the exhibitor arbiters, to function properly in their various endeavors in the general interests of the industry. Last year by the cooperation of exhibitor and distributor arbiters almost 12,000 cases were disposed of by arbitration.

"The new contract is believed to be a vast improvement over its predecessor, giving promise of doing away with many sources of discontent in the moving picture business. It is patterned along the lines agreed upon at the Motion Picture Trade Practice Conference held last fall in New York City, and will be put into use next May.

"So many complicated matters are to be handled under the terms of the new contract that the negotiators have arranged at an early date to publish the document with complete explanations of its various clauses and broadcast it in booklet form to the entire industry that there may be a clear understanding of its provisions."

Silent on Specific Changes

No hint as to the specific changes in the revised contract was given by any member of the committee. Nor was it stated whether the new instrument retained its present length or was shortened.

R. F. Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who was chairman of the unaffiliated exhibitor group, did not return to Chicago for the resumption of deliberations following the week's adjournment. On his departure from Chicago two weeks ago he said that the pending hearings on the Brookhart bill might make it imperative for him to remain in the East.

BROADWAY

NEW YORK.—Clifford B. Hawley, who runs First National, brings forth the news that only 85 per cent of the world's films are made in America. The old mark of 99 and 44/100's still stands as a mark to shoot at. . . . UFA'S new Eastern exchange, under the management of Dave Brill, will descend into new offices at 729 Seventh avenue, as soon as the paint butchers are through mutilating the woodwork. . . . Charles Simone, who once did his best to raise a Fox in Italy but is now a vegetable farmer in Jersey, was looking over Broadway one day last week. . . . Hope Hampton is still doing her stuff in color. See "Love's Springtime," which brings up fond memories of "Marionettes," which was nothing more than a phantasmagoria de luxe. Hope speaks Frog, so she will get this right off the bat. . . . Many and fast are the happenings at the Pathe offices here in the Big Tent. Many of the boys are wondering, "Where do we go from here?" and some are getting a chance to find out. . . . Nat Rothstein, premier advertising man for Universal, is leaving about March 1 with Mrs. Rothstein for an extended Southern trip. The full itinerary is not at hand but Nat will take a look at everything the cigar state has to offer from Fort Lauderdale to Palm Beach, Jacksonville to Key West. . . . A. M. P. A. held their weekly luncheon at the Cafe Boulevard on Thursday. The subject under discussion was that rarin' business which takes place every year at one of the leading hostelryes. The "Naked Truth Dinner" this year will be as undress as of yore, V in front and C in back. . . . Warner Brothers are getting ready to shake the dust of 1600 Broadway off their shoes and move into their new building—the Warner Brothers Building, if you don't mind—on 46th street. The "Exodus" will begin about the 21st. Five floors for the Bros. Warner. . . . Which reminds us, for no particular reason, that that very exclusive luncheon that was to have been given by the Vitaphone rooters at Park Chambers for the trade press is still a bit of a myth. Boys, it'll be all right to take a couple of breaths till the soup comes around. . . . The Paramount Short Feature Department held an eight or nine-course snack at the Astor recently for the advancement of "Krazy Kat" sales. Jim Milligan, of the E. H. and M. P. W., was among those present and from out of the fog reported that the Kat seemed pretty healthy to him. . . . One moemnt, it's the phone. "Where is Mary Miles Minter?" Darned if I know, but I've heard she's somewhere out West, close by that dear Aimee. . . . Corliss Palmer is in again. Her next is "Into the Night," with Raleigh. Hmmm, sounds interesting. . . . We are sorry to have to report that M. Frederic de la Roziere, of the Societe General de Films of France, is laid up with an infected jaw. Now that's a tough break, for he's here all full of talk about cooperation and friendship. Here's best wishes for a speedy recovery. . . . Apparently the Brookhart Bill is the fromage de brie of the industry. We notice that C. C. Pettijohn is turning up his nose at the mention of it. . . . Hy Daab, generalissimo of the F B O advertising department, has been reading "Polo" and the urge to do something about it has become so great he's off to Pinehurst. Daab says he can grab the Hy spots of this simple game in about six days. . . . Macfadden's "true stories" are reaching the picture stage. Things are going to be photographed just exactly as, when, and if they happen.

PETER STUYVESANT.

Seen Amid the New at F B O

ABOVE — Jacqueline Logan and Albert Conti engaged conversationally in a scene from a Gold Bond comedy-drama, "Stocks and Blondes."

RIGHT — Director (and player) Ralph Ince (left), with Joe Brown, stage comedian and the star of "Crooks Can't Win," a comedy serving as his first picture.

BELOW — Dudley Murphy (kneeling on camera carriage) directing Gertrude Astor in "Stocks and Blondes." To show, sans subtitle, her arrival home at dawn, Murphy shot the building full screen, then moved the camera from the bottle, causing the building to "fade" inside it, as her hand reached for it.

Hearst and Pettijohn Warn of Dangers in Brookhart Measure

Seize Manager in $3,500 Theft; Two Bandits Get $280

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—Martin Olsen, former house manager at the Pantages theatre accused of having made away with $3,500 of the theatre's funds, has been apprehended at Nogales, Ariz., after having been escorted across the Mexican line by immigration officials. The missing money was not found on him. He had deposited $2,900 in a Mexican bank, the police declare.

Hold Up Theatre Men; Get $280

Earl Western, manager, and J. T. White, assistant manager of the Jefferson theatre, Philadelphia, were held up by bandits shortly before 11 o'clock last Friday night and robbed of $280, the day's receipts.

The two victims told police that they had locked up the theatre and dismissed the policeman on duty and were within a few feet of Western's car. As they were about to step on the running board, two men appeared, one of whom drew two guns and covered the victims, while the second flourished a black jack and told the manager to "fork over." As Western did not comply immediately, one bandit thrust his hand into his inside pocket and removed his wallet.

Support for Brookhart Bill Seen in Parley of Pa. and W. Va. Owners

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 21.—Organization of support for the Brookhart bill is certain to take place at the eighth annual convention of the M. P. T. O. of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, which will meet here April 15, 16 and 17. This body of exhibitors is for the measure.

Sunday afternoon and evening will be given over to previews. Committees have been appointed, the chairmen of which are John M. Alderdice, N. Friedberg, H. Goldberg, Morris Roth, Alex Moore, S. Haimovitz, D. A. Harris, Bart Dattola, George Schweitzer, and W. J. Bittner.

Bookers Bar Hickman Film in San Francisco

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—The moving picture film, "Hickman, the Fox," a combination of the newsreel scenes showing the capture of William Edward Hickman, Los Angeles child murderer, will not be shown in San Francisco.

Paramount Declares $2 Dividends on Common

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—At a meeting of the board of directors of Paramount Famous Lasky corporation held last week, the regular quarterly dividend of $2 per share on the common stock was declared. The books will not close.

Expense and Confusion Faced, Says Editorial Industry Declared Fast Developing with No Need of "Shackles of Government Supervision"

[Text of the Pettijohn opinion appears on Pages 24 and 25]

Two broadsides were fired at the Brookhart bill last week. One was in the form of a detailed opinion on the entire measure, given by C. C. Pettijohn, chief counsel of the Film Boards of Trade. In this opinion Pettijohn expands upon the objections voiced by him at the convention of Iowa theatre owners and detailed in last week's issue of EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD. It will be recalled that the Iowa organization voted against the bill of Senator Smith W. Brookhart, himself an Iowan.

Hearst Attacks Measure

The other protest against the measure was sounded in a Hearst editorial, which warned that the bill would "introduce expense and confusion into film distribution" and "would give foreign governments a fine new excuse to handicap American films by discriminatory legislation."

"The motion picture industry is not ripe for government regulations, as provided in the Brookhart bill before the Senate," said the Hearst editorial.

"There is no monopoly and no danger of monopoly in the production, distribution or exhibition of pictures. It is throughout a highly competitive business which threatens the public with no extortions. Moreover, it is a fast developing business which needs to be free of the shackles of government supervision.

"The Brookhart bill, to meet alleged abuses in the trade, prohibits block booking and blind booking.

"It forbids producers showing pictures first in their own theatres. Each picture in each town must be auctioned off to the highest bidder.

"The bill directs the Federal Trade Commission to decide disputes as to prices, etc., and (section eight) it forbids anybody in the industry to violate any regulation made by the Federal Trade Commission.

U. S. Theory Is "Hands Off"

"No competitive industry in the United States is subject to any such drastic regulation by the federal power. The American theory of government is for the government to keep its hands off except in cases where competition fails to protect the public.

"In this case complaint is not made on behalf of the public, but on behalf of certain independent exhibitors.

"It is claimed that block booking, wholesale purchase of a run of pictures, binds the exhibitor to buy inferior stuff in order to get the big hit. Any abuse in this direction is being eliminated by the industry itself. Block booking enables the theatre to plan and advertise ahead with certainty, and it greatly decreases the cost of selling films.

"Blind booking, buying pictures unseen and unmade, is nothing but selling ahead for future delivery, a practice universal with every leading business in the country. To abolish forward contracts would hurt independent producers more than the so-called affiliated interests.

"Such contracts are the basis of the bank loans with which the independents meet their payrolls. There are plenty of these independent producers, just as there are thousands of independent exhibitors.

"The most unfair part of the bill is its attempt to deny producers the right to choose their exhibitors—for example, to prefer the theatres they own. It is an effort to set back the clock of economic progress by refusing to this one group of manufacturers the right to sell direct to the public.

"The Brookhart bill would introduce expense and confusion into film distribution by forbidding the long-term contracts on which business is done. It would make production more uncertain and costly. Fewer films would be produced if none could be sold until completed—that is, if there could be no blind booking.

Sees Foreign Danger

"Finally, government disapproval of our film industry would give foreign governments a fine new excuse to handicap American films by discriminatory legislation.

"The Brookhart bill should not pass. It is an ill-considered proposal, based on ignorance of the motion picture business. It will harm instead of help the interests it pretends to protect. It is an un-American interference with a great American industry which has done nothing to deserve this stigma and this handicap at the hands of the government."

"The Dove" Roosts With Censors; Gets Plucked Too Bare for Toronto Flight

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—What the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors did to "The Dove" was plenty. It had been intended to present this production at the Regent theatre, Toronto, as a road show starting yesterday, but after the film came back from the censors' office, "The Dove" was so thoroughly plucked, it is stated, that it could not be offered to the public.

K-C Exhibitors Try Every Device to Outbid New Dance Palaces

Candy for Children, Reduced Prices and Free Midnight Previews Offered in Appeal to Younger Generation

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 21.—Virtually all the devices known to the show business are being employed by Kansas City exhibitors in an effort to combat a lull in attendance. Thus far, business has shown only a slight increase in night attendance, matinees having been fairly good.

AT the Isis theatre, large suburban house, a prominent part of that theatre's newspaper advertising is given over to the announcement that candy will be distributed free to children at each matinee. The Alamo, Broadmoure and Roanoke theatres, suburban houses, have cut their prices to 15 cents and lines prominent in their advertising read: "No jazz; no cheap vaudeville." At the Liberty theatre, a downtown first run house, Samuel Carver, manager, resorted to staging public marriages on the stage. That theatre already has a tieup with the street car company, through which suburban patrons are refunded carfare after 6 o'clock. The Apollo and Linwood theatres are offering free midnight previews on Saturday to patrons who buy tickets for the 9 o'clock shows.

In short, it is a battle to attract the attention of the younger generation, which is being lured away from theatres by several large and elaborate public dance palaces in the last four months. The Capitol theatre, which had been featuring first run pictures and a large stage show, was forced to close its door last week. It will not be reopened, Dan McCoy, manager, said. The theatre was operated by the West Coast Amusement Company.

The Orpheum theatre, which for the first time in history adopted first run pictures this year in conjunction with its regular vaudeville program, last week lowered its prices to 75 cents top and announced that no seats would be reserved. Fred Spear is manager.

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The International Film Sales Congress, sponsored by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, opened last Wednesday at the Hotel Astor with large representation from many foreign countries. The first foreign representatives to arrive were David Lake, general sales manager for M-G-M in Australia and New Zealand, and Benjamin Fineberg, district manager in Brazil.

Others in attendance are George Forman, Chile; P. M. Gonzales, Porto Rico; George Fatt, Guatemala; T. Nielson, Denmark; Allen Byre, and H. Gunderlock, France; P. N.

Temporary Injunction Stops Picketing Of Seattle House; Legal Battle Looms

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SEATTLE, Feb. 21.—Organized labor must show cause in Superior court why it should not be enjoined permanently from picketing the Palace Hippodrome theatre here. A temporary restraining order has been handed down by Judge William J. Steinert to the Oak Theatre Company, against the Seattle Central Labor Council 76 of the American Federation of Musicians, the International Alliance of Stage Employes, and Moving Picture Machine Operators No. 15.

The entire subject of picketing in this state is revived in the case. The State Supreme court decided several years ago that picketing was illegal, but the unionists are anxious to obtain another legal expression from the same source.

Every Theatre Safe in Montreal, Report Says; Changes Cost $250,000

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—After one year of inspection, the city building commission of Montreal, has officially reported that all theatres there are now reasonably safe, insofar as the structural arrangements are concerned. During the past 12 months, the commission has ordered nine theatres closed because of alleged unsafe conditions. Two were since practically rebuilt and are again in operation, with the approval of the commission.

The report of the chairman, E. A. Cunningham, states that Montreal exhibitors have spent a total of $250,000 in making changes in their theatres ordered by the commission since February, 1927. It is pointed out that a number of theatre owners went further with improvements than was required by the board.

Two important considerations remain, the installation of independent lighting systems entirely apart from main house circuits. The second the improvement in theatre ventilation systems to prevent the suction of outside smoke into the theatres.

"Talkies" May Prove a Way to Sunday Shows

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

FINDLAY, O., Feb. 21.—Motion picture theatre owners of Findlay are watching with a great deal of interest the results of the opening of the Harris, operated by the Harris interests of Pittsburgh, which has presented "talking pictures" for the past three Sundays. Findlay has been a closed city on Sundays and there has been a good deal of agitation for open houses.

The Harris interests have taken advantage of the Ohio statute which permits the giving of musical performances on Sundays. If no great protest is raised, three motion picture houses plan to open on Sundays.

Battiston Reappears as "Youngest Exhibitor," Now Correctly

Perhaps the name, Andy F. Battiston, is familiar. It appeared in these pages 'way back last Summer. Battiston was one of the first to send in his name and credentials as a "youngest exhibitor," along with his picture. In fact, there were two pictures, both from the same negative, however. And therein lies the reason for this reappearance of Battiston as a "youngest exhibitor."

The picture was of him and a friend. Since he neglected to point himself out in the snap-shot, an editorial conference decided which of the two was he. And the choice proved wrong.

Battiston, who is 31 years old, became manager of the Lyric theatre at Yukon, Pa., when he was 16. At the time he sent in his name, he was manager of both the Lyric and the Ritz at Yukon.

The error was unintentional, of course, and space is precious. But an old Herald precedent declares that all errors affecting others must be corrected. Herewith it is observed.

Chicago Musicians' Move Forces 8 Houses Off Air

Petrillo Demands First Class Stations Using Remote Control Programs Employ Ten Studio Players

By WILL WHITMORE

Thousands of radio fans have been deprived of hearing music and stage presentation programs broadcast from eight Chicago theatres, and all remote control programs broadcast by 30 Chicago stations have been swept from the air because of a ban placed Saturday night on remote control programs by James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians.

Seek More Jobs for Musicians

The Chicago motion picture theatres whose programs have been disconnected from their air audiences are the six Balaban & Katz houses, the Chicago, Oriental, Uptown, Tivoli, McVickers and Norshore; the Sheridan and the Marbro.

The Petrillo ruling was calculated to affect all stations broadcasting through remote control, in an effort to find more jobs for Chicago musicians. Petrillo's orders demanded that all first class stations using remote control programs should employ regularly ten studio musicians; that all second class stations employ five musicians and third class stations employ three.

It has been estimated that if the union's demands were met first class stations would be compelled to add $50,000 a year to their pay rolls; second class stations, $25,000, and third class stations, $15,000. Petrillo explained remote control as the placing of a microphone in an orchestra pit and conveying the program to the station, whence it is broadcast.

According to Petrillo, his union will not at present interfere with the broadcasting of chain broadcast programs by Chicago theatres; that is, Chicago stations may still rebroadcast programs received from other cities, but if the union's present demands are met, it is believed the ban will be extended to include chain broadcasts.

Theatres See Danger

This move by the Chicago Federation of Musicians is being watched by broadcasting stations and theatres in many cities over the country for, exhibitors said, if Petrillo is successful in making the Chicago station come to his terms, musicians' unions in other cities may take up the move, with the likelihood of all theatres in the country now broadcasting their programs being affected.

According to the Chicago theatres affected, no move is being made by the theatres at present to get back on the air. If the stations broadcasting the theatre programs come to terms with the musicians' union then the theatres will be back on the air, but at present none of the theatres is making any attempt to obtain connections with stations which comply with the union's demands.

Shaw Endorses War Film as Tribute to Edith Cavell

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LONDON, Feb. 21.—George Bernard Shaw has thrown his hat into the ring of controversy raging about the motion picture, "The Dawn," based upon the execution of Edith Cavell, the English nurse, by the Germans in the World war. "The only question to be considered is whether the film as a work of art is worthy of her, and you may take my word that it is," declared Shaw.

Chalmers Publishes 3 Volumes on Practical Film Theatre Problems

Chalmers Publishing Company, former publisher of Moving Picture World, has just announced the offering to the trade of "Every Showman's Working Library," a group of three volumes devoted to exploitation, advertising, and projection.

One volume is entitled, "Building Theatre Patronage," and is under the authorship of Jack Barry, practical theatre man and head of the Publix Theatre Managers Training School, and Epes Winthrop Sargent, formerly with Moving Picture World.

The unit also includes two volumes of F. H. Richardson's "Handbook of Projection." Mr. Richardson is now technical and projection editor of EXHIBITORS HERALD AND MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

Fire Destroys 3 Theatres in New England in Week

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

BOSTON, Feb. 21.—Three motion picture theatres were destroyed by fire last week in the New England territory. All of them were small theatres, seating from 500 to 600.

The Morse Opera House at Franklin, Mass., was burned flat. Temporary use of another hall has been obtained and contracts are being carried out. The Opera House at Farmington, N. H., serving a considerable outlying district, was destroyed. It will be rebuilt. The Jackman theatre at Guilford, Me., was destroyed. This house may not be rebuilt.

New Leominster, Mass., Film House Plans Vaude

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LEOMINSTER, MASS., Feb. 21.—Work is progressing rapidly on the new Plymouth theatre. When completed it will have a seating capacity of 1,250 and will maintain a vaudeville and picture policy. The present Rialto theatre will remain the deluxe picture house. J. Edmund Kelley of Boston, is the architect of the new Plymouth. A 3-manual, 14 stop Robert Morton organ has been installed in the Rialto by Arthur B. McEvoy, manager.

Circle Theatre Company Sells Leases on 4 Theatres to Publix and Skouras

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 21.—Confirmation of the sale of the operating leases of the Indiana, Circle, Ohio and Uptown theatres by the Circle Theatre company here to a new company formed by Publix Theatres corporation and Skouras Brothers of St. Louis, was given by Robert Lieber, vice president of the local company. The deal was completed in New York, but the official name of the new company was not made public. No change in the personnel of the theatre staffs is contemplated at the present time, it is said here. Ace Berry, now managing director for all the houses, will retain that position.

It is probable, former owners say, that the Circle theatre will undergo some alterations and that a presentation policy similar to that followed at the Indiana theatre will be adopted. The ownership of real estate of the theatres remains in the hands of the Circle Theatre company.

Reisman Announces Changes in Pathe's Sales Personnel

Force Capable of Handling Company's Diversified Product to Best Advantage, Declares General Salesmanager

A NUMBER of changes in the sales force of Pathe were announced Saturday in New York by Phil Reisman, general salesmanager, just before his return to Chicago to sit in on the Uniform Contract Committee sessions. Reisman is a member of the distributors' group.

THE changes, which went into effect Monday of this week, leave the leading personnel as follows:

Harry Scott, short subject salesmanager; Les Weir, Western divisional manager; Stanley Jacques, Mid-Western divisional manager; Dan Michalove, Southern divisional manager; Haydn O. Duke, manager, physical handling department; L. W. Kniskern, assistant to Reisman.

Branch Managers Named

The branch offices and branch managers are:

Albany—C. J. Stombaugh; Boston—R. C. Cropper; New Haven—L. J. Hacking; New York—W. E. Raynor, with Robert Wolff as salesmanager; Philadelphia—W. C. Humphries; Washington—R. C. Robin.

Atlanta—W. W. Anderson; Charlotte—E. L. McShane; Dallas—E. C. Leeves; New Orleans—Guy C. Brown.

Buffalo—Oscar Hanson; Cincinnati—J. A. Harris; Cleveland—O. J. Ruby; Indianapolis—Oscar Bloom; Pittsburgh—Robert Mochrie.

Chicago—H. S. Lorch, with Harry Graham as salesmanager; Detroit—Henry Zapp; Milwaukee—J. H. MacIntyre; Des Moines—A. Levy; Kansas City—E. S. Olsmith; Memphis—L. J. Duncan; Oklahoma City—Albert Danke; St. Louis—C. D. Hill.

Denver—A. G. Edwards; Los Angeles—J. S. Stout; Portland—H. L. Percy; Salt Lake City; A. J. O'Keefe; San Francisco—M. E. Cory; Seattle—L. A. Samuelson.

Special Representatives Designated

H. W. Peters, formerly Pathe Circuit manager in the Western division—Los Angeles—is now special representative in the same division for Topics of the Day & Aesop's Film Fables.

W. A. Aschmann, formerly Pathe manager at Milwaukee, has been engaged as assistant general representative for Topics of the Day & Aesop's Film Fables—mid-west division—under Tom North, general representative.

With this personnel, Reisman said, the Pathe executives feel that the company has a sales organization equal to any in the industry and one capable of handling to the best advantage the diversified Pathe product. The current group of features produced at the Cecil B. DeMille studio for Pathe contains many of the best pictures made this year, not only by DeMille, but by any company, Reisman declared, citing "Chicago," "Skyscraper," "Stand and Deliver," "The Leopard Lady," "The Blue Danube," and "His Country."

Nearing completion at the studio are "Hold

'Em Yale," "Walking Back," and "Midnight Madness."

Maurice Henle, Wesco Worker, Writes Film Tale

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—Charles R. Rogers will make three specials this year, in addition to the six Ken Maynards to be released by First National. One of the specials is titled "The Army of Silent Women," and is the original effort of Maurice Henle, a young man working in the offices of West Coast Theatres.

Maurice Henle

One of the remaining two specials is the work of Kenneth Perkins and Will Chapel, called "Gold." It concerns Pioneer days. The third as yet has no title. Each special will have a male star, Rogers says, but while he has four players under inspection, their names were not divulged.

Exchange Head's Violin Publicizes Educational Over Radio From Omaha

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

OMAHA, Feb. 21.—Unusual publicity for film product to come from an exchange manager, as the result of his own volition and talents, is that contrived by Leo Blank, manager of the local Educational branch. Playing the violin over the radio, with his wife accompanying him, he gives a program called "Educational Hour" over station WOW every Saturday night, also making a short talk on Educational product and stars.

Blank is arranging to send nearly 200 special trailers to his accounts to tie up the broadcasting with the box office. The trailers will give the program, its purpose, and the time of broadcasting. He also sends postcards to his exhibitor friends announcing the programs, while further Educational publicity results from the bi-monthly announcements sent out by the station.

Drama League Seeks $1,000,000 to Save Legitimate Stage from Death by Films

According to newspaper dispatches, a trust fund of $1,000,000 to save the spoken drama in America from extinction by motion pictures will be sought by the Drama League of America. It is reported that there are now only 400 theatres in the entire United States devoted exclusively to legitimate and musical comedy, whereas in 1910 there were 1,500 outside the metropolitan centers.

Through its trust fund, the league hopes to better the situation of the professional theatre and to encourage amateur efforts and to carry on the work of educating the public to a better appreciation of the spoken drama. William Lyon Phelps of Yale University is chairman of the executive committee for raising the fund and Rufus C. Dawes will act as the fund treasurer.

Warner Brothers Take Larger Home Offices

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—In order to have greater facilities, Warner Brothers will move office headquarters Thursday to the Film Building, 321 West 44th Street, according to an announcement from Albert Warner, vice-president. Following a general policy of expansion this season, the firm will occupy three floors in this newly completed building devoted to the motion picture trade.

Many of the biggest stories on Warner Brothers schedule for this year will be released during the spring months, according to Warner.

"As we announced in December," he said, "our 1927-28 program was all finished at that time. And we have reserved many of our finest attractions for release during March, April, and May."

5 Houses Acquired In North Carolina

By Publix-Saenger

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

GREENSBORO, N. C., Feb. 21.—According to a statement from H. F. Kinsey, general manager of the Publix-Saenger chain of theatres in North Carolina, an important deal was closed last week by which the Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina acquired full control of five theatres in High Point, N. C., the Broadhurst, American, Rialto, Broadway, and Orpheum.

The acquisition of these houses marks the first development in the expansion program announced by Publix-Saenger Theatres two weeks ago.

Publix to Build Toledo Theatre

Toledo is soon to have a modern theatre. The new theatre, to be built by Publix, will be located at the corner of Huron and Adams Streets, opposite the largest department store in the city. The work of razing present structures on the site will commence within the next few days. Rapp & Rapp of Chicago are the architects.

Detailed plans for the construction of a municipal theatre in Philadelphia have been presented to Mayor Mackey and the city council. The project has been given the assurance of the friendly interest of the Stanley Company and the Theatre Managers Association of Philadelphia. The proposed plan calls for the construction of an $800,000 theatre on a city-owned plot. It is proposed that the theatre's top price shall be $1. It is proposed to finance the venture partly by gifts of money.

France Moves to Begin Restriction of American Films

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

PARIS, Feb. 21.—Restriction of American films in France will begin on March 1, rather than September 1, as had been expected by American producers. The rapid move came as a great surprise when the Council of Ministers approved the Herriot commission's decree.

The restriction will cut down the showing of American films in France by at least 25 per cent, it is said. However, it is said that American producers are taking the new move rather quietly because of the great demand in France for American films.

Atlanta Met Reopened by National Amusement

ATLANTA, Feb. 21.—After remaining dark for a week following its closing February 11, the Metropolitan theatre was reopened last night, under the management of the National Amusement Company, of which Robert B. Wilby is president.

Carter Barron, former Georgia Tech football star, who has been assistant manager of the Capitol since that house opened, becomes manager of the Metropolitan.

Tieup with T. O. C. C. First Proposed Move—Would Compete with Chains Through Booking Office

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Aaron Sapiro became president of a new organization of independent motion picture theatre owners known as the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of New York at a long and exciting meeting in the Hotel Plaza here last Saturday. Sapiro's salary is reported to be $100,000 a year.

Tieup with T. O. C. C. Planned

Two of the first steps proposed for the organization will be a merging of the T. O. C. C. with it and a linking up with similar organizations all over the country to make a "functionally coordinate" organization of all independent exhibitors.

The move carries Sapiro's recent efforts in promoting cooperative buying and marketing into a new field. His association intends, by creating a new central office for the booking of films, to put the owners of more than 250 of the smaller theatres in New York in a position where their combined buying power of $2,500,000 a year can compete with the chain theatres controlled by powerful corporations.

Ford Suit Recalled

Sapiro achieved some measure of national prominence recently by bringing a $1,000,000 libel suit against Henry Ford, claiming that he and the Jewish race had been maligned, also that Ford in his Dearborn Independent had been wrong about cooperative marketing, which was Sapiro's favorite child. After one mistrial the suit was settled out of court, Ford publicly apologized, retracted his charges, and even endorsed cooperative marketing.

Sapiro started in California. Then he became a Chicago attorney. Now he is a New Yorker, living in Scarsdale. He doesn't intend to spend all his time on the motion picture industry, and the $100,000 a year represents only a part-time job. He expects to apply to other industries the same method of cooperative buying and selling which he brought the farmers of the West.

Sixty Exhibitors Convene

About 60 independent exhibitors went to the Hotel Plaza for the meeting at which he was to outline his plan for the last time. This was to be a meeting of take it or leave it, and the exhibitors decided to take it. They hailed the new cooperative movement as the first real step toward helping the small theatre owner to retain his commercial individuality while at the same time enabling him to put his buying power on an equality with the vast resources of the producer-controlled chains. The aim is to have newer and sometimes first run pictures come to the smaller neighborhood theatres at the same time, or soon after their presentation at the larger Broadway houses.

"To coordinate but not to consolidate" is the aim of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, as of Sapiro's other cooperative projects, he said

Influence Centralized

Under the plan, each theatre or small group of theatres will exercise its own discretion in the buying and selection of its films and presentations. But those activities which will be benefited by a centralization of power will be combined into a central office so that greater influence may be wielded in facing the competition of producer-owned theatres.

Independents at the Saturday meeting condemned the activities of the chain theatres in 'coming into new neighborhoods and destroying property values with their ruthless buying of land and buildings at any price to stifle competition.'

Sapiro pointed out that his connection with the new organization was not as an attorney but as a business adviser. He said he had not yet been admitted to the bar in New York.

Represented at the meeting were the Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, Inc.; the Small-Strausberg Circuit, Inc.; William Brandt Enterprises, Inc.; Joelson Suchman Enterprises, Inc.; Grob & Knobel Theatres, Meyer & Schneider Circuit; Federated Theatres, Inc.; Steiner-Blinderman Circuit, Inc.; Leo Brecher, J. Arthur Hirsch, Sol Brill, John Manheimer, Samuel Lesselbaum, Playhouse Operating Company, Rudolph Sanders, Salkin Enterprises, Arthur M. Rapp, Edward Rugoff, H. Gainsboro, Samuel I. Berman and Charles L. O'Reilly.

Film Exports for December Increase

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—December exports of motion picture film totaled 26,556,649 feet with a value of $719,710, compared with 21,004,590 feet valued at $662,844 in November, according to figures just made public by the Department of Commerce.

Mayor Walker Turns Down Presidency of Stanley Company at $150,000 Is Report

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Mayor Jimmie Walker of New York has turned down a $150,000 a year job as president of the Stanley Company of America, according to newspaper dispatches.

It is said that the original offer was for $125,000 a year by Mrs. Mastbaum, wife of the late Jules Mastbaum. When the Mayor refused the offer was boosted to $150,000. Walker is said to have been considerably tempted to accept after repeated requests were made by Morris Wolf, the firm's counsel, and Irving Rossheim, who was later named president, after the Mayor's refusal.

KNOW YOUR SALES LEADERS

LOU B. METZGER, general salesmanager for the Universal Pictures Corporation, is a veteran in the film industry, having broken in 18 years ago as an inspector in the Portland exchange of the Film Supply Company, operated by his uncle, Gus Metzger. This exchange was the distributor in the Oregon and Northwest territory for the Laemmle Film Service, which later grew into Universal Pictures Corporation. Thus, Metzger can be said to have started in the Laemmle organization. With the exception of a few years, his entire film career has been under the Universal banner.

FROM film inspector he soon was graduated into the brief-case class, becoming a salesman for his uncle's exchange. He remained in that position until the entry of the United States into the World war, when he resigned and joined the army. He was assigned to the 81st Field Artillery of the 8th Regular Division, then forming in the Northwest. He specialized in field telephone work and finally rose to be the chief brigade telephone officer for the artillery of that division.

After the war, Metzger re-entered the film business, being signed by Carl Laemmle as special representative for Universal's great war picture, "The Heart of Humanity," in the Kansas City territory, Metzger's home. Later he joined the K-C exchange as assistant manager. Next he was picked as salesmanager for the Stage Women's War Relief series put out by Universal. His work with those pictures attracted the attention of other companies and he accepted a handsome offer from Selznick late in 1920, becoming manager of short subjects for that company.

From that post he went to the Northwest as district salesmanager for FBO. After a few months, however, he felt the call of home and of Universal and accepted the manager-ship of Universal's Kansas City exchange. It was from this position that he jumped to national prominence early in 1925 as the originator of Universal's Complete Service Contract. After a preliminary tryout of this plan, Metzger was installed in the Universal home office to put the new and startling sales policy into effect. The results were astounding and endeared Metzger not only to Laemmle and the entire Universal organization but to the thousands of exhibitors who found the Complete Service Contract exceptionally practical.

Metzger soon was advanced to be Western division sales director for Universal. This was near the end of 1925. Six months later, on the eve of Laemmle's departure for Europe, the Universal chief appointed Metzger as general salesmanager for Universal. That was a year and a half ago. The genial sales chief is still going strong. His tenure of the important sales post is almost a record for Universal. Laemmle's confidence in his keen sales ability and in his organizational and driving powers indicates that he will be there for a long time to come.—J. S. S.

Beatty Goes to Coast for First National Conference

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Jerry Beatty, director of publicity and advertising for First National, left New York on Saturday for a trip to the coast that undoubtedly will have interest to the trade. Beatty expects to take up matters of advertising and publicity with the Western studios. He expects to be back in New York about March 15.

Pathe Wins Basketball Title for Second Time

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Pathe again is champion of the industry's basketball teams. The final tilt in the league was won from Paramount, 58 to 29 and gave Pathe 26 of the 28 games played in two years. Fox took second place by defeating Metro 50 to 28. The final standing was:

What the Fans Are Saying

"TELL me something," said a plump theatre patron in front of a Kansas City theatre the other day. "Who is responsible for the type of stage presentations we are getting now, anyway? When the public will pay top prices to see a good looking chorus and hear a couple catchy songs in a musical comedy, why don't the 'movie' theatres give us a little of the same thing. Who asked for a lot of this slow-moving scenery with tinsel and stiff-necked baritones?" * * *

"Give me something light, something light!" exclaimed a veteran patron to a manager the other day. "I've seen this domestic tragedy stuff until I can't stand it any more. Must a man quarrel all day with his wife, then see it dramatized on the screen at night?"

Sentry Officials Sail to Close European Deal for Distribution Rights

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Two officials of the Sentry Safety Control Corporation, Jose E. Cohen, president, and Senator Max Aron, secretary, will sail Friday for England to consummate a deal for English and Continental rights to the distribution of Sentry safety control.

Negotiations have been in progress for some time, and the deal was brought to a head recently by long distance telephone. The deal is said to involve several million dollars. Sentry safety control systems are said to be in use in more than 1,000 theatres.

F B O to Film 2 Tales Chosen in Tie-up with True Story Magazine

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Announcement is made by Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O, that F B O will produce two motion pictures based upon stories that have appeared or will appear in True Story Magazine. The first will be selected by William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production, from stories that have appeared or from unpublished stories. The second will be selected by a committee of three judges in a contest to be conducted by the magazine.

Stories Told
by the Camera

From Canton, China, where they are famous actresses at the Mandarin theatre, came the Misses Wong and LeLong to visit America. They are pictured calling on Esther Ralston, Paramount star, at the studio, where, 'tis said, dog and not "Art" was the amazing topic of conversation.

What may happen at the HERALD-WORLD office! On this occasion, Chief Eaglefeather, probably the only Indian tap dancer in the world, arrived in full feather to visit A. Raymond Gallo, absolutely the only Presentations editor on the HERALD-WORLD, during his engagement at the Chicago theatre.

