Union Church Men's Club Open a New Season

The first monthly supper and business meetings of the season of the men's club of Union church, East Braintree and Weymouth, was held Wednesday evening. A supper of macaroni and cheese, salads, beef loaf, rolls, coffee, ice-cream, cookies, was served at 6.30, the committee being Frank P. Lord, chairman, assisted by Charles G. Jordan, Herbert Poore, Edward W. Hunt, Harry South, C. Clarence Temple, Grant Chase and Edgar Bolles.

After supper, brief talks were given by Ernest A. Thomas of Marshfield Hills on "The Potential Americanism Toward America", and by Rev. Caleb Justice, pastor of the church; Edward W. Hunt, ex-Secretary of Weymouth; Selectman Avery of Braintree; A. P. Abbott and Herbert W. Poore, followed by business meeting. Important matters and plans were discussed.

President Herbert Walsh spoke briefly on the year's work. Plans were made for an old folks concert some time in October; a drive for members, and the fitting up of rooms for girls and boys. A community-house for Braintree and Weymouth residents was discussed. Arrangements were made for the Forum meeting Sunday Oct. 31; also for the house to house canvass to get the people in this vicinity to attend the rally-day service, which the five Protestant churches hold next Sunday.

Following the business an enjoyable social time was enjoyed, with community singing until a late hour.

Accident on Randolph Street

A serious accident took place on Randolph street near the Holbrook line on Saturday, when the auto truck of Francis W. Robinson swerved, struck a stone wall and turned turtle. Mr. Robinson belongs in Braintree and was returning from a job at Holbrook, accompanied by Joseph D. Sewell, also of Braintree. Shortly before the accident two women asked a ride and was among the injured. Robinson's chest was crushed and he has two fractured ribs. Sewell was cut in the abdomen and leg. Mrs. Lucy DeAngelis of South Weymouth had a fractured rib and other injuries, and Miss Vivian Richmond of East Weymouth had a collar bone fractured and other injuries. All are reported as improving.

Seventy-five members from Wilder lodge and Abigail Adams Rebekah lodge went into the Odd Fellows parade at Boston Wednesday.

—Much interest is being manifested in the coming benefit for Combination 5, which is to be held at the New Orpheum. The public will have an opportunity to witness the Weymouth Review at this time. The proceeds are to be used to purchase a victrola for the company.

WOMAN LAWYER

In the supreme judicial court about 125 persons were admitted to the bar Friday, Sept. 24, at 9.30, one of the number being Miss Margaret Dondero, a recent graduate of the Portia Law school of Boston. This gives Miss Dondero the distinction of being Weymouth's first woman lawyer. She is the daughter of Mrs. Albert Dondero of 15 Curtis avenue, and was born in this town, where she received her education. Besides being a graduate of the Portia Law school she had the honor of receiving a summa cum laude degree, which signifies an average of 95 percent for the four years course of study, being one of two graduates to be so rewarded. Also graduated from Bryant & Stratton's Business college Miss Dondero has been advanced to the position of head-bookkeeper at the Boston Gear Works at Norfolk Downs, where she is employed. She is to start practicing law immediately and has the best wishes of her friends in her new profession.

LOSS WAS SMALL

That was rather a sensational story which Boston dailies printed relative to the fire Sunday evening at the plant of John Coffin & Co., near the junction of Washington and Middle streets. Instead of a loss of $20,000, the loss was nearer $1000. The alarm from Box 46 at 8.30 was for the burning of two sheds about 40x10. District Chief Pratt did well to pull in a general alarm, as the plant comprises several buildings. The brilliant illumination attracted many people. The company desires to correct the report that the goods manufactured are highly inflammable; also that the buildings are wet down twice a day.

ODD FELLOWS WEEK

Both Crescent and Wilder lodges of Weymouth were largely represented on Wednesday in the Odd Fellows parade in Boston. They were part of the South Shore division, George H. Downing, chief marshal; which included the lodges at Quincy, Wollaston, Braintree, Hingham and Cohasset as well as Weymouth. Many attended the other events of the week, including the exemplifications of the degrees and the fireworks.

WEYMOUTH POST

The next regular meeting of Weymouth Post, No. 79, American Legion, will be held on Monday evening, Oct. 4, at G. A. R. hall, East Weymouth at 8 o'clock. All members should be present at this meeting, as business of vital importance will be transacted.

Without Power Today

The Gazette and Transcript needs electric power to operate its linotype machines and presses, but because of the storm of yesterday and last night, we had no power this morning. This will probably cause delay in the delivery of the papers. We were also unable to put in type considerable news.

Portable Schoolhouse

Considerable surprise is expressed at North Weymouth that the Brooks Skinner Co. did not obtain the contract for the new portable schoolhouse at North Weymouth, as they are a North Weymouth firm which has erected many portable schoolhouses in different places and are employing many Weymouth men. It is said the Brooks Skinner Co. bid was lower, that their construction is heavier, that they use good lumber, etc. The contract has been awarded to the Hudson Portable House Company, which recently erected the schoolhouse on Quincy avenue East Braintree.

Chairman E. E. Leonard of the School Committee when interviewed by the Gazette claimed that Hudson building is better in every way, and more generally used.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Council of League of Nations Has Stopped One War and Headed Off Another.

ITS FRIENDS ARE ELATED

Opponents of Covenant Also Find an Argument for a Lodge Reservation— Poles and Russians Talk Peace While Latter Lose Battles— Guerrilla Warfare in Ireland.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Believers in the League of Nations are much elated by the results of the ninth session of the league council which ended in Paris early in the week. By diplomatic presentation of fact and argument, the council induced four nations, which were on the verge of engaging in two wars, to agree to peaceful settlement of their differences. In one of the cases, indeed, hostilities already had broken out. This was the case of Poland and Lithuania. These two nations consented to suspend hostilities immediately pending a settlement of their dispute which both sides will accept. In this settlement the league council will be represented by Count Quinones de Leon, Spanish ambassador to France, and Baron Keishiro Matsui, Japanese vice foreign minister. When the council meets in October, it is expected, at least a tentative decision will be ready for its approval.

The council had almost given up hope of arranging this settlement when, on the last day of the session, Ignace Paderewski, head of the Polish delegation, suddenly arose and in a dramatic speech declared his country was eager for peace with Lithuania and believed the latter nation also desired peace. M. Woldemar and other Lithuanian delegates arose, strode across the room and warmly shook hands with the Poles, while the room rang with cheers. Woldemar declared his confidence in the fairness of the council and said he would abide by its decision.

Sweden's dispute with Finland over possession of the Aland islands was the other matter which it was believed was put in a fair way to be decided without recourse to arms. The Finns offered a reservation which created some doubt at first, but this, it appeared, was made for technical reasons and would not offer any difficulty which could not be surmounted. Neither nation, it was pointed out by league officials, was legally bound to accept the decision of the league, but both are morally obligated to do so, and if a settlement can be offered that is backed by public opinion, the governments cannot well refuse to concur. A commission was appointed to inquire into the merits of the dispute.

Opponents of the league found in this Aland islands case fresh argument to support their belief that the league covenant, as it stands, gives the council the chance to do just what the supporters of the league reservations feared—to interfere in domestic questions. They point out that Finland contended that the Aland island dispute is a Finnish domestic, not an international, question and that the league had no jurisdiction thereof. The league council rejected the Finnish contention, pronounced the question international and appointed the commission.

There is in the covenant, say the objectors, no guarantee that the council would not pronounce the present controversy between Japan and the United States over immigration an international question subject to its jurisdiction; and if Japan should submit the dispute to the league, as is suggested in that country, the United States would be in an awkward if not a dangerous position. One of the league reservations, it will be remembered, specifically declared that American immigration and other domestic questions should be exempt from the jurisdiction of the league.

Japanese leaders have almost ceased to hope for a settlement of the immigration dispute while the present administration is in power, and their chances for favorable action under the next administration are slim. Following up the declarations made by Senator Harding, Governor Cox has been telling the Pacific coast people that he believes they are right in wishing to exclude the Japanese. It seems certain that the next administration, whether Republican or Democratic, will be pressed to terminate the present treaty with Japan, so that exclusion may be legal. With California's apparent determination to adopt additional restrictive legislation, the race question on the coast becomes more serious daily; but wise and well informed persons, in both America and Japan, have little fear that it will result in war.

In accordance with an agreement made last July between Japan and Asiatic Russia, the Japanese war office has evacuated Khabarovsk and the only Japanese garrisons left in Siberia are at Vladivostok and along the Usuri railway. Asiatic Russia, it is said, has agreed to preserve the peace, to maintain friendly relations with Japan and to abolish communism.

The Polish-Russian peace conference opened in Riga, but it was surrounded by an atmosphere of gloom and the prediction was made freely that the results will be nil. Each side distrusts the other, and on certain questions it seems impossible for them to get together. One of these is Ukraine, which the Reds assert is already self-determined in favor of soviet rule. The Ukrainians who follow Petlura deny this and say their soviet rulers are foreigners. They have sent representatives to the Riga meet, but these are not admitted by the Reds. Disarmament by both Poland and Russia was declared by Adolph Joffe, head of the red delegation, to be the only guarantee of stable peace.

Military operations against the soviet forces went right along, and their enemies scored several decided victories. The united Polish-Ukrainian front east of Lemberg was moving forward at the rate of fifteen miles a day and had reached Rovno and Kamenets Podolsk, and the Ukrainian cavalry had occupied the latter important city. In the Grodno region the soviet government claimed to have defeated the Poles and to have taken a number of towns. But the Moscow war reports have been almost uniformly false since the collapse of the invasion of Poland.

Following the plan which was outlined last week, General Wrangel has been pushing his way northward along the Dnieper river and, at last reports, after several smashing victories, he had captured Alexandrovsk, together with about 10,000 prisoners, five armored trains, many guns and large stores of supplies.

Turkish nationalists in southern Asia Minor have been displaying renewed activity and dispatches from Constantinople say they are besieging the French in Adana, bombarding Tarsus and making frequent attacks on Mersina. These Turks are assisted by disaffected Arabs and also by German officers who have been stranded in the country since the armistice. These latter are handling the artillery. The French at Adana and Tarsus have got supplies in and are prepared for a winter's siege. The Armenian city of Hadjin has sent out word that it is facing starvation and massacre and must have help.

The immediate situation in Ireland has resolved itself into a guerrilla war of the most vicious description, which so far the British authorities have not been able to control. The Sinn Feiners ambush and slay the police, and the police in reprisal kill the Sinn Feiners like rats and ravage their towns. The most startling of these occurrences was the raid last week on Balbriggan, the center of the weaving industry of south Ireland. Inspector Burke of the British police in Ireland was shot down as he was leaving a restaurant, and his brother was badly wounded. When the news reached Germantown, where the police were stationed, ten trucks full of them started for Balbriggan. There they first set fire to the public houses and a large number of private homes from which they drove the people, and then burned to the ground some of the largest hosiery mills in Ireland, belonging to an English firm. They wound up the raid by murdering a barber and a dairyman, both Sinn Feiners. Similar raids were made last week on other Irish towns where the police had been enraged by the killing or wounding of their comrades. In County Clare a military truck in which were a number of police was ambushed by armed men and in the ensuing fight four of the officers were killed. The police involved in the Balbriggan incident were not members of the Royal Irish constabulary, but recruits for that force who, from their uniforms, are known as "black and tans." In the last two weeks more than twenty policemen and soldiers and a score of Sinn Feiners have been killed in Ireland, and large numbers on both sides have been wounded.

Oswald Garrison Villard, who used to be notoriously pro-German and anti-British, has formed a committee of 100 Americans to investigate and report publicly on conditions in Ireland, with especial reference to atrocities. Public hearings will be held in Washington by a commission of the committee. Several senators and governors have agreed to serve on the committee, all the members of which are said to be prominent citizens.

So far as the public has been permitted to know, little progress has been made toward discovering and apprehending the perpetrators of the Wall street bomb outrage. It has been definitely established, however, that the blast was caused by the explosion of a huge TNT bomb with a time device, and there is no doubt the affair was arranged by Reds. Many arrests have been made, but it is not known that the guilty persons are in custody. Since the New York explosion a good many other cities have received warnings that certain public buildings were to be blown up. A good guess is that the outrage was the work of radical leaders who wished by this demonstration to keep up the revolutionary spirit of their recruits.

The five Socialists who were expelled from the New York legislature some time ago, and who were re-elected recently, attempted to take their seats. Three of them were again ousted, and the others resigned in protest. The action of the majority in the assembly was opposed by Theodore Roosevelt and is characterized by Charles E. Hughes "incredible folly and flagrant disregard of the fundamental principles of American institutions." Owing to certain complications this time, the case may be taken into the courts.

The Kenyon committee of the senate resumed in Washington its investigation of campaign funds, and subpoenaed several bureau chiefs in the endeavor to learn to what extent federal agencies are being employed to disseminate election propaganda for Cox. The Republicans assert the publications of the bureaus of education, war, and navy have been used this way. James W. Gerard, chairman of the Democratic finance committee, told the committee he had collected only $128,000 to date and that he would be happy if he got a million; also that no limit was put on individual contributions. William Boyce Thompson, chairman of the Republican ways and means committee, told the committee the Cox charges were "all bunk," and aroused Senator Reed by asserting that Mr. Cox "is no stranger to Wall street." Pinned down, he said he implied nothing sinister.

Devotees of the national sport are wrought up over another inquiry that began last week. This is an investigation, by a grand jury at Chicago, into baseball gambling and it gains added interest because it promises to uncover crooked work by players in the world's series last fall between the Chicago White Sox and the Cincinnati National league team. Comment, if any is needed, must be deferred since at this writing the inquiry is only getting fairly started.

JACK PULLS OUT MIRED MACHINE

It Often Happens That Automoblist Gets His Car Into Deep Mud Hole.

IMPLEMENT VERY EFFECTIVE

In Case Auto Is Not Too Firmly Imbedded or Stalled It Can Be Brought to Solid Ground Without Much Difficulty.

Sometimes the automobilist accidentally gets his car in such a position in a mud hole, over a bank, or in a similar predicament, that the power of the car has no effect in helping itself out. In that case, where the car is not too firmly imbedded or stalled, the wheel-jack can be brought to the rescue. A tree or post and some rope are also required.

Loop Rope Around Tree.
Lash the rope to the necessary axle and loop it loosely about the tree or post. Then carry it back to the car and lash the remaining end to the same axle.

Now take the jack and shorten it up as much as possible and set it between the tree and the ropes, away from the car.

If too much slack occurs, take it up by retying one end of the rope on the axle.

Block the Wheels.

When in the proper position, extend the jack as far as it will go. If this has caused the car to move, block the wheels. If not, compress the jack again and take up any resulting slack in the rope.

Repeat this operation as frequently as necessary, blocking the car each time so it will not return to its old position. In time it can be pulled out to the road again.

Place jack as low down on tree as possible so leverage of pulling will not tend to pull the tree itself.—Popular Science Monthly.

TAKE RATTLES OUT OF HOOD

Noise May Be Silenced by Drilling Series of Holes in Band and Tying With Leather.

A hood that has a tendency to rattle with the vibration of the motor may be silenced by drilling a series of holes in the band of metal on which the hood rests and threading a strip of leather through the holes. In this way the hood rests on leather instead of metal, so that it cannot make a noise.

ARRANGING TOOLS IN GARAGE

Splendid Idea to Give Device a Number and Place in Corresponding Number in Rack.

An admirable idea in the arrangement of tools in the home garage is to give each tool a number, which is painted on it. The same number is painted on the walls or racks in the place where the tool belongs. In this way it is a simple matter to return each tool to its proper place, so that it is ready when it is next needed.

TIRE TREAD DESIGN IS VERY IMPORTANT

Has Much to Do With Ease of Steering a Car.

Especially So on Large Machines Where Contact With Road Surface Is Broad—Two Styles of Tires Complicates Matters.

The tread design of an automobile tire may be a matter of small consequence to the driver of a small car, but every driver of a heavy car knows that the tread configuration has a good deal to do with the ease with which the car may be steered.

On the smaller cars the area of the tread that is in contact with the road surface is so small that an improper design may cause little trouble. But when a heavy car settles down on its tires, the driver finds himself called on for the exercise of constant attention and effort to keep the car from swerving off the road, if the tread design is improper type.

One point on which all motorists agree is that the tires on the rear wheels should be of a good non-skid pattern and that the front tires should have a tread design that will keep them running ahead in a straight line with a minimum of steering effort on the part of the driver.

The ideal tire tread is one that can be used with equally good results on any wheel, either front or back. Given such a tire a motorist need carry only one spare, and his car is always evenly balanced, no matter what tire changes he makes. But if one style tread is used on the front wheels and another on the rear, the motorist will usually carry two spares, one of each type. Having two types furnishes a further complication when it is desired to shift partly-worn tires from the hardworking rear wheels to the front wheels, in order to get a few thousand miles more wear out of them before they go to the scrap heap. The non-skids used on the rear may not be suited for front wheel purposes.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Taxicabs in Paris are known for their speed and erratic courses.

It is a known fact that next to people, dogs are "craziest" about motor-car riding.

The increase in passenger automobile production last year was 78.9 per cent over 1918.

On a long, steady drive the fuel consumption may be cut down enormously by a careful use of the accelerator.

Almost every car owner today knows that oil or grease is very bad for rubber, acting as a solvent and destroying the material.

In California the paying of a bonus by automobile dealers to chauffeurs (to influence the sale of cars or supplies) is strictly forbidden.

Drivers of racing cars are known for their attention to detail and one of the apparently minor items looked after is the balance of the wire wheels.

If you're going to make a long tour this summer don't wait until the last minute to begin getting things ready. Overhaul your car thoroughly before you start.

Spark plug porcelain may be freed of all carbonaceous or other foreign matter by soaking them in a solution of carbon disulphide, obtainable at any drug store.

"Makes Cooking Easy"

You Can't Help Liking This Range

The GOLD MEDAL GLENWOOD is in reality a combination range consisting of two complete ranges using different fuels, with neither one interfering in any manner with the other.

Coal supplies the fuel for one, and gas for the other. So far as the use of these two fuels is concerned, it is exactly as though you had a coal range and a gas range. The difference is that they occupy the same floor space instead of being two separate ranges in two different parts of the kitchen.

You may use the coal and the gas at the same time, or either one without the other. You have gas in warm weather and coal in cold weather. But at any time you wish to do more baking or more cooking, you have the advantage of using both fuels and both ovens at the same time.

It responds to your cooking art so quickly and efficiently, you will find that cooking is one of the greatest pleasures in your home.

Call and See Them and you will understand at once why a Glenwood Range "Makes Cooking Easy"

Remember the Small Things.

It is easy to talk glibly of serving humanity and to forget to pass the salt to the man who sits next us at table, to think of placing our lives at a world's disposal and neglect the small attentions which mean so much to our own home.—Henry Sloane Coffin.

Precursor of the Piano.

The harpsichord, comparatively modern, represented an attempt to construct a horizontal harp that was played upon by means of oblong wooden keys called "jacks." Our piano is a modified and improved harpsichord, invented in 1711 by Bartolomeo Cristofalo of Padua.

Drink Water When Tired.

Dr. Eliza B. Mosher of Brooklyn urged the members of the Women's Medical society of New York state to drink a glass of water at 10 a. m. and others at 3, 4 and 5 p. m. This, she told them, would dilute the products of fatigue which were entering the blood and causing that tired feeling.

QUINCY TRUST COMPANY

One of the most interesting announcements in Quincy business circles in years was made, when it was announced that the entire capital stock of the Quincy Trust Company had passed into the hands of the local stockholders and directors of the bank. The negotiation for the deal has been going on for several months and was brought to a successful conclusion yesterday when President Herbert E. Curtis secured the stock-certificates from the Boston interests, headed by Edwin P. McKnight, former president of the State Senate, and a well known Boston banker.

For the past several months there has been a growing sentiment that the "political control" of Boston banks exercised by McKnight and his associates was not consistent with the desires of the other stockholders in the Quincy Trust Company. With this idea in mind, and to insure the fact that the Quincy Trust Company would be a purely local institution, the local stockholders started a movement to take over the control of the bank. This has been accomplished and from now on, the entire policy of the Quincy Trust Company will be controlled by men in Quincy, or in its immediate vicinity.

The list of stockholders on the Trust Company has been announced as follows:

George L. Barnes, Joseph Bishop, Chester I. Campbell, William J. Connell, Samuel H. Couch, Herbert E. Curtis, Edward J. Fegan, John Curtis, Robert E. Foy, John J. Gallagher, Charles L. Gilliat, Fred L. Zoller, Arthur L. Hayden, John Horrihan, George H. Lowe Jr., William B. Nichols, William H. North, Alfred H. Rennie, James Robbie, Edward J. Sandberg, Edward H. Sears, George W. Stone, J. S. Swingle and Chester E. Tenney.

These men are well known in Quincy, and are either local men, or residents of the surrounding towns. These men are in entire control of the institution and Herbert E. Curtis, the president, is a well known figure in local commercial and social circles.

The recent report of the examination of the company by the State Bank Examiner's office showed over $3,000,000 in deposits. When it is remembered that the bank was opened for business on Dec. 15, 1915, and is not yet five years old, this volume of business is indeed remarkable. There are over 6000 depositors in the Savings Department, and their deposits total over $1,650,000. These funds are invested in securities recommended by the state banking officials.

The home paper deserves well of the Weymouth people.—ADVERTISE.

"A B C" OF LONDON POST NO. 1 OF THE AMERICAN LEGION

R. L. BLAND, Post Finance Officer. L. E. ANDERSON, Post Commander. W. H. A. COLEMAN, Post Adjutant.

Listing among its members a former United States army nurse who holds decorations for valor from Great Britain, France and Belgium, the London post of the American Legion is actively engaged in cementing the friendship between the two English-speaking countries. The post, which has 110 members draws its personnel from the American embassy, American consulates, the U. S. Shipping Board, American Relief Administration, U. S. Army Liquidation Commission, Graves Registration Service and from a host of professions and businesses. In it are lawyers, chemists, journalists, engineers, salesmen, valets and chauffeurs, all joining in the activities of the first unit of the American Legion to be established in Europe.

Miss Alice Emerson Findley is the woman member of the post. She joined the British nursing corps shortly after war was declared in 1914, and served in London, Paris and at the front. As an American army nurse she worked through two offensives under heavy shell fire.

The London post received its charter from the American Legion on November 25, 1919. Previous to that date it had been listed as a unit of the American Legion of Europe, an organization which replaced the American War Veterans' association, which was formed in September, 1919.

L. E. Anderson is post commander, W. H. A. Coleman, post adjutant, and R. L. Bland, post finance officer. The work of decorating the 2,500 American graves in England and Ireland on Memorial day was directed by Don A. Smith of the London post.

AIM IS TO BE OF SERVICE

Theodore Roosevelt Sums Up Principles of Legion Before Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

"We are service men and service women. That is our aim—to be of service to this country."

With those words Theodore Roosevelt, son of the late ex-President Roosevelt, summed up his speech on the aims and principles of the American Legion, delivered before the Chamber of Commerce of Cleveland, Ohio, last night. He declared, among other things, he declared, were upon in organizing the Legion.

"The Legion should be a purely service organization with absolutely no distinction of rank between general and private, admiral and gub."

That the Legion must be non-partisan and must concern itself with policies, not politics.

That there must be no distinction drawn between branches of service, between those who served overseas and those who waited at home.

"The American Legion is going to be the biggest stabilizing influence in America, in these disturbed times," he said. He cited a letter from his father, written in 1918, in which the former president predicted that the danger in this country lay in the tendency to swing from extreme to extreme—from radicalism to reaction and vice versa.

To show that the Legion does not care for politics Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that the first national commander, Colonel Lindsey, was a Democrat "while I," he said, "am suspected of being a Republican."

"The United States army," he continued, "was a democratizing influence, contrary to the belief of many." He told of many instances in his regiment to show the abolition of class distinction in the service.

NO INTRODUCTION IS NEEDED

"Speak to the Buddy With the Button," Slogan Adopted by Ohio Post.

"Speak to the buddy with the button" is the appeal expressed in a resolution passed by the Franklin county council of the American Legion in Ohio. This policy has been adopted by many other posts. The resolution follows:

Whereas, during our service in the World War we greeted each other whenever we met and ate, slept, fought and shot craps together without introduction; and

Whereas, in civilian life, we are compelled to remain closer to custom; Be it resolved, That the members of the American Legion of Franklin county, O., shall in the future regard the American Legion emblem as an open introduction between wearers of same, thereby creating a more close-knit and friendly organization.

Will Construct Club House.

Pangburn post, No. 22, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., is offering former service men of Montgomery county an opportunity to invest in the construction of a memorial club house in Mt. Sterling any moneys they may receive by way of adjusted compensation from the government. It is asserted that rentals and fees will make the stock a substantial investment.

GREETING CABLED BY D'OLIER

Legion Commander Recalls Sixth Anniversary of Great Britain's Entrance into World War.

On the sixth anniversary of Great Britain's entrance into the World War Franklin D'Olier, national commander of the American Legion, cabled the following greeting to Field Marshal Earl Haig and Admiral Sir David Beatty:

"Honor to the statesmen who had the courage to assume the responsibility of that decision. Honor to the British millions who, with valor unsurpassed and hearts of oak, executed that decision on Britain's many fronts. When we contemplate what would have been the state of affairs in the world today had not Britain acted as she did and when she did, the trials and difficulties of the present hour, however vexatious they may seem now to be, sink into comparative insignificance."

"United States forces have had the privilege of service on land and sea under British high command. The memories of the associations of those great days will never perish. They will perpetuate themselves in our hearts and thus serve to perpetuate the indissoluble friendship of the British and American peoples."

Look at the roads for twenty miles around on a Sunday

THERE isn't any "country" any more. The automobile has brought the most remote settlement almost as close to the center of things as the next county was in the old days.

To hear some tire dealers talk you might think that nobody knew anything about tires except the fellow from Broadway.

That's not the basis we

We give every man credit for knowing what he is spending his money on, whether he drives up here in his small car from ten miles out in the country or is passing through from the capital in his limousine.

That's one thing we like about U. S. Tires.

They make no distinction between the small car owner and the owner of the biggest car in the country.

It's all the same to them. So long as a man owns an automobile—large or small—he's entitled to the very best tire they can give him.

Quality has always been the outstanding feature of U. S. Tires. There's no limit on the U. S. guarantee. All U. S. Tires are guaranteed for the life of the tire.

We have given a lot of thought to this tire proposition. There is some advantage in being the representatives of the oldest and largest rubber concern in the world.

Drop in the next time you're down this way and let us tell you some interesting facts about tires.

Select your tires according to the roads they have to travel.

For ordinary country roads—The U. S. Chain or Usco.

COMRADES IN THE AUTUMN MODES

IT SEEMS there is always something new to be done with smocks and blouses, and now that there is a furor for embroidery on everything and a craze for ribbons, designers appear to have centered their thought on decorations for these necessary and attractive belongings. And, since nothing escapes the embroidery needle, it has occurred to modistes to bring hats and blouses, or smocks, into close relationship. We find them now made of the same materials and embroidered in the same patterns.

One of these smocks, with hat to match, is presented in the illustration given here. Either velours or satin might be used for it, or, if not much in the way of warmth-giving is required of it, crepe de chine will answer. But for cool weather velours is the best choice, and sleeves might be provided of this material. The smock is the straight slip-over pattern, with belt of the material set loosely about the waist. Neck and arms-eye are finished with buttonhole stitch in heavy silk, but the bottom of the smock is embellished with a handsome border in solid embroidery. Both the button-hole stitch and a motif from the border appear on the hat drapery. No seamstress will find it difficult to make a smock of this simple character, and she can at least prepare the material to be draped on a hat shape, leaving it to a professional milliner to place it to the best advantage.

The prettiest of the new ribbon trimmed smocks and blouses are made of taffeta and trimmed with plaid, striped or figured ribbons, plaids and stripes having the preference. They are suited to tailored clothes and are worn with suits or tailored skirts, the ribbon appearing on hats of duvetyne, felt, beaver or of fabrics, in smart bows and bands. This smock and hat combination is quite a new departure that may give a good account of itself by the time midwinter comes in.

For Wear in the Afternoons

THE story of afternoon frocks is charming and it cannot be briefly told because they are so varied in character and in design. They range all the way from such unpretentious and simple affairs as those that bear each other company in the picture above, to elaborately embroidered and beaded models, handsome lace and velvet dresses and others, in the class of dinner gowns. But the simpler dresses are the first to be chosen and they are of the dependable kinds that fit in on many occasions.

The dress at the left of the picture is made of velours with satin bands applied to it in a very wide crossbar pattern. The satin bands are very neatly machine stitched to place and appear only on the skirt, the short coat is plain and is one of the few models displaying a vestee. It has rounded turned-back cuffs of satin in three-quarter length sleeves and a satin collar.

The always admired black satin afternoon dress appears in the frock at the right. It has an apron drapery that is long at the front but shortened to a flounce across the back, contrived by this means to acknowledge its appreciation of the bustle dress. The drapery is bordered with a flounce of Chantilly lace. In order to accommodate a becoming touch of white the bodice is cut low at the front and a chemisette of white georgette, edged with lace, is gathered in across the opening. A reflection of summer styles lingers in the elbow sleeves with lace flounce, but the style tendency is toward long sleeves and high necks. Either of these dresses, while not particularly noteworthy for originality, will prove a useful possession in any wardrobe, fitting in against almost any background and easily toned up by the aid of smart hats. The fashion of combining two different materials in one frock is a great asset for the season's afternoon dresses, providing an easy means of making them interesting merely by ingenious combinations. But embroideries of silk or beads is above all things the embellishment that the season most approves.

Just Where Is Our Remedy For Religious Egotism

J. Caleb Justice
It is good to know that the churches are ready to lay aside their rivalries and be allies for the good of the community. In fact we are almost led to believe that at heart they love one another. The splendid co-operation of the five churches of East Braintree and Weymouth in their local "Federation" is a case in point. Quarterly union meetings are held in the churches in rotation in the interest of some particular uplift cause, with all five ministers on the platform.

During the present week 20 visitors are calling at the homes in twos, to invite each household to go to the church of their own choice. Wonderful for the progress of Christian community it is, when for instance a Methodist and Baptist call upon a Unitarian and invite him to attend his own Unitarian church next Sunday, and when a Universalist and Episcopalian walk together as disciples of one Lord and Master.

Fortunate it is too, that each one of us has the church of his choice—not quite enough to please everyone, but a good average. I suppose that if we had churches enough to perfectly suit everybody, we would have pretty nearly a church to each inhabitant! Talk about the 57 varieties! There are 201 denominations in the United States now and union seems far away. But co-operation and good feeling are ever increasing in our ranks.

There never will be one church. Not at any rate in a democracy. There can be one church in an aristocracy and the absolute monarch by force of arms can enforce a State religion. History has seen enough of that. Nor can all churches unite to form one. The same forces that disintegrated them will ever work to keep them from coming together; and the fact is that we don't want one church that we may pretend we do.

A man said to me at one time: "I believe there should be one church broad enough to take in everybody. I'd attend that church." His conduct belied his words for not satisfied with the variety in his own community he was taking the care and supporting a church elsewhere. What he was that everybody should unite on his particular brand.

When people talk union or one church, that is usually what they mean. We are all orthodox when that word means "my-doxy." Heresy is the "other-fellow's-doxy." It is old human nature after all that causes each to feel that his own church is the main if not the only repository of the true faith of the fathers. The Pharisee who stood and prayed thus with himself, "Lord, I thank thee that I am not as other men", lingers yet a long time in the temple, or out of it for that matter.

Just where is the remedy for our religious egotism? It is in the recogniton of the validity of diversity in religious thinking. The many denominations are a result of the working of that old economic law of supply and demand. A particular type of human nature demands a certain kind of church, and lo, the Baptist denomination supplies that demand. Another type of nature is supplied by the Unitarian, another by the Methodist, and so on.

Isn't the creed so much. It's the psychology of just folks. A church makes over people, less than the people make over the church. You know the result if just two different kinds of human nature get into the same church!

Then too, the denominational tag amounts to less than we think. In any community some people because of environment, early training and education etc, demand a conservative church; others because of a very different bringing up and a different mental outlook demand a liberal; still others a progressive church etc. This results that if there are two churches in a given area, one will become liberal, and just as surely the other will become the "defender" of orthodoxy, and this almost entirely, irrespective of denomination.

In one town the Congregational church is extremely "orthodox", because opposite is located a Unitarian church; in the next town the Congregational may be "liberal", because near at hand there is a Methodist, and so on.

In some localities the Methodist may be the "liberal" church, while we know of some very conservative and "orthodox" Unitarian churches. That is why in moving from one locality to another people frequently change to another denomination, for people are not primarily Baptist, Methodist, Congregationalist, Unitarian etc., they are emotionally and mentally conservative, liberal, or orthodox.

The denominational names today mean not much more than particular forms of church government; otherwise they are mere tags that after all no longer do any tagging.

While all that matters is just folks and the great work of all the churches is the same: i. e., the endeavor to make bad folks good, and good folks better. The churches are the best conservers of the good of civilization, yea, more, they are the institutions that keep the altar fires of faith, love and trust burning in our hearts. And so it is as we catch the beautiful spirit of brotherhood of the Master and the spirit of toleration of Paul, "each counting other better than himself" that we learn to work harmoniously together for the commonweal. Let us all, therefore, no matter what our name or sign, help to build up all the churches of all the people, and to the end, GO TO CHURCH, to the church of your own choice, on Sunday, Oct. 3, and thereafter.

SMITH—ELWELL

The marriage of Miss Leona Addie Smith, niece of John H. Johnson of 71 Commonwealth avenue, Chestnut Hill, to Halsey Elwell, son of Mrs. Cynthia R. Elwell of Main street took place Saturday noon at Trinity church, Newton Center, Rev. E. T. Sullivan officiating. Miss Mary E. Callahan, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor.

The bride's gown was of white satin and tulle and the veil was of the same material, caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor was dressed in blue taffeta with silver trimmings with slippers to match, and she wore a pink velvet hat, and carried pink roses.

W. Clark Reed of New York, a cousin of the groom, was best man; he is a member of the Alpin Delta Phi.

The bride is a Simmons College graduate, while the groom is a graduate of M. I. T. and a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon. During the World War he was an officer in the 4th Provisional Regiment at Camp Sevier, S. C.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle Mr. Johnson.

After Nov. 1 Mr. and Mrs. Elwell will be at home to friends at 89 Morton street, Newton Center, where they are to reside.

A business man, to be successful today, MUST ADVERTISE—that is keep his goods before the public in a bright and pleasing way.

Before God I Swear Jack Is White. This most vital question of the present day. Since Uncle Tom's Cabin scored the conscience of the American public there has been no such popular contribution to the broad understanding of the nations most vital and difficult problem as is presented in The Rose of Tennessee telling the strangely dramatic story of the man who mistakenly thinks he has colored blood in his veins and therefore he must deny himself the love of a woman who adores him. GIVE INCUBATORS BEST CARE Machines Should Be Cleaned and Disinfected Before Storing Away for the Winter.

After the hatching season is over, clean and disinfect the incubators, empty the lamps and carefully store the parts in the machine. Lamps containing oil which are left in their proper place on the incubator for some time after the hatching season is over will cause trouble when it is started again, as the oil tends to work up into the hood.

The incubator should be disinfected once a year, or oftener if any disease is present in the hens or chickens, say poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture. Some operators prefer to disinfect their incubators before or after each hatch. A 5 per cent solution of a reliable coal-tar disinfectant or carbolic acid may be used to wash out the machine and to disinfect the egg trays and nursery drawer. If the burlap is very dirty it may be cheaper to renew than to clean it.

For an incubator of about three cubic feet capacity one may pour one-half ounce of formalin, which contains 40 per cent formaldehyde, on one-half ounce of permanganate of potash in a pan in the incubator, which produces a very penetrating gas and thoroughly disinfects the machine. The door of the incubator should be closed just as soon as the liquid is poured into the pan and left closed for twelve hours or longer. Incubators should be well aired before they are used after disinfecting, especially when formaldehyde or any disinfectant which produces a gas has been used.

SUPPLY OF GRAIN FOR HENS

Fowls Will Consume More Food in Spring Than in Fall—Amount Varies With Breeds.

The feeder must use his own judgment in deciding how much grain to give the hens, as the amount of feed which they will eat varies with different pens and at different seasons of the year. They will eat more feed in the spring while laying heavily than the summer and fall when laying fewer eggs.

A fair general estimate is about one quart of scratch grains and an equal weight of mash (about one and a half quarts) daily to 13 hens of the general purpose breeds, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds, or Wyandottes, or to 16 hens of the smaller or egg breeds. This would be about seven and a half pounds each of scratch grains and of mash daily to 100 Leghorns and about nine and a half pounds of each to 100 general purpose fowls. If hens have free range or large yards containing green feed a general purpose hen will eat about 75 pounds of feed in a year and a Leghorn will eat about 55 pounds, in addition to the green stuff consumed, it has been found in experiments conducted on the government poultry farm.

RID FLOCKS OF ALL VERMIN

Regular Attention and Proper Treatment Will Prevent Troublesome Lice and Mites.

It is absolutely unnecessary for poultry to be seriously troubled by either lice or mites. Regular attention and proper treatment of the quarters will rid the flock of mites, and if body lice are found the birds should be treated for these also. Usually if a place is provided where the hens can dust themselves they will keep the lice in check.

LOUSY FLOCK UNPROFITABLE

Lice Are Detrimental Because of Irritation Caused by Crawling About and Gnawing.

True bird lice of the order Mallophaga never feed upon the blood of their host but feed upon exudations from the skin, epidermal scales, bits of feathers and hair. They are detrimental to the host by causing irritation due to crawling about and their gnawing habit. A "lousy" flock of chickens is not a profitable investment.

New Method of Unloading Copra

Vessels from Samoa and other parts of the South Pacific bring to San Francisco large quantities of copra, the dried meat of the coconut. A new system of unloading this commodity has been adopted there. The copra is drawn from the hold through a pneumatic tube, up through a building, and thence discharged into railway cars.

New Year's Eve in Chicago's Ghetto

The last day of the Jewish old year is always a busy one in their markets in Chicago. Saturday the year 5681 came to a close, and Ghetto people turned out en masse to do their buying before the market closed. This district in Chicago is noted for its variety of offerings. Anything from an automobile to a needle can be purchased here.

ANOTHER BABE RUTH

"Babe Ruth," the home-run king, has a rival in this white leghorn which has been named after the illustrious swatter of the diamond. She bats 326 eggs, and this beats the previous high record of 314 eggs for the year. By experienced poultrymen, her record of 326 perfect eggs is considered the most remarkable in the history of the poultry industry. "Babe Ruth" was hatched March 31, 1919. She laid her first egg August 26, so her first laying year was completed August 25 of this year. The little white lady weighs only three and a half pounds, while her eggs for the year tip the scales at ten times this weight.

Webster—Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

"MOTHER!"

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after cleaning up $100,000. But he looks like a hobo. Then he meets a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over. He eliminates the offending man. Being what he is and also girl-shy, he does not take advantage of his opportunity. But he just has to find out that she is Dolores Ruey. In Denver he is offered a $25,000-a-year job by a capitalist friend, Edward P. Jerome. He receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go fifty-fifty with him on the profits. Thereupon he turns down the big job and decides to answer the call of friendship and adventure to Sobrante. Jerome goes with John to the depot. They meet the distressed lady on her way to the same train. John lifts his hat, but gets the cut direct from the girl, who does not recognize him. John tells Jerome the whole story. Jerome secretly sees the girl, offering her $10,000 if she induces John to take his job inside of ninety days. The girl accepts. The scene now shifts to Buenaventura, Sobrante, where Geary, on his uppers, is eating his heart out looking for a cablegram from his old partner. He has existed for two months on credit extended by Mother Jenks, keeper of a disreputable hotel. Dolores cables Henrietta Wilkins (Mother Jenks) that she is on her way to visit her. Mother Jenks breaks down and tells her story. She has been educating Dolores, who is the daughter of former President Ruey of Sobrante, deposed and executed by President Sarros. Mother Jenks doesn't want Dolores to find out she is no longer respectable. So she and Billy plan for him to meet the steamer and to turn the girl back.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

So this was the vision he had volunteered to meet aboard La Estrellita, and by specious lies and hypocritical smiles, turn her back from the portals of Buenaventura to that dear old United States, which, Billy suddenly recalled with poignant pain, is a sizeable country in which a young lady may very readily be lost forever. With the quick eye of youth, he noted that Dolores was perfectly wonderful in a white flannel skirt and jacket, white buck boots, white Panama hat with a gorgeous puggaree, a mannish little linen collar, and a red four-in-hand tie. From under that white he peeped a profusion of crinkly brown hair with a slightly reddish tinge to it; her eyes were big and brown and wide apart, with golden flecks in them; their glance met Billy's hungry gaze simply, directly, and with a curiosity there was no attempt to hide. Her nose was patrician; her beautiful short upper lip revealed the tips of two perfect, milk-white front teeth; she was, Billy Geary told himself, a goddess before whom all low, worthless, ornery fellows like himself should grovel and die happy. If perchance she might be so minded as to walk on their faces! He was aroused from his critical inventory when the houri spoke again:

"You haven't answered my question, sir!"

"No," said Billy. "I didn't. Stupid of me, too. However, come to think of it, you didn't ask me any question. You looked it. My name is Geary—William H. Geary, by profession a mining engineer, and by nature an ignoramus, and I have called to deliver some disappointing news regarding Henrietta Wilkins."

"Is she—"

"She is. Very much alive and in excellent health—or rather was, the last time it was my pleasure and privilege to call on the dear lady. But she isn't in Buenaventura now." Mentally Billy asked God to forgive him his black-hearted treachery to this winsome girl. He loathed the task he had planned and foisted upon himself, and nothing but the memory of Mother Jenks' manifold kindnesses to him in a day, thanks to Jack Webster, now happily behind him, could have induced him to go through to the finish.

"Why, where is she?" Dolores queried, and Billy could have wept at the fright in those lovely brown eyes.

He waved his hand airily. "Quietly," he said. "She left three weeks ago for New Orleans to visit you. I dare say you passed each other on the road—here, here, Miss Ruey, don't cry."

He took a recess of three minutes, while Dolores dabbed her eyes and went through sundry other motions of being brave. Then he proceeded with his nefarious recital.

"When your cablegram arrived, Miss Ruey, naturally Mrs. Wilkins was not here to receive it, and as I was the only person who had her address, the cable agent referred it to me. Under the circumstances, not knowing where I could reach you with a cable informing you that Mrs. Wilkins was headed for California to see you, I had no other alternative but to let matters take their course. I decided you might arrive on La Estrellita, so I called to welcome you to our thriving little city, and, as a friend of about two minutes' standing, to warn you away from it."

Billy's men, as he voiced this warning, was so singularly mysterious that Dolores' curiosity was aroused instantly and rose superior to her grief. "Why, what's the matter?" she demanded.

Billy looked around, as if fearful of being overheard. He lowered his voice. "We're going to have one grand little first-class revolution," he replied. "It's due to bust almost any night now, and when it does, the streets of San Buenaventura will run red with blood."

Dolores blanched. "Oh, dearie me," she quavered. "Do they still have revolutions here? You know, Mr. Geary, my poor father was killed in one."

"Yes, and the same old political gang that shot him is still on deck," Billy warned her. "It would be highly dangerous for a Ruey, man or woman, to show his or her nose around Buenaventura about now. Besides, Miss Ruey, that isn't the worst," he continued, for a whole-hearted lad was Billy, who never did anything by halves. "The city is reeking with cholera!"

"Cholera!" Dolores' big brown eyes grew bigger with wonder and concern. "How strange the port authorities didn't warn us at New Orleans!"

"Tish! Tush! Fiddlesticks and then some. The fruit company censors everything, Miss Ruey, and the news doesn't get out."

"But the port doctor just said the passengers could go ashore."

"What's a human life to a doctor? Besides, he's on the slush-fund payroll and does whatever the higherups tell him. You be guided by what I tell you, Miss Ruey, and do not set foot on Sobrante soil. If you stay aboard La Estrellita, you'll have your nice clean stateroom, your well-cooked meals, your bath, and the attentions of the stewardess. The steamer will be loaded in two days; then you go back to New Orleans, and by the time you arrive there I'll have been in communication by cable with Mother Jenks—I mean—"

"Mother who?" Dolores demanded.

"A mere slip of the tongue, Miss Ruey. I was thinking of my landlady. I meant Mrs. Wilkins—"

"I'm so awfully obliged to you, Mr. Geary. You're so kind, I'm sure I'd be a most ungrateful girl not to be guided by you accordingly. You wouldn't risk any friend of yours in this terrible place, would you, Mr. Geary?"

"Indeed, I would not. By permitting anybody I thought anything of to come to this city, I should feel guilty of murder."

"I'm sure you would, Mr. Geary. Nevertheless, there is one point that is not quite clear in my mind, and I wish you'd explain—"

"Command me, Miss Ruey."

"If this is such a frightful place, why are you so anxious, if I may employ such language, to husswagger your dearest friend, Mr. John S. Webster, into coming down here? Do you want to kill him and get his money—or what?"

Billy's face flamed at thought of the embarrassing trap his glib tongue had led him into. He cursed himself for a star-spangled jackass, and while he was engaged in this interesting pastime Dolores spoke again.

"And by the way, which is it? Miss Wilkins or Mrs.? You've called her both, and when I reminded you she was a Miss, you agreed with me, whereas she is nothing of the sort. She's a Mrs. Then you blurted out something about a Mother Jenks, and finally, Mr. Geary, it occurs to me that for a complete stranger you are unduly interested in my welfare. I'm not such a goose as to assimilate your weird tales of death from disease. It occurs to me that if your friend John S. Webster can risk Buenaventura, I can also."

"You—you know that old tarantula?" Billy gasped. "Why I—I came out to warn him off the grass, too."

Dolores walked a step closer to Billy and eyed him disapprovingly. "I'm so sorry I can't believe that statement," she replied. "It happens that I was standing by the companion-ladder when you came aboard and spoke to the purser; when you asked him if Mr. Webster was aboard, your face was alight with eagerness and anticipation, but when you had reason to believe he was not aboard, you looked so terribly disappointed I felt sorry for you."

"I'm going ashore, if it's the last act of my life, and when I get there I'm going to interview the cable agent; then I'm going to call at the steamship office and scan the passenger list of the last three north-bound steamers, and if I do not find Henrietta Wilkins' name on one of those passenger lists I'm going up to Calle de Concordia No. 19—"

"I surrender unconditionally," groaned Billy. "I'm a liar from beginning to end. I overlooked my hand. I beg of you to believe me, however, when I tell you that I only told you those whoppers because I was in honor bound to tell them. Personally, I don't want you to go away—at least, not until I'm ready to go away, too! Miss Ruey, my nose is in the dust. There is a fever in my brain and a misery in my heart—"

"And contrition in your face," she interrupted him laughingly. "You're forgiven, Mr. Geary—on one condition."

"Name it," he answered.

"Tell me everything from beginning to end."

So Billy told her. "I would much rather have been visited with a plague of boils, like our old friend, the late Job, than have to tell you this, Miss Ruey," he concluded his recital. "Man proposes, but God disposes, and you're here and bound to learn the truth sooner or later. Mother isn't a lady and she knows it, but take it from me, Miss Ruey, she's a grand old piece of work. She's a scout—a ring-tailed sport—a regular individual and game as a gander."

"And I mustn't call at El Buen Amigo, Mr. Geary?"

"Perish the thought! Mother must call on you. El Buen Amigo is what you might term a hotel for tropical tramps of the masculine sex. Nearly all of Mother's guests have a past, you know. They're the submerged white tenth of Sobrante."

"Then my benefactor must call to see me here?" Billy nodded. "When will you bring her here?"

Billy reflected that Mother Jenks had been up rather late the night before and that trade in the cantina of El Buen Amigo had been unusually brisk; so since he desired to exhibit the old lady at her best, he concluded it might be well to apar for wind.

"Tomorrow at 10," he declared. Dolores inclined her head. Something told her she had better leave all future details to the amiable William.

"I remember you inquired for your friend, Mr. Webster, when you came aboard the steamer."

"I remember it, too," Billy countered ruefully. "I can't imagine what's become of him. Miss Ruey, did you ever go to meet the only human being in the world and discover that for some mysterious reason he had failed to keep the appointment? Miss Ruey, you'll have to meet old John Stuart the minute he lights in Buenaventura. He's some boy."

"Old John Stuart?" she queried. "How old?"

"Oh, thirty-nine or forty on actual count, but one of the kind that will live to be a thousand and then have to be killed with an axe. He's coming to Sobrante to help me put over a mining deal."

"How interesting, Mr. Geary! No wonder you were disappointed."

The last sentence was a shaft deliberately launched; to Dolores' delight it made a keyhole in Billy Geary's heart.

"Don't get me wrong, Miss Ruey," he hastened to assure her. "I have a good mine, but I'd trade it for a handshake from Jack! The good Lord only published one edition of Jack, and limited the edition to one volume; and the plates were melted for the junk we call the human race. Two weeks ago, when I was sick and penniless and despairing, the possessor of a concession on a fortune, but without a centavo in my pockets to buy a banana, when I was a veritable beach-comber and existing on the charity of Mother Jenks, I managed finally to communicate with old Jack and told him where I was and what I had. There's his answer, Miss Ruey, and I'm not ashamed to say that when I got it I cried like a kid." And Billy handed her John Stuart Webster's remarkable cablegram, the receipt of which had, for Billy Geary, transformed night into day, purgatory into paradise. Dolores read it.

"No wonder you love him," she declared, and added artlessly: "His wife must simply adore him."

"He has no wife to bother his life, so he paddles his own canoe," Billy retorted. "I don't believe the old sour dough has ever been in love with anything more charming than the goddess of fortune. He's woman-proof."

"About Mrs. Jenks," Dolores continued, abruptly changing the subject. "How nice to reflect that after she had trusted you and believed in you when you were penniless, you were enabled to justify her faith."

"You bet!" Billy declared. "I feel that I can never possibly hope to catch even with the old Samaritan, although I did try to show her how much I appreciated her."

"I dare say you went right out and bought her an impossible hat," Dolores challenged roguishly.

"No, I didn't, for a very sufficient reason. Down here the ladies do not wear hats. But I'll tell you what I did buy her, Miss Ruey—and oh, by George, I'm glad now I did it. She'll wear them tomorrow when I bring her to see you. I bought her a new black silk dress and an old-lace collar, and a gold breast pin and a tortoise shell hair comb and hired an open carriage and took her for an evening ride on the Malecon to listen to the band concert."

"Did she like that?"

"She ate it up," Billy declared with conviction. "I think it was her first adventure in democracy."

Billy's pulse was still far from normal when he reached El Buen Amigo, for he was infused with a strange, new-found warmth that burned like malarial fever, but wasn't. He wasted no preliminaries on Mother Jenks, but bluntly acquainted her with the facts in the case.

Mother Jenks eyed him a moment wildly. "Gord's truth!" she gasped; she reached for her favorite elixir, but Billy got the bottle first.

"Nothing doing," he warned this strange publican. "Mother, you're finking it—and what would your sainted 'Enry say to that? Do you want that angel to kiss you and get a whiff of this brandy?"

Mother Jenks' eyes actually popped. "Gor, Willie," she gasped, "aven't I told ye she's a lady! Me kiss the lamb! I trust, Mr. Geary, as 'ow I knows my place an' can keep it."

"Yes, I know," Billy soothed the frightened old woman, "but the trouble is Miss Dolores doesn't know hers—and something tells me if she does, she'll forget it. She'll take you in her arms and kiss you, sure as death and taxes."

And she did! "My lamb, my lamb," sobbed Mother Jenks the next morning, and rested her old cheek, with its rum-begotten hue, close to the rose-tinted ivory cheek of her ward. "Me—wot I am—an' to think—"

"You're a sweet old dear," Dolores whispered, patting the gray head; "and I'm going to call you Mother."

"Mr. William H. Geary," the girl remarked that night, "I know now why your friend, Mr. Webster, sent that cablegram. I think you're a scout, too."

For reasons best known to himself Mr. Geary blushed furiously. "I—I'd better go and break the news to Mother," he suggested inanely. She held out her hand; and Billy, having been long enough in Sobrante to have acquired the habit, bent his malarial person over that hand and kissed it. As he went out it occurred to him that had the lobby of the Hotel Mateo been paved with eggs, he must have floated over them like a wraith, so light did he feel within.

CHAPTER VII.

Webster reached New Orleans at the end of the first leg of his journey, to discover that he was one day late to board the Atlanta—a banana boat of the Consolidated Fruit company's line plying regularly between New Orleans and that company's depots at Limon and San Buenaventura—which necessitated a wait of three days for the steamer La Estrellita of the Caribbean Mail line, running to Caracas and way ports.

He decided to visit the ticket office of the Caribbean Mail line immediately and avoid the rush in case the travel should be heavy.

The steamship office was in Canal street. The clerk was waiting on two well-dressed and palpably low-bred sons of the tropics, to whom he had just displayed a passenger list which the two were scanning critically. Their interest in it was so obvious that unconsciously Webster peeped over their shoulders (no difficult task for one of his stature) and discovered it to be the passenger list of the steamer La Estrellita. They were conversing together in low tones and Webster, who had spent many years of his life following his profession in Mexico, recognized their speech as the bastard Spanish of the peon.

He sat down in the long wall seat and waited until the pair, having completed their scrutiny of the list, turned to pass out. He glanced at them casually. One was a tall thin man whose bloodshot eyes were inclined to "pop" a little—infallible evidence in the Latin-American that he is drinking more hard liquor than is good for him. His companion was plainly of the same racial stock, although Webster suspected him of a slight admixture of negro blood. He was short, stocky, and of a massive looking; like his companion, bejeweled and possessed of a thin, carefully cultivated moustache that seemed to consist of about nineteen hairs on one side and twenty on the other. Evidently once upon a time, as the story books have it, he had been shot. Webster suspected a Mauser bullet, fired at long range. It had entered his right cheek, just below the malar, ranged downward through his mouth and out through a fold of flabby flesh under his left jaw. It must have been a frightful wound, but it had healed well except at the point of entrance, where it had a tendency to pucker considerably, thus drawing the man's eyelid down on his cheek and giving to that visual organ something of the appearance of a bulldog's.

Webster gazed after them whimsically as he approached the counter. "I'd hate to wake up some night and find that hombre with the puckered eye leaning over me. By the way," he continued, suddenly apprehensive, "do you get much of that parakeet travel on your line?"

"About 80 per cent. of it is off color, sir."

Webster pondered the 80-per-cent. probability of being berthed in the same stateroom with one of these people and the prospect was as revolting to him as would be an invited negro guest at the dining table of a southern family. He had all a Westerner's hatred for the breed.

"Well, I want a ticket to San Buenaventura," he informed the clerk, "but I don't relish the idea of a Greaser in the same stateroom with me. I wonder if you couldn't manage to fix me with a stateroom all to myself, or at least arrange it so that in the event of company I'll draw a white man."

"I'm sorry, sir, but I cannot guarantee you absolute privacy nor any kind of white man. It's pretty mixed travel to all Central American ports."

"How many berths in your first-class staterooms?"

"Two."

Webster smiled brightly. He had found a way out of the difficulty. "I'll buy 'em both, son," he announced.

"I cannot sell you an entire stateroom, sir. It's against the orders of the company to sell two berths to one man. The travel is pretty brisk and it's hardly fair to the public, you know."

"Well, suppose I buy one ticket for myself and the other for—well, for my valet, let us say. Of course," he added brightly, "I haven't engaged the valet yet and even should I do so I wouldn't be at all surprised if the rascal missed the boat!"

The clerk glanced at him with a slow smile, and pondered. "Well," he said presently. "If you care to buy a ticket for your valet, I'm sure I shouldn't worry whether or not he catches the boat. If my records show that the space is sold to two men and the purser collects two tickets, I think you'll be pretty safe from intrusion."

"To the harassed traveler," said Mr. Webster, "a meeting with a gentleman of your penetration is as refreshing as a canteen of cool water in the desert. Shoot!" and he produced a handful of gold.

"I will—provided I have one empty cabin," and the clerk turned from the counter to consult his record of berths already sold and others reserved but not paid for. Presently he faced Webster at the counter.

