3. As for the numbers of Tottori and Kagawa Prefectures, they are as of Apr. 1.

Additionally saying, the following explanation has been inserted in the extra-edition paper, concerning the number of sympathizers:

It is very difficult to catch the number of sympathizers exactly, and to decide the standard of its investigation. Therefore, taking this year's local election and other data into consideration, we are obliged to enumerate the approximate number as follows:

Hokkaido	83,000
Tohoku	46,000
Kanto	146,000
Tokai	53,000
Hokuriku	31,000
Kansai	115,000

Shikoku	24,000
Kyushu	79,000
Total	639,000

We recognize that the number of sympathizers investigated until now on the basis of judgment from various circumstances was wrong, and so it shall be corrected as above.

However, those mentioned above are the so-called sympathizers in the true sense, among whom Second-class Party members are not included.

4. Chairman:

OHSAWA Hisaaki

5. General View of Conference:

(1) Opening Address: HIRANO Gitaro

The World Peace Convention is expected to be held in Copenhagen in May, June and July and a conference of executive commissioners of the World Federation of Trade Unions is expected to be held likewise in June and July. A Chinese man called YU Nei-chih(?), a leading member of CHUNG-HWA MING-KUO TSUNG-KUNG-HUI (General Labor Union of China), is believed to report to these meetings the real status of the anti-rearmament disputes in Japan on behalf of the Japanese people. The Japan Commission on World Peace Protection has received from the Viet Nam Commission on World Peace Protection a telegram of encouragement. It means obstruction by the Soviet Union of the single peace treaty intended to carry out to the last the Japanese rearmament and another war and the garrisonning of the Occupation forces after the peace treaty. It should be an over-all peace treaty where the preliminary conference on the Japanese peace is to be made by the four powers the Soviet Union has been advocating and discussions and other formalities including the signing are no-doubt to be made by all the countries that participated in the war against Japanese.

(2) Agenda:

a. The signing of the peace treaty.

b. The signing of the Big Five Powers.

(Debate on the proposal of the Soviet Union).

c. The problem of the organization.

d. The movement by the organ.

Japan Commission on World Peace Protection published an organ named SEKAI HEIWA (World Peace). 世界平和
The movement by the organ must be set up in correlation with the organization and the organ must be issued trimonthly.

e. The problem of publicity.

AApart from the organ pamphlets must be published one after another. In these pamphlets the peace plannings of U.S., the Soviet Union and China shall be printed with commentaries by HIRANO Gitaro in order to make publicities.

f. The labor union.

The labor movement must be raised directed to laborers in lower ranks, for the staff members of labor unions are opportune and reactionary.

g. The chief subject.

The problem of the restricted rearmament.

TSUBOI Toshiharu, YOSHIDA Kenji 吉田賢治 and HIRANO Gitaro went to GHQ, the Soviet Embassy and the British Embassy for negotiation there to hold a four foreign ministers' con-ference on the issue of the Japanese peace treaty and requested China by mail to the same negotiation.

On the above-mentioned subjects chief attendants expressed their views.

6. Conclusion of the Movement Course:

(1) Any active of the peace movement shall not hold the double post as a staff member of any union.

(2) Opening of a conference of Asian people in Japan.

a. The previous Berlin council reached to a decision that the peaceful settlement of the Japanese issue must be set up on a specific Asiatic basis and a peace protection conference on the Japanese problem must be in this intention held in Far East in the near future. The Japan Commission will hold in this connection a conference of Asian people in Japan in the nature of a preliminary session of the above peace conference. The outward appearance of this session must be the achievement of the friendship of Asian people in Japan and free development of international trading in Asia.

And the meeting came to approval of the plan of holding in the middle of June of this preliminary conference by prearrangement of the Japan Commission on World Peace Protection and ZEN-~~NIHON~~ AIKOKU~~SHA DANTAI~~ KYOGIKAI (All-Japan Council of Patriotist Organizations).
全面講和 愛国運動 協議会

b. It has not yet determined, where to open the plenary session of the Asiatic conference mentioned above, but so far as Japan is concerned, the Japan Commission has abready sent to Red China a requesting note that the conference would be held in China and the Chinese reds would lead it.

It may be forecasted, that the Japanese delegation shall not be able to go abroad by any due formalities, when the conference is held, but their departure as such may not be impossible, as exemplified by the Peiping broadcast to the world that KAWAMURA Kazuo 川村一雄 had attended the Berlin Conference and the two representatives of the Japanese students attended now in Peiping the convention of the International Student League, though it may be a better strategic operation to raise such a big national movement as to request to GHQ and the Japanese government.

c. The Tokyo 東京 Conference of the All-Japan Council of Patriotist Organizations shall be expected to be held on May 25-26. There are two structures of the All-Japan Council of Patriotist Organizations and the Japan Commission on World Peace Protection, which, however, are the same in their contents. The Japan Commission on World Peace Protection shall be used as the structure in the future and the overall peace treaty shall be pushed forward as the movement. course.

d. An appeal shall be announced to the whole people concerning the proposal sent to-day to the Soviet Union in the name of this conference (the Actives Conference), and the title of this appeal shall be "Appeal to Every Member of the Nation" to be made public under date of May 11, 1951 in the name of the Actives Conference of Japan Commission on World Peace Protection.

e. Lectures on the subject of the labor problem and the peace movement shall be held throughout the country.

f. New actives must be found out in labor unions.

g. The question of the high price of goods and the low wages must be united with the protection of life to a dispute, and the signature drive for the peace settlement by the big five powers and for the peace treaty must be carried out.

h. It shall be imperative to observe the proposal of the Soviet Union on the over-all peace treaty and the opposition to the rearmament.

