THE BRITISH ADVANCE.

The operations in northern France and Flanders show a striking unity of action between the higher commands of the French, British and Belgian armies.

The French north of Arras, having attained their objective, are consolidating their newly-gained positions.

The Echo de Paris declares that the Germans have lost 150,000 men on the Ypres front, and this is circumstantially confirmed by Sir John French's report.

WHY IT COMES FIRST.

Visitors to the San Francisco exposition almost unanimously agree that Canada's contribution is the finest national display of the lot.

Canada excels in exhibition displays because she has made a specialty of them. Some twelve years ago she organized an exhibition department under the direction of Col. Hutchison.

San Francisco is the product of twelve or thirteen years' experience at all the great expositions in the world.

WHAT THE SPADE DID.

A well-known American writer, commenting upon the early achievements of the forty-two centimetre gun, shows how its devastating activities were checked by one of the humblest and most primitive devices of man.

An example of the impotence of the forty-two is afforded by the experience of Verdun. After the fall of Liege and Namur the defenders of that great French fortress developed a perfect labyrinth of trenches and earthworks.

WEARING THEM DOWN.

Hilaire Belloc, perhaps the best informed of military writers, recently made a careful analysis of the opposing armies and has reached the conclusion that the process of attrition adopted by the allies has made very marked progress.

"It is certain that when the full statistics of the fighting are published we shall find that the higher estimates of the enemy's losses have been more nearly accurate than the lower.

Several months ago the Times published a dispatch from Berlin which estimated the casualties of Prussia alone in killed, wounded, sick and prisoners, at more than a million.

At the beginning of March were almost two million. But the proportionate loss of Germans other than Prussians was even greater.

In this connection a dispatch from Washington on Friday is not without significance. It is that official advice to the state department convey the information that Germany has issued a call for the last of the Landsturm.

very far from the end of her tether. The day when she will have to withdraw to the Rhine and Oder may not be so remote as her bold words have led people to think.

WILL A WRIT ISSUE?

In his letter to the secretary of the Ministerial Union of the Lower Mainland the Hon. W. R. Ross, Minister of Lands, declares that the union, willingly or otherwise, "has been induced to enter a campaign of libel and false witness" against the government upon the unsupported statements of M. B. Cotsworth.

If that is Mr. Ross's considered opinion he has a grand opportunity for a triumphant vindication. All he and his colleagues need do is take the matter to the courts.

If the subject matter of Mr. Cotsworth's pamphlet became the ground for a libel action there is one charge that the courts might not consider necessary to investigate.

Still an airing of the accusations in the courts, where the government majority has no standing, would furnish the country with a lot of interesting and instructive information.

And since the color we will wear is Prussia's yellow hue, 'Twill give our "Orange" bitters a taste of "Lemon," too.

UNITED STATES AND GERMAN ASPIRATIONS.

The New York Sun dislikes a suggestion that Germany shall be deprived of her colonies in various parts of the world. What does our neutral contemporary expect?

While German newspapers are glorying in the infamy of murdering women and children, an Italian newspaper speaks a true word. The Messaggero declares that the torpedoing of the Lusitania is a more heavy blow to the German cause than would have been the loss of a great battle.

Americans considerable trouble and many things to think about. Or possibly Uncle Sam, in his magnanimity, may abrogate the Monroe Doctrine and permit an expansive phase whose natural aspirations must not be checked a free course in South America.

THE WEARING OF THE GREEN.

A Cork gentleman sends us the following verses which he has received from his brother, a resident in Boston.

Oh, Paddy dear, and did you hear the news that's going round? Some Irish want the Germans to possess our Irish ground.

I met with "Mathoo" Cummins, and he took me by the throat, shouting "Deutschland Ueber Alles," Wilhelm's got my Irish goat!

We'll live on beer and pretzels, and for good old Irish stew, Eat sauer kraut and sausage, and pumpernickel chew!

