A large mouse head in flowers was executed by A. J. Lanternier & Co. last week, for the flower festival of the Moose lodge. This firm also had charge of the decorations of the hall for this affair. Spring flowers were used, and the arrangement was very elaborate.

The Flick Floral Co. had some attractive novelties for the trade for Washington's birthday, and reports a good demand, especially in the way of table decorations, corsages, etc.

Private George W. Doswell, has been relieved from service at Camp McClellan, Alabama, and has again taken up his duties at the store of the Doswell Floral Co.

Mrs. Clem Lanternier has gone to Toledo, O., to remain a week with relatives. Miss Ruth Lanternier will assume her duties at the store, during her absence. H. K.

sweet peas are the favorites. Paper Whites are nearly over and the same is true of the yellow varieties. In pot plants, there is a fine supply, the Dutch hyacinths, and tulips making a splendid showing. Pot jonquils are also on the market and there are early spring blossoms in the open. This class of stock will soon be abundant. Bunchies are already offered in the city market house at 10 cents per dozen flowers, while the florists' price is $1. Owing to labor conditions, many growers have abandoned violets this year and few are seen on the counters this season.

NOTES.

A bill carrying an appropriation of $5,000 for the promotion of horticulture in the state has been introduced into the legislature. It has also been suggested that a state flower be chosen and a bill has been introduced to that effect. The clover blossom has been suggested.

the market, the weather being very favorable. M. C. D.

Suit for $5,000 damages has been started against the William Walker Co., by Joseph White, who alleges that on December 31 he was struck and injured by a delivery truck owned by the concern.

A local florist was among a number of merchants who were victimized by this case, however, was apprehended and has been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment.

MUSKOGON, MICH.—E. F. Luhman, Cleveland street, for a number of years engaged in cemetery work here, is considering plans for an up-to-date flower shop in the new Union Bank building, Western avenue and First street. A range of new greenhouses to supply stock will be considered later.

DEMAND CONTINUES SATISFACTORY.

Business continues excellent. The supply is larger than at the last writing, but is cleaning up from day to day. Prices hold up well. The demand from out of town is heavy. Roses are more plentiful but more could be sold if we had them. Carnations are in fair supply. Sweet peas are fairly plentiful and sell well. Easter lilies and rubrums find a good market. Southern daffodils and jonquils may be had. They, together with the forced daffodils, jonquils, tulips, Dutch hyacinths and freesias find a good market. Snapdragons are meeting with a good call. Other offerings include callas, calendulas, violets, orchids, forget-me-nots and baby primroses.

NOTES.

Influenza claimed another victim when Mrs. Theresa Buschle, wife of Edward Buschle, passed away February 27. She was survived by her husband and a child, and is mourned by her many friends.

OVERSUPPLY CAUSES DRAGGY CONDITIONS.

Business continued rather brisk throughout the past week. Prices were somewhat lower on all stock, but despite this fact, the oversupply made the market drag somewhat. The cut of bulbous stock, particularly, was heavy, with sweet peas running a close second. Carnations continue at a staple figure. Roses have dropped a bit in price, with a good supply of excellent stock. Callas have been equal to the demand. In greens, the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

The retail florists' association held its bi-monthly meeting last week and elected officers for the ensuing year. Fred C. Weber, Jr., was chosen president, Andrew Meyer, Jr., vice-president, Oscar Ruf, secretary, Andrew Hofman, treasurer; F. J. Hermann, sergeant at arms, Trustees: Chas. Beyer, L. Jules Bourdet, W. H. Kruse. The retail association, as an organization also endorsed certain plans submitted by the publicity committee to raise money for advertising.

Among the growers who are going to increase their ranges this year are, O. C. May, Sappington, Mo., Phil. Goebel, Jr., Des Peres, Mo., and W. W. Ohlweiler, Clayton, Mo.

The florists' club is sending out special notices for its next meeting, which is going to be a carnation exhibition. A special entertainment and luncheon will be on tap.

From all reports the masquerade to be given by the local florists is going to be a huge success. Tickets are selling fast. J. J. W.

Rochester, N. Y.

SHORT SUPPLY AND PRICES HIGH.

There has been a shortage of nearly all kinds of cut stock in the daily supply, the market is limited to a marked degree and in consequences prices are high and firm. Roses are somewhat poor in quality and with a few exceptions the stock is soft. American Beauty and Francis Scott Key are very scarce. Carnations are good and always in demand. Violets are selling well and the quality is good. Asparagus is very scarce.

NOTES.

George T. Boucher arranged one of the finest decorations ever seen in this city, February 25, at the state armory for the policemen's ball. Wild smilax, laurel roping, snapdragons, marguerites and artificial stock were used in profusion.

Mrs. Harry Merritt, of Ironduquoit, has been confined to her home for the past week on account of illness but is improving.

SHORTENING DEMAND DROPS PRICES.

Business has been a little quiet the past week, consequently prices have dropped. Carnations are still scarce and clean up well at $6 per 100. American Beauties are not very good, with nothing but the smaller grades coming in. Roses are more plentiful, bringing from $6 to $20 per 100 with Russell and Columbia commanding a little higher prices. Sweet peas are now arriving in large quantity and now arriving in large quantities and $20 per 1,000. Lilies are on the short side and never have to be put away, being sold before they arrive in the market. Irises are very good and clean up at 15 and 25 cents each. Tulips, jonquils, calendulas, freesias and niglonette are coming in small quantity and move readily at good prices.

NOTES.

E. J. Malore, of Cannonsburg, Pa., was in town and reports business as very good; in fact, it is hard to find a retailer who has not the same report to make.

Wm. Phillips, road man for the McCallum Co., has just returned from a most successful trip through western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia.

Columbus, O.

CARNATION SHORTAGE NOTICEABLE.

All kinds of spring flowers are in big demand, with stocks short on hyacinths and some other varieties. The most attractive feature of florists' displays now is in cinerarias, which have a maximum price in pots of about $3. Curtailed planting is showing its effects in scarcity of carnations which are usually abundant at this period. The quality is fine and good prices are being realized. Roses are also scarcely equal to demand. Sweet peas are plentiful. Florists foresee that the better prices compared with last spring will bring about larger cultivation among small growers who sell to the wholesale trade.

NOTES.

A. Newlands, manager of The Fifth Avenue Floral Company's retail department, who has been in a local hospital for some weeks suffering from the after effects of an influenza attack, has gone to the home of relatives in Michigan for recuperation.

SWEET PEAS NOW BIG FACTOR.

The mild, bright weather of the past week has brought along the flowers so that the market can be said to be full in almost every line. Roses, which have been on the short side ever since the impetus given to the business last October, are seen in larger quantities and now about equal the demand at what can still be called very good prices. American Beauties are still scarce, however, and command top figures. The feature of the week has been the large supply of sweet peas, which has been the greatest of the season; the quality is fine in all grades. Prices are moderate, and the stock moves off in a most satisfactory way, there being little, if any, surplus at the week end. Carnation shipments are also large, but like the sweet peas, they appear to find plenty of buyers. They grade up well and returns appear satisfactory to both buyer and seller. Callas are now quite plentiful, yet select stock brings the top winter prices. Easter lilies, cold storage stock, is still coming in very poor condition, though much of it is short stemmed. Bermudas have arrived; they are quite up to standard for this variety, 5-7 size bulbs carrying two to three flowers, and at times, four. Prices have gone off a little, as there is so much else, and callas are offered down. High grade snapdragons are seen in all the stores and sell well. All bulbous stock appears to be in demand, and the market is about even on this class of flowers. Iris Tingitana is a bit draggy. It really takes but a little of some even good things at times to stall the market. There are plenty of cattleyas and good violets, rather more than are eagerly taken. Calendulas, daisies, mignonette, forget-me-nots, wallflowers, pansies and other small flowers all appear to find buyers, and there never seems to be enough of greens, especially asparagus.

March 3.—Owing to the unusually mild, sunny weather of the past few days, shipments from the growers were quite heavy, there being increased production in all lines. There was a very good demand, all the stores buying, which, with a lot of shipping orders, kept the stock moving. Prices are about the same as last week, perhaps a shade less on the lower grades.

CLUB MEETING.

The March meeting of the florists' club was another record breaker in point of attendance, there being 96 at the dinner and over 200 at the session which followed. M. J. Brinton's paper on "Carnation Ideals and Successes" was full of information that all in the trade, grower and dealer, can profit by. It was a very scholarly effort, yet intensely practical. In telling why many retailers do not push carnations, he brought out a number of points that caused a lively discussion. Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, Minn., who stopped off in this city on his way from Washington, D. C., urged the club to encourage the planting of trees as memorials to heroes who had given their lives for their country. He also spoke of changed conditions in reference to the proposed plant embargo of the federal horticultural board, which cut flowers, including carnations, sweet peas, roses, irises and freesias, nearly all novelties. Charles H. Grakelow's talk on the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, and the wonderful benefit it had been to his business, should make many new members for the organization in this city. Over 25 applications were received.

A RECORD FOR CARNATION PRODUCTION.

In a recent discussion between several growers, relative to the productive qualities of the carnation, it was thought that an average of from 16 to 18 flowers to a plant, including all varieties grown on a place, was about the limit, and a record which most growers would be glad to have as a result of their season's work.

This however, is clearly distanced by a carnation specialist, who can be said by his record to have fairly earned this high sounding title, as his books show that the cut from all varieties for last season averaged 28 flowers per plant. As he is noted for the quality of his flowers, his market returns were most satisfactory. This man's hobby is carnations; they are in his mind all the time. He studies them as the astronomer does the stars. Only the robust, strong cuttings, selected even at the expense of flowers, are good enough for his next year's stock. From the time they are rooted, until ready for the field, they receive the best of care. Planted at the right time, and never being allowed to suffer from nourishment, want of cultivation, protracted drought, proper pinching, etc., when the time arrives for benching, his plants are ideal, the envy of all who see them. His compost for the tables has been prepared with great care and contains the proper proportions of plant food that he has found most satisfactory. When the stock is benched and reaches its season of bloom, it is said to be "By far the finest lot of plants and cut blooms that his section of the universe can produce," or as voiced by a delegation of his fellow florists at a recent visit, "ever produced." Who is this remarkable grower? Write to Postmaster Burlison, Washington, D. C. He may tell you, but he will not permit us to do so in these columns.

NOTES.

Keeping abreast of the times, is credit enough for most men, but there are those who keep forging ahead, whose motto is, "Sell more flowers," and who are never satisfied if this year's record does not break or surpass that of the past. They are always looking ahead and planning new achievements. H. H. Battles is one of these leaders. The resumption of business in his Century Shop, which aims to do an entirely different trade from his high class store next door, and which was closed when so many of his 75 employes went into service or war activities, is now open again and doing a splendid business. It is a marvel in the selling of plants and flowers at moderate prices. A new setting, or furnishing, of the large window of his main store, in colonial cream colored enameled woodwork and mirrored window door in the rear, gives an admirable background for artistic effects in plants and cut flowers.

Edward Reid, takes his first quarter of a century in business, which mark he passed on March 4, as a matter of course. While he has worked to some purpose, he shows no desire to lay off, and is to be found on the job every day, working and planning to do more business and do it better.

John Jensen, whose Holland bulbs for Easter are outside in a sheltered situation, has taken the precaution to cover the ground through the day with straw mats, which are removed at night. In this way, he hopes to keep the ground cold and hold the bulbs for the very late Easter.

The Lord & Burnham Co., greenhouse builders, have re-opened their Philadelphia office, taking quarters at 718 Land Title & Trust Co. building, Broad and Chestnut streets. R. C. Fontaine, of the New York office, is manager, with D. T. Connor of this city as assistant.

Walter Van den Henge has resigned his position with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, and will manage the retail cut flower department in connection with his brother's landscape business in Overbrook. There should be a good trade worked up in this fashionable suburb.

C. U. Liggitt is of the opinion that the Premier rose will be good stock, if the wood is all used for cuttings, as there is an unprecedented demand for this variety.

BUSINESS HOLDS TO NORMAL.

Taken throughout, the business of the past week was just about the ordinary grind, with which experienced wholesalers and retailers are familiar. The changes to be noted were increases—though not many—in the supply of American Beauty and tea roses, special American Beauties wholesaling at the rate of $1 each for the very best, and a falling off in the demand about the middle of the week. Indications point to cheaper roses and carnations from now until Easter, April 20. As Lent will have begun by the time this is in print, it is reasonable to expect a quiet market for the next few weeks. The most noteworthy surplus in the wholesale district is in sweet peas, which have dropped heavily from the prices of a month ago. Lily of the valley continues cheap, but Easter lilies are firm and are likely to continue so until after Easter. It would appear that the scarcity of pot lilies will cause a greater demand for cut flowers at Easter. With the market practically bare of azaleas and pot lilies, there must be substitutes of some kind. The fact that Easter is so late, may bring in supplies of various stocks, that at an earlier date could not be expected, but a surplus is hardly to be looked for. The Paper White narcissus is pretty well cut out, and the supply of yellow is not unseasonably heavy, nor is it likely to be. Irises, snapdragons, stocks, marigolds, cut primroses and various minor stocks are in fair supply.

March 3.—Business is about normal for a Monday, but the tendency of prices is downward, noteworthy in special rose stock. Spring flowers move well with no surplus. A limited supply of gladioli is on the market.

NOTES.

H. Langelier, representative of Van Waveren & Son, attended the hearing given by the federal horticultural board in Washington, February 26, relating to the proposed exclusion of plants shipped from Massachusetts and New York states on account of the presence of the corn borer in certain sections of those states. The board assured the protestants that it would, for the time being, leave the quarantining of infected areas to the state agricultural institutions in cooperation with the federal horticultural board. They stated, that inasmuch as gladioli grew under the soil, these would not be included in any quarantine so far as the federal board is concerned. These statements were made by Dr. Marlatt, and may be considered more or less binding. It was later stated by another member that these statements might be modified, should it be found that the corn borer exists in many other parts of the states of New York and Massachusetts.

The twelfth annual entertainment and ball of the Greek-American Florists' Association was held in the Palm Garden, 58th street near Lexington avenue, on the night of February 27, with a record breaking attendance. The entertainment was under the direction of the private entertainment department of the B. F. Keith theatres. A feature was the singing of Gregorios Georgion, a Greek haritone, who rendered English, Greek and Italian songs. Dancing followed the vaudeville entertainment. The officers of this association are, N. J. Lales, president; J. Fellouris, vice-president; J. Soteriades, treasurer; C. Thomas, secretary; A. Parantates, assistant secretary.

Although it was generally known that William J. Stewart, of Boston, Mass., had been in poor health for some time, the news of his death, February 23, was a shock to his many friends in this city. Aside from his wide acquaintances, formed while secretary of the Society of American Florists and representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, he had in more recent years, frequently visited this city and vicinity. He had the happy faculty of making friends, and few men, not actually residents, were as well known in the trade of this city as he.

The annual dinner of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held

W. Popp, of the New York Florists' Club, and other visiting gardeners of Westchester and other counties, were also in attendance.

cordially received by the Secretary, who agreed to take the matter up with the solicitor of the department of agriculture that all the legal aspects might be considered. The delegation filed a brief with the secretary.

Paul J. Burgevin, for many years a grower of the neighboring city of Port Chester, has sold his stock and leased his range to the firm of Lundell & Schwartz. Charles Lundell was formerly an employe at the Burgevin range. Hans Schwartz was for several years with Wadley & Smythe of this city, later having in charge a private estate in Riverdale, N. Y. In addition to growing, the new firm will engage in landscape gardening.

Professor E. A. White of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., was in this city for several days of the past week. He attended a meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society, of which he is secretary, February 24, later making the rounds of a number of florist establishments. He was accompanied by W. P. Woodcock and C. L. Thayer, Cornell students.

MARKET CONDITIONS ABOVE COMPLAINT. The latter part of this week saw the wholesale market better supplied with cut flowers than for some time past, but prices have maintained a good level. There was an abundant supply of carnations, all good stock, with a good demand. Roses, too, were more plentiful than for some time, with a slight drop in price. Easter lilies and callas moved well. Sweet peas and violets dragged a little the latter part of the week, but until then had been moving nicely.

NOTE.

Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, who has for some time past conducted the publicity features of the florists' club, has been given charge of the "Department of Floriculture" in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, a new departure for that paper.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June, 1919.

REPORT on the corn borer hearing will be found on page 338 of this issue.

L. DAEHNFELDT, LTD., of Odense, Denmark, are said to be on the French black list.

CONTRACT growers of tuberose and caladium bulbs are advancing prices over last season.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Hart & Vick report a better demand than anticipated in all departments.

ON March 4, the government guarantee of $2.25 per bushel for the 1919 wheat crop became a law.

It is officially reported that the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam sailed from Rotterdam, February 23, for New York.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district have not advanced the past week; the trade is still waiting for an onion set boom.

It is reported that a cash offer of $1,000,000 was recently refused by a Philadelphia mail order seed house for its business.

BAHSON reports the 1918 bean crop exceeds the crop of 1917 by 4,000,000 bushels and advises a hand-to-mouth buying policy.

AMERICAN stocks of French grown immortelles are well exhausted and December prices closed at double usual pre-war figures.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade March 5 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—J. B. Agnew has retired from the Pacific Seed Growers' Co. and will grow sugar beet seed. Henry Voorman, formerly interested in this company, died about six months ago.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chicago, is in the midst of a retail mail order rush, with good trade orders for spring bulbs and flower seeds. Treacherous weather has caused the holding back of some perishable stocks.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. T. Ferrell, of A. T. Ferrell & Co., Saginaw, Mich.; A. B. Haven, Santa Ana, Calif.; Dudley A. Sherwood, representing Wm. A. Cox, San Francisco, Calif.; F. E. Osborn of the Sioux City Seed Co., Sioux City, Iowa.

THAT nearly all of the seed trade are slow buyers on contract at present figures, is an admitted fact, and the repeated lower prices being put out by contract growers, shows that the growing situation is easing up considerably, and that the farmers in most lines are becoming more reasonable.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover market closed steady March 3, at $25.60, registering a gain of 70 cents during the preceding seven days. March was quoted at $25.25 and April at $21.10. Timothy was a trifle lower, cash being offered at $4.55, March, $4.62½, April $4.67½, May $4.70 and September $5.45.

AN attempt is being made to form an association of radish growers in northern Michigan. A meeting of seedsmen's representatives was held last week at which the demands of farmer seed growers were to the effect seed should be accepted f. o. b. railroad station, with no opportunity for inspection or germination tests.

A SIXTY thousand dollar farm exhibit is being sent to France with four farm experts to teach American soldiers still there how to do American farming. Verily, Uncle Sam is rich, and the department of agriculture surely appreciates the fact, but why not loosen up censorship and trading opportunities for American merchants?

OWEN F. TROTT, representing Kelway & Son, Langport, Eng., who sailed March 4, 1918, on a tour of the seedsmen, visiting South Africa, New Zealand, Australia and the United States, reached Chicago last week on the homeward journey and reports the trade of the countries visited in very satisfactory condition, all things considered.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Relaxation of French import restrictions is proposed to allow sales to French merchants of $40,000,000 worth of machine tools and all agricultural implements if commercial credits for one year can be arranged. The War Industries Board understands that it is the intention that individual American companies are to deal directly with French concerns.

SPED POTATOES.—A prominent operator reports a disastrous season on Triumph. He believes there will be practically only one-half as many eating potatoes come from the south as in ordinary years. His sales for Triumph, much planted in that section, have been but one-third of last year's, and he is now selling this variety on the market for eating stock at a discount from the usual prices for late white stock at this time of the year.

New York Seed Bill Hearing.

Marshall H. Duryea, of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., New York, state correspondent of the American Seed Trade Association; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass., counsel of the organization, and Madison M. Esterly, of the staff of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, attended a hearing granted seedsmen of the state by the agricultural committee of the New York legislature February 26 on the proposed seed bills, mention of which was made in our issues of February 8 and 22. It is stated that the bill, as framed, could not be enforced as a law, as no distinction is made in its relating to different kinds of seeds. As we understand it, the bill is worded in general terms without any attempt at classification. It appears that the legislators had it in mind that "seeds were simply seeds"—and they might be clover or cat-tail seeds.

Imports at New York.

Horticultural goods were received at New York February 27 from Copenhagen, Denmark, via S. S. Oskar II.: To T. Madsen & Co., two boxes cabbage seed and five cases cauliflower seed.

To Loechner & Co., 258 cases field and garden seed.

To P. Anderson & Co., 37 cases cauliflower and other seeds. Via S. S. Rochambeau from Havre, France:

To A. Relker & Sons, 20 cases plants. To F. B. Vandergrift & Co., 38 cases plants.

Censorship.

Because complaints continue to come in declaring damage and loss to business in being sustained through delay caused in cable dispatches due to censorship, the Merchants' Association of New York announced on March 1. that it was continuing its efforts to have the censorship restrictions modified or removed. The association is using every effort to obtain an abatement of the restrictions, especially to neutral countries such as South America and the Far East, where the enforcement of censorship regulations seems unnecessary now that the war is over. Permission to use codes in commercial messages is also being sought. It is pointed out that the employment of codes would greatly relieve the pressure upon the cables, thus facilitating the sending of messages, and that it would reduce materially the expense of doing business abroad. The attitude of the present administration is entirely beyond ability to comprehend, according to the association. They are most anxious to find employment for returning soldiers and to build up business, but on the other hand they are putting all kinds of difficulty in the way of our transacting business and many cases of delay and loss of business have been reported.

RELIEF COMING.

Cables from Paris, March 5, say that as a result of representations by American officials, the British government has consented to the removal of all censorship, on business, commercial and all other messages.

Catalogues Received.

The D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., wholesale trade list; S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa., florists' baskets; Thos. J. Grey Co., Boston, Mass., seeds; Fraser Nursery Co., Huntsville, Ala., surplus list; Juneau Florists, Juneau, Alaska, Alaska grown plants.

H. WILDEN, representing Warnaar & Co., Sassenheim, Holland, is due in America soon.

It is reported the government will permit the export of three million pounds of clover seed.

SCARCE flower seed items include Lobelia Crystal Palace compacta, Begonia gracilis luminosa and B. Ver-non.

THE Canadian Seed Growers' Association has published its fourteenth annual report, also a catalogue of registered and improved seeds produced in 1918 and offered for sale.

State Florists' Association of Indiana.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana held an interesting and well attended meeting, 30 members being present, at Indianapolis, March 4, at which plans were perfected for a flower show to be held in the Claypool hotel, that city, November 12-13, at which unique effects will be a noteworthy feature, and special attention will be given to displays of novelties. Plans were also outlined for a floricultural course, and recommendations will be made to the proper officials that such be taught at Purdue University. A feature of the meeting was the address by Gottfried Yaeger, income tax expert, who spoke on the federal law covering the subject and invited a discussion from those present which brought out a number of interesting questions which were ably answered by the speaker.

Before the close of the session, a committee was appointed which will have charge of the flower show details, and an invitation will be extended to the members of the Kentucky Society of Florists to be present as guests. A general invitation will be also extended to all persons connected with the craft to attend as no pains will be spared to make the fall exhibition a complete success in every respect.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President;
C. W. Waid, Grand Rapids, Mich., Vice-
President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky.,
Secretary; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids,
Mich., Treasurer.

REPORT on the corn borer hearing will be found on page 338 of this issue.

THE Sweet Potato Weevil and Its Control" is the subject of Farmers' Bulletin 1020 recently issued by the United States department of agriculture.

THE annual meeting of the New York Vegetable Growers' Association was held at Albany during the week of February 16, the following officers being elected for the ensuing year: J. Goldsmith Hills, Newtonville, president; T. Harvey Hoimes, Albany, secretary-treasurer.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 4.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.00 to $5.00; celery, Florida, crate, $5.00 to $6.00; leaf lettuce, per box, 35 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 50 to 60 cents; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $6.00 to $7.50.

New York, March 3.—Celery (Florida), per case, $6.00 to $9.00; cucumbers, $2.00 to $2.50 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.25 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 25 to 65 cents; lettuce, per package, $2.00 to $6.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $4.00 to $6.00.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period February 26-March 4, show a continued upward trend in prices with shipments active. Potato markets made further recoveries, advances of from five to 15 cents being quite general. The Chicago carlot market closed five cents higher than the previous week at $1.70-$1.75 per 100 pounds for No. 1 sacked northern white stock which sold at $1.70-$2.05 in general jobbing markets and $2-$2.50 in southern cities. Minnesota Red River Obios gained fully five cents and Colorado No. 1 sacked whites followed a fairly firm range of $1-$1.25 f. o. b. Greeley. Onions were much higher following a brisk demand in western New York producing sections and reports of reduced southern acreage. Prices rose abruptly to $4.50-$5 for choice sacked yellows. Consuming markets sagged at the close to $4-$4.50. Old cabbage continued to advance in producing sections and fair to good New York Danish Seed went to $20-$30 per ton bulk, f. o. b. Consuming markets reported variable demand and prices $5-$10 higher, reaching $25-$45. Holland Seed remained firm at $10 in leading middle-western markets. New Florida stock advanced 50 cents, moving at $1.25-$1.50 f. o. b. per 1½ bushel hamper and ranged $2-$2.50 in northern consuming sections. Celery held to very firm values. Golden Heart, California stock, went in producing sections at 60 cents, $1 per dozen and in consuming markets reached $9-$11 per crate. Lettuce ranged slightly higher generally. Bean markets were irregular with a stronger tone.

The City Garden.

If we are not greatly mistaken, the city garden, or rather war garden, will be less a factor this year than formerly. A good many enthusiasts have discovered that to produce vegetables means expense in seed, plants, fertilizers and labor away beyond their expectations. Then the results are often in doubt. Recently a fairly average city lady told the writer these words: "If I figure up my expenses, that amount of money would buy all the vegetables we use, and if we depend upon the market, we can buy what we want at the time we want it; but to produce at home too often we have a surplus, and some things are a total failure. Hence, no more war garden for me. I would rather plant a few flowers and buy my vegetables." This is not an isolated case. There are thousands like this one. The thing has been overdone in importance, and the reaction must come. This means a better and steadier market for both the gardener and the florist, for during the war-scare many abandoned their flowers and planted edibles.

The high cost of seeds, labor and fertilizers, together with the ever-present risk, has made this form of home gardening unpopular with many. Some with determination and ability succeeded, and will no doubt continue; while others must drop out. It has been stated that this home gardening had no appreciable effect on the markets; however, this is a great mistake, as all truck gardeners know. In many places this home competition has so weakened the market as to make long stretches of the market season a loss to the regular producer. In the long run, some good will come out of this agitation. Many became users of vegetables who never used them at all; others commence to appreciate the efforts of the professional gardener, knowing now what it means to till the soil; and the instruction scattered wholesale in regard to home canning will eventually work out to the benefit of the truck gardener. We believe the immediate future offers good prospects for the market gardener.

MARKETMAN.

Onion Thrips.

Onion thrips a most serious menace to the onion growing industry in the United States, causes an annual loss to this crop estimated to be at least \$2,250,000 by the department of agriculture. Though the insects have a particular liking for onions, they also prey upon other garden truck crops, such as cabbage, cauliflower, cucumbers and melons, and have a ravenous appetite for greenhouse and many ornamental plants, particularly roses. According to Farmers' Bulletin 1007, recently issued by the department, the first indication that an onion field has been attacked by thrips is shown by the leaves which become whitened. In advanced attacks, the leaves are curled, crinkled and twisted and finally die down permanently. To control this pest, begin by spraying with nicotine sulphate solution as soon as there is any evidence of the insect. If spraying is delayed until hundreds of young thrips are present the crop will be seriously injured. The spray material is made by the following formula:  $\frac{3}{4}$  pint of nicotine sulphate (40%), 4 pounds of dissolved soap, and 50 gallons of water. Spraying should be done thoroughly and applied as a fine mist.

It is not advisable to plant other crops, such as early cabbage and cauliflower, upon which the thrips feed, near the onion fields. After onions, cabbage and related crops are harvested, the field should be cleaned up to destroy any breeding places of the insect. They will continue to thrive on any portion of these plants or weeds that might remain in the field. It is a good practice to plow as deeply as possible and harrow the ground after harvest. Onion fields should be watched constantly and the plants should be kept growing thriftily, since once the plants become checked in their growth from any cause the thrips will multiply more rapidly than ever and it will be a hard fight to save the crop.

Henleys Purchase Terre Haute Range.

H. B. Henley and his brother, Howard E. Henley, of Hartford City, Ind., have bought the Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co.'s range consisting of 50,000 square feet of glass and five acres of land. The establishment, which will be conducted under the name of Henley Brothers, will grow cut flowers and plants for the wholesale trade. Robert M. Henley has bought the half-interest of his brother, Henry, in the firm formerly known as the Hartford City Floral Co., and will operate the range there as a continuance of the firm under the name of R. M. Henley, Florist.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Meon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

REPORT on the corn borer hearing will be found on page 338 of this issue.

SOME English growers are insisting that the present embargo against the Dutch be maintained.

CABLE advice from Holland the end of February states that Dutch roses are too far advanced to export.

EASTER BEURRE pears, California grown, sold at $5 per case in the Covent Garden market, London, February 10.

THE Canadian government has shipped half a ton of conifer seeds to be used in reforestation in Scotland. The varieties are principally Douglas fir and Sitka spruce.

EDWARD A. COX, the well-known nurseryman of Worcester, Eng., died February 5, age 81 years. He was a highly accomplished propagator of hardy fruits and roses.

MR. MORRIS, N. Y.—The authorities of this place have ordered all poplars on streets cut down, claiming they have caused a stoppage of sewers. The order carries with it a penalty of $100 fine.

THE Elliott Nursery Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., has issued a circular entitled "Regulation Versus Strangulation," strongly protesting against the new embargo covering the importation of plants, bulbs, etc.

THE many friends of Alderman Roland Cotterill, Seattle, Wash., secretary of the American Association of Park Superintendents, will be very sorry to learn his health has been seriously impaired by overwork.

Connecticut Nurserymen's Association.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association was held at Hueblein's hotel, Hartford, February 25, the programme including addresses by the following able speakers: E. A. Brown, of the Hartford county farm bureau, who spoke on "The Tractor;" W. W. McCartney, New Haven, on "How Can We Get the Most Out of the Quarantine Act?"; F. K. Kelley, Princeton, N. J., on "Are Nurserymen Receiving Enough for Their Products?" and "Market Development"; Dr. W. E. Britton, state entomologist, "Insect Pests We Import," and an illustrated lecture by W. E. Campbell, New Haven, on "Publicity and the Best Way of Bringing Our Wares to the Consumers' Attention."

The association heard with deep regret of the passing of one of its most esteemed members, E. A. Brassill, of Hartford, whose death occurred a short time ago. Resolutions of regret were passed and were ordered spread upon the association's records and a copy sent to his family.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Chester Brainerd, Thompsonville, president; H. W.

Gottschalk, Manchester, vice president; F. L. Thomas, Meriden, secretary; W. W. Hunt, Hartford, treasurer.

The following committees were appointed by President Brainerd: Legislative—J. R. Barnes, Stephen Hoyt and C. R. Burr. Executive—W. W. McCartney, W. W. Hunt and E. F. Coe. Entertainment—P. M. Hubbard, W. E. Campbell and Gustave Minge. Publicity—W. E. Campbell, H. W. Gottschalk and C. R. Burr.

F. L. THOMAS, Sec'y.

Delphiniums.

Among the many plants which have been converted from good into superb garden subjects are the delphiniums, and to this work of improvement, V. Lemoine in France, Kelway & Son and Amos Perry, in this country, have made notable contributions.

As shown by Amos Perry in his lecture before the Royal Horticultural Society, selection and hybridization have brought about the present superb races. Thus King of Delphiniums, which was introduced about 25 years ago, was the result of many years of selection and is still so popular as to be both grown extensively here and also exported to the extent of 15,000 a year by one firm alone. Among the newest delphiniums are those produced by Lemoine in 1914 by crossing Delphinium elatum and D. Fatsiense, a recently introduced Chinese species.

Of species now in cultivation, Mr. Perry mentions D. cardinale as one of the handsomest; he gives praise also to the pale-yellow flowered D. Zalil, introduced from Afghanistan about 1887. For cutting for market, D. formosum is grown exclusively, and for the rockery, D. cashmerianum is to be recommended. Of the dwarf D. nudicaule (15 inches), with dazzling scarlet flowers, several varieties exist, including D. nudicaule aurantiacum, with orange-yellow, and D. nudicaule purpureum, with deep rose-purple flowers. As our readers are aware, Forrest has described vividly the beauty of the delphiniums of the higher Alps of N. W. Yunnan, near the Tibetan frontier, where species range in height from four inches to six feet and in color from palest blue to deep, rich purple. Of the dwarf Chinese species, Mr. Perry singles out D. Likiangense for special praise. It has been established in the Botanic Gardens, Edinburgh. The plant is from 12 to 15 inches high, forms symmetrical tufts of finely divided, glossy green leaves, and bears numerous erect stems each with three to five light blue flowers.

The annual larkspurs are garden races of D. Ajacis and D. Consolida. The former, the rocket larkspur, occurs in tall (3-4 feet) and dwarf (18-24 inches) forms, and shows a wide range of colors.

D. Consolida, the branching larkspur, is no less valuable and late-flowering. Now that borders are being replanted ample provision should be made for including the best of the perennial and annual larkspurs.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

GUELPH, ONT.—About 40 students have enrolled for the special course in home horticulture and landscape gardening at the Ontario Horticultural College. Local florists and gardeners, as well as those from distant points, are taking advantage of these instructive lectures.

Cambridge, Mass.

Kansas City.

INCLEMENT WEATHER HAS BAD EFFECT.

Weather conditions the latter part of the past week crippled business somewhat, especially in the shipping end as railroads would not accept goods on account of the heavy snow and the city trade went slow due to many entertainments being cancelled. Stock was somewhat more plentiful and the quality good. The supplies increased in roses, carnations, jonquils, daffodils, narcissi and freesias and bulbous flowers of good quality were on hand. Prices in general are better than in former years. Fancy sweet peas are in good supply and pot plants move well.

NOTES.

H. Kusik & Co. have mailed notices to their trade that after March 1, the firm's establishment will close on Sundays, unless that day should be a holiday.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a good supply received last week but they experienced difficulty in getting out shipments.

The Rosery reports trade good in all lines, with stock more plentiful and of better grade.

Arthur Newell reports an excellent demand with a heavy run on funeral wares.

The Alpha Floral Co. had the decorations for the tractor show.

Visitors: M. Steinhauer, Pittsburg, Kan.; C. T. Gross, representing A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Robert Schoch, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Holyoke and Northampton Club.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held February 11 at the nursery of E. J. Canning, Northampton, Mass. M. Adams, of Butler & Ullman's, was elected to membership. E. J. Canning gave a brief but interesting account of the meeting of the New England Nurserymen's Association held at Boston recently, and James Whiting, of Amherst, spoke interestingly on outdoor roses. The monthly prize was won by H. E. Downer, of Smith College, Northampton, with a pot of Pimula malacoides, var. King Albert.

ALBANY, N. Y.—As the result of a fire which destroyed stock and fixtures, the New York Floral Co., on South Pearl street, has discontinued business.

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

Thirteenth Annual Meeting, Held at Urbana, March 11-12, 1919.

Chicago Next Meeting Place.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association was held in the Floricultural building of the University of Illinois, Urbana, March 11-12. The attendance was light, attributed in large part to the general shortage of help at all trade establishments.

The meeting was called to order early Tuesday afternoon by Vice-President Hembreiker in the absence of President Keimel, who wrote from Hot Springs, Ark., regretting his inability to attend on account of impaired health. On the motion of I. L. Pillsbury, a telegram was immediately sent to Mr. Keimel on behalf of the association, sympathizing with him in his illness and conveying best wishes for his speedy and permanent recovery.

After a few introductory remarks by the chairman, the reports of the secretary and treasurer were presented, showing the association to be in flourishing condition despite the adverse times.

Dr. P. A. Lehenbauer, in charge of the floricultural experiment work at the university, was then called upon and gave a very interesting account of the problems now in hand, particularly those on "selection," "temperature, humidity and light" and "fertilizers" in their relation to production, incidentally remarking that this and all similar work had been greatly retarded by the demands of war.

Florists' Publicity.

George Asmus, chairman of the publicity finance committee of the Society of American Florists, and President Ammann of that organization, told of the great advertising campaign the national society is conducting under the "Say it with Flowers" slogan, urging every florist, large and small, to subscribe his just share, according to his volume of business, to the fund for this purpose. Proofs were exhibited of the effective advertisements prepared for a long list of coming magazines, and the speakers felt that as all florists would profit by this publicity, all should share the expense. Upwards of $40,000 was spent in this national publicity work last year, with the beneficial results already known to the trade, and it is the intention to spend $100,000 the present year, $33,000 of which has already been subscribed.

During the discussion of publicity and advertising, it was disclosed that the Milwaukee plan of assessing growers and retailers had proved so satisfactory that arrangements are in progress to increase the payments in the local co-operative advertising fund, levying two per cent of the amount of their purchases on retailers and one per cent of their sales, on growers. It was also stated the St. Louis florists are considering the advisability of adopting a similar scheme.

The Next Meeting.

In considering the time and place of the next annual meeting, the proposition to hold this in connection with the convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago, January 21-22, 1920, was adopted.

The selection of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the re-election of Wm. J. Keimel, Elmhurst, president; W. J. Hembreiker, Springfield, vice-president; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, secretary; F. L. Washburn, Bloomington, treasurer.

A letter was read from Otto H. Amling, expressing regret at his inability to prepare a paper on production costs, owing to pressure of business. Mr. Amling referred the members to his paper on this subject, read before the Chicago Florists' Club, which will be found in the December 7, 1918, issue of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, page 917.

Announcement of the early and sudden death of Frank A. Friedley, of Cleveland, O., closely identified with the floricultural interests of this state in former years, brought out numerous expressions of sincere regret, and the secretary was instructed to send a suitable floral offering on behalf of the association.

The Evening Session.

At the evening session in the Inman hotel, Professor Dorner spoke of the increasing need of more buildings in his department for the accommodation of the students. The bulletin on antirrhinum rust is practically ready for the printer, and incidentally he mentioned that so far the experimenters found destruction of infected plants the only remedy, propagating from seeds. The violet, he said, has been scheduled for early investigation.

Professor Blair had for his subject the impossible task of financing the university under present conditions with the funds available.

Most of the visitors stopped over until Wednesday to inspect the university grounds, buildings and work.

Secretary Ammann's Report.

The year 1918 surely has gone down in history as the most eventful of our generation. Many homes have been shattered, many a business has gone out of existence. The florists of this state have suffered and sacrificed along with others. When we stop to think that one-tenth of the men sent out for the greatest war came from Illinois, we have much to be proud of. No doubt, when the records of this war are completed, it will also be shown that Illinois was among the foremost states in all the war activities. The patriotic expressions and actions of our state's chief executive are to be commended indeed.

Considering all the florists have had to contend with in the way of fuel and labor shortage, we can readily congratulate ourselves on the splendid condition in which we find our business. As Illinois stood before the war, and as she so nobly responded during the war, so let us now strive, in the reconstruction, to keep her in the front rank in floriculture, as well as in her ever spreading ideals for humanity and liberty.

We have no individual record of those of our members, or members of their families, who entered the service, so let us be content to have them on the honor roll and service flag of our great state.

Reports in general of trade conditions throughout the state, were never better and prospects are very good for a bright future in our business. There is a movement on foot in the Society of American Florists to organize a state florists' association in every state in the Union, with a view of having the president of each state association made an affiliated member of the national board of directors, subject, of course, to the paid up membership in both the national and state bodies. This should be of interest to the florists of every state in the Union, as it will help to tie up each individual with the work of the national society. This will be of much value, especially in the great publicity campaign.

Receipts for annual dues were $40. No life memberships were taken out during the past year.

The Exhibits.

The exhibits included a large vase of exceedingly promising carnation seedlings from the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Morgan Park, Chicago.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., showed Ruth Baur carnations in fine form, and were awarded a certificate of merit.

W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, received honorable mention for their display of sweet peas, including Blue Jay, Snowflake and Rose Queen, the latter especially fine.

Fred Longren, Chicago, made an extensive display of florists' baskets at the Inman hotel.

A. T. Hey, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, exploited the new Rasch sprayer.

W. J. Keimel, Elmhurst.
President Illinois State Florists' Association.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Klft, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The Lenten season is on. Have you noticed any difference, is there a lessened demand? If so, you must be quick to overcome the slight falling off by greater energy in every department, particularly that of creating new business.

Now that there is an increase in all lines of blooming plants, wonderfully effective displays for both the window and store interior are possible. Easter is coming fast; now but a month away. It is none too soon to feature this important event. Owing to the open winter, and the late Easter date, it may not be possible to hold the bulbous flowers, and every effort should be made to handle and make the most of this stock, should it be forced on the market out of season.

All the various flowering plants should be decorated; they will attract so much more attention if given even the slightest decorative effect, such as a crepe paper cover, or one of white paper, drawn up around the pot, with a little, the shade of the flowers, tied in at the top. The expense is but a penny or two, but the added effect is worth 10 times the cost. Plan for such a display. Work it up right now, and then tell your customers of these beautiful plants, so spring like, most suitable as gifts for birthday or other anniversaries, or to add a bit of cheer to the sick friend in home or hospital.

Push and publicity will bring the business. It is the energetic, hustling man, who is always looking forward, planning and bringing out new ideas or presenting standard things in a new way, that keeps forging ahead. There are immense possibilities in every business, but one must have vision, as well as faith and courage, or they will never materialize for him. The man who is satisfied to take things as they come along, picking up the nuts as they fall, without taking the trouble to climb the tree, will always have a poor bag.

The writer heard, many years ago, that grand old man, John Thorpe, the man who had vision, predict the "four inch" carnation. At the March meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, M. J. Brinton, the essayist, referred to the carnations of Mr. Thorpe's day, Lizzie McGorman, Portia, La Purity, and others which were picked with very short stems and many without, and packed in pasteboard shoe boxes for market, and compared them with the long stemmed four-inch Laddies, which were on the exhibition tables at that meeting. Mr. Thorpe's dream had come true. Improving a business is much easier than working up a strain of flowers. Results are at once apparent; one day's effort crowned with success, adds encouragement for the next.

Plan for next week's business along these lines. Do not put in more stock than can be handled to advantage. While there should be a full supply, it must be constantly changing so as to always present a fresh salable appearance. The plants for the day's display should, if possible, be on hand the evening before, watered, dressed and placed in position. If the arrangement is left to the morning, an early rush of business may interfere, and the store is apt to be in confusion all day.

The cut flower stock now presents great variety, offering many striking and beautiful combinations in color effects—irises, acacias, calendulas, larkspurs, lupines, snapdragons, spray orchids, etc. These and many others can all be arranged decoratively in vases and vase baskets, from which they can be sold to much better advantage than if offered in the original bunches, or kept in jars in the case.

The decorative effect produced by the artistic arrangement of even the smallest basket, whether it contains only a few short stemmed roses, or daffodils and pussy willows, suggests or brings to mind some one who would enjoy it and the sale is made.

Newspaper advertising in connection with special displays is important. It is expensive, and results at first may seem disappointing, but if well planned, and each announcement specific, calling attention to one or two items, novel in character or price, it is bound to attract attention and the cumulative effect of one after another is sure to bring satisfactory results.

While on this subject, are you linked up with the national campaign? There is nothing slow about Chairman Penn and his committee. They have vision; $100,000 now, instead of $50,000 last year. Results obtained then have encouraged them to this greater outlay. Help put it over. Remember it is for you they are working. Every dollar you put into this campaign will bring two in return. Tie up with the service. Use their literature, prepared by advertising experts who have especially fitted it to the selling of flowers. Send your check to John Young, 1170 Broadway, New York. Do it today. Now!

Stimulating Business.

The life of the retail business is initiative, the principle that gives the transactions force and character. Without this stimulus, things just drift along from day to day. What comes in is taken care of, but there is little, if any, effort made for new business. The store is opened in the morning, the floor swept, plants watered and the order sheets looked over. "Not much on for to-day," is the comment. The flowers in the case are fixed up, and perhaps something done to the window. Then follows the wait for the customers. This is the daily routine in far too many stores.

What is wanted to stir things up is initiative. The successful, always busy, man is called a "hustler," which means that he is always on the job, planning, looking ahead, making his store so inviting, and presenting his stock in such a conspicuous manner, that it cannot fail to be seen and its beauty appreciated. He is never standing around waiting for things to turn up, but turns them up himself by constantly featuring this or that specialty in such a way as to add materially to its selling value.

The man who is just drifting along without any progress, one day like another, this month no better than the same period a year ago, needs to shake himself, make up, take the situation seriously and get at the root of the trouble. It is but natural for a business to grow, as satisfied patrons come again and bring others. If the trade is constantly changing there must be a cause. Customers perhaps find better service or a greater variety of stock elsewhere. The business cannot stand still; it will either go forward or gradually recede. The runner who loses ground in the race must put on extra speed and make it up; the leader spurts and sets the pace and all the others have their work at once cut out. They must exert themselves to the utmost and pass him before the finish, to win.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.

Secretary Illinois State Florists' Association.

If competitors in the retail store race could see one another's progress, what an eye opener it would be to some of them. The store whose windows, interior arrangement, fixtures, lighting, amount of stock carried and general management of the business is the same one year with another, is sure to fall behind. It is just drifting along and will never get anywhere near the leaders. It is said that "clothes make the man," and paint and cleanliness are absolutely necessary to the well-kept store.

The man who has seen the light, and wants to make a change, should do something radical. He should discard his counters, or at least a portion of them, for tables. Add to his store and window lights; nothing so cheerful as good illumination. Paint the floor and lay down a few rugs. Resolve that nothing unsalable or passe shall be allowed to stand around. Get a few velvet cloths and some good pedestals to give variety to the window decorations. Plan the work of the coming week in advance; always try to feature the first stocks of the flowering plants as they come into season, also the cut flowers. It is a good card for the store to have customers see the first of this or that flower of the season featured there.

Publicity is the life of business. No matter how good the stock or how great its variety, it must be brought in some way to the attention of the flower lover. Each customer's name, casual as well as regular, should be on the store list to be circularized at least once a month during the busy season of the year. Neatly printed cards, telling of the seasonable plants and flowers, can be mailed for $10 per thousand. These are sure to get a "once over," and are the cheapest and most direct method of reaching one's established trade. Newspaper columns are much more expensive, but for special sales are effective to bring in new faces, which if added to the list, can be followed up with the store's literature.

When one begins to plan and look ahead, new ideas will follow one another, each success leading to something greater. People like variety; they are always looking for something new. The perforated glass flower block brought in the shallow bowls that have had such a run. The trellis window box was another success, which was, and is, justly popular. The figures of wood and pasteboard that conceal a flower vase, the holiday kiddies and the like, are great helps in the sale of flowers, as has also been the small vase and tumbler baskets. These are but a few of the ideas that are constantly being introduced, the result of somebody's initiative. The store that is quick to pick up these new things as they come along, and make the most of them, until their novelty wears off, will have but little idle time on their hands. Their drifting days will be over, as their sails will have caught the strong business breeze that is pretty sure to carry them on to prosperity.

F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.

Treasurer Illinois State Florists' Association.

PLANT NOTES.

Iceland Poppies.

A beautiful cut flower for summer use not often grown is the Iceland poppy. While it is a perennial, yet it can be treated as an annual if the seed is sown early and the plants transplanted. Seeds sown in March will bloom the coming summer, and the varieties of color range through the yellow and orange to white. The petals have a peculiar satiny texture are beautifully crumpled, and if the flowers are picked in the early morning they will stand in water for a long time, and are very decorative. There are few annuals that will attract more attention than a vase of these lovely poppies arranged with appropriate green, and besides they have a delicious fragrance. They are easily grown, and if the flowers are kept picked will continue to bloom all summer. Another poppy that can be grown for cut flowers is the Shirley poppy, but the flowers do not last as well as the Iceland poppies.

Seeds for March Sowing.

The middle of March is the proper time for the sowing of the main crop of summer annuals. The seedsmen have seen that the growers have the catalogues, and the lists of the wants for the year should be made out at once, if not already done, and the seeds procured and sown. How often have we seen good growers spending valuable time during the busy days of May and June hunting for some small stock that could have been easily grown, but was neglected at the proper time. It is a good time now to look back at the sales of the last year or two and note what lines of stock were in short supply or were carelessly omitted. Such matters as this are the little things that count in a successful business, for the time taken in hunting up and procuring the cheaper kinds of stock during the busy season more than eats up all the profit received in handling it. The seeds that should be sown now are almost endless in variety, and they include asters, Phlox Drummondii, zinnias, marigolds, balsams, antirrhinums, begonias, calendulas, celosias, cobeas, cosmos, gauras, mignonette, nicotianas, nasturtiums, petunias, salpiglossis, ricinus, salvias, scabiosa, stocks, thunbergias, and others that may be demanded. With the exception of Cobæa scandens, mignonette and ricinus, which should be sown in pots, these can all be sown in flats and as soon as large enough transplanted to pots or spaced in flats, and good stock be had for summer bedding.

Lilacs for Easter.

A large variety of blooming plants can be grown for Easter, and dwarf, shapely lilacs are appreciated by all flower lovers, and the cut sprays have now become a standard winter flower. For the pot plants the imported budded stock is preferable, but for cut blooms any lilac may be lifted, and they force quickly and easily in a warm house. The varieties most grown for pot plants are Marie Lagraye, white, and Charles X, purple. Four weeks in a temperature of 65° will bring them into flower. The plants when placed in the greenhouse should be syringed several times a day in order to assist the buds to swell and kept in a dark place. As soon as the buds begin to open the plants can be placed in full sunlight. The common lilac can be forced in the same manner. A bush which is well set with flower buds, and these are easily distinguished from the leaf buds, can be lifted and planted in a bench and will furnish fine sprays of flowers. If the plant is kept shaded from the sun by spreading a heavy cloth over it the flowers of the purple varieties will be white when forced. The plants will require plenty of water, for they make but little root growth and bloom upon the vitality which has been stored.

Rambler Roses.

The plants of rambler roses that are intended for Easter blooming should now be showing color, and if they are not they will require quite a little forcing to have them in the best of Sweet Pea Improved Snowstorm.

Early-Flowering. Yarrowa x King White.

condition for that date. If the plants are at all pot bound, watering with liquid manure will be of great assistance to them and stimulate the flowers and make them much larger, and an addition of soot to this will intensify the color. The plants will often, when setting the buds, make long growths from the base of the plants; these should be cut out, for they are taking much strength that should go into the flowers. These canes should be made into cuttings and propagated and will make small plants for next year's growing or can be planted outside and grown on for stock for the future. There is always a good demand for well grown pot rambler for Memorial day and early June, and plants started now will be in the best of condition at that time. They can be started in a cool house and frequently syringed until the eyes break, when they can be moved into warmer quarters and full sunlight. For June decoration there is nothing better in blooming plants than Crimson Rambler and the other rambler roses and hydrangeas; they make a beautiful combination and are also very decorative for porches.

Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas Up-to-Date

The popularity of the sweet pea has grown by leaps and bounds until it has become one of the most important of the winter forcing cut flowers. Since the introduction of the Spencer or orchid type, there has been one continual advance in quality, variety of color and earliness of bloom. The importation of the strong growing and large flowered Australian variety, Yarrowa, gave hybridizers an important strain to work with, and many of the latest and most valuable introductions are the result of crosses with this variety.

One of the large firms who have been the pioneers in the improvement and introduction of this popular flower, are annually adding to their collection valuable forcing varieties that show marked improvement over existing sorts. George W. Kerr, president of the American Sweet Pea Society, is a sweet pea expert of international fame. In the past five years, he has crossed and re-crossed the best existing sorts with Yarrowa, obtaining varieties in all shades of exquisite coloring, with very large flowers, all having that essential quality and earliness of bloom, that will without doubt become standard commercial sorts for the cut flower market.

To prove their good forcing qualities, selections of some 75 varieties in all shades of color, are now in flower in trial greenhouses. These are attracting the attention of commercial sweet pea growers who are always on the alert for new varieties of merit. Two such noted experts as J. Elmer Weaver and his brother, Chas. B. Weaver, of Ronx, Lancaster Co., Pa., who with Henry D. Rohrer, E. J. Fancoust and Robert Kift had the pleasure February 19, of seeing this collection, pronounced a number of the varieties superior in many respects to others of similar colors now considered standard, and which they will undoubtedly supercede.

The hybridizing of the varieties is all done in summer in the trial grounds. Mr. Kerr says it is very essential to select young buds just showing color for the seed bearing pod before the pollen has developed, or self-fertilization will have taken place. He removes all other buds from the spray and other sprays from the branch so as to throw all the strength into the fertilized bud. On the side benches of the houses containing the flowering vines were some thousands of young stock in 4-inch pots, all under number, which will soon go into cold frames to be planted out in the trial grounds as soon as the ground was workable and danger of heavy frost was past. These will commence to flower the last week of April or the first of May.

Among the varieties that found favor as having good commercial value on account of their size and popular coloring, are the following: Improved Snowstorm, Yarrowa and King White, a superb and easily the largest and best forcing white; Albatross, another superb white, very large flower, as is Early Sankey; Fordhook Pink and White, or improved Blanche Ferry; early Canary Bird, rich deep cream or primrose color; Early Daybreak, Gypsy Maid and Sunburst, are all good cream pinks. Early Lovliness and Sweet Briar are of beautiful shades of light pink. Early Empress is bright, deep rose pink with large flowers and Early Enchantress and Early Lustre, rose pink, with a coppery sheen with large blooms. Early Splendor is a rich rose crimson, with a distinct white blotch at base of wings, a flower of great size; nothing better in its color. Early Daintyness, a white, edged rose, flowers large, picotee edged, is a strong grower and a very desirable fancy variety. Early Exquisite is another picotee primrose and deep rose pink. Lavender King, is a wonderfully large flower of a rich true color borne on long stems, a splendid variety. Zephyr is an attractive shade of silvery blue or pure lavender, a strong grower with large flowers. Early Princess is a soft lavender, suffused mauve a vigorous grower and very free. Early Glorious, a royal purple, and Mauve Beauty, a rosy mauve, are both wonderfully striking. Early Orange Beauty is an orange scarlet, similar to Helen Lewis, very free and early. Early Dazzler, much the same color, is a beautiful flower.

A cross of Yarrowa and an early summer pink had produced several fine varieties in light pinks, which were named Fairy, Fairy King, Fairy Prince and Fairy Queen. All were distinct and beautiful. Early Aurora, Early Fantasy and Early Harlequin were striped and flaked in their coloring, chocolate on light and cream ground, and rose pink on same; fancy and striking, but not of much commercial cut-flower value.

These were but a selection of the many varieties to be seen. All were strong and vigorous, many of the vines carrying sprays of threes and fours. When planted commercially in large houses, they would undoubtedly show to much better advantage. The one important feature was the absence of mixture, all varieties being true to name.

SAVANNA, ILL.—The Savanna Greenhouses, which have been closed during the winter, were opened March 3, under the management of Joseph Dunn and John Lamhert.

WEBSTER CITY, IA.—The Curtis Floral Co. will make improvements at its establishment this spring, including one new house.

THE CARNATION.

Carnation Ideals and Successes.

Paper by Maurice J. Brinton, Christiana, Pa., read at a meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, March 4, 1918.

By way of introduction I wish to say, I cannot assume the responsibility of telling this gathering how to grow such flowers as you have here on the exhibition table. I want to omit soils, temperatures, antidotes for insects and other enemies. What I wish to say is of the man who grows them, handles them, and even uses them. The history of the "divine flower," from its birth through all the varied degrees of its development as it stands before you this evening, has been rehearsed, discussed and ably described before this club. There may be recent discoveries of means of propagation and cultural methods of which I am not familiar, and of which some of you have not yet heard. I shall have to leave it to him who does know to tell you of them. Where it has been my privilege to see this flower at its best, success has been attained by methods that are common knowledge to most of you.

This word, "Success," has varied meanings. What does it mean to you? Analyze it from your individual viewpoint. Is it the volume of worldly possessions alone that you or your neighbor have been able to accumulate? Suppose we grant that this is the ordinary conception of its meaning. Therefore, any man, who has been able to maintain an economic balance throughout his life, is a success to a greater or less degree. A 50-50 man represents the lowest degree of success on this basis for our rating; he has been able to quit square. Statistics reveal some startling records relative to human effort and its relation to this balance. To the insurance companies, with their perfected organizations, and their intimate knowledge of the personal affairs of millions of us, we can refer for these facts. Beginning with 100 average men, age 25, we find 35 years later, 36 are dead, 53 are dependent on relatives or charity, six are self-supporting, and five are well-off. When all have passed over the Great Divide, 67 had been dependent upon some one else to defray funeral expenses, and only five had estates exceeding $5,000. This is not a particularly cheerful outlook for the young man who is just getting well started at 25.

What is the cause of this condition? Is it lack of education? Is it because we are not willing to make the personal sacrifice to be in this select class of 5 per cent? Are we over-ambitious and take risks that can break or cripple us, if we have erred in judgment? Are we too easily influenced by sales agencies, regardless of the method used to reach our pocket-books?

In answer to your question, "What has this to do with carnations?" I shall reply, that the rudiments of success are not materially different in the production of this article of trade from that of any other. It is the foreseeing and forestalling of the factors that hinder the highest development. It is the man who can check his troubles when they are in their infancy. Almost any of us can effect some sort of a cure, even though the cure be as bad as the disease, but it is the maintaining of conditions that do not require a cure that give us the best and most consistent returns.

While in the growing of carnations, there are seasons and elements over which we do not have control, and at times I have tried to excuse myself for not getting better results for these reasons, but when I see all kinds of houses and soils and seasons producing splendid results, I feel that finally it is the man. I recently looked over probably 12,000 plants of White Perfection that seemed to leave little to ask for. Some of us thought this variety had passed on to the list of discards. "The cause of success is in the fellow who succeeds."

The production and trial of new varieties is interesting, is essential, and supplies us with something to look forward to; it adds charm to the work.

However, as I look back to the days of Grace Wilder and Portia, and even to La Purity and Edwardsii, I believe it to be best to try out the new candidates for favor in a limited way until their value is fairly well established. I shall not recall some of the notable instances where much heralded varieties have become strewn on the rocks of shy bloomers, weak stem, poor color, broken calyx and bad keepers.

There is another kind of success; it may be associated with material success, but not necessarily to any marked degree. It is the achieving of an ideal, the realizing of the mental conception that we regard as a standard of excellence.

Cannot it also be the answering to a hope? Allow me to cite Mrs. C. W. Ward, Matchless and the master-pieces from the hands of Fisher and Dorner. Can we not look to these for the answer to a hope as it applies to our subject for this evening? Do we not all owe a debt of gratitude to the patience and skill of selection that has produced these and other varieties which have stood the test? It is the services of these lovers of the beautiful that we value too little. It is their assembling of the qualities and beauties usually seen in different individuals of their kind, eliminating almost everything defective that has set these men apart from the rest of us. These are our super-men. Their efforts have not been confined to limited hours. The joy of realizing the ideal holds them to years of painstaking care and attention.

Probably he, who has his heart in his work, and whose ambitions are not too largely guided by a mercenary return, feels most keenly the last analysis of this word success, "The attainment of one's aims and the realization of one's personal possibilities." Every one has his ideals on some subject, and it is the faculties of the human mind that are the tools to produce them.

We are living in a period of all kinds of extreme, idealistic suggestions. The hybridizer has his mental picture of his perfect flower or fruit; the mechanical genius, his flawless machine; the politician, a satisfied constituency; the statesman, with his ideals of government and control; the libertine, who wants no restraint at all; the social student with his ideal of democracy, who says the masses have the right to decide and determine. Have the knocks of business life made some of us too practical? Sometimes I feel that within it all, so many of us have become the foot-ball for the others.

From the beginning, there have been leaders of men, and let us hope until the end there may be those whose sight and vision are not clouded, and whose will is unyielding in the defense of the just reward of diligent service and of the home—the social center. The super-man is not selected or chosen; he asserts himself in every field of effort. This is part of the florist business; it is part of every business, and ours in particular. The product of our work is dedicated to the expression and preservation of life's richest sentiments centered around a stabilized home. The pendulum of human events swings with the ideals of our supermen, and he who absorbs the shocks is the man that succeeds. The experimenter and theorist are abroad. I think they must have had a hand in the new import rulings; few of us are such specialists that we are not affected to a greater or less degree by these decisions.

Anything we can do for each other will be beneficial, our interests are mutual; there can be no store or wholesaler without the grower, and very few growers without these distributing agencies. Co-operation spells success.

What lesson can we gain from our trials of the recent past? We were then confronted by rulings, the wisdom of which I do not question, and conditions that discouraged us all, closing up some of the weaker ones entirely. Let us look forward and believe difficulties are not made to break us; every trying situation we can overcome. Strengthens us for a harder one. It is the weeding out process that never ends. We have learned that the man who can stay in the game has been, and will be rewarded, for his determination.

There has been much comment in our trade papers and elsewhere as to the effect of high prices. Probably each viewpoint represented the selfish interest of the individual to some degree. Was it not a natural condition governed by cause and effect? The old law of supply and demand has in the past eventually been the price regulator, and is it not safe for the present and future? Cannot our own publicity in criticism of high prices drive more customers from the counter than all other causes? Why not a united front, facing together the true situation. There is a conservation that is not narrow or prejudiced, and there is a liberalism that is not reckless.

The future is a problem for which no one has the answer. Let us be conservatively optimistic in believing there has been no time when the need and opportunity has been greater for us to go steadily forward. In the absence and shortage of some items, make the best use of what there is to work with, filling our empty benches with whatever there is at hand, in the faith, that, if well done, the public will value it. The conflicting ideals of a radical, restless, unsettled people, need at this hour all the soothing, sweetening, inspiring influences that have been given to us to mellow them. Let us do it with flowers. Success will follow him who is unafraid.

Florists Should Support The F. T. D.

Paper by J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb., read at a meeting of the Nebraska State Florists' Society, Lincoln, Neb., February 25, 1919.

Some 12 or more years ago a few florists gathered and formed what is known today as the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. The late J. A. Valentine, of Denver, Colo., was elected president and Albert Pochelon of Detroit, Mich., secretary. The two men worked very hard and had to overcome many difficulties, and today the association has a membership of nearly 700, and it's membership is increasing, from day to day. We know of no reason why the association should not be counting its members up in the thousands inside of five years. It is necessary for every retail florist to become a member. It costs very little to join considering the great advantages one gains in picking up business, and it is business which you can only reach by becoming a member. This telegraph business today is immense and is growing from year to year. We can increase it 100 per cent as soon as we get all the florists to join, and do their share in advertising. Let the people know that you are a member of the F. T. D., and able to fill any order large or small, and just think how easily you can make 20 per cent on the dollar. It will give you some prestige by letting your home folks know that you are an F. T. D. florist, for that means you are a live wire.

Two years ago the Society of the American Florists started an advertising campaign called the national publicity campaign. In 1918, these good people spent $40,000 for publicity, and in 1919 they expect to spend over $50,000. The result of the 1918 campaign was felt all over the country. Each and every florist, grower or retailer, ought to do his or her share to bring the publicity fund next year to $100,000 or more. The P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston, Mass., is doing wonderful work for the florists. In the next three months, they will reach 11,000,000 people who will read our advertisements in all the leading periodicals. They have given us the well-known slogan, "Say it with Flowers," which is so well advertised that newspapers all over the country take notice of it. Every F. T. D. florist member displays the blue sign with gold trimming, "Say it with Flowers," in the window.

During the executive meeting in Detroit, Mich., last January, all of the members of the board of the S. A. F. doubled their subscriptions for the publicity campaign. It shows the spirit of these men to help the florists to increase their sales and make flowers popular.

Just think, how convenient it is for the public to step into any florist's store and have flowers delivered on short notice in any part of the United States and Canada where there is a florist belonging to this association, and the satisfaction of knowing that the flowers will be properly delivered. Our noble business has become a necessity to the public, for in joy and in sorrow flowers speak a language of their own. We have, according to statistics, 18,000 florists in the United States, and it looks as if 10 to 20 percent should become members of the F. T. D., and I hope to see the day when we will have 30 percent.

Manure Storage.

Manure fermentation is greatly lessened if it is kept compact and moist. When convenient, leave in sheds and allow stock to keep it compact by trampling. In such a case the liquid manure will keep it moist enough. If it must be removed to the lots, pile in ricks with nearly perpendicular sides and flat tops. If the rick can be made in a shallow concrete lined pit much of the loss due to leaching will be prevented. If properly ricked the rains will usually keep the manure moist enough to prevent most of the fermentation, according to the Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia.

Manure carelessly piled, or scattered in open lots, is always subject to excessive leaching, as well as to fermentation. Furthermore, manure in loose piles often "fire-fangs." This condition is caused by molds and may result in a large loss of plant food in a very short time. Moist, well-packed manure does not "fire-fang."

National Publicity for Flowers.

It has been a matter for comment that but few growers have, so far, subscribed to the publicity campaign fund, although they are as much, or even more, interested in an increased sale of their products as wholesaler or retailer. In this connection, the following letter from A. L. Miller, the well-known florist and nurseryman of Jamaica, N. Y., is timely:

"Enclosed please find my check for $100, my subscription to the national publicity campaign. I am greatly pleased to subscribe this amount toward the uplifting of our business. I cannot understand why so many of the growers are lax in helping this cause. In other lines of trade, the manufacturers bear the main cost of the advertising. As in our line, the grower is really the manufacturer, he should likewise be the chief advertiser, and here is a splendid chance for him to help himself. The society did wonderfully well last year, and should have no trouble in exceeding the mark set this year by at least one half."

Mr. Miller's argument is sound, and admits of no contradiction. All growers are vitally interested in our effort to stimulate the movement of flowers. Whenever there are gluts in the flower markets, the growers suffer, and with a greater demand for flowers, there should be no gluts.

We need the utmost support of the growers this year, as it is the object of the publicity committees to raise $100,000. As readers were informed last week, the members of these committees and our executive board are very sanguine as to a successful issue for the campaign this year, and have backed up their personal views with their increased subscriptions. When such a man as Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., thinks that his subscription of $50 per month to the fund is not too much for the returns he reasonably expects, every shadow of doubt as to the wisdom of subscribing should be removed from the mind of the florist who is hesitating to pledge his $10 to $25 per year for the same benefits.

When helping the fund, florists should help themselves also by using the different direct aids supplied by our promotion bureau. The slogan, "Say it with Flowers," cannot be used too much. Have it painted on your delivery wagons and cars, as many of the largest and most prominent florists in our big cities are doing. All shipping tags, wrapping paper, boxes, checks and stationery should carry it. The glass sign, or the transfer signs should be displayed in or on store windows. In our forthcoming magazine advertisements, the direction will be inserted: "Buy your Flowers from the Florists displaying this sign 'Say it with Flowers.'" It is therefore, very important that this sign be obtained at once if it is not already on display. Our promotion bureau is now putting into stock a large quantity of these signs, contracted for some time ago, so that all orders can be filled promptly.

Florists who use lantern slides for projection in moving picture theatres, will be interested in some additions to the set already supplied. Look for a description of them in the March number of "The Journal of the Society of American Florists," or write to the secretary about them.

The campaign work is now being vigorously pushed. The greater the support we get from those it is to benefit, the greater the push. Do not leave this support to the proverbial "George." He has done his part.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the night of March 10, President Kessler in the chair. In addition to other routine business, the following new members were elected: J. W. Niemeyer, Whitestone, N. Y.; G. Schaefer, Maspeth, N. Y.; W. F. Iler, E. A. Hartland, and J. P. Klausner, New York; W. W. Mathews, Great Neck, N. Y.; John Joyce, J. Noe, and J. Schneider, Congers, N. Y.; E. Fardel, Great Neck, N. Y.; C. Futterman, New York; A. M. Dauernheim, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Chairman Schenck of the dinner committee, reported that all arrangements were complete for the club dinner at the Hotel Biltmore, on the night of March 15, and that it promised to be the most successful affair of the kind, in the history of the club.

Appropriate resolutions were read and adopted on the death of W. J. Stewart; also on the death of Mrs. Fenrich, mother of Joseph S. Fenrich.

Charles H. Totty spoke at length on the "Milwaukee plan" of assessing florists. F. R. Pierson, C. H. Vick and G. E. M. Stumpp each made remarks. F. R. Pierson made an address relating to his recent visit to Washington, D. C., and the interview which he and associates had with Secretary of Agriculture Houston, relating to the proposed drastic action of the federal horticultural board, relating to quarantine No. 37, which will mean the exclusion of all nursery stock. Extended mention of this matter appeared in our issue of March 8. C. H. Totty spoke on the same subject.

The address of the evening was delivered by Edwin E. Salt, subject: "What Does It Cost?" "Getting at the Root of the Income and Outgo." He is an expert in industrial accounting and had a thorough knowledge and command of his subject. The large audience was much interested, and at the conclusion he was given a standing vote of thanks. His address covered the various expenditures, investments, etc., of the average business man. P. J. Daut, a young soldier, formerly a florist at Decatur, Ill., who has recently returned from overseas, was introduced and told an interesting story of his experience.

LaCluse & LaCluse Blue Point, N. Y., exhibited a vase of carnations, sport of Enchantress Supreme; vote of thanks. The committee wants to see it again. Milton H. Buckley, Wallingford, Pa., exhibited a vase of cold storage L. giganteum blooms; vote of thanks. J. P. Klausner, New York, exhibited a model of a composite flower box for shipping; vote of thanks.

Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

CARNATION IDEALS AND SHORTCOMINGS.

Florists in every state in the Union have much in common, and any of the craft, either grower or retailer, would have greatly enjoyed the March meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. The literary feature of the evening was a paper on "Carnation Ideals and Success," by Maurice J. Brinton, Christiansburg, Pa. This is a valuable addition to the literature of the trade, scholarly, but practical, in every line of which there is food for thought. We hope to find space for it in an early issue. Charles Theiss also read a paper on "Why Many Retail Florists Do Not Push Carnations." He claimed the flowers, as a rule, were not as fresh as they should be, or not properly graded, and the best and freshest stock was shipped out of town. This caused considerable debate, in which quality and price were frequently quoted. Edward Reid, after an experience of 25 years in shipping carnations, many orders being 24 to 36 hours in transit, had fewer comrade flower, but in the cheaper stock and the way it was handled.

THEODORE WIRTH URGES TREE MEMORIALS.

Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, Minn., who had been in Washington D. C., attending a meeting in reference to the arbitrary rulings of the federal horticultural board, was present, and reported that a conference with the secretary of agriculture had resulted in a movement that it was hoped would raise the embargo on many commercial plants. Dr. Galloway, he added, had done a very good service when he spoke so emphatically at Boston for the embargo. He had roused everybody to action, which had resulted in the interview with the secretary of agriculture and won him over. Mr. Wirth is also very enthusiastic regarding the planting of trees as memorials to commemorate the deeds of the heroes of the late war. These, he thought, would be much better than marble monuments. Horticultural bodies could do much to bring this about. He was sorry to report having found Wm. F. Gude a very sick man. He, who had been so untiring in working for everybody else, will now require several months of complete rest, which it is hoped will restore his health. Flowers, with a message of sympathy and cheer, were at once directed to be sent in the name of the club.

CHAS. GRAKELOW LAUDS F. T. D.

"The A, B, C of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association," explaining its work in detail, was in the hands of Charles H. Grakelow, an interesting feature. He had found in his two years' experience since joining the organization that the foundation of the service was the work or orders that originated in one's own store. In every possible way, customers should have the possibilities of the system, and the fact that flowers could be delivered at once through this agency to any point of the country, made plain to them. The more business you send to the other fellow, the more he will send to you. He believed that advertising in the retail florists' columns of the trade journals was essential, as it showed others that one was alive and anxious for business.

The details in handling the business were described as follows:

On receiving an order, get the distant city very clear in your mind. If the address is within city or town limits, then be particular about the initials and correct spelling of the name. In the Smiths, Browns, and Jones, initials are very important. Also the street number, north, south, east or west, and the accompanying card. If not directly in the city, then find out from the customer the likely extra expense for delivery, and if he desires his $10.00 to cover all this, which will of course not leave so much for flowers. The time of delivery is a necessary detail, if for a funeral to be sent immediately, or on the day of burial, there being different customs in various cities.

Do not take orders that specify certain flowers. They may be plentiful in your shop, but your correspondent 1,000 miles away is short or without them, but has something else just as good, so always, wherever possible, avoid this issue. Learn to write your telegrams as briefly as possible, but also to give all necessary information, and always advise the sending of a name to accompany flowers.

In receiving telegraph orders that in many instances are now telephoned, instead of delivered on a printed blank, they should be called back and verified in every particular. It is very easy to make a mistake in, or drop an initial or street number, which may cause difficult or late delivery. Mr. Grakelow gave several instances in which, through lack of, or mistakes in these details, orders had to be filled the second time, which in addition to the dissatisfaction of the customer, had caused a loss instead of a profit. His large sheaf of telegrams of out-of-town orders received the past year, which he asked any one interested to examine, was an eye-opener to many.

MESSAGE FROM SEC'Y. POCHELON.

During the course of his remarks, he read a letter written by Secretary Albert Pochelon of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, which had been sent to encourage the work at this meeting. The following are a few of the high lights of this very interesting letter:

"We will not stop until we can give a service to enable our customers to 'Say it with flowers' to their relatives, providing they are not in Heaven or in the lower regions, and possibly some Philadelphia members might undertake even this difficult service.

"Our industry is now getting back to normal, and we are feeling the impulse. February broke the record. On February 8, we had 672 members giving service to 432 towns. Today, February 28, we have 68 new names. If we keep this up, we will pass the 1,000 mark by the time of the Buffalo meeting, October next.

"A membership in the Florists' Telegraph Delivery gives a man credit all over the country. If he does not pay promptly, the F. T. D. clearing house soon makes him a better florist. We have cured many of slow pay habits, as we rather cure than down them.

"The 20 per cent discount is now universal. Any attempt to raise or lower it was absolutely wrong. It had been tried through the trade papers, but it did not take long to have the objectionable ads removed.

"If the F. T. D. keeps on growing, as it has the past year, it will have the greatest membership of any florist organization in this country, and be a great help to the Society of American Florists.

He predicted in the near future, an organization of growers uniting for their interests alone. With such a body, and the F. T. D. together, and with the S. A. F. working for the uplift and elevation of the florists' trade, it would soon be placed on a higher plane. We would then become better florists, better men, better merchants, and our co-workers also benefited, and from the employees' standpoint, will not be the poorest paid industry that it has been for years. New blood would then be drawn in, which now on account of the long hours, Sunday work and small pay, does not make the work inviting. He added: "I cannot see why florists should not have their Saturday afternoons off, be through every night at 5 or 6 p. m., the same as other trades, and no one will bring this about unless the florist himself will do it.

"Every F. T. D. member should advertise the organization, and what it can do. Do not wait for the coal dealer or the corner grocer to tell the public there is an out-of-town flower service. Only a short time ago you could not see Florists' Telegraph Delivery on any stationery. Now you hardly see any without it.

EXHIBITS ATTRACT MUCH ATTENTION.

There was a large and varied exhibition of cut flowers. The vases of Hadley and Columbia roses of the Jos. Heacock Co. and the Hadley roses of A. Harvey & Sons, were the best ever seen at this season. Some stems were close to 48 inches. Edward Reid staged Ophelia and Sunburst almost as long.

Strouts', Biddeford, Me., sent their new yellow carnation, Sunshine, White Delight and Improved Pink Ward. They arrived in fine condition and were much admired. Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., sent a vase of its seedling, Democracy, perfect and very large flowers. Jacob Weaver, Lancaster, Pa., also staged a seedling much on the color and form of Gorgeous, a splendid flower.

J. H. Palmer, Kennett Square, Pa., exhibited a vase each of Rosalia, Benora, and C. W. Ward, very high grade stock. Laddie, from W. & H. F. Evans and Wm. Kleinheinz were two vases of superb flowers. A medium pink seedling from Chas. Leisy, Mantua, N. J., looked promising.

Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., sent Rainbow freesias, General Pershing and Viola. These were beautiful flowers that had carried well.

The sweet peas of Scarlet Bros., Kennett Square, in the popular varieties, were exceptionally fine. Nothing better has ever been exhibited here.

J. H. Thomson exhibited through Edward Reid, a vase of superb Matchless carnations and very choice Christmas Pink orchid sweet peas; also, a vase of fine Matchless from Lawrence Thompson. The Bickford Greenhouses, Wallingford, staged five vases of high grade commercial carnations, a vase of Iris Tingitana and giganteum lilies, all showing high culture.

Strafford Flower Farms, Strafford, Pa., exhibited a vase of fine Laddie carnations, Iris Tingitana and well grown lupines.

The feature of the display was the collection of new orchid, early-flowering sweet peas, staged by the W. Atlee Burpee Co. There were 44 varieties of exquisite colorings, all splendidly arranged by George W. Kerr. The many growers present were particularly interested in making selections for next season's planting.

DINING CLUB SCORES A HIT.

The dining club's first dinner assumed the proportions of a banquet, as 96 were seated at the round tables. There was no speaking, the meeting being called to order on the other side of the garden immediately after the dinner.

There is no question but that such gatherings are of great benefit to the trade. The attendance numbered over 225, many being visitors from out of town.

Florists' Club of Washington, D. C.

The programme of the March meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., was one of the most interesting yet provided for its members. An election of officers preceded a lecture on "How to Make Out Your Tax Blank," and added to the usual routine business was a report by the secretary of the club on the conference of March 1 with the Secretary of Agriculture. A number of the members spoke on this subject and President Blackstone stated that it was his hope that favorable action would be taken.

Messrs. Stalman and VonBottger were appointed tellers of the election. After all votes had been cast, they announced that the following had been chosen for the positions named: Z. D. Blackstone, president, (re-elected); George E. Anderson, vice president; William F. Gude, treasurer, (re-elected); E. P. Rodman, secretary. Directors: George Field and Captain William H. Ernest, (re-elected).

It was decided to hold an annual banquet incident to the April meeting of the club. At this time, the above-named new officers will be inducted into office. George C. Shaffer was appointed chairman, and George E. Anderson and Edward S. Schmid members of a committee to make the necessary arrangements for this event. It is planned to have this a victory banquet. For many years it was the custom of the club to give a banquet annually, at which time the officers were installed.

SALES SHOW INCREASE DESPITE LENT.

There has been an increase in business during the past week, despite the fact that the Lenten season is now here. Cut flowers are not very plentiful as yet and roses are still scarce with carnations not very abundant. Bulbous stock is keeping up with the demand, but there is no surplus. Violets are unusually good. Orchid sweet peas are of excellent quality but the call for them is not heavy. Everything points to an abundance of flowers for Easter, with the exception of lilies.

NOTES.

H. E. Wilson had the decoration for one of the large retail stores of this city, the arrangement being elaborate and tasteful. Albert Young, of this establishment, has been ill for several days.

Fred Mossgraber has replanted his range with carnations and will resume his greenhouse trade. He has been employed in a munitions plant during the winter.

Irondequoit growers have commenced to restock their ranges for the spring and summer trade.

H. P. Neun had orders for decorations for the Sibley, Lindsay & Curr stores. CHESTER.

Omaha.

AUTO SHOW BRINGS BRISK DEMAND.

The automobile show brought a rush of business to the florists this week, when the biggest automobile display ever held here was put on at the municipal auditorium. Great quantities of ferns and palms were purchased or rented for the week to decorate the auditorium itself. Then there was a good general demand for cut flowers and palms up and down Farnam street, where all the automobile concerns had arranged special decorations for the display on their sample floors, for all expected many visitors. It was here that the florists did a big business during the week. In general, trade is keeping up strong, though the sick rooms and funerals are not drawing as heavily as they did some weeks ago when influenza was still raging in this section. Some of the florists closed part of their greenhouses during the winter and therefore did not get all varieties started early in the season in as great quantity as they ordinarily did. They expect the supply to come faster now, however, since an abundance of sunshine has greatly stimulated growth.

MARKET CLEANS UP FAIRLY WELL.

Business continues to hold up well. Everything that comes into the market sells quickly and realizes good prices. The supply, as a whole, is fair but hardly equal to the demand for stock. Shipping business is very good. The roses that arrive find a ready sale and the same is true of carnations. Sweet peas are fairly plentiful. They are excellent and sell readily. Easter lilies, callas, and rubrums meet with an excellent demand. Bulbous offerings include jonquils, daffodils, tulips and freesias. Other receipts are snapdragons, calendulas, orchids, baby primroses, wallflowers and forget-me-nots.

NOTES.

Burglars entered the store of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange sometime last Sunday night. Their only loot consisted a few dollars in cash.

Geo. Hampton, representing the Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, Pa., called on his trade in this city recently.

E. G. Gillett and wife went to Springfield, O., last week to attend the funeral of a relative who had passed away.

P. J. Olinger has been ill for several days, but now is on the road to recovery.

Arthur Becker was confined to his home for several days last week by illness. H.

FEBRUARY TRADE SHOWS GOOD INCREASE.

Business has been running true to form and the February sales will probably show an increase of about 60 per cent over former corresponding periods and March seems to lack the usual dullness customary to that period. There has been a gratifying demand for flowering plants and such stock has brought very good prices, astilbes, cinerarias, cyclamens, primulas and bulbous stock meeting many friends during the past two weeks. The prospects for Easter plants are not flattering and much stock will doubtless be shipped in from the outside. Easter lilies have ceased to be a source of worry. The florist says: "I do not know, as yet," but adds, "We will be lucky if we have any at all."

This city is still on the traveling men's map, among the visitors of the week being Thomas D. Long, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; Robert Soch, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and representatives of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; the Lindley Box Co. and S. A. Weller & Co. C.

Boston.

LENIENT DULLNESS IS NOTICEABLE.

With the arrival of the Lenten season, business has taken on a quiet tone, and a number of dull days are anticipated. The market is not crowded with stock and prices are dropping to normal. American Beauty, however, is a scarce item and commands high figures. There is also a good call for English daisies and primroses, ranunculus and anemones. Among the excellent stocks coming from the growers in this vicinity are Tausendscon roses, Climbing American Beauty, acacias, several varieties of heather and amaryllis in pots, French hydrangeas and genistas.

NOTE.

William Sim is planning to devote one house to violets and the balance of his range to carnations for another year.

OBITUARY.

Frank A. Friedley.

Frank A. Friedley, of The Friedley Co., Cleveland, O., state vice-president of the Society of American Florists for Ohio, north, in which office he was serving his second term, one of the younger generation well known to the trade throughout the entire country, passed away at his home, March 10, death resulting from a combination of tonsillitis and bronchitis. He was a native of New Albany, Ind., born in that city, November 15, 1881.

As a pupil of E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., at whose establishment he started his career in 1897, remaining there for five years, Frank Friedley from the start showed marked ability and promise, and his death in the prime of life at the threshold of a future bright with assured success, will cause deep sorrow in the hearts of a host of friends attached to him by his agreeable personality, also to the trade in general, in whose activities he had ever taken a keen interest. In addition to his able efforts in the interests of the national society, his loss will leave a place hard to fill in the ranks of the Cleveland Florists' Club, of which organization he was secretary for a number of years, and to his untiring effort much credit in establishing that body's undisputed position as a leader among the florist clubs of the United States, is due.

Following his connection with E. G. Hill, Mr. Friedley was employed by the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O.; Frank Huntsman and the Wm. Murphy Co., Cincinnati, O.; The Chicago Carnation Co., under James Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill., and at the establishment of Miss Belle Miller, Springfield, Ill., resigning the position as foreman at the last named place to become superintendent of the extensive range of the J. M. Gasser Co., at Rocky River, O., later taking over the greenhouses formerly conducted by James Eadie, which business through his long and varied experience and executive ability was highly successful from its inception. Whatever he grew, both plants and cut stock, showed splendid culture, and his capability as an executive, surmounted the many difficulties that have been the lot of the trade during the trying times of wartime restrictions and shortages.

Mr. Friedley was married in 1909 to Miss Drehs. He was a member of the Masonic, Elks' and Moose lodges and was a companionable and generous man whose friendship was much valued.

Mrs. John M. Thielmann.

Mrs. John M. Thielmann, wife of a retired Brooklyn florist, died March 8, of pneumonia, following influenza. Her death, and that of a daughter-in-law, occurred within the space of 24 hours, of the same disease. The son, husband of the younger woman who is a lawyer, is said to be seriously ill. The Thielmanns are among the oldest florist families in Brooklyn, John M. having, before his retirement, been in business on Broadway, Brooklyn, for 30 years or more, and we believe that his parents had also been engaged in the business. Another brother, now deceased, had for years, a store on Graham avenue, which is still conducted by members of the family.

A. F. F.

TEXARKANA, ARK.—Following a dispute over payment of 60 cents charges on an express shipment of flowers said to be in a damaged condition, an express driver shot and killed Peter W. Mackley, owner of the Majestic Floral Co., and shot his wife three times.

Personal.

President Ammann, of the Society of American Florists, Edwardsville, Ill., expects to leave for New York next week.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The following appointments have been made by the president, Mrs. J. A. Peterson:

Members of board of directors for a term of two years—Mrs. J. P. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; Mrs. J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb., and Mrs. Charles H. Totty, Madison N. J.

Members of the introduction committee at the 1919 convention—Mrs. Fred Breitmeyer, chairman; Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer; Mrs. E. A. Scribner and Mrs. Robert Jean.

MRS. H. G. BERNING, Sec'y.

Society of American Florists.

PRESIDENT AMMANN URGES BOOSTER PLAN.