"The outlook is very blue," he announced. "However, I have one berth in No. 34 reserved by a gentleman who was to call for it by two o'clock to-day." He looked at his watch. "It is now a quarter of one. If the reservation isn't claimed promptly at two o'clock I shall cancel it and reserve for you both berths in that room. If you will be good enough to leave me your name and address I will telephone you after that hour. In the meantime, you may make reservation of the other berth in the same stateroom. I feel very confident that the reservation in No. 34 will not be called for, Mr.—"

"Webster—John S. Webster. You are very kind, indeed. I'm at the St. Charles."

"Thanks, eter so much, for my life."

SCRAPS OF HUMOR

WIN OR LOSE.

"May I have a word with you, Mr. Greene?" began the young man.

"Certainly you may," said the Wall street father.

"I want you to decide a bet."

"Very good. Go on."

"I want to marry your daughter."

"Tut-tut, sir."

"But wait. Your daughter has bet me that you will give your consent to our marriage and I have bet her that you will not. Now, you certainly would not want to decide a bet so that she would lose; now would you?"—Yonkers Statesman.

DO BUSINESS OVER COFFEE

In Asiatic Cities the Merchants Gather in Shops to Discuss Affairs of Trade.

Streets in the bazar districts of Asiatic cities are only eight to ten feet wide. The larger shops are eight by ten and the smaller ones five by six feet. In each bazar is a khar for every ten or twelve shops. These khans are two stories high, with an open court in the center and rooms on the four sides all opening into the court. A door leads from the open court into the street. Rooms are let to different storekeepers for storage purposes. Each bazar has a coffee shop, which is a large, open place covered partly by a roof, where are a number of wooden settees ranged in rows. Any visitor who sits is first given a cup of Turkish coffee and then a narghile or native pipe filled with Shiraz tobacco. The charge for coffee and the use of the pipe is about 2 cents. Here the merchants gather to discuss trade bills, and bank representatives to check the number of bills to be taken up and secure data for exchange rates for bills and foreign coin. Rates are practically determined in the coffee shops.

Sylvia's Island

By JESSIE DOUGLAS

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Good-by, Sylvia; be good!" they called to her as the train glided smoothly out of the station.

Sylvia, leaning far out of the window, blew a last kiss, waved a last merry wave before she settled back into her seat in the train.

It was vacation time. The girls had all come down to the Grand Central to see her off. Sylvia thought with a warm glow at her heart of their messages, their happy last words.

She could picture them all so clearly; Dot was going up to a cottage by the lake to spend her summer; Anna was going for a whole month to stay with her rich relatives on Long Island, and Elsie was going to lounge at home.

They three comprised the primary department of the Elmhurst School for Girls, and now that the middle of June had come—the long looked-for vacation—they were off "to freedom and life," as Elsie put it.

"I guess my fairy godmother was napping when I was born," Sylvia thought to herself, for now that vacation had come and she found herself without enough money saved to last through the summer, she must go on teaching.

"Still the Worths may not be so bad," she thought, but a little wistful smile curved her lips and she looked down at her gloved hands in her lap, wondering why fate had reserved for her the task of tutoring all summer.

"Still I'm rather lucky in a way," Sylvia philosophized. "I'm getting my vacation and, though my tutoring will just pay my expenses, at least I am earning my living."

She settled back and closed her eyes wearily, for now that the hurry and rush of the last few days of school were over she found herself very tired.

She found after a week at the camp on Mink Island that the Worths were very nice people, indeed. She had to tutor all the morning and she gave part of every afternoon to amusing the twins and somehow she had grown in the habit of telling a last story before bed time to Betty and Ben.

But there was time in between when Sylvia strolled down to the boat landing and pushed out the canoe while she chose the light paddles and pushed she saw a spiral of smoke emerging from the trees. She ran along, falling once in her rush, and stopped, panting, before a fire over which a young man was leaning.

Her island! Her sole possession! Her one loop to freedom!

"I think this is simply outrageous!" Sylvia said, her cheeks flushing with sudden anger.

The young man lifted a smiling face: "I beg your pardon."

"What are you doing on my island?" Sylvia demanded.

"That's just what I would like to know—what are you doing on my island?" the man in the rough suit answered, brushing some twigs from his knees and standing up.

"I discovered it first, and I do think—"

Sylvia was suddenly aware of two laughing blue eyes that studied her with more than a sparkle of amusement. "Of course, I don't wish to be rude," he said, "but since you find yourself trespassing and feel that you are in the way—"

But Sylvia had stooped down and held up her copy of "The Three Musketeers," which she had missed for the last week.

"Is that yours? I never knew girls read that kind of thing!"

Sylvia had forgotten everything, and she sat down and put her arms about her knees and fell into a deep discussion of the three heroes with this young man.

"What's that?" he sniffed.

A blue smoke was rising from the fire and Sylvia saw with dismay that some bacon cleverly coiled on sticks was only a crisp black memory of bacon.

"Oh, and I'm so hungry," she sighed.

"Never mind, can you come tomorrow?" he asked her.

Sylvia, with bright eyes, answered, "Yes," and paddled away into the sunset with a new warmth at her heart.

LE MOUSQUETAIRE

By ARISTA E. FISHER.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was very evident that the three people who had just entered the corridor of the Stafford hotel were not of the ordinary wealthy class usually seen there. The only thing which distinguished them from the frequenters of that most fashionable of Chicago's fashionable hotels was that they appeared to be just a little more fashionable and just a little more richly dressed.

"An unusually pretty girl, with her father and mother," would have been the thought of a casual observer.

Casual observers were scarce in that hotel corridor, however. There was a tall figure in a gray uniform standing near the door, presumably an attendant. The girl's father handed the light wraps of the ladies to the man in uniform and the three passed into the reception room.

He who was "presumably an attendant" murmured a surprised "Thank you" to the man just disappearing through the door, and then regarded the armful of wraps with a delighted smile. Curious actions on the part of an attendant! But if the gentleman who had so trustingly donated two expensive wraps to a presumable attendant had been a trifle less near-sighted, or his companions a trifle more observant, a medal of the Legion of Honor which the attendant wore might have established the identity of his calling a little differently.

Further investigation would have proved him to be a colonel in the French army and of a very pleasing appearance. This colonel, after entertaining himself with many broad grins, observed to the large marble clock over the door:

"Jean, my son, you have an adventure! My boy, you will guard these pretty things very carefully, and when the generous Americans return, perhaps, if you are very polite, you will receive a tip." And a smile being insufficient, the young Frenchman gave vent to a hearty laugh. He stopped suddenly and muttered to himself:

"That girl was very much like I wonder!"

He was turning the gentleman's hat in his hand, and his eyes, chancing to light upon the name of the owner printed on the band, he uttered an exclamation.

The real attendant appeared a moment later. He was made acquainted with the situation, which delighted him as much as it had his companion.

"I was called to the office for a few minutes," explained that grinning official. "We've had no guests for the last hour and I thought I could risk a moment or two."

"Merci, mon ami," responded the young Frenchman. "You have done me a great service!"

For the next half-hour he lounged about the corridor.

When Eleanor Howard and her parents entered the corridor preparatory to leaving, they were assisted in putting on their wraps by the same person who had taken them from Mr. Howard. Then they left the hotel, entered their car, and returned home.

The next day, when Eleanor was searching for a slip of paper she had mislaid, she discovered a card in one of the pockets of her wrap, on one side of which was printed:

"M. le Colonel Jean Reillard, Rue Nationale, Paris, at present the Stafford Hotel."

On the other, written in pencil: "I thank you for trusting me with your valuable property," and in very fine writing:

"Do you remember a certain colonel who used to sing 'Le Mousquetaire'?" Eleanor, at first dumfounded, then struck with the humor of the situation, laughed hysterically. Then she grew thoughtful, and drawing some paper toward her she wrote:

"I assure you there is no one more worthy of our trust. The singer of 'Le Mousquetaire' is not forgotten."

She addressed it to Col. Jean Reillard, the Stafford hotel, and mailed it thoughtfully.

That afternoon Colonel Reillard entertained Miss Eleanor Howard with stories of bravery, of death, of courageous men's deeds in the great war. But the one that interested them both the most was something like this:

"Mademoiselle, don't you remember the French officer that was nursed back to health by one whose image has lived in his memory ever since, whose memory has never left his heart? Do you not recall how that officer used to refuse to be attended by anyone but yourself, and that when you did come, with your soft voice, to dull his sufferings, do you remember that he used to tell you how beautiful were your eyes? This officer has carried a great love for you in his heart from that time. He came to America a week ago, to seek you out and ask you to become his wife. Will you not tell him that he does not hope in vain?"

The story ended there, one reason being that the story teller had an extremely sympathetic listener who had just answered a very small word and the other being that when a beautiful girl has said that very small word to a handsome young man there are things much more interesting than stories.

She Felt as Though She Were Free.

herself far out from the shore. She felt as though this world of blue water and the bright dome of the sky above her and some island beckoning to be explored were hers, too.

Often she would put her worn copy of "The Three Musketeers" in the stern and paddle smoothly until she came to the particular island of her delight, that showed a tufted shade in the glistening sapphire of the water.

Then lying under the trees on the rough shore, she would forget herself in hair breadth escapes or fall to dreaming of charming castles across the sea.

It was on one of these excursions that she had brought the unopened letter that had come that morning from Dot. Now opening it and scanning it with eager eyes, she gave a little shout of joy. "Dot is engaged! How wonderful!"

For the next few weeks Sylvia found no time for dreaming, for the Worths were having company and every minute of every day Sylvia must spend with the children. Sometimes at night she would slip into her bed too tired to do anything but fall dreamlessly asleep.

And then the second letter came. Elsie was going to be married in the autumn. Somehow Sylvia felt a cold pang of loneliness tear at her heart.

And there was a certain young captain that Anna knew—

"That's enough. I believe I'm actually getting jealous," Sylvia said aloud to a jay that jeered at her from the shore. She pushed out with swift, sure strokes for her favorite island. She drew her canoe up over the pebbly shore and then lifting her head

FLOWERS THAT ARE UNLUCKY

Various Superstitions That Some Persons Are Said to Have Implicit Faith In.

Never make a present of a bunch of violets with an ivy leaf tied up with them. If you do you will surely quarrel with the person to whom you make the gift.

This is all very regrettable, no doubt, since ivy is convenient as a cheap and easily obtainable ornament; but if one wants to safeguard oneself against bad luck one must be prepared to make sacrifices.

The unluckiness of bringing Hawthorn indoors is so well known as hardly to need mentioning, but fewer people are aware that yellow flowers are unlucky unless they are mingled with flowers of another color. For instance, yellow roses are supposed to cause lovers to quarrel.

Never have only yellow blooms in any room in which you are saying good-bye to someone who is going away. If you defy this superstition there is a strong probability that you will never see the departing person again.

Never pick up a dropped flower that you find in the street. No matter how fresh and inviting it may look, you must pass by and leave it where it lies. Otherwise you may bring misfortune upon your unwise head.

Caterpillar Work.

Just to show that a modest caterpillar's hard work can accomplish, it may be mentioned that the silkworm in 1919 produced 52,767,600 pounds of raw silk.

Nearly two-thirds of this total quantity was produced in Japan. China contributed about one-fourth of the whole. In Europe, Italy was the big producer, sending to market 4,078,600 pounds, or just about ten times as much as France.

SIX MONTHS I COULD NOT WORK

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Me Strong and Able to Work—I Recommend It To All My Friends.

Bayonne, N. J. — "I had pains in back and legs so that I could not stand caused by female trouble. I felt so tired all the time, had bad headaches, and for six months I could not work. I was treated by a physician and took other remedies but got no relief. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me very much. I am well and strong and now able to do my work. I cannot thank you enough and I recommend your medicine to my friends who are sick."—Mrs. SUSIE SACATANSKY, 25 East 17th St., Bayonne, N. J.

It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person, that a medicine could not live and grow in popularity for over forty years, and today hold a record for such wonderful success as does Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicines must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

IRISH THOROUGHBREDS HAVE WON ALL ENGLISH AND FRENCH RACES

Irish horses have won all the big races in England and France this year. Troystown won the Grand National, Tetratena the Two Thousand, Spion Kop the English derby, Charlebelle the Oaks and Comrade the Grand Prix, the French classic.

The picture shows Spion Kop being led by his owner, Capt. Giles Loder, just after the horse had won the greatest racing event in the world, the derby at Epsom Downs. Spion Kop was considered a rank outsider, the odds being 100 to 6 against him, but Frankie O'Neill, the American jockey, seen astride him, piloted him to victory.

RIFLE GRENADE MAKES WORLD'S PACE RECORD

A new world's record for three-year-old pacing geldings was hung up at the Fort Miami track recently when Rifle Grenade, carrying the colors of the Lon McDonald stable, paced the first mile in 2:03.4, cutting a quarter of a second off the record held by Direct the Work, made at Lexington two years ago.

DISLIKES JEERING OF FANS

Ivan Olson, Peppery Dodger Shortstop, Resorts to Unique Method of Avoiding Criticism.

Ivan Olson, the peppery shortstop of the pennant-chasing Dodgers, sprang something new in the line of comedy in a game with the Pirates. Olson had been guilty of several miscues during recent games and was being ridden unmercifully by the fans. The jeers did not help him resume his normal stride, so he decided to equip himself so that he could not hear the comment from the stands if he hobbled. He stuffed both ears with big wads of cotton, which could be seen from one side of the field to the other and looked like a pair of beacon lights on his dome. Ivan kept them there the greater part of the game, making one error besides some good plays. He finally removed the decorations so that he could enter into conversation with the umpire.

BASEBALL TOUR IS PLANNED

Japanese Players Propose to Visit This Country Next Season—Enthusiastic Over Game.

A baseball tour on a large scale will be undertaken by Japanese players next spring and summer, according to plans now being formulated by prominent business men of that nation. At the same time an invitation will be extended to two leading teams in the United States to visit Japan. Prof. Fred Merrifield, who led the University of Chicago team on its recent tour of Japanese universities, is enthusiastic over the progress of baseball in the orient.

JOIE RAY TO BECOME BOXER

at Antwerp this summer. The Windy City sensation started his many admirers beyond description by making this statement after he had won the 1,500-meter run at the One Hundred and Sixth post, American Legion, games in Brooklyn.

Ray is by no means a newcomer in the game. Prior to taking up running he was an amateur boxer of repute, having won the 125-pound championship of Chicago several years ago.

CHANGES IN RUGBY FOOTBALL

Punt Out Following a Touchdown is Abolished and Kick for Goal in Front of Posts.

Rugby football enthusiasts should remember two important changes in the rules effective this fall. The first is that the punt out following a touchdown is abolished. Hereafter the kick for goal will be made from a point directly in front of the goal posts. The second change is a rule intended to prevent roughing a man having made a forward pass, and from "clipping" men obviously not in the play. This play will be penalized.

CRITICIZE ENGLISH JOCKEYS

French and American Racing Experts Find Fault With Rides Given Troystown and Poethlyn.

The riding of the English jockeys on Troystown and Poethlyn, in the Grand Steeplechase de Paris, was much criticized by the French and American racing men. Neither of the riders used the crouching seat, which is adopted by the American and French jockeys. Many racing experts are of the opinion that Troystown at least would have made a much better showing in the race if he had been ridden in the modern style.

BIG ATTENDANCE RECORD SET

Total of 129,000 Paid Admissions to Yankee-White Sox Series at Polo Grounds.

The Yankee-White Sox series at the Polo Grounds ending July 20 set a new attendance record for a series, all the more remarkable because the weather was bad on the two big days. Saturday drew 36,000 fans, there were 33,000 out in the rain Sunday. Monday drew 28,000 and Tuesday 32,000, a total for four days of 129,000.

"LAND OF PLENTY"

Western Canada a Country of Marvelous Fertility.

Literally Hundreds of Miles of Wonderful Grain Fields Delight the Eye — Yields Will Run Well Over a Billion Dollars.

A trip through the wheat fields of Western Canada may lack the inspiration, such as one may find working insidiously through his being as he traverses the mountain areas of Canada, rich in the variety of color and depth of shades that they cast, wonderful in their magnitude, their grandeur, restful, even although the streams that flow from their sides come down with a swish and a swash creating a noise that makes one's eardrums beat their last beat. Then as we rest beside the lakes in the clouds and see the calm and peace which they enjoy in the midst of nestling hills, we wonder if there's another world. Care has vanished; all we want is to dwell upon the scene. But it was not the intention to speak of mountain scenery, roaring torrents, placid lakes, and restful haunts. Rather, we were about to speak of the other kind of inspiration that is aroused as one traverses Western Canada's immense plains, gridironed with railroads and splendid highways, along whose borders and away back are to be seen the most wonderful grain fields. The crops of wheat, oats, barley, flax, and corn—yes, corn—have just been harvested, the threshing machines are busy, the elevators are ready—the thirty and forty thousand-bushel elevators, with three, four, and five and more at nearly every station along the thousand miles of railway that serve this immense new area of agricultural land. There is not a more inspiring sight than these grain fields. They lead one to pause and reflect, get one into a mental arithmetic strain, and the mind wanders as it gathers the great length of figures that represents the Western Canada grain crop of 1920. A pencil and paper are needed, for the value will run into and over a billion dollars. At least, that is what those who profess to keep themselves posted as to values believe.

The wheat crop alone will run over 250,000,000 bushels, and if you figure this at $2.80 per bushel, the price it is selling at as we write, there you have $700,000,000 alone. Then there is the oat crop, with a yield of one hesitates to say the quantities in bushels, for the threshers are reporting yields of 110 and 120 bushels per acre, where but 80 and 90 bushels were expected, but their value, apart from that of barley and rye and flax, will carry us over the billion dollar mark.

Of course all this means—but we had almost forgotten to speak of the cattle and horses, the sheep and the pigs, the dairy and many other farm products, the increase and production of which this year will bring in many more million dollars—all this means that there will be a rush of buyers to Western Canada this fall, during the winter, and next spring.

A certain amount of satisfaction is derived by those "back home here," whose friends are writing them endorsing the statements that are appearing in the press of wheat yields of thirty, forty, and fifty bushels to the acre; of oats yielding anywhere from sixty to 120 bushels per acre. Districts have not been specially favored. Travel anywhere, eight hundred miles east and west, four hundred miles north and south, and it is the same story, splendid yields, good acreage, excellent prices, easy marketing, but labor a little scarce.—Advertisement.

COOK WITH GAS 12 MONTHS OF THE YEAR

Have you considered the comparative costs of cooking with coal and cooking with gas?

The average family can easily do all their cooking with 3,000 cubic feet of gas per month at a cost of $6.21 net. This is much less than the cost of one half of a ton of coal and very few families can do all their cooking with this amount.

In other words, it actually costs less in dollars and cents to cook with gas than with coal, to say nothing of the advantage of gas because of its convenience and because of the labor saved.

Gas is always available any time of day or night. Turn a cock and light the gas and you have the heat you desire. Turn off and all expense is stopped.

The hour used each morning in cleaning out the ashes and kindling the fire and waiting for it to come up is saved if you cook with gas.

The time spent in lugging coal and cleaning up the attendant dirt and dust, of ashes and coal is saved if you use gas.

And besides gas is actually cheaper.

Think this over carefully and do not start your coal range this fall.

QUINCY AVENUE OPENED

Now that the approaches to the new Monaquot bridge have been rebuilt, Weymouth and Braintree people realize that a good job has been done by the Norfolk County Commissioners, and that the wide bridge and the wide avenue are a great improvement over the old narrow bridge and crooked street. The contract with W. F. Loud & Son called for a bituminous macadam road with asphalt, and under the supervision of Hartley L. White, C. E., a perfect level has been obtained. Already the travelling over it is a pleasure, but it will improve as the weeks go by. In widening out the street a great improvement was made in front of the Home for the Aged by the removal of a large elm tree, which was partly in the sidewalk, and then regrading the lawn.

Now the N. Y. N. H. & H. railroad must rebuild its railroad crossing on Quincy Avenue. Should it remove the planks and put in asphalt, as has been done on Elm street at Braintree, it would be a permanent improvement which autoists and others would appreciate.

It is to be regretted that the street railway company has not relaid their rails and reopened the car line as far as the railroad crossing. Any attempt of the company to shirk its assessment for the new bridge should be defeated. It was because of the street railway that the new bridge was built.

JUSTICE WANTED

One of the issues of former Lieut. Gov. Louis A. Frothingham's platform in his campaign for Congress in the 14th district is justice and promotion for Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards, the former commander of the YD troops. Candidate Frothingham, who seeks election as the Republican nominee, addressed many gatherings in this district last week and attacked the war department for failing to recognize valor and faithful service in France, which General Edwards displayed fighting the German troops in France. He said it would be one of his first duties, if elected, to fight for a fair reward to General Edwards, who had been snubbed, while other officers were promoted over his head.

BASEBALL

A double-header was staged last Sunday afternoon at the Humphrey School grounds. In the first game the Eagle A. C. won from the Lakeside Jr. A. A., 11 to 7. Melvin Knight, Weymouth's new youthful pitching sensation, hurled for the Eagle A. C. and secured 13 strikeouts. Draper, the Eagle A. C. leftfielder, made one of the best catches ever seen on the sandlots of Weymouth when he ran away in, reaching for the ball with one hand while on the dead run, and went sprawling on his back, retiring the side. There were two on bases at the time, and if he had muffed it, it would have gone for a hit. Draper also got 4 singles and a base on balls. Coffey got 3 singles. Conyie Condrick umpired.

The second game was between two Lake Street teams, and was sort of a family affair. There were three Mauro brothers, well known in baseball and two Garofalo brothers in the lineup.

COUNTRY PLANNING

The preliminary programs for the annual convention of the American Civic Association to be held in Amherst at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Oct. 14, 15 and 16 are being sent out by Prof. Frank A. Waugh, chairman of the local committee.

Country planning is the theme of the three days discussions which will consider the adaptation of urban methods of community beautification to rural towns and villages. Rural organizations, Country Highways, An Art Movement for the Open Country, and Rural School Grounds are among the topics assigned to notable speakers on the program.

The American Country Life Association, the Massachusetts State Grange and the Massachusetts Federation of Town Planning Boards will meet at the College during the same three days and will hold some sessions jointly with the American Civic Association.

QUINCY THEATRE

Dramatic interest could not be more tense than it is in "Rose of Tennessee" which is to be given at the Quincy Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 4, 5 and 6. The story is not only one that grips the heart and sustains the interest, but it is unusual in its theme. The situations are all admirably conceived and powerfully presented by the members of the Lutringer Stock Co.

Up in the mountains of Tennessee dwells Jack Rose. He has inherited great wealth and most of his available cash is deposited in a bank controlled by General Derring. This individual is in financial difficulties and sees the closing of his bank, especially since Rose is about to withdraw his account. The good old Southerner is too proud to mention this fact. Jack reaches town and at a party is presented to Azalie Deering. From her he learns the condition of the bank, and because of his interest in her he decides to leave his money there. His interest grows to love, and he is soon an avowed rival of Mark Brierson.

The engagement of Jack and Azalie is to be announced and when the party comes, Mark astounds everybody by declaring that Jack has Negro blood in his veins. Of course the engagement is off. On top of this, Cindy Lane comes looking for the man who has ruined her. Mark is really the guilty person, but he attaches the blame on Jack, and the fact that Jack has been unable to clear himself of the charges that he has Negro blood in his veins, causes his denials of this charge to have little weight. Azalie, however, stands by him, but he himself is too much of a man to demand her in marriage until he is sure he is white.

Of course the story ends satisfactorily, but the climax that develop are of the very strongest kind.

Community Association For South Weymouth

An important event in South Weymouth is the formation of a Community Association. Men interested in the welfare of the village have discussed the project and have looked into its possibilities, and it is their firm belief that such an organization is greatly needed, and that the time for its formation is at hand. Many persons of influence and prominence have already signified their desire and willingness to cooperate in the undertaking.

The object of the Association may be stated briefly:

To promote better understanding and a spirit of good-will among all persons and societies in the town.

To institute stated get-together meetings for the people of the village for social, educational, aesthetic and moral uplift.

To look out for opportunities, and to help along civic improvement.

As soon as possible and practicable to provide a social center, equipped for recreational uses.

Membership will be open to all interested persons who sign the constitution and are willing to abide by, to broad and benevolent purposes. The idea is non-sectarian, and non-discriminating.

A mass meeting of all interested men, and young men, in South Weymouth is called for Tuesday evening, Oct. 12, at 8 o'clock in the Union church building. There will be singing and speaking. A speaker of note is expected, who will talk on community organization. A constitution will be adopted, and the organization completed.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Several Sunday Schools were represented at the 26th annual meeting of the South Shore division of Sunday Schools at the East Weymouth Methodist Episcopal church on Tuesday afternoon and evening. Frank E. Loud of South Weymouth presiding. In the afternoon there were addresses and conferences, interspersed with music.

In the evening a survey of district work by different officers, followed by an address by Rev. Dr. E. M. Ferguson on "Community Education in Religion."

At the business meeting these officers were elected: Henry S. Stowers of South Weymouth, president; W. A. Lathrop of Hingham, F. Wayland Preston of East Weymouth and H. A. Bryant of East Braintree, vice-presidents; Irving N. Holbrook of Braintree, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Charles Gragg of Quincy, superintendent of children's work; Miss Jessie Shirley of Quincy, superintendent of Young People's work; Rev. Isaac Sneath of Wollaston, superintendent of adult work; Frank E. Loud of South Weymouth, superintendent of officers' work.

Supper was served at 6.15 by ladies of the local church.

CRESCENT LODGE CHAMPIONS

Last Saturday afternoon on the playground at Lovell's Corner the fast Crescent Lodge baseball team of East Weymouth was awarded the game by the score of 9 to 0 when the Longfellow Lodge club of Rosindale, champions of the Metropolitan Boston Odd Fellows league, refused to abide by a decision of the umpire when the score stood at 2 runs each after 12 innings of the most exciting baseball played on the grounds this year.

Rix and Smith were the battery for Crescent, while Buttner and Cherry handled the battery work for Longfellow.

Crescent scored in the first inning with two out, when Roultson was safe on an error, stole second and scored when Wheaton, playing first base let P. Humphrey's hard hit ball get thru him.

Longfellow gathered one run in the third on a base on balls and a hit, while they added another in the fourth when Cherry was hit by a pitched ball and scored on an error by A. Humphrey.

Crescent tied the score in the ninth when P. Humphrey drew a pass, stole second and third, and scored on a two-bagger by A. Humphrey.

From then on until the twelfth inning neither side was able to put a run across, but in the last half of twelfth occurred the play that ended the game by forfeit. A. Humphrey, the first man up, struck out, but started for first when catcher Cherry dropped the third strike. Cherry threw wild to first, but the ball hit a fan, and the first baseman recovered the ball and got it to second, ahead of Humphrey. Umpire Phillips declared Humphrey safe, it being a blocked ball and dead, until returned to the pitcher's box, which is strictly according to established baseball rules. The Longfellow boys couldn't see it that way, declaring the man was out, and refusing to abide by the decision of the umpire, they called their team from the field.

It was a big disappointment to the large crowd that witnessed the game to see it end as it did, but the general opinion is that Phillips was entirely in the right in making the decision he made.

The score by innings:
Struck out: by Rix 12; by Buttner 14. Bases on balls: by Rix 6; by Buttner 3. Hits: Crescent 4; Longfellow 6. Errors: Crescent 4; Longfellow 6.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

The Weymouth High vs Abington High football game scheduled for last Friday was postponed.

The game at Rockland on Tuesday resulted in a tie score 1 to 1.

CONNORS SUPERINTENDENT

Daniel Connors of Quincy has been appointed superintendent of the Weymouth and the Hingham-Hull districts of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. These two districts are operated separately, under agreement between the Public Trustees and the communities served, the towns contributing by taxation to the support of the road. Mr. Connors was formerly superintendent of the Quincy district.

The Street Railway Home Rule Committee of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce has written to the Public Trustees recommending that the 12-rides-for-a-dollar tickets which are now being used throughout Quincy, be used on the Washington Street line as far as Thomas' Corner, North Weymouth.

The Weymouth vote for President, taken at the store of G. R. Kempf, shows these totals today: Harding 138; Cox 74.

Town Counsel Worthen Victim of Pneumonia

Another well known citizen prominent in town affairs passed away Tuesday afternoon, Albert P. Worthen, for 29 years Town Counsel of Weymouth, and a Representative to the General Court in 1893, after a short illness of pneumonia. He took a keen interest in Weymouth and the many legal problems that have arisen during the past generation, and has served on many town committees.

Mr. Worthen was a native of the good old Granite State, which has always had a hand in the making of our men of mark, and was born in Bridgewater Sept. 8, 1861. His parents Samuel K. and Sarah F. Worthen, five years after moved to the rural districts of Bristol.

Young Worthen's experience in early life was that of a farmer boy of this generation, consisting of vigorous physical exercise on the farm and vigorous mental exercise in the district school. In 1874 we find him entering New Hampton Institute, one of New Hampshire's best known literary institutions, the early training school of so many of our best known statesmen and men of note. Here, after seven years of study, interspersed with labor on his father's farm at home, he graduated with high honor in June, 1881, delivering the Society Address on Commencement day.

Mr. Worthen, early in life, evinced a desire for the legal profession, and after graduating from the institution at once set himself to work in this direction. He desired the best legal training obtainable, but was dependent upon his own resources. How was he to get it? He had the will and this brought him the means.

He spent a year canvassing for a well known, portrait copying house and in the fall of 1882 he was able to enter the Boston University Law school. Here he was an able student, highly esteemed by his instructors and fellows, and became librarian of the school in his second year, which position he held until his graduation in June 1885, defraying his entire expenses for the three years' course by canvassing Saturdays and vacations. He graduated with a cum laude diploma and the degree of L. L. B., and with the highest honors of his class, having been unanimously elected by his classmates as class orator. His oration, delivered in Tremont Temple upon this occasion was very favorably commented on by the Boston press.

Immediately after graduation he received admission to the Suffolk County Bar, and subsequently commenced practicing law in Boston, where he has since followed this profession; in 1886 opening an evening office in Weymouth, taking up his residence here.

He soon became an authority on town law and his advice was sought by many lawyers. He was elected president of the Town Counsel Association of Massachusetts; a position he held many years. At a nominal salary he did great work for Weymouth, notably on reduction of assessments for the Fore River bridge; for Metropolitan assessments for sewerage; for the Charles River basin; and more recently on street railway matters.

Because of his interest in town affairs he was elected president of the Weymouth Planning Board, and always attended the State conferences.

He was a man of marked ability, of fine presence, an able speaker, and his plain good sense and sterling integrity always found him on the right side of nearly every question.

Mr. Worthen was twice married and is survived by a widow, two sons, Alfred and Richard; and one daughter Elizabeth. In 1893 there was a notable event in his family, when his first wife, Harriet Reed, presented him with triplets, three six-pound sons; only one, Alfred, survives. His second wife was Miss Susan R. Richards, a daughter of the late Augustus J. Richards.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at his late residence on Front street, with Rev. J. C. Justice of the Union church, as the officiating clergyman. A male quartet will sing. The honorary bearers will be: Charles Justice, Arthur P. Rugg, ex-Gov. (Continued on Page 3)

Relations With Japan Becoming Badly Strained Though There Is No Danger of War.

TOKYO LEARNS U. S. STAND

Disclosures of Crookedness in Organized Baseball Arouse Indignation and Grief—Poles and Baron Wrangel Still Driving the Reds—Moscow Eager for Peace.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Despite the undoubted fact that the governments of the United States and Japan are earnestly striving to arrive at an amicable settlement of their differences, the relations between the two nations are becoming more strained daily. This does not mean that hostilities will ensue—such an eventuality is almost out of the question—but the situation is giving undesirable opportunity to the alarmists and the jingoes of both countries and is really worrying the statesmen and those directly interested in international commerce.

The administration at Washington has sent to Tokyo a communication stating just how far it is willing to go to meet the desires of the Japanese, and this proposition was taken under consideration by the Japanese cabinet. At neither capital was any information given out as to the contents of the American note, but it was reported in Washington that one of the fundamental considerations insisted upon by the administration is that Japan shall give a new guarantee against immigration, in the form of an amendment either to the existing treaty or to the "gentlemen's agreement" under which since 1907 Japan has undertaken to prevent the emigration of laborers to America.

If Japan agreed to accept any such amendment, it probably would be to the gentlemen's agreement, for the Japanese people would scarcely stand for a formal treaty by which they, almost alone, would be set apart as undesirable immigrants into America. If Japan cannot bring about a definite settlement of the trouble at this time, she desires at least to reach an understanding that will quiet the talk of Japanese domination in California and induce the people of that state to reject, at the coming election, the proposed new alien land law which is the cause of most of Japan's protests. The adoption of that law was prevented last year by the administration, but whether this could be done again is problematical.

We have thought in America that the Japanese people were considerably wrought up over this question, but according to Marquis Okuma, former premier, they are not sufficiently aroused. It is now announced in Tokyo that Okuma is going to devote himself to awakening the Japanese people against "the unlawful attitude of California Americans," and that he will call a meeting of 100 leading statesmen and other prominent citizens to exchange views on the subject. The marquis says his fellow countrymen are becoming weak and cowardly, like the Chinese, are indifferent to grave questions affecting the nation's interests, and that a strong, unified national opinion must defend the interests of the Japanese in California. He predicts that unless something is done to check the Californians, there will arise a similar state of affairs in Canada, Australia, New Zealand and other British dominions.

That the Japanese already are retaliating in such ways as are open to them is indicated by correspondence between Secretary of Commerce Alexander and Chairman Benson of the shipping board. Mr. Benson called to the attention of Mr. Alexander instances of Japanese procedure at Kobe amounting to discrimination against American shipments to the Far East. In reply Secretary Alexander wrote: "The nature of the discrimination is in almost every case so subtle, notwithstanding its effectiveness, that it is almost impossible to take formal action. The best solution of the matter seems to be direct transportation of American goods in American ships wherever possible."

The proposed California law, it is held by its proponents, would deny to the Japanese in this country no rights or privileges not denied to Americans in Japan by Japanese law. It may be as well to give here the following summary of the chief features of the proposed law. It says:

That aliens, ineligible to citizenship in the United States, companies, corporations and associations, the majority of whose stock is owned by such aliens, are authorized to own and convey land only as provided by treaty and not otherwise.

That such persons, companies, corporations and associations shall not be appointed guardians of estates consisting wholly or in part of realty, but that the public administrator or other "competent person" shall act for the minor heirs of such estates.

That ownership or leases, acquired in violation of the law, shall become and remain the property of the state of California.

That evasions of the law governing conveyance of property shall be punishable by fine, not exceeding $5,000 nor more than two years in jail or both.

Governor Stephens says of it: "The bill does not and will not, because the state legally cannot, prevent Japanese control of our soil nor can it stop further immigration. The full solution of this question cannot be had short of an exclusion act passed by congress."

Hot indignation and genuine grief have been aroused all over the land by the revelations of crookedness in organized baseball in the grand jury investigation in Chicago. That here and there might be found one or two players who would sell out would not be surprising, but that eight members on one club should be guilty of such shameful if not criminal conduct would be unbelievable were it not attested by the confessions of some of the accused. These men not only sold their honor and the respect and admiration of the American people, but they sold out for petty sums and to cheap gamblers, who "double-crossed" them, and now they have nothing left but bitter reflections and the remnants of their bribes.

The grand jury voted true bills against eight men, seven of whom are still members of the Chicago White Sox club, the eighth having been suspended last spring. They are accused of "conspiracy to do an unlawful act." State's Attorney Hoynes was doubtful whether any crime as legally defined had been committed within the jurisdiction of the courts of Cook county, but the attorney for Charles Comiskey, the broken-hearted owner of the White Sox, says there are at least two counts on which each of the players named in the true bills may be prosecuted. He says the public paid admissions to see honest baseball played, and the conspiracy to throw the games thereby cheated the public. Also he asserts the men conspired to injure the property of Comiskey, consisting of contracts worth more than $200,000 and the drawing power of the team and other good will estimated at $300,000.

It is believed that if the state does not take definite action against the players the government will prosecute those who received bribes for their failure to schedule the same on their income tax reports. Official word to this effect has been received in Chicago from the internal revenue department in Washington.

The White Sox, which were only half a game behind the Cleveland team in the race for the American league pennant, were of course badly wrecked when the seven players were suspended, and the chances were small indeed that they could win the honor of playing for the world's championship against Brooklyn, which already has captured first place in the National league.

Cheers for the League of Nations council on the ground that it had stopped or averted hostilities involving four nations may have been premature or over-enthusiastic. Lithuania and Poland, which were actually fighting, have not ceased yet, though they probably will before long. As for the dispute between Sweden and Finland over the Aland Islands, the former nation protests that there never was any danger of hostilities, as she always settles international disputes peaceably. Swedish officials said the quarrel with Finland would be amicably ended, though they added that Sweden never would give up the Aland Islands.

Both the Poles and General Wrangel continued their successful warfare on the Russian soviet forces. The former at last reports had captured the important cities of Lida and Pinsk, and were steadily advancing north-eastward toward Vilna, whose fall was expected soon. Lida is the place where Trotsky was said recently to have established the headquarters of a new Bolshevik army of 90,000 for a fall campaign against the Poles. The Ukrainians, who are operating on that front, have recovered Kamanetz-Podolsk from the Bolsheviks and are said to be planning a drive to form a junction with Wrangel's forces and to sever the soviet line of communication between Kiev and Odessa.

Wrangel, who is now well to the north of Alexandrovsk, is being aided by Makno, the independent Ukrainian leader, and is taking large numbers of prisoners.

The soviet government has had more than enough war with Poland, and at the Riga conference is seemingly making every effort to arrange an armistice that shall lead to peace. According to a dispatch from Warsaw, Adolph Joffe, head of the Russian delegation, received instructions from Moscow to accept all the conditions laid down by Poland, however hard they may be, except those compelling Russia to partly or wholly disarm her Red army. So far the chief matter in dispute has been the line of demarcation between Poland, White Russia and Ukraine.

There has been no cessation of the guerrilla warfare in Ireland. Nearly every day one or more members of the British police or army are murdered by Sinn Feiners, and in almost every instance reprisal is swift and bloody. Towns and villages are raided and the homes of well-known Sinn Feiners are burned, and often they are taken out and shot to death. The British government, though it has started an inquiry into the killings, seems rather helpless in the matter. Mayor MacSwiney of Cork is still alive, and a London paper says it has learned he is being given food in concentrated form.

Though the effort to communize the industrial plants of Italy is admittedly a failure, the disturbances there are increasing. The workers and owners in the metal plants are approaching some measure of agreement, with the aid of the government, but the employees in other lines and the peasants in Sicily and other districts are yielding to the efforts of radical trouble-makers. Seizure of lands by armed peasants, beginning in Sicily, spread to the north during the week and threatened to become nation-wide.

The best development of the week was the way in which prices in the United States began to decline. In most cases manufacturers and dealers who offered the reductions tried to make it clear that they were based on expectations of future conditions, in order to free themselves from the suspicion of having profiteered at the former prices. Economists called attention to two things: First, that safety demanded that prices decline gradually instead of tumbling; second, that the people must not let the lower prices lead them into another orgy of buying, lest the result be another rise.

America met with defeat in the airplane race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy in France. One of her entries was thrown out by an accident and the two others did not get far, owing to defects of construction in their engines. The race was won by a Frenchman, Sadi Lecoq, and the trophy now remains permanently in France.

Aristocratic Swallow.

The swallow comes from an old and aristocratic family and has the honor of being named several times in the Bible, which is not strange, as his tribe skimmed the soft air of Palestine. He appeared in literature way back in the time of Aristotle, who said, "One swallow maketh not a spring." A proverb translated into all languages. The swallow was honored by a special holiday given to the children of Attica to celebrate his arrival.

"The Three Kings of Cologne."

This refers to the three wise men of the East who followed the star to the birthplace of Jesus Christ. Their names are usually given as Malthazar, Gaspar and Melchior. Their bones are supposed to be preserved in the cathedral of Cologne.

French Troops Entering Beirut

This photograph of the entry of the French troops into Beirut was taken recently. On the right is General Gouraud, the French commander in Syria, passing in front of a double row of Fusiliers Marins, and accompanied by General Goybet, who shortly afterwards entered Damascus at the head of the French troops who were dispatched there to "enforce the mandate."

WOULD SELL HIMSELF

Jack Hardy, former sailor, now living in a hall bedroom in New York, has offered to sell the remainder of his natural life for not less than $3,000 cash. He is only twenty-two years old. He says he wants to turn over the $3,000 to the woman "who has been all that a mother has ever been to anyone. I am in no way legally obligated to her, and at this moment she is in no great need of the money, but my conscience points a duty."

S. P. COCHRAN IN BRONZE

Statue in bronze of Samuel P. Cochran, grand inspector general of the Scottish Rite Masons, by the famous Swedish-American sculptor, David Edstrom, to be dedicated in November at Dallas, Tex. The figure stands slightly over seven feet and surmounts an eight-foot pedestal of Tennessee marble.

Took a Big Strap.

David had spent several days at Atlantic City and his idea of a large body of water was just that—Atlantic City. One day he came in from play with shoes and socks soaking wet. "Why, David, how did you get so wet?" questioned his mother. "Well, mother," said he, "I stepped in 'Lantic City.'"

Incidental Diversion.

"I notice that your business letters are taking on a slightly facetious turn," remarked the old friend. "Yes," explained Mr. Cumrox. "Competent assistance is very scarce, and I am trying to make the stenographer's work as entertaining as possible."

"Taps" Over Grave of Miss Delano

Bugler sounding "taps" over the grave of Miss Jane Delano, chief of the Red Cross nurse corps, who died in Europe.

MONDAY CLUB

Monday, Oct. 4, was voted a delightful day, without and within, by all the members of the Monday Club who attended the first meeting of the season on that date.

To each member was given the Year Book daintily bound in white, with the years 1920 and 1921 and the club motto in gold on the cover. The pages tied with violet cord. This booklet containing a list of officers and members and coming events, with accompanied dates, will serve as a reminder of these things and of those members who gave much thought to its careful listing.

During the gathering of the members Mrs. Merchant and Mrs. Orcutt gave musical selections on the piano and violin, and the meeting was opened by the singing of "America." Then came the President's greeting to old and new members and the reading of some appropriate extracts from "Your Club and Mine." Miss Louisa E. Humphrey was introduced by Miss Corino of the legislative committee and gave a talk on Prohibition. This was followed by an entertainment furnished by the contralto singer, Miss Starbird, and the reader, Miss Benjamin. Miss Starbird's songs were given in a friendly restful way, with a few tactful explanations when necessary that gave added enjoyment to her audience.

After the entertainment came the social hour in charge of Mrs. Gray Stevens, who with her assistants, served the dainty sweets, each plate with its autumn leaf, and the coffee following; all this adding the final touch to the afternoon's meeting.

QUINCY THEATRE

The hundreds of people in Weymouth who will see "Tess of the Storm Country," when it is given at the Quincy Theatre by the Al Luttringer Stock Co. can well understand how disappointed hundreds of others will be who did not get the chance to see this most capable production. It will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 11, 12, 13.

"Tess of the Storm Country" is a play that appeals to everyone, old and young. Tessabel Skinner, the heroine of the production as played by Ann Kingsley is a role that cannot fail to win the hearts of all.

"Tess of the Storm Country" he it known has been practically immortalized by Mary Pickford on the screen. The play made Mary's reputation, but no matter how good she is or what part she takes or was in the part, Miss Ann Kingsley of the Al Luttringer Stock Co takes the part of "Tess" just as good.

Most Theatre goers are familiar with the story of this absorbingly interesting play. In brief it tells of fish poachers on the shores of an American lake. A fish warden is murdered by Ellis Graves and he fastens the blame on Ora Skinner, the father of Tess. Of course Ora is finally proven innocent, but before this happened there are some mighty strong situations, some ripping good lines and some decidedly delicious comedy.

Comedy roles in the play for the dialogue fairly sparkles with humor, material that can never be brought out on the screen. The whole play is so interesting that one actually hates to have it end. All the members of the Al Luttringer company have good roles.

LEGION POST PURIFIES LITTLE OIL-BOOM TOWN IN TEXAS

How a post of the American Legion purified a little oil-boom town in Texas when respect for law and order had become a mockery is told in the American Legion Weekly.

Desdemona, Tex., was hardly more than a stop for wayfarers on the road, a slumbrous, dusty community, until oil came and the town took on new life and lured hosts of brawny adventurers. The treasure hunters came to prospect and pioneer, but, as is inevitable the case, there followed after them a horde of shifty-eyed gentry and red-lipped women. The word was passed out that the lid was off in Desdemona.

Then the ring ran up against The American Legion. Individually for a long time the members of Peavy-Brice post tried quietly to combat the spread of vice in Desdemona. The ring, aided by the town constable, a deputy sheriff and the justice of the peace, decided that it would crush this organization of veterans who stood for ideals that were not compatible with places of unsavory repute. It began by threatening the Legionnaires with violence and when it found them unwilling to retaliate it grew more arrogant. The post quietly called a captain of Texas rangers from Austin.

The captain found Desdemona in tumult. Armed members of the vice ring were parading through the streets in confident bravado. The post marshaled its forces and ordered the three offending "peace" officers of the town to leave within twenty-four hours. The latter returned a contemptuous refusal. Desdemona seethed. From all fields and camps hundreds of men poured into town to be present when the ultimatum should expire.

Eighteen Legionnaires were sworn in as deputy rangers and mingled with the crowd while the offending officers swaggered down the main street. Just as the time limit expired one unarmed member of the Legion post stepped up to the officers and ordered them to surrender. A dozen revolvers leaped from a dozen hips and all the bravado went out of the ring. The Legion deputies disarmed the leaders and marched them off to an office, where they wrote out their resignations as town officials.

The next morning the roads from Desdemona were dotted with automobiles bearing the exodus of the sporting fraternity to newer and greener pastures. Desdemona was through with them.

A FEW LITTLE SMILES

CONSIDERABLE POINT.

"Officer," inquired the testy judge, "what's all that rumpus in the jury-room?"
 "Y'r honor, the foreman says they're arguing a valuable point."
 "Oh, tell them that they have my approbation, but ask them to be a little more quiet about it."
 "Y'r honor," replied the courtroom dignitary on his return, "th' jury wishes to thank you for your approbation, but the point they're arguing is one of penochle for $5 a side."—American Legion Weekly.

THE OTHER MAN'S GAME
 Madam Zizzi: What, you broke! I thought you was makin' all kinds of money at the clairvoyant game.
 Professor Zoom: I was, but I lost it all in stocks.

The Paragon.

No man is perfect—though sometimes there's one, in wife's view—The man she could have married if she hadn't married you.

Two Points of View.

A pessimist and an optimist were discussing life from their different viewpoints.

"I really believe," said the former, "that I could make a better world myself."

"Well," said the optimist, "that's what we are here for. Now let's get to work and do it."—London Answers.

A Little Mixed.

"What is an embargo, Bill?"
 "It's what you put on ships to keep 'em from going out, Sam."
 "It ain't, you fool. That's the anchor."

Quite Different.

"Did you apply an astringent to the wound?"
 "I didn't use any of them expensive remedies. The doctor said all I needed was something to draw it up."

A Good Place.

"Somehow, in spite of all their protestations, reformers never can find the man higher up."
 "Why don't they hunt for him in the aviation service?"

The Easy Way.

"You recommended that man very highly."
 "Yes."
 "But he proved to be utterly useless."
 "I thought he would, but you see I had to get rid of him as easily as possible."—Detroit Free Press.

Sad Future.

Randolph—What's the matter, old man? You look as if you'd been sentenced to hard labor for life.
 De Broke—I'm afraid I have been. Miss de Millyuns has just refused me.—London Answers.

Any Excuse.

"I suppose the dry-law enforcement agents will be down on the father of that shrilly crying infant."
 "Why so?"
 "Because of its indulgence in high howls."

ATTENTION TO DISABLED MEN

Many Posts Join in Campaign to Provide Aid and Care for Afflicted Ex-Service Boys.

Quick response has been manifested by scores of posts of the Legion in the campaign launched by the Americanism commission to aid and care for disabled service men. Reports from all sections of the country tell of entertainments arranged for the wounded and of visits to the hospitals where they are confined.

Eight service men who are now in the Fox Hills (N. Y.) hospital have been assigned to the Scarsdale post, which is planning to look after them following their discharge from the institution, while the New Haven (Conn.) post presents a weekly entertainment for the 400 veterans convalescing in the hospital in that city.

Plans along similar lines are being carried out by the John Purroy Mitchell post of New York city, which has appointed a committee to advise and assist wounded men in the Polyclinic hospital, and a group of patients from this institution are entertained each week at the Knollwood Country club at White Plains. The men are taken out into the country in motorcars.

Henry J. Ryan, state Americanism chairman of Massachusetts, arranged an outing when many soldier convalescents in the hospitals in and around Boston were motored to a country estate in Chestnut Hill, where they were guests at a luncheon and a horse show was staged for their benefit.

of the present laws looking toward the rehabilitation of wounded men.

Following the sessions of the conference Mrs. Phillips will tour England, France and Italy studying the methods of the various governments.

Mrs. Phillips served with the ambulance corps in the war and was wounded in action near Verdun. She spent five and one-half months in hospitals. She was decorated for gallantry by the French government and has been recommended to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor, the highest reward for valor in the gift of the United States government. As president of the National Carry On association her work for the disabled is widely known. She is a member of Wendell Phillips post, New York city Voted for Cigarettes.

Anti-cigarette reformers met their Waterloo when a Legion post at Downers Grove, an exclusive suburb of Chicago, restored the banned "smokes" to the shelves of local stores by means of a referendum. The vote was almost two to one in favor of bringing back the cigarettes and more women voted for the restoration than against it.

You Can't Help Liking This Range

The GOLD MEDAL GLENWOOD is in reality a combination range consisting of two complete ranges using different fuels, with neither one interfering in any manner with the other.

Coal supplies the fuel for one, and gas for the other. So far as the use of these two fuels is concerned, it is exactly as though you had a coal range and a gas range. The difference is that they occupy the same floor space instead of being two separate ranges in two different parts of the kitchen.

You may use the coal and the gas at the same time, or either one without the other. You have gas in warm weather and coal in cold weather. But at any time you wish to do more baking or more cooking, you have the advantage of using both fuels and both ovens at the same time.

It responds to your cooking art so quickly and efficiently, you will find that cooking is one of the greatest pleasures in your home.

Call and See Them and you will understand at once why a Glenwood Range "Makes Cooking Easy"

Cow-Pilot a Small Fish. The cow-pilot is a small fish, so called in Bermuda because it is believed always to accompany the cow-fish. It is one of the demoiselles and is also called "modorra." Demoiselles are distinguished by having only two spines in the anal fin.

Domestics of Brazil. In Brazil not 1 per cent of the male and female servants will, it is said, sleep in their master's house. They insist on leaving at the latest by seven o'clock in the evening and will not return before seven or eight o'clock in the morning.

Let's settle this right now!

LUCKY GIRL.
"I say, old chap, I hear you are engaged to Miss Sweet. Is that true?"
"Quite true, old top. Isn't she the lucky girl?"

The Real Reason.
Some reasons landlords raise their rents are sad and some are funny; But few in truth have said it is Because they want the money.

Try, Try Again.
"Has your wife a sense of humor?"
"I don't think so," replied Mr. Pynhed. "I have told her the same joke over and over and I don't believe she has laughed at it more than twice in her whole life."

A Puzzle.
"This gambling in stocks by trusted employees reminds me of the old beheading puzzles."
"How so?"
"Beheading speculation and what remains?"

Tyranny of Fashion.
"Do you think your wife will always want to vote?"

FASHIONS NOW ALL POINT RIBBONWARD

THE signposts of fashion all point or beckon us ribbonward. Everything that can be made of it is elaborated and embellished, so that all the usual ribbon accessories offer examples of intricate workmanship and reveal the hand of the specialist in designing. Now that the holidays are dawning, this artistry in ribbons will find its reward because ribbon accessories will fill a big acre in the Christmas horizon and it will take longer to make these more elaborate things than the simpler ones of other years.

In the group of ribbon articles shown above, the long sash marks this tendency to lavish adornment. A wide, soft, satin ribbon employs silver tissue to form with itself the girdle for the waist, which is knotted at the left side and is finished with a long loop of the ribbon and a long end of silver tissue. A cluster of grapes, made of the tissue, is posed at the right side and the long end of tissue is twisted about with another cluster as a finish. Such a girdle will convert a simple frock into something splendid, and it would make a lovely gift.

A ribbonless breakfast cap would be a curiosity—words without music. The new ways of employing ribbons on these cheerful bits of headwear are many and two of them are shown in the picture. On a cap of white net there are frills of narrow satin ribbon knife plaited, and a headband of wider satin ribbon folded about it, slipping through a buckle made of the plaited ribbon. On a cap of georgette, narrow pleated ribbon is tacked in saw-tooth design with little bows set about the edge. At the side of the cap there are short standing loops of the narrow ribbon and one long hanging loop with two longer ends.

The garters pictured are among the simplest that are to be found in the shops. Others have frills of gold, silver and silk or cotton laces, besides rosettes and tiny flowers. They are all made by shirring satin ribbon over flat elastic bands, and the pair shown has small rosettes of ribbon for decoration. Among sachet bags there are square, oblong, heart-shaped and round bags made of satin ribbon in various colors. The round sachet is shown in the picture with a cluster of tiny ribbon roses adorning it, their stems and foliage simulated by embroidery silk.

A pretty elastic girdle finishes the group, trimmed with little ribbon roses. It is made in the same way as the garters. Green baby ribbon, twisted into stems and looped to simulate leaves makes a pretty setting for the ribbon roses.

TOBACCO GROWN IN ANY SECTION

Commercial Value of Product Influenced Greatly by Soil and Climatic Conditions.

OVERPRODUCTION IS MENACE

Certain Methods for Production of Various Types Are Recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The tobacco plant may be grown successfully in all latitudes from southern Canada to the tropics and on a great variety of soils, but the commercial value of the product is influenced to a greater degree by the particular soil and climatic conditions under which the plant is grown than is almost any other important crop. These facts are so well recognized that the tobacco industry has become highly specialized, and the trade regularly looks to certain well-defined areas of production for its supply of the various classes and types of leaf required. In these tobacco-producing districts the necessary facilities for marketing are available, and prevailing prices of the cured leaf are governed largely by the relative supply and demand and by the quality of the leaf produced.

Increased Production.
Each important district produces a tobacco of certain well-known characteristics which make it desirable for special purposes of manufacture or export. Moreover, in practically all of these districts the production can be readily increased to meet any increased demand at profitable prices. For these reasons efforts to introduce the commercial growing of tobacco in sections outside of the established producing centers are likely to result in failure, either because the leaf produced is not quite right in type or satisfactory marketing facilities are not available. Furthermore, any development of the industry in a new section on a large scale, which would be essential for economical marketing, would most likely lead to overproduction and, as a consequence, unprofitable prices. As a matter of fact, overproduction is a constant menace in all of the established centers of tobacco growing.

Growing and Handling.
The methods of growing and handling the crop must be varied according to the type of leaf which it is desired to produce, for the kind of tobacco is influenced very greatly by the methods of growing and handling which are employed. Certain methods for the production of the various types are recommended by the United States department of agriculture. Though possibly susceptible of improvement in some of the details, they are the best available in view of the present knowledge and experience of investigators and the more successful growers. These recommendations are contained in Farmers' Bulletin 571, "Tobacco Culture," copies of which can be had by addressing a request to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Harvesting Tobacco by Cutting the Stalk, Showing the Method of Spear-ing the Plant on the Stick.

QUALITIES OF LAYING HENS

Small Feminine Neck and Head, Bright, Alert Eye and Drooping Tail All Count.

An experienced, close-observing poultry raiser knows at a glance the laying hen; the small feminine neck and head count again; the bright, alert eye tells a tale; the drooping tail tells another tale; and when she picks her feet up and plumps them down we have another pointer.

RAPE EXCELLENT FOR SWINE

Can Be Expected to Add Many Pounds in Season to Growing Shoats—Lessens Feed Bill.

Never forget that good rape makes excellent hog feed and can be sown lightly in the oats or broadcast in a cornfield at the last cultivation and be expected to add many pounds in a season to a growing bunch of shoats with a corresponding lessening of the pressure on the feedbins in making pork.

WHEAT HARVESTED IN ALL PARTS OF WORLD

Work in United States Begins Late in Month of May.

