THE

BOOK OF DIGNITIES ;

CONTAINING

ROLLS OF THE OFFICIAL PERSONAGES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE,

CIVIL, ECCLESIASTICAL, JUDICIAL, MILITARY, NAVAL, AND MUNICIPAL,

FROM THE EARLIEST PERIODS TO THE PRESENT TIME:

COMPILED CHIEFLY FROM THE RECORDS OF THE PUBLIC OFFICES:

TOGETHER WITH THE

SOVEREIGNS OF EUROPE,

FROM THE FOUNDATION OF THEIR RESPECTIVE STATES;

THE PEERAGE OF ENGLAND AND OF GREAT BRITAIN;

AND NUMEROUS OTHER LISTS.

BY JOSEPH HAYDN,

AUTHOR OF "THE DICTIONARY OF DATES," AND COMPILER OF VARIOUS WORKS.

LONDON:

LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, AND LONGMANS.

1851.

LONDON:
SPOTTISWOODES and SHAW,
New-street-Square.

TO

THE RIGHT HONORABLE

VISCOUNT PALMERSTON,

HER MAJESTY'S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

MY LORD,

IT may surprise, but will not, I persuade myself, displease your Lordship that I dedicate this Book to you. Were I to have followed the current usage of authors, I should have previously asked your Lordship's gracious permission for this purpose; but while your condescension would have operated as a favourable introduction of my Work to the Public, and have gratified my vanity, I feared I should detract from the object I have in view, that of shewing, spontaneously and freely, the high respect which I, in common with the community at large, entertain for your Lordship as one of the most enlightened, eloquent, and zealous ministers that ever directed the Foreign Affairs of Great Britain.

My Lord, my humble name may never have reached your Lordship's ear ; and my only apology for the liberty I take is, that mine is an Official Book, and therefore not inaptly dedicated to a personage, throughout whose vast department there prevails a system of such efficiency and precision, that even the minutest matters relating to the most distant region, can be at once determined by the records of his Office.

I am, My Lord,

With profound respect,

Your Lordship's most humble Servant,

JOSEPH HAYDN

Carey Street, Lincoln's Inn,
London, Oct. 1851.

P R E F A C E.

IN 1786, BEATSON produced his Political Index to the Histories of Great Britain and Ireland, a Work that presented for the first time, in a collective form, rolls of all the high personages in the State from the institution of their respective offices in England. The novelty of his plan, and manifest usefulness of his Work (which was stamped with the commendation of ADAM SMITH), assured his Index an immediate and almost universal popularity; and he was encouraged by a consequent rapid sale to publish in succession three large editions¹, each of many thousand copies, of which the last edition appeared in 1806, nearly half a century ago.

It is a curious fact in the history of his Book, that the third edition of BEATSON (the only one we now find in our great Public Institutions, and in the library of the private gentleman), is, though certainly the most enlarged, yet the most incorrect of the whole. It would seem to have wanted the superintending eye of BEATSON himself², for we cannot otherwise account for the innumerable errors it contains, and the rather slovenly manner in which it is compiled. But, notwithstanding this great disadvantage, BEATSON'S Political Index is, even to this day, a favourite, though wanting the character of a standard, Work. No other Work has hitherto been attempted to supply its place, or in continuation of it; and latterly it has become so scarce, as to have entirely disappeared from the shelves of the modern bookseller.

² Dr. ROBERT BEATSON (LL.D.) F.R.S. lived until 1818: he died Jan. 24, in that year, aged 76. Besides the Political Index, Dr. Beatson was the author of A Chronological Register of both Houses of Parliament, Naval and Military Memoirs of Great Britain, and various other works, chiefly of a scientific character.

In the Work we now place before the Public, we owe little more than the plan to BEATSON. The BOOK OF DIGNITIES includes many lists (among them, the Administrations of England, and the Judges of the Ecclesiastical Courts) not to be found in the Political Index, and we have rejected other lists that had neither antiquarian research nor usefulness to entitle them to a place in the present volume. For the earlier dates we have consulted our most esteemed antiquaries, drawing our information directly from the authors themselves, instead of relying upon the transcripts made from them by a writer who errs so frequently. Were we to enumerate those authors here, we should crowd a page with the most illustrious names in our literature; but as we quote, with scrupulous fidelity, our authority in every case throughout the Work, we deem such an array unnecessary.

It is right to observe, that we have had a pre-eminent advantage over BEATSON. We have been honoured by the chief members of the Government with their especial permission to search the records of their respective departments, and where records did not exist, either on account of the comparative newness of the office, or some particular contingency, they have graciously directed that the information essential to the completion of our Work should be supplied to us from the minutes of their Boards, or from some equally authentic source. To acknowledge, in this place, the condescension of the highest personages in the State, might seem ostentatious and impertinent, yet we may be allowed to mention, that the roll of the Privy Councillors has been compiled from the registers of the Council, and is now published, for the first time, by permission of the Marquess of LANSDOWNE, the Lord President. Several of our lists are the contributions of the most distinguished individuals. Our lists of the Judges of England are (from the Restoration to the present year) the compilations of the late Lord LANGDALE.

Of the numerous writers that have sprung up within the past half-century, we have, of course, availed ourselves. We have not gone, for instance, to DUGDALE for our list of the Lord Chancellors. The indefatigable antiquary, Mr. HARDY, of the Tower, has recently produced, after much laborious research, a roll of the Lord Chancellors, the most accurate that has ever appeared, and of this roll, ours is nearly a transcription.

We conclude with the expression of our humble hope, that the BOOK OF DIGNITIES will be found of some usefulness to the Official Gentleman, the Historian, and the Scholar. If we shall have achieved this chief object of our labours, we shall be satisfied to mingle undistinguished in the crowd of useful writers, desiring no higher fame, or greater reward.

London, October 1851.

¹ Part of the year 1470 is called the 49th of Henry VI., that monarch having been restored to the throne by the earl of Warwick, and a parliament summoned in Henry's name on the 15th of October, 1470, to meet at Westminster on the 26th of November following. King Henry, dethroned in 1461, died a few days after the decisive battle of Tewkesbury, which was fought on the 4th of May, 1471.

¹ Nearly all other Tables state that Henry VII. died on the 22nd of April, 1509; but the inscription on that monarch's tomb, as given in Sandford's Genealogical History, proves the above to be the correct date: "Moritur deinde XXI die Aprilis, anno aetatis LIII. Regnavit annos XXIII, menses VIII, minus uno die."

² In consequence of the mental illness of his majesty George III., his son George, prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.), was declared Regent of the kingdom, on the 5th of February, 1811; and the regency continued until the death of the king, Jan. 29, 1820, thus embracing a period of eight years, eleven months, and twenty-four days. George IV. therefore governed, as regent and king, nineteen years, four months, and twenty-two days.

. It may, perhaps, be necessary to observe, that two queens, viz., Matilda or Mand (styled in history the "Empress"), and the lady Jane Grey, are not included in the preceding Table of Sovereigns. The one, though the rightful heir, and crowned, was excluded from the succession by the usurpation of Stephen; the other, though unambitious of her elevation to the throne, forfeited her life, a few days after she had been proclaimed queen, upon the scaffold. Neither of these princesses has a place in the Regal Tables of our accepted historians. — EDITOR.

ADDENDA.

Add, at end of ADMINISTRATIONS, page 98 :

1851. Feb. 24. Lord John Russell announced to the Commons, and the Marquess of Lansdowne to the Lords, that ministers had resigned, in consequence of their defeat on Mr. Locke King's motion respecting the Franchise, the majority against them being 48 (100 to 52); and on March 3, the same personages informed parliament, that it having been found impossible to form a Coalition Ministry, of which Sir James Graham and the Earl of Aberdeen were invited to be members, her Majesty, by the advice of the Duke of Wellington, was pleased to call upon her late Ministers to resume office. It appeared that Lord Stanley had been previously charged by the Queen to form a new Cabinet, but had not succeeded. Lord John Russell and his colleagues accordingly resumed their functions, and from (October 1851) the present Administration.

PRINCES OF EUROPE.

ENGLAND.

Called by the Romans, Britannia; by the Greeks, Bretannia; and by Ptolemy (peculiarly remarkable for adhering strictly, in the names of places, to the pronunciation of the respective countries), Brettania. “Anciently Albion, signifying a high mountainous country; but Brettan (Celtic), or Britannia, a name much of the same import, became the prevalent appellation.”—Pliny.

The Britons were divided into many small nations or tribes, and being a military people, it was impossible for their princes or chieftains to establish any despotic authority over them. Their governments, though monarchical, were free, as were those of all the Celtic nations, and they seem to have enjoyed more liberty than the nations of Gaul, from whom they were descended. Each state was agitated with jealousies against the neighbouring states, and while the arts of peace were yet unknown, war was the chief occupation among the people.—Tacitus. Hume.

The inhabitants had long remained in this rude but independent state, when Cæsar, having overrun all Gaul by his victories, cast his eyes on Britain, where, in the 1st century, after much resistance, was planted the Roman power by succeeding emperors. This power existed until the middle of the 5th century, when the Romans, distracted by wars at home, retired. The Saxons, who were at first invited, were the next invaders and the permanent conquerors of Britain. They founded the several kingdoms of the Heptarchy, in which, however, an exact rule of succession was either unknown, or not strictly observed, so that the reigning prince was jealous of all the princes of the blood, whom he still considered his rivals, and whose death could alone give entire security to his throne. From this cause, together with the love of monastic life, the royal families became extinguished in all the kingdoms, Wessex only excepted, in which Egbert ruled. This prince was the sole descendant of the first Saxon conquerors, and under him were at length united all the governments of the Heptarchy, his territories being nearly of the same extent with what is now properly called England. — Hume.

KINGS OF THE HEPTARCHY.

KENT.

[Co-extensive with the shire of Kent.]

455. Hengist.
 488. Æsc, Esca, or Escus, son of Hengist; in honour of whom the kings of Kent were for some time called Æscings.

 757. Osulf, or Osulf; slain in a sedition.
 759. Edilwald, or Mollo; slain by Alred, who was impatient for the throne.
 765. Alred, Ailred, or Alured; deposed.
 774. Ethelred, son of Mollo; expelled.
 778. Elwald, or Celwold; deposed and slain.
 789. Osred, son of Alred; fled.
 790. Ethelred restored; afterwards slain.
 795. Erdulf, or Ardulf; deposed.
 808. Alfwold II. succeeded by Erdulf, and perhaps others; but the kingdom after so many fatal revolutions lost all attachment to its government and princes, and was prepared for its subjection to the yoke of Egbert. — Hume.

EAST ANGLES.

[Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridge, Isle of Ely.]

575. Uffa; a noble German.
 582. Titilus, or Titulus; son of Uffa.
 599. Redwald; son of Titilus: the greatest prince of the East Angles.
 624. Erpwald, or Eorpwald.
 629. Sigebert, half-brother to Erpwald.
 632. Egfrid, or Egric, cousin to Sigebert.

 823. Ludcan; a valiant ruler: slain.
 825. Withlafe, or Wiglaf.
 838. Berthulf, or Bertulf.
 852. Burhred, or Burdred.
 [This last kingdom merged, like the other kingdoms of the Heptarchy, into that of England.]

The Saxons, although they were divided into seven different kingdoms, yet were for the most part subject to one king alone, who was entitled Rex gentis Anglorum, or King of the English nation; those which were stronger than the rest giving the law to them in their several turns, till, in the end, they all became incorporated in the empire of the West Saxons, under Egbert. The following were kings or octarchs during the Heptarchy¹: —

¹ The term "Octarchy" is sometimes applied, by writers, to the Saxon kingdoms, inasmuch as Northumbria, the seventh kingdom, was at different periods divided into two kingdoms, Bernicia and Deira, ruled by separate kings. Other writers apply the term to the successive kings whose authority was acknowledged by the other princes of the Heptarchy; these, they call Octarchs.

KINGS, OR OCTARCHS, OF THE ENGLISH SAXONS.

457. Hengist, first king of Kent.
 490. Ella, 1st king of the South Saxons.
 519. Cerdic, 1st king of the West Saxons.
 534. Kenric, 2nd king of the West Saxons.
 560. Ceawlin, 3rd king of the West Saxons.
 593. Ethelbert, 5th king of Kent.
 616. Redwald, 3rd king of the East Angles.
 630. Edwin, 4th king of Northumbria.
 635. Oswald, 5th king of Northumbria.
 644. Osweo, 8th king of Bernicia.
 670. Wulfhere, 6th king of Mercia.

675. Ethelred, 7th king of Mercia.
 704. Cenred, 8th king of Mercia.
 709. Celred, 9th king of Mercia.
 716. Ethelbald, 10th king of Mercia.
 758. Offa, 11th king of Mercia.
 796. Egferth, 12th king of Mercia.
 796. Kenulph, 13th king of Mercia.
 820. Egbert, 17th king of the West Saxons; and first and absolute monarch of the whole Heptarchy, who vanquished all or most of the Saxon kings, and added their dominions to his own.

KINGS OF ENGLAND BEFORE THE CONQUEST.

827. Egbert, first sole monarch of England; so reigned about ten years.
 837. Ethelwolf, his eldest son; remarkable for his great bigotry.
 857. Ethelbald, son of Ethelwolf; a profligate prince: died unlamented.
 860. Ethelbert, 2nd son of Ethelwolf; succeeded by his next brother,
 866. Ethelred: mortally wounded by the Danes in battle; died April 27, 871.
 871. Alfred, surnamed the Great, 4th son of Ethelwolf; a brave, wise, and virtuous prince: died Oct. 26, 901.
 901. Edward the Elder, son of Alfred; a brave and prudent ruler: the Saxon Chron.
 fix his death in 925.
 925. Athelstan, natural son of Edward, whose legitimate sons were too young to govern: died Oct. 17, 941.
 941. Edmund, son of Edward: killed at a festival by Leolf, an outlaw, May 26, 947.
 947. Edred, brother to Edmund: in this reign,
 Dunstan, a turbulent and ambitious priest, had unbounded sway.
 955. Edwy, son of Edmund: in this reign also,
 as in the last, Dunstan ruled the unfortunate king, who, however, afterwards banished him.
 959. Edgar, succeeded his brother Edwy; recalled Dunstan, whose influence he restored: died July 1, 975.
 975. Edward the Martyr, son of Edgar: stabbed at Corfe Castle, at the instance of his step-mother Elfrida, March 18, 978.
 978. Ethelred II., half-brother of Edward. This prince retired to Normandy during the Danish usurpation, when Sweyn was proclaimed king, 1013. Sweyn died in a few months afterwards, and was succeeded by his son, Canute the Great.
 While the latter was absent in Denmark, the exiled king returned. Ethel-red closed an inglorious reign, April 24, 1016.

1016. Edmund II., surnamed Ironside; son of Ethelred. The English and Danish nobility, tired of war, obliged Edmund and Canute to divide the kingdom between them. Canute ruled the northern portion, while the southern was held by Edmund, who, however, did not long survive the treaty: he was murdered at Oxford by two of his chamberlains, accomplices of duke Edric, Nov. 30, 1016.

THE DANISH RACE.

1016. Canute, styled the Great, and the Dane; established himself as king of England in 1017: died Nov. 12, 1035.
 1035. Harold I., surnamed Harefoot, from his agility in running; a cruel prince: died, unmarried, April 14, 1039.
 1039. Hardicanute, or Canute the Hardy, so named from his bodily powers; brother of the last king: died of repletion at a nuptial feast, June 8, 1041.

THE SAXONS REPOSSESSED.

1041. Edward the Confessor, son of Ethelred II.
 by Emma, his 2nd queen; a tranquil and prosperous reign: died Jan. 5, 1066, naming William of Normandy his heir.
 1066. Harold II., son of Godwin, earl of Kent; a powerful and popular nobleman; reigned only nine months: killed at the battle of Hastings.
 [William of Normandy invaded England in Sept. 1066, with a powerful fleet and army, and on Oct. 14 following, gave battle, at Hastings, to Harold, over whom he obtained a complete victory; and Harold being slain, William was proclaimed king by his triumphant army on the spot.]

SOVEREIGNS OF ENGLAND AFTER THE CONQUEST.

THE NORMAN LINE.

1066. WILLIAM the Conqueror; natural son of Robert, duke of Normandy, by Harlotta, a tanner's daughter, at Falaise; born in 1025; married Matilda, daughter of Baldwin, count of Flanders: died at Rouen, Sept. 9, 1087. Succeeded by his second son.
 1087. WILLIAM Rufus, or the Red, from the colour of his hair; born 1057: mortally wounded while hunting in the New Forest, by an arrow shot at a stag by sir Walter Tyrrell, and died, unmarried,

 Aug. 2, 1100.

1100. HENRY I., surnamed Beauclerk, youngest son of William I.; born 1070; married, 1st, Matilda, daughter of Malcolm Canmore, king of Scotland; 2d, Adelais, or Adeliza, daughter of Godfrey, duke of Louvaine: died of a surfeit, Dec. 1,
 1135. STEPHEN, son of the earl of Blois (by Adela, daughter of the Conqueror), and nephew of Henry I.; born 1105. The empress Maud, daughter of Henry, and rightful heir to the throne, contended for it with Stephen, but ultimately concluded a peace with him, by which she secured the succession to her son. See next reign. Stephen married Matilda, daughter of Eustace, count of Boulogne: died Oct. 25, 1154.

THE PLANTAGENET LINE.¹

1154. HENRY II., son of the empress Maud and Geoffrey Plantagenet, earl of Anjou, her second husband; born 1133. Henry married Eleanor, daughter of the duke of Guienne and divorced queen of Louis VII. of France: died of a broken heart, July 6, 1189. The Fair Rosamond was mistress of this prince.
1189. RICHARD I. Cœur de Lion, son of Henry II.; born in 1157: he joined the crusades to Palestine, where his consummate bravery obtained him the affix to his name. Married Berengera, daughter of Sancho VI., king of Navarre²: died of a wound from an arrow at the siege of Chalus, April 6, 1199.
1199. JOHN, surnamed Lackland, brother of Richard, born Dec. 24, 1166; married, 1st, Avisa, daughter of William, earl of Gloucester, whom he divorced upon the ground of consanguinity; and 2d, Isabel, daughter of Aymer, count of Angoulême, the affianced wife of the count de la Marche: died Oct. 19, 1216.
1216. HENRY III., son of John, born Oct. 1, 1206; succeeded at 10 years of age; married Eleanor, daughter of Raymond, count de Provence: died Nov. 16, 1272.
1272. EDWARD I., surnamed Longshanks, son of Henry, born June 17, 1239; married 1st, Eleanor, daughter of Ferdinand III., king of Castile; and 2d, Margaret, daughter of Philip III., the Hardy, king of France: died July 7, 1307.
1307. EDWARD II., son of Edward I.; born at Carnarvon, April 25, 1284; married Isabella, daughter of Philip IV., the Fair, king of France: dethroned Jan. 25, 1327; and barbarously murdered at Berkeley Castle Sept. 21 following, a victim to the crimes and ambition of his infamous queen and her favourite Mortimer.

1327. EDWARD III., of Windsor, son of the last king, born Nov. 13, 1312; married Philippa, daughter of William, count of Holland and Hainault: died at Sheen, now Richmond, June 21, 1377.
1377. RICHARD II., son of Edward the Black Prince and grandson of Edward III., born Jan. 6, 1367; married, 1st, Anne, sister of the emperor Wenceslaus; and 2d, Isabel, daughter of Charles VI. of France: dethroned Sept. 29, 1399, and murdered at Pomfret Castle, Feb. 13 following.

THE LINE OF LANCASTER.

1399. HENRY IV.,³ surnamed Bolingbroke, son of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, who was fourth son of Edward III.; born in 1367; married 1st, Mary de Bohun, daughter and coheir of the earl of Hereford; and 2d, Joan of Navarre, widow of John de Montfort, duke of Bretagne: died March 20, 1413.
1413. HENRY V., of Monmouth, son of the last king; born in 1388; married Catharine, youngest daughter of Charles VI., king of France: died Aug. 31, 1422.
1422. HENRY VI., his son, born Dec. 6, 1421; succeeded to the throne when not nine months old; married the celebrated Margaret of Anjou, daughter of René or Regnier, duke of Anjou, titular king of Sicily and Jerusalem: dethroned March 4, 1461; and died in the Tower, (supposed to have been murdered there by Richard, duke of Gloucester), June 20, 1471.

THE HOUSE OF YORK.

1461. EDWARD IV.,⁴ son of Richard, duke of York; born April 29, 1441: married Elizabeth Widvile (or Woodville) daughter of sir Richard Widvile, afterwards earl Rivers, widow of sir John Grey, of Groby: died April 9, 1483. Edward, prince of Wales, son of Henry VI., was murdered in this reign.
1483. EDWARD V., eldest son of the last king; born Nov. 4, 1470; succeeded in his 13th year; reigned but 2 months and 13 days, having been deposed June 22,

² He was first contracted in marriage, in his infancy, to a daughter of Raymond, count of Barcelona, but when he was grown up, he was affianced to Alice, or Adela, daughter of Louis VII., king of France; neither of whom he married. Afterwards, in his journey to the Holy Land, he married Berengera, or Berengaria, daughter of the king of Navarre, a virtuous and beautiful princess, who adventured with him many dangers, both by sea and land, in that famous expedition. — T. C. Banks.

1483. He was shortly afterwards murdered, with his brother Richard, in the Tower, by their uncle Gloucester, who had usurped the throne.

1483. RICHARD III., duke of Gloucester; eighth and youngest son of Richard, duke of York, and brother of Edward IV.; born 1453; married Anne, daughter of the great earl of Warwick, and widow of Edward, prince of Wales, above-mentioned, whom he, and the duke of Clarence and lord Hastings had murdered. Slain at the battle of Bosworth-field, Aug. 22, 1485.

THE FAMILIES OF YORK AND LANCASTER
UNITED IN THE HOUSE OF TUDOR.

1485. HENRY VII., earl of Richmond, grandson of Owen Tudor and Catharine, widow of Henry V.; born July 26, 1455; claimed his title to the crown in right of his mother, descended from John of Gaunt, 4th son of Edward III.; married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Edward IV., by which marriage the houses of Lancaster and York were united. Overcame Richard III. ¹ at the battle of Bosworth, and was crowned king upon the spot: died April 22, 1509.

1509. HENRY VIII., son of Henry VII.; born June 28, 1491. He married, 1st, Catharine of Arragon (widow of his elder brother, Arthur), whom he repudiated and afterwards formally divorced. 2d, Anna Boleyn (daughter of sir Thomas Boleyn, and maid of honour to queen Catharine), whom he beheaded. 3d, Jane Seymour (daughter of sir John Seymour and maid of honour to Anna Boleyn), who died in childbirth of a son, afterwards Edward VI. 4th, Anne of Cleves (sister of William, duke of Cleves), whom he divorced. 5th, Catharine Howard (niece of the duke of Norfolk), whom he beheaded. 6th, Catharine Parr (daughter of sir Thomas Parr and widow of Edward Nevill, lord Latimer, her 2nd husband), who survived him. He died Jan. 28, 1547.

1547. EDWARD VI., his son, by Jane Seymour, his 3rd queen; born Oct. 12, 1537. This prince ascended the throne in his tenth year; reigned 6 years, 5 months, and 9 days; and died unmarried.

1553. MARY, eldest daughter of Henry VIII. by his 1st queen, Catharine of Arragon; born Feb. 11, 1516. Married Philip II. of Spain, who was joined with her in the government, July 25, 1554. Mary died Nov. 17, 1558. Philip died in 1598, forty years afterwards, of a loathsome disease, being devoured by vermin, which swarmed from innumerable sores in all parts of his body.

[In the beginning of this reign, lady Jane

Grey, daughter of the duke of Suffolk, and wife of lord Guildford Dudley, was proclaimed queen; young Edward, when dying, having been persuaded to alter the succession in her favour. In 10 days afterwards she returned to private life; but was tried Nov. 13, 1553, and beheaded Feb. 12, 1554, then but seven-teen years of age.]

1558. ELIZABETH, second daughter of Henry VIII. by his 2nd queen, Anna Boleyn, born Sept. 7, 1533. This princess died, unmarried, March 24, 1603; and in her ended the Tudors.

HOUSE OF STUART.

1603. JAMES I. of England, and VI. of Scotland, son of Mary, queen of Scots, by Henry Stuart, lord Darnley; and grandson of James IV. of Scotland, by Margaret, daughter of Henry VII. of England; born June 19, 1566. Married Anne, of Denmark, daughter of Frederick II.: died March 27, 1625.

1625. CHARLES I., his eldest surviving son; born Nov. 19, 1600; married Henrietta-Maria, daughter of Henry IV. of France, and sister of Louis XIII. This unfortunate monarch, after a reign of contention with his subjects, was brought to trial on a charge of making war against the parliament, sentenced to be beheaded, Jan. 27, 1649, and executed on the 30th.

1649. [COMMONWEALTH. Oliver Cromwell, whose power and influence had previously been paramount, was declared protector of England, Dec. 12, 1653; died Sept. 3, 1658; and was succeeded by his son, Richard Cromwell, who was made protector, Sept. 4: he resigned the office, April 22, 1659.]

1649. CHARLES II., son of Charles I., born May 29, 1630. This king's reign commenced, in effect, with his restoration to the throne, May 29, 1660; but it is reckoned by historians from the day of his father's death, Jan. 30, 1649. He married the infant Catharine of Portugal, daughter of John IV. and sister of Alphonso VI.; but died without legitimate issue, Feb. 6, 1685.

1685. JAMES II., his brother, born Oct. 13, 1633: he married, when duke of York, lady Anne Hyde, daughter of Edward, earl of Clarendon, who died before he ascended the throne; married, 2d, Mary Beatrice Eleanor d'Este, princess of Modena, daughter of Alphonso d'Este, duke. After an unquiet reign, James abdicated by flight, finally quitting England Dec. 23, 1688; and died in exile Sept. 6, 1701.

1689. WILLIAM III., prince of Orange, and MARY II., his queen. The former was the posthumous son of William of Nassau and Orange by the princess Mary, eldest daughter of Charles I., and was born Nov. 14, 1650; the latter was the elder daughter of James II. by lady Anne Hyde, and was born April 30, 1662. Proclaimed Feb. 13, 1689; this event consummating the Revolution of 1688. Mary died Dec. 28, 1694; and William, of a fall from his horse, March 8, 1702.

1702. ANNE, second daughter of James II. by lady Anne Hyde, born Feb. 6, 1665; married, July 28, 1683, prince George of Denmark, who died Oct. 28, 1708. The queen died Aug. 1, 1714.

HOUSE OF HANOVER.

1714. GEORGE I. (Lewis), the nearest Protestant heir to the crown; son of Ernest Augustus, elector of Hanover and duke of Brunswick-Luneburg, by the princess Sophia, youngest daughter of Frederick V., elector palatine and king of Bohemia, and the princess Elizabeth, daughter of James I. Born, May 28, 1660; married Sophia-Dorothea, daughter of George-William, duke of Zell: died June 11, 1727.

1727. GEORGE II. (Augustus), born Oct. 30, 1683; married Wilhelmina-Caroline, daughter of John-Frederick, margrave of Brandenburg-Anspach: died, Oct. 25, 1760.

1760. GEORGE III. (William-Frederick), son of Frederick-Lewis, prince of Wales, and grandson of George II.: born June 4, 1738; married Charlotte-Sophia, daughter of Charles-Lewis-Frederick, duke of Mecklenburgh-Strelitz, Sept. 8, 1761. His son, George, prince of Wales, declared regent of the kingdom, Feb. 5, 1811; and so continued until Jan. 29, 1820, when the king died in the 82d year of his age and the 60th of his reign, being the longest reign in the English annals.

1820. GEORGE IV. (Augustus-Frederick), eldest son of George III.; born Aug. 12, 1762; married his cousin Caroline-Amelia-Elizabeth, daughter of Charles-William-Ferdinand, duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbützel, by Augusta, eldest sister of George III., April 8, 1795. Became prince regent, Feb. 5, 1811; and succeeded to the throne, Jan. 29, 1820. His consort Caroline died Aug. 7, 1821: the king died June 26, 1830.

1830. WILLIAM IV. (Henry), duke of Clarence, third son of George III.; born Aug. 21, 1765; married Amelia-Adelaide-Louisa-Theresa-Caroline, daughter of George-Frederick-Charles, duke of Saxe-Meiningen, July 11, 1818. The king died June 20, 1837. His consort died Dec. 2, 1849.

1837. VICTORIA (Alexandrina-Victoria), daughter of Edward, duke of Kent, fourth son of George III.; born May 24, 1819; succeeded her uncle, June 20, 1837; and was crowned, June 28, 1838. Married, Feb. 10, 1840, her cousin Albert, prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. See below.

England and Wales were united A. D. 1283; Scotland was united to both in 1707; and the three were then styled Great Britain. Ireland was incorporated with these countries by the act of Legislative Union, January 1, 1801, and the whole called the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

THE PRESENT ROYAL FAMILY OF ENGLAND.

The QUEEN. Alexandrina-VICTORIA, only daughter of Edward, duke of Kent; born May 24, 1819; succeeded to the throne on the decease of her uncle, William IV., June 20, 1837. Crowned at Westminster, June 28, 1838. Married (Feb. 10, 1840) to her cousin, Francis-Albert-Augustus-Charles-Emmanuel, duke of Saxe, prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha; and has issue:

- | | |

1. William, who died in childhood.
2. Henry; married Margaret, daughter of the French king: died before his father.²
3. RICHARD, who succeeded his father on the throne.

4. Geoffrey, earl of Brittany and Richmond; married Constance, daughter of Conan, duke of Brittany: accidentally killed at a tournament in Paris, leaving

I. Arthur, earl or duke of Brittany, who was rightful heir of his uncle Richard.

II. Eleanor, who died unmarried.

5. Philip, who died young.
6. JOHN, who usurped the crown, in prejudice to his nephew Arthur, whom he murdered. — Hume.
7. Eleanor; married to Alphonso VIII., king of Castile.
8. Maud; married to Henry the Lion, duke of Brunswick, ancestor of the present royal family of England.
9. Joan; married to William II., count of Sicily; and, 2d, Raymond, count of Toulouse.

[Henry had two sons by Rosamond Clifford: viz., William Longespee, or Longsword, so named from the sword he usually wore; and Geoffrey, archbishop of York.]

ISSUE OF KING JOHN.

1. HENRY, who ascended the throne as Henry III.
2. Richard, earl of Poitou and Cornwall; elected king of the Romans in 1256.
3. Joan; married to Alexander II., king of Scotland.
4. Eleanor; married to William Marshall the younger, earl of Pembroke; and 2d, to Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester.

5. Isabel; married to the emperor Frederick II.

ISSUE OF HENRY III.

1. EDWARD, who ascended the throne.

12. Beatrice; died in infancy.
13. Blanch; died also in infancy.

¹ She was married to the emperor when only in her twelfth year; and was his wife eleven years, but had no issue by him. This eminent princess is usually called "the Empress." She is memorable for the resolution with which she contended against Stephen for the English sceptre: died at Rouen, in Sept. 1167.

² This prince was married at four years of age to Margaret, daughter of Louis VII. In his sixteenth year his father caused him to be crowned, June, 1070; and three years afterwards his marriage was consummated. He broke out into rebellion against the king, and this unnatural contention between father and son, which continued long, was at length terminated by the death of the prince, at the castle of Martel, in Touraine, in 1082. — Banks.

³ Edmund Plantagenet was first made earl of Chester, but the grant was revoked, and given to his elder brother. By the pope he was invested in the kingdom of Sicily and Apulia; but the splendid gift, it is well known, came to nothing: so that his real and intrinsic honour was that of earl of Lancaster. — Banks. This prince, sitting down before Bourdeaux, with a large force, and not being able to take the place, became so much affected by his ill success, that a fit of sickness was brought on, of which he died. One circumstance does honour to his memory: he commanded "that his body should not be interred until all his debts were paid." He was buried in Westminster Abbey.

14. Thomas, earl of Norfolk and marshal of England.
15. Edmund, of Woodstock, earl of Kent: beheaded in 1329.¹
16. Eleanor, who died young; second of the name.

ISSUE OF EDWARD II.

1. EDWARD, afterwards king.
2. John, of Eltham, earl of Cornwall.
3. Joan; married, in her minority, to David, prince of Scotland, son of Robert Bruce.
4. Eleanor; married to Reynald or Reginald, earl of Gueldres.

ISSUE OF EDWARD III.

1. Edward, surnamed the Black Prince, prince of Wales²; born June 15, 1330; married his cousin Joan, the "Fair Maid of Kent," daughter of Edmund, earl of Kent, reputed wife of Thomas Montacute, earl of Salisbury, and widow of sir Thomas Holland: he died July 8, 1376, having had issue
 - I. Edward, who died in his seventh year.
 - II. RICHARD, who came to the crown as Richard II.
2. William, of Hatfield; died early.
3. Lionel, duke of Clarence; married 1st, Elizabeth de Burgh, daughter of William, earl of Ulster, by whom he had an only daughter, Philippa, married to Edmund Mortimer, earl of March. Lionel espoused, 2d, Violante, daughter of the duke of Milan, and died in Italy soon after. For the issue of Philippa, see below.
4. John, of Ghent, or Gaunt (so called from the place of his birth), duke of Lancaster. From this prince sprang that branch which afterwards possessed the crown. See below.
5. Edmund, of Langley, earl of Cambridge, and, afterwards, duke of York; married Isabel, daughter of Peter, king of Castile and Leon; 2dly, Joan, daughter of Thomas, earl of Kent. For his issue (by his first duchess), see below.
6. William, of Windsor, who died young.
7. Thomas, of Woodstock, duke of Gloucester; married Eleanor, eldest daughter and coheirress of Humphrey de Bohun, earl of Hereford, Essex, and Northampton. The duke was murdered at Calais, Sept. 8, 1397.³
8. Isabel; married to Ingelram de Courcy, created earl of Bedford.

9. Joan; contracted in marriage to Alphonso, king of Castile, but died before its celebration.⁴
10. Blanch de la Tour (born in the Tower): died an infant.
11. Mary; married to John de Montfort, surnamed the Valiant, duke of Brittany.
12. Margaret; married to John Hastings, earl of Pembroke, who was poisoned.

[. The following are given under separate heads, as materially serving to elucidate the claims to, and the descent of, the crown.]

ISSUE OF PHILIPPA

1. Roger Mortimer, earl of March; married Eleanor, daughter of Thomas Holland, earl of Kent: killed in Ireland, leaving issue
 - I. Edmund, earl of March, who, on the death of Richard II. became rightful heir to the crown: he was kept in confinement by Henry IV., and died in prison, in 1424.
 - II. Anne Mortimer, who became heiress of her house, and conveyed its claims on the crown to the house of York, by her marriage with Richard, earl of Cambridge.
- III. Eleanor; married to Edward Courtenay, earl of Devon.
2. Edmund Mortimer; who settled in North Britain.
3. John Mortimer; put to death in 1424.
4. Elizabeth; married to Henry, lord Percy, surnamed Hotspur.
5. Philippa; married, 1st, to John, earl of Pembroke; 2d, to Richard Fitz-Alan, earl of Arundel.

ISSUE OF JOHN OF GAUNT

(4th son of Edward III.).

[This prince married, 1st, Blanch, youngest daughter and coheirress of Henry, duke of Lancaster; and had issue]

1. HENRY, afterwards Henry IV.
2. Philippa; married to John I., king of Portugal.
3. Elizabeth; married, 1st, to John, duke of Exeter; and, 2d, to sir John Cornewall, created baron Fanhope.

[He married, 2d, Constance, eldest daughter and coheirress of Peter, king of Castile. and Leon, by whom he had]

¹ The crime of this prince was, his endeavouring to deliver his brother, Edward III., from prison. By the contrivance of queen Isabel and her minion Mortimer, he was beheaded at Winchester, after having stood upon the scaffold from noon until five o'clock in the evening, waiting for an executioner. "No one," says the historian, "could be found hardened enough to perform the odious office." It was at length undertaken by a malefactor from the Marshalsea. — Banks.

³ Thomas was taken from Pleshey, in Essex, and conveyed to Calais, where (with the royal privy) he was smothered under a feather-bed, by Seile, Francis, and others, who, informing him of the king's command, and announcing to him that he must die, he resigned himself, and said, that if it were his sovereign's pleasure he would submit to it. This appears by the examination of John Hall, taken in parliament, 1st Henry IV. 1399; and though not acting in the murder, this Hall was sentenced to be hanged at Tyburn and his body sent to Calais, where the deed was done.

⁴ She bore the title of Queen of Spain, and was conveyed to that country, where she presently died of the plague, which then raged, aged fourteen. "So that Alphonso, coming to meet her, with great pomp, to solemnize his nuptials, had, instead, to follow her, in mourning, to the grave, anno 1348." — Rabbe's Historia de Espana.

4. Catherine; married to Henry, prince of Asturias, afterwards king of Castile and Leon.

[The duke married, 3d, Catherine, daughter of sir Payn Roelt, knt., and widow of sir Hugh Swynford. By this lady he had, before marriage]

5. John; marquess of Dorset and Somerset, ancestor of the present duke of Beaufort.
6. Henry; bishop of Winchester.
7. Thomas; duke of Exeter.
8. Joan; married to, 1st, Robert, lord Ferrers; and, 2d, to Ralph Nevill, earl of Westmoreland.

[These last, by act of parliament, 20 Richard II., were declared legitimate for all purposes but inheriting the crown.]

ISSUE OF EDMUND, EARL OF CAMBRIDGE

(5th son of Edward III.).

1. Constance; married to Thomas le Despencer, earl of Gloucester.
2. Edward, duke of York and Albemarle; slain at the battle of Agincourt.
3. Richard, earl of Cambridge; married Anne Mortimer, great-grand-daughter, and eventually heiress of his uncle Lionel, duke of Clarence. Through her the house of York derived its title to the crown in preference to the house of Lancaster, which, though descended in an unbroken male line from Edward III. was the line of a younger son. The earl was beheaded for a plot against the life of Henry V., leaving issue
I. Isabel; married to Henry Bourchier, earl of Essex.

II. Richard, duke of York and protector of England; married Cicely, daughter of Ralph Nevill, earl of Westmoreland: he was slain at the battle of Wakefield in 1460. His issue follows:

ISSUE OF RICHARD, DUKE OF YORK.

1. Henry; died an infant.
2. EDWARD; afterwards Edward IV.
3. Edmund, earl of Rutland; slain at Wakefield, aged only 12 years.
4. William; died in infancy.
5. John; died an infant.
6. George, duke of Clarence; married Isabel, daughter of Richard Nevill, earl of Warwick: attainted, and allowed by his brother, Edward IV., to choose the manner of his death, 1477: he left issue
I. Edward, earl of Warwick; beheaded in 1499.
II. Margaret, countess of Salisbury; married to sir Richard Pole: attainted, and beheaded in 1541.
7. Thomas; died an infant.
8. RICHARD, afterwards Richard III.
9. Anne; married, 1st, Henry Holland, duke of Exeter; and, 2d, sir Thomas St. Leger, knt.
10. Elizabeth; married to John Delapole, duke of Suffolk.
11. Margaret; married to Charles, duke of Burgundy.
12. Ursula.

* * Edward, earl of Warwick, beheaded, as above, in 1499, was the last of the male line of the Plantagenets.

BORN OF THE HOUSE OF LANCASTER.

ISSUE OF HENRY IV.

1. HENRY, surnamed Monmouth, prince of Wales, who succeeded to the throne as Henry V.
2. Thomas, of Lancaster, duke of Clarence, who fell at the battle of Beaugue, in 1421.
3. John, of Lancaster, duke of Bedford, the celebrated regent of France in the minority of Henry VI. This prince's treatment of the enthusiastic Maid of Orleans indelibly tarnished the laurels he had won by a series of brilliant achievements.
4. Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, regent of England in the same minority. It is supposed that he died by violence or poison.
5. Blanch; married, 1st, to Louis, prince palatine of Bavaria; 2d, to the king of Arragon; and, 3d, to the duke of Barre.
6. Philippa; married to Eric, king of Denmark.

ISSUE OF HENRY V.

HENRY, prince of Wales, who succeeded to the crown as Henry VI.

The widow of Henry V. married sir Owen Tudor of the principality of Wales, said to be of royal lineage, by whom she had

I. Edmund Tudor, created earl of Richmond, who married Margaret, daughter of John, first duke of Somerset, and great-grand-daughter of John of Gaunt; and left an only son, HENRY, earl of Richmond, who ascended the throne as Henry VII.

II. Jasper Tudor, created earl of Pembroke.

III. Tacina Tudor, married to Reginald, lord Grey, of Wilton.

ISSUE OF HENRY VI.

Edward, prince of Wales, born Oct. 31, 1452; he married, in 1470, the lady Anne Nevill, second daughter and coheiress of Richard Nevill, earl of Warwick. This prince was, with his mother, taken prisoner at the battle of Tewkesbury, in 1471, and was murdered a few days afterwards by the dukes of Gloucester and Clarence, and lord Hastings. His widow, Anne, subsequently married Gloucester, one of his murderers, who became king, as Richard III.

¹ He was drowned in a butt of Malmsey wine, his brother, the duke of Gloucester, as it is said, assisting at his death with his own hands. Though the king consented to his death, yet no sooner was the unnatural deed accomplished, than he repented of it, and so poignantly did it cause him to feel, that whenever he was solicited to spare the life of a condemned person, he would exclaim, "Oh! unfortunate brother! for whose life no man would make suit."

BORN OF THE HOUSE OF YORK.

ISSUE OF EDWARD IV.

1. EDWARD, prince of Wales, who succeeded his father as Edward V., and
2. Richard, duke of York. These two princes were murdered in the Tower, at the instance of their uncle Richard, duke of Gloucester, in 1483.
[The latter prince, Richard, was married in his infancy to Anne, heiress of the house of Mowbray, only child of John Mowbray, duke of Norfolk and earl marshal of England, she being also an infant.]
3. George; who died young.
4. Elizabeth; married to Henry VII.

5. Cicely; married, 1st, to John, lord Wells; and, 2d, to sir J. Kyme.
6. Anne, married to Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk.
This king had four other daughters, namely,
7. Bridget, who became a nun.
8. Mary, who died unmarried, though affianced to the king of Denmark.
9. Margaret, and
10. Katharine, who espoused William Courtenay, earl of Devonshire.

ISSUE OF RICHARD III.

Edward, prince of Wales; upon whom the crown was entailed by parliament; but he died vitâ patris.

BORN OF THE HOUSE OF TUDOR.

ISSUE OF HENRY VII.

1. Arthur, prince of Wales; born Sept. 20, 1486; married, Nov. 1501, the infanta Catharine, daughter of Ferdinand of Arragon; but died in a few months afterwards. His widow became the first wife of his brother Henry VIII.; to whom she was married June 3, 1509.
2. HENRY, who succeeded his father on the throne as Henry VIII.
3. Edmund, who died young.
4. Margaret, married, 1st, to James IV. of Scotland, by whom she had an only son, James V. of Scotland, father of the unfortunate Mary, queen of Scots, whose son, James VI., ascended the English throne as James I. Margaret married, 2d, Arthur Douglas, earl of Angus, from whom she was divorced; and, 3d, Henry Stuart, earl of Methven. By her second husband she had an only daughter, Margaret, who espoused Matthew Stuart, earl of Lenox, and was mother of Henry, earl of Darnley, the husband of Mary of Scots, and father of James I. of England.
5. Elizabeth, who died in infancy.
6. Mary; married, 1st, to Louis XII. king of France; and, 2d, to Charles Brandon, duke of Suffolk; by whom she left

- I. Henry, earl of Lincoln, who died un married.
- II. Frances, married to Henry Grey, afterwards duke of Suffolk; and had three daughters, of whom the eldest was the amiable and unfortunate lady Jane Grey.
- III. Eleanor, married to Henry Clifford, earl of Cumberland, and left a daughter, Margaret, who espoused Henry Stanley, earl of Derby.

ISSUE OF HENRY VIII.

1. Henry, who died young.
2. MARY (by Catharine of Arragon) who ascended the throne.
3. ELIZABETH (by his second queen, Anna Boleyn) who ascended the throne.
4. EDWARD (by his third queen, the lady Jane Seymour) who ascended the throne.
[The king had by his first queen, besides Henry and Mary, other children not named, who died in infancy.]

BORN OF THE HOUSE OF STUART.

ISSUE OF JAMES I.

1. Henry-Frederick, created, after his father's accession, duke of Cornwall, and in May 1610, prince of Wales: died, at the age of eighteen, Nov. 6, 1612.
2. Robert, who died early.
3. CHARLES, who succeeded his father on the throne as Charles I.
4. Elizabeth¹; married to Frederick, count palatine of the Rhine, who, in 1620, was elected king of Bohemia; but afterwards driven from his dominions. She had issue:
 - I. Frederick-Henry: drowned in 1529, in his fifteenth year.

- II. Charles-Lewis II., who, by the treaty of Munster, was created the eighth elector of the empire.
- III. Rupert, so renowned in the civil war of England as "Prince Rupert:" created duke of Cumberland.
- IV. Maurice, known in English history as "Prince Maurice;" perished by shipwreck in 1654.
- V. Lewis, died young.
- VI. Edward, count palatine of the Rhine.
- VII. Philip, slain at the battle near St. Stephen's in 1640.
- VIII. Gustavus: died in 1641, in his minority.

¹ This amiable princess, who saw only a phantom of royalty, and had nothing more than the empty title of queen, bore her misfortunes with magnanimity when her husband lost his possessions, which the weak policy of James would not enable him to recover. She was so beloved that in the Low Countries she was called "The Queen of Hearts." After the restoration of Charles II., she visited England, and is supposed to have married William, the first lord Craven, whose house was in Drury-lane, where, some years since, was a tavern known by the name of the "Queen of Bohemia."—T. C. Banks.

IX. Elizabeth, who became abbess of Herforden, in Westphalia, and died in 1680.

X. Louisa-Hollandia, became abbess of Maubisson, near Paris.

XI. Henrietta; married Sigismund, prince of Transylvania, and died a few months after.

XII. Charlotte; died in infancy.

XIII. Sophia: on whose descendants the crown of England devolved by the act of Settlement; born Oct. 13, 1630; married, 1658, Ernest-Augustus, duke of Brunswick-Lunenbourg, afterwards elector of Hanover, by whom she had issue, GEORGE-Lewis, who ascended the English throne as George I.

5. Margaret; died young, 1598.

6. Mary; died in her third year, 1607.

7. Sophia; died two days after her birth, 1606.

ISSUE OF THE PRINCESS SOPHIA

(grand-daughter of James I.)

1. GEORGE-Lewis, afterwards king George I.
2. Frederick-Augustus; slain in battle against the Turks, 1690.
3. Maximilian-William; died Dec. 1666.
4. Charles-Philip; slain in battle, 1690.
5. Christian; drowned in the Danube, July, 1703.
6. Ernest-Augustus, bishop of Osnaburg; created, in 1716, duke of York and Albany and earl of Ulster: died August, 1728.
7. Sophia-Charlotte; married to Frederick-William, elector of Brandenburg, king of Prussia.

ISSUE OF CHARLES I.

1. Charles, who died the day he was born.
2. CHARLES, prince of Wales, afterwards Charles II.
3. JAMES, duke of York, afterwards James II.
4. Henry, duke of Gloucester, who died unmarried, in 1660.
5. Mary, married to William II. of Nassau, prince of Orange, by whom she had an only son, WILLIAM, who ascended the throne of England, as William III.
6. Elizabeth, who died of grief, a prisoner in Carisbrook Castle in Sept. 1650, aged 15 years.
7. Anne, who died young.
8. Henrietta-Maria, married to Philip, duke of Anjou, afterwards duke of Orleans, only brother to Louis XIV.

ISSUE OF CHARLES II.

[This prince left no legitimate issue, but had many natural children by various mistresses; among these was the celebrated James, duke of Monmouth, by Mrs. Lucy Walters¹.]

¹ In 1679, a belief very generally obtained throughout the kingdom, that the king had been lawfully married to this lady. This belief was countenanced the more on account of the popularity of the duke of Monmouth, who was daily gaining on the affections of the people. Some of Monmouth's supposed chief friends began to invite him to cast his eyes upon the crown. This so affected the king that his majesty thought himself obliged, both in conscience and honour, to cause the following Declaration to be entered in the records of his privy council:

“That to avoid any dispute which may happen in time to come, concerning the succession of the crown, he declares in the presence of ALMIGHTY GOD, that he never gave, nor made any contract of marriage, nor was ever married to any woman whatsoever, but to his present wife, Queen Catherine, now living.

Signed “CHARLES R.”

With this Declaration some persons not being satisfied, and the duke of Monmouth growing still more popular, his majesty thought fit to renew his Protestation, thus:

“On the word of a King and the faith of a Christian, that he was never married to Mrs. Lucy Barlow, alias Walters, the Duke of Monmouth's mother, nor to any other woman whatsoever, besides the now Queen.”

The latter protestation is of record in the Court of Chancery.

ISSUE OF JAMES II.

1. Charles, duke of Cambridge, who died young.
 2. MARY, married to William-Henry of Nassau, prince of Orange; she and her husband afterwards ascended the English throne as Mary II. and William III.
 3. James, duke of Cambridge; born July, 1663: died in 1667.
 4. ANNE, who succeeded to the crown.
 5. Charles, duke of Kendal; died an infant.
 6. Edgar, duke of Cambridge; born Sept. 14, 1667: died June 8, 1671.
 7. Henrietta; died in infancy.
 8. Catherine, who also died an infant.
- These four sons and four daughters were by lady Anne Hyde, and none of them, except Mary and Anne, afterwards queens regnant, survived four years of age. By his second wife, the princess of Modena, James had:

9. Catherine-Laura, who died in infancy.
10. Charles, duke of Cambridge; died an infant.
11. Isabella; died in her 4th year.
12. Charlotte-Maria; died in infancy.
13. James-Francis-Edward, so well known after his father's death as the PRETENDER, and supposed by many to have been of fictitious birth; born June 18, 1668; married, in 1719, Mary-Clementina, daughter of prince James Sobieski, and grand-daughter of John, king of Poland, by whom he had issue:
 - I. Charles-Edward, the celebrated Chevalier St. George, or YOUNG PRETENDER, born in 1720; married the princess Stollberg: died in 1788.
 - II. Henry-Benedict, known as CARDINAL YORK; died in 1807, when the whole issue of James became extinct.

14. Louisa-Maria-Theresa, born in 1692: died in 1712.

[James had also several natural children, of whom was the renowned James Fitz-James, duke of Berwick, by lady Arabella Churchill: he followed his father, after his abdication, into France; became general of the French and Spanish armies; and successfully contended against England in the battle of Amanza, in 1707. Killed at the siege of Philipsburgh in 1734.]

ISSUE OF QUEEN ANNE.

ISSUE OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

See the "Present Royal Family of England," page 7.

WALES.

THE Britons being driven beyond the Severn, fortified themselves in this country, anciently called Cambria, which name the kings of the Heptarchy changed into Wallish-Land, or Wales. The inhabitants resisted for ages, in their inaccessible mountains, the power of the Saxons; and subsequently fought valorously for their independence against the English kings, until the reign of Edward I., by whom the whole country was finally reduced into one principality, and made subject to England. Wales was united and incorporated with England by act of parliament, 27 Henry VIII. 1535.

* * * * *	1256. Gwenwinwin, or Gwenwynwyn.
	1256. Owain ab Gruffydd.
	 The last prince who held this dominion entire, was Meredydd ab Bleddyn. He divided it between his two sons, Madoc and Gruffydd.

The Welch having finally submitted to Edward I., and Llewelyn, their last prince of the blood, having been slain, the king resolved to gain, if possible, the hearts of his new subjects; and with this intention, he sent for his queen, Eleanor, then with child, to Carnarvon Castle, where she was soon afterwards delivered of a son. He thereupon convened the Welch chieftains, who were, he perceived, much indisposed to being governed by strangers, and told them, he was about to offer them "a prince for their ruler, who was of their own nation, who could not speak a word of English, and whose life was free from reproach." The chieftains joyfully accepting this proposal, the king named his new-born offspring as their prince; and the eldest sons of the sovereigns of England have been created princes of Wales soon after their birth, from this time.

PRINCES OF WALES OF THE BLOOD-ROYAL OF ENGLAND.

1284. Edward, of Carnarvon, son of Edward I.; afterwards Edward II.	wards Edward VI.; but the patent of creation to the dignity was never actually passed. — Sandford.

SCOTLAND.

Caledonia. — TACITUS. Albin (Highland name). — MACDEAN. Albine. — SCOTT. This country was governed by a king long before the Romans visited England. It continued an independent kingdom until the death of the English queen Elizabeth in 1603, when James VI. of Scotland, the most immediate heir, was called to the throne of England; he and his successors styling themselves kings of England and Scotland, and each country having a separate parliament, until 1707, in the reign of queen Anne. In that year and reign both kingdoms were united under the general name of Great Britain.

KINGS OF SCOTLAND.

BEFORE CHRIST.

[The early accounts of the kings are, by many historians, deemed, in a great measure, fabulous. The antiquity of the kings is carried as far back as Alexander the Great.]

330. Fergus I.; ruled 25 years: lost in the Irish Sea.¹
305. Fritharis, brother of Fergus: supposed to have been poisoned.
290. Mainus; succeeded his uncle; a just and esteemed prince.
261. Dornadilla, son of Mainus; a peaceful reign of 28 years.
233. Northatus, brother of the preceding; cruel and avaricious: slain.
213. Reutherus, son of Dornadilla.

158. Josina, brother of Thereus.
134. Finanus; succeeded his father Josina; a prosperous reign.
104. Durstus, son of the preceding; a sensual prince; murdered many of his nobles at a feast, whereupon a civil war arose, and he was slain.
95. Evenus, a just, resolute, and valiant ruler; succeeded by
76. Gillus, his illegitimate son, who, usurping the royal power, caused the murder of the rightful heirs: deposed by his nobles, and beheaded.
75. Evenus II., nephew of Finanus, chosen in his room.
59. Ederus, grandson of Durstus.
12. Evenus III., succeeded his father Ederus: deposed for his enormous crimes, and strangled in prison.
4. Metellanus, nephew of Ederus: eminent for his justice and virtues.

AFTER CHRIST.

35. Caratacus or Caractacus, nephew of the preceding.
55. Corbred, his brother.
72. Dardanus, son of Corbred; a dissolute tyrant; his subjects slew him.
76. Corbred II., surnamed Galdus. Some suppose this king to be the Galgacus whom Tacitus mentions as having fought valiantly against Julius Agricola.
110. Luctacus or Lugthacus, his son, a cruel and sensual tyrant; murdered by his nobles.
113. Mogaldus, grandson of Corbred II.: murdered.
149. Conarus, his son; he conspired in his father's murder: deposed, and died in prison.
163. Ethodius I.: slain by an Irish harper in revenge for the murder of a kinsman:
- the regicide was torn asunder by wild horses.
195. Satrael or Satrahel, brother of the preceding; grown odious for his vices and oppression he was strangled by his courtiers.
199. Donald I., brother of the two last.
216. Ethodius II., son of Ethodius I.: slain by his guards in a domestic tumult.
231. Athirco, succeeded his father: an odious tyrant; dishonoured the daughters of Nathalocus, a noble, who took arms against him: slew himself to avoid a severer death.
242. Nathalocus, who usurped the throne on the king's death; murdered many of his nobles: killed by his domestics.
253. Findochus, son of Athirco: murdered in a conspiracy, in which his brother, Carantius, was a principal.
264. Donald II., a third son of Athirco: slain in a battle with Donald of the Isles, who succeeded.
265. Donald III., lord of the Isles; usurped the throne; a terror to his people: slain by his successor.
277. Carthilinthus or Crathilinthus, son of Findochus; reigned 24 years.
301. Fincormachus, son of Donald II.; reigned 47 years, and died lamented.
348. Romachus, nephew of the preceding: slain by his nobles, and succeeded by his cousin.
351. Angusianus or Æneanus: fell in battle with the Pictish king, who was also slain.
354. Fethelmachus, also cousin of Romachus; defeated the Picts and mortally wounded their new king in battle: murdered by a Pictish minstrel who feigned himself a Scot, hired by Hergustus, the succeeding king of that nation.
357. Eugenius I., son of Fincormachus: slain in battle by Maximus, the Roman general, and the confederate Picts.

 With this battle ended the kingdom of the Scots, after having existed from the coronation of Fergus I., a period of 706 years: the royal family fled to Denmark. — Boece. Buchanan.

[Interregnum of 27 years.]

404. Fergus II.² (I.) great-grandson of Eugenius and 40th king: slain in battle with the Romans.
420. Eugenius II. or Evenus, son of Fergus: reigned 31 years.
451. Dongardus or Domangard, brother of Eugenius: defeated and drowned.
457. Constantine I., brother of Dongardus: assassinated by Dugall, a noble whose daughter he had dishonoured.

¹ Fergus, a brave prince, came from Ireland with an army of Scots, and was chosen king. Having defeated the Britons and slain their king Collus, the kingdom of the Scots was entailed upon his posterity for ever. He went to Ireland, and, having settled his affairs there, was drowned on his return, launching from the shore, near the harbour, called Carrick-Fergus to this day, 3699 A. M. — Anderson.

² Some call this Fergus the first king, and suppose that either the foregoing kings are fabulous, or that they were only chiefs or generals of armies, having no royal authority. The controversy thus arising, I leave to be decided by the antiquaries, and must follow the received histories of Scotland. — Anderson.

479. Congallus I., nephew of the preceding: a just and prudent king.
501. Goranus, brother of Congallus: murdered. — Boece. Died while Donald of Athol was conspiring to take his life. — Scott.
535. Eugenius III., succeeded his uncle Goranus: "none excelled him in justice."
558. Congallus II., brother of Eugenius III.
569. Kinnatellus, brother of the preceding: resigned in favour of Aidanus.
570. Aidanus or Aldan, son of Goranus.
605. Kenneth or Kennet I., son of Congallus II.: reigned one year.
606. Eugenius IV., son of Adianus.
621. Ferchard or Ferquhard, son of the last: confined for misdeeds to his palace, where he laid violent hands upon himself. — Scott.
632. Donald IV., brother of Ferchard: drowned in Loch Tay.
646. Ferchard II., son of Ferchard I.; "the most execrable of kings:" died from the bite of a mad wolf.
664. Malduinus, son of Donald IV.: strangled by his wife for his supposed infidelity, for which crime she was immediately afterwards burnt.
684. Eugenius V., brother of Malduinus.
688. Eugenius VI., son of Ferchard II.
698. Amberkeletus, his nephew: fell by an arrow from an unknown hand.
699. Eugenius VII., his brother: some ruffians designing the king's murder, entered his chamber, and he being absent, stabbed his queen, Spontana, to death. — Scott.
715. Mordachus, son of Amberkeletus.
730. Etfinus, son of Eugenius VII.
761. Eugenius VIII., son of Mordachus; sensual and tyrannous: put to death by his nobles, and his parasites strangled.
764. Fergus III., son of Etfinus: killed by his queen in a fit of jealousy; she immediately afterwards stabbed herself* to escape a death of torture.
767. Solvathius, son of Eugenius VIII.
787. Achaius; a just and wise prince.
819. Congallus III., a peaceful reign.
824. Dongal or Dougal, son of Solvathius: drowned in the Spey.
831. Alpine, son of Achaius: taken prisoner and beheaded, with many of his nobles, by the Picts.
834. Kenneth II., son of Alpinus, and surnamed Mac Alpine; defeated the Picts, and slew their king and his nobility. United the Picts and Scots under one sceptre, and became the first sole monarch of all Scotland 843.
854. Donald V., brother of Kenneth: dethroned, and terminated an inglorious reign in prison, dying by his own hand.
858. Constantine II., son of Kenneth: taken in battle by the Danes, and beheaded.
874. Eth or Ethus, surnamed Lightfoot: died of grief in prison, having been thrown into confinement for his sensuality and crimes.
876. Gregory, called the Great; distinguished (as a king) for his bravery, moderation, and justice.
893. Donald VI., second son of Constantine; an excellent prince.
904. Constantine III., son of Ethus: resigned in favour of Malcolm, after a long reign, and retired to a monastery.
944. Malcolm I., son of Donald VI.: treacherously murdered in Moray.
953. Indulfus or Gundulph: killed by the Danes in an ambushade.
961. Duff or Duffus, son of Malcolm; basely murdered by Donald, the governor of Forres Castle.
965. Cullen or Culenus, son of Indulfus; avenged the murder of his predecessor: assassinated at Methven by a thane, whose daughter he had dishonoured.
970. Kenneth III., brother of Duffus: murdered by Fenella, the lady of Fettercairn.
994. Constantine IV., son of Culenus, usurped the throne; slain.
995. Grimus, or the Grim, son of Duffus: routed and slain in battle by Malcolm, the rightful heir to the crown, who succeeded.
1003. Malcolm II., son of Kenneth III.: assassinated on his way to Glamis; the assassins in their flight, crossing a frozen lake, were drowned by the ice giving way. Malcolm was succeeded by his grandson, 1033. Duncan I.: assassinated by his cousin Macbeth, who ascended the throne.
1039. Macbeth, usurper and tyrant: slain by Macduff, the thane of Fife, and the rightful heir succeeds.

* * * Historians so differ up to this reign, in the number of the kings, the dates of succession, and the circumstances narrated, that no account can be taken as precisely accurate.

1057. Malcolm III. (Cean-Mohr or Canmore) son of Duncan: killed while besieging Alnwick Castle.
1093. Donald VII. or Donald Bane, brother of Malcolm, usurped the throne: fled to the Hebrides.
1094. Duncan II., natural son of Malcolm; also an usurper: murdered.
1094. Donald Bane, again: deposed.
1098. Edgar, son of Malcolm, and rightful heir. Henry I. of England married his sister Maud, who had taken the vows, but not the veil.
1107. Alexander, surnamed the Fierce, brother of Edgar.
1124. David, brother of the two preceding kings; married Matilda, daughter of Waltheof, earl of Northumberland.
1153. Malcolm IV., grandson to David: succeeded by his brother, 1165. William, surnamed the Lion.
1214. Alexander II., son of William; married Joan, daughter of John, king of England.
1249. Alexander III.; married Margaret, daughter of Henry III. of England; dislocated his neck, when hunting, near Kinghorn.
1285. Margaret, called the "Maiden of Norway," grand-daughter of the last king; "recognized by the states of Scotland, though a female, an infant, and a foreigner:" died on her passage to Scotland.
- [On the death of Margaret, a competition arose for the vacant throne, which Edward I. of England decided in favour of] 1292. John Baliol, who afterwards surrendered his crown, and died in exile.

[Interregnum.]
1306. Robert (Bruce) I.; the Bruce of Bannockburn; a brave prince, beloved by his people.
1329. David (Bruce) II., son of Robert. Edward Baliol disputed the throne with him.
1332. Edward Baliol, son of John: resigned.
1342. David II. again; eleven years a prisoner in England; succeeded by his nephew, 1371. Robert (Stuart) II.; succeeded by his son,
1390. Robert III.,¹ whose proper name was John, changed on his accession.
1406. James I., second son of the preceding; imprisoned 18 years in England; set at liberty in 1423: conspired against and murdered, 1437. Assassinated in his bed-chamber, Feb. 21, 1437-8. — Banks.
1437. James II., son of James I., whom he succeeded at seven years of age: killed at the siege of Roxburgh Castle by a cannon bursting.
1460. James III.; succeeded his father: killed in a revolt of his subjects at Bannockburn-field.
1488. James IV.; married Margaret Tudor, daughter of Henry VII. of England: killed at the battle of Flodden.
1513. James V.; son of the last king: succeeded when little more than a year old; a sovereign possessing many virtues.
1542. Mary, daughter of James V.; succeeded in her infancy: put to death in England.
1567. James VI.; son of Mary. In 1603, on the death of queen Elizabeth, he succeeded to the throne of England, and the kingdoms became united. See England.

IRELAND.

Hibernia. — TACITUS. Ierne. — STRABO.² It is disputed by historians from what nation this country was originally peopled. It seems, however, to be satisfactorily shown that the first colonists were Phœnicians. The Partholani landed in Ireland about 2048 B. C. The descent of the Damnonii was made about 1463 B. C. This was followed by the descent of Heber and Heremon, Milesian princes, from Galicia, in Spain, who conquered Ireland, and gave to its throne a race of 171 kings. Ireland was formerly divided among a number of petty sovereigns, or chiefs, which circumstance facilitated the conquest of the whole by Henry II. in A. D. 1172; but the English did not remain quiet possessors of the entire kingdom until the reign of James I., or after the year 1614.

KINGS OF IRELAND (According to Keating).

BEFORE CHRIST.

[So much fable is mixed up with the early history of this country, and the dates and the orthography of names so vary in every account, it is impossible to do more than compile from accepted authorities.³]

FROM THE MILESIA CONQUEST.

1300. Heber and Heremon.
1291. Heremon, alone.
1285. Muirmhne, Luighne, and Laighne, succeeded their father, Heremon; reigning jointly: the first died, and the other two were slain in battle by the sons of Heber.
1282. Er, Orbha, Fearon, and Feargna, sons of Heber, succeeded the sons of Heremon: all slain in battle by their successor.
1281. Irial, or Irial-Faith; slew and succeeded the four sons of Heber.
1271. Eithrial: slain in battle by his successor.
1251. Connaol, or Conveal, "first absolute monarch of the Hibernian race:" slain in battle.
1221. Tigerna; introduced idolatry into Ireland.
1171. Eochaidh-Eadgothac.
1147. Cearna and Sohair, brothers; partitioned Ireland into south and north.
1107. Fiachade-Lahruin: slain by his successor.
1083. Eochaidh-Mumho: slain by his successor.

¹ David, eldest son of this sovereign, was created duke of Rothesay in 1398, from which time the principality and stewardry of Scotland, the dukedom of Rothesay, the earldom of Carrick, lordship of the Isles, and barony of Renfrew, have been vested in the heir-apparent of the sovereign, who from his birth or his father's accession to the throne, enjoys those honours.

³ The Irish writers carry their succession of kings very high, as high as even before the Flood. The learned antiquary, Thomas Jones, of the Scots' College of Paris, expresses his wonder that "the learned men of the Irish nation, have not, like those of other nations, yet published the valuable remains of their ancient history whole and entire, with just translations, in order to separate what is fabulous and only grounded on the traditions of their poets and bards, from what is certain history." "O'Flaherty, Keating, Toland, Kennedy, and other modern Irish historians have rendered all uncertain by deducing their history from the Deluge, with as much assurance as they deliver the transactions of Ireland from St. Patrick's time." — Anderson.

1061. Aongus-Olmuchac; slain by his successor.
 1043. Eadna-Airgtheach, and
 1016. Rotheachta: both slain by their successors.

 1168. Roderic, or Roger O'Connor.
 1172. Henry II., king of England; conquered the country, and became lord of Ireland.
 [The English monarchs were styled "Lords of Ireland," until the reign of Henry VIII., who styled himself king; and this title has continued ever since.]

GERMANY. — AUSTRIA.

Germania, and Alemania. Anciently divided into several independent states. The Germans withstood the attempts of the Romans to subdue them; and although that people conquered some parts of the country, they were expelled before the close of the 3rd century. In the 5th century the might of the Huns and other nations prevailed over the greater portion of Germany; it was not, however, totally reduced until Charlemagne made himself master of the whole. This great prince took the title of emperor, entailing the dignity upon his family; but after his race became extinct in 911, the empire went to the Germans, and the rank was afterwards made elective. The house of Austria enjoyed the distinction almost uninterruptedly from 1438 (when one of its princes was raised to the imperial throne) until 1804. In that year Francis II. resigned the honour and office of emperor of Germany, and became emperor of Austria only¹; the latter title being hereditary.

KINGS AND EMPERORS OF GERMANY.

CARLOVINGIAN RACE.

800. Charlemagne.
 814. Louis le Debonnaire, king of France.
 840. Lothaire, or Lothar, son of Louis: died in a monastery at Treves.
 855. Louis II., son of Lothar.
 875. Charles II., called the Bald, king of France: poisoned by his physician, Zedechias, a Jew. — Henault.
 877. [Interregnum.]
 880. Charles III., le Gros; crowned king of Italy: deposed; succeeded by
 887. Arnulf, or Arnoul: crowned emperor at Rome in 896.
 899. Louis III., called IV.: the last of the Carolingian race in Germany.

SAXON DYNASTY.

911. Otho, duke of Saxony: refused the dignity on account of his age.
 911. Conrad I., duke of Franconia.
 918. Henry I., surnamed the Fowler, son of Otho, duke of Saxony; king.
 936. Otho I., styled the Great, son of Henry. Many writers withhold the imperial title from him until crowned by pope John XII. in 962.
 973. Otho II., the Bloody; so stigmatised for his cruelties: massacred his chief nobility at an entertainment to which he had invited them: wounded by a poisoned arrow.