We'll give our "Orange" bitters a taste of "Lemon," too. We'll never change our names, our minds, our hopes, our songs, our music, and for Erin's harp we'll substitute a "lectio German band."

GERMANY'S BIGGEST BLUNDER.

While German newspapers are glorying in the infamy of murdering women and children, an Italian newspaper speaks a true word. The Messaggero declares that the torpedoing of the Lusitania is a more heavy blow to the German cause than would have been the loss of a great battle.

It really seemed impossible that the German rulers had left for themselves a climax in deeds fitted to shock the civilized world, and to bring upon them the abhorrence of all humane people.

UNPREPARED.

This is no "absent-minded beggar" war, but a contest in which we and our allies have suddenly been called upon to meet on sea and on land two nations whose preoccupation, as their histories attest, has been the preparation for and waging of war.

LEAGUE PRESIDENT BOOSTS LEAFS

SURPRISED AT SATURDAY'S CROWD

Blewett Says McKenry and Kelly Are Booked for the Majors.

President Blewett was more than tickled with the showing of the Victoria fans on Saturday in turning out in such numbers to witness the final clash between Seattle and Victoria. "I was surprised," stated Prexy Blewett, "with the splendid manner in which Victoria is supporting its baseball club, in view of the unusual conditions brought on by the war, but I have every reason to feel that this team deserves the best support. I think that Victoria has a possible pennant winner, and President Kingham certainly has a club that will stay up in the fight all the time."

this pair should go up to the majors. The Northwestern league president is a life-long friend of Walter Murphy, the well known stock broker, and it was the latter who took him in tow on Saturday.

Los Angeles, May 17.—Hap Hogan, manager of the Venice club in the Coast league died this morning.

New York, May 17.—Betting on the struggles for the baseball pennants, which in other years had languished until midsummer, has already begun in earnest.

The Boston World Champions are the favorites in the National League at 3 to 2. At that figure Arnold Rothstein has bet about $5,000, taking the Boston end.

The Giants are a 5 to 1 shot. Jay O'Brien, the amateur rider, bet $2,000 to $600 against McGraw's team yesterday.

A Brooklyn theatrical man bet $2,000 against $2,000 that the Brooklyn Nationals would not finish in the first division.

City Nye left last night for Vancouver, where he will play second for the Beavers in place of Moore, who is now on the injured list. Teasley Raymond thought that he had Nye signed up, but Brown came through with a better offer and grabbed this promising youth. Dugdale even announced in Saturday's sporting sheet that Nye would replace Bowcock at second base.

M'KENRY HERO OF SENSATIONAL WIN

Leafs' Only Hit Off Mails Was a Home Run by McKenry; Beavers Beaten Twice

Big Frank McKenry, the premier right hander in the Northwestern league, beat Seattle all by his lonesome yesterday, his home run wallop in the eighth being the only score of a sensational game at the Sound City. This was the only hit that Victoria drew off Mails, and according to President Joshua Kingham, who witnessed his protegee amble into the league leadership, the battle was a royal clash. McKenry held Seattle to four hits, and the Leafs gave the Tail One airtight support. Vancouver dropped a pair to Spokane, and the Leafs slid into first place.

Coach Springer to Announce Local Twelve Thursday; Vancouver Won Opener

Coach Bob Springer, of the Victoria lacrosse club, announces that he will not name the Victoria twelve to meet Westminster here on Victoria Day, until after Thursday's practice. The local team went through a grand workout yesterday and Springer is feeling rather jubilant over his chances of winning. The Victoria coach is deepening his home field. Sugar McDougall is shaping up very nicely on the attack, while it will take a real good man to beat Jerry Bolton out of the centre position. A couple of goal-getters will give Victoria a team that cannot be beaten for the provincial championship, carrying with it the Mann cup.

