No: a thousand times, no. The king of Holland is preparing for war! the Dutch forces are approaching the Belgian frontiers! It is re-ported that the Dutch army was to hold itself in readiness to attack Belgium on the 1st of April. The Belgian government is apprised of these facts, and is take tion is then as far removed from a settlement as ever and the London Conference has been unable to arrest the warlike propensities and intentions of the Dutch monarch. How instructive is this! The revolution Belgium, if it had not been arrested by the London conference, or the modern conference, or the modern holy alliance, would long ago have been terminated by an union of Belgium to France; by the happiness of the millions, and by the satisfaction of the people. It would have accomplished its object, and at least this portion of Europe would have been permanently settled. But the reverse is the case.