¹ This monarch surrendered the dignity of emperor of Germany on the 11th of August, 1804; and again renounced the title by a formal and public declaration, in which he assumed the rank of emperor of Austria, on August 6, 1806; and the German princes, seceding from the Germanic empire, placed themselves under the protection of Napoleon, of France.

983. Otho III., surnamed the Red, his son, yet in his minority: poisoned.
1002. Henry II., duke of Bavaria, surnamed the Holy, and the Lame.
1024. Conrad II., surnamed the Salique.
1039. Henry III., the Black, son of Conrad II.
1056. Henry IV., son of the preceding; a minor, under the regency of his mother Agnes: deposed by his son and successor,
1106. Henry V.; married Maud or Matilda, daughter of Henry I. of England
1125. Lothaire II., surnamed the Saxon.
1138. [Interregnum.]
1138. Conrad III., duke of Franconia.
1152. Frederick Barbarossa; one of the most splendid reigns in the German annals: drowned by his horse throwing him into the river Salphet, or the Cydnus.
1190. Henry VI., his son, surnamed Asper, or the Sharp: it was this emperor that detained Richard I. of England a prisoner in his dominions.
1198. Philip, brother to Henry: assassinated at Bamberg by Otto, of Wittelsbach.
1208. Otho IV., surnamed the Superb, recognised as king of Germany, and crowned as emperor the next year: excommunicated and deposed.
1212. Frederick II., king of Sicily, the son of Henry VI.: deposed by his subjects, who elected Henry, landgrave of Thuringia. Frederick died in 1250, naming his son Conrad his successor, but the pope gave the imperial title to William, earl of Holland.
1250. Conrad IV., son of Frederick.¹
1250. William, earl of Holland: died in Dec. 1255. The electors could not agree in the choice of a successor.
1256. [Interregnum.]
- HOUSES OF HAPSBERG, LUXEMBURG, AND BAVARIA.
1273. Rodolph, count of Hapsburg; the first of the Austrian family.²

1308. Henry VII. of Luxemburg.
1313. [Interregnum.]
1314. Louis IV. (III.) of Bavaria, and Frederick III. of Austria, son of Albert, rival emperors: Frederick died in 1330.
1330. Louis reigns alone.
1347. Charles IV. of Luxemburg. In this reign
- was given at Nuremberg in 1356, the famous Golden Bull, which became the fundamental law of the German empire.
1378. Wenceslas, king of Bohemia, son of Charles: twice imprisoned, and at length forced to resign; but continued to reign in Bohemia.
1400. Frederick, duke of Brunswick: assassinated immediately after his election, and seldom placed in the list of emperors.
1400. Rupert, count palatine of the Rhine; crowned at Cologne: died in 1410.
1410. Jossus, marquess of Moravia; chosen by a party of the electors: died the next year.
1410. Sigismund, king of Hungary, elected by another party. On the death of Jossus, he is recognised by all parties; king of Bohemia in 1419.
- HOUSE OF AUSTRIA.
1438. Albert II., surnamed the Great, duke of Austria, and king of Hungary and Bohemia: died Oct. 27, 1439.
1439. [Interregnum.]
1440. Frederick IV., surnamed the Pacific; elected emperor Feb. 2; but not crowned until June, in 1442.
1493. Maximilian I., son of Frederick: died in 1519. Francis I. of France and Charles I. of Spain became competitors for the empire.
1519. Charles V. (I. of Spain), son of Joan of Castile and Philip of Austria, elected; resigned both crowns, and retired to a monastery, where he died soon after.
1558. Ferdinand I., brother to Charles, king of Hungary; succeeded by his son, 1564. Maximilian II., king of Hungary and Bohemia; succeeded by his son, 1576. Rodolph II.
1612. Matthias, brother of Rodolph.
1619. Ferdinand II., his cousin, son of the archduke Charles; king of Hungary.
1637. Ferdinand III., son of the preceding emperor; succeeded by his son, 1658. Leopold I., son of Ferdinand III.
1705. Joseph I., son of the emperor Leopold.
1711. Charles VI., brother to Joseph; succeeded by his daughter,
1740. Maria-Theresa, queen of Hungary and Bohemia, whose right to the empire was sustained by England.³
1742. Charles VII., elector of Bavaria, whose claim was supported by France: rival emperor, and contested succession.
- [This competition for the throne of Germany gave rise to an almost general war. Charles died in Jan. 1745.]

² The Hapsburg family is supposed to be the most illustrious in Europe. It was founded in 1026, by Radbot, grandson of Gottram, count of Brisgau; and derived its name from the castle of Hapsburg on the river Aar, in Switzerland. This was the cradle, as it were, of the house of Austria. The male line of Hapsburg became extinct in 1740, in the person of Charles VI., after giving twenty-two sovereigns to Austria, sixteen emperors to Germany, eleven kings to Hungary and Bohemia, and six to Spain.

³ At the decease of the emperor, Charles VI. in 1740, his hereditary dominions devolved of right (by the pragmatic sanction) upon his only daughter and heirress the archduchess Maria-Theresa, but were claimed by the husband of his niece (Maria-Annela, daughter of Joseph I.), Charles, elector of Bavaria, who was declared king of Bohemia in 1741, and crowned emperor of Germany at Frankfort the following year, as Charles VII. This dispute disturbed the tranquillity of Europe, and occasioned a war in which all the great European powers were involved, and which did not terminate until three years after the death of Charles VII., when Maria-Theresa had her patrimonial dominions guaranteed to her by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1743.

1745. Francis I. of Lorraine, grand duke of Tuscany, consort of Maria-Theresa.
1765. Joseph II., son of the emperor Francis and of Maria-Theresa.
1790. Leopold II., brother to Joseph; succeeded by his son.
1792. Francis II. In 1804 this prince took the style of emperor of Austria only.
- EMPERORS OF AUSTRIA.
1804. Francis I. (late Francis II. of Germany), commenced his reign as emperor of Austria only, Aug. 11, 1804: died March 2, 1835.
1835. Ferdinand his son: abdicated in favour of his nephew, Dec. 2, 1848.
1848. Francis-Joseph; born Aug. 18, 1830; came to the throne on the abdication of his uncle (and the relinquishment of his right to the succession by his father, Francis-Charles-Joseph, the presumptive heir), Dec. 2, 1848. The PRESENT (1850) Emperor of Austria.
- The LATE EMPEROR. Ferdinand I. (Charles-Leopold-Joseph) born April 19, 1793; married Feb. 27, 1831, Maria-Anna-Caroline-Pia, ex-empress, daughter of Victor-Emmanuel, king of Sardinia.
- PRESENT EMPEROR'S FATHER. Archduke Francis-Charles-Joseph, born Dec. 7, 1802; married Nov. 4, 1824, Frederica-Sophia, daughter of Maximilian-Joseph I., king of Bavaria.
- His BROTHERS.¹
1. Ferdinand-Maximilian-Joseph, born July 6, 1832.
 2. Charles-Louis-Joseph-Mary, born July 30, 1833.
 3. Louis-Joseph-Anthony-Victor, born May 15, 1842.

FRANCE.

Gallia, Roman. Galatia, Greek. In the decline of the Roman power Gaul was conquered by the Franks, a warlike people, who gave name to the kingdom, and whose territory, lying between the Rhine and the Elbe, is still called Franconia. The origin of the Franks is a matter of conjecture. It is supposed that they were at first a mixed multitude of several ancient nations, who, uniting against the Romans in defence of their common liberty, styled themselves Franks, that word in their language signifying free. The invaders crossed the Rhine, under the conduct of their king Pharamond, who shortly afterwards assumed the royal authority in France.

KINGS OF FRANCE.

MEROVINGIAN RACE.

418. Pharamond.
427. Clodion, or Clodius, the Hairy; supposed son of Pharamond.
448. Merovæus, or Merovéé, son-in-law of Clodion: this race of kings called from him Merovingians.
458. Childeric, son of Merovéé.
481. Clovis the Great, his son, and the real founder of the monarchy.—Henault. He left four sons, who divided the empire between them:—
511. Childibert; Paris.
- Clodomir; Orleans.
- Thierry; Metz; and
- Clotaire, or Clotharius; Soissons.
534. Theodebert; Metz.
548. Theodebald, succeeded in Metz.
558. Clotaire; now sole ruler of France. Upon his death the kingdom was again divided between his four sons: viz.
561. Charebert, ruled at Paris.
- Gontran, in Orleans and Burgundy.
- Sigebert at Metz, and } both assassi-
- Chilperic at Soissons } nated.
- [France continued at times afterwards to be ruled in various divisions by separate kings.]
575. Childibert II.
584. Clotaire II.; Soissons.
596. Thierry II., son of Childibert; in Orleans.
- Theodebert II.; Metz.
613. Clotaire II., became sole king.
628. Dagobert the Great, son of Clotaire II.: he divided the kingdom, of which he had become sole monarch, between his two sons:—
638. Clovis II., who had Burgundy and Neustria; and
- Sigebert II., who had Austrasia.
656. Clotaire III., son of Clovis II.
670. Childeric II.: he became king of the whole realm of France: assassinated, with his queen, and his son Dagobert, in the forest of Livri.—Henault.
- [At this time Thierry III. rules in Burgundy and Neustria, and Dagobert II., son of Sigebert, in Austrasia. Dagobert is assassinated, and Thierry reigns alone.—Henault.]
691. Clovis III. Pepin, mayor of the palace², rules the kingdom, in the name of this

¹ We aim, principally, in the following lists, at giving the immediate families of the reigning sovereigns; those princes only, whose propinquity may indicate the probable succession to the throne; omitting, where possible, the collateral, or more remote branches, as being unnecessary in a work of this nature.

² The youth and imbecility of the royal race of France had allowed the mayors of the palace, from being merely servants of the court, to rise to the important rank of commanding in the kingdom. They were appointed to the office by the grantees of the state, and not by the sovereign; and, after the death of Dagobert I., the mayors assumed the command of the armies and the management of the finances, so that nothing was left to the descendants of Merovæus, but the empty title of king.

- sovereign, who is succeeded by his brother,
695. Childebert III., surnamed the Just: in this reign Pepin also exercises the royal power.
711. Dagobert III., son of Childebert.
716. Chilperic II. (Daniel): he is governed, and at length deposed, by Charles Martel, mayor of the palace, whose sway is now unbounded.
719. Clotaire IV., of obscure origin, raised by Charles Martel to the throne: dies soon after, and Chilperic is recalled from Aquitaine, whither he had fled for refuge. — Henault.
720. Chilperic II., restored: he shortly afterwards dies at Noyon, and is succeeded by — Thierry IV., son of Dagobert III., surnamed de Chelles: died in 737. Charles Martel now rules under the new title of "duke of the French." — Henault.
737. Interregnum, till the death of Charles Martel, in 741; and until
742. Childeric III., son of Chilperic II., surnamed the Stupid. Carloman and Pepin, the sons of Charles Martel, share the government of the kingdom, in this reign.

THE CARLOVINGIANS.

752. Pepin the Short, son of Charles Martel: he is succeeded by his two sons,
768. Charlemagne and Carloman: the former, surnamed the Great, crowned emperor of the West, by Leo III., in 800. Carloman reigned but three years.
814. Louis, le Debonnaire, emperor: dethroned, but restored to his dominions.
840. Charles, surnamed the Bald; emperor in 875: poisoned by Zedechias, a Jew physician. — Henault.
877. Louis the Stammerer, son of Charles the Bald.
879. Louis III. and Carloman II.: the former died in 882; and Carloman reigned alone.
884. Charles le Gros; an usurper, in prejudice to Charles the Simple.
887. Eudes or Hugh, count of Paris.
893. Charles III. the Simple: deposed, and died in prison in 929: he had married Edgina, daughter of Edward the Elder, of England, by whom he had a son, who was afterwards king.
922. Robert, brother of Eudes: crowned at Rheims; but Charles marched an army against him, and killed him in battle. — Henault.
923. Rodolf, duke of Burgundy: elected king; but he was never acknowledged by the southern provinces. — Henault.
936. Louis IV. d'Outremer, or Transmarine (from having been conveyed by his mother into England), son of Charles III. and Edgina: died by a fall from his horse.
954. Lothaire, his son: he had reigned jointly with his father from 952, and succeeds him, at 15 years of age, under the protection of Hugh the Great: poisoned.

986. Louis V. the Indolent, son of Lothaire: also poisoned, it is supposed by his queen Blanche. In this prince ended the race of Charlemagne.¹

THE CAPETS.

987. Hugh Capet, eldest son of Hugh the Abbot, and the Great, count of Paris, &c.: he seized the crown, in prejudice to Charles of Lorraine, uncle of Louis Transmarine. From him this race of kings is called Capetians, and Capetians.
996. Robert II., surnamed the Sage, son of Hugh: died lamented.
1031. Henry I., son of Robert.
1060. Philip I. the Fair, and l'Amoureux: succeeded at eight years of age, and ruled at fourteen.
1108. Louis VI., surnamed the Lusty, or le Gros: succeeded by his son.
1137. Louis VII., surnamed the Young, to distinguish him from his father, with whom he was for some years associated on the throne.
1180. Philip II. (Augustus); succeeds to the crown at fifteen: crowned at Rheims in his father's lifetime.
1223. Louis VIII., Cœur de Lion, son of Philip: succeeded by 1226. Louis IX., called St. Louis; ascended the throne at fifteen, under the guardianship of his mother, who was also regent: died in his camp before Tunis, and was canonized.
1270. Philip III., the Hardy; son of Louis IX.: died at Perpignan.
1285. Philip IV., the Fair: ascended the throne in his 17th year.
1314. Louis X., surnamed Hutin, an old French word signifying headstrong, or mutinous. — Henault.
1316. John, a posthumous son of Louis X.: lived a few days only.
- Philip V., the Long (on account of his stature); brother of Louis X.
1322. Charles IV., the Handsome: this king, and Louis X., John, and Philip V., were kings of Navarre.

HOUSE OF VALOIS.

1328. Philip VI., de Valois, grandson of Philip the Hardy. He was called the Fortunate; but this must have been before the battle of Cressy.
1350. John II., the Good: died suddenly in the Savoy in London.
1364. Charles V., surnamed the Wise: the first prince who had the title of Dauphin.² — Freret.
1380. Charles VI., the Beloved.
1422. Charles VII., the Victorious.
1461. Louis XI.; detested for his atrocious cruelties.
1483. Charles VIII., the Affable.
1498. Louis XII., duke of Orleans, surnamed the Father of his People.

¹ Towards the end of the second race, the kingdom was held by the law of feudal tenures; and was governed rather as a great fief, than as a monarchy. — Mercray.

² It is a vulgar error to suppose, that by the treaty (1343) which gave the full sovereignty of Dauphiné to our kings, it was stipulated that the eldest son of the king should bear the title of dauphin; so far from it, the first dauphin named in that agreement, was Philip, second son of Philip, of Valois. — Henault.

1515. Francis I., of Angoulême; called the Father of Letters.
1547. Henry II.: died of a wound received at a tournament, when celebrating the nuptials of his sister with the duke of Savoy, accidentally given him by the count de Montmorency.
1559. Francis II.; married Mary Stuart, afterwards queen of Scots: died the year after his accession.
1560. Charles IX.; Catherine of Medicis, his mother, obtained the regency, which trust she abused.
1574. Henry III., elected king of Poland: murdered Aug. 1, 1589, by Jacques Clement, a Dominican friar. In this prince was extinguished the house of Valois.

HOUSE OF BOURBON.

1589. Henry IV., the Great, of Bourbon, king of Navarre: murdered by Francis Ravillac.
1610. Louis XIII., the Just, son of the preceding king.
1643. Louis XIV., the Great, also styled Dieu-donne. This was a long and splendid reign.
1715. Louis XV., the Well-beloved; but which surname he lost.
1774. Louis XVI., his grandson: ascended the throne in his 20th year; married the archduchess Maria-Antoinette, of Austria, in May, 1770. Dethroned in the great revolution, which commenced with the destruction of the Bastille, July 14, 1789: the king was guillotined, Jan. 21, 1793; and his queen, Oct. 16, following.
1793. Louis XVII., son of Louis XVI. Though numbered with the kings, this prince never reigned: he died in prison, supposed by poison, June 8, 1795, aged ten years and two months.

FRENCH EMPIRE.

1804. Napoleon Buonaparte, born Aug. 15, 1769. Elected by the republic consul for ten years, May 8, 1802; made first consul for life, Aug. 2, same year; and declared emperor, May 18, 1804. Divorced his first wife, the empress Josephine; and married Maria-Louisa of Austria, April 7, 1810. The reverses of Napoleon compelled him to renounce the thrones of France and Italy, and accept the isle of Elba for his retreat, April 5, 1814.
1815. Napoleon again appears in France, March 1. He is defeated at Waterloo; and finally abdicates in favour of his infant son, June 22. Banished to St. Helena, where he dies, May 5, 1821.

BOURBONS RESTORED.

1814. Louis XVIII. (compte de Provence), next brother of Louis XVI.; born Nov. 17, 1755; married-Maria-Josephine-Louise, of Savoy. Entered Paris, and took possession of the throne, May 3, 1814; obliged to flee, March 20, 1815; returned, July 8, same year: died Sept. 16, 1824, leaving no issue.
1824. Charles X. (compte d'Artois), his brother; born Oct. 9, 1757; married Maria-Therese, of Savoy. Conflicts in Paris between the populace (ultimately aided by the national guard) and the army, commence July 27, and the king is deposed, July 30, 1830. He subsequently takes refuge in England; and dies at Gratz, in Hungary, Nov. 6, 1836.

HOUSE OF ORLEANS.

1830. Louis-Philippe, son of the celebrated duke of Orleans, called Egalité; born Oct. 6, 1773; married, Nov. 25, 1809, Maria-Amelia, daughter of Ferdinand I. (IV.) king of the Two Sicilies. Raised to the throne, as king of the French, Aug. 9, 1830; deposed Feb. 24, 1848. Died in exile, in England, Aug. 26, 1850

NEW REPUBLIC.

1848. The revolution commenced in a popular insurrection at Paris, Feb. 22, 1848. The royal family escaped by flight to England, a provisional government was established, monarchy abolished, and France declared a republic.

Louis-Napoleon-Charles Buonaparte, (born April 20, 1808), son of Louis Buonaparte, some time king of Holland, and nephew of the late emperor Napoleon: elected president of the republic, by 6,048,872 votes, out of 8,040,604; having a majority of 4,600,770 votes over his great rival, general Cavaignac, Dec. 11, 1848.

Louis-Napoleon declared by the national assembly (Dec. 19), president of the republic of France; and proclaimed, next day, Dec. 20. The now (1850) President.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS OF THE EX-KING LOUIS-PHILIPPE.

- I. Ferdinand-Philippe-Louis-Charles-Henry-Joseph, of Orleans, duc d'Orleans, prince royal: born Sept. 3, 1810; married, May 30, 1837, Helena-Louisa-Elizabeth, daughter of Frederic-Louis, hereditary grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin: died of a fall from his carriage, July 13, 1842; leaving issue:
I. Louis-Philippe-Albert d'Orleans, count of Paris; born Aug. 24, 1838.

- II. Robert-Philippe-Louis-Eugene-Ferdinand, of Orleans, duc de Chartres; born Nov. 9, 1840.

4. Louis-Charles-Philippe-Raphael, duc de Ne-

¹ It was this charming and gifted princess who sculptured, among other works, the beautiful figures of Joan of Arc, so well known, from copies, in England. Of her, when she died, her amiable mother, the queen, said, with sainted resignation, "O God! thou hast an angel more; I have a daughter less." The prince de Joinville, in a letter with which his royal highness honoured us, in relation to the death of this sister, says: "Le duc de Nemours, son frère, en lui fermant les yeux, dit: 'Nous avons perdu un ange sur la terre, mais une sainte est au ciel.'" This affecting domestic incident, a natural one, is introduced out of respect for the family. — EDITOR.

SPAIN.

THE name, Hispania, is of Phœnician origin. Spain was called Iberia by the Greeks, from the river Iber; and Hesperia Ultima by the Romans, because the westernmost part of Europe, and to distinguish it from Italy. — Horace. The Phœnicians and Carthaginians successively planted colonies on the coasts; and the latter people extended their conquests under Hannibal. The Romans afterwards became masters of the whole country; but in the decline of their power they were expelled by the Vandals, Alans, and Suevi, who, in their turn, were conquered by the Saracens, in 711. Spain was anciently divided into a number of petty states. The counts of Castile became possessed of Leon, Oviedo, and Toledo, which had been separate territories; and, after many wars, the kingdom of Castile was united to that of Arragon by the marriage of Isabella, queen of Castile, with Ferdinand, king of Arragon, in 1474. Ferdinand, by the conquests of Navarre and Granada, entirely put an end to the dominion of the Moors; and we may hence date the foundation of the present monarchy.

 1458. John II., king of Navarre, brother of Alphonso; died 1479.
 1479. Ferdinand V., the Catholic, the next heir: by his marriage with Isabella of Castile, the kingdoms were united.
 SPAIN.
 1512. Ferdinand V., the Catholic. This prince having conquered Granada and Navarre, became king of all Spain: succeeded by his grandson,

¹ Being observed one day to tremble while he was putting on his armour, he exclaimed, "My body trembles at the dangers into which my courage plunges me."—Rabbe.

² It is just to the memory of our illustrious prince to state, that he soon deeply regretted his interference on behalf of this wicked and ungrateful king, who justly merited the infamous epithet he bore. Peter succeeded to the throne at sixteen years of age, and commenced his reign by several wanton acts of barbarity. Having married Blanche, daughter of Philip de Bourbon and sister to the queen of France, he repudiated her three days afterwards, and sent her to prison that he might renew his connexion with Maria de Padilla, his former mistress, whom he married, making way for his union with her by poisoning his consort. His cruelties provoked his subjects to take up arms against him in 1366, and they placed at their head Henry of Transtamare, his natural brother, who slew Peter with his own hand in 1368, and was placed on the throne of Castile, which he transmitted to his posterity.

³ Henry III. of Castile used to say, that "he feared the curses of his people more than he did the arms of his enemies." An ancient writer forcibly and eloquently adds, "In this he showed as much wisdom as humanity, since while he was beloved at home, he had nothing to fear from abroad; the curses of his subjects were the likeliest means of bringing upon him the arms of his foes."

1516. Charles I., son of Joan of Castile and Philip of Austria; became emperor of Germany, as Charles V. in 1519: resigned both crowns, and retired to a monastery.
1556. Philip II., his son, king of Naples and Sicily; a merciless bigot; married Mary, queen-regnant of England: died a most dreadful death, being covered with ulcers from which vermin swarmed. [This reign is made memorable by the Spanish armament, called the Armada, designed to reduce England.]
1598. Philip III., son of the preceding: he drove all the descendants of the Moors from Granada and the adjacent provinces, to the number of 900,000.
1621. Philip IV., his son; a reign of nearly continuous and unfortunate wars with the Dutch and France: he lost Portugal in 1640.
1665. Charles II., son of Philip IV., the last prince of the Austrian line: nominated, by will, as his successor, 1700. Philip V., duke of Anjou, grandson of Louis XIV. of France: hence arose the war of the succession, terminated by the treaty of Utrecht in 1713.
1724. Louis I.; who reigned only a few months.
1724. Philip V.; again.
1745. Ferdinand VI., surnamed the Wise: he distinguished his reign by acts of liberality and beneficence.
1759. Charles III., king of the Two Sicilies, and brother of Ferdinand VI.: on ascending the Spanish throne he renounced the Sicilies to his third son Ferdinand.
1788. Charles IV., son of Charles III.; the influence of Godoy, prince of peace, reached to almost royal authority in this reign: Charles abdicated in favour of his son and successor, 1808. Ferdinand VII., whom Napoleon, of France, also forced to resign.
1808. Joseph Buonaparte, brother of Napoleon: deposed.
1814. Ferdinand VII.: restored; succeeded by his daughter,
1833. Isabella II., who ascended the throne Sept. 29. The PRESENT (1850) Queen of Spain.

The QUEEN. Maria Isabella II. (Louisa) born Oct. 10, 1830; succeeded her father, Ferdinand VII., Sept. 29, 1833, while yet in her 3d year. The Salic law, existing in Spain, had been formally abolished by Ferdinand, under a decree March 29, 1830, by virtue of which the order of succession was altered in favour of his daughter, to the exclusion of his brothers, Don Carlos and Don Francis. Declared by the Cortes to be of age at 13, Nov. 8, 1843; married, Oct. 10, 1846, to her cousin, the infant Don Francis d'Assis, duke of Cadiz (born May 13, 1822), son of Don Francis de Paula: issue,

A son, born July 12, 1850, who died a few minutes after his birth.

The Queen's SISTER: The infanta Maria-Louisa-Ferdinanda, born Jan. 30, 1832; married, Oct. 10, 1846, to prince Anthony-Mary-Philip-Louis d'Orléans, duc de Montpensier, son of Louis-Philippe, of France¹; and has issue, a daughter, Maria-Isabella-Francisca-Adelaide, born at Seville, Sept. 21, 1848.

Her MOTHER: Queen dowager Maria-Christina, daughter of Francis I., king of the Two Sicilies, born April 27, 1806; married, Dec. 11, 1829, to the late king, Ferdinand VII., who died Sept. 29, 1833. Regent of the kingdom during the minority of the queen, in virtue of the will of her father; which office she resigned by a manifesto dated Oct. 12, 1840. Her marriage with don Fernando Munoz, duke of Rianzarès (since Dec. 28, 1833), received the "nuptial benediction," Oct. 13, 1844.

UNCLES:

1. Charles-Maria-Isodore, born March 28, 1788; married, 1st, Sept. 29, 1816, Maria-Frances d'Asis, daughter of John VI., king of Portugal; 2nd, Maria-Theresa, of Bourbon and Braganza, princess of Beira, widow of the infant Peter of Spain: issue,

I. Charles-Louis-Maria-Ferdinand (comte de Montemolin), born Jan. 31, 1818.

II. John-Charles-Maria-Isodore, born May 15, 1822; married, Feb. 6, 1847, Mary-Beatrice-Anne-Frances, daughter of Francis IV. of Modena.

III. Ferdinand-Maria-Joseph, born Oct. 19, 1824.

2. Francis de Paulo-Anthony-Maria, born March 10, 1794; married, June 12, 1819, Louisa-Charlotte, daughter of the late Francis I., king of the Two Sicilies; she died Jan. 29, 1844; leaving issue,

I. Isabella-Ferdinanda, born May 18, 1821; married, June 26, 1841, to Ignatius, count Gurowski.

II. Francis d'Assis-Maria-Ferdinand, born May 13, 1822; married, Oct. 10, 1846, to the queen, Isabella II.

III. Henry-Mary-Ferdinand, duke of Seville, born April 17, 1823; married, May 6, 1847, to Helena de Castella.

IV. Louisa-Theresa-Frances, born June 11, 1824; married, Feb. 10, 1847, to Joseph, comte de Transtamarc.

V. Josephine-Ferdinanda-Louisa, born May 25, 1827.

VI. Ferdinand-Mary, born April 11, 1832.

VII. Maria-Christina-Isabella, born June 5, 1833.

VIII. Amelia-Philippina, born Oct. 12, 1834.

¹ The marriage of this princess with a son of Louis-Philippe, occasioned great displeasure at the court of St. James's, and disturbed the friendly relations between the French and English governments. However, notwithstanding much remonstrance, this union was persisted in; and the two marriages of the queen of Spain and her sister Maria-Louisa, were solemnized at the same time, at 10 at night, by the patriarch of the Indies, in the palace at Madrid.

PORTUGAL.

THE ancient Lusitania. The name is derived from Porto Cale, or Callo, the original appellation of the city of Oporto. It submitted to the Roman arms about 250 B. C., and underwent the same changes as Spain on the fall of the Roman empire. Conquered by the Moors A. D. 713. They kept possession till they were vanquished by Alfonso VI. the Valiant, of Castile, assisted by many other princes and volunteers. Among those who shone most in this celebrated expedition was Henry of Burgundy, grandson of Robert, king of France. Alfonso bestowed upon him Theresa, his natural daughter, and, as her marriage portion, the kingdom of Portugal, which he was to hold of him. Portugal fell under the Spanish yoke in 1580, but shook it off in 1640, since which time the Braganza family has reigned.

 1481. John II., whose actions procured him the titles of the Great, and the Perfect: succeeded by his cousin, 1495. Emmanuel, the Fortunate.
 1521. John III., son of Emmanuel: he admitted into his kingdom the religious institution of the inquisition.
 1557. Sebastian: slain in the great battle of Alcazar, in Africa, Aug. 4, 1578; when the crown reverted to his great uncle, 1578. Henry, the Cardinal, son of Emmanuel.
 1580. Anthony, prior of Crato, son of Emmanuel: deposed by Philip II. of Spain, who united Portugal to his other dominions, till 1640.
 1640. John IV., duke of Braganza: dispossessed
- the Spaniards in a bloodless revolution, and was proclaimed king, Dec. 1.
 1656. Alfonso VI.: deposed in 1668, and his brother and successor Peter made regent; the latter ascended the throne in 1683. Peter II.; succeeded by his son,
 1706. John V.; succeeded by his son,
 1750. Joseph. The daughter and successor of this prince married his brother, by dispensation from the pope, and they ascended the throne, as 1777. Maria (Frances-Isabella) and Peter III., jointly.
 1786. Maria, alone: this princess afterwards falls into a state of melancholy and derangement.
 1792. Regency. John, son of the queen, and afterwards king, declared regent of the kingdom.
 1816. John VI., previously regent. He had withdrawn in 1807, owing to the French invasion of Portugal, to his Brazilian dominions; but the discontent of his subjects obliged him to return in 1821: died in 1826.
 1826. Peter IV. (Dom Pedro) son of John VI.: making his election of the empire of Brazil, abdicated the throne of Portugal in favour of his daughter, 1826. Maria II. (da Gloria), who became queen at 7 years of age.
 1828. Dom Miguel, brother to Peter IV.: usurped the crown, which he retained, amid civil contentions, until 1833.
 1833. Maria II. restored: declared in Sept. 1834 (being then 15) to be of age, and assumed the royal power accordingly. The PRESENT (1850) Queen of Portugal.
- The QUEEN. Donna-Maria II. da Gloria, daughter of Peter IV. (ex-emperor of Brazil) and of Leopoldine-Caroline, archduchess of Austria, born April 4, 1819; married, Jan. 26, 1835, to Augustus-Charles-Eugene-Napoleon, duke of Leuchtenberg, who died March 28, same year; 2nd, April 9, 1836, Ferdinand-Augustus-Francis-Anthony, prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, born Oct. 29, 1816; and has issue:

SICILY.—NAPLES.—THE TWO SICILIES.

SICILY, anciently Sicania.—Virgil; and Sicilia.—Pliny. Naples, the continental division of the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, was called, at first Parthenope, afterwards Neapolis.—Strabo. The Greek emperors, upon the expulsion of the Ostrogoths by Belisarius in the 6th century, took possession of Lower Italy, and retained it for more than 200 years. The duchy of Benevento (Naples), however, founded by the Lombards in the same century, attained such importance and territorial extent, that it possessed, within 120 years, the greater part of the country now comprising the kingdom of Naples. In the 9th century the Arabs conquered the island of Sicily, which was wrested from them in the 11th by count Roger I., who inherited Naples from his elder brother, Robert Guiscard, by whom it had been acquired by conquest.

by with her train. She was observed by one Drochet, a Frenchman, who, advancing towards her, used her rudely, under pretence of searching for arms. A young Sicilian, exasperated at this affront, stabbed him with his own sword; and a tumult ensuing, 200 French were instantly murdered. The enraged populace now ran through the city, crying out "Let the French die!" and, without distinction of rank, age, or sex, they slaughtered all of that nation they could find, to the number of 8000. Even such as had fled to the churches found no sanctuary there—the massacre became general throughout the island.

SAVOY.—SARDINIA.

SAVOY, in the time of the Romans, formed a part of the province of Gallia Narbonensis, and remained in possession of the Romans several hundred years. Sardinia (Latin) was called by the Greeks Sandaliotes and Ichnusa, from its resemblance to the print of a sandal or sole of a human foot. The former country, after various changes, was erected into a county in the beginning of the 11th century, and at the close of the 14th, the governing count obtained the title of duke. The same ancient family continuing to rule, exchanged, in 1718, with Austria, its then recent acquisition of Sicily, for Sardinia, and became kings of Sardinia. This state became involved in the great war between France and Austria, that closed with the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1748. After enjoying a long term of peace, it took part in the war of the French revolution, and in 1798 the continental territories were parcelled out into departments of the French empire, and were not restored to the legitimate sovereign until the overthrow of Napoleon in 1814. Genoa was added to Sardinia by the congress of Vienna in 1815.

TUSCANY.

THE Etruria of the Romans, and Tyrrhenia of the Greeks. It became subject to Rome in the 5th century before the Christian era, and was possessed by that empire for about 800 years. Tuscany was governed by a succession of marquesses or dukes from the 9th until the 13th century. The continual divisions by which the country was agitated led to a change in the form of government, and eventually to the ascendancy of the great family of the Medici as Grand Dukes. The ancient name, Etruria, was revived for a time in 1801.

¹ The great family of Medici, illustrious as the restorers of literature and the fine arts in Italy, were chiefs or Signori of the republic of Florence from 1434, in which year Cosmo de Medici (the 1st Cosmo) who had been banished from the republic, was recalled, and made its chief, presiding over it for 30 years. Several of the family were afterwards Signori: among these, was Lorenzo de Medici, styled "the Magnificent" and the "Father of Letters." Of this great man, Mr. Roscoe wrote an elegant Life in 2 vols. quarto; also a Life, in 4 vols. of pope Leo X. (John de Medici), son of Lorenzo.

² By the treaty of peace in 1735 between France and Austria, the duke of Lorraine was named to succeed to HOUSE OF LORRAINE.

1737. Francis II., duke of Lorraine; married Maria Theresa, empress, and queen of Hungary and Bohemia; elected emperor in 1745.

[By a decree of this monarch it was settled that in future the Grand Duchy should be the patrimony of a younger son of the Imperial house: the emperor was accordingly succeeded in 1765 by his second son.]

1765. Peter-Leopold: on the demise of his brother, the emperor Joseph II. became emperor as Leopold II.; and was succeeded as grand-duke by his youngest son, 1790. Ferdinand III.: deposed by the treaty of Luneville, in 1801.

1801. Louis, prince of Parma, succeeded, by the style of "King of Etruria," conformably with the above-mentioned treaty.

1803. Charles-Louis, his infant son, under the regency of the queen, Maria-Louisa, his mother; afterwards duchess of Parma. See Parma.

1807. [Tuscany united by the emperor Napoleon to the kingdom of Italy.]

1814. Ferdinand III. restored: succeeded by his son,

1824. Leopold II.; succeeded his father, June 18, 1824. The PRESENT (1850) Grand-Duke of Tuscany.

The GRAND-DUKE. Leopold-John-Joseph-Francis-Ferdinand-Charles, grand-duke of Tuscany and duke of Lucca; born Oct. 3, 1797; married, 1st (Oct. 28, 1817), Mary-Anne-Caroline, daughter of Maximilian, father of the present king of Saxony; died March 24, 1832. Married, 2nd (June 7, 1833), Mary-Antoinette, daughter of Francis I., king of the Two Sicilies; and has issue:

1. Augusta-Louisa-Mary-Josephine (by first marriage), born April 1, 1825; married (April 15, 1844) the prince Leopold of Bavaria.
2. Mary-Isabella (with the following, by second marriage), born May 21, 1834.
3. Ferdinand, hereditary grand-duke, born June 10, 1835.
4. Charles-Joseph, born April 30, 1839.

His SISTERS. 1. Maria-Louisa-Josephine, born Aug. 30, 1798.
2. Theresa, born March 21, 1801; married Sept. 30, 1817, to Charles-Albert, late king of Sardinia, who died July 28, 1849.

LUCCA.

CHARLEMAGNE having destroyed the empire of the Lombards, A. D. 774, Lucca came into the possession of the Franks, and in two centuries afterwards was annexed to Germany by Otto the Great. After many subsequent revolutions it was sold to Florence, and in a short time it obtained its complete freedom by purchase from the emperor Charles IV., and retained it until modern times.

Napoleon having conferred Piombino upon his sister Elizabeth and her husband prince Bacciocchi, as an hereditary principality, the prince was chosen in 1805 constitutional chief of the republic of Lucca. In 1806, Massa, Carrara, and Garfagnano, were united to the principality of Lucca. Finally, the congress of Vienna conferred Massa and Carrara upon the archduchess Beatrice d'Este; Piombino upon prince Ludovisci Buoncampagni; and the Duchy of Lucca, with an annual pension of 20,000*l.* upon

Maria-Louisa, daughter of Charles IV. of Spain, and widow of Louis, king of Etruria: she died March 13, 1824, and was succeeded by her son, married, Aug. 15, 1820, Maria-Theresa, daughter of Victor-Emmanuel I., king of Sardinia. Relinquished the dukedom, Oct. 1847.

1824. Charles-Louis, duke; born Dec. 22, 1799;

On the death of Maria-Louisa, widow of the emperor Napoleon, of France, and duchess of Parma, Piacenza, and Guastalla (see Parma), which took place Dec. 18, 1847, Charles-Louis, duke of Lucca, was invested with the government of the duchy of Parma, as had been agreed upon by the treaty of Paris of June 10, 1817, and congress of Frankfort, July 20, 1819; and in conformity with the conditions of succession arranged by these acts, and by the subsequent treaty of Florence (Nov. 28, 1844), the duke Louis-Charles resigned Lucca to the grand-duke of Tuscany, Oct. 5, 1847.

the grand-duchy of Tuscany on the death of John Gastone de Medici, which took place in 1737; and upon this arrangement being effected, the duchy of Lorraine lapsed to the French crown, subject to a life interest of Stanislas Lesinski, ex-king of Poland.

PARMA, PLACENTIA, OR PIACENZA, &c.

In 1346, Parma and Piacenza formed part of the territory of the counts of Milan, and were subsequently in the possession of Louis XII. of France; but were ceded by his successor, Francis I., under the league of Cambray, to pope Julius IV., when they were attached to the dominion of the Church. In 1545, pope Paul III. erected Parma and Piacenza into a duchy, and conferred it upon his natural son, Peter-Louis-Farnese, in whose family it continued for nearly two centuries. The subsequent details are given below.

Parma, &c. were given by the convention of April 11, 1814, to the arch-duchess Maria-Louisa, ex-empress of France. After her death (Dec. 18, 1847) Charles-Louis, duke of Lucca, was given the government of this duchy, as had been arranged by the treaty of Paris, June 10, 1817, and by the congress of Frankfort, July 20, 1819; and conformably with these acts, and with a subsequent treaty (that of Frankfort, Nov. 28, 1844), Charles-Louis, of Lucca, relinquished that duchy to the grand-duke of Tuscany.

MODENA, &c.

Albert-Azon, or Azzo II. (great-grandson of Albert-Azon I., who died A. D. 964), espoused Cunegunda, daughter of Guelph II., count of Altdorf and duke of Lower Bavaria, and dying in 1097, left two sons. Of these, the elder, Guelph, inherited the states of Altdorf at the decease of his uncle, Guelph, duke of Carinthia; and from him sprang the branch of Guelph-Este. From the second son, Fulke, emanated the branch of Fulke-Este. The illustrious house of Este governed as Signori of Ferrara in the 12th century; and Modena, Reggio, and Ferrara became ducal territories, by concession, partly of the emperor and partly of the pope, in favour of Borso and Hercules d'Este, in 1452.

HOLLAND. THE NETHERLANDS. BELGIUM.

THE original inhabitants of Holland were the Batavi, a branch of the Catti, a people of Germany, who, being expelled their own country on account of sedition, established themselves in this territory.—Tacitus. Gallia Belgica (the Roman name for the provinces now known as the Netherlands) was attached to the Roman empire until its fall; and for several ages afterwards it formed part of the kingdom of Austrasia. About the 10th century, Holland and other provinces were governed by their own counts or dukes. The Netherlands subsequently fell to Burgundy, next to Austria; and the emperor Charles V. annexed them to Spain. The tyranny of the bigot Philip II. and the barbarities of the duke of Alva exasperated the people to a great height, and under the conduct of William, prince of Orange, was formed the famous League of Utrecht, which proved the foundation of the Republic of the Seven United Provinces. The other ten provinces (there being seventeen) returned under the then dominion of Spain. The Netherlands became a kingdom in 1815; the southern part, Belgium, separated from it, and became a kingdom in 1831.

1751. William VI.; retired on the invasion of the French in 1795: died in 1806.

1795. [Holland and Belgium united to the French republic.²]

¹ This duke is better remembered for his dreadful persecutions in the Low Countries, than for his exceeding bravery and deeds of arms. His barbarities and cruelty drove many thousands of artisans to seek an asylum in England, and their descendants are among our most useful citizens at this day. He used to say, that "his executioners shed more blood than his soldiers." He kindled a war that burned for sixty-eight years, cost Spain 800 millions of dollars, its finest troops, and seven of its richest provinces in the Netherlands. During half a century of warfare, it is said he never lost a battle, and was never taken by surprise.

² The title of Grand Pensionary, which belonged to the chief of the Batavian republic in the 16th century, was revived in April 1805, while Holland was under French domination, and was conferred on the celebrated Rutger Jan Schimmelpennick, who had previously been Dutch ambassador to England.

1806. William-Frederick succeeded his father, the last king, as the rightful heir to the usurped throne.
1806. Louis Buonaparte; made king of Holland by his brother Napoleon; June 5, 1806: abdicated, July 1, 1810.
1810. [Holland again united to France.]
1813. House of Orange restored. William-Frederick, prince of Orange, proclaimed Dec. 6, 1813; took the oath of fidelity as sovereign prince, March 30, 1814; and assumed the style of King of the Netherlands, March 16, 1815.

KINGS OF THE NETHERLANDS.

1815. William (late the prince of Orange), first king: formally abdicated in favour of his son, Oct. 7, 1840; died Dec. 12, 1843.
1840. William II.; born Dec. 6, 1792; succeeded on his father's abdication; died March 17, 1849.
- The KING. William (III.)-Alexander-Paul-Frederick-Louis, prince of Orange-Nassau and grand-duke of Luxemburg; succeeded on the death of his father, March 17, 1849; married June 18, 1839, Sophia-Frederica-Matilda (born June 17, 1818), daughter of William, king of Wurtemberg; and has issue:
1. William-Nicholas-Alexander-Frederick, prince of Orange, born Sept. 4, 1840.
 2. William-Frederick-Maurice-Alexander-Henry, born Sept. 15, 1843.
1849. William III., son of the preceding; born Feb. 19, 1817. The PRESENT (1850) king.

KING OF THE BELGIANS.

- [Belgium having separated from the kingdom of the Netherlands, the sovereignty was offered to Louis-Charles, duc de Nemours, second son of Louis-Philippe, king of the French, but declined. It was next offered to Leopold, prince of Coburg, by whom it was accepted.]
1831. Leopold, first king of the Belgians; inaugurated July 20, at Brussels, the capital of his kingdom. The PRESENT (1850) king of the Belgians.
- The KING. Leopold-George-Christian-Frederick, son of Francis, late duke of Saxe-Coburg Saalfeld; born Dec. 16, 1790; married, 1st, on May 2, 1816, the princess Charlotte of Wales, only daughter of George IV., king of Great Britain, who died in childbirth Nov. 6, 1817; and 2nd, on Aug. 9, 1832, Louisa-Maria-Theresa-Charlotte (born April 3, 1812; died Oct. 10, 1850), eldest daughter of Louis-Philippe, king of the French; and has issue:
1. Leopold-Louis-Philip-Mary-Victor, prince royal, duke of Brabant, born April 9, 1835.
 2. Philip-Eugene-Ferdinand-Leopold, count of Flanders, born March 24, 1837.
 3. Mary-Charlotte-Amelia-Augusta-Victoria, born June 7, 1840.

NASSAU.

THE cradle of the house of Nassau was the castle of Laurenburg, on the Lahn. Walram III., who possessed, in 1195, all the territory belonging to Nassau, died in 1198; and his sons, Henry I. and Rupert V., reigned jointly until the latter entered into the union of the German knighthood in 1230. The sons of Henry I. (who was surnamed the Rich) were Walram and Otho. They governed in common until 1255, and became the founders of two distinct principal lines. That of Walram is at present possessed of the principality of NASSAU, and that of Otho flourishes still in the royal NETHERLANDS' dynasty. Walram's successor was his son,

- Adolphus, who was elected emperor in 1292: he fell in battle with Albert, of Austria, at Gellheim (Spire), in 1298: succeeded by his son, 1298. Gerlach, who reigned until 1361. This prince's two sons, Adolphus II. and John I., divided Walram's line again into two branches, Nassau-Idstein-Weisbaden and Nassau-Weilburg; the latter created by John I., the former by Adolphus.
1370. Walram: succeeded by his son,
1393. Adolphus III.: succeeded by his son,
1426. John, succeeded by his son,
1480. Adolphus IV.: succeeded by his son,
1511. Philip; he introduced the Lutheran religion: succeeded by his second son, 1568. Balthazar: succeeded by his only son, same year.
1568. John-Louis, whose son died vitâ patris, and this line and its possessions fell to the younger branch.

LINE OF NASSAU-IDSTEIN-WEISBADEN.

(Eight in number.)

- Adolphus II.: succeeded by his son,

YOUNGER LINE.

[Of this branch, John I. had enlarged his territories by marriage, and had been invested by the emperor Charles IV.

- with the coronet of a prince; he died in 1371, and was succeeded by his son.]
1371. Philip I.: succeeded by his second son: the elder, John II., founded a separate line.
1420. Philip II.: succeeded by his grandson,
1492. Louis I.: succeeded by his son,
1523. Philip III.: he left two sons, Albert and Philip IV., who divided their territory; the line of the latter became extinct in 1602, and his part fell back to his brother's line.
1559. Albert: succeeded by his son,
1593. Louis II., who inherited in 1602 the possessions of Philip IV., and after the death of John-Louis (see above) he inherited all the possessions of the Walram line.
- [Louis died in 1627: his three sons became founders of three distinct lines, of which the most important was that of Nassau-Weilburg, ruled by his third son, Ernest-Casimir.]
1629. Ernest-Casimir: succeeded by his son,
1655. Frederick: succeeded by his son,
1675. John-Ernest: succeeded by his son,
1719. Charles-Augustus, who again assumed the princely title conferred on his ancestors
- by the emperor Charles IV.: he was succeeded by 1753. Charles-Christian: succeeded by 1788. Frederick-William. This prince lost by the peace of Luneville a part of his possessions on the left border of the Rhine: the confederation of the Rhine, however, which he joined in 1816, enlarged his territory, and conferred upon him the ducal title.

DUKES.

1806. Frederick-William, the above: died in 1816; succeeded by his son, 1816. William-George, who inherited in March, 1816, the possessions of Nassau-Usingen, and thus united all the territory of the elder Walramian line of the house of Nassau.
- [He built a palace at Weisbaden, and transferred his seat thither from Biebrich: died in 1839.]
1839. Adolphus, his son; born July 24, 1817; succeeded Aug. 20, 1839; married, Jan. 19, 1844, the grand-duchess Elizabeth of Russia, who died Jan. 28, 1845. THE PRESENT (1850) duke.

The DUKE'S BROTHER and SISTERS: Therese-Wilhelmine-Frederique-Isabelle, born April 17, 1815; married (April 23, 1837) to the prince of Oldenburg. Maurice-William-Angustus, born Nov. 21, 1820. Marie-Wilhelmine, born Jan. 29, 1825.

His HALF-BROTHER and SISTERS: Helene-Wilhelmine-Henriette-Pauline, born Aug. 12, 1831. Nicolas-Guillaume, born Sept. 1832. Sophie-Wilhelmine, born July 9, 1836.

DENMARK.

THE first name given to this country was Chersonesus Cimbrica, and its earliest inhabitants were the Cimbri and the Teutones. About a hundred years before the Christian era, these were driven out by the Jutes or Goths, and hence the modern name of Jutland. The general name, Denmark, is supposed to be derived from Dan, a founder of the Danish monarchy, and mark, a German word signifying country, id est, Dan-mark, the country of Dan. The people, however, were but little known in history until they began to make inroads into Germany and to commit piracies in the northern seas under various designations, as Norwegians or Northmen, Swedes, Frizans, Jutes or Senyths, or Danes. Norway was possessed by this country from the reign of the celebrated Margaret, "the Semiramis of the North," in the 15th century, until 1814, when it was united, as an integral state, to the sovereignty of Sweden.

KINGS OF DENMARK.

- [The Danish Chronicles mention 25 kings to the reign of Harald; but the accounts differ much from the modern histories of Denmark by the best authors.]
813. Harald, or Harold.
850. Eric I.
854. Eric II., or the Child.
883. Gormo, the Old; reigned 53 years.

 1534. Christian III., son of Frederick; established the Lutheran religion: esteemed the "Father of his People."
 1559. Frederick II., son of Christian III.
 1588. Christian IV., son of the last king; chosen head of the Protestant league against the emperor.
 1648. Frederick III.: changed the constitution from an elective to an hereditary monarchy vested in his own family.
 1670. Christian V., son of Frederick III.; succeeded by his son, 1699. Frederick IV.; leagued with the czar Peter and the king of Poland against Charles XII. of Sweden.
 1730. Christian VI., his son.
 1746. Frederick V., his son: married the princess Louisa of England, daughter of George II.
 1766. Christian VII., son of the preceding: married Caroline-Matilda, sister of George III. In a fit of jealousy he banished his queen to Zell (where she died in 1775), and put to death his ministers Brandt and Struensee.
 1784. Regency. The crown prince Frederick declared regent, in consequence of the mental derangement of his father.
 1808. Frederick VI., previously regent, now king.
 1839. Christian VIII., son of the preceding.
 1848. Frederick VII., son of Christian VIII.; born Oct. 6, 1808. The PRESENT (1850) King of Denmark.

SWEDEN.

THE ancient inhabitants were the Fins, now the inhabitants of Finland, who retired to their present territory on the appearance of the Scandinavians or Goths, and these latter became masters of Sweden. Hence the country was comprehended under the early name of Scandinavia, given to it in common with other northern climes that were peopled by the same race. The internal state of this kingdom is little known previously to the 11th century. By the union of Calmar, in 1394, Sweden became a mere province of Denmark, and was not rescued from this subjection until 1521, when Gustavus Vasa recovered the kingdom from the Danish yoke. For this he was raised to the throne in 1523, and the crown made hereditary in his descendants, who successively reigned until 1809. In this last-mentioned year, Gustavus IV., having brought the nation to the verge of ruin by his misgovernment, was deposed, and the duke of Sudermania became king; and the next year Bernadotte¹ was elected regent and successor to the throne, which he ascended in 1818.

Norway, which had belonged to Denmark from 1397, was ceded to Sweden by the treaty of Kiel, signed January 14, 1814, confirmed by the Diet, Oct. 14, same year.

¹ The choice made of this great soldier of fortune excited the surprise of all Europe at the time, but the wisdom of it was soon demonstrated by his prudent conduct. He had distinguished himself from all Napoleon's other marshals by his clemency in victory. For half a century before his accession, Sweden had not known the peace and prosperity in which he left the country in the hands of his son, Oscar, at his death in 1844.

KINGS OF SWEDEN.

- [Many antiquaries trace the reigns of the kings of Sweden as early as from the 5th century, and place Swartman as sovereign in 481, A. D. But the authorities so differ in the early succession, that we prefer commencing our account with the 11th century.]
1001. Olaf Skotkonung, or Olaf Schœtikonung; the Infant. Christianity introduced in this reign.
1026. Amund or Edmund Colbrenner.
1051. Amund or Edmund Slemme.
1056. Stenkil or Stenkil.
1066. Halstan.
1090. Ingeld or Ingo, styled the Good.
1112. Philip.
1118. Ingo II.
1129. Swerker or Suercher I.
1150. Eric X.
1162. Charles VII.: made prisoner by his successor.
1168. Canute, son of Eric X.
1192. Swerker or Suercher II.: killed in battle.
1210. Eric XI.
1220. John I.
1223. Eric XII. le Begue.
1251. Waldemar.
1279. Magnus I.
1290. Birger II.
1320. Magnus II.: dethroned.
1363. Albert of Mecklenburg: his tyranny causes a revolt of his subjects, who invite Margaret of Denmark to the throne.
1387. Margaret, queen of Sweden and Norway, now also Denmark, and Eric XIII.
1397. [Union of Calmar, by which the three kingdoms are united under one sovereign.]
1412. Eric XIII. governs alone: deprived.
1441. Christopher III.
1448. Charles VIII., surnamed Canuteson.
1470. [Interregnum.]
1483. John II. (I. of Denmark.)
1502. [Interregnum.]
1520. Christiern or Christian II. of Denmark, styled the "Nero of the North:" deposed for his cruelties.
1523. Gustavus Vasa; by whose valour the Swedes were delivered from the Danish yoke.
1560. Eric XIV., son of Gustavus: dethroned, and died in prison.
1568. John III., brother of Eric.
1592. Sigismund, king of Poland, son of John III.: disputes for the succession continued the whole of this reign.
1604. Charles IX., brother of John III.
1611. Gustavus (Adolphus) II., the Great: fell on the plains of Lutzen; supposed to have been treacherously slain.
1633. [Interregnum.]
1633. Christina, daughter of Gustavus-Adolphus. Resigned the crown to her cousin: died at Rome in 1689.
1654. Charles X. (Gustavus), son of John Casimir, count palatine of the Rhine.
1660. Charles XI., son of the preceding: the arts and sciences flourished in this reign.
1697. Charles XII., styled the "Alexander," the "Quixote," and the "Madman of the North:" killed at the siege of Frederickshall.
1719. Ulrica-Eleanora, his sister, and her consort Frederick I. Ulrica relinquished the crown, and in 1741. Frederick reigned alone.
1751. Adolphus-Frederick, of Holstein Gottorp, descended from the family of Vasa.
1771. Gustavus (Adolphus) III.: assassinated by count Ankerstrom at a masked ball. [The regicide was dreadfully scourged with whips of iron thongs three successive days; his right hand was cut off, then his head, and his body impaled.]
1792. Gustavus (Adolphus) IV. Dethroned, and the government assumed by his uncle, the duke of Sudermania.
1809. Charles XIII., duke of Sudermania.
1814. [Treaty of Kiel, by which Norway falls under the sovereignty of Sweden.]
1818. Charles (John) XIV., Bernadotte, the French prince of Ponte Corvo: succeeded by his son, 1844. Oscar, who ascended the throne, March 8. The PRESENT (1850) King of Sweden and Norway.

The KING. Joseph-Francis-Oscar, king of Sweden and Norway, son of Charles (John) XIV. and Eugenia-Bernardina-Désirée de Clary; born July 4, 1799; married, June 19, 1823, Josephine-Maximiliana-Eugenia (born March 14, 1807), daughter of Eugene, duke of Leuchtenberg; and has issue:

1. Charles-Louis-Engene, crown prince, duke of Scania, born May 3, 1826.
2. Francis-Gustavus-Oscar, duke of Upland, born June 18, 1827.
3. Oscar-Frederick, duke of Ostrogothia, born Jan. 21, 1829.
4. Charlotte-Eugenia-Augusta-Amelia-Albertina, born April 24, 1830.
5. Nicholas-Augustus, duke of Delecarlia, born Aug. 24, 1831.

The LATE KING. Charles-John Bernadotte (one of Napoleon's marshals), born Jan. 26, 1764; married, Aug. 16, 1798, Eugenia-Bernardina, the present dowager queen; elected crown prince, Aug. 21, 1810; succeeded Charles XIII. as king, Feb. 5, 1818; died March 8, 1844.

¹ This extraordinary and intrepid prince, in 1700, when but 18 years of age, gained a wonderful victory over the Russians at Narva, where with only 20,000 men, he attacked them in their entrenchments, and slew 30,000; the remainder, exceeding that number, surrendering to the mercy of the conqueror. In this battle he had several horses shot under him, and as he was mounting a fresh one, he said, "These people seem disposed to give me exercise." While dictating despatches to his secretary, a bomb fell through the roof of the house into an adjoining room, and his secretary let drop his pen in fright. "What is the matter?" said Charles. "O! the bomb, sire," he answered. "The bomb!" exclaimed the king, "What have we to do with the bomb? Write on." — Life of Charles XII.

PRUSSIA. — BRANDENBURG.

ABOUT three centuries before the Christian era this country was possessed by the Venedi, who were conquered by a people called the Borussi, and from these it obtained the name of Burussia; though some historians contend that the name is derived from Po, signifying near, and Russia—Po-Russia, easily modified into Prussia. After a succession of sanguinary wars the Borussi were conquered by the Teutonic knights, with whose followers, and with the Poles (by whom they were afterwards subdued), they eventually intermixed. Prussia continued long under the dominion of Poland, but at length threw off the dependence of its dukes upon that power. Frederick-William laid the foundation of the present monarchy, and his son and successor, in Jan. 1701, assumed the title of king, and was acknowledged as king by the emperor Leopold and all his allies.

SAXONY.

THE country to whose people the Britons, in the 5th century, when forsaken by their Roman defenders, turned for protection against the Picts and Scots. Little is known of Saxony after the memorable expeditions into England, until Charlemagne directed his arms to the right bank of the Rhine. He experienced much resistance from the Saxons under Wittikind, but they, in the end, submitted to him; and among the consequences of their subjection to this great conqueror, was the conversion of the country to Christianity. He conferred the title of Duke upon their chief. The first who became elector was Bernard III. of the house of Ascania, and on the extinction of that line, Frederick the Warlike, margrave of Misnia or Meissen, was made elector. Saxony continued an electorate until 1806, when the title of elector was changed to king, conformably with the treaty of peace between France and Frederick-Augustus, signed at Posen, Dec. 11, in that year.

DUKES, ELECTORS, AND KINGS.

DUKES.

BAVARIA.

THIS country is part of the ancient Noricum and Rhaetia Vindelicia, called also Boiaria, from the Boii, a people of ancient Gaul, who settled in Bohemia nearly six hundred years before the Christian era, and were driven hither by the Marcomanni in the reign of Augustus. After undergoing various revolutions, Bavaria became a duchy in the 9th century, and the title of duke was possessed by its rulers until 1623, when Maximilian I. was invested with the electoral dignity by the emperor Ferdinand II. In 1805 Napoleon raised Bavaria to the rank of a kingdom; and on Jan. 1, 1806, Maximilian Joseph was proclaimed king at Munich in presence of the French emperor.

BRUNSWICK¹. — HANOVER.

THE illustrious and ancient house of Brunswick owes its origin to Azo IV. of the family of Esté, son of Hugo III., marquess of Ferrara, in Italy. Azo, who died in 1055, left by his consort Cunegonde, daughter and heiress of Guelph, duke of Bavaria, a son, who was great-grandfather of Henry, surnamed the Lion. This prince married Maud, eldest daughter of Henry II. of England, and is always looked upon as the ancestor of our present royal family. The dominions possessed by Henry the Lion were very extensive; but he having refused to assist Frederick Barbarossa in a war against pope Alexander III., that emperor's resentment was drawn upon him, and in the diet of Wurtzburg, in 1180, he was proscribed. The duchy of Bavaria was given to Otho, count Wittelsbach, from whom is descended the present royal family of Bavaria; the duchy of Saxony was conferred upon Bernard Ascanius, founder of the house of Anhalt; and his other possessions were disposed of to different princes. Thus despoiled, Henry retired to England; but ultimately, after much intercession, Brunswick and Luneburg were restored to him. He left three sons. The two elder having no male issue, William, the third son, carried on the line of his family, and from him all the succeeding dukes of Brunswick and Luneburg have descended. Hanover was erected into a kingdom in 1814.

DUKE OF BRUNSWICK.

Ernest, who divided the family into two branches, Wolfenbittel and Zell, died in 1546. He had three sons. Otho died without issue, and was succeeded by his brother Henry, who carried on the elder branch, and is ancestor to the reigning duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbittel.

Sophia-Charlotte, born 1668; married to Frederick-William, elector of Brandenburg. The princess Sophia died June 8, 1714, in her 84th year. "The greatness of her soul," say her biographers, "tempered with sweetness and affability, bore proportion to her birth and the station which she filled, as a daughter of England, and as a mother of Germany."

1634. Augustus: he left three sons, Rodolphus-Augustus, Anthony-Ulrick, and Ferdinand-Albert; the two first succeeded; the third was the founder of the Bevern line.
1666. Rodolphus-Augustus; who associated his next brother, Anthony-Ulrick, in the government, from 1685: died, 1704.
1704. Anthony-Ulrick, brother of the preceding; now ruled alone; erected Blankenburg into a principality in 1707; became a Roman Catholic in 1710; died in 1714.
1714. Augustus-William, his son: died without issue 1731; succeeded by his brother, 1731. Ludowick-Rodolphus (prince of Blankenburg from his father's death in 1714): died without male issue in 1735.
[This prince left three daughters, who were married, Elizabeth-Christine to the emperor Charles VI.; Christina to the grand-duke Alexius of Russia; and Antonie-Amelia to the duke of Bevern.]
1735. Ferdinand-Albrecht: died same year; succeeded by his son,
1735. Charles; who transferred the ducal residence to Brunswick: succeeded by his son, the eldest of thirteen children.
1780. Charles-William-Ferdinand; married the princess Augusta of England: killed on the battle-field of Jena, commanding the Prussian army, Oct. 14, 1806: succeeded by his fourth son, his eldest sons being blind, and abdicating in favour of 1806. Frederick-William: his reign may be dated from the battle of Leipsic in Oct. 1813. Gloriously fell at Waterloo (battle of Quatre-Bras) commanding the avant-garde under the immortal Wellington, June 16, 1815; and was succeeded by his eldest son, 1815. Carl (Charles-Frederick-William-Augustus), now resident in London; born Oct. 30, 1804. Deposed by his younger brother William in 1830.
1830. William (Augustus-Louis-William-Maximilian); born April 25, 1806; succeeded Sept. 7, 1830.¹ The PRESENT (1850) Duke of Brunswick; unmarried.

HESSE.

THERE are few families in Germany more noble by their alliances than the houses of Hesse, and they give place to none for the heroes and statesmen they have produced. All the Hessian branches proceed from Philip the Generous, who at the death of his father, William II., in 1509, inherited the entire principality of Hesse. Philip the Generous was a zealous promoter of Protestantism, and declared himself in favour of Luther's doctrines in 1524. In 1527, he founded the university of Marburg. Dying in 1567, he left four sons, who divided the territory, so that four lines originated. Of the two principal branches, the eldest son, William IV., became the founder of that of Hesse-Cassel; and George, the youngest son, became the founder of the branch of Hesse-Darmstadt.

HESSE-CASSEL.

1509. Philip, surnamed the Generous: imprisoned by the tyrant emperor Charles V. His dominions were divided as mentioned above.
1567. William IV., his eldest son, surnamed the Wise: succeeded by his son, 1592. Maurice: forced by the renowned general, Count Tilly, to abdicate in favour of his son,
1627. William V., surnamed the Constant. His three younger brothers were the founders of the three lines of Rothenberg, Eschwegen, and Rheinfels. William died during the campaign of East Friedland, supposed by poison; his consort, 1637. Amelia-Elizabeth, governed until 1650, when she handed over the rule to her son, 1650. William VI., surnamed the Good, and the
- Wise: the hereditary prince died in his minority, and his brother succeeded.
1663. Charles, under the regency of his mother; reigned till 1730: succeeded by his son,
1730. Frederick I., who became, in right of his consort, king of Sweden in 1719: his brother acted as viceroy, and, at his death, succeeded in Hesse.
1751. William VII., succeeded by his son,
1760. Frederick II.; married, May 8, 1740, the princess Mary of England: succeeded by his son.
1785. William IX. (VIII.)²; obtained the electorship, 1801, and called himself William I., elector, 1803.
[After the battle of Jena he fled to Denmark, and, by the treaty of Tilsit, Hesse-Cassel became part of the kingdom of Westphalia. Returned in 1813: died in 1821.]

² The landgrave Frederick, brother of William I., elector, was the father of the princess Augusta-Wilhelmina-Louisa, the now duchess of Cambridge. Her royal highness was born July 25, 1797, and was married to Adolphus-Frederick, duke of Cambridge, at Hesse-Cassel, May 7, and again in London, June 1, 1818. The duke of Cambridge died July 8, 1850.

1821. William II., his son: retired to Hanau in 1831. The hereditary prince made co-regent, Sept. 30, 1831.
- The ELECTOR. Frederick-William I., born August 20, 1802; married Gertrude, countess de Schaumbourg, who was born May 18, 1806: has no issue.
- SISTERS of the Elector:
1. Caroline-Fredrica-Wilhelmina, born July 29, 1799.
 2. Mary-Fredrica, born Sept. 6, 1804; married, March 23, 1825, Bernard-Erich, reigning duke of Saxe-Meiningen.

HE SSE-DAR M STAD T.

The founder of this line, as already mentioned, was George I., youngest son of Philip the Generous. The princes of Hesse-Darmstadt were elevated to the rank of grand-dukes by the French emperor Napoleon.

LANDGRAVES.

1567. George I.: succeeded by his son,
1596. Louis V., surnamed the Faithful: he founded the university of Geissen in 1607: succeeded by his son.

1768. Louis IX.: succeeded by his son,
1790. Louis X.: became grand-duke.

GRAND-DUKES.

The GRAND-DUKE. Louis III., born June 9, 1806; co-regent from March 5, 1848; succeeded his father, the late grand-duke Louis II., June 16, same year. Married, Dec. 26, 1833, Matilda-Caroline-Fredrica-Wilhelmina (born Aug. 30, 1813), daughter of Louis, king of Bavaria: has no issue.

1803. Louis I. (late Louis X.), first grand-duke: succeeded by his son, 1830. Louis II.; was thrice married: succeeded by his son, 1848. Louis III.; succeeded June 16, 1848. The PRESENT (1850) Grand-Duke.

HIS BROTHERS:

1. Charles-William-Louis, born April 23, 1809; married, Oct. 22, 1836, Mary-Elizabeth-Caroline-Victoria (born June 18, 1815), daughter of William of Prussia, uncle to the king: issue:
 - I. Frederick-William-Louis-Charles, born Sept. 12, 1837.
 - II. Henry-Louis-William, born Nov. 28, 1838.
 - III. Anne-Maria-Wilhelmina, born May 25, 1843.
 - IV. William-Louis-Fredrick, born Nov. 16, 1845.
 2. Alexander-Louis-Christian-George, born July 15, 1823.
- SISTER. Maximiliana-Wilhelmina-Augusta-Sophia-Mary, born Aug. 8, 1824; married, April 28, 1841, to the hereditary grand-duke Alexander-Nicolaewitch, of Russia.

HE SSE-HOMBURG.¹

This house owes its origin to a junior branch of Hesse-Darmstadt. George I. left in 1596 three sons, of whom Frederick became the founder of this line. Hesse-Homburg was incorporated with the German confederation in 1817. The later princes were:

1751. Frederick-Louis V.: succeeded by his son,
1820. Frederick-Joseph; married, April 7, 1818 (while hereditary prince), the princess Elizabeth of England, sister of George IV. Succeeded by his brother,
1829. Louis-William-Fredrick: succeeded by his next brother,
1839. Philip-Augustus-Fredrick, who was also succeeded by his next brother, 1846. Gustavus-Adolphus-Fredrick. Died in 1848; and the 5th brother succeeded.
1848. Ferdinand-Henry-Fredrick; succeeded Sept. 8, 1848. The PRESENT (1850) Landgrave of Hesse-Homburg.

The LANDGRAVE. Ferdinand-Henry-Fredrick, born April 26, 1783; succeeded his brother, the landgrave Gustavus, who died Sept. 8, 1848. Gustavus had married, Feb. 12, 1818, Louisa-Fredrica, daughter of Fredrick, hereditary prince of Anhalt-Dessau; he left issue, now living:

1. Caroline-Amelia-Elizabeth, born March 19, 1819; married Oct. 1, 1839, prince Henry de Reuss-Greiz.
2. Elizabeth-Louisa-Fredrica, born Sept. 30, 1823.

THE YOUNGER LINES.

- HE SSE-PHILIPPSTRA L.

of his deceased brother, prince Charles; and has issue, living:

1. Charles, born May 22, 1803; married (Oct. 9, 1845), Mary-Alexandrina (born March 25, 1818), daughter of the duke Eugene, of Wurtemberg: issue, a son (Ernest-Eugene), born Dec. 20, 1846.
2. Francis-Augustus, born Jan. 26, 1805.

HESSE-PHILIPPSTHAL-BARCHFELD.

