Vorwort.

Das vorliegende deutsch-englische Wörterbuch verdankt die Hauptelemente seines Bestandes neben den lexicalischen Sammlungen, welche in ihren Anfängen bereits von Dr. J. G. Flügel, dem Vater des Verfassers, sowie vom Verfasser selbst angelegt worden waren und zu großem Theile den deutsch-englischen Wörterbüchern von Dr. A. W. Meißner (Vol. II der 3. Aufl. von Dr. J. G. Flügel's Complete Dictionary), sowie dem 2. Theile von Dr. Felix Flügel's Practical Dictionary als erste Grundlage dienten, einer Reihe von Werken, welche theils in den Vorreden zu den ebengenannten deutsch-englischen Wörterbüchern aufgezählt werden, theils weiter unten zu nennen sind. Die erwähnten Sammlungen* sind seit dem Abschlusse jener Werke vom Verfasser stetig bis zum Jahre 1878 fortgeführt worden und, soweit es der leider sehr beschränkte Raum zuließ, von einem langjährigen lieben Freunde des Verfassers, dem Prof. Felix Liebrecht in Vütlich, mit großem Zeitopfer und Hintanziehung eigener wichtiger Arbeiten diesem deutsch-englischen Theile einverleibt worden; seine genaue Kenntniß der Feinheiten der englischen Sprache befähigte ihn ganz besonders zu dieser Aufgabe, für deren Durchführung (welche ihren Abschluß in dem genannten Jahre erreichte) ihm aufrichtigster Dank zu zollen ist. Diese Vorarbeit wurde vom Verfasser aufs genaueste geprüft, durchgearbeitet und vervollständigt. Benutzt wurden außerdem, obwol in geringerem Maße, der deutsch-englische Theil des Wörterbuches von Hilpert, sowie der des Lucas. Das Werk des Hilpert oder vielmehr seiner fleißigen Fortsetzer (ich spreche hier immer nur vom II., deutsch-englischen Theile) erschien erst 1845, zwölf Jahre nach Hilpert's Tode, und ist ausgezeichnet in seiner Art, noch vielfach brauchbar, wenn auch von der Zeit in manchen Punkten überholt. Der bereits 1843 als grober Plagiarius überführte Grieb ist nicht auf eine Linie mit dem von ihm ausgeschriebenen Hilpert zu stellen. — Was die Benutzung des Lucas'schen Werkes anlangt, so ist dieselbe stets in den Grenzen des litterarischen Anstandes geblieben, welche umgekehrt Lucas selbst bei der vielfach buchstäblichen Ausschreiberei der beiden oben zuerst genannten Werke nicht einzuhalten verstanden hat; ein Umstand, welchen niemand ahnen kann, der bloß seine Vorrede liest, und welchen auch die sogenannte Kritik in den langen Jahren seit Erscheinen des Lucas'schen Werkes nicht bemerkt oder beachtet hat. Wie beim I. (englisch-deutschen) Theile hat Lucas einige Werke ohne jede Nennung der Namen

* Der Hauptsache nach vom Verf. des vorliegenden Buches gemacht; dieselben beziehen sich natürlich in beschränkterem Maße auf die älteren großen Namen der deutschen Litteratur, welche ja in den unten zu nennenden Hauptwerken der deutschen Lexicographie die erste Stelle einnehmen; daher Anführungen aus Luther, Schiller, Göthe zc. zumeist (nicht anerkennungslos) aus diesen lexicalischen Werken entlehnt sind; der Verf. fußt jedoch nicht allein auf diesen Wörterbüchern, sondern hatte Anlaß zu einer bescheidenen Nachlese, welche sich auf die eben genannten Namen, sowie namentlich auf eine Auswahl aus den Werken folgender Schriftsteller bezieht: Hagedorn, Kleist, Gellert, Gleim, Klopstock, Lessing, Wieland, Jean Paul, Schubart, Claudius, Hölty, Voß, Salis, Matthiesson, Seume, Körner, Eichendorff, Arndt, Chamisso, Uhland, Rückert, H. Heine, Lenau, S. Moser, Freiligrath, Geibel, Herwegh, Hartmann, G. Freytag, Auerbach u. s. w.