7. Closing Address:

HIRANO Gitaro.

Gist of the Organization of the Agricultural Village Action Corps by the Japan Communist Party.

The Japan Communist Party's Provisional Central Guidance Department and Farmers' Department announced the gist of the organization of the agricultural village corps in the party weekly.

The contents are:

The Gist of the Organization of Agricultural Village Action Corps.

(Essential points of the foregoing sentence)

It is natural that people's revolution should be chiefly carried out by working masses.

There is a tendency that the leading influence has been so far interpreted as that of laborers in a narrow sence.

There is a powerful tendency that this interpellation is contrary to what Marx and Lenin pointed out.

We feel a need for the establishment of the foundation of the revolution in order to release Japan according to various circustances.

We made up our mind to organize village action corps.

I. Duty of the Agricultural Villages Action Corps.

1. To become a vanguard to conduct revolution by the people in cooperation with each action corps of the party.

2. To become the defence corps of the party organ and party leaders.

3. To become the main body of the RONO DOMEI (Labor-Farmer Alliance) by jointly fighting with leaborers' corps.

4. To advocate a movement for the complete democratization of agricultural villages and b ecome the action corps for this.

II. Essential points of Organization:

1. The action corps shall be s et up for some time in specified areas only.

2. Members will be organized less they should be included in other various action corps.

3. The corps shall be principally composed of youth elements of agricultural village cells.

4. The age of members shall range from 17 to 35 years old.

5. One or several corps shall be set up in one specified area.

The number of corps shall be decided in consideration of the geographical situation of the area.

6. The leader (commander) of the corps shall be named by the Farmers' Department.

7. Organizers and appointed person will engage in this formation immediately.

8. The time to the completion of the organization shall be June 10.

III. Areas where the action corps will be set up are:

Hokkaido	Sorachi area

Chuo
(Riiji Shido Kaigi)

The Central Leading Division's Council of the Japan Communist Party held.

Central Guidance Committee

The special central leading division's council of the Japan Communist Party was held at the headquarters of the party on 14th this month in attendance of the provisional central leading division members and members of the leading division's council, the outline of which is as follows:

1. Date: May 14, 10:00 a.m.-noon.

2. Location: leading-staffs' room in the headquarters office.

3. Attendants:

SUZUKI Ichizo.	WADA Ichizo.
IWATA Eiichi.	YAMABE Kentaro.
HORIE Yuichi.	INOUE Morio.
IMANO Takeo.	and others.

4. Agenda:

(1) On the question of the Seventh Party's Grand Meeting.

As the arrangement for the grand meeting by the leading staffs will not be completed by the middle of June, the meeting will be held after then in the form of a secret council, where they will have the supreme leading staffs attended.

(2) On the Central Committee and its candidates.

After the purge there remains none of the central committee members and the candidates for it are lacking by expulsion and other reasons, so that a plan was submitted from the actual leading-staffs to elect them before the revision of struggle methods. However, the supreme leading-staffs have an opinion that the purged had never been dismissed from the post of the Central Committee Members, but been purged by the one-sided disposition of the Government, so that the committee members are still available and existing as ever, and only the vacancy should be filled. TOKUDA Kyuichi and seven others, and NOSAKA Ryu, and SHIRAKAWA Seiichi are the central committee members through the first and second party members, and they were to be indicated to supply several members among the following,

HOSOKAWA Karoku.	SHIINO Etsuro.
HORIE Yuichi.	IWATA Eiichi.
HOSAKA Komei.	OKADA Bunkichi.
UCHINO Takechiyo.	KAWAKAMI Kanichi.
NISHIZAWA Ryuji.	FUJIKAWA Gitaro.
SATO Yasumasa.

Central Comm. Ha Candidate and as to the candidates, the selection right has been given to the actual provisional leading division, so it was decided to confer on the problem before the grand meeting.

(3) Question on the Administration Bureau and the Secretariat.

These structures were settled to be remained in the Supreme Leading Division.

(4) Question on the Central Committee.

New members of the central committee shall be elected in the coming grand meeting, to get it come to the surface. About seven persons from the members of HOSOKAWA and others, and three from the actual provisional central leading division are wanted to be approved.

After these were explained by the highest leading staffs the meeting was likely closed. The Council was only the discussion on the highest structure and there submitted no new problem then.

It is likely that the Control Committee will be organized in making YAMABE Kentaro, ABE Yoshimi, and IMANO Takeo the centre of it.

EBINA Totaro who was wanted as a fraud suspect by the 2nd Criminal Investigation Section, Criminal Affairs Division, Metropolitan Police Board, was arrested in the Motofuji Police Station, Hongo, in the evening of May 18.

The false informator of 33-year-old entered the Japan Communist Party soon after his demobilization in October 1945, but dismissed from the membership of the Japan Communist Party at the last decade of July 1950, since then he made false informations of the 8 leaders of the Party taking advantage of his little knowledge regarding to the Party, and sold those false news to the Asahi, Mainichi, and Yomiuri Presses and the SEIKAI Jeep (Political World Magazine), and also offered them to the investigation organizations through the newspapermen.

The report "KAZE GA WATASHI O TSURETE YUKU" (the wind takes me away) appeared in the Nippon Shuho recently, was also descrived by him.

