GATHERED UP.

—Blackwood—
"The only happiness can keep us young—
—Blackwood—
One way to be unhappy is to envy the happiness of others.

Yes, indeed.
A man may have a heart big enough to love two women at one time, but he ought to have more head—Smart Set.

There is nothing so powerful as truth and often nothing so strange—Webster.
A financial genius is a man who can have a family and money at the same time.—New York Press.

Empty hands, empty hands, empty companions, empty words, empty hearts, draw in evil spirits, as a vacuum draws in air. To be occupied with good is the best defense against the inroads of evil—William Arnold.

If you possess such an unhappy nature as to make you refuse to lay up a little because you cannot lay up a great deal, then you will never lay up anything—Theodore Roosevelt.

First Come, First Served.
At the end of a big ball one of the guests went into the cloakroom at 3 in the morning to put on his things, and the attendant came forward with a coat.
"That isn't my coat," said the guest.
"Mine is a perfectly new one."
"A new one? Oh, I haven't any new coats left after half-past 12."

The Indian scraps his enemy. The paleface skins his friends—Indian Proverbs.

Equally Culpable.
"I can say for myself that I never have been mean enough to get another woman's cook away from her."
"Neither have I but I must confess that once or twice I have tried to work our cook off on some of my neighbors."

Be An Architect.
"Every man the architect of his own fortune" has been credited to President Carter of Williams college, as the wash-word of his life and efforts. "You cannot dream yourself into a character, you must force one" he also says.

If you want to oblige a friend, do something for him his way instead of your own way.

Wiser Than He.
Justice Maule is regarded as the leading judicial wit in England. He had doubts as to the credibility of a witness on one occasion, and the man declared that he had been "wedded to truth" from infancy.
"That may be," said the Justice; "but the question is, how long have you been divorced?"

A Little Girl was a witness before him, and he proceeded to ascertain whether she knew the meaning of an oath. The child in answer to questions said she would go to heaven if she told the truth, but would go to the other place if she told lies.

"Are you sure of that, my dear?"
"Yes, sir, quite sure."
"Let her be sworn," said the Court; "she knows more than I do"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Just Keep On.
When today's difficulties overshadow yesterday's triumphs and obscure the bright visions of tomorrow, when plans upset and whole years of effort seem to crystallize into a single hour of concentrated bitterness, when little annoyances eat into the mind very quickly and corrode the power to view things calmly, when the jolts of misfortune threaten to jar loose the judgment from its moorings, remember that in every business, in every career, there are valleys to cross, as well as hills to scale; that every mountain range of hope is broken by chasms of discouragement through which run torrent streams of despair! To quit in the chasm is to fail. See always in your mind's eye some sunny summit of success! Don't quit in the chasm! Keep on!—System.

Brace Up.
Moral courage is a virtue of higher caste and nobler origin than physical. It springs from a consciousness of virtue and renders a man, in the pursuit or defense of right, superior to the fear of reproach, opposition, or contempt.—S. D. Goodrich.

All She Had.
In the absence of his wife and the illness of the servant Mr. Taylor undertook to help three-year-old Marjory to dress. He had succeeded in getting her arms in the sleeves and through the armholes of her garments and had buttoned her into them. Then he told her to put on her shoes herself, and he would button them. He soon discovered that she was vainly striving to put a left shoe on her right foot.

"Don't you know any better than that? You are putting your shoes on the wrong feet."
"They'll do foots I dot, papa," replied Marjory tearfully—Yout's Companion.

An Unfortunate Error.
Recently a Nevada editor published an obituary concerning a man who had made a fortune as a promoter of mining interests. The tribute was headed, "Death Loves a Shining Mark," but the printer made it "Mining Mark." Three lucky sons of the deceased survive—Kansas City Post.

Shoe Industry.
There has been a quick and decided response from the shoe trade to the call of the summer weather and increased sales of reasonable goods show that the temperature is a most important factor in business. Retailers have been kept busy, and though they have good sized stocks on hand duplicate orders have been filled. The wholesalers are thereby getting their share of the improvements in trade and

New Out of Order.
The New Home is the housewife's constant friend; always ready for work and never out of order. It is not a continual source of worry and expense for repairs, but one who is happy. Dealers everywhere.