Emil Jannings, Ernst Lubitsch, and the latter's cigar warming up for a sequence of Paramount's "The Patriot." Fur-thermore, Lubitsch was Jannings' director in Germany.

China bound—horizontally! Absurd, of course! However, in spite of bum geography, they're a salty crew in M-G-M's "China Bound," calling "aye, aye, sir" to the names of (left to right) Frank Currier, Ramon Novarro (the star), Joan Crawford, and Edward Connelly.

W. C. Boothby, financial comptroller of First National, returning from Europe, where he surveyed the less romantic but oh, so necessary phases of films abroad.

It's all about another sunny spirit, you see. So when Daddy Dick went on location for First National's "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," little Mary Hay Barthelmess just insisted on going, too.

Ralph Gallo, Latin, film player, dancer, who has just ended a tour in Fanchon and Marco presentations to resume celluloid portrayals in Hollywood.

Off for the South Sea Islands (the lucky guy!). Monte Blue leaving to play the starring role in M-G-M's "Southern Skies," under the direction of R. J. Flaherty, who directed "Nanook of the North."

The native costume of some obviously nice country adorning, and adorned by Muriel Evans, new leading woman in Educational comedies—the Mermaids.

An eye-fetching costume blending Hawaiian, Aphroditian and Baby Bunting motifs, as worn (so far as possible) by Vera Reynolds, Pathe-De Mille star.

Signs of Spring, tra la! Director Charles Lamont limbering up and looking worried either that the ball won't come or that it will. But by June he'll be "right in there" with the Educational team.

What a caption writer is up against! Invited in by Sally O'Neil for a sip of oolong, Joseph C. Boyle evinced no longing for the stuff, incidentally spoiling the most obvious caption in the world—T for 2. Oh, well, as long as it's said that this tete-a-tete occurred while Boyle was directing Miss O'Neil in First National's, "The Mad Hour," maybe this is good enough, what?

Myrna Loy, the invariably "exotic," who is featured in Gotham's drama of the Caribbean, "Turn Back the Hours."

Text of C. C. Pettijohn Opinion

Says Bill Prohibits Distributor Choice of Own Customer

Following is the text of the opinion rendered by C. C. Pettijohn on the Brookhart bill to abolish block booking:

The chief legal objection to this proposed legislation is that its effect would be to deprive producers and distributors of their absolute right to choose their own customers. It has been repeatedly decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court of the United States that a manufacturer and/or wholesaler may select his customers at will; and in the absence of a conspiracy or concerted action to coerce, intimidate or boycott, may refuse for any reason he considers fit, to sell his product to a retailer. . . .

Every producer, necessarily from the very nature of the industry, desires to have his pictures exhibited in the best theatres. This is especially true with respect to the first-run exhibition which, in effect, is the show-window of the territory and often determines whether the picture is to be a success or a failure. The character of the theatre, its location, policy, prices of admission, seating capacity, manner of presentation, class of patrons, general reputation, etc., are all matters of vital importance to the producer and distributor, and often they are equally as important, if not more so, than the rental paid by the theatre.

The effect of the Brookhart bill would be to ignore all these important considerations and make the price of the picture the one controlling feature in the industry and deny to the producers and distributors in this industry the same right of contract granted to manufacturers and wholesalers in other industries, to wit: the freedom to choose their own customers.

The author of the bill probably had in mind the rulings of the court on this question of freedom of choice of a customer, so in drawing the proposed bill sought to avoid this rule by emphasizing the fact that the films are copyrighted. Almost without exception they are described as "copyrighted motion picture films." This was done probably for the purpose of making the motion picture industry an exception to the law governing all other industries and to bring the proposed law under the decision of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania as in the case of the United States vs. M. P. Patents Co., et al, which was a proceeding brought by the government under the Sherman law. In that case the defendants owned a patented device used in projecting a picture on the screen. It was necessary for exhibitors to have licenses to use this device and the defendants would only grant such licenses on the condition that it be used to project pictures distributed by them, thus compelling the exhibitors to buy their pictures. This was, of course, held illegal and the court entered an order of dissolution.

This state of facts, however, presents an entirely different question from that of a producer offering his product as a whole at a lower price than that fixed for one or two pictures, or from that of a producer who chooses as his customers such exhibitors as he thinks are desirable. The mere fact that these films are copyrighted does not make them an exception. There is no analogy between a copyrighted film and a patented mechanical device. Every picture is different and no two can possibly be exactly alike. Their value and worth is to be found, not in the fact that they are protected by a copyright, but in their drawing power at the box-office. In every show year several hundred desirable pictures are on the market. Some are better suited for certain audiences and theatres than others and some are more popular generally over the country than others. All of which goes to make an open market and keep intensive competition. Entirely different from the situation presented by one and only one necessary mechanical device, which is patented and for which there can be no substitute or alternative.

An analysis of this proposed law brings out other objectionable effects. . . .

Section 3—Page 5—Line 12

This section describes certain alleged conditions and practices in the industry and declares that the practices of blind hooking, block booking and unfair discrimination in selling affiliated and chain theatres, in preference to independent theatres, threatens to create a monopoly in the industry. These allegations form the base on which the bill is constructed as the following sections are intended to correct these alleged evils. They are nothing more than self-serving declarations and assumptions made by the author of the bill, without any foundation or justification in fact. If these assertions, allegations and assumptions, be true in fact, they are matters which should be brought to the attention of the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission for prosecution under the anti-trust laws, the provisions of which are ample to correct any such evil. . . .

The Department of Justice, as is well known, is making a comprehensive investigation of the industry, so there seems to be little or no need of this legislation. The real reason why these declarations and assumptions have been injected here into this bill is that its author seeks thereby to justify the radical and drastic provisions of the sections which follow. These provisions, as will be seen later, discriminate illegally against members of this industry, by depriving them of the rights enjoyed by all other manufacturing and distributing concerns in the country. In order to do this and thereby circumvent the well settled economic laws and court decisions, it is sought to make an exception of this industry by these allegations and declarations of threatened monopoly.

Section 4—Page 8—Line 7

This section is an identical copy of paragraph 2 of the Order To Cease and Desist entered July 9, 1927, by the Federal Trade Commission in its proceedings against Famous Players-Lasky Corp. et al, Docket 835, except that the word "copyrighted" has been inserted before the words "motion-picture films" (line 8).

The effect of this section, the enforcement of which is vested in the Federal Trade Commission by the provision of Section 7 would be to deprive exhibitors and distributors of the right to freely bargain and trade together and would eliminate all competition as to prices, as it gives the commission the power to fix the prices at which the pictures are to be sold.

If this bill becomes a law, any one who is not satisfied with the prices being asked for pictures by any distributor may complain to the commission and it will then be incumbent upon it to investigate the matter, hold a full hearing and try out the question as to whether the prices complained of are reasonable or not, and as to whether or not such prices may substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly.

Also these provisions (Sections 4 and 7) give the commission "the power to fix the differentials which may be observed between the price of a block or group of films and the price of a separate or several film or films less than such block or group."

Section 7—Page 10—Lines 5-8

This is price fixing pure and simple, and that it is impracticable and unworkable is self-evident to any one with knowledge of the industry. No two pictures are exactly alike. They are not comparable to other products, like, for example shoes, hardware, lumber, iron, steel or coal. The value of pictures is not constant or static; but on the contrary, is extremely variable and no commission can fix a fair and reasonable price for a picture which will apply to all exhibitors generally. . . . Pictures by different stars, directors and authors vary according to their individual popularity. Also the theatres vary as to type, location, seating capacity, clientele, policy, presentation and desirability. . . . Inasmuch as no such fixed "differentials" could be fixed by the commission, it would necessarily follow that each case would have to be considered separately and decided according to the facts peculiar to each transaction. The effect of this would be ruinous to the industry. There are hundreds of thousands of picture contracts made each year, any of which, under the provision of this bill, could be brought before the commission for review and determination. Such procedure would require months of time and litigation, as will be developed later herein. Such delays would be fatal to the business. Pictures must move quickly as their advertising and exploitation begin long before their release and their publicity value does not last long. They must be sold and exhibited quickly or there is a resulting loss. They cannot be carried on the shelf. Newness, novelty and publicity are the very essence of their value and such a procedure as is contemplated by this legislation would operate unfairly not only to the producers and distributors but to the exhibitors as well.

A further effect of these price fixing provisions would be to put the producer and/or distributor in the same category as public service corporations, while the Federal Trade Commission would occupy a position comparable to that of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the various state public utility commissions. . . .

Producers and/or distributors of films, even though they be copyrighted cannot be classed as public service corporations. There can be no distinction made between them and other manufacturers and wholesalers. The producer is a manufacturer; the distributor a wholesaler; the exhibitor a retailer, and the public, of course, is the consumer. Congress should not undertake to discriminate against this industry and seek to exercise control over it in this manner. There is no difference in the essentials and/or functions of this industry and other manufacturing industries. The only distinction that can be made is in the nature of the product and the necessary effect of this section would be to deprive the producers and distributors of their rights to choose their own customers as has been fully discussed heretofore.

If this industry be singled out for governmental regulation and reconstruction as is proposed in this bill, the next session of the Congress will find factionalists from many other industries asking for similar regulation. In effect, this bill would be the first step or entering wedge of regulation and reconstruction by the government of all manufacturing industries.

The exhibitors who are opposed to block booking in buying pictures seem to desire to pick and choose where they please at their own price.

There is absolutely no mechanical differential price

Sees Price Fixing As Destroyer of Great Pictures

system under which this industry can live. The minute you fix the maximum that a picture can take in—and that is exactly what this system would result in, you retard for all time the ambition and the reward that come with trying the unusual.

It must not be forgotten that in the past, when there were two or more theatres in competition, it often resulted in the exhibitors getting together and doing the price fixing themselves. The producer-distributor-exhibitor corporations can cite many concrete examples where this has been done; that not only the maximum price was fixed, but the service was absolutely allocated, and an understanding existed as to which pictures a certain exhibitor would bid on and which he would leave alone. Such an unstable market as is proposed could not and would not last, and it would not be long before these unaffiliated exhibitors would want to tie-in competition with the circuit. Individual houses would turn right around and make agreements with a circuit house, with which they were in competition, in order to control the price of their film. . . .

Not every exhibitor can have United Artists, First National, Fox, etcetera, and just the same as there are varying degrees of quality in merchandise in other lines, so does the same thing exist in the selling of motion pictures. But on top of that, even if this condition was established and the better pictures were to be distributed among everybody who desires them, they still will want to pick and choose from these better pictures with a fixed differential in their own favor.

When a producer offers a block of pictures to an exhibitor and states that he wants a complete sale or none at all, the exhibitor can refuse to buy that way, if he does not desire to do so. Nobody argues sensibly any more that any one brand of pictures in this industry is necessary to an exhibitor. If he does not like the selling plan of, for example, Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corp., at the price quoted, he can buy some other brand of merchandise, and there are too many successful brands on the market today to any longer dispute the old idea that an exhibitor had to have certain pictures in order to live.

The industry has at the present time a serious over-production situation. There are many more pictures being made than the country can consume. This is the situation that the exhibitor knows exists and is at the present time taking advantage of. When the prices get too high, he changes his source of supply; when the quality is not right, he does the same thing.

All of these considerations are very pertinent to the man who is making and selling motion pictures. There are many exhibitors that producers purposely lose as customers because of the type of exploitation management they represent. It is not true that the producers always sell to the highest bidder. It would not be healthy if they did.

This industry has prospered and grown as rapidly as that of any other industry that has come to our attention. Up to only five years ago, practically no money from the public was taken in by producers from the theatre end of this business. The industry had expanded and it had been built out of profits. The entire basis of this prosperity and this growth was the same block-booking or wholesaling plan by which exhibitors purchased their pictures, the same as they would buy one thousand suits of clothes from Hart, Schafner & Marx, with confidence in the manufacturer as a great asset.

There are many exhibitors who have "picked pictures and gone broke." The man who asserts he can always tell what his audience wants is nothing short of foolish. . . .

Big exhibitor ventures have been made on the basis of tying up with the output of reputable manufacturers, who make quality productions on the one hand, as against those exhibitors who have made just as much money by running an entirely different kind of business, who use a cheaper grade of pictures, under a different policy, and who have progressed just as satisfactorily.

Section 5—Page 9—Line 9-18

The provisions of this section would make it unlawful for a producer and/or distributor to make and/or contract for the sale of copyrighted films unless the same have been completed and are available for immediate release and to refuse exhibitors a preview. Here again is an extraordinary discrimination against this industry. In no other line of commerce is the manufacturer prohibited from making sales for the future delivery of his product. The United States Steel Co. conducts its business almost entirely on orders for future delivery. Henry Ford is now and has been for years doing business on contracts for future deliveries. Such a prohibition would work an unreasonable hardship on the producer, distributor and exhibitor. Practically all producers, to some extent, finance their operations on the credit derived from future contracts and to many of the smaller ones this is the only means of obtaining credit available to them and it would be an unfair discrimination against them, unjustified by any precedent of either law or fact. As has been heretofore pointed out, pictures must move rapidly as the advertising campaigns have to start long before the completion of the pictures and reach their climax on the release dates.

The effect of this section would be to slow down the whole course of the business and compel the producers and distributors to carry films, representing investments of millions of dollars (frozen capital), idle on their shelves for months. This would be ruinous to the smaller concerns, as they have neither the capital nor credit to carry such a load. The effect upon the exhibitor would be equally as unfair, because he would have no means of contracting for his supply of pictures in advance. Exhibitors want to be assured long in advance of their supply, so they can arrange their programs and publicity matter accordingly. In the fall of 1923, Paramount tried to initiate such a sales system as is required by this section, but found the trade unwilling to accept it. The exhibitors wanted to book wholesale and in blocks. After a few weeks' trial, with a resulting loss of over a million dollars, Paramount was forced to abandon it and returned to the present system.

The provisions of this section would absolutely abolish the news reels. They constitute a prompt news service, similar in function to the daily newspapers. From their very nature they cannot be exhibited in advance of their sale any more than could a newspaper be similarly previewed.

News reels service is sold by the year, 104 issues, for release—two each week. The prices run from $2 to $10 per theatre per issue. To attempt to sell each issue separately would be impossible. To prohibit the sale of this news service by the year would make it mechanically and physically impossible for any of the six news reels to exist.

Section 6—Page 9—Line 19

This is the most extraordinary section of this extraordinary bill. It would make it unlawful for any producer and/or distributor to sell copyrighted film to theatres affiliated with any producer or distributor without affording all competing exhibitors an equal opportunity to bid for such film. Such a law would deprive producers and distributors of their right to choose their own customers. Today there are affiliated theatres in all the key cities of the country and also in most of the other large cities and towns, and a producer desiring to sell to affiliated houses would have to put his pictures up at auction in the most important cities and stand by and see them knocked down to the highest bidder without regard to the character of the theatre operated by him. The producer would have no assurance of a first class, first-run showing of his picture in the key cities, which is a matter of the utmost importance. The producer would lose all control of his product and would be deprived of the right to retail his own pictures. There is and can be no law making it illegal for a manufacturer to market his own product.

First National Pictures, Inc., has something in the neighborhood of 1,000 contracts with exhibitors over the country which are of indefinite duration and by the terms of which the rentals are fixed and determined by the agreements and provisions of such contracts. These contracts constitute a valuable property right, both to the producer and the exhibitor. If enacted this section would abrogate these contracts and deprive these exhibitors of this valuable right. Other producers have also made long-term contracts with exhibitors which would be similarly effected.

It is a common practice to rent motion pictures for exhibition on a percentage basis with the receipts of the theatre divided between distributor and exhibitor on an agreed percentage basis. This is recognized as a fair and equitable sales system. The enactment of this bill would abolish the renting of pictures on such basis.

The strongest argument against the blind booking—auction block feature of the Brookhart bill is that although it is seriously embarrassing to the producer, distributor, exhibitor corporation, it works worse hardships on the very exhibitors supporting this bill. If the provision for sale to the highest bidder is efficacious, then the producer-distributor who has invested enormous sums in the highest class motion pictures has no assurance for the supply of his theatre. If it is not efficacious (and it is difficult to see how it can be since the affiliated theatre could bid exaggerated sums for pictures as long as it was paying them to its subsidiary or to the company which owns it), then the unaffiliated theatre would be the one hit since it would have no assurance whatever of product.

This feature would also destroy the present system under which a theatre builds up its patronage in establishing good will in the minds of its customers between a certain line of pictures or certain stars. If Colleen Moore's, for instance, should be offered separately at auction, no theatre would care to build up a Colleen Moore following. A box-office in a particular theatre sometimes thrives in proportion to the fan following which has been built up for the stars exhibited in that theatre. It would be difficult for a star to capitalize on his or her popularity, if the pictures featuring that star are to be shunted from one theatre to another.

The selling by a producer to chain theatres in preference to an unaffiliated theatre, in many cases, is merely the reflection of the economical factor both as to safety and outlet, and the lesser cost of selling that goes with a chain sale. It is much cheaper to sell 100 houses of a circuit, or 50, than to negotiate for that number of separate contracts. Furthermore, each circuit, having a tremendous investment, has a greater appreciation of a tie-up with a quality producer than an individual that uses one brand of pictures this year and may go elsewhere next year.

There is an imperative need for distribution costs in this industry to come down and as chain operation becomes more and more in vogue (as it has in every other line of business), reduction of sales costs must go hand in hand with it. . . .

This section gives to the Federal Trade Commission the power to enforce the bill and to make rules and regulations for giving effect to its provisions including the power, after full hearing, to fix the price differentials. The most remarkable feature of this section is that it makes no provision for an appeal from any decision, rule, regulation or order entered by the Commission. The broad and unlimited powers granted by this proposed act would put the motion picture industry absolutely under the control of this Commission with no right of appeal to a court for a review. . . .

As has been pointed out heretofore, the effect of this bill would be to bring thousands of price disputes before this commission for determination. This would involve an enormous amount of litigation at a cost of much time and money. Each case would have been investigated, a complaint prepared and a copy served upon the respondent who, under the present rules of the commission, would have thirty days to answer. The issues being thus joined, the matter would be referred to a trial examiner before whom the testimony would be taken. This would necessitate much traveling over the country and the subpoenaing of many witnesses from distant localities. At the conclusion of the evidence the examiner would have thirty days in which to prepare and file his report, after which counsel for the commission and the respondent, would file their exceptions to the same and their briefs and then the matter would come on for argument before the commission and final determination. The length of time taken by the commission in determining the cases before it, is notorious. The important cases take years and even the smallest cases take months. An examination of the records would show that in the last five years seldom, if ever, has a contested case been finally disposed of in less than a year from the time it was first brought to the attention of the commission. Such a procedure would be fatal to both exhibitors and producers. In order to speed up the procedure, it would be necessary for the Congress to make a very substantial increase in the commission's annual appropriation as the personnel of the commission and staff would have to be greatly increased. . . .

On questions of price all authorities disagree and each case would be different and would require a full hearing on the merits. The delays and red tape incident to this procedure would afford no relief to the industry, but on the contrary would impose untold extra burden and expense. By the time the question of price was litigated, the picture would be so old as to have no exhibition value.

Section 8—Page 10—Line 9

This is the penal clause providing fine and/or imprisonment for any violation of the act or any order, rule or regulation of the Federal Trade Commission, making it a crime and branding producers, distributors and exhibitors who violate it as criminals.

Des Moines Theatres Win Full Cooperation of Newspapers

Register Devotes Two Pages Sundays and Follows with Page on Mondays —Tribune-Capital Runs Personalities Column

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

DES MOINES, Feb. 21.—Theatres in Des Moines have thorough cooperation of the newspapers and the press policy now in vogue in dealing with weekend theatre copy and advertisements has been followed for a long time with apparently satisfactory results.

THE TRIBUNE-CAPITAL, for example, plays up short stories on coming plays for the week with pictures on Saturday. This is a daily afternoon paper with no Sunday issue.

The Register gives a full page of stories and pictures in the Sunday morning issue with the theatre ads and other material on music and drama on the opposite page. When the sheets are opened for reading, the patron sees, at a glance, two pages of theatre material made up attractively and concentrated for his benefit. The Register is a morning daily.

Each Monday morning the Register publishes reviews of all the new shows and the Tribune-Capital does the same thing in the afternoon. Half-column cuts are used, as a rule, by both papers in playing up these reviews. The Monday stories appear under a three or four-column caption calling attention to the theatres. The practice has become a habit. Theatregoers rely upon the newspapers for information about the pictures and other shows available for the week.

The Tribune-Capital runs a short collection of stories about theatres and theatre personalities under the caption, "Spot Light," at frequent intervals. The feature editor has brought numerous interesting bits of material before the public through this means. Attempts are made to make the copy timely so that it will have to do with current plays or with what is soon to come.

Rumors that a third daily will soon appear in Des Moines to replace the Des Moines Capital, merged a year ago with the Tribune, are persistent. Theatre owners and managers predict that some changes in advertising rates may come as a result, since the two papers now dominating the field are owned and operated by the same company.

Cruze to Produce 20 as Independent In Liberty Company

*(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—James Cruze is to form an independent producing company and will make 20 pictures a year to be sold under a franchise plan. He recently resigned from his connection in Pathe.

The new company will be known as Liberty Pictures Corporation with Harry Sherman president and James Cruze, vice-president. Cruze has signed a five-year contract with the Liberty concern and remains as president of Cruze Productions, Inc. He will personally direct four pictures a year and supervise 16 others. Vernon Keyes will act as his assistant; Harold Schwartz as production manager, Walter Woods, head of the story department, Ira Morgan, chief photographer. All are of Cruze's old staff.

The pictures will be made at nominal cost and be distributed by Liberty Pictures through independent exchanges.

Title Writers Organize as the "Titular Bishops"

*(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—A group of the leading title writers of Hollywood have formed an association, the first of its kind in the world, to be known as the Titular Bishops. It includes title writers and title editors. The original members of the new organization are Julian Johnston, production editor, Paramount; Malcolm Stuart Boylan, production editor Fox; Joseph Farnham, production editor, M-G-M; Randolph Bartlett, production editor F-B-O; Herman Mankiewicz, Paramount; George Marion, Jr., Paramount; Ralph Spence and Garrett Graham; and Walter Anthony, Universal production editor.

Wampas Books Thirty Vaude Acts for Frolic

*(Special to Exhibitors Herald and

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—Wampas has prepared an elaborate program for its 1928 Frolic and Ball. About 30 headline vaudeville acts have been engaged for the occasion. Milton Sills, Charlie Murray, and Jackie Coogan have been chosen to act as masters of ceremonies, and six orchestras will furnish incidental music for the acts and dancing.

Strayer Passes Cigars

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—Frank Strayer passed the cigars last week to celebrate the birth of a six-pound boy.

Hard Times Scare Proves 90% Mental; 38 Directors Working Banks Getting Players Money; Tales of Woe Responsible for Financial Tightening on Coast; Korda Begins Billie Dove Production

By DOUGLAS HODGES

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—With all the soft-voiced pessimism here regarding the panic "that is seizing the film colony" the fact remains that all but one or two studios are operating and 38 directors are busy on production.

Normal Number of Working Directors 40

The normal number of directors working being about 40, it appears that 90 per cent of the gossip about slump is pure gossip with no more foundation than the fear in the hearts of a few thousand employees.

A hurried checkup of several Hollywood banks shows that the money is coming into them faster than it is going out. A checkup of personnel heads of the studios shows that there are more people employed than there were a year ago at this time.

The main fear is that contracts will be brought to an end and that salaries will be forced down by the producers. Against that possibility players and directors are wisely saving their money but unwisely spreading their misinformation of film things. Unless they become mentally stable property values and business in general will be greatly affected temporarily but affected nevertheless.

Korda Starts Film

Alexander Korda began shooting a Bess Meredyth scenario last week with Billie Dove in the leading role. It is "The Yellow Lily" and is the first Korda has made since he completed "Helen or Troy" in which his wife, Maria Corda, so well enacted the leading and title role. "Yellow Lily" is one of four big pictures under way at First National.

Albert Ray started "Thief in the Dark" at the Fox studios featuring George Meeker and Doris Hill.

Charles Reisner, director, who made himself a great record not many months ago at Warner Brothers, has begun a comedy at Paramount studios starring W. C. Fields. It is untitled but the title to be used will be announced in these columns within a few days.

Green on Cutting of Fox Film

Alfred E. Green is in the most difficult stage of his work on "Honor Bound," the big Fox production, with the cutting and editing started. There is no telling how soon or how long it will be before that part of the picture has been done and the picture previewed.

It is known from the story, of course, that Al's picture is heavy drama with comedy intermingled. A story of crime and punishment, it fits excellently into the style of films being made by great numbers at present in Hollywood.

Ralph Ince has patched up his differences at the FBO lot sufficiently to make at least one more picture there. This one is

A New Prevost

A little hoodlum but a hoodlum who will undoubtedly pull on your heartstrings in her work in "The Godless Girl" that Cecil B. DeMille is directing. It is MARIE PREVOST in a featured role of a new kind.

MARIE PREVOST herself chose to get rough instead of languid in her parts for the sake of art and exhibitors. She prefers dramatic roles and the first one calls for blonde hair and a reformatory gown.

The pictures currently at the top of the Box Office Ticker were written and directed by the following people. The greatest change in the standing of various directors and writers since a month ago is in the case of "The Lost World," directed by Mr. Hoyt and written for the screen by Miss Fairfax. Mr. Stone is author of four scripts which command box office attention as against two in December. Only the first 10 pictures on the list have been so characterized.

Mix Breaks Ribs During Film Fight in Western

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 1.—Tom Mix fell through a ceiling during a fight enacted in his last American made production last week. The fall resulted in three broken ribs and an injury to his wrist. He will be confined to his home for some time before completing the film.

Actors Contract Returned to Committee by Central Board

Academy Finds Clause on "Continuous Employment" Vague—Green and Cline Sets Suffer from Storm

—Mollie Thompson Dies

By RAY MURRAY

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—The standard contract for free-lance actors, drafted last December by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has been referred back to the original committee for clarification of several points. This was decided by the executive board at its last meeting, at which Douglas Fairbanks presided.

The committee consists of Mike Levee, chairman, B. P. Schulberg, representing the producers, Hallam Cooley and Conrad Nagel, representing the actors.

The most important change insisted upon by the actors pertains to continuous employment. The contract is to be made clear on this point so that the actor will be paid up until the time he finishes his part in the picture, with no deductions for the time he is not called on the lot in the interim. Another point in the contract to be clarified is the basis of pay on a six-day week, in case the picture is finished before the week is ended. An actor is also considered ready for work when he appears on the set in makeup, according to the revised contract. It now reads when "he appears before the camera."

the Fox company here and is planning to produce a series of films in South America.

The Educational Studios will close for two months on March 17. This is the regular yearly shut-down and follows the completion of the season's product.

Green and Cline Suffer from Storm

The recent high winds created havoc among the out-of-doors sets on many of the studio lots hereabouts. Part of a set being used by director Al Green for "Honor Bound" at Fox Hills was destroyed, and a First National set constructed at Gay's Lion Farm for "It's All Greek to Me" was completely demolished twice last week, slightly delaying Director Eddie Cline.

Brown Leaving Universal

Mel Brown, well known director, is leaving Universal at the expiration of his present contract. Brown has two successes, "Buck Privates" and "13 Washington Square," playing Broadway, New York. He has just completed "Cream of the Earth" with Marion Nixon and Buddy Rogers.

George O'Brien Visits Dad and Mother

Having completed his role in "Honor Bound," the Fox picture directed by Alfred E. Green, George O'Brien left on Friday for San Francisco to visit his parents.

Death of Mollie Thompson Shocks Film Colony

The entire film colony was shocked to learn of the death of Mrs. Mollie Thompson, last Tuesday. Mrs. Thompson has been head of the casting department of Hal Roach studios for seven years and was well known among the players of Hollywood. Death was caused by cerebral hemorrhage, following an illness of 24 hours. She was 49 years of age. She started as a member of the Hal Roach stock company 13 years ago and appeared in support of Harold Lloyd in his early two-reelers.

Clara Bow, who underwent an operation last week at the St. Vincent's hospital, is gaining rapidly and may be discharged from the institution this week, according to Dr. Clarence Tholin, who performed the operation.

Rod LaRocque, De Mille star, will sail from New York this week on the Mauretania for Europe, to joint his bride, Vilma Banky. The couple expect to return to Hollywood in April.

Sidney Reaches Fame; Celebrates 30th Year in Showbusiness

Hollywood "Discovers" Stars Overnight; America Finds One Once in a Lifetime; Merit Versus Good Luck

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—George Sidney's thirtieth year in the show business will soon be celebrated. Sidney's name in 20,000 marquees tonight is exchangeable for a good many old-fashioned United States banknotes.

To be "discovered" in this town is becoming a regular occurrence. You may be 18 or 38 and suddenly find yourself crowned with favor because of a latent smile or a rounded contour suddenly revealed. There is no particular merit to it. There is if there is merit in suddenly finding that you are born with a half interest in the Ford Motor Company.

To be gradually discovered over a period of 30 years is not to be "discovered" at all. Mr. Sidney's love for his work and his competence as an artist is as much responsible for his success on the screen as is his determination to improve his skill.

Yacht for Sale

THIS luxurious, auxiliary powered, sea-going yacht—complete in every detail. Nine staterooms, exclusive of crew's quarters; baths, refrigerating plant, fireplace, beautifully furnished throughout.

Especially suited for cruises to Alaska, South Seas, or around the world. Vessel now at Rosario, Puget Sound. 80 miles from Seattle. She will not be on the market long at the present remarkable SACRIFICE PRICE.

Write or wire for full particulars from the owner
Robert Moran, Rosario, San Juan County, Washington.

He completed his role in "Give and Take" at Universal last week under the direction of William Beaudine. "Give and Take" was one of the big hits of Broadway in which he appeared shortly before his entry in motion pictures. He had been playing in it 18 months when he met Samuel Goldwyn who was trying to find a man to fill the place of Barney Bernard in the Potash and Perlmutter series of pictures. When he interviewed Mr. Sidney he immediately asked him to play the part of Abe Potash, the role which became his debut during the fall of 1924. The film was "Potash and Perlmutter in Hollywood" and was directed by Alfred E. Green.

It was a success. Sidney grew in popularity and when he was cast in "The Cohens and Kellys" he became a secure Hollywood institution. Since then he has been in great demand. In 1927 he was teamed with Charley Murray in three First National pictures that are box office attractions without doubt. In the past six months he has appeared in featured roles or starring roles of at least five pictures made by big Hollywood companies.

On one occasion he was obliged to work in three featured roles during one month for different companies in order to avoid delaying the production schedules. Although that is first hand information Mr. Sidney himself is not the source of it.

Such demand for the services of a featured player is unique. In other cases the player would enter into an exclusive contract with a company.

His very recent work has been in "We Americans" for Universal, "Flying Romeos" for First National, "The Latest from Paris" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" for Universal.

Before entering pictures he was established as a Broadway star in many shows written for himself. His appearance in "The Show Shop," "Welcome Stranger" and those other hits, however, came after a long, persistent climb from the Harlem Museum.

It is impossible to interview him without an impelling desire to write a lead paragraph about his genuineness and his wholesome personality. It is impossible to write about him without saying that he is a thoroughbred in every sense of the word. It is unnecessary to say that in his kindness and in his humor there is a predominating tone of pathos that makes him beloved by everyone.

Belle Bennett to Play Big Role in Next U. A. Griffith Film Piece

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—What is claimed will be Belle Bennett's greatest role since "Stella Dallas," and one which may transcend that, will be in "The Battle of the Sexes" which D. W. Griffith will direct for United Artists.

Miss Bennet has appeared in many roles since "Stella Dallas," but has found nothing of the same degree of importance that she found in that.

Blanche Mehaffey and Husband to Visit Cuba

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Blanche Mehaffey, screen actress honeymooning in the East with her husband, George J. Hausen, oil magnate, will sail Saturday for Havana. After a week there, they will visit Miami and New Orleans before Miss Mehaffey returns to Hollywood to resume her picture work.

Rambling Round Hollywood

A G. SPALDING, multi-millionaire sporting goods man, has evolved a method of "travelling abroad" without leaving his home or business. It's quite simple. Seems strange no one ever thought of it before.

What Mr. Spalding does is map out an itinerary for a trip to strange lands and then sends an expert motion picture cameraman and staff to those lands with carte blanche orders to bring back a faithful record of the customs of the people as well as scenic shots.

RAY OLESON, well known cameraman, has just returned from one of these trips. Mr. Oleson wouldn't discuss his journey, but from other sources it was learned that he went to the South Sea Islands and got 35,000 feet of film for Mr. Spalding. This he developed and took to the Spalding home, where it was shown privately.

Mr. Spalding has obtained many hundreds of thousands of feet of trips through foreign lands, and these he keeps as a private motion picture library, showing the footage only to his family and friends. None of it has ever been exhibited in a motion picture theatre.

What Is Meant By "Banking Ours in Hollywood"

Two pretty girls, tourists, boarded a bus at Pasadena the other day, bound for Ocean Park. They began querying passengers about the various villages through which they passed and when the bus stopped at Glendale a distinguished-looking old man said to them: "That large building there belongs to one of the finest banks in California. There is another big branch in Hollywood."

"A bank in Hollywood!" exclaimed one of the girls. "Why, I thought those picture people spent all of their money on riotous living.

Is it possible there is a bank in Hollywood? Which goes to show—etc.

If You Haven't Made Good Get a Newsstand

Looking backward in Los Angeles: Not so many years ago Marco of Fanchon & Marco, sold newspapers in Los Angeles and saved enough money to buy a violin. His sister, Fanchon, won a scholarship by getting newspaper subscriptions, and thus formed the foundation of her artistic education. She and Marco afterward went into vaudeville, the latter playing his violin and Fanchon dancing. Now look at 'em!

Sid Grauman in A High Embroidered Hat

The Hi-Hatters, composed of Los Angeles and Hollywood Theatrical publicity men, had a big dinner at the Roosevelt the other evening, at which Sid Grauman was the guest of honor. Mr. Grauman was elected an honorary vice-president of the organization, with proper insignia, which consists of gold fashioned in the form of a Chinese coin. The Hi-Hatters handled the football game between the Fire and Police Departments and grossed more than $35,000 for them. This "Live Wire" organization is planning a big shindig within the next two months.

This is the migratory period for publicity men out this way. Bob Doman has gone from United Artists to the Million Dollar theatre, where he is working under the able leadership of Charles Kurtzman. Hal Horne and Lou Marengella are at United Artists. Mel Riddle is at Loew's State and Duke Orbach at the Criterion. Jeff Lazarus is bossing the bunch in good shape, as director of advertising and publicity for West Coast Theatres, Inc.

"Notices" with Gertrude Olmstead and Gertrude Astor in the important roles. That title is regarded as a facetious attempt at irony in the face of the present employment scare in this sector.

Raoul Walsh would have been nearly finished with "Red Dancer of Moscow" had it not been for the Oak poisoning that has again handicapped Dolores Del Rio, the star. She has been unable to work during the past week. In the early part of the Fox picture she complained of a similar siege but not quite so severe.