The contents of EBINA's fraud suspicion case are as follows:

(1) He phoned to a restaurant "Imahan", Kaminarimon, Asakusa, Daito ward at 3.00 p.m. on May 12, 1951, as:

"I am an official of the 3rd Section of SIB. Please prepare a quiet room as we about 11 persons want to held a meeting concerning to the Japan Communist Party from 7.00 p.m. of this evening. And deceiving the restaurant, he himself went to IMAHAN, sent in the card of "WADA Susumu, Reporter of Social Bureau, The ASAHI Press", handed over false documents, and obtained ¥2,000 by fraud.

(2) By the same methode he obtained falsely from the Restaurant HASHIBASO, No.3, 4-chome Hashiba, Asakusa on May 13, and also from the Restaurant UME-NOCHAYA, Sendagaya, Shibuya ward on May 14, ¥3,000 totally.

(3) On May 15, he phoned to the Inn MATSUDAIRASO, Sendagaya, Shibuya ward and deceived the inn, as:

He is much disturbed by newspapermen and politicians who are visiting him from morning till night, as it is said that he will be depurged before long and come back to the political world. He wants to hide himself in your inn for while. Please prepare the most splended room for him. As for that, one or two hours later till now, a reporter of political bureau of the ASAHI Press will go to your inn to hamd over important documents of the depurge to me (KAWAGUCHI, i.e. EBINA). You shall receive them and pay him ¥5,000 in place of me as a taxi fare."

Then he himself went to the inn and obtained the cash, sending in a false card of YAMAMOTO Shungo, a reporter of the political bureau of the ASAHI Press.

(4) By the same methode, he was about to fraud the Green Hotel, Nishikata-machi, Hongo, on May 18, but just before then he was arrested as the hotel secretly informed to the police station.

At this time, the Financial Section Kansai General Bureau was established in the Kansai District under the direction of the Financial Section of the Party. It was decided that the bureau would be in charge of financial activities of local organs in Kansai, Chugoku, Shikoku, and Kyushu. In a practical sense, the independent structure for local finance was instituted.

The chief of the Financial Section Bunkichi OKADA will be for the time being the responsible person. It appears that the bureau started its activities on 1 April. The general outline of activities is as follows:

1. The purpose is to bring harmony in the finance of the Party, and to rationalize activities when the Party is outlawed.

2. The Financial Section of the Party will guide and be responsible for financial activities in general; however, it will not be responsible for matter regarding guidance in areas under the Kansai General Bureau.

3. The Kansai General Bureau will be established within the Kansai District Committee, and it will be responsible for guidance with regard to financial activities in Kansai, Chugoku, Shikoku, and Kyushu Districts.

4. The Financial Section will guide various organs under other local committees. The channel of authority will be as follows:

The Provisional Guidance Section——the Financial Section—┌The Kansai General Bu.

5. Subordinate organizations will carry out financial activities following the channel of authority mentioned above.

6. With regard to the financial assistance group, persons will make payment to the financial sections of district where they reside.

It does not mean that an attitude of non-interference will be taken toward the Kansai General Bureau. Necessary inspection will be carried out.

4. Summary

1. Communist Front Activities:

Communist propaganda is subtly but effectively channeled to all levels of Japanese society through numerous "cultural" societies established since the end of the war. Appealing to Japanese interest in scientific, legal, literary, theatrical, musical, artistic and recreational fields, these societies have mushroomed rapidly. (a) Throughout the world the Soviets have waged an offensive through VOKS (USSR Overseas Cultural Liaison Association) for the past two decades. Since 1945 the offensive has continued in Japan through obviously pro-communist cultural organizations such as the Soviet Study Association (Sovieto Kenkyusha Kyokai), the Japan-Soviet Cultural Relations Association (Nisso Bunka Aikokai) and many others. Japanese communists also have placed many of their members in key positions in new Japanese cultural organizations which have developed during the last two years. Ostensibly free of political or economic interests which would make communist propaganda obvious they provide the Soviets a seemingly harmless cover for close personal contacts with the Japan Communist Party and a front for the dissemination of their propaganda. Soviet cultural propaganda is disseminated through Mitsubishi 21 which houses the Cultural and Educational Section of the Soviet Mission in Japan. This section maintains reading rooms, exhibits propaganda movies and supplies advice and materials such as books, movies, magazines and Soviet newspapers. They have five principal means to disseminate propaganda (1) The JCP, with its affiliated organizations and publications, (2) leftist newspapers, (3) leftist publishing firms and magazines, (4) leftist movie firms and films and (5) leftist and pro-communist Japanese cultural groups. (b)

2. Japanese Cultural Groups:

Japanese cultural organizations are numerous with a very proper appeal to general interest both in Western and Asiatic culture. Many of these cultural societies offer the Communists excellent cover for unsuspected activity while many others are directly sponsored and backed by the JCP. A current Party pamphlet outlining its cultural policy states: "Our Party will encourage the development of these positive cultural societies which will give unity to cultural people and promote their activities. These societies will not be coerced to have any of the political views of our Party, and the cultural fields shall not be mobilized in the political... leadership must not be secured through violence or intrigues...we expect all the Communists of our country to stand at the front of the cultural revolution for the establishment of democratic culture, on the proper understanding of the Marxian-Lenin Theory."

Though Communists hold key positions, these societies have a heavy non-Communist membership. Such cultural groups are gradually working their way into schools and labor unions and have been especially active in supporting popular agitation and demonstrations. They offer the Communists a "front" for propaganda and "cover" for activities which might be repudiated by non-Communist members if they realized their nature.