ausgenutzt: dazu gehören besonders die technologischen Werke, deren jedes allgemeine Wörterbuch allerdings nicht mehr entbehren kann, deren mühselige Arbeit aber doch wol um so mehr wenigstens Namensnennung verdient. Von diesen sind hier besonders zu erwähnen: Technologisches Wörterbuch der deutschen, französischen und englischen Sprache, von Hofrath J. A. Reil. Wiesbaden, 1853; sowie: Technisches Taschen-Wörterbuch für Industrie und Handel, 1. Theil (deutsch-englisch-französisch), Wiesbaden, 1873 (bildet einen Auszug aus der 2. Auflage des Reil'schen Werkes); ferner: Dr. Tolhausen 2c., Technologisches Wörterbuch in deutscher, französischer und englischer Sprache. Paris, 1855 (2. Aufl. Leipzig, 1874/75), ein sehr umfassendes, treffliches Werk; Dr. Carl Hartmann, Handwörterbuch der Berg-, Hütten- und Salzwerkskunde, 3. Aufl. Weimar, 1860; Dr. J. G. Flügel, Kaufmännisches Wörterbuch in drei Sprachen, 2. Theil (deutsch-englisch-französisch), 2. Aufl. bearbeitet von Dr. Felix Flügel. Leipzig, 1853; Deutsch-englisches Handels-correspondenz-Lexicon von Friedrich Noback und Thomas John Graham. Leipzig, 1865, ein besonders Kaufleuten sehr zu empfehlendes, mit großer Umsicht und Genauigkeit gearbeitetes Werkchen, welches ausgiebig zu benutzen der Verfasser um so weniger Anstand genommen hat, als er wiederholt nur seine eigenen Beiträge entlehnt hat; von Pierer's bekanntem Universal-Lexicon wurden die neueren Auflagen benutzt; in geringerem Maße wurde Meyer's Conversations-Lexicon und eine Anzahl anderer Werke zu Rathe gezogen.

Daß von deutschen Wörterbüchern Grimm's Nationalwerk, soweit es erschienen war, sowie Meigand's treffliches Wörterbuch benutzt worden ist, wird Jedermann voraussetzen; sie sind oft genug im Werke selbst angeführt. Auch ist hier das einzige Buch, dessen Benutzung Lucas ausdrücklich erwähnt, als beständiger practischer und zuverlässiger Rathgeber zu nennen: Sanders' deutsches Wörterbuch, ein Werk außerordentlichen Fleißes und ein fast unerschöpflicher Schatz von Belegen aus der neueren und neuesten Zeit, aus welchen oft überraschende Belehrung in grammatischen und anderen Beziehungen fließt.

Was ein noch mannigfach im Argen liegendes Gebiet aller neueren Lexicographie anlangt, nämlich die naturhistorischen und medicinischen Ausdrücke, so muß ich besonders des thätigen Antheiles dankbar eingedenk sein, welchen mein ältester Sohn, Alfred Flügel (Dr. med., † als Arzt zu Siebenlehn 22. Jan. 1890), an der oft sehr mühseligen Prüfung und Zusammentragung dieser Ausdrücke, sowie namentlich an der Berichtigung mancher alten Irrthümer genommen hat, welche in den Wörterbüchern ihr Wesen treiben und aus einem Werke in das andere sich fortpflanzen.

Zum Schlusse dieses kurzen Vorwortes muß der Verfasser noch ganz besonders der außerordentlichen Mühe und Sorgfalt des Herrn Dr. Friedrich Wilbrandt (jetzt zu Doberan in Mecklenburg) gedenken, welche dieser feinsinnige Sprachgelehrte auf die Correctur dieses Theiles verwendet hat, häufig nicht bloß Correctur im gewöhnlichen Sinne, sondern Berichtigung mannigfacher Versehen des Inhaltes, welchen ein so umfangreiches Werk schwer entgeht. Seinen unermüdlischen Winken und Rathschlägen ist der Verfasser den größten Dank schuldig; eine so der Sache dienende aufopfernde Thätigkeit gehört bestimmt zu den seltenen Erscheinungen.

Endlich ist es ebenfalls Pflicht der Dankbarkeit, der aufmerksamen und sorgfältigen Art und Weise zu gedenken, mit welcher eine zweite Correctur des größten Theiles dieses deutsch-englischen Wörterbuches von Mrs. Fisher-Burke, früher in Leipzig, gegenwärtig in ihr Heimatland zurückgekehrt, besorgt worden ist; auch ihr verdankt das Werk manche kleine, aber doch wertvolle Berichtigung.

Leipzig, August 1891.

Marks of Pronunciation.