President J. F. Ammann has sent the following letter to all state vice-presidents of the society, under date of February 20, 1919:

"It is my sincere opinion that the board of directors, at the recent meeting in Detroit, launched a movement that will give our state vice-presidents an opportunity, such as they never had before, to be of real service in boosting the Society of American Florists. The plan is as follows:

"First: To have a state florists' association organized in every state in the Union.

"Second: To secure enough members in both the state association and the Society of American Florists to make the state president eligible to serve as a director on the national board.

"Third: The work of perfecting such state organization is up to the state vice-president, and he is also to assist a committee consisting of Joseph Hill, Richmond, Ind., chairman; Chas. E. Critchell and C. C. Pollworth, in making an estimate of the number of members required for the state, based upon the number of floral establishments in the state, to make the state president eligible to serve on the national board. This committee is to report to the convention in August.

"I sincerely hope you will see the great value of this organization plan, both for your state and for the national body, and will heartily cooperate with the above committee."

Plant Production.

In the history of the trade there has never been such a demand for all kinds of greenhouse stock, both for forcing for cut flowers and bedding plants for the coming spring, as at the present time. Nearly all the smaller growers who closed their entire ranges are getting ready to resume, while those who shut down a portion of their houses are now running, or will soon have all filled to capacity.

Orders for geranium cuttings have fairly swamped all dealers in this class of stock, who are months behind in delivery. It is much the same all along the bedding plant line; anything saleable in rooted cuttings or two-inch pot plants is sold as soon as offered. Orders are being booked for rooted carnation cuttings in very large quantities. The popular varieties will surely bring high prices, as there will not be enough to supply the demand.

Seed-Catalogue Chorus.

The gardening merchants, aided by their color-printing friends, have beaten both frogs and bluebirds to it in chanting the first hymns of our spring. Gaudier than promoters' promises, more alluring than a movie vampire, their roscate catalogues now compete with the valentines in heart interest and set suburbanites longing for the abolition of the month of March. This business activity relies on a deep-seated instinct that stirs even in the souls of those confined to paved courts and "move-on" regions of our cities. We have no doubt that when the glacial ice-cap had receded ever so little Madame Cave Dweller hustled out with a few choice bulbs and shrubs (long cherished in the innermost caverns of the Dordogne) and set her husband to making ready the warmer patches of soil that then became available. So it was that our civilization began. So our hardy ancestors drove their hardy garden-making north in the blue hall bedrooms and penned within the shadow of the ice and implanted a racial habit that asserts itself today in the window-boxes of tenants as well as in the janitor's more pretentious horticulture. This is the time of the vision and the plan—there aren't many plant pests out before St. Patrick's day—and your 1917 summer's crop is just as big and bright now as anything the seed catalogues can show. What are you going to do with that patch of garden earth in the next few weeks, and what will you have planted in it by the time baseball starts up?—Collier's Weekly.

Embargo Dangers.

Whatever the excuse in the particular case of exports of fats may be, there is a heap of truth and sound common sense in the remark by B. E. Reuter of the fats and oils division of the food administration. "Once a country gets into the habit of placing embargoes," said he, "it is getting away from the country's good." It is refreshing to hear such straight talk from an official of the administration. Obviously, embargoes are sometimes needed as a war measure. But let us not get the habit of using the weapon as a club to direct and control trade in ordinary times, when the current of outgo and of imports should be left to natural laws. Only an emergency can ever justify an embargo.—New York Sun.

Advertising and Subscription Rates.

On and after March 15, 1919, the advertising rate in THE AMERICAN FLORIST will be $1.50 per single column inch, each insertion, with the usual 30 per cent discount on run-of-the-paper advertisements inserted continuously through the year. Prices for preferred location on application.

Ready reference or classified advertising 12 cents net per line, each insertion.

Domestic subscriptions $1.50 per year. AMERICAN FLORIST Co.

RITO

THE ENERGIZER FOR SOIL BACTERIA

IS COMING TO AMERICA.

WONDERFUL RESULTS have been obtained by the use of RITO in Great Britain during the last three years. Owing to the war it has been impossible to export, but now we are free to do so, and feel sure that the Horticulturists of the U. S. A. will at once avail themselves of this unique method of increasing their products and of getting their stuff ready for the market some weeks earlier than they have hitherto done, and so secure a much higher price.

WHAT IS RITO? — RITO is a humus, organic or natural fertilizer, a stimulant and energizing medium for soil bacteria.

WHAT IS HUMUS? — Humus is a complex substance or mixture of substances present in the richest of soils. It is black in colour, and hence renders the soil darker. RITO contains Humus in the right form for fertilizing the soil.

WHY ADD HUMUS? — Because most soils contain very little (if any) Humus, and it is necessary for the proper development of the useful soil bacteria. The bacteria find in the Humus constituents a suitable medium for their robust propagation.

That is, Humus is a source of food and energy for the soil bacteria.

WHAT IS THE ANALYSIS OF RITO? — It has very little chemical analysis and it does not come in the same category as fertilizers. It is essentially an energizing medium for soil bacteria. Phosphates and potash are present in all soils, but in the ordinary way they are not readily available. RITO, by energizing the soil bacteria, is calculated to make the phosphates and potash available for the plant. It also stimulates the nitrogen-fixing bacteria into action, so that the consequent development is out of all proportion to its analysis.

RITO takes the place of farmyard manure, or it may be used in conjunction with farmyard manure or any recognized artificials. RITO is free from weed seeds, spores and germs, and from the eggs or larvae of noxious insects.

It is well known that the soil is not a dead inert mass of matter, but that it teems with bacteria, which only need to be treated properly to be called into activity. There are millions in every spadeful of soil.

RITO may be used in the open or under glass.

What RITO Users Say:--

"I used RITO in the soil for my Tomatoes this year. The result was the best crop I ever had, and I started picking two to three weeks earlier than usual from seed sown same date as previous years."

A market gardener says that his RITO-treated lettuce were ready for the market a month before the untreated ones, with the result that the treated ones brought 2s. 6d. per dozen and the untreated ones, when they were ready for the market, brought 1s. per dozen.

"I tried RITO last year on Potatoes, and they yielded 30 per cent better than those not treated."

"Every ounce of fruit from both the treated and the untreated Tomatoes has been gathered and carefully weighed. The weight of fruit gathered from the treated portions averaged just five times the amount as from the untreated portion."

"I have used RITO in the Peach Houses, and find that it greatly improved both the quality of the fruit and also the growth. I also find RITO very good if used when mixing soil for potting various plants, and I have also used it on my Vines with excellent results."

"I have pleasure in testifying to the merits of RITO. It is 'Right Ho' and no mistake. I never saw Tomatoes do so well as when your RITO was applied as a top-dressing mixed with the soil; the roots of the plants made in this way were extraordinary, and the crops correspondingly good. The same applies to Cucumbers, also Chrysanthemums and to plants generally. It seems to consume the moisture, hence less watering is required."

"RITO treated Chrysanthemums made a much quicker and better start than they have usually done—in fact, the plants show a great improvement."

RITO is packed in double bags, and the price is 17/6 per 100 lbs., free on board Liverpool. Terms—Cash with order.

Please address your orders at once to The Molassine Company, Ltd., East Greenwich, London, England.

EXCELLENT BUSINESS CONTINUES.

Business continues excellent, with a slight increase in the supply of flowers and plants as a result of the warm weather, and bright sunshine. Everything cleans up well each day, no surplus existing in any line. Carnations are just about equal to the demand, and prices remain firm. Roses are somewhat more plentiful, especially in Russell, and Killarneys. There has been a good supply of sweet peas the past week, which helps considerably in the shortage of other small flowers. There is a moderate supply of Easter lilies and rubrums, which find a ready market. Callas are more plentiful, but are only equal to the call for them.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. had the decorations for the entire building of the Wolf & Dessauer store for their opening, March 10. Hundreds of plants, both foliage and blooming, were used, as well as many baskets and tall wicker vases of lilacs, lilies, Russell and Columbia roses, which were the main flowers used, besides spring blooms in hampers and small baskets.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. are featuring some very attractive cinerarias in their window. They report a very heavy demand, with funeral work in the lead, on account of the many casualties resulting from the influenza epidemic, which is again raging here, and claiming more victims than during the first outbreak last fall.

The Freese Floral Co. reports the first week in Lent the busiest one this season, with the store force working over-time to keep up with the orders. This firm had many orders for the large department store opening, including corsages for the different sales-people of the organization.

GOOD STOCK MOVES FREELY.

Business has been good all week, winding up Saturday with a final spurt that cleaned the market of nearly everything salable, but there was an accumulation of odds and ends of the poorer grades of stock that went to the street merchants, who were rather busy on that day. There is now available in sufficient supply nearly everything needed by the retailer to make his stock complete. Roses in all colors and lengths are quite plentiful with prices nearly normal. Carnations, too, are selling at a slightly lower level, but good flowers still bring $6 per 100. Violets are moving slowly. Sweet peas are cleaning up and in good demand.

Some very good freesias are on the market, also some excellent calendulas. Bulbous stock has dropped in price somewhat, due to the general increase in supply of other offerings, but the demand for them continues good. Excellent cut hyacinths and tulips are shown. Governor Herrick, single violets meet with a good sale. Greens of all kinds are in better supply.

NOTES.

Arlington Ely, one of the sons of Mrs. Ely, who lives in Nottingham, O., and grows stock for the wholesale houses of this city, was shot while walking with his fiancée, March 5. Mr. Ely was recently discharged from the United States aviation service, and is now hovering between life and death at St. Luke's hospital, where his mother and two nurses are constantly in attendance. His assailant escaped.

Peter Salago, owner and manager of the Sixth City Wire Works, located on High avenue, died of the influenza March 6. This is the second time he had been down with it.

W. H. Temblett, nurseryman and florist, is opening a retail store on Euclid avenue, near East 105th street. He also has a stand in the Euclid-East 105th street market.

STOCK IS IN LARGE SUPPLY.

Stock is more plentiful this week than it has been for many months, which gives the retailer an opportunity to stock up more heavily and make his old time store displays. American Beauty roses are in fair supply, but are moving nicely. Roses in general are in good quantity, among which are noticed some choice Killarney, White Killarney and Mrs. Chas. Russell, in addition, of course, to fancy stock in the other leading varieties. Carnations are in good demand considering the general market conditions, but prices in some instances have dropped considerably on this item. Lilies are quite plentiful, but appear to be holding their own, which is true of callas. Sweet peas are good property, and were scarce in the wholesale market, March 8. Violets sold well the latter part of last week, but there were more than enough to go around. Snapdragons are having a good call and clean up nicely. White and yellow daisies, Paper White narcissi, pussy willows, sweet alyssum, calendulas, freesias, pansies, mignonette, forget-me-nots, tulips, jonquils and other miscellaneous stock is to be had. Orchids are in good supply, and the receipts of lily of the valley seem to be large enough to take care of the demand. Taking everything into consideration, business has been fair so far during Lent, and while stock is in larger supply at present, the majority of the wholesalers are looking forward to an improvement in trade.

NOTES.

A meeting of the growers shipping to the local wholesale cut flower market was held at the Briggs House, January 10, at 2:30, which was called by David E. Johnson, counselor, 1438 Marquette building. Those present were in favor of forming a permanent organization so a committee was selected consisting of Walter Amling, chairman; Otto Amling, Peter Pearson, George Ball and Joseph Kohout to draw up the constitution, etc., and report at an adjourned meeting to be held within a week or 10 days. - The committee met at Mr.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, and Roy Wilcox, of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., at Sierra Madre, Calif., Where Bassett & Washburn's Palm Ranches are Located.

Johnson's office Thursday afternoon, March 13, at 3 p. m.

P. W. Peterson, manager of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, was a visitor March 10. He is a firm believer in advertising, and will increase his billboard space quite extensively in the near future, many choice locations being available, owing to the failure of the liquor houses to renew their contracts. Mr. Peterson's firm recently invested $100 in the national publicity campaign for 1919.

Miss Florence Keenan has the distinction of being the first lady to apply for a membership in the florists' club. There are quite a number of young ladies employed in the retail and wholesale trade here, and it is surprising that some of them have not tried to start a ladies' florist club.

Some members of the Florists' Club are talking of organizing a baseball team and entering one of the commercial leagues this spring. Those who would like to be given a tryout should notify Allie J. Zech, president, or the secretary, A. T. Pyfer.

T. E. Waters, of Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department, says the activities of the Great Harvester throughout the land has increased the sale of wheat sheaves many fold.

Miss Irene Anderson, formerly with the Wells' Flower shop, is the latest addition to the force of Mike Poletsos, 35 East Adams street.

William Welch is back on the job with Ronsley, after being confined to his home for several weeks with the influenza.

Sam Seligman has notified his customers here that he is now with the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

It is rumored that a new wholesale house will be opened here in the near future.

Fred Dubois is with H. C. Rowe, in the Mallers building.

BUSINESS FAIR FOR LENT.

The past week's business held up fairly well considering the Lenten season, with a slight decrease of social functions. Funeral work has been fairly heavy. The supply has been good. Bulbous stock has crowded the market a trifle, but not sufficiently to become a glut. Sweet peas are coming in fairly heavy but have an excellent sale. Carnations are just about equal to the demand and command good prices. Roses are in fair supply, with Ophelia leading in quantity and quality. Violets are plentiful and do not sell any too well. Callas are coming in heavy, but are disposed of readily. Lily of the valley and Harrisii continue scarce. Novelties, such as stocks, calendulas and forget-me-nots have a good call. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

The recent masquerade dance given by the local florists was a huge success, in point of attendance and having a good time. Many interesting features were on the programme, such as special vaudeville acts, refreshments, etc. The prizes offered were won by Ed. Niebling of the Bergstermann Floral Co., Miss Mabel Allen and Mrs. Hagerman.

The local joint publicity committee held its final session of the current year and retired from the working committee. The new members will be selected by the various organizations and held their initial meeting the third Tuesday of this month. The personnel will represent the growers, wholesalers, retailers and the florists' club.

DEMAND AND PRICES HOLD UP WELL.

Trade in this city has been very satisfactory ever since the holidays and prices have maintained a level which made it possible for the florists to live and meet the increased cost of labor. On the other hand there were no complaints from customers. Social activities have not been as numerous as in other years, but other things have helped out the general situation. The call for flowers on all of the holiday occasions was far greater than in other years, and following the short Lenten rest, Easter should be the best in many years. Lilies will not be in abundance and the same may be said of azaleas, but nevertheless the trade in this city will be well prepared with a supply of excellent plants that will doubtless prove good property. As to the supply of cut flowers there is no doubt. The retail stores are now very attractive with their window displays. S. A. Anderson in addition to his usual showing of flowers, has a model of an aeroplane, with propellers and other mechanism working.

Friends of Joseph Streit and wife were pleasantly surprised by the announcement of the marriage of their daughter, Susan B. to Mr. Edward F. Leuchtman. Congratulations are extended to the happy couple.

CLUB ARRANGES FOR FLOWER SHOW.

At the March meeting of the florists' club, Fred A. Danker, chairman of the special committees, reported that at the meeting on the night of April 3, the members will have a flower show for which exhibits of interest to the retailers are invited. Mr. Danker said he hoped to have on exhibition specimens of the new rose, Premier, and perhaps some new carnations from out-of-town growers. On that night, the wives and women friends of the members will be welcome. The entertainment committee, Louis H. Schaefer, chairman, will provide refreshments. In the matter of cost production data, for which information is sought from the growers and florists of the country, by Charles H. Totty, a former president, and John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, the club decided that the subject is a good one, but that at the present time the members have no data they can furnish. It was decided to write Secretary Young that the members are interested and expect to do something later in the season. The club voted to give the sum of $10 from the treasury to the playground fund of the Albany Mothers' Club for the season of 1919. Fred A. Danker told of the visit to Ithaca in February during the meeting of the State Federation, at Cornell University. Mr. Danker was accompanied by Fred Henkes and Joseph Traudt, two other members. One of the most impressive things at the meeting, was the address by Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., on rose gardens. The address was illustrated with many beautiful slides. Mr. Danker asked Mr. Pyle if he could come to Albany to deliver the lecture in the state education building with a view to stimulating the growing of roses by amateurs in the city. Mr. Pyle said he would be glad to consider the matter, but he added that he has engagements for his lecture booked almost for a year ahead. On the return from Ithaca, the delegates from the local club visited growers' establishments at Elmira and Binghamton and also at Syracuse.

RECEIPTS LARGEST OF THE SEASON

Business during the past week has been very good, with the largest cut flower receipts of the season. Roses are more plentiful and of good quality with prices lower, $4 to $20 per 100 being asked for most varieties. American Beauties are still poor, with nothing but the shorter grades coming in. Carnations clean up every day at from $4 to $6 per 100. Sweet peas seem to be trying to crowd everything else from the market, consequently there has been a drop in prices, the best grades bringing $10 and $15 per 1,000. Easter lilies and callas are sold before they arrive at $20 and $25 per 100. Some very fine Iris Tingitana is coming in and sells for 20 and 25 cents per bloom. Jonquils, tulips, snapdragons, mignonette and calendulas are received in limited quantity and clean up readily at fair prices.

NOTES.

The force at Randolph & McClements has been kept on the jump the past week with funeral work, and several large decorations. To make it worse some of the help have been on the sick list.

James Higgins, local representative of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, and E. J. McCallum, of the McCallum Co., are visiting in Chicago at the present writing.

Jos. Thomas and Wm. Loew have returned after spending a month visiting Florida points of interest. They report a very delightful trip.

Ed Blind, of this city and Geo. Wessenauber, of Sewickley, motored to Philadelphia, visiting all points of interest along the route.

Milwaukee Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the florists' club was held March 6 with most of the regulars on hand. Otto Spidel, city forester, who consented to give an illustrated lecture on trees was unable to attend. The resignation of Walter Hummel, who is out of the florist's business entirely, was accepted, while the names of Henry Weil and Oscar Sherer were proposed as new members. It was decided to hold the annual exhibition of cut flowers and plants at the April 6 meeting. These affairs are always very instructive and help to increase the attendance of members and visitors. H. V. Hunkel, chairman of the state fair committee intends, for the sake of variety, to get the fair board to arrange the horticultural exhibits in such a way as to permit staging of five or more table decorations at this year's fair; while our committee, through untiring efforts, made a very creditable showing the past year by adding new features in the line of decorations, the present plan will undoubtedly serve as a good drawing card. A lengthy discussion on the cost of production of any certain crop of cut flowers took up a good part of the time with unsatisfactory results; in fact, it was decided to continue this topic at the next regular meeting, thus giving the members a little more time to gain further information. The subject of plants for the spring trade was also taken up. Due to the increased cost of production, it is only natural that prices will have to be advanced over former seasons in order that the grower will get his. From present reports, certain varieties are already on the short side and may remain thus for this season. Should the demand slacken, due to higher prices asked for beautifying the home grounds, we believe that the extra call for the many victims of the influenza epidemic during last fall and winter will more than offset the former, so the motto should be, "grow just as much or more," and if the quality is there, the increase in price will not lessen the demand.

DEMAND SUFFERS AS LENT ARRIVES.

Last week found the local market undergoing a terrific slump, both as to prices and demand. The beginning of Lent killed the call for cut flowers. This of itself would have the effect of keeping the market well supplied, but with the opening of the dull season came fair, warm weather. This brought flowers into the market literally by the wagonload. There is really too much of everything. With social activity at a standstill, the growers and wholesalers must depend upon the street men and retailers to the extent of their funeral business. The price on all flowers has dropped. Carnations can be had at $6 and less, and roses which formerly averaged $12 per hundred can now be had for $8 or less. It is decidedly a buyer's market and few reasonable offers are turned down. Violets have been selling for $5 per thousand and even less in quantity after the first day or two of their presence in the market. Pansies were moved at $1 per hundred. Generally speaking, spring flowers have been holding their own because of the very small supply this year.

NOTES.

W. E. McKissick, of the Baltimore branch of the Leo Niessen Company, "chaperoned" a number of florists from the Monument City on a trip to the capital in his automobile. They visited a number of local greenhouses.

Many of the boys formerly employed by local florists, who went into the army, navy and marine corps, are returning home following the demobilization of their various commands.

Robert Baggott, son of one of the employees of the botanic gardens, who was with one of the units in France, has returned to the United States and has been discharged from the service.

George Gouldman is back with the Louise Flower Shop. He left that store to join the "Devil Dogs," and has since been stationed at the marine camp at Quantico, Va.

Miss Louise Daugherty, of the Louise Flower Shop, has been seriously ill with the flu. B. F. L.

Chicago Bowling.

Fred Price of the Centrals, which is the name the florists are using this season in the North Chicago League, bowled a wonderful game Thursday, February 28, when he set a new high game mark and new high individual average. His average for his three games was 238 1-3 and his high score was in the third game when he mowed down the maples to the tune of 288. The team score:

INCREASED SUPPLY IN ALL LINES.

The market has had its really first full load to carry in the production of the past week. Prices have declined from 10 to 15 per cent. In every line, there was increased production, with sweet peas far in advance in quantity shipments. The quality of these latter in all grades was so good, however, that they formed a large item of every dealer's purchases and were cleaned up daily at prices about one-third less than a week ago. Killarney roses are coming strong, and for the first time this season, shorts have sold as low as $2 per 100. Medium grades of all varieties are in demand, particularly Russell. A cross between White Killarney and Russell might produce an everbloomer of good color and medium length stems that would help out wonderfully during the midwinter scarcity. Richmond, Ind., papers please copy. High grade American Beauties are scarce, but there appears to be a good many shorts, with more or less imperfect buds, which are well handled by a few of the street men. Larkspur, which has been in for about three weeks, brought 50 cents per spray. The grower who had the vision to put this in, and the ability to grow it, has something besides wishes for his bank account. It is now becoming more plentiful, but still brings good money. Growers had better take another look over the garden borders. First they found snapdragons, then lupines, now larkspur, and the end is not yet. Very good snapdragon is now offered in its various shades of white, pink, yellow and orange. There is no better stock. The beautiful Iris Tingitana is not meeting with its first "sell on sight demand." It appears to take little of a choice flower to over stock the market. Lilac is in good supply and demand, and very fine stock is now seen. Cattleyas are a trifle scarcer. Violets are draggy. Calendulas, daisies, mignonette and all small flowers are plentiful, but seem to find a market. Carnations are not increasing in quantity, but have fallen in price in sympathy with the market and to hold their place with the sweet peas. All kinds of green appear to keep just a little below the demand. As one of the wholesalers put it, the past week has been a buyer's market, and he was glad to say some of the live ones had taken a chance on buying considerable stock at the low prices and made good. If the stock is carried, it can be sold. This was exemplified by one of the large wholesale houses, who filled a hurryup order for 1,000 long pussy willow sprays, which hardly made a dent in its reserve stock.

March 10.—Early morning shipments were generous, there being a good supply of all stocks, with heavy cuts of Killarney roses, white and pink. There was, however, brisk buying, showing the stores to have had good week sales. Prices were about the same as the closing of last week.

NOTES.

They are still talking about last week's club meeting—the dinner, the beautiful display of cut flowers, the large attendance, the interesting literary features, and last, but not least, the list of 27 applicants knocking at the door for admission. It was clearly a step forward. Our telegraphic re-many retailers do not push carnations. The April meeting will be just as interesting, the feature being "Dollars and Cents, and How to Get and Make the Most of These Great Sinews of Business." Dr. Moxey, Jr., head of the accounting department of the Wharton school of Finance, the University of Pennsylvania, will be the essayist. The committee is to be congratulated in having secured such an able speaker. There will also be an exhibition of their best Easter novelties by the noted plant growers of this city.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has been apportioned 10 acres in Fairmount park, which is to be turned into a botanical and ornamental garden. This section is to be under their absolute control, and will become, as fast as it can be intelligently planned and planted, one of the beauty spots, not only of the park, but of the country. President Boyd is an enthusiastic lover of outdoor gardening. His private collection of peonies and irises is one of the finest in the country. He is intensely interested in the work of the society which is making great strides under his direction.

Edward Reid is proud of the many letters and telegrams received from his old customers and friends in the trade, congratulating him on the successful rounding of his twenty-fifty anniversary as a wholesale florist. His record of steady growth is due to his untiring efforts to get, and give, the best results to grower and dealer alike. He has silver in his pocket, and silver in his hair, but is still going strong Good luck to him.

A dealer, who attended the recent carnation meeting of the florists' club, and heard the complaints of the mixed grades in the bunches, was emphatic in his denunciation of the practice. He said: "They do not make a cent by it, and all the complaints come to us. Growers should grade their stock honestly; two or three short or weak stemmed flowers, or splits, take half the value from an otherwise good bunch."

Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks, Minneapolis, Minn., was an interesting visitor the past week, his mission to this city being to purchase ornamental shade trees to be planted in that city as memorials to the war heroes of that community. He said that in no other section of the country could such well grown or finished trees be purchased as were offered in the nurseries of this neighborhood.

his houses after marketing his crop of chrysanthemums, has fired up again, and will be ready with all kinds of bedding plants, such as phlox, petunias, lobelias, alyssum, marigolds, salvias, and the like that are grown from seed, when planting out time arrives.

The S. S. Pennock Co. has put another car on the street. This is an Overland, on the side panels of which is prominently displayed the slogan: "Say it with Flowers." Let every florist follow suit. This phrase should be bill boarded in every community at the expense of the local craft. It would bring big returns.

A new competition has presented itself in shipments of cut callas from Florida, very good flowers, but a trifle coarse. They had carried well, and were in quite salable condition, another handicap for the local grower.

The first Premier rose shipment has been received by the Joseph Heacock Co. No rose ever introduced has created as much interest in the trade, or had such a large sale as this last offering of the E. G. Hill Co.

David Rust spent several days at State College, Pa., the last week in February, where he delivered several lectures on floriculture and kindred subjects. K.

STEAMBOAT STRIKE CURTAILS SUPPLY.

What the weather sharps call "increasing cloudiness" is a pretty good figure of speech to illustrate the condition of the wholesale market during the past week. The beginning of Lent makes quite a difference in this market, and this year it is remaining true to form. As "striking" seems to be both an indoor and outdoor sport in this city and vicinity, it was but natural for the harbor and river steamboat men to have their turn. At one stage of the strike, only one railroad ferry was running from the Jersey shore. As by far the largest supply of roses reaching this market comes from New Jersey, the strike caused considerable inconvenience. On several days, stock which under normal conditions, should have reached the market by 9 a. m., did not arrive until 2:30 p. m., which was like offering a man his dinner after he had got too hungry to eat. By March 7, the railroad ferry strikers had concluded to return to work, which, so far as the florists were concerned, terminated the unpleasantness. It was emphatically a dull week, but not so bad under the conditions, as it would have been had the demand been heavier. There was a considerable drop in rose prices, though they cannot yet be said to be very cheap as compared with mid-winter figures. Carnations, too, were cheaper than during the previous week, with a downward tendency all along the line. The weather has been generally moderate and fair, which is increasing the supply, but a light demand is the main factor in the dullness. A few American Beauty roses, specials, wholesaled for $1 each, but more went cheaper. However, there is no ground for complaint, as prices have held up well. As above stated, nothing is yet very cheap, and it may be hoped that the situation will not grow worse, though it is undeniable that the tendency of the market is downward. There is considerable activity in apple, peach and other flowering shrubbery or tree stock, and the retailers make good use of it for window decoration. The pussy willow market has this winter shown an activity that almost amounts to a business by itself. A dozen years ago, a little Frenchman used to come in periodically, with a bundle of short "pussies" on his back; now "they all do it"—but do not carry them that way, for it is not unusual to see great bundles five and six feet in length.

March 10.—There is a fair amount of buying, but nothing above the ordinary. Nearly all varieties of tea roses are decidedly cheaper, and special stock drags. The tastes of the buyers seem to be inclined more to spring flowers than to roses though as a matter of course, retailers must keep up their rose stock. With the possible exception of gardenias, there is an abundance of all stocks to supply the demand. The first arbutus of the season reached the Cut Flower Exchange from North Carolina, March 6.

NOTES.

It is now very difficult for a mere American to get a passport to go abroad, but aliens are getting them by the thousands, through their consuls, which, all things considered, may be a blessing to this country. The special agent of the state department, in charge of the issuing of passports from this city, recently stated: "We are issuing passports abroad almost solely to business men, who are going abroad to make a preliminary survey of the field, without any intention of remaining abroad. The wives of these men are not allowed to accompany them. On the other hand, since January 1, passports have been granted to more than 10,000 aliens, residents of this country, through the New York office of the customs intelligence bureau.

Though the lives of many never reach beyond the allotted "three score and ten," there eventually comes the "inevitable hour," which casts a dark shadow on the home and circle of friends. But when a man in the prime of life is cut down at a time when bright prospects were before him, we are more affected by thoughts of the stroke. Such have been the reflections of the writer on hearing of the death of Frank A. Friedley, of Cleveland, O. Spending the winter of 1912 in Cleveland, I came to know him well, as a genial, hospitable and generous man.

Manager McCarthy, of James Weir, Inc., 324 Fulton street, Brooklyn, has taken time by the forelock, and handsomely decorated their store for the parade of the returned Brooklyn soldiers, which will take place, March 23. The store is profusely decorated with bunting and "Welcome Home" inscriptions, and he has gathered together a large collection of the implements of war, which are on exhibition in the show window.

We have learned with sincere regret of the recent death of Chris. Penek, one of the proprietors of the Rosery Floral Company, 167 Market street, Newark, N. J. He was clever, active and enterprising; a young man of foreign birth, whose adaptability had made him a

The steamship Nieuw Amsterdam, from Rotterdam, via Brest and Falmouth, docked at Hoboken, March 9. From Brest she brought 2,217 men of the American overseas army, largely New York troops, that were in the last great battle. Hospital Unit No. 17, established by Harper hospital of Detroit, Mich., comprising 123 nurses and a number of casual officers, was also on board.

Charles Knight, who is a valued member of the New York Florists' Club, has, for the past five years, been superintendent of "Westbrook," the estate of Mrs. Olivia M. Cutting, Oakdale, L. I. On March 1, he received a very appreciative letter from Mrs. Cutting, ac-

N. J. Lales, president of the Greek-American Florists' Association, has received a communication from George D. Nicholas, who went to the Paris convention some time ago, as an adviser to the Greek delegation, relating to the condition of the Greeks residing in Turkey. He reports a favorable outlook.

James Haliklas, who for a number of years has been well and favorably known as a buyer in the wholesale district, has bought, and is now conducting the retail store at 406 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, which for many years was successfully conducted by the late M. T. Keenan.

Senator George F. Thompson, of Niagara, and Assemblyman Franklin A. Coles, of Nassau county, have introduced a bill, at Albany, empowering the Roosevelt Memorial Association of Oyster Bay to acquire by condemnation necessary lands and property for a memorial park.

Corporal Wm. A. Scharf, former head man for Alex. M. Westwood, the Pennsylvania Terminal florist, who has been with the United States army in France for some time, is expected to resume his place in the store in time for the Easter business.

We regret to learn of the illness of Wm. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C. Aside from his industry as the Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, he is a national figure in the trade, always cheerful and obliging and a prince of good fellows.

Steve Masur, of 256 Fulton street, Brooklyn, feels that he has been officially recognized as a first-class florist. A letter reached Brooklyn the other day addressed to "Any first class florist," and it was delivered to "Steve."

J. Smith, formerly in the retail business, but who retired for a time, has opened a new and attractive store on East 86th street, near Lexington avenue.

An attractive retail store has just been opened at Third avenue and 183d street, the Bronx, under the name of the Rochester Floral Co.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June, 1919.

SEE nursery department for reduced Dutch freight rates.

C. S. BURGE, of Toledo, O., is spending his winter vacation at Orlando, Fla.

NEW YORK.—Liberal lots of cabbage and cauliflower seeds arrived from Denmark last week.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Queen City Seed & Nursery Co., recently incorporated, has leased quarters at 33-35 East Chipewa street.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade March 12 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds.

CHARLES W. WITBECK, of Albany, N. Y. formerly with Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, is now with the Ferguson Farms Co., Sherman, Tex.

ALBANY, GA.—The J. C. Smith Seed Co. of Columbus, Ga., will open a branch in this city and will build a range to take care of local florists' needs.

NITRATE OF SODA.—Arrangements have been made for the sale of government stocks of nitrate of soda at market prices, the expense of sales to be paid by the government.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district have been in greatly increased demand this week. Whites are up to $2.50 and $3. One lot, over 100 bushels, was lost by freezing en route last week.

BOSTON, ENG.—W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., have shipped a large quantity of vegetable and farm seeds to Siberia. Their warehouses have presented a busy appearance day and night.

GROWERS in the Grand Junction district, Colorado, representing 10,000 acres, have served notice on the Great Western Sugar Co., that unless a flat rate of $10 a ton is paid, they will plant their entire area to wheat.

SOME Dutch growers have accepted three per cent discount from their American customers for payment of fall bills in December, conceding the full discount because of delayed movement from September to November.

CLOVER AND TIMOTHY.—According to W. H. Small, of Evansville, Ind., it will not be a question of price on clover in April, but where it can be bought. Timothy, he says, will go to $6.00 this season and to $8.00 or $9.00 in 1920.

THE Dutch Bulb Growers' Syndicate is reported to have sued the forwarding agents who carried on the business of moving Dutch bulbs via England last fall, for overcharge in price of exchange on drafts for freights and other charges.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover market closed steady March 11, at $26.45, registering a gain of 85 cents during the preceding seven days. March was quoted at $26.25 and April at $21.75. Timothy was a trifle higher, cash being offered at $5.00, March, $5.00, April $5.02½. May $5.02½ and September $5.55.

HOWARD M. HENDERSON now has the title of general manager of Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

SEED POTATOES.—Early official reports to the department of agriculture indicate that the acreage planted to potatoes in the southeastern states this season will be reduced materially. The demand in the south for seed stock from Wisconsin, New York, Idaho, Colorado and the northwest has been light. Seed stock from Maine, however, has been moving faster than during the early part of last season, when the movement was hampered by car shortage and severe weather.

Catalogue Mailing Troubles.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., write as follows regarding the order of Third Assistant Postmaster General Dockery, issued June 3, 1918, which specifies sizes for catalogue and other envelopes:

"We are informed by our local superintendent of mails, that while this article is framed in terms of a suggestion, it is in fact an order that will be rigidly enforced, and that he cannot receive any catalogues after March 31 weighing less than eight ounces that are over 4x9 inches in size. He claims that this order is general throughout the United States. Catalogues weighing more than eight ounces of course come under the Parcel Post regulations. If this order is defined correctly by our local superintendent of mails, it certainly will work a hardship on a large number of seedsmen for the mailing of their catalogues this year after date stated above as well as seriously affect their plans for next year's catalogue. It means that they will have to fold in two, beautifully lithographed covers, and in this way seriously mar their effectiveness when they reach prospective customers."

Seeds in Europe.

The seed survey conducted in Great Britain has revealed the fact that with but few exceptions the quantity of each of the kinds of agricultural and garden seeds available this season is greater than that available last season. Even in the case of red clover Great Britain's supply seems to be in excess of its own planting requirements, and some of the French and Italian seed that had been imported to Great Britain is being exported.

Letters and cablegrams from the representatives of the United States department of agriculture, who have been in Europe for the past two months, do not indicate that there will be an early active demand in England for any of the seeds commonly exported by the United States, except meadow fescue. It is possible that Russia and a few of the other countries might need a considerable quantity of our seeds, but by the time transportation, monetary and other difficulties clear up it is thought that European surpluses of various kinds of seeds gradually will filter into Russia and elsewhere, thereby leaving no appreciable opening for American seed.

It is understood that the acreage planted to root crop seeds in England is larger than usual, but some of these crops have suffered somewhat from unfavorable weather, which also has had its effect on delaying the threshing of some of the important vegetable seed crops.

Seed Packets in Catalogues.

The post office authorities at Chicago advise that packets of seeds, if in transparent envelopes, may be mailed with catalogues at the rate of postage applicable to books.

  - A. J. Brown Seed Co., five bags seed.

British Export Restrictions Modified.

The London Board of Trade announced February 18, relaxation of the existing prohibitions of export on the following seeds from Class A to Class C, which denies export only to countries in the neighborhood of enemy territory: Beet, broccoli, carrot, chicory, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, parsnip, shallot, spinach and tomato.

Catalogues Received.

- Martin Kohankie, Painesville, O., perennials; Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., sash operating devices and greenhouse fittings.
- Sluis & Groot's, Enkhuisen, Holland, seeds.

THE Seed World devotes an entire page to reasons for advising the seedsmen to arbitrate. If this journal had lived a little longer, or knew a little more about the history of the American Seed Trade Association, it would know that for many years the arbitration committee has been available to all members of the association.

WOOD'S

Famous Southern Ensilage Corns

Wood's Famous Southern Grown Ensilage Corns enable farmers to grow more silage on every acre. For years these corns have enjoyed a splendid reputation for ensilage purposes, particularly in the North and West—making larger and better crops than corns grown in other parts of the country.

The past year was very favorable for curing and maturing. We offer corns cured under natural conditions—unsurpassed in vigorous germination.

“As a Silo Filler It Has No Equal”

—that's what one farmer says about it. An Ohio farmer writes: "It is the best silage corn I ever raised." Another writes: "Some of the strongest land made 100 bushels to the acre."

Write for prices of these corns that produce the most silage from the least land and labor.

DR. WALKER, of the University of Wisconsin, lectured last week to Cook county gardeners on diseases of cabbage and onion sets, illustrated with stereopticon views.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 11.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $4.00 to $4.75; celery, Florida, crate, $5.00 to $5.00; leaf lettuce, per box, 40 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 50 to 60 cents; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $5.50 to $6.50.

New York, March 10.—Celery (Florida), per case, $4.00 to $7.00; cucumbers, $2.00 to $2.25 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.25 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 25 to 60 cents; lettuce, per package, $1.00 to $6.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $4.00 to $6.00.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period March 4-10, indicate prices fairly steady with shipments heavy. In potatoes, price changes were slight and generally upward. No. 1 northern white stock followed a wide fairly steady range of $1.60-$1.80 sacked and bulk for carlots at Chicago and $1.75-$1.90 in jobbing markets. Minnesota Red River Ohio continued steady at $1.25 f. o. b. Moorhead. Colorado No. 1 sacked whites were a strong feature, reaching $1.25-$1.35 f. o. b. a gain of 10-15 cents, and reached $1.85-$1.95 in carlots at Oklahoma City. Eastern onion markets showed signs of hesitation after the recent price advance and there was a slight reaction in New York producing sections, ruling $4 f. o. b. for No. 1 sacked yellow stock. Eastern consuming markets ranged about steady for whites at $3.25-$4.25. Middlewestern markets and New Orleans threatened a further advance to $4.25-$5.75. Cabbage values held firm and old bulk stock strengthened to $33-$40 per ton f. o. b. western New York producing sections. Leading eastern consuming markets held at $35-$45 and Wisconsin stock held firm in the west, although $60-$65 was reached in St. Louis. New Florida in 1½-bushel hampers was steady in producing sections at $1.25-$1.50 and $2-$2.50 to northern consumers. Florida celery was firm in producing sections at $4.75-$5.10 per crate with a range of $5-$6 in markets. California Golden Heart ranged steady to consumers at $8.50-$11 per crate.

Celery Running to Seed.

Hardly ever a meeting of market gardeners passes without some one seeking information in regard to celery running to seed the first season. It is generally considered a condition that follows a severe check to the young plants, probably the most serious check to such plants being a severe frost in early spring. Others contend that drying out of young plants or seedlings, induces them to bolt to seed, while still another view blames careless transplanting, especially "doubled up" roots. We have had many years of experience and have had all these things happen without causing any of the crop to run to seed, and we have had celery go to seed when not a single one of the above factors could be proven. Therefore, we must look for still another cause, and one more influential than any one of these.

Many years ago, when the writer was a boy, an old grower made this remark: "Never plant celery seed too early, as it is sure to cause them to run to seed." By too early, he meant a start under glass, say in January or February. We had a striking illustration of this a few years ago. We produce our own celery seed each season from select stock plants. To guard against any chances, we do this under glass. Now in one corner of a house, where this seed was produced, some seed shelled out. In December, among our lettuce there came thousands of celery seedlings. We saved a few, and finally potted them into three-inch pots. They made a fine growth, but before March 1 each one had developed a seed stem. The same seed that produced these plants was planted for the main crop about March 15 and not one went wrong. We have seen entire lots of Golden Self Blanching, sown in February, go to seed in August and September. We would say that for the northern states any start earlier than March 1 is risky. However, we have been told by growers, who specialize in early celery, to be sure to grow the young plants in a warm greenhouse similar to tomato plants, and avoid setting in the field before danger of frost is over. Endive is also subject to this same trouble. The line of safety is often only a few weeks. Thus, we have seen lots sown July 1, come along all right, while another, from the same seed, planted June 15, would all go to seed. It seems that any undue lengthening out of the growing season is an inducement to the plant for seed production. For the information of the inexperienced, we wish to add that any of these plants that bolt to seed are worthless; hence, a total loss. To a celery grower, no greater calamity can happen than to have an entire crop go to seed. MARKETMAN.

Truck Gardeners Seek Market House.

Growers of garden truck and produce who retail their own goods, are seeking a site for a market in Cleveland. C. Geo. L. Cooley, formerly president of the Cuyahoga county farm bureau, has been made chairman of the central exchange or market association committee. Such well known men as Geo. Rose, president of the farm bureau; Martin Reutenik, of the Cleveland Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association; C. W. Laughlin, of the Dover Fruit Growers' Association; Chas. Glendenning, of the Cleveland Market Growers' Association, and John Hoag, Cuyahoga county grange, are members of this committee. Ralph Jordan, county agricultural agent, says all five associations are now combined and very enthusiastic over the proposed solution of the market site problem. C. F. B.

Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

SCHEDULE OF EXHIBITIONS FOR 1919.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, the office and library of which are now located at 606 Finance building, South Penn Square, Philadelphia, has announced the programme of exhibitions for the year as follows:

June 3-4 at Bryn Mawr, Pa.—Peonies, outdoor cut flowers and hybrid tea roses.

June 24-25 at Jenkintown Club, Jenkintown.—Sweet peas, hardy perennials and hybrid perpetual roses.

September 16-17 at Masonic Hall, Ardmore.—Dahlias, outdoor cut flowers and vegetables.

November 5-8 at First Regiment Armory, Philadelphia.—Annual Exhibition and chrysanthemum show.

At all of the above exhibitions, prizes will be awarded for vegetables in school garden and war garden classes.

Further information may be obtained upon application to the secretary, David Rust, at the office of the society.

Providence, R. I.

Business during the past week has been good with a call for funeral work that keeps all hands busy. Cut flowers sell well and are offered in good variety, such as daffodils, Easter lilies, callas, sweet peas, violets, snapdragons, carnations, excellent roses marguerites, calendulas, Chinese poppies, etc. Plant sales are unusually good. The favorites are hyacinths, daffodils, tulips, cinerarias, small palms, crocuses and a few cyclamens. H. A. T.

HANCOCK, MICH.—A flower store is to be opened in this city by David P. Anderson.

SASKATOON, SASK.—Professor Alexander R. Greig will let sub-contracts for one house, 25x60 feet, to be added to the range at the University of Saskatchewan.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.
 J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Mon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

PAINESVILLE, O.—Robert George returned from California March 7, reporting he had a splendid trip and enjoyed every minute of it.

HAVERTFORD, PA.—Joseph R. Connell has been awarded a verdict of $7,280 for trees destroyed by the Western Union Telegraph Co., in extending its lines.

NORWICH, CONN.—Edward A. Smith, a well known florist of New London, has been appointed superintendent of Mogan park in this city, effective April 1.

WE are advised under date of February 10 from Boskoop that the Holland-America line has reduced ocean rates on nursery stock to New York to 25 Dutch guilders for 40 cubic feet.

THE United States department of agriculture has issued Farmers' Bulletin 1016 entitled "Propagation and Culture of the Date Palm," giving concise practical directions for establishing a bearing orchard.

JAPANESE nurseries report low freights from Yokohama to Pacific coast points, $9 per ton by the Commander line, and $15 per ton by the Free line, except to Portland, where the rate is $4 per ton higher.

"GROWING Fruit for Home Use" is the title of Farmers' Bulletin 1001, issued by the United States department of agriculture dealing with widely grown varieties contributing to the health and pleasure of the average family at a small outlay of money.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—During Park Superintendent Wirth's absence last week, the work of cutting down the city trees was suspended pending investigation upon his return. C. M. Loring has offered to establish a fund yielding $2,500 yearly for tree maintenance on the Grand Rounds.

Trees Free for Reforestration.

According to Commissioner George D. Pratt of the New York conservation commission, the state has 10,000,000 young trees in its nurseries for shipment to persons throughout the state for purposes of reforestation. The varieties include white pine, Scotch pine, Norway spruce, red pine, white cedar, European larch, white ash and black locust. The trees will be sold at about the cost of production, from $1.50 a thousand for seedlings to $4.50 a thousand for the largest transplants. No orders will be filled for less than 500 trees. To municipalities and charitable institutions in the state, the commission will furnish trees for the cost of packing; about 50 cents a thousand. The commissioner says the trees should be planted as soon as the frost is out of the ground; that is, from about April 15 to May 20.

Lake Geneva Gardeners' Association.

OFFICERS FOR 1919 INSTALLED.
 The feature of the monthly meeting of the Lake Geneva Gardeners' and Foremen's Association, held at Lake Geneva, Wis., March 1, was the installation of the recently elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: F. W. Sparks, president; R. J. Sampson, vice-president; Axel Johnson, treasurer; F. Brady, secretary. Directors: W. Longland, A. Martini, A. J. Smith, J. Balso and R. J. Niles. Retiring President Martini in an appropriate speech thanked the officers and members of the association for the support given him during his administration and asked for a continuance for the incoming president, who upon assuming office made suitable reply.

The secretary read a number of articles relating to the proposed plant quarantine order and a letter from Theodore Wirth, superintendent of parks at Minneapolis, Minn., met with much approval, a motion being made and unanimously carried that a letter be written to him expressing the approval of the association with his suggestions.
 F. W. SPARKS.

Holyoke and Northampton Club.

The regular meeting of the club was held March 4, with H. E. Downer at Smith College plant house, Northampton, Mass. There was a good attendance with President Harold Keyes in the chair. The evening was taken up with a discussion of the horticultural import prohibition, which came in for a great deal of criticism. Members who had not written a protest to their local congressmen, as the club had voted on the previous meeting, were urged to do so immediately.

Wilmington Florists' Club.

The above organization held its monthly meeting February 24 at the office of William N. Potter, Wilmington, Del., with an excellent attendance. Several new committees were appointed, one of which will secure suitable and permanent quarters. The feature of the evening was an interesting address by B. Frank Brinton, of G. W. Brinton & Son, his topic being "Plant Exclusion." The subject was handled in an able and comprehensive manner and was followed by a general discussion, which resulted in resolutions of protest being passed, copies of which were ordered sent to Chairman Marlatt of the federal horticultural board, Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Senator Walcott, Senator-elect Ball and Congressman Layton.

The club's officers for the present year are: William N. Potter, president; Henrietta Kuratle, vice-president; Roy G. Brinton, secretary, and C. Harley Simon, treasurer.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The twelfth annual dinner of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at the Glen Head hotel, Glen Cove, N. Y., February 26. There was an attendance of more than 100 members and friends who sat down to a sumptuous repast which reflected great credit on the dinner committee, Ernest J. Brown, Ernest Westlake and John W. Everitt. For the time being the high cost of living was forgotten as well as the impending prohibition. The tables were all tastefully decorated with pot plants which enhanced the beauty of the setting. The dinner was opened with a short address of welcome by President Joseph Adler, and after the inner man had been well taken care of and the Havanas were being enjoyed, the excellent and entertaining toastmaster, Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., was introduced, who opened his remarks by speaking of the reconstruction now in progress at home and abroad. He also referred to the unfavorable ruling of the federal horticultural board which threatens the importation of certain plants and bulbs. A touch of patriotism was rendered at this time when one verse of "America" was sung. President Adler then presented Robert Jones with a gift as a token of appreciation of his excellent administration during the past year. Toasts were responded to as follows: "Our Country," James H. Cocks; "Nassau County Horticultural Society," Past President James McCarthy; "Oyster Bay Horticultural Society," J. Walker;

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Cyclamens.

The plants of cyclamen grown from seed sown last fall will now be nice, stocky little plants if properly grown and should be large enough to transplant to 2½ to 3-inch pots. The soil should be live fibrous loam with about one-third leaf mold, and in mixing a liberal sprinkling of sand should be included. In potting, the small bulb should be so placed that the soil just covers it; many leave the bulb out of the soil, but best results are obtained with the young stock to leave the bulb in the soil. Later, after the bulb has grown large and mature, this is not so necessary. The plants should be placed in a cool house and if possible near the glass and where they can have all the ventilation possible. Just as soon as safe they should be removed to frames outside and plunged in the soil even with the rim of the pot. The cyclamen will not tolerate poor drainage and if anything happens to block the drainage the plant quickly sickens. This sometimes happens where the pots are sunk in the soil and is often caused by angle worms. Where these are seen or the appearance of lumps on the top of the soil denote their presence, they should be removed at once. In the final potting, be sure and place plenty of crocks in the bottom of the pot.

Sweet Peas.

A sowing of sweet peas made in pots late in March which can be transplanted outside as soon as all danger from late frosts is passed, will give a crop of these flowers two or three weeks earlier than the seed sown in the ground. There is generally a time in late June and early July that the sweet peas in the greenhouses come very poor, owing to the excessive heat under glass and the infection of red spider, and the early sowings outside are not yet in flower. Five or six seeds sown in a 3-inch pot and these placed on the sill or window ledge or on a hanging shelf will make nice stock for planting out after the middle of April and the advantage of those started in the greenhouse over the ones sown in the cold ground will be quickly seen upon trial. They can be grown so that they will take but little valuable room under glass and the extra expense of this and the labor in transplanting them will be more than recompensed by having fine flowers at a time when most of the stock is in poor condition. The plants that are growing inside will require considerable attention as the sun increases in power; the growth is very rapid and the vines must be kept erect or crooked flower stems will be the result. They should be gone over every day, and where the growing shoots are getting away from the supports they should be fastened to them.

Camellias.

While it is a question if the camellia will ever become as popular as it was years ago, yet there seems to be a growing demand for the blooms of the "Japonica" as it was so familiarly known to the grandparents of the present generation, and the flowers are well adapted to certain classes of work or occasions. A few dwarf plants are now also seen in flower in some of the stores. They are easily grown, the prime requisite being a cool house, one with a night temperature of 45° to 50°, and the constant care throughout the year that all hard-wooded plants require. The large specimens which are grown for cut blooms may be planted in the ground of the house, first spading in a quantity of leaf-mold and rotted cow manure. The smaller plants are generally grown in pots, firmly planted in the same kind of soil, with plenty of drainage. They do not require repotting often, and when done the shift should be to only one size larger, and this should be done just after the plant is through flowering, for it then starts to make its growth for another season. When the growth starts the plants should be given plenty of water and frequently syringed; in fact, careful watering is the one thing necessary in their culture. They should never become dry, and during the hot days of summer frequent syringings are required, which also greatly assists in keeping down mealy bug and scale, the only two insects to which the plant is subject. The cause of the buds dropping, which will sometimes occur, can invariably be traced to the plant becoming dry some time during its growth. During the summer, heavy shade over the plants will be required, and an abundance of air should be provided at this time.

Bedding Plants.

The plants for bedding out in the spring will take not only much of the plantsman's time, but will keep demanding more room for the growth from now on will be rapid and unless constantly watched and cared for the plants will quickly get crowded and much of the stock injured. The final shift of the geraniums in the northern section of the country may be delayed until the first of April, but the plants should not be allowed to get badly potbound, and they should be given plenty of growing room. The propagating bed should be full of cuttings of the more rapid growing plants and the seedlings will have to be potted as soon as of proper size. The cannas and other bulbs that have been started should be potted and given good location for growing on. Now is the time to take account of stock and see of what kinds there is going to be a shortage and of what there will probably be an oversupply and obtain the first and dispose of the second. This is the time to buy, for the stocks are large and shipments can be guaranteed, and the prices are low compared to what they will be a month hence. The amount of stock that annually goes to waste is large and a little foresight will prevent much of it. Every summer some growers throw away thousands of plants that have cost much in labor and should have made returns. Auction sales in some sections are the means of disposing of much of this stock, but this is generally at low prices. This stock can most all of it be disposed of by a little judicious advertising and letting the other fellows know where it can be obtained. An attendant at any plant sale in early spring will find many growers looking for all kinds of stock. It is often quite difficult to know just how much of each kind of bedding stock is wanted, but as soon as an oversupply is noted let the other growers know where they can obtain it, and place a price on it that will guarantee a sale. It is much better to move it at some price than to throw it away. The wide-awake, up-to-date growers clean up their stock every year.

Lilies for Easter.

THIS YEAR, APRIL 20.

All eyes are now turned towards the popular floral holiday, which on account of the great curtailment in varieties of stock usually offered in quantity, will tax the various branches of the trade to the utmost to meet the demand. At this writing, nearly all the standard stocks have already been engaged, especially lilies, which perhaps are not sold but just reserved to be parcelled out to the more or less important buyers of other stock. Although, due to the embargo declared by the United States shipping board, the lily is everywhere the shortest stock in the plant market, yet a prominent grower in the vicinity of Philadelphia, Pa., has managed to secure one of the largest lily stocks ever forced by a single producer for the Easter market. There is now a growing stock of 100,000 bulbs, all cold storage giganteums. He has been forcing lilies extensively for the past three years, gradually increasing his stock so that customers could depend on this supply the year round. The war came on, and this season it was two-year carried over cold storage stock or nothing. Many conservative growers dropped out, but this one was game. He continued forcing with varying success, some lots showing good profit, with others indifferent, and some very bad. In the final cleanup of nearly all stocks not forced for Christmas, he got together the bulbs now being brought forward. He took a great chance, as there was no precedent, no knowing whether there was vitality enough left in the bulbs to get them to grow, or carry an average of flowers that would pay. At this writing, results appear to verify his judgment, as the stock looks very promising. Ten thousand of the bulbs are in 4 and 5-inch pots, and some in 6-inch. All are up nicely with very few misses. Those advanced far enough, show a good proportion in buds of twos and threes, some with four, and a few carry five. Many of the pots, possibly one-fourth, show two stems and some three. They look as if they would be a fair height; from 12 to 18 inches, and some higher.

The balance of the bulbs have been planted in flats, from 24 to 30 bulbs to a flat. As seen together on the benches they present continuous banks of green, with only here and there a gap showing inferior stock. The vitality evidenced by the vigorous growth and heavy setting of buds, would gladden the heart of any grower. In a number of the flats, every bulb appears to have grown and set from one to three buds, mostly twos, although many threes and fours, and even fives are seen.

A lot of 9-10 bulbs now cutting were very heavily flowered, appearing as if they would average three to a plant, with stems 18 to 24 inches. These were planted out on a table, and had been top dressed with well rotted manure which had helped the top or stem roots. The temperature of the lily houses is 60° at night. They are not allowed to go below this or suffer for water. All ventilating drafts are avoided, and the atmosphere kept close and moist. We shall report the progress of this large crop and final averages later, as it is a matter of much interest to the trade.

An innovation is a crop of 3,000 Delphinium Belladonna, grown in 6-inch pots for Easter. They carry from five to seven shoots, the strongest of which are now setting buds. They are beautifully clothed with foliage, and should, when in flower, prove ideal plants, their lovely shade of blue making them very desirable. A table of lupines planted out in the same house, was wonderfully fine. These stocks are grown in a night temperature of 45°. Iris Tingitana is a feature; 50,000 bulbs are coming along all growing in flats. Cutting has commenced, and it is hoped, will last until Easter. It is found advisable to trim their foliage as they grow, as it gets very long and breaks down of its weight. All the stock is French, of which about 90 per cent appears to have set buds. Ten thousand Iris filifolia is also forced and will soon be in.

A carnation house, 55x300 feet, which contained 30,000 plants, is a pleasing sight, being a mass of buds and flowers. Matchless, Benora, Beacon and Mrs. Ward are the varieties. There are a few hundred Laddie, the first flowers of which so impressed this grower that he at once ordered 10,000 young stock, and now has them growing vigorously ready for the field.

There is also a stock of 8-inch pot French hydrangeas, carrying from 15 to 20 flowers, which are perfect in every way.

The superintendent of this establishment is also a skillful and painstaking grower, one who loves plants and takes a delight in having them at their best. The whole place reflects careful management.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Pblia., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

It has been no uncommon thing to see three or four florists' cars parked at any of the growers of Easter plants, the past couple of weeks, while the owners are inside inspecting the stock and ascertaining their chances as to how much of their order will be filled. The new buyer meets with a cool reception this year. "Yes, we are all sold out; very sorry, but you can look around." A large grower of Easter plants, when asked how his stock was going, said: "We were practically all sold out before the season opened. Our regular trade, that looks to us every year for our specialties, or any novelties we may work up, will this year, with reduced variety, take everything salable, and then not have near enough. We are doing our best to divide it up equitably."

As there will be so few azaleas, lilies and spireas, which have formed almost, if not quite, half of the Easter stock, there must be something hunted up to take their place. Nicely filled plant baskets or pans can be used as substitutes, and appear to come as near to filling the bill as anything that can be found. The difficulty will be in getting enough flowering plants to brighten up the foliage stock, of which there is an abundance. There is nothing better for this purpose than small well flowered plants of the baby rambler, single stemmed hydrangeas in four-inch pots, hyacinths, if they hold out, small heathers, etc. Geraniums, primulas, lobelias, ageratums, daisies and coleus, if well colored, can be used to help out. A little experimenting at this time is well worth while. Nothing is quite so depressing as to see good money walking out of the store for want of something to invest it in.

Pansy plants and giant English daisies are now offered, well covered with bloom. Nicely trimmed pans of these will be found very salable at this time. It is now in order to make a bid for refilling the winter indoor boxes with pansies and daisies. Begin by filling those at the store. Make them look full and showy, they will be sure to attract attention. A box the length of the windows, on the pavement close to the building, will be noticed by those on that side of the street, who might miss the display over the cornice.

The continued mild weather is bringing in samples of Easter stock in heather, genistas, daisies, cinerarias, rhododendrons, Japanese azaleas, rambler roses, etc., all of which should be well featured as they give a good decorative effect to the store and bring to mind the fact that Easter will soon be here.

Outdoor pussy willows are now to be had in quantity. These, if tied in bundles, and put in cold storage and held for use at Easter, will be found very useful in trimming plant baskets, and for cut flower boxes. There will be none available a month from now unless stored in this way.

Give the windows every attention. A display that does not attract no matter how complete it seems, should be changed at once. Remember the little window cards with short snappy sentences about the display, or calling attention to the F. T. D. out-of-town service. Does the fernery need refilling?, and a hundred and one things that can be brought to the notice of the passersby in this way should always have prominent space.

Never let a lady customer or caller go out of the store without a flower to wear, and always something for the children who are along. It is a little courtesy that will be remembered.

Cut pansies and English daisies can be made into very artistic miniatures in any of the great variety of small vases, low handle baskets and hampers. The little cradles and cribs are just the thing for these short stemmed flowers. There is a charm about all things in miniature that makes them especially attractive. The small colonial bouquets are an example. These little conceits, made up for the most part of scraps, snapped off roses, loose snapdragons, sweet pea florets and the like, use up material that would for the most part go to waste. They are always admired and if displayed a few in the window, or at the customers' writing desk, will be found quite a source of revenue.

Feature boxes of spring flowers, daffodils, tulips, pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, sweet peas, irises, pussy willow sprays, etc. Arrange a box or two for the window or in the case. The attractive, decorative setting has much to do with the sale of flowers, bringing the various colors harmoniously together. Customers often spend more than they had intended, when this "art" in flowers has made them so attractive.

Do not neglect to exploit the F. T. D., out-of-town delivery of flowers. It is opening up and establishing an avenue of new business that is, and will continue increasingly, to be of the greatest benefit to the whole trade. Those who are most energetic in this propaganda, will find it very profitable, the larger their city the greater their returns. The firm that does not connect up with this organization, is losing a great opportunity.

Easter Preparations.

Every spare moment should now be put into the preparation of all the various necessities, or staples, that are sure to be required in the quick handling of the Easter business. Too much importance cannot be given to the making up of a stock in the various sizes of magnolia or oak leaf wreaths, which, when decked with flowers, are so largely used for cemetery decoration. With mossed frames at hand, these can be made up in the store between the waiting on customers without attracting much attention; to have to devote valuable time to this work during the holiday rush, shows very bad management.

Shallow wooden tubs, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 inches in diameter, first soaked to swell them up tight, painted in self colors of white, green or light blue, with the iron bands gilded, are not expensive, and are very decorative and salable when filled with all of one kind or a combination of Easter plants. They can be sent out to the growers to be filled, with a number at the store for last minute work.

The plant baskets that are to be used, if not on hand, should be selected at once. The wholesale houses will paint these a distinctive color, if given the order in time. Many stores take pride in offering something different to their customers each year, styles or coloring in baskets that are not to be found in any other shop.

A good supply of all kinds of pot covers and fancy or plain jardinieres should be on hand; much old stock, if touched up can be made to look like new and worked off at these rush times when customers are often hurried and not so particular. Many plants are sold, and the jardinieres as well, because of the combination.

Crepe paper can be cut into lengths to fit various sized pots and pans, pulled and pleated ready for use. Packed away, each size in a box, this stock will be found a great time saver when every minute counts.

SAUCERS IMPORTANT.

Fibre saucers in all sizes will be found salable. If they can be forced into general use, they will be a great factor in increasing the culture of plants in the home. Instruct customers that no plant should stand in a heated room without resting in a saucer of water. The watering is then automatic; when the saucer is dry, the plant needs water, but while wet, no attention is required. Many plants without saucers die from want of water, because so little is given for fear it will run through. Many Easter plants, such as rambler roses, hydrangeas, spiraeas, and in fact, all full flowered stock, are generally pot bound, and with the demands of their full foliage and flowers will, if not thoroughly wet when delivered, wilt down over night, and be reported as dead the next day. A saucer, with instructions on sticker in the bottom to "Keep this always full of water," will insure long life to the plant and satisfaction to the recipient. The "Water Me" tags to be attached to all flowering plants are also good as reminders, and carry the name of the firm quite often into new territory.

Mats in the various colors give good decorative effects; blues with pink flowers, greens with white and yellow, white with all colors or combinations and many other color schemes can be worked out with different shades. In all cases where the mat is drawn up from below, covering the entire pot, it should first be placed in a saucer.

Birds, butterflies, small figures and garden sticks add a decorative feature to plants and plant baskets, that make good selling points. Small natural or artificial birds' nests with imitation or candy eggs, nestled in the branches of a rambler rose, or placed in a combination plant basket, are sure to attract favorable comment.

How about order sheets, delivery tags, customers' blank cards and envelopes, and the tag envelope, which combines both card carrier and address tag? Are there plenty to carry you through this busy time? If the stock in any item is low, it should be ordered at once, so as to allow for the printer's delay.

PUBLICITY.

Is the Easter announcement ready? There is no time in the year when one's business can be brought to the attention of customers, and a selected list of likely buyers, with more profit, than at this season. This can be just a cordial invitation to visit the store in its gala attire, can be called "our annual spring exhibition of Easter plants," or may take the form of a special list of all the plants in season, with or without prices. Newspaper advertisements, calling attention to the display and special mention of a combination basket, choice hydrangea, or an Easter corsage at a price, are quite sure to bring the business. All advertising matter should be short and snappy, with a high light describing novelty or price feature, with an illustration if possible, something that catches the eye and is read almost at a glance. The announcements should be all out before Palm Sunday, and the advertisements several days previous, and strong the early days of Easter week.

Plan to decorate the front of the store. As a publicity feature, there is no one thing that will be more effective. A well planned decoration is like a great sign "Buy your flowers here." No other store in the block in other lines, will be featured in this way, so that from the moment it comes into sight, the attention of everyone who passes is attracted, and a favorable impression made. Place mossed boards, filled with laurel or hemlock and white and purple immortelle bunches, either side of the building, from the pavement up to and over the cornice. The cornice boxes and those on all windows above, should be filled with plants in full flower, preferably white and purple hyacinths, the Easter colors, and plenty of vinca vines. Pavement boxes below the show window with spring bulbous stock, and filled garden vases at the curb, finishes one plan, but there are a great many others, depending on location and character of the building that can be carried out with stunning effect.

W. F. Therikildson.

If the plant stock has not all been secured, there is scarcely a moment to lose. The only quantity stocks are hydrangeas. It is a question if the mild winter, together with the so far, very open spring, will not, on account of the late Easter date, bring the Holland stock in before that time. Soft full blown hyacinths and wide open tulips will be very unsatisfactory should there be a hot spell at this time. So it is well to look out for substitutes, such as pans of English daisies, pansies and forget-me-nots, and even geraniums, which are very showy when in full flower.

All of the above reminders are details of the work that can and should be completed at the earliest possible moment, and which will be found of the greatest assistance when the busy season opens.

Therikildson Advertising Specialist.

W. F. Therikildson, well known as the former advertising and sales manager of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., has joined the staff of N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising experts, of Philadelphia, as head of the agricultural, horticultural and farm implement division.

Mr. Therikildson first came into trade prominence while with the Storrs & Harrison Co. in his excellent work on the postal laws committee of the American Seed Trade Association. It was largely due to his efforts as advertising manager that the Fourth National Flower Show of the Society of American Florists, held at Philadelphia in 1916, made the triumphant record in a series of wonderfully successful exhibitions, and similar results attended his work for the show of the American Rose Society in the same city the following spring.

Mr. Therikildson's committee report presented at the New York convention of the Society of American Florists, and the generous subscription of the late Joseph Heacock, were the principal factors in launching the national society's great publicity campaign.

With these laurels, Mr. Therikildson's future in the advertising field seems assured, and we cordially wish him the full measure of success he so well deserves in his new sphere.

DANVILLE, ILL.—F. L. Henry has purchased the range which he has leased for several years and will make numerous improvements.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Kentucky Society of Florists has changed its regular meeting night from the first to the second Wednesday in each month.

GREENBURG, IND.—Overhead irrigation systems have been installed at the establishments of Ira Clark & Co., Wm. C. Kennelman and the Henningsen Floral Co.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Preparations for Another Season.

It is now time to start the propagating for the coming season's requirements. Before this is done, the stock plants should receive attention according to their needs. If they have been carried over since their flowering season in a light, cool place and held a little to the dry side at the roots, serving as a moderate rest period for the plants, they will be in first class condition with a good supply of cuttings as needed and do not require any further attention beyond a little higher temperature and more moisture applied to their roots, so as to encourage more growth for cuttings, but if they have been carried over winter in flats stored under the benches or in any other out of the way place, they will now need to be brought to the light and any dead or diseased foliage removed from them.

In these days, when so much of the grower's attention has to be given to controlling the insects which attack chrysanthemum plants, it pays to be extra particular and sure that every cutting that goes into the propagating bed is clean and free from insects. Clean culture is the surest means of keeping the plants free of insects, but under the strictest vigilance some insects are bound to appear. Spraying with the nicotine preparations will control the aphid, but for the chrysanthemum midge or leaf tyer, more strenuous measures have to be resorted to, and one grower of large quantities of chrysanthemum stock informs me that it has cost him hundreds of dollars to keep a man continually picking over the stock plants to keep the midge and leaf tyer under control. It has been the duty of this man to go up and down the bench of stock plants and examine every plant for any trace of the pest and pick it off. By being strictly vigilant in his efforts, they feel that they have their stock clean. These are strenuous measures to have to take, but what has to be done to control any insect pest should be done thoroughly. From personal observation, the writer is of the opinion that too many growers do not pay strict attention enough to controlling the insect pest during the winter months when the plants are partially dormant. This year we gave some of our stock plants a treatment that has proved very satisfactory. Having three benches of seedlings in their third year trial, which we thought too valuable to throw any of the plants away, the string and wire supports were removed and the plants and the surface of the beds thoroughly cleaned of any decayed foliage. The plants were then treated to a spraying of the nicotine preparation and a few evenings later to a vaporizing from the steam pipe of the same form. After this the house was run cool both day and night and the water withheld from the plants. The soil became so dry that it cracked away considerable from the sides of the benches, and the growths on the plants would wilt quite a bit during bright sunshine. This treatment was kept up until the week after Christmas, when it became necessary to lift the plants and close them up more together so as to obtain space for other stock. After the transplanting, they were given moderate waterings about once a week. The stools are now carrying as fine a stock of strong, healthy cuttings as the writer has ever had.

The insects are not so active during the winter season, and once the plants are rid of them, it will take considerable less trouble to control them by preventative measures during the balance of the year. The greatest mistake lies in allowing the plants to become badly infested with any kind of insects before attempting to fight them. Another good plan before taking off any cuttings from the stock plants is to fumigate two or three evenings in succession, so as to be sure that the plants are thoroughly clean.

PREPARING PROPAGATING HOUSE OR BED.

Growers who propagate large quantities of chrysanthemums have a propagating house especially fitted up for the purpose of propagating not only chrysanthemums, but other lines of stock, as well, and the chrysanthemum cuttings usually follow after carnations or some other variety of plants, but not so with the man who raises a few thousand. It is generally up to him to fit up a bench in one of the growing houses for propagating his chrysanthemums. The essential requirements necessary for the work are a clean, sharp sand, a section of a bench with good drainage out of the way of the direct draughts of the ventilators and where a sand temperature of 56 degrees and a house temperature of 52-54 degrees can be maintained.

To guard against the cuttings wilting, provision must be made for shading during bright days. It should be the aim of the man in charge of the propagating to see that the cuttings do not wilt from the time they are taken from the stock plants until they are rooted. A good watering in of the cuttings at the time they are put in the sand, with light spraying once a day afterward, generally suffices for the cuttings until they are rooted. Later in the season, they will need more, but at the present time the sand remains moist for a considerable period.

VARIETIES TO START FIRST.

Nearly all of the exhibition varieties need to be propagated early and given a long season of growth for their best development and should be among the first cuttings to go into the sand. Many of them are such strong, husky growers that they need more space in the sand than do the general run of commercial varieties. As a matter of fact, any grower undertaking to try his hand at growing exhibition chrysanthemums for cut blooms should be prepared to allow them ample space from the time they start out in the cutting bench until maturity. If not started early, and given plenty of space and the best of care, only partial success can be obtained.

The early varieties need also to be started at this time so that they can be worked along into 3 or 3½-inch pots for May and early June planting. The earlies can be classed into three groups, the first being Smith's Advance, Golden Glow, Unaka, Early Rose and Early Frost, all of which need early propagating with the exception of Early Frost, which is one of those hard wooded varieties that bud up on every few inches of growth and do best from later propagated stock or grown three flowers to a plant. The second group of earlies, which also should be propagated now, are Polly Rose, Glory of Pacific, Pacific Supreme, Alice Day and Golden Queen, followed by the third group, consisting of Chrysolora, Mrs. C. C. Pollworth, Ivory Pink, Ivory Onconto, Chas. Razer and Marigold, or any other variety in season during the month of October.

As soon as the early varieties are attended to, the early mid-season sorts can receive attention and after them the pompon and singles, followed on by the late and very late varieties, so that they are all taken care of during the months of March and April.

TREATMENT AFTER CUTTINGS ARE ROOTED.

After the cuttings have made roots of ½-inch long, they should be taken from the sand and potted. None of the plants suffer quicker than the chrysanthemums when left in the sand after they are rooted. They grow rapidly, stretching out to a thin, spindly growth and wirey roots, which receive a big check when taken out. The best soil to use for the rooted cuttings, when taken from the sand, is a fresh garden soil that does not contain any great amount of organic matter. Pot firmly, and water thoroughly after potting. Give them a light place in a cool house, shading for a few days during bright sunshine. After the young plants have become established in the soil pay close attention to the general routine care and shift into larger pots as they need it.

The copy arranged for these advertisements is most attractive, and some of it along lines not previously exploited. Certain of the advertisements will be adapted to local newspaper advertising, and the promotion bureau now has in preparation a series of new electrotypes for use simultaneously with the issue of the magazine advertisements, all intended to link up with the national publicity. Readers of the magazines in every locality will easily recognize the connection, which is to the advantage of all florists using the electrotypes.

Three of these advertisements will also be featured in a new series of slides for use in the "movies." The series will also include suitable slides for Easter and Memorial day. They will be of the same high quality as to color and design as the set previously issued, and which is still in good demand, so much so that our bureau has just placed an order for an additional supply.

Both slides and electrotypes will be fully described in a broadside which is to be sent out in a few days, but to be sure that a copy will be received, florists are asked to make special request of the secretary for a copy.

Flat copies of the colored advertising pages without printing on the back and suitable for framing and display, will also be mailed on request.

Florists must remember that this year the campaign fund is set at $100,000, over one-third of which is already subscribed. We are, however, approaching the end of the first quarter of the year, and should therefore be much farther advanced. The policy of making contributions need no longer be questioned. Results have proved that the campaign has been a wise move, and the object of the committees now is to extend it, so as to increase the benefit within reach. The producers of citrus fruits inaugurated their publicity campaign with a levy of one cent per box on all shipments, for publicity. They now gladly pay 10 cents per box, so great has been the resulting benefit to their industry. This will be, without a shadow of doubt, our own experience—it might be said that it is already.

What the committees really want, is early support. More can be done with a fund in the substance than in the shadow. If the whole fund were available now, a better disposition could be made of it, and advantage taken of possibilities which cannot be expected to recur.

Florists everywhere, growers, wholesalers and retailers, who have not already subscribed, and there are many of them, are urged to help the committees to complete the fund at the earliest possible date, so that best results may be secured.

If you, Mr. Reader, have not yet subscribed, now is the time when your subscription will insure its fullest value.

The following subscriptions have been received, and are in addition to those previously announced, annually for four years unless otherwise stated:

The 1919 Vision.

Wherever flowers are grown and sold, there is seen an atmosphere such as never before presented itself; that of looking forward to greater and better business than at any time in our history, and all this out of the greatest chaos which our industry has had happen since we went into the war.

Why? Because we were put to a test of understanding our own possibilities. The grower, for instance, with the coal restriction, was forced to do certain things certain ways; labor shortage caused other hardships to be overcome; also increased cost of production, and these lessons of experience will never be forgotten, and will tend to remake many establishments which might have gone to seed.

Then the retailers, who had been doing things in the same way, year in and year out, until the same condition struck them that hit the grower, and they had to make changes to meet the conditions, the scarcity of flowers with the higher costs, as well as everything else that enters in the retail-store, such as supplies, etc. These all had to have consideration, so that out of all this also has come a condition that changed business principles and made one scratch his head a bit, so that he could meet everything with equal energy to carry on.

Has not something entered into our flower selling end that helped us to partly combat that which we were so sadly lacking? "Publicity"? Has it not given our business an added impetus to create more buyers, both new and old, so that we were able to overcome our troubles, and helped build for a bigger and better business than we had ever encountered up to now?

Shall we not now give a little credit to the publicity campaign and our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," so that it can keep on doing more and more, and do you not think it merits a contribution if you have not given already?

Think it over and send your contribution to our secretary, John Young, with a word of cheer so that your neighbor may also appreciate it in like manner.

It is just a vision for 1919. What think you?

HENRY PENN.

Chairman Nat'l Publ'city Campaign.

Society of American Florists.

EXECUTIVE BOARD MEETING.

The mid-winter meeting of the executive board of the society was held at the Hotel Statler, Detroit, Mich., January 31-February 1, 1919, President J. F. Ammann officiating at all the sessions. President Ammann opened the meeting with a short address, after which the credentials of the representatives from the different clubs and societies were filed and accepted. In response to roll call, the following were found to be in attendance: J. F. Ammann, president, Edwardsville, Ill.; E. A. Feters, vice-president, Detroit, Mich.; John Young, secretary, New York; J. J. Hess, treasurer, Omaha, Neb.; Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative, Washington, D. C.; and the following directors: Joseph Manda, West Orange, N. J.; Chas. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, O.; Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.; C. H. Totty, past president, Madison, N. J.; Philip Breitmeyer, F. T. D., Detroit, Mich.; Chas. S. Strout, president, American Carnation Society, Biddeford, Me.; Philip F. Kessler, president, New York Florists' Club; Edmund A. Harvey, president, Florists' Club of Philadelphia; Allie J. Zech, president, Chicago Florists' Club; Benjamin Hammond, president, American Rose Society, Beacon, N. Y.; August Hummert, president, St. Louis Florists' Club; Chas. J. Graham, president, Cleveland Florists' Club; Geo. Asmus, chairman, national flower show committee, Chicago; Henry Penn, chairman, publicity committee, Boston, Mass., also the following visitors: H. G. Dillemath, Toronto, Ont.; Carl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn.; Walter Taepke, Detroit, Mich.; Chas. H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa.; W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y.; Major P. F. O'Keefe, Boston, Mass.; W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo.; Irvin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.; R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; Albert Pochelon, secretary, F. T. D., Detroit, Mich.; W. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; Allan Pearce, Waltham, Mass.; Geo. B. Arnold, Woburn, Mass.; Fred Lautenschlager, Chicago; S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.; J. F. Sullivan, Detroit, Mich.; E. G. Hill, president, Florists' Hall Association, Richmond, Ind

The secretary read his financial report which was accompanied by a certificate of audit. On motion, the report was referred to a committee of three for official audit, President Ammann appointing the following as such committee, Benjamin Hammond, C. C. Pollworth and Jos. A. Manda. Treasurer J. J. Hess then presented his report. In making his presentation, he pointed out that expenses had exceeded the general fund to the extent of $4,875, and asked that something be done to increase the revenue of the society, in so far as this fund was concerned. The expense of the secretary's office had largely increased on account of the great amount of work now connected with it. The deficiency was fully discussed, the discussion bringing out the fact that the national flower show, which was abandoned in the spring of 1919, was responsible for an expense of $2,100.00, and other expense had also been entailed which was not likely to occur again. The treasurer produced certificates from the banks verifying the bank balances. The report was, on motion, referred to the audit committee. The work of the publicity committees was then taken up, reports received and considered, and the situation fully discussed, as reported recently in the trade papers.

SECOND SESSION.

Promptly after luncheon, President Ammann called the board to order for the second session. The publicity campaign was further discussed. The outcome was the passing of a motion by J. J. Hess that the board recommend the adoption of an equitable plan on lines such as practiced in Milwaukee, and described by Mr. Pollworth, the same to be devised by the publicity finance committee with a view to its operation another year.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS BUREAU REPORT

R. C. Kerr, chairman of the committee on credits and collections bureau, made a verbal report covering the work of the committee since the St. Louis convention. The report was lengthy and showed that considerable progress had been made toward the inauguration of a service which, it was hoped, might ultimately meet the requirements of the trade. A resolution was passed endorsing the work of the committee and recommending that it continue, with full power to act.

Secretary Young presented and read a report, as superintendent of the St. Louis trade exhibition which was duly accepted and ordered to be audited and filed.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR CONVENTION.

Vice-President E. A. Feters reported the selection of a hall for the housing of the convention next August. The Arcadia dance auditorium, on Woodward avenue, within 15 minutes' walk of the Hotel Statler, he believed would furnish ample accommodations. He stated terms and other particulars in regard to its rental for the purpose. The board arranged to make a visit of inspection next day. Mr. Feters also reported as to the situation in regard to the 1919 convention garden explaining the difficulties met with concerning its establishment and the lack of interest evident, on the part of prospective exhibitors. Philip Breitmeyer also discussed the situation, and recommended that the idea of a convention garden be abandoned, at least for 1919. It being reported that the florist-interests of Cleveland, where the 1920 convention is to be held, were also in favor of entire abandonment, the board, after full discussion, on motion of George Asmus, decided to recommend that at the next convention the constitution be so amended as to eliminate the convention garden committee.

The matter of the preparation of the convention programme was discussed and the board decided to leave it in the hands of the secretary and the local committee. If it was thought desirable to provide speakers the secretary and committee were empowered to meet expenses, which should not exceed $200.

The auditing committee presented their report, which was, on motion accepted.

Chairman W. F. Gude, of the committee on tariff and legislation, then made a report which dealt largely with the work of the committee in reference to the action of the federal horticultural board in establishing a quarantine against importations of plants, etc. He presented the brief prepared by the committee for signature by the directors, and the same was completed and put in readiness for official presentation. Mr. Gude further recommended that J. D. Eisele, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Riverton, N. J., and F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., be added to the committee on tariff and legislation, and, on motion of Joseph A. Manda, the president was empowered to make the appointments.

Secretary Young asked for a ruling by the board as to the proper interpretation of the new by-law covering plant registrations, instancing a case where descriptions of some delphiniums had been sent in for registration, but the same did not appear to cover any varietal differences, such as to make the plants separate and distinct from other varieties. The board discussed the matter at some length, and expressed the opinion that the intent of the by-law was quite plain, and anyone who had a plant, which was rejected for registration, and believed that the by-law did not cover the case, could come before a committee of judges to be appointed by the society to examine and report in the matter.

After a general discussion of other matters, which included national flower show prospects, the society's new journal and the conveniences of the society's office in New York, the board adjourned to the Detroit Athletic Club, where the members were guests of Mr. Breitmeyer at a very enjoyable dinner, tendered by him. There were also present as guests of Mr. Breitmeyer, the directors and executive officers of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

THIRD SESSION, FRIDAY EVENING.

After the dinner, the board went into session and again opened the proceedings with the publicity campaign as a topic for further discussion. Albert Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, and other officials of that organization, taking part. Major P. F. O'Keefe, by request, spoke at some length of the plans that had been mapped out for the 1919 campaign, describing the advertisements it was proposed to insert in a list of national magazines, the illustrations to appear in connection with them, and the new features to be introduced. He also referred to the paragraph, which it was proposed to insert in the magazine advertisements: "When you see the sign, 'Say It With Flowers,' displayed by your florist, it shows that he is a member of the Society of American Florists. Give him your patronage because he is aiding in the praiseworthy national work of making flowers more loved and used." He did not care to use this paragraph without the fullest authority, and therefore requested that the board would consider the advisability of using this wording, and rule accordingly. A very long discussion ensued, and finally, upon motion, the text was approved and its use authorized.

A resolution was passed that a recommendation of the audit committees that the funds of the national flower show be kept separate, be concurred in by the board.

Another resolution was passed that the committee in charge of the convention programme be recommended to make endeavor to secure a speaker from the agricultural department, bureau of plant industry, to define the work of the bureau along horticultural lines.

SPORTS AT DETROIT CONVENTION.

Vice President Fetters spoke of a movement to revive the custom of holding sports at the conventions, and detailed different features which had been discussed locally. The board approving of the movement, the entire matter was left in the hands of the local committee.

FOURTH SESSION—SATURDAY MORNING.

At 9 a. m., the members of the board in a body inspected the Arcadia auditorium, returning afterwards to the Hotel Statler, where a business session opened at 10:30. E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and George W. Hess, Washington, D. C., took seats at this session. President Ammann appointed Charles J. Graham, Henry Penn and Philip F. Kessler as a committee on final resolutions.

Wm. F. Gude read resolutions passed by different trade bodies in regard to the plant embargo soon to go into operation, and considerable correspondence in the matter. Some discussion ensued, during which Vice-President Fetters announced that he had received a message from the Federation of Women's Clubs to the effect that that body would like to co-operate with the society, as they were much interested in the opposition to the embargo, and would like an opportunity to interview senators and congressmen in Washington. On motion of George Asmus, the president was directed to appoint a committee of two local men with Mr. Gude, to confer with these ladies and help them in their approaches to the legislators. Messrs. Fetters, Breitmeyer and Gude were appointed such committee. At the request of Mr. Gude, the board, on motion of E. G. Hill, went on record as favoring national appropriations to the United States department of agriculture in the interests of horticulture and floriculture.

The board discussed at some length arrangements in regard to the housing of the 1919 convention and trade exhibition, and terms for leasing the Arcadia auditorium. On motion of Charles H. Totty, the local committee was given power to execute a lease on the terms offered. The rate for space in the trade exhibition was fixed at 40 cents per square foot, as before.

President Ammann called upon each member of the board, representing affiliated organizations, for suggestions as to the society's work, especially any which might interest the organizations represented. This led to a lengthy and most earnest discussion as to advantages to the society which might come through an extension of the affiliation idea. The trend of the discussion was in the direction of encouragement of effort to promote state organizations of florists, all of which by complying with provisions laid down, should have representation upon the society's board, the expenses of all delegates to be defrayed by the organizations represented. As a result of the discussion, it was, on motion, decided that a committee be appointed to prepare recommendations in the matter to the society at its next convention, full consideration being given to the number of florists in each state and the number of representations probable, also to the necessity for each organization, to bear the expenses of its representative.

Henry Penn brought up the matter of a recommendation to the society that it appropriate again this year the sum of $5,000 to the publicity campaign fund, and moved that the board make such a recommendation. The motion was duly seconded, but a discussion was raised as to the financial condition of the society in respect to such an appropriation. The motion was eventually changed to read that it was the board's recommendation that the sum of $5,000 be made to the publicity fund, to be used, if needed, during the year's campaign. Adjournment was then made for lunch.

FIFTH SESSION—SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

The session being opened by the president, the first business taken up was that of appropriations. The appropriations of the previous year being read by the president and meeting the views of the board, on motion of Wm. F. Gude, the appropriations for 1919 were made the same. In the same connection, the matter of preparing the society's new journal for publication came up for discussion, as well as the care of the secretary's office, while he was traveling in the interests of the society, and on motion of George Asmus, the sum of $50 per month was appropriated for services of an assistant.