3. Communist Front Groups:

The leading Communist-dominated Japanese cultural societies which have appeared since the autumn of 1945 are:

(1) Japan Democratic Culture League (Nippon Minshushugi Bunka Renmei), together with its 21 member organizations and 38 cooperating organizations (See page SUM - 12)
(2) Democratic Scientists Association (Minshushugi Kagakusha Kyokai)
(3) New Japan Literary Society (Shin Nippon Bungaku Kai)
(4) Free Lawyers Group (Jiyu Hoso Dan)
(5) Japan Farmers Union (Nippon Nomin Kumiai)
(6) Japan Democratic Youth League (Nippon Minshu Seinen Domei)

Their activities are guided by Communist Party members holding key positions. All disseminate Communist propaganda through publications, public lectures and social gatherings. Some also have been active in labor agitation.

An administrative relationship exists between most of the Communist-controlled cultural societies. The Board of Directors of the Japan Democratic Cultural League is composed of one representative from each member organization. The majority of these representatives are Party members. The Soviet Study Association (Sovieto Kenkyusha Kyokai), also a member of the League, is the only known administrative link between admittedly pro-Soviet organizations and the communist "front" cultural groups. These societies have a ramified personnel relationship, many members of one simultaneously being members of one or more of the other groups. Likewise a personnel relationship exists between the Communist cultural groups and the admittedly pro-Soviet cultural groups. Most members of the Soviet Study Association (Sovieto Kenkyusha Kyokai), the Japan-Soviet Cultural Relations Association (Nisso Bunka Renraku Kyokai), the Society for the Admiration of Soviet Culture (Sovieto Bunka Aiko Kai) and the Soviet Culture Association (Sovieto Bunka Kyokai) are also members of one or more of the Communist-dominated Japanese cultural groups. (See chart following this page)

Rumors that the JCP has been financing some of these societies have not been substantiated. The known sources of income are from dues, subscription fees for magazines, the sale of other publications and donations from wealthy members. (c)

a. Japan Democratic Cultural League: The Japan Democratic Cultural League (Nippon Minshushugi Bunka Renmei) was formed in Tokyo early in 1946 with seven of its eight top officials members of the JCP. This league is an outgrowth of the long defunct Japan Proletariat Cultural League which served as a vehicle for the Communist movement in Japan prior to 1937. (d) Eleven of the 24 members of the Central Committee of the former Japan Proletariat Cultural League are now active in the JCP as well as communist cultural societies. Hijikata Yoshi (writer and dramatic producer and director of the Japan-Soviet Cultural Relations Association (Nisso Bunka Renraku Kyokai) had close connections with VOKS (USSR Overseas Cultural Liaison Association) and spent a long period receiving special training in the USSR. Hijikata, popularly known in Japan as the "Red Count," is active in the Japan Democratic Cultural League. Currently he serves as chairman of the Japan-Soviet Cultural Liaison Association News and is a member of the Association for Students of Soviet Culture.

Nakano Juji, a member of the Central Committee of the JCP, reportedly is one of the several who are supervising the consolidation of all cultural groups in Japan under the leadership of the Japan Democratic Cultural League. Such men provide a close link between the JCP, Mitsubishi 21 and Japanese cultural groups. (e)

The Japan Democratic Cultural League is an alliance of 21 member organizations which have a network of branches throughout Japan. These are supported additionally by 38 non-member cultural organizations and cultural departments of labor unions not directly affiliated with the League. Typical of the 21 member organizations are the Democratic Scientists Association (Minshushugi Kagakusha Kyokai), the New Japan Literary Association (Shin Nippon Bungaku Kai) the Free Lawyers Group (Jiyu Hoso Dan) and the Juvenile Literary Association (Jido Bungakusha Kyokai). These organizations, which have many JCP members in key positions, have interlocking directorships with such prominent pro-Soviet groups as the Soviet Study Association (Sovieto Kenkyusha Kyokai) and others.

The Soviet Study Association, an influential member of the JCP organizations, is also a member of the Japan Democratic Cultural League. Kurahara Koreto (member of the Central Executive Committee of the JCP) virtually dominates the Soviet Study Association while serving as editor of the New Japan Literary Society and the Communist newspaper Akahata. (f) Oka Kunio (jailed in 1939 for Communist activity, but released as a political prisoner in Oct 45) likewise is active in the JCP, Soviet Study Association and the Japan Democratic Cultural League. "Red Count" Hijikata probably is another link between the Soviets, the JCP and the pro-Soviet cultural organizations. The Japan Democratic Cultural League nevertheless claims to have been established without the encouragement or support of the Soviets or the JCP.

The League currently is promoting an ambitious program to unite all Japanese cultural organizations for a thorough "democratic" revolution of Japan. A nation-wide "cultural convention" was held in Tokyo from 21 to 24 Jul 47 to establish a centralized Communist control over all cultural groups in Japan. The announced purpose, however, was to discuss the "establishment of a more democratic culture for Japan." This consolidation is believed to be supervised by the Central Committee of the JCP. Under the watchful eyes of four Communist Party representatives including Nakano Juji and Hosokawa Karoku and Nakanishi Ko (both Communist members of the House of Councillors and leading party propagandists), the convention worked toward the contemplated goal of an over-all control group to be called the All Japan Cultural Conference (Zen Nippon Bunka Kaigi).