WEYMOUTH AGRICULTURE.

It is high time for the boys who want to win the Gazette and Transcript prizes at the coming fair of the Agricultural and Industrial Society to be getting in the seeds for their crops. See ad in this paper, $5.00—$5.00—$2.00

Few, if any, of us are vegetarians enough to eat grass and hay, but we come pretty near being dependent on it for a large part of our sustenance, and this year we have much to be thankful for along this line. The early season was good for grass growing and the past week has been one of the best ever known for securing the hay crop, and many have scalded themselves with the weather conditions and many tons are now well under cover.

Keep a Good Cow.
A good cow is one, irrespective of breed, that pays her owner a net profit. The cow that produces a profit can not always be distinguished from one that does not, by external appearance. Signs of a good cow are many times false. Looks, in a cow, are, are sometimes deceiving. The value of a cow is not told simply by the amount of milk she gives for a given period, or the richness of that milk. We must know the cost of keeping as well as the production of the cow to determine her value.

Buckwheat.
Buckwheat is a profitable crop and thrives on sandy soil. It is what may be termed a summer grain crop, as the seed may be broadcasted in June and the crop harvested before frost. It is grown as a green manure crop, or for the grain. It provides an abundant forage for bees when in blossom, though some do not claim the honey therefrom to be of the highest quality. Being of rapid growth, buckwheat crowds the weeds and prevents them from growing, and as it shades the soil it is regarded as one of the best crops that can be grown for that purpose.

Gardening Suggestions.
The main cabbage crop may be transplanted during June or July, and a crop of small or Hungarian cabbages may be put in if desired. Carrots, beets and parsnips should always be put in the ground early, yet it is not too late to make good crops of them in June, provided rain falls during the time the seed is in the ground. One of the most important, and the putting in of the seed may be deferred until any time after a good rain, but farmers must prepare their land well for late crops, especially if the seeds are fine or of a kind that does not germinate quickly. Good preparation is one of the essentials to good growth and capacity to withstand drought.

Cabbage Rot.
Black rot has been very destructive on cabbage and cauliflower for several seasons, and means of relief, even slight, will be welcomed by growers. Recent investigation by the New York station at Geneva shows that the germ of disease may be carried over winter on the dry seed, a fact previously doubted by scientists, and that these germs may produce the disease when inoculated into the healthy plants. It is, therefore, a wise practice to disinfect the cabbage seeds as removing one possible source of infection. This can be done very cheaply, easily and safely by soaking the seeds for fifteen minutes in corrosive sublimate solution of 1 to 1,000 strength.

Destroying Burdock.
Like all biennials, the burdock is easily destroyed in cultivated fields. It is in by-places, such as fence sides, lanes, corners around the buildings, pastures, and the borders of woodlands, that burdocks give trouble. But the most difficult to destroy are those that grow in the open field. Farmers who go over their fields twice a year will soon have no burdocks. In cutting them care should be taken to strike below the crown. Every plant cut in this way must die. The cutting may be done at any time of the year when the ground is not frozen, and it is of course, much more easily done when the plants are young. While it is not difficult to cut off a small tip root with the knife, it is much more difficult to accomplish the same when the root has attained a diameter of an inch or more. Two or three years of persistent cutting will remove nearly all burdocks from the by-places of farms.

Get a Second Crop.
Second crop red clover makes excellent hay for all kinds of stock. It is usually of good quality because fall weather is cooler than when the first crop is harvested. It is not so badly dried up and is less likely to mold. The quality is better for them. Brood sows like it and will eat it greedily. If a feed cutter is available, cut it fine and mix it with ground feed in the swill. If the hens can get it in this way it will promote the egg yield. After being exposed to the sun part of a day, it should be cooked up nicely and allowed to stand three or four days, then opened to the sun again for a few hours, and the quality is made.

Take Care of the Swallows.
From the standpoint of the farmer and orchardist, perhaps no birds more useful than the swallows exist. They have been described as the light cavalry of the avian army, being especially adapted for flight and unexcelled in aerial evolutions. They have few rivals in the art of capturing insects; a mid-air. They eat almost nothing of value to man, but consume a vast number of noxious insects.