1808. Charles-Augustus-Philip-Louis, born June 27, 1784. Succeeded July 17, 1803. Married, 1st, Augusta-Charlotte (died June 8, 1821), daughter of Frederick-Louis, prince of Hohenlohe-Ingelfingen-Oehringen; 2nd (Sept. 10, 1823), Sophia-Caroline-Pauline (born Jan. 16, 1794), princess of Bentheim-Bentheim and Bentheim-Steinfurt; and has issue, living:

1. Bertha-Wilhelmina, born Oct. 26, 1818; married June 27, 1833, the hereditary prince, Louis of Bentheim-Bentheim.
2. Alexis-William, born Sept. 13, 1829.
3. Frederick-William, born Oct. 3, 1831.

MECKLENBURG.

CHARLEMAGNE, during his wars with the Saxons, entered Mecklenburg A. D. 789, and compelled the inhabitants to embrace Christianity. Louis, his successor, had the country governed by the dukes of Saxony: the people, however, threw off that yoke, and Nicolas and Premislas, princes, divided the territory between them. In 1147, Nicolas being slain in battle, Henry the Lion conquered Mecklenburg, and divided it among his generals and knights. But to the son of Nicolas (Premislas II.) he restored a part of his father's dominions, with the title of "Prince of Mecklenburg," instead of the former title, which was "king of the Wenden." After the death of Premislas II. followed Henry Borwin, his son, founder of the house of Mecklenburg. The modern division of the duchy was made at the commencement of the 18th century. The dignity of grand-duke was conferred on the princes of Mecklenburg by the Congress of Vienna in 1815.

PRINCES AND DUKES.

- Henry Borwin I. From this prince and his consort Matilda, daughter of Henry the Lion, sprang the house of Mecklenburg.
- Henry Borwin II.: he died in 1236, and left four sons, who divided Mecklenburg into four parts, viz.: MECKLENBURG, GUSTROW, ROSTOCK, and PARCHIM, which existed till 1611. The eldest son of Henry Borwin succeeded.
1236. John, surnamed Theologus.
1264. Henry I. (called III.), his son. Went to Jerusalem, and was therefore surnamed Hierosolymitanus; was made prisoner, and was supposed to be dead.
1302. Henry II. (IV.), his son. The former prince returned from captivity, and governed with Henry II., who died in 1329; and through his sons, Albrecht and John, sprung up the new lines of MECKLENBURG and STARGARD. In the line of Mecklenburg, succeeded
1349. Albrecht or Albert I., who was succeeded by his three sons
1380. { Albert II.: elected king of Sweden in 1363.
Henry, who took but little part in the government, and Magnus I., to whom Albert resigned the principality.
1412. { Albert III., son of Albert II., governed, together with John, son of Magnus I., whose two sons succeeded.
1423. { Henry III. (V.) surnamed the Fat, and John II., who died in 1442.
[Henry the Fat again united Stargard to Mecklenburg, and, dying in 1477, left three sons, who succeeded.]
1477. { Albert IV. } Co-regents. The three { Magnus II. } sons of Magnus II. suc-
1503. { Henry IV. (VI.) } Co-regents.
{ Erich, and { Albert the Fair. }
1547. John-Albert I., the eldest of five sons of Albert the Fair.
[His brother Ulrick made claims to the co-regency, and caused thereby a division in the country.]
1553. Ulrick, above-named, succeeded by his brother,
1603. Charles, who governed, instead of his minor cousins, Adolphus-Frederick and John-Albert, until 1610.
[The territory was again divided into two lines, MECKLENBURG and GUSTROW: the latter line became extinct in 1695.]
1610. Adolphus-Frederick: succeeded by his son,
1658. Christian-Louis; became a Roman Catholic, in 1663: succeeded by his nephew,
1679. Frederick-William. His disputes with his cousin, Frederick-Adolphus (II.) led to the Hambro treaty, by which, in 1701, the two lines of MECKLENBURG-SCHWERN and MECKLENBURG-STRELITZ were formed.

MECKLENBURG-SCHWERIN.

1701. Frederick-William, the above-mentioned prince. He retained three-fourths of the territory: succeeded by his brother, 1713. Charles Leopold. His brother, Christian-Louis, who afterwards succeeded, was appointed administrator by the emperor, in 1732.
 1747. Christian-Louis II, his brother.
 1756. Frederick, surnamed the Kind: succeeded by his nephew,
 1785. Frederick-Francis I. The dignity of grand-duke was conferred upon this prince by the congress of Vienna.
 [His son, Frederick-Louis, who died vitâ patris, was father of Helen-Louisa, married to Ferdinand, late duc d'Orleans, son of Louis-Philippe of France.]
 1837. Paul-Frederick, grandson of Frederick-Francis I.: succeeded by his son, 1842. Frederick-Francis II.; succeeded his father, March 7, 1842. The PRESENT (1850) Grand-Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin.
- The GRAND-DUKE. Frederick-Francis, born Feb. 28, 1823, son of the late duke Paul-Frederick, and of Frederica-Wilhelmina-Alexandrina, daughter of Frederick-William III., king of Prussia: unmarried.

His BROTHER and SISTER:

1. Louisa-Maria-Helena, born May 17, 1824; betrothed Aug. 4, 1849, to prince Hugh-Alfred-Adolphus, of Windisch-Grätz.
2. Frederick-William-Nicholas, born March 5, 1827.

MECKLENBURG-STRELITZ.

1701. Adolphus-Frederick II., founder of this line: succeeded by his son, 1708. Adolphus-Frederick III.: followed by his brother,
 1749. Charles-Louis-Frederick I. His daughter, Charlotte-Sophia, was the queen of George III. of England.
 1752. Adolphus-Frederick IV., his son: succeeded by his brother, 1794. Charles-Louis-Frederick II.; became grand-duke in 1815. His daughter, Frederica-Sophia-Louisa-Caroline, became duchess of Cumberland, and afterwards, by consequence, queen of Hanover.
 1816. George-Frederick-Charles-Joseph, his son: succeeded Nov. 6, 1816. The PRESENT (1850) Grand-Duke.
- The GRAND-DUKE. George-Frederick-Charles-Joseph, born Aug. 12, 1779; succeeded his father, the grand-duke Charles, Nov. 6, 1816. Married, Aug. 12, 1817, Maria-Wilhelmina-Frederica (born Jan. 21, 1796), daughter of the late Frederick, landgrave of Hesse-Cassel; and has issue:
1. Frederick-William-Charles-George, hereditary grand-duke, born Oct. 17, 1819; married, June 28, 1843, Augusta-Caroline-Charlotte-Elizabeth-Mary-Sophia (born July 19, 1822), daughter of Adolphus-Frederick, late duke of Cambridge, of Great Britain: issue:
 1. George-Adolphus-Frederick-Augustus-Victor-Ernest-Adelbert-Gustavus-William-Wellington, born July 22, 1848.
 2. Caroline-Charlotte-Marianne, born Jan. 10, 1821; married, June 10, 1841, to Frederick, prince-royal of Denmark, from whom she separated Sept. 30, 1846.
 3. George-Augustus-Ernest-Adolphus, born Jan. 11, 1824.

BADEN-BADEN. — BADEN-DURLACH.

THE illustrious house of Baden descends from Gerold, who, as well as his son, appears in the ancient records towards the close of the 8th century, as Landgraves of the Barr. From him, after many descents, came Bertholdus, who had two sons. The elder, Herman I., possessed, vitâ patris, Hochberg in Brigau, to which Baden belonged; he took the title of margrave, and died in 1074. His heir was Herman II., who called himself "margrav of Baden," and was the head and founder of the present house of Baden, 1130.

From Christopher I., who united the branches of Hochberg and Baden, and died in 1527, proceeded the branches of Baden-Baden and Baden-Durlach. He had two sons, Bernard and Ernest, of whom below.

MARGRAVES. — GRAND-DUKES.

- MARGRAVES.
1527. Bernard, who founded the house of Baden-Baden. This house became extinct in the person of the margrave Augustus-George, in 1771.
 1527. Ernest, who founded the house of Baden-Durlach.
 1553. Charles II., son of Ernest, margrave of Baden-Durlach; he built the castle of Carlsburg¹: succeeded by his son,

¹ The margrave Charles removed the seat of government from Pforzheim to the new-built palace of Carlsburg, in Durlach, and it remained the residence of the princes until 1771, when Baden-Durlach was united with Baden-Baden, and both formed one principality as Baden-Baden.

1584. Ernest-Frederick: he died without issue; and was succeeded by his brother,
 1604. George-Frederick, who gave up the government to his son,
 1622. Frederick V.: succeeded by his son,
 1659. Frederick VI.: succeeded by his son,
 1677. Frederick (VII.) Magnus: he died in 1709, and was succeeded by his son, 1709. Charles III., who built, in 1715, the city of Carlsruhe: his only son, Frederick, died vité patris, leaving two young princes, the elder of whom succeeded.
 1746. Charles-Frederick, grandson of Charles III.; horn in 1728; constituted an elector of the empire in 1803, with the dignity of grand-duke.

 1830. Charles-Leopold-Frederick, March 30, 1830. The PRESENT (1850) Grand-Duke.
  Charles-Leopold Frederick, the reigning grand-duke, was formerly count of Hochberg, and eldest of the sons of Charles-Louis-Frederick (last grand-duke but one) who were raised, by patent of right of succession, Oct. 4, 1817, to the rank of margraves of Baden, with the title of "Royal Highness."

HUNGARY.

THIS country, which was chiefly the ancient Pannonia, was reduced by Tiberius to the Roman power a few years before the Christian era. About the middle of the 4th century it was seized by the Huns, a ferocious tribe of Scythians, headed by Attila, whose dreadful ravages obtained him the appellation of the "Scourge of God." These savage hordes were afterwards driven northwards, but returned, and made their settlement here under the name of Hungarians. In later times they have been much intermixed with Slavonic nations, as Bohemians, Croats, and Russians, and with German settlers, as Austrians, Styrians, Franks, and Suabians. Hungary was annexed to the German empire under Charlemagne, but it became an independent kingdom in the 10th century.

KINGS OF HUNGARY.

997. Stephen, duke of Hungary; he establishes the Roman Catholic religion, and receives from the pope the title of Apostolic King, still borne by the emperor of Germany, as king of Hungary.

 1792. Francis I. (Francis II. as emperor of Germany): in 1804 he became emperor of Austria only.
 1835. Ferdinand V., son of Francis. Ferdinand I. as emperor of Austria.
 [This emperor would have been Ferdinand IV. of Germany, but for the change of style in 1804.]
 1848. Francis-Joseph, nephew of the preceding; succeeded on the abdication of his uncle, Dec. 2, 1848. The PRESENT (1850) King of Hungary and Emperor of Austria.
-  For the last three centuries the succession of the kings of Hungary varies little from the succession of the emperors, the crown having continued in the house of Austria.

BOHEMIA.

ANCIENTLY Boiëmum and Boihëmum.—Tacitus. So called from a tribe under the name of Boii, which settled in the country several centuries before the Christian era. The Boii were expelled by the Marcomanni, and fixed themselves in Boiaria, now Bavaria; but their conquerors, in their turn, were subdued by the Sclavonians. Notwithstanding the expulsion of the first settlers, the present inhabitants are still called Bohemians. Bohemia had formerly an elective government, but Ferdinand I. declared it hereditary in the house of Austria in 1547; and the kingdom may be said to have remained since that time in the undisturbed possession of the emperor.¹

 1526. Ferdinand I., who by his marriage with Anne, sister of Louis, succeeded to the crown.

For the succeeding kings, see "Emperors of Germany."

 The crown of this kingdom having remained in the Austrian family from the days of Ferdinand I. with a form of election on each vacancy, was, by the treaty of Westphalia, secured to that house in hereditary succession in 1648.

POLAND.

THE Poles were originally a tribe of Slavonians, settled on the banks of the Danube, but they removed at an early period to the Vistula, where they became intermingled with the Goths. Their early history is very obscure, and is known chiefly by the accounts of writers of other nations. The country was for a long time governed by elective chiefs bearing the title of duke, no dynasty having been established before the sway of Piastus (842) whose family ruled for several centuries. The crown became afterwards strictly elective by a Diet, or assembly of the nobles, who chose from among themselves a king, upon every vacancy occasioned on the throne by death; but since the dismemberment of Poland, each portion has been under the sovereignty of the power by which it was seized.

RUSSIA.

ANCIENTLY Sarmatia and Scythia.—Herodotus. Peopled by numerous tribes who were comprehended in the general name of Scythians by the Romans. Rurick was great duke in the 9th century; and Vladimir, called the Apostle and the Solomon of Russia, was the first Christian sovereign in the 10th. His marriage with Ann, sister to the Eastern emperors Basil and Constantine, led to the adoption of the doctrines of the Greek Church in his dominions. The history of Russia previous to the last three or four centuries is involved in much obscurity, and it does not appear that any of the states existing in this vast tract of country were considerable, or that the events connected with them differed much from those of other barbarous nations.

ROME.

ONCE the mistress of the world, and subsequently the seat of the most extensive ecclesiastical jurisdiction ever acknowledged by mankind. Rome was first governed by kings, who ruled for a period of 243 years. It afterwards became a commonwealth, which existed under consuls 479 years. The Roman empire commonly dates from 31 B. C., the year wherein (Sept. 2.) was fought the battle of Actium, which gave to Augustus (the title afterwards conferred by the senate upon Octavius Cæsar) the supreme power. We shall commence our account with the kings of Rome, as these are, not unfrequently, the subjects of historical reference.

KINGS OF ROME.

BEFORE CHRIST.

753. Romulus: murdered by the senators.
[Tatius, king of the Cures, had removed to Rome in 747, and ruled jointly with Romulus six years.]
716. [Interregnum.]
715. Numa Pompilius, son-in-law of Tatius the Sabine, elected: died at the age of 82.
672. Tullus Hostilius: murdered by his successor, by whom his palace was set on fire; his family perished in the flames.
640. Ancus Martius, grandson of Numa.
616. Tarquinius Priscus; son of Demaratus, a Corinthian emigrant, chosen king.
573. Servius Tullius; a manumitted slave; married the king's daughter; and succeeded by the united suffrages of the army and the people.

534. Tarquinius Superbus, grandson of Tarquinius Priscus: assassinates his father-in-law, and usurps the throne.
510. [The rape of Lucretia, by Sextus, son of Tarquin, leads to the abolition of royalty.]

REPUBLIC.

First period. From the expulsion of Tarquin to the dictatorship of Sylla, 510 to 82 B. C.

Second period. From Sylla to Augustus, 82 to 31 B. C.

EMPERORS OF ROME.

BEFORE CHRIST.

48. Caius Julius Cæsar; perpetual dictator: assassinated March 15, 44 B. C.
31. Octavianus Cæsar: in the year 27 B. C. Augustus imperator. — Livy.

AFTER CHRIST.

14. Tiberius (Claudius Nero).
37. Caius Caligula: murdered by a tribune.
41. Claudius (Tiber. Drusus): poisoned by his wife Agrippina, to make way for
54. Claudius Nero: deposed; put himself to death to escape a yet more terrible end.

180. Commodus (L. Aurelius Antoninus), son of Marcus Aurelius: poisoned by his favourite mistress, Martia.
193. Publius-Helvius-Pertinax: put to death by the prætorian band.
[Four emperors now start up: Didius Julianus, at Rome; Pescennius Niger, in Syria; Lucius Septimius Severus, in Pannonia; and Clodius Albinus, in Britain.]
193. Lucius Septimius Severus: died at York, in Britain, in 211; succeeded by his sons
211. M. Aurelius Caracalla, and Septimius Geta. Geta murdered the same year by his brother, who reigned alone until 217, when he was slain by his successor,
217. M. Opilius Macrinus, prefect of the guards: beheaded in a mutiny.
218. Heliogabalus (M. Aurelius Antoninus), a youth: put to death for his follies and enormities by his incensed subjects.

222. Alexander Severus: assassinated by some soldiers corrupted by Maximinus.
235. Caius Julius Verus Maximinus: assassinated in his tent before the walls of Aquileia.
237. M. Antonius Gordianus, and his son: the latter having been killed in a battle with the partisans of Maximinus, the father strangled himself in a fit of despair, at Carthage, in his 80th year.

306. Constantine, afterwards styled the Great : whilst at Rome the prætorian band claimed,
306. Maxentius, son of Maximianus Hercules. Besides these were,
306. Maximianus Hercules, who endeavoured to recover his abdicated power,
306. Flavius Valerius Severus, murdered by the last-named pretender, and,
307. Flavius Valerianus Licinius, the brother-in-law of Constantine.
- [Of these, Maximianus Hercules was strangled in Gaul in 310 ; Galerius Maximianus died wretchedly in 311 ; Maxentius was drowned in the Tiber in 312 ; and Licinius was put to death by order of Constantine in 324.]
324. Constantine the Great now reigned alone : died on Whitsunday, May 22, 337.
337. { Sons of Constantine ; divided the empire between them : the first was slain in 340, and the second murdered in 350, when the third became sole emperor.
337. { Constantine II.
Constans
Constantius II.
361. Julian, the Apostate, so called for abjuring Christianity, having been educated for the priesthood : mortally wounded in a battle with the Persians.
363. Jovian ; reigned 8 months : found dead in his bed, supposed to have died from the fumes of charcoal.
- [The Roman Empire may be said to have terminated here, as a single dominion.]

DIVISION OF THE EASTERN AND WESTERN EMPIRE.

WESTERN EMPIRE.¹

364. Valentinian, son of Gratian, takes the Western, and his brother, Valens, the Eastern, Empire.
367. Gratian, a youth, son of Valentinian, made a colleague in the government, by his father.
375. Valentinian II., another son, also very young, is, on the death of his father, associated with his brother in the empire. Gratian is assassinated by his general, Andragathius, in 383 ; Valentinian murdered by one of his officers, Arbogastes, in 392.
392. Eugenius, an usurper, assumes the imperial dignity : he and Arbogastes are defeated by Theodosius the Great, who becomes sole emperor.
- [Andragathius throws himself into the sea, and Arbogastes dies by his own hand.]
395. Honorius, son of Theodosius, reigns, on his father's death, in the West, and his brother, Arcadius, in the East. Honorius dies in 423.

 1453. [Constantinople taken on May 29, 1453, by the Ottomans, under their sultan, Mahomet II.: Constantine is slain, and with him ends the Eastern Empire.]

OTTOMAN OR TURKISH EMPIRE.

THE Turks are of Tartar descent. There is a rapid river called Turk, running into the Caspian Sea, from which some suppose this people to take their name. About the year A. D. 800 they obtained possession of a part of Armenia, called from them Turcomania; and they afterwards gradually extended their power. Their dominions, divided for some time into petty states, were united under Othman, from whom his subjects obtained the name of Ottomans. He established his empire at Prusa, in Bithynia, in the year 1299, and his successors extended their conquests over the adjacent parts of Asia, Africa, and Europe. In 1453 Constantinople was taken by Mahomed II. which put an end to the Eastern Empire.

PERSIA.

At the grand partition of the dominions of Alexander the Great among his captains, Persia was annexed to the Syrian kingdom of Seleucus Nicator, but did not continue long so, for in the reign of Antiochus Theos, Arsases vindicated the independence of his country, and founded the monarchy of the Parthians. In the 3rd century of the Christian era a great internal convulsion took place, which terminated in the accession of the dynasty of the Sassanides, who restored the name, with the religion and laws of ancient Persia. This government was overthrown by the Saracens; and the successive invasions by the descendants of Zingis or Zenghis Khan, Timur, and by the Turks, changed entirely the aspect of Western Asia. Persia was the main theatre on which the Saracens contended for mastery with these invaders, and she suffered all the miseries to which a nation can be exposed from the devastation of barbarous and sanguinary hordes. At length, early in the 16th century, a new dynasty arose.

GREECE.

This country, once the foremost in the world, anciently consisted of the peninsula of the Peloponnesus, Greece outside of the Peloponnesus, Thessaly, and the islands: the limits of modern Greece are much more confined. It became subject to the Turkish empire in the 15th century, and has but recently again become a separate state. The treaty of London, on behalf of Greece, between England, France, and Russia, was signed in Oct. 1827; count Capo d'Istria² was declared president in Jan. 1828; and the Porte acknowledged the independence of Greece in April, 1830. It was afterwards erected into a kingdom, of which Otho I. of Bavaria was made king.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

The provinces of North America that revolted from the sovereignty of Great Britain were first styled "the United States," by a resolution of congress, Sept. 9, 1776.

¹ Col. Tarrant, in his despatches, calls the present monarch of Persia, Nasser-ood-deen-Shah. The French spell the name variously, sometimes Nasser-ed-deen, sometimes Nesser-ud-deen. The Almanach de Gotha gives us the names of European sovereigns only. We have made inquiries of two Persian scholars, and they tell us that the Persian way of spelling the name is, as we first write it above, Nasr-ul-Din. At the Foreign Office they adopt Col. Tarrant's orthography.—EDITOR.

² This distinguished statesman was shortly afterwards murdered by the brother and son of Maromichaelis, a Mainote chief, whom he had imprisoned. The wretched assassins were sentenced to be immured within close brick walls built around them up to their chins, and to be supplied with food in this lingering torture until they died.

Their independence was acknowledged by Great Britain, Nov. 30, 1782, and the definitive treaty of peace between Great Britain, France, Spain, and the United States, was signed at Paris, Sept. 3, 1783.

The flag of the Union was declared to be thirteen stripes, alternately red and white, and thirteen stars in a blue field, corresponding with the then number of the states. The number of states at present (1850) is thirty-two, viz. :—

Maine.	Virginia.	Kentucky.
New Hampshire.	North Carolina.	Ohio.
Vermont.	South Carolina.	Michigan.
Massachusetts.	Georgia.	Indiana.
Rhode Island.	Florida.	Illinois.
Connecticut.	Alabama.	Missouri.
New York.	Mississippi.	Iowa.
New Jersey.	Louisiana.	Wisconsin
Pennsylvania.	Texas.	Oregon Territory,
Delaware.	Arkansas.	and the
Maryland.	Tennessee.	District of Columbia.

 847. Leo IV.: defeated the Saracens. ¹
 [Between Leo IV. and the next pontiff, Benedict III., an absurd story, not worth refutation, places "pope Joan."—He-nault. ²]
 855. Benedict III.: opposed by an anti-pope called Anastasius.
 858. Nicholas I., styled the Great.
 867. Adrian II.

¹ Of Leo IV. a great writer has beautifully said, "He showed himself, by defending Rome, worthy of being its sovereign: he was a Roman by birth, and the courage of the early ages of the republic seemed to be revived in him, at a time of cowardice and corruption. He stood, like one of the noble monuments of ancient Rome, which are seen, amid the ruins, as it were, reproaching the debasement, of the modern city."—Voltaire.

² It is fabulously asserted that a female, named Joan, conceived a violent passion for a young monk named Fel-da, and in order to be admitted into his monastery assumed the male habit. On the death of her lover, she entered on the duties of professor, and being very learned, was elected pope when Leo IV. died in 855. Other scandalous particulars follow; "yet until the Reformation the tale was repeated and believed without offence."—Gibbon.

872. John VIII.: it is to this John that some authors refer the scandalous fabrication of Pope Joan; but they err even in point of time. — See above.
882. Martin II.
884. Adrian III.; died the next year.
885. Stephen V.
891. Formosus: died detested; his corpse was thrown into the river Tiber.
896. Boniface VI.: deposed.
897. Romanus, antipope.
897. Stephen VI.; strangled in prison.
898. Theodorus II., governed 22 days.
898. John IX.
900. Benedict IV.
903. Leo V.: driven from his seat a few months after his election, and died in prison.
904. Sergius III.: disgraced his dignity by his vices.
911. Anastasius III.
913. Landonius, or Lando.
914. John X.: resigned, and was stifled by Guy, duke of Tuscany.
928. Leo VI.; considered an intruder by many Roman Catholic historians.
929. Stephen VII.
931. John XI.: imprisoned in the castle of St. Angelo, where he died.
936. Leo VII.; great in zeal and piety.
939. Stephen VIII.: "of ferocious character."
942. Martin III.
946. Agapetus II.: of holy life.
956. John XII., called the Infamous: deposed for adultery and cruelty, and, in the end, murdered.
[The preceding pope is said to have been the first who changed his name on his elevation to the papal chair.]
963. Leo VIII.: an honour to the chair, though an intruder. — Baronius.
963. Benedict V.: chosen on the death of John XII., but opposed by Leo VIII., who was supported by the emperor Otho; the Roman people were obliged to abandon his cause.
965. John XIII.; elected by the authority of the emperor against the popular will.
972. Benedict VI.: murdered in prison.
974. Boniface VII.
974. Donnus II.
975. Benedict VII.
983. John XIV.
984. John XV.: died before consecration.
985. John XVI.
996. Gregory V. An antipope, named John XVII., was set up, but expelled by the emperor.
999. Silvester II.
1003. John XVII.; legitimate pope: died same year.
1003. John XVIII.: abdicated.
1009. Sergius IV.
1012. Benedict VIII.
1024. John XIX.
1033. Benedict IX.: became pope, by purchase, at 12 years of age: expelled.
1044. Gregory VI.: abdicated.
1046. Clement II. (the Romanists call Clemens Romanus, the first Clement): died next year.
1047. Benedict again: again deposed.
1048. Damasus II.: died soon after.
1048. Leo IX.: canonized.
1054. [The throne vacant one year.]
1055. Victor II.
1057. Stephen IX.
1058. Benedict X.; an antipope: expelled.
1058. Nicholas II.
1061. Alexander II.: he carried the papal power to a height it had not reached before.
1073. Gregory VII., the celebrated Hildebrand; remarkable for the unexampled powers he usurped, and his unprincipled career.¹
1085. [Throne vacant one year.]
1086. Victor III.
1088. Urban II.: in this pontificate commenced the great crusade.
1099. Pascal II.

1181. Lucius III.
1185. Urban III.
1187. Gregory VIII.: ruled only two months.
1187. Clement III.
1191. Celestine III.
1198. Innocent III. (Lothario Conti) excommunicated king John of England.
1216. Honorius III.: learned and pious.
1227. Gregory IX.: caused a new crusade to be undertaken.
1241. Celestine IV.: died in 18 days after his election.
1241. [Throne vacant 1 year and 7 months.]
1243. Innocent IV.: gave the red hat.
1254. Alexander IV.
1261. Urban IV.
1265. Clement IV., an enlightened Frenchman, previously cardinal and legate to England: discouraged the crusades.
1268. [Throne vacant 2 years and 9 months.]
1271. Gregory X.; elected while he was with Edward I. of England in the Holy Land.
1276. Innocent V.: died shortly after.

¹ In the eleventh century, the power of the pontiff of Rome seems to have reached its utmost height. Gregory VII., the famous Hildebrand, assumed the exclusive title of Pope, which till then had been common to other bishops; and his successors carried their pretensions so far as to hold themselves out as lords of the universe, arbiters of the fate of empires, and supreme rulers of the kings and princes of the earth. In this character they proceeded to dispose of kingdoms, and to loose subjects from their allegiance, as is remarkably instanced in the history of John, king of England. At length they affirmed the whole earth to be their property, as well where Christianity had been propagated, as where it had not; and, therefore, on the discovery of the East and West Indies and America, Alexander VI., in 1493, granted to the Portuguese a right to all the countries lying to the eastward, and to the Spaniards all those westward of Cape Non, in Africa, which they might respectively be able to conquer. They finally pretended to be lords of the future world also, and by licences, pardons, dispensations, and indulgences, which they sold to the best bidders, to have a power of restraining, and in some instances of subverting, even the Divine justice itself. — Lives of the Popes.

1276. Adrian V.; legate to England in 1254; died 36 days after election.
1276. Vicedominus; died the next day.
1277. John XX. or XXI.; died in 8 months.
1277. Nicholas III.; died in 1280.
1281. Martin IV.
1285. Honorius IV.; promoted the crusades.
1288. Nicholas IV.; endeavoured to stir up the princes of Christendom to a new crusade, but without success.
1292. [Throne vacant 2 years and 3 months.]
1294. Celestine V.; resigned from fear.
1294. Boniface VIII.; proclaimed that "God had set him over kings and kingdoms;" imprisoned his predecessor, and laid France and Denmark under interdict.
1303. Benedict XI.; a pious and liberal pontiff; poisoned by some ambitious cardinals, a short time after his election.
1304. [Throne vacant 11 months.]
1305. Clement V. Bertrand the Goth; removed the papal seat from Rome to Avignon.
1314. [Throne vacant 2 years and 4 months.]
1316. John XXII.
1334. Benedict XII. [Nicholas V.; antipope, at Rome.]
1342. Clement VI.; a learned prelate, a generous prince, and amiable man. — Petrarch.
1352. Innocent VI.
1362. Urban V.; illustrious as a patron of learning.
1370. Gregory XI.; also an eminent protector of learning; he restored the papal chair to Rome.
1378. Urban VI.; so severe and cruel that the cardinals chose Robert of Geneva, under the name of Clement VII., which led to great violence.
1389. Boniface IX.
1394. Benedict (called XIII.); antipope at Avignon.
1404. Innocent VII.; died in 1406.
1406. Gregory XII. Angelo Corario; elected during the schism in the East; Benedict XIII. being the other pope: both popes were deposed.
1409. Alexander V.; died, supposed by poison.
1410. John XXIII.; elected during the great schism; deposed.
1417. Martin V. Otho Colonna.
1431. Eugenius IV. Gabriel Condolmera; deposed by the council of Basil, and Amadeus of Savoy chosen, as Felix V. in 1439; antipope.
1447. Nicholas V.
1455. Calixtus III.
1458. Pius II. Æneas Silvius Piccolomini.
1464. Paul II., a noble Venetian.
1471. Sixtus IV.
1484. Innocent III., a noble Genoese.
1492. Alexander VI., the infamous Roderic Borgia; poisoned at a feast by drinking of a bowl he had prepared for another.
1503. Pius III. Francis Todeschini; died 21 days after election.
1503. Julius II., Julian de la Ruvere.
1513. Leo X. (John de Medici); this pope's grant of indulgences for crime led to the Reformation.
1522. Adrian VI.
1523. Clement VII. Julius de Medici; refused to divorce Catharine of Arragon, and denounced the marriage of Henry VIII. with Anna Boleyn.
1534. Paul III., Alexander Farnese.
1550. Julius III.
1555. Marcellus II.; died soon after election.
1555. Paul IV. John Peter Caraffa. When queen Elizabeth sent him an ambassador to announce her accession, he haughtily answered, "that to the holy see, and not to her, belonged the throne, to which she had no right as being a bastard."
1559. Pius IV., cardinal de Medici.
1566. Pius V.
1572. Gregory XIII.; the greatest civilian and canonist of his time; under him the calendar was reformed.
1585. Sixtus V.; the most extraordinary man of his time. — Tillemont.
1590. Urban VII.; died 12 days after election.
1590. Gregory XIV. Nicolas Sfondrate.
1591. Innocent IX.; died in 2 months.
1592. Clement VIII.; learned and just.
1605. Leo XI.; died same month.
1605. Paul V., Camille Borghese.
1621. Gregory XV. Alexander Ludovisio.
1623. Urban VIII.; gave the title of Eminence to cardinals.
1644. Innocent X. John Baptist Pamphilus.
1655. Alexander VII. Fabio Chigi.
1667. Clement IX.
1670. Clement X. John Baptist Emile Altieri.
1676. Innocent XI.
1689. Alexander VIII.
1691. Innocent XII. Antonio Pignatelli.
1700. Clement XI. John Francis Albani.
1721. Innocent XIII. Michael Angelo Conti; the eighth pontiff of his family.
1724. Benedict XIII., properly so called.
1730. Clement XII.
1740. Benedict XIV.; the amiable Lambertini.
1758. Clement XIII. Charles Rezzonico.
1769. Clement XIV.; the illustrious Ganganelli,¹
1775. Pius VI. Angelo Braschi; dethroned by Buonaparte.
1800. Pius VII. Cardinal Chiaramonte; deposed by Buonaparte in 1809; restored in 1814.
1823. Leo XII. Annibal della Ganga. Sept. 28.
1829. Pius VIII. Francis Xavier Castiglioni. March 31.
1831. Gregory XVI. Mauro Capellari. Feb. 2, 1831; died June 1, 1846.
1846. Pius IX. Mastei Ferretti; elected June 16. The PRESENT (1850) Pope.

¹ Benedict XIV., apprised of the extraordinary modesty and merit of this great man, unexpectedly raised him to the purple; but he continued to wear the plain dress of his order (minor conventual Franciscans) observing all the austerity and mortifications of a friar. On the death of Clement XIII., the cardinals, who were in the interest of the house of Bourbon, knowing that Ganganelli was not attached to the Jesuits, and seeing that most of the Catholic princes of Europe were ready to separate from the Roman See unless that order were suppressed, conceived that from his liberality and wisdom that point might be achieved without danger to the pontifical chair, and they accordingly elected Ganganelli to it. His conduct after his elevation was still the same, pious, familiar, and lowly. Convinced of the necessity for the suppression of the Jesuits, he signed the brief for it in 1773. Shortly after he had placed his signature to this important document, he was seized with a disorder, believed to have been the effect of some deleterious drug, and after languishing in agonies which reduced him to a skeleton, he died in 1775. Clement XIV. was one of the most enlightened and benevolent men that ever wore the tiara.

EXTINCT OR MERGED KINGDOMS AND PRINCIPALITIES.

JERUSALEM.

THIS kingdom began with its capture by the first crusaders, who elected as king, in 1099, Godfrey de Bouillon, the chief commander of the expedition, though he chose to be called, from motives of piety, the "advocate or defender of the holy sepulchre."¹ The crown of Jerusalem descended from Godfrey de Bouillon to the house of Anjou, afterwards to Guy de Lusignan, and, in 1210, to John de Brienne. The emperor Frederick having married the daughter of this last, was invested with all her rights, which, however, he did not care to assert; and the possession of Jerusalem being no longer an object of ambition, the city became, what it had been before Godfrey's invasion, a place of pilgrimage.

BRETAGNE OR BRITTANY.

THE ancient Armorica; but this name in the earliest ages was common to all that tract of country situated between the mouths of the Seine and the Loire. When, however, the Bretons were obliged to abandon the isle of Albion (England), and to take refuge in a part of Armorica in the 5th century, they gradually communicated their name as well to the inhabitants, as to the province itself.—Henault. The counts of Bretagne (of whom was the celebrated Waroc) were distinguished in history some centuries before the reign of Charlemagne, by whom the territory was subdued, circa 780. In later times the dukes of Brittany became possessed of considerable power.

¹ Jerusalem taken, July 15, 1099, by assault, after a siege of five weeks. Impelled by a mixture of military rage, the Crusaders put the numerous garrison and inhabitants to the sword without distinction. Neither arms defended the valiant, nor submission the timid; no age or sex was spared; infants on the breast were pierced by the same blow with their mothers, who implored for mercy; even a multitude to the number of 10,000, who had surrendered themselves prisoners, and were promised quarter, were butchered in cold blood by these ferocious conquerors. The streets of Jerusalem were covered with dead bodies; and the triumphant warriors, after every enemy was subdued and slaughtered, immediately turned themselves, with sentiments of humiliation, towards the holy sepulchre! They threw away their arms still streaming with blood; they advanced with reclined bodies, and naked feet and hands, to that sacred monument; they sung anthems to their Saviour, who had there purchased their salvation by his death and agony; and their devotion so overcame their fury, that they dissolved in tears, and bore the appearance of every soft and tender sentiment. So inconsistent is human nature with itself! and so easily does superstition ally, both with the most heroic courage and with the fiercest barbarity.—Abbé Vertot. Hume.

NORMANDY.

Neustra. The Normans, enticed by plunder, having made many descents upon France, Charles the Simple, at length wearied by their aggressions, came to an accommodation with them, and concluded the famous treaty of St. Clair upon the Epte, whereby he gave them a part of Neustra, which from the incursions of those barbarians had already taken the name of Normandy.—Henault. Charles also gave his daughter Giselle to their chief, Rollo, in marriage, on the condition of his embracing Christianity, and giving it encouragement among his followers.

The contention between the last duke, Robert, and his brother Henry (third son of the Conqueror, and now king of England) terminated with the battle of Tinche-

¹ This princess was a very beautiful and an extraordinary woman. She had been married by proxy to Maximilian of Austria, but by a kind of divorce from him she became the consort, in 1491, of Charles VIII. of France, who put aside Margaret, the daughter of Maximilian, to whom he was affianced, to espouse her. Charles died in April 1498, and in the Jan. following, Anne of Brittany married his successor on the throne, Louis XII. It is remarkable, also, that her daughter, the princess Claude, became the queen of the next king in succession, Francis I. Claude was the daughter of Louis XII. Anne died in 1513.—Henault.

² On the death of Charles she put a "cordelier" (a black knotted lace) round her coat of arms, which introduced a custom observed ever since; and she mourned in black, instead of the then practice of wearing white. She, too, was the first to have young ladies of quality about her person, called "maids of honour."—Brandéme.

³ This Robert had a son, William, to whom (and not to his father) the French historians give the surname Courthose (Courtecuisse), short-thigh: Lewis le Gros was desirous to protect him in his duchy; but Henry of England had become too powerful, and it was too late.—Henault.

bray, in Lower Normandy, Sept. 28, 1106; when Robert was defeated, made prisoner, and sent to England, where he died in captivity. Normandy was then annexed to England, but was re-united to the crown of France in the reign of king John.

SUABIA.

ONE of the ten great circles or divisions of Germany, supposed to have derived its name from the Suevi, who made it their abode about the time of Julius Cæsar. It was erected into a duchy in the 5th century, and continued to be governed by its dukes until the 13th, when the reigning family became extinct on the death of Conradin, who was beheaded at Naples in 1268. Suabia was eventually divided among a number of petty princes.

FRANCONIA.

ANOTHER of the former ten circles of Germany. Of the origin of the Franks historians have given us no certain account. Pharamond is the first of their kings of whom we have any distinct mention; see France. They were conquered by Charlemagne; and Franconia was subsequently governed by dukes.

In modern times, Franconia consisted of two principalities, Bayreuth and Anspach; three bishoprics, Bamberg, Wursburg, and Eichstadt; seven counties, and three lordships. These divisions are now altered; one district having been given to Wurttemberg; another to Baden; a third to the house of Hesse; and the tract called Henneberg to the house of Saxe; while all the rest was made over to Bavaria.

BURGUNDY.

Burgundiones.—Pliny. The kingdom of the Burgundians began in Alsace in 413, and continued for 119 years, the Franks stripping them of their dominions in 532. In the division of France among the sons of Clotaire in 561, Gontran had Orleans and Burgundy; in 638, Clovis II. had Burgundy and Neustria; and on the death of Charles le Gros, in 888, Rodolph became king of Transjuran Burgundy. The kingdom was soon afterwards united to that of Arles, and both passed on the death of Rodolph III. in 1032 to Conrad the Salique, emperor of Germany. The Burgundians, who settled in Celtic Gaul, gave name to the county and duchy of Burgundy.

LORRAINE.

THIS country took its name from Lothaire, or Lotharius, son of the emperor of the same name, and was given to the prince as an independent dominion, A. D. 851. The kingdom eventually was divided in the 10th century into two parts. Lower Lorraine was governed by its dukes, afterwards dukes of Brabant, until Brabant became united with Burgundy in 1429. The late province subsisted until 1766, when it was finally united to France.

FLANDERS.

This country passed early into the hands of France, and was governed by its counts or earls, chiefly subject to that crown, from A.D. 862, until united with Burgundy in 1384. In the former year, Baldwin, the great forester or ranger of France, having carried off the daughter of Charles the Bald, widow of a king of England¹, after much difficulty obtained the king's consent to marry her, and was made earl of Flanders.—Henault.

COUNTS OF FLANDERS.

862. Baldwin I. Bras de Fer, first count.
 879. Baldwin II., called the Bald.

 1346. Louis II., de Male.
 1384. [On the death of Louis II., Philip the Hardy, of Burgundy, succeeded, by marriage with his daughter and heiress, and united Flanders to his dukedom.]

¹ The widow alluded to by Henault was Judith, second queen of Ethelwolf, who had espoused her when she was only twelve years of age. She afterwards became the wife of his son and successor Ethelbald. That king, however, was forced by public indignation and the censure of the Church to send her to her father in France; and there she was married to Baldwin.—Charles Home's "England."

HAINAULT.

THE counts of Hainault were early of considerable note, and their names occur frequently in connection with the most remarkable political transactions of their time. In modern annals the province has been the theatre of great military conflicts, among which may be mentioned those of Enghien, Seneffe, Steenkirk, Fleurus, Malplaquet, Tournay, and Fontenoy.

COUNTS OF HAINAULT.

875. Regner I.	1099. Baldwin III.
916. Regner II.	1120. Baldwin IV., surnamed the Builder; reigned 51 years.

1013. Regner V.
1030. Rechila, Herman, and Baldwin I.
1051. Rechila.
1070. Baldwin II., of Jerusalem.

LUXEMBURG.

SIGEFRIED was first count in the 10th century, and the province continued to be governed by independent counts or dukes until it was sold to Burgundy in 1444. The princes of Luxemburg became of considerable note, and several of them have been emperors of Germany. The present dynasty of the Netherlands has the title of grand-duke of Luxemburg.

COUNTS OR DUKES.

965. Sigefrid.	1288. Henry V.; elected emperor in 1308, as Henry VII.; said to have been poisoned.

ANJOU.

IN 877, Louis the Stammerer, son and successor of Charles the Bald of France, upon his accession to that crown, bestowed many largesses on his friends. In order to reconcile the malcontents (those who had not shared them) Louis found it expedient to dismember great portions of his domains; and hence arose many seignories, duchies, and counties, possessed by various individuals and families. This is believed to be the origin of the counts of Anjou, of whom Ingelger was the founder.—Henault.

COUNTS OF ANJOU.

Fulco (Fulke), surnamed the Red: after having united the counties of Eudo and Ingelger, died in 938.	938. Fulco II., surnamed the Good: succeeded by his eldest son,
	958. Geoffrey I.: he obtained for himself and

- his successors the dignity of seneschal of France.
987. Fulco III., the Black; died returning from Jerusalem: succeeded by his son, 1040. Geoffrey II. Martel (the Hammer), who died without male issue.
1060. { Geoffrey III., the Bearded; and
Fulco IV.; the latter imprisoned his brother, and was excommunicated by the pope: his consort, Bertrade of Montfort, was carried off by the king (Philip I. of France), who married her.
1106. Geoffrey IV.: released his uncle, who died soon after, leaving to his nephew Anjou. Geoffrey fell in a war with his father by a poisoned arrow, discharged at him, it is said, at the instance of Bertrade.
1109. Fulco V., son of Geoffrey IV.; became king of Jerusalem, and died in 1142: succeeded by his third son, 1129. Geoffrey V., Plantagenet; obtained Anjou from his father this year: his two elder brothers succeeded the father as kings of Jerusalem.
- [Geoffrey V. married Mathilde d'Angleterre¹ (Maud, daughter of Henry I.): he conquered Normandy, which he gave,
- in 1149, to his son Henry, afterwards Henry II., king of England.]
1150. Geoffrey VI., second son of the preceding: died without an heir.
1158. William, earl of Poitou, third son of Geoffrey V.: died in 1164.
- [Anjou from this time became a possession of the kings of England. It was, however, in the reign of John taken, together with Normandy, by Philip-Augustus of France, and incorporated with that kingdom, and given as a fief; first to]
-  John, son of Louis VIII., who died early; and next to 1264. Charles, his brother, who, later, became Charles I. of Sicily; and whose descendants were called the house of Anjou.
- [Alfonso V., of Arragon and Naples, achieved a victory over René of Anjou² in 1422. The dukedom of Anjou afterwards became nothing more than a mere title, taken by the second sons of the kings of France. This title has long since ceased.]

² Margaret of Anjou, daughter of René of Anjou, above mentioned, was queen of Henry VI. of England, and her name will ever stand prominently in British history. She was of an ambitious and Amazonian spirit, remarkable for her courage and enterprise, and the intrepidity with which she headed her troops in the war of the roses against the house of York. If she had not been the instrument of her husband's misfortunes by putting to death the duke of Gloucester, his uncle, her name would be immortalized for the fortitude and policy with which she supported the rights of Henry and her son. She defeated the duke of York at Wakefield in 1460, and in her march to London encountered at St. Albans (1461) the earl of Warwick, who had her husband with him as a prisoner; her success in this battle set him free. But after the defeat at Towton, being unable to raise a new army in England, she crossed over to France to solicit succours from Louis XI., who refused them. The fatal battle of Tewkesbury (1471) put an end to all her enterprises. Margaret was taken prisoner, and confined in the Tower, but was ransomed by Louis, in return for which she made over to him all her right to the duchies of Anjou, Lorraine, and Barr, and the county of Provence. Died in 1482.

PART II.

STATESMEN AND STATE OFFICERS OF ENGLAND.

AMBASSADORS, ENVOYS EXTRAORDINARY, MINISTERS PLENI-POTENTIARY, &c. FROM GREAT BRITAIN TO FOREIGN STATES.*(From the Accession of King GEORGE III. 1760.) * After the year 1800, the respective dates are, in most cases, those of the Credentials.

AMBASSADORS are frequently mentioned in early history. As civilization advanced, and intercourse between nations (its consequence) became greater, they were made resident at courts, thereby to render the friendly relations of these courts with each other, the more permanent and enlarged. In England, we have four classes or degrees of ministers to foreign courts. The first class are Ambassadors; Envoys or Ministers-Plenipotentiary constitute the second class; Ministers, called resident (though all are so) the third; and Chargés d'Affaires the fourth. The distinctions are usually regulated by the dignity of the individual, the importance of his mission, and the splendour of the court to which he is accredited. The Corps Diplomatique of Great Britain has furnished to her councils some of her greatest statesmen. Many of the personages who have been members of it have risen to the highest honours in reward of their eminent services to their country, not more by their consummate wisdom in conducting delicate and intricate negotiation, than by their prudence and address in removing those political asperities that sometimes occur in the great business of nations.

¹ Sir George Rumbold's house, near Altona, was surrounded by a company of eighty soldiers (part of a detachment of 250) at one o'clock in the morning; the doors were forced open, and his person and papers seized. On the instant, he was hurried into a carriage, taken to the banks of the Elbe, and thence conveyed to Harbourg, and to Hanover, and subsequently by land, escorted by a squadron of dragoons, to Paris, where, immediately on his arrival, he was lodged in the Temple. The British government appealed in strong terms to the corps diplomatique against this outrage, and the different sovereigns of Europe were invoked to resent it. However, after an examination of his papers (in which nothing was found to implicate him in a supposed conspiracy), and an imprisonment of three days, he was released, and removed, still strongly guarded, first to Boulogne, and then to Cherbourg. At this latter place he was embarked for England in a fishing-smack, which, meeting in the channel the British frigate Niobe, she received him on board, and landed him at Portsmouth. This affair produced a great sensation at every court.

¹ In May 1848, Mr. Bulwer was ordered by the Spanish government to quit Madrid within forty-eight hours, on the alleged ground of his improper interference in the internal affairs of the kingdom. The minister of Spain, in London (M. Isturiz) was, in consequence, informed by the British government that he could not be allowed to continue at the court of Great Britain as minister from the Queen of Spain. M. Isturiz took his departure, therefore, from London on the 14th June following; and diplomatic relations were not renewed between the two countries until April 1850; when Lord Howden was appointed British minister to the court of Madrid, and M. Isturiz returned to the court of London.

THE ADMINISTRATIONS OF ENGLAND.

THE higher Officers of the Government, holding their offices at pleasure, and removable on political change, are collectively called "the Administration," and are almost invariably members of one or other house of parliament. A select number of these, filling the most important offices, who assemble to concert on, and conduct the measures of the Administration, are called the CABINET, a name not known to the Constitution¹, but which is, in fact, a Committee of the Privy Council—constituting the responsible advisers of the Crown.

In old times the chief minister was the Chancellor, whose office originally included, besides its legal functions, the duties subsequently performed by Secretaries of State. In modern times, the extension and importance of the financial department, and, above all, the influence created by financial and fiscal patronage, have generally induced the chief minister to take the Treasury department, either as Lord High Treasurer or as First Lord Commissioner of the Board of Treasury. In the latter case, when he is a member of the house of commons, he has generally also been Chancellor of the Exchequer. We believe the only exceptions to this practice have been in the recent cases of Sir Robert Peel and Lord John Russell. Nor is it of necessity that the First Minister should be First Lord of the Treasury. Lord Chatham, in his first ministry (1756), chose rather to be Secretary of State, and in that of 1766, Privy Seal.

The Cabinet Ministers usually are, the First Lord of the Treasury, the Lord High Chancellor, the Lord President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal, the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the three Principal Secretaries of State, and, latterly, the President of the Board of Control, and President of the Board of Trade. To these are occasionally added one or more of the following, viz.: the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the Chief Commissioner of Woods and Forests, the Secretary-at-War, the Master-General of the Ordnance, the Postmaster-General, the Master of the Mint, and, recently, the Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Sometimes, personages of distinguished rank and political weight are invited to a seat in the Cabinet, without office, as instanced in the late appointment of the Duke of Wellington; his grace was, however, at the time, Commander-in-Chief. Lords Sidmouth and Harrowby remained in the Cabinet for a short time after their resignation of office; and Lord Mulgrave continued a cabinet minister without office in 1820. Lord Ellenborough, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, had a seat in the Cabinet in the Administration known by the derisive appellation of "All the Talents." This last appointment was generally condemned as unconstitutional, but it was sanctioned by a majority in parliament. Lord Ellenborough, however, afterwards declared himself opposed to such appointments.

ADMINISTRATIONS OF ENGLAND.

(From the Accession of King Henry VIII.)

KING HENRY VIII.

1509. William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury, lord chancellor; Dr. Thomas Howard, earl of Surrey (afterwards duke of Norfolk), lord treasurer; Dr. Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester (former secretary to Henry VII.), privy seal; George, earl of Shrewsbury, lord steward; Charles, lord Herbert, lord chamberlain; Dr. John Fisher, bishop of Rochester and cardinal, &c.

1514. Thomas Wolsey, archbishop of York and

¹ The term cabinet council is of comparatively modern date, and originated thus: The affairs of state in the reign of Charles I. were principally managed by the archbishop of Canterbury, the earl of Strafford, and the lord Cottington; to these were added the earl of Northumberland, for ornament; the bishop of London for his place, being lord treasurer; the two secretaries, Vane and Windebank, for service and intelligence; only the marquess of Hamilton, by his skill and interest, meddled just so far, and no further, than he had a mind. These persons made up the committee of state, reproachfully called the junto, and afterwards, enviously, the cabinet council. — Lord Clarendon.

There is no list of the cabinet: they are necessarily privy councillors, and have an extra official summons or notice to attend; and each member holds a master-key of the despatch boxes of all the various departments, by means of which each cabinet minister circulates, as it is called, intelligence received, or despatches proposed, &c., for the information and advice of his colleagues.

cardinal, lord chancellor; Thomas, duke of Norfolk, lord treasurer; Charles, earl of Worcester, lord chamberlain; Thomas Routhal, bishop of Durham, secretary of state (made privy seal), &c. The duke of Norfolk afterwards resigned in favour of his son.

1523. Thomas, earl of Surrey, lord high treasurer; Cuthbert Tunstall, bishop of London, privy seal; Dr. Richard Pace (succeeded by Dr. Knight), secretary of state.
1529. Sir Thomas More, lord chancellor; Thomas Howard, duke of Norfolk, lord high treasurer; Cuthbert Tunstall, bishop of London, privy seal; Dr. Stephen Gardiner, afterwards bishop of Winchester, secretary of state; Dr. Thomas Cranmer, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, &c.
1532. Sir Thomas Audley (afterwards lord Audley), lord keeper; Thomas Boleyn, earl of Wiltshire, privy seal; Thomas Cromwell, afterwards earl of Essex; Thomas Cranmer, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury, &c.
1540. Thomas, lord Audley, lord chancellor; Thomas, duke of Norfolk, lord high treasurer; Charles, duke of Suffolk, lord president; Henry, earl of Surrey, bishop Gardiner, lord Russell, &c. Sir Thomas (afterwards lord) Wriothesley and sir Ralph Sadler, secretaries of state.
1544. Thomas, lord Wriothesley, lord chancellor; Thomas, duke of Norfolk¹, lord treasurer; Charles, duke of Suffolk, lord president; John, lord Russell, privy seal; William, lord St. John, John, lord Lisle, sir Anthony Brown, &c. Sir William Petre and sir William Paget, secretaries of state.

KING EDWARD VI.

1547. William, lord St. John, lord keeper and lord president (succeeded by Richard, lord Rich, as lord chancellor); Edward, earl of Hertford, lord protector, created duke of Somerset, and made lord treasurer; John, lord Russell, privy seal; Henry, earl of Arundel, lord chamberlain; Thomas, lord Seymour, sir Anthony Brown, &c. Sir William Paget and sir William Petre, secretaries of state.
1551. Thomas Goodrich, bishop of Ely, lord keeper, afterwards lord chancellor; John Dudley (late lord Lisle) earl of Warwick, created duke of Northumberland, lord high admiral; William, late lord St. John, now earl of Wiltshire (lord treasurer in 1550), president of the council; John, earl of Bedford, privy seal; Thomas, lord Wentworth, lord chamberlain, &c. Sir William Petre and sir William Cecil, secretaries of state.

QUEEN MARY.

1554. Stephen Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, lord chancellor; William, marquess of Winchester (late lord Wiltshire), lord treasurer; earl of Arundel, lord president; John, earl of Bedford (succeeded by Edward, earl of Derby), privy seal; William, lord Howard, lord high admiral; sir Edward Hastings, sir John Baker, Edmund Bonner, bishop of London, &c. Sir William Petre, sir John Cheke, and sir John Bourne, (three) secretaries of state.

, It appears by the Council Register, folio 725, that three secretaries of state were appointed 7 Edward VI. June 2, 1553.

QUEEN ELIZABETH.

1572. Sir William Cecil, now lord Burleigh, lord high treasurer; sir Nicholas Bacon, lord chancellor; lord Howard of Effingham, privy seal; Robert Dudley, earl of Leicester, master of the horse, sir Henry Cocks, the earl of Sussex, &c. Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state.
1579. Sir Thomas Bromley, lord chancellor; William, lord Burleigh, lord treasurer; Edward, earl of Lincoln, lord high admiral; Ambrose, earl of Warwick, ordnance; Thomas, earl of Sussex, Robert, earl of Leicester, sir Walter Mildmay, James Windebank, &c. Sir Francis Walsingham and sir Thomas Wilson, secretaries of state.
1587. Sir Christopher Hatton, lord chancellor; William, lord Burleigh, lord treasurer; Robert Devereux, earl of Essex (a favourite), &c.
1599. Thomas Sackville, lord Buckhurst, afterwards earl of Dorset, lord high treasurer; sir Thomas Egerton (afterwards lord Ellesmere, and subsequently viscount Brackley) lord keeper; Charles, lord Howard of Effingham, &c. Sir Robert Cecil (son of lord Burleigh), secretary of state.

¹ This nobleman was marked by Henry for death, and his escape from it was signally providential. Upon the most frivolous charges, he had been condemned, without trial or evidence, by the obsequious peers, and a bill of attainder had passed their house against him. Norfolk wrote a pathetic letter to the king, protesting his entire innocence and pleading his past services; his son had already suffered on the scaffold. But the vengeance of Henry, though his own end was fast approaching, was not to be appeased. Fearing his victim might escape him, he sent a message to the commons to hasten the bill, to which he affixed the royal assent by commission, and issued orders for Norfolk's execution on the morning of the 29th of January. News, however, having reached the Tower that the king himself had expired that night, the lieutenant deferred obeying the warrant, and it was not thought advisable by the council to begin a new reign by the unmerited death of the greatest nobleman in the kingdom. — Hume.

KING JAMES I.

1609. Robert Cecil, earl of Salisbury, lord high treasurer; Thomas, lord Ellesmere, lord chancellor; Henry, earl of Northampton, privy seal; Charles, earl of Nottingham, Thomas, earl of Suffolk, &c.
1612. Henry, earl of Northampton, first commissioner of the treasury; Thomas, lord Ellesmere, lord chancellor; Edward, earl of Worcester, sir Ralph Winwood, Charles, earl of Nottingham, &c. Robert Carr¹ (a favourite), viscount Rochester, afterwards earl of Somerset, lord chamberlain.
1615. Thomas, earl of Suffolk, lord treasurer; Thomas, lord Ellesmere, lord chancellor; Edward, earl of Worcester, privy seal; Charles, earl of Nottingham, sir George Villiers² (a favourite), afterwards viscount Villiers, and successively earl, marquess and duke of Buckingham (lord high admiral in 1619), sir Ralph Winwood, sir Thomas Lake, &c.
1620. Sir Henry Montagu, afterwards viscount Mandeville and earl of Manchester, lord treasurer.
1621. Lionel, lord Cranfield, afterwards earl of Middlesex, Edward, earl of Worcester, John, earl of Bristol, John Williams, dean of Westminster, George Villiers, now marquess of Buckingham, sir Edward Conway, afterwards lord Conway, &c.

KING CHARLES I.

1628. Richard, lord Weston, afterwards earl of Portland, lord treasurer; sir Thomas Coventry, afterwards lord Coventry, lord keeper; Henry, earl of Manchester (succeeded by James, earl of Marlborough, who, in turn, gave place to Edward, lord, afterwards viscount, Conway), privy seal; William Laud, bishop of London, sir Albertus Morton, &c.
1635. William Laud, now archbishop of Canterbury, first commissioner of the treasury; Francis, lord Cottington, James, marquess of Hamilton, Edward, earl of Dorset, sir John Coke, sir Francis Windebank, &c. The great seal in commission.

1640. William Juxon, bishop of London, lord treasurer; sir John Finch, afterwards lord Finch, lord keeper; Francis, lord Cottington, Wentworth, earl of Stratford, Algernon, earl of Northumberland, James, marquess of Hamilton, Land, archbishop of Canterbury, and sir Francis Windebank and sir Henry Vane, secretaries of state.
- [When the civil war commenced all went into confusion. The unfortunate king was beheaded, Jan. 30, 1649.

COMMONWEALTH.

1653. Oliver Cromwell, made protector. He named a council whose number at no time was to exceed twenty-one members, nor be less than thirteen.
1658. Richard Cromwell, son of Oliver, succeeded on the death of the latter. A council of officers ruled at Wallingford House.

KING CHARLES II.

(From the Restoration of the King.)

- [Until this time there was not, in point of fact, anything that could be exclusively called a CABINET. The sovereign had latterly governed by a collection of privy councillors, sometimes of larger, sometimes of smaller number, and not always holding the same offices, and still less the same men.]
1660. Sir Edward Hyde, afterwards earl of Clarendon, lord chancellor; George Monk, general of the king's forces in the three kingdoms, and master of the horse, created duke of Albemarle; Thomas, earl of Southampton, soon made lord treasurer; Edward Montagu, created earl of Sandwich, general and admiral; James, duke of York, brother to the king, lord high admiral; lord Sey and Sele, privy seal; sir Robert Long, chancellor of the exchequer; earl of Manchester, lord Seymour, &c. Sir Edward Nicholas and sir William Morrice, secretaries of state.
1667. George Monk, duke of Albemarle, made first commissioner of the treasury, &c.
1670. "The CABAL" Ministry. Sir Thomas Clifford, afterwards lord Clifford (C); Anthony Ashley, afterwards earl of Shaftesbury (A); George Villiers, duke of Buckingham (B); Henry, lord

¹ Robert Carr, a young Scotchman, became a great favourite with the king. His majesty created him viscount Rochester, and as long as he followed the advice of Sir Thomas Overbury, his favouritism was not very displeasing to the English. But young Carr, falling in love with the too celebrated Frances Howard, lady Essex, and she with him, it was contrived to divorce her from her husband; they were married, and he was promoted to the earldom of Somerset. Overbury disapproving of the whole affair, Somerset, upon some other pretence, got him imprisoned in the Tower, where, in a short time after, he was poisoned with an envenomed clyster. The perpetrators were executed, all but Somerset and his countess, who, though condemned, were pardoned by the king. He afterwards gave them a small pension upon which they retired, and languished out old age in infamy and obscurity. — Charles Home's England.

² The king, on a visit to Cambridge, saw a young man of good family, George Villiers, who had, in fact, thrown himself in the king's way by appearing in a play acted before his majesty by the Cambridge scholars. In a very short time Villiers disputed James's favour with Somerset, upon whose fall he at once rose to the height of power, riches, and honours. "Of all wise men living, James was most delighted with handsome persons, and Villiers was of fine person and exceedingly handsome." — Lord Clarendon. "Villiers became duke of Buckingham, lord high admiral of England, warden of the Cinque Ports, and master of the horse; and disposed of all the offices and all the honours in the three kingdoms. The votes and remonstrances that were passed against him by the parliament as an enemy of the people were all in vain. This favourite was, however, afterwards assassinated. — Charles Home. Lord Clarendon.

Arlington, afterwards earl of Arlington (A); and John, duke of Lauderdale (L). This private council obtained the name of Cabal from the initial letters of their five names, which composed the word.¹—Charles Home's England.

1672. Thomas, lord Clifford, Anthony, earl of Shaftesbury, late lord Ashley, Henry, earl of Arlington, Arthur, earl of Anglesey, Sir Thomas Osborne, created viscount Latimer, Rt. hon. Henry Coventry, sir John Duncombe, sir George Carteret, Edward Seymour, &c.
1673. Thomas, viscount Latimer, afterwards created earl of Danby, made lord high treasurer. June 26.
1679. Arthur, earl of Essex, made first commissioner of the treasury, March 26; succeeded by Laurence Hyde, afterwards earl of Rochester, Nov. 21, both in this year. Robert, earl of Sunderland, secretary of state, vice sir Joseph Williamson, &c.
- [The king nominated a new council this year (on April 21), consisting of thirty members only, of whom the principal were the great officers of state and great officers of the household.]
1684. Sidney, lord Godolphin, Lawrence, earl of Rochester, Daniel, earl of Nottingham, Robert, earl of Sunderland, sir Thomas Chicheley, George, lord Dartmouth, Henry, earl of Clarendon, earls of Bath and Radnor, &c.

JAMES II.

1685. Lawrence, earl of Rochester, George, marquess of Halifax, sir George Jeffreys, afterwards lord Jeffreys and lord chancellor, Henry, earl of Clarendon, sir John Ernley, knt., duke of Queensberry, viscount Preston, &c.
1687. The earl of Rochester was displaced, and John, lord Belasyse, made first commissioner of the treasury in his room. Jan. 4; the earl of Sunderland made president of the council; viscount Preston, secretary of state; and various other changes took place in this and the following year.
1688. [At the close of this reign, the advisers of the king were chosen as creatures of his narrow and desperate policy. Several Roman Catholics had been admitted of the council; Protestants had been superseded in the army; judges removed, and prelates imprisoned; and no man's liberty or life was safe in England; while in Ireland the earl of Tyrconnel ruled despotically.

In the end, the king left Whitehall in the night of Dec. 17, and, quitting the kingdom, landed at Ambleteuse, in France, Dec. 23, 1688.²]

KING WILLIAM III.

1689. Charles, viscount Mordaunt, first commissioner of the treasury; Thomas Osborne, earl of Danby, created marquess of Carmarthen, afterwards duke of Leeds, lord president; George, marquess of Halifax, privy seal; Arthur Herbert, afterwards lord Torrington, first commissioner of the admiralty; earls of Shrewsbury, Nottingham, and Sunderland, earl of Dorset and Middlesex, William, earl (afterwards duke) of Devonshire, lord Godolphin, lord Montagu, lord De la Mere, &c. The great seal in commission.
1690. Sidney, lord Godolphin, first commissioner of the treasury; Thomas, earl of Danby, lord president; Rt. hon. Richard Hampden, chancellor of the exchequer; Thomas, earl of Pembroke, admiralty; Henry, viscount Sydney and Daniel, earl of Nottingham, secretaries of state, &c. The great seal and privy seal in commission.
1698. Charles Montagu, afterwards lord Halifax, first commissioner of the treasury; May 1; succeeded by Ford, earl of Tankerville, Nov. 15, 1699.

QUEEN ANNE.

1702. SIDNEY, LORD (afterwards earl) GODOLPHIN, treasury; Thomas, earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, lord president; John Sheffield, marquess of Normanby, afterwards duke of Normanby and Buckingham, privy seal; hon. Henry Boyle, chancellor of the exchequer; sir Charles Hedges and the earl of Nottingham (the latter succeeded by the Rt. hon. Robert Harley, created earl of Oxford, in 1704), secretaries of state, &c.
1711. ROBERT, EARL OF OXFORD, treasury; sir Simon (afterwards lord) Harcourt, lord keeper; John, duke of Normanby and Buckingham, lord president; John, bishop of Bristol (afterwards of London), privy seal; Henry St. John, afterwards viscount Bolingbroke, and William, lord Dartmouth, secretaries of state; Rt. hon. Robert Benson, afterwards lord Bingley, chancellor of the exchequer, &c.
1714. Charles, duke of Shrewsbury, treasury. July 30 (two days before the queen's demise). Patent revoked Oct. 13, following.

¹ At the time that this appellation had generally obtained, about 1672, lord Clifford held the office of lord treasurer; lord Ashley had become lord chancellor; the duke of Buckingham was lord president; lord Arlington, secretary of state; and the duke of Lauderdale lord president of Scotland.

² William, prince of Orange, had published (Oct. 1, 1688) a declaration of his reasons for his expedition to England; the principal were, "to facilitate the calling of a free parliament, to inquire into the birth of the prince of Wales, and to secure the Protestant religion, which was in great danger." On Oct. 16, he formally took leave of the States General, and on the 19th set sail from Holland; but, having been driven back by a storm, he did not finally set sail until Nov. 1. His forces consisted of nearly 50 ships of war and 300 transports, having on board 14,322 men. The prince was in the centre of the fleet, accompanied by the earls of Shrewsbury and Macclesfield, and other nobles; his ship bore at the main mast-head the British flag and their Mightinesses' arms, with the words "The Protestant Religion and the Liberties of England," surrounding both; while another flag floated at the mizen with the motto of the house of Nassau "Je maintiendrai." The armament, entering the channel, passed the Gunfleet on Nov. 3; and, on the 5th (according to Dr., afterwards bishop Burnet, who was with the prince; not the 4th, as some historians have it) William landed at Torbay.

KING GEORGE I.

1714. CHARLES, EARL OF HALIFAX, first lord of the treasury (succeeded on his death by the earl of Carlisle); William, lord Cowper, afterwards earl Cowper, lord chancellor; Daniel, earl of Nottingham, lord president; Thomas, marquess of Wharton, privy seal; Edward, earl of Oxford, admiralty; James Stanhope, afterwards earl Stanhope, and Charles, viscount Townshend, secretaries of state; sir Richard Onslow, chancellor of the exchequer; dukes of Montrose and Marlborough, lord Berkeley, Rt. hon. Robert Walpole, Mr. Pulteney, &c.
1715. RT. HON. ROBERT WALPOLE, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer, &c.
1717. RT. HON. JAMES STANHOPE, afterwards earl Stanhope, treasurer and chancellor of the exchequer; William, lord Cowper, Charles, earl of Sunderland, the duke of Kingston, lord Berkeley, Rt. hon. Joseph Addison, &c.
1718. CHARLES, EARL OF SUNDERLAND, first lord of the treasury; Thomas, lord Parker, afterwards earl of Macclesfield, lord chancellor; the earl Stanhope, the duke of Kent, lord Berkeley, Mr. Craggs, Mr. Aislahie, &c.
1721. RT. HON. ROBERT WALPOLE, afterwards sir Robert, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer; Thomas, lord Parker, created earl of Macclesfield, lord chancellor; Henry, lord Carleton (succeeded by William, duke of Devonshire), lord president; Evelyn, duke of Kingston (succeeded by lord Trevor), privy seal; James, earl of Berkeley, first lord of the admiralty; Charles, viscount Townshend, and John, lord Carteret (the latter succeeded by the duke of Newcastle), secretaries of state; John, duke of Marlborough (succeeded by the earl of Cadogan), ordnance; Rt. hon. George Trehy (succeeded by Rt. hon. Henry Pelham), secretary-at-war; viscount Torrington, &c.

GEORGE II.

1727. SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, &c. continued.
[The following was the state of the Cabinet near the close of sir Robert Walpole's long administration.]

1740. SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer; Philip, lord Hardwicke, lord chancellor; Spencer, earl of Wilmington, lord president; John, lord Hervey, privy seal; John Potter, archbishop of Canterbury; duke of Newcastle and the earl of Harrington, secretaries of state; sir Charles Wager, first commissioner of the admiralty; duke of Dorset, lord steward; duke of Grafton, lord chamberlain; duke of Richmond, master of the horse; earl of Pembroke, groom of the stole, &c.

