DR. SOONG'S BROADCAST TO THE BRITISH PEOPLE

宋 部 長 對 英 國 人 民 廣 播 詞

LONDON, Aug. 8—When China has defeated the "Nazis of Asia" she will remain mobilized in order that a vast plan for post-war industrialization on modern lines can be carried through as the keystone of a scheme of ambitious social reconstruction, Dr. T. V. Soong, Chinese Foreign Minister, declared tonight in a broadcast to the British people.

"China's hopes are centred on internal reconstruction," said Dr. Soong. "Naturally, we want to recover all China's territories. But we have no designs on a single inch of foreign territory."

"Our attention will be focussed on national reconstruction. Our people are thinking and planning how to improve our national standards of living,

"We are determined to build up our industries; therefore we are resolved that there shall be no gap between our mobilization for war and our mobilization for industrialization."

"We have a great advantage, because we do not need to start our industries from the very beginning."

We could at once make use of the most modern technique. WANDER-THIRST

Beyond the East the sunrise, beyond the West—the sea;
And, East and West, the wander-thirst that will not let me be.²

It works in me like madness,⁴ dear, to bid me say goodbye,
For the seas call, and the stars call, and so the call of the sky!

I know not where the white road runs, nor what the blue hills are;

But a man can have the sun for friend, and for his guide
a star;

And there's no end of voyaging when once the voice is heard,

For the river calls, and the road calls, and ho! the call of a bird!

Yonder the long horizon lies, and there, by night and day,
The old ships draw to home again, the young ships sail away.

And come I may, but go I must; and, if men ask you why,
You may put the blame on the stars, and the sun, and the white road and the sky!

Prose Explanation

I thirst for wandering with a thirst which is almost like madness, bidding me say good-bye to home and to those who are dear to me, and go away on some voyage. I thirst

ENGLAND AND THE ENGLISH

THE POST OFFICE

One of the most important of the Government departments is the G.P.O. (General Post Office) and its officials run into hundreds of thousands, ranging from the Postmaster-General, who is a Cabinet Minister, to the humble postman with his "welcome rattat" as he drops the letters into our letter-box.

to go east-ward to the sunrise and westward to the sunset.

I do not know where the road leading to, or what is the name of those hills on the horizon. The sun is my companion by day, and a star is my guide by night. There is no end of voyaging once the wander-thirst comes.

By night and by day from the far horizon the old ships sail home-ward; and the young ships go outward to the horizon. I may come back—or I may not; but I must go now. And you must put the blame for my going on the stars and the sun and the road and the sky—for they called me.

The Post Office has many duties. It not only delivers letters, but, among other things, it controls the telegraphs and telephones, it runs a savings bank with millions of depositors, it issues dog licences, motor-car licences, and wireless licences, and pays out old-age pensions. It sends young letters by air mail at a cost very little above the ordinary postage, sells you postal orders¹⁸ from 6d. to 21s.,¹⁹ or, if you want to send a larger sum by post, issues money orders²⁰ up to £400 a day, which

3. Do you want to send a "wire"?²¹ Just ask for the telegraph form²² at the counter, or take one from the box in the small compartments provided for the writing of telegrams.²³ You can send 9 words for 6d. (that is the minimum charge²⁴), with an additional charge of id. for every extra word.²⁵

Or do you want to phone?²⁶ Go into a call-box,²⁷ put two pennies in the slot²⁸ (if it is a local call)²⁹, "dial" the number you want,³⁰ and you can speak (for three minutes) to the person you have "rung up."³¹

4. If it is a trunk call,³² then, after putting in your two pennies, dial "O,"³³ and when the operator³⁴ speaks, ask for the number you want, e. g., "Give me Hampgate³⁵ 3544 (three, five, double four)."³⁶ The operator will then tell you how many more pennies to add and when to do so. You then "press button³⁷ A" and begin your conversation.

5. Perhaps you want only to buy a stamp³⁸ to send a letter to, say, France or Germany. You want a 2½d. stamp. If you want one for a letter that is not to go abroad you need a 1½d. one (a "three halfpenny," not "a penny halfpenny," one). The more convenient way is to buy a two-shilling or a three-shilling book of stamps,³⁹ or to buy stamped envelopes⁴⁰ or post cards,⁴¹ in which case you pay a little extra⁴² for the cost of the envelopes and post cards. If your letter contains anything valuable⁴³ it is a good plan to register⁴⁴ it. This costs 3d. extra.

6. There is a posting-box⁴⁵ in all post offices, or you can drop your letter into one of the familiar red pillar-boxes⁴⁶ that stand at the corners of the streets. If it is posted in London it will not rest there long, for there are twelve collections and deliveries daily.⁴⁷

Books And Printing

Before the second half of the fifteenth century, books were not merely luxuries,¹ but utterly unattainable² to any but the richest. We are but that in the seventh century a king of Northumbria³ gave 800 good acres "in exchange for" a single volume; that a Countess⁴ of Anjou⁵ gave 200 sheep for a "volume of homilies";⁶ that in 1270 a "Latin Bible"⁷ cost £30—fifteen years' wages of a labourer, and more than it cost to build the Tarches of London.⁸ Bright⁹ that the Archbishop of Canterbury¹⁰ in Chaucer's¹¹ day was justly proud of his library of thirteen volumes;¹² and that in mediaeval

It may be added that the "Black Letter" characters known also as Old English and surviving to-day in the front page headings of the Daily Telegraph and other morning and evening papers superseded the Anglo-Saxon ones at about the time of the Conquest, to be in turn displaced by the Roman characters, when printing came into its own.²²

Caxton was the first English printer. But the invention of movable metal type²³ was then over fifteen centuries old; it is said to have originated in China;²⁴ what is less disputable²⁵ is that in the fourteenth century it reached Mayence²⁶, and passed thence to Paris. To that city printed books, distinguished as mere manuscripts²⁸, and with the initial letters drawn to support the deception²⁹ were smuggled³⁰ by one Faust or Faustus.³¹ The discovery that the 'manuscripts' were virtually identical led to an accusation of awarded to medievalists who were ahead of their century, sensibly chose confession.³³ The invention spread to Germany, Bohemia, Italy, Holland, and eventually England.

To Aldus Manutius (of Minutius), an Italian born in 1450 (he died in 1516) special reference is due.³⁴ For he founded what is known as the Aldine Press,³⁵ gathering about him Greek scholars and compositors and sending forth from Venice, where he had settled, a series of volumes, printed in the early years of the sixteenth century, in which punctuation³⁷ was developed and standardized³⁸ and italics³⁹ were used for the first time. His brothers-in-law, son and grandson carried on the work of editing⁴⁰ and printing Greek, Latin and Italian classics.⁴¹ The firm's publications⁴² extended over almost exactly a century (1498-1597). •三二•

China's War Aims

*At a Press Conference¹ on August—4 *Dr. T. V. Soong, the Chinese Foreign Minister,² said that "China expects that Manchuria and Formosa will be restored³ to her after the defeat of Japan, and that Korea⁴ will become independent, but that China has no territorial ambitions in this war."⁵

"We have no aspirations with regard to Indo-China, Thailand or any other place of that sort," he added. The Chinese saw in the recent British and American renunciation of extra-terri-

Mr. Churchill has said: "Under the United Nations Declaration each of the Allied European Governments represented in this country and at war with Japan has undertaken to employ its full resources, military or economic, against those members of the Tripartite Pact and its adherents with which such governments are at war, and not to make a separate armistice or peace with our enemies."