Secretary Young asked for the views of the board as to the desirability of printing a membership list, in view of the fact that it had been customary to do so, and incorporate it in the volume of proceedings now abandoned. To print it separately would entail quite an expense. After discussion, the board expressed the opinion that the printed list of members could be dispensed with.

The board, feeling that the treasurer's salary was inadequate for the work he was now called upon to perform on motion of Philip Breitmeyer, voted to increase from $200 to $300 per year.

The president announced the following as the committee on affiliations: Joseph H. Hill, C. E. Critchell, and C. C. Pollworth.

W. F. Gude moved in view of the great expense the society was now under in the prosecution of its work, that the board recommend an amendment to the constitution raising the dues to $5 per year, and life memberships to $50, first year's dues of annual members to cover initiation as at present. The motion was duly seconded and carried.

The subject of the abandonment of the convention garden again coming up, the board expressed itself that the recommendation covering that action should carry with it a recommendation that selection of a convention city be only made one year in advance, as formerly.

The treasurer reported a mortgage loan of $6,500 in favor of the society maturing shortly, and requested instructions in the matter. On motion, the loan was ordered to be investigated, and if found to be gilt-edged left unrecalled, but if recalled, reinvestment was left to the treasurer and president.

FINAL RESOLUTIONS.

After the discussion of a few other matters of general and passing interest not requiring action, the committee on final resolutions presented the following, which was adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That this board by unanimous vote, tender its thanks for and appreciation of the generous hospitality extended by the Detroit Florists' Club and Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, during our sessions; also, to the management of the Hotel Statler, and the daily press of Detroit.

PHILIP F. KESSLER.
HENRY PENN.
CHARLES GRAHAM.

The board then, on motion, adjourned, to meet in Detroit next August.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Pittsburgh.*TRADE CONDITIONS FAIRLY GOOD.

Lent does not appear to affect business in the least. While stock, with the exception of carnations, is more plentiful and prices somewhat lower, everything cleans up nicely. Easter lilies and callas are more abundant and the price has dropped a little. Some very good American Beauties are now coming in. Tea roses are of very good quality and clean up daily at fair prices. There is still not enough carnations coming, and the demand for white for St. Patrick's day caused them to take a jump in price. Sweet peas are still arriving in large numbers, but the demand is good, as they are the most popular flower grown for corsage work. Some very good snapdragons are seen and sell readily. Violets are still a drug on the market, the street boys getting the most of them. Jonquils and tulips are more plentiful, while Paper Whites and freesias are about done. Some very good mignonette and yellow daisies are received daily, and meet with a ready sale.

NOTES.

Karl Voelker, formerly with The Alpha Floral Co., and the A. W. Smith Co., of this city, has taken a position with T. Malbranc, of Johnstown, Pa. With his experience, he should make a good addition to Mr. Malbranc's force.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., New York; Sam Seligman, of S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and R. E. Blackshaw of Ove Gnat Co., La Porte, Ind. M.

Toronto.*PLENTIFUL SUPPLY MOVES STEADILY.

Trade conditions continue active, and although there are no really large social functions, the transient demand and many funeral orders keep the market cleaned of stock daily. The roses of the shorter grades are not plentiful enough, but in the better offerings there are enough for all. The prices remain unchanged at $30, $20, $15 and $10 per 100, and the quality is fine at this season. While there are no American Beauties on the market, Russell, Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia, Sunburst, Frank Dunlop and Double White Killarney are all arriving in the select grades. Carnations of good quality continue plentiful at $5, $4 and $2 per 100, but there are few of the cheaper grades to be had. Orchids, sweet peas, lilies and bulbous stock remain at former prices, while violets have advanced. Green goods are scarce, with very little smilax to be had. The lilies at the different growers never looked better and prices quoted are $25, $20 and $18 per 100 for Easter. From present indications, there will be a plentiful supply of stock for the Easter trade. The demand for shamrocks for St. Patrick's day used up all available stock.

NOTES.

The gardeners' and florists' association motored to Oakville, to assist in the opening of a new club at that town which will affiliate with the Toronto association. About 38 were present, and all were very enthusiastic. Officers were elected, and regular meetings will be held monthly.

C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., was a recent visitor and went to see the new rose, Frank Dunlop. He returned to New York Friday, accompanied by J. H. Dunlop and Geo. M. Geraghty, who were guests at the New York Florists' Club banquet.

There is considerable activity in building, and 100,000 feet will be added to the local area, the coming season. Yet they persist there is no money in the growing end. One never knows the philanthropists in the florist business.

The retail florists' club, in their publicity campaign, held a theatre party at the Princess theatre, when each lady performer was presented with a bouquet. This proved quite a hit, and will be repeated again next year.

J. S. Simmon has purchased the greenhouses of Mark Henderson at Brampton, which he will operate in connection with his retail store.

W. Wilshire, who has been supplying the pussy willows for this section, has secured a tract of land and will plant these extensively.

J. A. Neal addressed the retail florists on "Advertising," and co-operative publicity will be tried, commencing with Easter. H. G. D.

Washington, D. C.

There is going to be a serious shortage of lilies this year and it is declared prices will go as high as 35 cents per bloom wholesale, and proportionate retail figures that will result in the supply equaling the demand.

Gude Bros. Co. reports it is now taking the stars out of the firm's service flag, the following employes having returned from service: Frank H. Keefer, Norman Padgett and Irving Herbert. B. F. L.

Tri-City Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the residence of William Knees, Moline, Ill., March 13, with President Pauli in the chair. Following the general order of business, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: William Goos, Bettendorf, Ia., president; Wm. Knees, Jr., Moline, recording secretary; Ludwig Stapp, Rock Island, Ill., financial secretary; William Knees, Sr., Moline, treasurer. Vice-presidents were elected for each city as follows: R. E. De Rycke, Moline; Henry Meyer, Rock Island; Harry Bills, Davenport; P. G. Pearson, Bettendorf. Trustees: Edward Patton, Davenport; Henry Gaethje, Rock Island; C. Sorensen, Moline.

The April meeting will be held at the residence of William Goos, Bettendorf, Ia. W. G.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore.

At the monthly meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, Md., which was held in its rooms in Exchange hall, St. Paul and Franklin streets, there was a good attendance. The constitution and by-laws were revised and officers were elected to serve during the ensuing year as follows: R. A. Vincent, White Marsh, president; John Neuth, vice-president; Robert T. Paterson, 934 East Preston street, corresponding secretary; C. H. Wagner, financial secretary; Albert Fiedler, treasurer.

Following the business session, the club's thirty-second annual banquet was held at the Hotel Rennett and proved a most enjoyable affair. With the war over, many of the members are back on the job again in their old-time spirit. ROBERT T. PATERSON, Sec'y.

Providence, R. I.*TRADE IN GENERAL SATISFACTORY.

The supply of stock continues plentiful and of good quality. Carnations are good and move freely and roses are arriving in larger numbers. Callas, violets, orchids, sweet peas and marguerites are also among the satisfactory offerings. Shamrocks had a good demand on St. Patrick's day. All indications point to good business for Easter, although some items will be scarce, among others azaleas, which will doubtless command good prices.

The feature of the monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at the Public Library, March 19, was a discussion of the proposed federal plant quarantine. H. A. T.

OBITUARY.*Mrs. E. A. Scribner.

Mrs. E. A. Scribner, wife of the well known retired florist, E. A. Scribner, of Detroit, Mich., died March 11, after a long illness. She was a member of the ladies' auxiliary of the Detroit Florists' Club, and until her serious illness last fall, was much interested in its activities. She likewise was keenly interested in the Ladies' Society of American Florists, and many times accompanied her husband to the annual conventions. For many years she labored hard in the florist business, both in the growing and retailing departments of their establishment.

Mrs. Scribner was possessed of a most cheerful disposition and quickly made friends that were much attached to her. Her funeral, which was held from her late home, 221 Joseph Campau avenue, was attended by many members of the local florists' club, which also sent a beautiful floral tribute as a testimony of the esteem in which she was held. Other floral offerings were many and beautiful. She is survived by her husband, E. A. Scribner. Interment was at Elmwood cemetery. J. F. S.

Mrs. Clara Glaser.

Mrs. Clara Glaser, wife of the late A. L. Glaser, Dubuque, Ia., died March 12. The funeral was held the following Saturday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, at the family residence, Reverend Schwab officiating. The remains were taken to Linwood cemetery, where they were placed in the chapel to await the return of her son, Corporal Leo Glaser, from overseas.

B. Koch.

R. Koch, for half a century a florist and nurseryman at Nanuet, N. Y., died March 10, age 77 years. He is said to have been very successful in business, and to have left a valuable estate. A. F. F.

DWIGHT, ILL.—W. Dittmer, of Grinnell, Ia., has purchased the range here formerly conducted by A. L. Bump.

HOUSTON, TEX.—A rose show will be held here in April under the auspices of the Houston Horticultural Society and the Houston Post.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—Edward A. Smith, recently appointed park superintendent at Norwich, has disposed of his florist business here to K. A. Samuelson.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Mrs. M. A. Hartnett, whose store in the Ashton building was destroyed by fire recently, is planning to reopen in the near future.

SALT LICK, WEST VA.—Dale H. Hamilton, recently returned from government service at Vancouver, is preparing to reopen his greenhouse for the coming season.

COLUMBIA CITY, IND.—Albert Wagner and wife have purchased the North Side Greenhouses which have been held under receivership by the Provident Trust Co.

RIDGEFIELD, CONN.—William Pinchbeck has purchased the range of the Ridgefield Florist on Danbury road and will continue same in connection with his extensive establishment in the West Lane section.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Col. J. D. Carmody did not go to his Florida retreat this winter, the mild weather at home making the trip unnecessary. The colonel admits he is over eighty, but still keeps in touch with many friends by correspondence.

"Say It Straight."

Some of the retail trade are butchering the wonderfully successful slogan, "Say it with Flowers," by cutting it open and inserting their name, making it read, "Say it with Brown's Flowers," or Smith's Flowers, etc. Surely such misuse of the slogan should be frowned upon and forbidden.

Thompson Carnation Co.

In accordance with a notice filed by John T. Clyne, trustee of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., the personal property of said company consisting of greenhouses, equipment, office furniture and fixtures, dwelling houses, etc., and all personal assets, will be sold at public auction April 9 at 2:00 p. m. at the north entrance of the court house, Joliet, sale to be subject to the approval of the court.

Civil Service Examinations.

The United States civil service commission, Washington, announces an open competitive examination, April 23, to fill the position of assistant in plant fumigation under the federal horticultural board, the position paying from $1,500 to $1,980 per year.

The commission also announces an examination, April 24-25, for the position of entomological laboratory assistant in the department of agriculture, the salary being from $1,080 to $1,320 per year.

B. F. L.

Canadian Retailers' Association Planned.

Believing that a Dominion-wide retail florists' organization would be of benefit in a great many ways to the trade of Canada, there being no association at present taking a special interest in the business welfare of that branch of the craft, a committee of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, composed of J. E. Carter, H. G. Dillemath, S. A. McFadden, H. W. Parker and L. S. Waters has sent out a questionnaire with the object of ascertaining if the trade is in favor of such an organization, and it is proposed to take the matter up at the time of the annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association in Toronto this summer, when it is expected that a large number of retailers will be present.

Water-Cooled Grate for Coal Refuse.

Harold Otter, Moorestown, N. J., has installed a water-cooled grate under his 40 horse power return tubular steam boiler, which enables him to burn coal refuse of the yard, which ton for ton gives as good results as coal of the highest grades.

The grate, or perhaps it should be called a grate substitute, consists of two cast-iron rectangular hollow boxes, which together cover a space of 34x45 inches, three inches in depth. Cast into the boxes, running from top to bottom, about six inches apart, are what might be called pipes or air flues. These are one-inch in diameter, fitted with plugs one inch in length with smaller holes that are placed in the top of the air flues flush with the surface. These boxes, taking the place of the grate, are set over the ash pit about six inches below the feed door. They are then connected up with the boiler, permitting a constant circulation of water through the boxes which prevents the iron becoming so heated as to burn and warp.

The ash pit door is sealed up, making an air-tight chamber under the grate or boxes. This is connected with a pipe five inches in diameter to a blower run by an electric motor. When in operation, there is a strong current of air forced from the ash pit through the various openings in the grate or iron boxes above.

The fire is started in the ordinary way with wood, and when in full blast, carries a bed of coal refuse about one foot thick. There is very little smoke: the coal, becoming heated, throws off gases, which mixing with the air coming through the coal, burn fiercely. The coal under the intense heat gradually settles down or melts into large cake-like clinkers, which are removed about once a day.

The cost of running the fan by electricity has so far averaged $3 per week. The consumption of the coal refuse has not been as great as that of coal for the same period of last year. The labor is not as great, as the fire does not have to be fed nearly as often. Low or intense fires are regulated by the speed of the fan. The difficulty with inferior coal burned with forced draft has been the destruction of the grate bars, which have frequently to be replaced. Constant circulation of water through the grate boxes absorbs and carries off the excess heat, making them as lasting as the boiler itself.

It has cost about $600 to make this entire installation, which, Mr. Otter says, will be saved in the first year's coal bill, as coal refuse costs but $1 per ton delivered.

Potash Negotiations Off.

A cable from London, March 17, stated that the negotiations between the Allies and Germany for the delivery of potash had been broken off. It was previously reported that the potash from Germany was expected to be one of the chief means for Germany to pay for foodstuffs allowed that country by the Allies.

Club Meetings Next Week.

[Secretaries of clubs and societies are requested to send notice of change in date, time and place of meetings.]

LIFE, this week, pictures the American business man, bound hand and foot by cable censorship.

THE appointment of Prof. H. C. Taylor, of the University of Wisconsin as chief of the office of farm management, is one of the first steps in the new plan of farm accounting to be established by Secretary of Agriculture Houston.

HUGE mortars, standing on concrete emplacements and abundantly supplied with half-ton projectiles, were erected during the war among flowers and shrubbery of private gardens in New York, and elsewhere along the Atlantic coast, to repel attacks of German naval or airships.

RITO

THE ENERGIZER FOR SOIL BACTERIA IS COMING TO AMERICA.

WONDERFUL RESULTS have been obtained by the use of RITO in Great Britain during the last three years. Owing to the war it has been impossible to export, but now we are free to do so, and feel sure that the Horticulturists of the U. S. A. will at once avail themselves of this unique method of increasing their products and of getting their stuff ready for the market some weeks earlier than they have hitherto done, and so secure a much higher price.

WHAT IS RITO? — RITO is a humus, organic or natural fertilizer, a stimulant and energizing medium for soil bacteria.

WHAT IS HUMUS? — Humus is a complex substance or mixture of substances present in the richest of soils. It is black in colour, and hence renders the soil darker. RITO contains Humus in the right form for fertilizing the soil.

WHY ADD HUMUS? — Because most soils contain very little (if any) Humus, and it is necessary for the proper development of the useful soil bacteria. The bacteria find in the Humus constituents a suitable medium for their robust propagation.

That is, Humus is a source of food and energy for the soil bacteria.

WHAT IS THE ANALYSIS OF RITO? — It has very little chemical analysis and it does not come in the same category as fertilizers. It is essentially an energizing medium for soil bacteria. Phosphates and potash are present in all soils, but in the ordinary way they are not readily available. RITO, by energizing the soil bacteria, is calculated to make the phosphates and potash available for the plant. It also stimulates the nitrogen-fixing bacteria into action, so that the consequent development is out of all proportion to its analysis.

RITO takes the place of farmyard manure, or it may be used in conjunction with farmyard manure or any recognized artificials. RITO is free from weed seeds, spores and germs, and from the eggs or larvae of noxious insects.

It is well known that the soil is not a dead inert mass of matter, but that it teems with bacteria, which only need to be treated properly to be called into activity. There are millions in every spadeful of soil.

RITO may be used in the open or under glass.

What RITO Users Say:--

"I used RITO in the soil for my Tomatoes this year. The result was the best crop I ever had, and I started picking two to three weeks earlier than usual from seed sown same date as previous years."

A market gardener says that his RITO-treated lettuce were ready for the market a month before the untreated ones, with the result that the treated ones brought 2s. 6d. per dozen and the untreated ones, when they were ready for the market, brought 1s. per dozen.

"I tried RITO last year on Potatoes, and they yielded 30 per cent better than those not treated."

"Every ounce of fruit from both the treated and the untreated Tomatoes has been gathered and carefully weighed. The weight of fruit gathered from the treated portions averaged just five times the amount as from the untreated portion."

"I have used RITO in the Peach Houses, and find that it greatly improved both the quality of the fruit and also the growth. I also find RITO very good if used when mixing soil for potting various plants, and I have also used it on my Vines with excellent results."

"I have pleasure in testifying to the merits of RITO. It is 'Right Ho' and no mistake. I never saw Tomatoes do so well as when your RITO was applied as a top-dressing mixed with the soil; the roots the plants made in this way were extraordinary, and the crops correspondingly good. The same applies to Cucumbers, also Chrysanthemums and to plants generally. It seems to consume the moisture, hence less watering is required."

"RITO treated Chrysanthemums made a much quicker and better start than they have usually done—in fact, the plants show a great improvement."

RITO is packed in double bags, and the price is 17/6 per 100 lbs., free on board Liverpool. Terms—Cash with order.

Please address your orders at once to The Molassine Company, Ltd., East Greenwich, London, England.

CARNATIONS STILL GOOD PROPERTY.

Business was somewhat quiet all during last week, consequently stock accumulated to such an extent that considerable pushing was needed to move certain items, even in quantity lots at reduced prices. Roses in general are more plentiful, but are cleaning up fairly well, considering the market conditions, although prices have dropped to a large extent on most offerings in this line with the possible exception of one or two varieties. Some of the finest American Beauty roses offered in this market at this time of the year are available now and are attracting the attention of the city buyers. Mrs. Chas. Russell of splendid quality are also included in the daily shipments in larger numbers. Carnations continue to be good property, and it is surprising how well they hold up in price, considering the low quotations sent out by some of the houses to outside points. Lilies and callas are to be had in fair sized quantities at times, but are not overplentiful. Orchids, sweet peas, gardenias, violets, daisies, stocks, snapdragons, forget-me-nots, calendulas, mignonette, freesias, tulips, jonquils, pansies, lily of the valley, gladioli and other miscellaneous seasonal stock are on the bill of fare. The street fakirs are busy again, which is surprising, considering the agreement between practically all the retailers and wholesalers. Upon investigation, it was found that the peddlers bought most of the stock from South Water street commission men who received several shipments of southern jonquils. The growers have organized, and no doubt all branches of the trade will be able to work together along some lines, and in time eradicate some of the objectionable features which have been the bone of contention for many years. Publicity will do much to bring the various florists together, and according to all those who have heard of the proposed next campaign, it will fill a long felt want, and will do much toward making new flower buyers in this city. Business so far this year has been good and away ahead of 1918, which of course everyone expected, owing to the trouble the growers experienced in securing coal to meet their needs last year, and which naturally cut down the production then to some extent. You hear now and then that we are due for a period of hard times, but it appears that the florists are all from the "show-me" state, for they are making big preparations to come in for their share of the harvest when the next wave of prosperity spreads over the entire country, which all the optimists agree is already on its way.

NOTES.

At Zech & Mann's store, March 17, 1919, has been placed on record as a hoodoo day because everything went dead wrong from the minute the doors opened. To start the day with Mrs. Allie Zech underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Chicago Union hospital, which kept Allie away from the store. The packer took sick on the same day and failed to show up, and to make affairs still worse one of the large trucks which bring the stock in from the greenhouses broke down and did not reach the city until late in the afternoon. Fortunately all the shipping orders were gotten out in time and the latest reports from the hospital are to the effect that Mrs. Zech is doing very nicely and will probably be able to receive visitors this week.

N. J. Wiator, of Wiator Bros., called the writer's attention this week to the death of Hubbard Hansen, who was formerly in the florist business here, having had quite a good sized carnation range in Rosehill.

WHOLESALE FLORISTS

160 N. Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

Paul Amling is batching it at Des Plaines, where he is looking after the range that his brother Ernest and he bought recently from Hoerber Bros. Some of his friends are jollying him about being engaged, but while he admits this is not true, he would probably not have any serious objection if the right young lady happened to cross his path. His friends in the trade have all agreed that he must join the ranks of the benedicts in the near future, so do not be surprised if you hear the tinkling of the wedding bells.

The Florists' Club will surely have plenty of material for a couple of baseball teams, if all who have signified their intention of playing, report for practice. Why not have a florists' league? The growers, retailers, wholesalers and allied trades surely ought to be able to get a team together.

Chas. Erne says that while there was a good call for green carnation dye at Erne & Co.'s store this year, the demand was not as strong as last season, which he attributes in part to the fact that many of the young men are still abroad with the colors.

H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is back from a business trip to Florida, and is again attending to his duties at the store.

F. G. Berry has opened a new retail store at 850 West Seventy-ninth street under the name of the Ideal Florist.

E. F. Winterson, Sr., is one of the directors of the Chicago Amateur Athletic League, Inc., with headquarters at 108 South La Salle street, and his son, E. F. Winterson, Jr., is a member of the advisory board. This league is launched, born for a good purpose, is absolutely non-political and has sufficient money behind the proposition to make it a big success. All the directors are required to do is show results, secure a membership of sufficient numbers to assure the philanthropic backers that they are on the right road, James A. Pugh is president. One of the league's placards reads: "It is up to you boys to send in your application; it does not cost you any initiation fee or dues, and gives you a membership absolutely free, a place to spend your leisure hours at something that will benefit you and fit you for the battles of life. We advise you to take advantage of your offer.

The Alpha Floral Co. had an order to deliver a horseshoe floral design to a funeral this week, which bore a card on which was written: "From your loving wife and children." This is the first time that Andrew Chronis ever filled an order of this kind, since he has been in the florist business, and that covers a great many years.

Charles Rogers, of the Washington Floral Co., 76 West Washington street, says that a similarity in the names of several of the retail stores is causing him much annoyance, and asks the wholesalers to be careful in the future so that no goods ordered by anyone else will be charged to him.

Walter Stocklos has opened a wholesale store in the Atlas building in the room formerly occupied by Archie Spencer. He is no stranger to the trade, having been employed in the local market for a number of years.

L. R. Finnermann, of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co., celebrated his twenty-fifth birthday, March 15. He received a beautiful Japanese hand-carved diamond set ring from his business associate, Morris Grossberg.

Growers of plants and cut flowers for the local market are invited to attend a meeting at the Randolph hotel, this city, March 27, at 8 p. m., with a view to organization for the betterment of the trade.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are more than pleased with business, the total sales so far this year being very encouraging, especially for this month, which was extra good last year on account of Easter.

Percy Jones, Inc., reports an increasing demand for supplies, which is a big item with this house. The shipping trade is keeping up remarkably steady at this busy establishment.

So far, the young ladies in the trade have done nothing to organize a ladies' florist club, although there has been much talk along this line for some time.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department is prepared for the Easter rush, and everything points to a brisk trade for the early demand is most satisfactory.

Harry C. Rowe says the business at his new store, 67 East Madison street, has been quite satisfactory since the formal opening, March 15.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. had a big day March 14, when eight new out-of-town customers were added to their list.

W. K. Wilson, of Columbus, O., was in the city this week, buying stock for his newly remodeled retail store.

The local florists are seriously considering conducting an advertising campaign in the elevated cars.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The Gaup Greenhouses are to be remodeled at a cost of about $1,200.

Chicago Growers Organizing.

A committee on organization consisting of Walter A. Amling, chairman; Robert Windler, Peter Pearson, Joseph Kohout and Otto H. Amling, appointed at a recent general meeting, has prepared a report proposing an organization of all growers of plants and cut flowers who market their product in Chicago, and at a meeting which has been called for 8 o'clock on the evening of March 27 at the Randolph hotel, Randolph and Wells streets, Chicago, will recommend a constitution for adoption. That a thorough discussion of all questions involved may come before the meeting, the committee urges that all growers who ship stock to the Chicago market attend, and give the benefit of their experience and observation, as the committee in preparing its recommendations, has kept in mind the fact that this is to be an association whose endeavors shall be for the best interests of all growers in this territory.

J. F. Ammann, president of the Society of American Florists, who worked with the committee at its first meeting, and to whom its indebtedness is acknowledged for many of the recommendations made, is expected to be present at the coming meeting and aid in every way possible in the interests of the organization.

EXCELLENT SUPPLY FINDS READY SALE.

Mid-lenten business is surprisingly good. The attractiveness of the great variety of flowers and plants now available, seems irresistible to the flower lovers, who seem as numerous as ever, notwithstanding the deterring element of advanced prices over those of the corresponding time last year. In cut flowers, sweet peas are conspicuous for their number, quality and popularity, and prices are satisfactorily sustained. Roses are more plentiful and some recession in prices is noted, particularly in the better grades. Carnations find ready sale, and the finer blooms easily command the prices prevailing earlier in the season. Violets have suffered some in popularity, due chiefly to the excellent sweet peas that are competitive to them.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the florists' club was held at the Statler hotel, March 12. It was a representative meeting of 30 members. W. S. Wells, formerly an officer of the St. Louis Florists' Club, and now one of the faculty of the University of Michigan, gave an address on "Relation of Man as a Hybridizer." He spoke most interestingly on a subject seldom touched upon in our club meetings, and treated as it was, stripped of unfamiliar and technical language, it was very instructive. The talk suggested many inquiries from the members, all of which were ably answered. Harry Breitmeyer surprised the members by the really clever manner he treated the subject assigned to him for the evening of his experience in khaki overseas. He began with the period of his enlistment and took his audience with him in detail throughout the whole of his year of work in the ordnance department of the army until his happy return to the bosom of his family. Harry's initial talk to the club members indicated his ability to be but little less than that of his father, who can always be relied upon to interest florists. The announcement at the meeting of the death, the day previous, of Mrs. E. A. Scribner was received with profound sorrow, and the president was requested to convey to ex-President Scribner the deep sympathy of the club. A floral emblem was also ordered sent to the bereaved home, and as a further mark of respect all agreed to attend the funeral, which was held March 14. Resolutions of regret were adopted following the announcement of the recent death of W. J. Stewart, who had many warm personal friends here. Action upon the federal quarantine act, now disturbing florist circles everywhere, was deferred till after more is learned definitely of the threatened dangers attending the indiscriminate importation of foreign grown stock. House bill No. 97, introduced in the legislature of this state, and deemed by some inimical to the interests of florists, was upon close scrutiny found to be even favorable to florists, and everyone having installed heating apparatus, and florists' opposition to it ceased after this reliable information was received. Publicity scheduled for discussion embraced local and national work and led to the appointment of A. Pochelon, E. A. Fetters and W. A. McLaughlin, as a permanent committee to carry into effect the most effective means of raising a fund for the purpose of dispensing the same to the greatest advantage. In the hands of this able committee, we may well look for the maximum of results. The Garden Club, composed of ladies devoting much time and effort to out-door bulb culture, particularly tulips, will give their annual exhibition in the Hotel Statler in May and will have, at their solicitation, the cooperation of this club, and to that end a committee was appointed, consisting of E. A. Fetters, Harry Breitmeyer, A. Pochelon and Chas. Plumb. The same committee, with Philip Breitmeyer added as chairman, will cooperate with the American Peony Society, which will hold its annual meeting and exhibition in this city June next, the exact date not yet determined. It was announced at the meeting that the American Gladiolus Society desires to meet here next August, simultaneously with the meeting of the Society of American Florists, and if practical, to have its exhibition in conjunction with that of the latter society. The consummation of this idea will be determined after Philip Breitmeyer's conference with Secretary John Young at New York, March 20.

OVERSUPPLY OF BULBOUS STOCK FEARED.

Business continues fairly good, despite the Lenten season, with a considerable call for funeral work. Stock is plentiful and meets all requirements. The bulbous supply, if it continues to come in as heavily as it promises at present, will become a burden to the market. Sweet peas are in heavy cut but seem to move well. Roses of all kinds are of very good quality. Ophelia being the most prominent in point of supply. Callas were equal to all demands and hold up well in price. Greens are plentiful in all varieties.

FLORIST CLUBS' PUBLICITY MEETING.

The March meeting of the florists' club will go down in history as one of the best ever held in this city, both in point of attendance and work accomplished. The organization as a whole endorsed the "Milwaukee plan" of raising funds for advertising purposes, which more than likely will be adopted by the local publicity committee. The committee, which served last year made a final report of the finances and a resume of the work which was accepted and made a part of the club records. During the year ending February 1, 1919, the report showed the cash received during the 12 months amounted to $2,254.08, of which $1,164.35 was spent for advertising in six local newspapers, while incidental expenses amounted to $652.57, including $201 for street car advertising, leaving a balance on hand of $437.16. The committee as announced by President Hummert, who will serve during the ensuing year, is composed of A. H. Hummert, L. Jules Bourdet and J. J. Bencke, representing the florists' club; Wm. C. Smith, H. G. Berning and F. A. Windler, for the wholesalers; W. A. Rowe, W. J. Pilcher and A. S. Cerny for the growers, and F. C. Weber, C. C. Young and J. J. Windler for the retailers. An interesting feature of the meeting was a flower show on a small scale, among the exhibitors being W. A. Rowe, with snapdragons and jonquils; A. S. Cerny, very fine Ophelia roses; O. C. May, sweet peas; Joseph Hauser, extra fine violets; Woodlawn Gardens, of Edwardsville, Ill., White Enchantress and Enchantress Supreme carnations; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., vases of Rose Prima Donna and Carnation Laddie; Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., vase of their new carnation, Ruth Baur, which was awarded a certificate of merit; W. J. Edwards, vase of Washington carnations.

After the meeting, a sumptuous luncheon was served by Mrs. Bourdet and our genial friend, who were the hosts. The two attendance prizes awarded by President Hummert and H. G. Berning, were won by F. C. Weber, Jr., and Joseph Hauser.

Rochester Florists' Association.

The March meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, held at its rooms, 95 East Main street, showed that the members are still anxious to keep alive the co-operative spirit. The deepest regret was shown on account of the resignation as president of Harry E. Bates. During the short time he had been our presiding officer, a different spirit had manifested itself along all lines, and we feel that with his departure, much of the good he had planned for our association has been delayed. With befitting remarks, he turned the gavel over to Vice-President Geo. T. Boucher with his promise of continued interest, and said that although his residence was to be in Albany, his spirit would continue with the many friends he had found here. After the preliminary business had been transacted, Wm. De Graff, a prominent local attorney, was introduced by John Dunbar, and the members listened to a very interesting talk on "The League of Nations," from which we gathered that the universal spirit of brotherhood should manifest itself in our dealings with our former allies and foes. So interested were the members, that it is probable that Mr. De Graff will be asked to give another talk in the future. A rising vote of thanks was unanimously given him. C. B. Ogsten, of the Kimball Conservatories, followed with a short talk on the many useful ways that cut blooms of the lœlia could be utilized. He showed many fine specimens grown by him, and asked that the average grower interest himself in the propagating and handling of these plants. The speaker said that the ease with which the lœlia could be started, grown and flowered, puts it in a class, so that the ordinary grower should have no hesitancy in adding a collection to his greenhouse stock.

A vote was taken at this meeting, which decided that the regular meeting night shall be changed from the second Monday to the second Friday of each month. The next meeting, however, will occur on the third Friday, inasmuch as the regular date comes so near the Easter rush.

Vice-President Geo. T. Boucher appointed John Dunbar, Fred Schlegel and Geo. B. Hart a committee to nominate a vice-president and report at next meeting.

A. H. SECKER, Sec'y.

Columbus, O.

EASTER SHORTAGE SEEN.

Conditions have been favorable for early maturing of spring flowers, which prevents what would otherwise be a shortage of stock. Funeral work is again very heavy, owing largely to a return of the influenza epidemic, and florists are being worked overtime. Sweet peas are falling below demand, but the new crop will be available in about two weeks. There is good sale on all kinds of pot plants, with prospect that the supply will be exhausted long before the usual time. This is due to the inability of growers to get adequate volume of bulbs and cuttings. This handicap will be felt in other stock later on, particularly in rambler roses. From the present outlook, flowers will be scarce and high at Easter.

NOTES.

Herman Kropp, proprietor of the Cottage Rose Garden, will open a flower shop in the lobby of the Niel House, the lease having been just closed. It is proposed to put in handsome fixtures.

SUPPLY FAIRLY SATISFACTORY.

Stock was more plentiful last week than it has been for some months, although there is still a shortage of carnations, and sweet peas are limited somewhat on account of the cloudy weather. With these exceptions, the supply was satisfactory, but there was no surplus in any line, as the demand has been extremely active in funeral work. Attractive window displays were staged for St. Patrick's day, in which a wealth of bulbous flowers was generously used. Roses in general are of excellent quality, and the quantity is equal to demand. Blooming plants continue to sell well, and the supply is varied and large.

NOTES.

Ed. Wenninghoff sent out several handsome basket covers of Russell roses and lilies last week. All hands were kept busy every evening getting out the funeral work. St. Patrick's day novelties went well at this store.

A large harp of green immortelles was the center of a striking St. Patrick's day window at the store of the Flick Floral Co. Kiddies, and shamrocks were also featured, also a fine display of bulbous stock.

I. M. Bayersdorfer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was a visitor last week. His reports are very optimistic regarding business throughout the country.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The feature of the monthly exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held in Horticultural hall, Boston, March 8, was the wonderful display of orchids of great beauty, many of rare varieties, staged by the Albert C. Burrage estate, Prides Crossing, the value of the exhibit being estimated at $25,000. One, especially appropriately named, is the Star of Bethlehem, with flowers of white which stood out in strong contrast to the others which surrounded it. There was also a profuse showing of cattleyas, prominent in which was Trianae. Frank J. Dolansky, of Lynn, orchid specialist, also displayed six fine specimens of Cattleya Trianae alba. One of the big attractions of the show was a large white azalea with more than 500 buds and blooms, staged by the W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverly.

While the orchid display outshone everything else in the hall, there was an excellent showing of fruits and vegetables, which included a table devoted to the Japanese crane from Hillcrest Farm, Weston, Mass., the root of which was shown cut into strips and fried for use as food, and also in plant form.

Horticultural Society of New York.

Do not forget the spring show to be held at the American Museum of Natural History, March 28-30. There will be no big show at the Grand Central Palace this year, so it is possible to devote all energies to make the show at the American Museum a great success. Schedules will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, Mansion, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

Philadelphia.

MARKET CLEANS UP FAIRLY WELL.

The market still contains a good assortment of stock, although some items are shortening up, notably carnations and sweet peas. Roses are a trifle ahead of the demand, there being very good stock, particularly in the lower grades that are seen in increasing quantities on the curb stands. American Beauties are good stock in the special grade, bringing 75 cents to $1 each. Shorter stock and culls go at low figures to the street merchants. Cattleyas are more plentiful; there is a demand that takes them all at top figures.

Snapdragons are a factor, being seen in all the shops and the quality is fine. Iris Tingitana is now at its best. This is a beautiful flower but not quite so much in demand as it will be, when better known. Very good larkspur is seen. Like the iris, it has declined considerably in price, but both still command good figures. Callas are a quantity stock, but all move off at very good prices, 20 per cent less than the high mark of the winter. Giganteums and Bermudas are becoming scarce and prices are good. Bulbous stock is in excellent supply, but seems to clean up daily. There are excellent Emperor daffodils. The first outdoor daffodils from the south arrived this week, but they are small and cheap. Florida gladioli are also on the market, of the variety, America. It is good, but quite light in color. Sweet peas are off a little in price as the stems grow shorter, but carnations hold to last week's figures. Commission houses are well satisfied with business, as while prices are a shade lower on the average, yet there is no backing up, the market clearing out at fine returns.

March 17.—The light snow and chilly days of the week end have been succeeded by summer weather, overcoats today being a burden. Receipts were large in nearly all lines, but prices were well maintained, owing to the usual Monday stocking up demand. White carnation sold well for greening up for Paddy's day.

EASTER PROSPECTS.

There is but one quantity product, and that is the hydrangea; almost everything else is going to be shy. Cold storage Easter lilies are turning out surprisingly good, the only difficulty being that so few had the faith to plant these forlorn hopes. Most of the stocks look as if they would average two flowers to the bulb, which is about all there is going to be credited to the Bermuda 5-7 stock. The few thousand Azores are carrying from three to six flowers. The plants are vigorous and strong. Prices of pot plants appear to be set at 35 cents per flower, and it is thought the cut stock will not fall far short of this figure. One prominent grower in this vicinity has 100,000 bulbs, cold storage giganteums, which are in splendid shape, and look to average at least two flowers. These are being timed to hit Easter week, when he will have the whole country for his market. There are possibly 5,000 spiraea in this market, which should find ready sale. Several growers invested heavily in tea roses, forcing stock that was taken from the tables last spring. Ophelia, Sunburst and American Beauty are the three varieties, which grown on last summer in pots, are now coming strong and should make Easter with quantities of flowers. Bulbous stock is a mystery. So much depends on the weather; a warm or cool April means failure or success.

NOTES.

The Robert Craig Co. made an important purchase, which will strengthen their already large Easter stock. They have bought the entire stock of Zeiger & Sons' rambler and tea roses, an especially fine lot of plants in various sizes, which are timed just right for the holidays. In addition, there was also a 1,000 lot of improved large flowered Bellis daisies, Longfellow type, which, with their mammoth flowers, should make a fine Easter novelty. Practically three-fourths of the Easter stock of all Philadelphia growers has been sold. New buyers are meeting with slight success; their eagerness to purchase keeps prices up to record figures.

The Ritz Flower Shop window was very tastefully arranged with boxes of tulips, vases of snapdragons, cattleyas, Gloriosa fern and forsythias. The inside large flower case had as a background southern magnolia bunches with their huge glossy leaves. All the standard flowers were artistically placed in the case, many of the large vases containing a four-inch pot of Gloriosa fern hidden in the vase with the flowers and holding them in place. The general effect of this lovely green is fine.

Some of the retailers are protesting about the high prices of Easter lilies for Easter delivery; 33 cents per bloom appears to be the standard with all growers, while the Azores that are making a splendid showing, may go as high as 50 cents. Lilies will be lilies this year.

One Germantown grower handled 1,000, 5-7 Bermuda Easter lilies to good advantage. They were grown in 4-inch pots on narrow boards over an asparagus bed and were all cut out by March 10.

Charles Henry Fox's Saturday window, with its violet special, was very nicely arranged. A fringe of violet ribbon ties made a pretty background for the bunches.

The Century Shop is handling the variegated funkia, which, with its conspicuously striped and mottled white and green leaves, is very showy.

SLOW MOVEMENT WITH FALLING PRICES.

Business was very quiet during the past week, with a slow movement in stock and declining prices. The best special American Beauty roses dropped to 50 cents, wholesale, and there were sales of long stemmed stock from 40 cents to the above figure. Violets were poor property; a few of the best went for 50 and 60 cents per 100, but a good many were lost, there being little demand for inferior stock, the street men taking about all that were disposed of. At the last of the week, there was a little flurry in white carnations on account of the demand for dyeing for St. Patrick's day, and the price went up to $8 per 100, but other colors did not go above $6. The preference for spring flowers continued, which with the above exception, caused roses and carnations to move slowly. Shamrocks, of which there were quantities on the market, sold well. The weather turned colder with flurries of snow, March 14, and continued cloudy and threatening up to the 16th.

March 17.—Aside from the usual stocking up process, business is quiet, roses and carnations hanging on. As a matter of form we quote violets, but in fact there are no fixed prices on them. They can be had by the box at about any figure the peddlers will offer, and they never bid high. The weather continues damp and foggy, which is not good for business. A number of the retailers arranged elaborate window decorations in honor of St. Patrick's day, which is a good idea from a commercial viewpoint, and doubtless helped their business.

FLORIST CLUB'S ANNUAL DINNER.

The thirty-second annual dinner of the florists' club was held at the Hotel Biltmore on the night of March 15. There are fashions in dinners as well as in dinner costumes, and the proper term for affairs of this kind is now "dinner-dance." The large ball or banquet room of the hotel is well adapted to such events, there being room for the tables around the walls, leaving ample space for dancing in the centre; thus dancing was kept up, with only short intermissions, throughout the evening. President Kessler, of the club, had at his table, Prof. White, of Cornell University; Rich G. Hollman, of the International Exposition Co.; H. Smith, of the Wholesalers' Protective Association, and Tax Commissioner Sinnott, of this city. As souvenirs, each of the menu cards carried a photograph of President Kessler. The hall was finely decorated with the national colors; the tables with pink roses, carnations, irises, pansies, etc. Among the speakers were President Kessler, Rich G. Hollman, Prof. White, H. Smith and Charles Schenck, who as a token of appreciation of his labors as the late president of the club, was presented by the members with a handsome silver tea-set. The presentation speech was by Mr. Hollman, Mr. Schenck making a happy reply. A feature of the floral decorations was a large vase of the new pink rose, Frank W. Dunlop, presented by its originator, John H. Dunlop, of Toronto, Canada. This rose is the result of a cross of the well known varieties, Mrs. George Shawyer and Mrs. Charles Russell. The dinner-dance was well attended and a most successful affair. Out of town guests in attendance were: John H. Dunlop, and wife, Toronto; Richard Vincent

NOTES.

In a campaign to unite art and industry, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in an alliance with the New York Botanical Gardens, opened in a room of the Museum, March 15, a combined exhibition of classical floral ornaments with exhibits of natural flowers from the botanical gardens. Dr. W. A. Murrill, assistant director of the gardens, was in charge of the exhibit, and on the opening day spoke of the floral resources that are available for designers. Among the plants and flowers in the exhibit were palms, the papyrus, lilies, irises, roses, and others. In his talk Dr. Murrill said that designers could study both form and color in plants and flowers to advantage. Mrs. Elizabeth G. Britton, wife of Director N. L. Britton, of the gardens, who is honorary curator of mosses at the gardens, made an address, advising the greater use of natural and native flowers as patterns. Dr. Murrill remained in charge of the exhibit until its close, March 20.

Samuel Redstone, who for a number of years was prominently connected with the trade of this city and vicinity, but for the past two and a half years has been in England, arrived in this city, March 7. He has made connection with the firm of John Scheepers & Co., and will be their representative on the road.

John H. Dunlop's new rose has been named for his uncle, Frank W. Dunlop, a resident of Brooklyn. To borrow a horticultural term, John H. "originated" in that borough. We understand that this rose will be disseminated in this country in 1920.

Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., stopped over for a few hours, March 12, on his way to "The Lady of the Snows," (Canada) on a business trip.

William Stuart Allen, the well known wholesaler, who has been seriously ill for some weeks, is slowly improving.

Brooklyn, like Manhattan, has its Broadway, and although as a business thoroughfare, it is marred by an elevated railroad, it has a number of attractive retail flower stores. On the two streets it has a plate glass frontage of about 75 feet and the interior is handsomely furnished.

police at Anton, France; the other, Charles Dewey Feldman, is with the United States medical corps post hospital, N. C., but is expected home soon.

Martin Grotewahl, who has a retail store at 227 Reid avenue, Brooklyn, was formerly a grower and stands for natural flowers. During the times of highest prices, he was a constant buyer in the New York market and he frowns on schemes to push artificial stock.

Julius H. Zschorna, who has a retail store at 625 DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn, is not, strictly speaking, an old man, but he has been many years in the business and has a fund of interesting reminiscences of bygone days.

The store at 526 Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, formerly conducted by Wm. Frank, has been bought by A. Gilas, who with his wife, is conducting it under the name of the "American Beauty Florist."

Joseph Trepel has two stores on Broadway, Brooklyn, and five others in different parts of that borough. Regardless of high prices, he says he has no reason to complain of the season's business.

LITCHFIELD, ILL.—During the week ending March 1, the Cottage Greenhouses, under the management of R. A. McPherson, marketed 1,000 lilies at top prices.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Cuyahoga Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000 by A. R. Keyser and others.

GEORGETOWN, ILL.—R. L. Burgoyne, well known florist, and one of this city's prominent citizens, is seriously ill at his home, suffering from the after affects of influenza.

CHARLOTTE, MICH.—Joseph Gansbiller and wife, of Indiana Harbor, Ind., have purchased the Ferndale Greenhouses here, formerly operated by W. E. Gorman, but which have been closed during the winter owing to wartime conditions.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendell, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June, 1919.

THE International Harvester Co. is perfecting a sugar beet planter.

FRENCH BULB dealers report British are buying Roman hyacinth bulbs freely.

MAIL order seed trade for the first 10 days of March was below that of last year.

"TOP SOIL" is the title of E. C. Vick's 16-page planting supplement in the New York Sunday Sun of March 16.

ALPENA, MICH.—A. L. Rogers left last week for the Idaho growing station, stopping off at Detroit and Chicago.

BURLINGTON, IA.—The business of the late N. J. Burt will be continued by his son, N. S. Burt, under the old style and title, N. J. Burt & Co.

PEA GROWERS operating in Idaho are having trouble in getting farmers to plant their seed stocks. The farmers are planting sugar beets and wheat.

RED CLOVER SEED has been removed from the export conservation list, effective March 17, says an announcement of the war trade board.—B. F. L.

THE claim is made that Sweden and Denmark planted Dutch tulip bulbs freely to take the place of cut flowers formerly shipped in from southern France.

ONION SETS.—A southern Cook county, Illinois, local paper expresses the opinion that independent growers will continue their plantings, even if losers on sets carried over on speculation.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Geo. C. Thomson, of Northrup, King & Co., fell March 18 in a sudden attack of illness on the firm's premises and was taken to the hospital in a serious condition.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade March 19 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds. Medium red clover made a record price for this year at $28.25 per bushel.

VICTOR MURDOCK, a member of the federal trade commission, has told the house Interstate commerce commission that he fears the five big packers have acquired so much power that even the United States government will not be strong enough to combat it.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover market closed stronger March 17, at $27.25, registering a gain of 80 cents during the preceding seven days. March was quoted at $27.25 and April at $22.50. Timothy was 10 cents lower, cash being offered at $4.90, March $4.95, April $4.95, May, $4.90 and September $5.55.

THE Dutch Bulb Growers' Association, not satisfied with the strenuous conditions laid down last year for the American importer, has without investigating conditions here, decided that for the fall of 1919, they will reduce the percentage for cash payment from three to two per cent. The Dutch need the extra penny. The margin in prices between consumers and jobbers is only about 15 per cent.

Non-Warranty Clause.

STILL TRYING TO KILL IT.

Still another one wants to dodge the non-warranty clause with all that it has been made to mean to himself and the seed trade generally.

This is what a new mail order house in Texas says to its customers:

"A stringless guarantee of satisfactory seeds or money back, just as given in our regular catalogue, is a condition of every sale. You are made judge and jury of your own satisfaction. We allow you to keep the seeds 10 days after arrival at your station for examination and test. If you decide that the seeds are not satisfactory you return them to us and we refund your money and pay freight both ways, without 'ifs or ands' or questions asked. Have been in the seed business 16 years on this guarantee. This is as fair and liberal as we know how to be."

Northrup, King & Co.

At a meeting of the stockholders of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., held March 17, Edwin B. Northrup, secretary, tendered his resignation, which was accepted. Two more were added to the directorate, C. A. Burnham and George C. Thomson. The directors elected the following officers: C. C. Massie, president; L. M. King, vice-president and treasurer; C. A. Burnham, secretary.

Mr. Burnham is sales manager, and has been connected with Northrup, King & Co. for 16 years, filling within that period several positions, including office manager, credit manager and advertising manager.

Mr. Thomson is manager of the garden seed department and has been identified with the firm for the past 11 years. He has had long experience in the seed business, both in this country and in Scotland, covering a period of 35 years.

Horticultural Hobbies.

George C. Watson, in the Gardeners' Chronicle, writes of Dr. Harris, an old-time Philadelphian who traveled in Persia and the near East some 40 or 50 years ago: "His hobby was collecting the cucurbitacea, which includes our cucumbers, canteloupes, watermelons, and so forth. He brought home with him thousands of samples of good things—many of them having since got into commerce through live business wires like the late W. Atlee Burpee, who found there his Burpee's Netted Gem muskmelon, which has since become still more famous as the Rocky Ford cantaloupe. That sounds rather remarkable, doesn't it? That the melon that has made the state of Colorado famous should have been gathered in Persia 50 years ago by a Philadelphian with a hobby, and was given to the world by an enterprising Philadelphia business man who was an enthusiast and a hobbyist, besides being a business man—and Colorado had little to do with it except having a good climate for melons! Almost like a romance, really."

New York Seed Trade.

Gardeners coming in from private estates, report that the robins have arrived and frogs are croaking, both being harbingers of spring. There was a flurry of snow, March 14, which in an ordinary winter—or spring—would attract little attention, but this has been a season extraordinary for its mild weather. It therefore seems that the seed business is having an earlier revival than in many former years. At all the seed stores, so far as we have seen, there is greatly increased activity in counter trade. Seeds of all vegetables are in demand, as well as aster and other flower varieties. In addition to the regular customers, the amateurs or "commuters," are showing a lively interest, evidenced by the activity in the stores near the railroad terminals.

Grain Supply.

The visible supply of corn is 4,483,000 bushels. Only once since 1881 has it been smaller and the average the past five years is over 21,000,000. Fortunately there is a good supply of oats, both on farms and in second hands, the visible being twice that of last year. To a certain extent this grain will supplement corn. There is now approximately 250,000,000 bushels of wheat in first and second hands to last us until July 1, besides the "invisible" supply, and stocks of flour. Domestic consumption in four months to the next harvest would be about 150,000,000 bushels and seed 30,000,000. A month ago the head of the Grain Corporation testified that the food administration was committed to shipment of 165,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour as wheat to Europe by the end of June. Total requirements, therefore, if filled in full, will leave little or no reserve of old wheat. This fact, of course, even with the price officially fixed, has its bearings on other cereals.

Seed Interchange in Ohio.

An interchange of flower seeds, involving some 45 varieties, is now being made by the 23 Ohio state institutions. A greenhouse having a surplus of any varieties sends the same in small packages to the general board of administration, which makes redistribution to suit individual needs. It is estimated that $1,000 worth of flower seeds are thus exchanged. The same policy is to be applied next year to vegetables in the hope of cutting down the $10,000 expended each year for seeds on the open market.

Pinto Beans.

In cowboy vernacular, "pinto" means a broncho of a piebald or callico color. The pony is neither better nor worse than others because of his color scheme. In the southwest, home of the pinto, there has developed a bean with the same fancy coloring, and, as the broncho was passing off the stage, it conferred its name upon the bean. The one peculiarity of this bean is that it can go without water, like a camel. Therefore, when last spring it looked as if we were destined to run a close race with famine, large areas of semi-arid regions of the southwest were planted to pintos. They justified the confidence put in them and produced a large crop. But people of the east, who had never seen anything but white beans, would have nothing to do with them. The government is at pains to tell them that, like beauty, pinto's coloring is but skin deep, and at heart it is just like any other bean. Patriots are asked to remember this, and—eat pintos.—Wall Street Journal Straws.

WOOD'S

Famous Southern Ensilage Corns

Wood's Famous Southern Grown Ensilage Corns enable farmers to grow more silage on every acre. For years these corns have enjoyed a splendid reputation for ensilage purposes, particularly in the North and West—making larger and better crops than corns grown in other parts of the country.

The past year was very favorable for curing and maturing. We offer corns cured under natural conditions—unsurpassed in vigorous germination.

"As a Silo Filler It Has No Equal"

—that's what one farmer says about it. An Ohio farmer writes: "It is the best silage corn I ever raised." Another writes: "Some of the strongest land made 100 bushels to the acre."

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President; C. W. Waid, Grand Rapids, Mich., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids, Mich., Treasurer.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—John R. Rattermann, a pioneer market gardener of this city, died March 2 of pneumonia.

FRANK A. KILLEY, "pickle king" of McHenry county, Illinois, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $27,449 and assets $17,623.

POTATO growers in northern Michigan have been asked to join in a movement to form a central buying and selling agency for vegetables and fruits produced in the western part of the state.

THE Phoma stem blight of potato, prevalent in eastern states last summer, will disappear if fertilizer containing two or three per cent potash is used, according to the department of agriculture.

Army Gardens to be Continued.

The success of the farm and garden made last summer at the general army hospital at Lakewood, N. J., has proved so great that similar operations will be undertaken this year not only at that hospital but at the general hospital at East Norfolk, Mass., and many others, the surgeon general of the army has just announced.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, March 18.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $3.25 to $4.00; celery, Florida, crate, $4.75 to $5.00; leaf lettuce, per box, 20 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 50 to 60 cents; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $4.50 to $6.00.

New York, March 17.—Celery (Florida), per case, $2.00 to $4.50; cucumbers, $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $2.00 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 25 to 60 cents; lettuce, per package, $1.50 to $3.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $4.00 to $6.00.

Potato Wart in Pennsylvania.

The potato wart, probably the most destructive of all diseases of that crop, was discovered last fall in 27 cities and villages in three counties in the anthracite coal-mining district of Pennsylvania. It is substantially limited to the potato, although it may attack other closely related plants of the nightshade family. Soil once infected with it remains a source of contagion to future crops of potatoes for six or eight years or longer, even if potato culture be abandoned for such periods. It attacks the tubers and also the stems, causing irregular, watery, outgrowths, beginning in the tender tissues near the eyes and enlarging until the entire tuber may be changed to a black and worthless mass.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture for the period, March 11-18, show liberal shipments with prices irregular, declines including potatoes, onions and celery. In potatoes, the Chicago carlot market remained nearly steady at $1.65-$1.75 for No. 1 northern stock, and various jobbing markets quoted an almost steady range of $1.70-$1.90. Northern producing sections continued about steady, closing at $1.40-$1.50 sacked f. o. b. Minnesota Red River Ohios, sacked, closed rather strong at $1.25-$1.35 f. o. b., Moorhead. Colorado No. 1 sacked whites lost recent gains and closed 10 cents lower at $1.15-$1.20 f. o. b. Southern California Winningstadt cabbage advanced sharply to a range of $40-$50 per ton on account of an active demand. New Florida stock still held at $1.25-$1.50 per 1½ bushel hamper. Northern consuming markets were quoted fairly steady at $1.50-$2.50 per hamper. Old bulk cabbage moved mostly at $33-$40 per ton. Moderate declines appeared in the onion markets. The general range in the east was $3.25-$4 for jobbing sales, and $3-$4.50 in middle-western cities. New York producing sections quoted $3.50-$4 f. o. b. for No. 1 sacked yellow. Florida celery met a limited demand in purchasing sections and closed over $1 lower at $3-$4 per crate f. o. b. California Golden Heart continued fairly steady in consuming markets at $8.50-$11.

Indians Teach Department of Agriculture

Out in Arizona, in a fertile little valley, with great rock walls all around them, lives a tribe—the Havasupai—of Indians that are little known to the outside world, and they know very little of it. Leslie Spier, a member of the staff of the American Museum of Natural History, of New York, has recently visited them. They are "good" Indians, and industrious farmers and vegetable growers. On a little tract, 2½ miles long and about a quarter of a mile wide, they grow enough food to support the tribe, about 175 people. What meat they use, they secure from the wild deer, turkeys, antelope and sheep on the mountain side. The Havasupai live in camps during the summer months along the creek in the midst of their farms. They are expert in raising corn crops. A great many important suggestions concerning the culture of corn have been passed along to the farmers of the United States by the department of agriculture, which has obtained its information from the Indians.

For a long time we have been wondering where the department of agriculture secured so much of its "expert" information. It is stated that the forebears of those Indians have lived in that little walled-up valley for 10 centuries, but that should make no difference. Intelligent advice on farming and gardening would be just as good if it was 20 centuries old.

Rain Destroys Florida Tomato Crops.

Rain, which registered a precipitation of more than eight inches in 24 hours in the vicinity of Miami, Fla., March 14, caused damage of between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 to the winter tomato crop in that section. In Dade and Brevard counties, where the acreage is 7,200, with an estimated yield of 1,600,000 crates, the destruction is reported to be 75 per cent. Less than 10 per cent of the crop had been shipped. The principal movement would have commenced in a few days, the price to growers being $4 per crate.

Pests Carried in Uncleaned Cars.

The possibility of railway cars used for carrying vegetables, fruits and other plant products being the means of distributing noxious insects has been emphasized by recent reports coming to the federal horticultural board, the most striking of these being that of a number of active Colorado potato beetles found at Los Angeles, Calif., in connection with a shipment from Idaho Falls, Ida. The potatoes came from a district where the beetle is not known to exist and investigation disclosed the fact that this car had been loaded in August with potatoes in Colorado, delivered its consignment in Oklahoma, then went as an empty to Kansas City, then to Granger, Wyo., and ultimately to Idaho Falls, where it was loaded with potatoes and sent to Los Angeles, arriving in October. The potato beetles, evidently taken on in numbers in Colorado, in the original shipment, remained during the entire movement. Steps are being taken to secure some action by railroad authorities looking to the cleaning of all such cars at unloading points.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

SPRINGFIELD, N. J.—James Tansey, well known as a landscape gardener, died at his home here, March 2, age 72 years.

BOSTON, MASS.—It has been requested that the park commissioners change the name of Coytemore Lea in Malden to Roosevelt Park.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—Land along the Niagara river may be acquired at a cost of $2,000,000 for the establishment of a memorial park to men who took part in the world war.

MINNEAPOLIS will have a three-mile memorial of her sons who fought in the liberty war, consisting of a drive lined by six rows of American elms. The 1300 budded trees are now 12-14 feet high and 500 are from one parent tree and 800 from a second parent.

Peony Society Bulletin.

We are in receipt of Bulletin No. 7 of the American Peony Society, the important features of which are the proceedings of the society for 1918 and a symposium on a general list of peonies.

Ornamental Stock Leads in Ohio.

A report by E. C. Cotton, chief of the Ohio bureau of horticulture on an inventory of Ohio nursery stock for 1918, shows that ornamental trees and shrubs comprise 52 per cent of the stock, while fruit trees make up only 8.4 per cent of the total. The total number of trees and shrubs, including 3,642,344 strawberry plants, was 21,295,159, of which 11,089,999 were ornamental. Following are items of trees and shrubs: Apple, 697,156; pear, 141,352; peach, 724,744; plum, 78,484; cherry, 123,824; making a total of 1,785,160 fruit trees; grape vines, 658,877; currant bushes, 231,142; gooseberry, 89,874; raspberry, black, 1,600,850; raspberry, red, 912,650; blackberry, 1,034,295; dewberry, 140,300; mulberry, 32,580; nut trees, 55,585. C. J.

Gypsy Moth on Cranberry Vines.

It having been known for some time that gypsy moth larvæ are carried by winds from surrounding forests into cranberry bogs in New England and that the shipment of such vines for planting in other parts of the United States might be a means of wide dissemination of this forest pest, D. M. Rogers in charge of the gypsy moth inspection of the United States department of agriculture was authorized to make inspections of all bogs in Wisconsin, Michigan and Pacific coast points that had received plantings of such vines from New England. His report submitted after a trip last fall is to the effect that he found no indication of the moth in any of the locations inspected. Tests are now being made by the department to determine both the resistance of cranberry vines to intensive fumigation and the strength of fumigation necessary to destroy the eggs.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

President William E. Fisher called the monthly meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society to order at Lake Forest, Ill., March 7. There was a large attendance of members and all were disappointed at the inability of Theo. Koch, of Garfield park, Chicago, to be present, owing to illness in his family. He was to have been the speaker of the evening, and the members hope to hear him at a future date. B. K. McMillan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, gave a very interesting talk on "Insect and Plant Pests and Their Remedies," for which he was given a hearty vote of thanks.

The society decided to hold a mid-summer show in July, and a chrysanthemum exhibition the first week in November, committees being appointed to make both shows greater successes than ever before.

The monthly exhibits were as follows: Iris Tingitana, staged by J. Kiley, 90 points; Cineraria stellata, 89 points, by J. W. Head; also exhibited by J. H. Francis, scoring 88 points; Azalea indica, 87 points, by R. Chalmers. J. Kiley also showed Carnation

Belle Washburn and novelty tulips and T. W. Head was awarded a vote of thanks for double cinerarias. A fine vase of Columbia roses was shown by D. D. P. Roy and was given honorable mention. Ten new members were elected at this successful meeting. J. H. FRANCIS, Cor. Sec'y.

THE CEMETERY GREENHOUSE IN ACTION.

Great Variety of Plants Needed.

The greenhouse establishments connected with the modern cemeteries are called upon to furnish large quantities of plants in greater variety than are usually seen at the greenhouses of the commercial florists in general. There are several reasons for this, the principal one being due to the gardeners having for years studied out and experimented with every plant that has seemed likely to prove valuable and break up the sameness of the plantings. Another reason is the necessity, so far as is possible, of catering to the taste of the lot owners, who get tired of the same plantings on their lots every year, and also a great number like to have theirs planted a little different from the adjoining lots. Still another reason is the officials of the cemetery also get tired of the sameness of the plantings; having a certain plan of arrangement of the cemetery in view, they strive to have the plantings on the lots work in with the general arrangement. To meet these requirements, the gardeners are kept busy working along the plants at most seasons of the year, but more especially at the present time, when the final potting and finishing work has to be given the plants so that they will be in good shape for planting out in May.

Work to Be Done Now.

The benches are now crowded with plants needing potting and space. The best place for a great deal of this stock is out in the hotbeds, which can be brought into use at this time. Most of those now in use are steamheated by being piped under the soil and heated from the greenhouse boiler plants. Before putting any plants into the hotbeds, any repairing that needs to be done, not only to frames and sash, but also to the heating pipes, should be attended to. Valves and pipes in the ground outside that lay idle a great part of the year, are bound to get out of order and need attention before being put into use again, and the best time to make sure that everything is in working order is before the plants are put into the beds. Another important point is to make sure the sash are in good order and any broken glass taken out and replaced with sound panes. The sash should be put on the frames and the heat turned on three or four days to thoroughly warm up the ground before putting in any plants.

Hotbeds are intended more especially for plants in small size pots (2-3 inch) which are plunged to their rims in the soil. The beds need therefore to be spaded up and the soil thoroughly pulverized so that the pots will plunge easily by being pressed down with the hands.

Alternantheras.

These plants are used in large numbers for planting in various styles, and it is always one of the big jobs to work up sufficient stock. They are plants that like lots of heat, and some of the varieties are difficult to carry over winter in a moderate temperature. Owing to this, there are different methods used to carry the stock over from one season to another. Some are propagated in late summer and potted into two-inch pots or flatted up into shallow flats, while another way is to trim back the old plants, flat them up and divide up the roots in the spring to make the young plants. Cuttings can also be propagated between March 1 and April 15 and make good stock for planting out late in May. Alternantheras should go into the hotbeds at once. The plants carried over winter in two-inch pots or flats should have the soil shaken from their roots and potted into two or two and one-fourth-inch pots, according to the size of the plant required. When the plants are used up before very late in June, two-inch pots are found to be plenty large enough, and more of them can be placed in the hotbed. Cuttings now in the propagating bed can be potted as soon as rooted and plunged direct into the beds. The older plants, being treated as divisions, should be cleaned up and divided according to the size of plant required. A fine, light, moderately rich soil, is best suited to these plants. Plunge the pots to their rims in the bed and be particular not to over-water before the plants have become well rooted. Maintain the temperature in the beds between 70 and 80 degrees day and night, and ventilate a little each day during favorable weather.

Echeverias.

These plants are mostly used in connection with alternantheras, but they require just the opposite as regards temperature while in the greenhouse. They need a temperature around 50 degrees, and it would be disastrous to put them into hotbeds. Carried over winter in flats and held a little to the dry side, they are now to be cleaned up, refloated into fresh soil and placed on the shelves in a cool house where they will get the full light.

Geraniums.

April 1 should find all of the geraniums in four-inch pots, and some of the earlier ones are now ready to be spaced out on the benches. They must be given room as soon as the plants commence to touch each other, or they will become drawn in a very short while. The ideal geranium is a short, stocky plant with large trusses of bloom, and the only way to get these is to grow cool. Water moderately, allow each plant ample room and ventilate freely on every favorable occasion. There is getting to be a call more and more each year for larger size geraniums than four-inch pots, so some are being advanced to six, seven and eight-inch pots to fill the demand for the larger size plants.

The Mme. Salleroi type is used principally with the flowering geranium, and large numbers of them have to be provided. They are now being shifted into three-inch pots and given an after treatment similar to the other geraniums. Care should also be taken to give them room as needed, so as to insure sturdy plants.

Coleus and Other Plants.

These plants are rapid growers and the last batch of cuttings are put in the sand the last week in March, which will be worked along into three-inch pots ready for planting the end of May or early in June, the later time being very much the best, for coleus will not stand a drop in temperature, which we often get late in May. They are very susceptible to mealy bug, which are kept in check by frequent syringings with cold water.

Achyranthes, ageratum and pilea are three plants used in large numbers. These are also being given their final shift into three-inch pots, using a light soil as advised for alternantheras. They are best kept on a greenhouse bench and should be given a temperature of 56 degrees.

Verbenas, lobelias and santolinas are other plants grown largely, which will be ready for their final potting into two and one-half-inch pots about April 15 and plunged in a moderate hotbed.

Begonias.

A big stock of begonias has to be provided for. They are very popular plants with the customers, who generally call them wax plants and buy them readily when nicely in bloom in three-inch pots. The varieties of the improved Vernon and luminosa types are the ones most largely used. Some of the plants are started from seed, while others are propagated from cuttings. The seed is slow to germinate during the dark, cold days of January and February, but after the weather becomes warmer, with increased sunshine, the young seedlings grow rapidly. The majority of the plants at the end of March are in two-inch pots and will be shifted into three-inch about the third week of April, which will give them time to be nicely in bloom for the end of May. Begonias are another one of the plants that suffer from cold, chilly weather and are better off if not planted outside before June 1.

The pansy plants carried over winter in cold frames are now beginning to take on new life, and will be ready for sale by the time the Easter flowering plants are out of the way. The January sown plants are now nice, thrifty stock in flats, standing on the greenhouse shelves in full light, ready to be planted in the frames outside in a few days.

A large stock of pot plants in bloom are needed for Easter, including tulips and hyacinths. These will be given plenty of time inside to develop, but Easter, coming late this year, it will not be so much of a problem to hurry them up as it will be to keep them back and have them dwarf and sturdy.

Fuchsias-Heliotrope-Petunias.

These are plants that have a limited demand as compared to some of the others. They are mostly called for in full bloom in four-inch pots and are now being worked along and treated the same as geraniums.

Seedling stocks of petunias, celosias, vinca rosea and small plants of cuphea are used chiefly as fillers in for mixed planting. They are now being worked along in pots or transplanted into flats, the aim being to have a good supply of smaller plants in two and one-half-inch pots for filling in when the time comes for planting out.

Cold Frames.

Wherever bedding plants are grown, cold frames are almost as handy as the hotbeds. After April 20, there are a number of plants occupying greenhouse bench space that can safely be put outside in cold frames.

English ivy, sweet alyssum, lobelias, verbenas, ageratum and Mme. Salleroi can all be safely transferred to the cold frames after the date mentioned, and will be much the better off for it.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Pansies Galore.

In the neighborhood of many of the large cities, truckers or vegetable growers, who use cold frames for some of their crops, nearly all grow pansy plants as a side line. A large vegetable gardener in Collingdale, Pa., who markets his stock in Philadelphia, has increased his venture in pansies from 100 sash, up to 2,500, and now raises annually 250,000 plants.

It is interesting to know that these plants, set out in the frames from the seed beds, during the early part of September, receive no further attention. They are never watered by hand as the season advances. After they have had some good rains, just before danger of hard frost, they are covered with sash. There is no other protection. At times during severe weather, the ground freezes hard, but this does not seem to affect the plants. They came through last year, with its almost record severity, apparently the same as if the weather had been mild.

The seed is sown during July, the young plants being dibbled into the frames 100 to a sash in September. Selling commences about March 1, and continues during April and into May. The plants at the time the photograph was taken, March 19, were of very good size, many showing six to eight shoots, some carrying that many flowers. The flowers are huge, real catalogue giants; three inches in diameter is the rule. Many are three and a half and they have had flowers that measured four, and as much as four and a half when flattened out. All the stock is grown from seed saved from selected plants. The illustrations give but a poor representation of the size or coloring of the flowers. There are also 5,000 giant Bellis daisies, flowers of extraordinary size.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

Keep the outside front of the store as attractive as possible. Every passer-by is a prospect. Many may be flower buyers, but who are satisfied with their present connections; still, they stop to admire and may step in and make a cash purchase. This is a great point gained. They have broken the ice, seen the inside of the store, and will be much more free to call again. There are others who are only casual purchasers, as when flowers are wanted for anniversary occasions, to send to a sick friend or for funerals. To such as these anything that calls attention to the store, and makes a good impression, is seed sown that is likely to bear fruit later on when such occasions arise. One's own experience as to how the attractive looking front and window displays of stores in other lines impress them, is a good guide as to their value in winning trade. The large chain store companies, such as drug, tobacco, five and ten cent stores, etc., attach first importance to the outside appearance of the building and display windows. They locate themselves in the centers of the shopping districts of all the large cities, and by every art of publicity, in attractive and novel signs and constantly changing window decorations, seek to attract the throngs into their stores. The point is, that men of experience attach such great importance to this feature, the outward appearance or street front of the store.

Now that flowers are at their high tide of production, and likely to so continue until the close of the season, a week-end service might be featured to advantage—a $1.50 to $3.00 box of spring flowers, delivered regularly once or twice a week. Some dealers find this a paying proposition, which has only to be called to the attention of certain customers to meet at once with their approval.

Pansies are now at their best. Select a few, a dozen or so of the largest, draw them through a sheet of waxed paper, so that they are flattened out to show their large size, and float on shallow dishes of water. Their apparently large flowers will be sure to attract attention.

Iris Tingitana is one of the most beautiful flowers of recent introduction. It should be shown in choice vases, holding but a few sprays; a dozen huddled together in a jar gives no idea of its beautiful lines. It should be cut and shipped while still in bud, so far advanced as to open the next day. This adds one day to its life of usefulness. It will last in ordinary house temperature from four to five days.

It is well worth while to send just a few choice flowers in a box when returning a receipted bill of an unusual amount to a good customer. Whenever bills are paid in the store, present something to wear, if a lady, and to a gentleman, a boutonniere, or just a few to take home. Such attention is appreciated and it pays.

Feature novelties in flowering plants, an old favorite very well grown, or something only seen occasionally. Such stock can be picked up if one is on the alert for it. The first of the Easter Greeting pelargoniums, hybrid calceolarias, early flowered ramblers, sample hydrangeas, choice cinerarias, etc., are well worth a little extra attention to make them especially attractive. A few such specimens add much to the appearance of the store.

Do not neglect Easter preparations. Every spare hour should be engaged in this work; if this rush season, and its great strain, are constantly kept in mind, the preparatory work will be faithfully attended to. Now is the time to avoid the all night vigils of that coming third week in April.

To keep a couple or more corsages made up, and on show in the case or window, is exploiting a good thing. Many more sales are made when such an artistic nosegay is ready for immediate use. Many a gentleman, accompanying a lady in the store, will present it because of its beauty and the opportunity to use it.

Easter Stock This Year.

From the preparations that are being made, and the large purchases of plant stock by the retail florists, it would appear that the Easter of 1919 will be quite the equal of any that have gone before. There has been much solicitude and doubt as to the quality and quantity of the various items of plant stock. The embargo on Japanese giganteums was a terrible blow, in consequence of which there will not be more than one-fourth the quantity usually grown of this popular Easter plant.

Belgian azaleas, *always such favorites, will be almost entirely missing, although a fair substitute, seen in small quantities, will be nursery grown stock of A. Amena and the Japanese Hinodegiri, which latter is very effective with its closely set, reddish-pink blossoms.

Delayed shipments of spireas were received just in time to make Easter so that there will be about a one-third supply of this favorite. Rhododendrons will also be seen in limited quantity, as quite a lot of these came in at the last, in time for forcing.

The quantity stocks will be hydrangeas and roses, although the latter, particularly well flowered ramblers, are none too plentiful. American Beauties and Ophelia, stock discarded from the forcing benches last spring, which made a growth in pots during the summer, are looking very fine, being well set with buds. Magna Charta is also seen in nearly all rose stocks.

The great standby will be the hydrangeas, of which there is a large stock of the French varieties, which in most cases, look to be well budded. They range in size from plants in four-inch pots with a single head of bloom up to handsome tub specimens. Strange as it may seem, quite a proportion of this stock with some growers failed to set buds, or the plants carry so few that they are unsalable. This is attributed by some to be the result of overfeeding before the growth started. Others claim it is due to continued dry weather when the buds were forming in the late summer. Genistas, with their yellow, tasseled blossoms, will be in good supply. This is one of the best of the Easter plants.

There will be a few candidum lilies, but only about one-tenth of the stock that was ordered, and which, for lack of labor, could not be sent out of France.

Yellow callas will be a novelty grown by quite a number as a pot plant. They are coming a little faster, however, than most growers like.

The great question is: "Will the bulb stock hold for the late date?" Hyacinths and daffodils are now up, out of doors. Much depends on the weather. Some growers are lucky to have a good stock of Easter Greeting pelargoniums, and these will no doubt find a ready market. Cinerarias will be good stock. A number of growers have them very fine. Such well-grown stock will bring big prices in their class. Heather is scarce. It is one of the most desirable flowering plants for basket combinations. Chorizemas, with their orange tints, are very showy. Few growers, however, do them well. The hougainvillea is very showy and decorative. Like the genista, it can be trained to any formal shape, and flower profusely on every shoot.

Marguerites are being grown extensively, some into quite large sizes. When well flowered, they make excellent Easter plants. Bellis daisies, pansies, forget-me-nots and English primroses are all good pan plants, which finish after a week's planting, setting a quantity of bloom. When decorated, these are good sellers in the store and meet the demand of moderate buyers. Zonale geraniums in pans and pots, when well flowered, are satisfactory, but do not last long in the store.

Combinations in pans, birch-bark and trellis boxes and plant baskets of foliage and flowering stock, will add greatly to the variety. Baskets and hampers of foliage and flowering plants, when choice stock is used, are among the most beautiful of the Easter offerings. When well arranged and artistically decorated with fancy ribbons they command high prices. Quite a number of the items generally used for this purpose will be scarce this year, which will have to be helped out by the use of fancy foliage, of which fortunately there is an ample supply.

One of the novelties, of which much is expected, is Delphinium Belladonna, which is being grown as a pot plant for the first time. With its beautiful blue spikes, it should combine beautifully in many of the plant combinations. The gesneria is another novelty. This is a unique looking plant, quite out of the common. Its orange-red, bell-shaped pendant flowers, together with its orange-red, fuzzy-covered stems and orange-tinted foliage, gives it a very striking appearance.

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange's Dinner

St. Patrick's day, this year, was memorable in Detroit, Mich., by reason of the complimentary dinner and dance given that evening to the local florists by the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange. The affair was held at the Hotel Statler, and was highly successful in all its aspects. The invitations to the event included the ladies of the florists' families and there were many of them present. The ball room where the festivities were held, was appropriately decorated, and the tables made cheerful appearing by a lavish display of cut flowers. Nearly 250 guests participated in the most enjoyable affair of the kind in the history of the local trade. The music and dancing and social pleasantries marked the triumph of the extraordinary good will that attaches to the florists in that city as the happy result of the effective work of the florists' club for the past 20 years.

Many were the congratulations extended the management of the Cut Flower Exchange upon the great success of the affair, and the hospitable spirit that prompted that concern to give such substantial evidence of its Breitmeyer addressed the assemblage good will to all in the trade here. Philip in his happy way, and used the occasion to advance the principle of cooperation still further among all engaged in the florist industry. Robert Rahaley, the popular manager of the firm, extended warm words of welcome to all, and congratulated the growers for the satisfactory prices realized the past winter, and paradoxically conveyed the same felicitations to the retailers for gracefully yielding to the necessary demands of the growers. J. F. Sullivan, as president of the florists' club, made a plea to the non-members present to join the club, be beneficiaries of its wholesome work, and prepared to extend a genuine Detroit welcome to the visitors expected to attend the Society of American Florists' convention next August. Albert Schumacher, of the E. A. Fetters force, contributed largely to the entertainment by his singing, which was greatly appreciated, and brought rounds of applause. "Dick" Lynch, the entertainer of local fame, injected much amusement into the affair between the dance numbers. Wm. Harrigan, the well known tenor, rendered several popular airs.

THE ROSE.

March Work is Important.

During March, there are many important things that have to be done in that month, as it is a period of sudden changes in the weather, and often many unusually warm days are ushered in, interspersed with the chilly ones, so it will keep the grower on the jump attending to the ventilating apparatus. And do not neglect this most essential detail; see to it that the houses do not get chilled, or too hot, if you have to attend to the ventilating personally.

Now is also the time to put on a good substantial mulch, and much fresher cow manure can be used at this time as the plants are allowed more air and there is not the danger of loss of foliage from the ammonia fumes as would have been the case a few weeks ago. Although many growers mulch heavily the latter part of February, it is not always the safest plan, unless one has had considerable experience as a grower and is able to handle plants under most adverse conditions. After all, the mulching depends on the condition of the plants, and if they should be in a weak condition at this time, it will be bad business to overfeed. If they are in scant foliage, a light mulch should be applied, placing a handful to each plant, following with the hose, and washing it out well. Be sure that the soil is not too dry when putting on a mulch of any kind and at any time. The soil should be fairly moist, even better quite wet than very dry.

The plants in full vigor can now have the mulch put on to a depth of two inches after it has been leveled with the hose. We use a nozzle that will throw a stream about two inches wide with good pressure to cut the manure to shreds and level it, watering one-half of a bed at a time. This is the only way to prevent waste, and is the only satisfactory way to wash in the mulch, which should always be placed in a ridge to be watered in and leveled. Of course, the manure should be broken up carefully, and made fine enough so that there will be no large humps left to dry upon the beds. Otherwise, this will mean a great loss of plant food. If there is a strong smell of ammonia in the houses late in the afternoon after mulching, it will be advisable to leave an inch or so of air on for the first night or two. Plants that have been pinched for the Easter crop should quickly respond to any feeding at this time, and watched carefully, removing the side shoots before they get too far advanced.

Green fly is usually somewhat troublesome in the early spring, but no difficulty should be experienced if one has followed the directions given in these columns from time to time regarding fumigating, which to repeat, should be done periodically, as a preventive. A little undiluted nico-fume liquid, applied to the steam pipes every two weeks on a bright day so the fumigating can be followed up by syringing, will keep the fly out of sight, and up one pipe, and down another, using a pint oil can and walking fast will do the trick cheaply, quickly and thoroughly. If there is any spider around, the syringing has lacked thoroughness. Constant use of the sulphur brush will surely give the mildew a black eye, providing the temperature has been kept even both day and night, and the watering has been attended to properly. We have seen a change of the section man in a greenhouse bring on a dose of mildew through a change in the manner of watering and ventilating. And, strange as it may seem to some, one has more trouble with mildew from ruining the plants on the dry side than would be the case from copious waterings, which is also our experience with black spot. Most growers now feed strongly to prevent black spot, when a few years ago they would run their plants dry to check it.

Since the advent of Mrs. Chas. Russell there have been some freaky watering stunts attempted to try and please this popular and fussy lady," so we really think there is less black spot encountered in our houses owing to the Russell rose, which, as far as we can judge, likes plenty of feeding and watering, one grower saying, "Give Russell a mulch when the spot gets rather bad—and plenty of water." It is "some rose" any way, so I think this comes very near to what the Russell growers as a collection think of black spot nowadays. We had good Russell all through the fall months when we attempted to grow it. After that, "attempted" sounded perfectly correct. We offer no excuse, but the other fellows are doing it, and we are growing something that we can grow, for, after all, we cannot play any favorites these days, when the books must show at least a small margin of profit at the end of the month, and very often, as in our case, our market for some varieties hardly justifies one to grow certain sorts, Russell being one that does not command any higher figures than others that are much more prolific—and a great deal easier handled.

Perhaps it would be in order to give a few suggestions regarding the young rose stock in pots. Remember, a good start means everything later on. The young stock should have a good, sunny house, and be sure to put a careful man in charge of it. Finely screened coal ashes to a depth of three-fourths of an inch, after it is firmly packed, should be placed on the benches to receive the small plants, and be sure to pack the ashes firmly and not plunge the pots into the ashes unless you want the roots to rot off. Also, be sure that the siding of the bench is no higher than the top of the pots, so that the water, when spraying the plants, can be forced under all of the foliage.

Watering had better be done with a watering pot, and the spraying with a hose, using a very fine spray and plenty of force. When first placed on the bench, the pots can be set close together, but just as soon as they seem to crowd one another, they should be given some room. The best way is to allow them the proper amount of room between the rows, letting the pots touch in the row crosswise the bench. This method can be used to good advantage for the plants in any sized pots, and the advantage in placing them will be seen when syringing, as it prevents the pots from upsetting. The dry plants should always be spotted out first—with a watering can before watering them generally. This will require some extra time, but it is time well spent.

Never remove the raffia from the grafted stock unless the plants have had a small stake and are tied, otherwise many may become broken. The tying can be loosened temporarily, but not entirely removed, if the tie is found to be cutting into the bark. If there is any special care given to the young stock, let it be the new varieties. Give them every possible chance to make good, and do not be in too great a hurry to knock a new thing the first season. At least give it a fair trial, and then, why knock if the other fellow can grow it, for well does the writer remember how hard it was to get a fair stem on the grand old Killarney, and we could enumerate many others that seemed rather "poor doers" until we acquired the "know how." Another thing to remember, and that is there is hardly a chance of a worthless variety being disseminated of recent years, as the introducer, as a rule, places some of the stock among the most prominent growers for a trial, and it is these men very often that give a new rose a boost. Then, if one intends planting a new thing in any quantity, would it not be the best plan to look at the rose where it is being grown, and then it becomes a matter of one's judgment of what it really is. Surely, if it is found to be doing nicely with the introducer, that is all one could expect, and we should not hesitate to plunge, if necessary, under these conditions. So really, if the novelties should not come up to expectations, it is usually the case of unskilled handling. I might also state, and assure you there is no "axe to grind," that it hardly pays to buy 100 or more of any variety. Try at least 500 or 1,000, otherwise there is very little gained in testing it, and should the variety turn out a real find, then one is in a position to stock up the next season in quantity and have enough plants from which to select the very best wood for propagating, besides having a dependable amount of blooms for the market the first season. Think it over. Easter comes on April 20 this year, so begin to shape them up. Do not let the houses get too hot, and too far ahead of time. E.

Cultural Wrinkles.

A successful grower of Germantown, Pa., is noted for his success with cuttings, all varieties of plants seeming to respond alike to him. He has a splendid stock of young chrysanthemums, now in 2½-inch pots, placed close together on a bench containing several inches of soil into which they root. When these plants were about six inches in height, they were topped for cuttings. Upon recovering, each produced two or three shoots from which in turn cuttings were taken. These rooted in about nine days, and being always ordered in advance, were soon on their way to delivery. The cuttings are found to be much better than those taken from the old stock plants.

Golden Glow is a favorite at this establishment, where it produces splendid flowers. It is planted out on raised benches in the early part of April or immediately after Easter and brought into flower about September 15, being cut out three weeks later. In growing this variety it is essential that the right bud be selected for flowering. This takes the skill that comes from close observation and profiting by mistakes.

Young rose plants are also a feature. One lot of 10,000 Columbia is being set aside for an order, and other varieties in good sized blocks will soon be made up. It is found profitable to tie Columbia down, and in fact other varieties that are grown on tables, which checks the flow of sap, and the eyes all along the branches seem to break evenly. A house of Ophelia has been kept entirely for cuttings since the Christmas crop. A system of pinching the young growth quickly insures good wood that roots easily.

Intensive use of greenhouse space is planned for in the rotation of crops, narrow boards being laid at intervals over temporary trusses above beds of asparagus, or low crops that are in the preparatory stages. One block of 1,000 Bermuda lilies flowered nicely over an asparagus bed which appears to be none the worse. Stock for Easter, such as rambler roses, given plenty of room, were also finished on this temporary staging. A house of chrysanthemums had been followed with Spanish iris, which would soon be in. Cold frame giant Bellis daisies, Longfellow strain, and English Polyantha primulas, had been moved in and were coming along in good sized lots for Easter. Another Easter novelty was pots of elemtis, nicely trained to trellises. These are quickly taken by those with select trade.

Dutch Bulb Growing in Chicago.

Paper by Peter Pearson read at a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, March 6, 1919.

Five years ago, I commenced giving serious thought to the subject of producing Dutch flower bulbs in America. I was aware that several attempts had been made to grow them in certain selected locations, supposed to have a climate similar to that of Holland, which was considered essential to success. Up to that time, as far as I know, no experiments had been made as far north as Chicago by which it could be determined whether it would be possible to produce such stock on a commercial scale in that locality, and even if production should prove successful as far as the growing was concerned, the difficulty of producing them on a large scale and the necessity of skilled labor that would take an interest in the success of the venture, was an important factor. This is, I believe, the greatest barrier to successful commercial growing. On the other hand, when it is proven that climatic conditions are favorable to production, more interest would develop, and the labor problem will be gradually overcome, for we cannot expect to find trained labor for an industry that is in its inception.

In time past, it has been an easy and convenient way to order the exact number of varieties required from Holland, and have them arrive in the fall at the proper time for planting. Knowing the preference of American growers for a finished product ready for instant use, and as at the time such product was readily accessible from Holland, the reason that no one had been sufficiently interested to give the proposition serious thought seemed plain. It was evident that trials had not been made in locations numerous enough to determine the future possibilities of this branch of floriculture in this country, and not until the war interfered with the source of supply, did it occur to anyone that a supply at home would be preferred to one abroad.