BONNER STARS IN SATURDAY'S WIN OVER THE GIANTS

Bonner's pitching was the outstanding feature of Saturday's clash. Outside of the seventh inning, when Seattle bunched three hits for their two runs, the former Giant held the visitors to pop flies or weak grounders. He had wonderful control, while on the other hand it was the bases on balls that Rose handed out in the fifth and eighth that contributed largely to his defeat. An error by Frisk in letting Hawthorn's long fly slip out of his hands drew a base on balls, subsequently scoring. It was a base on balls to Tobin in the eighth, which was ordered by Raymond, that counted the winning tally.

Civic Service and Victoria Clubs to Replay Match; Saturday's Scores

At Saturday's meeting of the Victoria and District Cricket association, the protest filed by the Civic Service club against Victoria A 2, was upheld and the match which the Victoria club won a week from Saturday, will be played off on September 11. The Victoria club played four non-registered members, contrary to the rules of the association. An application from the Victoria club to withdraw one of their clubs and combine their present teams into one strong eleven, was left over for a week. The next meeting of the association will be held on Saturday night.

REGARDING PENSIONS

Provisional Lieutenants of 31st Regiment; Regulations for Dry Canteen

A supplementary order-in-council has been issued at Ottawa in regard to the scales of pensions and compassionate allowances for the militia forces, which were published in the Times Friday. These were intended, of course, to apply to the men serving in the various expeditionary forces sent from Canada, but so that there should be no doubt on that point an order-in-council has been passed specifically applying the provisions to officers and men wounded and to widows, children, orphans and widowed mothers of those killed in action or dying from wounds or illness contracted while on service.

The following are gazetted as provisional lieutenants (super-numerary) of the 31st Regiment, B. C. Horse: Lieutenant R. N. Davy, from the Reserve of Officers; Charles Robert MacDonald, Henry Rothwell Jepson, Thomas Hugh Callaghan, Leopold George Rietchel, John Alexander George, George Edward Vaughan, Squadron Sergeant-Major Thomas Edward Pares, Alfred Edwin Hilton Lye, James Henry Johnson, Cecil Harlow Edmond, Oliver Blaine Eller, Richard Plunkett Baker.

George Edward Ambery is gazetted a provisional lieutenant (super-numerary) of the 88th regiment, Victoria Fusiliers.

Lieutenant (super-numerary) H. E. Homer-Dixon has been absorbed into the establishment of the 102nd regiment, Rocky Mountain Rangers, and Leonard Robb Andrews is appointed as a provisional lieutenant (super-numerary).

Lieutenant (super-numerary) F. D. Smith, from the 106th regiment, Winnipeg Light Infantry, is appointed a lieutenant (super-numerary) in the 107th East Kootenay regiment.

F. L. Wanklyn, a well known Montrealer, for many years works manager of the G. T. R. shops at Point St. Charles, and later general manager of the Montreal Street Ry. Co., has been appointed honorary lieutenant-colonel of the Canadian Overseas Railway Construction Corps.

The following paragraphs regarding dry canteens are added to the king's regulations and orders for the Canadian militia:

"1. The establishment of dry canteens for each unit of the Canadian expeditionary force and also for each unit of the active militia during the period of training is authorized.

"2. These canteens to be organized, administered and carried on under the supervision and direction of the officer commanding the unit, or a committee appointed by him. They are to be inspected daily by an officer, and once a month by the commanding officer or other officer appointed by him, at which inspection the books, accounts and vouchers, and also an audited cash statement are to be submitted.

"3. These canteens are to be maintained solely for the use and benefit of the unit and are not on any account, to be sub-let or handed over to any other person or persons. They are to be managed by a member of the unit and no one else is to be employed in connection with the canteen unless he is an enlisted soldier of such unit. Any profits arising from these canteens are to be applied for the use and benefit of the non-commissioned officers and men of such unit.

"4. Garrison, regimental or corps regulations governing such canteens, and also the hours for opening and closing of the same will be published in regimental or corps orders for the information of all concerned."

ANIMALS AT PLAY.