- over vowels, denotes the long sound, f. i. Ad'ler, Lad'ler, Art, Ab'art (cf. Adria'tisch, Hart, Standa'r'te, Fe'n'chen (cf. Gen'de), Ad'il' (cf. Dil'le), Ton (cf. Ton'ne), Küf (cf. Kus'fen), Äpf'l' (cf. Äpf'l'che), Bär'tig (cf. Bär'tlich), Behär'de (cf. Bär'dern), Büb'chen (cf. Büb'isch). As all the vowels immediately followed by the accent, are long, it is unnecessary to place this sign of length over them; compare, for instance, Ga'be, Re'de, Ad'le, Mo'deln, Ru'fen, Wä'gen, D'ien, Güt'ig, with Ab'gabe, Au'tede, Ad'il', Ab'middeln, Ab'rufen, Ab'wägen, Ab'öfen, Au'gütig. A syllable terminated by an accented consonant, is always short (Au'ders, Et'was, = ä'n'..., ä'l'... etc.), only excepting the consonant h, which serves to lengthen the preceding vowel: Ah'le, Meh'ten, Zhr, Dhr, Uhr = äh, mähren, ih, öh, ür.

~ over vowels, denotes the short sound; it is generally placed over such vowels which might be expected to have the long sound, compare f. i. the derivatives Nüt'bar, Höch'zeit, Bär'theil, with Nüt, Höch, Bär.

.. 1) over the vowel e, always marks the broad pronunciation, which is equal to ä; compare f. i. Föder, Föder, Ne'gen (s.) with Edel, Re'gen, Ne'gen (v.). It is, however, to be remarked, that this e is not uniformly pronounced with the same sound in the different parts of Germany; the pronunciation given in this work is that of middle Germany. Here it may be remarked that ä (ae), ö (oe), ü (ue) have not been considered as equivalent to ä (ä), ö (ö), ü (ü), in this work, although they are often erroneously held to be so; thus ae etc. in such words as äcetes, äocines, äcongruent are always to be pronounced separately. — 2) over the vowel i before an e, used as points of diæresis, to denote that these vowels are not to be pronounced as a diphthong, but separately, f. i. In'dien (pron. In'dien), different from Dien (äen); this deviation from the general usage, according to which these points are placed over the e, was rendered necessary, because ä had already been chosen as a natural representative of the ä-like pronunciation of the letter e.

IV.

Signs.

- * 1) denotes a word used in poetry, or in the elevated style; 2) read horn, geboren.
- † 1) read obsolete, veraltet; 2) read died, gestorben.
- = signifies (is) equal to, (ist) gleich.

Lists of strong and irregular verbs and nouns.

Introductory Remarks. According to German grammarians verbs as well as nouns are divided into two large classes, called the strong and the weak; a third class is to be added, viz. those which for some reason or other do not decidedly follow either the strong or the weak conjugation or declension; they are called irregular.

Strong verbs as well as substantives are principally characterised by some change of their radical vowels, exhibited in verbs by the imperfect and participle past, in substantives by the Umlaut of the plural form; take, as examples the verb Singen (the infinitive exhibiting generally the radical vowel), imperfect: sang, participle past: gesungen (sing, sang, sung); and such substantives, as Vater, Sohn, Mutter, the plurals of which change the radical a, o, u, into ä, ö, ü: Väter, Söhne, Mütter.

While this change may be called an internal one, the weak forms embracing all the derivative verbs and nouns, are only changed by adding a termination. Thus fallen, fiel, gefallen (to fall, fell, fallen), and Mann, Männer (man, men) belong to the strong class, while their derivatives fällen, fällte, gefällt (to fell, felled, felled), and Mensch (originally an adj.: Männisch), pl. Menschen, come under the weak denomination. It is obvious that strong forms, representing the oldest class of words, as it were the marrow of the language, are only a minority, while the long series of derivational forms may be almost increased at will. In order to assist the learner, we here follow a general usage, and give a list of strong and irregular verbs, and a list of irregular substantives.

I.

All the strong verbs may, for practical purposes, be divided into the following eight classes: —

	Radical Vowel — Infinitive	Imperfect	Participle Past

II.

As a list of all the strong substantives would have to embrace many words of foreign origin, and be of considerable length, it is preferable here merely to give the distinctive marks of this as well as of the weak declension.

Nouns of the strong declension, which are recognisable by an -s terminating the genitive,* frequently take the modification of vowel in the plural, invariably so, when the plural ends in -er. This modification of vowel has been indicated in the following table by ".

Table of the terminations of the strong and weak declensions: —

Strong declension:			Weak declension:
Singular	Plural		Singular	Plural
	(first form)	(second form)
Nom. —	(⁽ⁿ⁾) e	" —er	Nom. —	—en
Gen. —(c)s	(⁽ⁿ⁾) e	" —er	Gen. —en	—en
Dat. —(e)	(⁽ⁿ⁾) en	" —eru	Dat. —en	—en
Acc. —	(⁽ⁿ⁾) e	" —er	Acc. —en	—en

Accordingly, it is only necessary for those who make use of this Dictionary to know, whether a substantive is strong (and in this case the form of the plural has always been given when modifying the radical vowel), or whether it is weak, or irregular. — The number of irregular substantives being very large and including many words derived from foreign languages (designated in the dictionary by an * preceding the word), merely a limited number of these has been given, with all the irregular words of purely German origin.