* * These great household officers were at this period always in what was called the Cabinet, but there was an interior council, of Walpole, the chancellor, and the secretaries of state, who, in the first instance, consulted together on the more confidential points.¹

1742. [Sir Robert Walpole, having been in a minority of 16 on an inquiry into the Chippingham election, declared he would never again enter the house of commons.² He went to court and resigned all his employments, February 8, having been first minister twenty-one consecutive years. He was created earl of Oxford, viscount Walpole, and baron Houghton. The earl of Wilmington was made minister in his room.³]

1742. EARL OF WILMINGTON, first lord of the treasury; lord Hardwicke, lord chancellor; Mr. Sandys, chancellor of the exchequer; John, earl of Harrington, president of the council; earl Gower, privy seal; lord Carteret and the duke of Newcastle, secretaries of state; earl of Winchilsea, first lord of the admiralty; duke of Argyll, commander of the forces and master-general of the ordnance; Mr. Henry Pelham, paymaster of the forces, &c. Feb.

[The duke of Argyll resigned, and was succeeded by the earl of Stair, as commander of the forces, and by the duke of Montagu at the ordnance.]

1743. RT. HON. HENRY PELHAM, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer, in the room of Spencer earl of Wilmington, deceased. Aug. 25.

1744. The "BROAD BOTTOM⁴ Administration:"

¹ Lord Hervey's Memoirs of the Reign of George II. by the Rt. Hon. John Wilson Croker.—Mr. Croker adds, "The duke of Bolton, without a right to it from his office of captain of the Band of Pensioners, in which employment he succeeded the duke of Montagu on his removal to the ordnance, was likewise admitted to the cabinet council, because he had been of the cabinet seven years previously, at the time he was turned out of all his offices." And he further says, "Sir John Norris (vice-admiral of England) was called in, as an auxiliary, when anything was under deliberation in relation to our then maritime war with Spain."

² Sir Robert Walpole had risen to a power no minister had ever before attained. From his conduct in administration, he was called the Father of Corruption; he used to say "that every man had his price," and boasted of knowing what that price was. He was either mistaken in the assertion, or he had not the means of buying the votes of the commons, as it now appeared.

³ The prince of Wales (father of George III.) received in January, 1742, a message from the king (George II.), then not on cordial terms with the prince, his son, offering him, provided he wrote a letter of submission to his majesty, an addition to his revenue of £50,000 per annum, and a sum of £200,000 for the discharge of his debts. The prince answered, that he had the utmost respect for his royal father, and that whenever his majesty thought proper to admit him to his presence, he should throw his person at his feet without any conditions; but that he would give no countenance to the minister in his management of public affairs. Sir Robert Walpole was, he said, a bar between his majesty and the affections of his people, between his majesty and foreign powers, and between his majesty and himself. "This," said the prince, "is my answer. But I would have it understood that I take the message to come from the minister, and not from the throne."

On the change in the administration, the prince of Wales presented himself at court, where he was most graciously and affectionately received, and a guard of honour was immediately ordered to attend his royal highness at Carlton-House. The joy of the people at this reconciliation was unbounded; bonfires, illuminations, the ringing of all the public bells, and acclamations from the multitude, and other demonstrations of popular satisfaction and delight took place in London and in all the towns and villages adjacent, in the evening.—Cose.

⁴ This ministry was ludicrously called the "Broad Bottom Administration," because comprising a grand coal-

Henry Pelham, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer; lord Hardwicke, lord chancellor; duke of Dorset, president of the council; earl Gower, privy seal; duke of Newcastle, secretary of state for the Southern, and the earl of Harrington for the Northern, department; duke of Montagu, master-general of the ordnance; duke of Bedford, first lord of the admiralty; duke of Argyll, keeper of the great seal of Scotland; marquess of Tweeddale, secretary of state for Scotland; duke of Grafton, lord chamberlain; duke of Richmond, master of the horse; all of the cabinet. Nov.
1746. [Mr. Pelham and his friends having tendered their resignation to the king, the formation of a new administration (which expired within two days, while yet incomplete) was undertaken by the earl of Bath: the members of it actually appointed, and submitted for approval to his majesty, were (Feb. 10) viz.]
The "SHORT-LIVED MINISTRY:" Earl of Bath, first lord of the treasury; lord Carlisle, privy seal; lord Winchelsea, first lord of the admiralty; and lord Granville, one of the secretaries of state.¹ Expired, Feb. 12.
1746. RT. HON. HENRY PELHAM, first minister, returned, with his colleagues, to power. Feb. 12.
[The duke of Bedford resigned the admiralty to the earl of Sandwich, and succeeded the earl of Chesterfield as secretary of state, Feb. 1748; and the earl of Holderness succeeded the duke of Bedford, June, 1751, in the same office. Mr. Pelham died, March 6, 1754.]
1754. THOMAS HOLLES PELHAM, DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, first lord of the treasury; hon. Henry Bilson Legge, chancellor of the
- exchequer; earl of Holderness and sir Thomas Robinson (afterwards lord Grantham), secretaries of state; the latter succeeded by the Rt. hon. Henry Fox; lord Anson, first lord of the admiralty; lord Granville, lord president; lord Gower (succeeded by the duke of Marlborough), privy seal; duke of Grafton, earl of Halifax, Rt. hon. George Grenville, &c. Earl of Hardwicke, lord chancellor. April.
1756. WILLIAM, DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE, first lord of the treasury; Rt. hon. WILLIAM PITT, secretary of state for the Southern department; Hon. Henry Bilson Legge, chancellor of the exchequer; earl Granville, lord president; earl Gower, privy seal; earl of Holderness, secretary of state for the Northern department; Rt. hon. George Grenville, earl of Halifax, dukes of Rutland and Grafton, earl of Rochford, &c. The great seal in commission. Nov.
1757. DUKE OF NEWCASTLE'S and MR. PITT'S ADMINISTRATION. Thomas Holles Pelham, duke of Newcastle, first lord of the treasury; Rt. hon. William Pitt, afterwards lord Chatham, secretary of state for the Northern department, and leader of the house of commons; lord Henley, lord keeper; lord Granville, lord president; earl Temple, privy seal; Mr. Legge, chancellor of the exchequer; earl of Holderness, secretary of state for the Southern department; duke of Devonshire, lord chamberlain; duke of Rutland, lord steward; lord Anson, admiralty; duke of Marlborough (succeeded by lord Ligonier), master-general of the ordnance; Rt. hon. Henry Fox (afterwards lord Holland), paymaster. Rt. hon. George Grenville, lords Halifax and Gower, James Grenville, &c. June.

KING GEORGE III.

[The following were among the changes subsequent to the accession of George III: sir Robert Henley, created lord Henley, lord chancellor, Jan. 1761; the earl of Bute, secretary of state, vice the earl of Holderness, March; and the earl of Egremont, vice Mr. Pitt, Oct., same year; lord North, a lord of the treasury, &c.]
1762. JOHN, EARL OF BUTE, first lord of the treasury; lord Henley, lord chancellor; sir Francis Dashwood (afterwards lord le Despencer), chancellor of the exchequer; lord Granville, lord president; duke of Bedford, privy seal; earl of Halifax, admiralty; earl of Egremont and Rt. hon. George Grenville, secretaries of state; lord Ligonier, ordnance; Rt. hon. Henry Fox, paymaster; Viscount Barrington, lord Sandys, duke of Marl-

tion of all parties. The whigs were satisfied because their influence was predominant, and the Tories, though considered accessory and subordinate, were yet pleased, because many of their leaders, who had been hitherto excluded, were admitted into offices of trust and power. The members not of the cabinet were: the earl of Stair commander of the forces; duke of Devonshire, lord steward; duke of Bolton, governor of the Isle of Wight; Mr. Waller, cofferer of the household; Mr. Dodington, treasurer of the navy; Mr. Lyttelton, Mr. Aruodel, the earl of Middlesex, and Mr. Fox, lords of the treasury; and the earl of Sandwich, Mr. Grenville, lord Archibald Hamilton, lord Vere Beauclerk, lord Baltimore, and Mr. Anson, admiralty lords.—Coxe's Memoirs of the Rt. hon. Henry Pelham.

¹ Lord Granville had the seals of one secretary of state, with the seals of the other, "to be given to whom he might chuse." Among the jeux d'esprit of the day was a History of the Long Administration, bound up with the works printed for children, and sold for a penny; it concluded with the following ironical eulogium: "And thus endeth this astonishing administration, which lasted 48 hours, three quarters, seven minutes, and eleven seconds; the most wise and honest of all ministries; never having said one silly thing, or committed one rash act, and having left as much money in the treasury as they found in it. This history is recorded in this mighty volume, that it may be read with the valuable works of the immortal Thomas Thumb by our children, grand-children, and great-grandchildren to the end of the world."—Coxe's Memoirs of Pelham.

1765. CHARLES, MARQUESS OF ROCKINGHAM, first lord of the treasury; Rt. hon. William Dowdeswell, chancellor of the exchequer; earl of Winchilsea and Nottingham, lord president; duke of Newcastle, privy seal; duke of Portland, lord chamberlain; duke of Rutland, master of the horse; lord Talbot, lord steward; general the hon. Henry Seymour Conway, and the duke of Grafton, secretaries of state; lord Egmont, admiralty; marquess of Granby, ordnance; viscount Barrington, secretary-at-war; viscount Howe, treasurer of the navy; hon. Charles Townshend, paymaster; earl of Dartmouth, first lord of trade; lord John Cavendish, Thomas Townshend, &c. Earl of Northington (late lord Henley), lord chancellor. July, et seq.
1766. EARL OF CHATHAM (late Rt. hon. WILLIAM PITT), first minister and privy seal; duke of Grafton, first lord of the treasury; hon. Charles Townshend, chancellor of the exchequer; earl of Northington, lord president; William, earl of Shelburne and general Conway, secretaries of state; sir Charles Saunders (succeeded by sir Edward Hawke), admiralty; marquess of Granby, ordnance; lord Hillsborough, first lord of trade; lord Barrington, secretary-at-war; Frederick, lord North, a joint paymaster; viscount Howe, &c. Lord Camden, lord chancellor. Aug.
1767. [William, lord Mansfield, lord chief justice of the king's bench, became, ex officio, chancellor of the exchequer, pro tem., on the death of Mr. Townshend, Sept. this year; and Frederick, lord North, was appointed chancellor of the exchequer, Dec. following.]
1767. AUGUSTUS-HENRY, DUKE OF GRAFTON, first lord of the treasury; Frederick, lord North, chancellor of the exchequer; earl Gower, lord president; earl of Chatham¹, lord privy seal until Oct. 1768, then succeeded by the earl of Bristol; earl of Shelburne, secretary of state for the Southern department; viscount Weymouth, Northern department;

1768. [Viscount Weymouth, secretary of state for the Southern department, vice lord Shelburne; earl of Rochford, secretary of state for the Northern department, vice lord Weymouth. Nov.]
1770. FREDERICK, LORD NORTH, first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer; earl Gower, lord president; earl of Halifax, privy seal; lord Rochford, lord Weymouth (succeeded by lord Sandwich), and lord Hillsborough (colonies), secretaries of state; sir Edward Hawke, admiralty; lord Granby, ordnance; sir Gilbert Elliot, treasurer of the navy; lord Barrington, secretary-at-war; lord Hertford, lord Carteret, &c. Jan. The great seal was delivered to Mr. Attorney-general Yorke, made lord chancellor; but before the patent for his peerage, under the title of lord Morden, was completed, he died suddenly, and the seal, after being a year in commission, was given to the hon. Henry Bathurst, one of the commissioners, created lord Apsley.
- [Lord North continued minister eleven years, during the whole of the American war. The changes within this period were numerous; among them were:]
1771. Lord Halifax, secretary of state, vice Lord Sandwich (who went to the admiralty), succeeded as lord privy seal by the earl of Suffolk and Berkshire. Jan. The latter gave place to the duke of Grafton, and became secretary of state. June.
1772. Lord Dartmouth, secretary of state, vice lord Hillsborough. Aug. Viscount Townshend, ordnance, vice marquess of Granby. Oct.
1775. Viscount Weymouth, again secretary of state, vice Rochford; and lord George Sackville Germaine, vice Dartmouth, made privy seal. Nov.
1778. Lord Thurlow, lord chancellor. June.
1779. Lords Stormont and Hillsborough, secretaries of state. Earl Bathurst, lord president. Nov.
1782. ¹ This was the last office in the state filled by lord Chatham; but he continued to take a forward part in the house of lords, for a period of ten years afterwards. On April 8, 1778, while enforcing, with his accustomed energy, in the house, the wisdom of a reconciliation with America, he was seized with a convulsive fit, and died on the 11th of the following month. His remains lay in state some days in the Jerusalem chamber, whence they were deposited in Westminster Abbey.

² It has been said, that yielding to the public wish that an experiment for peace should be tried, Mr. Pitt retired from office, in order to this experiment being made. But he had identified himself with Roman Catholic emancipation to secure the union with Ireland; and we have his own evidence and that of his successor, lord Sidmouth, in proof, that his inability to propose his "resolutions" in relation to that measure, as a minister, was "the sole cause of his resignation."

¹ On this change of ministry, the Rt. hon. John Wilson Croker, secretary to the admiralty, retired. We mention the circumstance, as it was the first occasion on which a personage holding that office resigned it with the minister. Mr. Croker had been secretary full twenty-one years, embracing one of the brightest periods in our naval administration.

² On the death of the earl Spencer, lord Althorpe succeeded to the earldom, and lord Melbourne went to Brighton to receive the king's commands as to the appointment of a new chancellor of the exchequer, in the latter's room; but his majesty informed the minister, that, under the circumstances, he considered the administration at an end. This announcement created great surprise and excitement in the political circles and throughout the nation. The duke of Wellington being sent for, his grace advised the king to appoint Sir Robert Peel premier, and this was done accordingly.

Lord Cottenham, lord chancellor. July.

1847. [CHANGES: Mr. Labouchere to board of trade, vice earl of Clarendon, appointed lord lieutenant of Ireland, July, 1847. Earl Granville, paymaster general, vice Mr. Macaulay, May, 1848. Sir Francis Thornhill Baring, first lord of the admiralty, vice earl of Auckland, deceased, Jan. 1849. Mr. Fox Maule, secretary-at-war, to be of the cabinet, Nov. 1849. Earl of Carlisle from Woods and Forests to the duchy of Lancaster, March; and sir Thomas Wyld, created lord Truro, lord chancellor, vice lord Cottenham, who resigned, and was created earl of Cottenham, July, 1850.]

1850. LORD JOHN RUSSELL (as above) and his colleagues, the PRESENT Ministers.

THE GREAT OFFICERS OF STATE.

THE LORD HIGH STEWARD OF ENGLAND.

THE FIRST great officer of the crown was formerly the Lord High Steward of England, or Viceroy, for so the word signifies in the Saxon language: in Latin he is styled Magnus Angliæ Seneschallus. This honourable office is of great antiquity, having been established prior to the reign of Edward the Confessor. The Lord High Steward was the prime officer under the king, and the office was annexed to the lordship of Hinckley, in Leicestershire; and this lordship belonging to the family of Montfort, earls of Leicester, they were, in right of it, Lord High Stewards of England. But Simon de Montfort, the last earl of this family, having made a bad use of the power which this office had given him, raised a rebellion against his sovereign Henry III., and was attainted, and his estate forfeited. Henry and his successors, wisely judging that the power was too great, in some measure abolished the office, as, in the hands of an ambitious subject, it might be made subservient to the worst purposes. It is now, therefore, only revived pro hac vice, to officiate at a coronation, or the trial of a peer. By his commission for the first, the Lord High Steward sits judicially himself, or appoints commissioners to act for him: he keeps his court in the king's palace, where he receives the petitions of noblemen and others, who, by tenure or otherwise, claim to do service at the coronation of the king. When he is appointed to preside at the trial of a peer or peeress of the realm, the lords being assembled, his commission is read, and a white rod, his emblem of office, is put into his hand, and his "Grace," for so he is then styled, takes the seat allotted to him as Lord High Steward, and proceeds to the trial of the personage arraigned before him. As soon as the investigation is over, his Grace breaks the rod, which ends his commission.

THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR.

THE SECOND great officer of the Crown is the Lord High Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal. Formerly this office was conferred upon some dignified clergyman, remarkable for his abilities, and his knowledge of the civil law. After the princes of the blood royal, he is the first lay-subject, and is reputed the keeper of the king's conscience. Among the many great prerogatives of his office, he has a power to judge according to equity, conscience, and reason, where he finds the law of the land so defective as that the subject would be injured thereby. If a man be imprisoned illegally during the vacation, he has power to grant a writ of habeas corpus, and do him justice according to law; whereas, neither the court of king's bench, nor the common pleas, can grant that writ but in term-time. The Lord Chancellor and Lord Keeper are the same in authority, power, and precedence; they are appointed by the King's delivery of the great seal to them, and by taking the oath of office. They differ only in this point, that the Lord Chancellor has also letters-patent; whereas the Lord Keeper has none. The business of the chancery, originally transacted in the exchequer department of the Curia Regis, was removed to a separate court about the close of Richard I.'s reign, from which time the annual rolls descend regularly.

LORD HIGH CHANCELLORS OF ENGLAND.

WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

1067. Arfastus, or Herefast¹, chaplain to the king; bishop of Elmham.
1070. Osbert, afterwards bishop of Exeter.

107. Ranulph, or Arnulph: died 1123.
[Richard, a chaplain, was, according to

Thynne, keeper of the seal under Ranulph; but this is doubtful: he became bishop of Hereford in 1120.]

1124. Geoffrey Rufus, afterwards bishop of Durham.

1327. John de Hotham, again. Jan.

— Henry de Clyff, master of the rolls, keeper. March.

¹ In Henry I.'s reign, a keeper of the seal under the chancellor Ranulph is mentioned, but upon somewhat doubtful authority. In this reign (Henry II.'s) Walter de Constantiis is called "Vice-Chancellor" by one author, and is described by another as having the duties of the Chancellor in the Curia Regis committed to him by Ralph de Warneville. In the following reign (that of Richard I.), the title, it will be found, was officially adopted. He was, perhaps, the deputy of the chancellor mentioned in the Dialogus de Scaccario, to whom the custody of the rolls was entrusted, and in whose appointment probably originated the office of master of the rolls. — Foss's Judges of England.

 1618. Sir Francis Bacon⁴ made lord chancellor, Jan. 4: created lord Verulam, and afterwards viscount St. Alban's.

² CAMDEN gives him this character: "Vir præpinguis, ingenio acerrimo, singularia prudentia, summa eloquentia, tenacia memoria, et sacris conciliis altærum columen." Of person very corpulent, most quick wit, singular prudence, admirable eloquence, retentive memory, and another pillar to the privy council. This corpulency of body grew upon him in his old age, and whenever queen Elizabeth alluded to it, she used to say, "Sir Nicholas's soul lodges well."

His lordship relates an early anecdote of Egerton, which he takes, he says, from the Rev. Francis Egerton's Memoirs of him: "He first gave earnest of his future eminence by interposing as amicus curiæ while yet a student, when a verdict was about to be pronounced which would have ruined a worthy old lady who kept a house of public entertainment in Smithfield. Three graziers had deposited a sum of money with her, to be returned to them on their joint application. One of them fraudulently pretending that he had authority to receive it, induced her to give him the whole of the money, and absconded with it. The other two brought their action against her, and (as the story goes) were about to recover, when young Egerton begged permission to befriend the court, by pointing out a fatal objection which had escaped her counsel as well as my lord judge. Said he: 'The money by the contract was to be returned to three, but only two sue; where is the third? Let him appear with the others; till then the money cannot be demanded of her.' This turned the fortune of the day; the plaintiffs were nonsuited, and our young student was from that day considered to be of great mark and likelihood." — Lord Campbell's Lord Chancellors.

⁴ This great man was accused of bribery and corruption by a committee of the commons; adjudged guilty (May 3, 1621); and sentenced to a fine and ransom of £40,000, to imprisonment in the Tower during the king's pleasure, and declared incapable of any office, place, or employment in the state: he was "never more to sit in parliament, or come within the verge of the court." James shed tears at his fate, and appears (after he had been a short time in confinement) to have remitted his sentence; as we find him summoned to the House of Peers 1st Charles I. "Bacon was the greatest genius of his age."—Boyle. "The father of experimental philosophy."—M. Voltaire. "His works are, for expression as well as thought, the glory of our nation."—Sheffield Duke of Buckingham.

¹ The Duke of Wharton said of this lord chancellor: "To figure this great and inestimable man aright, and to paint him in true colours, and with some warmth of imagination, but with the greatest submission to truth, I would seat him on his throne, with a ray of glory about his head, his ermine without spot or blemish, his balance in the right hand, mercy on his left, splendour and brightness at his feet, and his tongue, in silver tones, dispensing goodness, virtue, and justice to mankind."

² It appears that a patent was made out shortly before the king's flight, creating Jeffreys, earl of Flint—Granger. This is a mistake: The titles of earl of Flint and viscount Wickham were sarcastically applied to this notorious personage. Granger was deceived by a work, "Dissertation Lithologica, &c." dedicated to "Honoratissimo domine Georgio comiti Flintensi, viccomiti de Weickham, baroni de Weim, supremo Angliæ cancellario, et serenissimo Jacobo Segundo regi Angliæ a secretioribus consiliis;" a sarcastic dedication to him as the flinty Jeffreys.—Sir Harris Nicolas.

1793. Alexander, lord Loughborough, lord chancellor, Jan. 21: resigned.
1801. John, lord Eldon⁴, chief justice C.P., lord chancellor, April 14: resigned.

² It being customary on New-Year's day for those who practised in chancery to present the lord chancellor with a New Year's gift, which usually amounted to about £500l., the lord keeper, Cowper, refused to accept this contribution, it appearing too much like bribery. A rare example of an independent spirit and of proud integrity!—Ann. of Great Britain, 1706.

³ Lord Hardwicke continued, it is said, chief justice of the king's bench (which he had previously been) until June 7, 1737, though he had kissed hands for the great seal.—Burrow's Settlement Cases. Woolrych. "Lord Hardwicke valued himself more upon being a great minister of state, which he certainly was not, than upon being a great chancellor, which he certainly was."—Lord Chesterfield.

⁴ George III. gave Lord Eldon a seal on which was engraven Justice, with eyes unbandaged, directed in her path by Religion. On presenting him this seal, the king observed, that "Justice was generally painted blind, but he did not know why it should be so, when her path was so guided." Lord Eldon acknowledged his infirmity of doabting. "He preferred dull truth to brilliant error, slow accuracy to expeditious misdirection."—Sir Charles Wetherell. "No man who has sat in the court where he [Lord Eldon] presides, ever brought to the public service a more consummate knowledge of all its principles and practice; no one could be better qualified to decide in that forum with rapidity, yet how often does he there pause and reconsider, risking the appearance of being dilatory and undecided, rather than mistake the rights of the meanest individual whose interests are in his hands."—Lord Erskine in the House of Peers. "If lord Eldon have a fault, it is that of an over-anxiety to do justice."—Sir Samuel Romilly. His lordship himself once said, "It has been a principle on which many who have presided in this court, have acted, that a judge is obliged to know nothing more than the counsel think proper to disclose, relative to the case. But for myself, I have thought and acted otherwise, and I know, if I had given judgment on the statements only that have been made to me by counsel on both sides, I should have disposed of numerous estates to persons who had no more title to them than I have; and believe me, I feel a comfort in that thought,—a comfort, of which all the observations upon my conduct can never rob me."

1806. Hon. Thomas Erskine¹, created lord Erskine, chancellor. Feb. 7: resigned.
 1807. John, lord Eldon, again. April 1.

KING GEORGE IV.

1820. Lord Eldon, continued: afterwards earl of Eldon: resigned.

 — Sir Thomas Wilde (chief justice of the common pleas) made lord chancellor, and created lord Truro. July 15. The PRESENT Lord High Chancellor of England.

THE LORD HIGH TREASURER OF ENGLAND.

THE Lord High Treasurer is the THIRD great officer of the Crown; and is appointed by letters-patent. After he has taken the oaths before the lord chancellor, or lord keeper, he repairs to the court of exchequer, where, his letters-patent having been read, he takes his seat upon the bench. This is now only an honorary usage, he never sitting among the barons as formerly (with the chamberlains) judicially. He is a lord by his office, and governs (nominally) the upper court of exchequer, and has the custody of the king's treasure, and of the foreign and domestic records there deposited, and the appointment of all commissioners and other officers employed in collecting the revenues of the crown.—Beatson. The Lord High Treasurer holds his place during pleasure. The office is now executed by five or more persons, who are called Lords Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Treasurer.

The office of Chancellor of the Exchequer is always held by one of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury. He is styled Chancellor and Under Treasurer of the Exchequer; and has the custody of the exchequer seal: he has also the controlment of the rolls of the Lords of the Treasury, and sits (on occasions) in the court of exchequer above the barons.—Beatson.

¹ Lord Erskine owed both his title and official dignity to his faithful attachment to Mr. Fox. When the "Talents" administration was in course of formation, Mr. Fox submitted to the king a list of such persons as there more as a mark of esteem and regard, than from any expectation that his majesty would consent to his must be chancellor, remember he is your chancellor, not mine. Mr. Erskine was accordingly made chancellor, much to his own astonishment and that of all his friends. This surprise, we must suppose, arose simply from the knowledge of how much he was disliked by the king.

¹ The time of the first appointment of a secretary to the Treasury Board is uncertain; but it is presumed there must always have been a secretary or some officer acting in that capacity to the lord treasurer, or the board. It is probable that lord Burlleigh was the first treasurer who used a secretary to notify his directions to the officers of the Receipt side of the Exchequer. Sir George Dowling was secretary in May 1667. In the reign of James II., when the earl of Rochester was treasurer, he had two secretaries, Henry Gyn and Francis Gwyn, as is stated in a subsequent Treasury Minute Book (year 1711). In the Treasury Minute Book, 1695, No. 6, page 12, is the following memorandum:

"This evening the king was graciously pleased to bestow on me the place of Secretary to the Treasury."

From this it would appear that there was only one secretary in 1695, as Mr. Lowndes distinctly states the place of Secretary to have been bestowed upon him. It is quite certain there were two secretaries in 1714. — Thomas's Notes from the Rolls.

THE LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL.

THE Lord President of the Council is the FOURTH great officer of State, and presides at the Privy Council. He is appointed to his high office by a declaration in council, and holds it durante bene placito. He manages the debates in council, proposes matters from the queen at the council board, and reports to her majesty the resolutions taken thereupon. The Lord President is ex officio president of all committees of the Privy Council, with the exception of the board of trade, which has a president of its own.

The number of the Council was anciently about twelve, when it discharged the functions of state, now confined to the members of the cabinet; but it had become of unwieldy amount before 1679, in which year it was remodelled upon Sir William Temple's plan, and reduced to thirty members: the number is now unlimited. The members are selected by her majesty, and ought to be distinguished by high office, wisdom, and political experience. The Council includes all the responsible ministers of the crown, some of the judges, many eminent diplomatists, and peers and commoners whose services to the state and whose position in it, whether past or present, render them eligible to advise upon public affairs. A privy councillor, even though a commoner only, is styled "Right Honourable," and has precedence of all knights, baronets, and the younger sons of barons and viscounts. He is admitted a member upon taking the oath prescribed by law, and forthwith takes his seat at the board, according to his rank. The king, or, as now, the queen, in Council, has great powers: her majesty thus dissolves the parliament, or prorogues it, or calls a new one; she has power to publish proclamations, to issue orders in council, and to carry into effect the provisions of various acts of parliament. It is the business of the Council to inquire into all treasons against the state, and commit the delinquents for trial. By law (9th Anne, cap. 16.) it is felony to strike a privy councillor in the execution of his office.¹

LORD PRESIDENTS OF THE COUNCIL.

(Since the Council was remodelled in 1679.)

KING CHARLES II.
1679. Anthony, earl of Shaftesbury, April 21.	quess of Carmarthen and duke of Leeds. Feb. 14.
Struck off the council Oct. 15, same year.	1699. Thomas, earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. May 18.

1684. Laurence, earl of Rochester. Aug. 24.	QUEEN ANNE.
KING JAMES II.
1685. George, marquess of Halifax. Feb. 18.	1702. Thomas, earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. July 14.
1685. Robert, earl of Sunderland. Dec. 4.	1708. John, lord Somers. Nov. 25.
KING WILLIAM III.
1689. Thomas, earl of Danby; afterwards mar-	1710. Laurence, earl of Rochester. Sept. 21.
	1711. John, duke of Normanby and Buckinghamshire. June 14.

¹ This act originated in the following remarkable occurrence: The marquis Guiscard, formerly a general in the French service, being under examination (March 8, 1711) before a committee of the council at the Cockpit, on a charge of corresponding with France, stabbed Mr. Harley, one of the council, and then chancellor of the exchequer, with a penknife. The blow was of such violence, that the knife, lighting upon a rib, snapped in two. The committee drew their swords, and wounded Guiscard in several parts of his body; and he being forthwith sent to Newgate, died there on the 17th. Both houses of parliament addressed her majesty, expressing their deep concern for the attempt on Mr. Harley's life by a French Papist, and praying her majesty to cause all Papists to be removed from the cities of London and Westminster. On March 15, a proclamation to this effect was issued accordingly; and immediately afterwards an act passed, making a like offence capital, without benefit of clergy. — Memoirs of Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford.

The king first sat at a council held at Canterbury, May 27, 1660, when were sworn:

- Sir George Monk¹, general of all the Cromwell had distrusted Monk at times, and once wrote him a letter, adding this significant postscript: "There be that tell me that there is a certain cunning fellow in Scotland, called George Monk, who is said to lie in wait there, to introduce Charles Stuart. I pray you use your diligence to apprehend him, and send him up to me." Charles said of him, "that the duke of Albemarle demeaned (deported) himself in such a manner to the prince he had obliged, as never to seem to overlook the services of general Monk.—T. C. Banks.

forces in the three kingdoms, and master of the horse: made duke of Albemarle, July 7, 1660.
 Thomas, earl of Southampton: lord high treasurer, Sept. following.

 Oct. 15. Sir Henry Bennet, knt., secretary of state. Created lord Arlington, March, 1663; and earl of Arlington⁵, April, 1672.
 April 3. Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, lord bishop of London. Translated to Canterbury, Aug. 1663.

¹ Lord Shaftesbury violently opposed the Test bill brought into the House of Lords by the earl of Danby, on which account the parliament was prorogued, and did not sit again for fifteen months; and in the next session he contended that the parliament ought to be considered as dissolved. For this he was sent to the Tower, with some other lords, and continued in confinement upwards of a year. The king once said to him, "I believe, Shaftesbury, thou art the wickedest fellow in my dominions;" when he gravely observed, "May it please your majesty, of a subject, I verily believe I am." He was a man of great talents, elegant manners, and strong parts, but somewhat licentious: at this retort upon the king, his majesty laughed heartily. He was resworn of the council, April 21, 1679; but was again struck out, Oct. 15, same year, and a second time committed to the Tower.

⁵ One of the five ministers of Charles, denominated from their initials the "Cabal." "A proud man, whose parts were solid though not quick, and who had the art of governing the king's temper, and of managing it above all the men of the time." — Burnet. "He supplied the place of extensive talents by an artful display of such as he possessed; and the deficiency of his integrity was forgiven in the decency of his dishonesty. Too weak not to be superstitious, he yet had too much sense to acknowledge his leaning to the Church of Rome." — Macpherson.

- April 6. Dr. William Juxon, lord archbishop of Canterbury; died June, 1663.
- June 17. John, lord Berkeley, of Stratton. Lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1670.

- Oct. 10. Robert, earl of Ailesbury.
- 1679.
- Jan. 3. James, earl of Salisbury.
- Jan. 8. Henry, earl of Clarendon. Lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1685.

On the 21st day of April, 1679, His Majesty was pleased to dissolve the whole of the Privy Council, and in their room to choose Thirty Privy Councillors, principally selected out of the old List. This number was not, in future, to be exceeded, with the exception only of such personages as were to be privy councillors ex officio, as the Lord President, the Secretary of State for Scotland, the Princes of the Blood, &c.

These and such officers and persons were not to be reckoned in the Thirty. Conformably with this order the following were sworn at the Council Board on the above-mentioned day:—

- His Highness Prince RUPERT.
 April 21. Anthony, earl of Shaftesbury, as lord president. His name again struck out of the list Oct. 15 following.
 — Heneage, lord Finch, lord chancellor of England.
 — Arthur, earl of Anglesey, lord privy seal.
 — Christopher, duke of Albemarle, captain of the Life Guards.
 — JAMES, duke of MONMOUTH, master of the horse.
 [Beheaded on Tower-hill for rebellion against king James, in 1685.]
 — Charles, marquess of Winchester.
 — Henry, earl of Arlington, lord chamberlain of the household.
 — James, earl of Salisbury. Struck from the list, Jan. 18, 1681.
 — John, earl of Bridgewater.
 — Robert, earl of Sunderland, secretary of state. Struck out Jan. 24, 1681. Re-admitted Sept. 20, 1682; and became lord president, Dec. 4, 1685.
 — Arthur, earl of Essex, first lord of the treasury. Struck from the list, Jan. 24, 1681.¹
 — John, earl of Bath, groom of the stole.
 — George, viscount Halifax. Created earl of Halifax, July, 1679; and marquess of Halifax, Aug. 1682. Declared lord president in the next reign. Struck from the list. Oct. 21, 1685.
 — Dr. Henry Compton, lord bishop of London. Struck out, Dec. 23, 1685.
 — John, lord Robartes. Created viscount Bodmin and earl of Radnor, July following. Declared lord president, Oct. 24, 1679.²
 — William, lord Russell.
 [This nobleman was unjustly committed to the Tower on a charge of conspiracy against the king and government: he was tried and condemned, and was beheaded in Lincoln's-Inn fields, July 21, 1683.³]
 — William, lord Cavendish.²
 — Henry Coventry, one of the secretaries of state.
 — Sir Francis North, knt., lord chief justice of the common pleas. Made lord keeper, Dec. 1682.
 — Sir Henry Capel, K. B.², first commissioner of the admiralty.

- April 21. Sir John Ernle (Ernley), knt., chancellor of the exchequer.
 — Sir Thomas Chicheley, knt., master of the ordnance. Struck from the list, March 2, 1687.
 — Sir William Temple, bart. Struck from the list, Jan. 24, 1681.
 — Sir Edward Seymour, bart.
 — Henry Powle³: afterwards master of the rolls.

1679.

- April 22. Dr. William Sancroft, lord archbishop of Canterbury.⁴
 — John, duke of Lauderdale, secretary of state for Scotland.
 — Henry, marquess of Worcester. Created duke of Beaufort, Nov. 1682.
 — Thomas, viscount Fauconberg. Created earl of Fauconberg, April 1689.
 April 27. Henry, duke of Newcastle.
 June 24. Denzill, lord Holles.
 Nov. 19. Laurence Hyde, first commissioner of the treasury. Created earl of Rochester, Nov. 1682. Declared lord president, Aug. 24, 1684. Lord high treasurer in the next reign.

1680.

- Feb. 4. Daniel Finch, first commissioner of the admiralty. Succeeded as earl of Nottingham, and afterwards as earl of Winchilsea. Struck from the council, March 12, 1695, William's reign.
 — Sidney Godolphin, a commissioner of the treasury. Created lord Godolphin, Sept. 1684, and made first lord of the treasury.
 Feb. 11. Sir Leoline Jenkins, knt., judge of the high court of admiralty, made secretary of state.

 May 26. Henry, earl of Clarendon. Appointed lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1685.
 Oct. 15. Sir Robert Carr, knt. and bart., chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster.

1681.

- Jan. 26. Aubrey, earl of Oxford.
 — Philip, earl of Chesterfield, lord warden and chief justice in eyre on this side Trent.
 — Robert, earl of Ailesbury. Afterwards lord chamberlain to king James II.

¹ The earl of Essex was accused, with many others, of being concerned in the Fanatic plot, and was committed to the Tower, where (July 13, 1683) he was found with his throat cut; not without great suspicion of his having been murdered. The king and the duke of York were strongly suspected, as they were at the Tower that morning. — Charles Home.

² Sir Henry Capel, with lords Cavendish, Russell, and Mr. Powle, prayed his majesty (Jan. 31, 1680) to remove them from the council; to this request the king assented, and they were removed accordingly. — Brit. Chron. There is no note of the circumstance in the Council books. — Editor.

⁴ Dr. Sancroft was deprived (Feb. 1, 1691) as were Dr. Thomas Kenn, bishop of Bath and Wells, Dr. Francis Turner, bishop of Ely, Dr. Robert Frampton, bishop of Gloucester, Dr. William Lloyd, bishop of Norwich, and Dr. Thomas White, bishop of Peterborough, all on the same day, for not taking the oaths to king William and queen Mary.

- Feb. 2. Edward, earl of Conway, secretary of state.
 Mar. 9. William, earl of Craven.
1682.
 Mar. 3. George Legge, admiral. Created lord Dartmouth, Nov. 2, following.
 May 23. James, duke of Ormond, lord steward. Lord lieutenant of Ireland.
 June 29. Robert, earl of Lindsey, lord great chamberlain of England.
 Dec. 22. Sir Francis Pemberton, knt., lord chief justice of England. Struck from the list, Oct. 24, 1683.

1683.

- Feb. 28. Theophilus, earl of Huntingdon.
 — Henry, earl of Peterborough.
 Oct. 4. Sir George Jeffreys, knt., lord chief justice of the king's bench. Created lord Jeffreys, and made lord high chancellor, Oct. 1685.
1684.
 July 11. Alexander, earl of Moray, lord privy seal of Scotland.
 — Charles, earl of Middleton, made secretary of state.
1685.
 Jan. 7. John Drummond.

KING JAMES II.¹

1685.

- Feb. 9. GEORGE, prince of DENMARK: introduced to the council; not sworn. [Consort of the princess Anne. Created lord Wokingham (county of Berks.), earl of Kendal (Westmorland), and duke of Cumberland, April 9, 1689.]
 Mar. 27. William, duke of Queensberry, lord high commissioner for Scotland.
 — James, earl of Perth, lord chancellor of Scotland.
 May 15. Henry, duke of Newcastle.
 July 24. John, earl of Mulgrave, lord chamberlain, Oct. this year.
 July 31. George, earl Berkeley.
 Oct. 16. Sir Edward Herbert, knt., lord chief justice of the king's bench.
 Oct. 21. Richard, viscount Preston.
 Oct. 30. Thomas, earl of Plymouth.
1686.
 Jan. 8. Dr. Nathaniel, lord Crewe, bishop of Durham: re-sworn.
 July 17. William, earl of Powis. Created marquess of Powis the next year. [He was created marquess of Montgomery and duke of Powis by the king after his abdication, but these titles were never allowed in England. — Nicolas.]

- July 17. Henry, lord Arundel, of Wardour: sworn lord privy seal, March, 1687.
 — John, lord Belaysse.
 — Henry, lord Dover.
 Oct. 8. Richard, earl of Tyrconnell, lord lieutenant of Ireland.
 — Roger, earl of Castlemaine, ambassador to the pope.
 Oct. 14. William, duke of Hamilton.
 — Sir Nicholas Butler, knt.
 Nov. 11. Edward Petre.
 [Many of the lords and gentlemen sworn of the council in this reign were Roman Catholics.]

WILLIAM and MARY.

 Upon the accession of their majesties, the following lords and others were sworn of the Privy Council.

1689.

- Feb. 14. Henry, duke of Norfolk, earl marshal and hereditary marshal of England.
 — Charles, marquess of Winchester. Created duke of Bolton, April, this year.

 — William, earl of Bedford. Created marquess of Tavistock and duke of Bedford, May 12, 1694.
 — Charles, earl of Macclesfield.
 — Thomas, viscount Fauconberg.
 — Charles, viscount Mordaunt, first commissioner of the treasury, April following. Created earl of Monmouth, same time. Struck from the list, Jan. 21, 1696.
 — Francis, viscount Newport, treasurer of the household. Created earl of Bradford, May, 1694.
 — Richard, lord Lumley (viscount Lumley, in Ireland), gentleman of the bed-chamber. Created viscount Lumley, of England, April following; and earl of Scarborough, April 1690.
 — Dr. Henry Compton, lord bishop of London, dean of the chapel.
 — Ralph, lord Montagu, master of the great wardrobe. Created viscount Montthermer and earl of Montagu, April, this year. Duke of Montagu, April, 1705.
 — Henry, lord de la Mere, chancellor of the exchequer. Created earl of Warrington, April, 1690.

- Feb. 14. John, lord Churchill, general. Created earl of Marlborough, April, 1689. *Struck from the council, June 23, 1692.*¹ [Afterwards created marquess of Blandford and duke of Marlborough. The illustrious captain-general of queen Anne's wars.] See year 1698.
- William Bentinck, groom of the stole. Created lord Cirencester, viscount Woodstock, and earl of Portland, April, 1689.
- Henry Sydney, gentleman of the bed-chamber. Created lord and viscount Sydney, April, 1689. Lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1692. Earl of Romney, May, 1694.
- Sir Robert Howard, knt.
- Sir Henry Capel, commissioner of the treasury. Created lord Capel, April, 1692. Afterwards lord deputy in Ireland.
- Henry Powle, speaker of the house of commons.
- Edward Russell, admiral. First lord of the admiralty, May, 1694. Created lord Shingay, viscount Barfleur, and earl of Orford, May, 1697.
- Richard Hampden, a commissioner of the treasury.

² This nobleman lost the king's favour after the battle off Beachy Head, in which he commanded the combined English and Dutch fleets, defeated by the French. He was removed from his posts, confined in the Tower, and afterwards tried on board the Kent, ship of the line, for cowardice and treachery, and, though acquitted, his majesty took his commission from him the next day.

³ The correspondence between his sovereign, Queen Anne, and this distinguished statesman when (afterwards) first minister, is so very curious and interesting, we are induced to transcribe a portion of it here:—

“ I am sorry to find by your Letter you are so much in the Spleen, as to think you cannot for the future contribute anything towards my Quiet but your Wishes; however, I will still hope you will use your Endeavours. Never was there more Occasion than now; for by all one hears and sees every Day, as things are at present, one can expect nothing but Confusion. I am sure, for my part, I shall be ready to join with all my Friends in everything that is reasonable to allay the Heat and Ferment of this poor Nation. Since you went to Newmarket I have received several Assurances from the Duke of Shrewsbury of his readiness to serve me upon all Occasions, and his Willingness to come into my Service, which Offer I was very glad to accept, having a very good Opinion of him, and believing he may be of great Use, in these troublesome Times. For these Reasons I have resolved to part with the Duke of Kent, who I hope will be easy in these matters by being made a Duke; and I hope this Change may meet with your Approbation, which I wish I may ever have in all my Actions. I have not yet declared my Intentions of giving the Staff and the Key to the Duke of Shrewsbury, because I would be the first that should Acquaint you with it.

“ To the Earl of Godolphin.”

ANNE.”

The following is the Earl's answer to the Queen :

“ May it please your Majesty,

“ Newmarket, April 15, 1710.

“ I have the honour of your Majesty's Letter of the Thirteenth, by which I have the Grief to find you are pleased to call that spleen in my former Letter, which was only a true Impulse and Conviction of Mind that Your Majesty is suffering your self to be guided to your own Ruin and Destruction as fast as it is possible for those to compass it, to whom you seem so much to hearken.

“ I am not therefore so much surprised as concerned at the Resolution which Your Majesty says you have taken, of bringing in the Duke of Shrewsbury; for when people begin to be sensible, it would be difficult to persuade Your Majesty to dissolve a Parliament, which for Two Winters had given you above 6 Millions a Year for the Support of the War upon which your Crown depends, and even while that War is still subsisting they have had the Cunning to contrive this Proposal to Your Majesty, which in its consequence will certainly put you under a Necessity of breaking the Parliament, though contrary, I yet believe, to your own inclination.

“ I beg Your Majesty to be persuaded I do not say this out of the least Prejudice to the Duke of Shrewsbury..

- May 21. Sir Nathan Wright, lord keeper.

There is no man of whose Capacity I have a better Impression, nor with whom I have lived more easily for above Twenty Years,

“Your Majesty may please to remember that at your first coming to the Crown I was desirous he should have had one of the chief Posts in your Service; and it would have been happy for Your Majesty and the Kingdom if he had accepted that Offer; but he thought fit to decline it, and the Reasons generally given, at that time, for his so doing, do not much recommend him to Your Majesty's Service; but I must endeavour to let Your Majesty see Things as they really are. And to bring him into your Service and into your Business at this time, just after his being in a public Conjunction in every Vote with the whole body of the Tories, and in private constant Communication and Caballing with Mr. Harley in every thing, what Consequence can this have but to make every Man that is now in your Cabinet uneasy, and to run from it as they would do from the Plague? I leave it to Your Majesty to judge what effect this entire change in your Ministers will have among your Allies abroad, and how this war will be like to be carried on in their Opinion by those who have all along opposed and obstructed it, and who will like any Peace the better, the more it leaves France at liberty to take their Time of imposing the Pretender upon this Country.

“These Considerations must certainly make Holland run immediately into a separate Peace with France, and make Your Majesty lose all the Honour and Reputation your Arms had acquired by the War, and make the Kingdom lose the Fruit of that vast Expense which they have been at in this War. And can any Body imagine that after so great a Disappointment to the Kingdom there will not be an Enquiry into the Causes of it, and who have been the Occasion of so great a Change in Your Majesty's Measures and Councils, which have been so long successful and gotten you so great a Name in the World? If I did not think all these Considerations inevitable I would never give Your Majesty the Trouble and Uneasiness of laying this before you. * * * GOD OULPHIN.”

1 After achieving his many glorious victories, he returned to England, and soon after through party intrigues, again lost favour at court, and was dismissed a second time from all his employments. Stung at this ingratitude, he went into the Low Countries, accompanied by his duchess, and remained abroad till 1714, when he landed at Dover, amidst the acclamations of the people. Queen Anne was just dead, and her successor restored the duke to his military appointments and his place in the councils of his country.

 — Henry Pelham, secretary-at-war. Paymaster-general in 1730. First minister of the crown, Aug. 1743.
 [Mr. Pelham was the head of the celebrated "Broad-Bottom administration."]

¹ This was done in consequence of his invectives against the minister (Sir Robert Walpole) by George II. The king called for the council book, and struck out the name with his own hand. So harsh a proceeding inflamed Pulteney's resentment and increased his popularity, and occasioned him to say, in his memorable speech, that "the minister might be likened to an empyric, and the constitution of England to his patient." His eloquence and sarcasm at length drove Walpole from the helm, and he was again sworn of the council, Feb. 20, 1742, and was created earl of Bath, July 14, same year. He was afterwards (Feb. 1746) head of the famous "Short-lived ministry," which expired within two days. — See Administrations.

² A ground for the erasure of Mr. Aislabie's name from the books of the council may be inferred from the following resolution of the commons: — The commons, taking into their consideration that part of the report of the secret committee (on the South Sea Company) that relates to John Aislabie, esq., a member of the house, and Mr. Aislabie's defence, is of opinion, that it has been plainly proved, that he caused a book of accounts between him and Mr. Hawes (a director) to be burnt, and had given him a discharge for the balance, amounting to £842,000. And it is resolved, nemine contradicente, that the said John Aislabie had encouraged and promoted the dangerous and destructive execution of the South Sea scheme with a view to his own exorbitant profit, and had combined with the late directors of the South Sea Company in their pernicious practices, to the detriment of great numbers of his majesty's subjects, and the ruin of the public credit, and the trade of this kingdom. It is further resolved, that he be expelled the house, and committed to the Tower; and that a bill be brought in for restraining him from going out of the kingdom, and from alienating his estate. ¹ With the short interval of Mr. Addington's administration, Mr. Pitt was at the head of his majesty's councils for twenty-two years: he died universally lamented, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, at the public charge. Having directed the councils of his country so long, and at a period of great financial embarrassment, difficulty, and danger, the friends of his principles and policy (particularly of the Pitt Club) usually honoured his memory as "the Pilot that weathered the storm."

¹ Mr. Fox, who had been sworn of the council, March 30, 1782, but had been struck from the list, May 9, 1798, was now re-sworn. He had continually opposed himself to the minister and the government, and inveighed against the war with France; and while revolutionary principles had been making rapid progress, he attended popular meetings, and uttered such language as the following: "France," said Mr. Fox, "has set an example to all the nations of the earth, and above all to Great Britain." Again, at a meeting of the Whig Club, held at the Freemason's Tavern, he proposed a toast, "than which," he declared, "nothing could be better — the sovereignty of the people of England." Even after the erasure of his name from the council, he continued to express similar sentiments; and later, in 1802, at the anniversary of his election, celebrated at the Shakspeare, he said, "The peace (that of Amiens) is glorious to France and to the French Consul, and I rejoice at it;" and he there drank "To the man whose glorious victories have given peace to the world." But Mr. Fox, at the same time, affirmed, almost as frequently as he spoke, that he "would be among the first to repel a foreign enemy, under whatever government England might be;" and however parties differed as to the soundness of his political views, and the propriety of his heated language on particular occasions, none doubted that he "loved his country with a patriot's love," and was "a sincere friend to the best interests of mankind." It will be observed, too, that the same sovereign who had struck out his name, now sanctioned his appointment as foreign minister.

² The criminal, it was supposed at the time, had been lying in wait for lord Leveson Gower, late ambassador to the court of St. Petersburg, and that Mr. Perceval fell a victim to the misdirected vengeance of a man who conceived himself injured by the conduct of that nobleman, for whom he had mistaken him. The assassin was tried, found guilty, and hanged, all within one week afterwards.

THE LORD PRIVY SEAL.

THE Lord Privy Seal is a place of great trust, honour, and antiquity. The nobleman holding it is usually above the degree of a baron, and ranks as the FIFTH great officer of state. He is denominated from his having the custody of the Privy Seal, which he must not put to any grant without good warrant under the king's, or, as now, the queen's signet; and it is his especial duty to apprise the sovereign of any matter contained in the instruments he has to seal, that may be inconvenient, or not in perfect accordance with the law. This seal is affixed to all charters, warrants, grants, and pardons: the issuing of money out of the exchequer, cancelling a recognisance to the king, discharging a debt, and other matters that never pass the great seal, may be done under the authority of the Privy Seal; but no writs can pass this seal which touch the common law. The Lord Privy Seal is a privy councillor by his office; and ranks next after the Lord President of the Council, and before all dukes.

LORD GREAT CHAMBERLAIN OF ENGLAND.

THIS is the SIXTH great officer of state. The office is hereditary, is of great antiquity, and was anciently of much importance. It was granted by Henry I. to the family of De Vere, earls of Oxford, by whom it was enjoyed for nearly six centuries. On the death of the 18th earl of Oxford, of this family, without issue, in 1625, both the office and the earldom were claimed, together with other titles, by Robert Bertie, baron Willoughby d'Eresby, in right of his mother, who was sister and heiress of Edward, 17th earl of Oxford. The earldom was awarded by the house of lords to the heir male collateral, in whose son it became extinct; while the office of Hereditary Great Chamberlain was adjudged to be descendible through heirs female, and was consequently confirmed to lord Willoughby d'Eresby, who took his seat in the house of lords in that capacity in 1626. This nobleman was created duke of Ancaster and Kesteven in July 1715, and the office descended uninterruptedly in his family until the death of the 4th duke in 1779, when the barony of Willoughby d'Eresby fell into abeyance, and the chamberlainship was claimed by five distinct branches of the family. The house of peers decided that it became vested in the two sisters of the deceased 4th duke jointly; and that they were competent to appoint a deputy. In favour of the elder of these sisters the abeyance of the barony of Willoughby was terminated, and she became a baroness in her own right: the second sister married into the family of Cholmondeley. The deputy appointed by these joint heiresses was Peter Burrell, afterwards lord Gwydyr. His son (who succeeded, in 1828, as 19th baron Willoughby d'Eresby, also) now performs the duties of the office in right of his mother, having held it jointly with his aunt, the dowager marchioness of Cholmondeley, until her death in 1838. The marquess of Cholmondeley and lord Willoughby d'Eresby are now the joint officers, in right of their mothers respectively. Many perquisites belong to this office, but they are usually compounded for when claimed at particular ceremonies, as coronations, &c.

LORD GREAT CHAMBERLAINS OF ENGLAND.

KING CHARLES I.

1626. Robert Bertie, lord Willoughby d'Eresby, by descent from the De Veres, earls of Oxford, created earl of Lindsey: killed at the battle of Edgehill, Oct. 23, 1642.
1642. Montagu Bertie, earl of Lindsey.

KING CHARLES II.

1666. Robert Bertie, earl of Lindsey.

KING WILLIAM III.

1701. Robert Bertie, earl of Lindsey, created marquess of Lindsey in 1706, and duke of Ancaster and Kesteven in 1715.

KING GEORGE I.

1723. Peregrine Bertie, duke of Ancaster and Kesteven.

KING GEORGE II.

1742. Peregrine Bertie, duke of Ancaster and Kesteven.

KING GEORGE III.

1778. Robert Bertie, duke of Ancaster and Kesteven: died July 8, 1779.
1779. [The office vacant, and the claim to it, in dispute, for upwards of a year.]
1780. Priscilla-Barbara-Elizabeth Burrell, lady Willoughby d'Eresby, and Georgiana, countess, afterwards marchioness of Cholmondeley, jointly: they appointed sir Peter Burrell, afterwards lord Gwydyr, their deputy; the barouess died Dec. 29, 1828.

KING GEORGE IV.

1828. Peter-Robert, lord Willoughby d'Eresby, and Georgiana, dowager marchioness of Cholmondeley, jointly: the marchioness died June 23, 1838.

QUEEN VICTORIA.

1838. Peter-Robert, lord Willoughby d'Eresby, and George-Horatio, marquess of Cholmondeley, jointly: PRESENT Lord Great Chamberlain of England.

THE LORD HIGH CONSTABLE OF ENGLAND

Is the SEVENTH great officer of the crown; and he, and the earl marshal of England, were anciently judges of the court of chivalry, called in Henry IV.'s time Curia Militaris, and afterwards the Court of Honour. The court was holden in the king's hall, and was esteemed the fountain of the martial law. Formerly the power of the Lord High Constable was so great, and such improper uses were made of it, that so early as the 13th of Richard II. (1389) a statute was passed for regulating and abridging his authority, as also that of the earl marshal; and by this statute no plea could be tried by them or in their courts, that could be tried by the common law of the realm. The office of Constable existed before the conquest, and seems to have been instituted by our Saxon ancestors, the word being derived from their language. It was granted in the reign of Stephen to Milo de Gloucester, earl of Hereford; and went with inheritance, and by the tenure of certain manors in Gloucestershire¹, by grand serjeantry, into the family of the Bohuns, earls of Hereford and Essex, and afterwards into the family of Stafford, as heirs-general to them. In 1521 this great office became forfeited to the king in the person of Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, who was in that year attainted of high treason; and it then ceased to be hereditary. The Lord High Constable is now an appointment pro hac vice, to officiate at coronations, or at trials by combat.²

¹ The castle of Caldecot or Caldecote, near Chepstow, in Monmouthshire, was the residence of the Lord High Constables of England, and was held by them in virtue of their office.

² The only instance that occurs of a trial by combat being ordered since the office of Lord High Constable was in the hands of the Crown, is that between Lord Reay and David Ramsay, Esq., November 28, 1631; but the king afterwards prevented the trial. On this occasion Robert Bertie, Earl of Lindsey, was appointed Lord High Constable.

³ It will be seen that the duke of Wellington officiated as lord high constable of England at the coronations of three sovereigns consecutively, George IV., William IV., and Victoria, a remarkable circumstance in the life of the duke, no similar instance having occurred from the Conquest up to our own times.

THE EARL MARSHAL OF ENGLAND.

THE earl marshal is the EIGHTH great officer of state. The office, until it was made hereditary, always passed by grant from the king, and never was held by tenure or serjeantry (by any subject) as the offices of lord high steward and lord high constable sometimes were. The Marshal was anciently styled Lord Marshal only; but Richard II., June 20, 1397, granted letters-patent to Thomas Mowbray, earl of Nottingham, and to his heirs, the style of Earl Marshal. James I. by letters-patent, dated August 29, 1622, constituted Thomas Howard, earl of Arundel and Surrey, Earl Marshal for life; and his majesty the next year granted other letters-patent, wherein it was declared that during the vacancy of the office of lord high constable, the Earl Marshal should have the like jurisdiction in the court of chivalry as both constable and marshal had jointly exercised. Charles II., Oct. 19, 1672, granted to Henry, lord Howard, and to his heirs, this office and dignity, with power to execute the same by deputy or deputies, in as full and ample a manner as the same had heretofore been executed by any former Marshal of England. The office, now held by the duke of Norfolk, confers the dignity of earl on its possessor. His grace is also earl of Arundel by his tenure of Arundel castle, without any creation, patent, or investiture. These are the only instances that exist of the title being so constituted.

THE LORD HIGH ADMIRAL OF ENGLAND.¹

THE Lord High Admiral is the NINTH great officer of state. His office was anciently deemed of so much importance, that it was either retained by the king, or conferred upon one of the king's younger sons, or a near kinsman; and even in modern times, it has been held by royal personages. The duke of York (afterwards James II.) was Lord High Admiral in the reign of his brother, Charles II.; and when he came to the throne, in 1685, he declared himself Lord High Admiral, again, in council. Prince George, of Denmark, consort of queen Anne, also filled the office; and later, William Henry, duke of Clarence (afterwards William IV.) was appointed to the post in Mr. Canning's administration, 1827: in the two latter cases the princes were assisted by a council.

The Lord High Admiral (as described by the earlier writers) "has the management of all maritime affairs, the government of the royal navy, and the power of decision in all maritime cases, whether civil or criminal. He judges of all transgressions committed upon or beyond the sea, in any part of the world, upon the coasts, in all ports and havens, and upon all rivers below the first bridge from the sea; and by him all naval officers, from an admiral downwards, are commissioned, and all deputies and coroners appointed for particular coasts.¹

The judicial functions of this great officer have, however, long been separated from his more onerous duties; and a learned civilian is always appointed to preside in the High Court of Admiralty. The office of Lord High Admiral has for a series of years been usually in commission. As the great seal has been occasionally placed in the hands of commissioners, and as the office of lord high treasurer has for centuries been executed by several individuals instead of one person only, so the office of Lord High Admiral is now performed by a Board, whose members are designated "the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty," or, popularly, "the Board of Admiralty," and of which the chief or head is styled the "First Lord."

The First Lord of the Admiralty is always a personage of great talents and political experience, and necessarily a cabinet minister; and the majority of the junior Lords (of whom there are usually four or more) are members of the house of commons, and at least two of them are naval officers. Besides these are a First and an Assistant or Second Secretary.²

¹ Mr. Beaton says: "To the Lord High Admiral belong, by law and custom, all fines and forfeitures of all transgressions at sea, on the sea-shore, in ports, and from the first bridge on rivers towards the sea; also the goods of pirates, and felons condemned or outlawed; and all ways, stray-goods, wrecks of sea deadants; a share of all lawful prizes, layon, jetson, and flotton; that is, goods lying in the sea, goods cast by the sea on the shore, not granted formerly, or belonging to lords of manors adjoining the sea; all great fishes, as sea-hogs, and other fishes of extraordinary bigness, called royal fishes, whales only and sturgeons excepted. But since the Revolution, and particularly of late years, the maritime laws of England have undergone many alterations, and the office of Lord High Admiral has, correspondingly, been subjected to change."

² When the First Lord happens to be a member of the Upper House, the First Secretary, chosen from among the supporters of the ministry in the commons, has usually represented the Admiralty department in that branch of the legislature.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER.

THE lord chancellor in ancient times performed part of his duties in the Exchequer; he acted with the chief justiciar in matters of revenue. Madox supposes the chancery to have been separated from the exchequer about the close of Richard I.'s reign, or the beginning of the reign of John; and the appointment of Chancellor of the Exchequer appears to have taken place soon afterwards. John Mansell was appointed to reside at the Receipt of the Exchequer, 18 Hen. III. (1234), and this seems to have been the first appointment of a Chancellor of the Exchequer. — Mr. Thomas's Notes of the Rolls' Office.

This officer is often mentioned in the reign of Henry III. Ralf de Leycestre surrendered the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer 32 Henry III., and the king committed the exchequer seal to Edward de Westminster. The same king by his writ commanded Albric de Fiscamp to execute the office; and he gave leave to Geoffrey Giffard, Chancellor of the Exchequer, to substitute a fit person to act for him, as often as his affairs should render his absence necessary. Henry III. also, by his writ, had the custody of the exchequer seal delivered to Roger de la Leye, to be kept by him durante bene placito. — Idem.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer is one of the lords of the treasury, except on particular emergencies, when the office is held by the lord chief justice of the king's bench.² It is difficult to describe the present various functions of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. In fact he exercises all the powers vested in the treasury board, and has therefore the entire control and management of all matters relating to the receipt and expenditure of the public money. — Idem.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer was, also, entitled to sit, as well as the Lord Treasurer, with the Barons of the Exchequer, when they sat, in what was called the Exchequer Chamber, as a court of equity. "As late as Michaelmas term, 1735," Mr. Thomas states, "Sir Robert Walpole sat as Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the case of Naish v. the East India Company, in which the barons were equally divided in opinion, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer decided, after a hearing of three days, and the decision is reported to have given general satisfaction." The equity jurisdiction of the court of exchequer is now abolished, having been transferred to the court of chancery in 1841.¹

THE PRINCIPAL SECRETARIES OF STATE.

THE Principal Secretaries of State have been, by their office, members of the privy council ever since the reign of queen Elizabeth; before that time they only prepared business for the council board in a room adjoining to the council chamber, nothing being debated in their presence. The earliest mention of a King's Secretary (Secretarius Noster) occurs in the 37th of Henry III. 1253. — Rymer's Fœdera. There was only one Principal Secretary of State until near the close of Henry VIII.'s reign, when that sovereign increased the number to two, both of equal rank and authority. Upon the union with Scotland, queen Anne augmented the number to three, viz. : a Principal Secretary of State for Scotch Affairs; which appointment was afterwards laid aside. In the reign of George III. 1768, the number was again increased to three, one for the American or Colonial department; but in 1782, this office also was abolished by act of parliament. The two other Secretaries at this time were the Secretary for the Northern Department, or province, which included the Low Countries, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Poland, Russia, &c.; and the Secretary for the Southern Department, or province, which included France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and Turkey. The affairs of Ireland and the colonies devolved upon the elder of these two secretaries.

In the last-mentioned year (1782), the terms "Northern" and "Southern" were discontinued, and the duties divided into "Home" and "Foreign." On July 11, 1794, a Secretary for War was appointed, and to him the business of the Colonies was transferred in 1801: the two departments have since remained consolidated. At present there are a Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, a Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and a Principal Secretary of State for War and Colonies: these personages are necessarily privy councillors, and always members of the cabinet. Usually two of the Secretaries are in the lower, and one in the upper, house of parliament. This order, however, is sometimes reversed; but there is no instance of the three Secretaries being at one and the same time members of the same branch of the legislature; while there were only two Secretaries, however, the instances were frequent.

SECRETARIES OF STATE.

* * * The earlier dates represent the time when they were found to be secretaries, not their appointments; unless expressly so mentioned.

KING HENRY III.

1253. John Maunsell, described as "secretarius noster."

KING EDWARD I.

1278. Francis Accursii.
1299. John de Benstede.

KING EDWARD II.

1308. William de Melton. * * * *

KING RICHARD II.

1379. Robert Braybrooke.

KING HENRY IV.

1439. Thomas Beckington; who held the office until 1443, when he was appointed privy seal.
1460. Thomas Manning.

KING EDWARD IV.

1464. William Hatcliffe, called "one of the king's secretaries." — Fœdera. Called secretary and councillor, in 1467: held the office until 1480, when a coadjutor (Dr. King) was given him on account of his age: Dr. King was to succeed him. Hatcliffe died same year.
1480. Doctor Oliver King.

KING RICHARD III.

1483. John Kendal; Dr. King having been removed. Mr. Kendal was secretary on Aug. 1, 1485.

¹ Mr. Thomas, from whose unpublished Notes we take many of the earlier names, with their respective dates, in the succeeding list of Secretaries of State, says, in reference to the office of Secretary of State, that, "whatever be the number of Secretaries, they constitute but one officer, and are co-ordinate and equal in rank and authority. Each is competent to execute any part of the duties of the Secretary of State, the division of duties being mere matter of arrangement."

KING HENRY VII.

1485. Dr. Richard Fox: made bishop of Exeter in 1487; probably succeeded by 1487. Dr. Oliver King, who was certainly secretary in 1489 and in 1492, when he was made bishop of Exeter; probably succeeded by 1500. Dr. Thomas Ruthal, or Routhall, who was certainly secretary in 1500 and to 1509, when he became bishop of Durham.

KING HENRY VIII.

1509. Dr. Routhall, continued. Secretary until May 1516, when he became privy seal.
 1516. Dr. Richard Pace.
 1526. Dr. William Knight.
 1528. Dr. Stephen Gardiner; elected in 1531 bishop of Winchester.
 1533. Thomas Cromwell, afterwards lord Cromwell and earl of Essex: privy seal, July 2, 1536.
 1536. Thomas Wriothesley.

FIRST APPOINTMENT OF TWO SECRETARIES.

1539. Thomas Wriothesley, and — Sir Ralph Sadler, knt.

QUEEN MARY.

1553. Sir William Petre, and sir John Bourne, knts.
 1557. John Boxall, the first secretary appointed by letters-patent.

QUEEN ELIZABETH.

1558. Sir William Cecil, knt., afterwards lord Burleigh; lord-treasurer in 1572.
 1572. Sir Thomas Smith, knt.
 1574. Sir Francis Walsingham.
 1578. Thomas Wilson, appointed by patent, Jan. 5, in addition to sir Francis Walsingham.
 1586. William Davison, appointed "one of the chief secretaries" by patent.

1596. Sir Robert Cecil, knt., also appointed "one of the chief secretaries" by patent. July 13.

[He continued secretary during the remainder of this reign.]

KING JAMES I.

1603. Sir Robert Cecil, continued: afterwards earl of Salishury.
 1609. Sir Alexander Hay.
 1612. Thomas Hamilton.
 1616. Sir Ralph Winwood, knt.
 — Sir Thomas Lake.
 1618. Sir John Herbert, vice Winwood.
 — Sir Robert Naunton, vice Herbert.
 1619. Sir George Calvert, afterwards lord Baltimore, vice Lake.
 1622. Sir Edward Conway (afterwards lord Conway) vice Naunton.

KING CHARLES I.

1625. Sir Albertus Morton. April 9.
 — Sir Edward, lord Conway, continued. April 23.
 — Sir John Coke, vice Morton. Nov. 9.
 1630. Sir Dudley Carleton, lord Carleton, afterwards viscount Dorchester, vice Conway.
 1632. Francis, lord Cottington, vice Dorchester.

 1642. Lucius, viscount Falkland, vice Vane.
 — George, lord Digby, vice Falkland.

[On the commencement of the civil war all went into confusion. The name of Secretary of State was abolished during the interregnum.]

THE RESTORATION.

KING CHARLES II.

1660. Sir Edward Nicholas. June 1.
 — Sir William Morrice. June 30.
 1662. Sir Henry Bennet, afterwards earl of Arlington¹, vice Nicholas.
 1668. Sir John Trevor, knt. vice Morrice. Sept. 29.
 1672. Henry Coventry, vice Trevor. July 18.
 1674. Sir Joseph Williamson, knt. vice lord Arlington. Sept. 11.
 1678. Robert, earl of Sunderland, vice Williamson. Feb. 20.
 1680. Sir Leoline Jenkins, knt. vice Coventry. Feb. 11.
 1681. Edward, earl of Conway, vice lord Sunderland. March 9.
 1683. Robert, earl of Sunderland, again, vice lord Conway. March 6.
 1684. Sidney Godolphin, afterwards earl of Godolphin, vice Jenkins. May 1.
 — Charles, earl of Middleton, vice Godolphin. Sept. 25.

¹ One of the five Cabal ministers. The ministers so denominated were, Lord Clifford, the earl of Arlington, the duke of Buckingham, lord Ashley and the duke of Lauderdale; the initial letters of whose names make up the word. See Administrations. But this appears to have been merely an accidental coincidence. The term Cabal was derived (through the medium of the French Cabale) from the Cabala, or secret doctrine of the Jews, and was used in England to designate the small body of persons having in their hands the supreme direction of the affairs of state even before the Restoration. It probably carried with it at first something of an offensive sense; but that meaning would seem to have been wearied away when it was revived and fixed by the unpopularity of the ministry of 1670. The word, we believe, has never since been applied except to convey an imputation of objectionable as well as secret combination; and it has in later times been more commonly used to designate any self-constituted knot of factious intriguers than a ministry or cabinet. Another error into which some of our writers have fallen, relates to the term cabinet council. They state that the cabinet council was so called, from having been usually held, in the reign of Charles I., in the cabinet or closet of queen Henrietta. Be this as it may, it is manifest, however, that the name was familiar enough in England long before that time.