Approximately 950 cultural organizations including the cultural departments of 42 labor unions were invited to the convention. One hundred forty organizations sent about 600 representatives. Typical of the non-member organizations attending were the Liaison Society of Russo-Japanese Culture (Nisso Bunka Renraku Kyokai), the Women's Democratic Club (Fujin Minshu Kurabu), the Council of Educational Democratization (Kyoiku Minshu Ka Kyogikai) and the Young Men's Cultural Council (Seinen Bunka Kaigi). Also attending were the Democratic Cultural Leagues of Fukushima, Yamagata, Yamanashi, Niigata, Hiroshima and Ibaraki Prefectures and Hokkaido, Yokohama, Kyoto, Tokai and Southern Kyushu districts. The cultural departments of the National Congress of Industrial Unions, the Japan Federation of Labor Unions, the Japan Congress of Labor Unions and other unions likewise sent representatives. Discussion centered on the disintegration of the old culture and the birth of a new culture derived from the working masses. "We must eradicate Japan's old feudalistic ideas through more emphasis on "democratic" culture...The working class is the only class...., "Nakano Juji is supposed to have said. Another speaker claimed that the failure of the 1 Feb 47 strike was due to the poor organization of the laboring classes and hence the struggle must be re-undertaken with a unified front through proper cultural training. On sale at the meeting hall were translations of large quantities of Soviet literature, such as Stalin's "October Revolution" and "Foundations of Leninism." (g)

Discussion also covered current activities. Typical was the discussion covering hindrances to the success of the cultural movement including special taxes and paper rationing. Both were labeled "discriminatory" and it was reported that chosen representatives would negotiate with government officials to abolish such taxes and arrange for larger allotments of paper. (h) The convention ended with an optimistic declaration: "We who participated honestly feel that through past cultural experiences and freedom of expression, we will set up a strong workable and 'democratic' cultural movement in Japan." b. Democratic Scientists Association: The Democratic Scientists Association (Minshushugi Kagakusha Kyokai) was established in Jan 46 with the announced purpose of contributing to the reconstruction of science in Japan free from political, ideological and social restraints. It is a revised verson of the Society for the Study of Materialism and its predecessor, the Proletarian Scientists League, which was disbanded with the arrest of its members in 1937. The Democratic Scientists Association was inaugurated under the sponsorship of such prominent CP members and propagandists as Kazahaya Yasoji, Kawasaki Misaburo, both known followers of Nosaka Sanzo; Watanabe Yoshimichi and Kono Shigehiro. This group elected the veteran mathematician Ogura Kinnosuke president and Hosokawa Karoku, well-known political scientist and JCP member of the House of Councillors, and Ouchi Hyoe, an eminent authority on Marxist economic principles, as vice presidents. About 60 directors were chosen among whom were liberal college and university professors. Attracted by the outward liberal character of the association many progressive professors, literary men and other executives like President Ogura serve as a "front." The group's activities are guided and controlled by 14 officers, all JCP members, of whom Kawasaki Misaburo, Kazahaya Hasoji, Izu Kimio, Kono Shigehiro, Nagata Hiroshi and Oka Kunio, all well-known Communist propagandists, previously were active in the now defunct Society for the Study of Materialism in the 30s.

The association publishes magazines, has study meeting and sponsors scientific courses and lectures. The first issue of "Democratic Science" (Minshushugi Kagaku) and "Our Science" (Warera no Kagaku) appeared in Mar 46 with many articles written by well-known Party members. (j) "Democratic Science" soon was changed to "Social Science" (Shakai Kagaku) giving the prospective reader a better idea of its contents since it does not contain purely scientific material. One issue was devoted to agrarian reform, inflation and philosophy. Editor-historian Watanabe Yoshimichi, head of the Party's educational department, joined the Communist movement in 1927 and, as leader of the 1935 Japan Coal Mines Strike, was arrested and imprisoned for a number of years. Edited by Imano Takeo, Party member, "Our Science" is leftist in viewpoint. Typical topics are inflation, the housing shortage, the Social Democrats' coalition cabinet and the Chinese Communist Army. "Natural Science" (Shizen Kagaku) began publication in Jun 46. It is supposed to be devoted to research. (k) The association is supported largely through subscriptions to its magazines by member branches throughout Japan. Apparently other publications have been undertaken for financial as well as propaganda reasons. Recently the association was reported to be in financial difficulties which eased a little with the publication of Our World (Warera No Sekai), Social Science (Shakai Kagaku), Theory (Riron), History Review (Rekishi Hyoron) and Natural Science (Shizen Kagaku). The association also is publishing various easily understood texts to interest labor unions. Probably the most important work of the Democratic Scientists Association, however, is accomplished through study groups and lecture meetings.

Typical of such activities were the announced weekly meetings held by the Philosophy Department of the Democratic Scientists Association from 10 Sep through 8 Oct at the Japan Review Company's (Nippon Hyoron Sha) conference room. The notice of the meeting also advertised the sale of Sovieto Rempo (Soviet Union) by Hiradata Toshio at ¥16 to members, and History of Critique on Capitalism (Shinon Shugi Ronso Shi) published by the Ito Bookstore at ¥90. (1) That the association supplies lecturers for local meetings is evident in the request from the Ishimaki branch in Miyagi Prefecture for a lecturer to go on tour in early November. Beginning in Jan 48 the Ishimaki branch is expected to hold monthly lecture meetings for a group composed mainly of labor union members who would be trained as tutors. The Sendai and Shiogame branches also are scheduling lecture meetings. History of the Family System (Kazoku Seido No Rekishi) and Soviet Woman (Sovieto No Fujin) were requested for use by the Circle for Women's Problems which was organized by the local branch of the Democratic Scientists Association.