* Except in Feminines. No German feminine is declined in the singular.

Grimm and Sanders, and the word Adieu. This word "Adieu", introduced into the German, as it was into the English language, centuries ago, is, like all useless foreign terms, looked upon with unfavourable eyes in modern times, and will probably share the fate of other French words, rather senselessly adopted in bygone times, as f. i. Demotelle, Merci, Piaffe, and a flood of others, for a while assumed to be part and parcel of our language, but at present utterly rejected by educated persons, so that there is no danger, that we "will be reduced", as the great lexicographer Johnson apprehended his countrymen would be, "to babble a dialect of France". A rhyme like the following: da nahm ich von meinem Kind Ädiß | und fchwiegend blickt' es in die Höß (Göthe), has something very ridiculous in it now-a-days.

 body; alle Dinge, every thing; vor allen Dingen, before every thing, ob. all, in the first place, first of all; anj alle Fälle, by all (or any) means; alle Proteſtanten waren für ihn, alle Katholiken gegen ihn, all the Protestants

were for him, all the Catholics against him; alle
 beide, both of them (dem Engl. ganz ſtrem u. lächerlich würde ſein: all both oder all the two);
 alle drei, alle vier etc., all three, all four, &c.;
 ich glaube, ich ſenne ſie alle beide, I believe I know them both; hier ſind die kleinen Kinder, es iſt unmöglich ſie alle beide zu haſten, ſo ſtark ſind ſie, here are the babies, it's impossible to hold the two of them [Umgeſpr.], they are ſo ſtrong; er iſt ſtärker, als ihr alle
 beide zuſammen, he is ſtronger than the pair of you together [Umgeſpr.]; wir alle, all of us, we all: ihr wißt es alle, all of you know it; da ſind ſie alle! there are all of them! alle Andere war verloren, every thing was loſt; verlangen Sie alles Andere von mir, nur nicht ..., ask me for any thing else