According to Department of Agriculture 35 Per Cent of Crop is Gathered in July, 25 in August and 15 in June.

Under the conditions prevailing before the World war, 35 per cent of the world's wheat crop was harvested in July, 25 per cent in August, 15 per cent in June, 7 per cent in April, 5 per cent in January, 4 per cent in May, 3 per cent each in March and December, 2 per cent in September, 1 per cent in February, and much less than 1 per cent each in October and November. The wheat harvest of the world may be regarded as beginning in December in South America, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, continuing through January and substantially ending in February. India then begins and increases in activity through March and April. In April harvesting operations begin in such countries as Persia, Asia Minor, and Mexico. In May activity is lessened, for then the Indian harvest has been about completed, and the harvest season is crossing the Mediterranean from north Africa to southern Europe, where harvests do not become general until June. Late in May the harvest of the United States begins. In June, July and August about 75 per cent of the world's crop is harvested, the season progressing steadily northward during these months. By September harvest operations are nearly completed, Scotland, northern Russia and Siberia, the United States and Canada having a little left over from August. Very little harvesting of wheat is done in October and November.

SLIDING DOOR ON CONCRETE

Iowa Farmer Solves Problem by Using Channel in Groove, Anchored With Rods.

When a sliding door is used at the entrance of a barn or machine shed a groove between the floor and the approach is often used as a guide for the door. But when concrete is used this construction is not satisfactory, as the edges are chipped off by the wheels of wagons and other machinery with steel tires.

An Iowa farmer has solved this problem in a very simple and satisfactory manner. He placed a three-inch, four-pound channel iron in the groove. Holes were drilled through the sides at intervals of two feet and rods placed through them to serve as anchors.

The iron protects the concrete and forms a smooth guide for the door.

PROPER ROOST FOR PULLETS

When About Half Matured Provide Platform for Fowls About Eighteen Inches From Floor.

Never provide roosts until the pullets are about half matured. A good plan is to have a platform erected, about eighteen inches from the floor, upon which they may go at night. After the birds are about half matured, roosts can be placed on this platform, to which they will readily take. Where pullets are compelled to roost on the floor until well grown, they are very slow about taking to roosts when they require it. Besides, unless the droppings are cleaned up daily, roosting on the floor will soon breed a lot of red mites which will torment the stock more than anything else.

MARKET FOR PUREBRED SIRE

One Method is to Inaugurate a Campaign for High-Class Bulls in Place of Scrubs.

There are two ways of helping the market for purebred bulls. One method is to put on purebred sire campaigns, which will help to put purebred bulls in place of scrub bulls throughout the country, and the other method is to castrate the poorer individuals and place only the better class of bulls on the market. Both methods can be used to good advantage by the purebred men, and both methods will help the live stock production of the country.

Representative Hat Styles

"AGE cannot wither nor custom stale" the interest of woman-kind in new millinery. In September they bestow upon themselves new tailored hats for fall, and in glorious October—when the styles have crystallized—they go in the real quest of their winter millinery.

The silhouettes of the new hats vary greatly, but they are distinguished by unusual smartness. Brims hold the center of the stage, with crowns playing an important second to them, but never detracting from the star role of the brims.

Trimmings must play up to the level of all these clever brims, and they do. Coral and steel beads, coral brooches, curled aigrettes (of horsehair), and wonderful ribbons show themselves in sympathetic shapes. Embroidery and fancy life exploited in unnumbered ingenious ways that make for chicness. A study of the group of hats pictured reveals representative styles. At the upper left a hat with velvet crown and duvetyrn brim has a sunburst of silk embroidery for trimming. At the right a velvet hat has a flange at the brim-edge, making place for ever present needlework, and in the center a soft-crowned velvet hat, with wide, irregular brim boasts a coque feather plume. No display would be complete without a handsome tam like that pictured, with a few dangling coque feathers on it, and long, soft ostrich plumes on velvet hats are found in every assemblage of correct millinery.

At Precinct 2 Sept. 29, the Registrars added 4 men and 25 women.
At the North Weymouth precinct Sept. 30, the women came out strong, there being 15 men and 62 women.
In Precinct 3, Weymouth Landing, Oct. 4, 13 men and 36 women were registered.
Wednesday night there was registration in Precinct 6, and Thursday night at Nash's Corner.
This evening the Registrars meet at South Weymouth, next Wednesday at North Weymouth, next Friday Lovell's Corner, Oct. 19 at South at Weymouth Landing, Oct. 18 at Weymouth, Oct. 22 in Precinct 6, and Oct. 23 registration will close; the board being in session at the Town Offices from 12 M to 10 P. MASONIC VISITATION
Orphans Hope lodge was largely represented Tuesday evening at the visitation of Rt. Wor. Henry D. Higgins to Wollaston lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Wollaston. Wor. Henry P. Tilden officiated as D. S. G. W., and George F. Farrar, Stanley T. Torrey and W. J. Denbroeder were also on the staff. The annual visitation to Orphans Hope lodge will be made next Thursday evening.

IDLEWELL STREETS
The Selectmen gave a hearing Monday on the acceptance of the street leading from Commercial street to Idlewell. The summer colony was largely represented, particularly by women, who put up a good case. Because of the railroad bridge it is a rather expensive improvement, but some street seems to be needed.

—Daniel Callahan of Avon made things exciting about the Hollis garage on Wednesday. He demanded money of J. Otis Hollis, and when unsuccessful he assaulted Mr. Hollis. Thomas South came to the latter's assistance. Charles Hollis summoned Officer Baker of Weymouth, but he refused to act in Braintree. Callahan was held by employees of the garage until a Braintree officer could be secured. Hollis Brothers demand an investigation of the police.

—Hundreds of Weymouth people have attended the Brockton Fair this week.
—The Bates Opera House building has been reshingled and repainted and is looking spic and span.
—George Husband of Front street has returned from a trip to Chicago and Indianapolis.

New Weymouth Division For Street Railway

Weymouth is finally to have real home rule in regard to the street railway with the introduction of the one-man cars on all lines yesterday. The local barn will be considered in conjunction with Hingham and Hull as the Weymouth division, with its local manager, auditor, cashier and repair departments. Even the money that is taken in will be banked at a local bank.

With the advent of these features it will have a distinctly local color, giving the town everything that belongs to it. And it is said that eventually the crews on the cars running to Quincy will be changed at New Downer Landing, giving to the Weymouth division everything that belongs to Weymouth.

Yesterday the entire division was placed on the one-man car basis, every line operated from this division being one-man cars.

In the making of the new division the local barn will do its own repairing, and in fact everything pertaining to cars will be directly responsible to the local manager.

Fatal Accident to Electric Light Employee

Joseph Gallant, 26 years of age, of 921 Commercial street received an electric shock Saturday afternoon at the power station of the Weymouth Light and Power Co., while engaged in cutting out high tension wires.

Gallant, with several others, was at work near the station cutting out wires when his head came in contact with a high tension wire which was carrying 8000 volts, which passed through his body, causing terrible burns and rendering him unconscious. He was picked up by his fellow workers, and Dr. Libby was summoned. After giving him first aid he ordered his removal to the Quincy hospital, where he died Sunday morning.

Mr. Gallant is survived by a wife and two babies, his parents and two brothers. The funeral services were held from the church of the Immaculate Conception Tuesday morning before one of the largest congregations ever to attend a funeral in this section of the town. The services were conducted by Rev. C. I. Riordon and seated on the altar were Rev. Fr. Dawson and Fr. Holland. A requiem mass was sung by the choir in charge of Miss Sadie White, organist. Burial was in St. Francis Xavier cemetery.

Monday evening about 125 members of Weymouth council, K. of C., marched in twos to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gallant on Commercial street in charge of Grand Knight Bart Coughlin and Warden Cornelius Condrick, and paid their last respects to the departed member, Brother Joseph Gallant, and offered condolences to the sorrowing relatives in the unfortunate and untimely end of their loved one.

BASEBALL

Albert (Big Chief) Bender, formerly with the Philadelphia Athletics, who has successfully piloted the New Haven club to the championship of the Eastern League as a pitcher-manager, when asked how he kept his arm in such good condition replied, "I don't overwork it. I give it all the rest it needs. That's one of the reasons that pitchers spoil their arms. They over-work them. And in the winter months I give my arm a complete rest from baseball. Many pitchers tire their arms out by pitching in the winter."

"Another thing that is harmful for a ball player, is sleeping late in the morning. And a great many fellows make that mistake. I insist that my boys go to bed in good season, and they all get up at a reasonable hour in the morning."

The Eagle A. C. went to Boston last Sunday and met the St. James team on Randolph street. The jitney containing the Eagle players had a "blow-out" in Quincy on the way to Boston, and caused delay in starting the game, which was called off at 6 o'clock in order to comply with the law. The score was 9 to 9, 10 innings.

UNITARIAN LAYMEN

Unitarian laymen of Quincy, Wollaston, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and Cohasset have united to arrange for a mass meeting in the Old Stone church in Quincy on Sunday evening, Oct. 17, for the discussion of the question "Religion and Patriotism—Are they Synonymous?" J. Randolph Coolidge Jr., the well known Boston architect, will make the principal address of the evening. The laymen have invited Charles Francis Adams to preside. They announce that an extensive musical program is being arranged, and promise a novelty in that a supper will be served at the close of the meeting.

The committee in charge of the meeting has obtained ample parking space for automobiles in Quincy Square. Each of the league chapters which are participating has appointed a transportation committee, and it is proposed to have all the parties from Weymouth Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham and Milton go to the meeting in motors which will be obtained by the local transportation committees.

The Quincy meeting is the first of a series of sectional and regional meetings which are being encouraged by the Unitarian Laymen's League.

ARRANGEMENT OF OILING SYSTEM

Installation of Drain Cock Overcomes Frequent Stoppage of Lubrication.

FIND TROUBLE IN AIR LOCK

In One Case Difficulty Was Overcome By Making Change as Shown in Illustration—Easy Task to Open the Petcock.

Many small automobiles are equipped with a constant-level splash system of engine lubrication in which a shaft-driven gear pump draws oil from a chamber cast in one piece with the lower part of the crank case. This pump discharges the oil through a copper tube to a sight-feed fitting on the dash, from which it goes to the crank case by gravity.

Air Lock Troublesome.

In one such case frequent stoppages of the oil flow were experienced, and when the parts were cleaned, little dirt was found, and the system worked temporarily on reassembly. An air lock was found to be responsible, and the change shown in the diagram was made to overcome the difficulty, the old arrangement at A, and the new one at B.

Change in Piping.

A change in the piping was made, as shown, the other fittings being undisturbed. The regular discharge fitting was attached with a tee. A petcock was placed opposite the discharge and an operating rod for it was run up to the top of the engine. As soon as the oil feed stops, it is but a minute's work to open the petcock, and allow a small quantity of oil to be pumped out. When this is then closed, the oil flows through the discharge pipe, whether the stoppage was due to an air lock or to dirt.—Victor W. Page, Bristol, Conn., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

LITTLE SCHEME SAVES TIME

Mark Numerous Electric Wires on Modern Car With Paint of Different Colors.

A little dodge that saves much time on occasion is the marking of the numerous electric wires on the modern car with different colored paint. Simply band one wire with red, another with green, a third with blue, etc. In this way when it is necessary to trace down the various wires to locate some trouble that has developed, there is little hardship in conducting the search.

TO OBLVIATE WEAK STARTING

Lack of Strength to Turn Over Crankshaft May Be Supplemented by Adding Another Battery.

When the starting motor for any reason lacks power to turn over the crank shaft it may be strengthened by coupling on another storage battery, connecting it in multiple so as not to increase the voltage. If the conducting wires are of sufficient size from the battery to the motor there will be a considerable gain in power output.

SHALLOW OIL PAN IS USEFUL SUBSTITUTE

May Be Used to Take Place of Wheeled-Jack.

Car May Be Swung Around in Small Garage Where Space for Turning and Maneuvering is Limited—Oil Not Good for Tires.

One of those special jacks with wheels on it to enable cars to be maneuvered without trouble in close quarters is a handy thing to have, especially in the garage where several cars are kept, and where it is necessary to run them pretty close together in order to get them all in. Such a jack merely raises the front or the back end of the car, and then the vehicle may be swung around to the desired point, doing away with a great deal of backing and turning and wheel twisting where the car must be worked around in the desired position under its own power.

But it appears that a car may be swung around in emergencies without the aid of a jack of the kind mentioned providing one of those shallow oil pans, such as is often slid under a car to catch any oil or grease drip from the motor or chassis, is at hand. We had stored our car in a garage where the space for turning and maneuvering was very small indeed, and in the absence of a jack with wheels on it, the garage attendant merely backed the car into the oil pan, which, by the way, had a slight film of oil and greasy material in it, says a writer in an exchange. With the rear tires standing on the pan, he merely pushed the car sideways and the tires slid across the oiled surface of the pan accomplishing the swinging process in a unique manner. And while it is not advocated that such a use be habitually made of the pan since it is none too good for the tires to get them in oil, nevertheless it is a kink worth knowing.

AUTOMOBILE HINTS

The grade crossing must go.

A 40-horsepower automobile in England costs $25,000.

In Massachusetts there are 310,000 people licensed to operate motor vehicles.

In many makes of wire wheels the greatest care must be exercised in putting the locking devices in place.

In filling the radiator of the car allow enough water to pass into bring the level over the end of the vent pipe.

Abuse the car in its first thousand miles of service and it is likely to show the effects of the ill treatment throughout its career.

One motorist who has driven a multiple cylinder engine 6,000 miles, without having carbon cleaned ascribes it to the constant replacement of his engine oil.

After the water has been drained out of the cooling system the engine should be run for a few minutes thoroughly to evaporate all moisture remaining.

There may be anti-freezing mixtures for sale which are not injurious, but most of them contain calcium chloride, which eats away the solder holding the radiator together.

Quiet operation in the rear axle drive gearing is obtained by using angular teeth gears. This is also called skew bevel gearing, and noise is eliminated because there is very little play or backlash between teeth of this design.

Are the Best Tires too good for the Small Car Owner

EVERYBODY agrees that it is generally desirable for merchandise to be graded.

A good principle that often comes out at the wrong end for the car-owner—the man with the upkeep on his mind—the tire bills to pay.

He feels that tire economy should be a personal contract with the tire-user. Not a transaction with his car, whether it be big or small.

Reasoning tires in human terms instead of trade custom has written this policy for the United States Rubber Company—standard and let the tire user choose his own size.

When the oldest and largest rubber manufacturing concern in the world focuses all its resources upon one grade, one quality, it makes one client—and that is the whole public.

This single ideal is visible in any U. S. Tire factory, at any U. S. distributing branch, in any U. S. dealer's store.

Seeing that the tire-user gets his economy mileage along with an unlimited guarantee.

Policies are harder to make than tires.

Probably the deepest reason why U. S. demand keeps always ahead of the number of tires the U. S. makers can supply.

Webster=Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

"KNIFE WORK."

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after cleaning up $100,000. But he looks like a job. Then he meets a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over. He eliminates the offending man. Being what he is and also girl-shy, he does not take advantage of his opportunity. But he just has to find out that she is Dolores Ruy. In Denver he is offered a $25,000-a-year job by a capitalist friend, Edward J. Jerome. He receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go fifty-fifty with him on the profits. Thereupon he turns down the big job and decides to answer the call of friendship and adventure to Sorbrante. Jerome goes with John to the depot. They meet the distressed lady on her way to the same train. John lifts his hat, but gets the cut direct from the girl, who does not recognize him. John tells Jerome the whole story. Jerome secretly sees the girl, offering her $10,000 if she induces John to take his job inside of ninety days. The girl accepts. The scene now shifts to Buenaventura, Sorbrante, where Geary, on his uppers, is eating his heart out looking for a cablegram from his old partner. He has waited for two months on credit extended by Mother Jenks, keeper of a disreputable hotel. Dolores cables Henrietta Wilkins (Mother Jenks) that she is on her way to visit her. Mother Jenks breaks down and tells her story. She has been educating Dolores, who is the daughter of former President Ruy of Sorbrante, deposed and executed by President Sarrus. Mother Jenks doesn't want Dolores to find out she is no longer respectable. So she and Billy plan for him to meet the steamer and to turn the girl back. Billy bungles his job and Dolores lands and assaults Mother Jenks as "Mother." Billy promptly falls in love with Dolores. Webster in New Orleans secures a stateroom on La Estrellita by buying a ticket for a mythical valet.

"Be there at a quarter after two, Mr. Webster, and you will hear from me promptly on the minute," the clerk assured him; whereupon Webster paid for one berth and departed for his hotel with a feeling that the clerk's report would be favorable.

True to his promise, at precisely a quarter after two, the ticket clerk telephoned Webster at his hotel that the berth in No. 34 had been canceled and the entire stateroom was now at his disposal.

"If you will be good enough to give me the name of your valet," he concluded, "I will fill in both names on my passenger manifest and send the tickets to your hotel by messenger immediately. You can then sign the tickets—I have already signed them as witness—and pay the messenger."

"Well, I haven't engaged that valet as yet," Webster began.

"What's the odds? He's going to miss the boat, anyhow. All I require is a name."

"That ought to be a simple request to comply with. Let me see!"

"I read a book once, Mr. Webster, and the valet in that book was called Andrew Bowers."

"Bowers is a fine old English name. Let us seek no further. Andrew Bowers it is."

"Thank you. All you have to do then is to remember to sign the name, Andrew Bowers, on one ticket. Don't forget your valet's name now, and ball everything up," and the clerk hung up, laughing.

Half an hour later a boy from the steamship office arrived with the tickets, collected for them, and departed, leaving John Stuart Webster singularly pleased with himself and at peace with the entire world.

A "large" dinner at Antoine's that night (Webster had heard of Antoine's dinners, both large and small and was resolved not to leave New Orleans until he had visited the famous restaurant), and a stroll through the picturesque old French quarter and along the levee next day, helped to render his enforced stay in New Orleans delightful, interesting, and instructive. For Sunday he planned an early morning visit to the old French market, around which still lingers much of the picturesque charm and colorful romance of a day that is done—that echo of yesterday, as it were, which has left New Orleans an individuality as distinct as that which the olden, golden, goddess days have left upon San Francisco.

He rose before six o'clock, therefore; found a taxi, with the driver sound asleep inside, at the curb in front of the hotel; gave the latter his instructions, and climbed in.

Opposite Jackson Square the cloying sweetness of palmetto, palm, and fig burdened the air. Above the rumble of the taxi he could hear the distant babel of voices in the French market across the square, so he halted the taxicab, alighted, and handed the driver a bill.

"I want to explore this square," he said. He had recognized it by the heroic statue of General Jackson peeping through the trees. "I'll walk through the square to the market, and you may proceed to the market and meet me there. Later we will return to the hotel."

A Creole girl—starry-eyed, beautiful, rich with the glorious coloring of her race—passed him bound for the cathedral across the square, as Webster thought, for she carried a large prayer book on her arm. His glance followed the girl down the walk.

Presently she halted. A young man rose from a bench where he evidently had been waiting for her, and bowed low, his hat clasped to his breast, as only a Frenchman or a Spanish grandee can bow. Webster saw the Creole girl turn to him with a little gesture of pleasure. She extended her hand and the young man kissed it with old-fashioned courtesy.

John Stuart Webster with reverent and wistful eyes watched their meeting.

"Forty years old," he thought, "and I haven't spoken to a dozen women that caused me a second thought, or who weren't postmistresses or biscuit shooters! Forty years old and I've never been in love! Springtime down that little path and Indian summer in my old fool heart. Why, I ought to be arrested for failure to live!"

The lovers were walking slowly, arm in arm, along the path by which the girl had come, so with a courtesy and gentleness that were innate in him, Webster stepped out of sight behind the statue of Old Hickory; for he did not desire, by his mere presence, to intrude a discordant note in the perfect harmony of those two human hearts. He knew they desired that sylvan path to themselves; that evidently they had sought their early morning tryst in the knowledge that the square was likely to be deserted at this hour.

The young man was speaking as they passed; his voice was rich, pleasant, vibrant with the earnestness of what he had to say; with a pretty little silver mounted walking stick he slashed at spears of grass alongside the path; the girl was crying a little. Neither of them had seen him, so he entered a path that led from them at right angles.

He had proceeded but a few feet along this trail when, through a break in the shrubbery ahead of him, he saw two men. Brief as was his glimpse of them, Webster instantly recognized the two Central Americans he had seen in the steamship ticket office two days previous.

They were not walking as walk two men abroad at this hour for a constitutional. Neither did they walk as walk men churchward bound. A slight, skulking air marked their progress, and caused Webster to wonder idly what they were stalking.

He turned into the path down which the two men had passed, not with the slightest idea of shadowing them, but because his destination lay in that direction.

Both men had forsaken the graveled path and were walking on the soft velvet of blue grass lawn that fringed it! "Perhaps I'd better deaden my hoof beats also," John Stuart Webster soliloquized, and followed suit immediately.

He had scarcely done so when the men ahead of him paused abruptly. Webster did likewise, and responding—subconsciously, perhaps, to the remembrance of the menace in the glance of the man with the puckered eye—he stepped out of sight behind a broad oak tree. Through the trees and shrubbery he could still see the lovers, who had halted and evidently were about to part.

Webster saw the young man glance warily about; then, apparently satisfied there was none to spy upon them, he drew the girl gently toward him. She clung to him for nearly a minute, sobbing; and he raised her face tenderly, kissed her, pressed her from him, and walked swiftly away without looking back.

It was a sweet and rather touching little tableau; to John Stuart Webster, imaginative and possessed of a romantic streak in his nature, it was more than a tableau. It was a moving picture!

"I suppose her old man objects to the young fellow," he muttered to himself sympathetically, "and he can't come near the house. They've met here for the fond farewell, and the young fellow's going out West to make his fortune, so he can come back and claim the girl. Huh! If he wants her, why the devil doesn't he take her? Hello! By Judas priest! Now I know what those two paraguets are up to. One of them is the father of that girl. They've been spying on the lovers, and now they're going to corner the young fellow and shingle him for his nerve."

The girl had stood for a moment, gazing after her companion, before she turned with her handkerchief to her eyes, and continued on her way to the cathedral. Webster heard her sobbing as she stumbled blindly by, and he was distressed about her, for all the world loves a lover and John Stuart Webster was no exception to this universal rule.

"By George, this is pretty tough," he reflected. "That young fellow treated that girl with as much gentleness and courtesy as any gentleman should, and I'm for him and against this idea of corporal punishment. Don't you worry, Tillie, my dear. I'm going to horn into this game myself if it goes too far."

The two dusky skulkers ahead of him, having come to another cross-path, turned into it and came out on the main path in the rear of the young man. Webster noticed that the pair were still walking on the grass. He padded gently along behind them.

The four were now rapidly approaching the old French market, and the steadily rising babel of voices speaking in French, Italian, Spanish, Creole patois and Choctaw, was sufficient to have drowned the slight noise of the pursuit, even had the young man's mind not been upon other things, and the interest of the two Central Americans centered upon their quarry, to the exclusion of any thought of possible interruption.

Webster felt instinctively that the two men would rush and make a concerted attack from the rear. He smiled.

"I'll just fool you two hombres a whole lot," he thought, and stooping, picked up a small stone. On the instant the two men, having approached within thirty feet of their quarry, made a rush for him.

Their charge was swift, but though it was, the little stone which John Stuart Webster hurled was swifter. It struck the young man fairly between the shoulderblades with a force sufficient to bring him out of his sentimental reverie with a jerk, as it were. He whirled, saw the danger that threatened him, and—sprang to meet it.

"Bravo!" yelled Webster, and ran to his aid, for he had seen now that it was to be knife work. Tragedy instead of melodrama.

The man with the puckered eye closed in with such eagerness it was apparent to Webster that here was work to his liking. The young man raised his light cane, but Pucker-eye did not hesitate. He merely threw up his left forearm to meet the expected blow aimed at his head, lunged forward and slashed viciously at the young man's abdomen. The latter drew back a step, doubled like a jack-knife, and brought his cane down viciously across the knuckles of his assailant's right hand.

"So it is thou, son of a pig," he called pleasantly in Spanish. "I fooled you that time, didn't I?" he added in English. "Thought I would aim for your head, didn't you?"

The blow temporarily paralyzed the assassin's hand; he dropped the knife, and as he stooped to recover it with his left hand, the young man, before retreating from Pop-eye, kicked Pucker-eye in the face and quite upset him.

"Stop it!" shouted Webster.

Pop-eye turned his head at the outcry. The man he was attacking fell into the position of a swordsman en garde, and thrust viciously with the ferrule at the face of the pop-eyed man, who, disregarding Webster's approach, seized the cane in his left hand and with a quick, powerful tug actually drew his victim toward him a foot before the latter let go the stick.

Before he could give ground again Pop-eye was upon him. He grasped the young man by the latter's left arm and held him, while he drew back for the awful disembowling stroke. As his long arm sped forward the hook of John Stuart Webster's heavy cane descended upon that flexed arm in the crook of the elbow, snagging it cleverly.

The knife never reached its destination!

"You would, would you?" said Webster reproachfully, and jerked the fellow violently around. The man he had rescued promptly struck Pop-eye a terrible blow in the face with his left hand and broke loose from the grip that had so nearly been his undoing; then Webster tapped the assassin a meditative tap or two on the top of his sinful head for good measure and to awaken in him some sense of the impropriety and futility of resistance, after which Webster turned to discuss a similar question of ethics with Pucker-eye.

The scar-cheeked man was on his knees, groping groggily for his knife, for he had received a severe kick under the chin, and for the nonce was far from dangerous. Stooping, Webster picked up the knife; then with knife and cane grasped in his left hand he seized Pucker-eye by the nape with his right and jerked him to his feet. The assassin stood glowering at him in a perfect frenzy of brutish, inarticulate fury.

"Take the knife away from the other fellow before he gets active again," Webster called over his shoulder. "I'll manage this rascal. We'll march them over to the market and turn them over to the police." He spoke in Spanish.

"Thanks, ever so much, for my life," the young man answered lightly, and in English, "but where I come from it is not the fashion to settle these arguments in a court of law. To call an officer is considered unbecoming; to shoot a prisoner in this country is considered murder, and consequently I have but one alternative and I advise you, my good friend, to have a little of the same. I'm going to run like the devil."

And he did. He was in full flight before Webster could glance around, and in an instant he was lost to sight among the trees.

"That advice sounds eminently fair and reasonable," Webster yelled after him, and was about to follow when he observed that the young man had abandoned his pretty little silver-chased walking stick.

"That's too nice a little stick to leave to these brigands," he thought, and forthwith possessed himself of it and the pop-eyed man's knife, after which he hurried on upon the order of his going but went, departing at top speed.

The young man, he had saved from being butchered was right. An entangling alliance with the police was, decidedly, not to John Stuart Webster's liking, for should he unfortunately, form such an alliance, he would be hailed into court as a witness and perhaps miss the steamer to San Buenaventura.

He had planned to spend an hour in the market, drink a cup of cafe noir, smoke a cigarette, and return to his hotel in time for a leisurely breakfast, but his recent bout with grim reality had blunted the edge of romance. He ordered his driver to take him back to the hotel, sprang inside and congratulated himself on his lucky escape.

CHAPTER VIII.

Webster's trunk went aboard the steamer early the following morning, and at noon he entered a taxi with his hand baggage and was driven to the levee where La Estrellita lay tugging gently at her mooring lines. Owing to the congestion of freight and traffic the chauffeur stopped his cab a little distance from the gangplank, where Webster discharged him with a liberal tip.

The latter, however, swung his passenger's bag and suitcase to the ground, picked them up and started for the gangplank.

"Never mind my baggage, lad," Webster called after him. "One of the deck boys will care for it."

The chauffeur turned. "You've been generous with me, sir," he answered, "so I think I had better carry your baggage aboard. If you permit a deck boy to handle it, you merely have to give another tip, and that would be sheer wanton waste. Why shouldn't I earn the one you gave me?"

"I hadn't figured it out that way, son, so here's another half dollar for being the only existing specimen of your species in captivity. My stateroom is No. 34, upper deck, port side," Webster answered, smiling. The man took the tip eagerly and hurried toward the gangplank; the quartermaster on duty shouldered a way for him and he darted aboard.

Webster followed leisurely. At the gangplank the purser's clerk halted him, examined his tickets and punched them.

"Where is the other man?" he asked. "You have two tickets here."

"Oh, that blamed valet of mine," Webster answered, and glanced around as if in search of that mythical functionary. "It would be like the stupid fellow to miss the boat," he added. "When he comes—"

Webster ceased speaking abruptly. He was looking straight into the malevolent orbs of Pucker-eye, who was standing just behind the clerk at the foot of the gangplank.

"I wonder if Pop-eye's around, also," Webster thought, and he faced about. Pop-eye was standing in back of him, leaning over the railing of the gangway.

"Which is the valet?" the purser's clerk asked, scanning the names on the tickets.

"Andrew Bowers."

"All right, Mr. Webster," the other answered, with that genial camaraderie that seems inseparable from all of his calling. "When Andrew comes I'll send him aboard."

He started to pass the tickets back to Webster, but a detaining hand rested on his arm, while a dark thumb and forefinger lifted the trailing strips of tickets. Pucker-eye was examining them also.

The purser's clerk drove his elbow backward violently into Pucker-eye's midriff and shook him off roughly.

"What do you mean, you black-and-tan hound?" he demanded. "Since when did you begin to O. K. my work?"

Pucker-eye made no reply to this stern reproof. He accepted the elbow with equanimity and faced Webster with an evil smile that indicated mutual recognition.

"Breno," he said. "The senior hees sail on La Estrellita for San Buenaventura, no?"

"So you came nosing around to see about it, eh? Doing a little plain gumshoe work, I see."

Pucker-eye bowed. By the simple exercise of courage and had manners he had looked at John Stuart Webster's ticket and was now familiar with his name and destination.

Webster glowered darkly at Pucker-eye and said:

"Well, you scoundrelly cutthroat, what are you going to do about it? Try a little of your knife work on me, I suppose?"

The fellow grinned—the kind of grin that is composed of equal parts of ferocity and knowledge of superior strength. That grin did more to disconcert Webster than the knowledge that he had earned for himself two bloodthirsty and implacable enemies, for Pucker-eye was the first of his breed that Webster had ever seen smile under insult. That cool smile infuriated him.

Pucker-eye took out a cigarette case, selected a cigarette and presented the case to Webster. His bad manners in selecting his own cigarette first was deliberate, as Webster knew. It was the Latin-American's method of showing his contempt.

"We shall meet again, Meester Webster," he said. "May I offer a cigarette for the—what you Americans call—the keepsake? No?" He smiled brightly and closed his puckered eye in a knowing wink.

Webster took his tickets from the purser, folded them, placed them in his pocket and for a few seconds regarded Pucker-eye contemptuously.

"When we meet again, you scum," he retorted quietly, "you shall have no difficulty in remembering me. You may keep your cigarette."

His long, powerful right arm shot out; like a forceps his thumb and forefinger closed over Pucker-eye's rather flat nose; he squeezed, and with a shrill scream of agony Pucker-eye went to his knees.

Still holding the wretch by his proboscis, Webster turned quickly in order that his face might be toward Pop-eye.

"Pop-eye," he said, "if you take a hand in this, I'll twist your nose, too, and afterward I'll throw you in the river."

He turned to Pucker-eye. "Up, thou curious little one," he said in Spanish, and jerked the unhappy rascal to his feet. The latter clawed ineffectually at the terrible arm which held him, until, presently discovering that the harder he struggled the harder Webster pinched his nose, he ceased his struggles and hung limply, moaning with pain and rage in the grip of the American.

"Good!" Webster announced, slackening his grip a little. With his left hand he deftly extracted a hair from each flank of the screaming little scoundrel's scant mustache and held them before the latter's tear-filled eyes.

"My friend," he said gently, "mark how the gringo gives his little dark brother a lesson in department. Behold, if I have given thee a souvenir of our meeting, I also have taken one. By this pinched and throbbing nose shall I be remembered when I am gone; by these hairs from thy rat's mustache shall I remember thee. Go, and thrust not that nose into a gringo's business again. It is unsafe."

"I am known as Mr. Andrew Bowers, valet de chambre to that prince of gentlemen, Mr. John S. Webster."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Her Sad Farewell. A very dignified man, whom I had known only a short while, came one evening to say good-by, as he was leaving on a long trip. When I ushered him into the parlor I discovered that my young brother had hung crepe on all the furniture—Chicago Tribune.

CLAPP MEMORIAL NOTES

October First! The Clapp Memorial Association begins its fall and winter season. Gather at ye Clapp Memorial building at the first opportunity—and if your dues are overdue—well just drop in and see Doc Fabyan, he'll take care of the cash. And get ready for one of the biggest, happiest and most glorious seasons that the C. M. A. ever waded a boxing glove at.

Basketball, the main attraction this year, as in years past—also years to come—will come into its own, as soon as the novelty of that game of football between Harvard and Yale has worn off. The association bids fair to have one of the fastest and also cleanest basketball quintets in the State. Plenty of practice with one or two nights observance of "early to bed and early to rise" will make the local boys appear as though they were the best little 'ol' team in the world, and also East Weymouth. Of course there are more ways than ways than one to dope out that early to bed stuff, but you can't get away with it on this little outfit.

Just to show you that the C. M. A. will hit the high spots in basketball we'll endeavor to produce the records of each one of the Clapp players for next week's issue. For the present we will hash up a little dope of our own to hand you. Here goes:

Captain Curtin, snappy right guard of the team, played in every game last year, was penalized very seldom and made over half as many baskets as either one of the forwards, which is some little record.

Gannon, fast left forward, led the team in the number of baskets. He is credited with caging the ball 125 times during the season. In every game in which he appeared Gannon displayed wonderful ability as a crack shot and very rarely lost his head.

Mahoney, right forward, came within three baskets of breaking Gannon's record. Playing like a whirlwind in every game Mahoney did much to bring victory to the local organization on many occasions. Placing the C. M. A. before everything else Joe never lost confidence in himself, or his fellow team-mates and played with the same old pep from beginning to end.

And now comes the task of describing the one man on the entire team who played through the knocks and bangs with never a thought other than that he was playing for the honor of the C. M. A. Without him—well the team wouldn't be the same without Warren in there leading the players in his position at center.

Slattery battled his way over every obstacle in an attempt to wrest that second to last title away from Warren. The number of baskets scored by these two players was nearly the same and darned if we can dope out which one of them did get the credit for being champion—of the last two places. "Slats" played a wonderful game as a guard and deserves plenty of credit for the way he held down some pretty fast players.

The two subs of last year are worthy of being mentioned as first-string men. They were kept from the lineup in every game only because there are but five men allowed to play on a team. McIntosh and Humphrey certainly proved their ability beyond the shadow of a doubt.

And for the ladies! Particular and also compulsory were the orders received in regards to the treatment of the ladies. In other words, slang is not to be tolerated in descriptions of the howling tournaments and other athletics. But regardless of this, mention must be made—oh lady where are those rules for the description of women—mention must be made without the usual phrases that accompany bowling tournaments. Well, anyhow, they are some little twirlers—there we go again—they can make the ol' pins lay down for 'em without trouble.

Ladies' nights are being observed weekly, which doesn't mean that every fellow can bring his best girl up there and sit on those fancy upholstered davenport, or whatever they are. Oh no! Ye citizens of the male species are expected—not requested—to make tracks for parts unknown on this particular evening of each week.

The youngsters are holding all sorts of amateur athletic events and have threatened our life if we don't proceed, at once and without questioning, to give them a little publicity. Baseball, track events, jumping and boxing are among the achievements of the C. M. A. juniors. There's a place for your boy among the leaders in every event. Send him in to see Doc Fabyan and talk over the benefits of the association.

You followers of the C. M. A. athletics remember that the Gazette carries a weekly column of the doings of the association and full detailed reports will be published following each game. The management will take your order for delivery by mail. This column will be written by an expert who will cover the games.

HINTS TO POULTRY KEEPERS

By Edward Lukeman
With the price of eggs steadily advancing and the price of grain on the downward trend, prospects certainly look bright for the poultry keeper who will have eggs to sell this winter. From present indications poultry-keepers are entering on the most profitable era which they have ever experienced.

It follows then that wise poultry keepers will give their birds the very best care and attention possible and thus reap handsome profits.

To secure winter eggs the first essential is to have good laying stock and well matured early hatched pullets are the very best. Every flock should contain a good percent of such birds.

The old hens should be gone over carefully by Nov. 1, and those that are too old, or low producers should be sold, or in other ways disposed of. Having done this, the next thing is to give all possible attention to those that are left.

The size of the flock is no sure index of the number of winter eggs that will be produced. I have known cases where 15 or 20 birds well cared for, produced more eggs during the winter than 100 immature, poorly housed and half starved fowl.

A great many poultry keepers in their enthusiasm for making money attempt to keep twice as many birds as they have room for, and in this way almost entirely stop the production of winter eggs.

The number of birds to be kept during the winter should be carefully limited by the size of the poultry-house. If you allow three square feet of floor surface to each bird you won't go far wrong. A building 20 feet long and 10 feet wide should not contain more than 75 birds, although it often happens that 100 or 125 birds are crowded into it. If the floor is too large for the house, more houses should be built, or part of the birds disposed of.

You must never lose sight of the fact that the poultry-house is the home of the hen, and the factory where winter eggs are produced, and unless it provides suitable living and working conditions, the hen cannot be expected to lay well.

The chief requirement is that the house must keep the birds comfortable, and to be comfortable the house must be dry, well lighted and well ventilated, and sufficient floor space to provide plenty of exercise by scratching. Dryness is insured by having a good roof and keeping the floor of the higher than the outside ground and providing good ventilation.

Ventilation must provide plenty of fresh air, and the best way to secure this is to have the south side of the building relatively open. The importance of light in the poultry-house must not be overlooked. Recent experiments have proven that by furnishing more light, the working day of the birds is lengthened, and the egg production can be greatly increased.

In small poultry-houses very little attention is paid to how the building is lighted, so that on cloudy days the building is in constant twilight, even when the door is left open. Needless to say, this condition does not favor activity on the part of the hen.

One of the very best poultry-houses has curtains on the south side, and windows on the other three sides, so that only in zero weather need the curtains be pulled down. Most days they can be pushed up and remain so all day. Another advantage with windows on all sides is that the hens always scratch the litter toward the light, and it some work every morning to level it up again. This is done away with when the windows are on three sides.

I have not mentioned that the buildings must be kept clean, as anyone who has ever kept poultry knows that this is imperative.

With all the conditions that I have mentioned above favorable, it would be impossible to secure winter egg production without proper feeding, and the first requirement is that a sufficient quantity be given. Too many people are afraid of overfeeding, the ancient idea of hens too fat to lay is still widely credited, when as a matter of fact, no hen but a fat hen can lay. Many people begrudge a hen every morsel she eats, and where you find those people you can rest assured they are the ones who are always complaining that hens don't pay.

Keep dry mash constantly before the hens at all times, as well as charcoal, shells and grit, and always plenty of fresh water. If the water freezes during the day, you must provide more, and if you have grown a supply of mangel or cabbage it will be of great assistance in filling the egg basket.

This with scratch feed will be about all that they will require in the line of feed.

Keep about six inches of litter on the floor, and let the hens scratch, for every kernel of grain you give them and in this way provide plenty of exercise.

If you like poultry and have the land, you can raise a good deal of the food you give the birds, and thus increase your profits, for back of everything else you must have a love for the business, and that goes a long way toward making a success of poultry keeping.

But if you are not interested in the birds, and look upon the work as disagreeable duty that you have to perform, then it would be much better to interest yourself in something that you like better.

A Romance of Soaring Rents

By ELIZABETH WOODWARD

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Marjorie sat somewhat disconsolately on a packing box, awaiting the arrival of the moving man. She was disconsolate, first, because after three years in their pleasant apartment she and her brother, Jim, were obliged to move because of soaring rents. They had found a modest "walk-up" facing a small park, in an unfashionable part of town. Of course they would get used to it, but Marjorie was one who clung tenaciously to old surroundings, and readjustment was painful. They had had good times in the little apartment—she and Jim, fresh from the small Western town.

The moving from the apartment marked a new era, but even more did the fact that on Tom's horizon loomed a woman. If he was as serious as he appeared to be, Marjorie would have to look for a separate place to bestow her household goods.

Her melancholy reverie was interrupted by a sharp peal at the doorbell—the moving men. Wasting no time, they seized upon the larger pieces of furniture and were soon carrying them dexterously downstairs.

Marjorie had only noticed them as a group, calculating anxiously the size of the tip required for the quartet. She was, therefore, somewhat startled to see one of them gazing intently at a picture standing face upward against the wall.

"Excuse me, miss," he said, "but, you know, that's rather out of the ordinary, that view of the Acropolis one usually sees—"

Marjorie's eyebrows went up unconsciously. "You are wondering," he said, answering her questioning look, "what I know about pictures, but—"

Here he was interrupted by a voice from behind. "Here you, Johnny; look alive. We are here for work."

With no further comment, the one called Johnny picked up a large armchair and proceeded down stairs. From then on he did not hesitate or stop, and Marjorie, absorbed in directing the removal of her household goods, forgot the incident of the picture.

A few weeks later one Sunday afternoon Marjorie sat in the park outside her new home. After all, the new rooms were attractive, overlooking the park, with its ever-changing scenes of human interest. Then Jim seemed less interested in his love affair. Altogether, life was looking quite gay. Raising her eyes from her book, she was conscious of a young man, shabbily dressed, looking at her from the opposite bench.

"Pardon me," he said, moving over to her side of the walk. "Of course, you don't know me, but I am one of the men who moved you down from Fifty-fourth street. Somehow, I don't think you look too proud to speak to me."

"I am glad you spoke," she said. "What you said about my brother's picture of the Acropolis interested me. We were interrupted and I never learned—"

"You never learned why a moving man was interested in pictures," he interrupted. "You see, the thing is, my brother took that picture. And, you know, one usually sees just the front view of the building; this is so entirely different, and, knowing that there are only two copies in existence, I just wondered how you had come by it."

"Billy Joudrey left it to my brother. He was killed at the front. Perhaps your brother told you," Marjorie answered.

"I'll admit," he said, "being a moving man isn't exactly what you would expect of the brother of a chap who loses such highbrow things as heading excavation parties to Greece. Moving says mighty well, and especially the tips." If Marjorie had caught his eye, then she would have seen an amused expression flit over his face.

This was the first of many Sunday meetings between Marjorie and her "park beau," as Jim called him. The four of them, Jim and the girl of his heart, Marjorie and John, frequently had supper together in the little apartment. John remained a mystery, as there seemed no connecting link but Billy Joudrey. Jim could not remember who Billy had said had given him the picture of the Acropolis. So John came and went giving no hint as to his identity.

In the fall Marjorie went back to her studies. She was working hard, and while she and Jim commented on the absence of John, who suddenly disappeared from view, absorption in their work made Marjorie almost forget what now seemed almost like a summer dream. Jim, who was an electrical engineer, found himself more and more taken up with his work. His love affair was at a standstill, as Eleanor Johnson had gone South with an invalid mother.

"We are going pretty dull," he said one morning, as they hastily ate their breakfast. "I'll try for tickets for the opera if you say so."

"Oh, yes, do. We will dress up for a change," said Marjorie.

A little later, hurrying up the subway steps, her arms full of books, she saw a familiar pair of shoulders in front. "What on earth is John doing up here?" she wondered.

"Hello, John," she said as she caught up with him. "Are you off the moving job?"

"I'll come around and explain; it's too long a story now, when we are both late as it is," he replied.

"We are going to Faust tonight. You couldn't by any chance get a seat?" asked Marjorie.

"Oh, yes; season ticket," answered the surprising man. "I'll call you up at dinner time, and find out where your seats are. No, I can't come to dinner; thank you—Good-by until tonight," and he was off.

Marjorie in her black evening dress, her glorious auburn hair coiled becomingly about her head, and her beautiful white neck with its single string of family pearls made a striking picture.

"Clothes do change one's whole point of view," she remarked to Jim. "Why don't we do this sort of thing oftener?"

Jim, going off to smoke between the acts, met John on his way to Marjorie. "Hello, old chap," he exclaimed. "We almost need an introduction."

"Taking Jim's vacant seat, John said, "I suppose you are wondering who and what I am. I will give you 'Who's Who.'"

MOVIE STARS

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

There was a brilliant smile playing about Myra's lips as she turned away from the telephone. It was a smile famous throughout many lands, for Myra was one of those stars that twinkled the length and breadth of filmland.

At the other end of the wire, young Lord Gerald Rollins turned away with a heavy sigh. He had spoken the words that would permit an entire movie company to encamp in his wonderful ancestral home during the entire summer months. But Lord Gerald had been badly done during the war and money was scarce in his tweed pockets.

England had never looked more beautiful nor the gardens of Hill Hall more enchanting when the large company, bag and baggage, drew up under the vast gates and brought huge touring cars to a stop.

Lord Gerald was out on the porch to watch the arrival. It was all so new to him that he felt himself taking a huge interest in the proceedings.

Then, out of a great black touring car stepped Myra. Lord Gerald caught a swift breath. The little American movie star was exquisite to a degree quite disconcerting. She came up to him with frankly curious eyes.

"You are Lord Rollins, aren't you?" she questioned, while her wide, intelligent eyes appraised and passed splendid judgment on him. "We are so glad to get here and are all weary—every one of us," including her entire company in a glance; "but your estate is wonderful—quite beyond my meager power of expression."

"You will appreciate a cup of tea?" Lord Gerald suggested, and led the way into the great hall, with its fine collection of rare old paintings; "then Perkins will show you your rooms."

"Lord Rollins," she said, with characteristic frankness, "if I could find a leading man like you for my hero I would pay him a thousand dollars a week. You are the living image of the lover in my story—at least the very type I want."

He scarcely recognized his own voice nor his own sudden leap into a world hitherto unknown.

"Topping salary! I say, Miss Dawson, would I be an awful dub at acting?"

"Lord Rollins!" cried Myra swiftly, "if you would consent to act with me in a series of five pictures, and perhaps more, I will make the salary three thousand a week. I shall want to advertise," she added. "Your name will be worth as much as any—man—ner," she finished with her first touch of shyness.

"The die is cast," laughed Lord Rollins boyishly, and put out a too white hand—the war had left him a bit delicate.

The tea cart arrived, well laden with thin bread and butter, Devonshire cream and strawberries. The situation straightway became normal, for every one drifted in from various doorways, famished for tea.

Lord Rollins never forgot that first tea party when, under his ancestral roof, the entire Myra Dawson film company partook of his hospitality.

Myra was constantly on the alert for scenes, and the conversation jumped at random from English springtime to American skyscrapers, but ever and anon Lord Rollins found that his eyes were meeting the pair of brilliant ones belonging to Myra.

"Topping summer this will be," he found himself thinking, and for the first time since a bursting shell had flung him face downward on the battlefield Lord Rollins felt the warm blood dancing through his body with the sheer joy of being alive.

He proved neither a wonderful nor yet a too bad movie actor. His movements when under the scrutiny of Myra were a bit stilted, but she was most encouraging and splendidly helpful. Working with her was a pleasure far beyond any Lord Rollins had experienced. The novelty, the excitement and the occasional delightful love scenes through which he acted with Myra all helped to lead him back to the oldtime health and strength.

It was during the third reel of their second play, when, as per direction, he was pressing a smothering kiss on the fair heroine's left cheek, that Lord Rollins spoke not reel but real love words.

"I love you, Myra," he said, while the camera man kept winding; "I have never loved anyone before—you will marry me—dear?"

"I love you, too," Myra told him softly, and her cheek turned more closely to the hero's, "but I cannot be the wife of an English lord. I am of very common birth, dear. My people worked for a living."

The entire company seemed suddenly to have drifted in and taken up front-row positions, as if scenting romance spelled with a large R.

"Dear heart," the young lord continued, unconscious of the interest of the audience, "you are talking utter nonsense—I love you—love you."

The crowd of players waited breathlessly.

Myra turned then and looked tenderly into Lord Rollins' pleading eyes. "We will continue our partnership, then, dear," she made answer.

The camera men stopped in the nick of time. The final love kiss was not nearly due in the reel, but apparently this one was.

IS GRAVEYARD OF FOSSILS

Western Ranch a Center of Interest to Those Who Are Keen on Prehistoric Lore.

If the skeleton in a museum is a "dinohyus" or a "moropus," one may be quite sure that it came from the farm of James Henry Cook in the northwest corner of Nebraska; and the chances are almost equally good if the specimen happens to be a saber-toothed cat or a many-toed horse, or almost any of those queer animals that belong to the early Miocene period, says R. P. Crawford, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Most ranchmen and farmers are quite content to raise the ordinary sort of stock, but here is a ranch that is most widely known because of its output of prehistoric animals.

The Cook farm and ranch, located close to the Wyoming line, comprise some 15,000 acres. On the eastern edge of the ranch the Niobrara river has laid bare two hills, from both of which scores and scores of fossil skeletons have been quarried.

Past Time for Bed.

It was eleven o'clock at night and the circus performance had given way to the night horse show at the fair, says the Indianapolis News. A little girl stood up on the seat and gasped in astonishment as the biggest horses she had ever seen were led around the ring. Still more horses were led into the tankark circle and paraded before the large assembly. Bringing up the rear of the procession were the Shetland ponies, so small that for a time they escaped the notice of the little girl. Then she saw them.

"Oh," she said. "I think they might put those little ones to bed, anyway."

MILK AND MEAT AS RIVALS
Rising Prices May Yet Force People to Turn to the Fluid to Sustain Life.

As the price of meat soars upward, many people are forced to be part-time vegetarians. Thus the old question, "Is meat essential to human well-being?" arises again. The committee on food and nutrition of the National Research Council has issued an interesting report on the relative value of meat and milk.

Eighteen per cent of the protein and energy of grain used in feeding a cow goes into the milk, and is therefore recovered for human consumption; whereas only three and a half per cent is recovered in beef. As for the mineral elements in hay and grain, not much is stored in the tissues, but a great amount goes into milk.

Beef profiteers, beware! The hard-pressed public may decide to let milk take the place of beefsteak.—Popular Science Monthly.

Too Hot.
Jimmie felt the heat and asked his mother if he could take off his shoes and stockings. He could. Later the mother found him naked. "Jimmie, what do you mean?" "Why," said he, looking straight into her eyes, "all my clothing slipped off and I couldn't get 'em on again."

PROVED TRUE TO HER WORD
Fair Autoist Had Said She Would Be Back Promptly, and It Was Even More So.

On one of my first excursions in our new car, writes a correspondent, I stopped at the grocery with my car parked with the back toward the store door. I gave my order and told the clerk that I would be back to get my things in a very few minutes.

As I stepped into the car, my best "bean" came down the street, and anxious to show him how well I could drive, I hurriedly threw into gear. I raced the engine and let the clutch out to get a quick pickup.

It proved to be a wonderful one, as I had thrown into reverse and found myself in the doorway of the grocery store. I had gone over the curbing and all, breaking the window as I bumped into the store.

The grocer hurried out, and when he saw who it was, "Well," he said, "you have proved yourself a woman of your word, but it will cost you the price of a new show window."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcels post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

SPEAKER SEES A DIAMOND STAR IN BOXER TREMAINE

Tris Speaker says that Carl Tremaine, Cleveland bantam, is one of the best looking short-stops he has seen in years.

"I'll tell you how good he is," remarked Tris in a recent fanling bee, "he is as near the image of Donie Bush when Donie was first breaking in as I ever saw."

Speaker says Tremaine is a splendid fielder at short and can throw well enough to play big league ball.

Tris admitted, however, he knew nothing of Carl's no-nonsense as a sticker.

FREAK TRIPLE PLAY IS MADE

One Pulled Off Between Two Teams at St. Mary's, Kan., Was Most Peculiar Ever Seen.

Triple plays are hard to make in a baseball game and they are of rare occurrence during a playing season, but one was pulled off in a game between St. Mary's college of St. Mary's, Kan., and the Chillicothe Indians that will go down in the annals of the national pastime as one of the most peculiar plays ever staged on a ball field.

The side in the field did not touch the ball after it left the hands of the pitcher. A St. Mary's batter hit the ball into the air toward short with the bases loaded and was declared out as it was an infield fly. The wind carried the sphere toward second as it descended and it hit the runner there, who was called out for being hit by a batted ball. The ball next rolled toward first and the runner, there, disengaged at the luck of his teammates, picked up the leather and hurried it out of the park. He was promptly called out by the umpire.

ALEXANDER LOOKING BETTER

That Big Cub Pitcher Is Helped by Lack of Control Is Theory of Umpire Rigler.

Here's an unusual theory concerning the cause for Grover Alexander's effectiveness this year with the Cubs. It is advanced by Umpire Charley Rigler. He says:

"Alex looks better than in 1915, and that's saying plenty. He has more speed, his curves are breaking better, and his physical condition is good. But Alex's control is not as good as it used to be. Instead of being a hand-icapped to him it really makes him more effective. I know this sounds funny, but in the past his control was too

The story of how Eddie Roush, star outfielder of the Reds, can throw as well with his right hand as with his left dates back to his kid days. He says:

I'M PINCHING WILDCAT TAILS

HELP WANTED

Dear Folks: Did you ever pinch a wildcat's tail? If not, you don't know the thrill of real joy. A good live cat will sometimes spit like a volcano on eruption day, and when it does business is "shore" to pick up. Thousands of people have gotten rich by pinching just one wild cat's tail, and just think, right now I've got a whole herd of these cats up a tree, and if you folks will help me pinch 'em, I believe we can all shake down a big haul.

These cats are mighty good-looking cats. Geologists all say they look like real thoroughbreds, and all their tails can be pinched right now for a cost less than the par value of an Old Time Jug. I'm telling the truth.

Now you folks listen to me. I own Two Thousand Acres of oil leases in Wood County, Texas. I invested all the money I had and could get, I then sold my home, my all, and put that, too, in Wood County leases. Isn't that proof enough that I have confidence in them?

It takes lots of money to own oil leases, that is, good ones, and especially to own so many. Getting all these has put me in the hole. I want out. For a lift I'm going to Butter Somebody's Bread. I'm not selfish enough to want the whole hog now, but still, I'm going to keep enough to set me up in John D.'s class when the drill hits the pay sand.

Several Wells are just now getting under headway right here in this county. My leases are close around activity. Three tracts aggregating over 300 acres are within less than one mile and a half of a well now drilling. And it extends in various tracts across the country to near where there is another well drilling. And there are other wells contemplated on adjoining acreage.

ATTENTION PLEASE I am issuing TWO THOUSAND UNITS of interest in ALL of these Two Thousand Acres. The value of these undivided units is $20 each. Each unit participates in ALL the 2,000 acres. I am going to keep 500. I will sell the balance.

Now, reader, it is this way: A good, reliable geologist with years of practical experience believes there is oil under my leases, and he is going to back up his judgment by drilling one of these wells himself.

THINGS WE GO BY The great Caddo field in Louisiana is just east of us. The big Corsicana field in Texas is southwest of us. They are both coming our way. The Department of Technical Geology, of the University of Texas, says I have the same three sands right here under my leases in Wood County that underlie the great Caddo oil field just over the state line in Louisiana. That field has been producing oil 20 years. The geologists all say that the structure known as the Sabine Uplift in Louisiana crosses over into Texas and into Wood County. A geological survey by the United States Government mentions the fact that we have good indications in the way of gas seepages here. Taking all this into consideration it appears that we have a sure shot of getting oil. Now isn't that a fact? You are bound to admit it's a dandy good risk.

Acting on all this information several oil companies are now rushing a tremendous drilling campaign here which will cost Thousands of Dollars. Undoubtedly these oil companies all believe, too, that there is oil here.

All those who can afford to make a prospective investment where conditions are so highly favorable and where the possibilities are so great, should not fail to join me in this undertaking. No one has to risk anything on ME. I've got it fixed so your risk will all be entirely on the DRILL.

FIGURE IT OUT 37% of all wildcat wells drilled in Texas in 1919 were producers. Out of a total of 4,863 wells, all told, there were only 1,140 dry holes.

CONSIDER POSSIBILITIES In Louisiana they get 30,000-barrel wells. Geologists say we, too, are on the Sabine Uplift.

By way of illustration, suppose the well within one and a half miles of my 300 acres comes in for only 10,000 barrels. That 300 acres alone would be worth SEVERAL MILLION DOLLARS. Say we sold it for $2,000,000. My $20 units would then bring $1,000 each.