I do not favor the expression that America is not capable of producing this or that article for which we formerly depended upon Europe for our supply as was the situation four years ago, and I will confess this had much to do with my determination to try my hand at bulb growing, for I believe that America is great enough, and our climate varied enough, to produce anything that will grow elsewhere. Another fact that influenced my decision, was the observation of some forced bulbs thrown out on the soil pile in the field which persisted in coming up every spring and producing nice flowers; also, a few shoots of Sir Watkin narcissus, planted at the edge of some shrubbery and left to care for themselves. The first spring, but three of the bulbs flowered. They were left undisturbed, and the following year, to my surprise, I found 25 or 30 flowers. The bulbs had then grown to an increased size, and the following spring the number of blooms had doubled.

This convinced me that narcissus bulbs could be grown at Jefferson Park, a suburb of Chicago, and I decided to make further experiments and include tulips, although skeptical regarding the possibility of producing them on a commercial scale at prices that would meet the competition of Holland grown stock. The higher cost of production might have discouraged some when you consider the low prices at which Dutch bulbs sold during the past three years, but I held to the theory that the home grown article might have some good points in their favor that would offset a higher cost, if any. This has proven true as I shall explain later. As to the cost, I am satisfied that we can compete with the Dutch stock at the price it sells for at the present time, and at which it is likely to continue to sell for for several years to come.

To grow Dutch bulbs, a soil is required that will retain sufficient moisture, and yet will not hold more than is required. It should be well drained, a sandy loam of very loose texture being best, although some varieties of the bulbs will do well in a heavier grade. Very deep plowing is necessary, which should be done in early summer. A liberal quantity of fertilizer should be first applied, cow manure being considered best for the purpose, after which the land should remain as the plow leaves it for about two or three weeks, then it should be gone over with a pulverizer to kill any weeds that may have made their appearance. Just before planting, it should be plowed again and gone over with the pulverizer and a harrow to make it smooth and level. Where only a small acreage is to be planted, hand spading is the most satisfactory, which is not as difficult as it might appear, especially if the plot has been plowed.

Planting is done either in beds three feet wide or in rows 18 to 24 inches apart. When the cultivation and weeding is done by hand and the space available limited, planting in beds is preferable. This will give seven rows 4½ inches apart for early tulips and five rows for the Darwins and narcissi when the rows are made lengthwise of the bed. Another good method, when small quantities of several varieties are to be planted, is to make the rows crosswise of the bed, which keeps the sorts close together and helps to avoid mixing. The distance between rows is the same as when planted lengthwise. A marker is used to indicate the position of the rows in order to have them an equal distance apart.

To dig the furrow, a board five inches wide and half an inch thick, tapered on both sides to a thin edge is used. With a person on each side of the bed, the board is forced down the desired depth, then forced out sideways, so that the soil thus removed covers the bulbs planted in the rows just finished. In this way it is easy to keep the bulbs on the same level which helps considerably in speeding the work of digging out. When planting lengthwise of the bed or in separate rows a triangular hoe is used.

The depth at which the bulbs should be planted varies according to size and variety, but as a general rule, they should be covered with 1½ to 2½ inches of soil. The Holland method of planting, is said to be slightly different with the exception that they are planted in beds, but instead of digging furrows, they start by shoveling off two or three inches of soil from the first bed. The bulbs are then placed on top and the soil removed from the next bed being used to cover the one planted, proceeding with the rest in like manner. I tried this method but discarded it, because it entailed much more hard labor. After the planting is done, the beds should be leveled and smoothed out so as to leave no holes or low places where water can stand. In this latitude, where frosts and thaws occur frequently, the beds should be covered with straw to prevent the frost from lifting the bulbs above the soil. This covering is left on until all danger from heavy frost in the spring is passed and then removed.

The plants will now develop rapidly and soon come into bloom. The beds should then be gone over to see if any strange varieties appear and should then be rogued to keep them true to name. As soon as the flowers begin to drop, the beds should be gone over and all seed pods cut away.

Next comes the digging. As soon as the leaves are withered, the bulbs should be dug and placed in crates similar to those used for onion sets, being allowed to dry slowly to prevent the skin from cracking. Care should also be taken to keep them away from strong, dry heat and draughts. After the bulbs are sufficiently dry, they should be cleaned, sorted and stored in a cool temperature.

To begin with, most of the stock I have used for planting has been from forced bulbs carried through the summer and put out in the open in the fall. Boxes of tulips and narcissi, intended for this purpose, should, after the flowers have been cut, be placed in a moderately warm location and kept supplied with sufficient water to allow the bulbs to develop, gradually decreasing the supply of moisture until the soil becomes dry, when the bulbs should be picked out and stored as before described. To prevent the varieties from becoming mixed, an easy way is to nail a label with the name of the variety on each box at the time of planting. Write the name on one label and then put another label on top of it and nail the two on the edge of the box containing the variety. This will insure the writing from becoming blurred from contact with soil and moisture.

My experience with forcing these bulbs after one and two years in the field has been most gratifying and I might here relate the advantages found in the home grown stock. First of all it can be forced from one to three weeks earlier than the Dutch product. I cut the first flowers from Narcissus Sir Watkin from home grown stock January 4, 1919, and from Emperor, February 2. They had received only gentle forcing and no blasted buds or blind bulbs were found.

With the tulips, Proserpine has a far better color from home grown stock, the objectionable blue which always shows when imported bulbs are forced early, being entirely absent. The color of Prince of Austria is also considerably improved. It is true that narcissi of the single type are a trifle smaller in size than from the imported bulbs but the flowers of Von Sion maintain equal size.

National Publicity for Flowers.

A good deal of encouragement is derived from letters such as the following, received from A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, Ill.: "We are pleased to note that the publicity committee is trying to raise double the amount of money raised last year, and we are pleased to enclose our cheque for an extra $25 to help out on the amount." And the following, from Frey & Frey, Lincoln, Neb.: "We are enclosing our cheque for $50 for the national publicity campaign. This is for one year only, and is in addition to our subscription of $25 per year for four years." When subscribers to our fund voluntarily increase their subscriptions, it is an endorsement of the value of our campaign.

Some of our members who have our project close at heart are making personal effort among the florists of their respective communities, and are meeting with success. Among them we might mention Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., part results of whose efforts appeared in our article two weeks ago. If all our members would take the same interest, it would not be long before the $100,000 aimed for would be greatly oversubscribed. Such work is not only of advantage to the campaign, but it establishes a friendly feeling among members of the craft, tending to make each more interested in the other. This feature was freely commented upon at the recent meeting of the society's executive board. Chairman Asmus, of the publicity finance committee, in referring to a visit he made to Pittsburgh last year, in company with your secretary, said: "We had the pleasure of introducing to each other, some of the florists there who were prominent in business, and yet had never met. That may be astonishing, but it is an actual fact." More than one trade organization, destined to be of use to our industry, has been formed as a direct result of campaign activities.

Your secretary plans to start out on a series of trips about March 25. He will consider it a courtesy if secretaries of clubs and other trade organizations will advise him as to their meeting dates, and whether they would be desirous of having him present at any stated meeting to produce data and give information regarding our publicity work. Such advice would materially help him in the preparation of his itinerary.

Florists who have not yet subscribed, are again urged to consider the advisability of making an early subscription. Regular subscription blanks may be obtained on application to the secretary's office, or may just as well be sent in this manner more convenient. If enthusiasm is needed, just procure copies of the magazines noted in our announcement last week, for it will certainly be found in their columns.

Why wait? Never a more opportune time than now.

The following subscriptions have been received, and are, in addition to those previously announced, being annually for four years, unless otherwise stated:

ROBERT MILLER, the well known grower of Farmington, Utah, says drip is a bad defect of iron in greenhouse construction, and that outside walls of concrete are objectionable on account of condensation.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Beacon, N. Y., chairman of the Society of American Florists' school garden committee, has issued his annual call to the school trustees throughout the country to join in this desirable work for the rising generation.

Personal.

Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., reported seriously ill in a previous issue, is improving steadily. In a few weeks it is thought he will be able to go away for a long rest.

Gersdorff, and the secretary's report of the work of the American Rose Society in 1918. The annual is sent gratis to all members of the society.

Novelties Free to Illinois Growers.

During the past eight or nine years the students of the division of floriculture at the University of Illinois, Urbana, have been growing, as a part of their class work, new varieties of single, pompon and anemone chrysanthemums. Among the seedlings produced are a number that are really worthy of distribution. The university has decided to name about 20 and distribute them among the florists of Illinois.

These varieties will be distributed as a set, containing one plant of each. As the number of plants that can be propagated is limited, only one set will be sent to a firm, and no requests from outside the state will be filled.

Requests will be filed in the order of their receipt and will be filled strictly in rotation, as long as the stock lasts. Plants will be shipped during the latter half of April, and will be carefully packed and shipped, express collect.

H. B. DORNER,
Chief in Floriculture.

Plant Embargo Amended.

The following, without date, was received from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., March 20:

The quarantine governing the importation of nursery stock and other plants and seeds into the United States has been amended to permit the importation of lily bulbs, lily of the valley, narcissi, hyacinths, tulips and crocus packed in sand, soil or earth, provided such sand, soil or earth has been previously sterilized in accordance with methods prescribed by the federal horticultural board. Sterilization must be done under the supervision of an authorized inspector of the country of origin, who must certify to it. This provision is amendatory to Regulation 3 of the rules and regulations supplemental to the notice of quarantine, which required that such bulbs when imported must be free from sand, soil or earth. It was brought to the attention of the board, however, that dry earth is the only suitable material known for packing these bulbs, and experts of the department of agriculture advised that such material can be cheaply and satisfactorily sterilized by heat in such way as to involve no additional risk of introduction of dangerous plant pests.

American Dahlia Society.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the American Dahlia Society, held March 14, it was decided to hold the fall exhibition of the society in the Engineering building, West 39th street, New York, September 23-25, under the auspices of the American Institute of the City of New York. Schedules of premiums will shortly be available, and may be had upon application to the secretary, John H. Pepper, 903 Johnston building, 28th street and Broadway, New York.

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

AN APPRECIATION.

It is with sadness that I read of the death of Mrs. E. A. Scribner. The above society has another member "over there." She was the first treasurer of the organization and I recall the pleasant times we had together during the first two years. A pleasant smile and a true friend. We shall miss her at Detroit this summer.

Carnation Disappointments.

Paper by Charles J. Theiss read at the March meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

Your committee has asked me to tell why many retail florists do not push carnations for general use. It is in the spirit of co-operation that I have accepted the invitation, and will be as brief as possible. In the first place, they have found carnations unprofitable, and any man who expects to make a success of business, discards unprofitable items.

We have here to-night, an exhibition of carnations that any retailer might be proud to have as a stock for his store; flowers that have stem, size, fragrance, color and extreme beauty—all that go to make a desirable flower; but do we, as retailers, get them as we see them here to-night? No. Instead, it is too often the case, as one of our fellow storemen remarked the other day: "I am lucky to get seven dozen salable flowers out of 100."

Now, if we figure on 100 per cent gross profit on a purchase of 100 flowers, and only seven dozen are fit to sell, with possible loss of unsold flowers, it can easily be seen that the retailer will come out at the short end of the horn. In a purchase recently, of a bunch of carnations, I found that it contained 13 first class flowers, five seconds, three splits, three weak stems and one flowerless stem. The cost of the bunch was $1.50. Now, for the sake of argument, suppose these flowers were offered on the basis of 100 per cent gross profit—12 out of 13 first class at $1.50, 12 remaining, not first class at $1.00, total $2.50.

Looks pretty good, does it not—$1.00 profit on an investment of $1.50? But that is not all. These flowers are to be delivered. What does that mean? Added cost to the carnations, as all florists know. Carnations are never sent in with foliage, that means some green must be given; added cost to the carnations, as no florist will deliver flowers unless they are put into a neat box—again added cost to the carnations, not mentioning overhead charges, viz., rent, light, labor, etc., which are all a part of an expense that should be borne proportionately. Now let us see where we come out on our 25, not 24, carnations

Cost carnations .....	$1.50
Cost 2 boxes, paper, etc .....	.10
Cost, green .....	.10
Cost delivery .....	.20
Total cost .....	$1.90
Carnations sold for .....	$2.50
Cost .....	1.90
Net profit .....	$.60

In other words, approximately 30 per cent on your investment. Should there be a waste of one-half of the inferior grades, which is often the case, you can readily see where the retailer would "get off;" 30 per cent may mean a lot to those doing a large volume of business, where the risk is not great, but no retailer, dealing in perishable goods and covering a large stock, can do business on that basis and survive. You will note that I do not class splits as seconds. They are in a class by themselves. Seconds are fairly good flowers but smaller.

The grower should be more careful in the grading of his flowers. One or more inferior flowers in a bunch, depreciates in the eyes of the buyer the entire bunch. Growers and wholesalers may think we are too critical, too particular, but they must remember that we are looking through the eyes of our customers, the flower buying public. It is because we are particular that the past three years has seen our own business increase more than 300 per cent in volume. A good flower will always command a good figure, but a poor one we do not want at any price.

Carnations have proven unprofitable for us to handle because of their poor lasting qualities. Here, let me say, something is very wrong. More complaints have been made on the poor lasting qualities of the carnations than any other flower that I know of. During the holiday season, we would not care to take a chance on them, and did not buy any. How can you growers and wholesalers expect retailers to push carnations when a feeling like that exists? It is true that carnations have been in greater demand, and have brought better prices this season, but that is only due to unusual conditions. But we must go back a year or more, and what do we see? It is the effects of the past, that caused many of the retailers to side track the carnation. Carnations grown for quantity, not quality, held back for days by the growers, when a holiday season comes along, then dumped on the market in an unsalable condition with fancy prices asked by the wholesaler, the retailer only buying what he absolutely had to have, the balance going to the street men to be sold, as I have seen it, at a price that would not pay for the cutting, let alone the growing of the flowers. In other words, the carnation has been cheapened, made a plebeian flower, and only offered by first class florists when customers want something cheap.

Some growers hold back carnations and ship them but twice a week, reaching the retailers when two or three days old, thinking thereby to save express charges, but that is poor economy for you lose out in the long run. Better ship every day, and have your carnations in a salable condition.

When I was asked to read a paper on the retailer's viewpoint, without much thought I said, Yes. Since, however, the thought occurred to me I will try and see what can be done toward selling carnations. To one of our customers, a lady, I suggested carnations. How often, Mr. Retailer, have you heard the same remark: "Oh! I hate carnations." I asked "Why?" "Well," she said, "when I was in the hospital, a friend sent me some carnations, and do you know I was delighted; but toward evening they seemed to close up, the next morning when I saw the flowers they were dead and had to be thrown out. Imagine me lying there sick, watching those flowers simply curl up and die. It gave me the creeps, and I have hated carnations ever since." Get the point, Mr. Grower. These conditions must be remedied before the retailer can become enthused over carnations.

My purchase slips of cut flowers for several days' business show a very small proportion of carnations as compared with other flowers.

You might ask what has all this to do with carnations? It is merely to show that carnations are in competition with other flowers. You can readily see that a matter of price is no bar to the sale of flowers, providing the flowers are select and of quality, justifying the price. The grower must remember that the retailer is his customer. If not dealing directly, it is through the wholesaler, and it is just as important that he satisfy the retailer, as it is for the store man to satisfy his customers. Can we retailers expect our customers to continue the purchase of carnations under these conditions, or can the grower expect the retailer to push carnations, when it is more profitable, and more satisfactory, to handle other flowers?

The national publicity committee of the Society of American Florists is asking that you subscribe to a fund to use for advertising purposes. Many of you have already subscribed. Last year over $15,000 was given them for that purpose to bring before the public the slogan, "Say it with Flowers." This year more is asked, but let me tell you that your money is wasted, thrown away, and advertising is not worth anything, if you say it with such flow-

Cost Accounting for Growers.

While the great majority of growers cannot afford a bookkeeper, and as a rule are not accountants, they can, however, keep a line on how the business is going by means of a day book, in which a record is to be regularly made of all receipts and expenditures.

A successful grower has worked out a simple plan of keeping track of his business, finding out costs, and determining, by keeping an exact record of production, which of the varieties of his stock pays him the best. Expenses taken from day book records are charged to separate accounts, such as coal, labor, general and overhead, under which latter should be a generous allowance for depreciation of about eight per cent.

The gross receipts and expenditures are divided by the number of square feet under glass, which gives the gross return; also, expense and profit each per square foot. This is for comparison from year to year, and is the best way to arrive at the relative returns of different crops.

To compare the different varieties of roses, he uses the general method of gross returns per plant. No two growers will perhaps get at results in exactly the same way, but there must be some form of accounting to afford methods of comparison from year to year, so that unprofitable crops and varieties may be discarded.

To run along from year to year without knowing the exact money returns per square foot of the various plants under cultivation, is a very poor and wasteful system. A half hour's work at the end of each day is sufficient to maintain a record, which will soon separate the bread winners from the laggards, the profitable from the unprofitable. Immense sums in the aggregate are lost to the growers of bedding and other greenhouse plants, who keep up an assortment of varieties for which there is little demand. Their quick-selling stock moves off so rapidly that before they know it there is but little left for propagation, while the less popular sorts fill up the cutting beds.

The man who will determine the actual expense of growing bedding plants in from 2½ up to 4 inch pots, and establish a standard cost per hundred or thousand, will be a real benefactor.

FUNERAL WORK VERY BRISK.

Trade during the past week has been good with a heavy call for funeral work. The supply of stock has been plentiful. Roses show quality and carnations were never better. Other offerings now present a good variety, among the stocks being callas, violets, Easter lilies, marguerites, daffodils, tulips, sweet peas, calendulas and a little stevia. Bulbous stock is still coming in, but the outlook for the Easter supply is still rather doubtful. There will be very few azaleas and these will bring good prices.

Waco, Tex.

Business in general throughout the state is good, with a plentiful supply and prices satisfactory. The demand is fair, but as some of the camps are demobilizing, business has decreased to some extent, but it is thought it will improve shortly.

Ths many friends of T. J. Wolfe will regret to hear that his health continues poor and that he has been confined to his bed most of the time since last Christmas.

Visitors: J. E. McAdam, Fort Worth, and Henry Greve, Dallas, both of whom report fine business, with good prices prevailing in their respective cities.

Pueblo, Colo.

Charles Stuckwisch, florist at the state hospital is still picking immense lots of violets, the only ones in this city, and they are a source of delight to the patients. Chas. Stuckwisch, Sr., his father, recently arrived from Indianapolis, Ind., and will reside here, having taken a position at the hospital.

The following have been appointed superintendents of the three public park districts in this city: T. W. Schultz, Dist. No. 1; E. E. Colby, Dist. No. 2, and C. C. Johnson, Dist. No. 3, including East Pueblo.

John Welch, for many years gardener at Mineral Palace park, died recently after a long illness. His funeral was largely attended.

Portland Florists' Society.

The regular meeting of the Portland Florists' Society, held March 18, was not very largely attended, due to inclement weather and failure of some members to receive their notices. The annual rose festival was discussed but no action was taken, it being decided to have the management of the exhibition call on the florists and make their wants known. It was, however, practically agreed that decorated autos should be a feature of the parade. F. Wiedeman tried to arouse a little enthusiasm in the matter of co-operative advertising among the local trade, but there seemed to be a diversity of opinion. A committee was named to find out what action the majority were in favor of taking. One new member was elected and one proposal was received. After adjournment, the refreshments committee served luncheon, after which cards were enjoyed and a pleasant evening was spent.

Railroad Rates Attacked by Redfield.

In a brief recently filed with the interstate commerce commission, Secretary of Commerce Redfield made an attack on railroad freight rates on industrial and commercial shipments, which a short time ago were advanced 25 per cent as a whole, and in some cases more. An extract from the secretary's brief follows:

"It cannot be argued that it is the obligation of the railroad administration to operate at a profit. It is given the support of public funds and has, as have other public services, the basis of the taxing power on which to rest. It has, as a matter of fact, received a large sum from the public treasury, its relation, therefore, to the commerce of the country is that of a servant of that commerce and in so far as for the purpose of revenue it may take steps injurious to the commerce of that country, it departs from its essential duty, and it becomes the obligation of that branch of the government which is charged with the fostering and promoting of commerce to point out the facts and ask for their correction."

Liberty Loan Workers' Reward.

An official message has been sent out by Ben F. McCutcheon, publicity director of the Liberty loan organization, to the effect that medals made from captured German cannon will be awarded to all workers in the Victory loan campaign. The medal is the size of a half-dollar and contains on one side a reproduction of the treasury building and on the transverse side a certification of loan participation with space for engraving the name of the recipient.

RITO

THE ENERGIZER FOR SOIL BACTERIA

IS COMING TO AMERICA.

WONDERFUL RESULTS have been obtained by the use of RITO in Great Britain during the last three years. Owing to the war it has been impossible to export, but now we are free to do so, and feel sure that the Horticulturists of the U. S. A. will at once avail themselves of this unique method of increasing their products and of getting their stuff ready for the market some weeks earlier than they have hitherto done, and so secure a much higher price.

WHAT IS RITO? — RITO is a humus, organic or natural fertilizer, a stimulant and energizing medium for soil bacteria.

WHAT IS HUMUS? — Humus is a complex substance or mixture of substances present in the richest of soils. It is black in colour, and hence renders the soil darker. RITO contains Humus in the right form for fertilizing the soil.

WHY ADD HUMUS? — Because most soils contain very little (if any) Humus, and it is necessary for the proper development of the useful soil bacteria. The bacteria find in the Humus constituents a suitable medium for their robust propagation.

That is, Humus is a source of food and energy for the soil bacteria.

WHAT IS THE ANALYSIS OF RITO? — It has very little chemical analysis and it does not come in the same category as fertilizers. It is essentially an energizing medium for soil bacteria. Phosphates and potash are present in all soils, but in the ordinary way they are not readily available. RITO, by energizing the soil bacteria, is calculated to make the phosphates and potash available for the plant. It also stimulates the nitrogen-fixing bacteria into action, so that the consequent development is out of all proportion to its analysis.

RITO takes the place of farmyard manure, or it may be used in conjunction with farmyard manure or any recognized artificials. RITO is free from weed seeds, spores and germs, and from the eggs or larvae of noxious insects.

It is well known that the soil is not a dead inert mass of matter, but that it teems with bacteria, which only need to be treated properly to be called into activity. There are millions in every spadeful of soil.

RITO may be used in the open or under glass.

What RITO Users Say:--

"I used RITO in the soil for my Tomatoes this year. The result was the best crop I ever had, and I started picking two to three weeks earlier than usual from seed sown same date as previous years."

A market gardener says that his RITO-treated lettuce were ready for the market a month before the untreated ones, with the result that the treated ones brought 2s. 6d. per dozen and the untreated ones, when they were ready for the market, brought 1s. per dozen.

"I tried RITO last year on Potatoes, and they yielded 30 per cent better than those not treated."

"Every ounce of fruit from both the treated and the untreated Tomatoes has been gathered and carefully weighed. The weight of fruit gathered from the treated portions averaged just five times the amount as from the untreated portion."

"I have used RITO in the Peach Houses, and find that it greatly improved both the quality of the fruit and also the growth. I also find RITO very good if used when mixing soil for potting various plants, and I have also used it on my Vines with excellent results."

"I have pleasure in testifying to the merits of RITO. It is 'Right Ho' and no mistake. I never saw Tomatoes do so well as when your RITO was applied as a top-dressing mixed with the soil; the roots the plants made in this way were extraordinary, and the crops correspondingly good. The same applies to Cucumbers, also Chrysanthemums and to plants generally. It seems to conserve the moisture, hence less watering is required."

"RITO treated Chrysanthemums made a much quicker and better start than they have usually done—in fact, the plants show a great improvement."

RITO is packed in double bags, and the price is $5 per 100 lbs., ex Quay Boston or New York. Terms—Cash with order.

Please address your orders at once to The Molassine Company, Ltd., East Greenwich, London, England.

NOTES.

Herbert Chase, of the Chase Nursery Co., Chase, Ala., a recent visitor to this city, in expressing his opinion regarding the proposed plant exclusion ruling of the federal horticultural board said that from a selfish standpoint he favored it, but that he did not think it exactly right and was too drastic. He mentioned being sent to France several years ago to see if proper precautions were taken there to eradicate the gypsy moth and that he found legal steps had been taken and entire rows of stock had been dug up and burned and groves of cherry trees destroyed root and branch. He was amazed at the thoroughness with which the work was prosecuted and thought that such heroic treatment would insure immunity from any insect pest.

E. G. Reimers & Sons Co., have let the contract for one house, 35x150 feet which will be devoted to roses and cut flowers.

BUSINESS BETTER THAN PREVIOUS YEARS.

Business during the past week has been very good, largely in funeral work, which has continued brisk for several weeks. As a whole, taking the Lenten season into consideration, the demand has been better than in several years past. The bulk of the stock seen is sweet peas, and these have taken their first drop of the season, going down to $7.50 per 1,000. Even this is a good price compared with former seasons. The cut is coming in very heavy and if the weather gets any warmer, the crop for Easter will be short. Roses are very plentiful and some fine Ophelias are offered at reasonable prices. Carnations have also dropped with the increase in supply. Darwin tulips are beginning to come in strong and the quality makes them ready sellers. Jonquils continue to clean up each day and bring good returns. Much of the small southern stock goes begging having little value as a first-class cut flower. The cut of callas is just about large enough to meet requirements, and unless there is an increase in the supply they will be a luxury at Easter. Stocks, snapdragons, myosotis, delphiniums and irises have a ready call. In greens, the market is quite well supplied with prices ruling high on all items.

NOTES.

The florists' publicity committee met last week and effected its organization for the coming year. L. Jules Bourdet was elected chairman and J. J. Beneke, secretary-treasurer. It was decided to adopt the "Milwaukee plan" of raising funds, same to become effective April 1.

The regular meeting of the above society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., March 12, with President Adler in the chair. Five petitions for active membership were received. The judges for the monthly exhibition were Thomas Scott, Thomas Meech and G. W. Mr. Twigg, upon request, gave a brief account of his method of growing pansies, which proved quite interesting. An essay was ably read by Ernest Westlake, entitled, "Wanted—A Gardner," written by Robt. Weeks, Cleveland, Ohio, and a letter of thanks was ordered sent the author. Arthur Harris, one of our members who went overseas with the Canadians, was present and spoke briefly. We were all pleased to have him with us, and to give him the glad hand. P. W. Popp, vice-president of the National Association of Gardeners, was present and spoke briefly on that organization. Allen Krichman, manager of the Newark Oyster Shell Lime Fertilizer Co., was present and spoke a few words. A short discussion followed on the making of a large tennis court which proved quite interesting and instructive. It was decided to hold a spring show at the regular monthly meeting, May 14. The executive committee was empowered to draw up a small schedule to be presented at the next meeting, which will be held, April 9, at 7 p. m. Competition—Nine spikes of antirrhinum, three heads of lettuce and a vase of outdoor flowering shrubs. It was decided, on motion of Thomas Twigg, to hold a smoker at the conclusion of this meeting. #### STOCK IS IN HEAVY SUPPLY.

Stock of all kind is in heavy supply and obtainable in large lots at low prices. American Beauty roses of splendid quality are seen in quantity at some of the wholesale houses, and while the majority offered are local grown, there are quite a few arriving from the east. Roses in general are very plentiful with more than enough to go around. Carnations are holding up surprisingly well in price, but at times during the past week, considerable pushing was needed to move the receipts, even at reduced figures. Callas and lilies have accumulated to quite an extent, and the supply of sweet peas has increased surprisingly. Snapdragons, tulips, forget-me-nots, calendulas, lupines, daisies, violets, pansies, freesias, mignonette, gladioli, candy-tuft, allysum, orchids, gardenias, stocks and other miscellaneous seasonable flowers are included in the daily offerings. The shipping trade is not as brisk as it might be, and while the city demand is good, there is considerable room for improvement. Green goods are in strong demand. It is doubtful just what the supply will be for Easter at this writing, but according to many of the growers, carnations and roses will be in heavy supply. Cut lilies will be quite plentiful, notwithstanding the reports to the contrary, but it is expected that they will clean up early at prices ranging from 20 to 30 cents each. Pot lilies will be exceedingly scarce, and the same holds true for blooming stock in general, which should clean up the supply of cut flowers, if business is at all good.

NOTES.

The Elks, led by Allie Zech, defeated the Florists in a three game bowling contest at the Elks' club rooms, Wednesday evening, March 19, by a score of 62 pins. Dan Simonds has been jollying the team representing the trade to such an extent that the boys are willing to put up a purse on the winner take-all proposition for another match.

John Ziska lost a wheel and tire one night this week when auto thieves started to strip his car, but were scared away before they completed their job. They evidently intended to finish their work the next night, for they managed to get away with about everything that Raymond Ziska had on his machine left standing in the same place.

Nothing definite has been done in regard to the local advertising campaign by the Wholesale Cut Flower Association and the Retail Florists' Association, but it would not be surprising if considerable money was spent for space in the daily newspapers and elevated cars.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner have leased the room adjoining their present quarters on the east and will take possession April 1. The partition will be removed and when this is completed they will have the necessary space to take care of their increasing business.

B. J. Delinke & Brother will open a retail store at 3502 Chicago avenue about April 1. Mr. Delinke was formerly in business on the same street, but closed when he joined the colors shortly after this country declared war on the central powers.

Allie Zech's many friends are pleased to hear that Mrs. Zech is recovering rapidly from her recent operation at the Chicago Union hospital. Her room has been kept well filled with flowers and fruit at all times by a host of acquaintances.

Miss Clara Masilotti, who conducts a retail florist store at 1001 South Racine avenue, is a candidate for Alderman in the 19th ward, on the city ticket of the labor party. Her candidacy has been ratified by the executive board of the party.

Percy Jones, Inc., has leased a new store on the second floor of the Atlas building at 162 North Wabash avenue, and will concentrate its supply business at its present quarters and the cut flower department at the other.

Harry S. Cook is being kept busy at The Excell Laboratories at 115 East South Water street, the demand for their products being surprisingly heavy. Dr. T. T. Woolens is identified with this firm.

E. F. Kurowski, of the John C. Moninger Co., received the welcome news this week through an American army officer that his daughter is safe in Germany.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, is again attending to his duties at the store, after spending several weeks with Mrs. Washburn in California.

George Mohn, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, returned last week after an extended business trip and reports trade highly satisfactory.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, April 10, when Hodgson Jolly will talk on salesmanship.

Wieter Bros. report that the demand for young rose stock is almost as heavy as for bench plants which cleaned up in a jiffy this season.

Morris Grossberg, of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co., called on the trade at Detroit, Mich., this week.

Max Awizzus, of the E. C. Amling Co., has been confined to his home for several days with the influenza.

W. J. Keimel has returned from a visit at Hot Springs, Ark., much improved in health.

A baby boy, Wellington Dieu Schiller, gladdened the home of R. E. Schiller, March 16.

INFLUENZA STIFFENS DEMAND.

With a return of the influenza, and its fatal results, funeral work again became the main factor for the past fortnight. The daily receipt in all lines is large and on the increase, due to the mild weather conditions, but the demand, both local and for the shipping orders, is large enough to keep things fairly well cleaned up and prices from slumping.

EASTER PROSPECTS WITH LOCAL GROWERS.

For sake of diversion, an auto party consisting of Fred Holton, Gust Pohl, Wm. R. Schroeder, Nic Zweifel and the writer, paid several growers a brief visit, March 21, to size up the prospects for Easter, especially carnations. The first stop was Hugo Locker & Sons' at Wauwatosa, where sweet peas are the main crop. They have them in all stages of growth from newly planted to old ones, ready to be dumped and they look fine throughout. Their carnations also are in A1 condition, with a good Easter crop in sight. Two blocks of callas, have been a good proposition thus far. Herin Arn't, Jr.'s place, nearby, showed that his stock suffered considerably during his siege with the influenza, as there was no practical person in charge during his absence. At the Wauwatosa Floral Co., where Charlie Koch is "it," we saw some exceptionally fine sweet peas just coming into crop. These were planted after the chrysanthemums were out, and both crops will "bring home the bacon." Here, too, a fine block of callas have been commanding good prices to date. As our time was limited, the visit at the C. C. Pollyworth plant was too short to cover all the ground thoroughly. Being short on ferns, they are working up a big stock of bedding plants to keep the benches full. While the carnation plants throughout look good, they will not have a heavy Easter crop. Roses look much the same as ever, while the propagating benches are filled with thousands of chrysanthemum cuttings. The largest crop of good sized carnation buds, which will be in for Easter, were seen at the Greenwood Carnation Co's, range at North Milwaukee. With the exception of Nancy, of which they lost quite a few from dry rot, their place is in fine shape. Crystal White, Nebraska and Edna, are being tried out and found O. K. A bench of seedlings, the work of Superintendent Thorpe, has many promising candidates which should make good eventually. At Wm. Manke & Co's, all hands, including Bill, were busy shifting young carnations into "threes." This place looks better than we have ever seen it. While there is no heavy crop in sight, there is plenty of good clean growth from the base, which with proper care, will still make good. A. Reinhardt was exceptionally busy, as usual getting next day's consignment of carnations and sweet peas ready. The latter are very fine, but the cut of carnations rather

NOTES.

The A. E. Kellner Co., decorators, who have no competition in this city and vicinity, were more than busy the past week, planning and getting ready to execute numerous orders for "Style Week," March 21-29. This is a new idea in which merchants in all lines, not only department stores, as formerly, will co-operate in having a spring opening on a large scale. As this project has been heavily advertised in the local press for some time, we expect a large influx of visitors from out of town.

A good many of the local craft are pleased to know, from information gained through the trade papers, that the florists in New York and also St. Louis are about to adopt the "Milwaukee plan" of raising funds for advertising. This may lead to the new slogan, "The plan that made Milwau-

We regret to announce that Mr. Spinti, of the Kamp & Spinti Floral Co., of North Milwaukee, fractured his right leg in three places, when the step of a ladder, on which he was working gave way, March 19. He was busy on the new greenhouse 18x150 feet, which they are adding this season.

Rudolph Preuss & Sons, of North Milwaukee, have commenced work on GOOD SUPPLY MOVES SATISFACTORILY.

The demand continues fair, with considerable improvement in the supply. Carnations in all colors are arriving in abundance, and Paper Whites are still offered, while the yellow variety and Dutch hyacinths are plentiful. In fact jonquils are blooming out of doors and the street merchants are to be seen on every corner with bunches at five and ten cents. Quite a fair-sized bouquet can be had for a quarter of a dollar. Hyacinths and violets from the open are also plentiful. This, however has had little effect so far on the florists' business, and fine pots of hyacinths still command from $1.50 to $4. Some sweet peas are seen and snapdragons and mignonette add to the variety. The outlook for Easter does not indicate an overabundance of flowers. Roses, which are still a trifle slow, promise well for that time, and there will be lilies, though not in profusion. Offerings in this item clean up daily at present. In fact, there is a good cut, but none are left over at night as a rule. The social activities, notwithstanding Lent, are awakening and there is considerable going along that line. With Easter so far advanced, there will doubtless be an ample supply of spring flowers this year.

NOTES.

Stock of all kinds at the Joy Floral Co.'s range has done well this season. Their best bloomer now is the Columbia, although they have produced good varieties in both pink and white. Their Chattanooga branch recently filled a wedding order which broke all records, the decorations including both the embellishment of the church and the golf club. They look forward to a good supply for Easter.

Stock at the establishment of L. H. Haury & Son appears to be coming along in very good form.

GOOD SUPPLY AT MODERATE PRICES.

The receipts of stock increased greatly during last week and now the market has supplies that are ample in all lines. The demand for stock is about the same as at last writing and the easing of the market was brought about by increased receipts. Prices have dropped. Shipping business, however, continues good. Rose arrivals, for the first time in many months, are large enough to take care of all immediate demands. Carnation receipts, too, are large enough to meet all calls. Sweet peas are in a heavy supply that is excellent in quality. Easter lilies, also rubrums and callas may be had in fair quantities. A goodly amount of bulbous stock is coming into the market. In the list are jonquils, daffodils, freesias, narcissi, Darwin tulips, a few other tulips and Dutch hyacinths. Snapdragons continue to prove good property. Other receipts are pansies, Iris Tingitana, mignonette, forget-me-nots, wallflowers and a few violets.

NOTES.

LARGE SUPPLY IN GOOD VARIETY.

Flowers in the greatest variety that the season affords are now coming into the market in great quantities, and with the extraordinary influx, comes the corresponding reduction in prices, which however, are well maintained except on violets and sweet peas, which seem to suffer some in comparative net results to the growers. Roses are seen in fine quality and plenty of them to supply the call for this item. Carnations are improving in quality and no surplus is seen. Calendulas, of which the market is well supplied, are not so popular as they were earlier in the season, and some effort is necessary to move them. Fine snapdragons are now available, and the limited stock is easily disposed of. Retailers' reports of the past week are varying. Some have been favored with good business, while others report only fair conditions, but all are expectant of an Easter business unprecedented, and are already preparing for it.

NOTES.

Charles Warnke, of Woodmere, has sold his establishment to the Canfield Floral Co. He and his wife will retire permanently and take a well earned rest after being in the business 40 years at the same location. GOOD ST. PATRICK'S DAY DEMAND.

St. Patrick's day business was good, shamrocks, greened carnations, roses, tulips, etc., all moving well, but there was little call for novelties. Cut stock is still in rather limited supply. Harrisii lilies and bulbous stock in general are being held back for Easter. Daffodils, jonquils and narcissi are good. There is not much call for violets. The carnation supply is limited but of good quality. The supply of roses about balances the demand.

NOTES.

Charles Curtice had the decoration last week for one of the prominent stores of this city. It consisted of a number of birch bark boxes attractively filled with spring flowers, palms and ferns.

Sprays of cherry blossoms, the most perfect seen here in some time, were displayed in the window of Salter Bros.' East Main street store last week. The flowers were of wonderful size.

GOOD SUPPLY MOVES WELL.

Business continues good despite the Lenten season. Stock is both plentiful and good, and in many lines the wholesalers and growers clean up daily. There is an oversupply of sweet peas; the surplus has become greater with the advent of southern daffodils in quantity and it is almost impossible to market them at any price. The better grades of roses move well, but others have to be pushed. The demand for carnations has been very good, and the fine lot of snapdragons now offered meets ready sale. Pansies are good and bring 60 cents per hundred. Orchids are plentiful and are offered at from 40 cents to 60 cents each. Outdoor stock is now coming into bloom.

NOTES.

A "Victory banquet," the first social event in three years, is to be given by the florists' club at the New Cochran hotel, April 9. Officers will be inaugurated at this time. Preparations are being made to accommodate 100 persons. A ban has been placed on all speechmaking, and the address of welcome, to be delivered by President Z. D. Blackstone, is to be limited to 50 words. Each of the ladies will be presented with a Victory bouquet. This was originated in Washington and worn extensively during the armistice celebration. Red, white and light lavender sweet peas, tied with flag ribbon, will form the arrangement. The committee in charge is headed by George C. Shaffer. He will be assisted by Fred H. Kramer, Otto Bauer, Z. D. Blackstone and Clarence L. Linz.

Welcome news last week was that William F. Gude is slowly recovering from the nervous breakdown which has kept him confined to his home now for nearly a month.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

March 20 there was a meeting of the war garden men of Lancaster, Pa., held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, which was addressed by Rufus Herr, of Strasburg, and Fred Ritchy, of Lancaster. This meeting occupied the room our club usually has, but we met in the secretary's office and had what was perhaps the most thoroughly co-operative gathering we have had for some time, due to the paper by M. J. Brinton on the duty club members owe to the club, and the fact that we were together in a small space. Mr. Brinton's paper was full of that wisdom that comes from a man who speaks only when he has something to say. He spoke of the wonderful Laddie carnations we saw in Philadelphia, exhibited by Wm. Kleinheinz, and the fact that he brought one home with him, which was kept in his bedroom for two days, then taken to the greenhouse and kept in the cut flower room where it was in perfect condition up to and including February 11. The plants that produced these flowers were grown inside all summer, and those of us who know Mr. Kleinheinz, know also that they had proper care every minute of that time, and that no insect nor impure air was allowed within 50 feet of them.

S. S. Pennoek, who kindly made his return home from Baltimore, via Lancaster, in order to attend the club meeting said that Chas. Akehurst has a new seedling the color of Ward, a much freer bloomer, and just as good a keeper, that looks good to him, but that it may not be put on the market as a plant proposition. He also gave us a short, but impressive talk on the employment of returned soldiers, who were not able to take up ordinary occupations on account of being partly disabled, saying that many of these men could do greenhouse work and would make excellent employees.

T. J. Nolan made a flying trip from Philadelphia to attend the club meeting, returning the same night, just as we do when we attend the Philadelphia meeting. He reports business very satisfactory, and always has some pat remarks on matters pertaining to the welfare of the florist. Short talks were made by B. F. Barr, H. A. Schroyer and A. M. Herr on the duty club members owe to their club and their fellow members.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Chas. M. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., where a number of the new Burpee sweet peas are being given a trial. Members from Lancaster will take the Coatsville car at 5:45 p. m. (daylight saving time), inspect the place, and listen to a talk by Geo. W. Kerr of the W. Atlee Burpee Co. on how these flowers are produced. The date is April 10.

The ladies' auxiliary held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Lemon Landis, Lancaster, with a good attendance and an interesting programme was carried through. They will have a joint meeting with us next month at the Weaver home, and after business, have a social and refreshment hour, to which we are all looking forward.

MARKET CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

The wholesale market remains firm with not much change in prices from last week. St. Patrick's day does not amount to much here, with a showing of a few shamrocks and some green carnations on the street stands. The better stores refuse to handle same. Delphinium Belladonna has made its appearance, is of very fine quality, and sells readily. The longer grades of American Beauties are coming more freely and clean up daily at $5 to $9 per dozen. There are not so many tea roses coming at present, but the demand is for the shorter grades, the longer stock not cleaning up till the shorts are sold. Lilies are more plentiful and sell readily at $20 and $25 per 100. Snapdragon is very good and brings from $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Sweet peas have been of poor quality the past week, due possibly to the warm weather we have been having. Receipts of mignonette, myosotis, freesias and baby primroses have been light, but have been equal to the demand, as box trade is very limited, most of the business being funeral work. Southern jonquils are coming heavier, but the street boys dispose of most of them. NOTES.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. reports a large supply business for Easter; in fact, all the retailers in this district are preparing for a large Easter trade especially since the Victory Loan drive has been put over till after that day.

Geo. Wessenauer, of Sewickley, has been confined to his home with influenza for the past week, but is now improving.

W. J. Smith, of The Altimo Culture Co., of Canfield, O., was here on business for two or three days last week. M.

BEAUTIES IN QUANTITY,

THE LEO NIESSEN CO., 1201 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

SUPPLY MOVES WELL AT LOWER PRICES.

Prices a little lower, but a good demand for almost all grades of stock, particularly carnations, describes the condition of last week's market. There was a full supply of almost everything, except carnations, which appear to be off crop, there being a falling off of at least 25 per cent in the growers' shipments. The quality of the stock is fine. Roses are now quite plentiful. American Beauties are more in evidence, and long stemmed stock at quick moving prices will soon make this a factor. While all rose stock is of good quality, Special Hadleys, when halfblown are wonderfully beautiful. The same grade of Columbia is also superb. Sweet peas are in full supply. The special stock was never better, and all grades appear to clean up well at satisfactory prices. Callas are seen in quantity, yet there is a good demand that takes them all. Easter lilies are not so plentiful, but all good flowers still command the high level of this winter's figures. Iris Tingitana is, in its various grades, seen in quantity. This beautiful flower, for some reason, does not meet with the recognition that its high artistic form and coloring deserves. It should be featured not over two or three flowers to a vase; it will keep in the ordinary living room from three to four days in good condition. Cattleyas are lagging a trifle, or there is what appears to be an over supply. All kinds of green goods, from the best greenhouse asparagus to the wood ferns, are in constant demand. One of the retailers declared recently that he ought to get a bunch of green with every $10 purchase of flowers, as that was what his customers expected of him. Daffodils are seen in all the stocks. The Emperors are fine. Quantities of the southern outdoor stock are received daily, selling at from 50 to 75 cents per 100, and cheaper by the case. Most of this material is sold by the street merchants.

March 23.—Receipts were full in all lines, but the good demand kept things moving nicely. Quite a number of the stores were busy with funeral work, which with the supply necessary to stock up the cases made a busy morning. Very fine American Beauties and a plentiful supply of cattleyas were features.

FLORISTS' CLUB PROGRAMME.

The April meeting, to be held in the Adelphia hotel, has a wealth of features, any one of which would ordinarily have been considered a drawing card. At 5 p. m. will be staged a splendid collection of Easter flowering plants, novelties and specimens of the choicest stock of the best growers of this city. A number of these will be decorated and featured as seen later in the shops. This should be especially interesting to retailers. At 6 p. m sharp, the dining club will sit down to a shad dinner, price $2. This will not only be some dinner, but toothsome as well. Notify Hugh Niessen, before 12 noon of that day. No tickets; pay $2 as you enter. "Dollars and Cents; How to Make and Save Them," will be the topic of the meeting, opening at 8 p. m. Two professors from the Wharton School of Finance of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Edward P. Moxey, Jr., professor of accounts, and Dr. Herbert W. Hess, professor of advertising and salesmanship, will address the club. Dr. Moxey will speak of the importance of knowing, and describe easy methods of ascertaining costs. Dr. Hess will give the latest ideas in advertising and salesmanship as applied to the sale of flowers, both matters of vital interest to grower and retailer. An added feature will be a movie exhibition by the National Cash Register Co., showing in store scenes, the methods of conducting business in an up-to-date way, and the proper use of a cash register.

SHAMROCKS.

As a catch crop, the growing of shamrocks for the 17th of March, Paddy's day, has, when it is well managed, a place way up front. To grow and successfully market $0,000 two-inch pots of this bit of Irish sentiment, in the short period of 10 weeks, is a feat worth recording, and which any firm can well point to with pride. This idea was conceived, and the trade worked up by the late William K. Harris. If possible here, why not in every large city of the country. The crop is, from a business point, safe and sure, as the sale is made or the order secured before the seed is sown. The little pots are given away as souvenirs the week of the 17th of March to every purchaser. That it has advertising value, is demonstrated by the department store keeping it as an annual event and generally adding a little to their order for each succeeding year.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEETING.

The March meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was well attended and very interesting. There was a display of arranged vases of cut flowers, also cut carnations. Pot cyclamens, amaryllis, primulas and cinerarias were of good quality, and were much admired. C. E. Meyers, of Pennsylvania State College, gave an illustrated lecture on "Planning and Preparing the Vegetable Garden." The subject was treated in interesting detail with very effective colored slides depicting every operation, and crops in all their stages.

NOTES.

Pennock Brothers staged a rose show as an attraction in their window the past week. All the standard varieties were exhibited, one dozen to a vase. They were beautifully arranged as to color combination and for general effect. While they attracted considerable attention as soon as displayed, there was an immediate added interest when the name cards were placed on the vases an hour later. Reading of these caught and held crowds all day long. These little name cards added fully 100 per cent to the decoration in advertising value.

Robert Shock has just returned from Texas, where it is now summer time. While there, he had a talk with Philip Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago, (the only Phil) who had arrived the day previous from Omaha, Neb., where he had the misfortune to have the tips of his ears frozen. He says that this United States has "some climate."

Edward Reid, who took a run to Norfolk, Va., in his car for the week-end, said that the national flower, at least in that city, is the daffodil, as everybody appeared to be carrying them. Business in the stores there was reported satisfactory, with expectations of a good Easter.

One of the local wholesalers believes that the general softening of prices in the cut flower market is due to the influx of outside southern daffodils. If so, get ready for the rebound next week when the crop passes out.

G. A. Leins has great faith in the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," having it in fac simile across the top of his new awning, on his car, delivery tags and all stationery. K.

LESSENE DEMAND CONTINUES.

Business continued quiet during the greater part of the past week, but it was quite active, March 22. In part, that is accounted for by the retailers stocking up sufficiently to carry them over Sunday. For some reason, probably dark weather, the supply of carnations fell off and $8 per 100 was paid, on several days, for the best stock. Roses were slow, the best special American Beauties dropping to $50 per 100, and even lower. In such stocks as Ophelia, it was only the finest that brought $15. Prices held up well on narcissi, tulips and spring flowers in general. It seems a long time since lily of the valley was as slow as it is at present. During the wartime scarcity, with consequent high prices, it would seem that a large part of the public dropped lily of the valley for something else. Lilies continue firm, and are likely to hold up well until after Easter. The Easter lily situation is unsatisfactory to most of the retailers. A few state that they have engaged supplies of pot stock, but many others have not. We understand that the wholesale price on what will come in will not be less than 35 cents, bud and flower. In the various plant ranges, there is a fair supply of rambler and other pot roses, but so far as we can learn, nearly all the plantsmen are claiming that they are sold out. There will be some heather, and fair stocks of hydrangeas, daisies, genistas and pans of tulips and hyacinths, but the lilies will be greatly missed. As noted in our issue of March 22, the violet market has been in an upset condition. Quantities of them are used in funeral work, and some of the former street vendors have been discharged from the army and resumed their business. Great preparations have been in progress throughout the past week for the parade on Fifth avenue, March 25, of the 27th Division of the overseas army that recently returned from France. The dealers in laurel and other green will reap some profit from it, but it is doubtful if it will have much effect on the cut flower market, though there will probably be some dinner decorations. As for the Fifth avenue retailers, they will probably close after getting out their morning orders—they might as well, as Fifth avenue will be a mass of humanity, and outside the marching lines, it will be hard for anything larger than a squirrel to push through.

March 24.—There is the usual amount of Monday buying, with no change in prices worthy of note. There seems to be some increase in the supply of stock, which if continued, may cause a break. Southern narcissi are now on the market, wholesaling at about $2 per 100, but prices on greenhouse stock and tulips, hold firm. Neither wholesalers nor retailers are expecting much business for tomorrow; it has been proclaimed a public holiday on account of the parade of the New York troops, and the florists are likely to close at 10 a. m., several having already made announcements to that effect.

NOTES.

The Holland-America liner, Noordam, is officially announced as due at this port, March 23. The Noordam was formerly a bulb carrying boat. On this trip she comes via Brest, and doubtless will bring soldiers, but is unlikely to have much in the line of horticultural stock. The Sloterdijk sailed from Rotterdam, March 13, for this port, and should soon be here. She is reported to have a considerable cargo of plants, etc.

Visitors: President Ammann, of the Society of American Florists; Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; J. F. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y.; Harry Bayersdorfer, Philadelphia, Pa. A. F. F.

WARM WEATHER FORCES IN SUPPLY.

Conditions have been such during the past week, that the growers are of the opinion there will be no bulbous stock left for Easter, as the weather is so spring like, that it is impossible to hold back the stock. The market is being crowded with Dutch hyacinths, tulips, jonquils, and daffodils, while there is a fair quantity of freesias. There is some excellent stock being shown in carnations, which bring very good returns. Roses are getting more plentiful, and the quality is improving. In spite of the increase in the supply, there is no over-production, on account of the vast amount of funeral work which is in demand each day. Outside of this heavy call for flowers, business is about normal for this season of the year. Azaleas are being shown in several of the flower shops, although in limited numbers. Cineraria plants are being offered in large numbers, and never fail to attract the prospective flower-buyer.

funeral work, and flowers for social purposes making heavy inroads on their stock. Clem Lanterrier is spending several weeks in Chicago, on business.

The W. J. & M. S. Vesey greenhouses report the demand far ahead of the supply, on account of the abnormally heavy call for funeral work, which seems to be increasing instead of decreasing.

Spencer sweet peas, finer than ever before at this season, were shown at the Doswell Floral Co's. store last week. Decorative work was also in good demand.

Herman Leltz, of the New Haven Floral Co., has just returned from a business trip to Chicago. H. K.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 24-26, 1919.

GARLIC bulbs are selling at 10 times normal prices.

ANGERS, FRANCE—Rene Godineau, of R. & M. Godineau, has returned from army service.

The high mail order seed record in the west is about three weeks later than last year.

The first issue of the new seed trade monthly, the American Seedsman, has just come to hand.

FAIRBURY, NEB.—Onion sets from Chicago arrived here, February 27, frozen as hard as marbles.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade March 25 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.00 per 100 pounds.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are selling in carload lots at 75 cents to $1 for colors and $2 to $2.50 for whites, according to quality.

The list of creditors of the Harris Bros. Seed Co., Mt. Pleasant, Mich., issued by W. W. Russell, receiver, makes very interesting reading.

ODENSE, DENMARK.—L. Daehnfeldt, Ltd., in a recent communication, state that, due to the fact import licenses to America have been refused, they are unable to make shipments at present, but hope conditions will improve in the near future.

VISITED CHICAGO: L. L. Brotherton, representing the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; A. E. Bather, representing Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; W. H. Crossland, representing the Courteen Seed Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover market closed 25 cents lower March 25, at $29.50, registering a gain of $2.25 during the previous seven days. March was quoted at $29.50 and April at $25.25. Timothy was unchanged, cash being offered at $4.95, April $4.95, May, $4.90 and September $5.55.

SOUTHWORTH & Co., Toledo, O., say: "Clover kicked up its heels in the springlike weather and got close to $30. Prices are highest ever known. The stocks are decreasing rapidly and are now near the vanishing point. Figures indicate they are around 500 bags, but may actually be somewhat larger. Shipments this week were over 3,000 bags, while receipts were small. The advance was around $2 in cash and $5 in April and October.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—J. B. Agnew advises that the report that he had retired from the Pacific Seed Growers' Company is in error, as he is still connected with T. A. Cox in the management and has succeeded to Henry Voorman's interest in the concern. He has, however, taken up the growing of sugar beets as a side line, and has increased his plantings to the extent of a 100-acre French prune orchard. He has a 90 per cent stand on 200 acres of sugar beet roots and his wheat, March 12, stood eight inches high.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—George C. Thomson, of Northrup, King & Co., reported seriously ill in last week's issue, is much better and expects to be at his desk again in a few days.

FLORAL PARK, N. Y.—In comparing volume of business with that of the corresponding months in 1918, John Lewis Childs, Inc., reports January showed a gain of 51 per cent, February was 6 per cent better, and March is running about 26 per cent ahead. There is a noticeable increase in the demand for the more expensive items.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Business for 1919, compared with the corresponding period last year, is several thousand dollars ahead, according to L. N. Simon & Son, attributed partly to the early spring. The force is exceptionally busy, having all they can possibly do, although with some night work, things are in fairly good shape at present.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Every department of the new establishment of James Vick's Sons, to which they moved last summer, shows a very satisfactory increase in volume of sales over last year's corresponding period, with the exception of grass seed, the demand for which is just starting. Contract orders for flower seeds are for larger quantities than in 1918 on many varieties, and as large an acreage as can be spared for the usual line of asters, phlox and other flower varieties is being planned for.

RICHMOND, VA.—Business since January 1 has been much more satisfactory than during the corresponding period last year, according to T. W. Wood & Sons. There has been a steady demand from all sections for practically all kinds of seeds, both field and garden, with the possible exception of potato, showing that the general farming industry is not specializing in any particular crop this year. Retail garden seed trade is just starting in great volume. Inquiries for cow peas and soja beans are larger in volume than last year. With short stocks of the former nearly everywhere, it is feared that a situation will result similar to clover seed conditions, with gradual advances in price to very high market values.

Catalogue Mailing Troubles.

C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, referring to a communication of J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., which appeared in our issue of March 15, page 414, under the above caption, writes:

"I am wondering what the late ruling in regard to the size of catalogues will lead to. We have formed a habit of submitting to any order from Washington, because we were at war, and it was the patriotic thing to do. There will have to be a showdown soon on both sides as to how far such orders may go before it will be proper to protest, and now appears to be the time to begin on this one. It seems to be an unreasonable, arbitrary ruling without a logical reason therefore. Why an ounce in weight makes one catalogue white and another black is beyond comprehension."

Congressional Garden Seeds.

In the spring a congressman's fancy lightly turns to free garden seeds. So he says to his clerk: "Send our mailing list to the federal seed-bin in the basement," which, having been done, he takes up other affairs of state.

A few days later the constituent's heart is warmed as he takes from his mail box a franked package of assorted seeds, together with a franked letter, bearing the warm regards of his congressman.

The gift package is no indication whatever that the congressman knows a cucumber seed from a shoe peg, or that he cares a peppercorn for the fortune of the constituent's sweet corn, or that he knows whether the recipient lives in a fourth floor flat or on a half-section wheat farm. This performance is but the annual carrying out of an ancient custom established no one knows when, and still honored, as All Fools' day and Hallowe'en are honored

In its inception this custom was doubtless a follow-up favor to the constituent. Why it took the form of garden seeds, no one seems to know. It could as well have been the gift of a spring hat to the wife, or of a necktie to the constituent himself. Ordering in large quantities, congress could get reasonable figures on hats and neckties, if taken as report says congressional garden seeds are taken, from left-over merchant stocks of years gone by.

Though intelligent gardeners prefer to choose their own garden seeds, and though most farmers' and gardeners' organizations have repeatedly petitioned congress to abolish the wasteful and foolish custom, still the package comes as regularly as spring itself, and bills are introduced every year to make the appropriation for gift seeds a little bigger. Nearly $10,000,000 to date has been squandered in this way.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Imports at New York.

As announced, the S. S. Noordam from Rotterdam, via Brest, arrived at New York, March 23. She brought a considerable stock of plants, seeds and bulbs, much of it consigned to brokers. The following shipments appeared on the manifest for the firms named:

McIntchison & Co., 442 cases and 162 bundles trees and plants.

John Scheepers & Co., 45 cases trees, etc.

M. Van Waveren & Sons, 17 cases plants, etc., and 89 cases bulbs.

W. Van Dorn, 444 cases plants, etc. Bobbink & Atkins, 8 cases plants.

P. Ouwerkirk, 167 cases plants, etc. A. Rolker & Sons, 6 cases roses, 9 cases other plants.

To others: 2,297 cases plants, roots, etc., 54 cases bulbs and 10 barrels spinach seed.

Catalogues Received.

American Forestry Co., Boston, Mass., trees; Oakland Dahlia Garden, Woodbury Heights, N. J., dahlias and gladioli;

A. Gaultier - Bucher, Port - Boulet, France, seeds; L. Daehafeldt, Ltd., Odense, Denmark, seeds.

THE H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., received 150 cases of Japanese bulbs by the S. S. Tova Mnra, which came through the canal. The shipment included speciosum, rubrum and giganteum lilies, all in good condition.

WOOD'S

Famous Southern Ensilage Corns

Wood's Famous Southern Grown Ensilage Corns enable farmers to grow more silage on every acre. For years these corns have enjoyed a splendid reputation for ensilage purposes, particularly in the North and West—making larger and better crops than corns grown in other parts of the country.

The past year was very favorable for curing and maturing. We offer corns cured under natural conditions—unsurpassed in vigorous germination.

"As a Silo Filler It Has No Equal"

—that's what one farmer says about it. An Ohio farmer writes: "It is the best silage corn I ever raised." Another writes: "Some of the strongest land made 100 bushels to the acre."

Write for prices of these corns that produce the most silage from the least land and labor.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports to the bureau of markets,
United States department of agriculture, for the period March 18-25, show an irregular price trend with the movement continuing fairly heavy. In western potato producing sections there was a feeling of greater confidence, the price ranging $1-$1.40 at Rocky Mountain and northern shipping points. Wisconsin and Minnesota producing sections also strengthened, closing at $1.50-$1.55 per 100 pounds, f. o. b. sacked. Northern stock held steady in the Chicago carlot market at $1.65-1.75 and ranged $1.90-$2.35 in southern cities. Old northern cabbage stock advanced to $45 per ton in producing sections and followed a wide range, generally higher in leading consuming markets at $35-$60, reaching a top of $100 in New Orleans and declined to $25-$30 at St. Louis.
Onion markets were slightly weaker, the average price of good sacked yellow stock in leading consuming markets being 25 cents lower at $3-$4 per 100 pounds. Texas spinach was quoted at 65-75 cents per bushel basket f. o. b. shipping points and $30 per ton loose.
Florida celery recovered from the decline of the previous week and sold at $3.50-$4 per crate f. o. b. California
Golden Heart ranged $8.50-$11 per crate in consuming markets. Florida tomatoes were rather weak at $3.75-$4 per 6-basket crate at shipping points.
Choice stock in northern consuming markets brought $4-$5.25.

Rhubarb and Asparagus.

One of the early spring activities in market gardening is the removal of rhubarb and asparagus fields. We generally see instructions to start rhubarb from seed, and use one-year-old rhubarb seedlings. However, we have had poor luck in this line. All the seeds we have tried, and we have tried many, have always given us a mixed lot of characters, all the way from sour-dock to select rhubarb with no two alike.
Such a lot is poor property, hence we cannot advise any one to depend on seed, unless they can find a better lot than we ever had. Our local market is a great rhubarb market, and we have seen no better anywhere. The demand is for a pink rhubarb of good dimensions, hence the growers all use divisions from selected stock plants. These may be one-eye or two-eye cuttings, and if the crowns are old crowns, it is best to select the young, strong eyes from the outside and discard the center.

The best way to plant is to simply plow the cuttings in every third or fourth furrow when plowing the land. The cuttings should be fastened to the furrow slice, and then simply covered by the next round of the plow. The common practice in this locality is clean cultivation the first year and mulching with coarse fresh manure after, and renewal every fifth or sixth year by forcing the roots in hot-beds, after which they are discarded.

To start new asparagus beds, one-year old seedlings are best. It is an advantage to produce them at home, as too often the shipped roots have suffered from drying out. Wide deep furrows are made five feet apart, and the young roots are placed two and a half or three feet apart in the rows. It is of the utmost importance to spread the roots fan-like and horizontal; in fact, it is best to build small mounds with a hoe where the roots are to be, and put each root over a mound, thus placing them in a natural position. They resent being planted like strawberry plants with roots in vertical position. It is natural for asparagus to run their roots horizontally near the surface, hence top-dressing is the method of feeding.
Asparagus are gross feeders; in fact, it is almost impossible to overfeed them, once they are under way. The first year, clean cultivation is the big problem, and those deep furrows should not be closed in altogether until the second season; merely cover the plants enough to start them and permit the soil to return to them gradually. In sections where the asparagus beetles are numerous, a poisonous spray must be used repeatedly to save the plants. We have used pyrox with excellent results.

MARKETMAN.

Asparagus of Rust-Resistant Type.

The Washington family of rust-resistant asparagus, developed by the United States department of agriculture in cooperation with the Massachusetts agricultural experiment station and other cooperators throughout the country as the result of 13 years of effort, is now well disseminated among interested growers and seedsmen, some of whom have available stocks of the new strains for sale. The department of agriculture announces that while it will continue to distribute the new strains, private enterprise must be looked to henceforth to furnish the general trade with its main supply of seeds and roots. The names of firms and individual growers who have stocks of the new strains may be obtained from the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture.

Cultural suggestions for the growing of the new strains include early sowing, clean seed bed, a small percentage of spinach or radish seeds to mark the row for cultivation before the asparagus seedlings show, the dropping of seed by hand five to six to the foot, cultivation between the rows with cultivators or scuffle hoes, and removal of weeds in the rows by hand.

In digging seedlings great pains should be taken to preserve all the storage roots unbroken and unbruised.
Trimming the roots down to a uniform length of six or eight inches is strongly condemned. One-year-old roots are said to do better than two-year-old roots of the same stock. The ideal shoot should be about an inch in diameter, straight and not much flattened, of clean growth, with scales fitting closely in a tight bud.

The department of agriculture has recently issued a circular giving information on the breeding and culture of the new rust-resistant strains of asparagus supplementary to that on general asparagus growing contained in Farmers' Bulletin 829.

Chicago's Future.

W. A. Bertram, general manager of Great Lakes & Gulf Transportation Co., says: "When the Calumet-Sag canal is finished and Lake Calumet developed into the world's greatest inland harbor, we shall see Chicago the most densely populated island in the world, with the lake on one side and canals from north to west and south to east. Chicago will be the consuming center of America, enjoying the same water rate as the Atlantic coast.
Water and coal made Pittsburgh. We are on the fringe of a large coal district, and the iron Pittsburgh uses is at our own back yard. When the canal system is completed we will have every manufacturing advantage."

AMAWALK, N. Y.—The main office of the Amawalk Nursery, Inc., has been moved from Eddyville to this city.

THE annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held in Detroit, Mich., next June, the date and place to be announced later.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—An oak, dedicated to the soldier dead of the department of agriculture, was planted on the department grounds, March 25, by Secretary of Agriculture Houston.

WILLIAM GOLDBRING, the eminent English landscape gardener, passed away February 26. The design of an old English garden surrounding the British pavillion at the St. Louis exposition in 1904 was carried out in a fine way and obtained for him a gold medal.

Arsenic for Killing Surplus Trees.

In cleaning up pasture land or clearing new land for crops it is often desirable to kill trees by some method surer and quicker than the old-time method of girdling. In dealing with the kinds of trees which sprout from the stump, such as the oaks, hickories, and red gum, a reliable method of killing is especially needed.

For the purpose of poisoning trees, arsenic has been successfully used in both this and other countries, often killing trees in a few weeks or a few days which by the simple girdling process would require months. Useful directions for making up a poison solution for quick and effective work in all kinds of timber, together with the method of application are given below, quoted from a recent number of the Australia Forestry Journal. In Australia, it appears, much investigation has been carried on, and this method has been widely used with excellent results. Following is the formula:

Arsenic, 1 pound.
Washing soda, 1 pound, or caustic soda, ½ pound.
Whiting, ½ pound.
Water, 4 gallons.

Since the ordinary white arsenious oxide of commerce is not soluble in water to any great degree, soda has to be used for the purpose. When large amounts of the poison are desired washing soda will be cheaper, but for small amounts caustic soda will perhaps be found the handiest.

To prepare the solution, first dissolve the soda (either form) in a convenient amount of water, using heat, if desirable, to assist and hasten it; then slowly add the arsenic, previously made into a thin paste (as the housewife treats her cornflour), stirring all the time; place on a strong fire, and after it has come to the boil, allow it to remain boiling for at least half an hour; stir from time to time, and be careful to stand on the side away from the fumes, as, being poisonous, they are apt to cause sickness. When the arsenic is thoroughly dissolved, the solution may be made up to the required bulk by adding the remainder of the water, either hot or cold. The whitening is added merely to serve as an indicator of the trees treated as it turns white on drying.

The best time for carrying on the operation of poisoning is when the tree is dormant, or during the winter months. This will most surely prevent suckering, although trees can be killed practically any time of the year.

In applying the poison, the tree is first girdled by a series of heavy downward strokes of the ax through the bark and well into the wood, leaving the chips protruding outward in a "frill" extending completely around the tree. It is necessary that this "frilling" process be thoroughly done, which alone would ordinarily kill the tree after some time. A half pint for small trees to a quart for very large trees of the poison is then poured into the chipped surface, taking care to saturate the wood thoroughly. An old teapot or kettle with a spout serves well the purpose of pouring without needless waste or spilling down the tree. Saplings may be cut off low down and the poison applied over the stump by a swab stick. If this is done when the sap is down the tree will be completely killed and suckering prevented.

THE KROESCHELL

Is making the most wonderful Greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists who have used other makes are continually giving the Kroeschell the highest praise.

ONE OF BOSTON'S WELL KNOWN GROWERS

The Kroeschell has taken the place of four cast iron boilers at a big saving in coal. We are using it now for the fifth year. The longer we use it the better we like it.

(Signed) A. B. KNOWLTON,
NORTH GRAFTON, MASS.

THE KROESCHELL

Has replaced hundreds of cast iron boilers. In every case higher temperatures are secured with the Kroeschell, with the same piping and with less fuel.

THE PLANT KING OF THE WEST

I have used Kroeschell Boilers ever since I built my first greenhouse. They have always given me the very best satisfaction and I believe them as good boilers as money can buy.

My Garden.

When Spring comes smiling through the wood
I love to take my trusty hoe
And in a mild, Arcadian mood
Go out and make my garden grow.
No finer outdoor sport I know,
Nor one that offers greater wealth.
A calm content it does bestow,
And that rare fruit of perfect health.

A partnership with the Divine
I feel in all I plant or sow.
The care and delving must be mine
And God will make the flowers grow
And fruits to ripen in the row.
But more than Nature's kind increase
From out my happy labors flow;
More than all that, heart-ease and peace.

Too oft in barter and in trade
Our gain another's loss must show.
But what is in my garden made
Is never through my brother's woe.
I feel the kind and easy glow
Of one whose time is wisely spent;
Like busy bees the hours go
To bring the honey of content.

L'envoi

My garden, unto you I owe
My spirit's wider range and scope
That causes in my heart to grow
A higher faith, a nobler hope.
—Thomas Lomax Hunter, in Saturday Evening Post.

SUGGESTIONS FOR EASTER.

Easter Stock.

The concensus of opinion of the best judges of the Easter plant market, is that all flowering plants of whatever grade, will be sold at good prices. In fact, at this writing, April 1, there is little that is not engaged, and many have been compelled to accept, or only fill from 25 to 50 per cent of the amount of the orders desired.

Those growers who took chances with cold storage giganteums will come out away ahead, as in nearly all cases they have turned out much better than expected. But even with this success, and the Bermudas and the Azores, there will not be one-quarter the usual supply.

Belgian azaleas are of course out of the question, but a very good substitute is the Japanese hardy azalea, Hinodigiri. These, particularly in four-inch pots, when bushy, well flowered specimens, are in great demand for combination baskets, and on account of its comparative low price, popular with all buyers. Larger stock, with their great wealth of small flowers, closely set on even the smallest shoot, are quite the equal, as a decorative plant, of the best imported Belgian varieties, and have the added advantage of being perfectly hardy.

The choicest plants of all the Easter assortments are the varieties of heather and Boronia elatior. Such stock is never plentiful, as it has to be grown by specialists, men who in addition, are assisted by reason of favorable location, securing natural suitable temperature and atmosphere.

Hydrangeas were never better than the various stocks seen this season, nearly all of which are the newer French varieties. Growers should select one of the dwarfest growers and finish it in four-inch pots, as there is a great demand for this size for basket combinations. Rambler and baby rambler roses, while not as plentiful as the hydrangeas, will be the two quantity items of the Easter assortment. There will also be quite a supply of tea roses, plants forced a year ago and discarded, Ophelia, Sunburst, Hoosier Beauty, and the ever popular American Beauty. These, grown in pots during the summer, make fine stock for forcing for Easter. Magna Charta is seen in many stocks. There is no better variety grown for a pot plant. The cold spell of March 26-29 was a great boon to the growers of bulbous stock, which had been coming on so fast that it was thought impossible to hold these in flower for Easter. They are now declared to be on the safe side and can be counted on.

The matter of the high prices is viewed quite seriously by the timid ones. There should be no uncertainty regarding this all important matter. The cost of production has been much greater than ever before, the wholesale price is now twice that of a year ago, and the ratio of profit that was found necessary when prices were low or normal, must still be maintained. A retailer said recently: "It takes nerve to ask $4 for the plant that I sold last year for $2, but I get it; in fact, I have to, and while during the past winter I have not handled quite so much plant stock, yet my books show a good volume of business and a fair profit."

Easter Plant Baskets.

There is no Easter offering more effective or salable in the store than a well arranged basket of flowering and foliage plants. They are bound to figure prominently this year on account of the scarcity of so many of the popular favorites, such as azaleas, lilies, rhododendrons and most of the bulbous stock which latter can hardly be held until the late date.

These plant combinations can be made up in all kinds of receptacles. The supply houses offer baskets and hampers in all sizes and great variety of form and coloring; they are seen in round, oval and square, with high and low handles, all fitted with tins or water proof receptacles. There are self colors or combinations of every tint imaginable.

The less expensive holders are, painted plant tubs, earthen pans and bark covered boxes. The trellis box is also a good seller, the latticed support, when trimmed with a baby rambler, offering a splendid background for the small plants in front.

The foliage plants consist of small palms, kentias or arecas, in three or four inch pots, small Pandanus, Veitchii, variegated funkias, dracenas in variety, particularly Sanderiana and Kelderiana. Crotons are especially valuable in three and four-inch pots. Nephrolepis Norwood, elegantissima, Smithii and Verona, all feathered ferns, are very effective. The near Farleyense, or adiantums, Glory fern, cuneatum and Croweanum add grace and refinement while Pteris cretica and Mayii, with their white striped foliage, relieve heavy spots of green.

Any of the flowering plants that are available are, of course, to be used in these combinations. Many that are not symmetrical, or with scarcely blossoms enough to make a salable plant, will fit into and give color and good finish to many plant arrangements.

There is great economy of time, and a much better growth and finish, to all work of this character when it is made up at the greenhouse the week before it is to be offered for sale. The necessary receptacles, and all the stock for filling, should be gathered together at one of the growers, where skilled men, without interruption, can in a short time make great progress. With the gradually increasing stock before them, combinations are repeated or changes and variety in the new work suggested. A good plan is to have a schedule numbering the amount of the various sizes, to meet the store's demands. There should be tags attached to each arrangement, on which is written the cost price of the receptacle, and the stock used in filling, this latter to be added as each is planted.

All work should present a good finish, a few small ferns covering the soil front or back, when any gaps occur. Good color combinations are important. Pinks should predominate in a shaded blue basket, yellow should have a green or brown background and are also beautiful in white and gold. Light blues and whites, in a pink and white basket, are harmonious. Tubs painted light blue, with their bands gilded, show off a Tausendschon rose to good effect, also pink hydrangeas.

Filling the Baskets.

There will fortunately be quite a few spiraeas, which came over just on time to make Easter. These with their luxuriant foliage and beautiful white plumes, are great additions to all large arrangements. They cannot well be used in their original clumps, but can be easily divided by cutting the ball of roots up from the bottom into three or four sections; cut to within an inch of the top, then pull the plant apart. In this way, the ball is not disturbed, and none of the stems or foliage broken. The roots that are cut do not seem to affect the plant, as there remains enough in the solid portions to sustain life. The ball, of course, should be wet, and the separated sections not allowed to get dry thereafter. Ferns that are too full and heavy, can be divided in the same way and suffer no bad results.

Pansies, Bellis or English daisies, English primroses and forget-me-nots all make good pans or boxes or low baskets, which filled for a week, become, at the greenhouses, or in frames, full of flowers.

Easter Week in the Store.

There is no more trying time for the retail florist than that of Easter week, when he is called on to handle from four to six times his usual volume of business. Experience is a great teacher, and each store has a system, some much more perfect than others, which has been evolved from lessons learned in the past. The foundation of all systems is preparedness. The man who looks ahead, and prepares well in advance for every contingency, does not go "off the handle," or "up in the air," when the stress comes, but is ready with his emergency measures, to handle the situation.

The small city store in the retail district, has to make the most of every foot of space, often covering up wall cases or space with step staging, so as to make all the room possible for pot plants. Every kind of stock not required for Easter, is stored away and all cut flower work is made up in the basement, or out of the store, so as to leave the work table or counter for Easter plants. The arrangement should all have been planned out before hand, the necessary staging provided for or in stock and ready for the plants as they arrive. Provide saucers for every plant; they will require less water, and will not dry out, nor will they drip over the floor. A wet, muddy floor is an abomination.

As far as possible, it is best to keep each kind of plant together. They are much more showy in solid blocks of color, than the variegated mixture so often seen. A bank of genistas, another of pink hydrangeas, or of the blue, a block of spiraeas, Tausendschon or Dorothy Perkins roses, give color and mass effects that call particular attention to the various groups. Plants in all the varieties can be featured with special decorations to the pot, and ribbon bow in the foliage, bird or figure sticks and the like, and elevated in the group, so as to give it prominence. It is also very much easier to wait on customers, when all the stock of a particular plant is right before them.

There should be a space, to which plants sold can be at once removed. Customers are always wanting the things that are marked "sold," and think nothing else is good. So it is best to get all selected stock immediately out of the way. All clerks should be instructed to urge immediate delivery, but if plants must be held until the last days of the week, there should be a space provided for them. He is a lucky man who can find an empty store, or light basement nearby, in which to store stock, and also use it for the delivery department.

A system, in which a double numbered tag is used, appears to work out well in handling and keeping track of stock that is sold. This tag attached to each plant is perforated across the center with duplicate numbers above and below. When sold, the bottom part, with price on reverse side, is pinned to the sales slip. This plant is by the removal of half the tag automatically marked sold, and is easily found in any group when wanted for delivery. There should be a "hold for card" section, customers often selecting stock and bringing later a card to go along, which they want to attach themselves. This is then soon accomplished.

The tag envelope is a great time saver. With a bunch of these wired, or with string ties, into which the customers card can be placed and the address written as on a tag, the plant is immediately ready for delivery.

All pots should, in addition to being cleaned both on sides and bottom, be decorated with crepe paper, mat or two shades of paper, outside white and inside at the top the same shade as the flower. All of these covers should be on hand, of a size to fit any pot or pan. Such preparation is a great help, as it is then but a moment's work to attach them.

EASTER PLANT BASKETS.
Baby Rambler and Hydrangea.

A good system at this busy time is to have the bookkeeper or cashier address all tags and tag envelopes containing cards, and write the order with prices, date and hour of delivery on a small sheet of paper the size of the tag. These three are then fastened together with a wire clip, and filed in the box of that date for delivery. When orders are being put up, this system greatly expedites the work. If this is done as soon as orders are taken, items and prices not understood are corrected while the matter is fresh in mind. Every order should be written so correctly and plain that it could be put up by any competent person, but at these hurried times mistakes will occur, and this immediate checking is a great help.

At such busy times, very few cut flowers should be handled in the store. Orders are taken for Saturday or Sunday, delivery. When at night, the time comes for putting up the boxes, their selection should be in the hands of one competent person, who, with the stock within easy reach in the stock boxes, selects the orders, adds the card and tag, which are then given to clerks to be placed in the boxes for delivery. Such a system avoids all friction, and the proper stock in amount and quality is given to each order. Corsages are left to the last, when they are made up from stock reserved for them, so that they shall be as fresh as it is possible to have them.

System in the handling of stock as soon as it is sold is important, as in the hurry and confusion of the rush times, mistakes are liable to occur that cause disappointment and loss. One man should be in charge of the plant stock, whose business it is to see that, as far as possible, it is always in order, quickly replacing from the floor, unsold plants, and seeing that the sold stock is properly tagged and sent to the delivery department. All plants should be wrapped for delivery; it takes time, but it is much the safest plan. With a little coaching inexperienced women can do this and the perfect delivery of the plants will more than repay this expense of labor.

Keep all stock in saucers, and urge their sale as most necessary to success of the plants in the house. No flowering plant will remain in bloom or last any length of time in a heated room without a saucer to catch the surplus water, which is taken up as the soil dries out.

Great care must be taken to see that no plants are dry when delivered. As a rule, they are not watered at once, perhaps not until the next day, and they are then in such condition as to cause complaint and dissatisfaction. A dry plant often means a total loss when it has to be taken off the bill.

A few extra boys for long distance deliveries are of great assistance, relieving the cars for more important work. These long distance carriers, get things out on time, which otherwise might be too late. It is well to mark the time they leave the store on their list, and also the same on their return. It keeps them on the job.

As the stocks run low, they should be brought together and placed so as to present as good an appearance as possible. When scattered all over the store or greenhouse, they look, from the empty spaces, as if the best had been picked out and there was nothing but the culls left. Every endeavor must be made to sell out as clean as possible. At the very last, prices may be lowered to bargain hunters, but judgment must be used, as good late buyers appear for plants to be sent to friends they have overlooked, or who have surprised them with a gift.

EASTER PLANT BASKETS.

Tausendschon Rose, Pink Hydrangeas, Pink Spiraea, Pandanus Veitchii, Marguerites and Pink Ribbon.

Salvias.

There are few more popular plants for bedding purposes than the salvia and when properly grown they are a great ornament to a garden either as beds by themselves or as an edging for cannas or other tall plants, the dwarf varieties being especially adapted to this purpose. To make a showing in midsummer the plants should be started early either by cuttings or seeds so that the plants at this time should be large enough for a 3-inch pot and should have been pinched back at least once and beginning to branch. These can be potted into 4-inch pots in April and will be showing bud by the time for planting them outside in June. Such plants of course cannot be sold as cheaply as the late-sown seedlings that are grown closely together, and allowed to run up to a single stem, but it will not take so many of the former plants to fill the same space and the bed will be in flower through the summer and fall while with the latter too often there is no bloom until just before frost, and when the first frosts are early the plants are not in bloom but a few weeks. The early plants are much more satisfactory to the customer and will cost but little more owing to the larger space which they will cover during the season.

WORCESTER, MASS.—A modern flower shop has been opened by Samuel Fierer at 21 Pleasant street.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—Peter Smith, formerly with the Dale estate, has opened a flower and seed store here.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—John Grande, Jr., whose establishment was badly damaged by fire recently, is making good progress with rebuilding.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

The Grower-Retailer.

The grower whose range is in, or convenient to, a good residential district, where, with a combined store, he can dispose of his stock at retail, is ideally fitted for carrying on the business in the most economical way. When, in addition, he possesses skill as a grower, and is alert in keeping his stock and varieties up-to-date, he is almost sure to forge ahead and be counted as one of the successful men of the trade.

A prominent grower in the above class, at his greenhouses in Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., combines all the above requisites. His quite extensive greenhouses are always progressively filled with seasonable, salable stock, one crop closely following another, as he claims it is only in this intensive use of greenhouse space, that the business can be made to pay.

Order and system are everywhere apparent; nothing is done in a haphazard way and there are many wrinkles in plant culture and management, the result of watchful experience, that he is always turning to good account. His stock of French hydrangeas, splendidly budded, are the admiration of all who see them. The quantity variety is Bouquet Rose, which he finds makes the best pot plant. They are all one year old, from cuttings struck in March, potted into three, then four, and later shifted to 5½-inch pots. They are grown on the inside after the bedding stock is out of the way, until it is time, in August, to bring in the carnations. They are then plunged outside, in the ground from which the carnations were taken. They are never allowed to want for water, and are pinched as late as September 15. They are brought inside late in November before danger of hard frosts, and placed under the benches in a cool house. Never at any time, must they be allowed to become very dry, when growing, or particularly when dormant, or loss of buds will be the result. They are started in a temperature of 45-50°. As the shoots develop, they are given 55° and then 60°. About March 1 they are shifted into larger clean pots, mostly six-inch, and the largest to seven-inch azalea or half-pots. The new pots do not have to be cleaned at Easter. Very good stock is also seen that had been planted outside. These made a stronger growth, and were mostly placed several together in tubs to make larger specimens. It was all ideal stock, with a bud on nearly every shoot.

Whenever a bench has been cleaned of its soil, it is thoroughly hosed and given a spraying with a solution of carbolic acid and arsenate of lead, which destroys all insect life and fungus.

A bench of Keystone strain snapdragon had given excellent results the entire season. This is never sprayed with water, as to dampen the foliage, it is thought, causes rust. Nicotine and lemon oil spray are used whenever necessary for insects.

No manure is mixed in the soil for mignonette. There may be a layer of well-rotted material on the bench before the soil is placed, but it must not be mixed through.

Carnations on raised benches are planted close; not over seven inches apart in and between rows, with 24-inch wire stakes at the ends of rows and between each plant. These are held at the top to straight wires, the length of the bench, by means of a "Cort" wire clip. As the plants grow, a string from one stake to another binds them in an oval, and keeps the flower shoots erect until they reach the top wires. This plan appears to work admirably. It is found that young carnation plants, after being potted, do best on a cool bottom, ground space if light, being preferable to a bench.

A bench of gladioli had gypsophyllas sown between, which came along after the bulbs had been cut out. Bouvardia had been a splendid early winter crop on one of the benches, which had given way to make room for Easter forcing roses, of which 100 pots of fine Frau Karl Druschki were a feature.

Five thousand cold-storage gigantes had been forced, about half of which were coming on for Easter. Much of the stock was a very good height and well set with buds, many carrying three to five to a shoot. This is all started under the benches, and remains there until the growths are at least 10 inches in height. Many growers bring their lilies to the light when two or three inches in height. They then spread out and make a compact short growth and cannot afterwards be drawn up.

Soil that has been used on the benches for one crop, may be regenerated, fallowed or sweetened, by turning up roughly and given a sun bath and a thorough drying out. With, or even without, the addition of a little fresh soil, very good results have been obtained by this process.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

As the busy time approaches, the uncertainty as to the available plant supply continues, so much depending, particularly with the bulbous stock, on weather conditions. Those who have been dilatory in visiting the growers, are now finding out to their sorrow, that there is little, if anything, of value left, for the reason that there was not near enough to go around in the first place. Growers are now offering fabulous prices to one another for choice stock; 385 Azore lilies in six inch pots, scarcely showing buds, were recently sold for $400. Growers are in a quandary as to the distribution of their meagre stock. Much of it, already set aside, could be resold at greatly advanced prices.

The only salvation for the late buyer is to gather the odds and ends, and have these, together with foliage plants, made up into baskets. The season has been so open, and outside stock so advanced, that even as late as a week ago, growers were lifting and potting deutzias, which they were sure would make Easter.

The coming week should have the Easter event featured in every possible way. The fact that this spring floral holiday is rapidly approaching, should be emphasized in a window display of samples of the choicest offerings,—roses, hydrangeas, spiraeas, genistas, heather, etc., all trimmed to lock their best, also several made up plant baskets in various sizes. Such stock, artistically arranged in window and store, will produce a good effect, and is likely to have a ready sale as well.