Do animals play games? Mr. Raymond Ditmars, curator of the New York zoological park, has come to believe, after much observation, that small animals not only play real games, but that they also show a sense of humor. Three small Spermophilus richardsoni, for example, that occupied a sunny, roomy cage in the small mammal house, delighted in the childish game of "squat-tag," although as a matter of fact they did not squat, but rolled over instead.

They went to one end of the enclosure, where two took a position slightly in advance of the third, who had evidently chosen "it," and then away they dashed to the other end of the enclosure. The one who was "it" gave a little squeak, and at that signal the other two rolled over, while the third rushed up and tried to nip the tail of one or the other before he got completely on his back. Then the three went scampering about in great glee. They next retired to the end of the enclosure, the chipmunk who had been "tagged" was "it," and the game began again.

Mr. Ditmars found that badgers also play games. They enjoy tag, and, moreover, those that Mr. Ditmars observed could play as good a game of puss-in-the-corner as most children. He also noticed that they did not quarrel over the game.

The badgers would take their corners, and one would go to the centre of the enclosure. They had great fun in changing corners, and when finally the one who was "it" succeeded in ousting another from the centre of the cage, and the fun would begin all over again.

Mr. Ditmars took a family of five guinea-pigs and put them into a cage, from which they could watch the badgers. At first they did not appear to take any notice of their neighbors. The badgers, for their part, paid no attention to them, and continued to enjoy their games. After a time the guinea-pigs began to observe the badgers, and in a few days they had begun to play tag in a very unsystematic manner. Experience or observation taught them better, and in time the five became fairly proficient players of the game.

As to be perfectly just is an attribute of the divine nature, to be so to the utmost of our abilities is the glory of man.—Addison.

New Light on Gum

A Lesson from the Races of the World

This Man is First—

In freedom from decay of teeth the brown Maori leads the world.

Violating all the white man's sound advice he never cleans his teeth. He eats whatever suits his whim—whatever cool New Zealand yields. Kukupu, Kaka, Weka, Putangitangi all in their turn.

Shark-steak, birds roasted on the spit and wrapped in green leaves to keep their flavor.

Why do the teeth of British school-children show nearly 80 times as much decay as his? We will tell you further on.

The Esquimaux and the Indian

Fat and fish and bird and twenty different kinds of plants. These in the main form the Esquimaux' meals. And he ranks second in having good teeth.

And third comes our own Canadian Indian of the bleak Northwest. He eats a good deal like the Esquimaux.

Other races ranking high in the soundness of their teeth are the Fuegians, Fijians, Chinwans of Formosa, Semangs, Jakuns.

But we of Canada—?

Some years ago the British Dental Association examined the teeth of 10,500 English and Scotch school-children—10,500 cousins to the boys and girls of Canada.

86% had some decay of the teeth as against 1 1/10% for the adult Maori and 1 1/10% for the Esquimaux.

Why?—the vital question stares us in the face.

Must we eat like the Maori or the Esquimaux to gain more freedom from decay?

True, their foods are much simpler—and their living much closer to Nature. But that does not account for the tremendous difference between 1.2% and 86%.

Leading dental authorities give us the following answer to our problem.

Races having the best teeth chew foods which excite the salivary glands. The Canadian Indian of the Northwest chews wood of the sugar-pine. The Maori flavors foods with the juice of the tutu-berry—another keen exciter of the salivary flow.

The human saliva is Nature's own mouth-wash—the best conservator of the teeth—best since man began.

This may be news to you, but there is more:—Saliva not only neutralizes the acid which is the worst enemy of your teeth—it wars as well on many of the germs that enter the mouth through air and food. It is one of Dr. Nature's own fine preventive medicines.

Too frequently the diet of civilized man exerts a depressing influence on the salivary glands.

It is here that the use of chewing gum comes into its own with honors. It helps to maintain the mouth and teeth in all their natural health.

It fights against what dentists call "oral (mouth) stagnation." It is a needed friend to modern man.

When YOU Chew Gum

Most of us chew gum for pleasure. But all of us who use it, whatever our motive, are getting benefit from it. Gum is serving us a mighty good turn.