The barn-swallow formerly was abundant throughout the northern states, especially in New England. The tightly built modern barn, however, no longer invites the presence of the barn-swallow by affording it friendly shelter, and the birds are becoming scarcer and scarcer. To provide openings in modern barns and to encourage the presence in them of colonies by providing convenient nesting places are easy and effective methods by which Methodist Episcopal Church Notes.

At a recent meeting of the Ladies' Social Circle it was voted to hold their annual fair November 12th, 14th, and 15th.

Music on Sundays is being furnished by a quartet—Miss Littlefield, soprano; Miss Whitton, alto; W. H. Pratt, tenor; Albert Hayden, of Quincy, bass. Mr. Hayden is substituting for Mr. Curtis during July and August.

An act of vandalism was perpetrated in the church, the night before the Fourth as a result of which the bell was put out of commission, the heavy door willfully smashed and bell rope cut, and other damage done. Matches were prominently about revealed gross carelessness, and were a serious menace to the safety of the building. The trustees have evidence to prove the identity of the persons implicated, and while they do not desire the unpleasantness of a prosecution, feel that proper precaution necessitates the public statement of these facts, and also, that under the circumstances the cost of damage should be paid by the guilty parties.

Last Saturday afternoon the trustees and pastor of the church enjoyed a delightful trip in the power boat "Helle" owned by W. E. Ames, who is spending the summer at Wessagussett beach.

The Junior League held the annual picnic Wednesday at Hockley Bay. Fifty odd members rode down in hay wagons, much to the delight of the younger members. After bathing and base ball were the chief features. The day closed with hearty fond of cheers for the occupants of "Camp Comfort" who provided boats, swings and graphophone.

WOMEN WHO CHARM

Health is the First Essential Toward Making a Woman Attractive.

There is a beauty and attractiveness in health which is far greater than mere regularity of feature.

A sickly, irritable and complaining woman always carries a cloud of depression with her; she is not only unhappy herself but is a damper to all joy and happiness when with her family and friends.

There are more shoe buyers in Boston just now than ever before, and they are looking over samples of next spring's shoes, making orders for fall and winter goods, and generally enjoying the opportunity of visiting the leading shoe-selling city of the world.

Nothing is so good for the flooring of all poultry houses as the original soil over which they are built, dug up and mixed with screened mottor rubble.

SCOUT CRUISER SALEM TO BE LAUNCHED.

To-Morrow at High Noon the Salem Will Take the Water at the Works of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

SCOUT CRUISER SALEM

John D. Rockefeller did not know much about the world when he was on the witness stand, but they say he plays a pretty good game of golf for an old man.

Boston will extend its arms to the whole world next week and while it is several years behind Weymouth and many other places in an observance of "Old Home Week," let us hope that its well planned features will be a success. What is good for the Metropolis of New England is good for its suburbs.

Tax rates are slowly coming in from towns and cities and a majority of them show a slight increase. Brookline is the front this week with an addition of $1.20 to the tax, but Brookline is rich and can stand it. The assessors of Weymouth are working towards the end and we are all hoping that it won't be much more than last year.

Mayor Schmitt, the reputed grafter and misuser of charity funds of San Francisco, has been given five years at hard labor in the penitentiary. Mr. Schmitt may not be compelled to work very hard, but it is a grand good thing to have and then find a court which gives men of his class a change from their usual vacation.

"Peace on Earth Good will to Men"—The week opened with three wars ended, viz., the United States-Japanese war, the Roosevelt-Crane-Lodge war, and the long-drawn-out "Tamers'" contest in Boston. The first two never had any existence in the over-fertile brain of a newspaper writer, but the latter has been a long and expensive contest and suggests a little more application of scripture before beginning a battle.

The same locality in Hingham which saw four persons seriously injured last week by an automobile accident saw another accident on Monday. This time one person was killed three others who were in the auto were more or less injured, and a valuable team broken up. It is claimed by the driver of the automobile that he was going very slowly, but no one believes that a machine going slowly can be stopped so suddenly as to roll the several tons of metal over and over in the air, smash steel iron, and other fixtures, and throw occupants several feet away. Towns and cities have posted notices everywhere in regard to speed. There is not a sane man driving an automobile but knows the difference between eight miles an hour and forty, and yet the forty and its attendant hazards seems to be the choice. Statute laws and municipal regulations seem to have no effect, and the public is at the mercy of the automobile with no alternative but a prayer that they may be spared until the fool users of automobiles are all killed.