Care should be taken in the prices of advance orders of cut flowers, as they will certainly soar to very high figures, much in advance of anything normal for this holiday. It will be a great Easter for the grower who has the stock, and also presents an opportunity to the dealer, lucky or foresighted enough to have it to handle.

In all the various details of store management, there should be a round-up to see that every department has been looked to, and is in readiness for the great strain. The weather is now so settled that the first filling of the window boxes can and should be made. All pansies are sure, as they will stand a frost. These are full of flowers now and present an immediate and satisfying effect. Customers should be urged to have this work done at once, as if not, they are sure to come in at the last and order them to be in place before Sunday morning. Marguerites, geraniums and vincas could almost be risked this season, but in all cases, the customer is to take the chance, otherwise it is up to the florist to make them good.

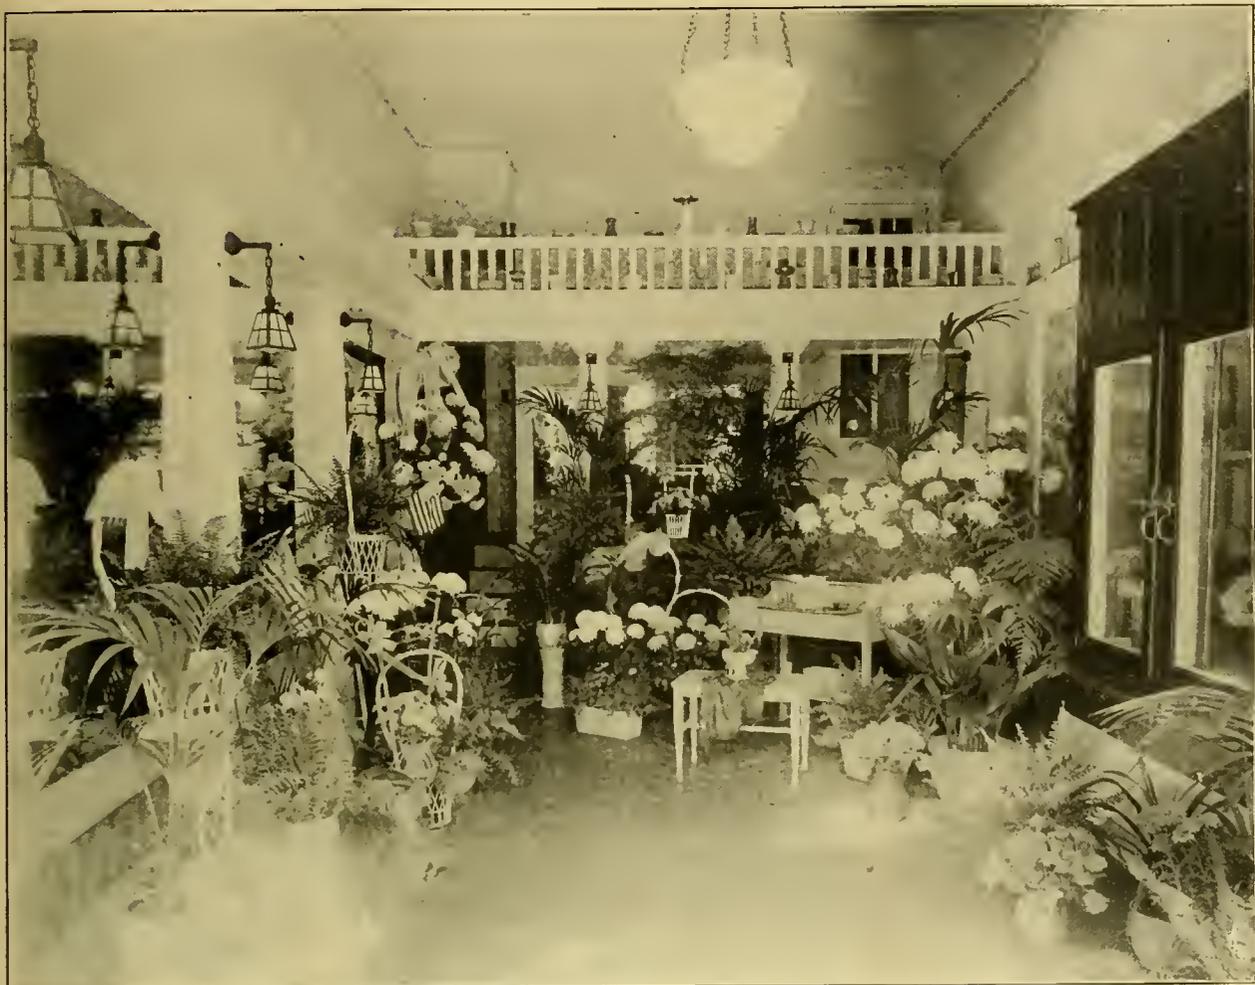

If, on account of their not holding for Easter, pot and pan hyacinths and tulips are plentiful, they could be run as a feature at this time. When nicely decorated with crepe, white and colored paper the shade of the flowers, or chip mats, they take on at once a different character and should be easy to move.

The store display tables should never be without something artistically made up in vases or baskets of cut flowers, articles that have an inviting, "take me" look. The little bud vase with one choice rose, placed on the customer's writing desk, is often sold, as it gets, for the moment, undivided attention.

Be sure to have a good supply of fibre or earthen pot saucers. No plant should be sold without a saucer. If this feature should become general, it would have much to do with increasing the love for plants and their use in house decoration. Particularly is it important at this time, when rambler roses, spiraeas, hydrangeas and other full blossoming plants make such demands on their roots to overcome the dry rooms of the dwelling.

Push daffodils and sweet peas. They are now at their height. Both are popular with flower buyers, and can be sold to good advantage.

A good publicity feature is to have a few stock slips, or announcements; one calling attention to the fernery and the variety of plants for refilling, another to the semi-weekly or week end flower service of boxes of spring flowers at a special price. Time to fill window boxes, and list the appropriate stock, is another good subject. The description of the advantages of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery will make interesting reading. These should be kept in separate boxes with one pasted on the outside to distinguish them. Every box or package sent from the store should carry one or two of these slips. Their cost is trifling, and each contains an individual message that is read, and may possibly be read by others, and at times, laid away for reference.

A Modern Flower Shop.

The accompanying illustration pictures the interior of one of the best appointed, medium-sized flower shops that one will see in a day's journey. This ideal store is situated in a residential district which is fast becoming a business center. In all large cities, due to various reasons, such as changes in car lines, subway or elevated roads, there are at times rapid changes in business centers, where dwellings of all kinds are altered into stores.

G. A. Leins, who for several years conducted a retail shop at 2834 Girard avenue, Philadelphia Pa., wishing to have a more modern store, purchased a dwelling at No. 2825, on the opposite side of the street, and converted the front room into a store. In lowering the floor almost to the level of the street, he obtained a 15-foot ceiling, which nearly always makes a bright interior.

The store is 17 feet wide and 35 in depth. Its width is accentuated by the aid of four large mirrors, each 56x65 inches, which, placed between colonial columns, give a continuous mirrored surface the depth of the store on one side. The fluted wooden columns support a somewhat heavy cornice shelf over the mirrors and are continued across the rear of the store, partitioning a space seven feet in width, which, open to the view of the store, is used as a work room. Over this is a balcony of the same width with an ornamental railing. This is used to store and display baskets and gives a good decorative effect from the front. A lantern electric fixture in front of each column, together with the semi-direct ceiling light, gives a very artistic illumination. A marbled base under the mirrors adds a good finish. The woodwork is white enamel, the walls papered in tones of light gray and blue. A feature which gives a bright, clean appearance at all times, is the floor of red plastic composition laid off in squares. The color effect is striking. It is easily kept clean and always looks fresh and new. The front of the store is in keeping with the interior, there being a large show window, with wide transoms above, which admit light over the awning in summer. The photograph was taken last fall at chrysanthemum time.

Mr. Leins is a great believer in the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," which is used on all his stationery, tags, customers' envelopes and cards, as well as on his car, and painted the full length across the top of his awning.

The colonial treatment of this interior, together with the mirror effects, electric fixtures and plastic flooring, present an ideal store decoration that requires but comparatively few plants and flowers to give it a well-stocked appearance. It is worthy of close study by anyone contemplating changes or improvements to their store.

PLANT NOTES.

Hydrangeas.

There are very few plants that are generally grown that show more variance in their culture or in the returns to the grower than the hydrangeas, especially those that are grown for summer blooming. In looking over the stocks in the several markets one will often see the extremes of these plants grown in the same sized pot; one with eight to 10 heads of bloom, short and stocky with fine foliage, an ornament on any porch or in any yard; and the other tall and long jointed, with two or three heads of bloom and five or six branches with no flowers and the foliage thin and small, the former bringing the grower $2.00 to $2.50 and the latter hardly averaging 75 cents. Yet these two plants have practically cost the grower the same amount of labor. These plants grow rapidly and must have plenty of room, an abundance of sun and lots of nourishment. It is useless to try to grow a good plant when they are crowded together. Many growers finish these plants by raising the pots over the benches of bedding plants that do not now require the full amount of sun, placing the hydrangeas about four feet apart in the center of the bench and standing the pot on a stand two feet above the other plants. This gives the hydrangeas a fine location. When the plants have set their buds the pots will probably be full of roots and a watering of liquid manure once or twice a week will greatly assist them in finishing up the flower and keep the foliage in good color. To grow good hydrangeas they must have plenty of food, room enough to grow shapely and for the air to circulate all around the plant and a light, well ventilated location. Under these conditions they are easily grown and are remunerative to the grower.

Freesias.

Although the freesias are a cheap bulb they should not be thrown away, for it takes but little attention to ripen them off after they are through blooming and as good bulbs can be procured as those that are purchased. The freesia is a native of southern Africa, so they are blooming at the natural season when flowered in midwinter in the north. But the bulbs must be allowed to mature their growth and then dried off gradually. The pots or boxes in which they are grown can then be placed in full sunlight and allowed to become very dry. A shelf near the glass makes an admirable place on which to place them after the growth has finished and no more watering is required, but they must not stand where any drip from the roof on a stormy day is liable to keep them moist. They can be shaken out in June and the bulbs started, as it is comparatively easy to select the flowering bulbs and store in a dry place until wanted for planting. For Christmas blooming the bulbs should be started early in July and a succession of plantings until September will give the grower flowers until the following spring.

Lilium Longiflorum.

Among the best flowers for greenhouse culture during the summer months is the Lilium lancifolium, of varieties rubrum, roseum album and Melpomene. While these varieties can all be grown outside, yet under those conditions they rarely give perfect flowers and they also tarnish quickly in the direct rays of the sun or under heavy rains, and to have flowers that can be used for decorative work or designs it is far better to grow them under glass. Those that are to bloom in July should have been started in March, but for August blooming they can be planted now. One of the easiest ways to grow these bulbs is to plant them in boxes from four to six inches deep, not too large, but of a size that one man can handle when filled with soil. Do not fill the boxes too full when planting the bulbs, for like all lilies they throw out roots at the surface, so it is well to leave room for top dressing later. Grow them in a cool, shady location and after the spikes begin to grow give them plenty of water and keep them tied erect to stakes. Constant fumigation will be necessary to keep the green fly in check. This is in no way forcing these bulbs, and if properly dried off after blooming the bulbs may be grown year after year and a good crop of flowers obtained.

Celosia Plumosa.

The plants of Celosia plumosa or the ostrich plume celosia are of very easy culture and make very showy plants for either the garden or the greenhouse. They form pyramidal bushes and the yellow and red plumes which resemble ostrich feathers stand gracefully above the foliage. While they make showy plants for the garden, finer specimens are grown under glass, and they make very showy plants in the late summer and fall. Seed sown in April will make fine plants for culture during the summer, but like all the celosias the young seedlings damp off easily. As soon as large enough they should be potted in good light soil in 2½-inch pots and later shifted to 4-inch to grow large plants to 6-inch pots. They should be grown in a good, strong light, for if shaded the plants will become drawn and the dwarf, compact plants are more desirable. C. plumosa aurea, the orange ostrich plume, and C. plumosa coccinea, the crimson ostrich plume, are the two best of the older varieties, and Pride of Castle Gould, a new introduction of the last few years, is the best of all the ostrich plume varieties and can be obtained in many colors.

Gypsophila Paniculata.

There are few summer flowers that are of more use to the florist having a local trade than the gypsophila, for it lightens up work beautifully and greatly aids in softening the appearance of the summer flowers, many of which have a coarse look in floral work, and in bouquets, sprays and basket work the sprays are particularly useful. The grower not possessing a good bed of this should procure stock at once and plant them in a good, sunny position, and after once becoming established they require no further attention than to keep the bed free from weeds and occasionally cultivated. Seed can be now sown and as soon as large enough transplanted in rows outside where they can remain until another spring, when they can be again transplanted to permanent quarters, but to have plants that will bloom this year it will be necessary to procure older stock. The double form of this plant is even more beautiful than the single for some purposes, and its lasting qualities make it more valuable for a cut flower than the older variety.

THE ROSE.

Handling the Easter Cut.

Easter coming so late this year, April 20, makes timing of most any kind of a crop a matter of guess work, as the weather being so irregular at this season, the crop is rushed and checked, at intervals, and no matter how carefully one attends to the ventilating and the heating end, there is still left certain elements over which the grower has little control, yet, there are many things, that by extreme watchfulness and care, can be made to counteract unfavorable weather conditions. The grower at this time is more or less inclined to let some of the outside work cause a certain amount of neglect on the inside, but we have found it good business to employ extra help from now on until the houses are emptied and planted, keeping up the regular routine inside, and giving the inside plants particular attention at the change of the season. As we carry over at least two-thirds of the indoor stock each year, we try to keep them growing vigorously right through the season, until time to prune. We are rewarded by having a good strong wood to select, when pruning, and wood that is free from red spider, which is of great importance in starting with clean growth every season. This can only be accomplished by persistent syringing and frequent mulching, running through April, May, June and July (if necessary), with the same care as we used in mid-winter, and it surely pays. We have tried various crops grown on the outside in former years, too numerous to mention, crops that at times caused us to take the help from inside to help handle, and invariably we have found that any crop that we have grown outside, that has conflicted with the indoor growing, has been handled at a loss. This may be the opposite of some other growers' experience, but where roses are the main crop and, with the competition as keen as it has been of late years, the grower must not, of necessity, make many false moves inside, and the stock surely will not stand for any neglect on the inside if one wants to keep abreast of the times and the "trailers" do not count. This, of course, applies to the young rose stock, which, if neglected in any way, will show the result later on when benched. Keep the young plants shifted after each growth has ripened. The 2½-inch stock can be shifted to a 3-inch, and the 2½-inch stock to a 3½-inch pot. After leaving the three-inch size, all pots should be carefully drained; one piece of concaved crock, with the concaved side of the crock covering the drain hole, is far better than a handful of finely broken crock, and never use charcoal for drainage as is sometimes recommended. It takes a little time to drain a pot properly, using sometimes two pieces of crock, one at the side of the hole, and another resting on this, forming a bridge, so to speak, over the drain hole. If one has the slightest doubt as to the difference this little detail makes in the growth of the plant, he can try say 50 plants, potted as described here, and 50 more where the drainage has been just "chucked" into the pots. I am sure the results will be in favor of the former method. Again, do not let any speed limits or records be broken when potting rose cuttings or shifting the stock. A certain amount of time is required to pot a rose properly, as the soil must be thumped down very finely, and not pushed in tightly with the thumbs. Leave considerable room for water at the top, and aim to have a certain regularity in all of the work.

Now just a few suggestions in regard to the cut for Easter. In spite of the many warnings to growers through the trade papers, there were many instances where the old practice of "corning" the stock was resorted to last Christmas, and in all probability this will occur again this Easter. But all we can say is "don't." We think, with the most gratifying prices received by the growers during the fall of 1918, and the season of 1919 up-to-date, that the grower who would offer stale stock, would come under the heading of a slacker. There was a time when we were all on the anxious bench, thinking we would have to run the ranges on a 50 per cent basis, whereas the peace treaty was signed, and we forged ahead under the same conditions, (growing conditions), with the privilege of buying coal, and followed by the best prices for stock the grower has ever received. Of course, these prices balance, or in other words, are justifiable compared with the prices of everything required to produce good blooms, and yet the figures could and were expected to assume different proportions in our ledgers. So, for the sake of continued good business, let the consumers get their money's worth; at least have the decency to give them fresh flowers. The Easter cut will in all probability require a little extra care in the handling and cutting. There will necessarily be a lot of "ice-box stock," but this need not be any serious drawback. Keep the ice box scrupulously clean, and all jars or crocks scrubbed daily, plenty of fresh water, and avoid placing too many flowers in the jars, by cutting several times a day. The flowers can be cut in a much more uniform manner saving a lot of extra handling from day to day, and when sorting the cut, the blooms can be selected carefully, so that each flower will be uniform, advancing at the same stage for shipment. The cut must be handled daily, tagging each jar, and anything that reaches the 72-hour stage, after cutting, should be packed and shipped. With the proper facilities, the cut stock at this stage will be at its very best for the commission man to handle to the best advantage. With the ordinary means for keeping stock where, for instance, the cellar is used with no ice or cold storage, unless the weather is somewhere around 45° outside, which will hardly be the case in most localities from April 15-20, we would suggest shipping every other day. The impression we are aiming to make is to have the cut reach the consumer fresh for the sole purpose of working the business of selling the growers' output at a fair profit and continued good business. If this is not incentive enough for any grower, he surely is past advising.

London Flower and Plant Prices.

The influenza epidemic has made white flowers even dearer than would otherwise have been the case. Lilium Harrisii, always expensive at this time of the year, now bring 21s. to 24s., but especially good L. longiflorum realize as much as 36s. Callas are also expensive, the wholesale price being 13s. to 18s. Even camellias are from 6s. to 7s., all per dozen blooms. Lily of the valley sells freely at about 4s. per bunch, while the humble snowdrop is valued at from 5s. to 9s. per dozen bunches, and not large ones at that. Richmond roses and May Day carnations are the chief colored flowers, though Parma violets from France, tulips and lilacs from Holland, and the interesting snake's head, or, as the salesmen term it, Widow iris (Iris tuberosa), because the segments are black and green, from Sicily, are in limited quantities. There never were such prices for daffodils as now; they range from 12s. to 24s. per dozen bunches.

Pot plants are unequal to the demand, and cut foliage is also unduly scarce. The chief plants are genistas, hydrangeas, marguerites, cyclamens, cinerarias and ericas.—London Garden, March 8, 1919.

THE CARNATION.

Care of the Older Plants.

The demand for carnations continues good, so it will pay to give close attention to the older plants that have been doing business throughout the winter season and encourage them to extend their productiveness for a considerable time. It has been the rule in former years, when the brighter days of early spring nearly doubles the cut of carnation flowers, to let up on the care of some of the benches of plants, and gradually let them drop out for the season, or else replace them with some pot stock, but this year, carnation plants in good productiveness, are about the most valuable stock on the place, and it is a hard pull to have to rip any of the plants out, and unless it is absolutely necessary to have the room for some more important crop, a little closer attention given the carnation plants at this time will help them prolong their usefulness to well into the summer.

Unless the beds have been mulched lately, it will greatly help the plants to put on a mulch of one-half fine, fresh soil and one-half well-rotted manure.

The purpose of putting on a mulch at this time is twofold. First, after continuously watering the beds as needed throughout the winter, the soil will have by now become washed from the roots of the plants and sunken quite a good deal so that it is now in need of replenishing to give the roots some fresh soil to work on. Another good reason for putting on the mulch at this time, is to protect the roots from the increased power of the sun from day to day, which causes the soil to dry out too rapidly so that the blooms become smaller as the season advances. The mulching of the beds now serves still another purpose; it conserves the moisture in the soil, saving quite a little on the watering, which is a very important point, for if we can hold the soil in the proper condition without having to water too often, the plants are better off for it. From now on, as the weather becomes warmer, less steam heat will be needed at night, which means that there will be less drying out of the soil from that source, and the soil will retain the moisture much longer. Overwatering, under these conditions, is one of the causes of stem rot starting in again at this time of the year.

The plants can be syringed on a bright day once each week to keep the red spider in check and freshen up the growths of the plants.

SHADING AND CUTTING.

After April 1, plants that are expected to remain in production for any length of time, will be greatly benefited by a light shading. The best method of doing this is to draw a strip of shading, six to eight inches wide, down the center of each pane of glass.

It is hardly necessary under the present conditions to dwell on the importance of keeping the flowers removed from the plants as soon as they become ready. During the balance of the season, it is best to cut them before they are fully developed. They will then retain their color longer and keep very much better.

CARE OF THE YOUNG PLANTS.

The young stock being brought along for next season's planting, should be given the closest attention. This young stock is now growing rapidly and needs to be watched closely as regards topping back the growth to keep them strong and bushy. Every branch the plants can be induced to make between now and planting time will mean extra flowers next winter. The earlier propagated stock of these young carnation plants are now strong enough to go outside in cold frames whenever the bench space in the greenhouse is needed for other plants, but the frames must be situated out of danger of the plants becoming flooded by heavy rains, also with a southern exposure for the plants to get the benefit of the warm spring days. A week or so before the time comes for planting them out into the field, it is a good plan to remove the sash from the frames during favorable weather to harden off the plants so that they will stand the transferring to the field better.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Cyclamens.

This famous winter-flowering pot plant, bids fair to be of great importance the coming season as there is but a limited supply. None of the large growers have any young stock to sell, requiring all on hand to make sure of their winter supply for next season.

While there are still some young plants in the seedling boxes, most of the stock is now in two-inch pots, some of the strongest in fours, and with some growers planted out on benches of soil, where they make a quick growth, much faster than in pots. These are lifted as they become large enough for a four-inch pot, and shifted on as they grow.

One of the large growers of cyclamens, who has been very successful, prefers bringing his plants from the seed flats on in pots. His stock is now nearly all in two-inch pots, with four to five leaves. It is standing on a bench covered with ashes, each pot spaced so as to give all the leaves freedom and allow a circulation of air around the pots. These are frequently sprayed with the hose, as often as twice a day being not considered too much in bright weather. A few hundred of the largest have been transferred to four-inch pots.

In speaking of planting out on benches, this grower says: "They make a quicker growth, but it is more or less gross or spongy, and they get quite a check when lifted to be potted. I never like to disturb the roots of a cyclamen in any way, as this is quite sure to interfere with the building up of a perfect corm or bulb, the finished form and later ripening of which has so much to do with the quantity and quality of its flowers."

DAFFODILS AND YELLOW RIBBON.

How To Make A Small Greenhouse Pay.

Paper by Edward Williams, Grand Island, Neb., read at the annual meeting of the Nebraska State Florists' Society, Lincoln, February 25, 1919.

I am very glad that I am able to be here today, having risen from a sick bed to be with you, but if a florist cannot attend a meeting of his co-workers once in a year, at least, he might as well be dead all over as to be half dead.

Our genial secretary has handed me a problem: "How to Make a Small Greenhouse Pay." The record of the largest ranges in the country today, is that they started on a small scale. Nearly all within hearing of my voice, I dare say, all of you, began with a few dollars and lots of nerve, and that determined "I will," and here you are today. Of course, some of us have not succeeded as well as others, we know, but we do know one thing, and that is this: That anyone that thinks it is a snap to embark on a small scale in the floral business, has another guess coming.

Conditions today are different to what they were 25 years ago. When most of us started up, the florist, or I should say, the "hothouse man" was a small fry in a community. The neighbors were always against him, for, if he did not smoke them out with his tobacco stems about twice a week, he would wake them up along the "wee hours" of a zero morning to ask them for the loan of their largest lamp, and if they had two he would take both, for that old flue was not drawing well. Of course, being up all night was all right; it had to be, and, of course, the watering and firing had to be looked after the next day, besides hitching up "Old Dobbin" to deliver that 25-cent bouquet to Mrs. Maloney, for she was going to entertain the ladies' aid that day and when you got back some one had been in and ordered a $2 wreath. Of course, as is expected, you missed your dinner, but that is all right. When evening came, you had covered the frames and were ready to eat that evening meal. Oh Boy! how I will shovel in that food. You sat down and proceeded to get busy, when along comes a rap at the door. "Is Mr. Jones in? Yes, well I thought I would stop to let you know that some boys have broken out several glasses in your roof." "Thank you." Out you go, grabbing up all the gunny sacks you can carry. After looking after that operation, you return to the good wife who is warming over the plate of victuals you left half devoured. Some life! The years roll along. Johnnie is growing to be a big boy and he does most all the delivering. The wife has taken a hold of the cut flower end of the business and we have a college boy who takes care of the firing nights for his beard and room, making it a little easier for father. The silver clouds are just breaking through. Yes, they are, for dad does not get up nights any more. We have a steady fireman; no more delivering. We have a delivery boy. No, mother does not work any more; we have an experienced salesman. Father need not pull that smudge can around. He does not have to cover up the cold frames. The foreman looks after all that. Johnnie takes care of the business end. What does father do? Nothing. Oh! what a glorious feeling. Now you all know that these few remarks of mine are the steps that most of us have taken in climbing up the ladder of success. Some of us have come through with a few less scars than others. Some fell by the wayside. I will close this rambling of mine by stating that I know, and you know, of men that have made more money, lived better, and have not worked every member of the household to make it, as the small beginner in the floral business has. You and all of us, are entitled to all we have or will make. And I think that when we get beyond the river, the small beginners will all be in the front row.

Getting down to how to make a small greenhouse pay, after giving you a few facts as to what to expect when you start in a small way. To begin with, these days are days of specialists. My advice to a beginner would be to grow one thing, and grow it well. To start on say carnations and bedding plants, or sweet peas and bedding plants, filling in at different seasons, such as following up with a summer crop of early tomatoes, cucumbers, asters, etc. In that way, working his capital the year around, of course, the cold frames can be used to good advantage at all times. The cut from a small place would be best disposed of to the retail stores. I am referring to a beginner in a city, where the competition is keen at all times. A man must know where he is at. It is better to be safe than sorry. Always hold up your standard for square dealings, know what it costs you to grow your stock and get a price that will leave you a profit on your investment. Cheapness never gets one anywhere. Study up on your business, so as to be prepared to make suggestions along different lines, such as, laying out the lawn, planting shrubbery, or where to make the flower beds so that they will do best. Let customers know that you are working for their interest. Last but not least, get paid for it, for the upkeep in the floral business, I dare say, is above the average, besides at all times handling perishable goods.

If a small beginner in a small town, absolutely different methods would have to be used, for then, he would be catering to his own retail trade, and would have to govern his plantings accordingly; a mixed line, so as to be able to fill almost any order, for any occasion, and having connections so that he can get goods to fill his orders on short notice, in that way growing with his trade. The one big mistake many have made is, after getting started, they want to increase too fast; hence, getting into debt, paying big interest, and overstocking. Of course, I realize that nothing ventured, nothing gained, but there is a limit, and one must know where that limit is.

A florist is not made; a man must have a love for the profession to stick to it. He has to be able to stand set backs; he has at all times to hold himself in readiness for any emergency, for there is lots of grief attached to all business. Treat your employes with respect. Give them to understand that some responsibility rests on them. In that way, they will take more interest in the work. I could go on with more along this line, but I have stated facts, which, if adhered to, will bear fruit.

I wish also, at this time, before concluding, to say that since we last met, things in general, look brighter. I believe that this country will enjoy real prosperity for some time to come, and it will be safe for us to be prepared for our share of it. The past few years have been very trying for us, but we have weathered the storm. The florists of the United States have held up their share. All have done their utmost to back up the government. It is gratifying to me to see how our profession has come to the front. These meetings bring us together, we exchange thoughts, we get closer together. The work of the different committees of the Society of American Florists the past two years has been very burdensome. Right here I wish to say that every florist in Nebraska should be a member of the national society. Do not be a sluffer. Get in the game and shoulder your part of the work that has been accomplished by this society. As state vice-president for Nebraska, I would like to see us 100 per cent S. A. F., and I am going to do the best I can to make it, and I want every S. A. F. member to help me.

Problem of Fairness and Justice.

There are, at the present time, many of our progressive florists, who have felt the benefit of the use of the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," and who can see the cumulative value of its continued usage, where everyone feels the advantage by the continuity of its use. There has come to me innumerable letters pertaining to the effect of its use by various members who innocently have been exploiting the slogan in this manner. "Say it with Brown's Flowers," (or any other name could be used for illustration), but it would be better for all concerned, and the good of the slogan would be kept, by just utilizing the words, "Say it with Flowers," in our regular set form, leaving out the firm name in this connection. This to 100 per cent advertising value, will eventually keep its prestige up. Whereas, using it in connection with a firm name, it loses its implied action, and eventually, would be dropped. Now let us in fairness and justice to the craft generally, for the future, stick to the slogan as it is. If needs be, in reading texts of your advertisements, mention the firm name as often as necessary, but for national results, please let us not make any changes. This is purely a request, and those that can do so, will merit their own reward. This is written in a spirit of fairness to all, and not intended as a criticism to those who have used it otherwise.

EASTER PLANT BASKETS.

Heather, White Hyacinths and Dwarf Pink Azaleas.

The trade publications are giving this publicity to the article with the hope that all may join in the good it can create by proper usage. Use the slogan, "Say it with Flowers," without reconstruction, and all will feel its benefit.

HENRY PENN.

National Publicity for Flowers.

With the close of March, our campaign fund stands at a little over one-third of the required sum of $100,000 to be subscribed. The progress made is not as satisfactory as might be expected, in view of the very excellent results following the campaign of last year, and the early efforts of this year. It is very evident that large numbers of florists are still hesitating to send in their subscriptions. On the other hand, it is pleasing indeed to record subscriptions from whole-hearted business men, in addition to amounts previously subscribed. These men have satisfied themselves that our campaign is no longer experimental in character, and is productive of immense benefit.

Various organizations in other lines of trade have for some years been conducting campaigns similar to ours, and from the fact that the efforts of many have been doubled several times we can safely judge that their campaigns have been successful. These activities have been conducted on lines, which, in the main, are similar to our own. While some have employed a taxation plan based on goods shipped, the voluntary contribution plan has been adopted where possible. Nearly all use a slogan in connection with their publicity, but it is freely admitted that our own slogan, "Say It With Flowers," is the best ever coined. It is not mandatory, but simply suggestive—and there is subtle power in the suggestion.

All florists may use our slogan. The more it is used, the greater the benefit to the trade. But do not change it in any way—it ceases to be effective when changed or adapted to a personal reference. It is even better to use the exact type form adopted for the magazine advertisements. Our promotion bureau, in order to meet this need, has available electrotypes of the slogan line in various sizes for requirements under any and all conditions. Every florist who uses his local newspapers for his direct publicity, should possess himself of one or more of these electrotypes. Folder describing them, and other newspaper plates, are available on application to the secretary. All electrotypes may be used continuously according to their season. Our "Mothers' day" electro of last year is just as effective this year; all that need be changed is the "12th," and any newspaper will do this. The date this year is May 11. All electrotypes of this advertisement sent out in future will have provision for this change.

One of our largest subscribers—a man who sizes up a situation very readily—has suggested that there may be many florists who would like to subscribe $50 or $100 or more annually, but would prefer to make monthly payments on their subscriptions. Our finance committee is quite ready to accept contributions in this form, and will record and publish the full amount of such subscriptions only.

Our committees would impress upon everyone who has not yet subscribed, the importance of taking action quickly. The committees lose no time whatever. As fast as available amounts are collected, our advertising agency is instructed to put into circulation the publicity matter prepared. There is no waiting. This is the reason urged for a prompt response to our appeals. Now is the season for effort and the committees are not justified in taking personal risks in the placing of any orders for which they have not sufficient funds to cover.

Lupines.

The lupine is one of the most beautiful flowers of its class. It grows readily from seed sown in summer. The young plants can be potted up and carried along in a cold frame until quite late in the season, but the growth must be protected from frost. They are brought into the house to follow chrysanthemums, being planted out in good rich soil on the benches. The temperature should not be over 50° at night—some growers advise 45°. Under these conditions, the first flowers are ready for cutting about February 20. Good strong plants will send up spikes, which carry flowers one-third or almost half the length of 36-inch. If this spike is cut with a short stem, from four to six lateral shoots below will break out and produce sprays about 10 to 12 inches long, well covered with bloom for which there is generally a good demand. The strongest plants are the first to flower, producing wonderfully fine spikes, which if cut off at the ground, measure 36 inches including 18 inches of flower. Such stock brings top price in the market. The standard colors are shades of blue, white, and a golden yellow, or orange, which latter shade is new.

Carnation Prices for Mothers' Day.

We are in receipt of the following communication under recent date from Charles E. Russell, of the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, O.:

"The proposal of the carnation growers to ask higher prices for carnations for Mothers' day may not be profiteering, but it will inevitably appear so to the public, and in my judgment, there is grave danger that the Mothers' day idea will be endangered, and that the retail florists of the country will get a black eye if they attempt to feature carnations for this occasion at the prices that will be necessary, if the growers stand pat.

"Of course, the retail florists would be foolish to be made the victims. They can sidestep the situation by telling the public frankly that they are refusing to handle carnations at all this year because they know prices are too high. But this course will leave a bad impression in the public mind, and will, in my opinion, undo all of the work of the florists' associations in building up a sentiment and in making Mothers' day a national event. It will be a shame if the growers precipitate such a calamity.

"Carnations at more than six or eight cents each are too high priced for that day. If we cannot buy at that price, and sell at $2. or not more than $2.50 a dozen, we shall let them alone."

Detroit Bowling Tournament.

Anticipating a renewal of interest in bowling as a feature of the entertainment during the Society of American Florists' convention week this year, the local committee on bowling is making tentative arrangements for the event, and requests the organized teams throughout the country to make their entries for the participation in the games as soon as possible. The programme thus far arranged is as follows:

Grand contest open to all organized teams competing for the grand trophy. Two other prizes will also be given in this contest, and a prize to the player on either team scoring the highest average. The individual games will be open to all except those players in the three games of the grand contest and, at least 10 and perhaps more prizes will be awarded, graduating from the highest, down to the number to be later designated.

The championship contest of three games will be open to the 10 or more players scoring the highest points in the individual games, and the highest man from each team entering the grand contest. The ex-presidents' contest will be open to all ex-presidents of the Society of American Florists, and suitable prizes will be provided.

Ladies' bowling. Three games will be rolled by the ladies and at least 10 prizes awarded.

The entire top floor of the Recreation building has been engaged for the exclusive use of the visiting and local florists, and here all the games will be rolled, including the ladies' contest. There are 28 alleys on the floor and they are considered the finest in the west, and being on the top floor of a nine story building, the maximum of comfort for the bowlers and spectators will be enjoyed.

According to the present plans, Wednesday evening, August 20, will be assigned to the contest. Captains of organized teams please make entries and report to Joseph Streit, chairman, 1366 McClellan avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Massachusetts Agri. College Short Course

The Massachusetts Agricultural College has just announced its policy to repeat as often as may be necessary the special six-weeks short course in agriculture and horticulture for returning soldiers and sailors. Such a course was given at the college during February and March of this year. The success from the first course and the number of inquiries received from men in service in the United States and France has induced the college to make this provision for men who wish a short period of practical instruction as a preparation for farming.

The next six-weeks special short course will begin April 14 and close May 24. Instruction will be given in soils and fertilizers, field crops, types and breeds of live stock, poultry husbandry, farm management, farm machinery, fruit growing and dairying. Tuition is free. No fees of any kind are required in this course.

It is expected to make special provision during the summer term, beginning June 30, for instruction of soldiers, and if there is sufficient demand for it to give a special six-weeks short course soon after college opens next fall.

Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago met at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, March 27, when the following officers were elected: Joseph Kohout, president; Peter Pearson, vice-president; Otto H. Amling, secretary; N. J. Wiator, treasurer. Walter A. Amling, George Ball and Rudolph Ellsworth were elected members of the executive board, and R. J. Windler, chairman of the membership committee. There was a large attendance and the constitution and by-laws of the association of cut flower and plant growers tributary to the Chicago market, known as Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago were adopted. Great interest and enthusiasm was shown at the meeting, and many telegrams and letters of congratulation and endorsement have since reached the secretary's office.

Horticultural Society of New York.

It was unfortunate that the exhibition of the above named society, March 28-30, connected up with about the worst storm that has visited New York since the winter of 1917-18. Nevertheless, and notwithstanding bad weather, the display was creditable, and the exhibitors who braved the elements, are to be commended. Commercial growers of cut flowers who are taking stock in schemes of publicity that are as nebulous as the proposed League of Nations, might well consider the advantage of exhibiting at such a time and place, the American Museum of Natural History. As it was, there was but one commercial exhibitor of roses and two of carnations; Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., with the rose, Columbia, and a sport of the carnation, Benora, and Louis Hoebel, West Fort Lee, N. J., with a new variegated seedling carnation. Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., made a fine exhibit of cymbidium hybrids, for which he was awarded a special prize.

The exhibits were staged in the spacious foyer of the museum, where in years past, the public has gasped and wondered at the mammoth chrysanthemum plants grown by John Canning and Ed. Marshall. The space formerly occupied by the big blooms was made attractive with groups of flowering and foliage plants by the Julius Roehrs Company, Rutherford, N. J., and groups of forced flowering trees and shrubs by Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., both exhibitors being awarded special prizes. Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., exhibited attractive novelties in flowering orchid plants and were awarded a special prize. Julius Roehrs Company also took special prizes for specimen plants of Azalea indica and genistas.

James Stewart, gardener to Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and George Ferguson, gardener to Mrs. Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y., brought attractive features to the exhibition, Ferguson having the largest number of exhibits and the greatest variety of them. James Stewart's collection of amaryllis was an exceptionally fine feature which won a special prize. He also took first honors for a vase of 18 roses—Ophelia, or any Ophelia sport, the schedule had it. We believed it to be a sport; also a special prize for vases of clivias, and first for 12 cyclamen plants. George

George J. Ball, Glen Ellyn, Executive Board.

Ferguson exhibited the following: 12 pots Primula malacoides, first prize; 12 pots Primula obconica, first prize; vase of annual lupines, special prize; 25 dark pink carnations, first prize; 25 carnations, Belle Washburne, first prize; 25 carnations, Princess Dagmar, first prize; 25 white carnations, first prize; 100 sprays of sweet peas, first prize; 12 spikes mignonette, first prize.

John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y., showed pots of the yellow calla, Elliottiana, which won a special prize. Peter Hauck, Jr., East Orange, N. J., (Max Schneider, Gr.) exhibited 12 plants Primula malacoides, second prize; also 25 light pink carnations, first prize; 25 flesh pink carnations, second prize; 25 scarlet carnations, second prize. Mrs. Francis T. Morgan, Highland Falls, N. Y. (Louis Karsten, Gr.) staged 25 flesh pink carnations, first prize; 25 variegated carnations, first prize. Mrs. J. Hood Wright, New York (Chas. Thomas, Gr.) took first prize for 18 red roses. Mrs. Louisa Skidmore, Great Neck, N. Y. (Louis Plantin, Gr.) showed 18 Columbia roses, first prize; 18 red roses, second prize; 18 yellow roses, first prize; vase of elagnus, special prize.

James A. Macdonald, Flushing, N. Y., (R. Hughes, Gr.) exhibited specimen Azalea indica, special prize; specimen Adiantum cuneatum, special prize. William Shillaber, Essex Fells, N. J., (J. P. Sorensen, Gr.) won a special prize for vase of Sweet Pea Yarrowa. E. Fardel, Great Neck N. Y., for a basket of Fardel hybrid freesias, was awarded a silver medal; a novel and attractive exhibit. Charles H. Totty's vase of variegated carnation, sport of Benora, won first prize. Louis Hoebel, for variegated seedling carnation took second honors. This is something of a novelty, hard to describe—pink and lavender, we would call it.

The Late Henry Hansen.

Henry Hansen, well-known Chicago florist, died Monday afternoon, March 31, of diabetes at the age of 60. He was born in Sweden, but came to this country at an early age, and was for a time with his father, who conducted the business at 1742 Cemetery drive about 50 years ago. He became proprietor about 35 years ago and built up a splendid business, being ably assisted by his family. He had a host of friends in this vicinity, and was well thought of in the neighborhood in which he lived, which was very much in evidence in the shape of the beautiful floral tokens seen at the funeral.

The funeral was held the following Tuesday from the home to St. Gregory's church, with interment at St. Henry's cemetery. This is the second time that the grim reaper visited the Hansen home within the year, Elmer dying last June. Arthur, who was with the American troops overseas, arrived home several months ago. Mr. Hansen leaves a wife, Elizabeth, and three children, Margaret, Henry Arthur and William. The family has the sympathy of the entire trade in the loss of a loving husband and father.

DAYTON, O.—H. H. Ritter, veteran florist of this city, has been seriously ill at his home, suffering from a complication of diseases.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—F. Edward Gray is still conducting his establishment here at 4832 Fifth Avenue, and in addition to landscaping is a florist.

APRIL 11, 1919, is bird day.

THE second number of the Journal of the Society of American Florists, just out, shows material improvement over the first issue.

THE United States department of agriculture is claiming that lily bulbs, now grown abroad, can be produced in this country, but the government authorities do not prove that the same can be done at a profit.

LILIES for Easter are coming on remarkably well, considering that the bulbs were held in cold storage an unusually long time. The stems on 7-9 bulbs are somewhat short, but show from one to five buds each. The increase in the loss of bulbs is slight.

A CABLE from London quotes Guglielmo Marconi, wireless inventor, as follows: "Within three months, you, from your hotel room in London, will be able to call any New York telephone number, get it inside of fifteen minutes, and then talk for three minutes for $5.

American Rose Society.

The annual meeting of the American Rose Society, held at the Hotel Breslin, New York, April 2, was quite well attended and several matters of business interest were disposed of. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted in the selection of Capt. George C. Thomas, Jr., Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., as president. F. L. Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., was chosen vice-president, and Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., and Professor E. A. White, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., were re-elected to the positions of treasurer and secretary respectively. The executive committee, which will serve for three years, consists of Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.; George H. Peterson, Fairlawn, N. J., and James Boyd, Haverford, Pa. A. F. F.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that The Elm City Nursery Co., Woodmont Nurseries, Inc., of New Haven, Conn., submits for registration the new plant mentioned below:

Ibodium privet is one of some thousand seedlings produced by crossing Ligustrum ibota with Ligustrum ovalifolium, ovalifolium being the mother parent. It is similar in general habit to the California privet, being perhaps somewhat more robust. The foliage is glossy dark green, turning at maturity, when subjected to extreme cold weather, to a rich bronzy-green. It is also more inclined to bush freely from the base as compared with California privet. Its great claim for the public's consideration as compared with California privet, is its hardiness, partaking in this respect of the pollen parent, ibota, having proved to be perfectly hardy wherever the Ibotia privet is hardy, which gives this new hybrid a very extended range of usefulness. The extreme test as to hardiness was proved out in the winter of 1917-18, when ibodium privet lived without the slightest injury, side by side with the California privet, which was not only killed to the ground but in many cases perished outright. The name "ibodium" is coined from the Ibo from Ibotia, and Iium from ovalifolium.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date. OLN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

SECRETARY HUSTON REFUSES RELIEF.

Winfred Rolker, of the New York Florists' Club protesting committee, received a communication on this subject from Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., under date of March 28 and we reproduce extract from the official document as follows:

"It is clearly my opinion that the distinctions and classes in this quarantine order have been made only after careful consideration of the best information obtainable. It is also evident that the various restrictions embodied in the order are not necessarily final; one amendment has already been issued, that of February 12, 1919, with reference to the use of sterilized soil about the roots of imported plants. It is, therefore, always possible that further convincing evidence may make other amendments necessary, not only for modifying or removing restrictions now in force, but also for extending existing restrictions or adding further prohibitions thereto.

In view of the facts and considerations above set forth, it is my opinion that Plant Quarantine 37 is scientific in origin and purpose, as well as sound in principle, and that its enforcement will make for the safety of the plant, fruit, and forest interests of the country, with as little injury to private agencies and individuals as is compatible herewith."

[It will be noted from the above that Secretary Houston supports his federal horticultural board in its most sweeping plant quarantine and expects the horticultural trade of the country to beg for possible modifications from time to time. In other words, practically all importations are cut off bodily.

If the American plant importer has the political influence, and the time and money to spend on railroad fares and hotel bills in Washington, he may try to secure those rights which he has enjoyed and exercised for more than 50 years in importing from leading European nursery districts, without injury to American horticulture.

The federal horticultural board has ignored all requests for actual proof of damage done by commercial horticultural imports. Future action is outlined in the fact that a report is current to the effect that the board had enlarged the list of bulbs exempted under the quarantine, but Chairman Marlatt advises April 2 that no amendment permitting entry of additional bulbs had been made or is now being considered.

The number of federal employes and their salaries are being increased very materially from year to year. The new quarantine should enable such political party as may be in control, to add a large number of appointees to this service at fat salaries.—Ed.]

LENTEN CURTAILMENT NOT SERIOUS.

Business is reported on all sides as being very satisfactory. The Lenten season does not seem to have curtailed the demand to any appreciable extent; stock of nearly everything is daily becoming most plentiful, and at the present time there are very few items of which there can be said to be any shortage. Roses are increasing in supply every day and prices in the wholesale market have dropped very considerably. American Beauty is now quite plentiful. The crop of short blooms is more than enough for the demand. Prices on this item remain strong and steady. Russell is not quite so plentiful, as it has been, but an adequate cut is promised by the growers in the near future. All other roses are in ample supply, with the exception of Cecile Brunner. Carnations are now at their best, and most of the stock arriving is of excellent quality. Prices have dropped with other stock. Daffodils are still coming into the market in large quantities, and bring varying prices, according to quality. Many of the newer varieties are to be had in large numbers this season and have brought good returns. Sweet peas are gradually improving in quality. Most of the stock arriving is from under glass, but outdoor stock is promised shortly. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are in large supply, both cut blooms and pot plants. They have met with a ready sale at good prices all season. Yellow and other colored freesias are not in as great supply as formerly, but there is plenty of Purity to go around. Snapdragon is one flower that is very popular, but the supply is as yet somewhat limited. Cut cyclamens are plentiful, and are largely used. Red flowering peach is now one of the most prominent fruit blossoms shown. These are very popular and great quantities are disposed of daily. In acacias, molissimo is the best variety coming in and is in great demand for decorative work. Gardenias and orchids are on the short list again, with prices very firm. Phalaenopsis amabilis is being largely used for weddings when it is available. Violets are in large supply and very cheap. Some fine azaleas are to be seen and the cyclamen stock is also large and varied. Auracaries have proved to be a very popular pot plant this season, and great numbers are being disposed of. Bougainvilleas are now coming in and make beautiful window displays. Ferns and greens are rapidly coming back to the normal supply.

NOTES.

The tragic death of Adolph Schwerin in an automobile accident last week was received with much regret by the trade in this city. The automobile he was driving was run down by a street car and he received injuries which caused his death the next day at Franklin hospital. He was associated with the well known firm of Schwerin Bros., wholesale florists and fern growers of Visitation Valley, near this city. The deceased was 50 years of age and a native of the city. Three brothers and four sisters remain to mourn his loss. The interment was private. Mr. Schwerin was a very unassuming man, and held in the highest respect by all the trade.

P. Vincent Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., presided at an enthusiastic meeting of the florists at Red Men's Hall on the evening of March 14. The "home-coming banquet" that the returning members of the trade who have been in the service will sit down to, will be the largest and most elaborate ever held

DAVEY TREE SURGEONS

The tribute of George W. Barnett to Davey Tree Surgery

Adamsville, Rhode Island.

The Davey Tree Expert Co., Inc., Kent, Ohio.

Gentlemen: Last year your experts treated a number of trees on the estate of Mr. Morris Whitridge, of which I am in charge.

I naturally was interested in this work, as the particular trees treated had previously been filled with cement. When this crude filling was removed, revealing the hidden decay, I was curious to find out if the same thing would happen again in a few years after your men had completed their work.

As I watched closely each stage of the treatment given by your representatives, I soon saw how your methods made it utterly impossible for the cavity to spread or moisture to enter.

Since then the trees have stood the most severe storms, and no signs of cracking or opening have appeared. I am a staunch believer in Davey Tree Surgery.

Truly yours,

George W. Barnett, superintendent.

by the florists of this city. The committee of which Frank Pelicano, Victor Podesta, A. O. Stirn and other prominent florists are members, are working diligently to the end that the affair will be long remembered in this city.

John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate park, had a narrow escape from serious injury last Sunday. While motoring beneath the cliffs at the ocean beach, a landslide occurred, and a large boulder crashed into the roadway in front of his machine. Donald McLaren, who was riding with his father, says he does not care to undergo another such experience.

Henry Maier, manager of the Hillsborough Nurseries, has fully recovered from his recent injuries in automobile accidents, and is now busily engaged with his landscape work. He is sending out large quantities of plants daily, and has many large landscape projects under way. His large range of glass is in the best of shape for the Easter trade.

On the occasion of his seventieth birthday, Luther Burbank was the recipient of hundreds of congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the country. The day was observed in the schools throughout the state as Burbank day. The legislature of the state also sent a telegram of congratulation.

Large shipments of Mahonia aquifolia are being received by some of the leading stores here. It is being largely used instead of galax leaves, as it gives a much more graceful effect to floral designs, owing to its beautiful colorings.

The Bay Counties Seed Co., Milton Tonine, manager, is showing a fine lot of Chinese magnolias in bloom this week. Some of the varieties are literally a mass of flower. He reports a brisk plant trade.

P. Vincent Matrara spent several days visiting the various plant growers around the bay, arranging for the Easter supply of plants for the Art Floral Co. He says trade is fine with his firm.

The Art Floral Co. has been showing some wonderful Bougainvillea glabra and spectabilis the past week. They were perfectly grown and greatly admired for their beautiful coloring.

The Chas. C. Navlet Co., on Market street, is out with a new automobile delivery truck. Manager Picetti reports a good trade right along in their cut flower department.

Avansino Bros. have been showing some excellent camellias in flower at their Geary street store. They always maintain a high grade of stock at this establishment.

Eric James, of Elmhurst, is furnishing this market with some wonderfully grown plants of Azalea Hindodegeri. This is a very popular variety in this market.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, was a week-end visitor. He says trade is holding up in fine shape in the capital city.

Norman Pollard has resigned his position with the Art Floral Co., and is undecided as to his future movements.

M. J. Williams has resigned his position as sales manager of the California Nursery Co. at Niles.

Kenneth S. Murray has finished his cut of colored freesias for the season.

RITO

THE ENERGIZER FOR SOIL BACTERIA

IS COMING TO AMERICA.

WONDERFUL RESULTS have been obtained by the use of RITO in Great Britain during the last three years. Owing to the war it has been impossible to export, but now we are free to do so, and feel sure that the Horticulturists of the U. S. A. will at once avail themselves of this unique method of increasing their products and of getting their stuff ready for the market some weeks earlier than they have hitherto done, and so secure a much higher price.

WHAT IS RITO?—RITO is a humus, organic or natural fertilizer, a stimulant and energizing medium for soil bacteria.

WHAT IS HUMUS?—Humus is a complex substance or mixture of substances present in the richest of soils. It is black in colour, and hence renders the soil darker. RITO contains Humus in the right form for fertilizing the soil.

WHY ADD HUMUS?—Because most soils contain very little (if any) Humus, and it is necessary for the proper development of the useful soil bacteria. The bacteria find in the Humus constituents a suitable medium for their robust propagation.

That is, Humus is a source of food and energy for the soil bacteria.

WHAT IS THE ANALYSIS OF RITO?—It has very little chemical analysis and it does not come in the same category as fertilizers. It is essentially an energizing medium for soil bacteria. Phosphates and potash are present in all soils, but in the ordinary way they are not readily available. RITO, by energizing the soil bacteria, is calculated to make the phosphates and potash available for the plant. It also stimulates the nitrogen-fixing bacteria into action, so that the consequent development is out of all proportion to its analysis.

RITO takes the place of farmyard manure, or it may be used in conjunction with farmyard manure or any recognized artificials. RITO is free from weed seeds, spores and germs, and from the eggs or larvae of noxious insects.

It is well known that the soil is not a dead inert mass of matter, but that it teems with bacteria, which only need to be treated properly to be called into activity. There are millions in every spadeful of soil.

RITO may be used in the open or under glass.

What RITO Users Say:--

"I used RITO in the soil for my Tomatoes this year. The result was the best crop I ever had, and I started picking two to three weeks earlier than usual from seed sown same date as previous years."

A market gardener says that his RITO-treated lettuce were ready for the market a month before the untreated ones, with the result that the treated ones brought 2s. 6d. per dozen and the untreated ones, when they were ready for the market, brought 1s. per dozen.

"I tried RITO last year on Potatoes, and they yielded 30 per cent better than those not treated."

"Every ounce of fruit from both the treated and the untreated Tomatoes has been gathered and carefully weighed. The weight of fruit gathered from the treated portions averaged just five times the amount as from the untreated portion."

"I have used RITO in the Peach Houses, and find that it greatly improved both the quality of the fruit and also the growth. I also find RITO very good if used when mixing soil for potting various plants, and I have also used it on my Vines with excellent results."

"I have pleasure in testifying to the merits of RITO. It is 'Right Ho' and no mistake. I never saw Tomatoes do so well as when your RITO was applied as a top-dressing mixed with the soil; the roots the plants made in this way were extraordinary, and the crops correspondingly good. The same applies to Cucumbers, also Chrysanthemums and to plants generally. It seems to consume the moisture, hence less watering is required."

"RITO treated Chrysanthemums made a much quicker and better start than they have usually done—in fact, the plants show a great improvement."

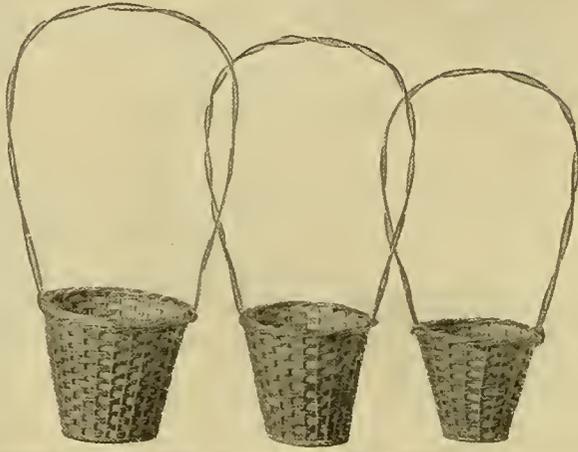

RITO is packed in double bags, and the price is $5 per 100 lbs., ex Quay Boston or New York. Terms—Cash with order.

Please address your orders at once to The Molassine Company, Ltd., East Greenwich, London, England.

BUSINESS SHOWS BIG IMPROVEMENT.

Business has shown a big improvement during the past week, consequently prices have stiffened considerably, and stock is not as plentiful as it has been, although there is enough in almost all lines to go around. American Beauty roses have been in large supply, but sold well at good prices and cleaned up almost completely at the end of last week. Roses, in general, are in large supply, but are moving better than they have been at somewhat higher prices. Carnations continue to hold their own and move quickly at satisfactory figures. Lilies are seen at several of the stores in large quantities, but are in much better demand now, and the surplus is nowhere near as large as it was last week. Callas are quite plentiful. Sweet peas are to be had in quantity, but like everything, they are in stronger demand and prices on this item are now considerably higher. Some fine snapdragons are being offered, as are tulips. Lupines are moving briskly and gardenias are holding their own. Orchids are having a good call, and violets are cleaning up well. Freesias, jonquills, daisies, pansies, forget-me-nots, sweet alyssum, lily of the valley, iris, stocks, mignonette, Paper White narcissus, pussy willows and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is offered. Practically all the wholesalers are of the opinion that the election campaign in this city has affected the local demand to a large extent, and a great improvement is looked for now that the hottest fight in the history of the city is over. The retailers and wholesalers had a good sized advertisement in one of the daily papers, March 28, which helped some, for the local demand was surprisingly good the following day. Everyone will do well to place their Easter orders early this year, for cut flowers promise to be in strong demand, owing to the great scarcity of blooming stock in all sections of the country. Pot lilies will be exceedingly scarce, as far as this vicinity is concerned, but there will be a good supply of cut lilies, although it is expected that they will clean up early at prices ranging from 25 cents to 35 cents per flower.

A MESSAGE TO THE COMMERCIAL CUT FLOWER AND PLANT GROWERS

The organization of the cut flower growers of Chicago and vicinity was a natural expression, and another evidence of the timely awakening of the producers to the necessity for closer co-operation.

There was a time when man was supposed to be at his best when alone; today a man who is out of touch with his fellow men is useless.

A perfectly constructed machine is dependent upon the co-operation of each of its component parts and its ultimate utility depends upon the harmony with which each part does its work.

The spirit of the day is co-operation; unity of purpose with harmony in every activity. Organizations to be of the most wholesome benefit must broaden knowledge among its members for the benefit of the public and is a force for mutual benefits.

The wholesale flower grower no longer stands aloof from others within the industry. He appreciates the strength of his position and realizes that his part in the flower industry is not only paramount with but superior to all other auxiliary organizations. His is a fundamental position upon which the wholesale and retail florists depend.

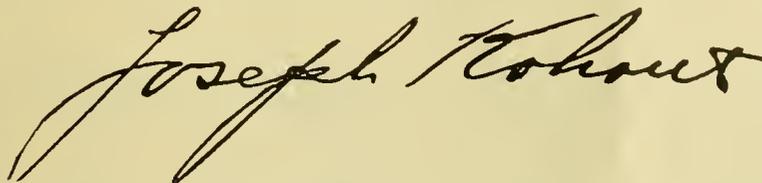

The war taught the producers of cut flowers the disadvantages of the lack of united effort.

The past experiences taught him a lesson, the present finds him organized. The basis for co-operation in the olden days often was secrecy. The essence of old business practices was often deceit; but the spirit of today in co-operation is truth.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago and vicinity have begun the organization to establish closer relations between its members; the wholesale merchants and retail establishments. To foster a spirit of usefulness, and in fact for the building up and the maintenance of a more efficient agency for public service.

I feel only too deeply the responsibility placed upon me. Encouragement is my hope and assistance my assurance of pronounced success. Every grower is welcome. Our cause is your cause. Let us unite in the building of a useful organization that calls for a full measure of approval.

Faithfully yours,

President of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago.

Rose Grower,

Allie Zech says that the early demand for lilies for Easter at Zech & Mann's store is very heavy and that while their supply will be one of the largest in this vicinity, he looks for a complete clean-up. Wieter Bros. say there is no let-up in the demand for carnation cuttings or rose plants, which are exceptionally good property this season.

GOOD SUPPLY MOVES FREELY.

Greenhouse stock has been very plentiful the past week, and although there is probably a greater supply on the market than at any time during the winter, yet there is no surplus. The death rate in this city has been heavy, and there seems to be but slight abatement in the influenza. Callas and sweet peas are the most plentiful flowers and are being used for funeral sprays and designs. Orchids are also selling well, and there are fine offerings of snapdragons. Good quality carnations are available. Roses are used up each day, but the medium grades seem to be in the greatest demand. Single violets continue plentiful, and meet with an excellent call. The shipping trade is unusually good for this season of the year.

WARM WEATHER UNSETTLES MARKET.

Warm weather, which brought out enormous quantities of stock at a time of exceptionally low demand, practically demoralized the market during the past week. Stated prices were out of the question and both wholesalers and growers were glad to get what they could in the way of returns. The arrival of large quantities of southern daffodils served to further embarrass the situation and not for many years have there been so many sweet peas, pansies and other small flowers. Street sellers are being supplied with large quantities of short stemmed American Beauty roses, sweet peas being spurned as too plentiful. The week ended with a heavy rainstorm, accompanied by wind, snow and sleet.

NOTE.

The coming banquet of the florists club will be the important event of the month. An elaborate programme is being arranged by Chairman George C. Shaffer, Fred H. Kremer and Edward S. Schmid.

SUPPLY AMPLE FOR ALL NEEDS.

The market is easy. The receipts are not as heavy as they were a week ago, but still there is enough to go around and take care of all requests for stock. Prices have reached a reasonable level. Shipping business holds up well. The supply of roses is adequate and of a good quality. Among others, some choice Russell may be had. Carnations are in a good supply. The same is true of sweet peas. Easter lilies are becoming plentiful, while a fair amount of callas and rubrums is coming into the market. The list of bulbous offerings includes daffodils, jonquils, freesias, tulips and Narcissus poeticus. Snapdragons are fairly plentiful. Other offerings are pansies, calendulas, orchids, forget-me-nots, mignonette and marguerites.

NOTES.

Nick Weron has taken over the Rosebank Company's range. He has been with this firm for some time, and knows the business thoroughly.

R. A. Betz is new with T. Ben George. He has had considerable experience, and should be a valuable addition to Mr. George's force.

P. J. Olinger, who has been confined to his home with the influenza, is now recovering, and expects to be in another week.

Visitors: Henry Ehrhardt, Sidney, O.; G. A. Beckmann, Middletown, O.; Chas. Pommert, Amolia, O., and J. W. Rodgers, Dayton, O.

FIRM PRICES DESPITE OVERSUPPLY.

Business during the past week has been quiet, and although the market has been overstocked, prices remain firm. The retailers are all wondering what the plant situation will be for Easter and it appears that roses and hydrangeas will be the main stocks. Bulbous flowers are now about over and lilies are very poor, although the growers are asking 35 cents per bud. Lilac, azaleas, hawthorne and kalmia are scarce and of mediocre quality. Cut flowers will be plentiful with a good crop of roses, carnations, sweet peas and callas.

NOTES.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Andrew Rogers, president; W. J. Sweetzer, vice-president; W. N. Craig, secretary; S. J. Goddard, treasurer.

The retail florists of New England, at a meeting last week, voted to enlarge their organization by taking in members in all branches of the trade. Officers will be elected at the next meeting.

Henry R. Comley's store has been a busy place with many orders for decorations and funeral work during the week.

Dolansky & McDonald report business has increased over 100 per cent since moving into their new quarters.

Heavy shipments from Revere, include Ophelia, Stanley, Killarney Queen, Ward, Hadley and Elgar roses.

Wm. McAlpine is now spending all of his time at the Exeter conservatory working up new stock.

Galvin's two stores have been kept busy and all hands are anticipating a good Easter demand.

Herman Hinkle has returned from France and is again with H. M. Robinson & Co.

John J. Cassidy reports good business with plenty of funeral work.

Welch Bros. Co. is busy with out-of-town orders.

B. A. Snyder & Co. are enjoying a good trade.

AMPLE SUPPLY OF FINE QUALITY.

There is an abundant supply of flowers of good quality. Roses, among them American Beauty, Francis Scott Key, Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia, Sylvia and Russell are of fine quality, and September Morn is again in good form. Some Sunburst are also offered. Carnations are good at prices varying from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Sweet peas, jonquils and other flowers are good and are offered at popular prices. In the plant line, hyacinths, genistas, baby ramblers, etc., are all finding ready sales. The decorations for the opening of two banks and two large retail establishments called for an abundance of choice stock. It certainly behooves the trade to watch for these events and remind the firm's friends that a handsome plant or basket would be most appropriate. All are looking forward to a good Easter trade.

NOTES.

The homecoming from overseas of the 27th Division will keep Charles Reichert and William Buechl, members of the draft board, busy extending the boys a welcome. Both are much interested in all from their districts.

A new Rotary club was started at Lockport last week. W. A. Adams attended with the local delegation and decorated them with carnations. E. C. Brucker, of the wholesalers, was unavoidably absent.

Visitors: Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich., and F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, O., attending the Advertising Clubs' convention.

Pittsburgh.

LIGHTER DEMAND LOWERS PRICES.

With a drop in the demand prices are somewhat lower. Roses are more plentiful and are offered at reasonable figures. Ophelia, Russell, Milady and Columbia are of very fine quality and bring from $6 to $20 per 100. Pink and White Killarneys, Hilda and Sunburst are good and move at from $4 to $15. American Beauties are the best they have been since Christmas and sell at from $4 to $7.50 per dozen. Carnation receipts have been heavy but they clean up daily at $4 and $5 per 100. The call for Easter lilies and callas is not very brisk and prices have dropped to $15 and $20 per 100. Tulips are not very good property and do not bring much, while jonquills sell at $4 per 100. Sweet peas are arriving in better condition and there is no surplus. Snapdragons are of good quality and go at $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Mignonette, calendulas, myosotis and baby primroses are arriving in limited quantities but there is no great demand for them.

NOTE.

Robert Miller, of the Miller Floral Co., Salt Lake City, Utah, spent several days in this city last week visiting the retail trade. He stated that in all of the places he has visited on his trip he had seen nothing to compare with the local stores in size and beauty. Other visitors were M. Crissman of Punxsutawney, Pa., and John Helstern of Wheeling, West Va.

Columbus, O.

EASTER FLOWER FAMINE FEARED.

Some uneasiness is being felt by the local trade over the prospect for Easter flowers. A survey of local resources shows the situation to be much less favorable than was supposed. This city needs more glass, in the opinion of a leading florist, and also some system of co-operation among growers, whereby there would be less miscellaneous growing and more specializing, based on a knowledge of the normal needs of the market throughout the year. This, it is urged, would result in better prices to all concerned, as there would be fewer periods of glut and oversupply. Large buying, away from home, will be necessary for Easter. Pot plants are already very scarce, and will be wholly inadequate for the needs of the trade a little later. Current demand keeps up to the point where it absorbs about everything available. Carnations are now about the most plentiful flower, but there is no surplus stock on anything. Easter lilies and callas are coming in very slowly.

Rochester, N. Y.

FUNERAL WORK MAIN FACTOR.

Business during the past week has been rather dull, due to the lack of all social functions of importance during the Lenten season. There was considerable funeral work, however, several hundred designs being made for one person. Bulbous stock is plentiful and the same is true of roses and carnations. Sweet peas are of excellent quality, especially the orchid varieties. Lily of the valley is unusually scarce and high in price. Violets still continue good, due to the cool weather of the past few days.

NOTES.

E. C. Armbrust spent a few days in New York last week and reports the floral tributes sent by the various states in honor of the dead heroes of the 27th Division were unusual in their beauty and size. George T. Boucher was also a visitor in the metropolis at the same time.

J. Horace McFarland, of Harrisburg, Pa., a great lover of nature, a practical business man and an expert in the matter of roses, was a recent visitor and gave an interesting address before the Ad Club of this city.

Highland Park has a planting of French roses, brought over two years ago, that will bloom for the first time this summer. Another planting was made in the Arnold Arboretum at Boston.

Lester Dewey has been released from the aviation service and will remain in this city for some time.

George Wood has severed his connection with H. E. Wilson.

BEAUTIES IN QUANTITY,

and the Best for Quality we have had so far this season. Until the end of the season, we will be very strong on Good Beauties. Prices are very reasonable.

THE LEO NIESSEN CO., 1201 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.

DEMAND QUICKENS WITH SHORTER SUPPLY.

The past week's business was slow, but it wound up fairly well on Friday and Saturday, when, owing to the cold spell, there was a shortening in the supply, which then about evened up with the limited demand. The quality of the stock leaves nothing to be desired. Roses in all varieties are fine, American Beauties particularly so. Columbia, Ophelia and Hadley are the popular sorts. White and Pink Killarney, in the shorter grades, and in fact all varieties, sell very cheap in quantity. Carnations are fairly plentiful, but all good stock has brought top market prices and there appears to be no surplus to bother about. Snapdragon is now a quantity stock which has to be pushed a little. It is seen in a number of beautiful shades, and is much used in spray work. Callas are at flood tide. If they could only be stored like peonies, they would find a great market at Easter. Considering the quantity, prices are maintained very well. Easter lilies are quite equal to the demand. Some poor stock is seen, but in the main, they run very fair with surprisingly good flowers in some of the shipments. Prices are but little below the highest of the winter. Cattleyas are in good demand. The later varieties are now in and prices hold firm. Considering their popularity as a corsage flower, they should bring big money at Easter.

March 31.—On account of the recent chilly weather, the stock receipts this morning fell off over that of a week ago very considerably. Roses, in particular, shortened to half. When the usual Monday morning demand was satisfied, the market was pretty well cleaned up. Prices were a trifle better than at the close last week.

CLUB MEETING.

The April meeting of the florists' club was most interesting from start to finish. The Easter plant growers responded nobly and a really wonderful display was made with Zieger & Sons' Tausendschon roses, Fousi's lilies, the Robert Craig Co.'s large and varied showing, W. K. Harris' beautiful hydrangeas, bougainvilleas and genistas, the Floracraft Gardens' hydrangeas, A. M. Campbell's larkspur and hydrangeas, McCaw Bros.' ferns and Robert Scott & Son's new roses. Thirty members were elected and as many more names proposed for the May meeting. The literary features were a great treat for all present, the speakers being intensely practical. Dr. E. P. Moxey illustrated short cuts in accounting and H. W. Hess gave a remarkably inspiring address on advertising and its possibilities in the building up and expansion of the florist business. President Harvey said he wished every florists' club in the country could have heard him. The movie exhibition of the National Cash Register Co. was very educational and did much to impress the importance of proper management of the cash and credit departments of the retail store. The attendance at the meeting was large and enthusiastic.

One is an improvement on Hadley, being quite the equal of that famous variety in color, size and form, and much freer with no blind wood buds on any shoot. The other is a wonderful pink of a most pleasing bright shade, a well formed flower with

They will be sent out in 1920.

NOTES.

The Robert Craig Co. keeps a daily record of all the Easter stock sold, by means of charts or cardboard sheets, on which the totals are added to, and focted up every night. This enables them to have exact data as to how the various stocks are going, and what there is still to sell. Mr. Craig puts the hydrangeas first this year as an Easter plant. Rambler and pot roses are placed next; wonderfully flowered plants in the baby ramblers, pot roses and the trained ramblers are seen. Genistas are a great show with their tasseled, yellow blossoms. Hinodigiri azaleas are a splendid substitute for the Belgian stock. They carry loads of blossoms. Spiraeas, with their fine foliage and plumed flowers, are close up in the race. Marguerites are quantity stock, never seen better. Bermuda lilies help out, but the usual large stock carried is missing, as is the case everywhere.

In speaking of the French hydrangeas, W. K. Harris puts Lillie Mouilliere, bright pink with a white eye and fine broad petal, as one of the best Easter forcing varieties. Rene Gilliard, he regards as the best white. This variety makes very large heads, with large petals, which have serated edges. Mr. Harris also places hydrangeas first in the Easter list this season, with Tausendschon, rambler and baby rambler roses, a close second. Hinodigiri azaleas, spiraeas, bougainvilleas, Easter lilies and deutzias, follow in the order named. Stock in all lines is especially well done here. The high winds of March 27-28 carried away some 300 panes of glass which was quite some job to replace during the blustery weather. Easter plant growers are satisfied with the outlook, as they have everything practically sold at prices 33 to 75 per cent over those of a year ago.

The S. S. Pennock Co. has placed a group insurance for the benefit of all their employes covering their stores in Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore and Washington. The amount of the policy is graded according to service, the maximum being reached at four years. The face of the policy is paid at the age of 60, in case of disability.

W. H. Carney, the Pittsburgh, Pa., wholesaler, visited the Strafford flower farm of A. M. Campbell on Monday last. He was much pleased with the condition of the Easter lily crop.

Visitors: E. Mayberry, of the Dupont Flower Shop, Washington, D. C.; H. L. Rowe, of Mann & Brown, Richmond, Va.; T. T. Bolger, Charlestown, S. C.

DEMAND POOREST IN WEEKS.

At various times during the season now nearing its close, we have recorded dull or quiet periods, but the past week was, without qualification, a very bad one for the cut flower trade. Some of the wholesalers claim, that considering the amount of good stock on the market, it was the worst week for their business since last September. It began with the great parade of returned soldiers, March 25. Granted that the soldiers deserve all the honor that can be bestowed upon them, there is the question in many minds, if some better way, and some way that would do the soldiers more good, could not be devised. Practically the entire business of the city was blocked for the day, and it took several days to resume the normal. Among the aftermaths was a flood of criticisms. The newspapers criticised the police; the chief of police criticised his men for not preserving better order, and "old subscriber" and "constant reader," through the newspapers, criticised the arrangement, the decorations and the police. To make matters worse, a storm that began with heavy rain on the afternoon of March 27, developed into the worst snowstorm and blizzard of the season, which continued into the night of the 28th with the prospect of seriously impeding traffic. While there was a good supply of excellent flowers on the market, even the best was hard to move, the greatest stagnation in leading stocks being in roses, sweet peas and carnations. The market was glutted with sweet peas and the best were hard to move. Even cut lilies, that had been expected to hold up till after Easter, began to accumulate. The greenhouse tulips and narcissi farde better than other stocks, not being so plentiful. Various minor offerings, such as snapdragons, calendulas, pansies, etc., were in abundant supply, all moving slowly. In brief, the outlook for the next two weeks is not promising.

March 31.—Although there is necessarily some buying this morning, the market is stagnant to a considerable extent, with roses, carnations and violets hanging heavy on the hands of the wholesalers. The cold wave put the street men temporarily out of business, and about all the call for violets is from the stores, for funeral work. Though the blizzard has passed on, the weather is yet cold, with indications of more snow.

NOTES.

For the benefit of other cities, where street decorations may be intended, we clip the following from one of our city papers. It was written by Claude Bragdon, an expert on decorations: "Street pageantry and decoration, being for an occasion, are not architecture, which is for continual and daily use and enjoyment. Therefore, such decoration should not be made even remotely to resemble architectural art, for if it does so it immediately and inevitably enters into competition with the surrounding architecture, with which it cannot hope to compete, but which it may nevertheless outrival by reason of its gayety, its brilliance and by a beauty of an entirely different sort. Instead of being treated to an exhibition of pageantry and decoration as an art in itself we were confronted with imitation architecture of an ancient, uninspired cumbersome sort; false in fact, false in taste and actually obstructive to the aim and end of it all, which was to enhance and adorn the spectacle of marching troops. It was false in fact because it was lath and plaster made to imitate enduring stone. It was false in taste because it echoed the taste of imperial Rome by way of imperial France. It was obstructive because it actually obstructed the movement of the troops and the vision of the spectators." The "lath and plaster made to imitate enduring stone," was an immense arch over Fifth avenue at Madison square. "False in taste, because it echoed the taste of imperial Rome by way of imperial France," is particularly good. Some of the early Christians thought so little of the taste of imperial and pagan Rome, that they reduced to ruins temples and arches that were not lath and plaster, but enduring granite and marble. That, of course, was fanatical, but let us not rush to opposite extremes by copying pagan decorations.

Andrew Eckrich, Jr., son of Andrew Eckrich, the retailer of 924 Madison avenue, who spent over a year in the United States army in France, returned with the 27th Division, and was in the parade, March 25. During his entire term of service he was never wounded, nor sick for one day, which is a fortunate record. He brought back a collection of German helmets and other "spoils of war" which are on exhibition at his father's store. Before entering the service, he was a clerk in the American Exchange National Bank, and as soon as mustered out, will resume his former position.

The great storm interfered with the arrangements of the Horticultural Society of New York for its exhibition, March 28-30, at the American Museum of Natural History. Speaking of storms, this one, in the language of the street, was "some storm." The snowfall here was not heavy, probably about one inch, but the wind performed mighty feats. For a short time, on the night of the 28th, it blew 92 miles an hour. On the 29th, it slackened up a little, say to about a mile and a quarter a minute, and kept it up all day. At 9 p. m., the temperature was down to 24 degrees, eight degrees of frost.

There are Greeks, and then there are other Greeks. The second annual ball of the Association of Lacedaemonians was held in the Hotel Astor ball room on the night of March 27, 3,000 persons being present, many of them florists. Among them were George Polykranas, Chris E. Zervakos, James Adams, John Doganges, George Giatras and others well known in the trade. The members of this association are lineal descendants of the Spartans, famous in history, and many of its members fought valantly in the late war.

A. M. Henshaw, who, before he entered the florist business, was a sailor, enlisted in the United States Navy on our entering the war saw much service, and rose to the rank of lieutenant commander. He has now been honorably discharged, and has resumed his former position as head of the Henshaw Floral Co., 127 West 28th street.

A. B. Cazan, who owns and conducts the retail business at Broadway and 106th street, known as D. J. Pappas, Inc., says that he has had a fine season and is looking forward to good Easter trade. He deserves it, as he has an attractive store, keeps good stock, and his motto is: "Give good value, and something more."

Fred Smythe, of Wadley & Smythe, 491 Fifth avenue, arrived home from Europe, March 23. It looks as though

WE ARE PREPARED TO SERVE YOU WITH NEW EASTER NOVELTIES

Robert Miller, of the Miller Floral Company, Salt Lake City and Farmington, Utah, spent several days of the past week in this city. Of course he is a florist, and a good one.

The Dards store, Madison avenue and 44th street, made up a number of fine wreaths for the street decorations of the soldiers' parade, March 25.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held on the night of April 14, and it is expected that the proceedings will be interesting.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and others interested in the American Rose Society, were in this city early last week.

The first Ulrich Brunner roses of the season were noticed at the store of Paul Meconi, April 1.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 24-26, 1919.

THE price of bags at Chicago April 2, is $52.

SOME seedsmen are now calling themselves operators.

NEWARK, NEW YORK.—Jackson & Perkins Co., nurserymen, are now offering seed oats.

VISITED CHICAGO: Thomas Madsen, New York; W. H. DeGraaff, of DeGraaff Bros., Leiden, Holland.

CABLE advices indicate Dutch prices advanced in March for tulip bulbs, mainly early single sorts, and some affodils.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade April 2 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds.

JOHN C. BODGER, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., who caught a bad cold on his recent eastern trip, is recovering slowly.

BOSTON, MASS.—John Fottler, of the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., now 59 years in the seed business, expects to leave for Cape Cod, April 5.

RECENT rains in Southern California have greatly improved the seed crop outlook. Vegetables, sweet peas and other early planted annuals, are doing well.

RECONSTRUCTION prices seem to be in the air. Even Pacific coast seed growers, discouraged by the slowness of eastern seedsmen in their bookings, are making reductions of 20 to 25 per cent.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district April 2 are quoted at 60 cents to $1 per bushel for colors and $2.25 to $2.50 for whites. Department stores are reported to be retailing colored sets at 2 cents per pound, which is below their own cost.

WATERLOO, IA.—Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Kiester-Hall Co., with the following officers: H. E. Kiester, president; George Hall, vice-president; W. A. Bryant, secretary-treasurer. Among the stockholders are many prominent farmers of the state.

MOST Dutch growers, in demanding cash payment last January, instead of June 1, terms as usual, claimed this was a rule of the Dutch Bulb "Bond." (Bond van Bloembollenhandlaren). It now appears no such agreement as to terms was made by the directors of the bulb trust.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover market closed steady March 31, at $31.25, registering a gain of $1.75 during the previous seven days. April was quoted at $24.50 and October at $17.25. Timothy was 10 cents higher, cash being offered at $5.05, April $5.10, May $5.05 and September $5.65.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The Aggeler & Musser Seed Co. reports business to date this season very satisfactory, the volume being as heavy as last year and less difficulty experienced in procuring supplies. Weather conditions have been favorable for planting both winter and early spring crops.

SAGINAW, MICH.—A. T. Ferrell, of A. T. Ferrell & Co., and wife, are at Asheville, N. C.

NEW YORK.—S. D. Woodruff & Sons report that the demand during the past few weeks was not as heavy as in the corresponding period a year ago, a condition that was expected, as the movement last season was restricted to such an extent, that when stocks did arrive, shipping became very brisk. Eliminating last year's record, sales are believed to be fully up to the average. The season is early, and in most cases, first deliveries have been made to the trade, and sales arranged with the retailers. A large planting is anticipated, but it is thought that many seeds are in relatively short supply.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The W. Atlee Burpee Co., referring to the 1919 spring trade, reports that conditions at present are so abnormal that it is hard to know just what to expect. Following the unusually open winter, January went on record as the biggest month in the history of the firm. February and March fell somewhat below last year. The demand for garden seeds, as compared with 1918, has dropped about 10 per cent, affected in some measure by the signing of the armistice. On the other hand, the call for flower seeds has increased tremendously. Taking everything into consideration, trade has been of even and steady volume as compared with last year, when there seemed to be almost a panic in buying, and it has been been possible, to a great extent, to maintain the 24-hour schedule in filling orders.

French Bulbs.

Advices from the French bulb growing district, dated February 25, are as follows:

"The crop will undoubtedly be a short one, especially Narcissus Paper White. Laborers, who are very scarce, have fixed an excessive price on their work. Under these conditions, growers are abandoning the production of this stock which gives such poor results. Many did not pull their bulbs last year and will do the same this season."

Southern Conditions.

Referring to 1919 spring business, H. G. Hastings & Co., Atlanta, Ga., state that so far it has been satisfactory. While orders have not been coming in bunches as was the case last year, the volume is good and the demand steady, making possible prompt handling with greater satisfaction to all concerned. With demobilization going on rapidly, labor conditions are much more gratifying, not that wages are lower, but help is more plentiful, and as a rule of better character.

Since early in March, orders have shown a consistent gain over the corresponding period in 1918, with every indication of a continuance during the balance of the season. If this proves true, 1919 will be a most satisfactory season in every respect.

The trade in the south, as a whole, has been greatly hampered by a long continued period of rainy weather which has kept the ground soaked and prevented the usual early spring preparations for both gardening and general farming. As a whole farm operations throughout the south are from five to seven weeks behind normal, which will in all probability have considerable effect in holding down the production of cotton this year, a condition greatly to be desired in face of the present market conditions on this section's greatest staple crop.

As Others See Us.

It is interesting to note that the huge annual seed order, by which the American senators are provided with means to bribe the free and independent electors, did not this season provoke a single bid from Great Britain or any part of Europe.—British Horticultural Advertiser

The City Home Garden.

Farmers' Bulletin 1044 of the United States department of agriculture, under the above title, devotes 30 pages with numerous illustrations to the problems that confront the city gardener who is usually handicapped by lack of experience and for want of suitable tools to do the work. The bulletin deals with three general types of the city vegetable garden, backyard, vacant-lot and community, the preparation of the soil by liming, use of manure, commercial fertilizers, etc., tools, seeds, starting early plants, including a comprehensive table of the earliest dates safe for planting vegetables in the zones shown in corresponding charts. The general care of the garden is well covered as to watering, diseases and insects, etc., and while as a rule not more than 10 or 12 kinds of vegetables should be grown in the city home garden, cultural directions, based on average conditions and subject to some modification to suit the locality, are given for beans, root crops, including beets, carrots, parsnips, salsify, turnips and radishes; tomatoes, sweet peppers, okra, onions, the cabbage group, in which is included early and late cabbage, cauliflower, kale, collards, Brussels sprouts and kohlrabi; salad plants, such as Swiss chard, spinach, celery and lettuce, and last but not least in importance, vegetables that require considerable space in the garden, among others Irish potatoes, peas, sweet potatoes and sweet corn. A vine group embraces cucumbers, cantaloupes, water melons and squashes.

Imports at New York.

Horticultural stock, as follows, was received at the port of New York, March 26, via S. S. Sloterdijk, from Rotterdam:
Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York, 156 cases nursery stock.
McHutchison & Co., 494 cases trees and plants.
Wadley & Smythe, 20,450 loose plants.
Bay State Nurseries, 52 cases shrubs.
T. Ouwerkerk, 241 cases plants.
E. J. Speelman's Sons, 97 cases plants and shrubs.
To others: 3488 cases, trees, plants, etc.; 55 cases bulbs.

French Export Embargo Removed.

The American consul general at Paris has announced the removal by the French Government of its export embargo, making it possible for exporters of that country to ship seeds, with the exception of sugar beet, to the United States, England, Belgium and Italy, without special authorization.

Market Gardeners

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President;
C. W. Waid, Grand Rapids, Mich., Vice-
President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky.,
Secretary; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids,
Mich., Treasurer.

COLUMBUS, O.—What is believed to be one of the largest community gardens in the country is now being prepared for cultivation within the city limits. It consists of 61 acres, divided into 518 allotments. The plowing is being done by tractor. This same ground a year ago yielded garden products to the approximated value of $20,000.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, April 1.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen boxes, $3.00 to $4.25; celery, Florida, crate, $4.50 to $5.50; leaf lettuce, per box, 25 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 50 to 60 cents; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $4.50 to $5.50.

New York, March 31.—Celery (Florida), per case, $3.00 to $6.50; cucumbers, $1.25 to $2.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $2.25 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 25 to 50 cents; lettuce, per package, $1.00 to $6.75; radishes, per 100 bunches, $4.00 to $6.00.

Early Tomatoes.

Among all of the cultivated vegetables there is probably none which receives closer attention than the tomato for the early crop. The high prices obtained for part of the crop, brings out this keen competition. To what extent close attention to detail combined with favorable conditions may bring about success, is shown by an example which happened in our neighborhood last year. A young man closed a deal for the purchase of a small tract of land with some buildings, at the price of $4,500. He put his entire energy on the one crop, early tomatoes, and managed to pay for his purchase the first season. Conditions were in his favor—we had a warm, steady, early spring, and warm summer and high prices. One one-horse load of tomatoes sold for over $300, going at the rate of 25 cents per pound. Of course, this is a rare occurrence, but it shows what can be done, sometimes.

It has long become a standard fact that the earlier the plants can be established in the field, the earlier the crop will be, irrespective of the size of the plants to a very large degree. In other words, it is not so much the size of the plants, as the earliness of the final shift to the field that counts. In fact, over-sized plants often prove quite tardy and unprofitable. It is better to start a young plant May 1 than a big, woody one May 20. To this extent, successful growers produce less expensive plants, and risk earlier planting, preferring to replant rather than to produce too costly plants and defer until all danger of frosts is over.