Howard Hughes is handling the megaphone personally during the air sequences of "Hell's Angels," the Caddo production for United Artists. In the cast are Ben Lyon and Greta Nissen. James Hall has completed his part of the film and has been "loaned back" to Paramount for the Bebe Daniels picture.

Southwest Exhibitors Profit By Keen Newsreel Competition

Problem Facing Distributor Is Sane Selling and Close Booking With Cost to Producer Enormous

[By Special Correspondent of Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World]

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 21.—Distributors are facing an acute problem in the Southwest—that of profitable correct newsreel bookings, and a keen competition in the field. The entry of Paramount and Metro into the already covered newsreel market has brought that problem to the foreground, and what is true of Texas is said to be true of the entire country.

Exhibitors Get Bargains

The Southwest's newsreel market is in a state of dilemma, so far as possible profits are concerned. A continual fight is going on for new contracts, and exhibitors are obtaining real bargains in various cases where the salesman makes a quick sale to offset the action of the representative of a rival company.

The problem that the distributor now is facing is that of sane selling and close booking. The salesman is not entirely at fault on weak contracts, but he can partly offset home office criticism by using his judgment on the selling of his newsreel at too great a loss.

Production Cost Enormous

The money that is being put into only the production of the various newsreels is enormous. With staff photographers all over the country, and in foreign countries, each man vying with the others to get a "scoop" on the events of the day, and shooting high, wide and handsome, the cost of production is almost unbelievable. And then, only about one twentieth of the stuff ever sees the screen.

There is no doubt that people of the Southwest want the newsreel. The point is proved when it is cited that theatres operating newsreels which obtain good scoops on important events usually run separate newspaper ads, build lobby displays, and otherwise sell the idea to the public that they are presenting the first film record of the happening.

The five leading newsreels are probably equally popular in the South, with the larger houses in most instances running the two new products, playing on the idea that the public is always searching for something new and different. But after all, a newsreel is a newsreel, and its success depends on the regularity and stability of quality. Various reports taken over the country from time to time tend to show that all newsreels are about on a par as far as quality goes—so the exhibitor is pretty safe in booking any of them. It is not the exhibitor who is suffering in the newsreel war—he is the beneficiary—but the producer is daily facing a more and more complicated situation.

Buy Several Newsreels

De luxe theatres in Texas, as elsewhere, buy from three to five reels each release, cut them, and build their own news presentation, to suit the tastes and desires of the audiences.

The cameraman is another problem of newsreel production. He is responsible for the success or failure of his company's product. He must be conscientious, alert, and have that necessary "nose for news." But the cameraman is also the problem in seeking lower production costs. Staff men of most companies work on a salary, a footage charge, and expenses—all of which runs up into a neat sum each week. The salary usually is not alone a pressing factor, but footage and expenses cost the producer a pretty penny.

Plot Idea Clicks In Bandshows

Film Producers Get Grauman's Advice First

All Flock to Him for First Showing of Productions and His Stage Prologues

In spite of recent vigorous attacks on the picture play prologue by critics and others who want their film entertainment devoid of any other embellishment, leading producers seem as anxious as ever to have their featured productions given a Sid Grauman presentation with the elaborate stage spectacles that have made Graumanesque showmanship internationally famous. Despite the fact that Grauman only recently staged the premiere of Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus," with an elaborate prologue spectacle titled "Ballyhoo," and introducing world famed circus stars, producers are already seeking to gain his attention with big film productions soon to be completed in the hope that they may have the distinction of a Graumanesque presentation later.

Since Grauman invaded Hollywood in 1921 with his magnificent Egyptian theatre, which he sold to United Artists shortly after he completed construction of his Oriental palace of amusement, Grauman's Chinese theatre, producers have battled strenuously for the honor of having their films presented by Grauman.

Film Men Seek Grauman's Advice

A leading producer, in one instance, personally brought a film to Grauman's theatre to preview it for the prologue impresario, and when suggestions were made that it was a bit too harrowing in spots, the producing executive took it back to the studio, edited it in line with the criticisms and himself brought it back for submission to the theatre magnate, in the hope that it would meet the requirements for the long run house.

Chaplin's latest comedy is the third big film production to be shown in Grauman's Chinese since the theatre was spectacularly opened in May, 1927, with the world famed

Chicago Again Scoring With Story Shows

"The Mikado of Jazz" Staged by Paul Ash at Oriental Wins Public Approval

By A. RAYMOND GALLO

A visit to the Oriental Theatre, Chicago, this week proved one of the many predictions made through this department regarding presentation and stage bandshows. The prediction we have in mind at this particular time is the future of bandshows in their proper form. That is, can they go on indefinitely as they are or will the new plot idea inaugurated this week by Paul Ash take the place of the old style. We claim that plot and continuity is necessary for the future success of presentation as well as the preservation of the stage policy in picture houses.

Many people are under the impression that when one speaks of presentation, they immediately think that it means a stage bandshow. That is not the case. Time and time again we have informed exhibitors as well as production managers who constantly read this department that in order to offer presentation entertainment in their theatres, it does not necessarily mean that they must offer stage bandshow attractions.

The word presentation covers a large field, it not only means presentation of stage entertainment but also in screen form as well. The word was coined merely to distinguish the type of amusement given in vaudeville theatres from the deluxe picture houses.

Anything Is Presentation

Anything staged in a picture theatre in the form of entertainment outside of actual motion pictures can be classed and called presentation in stage form. The class of presentation that can be offered depends entirely upon the locality of your theatre and the type of people that attend your house.

ORGANISTS "CHLO-E" (Song of the Swamp)

Organists who have been fortunate enough to have used the slides on "CHLO-E" report that this song, with its beautiful melody and underlying "tom-tom" rhythm, holds audiences in a spell, grips and lifts them out of their seats, and finishes to genuine spontaneous applause—

There is a very beautiful version by Edward K. House entitled "THE LEGEND OF THE EVERGLADES"—and it is everything the title implies—

Villa Moret, Inc., also announces still another version in preparation, a very high-class composition, primarily for deluxe picture houses. This was written by Walter Hirsch. The song is by Gus Kahn and Neil Moret.

As we said before if a deluxe picture house is situated in a community neighborhood that desires a personality attraction then it would be advisable to select a capable band leader that can also act as a master of ceremonies. Whether or not you should continue the policy with the band on the stage depends entirely upon the community. If at any time, you feel that the band leader's popularity is failing then it may be wise to replace him or try a different type of presentation show without the band on the stage.

Its Up to the Manager

The theatre manager is entirely responsible for the success of his house and the policy that finds favor with his audience. By that we do not mean that you must juggle your policy around so that your audience is at a loss to know what to expect next, but you must give them a variety of stage entertainment intermingled with some novelty that will keep them coming into your house each and every week.

Every conceivable form of stageband presentation has been done but no one as yet outside of Paul Ash and a few others who just take a stab at it occasionally have really given the plot idea any serious thought.

Deluxe motion picture theatres have enormous investments in their projects that by a mere slip of not giving the audience something substantial and satisfactory for their admission each week they are apt to endanger this investment by losing out at the box-office. The probability of this happening will be done away with if the powers-to-be at the heads of huge circuits and men who have their hands on the moneybags will only have these things in mind when they make out their weekly appropriations for staging entertainment at their theatres.

Serves as Added Attraction

It is not at all necessary to spend a fortune on stageshows and deprive your screen of a good film. Presentation in a picture house was never meant to submerge motion pictures. It is exactly what the audiences have always thought it to be, an added attraction that would make them attend the beautiful picture theatres whether they were in their neighborhood or in a business district.

At one time it was possible for people to go to a vaudeville theatre and see a good stage program. There were very little films shown in vaudeville theatres several years ago. Therefore the public was compelled to seek their different styles of entertainment in different classes of theatres. When the vaudeville stage became flooded with all sorts of freak attractions and mediocre talent the public began to look around for diversified entertainment in picture theatres.

The reason for augmenting the entertainment policy in these picture theatres was simply for the fact that there were never enough big photoplays produced that would draw a crowd into a motion picture house without any extra attraction. This fact was more than true with only a very few exceptions which automatically brought the business of the motion picture theatre to the point where today it is a great institution conducted on a greater paying basis than hertofore.

Stageshows Help Box Office

You may wonder and ask if presentation or the stage entertainment has been responsible for this growth. It is safe to say that it has. At least 50 per cent of the audiences attending picture houses today would never go to the same theatre the second time if it were not for the fact that they could expect to see something else besides just a picture. Now that the situation has gone as far as it has, the public insist and demand extra attraction for the admission price and in order to keep this great army of supporters coming in to pay their weekly contribution to your box-office, you, as the theatre manager or production supervisor, must try to please them and in return give the class of entertainment that is desired and within reach of your appropriation.

At this writing we cannot think of any better way of building up a neighborhood business better than injecting plots into your stageshows such as Paul Ash did last week in "The Mikado of Jazz." By offering a story with the local favorites playing important roles you are really building an institution that will receive the utmost support of your public.

premiere of Cecil B. De Mille's "King of Kings," to be followed by Douglas Fairbanks' "The Gaucho." Although United Artists have a heavy financial interest in the Chinese, Grauman has announced that future productions will not be confined to the U. A. product, his policy being to present the films, regardless of the producing agency, of general appeal and the long run caliber which have given him his reputation as master craftsman of picture presentation.

Presentation LETTERS

In this open forum those interested in presentation may discuss important matters bearing upon this phase of theatre entertainment. Only signed letters will be published.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: I was very much interested in the article on page 47, your issue of Feb. 4th relative to song slides. There are various phases to this matter which I will not go into. I just want to give you my particular method of handling this form of business.

I use a card similar to the sample enclosed. The plain side of the card is used for the address side, like a postal card, except that it of course takes a two-cent stamp.

I do not claim that the card (or the method) is perfect, as on my next hatch of cards I expect to make some changes. Heading and salutations are of course as an ordinary letter. The first takes care of any new complimentary music received from the publishers. Certainly the courtesy of the publishers in sending complimentary copies is worthy of a two-cent stamp of gratitude.

The next item asks whether slides are obtainable on requested numbers. The next sentence is self-explanatory, as some publishers send slides unrequested, and they cannot be used, at least at the time sent. My schedule for running slides varies according to the program of the theatre.

Slides are returned immediately after use, and notice of their return sent by the next item. Under "Remarks" comes—"Remarks." Either in regard to the slides or new music received, etc.

The printed form saved a lot of time in corresponding with the different publishers, and to my notion makes a neater job than a hastily written letter each time.

What has become of the various articles relative to organ music in the theatre especially in the "Better Theatres" section? Let's have some more of them. They surely must be of benefit. They always were to me, I assure you. And your "Organ Solos" column, and the "Five Best Sellers" under the "New Music" column. Very truly yours.—Wm. J. Cowdrey, Organist, Sherman theatre, Chillicothe, Ohio.

PRESENTATION ACTS—To the Editor: Brad Braley's Orthophonic-Organ concerts have come to Concord to stay. They are to become regular features on our bill from popular demand.

The selection used this week is called "When Day Is Done," this also being recorded by Paul Whiteman for the Victor. This concert was greeted with greater applause and more personal comment than the first. I believe that the gifted organists of the country will grasp this idea as an invaluable aid in selling their solos to the public. Yours in better presentations.—J. C. Lund, Capitol theatre, Concord, N. H.

STAGE SHOWS

Chicago Oriental

Week Ending February 19

"The Mikado of Jazz" was this week's stage presentation, a production conceived and condensed to syncopated music by Paul Ash and Louis McDermott. This is the first of the series of bandshows that are to be presented at this theatre with a plot. If applause means anything we feel that this type of show is the thing that shall please every class of theatre-goer and eventually replace the old-form of stereotyped bandshows. Everybody is quite familiar with the Mikado and its original story, therefore we will not attempt to give you a detailed report but will point out briefly the roles and how they were handled by its player.

Opening: In front of a beautiful silk drop with black background and silver futuristic design of an oriental nature in front of which Paul Ash made his entrance to introduce the cast and give some idea of what was to take place. The cast of characters were as follows:

Koko, the high executioner was played by Bob La Salle; Nanki-Poo, the wandering minstrel, played by Arch Cannon; the great Poo-Bah, commissioner of police, played by Willard Andelin; the three little maids from school, played by the Darling Twins and Patricia Manners; the Royal Entertainers, played by the Four Kimawa Japs; The Mikado, played by Paul Ash. Paul Ash's gang furnished the music and comedy elements throughout the version.

The show ran as follows: A full stage setting with entire atmosphere in typical oriental style to represent the original setting of the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera with the band playing an arrangement of one of its tuneful tunes as the Abbott Girls danced a neat Japanese routine.

During this scene, Bob La Salle and Willard Andelin made their entrance coming down the bridge and after exchanging several minutes of talk, part from the original script, and part up to date, Arch Cannon entered the spot and joins the men. After a few more minutes of talk, the band strikes up a native tune as the Mikado makes his entrance upon the scene in a native two-wheel cart drawn by humans. This, as said before, was played by Paul Ash, himself, with the only oriental atmosphere about him being a beautiful black and gold Japanese kimono, smoking a large cigar and wearing a small headband with one feather sticking up.

Immediately after this he commanded the band to go into a hot arrangement of "Ice Cream," intermingled with several popular numbers.

After this Arch Cannon did a solo in vocal style using one of the original songs from the Opera. This he worked next to Paul Ash with the show still keeping the continuity running through by lines intermingled here and there by the various characters.

The Kimawa Japs next offer their specialty of barrel juggling on their feet and tumbling stunts that displayed their wonderfully developed and athletic bodies. This is one of the standard acts that have appeared in vaudeville for years and was one of the high lights of this show. A great deal of comedy is derived from the by-play between Paul Ash and the boys doing their stunt.

The Abbotts appeared again in a well-trained routine of toe dancing in typical Oriental style. The next specialty was offered by the Darling Twins and Patricia Manners, who sang "Three Little Maids from School" with popular songs intermingled during the routine. After the first version, the Darling Twins donned off their kimonoas and did their dance specialties in a Japanese abbreviated costume. These girls are a standard attraction in picture houses and seem to just fit in their roles.

Patricia Manners and Arch Cannon next sang a duet. One noticeable thing about this duet was that Miss Manners, who portrayed the part of Yum-Yum, neither looked nor sang the part which detracted from her partner very much. It left most of the singing to Cannon and he certainly knew how to handle the role without faltering in any spot.

A good point to bring out at this time is that the diction of Cannon and Andelin was perfect and although their roles were more or less modernized, they kept within the theme.

Bob La Salle next offered his contribution to the show in which he intermingled "Broken Hearted," "Ching-A-Loe" and "Willy-Tid-Willy" as well as a parody on "Blue Heaven," titled "My Henry." There is no doubt that Bob as Koko is easily the laugh hit of this show and walked away with honors and flying colors, at this house.

Finale: Was more or less flashy displaying beautiful robes worn by the Abbotts, who lined up in the wedding procession in which Yum-Yum and Nanki-Poo became wedded. The entire cast assembled on the stage, each celebrating the great event and making comedy of many situations.

Before the curtain dropped for the last time, Paul Ash and the entire cast of principals were compelled to take several bows and curtain calls.

Ruth Elder, famous for her attempt to fly the Atlantic, was the headliner of the stage bill at this house during Valentine week. Demure and chic in a sport suit, Miss Elder tells of her trans-Atlantic flight of last summer. Preceding her appearance, motion pictures showing the high spots of her famous flight were shown on the screen.

Miss Elder is just as pretty in real life as her pictures have represented her. In a distinct Southern drawl, she told of the terrific storm she and her copilot, Capt. George Haldeman, encountered during the second night of their flight.

If it hadn't been for a series of coincidences that caused that freighter which picked them up to be two days late and several miles off its course, Ruth confessed to her Detroit stage audiences that her stage appearances never would have been possible. Her talk consumed 15 minutes and all of it was interesting.

Irving Edwards Review, with Martinex and Sevilla, Spaniards who sing and dance with skill and abandon, was well received. There are six women and two men in the act, and Edwards does a specialty in the afterpiece.

Bob Nelson, a clown who puts himself on an intimate footing with his audience by getting as close to the ticket holders as the footlights will permit, gathered in a big share of applause at every performance.

Gautier's Animated Toy Shop, a colorful offering, concluded the bill. Esther Ralston's blonde beauty was seen to advantage in the feature picture, "Love and Learn."

It was a peppy show at the Chicago this week. Superior, we would say, to last week's offering. The show was called "Highlights," but if we called it just one big "Highlight" it would be sufficient.

Rae Samuels was the star of the moment, and did her bit much to the satisfaction of the ones who make such as the Chicago prosperous.

She has a good line, both vocally and in monologue. The crowd who saw the show the night this reporter did braved a real storm to hear her, and they didn't seem to give a tinker's (well, you know what we mean), whether the weather was wintry or not.

In the first place it was a snappy show, colorful in settings and costume, good music—well, it was a good show.

The show opened in front of a bespangled scrim, you might call it. Scattered over this iridescent drop were many small electric lights flashing on and off like so many fireflies. A soprano, Sherry Louise, from whom the lyric notes came with ease, opened with a classical number. From the stage she has a pleasing personality and voice.

As the lights came up the scrim raised revealing the orchestra in front of a colorful drop, fantastic in its conception. On came the 12 Foster Girls as marionettes. May we say that this was one of the most clever dance acts we have seen. Coming from the flies were the usual control cords which are always associated with the marionette, or Punch and Judy. The funny part of it was that these cords in several instances were actually used during part of the dance. It was a clever conception and brought a great hand.

Next we had with us Helen McFarland, a 16 year old (so they say) youngster who did a song if you wanted it, a dance or a tune on the xylophone. The latter seemed her forte, and for her act she received a good hand.

Douglas Burley followed with something decidedly unusual—a slow motion (picture) dance. The boy is great, with an exceptional dance which necessitates a bit of contortion that makes you wonder how he does it. "Diane" was the fine tune to which he did his steps.

Jules Buffano, who was on his last week at the Chicago, then led his orchestra through "My Melancholy Baby," a good tune and well presented. Jules did some vocal work which brought a good hand.

The Foster Girls then came on for their conception of an Arabian dance, and what a hand they drew. Very clever girls, well trained.

The next dance act was a team, Masse and Dietrich, acrobatic dancers. They had a split at the end that was great, and while the whole act was good, this brought an encouraging hand.

Finally, Rae Samuels herself. She remained on the stage for four rollicking, humorous songs, interpolated by some banter which brought the laughs. Miss Samuels showed a lot of pep.

The finale brought all onto the stage amid colors galore. On individual revolving platforms the 12 Foster Girls stood. The orchestra, Miss Louise and Miss McFarland all entered into the spirit of the act, and it was given a fine send-off.

Detroit Michigan

Staged against a gorgeous tropical setting, the Publix presentation "Havana" catches with fidelity the languorous dreamy atmosphere of a Spanish town. Pretty girls wear beautiful gowns, sing sweetly and dance with grace.

George Dewey Washington, singing "On the Road to Mandalay," and "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella" and other popular numbers, quite walked away with the show at almost every performance and he was compelled to respond to a number of enthusiastic encores.

The dancing of Dorothy Berke was much appreciated and the Boris Petroff Girls, Del Delbridge and His Syncopators, George Scheiner, Coaster and Hewlett and Fritz and Joan Hubert all did their part to add to the entertainment.

St. Louis Missouri

Week Ending February 17

The stage show this week embraced ideas that impressed Brooke Johns while in New York the previous week. It was styled, "Broadway Follies."

The featured acts included Tilyou and Rogers, step-pers; Alexander and Swanson, ballroom dancers, and Emerson and Baldwin, comedy magicians.

There were other acts, models and dancing girls to make up a company of fifty-five persons.

Johns, personally, sang "Dream Kisses" for the production number, while Al Eldridge, pianist of the stage orchestra, did a specialty.

For his overture, Leonid Leonardi and his pit orchestra presented "Lullabies." There was a Chinese ballet interpolation.

Milton Slosser back at the organ again after a week at the Ambassador theatre played a "Song Convention."

Atlanta Howard

Week Ending February 18

The Howard offered an unusual, but interesting, presentation this week, "Making Movies." Actually, it was a sequence of the all-Atlanta motion picture which is being sponsored by the Howard theatre and Constitution, newspaper, and produced by Berkova Productions, Inc.

The production will represent Atlanta ability, the scenario being written by the Atlanta girl and cast made up of local talent. The completed film will be shown on the theatre screen as an added attraction the week of March 5.

Ray Teal, popular bandmaster of the Howard orchestra, presided in the pit this week, giving as his bit of directional entertainment a rhapsody. The orchestra was accompanied by George Lee Hamerick on the organ.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lawson, radio stars, rendered several selections which proved enjoyable.

The Phelps Sisters, dancers and singers, drew fair hands with their two numbers.

Robert Earl, member of the Howard orchestra, gave a solo, which stood out as the highlight of the program.

Philadelphia Fox

Week Ending February 18

Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," with Vitaphone accompaniment, was shown for a second and final week at the Fox. Allan Rogers tenor, appeared on the stage in a new program of songs.

San Francisco Granada

Week Ending February 17

This week's show brought Owen Sweeten back as orchestra leader, but he got no further than the pit, the stage being occupied by Eight Victor Artists in a Fanchon and Marco show. For the first time in many moons the Granada offered an exclusively male stage attraction. There wasn't a girl in sight and neither was there a dance. Just music, vocal and instrumental, with a story of two thrown in for good measure.

In honor of Thomas A. Edison, the Granada orchestra offered "Oriental Phantasy," a favorite of the noted inventor, and following this an animated Victor record flashed on the screen for a moment.

The curtain arose on the Eight Victor Artists, with three grand pianos in action. The "Doll Dance" was among the numbers offered.

James Stanley sang "Invictus" in a masterful manner and Monroe Silver told a couple of stories and sang a Yiddish song. Henry Burr, tenor, offered "Are You Lonesome Tonight?" and responded with an encore.

Sam Herman brought down the house with a xylophone solo, but this seemed only a mild sample of his ability compared with the artistry displayed in his encore number.

The Peerless Quartette sang the "Farmer Song" as it might be heard in the United States, Palestine, Ireland, China and Italy, and the act came to a close with a song by all eight artists.

In addition to those mentioned the artists included Billy Murray, Frank Banta, Carl Mathieu and Stan Baughman. The entertainment was of high type and was second of a series of stage acts featuring the stars of stage and studio.

Chicago Central Park

Week Ending February 19

Joie Lichter still continues as master of ceremonies and permanent band leader here, presenting band-shows on Saturdays and Sundays only. One of the programs recently reported took place as follows:

Opening: With a fine band arrangement of "Tiger Rag," played in hot style by Lichter and his gang.

This was followed by Georgia Howard in a specialty consisting of dancing and violin selections done at the same time. She was followed by Talbot and Fisher, known as the "Singing Gobs," in selections of popular songs. The boys were well received on this program.

Billy Snyder, who also acted as master of ceremonies in conjunction with Joie Lichter, ran in and out of each act with some clever chatter and at this spot presented his own specialty of comedy songs and smart talk. This chap was reported in our columns before and again proved himself popular.

He was followed by Dorothy Adsit, a cute little trick, who clowning with Lichter and sang "Did You Mean It?"

Frank and Forman, two men, closed the specialty program with a series of clever buck and wing steps, well routined, both working like they knew their business.

Mark Fisher and his Merry Music Makers were featured this week in "Leap Year Proposals." In addition to Lewis and Moore, Louise Ploner, and Earl La Vere, the Gould dancers also played a great part in this show. It ran as follows:

Opening: With the Gould Girls on steps proposing to the boys in the hand, each doing a little comedy hit that brought much humor. At this point Mark Fisher entered as the boys went into an arrangement of "So Tired," each doing a hit of comedy, such as yawning and stretching, in addition to this Mark Fisher sang the chorus with the boys.

The Tumbling Clowns were next in a fast routine of athletic stunts in tumbling feats. Right after this Sammy Lewis and Patty Moore came on with their eccentric dancing, after which Patty remained to do some smart talking with Mark Fisher.

In the second part of this act, Sammy did some very loose limbed dancing. It seemed that these two could not get off the stage due to their instant hit with the audience.

Louise Ploner, who in the opening proposed to Mark Fisher, came back to do a specialty of "Together We Two," in which she also was compelled to repeat a chorus. This young lady works cute and makes a fine appearance, and seems to just fit in this type of role. Her encore consisted of another chorus of the song with Mark Fisher folling for her in a comedy hit with a baby carriage which secured a great deal of laughter and merriment.

The Gould Girls were next each dressed in a different colored spring outfit in which they offered a dainty routine.

Earl La Vere, with an accordion and a hunch of smart gags, was next. This chap has some good material but like a great many others fails to stop when he has given enough. Although they seemed to go big for him here and he stopped the show, it appeared that he was milking the audience for more applause at each exit. A little more accordion music and a little less smart remarks would put this fellow over great for he has the goods in him.

Mark Fisher next offered his solo of "Sunshine," Irving Berlin's new song, which although is brand-new to this part of the town, was immediately liked and approved through the manner that Mark sang it in. For an encore he gave "Let A Smile Be Your Umbrella," which set him more solid than ever with his audience.

Lewis and Moore were out again, this time in a novelty dance, all practically executed on the flight of steps. This is about the first time that this type of dancing has been done in picture houses and it is needless to say that they were the hit of the bill, let alone stopping the show.

Finale: Took place with the background changing atmosphere to resemble a huge wreath in halo form as Louise Ploner marched up the flight of stairs in bridal veil while the entire cast assembled and decorated the scene. During this scene Miss Ploner sang "Today Is Today" as the band also played strains of the same song.

Boston Metropolitan

"Tak-A-Chance week," with a mystery show on stage and screen, was the bill, with stage production by Frank Cambria. The program was full of surprises, and judging from the crowded condition of the audience, the whole thing was a great success.

The first "surprise" we saw the minute the curtain rose upon another orchestra director, not our old friend, Gene Rodemich. We found out that the new leader was non other than Al Mitchell, direct from the Paramount theatre in New York, who had changed places for the time being with Gene.

"Twelve Exclamation Points," followed by a "Couple of Dashes" were first, which, translated, were 12 dancing girls in attractive red and gold costumes who did some tricky tap steps, many of them without musical accompaniment, and two fellows in other tap dances.

Next came saxophones, trumpets, violins, drums, clarinets, flutes, and enthusiasm, which of course was a lively jazz selection by the hand hoys under the direction of their new friend.

"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea and Nobody Gets Wet!" was the mystifying title of the next number. We found it to be a unique dance done behind a gauze curtain by girls dressed as mermaids. The under-water effect was most realistic.

Next was a tenor and soprano duet, followed by 32 flying feet and two chance-takers. The "flying feet" were the dancing dozen again, and the other two were a couple of attractive girls who acted as sort of announcers of the program, and in addition gave us here a vocal selection.

The "Magis Mandolin" played by the Mesmerist of Melody was a great hit. The fellow was dressed as a clown, and he sure knew how to tickle the mandolin strings. His rendering of "You Don't Like It—Not Much" brought down the house.

Lastly came three reasons for the week's success in the person of three men in a comedy stunt full of funny songs, snappy jokes, pantomime, and anything else you can think of. Four encores rewarded their efforts.

Finale introduced a futuristic conception of "a certain hazardous event usually accompanied by tall hats, white gloves, rice and old shoes," in other words, a jazz idea of a wedding. A clever ending to an interesting program.

The mystery play on the screen turned out to be Richard Dix in "Sporting Goods."

Philadelphia Stanley

Week Ending February 18

The surrounding acts at the Stanley this week were Spanish in tone, in keeping with the setting of the feature film, "The Dove."

There was an elaborate and colorful stage presentation entitled "My Little Dove," featuring Edward Albano, baritone, and Catherine Littlefield, danseuse, assisted by the Stanley Ballet and the Stanley Chorus Ensemble, 35 persons in all. The act consisted of four parts.

The overture, Chahrier's "Espana," was played by the Stanley Orchestra with Gabriel Hines conducting.

The curtain rose showing the interior of an inn with the whole company in Spanish costume dancing and singing. The Ballet Corps came to the front of the stage and danced a lively Spanish measure, after which the girls grouped themselves in the rear as the members of the Stanley Chorus sang a delightful selection.

Miss Littlefield, completely transformed by a black wig, in a striking costume of black velvet with a brilliant floral spray of rhinestones extending diagonally from the hem of her skirt to her shoulder, gave a remarkably beautiful dance, the effect of which was enhanced by the billowing of her wide skirt lined with rainbow hands of color.

Then the Stanley Ballet in yellow and orange ruffled dresses, all carrying tamhourines, danced a vivacious Spanish dance that received a good hand.

The last number showed Miss Littlefield dressed as a Spanish girl with Albano in the center of the stage. Albano sang a beautiful solo "My Little Dove," as Miss Littlefield accompanied him on a guitar. He has a splendid haritone voice of great richness which was heard to excellent advantage in this selection. The act was beautifully staged and both Miss Littlefield and Albano were enthusiastically applauded.

Salt Lake City Capitol

Week Ending February 18

On the stage this week at the Capitol theatre a very novel idea is presented by Fanchon and Marco, billed as "Hi Hatters" and featuring the "Hi Hat Beauties." This is a collection of dancing girls who are one of the most beautiful lineups which has yet appeared at the Capitol.

Coscla and Verdi, a pair of comedians who build their comedy material around their ability to play a cello, are an outstanding feature of the bill, and are perhaps the biggest hit of the presentation.

Frank DeVoe offered some novelty song hits which proved to be very popular and interesting. The settings were novel and artistic for this presentation.

Alberti and his hand appeared on the stage in connection with this act and were well received after their offering of several popular numbers. Alexander Schreiner presented a solo at the Wurlitzer.

The feature picture shown in connection with this act was "The Noose" and very good attendance was enjoyed throughout the week.

Detroit Capitol

Week Ending February 17

Being Valentine week, the production department of the John H. Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., used a lavish hand in producing "Valentines," the stagershow of the week. Both sentimental and comic valentines were incorporated in the show.

Against a setting of valentines of every hue and design, clever specialties were presented in the way of music, dance and comedy. Milton Watson's fine tenor voice rolled out in some good songs and the Valentine girls in pretty costumes did some trick stepping.

Mehan and Newman presented a graceful and charming dance act, and Tommy Wonder, popular young dancer, did several numbers to the high glee of the spectators. Mills and Shea and Fenton and Fields proved to be entertainers of unusual merit.

Don Mill, the organist, presented a novelty "Pipe Dreams," in which he was assisted by Stanley Perry, Detroit tenor, as soloist and the Capital ensemble. The stage orchestra is under the direction of Walter Bastian.

The comic team, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, disported themselves on the screen in "Wife Savers," adapted from the musical show "Looie the Fourteenth."

Charles Kaley calls his presentation this week, "Lavender and Old Lace." The stage is draped in huge lace drops as two girls, Taylor and Lake, come out to sing, "Beautiful Laces." The band is heard from behind the lace drops. The twelve ballet girls enter in colonial costumes, six of them dressed as men, to do a charming minuet.

Then Kaley, dressed in Colonial costume, enters to announce a song and dance team, Sands and Claire, who enter and sing a short song, and then do the "Varsity Drag," as this reporter has never seen it done before. They get a fine applause.

Frankie Harriton is next and sings, "Ain't That a Grand and Glorious Feeling," which is quite ordinary, but he brings the house down with a comic stuttering song. He takes three calls and then imitates a small girl singing, "Bye Bye Blackbird" for an encore, and then takes another bow.

Taylor and Lake, two young lady harmonizers, sing, "Kiss and Make Up," and "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark." The second was a bit too ambitious for their voices, but they win a fine applause for their efforts.

This is followed with a band number, "Without You Sweetheart," with Kaley singing. After the end Kaley is forced to sing it all over again.

The Rath Brothers, gymnasts, follow with a good hand balancing act which draws several rounds of good applause. Their act is topnotch but their costumes are a trifle behind the times for presentation policy. Their work is smooth, difficult and pleasing.

Kaley next makes a curtain talk in introducing Bee Palmer and her entrance is paved with as much ballyhoo as if she were the Queen of Sheba. It is really a good bit of showmanship. She is accompanied by her piano player, Al Siegel, and Eddie South and his orchestra of several colored boys. South opens the fireworks by singing "Hallelujah" as it was meant to be sung. Miss Palmer sings several blue songs, one of which is "Sweet Georgia Brown." Her blues failed to make a huge impression. Then she does her dance and had the dance lasted more than a minute or two the house would have caught on fire. The audience didn't get the meaning of her blues interpretations, but they got the meaning of her dance all right. As an encore she sings the Jewish song, "Eli, Eli," and this turns out to be her best bit. She puts everything she has into it, and it held the audience spellbound. It was really a fine rendering of the famous song.

Then follows a band number in which each member of the orchestra is featured in a bit. This affords high entertainment for the Granada fans and each member of the band comes in for good applause.

The finale is like most Kaley finales, being a display of costumes. The twelve Granada girls promenade in beautiful lace gowns as Taylor and Lake sing the opening song, "Beautiful Laces," and again, like most Kaley finales, this one is gorgeously beautiful.

San Francisco Warfield

Week Ending February 17

This week Rube Wolf, monarch of mirth and melody, took the Warfield audiences to New York, the second stop in a musical journey around the world. The act opened with the playing of "Rose of the Lane," one of his own compositions, and then Jack Hurley, taxicab tenor, sang it. Rube offered to autograph copies of the song bought in the music stores, when brought back with 50 cents.

The curtain went up back of the orchestra, revealing a huge book, the first page being marked

"Columbus Circle," New York. The popular Cheer Leaders sang and closed with "Rose of the Lane" in which Rube joined.

A trip to Greenwich Village was made by merely turning a page and dancing girls gave a colorful performance typical of the studios. Lucille Page offered a barefoot dance, aided by a beautiful scarf, and won hearty applause.

Next by subway the audience was taken to Times Square, where Way Watson played the ukulele and sang "Everywhere You Go" and "What'll You Do." The orchestra played "Barbara" and the Cheer Leaders joined in. Different members of the orchestra asked if they couldn't sing of their girls, too, and "Emmy Lou," "K-K-Haty," "Sweet Adeline," "Rose Marie" came in for attention.

The Boverly was next visited and the chorus girls did an acrobatic waltz clog. At the Bronx, White and Manning do an acrobatic dance and get a great reception. Next Park Avenue came into view and the orchestra played "Hit the Deck" in honor of Edison Week, although the reason is not evident. The act came to an end with the girls and Cheer Leaders doing a lively dance to the jingle of tambourines in the semi-darkness.

Kansas City Midland

Week Ending February 17

"Steppin' High" was the title of the stage production at Loew's Midland theatre this week, featuring again Jack Sidney, styled as the "joy boy of K. C." The Midland Concert Orchestra, under Conductor Carbonara, rendered a medley selection as the overture.

The Midlanders, composed of members of the regular theatre orchestra, again were seen and heard as the stage orchestral attraction. Hinds and Leonard offered a dance novelty, while the Kitkutas Japs were seen in a tumbling act, which was featured on the bill. Louise and Andrew Carr offered a variety of dance numbers. Arthur Hays at the organ was featured in an illustrated organ solo.

Milwaukee Wisconsin

Week Ending February 17

"Valentine Vanities" is this week's offering by the Playboys and opens with Billy Meyers singing "When Love Comes Stealing Into My Heart" before a beautiful lace drop. As the drop is parted it discloses the orchestra in white clown suits with red hats and a back drop with a large lighted heart surrounded by smaller red hearts.