Grocery Business Suspended.
Grocery business was at a standstill in town Wednesday as the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers' association took that day for their 15th annual outing, and dealers and employees joined in the excursion which included a trip to Vanity Fair, a sail in Narragansett bay, a famous clam bake and fish dinner, and a general good time.

The committee of arrangements omitted the usual field sports and contests as it was too hot for active work. They demonstrated, however, that there are good speakers, story tellers and singers among the grocery men and women of Weymouth.

THE WHITE BIRCH.

Peeling the Bark Ruins the Tree's Beauty Forever.

One of the loveliest of trees is the white birch, with its graceful foliage and gleaming trunk, and yet how often it is robbed of half its beauty by careless hands. The temptation to take off strips of its easily peeled bark seems well nigh irresistible if one may judge by the countless strips of trunk lying on our roadides. Instead of silvery white columns standing out with conspicuous grace from the green of neighboring shrubs and trees, the trunk is marred by great black circles, the results of wounds inflicted by wanton passersby.

Too often this is done merely for the fun of seeing how easily the bark can be pulled off, and no thought is given to the feelings of the owner when he finds that one of his finest trees, in which he took great pride, has been robbed forever of its beauty.

The next time you are tempted to cut off a strip of bark, think of the injury to the tree and the injury to all who shall pass that way after you in depriving them of something they might have enjoyed but for you—the sight of that tree in all its beauty. Remember that the bark never grows again.

If you have in mind the making of some article of which birch bark is an absolute necessity, can you not at least take it from some fallen log or from some tree well hidden in the center of the woods, removing only the outer layers, and those in such a way that the tree will suffer an little, if possible? By doing this you will earn the gratitude of all wayfarers and landowners.—Plant World.

The First Book Catalogue.
The first book catalogue was issued in 1564 in Augsburg, Germany, by one George Wilber. It was printed on sixteen pages and recorded the titles of 256 books arranged in classes.

Hand bills or posters were printed as early as 1469 by John Mentel or Mentelin of Strasbourg, who printed the first edition of the Bible in 1465 or 1469. The first catalogue in England was printed in 1564 by John Widdet for Andrew Maunsell, a bookseller.—Minneapolis Journal.

Two Runaways.
"This paper," said Languid Lewis, "tells about a horse runn'n' away with a woman, an' she's laid up for six weeks." "But ain't no worse," rejoined Bonst-Benjamin. "A friend of mine want run away with a horse, an' he was laid up for six years."—Chicago News.

Tomorrow promises to be another eventful day at the works of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company. But a few weeks ago we published the launching of the scout cruiser Birmingham with a full description of the craft and the events connected with her most successful launch and tomorrow the second of the trio of cruisers will take the water, and Salem, the most noted city in the United States for its history in connection with our merchant marine, will vie with the manufacturing and railroad metropolis of Alabama in giving character to the event.

Built by a Mass. Company, her name selected by a Mass. man, and christened by a Mass. girl, the scout cruiser Salem rests on the ways at Fore River ready for launching tomorrow at noon. The Salem is the second of the three scout cruisers for the U. S. Navy authorized by Congress to be launched by the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. from its yards at Quincy.

The chief characteristics of this new cruiser will be her great speed and her launching on a dry-dock, giving her a very wide range of operation. The plans call for a speed of 24 knots an hour and the fastest ships in Uncle Sam's navy except some of the torpedoes whose development it seems especially fitting that this modern war vessel should be named for a city whose history is so closely linked to that of the U. S. Merchant Marine and which in the old days furnished many swift clipper ships whose development achievements make a chapter in the annals of our country which all are proud to recall.

The arrangements for the launching of the new vessel will be in charge of the chief engineer, Mr. J. W. White, who has been put on steam and race away to safety.

The Salem's most near completion than most ships are when launched. Soon on the ways, the exceeding sharpness of her prow is most noticeable and every graceful line of her hull speaks the great speed which is her prime requisite. The high free board, or 'sides' as a landsman might describe it, accentuates the effect of her tapering prow and makes it look indeed like a knife blade.