One unit$1,000
Two units$2,000
Five units$5,000

We would still have 1,700 acres of leases left. Even a small well would make us some money.

These are only a few out of many thousands who have made money in leases. WHY NOT YOU AND I? DO YOU GET THE VISION? CAN YOU GRASP THE MEANING OF POSSIBLE MILLIONS? ARE YOU CAPABLE OF ABSORBING FACTS AND WILL YOU STAKE A RISK UPON THE JUDGMENT OF THESE OIL COMPANIES HERE WHO ARE SPENDING THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN DRILLING ALL THESE WELLS?

Stop. RIGHT NOW, before you go any further, I want you to remember ONE THING. I am not selling OIL STOCK. I am just a private individual acting on the level and offering you an undivided interest with me in my leases on the land around, and among these wells. You and I will own these leases together.

Will you share this plunge with me? SAFETY. I stand four-square on this proposition; I guarantee you, absolutely, with all the honor and integrity I possess, a square deal without any reservations, restrictions, ifs or ands, whatsoever. I'll watch after your undivided interest with me and protect it as I'll have to do in order to care for my own.

I live here in Wood County, I've been practicing medicine here several years. I am going to live here in the future. But, remember, I've got it so fixed that your investment does not depend on ME. You risk only the DRILL.

GET INTO ACTION. Send me the price of as many units, at $20 each, as you can afford to risk. Take it from me, if you can afford to risk $100, or more, on a chance like this, DO IT. Buy enough to put yourself in "clover" in case we strike it lucky. On the other hand, if you can't afford to risk so much don't send it. Just send whatever amount you can afford to and no more.

CAUTION. Be sure and write every letter in your name and address so plain that mistakes will be impossible. MONEY BACK PLAN. I'll mail you a certificate of interest for all the units you order and also full particulars, together with my references from bankers and others who know me. If you are not absolutely satisfied after looking it all over, and understanding the entire proposition, mail it back to me by registered letter within five days' time after you get it, and I'll return every cent of your money. Isn't that fair enough? Some people are failures all their lives because they can never see an opportunity like this in time to act on it before it passes by. Don't be one of them for this is a real opportunity.

S. O. S. This is my first call for help. HURRY, I've got to have it right away, if I keep all these cats freed. I only offer 1,500 units, these will all soon be gone. A good thing like this is BOUND to go and GO FAST. Now, my dear reader, in all candor, this proposition has merit FAR ABOVE the ordinary. It is up to you for this very day and hour only. Meditate carefully your decision. I'm honest with you when I tell you that the guarantee of your future financial independence is not without the range of its possibilities.

This is too good for you to pass up, and DON'T YOU DO IT. You will not have to risk much and will not likely miss the amount you send me, so give it a trial. Well, it's now bedtime, so long. You folks had better all turn in, too, but be sure and mail your orders first. Do it RIGHT NOW so you will not be too late and sorry. This offer is not going to last long and my honest conviction is this dream will come true. Every sign points with exactness that way, and every indication confirms my judgment that it will all be so, not many days hence. Good night.

MINEOLA, TEXAS. Yours truly, DR. W. L. SMITH.

P. S.—Send all your neighbors word to help me pinch 'em, too. LATER: SINCE TYPE FOR THIS AD WAS SET NEWSPAPER REPORTS OIL STRUCK IN WELL NORTH-WEST OF ME BY GATEX CO. AT 600 FT. THIS IS MY LAST CALL TILL I SEE FURTHER. DO YOUR OWN.

COOK WITH GAS 12 MONTHS OF THE YEAR

Have you considered the comparative costs of cooking with coal and cooking with gas?
The average family can easily do all their cooking with 3,000 cubic feet of gas per month at a cost of $6.21 net. This is much less than the cost of one half of a ton of coal and very few families can do all their cooking with this amount.
In other words, it actually costs less in dollars and cents to cook with gas than with coal, to say nothing of the advantage of gas because of its convenience and because of the labor saved.
Gas is always available any time of day or night. Turn a cock and light the gas and you have the heat you desire. Turn off and all expense is stopped.
The hour used each morning in cleaning out the ashes and kindling the fire and waiting for it to come up is saved if you cook with gas.
The time spent in lugging coal and cleaning up the attendant dirt and dust, of ashes and coal is saved if you use gas. And besides gas is actually cheaper.
Think this over carefully and do not start your coal range this fall.

COAL QUESTION

The Banker and Tradesman says: "It has been rightly stated that probably there is no more menacing economic situation in the world today than that which grows out of the shortage of fuel. This shortage exists in every country. The coming winter is certain to witness much suffering by many families throughout the United States, and this will be due in large part to the refusal of the miners to work. The coal problem, particularly the anthracite, needs deep and serious consideration, for if it is not solved our social problems will reach really dangerous proportions. Rationing of hard coal in Massachusetts until supplies are substantially larger will be of great help, but at the same time consumers must do their part and use what they now have sparingly."

LIQUOR REFERENDUM

The liquor question—in somewhat novel guise—will make its appearance once more upon the ballot at the State election in November. The question of 2.75 percent beer is to be passed upon at the coming election in pursuance of a petition to this effect signed by 25,000 citizens.
The exact wording of the question regarding the sale of 2.75 beer and wine, as made public by the office of the Secretary of State, follows:
"Shall an act entitled 'An act to regulate the manufacture and sale of beer, cider and light wines', and in which it is provided that all beverages containing not less than one-half of one percent and not more than two and three-fourths percent of alcohol by weight at 60 deg. F. shall be deemed not to be intoxicating liquor, which act passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 121 in favor and 67 against, and passed the Senate by a vote of 26 in favor and 6 against, and was thereafter vetoed by His Excellency the Governor, and failed of passage in the Senate over the said veto by a vote of 14 in favor and 22 against, be approved?"
This question, in short, demands of the voter whether he—or she—approves of an act permitting the sale of beer and wine with an alcoholic content of 2.75 percent.
When the Volstead act, placing the maximum alcoholic content for beverages at one-half of 1 percent, was passed, the Legislature of this State was petitioned by 20,000 voters to pass an act legalizing the sale of 2.75 percent beer and wine. This act was passed by both branches of the Legislature, but was vetoed by Gov. Coolidge. The 5000 additional signatures, necessary to have the question placed upon the ballot, have been secured.

A STORE'S CHARACTER

A store has character, as well as an individual, or a town, or a church, or a club.
The character of an individual or town or church or club is largely a matter of pride; but the character of a store is a matter of pride plus profit.
A store of character is ever reaching out for the acquaintance of strangers, that they may come to know and value its character and its superior various means employed to secure merchandising facilities. There are various means employed to secure this result, but that which has been and is employed to the greatest extent and to the greatest satisfaction is newspaper advertising.
If the newspaper advertising does not give the reader a good conception of the store's character, a large percentage of the space and money expended is lost. Such advertising may be said to be all lost unless it merely assists the stranger-reader to recall the name of the store at some time when a purchase is contemplated.
Discriminating and appreciative purchasers are able to tell at a first glance at any paper what the good stores are in the town in which the paper is published. Their ads stand out among all the others in the sheet. They show a careful preparation which might correspond to the pains with which a stock might have been selected; they have a clean, well-balanced, symmetrical look, which suggests that the merchandise in the advertising store is well-arranged for display and examination by the prospective purchaser, and that the store is a pleasing place in which to spend the time required for the purchases contemplated, and suggest that the lines of merchandise advertised are up-to-the-minute and comprehending all the demands that might be put upon them by the most desirable class of customers.

NO SUGAR SHORTAGE

Recent developments seem to indicate that the "sugar scarcity cry" some time ago was without real foundation. It looks as though there was always enough sugar, but the manipulators wanted a higher price. It is to be hoped that the public will continue scant purchasing until these same manipulators "get theirs."—Dedham Transcript.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

A regular meeting of the Weymouth Historical Society was held Wednesday Sept. 29, at the Fogg Library, President H. H. Joy in the chair.

Reports were received from some of sub-committee, who are preparing chapters for the new history of Weymouth, and showed considerable progress had been made.

Gifts were received as follows: From Joseph Sullivan, a World War veteran, a piece of the cross from the Cathedral at Rheims; a German soldier's infantry cap, and a German bomb. From Russell H. an Indian war club and a piece of petrified wood dug up near the fireworks factory, being a part of the old Hassel house.

AMERICAN LEGION

The Massachusetts department has taken steps to prosecute imposters who are wearing American Legion emblems to which they have no right. The State Legislature has passed a law under which such prosecutions may be conducted.

What has the Legion for the ex-service man? Strange as it may seem the question sometimes is still asked. Well, during the ten months past the Legion, through its service division at National Headquarters has obtained for ex-service men more than $1,250,000 due on claims. National Headquarters handles only complicated cases. It is estimated that claims aggregating $7,000,000 have been settled by service officers for the various state departments.

COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION
South Weymouth men enthused at a mass meeting Tuesday evening over a new Community Association, and an organization was effected.

The meeting was held in Union church building and a feature of the program was community singing. Rev. Henry B. Taylor of Meriden, Ct., gave an interesting talk on co-operation and the advantages of social combination. Activities proposed by the Association for the coming season are: Monthly sociables, Sunday evening community meetings of educational and moral value, and a high-class course of lectures, concerts etc. to be held on week-day nights on stated dates. The cost of these good things to the people will be the cost of their production.

The following constitution was adopted:

Article I. The name of this association shall be: "The Community Association of South Weymouth."

Article II. The purpose of this association shall be:

1. To promote mutual understanding and good-will among all individuals and moral, social and religious organizations in the community.

2. To foster a strong, loyal and aggressive community spirit.

3. To co-ordinate, so much as is practicable and possible the purposes and energies of all organizations in the community and to serve as a medium of community life, thus eliminating wasteful competition and duplication of effort.

4. To inaugurate a practical program of community activity and

NEW TOWN COUNSEL
The Selectmen at their regular meeting on Monday adopted resolutions on the death of Albert P. Worthen, for 25 years the town counsel. Later William J. Holbrook was elected Town Counsel to serve until April 1, 1921.

William J. Holbrook, the new Town Counsel, was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1906, the year before he was graduated from the Evening Law School, and has been in general law practice since 1907. He has been a resident of Weymouth since two years of age, and has been prominent in town affairs. He served on the Home Guard Committee, assisted in the Liberty Bond drives, served on the Legal Advisory Draft Board, was chairman of the Welcome Home committee, and is now chairman of the Tornado Relief committee. He is vice-president of the East Weymouth Savings Bank, and a director of the National Mt. Wollaston Bank of Quincy, and the North Weymouth Cooperative Bank. He has an attractive estate on Main street, which was in the path of the recent tornado.

TORNADO RELIEF

The Tornado Relief Committee now has a fund of nearly $5,500, and is about ready to make a distribution of the same among those who suffered at South Weymouth. A meeting of the committee has been called for next Tuesday evening.

The petition remonstrating against the new gas rates of the Old Colony Gas Co. was withdrawn on Wednesday, the petitioners becoming satisfied that the charges were necessary at present.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Russian Reds, Whipped in the Field, Agree to Armistice With the Poles.

SUBMIT TO ALL DEMANDS

Soviet Forces May Concentrate Against Wrangel—Peace in Ireland Nearer—Some Late Developments in Our Presidential Campaign.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Thoroughly whipped by the Poles, the Russian Bolsheviks have signed an armistice with their opponents, and on October 14 hostilities are supposed to cease. The full terms agreed upon at Riga have not yet been given to the public, but enough has been told to show that Poland has won virtually all her contentions. M. Joffe, head of the Russian delegation, was in no position to refuse anything within reason, and indeed he had been instructed to accept almost any terms the Poles might offer.

The western boundary line of soviet Russia was the main matter under discussion, and this was settled entirely in favor of the Poles, according to reports from Riga. The line is placed so far east that Lithuania is cut off entirely from Russia, and Poland is given a corridor between those two countries. The boundary agreed upon begins east of Dvinsk, runs south through Baranovitch, Luninets and Sarny, and virtually along the German line of 1915 to the Roumanian frontier.

The Poles have asserted repeatedly that the Lithuanians have been fighting alongside the Russians, and this boundary settlement should, therefore, go far in bringing about a peaceful agreement between Poland and Lithuania; when that is accomplished the Poles will be free to turn their attention to the establishment of their own government and the development of their country. They have agreed to be neutral in the Ukraine, where the soviet and Petlura forces are fighting, and Russia gives up all claims to eastern Galicia.

It is asserted by some correspondents that Dombalski, head of the Polish mission at Riga, was moved to hurry up the agreement with the Russians by the admonitions of the British ambassador in Warsaw and also by the movements of his political opponent, Prince Sapieha. In addition, say these correspondents, the liberal Dombalski element in Poland, is somewhat alarmed by the successes of Baron Wrangel in southern Russia; considering that the restoration of the old Russian empire would constitute a great danger to Poland. Many experts believe that a Russo-Polish peace will result in the crushing of Wrangel and his armies. It is taken for granted that the soviet government will at once concentrate its efforts on the Crimean front.

However, Wrangel has been making such progress in his campaign that his chances still seem good. In his advance northward he has taken many thousands of prisoners and vast quantities of material, and his forces also pushed along the coast of the Sea of Azov northeastward toward important cities on the lower Don. Early in the week it was said that Makno, the Ukraine insurgent leader, had formed a junction with Wrangel's troops and in a flying raid had seized Kharkov. Later a wireless dispatch from Moscow asserted that Makno had joined the Bolsheviks and had been given a command against Wrangel. It was said his shift was due to the refusal of his troops to fight against the Bolsheviks. Makno's past history inclines one to doubt the truth of this report. According to a Copenhagen newspaper, General Weygand, who assisted the Poles, has gone to South Russia to take supreme command of the anti-soviet armies there.

The apparent collapse of the Bolsheviks is probably due in large measure to the fact that the Russian crop outlook is the worst ever experienced and that in consequence the country faces starvation during the coming winter. Lenin and the other leaders have been making desperate efforts to re-open commercial relations with Great Britain and Italy and to make peace with Roumania, but these efforts have been fruitless so far. The Red soldiers are mutinying and assassinating their officers, and the Russian people generally are in despair.

In Petrograd especially the conditions are terrible, and all the inhabitants who can be fleeing from the city. The Finnish Red Cross has just issued an appeal to the Red Cross Societies of the World describing the shocking state of affairs in the former capital. The population has shrunk to about 600,000, and thousands are dying every month of various kinds of epidemics. There is no fuel, no hot water for baths, no street cleaning or removal of garbage, and the streets are becoming impassable because the paving blocks are being burned and the water pipes are bursting. The hospitals are overflowing with patients, and their equipment is wretchedly inadequate.

"Death," says the report, "stalks on every side, waiting for winter to aid in the grim work of mowing down the silent, hungry sick, and dying thousands. With streets and houses choked with filth that is already spreading spotted and intermittent typhus, the cold weather will finish the task with pneumonia and abdominal typhus."

The allied mission named to handle the dispute between Poland and Lithuania arrived at Suwalki Tuesday to begin work, and on the same day, it was announced, the Poles and Lithuanians stopped fighting.

The Adriatic dispute between Italy and Jugo-Slavia is in a fair way of settlement, for cabinet members of both nations met Friday in Venice and resumed direct negotiations. Some time ago Lloyd George and Millerand, then premier of France, said if the Jugo-Slavs and Italians got together it was nobody else's business, which was taken as a warning to the United States government to keep its hands off, whatever may be the disposition of Plume.

If it were not for the people of California and a few Jingoos on both sides of the Pacific, the threat of unpleasant relations between America and Japan would quickly fade away. The American associations of Tokyo and Yokohama have cabled to Secretary of State Colby a set of joint resolutions urging that Americans "act with sober deliberation and patience, trusting the respective governments to find a solution satisfactory and effective without affronting Japan or sacrificing the principles of equity on either hand."

Viscount Ishii, the new Japanese ambassador to France and one of his country's wisest statesmen, is quoted as saying: "War will never come between the United States and Japan, unless the United States seizes Japanese territory or Japan seizes American territory. Japan has not the remotest intention of ever attempting to appropriate any American territory." He says there is no trade war on between the two countries, and that labor and land problems cannot be permitted to be magnified into questions where war might be even envisaged. He and other Japanese leaders assert that most of the people of Japan realize that most of the talk of international trouble is due to the fact that the United States is in the throes of a presidential election.

The efforts of the Irish peace council, made up of moderates from all parts of the island, are slowly leading to a settlement of the Irish problem. The council has completed its plan for dominion rule of the island, and its members say the leaders of the Sinn Fein have intimated that, though of course they still desire entire independence, they will not oppose the plan if it can be shown that a majority of the Irish people desire it. Premier Lloyd George also told the council it must be able to assure him of sufficient support in Ireland to guarantee that the scheme would be workable, before he would submit it to parliament. The council claims to have this support, and it may send a deputation to Lloyd George this week. The first step in the plan is the creation of a constituent assembly in Ireland in which Ulster will be represented.

President Wilson got into the presidential campaign at the beginning of the week with a long letter addressed to his fellow citizens, urging them to place the seal of their approval of the League of Nations covenant by their votes at the polls in November. He said: "The chief question that is put to you is, of course, this: Do you want your country's honor vindicated and the treaty of Versailles ratified? Do you in particular approve of the League of Nations as organized and empowered in that treaty? And do you wish to see the United States play its responsible part in it?"

He said the opponents of the league had misled the voters and had displayed gross ignorance and impudent audacity in their "attempt to invent an 'Americanism' of their own, which has no foundation whatever in any of the authentic traditions of the government."

Following this lead, Governor Cox and Franklin Roosevelt in their campaign speeches are now making the League of Nations the great issue and are devoting to it most of their arguments. Homer S. Cummings, former Democratic national chairman, also has been called on and will speak for the league in Ohio, Kansas, Indiana, Kentucky, New Mexico and California.

Senator Harding abandoned his porch again for a quick speaking tour through part of the Middle West, and in his address at Des Moines he accepted the direct issue of ratifying or rejecting the League of Nations covenant. He declared flatly he would favor staying out of the league as formed at Versailles; he said he wanted no acceptance of the league with or without reservations to clarify America's obligations, and that he thought the proper thing to do was to reject the covenant altogether. As for what he does favor doing in the way of an association of nations, he said:

"I shall not risk embarrassing the final solution of a problem so momentous by undertaking to lay down in advance specific details or plans. As soon as possible after my election I shall advise with the best minds in the United States and especially I shall consult in advance with the senate with whom, by the terms of the Constitution, I shall indeed be bound to counsel and without whose consent no such international association can be formed. I shall do this to the end that we shall have an association of nations for the promotion of international peace, but one which shall definitely safeguard our sovereignty and recognize our ultimate and unimpaired freedom of action."

An acrimonious controversy has arisen between President Wilson and Senator Spencer of Missouri. The latter, in campaign speeches, asserted that the President during the peace conference promised Roumania and Serbia that if needed the American army and navy would be sent to their aid. This charge Mr. Wilson branded as absolutely false. The senator retorted that the alleged promise was to be found in the stenographic report of the eighth plenary session of the conference, in which Mr. Wilson was reported to have said to Premier Bratianu of Roumania: "You must not forget that it is force that is the final guaranty of the public peace. If the world is again troubled the United States will send to this side of the ocean their army and their fleet."

Spencer asked the President to produce the report, but Secretary Tumulty said on Thursday the President had no stenographic report of the eighth plenary session and, so far as the President knows, there is no such record in this country.

Unless the Supreme court of the United States says no, "Big Bill" Haywood and the 93 other I. W. W. members who were tried some time ago before Judge Landis will have to go to the penitentiary. Their conviction on charges of conspiracy to violate the selective draft and espionage acts has been affirmed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The moving of a number of boxwood trees, ranging in age from 200 to 300 years, to be transplanted around the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, is the biggest tree project ever undertaken by the District of Columbia. These trees are so large in some cases they have to be divided before it is possible to move them. They were purchased from the Heimuller estate in Washington. They have to be carried five miles.

BOSTON SUNDAY POST
 Margot Asquith, wife of Herbert Henry Asquith, former premier of Great Britain, has laid her life bare and exposed her soul to the eyes of the world.

The intimate, personal diary of Mrs. Asquith, written by herself, is being published in the Boston Sunday Post. It is one of those frank, open, rare—not to say sensational—documents that are given to the world only once in half a century or so.

The paper is unchanged in size—just as big as ever.

Over 40,000 new readers and friends of the Sunday Post were added last Sunday.

QUINCY THEATRE
 Al Luttringer Players present: "The Man Who Dared" at the Quincy Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 18, 19 and 20. "The Man Who Dared" is a society drama of the first rank. Its story is one that holds the spectators from start to finish and the character portrayals are all that could be desired. Mr. Luttringer, in the title role has a part that fairly dominates all of the other characters in the play. As the Westerner, who is not afraid to fight the biggest men in Wall street, he is superb and it is doubtful if he has been seen in a better role for many a day at the Quincy Theatre. Also little Miss Kingsley has a very appealing part, as the girl whom he forces to marry him, and later almost ruins him. The other members of the cast are entitled to praise for the excellent work they do.

Al Luttringer Players present: "The Flower of Virginia", the thoroughly delightful comedy drama that opens at the Quincy Theatre Thursday. It is said to consist of three great emotions: as foul a murder as was ever committed on the stage, as suffering as keen and as pathetic as could possibly come to man, and a retribution as sure and as satisfying as could be needed to expiate a great crime.

SATURDAY EVENING DANSANT
 There was a large attendance at the Wistaria Bungalow at Quincy last Saturday evening. This makes the fifth social, and Mr. Green, director of the dansant, says that he will continue the parties right through the coming winter, so that the young and old who dance will not have to travel into Boston. This will help the dancers in expense and is convenient to their home. Music is provided by the well known Ferncroft orchestra. Mr. Greer also wishes to announce that he has secured his regular saxophone and banjo players beginning with last Saturday. Come and hear them next Saturday evening.

HOLIDAY TROT
 It took six heats to decide the winner in the 230 trot on the holiday at the Weymouth Fair Grounds. A. R. Mann's Julius Haie took the first, fourth and sixth heats, trotting the final in 2:22 1/2.

In the 224 class Aubrey Rodney's Barna was in three straight; best time 2:22 1/4.

HOLIDAY GAME
 Weymouth High proved too strong for Braintree High at the Clapp Athletic Field on the holiday and won by the score of 26 to 6.

She Bares Her Life Story

The Intimate Personal Diary of Mrs. Herbert ASQUITH

"The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue"

The following poem was written by the eminent English poet, William Watson, who, in a signed statement, admitted that in it he intended to portray the physical characteristics of Mrs. Asquith. The poem was written because of her scorching frankness in her writings—a frankness that appears also in this autobiography.

*She is not old, she is not young,
 The woman with the serpent's tongue,
 The haggard cheek, the hungry eye,
 The poisoned words that wildly fly,
 Who half makes love to you today,
 Tomorrow gives her guest away,
 Burnt up within by that strange soul
 She cannot save or yet control.*

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

AMERICAN LEGION NOW HAS THE DEPARTMENT OF PANAMA

Scene on the island of Taboga, where the Department of Panama held its recent convention.

Sixteen years ago when President Roosevelt called on the men of America to enlist in the great adventure of cutting a waterway from ocean to ocean through the Isthmus of Panama that the strength of the American fleet might not be divided by a voyage of weeks from the east to the west coast there were thousands of volunteers who answered his call. To Panama they went and built the great canal, fighting all the time against perpetual heat, almost perpetual rain, fevers and all the pests of the tropics.

Many of them gave up the struggle and returned home but others stayed until the great dream came true. And they are there yet in that far-flung outpost of America by the locks that are lapped by the waters of two oceans.

Again in April, 1917, came a call to duty—a summons to war—and that call was not unheard at the canal. One by one men and women dropped out of the shops and offices and donned the army khaki and the navy blue or the modest cap and cape of the army nurse corps until on November 11, 1918, the day of the armistice, there were approximately 500 Canal men and women in uniform.

They saw service in all branches of American arms. They were on land and sea, in the air and under the water. They were a versatile people and they were fighters as their building of the canal had proved. They came back with almost every medal and decoration of the war, including citations from the French, British and the other allies.

In September of last year several of these fighters met to form a post of the American Legion. One had recently been an aviator in France, another as a lieutenant of engineers had done things in No Man's Land that high British officers said were impossible. A third, after many months of volunteer ambulance driving before America entered the war, had enlisted in the French artillery and had ended as a lieutenant. This first post was immediately followed by a second and the creation of the department of Panama of the American Legion with headquarters at Cristobal.

The first convention of the department was held recently on the island of Taboga, 12 miles from the mainland of the Isthmus of Panama and in sight of the spot where in 1513 Vasco Nunez de Balboa discovered the Pacific ocean. At this convention Elbert S. Wald was elected department commander and Edward J. Dally, department adjutant for the coming year. These offices previously had been held by Conyngham Patterson and Herbert Pearson, respectively. Arrangements were also made to have the Panama department represented at the Cleveland convention.

SHALL GIRLS BE ADMITTED?

Membership Question Looms Before Officials of Legion—Some "Y" Workers Present Claims.

A recurring question before the officials of the American Legion is that of eligibility to membership. Just where is the line to be drawn? Shall, for instance, those "little sisters of the army," the "Y" girls, be admitted to full membership?

Although at present they stand without the pale there are some who believe they should be taken in. Some of the girls themselves have very modestly presented their claims. The following is an excerpt from a letter from Miss Sallie Lou Massey of Meridian, Miss., to the national commander:

"I am just one of hundreds of 'Y' girls at home now, wearing pretty clothes which don't seem quite right after having worn the uniform. In France we cooked, kept house, handed out magazines and papers and danced—hundreds of kilometers we danced—all of which isn't so much, I know, but the spirit behind it made us feel that we belonged to the men of the A. E. F. and they to us. Has all this comradeship been shed with the uniform? We have watched with high hopes the development of the American Legion, and in your splendid achievements those hopes are being fulfilled. Why is the 'Y' girl, who was one of you in France, left out? Is not affiliation with the American Legion the only way by which we can carry on and keep the spirit that was ours in France?"

Miss Massey served nine months in France. She received a citation for courageous work among the troops during the influenza epidemic in the fall of 1918.

ELECTED FOR THREE YEARS

Thomas J. Bannigan Is Re-Elected Connecticut Department Adjutant for Unusually Long Period.

The innovation of choosing a department adjutant to serve for three years was adopted by the Connecticut convention of the American Legion. Thomas J. Bannigan of Hartford was re-elected for that period. Ordinarily the term of a department adjutant is one year only but the longer period, it was felt, would enable Mr. Bannigan to obtain far-reaching results.

MEDAL OF HONOR SAVED HIM

New Jersey Legion Member Escapes Jail Sentence by Display of His Emblem.

Sentimental considerations left out of the reckoning, Frank Sadowski, an American Legion member of Newark, N. J., found out the other day that a Congressional Medal of Honor is a handy thing to have.

Sadowski works in the day time and sleeps at night. That is, he had been sleeping at night until a couple of loving cats began a noisy courtship on his back fence. Sadowski stood it as long as he could and then went down in his old barracks bag and dragged out the trusty automatic he carried in France. The cats became casualties and Sadowski became a prisoner of the law and was hauled into court charged with disturbing the peace.

The evidence was all against him and he was about to be sentenced when, inadvertently, he mentioned that he once killed six Germans single handed and captured their machine gun with the same revolver with which he routed the yowling cats. For this feat he won America's highest war honor, and a string of lesser medals. He produced the medals as proof and the judge let him off.

YOUTH MUST BE SERVED.

Camera Man—Well, did you find out the newest of this guy Shakespeare's plays we are to picture next?

Director—Yes. They've decided on "King Lear." But I don't approve of the selection. You see Lear is a big character and very exacting and calls for a great actor, well on in years and classic experience, to properly assimilate it. We have no such actor. King Lear is of the patriarch type, very venerable and very, very old.

Camera Man—Aw, that's all right. We'll fix that. We'll play him as he was when he was a young man.—Film Fun.

A Proof.
"If women played football, they would not be injured as badly as the men."

"Why not?"
"Did you ever hear of women being seriously hurt in the bargain sale rushes?"

Pageant of "The Spirit of Temperance"

"The Spirit of Temperance," a pageant depicting the growth of the United States Constitution up to the eighteenth amendment, featured the fifteenth international congress against alcoholism, held in Washington. The pageant was staged on the east steps of the capitol. The photograph was made while the famous dry amendment held the center of the stage in a garb which to some of the spectators seemed more somber than that of his black-robed brothers.

Months of Winter.
Astronomically winter is reckoned to begin in northern latitudes when the sun enters Capricorn, or at the solstice (about December 21), and to end at the equinox in March; but in ordinary speech winter comprises the three coldest months—December, January and February, being reckoned the winter months in the United States, and November, December and January in Great Britain.

THE INTRICATE STORY OF SHOPPING BAGS

BAGS, endless in variety and uses, are made of many materials, but vivid and splendid ribbons appear to stimulate the genius of designers in the direction of shopping bags. Millinery fairly revels too in these gorgeous ribbons, that do so much to tone up the brilliant hats of midwinter, but it has come to pass that bags dispose of many more yards of rich, brocaded ribbons than hats find a use for. Some fortunate darlings of the gods can indulge themselves in hats with bags to match, many others content themselves with bags or with a hat made of these gorgeous stuffs. In any case they carry a flavor of genial opulence along with them.

A hat and bag to match made of rich metallic brocaded ribbon holds the center of the stage in the elegant little company shown above. Nearly always brocaded ribbons and plain velvets bear each other company in hats of this kind, but in this instance a plain, heavy satin ribbon is used for the turned-back band across the front. It is fastened at each side with a flat cabochon of narrower satin ribbon (braided into a cord) and five short ends are posed under the cabochons. The companion bag employs an embossed silver mounting, set with mock jewels and is finished with a cabochon like those on the hat. Black and silver brocade, in a bold Japanese pattern, makes a good choice for this set and for the other bag of the same shape, shown in the picture. But there is a world of patterns to choose from.

The third bag is a very odd and handsome combination of both brocaded and plain ribbon. It makes a good beginning with an unusual mounting of silver and follows it with a vivid brocaded ribbon body having plain satin ribbon shirred across its lower corners. The two ribbons go well together, the plain colors emphasizing the vividness and richness of the brocaded pattern.

Changeable taffetas make lovely bags; the new celluloid mountings harmonize with this silk, but there are plenty of bags made without mountings of any kind. They have handles of narrow ribbon usually. Velvet bags ornamented with beads or finished with bead fringes are sometimes suspended on fine steel chains to correspond with the steel and glass beads used in their adornment.

COMPARING NOTES.

"You got to use judgment in this business same as any other," said Bill the burglar.

"Well," replied Claude the cracksmen. "I picked out one of the finest safes in town."

"Yes. An' worked all night for what? A few bonds an' such like. Don't you know food is worth more than money? What I did was to walk up on a back porch, open a window an' help myself to the contents of an icebox."

A Favored Traveler.

"These roads are in a terrible condition," exclaimed Mr. Chiggins. "You're lucky," remarked Farmer Cornstessel. "Most of the automobiles who get this far are so busy lookin' for a blacksmith shop or a garage that they don't have time for friendly conversation 'bout the roads."

Conscientious Modernist.

"Gone to work in a boiler factory?" "Yes."

"Thought you were going to devote yourself to music."

"I am. What I'm after now is some genuinely big jazz effects for my orchestra."

CAUSE FOR JOY.

Bug Walter—Why so happy, Mr. Spider?
Guest—I just found a fly in my soup.

Handwriting on the Tag.
Time's "moving finger" writes, they say. We view the writing with a frown, Because it always reads one way, The price goes up instead of down.

Mathematical Proof.

"How do you know the fish you didn't succeed in landing was so very large?"
"Law of averages. You can see for yourself that all I actually caught are little bits of fellows."

Once a Week.

"You say you have good references?" "Yes, ma'am. I have over a hundred splendid references."
"And how long have you been in domestic service?"
"Two years, ma'am."

Somniloquence.

"A socialist is, after all, something of a dreamer."
"Maybe he is. If so, he's one of those dreamers who talk in their sleep and make everyone else 'wakeful and nervous."

Tastes in Common.

"Those two students are well fitted for association."
"How so?"
"One is the kind that always calls a spade a spade, and the other is the sort who digs."

About Those Whimsical Brims

IN SOME seasons milliners appear to center attention on the brims of hats and at other times it is the crowns that command all of their consideration. Just now, in winter millinery, crowns are playing an inconspicuous part. They refuse to take any responsibility, being soft and unsupported, their contour indefinite, except after they are adjusted to the head. Occasionally when assisted by a side band they are equal to supporting a little embroidery but usually they are merely a soft covering for the top of the head in all fabric hats.

Meanwhile designers are showing just how many things can be done with brims. They are fanciful—eccentric, whimsical, and they are exceedingly pretty and becoming. With the advance of the season and the appearance of midwinter hats for formal wear a great many handsome velvet hats show brims of uneven width—and in addition to mere unevenness they are split, curved, dented, slashed, folded and draped. Their ways are devious and there is no telling what will happen to them next, but it is a safe guess that they will not return to the straight and narrow path for some time to come.

Typical brims appear in the group of hats shown in the picture. One of them has a very wide brim slashed at even intervals. It is made of velvet and its edges are bound with beaver cloth. A rose and foliage design is embroidered about the side crown with angora yarn and a little flat bow of ribbon is posed on the brim at the front. A great favorite in shapes has an upturned brim of brocaded satin, folded into a plait at the center with chain and ball ornaments placed in the folds. An upturned brim draped with embroidered velvet is planned to the divyety crown with two large, ornamental pins. A shape of black velvet, faced with blue, has a brim that widens at the sides where it is split, curls backward, curves upward and turns downward into a hat that is as beautiful as it is eccentric and the simplest hat of the group contents itself with a brim made of velvet petals, chain-stitched with heavy silk.

AFTER A JOB

A Quincy item of Monday is of interest to Weymouth people. It is from a Boston paper:

"Who wants to hire a full-fledged 'workman', ready to go to work and stay on his job all day, being fortified with his luncheon, all tied up in a piece of newspaper?"

"If anybody has a job they want done, now is the time to get the services of a very ambitious youth, who is being detained at the City Home here. Before he is let out for hire, though, perhaps some anxious mother may want to have a say about it, for there must be a very anxious mother somewhere worrying because her boy hasn't come home since breakfast."

"This 'workman', who is about four years old, came into City Square this morning on an electric car from Weymouth. He had two pieces of toasted bread tied up in a remnant of a newspaper and held onto his rations with considerable pride. Once in City Square the kiddie didn't know what to do, or where to go, but a police officer who spotted him found out the lad wanted to get a job at Fore River and was all ready to report for work, if he only knew how to get there. The lad cannot or will not tell his name and so the police took the little fellow to the City Home, where he is the temporary guest of Mrs. Lynch, the matron.

"That this would-be workman is ambitious there is no doubt, but as Shakespeare made Marc Anthony say at Caesar's funeral, 'Ambitions should be made of sterner stuff.'"

Later the boy was identified as Vincent Calabro Jr., of North Weymouth, and will continue to work at home.

ALBERT PARKER WORTHEN An Appreciation

A high type of a New England town lawyer. He reflected credit upon himself, his family and his community. He was an honest man, a dignified and successful advocate. He was the possessor of a judicial temperament without the glamour of the ermine. He was a human man, whose common sense was a visible and lasting asset. He had a kindly disposition. He was calm, courteous and cheerful. His example was a model. His conduct was that of a gentleman.

In the language of Whittier: "It is not ours to separate
The tangled skein of will and fate,
To show what metes and bounds
Should stand

Upon the soul's debatable land,
And between choice and Providence
Divide the circle of events;
But He who knows our frame is just,
Merciful and compassionate,
And full of sweet assurances
And hope for all the language is,
That He remembereth we are dust."

Former member of the Town & City Council Association.

SUITS FOR DAMAGES

Matteo Perrone of Weymouth has entered a suit in the Norfolk Superior court to recover $10,000 damages from Lester W. Clark for an automobile accident in July, 1919, resulting in the death of Michael Perrone. Suit is also brought against George C. Curtis.

The Autocar Sales & Service Co. of Boston is suing Ritchie T. Howe of Weymouth to recover $1000 damages for injury to an automobile truck at South Weymouth, April 11, 1920, when it was run into by the defendant's automobile.

Gustave B. Bates of Quincy is suing the inhabitants of Weymouth to recover $1500 damages. He says he is the owner of land on Pleasant street, Lovell's Corner, and defendant town constructed a drain and as a result his land has been flooded with the surface water.

Annie M. Bates of Quincy is suing the inhabitants of Weymouth to recover $2000 damages. She alleges she is the owner of a two-family house at 908 Washington street, Weymouth, and that on or about June 1, 1920, the defendant "willfully, maliciously and without right discontinued the service of water to said premises", and that such act caused the same to "become uninhabitable", and as a result she has suffered for a long period of time the loss of rent and other damage. She also is suing George E. Blecknell of Weymouth in the same connection.

EARLY SELF-PROPELLED VEHICLE

Another stage in the history of the automobile was unearthed recently when Gabriel Pollock, in searching through some old relics, came upon what Achille Fillion, who invented it in 1893, maintains is the first self-propelled vehicle to appear in the streets of Chicago. As a park lizard it was some boat in those days.

STOP END PLAY IN CRANKSHAFT

Bronze Washer Placed Between Bearing and Flywheel Will Overcome Difficulty.

DIAGRAM EXPLAINS DETAILS

Where Screws Pass Through Halves of Washer the Lower Part is Filed Flat to Permit Fitting of Little Iron Strips.

It is not always practical for one to replace the main bearings or the caps in an engine which is giving no trouble except for a slight end play in the crankshaft.

Although any end play in this member is destructive to both the engine and the transmission, it seems a pity to spend time in fitting new bearing caps, and so the following suggestion is given to obviate the trouble.

To Obviate Trouble.

Measure the clearance between the last or rear bearing and the flange on the end of the crankshaft, and dress off the end of this last bearing until approximately one-quarter-inch play clearance at this point is obtained. Next fit a bronze washer so that it will compensate for this clearance and have a hole in it one-eighth inch larger than the shaft. Cut the washer into two pieces with a hacksaw, then fit two machine screws to hold the two parts together. This split washer may then be placed over the crankshaft between the bearing and the flywheel flange, and will compensate for end play.

End play in an automobile crankshaft can be prevented by placing a bronze washer over the crankshaft between the bearing and flywheel.

Illustration Explains.

Upon referring to the illustration, one will note that where the retaining screws pass through the halves of the washer, the lower part has been filed flat. This is to permit the fitting of a flat piece of iron between the head of the screw and the washer. This latter piece of iron should be clamped beneath the head of the bearing-cap retaining bolt and will prevent the washer from rattling.—Popular Science Monthly.

DETECTION OF SHORT CIRCUIT

By Feeling Carefully Along Wires Driver Can Locate Seat of Trouble by Heat.

When two of the wires of the lighting or starting systems are producing a short-circuit, an inevitable accompaniment of the condition is heat. By feeling carefully along the line the operator can usually detect the presence of a short by the heat that is being generated.

WHEN VACUUM TANK FIZZLES

Possible to Get Up Enough Pressure Temporarily to Feed Fuel by Blowing in Line.

When the vacuum tank falls on the road, it is possible to get up enough pressure temporarily to feed the fuel by blowing in the main fuel line. By repeating this process every quarter of a mile enough fuel will be fed to get the car to a garage where repairs can be made.

MOTOR POWER TRANSMISSION

Invention That Enables Driver to Change Speed Without Breaking Connection.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a power transmission invention of G. L. Jacques of Neillsville, Wis., says:

This invention relates generally to transmission of power and more particularly to a power transmission for motor vehicles, the primary object being a power transmission which will enable the changing of speed without breaking the power connection between the motor and the drive wheels. A further object is the provision of a friction power transmission in which greater bearing is provided and maintained between the driving and driven friction members.

WORN TIRES ARE EXPENSIVE

Slight Gain Effectuated Is More Than Offset by Excessive Deterioration of Wheels.

The slight gain effected by using badly worn tires is much more than offset by the excessive deterioration of the wheels, motor and transmission, not to mention breakdowns or serious wrecks. It would be a good thing if truck makers generally suggested to their customers the advisability of not attempting to secure further mileage after the tires have worn down.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

King Albert of Belgium is an experienced motorist.

There are 2,400 to 2,500 parts in the popular-priced touring car.

Canada and the United States have together some 8,000,000 motor vehicles.

Automobile manufacturers are planning to standardize hub sizes to any and all wheels.

In filling the gearset put in the lubricant to a depth of about half the height of the gearbox.

A car that is driven on a fixed throttle will show lower fuel consumption than one driven on variable throttle movement.

Surprising as it may seem, the first automobile was built and tested half a century before the first railroad track was laid.

Mileage capacity of a motortruck varies according to make and purposes for which it is used and manner in which it is handled.

Automobile tires are wrapped in paper by the manufacturers because tire makers know that sunlight and air sap the strength of rubber.

During the active running season it is a good plan to test the wheels for side play once a month. Side play causes excessive bearing wear and tire wear as well.

Take a shovel for emergencies and also a tow-rope. You may have to be pulled out of a ditch at the side of the road, or you may want to help out someone else.

Has the Small Car Owner A Right to Good Tires

THIS much is certain—that the small car owners of this country have as high quality standards as any other class of motorists. Whenever you want to see this proven out, you have only to watch how they come to good tires, when they are given an opportunity to get at them.

What some dealers seem to overlook are the reasons which have led most of the small car owners to buy their cars.

In building tires for the small car, the United States Rubber Company exercises as much care, as much thought, as much supervision, as if they were intended to go on the most expensive cars in the country.

Devoting an entire factory to their manufacture. Putting the whole weight of its varied experience behind them.

Never cheapening their quality on the mistaken theory that a man's intelligence can be judged by the length of his car's wheel base.

Good dealers will tell you that they can never get enough U. S. 30x3 1/2-inch Tires.

A hint which the small car owner who is bent on quality will always heed in time.

WEBSTER —MAN'S MAN

by Peter B. Kyne

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

ANDREW BOWERS.

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after cleaning up $200,000. But he looks like a hobo. Then he meets a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over. He eliminates the offending man. Being what he is and also girl-shy, he does not take advantage of his opportunity. But he just has to find out that she is Dolores Ruy. In Denver he is offered a $25,000-a-year job by a capitalist friend, Edward J. Jerome. He receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go fifty-fifty with him on the profits. So he starts for Sobrante. Jerome goes with John to the depot. They meet the distressed lady on her way to the same train. John lifts his hat, but gets the cut direct from the girl, who does not recognize him. John tells Jerome the whole story. Jerome secretly sees the girl, offering her $50,000 if she induces John to take his job inside of ninety days. The girl accepts. The scene now shifts to Buenaventura, Sobrante, where Geary, on his uppers, is eating his heart out looking for a cablegram from his old partner. He has extended for two months on credit extended by Mother Jenks, keeper of a hotel and dramshop. Dolores cables Henrietta Wilkins (Mother Jenks) that she is on her way to visit her. Mother Jenks has been educating Dolores, who is the daughter of former President Ruy of Sobrante, deposed and executed by President Sarros. Mother Jenks doesn't want Dolores to find out she is no longer respectable. So Billy meets the steamer and tries to turn the girl back. But Dolores lands and salutes Mother Jenks as "Mother." Billy promptly falls in love with Dolores. Webster in New Orleans secures a stateroom on La Estrellita by buying a ticket for a mythical valet. In New Orleans Webster saves a young man from assassination. At the steamer he finds the mythical valet is a reality.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

He released Pucker-eye, made his way through the crowd to his room, looked in, saw that his baggage was there, and walked around on the starboard side to join in the general farewell of all on board to the crowd on the levee.

At the shore end of the gangplank Pucker-eye and Pop-eye still waited. The unfortunate Pucker-eye was weeping with pain and futile rage and humiliation, but Webster noticed that Pop-eye's attention was not on his friend but upon each passenger that boarded the ship, of which there were the usual number of late arrivals. As each passenger approached, Pop-eye scanned him with more than casual interest.

Webster smiled. "Looking for that valet they heard me talking about," he reflected. "Pop-eye, you're a fine, capable lad. I thought you had the brains of the two. You're not going away until you've had a chance to size up the re-enforcements at my command, are you?"

He lighted a cigar and leaned over the rail as the steamer, gathering speed, swept down river.

"Good-by, you golden fizz and chicken gumbo," he called, as the city receded and the low, wooded shores below the city came into view.

When he had finished his cigar he cast the stump overboard, watched it until it disappeared astern, and then went around to stateroom No. 34. As he stepped in and closed the door a masculine voice said very pleasantly: "How do you do?"

Mr. Webster looked up and beheld a young man, arrayed in a very fancy pair of light blue silk pajamas, stretched at his ease in the upper berth.

John Stuart Webster stared at the stranger for several seconds and concluded he was invading the sanctity of another's stateroom. "Excuse me," he said, "I guess I'm in the right church but the wrong pew," and he stepped out and looked for the number on the stateroom. To his surprise it was No. 34 after all, so he stepped back into the stateroom and favored the stranger with another scrutiny.

"It does appear to me, my friend," he said presently, "that I detect something strangely familiar about your pajamas."

"I wouldn't be the least bit surprised Mr. Webster. I found them in your suitcase."

Fell a silence of perhaps half a minute. Then:

"I dislike to appear inquisitive," Webster began, "but the fact is, neighbor, I'm curious to know where you got that book. I observe you are reading Samuel Butler's 'Way of All Flesh,' and that the book is slightly damaged. Recently I purchased such a book in—"

"Fray do not take the trouble to explain," the other answered slyly. "I discovered this excellent book in your suitcase also. In fact, for me, that suitcase has proved to be a repository of treasures."

John Stuart Webster's neck came out of his collar with the suddenness of a turtle snapping at a fly; he drew himself up beside the top berth until his face was on a level with his unbidden guest's, upon whom he bent a look of mingled emotions.

"Who the devil are you?" he demanded.

"I regret I have no card, but even if I had it would be no kindness to inflict upon an American gentleman the cognomen my parents honored me with, for it is long and many-jointed, like a peanut, and embodies the names of all the saints in the calendar. Moreover, just at present I am traveling under an alias. I am known as Mr. Andrew Bowers."

"And your occupation?" Webster managed to articulate.

"Valet de chambre to that prince of gentlemen, Mr. John S. Webster," the other replied with a mischievous gleam in his dark eyes.

Mr. Webster sat down limply on the settee. He was undecided whether to roar with laughter or shriek with rage; while he struggled for a decision Andrew Bowers blew smoke rings at the ceiling.

"Haven't I seen you before?" Webster queried presently.

"I wouldn't be surprised. I drove you down to the steamer in a taxi half an hour ago. You will recall that the taxi driver carried your luggage aboard."

Webster gazed around the stateroom. "Where have you hidden your livery?" he demanded.

"I wrapped it in a newspaper; then, seeking a moment when the deck outside was deserted, I stepped forth in my—I beg your pardon, your—pajamas and tossed it overboard."

"But apparently you did not bring aboard with you a suit of clothes to take the place of your livery?"

"Quite true—lamentably so, Mr. Webster. Perhaps you will accept my desperate need as an excuse for borrowing your pajamas. I notice you have another suit of them. Fortunate man!"

Andrew Bowers was a man of perhaps thirty years, five feet ten inches tall, and apparently in excellent health. He might have weighed a hundred and seventy pounds and he was undeniably handsome.

While Webster was wondering whether his companion was merely a high-class tramp or an absconding bank cashier, a knock sounded on the stateroom door. He opened it and the pursuer stood in the entrance.

"Ticket, please?" he announced.

Webster surrendered both tickets, receiving in turn two seat checks for the dining saloon, and the pursuer passed on to the next cabin.

Andrew Bowers smiled a small, pre-emptive smile, but said nothing, and presently John Stuart Webster broke the silence. "Well," he ordered, "sing the song or tell the story."

"I noticed you surrendered my ticket to the pursuer," the young man answered irrelevantly, "and I am glad of that. I take it as prima facie evidence that you have made up your mind to accept my company."

"You're too infernally cool and cocksure, my friend," Webster warned him testily. "I pride myself on a sense of humor and I dearly love a joke until it's carried too far, but be divided in time, young man, and don't try to play horse with me. My acceptance or non-acceptance of you is a subject for future discussion, since at present we have some fiduciary matters before us. You owe me fifty dollars for your ticket, Andrew Bowers, and in view of the fact that I never saw you before today, suppose we start the voyage by squaring the account."

Andrew Bowers sat up in the berth and let his legs drape over the side. "Mr. Webster," he began seriously, "if, prior to the arrival of the pursuer to collect the tickets, you had handed my ticket to me, saying: 'Here is your ticket, Mr. Bowers. Be kind enough to reimburse me to the extent of fifty dollars,' I should have been compelled to admit then, as I do now, that I haven't fifty dollars. Fortunately for me, however, you surrendered the ticket to the pursuer before acquainting yourself with the state of my fortunes; the voyage has commenced and whether you like it or not, my dear sir, I am your guest from now until we reach San Buenaventura. Rather an interesting situation, don't you think?"

John Stuart Webster was of Scotch ancestry. He had a hereditary regard for baubees. He was a business man. Prodigal spender though he was and generous to a fault, the fact remained that he always made it a point to get value received, and he was prodigal with his own money; he preferred that the privilege of prodigality with the Websterian funds should remain an inalienable prerogative of the sole surviving member of the Webster family.

"I think you're too cool, young man," Webster retorted. "Just a trifle too cocksure. Up to the present moment you have proffered no evidence why you should not be adjudged a cad, and I do not like cads and must decline to permit one to occupy the same stateroom at my expense. You are clever and amusing and I laughed at you, but at the same time my sense of humor is not so great as to cause me to overlook your impudence and laugh with you. Now, if you have anything to say, say it quickly, because you're going to go away from here—in a hurry."

"I plead guilty to the indictment, Mr. Webster, and submit as an excuse the fact that desperate circumstances require desperate measures. I am not begging my way, neither am I beating it, for the reason that both forms of travel are repugnant to me. I am merely taking advantage of certain fortuitous circumstances to force you, an entire stranger, to extend to me a credit of fifty dollars until we reach San Buenaventura, when you will be promptly reimbursed."

"It is not my habit," Webster retorted stiffly, "to extend credit to strangers who demand it."

"I do not demand it, sir. I beg it of you, and because I cannot afford to be refused I took care to arrange matters so that you would not be likely to refuse my request. Really, I do not mean to be cocksure and impudent, but before you throw me out I'd like to let you in on a secret about yourself."

"Well?"

"You're not going to throw me out."

"Why not?"

"Because you can't."

"That's fighting talk. Now, just to prove to you the depth of error in which you flounder, young man, I am about to throw you out." And he grasped Andrew Bowers in the grip of a grizzly bear and whisked him out of the top berth.

"Wait one second," his helpless victim cried. "I have something to say before you go any further."

"Say it," Webster ordered. "Your tongue is the only part of you that I cannot control."

"When you throw me out on deck," Andrew Bowers queried, "do your pajamas go with me? Does the hair go with the hide?"

"They cost me sixteen dollars in Salt Lake City, but—good lord, yes. I can't throw you out naked; d—n it, I can't throw you out at all."

"Didn't I tell you so? Be a good fellow and turn me loose."

"Certainly—for the time being. You'll stay locked in this stateroom while I have a talk with the captain. He'll probably dig up a shirt, a pair of dungarees and some old shoes for you and set you ashore before we get out of the river. If he doesn't do that he'll keep you aboard and you'll shovel coal for your passage."

"But I'm Andrew Bowers and the pursuer has collected my first-class ticket!"

"What of it? I shall declare—and with truth—that you are not Andrew Bowers, that you are not my valet, and that I did not buy the ticket for you. I dare you to face the captain in my pajamas and prove you aren't a stowaway."

"You would win on that point," the baffling guest admitted, "but it is a point you will not raise. Why? Because I have another trump up my sleeve. He climbed back into the upper berth and from that vantage point gazed down benevolently upon John Stuart Webster. "I'm disappointed in you," he continued sadly. "I thought you'd show a little normal human curiosity about me—and you haven't. You do not ask questions or I could explain, while I cannot volunteer information without seeming to seek your pity, and that of course would be repugnant to me. I am hoping you will accept my word of honor that you shall be reimbursed two hours after you land in San Buenaventura."

"New music to your song, my friend, but the same old words," Webster retorted, and stepped to the stateroom door. "You're doomed to shovel coal or go ashore."

"Listen. If I go ashore, your responsibility for my life ceases, Mr. Webster, but if the chief engineer happens to be short one coal-passer and the captain sends me down to the stokehole, your responsibility for my death begins, for I'll be put ashore publicly at San Buenaventura and two hours later I'll be facing a firing squad in the cemetery at the Catedral de la Vera Cruz."

"Gosh," John Stuart Webster murmured dazedly, "I'm afraid I can't take a chance like that for fifty dollars. I'm whipped to a frazzle. Any time I'm sitting in back of a royal flush and the other fellow bluffs me out of the pot, I always buy the wine. When it arrives we shall drink to our better acquaintance. Pending its arrival, please be advised that you are welcome to my pajamas, my cigarettes, my book and my stateroom. You are my guest and you owe me nothing, except, perhaps, your confidence, although I do not insist upon that point. Where I come from every man kills his own snakes." And he held up his hand for Andrew Bowers to shake.

"Mr. Webster," the latter declared feelingly, "I am not a lord of language, so I cannot find words to thank you. I agree with you that you are entitled to my confidence. My name is—"

"Put, tut, my boy. Your name is Andrew Bowers, and that identifies you sufficiently for the time being. When I suggested that I was entitled to a measure of your confidence, I meant on a few minor points only—points on which my curiosity has been abnormally aroused."

"Very well, my friend. Fire away."

"Are you an American citizen?"

"No, I am a citizen of Sobrante."

"You had no money to pay for your passage to San Buenaventura so you schemed to make me pay your way. Hence I take it that your presence in the capital of your native country is a matter of extreme importance and that the clerk in the ticket office of the Caribbean Mail line is a friend of yours."

"Quite true. He knew my need."

"You were under surveillance and could not leave New Orleans for San Buenaventura unless you left secretly. When I purchased both berths in this stateroom and the ticket clerk knew I held a first-class ticket for a valet that was not, he decided to saw off on me a valet that was. Disguised in the livery of a chauffeur and carrying hand baggage you hoped to get aboard without being detected by your enemies who watched the gangplank."

Andrew Bowers nodded.

"Do you think you succeeded?" Webster continued.

"I do not know, Mr. Webster. I hope so. If I did not—well, the instant this steamer drops anchor in the roadstead at San Buenaventura, she will be boarded and searched by the military police, I will be discovered and—"

He shrugged.

"Lawn party in the cemetery, eh?" Webster suggested.

Andrew Bowers reached under his pillow and produced two heavy automatic pistols and a leather box containing five clips of cartridges. These he exhibited in silence and then thrust them back under the pillow.

"I see, Andrew. In case you're cornered, eh? Well, I think I would prefer to die fighting myself."

"I'm not worried, Mr. Webster. Somehow, I think I ran the gantlet safely."

"But why did you throw your livery overboard?"

"It was of no further use to me."

"But you'll have to have some clothes in which to go ashore, you amazing man."

"Not at all. The steamer will arrive in the harbor of San Buenaventura late in the afternoon—too late to be given pratique that day. After dark I shall drop overboard and endeavor to swim ashore, and in view of that plain clothes would only prove an embarrassment. I shall land in my own country naked and penniless, but once ashore I shall quickly find shelter. I'll have to risk the sharks, of course."

"Man-eaters?"

"The bay is swarming with them."

"You're breaking my heart," Webster declared sympathetically. "I suppose you're going to feign illness throughout the voyage."

"Not the kind of illness that will interfere with my appetite. I have prescribed for myself a mild attack of inflammatory rheumatism, as an excuse for remaining in bed and having my meals brought to me. This service, of course, will necessitate some slight expense in the way of tips, but I am hoping you will see your way clear to taking care of that for my guest."

Silently Webster handed Andrew Bowers ten dollars in silver. "That ought to hold you," he declared. "For the rest, you're up to some political skulduggery in Sobrante, and what it is and what's your real name are two subjects in which I am not interested. Let it be understood that you are my valet, Andrew Bowers. That's all I know about you and that's all I care to know about you. In fact, the less I know about you the less will I have to explain in the event of your sudden demise."