With 2,500 members and 27 branches at the time of the Japan Democratic Cultural League's convention in Jul 47, the Democratic Scientists Association is the largest member organization. Its strength among students and educators is demonstrated by the Kyoto branch. This branch lists about 200 members, mostly students and instructors at the Kyoto Imperial University. Yamanouchi Toshihiko, its director, as well as many other advisers and members, is a Japan Communist Party member. Past activities include a memorial lecture for two Communist heroes, Miki Kiyoshi and Tosaka Jun, who died in prison. Meeting in Oct 46 at Kyoto Imperial University the audience reportedly numbered more than 25,000 with several hundred turned away. This branch likewise has held memorial lectures for the late Kawakami Hajime, father of the Communist movement, at Kyoto Imperial University.

c. New Japan Literary Society: Under the slogan of "Democracy in Literature" a goup of well-known writers and JCP members of the Japan Democratic Cultural League organized the New Japan Literary Society (Shin Nippon Bungaku Kai) in Dec 45. Eight of the 10 writer-promoters are Party members while the other two are known to contribute to leftist and communist publications. This society is a descendant of the suppressed Proletarian Writers League which disbanded in the 30s when the police charged that it was a Communist Party organization.

Claiming to be more than a revival, the new society purports to desire the development of democratic literature as a prelude to the "democratic revolution." (m) The announced aims of this group are the removal of militaristic and feudalistic influence from the literary world, the insurance of freedom of the press and the strengthening of liaison with world literary circles to establish "democracy in literature in Japan."

The New Japan Literary Society probably is the most influential member of the Japan Democratic Cultural League. Members spread propaganda through their connections in the newspaper and publishing fields. Twenty branches have been established throughout Japan and four additional ones are projected. (n) The Tokyo headquarters and four branches were represented well at the League's convention which worked toward centralized communist control of all cultural groups. (o) Although the New Japan Literary Society is difficult to recognize as a Communist organization it is controlled by Party members. Its leaders, all active Party members, are Nakano Shigeharu, Tsuboi Shigeji, Miyamoto Yuriko and Iwakami Junichi. Members of other political beliefs are numerous but it is clear that Communist Party members control this society.

New Japan Literature (Shin Nippon Bungaku), published by the society, first appeared in Mar 46 when 30,000 copies were printed. Due to paper rationing this magazine has had no regular publication date but has been issued every two or three months. Circulation has dropped to 20,000. The society launched its monthly Cultural Newspaper (Bungaku Shimbun) in Nov 46 with a circulation of 30,000. This paper contains news stories of the literary and cultural worlds as well as book reviews and other literary criticisms. (p) Another important activity is the literary lecture. The first, held in Feb 46, was a memorial for Kobayashi Takiji, the Communist writer of the dissolved Proletarian Writers League, who was imprisoned and allegedly tortured to death by the police in 1934. Party members, Miyamoto Yuriko, Eguchi Kiyoshi and Tokunaga Sunao, spoke before a crowd of 700. The attendance at the second and third forums held in Jun and Aug 46, however, dropped to 300. Also sponsored by the society was the New Japan Literary Class held weekly during Mar and Apr 47 at the Nippon University. "Theory of Proletariat Literature" and "The Latest Soviet Literature" were lecture subjects while more than half of the scheduled lecture-instructors were known JCP members. (q)

d. Free Lawyers Group: The Free Lawyers Group (Jiyu Hoso Dan) was established in Nov 45 under the leadership of Uemura Susumu, a prominent member of the JCP. Their announced purposes were to promote civil liberties and to democratize the judicial system of Japan. The activities of this group include giving legal advice to labor unions, to workers engaged in labor conflicts and to farmers involved in disputes with landowners. The membership, heavily Communist, is composed of lawyers with quasi-liberal and radical views, a large percentage of whom have at one time or another served prison terms. Uemura Susumu, a member of the defense counsel in the 16 Apr 49 and the 15 May 32 Incidents, has been jailed twice. Fuse Tatsuji, who has a long police record and has been active in the Communist movement since his university days, was disqualified as a lawyer by disciplinary trial of the Supreme Court and served sentences for violations of the Newspaper Act and the Peace Preservation Law. Openly supported by the Japan Communist Party, Fuse ran a poor third for the governorship of Miyagi Prefecture in the Apr 47 elections. (r) Reportedly the most active and influential member of the Free Lawyers Group, Fuse is said to be handling legal matters for the Japan Communist Party through the Free Lawyers Group. Another important Party leader and legal adviser, Okabayashi Tatsuo, planned and executed the demonstrations held in Ibaraki Prefecture by the Japan Farmers Union (Nippon Nomin Kumiai) in protest against rice contributions.