Hearing on Petition to Carry Baggage.
The selection held a hearing at their rooms Monday night on the petition of the Old Colony Street Railway Co. for permission to carry newspapers, express and other matter over their several lines in Weymouth.

Mr. Editor:
I would like to inquire through the columns of the Gazette and Transcript, if it is not possible to make some arrangements whereby the appearance of our streets and sidewalks can be improved? A great amount of waste paper seems to be constantly blowing about, getting into shrubbery and yards which otherwise are very neat and attractive.

Daughters of Veterans.
On Wednesday evening of this week the Daughters of Veterans held a garden party on the grounds surrounding the home of Mr. Almond Blanchard, North Weymouth. The evening was a very little cooler than was necessary for such occasions, it was a fine night, and a large number attended. Chinese lanterns lighted the grounds and a hurriedly stationed a short distance from the house kept things lively throughout the evening. The good of the order committee had the affair in charge. There was a tent erected on the south side of the house in which Mrs. Henry Harrington served punch assisted by Mrs. Earle Williams. The homemade candy and popcorn table was in charge of Mrs. Ida Carter, with Miss Lena Tobin and Miss Florence Loring for assistants.

Boston's Old Home Week.
Boston's Old Home Week celebration, July 25 to August 5, will consist of the greatest and most interesting series of mid-summer out-door festivals ever offered by any city in the United States. The program beginning to end the open-air carnival life is predominant. Every day has its out-of-door pageant or parade, every evening has its special illumination feature. Almost every hour of every day and evening has its sort of special letter set to multitude of the 150,000 home-coming visitors from all over the American continent. The mammoth program has now been so far settled upon that the prominent features of each day can be listed and placed in order. All that remains to be desired is one week of good New England summer weather from July 25 to August 3. Boston people are praying for sunshine then, and if the skies will only smile the "Hub" will show its visitors a celebration the like of which has never before been offered the public of any municipality in America.

Weymouth Historical Society.
The Weymouth Historical Society held a meeting at the Foggy Library building last Tuesday evening. An invitation from the citizens of Gloucester was received, inviting the Weymouth society to be present at the 25th anniversary of the settlement of the town. The anniversary comes on the 15th of August and will be known as "Gloucester Day." The Weymouth society appointed a committee consisting of John J. Lord, president; Mrs. W. Simpson, Miss Ruth S. Tower, Rev. William Hyde and Judge Louis A. Cook to attend the celebration.

for trace of the enemy. For this work the Salem and other scouts are admirably fitted. She will be used as a dispatch boat at times and her fighting qualities are not to be despised. With a crew of 350 men and a battery of two 5-inch and six 3-inch rapid fire guns and two torpedo tubes she could play havoc with an unfortified place and as a commerce destroyer her prowess would be almost limitless. She can protect herself from torpedo attack and when things get too hot for the enemy.

The plans as fully developed call for a vessel of the following characteristics: Length between perpendiculars 420 ft. 0 in. Length over all 423 ft. 2 in. Draft on trial, 16 ft. 0 in. 12 ft. 0 in. Total coal capacity, 1250 tons. Coal on trial, 475 tons. Fuel water on trial, 100 tons. Fuel water on trial, 50 tons. Maximum speed, average of 4 hours run, 24 knots. Steaming radius at 10 knots per hour, about 6250 knots. Steaming radius at full speed, about 1575 knots. Maximum brake horse power, main turbine engine, 10,000. Indicated horse power, auxiliaries, 400. Time allowed for completion, 34 mos. The freeboard of the vessel is greater than that of any other vessel in the navy, being, at the normal draft, 19 ft. 1-2 in. amidships, 21 ft. 6 in. at the stem, and 21 ft. 6 in. at the stern. The high freeboard insures good sea-going qualities, gives great range of stability and provides a safe and dry vessel under all conditions of weather. On account of the high freeboard it has been possible to provide commodious quarters for the officers and crew, well above the waterline. A forecastle has been provided above the main deck, for about one quarter of the length, and deck houses have been arranged about the forecastle.

Ample subdivision has been made to insure the vessel keeping afloat with no resulting serious change of trim or loss of stability if several of the compartments should be flooded. In planning the structural details the greatest care has been exercised to provide a hull which shall combine with lightness the strength and stiffness necessary to successfully withstand the severest shocks which the vessel may be called upon to undergo, and particular attention has been paid to the longitudinal strength of the vessel and to the strength of the watertight bulkheads, that they may be able to withstand the pressure due to the flooding of any compartment and without endangering the vessel as a whole.