The Eight English Rockets make their appearance one at a time from a door on either side of the upper stage. As they come on in green costumes, Meyers sings snatches from several sentimental ballads including "Just a Little Love a Little Kiss," and the number ends with Billy singing, "When Love Comes Stealing Into My Heart," and the dancers stepping their stuff, augmented by Ruth Pryor who does a pretty bit of toe dancing.

The leader then makes his appearance and tosses paper hearts out to the audience and engages in bits of pleasantries with the audience. He then directs the band as it plays, "Dear, On a Night Like This," with Billy Meyers singing the chorus.

Hughie Clark, a large personage with a pleasing personality sings "Everybody Loves My Girl," "Four Walls," and for an encore "Everywhere You Go." He has a good voice and makes a hit with the audience.

Now the Eight English Rockets in blue soldier suits with plumes in their military hats do a clever dance number which meets with the approval of all.

Their dance is followed by the Kellar Sisters & Brother Lynch, celebrated Brunswick recording artists, who engage in a bit of harmony singing, "You Don't Like It—Not Much," "Just A Memory," and they then sing "Black Bottom" and one of the sisters gives an exhibition of the step. The three voices blend nicely and they interject numerous frills and chords into their songs which make them just a little different than one is accustomed to hearing them sung. They sing for an encore, "Henry's Made a Lady Out of Lizzie."

The next number, an overture, shows that the Playboys are not above classical music, and the selection is well done. It is the first time in quite awhile that the band has presented a classical number, but the audience appreciated it, judging from the applause it received.

Two Black Pots tap dance their way to the audiences applause and to "My Blue Heaven" and "At Sundown," by the Playboys. The two boys are clever, light on their feet, and know how to dust the boards.

The grand finale is similar to the opening number with Meyers singing "Dream Kisses," while the Eight English Rockets, this time in red costumes, make their appearance in a similar manner as at the opening of the presentation, and stand aside to allow Ruth Pryor to twinkle her toes. Then they all dance while the band and Art Richter at the organ carry on the songs to the end. The presentation is well staged and well executed and on a par with those which have gone before.

The photoplay is Richard Dix in "Sporting Goods."

Philadelphia Carman

Week Ending February 18

The Nightingales of Melody, the charming Giersdorf Sisters, headed the bill and delighted the audience with their popular song hits which they put over with individuality and appeal. The attractive personality of the sisters never fails to make a hit with Philadelphia audiences.

Billy Dunn and Violet West offered a series of brilliant dance numbers, including ballroom and classical dancing and several novel dances of their own. George Lyons, the comedian with a harp, amused the audience with his delightful nonsense and his harp music.

There was an atmospheric prologue, "On the Banks of the Amazon," in keeping with the feature picture, "The Gateway to the Moon."

The Carman Grand Orchestra under the direction of Charles C. Verna, played selections from Victor Herbert's "Fortune Teller."

Chicago Sheridan

Week Ending February 19

This week is the first anniversary of The Sheridan and the show is called, "The Sheridan Birthday Party," but better shows have been seen at the Sheridan when no special week was being celebrated.

The show is opened by two girls of the chorus who give a curtain song about the Sheridan's first anniversary. Then the rest of the chorus come out in pretty costumes to do a very good routine before a huge birthday cake with one candle. This is followed with a good band number, "I'm Walking on Air."

Prince Tokio, Japanese hand balancer, follows with some good acrobatic and balancing stunts, and then gets a good applause by keeping time to the music by juggling a barrel with his feet while lying on his back. The act is splendid for this type of entertainment. The Prince gets a good hand.

The Six Abbott Dancers follow with a good rope jumping routine, which has been given before in this house. Then follows the best bit of the show. Verne Buck and one of the Abbott Dancers, dressed as a Dutch boy and girl, sing a very humorous little song, and then do a charming Dutch dance. The number gets plenty of laughs from the audience. Buck has no small bit of comedy mixed with his musical ability.

Hazel Crosby follows by singing a medley of songs including "Me and My Shadow," "Under the Moon," and "Rose Marie." She gets a fair hand and takes one encore.

A band number follows in which is interpolated "Rhapsody in Blue." Parts of this number is excellent. Buck plays a saxophone in part of the number, and gets a fine hand.

Then follow a boy and girl, their names not announced, who do a clever song and dance number. Their burlesque Spanish dance in which the girl impersonates Pola Negri and the boy Leon Errol is very, very good. It keeps the house in laughter, and brings the two back for an encore for which they do a burlesque prize fight as two classical dancers would do it. Very funny.

Frank Wilson next sings, "Sally in Our Alley," and as always, the house won't be satisfied until Frank repeats.

Sonnie and Eddie, two colored tap dancers, follow with some unusually good tap dancing, their best bit being a tap black bottom. The applause is all that anyone would want.

The finale begins with the band playing, "Everywhere You Go," with Buck singing it. The Abbott Dancers come to do a routine as a large illuminated heart appears back stage. A very good finale.

Kansas City Mainstreet

Week Ending February 17

Due to the length of the feature picture, "The Patent Leather Kid," the stage program at the Mainstreet this week was cut to about one-third its usual length.

The program was comprised of Walter Davison and His Louisville Loons, who have been playing several months at the Mainstreet, and Harlan Christie in a radio station novelty, titled, "Station F-U-N."

The Louisville Loons played a medley of popular selections as an overture, then proceeded to offer a varied selection of numbers as their bit in the regular stage program. Christie's act depicts the broadcasting room of any radio station, including vocal numbers, humor and novelties.

Salt Lake City Capitol

Week Ending February 11

The stage offering at the Capitol theatre this week consisted of the Fanchon and Marco "Idea" in the form of a tabloid, billed as "Will King and His Revusical Comedy." King has been famed for years throughout the country as one of the nation's leading musical comedy comedians, and in his revusical comedy he lives up to his past performances. He was assisted by a galaxy of beautiful girls who offer a series of clever songs and dances.

Sparkling comedy, a group of specialties very well presented and the snappiest kind of "black-outs," little short sketches which were the life of the revue, make up the remainder of this unique set.

Alberti and his band featured a group of popular numbers on the stage, as well as playing for the tuneful two-act musical comedy show. Alexander Schreiner presented a solo number at the organ and also led in musical numbers, the words of which were thrown upon the screen and the audience invited to sing.

Chicago Diversey

Week Ending February 15

"My Valentine" was the name of this week's show of Joe Kayser and band. The show was very well arranged for this occasion and was pleasing to look at. The performance opened up with the orchestra dressed in suits such as in the days of George Washington. The six ballet girls looking through valentines made a pretty picture. Zastro and White sang, "I Told Them All About You" with the six girls doing a dance. The girls keep in time and were given a nice applause.

Joe Kayser appeared on the stage as George Washington and announced that they would play, "My Beautiful Ciloete." They gave a beautiful rendition of the piece while the piano player sang the chorus.

Monte and Carlo were next with acrobatic stunts. Their bringing in a little comedy kept your attention all the time. The orchestra played "Diana" while they went through more stunts. They were called back for an encore.

Elenor Miller, an acrobatic dancer, followed with some high kicking and ballet dancing. She was not received as she should have been.

The drum player and banjo player were announced

As a rule I start off with a salutation or something; this week I want to be different and hand you all a laugh. . . . Here it is. . . . A certain organist out of town, receiving sets of slides from a certain publisher, always free, had the nerve to ask that publisher for return stamps. . . . Can you beat that for gall, let alone gratitude. . . . While speaking of slides I want all of you to read Bernard Cowham's ad in this section this week regarding the return of organ slides. . . . Then also read the letter that William J. Cowdrey sent in about the situation. . . . Say, fellers! while we are still on the subject of music, don't forget that this is "Remick Week" and give Billy Cripps a break. . . . He's been with them 10 years and wants to celebrate with the biggest year he ever had. . . . Listen, Cliff Hess was ill. . . . Did you all drop him a line? . . . No! Shame on you. Who's going to write your organ novelties if he gets real sick? . . . More sad news, boys, one of the best musicians in the country committed suicide last week—Ferdinand Steindel, you all know of him. . . . I hear that Paul Specht is now personally directing his orchestra at the Jardin Royal, a new Chinese restaurant in New York. . . . Lou Kosloff, formerly of Chicago, and recently at the Paramount, is back in town conducting at the Chicago theatre. . . . Jules Buffano, formerly there, is going to the West Coast and will meet Al Short at the opening of Publix new house in Seattle about April 5. . . . "The Mikado of Jazz," the bandshow that Paul Ash staged last week will go on the road with Eddie Perry as its leader. . . . The Darling Twins are being featured together with Arch Cannon and Willard Andelin. . . . "Horsefeathers," the new comedy song published by Forster, was stopped by the Syndicate controlling the Barney Google comic strip. . . . Ginger Rogers is now making her second appearance in Chicago deluxe picture houses. . . . Evelyn Vee has replaced Patricia Manners as Yum-Yum in the Mikado unit. . . . Some of the old favorites of presentation are coming back to Chicago after other type of entertainment—they are as follows: Johnny Perkins, Milton Watson, James Barton and others who first won favor in picture houses. . . . Word comes from New York through our friend, Harry Holquist, that "Rain or Shine" is hitting on all six as the best musical show on Broadway. . . . While talking of shows do you know that "Good News" is here now with Abe Lyman and Peggy Bernier. . . . Jimmy Renner, formerly a theatrical agent, is back in the booking field after being out of it for 12 years. Renner is now doing business in Jerome, Arizona. . . . Oh, boy! We almost forgot to tell you, Carme Romano, the Chicago theatrical real estate man, is giving his clients free service in filling and filing their income tax reports—have you filed yours yet? Better not forget—you'll be playing the "Prisoner's Song" . . . Thanks for your letter, Cornelius Maffie. Eddie Dawson also joins me in sending you best wishes for a big success in Houston. . . . Several letters were received this week commenting on the complete service rendered through Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World. . . . Thanks, Ray Turner, I am glad you think that much of presentation. . . . Word comes from Douglas Hodges of our West Coast office to the effect that Grauman prologues and Fanchon and Marco presentations are the big thing there in picture houses. . . . Now that Publix and West Coast have affiliated their booking activities it will be possible for acts to work more than 60 weeks from coast to coast. . . . Mort Harris and Frank Cambria are staging bandshows at the Capitol theatre, New York. Paulina Gaskin was featured in one last week. . . . Peter the Great, the human monkey, is now making a tour of the Keith-Albee theatres in a playlet. . . . Roxy has discovered a mountaineer singer in the name of Jilson Setters. The gent is sixty years old and comes from Kentucky. . . . Don Cordon is now soloing as guest organist at the new Orpheum theatre in Madison, Wis. . . . I had a phone call from Joliet yesterday—no not from the penitentiary—but from Leo Terry, who just wanted to know what song Sid Berman gave top position to this week. . . . I must say that "Sid Says About Songs" is really extending a fine service. . . . Larry Spiers' "Up and Down the Alley" is well read and is finding as much favor too.

to sing a few songs. The boys are very good and were received with a big applause. For an encore they sang, "It Takes a Good Man to Do That." They ought to be used more often.

Master Gilbert announced as the last word by Kayser sang for his first number, "Then What'll You Do." The boy looks to be about six years old and has a wonderful voice. He stopped the show here. He followed with "My Ohio Home" getting a bigger hand than before. For an encore he did a tap dance. The Diversey picked a winner when they hired him. Applause was plentiful and Gilbert led the orchestra through a song to show his appreciation.

The orchestra played a collection of pieces containing, "Smiles," starting off with Al Jolson's latest piece called "Smile" and ending up with "There Are Smiles That Make Us Happy." This orchestra under Kayser's direction play all their selections in a pleasing manner.

Zastro and White and two of the girls gave a novelty flirtation act consisting of dancing and singing.

Kayser announced that he would fulfill the request of the letters he received and let the banjo player sing "Charmaine." There is no put-on when this fellow sings and for that reason he is well liked.

Lillian Thomas was next with a ballet dance in which she brought in a few comic acts.

She was followed by Billy Snyder who sang for his first number, "Back In Your Own Back Yard." Kayser and Snyder locked horns with some jokes but Snyder always getting the best. For his next number Snyder sang, "We Got to Stay Home Tonight." He is full of pep and goes over well.

The concluding number consisting of the six girls and Zastro and White doing a fast dancing number ended the show of "My Valentine."

St. Louis State

Week Ending February 17

Al Jolson in person was the big noise on this week's program. He sang his newest songs and the old favorites, including, of course, "Mammy."

Teddy Joyce's stage show, "Valentines" was right up to standard. Banjo and his nine Banjomaniacs was featured, while the maneuvers of the Criss Cross Girls won much applause. There were a couple of good Swiss yodelers in the cast. They were Fritz Zimmerman and Marcelle Granville. Chester Merton, tenor, was also pleasing.

Kirk Frederick led the pit orchestra in an overture of the Blue Danube and the Glowworm. A glowworm ballet in the stage helped tone the music.

Chicago Norshore

Week Ending February 18

This week's bandshow was called "Hey! Hey! Hades," which featured Al Kvale and his Jazz Collegians, Lew Brice and Ginger Rogers, and was a distinct novelty in the way of bandshows.

The show opened in a prologue in the form of a San Francisco Chinatown street scene in which the author of some popular number is shot.

Chauncey Haines, at the organ, played Chinese music.

The street scene rose and an enormous Devil rose from the floor and pulled up out of sight, the Devil's hand lowered with Al Kvale sitting on it. He then announced an Inferno of Jazz which the orchestra in a large cave setting and dressed as Devils, play while the ballet, in tiger skins enter on all fours and offer a good routine. "I've Been Longing For a Girl Like You," which the boys in the orchestra play and sing to the drummer who has a lady's hat on.

Bemis and Brown, girl and boy college steppers, offer a good eccentric tap dance and a soft shoe dance to a very good hand. Lew Brice, the featured attraction, offered comedy songs and jokes but didn't seem to register with this audience.

The orchestra next offer a very fine arrangement of "Among My Souvenirs," which Andy Goes, the banjoist, sings; Al Kvale solos on a cornet. This number received general applause.

The ballet next offer a bell dance to the tune of "How Dry I Am." In this number the girls keep in tune by shaking bells in cocktail shakers. Al played a solo of "How Dry I Am" on bells which were fastened on the girls' backs. This was well received for the novel idea.

Kay Spangler next enters and sings, "He's the Last Word" as Jack Spangler, in a comic suit, enters and then does a good ice dance.

Kay next sang "Ladder of Love" in a weak but sweet voice, then she did a good high kicking dance. Jack then sang, "Nobody But Me," Kay then entered and they both finished with a good musical comedy dance.

Ginger Rogers, the little lady who has proved a favorite in so many houses she has played in, again met success with her singing of "I Told the World About You" to Al, which won her the instant approval of the audience. She and Al then sang "You'll Be Sorry," and earned three encores. The closing number, "Tiger Rag," was played by Al on his clarinet, while four girls in butterfly costumes and six as birds, perched on wings, as Ginger Rogers led the orchestra in the finale.

Chicago Metropolitan

Week Ending February 19

This South Side house, catering to the colored class is making no attempt to compete with the new deluxe colored house right opposite it in the way of stage entertainment. Carol Dickerson makes his debut here this week as the new master of ceremonies and band leader in place of James Bell. The stage portion ran as follows:

Opening: With band number called "Tell Me Little Daisy" with Billy Franklyn, one of the band boys and a permanent fixture at this house, singing the chorus.

After this Dickerson introduced Grimes and Henderson, two men who offered comedy singing, talking and dancing.

The next specialty which also closed the stage part of this show, was offered by Louis Armstrong and Zutty Singleton, two more men from the band, who offered a comedy routine with Singleton impersonating the "wife" provoking huge laughter from the audience through their horse-play down the aisle as Armstrong went into his vocal of "I Ain't Never Gonna' Play Second Fiddle." These boys were almost as good as a professional team and were well-paid for their efforts by applause.

Observation: Carol Dickerson, as the new master of ceremonies here, is just the type that should fit into the new house to carry on the bandshow idea to that particular class of people. There is no doubt that at the present time, he is the sole attraction at this theatre that is responsible for keeping a certain portion of his audience from going across the street.

Pittsburgh, Grand

Week Ending February 11

The only act at the Grand this week is "The Four Americans" a quartette of Indians, who open with an Indian song, in costume, supplemented with a war dance, then one man does solo a vocal number, very good. The Four come out again in college clothes and sing two popular songs going over fine as the boys have a nice quartette, all voices being good. Feature was "Patent Leather Kid."

Indianapolis Indiana

Week Ending February 11

The stage attraction has been arranged by Jack Partington and, in keeping with the screen feature during the week, has a Russian background. There is an excellent dancing chorus headed by Louis and Freida Berkoff. Dances and songs are done well by the three Ormonde sisters. Also there is an appealing vocal quartet composed of four Russian young men. Character comedy is provided by Mathew Vodney.

Chicago Capitol

Week Ending February 18

Feeling the loss of Albert Short the Capitol theatre presents this week, "Gala Holiday Revue." Like a band of soldiers who have lost their leader so is the Capitol theatre, struggling on and wishing for the best. The orchestra in the pit under the supervision of Caesar Linden furnish the music for the entire presentation.

The orchestra played a beautiful rendition of the overture Orpheum and was given quite a hand. It's good to hear an overture for a change after hearing so much jazz.

The stage show opened with the 16 Capitol Girls dressed in soldier uniforms doing a pleasing military dance routine. In the background there was a picture of the White House and a man dressed as Abraham Lincoln. This made a beautiful picture to look at and was given a bursting applause.

The show is arranged different than others. Next is a newsreel to let the stage get ready for the next act.

The 16 girls come out again this time doing a 1928 dance, the black bottom.

Schwartz and Clifford, two comedians, followed with a variety of jokes. The people like it and let you know. Schwartz next sang, "Everybody Loves My Girl," getting a fair applause. Clifford returned upon the stage and both exchange more jokes. They concluded their well received act by singing, "I'm Sitting on Top of the World."

DeWinter and Henry followed with a ballet dance which did not create much interest. The girl should receive the honor for what applause they did receive.

Hines and Smith, two boys sang, "I've Got Something to Write the Folks About Now." The boys accompany themselves on a piano and banjo. They harmonize well together and were given a hand no one could kick about. The next number was, "Everything is Spanish Now." For their concluding number they sang, "Who."

The Finale was a very beautiful Indian scene with the 16 girls sitting around the wigwam. In the center stood an Indian chief who sang a love song. The girls went through a dance. These girls have something about their dance that is very attracting. DeWinter and Henry gave a ballet dance which ended the performance.

Observation: The Capitol is lacking another big thing and that's organ solo. Anita de-Mars who plays the organ is very capable of playing solos, and it seems that the Capitol is making a mistake by not letting her play solos. It was noticed at this performance that the people around this reporter were humming with the organ all through the show.

Week Ending February 17

"Russian Revels" was the title of Ed Lowry's stage show of the week. It was distinctive entertainment. Lowry had a new comedy song, "The Vulgar Boatman," that went over big. He also sang "Hello, Bluebird."

The other performers included Ormonde Sisters, harmony singers; Louis and Freda Berkoff, Russian dancers, and the twelve Berkoff Girls; The Don Vocal Four, singers; Stella Stepanoff, soprano, and M. Vodnoy, who impersonated Balieff of the "Chauve-Souris."

BERNARD COWHAM
ORIENTAL THEATRE, MILWAUKEE

Roger Wolfe Kahn, whom everyone thought had cast aside his aspirations as an orchestra leader, has once more returned to the fold. Young Kahn has taken hold of what was once Cass Hagen's Orchestra and after some severe drilling has launched on a vaudeville tour. He opened last week at Keith's Audubon theatre in New York and is booked solid for many more months to come. Knowing Kahn's weakness for aeroplanes, it is a pretty fair guess that he will jump from city to city by this means of travel.

A young and rapidly becoming favorite in the music world is Bernie Miller of the law firm of Miller and Miller. Knowing all the technicalities and angles pertaining to the music business and being more like a pal than a cold-blooded lawyer and also having proved his ability time and time again, he is gaining a clientele among the song writers, orchestra leaders and music publishers which is really astounding, in view of the short time that he has cast his efforts along these lines. Among his many clients will be found the names of Paul Whiteman, DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, Jack Robbins, Inc., Nathaniel Shilkret, et cetera, along the line.

Of unusual interest is B. A. Rolfe, genial maestro of the Palais D'Or Restaurant, here in New York. Aside from his well versed accomplishments as a musician, he is, without a doubt, the idealistic perfection in every respect of the word "gentleman." It is indeed a pleasure for the boys in the music business concerned in whatever dealings they have with B. A. Rolfe.

Lester Santley, known to thousands of organists throughout the country, has written another song, entitled: "Sunrise," which is very promising of becoming a big song. With the big Fox moving picture of the same title being released throughout the country in due time, it would be a pretty good idea for organists to connect the picture with the wonderful set of slides that Santley has, which was written expressly for this purpose.

Waring's Pennsylvanians clicked at the Palace theatre here in New York so tremendously, that after having been booked there for one week, have been held over four weeks to date with no signs of a let up. One of the biggest factors in their marked success is the vocalizing of Tom Waring, who also is at the piano.

Campbell and Connelly, those youthful publishers from London, England, have just returned from a flying trip to Chicago, where they were very enthusiastically received by Paul Ash, Guy Lombardi and various other big leaders and music publishers. They were pleased to announce that they had made negotiations with Austin, Bloom & Kohler for the publication, in England, of "The Voice of the Southland." This should prove an asset to A. B. & K. for there is no doubt that once Campbell and Connelly get behind their song in the old country it will be very big over there.

Feeling the impulse to invade the American stage as a jazz leader, Joseph Cherniavsky has taken hold of the band at the Colony theatre in New York. He is rapidly becoming a very big favorite and is building up a very big following. It is very interesting to not only the average layman, but the boys in the business to see Cherniavsky at work, for he is decidedly different.

Mr. D. Davino, having just returned from Europe where he was sojourning for pleasure, is back once more in harness devoting his time to the Jack Robbins, Inc., catalogue of standard music. By way of mention, Davino is the mainstay of the entire Robbins output, both musically and editorially.

A certain Scotchman attempting a non-stop flight across Europe realizing an opportunity to get something for nothing, stopped at the Black Sea to fill his fountain pen.

ORGAN SOLOS

Milton Charles (Chicago Chicago) selected for this week the new Irving Berlin piece, "Sunshine," with interpolations, which were pleasantly received; "Diane," a popular number which he did exceptionally well, and "Beautiful," another selection which was appreciated. His program brought real response. The Chicago is not a community sing house, therefore the organ solo must rely purely upon the merit of playing to bring a hand. It does. During his solo this week Charles used a baby spot that resembled a blue. Between each number and during the announcement of the next a light between a white and an amber played on the organ. It was very effective.

Clark Fiers (Scranton West Side) presented for his solo a stunt called "Vim, Vigor and Valentine." It was in the form of a community solo cleverly arranged with the following songs, "Beautiful," "Everywhere You Go," "After I've Called You Sweetheart," "Gee, But I'm Lonesome Tonight." It was quite an effective novelty for Valentine week.

Eddie Fitch (Chicago Sheridan) calls his organ presentation "Our Anniversary Year to You." The Sheridan has evolved a new thing in organ presentations, for they are now using a master of ceremonies for the organist. Bob Allan stands on the console and leads the audience in community singing, first singing the songs himself. The organist first plays "Baby Your Mother," then Allan comes on to sing "Shady Trees." The audience sings it. This is followed with "Kiss and Make Up," "My Ohio Home," and "What'll You Do." The new idea in organ presentations seems to be popular at the Sheridan for the applause is fine.

Cornelius Maffie (Houston Metropolitan) is the new organist here and called this week's solo "Listen to This." It's a community stunt using "Just Once Again," "Kiss and Make Up," "A Shady Tree," and "My Blue Heaven." This crowd certainly sings for him, in fact he is receiving the biggest reception ever accorded to any organist here before.

Eddie Hanson (Chicago Tivoli). His solo this week was well presented and went over in a pleasing manner. The solo started out with Eddie telling the people that they could not decide for a presidential election so they should elect the most popular song. His first number was "My Ohio Home" and could not help being liked the way Hanson played it. He followed with "Kiss and Make Up" and "Baby Your Mother." The people were really singing even though they were waiting for Mae Murray to appear on the stage. He next offered "What'll You Do." He concluded with "A Shady Tree" but announced that the election was a "deadlock" and would play another number. The finale number was "Blue Heaven" which was unanimously elected as the most popular song.

Henri A. Keates (Chicago Oriental) presented his solo under the title of "Laugh and The World Laughs With You," with many comedy slides that served to secure good laughs and vocal exercise from the boys and girls. "Cobwebs," "Did You Mean It?", "I Told Them All About You" and "An Old Guitar" were some of the songs featured. The lyrics and slides were unusually clever and brought a great hand for this organist. Keates is a favorite here.

Don Pedro Espanosa (Chicago Ambassador) gave for this week's solo a novelty called "Vim, Vigor and Valentine." The numbers "Beautiful," "Everywhere You Go," "After I've Called You Sweetheart," "Gee But I'm Lonesome Tonight," were all used with gag slides for community singing. This soulful Spanish organist is getting to be quite a favorite here with his weekly offering.

Mc Neal Smith (Chicago Marquette) offered "Leap Year Proposals" as his solo in the form of community singing. These numbers were used with cleverly arranged gag slides. "What Do You Say," "Varsity Drag," "The Desert Song," "Is She My Girl Friend" and "Dream Kisses."

Doc Webb (Chicago Marshall Square) presented "Leap Year Proposals" as a community solo with the following songs in his stunt. "Among My Souvenirs," "Everywhere You Go," "Did You Mean It" and many other popular numbers in which the audience sang wholeheartedly. This solo went over very big and Webb was compelled to play an encore number.

SID SAYS about SONGS

FIVE BEST SELLERS!

"Among My Souvenirs"—(De Sylva, Brown & Henderson.)

"Diane"—(Sherman Clay.)

"My Blue Heaven"—(Leo Feist.)

"Dream Kisses"—(Ager, Yellen & Bornstein.)

"My Ohio Home"—(Leo Feist.)

BLUEBIRD (Why Don't You Call on Me)—(J. W. Jenkins Sons Co.)—A cheer up song. The writers are well known as a vaudeville act and with this plug on the Orpheum Circuit, it should give the song a good start. Lyrics by Charles Le Mair and Charles Derickson, music by Burton Brown.

MAMA'S LITTLE BABY (Say Goo Goo, Da Da, Mommy, Poppy for Me)—(M. Witmark & Son.)—You are wrong. The baby has grown up. In fact it's a story of Newlyweds. The boy across the way is eaves-dropping and the lyric tells their conversation. A suitable melody by Joe Schuster and Johnny Tucker.

COQUETTE—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—The Guy Lombardo orchestra which is the biggest thing on radio today is creating big demand for this song. It's a beautiful fox trot and how those boys play it. Lyrics by Gus Kahn, music by Carmen Lombardo and John W. Green.

MOONLIGHT ON THE DANUBE—(Villa Moret, Inc.)—This writer will be remembered as having written the "Vamp." This is the theme song of the picture, "The Blue Danube." Very pretty waltz. Words and music by Byron Gay.

YALE BLUES—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—A foreign publication featuring a new dance of the same name. Makes an excellent orchestra tune. Written by Colie Knox, composed by Vivian Ellis.

WHISPER SWEET AND WHISPER LOW—(Irving Berlin, Inc.)—Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford the famous organists have given this song a great send off in the East. It's a pretty fox trot that should bring money to this organization. Words by Alfred Bryan, music by Joe Burke.

ROSE ROOM—(Sherman Clay & Company)—Being revived for a popular hit. This Western firm looks like they have another big song. Words by Harry Williams, music by Art Hickmann.

GIVE ME ONE HOUR—(Henry Waterson)—The writer will be remembered for his "Indian Love Call" and "Only a Rose." This beautiful song from "White Eagle" will add to his fame. The Shubert's have taken over this show and are making some changes. Music by Rudolf Friml. Book and lyrics by Brian Hooker and W. H. Post.

ON THE DREAMY MOANA SHORE—(Spier & Coslow, Inc.)—A waltz of the tropics. Brings back memories of fig leaves and ukuleles. We are about due for a song of this type. Words and music by Hal Dyson.

ADD A LITTLE WIGGLE—(Ager, Yellen & Bornstein)—From "Rain or Shine." This show has opened in New York and clicked for a very big hit. This song is one of the reasons for the show being so well liked. The book by James Gleason. The lyrics by Jack Yellen. The music by Milton Ager and Owen Murphy.

INDIAN CRADLE SONG—(Leo Feist, Inc.)—An Indian lullaby that reminds one of "By the Waters of Minnetonka." It's a beautiful tune with an appropriate lyric. Already proving commercial. Lyric by Gus Kahn, music by Mabel Wayne.

ANYTHING TO MAKE YOU HAPPY—(Biboe, Bloedon & Lang)—This is the story of the boy who is promising the world to his sweetheart. Promises cost nothing especially in song. Well written and has a chance. By Buddy Valentine.

P. S. Caught the opening performance of "Good News." What a show!

THE THEATRE

Incorporated in this department of practical showmanship of Exhibitors Herald are the Moving Picture World departments, "Selling the Picture to the Public," which was established September 23, 1911, by Epes Winthrop Sargent, and "Better Business Builders."

Have You Tried Home Talent Prologues?

By Will Whitmore

Henry Reeve, director of the Mission theatre, Menard, Texas, in contributing his "My Best Idea" to "The Theatre's" M. B. I. club this week hits upon one of the most vital phases of motion picture theatre entertainment today. Mr. Reeve says the best idea he ever had as an exhibitor was when he began the use of home talent in short prologues for his pictures. "This is not a go-getter exploitation stunt, perhaps, but it builds better business in a better way than trick stunts," says Mr. Reeve.

Presentations have swept across the country, and today hundreds of deluxe houses are featuring the presentation policy. This policy is prohibitive for the small town theatre, but Mr. Reeve's policy of prologues made up of home talent has solved the problem.

The reason for the extreme popularity of presentations today is the personal nature of them. The band leader or master of ceremonies builds up a following, and in many cases, so do the members of the band as well. The audience and performers on the stage are thrown into closer and more intimate contact.

Reeve's plan of using home talent is even more personal. There is probably nothing more interesting than seeing your own friends upon the stage of a theatre, and in a small town everybody knows each other.

There is nothing new in Reeve's plan. Probably every exhibitor has used home talent entertainment in his theatre at some time or another, but the unusual point in Reeve's plan is that he employs this policy regularly.

Small town theatres, especially those nearby to large cities, are suffering from loss of trade to the city theatres offering presentations. I know of a number of small town theatres that have lost a large bulk of their trade to the city theatres offering presentations, in many cases the theatres being at least 50 miles distant from the city theatres.

And I also know of several theatres that have met this competition by the use of home town talent. Of course the entertainment is not as good as seen in deluxe houses, but the added interest of the home talent draws the business.

One of the chief problems of the small theatre is affording its patrons good music, yet there is in every town some musical organization that could be used from time to time at the theatre. The Juneau theatre, a neighborhood house in Milwaukee, has a presentation policy using nothing but local talent, the cost averaging around $30 a week, and the receipts of the theatre have been doubled thereby. The complete story of the Juneau policy was contained in the presentation department of this book last week.

"The Theatre" would be interested in hearing from other exhibitors who are using similar means of building business. We believe there is much that can be done along these lines that will prove effective at the box office and yet stay within the bounds of expenditure that the small theatre can afford.

Opposite is Mr. Reeve's "My Best Idea." We believe it is worthy of a great deal of attention from the small town theatreman.

"My Best Idea" No. 7

By Henry Reeve

I HAVE rather a guilty feeling in sending in a "My Best Idea," as the best one I think I ever had has not been utilized so far this year since we went into our new theatre. We are resuming shortly and the "idea" itself still remains the best for me.

It is nothing more or less than the local talent stage presentations that received considerable favorable comment from you the past two years. We wrote and produced short atmospheric prologues on one or two pictures a month, using mostly high school students, the acts never running over 15 minutes, based always on some outstanding bit in the picture. Sometimes the prologues ran in numbers, a bit of action or dialogue as the case might be, chorus of six girls usually, with two or four boys.

These acts can be made just as unpretentious or as elaborate as your needs or your purse strings warrant. If you have available talent of any promise at all they soon get to working smoothly and the rough edges are quickly ironed out.

Without a doubt they proved the best box-office attraction we have ever utilized. We never raised prices, and the acts made us the extra money purely on their own drawing power. Another result is that we are now in a sort of advisory capacity with the high school dramatic club here, no plays are used at the school auditorium, all that sort of thing being done in the theatre with, I think, better results all round, financially and histrionically.

This is not a go-getter exploitation stunt, perhaps, but it builds better business in a better way than trick stunts in my opinion.

Forty feet of attention is this scenery truck used by the Mary Anderson theatre, Louisville, Ky., to advertise Paramount's "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," starring Ruth Taylor. Almost every theatre has some sort of truck and what better way could be used to advertise every attraction?

"Shield of Honor"

Policeman Contest

A policemen's popularity contest in Grand Rapids, Michigan, brought the patrons flocking in to see Universal's police picture, "The Shield of Honor" at the Isis theatre. The manager of the theatre arranged with a jewelry shop to present a watch to the policeman or traffic officer who won the greatest number of votes. The playdates of the picture were printed on the reverse side of the voting coupon. The Grand Rapids Herald published the results of the contest from day to day. Both the Isis theatre and the jeweler were enthusiastic at the increased business the contest brought in.

"Give-Away Nights"

"Give-away" nights again have sprung into popularity among Kansas City suburban theatres in an effort to combat the radio and bridge party opposition. Many Kansas City suburban houses are offering groceries as prizes. At the Prospect theatre, operated by Jay Means, live poultry was given away the other night with the result that the attendance showed a marked increase over previous nights.

This lobby display made the whole of Norfolk, Va., talk when displayed in the Granby theatre for First National's picture, "Her Wild Oat," starring Colleen Moore. The four figures were cut from posters and the counter was made from wallboard. The entire display cost just a few dollars.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

After a rest of two weeks because of the Charlie Chaplin engagement, the stage band policy was brought back with Colleen Moore in "Her Wild Oat" and proved to be as popular as ever. This show ran an even two hours, with Colleen Moore's picture running one hour and four minutes. The only other film subject on the program was the Mark Strand Topical Review, using 13 minutes.

Timely interest was introduced, as per usual custom here, in the nature of an overture which was programmed as "A Thought In Music for Abraham Lincoln." This overture, played by the Famed Mark Strand Orchestra, following a film trailer which introduced it, was Hosmer's "Southern Rhapsody." On the concluding measures a novelty film commemorating Lincoln, was flashed on the screen. The overture took eight minutes and was lighted as follows: dome two lemon floods on orchestra; bridge number one lemon flood on side only; bridge number two on draw curtain and side, amber top, lemon bottom, amber ceiling spots and blue borders.

Following the Topical Review came the big presentation, "Down on the Farm." The twenty piece stage band was arranged in a full stage setting representing the interior of a huge barn, with a barn backdrop showing haystacks, straw lofts, corn husks, wagon wheels and other such props as are usually found down on the farm. The band boys, with Jerry Sears conducting, were outfitted in yellow satin overalls with white shirts and wearing hayseed hats.