 2) The different forms of Al always preceede the article (or other definitive adj.), followed by its substantive: alle die Bücher, alle meine Arbeit, alle unſere Familien etc., all the books, all my labour, all our families, &c., or it may follow this combination: die Bücher
 alle, meine Arbeit alle, unſere Familien alle etc., but it can never, as has been ſtated, follow the article, &c. (die alle Bücher etc.), thus coinciding with the English language.
 3) a) Besides the regularly declined forms of Allet, alle, alleß, an indeclinable form All is frequently to be found before the article,
 the poſſeſſive and demonstrative pronoun.
 all der Jammer, all mein Gold, all dieß Glück etc., all the woe, all my gold, all this happiness, &c.; all des Jammers, all dem
 Jammer etc., of all the woe, to all the woe,
 &c.; the regular inflection, however, is generally preferred (in proſe-writing) in the oblique caſes (alleß deß Jammers, allem dem Jammer etc.), in the fem., and in the plur.; b)
 instead of this All, an indeclinable Alſe is employed, in all the caſes juſt mentioned, by Luther and many of the beſt ſubſequent writers, as well as among the common people up to this day; alle ſein thun iſt wahrſeit (Luther, Dau.
 4, 34), all whose works are truth; da gebot
 Pharaoh alle ſeinem volk (Exod. 1, 22), and Pharaoh charged all his people.
 4) Alſe after the prepoſitions auf, für, in, mit, ſammt, über, zu etc. and preceding the article or a poſſeſſive pronoun, ſeems to be the remnant of an old inſtrumental caſe: daß ſie dich behüten
 auff alle deinen wegen (Luther, Ps. 91, 11),
 to keep thee in all thy ways; mit alle ſeinem Blute
 (Ez. v. Kerst), with all his blood; anß alle dem (Leſſing), from all this; mit alle dem (Gellert),
 with all that, notwithstanding; trotz alle dem,
 for all that, notwithstanding all that; mir wüß von alle dem ſo bumm, als ... (Göthe, Faſt), I feel growing ſo ſtupid with all this, as if... — If dem precedes, an inflected form of Al must neceſſarily follow: mit dem allen, or, perhaps more correctly: mit dem allem; the regularly declined forms may be used in all the caſes
 mentioned.
 5) Adjectives following all, or alle, almost invariably aſſume the weak form in preſent uſage, ſupplanting the ſtrong form used in former times: alle gutt Geiſter (Leſſing alle gute Geiſter), all good ſpirits; alle jungen Wächen (Leſſing alle junge W.),
 6) a) It is only in accordance with the notion of All, always reſpecting a plurality and employed in ſpeaking of numbers, that it ſhould
 regularly be used in the pl. (Alle); in this reſpect Alſe is without a ſingular; the latter, if called for, is expreſſed by jeder (every); thus, alle Menſchen ſind ſterblich, all men are mortal, maybe expreſſed in the ſingular number by jeder
 Menſch iſt ſterblich, every man is mortal.
 A whole claſſ of phraſes, denoting the recurrence of certain periods of time, or ſimilar divisions, may be expressed in German by employing either the Acc. (familarly the Gen.) plur. (alle) or of the sing. (jeden, jede, jedes), while the English language is confined to the sing. (every): alle (fam. aller) Augenblicke, every moment; er ist alle Augenblicke krank, he is sick every now and then; alle Tage, every day; alle drei Tage, every third day; alle Jahre, every year; alle sieben Jahre, every seven years, every seventh year; b) in a few exceptional cases, however, we find all connected with the singular of nouns, either abstract themselves, or in sentences conveying a generalized meaning; when Göthe says: und so schläft nun aller Vogel | in dem groß und kleinen Neste (4, 124), the meaning is, that sleep is the common lot of all creatures, of each and all; aller Zustand ist gut, der natürlich ist und vernünftig (Göthe), all and every condition is good, which is natural and reasonable; alles Ding, all (created) things; die Frauen alles Standes (Göthe), the women of every (conceivable) grade, condition; allen Augenblick (Göthe), very unusual for jeden Augenblick, every moment; aller Anfang ist schwer, every beginning is difficult; alle Mühe ist umsonst, all exertion is useless; alle Aufmerksamkeit vor seinem Wissen, (with) all respect for his knowledge; sie haben alle Aussicht zu gewinnen, they stand a fair chance of obtaining the prize; Einen alle Ehre erweisen, to show one every honour (due to him, &c., i. e. not to be wanting in due respect, &c.); alle unsere (or unsere ganze) Hoffnung, our whole hope; wie nur dem Kopf nicht alle Hoffnung schwindet, der ... (Göthe, Faust), how is it possible that all hope should not desert the wight, who ...; mit aller Gewalt, with full force, with might and main; er wollte mit aller Gewalt herein, he obstinately insisted on entering; in aller Eile, with all (possible) speed; ich wollte in aller Eile frühlücken, I intended to snatch a bit of breakfast; in aller Frühe (ganz in der Frühe, ganz früh), quite early, betimes; sie brachen in aller Frühe auf, they set out at a very early hour; er wurde in aller Stille begraben, he was buried very quietly; er antwortete in aller Ruhe, he answered altogether quietly; er sah dem Tode mit aller Fassung entgegen, he looked forward to death with perfect composure; ohne alle (ohne jede, or ohne alle) und jede Ursache, without any reason; ohne alle Vermunft, quite unreasonably, utterly void of reason; ohne allen Zweifel, without any doubt; auf alle Weise, in every possible way; alles Gute, everything good; der Geber alles Guten, the Giver of all good; alles Böse, everything bad, evil, &c.; der Urheber alles Bösen, the author of all evil; alle Welt: 1) (almost syn. with die ganze Welt) all the parts of the world; seine Sammlung ist leider in alle Welt zerstreut (Göthe), his collection has, I am sorry to say, been dispersed over all the world; 2) alle Welt weiß es, all the world, every body knows it; 3) colloquial phrases: in aller Welt (cf. zum Hundt &c.): was in aller Welt machst du hier? whatever are you doing (are you at) here? wo in aller Welt fuchst er jetzt? wherever is he now? ich begreife in aller Welt nicht, was das heißen soll, I am entirely at a loss how to explain this.

7) All und jeder, emphatically, all and every, all and sundry, each and all (of them, &c.), one and all; in this combination All, at least in the sing., almost invariably drops its inflection altogether, as is sometimes the case with the first of two adjectives connected by und (cf. f. i. Göthe's in dem groß und kleinen Neste); it is curious that in this combination jeder (which otherwise is without a plural) may assume the plural form: all und jede or alle und jede; es sei Allen und Jedem gesagt, es komme zu Aller und Jeder Kunde, let it be (or be it) known to each and all; er spricht bei all und jeder Gelegenheit, he speaks on every and any occasion.