Base Ball.
In the third game of the series for the championship of South Eastern Massachusetts, the Deweys vanquished South Weymouth 4 to 0 using the whitewash brush liberally. Fully two thousand persons viewed the game, which was full of brilliant plays and scientific base ball. It was blank for both till the third, and after Tate had failed to left, Gate grounded to Linberg, who fumbled giving Gate a life. Stevens running for Gate advanced to second on Burke's Texas leaguer of third, then Lonergan, the former Brighton High captain, came to bat. With the batter three balls and two strikes O'Neil whipped over a straight speedy one, which Lonergan connected with for a terrific drive to deep left, which gave him a trip around the circuit, thus scoring three runs. Lord South Weymouth's left fielder fell and wrenched his knee while trying to get the ball and had to retire in favor of O'Board. Dewey scored another in the seventh on a fly to first and was in a pinch, followed by another long drive by Lonergan which relayed just reaching and failed to hold. This ended the scoring, Gate holding the visitors well in hand. The pitching of Gate and the batting of Lonergan and Field were the features for the Deweys, while Cullen excelled for South Weymouth.

Weymouth's Telephone Development.
Twenty-five years ago the first line of telephone poles were set along a few streets in Weymouth, wires were strung, and this week is the twenty-fifth anniversary of an instrument being installed in the factory of M. C. Diver & Co. and the following week the Weymouth Iron Co. followed with No. 2.

Safe Roads Automobile Association.

The association has prepared this summary of the law regulating the speed and manner of operating motor and other vehicles upon our highways for the information and instruction of owners, operators, and others.

1. The driver of every vehicle when meeting another must seasonably drive to the right of the middle of the traveled part of the road.
2. When passing another vehicle going in the same direction the driver of the passing vehicle must drive to the left of the middle of the traveled part of the way, and, if there is sufficient room, the driver of the leading vehicle shall not willfully obstruct the other.
3. In the absence of special speed regulations in cities, towns, parks, etc., the law provides that at no time shall the person operating an automobile run it at a greater rate of speed than is reasonable and proper, having regard to traffic and the use of the way and the safety of the public.
4. Exceeding the speed of twenty miles an hour for the distance of one quarter of a mile on any highway anywhere in Massachusetts is prima facie evidence of excessive speed.
5. Exceeding the speed of twelve miles an hour for an eighth of a mile upon any way inside the thickly settled (buildings averaging less than 200 feet for a quarter of a mile) or where a part of any city or town is prima facie evidence of excessive speed.
6. Exceeding the speed of eight miles an hour approaching or traversing a crossing or intersection of ways, or in getting around a corner or curve, or where the operator's view is obstructed, is prima facie evidence of excessive speed.
7. In many parks, parks ways, cities, and towns special regulations limiting speed in particular localities have been adopted and are in force.
8. Any person convicted of operating an automobile recklessly or while under the influence of liquor, or so as to endanger the safety of the public, is liable to a fine of not exceeding $100 or imprisonment for not exceeding six months.
9. All cases are by law reported by the Court to the Highway Commission, and the law requires the Commission to immediately revoke the license of the person convicted of either of said offenses, or motor cycles owned or controlled by him. No new license or certificate can be issued for sixty days.
10. The Commission also is required by law to revoke the license of any person who is convicted three times within the year of exceeding the speed limit, and to revoke also the registration of any motor vehicle owned or controlled by him. No new license or certificate can be issued for thirty days, nor thereafter except in the discretion of the Commission.
11. The law requires an operator to have his license with him always when operating, and the certificate of registration to be in the car and easily accessible. The law requires every person operating or in charge of any motor vehicle to stop when signaled by an officer, to give his name and address, the name and address of the owner, to produce his license and the certificate of registration of the car.
12. The owner is required to give to any police officer inquiring, all the information within his power which may lead to the identification and apprehension of the person who was driving the motor vehicle on the occasion inquired about.

How She Snared Him.

(Original.)