The number opened with Down on the Farm Foxtrots, played by the band, after which a farm boy came on from the side displaying a card "Barnyard Chicks" for the next number. This was done by six girls of the pony ballet who were dressed in very unique costumes representing white chicks. The farm boy brought out his card again, this time for La Scala, wizard of the banjo, who stepped forward from his place in the band and played "Lollipops" and followed with a "hot" number for a fine finish.

The next card announced "Burlesque Classique," a travesty dance done by Eafim Geersh and Alexis Rothov, one being dressed in blue overalls and the other in a ballet skirt. Pauline Miller came next, singing Rappee's composition, "When Love Comes Stealing" and after her the band played a series of southern numbers including "Way Down Upon the Swanee River," with an interpolation by La Scala and then came "Carry Me Back to Old Virginy," with a chorus sung by Pauline Miller, and then "Old Black Joe" with a trombone chorus by George Stell. As a finish to these southern numbers the six girls did a fast stepping cakewalk.

The farm boy again brought out his card, this time announcing Bob Stickney as a green spot hit upon a straw man hanging on the back wall of the barn. The straw man came to life, turning out to be Stickney who had been standing on his stilts against the backdrop ever since the act opened. He came to the apron of the stage and did two dances. He was followed by the 6 farmerettes who danced a toe number with the aid of dairy pails, and then came Gus Mulcahy, harmonica blue blower. His big number was "St. Louis Blues." There was a finale by the ensemble with Stickney walking over the heads of the whole row for a happy finish. This presentation required 35 minutes.

Ad Writer Should Be, Above all Else, A Good Reporter

Being an ad writer is first of all being a good reporter; writing an ad is telling news. Consider yourself a reporter on a daily paper. If you were writing a news story and left out important facts, your city editor would tell you to go out and get the rest of the facts. If the advertisement of your attraction does not contain all the facts, your ad is deficient, and you are not a good reporter.

Your ad-story may be a feature story, a straight-away news story or an editorial. Whatever it is, it should tell facts and news. Cub reporters are first taught to get the five "ws" in their stories, these being "who, what, where, when and why." That's a good plan to follow in writing an ad. You've at least told the news when you get these five facts in your ad. The further success of an ad depends upon how well these five facts are told and displayed.

Take a look at the ads on the opposite page. The one from the Strand theatre, Brockton, Massachusetts, is an example of good reporting. The five elements of a news story are given simply but well. The ad is simple and that's one reason it is attractive.

The second ad at the top comes under institutional advertising, and was used by the "Ottawa (Kansas) Herald" as a cooperation for the town's three theatres. The inspiration for this ad was obtained from the series of articles on "The Motion Picture Theatre as a Community Asset," which ran in "Better Theatres." It would be a good idea for theatres in every town to arrange for similar ads in local papers. The layout of this one is particularly pleasing for this type of ad.

The ad of J. Real Neth's Grand theatre, Columbus, Ohio, is noteworthy for the two

The Movies as a Community Asset

We know a professional man who says he finds perfect rest and mental relaxation at the movie. When he is tired he goes to the picture show.

We know a family who plan to go to the movie together once a week. "Movie night" is an extremely enjoyable event to them.

We know many country people who find in the movie their only source of year-round recreation.

We know hundreds who have immeasurably broadened their vision of life by glimpses of distant lands and of important events in our own country.

We do not believe that boys are led astray by bandit pictures or that the movies in general are exerting an unwholesome influence on the youth of our community. We consider the moving picture house a real community asset, a source of pleasant recreation and amusement.

Here in Ottawa we have three movie houses. Their program standards are high. They bring to our city the best talent in the world, and we are able to enjoy it for a few cents. More power to our movies!

Good Layout and Bad

Compare the two ads. The ad from the Olympia theatre, Lynn, Mass., shows what happens when an attempt is made to tell too much. The five boxes and the square half tone destroy all beauty in the ad. The aim seems to have been to fill every bit of space with type. The result is an ugly ad, almost impossible to read. The size is six and one half by eleven and one half inches. The ad of the Brockton, Brockton, Mass., is simple yet beautiful, and invites reading. The eye naturally reads from top to bottom, while in the other ad there is no reading sequence. The Brockton ad size is six by eight inches.

Concentrate Ads in Advance of Showing to Get Good Opening

(This is the sixth of a series of articles on advertising which originally appeared in "Showmanship News," the house organ of Finkelstein and Ruben.)

Number Six

WE wish to stress the fact that our advertising is directed toward getting an "opening" on every picture. This means that we concentrate on advance rather than current space in laying out our campaigns.

We proceed on the theory that a picture that doesn't get an opening is handicapped in "going over." The first few hours' business usually tells the tale. Either we have created a demand for the production, or we haven't.

The Opening Decides Run

Our theory is that people don't take our shows for granted. They must be "sold" on the idea that we have something in the way of amusement that they shouldn't miss. Beautiful theatre, snappy ushers, red carpets and gilt don't attract people in themselves. It's the show that brings 'em in.

When the advertising has given a picture an "opening" it has accomplished its greatest opportunity. Once a show has "opened" it is up to the picture to deliver. It is here that word-of-mouth advertising starts operating.

If the people like the picture they will talk it up; good business. If not; poor business. A prominent play producer asked his patrons what attracted them to one of his plays. Their answers show that 70 per cent had heard about the play from friends.

Adverse comment sometimes seems to make a show successful. The reviewers may have put over "Abie's Irish Rose." And there's the story of the veteran showman who told a newspaper man: "If you can't say anything good about me say something anyway." When we played Gilda Gray in the Twin Cities the comment seemed to be about evenly divided between for and against but she broke house records. She sure did make the towns talk. These cases are the exception rather than the rule.

Pictures Rarely Build

As your population-drawing territory increases, the need for larger current advertising becomes more pronounced. We expect to come to the point of changing our present methods of advance ads in the Twin Cities. In the larger cities like Chicago the theatres use larger current copy than we do. That is because their population-drawing territory is 10 times as great as ours and has that many more transient visitors every day of the year.

Plays have been known to open poorly and then build to success. History tells a little different story about pictures. Except in the metropolitan areas pictures rarely build. Succeeding weeks of the run show diminishing returns. This condition might be explained by the fact that pictures play to so many more people than stage plays.

"Making Hay While the Sun Shines:" That's Showmanship

How often one hears some one say they wish they could think up something new or different in the way of exploitation! Everybody runs dry at times, and comes to the conclusion that there's nothing else to pull. But nine times out of ten, the winning stunt is born on the spur of the moment. The real showman grabs his inspiration from his daily contacts, and he always makes the most of his opportunities. Here are two good examples to illustrate the point:

When the Princess theatre, San Antonio, Texas, played "Open Range," it happened that Prince William of Sweden was in the city on a lecture tour. William O'Hare, manager of the theatre, took advantage of the opportunity offered. He framed the Prince. He knew that the Chamber of Commerce was to take the Prince for a walk the morning he arrived, so he arranged with the officials to steer the Prince by the Princess. Five cowboys from a nearby dude ranch were obtained by O'Hare to put on an amateur roping contest in front of the theatre. As soon as the Prince hove in sight the ropes began whirling. The Prince stopped, looked and news cameramen began cranking.

An enormous crowd gathered around the theatre to see the Prince and the roping. The stunt was a great box office success, as most of the crowd filed into the theatre after the Prince left.

When some of the most notable golfers in the world gathered in San Antonio for the Texas Open tournament recently, the Texas theatre grabbed off some good publicity and produced a run on the box office. Arrangements were made with the whole group of notables to appear at the theatre for one performance.

Ads, stories, pictures and layouts in papers, lobby displays and trailers were used to publicize the event, and as a result the house was packed for the performance. After the introductions, made by Willie Hunter, the wee Scotch pro, were over, Bill Melhorn, Harry Cooper and Willie Hunter gave demonstrations of trick shots on the stage, using soft rubber balls, and shooting them out over the audience.

These two incidents of showmanship show what the theatremen can do just by taking advantage of his opportunities. There's something happening in your town everyday that offers a chance for a good tieup. If you are a good showman, you'll make hay while the sun shines.

Ad Writers Should Be Above All, Good Reporters

splendid ideas contained in it. Notice how forcefully the crossed out figures tell the popularity of "The Jazz Singer." "The Circus" was twice postponed because of the added run and the announcement of the opening was made in the papers before the second postponement was made. The cut of the dejected-looking Chaplin is a clever way of keeping interest in the picture.

The ad of "7th Heaven" at the lower left is a fine example of reporting combined with an attractive layout. The ad is beautiful in its simplicity, and a good job of typography has been executed. Notice how much more effective the horizontal lines are than solid black would have been. The ad has dignity and appeal, so often lacking in theatre advertising. Also notice how well it reads down, and the same can be said of the ad of the same picture at lower center.

The ad of Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus," used by Sid Grauman's Chinese theatre is of interest because of the reading matter. Although the word "warning" has been worked to death by many advertisers it still has some attention getting value if not used too much by the same advertiser. Black type and a slanting layout have been used here to good advantage without spoiling the display value of the ad.

BROCKTON THEATRE

Music Tieups for "The Student Prince"

When the National theatre, Louisville, Kentucky, played "The Student Prince," an arrangement was made with the six leading orchestras of the city to feature "The Student Prince" music. A local radio station had a "Student Prince" music hour and mention was made over the radio, that the picture was playing at the theatre.

The music from this operetta from which the picture is made is still very popular and such tieups should be easy to make. Small town theatres can arrange for some local singer to sing the songs during the showing, as an added attraction.

SERVICE TALKS

Incorporated in this department of Exhibitors Herald, which is a department containing news, information and gossip on current productions, is the Moving Picture World department, "Through the Box Office Window."

"LADY RAFFLES"

THE producers of "Lady Raffles" (Columbia) have had the good sense to produce "Lady Raffles" and nothing more. This is, in these days of trick production, rare good sense indeed. The result is a detective picture (or a crook picture, if your sympathies run that way) and that is what a picture-shopper expects to see when he buys a ticket to a theatre advertising "Lady Raffles."

Another producer (and I mean any other one among several) would have done "Lady Raffles" differently. With the incongruous reasoning, or lack of it, that is the vogue in cinemaland, another producer would have stopped the story in the second reel to show a scenic stretch observed from a train window, at another point to toss in a few well known bits of trench warfare, at still another to give a slapstick comedian his innings and still again to parade the Kiwanians in convention at Keokuk. All these interruptions in the name of variety, of volume, of "relief," and all at the expense of the story which gives the picture its title and, therefore, is the thing that people attracted by this title pay to see.

That may sound pretty much like a detour, grammatically, but what I'm trying to say is that this picture is a detective story and nothing else. That is the mark of good story-telling. I didn't notice the name of the director, but I pay him no less earnest tribute. He knows his megaphone.

Estelle Taylor is the leading player and, so far as I'm concerned, the entire principal cast. Not that the others aren't good, but that they don't stick in my mind. Miss Taylor does. She does her part of the work in much the same manner as the director does his; she sticks to the manufacture of a character and takes not a moment of the observer's time to arranging her hair, trying on lingerie or driving trick automobiles up and down meaningless thoroughfares embroidered in prickly palm trees. She just acts, and what a rarity that kind of performance has become.

Curiously, comment on "Lady Raffles" seems to run, whether or not I intend it to do so, mainly to comment on other pictures. The reason is, of course, that I'm so fed up with pseudo-entertainment that this hit of the genuine, by contrast, has loosed the floodgates of complaint. And perhaps that is my best reason for considering "Lady Raffles" a good picture.

By T. O. SERVICE

"LOVE AND LEARN"

HAD Paramount asked me—as Paramount did not—the name of the star they should select for a picture to be entitled "Love and Learn," I should have replied at once, without knowing what the picture was to be about, Esther Ralston. If I have not doped the young lady wrong from the beginning, the wide world has been loving her while she's been learning to be an actress. And now that the learning is complete, I have no doubt that the loving will go on, and on and on.

The Ralston Paramounts have been pleasantly uniform as to merit. "The American Venus" is still, to my way of thinking, the high point, but "Love and Learn" is just as high. I expect the next picture to kick past records into the limbo of forgotten things. However, "Love and Learn" is a good enough picture for anyone.

In it, Miss Ralston is again the comedienne. They tell me Paramount is attempting to find better vehicles for Miss Ralston—an attempt I applaud—but if they find anything that takes her out of comedy into the densely populated dramatic field they will have to hear up under such wordy complaint as I can grind out of this Remington. A little drama, perhaps, but never the straight weepy stuff. Laughs are too precious, and Miss Ralston is too adept in their manufacture.

The marital difficulties of her parents (celluloid) engage Miss Ralston this time, the young lady setting out to straighten them by one means or another. Lane Chandler, Hedda Hopper and Claude King are the principals chiefly involved and none of them get in the way of star or story. The result is a pleasant hour for such as me (if such there be) and I utter an unrestrained demand for more and more of the same.

"Give the little girl a big hand."

SMART CINEMA

CHICAGO is getting used to the idea of smartness in the cinema. It is very used, of course, to the counterfeit of that same, a counterfeit that is showing brass in places. The United Artists theatre is affording the big Middle-Western town its best glimpse of smart cinema (which seems the only way to describe it) and Chicago is paying well and willingly to see.

The United Artists theatre is giving the big packing and tracking center a good motion picture show in a good theatre at a good price and is selling it by good advertising. That is almost too many goods, but the whole thing is almost too good to be true, and the fact is—just to make the "goods" good—the theatre has the goods.

Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking, I shall terminate my tribute to the United Artists theatre at this point. (Knowing something of the rental prices asked for United Artists product generally, I feel that this is a good time to quit.) I feel certain, however, that if you read this page every week (Heaven forbid!) you are going to be confronted, sooner or later, with a row of pointed paragraphs telling you how the United Artists theatre is being operated. And I think you'll get some good ideas out of the paragraphs.

ANSWERS:

THE exhibitor who offered to send me the cure for chilblains (if I really meant it) is invited to do so. And to hurry, please, as the blizzard of last week has complicated matters considerably.

THE many who have offered advice and consolation in connection with the recent Whooping Cough bulletin are thanked, berewith. The youngster is doing quite bravely, but her mother and aunt have taken up the battle cry and I'm regarding my own respiratory apparatus with suspicion. If you hear nothing from this typewriter next week, send flowers.

THE exhibitor who offered Measles as his best reason for sympathising with me is thanked also—but if this thing keeps up, what is the poor, prostrated industry to do without us? (Echo:—do without us.)

L'ENVOI

NO, I don't know what it means either—except that poets finish their complaints with something under that heading—but here we are at the end of the old page once more and Gosb, ain't that somethin'? (This Night Watchman job sure wrecks a guy's continuity.)

NEW PICTURES

In "New Pictures" the EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD presents in concise form information on current and forthcoming attractions.

The facts as presented will serve exhibitors in booking and in the preparation of their advertising campaigns.

BIG CITY, THE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer melodrama, with Lon Chaney, Marceline Day, James Murray, Betty Compson, Mathew Betz, John George, Virginia Pearson, Walter Percival, Lew Short and Eddie Sturgis. Directed by Tod Browning. Released February 18. Length 6,338.

TYPE AND THEME: Doing the same thing for (or if you prefer, against) New York that similar films have done for (or a.) Chicago. It tells a tale of crooks, their plottings, hazards and loves, as they are alleged to go on in a big city. Chaney is a gang leader, Chuck Collins, and there are Sunshine, sweet though tough; Curly, youth of the gutter; and Helen, Red and a lot more, venting violent, excitement-craving natures in the labyrinthian byways of a great city.

FEEL MY PULSE: Paramount comedy-drama, with Bebe Daniels, Melbourne MacDowell, George Irving, Charles Sellon, Heinie Conklin, William Powell and Richard Arlen. Directed by Gregory La Cava. Released February 25. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: The sort of thing, in theme at least, that is made-to-order for Miss Daniels. Arlen is the other half of the love interest. Having inherited a sanitarium on a secluded island from her hypochondriac uncle, Barbara goes there. She, too, is a health crank, believing herself an invalid. The patients prove to be run-runners, among whom is Arlen. He wants her to leave, but learning that the runners may take his life for having divulged their hiding place, she stays, saves him with the aid of her surgical interest, discovers in the battle that she is quite a robust lass after all, and decides to marry Arlen, who turns out to be a novelist.

FLEETWING: Fox melodrama, with Barry Norton, Dorothy Janis, Ben Bard, Robert Kortman, Erville Alderson, James Anderson and Blanche Friderica. Directed by Lambert Hillier. Released February 12. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: In this one, a beautiful Arabian horse, futilely seeking freedom from humanity, finds two friends among its members and serves them gratefully. Jaafar, son of a sheik, saves Simoon from capture by Metaab, of a rival tribe. Metaab, however, later succeeds in taking the horse and offers it in exchange for Thirya, beautiful dancing girl. Jaafar overhears, and seizing the girl, carries her to his father's camp on the back of Simoon. Desiring the girl, a cruel under-sheik demands that the loot be divided equally between tribe and Jaafar. Jaafar's father, speaking for his son, chooses the stallion. On Simoon Jaafar escapes with Thirya to the desert, pursued by the tribe. Then the rival tribe declares war, in which the under-sheik is killed. Jaafar and Thirya—and Simoon—believe happiness at last is theirs.

LADY RAFFLES: Columbia mystery-drama, with Estelle Taylor, Roland Drew, Lilyan Tashman, Ernest Hilliard and Winifred Landis. Directed by R. William Neill. Released January 25. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Even feminine thieves may turn dicks at the proper time (which is, of course, at the end of the story). Lady Raffles, hunted by detectives, escapes into a wealthy home wherein a reception is being held. Mrs. Blake having engaged an agency operative to secure her guests from theft and who herself is wearing a priceless necklace, the fit of her son Warren, believes Lady Raffles to be the detective hired. A pair of thieves, Lillian and Dick, obtain entrance, whereupon a battle of wits ensues with Lady Raffles, who requites the interest in her of Warren. Indeed, later they fall in love, Warren asking her to marry him in the face of a dramatic exposure of Lady Raffles by Lillian and Dick. The necklace is found in her vanity case, left behind, and she is arrested. But she makes her escape, obtains from Lillian and Dick a confession of the crime, and reveals her identity as a Scotland Yard operative, after which she keeps her engagement with Warren at the altar.

LOVE ME AND THE WORLD IS MINE: Universal drama, with Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Betty Compson, Henry B. Walthall, Martha Mattox, Charles Sellon, Mathilde Brundage, George Siegmann, Robert Anderson, Albert Conti, Emily Fitzroy and Charles Puffy. Directed by E. A. Dupont. Released..... Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: A story made to fit the title of a venerable song. Hanerl, an orphan in an Austrian village, falls in love with an army officer. After her uncle dies, she goes to Vienna, where she meets the sophisticated Mitzel, who has also known the officer. One day he turns up, arousing the old flame in both girls, and Mitzel succeeds in estranging him from Hanerl. Heartbroken, Hanerl consents to marry an elderly bachelor, but on the eve of war, the officer comes to claim her.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Paramount comedy, with Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, Mary Brian, William Powell, Jack Luden, Arthur Housman, Albert Roccardi, Joseph W. Girard, George Irving, Bruce Gordon and Jack Richardson. Directed by..... Released March 17. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Much crime is stalking the city, engaging the interest of Detective Beery and Reporter Hatton. Mary Brian, cigarette girl, also has their interest, but hers is all for Jack Luden, assistant district attorney. Beery and Hatton enter gangland, get into a battle between rival gangs, and subdue the crooks with tear bombs. Which one of the two heroes will Mary choose? Ah, the girl goes into the attorney's arms, while detective and reporter weep—having stepped on a tear bomb.

SATAN AND THE WOMAN: Excellent drama, with Claire Windsor, Cornelius Keefe, Vera Lewis, Thomas Holding, James Mack, Edith Yorke and Midge Johnston. Directed by Burton King. Released January 20. Length 6,400.

TYPE AND THEME: Why the title? Judith, the humble helper of a village dressmaker, delivers a gown to the aristocratic Mrs. Daingerfield, who treats her shabbily. Leaving, Judith notices a portrait bearing marked resemblance to herself. The dressmaker tells her that she is the daughter of Mrs. Daingerfield's dead son. She decides to avenge herself on Edward, distant relative of Mrs. Daingerfield, by winning his love, then jilting him. But she falls in love with him, and though to make amends Mrs. Daingerfield leaves Judith her fortune, Edward is not long deprived of it, for Judith admits to him her love.

SO THIS IS LOVE: Columbia comedy-drama, with Shirley Mason, William Collier, Jr., Johnnie Walker, Ernie Adams, Carl Gerard, William H. Straus and Jean Laverty. Directed by Frank Capra. Released February 6. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Jolly story of a young male dressmaker, a delicatessen girl, and a pugilist. Jerry is so clever in designing clothes that wealthy women patronize the little shop of his employer in or near the slums. Jerry loves Hilda, who works in a food shop across the street, but Hilda has set her cap for Spike, nondescript pugilist. But when Hilda learns to love Jerry, he turns fighter to stop Spike's slurs, and although only half Spike's size, with Hilda's help he lays him low.

STOP THAT MAN: Universal comedy-drama, with Arthur Lake, Barbara Kent, Eddie Gribbon, Warner Richmond, Walter McGrail, George Siegmann and Joe Girard. Directed by Nat Ross. Released March 11. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: Policeman, crooks, and a fellow and a girl, racing about with their tongues in their cheeks. Tommy (and he's Irish) wants to be a policeman, so when his brother, Bill, a copper, sends him to the tailor's with his uniform, Tommy can't help donning it. He is called to the rescue of Muriel, then seeing a man trying to unlock a door, climbs through the window to let him in. The man proves to be a crook. In the course of these events, Tommy loses the badge, and the police arrest Bill. Then, to make matters worse, Tommy brings Muriel to his home. Kicked out by his brothers and deserted by the girl, Tommy hires a man to kill him. Just then, he is forgiven, and decides to live, tries to evade his prospective assassin, during which efforts he catches the crook. When the killer turns down the job, Tommy's happiness is complete.

STRONGER WILL, THE: Excellent drama, with Percy Marmont, Rita Carewe, Howard Truesdell, Merle Ferriss, William Morton Bailey and Erin La Bissioniere. Directed by Bernard McEveety. Released February 20. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: A woman need not be weak to love a strong man! . . . Clive and Estelle are to be married, then on the wedding day, he has to go to Mexico. She writes him that their engagement is off, that she is to marry Walker. Clive hurries back to New York, and Estelle learns that his abrupt departure was to save her father from ruin. Although she stubbornly insists she loves Walker, Clive practically forces her to marry him. She continues an innocuous affair with Walker, helping him seek the details of a merger being promoted by Clive. Clive lets them think he is fooled, and one evening, calling both his wife and Walker into him, says that Estelle can have a divorce and that Walker may join him in the merger. Estelle's real love for Clive now expands beyond all barriers of egotism.

STUDENT PRINCE, THE: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama, with Ramon Navarro, Norma Shearer, Jean Hersholt, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Philippe de Lacy, Edgar Norton, Bobby Mack, Edward Connelly, Otis Harlan, and John S. Peters. Directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Released January 25. Length 9,567.

TYPE AND THEME: A romance presenting the ultimate hardships entailed by royal birth. The title is known throughout the breadth of the land by virtue of the highly successful operetta in New York and Chicago a few years ago. So far as story goes, the picture principally details the love affair between Prince Karl, heir to a German throne, and Kathie, lovable bar maid in Heidelberg, where Karl goes to the university. But he has to marry Princess Ise, and the closing scenes show him unhappy with his bride, while Kathie, also unhappy, looks on.

TILLIE'S PUNCTURED ROMANCE: Paramount-Christie comedy, with W. C. Fields, Chester Conklin, Louise Fazenda, Mack Swain, Doris Hill, Grant Withers, Tom Kennedy, Babe London, Kalla Pasha, Billy Platt, Mickey Bennett, Mike Ruffetto and Baron von Döbenek. Directed by Edward Sutherland. Released February 18. Length.....

TYPE AND THEME: A new version of the comedy first made when the "movies" were in their original "infancy." Conklin runs a circus, of which Fields is ringmaster. Miss Fazenda is Tillie, a performer, and Mack Swain her "old man." She and the lion tamer fall in love, but that doesn't help her chariot racing any. Besides, somebody has been feeding the lions cream puffs. Things are in a bad way. Fortunately America declares war on Germany, and the circus goes over with the A. E. F. The doughboys are convinced that war is certainly as Sherman described it. On the other hand, Fields shows for the second time that he is a brave guy. (The first time was when he started flirting with the Strong Woman.) Well, the war goes on, as wars will, and finally the lions get into the trenches. At about that point the Armistice is signed, ending the comedy, with Fields getting the Strong Woman, Fazenda, the lion tamer, and Conklin what's left of the circus.

Your Classified Ad Will Do the Work!

Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World has helped hundreds of Theatre owners in solving many a problem. The classified advertising department has placed organists all over the country, has helped in obtaining equipment, in selling equipment, and also in solving many another problem that seemed difficult. The rates are but 10c per word. See this week's classified page. Maybe you are in need of something that is being advertised this week. The cost is small, the results are great.

PRESS SHEETS

APACHE RAIDER, THE (Pathe Western): An essay contest is suggested. Give a free pass or some kind of small prize to the person writing the best essay on "What do you prefer—a feminine or male lead?" or "What part of a Western do you enjoy the most?" If you can secure a horse and have a man dressed like a cowboy, have him drive through the main streets of the town and throw announcements of the showing. On each announcement have a number and in your lobby have a list of the numbers that will admit the holders free to the show.

BIG CITY, THE (M-G-M Melodrama): Throw teasers about town with the following: "What becomes of the pretty girls that run away to the big city?" See at the..... theatre (Date)." Posters with the following is a suggestion: "You don't have to go to the city to find out what it is. The fighting and crookedness can be seen at the..... theatre (Date)." Tie-up with a cigarette dealer, choosing one of his popular brands. Following is a letter that can be sent to the people on your mailing list: "Dear Patron: If you count yourself among the millions of Lon Chaney's screen admirers, you are in for a thrilling and entertaining evening when you see him in 'The Big City.' In this colorful, swift-moving, action-filled picture of New York night life, Chaney plays the part of a gang leader and master crook—masking the activities of his thugs behind the gaiety, lure and fast life of a night club of which he is the proprietor. As the rough, tough Chuck Collins, Chaney plays a straight part with power and realism—and without the use of elaborate make-up or disguises characteristic of many of his previous pictures. He gives a marvelous performance, and 'The Big City' marks his first appearance together with Betty Compton since their never-to-be-forgotten picture 'The Miracle Man.' 'The Big City' will play a three days engagement at the Strand theatre, beginning..... In the cast are Marceline Day and James Murray, popular featured players. If you want to see New York night life with all its thrills and glamour—see 'The Big City.' Yours very truly (Theatre Manager)."

BREED OF THE SUNSETS (FBO Western): Tie-up with your clothing man in having him display a sign in his window with, "(Name Clothier) cowboy suits have become all the rage, and kids like nothing better, than strut out in a new khaki cowboy suit with a toy gun." Get him to display these suits in the window and to make a special price on them. Arrange that with every suit he sells, a ticket of admission will be given. You can make him a special price on these tickets. Another sign in the merchant's window can be posted: "Make your son happy, dress him in one of these beautiful cowboy suits and then take him to see 'Breed of the Sunsets' at the.....theatre (Date)."

DOOMSDAY (Paramount drama): Place teasers about the town and run in the newspaper copy a few days in advance of the showing: "Are you prepared? 'Doomsday' will be soon be here." "What will you do when 'Doomsday' comes around? Watch out 'Doomsday' is coming." About a day before the showing, have posters with the following scattered about the town: "Doomsday is here. Tomorrow at (Time) at the.....theatre." Run a contest for the best essay on "What will you do when 'Doomsday' comes?" or "What does 'Doomsday' mean?". . . In cooperation with your coal dealer, run copy such as this imprinted on the back page of a herald: "You will never know a 'Doomsday' if you put your coal order in early with....." or "Heat dispels any 'Doomsday.' You can have the best coal on the market with which to heat your house if you use..... coal."

FEEL MY PULSE (Paramount comedy-drama): Tie-up with your gas stations in having sign with the following printed: "If an automobile could talk and could say, 'feel my pulse,' what would you do to keep it normal? Why you'd be sure to feed it (name of gas) and it would never have cause to complain." Have the date of the showing of "Feel My Pulse" on the same sign and the name of the theatre.

LOVE ME AND THE WORLD IS MINE (Universal comedy-drama): If you run a ballroom attached to your theatre or can tie-up with a hall-room, a Viennese hall is suggested, either in advance of the showing or during the run of the picture. Dedicate the ball to the picture "Love Me and the World Is Mine," and offer prizes to the women best representing Mary Philbin, and the gentleman best representing Norman Kerry. Throw-aways and heralds can be distributed for the announcement. . . . If you can secure a singer, place him in your lobby, dressed in evening clothes and have him sing "Love Me and the World Is Mine." Arrange with your music dealer to mark a number on all the sheets of "Love Me and the World Is Mine" he sells and to announce that ten free tickets will be given out at the store. You can announce on the screen the ten lucky numbers and the person with the piece can get his ticket at the music store. Arrange an "old timers" contest and offer a prize to the person singing the piece, "Love Me and the World Is Mine," the best. A fiddlers' contest can be held in the same manner.

MIDNIGHT ROSE (Universal drama): Arrange to have a "Rose Matinee" and offer a free rose to the first hundred people appearing at the performances. Make an effort to get in all the girls and women named Rose for the showing. You can offer free admittance to all those named Rose, or you can present them with a rose. Arrange with your florists to give every girl bearing the name Rose a ticket to your theatre upon purchasing a rose in his shop. As a hallyhoo, send out a girl with a dress made of roses and have her pass out heralds announcing the coming of the picture at your theatre. Throughout the showing of the picture at your theatre have your ushers, musicians, and other employes wear a rose.

PHANTOM FLYER, THE (Universal melodrama): Stage a model aeroplane building and flying contest offering prizes for the finest looking plane and the one that flies the farthest. Hold the contest in a park or public space near the theatre. Have an announcement placed on a pole and let the boys carry it through the town. For a hallyhoo, dress a man in an aviator's suit and have him circle the town throwing announcements of the showing at various spots.

SATAN AND THE WOMAN (Excellent drama): Arrange for a dancing contest to be held upon the stage the night of the showing. Award the prize to the person receiving the most applause. You can also give a small prize to the best singer, talker, etc. Arrange with the merchants to have a display of dresses in the windows and an announcement of the picture, with a sign saying, "Claire Windsor might have had some beautiful dresses in 'Satan and the Woman' but she would have opened her eyes if she had seen these dresses."

SHOWDOWN, THE (Paramount): Run an essay contest and offer a small prize for the best essay on "Do you think George Bancroft should be given a star lead? Why?" Try to arrange to have your local newspaper run the winning story the day before the showing of the picture. Posters with the following can be scattered about the town: "What do you do when it comes to a 'showdown'?" "What does anybody do? What did George Bancroft do? 'The Showdown' will be held at the.....theatre next (Date). Every one is admitted for the small price of..... cents." Arrange to tie-up with your dry goods dealer on the following posters: "If the girl in 'The Showdown' can wear the latest styles in an oil camp in the jungles with success, you can wear our new styles in your own civilization, with greater success. The (Name of store). For further information see 'The Showdown' at the.....theatre (Date)."

SO THIS IS LOVE (Columbia comedy-drama): A ballyhoo is to have a late model touring car drive through the street. In the car should be one or more couples making love. Across the back of the car drape a banner carrying the legend, "So This Is Love" at the.....theatre on..... A local automobile dealer might tie-up with this stunt. As a special matinee attraction to draw the women, you might arrange with a modiste to display models on the stage in connection with a talk on "What the Best Dressed Women Should Wear," or "How to Develop a Charming Personality Through Dress." Have a "lovers' night" and give a stub with every ticket purchased. Place the stubs in a box and have some one pick out a few of them. Offer a five pound box of candy for the first prize. A free ticket for some other performances can be given for second and third prizes.

STOP THAT MAN (Universal comedy-drama): Get out a letter to every policeman and offer to admit him as your guest on "police night," provided he brings his wife or a son. In your letter be sure and tell him that this is a picture for the son of a policeman to see. Invite the chief of police and his family as your guests. Reproduce the invitation in an "open letter" or advertisement. Give a policeman in your town a dozen tickets and instruct him to give them to the safest and sanest auto driver in town. Arrange with the newspaper to take pictures of the drivers. Run an essay contest on "Why I want to be a policeman," or "What I would do if I were a policeman." This contest should be open to boys only. Try to get the chief of police to sponsor the contest.

STRONGER WILL, THE (Excellent drama): Following is a letter for your mailing list: "Dear Patron: Please make a note on your engagement pad that on.....we will show 'The Stronger Will.' We will feel sure you will wish to see it. Percy Marmont is the star, the supporting cast includes Rita Carewe, lovely and talented daughter of Edwin Carewe; also Erin La Bissionere, William Morton Bailey, Howard Truesdell and Merle Ferris. The story tells of frenzied love and finance as played by Wall Street and Park Avenue set in New York. It is a very fine entertainment and quite the best picture Marmont has appeared in. Sincerely yours, The Management." You can give a free pass to the person writing the best essay on "Who has 'The Stronger Will,' Man or Woman?"

Incorporated in this department of Moving Picture World is the Exhibitors Herald department, "Available Attractions."

The key to abbreviations used in denoting the type of picture:

- C—Comedy
- D—Drama
- R—Romance
- F—Farce
- M—Melodrama

Many, Many Thanks

ROCKMART, GA.—To THE EDITOR: The merger of EXHIBITORS HERALD and MOVING PICTURE WORLD spells advancement for the HERALD and one loves to hear an old friend is progressing.

But I have long felt that "Exhibitors Herald Fills a Want None Others Do." Yours for success.—(MRS.) BERTA SMITH, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.

A Word About Comedies

COLUMBIA CITY, IND.—To THE EDITOR: I never saw comedies as poor as they are at the present time. Out of a run of the recent two months there have been but two passable, with plenty of laughs and gags to carry them along. The balance have been just two reels of film with very few laughs and most of those the old revived gags that we got some four years ago. Something wrong with them somewhere. The comedy after the second run, running for the late arrivals will clean the nine times out of 10.—A. E. HANCOCK, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

Selling Candy in Aisles

SPRINGFIELD, TENN.—To THE EDITOR: Why is it that any manager of a picture or vaudeville theatre can be short-sighted and blind enough to sell or allow to be sold packages of cheap-priced candy in his theatre and imagine it is making him any money or building up his business.

Many traveling tab and rep shows that are given time in picture houses imagine that managers in small towns, especially, are all a lot of chumps and try to put it over on the last night of their stay without ever asking for permission. They don't stop to think they are cheating the patrons, and care less, by stopping the show and taking up 15 or 20 minutes peddling this junk up and down the aisles. They are gone tomorrow and laugh up their sleeves at the local manager who has stood for it and has to be the goat.