KING JAMES II.

1685. Robert, earl of Sunderland, again. March 13.
1688. Richard, viscount Preston, vice lord Middleton.

KING WILLIAM III.

1689. Charles, earl of Shrewsbury. Feb. 19.
— Daniel, earl of Nottingham.
1690. Henry, viscount Sydney, afterwards earl Romney, vice lord Shrewsbury. Dec. 26.
1692. Sir John Trenchard, knt. vice lord Sydney.
1694. Charles, earl of Shrewsbury, vice lord Not-

¹ The duchess of Marlborough, in a letter to queen Anne, thus speaks contemptuously of Sir Charles Hedges: "He has no capacity, no quality, no interest; nor could he ever have been in that post (that of secretary of state), but, as every body knows, my lord Rochester cares for nothing so much as a man that he thinks will depend upon him." — Cootes's English Civilians.

² "Mr. Murray arrived express from Hanover, and brought orders from the regency for removing lord Bolingbroke from his office of secretary of state; the seals were in consequence taken from him, and the doors of his office locked and sealed up. — Annals of Great Britain. The Whigs having gained the ascendancy on the accession of George I., preparations were made for the impeachment of Bolingbroke, who fled to France, and being invited to Lorraine by Charles Stuart, the Pretender, he became his secretary of state. For this he was impeached and attainted, and was not allowed to return to England until 1723. His estates were restored to him in 1725, when the attainder was removed, but in blood only. — Chron. of Great Britain."

Henry, marquess of Lansdowne.
- Jan. 26, 1828.
Rt. hon. Robert Peel, again.

¹ From his many accomplishments, great talents, his knowledge of official business, and the bias of his political opinions, lord George Sackville Germaine has been regarded by many as the author of the Letters of Junius. These Letters, however, have been ascribed to sir Philip Francis, the duke of Portland, and others, with equal probability. Junius was, as he himself said, "the depository of his own secret; and we may now well believe, after all the controversies that have taken place on the subject, that it has, indeed, "perished with him."

THE BOARD OF TRADE.

CROMWELL seems to have given the first notion of a Board of Trade.¹ Charles II., on his restoration, established a Council of Trade, "for keeping a control and superintendence upon the whole commerce of the nation," Nov. 7, 1660; and by patent, dated Dec. 1, same year, he also created a Council of Foreign Plantations. In 1672, these Boards were united, and various revisions followed from time to time. In 1782, by statute 22d George III. cap. 82, the Board was abolished, and the business was managed by a Committee of the Privy Council, whose duty was "to examine the custom-house accounts of all goods and merchandise exported and imported to and from the several ports in the kingdom, as well as from foreign ports, in order to inform the government of the advantages and disadvantages of the trade of this nation with other kingdoms and states, in regard to the balance of trade. And also to encourage our plantations abroad, by endeavouring to promote their trade; and by discovering and encouraging such branches as were most conducive to their respective interests, as well as to those of the kingdom at large." But it was not until 1786, by an Order in Council, dated Aug. 23, that the Board of Trade, as at present constituted, was formed. The President is now always a cabinet minister.

¹ Soame Jenyns was a man of delicate and refined wit, an elegant writer, and a shrewd observer of manners and men. His attachment to the government was rewarded by his post at the Board of Trade, which he held for five-and-twenty years, maintaining a high character for political integrity. Mr. Jenyns was the author of "Poems," in 2 vols.; "A Free Inquiry into the Origin of Evil;" and "A View of the Internal Evidence of the Christian Religion." But these form only a portion of his works. In early life he was of a religious turn of mind, but he subsequently wandered into deism. It is gratifying to add, however, that a closer inquiry brought him out of the dangerous path of scepticism, and that he remained ever afterwards a firm and pious Christian. He died at the age of 84. The work last mentioned was, it is supposed, written as some atonement (and it is valuable upon that account) for his previous infidelity.

The historian. A greater number of the literary luminaries of their time belonged to this Board than, perhaps, to any other division of the state. We have already noticed Locke, Prior, Addison, and Soame Jenyns; and to this brilliant galaxy is now to be added the illustrious author of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire; a work that (despite its one great fault, a grievous fault no doubt) will eternize his name. Gibbon obtained a commission at this board for the Manifesto (the ablest state paper of the day), which he was employed to draw up on the occasion of the war with France, in 1778. He lost his place on the suppression of the Board in 1782.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE PRESENT BOARD OF TRADE.

LORDS of the COMMITTEE of PRIVY COUNCIL appointed by His Majesty (GEORGE III.) for the consideration of all matters relating to TRADE and FOREIGN PLANTATIONS.

August 23, 1786.

“His Majesty having thought fit to revoke his Order in Council, bearing date the 5th day of March, 1784, appointing a Committee of Privy Council for the consideration of all matters relating to Trade and Foreign Plantations, and to declare the said Committee dissolved, was pleased to appoint a New Committee of Privy Council for the business above-mentioned, to consist of the following members:—

The Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.
The First Commissioner of the Treasury.
The First Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty.
His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

The Chancellor and Under-Treasurer of the Exchequer.
The Speaker of the House of Commons.

“And also such of the persons of His Majesty's most honourable Privy Council as shall hold any of the following offices:—

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.
The Paymaster or Paymaster-general of His Majesty's forces.

The Treasurer of the Navy, and
The Master of His Majesty's Mint.

“And His Majesty was at the same time pleased to order, that the Speaker of the House of Commons of Ireland, and such persons as shall hold offices in His Majesty's kingdom of Ireland, and shall be members of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council in this kingdom, shall be members of this Committee; and also that—

Lord Frederick Campbell.
Robert, Lord Bishop of London,
Fletcher, Lord Grantley,
Sir Lloyd Kenyon, bart.,
The Hon. Sir Joseph Yorke,

Sir John Goodricke, bart.,
The Hon. William Eden,
Rt. Hon. James Grenville, and
Rt. Hon. Thomas Orde,

“be members of this Committee. And that the Rt. hon. Charles Lord Hawkesbury, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, and, in his absence, the Rt. hon. William Wyndham Grenville, joint paymaster-general of the forces (vice-president of the Board, &c.), be President of the Committee."

1840. John Mac Gregor; appointed to succeed Mr. Hume. Jan. 24.

The Board of Trade consisted of six or more members from the time of its re-institution in 1786 (as it had previously done), besides the ex officio commissioners. But the business of late years has been wholly conducted by the president, the vice-president, and the secretaries; no other members having been appointed since the year 1823, with the exception of Dr. Nicholl in 1846, and of sir James Stephen and sir Edward Ryan in 1848, who were appointed for special purposes and in reference to certain duties.

Mr. THOMAS, Secretary of the Record Office, thus describes the business of this Board:—

“The business of this department is of a very miscellaneous character. All matters relating to the interests of trade, which come before the several departments of the government, are usually referred to the Board of Trade, either for the information of its members or for the purpose of obtaining their advice. Thus, for example, there are frequent communications with the Foreign Office on the subjects of the negotiation of commercial treaties, of difficulty arising out of them, and of the proceedings necessary to give effect to them. With the Treasury, on the alterations made or contemplated in the laws of the customs, on cases of hardship to individuals arising from the operation of those laws, and on points connected with them which require solution. And with other departments on matters of interest in a commercial point of view. The preparation also of bills and of orders in council for carrying out the intentions of the government on these subjects frequently falls to the care of this board. The correspondence of the board with private individuals on the subjects of which it has cognizance is likewise extensive.”

“Every private bill passing through parliament is submitted to the Board of Trade; and, in cases where the public interest is affected, it frequently interferes to procure the modification or rejection of certain clauses. All applications made to the Queen in council by committees or individuals seeking charters or letters-patent, and all cases of parties desiring to establish joint stock banks, are referred to this board to be reported on. And so likewise are all acts passed by colonies having legislative governments before they are laid before her majesty; but in regard to these the Colonial Secretary, through whom they are transmitted, recommends what should be done, and his recommendation is always followed as a matter of course. Still, all acts of this class must receive the formal sanction of the Board of Trade before being assented to by the crown. Such also of the ordinances of what are called Crow Colonies (that is, those having no legislative assemblies) as relate to the matters of trade are usually submitted to this board either by the Colonial Secretary, or by the Lords of the Treasury.

“The Board of Trade contains, amongst other subordinate departments, the following: The Corn Returns Department. The Statistical Department, established in 1832. And the Railway Department, originally constituted in 1840; enlarged in its powers in 1844; and again modified and its functions considerably curtailed in 1845.”

In connexion with this department may also be mentioned the duty imposed on the Board by the late act for the “Protection of Merchant Seamen,” 8 and 9 Victoria cap. 116, of “granting licences to fit persons to act as shipping agents, etc. ;” and the more recent act (13 and 14 Victoria, cap. 93) passed 14th August, 1850, for “Improving the condition of Masters, Mates, and Seamen, and maintaining discipline in the Merchant Service.”

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

THIS Board was originally established by an act of parliament (Mr. Pitt's celebrated East India bill) passed on the 18th of May, 1784. The act empowered his majesty (George III.) to appoint six privy councillors to be Commissioners for the affairs of India, with very extensive powers; they having the “controul and superintendance of all the British territorial possessions in the East Indies, and over the Affairs of the United Company of Merchants trading thereto.” One of the principal secretaries of state was constituted President, and in his absence the chancellor of the exchequer, and in the absence of both, then the senior commissioner was to be President. Subsequently, however, to the passing of this act, it was found necessary to alter the constitution of the Board.¹ The President is now always specially appointed, and is chosen for his great abilities. He is necessarily a privy councillor, and is one of the most important members of the cabinet, entering upon office and retiring with his official friends on every change in the administration.

The lord president of the council, the lord privy seal, the first lord of the treasury, the principal secretaries of state, and the chancellor of the exchequer, for the time being, are, ex officio, members of the Board (popularly the India Board), and the sovereign may appoint any other persons to be members also.

 The NOW President (1850) of the Board.

* * By the act 3 & 4 William 4. cap. 85. sect. 20.¹ it is provided, as before, "That the lord president of the council, the lord privy seal, the first lord of the treasury, the principal secretaries of state, and the chancellor of the exchequer, for the time being, shall, by virtue of their respective offices, be Commissioners for the affairs of INDIA in conjunction with the person or persons to be nominated in any such commission as aforesaid." It will be seen, however, that from and after the passing of this act (Aug. 28, 1833) fewer commissioners (other than the ex officio commissioners) have been named as a Board, and that, latterly, but one commissioner has been named. The letters-patent, since Sept. 1841, have been addressed to but one commissioner (exclusively of the ex officio commissioners), and the whole powers of the former boards are now vested in that one commissioner, at present sir John Hobhouse.

¹ This very important act received the royal assent August 28, 1833. It is entitled "An Act for effecting an arrangement with the East India Company, and for the better government of His Majesty's Indian territories till the 30th of April, 1854." Besides the provision above recited, this act empowers the Board of Commissioners to control all the acts of the company concerning India (section 25), and directs that no official communications shall be transmitted by the Court of Directors in London to India, until they shall have been approved of by the Board (section 30). The act further directs that the government of India shall be in a Governor-General and Councilors, to be styled "the Governor-General of India in Council." Until the passing of this act, the Governor-General had been styled "the Governor-General of Bengal," but his authority had, nevertheless, extended over all the presidencies.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE DUCHY OF LANCASTER.

THE Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is an officer of great eminence in the government, and frequently a cabinet minister. He holds his office by letters-patent; and if a peer, takes precedence according to his rank in the peerage; if not, he takes precedence next after the chancellor of the exchequer, and immediately before the lord chief justice of the queen's bench. He formerly sat as judge of the Duchy court of Lancaster, held in Westminster, in which all causes any way relating to the revenue of the Duchy of Lancaster were tried. Another branch of the same court was established at Preston, in Lancashire, called the court of the county palatine of Lancaster, for the same purposes in that county as the other was in Westminster.

These courts were erected by Henry IV. after he had deposed Richard II., when possessing the Duchy of Lancaster in right of his mother, he imagined his claim to it better than that to the throne, and therefore separated it from the crown, and erected these courts for its use. The office of Chancellor of the Duchy is now, practically, a sinecure.

1850. George-Frederick-William, earl of Carlisle. March 6. THE PRESENT (1850) Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

¹ When Mr. Perceval became first minister of the crown, in 1809, he continued to hold the office of chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster conjointly with the two superior offices of first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer. This is the only instance we have met with of the three offices having been united in the same individual.

THE SECRETARY-AT-WAR.¹

It is probable that the War-office had its origin, like many other departments, in a committee of the privy council.—Thomas' Notes of the Rolls. “The first Secretary-at-War was an officer detached from the secretary of state's office: the secretary of state, as is understood, finding the consolidation of the finance of the army inconvenient, got rid of it by establishing a secretaryship-at-war, as a separate and independent branch.”—Sir Henry Hardinge. It is probable that the Secretary-at-War was originally a clerk attending upon a committee of council. This I had suspected, because Mr. Blathwayte, who was Secretary-at-War to James II., was in attendance on the privy council when the bishops were called in.—Mr. Thomas Babington Macaulay.

The Secretary-at-War is deemed the Military Secretary to the sovereign, and conveys his majesty's, or, as now, the queen's, orders to all the generals and military governors at home and abroad, in relation to the troops and garrisons under their command; and with him they correspond, and to him they make their returns and reports, as well as to the commander-in-chief or the commander of the forces, as the case may be. The trust reposed in this officer is very great. All orders for marching, quartering, encamping, and recruiting the army are signed by him; and all military commissions issue from his office. The Secretary-at-War prepares the army estimates to be laid before parliament, and he is on that account necessarily a member of the house of commons; he is always a privy councillor, and frequently, as now, a cabinet minister.

SECRETARIES-AT-WAR.

KING CHARLES I.

1644. Edward Walker was secretary-at-war this year.—Harleian Catalogue, No. 6802.

— Rt. hon. Robert Pringle. May 18.
— Rt. hon. George Treby. Dec. 24.
1720 } It is stated in TINDAL, ii. 631, that & Mr. Trevor was secretary-at-war in 1721 } these years.
1724. Hon. Henry Pelham, afterwards Rt. hon., and subsequently first minister of the crown. April 1.

KING GEORGE II.

1730. Sir William Strickland, bart. June 11.
1735. Sir William Yonge, bart. May 9.

It appears, also, that there was a council of war established “for securing Ireland, and the rest of the kingdom, and for putting the navy in readiness.” Date, April 21, 1624. See “Commissions :” Sir Joseph Williamson's Collection; First Series, vol. 35.

From the Sixth Report of the Commissioners appointed under the act 45th George III. cap. 47, to inquire into and examine the public expenditure and the conduct of the public business in the military departments therein mentioned, it appears that the origin of this office could not be traced. It is clear, however, that the first person who held the appointment was detached from the secretary of state's office, so intimately connected were the two departments then considered.

THE MASTER-GENERAL OF THE ORDNANCE.

THIS officer is always chosen from among the first generals in the service of the sovereign. His appointment was formerly for life, but since the Restoration he holds it durante bene placito; and now usually enters upon office with the party to which he is politically attached, and retires with each change in the responsible advisers of the crown. To the Master-General of the Ordnance is entrusted the storing of all the military magazines in the dominions of Great Britain, and the supply of all the munitions of war to the royal navy that issue from his department. He is colonel-in-chief of the corps of artillery and the corps of engineers, and he has a peculiar jurisdiction over all the engineers employed in the several fortifications throughout the realm. The Master-General is not unfrequently a cabinet minister.

¹ The duel in which the duke was killed, is one of the most remarkable upon record, and is thus described by the chroniclers of the time: "Sunday, Nov. 15, 1712: A duel was fought with small swords in Hyde Park, between James, duke of Hamilton, and his friend colonel Hamilton, on the one part, and Charles, lord Mohun, and lieutenant-general Macartney, on the other part. Lord Mohun was killed upon the spot, and the duke expired of his wounds as he was being carried by his servants to his coach. Colonel Hamilton was wounded in the foot, and surrendered himself on the 22d; but Macartney made his escape, and large rewards were offered for his apprehension. It was strongly suspected that the duke, after he had slain his adversary, was killed unfairly by Macartney.—Chron. of Great Britain."

² The personages distinguished by an asterisk were subsequently Masters-General.

³ He was restored to favour in lord Bute's administration, and, in 1775, became one of the principal secretaries of state; which office he held during the American war.

THE FIRST COMMISSIONER OF WOODS AND FORESTS.

THE origin of the Forests belonging to the crown is not to be found mentioned in any record, the New Forest in Hampshire excepted, which, though made by William the Conqueror, is called by Manwood, writing on the Forest Laws, "the New Forest in England." The origin of the Laws for the management of the Forests seems involved in equal obscurity with the Forests themselves.¹—Notes from the Rolls' Office.

From the reign of Henry III., when the Charta de Foresta was granted, there were two Justices in Eyre, one for the north, and the other for the south, of Trent. Henry VIII. established Courts, which were afterwards dissolved; and James I. appointed Surveyors, and Charles I. a Surveyor-General, of Crown Lands. Numerous statutes were enacted up to the 50th of George III., when the then offices of Surveyor-General of the Land Revenues of the Crown and the Surveyor-General of Woods, Forests, Parks, and Chases were directed to be united under a Board of Commissioners, to be named the "Commissioners of Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues." In 1832 (2 William IV. c. 1) the office of Surveyor-General of Works and Buildings was united with this Board, and thus was formed the present consolidated office of Commissioners of Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings.

The first Commissioner of Woods and Forests is now a high political personage. He is always of the privy council, and sometimes a member of the cabinet.

¹ FOREST COURTS. These were, the Court of Woodmote, the Court of Swanmote, and that called the Justice Seat, or Court of the Chief Justice in eyre.

The Court of Woodmote was a court held every forty days, and its function was to inquire into all offences that had been done in the forest within that time.

The Court of Swanmote, in which the verderors were the judges, was held thrice a year: The first time, for the purposes of clearing the forests of all animals, deer excepted, during the fawning season. The second time, for the admission of swine, &c., into the forests, to feed on acorns and beech-mast, called pannage. The third time, to receive an account of every deer killed, and to obtain payment for the pasturage of cattle.

The Court of Justice Seat was held once in three years, when the rolls of the two inferior courts were presented to the chief justice in eyre, and when all offences were tried.—THOMAS'S Notes for the History of Public Departments.

TREASURER OF THE NAVY.

THIS office was one of great trust and dignity, and the holder of it was always of the privy council. Many of our eminent statesmen of historic name (among them Osborne, Walpole, Dodington, Grenville, Barrington, and more recently Canning) were Treasurers of the Navy. The salary, from the earliest date in the records of the department, 1721, until the year 1810, was 2000*l.* per annum; but the profits of the office, especially in time of war, were formerly considerable, owing to the great sums of the public money lying long in the Treasurer's hands.¹ In 1810, the salary was raised to 4000*l.*, and continued at that rate until 1818, when it was reduced to 3000*l.*, and so remained until 1830. In this last year it was fixed at 2000*l.* again, the salary paid until the abolition of the office, in 1836.

Conformably with the act 5th and 6th William IV. cap. 35, the offices of Paymaster-General, Paymaster and Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital, Treasurer of the Ordnance, and Treasurer of the Navy, were consolidated, and now form one office, held by the Paymaster-General. See Paymaster-General.

¹ Sir Henry Vane was made Treasurer of the Navy by patent, for life, by king Charles I., which place he held till the first war between the English and Dutch. The fees of his office were at that time fourpence in the pound, which by reason of the war amounted to the enormous sum of 30,000*l.* per annum. Sir Henry looked upon this as too much for a subject, and as too great a gain to be derived from any office, and patriotically gave up his patent to the then parliament, desiring 2000*l.* per annum only, for an agent whom he had brought up to manage the duties. The method of a fixed salary was continued afterwards.—Roper.

* * * To 1832 the appointment of Comptroller of the Navy ceased, and the duties of the office were transferred. See next article.

PRINCIPAL OFFICERS.

By the act 2d William IV. cap. 40 (passed June 1, 1832)¹ the Navy and Victualling Boards and the offices of Commissioners of Navy and Victualling and Comptroller of the Navy, were dispensed with, and in lieu thereof were appointed five "Principal Officers" at Somerset House, subordinate to the Admiralty, viz.:

The Surveyor of the Navy. Accountant-General of the Navy. Storekeeper-General.	Comptroller of Victualling, and Medical Director-General.
---	--

To these have been added two important departments, viz. : —

The Comptroller of Steam Machinery: Sir Edward Parry first officer appointed; Captain Ellice (who now holds the office) succeeded him.

The Director of Engineering and Architectural Works: the first who held this office under its present title (it having been previously that of Civil Architect) was Colonel Brandreth, R. E. He was succeeded on his death by Colonel Irvine, R. E.; who, also, dying in office, has been succeeded by Colonel Green, C. B.

The higher officers of the Civil branches of the Navy were formerly very numerous; but notwithstanding the vast increase of business latterly in all the departments of the Naval service, several of them have been, from time to time, dispensed with, and their duties transferred, and their various offices consolidated.

¹ This statute is entitled "An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Business of the Civil Departments of the Navy, and to make other Regulations for more effectually carrying on the Duties of the said Departments." By this act certain defined duties are directed to be executed by two Lords of the Admiralty; the duties hitherto executed by Commissioners at the Dock-Yards are to be discharged by Superintendents, and numerous provisions are framed, and alterations made in the constitution of various offices connected with this branch of the public service.

PAYMASTER-GENERAL.

THIS office was formerly one of the most lucrative in the gift of the crown, not so much on account of the salary annexed to it, or the perquisites derived from it, as on account of the vast sums of public money that lay in the Paymaster's hands for a long space of time together; the whole of the money voted by parliament for the land forces passing through this department. In 1782, the office underwent a reform, and the Paymaster-General was allowed a fixed salary of 4000*l.*, and his deputy a salary of 1500*l.*, in lieu of perquisites. The Paymaster's salary is now 2000*l.* per annum.

The Paymaster-General is always of the privy council, and sometimes a member of the cabinet. He was constituted by letters-patent under the great seal until 1836; from the 1st of December in which year the appointment has been by queen's warrant.

On the same day, the offices of Treasurer of the Navy, Treasurer of the Ordnance, and Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital were consolidated with that of Paymaster-General; and on August 16, 1848, the offices of Paymaster of Civil Services, and Paymaster of Exchequer Bills, were also united with it.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

"It does not appear at what precise period the crown undertook to be the regular carrier of letters for its subjects. The crown, doubtless, found it necessary, at a very early period, to the exercise of the functions of sovereignty, to be able to convey with speed and security its own despatches from one part of the realm to another, and for that purpose it appointed certain messengers, or runners, called the 'Posts.' These posts were also employed for the personal convenience of the sovereign and the individuals composing the royal court. In course of time a 'Master of the Posts,' was appointed, and the first of these on record was Brian Tuke, esq., afterwards sir Brian Tuke, knt., who held that office in 1516. The joint successors of Sir Brian Tuke were Sir William Paget, one of Henry VIII.'s chief secretaries of state, and John Mason, esq., secretary for the French tongue. The letters-patent, dated Nov. 12, 1545, conveying to them this office, grant to them during their lives and the life of the survivor, the office of 'Master of the Messengers, Runners, or Posts,' as well within the kingdom of England as parts beyond the seas, with the wages or fee of 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* a year, to be held by themselves or their sufficient deputy or deputies. But, besides his fee, the 'Master of the Posts' received from the crown the amount of his expenses for conveying the letters, of which he rendered an account. There is a succession of patents granting the same office, at the same fee, to other parties for life, in the reigns of Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I."—*House of Commons' Report, 1844.*¹

The Postmaster-General is now an officer of high consideration in the government. He is always a member of the privy council, usually a peer, and sometimes, as at present, a cabinet minister. When the office has been executed by two Post-Masters, they have been of equal rank and authority. The duties are now confided to one person, whose salary is 2500*l.* per annum, and who is appointed by patent.

THE MASTER OF THE MINT.

THE Warden was anciently the chief officer of the Mint, but the Master has of late years become an officer of high political consideration, and he is now always a member of the government, and sometimes a cabinet minister. The office of Warden was abolished by act of parliament (57 George III.), July 7, 1817, and the duties were directed to be performed by the Master, who was by that act constituted Master, Warden, and Worker. His salary (which in July, 1799, was fixed, instead of fees, at 3000*l.*), was reduced in June, 1831, to 2000*l.* per annum. It may here be observed, that it is in contemplation to alter the constitution of the Mint altogether; but it is uncertain what arrangements will finally be made. It is probable, however, that the (now almost sinecure) office of Master of the Mint will be soon abolished, at least as a merely honorary office.

THE JUDGE ADVOCATE-GENERAL.

THE Judge Advocate-General and Judge Martial of all the Forces is an officer of high honour and of considerable responsibility. His office is held by patent from the crown. He is the legal adviser of the sovereign and of the commander-in-chief, in military cases, and by his authority all general courts-martial are held. In his office are deposited the originals of all such proceedings, and on his receipt of them they are examined, and either deposited as correct, or communicated upon, or submitted by the Judge Advocate-General to her majesty for royal approval, or for pardon, or revision, as, in the opinion of this officer, the respective cases may require. There are various other duties embraced in this judicial department of the state, to which the Judge Advocate-General has anxiously and constantly to devote his official time. The number of courts-martial and of cases requiring the Judge Advocate's investigation, now (1850) amount to about six thousand annually.

JUDGE ADVOCATES-GENERAL.

 The dates are those of the actual entrance upon office, not of the appointment, which is usually a few days earlier; or of the patent, commonly some days later than those we adopt in this list.

THE LORD STEWARD OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

THIS is the FIRST great officer of the court: the nature of his office (which is of high honour and antiquity) is implied in the name. He has the management of the palace below stairs, and the appointment and superintendance of numerous persons in the sovereign's service. The Lord Steward is always a nobleman of high rank, and a privy councillor. He has no formal grant of his office; and formerly received his charge immediately from the sovereign in person, who, on placing in his hands a white staff or wand, said, "Seneschal, tenez le baton de notre maison." By virtue of this office, the Lord Steward was, until lately, the chief judge of the court of the Queen's Palace of Westminster. This court was originally instituted to determine actions against members of the Household, but it subsequently grew into comparatively extensive jurisdiction. It was, however, wholly abolished in 1849.

THE GROOM OF THE STOLE.

THE Groom of the Stole, a high officer of the Royal Household, and whose office existed until the commencement of the present reign, was first Lord of the Bed-chamber, and derived his official distinction from having the custody of the long robe or vestment worn by the king upon solemn occasions of state, called the Stole. The office was always filled by a nobleman of high rank, who wore a gold key as the emblem of it. The Groom of the Stole always became a privy councillor, if not so previously.

THE MASTER OF THE HORSE.

Is reckoned the THIRD great officer of the court. The office is of high honour and antiquity, and is always filled by noblemen of great rank. The Master of the Horse has the management and direction of all matters relating to the royal stables, and of the revenue appropriated to this branch of the Royal Household. He is the only personage who has the privilege of using horses belonging to the crown, and of being attended by pages and servants attached to his department. In royal processions and on occasions of state the Master of the Horse usually rides in the same carriage with the sovereign.

CORPS OF GENTLEMEN-AT-ARMS.

THE Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms (formerly styled the Band of Gentlemen-Pensioners) is the oldest corps in England, with the exception of the Yeomen of the Guard and the Sergeants-at-Arms.¹ This Corps was instituted soon after Henry VIII. ascended the throne, and was composed entirely of gentlemen of noble blood. In the preceding reign a body of fifty archers had been enrolled, composed of yeomen, and styled "the Yeomen of the Guard;" a splendid corps, which at the present time continues to form one of the most picturesque ornaments of the ante-chamber. Henry VIII., however, was too magnificent in his notions of state to be satisfied with a guard consisting merely of yeomen; he thought that none but gentlemen of superior rank should have the privilege of forming the immediate guard of the sovereign, and accordingly his majesty (as is affirmed by Lloyd), at the instance of Sir William Compton, a lineal ancestor of the earl of Northampton, created a troop composed entirely of the cadets of noble families, and these he called his Pensioners, or Spears, each Spear being attended by an archer, a demi-lance, and a coustillier (from the French coustillier) or half-armed servant, with three managed horses completely furnished for service in the field. — Captain James Bunce Curling.

His late majesty William IV. was graciously pleased to command (March 17, 1834)

¹ The first regular force employed by the kings of England was their own personal guard; but there does not appear to have been a regularly embodied corps of guards previous to the reign of Richard I., who instituted the sergeants-at-arms — a body of twenty-four archers, whose duties were to keep watch round the king's tent, in complete armour, with a bow and arrows, and a sword; and to arrest traitors and other offenders about the court. The sergeants-at-arms have ceased to be considered a corps of guard, but they retain their civil character. — Captain Curling.

that the Honourable Band of Gentlemen Pensioners should be in future called "His Majesty's Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms." — Captain James Bunce Curling.

² Captain Curling, in his beautiful volume, entitled "An Account of the Ancient Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms," lately published, has the following passage in relation to the British Household troops and our standing army: "King Charles II. at the Restoration established a regiment of Life Guards, to which he added a regiment of Horse Guards and two regiments of Foot Guards, and a third regiment of Foot Guards was raised at Coldstream, on the borders of Scotland. These corps constitute the British Household troops. Their formation was the commencement of the present regular army; and such additions have from time to time been made of regiments of horse, dragoons, and foot soldiers, as the occasions of the nation have required."

HER MAJESTY'S BODY-GUARD

OF THE

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD.

THE Body-Guard of the Queen is the oldest corps in Her Majesty's service. This corps was instituted by Henry VII. in 1485, nearly two hundred years before any regiment that is now in existence was raised: it was, in fact, the only standing force in the kingdom, with the exception of the Honourable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms.

In the reign of the first founder the number of the corps was fifty men; but it was increased by Henry VIII. to two hundred, of which number one hundred were mounted. The corps was afterwards very considerably augmented by the same monarch; for we find that in 1513, at the siege of Terouënné¹, where they accompanied the king, the corps amounted to six hundred. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth the Body-Guard was composed of three hundred and seven men; and in that of James I. the number was again two hundred. It was further reduced by Charles II. in consequence of several regiments having been raised in the course of his reign.

The present strength of the Body-Guard is one hundred and forty men, including eight ushers or sergeant-majors.

The officers of this corps consist of a Captain, who is always a peer, and a member of the Privy Council, ex officio, and who carries a gold stick of office; a Lieutenant, an Ensign, four Exons, and an Adjutant or Clerk of the Cheque. All the officers, under the Captain, carry, when on duty, a silver stick of office, which they have the privilege of receiving, at a private audience, immediately from the hands of the sovereign.

The commissions, as in the rest of the army, are saleable; but death-vacancies are filled up by the Commander-in-Chief from the Half-pay list, subject to the approval of the Captain of the Corps.

The Body-Guard is entirely recruited from the non-commissioned officers of the army, without distinction of regiments. The selection is made by the Commander-in-Chief (subject to the approval of the Captain) as a reward for distinguished gallantry or good conduct. On state occasions, the men carry the halbert, but they are armed and drilled like the rest of the infantry; and from their high character and their ¹ Henry VIII. of England, the emperor Maximilian, and the Swiss, entered, in 1513, into an alliance offensive against France. Henry VIII. landed at Calais in the month of July, and soon formed an army of 30,000 men, counting the troops he had brought with him. He was joined by the emperor with a good corps of horse, and some foot. The emperor was so mean as to act as a mercenary to the king of England, who allowed him a hundred ducats a day for his table! They laid siege to Terouënné, investing the place with an army of 50,000 men; and the Duc de Longueville, marching to its relief, was signally defeated; the French were everywhere routed in the battle. This battle of Guinnegate was called the battle of Spurs, because the French used their spurs more than they did their swords. It happened on the 18th of August, and the place surrendered on the 24th; and the allies, not agreeing as to which of them should keep it, razed it to the ground. The English king then laid siege to Tournay, which submitted in a few days. And the Swiss laid siege to Dijon, which Louis de la Trimouille preserved by a treaty highly advantageous to that nation, which he reckoned the French king (Louis XII.) would refuse to ratify. The Venetians, on the other hand, did not meet with better success; they were defeated by the Spaniards; and Sforza retook all the towns that Louis XII. had conquered for that republic. — HENAU, Hist. de France.

This battle (the Spurs) before Terouënné, owed its name to an occurrence not much redounding to the honour of the French arms; in the same way that a former battle (that of the Herrings) fought when the English were besieging Orleans, obtained its ludicrous yet lasting name, from an incident occurring at the time. The duc de Bourbon, in attempting to intercept a convoy on the road to the English camp before Orleans, was severely beaten. It was a convoy of salt-fish, and the action by which this supply of provisions to the besieging army was preserved from falling into the hands of the French, was called the battle of the Herrings, a name it has borne ever since. — Vertot.

perfect state of discipline, they are as efficient a corps as any in Her Majesty's service.¹

Thirty of the Guard are on daily duty at St. James's, under the command of the Exon in waiting, who resides at the palace during his tour of duty.

The PRESENT (1850) Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard.

¹ The learned antiquary, Ashmole, has the following passage in relation to this corps:—"The yeomen of the guard are a peculiar body of foot-guards to the king's person, instituted at the coronation of Henry VII., Oct. 30, 1485. This corps originally consisted of fifty men, under a captain; they were of larger stature than other guards, being required to be over six feet in height, and they were armed with arquebuses and other arms. This band was increased by the royal successors of Henry to one hundred men, and seventy supernumeraries; and when one of the hundred died, it was ordered that his place should be supplied out of the sevcoy. They were clad after the manner of king Henry VIII.—Ashmole's Instit.

The corps still retains the ancient dress assigned to it by Henry VIII., viz. a scarlet coat, of a peculiar make, down to the knees, guarded with black velvet, and badges on the coat, before and behind. Their breeches are also scarlet, guarded with black velvet; and instead of hats, they wear black velvet caps, round and broad-crowned, with ribbons of the king's colour.

THE SUPPRESSED OFFICES.

MASTER OF THE GREAT WARDROBE.

THE Master or Keeper of the Great Wardrobe was an officer of great antiquity and dignity. High privileges and immunities were conferred upon him by King Henry VI. and were confirmed to him by his successors; and King James I. not only enlarged them, but ordained that this office should be a corporation or body politic for ever. The salary of this officer was 2000*l.* per annum. He was usually a personage of high political consideration, and subordinate to him were, a comptroller, a patent clerk, and many officers and servants, who were all sworn servants to the king.

The Wardrobe establishment was abolished by act of parliament, in 1782; and it was directed that the duties of the office should thenceforth be transferred to the department of the lord chamberlain.

1782. The office abolished by act of parliament, this year.

COFFERER OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

THE Cofferer of the Household was the officer next in rank to the comptroller. He was a white-staff officer, usually of political rank, and always a member of the privy council. He had a special charge and oversight of the other officers of the household. On the suppression of the office, by act of parliament, in 1782, the duties of it were ordered to be discharged by the lord steward and the paymaster of the household.

The act further directed, that any of the offices so abolished should, in the event of their being again established, be deemed to all intents and purposes a new office or offices, as if the same had never previously existed."

PART III.

SPEAKERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THE JUDGES OF ENGLAND.—LAW OFFICERS OF THE CROWN.—ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.—ADMIRALS OF GREAT BRITAIN.—GENERALS OF THE ARMY.—INDIA.—GOVERNORS-GENERAL OF COLONIES, &c.

THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THIS great and independent officer is chosen by the House of Commons from among its own members, subject to the approval of the sovereign, and holds his office until the dissolution of the parliament by which he was elected. As Chairman of the House, his duties are the same as those of any other president of a deliberative assembly. He is always a member of the privy council, and is entitled to rank immediately after barons and before the commissioners of the great seal. Generally speaking, the business of the House cannot be transacted in the absence of the Speaker, although to this rule there was an exception in the year 1606, when, during the illness of a Speaker, a prisoner was released from custody by order of the House. He reads to the sovereign the occasional petitions and addresses of the Commons, and, as their organ, makes such speeches as are usual or necessary on their behalf. He manages the House when prisoners, witnesses, or counsel are at the bar; reprimands persons who have incurred the displeasure of the House; issues warrants of committal for breaches of privilege; and expresses the thanks or approbation of the Commons to such personages as have been voted this high and most honourable distinction by the House. When parliament is about to be prorogued, it is customary for the Speaker to address the sovereign, at the bar of the House of Lords, in a speech recapitulating the leading business and proceedings of the session. The Speaker has the casting voice upon divisions in which the votes prove equal.

KING GEORGE III.

1761. Sir John Cust, bart. — Grantham, Lincolnshire.

¹ One instance of the hardihood of Mr. Speaker Seymour deserves record. A message being brought him that the king (Charles II.) was seated on the throne, and desired the presence of the Commons to hear the prorogation of parliament, he refused to stir until the Bill of Supply had been returned, according to precedent, from the House of Lords; and although again warned that his majesty was waiting, he declared he would be torn by wild horses sooner than quit the chair. The bill was brought to him, and then the Commons advanced to the bar of the Lords, encouraged by the triumph of their Speaker. — Townshend.

² Almost universal corruption prevailed about this time, and it seems to have been no bar, in many instances, to professional advancement or to personal honours. Vast sums were given by the East India Company and by the Chamber of London among the members, for facilitating acts of parliament relating to those bodies; and even the duke of Leeds, lord president of the council, was accused by the commons (who had appointed a committee of inquiry into charges of corruption) of having accepted a bribe of 5500 guineas from the East India merchants, for procuring them a charter of confirmation and regulations. Sir Thomas Cooke, governor of the company, and a member of the house, having refused to give an account of the money by him distributed in bribes, was ordered to be committed to the Tower, and a bill was brought in to compel him to render such an account; he afterwards confessed to having expended 70,000*l.* among certain courtiers and commoners. The sums accepted by members of the commons' house were, in some cases, of very mean amount: Mr. Hungerford, chairman of the committee on the Orphans' bill was adjudged guilty of "a high crime and misdemeanour, in receiving 20 guineas for his pains and service," and was expelled from his seat; and Sir Basil Firebrace and other members were imprisoned, "to satisfy the clamours of the people."

1768. Sir John Cust, re-chosen. He resigned on account of ill health, Jan. 17, 1770, and on the 23d of same month the commons elected

QUEEN VICTORIA.

1837. Mr. Abercromby, again chosen, Nov. 15. Raised to the peerage, by the title of baron Dunfermline, June 7, 1839.
1839. Rt. hon. Charles Shaw Lefevre, — Hampshire, Northern division. May 27.
1841. Mr. Charles Shaw Lefevre, again chosen, Aug. 19.
1847. Mr. Charles Shaw Lefevre, chosen a third time, Nov. 18. THE PRESENT (1850) Speaker of the House of Commons.

WITH the Revolution commenced the real importance of the Speaker in rank, character, and consideration. "Jam domiti ut pareant non ut serviant." From that auspicious era, he has occupied his proper station. Ever since the statute I. William and Mary, cap. 21, he has taken his place next the peers of Great Britain, both in and out of parliament; in all public commissions he is so ranked, and he has this precedence at the Council Table. To secure his perfect independence, he ceased, in George III.'s reign, to hold any office under the crown. Mr. Speaker Onslow setting that example, to which his successors have invariably adhered. His impartiality and his acquaintance with precedents have been insured by an almost fixed tenure of office, and his arduous duties have been justly rewarded, at the close of long service, with a coronet. — Townsend's History of the Commons.

² In the memorable contest for the Speakership, in 1835, Mr. Abercromby had 316 votes, and Sir Charles Manners Sutton, 306; the majority in favour of Mr. Abercromby being ten. It has been affirmed that the House, upon this occasion, presented the largest assemblage of members that was ever drawn together, 622 having divided upon the question, although several members had left the house without voting. Sir Charles Manners Sutton was shortly after created viscount Canterbury and baron Botesford; he retired immediately after this contest from political life, and died in 1845.

THE JUDGES OF ENGLAND.

CHIEF JUSTICIERS OF ENGLAND.

IN ancient times the Kings of England used to hear and determine causes; but it is declared by law, that "if the King cannot determine every controversy, he, to ease himself, may divide the labour among persons, men of wisdom, and fearing God, and out of such appoint judges." The Saxon kings of England appointed a judge after this manner, who was, in fact, the King's deputy. After the Norman Conquest, the personage invested with the office had the style of Capitalis Justicia or Justiciarius Angliæ. These judges continued until the erection of the Courts of King's Bench and the Common Pleas.

The last person that had the office of Justiciarius Angliæ, was Philip Basset; and he, for the better support of his dignity, received an annual stipend of a thousand marks out of the King's Exchequer, at Easter and Michaelmas, by equal portions, which stipend Hugh Bigod, his predecessor, also had received.—Beutson

CHIEF JUSTICIERS OF ENGLAND.

¹ When the king left England in 1073, these two were appointed chief justiciaries of the kingdom. Their government was principally distinguished by overcomng the rebellion raised by the earls of Hereford and Norfolk. But they disgraced their victory by cruelly ordering the right feet of their prisoners to be amputated!—a barbarous practice for which they had the example of the king in some of his Norman wars.—Foss's Lives of the Judges.

1247. Henry de Bathonia¹; mentioned by Dugdale as chief justicier this year.
1258. Hugh Bigot, or Bigod, appointed Just. Angl. by the parliament held at Oxford.
1259. Roger de Thurkilby; chief justicier. — Dugdale.
1260. Hugh le Despencer, Just. Angl.; appointed by the barons.
1261. Philip Basset, Just. Angl.; appointed by the king.

. Numerous justiciers and itinerant justices were appointed by the sovereign to administer the law; the latter in the various counties of the realm. The office was discontinued in the reign of this king, when the principal duties were transferred to the chief justice of the king's bench.

¹ This judge was charged before the parliament, in 1251, with bribery and extortion, with having received a bribe to allow a convicted criminal to escape, and with having incensed the barons against the king. The vehemence of Henry's anger on the occasion may be conceived from his brutal exclamation, "If any man will slay Henry de Bathonia, he shall not be impeached of his death, and I now pronounce his pardon." This violence was however, prevented by John Mansel's timely interference, and the threats of ecclesiastical and temporal revenge of the bishop of London and the justicier's other friends. — Foss's Lives of the Judges. The reader will be forcibly reminded of a similar exclamation, better known, against Thomas à Becket, in a previous reign, which led to the assassination of that prelate at the altar. — Editor.

COURT OF KING'S (QUEEN'S) BENCH.

THIS court obtained its name from the legal presumption that the king sits here in person; and the words, "to hold pleas before us," are used because of the theory that the sovereign is actually present in this particular court. It was anciently called Curia Domini Regis; and in the reign of Edward I. a statute passed, by which it was enacted, that this court "should attend the king and follow him, so that he might have at all times near him men learned in the laws, to do justice to such as had suffered wrong:" it was afterwards fixed to be held at Westminster. The jurisdiction of the King's Bench (called in the reign of a female sovereign the "Queen's Bench") extends all over England, and its judges are invested with great and peculiar powers and authority. They are the premier justices of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol-delivery in the kingdom, and the Chief Justice is the supreme coroner of the realm. He holds the highest dignity in connexion with the administration of the common law.

In the 52nd of Henry III., 1268, a new designation was given to the head of the King's Court, by the appointment of a judge as Capitalis Justiciarius ad placita coram Rege tenenda. We now style him, "Chief Justice of the King's Bench," or "Lord Chief Justice of England." — Beatson.

"The judges of this court," Mr. Beatson quaintly adds, "used to ride to Westminster Hall on mules; but sir John Whyddon, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, introduced horses: of late years they go in coaches."

1342. Sir William Scot. Jan. 8.
1347. Sir William de Thorpe. Nov. 26: hanged for malpractices in 1351.

² Robert de Brus or Brins, in modern times spelt Bruce. His ancestor was one of the companions of the Conqueror, and having particularly distinguished himself in the battle of Hastings, his prowess was rewarded with no fewer than ninety-four lordships, of which Skelton, in Yorkshire, was the principal.

This judge was the head of a great Norman baronial house. He had in his veins the blood of the kings of Scotland, enjoyed large possessions in that kingdom, and was in the succession to the throne, for which he actually became the competitor. His grandson, after giving the English the severest defeat they ever sustained, swayed the sceptre with glory and felicity; and our gracious queen, Victoria, in tracing her line to the Conqueror and to Cordic, counts the chief justice among her ancestors. — Lord Campbell's Chief Justices of England.

 1788. Lloyd, lord Kenyon (master of the rolls). June 9: died April 1802.

¹ "He always sat in triumph over, and in contempt of vice; he never searched after it, or spared it when it came before him; and could see through the hypocrisy of those who have no pretence to virtue themselves, but by their severity to the vicious. He considered justice as a cardinal virtue, not as a trade for maintenance. The criminal before him was always sure that he stood before his country, and in sort, before a parent of it. The prisoner knew that though his spirit was broken with guilt, and he could utter no defence, yet that he was not undefended, for that his judge would be his counsel also, and would wrest no law to destroy him, nor conceal any law that might save him." — Sir Richard Steele.

¹ Justice Wilmot, while trying a case at Worcester, in 1755, had a narrow escape of his life, but he happily lived to be long an ornament to the bench, and chief justice of the common pleas. The following account is given by the judge himself: "A strong wind blew down the roof of the court, but, as I sat up close to the wall, I escaped without hurt. Mr. Lawes (my Eardley's secretary) is killed; two of the jurymen, who were impaled in the cause before me, are also killed, and they are carrying dead and wounded bodies out of the ruins still." The judge was summing up the evidence when the fatal accident occurred, and most of the counsel were gone; of those who remained, were four, who afterwards obtained the honours of the bench.

* * * Marked thus * are the present (1851) Puisne Justices of this court.

THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

This court, when first instituted, was kept in the king's own palace, distinct from the court of king's bench, but on the confirmation of Magna Charta by King John, in 1215, it was fixed at Westminster. Here all controversies, in matters civil, between subject and subject, are determined according to law. Here, also, fines were levied and recoveries suffered (and in no other court) until the passing of the act, 3rd and 4th William IV. cap. 74, which altered the law relating to real property, and simplified the remedies for trying the rights thereto.

Soon after the fixing of this court at Westminster, such a multitude of causes were brought before it, that the king, for the greater dispatch of business, found it necessary, instead of three, to constitute six judges, whom he appointed to sit in two places. The number was subsequently reduced to four; but by the late act, 1 William IV. cap. 70, the number was increased (as in the other law courts) to five. No barrister under the degree of serjeant could formerly plead in this court. An act, however, was passed, 9 and 10 Victoria, cap. 54 (Aug. 18, 1846), "extending to all barristers practising in the superior courts at Westminster, the privileges of serjeants-at-law in the Court of Common Pleas."

The Chief Justice holds his appointment by letters-patent from the crown, quam diu se bene gesserit. He ranks immediately before the chief baron of the exchequer, and after the lord chief justice of England and the master of the rolls.

 Common Pleas.

¹ This great man's learning as a lawyer and wisdom as a judge have been universally recognized: his writings are among our Text-books. Attached to the law, whose very spirit is freedom, Coke was, during the course of his judicial career, brought frequently into collision with his master, James I., whose selfish love of prerogative induced him to transgress, as well the dictates of prudence, as the principles of the constitution. He declaimed with great spirit against the court measures, and ascribed to Buckingham all the calamities of the nation. He was discharged from his office of chief justice of the king's bench in 1616, and never recovered the favour of James again.—Illust. of Judges.

THE COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

THE Court of Exchequer is one of the four great courts of the kingdom. It is held in Westminster Hall, and was so named from a chequered cloth that anciently covered the table at which the judges and chief officers sat. This Court was erected, according to some authorities, by William the Conqueror, and according to others by Henry I., for the trial of all causes relating to the revenues of the crown; but in process of time the jurisdiction of the Exchequer became gradually enlarged, until at length it was not merely a revenue court, but one in which actions might be brought at common law between subject and subject, but one in which, also, suits in equity were instituted. In fact, until the act 5th Victoria, cap. 5 (passed 5th October, 1841), the Court of Exchequer possessed a triple jurisdiction, viz. in matters of equity, and as a court of common law, together with its original and exclusive powers in revenue affairs. But by the statute just mentioned, its jurisdiction as a court of equity has been transferred to the Court of Chancery.

The judges of this Court are styled Barons, as in former times barons presided here appointed by the King to determine causes. In later times personages eminently learned in the law were appointed to preside, and they retained the title of Baron. The principal judge of the Court is styled the Chief Baron, who, like all our present judges, derives his appointment, quamdiu se bene gesserit, by letters-patent from the crown. He takes rank immediately after the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.

AUDITOR OF THE RECEIPT OF THE EXCHEQUER.

THIS was an office of great trust and profit, and was held for life. The Auditor filed the bills of the Tellers, by which they charged themselves with all the moneys received; and, by warrant from the Lord Treasurer, or the Commissioners of the Treasury, he drew all orders, to be signed by him or them, for issuing forth all moneys, by virtue of privy seals, which were recorded in the Clerk of the Pells office, and entered and lodged in that of the Auditor. He also, by warrant of the Lord Treasurer, or the Commissioners of the Treasury, made debentures to such as had fees, annuities, or pensions, by letters-patent from the king, out of the Exchequer, and directed them for payment to the Tellers. He daily received the state of the account of each teller, and weekly certified the whole to the Lords of the Treasury.

At Michaelmas and Lady Day the Auditor gave in a declaration, with two abstracts of all accounts and payments made in the preceding half year; one for the Lords of the Treasury, and the other for the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

THE CLERK OF THE PELLIS.

THIS officer was in the nature of a Comptroller. He was called the Clerk of the Pellis, from the Latin word pellis, a skin; his office being to enter the Tellers' bill into a skin of parchment, and all receipts and payments for the King, for what cause, and by whomsoever made or received. He had a deputy; a clerk for the introitus, or incomes; and another for the exitus, or issues. He had also a clerk of the declarations, and a clerk of the patents.

THE FOUR TELLERS OF THE EXCHEQUER.

EACH of these officers had his deputy and clerks. When the Tellers entered upon office, they each of them gave security to the amount of 20,000*l.* for the faithful discharge of their trust. Their office was to receive all money due to the King, and thereupon to throw down a bill through the Pipe into the Tally-court¹, where it was received by the Auditor's clerk, who there attended to write the words of the bill upon a tally, and he then delivered the same to be entered by the Clerk of the Pells, or his clerk, who attended to record it in his book. Then the tally was cloven by the two Deputy Chamberlains; and while the senior deputy read one part, the junior examined the other part, assisted by his clerks.

¹ The Tally-court, in the Exchequer, took its name from the French word tailleur, to cut, a tally being a piece of wood written on both sides, containing an acquittance for money received; which, on having been cloven asunder by the deputy-chamberlains, one part, called the stock, was delivered to the person who paid or lent money to the government; and the other part, called the counter-stock, or counterfoil, remained in the office, to be kept until called for, and joined with the stock. This method of striking tallies was very ancient; and was found, by long experience, to have been the best way of preventing frauds that could be invented; for it was morally impossible so to counterfeit a tally, but that upon rejoining it with the counterfoil the intended fraud would be obvious to every eye, either in the notches, or in the cleaving, in the length, or the breadth, or in the natural growth, or in the shape of the counterfoil.

1786. Henry Bathurst, lord Apsley (afterwards earl Bathurst); patent dated Aug. 22. Office abolished, Oct. 10, 1834.

CHAMBERLAINS OF THE EXCHEQUER.

IN their custody were many ancient records, leagues, and treaties with foreign princes; the standards of money, weights, and measures; those ancient books called the Black Book of the Exchequer, and Domesday book, which last contains an account of all the cities, towns, villages, and families in England in the reign of William the Conqueror. Under them were four Deputy Chamberlains, in whose office were preserved all the counterfoils of the above-mentioned tallies, so exactly arranged that they can be easily found, in order to be joined with their respective parts; which being done and proved true, they delivered the tally attested for a lawful tally to the Clerk of the Pipe, to be allowed in the great roll.

THE TWO CHAMBERLAINS OF THE EXCHEQUER.

(From the Restoration of King Charles II. to the abolition of their office in 1826.)

- 1.
1660. Henry Hildeverd; admitted July 27, "to the office formerly had by sir Edward Bash, deceased," under patent dated July 10.
1675. Philip Hildeverd (son of the foregoing); admitted under patent dated Feb. 16; including the reversion to
- * * Charles Cole (son of Henry Cole): his admission under the preceding patent is not recorded.
1712. Sir Simeon Stuart, bart. (grandson and heir of sir Nicholas Steward or Stuart, formerly a chamberlain, see below); admitted July 8, under patent dated July 7.
1761. Sir Simeon Stuart, bart. (son of the foregoing); by patent dated Dec. 12.
1779. Hon. Frederick North (afterwards earl of Guilford); by patent dated Dec. 13. The office prospectively abolished by statute 23 George III. cap. 82, and surrendered by him Oct. 10, 1826.

- 2.
1660. Sir Nicholas Steward or Stuart, bart.; admitted . . . , 1660, "to the office formerly had by sir Nicholas Carew, alias Throckmorton, deceased," under patent dated Oct. 1, this year.
1710. Sir William Ashburnham, bart.; admitted June 15, under patent dated May 25, preceding; died Nov. 8, 1755.
1755. Sir John Miller, bart.; admitted Nov. . . . , under patent in reversion, dated April 7, preceding.
1772. Montagu Burgoyne; by patent dated July 17. Surrendered (like the other chamberlain), Oct. 10, 1826.
- . The office of chamberlain was not afterwards filled up. See above.

THE COMPTROLLER-GENERAL.

ON the abolition of the offices of Auditor, the four Tellers, and Clerk of the Pells, the office of the COMPTROLLER-GENERAL of the EXCHEQUER was created, to perform the functions of the suppressed departments. The Comptroller holds by patent quam diu se bene gesserit, and is removable only on the joint address of both Houses of Parliament. He is thus rendered independent of the Executive Government, and enabled to exercise freely his judicial functions of considering the strict legality of every payment demanded by the Treasury for the public service. He is enabled to decide without appeal, and to reject, on his own responsibility, any warrant for issue which he considers to be illegal, though it may bear the royal sign-manual and the counter-signatures of the First Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. These duties are prescribed and defined by the act 4 William IV. cap. 15.¹ The following table will exhibit the saving effected by the creation of the office of Comptroller-General, which comprises the sub-departments of—1. Comptroller of Receipt and Expenditure; 2. Issue of Exchequer Bills; 3. Office of Weights and Measures.

COMPTROLLERS-GENERAL.

(Since the Creation of the Office, in 1834.)

1. Rt. hon. sir John Newport, formerly chancellor of the exchequer in Ireland. Date of patent, Oct. 11, 1834.
2. Rt. hon. Thomas Spring, lord Monteagle of Brandon, previously and consecutively under secretary of state for the home department, secretary to the treasury, secretary of state for the colonies, and chancellor of the exchequer; patent dated Sept. 9, 1839. The PRESENT (1851) Comptroller-General of the Exchequer.

THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

THE Master of the Rolls is an officer of high trust and dignity. He is called the Master of the Rolls from his having the custody of all inrolments of the Chancery of England, in which are recorded charters, patents, commissions, and other instruments under the Great Seal, together with deeds, recognisances, and other public documents, made on rolls of parchment. The mansion called the Roll's House, and the Roll's Chapel (which latter serves as a repository for these records) are situated in Chancery

Lane, London, and were anciently an hospital, founded for converted Jews; but after the expulsion of the Jews from England, it was annexed for ever to the office of the Master of the Rolls. Here are kept the inrolments since the beginning of the reign of King Richard III.; all prior to that period being kept in the Tower of London. The Master of the Rolls, by virtue of his office, keeps his court at the Rolls, where, and at Westminster, he hears and determines causes brought before him; but his decisions are appealable to the Lord High Chancellor. Although the Rolls of Chancery begin in the reign of King John, the first authentic appointment of a Keeper or Master appears to have been made in the 23rd year of Edward I., when Adam de Osgodeby had the custody of the Rolls of Chancery.¹ The Master of the Rolls ranks immediately after the lord chief justice of England.

Under statute 1st and 2d Victoria, cap. 94. (passed August 10, 1838), the Master of the Rolls is constituted Keeper of all the records in the Public Record Office, founded by that act.

VICE CHANCELLORS OF ENGLAND, AND VICE CHANCELLORS.

THE Vice Chancellor of England (a comparatively new equity judge) was created by the statute 53d George III., cap. 24, passed March 23, 1813, entitled "An Act to facilitate the Administration of Justice."¹ And by an act, 5th Victoria, cap. 5, passed October 5, 1841, two additional judges, each to be called "Vice Chancellor," as distinguished from the Vice Chancellor of England, were constituted to assist the Lord Chancellor, "to hear and determine all such causes depending in the Court of Chancery as the Lord Chancellor might direct." Upon the death of the late Vice Chancellor of England (Sir Lancelot Shadwell) the equity judgeship under that particular designation was not filled up; but owing to the immense accumulation of business in the Chancery courts latterly, a bill was brought into parliament in the present session

(1851), 14th Victoria, cap. 4, authorising the appointment of a third Vice Chancellor vice sir James Wigram. The Vice Chancellors rank immediately after the Chief Baron of the Exchequer: their precedency is fixed by statute 5th Victoria, cap. 5.

VICE CHANCELLORS OF ENGLAND.

REGENCY, AND KING GEORGE IV.	1827. Sir Anthony Hart. May 4: afterwards lord chancellor of Ireland.
1813. Sir Thomas Plumer. April 14: afterwards master of the rolls.	— Sir Lancelot Shadwell. Nov. 1. Died August 10, 1850.

VICE CHANCELLORS.

QUEEN VICTORIA.	1850. *Sir Robert Monsey Rolfe. Nov. 2. Created lord Cranworth.
1841. *James Lewis Knight Bruce; knighted in 1842; and	1851. George-James Turner, afterwards knight. April 2. [Those marked () are the PRESENT Vice-Chancellors.]
— James Wigram; also knighted in 1842. Retired.

MASTERS IN CHANCERY.

ALTHOUGH there can be no doubt that Masters in Chancery were established prior to the reign of Edward I., yet none of their appointments are recorded before the year 40th of Elizabeth, 1597: from that time to the present the series is quite perfect.

Including the Master of the Rolls, who is the chief, and the Accountant-General¹, there are now thirteen Masters in Chancery, their number was anciently limited to twelve; but by an act passed in the 5th year of the reign of her present majesty Queen Victoria, cap. 5. (passed October 5, 1841), to make further provision for the Administration of Justice, an additional Master was appointed. — *Hardy's Lord Chancellors.*²

THE PRESENT (1850) MASTERS IN CHANCERY.

Appointed.

1839. William Russell; Accountant-General.
 1824. James-William Farrer.
 1831. William Brougham.
 1836. Nassau William Senior.
 1839. Sir William Horne, knt.
 1840. Sir George Rose, knt.

Appointed.

1841. Richard Richards.
 1847. William-Henry Tinney.
 1848. Richard T. Kindersley.
 1849. John Elijah Blunt.
 1850. Joseph Humphry.

The office of Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery was created by statute 12th George I., cap. 32.² It has hitherto always been filled by one of the Masters; and although there is nothing in that statute which requires such a qualification, yet no person has been appointed to the office without having first become a Master in Chancery.

² The practice of selling Masterships in Chancery appears to have been at one time common. Among the articles of impeachment brought against the earl of Macclesfield (of which he was found guilty and adjudged to pay a fine of 30,000*l.*) was, "that he had appointed Masters in Chancery, extorting from them large sums of money, varying in amount from 800 to 6000 guineas; that he had connived at the payment of the purchase money out of the suitors' funds in their hands, and that inducements had thus been held out to needy persons to bid high for these places, seeing how easily they might pay the sums charged for them." On his lordship's trial, he was about to call witnesses to prove he had done no more than his predecessors had done, when lord Townsend exclaimed, "My lords, surely you will not suffer witnesses to be produced to show that this sort of corruption is hereditary." And a noble peer (lord King states) afterwards proposed a motion forbidding the sale of Masterships in chancery, which, upon a division, was negatived. By the above act, the improper use of the suitors' funds was for ever prohibited.

LAW OFFICERS OF THE CROWN.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

THE Attorney-General is an officer of great rank and dignity, and his office is esteemed the highest below the bench. It has subsisted for six hundred years, though not originally under its present designation. The appointment (which is by letters patent) was formerly held "quam diu se bene gesserit," but of later years it is conferred "durante bene placito," the holder of it retiring, on every change of administration, with his political friends.

The Attorney-General is the representative of his sovereign in the courts, and the chief legal adviser of the government in its various departments, when the exercise of great legal knowledge and competent counsel are required in the discharge of the functions of the state. He manages all suits for the crown, whether criminal or otherwise, especially treason; and files bills in the exchequer for any claims concerning royal rights, in inheritance or profit; and others may bring bills against the king's (or queen regnant's) attorney, in like manner.

As the public prosecutor in all cases that involve the public peace or that affect the security of the crown and the maintenance of the royal authority, he can move the courts at Westminster upon an ex officio information, without preferring an indictment or moving upon an affidavit, previously filed, for a criminal procedure. And in his place in parliament, the Attorney-General assists his ministerial colleagues by his construction of the law, answering all questions upon legal points, and vindicating the policy of the government in such measures as give rise to constitutional discussion.

THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

THE Solicitor-General is a high officer, next in rank to the Attorney-General, to whom he is second or deputy, performing in his absence or on a vacancy the entire duties of the superior functionary, as well in parliament as in the courts of law, and sharing upon all occasions in his official labours.

This office is also created by letters-patent, and is held on the same tenure as that of the Attorney-General. The honour of knighthood is now always conferred upon both the Attorney and Solicitor-General, and, together, they are usually styled the "Great Law Officers of the Crown."

Whenever the office of Attorney-General becomes vacant, either by death or the promotion to the bench of its previous occupant, the Solicitor-General almost invariably succeeds; and the two officers are, therefore, considered as certain steps to the highest professional honours in the state.

SERJEANTS-AT-LAW.

The Serjeants-at-Law are an ancient and high order of barristers from whom the judges are ordinarily chosen. By way of eminence they are called "Serjeants of the Coif," and the judges, when speaking to or of them, call them "Brothers."

The law judges, upon their appointment as such, and not being previously Serjeants, become Serjeants immediately before they take their seats upon the bench.

Formerly, Serjeants only were allowed to plead in the court of common pleas — an exclusive right enjoyed by them until the passing of the recent act, 9th and 10th Victoria, cap. 54 (August 18, 1846), when the privilege was extended to barristers of any degree practising in the superior courts at Westminster.

The coif¹, or hood, anciently of lawn, worn on the head by Serjeants, has latterly dwindled into a small circlet of black silk upon the top of the wig, of about three inches in diameter.

SERJEANTS-AT-LAW.

FROM THE RESTORATION OF CHARLES II. TO THE PRESENT TIME, 1850.

(Taken as they appear of record at the Rolls' offices.)

¹ Few men in those ages were learned in the laws except the clergy, who were bound by their order to shave their heads. The serjeant-counters, being originally part of this body, were of course obliged to follow the rule; but "for decency and comeliness," or rather, perhaps, for warmth, were by degrees allowed to cover their baldness with a coif. This was at first a thin linen cover gathered together in the form of a skull or helmet, the material being afterwards changed into white silk, and the form eventually into the black patch at the top of the forensic wig, which is now the distinguishing mark of the degree.—Foss.

KING'S (NOW QUEEN'S) COUNSEL.

A KING'S (NOW QUEEN'S) COUNSEL is a barrister usually supposed to be in the service of the Crown. He is appointed by the Crown, and sits within the Bar, wearing a robe of silk. He enjoys precedence and pre-audience over members of the Bar who do not hold this office, and his fees are generally of higher amount. The rank is rarely conferred upon Barristers of less than ten or twelve years' standing, though lord Erskine was honoured with the distinction when he had been only five years at the Bar; and many eminent lawyers have been obliged to wait for it as long as eighteen and twenty years. In some few instances, the honour has been withheld upon political grounds; a Barrister, confessedly entitled by his professional eminence to the emolument and distinction which the office confers, has had his claims postponed on the ground of his opposition to the minister of the day. This occurrence is rare, however, and shows that the official character of a Queen's Counsel is almost nominal, and in reality consists in its being a professional advancement. — Beatson. Dod.

PATENTS OF PRECEDENCE.

LETTERS-PATENT OF PRECEDENCE are usually granted to such barristers (either King's, now Queen's, Counsel or Serjeants) as the Crown thinks proper to honour with that mark of distinction, whereby they are entitled to such rank and pre-audience as are assigned in their respective patents; sometimes next after the King's Attorney-General, but usually after His Majesty's Counsel then being. They rank and sit with the King's Counsel within the bar of the respective courts, but receive no salaries, and are not sworn; and therefore are at liberty to be retained against the Crown. — Blackstone.

Throughout the numerous lists of Judicial personages, but one instance of suicide occurs. It is a very remarkable one, and is mentioned by lord Campbell. "Chief Justice Hankford (temp. Henry V.) notwithstanding his high position, became tired of life, and wished to shuffle off this mortal coil, but was afraid to commit suicide at a time when a verdict of felô de se always followed such an act, and the body of the delinquent was buried in cross roads with a stake thrust through it. By a novel expedient he hoped the forfeiture of his goods would be saved, and that his family would escape the anguish and shame arising from the belief that he had fallen by his own hand. Several of his deer having been stolen, he gave orders to his keepers to shoot any person they met with in or near the park at night who would not immediately stand when challenged. He then on a dark night threw himself in the keepers' way, and not answering when challenged, was shot dead upon the spot. The stump of an old oak under which he is said to have fallen, is still called 'Hankford's Oak.'" — Lord Campbell's Chief Justices of England.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

ECCLESIASTICAL Courts appear to have been instituted under the Anglo-Saxon government; but they became subject to more strict regulations, and their jurisdiction became more distinct and precise after the elevation of the first William to the English throne. Every prelate then had a regular court, in which he or his chancellor took cognizance of acts of impiety and breaches of morality, and decided religious, matrimonial, and testamentary causes. The highest court of this kind was the Court of Arches, so called from Bow church, in which it was holden. The judge was styled Principal Official to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and was not always the same person with the Dean of the Arches, who was, properly, the vicar or deputy of the former. The advocates and procurators belonging to this court were appointed by the primate, and the proceedings were regulated by the civil and canon laws.

For a long course of years the individuals of this profession, not forming a distinct society, were mingled with the mass of the people. But about the beginning of the reign of the eighth Henry, Dr. Richard Bodewell, dean of the arches, and other civilians and canonists who had been admitted to the privilege of pleading in the court, formed a plan of association, and agreed to dwell in contiguous houses and enjoy a community of board. The respectability of this society induced many dignitaries of the church and laymen of distinction to enrol themselves among its members, and on the payment of a small annual sum they had the privilege of college commons. The dean, by virtue of his office, became the president of the society, which was by him denominated the "College of Doctors and Advocates of the Court of Arches."¹

For more than fifty years after this voluntary incorporation we find no record of the particular spot which the members occupied; but in February, 1568, Dr. Henry Hervie, dean of the arches and master of Trinity Hall (a seminary founded at Cambridge chiefly for the study of the civil and canon laws) procured from the dean and chapter of the diocese of London a lease of Montjoy House and other buildings in the parish of St. Benet, Paul's Wharf, for the accommodation of the society.² The court over which he presided, the prerogative court of Canterbury, that of the bishop of London, and also the court of admiralty (except for criminal cases) were thenceforward holden in the buildings thus assigned, and the whole place, for an obvious reason, received the appellation of "Doctors' Commons."

For upwards of two centuries the united advocates continued to hold their lease from the master and fellows of Trinity Hall. The latter then relinquished the connexion by a surrender of their lease to the dean and canons of St. Paul's, with whom the college of doctors, enriched by a royal grant of 3000*l.* out of the droits of admiralty, entered into an agreement to purchase the estate in perpetuity.

When episcopal jurisdiction was suppressed by parliamentary usurpers, the spiritual courts felt a rude shock, and the loyal advocates were discountenanced and harassed; but the society still existed, though various intruders were commissioned by the ruling powers to act as judges. The return of Charles II., however, re-established the former society in its integrity.

As the great fire in 1666 extended its ravages to the habitations of the civilians, they held their courts at Exeter House, in the Strand, until 1672, when they returned to Doctors' Commons, their collegiate mansion being then completely rebuilt. The society was incorporated by charter in June, 1768, and styled "The College of

² In imitation of collegiate manners, it was provided, that though married doctors might be indulged with the liberty of residing in the chambers or tenements of the college, none of their wives should reside or abide there.—Ibid.

CHIEF CORPORATE OFFICERS OF LONDON.