"Fair enough," quoth Andrew Bowers. "You're a man after my own heart. I thank you."

"That You, Bill?" He Shouted.

quired. From the first day of their acquaintance she had been growing increasingly fond of Geary; for nearly a week she had been desirous of calling him Bill, which is a comfortable name and, to Dolores' way of thinking, a peculiarly appropriate cognomen for such a distinctly American young man. At mention of the beloved word he glanced down at her pleasurably.

"Thank you," he said. "I'm glad you got around to it finally. Those that love me always call me Bill."

"You called me Dolores."

"I move we make it unanimous. I'm a foe to formality."

"Second the motion, Bill. So am I—when I care to be—and in our case your formality is spoiling our comradeship. And now, with reference to the extraordinary Senor Webster—"

"Why, the poor old horse has been down with ptomaine poisoning. They carried him off the train at St. Louis and stood him on his head and pumped him out, and just did manage to cancel his order for a new tombstone. He says he's feeding regularly again and has booked passage on La Estrellita, so we can look for him on the next steamer arriving."

"Oh, the poor fellow!" Dolores murmured—so fervently that Billy was on the point of hurling his heart at her feet on the instant.

The thousand dollars Webster had cabled Billy "for a road-stake" had been dwindling rapidly under the stimulus of one continuous opportunity to spend the same in a quarter where it was calculated to bring the most joy. Mr. Geary was absolutely bogged in the quagmire of his first love affair, but until his mining concession should amply justify an avowal of his passion, an instinctive sense of the eternal fitness of things reminded Billy of the old proverb that a closed mouth catches no flies. And in the meantime (such is the optimism of youth) he decided there was no need for worry, for when a girl calls a fellow Bill, when she tells him he's a scound and doesn't care a whoop for any society except his—caramba! it's great!

A wireless from Webster warned Billy of the former's imminent arrival. Just before sunset Billy and Dolores, riding along the Malecon, sighted a blur of smoke far out to sea—a blur that grew and grew until they could make out the graceful white hull of La Estrellita, before the swift tropic night descended and the lights of the great vessel shimmered across the harbor.

"Too late to clear quarantine tonight," Billy mourned, as he and Dolores rode back to her hotel. "All the same, I'm going to borrow the launch of my good friend Leber and his protegee Don Juan Cafetero, and go out to the steamer tonight. I can leave to a little way from the steamer and welcome the old rascal, anyhow."

Fortunately, good little Leber consented to Billy's request, and Don Juan Cafetero was sober enough to turn the engine over and run the launch. From the deck of the steamer Webster, smoking his post-prandial cigar, caught sight of the launch's red and green sidelights chugging through the inky blackness; as the little craft slid up to within a cable's length of the steamer and—have to, something told Webster that Billy Geary would soon be paging him. He edged over to the rail.

"That you, Bill?" he shouted.

"Hey! Jack, old pal!" Billy's delighted voice answered him.

"I knew you'd come, Billy boy."

"I knew you'd know it, Johnny. Can't come aboard, you know, until the ship clears, but I can lie off here and say hello. How is your internal mechanism?"

"Grand. However, your query reminds me I haven't taken the medicine the doctor warned me to take after meals for a couple of weeks. Wait a minute, Bill, until I go to my stateroom and do my duty to my stomach."

For ten minutes Billy and Don Juan Cafetero bobbed about in the launch; then a stentorian voice shouted from the steamer. "Hey, you! In the launch, there. Not so close. Back off."

Don Juan kicked the launch back fifty feet. "That will do!" the voice called again.

"Hello!" Billy soliloquized. "That's Jack Webster's voice. Wonder what he's up to. I thought he acted strangely—preferring medicine to me the minute I hailed him!"

"Some Girl, Johnny!"

CHAPTER IX.

Prior to leaving New Orleans, Webster had cabled Billy Geary that he was taking passage on La Estrellita and stating the approximate date of his arrival at San Buenaventura—which information descended upon that young man with something of the charm of a gentle rainfall over a hitherto arid district. He had been seeing Dolores Ruy at least once a day ever since her return to Sobrante. He was quick, therefore, to seize upon Webster's cablegram as an excuse to call upon Dolores and explain the mystery surrounding his friend's nonappearance.

"Well, Dolores," he began, in his excitement calling her by her first name for the first time. "I've heard from Jack Webster."

"What's the news, Bill?" Dolores in-

COOK WITH GAS 12 MONTHS OF THE YEAR

Have you considered the comparative costs of cooking with coal and cooking with gas?

The average family can easily do all their cooking with 3,000 cubic feet of gas per month at a cost of $6.21 net. This is much less than the cost of one half of a ton of coal and very few families can do all their cooking with this amount.

In other words, it actually costs less in dollars and cents to cook with gas than with coal, to say nothing of the advantage of gas because of its convenience and because of the labor saved.

Gas is always available any time of day or night. Turn a cock and light the gas and you have the heat you desire. Turn off and all expense is stopped.

The hour used each morning in cleaning out the ashes and kindling the fire and waiting for it to come up is saved if you cook with gas.

The time spent in lugging coal and cleaning up the attendant dirt and dust, of ash and coal is saved if you use gas.

And besides gas is actually cheaper.

Think this over carefully and do not start your coal range this fall.

House With the Green Door

By HELEN WAITE MUNRO

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"To think that it should be sold just as we were getting together enough money to buy it ourselves!" Adele Preston looked ruefully at the little white house with the green door, nestled cozily among the budding trees and shrubbery.

"It is a shame!" her husband responded. "It's been on the market over two years, and we've planned and figured on it until it sure seemed like our own. Mr. Larkin, the real estate man, says a lawyer bought it for a client whose name he would not give—seems to be something mysterious about it."

"Think of some perfectly dreadful family occupying that big living room—I know it's big, though I've never been in it—and somebody else's baby having a sand pile in our back yard!" Adele sighed as they turned to walk the remaining distance to the flat which was their present home.

The days went by, however, and the new owners of the little house did not appear and take possession. The shades remained closely drawn, the grass on the lawn grew to waving heights and the green door remained bafflingly closed. The careful watching of Adele and Ward Preston was in vain until one evening some time later as the two walked slowly homeward past the house after an hour at the movies he was startled by an exclamation of amazement from her.

"Look, Ward!" she cried, grabbing his arm. "Look at the side window, under the shade! There's a light in the house—the people must have moved in."

"Sure, enough!" Ward was evidently puzzled. "That's queer, for I was noticing the place as I came home to supper, and there was not a sign of life about it."

"Ha!—must be," Adele laughed softly. "Or the mystery. We'll watch and see what we'll see."

All was as usual about the house as Ward went back and forth to his work the following day, as also when Adele went in town for shopping in the afternoon. But that night, when the interested couple walked down purposely to see what they could see, the gleam of light was once more visible.

"It's our house," she said. "We've adopted it even if it does belong to someone else. I won't have burglars and thieves and—maybe small-pox patients—desecrating that nice dining room—if it is the dining room. Come, Ward, we'll go very softly, but we'll have a peek under that window-shade if it's the last act of our young lives."

Ward hesitated and looked up and down the street. All was quiet—not a soul in sight. Curiosity is not a trait belonging exclusively to women. Adele was tip-toeing up the walk and he followed her around into the shadow of the syringa bush, then close to the wall until they reached the window where the baffling light was.

A place where light may shine does not necessarily mean an opening large enough to look within, as Ward and Adele soon found. A tiny glimpse of polished window-sill was all that rewarded their efforts.

Not to be discouraged, Adele started on, motioning Ward to follow. Around the corner of the house she led the way to a back window where the flames had evidently used less care. A good two inches of space remained below the drawn shade. Crouching low in the darkness the whole room inside was revealed to the watchers.

Not a burglar, surely, was the well-dressed man inside. Coats, collarless, he was striding excitedly up and down the room. After a moment he seated himself before a table filled with innumerable small wheels and gears and shafts some of which were combined in machine formation, evidently a small part of a large machine close by.

"Crazy!" whispered Adele in Ward's ear. "It's a machine," returned Ward, but the last part of the word was drawn out in an unexpected and explosive sneeze, hissing loudly out in the silence.

In an instant the shade was raised. The lower sash went up before they could turn away and the glaring eyes of the man inside met theirs. Then he went out through the open window.

"March on through the back door or I'll call the police," he said gruffly.

Like two guilty children they stepped through the doorway and into the lighted room. Then surprise and embarrassment on Ward's part turned to astonishment.

"Mr. Wentworth!" he exclaimed. "Young Preston! Head of our drafting room, upon my word!" The older man sat down helplessly.

Then followed hasty explanations on both sides. Adele, listening to the two men, had hard work to grasp the situation. Mr. Wentworth must be the Mr. Wentworth where Ward worked. And this machine was one he was perfecting and would put the firm ahead of its competitors. These competitors, Mr. Wentworth was explaining, were hard after the idea—actually spying to get hold of it. Taking a house secretly seemed to be the only way to keep clear of them—in the shop even some of the regular men might not be loyal—here he stopped and looked sharply at Ward.

But Ward was not paying attention. He was fingering parts of the machine. In the office he had seen to drawing up all the small pieces, but knew nothing of the assembled machine. In a moment the two men had their heads together and were bending intently forward.

Adele slipped quietly away to explore the house that was hers and yet not hers. When she came back, the scene had changed. A motor was busily working and the connected machine was whirring smoothly. Mr. Wentworth was putting on his coat, his face beaming with satisfaction.

"Well, Mrs. Preston," he said, "this 'burglar' business is a lucky thing for me. That husband of yours has managed to dig up the very idea that is the keynote to the whole combination. We will have put it over the other fellow this time all right."

Adele, breathless with excitement, proud of her husband, could think of no word to say. "Now, as I understand it," Mr. Wentworth went on, "you were just ready to buy this house when I got it. Well, I don't see but it has done its work as far as I am concerned. Now, if you still want it, I think I can afford to discount a bit on the price, and the terms will be easy—"

"Oh, Adele found her voice at last. "Oh, do we want it? This 'burglar' business' surely has been a lucky thing all around."

"The only question in my mind," Mr. Wentworth's eyes twinkled, "is which of us is the burglar."

DRAWING BY SENSE OF TOUCH

One of the Greatest of Tests of the Influence of Thought on the Senses.

For one who can draw it is not so difficult to look at an object and depict it on paper. But to draw by the sense of touch instead of the sense of sight is apparently not so easy; it is a good test of the influence of thought on the senses, says the Popular Science Monthly.

In a demonstration of "mental drawing" the artist was blindfolded, instructed to feel certain objects and then to draw them. The result was curious. A wooden toy representing a woodpecker was taken for a model of a piece of machinery, and so drawn after a cursory examination. After a more careful examination by the sense of touch alone, the artist made an almost perfect drawing of the real object. He actually drew the toy woodpecker upside down, and did not know, until he saw it, what it was that he had drawn.

The artist ran his hands lightly over a cloth-covered face, feeling the features. Again the mind tried to jump to conclusions. The artist fancied the concealed face to be that of some one known to himself. After his fingers had thoroughly explored the contour of the face he was able to make a more truthful delineation representing what he had "seen" with his sense of touch.

Dead Willing to Trade.

Jack was delighted with the new baby brother, while mother and baby were in the hospital, but on their arrival home, the small brother received so much attention 'twas different.

One morning Jack was in the yard and along came a neighbor and asked him if he would sell his new brother.

"Well," answered Jack, "depends on what I could get for him." The neighbor told him he would give his bull dog and the dog's new studded harness.

Couldn't Keep Up.

"So your wife has gone back to the old style church and old style doctors?"

"Yes." "Thought she was an enthusiast on all the new movements?" Over fifty years ago a young physician practiced widely in a rural district and became famous for his uniform success in the curing of disease. This was Dr. Pierce, who afterwards established himself in Buffalo, N. Y., and placed one of his prescriptions, which he called "Golden Medical Discovery," in the drug stores of the United States so that the public could easily obtain this very remarkable tonic, corrective and blood-maker. Dr. Pierce manufactured this "Discovery" from roots and barks—a corrective remedy, the ingredients of which nature had put in the fields and forests, for keeping us healthy. Few folks or families now living have not at sometime or other used this "Golden Medical Discovery" for the stomach, liver and heart. Over twenty-four million bottles of this tonic and blood remedy have been sold in this country.

LINDA RETURNS

By JACK LAWTON.

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Linda and Jack had quarreled and after sleepless nights, and days of sulky silence, Linda determined to end the strain by going away for a pretended vacation; whether she came back or not would depend entirely upon Jack's behavior, but this he need not know until she had made her departure. Linda reached this conclusion after a last stormy interview. It was the first quarrel in an ideal married year, and therefore most bitter. Linda had heard so much of designing, vampish women of late, and had trembled before their power, as portrayed by the screen, that she had, as it were, been on the watch for this dreaded intrusion into her own happiness, and it had come.

Jack, the faithful, was actually seen by Linda's dearest friend driving with his new pretty stenographer on a far-away country road. Moreover, the friend stopping later at Willow Inn for tea, had been horrified to find Jack partaking of the same tea, with the girl of his employ.

Gladys hurried home to tell Linda before Jack should return, and when he did return, still early in the evening, he was met with a surprisingly frigid reception by his erstwhile loving wife. Jack could not understand the sudden change, but after a sobbingly confused upbraiding by that formerly gentle creature, he was made aware of his sin and as indignantly denied the accusation. The fact remained that he had driven with Miss Huldah Brown, however, and had unmistakably tea'd with her at Willow Inn; and though Jack pointed out that the trip was a purely business one, that he had been sent for by a valued client, and it was absolutely necessary to have his stenographer with him, Linda's outraged feelings were not appeased.

"If," she inconsistently explained, "the Huldah Brown person were old and ugly, it might appear differently."

Huldah Brown was undeniably neither. Jack indignantly refused to promise her discharge, or even that he be seen no more in public with his stenographer; until that arrangement should be made, the jealous Linda had, so to speak, severed family relations. The young injured husband was doomed in his own home to the life of a stranger—and a disappointed stranger at that. So, at length, Linda resolved to start for the seaside, leaving Jack to the capable ministrations of "Mary," the long-trusted family domestic. The seaside proved this time a dreary place of sojourn. Linda wondered how she ever found it so delightful. Of course, before there had been Jack's long, loving letters, and his weekly visit. What a jolly companion Jack had been, how comforting and protecting. Linda just could not think of her unruly husband without an annoying lump in her throat. Now, his letters were scratches of the pen, and he came not at all at week's end. It was the vampish influence of Huldah Brown which held him, of course, for he would still not give in to the girl's dismissal. Well, neither would Linda give in. She sighed, she wept; then Linda wrote her "scare" letter. She told Jack just what she thought of him, and hinted darkly that she might never return.

Jack did not answer the letter, the last one which came from him had evidently crossed hers in the mail. He stated briefly that Mary had left him to his own resources. He would try to get along as best he could, with the help of the delicatessen. Linda had visions of a white sink filled to overflowing with her fine, soiled china, of rumbled beds far from restful to a city-tired lawyer. She had frightened visions, also, of Peep, the canary, seedless in his golden cage, and Bob, the terrier. Would Jackie remember to feed poor Bob? Mentally, Linda gave to her lonely husband his old pet name—mentally Linda was undergoing a change. Pity, also, was taking the place of anger. But though she waited eagerly, tensely, Jack made no response to her threatening letter. Evidently, if she intended never to return to him, she might remain where she was as far as he was concerned. Then one night she read his advertisement for a maid in the want column of the city paper. The address designated was that of their own apartment. Repentant tears filled Linda's eyes, and it was Jackie's lack of care about which she now was thinking, and not that of Bob's, or the canary. It was with a new and deep crease between his gloomy eyes that Jack settled himself next evening to await the applicants coming in answer to his advertisement. He chose the living room as being least discouraging in its lack of housekeeping attention. And he was wondering as he sat if he could still hold out against Linda's unreasonable demand. His conscience and his pride rebelled against the yielding—yet oh! how he wanted her. The first applicant whose ring had sounded unnoticed came slowly to stand before him. He was sure that he had left no door unfastened, yet here in the twilight stood a small aproned figure—a dainty, beruffled person, with outstretched hand.

"Jack!" came a quick, soft voice, "I have come back to cook for you, to work for you, to try to earn—my pardon."

And after a long and blissful time Linda raised her face from her husband's shoulder.

"Mercy me!" she cried, "I've forgotten all about Bob and the canary!"

LIFE WAS A MISERY TO HER

Says this Woman Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Carrollton, Ky.—"I suffered almost two years with female weakness. I could not walk any distance, ride or take any exercise at all without resting. If I swept the floor or did any kind of work it would bring my sickness on. I was weak and languid, had no energy, and life was a misery to me. I was under the care of a good physician for several months and tried other remedies. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking twelve bottles I found myself much improved and I took six more. I have never had any more trouble in that respect since. I have done all kinds of work and at present am an attendant at a State Hospital and am feeling fine. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to dozens of my friends and shall always recommend it."—LILLIAN THARP, 324 S. 6th St., Carrollton, Ky.

NAVY GRIDIRON STARS OF OTHER YEARS TO HELP COACH FOLWELL

Bob Folwell, Naval Football Coach.

Coach Folwell will have a staff of former Naval academy football players as his assistants this season. It will include Ensigns Perry, Scafe, Whelchel and Butler. Bill Ingram, captain of the 1919 eleven, was invited but could not come. Perry and Scafe were linemen and Whelchel and Butler played behind the line. Lieutenant Commander Richardson, former navy player, will have charge of the second squad, assisted by Johnny Wilson, formerly coach at St. John's.

"When I was a player," said Folwell, "we used to scrimmage on the very eve of a big game. I remember once prior to the game with the Indians we played until after dark. I consider I was capable of standing what the average player could take in the way of pace and training, and I realize that I was overburdened with training. I know I was not worked properly. This is not because of any flaw with the old school of coaches. It was the system, handed down to them from the ages, and they thought it correct. When at W. and J. I beat Yale three times, and because I tuned my men up rather than drilled them until they were tired of football mentally and physically."

BROOKLYN'S GREAT SHOWING

Seven Great Pitchers Are Given Credit for Success of Wilbert Robinson's Team.

The answer to Brooklyn's great showing this year is supplied in the pitching Wilbert Robinson is getting. Jack Coombs thinks it is the greatest combination in the big show today. Jack says:

"Brooklyn pitchers—they're the greatest pitching staff I ever heard of. The manager who has three or four good pitchers can always count himself lucky. But Brooklyn has seven, every one of them a high-grade man capable of working against any club in the circuit. The big seven is composed of Pfeffer, Cadore, Mamaux, Marquard, Smith, Mitchell and Grimes. Any one of them could get a job with any club in the country."

FEW CHANGES IN 1920 CODE

Gridiron Rules Undergo Slight Alterations for This Season—Brief Summary Given.

The principal changes in the 1920 football rules may be summarized as follows: Clipping is forbidden, whether or not the ball is dead, if done to a man obviously out of the play; roughing the forward passer is considered unnecessary roughness if committed after pass has been made; the punt-out is abolished, and the side making touchdown in any part of field may bring ball out straight in front of goal for the try at goal; both referee and linesman are charged with duty of watching man in motion before ball is put into play, and player making a shift must have both feet stationary after he has come to his position; substitution of player will be completed when he has reported to proper official and change has been made; time on incomplete forward pass will be taken out until play starts again; in case of purposely false starting signal, referee may demand that play be made over again.

ONLY A SCRATCH HIT

Walter Morris, president of two Texas leagues, tells this story of a game in the West Texas league:

The winning runs were on the bases when Manager Jim Gallogway of Ranger came to bat in the ninth. Manager Pop Boy Smith of the opposing team ordered the pitcher to walk Gallogway, a mighty hitter. The pitcher shot a fast one in the groove, just shoulder high! Wham! and the ball disappeared over center field fence into a corn patch.

"Whaddye mean pitchin' to that guy?" yelled Smith.

"That was a scratch hit," calmly answered the pitcher.

"Scratch? Scratch me eye! Whaddye mean a scratch hit?" demanded Smith, who was on the verge of apoplexy.

"I mean it was a scratch," repeated the pitcher firmly. "That guy only scratched up two rows of corn in that patch."

FINN ATHLETES ARE COMING

Johnny Saarieto Expected to Give Yankee Javelin Throwers Some Good Information.

Some of Finland's great athletes who performed so well in the Olympic games are to pay a visit to America. Johnny Saarieto, who finished fourth in the javelin throw, will be the first to come to America, according to private information reaching this country. He is going to study here, and will give Yankee javelin tossers some needed help in this department of the Olympic games, where they are woefully deficient.

America's entries in the javelin throw did not profit much by their competition, as they found that no two foreign throwers use the same style in hurling. Jonni Myrta, best of the quartette of Finlanders, carries the javelin above his shoulders during the run, but drops his arm below the hip about 20 feet before the takeoff board is reached, and then whips it off like a baseball player.

On his record throw of 215 feet 7 inches the end of the javelin dragged on the ground just before he started his delivery. He brings it above his head with a snap, the arm fully extended, and then it is whipped back over the head and the javelin is let fly without losing any motion.

He is a graduate of Syracuse university and former student at Pennsylvania State college.

PITCHERS LIKE MAYS ARE NEVER RELIABLE

Case of Jack Chesbro Cited to Excuse Yankee Hurier.

Some American League Players Assert New York Twirler "Beated" Chapman Intentionally—First Fatal Accident.

There is a controversy on in the major leagues as to the exact position Mays holds in connection with the death of Ray Chapman.

Some of the players claim that Mays "beated" Chapman intentionally and that he should be barred from the major leagues forever in consequence of his act.

There have been more than fifty years of professional baseball, and in all that time there has been but this one fatal accident.

Time and again major league batsmen have been hit on the head with a pitched ball, but with no after effects, and time and again players have been injured by the pitcher.

But with all these accidents, in the fifty years there has been but this one fatal occurrence.

For my part, I put the sad incident in the accident column and will let it go at that. I can go even further than that and cite an instance to prove that a spitballer or an underhanded pitcher has never complete control of the ball, writes Al Spink in Chicago Post.

In the year 1904 Jack Chesbro, then called the "Iron Man," was about the only out-and-out spitball pitcher in the major leagues. He had a delivery more like that of Mays than any other pitcher I have ever seen.

In the year named the New York Yankees and the Boston were the runners-up in the American league. That year Chesbro had reached the zenith of his fame. He had pitched 53 games for the Yankees and won 41 of them, the best major league record up to that time for two decades.

In the fall of 1904 Chesbro was selected to pitch for the Yankees in a game that was to decide the championship of the American league. In the ninth inning of that game he was called on for a supreme effort in the pitching line, but instead of responding, he made a wild pitch, the ball sailing over the batsman's head, giving the pennant to Boston.

Chesbro said afterward that the ball had simply got away from him and that the wild pitch was an accident pure and simple.

Chesbro at this particular time was considered one of the speediest of pitchers and was a master in control of the ball.

PLAYER MAKES TRIPLE PLAY

Walter Keating of Buffalo Ends Game With Akron Abruptly by Sensational Catch Fly.

In the ninth inning of the game between Buffalo and Akron International League teams on August 31 Walter Keating, the Buffalo captain and shortstop, made a triple play unassisted, which ended the struggle abruptly after the Akron team had started a slugging rally which threatened to land it in front. Two runs were in when both Shields and Walsh singled. Shortstop Webb drove a liner that appeared to be going safely and it set the base runners skipping homeward. But Keating made a great catch for the first out. Shields was well on his way to third and Keating had but to run over and touch second. Walsh could not pull up and he was tagged two feet from second. The play was made so quickly that the fans did not realize the game was over until the players left the field. Buffalo won 7 to 4.

WHERE TOMMY MADE A POINT

Remarkable That School Teacher Had Never Noticed That Quite Simple Truth Before.

Arithmetic, according to the average small boy, was simply invented in order to give teachers a good excuse for punishing their unhappy pupils. And certainly little Tommy Smith found it the unpleasant feature of his young life.

"Now, Tommy Smith," said the school teacher one morning, during the usual hour of torture, "what is the half of eight?"

"Which way, teacher?" asked the youngster cautiously.

"Which way!" replied the astonished lady. "What do you mean?"

"Well, on top or sideways, teacher?" said Tommy.

"What difference does that make?"

"Why," Tommy explained, with a plying air, "half off the top of eight is nought, but half of it sideways is three."—London Answers.

COUNTRY'S FIRST CORN MILL

Recent Discoveries Establish Its Site at a Point on the St. Croix River, Eastport Me.

The site of what undoubtedly was the first tidewater mill on the American continent has been discovered at Red Beach, Me., where Low's brook empties into the St. Croix river at a point nearly opposite the southern end of Dochet's island, where De Monts and his men settled in the year 1604, three years before the settlement of Jamestown. In excavating for a fish pond near his summer home, R. S. McCarter of Cambridge, Mass., unearthed the unmistakable remains of an ancient dam of stone and timbers. Comparing the site with the original map of the island, authorities agreed that it must have been the site of the water mill mentioned in the old records as employed by Sieur De Monts and his men to grind their corn, being the largest stream within an area of several miles on either side of the river.

Not Quite. "So they had smuggled whisky on that yachting party. This is going the limit."

"Oh, no; that is three miles out."

Thin. Smith—"They are making some fine hosiery these days." Jones—"Sheer enough, sheer enough!"—Cartoons Magazine.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a blue traveling suit of georgette, hat to match. Miss Hazel Newton was maid of honor, while Mr. Starrett's best man was Edgar Cefall of Dorchester, his "buddy" during his long service overseas with Battery D, 65th Artillery.
The ceremony was followed by a wedding reception, after which Mr. and Mrs. Starrett left for a wedding trip by automobile along Cape Cod. Upon their return they are to live at 134 Pleasant street, South Weymouth, where they will be at home after Oct. 24.

POPULAR BEVERAGES
Many in Weymouth have enjoyed the beverages of the General Seltzer Manufacturing Co. Their new plant on Independence avenue, Quincy, is attractive in design and Mr. Julius is planning to beautify the grounds, so that it will be a credit to the community.
The interior is model of cleanliness, and the machinery thoroughly modern. To commence the manufacture of these high-grade tonics we start with the electric water sterilizer, an ingenious device, the only one in this vicinity, which electrically removes all animal and vegetable matter from the water, leaving only its mineral properties. This wonderful machine produces 50 gallons an hour of pure sterilized water, clear as crystal.
The syrups are produced in a room especially arranged for the purpose, on the second floor. This most important branch of the bottling business is under the personal supervision of Mr. Julius, using pure cane sugar and the best of fruit juices.
Those who have tried his Gingerale, Orangeade, Lemon and Lime, Birch Beer and many other flavors, to which Mr. Julius owes his great success, can testify for their excellence.

Monday Club Solid For Harding and Coolidge

On Monday members of the Old Colony Club came to East Weymouth as guests of the Monday club, and Masonic hall was filled with Weymouth women.

The president, Mrs. Jewell, in welcoming the guests gave a quotation which perfectly fitted the occasion. It was headed: "A Truth, getting together, beginning; keeping together, progress; working together, success." How old Weymouth town would renew its youth if the motto were strictly followed.

A straw vote was taken and showed the women had decided for whom they would vote at the coming election. The result was: Harding and Coolidge 136, Cox and Roosevelt 5, Dobs and Steadman 2, blanks 9; total 152.

Mrs. Worster gave a good description of her trip to the "biennial" at Des Moines, Iowa, and proved that though women may be voting for a National President for the first time this year they are no novices in the political game of club politics.

Mrs. Kate Pierce Thayer told interestingly of old-time methods of lighting, and showed candle-sticks, candle-molds for making candles; also an old whale oil lamp. She voiced her own wishes, and that of many others, that Weymouth might have a Museum, where the relics of former times might be cared for and shown.

Mrs. McGill explained plans for giving women a further knowledge of their share in civic affairs; particulars will be given later.

Then came the music by the Concord Male Quartette, assisted by Miss Benson, soprano. They entertained with varying selections to suit all tastes and added greatly to the pleasure of the afternoon.

After the entertainment all were invited to inspect the quaint old articles on exhibition, and certainly they were worth the time, for they ranged from cashmere shawls and carpet bags, samplers and candle sticks, to dishes of various makes, and jewelry of odd design, all well arranged for display by the Arts and Crafts committee.

The social hour still kept to the time of long ago, as tea and doughnuts, apples and other goodies were served on pewter platters by dames in Colonial costumes with powdered hair, ringlets and patches. The tables were lighted by candles and each presided over by a member in a dress of far back grandmother's day. The blending of old and new made an odd picture and left a pleasant memory.

Good times are still coming for there is to be a whist party at Mrs. C. D. Harlow's on Oct. 29, and Mrs. Harlow of Weymouth, Mrs. Stiles of North Weymouth, Mrs. Alden and Mrs. J. Herbert Libby have the tickets for the affair. Then comes the annual "Guest Night" with an interesting entertainment and a dance, and these members mentioned above will have tickets for this also, as will Mrs. Harry Doe of Hingham, and Mrs. William B. Dasha of North Weymouth.

REGISTER EARLY

Registration for the Presidential and State election will close in Weymouth tomorrow promptly at 10 P. M. Those in the t that hour will be too late to register, as the law says registration must close at 10 P. M.

But two opportunities are offered to register, tonight in Precinct 6, and tomorrow between the hours of 12 M. and 10 P. M. at the Town Offices in the Savings Bank building.

At the Weymouth precinct last Friday 16 men and 91 women were qualified. At Lowell's Corner Oct. 18, there were added 11 men and 64 women. At South Weymouth on Tuesday 37 men and 73 women were registered, and at the special session in South Weymouth Wednesday afternoon 8 men and 69 women.

Since the lists were printed 1000 names have been added, of whom 800 are women.

BOY SCOUTS FIELD DAY

Troop 6 of Weymouth took first prize in the First Aid event at the field day of Old Colony Council at Cohasset on Saturday.

In the titling contest, the Morse signaling and the mob race the Weymouth troop took second place.

Troop 1 of Hingham took six firsts, and Troop 1 of Cohasset three firsts.

MASONIC VISITATION

Henry D. Higgins of Braintree, D. D. G. M. of the 26th Masonic district, made visitations this week to Rural lodge of Quincy and Norfolk Union of Randolph. On his suite were Henry F. Tilden, J. Leonard Bicknell and George F. Farrar of Weymouth. Other members of the local lodge were in attendance.

MAY USE QUINCY TICKETS

Through the well directed efforts of M. J. Kennedy of Joyce Bros Co., who is a member of the Home Rule Committee of Quincy, the use of the 12-ride for $1 tickets of Quincy will be extended to Thomas' Corner, North Weymouth.

The new change will mean considerable to a large number of Fore River workmen who have been compelled to pay a 10-cent fare from Thomas' Corner to the shipyard, and also many people riding from the Weymouths to Quincy Square. Commencing Monday, Oct. 25, the 12-ride for $1 tickets now in use in Quincy may be used as far as Thomas' Corner. The cash fare will remain the same, 10 cents. The 12-ride tickets may also be used with a 14-ride ticket going from Quincy Square to East Weymouth. That is a person getting on at Quincy Square and going to East Weymouth may use a 12-ride for $1 ticket to Thomas' Corner and a 14-ride ticket from that point to East Weymouth.

PASTOR RESIGNS

Rev. Edward J. Yaeger, pastor of the First Church of Weymouth Heights since 1905, has resigned to take effect Dec. 13. But one other Protestant pastor, Rev. William Hyde, has a longer pastorate in Weymouth. Rev. Mr. Yaeger will become a supply preacher.

SCHOOLS CLOSED

Because of the Norfolk County Teachers Convention in Boston today, the school children are having a holiday.

The home paper deserves well of the Weymouth people.—ADVERTISE.

Representative Town Government for Weymouth

Voters of Weymouth, men and women, are soon to act on a petition for "Representative Town Meetings, similar to that in Watertown and Brookline, and soon to be adopted in Winthrop. Also on a petition for a city form of government.

The Selectmen of Weymouth at their regular meeting this week received two petitions, one of which was signed by 58 citizens representing every ward in town which reads as follows:

Weymouth, Mass., Oct. 15, 1920
Petition to the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Weymouth.

Article:—To see if the town will vote to instruct the Selectmen of the town to petition the General Court for the enactment of legislation which shall provide for representative town meetings, town meeting members, a referendum and an annual moderator in the town of Weymouth, together with such change or changes in the voting precincts as may be necessary, or to take any other action in relation to the preservation of the essential principles of town government in the Town of Weymouth, or will take any other action in relation thereto.

The other petition for a city form of government reads as follows:

The following article is to be in the young men scrubbed the floor, town meeting:

To see if the town will vote to petition the Legislature for a city charter.

Signed by Arthur C. Gertsley and 9 others.

The Selectmen acted promptly on the petitions and voted to call a special town meeting in November at the Odd Fellows Opera House, East Weymouth.

The Gazette and Transcript has interviewed F. W. Howe, who circulated the first petition. He says the movement is not confined to any part of the town, as he secured signatures in every ward of Weymouth. Many more signatures, he says, could have been obtained if needed. All who did sign seemed to be unanimous that the time had come for a change from our present form of town meetings, where a majority cannot participate. With some 5000 enrolled voters it would be impossible to meet in one body, unless it was out of doors at a place like the Weymouth Fairgrounds.

The only alternative is the other petition for a city form of government. The petition does not state what plan of a city charter is wanted. Many think Weymouth does not want any form of city government, because of the expense.

Some months ago a committee of the town reported on different forms of government for large towns like Weymouth, with a population of over 15,000. Since then over 1500 women have been added to the list of voters, which makes a change more imperative. The Gazette will soon reprint some of the town government reports, together with additional information relative to the government of Brookline and Watertown.

Only this week the town government body of Brookline refused to amend its charter, to give women representation, but it would seem that such action was unconstitutional. No longer can women be kept out.

"The Forbidden Woman"

BY THE MATINEE GIRL.—Much has been said on the subject of the psychology of dress on the screen and the part clothes play in the indication of character, but to my mind, Clara Kimball Young, in "The Forbidden Woman," enjoys the distinction of being the best dressed woman on the American stage or screen. I base this claim on supremacy upon magnitude of attire and materials, effective and unusual design, picture-queeness and actual valuation—for, whisper it to you, girls, I happen to know that Miss Young's wardrobe for "The Forbidden Woman" alone, cost upwards of $21,000. The role of Diane Sord, the charming young French actress, which Miss Young enacts, calls for sixteen different costumes, and the wardrobe which Miss Young has furnished for this picture includes a full length sable coat, nine evening dresses, four afternoon frocks, two dinner gowns, enough lingerie to last the average woman a lifetime, with shoes, stockings, gloves, jewelry, hats, fans and such accessories galore. They come very high, girls, but it certainly pays.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Campaign of Assassination Is Making the Irish Problem More Difficult.

ASQUITH ASSAILS PREMIER

Large Part of the Island Faces Blockade — Poles and Russians Sign "Peace Without Victory"—American Agricultural Producers Object to Lower Prices.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

The Irish problem, instead of approaching a solution, seems to have taken a new lease of troubled life, and the woes of the Emerald Isle are increasing instead of diminishing. This deplorable fact is due directly to the campaign of murder, arson and intimidation that is being carried on by what Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, calls the inner circle of assassins. The daily and nightly assaults on the police and other officials of the British government provoke the latter to bloody reprisals which are to a considerable extent condoned and excused by the government. Premier Lloyd George made a speech at Carnarvon which was interpreted by his opponents as a justification of the reprisals. He said that 238 policemen had been shot, of whom 109 had been shot dead, and the patience of the police had given way, with the result that they hit back. Lloyd George declared that if, as was contended, there was war in Ireland, then the war must be waged on both sides. But when policemen were shot in the back by Sinn Feiners the premier said, it was not war but murder. He asked whether, under the system of terrorism which made it impossible to obtain evidence, it was any wonder the police shot the murderers.

Herbert H. Asquith, former premier, who sees a chance to return to power, declared Lloyd George's speech was a "condonation of the hellish policy of reprisals," and another part of it he construed as "repudiation, root and branch, of dominion home rule." He is rallying all anti-government forces for a fight, as soon as parliament opens, over British government in Ireland. Before that time the delegation from the Irish peace conference is to be received by the premier, and it is believed he will then make a new offer to Ireland. Meanwhile the government, says Sir Hamar Greenwood, is determined to crush the campaign of assassination, and if necessary will increase the police force in the island to many thousands.

One threatened result of the campaign of assassination is the virtual blockade of a large part of Ireland through a withdrawal of the mail and telegraph service and the entire closing down of Irish railways. This would mean widespread distress and heavy loss to farmers and traders. Whenever parties of troops present themselves for conveyance the rail workers refuse to operate the trains, and the railway directors now have agreed on the instant dismissal of these men. The carrying out of this policy probably will result in the cessation of railway traffic within a month.

The British secret service believes it has proof that the Irish "republic" is being aided, financially and by the distribution of arms and the organization of an espionage system, by the Red organization headed by Victor Kopp, soviet envoy in Berlin. Kopp handles funds from Russia and organizes propaganda through newspapers and agents, and the secret service says it has established the connection of this intrigue with revolutionary movements in Ireland and other parts of the British empire. A dispatch from Paris says Sinn Fein agents have been trying to purchase submarines from Italy and France, but were told that Great Britain would consider the selling of submarines to them an act of war.

The signing of a peace treaty and armistice by the Polish and soviet Russian delegates at Riga, reported a little prematurely last week, took place on October 12. The armistice was to become effective at midnight October 18. Joffe, head of the soviet delegation, described the peace as "a peace without victory and without vanquished," and disinterested observers at Riga agreed that that described it. Hence it was predicted that the pact would not be very pleasing to either the Poles or the Russians.

A peculiar complication in the affairs of that part of Europe arose through the seizure of Vilna, the capital of Lithuania, by troops under the command of General Zeligowski, who resigned from the Polish army before the occupation. His force is made up of both Poles and Lithuanians. He established a council of six in the city, and that body is planning a provisional government for central Lithuania pending the question of the self-determination of the inhabitants of that district. The Polish government disavowed the occupation of Vilna by Zeligowski, the Lithuanians were said to be mobilizing for the recapture of the city, and it was reported that representatives of the League of Nations might be asked to straighten out the situation.

As has been said before, the Russian soviet government is now free to devote all its strength to the crushing of Baron Wrangel in south Russia. But the baron is wasting no time, and late dispatches from Constantinople say his Dnieper river campaign is making excellent progress. He had just captured two Bolshevik battalions, occupied two important towns and destroyed a large munitions plant. The report that Makno, the guerrilla leader, had deserted Wrangel is confirmed, but several of his bands have been routed. Semenov, the Siberian anti-Bolshevik leader, has given his adherence to Wrangel and asked orders from him.

Every day brings its batch of reports of mutinies and revolts against the soviet rule, and in London it was believed the downfall of the Lenin and Trotsky regime was near. Serious fighting was said to be taking place in Moscow, the troops storming barricades in the streets. Bolshevik efforts elsewhere were collapsing. The Armenian and Georgian armies were preparing to unite to defend the two republics against the Bolshevik Turks, Tartars and Azerbeidjanians. France and Turkey have made an agreement by which the French will police Adana, Tarsus and Mersone for the protection of Armenia.

Earl Curzon, British foreign secretary has told the Russian Bolshevik foreign minister that the British naval forces have been ordered to attack on sight any Russian submarines encountered on the high seas—this because leading members of the soviet have declared that government considers itself in a state of war with Great Britain.

The various factions of the Italian Socialist party, assembled in convention, have been having a struggle for control. The moderates appear to have the whip hand and have refused to let the party commit itself in favor of soviet rule for Italy. The conference voted solidarity with Russia but the majority stood fast against the Communists and made it plain they wanted no repetition in Italy of what has happened to Russia. Their leaders declared the Russian difficulties came from the rottenness of the present regime and that the Bolshevik government would be unable to transport products to other countries even after the blockade is lifted. Later in the week Socialist leaders and those of the General Confederation of Labor published a joint manifesto ordering demonstrations in every town in Italy to force the government to recognize soviet Russia. They said a general strike of rail workers had been arranged.

England's labor anxieties were centered on the action of the coal miners whose delegates, after rejecting the wage proposals of the mine owners, decided that notice of a strike, given some time ago, should expire on Saturday. This was taken to mean that the strike would go into effect on Monday. The operators offered a wage increase of one shilling a day to start with and later two shillings, the miners to guarantee a certain minimum of production. The men had a suspicion that they were to be tricked into doing more work, and rejected the offer by a vote of about five to one.

The miners' strike, it was admitted, would throw hundreds of thousands of workers in other industries out of employment and bring about a serious crisis in the country's economic life. The iron and steel manufacturers in the Yorkshire districts at once began preparations to shut down their plants. The government for weeks has been getting ready to handle the situation. There was a chance that the other members of the triple alliance—the railway men and transport workers—would be able to set up machinery for mediation and at least delay the strike.

King Alexander of Greece, who was bitten by a monkey some two weeks ago, has been near death from blood poisoning, and at this writing is not out of danger. A noted French specialist was hurried to Athens and expressed the opinion that the king's case was of the most critical sort but not hopeless.

That the price reduction movement which appeared to be really started recently would not please everyone was a certainty. The trend "back toward normal" made a hit with the consumer, but not with the producer. Now the latter is protesting vigorously, the lead being taken by the growers of wheat, cotton and tobacco and the live stock men. The wheat men want $3 a bushel and the cotton men 40 cents a pound. Leading agricultural producers met in Washington, voiced their griefs, talked of a farmers' strike and adopted resolutions severely criticizing government financial authorities and calling on them for aid in bringing about higher prices. Senator E. D. Smith of South Carolina urged that the farmers curtail production and withhold their crops from the market until prices were satisfactory. For this he was criticized by Benjamin C. Marsh, secretary of the Farmers' National council, who said:

"We must guard against some of the wild statements made here. There is no panic. Let's get away from Bolshevik statements. "I was astounded when Senator Smith suggested that the farmers strike, for that's what it amounts to. If I am not mistaken, he voted for the bill to make strikes by labor a felony. When senators get up and say they don't understand the federal reserve act, I think it is time we should get a few farmers in the senate. The farmers are not going to stop producing, but the farmers can call the bluff of the federal reserve board."

Dr. W. J. Spillman, former chief of the board of farm management of the Department of Agriculture, said: "It is quite clear that the federal reserve board and the secretary of the treasury are using the authority placed in their hands for the purpose of manipulating the market." Next day W. P. G. Harding, governor of the federal reserve board, conferred with the producers and undertook to pacify them. He urged them to keep cool, and expressed the belief there will be a reaction from present low prices. He told them he favored putting their crops on the market gradually. He warned against any attempt to withhold commodities, and pointed to the recent financial panic in Japan and the present Cuban sugar situation as examples of what might follow efforts to boost prices to artificial heights.

Through Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Democratic speakers' bureau, Governor Cox has challenged Senator Harding to a joint debate on the issue of the League of Nations at any time and place convenient to Mr. Harding and the Republican campaign management. The Democratic managers pointed out that both candidates would be in Ohio during the closing weeks of the campaign, and thought the debate might be easily arranged.

The Earth's Crust.

Interesting facts concerning the earth's crust were disclosed by Col. Sir Sidney Burrard recently. "Isotasy" is the particular science which deals with the structure of the earth, and Sir Sidney told how all mountains and heights standing above the sea level are compensated by deficiencies of matter underlying them below sea level, and that all oceans and surface hollows dipping below sea level are compensated by excesses of matter underlying them in the crust.

Condition to Avoid.

The dangerous moment in life comes when men begin to over-value the past at the expense of the present. It is the moment of religious controversies, for ancestor worship, for narrowing in, for exalting one set of people and excluding another. When we reach it, it means that we are growing old. But we need never reach it.—Exchange.

They Guessed It.

When the band played "How Dry I Am" at the league ball park at Portland, Ore., three Japanese fans stood in their box with hats raised, thinking it the national anthem.

Indians Cling to Primitive Life

Members of the famed Passamaquoddy tribe of Indians have made their home for 155 years at the small reservation, five miles from Eastport, Me., and on the banks of the Frontier river, St. Croix, where there is excellent fishing at all times. This photograph shows an ancient tepee used when the French explorer, Steure De Mont, made a landing on a small island about twelve miles above the reservation. The modern Indians live in the wigwams only during the summer, as they have wooden houses in their villages.

Improved Treatment of Rubber.

By curing on a rounded mandrel, a new pliable rubber mat is given an imperceptible curl that causes it to cling closely to bathroom floors and similar surfaces. Fine corrugations impart a feeling of softness. As the surface can be scrubbed and thoroughly cleansed, the mat is recommended for its sanitary quality, as well as for attractive dark colors that adapt it for carpet protection in front of doors, dressers and the like.

baking so famous throughout New England.

This same authority went on to say that the old-time "baking day" is not nearly so great an institution as formerly. In those days a woman spent a greater part of her time in the kitchen. She was not only a cook, but she was also a baker. The melting goodness of the duties which play so important a part in the life of the modern woman.

Nowadays, however, and thanks to a nation-wide plan of selling over fresh products of all kinds, the woman of today is not so busy with her bread-making as she once was.

When a delicious aid to a dessert is sought, the woman of to-day turns to Nabisco, Anola, Lotus, or the dainty sugar wafers of the National Biscuit Company. The melting goodness of the butter strips and the cooling, ripening layers of these fragile delights, form a combination that is simply irresistible.

Dr. again, when the need is for soda crackers, how readily the mind turns to the perfect soda cracker—the national favorite—the National Biscuit Company's Special.

PICKLES ARE WELL WORTH TIME SPENT IN THE MAKING OF THEM

Dill Pickles are an Old-Fashioned Favorite.

Pickles possess little food value but they add zest and variety to a meal. They are the jazz element in the culinary world and as such are well worth the time and money the housekeeper expends in the making of them. Now is the time to lay up a supply for the winter, and below are given some pickle recipes recommended by household specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

Dill Pickles are made from fresh or salted cucumbers (the former are better, but the latter have better qualities). Employ pickled dill seed or herb and "dill spice," composed of dillseed, black pepper, coriander seed and bay leaves, in addition to the brine.

Gives Acid Test.

Soak 100 cucumbers in a 30-degree brine (about 15 ounces of salt to 6 quarts of water) until the brine will give an acid test, i. e., turns red when tested with litmus paper (which may be bought at a drug store). Drain and arrange in layers in a crock, putting in a layer of cherry or grape leaves first, then the cucumbers, then a few cloves, the dill, a few small pieces of red pepper, and then the leaves. Continue until the crock is full. Cover with the brine which was drained off and to which has been added one-half cupful of mustard seed, one-half cupful of horseradish and one-half cupful of salt. Cover with a light weight and seal airtight with paraffin for winter use.

Tomato Relish.

Scald and skin 15 ripe tomatoes. Pare, core and cut into small pieces six sour apples. Peel five medium-sized onions. Chop all of these very fine, using a food chopper if you have one. Put into a large saucepan with: 3 level teaspoonfuls of black pepper, 1-3 teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, one level teaspoon- 1/4 pint of vinegar.

Another Use for Tomatoes.

Use ripe tomatoes. Cut in half, cook thoroughly, strain through colander or sieve. To one gallon of this strained pulp add two tablespoonfuls of salt, one of pepper, three of sugar, one of powdered mustard, two pods of red pepper, sliced and with seeds removed; and a small muslin bag containing one tablespoonful of whole allspice, one of bits of cinnamon bark, one of peppercorns and one of whole cloves. Boil rapidly for about two hours or until thick; then add two cupfuls of vinegar, boil again if necessary to thicken further, after taking out the spice bags. Pour into scalded bottles and seal while hot with new corks. Chopped white onions may be added to the tomato pulp.

The AMERICAN LEGION

KOSCIUSKO POST, THE STRANGEST AND MOST ADVENTUROUS

Born in a box-car on the way to the battlefields of Poland last fall, and with its membership today sadly depleted by casualties, Kosciusko post of the American Legion, formed out of the American aviators who compose the famous Kosciusko squadron, is regarded as the strangest and most adventurous of the 9,600 units of the veterans' organization.

In the fighting about Warsaw when the fate of the Polish capital hung in doubt the Legionnaires of the Kosciusko squadron were battling night and day against the advancing waves of the bolsheviks. When the tide of battle turned and the reds retreated the machine gun fire from the planes of the Americans went far to turn their retreat into a rout.

The men of Kosciusko post are hardened veterans. A year ago they signed up for service with the Polish army after they had flown battle planes in many engagements against the Germans in the World war. Sent out on active service shortly after their squadron was formed these adventurers fought on every front in Poland and many times were cited for their daring in action.

The charter members of Kosciusko post were: Capt. Merlan C. Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla., who has been reported missing; Capt. A. H. Kelly, Richmond, Va.; Capt. Edward Corsi, Brooklyn; Lieut. G. M. Crawford, Wilmington, Del.; Lieut. Kenneth O. Shrewsbury, Charleston, W. Va.; Lieut. Carl Clark, Tulsa, Okla.; Lieut. Edwin Noble, Boston, Mass.; Lieut. E. W. Chess, El Paso, Tex., and Lieut. E. P. Graves, Boston, Mass., who has been killed. The squadron was formed under the command of Maj. C. E. Fautleroy of Chicago. Joe Stehlin of Sheepshead Bay, L. I., who served two years with the French aviation service and won many decorations, joined the Kosciusko squadron as a captain after the post had been organized.

"Tell 'em, if folks ever get discontented with things back home, they ought to have a look at central Europe," was the message that came from Captain Cooper when the post was formed, "and then thank God for America and put their backs into the fight to keep America sane."

HONOR TO CENTRALIA DEAD

National Commander and Party Visit Graves of Legion Men Killed During City Parade.

The head of the American Legion journeyed all the way to Centralia, Wash., to pay homage at the graves of the four men who were slain by members of the I. W. W. last Armistice day. Two hundred Legion men and women accompanied Franklin D'Oller, their national commander, on his visit to the scene of the tragedy, and stood with bowed heads in Mountain View cemetery as he pledged the Legion to everlasting reverence to the memory of its martyred members.

There was nothing of rancor in D'Oller's reference to the men who killed the peaceful paraders. But the speech served warning, as hundreds of other incidents of Legion history of the last year have served warning, that the Legion is a wall of steel against all advocates of violence, whether they dub themselves "wobblies" or parlor bolsheviks.

"I come here as to the shrine of the American Legion," said D'Oller, standing at the foot of the grave of Warren Grimm, killed at the head of the Armistice day parade. "Centralia will mean to the Legion what Bunker Hill, Gettysburg and Chateau Thierry mean to the nation. At these places, the spirit of America met the enemy and triumphed. Here, in Centralia, the spirit of the American Legion likewise met the enemy of our country and triumphed."

As representative of the nearly two million members of the Legion, D'Oller laid a wreath of flowers on Grimm's grave. In the crowd were Grimm's old friends in Centralia and friends of Dale Hubbard, Ben Casagrande and Arthur McElfresh, who also were slain. "It is fitting that here today we should renew our pledge of patriotism and devotion to law and order and serve notice on the forces of anarchy that more than four million ex-service men, who fought and defeated the foe without, are now sworn to fight to the death 'the foe within, who would work injury to our sacred institutions. Our inspiration shall be our martyrs and the restraint shown by their outraged comrades. By dedicating ourselves to the defense of our flag and all that it means, a defense based on fairness and justice, we shall prove that our comrades in France and Centralia have not died in vain," the commander concluded.

Aid From Stage Players.

The helpful camaraderie of the theatrical profession was strikingly emphasized at the "frolic" for the former service men of Anderson county, S. C., staged under the auspices of W. A. Hudgens post of Anderson and attended by more than 900 ex-soldiers, sailors and marines. A professional road company, which had just closed its engagement at a local theater, volunteered to put on a vaudeville skit which met with hearty approval.

SINGER IS LEGION BOOSTER

Nina Morgana, Prima Donna, Enthusiastic in Interests of Former Service Men's Organization.

Nina Morgana, prima donna of the Chicago and Metropolitan Opera companies is as enthusiastic a booster for the American Legion as can be found in the ranks of operatic stars.

"What I want to do first of all is to stand out there on the platform with an American flag in my hand and lead in three rousing cheers for the American Legion and then three cheers more," she announced just before she sang in the Tacoma stadium. Forty thousand persons heard Miss Morgana sing under the auspices of Edward B. Rhodes post of Tacoma, Wash. The celebration at which she appeared brought $5,000 to the treasury of the post.

LEGION-UNIONS IN HARMONY

Former Service Men Organizations and Labor Men Working Together in Various Sections.

The American Legion and the labor unions have joined hands in Anaconda, Mont., for the mutual benefit of both organizations. As a matter of fact, several union locals in that section of the country are virtually Legion posts in themselves, since a majority of the members also are members of the Legion.

In Anaconda the Legion and the unions are collaborating in their benefit entertainments and splitting the spoils. Money has been contributed from the union war chest to the Legion general fund, which now shows an impressive balance of $17,900.

In New York, Texas and Pennsylvania and other quarters the Legion and the unions also are getting together for their mutual financial profit.

USE BEANS AND PEAS FOR NEEDED PROTEIN

Less Milk, Meat and Eggs Are Required.

Combinations of Foods Which Supply as Much of Essential Substance as One-Fourth Pound of Beef of Average Composition.

Beans and peas contain more protein than other fresh vegetables. This protein, however, is not the same as the proteins of meat, milk, or egg, food specialists of the United States department of agriculture say, and should not be used to the exclusion of the others. When, however, beans and peas are freely used, less milk, meat and eggs are needed. The following foods or combinations of foods supply as much protein as one-fourth pound of beef of average composition:

Eight or nine ounces of shelled green peas or beans. A large dish of green peas may be used in place of meat for dinner occasionally. Many persons like peas cooked with mint or served with mint sauce.

One egg and four or five ounces of shelled green peas or beans. An omelet with peas (one egg and one cupful peas per person) or a baked pea or bean soufflé may be used as a meat substitute.

One cupful skim milk and four ounces of shelled green peas or beans. A lima bean chowder made with skim milk is a good lunch or supper dish.

POPCORN QUITE DELICIOUS

Besides Being Source of Entertainment for Children, It Has Important Food Value.

Besides being a source of entertainment for the children, popcorn, which is the corn kernel cooked whole, instead of being ground and then cooked, obviously has a high food value, as well as a good taste and when properly prepared for the table it may acceptably take the place of many of the breakfast foods now on the market. Popcorn may be eaten with milk and sugar like other breakfast cereals, or the parched kernels which do not "pop out" can be ground like coffee, and eaten with cream and sugar or can be boiled with water and served like oatmeal.

MAKE HOME MORE EFFICIENT

One of Popular Projects in Counties in Which Home Demonstration Agents Assist.

Increased home efficiency is one of the popular projects in the counties in which home demonstration agents are maintained by the United States department of agriculture and the agricultural colleges. Last year 109 counties in the North and West carried on county-wide campaigns for increased home efficiency, and 1,077 farm families in the same territory were assisted during that time in rearranging farmhouse or kitchen as an important first step in efficient housekeeping.

In the 15 Southern states last year 1,163 new houses were built according to plans advised by the home demonstration agents, 2,376 remodeled, and 20,811 labor-saving devices made or purchased.

CARE IN WASHING ALUMINUM

Metal Does Not Tarnish Easily in Ordinary Use, but Caution Must Be Used in Cleaning.

Aluminum does not tarnish easily in ordinary use, but one caution should be observed in cleaning. Alkali discolors aluminum; therefore it should not be washed with strong soap, nor should scouring powders containing free alkali be used on it. Discoloration on aluminum may be rubbed off with whiting or fine steel wool (grade 00), or dissolved by the acid in vinegar, or by dilute oxalic acid. These acids must be thoroughly washed off the aluminum. Some special preparations for cleaning aluminum are on the market.

Use a pitcher to fill small jelly glasses.

Embroider an arrow-head design over the runner in your silk stockings.

A plain, slightly salted, crisp cracker goes better with ice cream than anything else.

Put pockets on the inside of aprons near the outer edge and they will not catch on door knobs and get torn.

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Look to your health; and if you have it praise God and value it next to a good conscience; for health is the second blessing that mortals are capable of—a blessing that money cannot buy.—Isaac Walton.

FOOD FOR A FOUR-YEAR-OLD.

As growing children need food to supply the waste going on in their active little bodies, because they are constantly in motion, and to supply building material to build those bodies it is absolutely necessary that every mother should have an intelligent knowledge of the kind of food her child needs.