Can your gum be too pure for you?—too clean for your mouth? Assuredly no. And it should be very tasty, too, because it is flavor which coaxes the tooth protecting, mouth cleansing saliva.

It is for these reasons that Sterling Gum is entitled to your welcome.

HERO OF NEUVE CHAPELLE

When the war began in August it is safe to say that few people in England knew anything about Sir Douglas Haig. As a rule we pay little attention to our military or naval leaders until their existence is forced upon us, and outside the circle of experts and their own friends they enjoy an anonymity as perfect in its way as the publicity enjoyed by the politician. Sir John Jellicoe was known to students of naval warfare all over Europe; but how many of the general British public had ever heard about him? Yet today his name is a household word. Something similar is happening in the case of Sir Douglas Haig. When he went out to command one of the two army corps which made up Sir John French's small and gallant army in August he was hardly known at all. Nor did we hear much of him in the retreat, because in a retreat the post of glory is that of the rear-guard, and the great rear-guard action was fought by the other army corps under Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien. It was not until the battle of the Aisne that his name began specially to disengage itself from those of other general officers mentioned in dispatches. In his dispatch dated October 3 Sir John French specially selected Sir Douglas Haig for particular mention. On September 11, when the first footing had been gained on the north bank of the Aisne, Sir John French wrote as follows:—

"The action of the First Corps on this day, under the direction and command of Sir Douglas Haig, was of so skilful, bold, and decisive a character that he gained positions which alone have enabled me to maintain my position for more than three weeks of very severe fighting on the north bank of the river."

Later, in the same dispatch, after he had described how an advanced and commanding position had been seized and held, General French wrote: "I cannot speak too highly of the valuable services rendered by Sir Douglas Haig and the army corps under his command."

A Leader of Great Ability.

General Haig had proved himself bold, skilful, and resourceful as the leader of an advance. He was to prove himself a few weeks later to possess to the full that tenacity in defence which he had already shown in repulsing the German counter-attacks on the Aisne. In October the British forces were moved from the neighborhood of Namur to the line from Ypres to La Bassée, and the centre of what has been described as the greatest battle in English history—the three weeks' battle for the defence of Ypres—was to Sir Douglas Haig's hands. "Throughout this trying period," wrote Sir John French, "Sir Douglas Haig, aided by his divisional commanders and brigade commanders, held the line with marvellous tenacity and undaunted courage. Words fail me to express the admiration I feel for their conduct, or my sense of the incalculable services they have rendered."

To-day's dispatch tells the same tale. "The energy and vigor with which General Sir Douglas Haig handled his command show him to be a leader of great ability and power." The British army on the Continent has fought strenuously and without intermission for eight months, but its three brightest achievements are attributed by the commander-in-chief himself, so far as leadership is concerned, to one man. The Aisne, Ypres, Neuve Chapelle; these are clasp which Sir Douglas Haig will wear more proudly on his medal ribbon than any man in his force.

Although the public have known so little about him, Sir Douglas Haig has of course, been very much in the eye of the army for a long time. Sir John French knows him well, for they took their first big course of practical military education together. Major Haig, as he then was, was chief of staff to Colonel French in the preliminary operations which prepared the way for Lord Roberts' advance, and when that advance began he was closely associated with the present commander-in-chief in the work of the cavalry division. He has had experience at the war office, where he has been director of military training, and in India, where he was chief of the general staff to Lord Kitchener's successor. For the last two years before the war he commanded those divisions concentrated at Aldershot which, under Lord Haldane's scheme, were known as the "striking force," that is to say, a force always mobilized and always ready at a few hours' notice to go abroad.

A Three-Fold Triumph.