The next factor is perfect drainage. At this time of year, any excess of moisture is fatal. If "wet feet" result, a bad setback is the result and no amount of good care will give an early start. Therefore, one should select an early, well drained soil with a good supply of humus, located to heat up well with the first sunshine, and then risk early planting.

In this vicinity, the early crop is all grown on stakes, single stem. Bonny Best and Beauty are grown. Beauty used to be the mainstay, but gradually Bonny is displacing Beauty. Although Beauty is a much better tomato, Bonny is earlier, and that is what counts. Earliana is seldom seen now, as it comes inferior in quality, and is hard to sell. Those who know it, avoid it on the market. Earliana is too weak to grow on stakes, and on the ground the fruit is not perfect.

We have always thought that it is a serious mistake to trim too close, that is too long. Many growers rigidly trim to one stem, and then cut out the top as soon as four clusters of fruit have set. We believe it is better to trim only until three clusters have set, and then permit the plants to grow wild. This latter course will produce a wealth of foliage, which helps to shade the fruit and, to sustain the plants when some of the lower leaves are lost. By the clean trimming method, much cracked and inferior fruit results if the foliage is damaged by blight.

MARKETMAN.

Sweet Potato Propagation.

Sweet potatoes are grown either from plants or slips produced from roots, or from vine cuttings. In the northern sweet-potato sections, a large part of the commercial crop is grown from slips produced by sprouting seed potatoes in a warm bed of soil. Here the slips are used for the main crop, while the vine cuttings, which commonly do not have time to make roots of marketable size, produce the seed crop for the next season, according to Farmers' Bulletin 909 of the United States department of agriculture.

In the regions south of Virginia, the main crop is grown from vine cuttings. In this case enough roots are bedded to produce sufficient slips for about one-eighth of the area to be planted. These slips are planted in the usual manner, and when the vines begin to run, cuttings are taken for planting the remainder of the field.

When slips alone are used from six to eight bushels of seed potatoes are required to produce enough plants from the first pulling to set an acre. When two or three pullings are made, three to four bushels of seed ordinarily will produce slips enough for an acre. The quantity depends upon the distance between the plants in the field. The practice of New Jersey growers is to bed one bushel of seed roots for each 1,000 plants desired. With good roots in well-made and well-managed beds, the number of plants produced will average much higher, but any excess over the number desired can usually be disposed of at a profit.

Whatever method is used in propagating the plants, precautions against sweet-potato diseases should be taken.

Vegetable Markets

Reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period March 25-31, show an upward trend in prices and an active movement. Potatoes were much higher with general advances of 10 to 40 cents. Markets were especially strong in the Rocky Mountain section. Colorado No. 1 sacked white stock gained 40 cents, closing at $1.65-$1.75 f. o. b. Greeley. No. 1 sacked Burbanks again advanced 10 cents, closing at $1.60-$1.65 at northwestern shipping points. Minnesota Red River Obios advanced fully 10 cents, ranging $1.30-$1.50 f. o. b. shipping points. Northern stock strengthened slightly in Chicago carlot markets, closing at $1.65-$1.80 per 100 pounds. Cabbage advances continued. Old northern stock made further gains in the leading terminal markets, ranging $55-$80 per ton bulk, an advance of $20. New Orleans quoted a top of $110. Similar gains were made in values of new stock. Southern California Winningstadt reached $70-$85 bulk f. o. b., ruling $90 at St. Louis. New Florida cabbage advanced moderately in producing sections. Texas stock exceeded $100 per ton in several middle-western jobbing markets. The onion market was slightly weaker. A few sales of sacked yellow stock from cold storage in western New York shipping sections were quoted at $4 per 100 pounds. The general range for good yellow stock in consuming markets was $3-$4.25, although a few markets weakened to $3-$3.50. Florida tomatoes closed 25 cents higher in producing sections at $4-$4.25 per 6-basket crate. Considerable inferior stock was offered in northern markets with a wide but fairly steady range of $3.50-$5.50. Florida celery advanced with prices ranging about $1 above those of the preceding week.

Ladybugs in France.

A report from Sacramento, Calif., is to the effect that a supply of ladybugs from that state will be shipped to France to be used in combating the mealy bug which has been damaging fruit trees in that country.

The Tulp Trees.

The original tulp tree, Liriodendron tulipifera, would undoubtedly be one of the first trees to attract the notice of early settlers in the regions where it naturally grows. On the eastern side of North America, its habitat extends over many degrees of latitude, reaching from Nova Scotia in the north to northern Florida and southern Alabama in the south. Liriodendron tulipifera represents a very ancient type of tree in the world's history, once widely spread, for fossil species of liriodendron belonging to the tertiary period have been found both in Europe and North America. It is known to have been cultivated by Bishop Compton in the grounds of Fulham palace in 1688, and for some 200 years was the sole representative of the genus in gardens—absolutely and unmistakably distinct from any other known tree. But in 1875, a second species was discovered in China, and it was introduced to cultivation by Wilson in 1901. According to our present knowledge it is not so splendid a tree when fully grown as the American species, which Sargent records as being sometimes nearly 200 feet high, whereas L. chinense does not appear to have been found more than 60 to 70 feet high. The two trees in a young state are remarkably alike, and I have often been asked how they may be distinguished. The chief characteristic of the Chinese species, especially when the plants are young, is to be seen in its more glaucous under-surface and in its deep lobing of the leaves. The lobes reach, as a rule, two-thirds of the way to the midrib, giving the leaf a distinct "waist." In the American species the lobing is quite shallow. In winter, the species can be distinguished by the twigs being grey in the Chinese tree, and bright brown in the American. L. chinense has not yet flowered in cultivation, but Professor Henry, who saw much of this tree during his journeys in Hupeh, says the flowers are smaller than in the American species and that the petals spread out when fully developed, and thus lose the tulp shape.—W. J. Bean, in the London Gardeners' Chronicle.

The Sentry Who Waits Not in Vain

SHAGGY, white head with the keen eyes of the warrior—a frame touched by the years and great hardships—there he sits in the great chair before the fire, motionless. We couldn't have kept him through the year, but for this one fact—he won't let go till he sees the boy again.

He fought with Phil Sheridan. The rattle of musketry and the ping of flying bullets, the sudden, rushing sweep of the horsemen in full charge—these are his cherished memories. That night before Missionary Ridge when southern heavens were livid with the flare of battle, a bursting shell carried his right arm away. And now he wants to see the boy and hear the story of this last, our war.

He's coming back tomorrow, the boy. He's coming back because the war ended ahead of time. Another year and the sentry would probably have waited in vain for his return. He's coming back tomorrow, and today I'm going to subscribe to the Victory Liberty Loan to help pay the bills that brought him back safe and sound.

Our sentry's weary watch is nearly over—and he smiles proudly as he thinks of the boy's return.

Pussy Willows.

I saw some tiny kittens,
Dressed up in soft gray fur;
But though I've listened all day long
I've never heard them purr.

They never frisk and play about.
The pretty, sleepy things,
But closely round a slender twig
Each little gray paw clings.

And when the air grows soft and warm,
With April's breath, I'm told,
That they will shed their silver fur
For robes of green and gold.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Early Roses.

The rose bed should be pruned and then spaded as early as possible after the ground has opened and if the canes have been buried the covering should be removed and the canes cut back. To properly prune a bed of hybrid perpetual roses is a careful, painstaking piece of work. This work is too often done in a careless, haphazard manner, and by many every variety is cut back alike. To get the best results, a study of the varieties is necessary; for instance, strong growing varieties like General Jacqueminot and Magna Charta can be cut back and the small wood cut out much more severely than Prince Camille de Rohan or Mme. Gabriel Luizet. When pruning it is first necessary to determine whether quantity or quality is the most to be desired. If quantity is wanted, more wood can be left and six to eight eyes left on the canes. If quality is the main object this must be obtained at the expense of quantity, and the strong canes only retained and these cut to two or three eyes, depending on how the eyes are located. The top eye that is left should be pointed out from the main stem so that when the growths start they will not crowd toward the center. This will allow plenty of room for development and a good circulation of air through the plant. After the bushes are pruned the soil should be spaded good and deep and leveled off.

Bedding Plants.

The general florist will now have his hands full with bedding stock, which should now be spread out and given the necessary room. The geraniums should be spaced, and if any have grown too tall to make shapely plants the tops should be cut back, but at the present day the trade wants a geranium in bloom at bedding time, and very little pinching should be done after the first of April, for it will take from then until the first of June to produce a new branch with a flower. Ageratums, alternantheras, alyssums, heliotropes and like blooming plants should be kept on the move and be given good light positions. Salvia should be kept pinched back until the latter part of the month, which should produce fine, shapely plants. The coleus should be rooted and the top rubbed out as soon as established in the pots. Seedlings should be potted or flatted, the former preferred if a price can be obtained commensurate for the extra labor, but if flatted give them room enough to develop properly. Cannas will now require a warm, light location and plenty of root room. The one great factor in growing good bedding stock is, at this season, to keep the plants moving and never allow them to get a check, for if once severely checked a good plant is an impossibility.

Potting Young Stock.

At this season of the year the plant grower will have thousands of young seedlings to pot or place in flats and as many more to shift from a small pot to a larger size, and it does not seem that any instruction in potting should be necessary, but we chanced not long ago to see a boy potting and wondered if the plants would live and we then saw in the houses many of the plants which had been potted struggling for existence. It seems to be the general idea with the young gardener that the one that can pot the most plants in a given time is the smartest, regardless of how well it is done and how the plants afterward grow. The young man whom we saw would fill the pot full and then make a hole in the soil with his finger, place the seedling in the hole and then press the top soil around the stem. The chances were that the roots of many of these plants were still hanging in an enclosed hole in the center of the pot, for the soil should have been firmed around the roots. That he could handle a large number of plants in a given time was no question, but a much better plant can be grown if the soil is made firm around the roots first and then the top firmed down. The same thing happens in transplanting where the loose soil is thrown around between the plant and the pot and the top then firmed down. A little soil should be first thrown in the bottom of the pot and the plant placed in this then a little soil around the plant, which should be firmed down, then a little more soil, which can be pressed down from the top. This will take longer, but the plant will live and grow enough better to pay for the extra pains.

Peonies.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the peony beds should be forked over and the manure mulch that was placed on them last fall should be forked or spaded in, but let this be done by a careful man, or at least not by help that knows nothing about this work. The young growths start very early and are very tender, so it is best not to fork too close to the crowns, but loosen up all the soil around the plants. It is also well to leave the stems covered as deep as they have been all winter, for a sharp frost may injure a stem that has been protected through the severe winter and then subjected to sharp cold. But the loosening of the soil to good depth will conserve the moisture and allow the air to get into the soil. If the plants were not mulched with manure in the fall, it is well to spread some old manure, not fresh, on the beds before spading and fork it in. Although the fall is the best time to transplant peonies, yet if not done and it is desired or necessary to move them, they can be transplanted early in the spring, but this must be done before the growths are above the surface of the ground and as much soil left about the roots as possible. These plants make their young roots in the fall, and if any attempt is made to shake the soil off, the roots will be broken doing this. Divisions must therefore be carefully made, so as to disturb the roots as little as possible. The dry roots that are purchased at this time are much better planted in pots or boxes until the roots are firmed in the soil and later transplanted to the ground. It cannot be expected that plants of this kind will produce any flowers this year, for it will only be possible to get them established in their new location the first season.

Haste Makes Waste.

Reports from Ohio that millions of tons of coal are on fire on lake port docks from spontaneous combustion indicates we are reaping one of the fruits of war hurry. An industrial coal expert explains that during the war everything was coal, the good, bad, and worse, and as such was dumped indiscriminately at lake ports. In this way much coal with high sulphur content was dumped in big piles. Action of water on the sulphur in the coal piles forms crude sulphuric acid. This, in turn, generates heat and causes combustion. Water, except in great quantity, is useless in fighting coal fires. Going to the heart with a steam shovel alone settles the question.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The coming week sees the culmination of all the hard preparatory work that has been going on for the past two months, to get the shop and stock in order for the busiest period of the year. It is well to at once go over the different departments of the business, and see that nothing has been neglected. If the line of plant stock does not seem to be complete, or there is uncertainty as to the condition of some of the stocks ordered, a quick run around the growers, a last minute call, should be made and these matters straightened out.

It is a great help to the grower if the order given is divided, to be delivered on different days of the week; so many roses, lilies, hydrangeas, genistas, spiræas, etc., for Monday, and so on throughout the week. With a copy of this in the store, to be checked up as the various lots arrive, a glance will show at any time, what there is in reserve, and when to expect it.

The man is in luck who can secure an empty shop close by, or in the same block, to which reserve stocks may be delivered and carried later to the store. This avoids the confusion of wagon or truck loads of stock being delivered when there are crowds of customers about, who are apt to wait and see it arranged, so as to have a better selection. This annex can also be used for deliveries, the plants as sold being placed in sections marked off for the days to be delivered, and later for segregating into up and down town and east and west side routes.

Be sure to have a good stock of pot saucers, either clay or fibre, for all sized pots or tubs. They are very essential to the prolonged life of the plants in the house. Do not forget to attach watering directions or cards to each plant; they cost but a trifle, and carry the firm name into the houses of many lovers of flowers. This publicity feature should be made the most of, as these cards will be allowed to remain on the plant, and are likely to be noticed by many visitors.

If for any reason the stock of made up plant baskets has not been arranged, a day can yet be given to this work to good advantage. It is much better to do this at the greenhouse on Sunday, or even as late as Monday, than at the store on the busy rush days and nights later in the week. There is not much demand for these before Wednesday or Thursday, and then coming fresh and bright from the greenhouse, they are much more salable than the hurriedly filled baskets of the night before. The time of the expert hands is then free to do other important work.

The regulation of the work hours, so that all shall get a reasonable amount of sleep is absolutely necessary; forty-eight hours continuously at it, is not impossible, or even longer, but it is now conceded that such long rush periods do not pay, no matter how much the necessity appears to require it. The man, refreshed by a few hours' sleep in bed (not crouched up in a chair or under the counter in a draughty store or basement), will be able to work faster and much more effectively than the man without rest. In many stores, the entire force is taken to a hotel on Thursday and Friday nights, and after breakfast, are back on the job at 6 a. m., a force full of new life and energy.

It is worth while to speak again of the neat appearance of the store and keeping the various plant stocks in good condition at all times. Keeping each variety in blocks together is a great time saver and helps in their sale. The baby ramblers, the Tausendsehn, Dorothy Perkins and the pot tea roses, will give good color effects with each kind arranged together. The blue hydrangeas, the pinks, spiræas, azaleas, etc., will all make a better showing if displayed in sections, than if scattered throughout the store stock. When spaces appear, plants should be drawn closer together, so that the block looks complete.

The featuring or decoration of all choice stock should not be neglected; a few pussy willow sprays, a garden figure or bird stick, and a bow of chiffon, will attract attention and often be the means of selling something that has stood for quite a long time.

When, late on Saturday, there appears to be a few choice items of stock likely to be left, there being perhaps a few too many large hydrangeas or roses, etc., it is then a good time to pay courtesies for favors received at the hands of various persons which could not be returned in a better way.

The cut flower department requires careful handling at these busy times. There is not much demand early in the week for flowers, except for funerals, which may come at any time, and often does, just at these times, when the force is worked to the limit. Very little should be on display in the case—just enough to take orders from. A great help is a few sample corsages in boxes, made up, finished and in boxes in the case as if just ready to go out. The Easter corsage is quickly selected with these to choose from, and very likely a better price obtained.

Have plenty of boys on hand for Sunday morning deliveries. Everything in cut flowers, particularly corsages to wear to church, must arrive at their destination before 10 a. m., at the very latest. Many of these go to the suburbs, which in large cities, means long trips.

Demonstrations.

While nicely arranged jars of flowers in the show case or refrigerator, which fixture by the way, every flower case should be made to look as unlike as possible, are to be commended, the successful selling of flowers requires more than this orderly presentation. Flowers are beautiful in themselves, but they can be much improved when offered for sale by means of many of the accessories now available. Any person with comparative slight artistic ability can arrange a few flowers together, that with green and a knot of ribbon, is worth from a half to as much again more than the same flowers by the dozen. A dozen or so of pink roses, together with a few sprays of mignonette, stevia, bouvardia or snapdragon and asparagus, arranged in a light blue or blue and white duotone vase basket, with light blue ribbon on the handle, will look worth much more than the cost of the added accessories. Examples of such work made up in the case costs no more for the arranging, and if sold, the artistic finish has brought almost as much as the flowers. Should the stock so used be required for orders, it is at once available, the stems not having been cut or wired.

The little Ward roses are pretty in themselves, but make them into a corsage with a shaded ribbon and pin, place in a box in the case where they will be sure to attract attention, and they will be just what some young man wants, who is glad to pay twice the cost by the dozen of the flowers used.

Sweet peas, which have now risen to such importance as a cut flower, are particularly attractive when placed, even in the original bunches, in medium sized duotone vase baskets of white, blue, pink and green. A few corsages of these lovely flowers are sure to be noticed, and the sales quickened by their display.

The little individual rose tubes, with a foot that hold one rose, are just the thing for lady's desk or writing table. Choice roses displayed in this way will often effect both the sale of the flower and vase and will likely secure an order for a few flowers several times a week.

EASTER PLANT BASKETS.

Genista, Yellow Primula and Yellow Callas.

At intervals, a medium sized luncheon or dinner table, set and decorated, more or less elaborately, is an attractive feature, either for the store or as a window effect. It can be made to show how just a few flowers, as used in the shallow bowls, are sufficient, or for more elaborate affairs, what the store has to offer in artistic groupings of roses, orchids and other choice stock.

Cattleyas displayed in small glass tubes on the handle and with some tubes in the soil of a basket of the glory fern, are given a much more conspicuous setting than when huddled together in vases on a shelf in the case, almost out of sight. The ferns, growing, will last a long time, earning far more than their cost. Violets, as well as gardenias, in sample corsages, ready to put on, will keep made up about as well as loose. Corsage ribbons made into bows and tied on with a narrow ribbon are not injured and can be used again, while those tied and made on the corsage become mussed if taken down.

With the coming of the daffodils, the shallow bowls are given another boost, as these flowers display so nicely in the japana and other flower blocks.

When arranged, together with a few pussy willows, they are very fetching. Freesias are also effective with the daffodils.

Plants that are shown in jardinières on pedestals, are doubly attractive and often remind customers of an empty receptacle at home. Nicely filled fern dishes are also sure to attract attention and frequently call forth the remark: "How pretty that is; mine looks so forlorn. I wish you would send for it and be sure to put in hardy ferns.

The above are but a few of the many demonstrations that are possible in the flower shop, which will do much to educate the public, and at the same time add greatly to the receipts.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The retail florists' association, which has been more or less dormant during the past few months, will, it is believed, take on renewed activity in the near future.

OAKVILLE, ONT.—The Gardeners' and Florists' Association of Ontario was organized here March 14 with the following officers: Fred Carr, president; Wm. Cole, first vice-president; Frank Carr, secretary-treasurer. Meetings will be held the first Wednesday of every month.

Society of American Florists.

The March number of "The Journal of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists" was despatched under second class mailing privileges accorded by the post office department. Any member who did not receive his copy should communicate at once with the secretary. This number contained a full account of the mid-winter meeting of the executive board, with reports in full, up-to-date news of the national publicity campaign, list of new members, and other matters of interest to members.

LIFE MEMBERSHIPS.

A proposed amendment to the constitution and by-laws is to be presented to the Detroit convention next August, increasing the life membership fee to $50. Members in good standing contemplating life membership would do well to take notice of this, and send in their cheques for $25, the amount of the fee as at present, thus avoiding the possibility of having to pay the higher rate later on.

THE 1919 CONVENTION.

The 1919 convention will open in Arcadia hall, Detroit, Mich., August 19, next, continuing through the two days following. Indications point to a record-breaking gathering. From inquiries already received the trade exhibition to be held in connection with the convention will surpass all previous exhibitions of this nature. Floor plans will be sent out next month, but prospective exhibitors should not wait for the plans before making reservations. There will be no preferred locations in Arcadia hall, as the exhibition will be staged and the business sessions held on the same floor. The space rental has not been increased, and is the same as charged at previous exhibitions—40 cents per square foot. Among the early applicants for large blocks of space are, A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Ove Gnat Co., La Porte, Ind.; Alex Henderson & Co., Chicago; John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and Schloss Bros. Ribbons, Inc., New York.

To facilitate arrangements, orders for space should be sent in now. This will be a phenomenal convention, with many new features to attract trade visitors from all sections of the country, and it will pay exhibitors to take liberal space. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Publicity for Flowers.

In the June issue of the Metropolitan Magazine, with a subscription circulation of nearly 500,000, and a reader's circulation of perhaps 2,000,000 more, will appear an insert page 11x14 inches in colors, featuring our glass sign "Say It With Flowers," and its use in a florist's window. Two small panels at the foot of the page carry the following legends:

"If you would have friends—be one."
"Remember: The anniversaries, the birthdays, the events that call for congratulations of your friends with a token of flowers. What hurts quite as much as the knowledge that "some one" who should remember, "forgot all about it," this year? Life is made sweeter by those friends who never forget. You have such friends if you are one."
"Remember: For flowers that will exactly express as living, breathing messages, the words your heart would dictate, go to the florist displaying the sign "Say It With Flowers." His affiliation as a member of the Society of American Florists gives him advantages that better fits him to serve you. Your local florist, within a few hours, can deliver fresh flowers in any city or town in the United States and Canada through the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Service."

This advertisement is intended as a direct recognition of the support to the campaign given by the many florists who, through watchful interest, have realized the immense amount of good resulting from the efforts of your publicity committees so far put forth, and have backed these efforts with liberal subscriptions.

It will pay any florist who has not already provided himself with one or other of our signs to supply himself without delay. The glass sign may be had from the secretary for the small amount of $2; a unit of four decalcomanie signs for $1. A careful reading of the lower legend quoted above should evolve the reason for this suggestion.

Become a "real American florist." Mr. Non-subscriber. You surely have the interests of the trade at heart, or you would not be, in fact, could not be a florist. Join this movement for the good of the business, which is providing your living. Send in your contribution to the campaign fund—monthly payments if you prefer—and join the grand organization which is upholding and protecting our industry.

Our promotion bureau is mailing to the 14,000 florists on our mailing list a "broadside" detailing the work of our campaign, describing the various aids for linking up with the national publicity and designed to increase interest in our work. With it will be sent a specimen of the magazine page referred to in this article. subscription blanks and other matter. Any florist not receiving a copy of this broadside, can have one on application to this office.

American Rose Society.

The twentieth annual meeting of the American Rose Society, mention of which was made in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of April 5, page 538, was held at the Hotel Breslin, New York, April 2, President Hammond occupying the chair. The president, in his annual report, reviewed briefly the development of the society during the 20 years of its existence, and emphasized the broadened interest in rose-growing which has resulted during the period. The secretary reported a membership, April 1, of 1203, and the treasurer reported a balance of $2137.58. The election of officers resulted as follows: Captain George C. Thomas, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., president; F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., vice-president; Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., treasurer; E. A. White, Ithaca, N. Y., secretary; members of the executive committee for three years, Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.; George H. Peterson, Fair Lawn, N. J., James Boyd, Haverford, Pa. The president named Robert Simpson, Frank Traendly and Eugene Dailedouze a special committee to audit the books of the treasurer. Following the election of officers, Treasurer May expressed the appreciation which he personally felt the society should extend to the retiring president, Benjamin Hammond, for the many years of faithful service he has devoted to the organization. It was moved by J. Horace McFarland that the society express to Mr. Hammond by a rising vote its deep gratitude for the efficient services he has rendered. The result of the vote was unanimous. Robert Pyle and S. S. Pennock also expressed their appreciation of the way in which Mr. Hammond stood by the society in its years of adversity. The former recalled the time when the finances of the society were at low ebb, and when Mr. Hammond came forward offering to give a substantial sum to help put the society on its feet. Mr. Pennock moved that Mr. and Mrs. Hammond be presented with a vase of roses as a slight token of appreciation of the good will of the society.

Among those in attendance were: Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.; Prof. E. A. White, Ithaca, N. Y.; Harry O. May, Summit, N. J.; Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.; S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa.; L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J.; Eugene Dailedouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.; J. Horace McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa., and Frank Traendly, New York.

Previous to the annual meeting, a session of the executive committee was held in the office of the society of American Florists, 1170 Broadway. Consideration was made of the appointment of a committee to award the Gertrude H. Hubbard gold medal for the best rose of American origin introduced during the last five years. It was the opinion of the executive committee that only the varieties registered with the American Rose Society should be considered eligible for this medal. The secretary was instructed to prepare a list of the varieties eligible and mail these to each member of the committee. It was also voted that the award of the Hubbard medal be postponed until a fall meeting of the executive committee so that special consideration might be given eligible varieties during the summer. J. Horace McFarland, as chairman of the committee appointed at the last meeting to consider changes in the constitution and by-laws of the society, read these changes in detail. It was voted that the secretary be instructed to prepare a draft of the changes under consideration and to mail these to each member of the committee. The question of reducing the life membership fee was discussed, and the opinion of the committee was that the present fee of $50 is not too high, and that no change should be made.

E. A. WHITE, Sec'y.

Massachusetts Hort. Society Bulletin.

The trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have authorized the publication of a series of Bulletins, the first two issues of which have been received, the purpose being to present to the members matters of interest concerning the activities of the society, and by this means extend its influence and increase the knowledge of horticulture in the community.

In Bulletin No. 1, under date of March 1, attention is called to the fact that the horticultural exhibitions of the organization, for many years a highly educational feature, should not be abandoned, but the committee expresses the opinion that the public could be better instructed by means of a few important shows, rather than by a number of small ones. Also, that horticultural exhibitions are valuable when they make known to persons interested new plants, fruits and vegetables, not in general cultivation, but which should find a place in gardens, but the advisability of offering small prizes year after year, for plants which have long been familiar objects, such as six summer or winter apples, etc., which can be found in any fruit shop in the city, is questioned. Inasmuch as no prizes were given at four of the most successful exhibitions of the society, it is believed that members of the society can always be found who will make occasional exhibitions successful, and active co-operation with similar societies throughout the state will develop general interest.

Bulletin No. 2, issued March 15, invites attention to the library of the society containing one of the largest and best collections of books on horticulture and related subjects in the world. To bring members in closer touch with the library, books may be taken out for home use and the librarian is also authorized to send books by mail, postpaid to such members as make application for them, the borrower to pay the return expense. The Bulletin gives a list of recent accessions to the library, 58 in number.

Prosperity Afoot.

A prominent manufacturer of automobile bodies says: "Hotels and theaters are crowded and it is next to impossible to secure accommodations on sleeping cars. We have more orders for motor car bodies of special types now than we ever had in the height of the war boom. These straws indicate the condition of the wind. Prosperity is afoot. It is like a great snowball that gathers momentum and volume as it goes."—Wall Street Journal Straws.

AMPLE SUPPLY AT MOVING PRICES.

Trade continues in very good shape in this city. There is enough stock of nearly everything to go around, and prices are within the reach of all classes of buyers. Funeral work continues steady and social affairs continue to draw heavily upon the daily supply of flowers. Roses are of excellent quality. There has been quite a drop in prices on the wholesale market, due to the large cut, but all of the stock is bought up every morning. American Beauties are more plentiful than at any other season of the year. They are bringing the highest prices of all roses. Mrs. Charles Russell is very fine just now, and there is never any surplus of this fine variety. Columbia and Ophelia are also in large supply, with the demand steady. There is quite a quantity of Mrs. Aaron Ward to be had. Red roses are probably in oversupply, especially the poorer grades. Cecile Brunner are becoming more plentiful. In a short time a large outdoor cut will be ready for the market. Carnations are very plentiful, and only the very best quality of stock is bringing remunerative prices. Large quantities of these are being sold on the street. Sweet peas are fine just now. They have brought the grower good returns right along. All the newest and best varieties are being received here this spring. Nothing but the finest Spencers are being grown here for the market. There is still quite a heavy cut of freesias and daffodils, but the supply of the latter is not expected to continue much longer. Violets are still to be had in large quantities. The Giant and Princess of Wales are about the only two varieties offered. Ranunculus are in and are proving to be as much a money-maker as in former years. Gardenias are scarce, with prices unchanged. There are very few cattleyas in the market. Gaskelliana is about the only variety to be had. There is a large cut of tulips and hyacinths. Irises are beginning to come along, and are now in much demand. In pot plants the offerings consist of azaleas, rhododendrons, Bougainvilleas glabra and spectabilis, baby roses and cyclamens. They add much to the window and interior displays of the various stores. Ferns and asparagus are none too plentiful this week. Flowering fruits and shrubs are represented in all the stores.

NOTES.

The Menlo Park Horticultural Society is preparing to hold an elaborate flower show next fall. This society suspended its annual shows during the war, but is again prepared to stage some of the shows that have made the society famous. The exhibition committee will shortly prepare a preliminary schedule.

Prof. J. W. Gregg of the University of California delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture before the members of the Dahlia Society of California at the Palace hotel. There was a large attendance and the talk was well received. The coming dahlia show was also informally discussed by the members.

Albert O. Stein, on Sutter street, is handling a fine grade of azaleas and rhododendrons these days. They are displayed to the best advantage in his commodious store and are proving a great attraction. The force has been busy on decorations, both here and out-of-town during the week.

The Francis Floral Co. is receiving a fine cut from the grower. They report a steady trade along all lines. Manager Schlauthauer has many innovations in the way of new baskets of his own designing, which, he says, are in much demand by his customers.

The annual show of the California Dahlia Society will be held September 4-6 at the Palace hotel. A preliminary schedule has been adopted and has been mailed to all interested. A copy may be had by addressing Secretary F. C. Burns at San Rafael.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has a great array of Easter plants at their greenhouses at San Mateo. Daniel MacRorie says the call for long distance shipments is unusually heavy this year. Several novelties will be introduced by them this season.

Frank D. Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has mailed his dahlia catalogue for the coming season. Mr. Pelicano is treasurer of the Dahlia Society of California, and grows a very large collection at his own nursery on Guttenberg street.

Shibuya & Tchida, the chrysanthemum growers, are preparing to commence the planting of their young stock soon. They will be grown as usual under cheesecloth houses. They anticipate a brisk shipping demand this season.

P. Conchi, the prominent grower of Colma, who specializes in Ulrich Brunner roses, has his large stock in the best of shape for the coming season. He is the largest grower of this rose in this vicinity.

L. T. Pockman, who has been one of the most successful growers of dahlias for the exhibitions, has departed for Arizona to reside. The California Dahlia Society will miss one of their best members.

The Mayfield Nursery is sending in large quantities of bulbous stock to this market. The quality is exceptionally good and the shipping trade is reported as quite satisfactory.

The Art Floral Co. has been making a splendid showing in Azalea Hindodigiri again during the past week. The bougainvilleas displayed here are exceptionally fine.

Domoto Bros. are receiving a heavy cut of roses from their greenhouses at Elmhurst. They report a steady shipping trade with prospects for Easter very promising.

CLUB MEETING AND EXHIBITION.

The time of the April meeting of the florists' club was taken up with a flower show prepared under the direction of a committee of which Frederick A. Danker was chairman. Among the exhibits was a vase of the now red rose, Premier, which was brought from Boston by Patrick Welch, a wholesaler, and a former president of the Society of American Florists. Mr. Welch was present at the meeting, and agreeably surprised at the display shown. Roses, carnations, snapdragons, mignonette, and other cut flowers were displayed by Louis Menand, Henkes Brothers, William Hannell, and others from this section. A vase of orchid sweet peas, staged by Louis Menand, emphasized what is being done in the way of improvements in the late varieties. A pleasant feature of the show was the presence of a number of the wives and women friends of the members. Following the exhibit light refreshments were served under the direction of Louis Schaeffer, chairman of the entertainment committee. The flowers and many of the plants were sold at auction by James Snyder for the benefit of the club treasury and brought about $93.

NOTES.

The presence of Patrick Welch in the city on the night of the florists' club meeting is accounted for in part by the fact that he is secretary and treasurer of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, Inc., wholesale dealers in cut flowers. While here, Mr. Welch consulted with the other officers, Edward P. Tracey, president, and Thomas F. Tracey, manager. Mr. Welch said that in regard to Horticulture, conducted by the late William J. Stewart, and in which Mr. Welch is a shareholder, a meeting of the stockholders is to be held shortly at which the subject of a reorganization will be discussed.

Mrs. William J. Skillicorn, of this city, has offered eight prizes of United States thrift stamps to be awarded to the school children of Albany for the best vegetable and flower gardens to be grown by them this season. The prizes for the best vegetable and flower gardens are $5 in thrift stamps and for the fourth best gardens, $1 in thrift stamps. The gradations between, are $3 and $2 worth of the stamps. The only condition imposed is that the seed used must be bought in Albany.

Fred A. Danker was unable to be present at the flower show he arranged for the club meeting on account of being confined to the house with quinsy. He is reported to be improving. R. D.

BUSINESS SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

With Easter approaching, business is showing signs of life and indications point to a good trade. The assortment of plants will not be large this year, but the quality will be better due to the dark cool weather that is holding them back. Roses, lilacs and acacias are the most called for at present. Bulbous stock is poor and there is a question as to whether it will last until Easter. Lilies are practically out of the question, being small and poor. Cut flowers are quite plentiful and sell well. Stock for the holiday will be plentiful and reasonable in price.

NOTES.

The third meeting of the retail florists' organization found 80 members from all branches of the trade in attendance. An excellent dinner was served at which Major P. F. O'Keefe, of the Society of American Florists' national publicity campaign spoke of the bright future of a club of this character representing all interests of the profession and what a great help it could be made to be to the business in general. Henry Penn spoke at length of its great possibilities and the amount of benefit that one could derive from the club. Nominations for officers resulted as follows: Henry Penn, president; Wm. Elliott, vice-president; Wm. Stickle, treasurer; Frank Edgar, financial secretary; E. S. Gorney, recording secretary. Executive committee for three years, Geo. B. Arnold and Patrick Welch. Two years—Henry M. Robinson and F. Palmer. One year—Henry R. Comley and J. M. Cohen.

Growers in this vicinity are sending to this market at present excellent cuts of sweet peas, callas, carnations, Dutch hyacinths, roses, pansies, daisies, irises, snapdragons, etc.

Arnold & Fisher, of Woburn, are building a large garage and stockhouse with two large ice boxes in connection.

STYLE SHOW MOVES MUCH GOOD STOCK.

The annual style show, created a demand for a large quantity of flowers, both pot and cut, and moved a considerable amount of stock, which otherwise, was very likely to glut the market, as the exceedingly warm temperatures of the past two weeks had increased the production to a very large extent. Trade in other lines was slow, until the latter part of the week when there was an increase in funeral work. Counter trade is very active, and there is a good demand for flowers for the various churches during the Lenten season. Carnations have increased considerably the past few days, but there is no over-supply. Roses are in excellent form, all the leading varieties being plentiful, in all grades. Very few Easter lilies are being offered now, but there is any amount of callas to be had. The quantity of bulbous stock has increased greatly, particularly jonquils and tulips. In regard to the Easter supply, there will be a good line of pot plants, with the possible exception of bulbous stock. Rambler roses will be in large supply, for this holiday, also hydrangeas, calceolarias, spiræas, ericas, azaleas, pelargoniums, and Martha Washington geraniums.

NOTES.

Ed Wenninghoff sent out a large number of baskets, and cut flowers for decorations in the style show. He will have a very good line of Easter plants from his greenhouses.

The Lanternier greenhouses are showing a fine display of lilies, hydrangeas, and other Easter plants. Funeral work has been brisk again at the store.

The Flick Floral Co. has several houses of lily plants and a large assortment of miscellaneous stock for the Easter trade.

The Doswell Floral Co. will have a fine line of blooming plants for Easter.

GOOD STOCK CLEANS UP DAILY.

"Business as usual" is a good term to express conditions in the cut flower market. Bulbous stock is about the only thing that drags, otherwise there is a general cleanup and such slight accumulations as are left are disposed of to the street merchants at a week-end sale. Roses have been quite plentiful but still hold firm in price. Carnations about equal requirements. Violets move slowly while sweet peas, which are in good supply, move well and bring good returns. Lilies of all kinds are on the short side. Good snapdragons and calendulas clean up each day. Swainsonas are good property. All indications point to a limited supply of stock for Easter.

NOTES.

While the soldiers of the returned 37th division of the United States army paraded, April 1, about 300 girls formed a "floral arch" and presented each of the boys with a rose. Many thousand flowers were used for the event and it will be repeated at the time of the homecoming of the 112th Engineers next week.

The Rustic-Made Ware Co. is a new concern at 207 High avenue, specializing in the manufacture of florists' baskets, plant stands, porch boxes, etc.

Charles Reep, of North Olmstead, O., has his tulip and daffodil crop in excellent shape.

The Brookline Floral Co. is cutting excellent stock at its range.

EASTER TRADE OUTLOOK PROMISING.

Market conditions during the past week were very uncertain—one day a surplus, and the next a shortage. Roses continue of good quality and fair prices maintain. Ophelia, Russell, Columbia and Milady are extra good and command higher figures than the others. Receipts of American Beauties are equal to requirements. Easter lilies have moved slowly and are more plentiful as some growers seem to have difficulty in holding them back for the big occasion. Callas are arriving in large numbers, but clean up readily. Carnations are uncertain, with about half enough to supply the demand. Spanish iris has made its appearance and sells readily. Snapdragon is of fine quality and brings from $1 to $2.50 per dozen. The receipts of calendulas, jonquils and tulips are about equal to the call for them. Sweet peas are not plentiful, but the quality shows improvement. Violets are about done for, and from present indications, there will be none for Easter. The outlook for that day is promising, and there should be ample stock with the exception of carnations. Prices will remain about the same, with the exception of an increase on lilies and carnations. If the weather is favorable, the market will be well supplied with lilies, while roses are of finer quality than they have been at any time this season.

NOTES.

The McCallum Co. has installed a private telephone exchange system which is proving of great advantage.

The P. S. Randolph Co., of Verona, reports the biggest Easter plant business in the history of the firm.

No flower show will be staged as in previous years, but special committees will be appointed soon to arrange for a fall "Flower Week" during which each store will be a show place in itself.

COLD WEATHER HURTS BUSINESS.

An unseasonable cold wave, accompanied by ice and snow, curtailed business last week, and added to the Lenten dullness. Tulips, daffodils, jonquils and narcissi are rather scarce, as they are being held for Easter orders. Carnations are excellent and the supply plentiful. Roses are increasing in quantity and bring good returns. Sweet peas have improved both in number and quality. Harrisii lilies are out and will be scarce for Easter. A few callas are offered. Primroses, azaleas, cinerarias, pot hyacinths, tulips, etc., are good sellers in the plant line. Greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

The Hart & Vick range at Fairport reports the force is kept very busy preparing for the Easter rush.

Horace J. Head has returned from a business trip to Boston, Mass., and other eastern cities.

Dewey J. Lester has taken a position with J. B. Keller Sons.

OBITUARY.

G. H. Van Waveren.

G. H. Van Waveren, for many years senior partner of the firm of M. Van Waveren & Son, Hillegom, Holland, well-known bulb growers, passed away recently at his home after a long and interesting life extending over 88 years. He began his career as a boy on his father's farm, where at that time bulbs were produced in but small quantities, and was among the first of the enterprising pioneers who made trips to England to market their stock, the product heretofore being disposed of to exporters in the vicinity of Hillegom. His first voyage was made when he was 19 years of age, but his kindly disposition, industry and perseverance gained for him a prominent place in the industry, both in Europe and America, which grew with advancing years. From England he brought many plants and bulbs, many of which he cultivated with considerable success, among others Gladiolus brenclyensis, Scilla sibirica and Spiraea japonica. He was also among the first Dutch growers to experiment with narcissi, and Olympia and Van Waveren's Giant are well known in America. In 1918, he produced a new strain of crocus, among the best varieties being Kathleen Parlow, Julia Culp, and Princess Louise, while his English irises were unsurpassed.

Mr. Van Waveren was one of the first members of the Society for Dutch Bulb Culture, was for many years one of its principal officers, and in 1910 was knighted by the queen for his achievements in the interests of Dutch horticulture.

Alfred Broman.

Alfred Broman, for the past 10 years foreman for the J. S. Wilson Floral Co., Des Moines, Ia., died at his home in that city April 3, from heart disease. The deceased had spent all of his life in the florist business, and owned and operated a range at Independence, Mo., before taking the position he occupied at the time of his death. He was 60 years old. A native of Norway, he came to this country about 26 years ago and was well known and highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral was held at Kansas City, Mo., April 7. A brother, P. Broman, of Chicago, and a daughter, living in Kansas City, survive.

TWINE is now low in price and manufacturers say it will advance soon.

EASTER LILIES are selling at the record price of 50 cents wholesale this week.

COAL, according to report, is advancing in price and will be much higher before fall.

A PROMINENT firm of Belgian plant growers writes February 24: "Our government is trying very hard to get your plant quarantine law amended, especially as applied to azaleas."

Ward's California Business.

Attorneys representing creditors of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Calif., report that none of the attachment suits have been realized on, and the affairs of the company will probably be placed in the hands of a receiver. Charles W. Ward states he has parties who will make him a loan, the money to be obtained under a bond issue, which will require from six weeks to two months to complete.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

SECRETARY HOUSTON'S ACTION.

F. R. Pierson of the tariff and legislative committee of the Society of American Florists writes April 1: "The Secretary of Agriculture has upheld the entire action of the federal horticultural board, as I understand it, and has refused to reverse its rulings. We will soon have a meeting in regard to the matter and then decide on our next course. Our only remedy is through the committee on agriculture, and as soon as the new Congress meets, we will take steps to bring the matter to the attention of the agricultural committee."

AMENDMENT NO. 2 TO REGULATIONS.

Under authority conferred by the plant quarantine act of August 20, 1912 (37 Stat., 315), it is ordered that Regulation 14 of the rules and regulations supplemental to Notice of Quarantine No. 37 governing the importation of nursery stock and other plants and seeds into the United States, effective June 1, 1919, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows: Regulation 14. Special permits for importation in limited quantities of prohibited stock:

Application may be made to the secretary of agriculture for special permits for the importation, in limited quantities, and under safeguards to be prescribed in such permits, of nursery stock and other plants and seeds not covered by the preceding regulations for the purpose of keeping the country supplied with new varieties and necessary propagating stock: Provided, that this shall not apply to nursery stock and other plants and seeds covered by special quarantines and other restrictive orders now in force, nor to such as may hereafter be made the subject of special quarantines. A list of nursery stock and other plants and seeds covered by special quarantines and other restrictive orders now in force is given in Appendix A of these regulations.

Done in the District of Columbia this 27th day of March, 1919.

D. F. HOUSTON,
Secretary of Agriculture.

C., at a salary ranging from $3,000 to $3,240 per year. Competitors will not be required to report for examination but will be rated on the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated:

1. Education, including general education and training and special training in horticulture, together with a list of the applicant's publications, 40.
2. Experience and fitness, 40.
3. Thesis of at least 1,000 words on a subject pertaining to interstate problems of vegetable gardening (to be filed with the application), 20.

the secretary of the board at its offices in Boston, Mass.; New York, New Orleans, La.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Atlanta, Ga.; Chicago, St. Paul, Minn.; Seattle, Wash.; San Francisco, Calif.; St. Louis, Mo.; Balboa Heights, Canal Zone; Honolulu, Hawaii, or San Juan, Porto Rico.

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

REFUSED OR UNCLAIMED FREIGHT.

New regulations for the disposition, by railroads under Federal control, of freight shipments which have been refused or are unclaimed at destination by consignees, after having been on hand for 60 days, have just been issued by Walker D. Hines, director general of railroads. The present regulations, providing for the notification of the consignee of the arrival of shipments, will continue in force, but the notices sent out are hereafter to include a provision calling attention to the fact that after the freight is unclaimed or undelivered for 15 days after the expiration of the free time at destination, it will be treated as refused and will be sold without further notice 60 days from the date of notice of arrival.

In all cases, the deposit in the mails of the necessary notices will be considered sufficient notice to all concerned. The new orders will not affect any existing provisions for notice to consignors of unclaimed or refused shipments by telegraph at their expense and request.

The time and place at which such sales are to be held will be determined by the railroad and the net proceeds, if any, after deducting freight and other legitimate charges, will be paid to the owner on proof of interest.

Hail and Cyclone Insurance Co.

The American Mutual Cyclone and Hail Insurance Co. Muncie, Ind., covering risks on greenhouses, greenhouse products and growing crops in Indiana only, held a meeting in its home office in the above city, at which a complete reorganization of the company was effected. Following the acceptance of the resignation of the old officers, the management of the organization was placed in the hands of a board of directors, consisting of two vegetable growers and three florists as follows: Charles Huffer, Indianapolis; Adolph Shilling, Fort Wayne; William Bettmann, New Albany; W. H. Pollet, Terre Haute, and Dillon Myers, Bluffton. The board then completed organization by electing Dillon Myers president, Adolph Shilling vice-president and James F. Hildebrand, Muncie, secretary-treasurer. The adoption of a constitution and by-laws followed, placing the company on a business basis. It was decided to initiate a campaign for increased membership, and all owners of greenhouses in the state will be asked to avail themselves of the service rendered by the company.

Austrian Imports and Exports.

The war trade board at Washington, D. C., has announced that all persons in the United States are now authorized to trade and communicate with persons in German Austria. Applications will now be considered for licenses to export or import all commodities to consignees or from consignors in German Austria, except that restrictions are placed on all articles that might be used for military purposes, and export licenses for such articles will only be granted in exceptional cases.

RECEIPTS PLENTIFUL AND FAIR DEMAND.

Business during the last few weeks has been fair with the supply of all kinds of stock coming in freely. Funeral work has dropped off considerably, and this makes a great difference. The warm weather of the last few weeks has been bringing out the flowers very fast, and if this condition continues for a few days, it will do material damage to the carnations and sweet peas. The present cut of the latter is not quite as heavy as it has been, although there are still lots of them. Carnations are coming in heavy for the first time this season. Roses are plentiful but have a good call. Callas have a good demand. Of Darwin tulips, jonquils, snapdragons, irises and larkspurs there are just about enough for the demand. Violets are through for the season. In greens, the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

Looking over the Easter stock, the writer finds little variety in blooming pot plants this year. Roses, spiraeas, hydrangeas, genistas and lilacs are the bulk of good plants. Bulbous stock will be over before Easter, and of Easter lilies there will be none to speak of. The lack of decorative plants will also be keenly felt this year, and churches will have to do without them.

PROMPT PAYMENT comprehends the readiness to pay bills when due. To pay unhesitatingly—full value in dollars and cents for past values received. It establishes what is termed CREDIT confidence.

ARE YOU GOING TO FORTIFY AND MAINTAIN THIS CREDIT CONFIDENCE

If some one has relied upon this CREDIT confidence—granting you credit on a thirty day open account—it means that this some one has temporarily acted as your banker.

THE AFFAIR ACROSS THE WATER BUY EASTER SUPPLIES NOW.

Before the armistice was signed and during the greater part of the war, we, like other manufacturers, were handicapped in every way. At that time we thought it advisable to publish the following poem:

YOUR BACK ORDERS

Keep your temper, gentle sir,
Writes the Manufacturer;
Though your goods are over-due
For a week, or maybe two,
We can't help it; please don't swear;
Labor's scarce, and Needles rare;

Can't get wax, can't get dyes;
These are facts, we tell no lies.

Harry's drafted, so is Bill;
All our work is now up hill;
So your orders, we're afraid,

May be still a bit delayed;
Still you'll get them, don't get vexed.
Maybe this week, maybe next;
Keep on hoping, don't say die;
You will get them, bye and bye.

BUT IT IS DIFFERENT NOW

Now, Mr. Florist, with peace hovering over the entire world, and with more gladness in our hearts, we are in a decidedly different position to serve you. Have you ever asked yourself the question, why some men in business are very successful and why others are not? Success is not at all a matter of luck. THE BOSTON FLORAL SUPPLY CO. has built up a most successful Florist Supply House without depending in the slightest way upon LUCK.

HOW DID WE ACHIEVE IT?

1st. We have treated our customers with the utmost regard and respect, regardless of whether they bought one dollar's worth or one hundred dollar's worth.

2nd. Any complaint ever made to us is conscientiously and faithfully taken care of, and always to the satisfaction of the customer.

THE BOSTON FLORAL SUPPLY CO. is positively headquarters for all MEMORIAL DAY GOODS and SUPPLIES, such as Cut Flowers, Cycas, Baskets, Magnolia Wreaths, Sprays, Wax Designs, Wax Flowers, Wire Frames, Manila Boxes and all other supplies. be any surplus. Roses will probably be in large supply, but will clean up well owing to the scarcity that will exist in other lines. Carnations will be quite plentiful, but several of the growers report that there will be very little colored stock in this line offered. Callas will be available, but not in any great quantities. Sweet peas will be a leader if the weather is favorable, and it appears as if the retailers appreciate this fact, for many large orders were placed for this item the past week. Orchids, gardenias, snapdragons, calendulas, violets, lily of the valley, lupines, daisies, sweet alyssum, mignonette, tulips, jonquils, daffodils, pussy willows, pansies, stocks, forget-me-nots, irises, freesia and other miscellaneous stock will be included in the offerings. Everyone will do well to place their orders for Easter as early as possible, so as to protect their supply. Business for the past week was very encouraging, and stock in all lines cleaned up well at good prices.

NOTES.

Dave Geddes, of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., St. Louis, Mo., spent April 5 here, and the following day at Milwaukee, Wis. He will erect a new building at 1406 Pine street, work on which will be started within 30 days.

C. L. Washburn says that business was so good, Monday, April 7, that Bassett & Washburn's shipment of roses for that day consisting of 16,000 flowers, were almost entirely disposed of before the store closed at night.

Peter Pearson, 5742 Gunnison street, is erecting a new Moninger greenhouse, 15x105 feet. Mr. Pearson reports that he cut his first outdoor jonquils, April 6, which is several weeks earlier than last year.

Allie Zech and Fred Longren attended the Milwaukee Florists' Club meeting held in that city, April 3, returning home the next evening. They report having had a most pleasant time.

C. A. Duddy, who has been manufacturing wire goods on the north side, died last week. He at one time was connected with the Northwestern Iron Works at Dubuque, Ia.

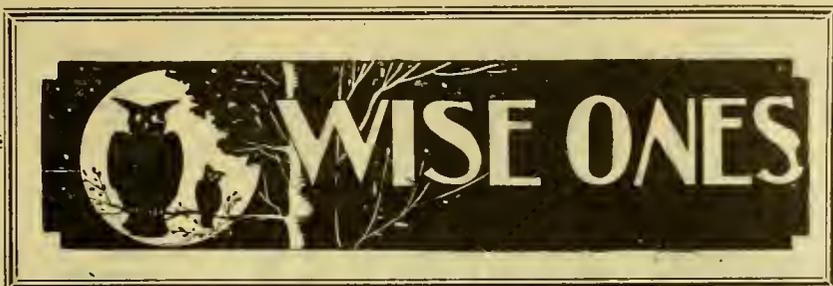

Jean Lamley, who is identified with L. M. McCoy, Seattle, Wash., visited with H. C. Rowe, April 4. Mr. Rowe's brother, Fred, is manager of the McCoy store in Seattle.

Edward J. Ludwig, with T. J. Ludwig, Columbus, O., was one of the out-of-town buyers in the city last week, arranging for his supply of stock for Easter.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. never had such a brisk day as April 5, when their total sales were the largest of any one day outside of the holiday periods.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports continued heavy demand for gladiolus bulbs, the mail order business in these being far ahead of last season.

Ed. Eisner, formerly with Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., is now with Mangel, the Palmer House Florist.

Remember when ordering that our line is so complete that it includes every item offered in the Great Chicago Market.

Arbor day this year will be April 18, according to a proclamation of Governor Lowden. Superintendent of Schools Chadsey has directed, however, that as Good Friday comes on that date, and the schools will be closed, all arbor day exercises in the schools will be held April 17.

Jack Byers, formerly with Zech & Mann, who has probably seen as much action in France as any other American soldier, is expected to leave for this country in the near future. Leo Koropp is in the same division, as are Luke Schrer and Robert Drenton.

John Poehlmann says that everything points to a large supply of stock for Easter as far as Poehlmann Bros. Co. is concerned. The supply department is busy shipping out stock every day, and the outlook for a heavy late demand is not encouraging.

A. B. Price, who supplies several of the local wholesale florists with boxwood, was a welcome visitor this week on his first trip to this city. He is probably better known to the trade as "The Boxwood Man" from Washington, D. C.

Allen Humanson, who has been with the colors as field clerk at an eastern point of embarkation, was released from service this week, and will again call on his old customers.

George R. Scott, who has been a familiar figure in the local market for many years, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, whose death occurred last week.

Sergeant R. D. Gottry, 161st Depot Brigade, 1st Company, of THE FLORIST office staff before enlistment, returned from France this week and expects his discharge shortly.

The Daily News is liberally advertising that its Washington bureau selects from the United States garden propaganda such bulletins as its readers may request.

Philip J. Schupp is confident that the Easter demand will be heavy this year, judging from the many early orders booked at J. A. Budlong's store.

Wieter Bros. shipped out over a truck load of young rose stock and carnation cuttings one day this week, and the demand is still strong.

C. O. Wilcox, representing Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky., is home on a visit. His many friends here are always glad to see him.

Professor Dorner's students of floriculture at the University of Illinois will visit leading trade establishments here this week.

Peter Reinberg is busy filling orders for carnations and chrysanthemum cuttings, which are in heavy demand this season.

Frank Gorly and H. Dernberg, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., were here this week on business.

H. N. Bruns and wife are about again after being on the sick list with the Spanish influenza.

John Muir is back from a business trip to Philadelphia, Pa.

Frank Ayres is no longer identified with Archie Spencer.

Visitors: Henry Kusik, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Hayden, with Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo.

SUPPLY CLEANS UP WELL.

The demand for stock is good and is taking up practically all receipts in the market. There was a surplus during the early part of the week, but this was cleaned up by Saturday. The supply is about the same as it was at the last writing. Shipping business is good. There is a heavy call for Easter supplies. The cut of roses is fair and about equal to present needs. The carnation cut is fair. Sweet peas are plentiful and are proving good property, although the prices have shaded somewhat. Easter lilies are selling well. The same is true of callas and rubrums. Bulbous stock offered includes daffodils, jonquils, tulips and freesias. Other offerings are snapdragons, pansies, stocks, mignonette, calendulas, forget-me-nots and wallflowers.

NOTES.

L. H. Kyrk furnished the carnations to the Rotary Club that the latter used to shower the boys of the 136th Field Artillery and 112th M. P. as they passed in review April 4.

Geo. E. Fern arranged the decorations for the triumphal arch and court of honor for the heroes from this city, who have just returned from overseas.

The regular meeting of the florists' society will be held at H. W. Sheppard's place, April 14.

Ed Fries passed away at his home at Ft. Thomas, April 7.

BRISK DEMAND IN ALL LINES.

Reports on market conditions for the past week are very encouraging in every respect. The local as well as the out-of-town demand was brisk, and with no heavy cut with the exception of sweet peas, satisfaction reigned all round. The first half of the week, long-stemmed roses did not have the same call as the short and medium grades, but as time went on, and with increased orders for funeral work, all lines cleaned up completely by Sunday. Sweet peas, which are plentiful and of fine quality, are favorites at this time. Then they are replacing the violet, whose season is quickly drawing to an end. The demand for lilies and callas has been brisk, and with only a moderate supply, prices have advanced. The supply of good carnations is becoming less as time goes on, and prospects for a heavy Easter supply is not very encouraging.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting, April 3, brought out a good attendance, most of whom brought a few flowers or plants as it was the annual display night. Some good exhibits showed what care and patience can accomplish, while C. C. Pollworth's lily "Embargo" was up-to-date. It consisted of three artificial Easter lilies, wired on the stool of a natural one. James Livingstone exhibited two fine specimens of calceolarias, which certainly were beauties. A. Reinhardt had a vase of well grown assorted carnations and very fine sweet peas. Kamp & Spinti showed a vase of larkspur and centaureas, snapdragons in two shades and pelargoniums. E. Wilke Company had a specimen pelargonium and vase of fine jonquills. Holton & Hunkel Co. staged a vase of assorted seedling

SUPPLY AND DEMAND BOTH WEAKEN.

Owing to the dull, cold weather; there was a great shortage in the supply which, however, was not much of a handicap as the demand also fell off, there appearing to be but little doing outside of the ever existing call for "designs of sympathy." Carnations are off crop; growers report they are not likely to come in full again until after Easter, which will make them scarce for the holiday. Except for a few late houses, sweet peas will also be scarce for Easter, as a great proportion of the stock now coming in is second grade, with short stems. The rose is the quantity stock, there being a plentiful supply in all varieties, particularly the Killarneys, which go at buyer's prices. American Beauties are shortening up, or it is said there is to be a scarcity at Easter. This may be fact, or pure fancy to send prices sky-rocketing. Long stemmed Hadleys are a feature. These specials are wonderful flowers. Ophelia is now so deep in color as to look like another variety. It is astonishing to see the vigor of the two-year cold storage lilies as shown by the higher grades of the stock now coming in. Many of the flowers are as good as those of a year ago, some with stems 24 inches in length. All first grades bring $25 per hundred. Callas are very abundant, but all good stock finds buyers at prices little below the record figures of the winter. Cattleyas are good items. Schroederae are going out, and Mossie will soon have the market almost to itself. Violets are still in evidence, but all local stock is getting very small and will be out before Easter.

April 7.—The balmy, spring weather of the past few days brought in a very good supply in all lines, particularly roses. Carnations and sweet peas appear scarce and sold up well at last week's prices. One of the dealers said: "The market this morning is in good condition—a fair supply and a good, healthy demand."

NOTES.

A wholesaler, commenting on the Easter supply of cut flowers, said they would be able to handle all the stock they were likely to get. He felt that, with the exception of roses, everything else would be on the short side. Carnations were reputed off crop. Sweet peas, always plentiful for an early Easter, ran short stemmed two to three weeks later. There would be no daffodils, little other bulbous stock and very few, if any, violets. Lily of the valley which was always a quantity stock at Easter will be almost negligible. Easter lilies will be scarce and callas would have to take their place as far as they will go. Snapdragons, larkspurs and calendulas should be fairly plentiful. In orchids, Mossie will about monopolize the market and should bring good prices. Under these conditions, all prices were sure to rule higher. The trade evidently expects a good Easter, there being large advance orders for cut flowers.

John Kuhn, of Olney, one of the successful growers, finds the calceolarias make good pot plants. He grows both the hybrid and shrubby types and does them well. Callas in pots, half plunged in soil in raised beds, have been found better this year than ever before. They have flowered continuously during the entire winter. A bench of Azore lilies are a picture. Like every other grower, he wishes he had more of them. An edging of sweet alyssum along the side of the carnation bench has been found very profitable.

Edward Reid thoroughly enjoyed a trip to Boston, Mass., the past week. He described the market as well stocked with flowers in all lines. He particularly admired the yellow daisies, which were very fine. The chairman of the national publicity committee was a very busy man, but most hospitable. He said: "If all retailers had the push and energy of Henry Penn, the demand for flowers would soon tax all branches of the business to supply it, and there would be no fault found with prices.

Alfred M. Campbell's mammoth operation in cold storage giganteum lilies at Strafford Farm, is daily inspected by interested growers and dealers. The stock is coming on in splendid shape, the consensus of opinion being that the quality of the flowers will be good, with fair length of stem, and the great percentage will be just right for Easter week.

A round of the stores shows many of them to be prepared, or fast getting ready for the coming busy week. At Chas. Grakelow's well filled shop, in addition to the always large assortment of baskets, a big invoice of some hundreds in various sizes of plant receptacles were received in good time for filling for the Easter sales.

J. Duetcher, of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange, places the Double White and Pink Killarneys in the first division of forcing roses. He finds them always salable at a good price. He thinks plumosus ought to pay, as they never get enough of it.

The London Flower Shop will offer choice baskets, in which heather will be conspicuous. While they have found stock scarce, enough has been secured to make a very good showing.

John Muir, of Chicago, spent a busy couple of hours in this city one day last week. He was whirled out to Harris' in Pennocks' auto to look over their Easter plants and left later for Boston.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons, in their Diamond street greenhouses, are strong on hydrangeas, spiraeas and genistas. They also have a nice lot of well flowered Bermuda lilies.

A wholesale florist comments on the inconsistency of some retailers as follows: "One who had ordered as much of a stock for Easter delivery as he had purchased for almost a month before, insisted that all of the flowers must be strictly fresh, not kept on the plants or in ice boxes or stored in any way for the holiday market. If everybody orders as this man does, I wonder where he expects the stock to come from. At all holidays, growers time their crops to be as full as possible. Carnations are not picked close for a week or two, and roses are not allowed to develop, but are cut and their opening retarded in cool cellars or cold storage ice boxes. If there is to be an increased stock at Easter to supply at least five times the everyday demand, such well known methods are necessary.

The exhibition of Easter stock at the club meeting last week covered a wide range of plants, many of them exceptionally well done. It was a beautiful display, and timely. Walter Van der Hengle added to their beauty with ribbons and other artistically placed decorative material.

Some of the stores say they have ordered very little, as at the high prices they would rather tell their customers they could not serve them, than send them away dissatisfied, with the prices they would have to ask to make a profit. K.

DULL MARKET CONTINUES.

Although, as a matter of course, there was something doing every day of the past week, the market never completely recovered from the backset of the previous week, due to the parade and the blizzard. No change of importance in values can now be expected until the Easter business starts. The cold wave, to some extent, cut down the receipts, but there has been plenty to supply the demand. Milder weather, the last half of the week, created a better movement in violets. Carnations, too, the supply being lighter, rallied a little, but roses and sweet peas were slow. The greenhouse tulips and narcissi continue to move at good figures. A limited supply of delphinium is on the market and is held at a good price. There is some movement in snapdragons, stocks, marigolds, etc., but all are slow. In orchids, there is an abundant supply to meet the demand. Several wholesale stores are handling geraniums and other plants. The retailers are now interested in Easter prospects; though it does not appear that many of them will have a supply of pot lilies, however, there is a fair supply of pot roses, hydrangues, daisies and other plants in sight.

April 7.—Rain and fog rendered many arrivals late this morning, the ferry boats being slow in nosing in. There is little change in market conditions. Orchids are less plentiful and prices are higher. Mild weather keeps up a better movement in violets. Orders for cut lilies for Easter are being taken at 35 cents, bud and flower, but current prices are 15 and 20 cents. All told, there is an abundant supply of stock on the market.

NOTES.

The communication of Charles E. Russell, of Cleveland, O., relating to Mothers' day prices of carnations, published in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of April 5, is sound reasoning, and of all days when there is a special demand for flowers, the prices should be reasonable on Mothers' day. The writer of this column would remind the growers, and the other branches of the trade, that the aim of the founder of Mothers' day was not to create more profit for the trade, but to establish a noble sen-ment. If it is to be turned into a day of "profiteering," that sentiment is abused. The writer is far from being opposed to publicity, but he wishes it to be of the right kind. To try to persuade the public to buy flowers, and at the same time double or treble the price, is reversing the policy that has been pursued by the most successful merchants in all lines of business. Florists who sneer at sentiment in connection with business, should take thought, that were it not for sentiment, there would be no florist business. Twenty cents is a small sum, but it looks large to a poor working girl, particularly, if a few days before or the day after, similar carnations are sold for five and ten cents each, and add to that, the customer goes away with a poor opinion of the trade in general.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., was seen at his hotel, the Breslin, on his return from Massachusetts. He was favorably impressed with the new roses at the Montgomery range, Hadley, Mass., but as they had been heavily cut for propagating purposes, he hopes to see them again under more favorable conditions. Speaking of his own new rose, Premier, he stated that orders had come in for young plants to the limit of their production, one firm having ordered 25,000 plants, and the total of orders has reached 550,000 plants. Mr. Hill spent several days in this city and vicinity, calling on C. H. Totty, Eugene Dailedouze and other well-known growers.

The newspapers have devoted considerable space to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of N. W. Ayer & Son, which was held at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, Pa., April 4. It is one of the oldest advertising agencies in this country, and it is stated that they began by advertising "tobacco, seeds and agricultural implements." In the account of the celebration, we note this: "Not the least of its tasks (at the beginning) was to gain a respected place in business." How times have changed: It is the man or firm that does not advertise that now has the "task."

Charles Brown, Jr., returned from France with the 27th Division. He was "over there" for 10 months serving as a motorcycle dispatch bearer, and he says that he had some great runs for his money. Fortunately he escaped injury. He has located in his father's retail store, Broadway and 58th street.

Harry Charles, formerly with S. C. Gilbert, returned from France with the 27th Division, United States army. He was "over there" nine months, attached to the supply department. He speaks highly of the work of the Red Cross, Salvation Army and other organizations.

Lawrence Theiler, formerly book-keeper for John Young & Co., who was a soldier in the overseas force of the United States army, and was severely wounded, returned some time ago and has so far recovered as to resume his position in John Young's service.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and Charles H. Totty of Madison, N. J., went to Hadley, Mass., the past week to view the new roses at the Montgomery range. As both are experts, the trade will be interested in their opinions.

Several events of the past week were noteworthy. It was the coldest April 1 in 45 years, and that is not an April fool joke—at 3 a. m. and 10 p. m. the temperature was down to 22 degrees.

John Burroughs, naturalist, botanist and writer, celebrated his eighty-second birthday, April 3. He is a grand old American, hale and hearty, and we hope he lives to pass the century mark.

Harry Payne, of Washington, D. C., was in the city the past week and reports business quiet at the national capital since Congress adjourned.

Gilbert P. Josephson, well known in the trade, has opened a store for the sale of florists' supplies at 54 West 28th street.

J. S. Fenrich, 51 West 28th street, has been exhibiting in his show window a fine vase of the new rose, Frank Dunlop.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held at Chicago, June 24-26, 1919.

THE price of bags at Chicago April 9, is $52

DUNTER trade east and west has been heavy this week.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district are selling at 60 cents to 75 cents per bushel.

ACCORDING to the head of a leading agricultural machinery company, foreign orders are pouring into the American market.

MANITOWOC, WIS.—Cornelius Madson, secretary of the M. G. Madson Seed Co. since its incorporation 29 years ago, died March 22.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade April 9 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds.

THE Western Seedsmen's Association will hold its annual meeting at the Baltimore hotel, Kansas City, Mo., April 12 at 9:30 a. m.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—C. C. Morse & Co. report an unusually heavy plant trade. The call for fruit trees has about cleaned up this stock.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is of the opinion that the peak of the counter trade for this season has passed earlier than usual.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The Louisville Seed Co. has leased a commodious building at Lytle and Fifteenth streets, and will remove its offices and stock to that location in the near future.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Dave Peck Seed Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000. The directors are David E. Peck, James C. Johnson and Orville W. McGinnis.

NEW YORK.—The Wanamaker store is running big advertisements of seeds and garden tools in the daily papers, with elaborate cultural talk of the Wanamaker brand, good propaganda.

A. HENDERSON & Co., Chicago, now located in the former Winterson store, 166 N. Wabash avenue, made a considerable suburban distribution of their catalogues by boys and trucks this season and say it pays.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fred. H. Bateman, of the Bateman Manufacturing Co., Grenloch, N. J.; C. O. Wilcox, representing Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.

BURLAP buyers are now evincing some interest in the market because values are only about one-third of the cost during the fall of 1918, and undoubtedly approximate the normal basis more closely than any other fabrics.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover market closed steady April 7, at $30.00, registering a drop of $1.25 during the previous seven days. April was quoted at $25.50 and October at $17.50. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.05, April $5.15, May $5.12½ and September $5.70.

A. MILLER, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, is making preparations for a trip to Japan.

ENGLAND is reported to have raised the quarantine against Dutch hyacinths and early tulips.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The Hudmon Seed Co., which has opened a store at 316 Third avenue, announces it will enter the mail order business in 1920.

FRELSIAS in California have been badly damaged by frost, those on low land being hurt by too much water. The present outlook is for a small crop.

Catalogue Mailing Troubles.

Referring to this matter on which communications from J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md., and Secretary Kendel of the American Seed Trade Association appeared in previous issues, Curtis Nye Smith writes as follows, April 2:

"It may interest you to have the recent decision of A. M. Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster General, written to the writer on this matter. The circular letter of the post office department of June 3, 1918, suggesting the restriction of the size of envelopes to 4 inches by 9 inches is not an order, but simply a suggestion, and Mr. Dockery uses these words:

"Whenever it is practicable to prepare matter so that it can be enclosed in an envelope not exceeding 4 inches by 9 inches, this should be done."

"As it is quite impossible for the seedsmen or nurserymen to limit the size of their catalogues to the dimensions above indicated, relief is felt that this circular of June 3, 1918, is not an order but merely a suggestion.

"It is understood that some local postmasters are holding this circular of June 3, 1918, to be an order, and if any difficulty arises, it is suggested that the local postmaster secure an opinion from Mr. Dockery."

{Chairman Therkilson, of the postal laws committee of the American Seed Trade Association, has sent us a similar communication.—Ed.}

Boston Seed Trade.

As reported by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., trade is better than it has been for two years, equaling that of 1916. Interest is being manifested in the improvement of estates, and while comparatively little new work will be undertaken, existing plantings will be fully maintained, and the lapses of the past two years will be made good, with the result that present satisfactory trade conditions are bound to improve further.

Thos. J. Grey, the veteran seedsman, and wife, left for Los Angeles, Calif., last week. Mr. Grey is suffering from an internal trouble and needs the relief afforded by a more even climate. His hosts of friends in the trade wish him speedy recovery.

The Ames Implement & Seed Co. has closed its doors, but the firm continues filling orders already taken. Employees have been notified their services will terminate April 12. It is believed the seed department will be continued under new management.

French Bulbs.

Roman hyacinth plantations are gradually diminishing, while the acreage devoted to Paper White and other narcissi remains the same. The plantations have not had the usual care this season and the development of the bulbs will be unfavorably influenced.

One French dealer predicts an advance of 10 per cent over last year's prices. The growers' syndicate will establish prices April 26.

Catalogues Received.

Ripley Mfg. Co., Grafton, Ill., sprayers; D. Hill Nursery Co., Duudee, Ill., evergreens; Lawrance's Greenhouses, Ogdensburg, N. Y., seeds, bulbs and plants; Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore., roses and other plants; Fraser Nursery Co., Rochester, N. SEED store men who have been rushed day and night for the last six weeks until they are ready to drop, will, if they have a chance to read the editorial in the April Seed World, greatly appreciate the erudition and practical knowledge shown in advising how to keep seed clerks busy on rainy days! Oh My! Equally thoughtful is the timely April suggestion to change old stock on the shelves. What were the boys doing since last December? These rewrites from former issues of trade journals in the undertaking or leather trades will not always fit the horticultural line, however much they are spread to fill columns.

Chicago, April 8.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen boxes, $3.00 to $4.00; celery, Florida, crate, $4.50 to $6.00; leaf lettuce, per box, 27½ cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 50 to 60 cents; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $4.50 to $5.75.

New York, April 7.—Celery (Florida), per case $2.50 to $7.00; cucumbers, $1.25 to $2.00 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.65 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 35 cents; lettuce, per package, $1.00 to $5.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $3.00 to $5.00.

Vegetable Markets

Reports to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period April 1-8, showed prices mostly higher with shipments increasing. Western potato markets gained moderately but were less excited than last week, while sharp advances occurred in eastern sections. No. 1 northern stock advanced 20 cents in the the Chicago carlot market closing at $1.90-$2 per 100 pounds. Similar gains were made in Wisconsin and Michigan shipping sections. New York round whites closed 30 cents higher in consuming markets at $2.35-$2.75 per 100 pounds. Maine Green Mountains, sacked, made sharp advances in producing sections, closing at $2.18-$2.28 f.o.b. as compared with $1.60-$1.68 the preceding week. Maine Irish Cobblers ranged $2.03-$2.08. Cabbage was higher, old northern stock being offered in but few markets, and reached a general range of $99-$110 per ton, bulk ruling $7 per 100 pounds at New York at the close. New stock made further advances. Southern California Wingstadt ranged $15 per ton higher at $90-$100 f.o.b. shipping points. New Florida stock advanced sharply in producing sections, ranging $5-$6 per barrel as compared with $3.50-$3.60 last week. Northern consuming markets advanced 75 cents. Texas flat stock reached $120 per ton at St. Louis, Mo. Onion values were well sustained with few advances. Yellow stock from cold storage reached $5 f.o.b. in western New York shipping sections for a few sales. The general range for good yellows in consuming markets was $3.50-$4.75. Spinach prices were slightly lower in all markets. Sweet potatoes were slightly higher. New Jersey and Delaware stock reaching $3.50-$4 per hamper. Tennessee Nancy Halls were firm at $3-$3.25. Florida tomatoes tended downward closing at $3.85-$1 f.o.b. shipping points.

Sweet Potato Varieties.

Of the many varieties of sweet potatoes grown, only about 12 are important from the market standpoint, according to Farmers' Bulletin 999 of the United States department of agriculture. The choice of a variety should depend upon the market, and the purpose for which the potatoes are to be used. The northern markets, as a rule, prefer a dry, mealy potato of the Jersey type although some of the moist-fleshed varieties, such as Nancy Hall and Dooley, find a ready sale when the potatoes have been properly stored, graded, and placed on the market in good condition. The southern markets demand a moist-fleshed variety. Nancy Hall and Porto Rico are the most popular varieties, although Dooley, the Pumpkin (Pumpkin Yam), and others meet with ready sale. Where the potatoes are grown for stock feed, only the heaviest yielding varieties should be considered. The Yellow Strasburg, Red Bermuda, Southern Queen, and White Belmont (White Yam) are especially adapted for this purpose. Of the dry, mealy potatoes the following varieties are important: Big-Stem Jersey, Yellow Jersey, Red Jersey, and Red Carolina. The Triumph and the Gold Skin are medium dry varieties. The principal varieties of the moist-fleshed type are the Nancy Hall, Southern Queen, Pumpkin, Georgia, Porto Rico, and Dooley. These varieties are known in different sections under various local names.

This "Velvet" Comes in Mighty Handy

Yep, collected my Liberty Bond interest today. Seems like finding money to clip off the old coupon and shove it in the window like a certified check. That "velvet" will sure come in handy. Some way or another, I never felt so set up and idly rich in my life as I do now, with Liberty Bonds drawing interest regularly.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of parks, is critically ill at the Hahnemann hospital, following an operation.

YONKERS, N. Y.—The Yonkers Nursery Co. received 30,000 thuja on the S. S. Sloterdijk, having chartered ship space and had the stock come unpacked.

MANSFIELD DEPOT, CONN.—John R. Houston, founder of the firm of John R. Houston & Sons, a resident here for 20 years and well known to the trade, died March 22, age 73 years.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—In compliance with the Arbor day proclamations of Governor Gardner and Mayor Kiel, thousands of trees were planted in this city and throughout the state as memorials to fallen heroes of the world war.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The state legislature has passed a law allowing a higher levy for park purposes in cities of over 100,000 population, which will make available over $1,000,000 for purchases of land and improvements.

Small Foreign Shipments.

One of the most serious problems of our foreign trade is shipping small parcels. High freight on small shipments constitutes a serious obstacle to trade development. A shipper having large bulk freight may include small orders with a bulk shipment, and these small packages, on receipt by consignee, may then be mailed to various destinations. The shipper without means for such arrangement is at a disadvantage. A partial remedy exists in a wider use of the parcel post.

Fruit-Tree Bark Beetle.

Winter injured trees, or trees low in vitality from any other cause, are often the object of the attacks of these miniature borers, according to Circular No. 87 of the Purdue University agricultural experiment station, Lafayette, Ind. They give a tree the appearance of having received a charge of bird shot and hence they are often popularly known as shot-hole borers. The adult is a very small beetle, measuring about one-eighth of an inch in length and dull black in color. Beetles pass the winter as both larvæ and pupæ beneath the bark, then mature and emerge as adults during April and May. The females then construct a brood chamber in the sapwood along the sides of which they bore small holes where they lay their eggs. The eggs hatch in a few days and the small grubs start eating their way from the brood chamber through the sapwood. It is the small whitish larva, less than one-fourth inch in length, that cause the principal injury and it is in this stage the orchardist should guard against.

Their presence is usually detected by a gummy exudate issuing from the bark or by the general lack of thriftiness in the tree. It is a safe assumption that only weak and devitalized trees are attacked. This weakened condition may have been brought about by winter injury, San Jose scale, lack of fertility, sun scald, blister-canker or any other conditions that cause the initial decline in a tree's vigor and thriftiness. The attacks of the borers usually follow one of these primary causes. Since the grubs are so small and numerous, it is quite apparent that the only way to combat this pest successfully is to cut out and burn all dead trees and all dead and injured areas. The exposed wounds should then be painted over with a good paint.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Rambler Roses.

The rambler roses for Memorial day will demand constant attention, for at this season of the year aphids and red spider increase very rapidly if the conditions are propitious. It is far better to keep these insects down by proper culture than to be obliged to resort to measures to kill them. Give the plants all the ventilation possible, but drafts will often cause mildew on the soft foliage, so these must be guarded against especially, and low ventilation, such as open doors with the wind drawing through the houses. Syringe thoroughly on bright days. There is no better prevention for red spider than a good syringing that will reach the under side of the leaves, which will quickly break up the colonies of spiders that gather there. If the plants require fumigation, it should be light, for often the young foliage is very tender, and heavy fumigation with smoke quickly burns it. Where the pots are full of roots a watering with liquid manure or a mulch of sheep manure mixed with sifted soil will be found very beneficial and will add a lustre to the foliage and will deepen the color of the flowers.

Pansies.

The sale of pansy plants will soon be at its height, and there is nothing that the florist or grower sells, upon which more time is wasted than in selecting a small order of pansies if the customer is shown a frame of a few thousand plants. The better way is to have boxes or baskets holding a dozen plants all made up for the customer. It is not necessary to put up more than will be required for one or two days' sale, but as fast as sold keep the stock replenished. There are many patrons who will be well satisfied with a good selection already placed in a basket, who will take an hour of a salesman's time in making their choice out of a frame. Any late seedlings should be planted in the frames at once, and these will make fine plants for late May or early June planting, when the older plants are either sold or have become too large for bedding purposes.

Primulas.

For plants of both P. sinensis and obconica, for blooming next spring, May is the best time to sow the seed, which germinates very readily at this time, but if this is delayed until June it will often be found quite difficult to get the seed started well, and as the young seedlings grow very slowly they will require constant attention during the warm weather, for a few hours' sun when they are dry will cause the loss of all the plants. The soil should be sifted in a fine sieve, as the seed are very small, and they should not be covered with the soil, but sown thinly on the soil when loose and then pressed flat with a board. Watering should be done with a very fine rose on the can, so as not to wash the seeds or soil. At this season of the year the seed will germinate readily in almost any greenhouse, but it is well to cover the seed pan or box with glass to prevent too rapid evaporation, and until the plants begin to make growth keep the pots well shaded. Many growers wrap a piece of paraffine paper around the glass that is placed on the seed pan. This allows plenty of light to germinate the seed and will prevent the direct rays of the sun from burning up the young seedlings when they start to grow. As these young plants grow very slowly, some soils will often become caked or scaly, and if this occurs the top should be carefully broken up to allow the air to enter. As soon as three or four leaves are formed, pot in 2½-inch pots, not too deeply, but yet deep enough to have them stand erect. They should then be placed in a cool house, and much of the success of their culture depends upon the care and watering in their early growth. They are a moisture-loving plant and should never become dry, yet they are easily overwatered and will not make a good growth if continually kept soaked; frequent and light waterings are the best. A lightly shaded frame with the pots plunged in the soil and the sash lifted at top and bottom for free circulation of air is the best location for summer culture.

Asters.

The early and midseason asters should be planted out as early as the season will allow. If the plants are hardened off for two or three weeks in a cold frame and gradually given night air as soon as safe, they will endure the outside temperature much better than those carried directly from the warm greenhouse. The land should be prepared at once, and while asters will grow on almost any piece of ground, success or failure depends much on the proper preparation of the soil. Land that was manured last fall and plowed is by far the best, and all that will be required in the spring is a shallow plowing or disking and then leveling. It is well not to level off too large a tract at once, for heavy rains occur at this season, which pack the soil down hard. Before planting give the young plants a thorough watering, and if in boxes or the bench cut through the rows with a knife a day before planting. Lay the field out in rows from 25 to 20 inches apart, giving the branching varieties the greater distance, with a wider space every fifth or sixth row to provide a walk when cutting the flowers and set the plants from 12 to 18 inches apart. Plant with a trowel, for the plants set in a dibbled hole will not take hold as quickly, and with the early asters the slight difference in time taken in planting is more than made up in the early blooming; the dibble packs the soil around the plant and the roots do not grow into it as freely, and the roots are also contracted in the small hole made by the dibble. As soon as the field is planted, if possible, give the plants a good watering and then cultivate lightly with a wheel hoe to loosen up the soil.

New York Fall Exhibitions.

The American Institute of the City of New York in conjunction with the American Dahlia Society will hold an exhibition of dahlias at the Engineering Society building, 25-33 West Thirty-ninth street, September 23-25.

On November 5-7, at the same place, there will be an exhibition of chrysanthemums staged jointly by the American Institute and the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

Further particulars regarding both of the above shows may be had by applying to Wm. A. Eagleson, secretary of the board of managers of the American Institute, 322-324 West Twenty-third street, New York.

LAKE FOREST, ILL.—At Melody Farm, the beautiful estate of J. Ogden Armour, the lake is being enlarged and a new summer house is under construction. The golf course is being extended to 18 holes and the planting of large numbers of evergreens and birches, is in progress. Fifteen deer have also been ordered to be added to the 10 now in the park.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The great Easter event, with its record under exceptional conditions, is now a known quantity, and has surely proved profitable to all who were wide awake to its possibilities.

Should any stock have been left over, if carefully handled, it can generally be sold the first few days of the week, as there are frequently some friends that were forgotten, and others who desire to return gifts from unexpected sources. Then the weddings of the week often call for flowering stock in the decorations, into which can be placed plants not fresh enough to be salable.

As quickly as possible, the store should be brought back into its normal condition, all emergency staging removed, and nothing in sight that looks like left over stock. No one is attracted to plants that appear in the least passe. This cannot be impressed too strongly on the average retailer, who will allow stock to stand around in the hope of getting something out of it, or to fill up the space because there is nothing better. If confidence is to be inspired in one's goods and service, the foundation is perfect, healthy and fresh stock, without defect or blemish of any kind.

The matter of most importance is to at once make an inventory of all the Easter material—plants, cut flowers, and supplies that were left over. This stock report will be most valuable when planning for the 1920 event. The condition in which the orders from the various growers were received and their timeliness whether too early or late in the week; the success with the plant baskets; if graded properly in the various sizes to meet the demand; whether the arrangement of the store could be improved on; the matter of the extra clerks, names and addresses of those most satisfactory, and, in fact, every detail of the business of this busy week should be written down. If placed in the year book, which should contain records of all holiday events, it will be always at hand for reference, but if on loose sheets, these may be filed away so securely that they are not to be found when wanted.

On account of the many soldiers returning from abroad, there are likely to be numerous weddings, for which occasions there should be a good stock of the necessary requisites.

Good sized pot covers, with tin, zinc or galvanized iron linings, are most useful—12 to 15 or even 16-inch covers, with a 10 to 12-inch pot kentia or areca set in, and the extra room filled with flowering plants, such as rambler roses, daisies, lilies, genistas, spiraeas, etc., and vinca vines to hang down, make an ornament, that when placed on a suitable pedestal, will fit in almost anywhere with splendid decorative effect. The flowering plants can all be taken out of the pots so as to take up the least room, and the balls of earth wrapped in cheese cloth. Given a good watering, they will not dry out in these lined covers, and can be used several times where events follow closely.

The kneeling stool is another stock article frequently called for, which, with suitable cushions, kept when not in use in covers so as to be always clean, should be always on hand.

Folding screens will be found useful, and a good line of pedestals to be kept painted and clean. Tall flower vases are also good stock. For the church, standards of various heights with foot and vase on top fixed or detachable, when filled and placed at intervals along the aisles, are very effective. A line of bridesmaids' baskets, and others for the little flower girls, are good selling points when an order is being taken.

This is now the season for special sales, which as the cut flower stock becomes more plentiful, can be used to good advantage to put new life and energy into the business. Roses are now dependable, as almost all varieties can be had in quantity. The short grades of all sorts, placed in the small vase or tumbler handle baskets, will make a quick selling special and return a good profit. The miniature vases in glass or pottery, filled in the same way, will be found very salable. It is not necessary to mark these down. They may, because they are offered in quantity, be considered a special and should always carry conspicuous price tags. There is something about the price card that suggests a bargain, as does also a number grouped together, but they should show a good profit, which is helped out by quantity lot prices obtained when the stock was purchased.

Be particular about the street front appearance of the store. It should be made more attractive in every way. If its inviting or showy display causes those in the passing street car to turn and get a look, or the hurried passer-by to stop for a moment, it is as good, or even better, than seeing your ad. in the paper. The florist's store should be the most beautiful in the block, made so by his art in using some of the many foliage and flowering plants and vines that are at his disposal. Very few of the trade take advantage of this great opportunity.