8) Adverbialuse. The neuter all seems to admit of an adverbial construction a) in such combinations (mostly occurring in poetry), as all süßberzlich und nett (Bürger), all (i. e. entirely, altogether) nice and tidy; it is often placed before überall to intensify the meaning; überall, all überall, everywhere, in every place; und überall, all überall, auf Wegen und auf Stegen (Bürger, Lenoro), and everywhere, aye, everywhere | in road, and lane, and street (Baskerville); es ist all ein's (Göthe, Schiller), although equivalent to it is all one, is by no means as frequent as the English phrase; b) provinc. (Low Germ.) for Schön (which see); already; das weiß ich all, I know that already.

9) All, Alle, in the sense of at an end, finished, all gone, done, out, used up to the very last item, no more, &c. and in connection with sein, werden, machen. All in these colloquial phrases is not an adverb, but is rather used as a predicative adjective (fertig, provinc. gar &c.): der Wein ist alle, the wine is at an end, out, &c., there is no more wine; das Geld ist alle, the money is spent; alle werden, to run out, to be spent; alle machen, to finish, to do away with, to get through with ..., to exhaust, dissipate, &c.; die Augen sind alle (Göthe), the bullets are spent; nun schieß nur hin, daß es alle wird (Egmont I, 1), now, shoot away, and make an end of it, or, and have done with it.

11. s. 1) (str.) n. see the separate article.

2) pl. Alle; Alle für Einen und Einer für Alle, all and singular, collectively and individually, conjointly; nicht Alle haben dieselbe Anlage, all have not the same disposition; es hatten Alle für Einen und Einer für Alle, all are jointly and severally bound (responsible); er schaut sich, sich den Blicken Aller anzusehen, he shrinks from public gaze and exposure.

3) Alles, n. sing. a) an) everything, anything, all; bb) coll. every body; Alles ist verloren, everything (or all) is lost; er ist Allen Alles, he is all things to all men (Vgl. I. Corinth. 9, 22); wir wollen eines dem andern Alles sein, let us be everything to each other; Alles in Allem, all in all, altogether; wir sind einander Alles gewesen, we have been all to all to each other, we were all the world to each other; es waren siebenhundert in Allem, there were seven hundred altogether; sein Geschäft ist sein Alles, his business is his life (his all); er gilt Alles bei ihnen, he is one and all with them; Ende gut, Alles gut, proverb, all is well that ends well; wenn das Alles ist (or negatively) wenn es weiter nichts ist), if that be (or is) all; Alles aufbieten, to strain every nerve, to exert one's self to the utmost; es ist mir Alles ein's, gleich, einerei, or recht, it is all one, the same, or equal to me, I am for anything; es kommt ihm Alles gelegen, he is for anything, nothing comes amiss to him; Gewißheit über Alles und Jedes (or All und Jedes, cf. above, I 7) if untrüßbar, certainty about anything and everything is unattainable; es ist nicht Alles Gold was glänzt, all is not gold that glistens (über diese Stellung der engl. Verneinung siehe Nicht); die Erläuterung ist Alles (or alles Andere) cher, als erläuternd (or die E. ist Alles, nur nicht e.), the explanation is anything but explanatory; ich möchte (lieber) Alles, nur nicht ..., or ich möchte lieber alles Andere, als ..., I would have anything rather than ...; über Alles, above all things, of all things; Deutschland über Alles! Germany above all! das möchte ich um Alles in der Welt nicht thun, I should not like to do that for all the world; vor Allem, before all (things); vor Allem eruchte ich Sie, above all,

I request you; Alles was, all that; Alles was er hatte, all that he had; Alles wurde aufmerkfsam, every body's attention was called; b) indeclinable in conjunction with was, wer, and other interrogatives and relatives, serving (similar to innum or the English ever, &c.) to emphasize the word to which it is added, so that it should be accepted in its widest sense; was werde ich noch Alles leiden müssen, what and how many sufferings may not be in store for me! how manifold (in number, degree, kind, &c.) may the sufferings be I have yet to undergo; was sehte nicht Alles! how many things were not wanting! es ist erstaunlich, was er Alles weiß, it is surprising how many things he knows, the extent and variety of his knowledge are surprising; ich habe vergessen, was er Alles wissen wollte, I have forgotten all the manifold particulars he wanted to know; was tömte ich nicht Alles dir zu rathen thun? what is there (i. e. there is nothing whatever) in all the world I would not do for love of you? wer war denn Alles zugegen? who were all the persons present? wem soll ich wohl Alles noch Geld geben? how many are there still to whom I am to give money? ich hatte den Philosophen, den Physiker, Mathematiker, Maler, Mechaniker und Gott weiß wem Alles in Anspruch genommen (Göthe), I had called in the assistance of the philosopher, the physicist, the mathematician, the painter, the mechanic, and God knows whom besides; wachthafig, ich wüßte nicht, wozu ucin gekränktes Herz nicht Alles fähig wäre (Göthe), indeed, I do not know, of what (dreadful) things my injured heart might be capable at this moment; als er sah, wie und wo man die Exzellenz Alles such (Gutzkow), when he saw, how eagerly and in how many (possible and impossible) places they looked for his Excellency; in Rom und wo All (Alles) (König), in Rome and wherever else; c) see Alles in the alphabetical order below.