Last winter while in Los Angeles where I have been living the past 10 years, I was in a well known combination vaudeville and picture house where they made a practice daily of stopping the show and a loud talker with a fog horn voice would stand in the pit and give them a long talk and then a dozen more of peddlers would rush through the theatre yelling their wares. The audience would become disgusted and scores of them would leave the theatre without remaining to see the show. Could you blame them? Those kind of managers must imagine the people of the present day are living back in the days of P. T. Barnum, when the more you humbugged them the more they liked it. But they forget what Abraham Lincoln said.

I had an experience of that kind lately while playing a road company on a Saturday night. Just before the last act I was in my office doing some important work when I heard a lot of loud talking in the theatre and I rushed out and found half a dozen men peddling candy packages at 10 cents. I was mad enough to commit murder and I rushed down the aisle and ordered them to stop at once and get back on the stage where they belonged. It created quite a sensation and the audience applauded the act. When people pay their way into a theatre, they expect to be entertained, not to buy candy.

And as I said before, you are cheating your patrons and cheapening your theatre. I believe any recognized showman will agree with me.—CAPT. W. D. AMENT, Princess theatre, Springfield, Tenn.

ALVARADO, TEX.—To THE EDITORS Did you ever plan to pull a high fast one on somebody and then get all upset and be left in a quandary? Well, that's what happened to me. I have been an interested follower of J. C., in all his travels since he joined the HERALD but hereafter I shall be an enthusiastic roofer. You are very fortunate indeed in having a man of J. C.'s caliber in the wide open spaces making new friends and giving a word of encouragement to the old ones.

But getting back to the high fast one: I intended to play ignorant of the HERALD if J. C. ever came my way, and see if he had as high powered a line getting subscriptions for the HERALD as the average film salesman peddling his knockouts, but he didn't give me a chance.

I was sitting in the office perusing the morning paper when suddenly a short, rather heavy set, bewhiskered, no-bemustached, gentleman blowed in, grabbed me by the hand and said, "Well, here's where two honest men meet."

I said, "Yea-a, whose box office record-breakers are you selling?" (sarcastically).

He: "Boy, look out there, don't call me a fillum peddler. I am J. C. Jenk—"

Me: "Well, I'll be a d—, you old son-of-a-gun, how did you get down here so soon?" Just forgot all about my little plan to play ignorant and get his "line."

He said Marie was a fast stepper but he expected it to take him three years to cover the Lone Star State, "if it is as big in the other direction as it is from Ft. Worth to El Paso." I told him that wasn't the half of it.

He parked Marie clear across the square, out of sight so I asked him if he was ashamed of her since Henry and Edsel made a lady out of Lizzie. He said General and Mrs. Motors had already made a sheik out of Chevy and he had noting to be ashamed of.

Here's a warning to the rest of you boys. Don't try to wisecrack J. C. He just won't be cracked. But, if you want a real honest-to-goodness heart-to-heart talk with someone that has a sympathetic understanding about your problems in the show business J. C. is "it."—CHAS. M. COOPER, Alvarado theatre, Alvarado, Tex.—P. S. I got the low-down on that Bullfoundland pup!

Incorporated in this original exhibitors report department of Exhibitors Herald, which was established October 14, 1916, is the Moving Picture World department, "Straight from the Shoulder Reports."

Columbia

RICH MEN'S SONS: Shirley Mason—62%. February 3-4. Fine entertainment. Not one complaint. I thought it fine, too. Six reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

ISLE OF FORGOTTEN WOMEN: Special cast—Only fair, just a program picture and not so good in that class.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE LONE WOLF RETURNS: Bert Lytell—Reformed crook story. Good at box office. Had 50 per cent better house second night than first. Had many comments, all pleasing, not one adverse criticism. Six reels.—Chas. Storch, Casino theatre, Republic, Wash.—Small town patronage.

F B O

HOOK AND LADDER: Special cast—70%. January 16. Good program picture with lots of action, a good picture for any small town where they like action. Six reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—45%. This is a beautifully done picture and at regular admission should please anyone who has read the book. Could not expect to be as good as the other pictures made from Gene Stratton-Porter's books, as it is decidedly the weakest one of them, and think they did well to give us an entertaining picture as they have. Seven reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

THE HARVESTER: Special cast—January 5-6-7. A dandy picture, very well produced and follows the book very closely. Of course all Gene Stratton-Porter's pictures are business getters. Seven reels.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neb.—Small town patronage.

SHANGHAIED: Special cast—30%. To both star in and direct, such a splendid picture is quite an achievement for Ralph Ince. It is truly an action picture. The story is interesting, and pleased my people fine. Patsy Ruth Miller is great in this. Seven reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

THE MAGIC GARDEN: Special cast—90%. January 8. Look at this percentage with no extra advertising or plugging and tell me the public demands sex, suggestive pictures. This is a sugar sweet story that somehow gets under your skin. I like came, young and old, saw and were most enthusiastic in their praise. Sorry we didn't play it two nights. It could even have stood a raise in admission here. Seven reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BANDIT'S SON: Bob Steele—40%. A good Western with a new star that is sure to prove popular. He brings in the dash of youth and can ride as hard as the old timers. Not as much action as the average Western. The photography is good. Try this star, you will like him. Five reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

THE FIGHTING HOMBRE: Bob Custer—50%. February 4. A fair Western picture. Gave satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

NOT FOR PUBLICATION: Special cast—40%. This picture shows Rex Lease as one of the best of the younger players. One of the best pictures we have every used as the stars and title had very little drawing power, first night business not so good. Second night extra good, due to many good comments. After this these two stars will mean some-

Editor's Note

Percentage ratings given by exhibitors in reports to this department are obtained in the following manner: Average daily gross of picture reported is divided by average daily gross of picture holding house record to determine relative box office value in terms of percentage.

EXAMPLE: $75 (average daily gross of picture reported) divided by $100 (average daily gross of picture holding house record) equals .75 (percentage rating given picture in report).

thing at my box office. It should please in any theatre. Seven reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

CLANCY'S KOSHER WEDDING: George Sidney—77%. January 14. This deserves all the advertising you can give it. Kept them laughing, where the comedy failed. Six reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

CLANCY'S KOSHER WEDDING: Special cast—35%. This is one of FBO's new ones, and I like all that I have used in their group. It pleased. Has the type of comedy Sidney does so well and the youth, good looks and action, Rex Lease always brings to the picture. Will please all classes and ages. Seven reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

CLANCY'S KOSHER WEDDING: George Sidney—February 5. Very fair little picture. Nothing big but will get by all O. K. Six reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION: Special cast—51%. November 19. Opinion divided on this story not too good, many thought there was too much impossible stuff. Six reels.—G. N. Lounsbury, I. O. O. F. theatre, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION: Special cast—Impossible. Six reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

BIGGER THAN BARNUM: Special cast—40%. December 18. Fair, certainly no special. If this is Bigger Than Barnum's take up a collection for Barnum. We must have expected too much for we failed to get any thrills from this one. The youngsters seemed to enjoy the blatant melodrama. Don't advertise any big circus scenes for they are just flashes. I agree with Philip Rand; why not a real circus picture. Six reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

DRIFTIN' SAND: Bob Steele—February 3-4. Pleasing Western to average Saturday business. Five reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

DEAD MAN'S CURVE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—February 5-6. Good picture. We find FBO product all hitting on all six. Six reels.—E. L. Wood, Coliseum theatre, Edmore, Mich.—Small town patronage.

LEGIONNAIRES IN PARIS: Cooke-Guard—February 2-3-4. Fair picture of Legion convention, etc., but failed to draw. Poorest business in months and weather was ideal. Lay off of it fellows unless you buy it as a program picture. Six reels.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neb.—Small town patronage.

CONEY ISLAND: Lois Wilson—February 2. Didn't see this myself but reports of the house staff and audience seemed to be very good. Nothing elaborate of course but a good little program picture. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

JAKE THE PLUMBER: Jess DeVorska—A fairly good comedy that is somewhat out of the ordinary, did not do so very good at the box office due to the fact that the star is unknown.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

THE MOJAVE KID: Bob Steele—A very good Western and we wish Bob success as he is very good in this one. Five reels.—E. L. Wood, Coliseum theatre, Edmore, Mich.—General patronage.

RANGER OF THE NORTH: Ranger—One of the best dog pictures of the year. Five reels.—E. L. Wood, Coliseum theatre, Edmore, Mich.—General patronage.

WIZARD OF SADDLE: Fred Humes—February 4. This boy well liked and we have found all three of his pictures good. Five reels.—E. L. Wood, Coliseum theatre, Edmore, Mich.—General patronage.

UNEASY PAYMENTS: Alberta Vaughn—Good picture. Our patrons all like Alberta Vaughn and the young folks all turn out to see her. Five reels.—H. C. Crews, Home theatre, Mounds, Okla.—Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY NANETTE: Viola Dana—Good story, consistent. Made a good regular program presentation. Five reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

SWIFT SHADOWS: Ranger—Fair picture. Pleased Saturday nighters and kids.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE OUTLAW DOG: Special cast—Just an average dog picture. No kicks and no comments.—D. A. Kooke, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—General patronage.

BREED OF THE SEA: Ralph Ince—January 18-19. Rather out of the ordinary and seemed to please very well. Sea stories always fail to draw for me but I was not disappointed in the business on this. Seven reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

DON MIKE: Fred Thompson—January 20-21. This one certainly made quite a hit with my patrons. Had a good crowd the first night and thought for awhile that I would have to dust off the SRO sign on the second night.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—All of Thomson's pictures are good, and he is a great favorite here.—H. C. Crews, Home theatre, Mounds, Okla.—Small town patronage.

SILVER COMES THROUGH: Fred Thomson—Good story. Six reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

ARIZONA NIGHTS: Fred Thomson—Ordinary Western only; nothing extra. The last ones of Thomson have been on the sorry line; not as good as they should be. Seven reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

First National

SAILORS' WIVES: Special cast—75%. The first Hughes-Astor picture we have played for sometime and must say it's a mighty fine picture. Six reels.—B. R. Parsons, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—40%. February 2. I call this a good program picture. Gave general satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE DROP KICK: Richard Barthelmess—This is a pretty fair college picture. However, the football scenes are not as good as in some. Seven reels.—J. H. Macdonald, Wiley theatre, Wiley, Colo.—Rural patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Dorothy Mackaill—65%. January 6-7. Nice comedy. Pleased all.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

MAN CRAZY: Special cast—A good picture but not up to "Smile, Brother, Smile."—B. R. Parsons, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

GUN GOSPEL: Ken Maynard—75%. January 28. A-1 entertainment. Up to the usual program standard. Seven reels.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose-Liberty theatres, Sumas-Lynden, Wash.—Small town patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore—75%. February 5-6. This is an extra good picture. Story good, splendid comedy. The star is always fine and a splendid cast. 100 per cent satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore.—Pleased 100 per cent. A good picture and the star sure does it right. Play it.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

HER WILD OAT: Colleen Moore—January 26-27-28. Poorest Moore picture we've ever shown. Business fair but many complaints on picture. Pep up, Colleen. Seven reels.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neh.—Small town patronage.

THE VALLEY OF GIANTS: Kenyon-Sills—70%. January 8-9. Very good. Pleased everyone. Wonderful scenery of timber. Play it.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE CHASER: Harry Langdon—75%. February 4-5. Absolutely the most vulgar, rotten, dirty, silly picture we have shown in the last sixteen years. If producers are going to continue making pictures of this kind, here's hoping we get Federal censorship. Our patrons were disgusted with it and they told me so. Six reels.—E. A. Bahte, Star theatre, South Range, Mich.—Small town patronage.

A TEXAS STEER: Will Rogers—35%. January 3-4. Rotten. I wonder who told Will Rogers he could act? I played this hot off the bat and was expecting a real special with plenty of comedy. I stepped on the advertisement and what a jolt I got. There is no excuse for it, it has no story, it is not a comedy, it is not a drama, and it is not a Western.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE TEXAS STEER: Special cast—Good picture and pleased all, but did not have the drawing power we expected.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

JUST ANOTHER BLONDE: Jack Mulhall—49%. November 12. This seemed to please, and Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill are a great comedy team. Seven reels.—G. N. Lounsbury, I. O. O. F. theatre, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

JUST ANOTHER BLONDE: Jack Mulhall—40%. Four young players in this who have all been starred and they put their picture of youth and pep over in great shape. Has good comedy and thrills. Think it's one of the best from their team, many good comments on it. Six reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

THE LIFE OF RILEY: Murray-Sidney—60%. January 1-2. Very good comedy. Pleased everyone. Play it.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE SEA TIGER: Milton Sills—48%. January 21. This was a good picture, but had several rather raw scenes that are in general unnecessary. Seven reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

THE GORILLA: Special cast—68%. February 2-3. Very good picture that will please about fifty per cent of the small town patrons. Many praised it highly here, while others said very poor. Don't pay too much for it. Eight reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE GORILLA: Special cast—December 22-23-24. We ran this picture at a dull time, just before Christmas but we stepped on it hard and had a fellow out in "Gorilla" costume a week in advance of showing so did a dandy business in spite of holiday season. A good picture, but you'll have to sell it to your patrons. Seven reels.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neh.—Small town patronage.

THE GORILLA: Special cast—Another First National that hits and pleased 100 per cent. Play it.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

STEPPING ALONG: Johnny Hines—45%. January 28. This was only a fair comedy. Hines does not seem to have been holding his own this last year. Seven reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

VENUS OF VENICE: Constance Talmadge—50%. This is the best thing from Constance Talmadge we have ever seen. Had many comments from my patrons to this effect. Settings were beautiful, comedy and action, just the type of picture so popular with all now. Antonio Moreno at his best in this. Eight reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

SMILE, BROTHER, SMILE: Mulhall-Mackaill—75%. January 14. A fairly good comedy drama. Pleased most of the patrons. Dorothy Mackaill is sure easy on the eyes. How about a photo for the lobby, Dorothy? Seven reels.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose-Liberty theatres, Sumas-Lynden, Wash.—Small town patronage.

THE SCARLET WEST: Special cast—94%. February 4. Went back for this one and I am not sorry. While it is very long and somewhat draggy in places, it pleased 85 per cent, which is very good for Saturday. Clara Bow certainly looks different now, but her admirers thought she was good in this picture. If you can buy it at Saturday rental prices, play it. Nine reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

THE STOLEN BRIDE: Billie Dove—46%. January 7. Can't give this much outside of the acting of Billie Dove, she sure is good and as some exhibitors claim, she is nice to look upon. Eight reels.—G. N. Lounsbury, I. O. O. F. theatre, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

AMERICAN BEAUTY: Billie Dove—45%. January 30. My patrons liked this and so did I. First National wants Corinne Griffith prices for Billie and they should get it. More of a drawing card, better looking and a better actress than Corinne by the proverbial mile. Seven reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

AN AFFAIR OF THE FOLLIES: Billie Dove—30%. This is one of F. N.'s best pictures. An ideal feature for small towns. Will please all classes. Has gorgeous settings as always Billie Dove, Lloyd Hughes and Lewis Stone hold your interest with their wonderful acting. One of the older ones, but print good and it's much better than many new ones. Seven reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

THREE'S A CROWD: Harry Langdon—40%. February 7. This is a funny picture but terribly slow. The star great. Story nothing. Pleased about 50 per cent.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE WHITE BLACK SHEEP: Richard Barthelmess—75%. January 7. Disappointed in this one. Seven reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

THE OVERLAND STAGE: Ken Maynard—50%. This is a star that seems to please every place. Am reporting on this picture specially as I consider it the best one to use as your first showing of this star, after it he will be made. It is done on a larger scale than the others and supporting cast wonderful. Lots of comedy. Seven reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

THE LOVE MART: Billie Dove—Another good one from Billie Dove, good story and good acting, and lots of action. The print or photograph was a little dim in places. Seven reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

FRENCH DRESSING: Special cast—Nice little picture. Comedy pleased very well.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE NOOSE: Richard Barthelmess—Dollars to doughnuts, it is one of the best 10 of 1928. Pleased 100 per cent here and will do the same any place in America.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE SUNSET DERBY: Special cast—Very good race track story. Six reels.—D. A. Kookey, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—General patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: Special cast—A special that is a good one for any town. It has the paper and will back up any boosting you want to do. Plenty of action, a good story and good acting. Everything to make a good picture. Eight reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE WAGON SHOW: Ken Maynard—This one from Maynard is different from his usual type of picture as it has to do with a circus, but it is a mighty fine little picture and will satisfy his fans.—J. H. Macdonald, Wiley theatre, Wiley, Colo.—Rural patronage.

HOME MADE: Special cast—Just fair. Pleased those who saw it. Would rate it about 60 per cent.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

NO PLACE TO GO: Mulhall-Mackaill—December 7. These stars are making some good program pictures. This one seemed to please our patrons and drew a nice business. Six reel.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neh.—Small town patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Charlie Murray—A really big comedy event. Watch for side-stepping episode in parade and cut it out if you are catering to ladies. Eight reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Can.—Small town patronage.

CAMILLE: Norma Talmadge—January 25-26. This picture was one of the very best of its kind. It drew out the upper class of people, but did not do the business that I expected. Nine reels.—Newell E. Ware, Comique theatre, Camden, Me.—General patronage.

WHITE PANTS WILLIE: Johnny Hines—The best comedy from Hines and although it has a couple of smutty scenes and subtitles, still it is a real comedy and so far ahead of his others. This had the folks laughing all the time.—J. H. Macdonald, Wiley theatre, Wiley, Colo.—Rural patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Colleen Moore—Kept the house in an uproar most of the time. Six reels.—D. A. Kookey, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—General patronage.

Fox

SILVER VALLEY: Tom Mix—50%. February 1. A good Tom Mix picture. Always please.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

CHAIN LIGHTNING: Buck Jones—58%. February 9. Good. Best Jones yet. The more the better. Everyone complimented the picture. Said it was fine. Six reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

CHAIN LIGHTNING: Buck Jones—As good a Western as Jones ever made. Gene Cameron furnishes some good comedy. I would consider this picture better than "Black Jack."—Walter Hohfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Special cast—98%. February 6-7-8-9. I think this the best picture made in recent years, and the large crowds who flocked to my theatre for four nights to see it thought the same, and came out telling the world what they thought. They tell you to run United Artists pictures for prestige and profit, here is one that you can run for prestige and profit as Fox is not wild on the price, and if you'll get behind it and sell the public it will clean up. The press book on this is rotten, as all the Fox press books are, but I used special ads which no doubt will appear in the HERALD and they did the business. No matter what sized town you are in, play this one. Twelve reels.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—General patronage.

WHISPERING WIRES: Anita Stewart—30%. This is an old picture but if you can get a good print, play it. A good mystery story. Something different. The main object in reporting in this is to comment on the wonderful acting of Otto Mattilsson. In the future I will look for his name in the casts. Am anxiously awaiting "The Last Moment," starring him, to be released. Six reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—General patronage.

FIG LEAVES: Special cast—27%. February 5. This picture is too old to make a fair criticism on it. Modern story partly in technicolor with pre-historic cut-back to Adam and Eve. There seems to be something lacking in it to give it the punch pictures need now for the effete fan. Seven reels.—Pioneer Pete, Pioneer theatre, Amasa, Mich.—Small town patronage.

TUMBLING RIVER: Tom Mix—54%. February 4. A good Western. Our people liked Tony as much as Tom. Our prints from Fox are fair. Five reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

THREE BAD MEN: Special cast—80%. This is truly an all star cast. There has never been more perfect acting than "Three Bad Men" do in this. This is a rare treat and every exhibitor should show this. Fox should always keep a good print on this and seems to be doing it. It is old now, but print was fine. Bought right and raised admission. Full house both days and all pleased. Nine reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

BLACK JACK: Buck Jones—January 23. Fair Western but did not draw.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—General patronage.

BLACK JACK: Buck Jones—A good Western. We consider it better than "Chain Lightning." Six reels.—B. R. Parsons, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

LOVES OF CARMEN: Del Rio-McLaglen—January 27-28. Good picture of its kind and will please the better class. Miss Del Rio is very good. Seven reels.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—General patronage.

LOVES OF CARMEN: Delores Del Rio—This picture pleased about 50-50. Many thought it very good and more said it was terrible. Personally we liked the picture. Nine reels.—B. R. Parsons, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

VERY CONFIDENTIAL: Madge Bellamy—Here's a good little comedy drama, lots of laughs and a very good auto race. Six reels.—B. R. Parsons, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

THE GAY RETREAT: Special cast—The best comedy of the year. Get it quick and step on it. Boy, oh, boy, how they did laugh.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE GAY RETREAT: Special cast—I would call it a very good program picture, it is overdone and impossible and some of the comedy is a little rough, but it gets the laughs and pleased very well. Only fair at the box office as these stars are still unknown.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

LOVE MAKES 'EM WILD: Special cast—Business very bad on this, but it pleased and that is worth something. Good acting by entire cast, especially Arthur Housman. John Harron also good. Get 'em in on this one and the picture will do the rest.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

MARRIED ALIVE: Special cast—February 7. Fair. With another poor title for small town drawing power. Six reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL HERO: Special cast—Here is a knockout. The finest, cleanest little comedy that I have played in a long time, I tied up with the high school and had them sell advance tickets, gave them 50 per cent of what they sold so they made some money and I made some money and had full houses and everyone pleased. Had more patrons tell me it was greater than any picture I have played in last six months with the exception of "Ben Hur."—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

NO MAN'S GOLD: Tom Mix—A good Western. Tom is a big drawing card here.—H. C. Crews, Home theatre, Mounds, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE GREAT K AND A TRAIN ROBBERY: Tom Mix—January 16. A good Western; however rather improbable. The scenery in Royal Gorge well worth the price of admission. Mix always our price of admission. Mix always our best drawing star. Paper good. Print in very bad condition. Five reels.—H. C. Crews, Home theatre, Mounds, Okla.—Small town patronage.

ARIZONA WILD CAT: Tom Mix—November 2-3. This star seems to be losing out. Too much impossible stuff. This picture fair Western but didn't please Mix fans. Business fair. Six reels.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neb.—Small town patronage.

THE DIVINE WOMAN: Greta Garbo—42%. February 4. This is really the first Garbo subject that we feel can be put across with a bang in the small town. Although it is no picture for youngsters, you need not be afraid of it. It is well done and we join in with T. O. Service in suggesting that Greta (wonder if her full name isn't Margaret) stick to Seastrom as a director. Photography good. Eight reels.—Pioneer Pete, Pioneer theatre, Amasa, Mich.—Small town patronage.

FOREIGN DEVILS: Tim McCoy—65%. January 14. Fair Western, on the historical line, a little better than McCoy's last year's pictures. Six reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

FOREIGN DEVILS: Tim McCoy—This was my first McCoy picture and it was a total flop at the box office it did the poorest business of any picture played on Friday and Saturday in January. The story is only fair. I believe that McCoy will be all right in Westerns but he is no good for anything else.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novarro—80%. November 18-19. I think the finest picture on the screen up to the present time. Did not draw quite as good as "The Big Parade" due to bad weather. If you haven't played it do so if you don't make a dollar. Metro charges the little town too much for this one and "The Big Parade."—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

THE TAXI DANCER: Special cast—60%. December 4. Having seen some unfavorable reports on this picture we were afraid of this one, but lordy there's nothing to offend or shock anyone. A little spice now and then. It's fast moving, holds the interest, and has some good comedy. Heard no unfavorable comments. Joan Crawford is easy on the eyes and Owen Moore was good. Seven reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN SALVATION: Special cast—60%. January 15. Do not know how to comment on this one. A good picture of its type, or should I say bad. Excellent acting but entirely too tough. The scenes on the convict ship were appalling. Glad that one is over. Eight reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE VALLEY OF HELL: Special cast—25%. January 31. A good action picture.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: John Gilbert—90%. October 21-22. One of the big ones. Good attendance. I really think patrons are tiring of war pictures, but this is about the best to date.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: Special cast—Excellent. Pleased all. Good drawing power. War as is. Play it by all means.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Marion Davies—67%. January 14. Many were disappointed in this one because it didn't follow the comic section of the papers by the same title. Marion did all she could but she didn't have much to work with. Seven reels.—G. N. Lounsbury, I. O. O. F. theatre, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

TILLIE THE TOILER: Marion Davies—45%. December 26. Not big, but a lot of good comedy. Marion always pleases here.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

SPRING FEVER: William Haines—65%. January 24-25. A dandy good program picture.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

SPRING FEVER: William Haines—January 31. Our patrons were well pleased with this one. Comments very favorable. Good acting, plenty of comedy, and an interesting picture all the way through. George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

ANNIE LAURIE: Lillian Gish—28%. February 6-7. Not what I would class as a small town picture. Those who are familiar with history will like it and if handled properly it will show some good receipts at the box office, but the average small town theatre-goer will not like it. Nine reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

ANNIE LAURIE: Lillian Gish—February 1-2. This did not do much for me, although it was a good picture in my opinion. Some liked it and some didn't. Norman Kerry, although a good actor, was not fitted for the part that he took. Nine reels.—Newell E. Ware, Comique theatre, Camden, Me.—General patronage.

ANNIE LAURIE: Lillian Gish—January 30-31. Beautifully produced and well acted picture but fails miserably at the box office. Nine reels.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE UNKNOWN: Lon Chaney—45%. December 11. We always expect something out of the ordinary from Lon Chaney and we advertise to that effect. He has a following all his own and be sure can act. Norman Kerry had the flappers—flapping as the strong man. Watch your step Lon Chaney, too much of just sympathy, can kill. Believe me no one leaves the theatre in this picture, though. Eight reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

DESERT'S TOLL: Special cast—37%. January 21. A fair Western with very good photography, and some very good desert scenes. Six reels.—G. N. Lounsbury, I. O. O. F. theatre, Grand Gorge, N. Y.—Small town patronage

FRISCO SALLY LEVY: Sally O'Neil—39%. January 28. Here is a real good comedy with plenty of laughs. Had many good comments on this, but can't see where Metro dug up the title from and wouldn't call it a good title, and the paper is fierce. Kate Price and Tenen Holtz carry away the honors and put Sally very much in the background. Eight reels.—G. N. Lounsbury, I. O. O. F. theatre, Grand George, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

TIN HATS: Conrad Nagel—60%. A little old but good at that.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

THE SCARLET LETTER: Lillian Gish—50%. A mighty nice picture, fit for any theatre. Did not draw well for me, but in fact show business is on the bum and nothing seems to draw.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

QUALITY STREET: Special cast—January 30-31. Opinions were divided on this subject some of the people told me they thought it was very good, while others walked out on it. Personally thought it very good but not exactly a small town picture. Eight reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

LONDON AFTER MIDNIGHT: Lon Chaney—A very cleverly sustained mystery melodrama with Chaney in a dual role that was excellently concealed from the audience until the last few hundred feet. I believe that Chaney is better liked in straight parts without the usual gruesome characters that he has previously played. In London there are few touches of a rather spooky looking character that is not prolonged but just flashes that put the story over.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—General patronage.

MAN, WOMAN AND SIN: John Gilbert—January 26-27. Very good. Miss Eagles accomplished actress. Unusual ending. Business fair.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE ROAD TO ROMANCE: Special cast—30%. February 2-3. Not so good. Just another picture. It's a pirate romance and the direction is not of the best. Will get by as a program offering on an off night.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH HOUR: Lionel Barrymore—February 4. Full of action and held the interest of our patrons all the way through. The children were almost crazy over it. Full of appeal for almost any patronage. Dog very good.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

TEA FOR THREE: Special cast—A thin story not near as good as "Adam and Evil," their previous release. Cody, Owen Moore and Pringle would make a good team in comedy but they will have to give them stories to make them a box office bet. Their clever work in "Adam and Evil" put a considerable crimp in the comparison with "Tea for Three."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia theatre, Columbia City, Ind.—General patronage.

THE GARDEN OF ALLAH: Special cast—Terrible. Don't play it. It's about the poorest thing that I ever saw played off on the unsuspecting exhibitors for a special. Some nice scenery in it that's the best that I can say for it. My patrons kicked and quite a few of them walked out on it, and I did not blame them. It's an hour and a half of agony. I am going to ask M-G-M for an adjustment. I certainly am entitled to one. Nine reels.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite theatre, Greenleaf, Kan.—General patronage.

ADAM AND EVIL: Special cast—January 9-10. Mighty good comedy drama. Title seems to have been a little misleading as I noticed a few staid and sedate church goers here that never come unless they think it is religious or educational story. Even at that I noticed these said church goers had to smile a little once in awhile at least. Seven reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

ADAM AND EVIL: Special cast—A dandy good comedy drama, some very clever situations that kept the house in a good humor. Everyone seemed to enjoy it very much. Very good business. Seven reels.—C. A. Spalhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

SAN MARCOS, TEXAS, February 11, 1928.

DEAR HERALD-WORLD:

We are down in Texas, that vast empire of the South that we of the North, know so little of and for which we all have so profound a respect. Texas is indeed an empire, so large in fact that Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee could be placed within her borders and there would still be enough left of the state to make one Connecticut, one Rhode Island and one Delaware.

The history of Texas reads like a legend. No state in the Union has fought, bled and suffered like Texas. The early history of the state is little known by the present generation, and only for the historian would we know, what privations and suffering the early settlers of this vast country endured that there might be builded an empire that would endure for all time and a land to which all might come and find liberty and protection.

We are sending to the HERALD-WORLD a picture of the Alamo and are sorry that space will not permit of at least a short history of this famous building wherein Colonel Travis and 113 of his men were murdered by Santa Anna and his army of Mexicans in 1835. No spot in Texas is held as sacred as the Alamo by Texans, and when one enters this building he instinctively removes his hat in reverential respect for those who gave up their lives in this building that Texas might be freed from the tyranny of Mexico and might become indeed "The land of the free and the home of the brave."

We of the North know too little of Texas. Her early struggle for independence should endear her people to all lovers of freedom and justice and we are glad to know that we live in a country of which Texas is a part. We are proud of the old state, glad we came down here and will be sorry when duty calls us to other fields. We love these Texans, we love their hospitality and we love their fighting spirit, and if we were going to be anything but a Nebraskan we would want to be a Texan, and that is the highest tribute we can pay Texas. Hurrah for Texas, and may her citizens continue to emulate that spirit of devotion to the cause of liberty that animated those devoted souls who gave up their lives in the Alamo that liberty and justice might endure forever. Texas, we salute you.

The Alamo, "The Cradle of Texas Independence," located in the heart of San Antonio, Tex. This is the building wherein Lt. Colonel W. Barrett Travis and 113 of his faithful followers were ruthlessly murdered by Santa Anna and his army of Mexicans in 1835. Another instance where Liberty was bought in blood. This spot is held sacred by every Texan and the Stars and Stripes, that emblem of Liberty and Justice, now floats where ignorance, superstition and tyranny once held sway.—J. C. J.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

A visit to Texas without a visit to San Marcos would indeed be too bad, and a visit to San Marcos without a visit to the Palace theatre would be the next thing to suicide, and a visit to the Palace theatre without meeting the manager, F. W. Zimmerman, would be a calamity. "Zim" as he is called by all of the fair sex and most of the he men, is one of those fellows you don't have to watch except when you go fishing with him. We went fishing. Had anybody told us that there were black bass anywhere in Texas we would have looked at him with some little degree of suspicion. Zim told us that there was a lake about fifteen miles out of San Antonio where bass as long as sled tongues could be caught even by a Nebraskan and wanted us to go down there and give him a chance to prove it. We told him that we couldn't do that as we never allowed fishing to interfere with business but he saw right off that we couldn't get away with it, so he drove us out to the government hatchery and introduced us to the superintendent and it was arranged that we should go down there and catch some "spawners" for the government ponds.

You have got to hand it to that Zim for framing things up. We didn't have a license but since we were fishing for the government we didn't need any. This was the first government job we ever had and we hope it won't be the last, especially of that kind. We want you to understand right now that this isn't going to be a fish story, that bullhead fisher at Wayne,

AFTER MIDNIGHT: Norma Shearer—Good, but not up to the usual standard of Norma's pictures. She is very popular here.—H. C. Crews, Home theatre, Mounds, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—Decidedly the best this star has ever done. Extra good entertainment. Six reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—This was one of the best college pictures we've ever seen. Good clean comedy. Every inch full of pep. Give us more good college pictures. Seven reels.—H. C.

Nebraska, isn't telling this one, so you need have no hesitancy in accepting it at its full face value, but should you have any doubts about the matter whatever, you may write Zim for a verification, as we have given him instructions as to what to say, and you will find that the numbers and size will agree with our statement, and that ought to be proof conclusive.

It is about sixty miles down to this lake and we didn't leave town until after the show. We wanted to drive Marie but Zim insisted on taking his Hup and so we puttered along the road and at no time went faster than 65 and it took us something like an hour to get down there, but this was due to having to slow up a bit going through San Antonio.

Zim woke us up at 3 a. m. and insisted on getting up and getting out on the lake but we threw a shoe at him and turned over and went to sleep. We never had much respect for a bass that would bite before sunup and didn't believe that a fish of that kind would make a good "spawner" so we held Zim down until a reasonable hour and was sorry we didn't stick to the bed longer. Talk about bass, they gathered around our boat in droves and actually fought to see which one would grab our hooks first, they were the most sociable fish we have ever met, and the least particular. Intelligence and beauty didn't seem to cut a bit of figure with those bass, they'd grab Zim's hook as quick as they would ours. One old bass got so sore because another bass beat him to Zim's hook that he ran up and butted his nose against the boat and came near upsetting us. Zim got sore and threw an oar at him, he's awfully quick tempered that way, but we got him quieted down after a time by offering to compromise by letting that old bass take our hook, which he did, and when we got him in the boat you should have heard what Zim said to him, but we'd blush to repeat it here. We took this bass by the tail and slid him back in the lake and Zim looked at us and said "What do you mean putting that fish back, he'd weigh six pounds more" and we replied, "we know it but that was a democratic bass" and Zim said, "how do you know it was a democratic bass?" and we replied, "because it tries to grab everything in sight" and Zim said "Huh."

Presently Zim hooked a big one and when he took it off the hook he slid it back into the lake and we said "what didja put that fish back for, it was full of spawn" and Zim replied, "I know it, but that's a republican bass and we are not going to take that kind of a fish up to that hatchery, we've got too damn many of 'em now, and besides that it was crooked" and we inquired "what do you mean crooked?" and he replied, "well I saw that bass go up to that school out there and tell 'em something and they all turned around and swam away and as soon as they were out of the way he whirled around and grabbed my hook and I am not going to be a party to the propagation of a breed of that kind." We struck at him with the oar but missed him.

We don't know how many bass finally reached the fish hatchery but we do know that we fried bass for just two hours and fifty minutes while Zim was storing them away, and we didn't keep track of how many we fried, but we know that Zim drove home with a blanket wrapped around him because he couldn't get his trousers buttoned.