THE RECORDER OF LONDON.

THE Recorder of London is the principal legal officer of the corporation, and is always a barrister of eminence, and is appointed for life by the Court of Aldermen. Both the Recorder and Common Serjeant sit as judges in the trial of criminal offences committed within the city, and such other parts of the surrounding neighbourhood as come within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court. Many of the Recorders of London have subsequently become judges of our superior courts of law, and several of them, chief justices of England, and lord chancellors. Sir Henry Montagu, Recorder in 1603, was created viscount Mandeville, and made lord high treasurer, in 1620.

The fee of the Recorder of London was, in the reign of Edward I., only "Ten pounds sterling by the year, and 20*l.* for each charter written and each testament enrolled." His annual stipend has gradually increased, and is now 2500*l.* sterling per annum. — Allen. 1828.

¹ Sir William Thompson retained the office of recorder with that of solicitor-general, and also continued recorder (acting by a deputy) when a baron of the exchequer.

LORD MAYOR OF LONDON.

THIS, the chief magistrate of London, is the Queen's representative in the civil government of the city. At first, the Mayor was chosen for life; and afterwards for periods of irregular duration: now, he is chosen annually, but is capable of re-election. He must be an alderman, and must have previously filled the office of sheriff. Those freemen who have been admitted into the livery of their respective companies are the electors of the Lord Mayor; they choose two persons from amongst the aldermen, and the court of aldermen confer the dignity on whichever of the two they please. The practice, however, is for the livery to return the aldermen in rotation, and of these the court chooses the senior; but instances are not wanting in which this course has been varied, for the purpose of excluding some individual on whom the rotation of seniority would have otherwise conferred the office. The 29th of September is the day of election; and between that period and the 9th of November, when he enters on his duties, he is styled the Lord Mayor Elect.

THE COMMON SERJEANT OF LONDON.

THE Common Serjeant is a legal officer of the corporation, and sits as a judge in the trial of criminal offences. He attends the lord mayor and court of aldermen on court days, and acts in council with them upon all occasions, within and without the precincts of the liberties of the city. It is also a part of his duty to attend the meetings of the liberty at large when assembled in the common hall. He also attends the court of aldermen and common council. Formerly, he had the care of the Orphans' Estates, taking care of them to the best of his judgment and their best advantage; but this portion of his duty is now become obsolete. — Allen.

THE CHAMBERLAIN OF LONDON.

THIS is an officer of considerable trust, and although he is annually chosen on Michaelmas-day, yet he continues in office during life. As treasurer of the corporation, he has the receipt of all their rents and other revenues, and the payment of all salaries, charges, and other outgoings; as also the custody of all the accounts of that body, and keeps all the records concerning freemen. He holds the judicial power of admission to the freedom of the city. — Allen.

Lord Macartney ²	{ Appointed by the court to succeed Mr. Hastings. Feb. 17, 1785.	Declined the office.

¹ Mr. Holwell was one of the 146 British gentlemen, merchants, and others, in the service of the East India Company, who were seized by order of the nabob, Surajah Dowlah, and thrust into a dungeon called the "Black-hole," in the fort of Calcutta, by his soldiers, on the fatal night of June 20, 1756, and was one of the very few who came forth alive. The soldiers saw that the place was too small for such a number, but were afraid to awaken the nabob, then asleep, for further orders. One hundred and twenty-three of the sufferers died before morning, having been suffocated by the heat, crushing, and stench of a dungeon only eighteen feet square. Calcutta was re-ruken next year, and the nabob was deposed and put to death by his successor.—Holwell's India Tracts.

² His lordship was advised of his appointment before he left India, but he declined it, and on his arrival at Deal, he addressed the court under date of Jan. 8, 1786, stating his reasons for not accepting the government, observing, also, that Mr. Macpherson had already succeeded to Mr. Hastings. Lord Macartney had been previously, as will be seen, governor of Madras.—Official Records.

William, lord (afterwards earl) Amherst.	Oct. 23, 1822	Aug. 1, 1823	March 10, 1828.
Hon. William Butterworth Bayley.	Succeeded, provisionally, as senior councillor.	March 13, 1828	July 4, 1828.
Lord William Cavendish Bentinck.	July 18, 1827	July 4, 1828	See below.

* * By an act, passed August 28, 1833 (3rd and 4th William IV., cap. 85.), it was declared that the supreme direction and controul of the whole of the civil and military government of all the territories and revenues in India, should be vested in a governor-general and council, to be styled the governor-general of India in council. And it was further declared, that the personage who should be governor-general of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal² on the 22nd day of April 1834, should be the first governor-general of India, under said act.

² The governor-general of Bengal, as head of the chief presidency, has been usually denominated "Governor-General," Madras, Bombay, &c., being subject to his supreme controul; but it was not until the passing of this comparatively recent act, that the "Governor-General of India," actually so constituted, existed as well in name, as in authority.

	Appointed by the Court.	Assumption of government.	Time of quitting.

		The PRESENT (1851) Commander-in-Chief.

¹ The learned, pious, and gifted prelate, so distinguished in literature, and revered for his goodness and virtues. His collection of ancient and modern history in relation to Scythia; his Life of Jeremy Taylor; his beautiful and classic Poems; and posthumous work, a Narrative of a Journey through the Upper Provinces of India, evince his profound research, the exquisite refinement of his mind, and his devotion to his ministry. The first bishop of Calcutta, Dr. Middleton, was scarcely less distinguished as a scholar and divine.

² England, it has been said, has been supremely happy in the choice of her India bishops. They have all been men of the profoundest learning, the most varied talents, and, as prelates, of most exemplary piety. Dr. James succeeded bishop Heber at Calcutta. He had early been a traveller through the whole north of Europe, and visited various parts of Italy, previous to his taking holy orders, to study the works of art in that country, and to enrich his own by beautiful sketches and illustrations, engraved and coloured by himself. In 1827 he embarked for India, being one of the most gifted persons in every sense that had ever left his country on a sacred ministry. The insalubrity of the climate, however, and the fatigues of his episcopal duties, proved too much for his constitution, and he died in two years afterwards. His successor, the enlightened Dr. Turner, it will be seen, died also very early in his prelacy.

ADMIRALS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

(From the Restoration to the present time.)

* * * THE DATES REFER TO THE TIME WHEN THE OFFICERS WERE RESPECTIVELY PROMOTED TO THE RANK OF REAR-ADMIRAL.

GEORGE MONK, afterwards duke of Albemarle: he was the happy means of restoring the king to his dominions; was commander-in-chief of the fleet, and fought many battles with the Dutch.

PRINCE RUPERT, duke of Cumberland, nephew to the king: acted as an admiral against the Dutch, and behaved with great bravery.

SIR JOHN LAWSON, knt.: died of the wounds he received in a sea-fight with the Dutch, off Lowestoff, in 1665.

EDWARD, earl of SANDWICH: fought gallantly against the Dutch; he was killed in the obstinate battle of Southwold Bay, May 28, 1672.

Sir Richard Stayner, knt.

1661.

SIR ROBERT HOLMES: destroyed the Dutch magazines in the island of Vlie, and a large fleet of merchant-ships, and burnt some ships of war.

SIR THOMAS ALLEN, knt.: took part of the Dutch Smyrna fleet, killed Van Brakett, there commodore, and drove the remainder into Cadiz; contributed greatly towards defeating the Dutch off the North Foreland, July 25, 1666.

SIR WILLIAM PENN: first captain of the fleet under the duke of York.

1665.

ROBERT SAMPSON: killed in the sea-fight with the Dutch off Lowestoff.

SIR THOMAS TYDDIMAN, knt.: attacked the Dutch fleet in the port of Bergen, in Norway, and was repulsed.

SIR GEORGE AYSOUE, knt., admiral of the white: had his flag on board of the Royal Prince, then the finest ship in the world; fought with great bravery in the sea-fight off the coast of Sussex, June 1, 1666; his ship being disabled, ran on the Galloper sand-bank, and was burnt, and he and crew were made prisoners.

SIR WILLIAM BERKELEY, knt., vice-admiral of the white: killed in the above sea-fight, June 1, 1666.

SIR JOSEPH JORDAN, knt.: behaved with great bravery in many sea-fights, particularly in the battle of Solebay, May 9, 1672.

SIR CHRISTOPHER MIMMS, knt.: killed in the great sea-fight, June 1, 1666.

SIR JOHN HERMAN, knt.: commanded in the West Indies; defeated and destroyed a superior fleet of the Dutch and French, and burnt the French admiral's ship, 1667.

SIR JEREMIAH SMITH, knt.: fought with great bravery in the sea-fights against the Dutch.

1666.

SIR EDWARD SPRAGGS, knt.: chastised the Algerines in 1670; drowned in a sea-fight off the coast of Holland, Aug. 11, 1673.

SIR WILLIAM JENNINGS, knt.: second in command to sir Robert Holmes at the attack on the island of Vlie: went with king James to France. Robert Utber (Uthurt?) died in 1699.

SIR JOHN KEMPTHORNE: knighted for burning an Algerine fleet; behaved with great bravery in several sea-fights in the Dutch wars.

1670.

THOMAS, earl of OSSORY, son to the duke of Ormond: distinguished himself in a sea-fight off the coast of Holland, May 19, 1673, and in another, Aug. 11, same year.

SIR FRETCHVILLE HOLLES, knt., rear-admiral: killed on board the Cambridge, in the battle of Solebay, May 1672.

SIR JOHN CHICHELEY, knt.: was a commissioner for the office of master of the ordnance. Lord of the admiralty in 1682.

1675.

SIR JOHN NARBOROUGH, knt.: chastised the piratical states of Barbary, and obliged them to sue for peace.

1683.

GEORGE, lord DARTMOUTH: captain of the Royal Catharine in 1672, and commanded the king's fleet in 1688; was prevented, by contrary winds, from attacking the prince of Orange's fleet. After the revolution, was committed prisoner to the Tower, where he died.

William Davies.

SIR JOHN BERRY: knighted by Charles II. for his bravery on board the Resolution, in 1672. Was an admiral at La Hogue, where he behaved with great courage.

SIR ROGER STRICKLAND, knt.: in 1688, the sailors refused to serve under his command, he being a papist, and had nearly thrown his priests overboard.

1688.

ARTHUR HERRERT, afterwards earl of Torrington: dismissed the service by king James; commanded the Dutch fleet that conveyed the prince of Orange to England in 1688; lost the king's favour after the battle off Beachy Head.

SIR RICHARD HADDOCK, knt.: comptroller of the navy: died in 1714.

John, lord Berkeley of Stratton: died in 1697.

Henry Killigrew: was an admiral at the battle of La Hogue; a lord of the admiralty, 1693.

1690.

EDWARD RUSSELL, afterwards earl of Orford, &c.: defeated the French fleet under M. de Tourville, off Cape La Hogue; was long first lord of the admiralty.

Sir Cloudesley Shovel: knighted by king William for his bravery in the battle of Bantry Bay, when captain of the Edgar; was rear-admiral of England, commander in chief of the fleet, and a lord of the admiralty. He commanded at the siege of Toulon, in 1707; and on his return from that expedition in the Association, struck on the Bishop-and-Clerks rocks, Scilly, and was lost, October 27, 1707.

Sir Ralph Delaval, knt.: an admiral at the battle off La Hogue; and a lord of the admiralty, 1693.

Sir John Ashby: knighted by king William for his bravery in the Defiance, at the battle of Bantry Bay; was an admiral at the battle off La Hogue.

Sir George Rooke: knighted by king William, and by queen Anne was made vice-admiral of England, and admiral of the fleet. He commanded the fleet against Cadiz, took Vigo, and destroyed the galleons, 1702; commanded the fleet at the taking of Gibraltar, 1704; and the beating of the compte de Thoulouse off Malaga, the same year. Was a lord of the admiralty in 1702: died in 1709.

RICHARD CARTER: killed at the battle off La Hogue, May 19, 1692.

Matthew Aylmer, afterwards lord Aylmer, in Ireland: a lord of the admiralty, and rear-admiral of Great Britain: died in 1720.

Sir David Mitchell, knt.: died in 1710.

1692.

Sir FRANCIS WHEELER, knt.: drowned in 1694, in the Sussex, going to the Mediterranean; only two men saved.

Hon. Edward Nevill, brother to lord Abergavenny.

1693.

Sir THOMAS HOPSON: knighted by queen Anne for his intrepidity at Vigo, 1702: died in 1717.

1694.

JOHN BENBOW: died in Oct. 1702, at Jamaica, of the wounds he received in an engagement with M. du Casse, in the West Indies, off the high land of St. Martha¹, Aug. 19, 1702.

Peregrine, marquess of Carmarthen, afterwards duke of Leeds: commanded the fleet, or expedition, against Brest.

George Meeze.

1698.

Sir JOHN MUNDEN: knighted by Charles II. for retaking the island of St. Helena.

1701.

GEORGE CHURCHILL: brother to the duke of Marlborough; also a lord of the admiralty.

Sir Stafford Fairborne: knighted for his bravery in the battle off Malaga; was one of the council to prince George of Denmark.

1702.

JOHN GRAYDON: dismissed the service for misconduct in the West Indies.

Sir William Whestone: knighted by queen Anne: dismissed in 1706.

1703.

Sir JOHN LEAKE, knt.: was captain of the Eagle in the battle off La Hogue. In 1704 he was knighted by the lord high admiral; and same year sent to the Mediterranean, and had his share in the taking of Gibraltar, and the sea-fight off Malaga. He relieved Gibraltar when besieged; destroyed great part of M. Pointis's squadron; and performed other important services in these seas. He was rear-admiral of Great Britain, and made commissioner of the admiralty. From both he was removed, and had a pension of 600*l*. a year: died in 1720.

Sir George Byng, knt., afterwards viscount Torrington: on every service he was employed in he displayed great courage and conduct. He totally defeated the Spanish fleet of 27 sail, off Messina, in Sicily, in 1718; and on his return was raised to the peerage. He was rear-admiral of Great Britain, and first lord of the admiralty.

Sir Thomas Dilkes, knt.: died in 1707.

Basil Beaumont: drowned in the great storm of 1704, on board the Mary, in the Downs.

Sir James Wishart: knighted by queen Anne: dismissed in 1715.

1705.

Sir JOHN JENNINGS: knighted by queen Anne for his bravery in the battle off Malaga, 1704; was entrusted with several important commands, in which he acquitted himself with great honour; was rear-admiral of Great Britain in 1732: died in 1745.

Charles, earl of Peterborough and Monmouth: was likewise captain-general of the land forces in Spain, and general of the marines.

Sir Edward Whitaker: knighted by queen Anne: dismissed in 1715.

1706.

Sir JOHN NORRIS, knt.: served long, and with great reputation; knighted by queen Anne; commanded the fleet in the Baltic; and was employed in a public character to the Czar: a lord of the admiralty, and admiral of the fleet: died in 1749.

1707.

JAMES, viscount DURSLEY, afterwards earl of Berkeley: served with great honour to himself, and service to his country, for many years.

¹ In the engagement the other ships of admiral Benbow's squadron, falling astern, left this brave commander alone to maintain the unequal battle. In this situation a chain-shot shattered his leg; yet he would not be removed from the quarter-deck, but continued fighting till the morning, when the French sheered off. He died in October following, of his wounds, at Jamaica, where, soon after his arrival, he received a letter from the French admiral, of which the following is a literal translation:—

“SIR, — I had little hopes on Monday last, but to have supped in your cabin; yet it pleased God to order it otherwise. I am thankful for it. As for those cowardly captains who deserted you, hang them up, for by God they deserve it.

“Carthagena, August 22, 1702.

DU CASSE.”

Two of these unworthy cowards, captains Kirby and Wade, were shot on their arrival at Plymouth, having been previously tried by a court-martial.

Was vice-admiral of Great Britain, and first lord of the admiralty: died in 1736.

1708.

JOHN BAKER: died in 1716.

James Littleton: died in 1722.

Sir Charles Wager, knt.: knighted by queen Anne for his gallant behaviour in the West Indies, in attacking, taking one, and destroying some rich galleons; he was treasurer of the navy, and first lord of the admiralty: died in 1743.

1710.

Sir HOVENDEN WALKER: knighted by queen Anne in 1711; commanded the sea-forces in the expedition against Quebec; on his return, his ship, the Edgar, of 76 guns, blew up at Spithead, and all on board perished: the officers were mostly on shore. He was dismissed in 1715: died in 1725.

Sir Thomas Hardy: knighted by queen Anne for his bravery at Vigo: died in 1732.

CHARLES CORNEWALL: died in this year.

George Delaval: killed by a fall from his horse in 1723.

James Mighells: resigned, to be a commissioner of the navy.

1722.

FRANCIS HOSIER: died in 1727, on board the Breda, off Vera Cruz, of a broken heart.

1723.

Sir GEORGE WALTON: knighted for his gallant behaviour, while captain of the Canterbury, in a battle off Messina.¹ Resigned on a pension of 600*l.* a year.

Charles Strickland: died in 1724.

1727.

SALMON MAURICE: resigned in 1734, on a pension: died in 1741.

Robert Hughes: died in 1728.

Edward Hopson: died in 1728, on board the Leopard, under his command, off the Grand Bar, West Indies.

Philip Cavendish: became a lord of the admiralty: died in 1743.

Sir John Balchan, knt.: after a long and meritorious service, he was lost in the Victory, in a violent storm, near the race of Alderney, Oct. 8, 1744: the whole crew, consisting of 1000 men, perished.

Edward St. Loe: died at his command in the West Indies in 1729.

Hon. Charles Stewart, son to viscount Mountjoy: lost an arm whilst a captain: died in 1740.

Thomas Matthews: after a long and distinguished service, was dismissed by the sentence of a court-martial, for misconduct (while commander-in-chief of the fleet in the Mediterranean) in an attack on the combined fleets of France and Spain, off Toulon, in Feb. 1744: died in 1748.

Sir George Saunders, knt.: was sir George

Byng's captain in the battle off Messina; knighted in 1720; made a commissioner of the navy: died in 1734.

1734.

NICHOLAS HADDOCK: died in 1746.

Sir Tancred Robinson, bart.: resigned in 1741: died in 1754.

George, lord Forbes, afterwards earl of Granard: quitted the service; made governor of the Leeward islands: died in 1765.

John Hagar: resigned in 1748.

1739.

EDWARD VERNON: did great service in the West Indies by taking Porto Bello, Chagrev &c.; but, by his disagreement with the commander of the land forces, the expedition against Carthage failed. He commanded in the Downs in 1745; and next year was dismissed the service by his majesty's command, for writing two pamphlets, by which the secretary of state's and secretary of the admiralty's letters were made known: died in 1757.

1740.

Sir CHALONER OGLE: knighted for taking Roberts, the pirate, on the coast of Africa, in 1722; made admiral of the fleet: died in 1751.

1743.

JAMES STEWART: appointed admiral of the fleet in 1751: died in 1757.

Richard Lestock: suspended in his command in the Mediterranean by admiral Matthews for misconduct; but was tried and acquitted.

Sir Charles Hardy: knighted in 1742; a lord of the admiralty: died in 1744.

Thomas Davers: died in his command in the West Indies in 1747.

Hon. George Clinton, son to the earl of Lincoln: made governor of New York in 1742: died in 1761.

Sir William Rowley, K.B.: distinguished himself greatly in the sea-fight off Toulon, in Feb. 1744; a lord of the admiralty in 1751; admiral of the fleet 1762: died in 1768.

WILLIAM MARTIN: died in 1756.

Isaac Townshend: commanded at the Leeward islands, and drove a French fleet ashore on Martinique in 1746; governor of Greenwich hospital: died in 1765.

Henry Medley: died in Vado hay, on board the Russell, in 1746, while commanding in the Mediterranean.

Lord Vere Beauclerk, afterwards Lord Vere: a lord of the admiralty; quitted the service: died in 1781.

George Anson, afterwards lord Anson: went to the South seas as commodore, where he performed great services, and captured the celebrated galleon. In May 1747 he took six French ships of war, and was raised to the peerage same year. This illustrious seaman made the well-known voyage round the world.

¹ The letter he sent to sir George Byng, after performing this service, is justly considered as a curiosity.

“Canterbury, off Syracuse, August 16, 1718
“Sir,— We have taken and destroyed all the Spanish ships and vessels which were upon the coast. The number as per margin. And I am, &c.
G. WALTON.”

He was first lord of the admiralty in 1751, and admiral of the fleet in 1761: died in 1762.

1745.

Sir PETER WARREN, K. B.: took Louisburg, while commodore, in 1745; distinguished himself greatly in the sea-fight off Cape Finisterre, in May 1747: died in 1752.

Hon. John Byng: shot by the sentence of a court-martial, on board the Monarch, at Portsmouth, March 14, 1757, for an error in judgment (for they acquitted him of cowardice or disaffection) in an engagement with the enemy off Minorca¹, May 20, 1756.

Henry Osborne: behaved with great bravery in many actions; took commodore M. du Quesne in the Foudroyant, in 1758; vice-admiral of Great Britain in 1763: died in 1771.

Hon. Fitzroy Henry Lee, son to the earl of Lichfield: died in 1752.

Thomas Smith: called by the seamen, "Tom of Ten Thousand;" when a lieutenant, was broke, on a complaint of the French ambassador, for obliging a French ship of war to lower her topsails to his ship at Spithead; but by the king's order was the next day made a captain: died in 1762.

Thomas Griffin: broke for misconduct, while he commanded in the East Indies; restored again: died in 1771.

1747.

Sir EDWARD HAWKE, K. B., afterwards lord Hawke: greatly distinguished himself in the Berwick, in the sea-fight off Toulon, in Feb. 1744, by taking the Podor of 60 guns. In Oct. 1747, he captured six large French ships of war; in 1758, drove seven French ships of the line ashore at the mouth of the Charente; and in Nov. 1759, defeated the French fleet under M. Conflans. In 1766 was made first lord of the admiralty; resigned 1771: died in 1781.

William Chambers: died in 1753.

Sir Charles Knowles, bart.: commanded at Jamaica in 1747, and beat the Spanish fleet, under admiral Reggio, near the Havannah, in 1748. Rear-admiral of England in 1765. Went into the Russian service, but returned again: died in 1777.

Hon. John Forbes: displayed great courage on many occasions; was several years a lord of the admiralty; made general of marines in 1762; and admiral of the fleet in 1781.

Hon. Edward Boscawen, son of viscount Falmouth: greatly distinguished himself in the Namur, in May 1747, in which action he was wounded; commanded in the North American sea in 1755, and took two French ships of the line; commanded, in 1758, the fleet at the taking of Louisburg, where the French navy sustained a severe blow; and in 1759 defeated the French fleet under Mons. de la Clue, off Cape

Lagos, taking three, and destroying two French ships of the line. In 1760 he was made general of marines; and was a lord of the admiralty from 1751 to his death in 1761.

Robert Mitchell: died before 1758.

Charles Watson: having greatly signalised himself as a captain, was, in 1754, sent to the East Indies; he destroyed Angria, the pirate, re-took Calcutta, captured Chandernagore, &c.: died in 1757.

1755.

TEMPLE WEST: a lord of the admiralty: died in 1757.

Sir George Pocock, K. B.: commanded the fleet in the East Indies from 1757 to 1760; during which time he vanquished the enemy in three different engagements with an inferior force; commanded the fleet in the West Indies in 1762, and aided in the capture of the Havannah; resigned in 1766: died in 1792.

Made lieutenant-general of marines in 1760; a lord of the admiralty in 1765; and first lord of the admiralty in 1766: died Dec. 1775.

¹ Though Voltaire affects to be witty upon the fate of this unfortunate officer, observing that he was shot "pour encourager les autres," the nation has long been satisfied that his life was sacrificed to the political fervour of the times. The following inscription to his memory is in the church of South-Hill, Bedfordshire, the seat of the Torrington family:—

TO THE PERPETUAL DISGRACE OF PUBLIC JUSTICE, THE HONOURABLE JOHN BYNG FELL A MARTYR TO POLITICAL PERSECUTION, MARCH 14, 1757;
WHEN BRAVERY AND LOYALTY WERE INEFFECTIVE SECURITIES FOR THE LIFE AND HONOUR OF A NAVAL OFFICER.

The ministry of the day took advantage of the admiral's unpopularity, and though the court which condemned him recommended him to mercy, they suffered the sentence to be carried into effect.

1758.

Sir THOMAS PYE: knighted by the king at Portsmouth in 1773; made a lieutenant-general of marines in 1781: died March 1785.

Charles Stevens: went out commodore to the East Indies, where he fought with great bravery under admiral Pocock; commanded the fleet at the taking of Pondichery in Jan. 1761: died in 1761.

Philip Durell: commodore to Louisburg in 1758, and to Quebec in 1759: died at his command at Halifax, Sept. 1766.

Charles Holmes: fought many gallant battles before he was promoted to a flag. In 1758 he forced the French and Austrian garrison to abandon the city of Embden; was at Quebec in 1759; sent to command at Jamaica in 1760; and died there in 1761.

Sir Samuel Cornish, bart.: commanded the fleet at the reduction of Manilla in 1762: died in 1770.

Sir Francis Geary, bart.: had the command of the grand fleet in 1780: died in 1796.

1759.

SMITH CALLIS: made a post-captain, and had a gold medal given him by George II. for burning five Spanish galleys in the port of Tropez: died in 1761.

Sir George Brydges Rodney: behaved with great bravery in the Eagle in Oct. 1747; bombarded Havre de Grace in 1759; commanded the fleet at the capture of Martinico, Grenada, &c., in 1762; sent to command at Jamaica in 1770, and at the Leeward islands in 1780: on his way out he captured the Caracca fleet, not one escaping; a few days afterwards he defeated the Spanish admiral, Langara, made him prisoner, and took, destroyed, and dispersed his fleet. Relieved Gibraltar, and proceeded to the West Indies, where he fought several desperate battles with the French. Captured St. Eustatia, and all the Dutch islands, in 1781. Came home, and was sent out to the West Indies again in 1782; and on the 12th of April in that year he defeated a large fleet of French ships of war, making the comte de Grasse the commander, prisoner. For this he was raised to the peerage, and made vice-admiral of Great Britain; and, in 1783, got a pension of 2000*l.* a-year: died in 1792.

1761.

H. R. H. Prince EDWARD-AUGUSTUS, duke of YORK: was a midshipman at the taking of Cherbourg, and the defeat at St. Cas in 1758. Made captain of the Phoenix of 44 guns, June 14, 1759; rear-admiral of the blue, April 8, 1761; vice of the blue in 1762. He died at Monaco, in Italy, Sept. 14, 1767.

1762.

Sir WILLIAM BURNABY, knt. and bart.: commanded at Jamaica in 1771: died in 1776.

James Young: destroyed some French ships at Newfoundland, when he commanded the Kinsale of 40 guns, and had a broad pendant in the glorious battle off Belleisle, Nov. 20, 1759: died Jan. 1789.

Sir Piercy Brett, knt.: one of lord Anson's lieutenants; he greatly distinguished himself, when captain of the Lion, in 1745: was a lord of the admiralty: died in 1781.

Sir John Moore, K.B. and bart.: commanded the fleet at the taking of Guadaloupe in 1759: died in 1779.

Richard Tyrrell: behaved gallantly, when captain of the Buckingham of 70 guns, in an action with a French ship of 74 guns, and two large frigates, in the West Indies, in 1758, in which he was badly wounded in the right hand; he commanded in the West Indies in 1763: died, on his passage home, in 1765.

Alexander Colville, lord Colville: retook Newfoundland in 1762: died in 1779.

Sir James Douglas: knighted for bringing home the news of the surrender of Quebec in 1759; commanded the fleet at the Leeward islands in 1761; had a broad pendant at the siege of Martinico in 1762; and was created a baronet in June 1786: died the next year.

Sir John Bentley: knighted for his bravery in the Warspite, off Cape Lagos, in 1759: died in 1770.

William Gordon: died in 1768.

George Edgcumbe, lord Edgcumbe, afterwards viscount Mount Edgcumbe and Valletort: displayed great courage when in command of the Lancaster, in May 1756; and was sent home with the news of the surrender of Cape Breton in 1758: died in 1785.

Robert Swanton: commodore at the taking of Martinico, &c., in 1762: died Aug. 1765.

Samuel Graves: commanded the fleet in North America in 1775: died in 1787.

William Parry: commanded at Jamaica in 1767: died April 1779.

Hon. Augustus Keppel, afterwards viscount Keppel: a midshipman at the taking of Paita, where he was slightly wounded; was commodore on the coast of Africa; in January 1759 took Goree; and behaved with great courage in the Torbay, in the sea-fight off Belleisle, Nov. 20, 1759. In 1761 he commanded the fleet at the siege of Belleisle; in 1762 went out commodore under sir George Pocock to the Havannah; and commanded the grand fleet in 1778. Sir HORATIO NELSON, afterwards lord and viscount Nelson, and duke of Bronte.¹ His brilliant achievements are too many for record here. Severely wounded and lost the sight of his right eye, at Calvi, 1794. Lost his right arm at Teneriffe, 1797. Signally defeated the French fleet in Aboukir Bay (battle of the Nile) Aug. 1, 1798, when, of the enemies' 13 ships, nine were taken, two were burnt, and two escaped: this victory raised him to the peerage. Second in command at Copenhagen, where, after a great battle, of 23 ships composing the enemy's force, 18 were taken or destroyed, April 2, 1801: for this victory he obtained the rank of viscount. Totally defeated the combined fleets of France and Spain off Cape Trafalgar, Oct. 21, 1805.² Of 33 sail of the enemy's ships, 20 were taken, sunk, or destroyed, and the French commander-in-chief (admiral Villeneuve) and two Spanish admirals were made prisoners; but the illustrious hero himself fell in the battle: and vice-admiral Collingwood succeeded to the command.

¹ This rank was conferred upon him (with a fief of the duchy annexed thereto) by the king of the Two Sicilies, in reward for the protection his fleet afforded to his dominions. The meaning of the title rendered it peculiarly appropriate. Bronte is the Greek word for thunder. The name of Cyclops, who is represented in poetic fable as forging the thunder of Jupiter, was Brontes; his residence was, of course, at Ætna, in the island of Sicily.

² Just before entering into the battle, the signal "England expects every man to do his duty," floated at the mast-head of the Victory, his flag-ship in the battle. The Victory afterwards brought home his remains, and it is still kept in fine preservation at Portsmouth, where it is the flag-ship in ordinary.

¹ These exploits would fill several pages of this volume. The name of Sir Sidney Smith was long a terror to the French. In April 1796 he was taken prisoner in an attempt to cut out a ship at Havre de Grace, and was confined two years in the Temple, whence he mysteriously escaped. An order of the minister of the day was forged, directing the gaoler of the Temple to deliver to the earl the chevalier Sidney Smith, for the purpose of transferring him to another prison; and having thus far succeeded, he and his friend in the secret passed by means of false passports to Rouen, and thence in an open boat to the channel, where they were taken up by the Argo frigate, which soon landed them at Portsmouth. It is asserted, however, by Captain Brenton, in his Naval History, that this escape had been connived at by the French authorities, and that perhaps even Sir Sidney Smith himself was ignorant of the fact at the time. At the close of the war he was rewarded with a pension of 1000*l.* per annum.

¹ It was at Teneriffe, and immediately after captain Fremantle had received his wound, that the heroic Nelson also was shot in the arm, which he ultimately lost. The following, addressed to the lady of his friend (who was on board with her husband at the time he wrote), has been preserved, as being

The first letter written by NELSON with his left hand.

"MY DEAR MRS. FREMANTLE. — Tell me how Tom is? I hope he has saved his arm. Mine is off; but, thank God! I am as well as I hope he is. Ever yours, HORATIO NELSON."

² The French admiral (Brueys) fought his ship, refusing to surrender, until he was cut in two by a cannon ball. The officers and crew, when the fire burst forth, jumped overboard to avoid the explosion expected every moment. Some supported themselves on pieces of wreck; others swam to their British enemies, and were saved; but nearly one thousand perished. On the explosion taking place, a terrific sound prevailed over the roar of the guns in action, and an earthquake-like motion was felt to the bottom of every ship, while men and burning matter descended in a shower on the decks and rigging of the fleets engaged in the deadly battle. Captain Hallowell afterwards presented lord Nelson with a coffin made from the wreck, accompanied by the following letter:—

"MY LORD,— I present to you a coffin, made from the mahmst of L'Orient, that when you have finished your glorious career in this world, you may be buried in one of your own trophies. But that that period may be far distant, is the earnest wish of your sincere friend, BENJAMIN HALLOWELL."

The glorious hero accepted this strange present, and had it placed upright, with the lid on, against the bulkhead of his cabin in the Vanguard, immediately behind the chair on which he sat at dinner. At length he was prevailed upon, by the importunities of an old and faithful servant, to allow it to be carried below.

June 4, 1814.

Hon. sir HENRY HOTHAM, K.C.B.: commanded the Revolutionnaire frigate in sir Richard Strachan's capture of four French sail of the line, Nov. 4, 1805. Served on the coast of Spain in 1810, and during the struggle of the Patriots. In the Northumberland, 74, had a brilliant affair off L'Orient, which ended in the destruction of L'Ariane and Andromache, each of 44 guns, and the Manebuke, 18 guns, laden with the spoils of 36 vessels they had captured, May 22, 1812. Afterwards captain of the fleet under sir A. Cochrane, on the American station; and commander of a division of the Channel fleet in 1815: died in 1833.

Sir George Burlington, K.C.B.: commanded the Lively frigate at the capture of Tourterelle, March 1795; and the Resolution ship of the line at the destruction of the French fleet in Basque Roads, April 1809: died soon after his obtaining rear-admiral's rank in the East Indies.

Charles Dudley Pater: died Feb. 1818.

Sir Home Riggs Popham, K.C.B. At the commencement of the war with France, rendered great services to the duke of York in Holland: in 1800 had a command in the East Indies;

² In the Medusa frigate he captured the Santa Brigida, and her consort, treasure ships, Oct. 1799; his share of the prize-money, as captain, amounted to 40,731*l.* He also took, successively, twelve ships of war, mounting together 160 guns.

¹ It was to this battle that the duke of Wellington applied, in the British senate, the memorable designation of "an untoward event." The illustrious and far-seeing politician judged of its after-consequences rightly.

² The squadron was waiting for a fair wind to run up the Dardanelles, when the Ajax caught fire (Feb. 14), and in a few minutes she was so enveloped in smoke, that the crew were nearly suffocated, and could only distinguish each other by feeling or speaking, though the moon shone brightly. Captain Blackwood was heard exhorting the men to be calm and collected, while they endeavoured to save themselves as best they could. Immediately the fire burst forth in a raging and overwhelming flame, and the captain, officers, and men threw themselves overboard, swimming, in an exhausted state, to the boats of the squadron, which approached the burning pile as near as possible: those of the Canopus rescued captain Blackwood. Many were burnt to death or drowned; 384 persons altogether were saved from the fire; but of these several afterwards died. The ship turned all night, and blew up at five o'clock next morning, with a terrific explosion.

- the Latona frigate off Brest, 1804. In the Audacious, 74, took sir John Moore to the shores of Portugal; had charge of the transports, and superintended the embarkation of the British army after the battle of Corunna, 1809. Now an admiral of the red.

Sir Robert Laurie, bart., K. C. B.: in the Cleopatra frigate, 32, chased and fought La Ville de Milan, 46 guns and 360 men. After as fierce and obstinate an action as is on record, the Cleopatra reluctantly struck to the enemy, nearly twice her force, Feb. 16, 1805; "but the glory of the battle belonged to the captured."² Afterwards commanded the Ajax, 74, till the close of the war: died Jan. 1848.

¹ We have not room in this volume for the hundred circumstances and incidents that attended and followed this wonderful exploit. The brave captain himself was among the wounded. He received a tremendous blow from the butt-end of a musket, which was broken over his head and felled him senseless to the ground; a wound from the cut of a sabre laid open his left thigh; the right thigh was penetrated by a pike or spear; a grape shot produced a dreadful contusion on the leg; one of his hands was lacerated; and his loins and kidneys were fearfully bruised. Yet he hero succeeded in making the Hermione his prize, and still lives, though a full half century has passed away, in the enjoyment of his distinctions and rewards.

[Sir Edward Hamilton died in April 1851, while these pages were at press.]

² Captain Talbot of the Leander, 50 guns, fell in with La Ville de Milan six days after the action; she was in too crippled a state to fight a second battle, and immediately surrendered without firing a gun: he also recaptured her prize.

Sir William Hall Gage, knt., G. C. H.: commander-in-chief on the East India station from 1825 to 1829; afterwards commanded in the Downs and off Lisbon. A lord of the admiralty from Sept. 1841 to July 1846. Commanded at Devonport 1848.

Sir Bendall Robert Littlehales: died Aug. 1847.

¹ When blockading this port, the gallant captain, who had not previously molested the Dutch fishing-vessels, was one day mortified at observing several shot fired, by order of the French general at Scheveling, at the Africaine's boat, in which four boys had been sent to gather shrimps from a sand-bank near the Maas. Determined to retaliate, he addressed the following note to the French officer:—

"MONSIEUR LE GENERAL.—As you have prevented me from having shrimps to my turbot, I will deprive you of turbot to your shrimps, by taking every fishing-vessel belonging to Helvoetsluys this very night.

T. MANBY."

He kept his word: that "very night" he seized sixty of the largest fishing-ships he could find in and off the port, most of which he directly sent to Yarmouth.

² In command of La Minerve frigate; July 2, 1803, that ship struck on a rock near Cherbourg, in a fog, and was taken by the enemy. Captain Brenton remained a prisoner until 1807, when he was exchanged for M. Infernet, who had commanded Le Intrepide, 74, at the battle of Trafalgar. Much negotiation was carried on, in vain, for his earlier release.

Attached to the in-shore squadron off Toulon, 1810; and, in the Edinburgh, 74, actively engaged on the coasts of Sicily, Naples, Tuscany, and Genoa: died Oct. 1834.

Thomas, earl of Dundonald, g. c. b. (late Lord Cochrane¹): distinguished by his intrepidity and many wonderful enterprises; capturing ships, blowing up magazines and barracks, destroying stores, demolishing semaphores on the coast of France, &c. In the Pallas, 32, captured the Spanish galleon, Il Fortuna, worth 300,000*l.* in specie and merchandise, March 1805. Commanded in the Imperieuse, the fleet of fire-ships and explosion vessels employed in destroying the French squadron in Aix Roads, 1809: on this occasion, seven line of battle ships cut their cables and ran on shore, and most of them were afterwards burnt. His co-operation with the Patriots on the coast of Spain was one scene of brilliant exploits.

¹ In 1814, Lord Cochrane lost his rank in the British navy, and being free to choose, accepted the chief command of the naval forces of Chili, which he triumphantly directed. He afterwards commanded the Brazilian fleet, and was rewarded for his services by Dom Pedro with the rank of marquess (marquês de Maranhão) and other honours. Soon after the accession of the late king, William IV., he was restored to his rightful place in the British service; and, subsequently, to the order of the Bath, his banner having been removed from Henry VII.'s chapel, Aug. 12, 1814.

Nicholas Tomlinson: this officer was on board the Duke of Athol Indiaman, when that ship was blown up at Madras, April 1783: he was at the time first lieutenant of the Bristol. Sir JAMES-JOHN GORDON BREMER, K. C. B., K. C. H.: distinguished by his important services in China, as well in council as in arms, from the organisation of the force from Singapore, to the final capture of Canton, 1841: died Feb. 1850.

Oct. 9, 1849.

RALPH RANDOLPH WORMELEY.

Oct. 18, 1849.

HAYES O'GRADY.

Oct. 30, 1849.

MAURICE FREDERICK FITZARDINGE BERKELEY: served at the defence of Cadiz, 1811. Commanded the Thunderer, 84, in the operations of the Syrian campaign, at the camp at d'Journi, the bombardment of Beyrout, storming of Sidon, and capture of St. Jean d'Acre, Nov. 1840. A lord of the admiralty, April 1833, et seq.

Nov. 5, 1849.

Sir DAVID DUNN, knt., K. C. H.: made a prisoner in early service, 1801. Assisted in the capture of the Spanish ship Amfitrite, 44 guns, 1804; and of El Rey, 100 guns, one of the line defeated at Trafalgar. Shared in the victory gained by sir John T. Duckworth off St. Domingo, Feb. 1806. Present at the defence of Sicily, and reduction of Zante and Cephalonia. Severely wounded in the battle off Lissa, March 1811. Distinguished himself at the siege of Trieste, 1813.

Dec. 20, 1849.

FAIRFAX MORESBY, C.N.: carried two strong batteries at the Boca di Cattaro, Aug. 1813; and served with the Austrian forces on the coasts of the Adriatic, for which he was honoured with the order of Maria Theresa. Commanded, in the Menai, at the Cape of Good Hope; and in 1821, et seq., at the Mauritius, where he was zealous in the suppression of the slave-trade. Served, subsequently, in the Mediterranean; commander-in-chief in the Pacific, 1851.

Dec. 24, 1849.

GEORGE ANSON, lord Byron.

Jan. 14, 1850.

Sir EDMUND LYONS, bart., G.C.D., K.C.H.: served as midshipman in the expedition to the Dardanelles. Signalled, among other early exploits, by his bravery in storming the fortress of Marrack, Java, with 35 men, boats' crews of the Minden, opposed to more than 200 men and 54 guns, July 30, 1811.

Feb. 15, 1850.

Sir CHARLES SULLIVAN, bart.: assisted, in early service, in the capture of a Dutch frigate, seven brigs of war, and twenty other vessels, in Batavia Roads, Nov. 1806. Aided in making prizes of the Scipio corvette, 24 guns, the Ceres gun-brig, and an armed merchant ship richly laden, Sept. 1807. As lieutenant, served long on the East India station, at the Isle of France, and on the coast of N. America. Served, as post, on the coast of Portugal, and in various other quarters.

March 27, 1850.

Sir JOHN MARSHALL, knt., C.B., K.C.H.: as lieutenant of the Culloden, 74, contributed to the destruction of a Dutch frigate, seven brigs of war, and twenty armed and other vessels in Batavia Roads, Nov. 1806. Was in the Java frigate, 46 guns and 377 men, when captured by the American ship Constitution, 56 guns and 480 men, after a close action of nearly four hours, Dec. 23, 1812. Served afterwards in the German rivers with great gallantry: died Sept. 30, 1850.

June 21, 1850.

JAMES ERSKINE WEMYSS: had a sharp action, when lieutenant, in the Victor sloop, with an armed proa, in the East Indies, April 1807: in this action eighty of the crew of the latter were killed in little more than half an hour. Afterwards served in the North Sea and Mediterranean, and assisted in the reduction of Genoa.

Sept. 2, 1850.

FRANCIS ERSKINE LOCH: was on board the Queen Charlotte, 110 guns, when she took five in Leghorn Roads, March 17, 1800. Encountered in the Sparrow, 16 guns, on the coast of Spain, the Etoile and Sultane, French frigates, which were eventually captured. Served as senior officer in the Persian Gulf in 1818, commanding the Eden, 26 guns. His gallant services embraced a period of forty years.

Oct. 1, 1850.

EDWARD COLLIER, C.B.: appointed acting lieutenant of the Arrogant for his exertions in saving the Centurion when on the point of foundering in a dreadful hurricane. Present in the St. Fiorenzo when she captured the French frigate La Psyche, Feb. 1805. This brave officer had his leg badly fractured at the bombardment of St. Jean d'Acre.

Nov. 6, 1850.

DAVID PRICE: in the Centaur, 74, assisted in the capture of four French frigates from Rochefort, after an action in which sir Samuel Hood lost his arm. Served at the bombardment of Copenhagen, the occupation of Madeira, and capture of the Sevokol, Russian 74. Was present at the destruction of the French ship Amazon, 40, near Cape Bardieur, March 1811. Fought as first lieutenant of the Active, 46, in the action with the French fleet off Toulon, Nov. 1813; and performed much gallant service in our last contest with America.

Nov. 11, 1850.

ALGERNON, duke of NORTHUMBERLAND, late lord Prudhoe.

Dec. 30, 1850.

JOHN TOUF NICOLAS, K.H.: fought in sir Robert Calder's action with the combined French and Spanish fleets off Cape Finisterre, July 1805; defeated the French ship Légère, June 1815; and displayed great gallantry on various occasions: died April 1851.

March 21, 1851.

WILLIAM WILLMOTT HENDERSON: was with lord Nelson in his pursuit of the French and Spanish combined squadrons to the West Indies, and on his return shared in the glorious battle of Trafalgar. Was present, in the Active frigate, in the celebrated battle off Lissa, March 1811. Co-operated in the reduction of Guadaloupe, Aug. 1815; and crowned his many services by aiding in the operations on the coast of Syria.

¹ This dreadful catastrophe was communicated to the admiralty in despatches from lord Keith, commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean, the Queen Charlotte being his lordship's flag-ship at the time of its occurrence. The ship took fire just before daybreak, while she was under easy sail between the island of Gorgona and the port of Leghorn. It was occasioned by the fire of a match, which had been kept lighted for the purpose of firing signal guns, and which communicated to some hay that lay upon the half-deck. The fire spread very rapidly, and bursting through the port-holes and up the hatchways of the ship, soon caught the shrouds, and, notwithstanding every exertion, she burnt to the water's edge, and then blew up. Upwards of 700 lives were lost, as the boats could not contain one-fourth of the large complement of men on board. Lord Keith was himself on shore at Leghorn.

March 24, 1851.

Sir JOHN HILL, knt.: served effectively in the Channel, the West Indies, and Mediterranean; and among other actions was present in the glorious battle of the Nile. Eminently distinguished by his many displays of bravery during a long and active service. The honour of knighthood was conferred on captain Hill in Aug. 1831, and he has had several home appointments since he has been afloat.

May 1851.

JOHN CARTER: aided in the capture of Le Guillaume Tell of 84 guns and 1000 men; served on the coast of France and off Genoa; went in the pursuit of the combined French and Spanish squadron to the West Indies, and subsequently bore a part in the battle of Trafalgar. Later, visited the Baltic and the West Indies, and engaged in much difficult service throughout his professional career.

The present number of Admirals is as follows: Ten Admirals of the Red; ten Admirals of the White; and ten Admirals of the Blue. Fifteen Vice-Admirals of the Red; fifteen Vice-Admirals of the White; and fifteen Vice-Admirals of the Blue. Twenty-five Rear-Admirals of the Red; twenty-five Rear-Admirals of the White; and twenty-five Rear-Admirals of the Blue. Making, viz.: Thirty Admirals, or ten of each Squadron; forty-five Vice-Admirals, or fifteen of each Squadron; and seventy-five Rear-Admirals, or twenty-five of each Squadron. NOTE.—The preceding roll of admirals is taken, by permission of the Lords of the Admiralty, from their Records of the service. The notices of living admirals are adopted from O'Byrne's Naval Biography, a work recently published, of such wonderful research and industry, and so highly estimated by the officers of the British navy, that a testimonial from them is now in course of presentation to its much esteemed and most deserving author.

¹ The memorable duel between H. R. H. the duke of York and colonel Lenox, afterwards duke of Richmond, took place on May 26, 1789. We take the particulars from the only authentic account ever published of them. The dispute originated in an observation of his royal highness, namely, that colonel Lenox had heard words spoken to him at the club at Daubigny's to which no gentleman ought to have submitted. This observation having been reported to the colonel, he took the opportunity, while his royal highness was on the parade, to address him, desiring to know what were the words which he had submitted to hear, and by whom they were spoken? To this his royal highness gave no other answer at the time, than by ordering the colonel to his post. The parade being over, his royal highness went into the orderly-room, and sending for the colonel, intimated to him, in the presence of all the officers, that he desired to derive no protection from his rank as a prince, or his station as commanding officer: but that, when not on duty, he wore a brow coat, and was ready, as a private gentleman, to give the colonel satisfaction. This led to a short correspondence, which was closed by a letter delivered to his royal highness by the earl of Winchilsea, to the effect, that the colonel expected, in justice to his character, his royal highness should contradict the report as publicly as he had uttered it. The answer returned not proving satisfactory to the colonel's feelings, the duel followed, and is described in the subjoined document:—

"In consequence of a dispute of which much has been said in the public papers, his royal highness the duke of York, attended by lord Rawdon, — and lieutenant-colonel Lenox, accompanied by the earl of Winchilsea, met at Wimbledon common. The ground was measured at twelve paces, and both parties were to fire upon a signal agreed upon. The signal being given, lieutenant-colonel Lenox fired, and the ball grazed his royal highness's curl. The duke of York did not fire. Lord Rawdon then interferred, and said, 'that he thought enough had been done.' Lieutenant-colonel Lenox observed, 'that his royal highness had not fired.' Lord Rawdon said, 'it was not the duke's intention to fire; his royal highness had come out at lieutenant-colonel Lenox's desire, to give him satisfaction, and had no animosity against him.' Lieutenant-colonel Lenox pressed that the duke of York should fire, which was declined upon a repetition of the reason. Lord Winchilsea then went up to the duke of York, and expressed his hope, 'that his royal highness could have no objection to say he considered lieutenant-colonel Lenox as a man of honour and courage: his royal highness replied, 'that he should say nothing; he had come out to give lieutenant-colonel Lenox satisfaction, and did not mean to fire at him; if lieutenant-colonel Lenox was not satisfied, he might fire again.' Lieutenant-colonel Lenox said, 'he could not possibly fire again at the duke, as his royal highness did not mean to fire at him.' On this, both parties left the ground. The seconds think it proper to add, that both parties behaved with the most perfect coolness and intrepidity.

¹ Sir William Draper was the celebrated knight who engaged in the well-known controversy with the famous Junius, in whose volumes his able letters appear. His correspondence with that writer (in 1769) was undertaken in defence of his friend the marquess of Granby. The marquess died the next year.

² Sir Eyre Coote having taken offence at the conduct of the Madras government, left the army. General Stuart, who succeeded him as commander, having been ordered to march to Cuddalore (100 miles distant), refused to obey the order until the 21st of April (some weeks afterwards), when he set out at the rate of two miles and a half per day. He arrived at Cuddalore about the beginning of June, and attacked the place on the 13th of that month, when he was repulsed by the French with very great loss. The Madras government soon after arrested general Stuart for repeated acts of disobedience, and sent him home to England.

¹ The memorable battle on the plains of Maida between the British forces under sir John Stuart, and the French under general Regnier, was unquestionably the most glorious of the eventful period at which it occurred. The enemy consisted of 7000 infantry and 300 cavalry; the British, including artillery, of 4795 men. The two corps, at the distance of about a hundred yards, fired reciprocally a few rounds, when, as if by mutual agreement, the firing was suspended, and each advanced in close compact order and awful silence towards the other until their bayonets began to cross. At this momentous crisis the enemy became appalled. They broke, and began to fly, but it was too late; they were overtaken with the most dreadful slaughter. Their flight was marked with disorder and dismay, and they retired from the plain, leaving it covered with nearly a thousand dead. More than a thousand prisoners (whose number subsequently increased) were taken, and 40 pieces of artillery fell into the victors' hands: the victory, which was complete, was gained July 4, 1806.

² The son of Sir William (not himself as some suppose), was named sir William, was the inventor of the missile called the "Congreve Rocket," which was first used in the attack of Boulogne in 1806. It was for some time considered a grand auxiliary in warlike operations, but it has now fallen into comparative disrepute. Sir William Congreve, jun. (a fellow of the Royal Society) died May 1829.

¹ With a desire to relieve the bright fame of this gallant soldier from the obloquy which much misrepresentation relating to an incident of his life has cast upon it, we shall here make a short summary of it while recounting his eminent services to his country. Sir Thomas Picton commenced his military career at Gibraltar. In 1794 he embarked for the West Indies, and after the reduction of St. Lucia and Trinidad in 1797, he was appointed governor of the latter island. While holding that situation he was applied to by a Spanish magistrate to sign an order for inflicting the torture on a female slave, named Louisa Calderon; and on being told that it was a customary practice, he signed it without inquiry. The girl, who was only fourteen years of age, was accordingly picketed, with a view to extort from her the discovery of a theft committed by her paramour. For this act of cruelty the governor was, in Feb. 1806, indicted, and found guilty by an English jury. As many exaggerated rumours had preceded the colonel to England, a new trial was granted, and though he was acquitted of moral guilt, the deed was one which threw a shade over his bright course. However, in 1809, he was again employed for his country. He was at the siege of Flushing, and on its capture was appointed governor. From Flushing he returned to England an invalid; but was soon again in the field. His courage and intrepidity shone on every occasion; ever foremost in the fight, he was a victorious leader at Badajoz, at Vittoria, at Ciudad Rodrigo, &c. At the battle of Waterloo general Picton commanded the 5th division of the army, and fell. A monument to his memory was voted by parliament, and erected in St. Paul's cathedral.

- Sir Joseph Stratton, K. B., K. C. H.: died Oct. 1840.
- Rt. hon. sir Edward Blakeney, K. C. B., G. C. H.; commander of the forces in Ireland.

¹ This distinguished officer rose from the grade of a private soldier of the Royal Horse Guards blue; he served in the campaigns of the Low Countries, including the siege of Valenciennes, and was an actor in all the sanguinary affairs in Spain and Portugal. At the final battle of Waterloo, he was most conspicuous, frequently fighting as an individual trooper; and we read in sir Walter Scott's Peter's Letters to his Kinsfolk, that several of Napoleon's cuirassiers were "found cleft to the very chine by Elley's stalwart arm" in that great battle.

¹ This great cavalry officer, then colonel Ponsonby, fought at Talavera, Barrosa, Vimeira, Salamanca, and Vittoria, performing some of the most brilliant exploits recorded in that fierce and enterprising era of the war. At Waterloo he led on the 12th regiment, and, fighting at fearful odds, received a cut on his right arm, which caused his sword to drop, and immediately afterwards he received another on his left, which he had raised to protect his head. By the latter he lost the command of his horse, which galloped forward, and colonel Ponsonby, unable to defend himself, got a blow from a sword upon his head, that brought him senseless to the ground. There he lay, exposed on the field, during the whole of the ensuing night. After being wantonly pierced through the back by a lancer, plundered by a French tirailleur, rode over by two squadrons of Prussian cavalry, and encumbered for some hours by a dying soldier lying across his legs, he was conveyed in the morning in a cart to the village of Waterloo, where it was found he had received seven wounds; yet by constant attention he recovered, and continued an ornament to his country for nearly twenty-two years afterwards.

PART IV.

ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF ENGLAND.

THE ecclesiastical government of England is divided into two provinces, Canterbury and York. Canterbury hath the following twenty suffragan bishoprics appertaining to it :

Bangor.	Lichfield.	Rochester.
Bath and Wells.	Lincoln.	St. Asaph.
Chichester.	Llandaff.	St. David's.
Ely.	London.	Salisbury.
Exeter.	Norwich.	Winchester.
Gloucester and Bristol.	Oxford.	Worcester.
Hereford.	Peterborough.

To the province of York belong the following six suffragan bishoprics :

Carlisle.	Durham.	Ripon.
Chester.	Manchester.	Sodor and Man.

* * The bishop of Sodor and Man is not a peer of parliament; but the present bishop of that see, the earl of Auckland, in right of his earldom, has his seat in the house of lords.

By the act 10th and 11th Victoria, cap. 108. (passed 23rd July 1847), by which the see of Manchester was erected, it was declared, that the bishop of that see should then have no seat in parliament, with a view to not increasing the number of spiritual peers.¹ By this act, the junior, or last appointed bishop, is to have no seat, until called to the house of lords by writ of summons, which is issued to him on the avoidance of another see and creation of a new bishop, who then, of course, becomes, in his turn, the junior bishop. The archiepiscopal sees of Canterbury and York, and the three sees of London, Durham, and Winchester, are exempted from the operation of this act.

ARCHBISHOPRIC OF CANTERBURY.

THIS see was settled by Austin, or Augustin, a monk, who first preached the gospel in England; and, converting Ethelbert, king of Kent, that king, animated with great zeal for his new religion, bestowed many favours upon Austin, who in consequence fixed his residence in the capital of Ethelbert's dominions. The church was made a cathedral, repaired, consecrated, and dedicated to Christ, which dedication it still retains, although, for a considerable space of time, it was better known as St. Thomas's from Thomas à Becket, who was murdered in it. The present fabric was begun by archbishop Lanfranc and William Corbois, and greatly augmented by several of their successors. During the great rebellion, it suffered much, the usurper Cromwell having made a stable of it for his dragoons. After the Restoration, it was repaired, and made what it now appears.

The diocese comprises the county of Kent, except the city and deanery of Rochester and some parishes in London. It included, until recently, a number of parishes in other dioceses: these were called Peculiars, it having been an ancient privilege of this see, that, wheresoever the archbishops had either manors or advowsons, the place was exempted from the jurisdiction of the ordinary of the diocese wherein it was situated, and was deemed in the diocese of Canterbury. Abolished from 1st January 1846.

The archbishop is accounted Primate and Metropolitan of all England, and is the first peer in the realm; having the precedence of all dukes not of the blood-royal, and all the great officers of state. He is styled His Grace, and he writes himself Divina Providentia; whereas other bishops style themselves Divina Permissione. At coronations, he places the crown on the king's head¹; and, wherever the court may be, the king and queen are the proper domestic parishioners of the archbishop. The bishop of London is accounted his provincial dean, the bishop of Winchester his sub-dean, the bishop of Lincoln his chancellor, and the bishop of Rochester his chaplain.

¹ The first and present bishop of Manchester, Dr. James Prince Lee, was called to the house of lords by writ of summons, in Feb. 1848.

Canterbury has yielded to the Church eighteen saints; to the Church of Rome nine cardinals; and to the civil state of England twelve lord chancellors, four lord treasurers, and one lord chief justice. The see is valued in the king's books at 281*l.* 17*s.* 9½*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF BANGOR.¹

THIS see is of very great antiquity: the founder is unknown. The church is dedicated to St. Daniel, who was bishop here about the year 516; but, for near five hundred years afterwards, there is no certain record of the names of his successors. Owen Glendower greatly defaced the cathedral, which bishop Dean repaired. The see met with a still more cruel ravager than Glendower, in the person of bishop Bulkeley, who not only alienated many of the lands belonging to it, but even sold the bells of the church. The diocese comprises the shire of Anglesey, and part of the shires of Carnarvon, Denbigh, Merioneth, and Montgomery. The see is valued in the king's books at 131*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF BATH AND WELLS.

THIS diocese, although it has a double name, is but one bishopric. The church was built at Wells, by Ina, king of the West Saxons in 704, and by him dedicated to St. Andrew. Several others of the West Saxon kings endowed it, and it was erected into a bishopric in 905, during the reign of Edward the Elder. The present church was begun by Robert, the eighteenth bishop of the see, and completed by his immediate successor, John de Villula, the sixteenth bishop, having purchased the city of Bath for 500 merks of Hen. I., transferred his seat to that city in 1088. From this, disputes arose between the monks of Bath, and the canons of Wells, about the election of a bishop; but they were at length compromised by Robert, the eighteenth bishop, who decreed, that thenceforward the bishop should be styled from both places, and that the precedency should be given to Bath; that, in the vacancy of the see, the bishop should be elected by a certain number of delegates from both churches; that he should be installed in them both; that both should constitute the bishop's chapter; and all his grants and patents should be confirmed in both. So it stood till the Reformation. But, in the 35th of Henry VIII. an act of parliament passed, for the dean and chapter of Wells to make one sole chapter for the bishop. The diocese has yielded to the Church of Rome one cardinal, and to the civil state of England six lord chancellors, five lord treasurers, one lord privy seal, one lord president of Wales, and one principal secretary of state. The diocese contains the whole county of Somerset, Bedminster excepted. The see is valued in the king's books at 535*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF BRISTOL.

THIS diocese was one of the six sees erected by Henry VIII. out of the spoils of the monasteries and religious houses dissolved in his reign. The cathedral was the church of the abbey of St. Austin, in Bristol, founded by Robert Fitz-Harding, son to a king of Denmark, once a citizen here, and filled by him with canons regular, in the year 1148. At the Reformation, Henry VIII. placed therein a dean and six prebendaries. During a great part of queen Elizabeth's reign, this see was held in commendam by the bishop of Gloucester. The diocese was originally formed chiefly out of the diocese of Salisbury, with a small part from the dioceses of Wells and Worcester. It latterly contained most of the city of Bristol and all the county of Dorset.

In 1836, the Third Report of the "Ecclesiastical Commissioners, appointed to consider the state of the Established Church in England and Wales," recommended the consolidation of the see of Bristol with that of Gloucester; and by an act passed 6th and 7th William IV. cap. 77. (Aug. 13, 1836), his majesty in council was empowered to unite them accordingly. This was done by an order in council, published in the London Gazette on the 7th October following. The prelate of the united diocese is called the "Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol." See Gloucester and Bristol.

The see of Bristol has yielded to the state one lord privy seal. It is valued in the king's books at 33*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.*: the revenues of the abbey of St. Augustin, now called the cathedral church of the Holy Trinity, were, at the dissolution, 670*l.* 13*s.* 11*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF CHICHESTER.

WILFRIDE, the third archbishop of York, having been obliged to flee his country by Egfrid, king of Northumbria, came and preached the gospel in these parts; and Edilwach, king of the South Saxons, gave him the Isle of Selsey, not far from Chichester, for his seat, where he built a church. Cenwal, king of the West Saxons, having won Edilwach's kingdom, built a monastery in the Island of Selsey, which he afterwards got erected into a bishopric. Here the seat of this see continued, till Stigand, the twenty-third bishop of Selsey, had it removed to Chichester, the principal city in these parts, built by Cissa, second king of the South Saxons, and by him called Cissan Caester. The cathedral church was anciently dedicated to St. Peter; it was new built by Radulph, the twenty-fifth bishop; but this fabric having been destroyed by fire, the church was again built by Seffridus II., the twenty-ninth bishop. The see has yielded to the Church of Rome two saints; and to the nation three lord chancellors. Anciently the bishops of Chichester were confessors to the queens of England. The diocese contains the whole of the county of Sussex. It has two archdeacons, viz. of Chichester and Lewes; and is valued in the king's books at 677*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF ELY.

THE church of Ely has undergone various alterations since it was established by Etheldra, the wife of Egrife, king of Northumbria, who founded a religious house here, and planted it with virgins, and became the first abbess of it herself. The Danes having entirely ruined this establishment, Ethelwold, the twenty-seventh bishop of Winchester, rebuilt the monastery, and filled it with monks; on whom king Edgar, and several succeeding monarchs, bestowed many privileges, and great grants of land; so that the abbey became, in process of time, the best of any in England. Ricbard, the eleventh abbot, wishing to free himself of the bishop of Lincoln, within whose diocese his monastery stood, and not liking so powerful a superior, made great interest with Henry I. to get Ely erected into a bishopric; and spared neither purse nor prayers to effect this object. He even brought the bishop of Lincoln to consent, by giving him, and his successors, the manors of Bugden, Biggleswade, and Spalding, which belonged to the abbey, in lieu of his jurisdiction; but he lived not to enjoy the fruits of his industry and ambition, dying before his abbey was erected into a see. His successor was the first bishop of Ely; but the great privileges the see possessed were almost wholly taken away, or much restricted by the act of parliament, 27 Henry VIII., which restored to the crown the ancient royalties; and instead of being palatine of the Isle of Ely, the bishop, and his temporal steward, were by that act declared to be thenceforth justices of the peace. The diocese now contains all Cambridgeshire, Bedfordshire, Huntingdon, and part of Suffolk. The see is valued in the king's books at 213*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.* It has given two saints and two cardinals to the Church of Rome; and to the English nation nine lord chancellors, seven lord treasurers, one lord privy seal, one chancellor of the exchequer, and two masters of the rolls.

BISHOPRIC OF EXETER.

THIS diocese contains what formerly constituted two bishoprics, Devonshire and Cornwall. The church of the former was at Crediton, and of the latter at Bodmin. About the year 1032, the bishopric of Cornwall was united to that of Devonshire; and, soon after, the then bishop removed the see to Exeter, the largest and best city in these parts, where it still continues. The cathedral church of Exeter belonged to a monastery founded by king Athelstan, and by him was dedicated to St. Peter. Edward the Confessor removed all the monks to his new abbey of Westminster, and gave this church for a cathedral to the united bishoprics of Devonshire and Cornwall. Little now remains of the ancient fabric of the church. This see was once one of the most wealthy in the kingdom; but its revenues were wasted by bishop Voysey, who alienated its lands; and what little he left was so much encumbered, that the see has never been able to recover its former grandeur. The see has yielded to the nation three lord chancellors, two lord treasurers, one lord president of Wales, and one chancellor to the university of Oxford. The diocese contains the entire of Devonshire (excepting only the parish of Thornecomb), and Cornwall, and the Scilly Islands; it comprises, also, the parish of Stockland, in Dorset. The see has four archdeacons, viz., of Cornwall, Exeter, Barnstaple, and Totness. It was formerly valued in the king's books at 1556*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*; but, since bishop Voysey's time, it lowered to 500*l.*

BISHOPRIC OF GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL.

THE see of Gloucester was one of the six erected by king Henry VIII. in the year 1541, and was formerly part of the diocese of Worcester. The cathedral church was the church belonging to the abbey here, which was dissolved by the above king, and its revenue appropriated to the maintenance of the bishop. This diocese latterly comprehended all Gloucestershire (two chapelries excepted), Bristol deanery, and the parish of Kingswood, in Wiltshire.

The Third Report of the "Ecclesiastical Commissioners, appointed to consider the state of the Established Church in England and Wales," having recommended the consolidation of the see of Bristol with this see, an act was passed 6th and 7th William IV. cap. 77 (Aug. 13, 1836) empowering his majesty in council to unite them accordingly, and an order in council was published in the London Gazette, Oct. 7, following, declaring them one see. The prelate of the united diocese is called the "Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol."

The diocese now comprises the county of Gloucester, the city and deanery of Bristol, Bedminster, and Abbots'-Leigh, Somerset, and the deaneries of Malmesbury and Cricklade, Wiltshire. The see of Gloucester was valued in the king's books at 31*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF HEREFORD.

THIS was a bishopric in the time of the Britons, and one of the suffragans to the metropolitan see of St. David's. When the country was conquered by the Saxons, it became a member of the province of Canterbury. The subsequent cathedral was founded in honour of Ethelbert, king of the East Angles, who had been treacherously made away with here by the queen of Offa, king of Mercia, his intended mother-in-law. It was rebuilt by Rainelm, the thirtieth bishop, and what he left undone, was finished by his successors. The see has given two saints to the Church of Rome; to the state two lord chancellors, three lord treasurers, and one lord deputy of Ireland; and two chancellors to the university of Oxford. The diocese contains the greater part of the county of Hereford, with parts of Shropshire, Monmouthshire, Montgomeryshire, Radnorshire, and Worcestershire. It has two archdeacons, viz., of Hereford and Salop; and is valued in the king's books at 768*l.* 10*s.* 6*½d.*

¹ Doctor Hoadley, while bishop of this see, preached a sermon (March 31, 1717) on "the nature of the Kingdom of Christ," in which he asserted the true dominion established by Our Saviour; and thereby was originated the well-known "Bangorian Controversy," wherein he vindicated his able discourse, maintaining that Christ alone is the head of the Church. But the worthy prelate drew on himself by his sermon (which was preached before George I.) the indignation of almost all the clergy. The controversy, however, ended, as Steele observes, "in the utter confusion of his enemies."—Steele's Letters, vol. i. pp. 173. 180. Dr. Hoadley, who was a most learned divine, died in April 1761, at the age of 85.

BISHOPRIC OF LICHFIELD.

THIS bishopric is said to have been founded by Oswy, king of Northumbria, about the year 656, and although it had, until very recently, a double name (Lichfield and Coventry), yet, like Bath and Wells, it has always been a single diocese. It was so extremely wealthy, that Offa, king of Mercia, by the favour of pope Adrian, constituted it an archiepiscopal see; but this title was laid aside on the death of that king. In 1075, Peter, the thirty-fourth bishop, removed the see to Chester; in 1102, his immediate successor removed it to Coventry; and bishop Roger de Clinton, according to some authorities (bishop Hugo Novant being mentioned by others), removed it back to Lichfield, but with great opposition from the monks of Coventry. The dispute was finally settled in a manner nearly similar to that mentioned between Bath and Wells: it was agreed that the bishop should be styled from both places; that they should choose the bishop alternately; and that they should both make one chapter, of which the prior of Coventry should be the chief. Matters continued thus until the Reformation, when the priory of Coventry was dissolved by Henry VIII., but the style of the bishop continued as before.

By an order in council under date of Jan. 24, 1837, the archdeaconry of Coventry was separated from this see and added to the see of Worcester, and the double name was then discontinued. The diocese of Lichfield now includes the whole of the counties of Stafford and Derby, with part of Shropshire, having somewhat more than 120 churches in the last-named county.