With the world full of literature on the subject there is no excuse for ignorance. The mother who is informed should see to it that her neighbor knows as well, for we know to be safe from all the evils of poor food and ignorance ourselves, we must help other people to be as wise.

In many homes the price of milk keeps the poor mother from buying what her children really need. Other foods for a child from infancy through the school age may be slighted but milk should be a constant food.

Strong bones and teeth depend on calcium; in combination with phosphorus it is their chief mineral element. Milk is the most valuable food to supply these compounds. Calcium is also obtained from the outer coats of grains, hence whole wheat, bran foods, oatmeal and corn are all most wholesome and necessary.

A generous supply of vegetables and fruit is also necessary as they furnish iron in large proportions as well as other necessary minerals.

For breakfast—a tablespoonful or two of prune pulp, one-half cupful of well cooked oatmeal with three tablespoonfuls of top milk, one slice of buttered toast and a glass of milk or three-fourths of a cupful. At ten-thirty another glass of milk and a cracker.

Dinner—Cream of spinach soup, a half cupful; one egg, one medium-sized baked potato, one slice of bread with a teaspoonful of butter and a small cupful (one-fourth of a measuring cupful) of junket.

For supper—One-fourth of a cupful of cream of wheat, two tablespoonfuls of top milk, a glass of milk to drink and one slice of bread, with butter. A baked apple or three-eighths of a cupful of apple sauce.

"Give no more to each guest than he's able to digest. Give him always of the prime and but little at a time."

HUNGARIAN STEAK.

Chip one pound of round steak, add one egg, one-half cupful of rice. Scald large sized cabbage leaves, roll a portion of the meat mixture for one serving in each, fasten with toothpicks until five portions are made. Put in a kettle, cover with water and cook one hour. Season with paprika, thicken the gravy and serve.

Spiced Steak.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, fry one large onion minced in it until a rich brown; take out the onion. Cut one flank steak in pieces, dredge with flour, fry in the butter, take out the meat, add two cupfuls of hot water, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of pepper. Thicken the gravy, put in a casserole and cook one hour. This will serve six people.

Nut Balls.—Take one cupful of chopped cold veal, add 12 chopped almonds, one egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste. Mix and roll into balls, place in a baking pan and pour over one cupful of rich, highly seasoned tomato sauce. Serve on a platter garnished with water cress.

Tomato Aspic.—Take two cupfuls of tomato boiled with one slice of onion, one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, boil 20 minutes and strain. Add two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, dissolve in one-half cupful of cold water, celery salt; salt and bay leaf may be added to the first mixture before boiling. Strain and pour into a mold and cool.

Celery With Cheese.—Cut the coarser stalks of celery and cook until tender in boiling salted water. Place a layer of the cooked celery in a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of rich, well seasoned white sauce, sprinkle generously with grated cheese and repeat with another layer of each. Finish the top with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown.

Fruit Punch.—Shred four oranges and two lemons. Add two cupfuls of water for each cupful of pulp, and sweeten to taste. Flavor with a small bottle of grape juice.

Green Pepper and Cheese.—Remove the piece around the stem of perfect shaped peppers, scoop out all white membrane and seeds. Press solidly into the pepper cups enough cream cheese to fill. Let stand until cold and firm. Cut in slices one-fourth of an inch in thickness and serve on lettuce with French dressing.

A SURVEY OF NEW TAILORED STYLES

A SURVEY of the styles in tailored clothes, especially in suits, discloses a divergence of opinion among their designers. It results to the advantage of women, giving them a choice of at least three silhouettes, with the assurance that the most becoming one is just as much in the mode as the others. There are suits that ignore the waistline entirely with straight or flaring box coats, others acknowledge its location with belts that hardly interfere with the straight lines of long coats, and still others that are shaped in to follow the lines of the natural figure. Quite often a fullness in the skirt of the coat widens the hips and apparently diminishes the size of the waist. And besides these differences there is considerable latitude in the length of coats and skirts.

But in one respect nearly all creators of clothes seem to be fully agreed. Everything is more or less decorated—usually more. The plain, severely tailored suit has almost disappeared, and it would be hard to find an undecorated tailored frock.

The two suits which are shown here are popular types, showing considerable restraint in the matter of decoration. One of those deep, clear blues that look so rich in duvetyn was chosen for the suit at the left. It shows a little definition of the waist line with the skirt portion plaited at the sides and front forming a lengthened panel at the center of the back. Across the sides there are two bands of fur. There is a double belt fastening with large buttons finishing the sleeve. A wide collar of fur may be brought up about the throat and fastened.

In the suit at the right the coat hangs straight except for a little confinement at the waist line, where a double belt has an easy task. The skirt portion of this coat is split at the sides to the waist line and the sleeves follow this lead, being split at the wrist. The small muffer collar is made of cloth. Braid and embroidery combined make the handsome motifs that border the coat; they look very rich in the same color as the coat with their sheen of silk. A few bone buttons fasten the coat and collar and two of them finish off the sleeves.

IN ANOTHER KEY

BUDDY KNEW.

A schoolmaster in a rural council school was recently giving a lesson to the lowest standards on the formation of rain by the process of evaporation. "You will notice," he said, "that during the evening following a hot summer day something rises from the surface of the ponds. What is it?"

One solitary hand gradually creeps up.

"Good boy. I can see you are thinking. What is it?"

G. B.—Frogs.

Beneath Them.

"The shopladies of this department store are haughty creatures."

"So they are, but if you want to see one of them exhibit extreme hauteur, just ask her if she'd care to attend a dance given by the employees of a 5 and 10-cent store."

SAME THING

He—I knew him when he hadn't a penny.
She—That's nothing I've known you for years, and you never had a penny.

Fearlessness.

The locomotive headlight held Looks out with a determined air. The whistle shouts the maxim old, "None but the brave deserve the fair."

Dad a Graduate, Too.

"So the boy is home from college?"
"Yes. Surprises me, too."
"That so?"
"Yes. Marvelous how much more they're teaching boys at that college now than they taught when I went there. I don't begin to know as much as he thinks he knows."

No Change for Him.

In spite of the advanced prices the barber was blue and the razor he was welding seemed to share his discouragement.

"I've just about decided to open a butcher shop," he said, reaching for the powdered astringent.

"And will you close this one?" his victim gasped feebly.

Easily Done.

"George," murmured the sweet girl as she nuzzled up to him, "cigars are nothing but a habit."
"Yes, and you've succeeded in breaking one of my habits," George said, sadly, as he took the remains of a Havana from his waistcoat pocket.—North China Standard.

THE FEMINIST MOVEMENT
Why is Mrs. Leghorn so opposed to votes for hens?
Why what would you expect from one who insists on hatching her own eggs?

What They Told Me.

It happened to a traffic jam; They all began to scold me; I know the sort of fool I am; The other drivers told me.

The One Retort.

"They have no use for children whatever."
"Hum, too bad their parents didn't feel the same way about it."

Translation.

"You're no good and you're fired," said the business manager.
"Is that statement ex-cathedra?" asked the haughty young college clerk.
"No, it ain't!" snapped the business manager; "it come straight from the boss."

Paradoxical Business.

"There is one thing queer about liquid voices."
"What is that?"
"That they give such solid returns."

Lovely Furbelows of Ribbon

EVERY year we are exhorted to begin our Christmas shopping early and every year we make ourselves a solemn promise to follow this nerve-sparing advice. And now along comes a flock of lovely accessories made of ribbons in anticipation of the holidays. It is evident that ribbons, which have always contributed gayety and other delightful flavors to apparel, are about to do more than ever before. The new things made of them include familiar articles in new interpretations and a few luxuries that are novelties. The accessories shown here are selected because they are practical as well as pretty and every dainty woman takes such satisfaction in their ownership that they make perfect gifts, especially as they represent the work of their donors.

Lingerie bows of narrow and of wider satin ribbon made in light tints are provided with little gilt safety pins, sewed to the back of the bow, so that it can be easily taken off and put on, or changed from one garment to another. Two of these bows appear at the top of the group pictured, one of very narrow ribbon and one of ribbon about three inches wide. Wide and narrow ribbons are used on the breakfast cap of silk lace and for making the camisoles. For these very wide and soft satin ribbons are used, with narrow widths and lace furnishing the trimming. On the lace-edged camisole three tiny sachet bags appear suspended from bows of narrow ribbons. Two rosettes and an elastic girdle finish up this small collection of furbelows. Flat elastic has satin ribbon shirred to form a frill at each side and sewed over it, with a rosette made of the ribbon, blossoming out at each side. It is a delight to work on these easily made and lovely gifts.

FREDERICK L. FISHER OF NORWOOD whose name will appear on the ballot at the election in November, as an Independent Candidate for County Commissioner of Norfolk County, is notably well qualified for the position. His candidacy is based on a platform of Economy in County government.

For three years Mr. Fisher served as associate County Commissioner of Norfolk County, which gave him a clear insight into County affairs. While representing the towns of Norwood, Walpole and Westwood for two years in the Legislature, he served with merit and distinction on the Taxation, Harbors and Public Lands Committee.

In his own town he early showed his qualification for public work, and was Highway Surveyor from 1885 to 1890. He was for 15 years a member of the Board of Selectmen, six of which he served as chairman; his service as Selectman covered the coming of great industries to the town, the widening of the streets, the building of the street railway, and the growth of Norwood from a village to one of the largest towns of the State. The office of Selectmen then included the position of Commissioner of Highways and Overseer of the Poor, and in all of these, Mr. Fisher acquitted himself with honor. For sixteen years he was a member of the Board of Assessors.

He early began a study of agriculture on his father's farm, and has made that his chief occupation, conducting a model dairy farm on Neponset Street, Norwood, and raising prize-winning registered cattle. He is a man of large business affairs and has been prominent in building and developing real estate, of which he is an extensive owner. He is regarded as a shrewd, keen, and honest business man.

Mr. Fisher has very decided ideas of how the County business should be conducted so as to conserve the County tax rate, and if elected will put those ideas into operation.

Official Nominations For Weymouth Ticket

The Presidential and State election will be held Tuesday, Nov. 2, a week from next Tuesday. Nominations closed some days ago, and the official list for Weymouth and vicinity will be found on page 13 of the Gazette and Transcript this week.

There are four Presidential groups, but one cross will express the voter's choice, be it Harding and Coolidge, or Cox and Roosevelt.

For Governor there are four candidates, but for some of the other State offices there are five. Big majorities are predicted for the Republicans.

For Congressman in this district, the 14th, there are three candidates, but the contest is between Louis A.

Frothingham, Republican, and Richard Olney, Democrat.

For Senator there are also three candidates, but Edwin T. Wright of Rockland will have a big majority.

Representative Prince H. Tirrell has no opposition whatever for reelection. Voters are asked to elect two County Commissioners, and there are three candidates.

Sheriff Capen has no rival for office. Weymouth voters will also vote on two questions, the approval of the sale of beer, and also the granting of one day off in eight to police officers. All the names printed on page 13 will not appear on the Weymouth ticket, but most of them will. Read the list carefully.

The NEW VELIE fulfils your idea of what Today's car should be—in design as well as silent, velvety performance.

Its distinctive style is the first attraction—the symmetrical, harmonious combination of planes that sets a new standard in body art; the new dress that fully expresses the modern conception of what TODAY'S car should be. Its style is matched by its comfort—its longer body—really broad doors—more room in its deep tilted seats and soft, plaited upholstery.

And that new motor! Here is the net result of all that engineering science has gained in the last four years—an amazing power plant—silent—powerful—a perfect performer on low-grade fuel—the greatest money-saver under any hood.

Christian Science Lecture

"The Leaven of Spirit"

Dr. John M. Tutt, C. S. B., a member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, lectured at Bates Opera House on Sunday evening to a large audience on "Christian Science—The Leaven of Spirit." A synopsis will be of interest:

"People generally are aware that Christian Science has touched the lives of individuals and has worked in such persons profound changes for the better in mind, in morals, in body. Have you ever considered the changes in general thought and life since Christian Science began its reformatory mission? Not only have individuals been affected directly, but the transforming influence has extended to the universal thought, so that those who have not yet come to know Christian Science have nevertheless, conformed to much of its basic teaching.

"Surely, though slowly, and oft-times by devious by-paths, thought has been coming into agreement with the great spiritual facts revealed in Christian Science. Coincidentally basic changes have occurred in human affairs, touching the academy, the pulpit, and the medical forum to higher, even to more spiritual issues. Science, theology and medicine are so woven into the warp and woof of human existence that they constitute its motif.

"Indeed, involving as they do salvation, both here and hereafter, these are the indispensable factors in human life today, they are the basis of the hope of a tomorrow.

"Now the human mind is finite, its every sense is, of course, limited. The human mind's concepts of science, theology and medicine, never rise above the limits by which the human thought is bounded, for it can of itself rise no higher than itself. That self is material, and hence to the unlightened, thought, science, theology and medicine seem material.

"Physical science, scholastic theology and material medicine have operated in human consciousness to belittle God with finite form and nature, and to bind man with the trammels of matter.

"Spiritually considered and therefore rightly viewed, science, theology and medicine express modes of divine consciousness, activities of the divine Mind, or the Infinite Principle, God. To be true, to be Christian, religion must take into account these divinely mental modes; human action based on them is most Christian, most spiritually scientific, hence nearest right.

"Christ Jesus, science, his theology, his medicine, were spiritual and therefore were true. Christian Science, without the limitations of matter, was the Science of Christ Jesus; Christian theology, without scholastic dogma, was the religion of Christ Jesus; Christian healing, without material media, was the medicine of Christ Jesus.

"It will be understood that Christian Science does not come to destroy science, theology and medicine, but rather to leaven the human concept of them. It comes to purge out the old lump. In the leavening, science is shorn of physical fetters, theology is cleansed of the misconcepts of creed and dogma, and medicine is relieved of matter and properly related to Mind.

"Thus spiritualization of thought raises the concepts of science, theology and medicine to a higher basis, reveals them to be in truth modes of divine Mind, and restores them in human consciousness to their rightful place, from which material theories have debased them."

CHILDREN HAVE TROUBLE WITH CARS

Even the children at play have trouble with their automobiles. The photograph shows Jack, the driver, and his two playmates trying to solve the disarrangement of machinery underneath his car.

REMEDY BUCKING AT SLOW SPEEDS

Many Small Adjustments Are Needed to Remove Play and Insure Smoothness.

JERKING HARMFUL TO AUTO

Misfiring Reduces Power of Engine to Such an Extent That Car Must Naturally Run With Most Uncomfortable Motion.

During the last few weeks the writer has received a great number of inquiries in which owners complain that the car bucks or jerks at low speeds. This condition is not only uncomfortable for the passengers but it is detrimental to the car, says a writer in Chicago Tribune. The ordinary garage mechanic—I mean the "gyp" sort—usually cannot make a proper diagnosis, and he cures the trouble only after he has taken the car half apart. If your car bucks, and you cannot determine the cause after reading this article, have a competent service man drive the car.

A car in perfect mechanical condition throughout will throttle down to five or four or even three miles an hour and pull evenly, but let there be misfiring and immediately the whole car starts to jerk. The misfiring so reduces the power of the engine and produces such lapses in the power impulses that the car must naturally run with a jerky motion. This applies to all cars, whether new or old. Whenever the engine cannot develop enough power to pull its load it falters just as a horse will tighten and then permit slack in the traces. You would do the same thing if you were dragging a heavy load. A carbonized engine cannot develop full power with a given throttle setting. Poor ignition, poor carburetion, improper valve timing, or any abnormal engine condition is likely to reduce the power and make the engine falter. It might even stall.

Common Cause of Trouble. But apart from the engine there are other causes of this common trouble. The commonest is due to too much play between the driving pinion and the large bevel gear or ring gear in the axle. It may, however, be due to excessive play anywhere in the driving system from the clutch to the rear wheels.

When the engine is under load and pulling, all the parts that move are tight. This includes engine parts—clutch, transmission, axle. They tighten like the traces tighten when a horse starts to pull and continues to pull. So long as this pulling continues there will be no noise, because the parts are tight against each other. If they were not they could not pull. In a car that bucks due to excessive play in the driving system the same effect might be had by slowing down and suddenly accelerating. This may be done by closing the throttle suddenly at 20 miles an hour and then suddenly opening it again.

At low speeds, however, it does not require a great amount of extra play to cause a knock and the objectionable bucking. A clutch that has a worn plate and weak springs will slap against the flywheel and give the bucking effect. A worn clutch shaft or worn clutch bearing would cause it.

Shaft Must Not Move. In the transmission the main shaft must not move back and forth, for if it does it will cause a knock, though it may not cause bucking, due to the fact that the movement is not transmitted to the other parts.

Universal joints with worn sliding members or worn bushings on the splines will cause bucking. If the sliding shaft is not worn play elsewhere in the joint may be taken up and not noticed except as an occasional knock.

In the case of wire wheels it often happens that the wheel driving members become worn, giving the same effect as though there were play in the differential. If a wire wheel is not tight in place it will slip sideways and this knocking often is mistaken for a bucking rear end.

AUTOMOBILE BUMPER USEFUL

Ingeniously Made to Act as Lifting Jack and Lock—Illustration Shows Plan.

An automobile bumper which does not differ greatly from the usual forms is ingeniously made to act, on occasion, as a lifting jack and a lock, by a Michigan inventor. The bumper is in two parts, which overlap in the center and are normally held by a bolt. Separated and swung to a vertical position, they become jacks, actuated by a handle carried in the tool box. When the car is jacked up it may be locked in that position.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

FILING INTO SKIN SURFACE

If New File is Used It is Liable to Be Ruined—Old One Answers the Purpose.

Frequently it is necessary for the car owner who does his own repair work to file a piece of cast iron that has been subjected to friction and so has acquired a glaze or skin. The best way to get through this skin is to use the edge of an old file. If a new file is used on this sort of surface it is likely to be ruined.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

A satisfactory temporary repair of a leaking water pipe may be made by binding around the seat of trouble several layers of string well soaked in thick oil.

When did you use your spare tire last? If it's been a long time, take it off the back end of your car and give it some service. Too much rest is harmful to it.

Where castellated nuts and cotter pins are not supplied in automobile construction, well-tempered split washers may be placed under the heads of the bolts to keep them from rattling loose.

The car owner who intends to do any repainting work will do well to see that all exposed oil holes are stuffed with felt or waste to prevent their being painted over and so choked.

A good way to prevent oil leaking out of the crank case through the bolt holes is to back off the studs a quarter of an inch or so, and then wind several turns of cotton twine around the bolts.

Don't use gasoline to clean leather unless you want to crack it. Plain water with a few drops of ammonia will remove the dirt, after which the upholstery should be rubbed briskly with a soft cloth.

Sediment in time will collect in the bow of the carburetor, and from time to time the drain cock in the bottom should be opened to rid the instrument of any foreign particles which may have accumulated.

A good many motorists hold that a few teaspoonfuls of denatured alcohol squirted into the cylinders when they are hot, after which the engine is run fast for a couple of minutes, is the best carbon remover to be had.

The latch dogs on emergency brake levers are called upon for pretty strenuous service on occasion and they sometimes break. It is a good idea to have a spare latch dog in the tool box against this emergency.

What the U.S. Rubber Company has done for the Small Car Owner

PROGRESS in any industry is marked by certain well defined steps—each step a positive contribution to the well-being or economy of part or all of the people affected by the industry.

No more positive benefit with respect to a saving in time and money has ever been conferred on the small car owners of this country than the creation of the clincher type of tire.

A product of the foresight and experience of the United States Rubber Company—the oldest and largest rubber organization in the world.

The United States Rubber Company has never assumed that because a man owned a small car he was necessarily lacking in a true appreciation of quality.

U.S. 30 x 3 1/2-inch tires are built as well and as carefully and as honestly as the largest size tires are built.

In a factory devoted exclusively to this size tire.

By workmen trained and skilled in the production of Clincher Tires.

Go to a legitimate dealer when you want a small size tire.

He knows what the United States Rubber Company has done in the interests of the small car owner. And he knows the wisdom of putting the small car owner's interests above his own.

Gipsy Language.

The language of the Gipsies, Roman, is said to be Hindoo dialect derived from Sanskrit. Ethnologists pretty well agree that the Gipsies are descendants of an obscure Hindoo tribe. The popular belief that Gipsies are descendants of the Egyptians has no other basis than the similarity of the two words. The word "Gipsy" as a matter of fact, is from the Bohemian, and means "vagabond." The first Gipsies appeared in England early in the sixteenth century, but were found in eastern Europe at least two centuries earlier. They are now scattered all over the world.

Aboriginal Superstition.

The Australian blacks weave the bushy tails of their "dingo" dogs into their beards to make them longer. Indians of the Puget Sound region make blankets of dogs' hair. Natives of Borneo believe that black dogs are the chosen familiars of sorcerers, and he who laughs when a dog crosses the path will be turned to stone.

Wise John.

John was able to persuade Ruth to do most things he desired. One day the children, with their little cousin, Edward, decided to draw pictures. Edward and John each found a pencil, but Ruth was still without one until her mother came to her aid with a big new pencil. John, whose pencil was a blue stub, looked longingly at the new one and then, in a coaxing voice, said: "Ruthie, don't you want this nice pretty blue one? It just matches your eyes." Needless to say, John secured the long pencil.

The Maliciously Inclined.

Malicious people are of two types—the actively malicious and the passively malicious. Between the two there is a difference not of kind but merely of degree. The actively malicious are people who delight in belittling and injuring others, whether by petty gossip or outright slander. The passively malicious find a strange pleasure in hearing of anything that is to the discredit of other people.

Taking of Montfaucon Is Reproduced

The attack on Montfaucon, France, during the Meuse-Argonne drive of the American divisions, was reproduced by the war department at Camp Meade, Maryland, for the benefit of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The sham battle, the largest ever staged by the war department, afforded the nearest approach to modern warfare ever seen in the United States.

"TOO OLD"

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after cleaning up $100,000. He looks like a hobo. Then he rescues a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over. He eliminates the offending man. She is Dolores Ruy. In Denver he is offered a $25,000 job by a capitalist friend, Edward J. Jerome. He receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go fifty-fifty with him on the profits. So he starts for Sobrante. Jerome goes with John to the depot. They meet the distressed lady on her way to the same train. John tells Jerome the whole story. Jerome secretly sees the girl, offering her $10,000 if she induces John to take his job inside of ninety days. The girl accepts. The scene now shifts to Buenaventura. Sobrante, where Geary has existed for two months on credit extended by Mother Jenks, keeper of a hotel and dramshop. Dolores cables Henrietta Wilkins (Mother Jenks) that she is on her way to visit her. Mother Jenks has been educating Dolores, who is the daughter of former President Ruy of Sobrante, deposed and executed by President Sarras. Mother Jenks doesn't want Dolores to find out she is no longer respectable. So Billy meets the steamer and tries to turn the girl back. But Dolores lands and salutes Mother Jenks as "Mother." Billy promptly falls in love with Dolores. Webster in New Orleans secures a stateroom on La Estrellita by buying a ticket for a mythical valet, "Andrew Bowers." In New Orleans Webster saves a young man from assassination. On the steamer he finds the mythical valet in his stateroom. He accepts "Bowers" on trust, without learning his identity.

CHAPTER IX—Continued.

While he was considering the matter, a voice behind him said very softly and indistinctly, like a man with a harlequin:

"Mr. Geary, will you be good enough to back your launch a couple of hundred feet? When I'm certain I can't be seen from the steamer, I'll come aboard."

Billy turned, and in the dim light of his binnacle lamp observed a beautiful pair of white hands grasping the gunwale on the starboard quarter. He peered over and made out the head and shoulders of a man.

"All right," he replied in a low voice. "Hang where you are, and you'll be clear of the propeller."

He signaled Don Juan, who backed swiftly away, while Billy doused the binnacle lamp.

"That'll do," the thick voice said presently. "Bear a hand, friend, and I'll climb over."

He came, as naked as Mercury, sprawled on his belly in the cockpit, opened his mouth, spat out a compact little roll of tinfoil, opened it and drew out a ball of paper which he flattened out on the floor of the cockpit and handed to Billy.

"Thank you," he said, very courteously and distinctly now. "My credentials, Mr. Geary, if you please."

Billy relighted the lamp and read:

"Dear Billy:

"I do not know the bearer from Adam's off ox; all I know about him is that he has all the outward marks of a gentleman, the courage of a bear-cat, a sense of humor and a head for which the presidents of Sobrante will gladly pay a considerable number of pesos oro. Don't give up the head, because I like it and we do not need the money—yet. Take him ashore without anybody knowing it; hide him, clothe him, feed him—then forget all about him.

"Ever thine,

"J. S. WEBSTER."

"Kick the boat ahead again, Cafferati," Billy ordered quietly. He turned to the late arrival. "Mr. Man, your credentials are all in apple-pie order. Do you happen to know that this bay is swarming with man-eating sharks?"

The man raised a fine, strong, youthful face and grinned at him. "Hobson's choice, Mr. Geary," he replied. "Afloat or ashore, the sharks are after me. Sir, I am your debtor." He crawled into the cabin and stretched out on the settee as John Stuart Webster's voice came floating across the dark waters.

"Everything well with you, Billy?"

"All is lovely, Jack, and the goose hanks high. By the way, that friend of yours called with his letter of introduction. I took care of him."

"Thanks. I suppose you'll call for me in that launch tomorrow morning?"

"Surest thing you know, Jack. Good-night, old top."

"Good-night, Billy."

Don Juan Cafetero swung the launch and headed back for the city. At Leber's little dock Billy stepped ashore, while Don Juan backed out into the dark bay again in order to avoid inquisitive visitors. Billy hastened to El Buen Amigo and returned presently with a bundle of clothes; at an agreed signal Don Juan kicked the launch into the dock again and Billy went aboard.

"Hat, shirt, necktie, duck suit, white socks and shoes," he whispered. "Climb into them, stranger."

Once more the launch backed out in the bay, where Webster's protege dressed at his leisure, and Billy handed Don Juan a couple of pesos.

"Remember, John," he cautioned the bibulous one as they tied up for the night, "nothing unusual happened to-night."

"Divil a thing, Mistor Geary. Thank you, sor," the Gaelic wreck replied blithely and disappeared in the darkness, leaving Billy to guide the stranger to El Buen Amigo, where he was taken into the confidence of Mother Jenks and, on Billy's guarantee of the board bill, furnished with a room and left to his own devices.

John Stuart Webster came down the gangplank into Leber's launch hard at the heels of the port doctor.

"You young horse thief," he cried, affectionately. "I believe it's the custom down this way for men to kiss each other. We'll dispense with that, but by— He folded Billy in a paternal embrace, then held him at arm's length and looked him over.

"Lord, son," he said, "you're as thin as a snake. I'll have to feed you up."

As they sped toward the landing, he looked Billy over once more. "I have it," he declared. "You need a change of climate to get rid of that malaria. Just show me this little old mining claim of yours, Bill, and then hike for God's country. Three months up there will put you right again, and by the time you get back, we'll be about ready to weigh the first clean-up."

Billy shook his head. "I'd like to mighty well, Jack," he replied, "but I just can't."

"Huh! I suppose you don't think I'm equal to the task of straightening out this concession of yours and making a hummer out of it, eh?"

The young fellow looked across at him sheepishly. "Mine?" he jeered. "Who's talking about a mine. I'm thinking of a girl!"

"Oh!"

"Some girl, Johnny."

"I hope she's not some parakeet," Webster bantered. "Have you looked up her pedigree?"

"Ah-h-h!" Billy spat over the side in sheer disgust. "This is an American girl—born here, but white—raised in the U. S. A. I've only known her three weeks, but—ah!" And Billy kissed his hand into space.

"Well, I'm glad I find you so happy, boy. When do you pull off the wedding?"

"Oh," said Billy, "that's premature, Jack. I haven't asked her. How could I until I'm able to support her?"

"Look here, son," Webster replied, "don't you go to work and be the kind of fool I was. You get married and take a chance. A man ought to marry young, Bill. Hang the odds. I know what's good for you."

At the hotel Billy sent a note to Dolores, apprising her that John Stuart Webster had arrived—and would she be good enough to receive them?

Miss Ruy would be that gracious. She was waiting for them in the veranda just off the patio, outwardly calm, but inwardly a foment of conflicting emotions. As they approached she affected not to see them and turning, glanced in the opposite direction; nor did she move her head until Billy's voice, speaking at her elbow, said:

"Well, Dolores, here's my old Jack-partner waiting to be introduced. Jack, permit me to present Miss Dolores Ruy."

She turned her face and rose graciously, marking with secret triumph the light of recognition that leaped to his eyes, hovered there the hundredth part of a second and departed, leaving those keen, quizzical blue orbs appraising her in the most natural manner imaginable. Webster bowed.

"It is a great happiness to meet you, Miss Ruy," he said gravely.

Dolores gave him her hand. "You have doubtless forgotten, Mr. Webster, but I think we have met before."

"Indeed!" John Stuart Webster murmured interestedly. "So stupid of me not to remember. Where did we meet?"

"He has a profound sense of humor," she soliloquized. "He's going to force me into the open. Oh, dear, I'm helpless." Aloud she said: "On the train in Death valley last month, Mr. Webster."

Webster shook his head slowly, as if mystified. "I fear you're mistaken, Miss Ruy. I wasn't on the train in Death valley last month. I was in Denver—so you must have met some other Mr. Webster."

She flushed furiously. "I didn't think I could be mistaken," she answered a trifle coldly.

"It is my misfortune that you were," he replied graciously. "Certainly, had we met at that time, I should not have failed to recognize you now. Somehow, Miss Ruy, I never have any luck."

She was completely outgeneraled, and having the good sense to realize it, submitted gracefully. "He's perfectly horrible," she told herself, "but at least he can be like a gentleman—and I always did like that kind of man."

So they chatted on the veranda until luncheon was announced and Dolores left them to go to her room.

"Well?" Billy queried the moment she was out of earshot. "What do you think, Johnny?"

"I think," said John Stuart Webster, slowly, "that you're a good picker, Bill. She's my ideal of a fine young woman, and my advice to you is to marry her. I'll grub-stake you. Bill, this stiff collar is choking me; I wish you'd wait here while I go to my room and rustle up a soft one."

In the privacy of his room John Stuart Webster sat down on his bed and held his head in his hands, for he had just received a blow in the solar plexus and was still groggy. Presently, however, he pulled himself together and approaching the mirror looked long at his weather-beaten countenance.

"Too old," he murmured, "too old to be dreaming dreams."

He changed to a soft collar, and when he descended to the patio to join Billy once more he was, to all outward appearances, his usual unperurbed self, for his was one of those rare natures that can derive a certain comfort from the misery of self-sacrifice—and in that five minutes alone in his room John Stuart Webster had wrestled with the tragedy of his life and won.

He had resolved to give Billy the right of way on the highway to happiness.

In Mr. Webster's own whimsical phraseology, his clock had been fixed, on the instant he recognized in the object of his youthful partner's adoration the same winsome woman he had enthroned in his own secret castle of love. From that precise second Billy's preserve was as safe from encroachment by his friend as would be a bale of Confederate currency in an armor-steel vault on the three-thousand-foot level of a water-filled mine.

John Stuart Webster had unanimously resolved upon the course he should have pursued in the first place. He would investigate Billy's mining concession immediately; provided it should prove worth while, he would finance it and put the property on a paying basis; after which he would see to it that the very best doctors in the city of Buenaventura should inform Billy, unofficially and in the strictest confidence, that if he desired to preserve the life of Senior Juan Webster he should forthwith pack that rapidly disintegrating person off to a more salubrious climate.

Having made his decision, John Stuart Webster immediately took heart of hope and decided to lead trumps. Dolores rejoined them for a siesta after luncheon.

Webster leaned over and slapped Billy Geary's knees affectionately.

"Well, Bill, you saffron-colored old wreck, how long do you suppose it will take for you to pick up enough strength and courage to do some active mining? I'm anxious to get that property on a paying basis, so I can get out of the country."

"Why, Johnny," the amazed Billy declared, "I thought you would stay and help run the mine."

"Indeed! Well, why do you suppose I spent so much time teaching you how to run a mine, you young idiot, if not against just such a time as this? You found this concession and tied it up; I'll finance it and help you get everything started; but after that, I'm through, and you can manage it on salary and name the salary yourself. You have a greater interest in this country than I, William; and so with your kind permission we'll hike up to that concession tomorrow and give it the double-O; then, if I can O. K. the property, we'll cable for the machinery I ordered just before I left Denver, and get busy. We ought to have our first clean-up within ninety days."

"Gosh, but you're in a hurry," Billy murmured. He disliked exceedingly the thought of having his courtship interrupted on a minute's notice.

"You know me, son. I'm a hustler on the job," Webster reminded him brutally; "so the sooner you start, the sooner you can get back and accumulate more malaria. What accommodations have you up there?"

"None, Jack."

"Then you had better get some, Billy. I think you told me we have to take horses at San Miguel de Padua to ride in to the mine." Billy nodded. "Then you had better buy a tent and bedding for both of us, ship the stuff up to San Miguel de Padua, go up with it and engage horses, a good cook, and a couple of reliable mooks. When you have everything ready telegraph me and I'll come up."

"Why can't you come up with me?" Billy demanded.

"I have to see a man, and write some letters and send a cablegram and wait for an answer. I may have to loaf around here for two or three days. By the way, what did you do for that friend I sent to you with the letter of introduction?"

"Exactly what you told me to do, Johnny."

"Where is he now?"

"At El Buen Amigo—the same place where I'm living."

"All right. When you get back to your hostelry, you might tell my friend I shall expect him over to dine with me this evening, if he can manage it."

For an hour they discussed various subjects; then Billy, declaring the siesta was almost over and the shops reopening as a consequence, announced his intention of doing his shopping, said good-bye to Dolores and Webster, and lugubriously departed on the business in hand.

"Why are you in such a hurry, Mr. Webster?" Dolores demanded. "You haven't been in Buenaventura six hours until you've managed to make me perfectly miserable."

"I'm terribly sorry. I didn't mean to."

"Didn't you know Billy Geary is my personal property?"

"No, but I suspected he might be. Bill's generous that way. He never hesitates to give himself to a charming woman."

"This was a case of mutual self-defense. Billy hasn't any standing socially, you know. When old Mrs. General Maldonado lectured me (the dear, aristocratic soul conceived it to be her duty) on the impropriety of appearing on the Malecon with Billy and my guardian, who happens to be Billy's landlady, I tried to explain our American brand of democracy, but failed. So I haven't been invited anywhere since, and life would have been very dull without Billy. He has been a dear—and you have taken him away."

Webster laughed. "Well, be patient, Miss Ruy, and I'll give him back to you with considerable more money than he will require for your joint comfort. Billy in financial distress is a joy forever, but Billy in a top hat and a frock coat on the sunny side of Easy street will be absolutely irresistible."

"He's a darling. Ever since my arrival he has dedicated his life to keeping me amused." She rose. "Despite your wickedness, Mr. Webster, I am going to be good to you. Billy and I always have five o'clock tea here in the veranda. Would you care to come to my tea-party?"

"Nothing could give me greater pleasure," he assured her.

She nodded brightly to him. "I'm going to run up to my room and put some powder on my nose," she explained.

"But you'll return before five o'clock?" Webster was amazed to hear himself plead.

"You do not deserve such consideration, but I'll come back in about twenty minutes," she answered and left him.

As Webster viewed the situation, his decision to see as little as possible of Dolores during his brief stay in Sobrante was a wise one. The less he saw of her (he told himself), the better for his peace of mind, for he was forty years old, and he had never loved before. For him this fever that burned in his blood, this delicious agony that throbbled in his heart—and all on the very ghost of provocation—were so many danger-signals, heralds of that grand passion which, coming to a man of forty, generally lasts him the remainder of his natural existence.

Webster was forced to admit he was afraid of himself. His was the rapidly disappearing code of the old unlettered West, that a man shall never betray his friend in thought, word, or deed. To John Stuart Webster any crime against friendship was the most heinous in all the calendar of human frailty; even to dream of slipping into Billy's shoes now would be monstrous; yet Webster knew he could not afford a test of strength between his ancient friendship for Billy and the masculine desire for a perfect mate. Remained then but one course:

"I must run like a road-runner," was the way Webster expressed it.

CHAPTER X.

Dolores had been gone an hour before Webster roused from his bitter introspection sufficiently to glance at his watch. "Hum-m-m!" he grunted disapprovingly.

"Oh, I've been here fully half an hour," Dolores' voice assured him. He turned guiltily and found her leaning against the jamb in a doorway behind him and farther down the veranda. She was gazing at him with that calm, impersonal yet vitally interested glance that had so captivated him the first time he saw her. "Are you quite finished talking to yourself and fighting imaginary enemies? If so, you might talk to me for a change; I'll even disagree with you on any subject, if opposition will make you any happier."

He rose and indicated the chair. "Please sit down, Miss Ruy. You are altogether disconcerting—too confoundingly smart. I fear I'm going to be afraid of you until I know you better."

She shrugged adorably and took the proffered chair. "That's the Latin in her—that shrug," Webster thought. "I wonder what other mixtures go to make up that perfect whole."

Aloud he said: "So you wanted to study me in repose? Why waste your time? I am never in repose."

"Feminine curiosity, Mr. Webster.

Billy has talked so much of you that I wanted to see if you measured up to the specifications. Just let me have your hand, and I'll tell you all about yourself."

"Is there any charge?"

"Yes, a nominal one. However, I guarantee a truthful reading; if, when I am through, you are not wholly satisfied, you do not have to pay the price. Is that a satisfactory arrangement?"

"Right as a fox," he declared, and held out his great calloused hand. He thrilled as she took it in both of hers, so soft and beautiful, and fattened it out, palm upward, on her knee. "A fine, large, useful hand," she commented musingly. "The callouses indicate recent hard manual toil with a pick and shovel; despite your recent efforts with soap and brush and pumice-stone, there still remain evidence of some foreign matter ingrained in those callous spots. This line indicates that you are very brave, gentle, and courteous. You are quick and firm in your decisions, but not always right, because your actions are governed by your heart instead of your head. Once you have made a decision, you are reckless of the consequences. Your lifeline tells me you are close to fifty-three years of age—"

"Seerss, you're shooting high and to the right," he interrupted, for he did not relish that jab about his age.

"I'll have you know I was forty years old last month, and that I can still do a hundred yards in twelve seconds flat—in my working clothes."

"Well, don't feel peeved about it, Mr. Webster. I am not infallible; the best you can hope for from me is a high percentage of hits, even if I did shoot high and to the right that time. In point of worldly experience you're a hundred and six years old but I lopped off fifty per cent. to be on the safe side. To continue. You are of an extremely chivalrous nature—particularly toward young ladies traveling without chaperons; you are kind, affectionate, generous to a fault, something of a spendthrift. One may safely depend upon you to do the unexpected. Your matrimonial line is unbroken, proving you have never married, although right here the line is somewhat dim and frayed." She looked up at him suddenly. "You haven't been in love, have you?" she queried with childlike innocence. "In love—and disappointed?"

He nodded, for he could not trust himself to speak.

"How sad!" she cooed sympathetically. "Did she marry another, or did she die?"

"She—she—yes, she died."

"Cauliflower tongue, in all probability, carried her off, poor thing! However, to your fortune: You are naturally truthful and would not make a deliberate misstatement of fact unless you had a very potent reason for it. You have a strong sense of sportsmanship, and when fairly defeated, whether in a battle of fists or a battle of wits, you never hold a grudge, which is one of the very nicest characteristics a man can have—"

"Or a woman," he suggested feebly.

ONE UNION CHURCH

Editor Gazette and Transcript:
The Christian churches are in a similar position that the country would have been in had secession succeeded in 1862. The rights of the minority have been over-emphasized in ecclesiasticism. This is the story of Protestantism since the Reformation: "If there were one united church," say some non-church-goers, "I would go to that church." Yet it is a matter of record in practically every community that there was at first the one community church ruled by the majority, established by the early settlers.

At times it is true a small group of active workers may have had control, but they could not have held such position unless the majority so willed. Then the restive minority, too impatient to wait the time when their ideas would win, as all good ideas eventually must win, seceded to form a new church of their own. Once started on the path of disintegration there was no end until the churches are now all as small as they can possibly be to maintain themselves in a struggling existence with underpaid, inadequate preachers.

Three factors have co-operated to bring about the multiplicity of little churches:

First, the majority rule sometimes ruthlessly disregards the ideas and feelings of the minority. We see it in our political parties. It is one of the prices a growing democracy has to pay. In Church as in State, but especially important is it in religion that the feelings of all should be consulted if the church is to minister to all. Our forefathers too often failed to see theirs.

Second, the minority has too often been very impatient to obtain the seat of control. This caused in the State the Civil War. In recent times the Church could not resort to warfare as it did in the mediaeval age to keep the heretics in the fold. The minority could erect a church of their own; then a minority of them could go out again.

Third, there has been a sort of feverish anxiety on the part of some of the big denominations, with too much missionary money on their hands, to get a wedge into communities already adequately churched, that they might not fail to obtain their share of the spoils of ecclesiastical rivalry.

There is no mistake about it, there is too much idle capital tied up in a lot of buildings that are open but one day a week; there is far too much inefficiency and lack of vision; the ministry is an overcrowded, underpaid profession. Most of the men have less than a man's job; many are spilling for the lack of opportunity to do anything worth while. While the churches not only fail to make a striking appeal to the people, but fail in community service. Secession absurdum is the church history of modern times.

We already see the dawn of a new point of view in the growing recognition of the validity of diversity in religious thinking. The little group of devoted men and women in one church realize that they and the similar little group in the church across the way have a great many more ideals in common than they have that separate. We could have far less numbers of churches and far bigger ones in every community. Institutions that would have a trained man in the pulpit, a trained specialist at the head of religious education, and too, a paid social service secretary. The one building, containing the church auditorium and parish house (I favor all being under one roof for purposes of economy, as well as the recognition that all is a legitimate part of the church) should be used every day of the week as community center, for various kinds of social and religious activities. On Sunday there should be an early morning service of formal high church character with ritual etc., for those whose religious needs demanded such a special service. The 10.30 service might be the regular service of worship with surpliced choir. There should be an afternoon service for the more evangelically inclined; while in the evening a meeting of liberal nature with the message illustrated by still and motion pictures. The people who object to the use of "movies" in the church could come in the morning or afternoon, those to whom the more formal worship makes no appeal, would attend in the evening. While the church would be ministering to all of the people, the property would be used to capacity and the investment would pay big dividends in community betterment.

When will this one church come into being? I don't know. Oh, for the time when we will all cease to foster the dog-in-the-manger sort of religion! When we will learn that things, pulpit, altar, church etc., are not sacred in themselves, but only in the use to which they are put; that those things are sacred that help to bring to men the vision of God and brotherly service. That even the motion picture is as sacred as the pulpit when it brings to people the vision of the Kingdom of God. When we learn that the other person's religion is as valid to him as our's is to us, that is, when we recognize the validity of diversity in religious faith and worship, at that time we can begin to see the coming of the one really effective community Church of Christ. Meanwhile we must pray and work for the increase of human sympathy and fellowship among the churches of today.

MOVE INTO NEW STORE
 Luce & Co., who have been in business in Quincy for the past eight years, opened their remodelled drygoods store Saturday morning after being in temporary quarters since July 1.
 Their remodelled store is new throughout, new hardwood floors, new walls, ceiling and shelves. The display windows in front are the latest things in the way of 20th Century lighting effect, and the trimmer's display is superb.
 A complete line of drygoods stock is neatly placed in the white ivory shelves and in the glass showcases, and Luce & Co. is thoroughly equipped for business. During the opening several bouquets of flowers were received.

LONERGAN—KEANE
 In the presence of a large number of friends from Rockland and surrounding towns Miss Ellen Agnes Keane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
 Bennie Keane of East Water street,
 Rockland, became the bride of William F. Lonergan of East Weymouth on Oct. 11. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. J. Fagan, pastor of the Holy Family church, Rockland, and was followed by a nuptial mass.
 The couple were attended by Miss Annie L. Keane, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, and Phillip Cullen of East Weymouth, as best man. The bride was handsomely gowned in a brown chiffon velvet, with trimmings of embroidered beaded gold and wore a picture hat to match, with a large bird of paradise. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses; her only ornament was a diamond pendant.
 The bridesmaid wore a suit of navy blue with squirrel trimmings and a corsage bouquet of pink roses and a large picture hat to match.
 Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, the couple being assisted in receiving by their parents and attendants.
 The bride's gift to her maid was a platinum bar-pin with diamond setting, and the groom presented the best man with a set of gold cuff links.
 On their return from a trip to New York the couple will reside in Rockland.

The home paper deserves well of the Weymouth people.—ADVERTISE.

Tinsel Is Gold

By CLARISSA MACKIE
(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Morella De Lue was at home. It was rather a dingy room whose keynote was the drab-brown of the conventional cheap boarding house—but there were high lights of color where a gay silk petticoat burst through the swelling curtains of a corner closet, or pink lingerie tumbled carelessly out of a half-open drawer. The wide couch that served as a bed by night was heaped high with gorgeous pillows—and for the rest, there was Morella herself, red-gold hair endowed by nature, sea-blue eyes set beneath a thoughtful brow; a large, sweet mouth that always smiled—oft-time when it wanted to droop with weariness—a tiny mite of a Morella, who could dance like an elf on the brim of the magic fountain, and who could sing cheerily in the dull room as she sewed spangles on gossamer elfin wings that she must wear that night. Heavy footsteps sounded outside her door, and she heard the plaintive voice of her landlady.

"A gentleman to see you, Miss De Lue—here's his card." The steps wandered away and Morella snatched at the bit of white pasteboard under the door. "Andrew—" she breathed softly. "Andrew Fenton—coming here to see—it's a joke—Nony Walte has played a joke on you and is now giggling in the parlor downstairs." Nevertheless, she kissed the card and tucked it away in her workbasket. In a moment she had changed the kimono for a little gray gown, twisted her glorious hair into a semblance of order and went demurely downstairs to the grim parlor where Andrew Fenton, author of the musical show "The Magic Fountain," was waiting to see her—

Morella was the humblest member of the dancing elves. Sometimes Fenton had talked to her behind the scenes, but this was the first time he had singled her out for marked attention.

Andrew Fenton was a clever-looking man of thirty-five, with brilliant dark eyes and a fine mouth that smiled down at Morella's astonishment in a very kindly way.

"It's a glorious day, Miss DeLue," he said. "You looked pale last night—my car is outside and I'm going to take you out to the shore to see the waves dancing in the sunshine—perhaps you might learn some new steps, but I believe you could teach the waves to fly!"

"Angelic man!" sighed Morella, twin roses in her cheeks, feeling like saucy Nony Walte. Later, when the wheels of the powerful machine crunched a sandy shore and the fresh sound breeze had whipped more color into Morella's lovely little face, Fenton brought the conversation around to the play, Morella's part in it, and finally asked her bluntly what she was doing in New York anyway, all alone at her age.

"Born here," said Morella briefly. "But not bred here," smiled Fenton. "Well—we did live in a little country town for years—then mother died and father married again—well, I've always longed for New York and Broadway—Isn't it wonderful?" She sighed the sigh of the neophyte. Fenton laughed. "Dear child, what is Broadway?" "Broadway is New York and New York is Broadway—it is life," she blazed defiance. "Poor child," he pitted. "New York is a display of fireworks; you are dazzled by it. What you call life is—well, three-quarters of the men and women streaming in and out of the brightly-lighted places are country folk dizzy with the lights and the music and dancing—some day, often too late, they wake up." Morella was a little frightened. In spite of her bravado she had grown to fear the merciless city.

life—" all the fresh color drained from her face. "I hope you will pardon me—but I read in the paper the other day of your engagement," her voice became halting. "She is very beautiful."

"You mean Miss Vane?" "Yes."

"She is beautiful—but we are no longer engaged, and—" he bit his lip viciously and Morella saw that the memory of the other girl hurt him. "I am sorry," she said, and tried to talk of other things, but her voice failed. She could not help thinking about the girl he loved—a girl who was pure gold and not tinsel of the stage. That night as she dressed for the last scene she hated the glittering elfin dress—creature of the hot lights of Broadway. Once someone asked her if she felt ill, but she shook her head and went on smiling, dancing—starry-eyed, beautiful until the curtain rang down, when suddenly she became a weary, dragged elf—the last to leave the dressing room.

Then, as she was leaving, a sweet feminine voice drew her back again. The great empty space behind the stage was vacant, with here and there a dim light burning in a wire cage and Morella gasped as she recognized the charming girl in a rich evening coat, who had an elusive air of belonging to the gold of life. It was Andrew Fenton's Miss Vane. "I couldn't find a messenger," she said plaintively, "and I wonder if you will be kind enough to find out if Mr. Fenton is here—and take a message."

Morella was quite pale. She was wearing the little gray dress and hat and her hair was knotted low on her neck. "I shall be glad to take a message," she said slowly, for she was afraid. "Thank you," said Miss Vane, "and, now, please tell him that Miss Vane will be waiting for him in the lobby and that she will drive him home—he will understand—tell him she will wait only five minutes," the sweet voice broke a little, and as she turned away Morella saw a triumphant curl of the naughty lips.

"She looks unkind," thought Morella, speeding on her errand, then she suddenly leaned against the wall and cried a little. She wanted to be gold! All at once strong hands gripped her shoulders and turned her around. "Why the tears?" asked Fenton gently.

"She is waiting for you—hurry—she will drive you home—she will wait just five minutes—I mean Miss Vane," she explained smiling through her tears. "Is that all?" he asked, searching her face with keen eyes. "Is it not enough—from her?" she whispered. He put his hand under her chin. "Morella, shall I go?" "Yes—before it is too late."

"And if I would rather stay with you—always?" "Ah! I—I—I am only tinsel—"

He laughed exultantly and drew her close to his heart. "Beloved elf, don't you know that when love, the alchemist, touches tinsel—then tinsel is gold?"

WHERE THE POET IS KING

Versifiers Seemingly Are Much Thought Of by the Sometimes Ungentle Mexican Soldiers.

Poets enjoy great privileges and immunities in Mexico. They have a story in Coahuila about this power of poets. In the early stages of the constitutional revolution some federal troops had been driven from a wood, but a few of the little brown, pajamaed infantrymen climbed into the trees as easily as the monkeys they resembled. So the rebels went about as squirrel hunters. One party surrounded a tree in whose branches the fawn color of a uniform had been observed. Just as the rifles were raised, a brown hand with an oratorical gesture was thrust through the leaves, and a clipped head appeared.

"Don't shoot," said the voice with a theatrical modulation, "don't shoot me. I am a poet."

The soldier was the regimental poet, composer of the verses for the folksongs in which are related the progress of the campaign. Almost every regiment in the old federal army had its laureate. "Come down, Mr. Poet," cried the men below, and they made him recite some of his verses, after which each one of the rebels gave him a good, hard hug.

One may not strike a poet, any more than a woman, whether he is up a tree in Coahuila or occupying a city in Dalmatia.—Leslie's.

What Did She Mean? The curious effect sometimes produced in telegrams by want of punctuation or the omission of a single small word cannot fail to have struck everyone. A London lawyer had a woman relative in Scotland from whom he had "expectations." She had been ailing for some weeks, when one morning came a telegram asking the lawyer's wife to go at once as she—his aunt—was much worse. His wife accordingly went. During the evening of the following day the husband received this announcement: "Aunt Matilda went to heaven at 3:30, returning by 11:50 tomorrow morning."

No Doubt. "I don't believe there is really one state where all the women want to have a say." "Oh, yes, there is; the state of matrimony."

SIDE WHISKERS IN LONDON

Fashion That Was Frowned on Some Years Ago Seems to Be Coming Back.

The London exquisite is doing his best to cultivate side whiskers, a fashion that was somewhat frowned upon a few years ago when Lord Rockavale attempted its resurrection. But that was in the days before the war, and probably it is as a change from the regulation military mustache of the last five or six years that British young men of today are growing tufts of hair in front of their ears with most hideous result.

The earl of Lonsdale and his brother, Hon. Lancelot Lowther, have always been famous in the fashionable world for wearing "sideboards," but in this hirsute face fitting they are usually credited with the desire to suggest the "sporting" atmosphere in which they are generally to be found.—New York Sun.

Doing Away With Autocracy. "I noticed some crepe on the front door of your boarding house."

"Yes, our star boarder died yesterday."

"Who will succeed him?" "We don't know yet. Ordinarily the landlady appoints a successor, but we have a soviet boarding house. We are going to name the new star boarder by a secret ballot."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

How mushy a tender love letter sounds when read in court.

The Housewives Burden

When a woman is almost distracted from overwork, her home is in disorder, crying children, and on top of all is suffering from backache, bearing down pains, or some other form of feminine ills, then she should remember that hundreds of women in just her condition have been restored to health and regained their youthful strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and not rest until she has given it a fair trial.

Proof that it Restored the Health of These Two Women

Cairo, Ill.—"Some time ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and every one told me the same but I kept fighting to keep from having the operation. I had read so many times of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped my sister so I began taking it. I have never felt better than I have since then and I keep house and am able to do all my work. The Vegetable Compound is certainly one grand medicine."—Mrs. J. R. MATTHEWS, 3311 Sycamore Street, Cairo, Ill.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—"I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby came when I could no longer keep up. It strengthened my back and relieved me of the ill effect which so often develops at such times. That was my first experience with the Vegetable Compound. Years afterwards I took it during the Change of Life and got along so well I scarcely ever had to lie down during the day and seldom had dizzy, fainting spells. I am now well and strong, can do all my housework with perfect ease and it is a comfort to me to be able to say to other suffering women 'take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and be strong.' I will be glad to have you use my name if it will be the means of helping any one."—Mrs. R. A. FAIRBURN, 608 Orchard Knob Ave., Chattanooga, Tenn.

CALLAHAN BROTHERS TO BATTLE EACH OTHER ON FOOTBALL FIELD

One of the most interesting features of this year's football season, from the human interest standpoint, will be the playing of the Callahan brothers, who are captaining the Yale and Princeton teams. The day of the greatest interest will be when Yale plays Princeton and they face each other. Theirs is the first known case when brothers captained two of the leading varsity teams. From left to right are: Capt. Harry A. Callahan of the Princeton team and Capt. John J. Callahan of the Yale eleven.

COBB VS. RUTH

Fans used to compare Hans Wagner and Nap Lajoie. Both have passed out of the game, with the question unsettled. Now up comes Babe Ruth to challenge Ty Cobb for the premiership of individual leadership. It was a hard matter to determine which was the superior, Wagner or Lajoie, but there is not so much to argue over in the case of Cobb vs. Ruth. Cobb is a master mind of baseball, good in all departments; Ruth is a slugger alone, depending upon brawn to make him the greatest long-distance hitter of the time, and no doubt of all times. For all around excellence, Ty Cobb stands out as the best ball player of all time, challenged only by Wagner.—Richard Guy, in Pittsburgh Leader.

HEAVYWEIGHT CROWN IS WORN BY NILLES

Carpentier Not Recognized as Champion of France.

Never Challenged for Title, Seemingly Content With Laurels He Now Has—Regarded as Best French Boxer.

Whenever boxing fans or others discuss Georges Carpentier and the fighting game they invariably refer to him as the heavyweight champion of France. There is no doubt that he is the best boxer in all France, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that he is not the recognized heavyweight champion of France, but he holds the title of Europe. Georges is the light heavyweight champion of France, while Nilles is the heavyweight champion.

It is rather embarrassing at times for Carpentier to admit that he is not heavyweight champion of his native land. Through some technicality or other Georges never challenged or fought for the heavyweight title, and therefore does not hold it—not according to the French Federation of Boxing, and that body controls the sport in France, the same as the National Sporting club has always controlled it in England.

Hammis, a heavyweight, was the champion and he was recently defeated by Paul Journee, but this match was not for the championship, therefore Hammis still retained the title, and in turn was defeated by Marcel Nilles, August 1, last, losing on a foul in the eighth round. That gives the heavyweight title to Nilles, although no one in France would give him a ghost of a show against Carpentier.

The latter, of course, could easily get the title by fighting Nilles or challenging, and, in case the latter should decline the match, win it by default, but the chances are Carpentier will be content with the laurels he has.

FEDERAL AID TO OBSTRUCT POOLS

President Johnson of American League Says Help of Congress Is Needed.

BETTING IS RUINING GAME

Different Methods Tried to Eradicate Evil, but None So Far Has Been Effective—Nation's Sport Needs Protection.