In recent manoeuvres it had become the custom to give him the command of one of the opposing sides and he used generally to be pitted against the late General Grierson in these mimic battles. It would be hard to find two men more different in training and temperament. On the one side Grierson, who had been from his earliest days a student of warfare rather than a fighting man, and who had by his intellectual and linguistic gifts always been held in bondage to a staff appointment; ment; on the other side, Haig, who had spent his active military life as a regimental officer or brigadier, and had only for a year or two had the time or opportunity to turn from the actual handling of men close beside him to the larger problems of handling troops in a body on the map. Both were Scotsmen, Grierson of humbler parentage than Haig, but Haig had remained almost undecorated and unknown, while on state occasions Grierson blazed with orders and ribbons from every sovereign and every army in Europe. They never got the chance of fighting together for the common object of their professional life, for Grierson died (as his friends say, out of pure exaltation and happiness) a few days before the British army went into action.

Sir Douglas Haig has carried on his old opponent's and friend's tradition, as well as his own. There comes a point in every general's career, perhaps when he gets a division, perhaps not until he gets his corps, at which the problems with which he has to deal alter not merely in degree, but in kind. Sir John French passed that point brilliantly in South Africa; Lord Roberts passed it also perhaps at the same time. On the other hand there have been generals like Sir Redvers Buller who never passed it at all, and remained magnificent brigadiers, but ineffective in the control or larger forces. The significance of Sir Douglas Haig's three-fold triumph in France and Flanders is that he has proved himself to have made this fateful step with brilliant success. Before the war he had never commanded in action any larger force than a regiment, or he never gained anything larger than a division. At the Aisne he commanded a corps and now he commands an army, and as his responsibilities increase so do his praises grow.

BISMARCK'S CONSCIENCE.

We know from all the documents, says Sir Edward Grey, that it was Bismarck that planned and prepared the three great wars of Bismarck's time. Bismarck himself confessed to the astonishment of "Buck, who thought his hero should "look back upon his deeds and creations with something of the feeling with which God the Father on the seventh day regarded the world he had made." But one evening in 1877, at Varzin, Bismarck owned that he had gained little satisfaction from his political life. "He had made no one happy thereby, neither himself, nor his family, nor others." "But for me," he continued, "three great wars would not have taken place, 80,000 men would not have been killed and would not now be mourned by parents, brothers, sisters, and widows. I have settled that with God, however. Did he succeed in squaring the Court of Heaven!

THE LUSITANIA.

J. McM.

The mighty ship serenely sailing on the homeward tide; Glad hearts there were, to see the welcome land.

So close to home, but Death was lurking by To deal his blow near to Hibernia's strand.

Now stands a world aghast, and hell let loose Has shot its poisoned darts into our souls.

And rankling pain for vengeance loudly calls For those who lie where wide Atlantic rolls.

The prattling babe, unconscious of all harm, Clutched to its mother's breast, its last career.

The aged one whose silvered locks of hair Bespeak the peaceful end, no more, no less.

What reels the murdering Teuton, if a child Can satisfy his craving lust for blood? What cares he though the cold, relentless sea Voids in its depths the pangs of motherhood?

The Pagan blood that courses in his veins, That knows no human law, no sacred right, Engenders hate and lust in all his deeds, Turns living sunshine into death's dark night.

Murder! outrage! wanton lust and pain! What price can buy such death? Would it were so.

Since honest foemen guard the human law And sweet humanity adorns a bitter foe.

But mark, thou Germany! and every dying wail That floats to Heaven from the engulfing wave Shall be thy last requiem, the last refrain.

To sound upon thine ears ere in thy grave.

O, God in Heaven! if prayers can reach Thine ear,

If broken hearts can voices appeal to Thee,

Oh, make the master of this deed alone, For Thou alone art Sovereign of the Sea.

The company marched so poorly and went through their drill so badly that the captain, who was of a somewhat excitable nature, shouted indignantly at the soldiers: "You knock-kneed, big-footed idiots, you are not worthy of being drilled by a captain. What you want is a rhinoceros to drill you, you wretched lot of donkeys." Then, sheathing his sword indignantly, he added, "Now, lieutenant, you take charge of them!"