If last year's awning is all right, except the color, give it a light coat of paint to fit in well with the color of the front. It should be done indoors and dried out before subjected to the dust of the street. Afterwards, a hosing will make it as good as new. A faded awning is a great detriment.

Preparedness.

"We are rushed to death with these fast minute men," said the manager of one of the big florist supply houses on Tuesday of Easter week. "It's a wonder to me," he continued, "how some men get along at all. They leave everything to the last minute and then expect us to be right there with the goods the same as when the line was complete. Go into their stores and things are in the same condition, all excitement and hurry and bustle, no system, no plans thought out to work by. We have other customers who rarely ever buy anything at holidays; the stock is laid in a month or more ahead and is all ready and being used and displayed to the best advantage. The time and worry of getting these necessary goods at this rush season is avoided and they are free to attend to the urgent duties of the hour."

This is good sound business sense, and there is far too much truth in his description of the unfortunate habit that many have of putting off or leaving everything to the last, and then trying in a helter skelter manner to catch up. The man who buys in advance at his leisure, when the lines are full, is not hurried, uses judgment, gets just what he wants and has it on hand in time to make use of to the best advantage. The late buyer is always in a hurry, has to take what he can get, and is scarcely ever able to use it as he would like. Baskets that should have been on hand to fill at the greenhouses, have to be thrown together hurriedly at the store, taking valuable time of the best men that are then sorely needed for other work. Plant stocks are ordered in much the same way. The grower phones and asks, "When are you coming out to look things over?" and is told, "Oh! I'll be out early next week," but a week passes and then another and finally the tardy buyer finds the choice of stock, set off in blocks, marked sold, and he has to be satisfied with what is left.

In the well ordered store, preparedness is the watchword of success. All the work that is possible is done in advance so as to relieve the strain of the busy time. A large retail cut flower store in one of the large cities, whose success is often a matter of comment in the trade, has its holiday business so well planned and prepared for, that no extra help except for deliveries is taken on, the regular employes with everything conveniently to hand being able to put up and handle the additional orders entirely within themselves.

Preparedness saves health, anxiety, money and time. It also adds prestige, and the satisfaction of things well done, which equals more than all the rest together.

Window Signs.

Neatly lettered cardboard signs or notices, calling attention to the quality or other features of the stock on view, should be a part of every window display. The smartest shops—haberdashers, tailors, jewelers, hatters and many others, always have something to say on well gotten up cards; just a few words calling attention to the exclusive style, or the unique coloring, the fact that it is the first offering of the season, etc. The sale-compelling price is not often omitted; it is there, plain to be seen, and the customer instinctively in his own mind decides whether it is high or low, and is many times agreeably surprised that such an article can be purchased for the money. The man that put a price on his window that a special grade of rose is selling, two dozen for $1.00, will sell many more dozen, and to strangers who may become customers, than his competitor down the street, who though he carries the same grade of stock for sale at the same prices, does not advertise the fact.

A conspicuous sign with the name of the firm close to the glass at the bottom of the window on the inside, is a good advertisement. This need not be large, but unmistakably plain. Many people in passing, attracted by the window display, stop to look in and often pass on without looking up to see whose place it is, or perhaps if they do, the awning conceals the view. The narrow sign with the prominent lettering is seen, however, and makes an impression.

One friend says to another: "Oh! this is Smith's store; Mrs. Brown gets her flowers here and says they keep so long."

There is something about a printed card that is compelling, causing one to stop short and read and see the stock in the window that would otherwise have passed unnoticed.

An Easier Window.

Elmer W. Gachring, Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., has a large show window and believes in keeping it attractive at all times. The accompanying illustration shows his Easter decoration of 1918, the cross of cut flowers and the large Easter egg, electrically lighted, in which was a miniature scene of Calvary. Doves, and ribbons, festooned, filled the upper space, while ferns and Easter plants were well displayed to set off the main features.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Warning.

The following pertinent advice was issued to members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association last week in the form of a postal card, in good season to prevent mistakes in the Easter business:

"Be sure and make your telegrams for Easter orders plain and correct. Read over twice before sending them.

"Be sure and get correct addresses.

"Do not encourage orders too small, but do not deny F. T. D. service to people who cannot afford more.

"Remember that in a great many parts of the country, it is very hard to make deliveries of plants and cut flowers for less than $3 or $4 and have them be a credit to the sender as well as the florist who makes the delivery.

"Be sure and acknowledge every order immediately after you receive it.

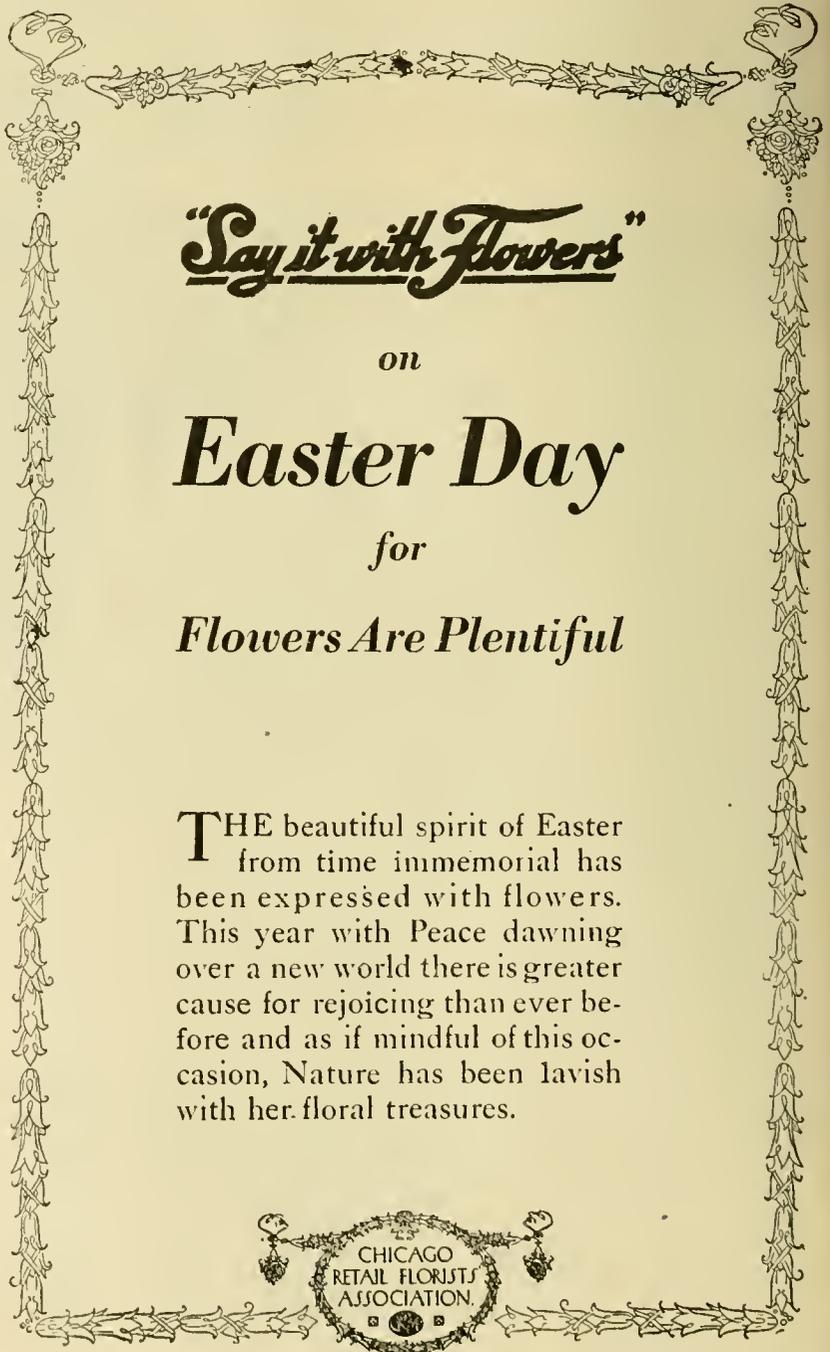

"Be sure and mail bill immediately after your Easter rush is over.

"Be sure and always state a price limit on your orders. You may be selling a dozen roses for $3, and in some other town they may sell for $5 or $8 per dozen.

"Be sure and give the man who fills the order a chance to do his best; leave some leeway, and tell your customer that the man at the other end will do his best."

THE beautiful spirit of Easter from time immemorial has been expressed with flowers. This year with Peace dawning over a new world there is greater cause for rejoicing than ever before and as if mindful of this occasion, Nature has been lavish with her floral treasures.

ASSOCIATION.

EASTER WINDOW OF ELMER W. GAHRING, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Our promotion bureau now has available a new series of electrotypes featuring the large advertisements running in 16 national magazines, covering April and May. Florists who have not received a copy of the "broadside" describing these new aids, should make application for one at once. In the same publication is described the new series of lantern slides for use in moving picture theatres. The first series is still in supply, and is well augmented by the new set. Combined, the two series cover several important phases of the florists' business. Mothers' day, and Memorial day are included in the combination, and the slides feature the sentiment of these days perfectly. Our bureau has many times been congratulated upon the quality of these slides, and their distribution has been large. The name and address of the purchaser appears on each slide, and the price is $2 per set, or $4 for the combination of eight slides.

Preparations for Easter should not be an excuse for lack of interest in the campaign. It is not to be supposed for one moment that there is a florist in this big country who is not familiar with the work of the campaign, or the beneficial results accruing from it. Still there are thousands who have not subscribed a penny to the campaign fund which is providing so much. Our committees are trying to raise this year, $100,000, which is not more than $5 per capita of those engaged in our industry as proprietors of establishments—split into monthly payments; this would be less than 50 cents per month, the price of three good cigars, say.

Just read this letter, received by the secretary, from a southwestern florist and covering a remittance: "The writer, now in his seventieth year, feels he has not many more pleasant summers to spend in the field of the florist game, but is a well wisher to the calling. He is living on the ground where the first commercial greenhouse in the state was built in 1845. "Say It with Flowers" is certainly the greatest slogan ever used. We are like small potatoes in old Ireland—no big things. We read through the trade journals of the great work you are doing. Let us, as small potatoes, thank you."

It is the support of the "small potatoes" we want particularly. Through this campaign, such will have a chance to grow into large tubers. They are not asked to subscribe anything beyond their means, and there is no criticism. If a florist feels he can only subscribe $5 or $6 a year, why not send it? He not only registers the fact that he is a "real" American florist, eager to boost any movement which promises good to his profession, but he endorses the work of those who are giving of their time and ability to a common cause. We have room for a very large number of small potatoes—and we want them.

Sales and Profits.

Paper by Hodgson Jolly, read at a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club April 10, 1919.

Isaiah, the prophet, in directing the attention of the Hebrews to the road to success said: "And though the Lord give you the bread of adversity and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be hidden any more."

How about it in these days? Truly these are days of adversity, but the teachers are not hidden and no man need say that there is no place he can go for knowledge. Knowledge is on every hand. Is it appreciated or made use of? It does not look like it, for statistics show the average life of business less than five years and 97 out of every 100 businesses, failures. Interposing here a touch of levity, one might say that there was considerable truth in the slang epic that "Life is a doughnut. The problem is to separate the nuts from the dough." Our problem to-night is to endeavor to separate facts from fancies, as regards sales and their profits. Let us, therefore, ask ourselves—What is a sale?

According to the dictionary, a sale is "an exchange of a commodity for an agreed price." However, in modern business, a sale means quite a good deal more—"an exchange of a commodity for an agreed price" at a profit to the seller. In fact, generally speaking, the sooner it is realized by business men that there is no sale where there is no profit, the better it will be for them individually and collectively. Such a realization is not based on anything merely theoretical or academic, for only when we realize, and admit, that we are in business to make profit—profit, legitimate, profit—are we going to properly succeed. Outside of a benevolent or charitable institution, every business has to make profits, if it is going to remain in business or develop and grow as it should. We, therefore, are forced to inquire what is profit on a sale? The answer, in everyday business language, would be that profit is "the difference between the sale price and the cost price of the article sold." This urges us to further information on the "cost price." "Cost price" or, in accounting lingo, "cost of sale", usually covers the "delivered" cost of the article or commodity sold, which would include the list price (less trade discount), plus delivery, freight and express charges. This, however, is not all of the "costs" of sale, for to the "delivered cost", has to be added the administrative or "general", as well as the "selling" expenses of the individual, partnership or corporation making the sale. Of course, it is understood that these extras to the original "delivered cost," usually termed "on costs", "burdens" or "overheads"—in other words, the cost of doing business or mark-up, cannot usually be directly applied, but are added on a percentage fractional or some such similar basis. This method or plan of distribution of the additional overhead costs or costs of doing business, does not, however, in any way, invalidate or deny the existence of these same additional classes of expense that have got to be added to the original prime "delivered" cost, before it can be said that all the items in the cost of sale have been covered. Neither does the use of any other basis of distribution, alter the case, or afford any grounds to any one who wants to be honest with himself, for ignoring or disregarding such "overhead" expenses in the total of costs of sale.

To sum up, then,

(1) A sale is not a sale, unless there is profit in it.

(2) The profit in a sale is the difference between the sales price and the total of the costs in the same.

(3) The factors in the costs of sale are: (a) "Delivered" cost of article. (b) Administrative or "general" overhead. (c) Selling expense or overhead. B and C being usually termed "cost of doing business", or, "make-up."

Quoting Walter W. Hoops, a well-known advertising man: "With rare exceptions the big problem is not bigger business, but better business methods—more careful thinking and less guessing." Why is it, that 90 per cent of American merchants overbuy? Because they do not know their inventories or cost of doing business. Is it not about time you florists took this to heart, and got rid of your conceit in old-time ways, and means of conducting business? How many of you can tell the percentage to sales, or cost of sales or your cost of doing business on your sales as a whole—much less on the different classes of sales? Again, if you can, are all the factors in the cost of doing business included in yours? Perhaps you do not know that bricklayers used to bend over and pick up every brick, and that when someone suggested a platform at a convenient level for obviating the bending over, the bricklayers told him they knew their business better than he did. Notwithstanding, the adjustable platform for bricks is in use everywhere, and bricklayers now lay three to four times the number of bricks they formerly laid.

Having proceeded this far, our next step is to inquire if there are any rules to be followed and methods to be employed in our everyday business that have been found practical. Yes, there are! Many of them! But let us consider at this time some of the more fundamental of the practices, one of which is the basis for correct figuring of profits on sales.

Some advocate the cost of sale as the proper basis, others, the sales price. Let me say here that it matters little which basis you employ, so long as you follow it through correctly. Let us visualize an assumed case of merchandise sales to the amount of $50,000.00; the cost of the merchandise sold being $30,000.00; the gross profit or "mark-up" $20,000.00; the cost of doing business $10,000.00, and net profit $10,000.00.

|  | Cost Basis | Percentage Basis | Sale Price Basis |
|--|------------|------------------|------------------|
| Mdse. sales.....                                     | $50,000   | 100              | 100              |
| Cost of mdse. sold                                   | 30,000     | 60               | 60               |
| Gross profit or "mark-up" ...                        | $20,000   | 40%              | 40               |
| LESS   |            |                  |                  |
| Cost of doing business (selling and gen. expense)... | $10,000   | 20%              | 20               |
| Net profit.....                                      | $10,000   | 20%              | 20               |

Always keep the basis clearly before you and do not possibly get mixed up, in the above example, and figure that the gross profit is 40 per cent, and take 40 per cent of $30,000 or $12,000, which, less your cost of doing business, $10,000, would only leave a net profit of $2,000 instead of $10,000—a shortage of $8,000. This shortage, of course, is equal to 40 per cent of the difference between the proper basis to which the 40 per cent applies, namely, $50,000, and the improper basis, or $30,000, or $20,000, at the rate of 40 per cent equals $8,000.

Such mistakes are not now so common, but do occur even in these days.

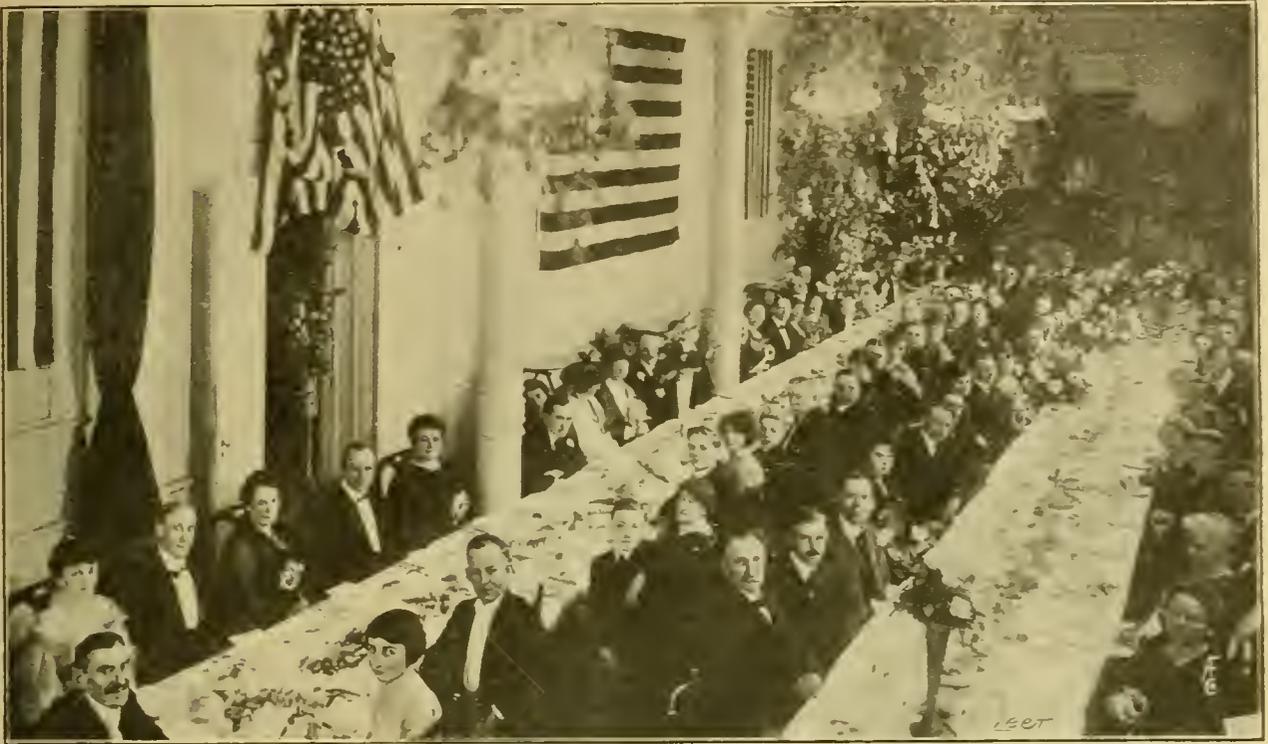

and, as you can well imagine, with disastrous results.

As regards the cost of doing business, in the foregoing example, let me say that though it is the ordinary practice to add this to the merchandise cost on a percentage basis, either to cost of merchandise sold or to sales price of merchandise sold, it is not technically correct practice. The underlying element in cost of doing business is time, therefore, it would be proper to apply it to the average inventory, according to the length of time the merchandise was in hand. This procedure, though not by any means practicable in a great many businesses, is followed by some to very great advantage to themselves. They keep records by weeks, or by months, of the all-over or departmental inventories and expenses, prorating these periodic expenses to the average periodic all-over or departmental inventories. This gives them not only correct cost of merchandise, increasing, as it should, according to length of time in hand, but provides as well a valuable guide to buying.

This leads us to the interesting question of turnover. Quick turnover is better, any time, than large gross profit on slow sales. The more turnover, the smaller the margin of gross profit necessary in the merchandise sold. Turnover is usually the number of times the average inventory will go into the cost of sales for the period, though, as in the case of department stores, the merchandise sold at retail prices into the average inventory at retail prices, is correct.

EASTER PLANT BASKETS.
Dwarf Deep Pink Azaleas and Easter Lilies.

VICTORY BANQUET OF THE WASHINGTON FLORISTS' CLUB, APRIL 9, 1919.

The average turnover for the ordinary retailer used to be two to three times a year, which would be considered satisfactory, but, in these days, the average turnover for the retailer must run from four to eight times a year to allow him to remain in business.

In this connection, the figures compiled by the System magazine in a survey of different lines of business, may be interesting:

Grocer makes 10 turnovers a year.

Department store makes seven turnovers a year.

Druggist makes 4½ turnovers a year.

Drygoods makes four turnovers a year.

Hardware dealer makes 3½ turnovers a year.

Shoe store makes 2-10 turnovers a year.

Clothier makes two turnovers a year.

Jeweler makes 1½ turnovers a year.

Of course, these figures, like all other figures, are based on averages on all sizes and conditions of business in the respective trade divisions, and must be taken with considerable reservation and only treated as "average." Some grocers make 20 turnovers a year. In some department stores, where the turnover for the store as a whole might be eight, some departments run as high as 16 in their turnovers, so kindly do not mislead yourselves into erroneous conclusions.

Turnover is a question of time, or speed. Suppose you had an article to sell for $10,000 that cost you $5,000 and that your cost of doing business was 20 per cent of sales per year, or $2,000 per year, in this instance: Suppose you did not sell it for three years, even though you got full sales price for the article, you would be "in the hole" $1,000.

Therefore, learn the essential lesson that you hold absolutely nothing in your stock rooms or business establishments for sale, that each and every day is not eating up your profits—just as surely as one day follows another. As one business man put it, "Holding stocks from season to season, is the shortest road to failure." Again, the principles and practices of correct figuring of profits must necessarily have added importance in these days of income and excess profits taxes. How easy it is to fool yourself in the computation of your net profits, and to find yourself paying more taxes than you are required to pay—or perhaps less taxes than you should, which is even a more dangerous eventuality than the other. The other day in helping out a merchant with his income tax, I found he had been depreciating his assets on the depreciated balance basis for years back, but had not been employing the correct method, so that when we readjusted figures, his taxable net income was $1,000 less. This occurred in a small business. Think of the possibilities in a large one.

We could continue at great length on illustrations and examples of the paramount necessity for accurate figures in every line of business, and how can you possibly get accurate figures except through correct accounting—correct both in principles and methods? Scientific accounting is the essence of horse-sense, properly applied to the varying conditions met with in modern business. In your particular line of business—flower growing, wholesaling and retailing—you have just as urgent a call for improvement as in any other line of business—more so even. Therefore, it certainly behooves you to get together and commence as soon as possible the construction of a definite, continuous programme of activities covering the investigation and determination of your costs, sales, methods, ethics and policies, affecting the different divisions of the florists' business, as so many other trades have done.

J. D. Thompson Carnation Co.

The greenhouse plant and lease of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., was sold by auction, April 9, for $10,550, free of liens, the amount of which is understood to be about $7,500. The Davis brothers, of Morrison, Ill., and Davenport, Ia., are reported to be the purchasers. A meeting of creditors has been called by Frederick A. Hill, referee in bankruptcy, to be held in his office, Room 327 Barber building, Joliet, April 25, at 1:30 p. m., at which time various claims will be considered.

New York Flower Show Committee Meets.

A meeting of the flower show committee was held at Secretary Young's office on the afternoon of April 14, the schedule being discussed. The preliminary calendar will be issued about May 1. All who have suggestions to make, should write at once to Secretary Young.

FLINT, MICH.—The range of A. J. McKinnon, which closed last fall, will be reopened in the near future.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—Joseph de Lorenzi has been granted a permit to build one greenhouse to cost $250.

EFFINGHAM, ILL.—The Johnson Undertaking Co. is enlarging its greenhouse to include a display room for flowers.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—The greenhouse property of John O. Stamp, on Ives street, has been sold to John B. Harris, to satisfy a mortgage.

CLEVELAND, O.—After being closed during the winter, due to the uncertainty of the fuel situation, C. B. Wilbelmy is preparing to reopen.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Lockyear Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 by M. H. Lockyear, L. E. Price and Ethel B. Price.

Detroit.*FLORISTS' CLUB HAS GOOD MEETING.

The club meeting, April 9, was a successful one in point of attendance and the enthusiastic participation in the interesting proceedings. Robert McCreery addressed the members on "Electro-Culture of Plant Life" as affected by the radio-nitrofier used in many places for the benefit of both indoor and generally is a cause of much disappointment. In spite of better prices, there will be a large falling off in returns from this usual harvest. At no previous time has the Easter season been so poorly reflected in florists' displays.

At the monthly meeting of the above society, held in the city hall, Lake Forest, Ill., April 4, there was a beautiful display of spring flowers staged by some of the members, the most noteworthy being a magnificent group of calceolarias shown by T. W. Head for which he was awarded a cultural certificate. An address by Robert Weeks, distributed by the National Association of Gardeners, was read by the secretary and was greatly appreciated by the members present. A communication from the Societe Nationale de France, asking for contributions, was read and the society voted to send a donation out of its funds to aid the horticulturists in that country who have suffered damage as a result of the war. The monthly exhibits for competition were as follows: Schizanthus, by T. W. Head, 98 points; schizanthus, by J. H. Francis, 95 points; Azalea indica, by R. Chalmers, 95 points; vase of Pride of Haarlem tulips, by J. Kiley, 75 points. Messrs. Neilson, Claussens and Anderson were judges for the evening.

It was arranged to hold a picnic during the summer and a committee was appointed to make necessary arrangements and to report at the May meeting. The meeting was well attended and three new members were admitted. A vase of fine Laddie carnations was exhibited by D. D. P. Roy, and received honorable mention.

The accompanying illustration was made from a photograph taken in one of the rose houses of Adam Graham & Son, the well-known growers of Cleveland, O. Philip Breitmeyer gave a report of his meeting with the officers of the American Peony Society in New York and gave a review of his visit with the growers and retailers during his extended visit east. The peony society will hold its annual meeting and exhibition here in June next. The subject of publicity, both local and national, was discussed, and plans for raising a substantial fund for the purpose were announced, and for the specific purpose a special meeting will be held soon after Easter. At this meeting, the slides used at the carnation meeting at Cleveland will be shown, and if possible, Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists will be present.

Nineteen applicants were admitted to membership in the club as a result of the recent "drive," which is still on with the purpose of bringing the membership up to 200.

Columbus, O.*EASTER PROSPECTS DISAPPOINTING.

The famine in Easter lilies is the outstanding feature of the trade. Some of the small stores are wholly minus this favorite flower. Fifty cents a bloom is the prevailing wholesale price, with the supply insufficient to meet the demand. The range of substitution is also small, as all kinds of pot plants are scarce. Hydrangeas and tulips are the most plentiful. The prospects are that Easter will see the shops cleaned up on cut flowers. Roses and carnations are the mainstay, with sweet peas coming next. The short erop of flowers

OBITUARY.

Henry D. Rohrer.

Henry D. Rohrer, of Lancaster, Pa., died April 7. About four years ago, he was stricken with apoplexy, from which he never fully recovered, but during all of that time, until the last few weeks, he was able to be about and enjoyed fair health. He was 73 years of age and had been in the florist-business for exactly half a century, this being his fiftieth year.

He was a life member of the Society of American Florists and missed very few of the annual meetings of that body. He was a charter member of the Lancaster County Florists Association and took an active part in all of its proceedings. As a florist, he stood in the front ranks of the growers and was always willing to give advice and of his knowledge to others, and there were few in the trade more looked up to or beloved.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Rohrer, two sons, who have been associated with him in the business, Harry K. and Abram K., also one daughter, Ella K., wife of Joseph K. Lehman. The business will probably be continued under the management of the two sons. The florist club attended the funeral in a body and sent a beautiful floral emblem.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Arthur McMillan.

Arthur McMillan, of the long established firm of McMillan & Sons, growers of Hudson Heights, N. J., died April 5, after a lingering illness, of intestinal troubles. He was over 50 years old. He is survived by his aged mother, his widow, three children, and a brother who was associated with him in business. The deceased was a man of fine character, devoted to his family and his business.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—Mrs. Amelia Waldvogel, wife of Henry Waldvogel, for several years florist at Columbia park, died April 7.

KIRKWOOD, Mo.—F. W. Ude, founder of the well known firm of F. W. Ude & Sons, and a well known carnation grower, died recently, age 80 years.

HANNIBAL, Mo.—W. T. League, the well-known retail florist of this city, died March 30. He was about 50 years old and was well and favorably known to the trade.

BAY CITY MICH.—The Roethke Floral Co. has discontinued its branch here, and will conduct all business in the future from its main store, 200 Michigan avenue, Saginaw.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Edmund Pehl, the Park street florist, who recently underwent an operation, is now somewhat improved in health, but his recovery is not as rapid as his many friends desire.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA

REVIEW OF THE WORK OF THE EXAMINING COMMITTEE FOR THE SEASON OF 1918

MOTHERS' DAY Sunday, May 11.

LEAD was dull the past week with few sales, five cents being quoted at New York and four and three quarters cent at St. Louis.

GLASS produced by machines is cheaper than that made by hand and the greenhouse sizes are said to be of equally good quality.

SOME retailers say the high prices of flowers have driven many of their customers to the candy and fruit stores for gifts within their means.

VICTOR MURDOCK, a member of the federal trade commission, has told the house interstate commerce commission that he fears the five big packers have acquired so much power that even the United States government will not be strong enough to combat it.

Ward's California Business.

As forecast in our issue of April 12, page 600, a receiver has been appointed for the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Calif., G. Vanden Abele.

IT is said that that as a result of window displays of florists in many cities suggesting gardening, repair work and general improvements, the demand for grass, flower and garden seeds and garden accessories has increased.

BARON KONDO, president of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Steamship Co., operating more than 100 ships on the Pacific, predicts an enormous increase in trade between the United States, Japan and the entire Orient in the near future.

CHARLES LATHROP PACK in a handsome volume of 179 pages, well illustrated, says every garden is a munition plant. The book is entitled "The War Garden Victorious" and dedicated to the war gardeners of the United States and allied countries.

SECRETARY LANE believes that hundreds of thousands of soldiers will avail themselves of the opportunity to secure a farm, with equipment and house, in exchange for their labor in helping the government develop arid, swamp and cut-over land.

Society of American Florists.

PRES. AMMANN LAUDS NEW YORK OFFICE.

As president of the society, I take this opportunity to call the attention of all members, to the well equipped and efficiently managed office of the society, at 1170 Broadway, New York.

It was my privilege recently, to spend a few days with the secretary, John Young, and it gave me an inside view of the great amount of work that is really being done in that office. Several stenographers are kept busy, in addition to the genial and energetic J. H. Pepper, whose time is entirely devoted to publicity and journal work. And, by the way, I do not know how Secretary Young could ever get along without this experienced veteran of the type, in publishing that journal. Mr. Young, of course, is a very busy man, and yet he always finds time and takes pleasure in entertaining visitors, so if ever in New York, do not hesitate to make this office your headquarters. It is your office, and the officers are your servants, and I can assure you that you will not be there very long, until you fully appreciate that fact.

Every part of both the society work and the publicity work is always open for your inspection. The officers court your closest scrutiny of the work done here and always appreciate any suggestions you may have to offer. I feel quite certain, that if every member of our society could visit the New York office just once, they would go away satisfied that the S. A. F. is doing great things for the benefit of floriculture on a large scale and many boosters would be added to the publicity fund and membership campaign.

Remember: Just criticism is helpful. Information is always cheerfully given, suggestions gladly received, and fullest co-operation from all members is necessary for the best success for the society's future.

The one important question, of course, is, does the advancement of the society, and the progress in general, justify the expense, which of necessity must be large to successfully carry on the work. As one, who is now in close touch with the work, I emphatically say, Yes—it does pay and pays well.

J. F. AMMANN, Pres.

Business Retarders.

A recent survey by 4,400 industrial establishments, comprising the membership of the National Association of Manufacturers, shows that business activity is approximately 25 to 50 per cent below normal. By "normal", we believe that pre-war conditions are meant, as in some lines, war business was abnormal.

In the general order of importance the following factors are stated to be the chief obstacles now prevailing to prevent general business activity:

- (1) Delay in signing the treaty of peace.
(2) General high cost of labor and materials.
(3) Sudden cessation of war buying operations by the United States and foreign governments.
(4) Hand-to-mouth buying by jobbers, retailers and consumers awaiting expected price reductions.
(5) Continued government control, management and operation of railroads, etc.
(6) Sudden imposition of heavy war revenue tax burdens on industry.
(7) Labor unrest, agitation and industrial strife.
(8) High prices of wheat due to government guarantee.
(9) Unemployment and poor distribution of labor forces released from military or naval service.
(10) Delay in settlement by federal government of claims for payment under informal war contracts.
(11) Partial shutting off of important European markets due to import trade embargoes by Great Britain, France and Italy.

With reference to item nine it would seem important that florists, seedsmen and nurserymen, hereafter, so far as possible, interest and employ returned soldiers in their business. In this there are reasons other than patriotic sentiment, which should also have weight. A recent investigator, who seems to have gone thoroughly into the matter, has made a report that in some respects is astonishing. Of the 17,500,000 immigrant workers in various lines of industry in this country, it is stated that 5,000,000 are ready to return to Europe and about 5,000,000 more will be prepared to go when additional transportation is available. During the war these people could not get away, if they had desired, nor export their savings, and as war-time wages were higher, it is estimated that they have hoarded $1,500,000,000, all of which will be lost to this country.

In the Greenhouses.

Said the orchid to the lily:
'I'm a vamp, you know, my dear;
I've lured my victims to their death,
In jungles dank and drear.'

But scoffed the dainty lily:
'Enough! Vamps are of yesteryear;
My infiquities are modern,
For I am a profligate!'

LIBERAL SUPPLY WITH FAIR MOVEMENT.

Trade continues to be very fair, considering the large amount of stock arriving in this market. There is a great oversupply of roses of superior quality. Only the finest stock is bringing good prices. The street peddlers are offering roses that are of the very best grade and these, too, in great quantities. American Beauty and Russell continue to hold their own, but there are no set figures on any other varieties. Cecile Brunner are of the best grade now and are becoming very numerous. Sweet peas are not coming in so plentifully as in former weeks and prices are steady. Carnations are in oversupply with but little demand. Freesias are still to be had, but the quality is poor, and they drag on the market. Daffodils are very popular and are excellent sellers. Tulips are in large supply, but do not move very rapidly. Prices are low for this item. Hyacinths are fast disappearing from the market. Anemones and ranunculus are meeting with much favor and sell readily. Violets still continue to come into the market in large quantities. The shipping demand, while not so strong as heretofore, takes a great deal of this stock. They are of the finest possible quality and the Giant seems to be the most popular variety at present. Gardenias are still in short supply, and so are orchids. There does not seem to be any immediate relief in sight for either of these flowers for some time. As yet there have been no Easter lilies put on the market and there is no line to be had as to what prices will be. Most of the large growers, however, promise an adequate supply for the Easter trade. In pot plants, there is a fine supply of azaleas and rhododendrons to be had. Baby rambles are coming in slowly, but there will be a heavy supply next week.

Bougainvilleas are also shown largely this season. Cyclamens are not in oversupply. There is a large quantity of snapdragons and other decorative stock. Boston ferns will probably be somewhat limited this Easter.

NOTES.

A ceremony of more than usual interest to the trade took place last week when P. Vincent Matraia slipped quietly away to Santa Cruz, where he was united in marriage to Miss Vivian Hayes of St. Louis. The bride is an unusually attractive young lady who during her sojourn here has made a host of friends by her vivacity and charm of manner. Mr. Matraia is one of the best known florists in the west and has very few equals as an artist. He is president and manager of the Art Floral Co., which is one of the most progressive firms in this city.

Some very fine outdoor grown lilacs are being handled by Pelicano Rossi & Co. They are in great demand and are quickly disposed of on arrival. Following their usual custom at Easter this firm has been obliged to rent large temporary quarters for the handling of the immense stock of plants which their trade requires. Mr. Pelicano says the prospects of an Easter business appear particularly bright as is indicated by the large number of advance orders.

A visit to the plant growing establishment of Eric James at Elmhurst showed this model range at its best advantage. House after house of Easter plants greeted the eye and all of them were in perfect condition and ready for market. This place has long been noted for its rambler roses and the stock that will be shipped from here this season will equal anything ever grown here. Practically everything was sold at the time of our visit.

John Carbone, the orchid grower of Berkeley, reports having a difficult time these days meeting the heavy demand for orchids. Gaskelliana is about the only variety in flower with him. He has many hundreds of hybrids which he expects will flower during the coming year for the first time.

Shellgrain & Ritter are contemplating many improvements in their new store. The walls are to be covered with high plate glass mirrors which will add greatly to the attractiveness. Trade remains very good with them and all hands are busily engaged preparing for the Easter rush.

Manager J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., says that the early bookings for Easter trade are much in excess of last year. Mr. Axell says the total sales this year so far greatly exceed those of 1918 at the same period.

Recardie Lee Murray, on Geary street, is making a large pre-Easter display of flowering plants which attract much attention. She is well satisfied with the Easter prospect, and expects to have a banner Easter trade.

Domoto Bros. report trade steady at their shipping depot on Bush street.

NOTES.

At the last meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists, a feature was an address by H. G. Walker, his subject being "Cooperation in the Florist Business." It was followed by an interesting discussion.

Carl Kunzman, son of Edward Kunzman, the dahlia specialist, who has been suffering with blood poisoning, is recovering.

The Kunzman Floral Co. has built a new store and office at its establishment, 3712 High street.

It is reported that Anders Rasmussen will build two large houses in the near future.

MARKET SUFFERS HEAVY OVERSUPPLY.

The warm weather has brought stock in by the wagon load and prices have consequently dropped in proportion. Roses came in so fast that the wholesalers had hardly enough water jars to accommodate them. Hadleys, which the week before brought $35 per 100, were sacrificed at one-fifth that price. The best carnations could be had at $2 per hundred. Sweet peas, daffodils, tulips, pansies and violets went to the street men at little or nothing. Violets are still to be had in quantities. Their condition varies for one day they will come in heated and of no value, while perhaps the next day they will be in fine shape and bring good prices. All of the florists anticipate a big Easter business. There will be a scarcity of pot plants, as was the case last year. Prices all along the line will be high.

FLORIST CLUB'S BANQUET.

The inaugural banquet of the florists' club, held at the New Cochrane hotel, April 9, was the most successful social event in the annals of the organization. The attendance was large, the menu could not be surpassed, and the entertainment features were exceptionally enjoyable.

The banquet was unique in a number of ways. The committee on arrangements, agreed that this should be a speechless dinner and that President Blackistone should confine his inaugural address to 50 words. He did this admirably, stepping over the bounds only when he presented to the retiring secretary, Clarence L. Linz, a cut glass water set of exquisite pattern. The happy recipient broke all of the records by replying in something less than 25 words, all the English then at his command. A bouquet of 50 Mock roses for Mrs. Linz set off the beauty of the water pitcher.

The banquet hall was attractively decorated by George C. Dalglish, Arthur Shaffer and Fred Meyer, of the George C. Shafer store, and Herbert M. Sauber and Mr. Prokas, of the Z. D. Blackistone establishment. Fred H. Kramer introduced the entertainers. "Jimmie" Young, formerly a member of the chorus in "Atta Boy," sang, while Mrs. Young played the piano; Mrs. Clara Naecker, who always sings for the florists, created quite a sensation when she selected William Marche to whom to sing love songs; Herbert M. Sauber gave a vaudeville stunt, and Charles A. Stevens and Milton J. Filius, of the Kallipolis Grotto degree team, dressed as farmers, presented an original skit. They were assisted in songs by Mrs. Naecker. Dancing until the small hours of the morning followed.

Before the florists and their ladies left the banquet table a resolution was adopted under which the flowers used in the decorations were to be sent to the local hospitals. This was supplemented by a further resolution offered by Fred H. Kramer that the growers furnish 1,000 fresh cut roses the following morning to be sent to the soldiers at Walter Reed hospital.

The incoming officers are: Z. D. Blackistone, president; George E. Anderson, vice-president; William F. Gude, treasurer; and E. P. Rodman, secretary. Each of the ladies was presented with a Victory corsage, an old fashioned bouquet of white and lavender sweet peas, with a red rose in the center, the whole tied with American flag ribbon.

NOTES.

Clifford Wilson is back at the Washington Floral Company's store having been released from the army. He spent several months in a French hospital as a result of having been blown out of a wagon by the explosion of a German shell, but is now all right again.

George C. Shaffer, has his hands full now that he is a member of the grand jury, chairman of the entertainment committee of the florists' club, with another big meeting in prospect for next month, and facing the Easter rush.

BUSINESS SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

Business has shown considerable improvement during the week and every one is looking forward to a record-breaking Easter trade. Cut flowers are more plentiful and the plant trade is far ahead of last season. Sweet peas are good and move easily at $2 per 100. Carnations still hold at $6, with jonquils at the same figure. Good roses range from 10 to 16 cents.

NOTES.

The growers supplying this market have excellent stocks, included in which are pink, blue and white hydrangeas, acacias, heather, pot roses, Easter lilies, lilac, azaleas, genistas, palms and ferns. Fine arbutus is also being received from New Hampshire.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report a brisk Easter trade and from the way orders are coming in it promises to be the best sales period in this firm's history.

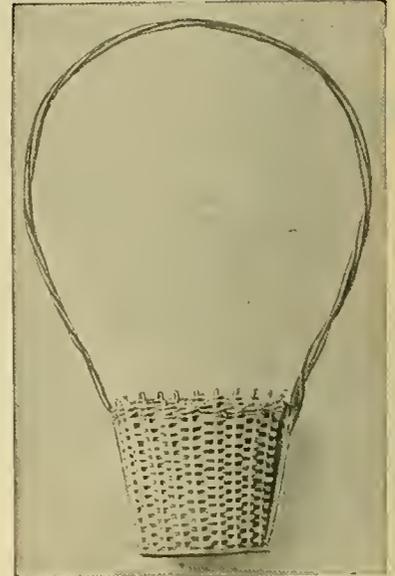

Thomas Galvin's two stores have been unusually busy with funeral work in addition to the pre-Easter rush.

EASTER SALES WILL BE GOOD.

The Palm Sunday trade was excellent and all indications point to fine Easter business, with prices higher than ever before, especially for lilies which will be unusually scarce. Carnations will retail at $2 and $3 per dozen, with roses bringing $4, $5 and $6. Mignonette, myosotis, snapdragons, calendulas, etc., are plentiful and sell well. Violets show the effects of the warm weather and are poorer than they have been for some time. Sweet peas are excellent and are much called for. In the plant line, there are azaleas, cinerarias, genistas, hydrangeas, pot tulips and hyacinths.

NOTES.

At the monthly meeting of the florists' club, April 11, Harry Bates resigned the presidency made necessary by his removal from the city and George T. Boucher was elected to fill the vacancy. George Keller of Brighton was elected vice-president. Harry A. Barnard, representing the Royal Nurseries, London, Eng., was the guest of honor and gave an interesting talk on trade conditions in the nursery business in that country. Plans were made for a big meeting to be held in May.

SUPPLY CLEANS UP DAILY.

The call for flowers during the week preceding Easter was active, with funeral orders leading, social affairs running a close second. Advance orders for the holiday were very numerous, and counter trade and the sale of both plants and cut blooms for the hospitals cleaned up the supply each day. The colder weather of the week just past, has helped to retard the development of the Easter plants to a certain extent, although many bulbous plants have been forced on the market by the recent warm temperature. Many Easter lily plants have been offered, because the growers have been unable to hold them over until Easter week. Roses have been more plentiful, and prices good. Russell and Hoosier Beauty are bringing higher prices than other varieties.

NOTES.

Several houses of fine antirrhinums will be just right for Easter at the Flick Floral Co.'s greenhouses. This firm has several thousand Easter lily blooms, baby ramblers, hydrangeas, spiraeas, and fine bulbous plants.

The Lanternier Co. will have a large supply of Easter lilies for the holiday. Their hydrangeas and baby ramblers are in fine condition. Specimen Darwin tulips were noted here, which were 30 inches in height.

Miss Clara B. Flick, of the Patten Flower Shop, Toledo, O., called on the florists here on her way home from Los Angeles, Calif., where she spent the winter.

H. K.

EASTER SUPPLY WILL BE LIMITED.

Florists are busy preparing for what is expected to be the biggest Easter in many years. From the retailers' standpoint, it is going to be difficult to supply the demand with the limited quantity of flowers at hand, but great efforts are being made to secure everything available both natural and artificial. Baskets, which threatened to become scarce, are in good supply but some of them are very expensive. There is a goodly number of first class lilies among the local growers and these are generally being bought up at prices somewhat higher than usual. Other offerings include cyclamens, cinerarias, primulas, genistas and hydrangeas, the last named in limited supply but the quality of the highest.

NOTES.

To stimulate Easter flower and plant sales the local flower stores were well represented in an excellent feature page which appeared in the Standard, April 12. Among those who used space were: Hall & Robinson, Miss Cairns, Campbells', The Dominion Floral Co., Montreal Floral Exchange, S. J. Denton, McKenna, Ltd., John Eddy & Sons, Mrs. F. Hill and the Canadian Floral Co.

At the monthly exhibition of the gardeners' and florists' club, A. C. Wilshire showed some strawberries grown in pots that were much admired. W. J. Smith had a collection of daffodils of the newer varieties and R. W. Whitney displayed various plants in bloom, including Geum Mrs. Bradshaw, all of which received favorable comment.

EASTER DEMAND IS VERY HEAVY.

The Easter demand is very heavy, and from present indications, stock in all lines will clean up completely before the rush is over. Cut lilies are selling fast at prices ranging from 25 cents to 35 cents per flower, and the dealers are confident that there will be none left to speak of, if any, on Easter morning. Pot lilies are in strong demand at 35 cents to 50 cents per flower, and there is no reason why they should not all be disposed of at those figures, considering the unusually short supply in this vicinity, and notwithstanding the fact that several of the leading retail florists have signified their intention of not handling any at what they call high prices. Others are buying all they can get at 50 cents per flower, and are advertising that they will have a good supply, which is having a tendency to induce those who had practically made up their minds not to handle them, to lay in a supply as a matter of accommodation to their customers who insist on having them, no matter what they cost. Roses are having a brisk call at the advertised quotations and it looks as if they will even go higher, although the heaviest demand is for short and medium stemmed stock. Carnations are moving nicely, but there is a great shortage of colored stock in this line. Sweet peas will hold their own at high prices, owing to the unfavorable weather early this week. Callas are moving at good figures, but the supply is limited. Violets are in short supply and should clean up quickly. Snapdragons are quite a factor in the market, and the same holds true for stocks. Mignonette is seen at a few of the houses in good-sized quantities, and some particularly fine lupines are included in the list of offerings. Orchids do not appear to be any too plentiful, and the same holds true for gardenias, Daisies, freesia, forget-me-nots, pansies, lily-of-the-valley, calendulas, sweet alyssum, tulips, jonquils, narcissi, wall-flowers and other miscellaneous seasonable stock is having a good call, and all that is necessary to make this one of the best Easters ever is favorable weather for the local retail florists. Several out-of-town wholesalers were here this week buying stock, which is a good barometer for this market, and means that the outside is depending to a large extent on this market for what they need. Everyone is enthusiastic over the outlook for Easter, and big preparations have been made by all to handle the rush.

April 16—The unfavorable weather that has prevailed here the past few days has caused a great shortage in stock of all kinds and there probably never was such a bare market three days before Easter as exists today. Only the most favorable weather will relieve the situation for the local buyers.

SPHAGNUM MOSS.

City buyers of sphagnum moss in so-called "standard bales" are asking for measurements. They say the old "regular bale" was 48 inches long, 14 inches deep and 16 inches wide and weighed, solidly packed with dry moss, about 30 pounds. For the last year or two, some dealers have put on the local market a "short" standard bale only 42 or 44 inches long and frequently weighing only 20 pounds. Buyers are beginning to think there should be a legal or real standard bale, specifying both measurement and weight.

NOTES.

Zech & Mann report a brisk demand for pot lilies, which they are handling in quantity this season, notwithstanding the great shortage in this vicinity. Mrs. Allie Zech, who is recovering from an operation at the Chicago Union hospital, is getting along very nicely and expects to be able to leave for home in the near future.

There is a bill in the legislature, introduced by Senator Dunlap, providing for the creation of a state police force. There seems to be no reasonable opposition, but on the other hand there are dozens of convincing reasons why the bill should be passed.

Nic. Dahm, Jr., son of the well-known grower of Morton Grove, who has been with the colors for some time, was mustered out at Camp Grant, Rockford, last week. Peter Dahm is still with the American troops abroad.

Jack Byers, Leo Koropp, Luke Schrer, Robert Brenton and several of the other young men in the trade who were in the thick of the fighting on the west front, are on their way home. There will be one grand celebration when the boys get back here, and after they recover from their welcome home party, they will all find their positions open for them. Sigmund Misciewicz, son of the well-known Milwaukee avenue florist, was one of the young men in the trade who gave up his life for the worthy cause, and will be greatly missed when the returning heroes arrive. Joe Einweck is with the American troops in Siberia, and his many friends are anxiously awaiting his safe return home.

A. Lange is the leading optimist hereabouts. With a considerable term of his present lease unexpired and rates away up, he has rented a new location in the Willoughby building, the double store, 77-79 E. Madison street, second door from Michigan avenue, nearly 6,000 square feet of floor space, or about double his present capacity and will move early in June. The additional space is rendered necessary by his rapidly increasing business. Mr. Lange attributes his success largely to his own special line of home made advertising, but all who know him feel his thorough knowledge of detail and constant industry have been important factors in building up the large trade he now enjoys.

Ronsley, 17 East Jackson boulevard, says that Saturday, April 12, was one of the best transient days he ever experienced. He had a special sale on jonquills and is confident that the retail florists can move the surplus just as well as the department stores by giving bargains the same as they did during the period of plenty.

E. C. Pruner, Fred Longren, Robert Newcomb and Allan Humason, well-known knights of the grip, expect to leave shortly after Easter in quest of new orders for their respective houses. C. O. Wilcox, representing Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky., who is visiting his family here, will also start out after Easter.

W. M. Schlueter has severed his connection with the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. He was secretary of the firm and made many friends among greenhouse-men through his connection with the construction department. Mr. Schlueter has made no definite plans for the future, but is considering several propositions.

Peter Miller, of the George Wienhoeber force, who was captain of the Armour square basket-ball team, which won the South Park championship, is the proud possessor of a gold medal, as are all the other members of the speedy aggregation.

It looks as if the young ladies in the trade are all going to join the Florists' Club. There are still a large number of application blanks available, so if there are any more that want to join the happy throng, they are welcome to do so.

The membership of the Florists' Club is increasing rapidly. Those who are not already on the list, should become members without delay. Any one of the wholesale houses will be glad to furnish application blanks.

W. W. Randall and Frank McCabe, of the A. L. Randall Co., report that in almost all cases the out-of-town florists they have called on are more than pleased with business, which is unusually good.

Peter Reinberg had such a heavy call for stock on their shipping orders this week that extra trips to the greenhouses were necessary to secure enough to fill them.

Perey Jones, Inc., is experiencing a brisk demand for Easter stock both in cut flowers and supplies, which is keeping the force more than busy filling orders.

M. C. Wright, with Lord & Burnham, is at the West Suburban hospital in Oak Park, where he is recovering from an attack of appendicitis.

F. A. Zenke, of the Excell Laboratories, is calling on the trade in the east, where he is meeting with wonderful success.

Victor Bergman is back on the job at O. J. Friedman's, after being on the sick list. Mrs. Bergman is still seriously ill.

George Propp, of the George Perdikas store force, is on the job again after being on the sick list for a couple of weeks.

H. O. S. Nichols, of the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., was on the sick list for a few days this week.

Miss L. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, is president of the Galewood Woman's Civic League.

Guy French is helping out in the supply department of the A. L. Randall Co. during the spring rush.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received its first shipment of lilac of the season from Villa Ridge this week.

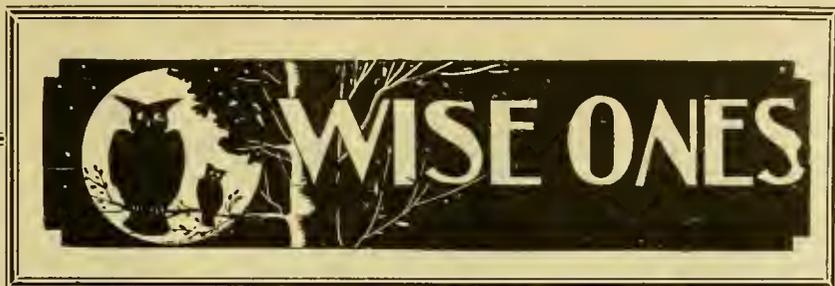

Paul Klingsporn is minus a car which was reported stolen in one of the daily papers this week.

August Poehlmann was re-elected president of the village board at Morton Grove, April 15.

Mrs. D. D. P. Roy, who has been on the sick list, is able to be about again.

Vaughan's Easter "Pointers for Planters" will be issued next week.

Heaton Nichols is assisting at H. C. Rowe's during the Easter rush.

CUT FLOWERS
 FOR EASTER
 AND EVERY OTHER DAY

Remember when ordering that our line is so complete that it includes every item offered in the Great Chicago Market.

It is said that the Chicago Liberty Loan Committee figures that the quota for the florists and allied trades should be $250,000. This, in view of the large amount of money raised by the trade in the Fourth Liberty Loan, might look significant, but over confidence will seriously reflect on the outcome of the loan. Everyone realizes that the florists are busy this week but after Easter they should all rally to the support of L. R. Bohannon, 75 East Monroe street, chairman of this committee, and put the florists and allied trades over the top. Headquarters for our captain, A. R. Merrick, is to be at the A. L. Randall Company, 180 North Wabash avenue, who will be there starting next Monday, April 21, and will have charge of the distribution of all supplies for salesmen. W. H. Dolan, chairman of Division 19, is confident that the trade will live up to its reputation and make good in this as they did in all other drives.

Vaughan's Seed Store employes held a Victory ball April 12 at Eckhart hall, Chicago avenue and Noble street, in honor of the returned soldiers and sailors who joined the forces from the store. There was a good attendance and the event was greatly enjoyed by everyone. The returned men include Ensign Carl Cropp, Sergeant Goldenstein, H. Leneau, W. H. Huffman, Earl Beutlich, Chas. Pike, Otis L. Bullock, Arthur Buehlmann, Wm. Rugulski, and F. Edstrom.

Wietor Bros. are enjoying a brisk Easter trade with a heavy call for stock in all lines. N. J. Wietor had the carnation market sized up correctly several weeks ago when he predicted a shortage in this line, especially in regard to the colored varieties.

Sergeant Major Corbrery, son of T. J. Corbrery, Long Beach, Calif., recently discharged from the ordnance department at Cleveland, O., is stopping with friends in the city, and says his father and mother are coming east soon.

Bassett & Washburn report a strong demand for stock for Easter, which is not as plentiful as some thought it would be owing to the very unfavorable weather the early part of this week.

H. Tobler, head gardener at the State Hospital, Traverse City, Mich., visited old friends here this week. He was in the employ of Peter Reinberg many years ago.

Chas. Ernc, of Ernc & Co., ordered a little sunshine, April 16, so the writer dropped in to see the weather man, who promised to give it to him.

Philip J. Schupp says that J. A. Budlong is having a heavy out-of-town call for all kinds of Easter cut flowers.

E. C. Amling and family have returned from a pleasant visit at Orange, Calif.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are pushing the Victory Loan.

Visitors: Philip Broitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; Miss Kate Harris, Memphis, Tenn.; W. H. Englehardt, Memphis, Tenn.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, April 10, President Zech in the chair. There was a good attendance and a large number of new members were elected, including several ladies, as follows: Miss Florence Keenan, 1306 East 63rd street; Miss Edna Frauenfelder, 3343 West Madison street; Miss L. A. Tonner, 30 East Randolph street; Miss Nettie L. Parker, 164 North Wabash avenue; Roy White, 2544 North Clark street; Michael Redden, 820 West 55th street; B. E. Gould, and Richard J. Gould, Glenview; Peter Hoefelder, 172 North Wabash avenue; D. F. Simonds, 1917 West Harrison street; John Cures, 1457 Thome avenue; Arthur G. Eichel, 4226 North Crawford avenue; Chas. Grabig, 1843 Irving Park boulevard; T. W. Elverson, New Brighton, Pa.; Andrew Chronis, Adams street and Wabash avenue; Joseph Wolf, 2065 Milwaukee avenue; M. Schwizer, Des Plaines; Roy S. Kroeschell, 452 West Erie street, and O. Johnson, Batavia.

Prof. H. B. Dörner, of the University of Illinois, was on hand with a number of his students in floriculture. The professor told of the work in progress under his supervision at the university, adding that the experimental investigations had been greatly delayed by the war. The students accompanying the professor included M. Taylor, Michigan City, Ind.; R. H. Roland, Nahant, Mass.; Tomi Inoye, Chiba, Japan; J. C. Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind.; Walter Peehlmann, Morton Grove; W. K. Turner, Urbana; L. Glaser, G. N. Morgan, W. J. Werstler and R. Mueller, Chicago.

A representative of the local war bond organization spoke for the Fifth Liberty Loan. L. R. Bohannon, 75 East Monroe street (Telephone Randolph 1799) was elected chairman of Division 19, with headquarters at A. L. Randall's. Fred Lautenschlager, chairman in the last campaign, T. E. Waters and others assured Mr. Bohannon of their heartiest support in this work.

Hodgson Jolly, expert accountant, read a suggestive and highly instructive paper on "Sales and Profits," which will be found elsewhere in this issue. During the reading of the paper, Mr. Jolly explained many of the important features in detail. An interesting discussion followed, T. E. Waters, James G. Hancock, P. J. Foley, Otto H. Amling and Prof. Dörner participating.

Joseph Kohout, president of the new organization, the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, spoke for that body, requesting the support of all branches of the trade.

There will be a ladies' night in June, details to be announced later.

Chas. Fruch, Saginaw, Mich., was an interested visitor.

CURO, TEX.—E. L. Shestang will open a flower shop here in the near future.

EASTER TRADE OUTLOOK ENCOURAGING.

April 12-13 go on record as the warmest days thus far this season, the thermometer reaching 70 in the shade. This caused much speculation as a prolonged warm spell was anticipated, but just the opposite came true, for during the whole week it was cool, with a little rain about once every 24 hours. While these conditions were ideal for holding back some of the more advanced stock, it cost much worry and fuel in trying to hustle the more backward ones. The supply of roses was about equal to the demand, while carnations shortened up to such an extent that higher prices were readily obtained. While the cut of sweet peas, callas and snapdragons was large, the vacancy caused by the absence of Easter lilies, violets and bulbous stock had to be filled with the former, creating a fine tone in market conditions all week. The outlook for Easter is good. Advance orders for cut flowers are very numerous, while the plant growers are more than sold out at this time, April 14.

NOTES.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. has a nice lot of cold storage lilies in fine shape, but labeled "sold." The same sign appeared on their large stock of hydrangeas, roses genistas, spiraeas and other flowering plants. Their cut of roses is good, while carnations will be short.

The Holton & Hunkel Co., who had a very large stock of assorted flowering plants, ceased to take orders last week. They promise a good supply in all lines of cut flowers for Easter, with the exception of carnations.

Gust Rusch & Co. say that it will mean a lot of hustling to fill all the orders with a lot more coming in daily for the Easter rush. Gust was in Chicago April 14.

WE believe in the spirit and practical application of co-operation between the grower, wholesaler and retailer, with an adjustment of profit for all three.

The grower is the source of supply.

The commission wholesaler is the best and most economical means of distribution.

The retailer is the most direct means of reaching the consumer.

A service between these three factors, that is most profitable to all these interests, requires a spirit of efficiency, loyalty and co-operation.

Whether a grower or retailer, when you ship or buy, Kennicott Bros. Co. offers you all the advantages.

We do as we say.

Our policy is based on the principles of the "Golden Rule."

FAIRLY GOOD EASTER SUPPLY AVAILABLE.

During the past two weeks, trade has been about normal, with the daily supply about equal to requirements. Bulbous stock is now abundant and many handsome plants are seen in the florists' windows, but they are rapidly passing and will hardly hold in good shape for Easter. There will be plenty of cinerarias, and hydrangeas will be among the prize offerings. Lilies will be better than was at first expected and baby ramblers will be abundant and of good quality. Some callas are seen on the market. There will be a fair but by no means an abundant supply of roses of all kinds, which are now coming in better. Many pansies arranged in attractive baskets and boxes, being quite inexpensive, will hold down considerable trade. A few of the growers have pot marguerites, and nearly all are supplied with primulas and geraniums, which please a lot of the smaller purchasers. Prices will be somewhat advanced over former years. Combinations in pans, birch bark boxes and baskets will help out materially in the Easter offerings.

NOTES.

A feature of a recent banquet given by Rear Admiral Gleaner, a native of this city, was a floral battle ship correct in every detail. It was five feet long and was made of yellow jonquils, with the portholes worked in violets and the deck filled with other fine blooms. It was quite artistic and was made by the Joy Floral Co.

The state horticulturists have secured the passage of their bill in the state legislature and been given an appropriation of $5,000, which will advance the interests of the industry wonderfully.

BUSINESS QUIET WITH CROWDED MARKET.

The market during the past week has been more than plentifully supplied with stock of all kinds forced in by excessively warm weather. The quality is good, but with a continuance of the high temperature carnations will suffer. Jonquils are still arriving in limited numbers. Roses are excellent and in good supply. Callas are plentiful but enjoy a good call. Advance Easter orders are coming in freely, but the shortage of Easter lily plants will be keenly felt. Callas do not find much favor as a substitute. The supply of greens is ample but prices are rather high.

NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the florists' club was held April 10 at the store of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., but with the near approach of Easter the attendance was not large. After routine business had been disposed of President Ammann of the Society of American Florists made an interesting talk on publicity and the work being done by the national organization.

The plant growers report they are entirely sold out of Easter stock in flowering varieties. With the lily shortage, the retailer believes anything in the plant line will move well at a good profit.

He has a fern that he originated which he has named "Schubertii." Another of his new ferns, unnamed, is somewhat of the habit of Whitmanii. He also grows a considerable stock of other table ferns, and I. giganteums.

STREET MEN HAVE HARVEST WITH ROSES.

Not much doing, appears to be the unanimous verdict as to the week's business. There was no oversupply of flowers, yet they accumulate, roses particularly, and the street men enjoyed a harvest, having a fine day on Saturday with quantities of flowers to handle at their own prices. None of the wholesalers appear to be able to predict next week's market. Carnations, it is said, will go to $10 and $12; first grades last Saturday, brought $8 per hundred, with none left over. The weather has been favorable for holding flowers on the plants or in storage, and there may be more than expected for the Easter delivery. Roses are more promising, although some growers claim to be offcrop. Special American Beauties brought 60 cents through the week, and will certainly go to 75 cents, if not higher, for the holiday. Some very choice stock in the teas is seen, and a fine lot of specials is looked for. Maryland is now at its best, very good stock being offered the past week. Forced lilac is very fine—it could not come better out of doors. Snapdragons, straight, closely flowered spikes, is in demand even in this slow market. Much of the supply, is however, very poor, crooked stemmed sparsely flowered spikes that stand on shelves in the ice boxes and eventually goes for little or nothing. Why growers will take up their good greenhouse room and handle stock in this way, is past understanding. One-third the quantity, properly grown and cared for, would produce fine flowers, every spike saleable at top market price. Callas are in good supply, and there will be more offered for Easter than ever before. Azore and Bermuda lilies will all be in, and while the supply is limited and mostly grown for sale in pots, there will be quite a few in all the stores. Thirty-five cents per flower and bud, appears to be the price. This city has always drawn on the outside for additional supplies of cut giganteums, but this year will ship large quantities to other cities. Alfred M. Campbell's 100,000 bulbs have come up to his best expectations. They have been timed just right. Many large shipping orders have been received, and also a large advance sale in the local market. There seems to be no doubt now that hyacinths and other bulbous stock will hold and work in well with other Easter plants. The past two weeks of cold weather has held it wonderfully well.

April 14.—From the large shipments received this morning in nearly all lines, it would seem as if the growers were going to come very strong later in the week. Carnations and sweet peas were seen in quantity in all of the stocks and of splendid quality. Roses were not so prominent. Russell, it is said, will be in full crop for the holiday. It is hard to get advance prices, but carnations are quoted at from eight to 12 cents, sweet peas $1.50 to $4, callas 25 cents, and Easter Lilies from 25 to 35 cents. The weather is cool, crisp and clear.

the houses was lined on both sides of its entire length of over 300 feet with orders, plants ready to be delivered the following day. These were nicely arranged in groups between the doors of the houses which were open to show the plants but barred admission to visitors. The hydrangeas were particularly fine, as were the genistas, rhododendrons, bougainvilleas, rambler and baby roses, yellow callas, and cold storage giganteum lilies in pots which had done better than expected. There were between 7,000 and 8,000 visitors, with several policemen on hand to keep the crowd moving. Nothing was sold, the exhibition being solely for the enjoyment of the visitors and as a public movement to popularize flowering plants.

The Easter plant men are completely sold out and nearly all late comers are turned away empty handed. Prices range from 35 to 100 per cent higher than a year ago. Lilies are 35 cents per bud and flower, hydrangeas 25 cents per flower, spiraeas $1 to $2 per plant, hyacinths 20 to 25 cents per single plant, genistas in 5-inch pots 75 cents and up, roses, baby ramblers 75 cents up, Tausendschon and other ramblers from $1.50 up to large specimens at from $10 to $17.50 each. Hindogiri azaleas sold from $1.50 up to $7.50. There was a big demand for all kinds of ferns and foliage stock for combination plant baskets. All the growers say they have never had such a demand for Easter plants.

There was a great demand for the cut Florida Sable palm for Palm Sunday. It sold, wholesale, at $3 per dozen leaf shoots. It takes a good while to get men to see money in some things, or teach them how to sell them, and this is one of the articles that retailers are gradually waking up to, and finding, that by displaying these cut palms decoratively, they announce the near approach of Easter, and in fact, get an early start on the business of the holiday week.

Martin Gannon, city manager for Alfred M. Campbell, says the retailer that does not wake up to the possibilities of this Easter, and is afraid, or hesitates to buy stock because it appears too high, will see a new light before the week is out for it is going to be the biggest Easter the trade has ever experienced.

One of the wholesale houses expects to handle 1,000,000 sweet peas. They say, from advance orders booked, they can sell that number if they can get them. K.

New York.

CUT FLOWER DEMAND IS SLOW.

There was no material change in the condition of the cut flower market during the past week, everything being slow, until April 12, when more activity developed with a tendency toward higher prices. Special American Beauties went up to $60 per 100, and cattleyas, which have been decreasing in supply, are now held at $1 to $1.25 per flower for the specials. Ordinary stock in cut lilies is selling at 15 cents per flower, but first class blooms, which are rare, bring 25 and 30 cents. The weather continues favorable to violets, and the best go at 75 cents per 100. While $8 per 100 is being asked for the best carnations, the bulk of the stock has been going for $5 and $6. Present conditions are now a secondary consideration to Easter prospects. It is reasonable to expect good prices for Easter stock. Except in pot roses, of which there is a liberal supply, there seems to be a shortage in plants over former years, but the territory that supplies this market is capable of developing surprises and it is unsafe to be strong on predictions. One certainty is that the supply of good pot lilies will be limited and what there are will bring high prices. As high as 60 cents bud and flower is being asked for the best stock we have noticed, but it was better worth that than much other stock is worth 30 cents. Forerunners of the Easter stock are now seen in many retail stores. There are fine specimens of the rambler roses in variety, excellent stock of the blue, white and pink hydrangeas, azaleas, rhododendrons, genistas and tulips and hyacinths in pans. For the cheaper trade, there is a good supply of primulas, heliotropes and hyacinths in small pots, and 6-inch pots of baby rambler and other roses. There will be some heather, but we believe that the supply will be limited. One Flatbush firm of growers is trying what seems to be an innovation, the forcing of peonies. They are coming out all right, but it remains to be seen how they will take with the customers of the retail stores.

April 14.—The market is active, with an upward tendency in lilies, callas, orchids, violets and smilax. American Beauty roses may reach $1 each, wholesale, before Easter. The general outlook for Easter business is good.

EASTER OBSERVANCE LOOMS LARGE.

It is not prudent to give way entirely to optimism, but considering present conditions, the florists of the whole country should have an excellent Easter business. It is safe to say that Easter always has been the most prosperous holiday for the trade. This year there are reasons that should have weight in considering Easter prospects. The burden of anxiety over the war has been lifted from the nation. Suspending for the time being, all doubts and criticisms of the proposed League of Nations, there is a prospect of continued peace. Soldiers—many of them now veterans—are returning by the thousands to their native land. That alone has thrilled the hearts of the millions that are here to greet them. For the many sick and wounded, in hospitals, there is a Christian sentiment of tenderness. What can be more appropriate in a material sense, at this time, than to lavish flowers on the sick and wounded, and what can so brighten the homes where family reunions will be held, as flowers? Relating to this city, the response to these sentiments should be particularly warm. It is the greatest entrepot for the troops; it has been for months, and is now crowded, with visitors from all parts of the country, many of them here to meet returning friends and relatives. Already many social entertainments and weddings have been announced for Easter week. It may not be amiss here to state that among the latter will be, April 22, that of Miss Margaret Carnegie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, to Ensign Roswell Miller, U. S. N. The fact that the weight of years now bears heavily on the great philanthropist and former ironmaster, adds an almost pathetic interest to this event. In the same line of thought that we observe Easter, but in a larger sense, we may consider Memorial day. Let us not forget that: "In Flanders, where the poppies grow," and in France, over 50,000 brave Americans are sleeping their last sleep. On the memorable field of Gettysburg, over 50 years ago, the immortal Lincoln said: * * * "But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here." We cannot decorate those far-away graves, but we can never forget what the men who are sleeping there did. The tributes that will be placed in our cemeteries on this Memorial day should be, not merely those of individuals, but the united tribute of the nation in memory of the loyal dead, both at home and abroad.

NOTE.

Edward C. Vick's horticultural section of the New York Sun, for April 13, had much good reading. We clip the following on the plant quarantine: "The Pasadena, Calif., Horticultural Society has adopted resolutions calling on the local representative in congress to secure a modification of Quarantine No. 37 prohibiting the importation of plants and bulbs into the United States. This is another important protest, but will, no doubt, like all the other protests, prove futile. The horticultural board has decided to prohibit the importation of plants at all hazard. It may be that the board has notions regarding the propagation of plants and bulbs in the United States that it wishes to see worked out. It may be a good thing to encourage the production in America of many plants that are now imported, but there are other ways of doing it, besides issuing a decree prohibiting absolutely the importation of any plants into the country, except a very few. We are becoming tied down with so many regulations and restrictions that unless it ceases our 'home of the free' will have less freedom than any country on earth." In addition, Minna Irving writes interestingly of plants and flowers, little known in this country, that are found in Mexico, Central America and the Philippines, and suggests that some of them might be transplanted to this country. But, of course, there is little chance for our getting them, as when Quarantine No. 37 takes effect, we will be practically a "hermit nation," relating to plants and flowers. The following is a quotation from the Irving article: "Everybody who has ever fallen under the spell of the Philippines loves the sampagita, or jasmine, the flower dedicated to St. Pagita, the patron saint of lovers. It is not at all like our own southern jasmine, but came originally from India, and it is a perpetual bloomer. It is grown from cuttings from the mature wood, or by layers, but would not live in any of our northern states, as it cannot stand frost. The balcony of a tumbled-down case wreathed with red roses and jasmine twined and intermingled in tropical luxuriance is a beautiful sight."

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the night of April 14, President Kessler in the chair. F. R. Pierson, who was one of a committee that a short time ago visited Secretary of Agriculture Houston, relating to a suspension of Plant Quarantine No. 37, was present with a copy of the secretary's unfavorable reply, quite a bulky document. He read several paragraphs, which he characterized as an implied threat that "if we were not good we would get more of it." He advocated taking the matter up with the new congress. Wilfred Rolker was of the same mind.

Charles H. Totty, of the publicity committee, spoke on publicity and created some discussion. Frank Traendly said he did not think that the wholesalers would take kindly to the "Milwaukee plan." Chas. Schenck reported for the dinner committee, a small deficit on the late dinner, but as everyone that attended had a good time, no fault was found. C. Nieman, New York, Frank Heid, Tarrytown, N. Y., A. M. Van der Schoot, New York, and Rocco Trebaldie, New York, were elected members.

Dr. C. T. Baylis was introduced and made an earnest appeal in behalf of the new Victory loan. A considerable sum was subscribed and the good work will be continued by a committee. A motion was carried to give the returning soldiers, members of the club, a suitable reception and entertainment. Robert Miller, of Salt Lake City, was introduced and spoke briefly.

A vote of thanks was tendered to G. E. M. Stumpp for decorating the tables for the annual dinner. A. M. Henshaw, recently a Lieutenant-Commander in the United States Navy, who has returned to civil life and the wholesale business, was called to the platform and made an interesting talk. He is a member of the club.

A. L. Miller, J. G. Esler and P. W. Popp were appointed a transportation committee for the Detroit convention of the S. A. F.

C. H. Totty exhibited the new pink rose, Frank W. Dunlop, which scored 90 points. The committee recommended a preliminary certificate. Joseph Raffezeder, Teaneck, N. J., exhibited a snapdragon, Ruth Brewster, which had previously received a certificate. John Weston, Valley Stream, N. Y., had a collection of orchid flowering sweet peas, highly commended.

A. F. F.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

Via trolley and autos about 40 of the craft met at the greenhouses of Chas. M. Weaver, Ronks, Pa., and made a thorough inspection of the new early and later flowering sweet peas, a house of mignonette, and the hundreds of thousands of pompon chrysanthemums in process of preparation for the fall crop. The early flowering sweet peas were from the W. Atlee Burpee Co.'s collection, the result of crosses by Geo. W. Kerr and the quality of the flowers were a revelation to all of us. In addition to this, was the pleasure of Mr. Kerr's company in going through the houses, and his pride in and love for his productions, demonstrated an old time truth: "The man who forgets self, and really loves his work, is the man who gets to the top." Mr. Weaver furnished cigars for the crowd, and the houses were fumigated en route.

At 7 p. m. an adjournment was made to the range of Elmer Weaver across the way, where sweet peas are the main crop, carnations a close second, and later on the sweet peas will be followed by a crop of tomatoes. At 7:30 a supper was provided for the party by Elmer Weaver, and served by the ladies' auxiliary; at 8:30 the president rapped for order, and announced the meeting open. After a bit of preliminary business, Geo. W. Kerr read an interesting and instructive paper on the manner in which he produced the sweet peas we had just seen, and opened the eyes of our members to the possibilities of hybridization, in a way never presented as attractively before. Visitors to the meeting were James L. Brown, of Coatsville; Wm. Swayne, Edw. Marshall, Lawrence and Howard Thompson and Frederick Carey, from Kennett Square, and Geo. W. Kerr and S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia.

The ladies' auxiliary met for a business session at the home of Mrs. Charles M. Weaver, and after serving the lunch, met in conjunction with the club. Mrs. A. M. Herr, president of the auxiliary, thanked the club for the privilege of being able to listen to such an interesting paper, and hoped that we would have many more joint meetings so that they could learn more of their husband's business, and some of the husbands are guessing yet.

A vote was taken as to the place to hold our next picnic, and by a large majority Wild Cat was chosen. This is a river resort above Marietta, and has one of the most picturesque glens found any where, and an observatory that gives one a view up and down the river for miles. It is nationally known by its being the home of the Wild Cat Club, that has membership in all parts of the United States, and at its annual meeting they nearly all attend.

After a vote of thanks being tendered the hosts, and the secretary instructed to send Mr. Kerr a vote of thanks for his paper, the meeting adjourned to meet at the home of B. F. Barr in peony time, the date left to Mr. Barr, and which will be announced later on.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

GREENVILLE, S. C.—At the annual meeting of the Mauldin Floral Co., April 3, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Allan Bowen, president; Mrs. Myrna A. Bowen, treasurer; John S. Taylor, secretary.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Alfred J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., with his golf bags, will visit California links in May.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade April 16 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds.

THE French Bulb Growers' Syndicate will make prices for the coming season, April 28. There will be no definite prices made before that date.

HOWARD M. EARL, writing from Norway last month, says all the European hotels are packed to capacity. He expects to revisit England and France before his return, and has found the trade optimistic.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Lifting of the government's restriction against the use of private cable codes by American firms, effective April 18, was announced today by the Central and South American Cable Company.

ONION SETS in the Chicago district this week are 50 cents to 75 cents for colors, according to quality; whites $1.75. The demand is slow east and west and jobbers have been making liberal shipments on consignment.

TOLEDO, O.—The clover market closed steady April 14, at $29.50, registering a drop of 50 cents during the previous seven days. April was quoted at $25.75 and October at $17.60. Timothy was steady, cash being offered at $5.10, April $5.20, May $5.17½, September $5.65 and October $5.45.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Business for 1919 is quite satisfactory as compared with the corresponding period last year, according to Northrup, King & Co., with quite an appreciable increase in garden seed sales. Shortages are developing in some items, especially clover and high grade seed grains. Spring is a trifle later than usual, and extremely heavy filling-in business is expected from now on.

Western Seedsmen's Association.

The annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association was held at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo., April 12 and was attended by representatives of practically all of the large seed houses of the middle west. Conditions affecting the seed trade were discussed and there was a strong feeling of optimism concerning future business expressed by nearly all present.

Southern Seedsmen's Association.

President Louis Reuter of the Southern Seedsmen's Association says the first annual convention of the organization will be held at Montgomery, Ala., May 19-20. Many matters of importance will come up for careful discussion and the program includes a number of interesting subjects which will be ably handled by well known authorities. As this will, from a trade standpoint, be one of the most important meetings of the year, an attendance of 100 per cent of the membership is expected, as well as a number of persons who are not affiliated with the association.

Seed Trade Conditions in Europe.

It has been recognized for years that Hamburg, Germany, was the seed marketing center of Europe. It not only handled those seeds which were produced within German borders for export to foreign countries, but gathered in the surplus production of many other European countries for export, according to the Government Seed Reporter, April 5, 1919. This was particularly true with reference to the seed surpluses of France and Russia. The larger part of the French seed which reached the United States, except vegetable seeds grown under contract, came through Hamburg or other seed marketing points of Germany. Hamburg not only served as a distribution point for European seeds, but also served as a point from which seeds produced in America and elsewhere were distributed throughout Europe. Hamburg was not so important in its relation to distribution from the United States to the United Kingdom, or vice versa, but it did handle a large portion of this trade moving in both directions.

The question today is what readjustment will be made in the trade relations between the United States and the European allied countries, and between the United States and the central powers. At present it seems that the wholesale seed concerns of London, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Belfast are bidding for continental trade, with the advantage, naturally, with London as the important seed marketing center. There seems to be no logical reason for not establishing and maintaining direct trade relations in the distribution of seeds between the United States and France. It seems to be merely a matter of the American seed concerns and the French seed concerns getting together on a business basis and establishing confidential business relations between each other. An important factor which enters into the matter is the question of variety names and grades or standards on which the French people heretofore have purchased American-grown seeds through German commercial agencies. Referring particularly to the matter of seed peas, the French appear not to be familiar with the variety names used by American seedsmen in offering their output to France. They are more familiar with the names which have been attached to American varieties and stocks by German seedsmen in their trade with France. It would be necessary, in this particular commodity, to determine the German synonyms for American-grown varieties and to indicate these so that the French dealers would recognize them under the names by which they had formerly purchased them. A special effort should be made by American seed concerns, either individually or through the national seed associations, to establish direct trade relations with French seed concerns. It would be better both for American and French concerns to deal in this way. With the establishment of an American merchant marine, there will undoubtedly be ample shipping facilities between the two countries so that charges for transportation will at last be as low as, and probably considerably lower, by direct routing than by re-routing through some other country. It is simply a matter of establishing the most economic and efficient distribution possible.

In Italy there seem to be very few, if any, American seeds that they are in need of. They seem to be well supplied at the present time with both field and vegetable seeds, and their normal production of practically all of these items probably will normally take care of their home requirements in the future. They are particularly interested in sugar-beet seed, which they are unable to obtain at the present time and which can not be furnished them by the United States, but they hope to be able to establish areas of profitable sugar-beet seed production within their own borders.

The Seed Trade Association of the United Kingdom passed a resolution at a meeting in January agreeing not to trade with Germany for a period of five years. Though this apparently expresses the collective opinion of the association at the session where the resolution was passed, it does not seem to coincide with the majority of individual opinions expressed without bias by representatives of the concerns visited. There is a feeling among the trade that it will be necessary to establish at a very early date trade with Germany on seed supplies. They feel that even though some restrictions may be desirable, it will be necessary to supply Germany with certain seeds, and in some cases, that it will be desirable to obtain seeds from Germany. Just what form this matter will take after peace has been declared, it is impossible to say at present. There seem to be evidences that resolutions of this kind may be modified after the peace treaty is signed.

Beans Bring Peace.

"Do you like beans?" asked the meek little man.

"Sure thing—I was born on a farm in Michigan where we raise 'em. Beans make you healthy, wealthy and wise. Educate a family to live on beans and they will live in peace; feed them on steaks and they will growl.

"You speak well of the humble little vegetable. I see you are strong for the bean. It is king of vegetables and I'll eat to its health by ordering another plate."

"Beans," called out the belle of the beanery. "and say, old top, let me add this," she continued:—"They want to keep the homes together—they say too many homes are breaking up. Well, beans can make home 'Home Sweet Home' or the last resort—if you don't get enough beans that is the last resort—but bear this in mind, if the home had more bean eaters and less steak manipulators the home would be more prepared to stand reverses. It's the steak manipulator who lives on the installment plan, gets married on the installment plan, and eventually dies on the installment plan, who really breeds all the trouble in the house. They live beyond their means—hence the value of beans."

Just then the chef yelled out:—"Take 'm away."

And the belle of the beanery answered the call, tenderly picking up the dish and taking it to the meek little man, who dived into them feverishly.

"Oh, dear, I think I'll have a plate of beans myself," said she as she lost herself in the kitchen.—New York Evening Telegram.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The 1919 spring season is not up to that of last year, reports Chris. Reuter, largely due to adverse weather conditions in this section, rains from November until the middle of March, preventing the sowing of the usual acreage of beans, peas and other truck crops. Many of the gardeners believe the season is now too far advanced to plant early vegetables, and are giving more attention to corn and field crops. There is an unprecedented demand for field seeds and grasses. Mail orders are not as numerous as in 1918, but the money average is better. Local counter trade shows a decrease, due to unfavorable weather.

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

H. W. Selby, Philadelphia, Pa., President;
C. W. Waid, Grand Rapids, Mich., Vice-
President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky.,
Secretary; Eugene Davis, Grand Rapids,
Mich., Treasurer.

MATTOON, ILL.—A. D. King suffered a loss of $300 to lettuce ready for market, April 3, through too strong fumigation in combating fungus.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, April 15.—Cucumbers, dozen boxes, $3.00 to $4.00; celery, Florida, crate, $6.00 to $6.50; leaf lettuce, per box 32½ to 35 cents; radishes, per dozen bunches, 50 to 60 cents; tomatoes, 6 baskets, $4.50 to $7.00.

New York, April 14.—Celery (Florida), per case $2.50 to $6.50; cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.50 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.65 per three-pound basket; tomatoes, per pound, 15 to 35 cents; lettuce, per strap, $2.00 to $3.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $4.00.

Ammonia as Top Dressing.

Comparatively few gardeners and farmers have thoroughly learned the value of top dressing growing crops with quick-acting nitrogenous fertilizers. The reason for this is found in the fact that they do not thoroughly understand the principles involved. In a very few words, the element of nitrogen practically controls plant-growth. Nitrogen is only available to plants in a certain form produced by certain air and soil conditions induced by favorable temperature. This latter factor controls in the spring—in cool weather, this nitrification proceeds very slowly, if at all. Therefore no matter how much organic nitrogen a soil contains, it may yet offer very little to a growing plant until settled warm weather has come. Therefore it is of the utmost importance to furnish early crops with such nitrogen as is immediately available; we may call it chemical nitrogen to distinguish it from organic nitrogen. The two most common forms of chemical nitrogen are nitrate of soda and sulphate ammonia. Of these two, the nitrate soda is the better for many purposes. However, we have come to like ammonia sulphate for many reasons. Some good points for ammonia are: It is more constant or steady, that is, not so easily lost by washing out of the soil; its effect on plants is less active, that is, less stimulating and more lasting, it cakes less, and therefore is easier handled, it is generally in much better mechanical condition, admitting a more even application; there is less danger of damaging foliage.

We have always made a practice of mixing either nitrate soda or ammonia with some other elements to improve their mechanical condition. To this end we use bone meal, with phosphate or raw lime. Ammonia and wood ashes should never be mixed as the ammonia is set free by the effect of the ashes. When the foliage is dry we simply broadcast our mixture right over the growing plants and a windy day is preferable as then the material is rolled off the foliage. The time to apply is as soon as plants appear above ground or as soon as transplanted plants start to grow. Great care must be used with nitrate soda to reduce it to a fine condition—permitting nothing above ¼-inch to go into the field. For market garden use we should apply at least 200 pounds per acre, using less on poor land and more on good soil.

We have recently come across a striking example of inefficient fertilizer. Within two miles of our farm is a city garbage reduction plant producing fertilizer tankage supposed to contain four per cent nitrogen. This material is sold direct at the plant at $15.00 per ton. Local gardeners have bought large amounts, owing to the present scarcity of manure. A sample which we used under glass on cabbage plants along side of check plots with ammonia and nitrate soda at present writing shows less than no results; in other words, we believe had the plants received no tankage they would be better off while the sulphate ammonia check plots have made a strong and sturdy growth—dark green and healthy—the kind the grower likes to see. This tankage may produce results in the course of time, but it is no doubt too slow for a market gardener.