An example of the activities of the Free Lawyers Group was the suit against two companies in Hyogo Prefecture on behalf of four Communist Party members who had been discharged for agitation among the workers during working hours. Representatives of the Free Lawyers Group demanded the jobs of these men restored on the grounds that they had been illegally discharged under the Labor Union Law. The group has also been used by Communists who attempted to place some of their own members or sympathizers in the Supreme Court. In connection with the new appointments of judges to the Supreme Court the Free Lawyers Group joined in publishing a proclamation intended to discredit career judicial officials and create public support for judges selected from among themselves.

e. Japan Farmers Union: The national organization of the Japan Farmers Union (Nippon Nomin Kumiai) was officially founded at a rally on 9 Feb 46 in Tokyo. Two hundred ninety-three delegates reportedly attended the inaugural meeting. They claimed to have the support of thousands of farmers throughout the country as farm leaders had been busy forming local village and district unions since the autumn of 1945. This movement is not new in Japan. The union actually is the resurrection and unification of four old peasant unions ordered disbanded by the Tojo Government in Mar 42. Although there was a divergence of political opinion among these groups, their principal aim was to improve the conditions of the contracts that bound Japanese tenant farmers. (s)

The post-war farmers' union movement, however, has been torn by controversy in the struggles of various political groups to chieve control of the farmers' front. Although the Japan Farmers Union (claimed membership 1,200,000) is the oldest and most powerful of the various farmers unions, attempts to unify the farmer front through its organization have been impeded by a sharp Right-Left schism. Social Democratic Right Wingers in the Japan Farmers Union, under the leadership of Hirano Rikizo, finally broke away and formed the National Farmers Union in Jul 47 as an independent organization. Other smaller unions have been formed.

Two issue in particular supply the key to the rapid growth of competing farmers' organizations and the disunity of the movement. First, party politicians see the organization of the rural voters under their own banners as a necessary part of political strategy. Second the issue of Communist Party influence, particularly since that party's reputation in the Apr 47 elections, has been accompanied by sharp division among the members. The importance of these two factors can be demonstrated in the case of the Japan Farmers Union. The allegation of Communist Party influence in and even domination of the union was a primary cause of its division with the withdrawal of the Hirano faction at the second national convention of the union in Feb 47. Since then this has been the leading source of friction among these remaining within the Japan Farmers Union.

To maintain union solidarity after Hirano's defection, Kuroda Hisao, elected chairman of the Central Executive Committee at the second national convention, attempted to steer the Japan Farmers Union policy along a middle road, neither pro nor anti-Communist. Kuroda in a recent statement gave approximately the following explanation of this policy: "We might welcome communists or exclude them. It is impossible for us to deny them membership so long as they agree to our policies...Since its organization our union has endeavored to seek the participation of farmers covering as many classes as possible. The variety in today's farmers' front reflects the complex class organization, found in agricultural communities, which a single political view cannot explain fully...Since our union is so composed of all classes of farmers with various demands, it is necessary for us to adopt a fairly comprehensive policy if the will of its members is to be reflected adequately." Kuroda's position regarding the Communist Party was not adequate to avoid inter-union friction. Sharp division has appeared among Left-Wing Social Democratic leaders on the Central Executive Committee of the Japan Farmers Union.

Nomizu Masaru, Left-Wing Social Democrat serving as director of the unions Political Department has appeared to be the chief opponent of Kuroda's policy. Nomizo worked for a decisive break with the Communist-affiliated Japan Farmers Union elements. He recommended a rapproachment with the Hirano-led National Farmers Union which Kuroda opposed as "an anti-Communist program." The Central Committee meeting, 16 Jul 47, ended in confusion without reaching any decision.

The fortunes of the Japan Farmers Union are dependent directly upon a workable solution of the Communist issue since the efforts of neutral Social Democrats to effect a merger of the Japan Farmers Union and the National Farmers Union have both been successful and the gap between the two has grown even wider. Under the vigorous leadership of Hirano Rikizo and his followers the National Farmers Union strength appears to have increased steadily, although it is difficult to estimate its strength precisely. A recent official estimate claimed 847,000 members in 37 prefectures, however.

Mention should be made of such moves as have been made by Communist Party affiliates within the Japan Farmers Union and by the party itself to escape the anti-Communist pressure of recent months. The effect of anti-Communist Party agitation, which reached its peak following the 1 Feb general strike threat and the Apr 47 elections, has been to force a modification of Party policies and, to a limited degree, to cause the removal of Party members or sympathizers from positions of direct leadership in such organizations as the Japan Farmers Union. In Farmer organizations this modification of policy has been evident in recent Communist Party support for the compulsory rice delivery system and in general advocation of a less militant action program. Nosaka Sanzo, Communist leader and Diet member, accused the Social Democratic members of the Japan Farmers Union of acting as "fractions" with the intent to disrupt the union's organization. The Communists, according to Nosaka, have never attempted to influence the union's policies but instead are working to preserve the integrity of the organization.

f. Japan Democratic Youth League: The Communist-dominated Association to Expedite the Organization of a Unified Youth League (Tan-Itsu Seinen Domei-Tai Kessei Sokushin-Kai) met in Tokyo on 22 Nov 47 to outline organizational plans for the Japan Democratic Youth League (Nippon Minshu Seinen Domei). Formation of this league, if successful, may unite left-wing youth groups on a national level which the Young Communist League has never succeeded in doing. Although many Communist Party members are listed among the promoters of the League, it is not expected to have open relations with either the Young Communist League or the Communist Party. (t)