Congress is to be asked to enact a law that will make betting on a baseball game, major or minor, a penitentiary offense.

This was announced by President Johnson of the American league, who believes that will be the only method by which gambling can be prevented from ruining the national sport. Johnson has done many big things for baseball and he hopes to be successful in this because he firmly believes federal intervention is the only method of combating the evil, writes Oscar Reelchow in Chicago News. The fact that pool slips are distributed broadcast over the country, either by mail or express, and that the telegraph and telephone lines are used in the nation wide operation of the system, lays baseball gambling, President Johnson believes, open to attack by federal law.

Sinister Forces at Work.

Many different methods of dealing with the gambling evil have been proposed in the last few years, but none that has been tried has succeeded. There have been a few arrests of men and boys at ball games, but the big menace—the pool selling—has never been attacked and remains an active and rapidly growing menace, nationwide in its scope.

"More than a year ago I asked Congressman Mann to introduce a bill making gambling on baseball a punishable offense," said President Johnson. "I took my attorney to his office to discuss the subject and to learn what could be done with it. Congressman Mann did not then believe that it was a matter for congress to take up. He thought it was an affair for the separate states. Since then I have talked with several other congressmen in different parts of the country and they believe that gambling on baseball can and should be handled by the congress.

"I believe Washington should interest itself in protecting the nation's sport. Baseball is an American institution. Millions are interested in the sport and attend the games daily. They believe in the integrity of baseball and they have a right to demand that the sport with which they occupy their leisure be kept clean. I shall most solemnly urge that action be taken at the next session."

President Johnson said that he has been busily engaged in collecting data on players and that he soon will be in a position to make disclosures, if there are any to be made.

COAL HEAVING HAS KEPT NAVY GRIDIRON MEN FIT

Heaving coal into the furnaces of the battleship South Carolina has been the unique means by which the midshipmen of the football squad have kept in condition this summer. They worked at it steadily during the three months of the cruise to Hawaiian and other Pacific points, according to Commander George H. Laird, who had charge of them during the period, and were in need of no other kind of training. The football men were kept together on the South Carolina, but had no opportunities for shore practice, except at Honolulu where the party was ashore for three afternoons and had some kicking and worked at formations.

Mike Was Stupid.
Mike Boylan, who for quite some time has tried to keep the news in newspaper, acquired quite some kid a short time back who seems to have inherited the inquisitiveness of daddy.

Mike had been away doing some publicity work for a certain party and when he returned essayed to tell the kiddie all about it.

"And did you ride in a train," asked the youngster.

"Of course I did," said Mike.

"And did you see the ears of the engine?" persisted the child.

"Of course not," laughed Mike, "engines don't have ears."

"Oh, yes, they do," retorted the child. "I've heard about engineers lots of times."

"Got any property about here?" asked the tax collector at the farm house door.

"Yes, I got a small lot," replied the buxom woman, with the gingham apron, who answered the knock.

"Where is it?"

"About two miles down the road from here."

"Is it improved?"

"Well, I got a husband buried there, but I can't say it improves it any."

Air Propellers on Cars.

Before long we are likely to see many motorcars driven by air propellers like those of airplanes. Experiments are being made with such air-driven cars in Europe, and they are said to have worked out very satisfactorily. The power utilizable in this way for a vehicle on land is so great that it has been found practicable to run freight cars on railroads at high speed with an air propeller in front and another behind.—Kansas City Star.

When a Woman is Nervous—Worried

The lives of most women are full of worry. Men's troubles are bad enough, but women's are worse. Worry makes women sick. It pulls them down, and in their weakened condition they are subject to pains, aches, weakness, backaches, headaches and dizzy spells.

Most women neglect their health, and for this they pay the penalty. Any woman will find that neglect does not pay. A little more attention to health would brighten up her life. If she asks her neighbors she finds that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription benefits a woman's whole system. It not only acts upon the troubles and weaknesses peculiar to women, but is an all-round tonic that braces the entire body, overcoming nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, dizziness and a run-down condition.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—"Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine I have ever taken for the nerves and a run-down system. I took the 'Prescription' and found it very beneficial in building up my nerves and my whole system. My general health was so much better after taking it that I can recommend it as an excellent woman's tonic."—Mrs. MINNIE ASHMAN, 5 Elm St.

FOOTBALL IS LEADING SPORT

There is Sentimental Attraction to Game Engendered by Fine Spirit of Sportsmanship.

Football has long been the leading college sport. There is a sentimental attraction to the game engendered by the fine spirit of sportsmanship which exists in every college, big or small, in the nation. Football has advanced with leaps and bounds in the last dozen years. The modern game as we see it today is still football of old shorn of its rougher elements and speeded up by the forward pass and the open game. It is a great game to watch. It is spectacular in every aspect. Individual brilliancy is allowed to sweep across the field unhampered by the delicate organism of team work; yet team work has its part—the greater part—in the success or failure of the game.

From the point of view of the spectator football is the king of sports, not even barring baseball or horse racing. This is accounted for quite naturally by the fact that the sentimental alumni is on hand to cheer his alma mater on and that the undergraduate has a sweetheart, a mother and a sister somewhere in the throng of watchers. No sport can boast of this factor to so great an extent as college football.

Warmth - when and where you need it

KEEP the house warmed all over with your regular heater—and supply the rooms you want to use with the additional comfort-point warmth of a Perfection Oil Heater. It gives out just the heat you require, where you want it, when you need it.

How to exercise the greatest economy in house heating

Rooms and hallways that are used only a few minutes each day are a constant source of wasted heat, greater, probably, than you imagine. Don't "rush" your hot air or steam heater to make only two or three rooms comfortable. The Perfection Oil Heater has solved the heating problem in over a million homes. It is ornamental anywhere and easy to carry about—weighs only a few pounds. A child can light it—and take care of it, for that matter. It burns for about 10 hours on a single gallon of kerosene.

Most hardware, housefurnishing and department stores sell the Perfection, in blue or black finish, with or without nicked trimmings. Ask your dealer to show you one.

COOK WITH GAS 12 MONTHS OF THE YEAR

Have you considered the comparative costs of cooking with coal and cooking with gas?

The average family can easily do all their cooking with 3,000 cubic feet of gas per month at a cost of $6.21 net. This is much less than the cost of one half of a ton of coal and very few families can do all their cooking with this amount.

In other words, it actually costs less in dollars and cents to cook with gas than with coal, to say nothing of the advantage of gas because of its convenience and because of the labor saved.

Gas is always available any time of day or night. Turn a cock and light the gas and you have the heat you desire. Turn off and all expense is stopped.

The hour used each morning in cleaning out the ashes and kindling the fire and waiting for it to come up is saved if you cook with gas.

The time spent in lugging coal and cleaning up the attendant dirt and dust, of ash and coal is saved if you use gas.

And besides gas is actually cheaper.

Think this over carefully and do not start your coal range this fall.

PILGRIM HALF-DOLLARS

Distribution of the Pilgrim half-dollars, commemorating the Tercentenary of the Landing of the Pilgrims, began Monday at the National Shawmut Bank, where a special booth has been arranged on the lower floor. Arrangements have been made for supplying banks throughout New England with the coins, so that out-of-town persons may procure the coins from their local bank.

It is intended that any balance left over after the sale, after deducting the cost of dies, minting charges etc., will be turned over to the Tercentenary Commission, having in charge the improvement of Plymouth Harbor and permanent memorials at Plymouth.

VICTORY MEDALS

Adj. Gen. P. C. Harris of the United States Army has made another appeal to all men who served in the army in the World War to apply for their Victory Medals.

He states that of the 3,757,624 men who served in the army and who are entitled to a medal, but 379,214, or less than one-tenth, have applied for the trophy to date. He would like to have all issued by Armistice Day, when the American Legion Posts in every city and town of the country will have an observance and redistribution of medals to the heroes of their vicinities.

Boston army officers and American Legion officials urge every man of this vicinity to apply as soon as possible to the American Legion tent, Boston Common, opposite Temple place, where a big force of army clerks is present to do all the typewriting and record work, and to forward applications.

GAS PETITION DISMISSED

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities has just handed down its decision in regard to the complaint of customers of the Old Colony Gas Company of the price of gas.

After stating the new rate which went into effect September 1st, the department made the following statement in their decision:

"This complaint resulted. At the first hearing it appeared that the company had not for a considerable period earned or paid any dividends on its preferred or common stock. The recent unexpected and extraordinary increase in the cost of coal and oil threatened its ability to earn even its interest charges. Some relief was essential, and the schedule adopted was designed, in the management's judgment, to distribute more equitably the burden of the increased revenue required and at the same time not to discourage the increase in output so much needed to insure the company's welfare. The new schedule means a net price of $2.61 for the first 1000 cubic feet, with progressive decreases in the average price as the customer's monthly use increases.

The hearing was continued to allow the parties who were leaders in bringing the complaint to examine the company's figures and exhibits. At the adjourned hearing they stated that they were convinced from their examination of the fair need of additional revenue and were disposed to withdraw their objection to a trial of the new schedule.

Until there is a substantial improvement, the new schedule will not in any event yield an excessive or unreasonable profit, nor will it work any material hardship as between customers.

The following is therefore adopted: Ordered that the complaint be dismissed without prejudice.

MOTORCYCLE RACE PLANS

With three national championships to be decided at the big race meet to be held at Reayville on Oct. 22, the Massachusetts Motorcycle Association is losing no time in the preparations for the event.

The meet is scheduled for Saturday at 2:30 P. M., but in the event of rain will be postponed to the following Saturday.

Five red-hot events comprise the program, in which the leading riders of the country will do battle for championship honors and fat cash prizes. No piker in this M. M. A. when it comes to spending money for a purse. A total of $1,155.00 has been provided for this important item.

The riders in all of the professional events will be the cream of the country's racing talent. "Gene" Walker, "Shrimp" Burns, "Sam" Riddle, F. H. Dreyer and Earl Gue will pilot the Indians. "Freddie" Ludlow, Ralph Hepburn, "Jim" Davis and "Jiggs" Price will strive to uphold Milwaukee dignity.

CLAPP MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION

Clapp Memorial basketball players are turning out in large numbers for early season practice at the "gym". Warren and Slatery still battle for honors of the day. Warren declares that our eyesight has been neglected if he is any judge. We stated in one of our issues that these two players were battling for second from the last place, and that we were unable to say which one was the best man. Warren states that there isn't any doubt in his mind about the winner of the position.

With Galvarisky as a possible center for the 1920-21 season, Curtin as a back, Gannon as a forward, playing the opposite corner from Mahoney, and Slatery and Warren battling their way to supremacy over one another there will certainly be something doing in the line of action at the "training camp" these next few weeks.

Miss Nellie Sargent Anderson will conduct classes in gymnastics, folk dancing and games at the Clapp Memorial hall for the rest of the season. Miss Bertha Bailey will be the pianist. The classes will be held at 2.30 for High School girls; 3.30 and 4.30 for grammar school girls; 7.30 for business women. The fee will be $3.50 for girls under 18 years and $5.00 for those who are over this age.

Johnnie Daniels is still on the war path and declares that we should have mentioned him in connection with our little article of a few weeks ago. He says that he did as much as anyone to bring home the bacon for the C. M. A. during the past season. Yes, Johnnie, we agree with you and all that, but don't let them know what happened to that basketball you were carrying last winter. Oh no, we won't tell anyone, but it is funny, to put it in mild terms, how anyone who is a student at the Weymouth High school should be so careless as to leave a basketball hanging around in a train. Possibly you thought the trainmen were organizing a basketball team to defeat our own little C. M. A. Well, always be charitable when its possible to do so without injuring yourself.

The High School football team is fast becoming a formidable piece of machinery under the able coaching of Mr. Ellsworth.

The Cleveland baseball team won their worlds series, and the Boston College players won their best game, but wait until the C. M. A. basketball quiet winds up its next season. There'll be another world's champion to write about then.

Some of our readers evidently overlooked one of the items which appeared in this column in the past month. The item specifically stated that those nicely upholstered davenport which decorate the lounging room at the "gym" were not for the use of "spooners." Did anyone notice anything out of the ordinary taking place during the past two weeks.

CUT PRICES

Several of the big manufacturers of the country have "taken the bull by the horns" and are actually compelling a revival in business. High prices, have effectually checked buying for a long time now, and producers have reached the period where summary action must be taken. They are having difficulty in getting raw materials, which one manufacturer stated, are stored in many parts of the country and thereby impeding production. A slashing of prices, it is claimed, is the only way these raw materials can be forced on the market and thus perhaps, pre-war conditions brought about. At any rate, whether guilty of profiteering or not, producers have and are adopting the right attitude, and should cut prices to the limit that industry may resume its former activities. This should apply especially to the automobile trade, which is experiencing a serious reaction, at present.—Banker and Tradesman.

Which Shall It Be Town Council or a City

The petitions for a change in the Weymouth town government has resurrected the Board of Trade, and President Humphrey has taken the initiative by calling an open meeting for next Wednesday evening for a general discussion of the whole question. He invites the women as well as the men, and promises to have some one from Brookline or Watertown to explain the new representative form of town government which prevails in those towns.

With over 5300 voters it becomes imperative to make a change, because there is no hall, or prospect of a hall that will seat even 2000 voters.

Now does not seem to be the opportune time to establish a city form of government, because of the added expense. Although Weymouth has over 15,000 population it as no center and does not present a city appearance. It covers a large area, and the ward centers are miles apart.

Some form of representative town government seems desirable, and it should be so framed to give all parts of the town representation. Not alone Weymouth, North Weymouth, East Weymouth and South Weymouth, but also Pond Plain, Nash's Corner, Lovell's Corner, Weymouth Center, Weymouth Heights, Idlewell, Wessagusset, North Weymouth Bluffs, and in fact all parts of the town however small.

Instead of six precincts as at present, there should be 10 or 12, possibly more, with representation based upon the total vote at the preceding annual town meeting, say one for every 50 voters, or one for every 25.

The representative town council should have 200 to 300 members, or delegates, women as well as men.

The Brookline town council is composed of 27 from each precinct, with others at-large.

In 1915 the Legislature passed an act entitled, "An Act to provide for precinct voting, limited town meetings and an annual moderator in the town of Brookline," to take effect upon its acceptance by the town of Brookline, therein provided. (Chap. 250 of the Acts of 1915.)

The town of Brookline accepted the act and since its acceptance, the business of the town meeting, other than the election of officers, has been transacted by the limited town meeting, authorized by the act.

The act provided, in substance, that the territory of the town should be divided into precincts; that thereafter the registered MALE voters in each such precinct, should elect by ballot 27 of their number as town meeting members at large, one third for a term of one year, one third for a term of two years and one third for a term of three years, and thereafter said voters of each precinct should elect nine of their number to be such town meeting members-at-large.

It also provided that thereafter the town meeting of Brookline should be limited to, or composed each year of, the registered voters so elected, together with the following, designated, as town meeting members as at large, namely:—

- 1—The members from Brookline in the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts,
- 2—The Moderator,
- 3—Town Clerk,
- 4—The Selectmen,
- 5—The Town Treasurer,—the chairman of each of the following,
- 6—board of assessors,
- 7—of school committee,
- 8—of trustees of public library,
- 9—of trustees of the cemeteries,
- 10—of water board,
- 11—of park commissioners,
- 12—of planning board,
- 13—of committee for planting trees,
- 14—of gymnasium and bath committee, and
- 15—registrars of voters.

"Of course the word "male" should be dropped from the Act or charter.

BECOME A CHARTER MEMBER

There are many names missing from the roll-call of the Women's Auxiliary Unit to the Weymouth Post No. 79, American Legion. Where are all the ladies who signed up at the Legion field day? We want them and every mother, wife and sister of the Legion boys, who have not already gone so, to meet us at G. A. R. hall Monday night at 8 o'clock and get their names among the charter members. There is plenty of room for all, but the time for keeping the charter open is limited. All ladies now holding application cards are requested to present them at this meeting.

Come forward now
And do your share.
The Boys need us now.

FROTHINGHAM For Congress

Make the 14th District a Real Part of New Congress by Electing Frothingham

The country is going to elect a Republican President and a Republican Congress. The 14th District is Republican and should be represented by a Republican.

Frothingham favors an embargo on foreign shipments of coal; he favors justice to Gen. Edwards, YD commander; he favors a tariff to develop and protect industry.

Frothingham's labor record shows consistent and active support of labor bills on which organized labor has been agreed and has deemed feasible.

He was one of the active workers for the Initiative and Referendum, considering it the true solution of labor problems. This is now part of the State constitution.

Frothingham advocates State ownership of street railways (not State control as now) as the best means of reducing fares and improving service.

He stands for uniform child labor law. As a Republican he will have useful influence and prestige in a Republican administration.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Lloyd George Defeats Attack of Asquith Coalition in Debate on Ireland.

BRITISH COAL STRIKE ON

Miners' Proposals for Settlement Laid Before Parliament—Recent Events in Central Europe—Secretary Houston Tells Bankers Taxes Cannot Be Reduced.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Herbert Asquith's grand anti-government combination in England scored a complete failure in its first attempt to overthrow Premier Lloyd George last week. Parliament had assembled, and despite what must be considered the more pressing business of the coal miners' strike, the opposition started in on the Irish question, calling for a public inquiry into the alleged atrocities of the police and military in the island. The motion was made in the names of Henderson and Adamson, labor party leaders, and Asquith and Sir Donald Maclean, leaders of the liberals, and the correspondents said it was supported by every party in the house of commons except the followers of Lloyd George. Notwithstanding such a powerful coalition, after a long and heated debate the government forced the withdrawal of the motion by a vote of 846 to 79.

Lord Robert Cecil, speaking for the motion, denounced the administration in Ireland as one of the most disastrous and tactless things in the country's history, and declared that for the sake of the country's good name the government must clear itself of the charge of connivance in the reprisals. Mr. Asquith followed the same line of argument and described in detail the occurrences in Balbriggan and other towns.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland, set up the government's defense in a fiery speech. He declared the acts of the police were "deplorable but understandable" in view of the doings of the Irish murderers. Asserting that he, and no one else, was the head of the Irish government, Sir Hamar said: "We are breaking Irish terror. It is being broken by the forces of the crown which are being condemned here today. I foresee at no distant date the end of the regime of assassination in Ireland now being carried on by the Irish 'republican army' which has members in every village."

"We are breaking the boycott on the police and we are breaking the refusal to carry troops or police on the railroads. I would rather see every Irish railroad shut down for a hundred years than yield one jot or tittle of our right to carry any one we please."

It is the expressed opinion of certain American correspondents that the Asquith following in this matter, though heavily outvoted in the house of commons, represents the majority of the English people and the most thoughtful section of the country, and that the members of the house cannot much longer ignore the feelings of their constituents. This opinion, however, cannot be accepted unreservedly in view of the bias displayed by these correspondents when dealing with Irish affairs.

Efforts to avert the strike of British coal miners failed, and the men all quit work. Industrial and economic confusion set in at once, but as the week drew to a close the situation was not without its hopeful aspects. The government, the people generally and at least the leaders of the miners' federation fully realized the gravity of the crisis and the threat of greater disaster to the country if the rail and transport workers should strike in sympathy with the miners. Prime Minister Lloyd George presented the matter to the house of commons Tuesday night in a speech that won hearty applause and that showed the government was leaving the door open for an early settlement of the trouble. He was preceded by William Brace, president elect of the miners, who pleaded for permanent peace and made these proposals for settlement:

First, grant of 2 shillings daily raise in pay, subject to review of the whole financial position of the mines at the end of the year.

Second, establish district committees in all districts to deal with the question of increased output, comprising both miners and owners.

Third, before December 31 establish a national wage board of the mining industry on principles to be agreed upon to settle all wage disputes.

Fourth, establish a joint committee of miners and owners in the mines department to settle the question of shares of the product of the mines for the miners and owners and the state.

The premier in response said: "If the miners accepted the government's offer of an impartial tribunal to settle the two shillings a shift question, all arguments in support of their claim would be considered, but undoubtedly the settlement that would best meet the permanent well being of the nation would be a settlement which would promote increased output."

"This would offer to the miners the inducement of a reward for their own labor and would certainly work to the enrichment of the nation by increasing the output of a product which is most essential to the proper conduct of foreign trade."

Extremists in the federation urged that the men left in the mines to operate the pumps be withdrawn and the diggings allowed to fill with water, but the officers of the organization strongly opposed this.

The delegates of the railway men and transport workers decided that they would call a strike if promising negotiations were not under way by Saturday.

Thus far there has not been a great deal of rioting in connection with the strike, though there were disorderly demonstrations in London and in Wales, usually fostered by radicals who are believed to be in the pay of the Russian Bolsheviks. The most serious outbreak was in Whitehall, London, where a parade of the unemployed tried to break into Downing street and fought the police.

Baron Wrangel, who is sustaining the full force of the Russian soviet attacks in southern Russia, met with a severe reverse in the region of Kakhovka bridgehead and his troops were thrown back into the Taurida behind the Dnieper river, which they still control. It was reported that Leon Trotzky himself was directing the movements of the Red army there. On other fronts Wrangel was successful and he was informed by many prisoners that the Red armies would not be able to go through another winter campaign, being without shoes, clothing and stores of food. Dispatches from Constantinople say the American Red Cross has given to General Wrangel about $2,000,000 worth of relief material and is sending him 500,000 tons of supplies a week. The reports that Makno, the guerrilla leader, had deserted Wrangel turn out to be false. On the other hand, Moscow admits that General Budenny, former cavalry leader of the Bolsheviks, has deserted the soviet cause and is operating against the government in the neighborhood of Kiev.

Feeling that the League of Nations is not yet strong enough to insure their safety, and determined that the house of Hapsburg shall not be restored to the throne of Hungary, the Czechoslovaks, Bohemians and Jugo-Slavs have entered into an agreement for mutual offense and defense, which is already known as the "little entente." They assert their league is primarily peaceful and defensive, but admit they have made provisions for a military force if that is necessary.

For some days it appeared as if the Jugo-Slav government had blocked the proposed peaceful discussion with Italy for the settlement of the Adriatic dispute. The Klagenfurt district of Carinthia had voted to remain a part of Austria and the Jugo-Slavs, refusing to recognize the plebiscite, ordered the Serbians to occupy the district. On Thursday they apparently recognized their mistake and promised to evacuate the territory. It was then announced that the representatives of the two countries would begin the negotiations at once. According to a Rome paper, if the Jugo-Slavs refuse to accept the Italian proposals Italy will resume her complete liberty of action. It is declared Italy will ask that the frontier be fixed along the crest of the Julian Alps and that independence be granted Fiume, which will have territorial contiguity with Italy, besides liberty of Zara and the possession of several islands along the coast.

In reply to the identical British and French note regarding the occupation of Vilna, the Polish government neither refuses nor agrees to completely disavow General Zeigowski's action in entering the city, but urges a further inquiry and points out that Lithuania has hardly become a nation yet. The French government, it is said, rather sympathizes with Poland in the matter, because of her difficult situation.

The king of Greece was still alive at this writing, but his condition was so serious that preparations for the succession were being made. In Athens it was understood that, if Alexander should die, the throne would be offered to his brother Paul, but with such conditions that he would not accept it. Then, presumably, it will be offered to a foreign prince, and if he refuse the republic will be proclaimed.

Secretary of the Treasury Houston, in an address before the American Bankers' association in Washington, gave the country warning that there is little chance that taxes will be reduced, because receipts from income and profits taxes are decreasing. In order to meet current bills, including interest on sinking fund charges, said the secretary, and also to retire the floating indebtedness and a considerable part of the Victory notes before the close of the fiscal year 1923, tax receipts must be kept up to the level of not less than $4,000,000,000 a year. Mr. Houston said that on the basis of present diminishing receipts the total for the fiscal year 1921 may not materially exceed that figure.

There is little immediate prospect of the payment of the war debt of foreign nations, according to Mr. Houston, but he said he did not believe the people would receive with favor the proposition to cancel that debt, since they would have to pay taxes to meet the interest and redeem the principal of $10,000,000,000.

Discussing the general credit situation, Mr. Houston said the farmers are "naturally disturbed and distressed," but are seeking relief "through measures, some of which are not practicable, and others of which are suicidal."

The association's thrift committee has planned a three year thrift campaign to reach every family in the country that has no bank account. "The recent orgy of extravagance," declared the committee's report, "has indicated very clearly the need for more popular realization of the need for saving when and as the opportunity presents itself. The time is at hand when thrift and saving will be regarded as not only possibilities, but actual necessities."

Small savers are to be the chief source in financing the normal growth of commerce and industry, the report said, adding that present tax policies offer a serious check to increased investment by holders of large wealth.

The conduct of American affairs in Haiti has been the subject of much heated discussion, and charges of "indiscriminate killing" of natives by the marines, made in a report by Major General Barnett, former commandant of the corps, led Secretary Daniels to summon a court of inquiry. General Barnett now says the matter involves only a small portion of the marine corps on duty in Haiti, and that in general the marines have done their duty splendidly. Admiral Knapp, who has studied conditions in Haiti for Secretary Daniels, says American intervention in the island republic should continue for at least another generation. He admits that perhaps 3,000 natives have been killed in necessary operations since American occupation, but denies that any were killed deliberately or wantonly.

CATTLE FOOD FROM SAWDUST

Material of Considerable Nutritive Value Extracted by Process Recently Discovered.

Investigations carried on by the forest products laboratory of the department of agriculture indicate that a cattle food can be prepared from eastern white sawdust and that it has a considerable nutritive value.

The process was explained before the food and agricultural division of the American Chemical society by Messrs. E. C. Sherrard and G. W. Blanco.

The mixture is prepared by digesting sawdust with dilute sulphuric acid under heavy steam pressure, a process which extracts the sugar and leaves a digested residue. The product usually contains about 15 per cent of moisture.

A business man, to be successful today, MUST ADVERTISE—that is keep his goods before the public in a bright and pleasing way.

CONDENSED SAMPLE BALLOT

The majority of the 1921 women registered in Weymouth will see a national election ballot for the first time in the polling places on Tuesday, Nov. 2.

The Gazette therefore, offers a sample, a portion of what the official ballot will be like. Any one who can mark this ballot can mark the one at the polling place.

The omissions in the presidential ticket are the names of the 18 electors named by each party. They do not count individually. You vote for your party group collectively in the square opposite the names of the presidential candidates.

The principal difference between this and the official ballot is that the larger part of the candidates to be voted for have been omitted, because the explanation by sample is just as clear as by a full ballot.

The instruction of the number of crosses to be made is conspicuous enough to satisfy the most exacting. To the new voters there may be some confusion of names, but if the party designation be noted there is not likely to be any trouble. The real ballot will be folded neatly probably in three or four folds, but when opened up any one of the folds will be very much like the sample which is subjoined.

MANY FAILURES DUE TO RUBBER

Some Tests Recommended by Department of Agriculture to Find Reliability.

POOR RINGS CAUSE TROUBLE

Four Inches of Rubber Should Stretch to Ten Inches and Then Return to Original Length—Sample Should Not Break.

The caller, who already had knocked twice, was putting her hand on the hooked screen door to see if rattling it would arouse her neighbor, when Mrs. Jessup appeared at the basement door. In her arms were a number of jars of canned fruit, and she looked so disturbed that her caller wondered what had happened.

Catching sight of the caller, Mrs. Jessup cried: "Just a minute, until I place these jars on the table and I'll let you in." The jars deposited, she hastened to unfasten the door.

"Have you been standing there long?" she inquired. "I'm sorry I didn't hear you knock, but I was so upset at what I found in my storage closet this morning that I guess if the Angel Gabriel had sounded his trumpet I wouldn't have heard him."

What She Found.

In answer to her caller's sympathetic inquiry as to the trouble, she continued:

"I've always had splendid luck canning fruits and vegetables until this year; in fact, I have boasted that I never lost more than two or three jars in a season, but this year"—she threw up her hands—"every few days I find another jar that is 'working,' and this morning there were five down there sizzling away. The fruit and vegetables I have put up cost so much, to say nothing of the sugar, that I could sit down and weep to think of the loss of money it entails, besides my work and time.

"And the worst of it is I can't see what is the trouble. If I knew, I could avoid it in canning the late fruits and vegetables. I've done everything 'according to Hoyle,' just the way I always have, and yet they don't keep this year. I know the price of commercially canned food is going to be ever so high next winter, and I wanted to save by putting up my own. Besides, we like the home-canned variety better. But a few more spoiled cans and all the profit in home canning will be gone in my case. What do you suppose is the trouble?"

The caller asked a number of questions, the last of which was: "Did you test your rubber rings?"

"Why, no; I never have," Mrs. Jessup replied.

"Maybe you never have, but I found it necessary this year," interrupted her friend, "and I believe poor rings are at the root of your trouble. I hear the country is flooded with cheap ones this year. Everything that enters into their manufacture and sale has gone up, and many manufacturers, in order to put on the market a medium-priced product, have reduced the quality in the rings they are making. I'm told. A few days or a few weeks after the jars are stored these rings commence to deteriorate, the air gets in, and the contents begin to spoil.

Testing the Rings.

"I'd rather waste a few rings testing them than lose a whole lot of valuable food by not doing it. I had to test several brands, when I started canning, before I found one that seemed to be all right."

"How do you test can rings? I don't understand how you could, but if that's the cause of my canned stuff spoiling I want to know how to test them."

"I use the tests that the United States department of agriculture recommends," replied the visitor. "There are a number of these tests which may be applied; but if a ring passes successfully the two that I am going to tell you about, you can be pretty sure it is all right.

"The first is to cut a six-inch piece out of a ring; take hold of the ends so that there are four inches between the fingers; stretch the piece along a ruler until the fingers are ten inches apart. The sample should not break. "The second is what they call the tensile strength test. Fill a light-weight pail with one gallon and seven pints of water (total weight approximately 17 pounds). Place the jar ring around an empty spool; pass a wire through the center of the spool and fasten to the handle of the pail; then pass the round handle of a wooden spoon or broom through the ring and lift gently. The ring should not break. "You test the rings before you can anything more and see if they are all right. There may be something else the cause, but I doubt if in this instance."

GRAPE JUICE USEFUL TO FLAVOR DESSERTS

Ample Supply Is Easily Obtained by Housekeeper.

Unfermented Product, Properly Made and Bottled Will Keep for Indefinite Period if Not Exposed to the Atmosphere.

Wise housekeepers can have plenty of grape juice for use not only as a beverage but as flavoring in various tempting desserts. The following directions for making it are given by the United States department of agriculture:

Only clean, sound, well-ripened but not overripe grapes should be used. These may be crushed by a potato masher or some similar implement, or the juice may be pressed out in an ordinary cider mill. Pour immediately into a glass or enameled vessel and allow it to stand overnight. Drain the juice from the sediment and run through several thicknesses of clean flannel. Pour into clean bottles, leaving space at the top for the liquid to expand when hot. Put bottles on a false bottom in a wash boiler, if no commercial pasteurizer is available; fill boiler with water to within an inch or so of the tops of the bottles. Place a thermometer in one of the bottles and heat until the juice reaches a temperature of 180 degrees; then take the bottles out and seal or cork them immediately. Only new corks that have been soaked for 80 minutes in water at a temperature of about 140 degrees should be used. It is well to take the further precaution of sealing the corks with paraffin or sealing wax to prevent the entrance of mold germs.

Grape juice may also be made by adding one pint of water to every five pounds of grapes. Concord and Niagara make an acceptable product. Crush the grapes, add the water, bring nearly to boiling point, and strain. Add one-half cupful of granulated sugar to every quart of juice. Bring just to a boil, pour into boiled bottles or cans, place in water bath, and boil ten minutes; seal air-tight.

Unfermented grape juice properly made and bottled will keep indefinitely if not exposed to the atmosphere or to infection from mold germs. When a bottle is once opened, however, the contents should be used as soon as possible.

TO REMOVE TARNISH FROM THREE METALS

Rottenstone Mixed With Oil Is Substance Most Used.

Oxalic Acid, Buttermilk or Vinegar Are Cleaning Agents Suggested by Household Experts—Whiting Takes Up Moisture.

The tarnish on copper, brass and bronze is copper carbonate. It may be removed by friction, or dissolved in weak acids.

Rottenstone mixed with oil to a creamy consistency is the common substance used on these metals. After this cleaner has been applied the metal should be polished with a soft cloth. A final rubbing with dry rottenstone or whiting will give the metal an even brighter luster.

Oxalic acid solution, buttermilk or vinegar, especially when warmed, quickly dissolves the tarnish on these metals. All traces of these cleaning agents must be removed, however, or the metal will tarnish again very quickly, say household specialists of the United States department of agriculture. Washing the metal in water, drying it, and rubbing it with dry whiting is usually effective. The whiting not only takes up moisture but polishes by friction.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

If you want bacon to be crisp, the fat must be poured off continually.

The logical place to use sugar in the diet is at the close of a meal.

Medicine stains will disappear from linen if strong ammonia is applied.

The apples used in apple fritters should be the kind that cook quickly.

If you send frocks or blouses to a laundry it is wiser to remove any large or expensive buttons beforehand.

mops and brooms, soon transformed the community into a spotless town. The former soldiers and sailors, who garbed themselves in denim overalls and olive drab shirts for the occasion, remarked that it wasn't nearly as arduous a task as some of the "policing" jobs they had been set to do while in the service.

Oldest and Youngest Members.

After extensive research, Kansas members of the Legion believe that they have found the oldest and youngest Legion members in the state. Col. Ezra B. Fuller, member of the Leavenworth post, is seventy-one years old and has four wars to his credit—the Civil, Indian, Spanish-American and World wars. Colonel Fuller is still on duty at the staff college, Fort Leavenworth. James W. Weed of Lawrence had just passed his fourteenth birthday when the United States entered the war. One year later Weed, so the story goes, slipped by the recruiting officials and was accepted in the navy, where he served as seaman, second class. Weed, who has just reached his eighteenth birthday, took a prominent part in "Est La Guerre," a play produced by Eli F. Dorsey post of Lawrence.

GALBRAITH IS NEW LEADER

Ohio Man Chosen National Commander of American Legion at Cleveland Convention.

F. W. Galbraith, Jr., of Cincinnati, wearer of the Distinguished Service Cross and two French decorations for heroism in the Meuse-Argonne offensive, in which he was wounded while commanding the One Hundred and Forty-seventh Infantry, was unanimously elected national commander of the American Legion at the recent convention in Cleveland.

Mr. Galbraith was commissioned major in the First Infantry, Ohio National Guard, in 1916, and the same year was promoted to colonel. He was assigned to the One Hundred and Forty-seventh Infantry in 1917 and remained in command of that organization until the end of the war. He took part in the St. Mihiel drive and served in the Baccarat and Ypres-Lys sectors. Since 1908, Mr. Galbraith has been treasurer of the Western Paper Goods company of Cincinnati. He is forty-six years old.

The convention elected the following vice commanders: John G. Emory, Grand Rapids, Mich.; E. J. Winslett, Sabeville, Ala.; Thomas J. Goldingay, Newark, N. J.; C. G. Pendill, Kenosha, Wis., and J. G. Scrugham, Reno, Nev. John W. Inzer of Montgomery, Ala., was elected national chaplain.

The convention overwhelmingly endorsed the Legion's fourfold optional compensation bill, known as the Fordney bill, passed by the house at

F. W. Galbraith, Jr., Newly Elected National Commander.

Its last session and now pending in the senate. The delegates voted to make no change in the political restriction clause in the Legion constitution, and reiterated the organization's position of "strict neutrality" in all disputes between capital and labor.

Resolutions advocating complete exclusion of Japanese immigrants and denial of citizenship to "these unsimilable people" were adopted, together with numerous other recommendations regarding legislation designed to foster and safeguard 100 per cent Americanism.

2 DELEGATES ALSO G. A. R.'S

Special Welcome Extended to Representatives at Convention Who Had Served at Other Wars.

Two distinguished delegates to the American Legion national convention at Cleveland received a special welcome from Franklin D'Oiler, the retiring commander, when it was learned that they were also members of the Grand Army of the Republic. They were Lieut. Col. Marshall W. Wood, U. S. A., retired, of Boise, Idaho, and Dr. Wesley Thompson of Huntington Park, Cal.

Lieutenant Colonel Wood, who is seventy-four years old, was wounded twice in the Civil war, served in the Spanish-American and Indian wars and was on active duty during the World War. He served as the first commander of a Legion post at Boise.

Doctor Thompson, a spry young man of seventy-six, served for two years in the Civil war. He attempted to enlist at the start of the World War but was at first rejected. In October, 1918, he succeeded in obtaining a commission as a first lieutenant in the medical corps and served for some time in army camps in southern California.

GREETINGS FROM V. OF F. W.

Veterans of Foreign Wars Send Message to Legion During Organization's National Encampment.

Greetings to The American Legion from the Veterans of Foreign Wars were extended in the following message during the encampment of the latter organization:

"Whereas, the twenty-first national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is now in session at Washington, D. C., and "Whereas, the ideals and principles of this organization are kindred to those of The American Legion, now therefore,

"Be it resolved, that the national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars extend its cordial greetings to The American Legion."

DISREGARD.

"Why do you insist that the farmer is not properly considered? Everybody is talking about the importance of agricultural production."

"Maybe it's something like professional jealousy," replied Farmer Corn-tassel. "We go to the county fair expectin' to have all kinds of a fuss over the prize pigs and pumpkins and find that the whole crowd has rushed off to the trottin' races and the movin' pictures."

Indefinite.

"They're engaged."

"When are they going to marry?"

"That's very indefinite. She has agreed to wait until he earns enough to support a wife, and at the present cost of living that's not what you'd call a very bright prospect."

Held to Crude Methods.

"Why did you become one of these taxicab bandits?" inquired the philanthropic visitor.

"Well, you see, I couldn't afford to have a taxicab of my own and depend on collecting fares."

A Palpable Hit.

"I hadn't been long married before I was very much struck with my wife's management."

"What struck you most about her ways?"

"The rolling pin."

Character Reading.

"That woman next door must have great wealth and a lovely disposition."

"How can you tell?"

"She has managed to keep the same cook for six weeks."

Economy.

"Why did you wear your furs all summer?"

"To avert some of the high cost of living," replied Mrs. Fluff. "It kept the moths from eating them."

GOING TOO FAR.

"The cook puts a lot of herself into everything she does."

"I wish she'd keep her hair out of the soup."

Difference.

Opinions differ, some declare. A bulldog is an ugly brute. And yet he has admirers fair. Who vow that he is sweetly cute.

A Dilemma.

"Spent it in a bad way about his debts."

"He certainly is. He can't settle down and his old man won't settle up."

His Lack.

"The real poet is a seer."

"That may be, but he is seldom a financier."

The Logical One.

"I wonder if it is dark inside the big ships?"

"Why, don't they always have a skylight?"

Their Advantage.

"Good typewriters are always in demand."

"No wonder; they have their business at their fingers' ends."

Its Sort.

"What's oral surgery, pa?"

"I guess it is the kind that mends a man's speech."

Fads And Fancies Of Fashion

EVERY FIGURE IS WELL SUITED.

IF ALL women belonged to "the perfect thirty-six" in the model class, the day of costumers would be easy and the variety in suits considerably less. But designers begin by making garments for model figures and continue by giving thought to the too slender woman. She is fairly easy to dispose of—for slenderness is adorable in the eyes of fashion artists—and then comes the task that costs them hours of thought and endeavor. They must construct clothes that will give the appearance of slenderness to the stout woman.

Leaving the perfect thirty-six to choose any style she wishes, since all are quite likely to look well on her, this article devotes itself to the need of the slender and the stout woman. For the former the suit at the left of the two pictured is recommended. Gray or tan, in many shades, lend bulk to the figure and materials with considerable body, as duvety or velvet conceal angles. One can imagine the suit at the left in beige or grey duvety with collar and fur bands of fitch or squirrel fur. An inset gorge in the body of the coat gives it pleasing lines and a double ripple in the skirt widens the figure at the hips. At the front and back the coat is lengthened into a flat panel finished with bands of fur, and the same fur makes the straight, high collar.

Jersey cloth proves its virtues for the stout woman in the figure at the right. The designer has cut both skirt and coat as long as the mode allows and has cleverly lengthened the waistline by means of folds stitched in the body of the coat. A folded belt of the goods makes almost no definition at the waistline and even the arms are lengthened by shaping the sleeves to extend part way over the back of the hand. A soft collar reaches the chin, fastened with three buttons that add to the long line made by a row that extends downward to a point several inches below the waistline.

GAY CAPS TO CHEER THE MORNING.

RIBBONS are endlessly adaptable to the pretty, decorative belongings of women, and there is a long list of dress accessories and furnishings that have been newly designed, in anticipation of holidays. Even the amateur seamstress can undertake to make them, for they require little knowledge of sewing. This year, articles for the dressing table—and other bedroom fixtures—appear to have claimed extra attention: Powder boxes and glasses, perfume bottles, vases, bonbon boxes, telephone screens, night lamp shades, vanity cases and candle shades, are all decked out in ribbons, or entirely made of them, and then there are workbaskets, pillows and foot rests and innumerable bags to include in the list. Another might be made up of dress accessories.

A list of things made of ribbon would start off with breakfast caps and end with boudoir slippers and include nearly all the lingerie that is required, since ribbons play an important role in underthings. The new caps employ laces, net, georgette and chiffon with ribbons, and it would take a book to describe the many different interpretations of this cheerful contributor to the good beginning of a day. Four simple but very pretty examples appear in the illustration. At the top a cap is shown made of wide silk lace. It is gathered to make a frill about the face, with a band of narrow, picot-edged ribbon over the gathering. Shirred satin ribbon is applied in bows and ends to the lace and the cap is lined with georgette crepe.

At the left of the group another lace cap, lined with georgette, is decorated with small rosettes made of narrow ribbon. Where the lace is gathered in at the center of the crown, a bow with long loops is posed. There are satin ribbon ties looped and tied with narrow ribbon. A very wide and soft satin ribbon makes the cap at the right, which is gathered into a frill about the face, where flowers, simulated by shirred ribbons, are set on. Another cap of wide satin ribbon has frills of lace about the face and neck, headed by a quilling of narrow ribbon, and is distinguished by a chin strap edged with the quilling and fastened to the cap at each side by ribbon flowers.

If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast the jewel lies,

This world has nothing to bestow;
From our own selves our bliss must flow,

GOOD THINGS FOR THE FAMILY TABLE.

A good dish for a busy day, when a good, substantial meal is needed, is:

Irish Stew en Casserole.—Have two pounds of chops from the best end of a neck of mutton, trimmed of all fat. Have pared and sliced two quarts of potatoes and six onions. Put a layer of potatoes and onions in the bottom of the casserole, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place the meat above the vegetables, seasoning well, then a layer of vegetables as before. Pour boiling water or broth to come nearly to the top of the last layer. Cover and cook gently in a moderate oven for three hours.

Baked Sweet Potatoes and Bacon.—Scrub potatoes or yams well and put into the oven to bake. When nearly done, remove from the oven and carefully remove the skin. With two wooden toothpicks fasten a slice of bacon around each; set them into the oven in a baking dish and bake until the bacon is cooked. Serve at once.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.—Chop five or six cold boiled potatoes fine, add a half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of pepper. Have ready one-third of a cupful of fat, tried out of salt pork, hot in an iron frying pan. Put in the potatoes and stir while they become hot, then spread evenly over the pan, cover and let stand until brown on the bottom; with a spatula carefully fold over the other half and turn onto a hot platter. Garnish with parsley.

Banana Fluff.—Peel three bananas and cover them with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one of grapefruit juice; cover and place on ice. After an hour mash them and heat well, adding one-half cupful of powdered sugar and the unbeaten whites of three eggs, one at a time. When light add a teaspoonful or two of vanilla and serve in glasses with one-third fresh fruit (or canned will do), dusted with minced pistachio nuts or candied mint leaves.

Rice With Strawberry Sauce.—Cook rice as usual, and chill; mold if desired. Serve in individual dishes with fresh strawberries crushed, mixed with sugar and whipped cream. Strawberries which have been put up crushed, with equal parts of sugar, are fully as good as the fresh fruit.

The most selfish man in the world is the most unselfish with his own sorrow. He does not leave a single misery of his untold to you or unshared by you. He gives you all of them. The world becomes a syndicate formed to take stock in his private cares, worries and trials.—Jordan.

SOMETHING TO EAT.

A sandwich is a dainty appetizer which is always welcome; here are two or three worth remembering:

Cucumber Sandwiches.—Cut rounds from any variety of bread; spread with butter and cover until ready to serve. Pare, slice and cover with cold water the cucumbers to be used. Have ready French dressing made with a little scraped onion and finely-chopped parsley. Dry the cucumbers on a cloth, stir in the dressing and set a slice between two pieces of prepared bread. Garnish with parsley and serve at once. Thin slices of ripe tomato made good sandwich filling, treating the same as the cucumbers.

Milwaukee Sandwich.—For each sandwich toast two slices of white bread, and one of rye. Set one slice of toast on heart leaves of lettuce. On this set four broiled or fried oysters; cover with the slice of rye bread and on this lay two thin slices of the breast of chicken, two crisp slices of bacon and horseradish sauce; cover with the last piece of toast and arrange on this sliced radishes and sweet pickles. Remove the skin from a small tomato, cut out the hard center and fill with sauce tartare; arrange on a lettuce leaf beside the sandwich.

Pineapple Tapioca Sponge.—Heat one pint of grated pineapple in a double boiler; add half a cupful of boiling water, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; then stir in one-half cupful of quick-cooking tapioca. Stir occasionally and cook 20 minutes, or until the tapioca is clear; add half a cupful of sugar and the juice of half a lemon, then fold in the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Serve hot with top milk and sugar.

Caramel Frosting.—Cook one cupful of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of caramel sirup and one-fourth of a cupful of boiling water to a firm ball, pour in a fine stream on the white of one egg beaten stiff, beat until slightly stiffened then spread on the cake. Decorate with walnut meats.

What Women Love

There is a world of pretty neckwear that every woman will love to receive and almost any woman can make. A favorite piece consists of a collar with vestee to match, like that shown above.

Pretty Powder Bowls

Lace and Satin Piece

Wide satin ribbon and Val lace give a good account of themselves in the attractive neckpiece shown above. It is a vestee and collar combined, with a small "V"-shaped chemisette of lace, set in the vestee. The collar and chemisette are edged with narrow lace.

Charm to Ribbon

A morning jacket, a boudoir cap, a powder puff and little hand mirror, all owing their charm to lovely ribbons, are gift suggestions appearing above. The jacket and cap are made by setting together strips of narrow satin ribbon and Val lace.

MEN'S CLUB

The subject for discussion at the supper of the Men's Club of Union church on Wednesday evening was a very timely one, now that Weymouth is considering a change of government. Frank Hammersley, the town manager of Norwood, spoke on "Town Manager Form of Government." What he did not touch upon was brought out by questions by ex-Selectman E. W. Hunt, Judge A. E. Avery, Fred Tarbox, Rev. J. C. Justice, J. Herbert Walsh, Mr. Vining and others. A good supper was enjoyed and a profitable evening passed.

At the regular meeting of Corps 102 last evening plans were completed for inspection, and there was balloting for candidates. National general order and department general order were read.

Mrs. Brassill and several members attended the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hubbard on Wednesday evening. The report of sale of tickets for movie show on Monday evening is very encouraging.

Corps 102 has accepted the invitation to attend the fair of the S. of V. in Quincy.

Glad to report that Mrs. Mary E. Holbrook, P. D. P., is very much better. Regret that Mrs. Harriet Whitcomb is threatened with pneumonia.

MARIONETTES AT HINGHAM

Tony Sarg, whose company of marionettes will be seen in Hingham Wednesday, Nov. 2, afternoon and evening, is well known to theatre-goers as the creator of the artistic marionettes which have delighted the grown people as well as the children of New York for several seasons in a score of fairy plays. Just because an artist had the hobby of collecting toys the most life-like puppets that ever graced a miniature stage came into being. Come and see this troupe of tiny actors perform.

TOWN BRIEFS

Election next Tuesday. Yesterday was the first rainy day this month. On Oct. 5 there was a brief shower. Thayer Academy team will meet Weymouth High tomorrow at the Clapp field. Submarine boat S-23 was launched at the Fore River yards on Wednesday, the sponsor being Miss Barbara Sears of Quincy, the daughter of ex-Mayor Sears. The daylight-saving time comes to an end Saturday night. A new timetable on the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad goes into effect Sunday. Tax bills may not be mailed before the middle of November. The law requires that property owners shall be ordered before Nov. 1 to remove all moths and caterpillars from their property. These notices generally go out with the tax bills. Indications point to a majority in Weymouth for Harding and Coolidge, but the Congressional contest is in doubt. Complete returns of the Weymouth vote will be found in the Gazette and Transcript next week. Members of the Ladies Social Circle of the White church met Wednesday with Mrs. Winslow M. Tirrell and worked all day for the coming fair. A box of lunch was enjoyed at noon.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

"The Hottentot" is the odd title which has been attached to the newest farce success in which William Collier is starring. It will be presented at the Hollis Street Theatre for a limited engagement, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, beginning Monday, Nov. 1. Election-day night the returns will be read from the stage. Sam H. Harris, who is now producing independently of his one-time partner, George M. Cohan, presents "The Hottentot", which is the latest work of Victor Mappes and Mr. Collier. An elaborate production has been given the new play which is clean, up-to-the-second and full of action. It is in three acts. As the score of characters are supposed to be persons of wealth and high social position, the play allows for rich and elaborate settings, which are both artistic and beautiful. Mr. Collier has personally staged and supervised the production of "The Hottentot", and his new role is one that allows his peculiar comedy methods full sway.

TEACHERS CONVENTION

Frederick W. Hilton of Weymouth High was elected president of the Norfolk County Teachers Association at its convention Friday in Tremont Temple. Other officers elected are: Vice-presidents, Richard D. Tucker of Brookline, Ralph Westcott of Walpole and George H. Gilbert of Wellesley; secretary, Susan Avery of Weymouth; treasurer, Frederick A. Chapman of Braintree; councillors, Celina Lewis of Brookline, Thomas Peters of Needham, Mary Richardson of Dedham, Leroy L. Woods of Quincy and Lydia Hopkins of Randolph.

QUINCY THEATRE

Manager C. R. Black announces two of the biggest dramatic plays that have ever been shown in Quincy with no advance in prices, for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 1, 2 and 3. "Brother Against Brother." One of the most powerful plays ever written, will be shown and the manager, as well as Mr. Luttringer have gone to unusual expense in order to give this greatest of plays to the people of Quincy. A play based on the divorce question and on the great sermon: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."—John 8-7.

"Brother Against Brother" is not a problem play. The secret that pretty Marjorie has is a very natural one, not a bit to her discredit. Miss Kingsley plays the role and it is fair to say of her that it is one of the very best bits of work she has yet given during her stay in Quincy. Marjorie is a schoolteacher in a country town. Perfectly respectable, quiet and modest, she somehow antagonizes the good-will of many of the village folks, so that she is forced to give up her position. It is then that the Rev. Joseph Tucker, wealthy, good-looking and progressive, gives her a home and the gossip has a lot more to talk about.

Sunday benefit concert to be given Sunday, Oct. 31, by the Quincy lodge of Eagles for hte orphans of Quincy. Three acts of vaudeville and a 6-reel feature picture. People of Weymouth are requested to attend this benefit. No advance in prices.

Lena Rivers, just as hundreds of us have seen her laughing from the pages of the famous novel by Mrs. Mary Jane Holmes, will appear at the Quincy Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 4, 4 and 6. In the person of Miss Ann Kingsley. The name of the principal character is also the name of the play and the play is a story which in book form, has become familiar to thousands of people.

The character of Lena Rivers is about as complex as it is possible to find. From a simple country girl unfettered, unadorned, almost unloved, she changes to a real "Society" girl but a sincere and honest one. To interpret the role requires an actress of far more than ordinary ability and this Miss Kingsley certainly proves herself to be. Surely no scene could be more effective than that in which Lena, left motherless and never having known even who her father was, is carried off by force in a basket to the home of her aristocratic relatives. Almost pathetic are the situations in which she finds herself, when she reaches the home of these relatives, society people, while her love scenes with her real father and Durwood Belmont are tender and appealing.

Fatal Accident At Weymouth Heights

The Weymouth Heights station was the scene of a sad fatal accident Saturday evening about 7 o'clock. Mrs. Katherine Barry of North Scituate alighted from a South Shore inward train with two children intending to take an electric car to visit her sister at Quincy Point. As at Weymouth and East Weymouth, there is no platform for the inward-bound passengers, and they alight almost upon the outward-bound track. The two children crossed the outward track safely, but Mrs. Barry was struck by the express for Hingham and died in a few minutes.

The body was not badly mangled, but one foot was cut off at the ankle.

The express train did not stop, the engineer probably being unaware of the accident, but the crew of the local train carried Mrs. Barry into the station and Dr. W. A. Drake was called. She was dead when he arrived and Medical Examiner J. E. Fraser was notified.

Only one man is employed by the railroad at this station and he goes off duty at 5 P. M. The agent did not know of the accident until the next morning.

The children, 8 and 10 years of age, were taken to the home of their aunt, Mrs. John Longfellow of Washington street, Quincy Point. Only a few weeks ago their father died.

Nearly 2000 Women Registered for Election

Weymouth now has over 5300 voters 3340 men and 1981 women.

Registration closed for the Presidential election last Saturday evening, and was brisk during the last two days as 126 were registered on Friday, and 412 on Saturday. Of these 107 were men and 421 women.

Since registration was reopened Sept. 29, there have been added 255 men and 1239 women, so that the number of men and women by precincts is:

Precinct	Men	Women
Precinct 1	582	331
Precinct 2	532	278
Precinct 3	659	363
Precinct 4	414	252
Precinct 5	652	442
Precinct 6	551	318
Total	3340	1981

It will be seen that Ward Three has the most men by a narrow margin, while Precinct Five has the most women.

Counting the men and the women, the two South Weymouth precincts now have more voters than the two East Weymouth precincts. The Weymouth precinct is third and the North Weymouth precinct, fourth.

Next Tuesday the voting will be by precincts in the usual places, the polls being open from 5.45 A. M. to 4 P. M. Specimen ballots have already been posted and Town Clerk Merchant has received the official ballots.

14-RIDE TICKETS

The trustees of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. announce "because some employes have been abusing the present form of ticket, passengers will no longer be allowed to give up their tickets to conductors or operators of cars for the 14th ride. In the future all 14-ride-for-$1 tickets must be redeemed at agencies which the trustees have designated. The same action has been taken in all the divisions."

In connection with this same order, which goes into effect today, the fare from East Weymouth to Hingham is a straight 10-cent fare and on the Queen Ann's Corner line; a 10-cent fare to High street, making a reduction of 4 2/7 cents on each fare to these places.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION

Weymouth residents are well represented among the hundreds of Massachusetts men and women who have taken university extension courses in the past year. Some 17,000 residents of this State have enrolled in courses offered by the division of university extension during 1919-1920. There has been a steady increase in the enrollments recorded by the division over those recorded for the preceding year. The very fact that these courses and classes can be taken during the spare time of working men and women has served to make them attractive to persons engaged in business or industrial occupations throughout the day.

The division of university extension was established by the legislature in order to bring opportunities for further education within the reach of all ambitious men and women. As the division offers one hundred and thirty courses by class and correspondence there is a wide range of subjects from which the person seeking to improve himself may choose a course. The division is ready to establish a class and send an instructor to conduct the work when there is a sufficient number of enrollments to assure an average attendance of twenty persons who wish to study the same subject. All residents of Massachusetts may take correspondence or class work with the division. Instruction is free; a small charge is made to cover the cost of lesson material and textbooks used in class and course work.

Among the correspondence students to whom certificates have lately been issued upon the completion of their courses with the division are: Flora M. Haviland, 35 Kensington road, Weymouth, English composition A;

Ralph M. Sanborn, South Weymouth, gasoline automobile; Sister Mary, 3 Commercial street, Weymouth, elementary French; Joseph Waring, South Weymouth, power plant economist.

CANNING CLUB

We quote from the Norfolk County Agricultural Home-Making Bulletin:

The Weymouth High School canning club exhibit sent by the Weymouth girls to the Eastern States Exposition, won the first prize of $25.00 in its class of club exhibits, competing with exhibits from Connecticut, New Hampshire and Delaware. The Weymouth girls in their exhibit showed several complete dinner menus, a collection of apple products, jams, jellies and preserves, stories, records and a clever booklet called "Clips from the Canning Club Log." The exhibit was the center of interest in its section of the hall and many appreciative comments were made on the work shown by the girls.