This see (with Coventry) has given three saints to the Church; and to the nation one lord chancellor, three lord treasurers, and three presidents of Wales. It is valued in the king's books at 559*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF LINCOLN.

THIS diocese was formerly two sees, Sidnacester (not far from Gainsborough, in Lincolnshire), and Dorchester, in Oxfordshire. The former was united to Dorchester, after remaining a long time vacant, subsequent to the death of Eadulphus II. its ninth bishop; and both were, about the year 1075, removed to Lincoln by bishop Remigius de Feschamp, who built a cathedral, which was afterwards destroyed by fire, but rebuilt by Alexander, the twenty-third bishop, and made the beautiful pile it now appears by Hugh of Burgundy the twenty-fifth bishop. It is dedicated to the Virgin Mary and all Saints.

The diocese was very large; so much so, that the dioceses of Ely, Oxford, and Peterborough, when originally formed, were taken from it; and it afterwards continued to be the largest diocese in England.¹ At present it comprises the counties of Lincoln and Nottingham only. The revenues were valued at the dissolution of monasteries at 2065*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.*; but many of the manors having been seized upon, the see was rated in the king's books at 894*l.* 10*s.* The see has given to the Church of Rome three saints, and one cardinal; and to the realm of England six lord chancellors, one lord treasurer, one lord keeper, four chancellors to the university of Oxford, and two to Cambridge. The bishops of Lincoln were heretofore accounted chancellors to the archbishop of Canterbury.

BISHOPRIC OF LLANDAFF.

THIS is a very ancient see: by whom founded is uncertain: it was one of the suffragans of St. David's, and the first bishop, that is known for certainty, is St. Dubritius. The see was formerly wealthy; but its revenues were greatly diminished, particularly by Anthony Dunstan, its sixty-third bishop. The church is dedicated to St. Thelian, its second bishop (but Dugdale says, to St. Peter); and takes its name from its situation; Lan, or Llan, in Welsh, signifying a church; and the edifice being founded close upon the river Taffi, in Glamorganshire. The bishopric comprises Glamorganshire and Monmouthshire, and part of Brecon: it has two archdeaconries, viz., Llandaff and Monmouth; and is valued in the king's books at 154*l.* 14*s.* 1*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF LONDON.

THE see was archiepiscopal in the time of the Britons, and was designed by pope Gregory to have continued so; but St. Augustine, whom his holiness had sent to convert the Saxons, was so pleased with his reception from Ethelbert, king of Kent, that he set up his staff at Canterbury, the capital of Ethelbert's dominions, which has continued the metropolitan see of England ever since. London still remained a bishopric. Its cathedral church was built by Ethelbert, and was afterwards much improved by bishop Erkenwald: it has repeatedly been destroyed by fire; the last time in 1666; since when it was built anew, at the public expense, under the direction of Sir Christopher Wren, and re-dedicated to St. Paul. The bishop has precedence before all bishops of the realm, next to the two archbishops, and is dean to the archbishop of Canterbury. The see has yielded to the Church of Rome five saints; and to the English nation nine lord chancellors, seven lord treasurers, one chancellor of the exchequer, and two chancellors to the university of Oxford: it is valued in the king's books at 1119*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* The diocese now contains the county of Middlesex, and certain parishes¹ in Essex, Kent, and Surrey.²

¹ Charlton, Lee, Lewisham, Greenwich, Woolwich, Eltham, Plumstead, and St. Nicholas and St. Paul, Deptford, lately (August 20, 1845) taken from the see of Rochester; and the parishes of St. Mary Newington, Barnes, Putney, Mortlake, and Wimbledon, *peculiar*s of the archbishop of Canterbury, added, from that see. — Second General Report of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 1848.

² On the next avoidance of the see of Winchester, the following, also, will be added to London: borough of Southwark, and parishes of Christchurch, Southwark, Battersea, Bermondsey, Camberwell, Clapham, Lambeth, Rotherhithe, Streatham, Tooting, Graveney, Wandsworth, and Merton. — Idem.

BISHOPRIC OF NORWICH.

THIS was once two distinct bishoprics, Elmham, in Norfolk, and Dunwich, in Suffolk. Felix, a Burgundian, who first converted the East Angles, founded the first see; and Bifus, the third bishop in succession from him, finding himself, from his great age, unable to bear so great a burden, got his diocese divided into two. Both sees suffered extremely from the Danish invasions, insomuch that, after the death of St. Humbert, they lay vacant for upwards of a hundred years. At length, the see of Elmham was revived, and the see of Dunwich was united to it; but Herefast, the twenty-second bishop, removed the seat to Thetford, in Norfolk, where it remained until Herbert Losinga, the twenty-fourth bishop, removed it to Norwich, and it has continued here ever since. The value of this bishopric was greatly diminished at the Reformation, as Henry VIII. seized all its lands, and gave it, in lieu of them, only what lands belonged to the monastery of St. Bennet's in the Holm. The cathedral was first built by Herbert Losinga, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity; but, as most of the structures in those days were chiefly composed of wood, it several times suffered from fire; at last it was completed, in the manner we now see it, by William de Middleton, the thirty-sixth bishop. The see has given to the Church of Rome two saints; and to the nation five lord chancellors, one lord treasurer, one lord chief justice, and one principal secretary of state. The diocese now comprises the county of Norfolk and parts of Suffolk; and has three archdeacons, namely, Norfolk, Norwich, and Suffolk. The see is valued in the king's books at 899*l.* 18*s.* 7*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF OXFORD.

THIS diocese constituted a part of the diocese of Lincoln until 1541, when Henry VIII. erected it into a bishopric, and endowed it out of the lands of the dissolved monasteries of Abingdon and Osney; and assigned to it the church of the abbey of Osney, for a cathedral: five years afterwards, he removed the seat of the see to Oxford. The present cathedral of Oxford was anciently dedicated to St. Frideswide; but, when the see was translated hither, it was entitled Christchurch, and part of the lands appropriated by cardinal Wolsey to the maintenance of his colleges, was allotted to the dean and chapter: during the reign of Elizabeth, however, the see was almost stripped of the ample endowments it had received from her father. It contains the county of Oxford, the counties of Berks and Buckingham, lately added, with insulated parts of Wilts, the parish of Widford, in Gloucestershire, and part of the parish of Hungerford, lately taken from Salisbury.

BISHOPS OF OXFORD.

BISHOPRIC OF PETERBOROUGH.

THIS is another of the sees erected by Henry VIII., and endowed out of the lands of the dissolved monasteries; and was wholly taken from the diocese of Lincoln. The place was anciently called Medeshamstede; but Wolpher, king of the Mercians, founding an abbey here, and dedicating it to St. Peter, it came to be called Peterborough. The church was afterwards destroyed by the Danes; but it was rebuilt with great beauty, and continued to flourish till the Reformation. The diocese contains the counties of Northampton (in which Peterborough is situated), Leicestershire, and Rutland. It has two archdeaconries, Northampton and Leicester. The see is valued in the king's books at 41*l.* 19*s.* 11*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF ROCHESTER.

THIS see, next to Canterbury and York, is the most ancient in England, and was until lately, very small. It was founded by St. Augustin about ten years after he came to England. The cathedral was erected by Ethelbert, king of Kent, and dedicated to St. Andrew; but the fabric growing ruinous, it was rebuilt by Gundulph, one of its prelates, in 1080. The bishop has been styled chaplain to the archbishop of Canterbury; and the archbishop claimed, and, for several centuries, disposed of, the see. His patronage, was, however, often disputed by the prior and monks here, who at length obtained a papal decree in their favour. In all solemn pomps and processions, the bishop of Rochester was cross-bearer to the archbishop. The revenue of the see became so small, that for many years the deanery of Westminster was held in commendam with it, for its better support. The diocese contained only a small part of the county of Kent, the parish of Iselham, in Cambridgeshire, and Freckenham, in Suffolk: it now comprises the city and deanery of Rochester, the county of Essex (ten parishes excepted), and Herts, and has four archdeaconries, viz.: St. Alban's, Colchester, Essex, and Rochester. The see has yielded to the Church of Rome one cardinal; and to the civil state of England, one lord chancellor, one lord keeper of the great seal, and one lord treasurer. The see is valued in the king's books at 35*l.* 3*s.* 2½*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF ST. ASAPH.

THIS bishopric is of great antiquity, having been founded in the sixth century, by Kentigern, a Scotsman, bishop of Glasgow. He began the church on the banks of the river Elwy, whence it is called by the Welsh Land Elwy, and in Latin Elwensis. Kentigern, returning into Scotland, left as his successor a holy man, named St. Asaph; but who succeeded the latter is uncertain, as no authentic records supply the information. It seems rather probable, however, that the religious settled here had been constrained to remove to some more peaceful abode, the country being frequently the seat of war between the natives and the English. The see was formerly a wealthy one; but its revenues were greatly lessened by the profusion of bishop Parfew, who alienated much of its lands. It is valued in the king's books at 187*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

The diocese consists of the counties of Denbigh and Flint (where is its church), and parts of Carnarvon, Montgomery, and Merioneth shires, and a small part of Shropshire. There is but one archdeaconry, that of St. Asaph, which is united to the bishopric, for its better maintenance.

¹ This prelate had incurred the resentment of Henry VIII. for having spoken with freedom in behalf of the queen (Catharine), when the business of her divorce was agitated. While he lay in confinement in the Tower, the pope, in order to comfort him, made him a cardinal; which provoked the king, who exclaimed, "Well, let the pope send him a red hat when he will, mother of God! he shall wear it on his shoulders, then! for I will leave him never a head to set it on." The tyrant was as good as his word. Erasmus says, that Dr. Fisher was a man of great integrity, deep learning, sweetness of temper, and loftiness of soul.

BISHOPRIC OF ST. DAVID'S.

THIS see was once the metropolitan see of Wales, and archiepiscopal; and for many years the seat of the supreme ordinary of the Welsh. When Christianity was first planted in Great Britain, there were three archbishops' seats appointed, viz., London (afterwards removed to Canterbury), York, and Caerleon upon Usk, in Monmouthshire. That at Caerleon being found to be too near to the dominions of the Saxons, was removed, in the time of Arthur, king of the Britons, to a place called Menew, in the furthest part of Pembrokeshire; but since, in honour of the archbishop who translated it here, the see is called St. David's. It is from the first name that the bishops style themselves Menevensis. Bishop Sampson was the last of the archbishops of St. David's; for he, withdrawing himself, on account of a pestilence which raged in his diocese, to Dole, in Brittany, carried the pall with him. Yet his successors, though they lost the name, still preserved the archiepiscopal power; and the Welsh bishops continued to receive consecration at his hands, until the reign of Henry I., when Bernard, the forty-seventh bishop, was forced to submit himself to Canterbury.

The church standing so near the sea, frequently felt the desolating hand of the Danes, Norwegians, and other pirates, and was despoiled and ruined. The existing cathedral was erected by bishop Peter, the forty-ninth bishop, and was dedicated to St. Andrew and St. David; though now St. Andrew is omitted. It has given one saint to the church; and to the nation three lord treasurers, one lord privy seal, a chancellor to the queen, and another to the university of Oxford. The diocese contains the counties of Pembroke, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Brecknock, and Radnor (five parishes of the last excepted), with parts of Montgomery, Glamorgan, and Hereford. The see is valued in the king's books at 457*l.* 1*s.* 10½*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF SALISBURY.

THIS see has undergone many alterations, from the time of its establishment, to its final settlement at Salisbury. Its first seat was at Sherborne, in Dorsetshire; and the diocese then had episcopal jurisdiction over all those counties that now constitute the sees of Salisbury, Bristol, Wells, and Exeter. Wells and Exeter were dismembered from it, and erected into two distinct bishoprics; and another see was afterwards formed out of the remaining jurisdiction of Sherborne, and seated at Wilton, in Wiltshire. But this last see, after having had eleven bishops of its own, was once more united to Sherborne. Subsequently the seat of the see was removed to Salisbury, the principal city in those parts; but the then bishop removed it thence to the hill called Old Sarum, and began to build a cathedral church there, which was finished by St. Osmund: this situation was chosen, perhaps, from the strong fortifications with which the hill was surrounded, and as being more out of the reach of the Danes. Bishop Richard Poore once more brought the seat of the see from Old Sarum to Salisbury, or New Sarum, where it has continued ever since. He first began the cathedral church here, which was finished in the year 1258 by bishop Bridport, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary.¹ In ancient times, the bishops of Salisbury were precentors to the archbishops of Canterbury; and Edward IV. annexed the chancellorship of the Garter to the bishops of this see; but in the new statutes made by Henry VIII. this office was left solely at the king's disposal, and might be conferred on a clergyman or layman; after bishop Ward's time, however, it was conferred without interruption, until latterly, on the bishops of Salisbury. The see has yielded to the Church of Rome one saint, and two cardinals; and to the English nation one lord chief justice, three lord chancellors, two lord treasurers, and two ¹ The cathedral is remarkable as presenting one of the purest and noblest existing specimens of the early Gothic or pointed style of architecture. It was completed in 1258, but from the general uniformity of the plan, and the construction of the whole building, except the upper part of the tower and the spire, the design may be reasonably referred to the earlier period of its foundation in 1219. It consists of a nave and aisles, two transepts, a choir and Lady chapel, with a central tower and spire. The west front is divided by buttresses into five compartments, adorned with tabernacle-work and statues; and here is the grand entrance, consisting of a central and lateral archways, surmounted by a window handsomely ornamented; and on the sides are angular towers and pinnacles. The lancet-windows arranged in triads, and the projecting gables or pediments of the transepts, choir, and chapel, with their turrets and pinnacles, add much to the characteristic beauty of the edifice. The tower, which rises from the intersection of the nave and larger transepts, is embellished with bands of tracery and pinnacles, and crowned with a lofty spire, enriched with corresponding bands, crockets, and other ornaments.

The diocese contains Wiltshire and Dorsetshire. It has three archdeaconries, Salisbury, Wiltshire, and Dorset; and is valued in the king's books at 1367*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF WINCHESTER.

THIS see is of great antiquity, and has always continued here, anciently the capital of the West Saxon kingdom. The cathedral was founded and endowed by Kingil, or Kenegilsus, the first Christian king of the West Saxons, who gave to it all the lands within seven miles of the church. His son Kinelwalchin ratified his father's donation, and added to it the manors of Alesford and Worthy. The church first built becoming ruinous, the present fabric was begun by Walkin, or Walkeline, the thirty-fourth bishop, but was not finished until the time of William of Wykeham, who made great additions to it. It was first dedicated to St. Amphibalus; then to St. Peter; next to St. Swithin, once bishop here; and lastly to the Blessed Trinity, as it still remains. The bishop is accounted sub-dean to the archbishop of Canterbury; and by Edward III. had the office of prelate of the order of St. George, or the Garter, conferred upon him; which has continued to him ever since. The bishops were anciently reputed to be earls of Southampton; and are so styled in the new statutes of the Garter made by Henry VIII.; but that title does not now belong to them. They had great privileges, and very large possessions, insomuch that Henry de Blois (brother to king Stephen), when bishop, procured the pope's consent to make Winchester an archbishop's see; and seven of the suffragans of Canterbury were to have been given to it; but this arrangement was not completed. Since the Reformation, the power and great wealth of this see have been much diminished; and its valuation in the king's books at present is less by 1000*l.* a-year than it was at that time. It has given to the Church of Rome ten saints and two cardinals; and to the English nation one lord chief justice, nine lord chancellors, two lord treasurers, one lord privy seal, one chancellor of the exchequer, and one chancellor of the university of Oxford. The diocese contains the whole county of Hants; together with the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark, and part of Surrey; it has two archdeaconrics, Winchester and Surrey; and is valued in the king's books at 2793*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF WORCESTER.

THIS see was founded by Ethelred, king of the Mercians in the year 679; the diocese was taken from that of Lichfield. Ethelred likewise built the church, which was dedicated to St. Peter; and on this fabric becoming ruinous, Oswald, the eighteenth bishop, commenced its repair, which was completed by his successors: Oswald displaced the married priests and settled monks in their stead. His foundation, however, was destroyed by the Danes, and the church that now stands was begun by Wolstan II., and dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

The diocese comprises (with Coventry, detached from the see of Lichfield, and added to this see by an order in council, Jan. 24, 1837) the two counties of Worcester and Warwick (excepting a part of the deanery of Burford, in the county of Worcester, which is in the diocese of Hereford), the parish of Staunton, in Gloucestershire, and the parish of Hales-Owen, in Salop. The see has yielded to the Church of Rome four saints; and to the English nation five lord chancellors, three lord treasurers, one chancellor to the queen, one lord president of Wales, and one vice-president. It is valued in the king's books at 104*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

BISHOPRIC AND DEANERY OF WESTMINSTER.

At the dissolution of monasteries, Westminster Abbey was valued at 3977*l.* per annum; Henry VIII., in 1539, erected the abbey into a deanery; and in 1541, he erected it into a bishopric, and appointed John Thirleby prelate. But he having wasted the patrimony allotted by the king for the support of the see, was translated to Norwich, and with him ended the bishopric of Westminster. The dignity existed only nine years; and Middlesex, which was the diocese, was restored to London. The dean continued to preside until the accession of queen Mary, who restored the abbot; but queen Elizabeth displaced the abbot, and erected the abbey into a collegiate church, of a dean and twelve prebendaries, as it still continues. On the revival of the order of the Bath in 1725, the dean of Westminster was appointed dean of that order; and this honour has been continued to his successors.

ARCHBISHOPRIC OF YORK.

YORK is the most ancient metropolitan see in England, being, it is said, so made by king Lucius, about A. D. 180, when Christianity was first, although partially planted, in England. But this establishment was overturned by the Saxons driving out the Britons. When the former were converted, pope Gregory determined that its former dignity should be restored to York, and Paulinus was made archbishop of this see, about A. D. 622. York and Durham were the only two sees in the north of England for a large space of time, until Henry I. erected a bishopric at Carlisle, and Henry VIII. another at Chester. York was the metropolitan see of the Scottish bishops; but during the time of archbishop Nevill they withdrew their obedience, and had archbishops of their own. Much dispute arose between the two English metropolitans about precedence, as, by pope Gregory's institutions, it was thought he meant, that whichever of them was first confirmed, should be superior: appeal was made to the court of Rome by both parties, and it was determined in favour of Canterbury; but York was allowed to style himself primate of England, while Canterbury styles himself primate of all England. The archbishop of York hath precedence before all dukes not of the blood-royal; as also before all the great officers of state, the lord high chancellor excepted. York has yielded to the Church of Rome eight saints and three cardinals; and to the English nation twelve lord chancellors, two lord treasurers, and two lord presidents of the north.

The diocese now contains all Yorkshire, except that part in the diocese of Ripon; and there are three archdeaconries, viz. York, the East Riding, and Cleveland. The see was, at first, stated in the king's books at 2035*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*; but after Henry VIII. had made free with its lands, it was rated at only 1609*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*

BISHOPRIC OF CARLISLE.

THIS see was erected in 1133 by Henry I., and made suffragan to York. The cathedral church had been founded a short time before by Walter, deputy in these parts for William Rufus, and by him dedicated to the Virgin Mary. He likewise built a monastery, and filled it with canons regular of St. Augustin. This foundation continued till the dissolution of monasteries, when its lands were added to the see. The church was almost ruined by the usurper Cromwell, and his soldiers; and has never since recovered its former beauty, although it was repaired after the Restoration. The diocese contains the greater parts of the counties of Cumberland and Westmoreland, in which are only ninety-three parishes; but these are (as are all the northern parishes) very large. There is one archdeaconry, viz. Carlisle. The see is valued in the king's books at 530*l.* 4*s.* 11½*d.* It has given to the English nation one lord chancellor, and two lord treasurers; and three chancellors to the university of Cambridge.

BISHOPRIC OF CHESTER.

THE bishopric of Chester was anciently part of the diocese of Lichfield; one of whose bishops removing the seat of his see hither in the year 1075, occasioned his successors to be frequently styled bishops of Chester. But it was not erected into a distinct bishopric until the general dissolution of monasteries, when Henry VIII., in 1541, raised it to this dignity, and allotted the church of the abbey of St. Werburg for the cathedral, styling it the cathedral church of Christ and the Blessed Virgin; adding the bishopric to the province of Canterbury; but, soon after, he disjoined it from Canterbury, and added it to the province of York. When the abbey was dissolved, its revenues were valued at 1003*l.* 5*s.* 11*d.*

This diocese contains the entire county of Chester, and parts of Lancashire, Cumberland, and Westmoreland. The bishopric is valued in the king's books at 420*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* There are two archdeaconries, viz. Chester and Richmond.

BISHOPRIC OF DURHAM.

THE seat of this see was first fixed at Lindisfarne, or Holy Island, a small isle on the coast of Northumberland; but from this spot the monks were driven by the invasions of the Danes. They next fixed themselves at Chester-on-the-Street, where they remained nearly two hundred years, and then settled finally at Durham, having, during their peregrination from Lindisfarne, carried the bones of St. Cuthbert, the sixth bishop, with them; and when the cathedral of Durham was founded, these relics were deposited within it. To this saint the church was dedicated, and he also gave name to the large possessions of the church, which were anciently called "St. Cuthbert's patrimony." Durham has been deemed the richest bishopric in the kingdom; and the prebends have been frequently styled "the golden prebends of Durham." The bishops take precedence next after the bishops of London. The present beautiful cathedral was begun soon after the Norman Conquest, by William, the thirtieth bishop, and finished by his successors. The diocese contains the whole counties of Durham and Northumberland, and the jurisdiction of Hexham, in the latter county. The see is valued in the king's books at 282*l.* 1*s.* 5*d.*: it has three archdeaconries, viz., Durham, Northumberland, and Lindisfarne. Durham has given to the Church of Rome eight saints and one cardinal; and to the English nation one lord chief justice, five lord chancellors, three lord treasurers, one principal secretary of state, one chancellor to the university of Oxford, and two masters of the rolls.

BISHOPRIC OF MANCHESTER.

THIS see is of very recent erection. It was founded in accordance with the "Third Report of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, appointed to consider the state of the Established Church in England and Wales," printed in 1836. This report recommended the formation of the bishopric of Manchester, and an act of parliament was passed, 6th and 7th William IV., cap. 77 (Aug. 13, in that year) whereby his majesty, in council, was empowered to carry into effect the recommendations of the commissioners.¹ And by a further act, passed in 1847 (the 10th and 11th of Victoria, cap. 108), followed by an order in council, gazetted Sept. 1., in the latter year, this bishopric was constituted. The diocese comprises the greater part of the county of Lancaster, being for the purpose separated from the diocese of Chester.

BISHOP OF MANCHESTER.

1847. James Prince Lee, head master of king Edward VI.'s School, Birmingham. Oct. 18; consecrated at Whitehall Chapel, Jan. 23, 1848; called to the house of peers by writ of summons, Feb. same year. The first and PRESENT (1851) Lord Bishop of Manchester.

¹ An order in council was gazetted in Oct. 1838, declaring that the sees of St. Asaph and Bangor should be united on the next vacancy in either (as recommended by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners) and on that event occurring, that the bishopric of Manchester should be immediately created. The union of the sees of St. Asaph and Bangor did not, however, take place; and the see of Manchester was afterwards created by the act of 1847, and the order in council that followed it, irrespective of this contingency.

BISHOPRIC OF RIPON.

THIS bishopric is of recent creation. It was founded in accordance with the "Third Report of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners appointed to consider the state of the Established Church in England and Wales," in 1836. This report recommended the formation (among other sees) of the see of Ripon; and an act of parliament was passed in the 6th and 7th of William IV. (Aug. 13th in that year), whereby his majesty, in council, was empowered to constitute the bishopric. And an order in council, carrying into effect the recommendation of the commissioners was made accordingly, and gazetted on the 13th of October following. The diocese consists of the western portion of the county of York.

BISHOP OF RIPON.

1836. Charles-Thomas Longley, head-master of Harrow. The first and PRESENT (1851) Lord Bishop of the see.

BISHOPRIC OF HEXHAM.

THIS bishopric was founded in the infancy of the Saxon Church. Ten bishops enjoyed it successively; and then, by reason of the spoil and rapine of the Danes, it was discontinued, Tydfrith, the last bishop, driven away by these invaders, having died on a journey to Rome. The district in which the see was situated was anciently a county palatine; but by an act of parliament, 37th of Henry VIII., it was annexed to the county of Northumberland.

766. Alhmund.

BISHOPRIC OF SODOR AND MAN.

THE bishopric of Man was affirmed by pope Gregory IV. It had, united to its diocese, the Western Isles of Scotland, which, when Man became dependent upon England, withdrew their obedience and had a bishop of their own. The patronage of the diocese was given, together with the island, to the Stanleys, and it ultimately came, by an heir-female, to the duke of Athol. The duke nominates the bishop to the king, who sends him to the archbishop of York for consecration. This prelate is not a lord of parliament, not holding from the king himself. The bishopric is united to that of Sodor, a village of Icolmkill, one of the Hebrides of Scotland; this latter was formerly a bishop's see, which comprehended all the islands together with the Isle of Man; and the bishop of Man is called "Bishop of Sodor and Man." The diocese consists of the Island of Man.

 1847. Hon. Robert-John Eden. The PRESENT (1851) Lord Bishop of Sodor and Man; who, on the decease of his brother, the earl of Auckland, in 1849, succeeded to the title.¹

* * * We follow Godwin, Heylyn, Le Neve, and others of the elder writers in giving the earlier prelates of each see. Sir Harris Nicolas does not commence his Catalogue of the bishops of England before the period of the Conquest, from which time the succession is, of course, more distinct and certain. But professing, as we do, to render our account of every institution perfect, as far as practicable, we determined upon tracing the hishops of our Church from the first ages of Christianity and the original foundation of their respective sees. If we may happen to err occasionally in a name or a date, we err with the distinguished antiquaries we have mentioned. The records of more than a thousand years ago are often, from causes that at once strike the mind, almost impenetrable to the most laborious research, but the results of the inquiries of illustrious men, even though they may not have produced a regular succession of our hishops, are, notwithstanding, of the highest interest and value. In many of the preceding lists, where Heylyn and Le Neve differ from each other in the precise name of a prelate, owing to the various and unsettled orthography of past ages, we have written the name as we find it in both these authorities, adopting, in this respect, the course taken by the most eminent modern writers of Ecclesiastical History.

¹ Lord Auckland is, consequently, in right of his earldom, a peer of parliament; but, as bishop of Sodor and Man, he has no seat in the house of lords. The operation of the act, 10th and 11th of Victoria, cap. 108, does not affect this see.

THE MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER.

THIS Most Noble and Illustrious Order¹ (if we consider either its antiquity, or the nobleness of the personages that have been inrolled therein,) excels and outvies all other institutions of honour in the whole world, and owes its origin to the great hero of that age, Edward III., who conquered France and Scotland, and brought their kings prisoners to England.

The Order began in 1349-50, the 24th year of his reign, viz. : 119 years before the foundation of the order of St. Michael, by Lewis XI., king of France, in 1469 ; eighty years before the institution of the order of the Golden Fleece, by Philip II., the second duke of Burgundy, in 1430 ; and 190 years before king James VI. of Scotland restored the order of St. Andrew, or the Thistle ; and 209 years before the order of the Elephant was instituted in Denmark. Its origin is as follows :

King Edward, with a view to recovering France (which descended to him by right of his mother), made it his business to draw the best soldiers of Europe into his interest, and thereupon projecting and setting up king Arthur's Round Table, he proclaimed a solemn tilting, to invite foreigners of quality and courage to the exercise.

The place for the solemnity being fixed at Windsor, he, upon new-year's day, in the year 1344, published his royal letters of protection, for the safe coming and return of such foreign Knights as had a mind to venture their reputation at those jousts and tournaments, which were to be held on the 19th of January ensuing.

Moreover, he provided a great supper, to begin the solemnity ; and then ordaining this feast to be annually held at Whitsuntide, he, for that purpose, erected a particular building in the castle, wherein he placed a round table of 200 ft. diameter, in imitation of king Arthur's at Winchester, and thereat entertained the Knights, at his own expence, of 100*l.* per week.

This mighty and invincible prince Edward, being endowed with great piety, recommended himself and his companions to the protection of St. George of Cappadocia, whose parents, being Christians, afforded their son the advantage of being educated in that religion ; and he taking to the profession of arms, was made a tribune, or colonel, (in Palestine, his mother's country), and behaving with great courage, he was raised to higher stations by the emperor Dioclesian. But St. George complaining to the emperor of the severities he practised towards the Christians, and arguing in their defence, was thereupon thrown into prison, and cruelly treated. The emperor, however, perceiving that his constancy to the Christian religion was not to be shaken off, St. George was, on the 23rd of April, in the year 290, drawn through the city, and beheaded. Thus he received a crown of martyrdom. And that he might be held in continual remembrance, king Edward gave his companions, for part of their daily habit, the image of the saint (sitting upon horseback, encountering a dragon, with a tilting-spear), appendant to a blue riband, continually to be worn about their necks.

In 1347, the said king, issuing out his Garter, for the signal of a battle that was crowned with success (supposed to be Cressy), where he took John, king of France, prisoner, and brought him to England, at which time he had also David, king of Scotland, prisoner in England ; and his eldest son, Edward the Black Prince (so called from his black armour), expelling the rebels of Castile, and enthroning Don Pedro, their lawful king ; he, upon these mighty and glorious exploits, soon after instituted this Order, giving the Garter pre-eminence amongst its ensigns², whence the select

² The collar, which weighs twenty ounces of pure gold, was introduced by king Henry VIII., and consists of twenty-six Garters enamelled, and as many knots, allusive to the Sovereign of the Order and his twenty-five Knights Companions, and, with roses and mottoes, are exactly formed and joined, with St. George, on horseback, in armour, appendant. The medal, being of pure gold, is often enriched with jewels. The collar is put over a hood and mantle, and fastened to the shoulders by a silver riband.

Until the reign of king Charles II. the riband, with a lesser George, used to be worn round the neck, but Charles ordered it in future to be worn from the left shoulder, coming under the right arm. And the same king commanded, that the Sovereign and Knights Companions, also the prelate and chancellor of the Order, should at all times, in all places and assemblies, when they were not adorned with their robes, wear, upon the left side of their coats, cloaks, or riding cassocks, the cross of the Order, encompassed with the Garter, to show the world number, whom he incorporated into a fraternity, were styled, Equites aurea Periscelide, viz. KNIGHTS OF THE GOLDEN GARTER.

The royal founder of this illustrious Order having established rules and statutes for its government, next resolved to elect, from those who had most signalised themselves by their heroic actions, twenty-five of the most celebrated Knights, who, together with himself, should make up the number to twenty-six, of which number this Order has almost always consisted. When the Order was founded, the famous William de Wykeham, bishop of Winchester, who was minister to King Edward III., had influence with that monarch to get himself named as the prelate to the Order, which office he got annexed to his see.

By a statute bearing date June 28, 1831, it was ordained that in future the Order should consist of the Sovereign and twenty-five Knights, together with such lineal descendants of his Majesty George I. as shall have been, or may hereafter be, elected Knights of the most noble Order of the Garter.

KNIGHTS OF THE BATH.

THE knighthood of the Bath is supposed to have been adopted by the ancient Franks, inhabitants of Lower Germany, with whom, it is highly probable, the Saxons, who invaded England, had the same common descent, and who, with other customs, upon their settling here, introduced the same method of knighthood. These ancient Franks, when they conferred knighthood, observed, amongst other solemn rites, bathing before they performed their vigils; which rites continued to be practised in England, and hence the members were denominated "Knights of the Bath."

In the reign of Henry IV. there was a degree of knighthood under the express appellation of "The Bath."¹ That king, on the day of his coronation in the Tower of London, conferred the dignity of knighthood upon forty-six esquires, who had watched all the night before, and had bathed themselves. From that time it was customary with our kings to confer this dignity upon their coronations, the coronations of their queens, the birth and marriage of the royal issue, and the first advancement of their sons to honours. They conferred it, also, upon their designed expeditions against their foreign enemies, upon installations of Knights of the Garter, and when some grand anniversary festivals were celebrated. The last Knights of the Bath so made, were installed at the coronation of king Charles II. in 1661; after which time the Order was neglected, until the year 1725, when king George I. was graciously pleased to revive it, and to provide a book of statutes for the government of the Order. By these statutes the number of the knights was fixed at thirty-eight, viz. : the Sovereign and thirty-seven Knights Companions. — Beaton.

The king ordained the chapel of king Henry VII. to be the chapel of the Order, and directed that each Knight's banner, with plates of his arms and style, should be placed over the respective stalls of the Knights, in manner as those of the Knights of the Garter in St. George's chapel in the same castle of Windsor, and he allowed them supporters to their arms. — Idem.

THE EXTENSION OR RE-ORGANISATION OF THE ORDER, in 1815.

“WHITEHALL, January 2, 1815.

“WHEREAS His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, acting in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty (George III.) sovereign of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath, is desirous of commemorating the auspicious termination of the long and arduous contests in which this empire has been engaged, and of marking in an especial manner his gracious sense of the valour, perseverance, and devotion of the officers of His Majesty's forces by sea and land; and whereas His Royal Highness has thought fit, by virtue of the royal prerogative, and of the power reserved to the sovereign in the statutes of the said Most Honourable Military Order, to advance the splendour and extend the limits of the said Order, to the end that those officers who have had the opportunities of signalling themselves by eminent services during the late war may share in the honours of the said Order, and that their names may be handed down to remote posterity, accompanied by the marks of distinction which they have so nobly earned; the Prince Regent has therefore been graciously pleased to ordain as follows:

“The Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath shall from this time forward be comprised of three classes, differing in their ranks and degrees of dignity.

“The First Class shall consist of Knights Grand Crosses, which designation shall be substituted henceforward for that of Knights Companions, and from the date hereof the present Knights Companions and extra Knights of the Order shall in all acts, proceedings, and pleadings be styled Knights Grand Crosses of the Most Honourable Military Order of the Bath. The number of the Knights Grand Crosses shall not at any time or upon any account whatever exceed seventy-two, whereof there may be a number not exceeding twelve, so nominated and appointed in consideration of eminent services rendered to the state by British subjects in civil and diplomatic employments. The dignity of a Knight Grand Cross shall not be conferred upon any officer who shall not have attained the rank of major-general in the army or rear-admiral in the navy, except as to the twelve Knights Grand Crosses, who may be appointed on account of civil services.

“The Second Class of the Order shall be composed of Knights Commanders, whose number shall not exceed one hundred and eighty, exclusive of foreign Officers holding British commissions, and shall take place and precedence before all Knights Bachelors of the United Kingdom.

“The Third Class of the Order shall be composed of Officers holding commissions in His Majesty's service by sea or land, who shall be styled Companions of the said Order. They shall not be entitled to the appellation, style, precedence, or privileges of Knights Bachelors, but shall take place and precedence of all Esquires.”

In 1847 (April 14) the number of Knights Grand Crosses was increased to Fifty Military, and Twenty-five Civil, Knights; so ordained by Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The other classes were also increased in the number of Knights.

¹ The dates inserted in this Roll within parentheses, are those of the creation of knighthood between the revival of the Order in 1725, and the year 1815, when it was enlarged. The dates of the death of the Knights are taken from the records at the Heralds' College.

² In O'Byrne's beautiful volume of Naval Biography, recently published, and which contains able sketches of the lives and actions of every living officer in the service, is an animated account of the glorious career of lord Dundonald, and a triumphant vindication of his lordship from the aspersions that for a time obscured his name, and led to the removal of his banner of knighthood from Henry VII.'s chapel. To the honour of William IV., his majesty, soon after his accession, restored lord Dundonald to the service, and subsequently, he recovered all the distinctions that had rewarded his innumerable gallant exploits during a long life devoted to his country.

PART V.

SCOTLAND.

THE OFFICERS OF STATE, AND OTHER GREAT OFFICERS OF SCOTLAND.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR.

THE Lord Chancellor was the chief in matters of justice; and in the laws of Malcolm II. he is placed before all other officers; and from these laws it appears that he had the principal direction of the Chancery or Chancellary. He had the custody of the king's seal; and he was the king's most intimate counsellor, as appears by an old ordinance, cited by Sir James Balfour: "The Chancellor sall, at al tymes, assist the King, in giving him counsall nair secretly nor the rest of the nobility, to quhais ordinances all officiaris, als well of the realme as of the Kingis hous, sould answer and obey. The Chancellor sall be ludgit neir unto the Kingis Grace, for keiping of his bodie, and the seill; and that he may be readie, baith day and nicht, at the Kingis command." By having the custody of the great seal, he had an opportunity of examining the king's grants and other deeds which were to pass under it, and to cancel them if they appeared against law, or were obtained surreptitiously, or by false suggestions.

James VI. ordained that the Lord Chancellor should have the first place and rank in the nation, ratione officii, by virtue whereof he presided in the parliament, and in all courts of judicature. After the Restoration of Charles II. the Lord Chancellor was declared by act of parliament, by virtue of his office, president in all the meetings of parliament, or other public judicatures of the kingdom. Although this act was made to declare the Chancellor president of the exchequer as well as other courts, yet in 1663 the king declared the lord treasurer to be president of that court.

The office of Lord Chancellor was abolished by the Union, there being no further use for the judicial part of the office; and a lord keeper of the great seal was appointed, with a salary of 3000*l. per annum.*

THE LORD HIGH TREASURER OF SCOTLAND.

THIS office was established on the return of James I. to Scotland from his long captivity in England. He then made a High Treasurer as well as a chamberlain (whose functions were now confined solely to the government of the boroughs). The king's revenue being entirely in the management of the Treasurer, his business was to examine and pass the accounts of the sheriffs and others concerned in levying the revenues of the kingdom.

In 1617 the Treasurer was ranked by an ordinance of king James VI. as the first officer of state; and, in 1623, when his majesty determined the precedency of his counsellors, he was ranked next to the chancellor: in 1663, he was declared president of the exchequer. The office of comptroller, which was sometimes joined with that of Treasurer, and designated computorum rotulator, and that of collector of the new augmentations, both distinct offices from that of the Treasurer, were conjoined into one by James VI., and exercised by the Treasurer until the treasury was put in commission.

NOTE. — The Lord Treasurer of Scotland had, by the law of that country, a seat in its parliament, in virtue of his office, independently of election; and when the treasury was in commission, the king had a right to name any commissioner to sit and vote as Lord Treasurer in parliament. The members of the treasury board marked thus * were so empowered by his majesty.

LORD PRIVY SEAL OF SCOTLAND.

This office was established by James I. on his return to Scotland from his captivity in England. In Scotland, in ancient times, in the attestation of writings, seals were commonly affixed to them in place of the subscription; but from this practice great inconvenience arose, in consequence whereof it became the usage to affix the seal after the subscription, to render deeds, and other papers of importance, the more valid. In writs granted by the king, the affixing of his seal alone gave them sufficient authority, without signing. The seal was kept by the lord chancellor. When, however, business increased, a keeper of the Privy or King's Seal was (as already said) created by James I., who wished to model the officers about his court after those he had seen at the court of England; and the affixing of the Privy Seal to any deed became a preparatory step to obtain the great seal to it; but it was, in some cases, a sufficient sanction of itself to writs that were not to pass the great seal. As most of the writs which were to pass under the great seal were first to pass the Privy Seal, greater opportunity was afforded to examine the king's writs, and so prevent his majesty or his subjects from being hurt by obreption or fraud.

LORD HIGH ADMIRAL OF SCOTLAND.

THIS officer in Scotland had very extensive powers. He commanded the king's ships and sailors, and had the inspection of all the sea-ports, harbours, and sea-coasts in the kingdom; and had a particular tribunal, where the judges, appointed by him, decided all causes relating to sea affairs, and these according to a particular code of naval law. His powers likewise extended to the cognisance of all crimes committed at sea, and to all controversies, actions, and quarrels, concerning crimes, faults, and trespasses committed upon the sea, or in the ports and creeks thereof, or in fresh waters and navigable rivers, so far as the sea flows and ebbs. This duty he executed by a deputy, commissioned by him, called the Deputy Judge-Admiral, who likewise judged in matters purely commercial, arising on the sea.

Adam Hepburn, earl of Bothwell, was made hereditary Lord Admiral of Scotland; and, upon his forfeiture, it was conferred in like manner upon Francis Stewart, earl of Bothwell. The latter having also been attainted, James VI. conferred it upon his cousin the duke of Lenox and Richmond; but the male line of this family becoming extinct in 1672, Charles II. conferred it upon his natural son, whom he created duke of Lenox and Richmond, who resigned it into the hands of the crown in 1703. After the Treaty of Union, a vice-admiral only was appointed by the sovereign, and that simply to act as a judge in civil affairs relating to naval and commercial concerns in Scotland.¹

ROLL OF THE LORD HIGH ADMIRALS OF SCOTLAND.

 Henry, earl of Orkney; to king Robert III.	1567. James, earl of Bothwell, and duke of Orkney; attainted.
 George, earl of Caithness; to king James II.	1578. James, earl of Morton; beheaded.
 William, earl of Caithness and Orkney; to the same king.	1583. Francis, earl of Bothwell.
1474. David, earl of Craufurd.	1626. James, duke of Lenox and Richmond; heritably.
1482. Alexander, duke of Albany.	 John, earl of Linlithgow: made admiral during the duke of Lenox's minority.
 Andrew Wood, of Largo; he was never admiral; but, in 1477, was master of the Yellow Carvel . In James IV.'s time, his son defended the castle of Dumharton against the English.	1633. James, duke of Lenox.
1502. Patrick, earl of Bothwell.	 H. R. H. JAMES, duke of YORK and ALBANY.
 James, earl of Arran.	1668. Alexander, earl of Kincardine, vice-admiral.
 Archibald, earl of Angus.	1673. William, duke of Hamilton.
 Robert, lord Maxwell.	— Charles, duke of Lenox and Richmond.
1511. Adam, earl of Bothwell; heritably.	1705. James, duke of Montrose.
1544. Patrick, earl of Bothwell.	1706. David, earl of Wemyss. The LAST Lord Admiral of Scotland.

THE GREAT CHAMBERLAIN OF SCOTLAND.

THE Great Chamberlain of Scotland was ranked by king Malcolm as the third great officer of the crown, and was called Camerarius Domini Regis. Before the appointment of a treasurer, it was his duty to collect the revenue of the crown, and to disburse the money necessary for the king's expenses, and the maintenance of the royal household. From the time that a treasurer was appointed, his province was limited to the boroughs throughout the kingdom, where he was a sort of justice-general, as he had a power for judging of all crimes committed within the borough. He was to hold Chamberlain-ayres every year, of which court he was the supreme judge.

The smallness of his salary, 200*l.* per annum, and his great powers, had no doubt been the causes of much oppression in this officer, and the Chamberlain-ayre was called rather a legal robbery than a court of justice; and when the combined lords seized James VI., August 24, 1582, and carried him to Ruthven castle, they issued a proclamation in the king's name, discharging the Chamberlain from holding courts.

This office was granted heritably to the family of Stuart, dukes of Lenox; and when their male line failed, Charles II. conferred it in like manner, heritably, upon his natural son, whom he created duke of Monmouth; and on his forfeiture it went to the duke of Lenox; but that family surrendered the office to the crown in 1703.

1249. Robert de Meyners.	1330. James Bennet, bishop of St. Andrew's.
1256. David Lindsay, lord Craufurd.	1335. Sir William Bullock.

¹ The office of Admiral of Scotland reverted to the crown on the death of the last duke of Lenox and Richmond, of the name of Stuart, in 1673. The king then bestowed it upon his natural son (an infant), Charles Lenox, afterwards duke of Richmond and Lenox, with a reservation of a term for life to his royal brother James, duke of York. In 1673, William, duke of Hamilton, was appointed Admiral of Scotland, and after his death the office was managed by commissioners till the duke of Richmond became of age; and he resigned the office to the crown in 1703.

THE LORD HIGH STEWARD OF SCOTLAND.

THE next great officer of the crown was the Lord High Steward. He was judge of the king's household, and the whole family of the royal palace was under his care. This office was esteemed of great dignity, and was held heritably for many years by one family, who at last, when surnames came into use, assumed for theirs the name of their office, Steward, or Stuart. This was done by Walter, the son of Alan, who was at the same time justiciar to king Alexander II., in 1230. This family was frequently nearly allied to the crown, and at last succeeded to it in the person of Robert, eldest son to Walter Steward, or Stuart, in the year 1371. Robert, just named, was the ninth heritable Lord High Steward of Scotland, and his son John, afterwards Robert III., was created by his father prince and Steward of Scotland, since which time the eldest son of the king is natus Senescallus Scotiae.

THE LORD HIGH CONSTABLE OF SCOTLAND.

THIS is the next great officer of the crown, and whose office is of great antiquity and dignity. He had two grand prerogatives, viz., first, the keeping of the king's sword, which the king, at his promotion, when he swears fealty, delivers to him naked. Hence the badge of the Constable is a naked sword. Second, the absolute and unlimited command of the king's armies while in the field, in the absence of the king; but this command did not extend to castles and garrisons. He was likewise judge of all crimes committed within two leagues of the king's house, which precinct was called the Chalmers of Peace.

The jurisdiction of this office came at last to be exercised only as to crimes during the time of parliament, which some extended likewise to all general conventions. The office was conferred heritably upon the noble family of Erroll by king Robert Bruce, and with them it still remains, having been expressly reserved by the Treaty of Union.

THE EARL MARISCHAL OF SCOTLAND.

THE Marischal is a German word and office, viz., a maker of camps; and the axe, which he bears as the badge of his office, was the instrument with which he broke ground, though this part of his office came to be delegated to Marischal du Camp. The Marischal commanded the cavalry, whereas the constable commanded the whole army. They seem to have had a sort of joint command, as of old all orders were addressed to "our Constable and Marischal." The office of Earl Marischal has never been out of the noble family of Keith. It was reserved at the Union; and when the heritable jurisdictions were bought, it was in the crown, having been forfeited by the rebellion of George Keith, Earl Marischal, in 1715.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE IN SCOTLAND.

THIS office in Scotland was nearly the same with that of the Great Prothonotary, which agreed with the Primicerius Notarium among the Romans. He was of the prince's council, and acted therein as his secretary. The Secretary was constantly to attend the king's person; to receive all petitions and memorials that were presented to him, and to write the king's answers upon them. All letters-patent passed through his hand, and were drawn up by him; and all the king's letters, despatches, warrants, and orders, were written out by him, and generally subscribed by him. He was answerable for them if they contained anything contrary to the laws of the land, or derogatory to the king's honour and dignity.

The office was kept up for some time after the Union; but since the year 1746 there has been no Secretary of State for Scotland.

THE LORD CLERK REGISTER OF SCOTLAND.

THE Clerk Register was anciently the principal clerk in the kingdom : from him all other clerks, who were his deputies, derived their immediate authority, and he himself acted as clerk to the parliament and council. He was called Clericus Rotulorum, because the proceedings of parliament, and minutes and judgments of other courts, were written upon rolls of parchment (hence the term Rotuli Parliamenti), which were preserved by him in the public archives. By the Treaty of Union, the preservation of the registers was particularly provided for ; and the return of the election of the sixteen Scottish peers to the British parliament was ordered to be made by the Clerk Register, or by two of the clerks of session deputed by him for that purpose.

THE LORD JUSTICE-GENERAL OF SCOTLAND.

THE Lord Chief Justice, or, as he was called in Scotland, the Lord Justice-General, was placed next in rank to the lord chancellor. He was anciently, before the court of session was erected, the grand justiciar of Scotland, and his court was originally the only sovereign court of the kingdom, and had a great part of that jurisdiction which now belongs to the court of session; and even after the erection of that court several civil causes came before it; but at length its powers were confined to criminal matters alone, and the Justice-General was empowered to name his own deputies. In 1671, the court of justiciary was constituted, nearly as it now stands, by a commission under the great seal, afterwards ratified by regulations made in 1672. The kingdom was divided into three circuits, to which the judges went once a-year; but after the suppression of the heritable jurisdictions, the assizes were held twice a-year. Anciently the kingdom was divided into two justiciaries, viz., the north and the south of the Frith of Forth. The office was hereditary in several families; but the family of Argyll surrendered it to the crown, for a valuable consideration, in 1628, which arrangement was ratified by parliament in 1633. From that time it was disposed of either for life, or during pleasure, by a commission under the great seal.

EXTRAORDINARY LORDS OF SESSION.

THE designation "Extraordinary Lords of Session," expresses a distinction between those functionaries and the Ordinary Lords of Session. The Extraordinary Lords of Session were lords of parliament appointed by the crown to sit and vote in court along with the permanent judges. This "manifest impropriety," as a recent writer justly observes, was abolished by act of parliament in the tenth year of George II. The following is a roll of the Extraordinary Lords of Session up to that time.

THE LORD PRESIDENTS AND JUDGES OF THE COURT OF SESSION.

THE Court of Session is the supreme civil court of justice in Scotland. It received its name and derives its constitution under a statute passed in the 20th year of James V., 1532. The functions now discharged by this court were performed by parliamentary committees previously to the above-mentioned year; but even until the period of the Revolution the condition of the court was very defective. The judges, upon their appointment, assume a title from their surnames or their estates, which is conceded to them by ancient usage, and though purely official, is recognised by courtesy in social intercourse.

THE LORD ADVOCATE OF SCOTLAND.

THE Lord Advocate is the same, in regard to functions, in Scotland, as the Attorney-General is in England. His business is to pursue and defend in all causes wherein the king has an interest. His office is very honourable, and he is, in virtue of it, styled Lord. The power and privileges of the Lord Advocate are very great; among the latter, he is allowed to sit within the bar of the court of session covered, where only the peers of the realm are allowed to sit. He can issue warrants for searching, apprehending, and imprisoning, in any part of Scotland; and his warrants are as valid as those of any judge. And as it was decided in the parliament of Paris in 1685, that the king's advocate might at the same time be a judge, so in like manner was it allowed in Scotland; and both sir William Oliphant and sir John Nesbit were Lords Advocate and Lords of Session at the same time.

THE LORD PROVOST OF EDINBURGH.

The municipal affairs of the city of Edinburgh are administered by a corporation called the Town Council, consisting of thirty-three persons. These are the Lord Provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, an old provost, four old bailies, an old dean of guild, an old treasurer, three merchant councillors, two trades councillors, six ordinary council deacons, and eight extraordinary council deacons. The members of the town council are in part elected by those of the fourteen incorporations, and they partly choose their own successors. The Lord Provost is high sheriff, coroner, and admiral within the city and liberties, and within the town, harbour, and port of Leith: he has also jurisdiction in capital cases; he is præses of the convention of royal boroughs, colonel of the trained bands, of the city guard, and captain of the gaol. Within the city he takes precedence of all the great officers of state and the nobility, walking at the right hand of the king, or of his majesty's commissioner; and has the privilege of having a sword and mace borne before him. The bailies have jurisdiction under the Provost; the dean of guild has the charge of the public buildings, and without his warrant no house can be erected within the city. All the magistrates are sheriffs depute and justices of the peace.

ARCHBISHOPS AND BISHOPS OF SCOTLAND.

To present an exact account of the Bishops of Scotland is next to impossible. Almost all the authors who mention them, differ from each other so much that correctness is extremely difficult to be arrived at. This, however, is the less to be wondered at, when it is considered that the country, for many centuries after the establishment of Christianity, was desolated with intestine broils and by foreign invasions; and in the midst of a rude and barbarous people, it cannot be supposed that religious houses were regarded as sacred by the stronger party, when revenge or plunder suited their inclination or schemes. The records of most of the religious fraternities in Scotland, were, at different times, either destroyed or carried off; so that a catalogue of its Bishops can only be ascertained, partially, from charters they had granted, or been witnesses to; even the public archives give but a feeble assistance for some centuries after the establishment of prelacies. In Scotland there were two Archbishoprics, St. Andrew's and Glasgow; and twelve Bishoprics, Aberdeen, Argyll, Brechin, Caithness, Dunblane, Dunkeld, Edinburgh (erected into a see so late as 1633, by Charles I.), Galloway, the Isles, Moray, Orkney, and Ross. Although Glasgow was made archiepiscopal, St. Andrew's was always accounted the metropolitan see; and, before it arrived at the dignity of an Archbishopric, resisted, with great spirit, the attempts of the Archbishops of York in England to become the metropolitans of Scotland. The sees of Argyll, Galloway, and the Isles, were suffragans to Glasgow; all the others to St. Andrew's.

THE SEE OF ST. ANDREW'S.

THE legendary tale of the transporting some relics of the apostle St. Andrew from the city of Patræ, in Achaia, is recorded by all the ancient Scottish historians; and we may be expected, therefore, to transcribe it here, as, according to them, it was not only the means of founding this see, but of introducing Christianity into Scotland:—

“Regulus, a Greek monk, living at Patræ (by whom the relics of St. Andrew the apostle were preserved and kept), about the year 370, was warned by a vision in the night (three nights before the emperor Constantius came to the city for the purpose of translating these relics to Constantinople), to go to the shrine in which the relics were kept, and také therefrom the arm-bone, three fingers of the right hand, a tooth, and one of the caps of the apostle's knees, which he should carefully preserve, and carry with him to a region towards the west, situated in the utmost parts of the world. Regulus, at first troubled with the strangeness of the vision, after a little time, resolved to obey. So, putting the relics in a small box, he went to sea, taking carpenters with him, Damianus, a presbyter, Gelasius, and Cubaculus, two deacons, eight hermits, and three devout virgins. After long storms the vessel was driven into the bay near the place where St. Andrew's now stands, and was there totally wrecked upon a rock; but Regulus and his companions were all brought safe ashore, having saved only the relics.”

“Hergustus, king of the Picts, (in whose dominions the shire of Fife, and all the low country of Scotland, then was,) came to visit them in the place where they had settled (now St. Andrew's), then a forest for wild boars, and called Muckcross. The king changed the name to Kilmont, the King's Mount, and gave to Regulus and his company all the land of that forest, and erected a church, which was afterwards dedicated to St. Rule or Regulus, and continues standing to this day.”

Abernethy, in Perthshire, was the metropolis of the kingdom of the Picts. The collegiate church there was dedicated to St. Bridget, or Bryde, who died about 523. Kenneth III., having conquered the Picts, translated the see from Abernethy, and called it St. Andrew's, and the bishop was styled Maximus Scotorum Episcopus. It was erected into an Archbishopric in 1470, by the pope.

This diocese contained the greater part of the shire of Fife, with a part of Perth, Forfar, and Kincardine, and a number of parishes, churches, and chapels, in other dioceses.

¹ John was elected bishop, but the king opposed him, and caused his chaplain, Hugh, to be consecrated. John went to Rome to plead his cause; and the pope (Alexander III.) was so convinced of the justness of it, that he sent him home with a nuncio, who made Matthew, bishop of Aberdeen, consecrate him in the abbey of Holyrood House. Still the king continued inflexible, and John went a second time to Rome, and continued seven years in voluntary exile. The pope was about to interdict the kingdom, but John prevailed with him to desist; and the bishopric of Dunkeld falling vacant, the king was willing that John should have it, and he accepted of it.

² His acceptance of this office drew upon him the resentment of the king, as it had been conferred without his privy or consent. The clergy, too, who were become abandoned and licentious to a high degree, dreaded his virtue and his legantine powers, which were exerted to enforce a reformation of manners amongst them, and they conspired to the ruin of the new archbishop; who, at length borne down by the displeasure of the court and their machinations, ended his days in Lochleven castle, dying of a broken heart.

1679. Alexander Burnet; translated from Glasgow: died in 1684.
1684. Arthur Ross; translated from Glasgow: the last archbishop of this see: ejected soon after the Revolution.

BISHOPRIC OF ABERDEEN.

KING MALCOLM II., having gained a great victory over the Danes in 1010, resolved to found a new bishopric in token of his gratitude for his success, and pitched upon Mortlach, in Banffshire. The see was only inferior, in point of precedence, to St. Andrew's, but its revenue was inconsiderable; and Nectanus, the fourth and last prelate who sat at Mortlach, was removed by David I., in 1139, to Old Aberdeen, whither the see was entirely transferred in 1154, and where it continued until the Revolution. The diocese contained most part of the shires of Aberdeen and Banff.

1577. David Cunningham, sub-dean of Glasgow; the first protestant bishop of this see: died in 1603.
1603. Peter Blackburn, rector of St. Nicholas's church, Aberdeen.

¹ This prelate had, in a great measure, the direction of all civil affairs in Scotland; he possessed great abilities, but was a proud, cruel, and unrelenting tyrant. His oppressions drew upon him general hatred and detestation, and he was murdered in the castle of St. Andrew's, on the 1st of February, 1545, by Norman Leslie (son to the earl of Rothes) and his associates.

² He was at different times lord privy seal, and lord treasurer; and was one of queen Mary's privy council, and a steady friend to that unfortunate princess. He was declared a traitor by the regent, the earl of Murray; and being in the castle of Dumbarton when that fortress was taken by surprise, he was seized and carried to Stirling, where, on April 1, 1570, he was hanged on a tree.

BISHOPRIC OF BRECHIN.

THIS see was founded by David I. in 1150. The diocese comprehended the greater part of the county of Forfar, with a part of Kincardineshire. The cathedral, a stately Gothic pile, 166 feet in length, and 61 in breadth, was seated on the edge of a precipitous bank descending to the river South Eske; and the west end of this structure forms the present elegant and commodious parish church. There anciently existed here an abbey or convent of Culdees.

BISHOPRIC OF CAITHNESS.

IT is uncertain whether this see owes its foundation to Malcolm III. or to Malcolm IV. Its seat was at Dornoch, and most part of the counties of Sutherland and Caithness were in its diocese. The bishop's palace, from the appearance of its stately ruins, must have been once a sumptuous edifice. The now market-place was the churchyard of the ancient cathedral; the remains of which venerable structure are used as the parish church.

BISHOPRIC OF DUNBLANE.

IN Dunblane, a small town of Strathallan, existed anciently a convent of Culdees, which David I. erected into an episcopal see about the year 1142. The church was dedicated to St. Blaas, who had been superior of the convent in the time of Kenneth III.; and from this saint the place took its name.

The diocese comprehended the west and south parts of Perthshire. The list of the Bishops is very incorrect; but the fault is now beyond remedy.

BISHOPRIC OF DUNKELD.

CONSTANTINE III., king of the Picts, founded a monastery of Culdees here, which was dedicated to St. Columba, the patron saint of that nation. King David, or, as he is called, St. David, expelled the Culdees, changed their church into a cathedral, and founded the see about the year 1127. The diocese comprehended the north part of Perthshire, a small part of Fifeshire, and some parishes in Lothian.

 1664. Henry Guthrie, formerly parson of Stirling; but had been deposed in 1648.
 1677. James Lindsay, minister of Perth.
 1679. Andrew Bruce, archdeacon of St. Andrew's: deprived in 1686, for non-compliance with some of the court measures; but when the nation became roused at the progress of popery, he was made bishop of Orkney, in May 1688.
 1686. John Hamilton: died one of the ministers of Edinburgh, after the Revolution.

¹ In this bishop's time, the prelates of Dunblane were made deans of the Chapel Royal, which formerly appertained to the bishops of Galloway.

BISHOPRIC OF EDINBURGH.

THIS see was founded by Charles I., at the time his majesty was in Scotland, in 1633. He allotted the parishes of the shires of Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Haddington, and a part of Berwick and Stirling shires, to compose this diocese, and the church of St. Giles, in the city of Edinburgh, was made the cathedral. This edifice is said to have been first built in the ninth century; but the present erection is of much later date.

BISHOPRIC OF MORAY.

THE see of Moray was founded by king Malcolm III., surnamed Canmore. The seat of the see was at Elgin, a fair town, situated on the river Lossie, about three miles from its mouth. The cathedral was a magnificent structure, dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The diocese comprehended all the county of Elgin, and part of Banffshire, with some parishes in Aberdeenshire, all Nairn, and a part of Inverness.

BISHOPRIC OF ORKNEY.

VARIOUS and uncertain are the accounts of the founding of this see. Considering that the Orkney and Shetland islands were subject sometimes to the Norwegians, and sometimes to the Scots, little authenticated matter can be expected. The seat of the see was at Kirkwall, and so beyond the reach of the Covenanters, who, no doubt, if they had had it in their power, would have made it feel their levelling hand. The church was dedicated to St. Servanus, and was one of the only two cathedral churches in Scotland (that of Glasgow being the other) that escaped the vindictive fury of the mob. The foundation of this see is by some ascribed to St. Servanus, who had been ordained a bishop by St. Palladius, and sent to the Scots by pope Celestine I. in the beginning of the fifth century; others say that St. Columb was the founder. The diocese contained the islands of Orkney and of Shetland.

BISHOPRIC OF ROSS.

THE see of Ross was founded in the twelfth century by king David I. The diocese contained the counties of Ross and Cromarty, and a part of Inverness. A small portion of the cathedral yet remains, and is the burial-place of many ancient families. The bishop's palace, which is said to have been a very sumptuous edifice, was pulled down in the time of Cromwell.

BISHOPRIC OF GLASGOW.

Few historians agree with respect to the foundation of this see: that it is, next to St. Andrew's, of higher antiquity than any other in Scotland, is, however, beyond all doubt. The founder is nowhere mentioned with any certainty. Kennet says, the see was instituted by St. Kentigern, alias Mungo, in the year 560. Yet some doubt whether Kentigern was ever bishop of Glasgow, and speak of him as being only a holy man, who had a cell here, and whose sanctity was held in such high veneration, that when the cathedral church was dedicated, it was to him. Dr. Heylyn, speaking of the see of St. Asaph in Wales, says, "that see was founded in 583 by St. Kentigern, a Scot, then bishop of Glasgow. In that see he was the first bishop; and on his return to Scotland, he was succeeded as bishop by St. Asaph, to whom the cathedral there is dedicated." From this it may be inferred, that St. Kentigern, alias Mungo, founded the see of Glasgow, and was the first bishop.

The diocese was of great extent, till the see of Edinburgh was partly taken out of it. But, in its diminished state, it comprehended Lanark, Dumbarton, Ayr, Renfrew, Dumfries, Peebles, Selkirk, Roxburghshire, and a part of Berwickshire. The want of records leaves a vast blank in the catalogue of Bishops.

BISHOPS OF GLASGOW.

1115. John, lord chancellor: he divided his diocese into two archdeaconries, Peebles and Tiviotdale.
 1147. Herbert, abbot of Kelso; lord chancellor.

1455. Andrew Muirhead, rector of Cadzow (now Hamilton).
1474. John Laing, lord treasurer.
1483. George Carmichael, treasurer of the see of Glasgow: died before his consecration.

ARCHBISHOPS.

1484. Robert Blackadder; translated from Aberdeen: he had so much interest at Rome, that he got this see erected into an archbishopric in 1491, and had the bishops of Galloway, Argyll, and the Isles assigned him as suffragans.
1508. James Beaton, or Bethune I.; translated from Galloway; lord chancellor; translated to St. Andrew's.
1524. Gavin Dunbar; translated from Aberdeen; lord chancellor.
1551. James Beaton, or Bethune II., abbot of Aberbrothock: he sent the records of this see to the Scots' college at Paris: he quitted the see in 1560; restored in 1588.
- [The see vacant.]
1571. John Porterfield; the first Protestant archbishop of Glasgow: he seems to have been appointed merely to get the lands belonging to the see alienated in a legal manner: remained here till the year 1572.
1572. James Boyd, one of the ministers of Glasgow.
1581. Robert Montgomery, parson of Stirling: resigned.
1585. William Erskine, titular archbishop, not being in orders: turned out by the king in 1587; and his majesty gave the diocese to Walter Stewart, commendator of Blantyre, with power to feu what remained of the see lands.
1588. James Beaton; restored by act of parliament.
1603. John Spottiswood, parson of Calder, in Mid Lothian; translated to St. Andrew's.
1615. James Law; translated from Orkney.

1661. Andrew Fairfowl, parson at Dunse.
1664. Alexander Burnet; translated from Aberdeen: forced to resign by the duke of Lauderdale, in 1669.
1671. Robert Leighton; translated from Dunblane: resigned in 1674.
1674. Alexander Burnet; restored by the duke of Lauderdale; translated to St. Andrew's.
1679. Arthur Ross; translated from Argyll; translated to St. Andrew's.
1684. Alexander Cairncross; translated from Brechin: removed from this see for not complying with the measures of the court in 1686.
1687. John Paterson; translated from Edinburgh: a prelate zealously attached to the court: he was son of the bishop of Ross: ejected soon after the Revolution

BISHOPRIC OF ARGYLL.

JOHN SCOT, bishop of Dunkeld, a pious prelate, finding his see so large that he could not pay the attention to it that his conscience dictated, made a representation thereof to the court of Rome; whereupon pope Innocent III. disjoined from his diocese all that now constitutes the shire of Argyll, on the main land, together with some of the Western Islands, particularly the island of Lismore, which was made the bishop's seat of this new see: hence the bishops of Argyll are frequently styled bishops of Lismore. The church was dedicated to St. Molocus, who lived about 1160, and whose bones were translated to the island. The diocese contained Argyllshire, Lochaber, and some of the Isles.

1688. Alexander Monro, principal of the college of Edinburgh: he had a congé d'elire to the dean and chapter of this see; but it is uncertain if he was elected before the Revolution.

BISHOPRIC OF GALLOWAY.

THIS was a very ancient see, said to have been founded by St. Ninian, who was the first bishop, and who had previously converted many of the inhabitants to the Christian religion. This saint, about the close of the fifth or beginning of the sixth century, built a church of white stone, in honour of St. Martin, and from it the place took its name Whitern, or Whitehorn. The diocese comprehended Wigtounshire and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright.

BISHOPRIC OF THE ISLES.

THIS see contained, formerly, not only the Æbudæ, or Western Isles, but the Isle of Man, which for more than four hundred years has been a separate bishopric. The prelates had three places of residence, viz., the isles of Icolunkill, Man, and Bute; and, in ancient writs, are variously styled Episcopi Mannieæ et Insularum, Episcopi Æbudarum, and Episcopi Sodorensis, which last title is still retained by the bishops of the Isles, and the bishops of the Isle of Man.

During the great contest between the houses of Bruce and Baliol for the throne of Scotland, Edward III. of England made himself master of the Isle of Man, and it has remained an appendage of the crown of England ever since. The lords of the Isle of Man set up bishops of their own, and the Scottish monarchs continued their bishops of the Isles, of which the records are but imperfect. The diocese contained all Bute-shire, and most of the Western Islands.

POST-REVOLUTION BISHOPS.

THOUGH the districts into which the Scottish bishops have divided their charge, are not exactly according to the dioceses under the legal establishment of episcopacy, yet the bishops still retain the names by which they were of old distinguished, with the exception of the bishops of St. Andrew's. Every diocesan bishop has his distinct charge; and without assuming any other local jurisdiction than what was acknowledged in the primitive Church for the first three centuries, he may as properly be denominated bishop of the place or charge assigned to him, as St. James, who was called bishop of Jerusalem, Ignatius, bishop of Antioch, or Cyprian, bishop of Carthage.¹—Skinner's Annals of Scottish Episcopacy.

Passing over bishop Rose, whose name is found in the preceding rolls of bishops, and who connects the established Episcopal Church of Scotland with that form of it which is now merely tolerated, the first of the Post-Revolution prelates, properly so described, chosen to superintend the clergy of Edinburgh, was the Rt. rev. John Fullarton.

- Andrew Lumsden, minister of Duddington; consecrated and elected this year.
1733. David Freebairn, minister of Dunning; consecrated 1722; primus in 1731; appointed to Edinburgh 1733; died 1739.
- [From 1739 to 1776 there was no appointment of a bishop of Edinburgh.]
1776. William Falconar, minister of Forres; consecrated in 1741, and appointed to Caithness; to Moray in 1742; primus after 1761; appointed to Edinburgh 1776: died 1784.
- [Dr. Petrie was his coadjutor in 1776.]
1787. William Abernethy Drummond, presbyter in Edinburgh; consecrated, and appointed to Brechin, 1787, and to Edinburgh, same year; resigned in 1805, in favour of Dr. Sandford, who was elected to succeed him in Edinburgh: died bishop of Glasgow.
1806. Daniel Sandford, elected in Jan. and consecrated in Feb. this year; bishop of Glasgow on Dr. Drummond's death: died in 1830.
1830. James Walker, bishop of Edinburgh and Glasgow until Aug. 1837; made primus in May 1837, on Dr. Gleig's resignation of that office: died March 1841.
1841. Charles Hughes Terrot. The PRESENT (1850) Bishop of Edinburgh.

BISHOPS OF GLASGOW.