MARKETMAN.

Vegetable Markets.

Reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period of April 8-15 indicate the tone of the markets less confident with liberal shipments. On potatoes, the tone was reactionary, losing part of the recent advances. Wisconsin and Michigan shipping points after further slight advances, receded to the closing range of the previous week, $1.80-$1.90 f.o.b. sacked. No. 1 northern sacked whites weakened slightly at Chicago at $1.90 per 100 pounds. Colorado and Idaho No. 1 sacked whites were weak and inactive in producing sections closing at $1.50-$1.60 but strengthened in Texas markets to $2.40-$2.65. Northern producing sections followed a wide and somewhat weaker range of $1.25-$1.70. Maine Green Mountains were dull and weak and declined to $2.35-$2.42 sacked in New York and Boston. Cabbage markets were steady and strong. Old northern stock is scarce and ranged $10 higher at $100-$120 per ton bulk in the few markets quoted. Southern California Winningsstadts again ranged $90-$100 per ton at shipping points with demand exceeding supply. Florida stock continued to advance in producing sections reaching $6-$6.25 per barrel crate. Texas flat stock reached $90-$140 per ton in middlewestern markets. Onion prices were generally firm with a range of $3.50-$5 per 100 pounds. New Jersey and Delaware sweet potatoes were firm at $3.50-$4 per hamper and Nancy Halls at $3-$3.25. Sacked Louisiana and Mississippi stock advanced nearly $1 reaching $4.25-$4.50 at New York. Tomato values were well maintained. The best Florida stock closed at $3.50-$4.10 per 6-basket crate f.o.b. shipping points with considerable inferior and damaged stock offered. Florida celery was nearly steady in producing sections at $5.25-$6 per crate. Consuming markets advanced 25 cents, California Golden Heart was steady at Kansas City at $9-$12 per crate.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.
 J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

THE French government has accepted an offer of the state of Minnesota to supply several million young pine trees for war devastated regions of that country.

TORONTO, ONT.—The rose society has asked the park board to set aside one of the city parks in order to educate the public as to varieties to be grown in back-yard gardens.

PLANT EMBARGO.—A nurseryman well posted says that the drastic action taken by the federal horticultural board at the instance of the entomologists has been since backed up by a large number of letters written by nurserymen at the request of one firm in the nursery trade. Opponents of the bill, on the other hand, have not taken concerted action in writing the board. This has been a mistake.

Private Forestry.

The emphasis placed on private forests in recent years has tended to throw into the background the problems of private forests, according to Henry S. Graves of the forest service in a recent address before the New England Forestry Conference. "The very magnitude of the national forest enterprise has created in the minds of many people," he said, "the impression that the problem of forestry in the United States is already on the way to definite solution. In point of fact only certain initial steps have been taken; the most difficult problem, that of protection and right handling of forests privately owned, is still before us, and the importance of this is evident when one considers that 97 per cent of the timber and other wood products of the country is obtained from them, with less than two per cent of the saw mills operating on public forests.

"The experience of the war called sharp attention to the condition of our remaining timber supplies. The bulk of the material for general construction was obtained from a few large centers of original forest, often involving long rail hauls and high cost. Extreme difficulties were encountered in obtaining promptly an adequate supply of specialized products, like some of the high-grade hardwoods. If the emergency had come 15 years from now we would have had very great embarrassment in obtaining even the lumber needed for general construction, except at great sacrifice in time, cost, and crowding of the railroads. Most of the lumber would have come from the Pacific coast. We may not expect a repetition of such a grave emergency as we have just passed through, but we would be unwise indeed if we failed to recognize that the sources of timber supply upon which we have relied are being greatly depleted, with far-reaching economic and industrial consequences.

"About 30 years ago New England was not only self-supporting in her timber resources, but exported large quantities to other parts of the country and abroad. Within the last 15 years New England has become an importing region and looks more and more for timber supplies to the south, to the Lake states, and even to the Pacific coast. It is estimated that fully 30 per cent of all the lumber used in New England now comes from outside the region. This is in addition to the importations of large quantities of pulp wood. New England is one of the important centers for wood-using industries. Heretofore many of these industries have drawn upon local supplies. It is estimated that the annual growth in New England of forest materials that will be suitable for lumber or other higher uses is less than half of what is being cut. These are facts of vital interest to a region that has about $300,000,000 invested in the wood and forest industries and employs in this connection over 90,000 wage earners.

"In seeking a solution for the forestry problem on private lands, it should be recognized that its very character is such as to require public participation, assistance, and direction. There are certain things that the public should do, and in a liberal spirit, to make forestry by private timberland owners possible and effective. At the same time the public should insist by adequate legislation that the destructive processes be stopped, and that methods be adopted which will leave the forests in a productive condition. To secure these ends there is necessary a broad programme that is practicable and equitable, based on consideration of existing economic conditions. Its formation calls for the most careful constructive thought, with no point of view neglected.

Mothers' Day Preparations.

The Date This Year Is May 11.

Just Two Weeks Away.

While "Say it with Flowers" suggests the best way to express almost every emotion of the mind or heart, and suitable for all occasions from one year's end to the other, there is no one time to which it is so appropriate and fitting as Mothers' day, which the founder, Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, Pa., designated as a floral holiday, when everyone is to wear a flower in honor of the best mother in the world, their mother. This tribute to the mothers of the nation, on account of its close personal relationship to every one, through the persistent work of Miss Jarvis, who enlisted the press, all in authority in city and state, religious bodies, fraternal and other organizations, resulted in having proclamations issued for its annual observance by governors, mayors of cities, and finally by the congress of the United States. Those who were most benefited in a financial way, were the last to take it up; first half heartedly, or driven to it by the demand which was forced upon them by an insistent public. It was a golden opportunity which should have had their instant and hearty support. To the honor of the trade, there were a number of bright men, particularly in the smaller cities and towns, who encouraged the movement from the first, and who have gone on, year after year, with increasing energy, doing everything in their power both individually and by interesting others in the trade, collectively, to increase the sale of flowers in the observance of the day. In every large community where the trade have organized and financed an advertising campaign to increase the sale of plants and flowers for Mothers' day, results have been more than satisfactory. Phenomenal sales are frequently reported, with a far greater demand than could be supplied, some enthusiastic florists declaring sales to have been larger than at Easter.

If such results are possible in some communities, why not everywhere? All that is necessary is to wake the people up. The idea of Mothers' day, is as yet unknown to one-fourth the people of this country. The florists of every community should get together and finance an intelligent advertising campaign, giving facts about the movement, stating what a beautiful custom it had grown to be on Mothers' day, the second Sunday in May, to honor the best mother in the world, their mother, by presenting her a growing plant or cut flowers, or if she had passed away, to place them on her grave. Well written articles, giving a history of the movement, its gradual adoption by churches, Sunday schools, societies, cities, states and the United States, and some of the many eulogies which have been delivered in Mothers' day celebrations by distinguished men, would be gladly accepted by local papers as good news matter, and find space in their reading columns without charge. It is taking advantage of such a golden opportunity as is offered in the building up of Mothers' day into the best floral holiday of the year, that should enlist the services of every worker in the business.

Miss Jarvis' idea is that every person, man, woman or child, shall wear a flower on Mothers' day in honor of their mother. Although the day was founded over 10 years ago, not one person in 10 observes the custom of wearing a flower, to say nothing of giving or using them as a memorial. There is no more beautiful custom than is expressed in this idea of devoting one day each year, and that the Sabbath, to the adoration of mother, and no better way to celebrate it, or to show one's love and appreciation, than to take or send to her, nature's gifts in plants or cut flowers. If mother is but a cherished memory, a visit should be made to her last resting place and flowers laid upon the grave.

The possibilities of this observance, which so intimately affects everyone, which is so universal in its application, and carries a sentiment that can not fail to appeal to all old enough to understand it, is surely overlooked by most of the trade. The business possibilities here presented are wonderful. Were the custom to become universal, and nothing stands in the way but the apathy of the trade, the demand for plants and flowers would be enormous. Every home would have its floral gifts and every cemetery lot its decoration. Even the custom of wearing flowers on this day, if suddenly to become universal, would alone exhaust the supply long before the demand was satisfied.

If it were possible for a corporation to control the plant and cut flower output of the country, such an opportunity as is here presented, it would call for a propaganda and advertising campaign that each year would run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The comparatively small efforts to advertise and exploit the day, that have been made by florists collectively in a number of cities and smaller communities, and which has produced surprising results, should be encouraged and enlarged by all branches of the trade everywhere. It is no longer a question, will it pay, but how best to manage so as to get the most out of, and further increase the observance of the day. There are retailers who take the narrow view that they will not strive to build up a demand for flowers for Mothers' day, which is taken advantage of by the grower and wholesaler to so boost prices that the storekeeper has to sell almost at cost, or be accused of profiteering by his customers.

Do Not Feature White Carnations.

All danger of high prices is avoided by keeping white carnations in the background. Mothers' day is to be a day of all plants and flowers, not any one kind, but your mother's favorite flower, which opens up the entire list, for there is not a plant or blossom that is not somebody's favorite. The sweet pea, the orchid, the red, white, or pink rose, etc., are each preferred by some, who would not, of choice, take the carnation. Certain foliage and flowering plants are also preferred to others, and will make much more lasting gifts than cut flowers. So the argument of building up a trade for some one else to reap the benefit, is a fallacy.

For some reason, nearly everyone views with distrust any new idea, and profess at once to see or place obstacles in its path, by belittling its object or declaring it to be impossible. Enthusiasm is the mainspring of any movement. Miss Jarvis conceived the idea of Mothers' day, and at once became enthusiastic, working every avenue that looked likely to help. She did not have the incentive that actuates the florist. Her love for her mother that had just passed away, and her thought that all mothers should be honored, made her anxious that as many as possible should hear of Mothers' day and make the custom universal. If one woman, without any hope of reward, can meet with such success, what is to be expected if the thousands of florists all over this country, should they get together in their various communities, and push this propaganda until the beautiful custom of associating flowers with the day, becomes universal.

Mothers' Day Maxims.

The business of the day will come to the man who plans for and invites it.

Mothers' day presents a golden opportunity to every florist who believes in it, is enthusiastic, and able to impart this inspiration to his customers.

Mothers' day will be a flat failure to the retailer who makes light of it, and who sees nothing in it but a boost for the white carnation.

Mothers' day advertising will more than pay for itself in the new business created, which in turn is cumulative, gaining constantly.

Wherever there has been an unusual demand for plants and flowers on Mothers' day, it is directly traceable to community efforts of the trade in newspaper articles and advertising.

Mothers' day will not come into its own until the wearing of a flower will be the universal custom, and the grave of every mother who has passed away has its decoration.

It is a great mistake to feature white carnations—they should be kept in the background. The question is, what is or was your mother's favorite plant or flower? Not one in 10 will answer, carnations, and the way is then open to any or all of the items in stock.

In this busy world, people need at times to have their attention called to anniversaries, of which Mothers' day is one of the most important. See that your community is made wide-awake to the fact that this special day is always the second Sunday in May, which this year comes on the 11th.

What has been done in Cleveland, O., Milwaukee, Wis., Detroit, Mich., and many other cities, through the get-together spirit of the trade in publicity work for the sale of plants and flowers for Mothers' day and other occasions, which has been crowned with great success, is possible wherever florists will give it the necessary thought, effort and financial support.

Quality.

Now that the stress is over let us return to a consideration of quality. Pure quantity production is bound to be more or less wasteful, more or less unworthy of our skill and possibilities. Our industrial ideal should be quantity production governed by quality and pride in our work and in keeping with a wholesome demand.

Individually our attitude now should be not, primarily, how much can I produce or how many things can I produce? But, how well can I do the things I have undertaken to do? How much more of quality can I put into my output to-day than I did yesterday.

The man who does whatever he undertakes to do well has a higher and better reputation than the man whose chief aim is to see how much he can do in a given time without proper regard for the quality of his work or his product.—Valve World.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—The Walker Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 by John Walker, John and Owen Williams, James R. Hall and A. J. Wardle.

The love of a mother is never exhausted, it never changes, it never tires. It endures through all: in good repute, in bad repute, in the face of the world's condemnation, a mother's love still lives on.

MOTHERS' DAY ADVERTISING OF MINNEAPOLIS FLORISTS. DATE OMITTED.

Will be Observed, Sunday, May 11, This Year.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The next important event, Mothers' day, which this year follows so closely after Easter, should receive earnest attention at this time. Whether Mothers' day is to be more than just an ordinary busy day, depends almost entirely on the amount of publicity given to the event by each florist individually, or a campaign, with the entire trade of the community working together to feature the day through newspaper articles, ad columns, placards and billboards. It is so essentially a floral holiday, that it would seem as if the trade everywhere would be a unit in doing everything possible, both individually and collectively, to further the observance in every possible way, yet not one-third of the retail florists appear to take the slightest interest or show any enthusiasm whatever. Those who do believe in it, and see the business opportunity, find abundant reward and greatly increased business from all publicity efforts. Sunday, May 11, is but a few days away, and the event should be increasingly featured from now on.

It is none too early to be on the lookout for the June weddings. The details of these events are nearly always arranged for at least a month ahead. Many an order goes to the man who is wide awake enough to hunt it up. There are a number of ways of getting forehand knowledge of these events, through sextons of churches, fashionable stationers, a close scanning of society columns, etc. Many a florist has been surprised to learn that his competitor had secured such an event, when he thought all of this customer's trade belonged to himself.

An attractive window or store piece is made with a full flowered Rambler rose placed in a roomy, high handled basket, in which also is to be arranged a vase or two of snapdragons and other flowers, the water holders being hidden by the flowers and foliage. A bow of ribbon on the handle makes a showy finish.

A few ladies' summer straw hats, artistically decorated with fresh flowers and ribbons, make a window display that is sure to attract attention. The hats can be borrowed; if the milliner's card is used, so much the better.

Roses are now abundant, and a special of the most plentiful varieties will be found timely and profitable. Arrange in boxes for $2, or in vases, vase and roses to be sold together. It gives an excuse also for a post card and reminder that the store is alive and anxious for business.

The commencement season opens in May and lasts well into June. There is considerable work in connection with these events, as at many of the class day exercises of girls' seminaries or high schools, each member carries a bouquet of the flower the class adopts as its own. Being early on the ground is an advantage here, as frequently the florist may be asked for his opinion, and will certainly not advise something hard to get.

Every florist should wear a flower when on the street. It is a custom that could be made general if the whole trade would take hold and make up their minds to bring it about.

All the spare time should now be given to replenishing the stock of mag-

First in the Hearts of the Nation on

Mothers' Day Sunday, May

Next Sunday is Mothers' Day, set aside by the whole nation to honor universal Motherhood and your own Mother in particular. Governor Cox in his proclamation just issued, says, "We have reached that point in our civilization where Motherhood is enshrined in the hearts of the human race as is no other sentiment." All over the nation everyone honors Mother by sending her flowers, or a basket of her assorted favorites, or a plant that she loves. Common custom the country over has led to the adoption of the following slogan for Mothers' Day,

"A Colored Flower For Mothers Living, A White Flower For Mothers Dead"

The leading florists here represented have made special preparations to deliver flower and plant orders promptly in any quantity to all parts of the city and to supply the public with fresh, choice flowers, or baskets daintly made up, or any seasonable plants.

nelia wreaths and other designs that will soon be in demand for Memorial day, the celebration of which, this year, should be greater than ever before. Such arrangements are good to have in stock in variety and quantity at all times, as if cared for, and kept from getting dusty, they are available for instant decorating and a great help in many last minute orders for funerals.

Now that the weather has settled, summer window boxes are in order, their filling should be an important feature of the spring business. Plants are, of course, much more expensive this year than ever before, but the business can be obtained in most cases just the same. The well-filled boxes in front of the store, which should always be kept up to the greatest perfection, can be depended on to influence much of this work.

Easter Plants in the New York Shops.

"Some day or other (but it will be after our time, thank goodness)" wrote Thackeray in "Vanity Fair," "Hyde Park Gardens will be no better known than the celebrated horticultural outskirts of Babylon." Supposing a similar prophecy was made of us. It would be a dismal contemplation—supposing we allowed ourselves to contemplate—to imagine New York inhabited only by bats and owls, and goats browsing over the waste that once was Bronx Park. But let us dismiss these sad forebodings, though some of our friends who have worried over the scarcity of good plants and the iniquity of Quarantine No. 37, may "hae their doots." Considering that the supply of lilies was small, so small, and the price so high, that a number of stores had none, and that in comparison with former years, the supply of azaleas was insignificant, the retailers all made a respectable display of plants. Pot roses in variety were plentiful, both in large and small sizes, and though there was a good variety of other stock, so far as quantity was concerned, roses were the leading features. Large and well flowered acacias were attractive offerings in a number of stores and served well for purposes of display, but the great middle class does not buy high priced acacias. In this connection, it is well to note that prices on nearly all plants were 40 to 50 per cent higher than last year, in some instances 100 per cent. A good display of blue, pink and white hydrangeas was noteworthy. The bougainvilleas, too, were worthy of honorable mention. Numbers of small plants in pans were offered at moderate prices and there were larger, more showy and expensive ones. Marguerite daisies were prominent in many stores, there being some large, and to those that are fond of daisies, beautiful plants. They came in practically all the sizes from 6-inch up to 14-inch, served admirably in contrast with the red and pink of roses and the blue of hydrangeas for display, and the smaller sizes sold at moderate prices. There was a sprinkling of both white and yellow callas in pots. The former, on account of the scarcity of Easter lilies, had quite a boom, both in pots and cut stock. The cinerarias, which in late years have to a considerable extent been dropped, had something of a revival and good plants were noticed. There were good specimen rhododendrons, but like the azaleas, the supply was limited. The genistas were noteworthy features in many stores, and there were fine specimens. There was a considerable stock of the varieties of heather, seasonable at Easter, in small pots, and much of it was worked up in combination baskets and hampers. Small azaleas were used for a similar purpose. All the stores carried some stock suitable for people of moderate means. At a leading Fifth avenue store, a considerable display of candytuft, in pans, was noticed. Pans of the mountain pink, primulas, tulips, hyacinths and geraniums were noticeable in stores that cater to people of moderate means. As a rule, such stores carried stock that could be sold at from $1 to $15 per plant. In the Broadway, Fifth and Madison avenue stores, the general range of prices was from $5 to $50, though the quantity of stock sold at the latter price was limited, but many plants and combinations went at $25 to $35. The limited supply of Easter lilies was of good quality and sold for 75 cents and $1, bud and flower; possibly there were sales at $1.25. It has previously been stated that the supply of roses was large, but in some instances the quality was poor. The flowers on some large plants, particularly Dorothy Perkins, had a pale, washed out appearance and seemed to be going. Tauserschon made a much better showing. The combination of an open season and a late Easter was doubtless responsible for the condition of many of the roses. But all things considered, there were no particular grounds for complaint.

Easter in the Chicago Stores.

Practically all of the local florists report business was brisk with the total sales showing a large increase over last year, notwithstanding the great shortage in both cut flowers and plants. Prices were considerably higher than last year, and everyone cleaned up what stock they had to offer in all lines and could have sold much more had it been available. Lilies sold well regardless of the high prices asked—75 cents to $1.00 per flower in pot plants and $5 per dozen for cut stock. Tulips, spiraeas, rambler roses, lily of the valley, hydrangeas, rhododendrons, calceolarias, cinerarias, jonquils, hyacinths, and lilac were the principal offerings in plants, including a few azaleas, and snapdragons, which made a big hit with the buyers. Made up baskets of blooming and foliage plants played an important part in the offerings, and also sold out entirely. Roses moved fast, and so did carnations. Callas found ready buyers. Sweet peas, orchids gardenias, violets and lily of the valley were in heavy demand, but in short supply. Snapdragons, lilac, jonquils, tulips, daffodils, daisies, pansies, lupines, stocks and all other miscellaneous flowers was disposed of early. The weather was ideal for Easter, and buying started in early this year, which made it easy for deliveries, and gave the dealer a chance to replenish his stock which was more plentiful toward the end of the week, owing to the extremely warm weather. Everyone is exceedingly well pleased with the result of the Easter trade and are now devoting their attention to Mothers' day, which falls on Sunday, May 11, this year.

The Alpha Floral Co. had all the business it could conveniently handle for Easter at its South Wabash avenue store. The demand was the best ever experienced. Everything in pot plants and cut flowers was handled in quantity, but the call was so great that Andrew Chronis had to make special trips to the market to secure stock so that all the orders could be filled in full.

Lewis & Rocca were well pleased with their first Easter in business and sold out completely in both cut flowers and plants. They are located at 55 East Jackson boulevard in the Cable building, and it was plainly evident that quality was their first consideration, judging from the magnificent stock that they handled.

Mike Poletsos reports that his Easter business at his East Adams street store exceeded all expectations and was the best ever. He had a good supply of both plants and cut flowers and sold out early.

The George Wittbold Co. had a magnificent display of pot lilies, roses, tulips, hyacinths and other blooming stock in addition to a complete line of cut flowers at its store and conservatories on Buckingham place. Business was very good at this establishment for Easter and the total sales for the past two months were exceptionally pleasing to the proprietors.

A. Lange had his usual fine showing of blooming plants for Easter at his East Madison street establishment and had about as complete if not a better assortment as any other store in the city. Pot lilies, rambler roses, tulips, hyacinths, lilies, daffodils, rhododendrons, genistias, azaleas, calceolarias, and other plants were included in the offerings. Cut flowers, as usual, were handled in quantity and sold fast, especially lilies, which were a leader here.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, had a strong demand for plants of all kinds, of which he had a splendid assortment in the fancier grades. Cut flowers were handled on a large scale here and moved quickly, notwithstanding the high prices.

H. N. Bruns had a record breaking Easter trade with a heavy call for both cut flowers and plants at his West Madison street store. Lily of the valley in pots was featured extensively and the supply of cut stock in this line for wholesale purposes was quite large considering conditions and, as usual, brought high returns.

C. Frauenfelder's store in West Madison street never was so busy at Easter as it was this year and the sales were very gratifying to Miss Edna Frauenfelder, who is now managing the place. Easter lilies were a big item here and cleaned up completely.

Schiller cleaned out completely in plants at both the west and north side establishments owing to the tremendous demand, which was the best ever. Herman Schilier says that over 7,000 plants were sold through the north side store in addition to the large number disposed of through the West Madison street establishment.

Ronsley had a big call for rambler roses at his East Jackson boulevard store, which were a leader with him. All the plants he had to offer were disposed of early, so cut flowers were handled quite extensively the last two days.

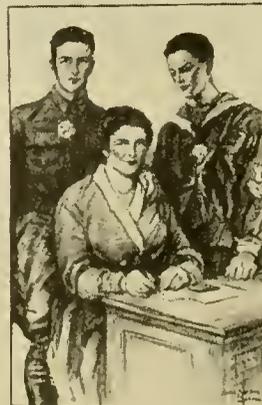

Chas. A. Samuelson arrived from Idaho in time to give the regular force a hand during the Easter rush, which resulted in a grand clean-up. Plants are always the leader at this place at Easter and the store and conservatory on South Michigan avenue were completely filled with choice stock for this occasion.

George Wienhoeber never had such a big holiday business as he did this Easter at his South Wabash avenue store, where the increased force found it impossible at times to handle the rush. The collection of plants at this establishment was one of the finest in the city.

The Fleischman Floral Co. was strong on plants, especially hydrangeas, rhododendrons, lilies and made-up baskets of blooming and foliage stock.

"THE MOTHER OF YOUR HEART"

Cut flowers as usual played a big part in the Easter offerings at this establishment and the clean-up in both lines was most complete.

H. C. Rowe had a grand showing of stock at his new East Madison street store and was more than satisfied with the splendid business that he enjoyed. Plants of every description were handled on a large scale and, like cut flowers, were in brisk demand.

The Bohannon Floral Co., 75 East Monroe street, handled a large supply of high priced plants which sold quickly, notwithstanding their cost. Mr. Bohannon was enthusiastic over his Easter business, which was the best ever.

O. J. Friedman had all the trade his force could handle at his South Michigan avenue store, where one of the best corsage businesses ever done was enjoyed for Easter. High class stock of every description arranged in Victor Bergman's usual artistic style was much in demand by the buyers in this well-known shopping district.

The Central Floral Co.'s store on North State street was one of the busiest places in the loop all during the Easter rush, when it was impossible to handle the trade at times. Plants and cut flowers were featured extensively in all lines and cleaned up nicely at very satisfactory prices.

The Venetian Flower Shop, 15 East Washington street, had a fine showing of stock in all lines. They report extra brisk business with a strong demand for snapdragons in pots.

Easter in Philadelphia.

The Easter trade of this city, both wholesale and retail, was quite up to the expectations of the most sanguine growers, wholesalers and retailers. Good judges had predicted a short supply in all lines, which some buyers attributed to be a ruse to boost the market and scare them into ordering early at high prices. In their opinion, 35 cents per bud and flower for lilies was out of the question; they would never pay it, nor would the grower be able to get any such figure; 25 cents per flower for hydrangea plants was also too high; 20 to 25 cents for 4-inch pot hyacinths, and so on along the line. It was ridiculous. They could wait. Prices would come down. As the days passed, however, prices held, and stocks began to disappear. Out-of-town buyers were paying the price, and the local storemen woke up, paid the prices and made the best of the situation. There was no reduction and the stranger or only occasional buyer met with little success. There was not near enough stock to supply the demand, and it was divided up according to the importance of the buyers. The quality of the various items was very good, most of it timed right, but although such a late Easter, several lots of rambles and hydrangeas had to be hurried the past few weeks in a way that was not good for them. In the main, however, the stock was in first class shape, and when arranged in the stores, made a beautiful display. Cold storage gigantes surprised everyone. They came along in exceptionally good condition, considering their two years' confinement. Most of the bulbs were 7-9 and produced better plants with more flowers than did the 5-7 Bermudas of last fall's stock. The Azores were, for the most part, fine, but on some of these the buds came blind or imperfect. There appeared to be enough for the demand, the high prices putting a brake on reckless buying. The spiræas that were not received until after the first of the year, made up for lost time. They were well flowered and one of the best sellers. The yellow calla has come to stay. They appear easy to grow, and sold well. The Hinodigiri azalea is another plant that will, in future, have an important place in the Easter list. The trade will get to understand it better. Most of the stock this season had come from the nursery rows, without the pruning necessary to get a full setting of buds. It was also brought along too fast, and was wide open a week before Easter. Hydrangeas were the quantity stock, and for the most part wonderfully well flowered and seen in all shades from white to light and dark pink and various shades of blue. They brought very good money as they looked worth the price. There was a fair supply of rambles, Tausendschon, Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay and Excelsa, all of which sold well at high prices. Marguerites and cinerarias were in most of the stocks, and were all sold at about twice last year's figures. The bulbous stock, thanks to the last week or two of cold, dull weather, held up wonderfully and sold at good money. This stock being the most moderate priced in the list, was popular with those who could not afford much. Genistas, bougainvilleas and a few rhododendrons were all in good demand, as were heather and boronias, mostly supplied by the New York growers. There were practically no Belgian azaleas, only the few sparsely flowered plants left over from last year.

The cut-flower supply was disappointing, owing to the cool, cloudy weather of the past week. The situation was much better at that time when there was almost a hot spell. This brought out a lot of all kinds of stock, much of which found its way to the street. The past week has been overcoat and umbrella weather, which at this, or in fact any time, is bad for producing flowers. Of course, a great many cut flowers in all lines were marketed this week, but one-third more would not have supplied the demand. In nearly all cases, both for shipping and local orders, buyers did not get what they ordered by fully 33 and in many cases 50 per cent. Cut Easter lilies were in limited supply, but as everybody expected this, and prices were high, all bought sparingly and the stock lasted until Saturday night. Even the street men paid $35 per hundred, because there was little else they seemed to be able to handle. Alfred M. Campbell's large lot came along fine, three-fourths of the stock being sold at his price. It was in very good condition and flowered much better than was expected of such stock. Roses were in fair supply. Prices of the specials reached well up towards Christmas figures, with special American Beauties at $1 each. Top prices for Hadleys and Russells reached 60 cents, while other specials ranged up to 20 and 25 cents. Twelve to 18-inch roses brought 10 to 15 cents. There were sweet peas by the hundred thousand. One firm is said to have handled nearly 1,000,000. One grower alone sent them 50,000 flowers in two days. There was but little of the long stemmed stock of a few weeks ago, but first selection brought $4 with the bulk of the stock selling for $3 per 100. Carnations were disappointing; a good many to be sure, but very far short of the demand. Anything good brought $10, with $12 for "or all specials, and $15 for the best pink Wards. Snaporagon was a factor and sold well at from $10 to $15. Catendulas were not plentiful and all sold at good prices. There was quite a lot of callas, which brought $25 to $30. Daisies, yellow and white, were good stock and the best sold easily at from $3 to $4. Forced lilac was $1.50 to $2 per bunch. Virginia outdoor stock, purple, brought $1. Frame lily of the valley paid big this year, selling for $12. Forced stock brought little more. Cattleyas were in great demand. The dull weather held them back, and prices ranged from $1.25 to $1.50, and some of the choicest were said to have brought $2. One firm is said to have handled 5,000, which foots up pretty big for one item. There was but little Spanish iris. It was fine and brought $2 per dozen. There were a few Lady Campbell violets and some of the hardy native.

IN THE STORES.

The retailers, almost without exception, did a wonderful business. In all the central stores there was a splendid display, which suggested anything but a scarcity of stock. All went heavily into baskets, of which there was great variety of form and coloring. At J. J. Habermehl's Sons, there was a fine display of splendidly arranged color effects in baskets, in which real blue flowered hydrangeas played an important part. Artistically tied ribbons made a great finish. Large specimen ramblers of various kinds were also a feature. At their Ritz-Carlton store, the manager had a wonderful lot of baskets splendidly arranged. An openwork hamper, with a gilt tin lining and a high arched handle, was most practical. It was in various colors, and as filled and ribboned, produced pleasing color effects. It is one of the best patterns of the year. Cherry blossom branches as a background in the large flower case were very effective. Business was reported excellent.

Charles Herry Fox had a most finished stock in which large ramblers and hydrangeas were conspicuous. Nearly every plant stood in an ornamental basket, giving them an air of elegance. A feature here was arranged and priced boxes of cut flowers and well made corsages. These were shown in the flower case, resting in the boxes, all ribboned as ready for delivery. These samples must aid greatly in securing orders at this busy time.

At Charles H. Grakelow's, the window was splendidly filled with specimen ramblers and other plants. A fine bank of Azore lilies filled one corner of the store, while the conservatory in the rear was occupied by a great variety of flowering plants. Business was taxing them to the utmost, and people were paying the increased prices with but little protest.

The London Shop had a choice, selected stock of baskets and specimen plants. Fine heather, hydrangeas and specimen ramblers were features. A splendid business at good prices was the report.

Pennock Bros.' novelty boxes, baskets with figures of children at flower covered pale fences, giving a garden effect, were original and much admired. The store and conservatory in the rear was filled with the finest flowering plants, specimen hydrangeas, rambler roses, Azore lilies, heather, yellow callas and other stock, quite up to their usual excellence.

H. H. Battle's beautiful store was filled with a great array of the finest specimen ramblers, acacias, boronias, heather, hydrangeas, and other choice stock. Arranged plant baskets were a feature, together with a high handle basket of openwork corn stalk, showing a colored container suitable for a rambler or other large plant. Decorated with ribbons, these looked quite the equal of an arranged plant basket, and were much less trouble. His Century Flower Shop next door had a varied display of all kinds of Easter stock. The business of these stores is truly immense.

Hearst Funeral Flowers.

At the funeral of the late Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, held at San Francisco, Calif., April 17, the floral offerings were very numerous and some quite elaborate. The most conspicuous included that of the state legislature, a tall broken column of Russell roses, trimmed with magnolia leaves and set on a base of tulips. Other beautiful pieces were those sent by the Serbian residents of the city—a large, standing Serbian national flag made of American Beauty roses, violets and sweet peas, and hung with black ribbons. The city of San Francisco sent an immense basket of orchids and American Beauty roses, set off with a white ribbon on which the name of the city was inscribed. The editorial staff of the Los Angeles Herald sent a standing piece, a large book opened to the Page of Life done in carnations with a spray of Russell roses resting on the open page as a bookmark. The College of Mining of the University of California, an institution long fostered by Mrs. Hearst, had for its offering a large wreath of tulips, Russell roses and magnolia leaves.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Clark Jr. sent a large wreath of Easter lilies. The floral offering of I. W. Hellman Sr. was a wreath of peonies, orchids, gardenias and tulips. D. M. Linnard sent a wreath on an easel of American Beauty roses, lilacs and magnolia leaves. A large standing cross of ferns, lilacs, magnolia leaves and tulips was sent by Mrs. Edward Martin. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Findlay Monteagle sent a floral offering of a wreath of Scotch heather with tulips, lily of the valley and orchids.

A standing panel of Ophelia roses and lilacs was sent by the Native Daughters of the Golden West. United States Senator James D. Phelan sent a large rose plant as his floral offering. Mayor and Mrs. James Rolph, Jr., sent a standing wreath of lilacs, orchids and ferns. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid and Ogden Mills sent a huge wreath of peonies, orchids and ferns. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spelman Stanton sent a wreath of ferns and orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Stetson Wheeler sent a beautiful wreath of wistaria and white heather.

Morgan Floral Co., Paxton, Ill.

The E. B. Morgan Floral Co., Paxton, Ill., has succeeded Addems, Morgan & Co., of that city, E. B. Morgan having bought the interest of C. J. Addems in the business, which will in future be conducted under the new firm name. Mr. Morgan, who has taken an interest in floriculture since boyhood, has had charge of the retail end of the establishment during the past 13 years, during which time it has grown and prospered beyond expectations, until at present the two ranges comprise nearly 40,000 square feet of glass.

Freesia Daddy Longlegs.

In recent years plant breeders have raised many beautiful varieties of freesia and one named Daddy Longlegs gained an award of merit at the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society March 11, 1919, when shown by the Rev. Joseph Jacob. The segments are more reflexed than in those of the older type of flower, so that the mouth appears very wide. An additional quality is the large number of flowers on the spike, many of these exhibited having no fewer than seven. The color is light rosy-mauve, with a golden blotch at the base of the lowest segment, and a shade of purple on the lobes on either side of the blotched one. The great charm of the freesia is its delicious perfume, and this, together with the fact that the flowers are available at a time when other flowers are scarce, makes them very popular for market purposes. Moreover, they have a certain elegance and lightness of form which render them suitable for indoor decorations and general florist's purposes. At this time of the year large numbers of freesias are sold in Covent Garden and other flower markets in this country, the Guernsey growers sending immense quantities annually; indeed, so plentiful are the flowers that numbers are secured by the street merchants, who retail them for a few pence per bunch.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

National Publicity for Flowers.

After Easter, what? Easter needs very little advertising, so much is done for nothing. It might be wondered how much the florists would pay for the front page of The Saturday Evening Post of April 19, were the opportunity offered them. Our promotion bureau is inclined to take this page as a courtesy, for it surely speaks volumes. And some of us may remember that this same journal turned down our application for a page in one of its spring issues, for the reason that the pressure upon its productive capacity was so great it could not increase its bookings without over-running its capacity for production. We considered this to be rather unfortunate. But who shall say that the cover page we have referred to does not convey the message of our slogan, "Say it with Flowers?"

After Easter will come our main spring effort to put flowers in the public mind. A magazine circulation of many millions will carry our messages. The public will see our color page in seven leading magazines featuring "Flowers Make a Brighter Business Day." Other magazines will feature, in large space, "How Flowers Beautify the Table," and "Just as a Sign that you haven't 'Forgot.'" Advertisements which make an appeal and carry a punch such as is sure to attain for us our object—a greater use of flowers. Then, our promotion bureau has prepared a special electrotpe for "Memorial day," a time when flowers will be more plentiful than at any time since the fuel embargo went into effect. We shall be back to the time when, production considered, gluts used to prevail.

Publicity such as we are securing is designed to prevent gluts. The tremendous army of "forgetfuls" will get their reminders wherever they look. The slogan "Say it with Flowers," peeps out at them from their favorite magazines, from the florists' windows (that is to say, windows of live florists), from the columns of local papers, and stares at them from the sides of the delivery cars of all progressive florists. We are to see to it that this slogan intrudes still further, but more money is required to accomplish this.

Now, Mr. Nonsubscriber, are you seriously considering what all this means to you? Are you content to stand apart from your brother florists and say "This does not apply to me. I am well known, and business will come to me just the same?" In our mindseye we can see you just this way. But who creates the business for which you lay in wait? Do you create anything yourself? Do you not think it is up to you to do a little creating? Can you do it better than by contributing to our national publicity campaign fund?

If you have followed the little articles which we have written, and which your trade paper has so kindly published for so many months, you surely must have absorbed the idea of the wisdom of creating business. The increase of the demand for flowers is the sole object of this campaign. It is being attained, and it is fair to suppose that, necessarily, your business is being benefited in the attainment. Come, now, put on your glasses and take a man's broad view of the situation. If you will do this, we are sure you will support the campaign to the extent you think proper, and we are waiting to hear from you.

The following subscriptions have been received and are in addition to those previously announced, annually for four years unless otherwise stated:

EASTER TRADE.

Phenomenal Business.

From early reports received which are representative, however, of all sections of the country, all indications point to a phenomenal volume of Easter business, limited in almost every instance by the amount of stock available. Lilies were, with few exceptions, seen in very limited numbers, with quality in many cases below the usual standard, which condition reacted in favor of other plant offerings. While hydrangeas, rambler roses, spiræas, tulips, azaleas, and hyacinths vied with each other for the lead in the plant section, it was indeed a rare case where anything that carried a flower failed to find a ready buyer. In cut flowers, the same conditions were true. Where weather was favorable, corsages appeared to be more popular than ever, while roses, carnations, tulips, sweet peas, violets and orchids led in what invariably resulted in a quick cleanup before the rush was over. The advertising of the Society of American Florists and the Florists' Telegraph Delivery received credit due for a substantial gain in the number of mail and telegraph orders over last year. Prices received were very much better than for Easter, 1918; 35 per cent would probably not be an overestimate as a general average, while in several cities 100 per cent is reported. Flower buyers, however, seemed to realize that in common with other things, flowers were of necessity bound to increase in cost, and in very few cases were there complaints on this score. Many retailers who feared the result of announcing the higher prices made necessary by greater expense of production, etc., had their confidence restored after the first few sales. All in all, this year's Easter business was an agreeable surprise, far beyond expectations generally and, we might say, in every instance, eminently satisfactory. The following condensed reports indicate conditions in the respective cities:

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—According to the Avenue Floral Co. there was an increase of 80 per cent in this year's Easter business as compared with 1918 with prices in keeping with conditions. Both plants and cut stock cleaned up completely and there were some sales lost through inability to supply the demand. There was no call for ferns or palms but everything in flowering plants found ready buyers. High prices of cut lilies increased the sale of roses, carnations, tulips, sweet peas, etc. The advertising campaign of the Society of American Florists without doubt resulted in a large increase in both mail and telegraph orders. Flowers seemed to be the suitable offering. The absence of lilies was hardly noticeable as buyers took readily to other flowers and plants.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—Tipton & Hurst report Easter sales about 10 per cent greater than in 1918, and prices about as usual, with the exception of an advance in lilies. Stock, both in plants and cut flowers, was ample for all needs, the plant demand being led by hydrangeas, while in cut stock, roses, sweet peas, carnations and tulips sold best in the order named. Cash sales showed an increase over last year. This firm had a fine lot of Easter plants from last year's bulbs, but due to miscalculations, they were about four days late. Shipments from outside points were received spotted and bruised, some so badly that they could not be offered for sale and on others money had to be refunded, resulting in a loss.

PEORIA, ILL.—B. Juergens reports total Easter sales in money value somewhat higher than in 1918 with prices much better. The supply of plants was not equal to the demand and the same was true of cut flowers. Hydrangeas, spiræas, tulips and hyacinths led in popularity while calendulas, Martha Washington geraniums and schizanthus were draggy. All cut stock moved well. Buyers finding so few lilies in the market readily accepted tulips, hyacinths, daffodils and narcissi in pans. Hydrangeas and spiræas moved without effort. There were some daisies, schizanthus and roses in pots left when the big rush was over.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—As reported by N. B. & C. E. Stover, the Easter demand this year was about double that of last year with prices advanced in about the same ratio. In small plants, there were not half enough to meet the demand, and while everything went fast, ramblers seemed to hold the lead. While cut flowers were high in price, there were not enough to go around and more carnations could have been disposed of. Eight extra clerks at this establishment were required to handle the rush. There was little complaint in regard to prices with the exception of lilies. All local florists report a cleanup.

DES MOINES, IA.—The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. reports Easter sales about on a par with those of 1918, with prices varying from 25 to 100 per cent better on plants but no increase in cut flowers, save in the case of lilies. The plant supply was equal to requirements with the exception of Easter lilies, the stock this year totaling 300 plants as compared with 5,000 a year ago. In cut flowers everything in sight cleaned up quickly. Combinations sold unusually well. Baby ramblers and hybrid roses enjoyed the best sale. All in all, business was very satisfactory.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—As reported by Washburn & Sons, the Easter business exceeded that of last year by about 25 per cent with prices also more satisfactory. The supply of both plants and cut flowers was sufficient to meet the demand, with the best call for lilies, as usual. Roses led the offerings in cut stock. Increased prices were never more willingly paid.

FARGO, N. D.—According to Smedley & Co., Easter prices were better than a year ago, but a shortage in both plants and cut stock held the increase in volume of sales over that of a year ago to about 10 per cent. In plants the short call was for daisies, with hydrangeas leading in popularity. In cut flowers, bulbous stock took the lead, with roses least in demand.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—The 1919 Easter trade was about equal to last year with prices somewhat higher. Cut flowers were short of requirements, with roses, orchids and carnations leading the demand, according to the Dale estate. There was a great demand for lilies from the United States markets, but the supply was insufficient.

DOVER, O.—Much better business and higher prices as compared with the Easter trade of 1918 is reported by C. Betscher. The supply in all lines was not equal to the demand and everything offered met with quick sale. All indications point to a wonderful Mothers' day business which will continue through the month.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Easter business showed an increase of about 25 per cent over last year, with prices about the same. There was an adequate supply of plants and cut flowers, excepting lilies, which were limited. Rambler roses were the best sellers. All stores cleaned up all available stock.

HARRISBURG, PA.—Chas. L. Schmidt records a 50 per cent increase in Easter business compared with that of 1918, with prices advanced 50 per cent and in some cases doubled. Twice as many plants could have been sold and carnations and sweet peas were in limited supply. Sweet peas and violets were the leaders. Everything sold out with the exception of yellow daisies. The quality in general was superb.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Holm & Olson report the 1919 Easter demand was 50 per cent better than a year ago, with higher prices and the supply of both plants and cut flowers below requirements. It was the biggest cleanup in the history of the firm, everything offered meeting with ready sale.

ALBERT LEA, MINN.—According to the Lake Shore Greenhouses, with prices 25 to 35 per cent above those of last year, 1919 Easter sales showed an increase of about one-fourth. The plant supply was ample, but in cut flowers there was a shortage of carnations. Everything sold well.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gude Bros. Co. report Easter business 50 per cent greater than last year with prices much higher with a good supply in all lines of exceptionally fine quality. Everything sold freely in many instances at prices three times higher than in former years.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—James Horan & Son had a larger trade than for Easter, 1918, with prices advanced over former years. Due to an overproduction of plants there were some leftovers. Carnations and American Beauties were the cut flower favorites.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—T. D. Long, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, wires that pot Easter lilies here sold at $1.50 per flower, while cut blooms were $8 to $10 per dozen, with supply short.

FRENCH LICK, IND.—Charles Springer reports an excellent Easter trade in cut flowers.

GREATEST EASTER DEMAND IN YEARS.

Cut flowers and plants for Easter were entirely inadequate in supply. Weeks before the day, most growers were sold out of pot plants, and wholesalers had booked orders for everything in sight. Then, just before Easter, we had a week of dark, rainy weather, which still farther cut down an already slim supply. Everything in cut flowers was cleaned up by Saturday afternoon, and wholesalers were closed all day Easter Sunday. Prices generally ruled high. Easter lilies, which were in fair supply, sold for 25 to 35 cents per bud or flower. Corsage flowers, as always for this day were in big demand, and the supply of sweet peas, violets and greens was quickly disposed of, leaving many orders only partly filled. Violets were of excellent quality for the lateness of the season. Snapdragon was in fair supply and in good demand, all colors being eagerly picked up by the retail trade. Daffodils and tulips were in good supply, but cleaned up entirely. Among the regular stock was a good showing of other flowers, such as ranunculus, swainsonas, calendulas, mignonette, etc., all of which was in good demand. Some of the roses and carnations showed the effects of having been held and the dark weather, but still everything in this line, and the supply was fair, cleaned up quickly and fell far short of the call. As usual, retailers did a good deal of advertising the week preceding Easter, with the usual good results. Outside of corsage flowers, not much can be said in favor of any other flower in particular, as everything on the market sold and retailers picked up anything they could get, so long as it was a bloom, saying they could use anything, which was true. American Beauties were short in supply and specials brought $12 per dozen, wholesale, which has been a special "Christmas" price for years, but stock was uniformly good. While stock was in short supply, prices were high, and the week's sales ran away ahead of those for any preceding year at this time.

Pacific Coast Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held April 5, President John Gill in the chair. One of the important topics of discussion was Plant Quarantine No. 37. In a general way, sentiment seemed favorable to the quarantine, but it was greatly regretted that orchids had been placed on the restricted list. Several growers of long experience stated that they had not known of any actual cases where injurious insect pests had been introduced into the country on orchids. Many of the miscellaneous items shut out by the quarantine, being produced in large quantities in California, relieved of European competition, will find a much more receptive market in the east than they have heretofore and naturally the growers of such items could not consistently feel opposed to the quarantine. However, the preliminary discussion showed that sentiment was not uniformly for or against the quarantine, and feeling that the society would not be doing justice to its membership by taking any action in the matter that did not have the support of every member, the discussion was closed without a vote being taken.

The exhibits for the evening, which were judged by V. Holms, Richard Diener and Richard Lohrman, received the following awards: Cineraria hybrida, exhibited by Eric James, 80 points; Cantua buxifolia and Erica persoluta rosea, by Alex. Rose, 90 points; French hydrangea, by H. Plath, 85 points; flowering cherry and flowering apple, by John Gill, 80 points; Exochorda racemosa (grandiflora), by W. B. Clarke, Cottage Gardens Nurseries, 90 points; Tulips Inglescomb Pink, Coleur Cardinal, Rev. Ewbank, Dream, and La France, and Rouen lilac (Syringa rothmagensis), a hybrid from S. vulgaris x S. persica, shown by the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, 90 points; Odontoglossum hybrid Hyde de Crome and Laelo-cattleya Haroldiana, by J. A. Carbone, 95 points.

Lenox Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the above society was held in its rooms, Lenox, Mass., April 9, with a large number of members present. The chief topic for discussion was the question of holding a show this year. This subject was thoroughly gone into, and it was found, that owing to the difficulty of securing suitable help, and the unprepared condition on many of the estates as regards greenhouse stock, and closed up greenhouses, it would be absolutely impossible to put up a show such as Lenox is in the habit of doing. Therefore, it was finally decided to drop the show for this year. Arrangements are in progress for having competitive exhibits staged at our regular monthly meetings. One of our prominent members, who passed the winter in the south, gave us a very interesting and instructive talk. Subject: "A Trip to Florida," by Joseph W. Pybus.

LIMITED SUPPLY HOLDS SALES DOWN.

The weather, good stock and everything connected with the business, seemed to combine to make this Easter the largest in the history of the trade. All the retailers seemed to have all the business they could handle, and everyone seemed to be pleased, except some who oversold, and were unable to secure stock at the last minute. The wholesale houses cleaned up everything that looked like a flower; in fact, were unable to book any more orders after Wednesday, and the man who did not have his order in early, got left, although everyone was taken care of to the best of the wholesalers' ability. American Beauties and roses of all kinds were of fine quality, and were sold before they arrived in the market. There was a good supply of lilies, but they cleaned up at $35 per 100. Callas were in good supply and helped out in the shortage. Spanish iris and snapdragons were of good quality and brought good figures. The usual shortage in corsage stock occurred, and it seemed a shame to see the retailers cutting down long stemmed roses for corsage work. Some very good jonquils and tulips were in the market, but nothing like former years. Violets arrived in poor shape, which was to be expected. Sweet peas were received in fairly good condition, but were short stemmed. Everything considered, it certainly was a great Easter and "Say It with Flowers" will make the next one greater.

BIG EASTER TRADE IN SIGHT.

This week finds the trade in this city busily engaged in preparing for the Easter trade. The fact that the new Liberty Loan is to be started this week, does not seem to dampen the optimism of the florists to any appreciable degree, and they are making larger and more elaborate displays than ever before. Owing to the lateness of Easter this year, there is little or no likelihood of any shortage in either cut flowers or pot plants. The one item that will no doubt be on the short side, will be lilies. Up to the present, very few of these have appeared in the market. Whatever does come in, will no doubt bring very high figures. The supply of pot plants promises to be adequate for all requirements, but they will command big prices all around. The supply of roses is now at its height. The finest quality may be had at very reasonable figures. The supply of American Beauties remains about the same. This old favorite has not been planted so heavily here since the advent of Mrs. Chas. Russell. The latter variety is very fine and in great demand. Prices always remain firm for this favorite rose. Hadley is very plentiful, and so is Ophelia, Columbia, which is a great favorite, is in short supply. Mrs. Aaron Ward is coming in more freely, as also is Cecile Brunner. We noted some splendid Kaiserin last week in several of the stores. Carnations are in large supply, with prices shortening up quite a lot, owing to out-of-town shipments for Easter. There seems to be an over-supply of red varieties, however, and a large part of this cut is sold on the street. Sweet peas, although very fine, will not be in large enough supply. No outdoor stock has arrived as yet, everything coming from under glass. Spencers are the only varieties offered. The supply of cattleyas has increased very materially during the week, and has helped to relieve the shortage that has existed for some time past. The quality is very fine and prices remain at a high figure. Phalanopsis are coming in freely, but bring splendid returns. There is a large supply of tulips coming along daily. No doubt they will bring good prices this week. Daffodils are beginning to show the effect of the long season, and will not last much longer. Callas are very plentiful, but are not much used in this market. Good snapdragon is one of the most popular flowers being handled here. They bring excellent figures and have done so all season. Lilac is coming along freely, and good stock is quickly disposed of. Spanish iris is becoming plentiful. Some very beautiful Japanese iris are also being received. Violets are still in heavy supply. The quality is excellent and prices remain unchanged. Gardenias are still on the short side of the market. Hyacinths are not seen so much now and freesias are fast disappearing from the market. Large quantities of outdoor fruit blossoms can still be had. Peonies have put in an appearance and bring fine returns. As yet no good white varieties have been noted. Camellia japonica in flower has proved a good seller as pot plants. Bougainvilleas and ericas are also very popular and sell readily. Ferns and greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

The fifth annual California state wild flower exhibit will take place at the Fairmont hotel, May 9-10. The United States forestry bureau will have a large exhibit, secured from the national parks. Seasonable flowers are now being gathered in all parts of the state. Luther Burbank is going to enter an exhibit also. Prof. P. B. Kennedy, of the University of California, is one of the leading men working for the success of the show. David Starr Jordan, of Stanford University, is to deliver a lecture on "The Conservation of Wild Flowers."

In anticipation of the normal resumption of the shipping trade this fall, most of the leading chrysanthemum growers are preparing to plant quite a large acreage again for the coming fall business. The Lynch Nursery Co. and Shibuya & Tchida, both of Menlo Park, will have a large acreage of this flower again this coming season. As usual, they will be grown under cloth houses. The quality of the stock produced by these firms is unsurpassed on this coast. Many of the latest novelties will be put on the market this fall in large quantities.

At the annual May fete and spring blossom carnival, to be held May 1, in Golden Gate park, Miss Matie McLaren, daughter of Donald McLaren, and granddaughter of Park Superintendent John McLaren, will preside as Queen of the May. For Queen Matie, the role of reigning fairy over a realm of blossoms, is not a new one, for she has been reared among California's choicest flowers. Her chariot is being designed and made by the MacRorie-McLaren Co.

Martin Poss, of San Mateo, has several houses of Begonias Lorraine and Cricimati, which will be just right for his Easter trade. He says spring business is far in excess of the corresponding period last year. He is cutting heavily of all the leading varieties of carnations, nearly all of which is used for his own retail trade. His nursery department is busy all the time with landscape work.

Plans for work by the bureau of plant industry of the department of agriculture for activity in the Santa Clara valley this coming year, as well as in other parts of California, are said to depend on the results of a survey being made there by Professor Lee Cleveland Corbett, director of the bureau. He is working in conjunction with L. R. Cody, county horticultural commissioner.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is sending out large shipments of azaleas and rhododendrons to the southern part of the state. They report that the plant trade for Easter is in fine shape and they expect to clean out their houses completely. Business at their retail store on Powell street is very brisk right along.

Podesta & Baldocchi are preparing for the busiest Easter trade in their history. Great quantities of rambler roses in all varieties are being received daily. They report that the advance business booked has been heavier than last year. Their large store presents a beautiful appearance these days and everyone is busy.

F. Lichtenberg, one of the leading florists of Los Angeles, has been here during the past week, arranging for his Easter supply of flowers and flowering plants. He says trade in the southern city is excellent. He reports a great scarcity of orchids, and is trying to secure a steady supply from this market.

G. Rossi & Co., of Colma, have a grand lot of Aspidistra lurida variegata, which is in good shape for the Easter trade. They are shipping large lots of it out-of-town daily to their customers. They will be in with a heavy cut of tulips for the Easter trade.

Ferri Bros. expect to have a fine crop of Phalenopsis amabilis ready for the Easter trade. They had a heavy cut of roses of all leading varieties, including Columbia, which is going to be one of the leaders in the future.

The J. B. Boland store, on Kearny street, has been showing some well grown pots of the yellow calla this week. This flower is not often seen in this market, and they attracted a great deal of attention.

Henry Goertzhain, of Redwood City, has his store splendidly decorated for Easter. His hydrangeas are fine and include many good specimens. His greenhouses supply nearly all the stock required for this store.

B. M. Joseph is making great preparations to care for his Easter trade. He says business is fine, and he will probably have to take over extra floor room to be able to handle the Easter demand.

H. Levin, on Fillmore street, is preparing to handle a large Easter trade, and is completely stocked up. He says out-of-town shipping trade has been quite brisk with him of late.

F. C. Jaeger & Son are making a beautiful display of Easter stock at their Powell street store. They report themselves as well pleased with the way trade has been holding up.

OBITUARY.

Harlow N. Higinbotham.

Harlow N. Higinbotham, the well known Chicago merchant, was run down by an army ambulance in New York, April 18, and died of his injuries five hours later. Mr. Higinbotham had gone to New York to welcome the returning Illinois soldiers. He was a liberal patron of horticulture and a member of the board of directors of the Horticultural Society of Chicago for many years. The family home was at Joliet, Ill., where he established the Chicago Carnation Co., which, under the management of the late James Hartshorne, gave a great impetus to carnation culture and distributed many meritorious varieties of that plant.

Mr. Higinbotham was born on a farm near Joliet, October 10, 1838. He served as president of the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1892-93 and was always in the front rank as a promoter of the city's welfare.

Joseph Charles Craig.

J. C. Craig, pioneer retail florist of Chicago, died at his home at 738 South Oakley boulevard, April 16, following an illness covering about six months. He was born in that city, May 5, 1857, and had lived there all his life. In 1874, he opened a retail store in the loop, and up to the time of his death, was proprietor of the establishment at 120 South Wabash avenue, doing business under his name. He was one of the first to introduce the American Beauty rose in the west, and when he first started in business, had to depend entirely upon the eastern markets for his supply. In addition to his retail store, he operated a small range of glass at Hillside, the output of which was disposed of through his local establishment. He was a member of the Chicago Florists' Club and the Retail Florists' Association, and belonged to Lincoln Council Number 68, National Union.

The funeral was held Saturday, April 19, at 9:30 a. m., at Precious Blood church, thence by autos to Mt. Carmel cemetery, where the remains were placed in a vault awaiting the arrival of his son, Raymond, who is expected home from Europe with the American troops. He was the beloved husband of the late Nellie C. Craig (nee O'Connell) and fond father of Joseph A., Arthur A., Irene C., and the late John Craig, and grandfather of Helen and Geraldine Craig. He was well and favorably known to the trade, which extends its heartfelt sympathy to the grief stricken family.

MERION, PA.—Harry I. Foust will add one new Lord & Burnham house, 24x201 feet, to his establishment.

OMAHA, NEB.—There was no serious damage to greenhouses in the tornado which visited this city April 6.

HAMILTON, ONT.—There is a movement on foot to organize a gardeners' and florists' association in this city.

WICHITA, KAN.—An exhibition of flowers is being planned in connection with the wheat show to be held here this fall.

KITCHENER, ONT.—The range of C. H. Janzen has been sold, the ground to be used for manufacturing purposes, and the houses will be dismantled by April, 1920.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The superior court has announced its intention of appointing a receiver in the co-partnership of Geo. F. Lane and Andrew W. Welch, florists, 120 Asylum avenue.

EASTER falls on April 4 next year, 16 days earlier than in 1919.

CAPE JASMINES.—Texas growers report this season's crop will be ready about May 15.

LILIES.—A well-known lily specialist says these plants dislike peat and are likewise averse to moving while growing.

ENGLISH growers have recently exhibited a double form of Primula malacoides, and a good type of P. obconica is said to exist in that country.

SECRETARY REDFIELD in a speech at Chicago stated that a boom in business throughout the United States is imminent, and that the unemployment situation will be cleared up within two months.

THE Montana Farming Corporation which has leased lands totaling about 200,000 acres and has the financial backing of the J. P. Morgan interests may become the largest dry farming enterprise in the United States if not in the world.

THE importation of fresh flowers into Great Britain will remain unrestricted, according to cable of April 18.

THE federal aid road act, signed by the President last month, permits the government to pay part of the costs of new roads, built by various states. This bill provides an extra appropriation of $209,000,000 and it is estimated by federal departments that there will be $574,000,000 of government money available for this purpose for the next three years.

American Peony Society.

At the annual meeting of the directors of the American Peony Society, held in New York, March 24, Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, Mich., was present as a representative of that city, where the next annual meeting and exhibition of the society will be held. No attempt was made to fix the exact dates of the show, as that will depend on the character of the season. It will probably be about the middle of June which will suit the growers in the latitude of Detroit.

The prize schedule was worked out in its general features and includes this year a special list of awards for exhibits of 10 of the finest of the American varieties—seedlings of Richardson, Rosenfield, Brand, Thurlow, Shaylor, Hollis and Mrs. Pleas, as well as the usual prizes and medals for the various larger classes.

Plant Quarantine No. 37.

STERILIZATION OF SOIL FOR PACKING.

Amendment No. 1 to the regulations supplemental to Notice of Quarantine No. 37, provides that the requirement of Regulation 3 as to freedom from sand, soil, or earth of nursery stock and other plants and seeds permitted entry under that regulation, shall not apply to sand, soil, or earth used for packing the articles enumerated in Item No. 1 when such sand, soil or earth has been previously sterilized in accordance with methods prescribed by the federal horticultural board under the supervision of a duly authorized inspector of the country of origin.

The requirement as to sterilization may be met by heating the sand, soil, or earth to a temperature of 100 degrees centigrade (212 degrees Fahrenheit) and maintaining that temperature for a period of one hour. Such sterilization is accomplished at one of the field stations of the United States department of agriculture by the use of a large iron receptacle holding about a cubic yard of soil. A fire is built under the receptacle and in a short period the contained earth is heated sufficiently to kill all larva, nematodes, etc. It is necessary to keep the soil stirred while heating. Any device which will maintain the heat at the required temperature for one hour will be satisfactory to the board.

The invoice covering importations of bulbs packed in such sterilized sand, soil, or earth must be accompanied by a certificate of a duly authorized inspector of the country of origin to the effect that the required sterilization has been accomplished under his direction. The certificate should indicate the marks and numbers on the cases and should contain such other information as may be necessary to identify the cases which it covers.

C. L. MARLATT,
Chairman of Board.

RITO

THE ENERGIZER FOR SOIL BACTERIA

IS COMING TO AMERICA.

WONDERFUL RESULTS have been obtained by the use of RITO in Great Britain during the last three years. Owing to the war it has been impossible to export, but now we are free to do so, and feel sure that the Horticulturists of the U. S. A. will at once avail themselves of this unique method of increasing their products and of getting their stuff ready for the market some weeks earlier than they have hitherto done, and so secure a much higher price.

WHAT IS RITO?—RITO is a humus, organic or natural fertilizer, a stimulant and energizing medium for soil bacteria.

WHAT IS HUMUS?—Humus is a complex substance or mixture of substances present in the richest of soils. It is black in colour, and hence renders the soil darker. RITO contains Humus in the right form for fertilizing the soil.

WHY ADD HUMUS?—Because most soils contain very little (if any) Humus, and it is necessary for the proper development of the useful soil bacteria. The bacteria find in the Humus constituents a suitable medium for their robust propagation.

That is, Humus is a source of food and energy for the soil bacteria.

WHAT IS THE ANALYSIS OF RITO?—It has very little chemical analysis and it does not come in the same category as fertilizers. It is essentially an energizing medium for soil bacteria. Phosphates and potash are present in all soils, but in the ordinary way they are not readily available. RITO, by energizing the soil bacteria, is calculated to make the phosphates and potash available for the plant. It also stimulates the nitrogen-fixing bacteria into action, so that the consequent development is out of all proportion to its analysis.

RITO takes the place of farmyard manure, or it may be used in conjunction with farmyard manure or any recognized artificials. RITO is free from weed seeds, spores and germs, and from the eggs or larvae of noxious insects.

It is well known that the soil is not a dead inert mass of matter, but that it teems with bacteria, which only need to be treated properly to be called into activity. There are millions in every spadeful of soil.

RITO may be used in the open or under glass.

What RITO Users Say:--

"I used RITO in the soil for my Tomatoes this year. The result was the best crop I ever had, and I started picking two to three weeks earlier than usual from seed sown same date as previous years."

A market gardener says that his RITO-treated lettuce were ready for the market a month before the untreated ones, with the result that the treated ones brought 2s. 6d. per dozen and the untreated ones, when they were ready for the market, brought 1s. per dozen.

"I tried RITO last year on Potatoes, and they yielded 30 per cent better than those not treated."

"Every ounce of fruit from both the treated and the untreated Tomatoes has been gathered and carefully weighed. The weight of fruit gathered from the treated portions averaged just five times the amount as from the untreated portion."

"I have used RITO in the Peach Houses, and find that it greatly improved both the quality of the fruit and also the growth. I also find RITO very good if used when mixing soil for potting various plants, and I have also used it on my Vines with excellent results."

"I have pleasure in testifying to the merits of RITO. It is 'Right Ho' and no mistake. I never saw Tomatoes do so well as when your RITO was applied as a top-dressing mixed with the soil; the roots of the plants made in this way were extraordinary, and the crops correspondingly good. The same applies to Cucumbers, also Chrysanthemums and to plants generally. It seems to consume the moisture, hence less watering is required."

"RITO treated Chrysanthemums made a much quicker and better start than they have usually done—in fact, the plants show a great improvement."

RITO is packed in double bags, and the price is $5 per 100 lbs., ex Quay Boston or New York. Terms—Cash with order.

Please address your orders at once to The Molassine Company, Ltd., East Greenwich, London, England.

Nashville, Tenn.

NO EASTER SCARCITY NOTICED.

If there was any scarcity of Easter stock in the flower shops of this city, it was not manifested. It would seem that the fear of a short supply was ungrounded. Another factor in the supply was the extremely fine flower-growing weather during the past few weeks. The plant supply was really abnormal, surpassing that of former years, while cut flowers, especially reses and carnations, although scarce during the war, were really not missed to any great extent. The churches in this city were never more handsomely decorated. The irises were at their best, and many city yards were filled with them, tulips and double spiraeas, also bloomed outside, which added not a little to the abundance. In plants, the hydrangeas were fine, and there were many of them. They were easily a favorite with all classes of buyers and made elegant combinations with other plants for baskets and birch bark boxes, which sold well at good figures. There were more lilies than were expected several weeks ago, but instead of tall, fine-looking plants, with from six to eight flowers, many did not exceed 18 inches in height and carried not more than three or four blooms. All the florists were supplied with them—more or less. Baby rambler and Dorothy Perkins roses were seen in abundance, and last, but by no means least, Spiraea japonica was at hand in fine quality, and combined with rambler roses and hydrangeas, made a basket combination eagerly sought after, and they brought fancy returns. Among the cut flowers were excellent roses, better than had been expected, the Columbia, Russell and Ophelia being grown to the highest perfection, with prices ranging from $4 to $12 per dozen, and very few at the first price. As a choice between a dozen roses at $12 and a large basket with a fine hydrangea, baby rambler rose and pink spiraea, the choice went to the basket. The supply of hyacinths and tulips was good and these were preferred by many. Prices went soaring. Lilies easily held their own at 50 cents per flower. Carnations, and there were some superb ones, four inches in diameter, brought from $2.50 to $4 per dozen. Hydrangeas ranged from $2.50 to $12 per plant. Pot hyacinths and tulips brought $1.50 to $4. There was a continuous stream of buyers extending throughout four days. While the variety of flowers in the different stores was virtually the same, there were distinctive features in each.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Co. had a truly beautiful and abundant stock, a wonderful collection. Both carnations and roses were exceptionally fine. They were not only able to supply their local demand, but sent an equally fine supply to the Chattanooga branch. They made but few sales at wholesale, as the retail demand absorbed most of the output. Late Sunday afternoon they had virtually cleaned up, with but seven large baskets left over out of 135. They are entirely satisfied with the season's business, the volume being greater than last year and prices about 75 per cent higher.

The McIntyre Floral Co. had a luxurious stock and made a specialty of pot geraniums, pansies, Lorraine begonias and hyacinths. They also had fine roses, Columbia, Russell and Killarney, some orchids, sweet peas and azaleas. One plant was fully three feet in diameter. They report a fine trade.

The market house, the opportunity of the small grower, was full of plants all day Saturday. Charles Tritchler, Louis Haury, the Greens, and even the McIntyres, were there. Everything sold, even the smaller and cheaper offerings. Geny Bros. featured the beautiful yellow calla, which was seen only at their establishment, and it was shown in some beautiful basket combinations. They had a good cut of lilies and excellent roses and carnations. M. C. D.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

There was a large attendance at the monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., April 9. President Joseph Adler in the chair. A. W. King, Clinton Lawrence, P. W. Popp, Allen Krickman and Arthur Thompson were elected to membership and one application was received. The judges for the monthly exhibits were Messrs. Stroyer, Lusk and Jones and the following awards were announced: Three heads of lettuce, G. W. Wyatt, first; nine spikes of antirrhinum, Thomas Twigg, first.

The schedule for the tulip show to be held May 14 was read and adopted. Wm. Sperling, of the Stump & Walter Co., who was present, generously donated $15 to be used as prizes on this occasion. Arthur Cook and Arnold Gatacre, two members who have been in service, spoke briefly of their experience. After the business session there was a social gathering and smoker, at which John W. Everitt, our popular toastmaster, presided in his usual good style.

HARRY GOODBAND, Cor. Secy.

TRENTON, N. J.—The extensive orchid collection of the late Chas G. Roehling may be dispersed by sale, but strong efforts are being made to retain it here intact for the benefit of the city, with James Goodier, the well known grower, in charge.

COMPLETE CLEAN-UP FOR EASTER.

The Easter demand was exceptionally heavy this year and stock in all lines cleaned up completely at an early hour, including the shipments that arrived late Saturday afternoon and evening. The high prices realized, which were reasonable considering the great shortage of stock, owing to the very unfavorable weather the early part of last week and the latter part of the week before, made this one of the best Easters on record, and no complaint is heard from any quarter in regard to poor business. The shipping trade was extra heavy, and it was impossible to fill anywhere near all the orders in full. The local demand never was so brisk, due to a large extent to the ideal weather that prevailed the three days before Easter. Cut lilies cleaned up completely at the advertised quotations of $25 to $35 per 100, including a shipment of 6,000 from Canada, April 19. Pot lilies were scarce at prices ranging from 35 cents to 50 cents per flower, and more could have been sold had they been available. Plants of every description met with ready sale, and like cut flowers, were in short supply. Roses were in heavy demand at the advertised quotations and even higher prices, and no trouble was experienced in disposing of all the carnations that arrived at $6 to $8 per 100 and even more in the fancier grades and varieties. Sweet peas had a heavy call and so did gardenias, violets, lily of the valley and orchids. Callas were sold before they reached the store. Snapdragons were good property and so were tulips, freesias, jonquils, mignonette, stocks, lupines, lilac, daisies, pansies, gladioli, feverfew, eulandulas, iris, forget-me-nots and other miscellaneous seasonal flowers. Greens had a heavy call in all lines, and one of two items were exceedingly scarce. It was a question of being able to get stock for the retailer and not a question of price. Taking the unfavorable weather into consideration, the Easter trade this year was one of the best on record, and everyone seems to be more than satisfied with the amount of business that was done. Stock is more plentiful this week, but is in good demand, and while there is plenty to go around, there is no great surplus to speak of.

NOTES.

H. M. Burt, of Jackson, Mich., was here April 17 buying stock for his Easter trade, which was so brisk that a second trip to this market was necessary in order to avoid disappointing his customers. He featured pot lilies extensively and had no trouble in disposing of all he had to offer at $1 per flower.

Johann A. Ebbers will sail May 24 for Shanghai, on the Empress of Russia. He will visit several of the leading cities in the east between now and that date. His many friends here wish him a pleasant voyage and a speedy return.

Victor Emanuel, president and treasurer of the National Flower Decorating Co., Inc., New York, called on the wholesale trade here last week. He reported business very good on his entire trip.

A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s sales for Easter were greater than those of 1918 and the only stock left when the rush was over was a few pots of snapdragons that reached the market late Saturday.

Eddie O'Neill, formerly with the Ernst Wienhoefer Co., has been granted an honorable discharge from the navy, and is expected here from the east this week.

Zeeh & Mann had a wonderful Easter business. April 17 was the biggest day in the history of their firm. Their total sales for the first three days of the last week were larger than those of the best week they ever experienced. The two last days of the week were also record breakers. Allie Zeeh was on the job at the store all week and in the evenings was at Damm Bros.' greenhouses, superintending the distribution of the pot lilies that he had sold. On April 20, he removed Mrs. Zeeh from the Chicago Union hospital to her home, where she is rapidly recovering from an operation for appendicitis.

Everyone in the trade should subscribe for their Victory bonds as early as possible, so as to reach the quota in double quick time. All the local florists had such a record Easter trade that no trouble should be experienced in putting the trade's amount over the top.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association had a vase of yellow chrysanthemums on display one day last week. The Easter demand at the establishment was very good and the result was a complete cleanup in everything.

A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s sales so far for April are ahead of those of the same month of last year. The Easter demand at this establishment was heavy and exceeded all expectations.

The A. L. Randall Co. received a shipment of cut lilies from Canada April 19, which sold as fast as they were unpacked, owing to the splendid condition in which they arrived.

Wietor Bros. cleaned up early for Easter in both roses and carnations and could have sold more if they were available. They had a splendid cut of Killarney for this occasion.

J. A. Budlong Co. enjoyed a big Easter business with a heavy demand for roses which it handled in quantity. Sweet peas were a splendid seller and cleaned up completely early.

Kennieott Bros. Co. disposed of a large quantity of lilac for Easter which came in handy for the local retailers, owing to the great scarcity of other stock.

Bernard Sherman, proprietor of the North Shore Floral Co., reports his Easter business as very satisfactory with a strong demand for all items.

The Briggs Floral Co. had more business than it could handle for Easter and the proprietors are more than satisfied with the results.

Peter Reinberg's Easter sales show a great increase over those of 1918 with a strong demand for roses and carnations.

Erne & Co. were more than busy all through the Easter week and everything offered here cleaned up quickly.

Sister Paschales of the Angel Guardian Orphan Asylum has been on the sick list for some time.

E. F. Winterson, Sr., is vice-president of the Victory Loan committee in the 13th ward.

The Easter display at Garfield Park conservatories is well worth a visit.

Visitors: Herbert Smith, Danville; Mrs. Holt and J. S. Wilson, Jr., Des Moines, Ia.

PERU, ILL.—The Peru Floral Shop has been opened under the management of Miss Emma Broz.

NILES, O.—Fire of an unknown origin, which started in the boiler house at the range of John Dunstan, caused damage estimated at $1,500, partly covered by insurance.

EASTER SUPPLY INSUFFICIENT.

Easter business was very good, everything cleaned up readily, and much more stock than was available, could have been used. Prices were at top. The plant growers fared well. The retail stores cleaned up their cut flowers readily and practically all of their plants. The supply of roses was fair, but it fell far short of the demand. The same applies to carnations. Easter lily receipts were equal to barely 50 per cent of the demand for this flower. Both rubrums and callas sold readily. Receipts in tulips, hyacinths and daffodils were rather meager and some showed the effects of holding. Sweet peas were in good supply and proved good property. Orchids ran short of needs. Other offerings were snapdragons, calendulas, forget-me-nots, pansies, wallflowers and migronette.

NOTES.

Roy Eek and his two brothers, who formerly conducted a florist establishment and which was closed when they entered the United States service, will open a flower store at 1223 Vine street.

C. E. Critchell cleaned up in fine shape for Easter. He is now busy getting in supplies for Mother's day and Memorial day business.

E. C. Gillette had an excellent lot of roses for Easter. They cleaned up quickly.

William Mayhall has completed his duty as a "fire-laddie" with the home guards.

Visitors: G. A. Beekmann, Middletown, O., and Julius Dilloff, New York, N. Y.

MUNCIE, IND.—Adam Shideler will open a flower store at 106 East Main street.

EASTER TRADE BEST EVER KNOWN.

The Easter of 1919 can go on record as the best to date, for in all lines, including cut flowers and flowering plants, the demand by far exceeded the supply. This can directly be traced to the most unfavorable weather conditions, which prevailed from last Sunday until Thursday night, for it rained and was cool all that time. This was a severe setback, especially for the growers, who would have had a good deal more stock with favorable conditions. The best supplied line was roses, which commanded eight to 15 cents. Exceedingly short was the cut of carnations; still, the price of six to eight cents was not abnormal. More sweet peas could have been moved at $1 to $2.50. Callas shared honors with the Easter favorite, bringing $3 to $3.50 a dozen cut blooms. There was a fair cut of mignonette, snapdragons, Spanish iris, single daffodils, tulips and swainsona. All disappeared in the rush. In pot plants, Easter lilies were very scarce, while the hydrangea became a second favorite. Ramblers, spiræas, cinerarias and the various kinds of bulbous stock in pots, boxes and made up hampers, were all cleaned up early at good figures. The weather on Easter day could not have been more favorable if it had been made to order, bringing a good lot of business, especially corsage bouquets. We have heard of at least two local retailers who sold quite a few Easter lily plants in bud, minus the open flower, and, considering the advanced price of one hundred per cent over last year, it goes to show that some people want what they want, under all circumstances.

NOTE.

April 15, the daily papers announced the death of P. J. Deuster, age 78 years. Mr. Deuster built the first large range of glass on the Blue Mound road, consisting of 21 long spans, to the south houses opposite to the Calvary cemetery, about 20 years ago. After operating the range for some time without financial results, it was taken over by the C. C. Pollworth Co., until it had seen its best days. The funeral was held April 19, from the residence, on Blue Mound road, to Calvary cemetery.

BIGGEST EASTER ON RECORD.

Had it not been for the steady downpour of the first three days of Easter week, there is no telling what volume of business would have been piled up by local florists. As it was, the last three days were splendid with bright, clear weather, and shoppers crowded all the flower stores of the city from morning till closing time, so that the business transacted this year was the best the trade in this vicinity has ever experienced. This is remarkable when all conditions are considered, with the scarcity of the ever popular lilies, azaleas and other plants that usually have a big sale at this time. Market conditions on the whole were not any too favorable, especially for those retailers who, when it rained in the early part of the week, cancelled some of their previous orders. When the sun came out and they sought to get sufficient stock to fill the unprecedented demand, they often found that it had been gobbled up by a more courageous and far-sighted florist. There were very few lilies and azaleas on display and these were bought up early in the week. However, the public was not slow to switch to other plants, and almost any kind, provided it was healthy and well sized. The big-flowered hydrangeas were the most popular and were used extensively by florists in various basket effects. There was a great demand for hyacinths, with not enough to go around. Tulips were on the market in great quantities and were quite popular, Darwins leading in favor. They retailed for from $1 to $5. Rambler roses were liked and brought $2 to $10; Magna Charta roses sold well at from $2 to $15. Daffodils were more in demand than ever before and sold for higher prices than usual, bringing from $1 to $6. Genistas and cinerarias were not quite so plentiful and sold out. There were very few spiræas on the market. Cut flowers were in great demand the latter part of the week for corsages and greetings and were just about equal to the demand. This was somewhat decreased by the rain on Sunday. Carnations cleaned up completely at from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Roses were quite plentiful and the quality was fair. The better grades at from $4 to $8, enjoyed a lively sale. Snapdragons were of splendid quality and sold for from $3 to $5. Violets were quite scarce, as were narcissi. Sweet peas were soon snapped up at from 50 cents to $1 per bunch. Jonquils sold for $1 to $1.50. Telegraph orders played a big part in this year's Easter trade and show how publicity and advertising are slowly but surely bringing very profitable results. All in all, this was a most profitable Easter, and those florists who had the courage to charge adequate prices, found that it is just as easy to sell their product at a price that allows a just profit, as it is to sell them at a price that gives them a living and nothing more.

EASTER TRADE SHOWS 25 PER CENT GAIN.

The market was quite active all of last week, with a good supply of flowers of all kinds. The latter part of the week roses shortened up remarkably and the supply for Easter was far from being anyway near ample. Other stock of all kinds was equal to the demand. The cut of sweet peas was enormous. By Saturday noon, however, every one was cleaned up on orders and at good prices. Sunday's cut also was cleaned up before it could be laid on the counters. Callas were a bit short of demand. Easter lilies were in fair supply, but did not sell fast on account of the high prices, but before Sunday morning they also cleaned up. Greens of all kinds were plentiful. The huckleberry used in place of smilax for decorations was fair, but very soft with no keeping qualities. A canvass of the retailers shows this Easter to have been the biggest ever experienced. Pot plants were scarce and most anything with a bloom sold. Cut flowers had a bigger demand than ever before, the leader being sweet peas. The Easter novelties did not sell as well as expected. The buying public was somewhat disappointed in not being able to get pot lilies, but nevertheless in most every case bought something else.

NOTES.

About every other lady on the street on Easter seemed to be wearing a corsage bouquet. The predominating flower was sweet peas. This goes to prove again that publicity is the thing to make the public buy. With a continuation of the proper publicity, the business ought to increase by leaps and bounds. From all reports it seems this Easter showed a general increase of about 25 per cent over last year.

EASTER BUSINESS BETTER THAN EVER.

The story of the Easter business last week can be briefly told. It was the best in all respects ever experienced here. Growers, wholesalers and retailers all agree that the call for flowers and flowering plants of all kinds available was incessant throughout the week, and the prices realized were uniformly higher than ever before. The weather was very unfavorable for the cut flower growers the week previous, and the first three days of Easter week it rained almost constantly, and this condition worked apprehension in the minds of the retailers, who during those days, made fewer sales than anticipated, but the balance of the week it cleared, and Saturday was an ideal shopping day, and the stores were thronged with eager buyers. Plants of all kind were popular and may be said to have had the advantage over the cut flowers, the stock of which was limited. Rambler roses in several varieties, and those of the baby type, were perhaps the leaders in the higher priced plants, closely followed in popularity by hydrangeas. There were many spireas to be seen in the stores, and they too sold well, better than when they were more plentiful in former years. Bulbous pot plants were fine, and the cold weather was favorable to their maintenance in good condition throughout the week. These were in the largest sizes and in the usual varieties, though Murillo was easily the leader of them and some really elegant stock to be seen maintained the popularity of this class of plants to a high degree. Marguerite plants in many sizes were prominent in most of the stores, and even geraniums were found in many places, and these found ready sale at usually 50 cents each in four-inch pots. Some pans of these containing three or four plants were in stock and regarded as attractive gifts that sold well. A few rhododendrons and azaleas completed the list, all of which sold readily as the depleted stores at the closing hours Saturday night proved. In cut flowers, roses were very scarce and carnations, sweet peas, bulbous stock, and a limited quantity of snapdragons and some lilies were relied upon to fill cut flower orders. Violets of suspicious age were, with sweet peas and a limited supply of Ward and other small rose buds, used to fill the great demand for corsages, which seemed more popular than ever. Unquestionably the high prices that prevailed on many items in the cut flower list, and on all flowering plants, deterred many former buyers from patronizing the flower shops. Notwithstanding this fact, others took their places and braved the inevitable and indulged as freely as ever, and the recipients of the many Easter gifts this year sent out from the flower shops, had a greater appreciation of them than ever before, for nothing seems better understood by the public than the fact that flowers now are sharing with other commodities a necessary advance in price.

LITTLE COMPLAINT ON HIGH PRICES.

The Monday morning's installment of cut flowers was very good, considering the tremendous strain on the growers, that took everything that looked at all salable for late Saturday and on Sunday morning. This morning's shipments showed a fair amount of roses, cut a bit tight but salable. Some very fine colored Russells were seen. There were carnations, and quite a lot of sweet peas, some with long stems, snapdragons, calendulas, quite a few good callas and Easter lilies. Prices were about 25 per cent less than for the holiday, the top figure for carnations being 8 cents. The general consensus of opinion in all branches of the trade is that it was a great Easter, very much better than was expected by many. All are glad and expressed great relief that it is over and resulted so satisfactorily. The uncertainty as to whether the people would pay the advanced prices was, as at Christmas, solved by the first few sales made. There were some protests as is natural and ever present at all times, but in the main the retail prices, most of them 100 per cent over those of a year ago, were accepted as a matter of course and cheerfully paid. Reports of various members of the trade, wholesale, retail, and growers, are as follows:

The Leo Niessen Co.—“We moved an immense amount of stock, in some lines. The demand was greater than we could supply. We did our best to please our customers, and have received a number of congratulatory telegrams. The volume of business was greater than ever before.”

The S. S. Pennock Co. found it very hard to satisfy its regular trade. There were not flowers enough for anything like the demand, although the firm handled very large quantities of roses, carnations and sweet peas. A good supply of lily of the valley and cattleyas were features.

The Jos. Heacock Co. said: “The warm weather of the week before, followed by the cold rains of last week, upset all our Easter calculations. We were shy of almost everything, but did the best we could for our customers. We could have sold three times as much as we had.”

The retail stores had a wonderful Easter. At J. J. Habermehl's Sons, the report was: “The best Easter we have ever had, in every respect; almost doubled our business. Our green-houses never turned out better stock. We had a great demand for cut flowers and corsages.”

A splendid demand, but not near enough stock, even at the increased prices, was the situation with Edward Feld. Mothers' day following so close, and then Memorial day, three important holidays almost within a month, will make this period a record breaker for the year.

“An unusual Easter. We paid more for our stock this year, than we sold it for last Easter, but we sold it all and received our usual percentage of profit. Some complained as they always do, but in the main we had little trouble. It turned out all right.”

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange handled 25,000 lily of the valley. Roses and sweet peas figured largely. Manager Duetscher said it was a crackerjack Easter, much the largest they had ever experienced.

Pennock Bros. closed their doors on Friday and Saturday at 6 p. m. Their large stock of plants and baskets was not sufficient for the demand. Cut flowers were also sold in large quantities. Elegant corsages were a feature.

The London Flower Shop had much the largest business in their experience, both in plants and cut flowers. People seemed to expect to have to pay more, and there was little trouble on this score.

Charles H. Grakelow reported: "A very busy week; could have sold much more stock. People paid the higher prices and wanted more. I handled a large number of F. T. D. orders."

"Big, very big," was the report of Nelson C. Geiger, who handled very few plants for want of room, but pushed cut flowers to the limit. He had a very satisfactory Easter.

John C. Gracey said: "A wonderful demand. We could not get enough in almost every line of plants, and cut flowers were the same way. High prices were no barrier."

The H. H. Battles store and Century Flower Shop never had a better Easter. The demand was phenomenal and people did not appear to mind the increased prices.

A. M. Campbell reports that 90 per cent of his lily crop made the holiday, and all were sold. Larkspurs and Emperor daffodils were also quantity stocks.

Elmer W. Goehring never handled so many high priced plants and had a very satisfactory Easter.

NOTE.

Robert Miller, of the Miller Floral Company, Salt Lake City, spent a few days in this city the past week. He had been making a trip through the east, visiting all the large cities, and paid growers in this vicinity the compliment of having much the best stock of Easter pot plants. He spoke very enthusiastically of the future of the business, particularly in the west. F. A. Zenke was another very interesting visitor. Mr. Zenke represents the Excell Laboratories of Chicago, makers of fertilizers, fungicides; and insecticides. He is well up on all the fungi, diseases, and insects that are injurious to plant life.