Boys from Norfolk County stood well up on the list of vegetable prize winners. In the collection of ten kinds of vegetables, Adrian Barnes of Weymouth won second place and Hathaway White of Westwood, the third. In collections of five, Hathaway White was second and Harry Howard of Walpole, third. Hathaway White also won first on parsnips and second on onions. Max Greenberg of West Medway was first on onions; George Downer of Westwood, first on beets; Coyle Brothers of Weymouth, first on cabbage, with Harry Howard third; on pumpkins, John Jennings of Weymouth earned a third premium.

SLOW DRAWBRIDGE

Twice recently the new drawbridge on Quincy avenue has been opened to allow vessels to pass through. One afternoon it remained open when a tug took a barge to the Sheppard wharf and moored it and then returned half an hour later. Hundreds of people and automobiles had a long wait as men were returning from the shipyard. Glad to have coal, but half an hour is too long to keep a drawbridge open.

SIMPLE PLAN TO PREVENT KNOCKS

Annoyance Found in Old-Model Automobiles Caused by Too High Compression.

GASKET REMEDIES TROUBLE

Composition-Board Device Raises Engine Cylinders and Eliminates Annoyance—Less Wear and Tear Thrown on Bearings.

Owners of old-model automobiles are annoyed by a knocking which occurs under a light load. This usually sounds like a carbon or advanced spark knock, while as a matter of fact too high compression is the cause.

Perhaps the most simple method used to reduce high compression is by removing the cylinders and placing a thick gasket between the cylinders and the crank case.

How Scheme is Worked.

Remove the cylinders. Place them on a bench, cleaning both flange and engine base thoroughly. From a sheet of flat tin make a template, which must be an exact reproduction of the base of the cylinders, except that all the openings, such as piston and bolt holes, are about one-eighth inch larger than those in the cylinders.

The template is used as a pattern for marking out and forming the cylinder-raising gasket. This method permits the gasket to be made without the necessity of placing it under the cylinder after each operation to see that it is right. A copper asbestos jacket cannot be used as it cannot expand. After it is in place and the key is put in the wire is clipped and removed.

Procure a sheet of red composition board one-quarter inch thick, then, using the template as a pattern, mark out the cylinder and bolt holes and the outside form on the composition board, using a gasket-cutting tool, as shown in Fig. 1, and a drill press, carefully cut out piston and bolt holes, making these one-eighth inch larger than the true diameters. With a bandsaw, or keyhole saw, cut the composition board to conform to the outside shape of the pattern.

Cylinders Are Raised.

Remove all the burred edges with a file. Place the composition board on the engine base and bolt the cylinder

A Composition-Board Gasket Will Raise Your Engine Cylinders and Eliminate High Compression and Other Engine Knocks.

Into place, as shown in Fig. 2. Care must be taken not to use too much shellac.

By this means the cylinders are raised, resulting in a larger compression space and, of course, less compression is created. Further, the engine will pull much better and less wear and tear will be thrown upon the engine bearings.

It will be necessary to readjust the valves after the job has been completed.—Ronald L. Prindle in Popular Science Monthly.

CAUSE OF POUNDING ENGINE

If Regular and Continuous It is Likely to Be From Lost Motion in the Bearings.

If a pound in the engine is regular and continuous it is likely to be from lost motion in the bearings. If it is irregular and occasional it is more likely to be due to preignition caused by incandescent carbon or from imperfect electrical connections. If the pounding is accompanied by occasional missing, especially if the missing is more frequent when the car is running than when the engine is idling, it is more apt to be due to imperfect electrical connections.

ESCHWEV CHEAP GREASE CUPS

More Than Likely to Become Worthless in Short Time When New Ones Must Be Bought.

Cheap grease cups are more than likely to become worthless in a short time. It is almost impossible for the ordinary man to turn one of these cups down, and even if he is able to, the operation may not send the grease home where it is needed. The only remedy for this condition is to install really efficient grease cups or get a lubrication system of the kind that puts grease in the bearings under high pressure.

TO REPLACE VALVE SPRINGS

Good Plan to Compress Each In Vise Until Short Enough to Go Easily Into Place.

An easy way of replacing valve springs consists of compressing each spring in a vise until it is short enough to go easily into place and allowing the holding key to be inserted, and, while in this compressed condition, tying it with wire so that it cannot expand. After it is in place and the key is put in the wire is clipped and removed.

PLAN FOR THINNING CEMENT

High-Test Gasoline or Bisulphide of Carbon is Proper Agent—Oil is Deadly Foe.

The attention of car owners should be directed to the inadvisability of thinning rubber cement with ordinary gasoline, which contains too much oil to be safe for that purpose. Oil is a deadly foe of rubber. High-test gasoline or bisulphide of carbon is the proper agent for thinning rubber cement.

FIX CRACKED WATER JACKET

Not as Serious Trouble as Many Imagine—Examine to See if There is Leak in Cylinder.

A cracked water jacket is not as serious trouble as one might imagine. The cylinder should be removed and the inside examined to make sure that there is no leak into the cylinder. If there is, that must be repaired also. If not, the leak in the water jacket can be welded and the casting made serviceable again.

AUTOMOBILE PAINTS

Vaseline to which a little powdered gum camphor has been added, the whole being heated over a slow fire, will prevent the formation of rust on tools.

A recently patented automobile windshield has a band of silvered glass along the top to serve as a rear vision mirror for all the occupants of a car.

When brakes squeak when applied it is due to the brake linings becoming worn so that the heads of the rivets holding the linings to the bands strike the drum.

EVERY COMFORT OF MODERN FLAT IS PUT ON CHASSIS OF TOURING CAR

George L. Wilder, a retired cabinetmaker, has devised a scheme to beat the landlord, and at the same time see a little of the country. He has constructed a home on wheels and from now on intends to migrate with the birds. The "flat for four" is built on the chassis of a touring car. There is a parlor, a bedroom and a bath, kitchenette and toilet as well. Running water, screened windows and every comfort of a modern flat. There is also a refrigerator that will take care of the ice and vegetables. It has everything. The photograph shows Mr. Wilder, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. H. G. Wilder, and G. B. Wilder, his grandson. Mrs. Wilder has started the evening meal at the gas stove.

CAP and BELLS

A WESTERN RAILROAD.

The train was 30 minutes late.

A man and his wife paced the floor of the battered station. The man approached the ticket window and rapped sharply on the counter.

"Say," he exclaimed to the lanky agent who appeared, "we've got to make connections at Sage with the X, Y, & Z. Will they wait a half hour for a passenger?"

The lanky agent rolled his quid leisurely, and eyed the occupants of the room as he considered the question.

"Wa'al," he finally decided, "I reckon they'd wait longer than that for two passengers."

SHE'S RIGHT

He: If we're going to quarrel all the time, we'd better not get married.

She: For heaven's sake, you don't want to live a monotonous existence, do you?

Make Both Ends Meet.

"Why bow so low?" asked Affluence. "Your head doth touch your feet." Said Poverty: "That's just a way I have of making both ends meet."

Those Operation Curios.

Mrs. Willis—Our Willie has been swapping things again.

Mr. Willis—Born trader, that kid, isn't he? I suppose he traded some marbles for the next-door kid's knife?

Mrs. Willis—Oh, no. He swapped your appendix for Mrs. Bump's gall stones.—Judge.

A Building Boom.

Redd—Do you think all these automobiles running through a town help it any?

Greene—Oh, yes, indeed. "How do they help the town?"

"Why, man, we're building four new hospitals and eight dispensaries in our town right now!"

His Opinion.

"Looky here, Uncle Riley," triumphantly called the proprietor of the Right Place store in Petunia, as he finished tacking up a sign of his own painting, which read, "Selling Out at Cost." "What do you think of that?" "Another he nailed!" cackled old Riley Rezzidew. "Uh-hee! hee! hee!" —Judge.

SHE OUGHTER

"Papa, I want to marry George. He's one man in a thousand." "Why don't you give the other 999 a look over before you decide."

A Motto.

Without pretense or sham, Let this my motto be: That what is best for Uncle Sam is surely best for me.

Good Reason.

"You didn't seem to enjoy the volunteer concert we held the other evening. I thought you were fond of music." "That's why I didn't enjoy the volunteer concert."

Reversing the Roles.

"How are you getting along with your new employer?" "Oh, pretty well," replied the super-office boy.

"Doesn't he treat you all right?" "Sure, he treats me all right, but I don't like to hear a boss whistle as much as he does during office hours."

Putting Away Provender.

"Our dog buries an unusual number of bones." "The wise canine knows that meat is getting higher every day."

What do You Need to Know About Tubes

TO THE experienced motorist, there is more in knowing who makes his automobile tubes than how many layers they are made of or how the valve patch is applied.

And for that reason the most experienced—and with the greatest stake in quality.

Sea Serpents Numerous.
There are plenty of sea serpents, and of all snakes they are the most venomous. In tropical waters they are vastly numerous, especially in the Indian ocean, where they are often seen literally by hundreds, swimming at the surface of the water. They are six to eight feet long, very fierce and will commonly attack human beings. Their bodies are flat, and almost wholly filled by the lungs.

Old Moors Made Paper of Linen.
The first manufacture of paper from linen rags has been attributed to the Moors of Spain, at dates ranging from before the tenth century to the year 1470.

Webster=Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

Copyright by Peter B. Kyne.

DON JUAN.

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after cleaning up $100,000. He looks like a hobo. Then he rescues a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over. He eliminates the offending man. She is Dolores Ruy. In Denver he is offered a $25,000-a-year job by a capitalist friend, Edward J. Jerome. He receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go fifty-fifty with him on the profits. So he starts for Sobrante. Jerome goes with John to the depot. They meet the distressed lady on her way to the same train. John tells Jerome the whole story. Jerome secretly sees the girl, offering her $10,000 if she induces John to take his job inside of ninety days. The girl accepts. The scene now shifts to Buenaventura, Sobrante, where Geary has existed for two months on credit extended by Mother Jones, keeper of a hotel and dramshop. Dolores cables Henrietta Wilkins (Mother Jenks) that she is on her way to visit her. Mother Jenks has been educating Dolores, who is the daughter of former President Ruy of Sobrante, deposed and executed by President Sarros. Mother Jenks doesn't want Dolores to find out she is no longer respectable. So Billy meets the steamer and tries to turn the girl back. But Dolores lands and salutes Mother Jenks as "Mother." Billy promptly falls in love with Dolores. Webster in New Orleans secures a stateroom on La Estrellita by buying a ticket for a mythical valet. "Andrew Bowers." In New Orleans Webster saves a young man from assassination. On the steamer he finds the mythical valet in his stateroom. He accepts "Bowers" on trust, without learning his identity. At Buenaventura he assists the "valet" to land. He finds Billy in love with Dolores, and like the good scout he bids farewell to his romance. Dolores astonishes him. He makes his will.

"Quite right. Few women have a sense of sportsmanship. You stand a very good chance of becoming a millionaire in Sobrante, but you must beware of a dark man who has crossed your path."

"Which one?" Webster queried mirthfully. "All coons look alike to me—Greasers also."

"Mere patter of our profession, Mr. Webster," she admitted, "tossed in to build up the mystery element and simulate wisdom. Fortune awaited you in the United States, but you put it behind you, at the call of friendship, for a fortune in Sobrante. Now you have reconsidered that foolish action and at this moment you are contemplating sending a cablegram to a fat old man who waddles when he walks, recalling your decision not to accept a certain proposition of a business nature. However, you are too late. The fat old man with the waddle has made other arrangements, and if you want to make money, you'll remain in Sobrante. I think that is all, Mr. Webster."

He was gazing at her with an expression composed of equal parts of awe, amazement, consternation, adoration, and blank stupidity.

"Well," she queried innocently, "to quote Billy's colloquial style: did I put it over?"

"You did very well for an amateur, but I'm a doubting Thomas. About this fat old man who waddles when he walks: a really topnotch palmit could tell me his name."

"Did I Put It Over?"

"Well, I'm only an amateur, but still I think I might, to quote Billy again, make a stab at it. Do you care to bet me about ten dollars I cannot give you the fat party's initials—all three of them?"

He gazed at her owlishly. She was the most perfectly amazing girl he had ever met; he was certain she would win the ten dollars from him, but then it was worth ten dollars to know for a certainty whether she was perfect or possessed of a slight flaw; so he silently drew forth a wallet that would have choked a cow and skinned off a ten-dollar gold certificate of the United States of America.

"I'm game," he mumbled.

"The fat gentleman's initials are E. P. J.,"

"By the twelve apostles, Peter, Simon—"

"Don't blaspheme, Mr. Webster." He stood up and shook himself. "When you order the tea," he said very distinctly, "please have mine cold. I need a bracer after that. Take the ten. You're won it."

"Thanks, ever so much," she answered in a matter-of-fact tone, and tucked the bill inside her shirtwaist.

"I am a very poor woman, and—'Every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more,'" she caroled, swaying her lithe, beautiful body and snapping her fingers like a cabaret dancer.

He could have groaned with the futility of his overwhelming desire for her; it even occurred to him what a shame it was to waste a marvel like her on a callow young pup like Billy, who had fought so many deadly skirmishes with Dan Cupid that a post-impressionistic painting of the Geary heart must resemble a pincushion. Then he remembered that this was an ungenerous, a traitorous thought, and that he had not paid the lady her fee.

"Well, what's the tariff?" he asked.

"You really feel that I have earned a professional's fee?"

"Beyond a doubt."

"Since you have taken Billy away from me this evening, I shall make you take Billy's place this evening. After dinner you shall hire an open victoria with two little white horses and drive me around the Malecon. There is a band concert to-night."

"If it's the last act of my wicked life!" he promised fervently. Strange to relate, in that ecstatic moment no thought of Billy Geary marred the perfect serenity of what promised to be the most perfectly serene night in his history.

They were seated at the tiny tea table when the sound of feet crunching the little shell-paved path through the patio caused Webster and Dolores to turn their heads simultaneously. Coming toward them was an individual who wore upon a head of flaming red a disreputable, conical-crowned straw sombrero; a soiled cotton camisa with the tails flowing free of his equally soiled khaki trousers, and sandals of the kind known as alparagates—made from the tough fibre of a plant of the cactus family and worn only by the very lowliest peons—completed his singular attire.

"One of Billy's friends and another reason why he has no social standing," Dolores whispered. "I believe he's going to speak to us."

Such evidently appeared to be the man's intention. He came to the edge of the veranda, swept his ruin of a hat from his red head and bowed with Castilian expansiveness.

"Yer pardon, Miss, for appearin' before you."

She smiled her forgiveness to what Webster now perceived to be an alcoholic wreck. He was about to dismiss the fellow with scant ceremony, when Dolores, with that rich sense of almost masculine humor—a humor that was distinctly American—said sweetly:

"Mr. Webster, shake hands with Don Juan Cafetero, bon vivant and man about town. Don Juan, permit me to present Mr. Webster, from somewhere in the United States. Mr. Webster is a mining partner of our mutual friend Mr. William Geary."

A long, sad descent into the Pit had, however, imbued Don Juan with a sense of his degradation; he was in the presence of a superior, and he acknowledged the introduction with a respectful inclination of his head.

"Tis you I've called to see, Mister Webster, sor," he explained.

"Very well, old-timer. In what way can I be of service to you?"

"Tis the other way around, sor, if ye please, an' for that same there's no charge, seein' ye're the partner, av that fine, kind gentleman, Mister Geary. Did ye, whilst in New Orleans, have 'dallings wit' a short, stout spiggoty wit' a puckered scar under his right eye?"

John Stuart Webster suddenly sat up straight and gazed upon the lost son of Erin with grave interest. "Yes," he replied, "I seem to recall such a man."

"Tis none av me business, sor, but would ye mind tellin' me just what ye did to that spiggoty?"

add insult to injury, I plucked a few hairs from his rat's moustache—one hair per each pluck."

"I'd a notion ye did somethin' to him, sor. Now, thin, listen to me: I'm not much to look at, but I'm white, I'm an attashay, as ye might say, av Ignatz Leber—him that do have the import an' export house at the Ind av the Calle San Rosaria, forinst the bay. Also he do have charge av the cable office, an' whin I'm sober enough, I deliver cablegrams for Leber. Now, then, ye'll recall we had a bit av a shower to-day at noon?"

Dolores and Webster nodded. Don Juan, after glancing cautiously around, lowered his voice and continued: "I was deliverin' a cablegram for Leber, an' me course took me past the palace gate—which, be the same token, has sinthry-boxes both inside an' out, wan on each side av the gate. The sinthry was not visible as I came along, an' what wit' the shower comin' as suddint as that, an' me wit' a wardrobe that's not so extensive I can afford to get it wet, I shtopped into wan av the outside sinthry-boxes till the rain should be over, an' what wit' a drink av aguardiente I'd took to brace me for the thrip, an' the milmory av auld times, I fell asleep."

"Dear knows how long I sat there napping; all I know is that I was awakened by the sound av three men talkin, at the gate, an' divil a word did they say but what I heard. They were talkin' in Spanish, but I understood them well enough. He's at the Hotel Mateo, wif wan voice, an' his name is Webster—Jawn Webster. He's an American, an' a big, savage-lookin' lad at that, so take me advice an' be careful. Do ye two keep an eye on him wherever he goes, an' if he should shtep out at night an' wander t'rough a dark shreet, do ye two see to it that he's put where he'll not interfere again in Don Felipe's affairs. No damn' gringo—beggin' yer pardon, Miss—can inthefere in the wurk av the intelligence bureau at a time like this, in addition to insultin' our honored chief, wit'out the necessity av bein' measured for a coffin."

"Si, mi general," says another lad, an' "To be sure, mi general," says a third; an' wit' that the general, bad cess to him, went back to the palace an' the other two walked on up the calle an' away from the sinthry-box."

"Did you come out and follow them?" Webster demanded briskly.

"Faith, I did. Wan av them is Francisco Arredondo, a young cavalry lieutenant, an' the other wan is Captain Jose Benavides, him that do be the best pistol-shot an' swordsman in the spiggoty army."

"What kind of looking man is this Benavides, my friend?"

"A tall, thin young man, wif a dude's moustache an' a diamond ring on his right hand. He do be whiter nor most. Have a care would ye meet him around the city an' let him pick a fight wit' ye. An' have a care, sor, would ye go out av a night."

"Thank you, Don Juan. You're the soul of kindness. What else do you know?"

"Well," Don Juan replied with a naive grin. "I did know somethin' else, but shure, Mister Geary advised me to forget it. I was wit' him in the launch last night."

Webster stepped out of the veranda and laid a friendly hand on Don Juan Cafetero's shoulder. "Don Juan," he said gently, "I'm going back to the United States very soon. Would you like to come with me?"

Don Juan's watery eyes grew a shade mistier, if possible. He shook his head. "Whin I'm drunk here, sor," he replied, "no wan pays any attention to me, but in America they'd give me ten days in the hoosegown want a week. Thank you, sor, but I'll shtay here till the finish."

He knew the strength of the Demon and had long since ceased to fight even a rear-guard action. Webster put a hand under the stubby chin and tilted Don Juan's head sharply. "Hold up your head," he commanded.

"You're the first of your breed I ever saw who would admit he was whipped. Here's five dollars for you—five dollars gold. Take it and return with the piece intact to-morrow morning, Don Juan Cafetero."

Don Juan Cafetero's wondering glance met Webster's directly, wavered, sought the ground, but at a jerk on his chin came back and—stayed. Thus for at least ten seconds they gazed at each other; then Webster spoke. "Thank you," he said.

"Me name is John J. Cafferty," the lost one quavered.

"Round one for Cafferty," Webster laughed. "Good-bye now, until nine to-morrow. I'll expect you here, John, without fail." And he took the derelict's hand and wrung it heartily.

"Well," Webster remarked humorously to Dolores as he held out his cup for more tea, "if I'm not the original Tumble Tom, I hope I may never see the back of my neck."

"Do you attach any importance to Don Juan's story?" she asked anxiously.

"Yes, but not so much as Don Juan does. I greatly fear I have managed to snarl myself up in a Sobrantean political intrigue, when I haven't the slightest interest either way. However, that's only one more reason why I should finish my work here and get back to Denver."

"But how did all this happen, Mr. Webster?"

"Like shooting fish in a dry lake, Miss Ruy," Webster replied, and related to her in detail the story of his adventure with the Sobrantean assassins in Jackson square and his subsequent meeting with Andrew Bowers aboard La Estrellita.

Dolores laughed long and heartily as Webster finished his humorous recital. "Billy told me God only made one Jack Webster and then destroyed the mold; I believe Billy is right. But do tell me what became of this extraordinary and unbidden guest."

"The night the steamer arrived in port, Billy and Don Juan came out in a launch to say 'Hello,' so I seized upon the opportunity to tell Andrew to jump overboard and swim to the launch. Gave him a little note to Billy—carried it in his mouth—instructing Billy to do the right thing by him—and Billy did it. I don't know what Andrew is up to and I don't care. Where I was raised we let every man roll his own hoop. All I hope is that they don't shoot Andrew. If they do, I fear I'll weep. He's certainly a skookum lad. Do you know, Miss Ruy, I love anybody that can impose on me—make a monkey out of me, in fact—and make me like it?"

"Tis You I've Called to See."

"That's so comforting," she remarked dryly.

Webster looked at her sharply, suspiciously; her words were susceptible of a dual interpretation. Her next sentence, however, dissipated this impression. "Because it confirms what I told you this afternoon when I read your palm," she added.

"You didn't know how truly you spoke when you referred to the dark man that had crossed my path. He's uncomfortably real—drat him!"

"Then you are really concerned?"

"Not at all, but I purpose sleeping with one eye open. I shan't permit myself to feel concerned until they send more than two men after me—say eight or ten."

His indifference appalled her; she leaned forward impulsively and laid a hand on his forearm. "But you must heed Don Juan's warning," she declared seriously. "You must not go out alone at night."

He grinned boyishly. "Of course not, Miss Ruy. You're going to ride out with me this evening."

"I'm not. I'll not subject you to risk."

"Very well; then I shall drive out alone."

"You're a despot, Mr. Webster—a regular despot."

"Likewise a free agent."

"I'll go with you."

"I thought so. For what hour shall I order the carriage?"

"Seven-thirty. After all, they'll not dare to murder you on the Malecon."

"I agree with you. It will have to be done very quietly, if at all. You've been mighty nice to me this afternoon, seers; I shall be grateful right up to the moment of dissolution."

"Speak softly but carry a big stick," she warned him.

"A big gun," he corrected her, "—two of them, in fact."

Shure, Mister Geary do be the fine lad, but he—"

"Mr. Geary never put a big forefinger under your chin and bade you hold up your head. Is that it?"

"Tis not what he did, Miss but the way he did it. All the fiends av hell 'll be at me this night to spend what he give me—and I—I'm afraid—"

He broke off, mumbling and chattering like a man in the grip of a great terror. In his agony of body and spirit, Dolores could have wept for Don Juan Cafetero, for in that supreme moment the derelict's soul was bare, revealing something pure and sweet and human, for all his degradation. How did Jack Webster know? wondered Dolores. And why did he so confidently give an order to this human fotsam and expect it to be obeyed? And why did Don Juan Cafetero come whining to her for strength to help him obey it?

"That wouldn't be playing the game," she told him. "I can't help you deceive him. You are the first of your breed—"

"Don't say it," he cried. "Didn't he tell me wanst?"

"Then make the fight, Don—Mr. Cafferty." She lowered her voice. "I am depending on you to stay sober and guard him. He needs a faithful friend so badly, now that Mr. Geary is away." She patted the grimy hand and left him staring at the ground.

Presently he sighed, quivered horribly, and shambled out of the patio on to the firing-line. And when he reported to Jack Webster at nine o'clock next morning, he was sober, shaking horribly and on the verge of delirium tremens, but tightly clasped in his right hand he held that five-dollar piece. Dolores, who had made it her business to be present at the interview, heard John Stuart Webster say heartily:

"The finest thing about a terrible fight, friend Cafferty, is that if it is a worth-while battle, the spoils of victory are exceedingly sweet. You are now about to enjoy one fourth of the said spoils—a large jolt of aguardiente! You must have it to steady your nerves. Go to the nearest cantina and buy one drink; then come back with the exact change."

As Don Juan scurried for salvation, Webster turned to Dolores. "He'll fall me now, but that will not be his fault but mine. I've set him too great a task in his present condition. Nevertheless, to use a colloquial expression, I have the Cafferty goat—and I'm going to keep it."

Webster went immediately to his room, called for pen and paper, and proceeded at once to do that which he had never done before—to wit, prepare his last will and testament. In a few brief paragraphs he made a holographic will and split his bankroll equally between the two human beings he cared for most—Billy Geary and Dolores Ruy. "Bill's a gambler like me," he ruminated; "so I'll play safe. The girl is a conservative, and after Bill's wad is gone, he'd be boiled in oil before he'd prejudice hers."

Having made his will, Webster made a copy of it. The copy he placed in an envelope marked: "For Jack. Not to be opened until after my death." This envelope he then enclosed in a larger one and mailed to Billy at Calle de Concordia No. 19.

Having made his few simple preparations for death, Mr. Webster next burrowed in his trunk, brought forth his big army-type automatic pistol and secured it in a holster under his arm, for he deemed it unwise and provocative of curiosity to appear in immaculate ducks that bulged at the right hip. Next he filled two spare clips with cartridges and slipped them into his pocket, thus completing his few simple preparations for life.

He glanced out the window at the sun. There would still be an hour of daylight; so he descended to the lobby, called a carriage and took a short drive.

Returning to the hotel he dismissed the carriage, climbed the three short steps to the entrance and was passing through the revolving portal, when from his rear some one gave the door a violent shove, with the result that the turnstile partition behind him collided with his back with sufficient force to throw him against the partition in front. Instantly the door ceased to pivot, with Webster locked neatly in the triangular space between the two sections of the revolving door and the jamb.

He turned and beheld in the section behind him an officer of the Sobrantean army. This individual, observing he was under Webster's scrutiny, scowled and peremptorily motioned to Webster to proceed—which the latter did, with such violence that the door, continuing to revolve, caught up with the Sobrantean and subjected him to the same indignity to which he had subjected Webster.

"The terrible Captain Benavides."

Barrel Racing. Barrel racing is a favorite amusement among the workmen in a suburb of London. Some forty cellar men, coopers and others competed in one race of this description. Then followed a double-barreled race, the men engaged being obliged to push before them two empty barrels instead of one.

SILVER SUNDAY

At the remarkable exhibition of ancient church plate which took place at the old First Parish church in Dorchester on Oct. 10, there were some hundred pieces shown, by far the richest display that could be gathered in the entire country. Three tables were covered with these relics, which included fine old silver and pewter basins, cups, beaters, tankards and chalices. These pieces have been kept for years in the vaults of the Boston Art Museum, as they are exceedingly valuable, and have never before been brought together. The pieces range in date from 1672 to 1850.

The most interesting was a tankard made by the father of Paul Revere. There were three communion tables belonging to the church, the oldest that of 1744, which was covered with rich rose brocade of great antiquity, below which hung a beautiful embroidered bedspread made by the bride Hannah Bond for her wedding with Dr. Noah Fifield of Weymouth in 1820, in this church.

One of the finest pieces was the gift of Esther Flint, the ancestor of Judge Flint of Weymouth, in 1730. Judge Flint's distinguished forbear was the Rev. Josiah Flint, minister of the church 1670-1680. In addition to the communion silver a genuine Mayflower spoon was exhibited, descending in the Winslow family, a loaf of the Communion Bread brought over in the ship Mary and John, which conveyed the Dorchester settlers, and a spoon of Roger Clapp, one of the leaders. On the table of the modern silver of the church were displayed five beautiful presentation pieces to the late Mrs. Emily A. Fifield; (Emily Porter of Weymouth).

CLAPP MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION

Let's get together and boost the C. M. A. basketball quintet as it was never boosted before. Make all the trips with the local boys and show them that the town is with them. North Easton, Randolph, North Cohasset and the Rumford games will be among the headlines this season.

Where is that second team that made such a good showing last year? They are rather late in showing up for practice, but there will be a team if the members will only show the same interest that was noticeable last year.

How many of the Weymouth girls are taking that dancing course at the "gym" this year? Come up and talk it over with Doc Fabyan.

One of the C. M. A. basketball players appeared on the football field in last week's High School game. It was Slattery acting as a referee.

The Randolph Post, American Legion, one of the C. M. A.'s bitter rivals in basketball has appointed a committee to form another quintet for this year's games. How many remember the C. M. A.—Randolph game played at the Randolph hall last year? The game went four extra periods with the C. M. A. coming out the winner. A series of games will certainly appeal to the fans.

The North Easton Post, American Legion, is another likely contender for the South Shore amateur championship. They will play a series of three games if it can be arranged by the managers.

Johnnie Daniels did good work at the High school football game last week. As a scorer you win the brown derby, Johnnie. How many people did you see were at the game?

How does the new boxing law little rare misjudgment in not sending (female) of the Weymouths? The article asking the town to accept the act will undoubtedly appear on the town warrant at the regular town meeting.

Now that the boxing law is in force in nearly every city in the state our own champion, Freddie Webb, will engage in a few headliners at the Quincy or other fight clubs. Fred is the champion of the whole South Shore and is ready to defend his title.

Warren will get enough practice to keep him in shape for a few bouts as soon as the basketball season gets under way. Weymouth knows how well he can wrestle, even if some of those Olympic judges did use a little rare misjudgment in not sending him across to represent the United States.

"Jakey" Levine, one time a local champ in the boxing game, has taken up his abode in Dorchester. Too bad that the C. M. A. should lose any material and especially so at this time of the year.

OH! MY BACK!

How My Back Aches!

After influenza or colds the kidneys and bladder are often affected. This is the red-flag of danger—better be wise and check the further inroads of kidney disease by obtaining that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's known as "Anuric" (anti-uric), because "Anuric" expels the uric acid poison from the body and cures those pains, such as backache, rheumatism in muscles and joints.

Naturally the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet and ankles. Dr. Pierce's Anuric is many times more potent than lithia and often eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar. All druggists.

Rochester, N. Y.—"Last fall I had the influenza and my kidneys became congested and swollen. My back hurt me so I would have to walk all bent over. I also had bladder weakness. I took Dr. Pierce's Anuric and it so completely cured me that I have not had any return of this condition since. I consider 'Anuric' the best kidney, bladder and backache medicine I have ever taken."

1000 Eggs in Every Hen

New System of Poultry Keeping—Get Dollar a Dozen Eggs—Famous Poultryman

TELLS HOW

"The great trouble with the poultry business has always been that the laying life of a hen was too short," says Henry Trafford, International Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of Poultry Success. This average pullet lays 150 eggs. If kept the second year, she may lay 100 more. Then she goes to market. Yet it has been scientifically established that every pullet is born or hatched with over a thousand minute egg germs in her system—and will lay them on a highly profitable basis over a period of four to six years' time if given proper care. How to work to get 1,000 eggs from every hen; how to get pullets laying early; how to make the old hens lay like pullets; how to keep up heavy egg production all through cold winter months when eggs are highest; triple egg production; make starker hens hustle; $5.00 profit from every hen in six winter months. These and many other money-making poultry secrets are contained in Mr. Trafford's "1,000 EGG HEN" system of poultry raising, one copy of which will be sent absolutely free to any reader of this paper who keeps six hens or more. Eggs should go to a dollar or more a dozen this winter. This means big profit to the poultry keeper who gets the eggs. Mr. Trafford tells how. If you keep chickens and want them to make money for you, cut out this ad and send it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, Suite 98-N, Tyne Bldg., Birmingham, N. Y. Enclose copy of "1,000 EGG HEN" will be sent by return mail.

Redemption of Doughnuts

By E. RAY BAKER

Virginia, in her twentieth year, was an accomplished young lady, in addition to being the village belle. She played the violin, was an athletic young woman, and the histrionic ability she displayed in amateur theatricals made many a sage forecast a life of fame for her in the films.

Wayne was the only young man to be shown partiality in her distribution of favors. She treated all her suitors very sweetly, but to Wayne she gave her love, and it was certain that his financial or social standing had nothing to do with his being honored.

Wayne was an orphan, but his uncle had adopted him and left him all his property when death stepped in a few years back. The property consisted of a piece of scrub land on the village outskirts and a ramshackle house on it. Wayne, at twenty-three, dwelt in the shack and clerked in Hannaford's grocery.

The death of Virginia's father put her in the orphan class with Wayne. When the probate court got through Virginia had the family roof over her and that was all. In order to make a living she opened a bakeshop in the front of the house. And that was where the trouble started.

Wayne objected to the bakeshop. He had higher ideas for his fiancée. Why couldn't she teach music or become a gymnasium instructor, or even go to California and get into the films? he wanted to know.

"Because none of those things appeal to me as a means of support," she retorted. "I like music and athletics and theatricals as a pastime, but for making money I prefer mixing dough."

The Haggard bakeshop did a good business, and the big, brown sugared

"Could I Presume Further on Your Charity?"

doughnuts made there proved its principal advertising medium. People came from all over the country to buy Virginia's doughnuts.

The greater the prosperity of the bakeshop business the stronger became Wayne's protests.

"Why don't you get into something else yourself?" she flared up at him one night when he was a caller. "You don't seem to be doing so much. Clerking in a grocery isn't much ahead of mixing dough."

It was Wayne's turn to flare. "All right; all right. Have it your way. I'll show you," he grated, and he seized his hat and walked to the door.

Virginia protested, but he opened the door and strode out into the night and out of Virginia's life.

The next morning an outbound interurban car carried among its passengers one Wayne Wilson with a dismal looking suitcase in his hand and a fire in his heart. He flung all other thoughts but success to the winds, and in ten years he was owner of a string of prosperous grocery stores in Portland. He had needed just some such taunt as the one Virginia hurled at him to make him get out and hustle.

Fifteen years after he left Carlton Wayne was a sordid money maker. The one romance of his life was all but forgotten. A hardened bachelor of thirty-eight was Wayne Wilson—not a woman hater, because women did not play a sufficiently important part in his life to be hated.

Then he decided it was time to take a vacation and he traveled along the coast from Vancouver to Lower California. On his way back to Portland he decided to visit Carlton—not for any particular reason, but just to look things over and see if he knew anybody. If he gave Virginia a thought it was to vision her indistinctly, perhaps as the wife of Bud Jenkins or Jimmie Upton.

At Rose City he left the steam train and transferred to a decrepit interurban car. The ancient car rattled and groaned, and shook the ambition out of Wayne and made him sleepy, so he dozed with an elbow on the window sill.

When he awoke from his nap it was night and he felt a sharp gnawing in his stomach. He looked at his watch and saw it was 11 o'clock. To his surprise the car was not in motion. He could hear voices outside and saw two men whom he remembered as fellow passengers, pacing beside the track, cigars glowing in their mouths. Wayne was alone in the car except for a woman who sat some distance away with her back toward him.

Wayne aroused himself, went outside and accosted the two men.

"Have we gone past Carlton?" "I should say not," one of them answered. "We aren't half way there yet. We haven't any power. The third rail's absolutely dead—has been for five hours. The conductor's gone on a ten-mile hike to the nearest telephone. Believe me, this is a dismal place to be dumped. Right out in the wilderness fifteen miles from any road. We're out of luck."

Wayne groaned. Next to grabbing money he liked eating, and his stomach had been out of a job eight hours. "I'm starving," he complained. "Isn't there a chance for a feed?"

The two men smiled. "There's just one way I know of," said one of them. "There's a lady in the car who has some provisions with her, and she filled us up. I've seen her before on this run. She has a store in Rose City and another at Carlton. Perhaps if you'd ask her she'd give you some doughnuts."

Wayne winced and tried to convince himself he wasn't hungry. Doughnuts! Not for 16 years had he eaten one.

He returned to the car and never looked at the lady in front of him. He resumed his place at the window and tried to sleep, but his stomach wouldn't let him. He pictured mentally a nice, large, brown, sweet doughnut with a hole in it, and his mouth watered.

"I'll not do it," he said determinedly, and shifted his position. He closed his eyes, but the action had no effect on his stomach.

"I'm starving," he groaned. "Shoe leather would taste good."

Wayne heard a noise at his side and turned to see the lady passenger holding out a cardboard box in which reposed a half dozen tempting-looking doughnuts.

"Have one," she said with a dazzling smile. She could not have been more than thirty-five.

Wayne still tried to resist temptation. "No—no, thanks," he said shortly, but she smiled again and held out the box, and he surrendered.

As he munched a doughnut he couldn't help feeling there was something familiar about the handsome passenger. The light had been dim, and except when her radiant smile re-enforced it, he had not got a good look at her. He had eaten two doughnuts, but still he was hungry, and he left his seat and walked to the one in which sat the lady.

"Pardon me," he said, lifting his hat. "Could I presume further on your charity?"

She made room for him beside her and held out the doughnuts. "Certainly—Wayne," she said. "Won't you sit down and talk it over?"

And so they made up after 15 years—Virginia Haggard and Wayne Wilson. Doughnuts were the reason.

TRIED BEYOND HIS PATIENCE

Long-Suffering Man Reasoned That He Simply Had to Draw the Line Somewhere.

Lawyer T— was being solicited for a donation to help bring a child welfare worker to his community. He refused rather brusquely. The woman who was soliciting was amazed. He had always been generous before this time. And because she was insistent he gave his reason for being otherwise now.

"Well, first you came to me for money to bring a specialist on food here. I gave and for almost a year after she was here I ate all sorts of miserable stuff, which my wife learned was healthy at those lectures. Next you brought an interior decorator here. After those talks she moved the furniture in all sorts of positions, changing it every day until I had stubbed every toe and skinned every shin I had. And now—well, I love my children too well to give to this new fund and have them experimented on."

The Eyes of the Mordella.

There is a beetle, which entomologists call the mordella, that is provided with enough eyes to outfit a company of ordinary animals. It possesses 25,000 little eyes, and it can see out of the back of its head.

Under a lens these multitudes of eyes are very beautiful. They give off gleaming prismatic colors. A microscopic examination reveals what looks like a section of honeycomb, and each of these seemingly unlimited number of eyes has a perfect lens system.

Probably next to the magnificent mordella beetle the ordinary common dragon fly ranks for its remarkable supply of eyes. This insect is said to have no less than 20,000 eyes.

The horsefly, too, has eyes by the thousand, and its head is one mass of microscopic optics.

PETER

By JANE MCBAIN.

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) Lulu Bent, aged twenty, boarded cats, and her mother, a widow with a large family and suburban home, but small bank account, boarded anybody.

Mrs. Archibald Frothman, a rich city dame of English stock, contemplating a visit to the land of her forefathers, motored out to Bent's to see if they would board her cat, Peter, and also her son, during her absence in the approaching summer. Mrs. Bent agreed to.

Mrs. Frothman thereupon proceeded to give Lulu, who took special charge of the cats, instructions regarding Peter.

"Now, Miss Bent," she said, "you must kiss Peter every night, for he always kisses me and I don't want that affectionate habit broken. You must treat him to ice cream occasionally and feed him with sardines and the best salmon steak." There were other instructions regarding Peter's nap, his walk, and so forth. Then Mrs. Frothman spoke a few words regarding her son.

"He is literary—but perfectly harmless. I am not particular as to what you give him—if you only understand him—for I never could." Then the dame, after promising to call with her charges before sailing for Europe, departed.

At the expected time she again arrived. The cat was an immense mottled animal, his mouth being the homeliest part of him. The son was a handsome young fellow with superior manners and, apparently, an intellect as well as a heart. His name was the same as the cat's, Peter.

The neighbors, who knew Mrs. Bent remarked, with a wink, that the four-legged Peter being only a cat, and the two-legged one a "cat-ch," there was quite a difference.

Mrs. Bent's idea of feline treatment was the cats should take what was given them.

Soon Lulu and Mr. Frothman became friends. Mr. Frothman, much traveled, and a member of the best society, proved an edifying and agreeable companion. To them the end of the summer came too quickly, and with it Mrs. Frothman, for the object of her tenderest care, her cat.

"How's Peter?" was the first query. "He's fine!" was the reply.

"Is Lulu kind to him?" "Yes, awful!"

"That's good!" exclaimed Mrs. Frothman.

"What has Peter had to eat?" "O—er—everything that's nice. I wish he was here all the time. Lulu makes ice cream for him, and lily jelly, and Hiawatha cake—and fudge—and everything I like."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Mrs. Frothman, manifesting some surprise. "I'm afraid that you've been too indulgent. But, after all, it's best to treat our pets well."

"Where does Peter sleep?" was the next question.

"In the guest chamber," was the reply.

"Oh!" exclaimed Mrs. Frothman, with even more surprise.

"Does Lulu take Peter out to walk?" "Oh, yes, she takes him to the band concert and he takes her to the opera. He takes her to the beach and he bought her a plaid silk bathing suit. You ought to see it—it's a beauty! I wish I had one like it."

Up to this point Mrs. Frothman had been all but doing out of mere satisfaction, but now she started! She straightened up and looked at Mary like a hawk. Her sister, previously a listener only, took a hand at the questioning.

"Is Peter sweet on Lulu?" "Oh, yes! everyone knows that!"

Mrs. Frothman had received a blow. But she recovered from it sufficiently to snap at Mary.

"I have been asking about my cat, Peter. You have no right to call Mr. Frothman by his first name."

"He told us to," replied Mary, bristling with indignation. "He says he wants to be 'Peter' to all of us, always."

The ladies exchanged eloquent looks. "I wish you to get my cat," demanded Mrs. Frothman, "do you know where he is?"

"I don't know, but I suppose he is somewhere about."

Mary arose to institute a search. But Mrs. Frothman called her back.

"What has Peter had to eat?" "O—er—mice and—er—tiny bits of snakes and—er—he eats cockroaches, too."

Mrs. Frothman used her smelling salts.

"Where has he slept?" "O—er—on the Scipione's old mattress. All their kids had the scarlet fever on it, but Peter likes to lie there."

"Jack," she asked, "was there a girl in France who was sorry to see you go?"

"I'd rather you didn't ask me that question, dear," he said.

"But I must know. We're engaged and you should tell me everything," she insisted.

"Dear, I don't like to talk about it—"

"Oh, Jack, how could you when all the time you were engaged to me!"

"Listen a minute and I'll give you the whole story," he said in desperation. "She was—"

"Well?"

"She was my laundress. I owed her 12 francs."—Boston Globe.

HAD FAITH IN OLD ADAGE

John D. Rockefeller Enters Mean Man He Once Knew in the Championship Stakes.

John D. Rockefeller once said to a New York reporter: "The poorest way to wealth is the mean way. In Ritchford, where I was born, we had a mean man, a very mean man; yet the fortune he left was a small—you might say a mean one."

"At a church supper one night this man cut the corner of his lip with his knife. All searched their pocketbooks, but nobody had any court-plaster. What was to be done? The cut was bleeding."

"Finally the parson produced a two-cent stamp and said: 'Put this on the cut, squire. It will stop the hemorrhage, I believe.'"

"Thank you," said the squire gratefully, and taking out his wallet, he placed the two-cent stamp in it, extracting at the same time a one-cent stamp of his own, which he proceeded to stick on the cut.

"Thank you, parson," he repeated. "A penny saved is a penny earned."

"Thesupent. "What does it mean when they throw an egg at an actor, pa?" "It means they want him to beat it."—Judge.

When Coffee Disagrees—Use POSTUM CEREAL

Coffee drinkers, who switch from their accustomed table drink, almost always turn to Postum because of its delicious coffee-like flavor.

There's no harm to health in Postum. Much as it tastes like coffee, there is no coffee in it. Boil Postum a full fifteen minutes, and you develop that rich flavor you so much like.

PRINCETON STARS PRACTICE HARD

Coach Bill Roper is confident that Princeton will be stronger in football this year than in 1919 and the manner in which the different squads are being hurried along seems to justify his optimism.

SISLER "JUST TRIES TO WIN"

St. Louis Slugging First Baseman Attributes His Hitting to "Streak of Good Luck."

The great batting of George Sisler this season is described by him as being "just a streak of good luck." He says:

"There is nothing wonderful about my playing. I play hard and try to help my team win, but so do all the other boys, and there is not a player on the St. Louis team who doesn't deserve the same credit for trying to win. I have happened to hit better than usual this season because I have been able, for some unknown reason, to place the ball out of reach of the opposing fielders a good share of the time."

ROWING SPORT REJUVENATED

Now Enjoying New and Prosperous Popularity Among Amateurs—Cleanest of Sports.

About 40 years ago rowing was in its heyday in this country. Along in the early eighties there were New Hanlon, Jake Gaudaur, Teemer, Hosmer, Long Bob Fulton, Charley Courtney, Jim Ten Eyck and the famous Ward brothers from Newburg. Funny how fashions have changed in sport. Who of the present decade can recall a professional rowing race? Yet father and mother were keenly interested in the game in the bygone.

Rowing is one of the finest exercises in the realm of sports, and, as far as amateurs are concerned, one of the cleanest.

There is no "gate" in rowing, and it is one of the few sports in the whole category where those who promote it do so for the pure love of sport.

Laurie Wahlquist in Form

Illinois Star Should Be More of Sensation This Year—His Playing Won Ohio Game.

Laurie Wahlquist, whose passing and running did so much for Illinois last year, is out in form again and should be even more of a sensation this year. In the closing minutes of the Ohio State game for the title Laurie shot four long passes that put the ball in position for Fletcher's field goal that won the game.

INTEREST IN FOOTBALL

The feeling at the Naval academy is that the coming football season will be one of the greatest in the history of the institution. The game against the eleven of the Military academy on the New York polo grounds November 27 is anticipated with the keenest interest, but the schedule as a whole is the best in a dozen years, and affords an opportunity by which the naval team can be measured in comparison with the strongest teams in the country.

NEW GRIDIRON RULES EXPLAINED BY CAMP

Most Radical Touches Scoring of Goal After Touchdown.

Ball May Be Brought Out in Front of Posts at Distance Thought Most Desirable—One Other Added Advantage Noted.

Walter Camp, well-known football critic, in speaking of changes in the rules for this season in Football Guide, says:

"The most radical of the changes made by the rules committee relates to the scoring of a goal after touchdown. Ever since the introduction of the game some forty-five years ago the punt out after a touchdown has been a part of the rules. This and all rules relating to it have been struck out, and hereafter if a touchdown is made, whether directly behind the goal posts or at the extreme corner of the field, the side making the touchdown may bring the ball out in front of the goal such distance as it thinks desirable and from that point make the try at goal.

"This means that a large majority of the touchdowns will result in goals, but it does not entirely eliminate the possibility of missing. In effect, it makes the touchdown very near equivalent to the seven points which the rules allowed for a touchdown and its conversion into a kick, without entirely doing away with the kick. It has one other added advantage in that it tends to greater justice in the matter of earned touchdowns and touchdowns coming from fumbles or fumbles, for it is recognized that these touchdowns are made directly behind the goal post usually, because the runner has a clear field, whereas the touchdown earned by driving with scrimmage plays is made wherever the attacking side can force it over. This is likely to be much nearer the side lines."

GOLFING PAYS WELL

It pays to be a winner in golf as well as in any other sport, particularly if the successful golfer happens to be a professional. Word from Toledo, where Ted Ray, the Englishman, won the national open championship recently, is to the effect that he probably will clean up some $20,000 this year, representing a purse of $4,500 donated by the U. S. G. A. to the winner, and proceeds from advertising exhibition matches and sale of clubs and other golf accessories.

KENTUCKY RULES WIN FAVOR

Regulations Covering Selling Races May Be Applied to All Courses in Country.

So much pressure is being brought to bear by trainers and owners for a change in the rules for selling and claiming races that it appears rules adopted by the Kentucky Jockey club will soon be applied to all courses in the country. At a meeting of local trainers a few days ago a petition was signed seeking the adoption of the Kentucky rules, and since then trainers in Maryland have made a similar request. The rules now in force are blamed for the small fields in many events.

DOC HARRIS WHITE POPULAR

Former White Sox Pitcher Is Wanted as Manager of Muskegon Team Next Season.

Whatever league Muskegon may be in next year, the fans of the Michigan town seem united on the point that they want Doc Harris White to continue as manager. White did not land his Muskies in front in the Central league race, but his team always put up a good brand of baseball and that's what counts. White was a pretty valuable adjunct as player, as well as manager. He pitched and played first base and did both well.

COLUMBIA COACH IS VETERAN IN ROWING

James C. Rice Has Been in Game for 35 Years.

First Pupils Were Members of Sunnyside Boat Club of Toronto—Has Trained Many Champion Oarsmen, Including Durnan.

James C. Rice, coach of the Columbia crews, has been in the rowing game 35 years. He began his competitive career in 1885, while still in his teens. From 1885 until 1904 he competed in all the national regattas held in Canada, as well as many in the States, and was a consistent winner.

As early as 1892 Rice took up coaching along with his racing. His first pupils were the members of the Sunnyside Boat club of Toronto, Canada. In 1893 he went to the Toronto Rowing club and the following year was signed by the Argonaut club, one of the biggest rowing clubs in Canada. He remained with the latter organization four years, during which time he enjoyed unusual success.

In 1898 he received a call from the Brockville club of Canada.

The Detroit Boat club, one of the most prominent in the country, then secured Rice's services. This was the first American crew the veteran coached. He was with the Detroit outfit until 1904, when he got his first chance to coach an American college navy.

Harvard university was the institution that sent for Rice and in his two years there he succeeded so well that Columbia, seeking a capable man to put its rowing affairs in shape, coaxed the veteran Canadian from the Crimson. Rice has been with the New Yorkers ever since.

Among Rice's most notable victories while in competition was his winning of the world's double championship in company with Jake Gaudaur, over Ed Durnan and James Rodgers, two of the greatest scullers of all time. In addition to his coaching activities, Rice has trained many of the champion oarsmen, including Durnan.

Henry Fabian, the groundkeeper at the Polo grounds, has a clipping to show that Nig Clarke, playing with the Corsicana club, made eight home runs in a regularly scheduled game against the Texarkana team on July 14, 1902. The score of the game was 51 to 8.

REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Extraordinary Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I want to let you know what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I had organic troubles and am going through the Change of Life. I suffered something terrible and the doctor's medicine did me no good at all—my pains got worse instead of better. I began taking the Vegetable Compound and felt a change from the first. Now I feel fine and advise any one going through the Change of Life to try it, for it cured me after I had given up all hopes of getting better. COOK WITH GAS 12 MONTHS OF THE YEAR

Have you considered the comparative costs of cooking with coal and cooking with gas?

The average family can easily do all their cooking with 3,000 cubic feet of gas per month at a cost of $6.21 net. This is much less than the cost of one half of a ton of coal and very few families can do all their cooking with this amount.

In other words, it actually costs less in dollars and cents to cook with gas than with coal, to say nothing of the advantage of gas because of its convenience and because of the labor saved.

Gas is always available any time of day or night. Turn a cock and light the gas and you have the heat you desire. Turn off and all expense is stopped.

The hour used each morning in cleaning out the ashes and kindling the fire and waiting for it to come up is saved if you cook with gas.

The time spent in lugging coal and cleaning up the attendant dirt and dust, of ashes and coal is saved if you use gas. And besides gas is actually cheaper.

Think this over carefully and do not start your coal range this fall.

WEYMOUTH ANCESTORS

Joe Mitchell Chapple, well known in Weymouth, in his book entitled "Warren G. Harding, the Man," says ancestors of the Presidential candidate once lived in Weymouth, viz: "In 1624 Stephen and Richard Harding arrived at Weymouth Landing, Massachusetts, later joined the Plymouth Colony."

"COME OVER AND HELP US" Erected on Quincy avenue, East Braintree, last week, near the new Monaquot river bridge is a new mile-post of stone reading:

"WEYMOUTH"

(Seal)

"To Boston, 13 M."

"To Plymouth, 32 M."

On the seal are the words: Come Over and Help Us—In Nova Anglia—Gub et Societ de Matachusets Bay. Just why Braintree wanted Weymouth to "Come Over and Help Us" we do not know, unless it is to close the new drawbridge quicker.

TOO MANY LICENSED

It is comforting, to say the least, to know that the Massachusetts Registrar of Motor Vehicles took prompt action and suspended the licenses of 63 drunken and reckless Boston automobile drivers. What would be still better, however, would be the refusal to grant licenses to people unless they can demonstrate "beyond a shadow of doubt" that they are competent and qualified in every respect to drive automobiles. Many serious accidents, especially by female drivers, have resulted from the ease with which licenses may be secured. Bank and trust company charters and automobile drivers' licenses have been all too easily acquired in Massachusetts. Facts and figures prove it.—Banker

WAR PROFITEERS

The Boston American places the responsibility for the hold-up of the soldiers' bonus upon the Democrats, commenting editorially as follows:

"In opposing the bonus the Democratic organization is merely trying to protect the war profiteers, who would be made largely to pay this bonus. Now, sixteen thousand millionaires were made out of war profits. These men made their immense fortunes without taking any risk of their life or limb and without suffering any physical hardship.

"The same convention of politicians turned down Mr. Bryan's suggestion of regulating profits so that the difference between, for example, what the farmer gets and what the consumer has to pay, may be reduced. The convention was very anxious to protect all kinds of profits, yet it did not occur to the gentlemen of the Democratic convention that it was beneath the dignity of the soldiers and if it was "commercializing patriotism" to take compensation for the loss they suffered by reason of their military service, it was a thousand times more unworthy of their dignity and commercializing of patriotism for men not only to take compensation for loss when they took no physical risk, but even to take huge profits.

"If it beneath the dignity of soldiers and is an unworthy commercialization of patriotism for soldiers to take compensation for losses, then it ought to be a crime for men to take profits out of war, and the social and economic wrong of it ought to be corrected by a system of taxation which would take away these profits.

"Does anybody believe, that the gentlemen who controlled their Democratic National Convention at San Francisco and are now running the Democratic party and its candidates, would suggest or approve of a plan which takes the profits out of war? Not in a thousand years. It is in order to protect these war profits that they opposed the bonus to the soldiers—the men who risked their lives and their limbs and who were dragged from their business and lost their headway in the world."

—Professor Brander Matthews, in his article on "American English and British English" in the November Scribner's, brings out, often with amusing contrast, some of the words and phrases that both nations find it rather difficult to interpret in each other's terms. He gives a list of some modern "double-barrelled" words.

WEYMOUTH 0, ABINGTON 0

Abington High met Weymouth High on Monday at the Clapp Memorial field, and the two teams were so evenly matched that neither could score. Then the ball was advanced to the one-yard line, where Abington High tightened and managed to hold Weymouth for downs.

The best work for Weymouth High was by Rand, Dwyer, Valencenti, Bicknell and Bailey. Collins, Hackett, the Sanderson brothers and Owen played best for Abington. The summary:

MAJESTIC THEATRE

Those whose taste in dramatic fare runs to spirited plays and acting of exceptional character will find something distinctly worth while awaiting them at the Majestic Theatre in Boston on Monday evening, Nov. 1, when Marjorie Rambeau in "The Sign on the Door" will move into that playhouse for a five weeks engagement, with matinee on Wednesday and Saturday. Miss Rambeau is appearing under the direction of A. H. Woods, who has provided his popular star with a play that proved the sensation of New York's recent season. Notwithstanding the extraordinary success achieved by Miss Rambeau in this fast-moving, virile play, it is conceded by critics and playgoers alike that in writing "The Sign on the Door" Channing Pollock lifted himself to high rank among modern dramatists. Miss Rambeau is happily placed in "The Sign on the Door", for it provides her with a wide range of opportunity to reveal the unusual personal gifts that have brought her so much reward.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

The officers of Weymouth Council, No. 729, who were elected last month, were formally installed Thursday evening, Oct. 21, by District Deputy Thomas H. Buttimer of Hingham, and his suite. The district deputy, who is a member of Weymouth Council, gave an address after the ceremonies and congratulated the members on their success in obtaining a large membership and a fine club-house and urged continued cooperation with the officers for still greater success. Fr. William Gunville, who is also a member, was among the large number present.

Bart Coughlin, the new Grand Knight, is a high type of citizen and Catholic gentleman. He is employed as superintendent of Weinz Trimming Co. of Boston, manufacturers of trimmings for ladies wear.

A vote of thanks was extended to Joseph A. Fern for his efforts as manager of the Council baseball team during the season recently closed.