(Schiller, Picc. 4, 1), (Coleridge.) Inasmuch as our supreme commander... has consented to remain still with the army, ... so we... do hereby oblige ourselves...

2) In comparisons: a) in connection with a verb, † for our present wie: du sollst deinen Nächsten lieben — (wie) dich selbst (Matth. 22, 39), thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: seine Sörer zu bewegen I sprach er — (wie) ein Cicero (Hugdorn), to move his hearers he spoke like a Cicero: in this sense als wie were sometimes combined, a phrase avoided by modern prose: bedarf er nicht der Nacht — wie des Tages? (Göthe), does he not want the night as well as the day? so flug als wie zuvor (the same), no wiser than before: b) in connection with a substantive, also † for wie: in einem Lande — Deutschland (Lessing), in a country like Gormany: — wie for wie: die Zeiten sind — wie ein Rad (Logau), time is like a wheel: c) in connection with the positive degree of an adj., † for wie: weiß — Schne (Matth. 28, 3), white as snow: — wie for wie: weiß und roth — wie ein nachfern Bild (Wieland), as white and red as a waxen image: d) an) in all the cases mentioned under a, b, & c — († also) was often preceded in the first clause of the sentence by a correlative word, viz. jo († — for also) before verbs, adjectives, and adverbs, solch before substantives, &c.; thus als... als..., was used as late as the 16th cent.: — roth — Scharlach, as red as scarlet, &c.: either of these correlative or correspondent words is not seldom omitted; a mere so in the modern mode of speech is sufficient to connect the two clauses: — (for ancient also) viel (omitted als) an uns ist (Iuther): modern examples: so viel (—) an uns liegt, as much as in us lies; jo gut (—) ich konnte, as well as I could: instances of the second kind (i. e. omission of the first correlative) are very numerous: der Djen glüht, die Böige blaßen (omitted so, jo sehr), I — gält es Heßen zu verglaffen (Schiller, Gang zum Eisenhammer), the furnace glows, the bellows blow, as if the task were to melt rocks into glass; bb) in correlative sentences and phrases, such as jo viel (so wenig, jo gut, jo schlecht zc.) elf-möglich, zc.; jo schnell (so langsam, jo turtz, jo lang zc.) — ... zc., als is still, and perhaps more frequently used than wie: Einer ist jo viel werth — (or wie) der Andere, one is as much worth as the other. So likewise in the combinations — wenn (or wie wenn, wie wann), — ob, — daß (never wie ob, wie daß) &c.; or that (stellte sich), — wenn (or — ob) or nichts wüßte, he made (a show) as if he knew nothing: e) an) after the comparative degree of an adjective. This is the proper province of als in modern High-German: (roth wie Blut, but: röther — Blut, redder than blood. But even here wie (and — wie) is not only used colloquially, but by good writers. Besides this als the old deun has been retained in the more deviated style and even in common usage, when a collision of two als would have produced a bad sound: — Stube war er schöner denn (for als) — Zimmling (Himm), as a boy he was more beautiful than as a youth: lieber frei sterben, denn — Sklaven leben, rather to die free than to live as slaves, &c.) bb) als is also used after words which, though not comparative as their outward form, imply a comparison; thus after ein anderer and its derivatives, sonst, negatives and interrogatives, &c., the latter term of an exclusive comparison is introduced by als, exactly corresponding to the cases which in English require that after other (cf. Ander), otherwise, else, or but (in the sense of besides): er gab keine andere Antwort, — einen vorzigen Ton der Zustimmung, he gave no other answer than a gruff sound of acquiescence: was wir haben oder Forobeln nennen, sind nichts anderes, — Allegorien, what we call fables or parables are no other than allegories: Etit list nichts anderes, — die Art des Auerucks, welsen zc., style is nothing else than that sort of expression which, &c.: wir urtheilen anders von ihnen — von uns selbst, we judge otherwise of them than of ourselves: sie liebt keinen — ihn (perhaps better: oußer ihm), she loves none but him: wer anders kann gemeint sein, — ich? who can be aimed at but I? keiner — ich vor zugegen, none but I was present: er ist zu flug, — doch er an Gelpenfer glauben sollte (Heyße), he is too clever to believe in ghosts: er ist zu flug, — doch ihm dieser Wortfeil entgegen sollte, he is too prudent for this advantage to escape him: eine zu fest eingewurzelte Gewohnheit, — daß das mildeste Frühlingewetter sie ändern könnte, a habit too inveterate for the most genial spring-weather to alter.