1731. Alexander Duncan, minister of Kilpatrick-Easter; consecrated in 1724; appointed 1731: died 1733.
- [This bishopric was afterwards superseded by what was termed the College System of Episcopal government. The sees of Glasgow and Edinburgh seem to have been subsequently united, and held successively by Dr. Abernethy Drummond, Dr. Sandford, and Dr. Walker, until 1837, when Dr. Russell was made bishop of Glasgow, in pursuance of a mandate issued to the dean and clergy to elect a bishop of their own.]
1837. Michael Russell, consecrated, in Aug. this year, bishop of Glasgow: died in 1848.
1848. Walter-John Trower, consecrated in Sept. this year. The PRESENT (1850) Bishop of Glasgow and Galloway.

BISHOPS OF ABERDEEN.

1721. Hon. Archibald Campbell; consecrated in 1711; appointed to this charge in 1721: resigned in 1724.
1724. James Gadderar, minister at Kilmaurs; consecrated 1712; elected 1724. He wished to assume the superintendence of the Aberdeen clergy as the representative of Dr. Campbell; but the synod of bishops objected.
1733. William Dunbar, minister of Cruden; con- secreted 1727; appointed to Moray and Ross same year; to this charge in 1733: died in 1746.
1747. Andrew Gerard, presbyter in Aberdeen; consecrated and elected this year: died Oct. 1767.
1768. Robert Kilgour, presbyter in Peterhead; consecrated and elected this year; made primus on the death of Dr. Falconar in 1784: died March 1790.

¹ Anciently, no bishop in Scotland had the title of archbishop, but one of the bishops had a precedence under the title of Primus Scotiae Episcopus. In consequence of the Revolution, after the death of bishop Rose, of Edinburgh, the Scottish bishops resumed the old form, one of them being elected Primus, with the power of convocating and presiding according to their canons. — Dr. Skinner.

ness; consecrated March 7; succeeded Dr. Petrie a month afterwards in this charge. See Ross.

1796. Alexander Jolly, presbyter at Frazerburg; consecrated June 24, and appointed coadjutor to Dr. Macfarlane, who immediately afterwards resigned this charge to him: died in 1838.

[In 1838, on the death of Dr. Jolly, this bishopric was united to Ross, conformably with a decree of an episcopal synod held in Edinburgh in 1837. See Ross.]

BISHOPS OF ROSS.

It is not clear by whom the duties of some of the remoter districts of Scotland were performed about the middle of the last century. Ross appears to have been usually united with Moray, until Dr. Macfarlane, in 1796, resigned the district of Moray to bishop Jolly, and retained, together with Ross, the superintendence of Argyll.

1796. Andrew Macfarlane, previously consecrated bishop of Moray. See Moray.
1819. David Low, presbyter of Pittenweem; consecrated and elected this year, on the death of the preceding prelate.
1851. Robert Eden, on bishop Low's resignation. The PRESENT Bishop of Ross and Moray.

BISHOPS OF FIFE.

1733. Robert Keith; translated from Caithness; succeeded bishop Rattray as primus in 1743; died Jan. 1757.
1743. Robert White, presbyter at Cupar; consecrated to Dunblane in 1735; elected to this charge, on the resignation of Dr. Keith, in 1743; chosen primus on that bishop's death in 1757; died in 1761.

1761. Henry Edgar, consecrated in 1759; coadjutor to Dr. White, whom he succeeded in this charge: there is no record of his death.

[Fife was united to Edinburgh from Dr. Edgar's death, until 1837, when it was transferred to Dunkeld and Dunblane. This bishopric has been styled St. Andrew's, since Sept. 1844.]

BISHOPS OF ST. ANDREW'S.

St. Andrew's was anciently the archiepiscopal see of Scotland; and the title has been latterly substituted for that of Fife.

1844. Patrick Torry, the now venerable bishop of Dunkeld and Dunblane (to which see he was elected in 1808), became bishop of Fife in 1837. The name was changed to St. Andrew's, Sept. 5, 1844. The PRESENT Bishop of St. Andrew's, Dunkeld, and Dunblane. See Dunkeld.

BISHOPS OF ARGYLL AND THE ISLES.

Since the Revolution the sees of Argyll and the Isles have never existed independently, having been conjoined to Moray and Ross, or to Ross alone. In 1847, however, Argyll and the Isles were made to form a seventh independent diocese, and a bishop was appointed thereto.

- 1847 Alexander Ewing, consecrated at Aberdeen, Oct. this year. The PRESENT Bishop of the revived see of Argyll and the Isles.

The government of the Church of Scotland is superintended by a supreme court, called the General Assembly, consisting of commissioners from each presbytery, royal burgh, and university in the kingdom, with a proportion of Church elders, nearly as three to four. Meetings of this court take place annually, under the presidency of a Lord High Commissioner, as the representative of the crown, usually a nobleman of considerable rank or influence.—See Roll of Lord High Commissioners, p. 417. Besides passing legislative acts, this is a court of dernier appeal from other ecclesiastical courts. Provincial synods are composed of a number of adjacent presbyteries, and have the power of reviewing their proceedings. Presbyteries are composed of several neighbouring parishes; and their jurisdiction extends to the ordination of pastors, the investigation of the conduct of ministers and elders, and the examination of schools. Kirk-sessions are the lowest courts, consisting of the minister and elders of a parish.

ORDER OF THE THISTLE.¹

THE antiquity of the Order of the Thistle is believed, by many eminent authorities, to have been considerably overrated, those who claim for it an ancient origin ascribing its foundation to Achaius, king of the Scots. This monarch, it is said, in a contest with Athelstan, king of the West Saxons, was assured of victory by the appearance in the heavens of the cross upon which St. Andrew had suffered martyrdom; and having been eventually successful in the battle, he dedicated a temple to St. Andrew, the tutelar saint of Scotland; establishing at the same time this order of knighthood, and instituting its statutes and ensigns.

The chief ground upon which this origin is denied, consists in the facts that the Thistle does not appear to have been adopted until the latter part of the fifteenth century as the badge of the kingdom of Scotland; and that the institution of a national order of knighthood must have had for its ensign a national symbol, as the Order of the Garter possessed the rose, and that of St. Patrick the shamrock. Those who maintain its modern origin, consider it sufficient, therefore, to call attention to the recent introduction of that ensign, upon which the foundation of the Order is essentially dependent, and these authorities trace the Order as an organised fraternity only as far back as the reign of James VII. of Scotland and II. of England. The cross of St. Andrew, however, is by all allowed to have been used in the arms of Scotland in the reign of James I. of that country, who occupied the throne from 1406 to 1437; and even the advocates of a modern origin admit that the Thistle was used as a royal badge previous to 1488, since it occurs in the inventory of the effects of James III. of Scotland, who died in that year. The collar of the Order occurs on the coins of king James V., and his portraits also contain a representation of this ensign. But notwithstanding these facts, it is contended that the use of all or any of these decorations are of no avail in proving the existence of a brotherhood or fraternity, having a sovereign with a succession of knights governed by established rules, and wearing certain ensigns. Though the antiquity of the Order is upheld by writers of considerable weight, it is yet questioned by other authorities of much acuteness and research. After the Reformation, however, there can be no doubt that, if the Order previously flourished, it then fell into desuetude, and its revival is due to James VII. of Scotland and II. of England, who, in 1687, issued a warrant commanding letters patent to be passed under the great seal of Scotland, for "reviving and restoring the Order of the Thistle to its full glory, lustre, and magnificency."

During the whole of the reign of William and Mary, the Order was neglected; but after having remained in abeyance fifteen years, queen Anne determined an its revival, and in December 1703, letters patent passed the great seal of Scotland for that purpose.

By the statutes published at the same time, no change was effected in the number of knights, or the other regulations of the fraternity. But under an ordinance issued by George I., the new knights were to be elected by the suffrages of the pre-existing members of the Order in chapter assembled.

At the coronation of George IV., four extra knights were appointed without permanently increasing the original limits of the Order, and two of these were subsequently elected to fill vacancies in the constituent number of twelve; but in May 1827, the order was permanently extended to sixteen knights, which form its present complement. The title of the Order is "the Most Noble and Most Ancient Order of the Thistle or St. Andrew."

¹ Beatson's account is this: "The Order was founded in 1540 by James V., who being honoured with the Order of the Garter from his uncle king Henry VIII., with the Golden Fleece from the emperor, and the Order of St. Michael from France, resolved to establish this Order for himself and twelve knights, in imitation of Christ and his apostles; but James dying in 1542, an end was put to the design for that time; for it being about the period of the Reformation, when religious disputes ran to a great height, it was deemed impious to imitate, in an Order of Knighthood, Christ and his apostles; nor was this honourable Order thought of, till James VII. of Scotland and II. of England renewed it, by making eight knights, on the 27th of May 1687. But the glorious Revolution happening the next year, no more knights were added until December 1703, when her majesty queen Anne was pleased to fill up the vacant stalls, agree with the original statutes. In 1714 George I. confirmed the statutes of queen Anne, adding some new rules," &c.

Sir Harris Nicolas, in his account of this Order, says : "Among the forms that are retained in the Order of the Thistle without the slightest utility, are those of election and installation. Elections do not seem to have been actually held until his late majesty King William IV. was pleased to issue commands to that effect, and two knights have actually been admitted in that manner; but as there is not a single instance of a knight being installed, the object of issuing a royal warrant dispensing with a ceremony which has never taken place, and which is not even intended to be performed, is by no means obvious.¹ It would, however, be a gratifying distinction, and one which would enhance the honour of belonging to this as well as to the other British orders, if the banners and names of the knights were to be placed in the principal cathedral or in some other sacred or national edifice. This might be easily effected without the expense, parade, and inconvenience of actual installation.

"Some of the alterations in the constitution of the Order, have from time to time been authorised by different statutes, the number and extent of which are very great; but it is desirable that the whole should be revised and incorporated in one general code." — Sir Harris Nicolas.

¹ Though the solemnity of installation has never been performed, it is right to observe, that it was always contemplated by the successive sovereigns of England from the reign of James II. to that of William IV.

PART VI.

IRELAND.

THE GREAT OFFICERS OF STATE.

LORD-LIEUTENANTS AND CHIEF GOVERNORS OF IRELAND.

WHEN the English established themselves in Ireland, in the reign of Henry II., the government of the country was constituted much upon the model of that of England; and the three great officers of the crown for conducting the public affairs were (together with a privy council) the Chief Governor, the Lord High Chancellor, and the Lord High Treasurer.

The jurisdiction of the Lord-Lieutenant, or Chief Governor, is ample and royal, though in some instances it has been restrained, and in others enlarged, according to the pleasure of the king, the degree of favour with which the Chief Governor has been regarded by the crown and government of England, or the exigencies of the times.

The second minister of the king, was the Lord Chancellor, or Keeper of the Great Seal, whose office was coeval with the English government, though from the loss of records we can find no Chancellor of Ireland earlier than Stephen Ridell in 1189¹, many years after Henry II. had received the submissions of the Irish potentates.

The third minister of the crown, was the Lord High Treasurer, whose office was as ancient as the others: he was constituted by letters-patent, sometimes during pleasure, and in some instances for life; and, in the last century, the earl of Cork was created Lord Treasurer in fee, though his descendants took out new patents upon every demise of the Crown.

The functions of the chief officer of the Irish government are administered in his quality of pro-rex, or viceroy. It sometimes happens that his powers are delegated to two, sometimes to three, and (it has occurred) to four officers in the state, who are thereupon styled "Lords Justices." These personages derive their authority by commission, occasionally from the viceroy, and occasionally from the crown, but still under the direction of the king, "to take care of the public weal when urgent affairs carry the Chief Governor for a short time out of the kingdom." The Chief Governors in the early ages of the English power in Ireland were variously denominated; as Custos or Keeper, Warden, Justiciary, Procurator, Seneschal, Constable, Lord-Lieutenant, and Lord Deputy, which last drew his power from the superior Governor or from the crown, in the manner that the Lord Justice drew his.

King Henry II. is said to have made his son John, king of Ireland, in a parliament held at Oxford in the year 1177. But it is manifest, both from history and from existing records, that John had no more than a vicarial, though a large, authority; and he is to be considered only as Chief Governor with the mere nominal title of king. In any other light the acts of Henry, after such a creation, would seem extraordinary and unaccountable; for, subsequent to this assumed grant, he ordered the affairs of ¹ In some of the Irish records, and, among them, those preserved in Birmingham Tower, Dublin Castle, Stephen Ridell, or Ridell, is mentioned as having been Lord Chancellor of Ireland in 1186, fourteen years after Henry landed in that kingdom; but the best authorities place his name, as we give it, in the subsequent roll of Chancellors, in 1189.

Ireland at his pleasure, issued writs in his own name, made donations of large domains, appointed officers and displaced others in every department of the government, and in particular, being at one time displeased with the conduct of his son, he recalled him after a few months' stay in Ireland, and substituted John de Courcy, earl of Ulster, under the title of Lord Deputy, in his place.—Ware's Antiquities of Ireland.

The same may be said of prince Edward, to whom, and his heirs, his father, king Henry III., granted this kingdom in as ample a manner as he enjoyed it himself, with the exception of Dublin and Limerick, "yet so as that Ireland should not be separated from the crown of England." Whereupon Ireland was denominated "the Land of the Lord Edward," and the Irish functionaries were styled "the Officers of Prince Edward, Lord of Ireland;" and writs were issued in the name of the prince, who had his chancery with the other courts, as if the absolute sovereignty had been vested in him. But, notwithstanding, it is plain, from many circumstances, that prince Edward enjoyed only a limited power.—Idem.

¹ Thomas de Lancaster is by some authors styled Duke of Lancaster, but very erroneously, for Henry IV. had no son who bore that title. Thomas de Lancaster, here mentioned, was Henry's second son by queen Mary de Bohun, and was afterwards (July 9, 1411) created earl of Albemarle and duke of Clarence: slain 1421. The late Mr. Lascelles, the antiquary, in his Liber Hibernie, correctly states that his patent as "lord of Ireland" is of record at Westminster.

¹ The Lords Justices appointed since the act of Legislative Union have been, usually, the head of the Church, of the Army, and the Law; and they have held the appointments for very limited periods, confining their functions to merely routine affairs. The absences of the viceroys were, formerly, of some duration; whereas, latterly, they have been short and few. It is judged unnecessary, therefore, to notice the appointments of Lords Justices since the period of the Union, in 1801.

ARCHBISHOPRICS AND BISHOPRICS OF IRELAND.

THERE were formerly four Archbishoprics and eighteen Bishoprics in Ireland, many of which included merged sees. By the Church Temporalities Act, 3 & 4 William IV., cap. 37. (passed Aug. 14, 1833), the Archbishoprics of Cashel and Tuam were eventually abolished, on the decease of the then existing archbishops; and the suffragan bishoprics were, in like manner, reduced from eighteen to ten by the union of certain of the sees, accordingly as they became vacant, whether by the decease or the translation of the respective prelates:—

Bishoprics when and as void to be united to other Archbishoprics or Bishoprics.	Archbishoprics and Bishoprics to which those becoming void are to be united.
1. Dromore - - - - -	to be united to - Down and Connor.
2. Raphoe - - - - -	to be united to Derry.
3. Clogher - - - - -	to be united to Armagh.
4. Elphin - - - - -	to be united to - Kilmore.
5. Killala and Achonry	to be united to Tuam; now a bishopric only.
6. Clonfert and Kilmacduagh -	to be united to - Killaloe and Kilfenora.
7. Kildare - - - - -	to be united to - Dublin and Glandelagh.
8. Ossory - - - - -	to be united to - Ferns and Leighlin.
9. Waterford and Lismore -	to be united to Cashel and Emly; now a bishopric only.
10. Cork and Ross - - - - -	to be united to - Cloyne.

All these sees have now merged in the sees directed by the above-named act; the see of Clogher (united to Armagh in 1850) being the last.

ARCHBISHOPRIC OF ARMAGH.

ST. PATRICK, the Apostle of Ireland, built a church, and fixed a bishop's see, here in the year 444 or 445. One Daire, a man of great affluence and high reputation among his own people, granted the site whereon the church was built, near the river Callan. The bishops were not invested with the pallium until the year 1152 (March 9), when it was also conferred (at the hands of the cardinal-priest, John Paparo, legate from pope Eugene III.) on the sees of Dublin, Cashel, and Tuam. At that period, the dignity of "Primate of all Ireland" was recognised as belonging to the Archbishops of Armagh, of whom Gelasius was the first.

The archdiocese includes four parishes in the county of Derry, one-third of the county of Tyrone, and nearly all of the counties of Armagh and Louth. The province over which the Archbishop presides as metropolitan, comprises the dioceses of Meath, Clogher, Derry, Down and Connor, and Dromore, Tuam, Clonfert, with Kilmore, Elphin, and Ardagh. His grace is, ex officio, prelate of the order of St. Patrick, lord almoner to the queen, vice-chancellor of the university of Dublin, and a member of the Irish privy council. The episcopal residence is in Armagh.

BISHOPRIC OF CLOGHER.

(Now united to the Archbishopric of Armagh.)

THIS see was founded by St. Macartin, who was one of the earliest disciples of St. Patrick, "an indefatigable assistant to him in preaching the word of God, so he was called the staff and support of his old age." He fixed the see at Clogher, where he also built a monastery "at the command of St. Patrick, in the street before the royal seat of the kings of Ergal." The diocese comprises the counties of Monaghan and Fermanagh, with parts of Tyrone, Donegal, and Louth. It is suffragan to Armagh, and on the decease of the present bishop, it will merge into that see. Incorrectness is the least fault in the accounts of the early bishops; we shall therefore name those

ARCHBISHOPRIC OF DUBLIN.

THIS see is supposed to have been founded by St. Patrick, about the year 448. It became archiepiscopal in 1152. See Armagh. There are two cathedrals, both situated in the city of Dublin, a most rare thing; one is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and is called Christ-Church; the other is dedicated to St. Patrick. The diocese comprises, with the see of Kildare, lately annexed, the counties of Dublin, Wicklow, Kildare, part of the King's and Queen's Counties, and a part of Wexford. The province includes the dioceses of Dublin, Kildare, Ossory, Limerick, Cork, Killaloe, and Cashel. The Archbishop is primate of Ireland, and is ex officio chancellor of the order of St. Patrick, ¹ Sir James Ware names forty-five bishops between 506 and 1126; of whom eleven are named between the death of St. Macartin, in 506, and the death of Lasarian, in 571.

² The family name of this bishop is lost; for these that he is here called by are assumed names, according to a custom often practised among ecclesiastics, to express their devotion to Christ, or some saint. For Mœlisa means the servant of Christ; and the other name, the son of the servant of St. Kiaran.

a visitor of the university of Dublin, and a member of the Irish privy council. The seat of the see is in Dublin.

Glandalagh was united to the Archbishopric in 1214. By the provisions of the late Church Temporalities Act, the bishopric of Kildare was united to Dublin, on the decease of Dr. Lindsay, in 1846.

BISHOPRIC OF GLANDALAGH.

(United to Dublin.)

THIS see has been united to that of Dublin since the year 1214. The catalogue of its bishops is extremely incorrect; it has been so long united to the archiepiscopal see of Dublin, that their names are seldom to be met with in history. St. Kevin seems to have been the founder of the see. Here existed both a cathedral and an abbey; the first was dedicated to the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, and both were situated in a small valley surrounded by lofty mountains. The place is now commonly known by the name of the "Seven Churches," from the remains of so many buildings that are contiguous to the cathedral.

BISHOPRIC OF KILDARE.

(Now united to Dublin.)

THE see of Kildare is one of the earliest episcopal foundations in Ireland. It was founded, probably, at the close of the fifth century, as the first bishop on record died in the year 519. St. Bridget, the illegitimate daughter of an Irish chieftain, born in the year 453, received the veil while in her fourteenth year, from the hands of St. Patrick, and previous to 484 she founded a nunnery here. To this saint, who died in 523, the cathedral was dedicated. The choir of the cathedral serves as the parish church; but the nave and other parts of the venerable pile have long been in total ruins. By the operation of the late Church Temporalities Act, the see was united, in 1846, to the archiepiscopal see of Dublin.

CASHEL, EMLY, WATERFORD, AND LISMORE.

CORMAC, king and bishop of Cashel, is reputed to have been the founder or the restorer of the cathedral of Cashel, and we have few traces of the bishops before his time. About the period of the arrival of the English, Donald O'Brien, king of Limerick, built a new church here from the foundation, which he endowed with lands, and converted Cormac's old church into a chapel or chapter house. Cashel became archiepiscopal in 1152.

The see of Emly was united to Cashel in 1568; and by the provisions of the late Church Temporalities Act, the united see of Waterford and Lismore became annexed to both, in 1839, when, also, Cashel ceased to be archiepiscopal. The combined diocese includes the counties of Tipperary and Waterford, and part of the county of Limerick. The see is suffragan to Dublin.

BISHOPRIC OF EMLY.

(First united to Cashel; now to the united see of Cashel, Emlý, Waterford, and Lismore.)

EMLY is a very ancient see, and is supposed to have been founded by St. Patrick. The place is mentioned by some of the old historians as a large and flourishing city, though it is now a poor and inconsiderable village. The cathedral is dedicated to St. Ailbe, who is named as the first bishop, and who died Sept. 12, 527. Emlý was united to Cashel in 1568. It is now united (with Cashel) to Waterford and Lismore.

BISHOPRIC OF WATERFORD AND LISMORE.

(Now united to Cashel and Emly.)

THE cathedral of Waterford, dedicated to the Blessed Trinity, was first built by the Ostmen, and by Malchus, the first bishop, after his return from England, from his consecration, about 1096. Lismore was united to Waterford in 1363.

The church of this latter see was founded by St. Carthage, circa 636, and Cormac, the son of Muretus, king of Munster, repaired it before 1130. Of the ancient fame of the city of Lismore, the writer of the life of St. Carthage says: "Lismore is a famous and holy city, half of which is an asylum, into which no woman dare enter; but it is full of cells and holy monasteries, and religious men in great numbers abide there; and thither holy men flock together from all parts of Ireland; and not only from Ireland, but also from England and Britain, being desirous to remove from thence to Christ. The city is built upon the banks of a river, formerly called Nem, but now Alban-more, that is, the Great River, in the territory of Nan-Deci, or Decies."

There was a see at Ardmore, founded by St. Declan, in the infancy of the Irish Church, but it was united to Lismore, soon after the arrival of the English.

By the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act, the united see of Waterford and Lismore was united to Cashel and Emly, on the decease of the then prelate, Dr. Bourke. See below.

BISHOPRIC OF CORK, CLOYNE, AND ROSS.

THERE is little to be found in ancient writers concerning the foundation of the cathedral of Cork, but it is generally ascribed to St. Barror Finbarr, in the seventh century. Through length of time the church became quite ruinous, but some years ago it was completely rebuilt, and is now a handsome structure.

Cork and Cloyne were united by pope Martin V. about 1430; and the see of Ross was united to the two in 1583, and the bishops were styled "Cork, Cloyne, and Ross," as at present. In 1638, Cloyne was separated by the appointment of a distinct bishop; but, after the Restoration, they were again united, and continued so until 1678, when Cloyne once more had a bishop of its own. The sees of Cork and Ross now remained in the hands of one prelate for upwards of a century and a half. On the occurrence of a vacancy at Cloyne in 1835, the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act came into force, and the bishoprics became united in the triple form they again bear. The combined diocese comprises almost the whole of the county of Cork. It is in the province of Dublin.

BISHOPRIC OF CLOYNE.

(Now united to the now conjoined see of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross.)

THIS see was founded in the sixth century by St. Colman (the son of Linin), a man of learning and piety, and a disciple of St. Finbarr, bishop of Cork: he was himself the first bishop of it. Who his immediate successors in the see were, it is difficult, if not impossible, to ascertain; nor can anything be said, with certainty, of the bishops, until after the arrival of the English.

On the death of Dr. Brinkley in 1835, this see, conformably with the provisions of the late Church Temporalities Act, was finally united to Cork and Ross.

BISHOPRIC OF ROSS.¹

(United to Cork and Cloyne.)

THE cathedral was, most likely, founded by St. Fachnan, who flourished in the beginning of the sixth century, and who "lived in a monastery of his own erection." He was called Fachnan Mongach, or "the Hairy," having been born with hair; and was abbot of a monastery in the island of Molanfid, near the town of Youghal, formerly called Darinis. There a city grew up, in which was always a large seminary for scholars, called ¹ Ross signifies a verdant plain, or, as some say, a place where heath and broom grow; and Ailithri, a pilgrimage, the place having been anciently much resorted to in pilgrimage. It is now called Ross-carberry, from the barony, or tract of country wherein it is situated.

Ross-Ailithri. When the cathedral was founded, or who was the first bishop of it, it is impossible to ascertain. It seems probable, however, that Fachnan was the first bishop. There are no records of this see until after the arrival of the English, when they are found to be in some measure satisfactory.

BISHOPRIC OF DERRY AND RAPHOE.

THE see of Derry, when first founded, was placed at Ardfrath, whence it was translated to Maghera, and in 1158 was removed to Derry, and Flathbert O'Brolcan, abbot of Derry, a learned and charitable man, made bishop of it. Flathbert built the cathedral in 1164; and the edifice becoming ruinous, was rebuilt by the colony of Londoners who settled here in the reign of James I.

Raphoe was united to Derry by the Church Temporalities Act, passed August 14, 1833. The combined diocese includes the counties of Derry, Donegal, and Tyrone, with a small part of Antrim. The see is suffragan to Armagh.

BISHOPRIC OF RAPHOE.

(Now united to Derry.)

It is difficult to determine the time when this see was founded. St. Columb-Cile, a man of great virtue and piety, and born of royal blood, founded a monastery here, which was afterwards enlarged and repaired by other holy men. But it is the received opinion, that St. Eunan erected the church into a cathedral, and was the first bishop of the see. History is very defective in the account of his successors, until the arrival of the English. In conformity with the recent Church Temporalities Act, the see of Raphoe was annexed to that of Derry, on the decease of Dr. William Bissett, in 1834.

BISHOPRIC OF DOWN, CONNOR, AND DROMORE.

THE church of Down was repaired by St. Malachy Morgair, who was at first bishop of Connor, afterwards archbishop of Armagh, and who, having resigned the archiepiscopal see, became bishop of Down in 1137. About forty years afterwards, Malachy, the third bishop of Down of that name, by the assistance of John Courcey, called the Conqueror of Ulster, enlarged and beautified it. This conqueror also, in 1183, removed the secular canons from the church, and in their room substituted Benedictine monks, out of the abbey of St. Werburgh, in Chester; and about the same time, at the instance of Courcey, the cathedral, although it was before consecrated to the Blessed Trinity, was dedicated to St. Patrick. Christopher Pembroke says, in his Annals, "a great many were of opinion that Courcey, by this action, drew on himself the vast train of misfortunes which afterwards befel him." The sepulchre of St. Patrick anciently brought this place into great reputation; and the bodies of St. Columb and St. Bridget were afterwards translated to it. The last bishop of this see, before the real union (as it is called) of the churches of Down and Connor, was John Cely, a Benedictine monk; but he having been deprived in 1441, John, bishop of Connor, obtained an union of both sees from pope Eugene IV., and from that time they have been united and governed by one bishop.

Dromore became united to Down in 1842. The combined diocese comprises the counties of Down and Antrim, with portions of Armagh and Londonderry. It is suffragan to Armagh.

BISHOPRIC OF KILLALOE, KILFENORA, CLONFERT, AND KILMACDUACH.

THE see of Killaloe is supposed to have been founded by St. Molua, abbot, whose disciple, St. Flannan (son of king Theodoric), was consecrated at Rome by pope John IV. about 640, and was first bishop. The church was esteemed of great sanctity, and was much resorted to in pilgrimage. Connor Mac Dermot O'Brian, king of Thomond and Desmond, died in pilgrimage to it in 1142. About the end of the twelfth century, the ancient see of Roscrea was united to Killaloe. Of this latter see, St. Cronan, who flourished about 620, was bishop, or as some say, abbot, and the founder of the church.

There is no certainty concerning the foundation of the see of Kilmfenora. Some writers think that St. Fachnan, to whom the church was dedicated, was the founder and first bishop. In the ancient distribution of the bishoprics of Ireland, made by cardinal Paparo, it was suffragan to the archbishopric of Cashel; but at the Restoration of Charles II. it was annexed to Tuam, and so continued until it was united to Killaloe.

Killaloe, Kilmfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduach now form one bishopric, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act. The diocese includes the county of Clare and the King's County, with parts of Limerick, Galway, and Tipperary; and is in the province of Dublin. The list of bishops is very defective, as no dependence can be placed on the accounts, before the arrival of the English.

¹ Lonaia, commonly called Killaloe, is seated on the western bank of the Shannon, near the noted cataract which stops the navigation of that river. It takes its name from the abbot St. Molua. In the annals of Iusfall, and by almost all the Irish writers, it is called Kill-da-lua, i. e. the church or cell of Lua, that being the name of this abbot, to which name Mo is added by way of endearment only; so that Kill-da-lua is the church dedicated to Lua, or Mo-lua.

BISHOPRIC OF CLONFERT.

(Now united to the see of Killaloe, Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmacduach.)

ST. BRENDAN, the son of Finloga, contemporary with St. Brendan of Birr, and his fellow student, founded an abbey at Clonfert, in 558, and was himself abbot. He died in May 577, at Enaghdune, whence his body was conveyed to Clonfert, and there interred. His life is extant in jingling monkish metre, in the Cottonian Library. In his time, the cathedral of Clonfert (famous in ancient times for its seven altars) was founded. Colgan makes St. Brendan the founder and first bishop of Clonfert, and says that he abdicated, and placed St. Moena in his room. Others again make St. Moena the first bishop. We find in the Ulster Annals, under the year 571 or 572, the death of the first bishop of this see thus mentioned: "Moena, Bishop of Clonfert-Brenain, went to rest." Brendan's true name was Nennius or Nennio; but it is common with the Irish to add the monosyllable mo, signifying mine, to the proper names of their saints, out of respect and tenderness.

The church of Kilmacduach was founded by Colman, the son of Duach, who was descended from a noble family at Connaught, and very nearly related to Guair, king of that country. To distinguish him from other Colmans, his contemporaries, he was usually called after his father, Macduach, or the son of Duach. He was very fond of an ascetic life, and is said to have lived in a wilderness in the south parts of Connaught, seven years, with only one companion. From this life of retirement, he was, in the end, made bishop, and fixed his see in a place, which, from his surname, was called Kilmacduach, or the "Church of the son of Duach." The see has been united to Clonfert since 1602. Both sees were united to Killaloe and Kilfenora in 1834. See Killaloe.

BISHOPRIC OF KILMORE, ELPHIN, AND ARDAGH.

KILMORE signifies a great church. The bishops of Kilmore borrowed their title from a territory called Brefny or Brefne: they were sometimes named Brefnienses, sometimes Triburnenses, bishops of Triburna; because they are said to have had their residence near a village of that name; but in 1454, Andrew Mac Brady, bishop of Triburna, by the assent of pope Nicholas V., erected the parish church of St. Fedlemid or Felimy (which he found to be in a more commodious situation), into a cathedral.

On the death of Dr. Beresford, of Kilmore, in 1841, the two sees of Kilmore and Ardagh became vested in the existing bishop of Elphin, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act, and all three now form one bishopric. The combined diocese includes the county of Roscommon, the greater part of Cavan, parts of Sligo, Galway, and Mayo, a portion of Leitrim, and a small part of Fermanagh. The see is suffragan to Armagh.

BISHOPRIC OF ARDAGH.

(United to Kilmore.)

THIS is among the most ancient sees in Ireland, having been founded by St. Patrick, who made his nephew the first bishop. Ardagh was united to Kilmore in 1660. In 1692 it was separated from that see for a short time; but the two sees were subsequently conferred upon one prelate. In 1742, Ardagh was again disjoined from Kilmore, and it formed a portion of Tuam until that archdiocese was reduced to a bishopric by the operation of the Church Temporalities Act. Kilmore, Elphin, and Ardagh now form one see.

BISHOPRIC OF ELPHIN.¹

(Now united to Kilmore.)

ST. PATRICK founded a cathedral in this place, near a little river issuing from two fountains, about the middle of the fifth century, and placed over it St. Asicus, a monk, a great lover of penance and austerity, whom he consecrated bishop, and who filled it with monks. After many centuries, and a little before the arrival of the English, Elphin was enriched with many large estates, on its union with the see of Roscommon; and the sees of Ardcarne, Drumclive, and others of less note, were also annexed to it. By these unions, the see of Elphin became one of the richest in Ireland.

Only the names of two of the successors of St. Asicus are to be found in history previous to the twelfth century.

¹ Some persons erroneously suppose that the name of this place was taken from a huge stone, there to be seen, called the stone of the giant Fin Mac Cool. Others, with some probability, interpret the name to signify a stone of a clear transparent fountain, Ail, signifying, in old Irish, a stone, and fin, or flon, white.

BISHOPRIC OF LIMERICK, ARDFERT, AND AGHADOE.

DONALD O'BRIEN, king of Limerick, founded and endowed the cathedral of Limerick, about the period of the arrival of the English in Ireland. The more ancient see of Inis-Scattery was united to Limerick about the beginning of the thirteenth century; but, according to Usher, its possessions were divided among the sees of Limerick, Killaloe, and Ardfert. Inis-Scattery is said to have been founded by St. Patrick, and to have been governed by him for some time.

The see of Ardfert¹ was formerly called the bishopric of Kerry; its cathedral was dedicated to St. Brandon; the cathedral of Aghadoc, dedicated to St. Finian, is situated within two miles of the town of Killarney. These two sees have long been united. The three sees of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoc were combined into one under bishop Fuller in 1667. The diocese comprises the counties of Limerick and Kerry, with small portions of Clare and Cork; and is in the ecclesiastical province of Dublin.

¹ The cathedral of Ardfert was entirely destroyed, with the exception of the walls, in the great rebellion of 1641; after that time a small part of it was fitted up for divine service for the parishioners, and was kept in decent repair. Nothing now remains of the cathedral of Aghadoc, save a part of the outer walls, near which is a stump of one of the round towers, and the ruins of a small old castle. — Beaton.

BISHOPRIC OF MEATH.

THERE were formerly many episcopal sees in Meath, as Clonard, Duleek, Kells, Trim, Ardbraccan, Dunshaughlin, and Slane, besides others of less note; all which, with the exception of Duleek and Kells, were consolidated, and their common see was fixed at Clonard, before the year 1152; at which time the divisions of the bishoprics in Ireland was made by cardinal Paparo. Subsequently, however, Duleek and Kells merged into the general see.

The see of Clonard was founded by St. Finian about 520. "This saint was a great scholar, and had many students here, who afterwards became famous in the Irish church." About the year 1206, Simon Rochfort, bishop of Meath, forsook Clonard, and fixed the seat of his see at Newtown, near Trim, and made the abbey church of St. Peter and St. Paul (which he had just founded for Augustine canons) the cathedral. At the Reformation, king Henry VII converted the church of St. Mary's abbey at Ballymore, near Loch Seudy, in Westmeath, into a cathedral for this see; but how long it continued so is uncertain.

The combined diocese includes the counties of Meath and Westmeath, and a part of the King's County, with small parts of Cavan, Longford, and Kildare. The see is suffragan to Armagh.

BISHOPRIC OF OSSORY, FERNS, AND LEIGHLIN.

THE see of Ossory was first planted at Saiger, in the territory of Ely O'Carrol, about the year 402, thirty years, it is said, before the arrival of St. Patrick. It was removed to Aghavoe, it is supposed, in 1052, for in the MS. Annals of Leinster, under that year, we meet with this passage, "A church was built at Achadboe, and the shrine of Canic placed in it." Felix O'Dullany, bishop of Ossory, translated the see to Kilkenny about the close of Henry II.'s reign.

The see of Ossory was consolidated with the combined bishopric of Ferns and Leighlin, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act, which came into operation on a vacancy occurring in the latter see, in 1835. The united diocese includes the counties of Carlow, Kilkenny, and Wexford, with parts of the counties of Wicklow, King's County, and Queen's County. The see is in the province of Dublin.

BISHOPRIC OF FERNS AND LEIGHLIN.

(Now united to Ossory.)

FERNS took its name from the "hero Ferna, son of Caril, king of the Deccies, who was slain in battle at the place by Gallus, the son of Morna." The see was anciently archiepiscopal for a time; for it must be observed, that in the early ages of Christianity, the title of Archbishop in Ireland, except that of Armagh, was not fixed to any particular see, but sometimes belonged to one, and sometimes to another city, according to the sanctity and merits of the presiding bishop; and he was not denominated from his see, but from the province in which his bishopric was situated.

The see of Leighlin was united to that of Ferns in 1600; and the combined see was united to the see of Ossory in 1835, conformably with the provisions of the Church Temporalities Act, passed 3rd and 4th William IV., August 14, 1833.

BISHOPRIC OF LEIGHLIN.

LEIGHLIN, commonly called Old Leighlin, is situated about a mile and a half to the westward of the river Barrow. Here St. Lasarian constituted an episcopal see about the year 628. Burchard the Norwegian, the son of Garmond, is enumerated among the principal benefactors to the church. It was he who either founded or endowed the priory of St. Stephen of Leighlin; the lands of which were afterwards annexed to the deanery. Burchard was buried in the cathedral. Some of the bishops of Leighlin have been considerable benefactors to the see.

BISHOPRIC OF TUAM, KILLALA, AND ACHONRY.

ST. JARLATH, the son of Loga, is looked upon as the founder of the cathedral of Tuam, about the beginning of the sixth century. Tuam was anciently called Tniam-dag-naland, and the cathedral, dedicated to St. Jarlath, was known as Tempull Jarleith or St. Jarlath's Church, having been dedicated to its founder. By means of assistance from Turlough O'Connor, the then king of Ireland, it was rebuilt, in 1152, by Edan O'Hoisin, first archbishop of Tuam, at least the first who had the pall; for several of his predecessors are sometimes called archbishops, by the Irish historians. The bishopric of Mayo, founded by St. Gerald, before the year 697, was united to Tuam in 1559. The names of few of its bishops are preserved.¹

On the new distribution of dioceses effected by the late Church Temporalities' act, Tuam was reduced to a bishopric, made suffragan to Armagh, and united with the see of Killala and Achonry. The diocese, as at present constituted, is in the counties of Galway, Mayo, Leitrim, and Longford, with small parts of Roscommon, Cavan, Sligo, and Westmeath.

BISHOPRIC OF MAYO.

(United to Tuam.)

ST. GERALD, a native of England, and disciple of St. Colman, bishop of Lindisfarne, followed that saint upon his expulsion out of England, in company with many persons of the same nation. St. Colman founded a monastery about the year 665 or 670, at Mayo, and placed in it the Englishmen who had followed him; whence it took the name of Mayo-na-Sasson, or Mayo of the Saxons; by which name the Irish called the natives of England. St. Gerald enlarged this monastery, and erected it into an episcopal see, of which he was the first bishop. He died on the 13th of March, about the year 697. This bishopric has long been annexed to Tuam.

BISHOPRIC OF KILLALA AND ACHONRY.

(Now united to Tuam.)

ST. MUREDACH, the first bishop of this see, was consecrated by St. Patrick; whence it is manifest that he flourished in the fifth century; but the time of his death is uncertain. The author of the Tripartite Life of St. Patrick, in giving an account of that saint's progress through Connaught, says, "He came to a pleasant place, where the river Muadas (Moy) empties itself into the ocean; and on the south banks of said river he built a noble church, called Kill-Aladh, of which he made one of his disciples, Muredach, the first bishop."—If this be so, the time of the foundation of the church is pretty nearly to be guessed at; for St. Patrick made his journey into Connaught in 434, and continued there seven years, until 441. Few traces remain of the successors of Muredach, before the arrival of the English: the names of two only occur in history.

The see of Achonry has been held in commendam with Killala since the year 1607; and the united see was consolidated with Tuam, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities' act, passed 3rd and 4th William IV. Aug. 14, 1834.

BISHOPRIC OF ACHONRY.

ST. FINIAN, bishop of Clonard, founded the church of Achad, latterly commonly called Achonry, and Achad-Conair, and anciently Achad-Chavin, about the year 530. The site on which it was built was granted by a dynast, or petty prince, of the territory of Luigny. St. Finian having built this church, immediately gave it to his disciple Nathy, called in Irish Dathi, i. e. David, who went by two names; for he was commonly called Comrah or Cruimthir, and was a man of great sanctity. The latter of these names signifies, in old Irish, a priest; the other has a religious meaning. His festival is celebrated on the 9th of August, and the church was dedicated to him. In the ancient annals of Ireland, the prelates of this see are, for the most part, called bishops of Luigny or Liny, from the barony or subdivision of the county in which it is situated. No account is to be had of the successors of St. Nathy, until the arrival of the English in Ireland.

1842. Robert Daly; installed dean Dec. 13: soon afterwards appointed bishop of Cashel.
1843. Hon. and Rev. Henry Pakenham. Feb. 7. The PRESENT (1851) Dean of St. Patrick's.

THE ORDER OF ST. PATRICK.

THE Order of St. Patrick was instituted in the year 1783 by George III., for the purpose of establishing a national fraternity of knights in Ireland, as a counterpart of the Order of the Thistle in Scotland, and the Order of the Garter in England. On the 5th of February, 1783, a royal warrant was addressed to earl Temple (afterwards marquess of Buckingham), then lord lieutenant of Ireland, authorizing the issue of letters-patent under the great seal of Ireland, for the institution of the Order. Though all preliminary steps were taken, and though the passing of the letters-patent was duly gazetted, yet no such documents are now to be found, and it is believed by many authorities that the letters patent were never executed. The royal warrant merely authorized the preparation of the patent, but the latter necessary document is not recorded on the rolls of chancery either in England or Ireland.

¹ This prelate was committed to the Tower of London: the nature of the charge is not at the present day discoverable; it is certain, however, that a fine of 2000*l.* was imposed upon him in the Court of Star Chamber. — Monck Mason.

² The queen wrote, as usual, to have Ryder made dean, by virtue of her own authority solely; but archbishop Loftus, in a courtly manner, showed to lord Burleigh how her majesty might obtain his legal election. — Idem.

³ Dean Swift was through life much troubled with giddiness of the head, which much increased towards the close of it, and at length ended in a total deprivation of reason, in which condition he died. In his lucid moments he bequeathed the bulk of his fortune to erect an hospital in Dublin for idiots and lunatics, which was built accordingly. His remains were interred in the cathedral.

On the 28th of February the statutes of the Order were signed, by which it was ordained:— That the sovereignty should be vested in the crown; and that the lord-lieutenant of Ireland should be, ex officio, grand master; and that the knights should be fifteen in number.

In July, 1821, George IV. dispensed with the statute which restricted the number of knights to fifteen, and appointed six extra members at his coronation, but eight years elapsed before the royal warrant was issued to authorize this change, and in the mean time four of the extra knights had been elected to fill vacancies from deaths which occurred in the constituent number of fifteen.

William IV., at his coronation, nominated four more extra knights, and on the 24th of January, 1833, permanently increased the limits of the Order by fixing its constituent numbers at twenty-two instead of fifteen.

On the accession of Queen Victoria, a statute was issued substituting a declaration upon honour for the oath which was previously administered to each knight on his election, and in 1839 her majesty issued an ordinance authorizing each successive grand master to retain and wear the star, riband, and badge of the Order, after he had ceased to be lord-lieutenant of Ireland. Thus, though the head and chief of the Order was not a member of it during any lord-lieutenancy, but that of earl Talbot, yet by a verbal grant from William IV. and an express authority from her majesty, all who have held the office of lord-lieutenant are entitled to the distinctive honours which are worn by the veritable members of the body.

The esquires are three in number for each knight. The sixteenth statute ordains, that every knight should appoint three gentlemen of blood without reproach to be his esquires of the body, and to attend him at installations. No esquires have been appointed since 1833, in consequence of installations having been dispensed with at the election of each new knight.

* * Married ladies and widows are entitled to the same rank among each other as their husbands would respectively have borne between themselves, except such rank is merely professional or official; and unmarried ladies to the same rank as their eldest brother would bear among men, during the lives of their fathers. — Burke.

VALVASORS. — The first name of dignity next beneath a peer, was anciently that of Vidames, Vicedomini, or Valvasor. Valvasors are mentioned by our ancient lawyers as virī magnæ dignitatis, and sir Edward Coke speaks highly of them. Yet the distinction is at present entirely out of use; and our legal antiquaries are not agreed upon even the original or ancient office of Valvasors. Now, therefore, the first personal dignity after the nobility is a knight of the order of St. George, or of the Garter, first instituted by Edward III. — Blackstone.

OF THE DIFFERENT DEGREES OF NOBILITY.

(From Beatson's Index.)

THE degrees of Nobility in Great Britain and Ireland are Five, Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Viscounts, and Barons; to which may be added a Sixth degree, that of Bishops, inasmuch as bishops are entitled to a seat in the House of Peers, as Barons of the realm.

DUKE is the first rank of nobility. It was introduced by Edward III., who created his eldest son, Edward the Black Prince, in 1337 (then earl of Chester), duke of Cornwall. This title subsequently merged (1343) in that of prince of Wales, and has ever since been vested in the heir apparent to the crown, who, at his birth, becomes duke of Cornwall. The only ceremony at the investiture of the Black Prince was, the girding him with the sword. When John of Gaunt, fourth son of Edward III., was created duke of Lancaster by his father, he had investiture, not only by the girding him with the sword, but by putting on him a cap of fur, under a coronet of gold set with precious stones. In the twenty-first of Richard II. the duke of Hereford, and several others, were created by placing a cap of honour on their heads, and by delivering a rod into their hands: the surcoat, mantle, and hood followed. All these, however, have been laid aside, dukes being now created by patent. The mantle and surcoat worn by a duke at the coronation of a king or queen, is of crimson velvet, lined with white taffeta; his parliamentary robes are of fine scarlet cloth. His cap is of crimson velvet, lined with ermine; and his coronet of gold, set round with ornaments in the form of strawberry-leaves. A duke is styled "His Grace;" and is officially addressed by the king or queen as "Our Right Trusty and Right Entirely Beloved Cousin," and if of the privy council, with the addition of "Councillor." His title is "The Most High, Potent, and Noble Prince."

MARQUESS. This dignity is the Saxon Markin-Reve, and the German Markgrave, or Margrave (from Mark or Marche, which, in the languages of the northern nations, signifies a limit or bound), conferred by our ancestors and neighbours upon an officer who had to guard or govern the frontiers of a province. It has the next place of honour to a duke, and was introduced several years after that title had been established in England. The first on whom it was conferred, was the great favourite of Richard II., Robert de Vere, earl of Oxford, who was created marquess of Dublin, and by him placed in parliament between the dukes and earls. The creation to this dignity was with nearly the same ceremony as that of a duke; but marquesses are now created by patent under the great seal. The coronation robes are of crimson velvet, lined with white taffeta; and the cap is of crimson velvet, lined with ermine. The coronet is of gold, and has pearls and strawberry-leaves mixed alternately round, of equal height. A marquess is styled "Most Honourable;" and he is addressed by the king or queen as "Our Right Trusty and Entirely Beloved Cousin."

EARLS.—This honour, which came from the Saxons, was of great dignity and power, and for many ages continued the highest rank in England, till Edward III. created dukes, and Richard II. created marquesses, both of whom had precedence assigned above earls. Earls had anciently, for the support of their state, the third penny out of the sheriff's court, issuing out of the pleas of the shire whereof they had their title; for in early times there was no count or earl but had a county or shire for his earldom. Afterwards, the number of earls increasing, they took their title from some eminent town or village, or from their own seats or parks; and some from illustrious families, as Salisbury, Peterborough, Stamford, Paulet, Cholmondeley, Ferrers, Waldgrave, Stanhope, Ashburnham, &c. Nor were titles confined to England alone, as many were taken from the kingdom of France, as Albemarle and Tankerville. Upon the increase of earls, their revenue ceased, and their powers were much abridged; and it became the custom of the kings of England to assign some stated pension to the personage he ennobled, for the better support of his dignity. Anciently, an earl was created with nearly the same ceremony as a duke or marquess; but he is now created by letters-patent. His coronation and parliamentary robes are nearly the same as those of a duke or a marquess. Sir Robert Cecil, earl of Salisbury, viscount Cranbourne, was the first of the degree that wore a coronet. An earl's coronet has pearls raised upon points, and strawberry-leaves low between them. His style is "Right Honourable;" and he is addressed by the king or queen as "Our Right Trusty and Right Well Beloved Cousin."

VISCOUNT was anciently the name of an office under an earl, Vice Comes, who being oftentimes required at court, the viscount was his deputy to look after the affairs of the county; but in the reign of Henry VI. it became a degree of honour, and was made hereditary. The first viscount in England, created by patent, was John, lord Beaumont, who was by the above-named king created viscount Beaumont, and given precedence above all barons. A viscount is created by letters-patent. His coronet is surrounded with a row of pearls close to the chaplet. His style is "Right Honourable;" and he is addressed by the king or queen as "Our Right Trusty and Well Beloved Cousin."

BISHOPS.—The precedence of bishops was settled by statute 31st Henry VIII. cap. x., to be next to viscounts, they being barons of the realm. They have the title of "Lords," and "Right Reverend Fathers in God." Before the Saxons came into England, there were three archbishoprics, viz. London, York, and Caerleon-upon-Usk; each of which had many suffragans: but, soon after St. Augustine's arrival in England, that personage, from the great kindness he received from the king of Kent, fixed the metropolitan see at Canterbury, where it has continued ever since. York continued archiepiscopal, but London and Caerleon lost the dignity. The latter was situated too near the Saxons to be much at ease; wherefore one of its bishops removed the see to St. David's, in Wales. The archbishop of Canterbury is the first peer in Great Britain, next to the royal family. The lord high chancellor is the second, and the archbishop of York the third; they take place of all dukes, and have the title of "Grace" given to them. The archbishop of Canterbury writes himself, "By Divine Providence;" the archbishop of York, and the other bishops, "By Divine Permission." The bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester, have precedence of all their brethren; the other bishops rank according to seniority of consecration.

BARON. This title is extremely ancient. The dignity of a baron, by tenure, appertained to the holding of certain lands, according to the feudal system, directly under the crown, and conditionally upon the performance of honorary services to the king, such as advising him in council, attending him in the field, and providing him a given number of knights or men-at-arms. A baron, by writ, was an elevation to the peerage by a summons to attend the king in parliament; but some barons were only summoned once. This mode of creation, however, has been a long time laid aside; and the only writs now issued are those to the eldest sons of higher peers, in their fathers' baronies. The first who was raised to the dignity of baron, by patent, was John de Beauchamp, of Holt Castle, created baron of Kidderminster, in Worcestershire, by Richard II., in the 11th year of his reign. A baron's coronet has six pearls, set at equal distances on the chaplet. His style is "Right Honourable;" and he is addressed by the king or queen as "Right Trusty and Well Beloved." — Beaton.

THE PRIVILEGES OF PEERS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

The nobility of England enjoy many great privileges, the principal of which are the following:—

They are free from all arrests for debt, as being the king's hereditary councillors. A peer cannot, therefore, be outlawed in any civil action; and no attachment lies against his person; but execution may be taken upon his lands and goods. For the same reason, peers are free from all attendance at courts leet, or sheriff's turns; or, in case of a riot, from attending the posse comitatus.

In criminal causes, they are tried by their peers, who give in their verdict, not upon oath, as other juries do, but upon their honour. And then a court is usually built on purpose in the middle of Westminster Hall, at the king's charge, which is pulled down when the trial terminates.

To secure the honour of, and prevent the spreading of any scandal upon, peers, or any great officer of the realm, by reports, there is an express law, called Scandalum Magnatum, by which any man convicted of making a scandalous report against a peer of the realm (though true), is condemned to an arbitrary fine, and to confinement in prison until the fine be paid.

Peers have the privilege of voting in parliament by proxy; a mode they very frequently adopt, when ill or absent from other cause.

Upon any great trial in a court of justice, a peer may come into the court, and sit there covered.

The barons of Kinsale enjoy, exclusively, the hereditary privilege of being covered in the royal presence. — Beaton.

THE PEERS OF ENGLAND.

(Compiled from Sir William Dugdale's "Baronage," the "Stemmata Anglicana" of Sir Thomas Banks, and the "Synopsis" of Sir Harris Nicolas.)

A.

- ABERCORN. John James Hamilton, earl of Abercorn (in Scotland) and viscount Hamilton, in England, created marquess of Abercorn, Oct. 2, 1790.
- ABERCROMBY. Mary Anne Abercromby (widow of lieutenant-general Sir Ralph Abercromby), created baroness Abercromby, of Aboukir and Tallibody, co. Clackmannon, May 28, 1801. George-Ralph, her grandson, is the present baron.
- ABERGAVENNY. William, baron Cantilupe, baron by tenure, temp. Henry III. — William de Beauchamp, descendant, baron by writ, Nov. 23, 1392. — Edward Nevill², who married Elizabeth, sole heir of this family, was summoned to parliament Sept. 5, 1450. — The barony descended to George Nevill, 16th baron, created viscount Nevill, of Berling, co. Kent, and earl of Abergavenny, co. Monmouth, May 17, 1784.
- ABINGDON. James Bertie, baron Norris, or Norreys, of Rycote, created earl of Abingdon, co. Berks, Nov. 30, 1682. Montagu Bertie, who succeeded in 1799, is 5th and present earl of Abingdon. See Norreys.
- ABINGER. James Scarlett, lord chief baron of the exchequer, created baron Abinger, of Abinger, co. Surrey, Jan. 12, 1835.
- ACHESON. Archibald Acheson (son of earl Gosford (in Ireland)), by courtesy viscount Acheson, created, visâ patris, baron Acheson, of Glencairney, co. Armagh, Sept. 18, 1847.
- ADBASTON. Sir Charles Whitworth, bart., created baron Adbaston of Adbaston, co. Stafford, Nov. 25, 1815. Extinct 1825. See Whitworth.
- AILESBURY. Robert Bruce, baron Bruce of Whorlton, 2nd earl of Elgin (in Scotland), created baron Bruce, of Skelton, co. York, viscount Bruce, of Amptlill, co. Bedford, and earl Bruce, of Ailesbury, co. Bucks, March 18, 1664. — Charles Bruce, grandson and heir, created baron Bruce, of Tottenham, co. Wilts, April 17, 1746. All the English honours except the last-mentioned barony became extinct in 1747. — Thomas Bruce Brudenell (Bruce), nephew and heir, baron Bruce, of Tottenham aforesaid, created earl of Ailesbury, co. Bucks, June 8, 1776. — Charles Bruce Brudenell Bruce, his son and heir, created viscount Savernake, of Savernake Forest, co. Wilts, earl Bruce, of Whorlton, co. York, and marquess of Ailesbury, co. Bucks, July 17, 1821.
- AILSA. Archibald Kennedy, earl of Cassilis (in Scotland), created baron Ailsa, of the Isle of Ailsa, co. Ayr, Nov. 4, 1806; and marquess of Ailsa, Sept. 10, 1831.
- ALBANY. dukedom of, June 29, 1716. Extinct 1728. — Dukedom of, April 1, 1760. Extinct 1767. — Dukedom of, Nov. 27, 1784. Extinct 1827. See York.
- ALBEMARLE. Odo, earl of Champagne and Holderness, created earl of Albemarle, or Aumarle, temp. William I. The earldom descended by marriage, to the family of de Fortibus, whose heiress, circa 1259, married Edmund, earl of Lancaster, 2nd son of Henry III. — Thomas Plantagenet, duke of Gloucester (youngest son of Edward III.), summoned to parliament as duke of Aumarle, Sept. 3, 1385; but not afterwards. — Edward Plantagenet, earl of Rutland, created duke of Albemarle, Sept. 29, 1397. Forfeited 1399. — Thomas Plantagenet (2nd son of Henry IV.), created earl of Albemarle and duke of Clarence, July 9, 1411. Extinct 1421. — Richard Beauchamp, earl of Warwick, created earl of Albemarle for life, 1417. Extinct 1439. —

¹ Sir Thomas Banks angrily complains, in the Preface to his Baronia Anglica Concentrata, that Sir Nicholas Harris Nicolas drew much of the materials for his Synopsis from Sir Thomas's previous work, the Stemmata Anglicana, without acknowledgment. Be this as it may, Sir Harris has produced the most perfect general Peerage now extant. Of this Peerage, ours may be said to be, in some measure, an abridgment; and we adopt the alphabetical order of it (which, however, originated with Sir Thomas Banks), as being more perspicuous and easy of reference. — EDITOR.

² Previous writers have considered all the possessors of the Castle of Bergavenny, or, as it is now written, Abergavenny, as barons of Bergavenny; but much doubt exists whether, until the writ of summons, 25 Henry VI. to Edward Nevill, as "Domino de Bergavenny," the proper designation of the previous barons was not that of their family name. — Sir Harris Nicolas.

- George Monk, general, created baron Monk, of Potheridge, baron Beauchamp, of Beauchamp, and baron Teyes and earl of Torrington, all of co. Devon, and duke of Albemarle, July 7, 1660. Extinct in his son, 1688. — Arnold Joost von Keppel, created baron Ashford, co. Kent, viscount Bury, co. Lancaster, and earl of Albemarle, Feb. 10, 1696.
- ALBINI. William de Albini, baron by tenure, temp. Henry I. — William de Albini, son and heir, became possessed of the castle of Arundel, and by that tenure became earl of Arundel. See Arundel.
- ALBINI, of Belvoir. William de Albini, lord of Belvoir Castle, baron temp. William II.
- ALDRBOROUGH, barony of, April 7, 1722. Extinct 1778. See Walsingham.
- ALDEBURGH. William de Aldeburgh, baron by writ, Jan. 8, 1371. Presumed to be in abeyance. Neither Dugdale's, nor any other peerage, notices this baron. — Nicolas.
- ALDERNEY, barony of, July 27, 1726. Extinct 1765. See Cumberland.
- ALFORD, barony of, Dec. 24, 1698. Extinct 1754. See Grantham. — Viscount of Alford, created Sept. 30, 1815. See Brownlow.
- ALLINGTON. William Allington, baron Allington (in Ireland), created baron Allington, of Wymondley, co. Herts, Dec. 5, 1682. Extinct 1691.
- ALTHORP, viscounty of, Nov. 1, 1765. See Spencer.
- ALTON, marquise, April 30, 1694. Extinct 1718. See Shrewsbury.
- ALVANLEY. Richard Pepper Arden, chief justice of the common pleas, created baron Alvanley, of Alvanley, Cheshire, May 22, 1801.
- AMESBURY. Charles Dundas, created baron Amesbury, of Kintbury-Amesbury, and Barton Court, co. Berks, May 10, 1832. Extinct same year.
- AMHERST. Sir Jeffrey Amherst, created baron Amherst, of Holmesdale, co. Kent, May 20, 1776; and baron Amherst, of Montreal, co. Kent, Sept. 6, 1788. The first extinct in 1797. — William Pitt Amherst, heir, created earl Amherst and viscount Holmesdale, Dec. 19, 1826.
- ANCASTER and KESTEVEN. Robert Bertie, earl and marquess of Lindsey and baron Willoughby of Eresby, created duke of Ancaster and Kesteven, July 16, 1715. Extinct 1809.

¹ "Of this family," says Dugdale, "John de Astley is eminently distinguished in the histories of those times, for his great and heroic actions." In the year 1438, the 29th of August, in the presence of Charles VII., then king of France, he maintained a duel on horseback, in Paris, with one Peter de Massei, a native of that country, in the street called St. Antoine, and piercing Massei through the head, had (as was mutually stipulated) the honour of presenting his lady with Massei's helmet. Arriving in England, he did (with great honour to his king and country), 30th January 1441, in presence of king Henry VI., undertake another combat in Smithfield, in the city of London, with Sir Philip Boyle, an Arragonian knight, who, Dugdale continues, "having been in France, by the king his master's command, to look out some such hardy person, against whom he might try his skill in feats of arms, and missing there of his desires, repaired hither."

After the combat ended, which was gallantly performed on foot with battle-axes, spears, swords, and daggers, he was knighted by the king, and had an hundred marks given him during his life; and so famous did he grow for his valour, that he was elected knight of the most noble order of the Garter. — Sir Thomas Banks.

² Sir Robert Knollys, of this family, was one of the thirty English, who, for the honour of their country, undertook to encounter the same number of Brittanese, and came off triumphant. In 1350, he was sent into France with an army, where he drove the French before him like sheep, overwhelming their towns and cities in such a number, that years afterwards the sharp points and gable ends of overthrowen houses, cloven asunder with instruments of war, were commonly called Knoll's Mitres. The French styled him "La véritable démon de guerre," or the thunderbolt of war. He was made seneschal of Guienne by Edward III., who commissioned him to assist John de Montfort in the recovery of his duchy of Brittany, wherein he acquitted himself so nobly, that he alone was esteemed a fit parallel to Bertrand de Gascelin, the French commander. He was appointed by John de Montfort lieutenant of Brittany; and his services were rewarded by the said duke with a fair estate in the duchy. — Sir Thomas Banks.

- BASSET of Welden. Ralph Basset, justice of England, baron, temp. Henry I. Richard Basset, heir, was summoned to parliament, Feb. 6, 1299. His descendants were never summoned.

¹ Edmund Plantagenet, when made earl of Cambridge, was lord of Tyndale. After the death of his father, he was appointed one of the commissioners for the management of the realm in the minority of king Richard II. He was with his brother, John of Ghent, in his expedition made into Spain, where he behaved himself with great valour and conduct; for which, on his return to England, he was created duke of York. King Richard II., his nephew, upon his going to Ireland in the eighteenth year of his reign, made him custos and warden of the kingdom during his absence: so likewise in the king's second fatal expedition thither, to revenge the death of Roger Mortimer, slain by the Irish, whom he had nominated for his successor, he left this Edmund lieutenant, who faithfully endeavoured to withstand Henry of Bolingbroke, who then seized the crown; and when he could not prevent this usurpation, he abandoned the court, and gave himself up to solitary retirement. And though he hated Bolingbroke, yet he on no account would be guilty of treason; for when his own son, with others, had conspired king Henry's death at Oxford, he detected him, and reviled him for being doubly a traitor, first to king Richard II. and then to king Henry. This Edmund, who was the stem of the royal house of York, died at his manor of Langley, anno 1402. — Sir Thomas Banks.

¹ Although this barony is uniformly considered to be that of “DUDLEY,” it appears very questionable if such is the proper designation. That antecedent to the latter part of the reign of Edward I. the tenure of the Castle of Dudley constituted the family of Somerie barons by tenure, can scarcely be doubted; but that such tenure did not establish a right in the possessor of that castle to demand a writ of summons to Parliament, may be inferred from this fact, that John de Somerie, who was first summoned to Parliament 1 Edward II., and whn continued to be regularly summoned to the 15 Edward II., is never once designated as “DE DUDLEY,” but is merely described as “Johanni de Somery.”—Sir Harris Nicolas.

- FITZWILLIAM. William Fitzwilliam, earl of Fitzwilliam (in Ireland), created lord Fitzwilliam, baron of Milton, co. Northampton, April 19,

¹ Robert Fitz-Walter, of this family, and grandson of this Robert, was styled "Marshal of the Army of God and Holy Church," by the barons who obtained Magna Charta from King John, and was one of the celebrated twenty-five barons appointed to enforce its observance. — Sir Harris Nicolas.

- 1742; and viscount Milton and earl Fitzwilliam, of Norborough, same county, Sept. 6, 1746.
- FLINT, earldom of. The county of Flint has always been considered as an appendant to that of Chester, and is said "ad Gladium Cestriæ pertinere;" and it has consequently formed part of the earldom of Chester. Heylyn states, that Edward, son and heir apparent of Edward II., was summoned to parliament as earl of Chester and Flint; but the latter name does not occur in any writ of summons on record. The first time it appears as a distinct title is in the reign of Henry VII., who, according to Sandford, created his son Arthur prince of Wales, earl of Chester and of Flint, in 1489: but it is presumed that it has never been held as a distinct earldom from that of Chester.—Sir Harris Nicolas.
- [See note to roll of the Lord High Chancellors of England, page 104.]
- FOLEY. Thomas Foley, created baron Foley, of Kidderminster, co. Worcester, Dec. 31, 1711. Extinct 1766.—Thomas Foley, descendant, created baron Foley, of Kidderminster aforesaid, May 20, 1776.

- GORDON, of Aberdeen. George Hamilton Gordon, earl of Aberdeen (in Scotland), created viscount Gordon, of Aberdeen, co. Aberdeen, June 1, 1814.

¹ Edward Somerset, son and heir apparent of Henry, first marquess of Worcester, is generally considered to have been created earl of Glamorgan, and baron Beaufort, of Caldecot Castle, by Charles I., in 1644; but great doubt exists whether the patent ever passed the Great Seal. Dugdale takes no notice of any such creation, whilst Beaton says the patent was cancelled in 1660; and Dale, in his "Catalogue of Nobility," does not attribute these titles to the duke of Beaufort, the descendant of the said Edward, in 1697. The authority on which the titles in question appear to have been assigned to the dukes of Beaufort, is the circumstance of Charles I. having directed several letters to Edward Somerset, above-mentioned, by the title of earl of Glamorgan; and, in a commission, no less remarkable than illegal, dated in 1644, granting him power to fill up certain blank patents of creation to every dignity from a marquess to a baronet, he is styled "Edward Somerset, alias Plantagenet, lord Herbert, baron Beaufort, of Caldecote, Grismond, Chepstow, Ragland, and Gower, earl of Glamorgan;" which patent was, in consequence of a motion in the house of lords after the Restoration, delivered up, from its being deemed "in prejudice to the peers;" and which is probably the cause of Beaton's statement, that the patent of creation to the dignities of earl of Glamorgan and baron Beaufort was cancelled in 1660. It is stated by Collins, "that there is remaining in the signet office a bill under the royal sign manual at Oxford (if a patent did not pass the Great Seal thereupon), in order to his being created earl of Glamorgan and baron Beaufort, of Caldecot Castle, in the county of Monmouth." Another dignity attributed to the dukes of Beaufort is the "viscounty of Grosmont," but it has baffled the editor's research to discover the source whence that title is derived. Dale takes no notice of any such dignity; and the only trace of a title at all similar is that recited in the commission just noticed, wherein he is styled baron Beaufort, of Caldecot, Grismond, and Gower. Notwithstanding the opinion here expressed, that the titles of earl of Glamorgan, viscount Grosmont, and baron Beaufort are not vested in the duke of Beaufort, in consequence of the impression that his ancestor had not been legally created to them, it must be observed, that not only have most writers attributed them to his grace, but that they are each inserted in his style on his plate as a knight of the Garter, in his stall at Windsor. — Sir Harris Nicolas.

- GORDON, of Huntly. Alexander Gordon, 4th duke of Gordon (in Scotland), created baron Gordon, of Huntly, co. Gloucester, and earl of Norwich, July 12, 1784. — George Gordon, commonly called marquess of Huntly, son and heir apparent of the said duke of Gordon in Scotland, and earl of Norwich, and baron Gordon of Huntly, was summoned to parliament in his father's barony of Gordon, April 11, 1807. The English barony and earldom became extinct on the death of the above George, the last duke of Gordon, in 1836.

succeeded to the barony of North, in 1734, created earl of Guilford, April 8, 1752. The barony of North fell into abeyance on the death of George Augustus, lord North, in 1802, but the earldom of Guilford descended. Francis North, the present earl, who succeeded 1827, is the 6th earl of Guilford.

GWYDIR. Sir Peter Burrell, bart., husband of Priscilla, baroness Willoughby de Eresby, created baron Gwydir, of Gwydir, co. Carnarvon, June 16, 1786. Succeeded, in 1820, by their son, Peter-Robert-Drummond Burrell, who also succeeded to the barony of Willoughby de Eresby, as 19th baron, on the decease of his mother in Dec. 1828. ¹ In the reign of James I. sir Richard Chetwode, the heir-general of Thomas baron Wahull last mentioned, possessing the manor and castle of Odell, claimed the dignity of a baron, which claim was referred to the duke of Lenox, the lord Howard, and the earl of Nottingham, as exercising the office of earl marshal, whose certificate, as given by Banks, stated that the averments in his petition, that his ancestors were barons in their own right before the usual calling of barons by writs, and were also summoned to parliament, were true; and on these, and other grounds, but which had nothing to do with his claim to the dignity in question, reported that they held him worthy the honour of a baron, if his majesty thought meet.

Nothing was done in consequence of this certificate, which, it must be remembered, by no means admitted his right to the barony, but merely recommended him to the notice of the crown, as a proper person to receive the dignity of the peerage. — Nicolas,

INDEX

THE PRIVY COUNCILLORS OF ENGLAND.

. In the following Index, reference is made to the YEAR in which the Privy Councillor was sworn, not to the page in which his name occurs. From the number of names contained in a page, reference would be less facile than it is made by looking to the year. Besides, the object of the inquirer may be, in many instances, to ascertain at what time the personage sought for became a Privy Councillor, and this is at once shown by this Index alone, without further search. Where it is necessary to learn minuter particulars, the arrangement by years saves the trouble of poring through all the names that crowd a page.