Zim isn't only a bass fisher but he's a doctor as well. He's one of these rubber doctors. He never studied the profession but, he practices it every day, in fact he's so proficient that he's rubbed about every loose dime out of the public at his box office that there is in the community and he tried it on us down at the lake. We got a "stitch" in our back and he had us lay down across the bottom of the boat and proceeded to give us a treatment and finally he told us to cough, and we said "how much?" and he replied "two bucks" but he took that stitch out of our back just the same. That convention of exhibitors that will convene at Alexandria, Minnesota, next summer appeals to Zim, he says he will be there, and if he is the boys will meet a real fellow.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We are just in receipt of a letter from Eagle Eye Joe sent to us by air mail. Joe says he will have some criticisms of pictures in the next issue of the HERALD-WORLD and that he has formed a club to be known as the "Exhibitors Club" and that parties who will be eligible to membership will be those who report to the "What The Picture Did For Me" department regularly for ten consecutive weeks and that there will be many pleasing surprises for the membership. He also says he has appointed Phil Rand as president pro tem and wishes us to act as Sergeant At Arms. We don't know how Phil will feel about it but as for ourselves, we blushing accept the honor thrust upon us and will guarantee to fill every calaboose in Pork Center unless the membership toes the mark according to the plans and specifications laid down by our friend Joe. We are strong for Joe, and next to our old friend Thomas O. Service, Joe comes first and after that we don't care whether it's a boy or girl.

—Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World Fill a Want None Others Do—

We found R. M. Fuller of the Palace at Grandview, C. W. Taylor of the Palace at Hillsboro, L. B. Crow of the Palace at Belton, Sebe Goodlett of the Monarch at Georgetown, and O. A. Engelbrecht of the Palace at Georgetown all glad to see us and all offered to go bail for us provided we'd put up the cash in advance. Funny how obliging these Texas boys are. We hope to meet more of them before the authorities get onto us, but on Phil's account we are sorry we are unable to locate Goose Creek.

Three more weeks, or possibly four, and we will head northwest through New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado for old Nebraska where the March winds will whistle up our pant legs and make us wish we had stayed down here longer, for—

It will be with regrets that we leave this grand state
And go north in the blizzards and rain,
And we feel very sure that the urge will be great
To hurry back down here again.

These "Long Horns" are happy in rain or in shine
And they've shown us their real sterling worth,
For they've asked us to remain in their warm, sunny clime
And we'll vote them the salt of the earth.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Special cast—Hope Metro's new specials are as good. Pleased 100 per cent.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

THE FAIR CO-ED: Marion Davies—School teachers and children applauded this and it was also well received by entire audience. A real good picture. Six reels.—D. A. Kookey, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—General patronage.

BECKY: Sally O'Neil—February 5-6. Drew good business and pleased majority.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA: Tim McCoy—Fair Western to poor business. Six reels.—D. A. Kookey, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—General patronage.

THE TEMPTRESS: Greta Garbo—January 23-24. A bit old, perhaps, but drew well the first night and received very favorable comments. Garbo is an exceptional personality and seems to register here. A strong picture. Eight reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

THE FLAMING FOREST: Special cast—A mighty fine program picture. Technicolor gives it class.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

MOCKERY: Lon Chaney—Didn't think much of this as entertainment, but Chaney's acting makes it O. K. Chaney is always good but our patrons, at heart, want him in more pictures like "Tell It to the Marines." Business fair. Seven reels.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

THE FRONTIERSMAN: Tim McCoy—February 8. Very good. Six reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LAST OUTLAW: Gary Cooper—40%. A good high class Western, but nothing big.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LAST OUTLAW: Gary Cooper—January 28. A good Western to good business.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE LAST OUTLAW: Gary Cooper—Gary fine. Pictures much better than "Arizona Bound." Feminine lead not fittingly (figure and occasion) dressed. Booking held up well on three days run. Six reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

TWO FLAMING YOUTHS: Special cast—45%. January 11-12. Average program comedy feature. Not bad, nor good. Six reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

OPEN RANGE: Special cast—55%. December 31. Good Western. Pleased Saturday nighters.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER: Jack Holt—80%. Good small town picture. Plenty of action.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

THE LAST WALTZ: Special cast—55%. A peach of a program picture. Pleased most who saw it.—G. J. Brukitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

UNDERWORLD: Special cast—70%. January 23. A wonderful performance by Bancroft, Brooke and Brent make this an outstanding attraction. This is what the public likes. Real human stuff. Eight reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—85%. December 5-7. If this is a road show so was the "Sheik" and then some. Good picture, but not worth the price. Ten reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Canada.—Small town patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Special cast—60%. January 3-4. Very good picture and pleased. Did not draw. Not so good for small towns for drawing power. Pleased all who came.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Ronald Colman—30%. November 4-5. Not a small town picture and don't let them tell you it is. A beautiful picture but oh they soak you a beautiful price. It may be the gold medal picture of 1927 but I got the leather medal for running it.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

A GENTLEMAN OF PARIS: Adolphe Menjou—45%. January 30-31. Very good picture for the more sophisticated audiences. Menjou not liked here, therefore no business for us. Six reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

A GENTLEMAN OF PARIS: Adolphe Menjou—February 1-2. Good picture, but too sophisticated for small towns. Very good business.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

SHANGHAI BOUND: Richard Dix—65%. January 10-11. Good picture with plenty of action. It will please any class. This is excellent.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

SWIM, GIRL, SWIM: Bebe Daniels—67%. February 4. This certainly made a hit. Everybody liked it and if Bebe will stay in pictures of this type she will go with us. Really believe that this is the best Daniels picture that we ever did play. An excellent Saturday night show as it has comedy action and anything else that you want to see. Seven reels.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Richard Dix—85%. February 1-2. Played two days to good business. One of these pictures that register good at the box office and send them away glad that they came out to see it. It is certainly worth the price and is bound to please. Six reels.—Paul B. Hoffman, Legion theatre, Holyrood, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MANPOWER: Richard Dix—60%. Just a good program picture. Dix well liked and takes his part well.—W. Fahrenkrog, Lincoln theatre, Bunker Hill, Ill.—General patronage.

FIREMEN SAVE MY CHILD: Beery Hatton—55%. December 29-30. Nice comedy, not a special.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

FIREMEN SAVE MY CHILD: Beery-Hatton—Here is a knockout. Kept our people in continuous roar of laughter. Satorical to the nth degree. Lots of foolishness but good clean stuff that is full of laughs. Not a kicker on it in the patronage we had. For the tired business man or woman this is an oasis. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

FIREMEN SAVE MY CHILD: Beery-Hatton—This is a cracker-jack comedy. Had the folks laughing from beginning to end. Pulled well against basketball opposition and satisfied.—J. H. Macdonald, Wiley theatre, Wiley, Colo.—Rural patronage.

FIREMEN SAVE MY CHILD: Beery-Hatton—December 8-9-10. These boys were pretty good bets for us but give 'em another picture like this and they're sunk. Business bad after first day. Six reels.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neb.—Small town patronage.

FIREMEN SAVE MY CHILD: Beery-Hatton—January 26-27. A very good comedy and pleased, but not a big box office attraction.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

MAN OF THE FOREST: Jack Holt—60%. December 24. Sorry Jack left Paramount. He was the only man for Zane Grey's. (He failed to fill his role in "The Tigress" his first Columbia picture, which we played ten days later.)—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

THE PIONEER SCOUT: Fred Thomson—February 1-2. Well it looks like Paramount are going to have Fred right. This is really a big picture and deserves extra advertising. Story with this stuff Fred, and we're for you.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—General patronage.

THE PIONEER SCOUT: Fred Thomson—February 3-4. Good picture of early pioneers.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—Out of the ordinary roles for Dix, but he put it over and it pleased. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE GAY DEFENDER: Richard Dix—January 2-3. A good picture but Dix does not seem to draw in this sort of story. Business fair. Six reels.—Harold M. Schoonover, Mazda & East Side theatres, Aurora, Neb.—Small town patronage.

BEAU SABREUR: Special cast—February 1-2. Will go over in the small town much better than "Beau Geste." It's not so gruesome, the action is much more diversified, and there is the right amount of comedy relief. However, don't let Paramount sell it to you, on a guarantee, and split basis, as they did here, because it won't draw that kind of business. Seven reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE SPOTLIGHT: Esther Ralston—This was a nice picture. A little heavier than most of her pictures and I don't like her so well in the black wig but it was well made and Neil Hamilton is popular and the picture pleased all right.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

DRUMS OF THE DESERT: Warner Baxter—February 3-4. Another good Zane Grey picture to big business.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE WOMAN ON TRIAL: Pola Negri—Extra good program picture, her pictures are better than the last one I run. Six reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Some One Hundred Per Centers

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—100%. October 18-19. Minister commented favorably. You have to do your own exploiting. Fox has not sold this picture to the public. It's worth all you can say for it. Twelve reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—100%. January 2. This is a roadshow. A perfect picture and what business. Broke every record. We made money on it and paid the biggest rental we ever did. Thirteen reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Canada.—Small town patronage.

BEN HUR: Ramon Novaroo—100%. January 18-19. This went over with a bang here. Got people into our theatre who never went to a movie here before. I guess everyone knows what it's all about. Nuf sed! Twelve reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE BIG PARADE: John Gilbert—100%. December 28-29. Excellent in every way. We had seen it as a real show with all the big noise, but had to admit it is there, regardless. Had terrible stormy weather, or we could have cleaned up as 'twas Metro got the lion's share. Thirteen reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

WHAT PRICE GLORY: Special cast—100%. January 9-10-11-12. Here is one sweet box office bet, they like it, all classes. It's a little rough in spots, but from what the boys who were there tell me, the old war was just a little rough in spots, and they claim that this is a true war picture. Better get this one now boys and make some dough. Fox is selling it worth the money. Grab it. Twelve reels.—Steve Farrar, Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, Ill.—General patronage.

BEN HUR: Special cast—100%. February 1-2-3-4. This is absolutely the greatest thing that has ever been screened, and my patrons were not backward in telling me so. Broke my house record, that has been standing for several years, drew people from nine other towns some of them 45 miles away. Metro will ask big money as a guarantee and 50 per cent of the receipts but you will make a little money anyway and will be giving the people a treat by showing it. Twelve reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Fred Thomson—94%. November 12. A good picture will please all classes. Silver King great.—W. D. Fox, Community theatre, Watertown, Conn.—Small town patronage.

THE WOMAN ON TRIAL: Pola Negri—February 3-4. Ran this on double feature night with "Driftin' Sand" and they liked it. Drew average Saturday business. It's a very appealing drama, beautifully acted. Miss Negri's pictures this year are much more suitable to small town audiences. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

THE WOMAN ON TRIAL: Pola Negri—Same old stuff done about a hundred times, in fact, two years. Nothing there.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE ROUGH RIDERS: Special cast—Very good picture, but not a special. It pleased all who saw it.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

SENORITA: Bebe Daniels—September 29. A pretty good action picture, though Bebe's slight figure caused her mighty deeds to border on the burlesque.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

RUNNING WILD: W. C. Fields—This is about the silliest thing that we have had in a long time. It isn't funny, or at least our folks didn't give it much of a hand and they like comedies. W. C. Fields not a drawing card here.—J. H. Macdonald, Wiley theatre, Wiley, Colo.—Rural patronage.

CHANG: Special cast—We had more favorable reports from our customers on this picture than any we had in a long time. It did not pull as it might because the title did not mean anything to them and they had been stung before on this type of picture. But this one is different and is certainly worth running. Both educational and entertaining.

—J. H. Macdonald, Wiley theatre, Wiley, Colo.—Rural patronage.

SHE'S A SHEIK: Bebe Daniels—February 5-6. Good comedy drama with action.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

CHILDREN OF DIVORCE: Clara Bow—This picture is really a special, we do consider Miss Bow miscast, it is very sad but people like this type once in a while for a change.—E. L. Wood, Coliseum theatre, Edmore, Mich.—General patronage.

STARK LOVE: Special cast—Let me say this is one of the best pictures of its kind ever produced. Many people may not like it but it's there just the same. Out of the ordinary and I hope Paramount will continue to make this class of product.—S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—General patronage.

HONEYMOON HATE: Florence Vidor—Only fair, about 55 per cent.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE POTTERS: W. C. Fields—Fairly good comedy. Lots of laughs in the last reel. Six reels.—D. A. Kookey, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—General patronage.

THE WAY OF ALL FLESH: Emil Jannings—February 1-2. One of the finest pictures we have ever played. Patrons sure praised this picture. Wish I would have played it a day or two more.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE CITY GONE WILD: Thomas Meighan—Very good. Meighan better than usual. Five reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—January 25-26. Another good bit of entertainment from Miss Ralston, she had been very good on all her starts this year. Good stories too. They enjoyed this one immensely. Ford Sterling and Richard Arlen merit their share of the honors for a very neat program release. Six reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—Extra good program picture. Six reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

FIGURES DON'T LIE: Esther Ralston—Nice little picture. Would judge it about 60 per cent.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

THE TELEPHONE GIRL: Madge Bellamy—October 3. Not so good as this star's Fox pictures. Leave it alone.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

IT: Clara Bow—January 29-30. An excellent picture to biggest business this year. Packed them in for every performance. Pleased everybody. Seven reels.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

ARIZONA BOUND: Gary Cooper—October 27. A weak backed Western. Lay off.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

SOFT CUSHIONS: Douglas MacLean—October 31. I thought this a very clever comedy myself, but some of my patrons said it was terrible. Business just fair.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

WE'RE ALL GAMBLERS: Thomas Meighan—This is the first Meighan we have played for a couple of years, but couldn't rate at any more than a fair picture. Seven reels.—B. R. Parsons, State theatre, Springfield, Minn.—General patronage.

WE'RE ALL GAMBLERS: Thomas Meighan—February 3. Just a fair picture with Tom walking around waiting for something to happen. Too slow. S. H. Rich, Rich theatre, Montpelier, Idaho.—General patronage.

Pathe-P D C

A HARP IN HOCK: Special cast—69%. January 14. An excellent picture. They all liked it. Seven reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

BORDER BLACKBIRD: Leo Maloney—50%. This is a splendid Western type picture. Seems Maloney is putting more money in his pictures and they look high class. This is extra good, if you are looking for something better than a cheap Western, get Maloney. Six reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

DRESS PARADE: William Boyd—February 2-3-4. Darn fine. It's a picture of golden youth and should draw well anywhere. In spite of a down pour of rain Saturday night they crashed the gate and that's something in this social climbers city. Seven reels.—Clark & Edwards, Palace theatre, Ashland, O.—General patronage.

VANITY: Leatrice Joy—January 31. A good program picture.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

JEWELS OF DESIRE: Priscilla Dean—This was not poor it was pitiful. Absolutely nothing to it, a very dark ugly picture. Even John Bowers who is usually good was punk. Last year we bought thirty-seven P. D. C. pictures, we have played about half of them, setting the other half out paying for them and replacing them with pictures and every time we play one we wish we hadn't. If you have this one bought take a tip and set it out. Six reels.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

HIS DOG: Rudolph Schildkraut—February 8-9. An excellent picture.—R. Pfeiffer, Princess theatre, Chilton, Wis.—Small town patronage.

HIS DOG: Special cast—Very weak. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE DICE WOMAN: Priscilla Dean—Good action program picture. Six reels.—G. Marlow, Washington theatre, Atoka, Okla.—Small town patronage.

GALOPING GOBS: Buffalo Bill Jr.—Classed as a Western, but really a feature length Western comedy. The best we've had from Pathe and we've played twenty or more. Bill Cody and Wally Wales are good but Maloney is certainly a misfit and Harry Carey passed his youth and attractiveness. Five reels.—H. C. Crews, Home theatre, Mounds, Okla.—Small town patronage.

NOBODY'S WIDOW: Leatrice Joy—Not much.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE NIGHT BRIDE: Special cast—February 6. Good picture with a poor title to draw them in. Six reels.—Mrs. C. Knox, Star theatre, Villa Grove, Ill.—General patronage.

Tiffany

COLLEGE DAYS: Marceline Day—January 16-17. Personally consider this to be the poorest college story I have ever shown, had several walk outs on it. Seven reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

LIGHTNING: Lightning—January 13-14. Only a fair program offering, which drew big business on account of it being written by Zane Grey. Seven reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

NIGHT LIFE: Special cast—This was a very good picture. Some fine directing and fair story, and strong well chosen cast. Had many favorable comments on this. One cash customer stopped and said "These Tiffany pictures are all good aren't they?" I haven't seen a poor one yet with that colored gem trademark on it. I have run "Red Heads Preferred," "The Broken Gate," and "Snowbound," lately and judge they all pleased him as they did me.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

Universal

THE PRAIRIE KING: Hoot Gibson—39%. January 27-28. Just another Western and I did not consider it up to Hoot's standard. Six reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE MARRIAGE CLAUSE: Billie Dove—40%. January 1. Very good picture. Interesting. Should please anywhere. Billie Dove of course beautiful. Too much New Year's Eve kept the percentage down, I'm sure. Eight reels.—L. L. Netzer, American Legion theatre, Lena, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE MARRIAGE CLAUSE: Special cast—Well staged and a sob drama goes all right once in awhile. Held up on three day run. Eight reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

HELD BY THE LAW: Special cast—26%. February 8-9. Fair program picture but there are dozens of others just like it. The father is sentenced to death for murder but is saved when the boy and girl find the real criminal at the last moment. Seven reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THAT'S MY DADDY: Reginald Denny—This is one peach of a picture and by far the best Denny picture since "California Straight Ahead." The child in this should have damages from the Dept. of Universal as they sure should have put her name on the paper in big letters. The cash customers will all be looking for her if she comes back. It is not all slapstick humor but has a lot of real story and acting in it, thanks to the little five year old girl.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

THE THIRTEENTH JUROR: Special cast—This is a good detective prosecuting attorney story like all the others but they will like it.—Chas. Lee Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—General patronage.

THE RAWHIDE KID: Hoot Gibson—January 28.

Good Western. Just fine for Saturdays.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Special cast—This is the picture that pulled 'em in, this is the picture that pleased. Two of our mighty patrons said this was the best they ever seen. Personally the picture did not appeal to me. Six reels.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

PAINTING THE TOWN: Glenn Tryon—This is mighty good light entertainment. Six reels.—D. A. Kookey, Happy Hour theatre, Ewen, Mich.—General patronage.

BEWARE OF WIDOWS: Laura LaPlante—This title hit me in the eye but when it came time to put it over I got cold feet. I'm a bachelor and this is a small town. Laura is sure clever and Bryant Washburn ideal support. Business fair. Six reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Can.—Small town patronage.

BEWARE OF WIDOWS: Laura LaPlante—January 25-26. First three reels are pretty good but it certainly gets terrible after that, too silly for words. Six reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE FEARLESS RIDER: Fred Humes—This is our first one of this star and we found it a fair Western, pretty good story, and Pewee Holmes didn't do the picture a bit of harm. Little Barbara Worth would of been very good if it hadn't been fixed up to look quite so jakir. One very weak spot in the picture, the girl's father gets caught in a mine blast and is caught beneath some rocks, the girl finds him there, he sends her for help to remove the rocks saying you can't get them off, later when the villain finds him there, he removes a rock about the size of a wasp with no effort at all, why do they do it. Five reels.—C. A. Spainhour, Twilight theatre, Greensburg, Kan.—General patronage.

A HERO FOR A NIGHT: Glenn Tryon—February 1. This is the first of these Tryon pictures for us. Universal has been making a lot of fuss about this young man and we were expecting something, the reaction of our audience to this one was that it was too silly to be funny. I try not to let my personal opinions govern reports, but I feel the same way about it and checked it up around town the next day to be sure. The verdict is as above. Nothing to it, sold at a fair price though. Seven reels.—Henry Reeve, Mission theatre, Menard, Tex.—Small town patronage.

DOWN THE STRETCH: Marion Nixon—Liked by the men, particularly. Bobby Agnew has most of the work to do. Marion very good in lesser part. Would say to run it. Seven reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

THE WRONG MR. WRIGHT: Special cast—A dandy program picture.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

THE CHINESE PARROT: Marion Nixon—Not a small town picture did not hit for us. Seven reels.—E. L. Wood, Coliseum theatre, Edmore, Mich.—General patronage.

SPANGLES: Marion Nixon—The kids will like it, ladies no. Will get by with the men. Well produced but showed too much of the seamy side of circus life. The star is there.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

PRISONERS OF THE STORM: House Peters—January 11-12. Fair picture that drew a little better than the average program picture. Six reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MICHAEL STROGOFF: Special cast—Endorse all previous good reports. Second night outshone first by 44 per cent which only happens now and then with us. Most comments favorable but star did not appeal here. Ten reels.—Chas. Storch, Casino theatre, Republic, Wash.—Small town patronage.

THE FEARLESS RIDER: Fred Humes—February 4. Good Western. Pewee Homes robs the picture. Five reels.—E. L. Wood, Coliseum theatre, Edmore, Mich.—General patronage.

SPURS AND SADDLES: Art Acord—Did fair business with this one. Acord may be just another Western star but our patrons seem to like him almost as well as they do Tom Mix. He ought to be given better parts. Five reels.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

BLAZING DAYS: Fred Humes—January 28. A fair Western. Some comedy and action. Just an ordinary picture, good for small town only.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

BUTTERFLIES IN THE RAIN: Laura LaPlante—February 7. Good drama, well acted. An average picture that has about average appeal. Not Laura LaPlante's best, but a fair picture.—George Lodge, Green Lantern theatre, Claymont, Del.—General patronage.

ROLLING HOME: Reginald Denny—I asked them to send me Arthur Lake single to precede the feature (he's the best juvenile in pictures if given a chance) but they sent me "The Midnight Bum" and Denny only rolled home to die. Seven reels.—J. C. MacKenzie, Princess theatre, Seaforth, Ont., Canada.—Small town patronage.

THE FOUR FLUSHER: George Lewis—February 3. This is a fine entertainment. Gave great satisfaction to the young folks. Clean and entertaining.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Grenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THE BUCKAROO KID: Hoot Gibson—January 30-31. This picture was made from a Peter B. Kyne story, and it's a dandy. Goes to show that fiction from a good pen will beat the factory made scenarios any time. Six reels.—E. M. Biddle, Strand theatre, Paoli, Ind.—Small town patronage.

Warner Bros.

A SAILOR'S SWEETHEART: Louise Fazenda—60%. January 21. Fair. Will just get by. Six reels.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose-Liberty theatres, Sumas-Lynden, Wash.—Small town patronage.

SAILOR IZZY MURPHY: George Jessel—20%. February 4-5. The biggest piece of cheese we ever played. Instead of hiding in the cellar when the customers came out I got out of town for a week. Better leave this one on the shelf. Seven reels.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose-Liberty theatres Sumas-Lynden, Wash.—Small town patronage.

HILLS OF KENTUCKY: Rin Tin Tin—The dog picture was good. Seven reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

THE COLLEGE WIDOW: Dolores Costello—January 29. Entertaining college story. Business only fair.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

JAWS OF STEEL: Rin Tin Tin—Good picture. Pleased Saturday nighters.—G. J. Burkitt, Lyric theatre, Morrison, Ill.—Mixed patronage.

State Rights

GALOPING ON: Wally Wales—70%. January 27-28-29. Fair Western. Will please your rough-necks. Five reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

HAUNTED RANGE: Ken Maynard—85%. February 10-11. Good Western. Will please your rough-necks 100 per cent. Plenty of action. Five reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

SHADOWS: Special cast—Very sad, but none of the nasty suggestions as contained in "Mr. Wu." One that helped Chaney to fame. Play it by all means.—G. Carey, Strand theatre, Paris, Ark.—General patronage.

Serials

BLAKE OF SCOTLAND YARD: (Universal) Hayden Stevenson—Have played three episodes of this and it is good although the star isn't well known here. The man who plays the spider doesn't suit this particular role, unless he does better later on in the picture. Twelve episodes.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

KING OF THE JUNGLE: (Rayart) Elmo Lincoln—We find if not used too often a Jungle serial pleases better than any type. This is one of the best. The shots of the jungle animals are great. Good serials are few, so I am glad to be able to report this good. Two reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

MELTING MILLIONS: (Pathe)—The serials with these two stars can always be counted upon for beautiful sets, high class type. But the story in this and action is poor. Why can't this team give us another "Green Archer." Two reels.—Mrs. Berta Smith, Palace theatre, Rockmart, Ga.—Small town patronage.

THE GOLDEN STALLION: The first episode starts off well and serials draw well on Friday and Saturday in our small town. Two reels.—H. C. Crews, Home theatre, Mounds, Okla.—Small town patronage.

Short Subjects

EDUCATIONAL

BRAIN STORMS Another Mermaid laugh-getter deluxe. What's the use to say more. Two reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

GIMME STRENGTH: Good, but in poor condition.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

GOOSE FLESH: Lloyd Hamilton—Not bad. Hamilton slipping with us. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

NO CHEATING: Al St. John—What's the use to report on these Mermaids. I have never seen a poor one. This one kept them howling all the time on Saturday. We play Mermaids every Saturday, and they are certainly well liked. Two reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

SLIPPERY FEET: Bobby Vernon—One of the best Vernon comedies I have seen. Old, but what's the difference when they're good. Far ahead of the new ones he is now releasing through Paramount. Two reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

SOME SCOUT: Lupino Lane—This is fairly good. Lane improving. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

THE STUNT MAN: Larry Semon—Semon used to be a good bet but not now. Poor. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

WHO HIT ME: Good, but in poor condition.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

WILD WALLOPS: Billy Dooley—Very good. Lots of laughs.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

F B O

ALICE CARTOON, KRAZY KAT COMEDIES: These comedies draw better than any we play. They make the kiddies go wild. One reel.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

CHARLIE BOWER'S COMEDIES: Our patrons don't like these. It is alright to play one at a time of these, but no more as they get tiresome.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

HEAVYAVATION: Standard comedy—These fat boys have made a decided hit with my people, and I bought several more comedies on the strength of the laughs there were in the two that I have used. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THREE FAT MEN COMEDIES: Some of these are very good comedies. Two reels.—E. C. Bays, Globe theatre, Buena Vista, Va.—General patronage.

THREE OF A KIND: Three Fat Boys—They are good. Book 'em. Two reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

A WILD ROOMER: Charley Bowers—This boy makes all of his stuff practically the same, after they have seen one of them there isn't anything to see in the others. Mighty little comedy in any of them. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE WISECRACKERS: Cooke-Guard—This clean comedy is going along fine and pleasing everybody. Two reels.—Giacoma Bros., Crystal theatre, Tombstone, Ariz.—General patronage.

FOX

FOUR FACES WEST: Van Bibber—Our first. Didn't seem to please. Two reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

FOX NEWS: Good. One reel.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

LOW NECKERS: A fair novelty comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

WOLF IN CHEAP CLOTHING: Animal comedy—Poor. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

CALL OF THE CUCKOO: Fairly good.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

FIGHTING FATHERS: Not much to this one. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

HATS OFF: Personally thought it mighty punk, but it got a lot of laughs so I guess it wasn't so bad after all. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE LIGHTER THAT FAILED: Charley Chase—Chase is getting quite a following here and they liked him in this one. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

THE OLD WALLOP: Our Gang—Fine comedy, will keep them roaring from start to finish. Let's have more of Our Gang. Two reels.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

PUTTING PANTS ON PHILIP: I certainly can't say much for this one, about two giggles in the entire two reels. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT

EASY CURVES: Billy Dooley—Patrons liked it very well. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SCHOOL DAZE: Krazy Kat Cartoon—Poorest Krazy Kat I have ever seen. About one-half reel.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

SPLASH YOURSELF: Bobby Vernon—The poorest Vernon comedy we have ever played. These Paramount comedies are about one-half as good as the Educational Christies. Don't let them make you think they are any better. We know because we played every Paramount released up to this time, also all the Educational's. Two reels.—E. F. Ingram, Ingram's theatre, Ashland, Ala.—Small town patronage.

PATHE

ALONG CAME AUNTIE: Glenn Tryon—Just fair. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

ASSISTANT WIVES: Charley Chase—A sure-fire comedy. Chase getting better all the time. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

BUMPING INTO BROADWAY: Book it and push it hard. It will make you money. Two reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

CIRCUS CAPERS: Poodles Hanneford—Very good. Lots of laughs.—J. L. Seiter, Selma theatre, Selma, Cal.—Small town patronage.

DUCK SOUP: Not so much. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

FORTY-FIVE MINUTES FROM HOLLYWOOD: Glenn Tryon—Mighty poor. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

HITCHIN' UP: A good comedy. Poor condition. Two reels.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

ICE COLD COCOS: Just a little above the average comedy. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

JEWISH PRUDENCE: A very funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

LEAVE 'EM LAUGHING: Stan Laurel—This man Roach sure knows comedy. The kind that keeps them laughing. My patrons couldn't stop. What a laugh. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

MANY SCRAPPY RETURNS: Charley Chase—Just a fair offering. Chase has made them much better. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

MUSCLE BOUND MUSIC: Average comedy, got a few laughs, that is about all you can say for the comedies we get now. Two reels.—S. G. Ihde, Photoplay theatre, Ashland, Kan.—Small town patronage.

OUR GANG COMEDIES: These always get the laughs. Two reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

SMITH'S NEW HOME: A good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SMITH'S SURPRISE: A funny comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

SMITH'S VACATION: The baby puts this over. Two reels.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

WHAT EVERY ICEMAN KNOWS: Max Davidson—Excellent comedy. Even my Jewish patrons congratulated me on this one. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

WILL ROGERS ABROAD: Have run eight. Seem to please. One reel.—K. D. Francis, Family theatre, Metamora, Mich.—General patronage.

YALE VS. HARVARD: Our Gang—Not bad, but not up to the Our Gang standard. Two reels.—S. B. Kennedy, Central theatre, Selkirk, Manitoba, Can.—Small town patronage.

UNIVERSAL

BY GEORGE: Fair.—H. S. Boyd, Community theatre, Woodbury, Conn.—General patronage.

PASSING THE JONSES: A good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

THROUGH A WILL: An extra good comedy. Two reels.—Bert Silver, Silver Family theatre, Greenville, Mich.—General patronage.

MISCELLANEOUS

A LINK MISSING: Mutt & Jeff—Good cartoon. Plenty laughs. One reel.—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

LUKE WARM DAZE: Bray—Steer clear of this if you are trying to run a decent house. The "comedian," the Lord preserve us, pulls a stunt which would have been too raw even in the lowest of low variety dives fifty years ago. Two reels.—Chas. Storch, Casino theatre, Republic, Wash.—Small town patronage.

WEDDING KNIGHT: Bobby Emmit—Fair comedy. What else could be expected from a one reeler?—L. W. Bagwell, Crystal theatre, Oakman, Ala.—General patronage.

Reginald Morris, Writer with Fox, Drops Dead

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21.—Reginald Morris, 34, scenario writer, dropped dead at his home here early Thursday morning. Death was due to heart trouble. Morris was under contract to Fox Films. He began his career with the old Edison and Biograph companies.

First Sunday Shows in 70 Years at El Paso, Ill.

Sunday shows are being presented in El Paso, Ill., for the first time in seventy years following favorable action by the council. The victory was won by promising to show only clean pictures which will not conflict with the church interests, according to George Michels, manager of the Grand Opera House.

THE BOX OFFICE TICKER

A System for Determining the Definite Attraction Values of Motion Pictures

Exhibitors reporting to "What the Picture Did For Me" supply a percentage rating obtained by dividing average daily gross of house record attraction into average daily gross of picture being reported on. When 10 of these percentage ratings on a picture have been received, the average of these 10 percentage ratings is entered in "The Ticker." Each additional percentage-rating report received on pictures entered is combined with those previously received and the new average thus created is entered.

CHICAGO PERSONALITIES

By Whit

THE readjustments of Pathe which extended over the entire country eliminated three salesmen from the Chicago branch and a number of people in the office force. Cecil Maberry, Midwest district manager, remains with Pathe as special representative. These changes are a result of the readjustment policy adopted by Pathe since the association of Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O, with Pathe.

Cecil De Mille's "King of Kings" opens Sunday at the Erlanger for a four weeks' run. The picture has already been shown all over the country, thus strengthening the argument that after all Chicago is really a hick town. However, the reason given for holding out on Chicago is that the runs in all adjacent cities should prove an advantage to the Chicago run.

We learn from the manager of the Movie Dancing School which has opened on the row that it claims no connection with moving pictures whatsoever. No enticement of moving picture jobs is being offered and that the name Movie Dancing School is being used just because the place happens to be on the row.

Phil Reisman, a member of the producers and distributors group on the contract committee meeting at the Congress, arrived in town Sunday.

Charles McDonald, general manager of Timely Films, producers of "Topics of the Day" and "Aesops Fables," has appointed W. A. (Bill) Aschmann as assistant to Tom North, special representative of Topics and Fables in the Midwest. Aschmann was formerly manager of the Pathe exchange, Chicago and Milwaukee.

The big camera and flashlight boys of the daily papers had a busy time last Friday morning when the Chief arrived. Norma Shearer and her husband, Irving G. Thalberg, production executive for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Rod LaRocque, Ben Lyon and Skeets Galligher all popped off the train at the same time, and there was also the casket containing the body of Eddie Foy to photograph.

Joe Leo, managing director of Ascher theatres, went to New York last week where his friends honored him with a testimonial dinner.

Al Gonsior, impresario of the Virginia theatre, Champaign, was a visitor of the Fox exchange last week.

The Movietone picture of Mussolini began a run at the Monroe theatre Saturday, succeeding the second run of "7th Heaven." Twenty thousand heralds on the Mussolini feature were distributed in the Italian quarters of the city. Those who like the odor of garlic are advised to attend.

Tom Smith, who runs the Princess theatre at Colchester, Illinois, operates his house seven days a week, and says that he cannot afford to operate fewer days than that. When a farmer drives from five to fifteen miles through the mud, he doesn't want to find the theatre closed. Smith says it pays him to take a loss one or two nights a week and be open every night. This might be worthy of a thought to the small town exhibitors who are closed several nights each week.

Joe Lyon was trying to sell a picture to a small town exhibitor last week, but, "How can I buy pictures, when I have these baseball houses?" said the exhibitor.

"Whatduyu mean?" asks Joe.

"Nine on each side," replies the exhibitor.

E. P. Grohe lost a very valuable canary last week by fire in the basement of his apartment. The apartment house is owned by his sister, Mrs. L. Deutsch, who operates the Seeley and Hamlin theatres. Loss from the fire amounted to about $3,000.

Clyde Eckhardt entertained Margaret Mann, "the 60-year-old Cinderella of the Movies," when she passed through Chicago last week on her way to New York.

The midnight matinee held at the United Artists theatre Thursday for the opening of Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus" was quite a gala affair. Just about every stage star playing in the city was present, and those who paid their way in packed the rest of the house to capacity. Chaplin is still Chaplin and so is "The Circus."

* * *

Henri Ellman went to New York Sunday of last week and returned the following Wednesday.

Al Lyons, who was formerly at the Peoples theatre is now at the Terminal.

The little theatre at LaGrange burned Sunday of last week. Earl Johnson reports that it is to be rebuilt.

Louis Rudolph, who operates the Emmett theatre says that exhibitors should read every paper in the industry. Rudolph takes them all, and he is well informed on everything concerning the industry.

* * *

The LaSalle theatre is to open the 25th of this month with the picture, "Is Your Daughter Safe?" with a "men only" policy. The picture is being distributed by U. S. Health Films, Inc.

Elmer Dunas has joined the Filmack as city sales manager.

James Scott has joined the Universal sales force and began work last Monday.

Freddie Cleveland of the Circle theatre was in New York last week.

Ben Cooney and family are vacationing with James Coston and his family in California.