3) Als identifying: a) before predicative cases, particularly the nom. & acc., identifying a logical subject and its predicate; ich soume — Bote means I come as a messenger, i. e. although not in general a messenger; er farb — Bettler, he died (as) a heggar: er farb mir — Antwort (auf ...), — Erwidern, he wrote to me in answer (to...), in return; h) this als rendered by other English turns of phrase: sie läßt die Arden Kinder Endleinwund — Lähnen die Bindfaden — Strumpfbänder tragen, she lets the poor children wear sackcloth for pinafores, and packthread for garters: er ließ nie Jeund — Münster zu, der..., he never admitted any person to be his minister, who... ich würde — Ungläubiger ausgehen, I was considered (to be) an infidel; die gereiften Früchte seiner Arbeiten — Geistlicher und Professor, the matured fruit of his ministerial and professorial labours; er unterzeichnete das Document — Sachwalter, he signed the document in the capacity of an attorney; das Gesicht kam — Denkschrift vor den gesetzgebenden Körper, the application came before the legislature in the shape of a memorial; alles dies, obgleich es — Anregung von Werth ist, ist — Beweis nichts werth, all this, valuable as it is in the way of suggestiveness, is worth nothing in the way of proof; c) the omission of this als is frequent in poetry and the elevated style: bist du ein Knecht berufen, sorge dich nicht (1 Cor. 7, 21) art thou being called a servant? care not for it: daß ich ein Bettler geboren werden durfte! (Schiller), oh, that I might have been born (as) a beggar! (Bgl.: I'll live and die a maid, to live and die her slave, &c.); d) als introducing enumerations, &c., to be explained as representing a shortened sentence: aa) es gibt drei grammatische Geschlechter, — (for — da sind, which is likewise used) Masculinum, Femininum, Neutrum, there are three grammatical genders, viz. masculine, feminine, neuter; diejenigen neueren Sprachen, — (or wie die französische zc. (Lessing), those modern languages, as, for instance, (or, such as) the French, &c.; Weinmadsbrot, — (or wie) Bäder, Kleider, Spielzeug, lagen auf dem Tisch, Christmas presents, in the form of books, clothes, playthings, lay on the table; bb) before heute, morgen, gestern zc., similar to the English: as to-day, as to-morrow, &c., rather colloquial: er benachrichtigte mich, daß er — (or — wie) heute Morgen hatte zu mir kommen wollen, he informed me that he had intended to come to me as this morning (cf. As, Vol. I.). This als always serves to put the word or words which it introduces prominently forward, and is even, though seldom in recent usage, combined with the relative: ihr habt diesen Menschen zu mir gebracht, — der das Volk abwendet (Luk. 23, 14), ye have brought this man to me, as one that perverteth the people.

A) Als, temporal, when; always relating to some past event which took place simultaneously with some other event: — wir in die Stadt fuhren, hörte es auf zu regnen, when we drove into the town, it ceased to rain (just as the one event took place, so the other took place, z. e. simultaneously); — ich das Vorgesamte durchgehe (Schiller; the historic present for the imperfect [durchging] of common prose), on passing through the antechamber, I heard, &c.

spectacles, “so this is the Emperor Titus”; was! Sie haben — nicht gehört...? what! you have not heard, then...? es ist — seine Hoffnung, Herr Doctor? then there is no hope, Doctor? ach, theuerster Rudolf, du warest — nicht untreu, wie man mich gern überredet hätte! oh, dearest Rudolphus! you were not then, as they would fain have persuaded me, untrue; auf ihren Bruch war keine Antwort gekommen, ... der Gläubiger war — geduldig, to their letter no answer had come, the creditor was then a patient one.

America (rarely America, for, having become a "household word", in daily use, it is gener. spelt as a German word, with a t, cf. Afrika), (str.) n. America (orig. a Latinised adjective: America, the American, viz. terra country), so called from Amerigo Vespucci, a Florentine, who accompanied Columbus in his second voyage (1499), and published the first description of the newly discovered countries. As to Amerigo, or rather Amerigo, an assimilation for Amerigo, we find it to be derived from Amalric (OHG., MHG.