We were sitting in the arbor under groups, which were quite ripe. We picked and ate a number of huge bunches; then she asked what we should do next. "Oh, I know," she said and she ran into the house and brought out a book. On the left page were a number of printed questions, on the right, blank spaces in which to write the answers. It was impossible to determine which were the more stupid, the questions or the answers that had been written in. The book was about half filled, the writers having been both masculine and feminine.

I ran my eye down the column of questions, such as "What is your favorite color?" Your favorite proverb?" "Your age?" When I came to that last I paused and asked if the women answered that question. She said only one had, but she didn't count; she was a practical creature and earned her own living. I went on down the list. "Is life worth living?" Think of that to be answered by people from sixteen to twenty-six, as most of those who had filled in the answers were. "What is your present thought?" I paused again and began to write, "That the man who..." She stopped me. "Don't write anything disagreeable. I won't have my book spoiled." I had intended to write "The man who got up this book did so for idiots and to fill his pocket at his expense." Instead I wrote, "The man who is asked to write in this book should feel highly complimented."

"That's very nice," she said. "I know how cynical you are, and I feared you were going to put in something horrid."

My second thought was that I had narrowly escaped making an ass of myself.

I went on down the list and paused at "What is your ambition?" I had intended to write "I would like to be a millionaire," but I thought I would write "I would like to be a millionaire, but I don't want to work for it." I wrote, "I would like to be a millionaire, but I don't want to work for it."

"Excuse me," I said.

The glimpse I got satisfied me that she had not been so foolish as to think that I was a millionaire. I was startled at the discovery, had never before been so deeply and an indifferent swimmer at the still even I had been made of. I thought around the girl who was about to—well, to drown me. She says I'm cynical, and I suppose I am, though I am not so much as she is. In this instance, for the word "drown" carried out my mind. I struck out wildly.

"That would be," I said, "in a book to be every body."

"That might mean," I said, "if it's true it's—shall I scratch it out?"

This was no reply to my question, but it expressed a lot. Others may not understand what it meant, but I did. I was rattled. I paused and asked if the next question and read aloud, "Do you consider marriage a failure?"

"I wanted to write as I felt. 'I wish I knew what it will be for me if I settle this matter now,' but of course I couldn't write that, so I temporized, and a man who temporizes with the question is responsible in this instance for a failure. I wrote, 'It depends upon whether one gets a good wife.'"

"It's a wonder she didn't laugh when she saw what I had written out and didn't. This was a serious business."

"Don't you think that a one sided effort to take of it?" she said in a soft voice.

"Upon my word?" I exclaimed. I was getting more and more rattled every moment. "It's all right," I wrote out. "But in this case"—I stopped again. "What case?" she asked in the same soft tone.

In the case we were talking—weren't we talking about a case? So we weren't. How stupid!

"Oh!"

"You are a convenient word and how a girl can do it! I've since tried it myself, but without the slightest effect. Think of a man using it and without trying to start me off by the use of the next question, and it had gone against me. I surrendered at discretion. I was so rattled that I didn't know what I was doing."

"A man should simply say: I love you. Will you be my wife?" Then I turned and looked her square in the face.

She's not her question book yet, but keeps it under lock and key.

More Laughter, Less Suidices.

The physiological benefits of laughter cannot be overestimated. It shakes up the diaphragm, sets the pulses beating to a lively measure, stimulates the blood circulation, enlivens the brain and sometimes produces dilatation of the jaw when indulged in too heartily by a man with a large mouth. Used with discretion, laughter is refreshing as a sea breeze, as refreshing as an August shower. Its moral effect is beyond computation. It has killed more sickness and laid to rest more evil polking roars of unbelief than any other agency. What can be more derisive than a laugh? The man who laughs never kills himself.—Exchange.

Living Up to His Name.

A teacher in a mission school in Boston had among his pupils a colored boy named Ralph Waldo Emerson Longfellow. As he was absent one Sunday, she called the class if any one knew the reason for his absence.

"I reckon I do," said one small, serious looking boy.

"What is the reason, Johnny?"

"I guess he's home writing poetry," responded the boy, with a delighted chuckle.—Youth's Companion.

That's What Makes Him Mad.

"Why are you always quarreling with your wife?"

"She is always arguing with me."

"But you need not get angry; just explain to her in a calm, gentle tone of voice wherein she is wrong."

"But she is never wrong!"—Houston