USE OF CHLORINE IN WAR

Doubtless the men, and perhaps the women, too, of the Stone Age fought by hurling huge rocks at one another, when the desire arose to gain an advantage over the enemy without coming to close quarters. In later times the bow and arrow, the sling and the javelin became formidable weapons of offence from a distance. But all these appeared but as feeble agents before the chemical forces generated by the combination of the simple constituents of gunpowder. Not but what rockets and incendiary compositions of various kinds were not already in use long before the advent of gunpowder; but the existence of any agency of destruction so strange and deadly as the latter is not recorded previous to its appearance upon this scene.

Thus chemical forces have long superseded the mechanical: the huge catapult, the mighty battering ram, and the locomotive tower of early days have been superseded by the employment of the natural energy let loose when conditions favor the union of certain otherwise harmless substances. That the possibilities thus suggested have not sooner been exploited in the anxiety of combatants to gain an advantage not already possessed by their opponents is, when calmly considered, somewhat remarkable; though it speaks well for the ingenuity of modern peoples, even towards their foes.

But the temptation to use the great forces of chemistry has been foreseen, and, so far as international agreements can at present go, has been guarded against. But, unfortunately, these agreements are powerless to prevent the absolutely unscrupulous among the powers from disregarding them, and as a result, the spectacle has been presented of a gas, of great value in the arts of peace, but deadly when brought to bear in the destruction of human life.

Lydite, cordite, melinite and all other great explosives, bid fair to be superseded by the ultimate extension in the use of natural agents, which destroy life by direct action upon the physical organs of man.

In this field it has been the Germans who have claimed the doubtful distinction of being the pioneers. It is now placed beyond doubt that they have made use of the peculiar characteristics of chlorine to gain a temporary advantage over the forces marshalled against them.

Chlorine was thought by the early chemists to be a compound of hydrochloric acid and oxygen. It was discovered in 1774 by Scheele, who held this view of its nature. In 1810, Sir Humphrey Davy showed definitely that it was an element and gave its present name.

Chlorine is never found under natural conditions in an uncombined state, but is a constituent in many chemical compounds, of which the commonest is rock salt. The gas is generally obtained by heating manganese dioxide with hydrochloric acid, through various other substances, such as red lead and lead dioxide, may also be used. Enormous quantities are prepared for industrial purposes, and many improvements in the earliest means of production have been introduced in its manufacture on a large scale.

At all ordinary temperatures, chlorine is a greenish-yellow gas, with a characteristic unpleasant and suffocating smell. Its density is about 2½ times that of air, and at a temperature of 34 degrees centigrade it becomes a liquid. The reduction of the temperature by a further 68 degrees causes it to solidify; both liquid and solid are yellow in color.

Chlorine is used commercially for the extraction of gold and for the manufacture of bleaching powder. It unites directly with many other elements at ordinary temperatures; with hydrogen in direct sunlight, the union takes place with explosive violence, while arsenic, antimony, thin copper foil and phosphorus take fire in an atmosphere of it.

The effect of chlorine upon animal life is very powerful. When pure, death immediately overtakes any animal immersed in it. Even when diluted with ordinary air it cannot be safely respired, as it immediately attacks the respiratory organs, producing symptoms similar to those of pneumonia.

The qualities which render this gas suitable for the use to which the Germans have put it on the battlefield are thus its density and the ease with which it can be liquefied. The transportation of chlorine would not offer any serious difficulty. Curiously enough for so active a substance, it has no effect upon iron, and can therefore be stored, as a liquid, in strong iron tanks or cylinders. The relaxation of pressure upon the opening of the vessels would immediately cause a resumption of the gaseous form.

More language of the Hour.—Hawker (after receiving a caution from a somewhat talkative policeman)—"You ain't 'arf' got a muzzle velocity!"—"Punch."

Blood Thin and Weak Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The exhausted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulative medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own case. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headache, neuralgia or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubled with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of color as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help to me. By enriching the blood, it has restored color to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and