Since the announcement of Vocafilm made by Educational, Dave Dubin has had over 200 requests for information concerning the new sound-picture device. Exhibitors are showing a lively interest in this and other similar machines.

The Film Board of Trade members enjoyed a dinner at the Congress Friday night.

Through arrangements being made by Joe Abramson, film board secretaries traveling to the second annual Film Board convention in Los Angeles, May 16, will see the latest pictures enroute. Pictures will be picked up at Chicago, Omaha and Salt Lake City and projected on the train.

* * *

Will Hays was supposed to have been on the Chief Friday. We were at the station but for some reason Hays failed to find us.

* * *

G. P. Morgan, special representative for Sam Goldwyn, was in town last week.

Paper Raps Move to Put Chicago Censors in Political Hands

In commenting on the move of the city administration of Chicago to take the motion picture censorship out of the hands of the police and civil service lists and to place it in the hands of politically appointed censors, the Chicago Tribune says in part:

"We have only limited sympathy, at best, with any form of censorship, but if there must be one we can imagine none which, in the long run, will prove more onerous than a politically inspired one. . . . Politics being what it is, there is ample reason to fear that sooner or later a political censorship will be on the market and anything will pass provided the skids are adequately greased. . . . The only useful purpose now served by censorship is the assurance it gives to parents that their children will not be subjected at the movies to unwholesome influences.

Believe It Or Not

EDWIN CAREWE, the producer, was sitting in the dining room of a New York hotel lunching with several magazine writers. He was discussing his forthcoming story, "The Bear Tamer's Daughter," recently bought from the agents of the author, Konrad Bercovici, for Dolores Del Rio to star in. Suddenly his eyes were focused on a heavy set man with a large, dark mustache and bushy eye-brows.

"There! That is the great character for one of the gypsy roles in the story," cried Carewe. "Who is he?"

"That," said one of the writers, "is Konrad Bercovici."

FILL YOUR TILL WITH "TILLIE"

VICTOR McLAGLEN in "A Girl in Every Port"

Another FOX money-getter packed 'em in last week at the

ROXY THEATRE NEW YORK

And here's the reason why—

At the Roxy Theatre this week Victor McLaglen returns with "A Girl in Every Port," and in his latest Fox effort offers the best screen entertainment the Roxy has provided in many weeks, perhaps months.

"A Girl in Every Port" is an all around good picture, sophisticated in its treatment. —N.Y. Evening Graphic

"A Girl in Every Port," Victor McLaglen's latest essay in the art of story telling, is one of the most absolutely enjoyable pictures ever shown by Roxy. It is filled with wit, high adventure and with pathos, and it has more laughs than you can count, only most of them are the sort which bring a catch in your throat.

Just as he did in "What Price Glory," McLaglen puts over things which other men would be afraid to tackle and, as he did in that other picture, he comes away clean. —N.Y. Evening World

"A Girl in Every Port" is produced with skill, it will probably be very popular. Mr. McLaglen and Mr. Armstrong make a picturesque pair of fighters, and Miss Brooks is as attractive as ever. —The N.Y. Sun

"You'll make no mistake about an investment in entertainment in this one. It's sure a winner. If Howard Hawks, the director, can convert more scripts into bubbling, provocative comedies of this kind he is assured a safe refuge from critical sharpshooters as well as those who pass their legal tender through the little pigeon hole at the box-office."

—The Morning Telegraph

Victor McLaglen and Robert Armstrong are the roving shipmates. Their work is excellent, but no more so than that of the minor members of the cast, who have fallen under the guidance of a director whose uncommon intelligence, imagination and humor have resulted in a vastly entertaining and satisfying comedy. This is important for the Roxy box-office.

—The World

The story is a rough and ready yarn amusingly done. McLaglen is a good actor . . .

"A Girl in Every Port" has box-office perquisites and is therefore good film entertainment. —N.Y. American Director Howard Hawks has injected several devilish touches in the piece.

His treatment of the snappy scenario is smooth and at all times interesting. Mr. McLaglen's great, Armstrong is certainly appreciable and Louise Brooks is at her loveliest. The rest of the gals from other ports are good to look at, too. Roxy's got a winner this time. —Daily News

The Roxy Theatre is the port of call visited this week by Victor McLaglen, Robert Armstrong, Louise Brooks and some others in a generally amusing, if not uproarious, comedy entitled "A Girl in Every Port."

Any picture in which the man who played Captain Flag is allowed plenty of range is certain to be a hearty affair, and "A Girl in Every Port" is just that and even more.

—N.Y. Evening Post

Roxy has a hit picture!

"A Girl in Every Port," the current Fox, is a laugh all the way, thanks to the work of Victor McLaglen, of "What Price Glory" fame. —N.Y. Telegram

The picture is good. Victor McLaglen and Robert Armstrong do fine acting, and the comedy is neatly handled. Louise Brooks plays the amusement park high diver. —Daily Mirror

"The answer to the exhibitors' prayer"
"Say Ah-h!"

Looks as if Charley Bowers has discovered the answer to the exhibitors' prayer for something special in short comedies. The mechanical ostrich in this number is a prize wow for laughs. Don't ask us how the darn thing works. That's Bowers' secret process idea. At any rate, this mechanical ostrich is a natural screen scream. It's one of those things that must be seen to be appreciated. Charley Bowers himself plays the role of the goofy assistant on an ostrich farm. The owner is on the farm taking a diet of ostrich eggs to cure an ingrowing grouch. The regular ostriches refuse to lay the eggs, till Charley feeds one of them an assortment of clothes and hardware. The result is the hatching of the mechanical ostrich. From then on it's a scream. At last — a new novelty angle in comedies. And it's as clever as it is funny. H. L. Muller directed.

—“Of course, boys, we’re all honest
—but let’s cut the cards!”

IN the new Standard Exhibition Contract, complete text of which is printed in this issue, it is interesting to note the safeguards taken by the distributors to insure themselves of their share of the box office receipts in the event of percentage bookings.

The word of the theatre owner as to how much money he takes in during the run of a film booked on percentage is not sufficient. The distributor reserves the right to send in checkers.

No one can object to reasonable precautions of this kind. Business is business. You remember the old poker player who used say: “Of course, boys, we’re all honest but let’s cut the cards before each deal.”

In buying advertising in motion picture trade papers, similar precautions could easily be taken. It is not necessary to take the word of a publisher or an advertising salesman for how much circulation is purchased.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations stands ready to act as a checker for every distributor buying trade paper advertising. Its service is at the disposal of any reputable publisher. Why not let the A. B. C. cut the cards before each deal?

There is no substitute for Circulation!

Conference Results

ANOTHER long stride along the constructive way of conference and negotiations in the motion picture industry was taken in connection with the contract conference which concluded its sessions in Chicago last week.

After a long and difficult meeting a contract form was arrived at which the various principals concerned pronounce as "satisfactory."

This is a development which cannot but have a sound and beneficial effect upon both the immediate and the future prosperity of the business. The rental contract form is a thing of most basic importance. Unless it is reasonably equitable to both renter and exhibitor there can be no good will or content existing anywhere in the business. Disagreements in the past over contractual stipulations have led to more friction and general trouble than have been brought about by any other causes.

If real progress has been made in affording a rental form which will be commonly acceptable to both exhibitor and distributor—and this is the promise of the conference—then this industry has been helped to better days in an unqualified manner.

One of the most significant comments on the result of the conference was made by a member of the unaffiliated exhibitors' group. It is this group, of course, which under existing conditions in the business stands in greatest need of the sort of protection and concession that might be yielded by a new contract form.

A spokesman for this group, at the conclusion of the conference, said that he considered the new form "a pretty thoroughly satisfactory one."

If any group had come out of the conference declaring that they had obtained everything that they sought, this might have been very pleasing momentarily to the particular group concerned, but it would not have augured well for the permanence of the new form. Difficult problems such as those involved in a motion picture rental contract form can only be advanced toward a sound and permanent solution by means of concessions and adjustments on the part of all concerned.

The official statement of the joint committee says:

"The new contract is believed to be a vast improvement over its predecessor, giving promise of doing away with many sources of discontent in the moving picture business."

This statement is forceful and conclusive in itself and it is given added emphasis by the names which are signed to it. The signatories include qualified representatives of the distribution branch of the industry, together with representatives of all of the various types of exhibition interests. If these men say that the new contract is "a vast improvement"—then it must amount to this and nothing else.

Despite the testimony of these men there will be sharpshooters in the business, or in some way identified with the business, who will seize upon the results of the conference as a means toward perpetuating strife and dissension. Unfortunately, there is no escape from this. But those who are willing to think sanely about their own interests in the business and the interests of the industry at large will do well to consider first the natural difficulties involved in drafting such a contract as this and, secondly, to consider the opinions expressed by the qualified representatives who were looking after their particular interests in the conference.

The official statement of the joint committee was concurred in by the following: Messrs. Ben Berenstein, H. M. Richey, H. A. Cole, R. R. Biechele and Nathan Yamins, for the unaffiliated exhibitors; and Messrs. R. H. Cochrane, Felix Feist, Ned Depinet and Gabriel L. Hess for the distributors.

These men are entitled to the gratitude of the whole industry for the very valuable and constructive service they have performed.

The work of the conference also included adjustment of certain of the rules of arbitration. This, while a secondary work of the conference, is nevertheless one of prime importance. The perfecting of the machinery and the operation of the arbitration boards is an important work, of real saving and benefit to the business.

Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy

ADDITIONAL evidence of the widening influence of Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy in the motion picture industry is seen in the recent announcement that he has become associated in an advisory capacity with Pathe Exchange, Inc.

The swift and certain progress of Mr. Kennedy, and the interests with which he is associated, should be a matter of no surprise. In entering the motion picture business only a little more than two years ago, he brought to his new connection a keen and experienced intellect, together with a personality that was bound to count importantly in this business of personalities. At no time since this industry attained its present proportions has any executive come into it from another field of activity and so quickly introduced himself into a position of industry-wide influence and respect as has Mr. Kennedy.

The industry is fortunate in having won the interest and association of Mr. Kennedy. His influence thus far has been wholesome and constructive and those who know him and his record best are convinced that he will continue to figure more importantly in the industry.

The Kentucky Tax

THE amusement business in Kentucky is faced with an extraordinary piece of legislation which seems to have been born out of a rash promise made in the heat of a political campaign to furnish free school books to children.

Free school books represent a popular issue and the amusement business is a popular target, so the outcome is a proposal that a 10 per cent tax on admissions be levied to provide funds for the purchase of the school books.

This proposed legislation is of course unreasonable and unsound, but these characteristics, unfortunately, do not necessarily mean the defeat of a proposal in taxation.

This measure must be vigorously opposed, and the amusement interests in Kentucky should be given every possible help by the amusement business generally.

$337,500 Damages Against Paramount Awarded in Dallas

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

DALLAS, Feb. 28.—A decision which exhibitors expect to have a far-reaching effect was reached here last week when a jury in district court awarded $337,500 in damages to Ray Stinnett and Si Charninsky.

The exhibitors, in suit brought against Paramount, Publix, the Dallas Building and Realty Corporation and several others, had charged that under an alleged combination in violation of the Texas anti-trust laws the defendants had prevented them from buying first-run pictures, thereby forcing them to sell their theatres at a loss. Stinnett & Charninsky were former owners of the Capitol theatre in Dallas.

The defendants have announced they will appeal to the fifth civil court of appeals.

Mediator Ends Strike in Schenectady After Picketing of 5 Houses

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

SCHENECTADY, Feb. 28.—Patrick M. Downey, a mediator in the New York State Labor department, was successful in terminating a strike instituted by the ushers, doormen and cleaners to the number of 65 employed in five theatres operated by the Farash corporation in Schenectady. The strike was called last Wednesday on the grounds that William Shirley, general manager of the theatres, had cut the pay below that demanded by the union, and that he had discharged a number of cleaning women without provocation. Following the walk out, picketing was immediately started in front of all Farash houses. The situation became worse by Thursday, when the Trades Assembly in Schenectady voted its moral support to the strikers.

At a conference between representatives of the union and Shirley during the latter part of the week, a settlement was effected. It is understood that Shirley agreed to meet the requests made by the union.

Theatre, Open 3 Weeks, Burns; Loss Is $80,000

LEBANON, MO., Feb. 28.—The Lyric Motion Picture theatre, owned and operated by L. L. Lewis and completed but three weeks ago was among a number of business houses destroyed by a fire which swept the business district of Lebanon, Mo., on February 22. The total loss from the blaze was estimated at $80,000.

Adds Anti-Censor Bill

(Special to Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World)

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Although there is already one censorship repeal bill in the New York Legislature, Philip Kleinfeld introduced another, which calls for abolishment of the present censorship bureau on July 1, and the transfer of existing records to the secretary of state.

Instrument 30 Per Cent Longer Than Present One Concessions to Exhibitors Include Changes in Exclusion Privileges and New Rules on Prints

"Exhibitors Herald and Moving Picture World" this week publishes the text of the new Standard Exhibition Contract and the Rules of Arbitration drafted by the joint contract committee during its three weeks' deliberations in Chicago.

30 Per Cent Longer Than Old Instrument

Redrafting of the contract was completed one week ago.

The text of the new contract, which is published on the following pages, runs about 30 per cent longer than the text of the standard instrument now in use.

While a number of exhibitors who were in Chicago at the beginning of the committee sessions had hopes of a shorter contract, those hopes were abandoned after they had read the scores of suggestions for changes which had been received from theatre men.

Concessions Made to Exhibitors

In publishing the new contract, the Herald-World prints in black face type those words, phrases and clauses which make the new contract different from the one it supersedes.

A reading of the instrument will disclose the concessions made by the distributors in favor of the exhibitors.

Articles 20 and 21 of the redrafted contract represent one concession to the exhibitors and were included in the redraft in accordance with the decision of the Trade Practice conference. Article 20 grants to the exhibitor the right, in group booking, "to exclude from this contract up to but not exceeding 10 per cent of the total number of such photoplays." Written notice of such exclusion must be given and the exhibitor must pay 50 per cent of the rental fee, this to be redeemed when and if the picture is licensed for "the same run."

Through Article 21 both the exhibitor and the distributor are given the right to exclude pictures considered racially or religiously offensive. In the case of the exhibitor, a Board of Arbitration must decide the justification of the request for exclusion.

In the instructions to salesmen, which must be printed on the contract, provision is made for the discharge of a salesman for "violation of this direction," which prohibits sales effort directed toward a competing exhibitor before a contract has been rejected.

Under the new contract an exhibitor is not required to accept a picture in which the specified star, director or story has been changed. The distributor, however, reserves the right to change title and alter story.

The approved additional clauses to the contract specify that re-issues shall not be included in a block of pictures, nor shall a group of feature pictures include short features and news reels.

Roadshowing Limited

Regarding the roadshowing of pictures, the distributor is granted the right so to present not more than two such features, and the contract makes it mandatory to charge not less than $1 for the majority of the orchestra seats. Should a picture be withdrawn for roadshowing the exhibitor has the privilege to exclude "from this license one of the other photoplays licensed hereunder."

The contract specifies that the distributor must deliver to a carrier the print of a picture in time so that, in accordance with the schedule of the carrier, the print will be delivered at least an hour before the usual time for the opening of the theatre.

Prints Must Be "Suitable"

Prints, according to the terms of the contract, must "be suitable for exhibition."

Protection granted to a theatre at the time of signing the contract must remain in force during the life of the contract, even though a new theatre may open in the protected locality.

In the old contract in Article 1 it was specified that the Standard Exhibition Contract had been filed with the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America. In the new contract, in the "Warranty as to Form" clause, the American Arbitration Association supplants the Hays organization. Likewise, the Arbitration Association may determine tax payments to be made under the provisions of Article 14.

Concessions on Prints

News reels are excepted from the provisions governing the cutting of a picture by the exhibitor. As formerly, authorization from the distributor must be obtained in writing or by telegram.

Regarding the damaging of prints, the new contract makes this concession: a print "shall be deemed to have been so damaged or destroyed by the exhibitor unless the latter, prior to the second public exhibition thereof, shall have telegraphed the distributor's exchange that such print was received in a damaged condition."

Instead of making it mandatory that an exhibitor make a refund of 4 cents for every foot of film damaged or destroyed, the new contract specifies that this payment must "be equal to the cost of replacement at the distributor's exchange for each linear foot."

The exhibitor cannot be held liable for prints damaged in transit "provided the exhibitor establishes such damage or destruction" occurred while in transit.

New Protection Specification

In the present contract the distributor is protected in the delay in the delivery of pictures by reason of the elements, accidents, acts of God, etc. The new contract adds, "or of the United States postal authorities."

STANDARD EXHIBITION CONTRACT AGREEMENT, made in one or more counterparts between

..... a corporation (hereinafter referred to as "the Distributor"), party of the first part, and the Exhibitor herein, after named and referred to as the "Exhibitor," operating the theatre or theatres hereinafter designated, party of the second part.

WITNESSETH:

The parties hereto agree as follows:

FIRST: The Distributor warrants that there is contained herein all of the numbered Articles of the "Standard Exhibition Contract" agreed upon by the Contract Committee appointed at the 1927 Motion Picture Trade Practice Conference (an authenticated copy of which has been filed with the American Arbitration Association). The Distributor also warrants that any clauses in addition thereto appearing upon the Schedule have been approved by such Contract Committee, and that any additional clauses appearing upon a Rider, if any hereto annexed, are not inconsistent with any of such numbered Articles. It is agreed that any clauses contained in such Rider shall be of no effect unless such Rider be signed by the Exhibitor. It is agreed that any agreement contained in the Schedule covering or describing what photoplays are licensed hereunder and in respect of any license fee, exhibition dates and any provision permitted by the provisions of the numbered Articles hereof shall not be deemed an additional clause for the purpose of this Article.

SECOND: (a) The Distributor hereby grants to the Exhibitor, and the latter accepts, a license under the respective copyrights of the several photoplays designated and described in the Schedule herein subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter stated to exhibit (during the period of one year commencing with the date fixed or determined as hereinafter provided for the exhibition in the theatre hereinafter designated of the first photoplay deliverable hereunder, unless otherwise in the Schedule provided) each of such photoplays at the said theatre only for the number of successive days in the said Schedule provided. If more than one theatre is hereinafter designated no photoplay is licensed hereunder for exhibition at more than one of such theatres unless otherwise specifically agreed upon in the Schedule.

In case any of such photoplays (except photoplays which shall be "roadshown") shall not be "generally released" by the Distributor for distribution in the United States during the period beginning and ending , such photoplays shall be excepted and excluded from this license unless the Exhibitor shall give written notice to the Distributor not later than thirty days after such last mentioned date that the Exhibitor elects to exhibit all of such photoplays hereunder. If such notice be given the Distributor shall deliver and the Exhibitor shall exhibit such photoplays as and when available for exhibition hereunder, except that any of such photoplays not so "generally released" within two years after such last mentioned date shall be also excepted and excluded. The Distributor may exhibit or license the exhibition of any photoplays excepted and excluded as aforesaid when and where desired by the Distributor, and all claims or causes of action in respect thereof are hereby expressly waived by the Exhibitor.

THIRD: The Exhibitor agrees to exhibit under said license said photoplays, but only at the theatre hereinafter specified, on the exhibition date or dates fixed in the Schedule or determined as hereinafter provided, and not to allow any positive print thereof to leave the Exhibitor's possession during the period specified for the exhibition thereof by the Exhibitor, nor to exhibit or to permit the exhibition of any such positive print at any other time or place. Such license shall be specifically for such exhibition of such photoplays, and for no other purpose.

FOURTH: The Exhibitor agrees to pay for such license as to each of such photoplays the fixed sums herein specified at least three (3) days in advance of the date of shipment from the Distributor's Exchange or from the last previous exhibitor of the positive print thereof.

FIFTH: Payment, if any, made upon the execution hereof by the Exhibitor shall be deemed payment on account of the sums last payable hereunder.

(Note: The foregoing, or Fifth Clause, appeared as the Sixth Clause in the contract which this supersedes.)

SIXTH: During the life of this contract the Distributor agrees not to exhibit or license the exhibition of any such photoplays in conflict with the "run" or "protection period," if any, in the Schedule specified. Unless otherwise provided herein, such "protection period" shall be computed from the last date of exhibition of each photoplay as fixed herein. If "protection" is granted hereunder against a specified theatre or theatres which "protection" shall indicate that it was the intention of the Distributor to grant such "protection" against all of the theatres in the immediate neighborhood or vicinity of the Exhibitor's theatre, then, unless otherwise provided in the Schedule, such "protection" shall be deemed to apply to and include any theatre that may hereafter be opened in such neighborhood or vicinity.

SEVENTH: The Distributor agrees to deliver to the Exhibitor during the period specified in Article Second hereof or otherwise in the Schedule provided for a positive print suitable for exhibition of each of such photoplays for exhibition at the said theatre on the dates specified or on the dates determined as herein provided. Delivery of such positive prints by the Distributor to the Exhibitor at the Distributor's exchange or to a common carrier or to the United States postal authorities for mailing or to any agent of the Exhibitor shall be deemed delivery by the Distributor to the Exhibitor hereunder.

All deliveries other than at the Distributor's exchange shall be made in time to enable the carrier thereof in accordance with the carrier's time schedule to deliver to the Exhibitor or at the place where the Exhibitor's theatre is located prints at least one hour before the usual time for the opening of the Exhibitor's Theatre.

The Exhibitor agrees to return each positive print received by the Exhibitor hereunder, with the reels and containers furnished therewith, to the exchange of the Distributor from which the Exhibitor is served or as otherwise directed by the Distributor immediately after the last exhibition of such positive print, in the same condition as when received by the Exhibitor, reasonable wear and tear due to the proper use thereof excepted. The Exhibitor agrees to pay all costs of transportation of such positive prints, reels and containers from the Distributor's exchange or the last previous exhibitor having possession of any of such positive prints (as the case may be) and return to the Distributor's exchange; or if directed by the Distributor, to ship such positive prints elsewhere than to the Distributor's exchange transportation charges collect. It is agreed that the delivery of a positive print properly directed and packed in the container furnished by the Distributor therefor, to a carrier designated or used by the Distributor and proper receipt therefor obtained by the Exhibitor, shall constitute the return of such positive print by the Exhibitor.

If the Exhibitor fails to or delays the return of any positive print to the Distributor or fails to forward or delays forwarding (as directed by the Distributor) any such print to any other exhibitor the Exhibitor agrees to pay the Distributor the damage, if any, so caused the Distributor and in addition the damage, if any, so caused such other exhibitor as shall be determined by Arbitration as provided for in Article Eighteenth hereof.

EIGHTH: The exhibition date or dates of each photoplay, unless definitely specified or otherwise provided for in the Schedule, or otherwise agreed upon, shall be determined as follows:

1. The Distributor shall mail to the Exhibitor at least fifteen days' notice in writing of the date upon which each photoplay will be available for exhibition by the Exhibitor, consistent with prior runs and/or protection heretofore or hereafter granted to other exhibitors (which date is hereinafter referred to as "the available date"). Such notice shall be of no effect unless prints of such photoplay are in the exchange of the Distributor from which the Exhibitor is served.

2. Within fourteen days after the mailing of such notice, the Exhibitor shall select an exhibition date or dates within a thirty day period commencing with such available date, by giving written notice to the Distributor of the date, or dates, so selected.

If the exhibition date or dates so selected by the exhibitor are not open for the Exhibitor, then the exhibition date or dates shall be designated as provided in the following paragraphs "A" and "B":

(A). If other dates within said thirty day period are open the Exhibitor shall immediately select from such other open dates another date or other dates; failing to do so, then the Distributor shall designate the date or dates which shall be within a period not earlier than two weeks nor later than six weeks from the date first selected by the Exhibitor, by mailing fourteen days' notice thereof to the Exhibitor.

(B). If no other date or dates within said thirty day period are open (after the Exhibitor's written request therefor) then the Exhibitor shall designate the date or dates which shall be within a period not earlier than two, nor later than six weeks from the last date of the said thirty day period, by immediately giving written notice thereof to the Distributor. If the Exhibitor fails to immediately designate such date or dates, as provided in this paragraph "B", the Distributor shall designate the date or dates within the same period by mailing to the Exhibitor fourteen days' notice of such date or dates.

If the Exhibitor fails to make any selection within fourteen days after the mailing of the available dates of any photoplay, then the Distributor may at any time designate the exhibition date or dates thereof, which date or dates shall not be prior to the available date, by mailing notice thereof at least fourteen days before such exhibition date or dates; and if any such photoplay shall have been exhibited by any other exhibitor having a "run" prior in point of time and immediately preceding the "run" specified in the Schedule granted to the Exhibitor, then the Distributor shall designate the exhibition date or dates thereof, which shall be within a period of forty-five days commencing with the available date. In case the exhibition date or dates of any of the photoplays shall be designated by the Distributor pursuant to this paragraph, "the period of protection," if any, specified in the schedule, shall begin upon the fifteenth (15th) day of the thirty-day period specified in paragraph 2 of this Article.

3. The exhibition date or dates of any of the photoplays selected by the Exhibitor (if available), or designated as in this Article Eighth provided, or otherwise agreed upon between the Distributor and the Exhibitor, shall be for all purposes the exhibition date or dates of such photoplay as though definitely specified in the Schedule.

4. In case this contract embraces a series of feature photoplays, five reels or more in length and featuring a particular star or director, the Exhibitor shall not be required hereunder to exhibit more than one photoplay of any such series every five weeks.

NINTH: The Exhibitor shall pay to the Distributor a sum equal to the cost of replacement at the Distributor's exchange for each linear foot of any positive print lost, stolen or destroyed or injured in any way in the interval between the delivery thereof by the Distributor and the return thereof by the Exhibitor in full settlement of all claims for such loss, theft, destruction or injury. Such payment, however, shall not transfer title to or any interest in any such positive print to the Exhibitor or any other party, nor release the Exhibitor from liability arising out of any breach of this contract. The Distributor shall at the option of the Exhibitor repay or credit to the Exhibitor any sums paid by the latter for lost or stolen prints, excepting "news reels," upon their return to the Distributor within sixty (60) days after the date when the same should have been returned hereunder. The Exhibitor shall not be liable for the damage or destruction of any positive print, provided the Exhibitor establishes such damage or destruction occurred while in transit from the Exhibitor. The Exhibitor shall immediately notify the Distributor's exchange by telegram of the loss, theft or destruction of or damage or injury to any positive print. If any positive print shall be received from the Exhibitor by the Distributor or any subsequent exhibitor in a damaged or partially destroyed condition it shall be deemed to have been so damaged or destroyed by the Exhibitor unless the latter, prior to the second public exhibition thereof shall have telegraphed the Distributor's exchange that such print was received by the Exhibitor in a damaged or partially destroyed condition, and setting forth fully the nature of such damage and the amount of footage so damaged or destroyed.

(Note: The foregoing, or Ninth Clause, appeared as the Eleventh Clause in the contract which this supersedes.)

TENTH: The Exhibitor shall not be required to accept for any photoplay described in the Schedule as the photoplay of a star, or of a director, or based upon a specified story, book or play, or by an identifying description, any other photoplay of a different star or different director, or based upon a different story, book or play, or not corresponding to such identifying description, as the case may be. Nothing herein contained shall limit the right of the Distributor to change the title of any such photoplays, or, as respects any photoplay based upon any story, book or play, prevent the making of any alterations, changes in or adaptations thereof.

The Distributor warrants that none of the photoplays licensed hereunder are reissues from old negatives or old negatives renamed, except those specifically set forth as such in the Schedule.

(Note: The foregoing, or the Tenth Clause, is an amplification of the Twelfth Clause in the old contract.)

ELEVENTH: This contract shall not be assigned by either party without the written acceptance of the assignee and the written consent of the other party; provided, that if the Exhibitor sells or disposes of his interest in the theatre hereinafter specified, he may assign this contract to the purchaser of such interest without the written consent of the Distributor and such assignment shall become effective upon the written acceptance thereof by the assignee, such assignment, however, shall not relieve the Exhibitor of liability hereunder, unless the Distributor consents in writing to release the Exhibitor from such liability.

TWELFTH: The Exhibitor agrees to run photoplays (excepting "news reels") as delivered without alteration, excepting with the written or telegraphic approval of the Distributor, subject to requirements of duly authorized public authorities necessitating any change. The Exhibitor also agrees to advertise and announce each photoplay as a " " In all newspaper advertising and publicity issued by the Exhibitor relating to said photoplays the Exhibitor shall adhere to the form of announcement contained in the advertising matter issued by the Distributor.

All advertising accessories used by the Exhibitor in connection with the exhibition of said photoplays must be leased from or through the Distributor and must not be sold, leased or given away by the Exhibitor.

Unless this contract expressly provides for the "first run" in the City or Town wherein the theatre hereinafter specified is located, the Exhibitor agrees not to advertise any of the photoplays herein provided for by means of lithographs, slides, trailers, lobby displays, newspaper announcements, advertising or otherwise prior to, and until after the completion of, the exhibition of such photoplay by any other exhibitor having the right of the "first run" thereof in said City or Town.

The Distributor shall not in any wise be liable for any breach of the provisions of the immediately preceding paragraph contained in any other "Standard Exhibition Contract" with any other exhibitor.

THIRTEENTH: The Distributor warrants that the photoplays herein provided for will not contain any advertising matter for which compensation is received by the Distributor.

FOURTEENTH: The Exhibitor agrees to pay to the Distributor upon demand any tax, fee or other like charge now and/or hereafter imposed or based upon the delivery and/or the exhibition of positive prints of the photoplays and/or upon the sums payable under this contract by the Exhibitor to the Distributor. If under any statute or ordinance any such tax, fee or other like charge is or shall be payable or paid by the Distributor and the exact amount payable hereunder by the Exhibitor is not therein definitely fixed or cannot be exactly determined then the Exhibitor agrees to pay such part of any such tax, fee or other like charge, paid or payable by the Distributor as shall be fixed in the manner determined by the then President of the American Arbitration Association.

FIFTEENTH: The Exhibitor warrants and agrees that during the period each of the photoplays herein provided for shall be exhibited in said theatre the Exhibitor will charge for admission to said theatre an actual admission fee which shall not be less than ten cents, unless a greater minimum admission charge is herein elsewhere specified, for each exhibition and that such photoplays shall not be exhibited unless such admission fee is charged.

SIXTEENTH: In case the Exhibitor shall be delayed in or prevented from the performance of this contract with respect to any of the photoplays herein specified by reason of censor rulings, the elements, accidents, strikes, fire, insurrection, acts of God, the public enemy, public calamity or order of any Court of competent jurisdiction, then such delay or failure of performance with respect to such photoplay shall be excused and all claims or causes of action for damages therefor, or arising therefrom, are hereby expressly waived by the Distributor. In any such event, the time of the Exhibitor to perform this contract with respect to any such photoplay shall be extended for a period equal to the time of such delay, unless performance thereof because of the happening of any such cause or contingency is rendered impossible, in which case performance by the Exhibitor with respect to any such photoplay shall be waived. The resumption of performance by the Exhibitor shall begin promptly after the removal or abatement of the contingencies or causes of such disability or prevention of performance, provided, that if such delay and/or prevention of performance, caused as aforesaid, shall continue for a period of three (3) months either party hereto may cancel this contract, but only with respect to any such photoplay the exhibition hereunder of which has been so delayed or prevented, by sending after the expiration of such three (3) months' period to the other party notice in writing to such effect.

In case the Distributor shall be delayed in or prevented from the performance of this contract with respect to any of the photoplays herein specified by reason of the elements, accidents, strikes, fire, insurrection, acts of God, the public enemy, public calamity, Court orders, censor rulings, delays of any common carrier, or of the United States Postal authorities, delays in production or failure of the producers of any of such photoplays to make or deliver them to the Distributor or of any star or other performer to appear therein in time for delivery as herein provided, then such delay in or prevention of performance shall be excused and all claims or causes of action for damages therefor or arising therefrom are hereby expressly waived by the Exhibitor. In any such event, the time of the Distributor to perform this contract with respect to any such photoplay shall be extended for a period equal to the time of such delay, provided, however, that in case any such delay or prevention shall prevent the Distributor from "generally releasing" any such photoplay during the period specified in paragraph (b) of Article Second, the provisions of such paragraph shall govern, unless performance because of the happening of any such cause or contingency is rendered impossible, in which case performance by the Distributor with respect to any such photoplay shall be waived. The resumption of performance by the Distributor shall begin promptly after the removal or abatement of the contingencies or causes of such disability or prevention of performance and the Distributor shall deliver to the Exhibitor any such photoplay at the earliest available date thereafter, and such delivery in any such case shall be with the same force and effect as though delivery took place within the period herein above limited and the Exhibitor agrees to accept, pay for and exhibit any such photoplay at such later period pursuant to the terms hereof.

SEVENTEENTH: The waiver by either party of any breach or default by the other party shall not be construed as a waiver of any other or subsequent breach or default by such other party.

EIGHTEENTH: The parties hereto agree that before either of them shall resort to any court to determine, enforce or protect the legal rights of either hereunder, each shall submit to the Board of Arbitration (established or constituted pursuant to the Rules of Arbitration filed with the American Arbitration Association, 342 Madison Avenue, New York City, bearing date May 1, 1928 and identified by the signatures of the Contract Committee appointed at the 1927 Motion Picture Trade Practice Conference, a copy of which will be furnished to the Exhibitor upon request) in the city wherein is situated the exchange of the Distributor from which the Exhibitor is served or if there be no such Board of Arbitration in such city then to the Board of Arbitration in the city nearest thereto (unless the parties hereto agree in writing that such submission shall be made to a Board of Arbitration located in another specified city), all claims and controversies arising hereunder for determination pursuant to the said Rules of Arbitration and the rules of procedure and practice adopted by such Board of Arbitration.

The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision and award of such Board of Arbitration in any such arbitration proceeding, and agree and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the laws of such jurisdiction now or hereafter in force; and each party hereto hereby waives the right of trial by jury upon any issue arising under this contract, and agrees to accept as conclusive the findings of fact made by any such Board of Arbitration, and consents to the introduction of such findings in evidence in any judicial proceeding.

In the event that the Exhibitor shall fail or refuse to consent to submit to arbitration any claim or controversy arising under this or any other Standard Exhibition Contract which the Exhibitor may have with the Distributor or any other distributor or to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such Board of Arbitration upon any such claim or controversy so submitted, the Distributor may, at its option, demand, for its protection and as security for the performance by the Exhibitor of this and all other existing contracts between the parties hereto, payment by the Exhibitor of an additional sum not exceeding $500 under each existing contract, such sum to be retained by the Distributor until the complete performance of all such contracts and then applied, at the option of the Distributor, against any sums finally due or against any damages determined by said Board of Arbitration to be due to the Distributor; the balance, if any, to be returned to the Exhibitor; and in the event of the Exhibitor's failure to pay such additional sum within seven (7) days after demand, the Distributor may by written notice to the Exhibitor suspend service hereunder until said sum shall be paid and/or terminate this contract.

In the event that the Distributor shall fail or refuse to consent to the submission to arbitration of any claim or controversy arising under this or any other Standard Exhibition Contract providing for arbitration which the Distributor may have with the Exhibitor, or to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such Board of Arbitration upon any such claim or controversy so submitted, within the number of days specified in Article Twenty-Second opposite the name of the City in which such Board of Arbitration is located, the Exhibitor may at his option