Examination of the list of known promoters indicates determined Communist penetration of labor union youth sections. Kunagaya Jiro, central figure in the organizational group, reportedly is very popular with labor union youth section. He is a Communist Party member. Iwasawa Kohei, chief of the Government Railway Workers Union Youth Section (Kokutetsu Rodo Seinen Bu); Okiyama Masahiro, chief of the Electrical Industry Workers Union Youth Section (Sensan Rodo Seinen Taisaku Bu); and Nishiwaki Ryuju, chief of the All Japan Communications Workers Union Youth Section (Zentei Seinen Bu), are all Japan Communist Party members who are attempting to establish liaison between the proposed Youth League and the unions' youth sections. Representatives of the seamen's, newspaper and radio, transportation, occupation workers and teachers unions are also listed as promoters of the proposed league. Communist Party members of the Democratic Korean Youth League (Zai Nippon Chosen Minshu Seinen Domei) and the Democratic Youth Congress (Minshushugi Seinen Kaigi) likewise are cooperating with the organizational group. With this powerful leftist representation, the league's promoters are also courting the National Federation of Labor youth leaders, and other more conservative elements of the farmers', students', women's and cultural groups. (u)

The Youth League appears designed to serve the same purpose for the Communist Party among youth organization that the Japan Democratic Cultural League serves among the cultural organizations. The Cultural League's reported aim is to establish a centralized Communist control of all cultural organizations in Japan. A comparable youth organization on a national level would provide a very effective school for young communists. (v). The inaugural rally is scheduled to take place on 23 Mar 48. (w)

g. Women's Groups: Wives of Communist Party members receive indoctrination in Marxist principles through a women's auxilliary inaugurated in May 47 at Party headquarters. Weekly lessons and lectures of the Association for Wives of Communist members are designed to help these women understand the Party and to enable them to lend moral support to their husbands. The group has 63 members. The officers are the wives of prominent Party leaders, Tokuda Kyuichi, Nosaka Sanzo, Miyamoto Kenji and Hayashi Eizo. (x)

Another women's group is the Women's Democratic Club (Fujin Minshu Kurabu). It was formed in Mar 46 by three famous Japanese writers: Miyamoto Yuriko, wife of Miyamoto Kenji and one of the most outstanding women members of the Japan Communist Party, who once lived in Russia and has been indicted for leftist writings; Akamatsu Tsuneko, a Left-Wing member of the Social Democratic Party, who serves as chief of its Women's Section; and Kato Shizue, Social Democratic member of the Diet, who writes for leftist and Communist publications. Under the watchful eyes of such women, activities of the club include lectures, movies, shows, concerts, plans and dancing lessons promoted by the Enterprise Section. The Daily Life Section in cooperation with the Women's Section of the Communist Party aims to educate women in politics. Membership is estimated at 500.

The Democratic Women's Society (Minshu Fujin Kyokai) closely parallels the Women's Democratic Club. The membership of this society includes Communist sympathizers, ex-Communists and Left-Wing Social Democrats. Its organization resembles that of the Communist Party. Membership is offered to any women or women's organization which will support democratic education and liberation of women. The society publishes a newspaper, holds training classes, lectures and investigates women's associations. Although the Democratic Women's Society and the Democratic Women's Club are separate organizations, it is possible that they collaborate and perhaps will merge.

h. Activities Among School Children: Communist propaganda is disseminated to children through such groups as the Juvenile Literary Association (Jido Bungakusha Kyokai) and the Japan Juvenile Painting Society (Nippon Doga Kai), member organizations of the Japan Democratic Cultural League. (y) Gunma Prefecture Communists are campaigning among children principally through the New Literary Society (Shin Bungaku Kai). The Fukushima Prefecture Communists established a cultural organization, Agrarian Children's Cultural League (Noson Jido Bunka Renmei), early in Oct 47 for the dissemination of "culture" to farm children.

Children's groups also are contacted by the Communists who entertain groups with Paper Theater (Kami-Shibai) entertainment, buying the paper placards needed from the Communist Party headquarters in Tokyo. (z) During the convention of the Japan Democratic Cultural League in Tokyo in Jul 47, it was reported that these shows were being presented to a great number of people, chiefly children.

4. Summary:

The Japan Communist Party's cultural front organizations are effective agencies for spreading Communist propaganda and influence in Japan and the maintaining of contact between the Party and sympathetic groups. These societies appeal to all ages and interests. The Japan Communist Party thoroughly dominates a large number of the Japanese cultural societies through members in key positions. They have successfully effected a powerful propaganda front which seems in part of offset the failure of the 1 Feb strike and the Party's repudiation in the Apr 47 elections. They serve both as a "front" for the dissemination of propaganda and a "cover" for activities hostile to the Occupation. Their strength is their appeal to so many normal yet varied interests. Their purposes are hostile to the successful democratization of Japan.

Remarks :

a. Those Korean organizations appearing in this diagram substantially constitute satelite organizations of the Japan Communist Party ; but their relations with the latter being kept in strict secrecy, detailed connection between the two is not to be clearly known.

b. After the dissolution of the CHO-REN (League of Koreans in Japan), these Korean organizations, which lost their propping body, have externally taken independent form of existence respectively ; but their connection with one another has still been closely maintained and, in particular, they cooperate entirely in a united body in the development of local struggles.

c. It seems that instructions given to these Korean organizations are traceable to two origins, namely, upper organs within respective systems and Communist organs of their equal level.

d. It is considered that a Communist organ of every class has been provided with a Koreans' division or some corresponding system.

e. The ZAI-NICHI CHOSEN KAIHO KYUEN KAI (Korean Liberation and Relief Association in Japan) has been put in this diagram as almost all its constituent elements are influential members of the Communist Party and its paper " Kaiho Shimbun" has been playing the actual role as an organ paper for all its kindred organizations.

f. All these Korean organizations are those which have not taken official procedure for their registration ; and here have been introduced such ones as have been clarified in so far.
